INTRODUCTION

The census records appearing on the following pages of this book are copied from the original records of the federal census of Lewis County, Virginia, now West Virginia, for the year 1850, that were taken by authority and under the direction of the government of the United States.

The act of Congress, under which this census was taken, provided that it should be taken as of June 1st, 1850, and that is the date from which all ages used in this census are supposed to be counted. However, the actual date on which the census was taken or the enumeration made, appears in black face type just preceding the name of the head of the family.

This is considered one of the most important census reports ever made by the Federal government; as it is the first report that gives the name, place of birth and age of every member of the family, as well as the occupation of the head of each family. The reports of the census taken in 1790, 1800, 1810, 1820, 1830 and 1840, show only the head of the family and the actual number of persons residing therein, including of course the individuals other than actual members of the family.

An effort has been made to arrange these records alphabetically as to names of the heads of families only. The names of individuals other than actual members of the family, but who were at the time residing with such family, appear immediately following the names of actual members of the family. The reason for printing these names out of their alphabetical order is to preserve, in so far as possible, any identity that the association with such family may give as to who they actually were. In many instances they may be found to be the parent or parents or even the grandparent of the head of the family or his wife, or it may be found that some other degree of relationship to the family may exist.

By reason of the alphabetical arrangement no general index will be found necessary, as the record is practically self indexed. But in order to find the names of those individuals who are enumerated with families bearing some other name, a short index of those persons will be given at the end of the book so that the page on which such names appear will be readily found.

No claim is made that this record is absolutely accurate in all its information, as it would be almost an impossibility to copy a record of this kind, which is written in long hand, and some of it very poorly written at that, and not make any mistakes. Many mistakes appear in the original record, and no doubt others will creep in as it is copied, set in type and proofread. But the work is done as accurately as it is possible to make it by checking and re-checking the names, where it is possible to check with other existing records. In instances where the age or place of birth is given wrong by the enumerator, there is no way to overcome that fault.

Another bad feature that will be found in the work is the number of mis-spelled names that will appear all through the text, this is no fault of the compiler but in in the main the fault of the census taker who took the census and made the original record. In many instances he spelled names as they sounded instead of the way they should be spelled. In addition to that the poor penmanship added much to the task of endeavoring to secure a correct and accurate record of this census.

You will note that the name "Cheuvront" is spelled "Cheveront," "Coburn" is spelled "Cobourn," "Dix" is spelled "Dicks," "Fournash" is spelled "Fallnash" and "Fallinash," "Pifer" or "Pfifer" is spelled "Fifer," "Fulkineer" is spelled "Fultinor," "Hinzman" is spelled "Hindzman," "Hardman" is spelled "Herdman," "Heavner" is spelled "Hevner," "Hershman" is spelled "Hushman," "McCauley" is spelled "McCally," "Male" is spelled "Mails," and many other names are similarly mis-spelled. In many instances the correct spelling of the name has been inserted in parenthesis immediately following the surname. Another very difficult task was in distinguishing names where the spelling was very similar, or where poorly formed script letters were mistaken for some other letter of the alphabet similar in design, as in the names Bennett, Barnett and Bonnett, Casto and Castor, Dobson and Dodson also Dorgan. Haskins, Hoskins and Hawkins, Kinsley and Kinsley, Miles and Mills, Morris and Norris, Robeson and Robinson, and many other names that may be found similar to each other in construction or could be made by a transposition of one or two letters. Any one looking for the census of their family or families and failing to find the name in its alphabetical order should look under names that are similar to their family name or that could be mistaken for some similar name in copying the census report.

The following pages contain the census of Lewis County, (West) Virginia, for 1840, as taken by order and under the authority of the United States Government, and now on file in the Census Bureau at Washington, D. C. At this period Lewis County not only comprised its present territory, (1930), but much territory now included in Upshur, Braxton, Gilmer, Doddridge, Ritchie and probably some small portions of some two or three other counties in present West Virginia. This census is included with that of 1850 in order that a portion of the general public may have access to it and provide such information as it may give them.

The figures following each name indicate the number of persons in the family, and where two sets of figures appear after a name, and separated by a hyphen, the second figures denote the number of slaves owned by the head of the family.

No doubt there are mistakes in this portion of the work, but it is almost impossible to copy these old records and be able to absolutely decipher every name and character correctly. But the work has been done to the best of the ability of those who did it, and it is the hope of the compiler that the information contained therein will be found of some value and especially so to those who descend from these various families.
