The genealogist can not long remain a mere compiler of family statistics. In following back the currents which have united in his own life he finds himself traveling from one town to another of colonial America and he is brought into vital or accidental relation with many important events of American history.

Dotted through the desert of history he finds oases where his own people encamped, where they did great deeds, or at least saw great deeds performed and lent the influence of their presence. “Land where my fathers died, land of the pilgrims’ pride” means something for the man who is aquainted with his ancestors which it never can mean for the man who does not know his own grandparents, but has a vague idea that he is an American.

Does not every genealogical student learn to know men, not only for what they are, but for what ancestral factors have made their lives possible? Life histories of Christian fortitude and love and unselfishness, which make us wholesomely ashamed of being discontented with the comforts which the least fortunate of us now enjoy.

This is the historic lore that genealogy furnishes, besides stimulating our own interest in the notable events of our early development into a nation.

SCOTCH-IRISH NOTES

"Driven from their adopted home in the north of Ireland by English persecution, there was burned into their very souls the bitter recollection of a century of English ingratitude and broken faith. They were un-English in their origin, and they came to America, which they have always looked upon as their only country, hating England, her church, and her form of government with the intensest hatred. By them American independence was first openly advocated, and but for their efforts, seconding those of the New England Puritans, that independence would not have been secured. As these men founded none of the American colonies, their story has found no place in Colonial History; but this story is needed to complete our sketch of the Puritans in America. They were the Puritans of the South, Calvinists in theology and republicans in politics. For centuries Ireland has been a thorn in the side of England, causing ceaseless irritation, because its people would not tamely submit to what they justly regarded as the oppression of their neighbors. During the reign of Elizabeth, Edmon Spencer had laid before the English Council an exhaustive scheme for the pacification of the sister island. He proposed that the native population should be substantially exterminated by the sword and by famine, and replaced by English settlers. Nothing came of the scheme at this time, but in the early days of James the First, it was taken up, although on a restricted scale. A rebellion of two of the great nobles in the province of Ulster furnished an excuse for confiscating their vast estates, amounting to some two million acres. Of this princely domain, about three-fourths, consisting mostly of bog, fen, and mountain wastes, was returned to the Irish tenants. The remaining five hundred thousand acres of fertile land were thrown open to protestant colonization. Here begins the history of the Scotch-Irish as a distinctive people.

"It was under such conditions that the colonization of Ulster was begun. The men who gave it character were the same class as those who afterwards made New England. They were promised full indulgence for their religion, and, so far as trade and commerce were concerned, an act of parliament placed them, with all the inhabitants of Ireland, on an equality with their English brethren. These Scotch settlers were selected under the direction of James himself, and were picked men, even superior to the English colonists. In 1698, upon the demand of the English manufacturers, the woolen industry of Ireland was utterly destroyed. It was claimed that labor was cheaper there than in England, and that, therefore, the manufactured product could be sold at a lower price. This was not to be endured. The interference of parliament was invoked, and by a series of repressive acts, the Irish looms were closed. As one result of this legislation, twenty thousand of the protestant artisans of Ulster, deprived of employment, left Ireland for America, carrying with them the remembrance of how English faith, plighted to their fathers, had been broken under the influence of English greed.

"This, however, was but the beginning of the exodus. In 1704 a Test Act was passed for Ireland, almost as severe in its provisions against the Dissenters as against the Catholics, while no Toleration Act like that in England mitigated its severity. In practice it was enforced most rigorously against the Protestants. Under this act none of the non-conformists were allowed to hold any office above that of petty constable. They were forbidden to keep schools of any character, marriages by their ministers were declared invalid. The issues of such marriages were bastardized before the law, and men were even prosecuted for living with their wives. The dead were not exempt, for they were denied burial in their ancestral churchyards, among their fathers, by whom the churches were founded. A new exodus to America began, which continued until the passage of the long-delayed Toleration Act for Ireland in 1712. At first they hoped for speedy relief, but as soon as 1719, all such hope was abandoned and thereafter ships enough could not be found to carry from Ulster to America the men who were unwilling to live except in the air of religious freedom.

"We were told that in 1727 six ships, loaded with families from Ulster, landed in Philadelphia in a single week, and that throughout the whole of the eighteenth century the arrival of two or three in a day was not uncommon. This stream of Scotch-Irish settlers flowed first westward, then south, following the eastern border of the mountain range which divides the Atlantic coast from the Mississippi Valley. Flocking into Western Virginia, they formed almost its entire population. The Scotch-Irish Puritans, like their brothers in New England, came of a fighting stock. In the Colonial wars their section furnished most of the soldiers of Virginia."
VIRGINIA NOTES

(Written years ago by Dr. Archibald Hopkins, of Harrisonburg, Va., for his son, Dr. William Davis Hopkins. Dr. Archibald Hopkins was a grandson to "Ercebald" Hopkins.)

"A family of Hopkins emigrated from the north of Ireland to this country many years before the Revolutionary War, and landed first at Albany, N. Y. How long they remained there is not known. This family consisted of a man, his second wife, and three sons by his first wife. Owing to some difficulty between the sons and their step-mother, either at Albany, N. Y., or Baltimore, Md. (where we hear of them next), the three sons deserted the family roof and retired to the valley of Virginia. This was then almost a wilderness. They traveled up the valley as far as Greenbriar County, where they settled, and remained but a short time. Being attacked by Indians, and driven away from Greenbriar County, they returned to Rockingham County, which was then included in Augusta County, and settled in the western part, on Muddy Creek. (Braddock's defeat occurred on July 9, 1755. The consternation was universal, and many of the settlers on the western frontier fled across the Blue Ridge, and even as far north as Virginia.) The names of these three brothers were John, William, and Archibald, or "Ercebald," as spelled in an old deed. They sang the psalms as they were written in the Old Testament, and would not, in that day, tolerate innovations in the shape of modern rhymes. They were amongst the founders, or first members, of Cook's Creek, or, as it is now called, the New Erection Church. Their nearest neighbors were the Shanklins, Loves, Baxters, Gordons, Bryans, Rices, Ralstons, etc., with whom they and their descendants married and intermarried. An old deed, now in the possession of Miss Ruth Hopkins, of Harrisonburg, Va., from William Castleberry and wife to Ercebald Hopkins, conveying three hundred and fifty acres of land lying in the county of Augusta, on Muddy Creek, for the sum of five shillings, current money of Virginia, is witnessed by Pat Cunningham, Abraham Bird, and John Pirkins, and was admitted to record at a court held for Augusta County, on the 16th of March, 1757, John Madison being clerk of the court. This is the place where Archibald settled, and his descendants have owned the place until 1875, when it was sold to William Chrisman. John Hopkins settled at the Neff place, about two miles west of Archibald. William settled five miles north of the other two. There is in Richmond, Va., the record of a patent made by 'George the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, etc.,' to Ephraim Love and William Hopkins for 204 acres in the County of Augusta, on the head branches of Muddy Creek, between the lands Jacob Dye lives on and the mountains, described by meets and bounds, as usual with all other wording of those old patents, executed by 'Thomas Lee, president of our council and Commander-in-chief of our Colony, etc.' (Dated 5th of September, 1749.) In connection with Ephraim Love, they surveyed the land for which this patent was issued.
From the time of the first settlements till 1734, it was all one county, called Spotsylvania County. In 1734 Orange County was formed from the western portion, including all of Virginia west of the Blue Ridge. It was called Orange County because of the color of the soil.

The act of the Assembly, constituting Augusta and Frederick Counties, was passed November 1, 1738, but the business of the people of Augusta County was transacted at Orange Court House till December, 1745, when the court of Augusta was organized. In the meantime, all persons in the valley having suits to prosecute, or any law business to transact, had to take the long trip on horseback, through the gaps in the mountains, and by bridle-paths to Orange, spending two or three days on the way. Moreover, as there was no minister for the Established Church in the valley until 1747, all couples wishing to be married had to travel across the Blue Ridge to Orange, or elsewhere, in search of a minister authorized by law to perform the ceremony. Until October, 1780, no minister, except of the Church of England, had authority to celebrate marriage except by dispensation of the governor. In October, 1780, by an act of the legislature, all ministers of the gospel were authorized to celebrate the rites of matrimony on and after January 1, 1781, but dissenting ministers, not exceeding four of each sect in any county, were to be specially licensed by the County Courts. Ministers of the Established Church were authorized, ex officio, to perform the service. Notwithstanding a large majority of the people had become Dissenters long before this, the legislature elected by the freeholders clung to the establishment, and it was not until October, 1784, that all ministers were put on an equal footing in respect to this matter. The first court house in Augusta County was, no doubt, like those on the frontier, a log-cabin. A carpenter's bench with half a dozen chairs upon it served as the judgment seat, and though the house was barely sufficient to contain the bench, bar, jurors, and constables, the occasion of the first court must have brought the whole population to town.

The system of two distinct courts, one of law and the other of chancery, continued until 1831.

Peyton, in his history of Augusta County, says: "The first Augusta County settlers were, for the most part, the descendants of the ancient Caledonians, who boasted that they had never been subject to the law of any conqueror. They belonged to various highland clans, and were strongly imbued with the prejudices, feelings, and sentiments of their peculiar clan.

Each clan bore the name of their hereditary chief, and were supposed to be allied to him in different degrees by ties of blood. Every individual sought to show his attachment to his leader as the head of his family. This feeling strongly exhibited itself in the Augusta County colony, which, from intermarriages, soon assumed something of the character of a numerous and increasing family."

Early in 1740, or shortly before, there was a great influx of people into the valley. On May 22, 1740, fourteen heads of families appeared at Orange Court House to “prove their importation.” Among these families was Robert Poage, his wife, Elizabeth, and his children, Margaret, John, Martha, Sarah, George, Mary, Elizabeth, William, and Robert. The Hopkins and Poage families are closely related by many marriages.

The first reference to a public road was June, 1739, “John Poage, David Davis, and George Hutchinson having, according to an order of court, viewed and laid off the road from Beverly Manor, etc., it is ordered that the road be cleared from John Young’s, at the North Mountain, to the top of Blue Ridge, to the bonds of Goochland Co.”

On November 18, 1773, it was determined to build a chapel in the neighborhood of Cook’s Creek. This was the first building of the Cook’s Creek church. When it became necessary to build a new church, they chose a different location, and called it the “New Erection.”

The members of this church were Dissenters, or Seceders. They sang psalms, and were very strict about Sabbath keeping and attendance at the communion service. The book containing the records of this church from 1759 to 1835 is still in existence. It is called “The Session Book of Cook’s Creek and Pyked Mountain Congregation.”

Rockingham County was partitioned off from Augusta County October, 1777, and held its first session April 27, 1778. It is the central county of the tier of counties which ranges through Shenandoah Valley from the Potomac, at Harper’s Ferry, to Purgatory Mount, on the north bank of the James River. Its area is nine hundred square miles. Its surface is comparatively level, excepting the western part, where it is broken by the projecting spurs of the north range. On the eastern boundary stands the great mountain wall, the Blue Ridge, while east of the center is situated “The Peake,” the southern termination of the Massanutten Range. It is one of the most beautiful spots in the world, and those early settlers must have felt the inspiration of the grand old mountains about them.
The first title to real estate put on record in Rockingham County was a deed of bargain and sale from Robert Shanklin and Rebecca, his wife, March 24, 1777.

Land office treasury warrant, No. 832, was issued to John Hopkins, Sr., for 1,537 acres, April 2, 1782. It was issued to authorize him to take up any vacant and unappropriated land within the commonwealth of Virginia. Four hundred and thirty-seven acres were taken up by Rebecca and Jane Poage, recorded in grant book 44, page 478; 159 acres by Rebecca and Jane Poage in Harrison County, book 53, page 456. In 1782 the largest landowners were the Chrismans, Bears, Gordons, Hopkins, Hintons, Ralstons, Shanklins, and Scotts, all of which names appear many times in this history.

Andrew Shanklin was sworn Justice February 23, 1782.

From 1800 to 1860 emigration and immigration were the order of the day. The sons of farmers and others, descendants of early settlers, were enticed away by the low price of rich lands in the West, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri. Often whole families sold out and left in search of new homes near the frontier of civilization. Sometimes several families went together, to form a congenial neighborhood. Letters are still in existence that were written by Hopkins people who had settled in Jessamine and Logan Counties, Kentucky, to their old friends and relatives in Rockingham County, Virginia.

These emigrants packed in wagons their provisions, clothing, bedding, and such cherished articles as they could not leave behind, and spent weeks on the road, carrying their food with them, and camping out at night. Some of these family flights involved much hardship and suffering, as the way was rough, roads in some places being not much more than trails through the wilderness. They had no springs to their wagons, and probably the most comfortable way of traveling was horseback. Many a woman has gone hundreds of miles in the saddle, carrying her baby in her lap, through heat and cold, rain and snow, with clothing that we would think utterly insufficient; crossing rivers and climbing mountains, and yet living to tell her children and grandchildren of the pleasures and perils of the journey. Until within a few years there were those who remembered "the log cabins, the linsy-woolsy, the short gowns, the hunting shirts, the moccasins, the pack-horses, the simple living, the shoes and stockings for winter and state occasions, the deer and the rifle, the fields of flax and the spinning-wheel, and the wool and loom, and with them the strict attention to religious concerns, the catechising of children, the regular going to church, the reading of the Bible, and keeping Sabbath from the beginning to the end, the singing of the psalms — all blending, presented a beautiful picture of enterprise, economy, and religion in laying the foundation of society.”

At last a tardy recognition is being made of the sterling character and worth of those pioneers. They fought the same battles, and stood for the same principles, as the Pilgrims. Stern and uncompromising in matters of conscience, yet they were never guilty of persecuting those who did not believe as they did. Thankful, indeed, may they be who have in their veins the splendid old Scotch-Irish blood.
"The Valley," as the expression is understood by those who live in it, denotes the tract of country in Virginia bounded on the east by the Blue Ridge and on the west by a parallel ridge called, in most of its extent, the North Mountain. It is a fine agricultural district, presenting the advantages which result from a soil generally fertile, hills and vales, numberless springs of pure water that never fail, streams of various sizes that never go dry, luxuriant forests, a climate suited to grains and grasses in great variety, and eminently favorable to health. Its scenery is not surpassed in variety, beauty, or grandeur by many districts in America. From the tops of its mountains the eye rests on landscapes lovely beyond description. Here may be seen, in one view, the mountain, the hill, the valley, the forest, the meadow, the cliffs, the stream, the farm, the farm-house, the village, the school-house, and the church. A moral, industrious, contented population dwell here; intelligent, yet unostentatious in their habits and manners, and to a great extent the descendants of those who settled in this region when it was a wilderness, and who, while contending with the savage for this fine country, laid the foundation of literary institutions, and formed the churches which have contributed largely to make the population what it is.

"Many a dweller in other sections of our happy country turns his thoughts to a region far from his home, and to other days, and exclaims, "The Valley! I love it! It was the home of my youth, and in it are the graves of my fathers!" Peace to their memory. They were a God-fearing and law-abiding people, because they strictly kept the Sabbath holy and reverenced the sanctuary. Dangers they met with undaunted firmness, hardships and privations with unrepining endurance. The right to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and the advantages of education, they prized above any other blessings which earth could give. To secure the first they sought a dwelling-place in the wilderness far, far from their fatherland; and for the second, they relied on their own exertions under the blessing of God.

"The first settlers in this valley, with few exceptions, were from the north of Ireland. They were the descendants of the Scotch, who, for various reasons, had emigrated to this country, and had taken with them the kirk and the school. They were decided Presbyterians. Deep abhorrence of Popery and a strong dislike to Episcopacy were to be expected amongst those whose fathers had felt the oppressions and cruelties of Claverhouse, and whose friends had suffered and fought and died at Londonderry."

* * * * *

"In passing from Staunton to Lexington along the road leading through Brownsburg, about twenty-two miles from Staunton, the traveler will notice a brick church a few hundred yards on his right, and near it a large graveyard, almost filled with graves of the generations who, for more than a century, have assembled there from Sabbath to Sabbath to worship God. The house that is now occupied is the third in which the congregation of New Providence have worshiped. The first was a wooden structure, and stood a short distance east of where the road to the church crosses the creek. The second was of stone, and occupied in part the ground that is covered by the present building. This house was built either in 1745 or 1746. It was an era of no little consequence, and a work of no little difficulty to the people who accomplished it. Some of the traditions of the congregation will illustrate this. At that time there was but one vehicle that moved on wheels in the congregation, and it was a one-horse cart. The heavy timbers for the roof and galleries were dragged to the place with one end resting on the axle of the cart and the other on the ground. The wheels gave way under the weight of the last one, and the people collected and carried it nearly a mile.

"It is said that in the year the church was built the pastor, in visiting through his charge, took dinner on one occasion with a family by no means amongst the poorest in the congregation. When all were seated at the table, it was seen that there was not both a knife and fork for each plate. The mother of the family in making an apology, told him that they had saved money to buy a set of knives and forks; but since the church was commenced they had given to that object, and must do without them till the next year.

"The sand used in plastering the house was carried in sacks on horseback about ten miles, and this was done chiefly by the girls of the congregation. There are those now living who know that their grandmothers assisted in this. There was then no committee on church extension to aid feeble congregations in building houses of worship, and with the spirit which animated these people few churches of our country would ask for aid.

"The people of that period were not unfrequently disturbed by alarms of Indians, and the whole of a family would go to church on a Sabbath because they dared not leave any at home. The father and sons carried their weapons with them, prepared to defend their lives, and a large number of armed men were frequently seen at the church."

From “The Captives of Abb’s Valley.”
"Pride in ancestry which endured the hardships of an ocean voyage of several weeks in a small sailing vessel, which built log cabins on the borders of the primeval forest, which turned the virgin sod with the clumsy plow of two centuries ago, which bled from the wounds of the stone weapons of the Indians, which dressed in homespun, and was ignorant of the luxuries of the present day — such pride is not a dangerous thing to instill into the veins of an American citizen."

Abner W. Kilpatrick,
How dimly conscious of heroic action
    Those hardy leaders in a nation's van!
As dim their vision of the coming grandeur
    That in the pathos of their lives began.

Not stalwart men alone, but babes and women,
    Not scores and hundreds,— in thin ranks they come,
By single families,— few friends, few neighbors,—
    To cheer their outlook with a kindred home.

Behind them all they loved, a haunting picture,
    The fireside joys, their kindred, altars, graves,
Before them naught but the mysterious riddle
    Solved by time alone, that which destroys or saves.

Wisely they builded, not alone the cabin,
    Not for self only and the world of sight;
With church, with school, the Bible, and the Sabbath,
    They reared their hamlet — God its life and light.

Rise up, O children! Call your mothers blessed!
    Give honor to your fathers while you may;
There's a glory that abides forever!
    There's a kingdom not to pass away!

OLD HOUSE BUILT BY JOHN HOPKINS, THE PIONEER, ROCKINGHAM COUNTY, VIRGINIA.
JOHN HOPKINS, PIONEER

John Hopkins, with his brothers, Archibald and William, came to the Shenandoah Valley some time before 1749. We find in the old "Session Book of Cook's Creek and Pyke Mountain Congregation" the record of his marriage on October 12, 1759, to Jean Gordon. He settled at the "Neff place" two miles west of Archibald Hopkins, near the mountain. This and the Gordon farm were the first two settlements in that locality. T. M. Gordon says, "I can remember seeing the mounds of an old fort on my father's farm where they protected themselves from the Indians, and the place goes by the name of Fort Spring to this day." Jean Gordon Hopkins is said to have been a good shot and often stood guard over her husband, protecting him with her rifle while he worked. It was here at the foot of North Mountain, with the wonderfully beautiful scenery of the Blue Ridge always in sight that John and Jean Gordon Hopkins made their home and reared their family. They built a substantial brick house. James M. Rice, of Peoria, Ill., says, "When I visited in Rockingham, Va., in 1876, I saw the old house built about 1760, not far from the time Archibald Hopkins was born, which house was still in good order, two stories high, with four big fireplaces in it, two up stairs and two down. One of them I measured down stairs, was ten feet and eight inches across from the outside of the jamb on one side to the outside of the jamb on the other. There was a nice spring house by the residence with a large spring of cold crystal water and in front of the house was a row of willow trees, I should think about three feet or three and a half in diameter when I saw them a little more than twenty-five years ago." This house must have been the scene of many merry times and many sad partings for ten children played out their childhood, grew to manhood and womanhood, married, said goodbye to the old fireside and went to far-off places to make themselves new homes. These homes were "far off" not so much on account of distance as because of the lack of means of communication, in those days, between separated localities. It is no wonder that these brothers and sisters knew but little of each other and in some cases lost track entirely of the whereabouts of the next generation, and that to-day it is a difficult matter to trace them in their life histories.

John Hopkins died before June 4, 1791, as a letter from the old Cook's Creek church, bearing this date, speaks of Jane Hopkins as the "daughter of John Hopkins, deceased."

We know that he made a will for we find in an old legal paper these words, "Whereas the Commonwealth of Virginia did grant and convey to John Hopkins, senior, a certain Tract of Land formerly in Harrison County now in the County of Lewis, aforesaid lying on the Hilly upland run, a Branch of Stone coal Creek, Containing 800 acres which patent is dated the 28th day of August, 1787, as by said patent will appear, and where-as the said John Hopkins since died, having first made and published his last Will and Testament and therein and thereby given and bequeathed the above Tract of Land to three of his daughters to wit: Hannah, Ruth, and Ann as by said Will and Testament doth more fully appear."

He must have had other lands than those spoken of in this quotation for we find that "Land office Treasury Warrant No. 8321 was issued to John Hopkins, Sr. for 1537 acres of land April 12, 1782. It was issued to authorize him to take up any vacant and unappropriated land within the commonwealth of Virginia. 437 acres were taken up by Rebecca and Jane Poage, recorded in Grant Book 44, page 478 (in Harrison County); 159 acres by Rebecca and Jane Poage in Harrison County in Grant Book 53, page 456."

There is a tradition that John Hopkins served in the Revolutionary War under General Washington and was in the siege of Yorktown.

In a letter written December 7, 1876, by Cyrus Hopkins, of Uppertract, Pendleton Co., Va., a grandson of John Hopkins, the pioneer, he says, "John Hopkins lived in Rockingham County and was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. He also represented his country in the Legislature."

We also have this from the War Department, military secretary's office, at Washington: "The records of this office show that one John Hopkins served as a private in Captain David Stephenson's Company, 8th Virginia Regiment, commanded by Colonel Abraham Bowman, Revolutionary War. He enlisted February 21, 1778, to serve three years. He was transferred to Captain William Croghan's Company, 4th, 8th, and 12th Virginia Regiment, commanded by Colonel James Wood, in June, 1778; to Captain William Croghan's Company, 4th Virginia Regiment, commanded by Colonel John Nevill, in September, 1778, and to Captain-Lieutenant Leonard Cooper's Company, same regiment, in May, 1779. His name last appears on the roll dated December 9, 1779, without special remark relative to his service."

We find in Henning's Statutes at Large, Volume VII., page 179, the following: "To the Militia of the Co. of Augusta and for provisions furnished by sundry inhabitants of said Co. viz.—
To Archibald Hopkins, John Shanklin,

35s. each ............. L3, s. 10,

In Volume XLI., page 95, we find:

"Be it therefor enacted that it shall and may be lawful for any person, chargeable with any part of the half tax, for the year 1785, to make payment of any part, not exceeding two thirds thereof, in certificates issued, or to be hereafter issued, by John Hopkins, Esq., Commissioner of the Continental Loan Office in this state, for interest due on loan office certificates, etc."

Volume XI., page 309:

The receipt here reproduced may add another bit of testimony.

JOHN HOPKINS.

I, James M. Rice, a great grandson of said John Hopkins and a great great grandson of said Thomas Gordon, do hereby certify that the above is a full true correct and literal copy of an original receipt now in my possession, it is written on a piece of paper that had been cut out of some old letter or other document and it has some parts of some of the original writing on the back yet. It came to me as being the great great grandson of said Thomas Gordon.

"The first thought of the man who has just discovered the name of his grandfather's grandfather, is that he belongs to an old and superior family, and he is apt to put on airs in the presence of one who has only a grandfather of his own."
II. Archibald Hopkins, first child of John Hopkins and Jean Gordon, was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, near Harrisonburg, in 1760. His father and mother, John and Jean Gordon Hopkins, were Scotch-Irish. He grew up to manhood in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley under the shadow of North Mountain, always in sight of the wonderful haze of the Blue Ridge mountains. He was short of stature, a great talker, and very energetic.

He was married about 1785 to Elizabeth Poage. They made their home near the parental roof. To them were born six children, William, John, Jane, Mary, Sarah, and Robert. These children were all somewhat under medium size. Elizabeth Poag Hopkins must have died soon after the birth of Robert, for Archibald Hopkins married a second wife, Margaret Shanklin, and her first child, Gordon, was only three years younger than Elizabeth’s last child, Robert. By his second wife, Archibald had ten children, Gordon, Benjamin, Thomas, Elizabeth, Elijah, James, Harriet, Archibald, Edwin, and Gracy Ann. These were all larger and more robust than the others. In 1804 he moved from Virginia to Mayslick, Mason County, Kentucky, where his sister, Jane Hopkins Pogue, the wife of General Robert Pogue, had lived for about thirteen years. He did not like the conditions he found there and slavery troubled him so he went into Ohio, prospecting. At Red Oak, Brown County, he met the Rev. James Gilliland and seems to have formed for him a strong attachment. Returning to Kentucky, he told his wife he had found his preacher any way. Very soon after, in 1805, he went with his family to Red Oak, Ohio. He is said to have crossed the Ohio River at Ripley with wagons in which were his wife and twelve children, his household possessions, and a barrel of whiskey. One of the great grandsons says he remembers hearing the old folks tell of the hardships they had to endure on the road to Ohio. They tied logs to the backs of the wagons to help in holding back in going down steep hills. It was still harder to climb those hills. They carried chunks of wood or stones to block the wheels to let the horses rest. It is also said that during these resting times the whiskey was passed around to refresh the weary pilgrims.
Elizabeth Shanklin, Archibald Hopkin’s second wife, was a large, fine-looking woman. One of her grandchildren remembers her as a “glorious old woman.” Four children were born after reaching Ohio, making a family of sixteen, all but one of whom (Elijah) grew to maturity, married, and had families. At Red Oak, three miles north of Ripley, Archibald obtained land, and in this fertile but heavily timbered country he proceeded to make a home. With great energy and perseverance he and his sons removed a portion of the heavy forest and erected a comfortable house and barn. The house was built of brick, two stories high, a hall through the middle, and two windows on each side of the front door. This house was the pride of all his grandchildren. The barn was built of logs and plastered so as to hold flaxseed. He also built a flaxseed-oil mill, which he operated. He soon saw his rich acres graced with abundant crops, and prosperity within his borders. He and his sons were excellent horse trainers and kept the finest horses in all that region. At that time, transportation of all kinds was by horse and wagon and they were often called upon by their neighbors for help with their magnificent teams.

The little boys, of whom I was one, were very proud of the Hopkins teams. As his ten sons, one by one, married some excellent maiden, always a member of the church, he was settled in the neighborhood on a farm of his own, usually not less and generally more than a hundred acres.

I do not think there was a house in all that region on the floor of which there was anything nicer than a rag carpet. Everything was home made. The women spun and wove flannel for dresses and blue jeans for the men’s clothes. A young girl with a red flannel dress, cut and made so as to economize material, was just as attractive then as the most fashionably dressed lady of to-day. Shoes were valuable in those days. The farmer killed a beef, took the hide to a tannery (many went to General Grant’s father at Georgetown), and got half of the hide in return for leather. Out of this he made his own harness and shoes. I remember one winter day I sat patiently watching my father as he cut and made a pair of shoes for my youthful feet. Some excellent women, who walked two miles or more to church, carried their shoes and stockings until near the church, then retired to the woods, completed their toilet, and came into the church with all the dignity of queens.

The farm of John Hopkins, second child of Archibald, was near the church. The spring from which the congregation drank during the recess in the church service was on his farm. John had six sons, each of whom was six feet tall, and each of whom became an elder in the Presbyterian Church. He was said to have raised thirty-six feet of “Elder timber.”

Gordon lived for many years in a two-story brick house about two miles from the church, on the Russelville road. His sons were famous as good farmers and fine horsemen. Probably no family in the neighborhood was more popular. For many years Gordon was superintendent of the Sunday School. He and Robert were the two most acceptable men in offering public prayer that I ever knew. Mose Kimball once said, “Robert Hopkins was the best man that ever lived.” William, Archibald’s first child, lived near his father on a fine farm with an excellent orchard. He had a nice two-story house in the hills.

All these homes were on the hilltops, giving magnificent views from every window. But the hills had their drawbacks and one of the grandsons said, “There was not a spot on the farm of Robert, Archibald’s sixth child, where a wagon could stand without being blocked.” Robert had but one son. His wife and daughters were very domestic, seldom going away from home. They and many other women of the church knit socks for the missionaries. It was quite common for the women of the church to promise socks and stockings for the missionaries.

Grandfather was an earnest protestant and a devout Presbyterian. Family prayers were always observed, and the candle needed for the reading of the Scriptures was blown out during the prayers, the great open fire furnishing sufficient light for that part of the service. That grandmother tried to make Sunday attractive for the children is proved by the fact that she always had preserves for breakfast on Sunday morning. Grandfather was the patriarch of all these families with their growing children. When William returned from Illinois, in 1833, where he had gone looking for a new home, his father went to see him and hearing his plans said, “Tut, tut, William, this will never do. We have lived here together so long and we are not going to be separated now.” They always obeyed “Old Archie” and for two years William waited for his father’s consent. When one of the younger sons was married, his bride referred to her husband as “Mr. Hopkins.” Grandfather overheard her and said, “Tut, tut, there is only one Mr. Hopkins in this family. I’m Mr. Hopkins.” He visited all the families to see that they attended to their religious duties, that they paid the minister, that they had family worship, and that they greased their shoes on Saturday night ready for the Sabbath service. My belief is that all the Hopkins families were very faithful in attending to family prayers morning and evening, and in teaching the Catechism on Sunday afternoon. I think this was true also of the majority of the neighborhood. The Presbyterian Church of Red Oak was for about three decades one of the largest and most influential in the entire state of Ohio. It was organized in the year 1789. The social life of the whole community was intimately connected with the church life. Members could visit before and after the service and during the intermission. The young men had a chance to show their gallantry by stepping down to the spring and bringing water in tin cups for the young women. They were very strict Sabbath observers and the bearing of the young men to the young women was of the greatest propriety, yet human nature asserted itself so far as to establish acquaintances which ultimately resulted in happy marriages and the founding of excellent families. A singing school and an occasional wedding, an ordinary social gathering or a blackberrying party furnished abundant opportunities for fanning the flame that the mischievous cupid had ignited at the church. If any of the congregation were ill or in trouble, the entire company would learn of it and all the news of the countryside could be heard there.

The church was located in a beech wood. Only one or two of these magnificent trees are left. Under the shadow of the church is the graveyard where many of our dearest are buried. The congregation came from all points of the compass, many walking, more on horseback. For years there was but one carriage in the community and that was hung on straps for springs. All around the church for a radius of a half-mile or more horses were tied. Each man had his own limb on some grand old beech to which his horse was tied during the three or four hours' service. The shade was so perfect that the animals could afford to be patient. For many years the service began at twelve o'clock. The first sermon was often an hour long, and then came a recess of fifteen minutes, after which there was a second sermon. It was not until some time in the forties that the Sunday School was organized. In 1817 the congregation built the old stone church which now stands. The roof sloped four ways and was supported by two huge posts or columns painted sky-blue. The double doors were on the side where the second and fifth windows from the left now are. They had no chimney because they had no fire. The pews were high with doors. The pulpit was a high, large, box-shaped affair painted snow-white and the minister shut himself in with a door. The clerk's desk faced it and was like it, only smaller. It would accommodate just two persons who led the congregation in the song service. The whole houseful of people joined in the grand old tunes. The communion table ran the whole length of the aisle with seats running the entire length of each side. A clean linen cloth was spread over this table and it usually required three sittings to accommodate the communicants.

In 1806 the Rev. James Gilliland became pastor of this church, retaining the position thirty-six years. He was in some respects a remarkable man. He left a large church in South Carolina because he was opposed to slavery and settled here, in the woods, where his salary never exceeded three hundred dollars a year. He was fifty years in advance of his time on the question of slavery and the use of intoxicating liquors. All through Ohio the farmers owned their stills and a good still was sometimes worth more than the farm. They raised good corn but could not market it. A horse or mule could carry twenty bushels of corn when distilled into liquor, but only six or seven when in the grain, so distilling seemed a necessity. Mr. Gilliland organized in his church both a temperance and an anti-slavery society. The anniversary of one was always held on New Year's Day and the other on Christmas Day. We often had the finest orators in the country to address us on these occasions. In the old record book of this church is this resolution, which was passed by the session December 1, 1832, "Whereas, in the judgment of the session, the common use of ardent spirits is not merely useless but has long been, and still is, one of the most fruitful sources of crime, misery, and death, and that those who continue to countenance and encourage the practice, are guilty of a heinous sin and deeply partake of the sin of others, especially in this day when so much light is thrown on the subject and so many benevolent efforts are made to arrest the destructive evil, therefore

Resolved, that church members who continue to distill ardent spirits, to use them, to buy them, to sell, or give them to others except for medicinal or mechanical purposes, are guilty of a great sin and bring scandal on the church for which they ought to be dealt with in the same manner as for other scandalous crime." All obeyed but one member whom they excommunicated.

Grandfather had always furnished whiskey for barn raisings, log rollings, and in harvest. One day Mr. Gilliland talked with him about the harm of it and asked him if he could not do without it. After that he had no whiskey. This perhaps accounts for the fact that all his sons and nearly all his grandsons were temperate men. Very soon after he came to Red Oak he was made ruling elder in the church. The following record is on the church books for November 4, 1808, "Session met agreeably to appointment. Constituted with prayer. Members all present. Archibald Hopkins having been duly elected by the congregation to the office of ruling elder on ye 23rd. of May last, now appears and takes his seat in session, having been formally ordained as appears from his certificate." This position he held for forty years. He always stood by his minister. A daughter of Mr. Gilliland once laughingly said, "Mr. Hopkins always consults father about everything, even the marriage of his children."

Now think of my experience when a youth. Each family had a pew, shut in by doors securely buttoned. Among the families who came to the church on Sundays, were the Salsburys, the Dunlaps, the Kinkaids, the Pangburns, the Gillilands, and the numerous Hopkins families. There were grandfather and grandmother with faithful Aunt Harriet, who stood... by them until they went to their long home. There was Uncle William, his head always shaking a little with palsy. I remember seeing his sons Joel and John, young men over six feet tall. There was my father, John, with his eight children and mother all packed into one pew. Discipline was nearly perfect in his household. Children were to be seen and not heard. When any one of his children got a little restless under the one-hour sermon, a single glance from the head of the family was sufficient to allay all disturbance. The little ones would often look into mother's face and ask, "When will it be through?" and her kind voice would respond, "Before long." Aunt Mary Pogue was there, short, active, red-headed, quick of step. She was proud of her noble husband, Colonel John Crawford Pogue, who was every inch a gentleman. They had no children. Then came Uncle Robert, with so much reverence in his heart that he showed it in his step. His wife was a daughter of the Rev. James Gilliland. They had four daughters and one son. Uncle Gordon was there, large and stately in his movements, with his wife who was always cheery and bright, and a pew full of children. Aunt Elizabeth Kinkaid was not behind any, in the numbers nor the attractiveness of her household. Uncle Archibald came too. He was large and rather solemn and brought his beautiful wife and little ones with him. Then came Uncle Edwin with his young wife and little children, and Aunt Grace Dunlap, the youngest, and one of the handsomest of the tribe, bringing her family. Aunt Jane had married Mr. John Hopkins Pogue and moved to Crawfordsville, Indiana. Aunt Sarah had married Rev. A. B. Gilliland and gone to Venice, Butler County, Ohio. Uncle Benjamin had died and Uncle Thomas and Uncle James had gone to Ripley where they were engaged in business. Hence they were not present in the church as I remember it.

Grandfather thought all his farmer boys needed was to learn to read, write, and cipher to the "rule of three." I believe that my father, John, was the only one of the sons who disregarded this rule so far as to send his children away to school. However, grandfather's sons were naturally so capable that the most of them were at some time elected elders in the Presbyterian Church, and none of them ever took a second place in his influence for truth and right.

When grandfather was quite an elderly man he slipped on some ice on his porch and fell, hurting his hip so that afterwards he rode horseback on a side-saddle. His saddle horse, Bonny, a beautiful dapple gray, took him everywhere, up and down, over and through places that people would not now attempt. All the last years of his life, his daughter, Harriet, accompanied him, she too riding horseback and sitting as firmly and riding as fearlessly as her father.
In the list of church members, October 1, 1807, the names of Archibald Hopkins and wife, William Hopkins, and Polly Hopkins appear.

Archibald Hopkins was elected ruling elder May 23, 1808.

Nov. 4, 1808. Red Oak. "Session met agreeably to appointment. Constituted with prayer. Members all present. Archibald Hopkins having been duly elected by the congregation to the office of Ruling Elder on ye 23rd of May last, now appears and takes his seat in session, having been formally ordained as appears from his certificate."

They formed a "Corporation" which William Hopkins joined on December 19, 1814; John Hopkins joined on December 4, 1815; Archibald Hopkins was elected trustee December 4, 1815. Names of Hopkins members of "Corporation" were Archibald Hopkins, John Hopkins, Robert Hopkins, J. M. Hopkins, Archibald Hopkins, Jr., William W. Hopkins, Gordon Hopkins, and Gordon Hopkins, Jr. John C. Poage was elected treasurer and Gordon Hopkins a trustee of the "Corporation." John Hopkins, son of Archibald, was treasurer of the church from December 1, 1818, to 1822.

"Feb. 19, 1817—The society proceeded to the consideration of a place on which to build a meeting house." The old stone church was built in 1817.

Resolution on temperance. December 1, 1832.

"Whereas in the judgment of the session, the common use of ardent spirits is not merely useless, but has long been and still is one of the most fruitful sources of crime, misery and death and that those who continue to countenance and encourage the practice are guilty of a heinous sin and deeply partake of the sin of others, especially in this day when so much light is thrown upon the subject and so many benevolent efforts are made to arrest the destructive evil, therefore

OLD LETTER WRITTEN BY ARCHIBALD HOPKINS

Rockingham County, April 16th, 1793.

My Beloved friend; We are absent in Body, but if this finds you in Time, far as we are distant, we must shortly meet, and O; what a solemn meeting is approaching, alas; that I can be so insensible, so little concerned about the one thing needful, daily acknowledging myself to be a candidate for Eternity, and that I expect to be rewarded according to the things done in the Body whether they be good or evil, and yet no more concerned, so delighted with these perishing time-things, such warm affections for Creature objects, and so Cold and insensible for the God that made me, and ever since supported me and has laid such an Angel Astonishing plan of Salvation for my redemption, Alas that we can be so ungrateful where the interest is our own. I think if I am not deceived; I, the longer I am acquainted with my own Heart and the lives of my fellow mortals, the more I see of that lamentable situation that man is falling into. The Crown is falling from our heads, for we have sinned. We have had since I seen you a Number of the warmest Gospel sermons that ever I have heard, but it appears to be in vain O alas; Alas; What a Deep sleep is fallen on professors of religion in this part. Neither his judgments awaken us, nor his mercies invites us, but we are a saying by our conduct, “we will not have him to be Lord over us.” We have been making an attempt to settle with Mr. Ervine for time that is past. We fall considerable in Debt and I think, that if it was not for a very few, he would be turned off without recompense at all. I received yours by Mr. Shanklin which affords matter of both rejoicing and mourning. You say you have found an Acquaintance you hope with a member of the Lords people in that Country, but they are thinly scattered, and chiefly middle aged, and elderly people. These are the people that must support the Gospel and it it to be expected that they will endeavor to keep the Church pure and encourage the spirit of religion and if they are Dissiples indeed they will cry mightily for A time of refreshment from the Spirit of the Lord, and when religion is encouraged, by elderly people, it is a great encouragement for youth. Then the Lord is pleased to revive his works and to give his word success. But what a cause of lamentation is it that youth will not serve the Lord when common experience gives us so many examples of the uncertainty of our lives, and they that seek me early shall find me. Some time last fall one of the Widow Bells sons went out to hunt and shot a Dear, it was a wet Day and he only wounded it and he ran till he was very hot and got wet, came home took sick and died bidding adieu to time and all its enjoyments in a few days. In a short time after, one of her Daughters Departed this life, What loud Preachers these things ought to be, if only these youth had been zealously engaged about Religion. Minding scarcely any thing else at all, the Men of the world would soon have said, "that wont do, how will these people live? why they are a going mad!" But what a pity it is, that we think so much more about how we shall live, than how we shall Die. We promise ourselves a long time to live here. But when I take a serious View of myself, and Consider the Days past, how short and how trifling they have been spent, and to put the matter to the long period that I can be of any service either to my Master or my fellow mortals, what is it? Why if we ware to live as long again as we have lived, to look before us it would look a great while, but when it is once gone, it is as a tale what is told. But Me thinks I hear the reader a saying now is the accepted time and now is the Day of Salvation and you an me is perhaps verry verry near our home, and that it is high time for us to awake, for our Salvation is nearer now than when we Believed, and not to be Conformed to this world, but to be transformed by the renewing of our mind that we may prove what is that good and acceptable will of God, and what a trifling thing it is that we cant deny ourselves and take up our Cross and follow the once despised, But the now exalted Lamb of God, since he has said, "learn of me for I am meek and lowly and you shall find rest unto your Souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is Light." You Desired me before I would Write to you to converse with Mr. Ervine on that sentence in my former letter. I had not an opportunity, and I am verry well satisfied that he does not hold it necessary that our first thoughts should be the sins of the world. Far be that from him, and he is far from being satisfied to think that we should be contented in this day when, iniquity abounds, and the love of many, waxes cold, when there is so few if any, in these parts that is Concerned about the Cause of Zion. The Last Sermon that was preacht at the new Erection was from these words, "Let God Arise, let his enemys be scattered; let them also that hate him flee before him." psalm 68 - 1 and 1 and I think of all Days that I have heard or seen, I never heard Mr. Ervine Preach with as much fervor, and encourage as much for Christians to Pray for a revival, to plead the promises of the Lord for there is surely to be a day as has never yet been seen. Did any of us believe that Jesus had seen enough to satisfy him for his Blood, and that his Converts had yet surpast the Drops of Dew from the womb of the morning, or that the Knowledge of him had covered the Earth as the waters covered the sea? Did we believe that he had got the Heathen for his inheritance and the utmost parts of the earth for his possession? Well all these then is promist to him of his father and what are we a doing, are we a giving him no rest, are we a Crying mightily for a day of his power, that his enemies might flee Before him, the plagues of our hearts might be subdued and every thing that exalted should be abased, and those that would not be abased should be obliged to flee, that Religious Conversation might become so universal that those that hate it would be obliged to flee before it. May this be the earnest prayer of you, my fellow mortal, and of me and every Creature that names the Name of Christ.

I am yours

HOUSE BUILT BY II. ARCHIBALD HOPKINS, RED OAK, OHIO.
WILL OF ARCHIBALD HOPKINS, RED OAK, OHIO

I, Archibald Hopkins, of Brown County, in the State of Ohio, do make and publish this my last will and testament in manner and form following that is to say; First, it is my will that all my just debts and funeral expenses be fully paid. I give and devise and bequeath to my beloved wife, Margaret Hopkins, in lieu of her dower, one equal undivided third part of all my lands, the west end of my house including the kitchen, also an equal interest in the entry and in the lumber-room above the entry, during her natural life, and her riding mare saddle and bridle, her choice of three cows, one-fourth of the sheep, one-hundred and fifty dollars in money, a sufficient stock of provisions for herself and family, and for her creatures for one year after my decease, and all my household and kitchen property except what is here-in-after bequeathed to some else of my family, all my books to remain with my wife while she lives and after her death my will and desire is that my children shall divide them equally among them. I give and bequeath to my sons William, John, Robert, Gordon, Thomas, James, and Edwin Hopkins, each five dollars, to the heir of my son Benjamin Hopkins, deceased, five dollars, and to my daughters, Jane Poage, Mary Poage, Sarah Gilleland, Elizabeth Kinkaid, and Gracy Ann Dunlap, each five dollars, and to my daughter Harriet Hopkins, Eight-hundred dollars. The above legacies bequeathed to my children, I will shall be paid by my son Archibald Hopkins to them in one year after my decease, except the last half of the legacy bequeathed to my daughter Harriet which shall be paid to her as follows, one hundred in two years after my decease, one hundred in three years, one hundred in four years, and one hundred in five years. I give and bequeath to my son Archibald Hopkins, my clock after the decease of my said wife, Margaret Hopkins, I further give and bequeath to my said daughter, Harriet, two beds and bedding and bedsteads, and one side-saddle and one bureau and bridle. And further I give unto my said daughter Harriet Hopkins, the room in the West end of my house, including the kitchen, and the cellar under the same, and the privilege of a pass way in the entry, and to the said cellar after the decease of my said wife Margaret Hopkins, if the said Harriet is then an unmarried woman, to her to have and to hold as long as she remains a single woman but no longer, and it is my will and desire that my son Archibald Hopkins shall find and keep my said daughter Harriet in a suitable riding creature after my decease and so long as she remains a single woman and shall after the death of my said wife Margaret Hopkins, find and keep the said Harriet in a milch cow and is to find her in provisions and fire-wood and twenty pounds of wool in the grease, a year, as long as she remains an unmarried woman and no longer. I give and devise to my said son Archibald Hopkins, the farm on which I now reside subject to the encumbrances before mentioned and legacies bequeathed for him to pay, situate and being in Union township, in the County and State aforesaid being part of a tract of Sixteen-hundred and sixty-six and two-thirds acres, pattented in the name of Andrew Lewis and bounded as follows to wit—Beginning at a beech and white walnut near a hollow; thence North one hundred and sixty poles to a locust, ash and buckeye; thence East two hundred poles to two buckeyes and a hickory; thence South one hundred and twenty poles to a lynn and beech; thence West one hundred and seventy four poles to a sugar tree and buckeye; thence South thirty three degrees West forty nine poles to the beginning, containing one hundred and fifty three acres more or less to him the said Archibald Hopkins and to his heirs and assigns forever. And further it is my will and desire that my executors shall as soon as they can after my decease sell at private sale the following described tract of land adjoining the above described tract to wit; Beginning at a beech thence South eighty degrees West ninety two poles to a buckeye and elm; thence South fifteen degrees East two hundred and three poles to a stake; thence North seventy six poles to a buckeye; thence East fifteen poles to a beech; thence North one hundred and fourteen poles to the beginning, and the money arising therefrom shall go to the payment of my just debts, funeral expenses and for executing this my last will and testament. The balance including any money I may have and that may arise from the sale of any personal property that I may then have, shall go to the payment of the legacy of one hundred and fifty dollars to my said wife, the remainder shall then be divided into four equal parts and I give and bequeath to the Bible society of Brown County one part and to the Missionary society of the said county one part and to the Abolition society of said County one part and to the Tract society one part and lastly I hereby constitute and appoint my said sons John Hopkins, Robert Hopkins, and Gordon Hopkins, executors of this my last will and testament revoking and annulling all former wills by me made and ratifying and confirming this and no other to be my last will and testament. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this sixth day of April in the year 1839.

ARCHIBALD, born Oct. 1808; died Mar. 26, 1874.

EDWIN, born Sept. 30, 1810; died July 10, 1846.

GRACY ANN born Sept. 27, 1812; died June 18, 1882.

ARCHIBALD HOPKINS died January 25, 1848, in his eighty-sixth year. Margaret Shanklin died March 9, 1854, in her eighty-fourth year.

They are buried side by side in the old churchyard at Red Oak, Ohio.

III. WILLIAM HOPKINS was the first of Archibald's children to come to Illinois. He left Red Oak early in September, 1835, with his wife, nine children, ten head of cattle, and thirty head of sheep. One big four-horse prairie schooner carried the household effects, and a two-horse spring-wagon, then an object of curiosity in the neighborhood, made a comfortable place for the wife and little ones. At Funk's Grove, near the present site of Bloomington, Ill., they were delayed for some time by high water. William and a part of the family finally moved on leaving the older boys with the stock to follow as soon as they could. A Sunday came, and grass for the cattle had given out. The boys thought it necessary to move to pastures new and did so, but with condemning consciences and a feeling that if their father had been there he would not have allowed it. Reaching their new possessions, they lived in the wagons until a rude cabin could be built. That same fall a better cabin was erected and the first was used for a stable. After a few years a frame house was built. This was moved away in 1845, when a much larger and better house took its place.

Archibald, William's eldest son, ran a store in Hennepin, in partnership with his Uncle George Willis. He was ambitious and had entered considerable government land. While attending school at Jacksonville, Ill., he spent his vacations working at the Willis' Mill (known later as McManis' Mill).

He died of typhoid fever before his plans were perfected.

Joel, the second son, in his early manhood clerked in his Uncle Thomas Hopkins's general store at Ripley, Ohio, but came with his parents to Illinois and helped make the new home, remaining with them and caring for them in their old age. He was a man of unusual strength and endurance. He was six feet and four inches tall and weighed one hundred ninety pounds.

Elizabeth was a woman of most cheery temper and great patience. She married J. W. Margrave, a man of unusual talents. He spent much of his time and energy teaching and working in the church, Sunday school, and choir in the many communities where he made his home. He was choir leader and elder in many of these places.

John lived at first near his parents; with the forty-niners went to California, but finally settled on a farm at Marshalltown, Iowa. He was a deacon in the church and leader of the singing for many years.

Martha was for a dozen years the mother to Joel W. Hopkins's children; later married Deacon McCord and lived in Granville.

Stephen Dawse, a fine, tall, largely built man of muscular strength, but an epileptic from young manhood, lived at home until after his father's death, when he was taken by his brother Joel to his home, where he and his sister Martha took care of the invalid with unbounded patience, and at a great personal sacrifice, until his death.

George Burder made his home on a farm near his father's. He was a man of strong opinions and great thrift. He held the positions of deacon in the church and trustee of Wheaton College.

Margarette, an unselfish, helpful, wholesome, and jovially natured woman, was a public school-teacher and lived with her parents. She took a prominent part in all musical affairs in the church. She was a large woman, of dark complexion and fine figure.

Malinda was a fine-looking young woman and, like her sister, a good singer and an able church worker. She married Abbott Barker, a carpenter by trade, and later a farmer at Mazon, Ill. He was a sterling Christian, deacon in the church, and for many years choir leader. Malinda is buried at Granville, Ill.

In all these homes family worship was faithfully maintained.

Gordon and Archibald, William's brothers, came to Illinois later, and settled near Aurora, Kendall County, Ill.
III. WILLIAM HOPKINS, the first child of II. Archibald Hopkins and Elizabeth Poag, was married March 19, 1812, to Jane Wilson Willis, who was born January 22, 1790, and died December 21, 1857.

CHILDREN:

ARCHIBALD WILSON, born Dec. 28, 1812; died Dec. 17, 1839.
JOEL WILLIS, born July 29, 1814; died Feb. 16, 1902.
ELIZABETH, born Jan. 28, 1816; died May 24, 1892.
JOHN CRAWFORD, born Feb. 25, 1818.
MARTHA, born June 20, 1820; died June 24, 1881.
STEPHEN DAWSE, born Sept. 19, 1822; died Jan. 10, 1867.
GEORGE BURDER, born Nov. 8, 1824; died May 30, 1904.
MARGARET, born Apr. 2, 1827; died Nov. 16, 1857.
MELINDA, born May 1, 1831; died May 22, 1865.

III. WILLIAM HOPKINS, first child of Archibald Hopkins and Elizabeth Poag, was a medium-sized man, five feet ten inches tall, had a sandy complexion, was nervous, wiry, quick in his movements, and palsyed somewhat in later life, hands and head shaking. He was a very strong man, and used an axe well. He always attended the “raisings,” and carried a corner up alone. He came to Illinois in 1833 on a prospecting tour, and made a claim near Florid. He went home, intending to move his family West, but his father, Archibald Hopkins, heard of his plans, and said, “Tut, tut, William, this will never do.” They always obeyed “Old Archie,” and for two years William waited. He then returned to Illinois and bought the claim of Alexander Laughlin, entering the land east of Granville, Ill., where his grandson, A. W. Hopkins, now lives. He shortly afterwards brought his family to the new home, where he lived and died. He is buried in the Granville cemetery.

Jane Willis, wife of William Hopkins, was a large woman, with dark hair, probably blue eyes, deliberate in her movements, and of good judgment. Her son Joel said, “After she had had nine children, she beat Amaziah Baird, a seventeen-year-old lad, in a foot-race.” The children inherited their mother’s physique, were unusually large, finely built, strong, and of good carriage. They always had family prayers twice a day.
IV. JOEL WILLIS HOPKINS.
at William's home, as they had had in their father's home. A letter written to Joel Hopkins, March 13, 1898, by Adeline M. Weed, Berkeley, Cal., says: “I remember I was quite impressed by the stately dignity of your mother, my Aunt Jane. I told my mother I would like to live to be old if I could have the fine bearing of Aunt Jane. I think she was sixty-three, but that seemed like old age to me then.” Of their children, Joel and John were sandy, all the rest had brown hair and gray eyes.

IV. ARCHIBALD WILSON HOPKINS, first child of III. William Hopkins and Jane Wilson Willis, died at twenty-seven years of age.

He was attending school at Illinois College, Jacksonville, Ill., and Joel W. Hopkins remembered going to Jacksonville to get his books after his death. He is buried in the Granville Cemetery.

IV. JOEL WILLIS HOPKINS, second child of William Hopkins and Jane Wilson Willis, was married December 10, 1840, to Eleanor Jane Harrison, who was born February 23, 1820.

CHILDREN:

- Eveline Winslow, born Nov. 6, 1841; died Jan. 5, 1848.
- Helen De Armond, born June 22, 1843.
- Mary Harrison, born Dec. 30, 1846.

Eleanor Jane Harrison Hopkins died February 20, 1849.

IV. JOEL WILLIS HOPKINS was married second, January 31, 1862, to Mrs. Sarah Smith Harrison, who was born June 7, 1823, and died June 27, 1897.

CHILDREN:

- Martha Belle, born May 22, 1863.

IV. JOEL WILLIS HOPKINS was active in the public affairs of his county, state, and nation. No history of Putnam County could be written without taking into account his great influence in molding the character of its people, shaping their policy and promoting their interests in lines of progress, good order, moral, and religious development. At one time he was a member of the State Board of Agriculture. He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Cincinnati that nominated Hayes for President, a member of the 26th General Assembly, and County Judge. In business he was unusually wise and successful. At the time of his death he was president of the Peru National Bank, the Putnam County Bank, and the Granville Bank, and left a large estate, chiefly in farm lands.

In his character there was an unusual combination of qualities. To the world, the church, his neighbors, and friends, he was a tower of strength; to his family, all of that, and a world of tenderness besides. He was at ease in the presence of the highest dignitaries in the land, and so simple and kind that no one, however humble, ever felt abashed in his presence. At his death it was said of him, “Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?”

V. Eveline Winslow Hopkins, first child of Joel Willis Hopkins and Eleanor Jane Harrison, died at seven years of age, and is buried in the Granville cemetery.

V. Helen De Armond Hopkins, second child of Joel Willis Hopkins and Eleanor Jane Harrison, was married September 3, 1867, to Robert L. McCord, who was born August 7, 1830. Children:

- Joel Hopkins, born Sept. 24, 1868.
- James Bennett, born Apr. 5, 1870.
- Mary Eleanor, born May 14, 1872; died Feb. 11, 1900.
- Archibald Wilson, born Feb. 6, 1878; died Sept. 24, 1902.
- William, born Nov. 6, 1879; died Nov. 6, 1879.

Home, Lake City, Iowa; Business, clergyman.

Graduated from Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, class of 1891.

VI. JAMES BENNET McCORD, second child of Helen De Armond Hopkins and Robert L. McCord, was married August 14, 1895, to Margaret Mellen, who was born November 9, 1870.

CHILDREN:

Jessica Fairbank, born July 12, 1897.

Mary Helen, born Jan. 19, 1899.

Robert, born May 5, 1900.

Margaret Mellen is the daughter of a missionary of the American Board, and was born in Africa. She graduated from Oberlin College in the class of 1893.

VI. JAMES BENNET McCORD graduated from Oberlin College in the class of 1891, and from the Northwestern Medical College, Chicago, Ill., class of 1894. He practiced medicine at Lake City, Iowa, until the fall of 1899, when he received an appointment from the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions to join the Zulu Mission as medical missionary. He sailed from Boston October 11, 1899. His station is at Durban, Natal, South Africa. About the time of his going to Africa, the Natal government had passed a law requiring of doctors practicing in Natal, an English diploma. To save the expense of a journey to England and the time, the American Board wrote to Mr. Chamberlain, secretary for foreign affairs, to procure for Dr. McCord a license to practice in English territory. Mr. Chamberlain accordingly wrote to the Natal government recommending that he be permitted to take an examination in Natal, but all plans failed, and he was obliged to go to England and enter the University in London. He studied a year and took the examinations with the class in July, 1902, receiving a membership in the Royal College of Physicians and the Royal College of Surgeons. He returned to his work in the Zulu mission in August. He is now laboring to establish a dispensary and hospital at Durban.

VI. MARY ELEANOR McCORD, third child of Helen De Armond Hopkins and Robert L. McCord, was married June 27, 1895, to Ralph Larkin, who was born June 29, 1870.

CHILDREN:

Robert Edgar, born Oct. 1, 1897; died Sept. 24, 1899.

VI. MARY ELEANOR McCORD was born in Toulon, Ill., removing to New Windsor with the family in her seventh year, to Lyonsville, when she was ten years old, and to Sheffield when she was fourteen. From here she went to Oberlin College for four years, graduating in the class of 1894, after which she taught in Toulon one year and in Lake City, Iowa, for two years, and spent one year in the Moody Bible Institute. She was married in the summer of 1895, and in the following September went with her husband to Turkey, under the A. B. C. F. M. Because of frequent massacres in the interior, they spent one year in Beirut, Syria, studying Arabic, and reached their destination, Mardin, October, 1896. In October, 1897, her little son was born, and a few months later she was taken with a severe sickness, from which she never recovered. They returned to America in the summer of 1898, and spent the last year of her life in Colorado. Little Robert died September 24, 1899, and the mother followed February 11, 1900. The predominant trait of her Christian character was her unwavering faith. When starting out across the country for Turkey in the times of the terrible massacres, she wrote: "God calls us to go, we cannot hesitate. He will lead us. If he should take us home, it would be our great gain. You must not grieve." And in Colorado, during the last bright days of her life, she prayed for grace to live or die just as God willed. Faith gave her the victory. Her death was a triumph.

Ralph Larkin graduated from Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., class 1892, and from the Congregational Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill., class of 1895.

Home, Ontario, Cal.; business, clergyman.

VI. ROBERT LEIGH McCORD, fourth child of Helen De Armond Hopkins and Robert L. McCord, studied at Oberlin, in 1891 and 1892.

He graduated from the Iowa University, class of 1896, and from its law department in 1899. While studying law in Iowa University in 1898, he enlisted in the 6th battery, Iowa Volunteers, Light Artillery, as corporal. The battery went into camp in Des Moines, in July, but were never called to active service. He was mustered out in September as "An efficient drill-master, and a soldier who can intelligently handle a body of men."

VI. ARCHIBALD WILSON McCORD, fifth child of Helen De Armond Hopkins and Robert L. McCord, was born in Toulon, Ill., February 6, 1878.

He studied at Oberlin, Ohio, and at Grinnell, Iowa, and afterward took a commercial course at Capital City Commercial College, Des Moines, Iowa. His ambition lay along business lines. Nothing better presenting itself, he accepted a clerkship in a store, and worked so hard and faithfully that he is still the merchant's standard of faithful service. Wishing to make banking his life work, he worked for a few months in the Lake View State Bank, and later in the law office of his brother in Sac City. It was here that he became acquainted with Judge Goldsmith, who, recognizing his sterling qualities, sent him to Salem, S. D., as a clerk in his bank there. He had been there but a few weeks, when the manager of the bank became ill, and he assumed the direction of the business in his absence. He filled the place with so much ability and fidelity that the directors of the Early State Bank, at Early, Iowa, made him cashier and a director in their bank. Few young men in business have, by the force of merit alone, risen so rapidly, or won, in so short a time, so much respect and friendship. He was stricken with typhoid fever early in September, 1902, and after a brave and determined fight, died like a Christian, recognizing God's will as "all right."

VI. WILLIAM McCORD, sixth child of Helen De Armond Hopkins and Robert McCord, died the day he was born. He was buried in the Granville cemetery.

V. ARCHIBALD WILSON HOPKINS, third child of Joel Willis Hopkins and Eleanor Jane Harrison, was married April 14, 1898, to Cara L. McVay, who was born October 17, 1861. She is a graduate of the "Western," at Oxford, Ohio.

CHILDREN:

ELEANOR JANE, born Feb. 15, 1899.

JOEL WILLIS, born Sept. 19, 1902.

Home, Granville, Ill.

V. ARCHIBALD WILSON HOPKINS, the only son of Joel Willis Hopkins and Eleanor Jane Harrison, was born and has always lived at the old homestead at Granville, Ill. He studied for a short time at Oberlin College, then went to Hillsdale, Mich., where he graduated with the class of 1870. From that time until the death of his father, February 16, 1902, he was associated with him in business, along the lines of farming, stock-raising, and kindred interests. For years he was a director of the Peru National Bank, and at his father's death became president of both the Granville bank and the Putnam County bank, at Hennepin, Ill. He has been quite a traveler in both the Old and New World. He served the Republican party as a member of the 37th, 38th, and 41st General Assemblies of Illinois.
V. MARY HARRISON HOPKINS, fourth child of Joel Willis Hopkins and Eleanor Jane Harrison, was married May 19, 1875, to William W. Wright, who was born September 10, 1842.

Children:

ELEANOR MATILDA, born May 30, 1877.

HELEN GERTRUDE, born July 22, 1884.

V. MARY HARRISON HOPKINS graduated from the musical department of Rockford College in 1865. She then studied two years at Oberlin College and one year at the New England Conservatory, Boston, Mass.

William W. Wright is a lawyer and has served Stark County, Illinois, six years as master in chancery, and afterwards twenty-five years as judge. He was a delegate from the Peoria district to the National Republican Convention which met in Chicago in 1884. He stands high as a lawyer, and has been connected with many prominent cases.

VI. ELEANOR MATILDA WRIGHT, first child of Mary Harrison Hopkins and William W. Wright.

Graduated from the Toulon, Ill., High School, class of 1894, and from the Toulon Academy in 1897. She is at the Toulon home with her parents.

VI. WILLIAM W. WRIGHT, second child of Mary Harrison Hopkins and William W. Wright.

Studied in the schools of Toulon until 1897, when he went to Wooster, Mass., and afterwards to the University of Illinois, where he graduated from the law department in 1904. He was admitted to the bar in Arkansas in 1902 and in Illinois in 1904. Is associated in business with his father in Toulon, Ill.

VI. MARY AMELIA WRIGHT, third child of Mary Harrison Hopkins and William W. Wright, died a baby, and is buried in the Granville Cemetery.
VI. HELEN GERTRUDE WRIGHT, the fourth child of Mary Harrison Hopkins and William W. Wright.

Graduated from the Toulon Academy in 1902. She studied at Wellesley one year, and is in the University of Illinois, Champaign, Ill., class of 1905.

V. MARTHA BELLE HOPKINS, child of Joel W. Hopkins and Mrs. Sarah S. Harrison, was married March 3, 1898, to Sidney Whitaker, who was born December 20, 1859.

CHILDREN:

SIDNEY HOPKINS, born Mar. 13, 1899.
JOHN HOPKINS, born June 22, 1900.
JOEL HOPKINS, born Aug. 22, 1901.
SARAH HYDE, born May 24, 1903.
WILHELMINA SCHOETLER, born Sept. 1, 1904.

V. MARTHA BELLE HOPKINS, child of Joel W. Hopkins and Mrs. Sarah S. Harrison, was in the High School at Ottawa, Ill., 1880 and 1881, and studied at Wellesley College from 1882 to 1885. Just before her graduation she was called home by the illness of her mother. She spent the year 1888-89 traveling in Europe. Her home is "just over the way" from the old homestead.

Home, Granville, Ill.; business, agriculture.
IV. ELIZABETH HOPKINS, third child of William Hopkins and Jane Wilson Willis, was married February 8, 1838, to James Willis Margrave, who was born in Kentucky, August 16, 1814.

Margaret Rubeti was, by her mother, a member of the Sac tribe of Indians. Her father was a Canadian Frenchman, whose education was commenced with a view to his becoming a Roman Catholic priest. This plan he abandoned, and going to the West, was employed by the American Fur Company. In 1851 Margaret was left an orphan. The Rev. S. M. Irvin took her to his home in the "Iowa and Sac Mission" and brought her up and educated her as though she were his own child. She taught the first school on the Reservation, and still remembers her trying experiences when her pupils could talk no English and she could talk no Indian. The home at Reserve, Kan., is one that the Hopkins clans may well covet.

K. Martin, born Apr. 13, 1884.
Paul Ellsworth, born Feb. 20, 1886.
Lewis Story, born Feb. 2, 1888.

Of these three boys, their mother says, "We find them alike in the traits which they have inherited from a common ancestry, and unlike in an individuality, which belongs to each human being. For the present they are boys, boys with the virtues and faults, the likes and dislikes, which belong to boyhood. They like some work and a great deal of play, and in God's good time will doubtless marry and carry forward the name and race, let us hope, not unworthily."

V. ALBERT WADE HOPKINS went with his brother William to Nebraska in 1879, where he remained until 1883. He was then married and returned to Illinois, living on a farm in LaSalle County until 1887, when he moved to Crete, Neb. In 1895 he moved to Vilisca, Iowa, where his home now is.

Louisa Virginia Martin was educated in the schools of Nebraska City. She taught from 1877 to 1883, when she was married. She is a story writer of some merit, many periodicals having published the work of her pen.

- George Newport, born Mar. 27, 1879.
- Clarence Hopkins, born Sept. 8, 1889.
- Florene Melinda, born Sept. 30, 1897.

Albert Denmon Beckhart is a graduate of the University of Illinois, Class of 1875. He was married to Hannah Jane Barker at Cerro Gordo, Ill., where he was principal of the public school. In the fall of 1877 he took charge of the school at Buffalo, Ill., where Mabel Grace was born. The next spring he supplied the Methodist Episcopal pulpit at Mechanicsburg. This finally resulted in his leaving school work and devoting himself entirely to the ministry. He held charges at Raymond, Ill., where George Newport was born, at Auburn, Ill., where the churches had great revivals, and at Nilwood, Ill., where Charles Abbott was born. In the fall of 1882 he took what is called in conference language a “location,” and moved to Kansas onto a farm, in order to give his father a home. Here he stayed for five years, when his father died. He then took charge of the city schools of Belleville, Kan., where Earl Albert was born. Still the pulpit called him, and he accepted a charge at St. Francis, Kan., where three new churches were built, and many added to the membership. This was a mission field. Then followed a charge at Phillipsburg, Kan., where Clarence Hopkins was born. Another mission field at Hill City, Kan., followed this, and then came a charge at Ellsworth, Kan. In 1893 the family visited the World’s Fair at Chicago. In 1894 he was transferred to work in Iowa, and stationed first at Oakland, then at Anita, where Florence Melinda was born, then at Macedonia, after which he was recalled to Oakland. At the close of his work here he retired from active work, and went onto a farm near Atlantic, La. Since 1889 he has been a trustee of the Kansas Wesleyan University at Salina, Kan.

Home, Mazon, Ill.; business, agriculture, stock raising.
III. JOHN HOPKINS, second child of Archibald and Elizabeth Poage Hopkins, was born in Rockingham County, Va., in 1805.

After his marriage he went onto a farm near the old Red Oak church, where he lived and died. Each of his six sons was nearly or quite six feet tall, and each of them was made an elder in the Presbyterian church. Some one once said that "John Hopkins raised thirty-six feet of elder timber." He believed in educating his children, and each child, the daughters as well as the sons, was sent to the neighboring academy. They went on horseback across the hills, carrying all baggage in saddle-bags. Some of them were pretty homesick, but they improved their opportunities, as they have shown by their lives. Thomas left home early in the forties to attend the academy in South Salem, O., a distance of fifty miles. When the midwinter vacation came, he was so homesick that he made up his mind to go home. The roads were wretchedly muddy, and he arrived the evening of the second day, long after every one had gone to bed. He was nearly exhausted, and thoroughly chilled with the cold, but he was at home. Six of the children attended this school. There were two terms a year. In March of 1852 the last one bid a final farewell to Salem Academy. Robert and James both attended Hanover College, in Indiana. Robert did not finish the course, but James graduated. He then attended Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, O., one year, and afterwards studied privately with Samuel Crothers, D.D., of Greenfield, O.

Archibald Hopkins, of Red Oak, O., remembers that when his father was somewhat advanced in years, he said, "I used to say 'Come, boys'; now I say 'Go, boys.' " He often quoted the words of Solomon, "The King himself is served by the field." He died at the ripe old age of eighty-five, and is buried with his kin in the churchyard at Red Oak, O.

III. JOHN HOPKINS, second child of Archibald Hopkins and Elizabeth Poag, was married June 7, 1815, to Polly Gilliland, who was born February 3, 1797.

CHILDREN:

ROBERT, born May 23, 1816; died July 4, 1851.

JAMES G., born Aug. 16, 1820; died June 29, 1851.

Polly Gilliland Hopkins died August 14, 1822, and is buried in the churchyard at Red Oak, O.
III. JOHN HOPKINS was married a second time October 28, 1824, to Nancy Mayes, who was born in South Carolina, December 27, 1788. She was the adopted daughter of her uncle, Colonel John Means. She died August 1, 1851, and is buried in the churchyard at Red Oak, O.

CHILDREN:

- Thomas Mayes, born Nov. 24, 1827; died May 17, 1901.
- John Means, born May 9, 1830. (Twins)
- Archibald Newton, born May 9, 1830.
- Elizabeth Jane, born Mar. 18, 1832; died July 5, 1869.
- Harriet Ann, born May 9, 1834.

IV. ROBERT HOPKINS, first child of John Hopkins and Polly Gilliland, was married August 23, 1842, to Agnes C. Johnson.

CHILDREN:

- Mary Frances, born Sept. 10, 1843.
- William Johnson, born Nov. 6, 1845.
- Nancy Mayes, born July 15, 1847; died Nov. 14, 1849.
- Sarah Jane, born Mar. 23, 1849.
- Ann Kelly, born May 15, 1851; died July 18, 1852.

After their marriage, Robert and Agnes Johnson Hopkins went as missionaries to the Dakota Indians. Robert had not completed his college course, but was licensed and ordained by the Presbytery, of which Dr. Riggs and Dr. Williamson were the leading members. When Robert and his wife went to their fields there were no railroads beyond Galena, Ill. They took a common road-wagon and a two-horse team and traveled with them to Fort Snelling. Passing that point on their way to Laque Parle, where Dr. Williamson was located, they met some hostile Chippewa Indians, one of whom leveled his gun on Robert, but the old flint-lock did not come to time and no damage was done. Another was more successful, and struck the little black mare Robert's father had given him, on the shoulder, incapacitating her for service. The company now walked in the blazing sun, with the temperature at a hundred degrees. Mrs. Hopkins did not recover from the effects of this walk for years. Robert Hopkins's work was the founding of a mission station on the Minnesota River, not far from where St. Peter now is. He and Mr. Alexander Huggins built homes for themselves and began their self-denying work. The Indians often went on hunting expeditions in mid-winter. Robert would take his tent and snowshoes and follow them, living with them, and eating the unwholesome food which they gave him. It would have given mortal offense had he returned any portion uneaten. He did so much hard work that the relatives fancied when he visited them that he was bent as a man accustomed to bear heavy burdens. When asked why he went on these trips with the Indians, he said, “If I did not, I would lose so much time from my life work, which is to carry the Gospel to the Dakotas.” His mantle has fallen on three grandchildren, Harley S. Parker and Agnes and Clarissa Pond, who have all served in home mission fields. Robert and Agnes Hopkins worked seven years with the Dakota Indians, then returned to Ohio with four children, for a visit. One of the children died November 14, 1849, during this visit, and is buried at Red Oak. Robert Hopkins and his brother James were very dear to each other, and when the time came for Robert to return to his field of labor, each felt the sorrow of the parting very keenly. It was but a few months before James was taken sick, and after some days of suffering died, June 30, 1851. On the following Friday, July 4, 1851, Robert was drowned in the Minnesota River, on the bank of which his mission was stationed. Neither of the brothers knew that the other had left the earthly life until they met in their “Father’s house.”

IV. JAMES HOPKINS is buried in the old churchyard at Red Oak, Ohio.

IV. ROBERT HOPKINS’S body lies in a little cemetery near St. Peter, Minn., among other missionaries to the Dakotas and members of their families.

Agnes C. Johnson Hopkins was married a second time to Gideon H. Pond. Home, Bloomington, Minn. After the death of Robert Hopkins, Agnes C. Johnson Hopkins went to South Salem, O., where her baby, Ann Kelly, died. Gideon H. Pond was also a missionary to the Indians. His wife had died and left him six children to care for. He persuaded Mrs. Hopkins, with her three children, to go back with him to the Dakotas as his wife.
V. MARY FRANCES HOPKINS, first child of Robert Hopkins and Agnes C. Johnson, was married July 28, 1864, to Edward R. Pond, son of Gideon H. Pond.

Louise Morgan, born June 1, 1873.
Wilbur Lewis, born Oct. 1, 1875.

IV. THOMAS MAYES HOPKINS, son of John and Nancy Mayes Hopkins, was born November 24, 1827, at Red Oak, Brown County, O. He made a public confession of his faith in Christ in the Presbyterian church at Red Oak at the age of fifteen. His preparatory studies were pursued in the South Salem Academy, Ross County, O., and he graduated from Hanover College in 1852. As was often the custom in those times, he studied theology privately for a year with Rev. Samuel Crothers, D.D., of Greenfield, O., the Rev. Hugh Fullerton, of South Salem, O., and the Rev. G. P. Vandyke, of Red Oak, O. He entered the theological seminary at Princeton in 1853, where he graduated in 1855. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Chillicothe, Ohio, June 6, 1855, and ordained by the Presbytery of Miami, Ohio, May 13, 1856, being at the same time installed pastor of the church at Pleasant Valley, O., which he had been serving since his graduation. In 1859 he became pastor at Bloomington, Ind., where he remained for ten years.

He was pastor at Piqua, O., 1869-1876, where, aside from his pastoral work, he was active in the temperance movement, which was at that time agitating the state of Ohio. The excitement was so high that he was at one time "egged." He was instrumental in starting a newspaper for the advancement of temperance principles and politics. He was pastor at Xenia, O., 1876-80, and in the Third Church, Cincinnati, O., 1884-1886. In 1886 he removed to Denver, Colo., and served as pastor of the Capital Avenue Church until 1891, when he resigned to accept the presidency of Westminster University. He took a leading part in the organization of this university and the securing of funds to build the structure at Westminster Heights, north of Denver; but the panic of 1893 occurred just when his plans appeared ready for fruition, and the project was suspended. During the present year (1903) efforts have been made to revive the work, and it is hoped that the institution may open its doors to pupils in September of 1904.

In 1895 Dr. Hopkins organized the York Street Presbyterian Church of Denver, Colo. For two years he preached in a tent and raised the money to pay for the lots. Then the little chapel was put up, and the congregation is now a thriving one. One of the officers of the church remarked to him not three hours before the fatal stroke came, “Doctor, that church will be a monument to you long after the rest of us are laid under the sod.”

He was stricken with apoplexy while engaged in watering the lawn of the church, a labor of love on his part. This was on May 10, 1901, and he died with all his family about him at midnight, May 17, 1901. He was buried in the Fairmount Cemetery, Denver, Colo.

He received the honorary degree of D. D. from Hanover College in 1885. He was commissioner to the General Assembly at Philadelphia in 1861, when the Southern church seceded, also at Cleveland in 1875, and at Philadelphia in 1888, which was the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America. He was an earnest and forceful preacher and fruitful pastor, and was greatly beloved by those among whom he labored. He took special interest in practical works of reform, even to the extent of accepting political duties, which are sometimes denied to ministers.

Home, on one of the beautiful hills of Red Oak, O., not far from the old church. The daughters Harriet and Althea with Mr. and Mrs. Gilliland, make the spacious old home a restful spot to the wanderers who come their way. Books and papers testify to their love for literature, and their contact with the world by travel make them interesting companions.

The daughters of Elizabeth Hopkins and W. A. Gilliland had each a year's schooling at "The Western," at Oxford, Ohio. Later Lizzie studied at Lebanon, O., and Jeanette and Althea at Hanover College, Ind. James also studied at Lebanon, O., and was for a while in business in Minneapolis, Minn. After a severe illness there he returned to Ohio, and for four years conducted a shoe store in Ripley. In 1898 he went to Chicago.

As a family the Gillilands are simple in their tastes, fond of books and music. The married members are devoted to the care of their households and families.

After the marriage of John Hopkins Pogue and Jane Hopkins they must have lived for a time in Kentucky, as Silas was born in Kentucky, in 1808.

Mrs. Hannah Sophia Pogue Youel writes, "My Grandmother Hopkins's given name was Elizabeth, Grandmother Pogue's name was Mary, and her husband was designated as Colonel Robert Pogue, Greenup County, Ky. The wife of General Robert Pogue, of Mason County, was Jane, and Hannah Shanklin was her sister. They all had the name of being grand women. I knew my Grandmother Mary Hopkins Pogue and Aunt Jane Pogue. They were both good and smart, and Aunt Hannah Shanklin was extolled by the whole kin. I have heard Aunt Mary Pogue and mother talk about Aunt Ruth Hopkins and Uncle and Aunt Hinton, but where they come in I do not know." Mrs. Youel says John Hopkins Pogue was born in Bath County, Va. He was a brother of George Pogue, of Ripley, O. He died in Montgomery County, Ind.

Harriet May, born Sept. 15, 1867; died Oct. 23, 1870.

A few days after their marriage, Margaret Pogue and Daniel Skinner Lamson went to the forests of Howard County, Ind., to make themselves a home, the husband taking all their effects in a two-horse wagon, the bride accompanying him on horseback, a distance of more than fifty miles. In June, 1851, they removed to the prairie country of Rensselaer, Jasper County, Ind., and bought three eighty-acre tracts of land from the government at $1.25 an acre. They were located south of the county-seat on the Iroquois River. This is “Riverside,” the Lamson home of to-day. Daniel S. Lamson was an influential and useful man. He faithfully read his Bible, kept the Sabbath, and attended public worship. He was of the Presbyterian faith, though not a church member until a few years before his death. The death of a beloved little daughter brought him into the church. In the fall of 1872 his health began to fail, and he left the two older boys on the farm and went to Rensselaer, where he died, January 22, 1873, and his body was laid to rest in the Egypt Cemetery near his home.
V. JOHN THOMAS LAMSON, first child of Margaret Pogue and Daniel Skinner Lamson, was married April 11, 1875, to Rebecca Elizabeth Smith, who was born June 21, 1849. She was a descendant on the maternal side of General Braddock.

IV. SAMUEL McYOUEL, thirteenth child of Jane Hopkins and John Hopkins Pogue, not reported.
III. MARY HOPKINS, fourth child of Archibald Hopkins and Elizabeth Poag, was married to John Crawford Pogue (a cousin of the John Hopkins Pogue that her sister Jane married).

They had no children, but adopted Sarah Amanda, the seventh child of Jane Hopkins (her sister) and John Hopkins Pogue, and cared for her as their own child. The last days of Mary Hopkins Pogue were spent in the home of this adopted daughter. She was a "little woman with blue eyes and red hair. She was quick in motion, would fly about her work, was a great helper in time of need, as many can testify." She was a great hand to ride horseback and could ride anything. Her husband died about 1837, and was buried at Red Oak. In their early married life they lived at Ripley, Ohio. Then they moved onto a farm near Red Oak, Ohio, where John ran a fulling mill. In 1853 Mary Hopkins Pogue went with her adopted daughter, Amanda Pogue Voris, and her husband, Samuel Voris, to Aledo, Ill. In 1864 they moved to Benton County, Ia., where Mary Hopkins Pogue died, February, 1873. She is buried near Parker's Grove, Shellsburg, Ia. Samuel Voris and his wife, Sarah Amanda Pogue Voris, are also buried there.
III. SARAH HOPKINS, fifth child of Archibald Hopkins and Elizabeth Poag, was married February 7, 1822, to Adam B. Gilliland, who was born January 22, 1794, and died January 5, 1885.

CHILDREN:

NANCY JANE, born Feb. 9, 1823; died May 29, 1899.
AMANDA, born Dec. 12, 1824; died June 22, 1899.
JAMES ALEXANDER, born Nov. 16, 1826; died Aug. 11, 1857.
FANNY MARY, born June 24, 1828; died Nov. 12, 1886.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, born Apr. 13, 1830; died May 31, 1875.
SARAH ELIZABETH, born Jan. 18, 1832; died Aug. 8, 1857.
ARCHIBALD LUTHER, born Mar. 26, 1834.

Home was at different places where Mr. Gilliland preached in Ohio, Hillsboro, Bethel, Riely, Venice. Sarah Hopkins Gilliland and Adam B. Gilliland are buried at Venice, O.

III. SARAH HOPKINS, fifth child of Archibald Hopkins and Elizabeth Poag, was a lovely, modest, gentle woman, rather tall and slender, and graceful, with black hair and blue eyes. She was said to have been a very pretty, stylish young woman. She was a fine horsewoman, sitting the most spirited horse with perfect ease. She possessed a fine voice, and my grandfather used to love to hear her sing "Counter," a rare accomplishment in those days. She was domestic in her tastes, and given to hospitality. She did her full share in helping grandfather in assisting slaves to the Canadian border. Many a time grandfather came home and found grandmother cooking doughnuts and hard biscuit, while a black man was safely hid in the loft of the cabin, or in the hay-mow. As soon as it was dark grandfather hitched up, and took the slave to the next station, driving like Jehu so as to make the return trip before daylight. This night march was usually made endurable by grandmother's doughnuts and biscuits. Sometimes on arriving at home in the morning he would find grandmother hiding another poor fellow, and would have to repeat his night ride. Grandmother made her trip from Virginia on horseback with her father, she having remained there several years after the rest of the family had moved to Ohio. We have in our possession a corner of a linen tablecloth, with knotted fringe, which she spun and wove before she left Virginia. We also have a piece of embroidery which she made after she was sixty years old, showing her to be a skillful needle woman. There is in the family a blue and white wool and linen coverlet which she spun and wove. Though over ninety years old, it is in good condition. We have a piece of her wedding petticoat, of fine corded dimity, and a piece of her wedding dress, which was of thin white goods, with ten rows of trimming around the skirt woven into the goods. Another heirloom which we prize very highly is a piece of fine linen towelling, with knotted fringe, spun and woven by Elizabeth Poag, our great-grandmother, Archibald Hopkins’s (Red Oak, Ohio) first wife.

Adam Baird Gililand graduated from Jefferson College, Penn., in 1831. He studied theology, as he once said, “with the apostle Paul,” his own father, the Rev. James Gililand, of Red Oak, O. He was licensed to preach April 24, 1824, and spent the summer as missionary in the then thinly settled Scioto Valley. In the fall he took his family to Hillsboro, where he was ordained to preach, and installed as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, with a salary of three hundred dollars a year, one hundred to be paid in money, and the rest in produce. He taught a private school for young ladies in order to eke out this small salary. In 1828 he went to Bethel, where he learned the cabinet maker’s trade, and a number of pieces of furniture in the family bear testimony to his taste and skill. Adam Wade, of Venice, O., has a beautiful black walnut sideboard, with a black marble top. Mrs. Anna B. Folson has a cherry bureau. Miss Sarah Anderson has a bureau, stand, and breakfast-table that were made for his daughter, Nancy Jane, to go to housekeeping with. He was stated supply at Venice from 1839 to 1859. At one time he had a very urgent call to become pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Dayton, O. While debating it he happened to go to the cemetery at that place, and immediately declined the offer, saying, “There are too many small graves there, I cannot bring my little ones to so sickly a place.” He was for the most part an extemporaneous speaker, rarely taking anything into the pulpit except a small piece of paper with the heads of his sermon upon it. Often in preparing his sermon; the only books he used were his Bible and concordance. He was an able and successful preacher. He had deep sympathies and tender feelings, which were hidden by an abrupt, severe manner. He was occasionally witty, sometimes sarcastic. He was very entertaining socially, and told a story well. In the presbytery he was very influential, frequently turning the vote of that body at the last moment by a few terse and clear-cut sentences. This influence was always on the side of what he believed was right, personal sympathies having no part in his decision. Sometimes he took advantage of an unguarded expression. of a brother in presbytery and threw the entire body into a fit of laughter, while he sat down with a face as innocent as a child. He was always a stanch Republican, and a ranting Abolitionist. He was a lover of music, possessing a fairly good voice, and played the violin so that “you wanted to dance.” His favorite hymns were “I would not live always,” “Nearer, my God, to Thee,” “Home, sweet home,” and “Suwanee River.” At Venice, one of the most beautiful spots on the Ohio River, in sight of the church he served and helped to build, rests his body. His wife, three daughters, three sons-in-law, and ten grandchildren lie near him, waiting the resurrection morn.

MARY LIZZIE ANDERSON, Dayton, Ohio.

IV. NANCY JANE GILLILAND, first child of Sarah Hopkins and Adam B. Gilliland, was married December 28, 1842, to Ichabod Fergus Anderson, who was born November 26, 1820, and died May 4, 1873.

IV. NANCY JANE GILLILAND ANDERSON belonged to that generation fast passing away who began housekeeping in log cabins, cooked by the open fire, spun the yarn and knit the stockings of the family, cut and made all garments, did their own scrubbing, baking, and washing, and with all this found time to help a sick neighbor, to read and keep abreast of the times, and to dispense a hospitality that puts ours to shame. She possessed a lively, kind disposition, and was much admired and respected. Like her father, Adam B. Gilliland, she was a person of strong convictions. During the presidential campaign in 1880, Robert G. Ingersoll was to deliver a speech before the Republicans at the fair grounds at Dayton, O. Grandfather was very anxious about the election, and wanted very much to hear Ingersoll speak. Mother objected to his going to hear Ingersoll, because he was an infidel, and young men seeing these two preachers attending his political speech might go to hear his infidel lectures, and so be led astray. They argued the question pro and con for some time, both of them getting warmer and warmer. At last grandfather, with considerable irritation, said, "Jane, I suppose if your house was on fire and the devil came along and wanted to help you put it out, you would not let him." "Oh yes," she said, "he might throw water, but he should not talk to my boys." This of course was followed by a laugh, and grandfather went to the speech, but he did not stay long.

Home, Ripley, O.; business, merchant.

III. THOMAS HOPKINS left the farm quite early in life, and settled in Ripley, Brown County, O., where he engaged in the dry goods business, which, with other pursuits afterwards embarked in, became extensive. For many years he owned and operated the "Franklin Flouring Mills," located on the Ripley and Hillsboro pike, some two miles from Ripley. He also built an extensive wharf on the river frontage of the store property, and was among the first to build and introduce the wharf boat for the accommodation of steam craft. In connection with the wharf he erected, contiguous to the wharf property, a commodious warehouse for the storage of merchandise, which remained standing until within a few years, when it was dismantled.

The family residence built by him was, in its day, regarded one of the finest houses in the town, and is still standing in good condition. A public-spirited man, of wonderful energy and activity, his labors for the community in which he lived, for its welfare as well as his own, were not appreciated as they should have been in the days of his prosperity, but in after years, when reverses had overtaken him and the accumulations of a lifetime had been swept away, there were those who bore testimony of his indefatigable enterprises and of the great good he had done for the benefit of those who followed. He was ninety-three years old when he died.

Sarah Johnston was born in Brownsville, Pa., but was living in Ripley, O., when Thomas Hopkins met her. She was a young woman of local distinction and popularity, known by her intimates as the “belle of Ripley.” She was in every respect a true woman, of fine attainments. She was an intimate friend of the Blaine family, and recollected well the birth of James G. Blaine, and his boyhood in their native town. She was a Presbyterian, as have been all the members of her household.

After the death of Joel W. Hopkins, of Granville, Ill., the following clipping was found among his papers: “Mrs. Sarah Hopkins, wife of Thomas Hopkins, died yesterday afternoon at five o’clock, at her home on Mulbury Street, Jeffersonville, Ind., of old age. The deceased was eighty-one years old, and had long been a resident of Jeffersonville. Mrs. Hopkins was an intimate acquaintance of the Hon. J. G. Blaine, and was familiar with many of the celebrated personages of other years. She was one of the committee of young ladies who gave a reception to General Lafayette upon his visit to this country in 1824.” Thomas Hopkins and Sarah Johnston Hopkins are buried at Jeffersonville, Ind.
IV. ORLANDO JOHNSTON HOPKINS, first child of Thomas Hopkins and Sarah Johnston, was married at Felicity, Ohio, October 12, 1853, to Malissa Ruhama Sargent, who was born at Felicity, Clermont County, Ohio, October 1, 1831.

IV. BENJAMIN HOPKINS DUNLAP has been quite a rover, visiting many places. He spent one year in Old Mexico. In 1857 he was on the frontier of Kansas engaged in freighting to the mountains. In 1864 he had charge of a thousand head of cattle taking them to New Mexico. At Big Bend, Kan., he and his party were attacked by about 400 Indians. After a hot fight, the Indians were driven off, but not before six of his men had been wounded and he himself had received an ounce ball in his leg, breaking the bone below the knee. He was obliged to ride 300 miles in a stage coach before receiving surgical aid. The surgeons then wished to amputate his leg, but he objected, and the fact that he has a well, strong limb now proves that he was right. To-day he is a robust man of sixty-three years living among the mountains.

Bishop Wharburton once said that "high birth was a thing which he never knew any one disparage except those who had it not; and he never knew any one make a boast of it who had anything else."

AUGUSTA COUNTY May 19th 1798.

Dr Brother

Last monady Evening I Received your letter dated the 25th of March and am now on my return from the pastures. I was at Dunlap’s who owns the land on the Sioto. I did not find him at home but was Informed by his Brother that he would not Sell it and likewise that William Poage had been with him last week on the Same business. As I found the man had no Intention to Sell the Land I did not think it worth while to Wait for his Return home.

Trade is very dull in this Contrey and money hard to Raise but if you Should make any purchas and want money I will try to make up one hundred pounds. I expect you to write to me as Soon as any purchase is made, first opportunity that you have. I have nothing meterial to write. We are Mutch as usual in helth so no more But wish to be Remembered to all Inquiring friends and Remains your most Effectionate bro.

III. COL. DAVID HENTON was reared and educated in Rockingham, Va. He served in the War of 1812 in Capt. Tommy Hopkins’s company (Hopkins was his uncle). David Henton was also colonel of state militia.

He was in the mercantile business in Harrisonburg, Va., for a while, then moved to his farm, where he remained until he removed in 1839 to a place in the vicinity of Waverly, Lafayette County, Mo., “where for many years he was an important factor in the upbuilding and local advancement of this progressive city and its immediate neighborhood. He was a man of superior business ability, energetic in all the duties of life, temperate in his habits, and withal possessed of excellent judgment and honesty of purpose. A citizen of rare integrity of character, liberal and public spirited, he commanded the respect and confidence of all who knew him, and when he passed away, September 9, 1870, his death was mourned as a public loss. He was a loving husband and father, a kind friend and neighbor, and one of the tried and true pioneers of the early days, whose memory will be enshrined in the hearts of coming generations.” (Quoted from a biographical sketch.)

Elizabeth Myers Henton was born, grew up, and was educated in Virginia. The Myers family was of German descent. The Grandmother Myers’s maiden name was Barbara Hart, and her parents came from Switzerland. Elizabeth Myers Henton with the seven children accompanied her husband to the new western home where she will be remembered by all who knew her as a woman of genuine worth and refinement as well as a devoted wife and loving mother.
IV. BENJAMIN F. HENTON, first child of David and Elizabeth Myers Henton.

Was a highly honorable, moral, and promising young man. He died at thirty-three years of age, and is buried in the Mt. Hope Cemetery near Waverly.

IV. DAVID HENTON, second child of David and Elizabeth Myers Henton.

Was full of energy and enterprise. At twenty years of age, he with hundreds of others set out for the gold-fields in California. He succeeded well while there and started for home, but died at St. Louis, Mo., on his way.

I never left home, though the section in which I lived was three times overrun by federal troops who destroyed everything we had except the house over my head, burned barns and all outbuildings of every description, and even destroyed the house furniture, carrying off such as they could. I thank God it is all past. I am sure I could never go through with it again.

“My son, James Alexander Craig, was only sixteen when the war closed, but had volunteered and was on his way to join his command when he heard the news of Lee’s surrender, so he was spared the hardships of the camp and strife of battle, and I, perhaps, a son. He was elected to the Legislature in 1895, and served four terms, but has since retired to private life. He is an elder in the Presbyterian church, and quite influential in church circles and the courts of the church.”

ALLEN, born 1869; died 1892.

Home, Wytheville, Va.

James Alexander Walker served in the Confederate Army four years. In June, 1861, he reported for duty as lieutenant-colonel of the Thirteenth Virginia Infantry at Winchester, having been promoted from captain in the Fourth Virginia Infantry. Later he was made brigadier-general and commanded the "Stonewall Brigade." He said, "To have commanded such a brigade as 'Stonewall' was glory enough for me." Of this regiment General Lee said, "It is a splendid body of men"; and General Ewell, "It is the only regiment in my command that never fails." Early said of them, "They can do more hard fighting and be in better plight afterward than any troops I ever saw." Walker was in charge of this regiment in the entire valley campaign, and after Port Republic went with Jackson's corps to Richmond as skirmishers for the division. They were the first of the corps to fire a gun in that memorable campaign around Richmond, known as the "Seven Days' Fight." Walker directed the regiment with a master hand, and was within a hundred yards of the works when the enemy broke and fell back. Out of 260 men, 128 fell killed and wounded. At Culpepper Court House they did heroic work and checked the advance of the enemy at just the time and place to save the battle from being lost.

Captain S. D. Buck of Baltimore, Md., a fellow-comrade, says, "He was the best friend a good soldier ever had and a terror to the man who shirked his duty!" During the Battle of the Wilderness he got the only wound he received during the war, although he was in almost every battle in which the Army of Northern Virginia participated, from 1861 to 1865, when Lee surrendered at Appomattox. After the war he was a leading factor in the politics of the state. He was a member of the legislature of Virginia for two consecutive terms, was lieutenant-governor of Virginia from 1876 to 1880, and a member of the Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth Congress. He was a lawyer of ability and success. He died in October, 1901, and is buried in the cemetery of his home town, Wytheville, Va.

MY DEARE HUSBAND

I sent Edwin to see Mr Marshall and showed him the agreement between Walker and yourself. I have enclosed his letter to you that he has written to me. I sent Edwin to see the man that was owing you wheat as soon as the milldam and race was finished with a request to deliver there wheat, but they have all failed except W. Mats who has delivered one small load. I would not have been so uneasy, but Mr. Walker has been threatening you with heavy damages. He has not said an illnatured word to me yet. But has talked very short to Bill and some of the neighbors. He wishes me to borrow the wheat and says he must start again Chrismes. Before wheat took a rise I purchased 200 bushels lest there should be some failures, same I got for half a crown a bushell but it cannot be got for less then three shillings in cash and will soon be three and sixpence. I have been reading of the gallant conduct of G. Tupper and I am much gratified thereat, when our Mayslick horsemen came home, many of them said he ought to be shot, others that they would rather kill him than an indian. But that is Mayslick patriotism you know. We are all in health and long very much to see you again. The children join in love to you and their brothers. I Add no more But remain your loving wife untill death.

P. S. we have not got all our corn in yet But we shall quit it and git our wheat out. I have done everything in my power to fulfill the contract with Walker indeed more than was convenient. Your contract says as soon as you conveniently can after water comes But I will still persevere in getting the wheat delivered in the mill

Dear Jane:—

I suppose your anxious to hear from me. I have had very disagreeable weather on my journey, but enjoyed good health. Our friends in Rockingham is well. I did not call at Augusta. I have presented my petition to Congress on account of Berry's land and the prospect at present is favourable but their is no knowing how soon that may be blasted. I shall be better able to judge on Saturday next. I have seen James Brown who tells me he is not hear prepared to pay me any money, but has no doubt but them notes sent by Wilson will be paid off. He says if I had written to him, he should have instructed his agent specially to take them up, and would write now if I thought Wilson would not have left Orleins before a letter could reach their, and he says it would be an accommodation to him if I could make out with the payment of two of the notes and forward the other two on next fall after he makes sail of his crop of sugar, but if I insist on it, the whole money shall be raised as soon as he gits home. I expect to leave this place on Monday next for Richmond and from thence to Kentucky. I shall likely stay a few days in Augusta to rest and see my friends. This is one of the tirisomest places I ever was in and the poorest tables that ever I was at in what is called good tavern. Beef sells in market for 16 Dollars pr 100 not of a good quality, everything else that is eatable in proportion. I have heard no forin news that is interesting. Their is no part of the Union that is moure favoured with plenty than Kentucky nor no part that is less gratefull to the giver. The people for 50 miles round this city, it appears to me, is not able to supply this town with provitions without infringing on the necessities of their own families. You can scarcely walk the street without meeting a Beggar that is rely so through necessity. The Drawn butter that we use for the purpose of pouring over Boiled fish looks like grewel and can not in justice be called anything else and a small portion of tainted butter mixed with it. One family in Kentucky I am of opinion, uses as much solid food in one year as six of the same size does in this country. Take the country through. As for high living on fish and oysters their is but few Kentuckians that would fatten on them.

I discover my mind turns much more on any affairs at home when abroad, than it does when there, which teaches me this lesson that it is our duty and interest to turn our attention more immediately to the business that is within our reach, for the business that is done when the mind is absent might as well be let alone for nothing short of mistakes and disorder is the consequence.

Give my love to all the family, etc.

I ever remain your affectionate husband, and more weighty considerations in making choice of one whom they design for their friend and companion through life, and whom, when once received as such, they can never abandon or forsake. How essential a requisite is it that we should pry into the depths of their understanding before they fix a seal and disposition which perhaps may be forever fatal to their happiness and ruinous to their comforts in life, moreover a woman well educated will more than recompense in the instruction of a family, for the time she may have spent in her own education. The incorrect impression which a child receives is difficult, indeed, almost impossible to destroy. When it commences going to school, it must be both untaught and taught to bring it as far forwards as one that has been properly instructed from the beginning. This has been a subject of debate in our debating society (of which I am a member) and it has been decided that a woman should have equally as good an education as a man and these were the grounds, to enable them to avoid imposition to which they are much more exposed than men, to enable them to instruct their children in which they, by their domestic situation, have a greater share than the men, and to avoid embarrassments in the administration of an estate should they survive their husband, with the particulars of which estate they are always better acquainted than any other person living.

I wish Amanda to write to me as soon as she can and inform me what branch she has learned, that I may know what class she is prepared to enter. Give my love to John and the rest of the family. Tell Robert I wish him to learn as fast as he can, and do not let him stay a single night from home as it is one of the worst practices that a student can be guilty of.

I add not, but Remain your affectionate son

MY DR MOTHER

After a long intension I assume the high privilege of addressing one who is entitled to the liveliest sense of moral obligation owing to the fact that she has borne the burden of my being. When I consider the many sleepless nights, the anxiety, the vexation, the troubles, you must have had to endure for my sake, I am brought to lament that hitherto I have been unfaithful, but am happy to say that the older I get, so in proportion, my affection for you increases, but this is all the tribute you can ever expect from me, for I shall never be able to reward you for the services you have rendered to me. My only dependence on this very important matter is in God who is fully sufficient to reward for all you bore relative to your unworthy son. I often feel great anxiety on your account thinking you are in sickness, in trouble, have lonesome nights, thinking of your children with great doubts and fears on your mind about their future prospects in this world, but let me tell you my dear mother, never let this be the case more than you can help. Those fearful apprehensions are only calculated to torture your mind, rather turn the vision of your faith to the solemn admonition of the Saviour Be not anxious for your life &c. You have every reason to expect the Lord will provide for your children. My only wish is that you may lift up your prayer for the remnant that are left praying that the Lord will not let them run heedlessly on after the common vanities of the times, which so often prove a mar to the children of this world, and far more dangerous than the loss of all the goods and chattles of the world.

You will tell father that the Furnace is doing well. She is making excellent iron at the rate of three and three quarters or upwards. The wagons from Maysville were landed in the night and were received, but the river took a sudden rise and covered them just before I got from Sandy with corn. A part of them have been got out and we hope to get the balance when the river falls. The rise amounted to six feet, in a few hours, the same night, which was beyond calculation, but such is the fact. Many things occur to put us on the watch. Dr. Hollingsworth has lately married a fine sensible lady. I expect you will surely do me the pleasure of writing to me, as I have already hinted, it will frequently relieve many an anxious thought and always give me pleasure to hear from home. Tell Am especially she must write. The friends are all well as far as I can hear. You will give my warmest love to Father Edwin & Hana and yourself Robert Aven and Col Mathews &c and rest assured that I will continue your dutiful son

DEAR FATHER

Yours of the 13th is just come to hand in which we receive much satisfaction, and feel gratified with the idea of your being well, and having spirits as high as the waters, for we believe them to be very high and I can say with equal propriety that we are in the same situation.

I have just returned from seeing Maj. Gray, he lives about thirty one miles from here, and find the mast is not as plenty as was expected and in consequence of the extreme wet weather, is all sprouted and he is unwilling to winter our hogs on that account. I therefore think it best to keep them at home; and buy corn and feed them, which I find from a rough calculation will cost us about seventy or eighty dollars, I have not received Tait's corn yet, but I expect it shortly.

Mr Metcalfe has offered me four shillings per bushel for wheat, I have some thoughts of letting him have what we have at Robertson's, as I expect the market for wheat will be low this season, and I think we will have enough in our barn for our own use.

Mr Houghton's progressing with the saw mill. He is almost ready to raise. Moor is about half done the race. I have bought the iron for the irons, and am about to employ Shotwell to make them as it is out of the power of uncle Shanklen to do it. I will manage and work for the best, and save all I can. A sound resolution is highly necessary in this case, if we act from a principle of duty, we will not grieve at losses, or exult when we are gainers. Such a principle we hope to cultivate. Let it not be long before we hear from you again, for we are anxious on your account. I remain with Obedient respect your son JOHN

AMANDA August 11th 1829.

DR FATHER I suppose you are anxious to hear how we are coming on. We generally had very bad weather ever since I got here, but we have succeeded in getting Rock quarried and halled, as well as the nature of the case would admit, and the work is now going on as well as we can reasonably expect. If the weather should keep good, I think the masons will reach the summit of the stack in 12 or 15 days. The foundation of the pot-house is built and the frame ready to raise. We are now getting out the boards. They have none of the right kind of nails to put them on with. We should now be glad to have a cag of sixpeny of the small size if they could be got in Maysville and sent on conveniently. It is probable that Lindsey will go up the river to see about an engine, if the health of his family will admit of his going. Little Amanda has had an attack of the flux and in some measure recovered as to the disease, but in a very low and languid state. Mrs Culver is now lying in a fever, but I think she is getting better. The matter between Dr McDowell and Mr Culver is not settled. They still have no communication, but they both seem to be acting in the line of their particular duties and I think with prudent management, the thing in some measure will wear away so as not to hinder business. The shoes that you ordered have never come to hand. There is a shoemaker about settled at Vincent Powell's who engages to do our shoemaking on as good terms as it can be done any where else. It will therefore not be necessary to make any other contract about the article. If there should be some money got for Lindsey, to go up the river, to defray expenses, it would be well. I suppose the want of the engine will be the only thing that will keep us out of blast about Christmas. We are all, except the two cases mentioned, very well. Give my love and respects to all the family. I remain your dutiful Son

JOHN H. POGUE

N B it is not necessary to give yourself much trouble about the nails without they could be sent direct. If we cant do otherwise, we will try to-pennys.

II. JANE HOPKINS, daughter of John and Jean Gordon Hopkins, was married June 4, 1791, to Robert Poage, of Mayslick, Mason County, Ky., who was born in Augusta County, Va., October 6, 1766.

William Poage, son of Robert, the pioneer, married Ann Kenedy. In company with Daniel Boone and others, he and his family settled at Boonville, Ky., about September, 1775. In February, 1776, he removed his family to the fort at Harrodsburg, and in the spring of that year cleared ground and planted corn two miles from the fort. He had great mechanical skill, and during more than two years made all the wooden vessels used by the people in the fort. He also made the woodwork of the first plow used in Kentucky and the first loom on which weaving was done in that state. On September 1, 1778, in a fight with the Indians, he was wounded by three balls, but his companions escaped unhurt. The next day they found him and carried him to a hiding-place. The Indians discovered them and laid for them, but were found out and attacked. Four of them were killed, one of whom had Poage's gun, which was recovered and became the property of his son, Robert Poage of Mason County, Ky. William Poage was carried home, but died the next day. Ann Kennedy was four times married, first to Mr. Wilson, second to William Poage, third to Joseph Lindsay, who was killed at the battle of Blue Licks in 1782, and fourth to James McGinty. She is said to have been a woman of rare energy and ingenuity. Collins says she brought the first spinning-wheel to Kentucky and made the first linen manufactured in that country from the lint of nettles, and the first linsey made from nettle-lint and buffalo wool. William Poage and Ann Kennedy were the father and mother of Robert Poage, who married Jane Hopkins, daughter of John Hopkins the pioneer.
II. JANE HOPKINS, daughter of John Hopkins and Jean Gordon, was married June 4, 1791, to Robert Pogue, of Mason County, Ky.

Robert and Jane Hopkins Pogue lived in Mason County, Va., on a large plantation, a part of which is still held by members of the family. It is said that the first white child born in Kentucky was their oldest son, John Hopkins Pogue. Mrs. Carttrel of Normal, Ky., says, "Grandmother (Jane Hopkins Pogue) was a woman of great personal courage, energy, and ability. She managed a large family of slaves and a very large farm during the absence of her husband and oldest son in the War of 1812."

The spelling of the name was changed at an early date from "Poage" to "Pogue."

“There isn’t so much difference in the troubles on this earth as there is in the folks that have to bear them.”
II. HANNAH HOPKINS was born in Rockingham County, Va., July, 1769. Her father was John Hopkins, and her mother was Jean Gordon. She was married in 1794 to James Shanklin, her own cousin, who was born May 24, 1768, and died May 11, 1863. Hannah Hopkins Shanklin died August 3, 1817.

Of her James Shanklin, her husband, said: “Under all her afflictions in this vale of tears she manifested a great degree of patience and resignation to the Divine will and a firm reliance on the Saviour of sinners who was all her salvation and desire.”

The following is a copy of the letter given them when leaving Virginia for Kentucky. “This is to testify that James Shanklin and Hannah, his wife, have lived in this Congregation from infancy to this time, that they have never exposed themselves to the senssure of the Church, and are both in full communion, are hereby certified, Cook’s Creek, Sept. 29, 1794. By order of Session,

BENJAMIN IRVIN, V.D.M.”

II. HANNAH HOPKINS and James Shanklin came to Mason County, Ky., in 1794. She and her sister, Jane Hopkins Poage, wife of Gen. A letter from Cyrus Hopkins, Upper Tract, Pendleton County, Va., dated December 27, 1876, says: “John Hopkins lived in Rockingham County and was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and also represented his country in the legislature of Virginia. There were three brothers, William, John, and Archibald. They came to Virginia from Albany. When they first came there were but two; they then located in Greenbrier County in southern Virginia, but not being satisfied with the country, sold out and returned to Albany. When they again returned, they brought with them one other brother, and all three located in Rockingham County, Va.

“My father, John, married a Miss Baxter, and removed to Pendleton, to what is known as Upper Tract; his younger brother, Thomas, remained in the county of Rockingham on the old homestead until his family was about grown; he then sold out and removed to Kentucky and afterwards to Ohio.

“As to the history of my aunts on the father’s side, I have no recollection of ever seeing any one except Aunt Sally.”

“Respectfully, Cyrus Hopkins.”

"Ay, but pedigree's a poor thing to boil the porritch pot wi'."
II. ANN HOPKINS, daughter of John Hopkins and Jean Gordon, was born August 21, 1780, four miles northeast of Harrisonburg, in Rockingham County, Va. (this was then part of Augusta County). She married about April 3, 1802, James Rice, a Virginian, of Rockingham County (son of John Rice and Mary Rice, née Finney), formerly a student of Jefferson Medical College, but at this time engaged in mercantile and land investment. They moved about 1805 to Greenup County, now Boyd County, Ky., where Mr. Rice continued his land investments, and under Robert Poage, his wife's brother-in-law, was appointed surveyor of Greenup County. Here six children were born to them, five boys and one girl. In the winter or early spring of 1815, her husband was drowned, near Catlettsburg, Ky., while attempting to cross the Ohio River in a skiff, attended by a negro servant. The boat capsized; he was an expert swimmer, but it is probable that he was seized with a cramp or that the weight of his clothing overpowered him.

James Rice was a man of fine humanity, and while not a completed graduate of the Jefferson school, he was called upon by all the people in his vicinity for medical attendance which he gave them free gratis. It was in response to one of these calls that he lost his life. It had been his intention soon to return and complete the course, only a term of which was unfinished, that he might be fully equipped for duty, there being no other so well educated medical practitioner in that county. Mentally he was unusually progressive and clear. Successfully accurate and active in all business places and duties, one of his tenacious purposes was to give the highest educational advantages to his children.

Ann Hopkins Rice, a little frail woman, so unexpectedly left with six children (the youngest being born after the death of his father) in a comparatively new country, with her husband's rather extended business interests and plowed lands in the embryo of development, with a brave spirit accepted the trust. When her boys had come to manhood, people used to say, “I would like to see the mother of those young men.” She was delicate and small, with a spirit sweet and pure, and the Gordon blood in her veins. This picture was given me largely by my mother, her erstwhile daughter-in-law, so that old-time legend of inharmony is broken.

In 1815, soon after the birth of the youngest child, she removed from Greenup County to Christian County, near Hopkinsville, to be in touch with her brother, Thomas Hopkins. The estate in Greenup had been intrusted to friends, whose administration was unsuccessful, and the children came to majority with nothing except a remnant of old slaves. This deprived them of all opportunities of advanced education, a great regret to them. With Southern inheritance, tradition, and blood in their veins, they had come to young manhood just in time to be caught and swept away by the moral wave of abolition of the slave, and they did not hesitate though at a great personal sacrifice, to salute the flag of freedom that it might long wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave, nor to question between personal sacrifice and duty to humanity; even though it were exteriorly a black humanity, the blackness would be no darker because of their making. Twenty-five dollars each secured outfit membership and transport to a Liberian colony. One old colored man, faithful to the tradition, refused “to leave missus and the boys,” and with them, in the spring of 1835, came to Henderson, then a part of Warren County, Ill., traveling in wagons, stopping at wayside inns or hospitable pioneer hearthstones, and occasionally being forced to camp out, but thinking no discomfort a hardship that brought them nearer to a state of freedom. There was no bitterness in their memories of “the old Kentucky home.” They were born and bred there, and to this day they know “you’re mighty lucky when you married a girl like Sue.”

In 1841, after her son George was married, Ann Hopkins Rice made her home with him for a number of years, though her last years were with her son Cyrus William, at Oquauka, Henderson County, Ill., where she died February 16, 1850, tenderly regretted by her children and friends.

HOPKINS GRAVES—GRANVILLE, ILLINOIS
THERE LIVED A MAN.

Once, in the flight of ages past,
    There lived a man—and who was he?
Mortal, however thy lot is cast,
    That man resembled thee.

He suffered, but his pangs are o'er;
    Enjoyed, but his delights are fled;
Had friends—his friends are now no more;
    And foes—his foes are dead.

He saw whatever thou hast seen;
    Encountered all that troubles thee;
He was whatever thou hast been;
    He is what thou shalt be.

The annals of the human race,
    Their ruins since the world began,
Of him afford no other trace
    Than this—there lived a man.

—Montgomery.

I. ARCHIBALD (ERCEBALD) HOPKINS, the pioneer, married Jennet Love, about 1757.

CHILDREN:

Ephriam, born 1758; baptized Nov. 1762.

William H.

Jane.

Mary.

Elizabeth, died Apr. 22, 1814.

Home, Rockingham, Va.; business, agriculture.

I. ARCHIBALD HOPKINS married Jennet Love and lived and died in Rockingham County, Va. That he was a pillar in the church we know from the old session book which records him as one of the elders for many years. Some of his children's children still live in the county where he did his life's work. He died May 8, 1799, and is buried at Cook's Creek Church Cemetery.

Jennet Love Hopkins made her will July 1, 1803. The date of her death is unknown. She is buried beside her husband.

CHILDREN:

Archibald, born died about 1879.

Thomas.

Jennet.

Sarah, born 1792.

Gracy.

Hannah.

Peggy.

II. EPHRIAM moved to Kentucky soon after 1803, where all his children, stayed, except Archibald, who returned to Harrisonburg, Va.

Lewis Chrisman Hopkins, of Mt. Clinton, Va., says that Ephriam Hopkins had eleven children. The oldest one, Archibald, returned from Kentucky to Virginia, and was brought up in the family of his Uncle William. None of the Virginia people know anything about the remaining children, and diligent search has failed to discover them.
Letter from Ephriam and Nancy Hopkins to William Hopkins. Owned by Ruth Hopkins, Harrisonburg, Va. (William was Ephriam’s brother. Their father was Archibald, the pioneer.)

—Lowell.
THE WILLIAM HOPKINS FAMILY
I. WILLIAM HOPKINS came, with his two brothers, John and Archibald, to Virginia before 1749. He settled five miles north of his brothers. There is in Richmond, Va., the record of a patent made to Ephriam Love and William Hopkins for two hundred and four acres of land, dated September 5, 1749. Tradition says that he married a sister of Ephriam Love. There is a suggestion that he went with his nephew, Ephriam Hopkins, to Kentucky, but extended search has not found any trace of him there. In Cook's Creek session book a list of church members in 1810 and 1811 is given. This list gives the names of the family of Thomas Hopkins (son of John) and his mother (John's widow), also Mrs. John Hopkins and Jenny Hopkins, presumably Mrs. Elizabeth Hopkins Hopkins, as her oldest child was Janet and Mrs. Ann Hopkins. We notice that where a man and his wife were both members, it is given in this way, i.e., Thomas Hopkins. We also notice that where the husband is living, but not a member of the church, the wife is given by her husband's name, as above, Mrs. John Hopkins. Hence we conclude that Mrs. Ann Hopkins was the widow of William Hopkins. If he entered land in 1749, he was of age at that date, and must then have been born as soon as 1728. John died before 1791. Archibald died May 8, 1799, and we conclude that William had also finished his earthly life. We find a little later that "Anne Hopkins" departed this life May 1812, which would make her about sixty years old.
I. WILLIAM HOPKINS. Tradition says that he married a sister of Ephraim Love.

CHILDREN:

Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly forgotten, as a dream
Dies at the opening day.

O God! our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be thou our guide while troubles last,
And our eternal home.

COMPILER’S NOTE.

In the final gathering together of the accumulated threads of life that have been found in our search for the members of the Hopkins family, many things might be said.

The work has been laborious and patience-trying because so many have taken no interest in it.

The Poages, as a rule, said (when they said anything), “You can find nothing about the Poages.” Now, it is a fact that much has been found, and if each one had given what he personally knew, the bits might have been put together and a complete record made. It is to be regretted that so many were unwilling to give even the data of their own families, and the ridiculous reluctance on the part of some of the women to give the dates of their birth is beyond comprehension. When, as in many instances, two, three, and four letters have been written, with stamps inclosed for reply, without results, the case seemed hopeless, and the attempt abandoned.

However, there have been those who have given their hearty co-operation. Among these we mention the late Rev. T. M. Hopkins, of Denver, Colo.; the Gillilands, and Mr. Archibald Hopkins, of Red Oak, O.; Miss Lou Kinkead, of Ripley, O.; Mr. John T. Shanklin, of Johnson’s Junction, Ky.; Dr. and Miss Ruth Hopkins, of Harrisonburg, Va.; and Professor A. W. Williamson, of Augustina College, Rock Island, Ill. To these we give a heartfelt “thank you,” and to all others who, in busy lives, have taken time to answer our questions. Not all of those who gave encouragement and help when the work began six years ago, are in the earthly home to enjoy its completion.

Rev. T. M. Hopkins, of Denver, Colo., was greatly interested in it, and gave of his knowledge, time, and talent to its accomplishment; but he has been in his Father’s house many days. One of the lists of children herein recorded was made out by a mother on a sickbed. A few days later her daughter added a postscript saying the hand that had written it was quiet forever. Some who have written in the joy of a cloudless life have written again out of the night of grief.
And so, as knowledge of the homes has increased, there has been rejoicing in your joys, and sorrow for your griefs, and the future of these lives will always be full of interest to your compiler.
