The genealogy of the Bramhall Family, with some account of the history of the family and of Bramhall Hall in East Cheshire, England, upon which Judge Charles H. Bramhall, of Columbia county, N. Y., and his sons, William L. and Frank J., were at work for some twenty years, is finally ready, after all the compilers have passed away. The Bramhalls (Bramall, Bromale, etc.) are traced through Domesday Book to the time of Edward the Confessor (1042-1066). The Bramhall estates went to the Davenport family by the marriage of Alice, daughter of Sir Geoffry de Bromale, to John de Davenport of Weltrough in 1379.

The male line entitled to bear arms having become extinct, they were regranted, in the last year but one of Elizabeth, 1602, to John Bramhall, Alderman, of Pontefract, Yorkshire, “sable, a lion rampant or; crest, a lion passant or.” In 1628, under Charles I., the arms were regranted to the Rev. John Bramhall, Dean of Ripon, son of Peter Bramhall and grandson of the Alderman, above, “descended from the ancient family of Bramhall, of Bramhall, county Cheshire.” He was chaplain to Wentworth (later Earl of Stratford), and was made successively Bishop of Derry and Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland. He was also speaker of the Irish House of Lords. He married, in Yorkshire, a widow, Ellinor Halley, and upon his death, 25 June, 1663, left four children: Sir Thomas Bramhall, Bart., who married a daughter of Sir Paul Davys and died without issue; Isabella, who married Sir James Graham, son of William, Earl of Monteith, and whose daughter Ellinor married Sir Arthur Rawdon of Moira; Jane, who married Alderman Texteith of Drogheda; and Anne, who married Standish Hartstonge, one of the barons of the exchequer. Bramhall Hall, of which several views are given in the Genealogy, is described on competent authority as the finest example remaining of the Elizabethan timber and mortar or "magpie" architecture in England. Earwaker and Ormerod, in their histories of Cheshire, and Thomas Nash, in his "Mansions of England," sustain this view.

The Bramhalls of America are traced directly to James Bramhall, R. N., and his wife, Lady Florence Temple. James was a son of Cornelius Bramhall of Canterbury. Three of their children, George, Joseph and Mary, came to Plymouth about 1680. George went to Casco (now Portland), Maine, then a part of Plymouth Colony, and was killed by Indians in an action at what is still called Bramhall Hill. The names of fourteen of the family who were soldiers or sailors in the Revolutionary War, are given.

UPSON FAMILY

Thomas Upson first appeared in Hartford Colony about 1638. His marriage is recorded as follows: "Thomas Upsun was maryed to Elisibeth fuller Jennery the twenty & three one Thousand six hundredth forti & six": (Hartford Records). Their son Sergeant Stephen Upson was born at Mattatuck (Farmington) about 1653. He married 29 December, 1682, Mary Lee, born 14 August, 1664, at Farmington. She was the daughter of John Lee, and Mary Hart, his wife, and brother of Thomas Lee who married Mary Camp of Hartford.

Stephen Upson was surveyor, school visitor, grand juror and three times deputy and representative from Farmington to the General Court at New Haven, from 1710 to 1729. They had sons Stephen Upson, born 30 September, 1686; married Sarah Bronson.

Thomas Upson, born 1 March, 1693, married Rachel Judd, daughter of Deacon Thomas Judd, and John Upson, born 13 December, 1702, married Elizabeth, another daughter of Deacon Thomas Judd.

RICHARD CHURCH

Richard Church came over from England in 1630, then aged 22; he was made Freeman of Plymouth, Mass., 1632; lived at Eel River in Plymouth until 1649, when he sold out and went first to Eastham, and then to Hingham. He died at Dedham, 27 December, 1668. His will is dated at Hingham 1668. He was a carpenter, was a "Sergeant in War against the Pequots in 1637," and made the gun carriages. He built the first meeting house in Plymouth about 1637. He married, 1635, Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Warren of the Mayflower; she died a widow at Hingham, 1670. One of their children was Colonel Benjamin Church, the famous Indian warrior.
