HIS may seem an odd place for "last words"; but in all books the first section, containing usually title, dedication and table of contents, is the last part printed, since it can readily be understood that some of it could not be given until the book was otherwise completed. This is also the place where omissions and errors are sometimes noted, having been detected too late for correction elsewhere. In the line of omissions, the writer wants to call attention to a fact confirmatory of the connection with the Weiler family of Freys. A visit to the Freysville cemetery after nearly half of this book was printed, revealed the existence of Conrad Frey's tombstone, which recorded his death on Feb. 17, 1800, aged 84 years. Conrad was born March 10, 1715. In the Explanatory Chapter an important explanation is omitted. Where a subject is married the second time, only his number is given, followed by a dash. See page 142, where 161253 refers to the second marriage of Thomas Robert Pearce Metzel, and 1612 denotes the second marriage of his grandfather, Thomas Metzel. Page 185: The name of 16551TI is Flelen Elizabeth Wernock Maxwell; 20:1: The name of 1672291 is William Franklin Ramer Holtzworthi. On page 241 Regina's age is given at 12 years, 10 months, 2 weeks and 1 day. This should have been 12 years, 10 months, 3 weeks and 2 days. Page 269, 192741 and 192742. The surname should be Peartree. It is hoped that this covers the more serious errors and omissions in this volume; if the reader discovers others his indulgence is sincerely sought. The first steps in this work were taken in February, 1909; this page was printed in October, 1913.
Preface.

"Every man is a bundle of his ancestors"—EMERSON.

The existing disastrous war in Europe terminated all present effort to further investigate the origin of the "Fauss," "Faass" name (see page 1). In a recent letter to the undersigned, Dr. A. B. Faust, author of the admirable German Element in the United States, etc., and dean of the Department of German, Cornell University, wrote:

"I at once thought of the possibility of some connection of the Fauss family with the name Faust, though I believe the name Faust is more frequent in middle Germany, especially in Hessen. My own family came over in 1849, and had been located in the region of Fulda, Hessen, since 1712, or longer. I am not sure about their location before that."

The late Andrew Brumbaugh, born July 5, 1830, in Blair County, Pennsylvania, and died September 3, 1901, in Stark County, Ohio, patiently gathered much original material bearing upon the Fouse families. Every scrap of that material has been carefully compared and incorporated into the later data secured. He was visited, assisted, and encouraged by Mr. John Garner\(^4\) Fouse [80], and Mr. Adam Garner\(^4\) Fouse [82], at a time when his letters bear pathetic testimony to the general indifference and lack of cooperation meeting his efforts to gather family information. That active interest and assistance by these gentlemen, and by Mr. Ephraim Brumbaugh, historian of the Descendants of Conrad Brumbaugh, Hartville, Ohio, has been continued to the writer.

This volume is the outgrowth of the extensive research required to produce Genealogy of the Brumbaugh Families, issued in April, 1913, and is a companion volume to it. The author especially acknowledges the active and persistent cooperation of his associate, Mr. John Garner\(^4\) Fouse [80], in furthering all portions of the undertaking, and especially in the most important financing of the publication of the results attained. It remains to be seen how prompt, and extensive will be the assistance rendered by the other numerous members of the generally prosperous Fouse families, in subscribing for the volume.
Considerable space has been given to certain families intermarrying with members of the strictly Fouse families, and this is especially true of the Miller families. Any later family history of that large connection (and of others) will necessarily use data herein contained, and the unpublished material gathered in this research. It has not been noted in the text that the late Mr. Lewis Miller, Akron, Ohio, was the originator of the "Chautauqua Idea."

It is hoped that this volume may be a tie more closely uniting the Fouse, Brumbaugh, Miller, and other similar families; that it may be actually worth the large expenditure of time, labor, strength, and money spent upon its preparation; that it may prove a lasting monument to the departed, and a lively incentive to greater undertaking and success by the living. It is also hoped that the many kind friends who have so actively assisted in furnishing personal biographic, and family material may feel repaid through possession of the completed volume.

ABBREVIATIONS AND EXPLANATIONS.

The reader will find preceding, or following, each proper name of Fouse descendants a number in a bracket, thus: [2] + Nicholas Fouse. The cross following the bracket, and preceding the individual name, indicates that at its numerical place further along in the volume will be found additional details concerning the said person; omission of the cross means that details have not been secured, for various reasons. The superior figure over the given, or Christian, name indicates the generation in America.

The numbering system is especially simple, and by means of the numbers lines of descent can be quickly traced backward and forward. The number in bracket always indicates the same individual, except that it is applied to the husband and wife, where referring to either of these in the text.

The biographies have been made as complete as possible. Modesty in some cases, and in others absolute failure to reply to important and repeated inquiries, is responsible for the omission of some facts, and even of some children whose names could not therefore, be included in the work.

Press, Baltimore, Maryland, are deserving of special commendation for their prompt, careful, and satisfactory completion of the work intrusted to them. Throughout the text acknowledgment has been made for individual assistance. To all co-laborers, including custodians of public records, and the working force of the Library of Congress, sincere and cordial thanks are herewith returned.

This volume goes forth with warm Christmas greetings to all concerned.

by reason of his profession had access to court records, and through his daily vocation could readily superintend the mechanical part of the undertaking. So the Rubicon was crossed, and the attempt to discover and publish in book form the descendants of Samuel Frey, the writer's grandfather, was inaugurated.

Anticipation and Realization.

When first beginning the work, the idea was, as Samuel Frey had nine children who became heads of families, to get some one in each branch to furnish the information concerning that particular line, and then the writer would simply have to be the editor, arranging the data thus furnished, procuring as much of the earlier history of the Freys as he could without going to too much trouble, and preparing the book for the printer. The scheme was very good; but when it came to actual practice in only two of the lines was it successful; in the others the writer had to get the statistics himself. Starting out with the grandfather idea, the thought came that as two or three Freys were known that were not of the grandfather stock, though closely related, it might be as well to spread the benefits of this publication to others of the kin. This missionary spirit existed before the magnitude of the task involved in getting all the facts pertaining to the children of Samuel Frey alone was fully appreciated. Once started on this line, there was no valid reason for not including all the brothers and sisters of Samuel. So there inevitably followed the conclusion to make the book not simply the story of Samuel Frey's descendants; but the record of George Frey (Samuel's father) and his posterity. In the glow of self-appreciation that this altruistic resolution aroused, there came the thought of another line of Freys (or Frys, as they wrote it), with whom the writer has been acquainted since childhood, one of them having been his first school teacher, about whose connection with Samuel's stock there was some doubt, and it was determined to settle this question, once for all. The result was a step still further back into the past, and the great-great-
Genealogy of the Fouse Families

[1] THEOBALD: FAUSS (FOUSE) was born in "1725" (?) and lived in Rheinville, Rheinfelz, Bavaria. The name "Fauß," "Fass," became "Fouse" in the United States. About 1746 Theobald Fauss married Margaret ——, and moved to Deux Ponts, or Zweibrücken, where he died in 1765, at age 40.

Efforts have thus far failed to trace the ancestry in Germany, and this volume is confined to "Fouse Families in America." Pages 383-404 in Brumbach Families are devoted to details concerning the Fouse families (Nicholas Fauss [No. 2] married Margaret Brumbaugh [E 8]). The researches connected with that volume, and the subsequent extensive investigations of Mr. John Garner Fouse [80] and of the compiler, have combined to make this volume possible.

The following pages are recollections, and early investigations of Mr. John Garner Fouse:

"Grandfather (Nicholas Fouse) wrote the name 'Fauß.' A few words in reference to the Anglicizing of the name may not be amiss. The three older boys were taught to write German, and followed their father in the orthography of the name. The revised spelling originated through Mr. Henry Beaver (Blair County, Pennsylvania) who was the first to teach English in the schools of the hitherto German community. He seems to have followed the sound rather than the letters. After the English form was introduced, the German was practically abandoned, and the revised form of the name came into general use. Theobald was a native of Rhenish Bavaria, and, we understand, a direct descendant of a prominent family of the Reformation period. We know of nothing beyond our great-grandfather, Theobald Fauss, who was born in 1725, and we do not know the date of his marriage; it must however, have occurred about 1746. The Christian name of his espoused was Margaret. To this union were born four sons and one daughter. The eldest, our grandfather, Nicholas, was born May 7, 1748.

*Zweibrücken, Deux Ponts, a town of Rhenish Bavaria—on the Erbach, near its confluence with the Serre, 50 miles west of Speyer. The French name "Deux Ponts," and the German "Zweibrücken" both signifying "two bridges,"—its old castle being situated between two bridges (Lippincott's Gazetteer).
FOUSE FAMILIES

Those were troublous times, immediately preceding the Seven Years’ War, which began in 1756, and ended in 1763. The many conflicts for territorial aggression and the religious persecutions of the war-ridden provinces along the Rhine, left the citizens in destitute circumstances. At the time of our great-grandfather's death, 1763, he left a widow and five children to eke out an existence as best they could. The four younger children, Jacob, Valentine, Theobald, Jr., and Margaret were undoubtedly a care upon their mother. Nicholas, the oldest, was born May 7, 1748, and confirmed 1762 in one of the Reformed churches in Zweibrücken—the record has not yet been located. There is no record of the ages of the other children.

"Aunt Margaret [9] who was the first child, third generation, said on certain occasions that the daughter, her aunt Margaret [6], was quite small at the time of her grandfather's death—so she was informed by her father. All however seem to have been accorded careful training and grew up industrious, rendering obedience to a kind and faithful mother. By tradition we learn that they stood by her faithfully until death, which occurred in the early part of 1784. We need not wonder that the youths of this war-stricken country were anxious to emigrate to America where they might enjoy the freedom inculcated through the forefathers, who had struggled nobly for religious liberty. It is to them that we may give the credit for the stability of character, now recognized in many of the Fouse kindred.

"When the Revolutionary War ended, a number of the German mercenaries employed by King George, returned to their native land with glowing accounts of the new world. These accounts inspired the eldest son [2], Nicholas, our grandfather, with the idea of coming to America. He was a lock and edge toolsmith by trade. The youngest son, Theobald [5], was a shoemaker, and resolved to accompany his brother. It was not an easy matter for subjects in those petty kingdoms, who were able to bear arms, to leave their country. The rulers were in constant fear of outbreaks on the frontiers, and, these being well guarded, it taxed the ingenuity of the young men to get away. Accordingly they resolved to start out as journeymen, and in May, 1784, left their quiet home in the town of Zweibrücken in the quiet of the night.

"Concerning the dear ones left behind, we can only recall a conversation between father, Uncle William and Aunt Margaret, a short time before the latter’s death. It was then stated that Jacob and Valentine were married; the former kept a hostelry, and the latter was a baker.
DESCENDANTS OF THEOBALD FAUSS

There was no correspondence of any moment for a long time, and the only letter received informed grandfather that his brothers Jacob and Valentine were well and were prospering in business. This was sometime prior to 1811. That immediate locality was then all in confusion, on account of the encroachments of the French army, which led to the overthrow of Napoleon in 1815. To the best of their recollection there was no information after that from those remaining in the fatherland.

"In taking up the thread of the story of the two adventurers we must depend entirely upon what we gathered from our parents, uncles, and Aunt Margaret, more particularly the latter. It seems that grandfather's experience in the army fitted him for the effort to get away, without disclosing his real purpose. He, with a kit of tools for smithing, and Theobald, with tools and materials for shoemaking, found it an easy matter to make the ordinary guard believe that they were journeymen prosecuting their trades. But the critical moment came when they reached the boundary where a written form was essential. Taking their departure so stealthily prevented the local authorities from learning of their intentions. The edict had gone forth that no one subject to military duty should leave the country; but with little or no baggage, and their tools on their backs, they succeeded. While on their way to Frankfort on the Main, they were challenged by the officer in command of the forces on the boundary of their own kingdom; and, after relating their story, he directed a clerk to fill out a passport. The latter hesitated, and suggested that these men might be on their way to leave the country. The officer replied 'Ach, Schreibnur' (Write what I tell you), which he did, and the two men went on their way rejoicing.

"There is no data as to the date they sailed, nor of the vessel on which they took passage, but subsequent events indicate that they landed at Baltimore in October, 1784, after being on the Atlantic ocean fully five months. The Fouse brothers had a companion in the person of Conrad Nicodemus*, who settled in the same locality as grandfather. Their friend-

Concerning the present, there were two ways of acquiring facts; by personal interview and through correspondence. Quite a number of the kin live in the city or immediate vicinity, and these were, of course, called upon; but the great majority are at a distance, and the number of letters written runs into the thousands. Unfortunately, not all of those written to replied, and trips afoot, by steam, trolley and vehicle, were numerous. In all but a few instances the inquirer was courteously received, and his impertinent questions cheerfully answered. Those who were too far away to be visited and who neglected to answer have been omitted, except in the few cases where the information was obtained from another source. In many instances second and even third letters were necessary to produce desired results, and the writer feels that he has done all that could be reasonably expected to make this record complete. Having had the question asked several times, and having himself experienced a similar curiosity when reading other genealogical works, a more detailed account of how the various branches of the family were discovered is given as such divisions are taken up in their proper order. It is believed they will serve to relieve the monotony of dry statistics, and prove an aid to such readers as may be tempted to engage in a similar work. To all such the writer bids Godspeed, believing that the task of collating and preserving historical information, though it be of but a single family, is worthy the best endeavor of any man.

The Fiddler.

The second important matter in the publication of a "family book" is paying for it. Once in a while there happens the combination of a man with both the will and the means; but usually the first is easier to find than the latter. Many printers and bookbinders throughout the country can produce hundreds of copies of books which the author was surely going to pay as soon as they were finished, since there would be no trouble at all in selling them; and the attics and storerooms of many authors who paid

[2] NICHOLAS² FOUSE, son of [1] Theobald¹ and Margaret (——) Fouse, was born May 7, 1748 at Zweibrücken, Bavaria, Germany; was confirmed, when 14 years old, a member of the German Reformed Church. His father died in 1765, and Nicholas became the main support of the family. After the death of his mother, he sailed for the United States, landing at Baltimore, Maryland, in October, 1784. He soon went to Sharpsburg, Maryland, and there became the village blacksmith. He there also met and married Margaret³ Brumbaugh, born May 5, 1766; daughter of Jacob² Brumbaugh, son of Johannes Henrich¹ Brumbach. When 14 years old Margaret was confirmed a member of the German Reformed Church at Funkstown, Maryland, near what was later called Hagerstown. Soon after their marriage in November, 1785, they began housekeeping at or near Funkstown, Washington County, Maryland.

"Here grandfather worked at the anvil, and found an excellent helper in his recently acquired helpmate. Several of our uncles, as well as father, spoke of her as an expert in handling the hammer, when necessity called for her services. When grandfather started smithing at Funkstown he had no apprentice, and thus at times needed grandmother's help." (J. G. F.)

"October 12, 1786, [9] Margaret³, their eldest child, was born. They lived at Funkstown until 1789. By their united efforts and economy they saved some money, and then considered the feasibility of purchasing land where they might make a permanent home. Great grandfather Jacob Brumbaugh had previously taken a trip into central Pennsylvania, and found a beautiful spot east of the Alleghanies, later called ‘Morrison Cove,’ where in 1788 he preempted a large tract of land and settled in the same year. It was also stated that Mr. Nicodemus who had accompanied them across the ocean, located in the Cove, and preempted a large tract of land, which was at that time in Bedford County. The favorable report of this beautiful country was an inducement for them to go there and locate permanently. Preparations were made to emigrate there early in the spring of 1789. It was essential to procure a covered wagon and a yoke of oxen for the undertaking. Into that vehicle were packed the smithing tools, necessary wearing apparel, bedding, food, etc. It afforded shelter for the family, which consisted of the parents and two children, [9] Margaret and [10] Elizabeth. It was not then the custom to keep a diary of daily occurrences, as we are willing to do in the present age. There is nothing to indicate any serious difficulties encountered on the way, a distance of about 150 miles, except the very rough, ungraded roads through the forest. It is stated the route was over the old Baltimore, Chambersburg and Bedford road, later turnpike, turning to the north at Bloody Run, later Everett, Pennsylvania; and then passing up Yellow Creek, through the gap to where Loysburg, or Pattonville, afterwards was established. They entered the Cove at the south end, then proceeded north about 16 miles, a short distance from where Rebecca Furnace was later erected. There they settled temporarily on land preempted by Margaret’s father, Jacob Brumbaugh, where they lived nearly four years, and where [11] Catharine and [12] Jacob were born.”

The Census of 1790 enumerates “Nicholas Fouss” in Huntingdon County (Blair County was established in 1846), Pennsylvania, as having “2 Free white males under 16 years” and a wife. The interesting photographic reproduction of the family record as kept by Nicholas in this Tagbuch, establishes the fact that the enumerator should have recorded two females rather than two males. However, that Census is a mine of genealogical wealth. It also gives Anthony Bever, Jacob Brumbough, John Brumbough, Michle Garnur, Abraham Miller, etc., as amongst their neighbors.

“During that time they selected a place about five miles north of where they first pitched tents. Here Nicholas bought a tract of 135 acres from Benjamin Tudor, January 3, 1793, as per deed recorded in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, Book B, No. 1, page 490. He paid for this tract of land £56 in gold and silver. Benjamin Tudor preempted this unimproved tract September 27, 1791; Patent book 18, page 230. In 1793 they built a small log house of four rooms with a crude chimney in the center, with a fireplace on either side for cooking and to keep them comfortable in cold weather. This was the homestead house, and was near where Beavertown was later located. Ere many days the indispensable blacksmith shop was erected. Aunt Margaret told us that grandfather frequently referred to this experience as an important period in his life. Here among the tall oaks, with no part of the land under cultivation, it was necessary to eke out an existence for the small family. The greater part of his time was occupied in manufacturing, sharpening and repairing tools, so much needed in clearing the land. Here was where grandfather’s mechanical ingenuity could be utilized. The country was rapidly filling up with emigrants who had to be supplied with tools such as axes, mattocks, and shovels for the wooden plough. Carpenter tools were in great demand, such as the broad axe, adz, chisels, plane-bits, etc. All these were manufactured in the original blacksmith shop. The parents delighted to speak to their children of their experiences during the pioneer days, how they labored and toiled in order to make a comfortable home for all. After the house work was done and the children had been put to bed, the mother often repaired to the shop and there assisted grandfather in doing important work. Her assistance could then be rendered without molestation. There were no railroads nor means of transportation, other than by wagons, for their crude iron and steel, from which all kinds of wares could be produced. Nails, hinges, locks and bolts were in great demand, and all these were made by hand, mostly at night. The greater part of the day had to be utilized in subduing the forest, and bringing the land under cultivation. It was said that when grandfather was engaged in the clearings and some of the neighbors came with an axe, or some other tool to be repaired, they would work in grandfather’s stead while he went to the shop and put the tool in order. Thus by perseverance and continued labor, he succeeded in gradually clearing the land he bought for a home. These pioneer fathers laboring together, soon reduced the forests of sturdy oak and pine to cultivated fields, dotted over with homes of industrious husbandmen, and made the valley blossom as the rose. The house hastily constructed from the roughly hewn logs, roof of clapboards, and mother earth for floor until boards could be procured, proved quite sufficient to

"With the increasing members of the family, the need for space multiplied, and this need was met by building an addition to the house. The children in due course of time were trained to work and help, which increased the income and helped to support the family. Modern improvements were then unknown, and the important matches were invented after the pioneer days here described. 'I remember,' said Aunt, 'of making hasty visits to neighbors' houses for fire when our fire died out. Rather than to kindle by friction we would run to the neighbors to borrow fire and had sometimes to go to several houses in succession.' The practice was to cover embers or coals in the huge fire places with ashes and preserve the fire, which was not always a success, and often caused much trouble. In those days cook stoves were entirely unknown, all cooking had to be done on the hearth.

"Margaret said that at the age of thirteen years, she was out in the field raking hay, and got very much heated. Not having knowledge of the danger she might incur, she waded the creek on her way home in order that she might get cooled off. She took a cold which produced swelling of the limbs, causing her untold suffering. There was no doctor nearer than Huntingdon, a distance of twenty miles, so they were obliged to use home remedies. The disease, however, did not yield to their applications, and became a severe case of 'white swelling,' which 'confined her to bed for a period of eighteen months before her limbs opened.' She said during this time her suffering was so great that she lost nearly all her hair. Her mother could not undress to sleep and rest a single night in comfort, until after her limbs opened. She was obliged to sit and lie in bed for eleven years more before her limbs were healed so that she was again able to sit upon a chair, and begin to move around. The disease stiffened her limbs, and stunted her growth. With difficulty she learned to walk on crutches, which were used throughout her remaining life. She was then very grateful for the tender care given her by her dear parents, whose nursing through all those years saved her life. She was the tender branch of the family, but she was never wanting for care or sympathy from the family. She spoke of the trials to which they were subjected, yet always referred to her parents in the most endearing terms. She also referred to the Christian training. It was the father's custom on Sabbath evening to turn the home into a place of worship, as they had no church until 1810, all services previous thereto were held in the homes of different members of the church. The missionary circuit was very large, so they could not have preaching oftener than once in ten or twelve weeks, and then the people had to go over rough roads ten to fifteen miles to get to each other's houses, where preaching was appointed.

"The houses were small and poorly furnished, yet the settlers were glad to be there, for they went to learn and to hear the Gospel preached to them. The people were poor, and all had bare floors in their dwellings. On a certain occasion about the year 1809, Conrad Nicodemus and his wife, who came across the ocean with grandfather, made a carpet and put it on their floor. When it came their turn again to have preaching at their house, the people were astounded to see the floor covered and did not know what to name the covering. They thought Nicodemus was getting very proud and extravagant, since they had their floor covered with coverlids."

"The evening services at their home were especially precious to them, and their father's prayers always made a lasting impression upon all. They also had prayer meetings at the homes of the different members of the church every few weeks, where a chapter in the Bible was read and a short exhortation made by one of the members, or by the leader. This was quite an enjoyment to our pious grandparents, and later it taught their children to love the services. Many of these German fathers and mothers were good singers. They had been taught that art in Germany from text or music books, but sang in this country mostly from memory. Grandfather Nicholas Fouse, was noted for his talent in music. He was able to teach his children from memory all the old melodies in their Hymnal, and had an effective way of imparting this knowledge.

"The Sunday evenings at grandfather's home were passed in devotion, by reading the scripture, studying the catechism, and singing songs and hymns. Father and Uncle Theobald were especially mindful of this training. It was no doubt an incentive to make the latter, later on, a minister of the Gospel. They especially delighted to sing the old hymns which used to be sung under the parental roof. To some of these they were quite partial, such as the Forty-second Psalm; Es ist gewisslich an der zeit; Wachet auf ruft uns die Stimme; Wie Schon leuchtet uns die Morgenstern; and many others."
"Nicholas\textsuperscript{2} [2] was never so busy but that he could find time to 'say grace' at meals. His children were obliged to study the catechism and read the Bible, and grandfather would explain passages to them. He was sincere in the observation of the Sabbath, and on that day allowed no labor about the place except what was absolutely necessary for the comfort of the family and the proper care of the livestock. He did not believe in social visiting on Sunday, but was ever ready to look after sick neighbors, to speak words of cheer and comfort, as well as to offer his sympathy. He was devoutly Reformed in his theology, for such was his training in the Palatinate, and he labored to perpetuate this doctrine through the members of his family by personal instruction."

"Defections in the ranks of the church of the Reformation in that community were, unfortunately, quite frequent at this particular period; largely due to the ana-Baptist element that came from the old world to enjoy religious freedom. Aunt Margaret said that it required very little effort to pass as a preacher, in those early days, among these people; and the stronger the denunciation of the orthodox churches, the greater was their success amongst the skeptical. As a rule these ministers were illiterate, and without any theological training. In that peculiar period, when church facilities were inadequate to meet the wants of the people, Nicholas\textsuperscript{2} [2] more earnestly labored to supply the spiritual and intellectual needs of his household. His religious interest was not confined to his own household. In December 1809 he took part in the purchase of a lot of 82 perches from Tobias Hainley, on which to erect a house of worship, deeded to Nicholas Fouse and Abraham Miller, trustees for the German Reformed church and Christian Acker and Adam Sorrick for the Lutheran church (See Book P, No. 1, page 561, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania), who as elders of the respective organizations were charter members of the Union church in which they worshipped as long as they remained in the community, or until they passed into the realms above. Their remains rest in the adjacent graveyard, part of the original plot. Grandfather Fouse was one of the pillars of the congregation and church, though he lived three miles distant. This church was built in 1810, and was the first church of these denominations built in the Cove.

"Margaret said 'There were no schools, but father took special care to have the children learn to read and write, while yet quite young. The Heidelberg catechism had to be studied and served as one of the textbooks. Father did not think it so essential for the girls to learn to write, but he thought differently for the boys. The three elder lads took their first lessons in German penmanship from father and also improved any opportunity that came to them to attend private schools. These were the only kind then in existence. Only a few had been established, the nearest one being two and one-half miles from their home. The four younger boys had advantages over the older ones as they had school nearer, and could take up English as well as German. At best, however, the schools were only of ordinary character and lasted but two or three months, in midwinter and they were mostly taught by persons who should have gone to school rather than have undertaken to instruct.' Every year brought additional advantages; and in this year, 1854, when looking back over the past, she was filled with wonder at what had been accomplished through improvements in her time. (In the above named year Aunt Margaret moved to our house and lived with us to the time of her death.” J. G. F.)

"After the yoke of foreign oppression was thrown off, forests were turned into fertile fields, mineral deposits were developed, wheels of industry were put in motion and means of transportation established. We, whose ancestors participated either directly or indirectly in these achievements, may justly be proud of what they did. To their memory we gratefully offer reminiscences and chronologies which we trust may tend to perpetuate family ties which meant so much to our forefathers. May these serve to stimulate the spirit of kinship in the hearts and minds of the present and future Fouse and Brumbaugh generations."

"About the beginning of the nineteenth century they built an addition to their log house. With this annex, they thought themselves comfortably fixed. Their home seemed to have acquired additional charms. The worst of Aunt Margaret’s suffering was over. Her limbs were healing, and she could begin to do various chores about the house, such as required no walking. She became the seamstress of the family. The goods for clothing were all home spun. She could take no part in the preparation of the raw material. The flax was raised on the farm. The men cared for it until it reached the switch stand, then her mother and her two sisters took charge of it until it was ready for the loom. The same was necessary with the wool from the sheep’s back. It had to be prepared for their winter clothes. Nearly all her brothers learned to weave, and employed their evenings alternately in that way. They had a weaver’s shop at the south end of their house where the weaving was done by the hand loom, by either daughters or sons. Some of them were not so apt at it. Hard work through the day was frequently offered as an excuse to their mother to get out of it, but mother always managed to have them weave during the winter evenings."
"There were a number of little happenings of which this dear Aunt [o] spoke as opportunity offered, but only those which made special impression on us are recalled, as we talked with her in the early 50's. For us children to sit in her room and learn from her was then a pleasure, and now quite a benefit in writing these recollections. In stature, Aunt was the smallest in the family. She had a strong face with fixed purposes, and was noble hearted and true. She loved to speak of the things that were elevating. Though most of us were young, yet her talks had a marked influence upon us. Her little white cap with ruffled lace, was fittingly in keeping with her neat and tidy appearance. She moved about with difficulty, but everything was in its place. Her room was always invitingly cozy. It was a pleasure to be with Aunt and do her errands. She laid special stress on grandfather's appreciation of the liberty vouchsafed to his posterity under the comparatively new government. He was an earnest advocate of free schools, wanted church separated from state; though he never took an active interest in politics, he supported Washington, Federalism and the national Republican party. He was an advocate of a strong central government. When the war of 1812 broke out, the two eldest boys belonged to the local militia. Aunt said, 'Father was very anxious on the day the drafting took place, fearing it might require his boys to go. He had them prepare for it, telling them that if it fell to their lot, they could not do otherwise than go. Luckily, they escaped. He had such a horror of the scalping and butchering practice by the allies of the English army. He was loyal and advocated vigorous prosecution of the war. He had no use for anyone sympathizing with the enemy, and advised them to go where they belonged.' Some of the neighbors, descendants of the Germans and Hessians whom King George had brought over to fight our patriot fathers, were subject to adverse criticism, and nicknamed 'hirelings.' Grandfather thought these criticisms unjust; and denounced it as wrong, that they were forced, through their petty rulers, to go and fight for the English. When they laid down their arms, many of them became good citizens, and he thought they justly deserved to be respected by their neighbors, because their sympathies were with the American patriots. It fell to the lot of the son of one of these Hessian families, to go to the frontier with the others who took their departure at the muster of the militia on the Fouse premises. He bravely took up arms in defense of his adopted country. The prayers and benedictions of these German fathers being pronounced, they took their departure. It is true grandfather's love for the right enabled him to frown upon the apparent injustice to these people, by casting reflections on the descendants of the Hessians, who were forced to serve in the English army against their better judgment."

"Aunt often spoke of the good health enjoyed by the family, aside from herself being crippled. No serious illness invaded the home until the summer of 1814, when Jonathan (18), the youngest of the family, a bright healthy boy of six years, was taken with fever and spasms, and for a time was seriously ill. Aunt Margaret said they always looked upon him as especially bright until that time. After a time he was restored to good general health, but his mind was impaired. At first they thought he would outgrow it, but he never could memorize, or learn to know one letter from another. All efforts to teach him were futile. It was a source of deep distress to the mother. Aunt Margaret was the eldest, but helpless on account of her limbs, and her brother, Jonathan, was helpless because he could not care for himself. She said, 'My parents felt that we would, eventually become a charge upon others, though time proved that we were never considered such by any of them, for which I am very grateful.'

"The forests had been subdued; cultivated fields, with abundant crops, were the results of the united efforts of her father, mother and the family. Economy and care had brought us to a point when we considered ourselves in comfortable circumstances. The daughters were well satisfied with calico dresses for Sunday wear, and the boys wore linsey panta- loons, and thought it quite an improvement over the coarse linen weekday clothes. Coffee was used once a week, and that always on Sunday morning. Being a rare thing, it was much relished by the younger members of the family, and they always looked forward to this weekly treat with delight."

"As already stated, grandfather was very attentive to the work in the shop. He looked upon this as the important factor in maintaining the family. Indeed, it was the only source of ready cash. Internal improvements had not yet reached this part of the country. There was no outlet for the products of the farms as all were producers. The nearest markets were Pittsburgh and Baltimore. The former was reached by teams, and the latter by rafting over the Frankstown and Raystown branches of the Juniata River (all feeders of the Susquehanna); and then only once or twice a year, during the time of freshets or floods, in the spring and fall. Notwithstanding this, there was progress, and at the close of the war with Great Britain, grandfather purchased an additional property, adjoining the homestead, of 34 acres and allowances from Patrick
In the river townships of York County are quite a number of Freys, some of whom doubtless are descendants of Lancaster County Freys, and the others may be of the posterity of other sons of Tobias, the immigrant, than the one who is the subject of this volume. There are quite a number of Freys in York who are descended from the Martin Frey hereafter referred to. The descendants of Tobias' are also numerous in Dover and surrounding townships. In the Northern end of the county are Freys whose ancestors came from Berks after the Revolution, and there are also others who doubtless come from some of those in the above list. Adams County has a number of Freys who the writer is inclined to believe spring from Conrad, the older brother of Gottfried, and others from a Samuel Frey, who may have been a son of Tobias, born after the latter's arrival in this country. At any rate, to attempt to identify all the Freys living in York County alone would involve a task too great for the writer and subject the publication of this volume to an unreasonable delay. Should some descendant of either of these collateral branches undertake the work he would earn the gratitude of all his kindred; but he would only then appreciate the toil spent by the writer on this publication.

Son of Martin. From "Die Alte Zeite," IV [W. Fisher, York, Pa.]
The size of this book was selected as being the most usual and convenient; the paper is of a good quality and calculated to wear well, that for the text being of an antique finish so as not to be hurtful to the eye, while that used for the illustrations is of a higher finish in order to bring out the details of the half-tone portraits.

There is no method of illustration so true to life as the half-tone cut, in which the camera is used to faithfully reproduce the features. These illustrations are printed on extra heavy paper, giving a high degree of strength, and are sewed into the book in such a way as to insure their remaining an integral part thereof. In order to do this, illustrations do not always appear immediately next to the text of their subject; but as all portraits bear the name and number of the person illustrated there can be no difficulty in knowing to whom they belong.

Female Names. The females mentioned in the genealogical part of this book are described by their maiden names, as otherwise their family connection with their parents would not be immediately apparent. Where married, the fact is stated and the husband's name given in the same paragraph, and their issue are of course given the husband's surname. Where illustrated, the maiden name appears in parentheses just before the married surname, so that whether searching for a portrait by the maiden name or the married name it can readily be found.

To avoid repetition, immediately after the "subject's" name is given date of birth and death, if deceased; then, if a man, occupation and residence; and, lastly, date of marriage, wife's maiden Dimond (Book P, No. 1, page 98, August 11, 1815). This tract was also added to the homestead which now contained 211 acres and allowances, or 226 acres. (See Plate 2). Large possessions, however, were no aspiration to a man of grandfather’s disposition. He prized true Christian contentment above all else. Father, as well as our uncles, frequently referred to the satisfaction, expressed by their father in regard to his financial condition. He did not believe that great wealth contributed to real happiness. He believed in making good use of what was his own. This conclusion was largely due to his training in the fatherland, where every foot of land was made to produce. His trade confined him to the shop, to a circumscribed space, all of which contributed to his remarks in later years: that while there were many chances to buy land cheap, he cared not to purchase, as he could not convince himself that there was any advantage in having more land than he could keep in order. Personally he gave little or no attention to farm work after his boys had grown up; and he could scarcely adapt himself to the strides the young Americans were making, being strongly inclined to follow the methods of the old country. I remember a conversation between Uncle William and father, relative to this particular feature, which evinced the fact that while he did not approve of the American methods, he gradually gave way to the wishes of the boys. Uncle William spoke in particular about the difference of opinion as to how the crops should be thrashed. To flay it out was a wearisome pastime for the winter months. Many of the neighbors had adopted what they considered an improved plan, treading the grain with the horses. This the father thought was wasteful, because it broke so many grains, and he thought injured the straw for feeding purposes, especially as far as rye was concerned. At this time they spoke of him as exacting, yet kind and indulgent. There were no threshing machines invented wherewith to thresh out the crops in those early days."

FURNACES AND THE IRON INDUSTRY

"About 1812 John Royer built Springfield Furnace, in Woodberry Township, about five miles northwest of the Fouse home. He preempted a large tract of land, some of which was rich in hematite iron ore, and most of it was well covered with forest trees from which he made charcoal. Soon afterward Dr. Peter Schoenberger, proprietor of the iron works at Marietta, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, preempted large tracts of mountain land, also a large tract known as ‘The Barrens’ containing considerable hematite ore. About 1817 he built Rebecca Furnace, later in Huston Township, four miles south of the original Fouse farm. All this activity gave the pioneers a ready market for produce, stock, etc. Extensive hauling was necessary, as the pig iron had to be conveyed from the furnaces ten miles to Maria Forges and twenty miles to Petersburg. In common with many others in the 'Cove,' the Fouse sons earned money by chopping wood at thirty-five cents per cord in the winter, and, during the summer, the farm was further cleared and cultivated. The success of the iron works soon led to the establishment of other similar furnaces and forges, and Morrison’s Cove became a veritable hive of industry offering a good home market for everything the farmers could produce, as well as for their labor by team, etc."

"Prior to the completion of the canal and Portage Railroad, in 1833, there were a large number of charcoal-furnaces and forges in this portion of Huntingdon County and their product was hauled to Pittsburgh at a cost of from twenty to thirty dollars per ton."

March 13, 1819, Nicholas bought another tract containing 134 acres from John Paulis, and he soon transferred the same to his cousin, Jacob Brumbaugh. March 20, 1819, he bought a tract of 138 acres from Henry Acker, known as the "mountain farm," and this was deeded to his son, William [14] on January 8, 1825. This deed is reproduced because of the signatures, and also because of the provisions made in the same whereby the son, William [14], was to annually deliver certain supplies to the parents—the same clause appeared in the several deeds made at this time, through which the father turned over to his sons all his real estate.

January 1, 1825, he sold to Frederick [15] 112 acres, and on the same date to Theobald [16] 113 acres—the home farm consisted of 226 acres. Frederick and Theobald were also to deliver ample firewood.

INTRODUCTORY.

The difference in the next to the last figure means children of the same grandparent; and so forth. This system is used throughout the book because it is believed to best answer the requirements of intelligibility and economy of space and time, and it is hoped it will meet with the favor of the readers of these records.

The Illustrations.

There is nothing so expressive as the human face, and, in the absence of personal contact, or knowledge of their lives, in no way can we learn so much of our fellows as through a study of their features. Especially is this so where the subjects are in middle life, where time has had the opportunity to write so much of a man's character in the lines of his face. It was with this purpose that the writer sought to secure as many portraits of descendants of Gottfried Frey as possible for this work. Naturally, portraits are expensive, though modern photo-engraving has reduced the cost very materially, at the same time giving more truthful likenesses than the often flattering tool of the wood or steel engraver, where the softening of a line here or there will entirely change the expression. The portraits given in this work, with few exceptions, are the contributions of relatives of the persons presented, children, grandchildren or other loving ones joining in having the dear one's face perpetuated in this way. The rule has been to exclude everyone not of Frey blood; but anyone of that blood, be it ever so diluted, was allowed in these pages. The portraits have been made uniform in style, so as not to be open to the charge of partiality, and of a character to make their cost within the reach of nearly everyone. In a measure, they are typical of a family's interest in the work and of their regard for the subject shown.

Wherever the least concern was manifest there was given the opportunity to make use of this method of contributing to the work and of paying respect to the memory of a loved one, and if some families or branches seem to be lacking in the matter of illustrations the fault is not that of the writer.
Fouse of the township, county, &c., aforesaid of the other part, Witnesseth . . . consideration . . . Eighteen hundred dollars . . . Thence by Tusseys mountain . . . thence by lands of Christian Acker," &c.—see photographic copy of said deed. The signature of Nicholas, it should be remembered, was made shortly before his death. (See Plate 3.)

After an illness of almost a week, Nicholas died August 9, 1825, aged 77 years, 3 months 2 days, and was buried in the Union Cemetery, now Lutheran, on the Clover Creek Road, four miles south of Williamsburg, Pennsylvania. Thus ended a life to which the stalwart sons and the neighbors always referred with pride.

"But few of the grandchildren ever saw either of the grandparents, Nicholas and Margaret Fouse. We have no picture of them, as the art of taking pictures was not in use in that age. Grandfather (as we were told) was about 5 feet, 8 inches in height; heavy set with strong muscles, broad shoulders, ruddy face, medium fleshy; weight 180 pounds. He was kind and indulgent to his children, yet stern, and had them understand that his word was law and must be obeyed. Grandmother was a large sized woman of strong build, strong bones and muscles, was round faced and more inclined to be fleshy than grandfather; about his weight. She had a kind and true heart and was very fond of her children, and loved them very dearly; and in return they loved her and were faithful and true to her, and tried to reward her for her kindness towards them."

"Grandfather died intestate. No letters of administration were required, as he disposed of his real estate before his death. The family agreed to adjust the matter of personal property among themselves. At the time of marriage of each of his children, grandfather did what he could to give them a start. They were all impressed with the idea that their father sought to deal justly with each of them, and jealously guarded against partiality. They were truly imbued with the idea that justice and equity must prevail in the division of all the effects. Since Theobald occupied the original house (which was not commodious at best) for two families, it was concluded to erect a small house for the mother and the crippled sister. Such a house was built in 1826. Father did the carpenter work, while the brothers Frederick and Theobald, delivered the timber on the ground, etc. The building was located about midway between the houses occupied by the brothers. Here father and Jonathan, the youngest brother, found rest and repose, and called it their home, because 'Mother was there.' This, however continued but a few years."
“Mother frequently spoke of it having been her desire to emigrate to Ohio, where the others had gone a number of years before. Father’s reply was ‘I cannot leave mother.’ Whereupon these arrangements were entered upon with a view that as soon as he located on the premises, he would build a house for his mother. But grim death called her hence, August 8, 1829, aged 63 years, 8 months and 4 days. As already stated, she was a strong robust woman. The cause of her death was strangulated hernia, resultant, as the family believed from over exertion in her early days. She was revered and respected by all who knew her. Father could never refer to her without feelings of emotion, out of gratitude for the love she manifested for all her offspring. The agony endured in her closing days must have been almost beyond human comprehension. Medical science had not then made it possible to alleviate such suffering. But amidst all she remembered the dependents, Margaret and Jonathan. She remained conscious until within a few moments of her death. She turned to the eldest and said, ‘Peggy, such de zuflucht bei den Friedrich’ (You seek a home with Frederick) and then turning to father said, ‘Adam, gebst du acht auf den Jonathan.’ (Adam, you take care of Jonathan.) They both assured her that her wishes would be respected. Father and the other children told her that Margaret and Jonathan would never be in want, if it were in their power to avert it. Upon this assurance her spirit took its flight, and she was laid to rest beside grandfather’s grave in the old church yard adjoining the Lutheran and Reformed Union Church, where they worshiped and where their children were further instructed in the Heidelberg Catechism, and were baptized and confirmed, by the Reformed missionary preacher, the Rev. John Dietrich Auranst, their pastor for many years in that country. He also gave Rev. Theobald Fouse, his first lesson in theology. Plain marble tombstones mark their resting places in the grave-yard, then attached to where the present Lutheran church now stands, three miles north of where the old Fouse mansion stood.”

“The death of the mother closed the earthly career of one whose influence for good was a decided power, and an important element in the community. These devoted parents had nobly fulfilled their parts in life, as was clearly testified in the lives of those whom they left behind. They were highly respected in the community in which they resided, and by honesty and industry, with singleness of purpose, each member of the family built a record which reflected the excellent training given by their parents.” (J. G. F.)

of Gottfried. The writer's first attempt to find his ancestors the place first resorted to was the office of the Register of Wills of the County of York, Pa. The county was organized from a part of Lancaster in 1749; and the second Frey who seems to have died therein after its organization and left anything worth while administering upon was Gottfried Frey, on whose estate letters of administration were first granted to John Hay and John Welsh on May 21, 1782. Subsequently his will was found and probated on June 14, 1782. In the record he is described as of York township. As the writer had always understood that his forefathers had founded Freystown, which, at the time of this search was located in Springgarden township, the conclusion was reached that this was not the man sought, and the search stopped right there, partly for this reason and for the press of business affairs.

Second Attempt. When the second attempt was made, again was this same stumbling block found; but about that same time the writer awoke to the fact that Springgarden township was not contemporaneous with the organization of York County; but that in the earliest days all of Lancaster County west of the Susquehanna and above the Yellow Breeches was known as Pennsboro; while below that creek was designated as Hopewell. A little later on there were two Hallams. Upper and Lower, carved out of Hopewell, which latter name was afterward restricted to the part of the county along the Maryland line, and from which many townships have been formed.
GOTTFRIED FREY.

A little later York township, including the village of York, was formed from a part of Hellam, and in 1821 Springgarden township was cut out of York township. Thus, the question of residence was no longer contradictory, but confirmatory of the theory that Gottfried was an ancestor, giving the first link in the chain.

Examination of Gottfried's will, which appears subsequently in these pages, shows that he had indeed laid out building lots and sold a number of them, and provided for the disposal of the income from the ground rents and the ownership in fee of those unsold at the time of his death.

Still later it was discovered that Rowe's Atlas of York gives "Godfrey Frey's addition." Here was the second link in the chain of identification, the founding of the town of Freystown.

Gottfried's will names a Samuel Frey as one of his sons, and on the first blush the writer supposed this to be his grandfather; but recourse being had to the tombstone of the latter revealed the fact of his birth after the date of Gottfried's will, which of course showed that the Samuel in the will was not the Samuel of the tombstone. It was then thought that the latter was a son of the former, a theory which was effectually disposed of by the finding of the record of the baptism of the latter on the church books, as described in 16.

This will of Gottfried gives the names of his seven surviving children, among whom is that of George Frey. In 16 are given the reasons for believing that the George of Gottfried is the George who was the father of 167 Samuel Frey, thus conclusively fixing Gottfried as the American ancestor.

The writer has noticed that other genealogies state the mere fact of connection between the various branches, without any presentation of evidence to show the truth of their assertions. This does not mean that he charges these writers with knowingly stating untruths; but he has always felt that, like the Missourian, he would like to be shown. The temptation to make ancestors, where none can be easily found, is almost overpowering, and so it is not strange that the query comes up, "How do you know?" Hence, all through this work, except

[5] THEOBAld² FOUSE, the youngest son of [1] Theobald¹, accompanied his oldest brother Nicholas² [2] to this country, landing in Baltimore, October, 1784, and he remained there during his life. He was a shoemaker of no mean pretentions, prospered, and married within two years after landing. The records of this marriage have been lost or destroyed. Their children were: Jacob³, Catharine³, Caroline³, Mary³ and Harry³.

All passed away without leaving a record of the mother’s maiden name, or date of death; the latter is said to have been due to pulmonary trouble, at 37 years of age. About three years later, he married (2) Mrs. Catharine Wakeman Schuman. This union was blessed with two children: Elizabeth³ and Magdalena³.

The Heads of Families, First Census of the U. S. 1790, page 18, enumerates him as at "Baltimore Town, Md." with a son over 16, another under 16, and 3 females.

His will (Book 13, page 101), dated March 10, 1828, was executed before the witnesses Geo. Valiant, G. Schleicht and David Pugh and bequeaths his house and lot in South Liberty Street, and furniture, to his wife Catharine. After her decease the same to to go "to my son-in-law James Larew, my son-in-law Frederick Browen, my daughter Mary Eddy, the two children of my daughter Elizabeth Adams to wit Mary and Joshua to be divided among them share and share alike, and likewise my son-in-law David Pugh to have his lawful share; to the heirs of my son Jacob," etc. Theobald² [5] died prior to August 6, 1828, and September 8, 1848 Jacob M. Fouse was appointed executor.
JACOB³ FOUSE (3-1) married Harriet Evans. Children to this union were two:
  Jacob⁴ and Henry⁴.

CATHARINE³ (3-2) married a Mr. Browen, and they had three children:
  Mary⁴, married John Michael Craft.
  Caroline⁴, married John George Craft.
  Catharine⁴, married John Mathias Craft.

These sisters married brothers and, as far as traceable, left no posterity. Further inquiry is being made in Washington City, where the Crafts were last located.

CAROLINE³ (3-3) married Jacob Larue, to whom were born:
  Elizabeth⁴, married James Mitchell.
  Caroline⁴, married James Mitchell (second wife).
  Margaret⁴, never married.

It appears from the information gathered that Elizabeth⁴ died within a year after marriage and her sister—Caroline⁴ became Mrs. Mitchell. All died young, having a tendency to lung disease.

MARY FOUSE³ (3-4) married Thomas Nicholson. There were two children:
  Henry⁴, married Mary Adams.
  William⁴, never married.

Mrs. Nicholson, upon her husband’s death, married a Mr. Eddy. To this union was born one child, George. We have not been successful in procuring subsequent records of this family.

HARRY FOUSE³ (3-5) died under 21 years of age, without issue—buried in the graveyard by the Second Reformed Church of Baltimore, Maryland.

ELIZABETH³ FOUSE (3-6, first born, second wife) married Thos. Adams. Two children born to this marriage:
  Joshua⁴, married Mary Mauners.
  Mary⁴, married Henry Nicholson, her cousin.

It seems impossible to get further definite information in the foregoing families. The source of the information published is William and Mary Pugh, the surviving children of the seventh generation of the Theobald Fouse family.
MAGDALENA² FOUSE (3–7) married David Pugh.

"Died, in Baltimore, January 30th, 1876, Mrs. Magdalene Pugh, greatly beloved by all that knew her.

"Mrs. Pugh had been for many years a member of the Reformed church on Second Street, while Rev. Dr. Heiner was yet the active pastor, of whom she often spoke in words of affectionate regard. Some time after his death, she, with her family, became connected with the Third Reformed church on corner of Paca and Saratoga Streets, to which she gave her heart and active service. She loved to be in the sanctuary and to join in its solemn services of prayer and praise, and while her health permitted she was always and promptly in her place. Her religious character was inward and solid. She was a lady of clear mind, tender feelings, constitutionally opposed to all forms of ostentation and really devoted to what she regarded as duty. Though her death was preceded by a long siege of sickness, which was at times specially distressing, she was graciously sustained through it all. No murmur ever escaped her lips. Her final experience of God’s gracious nearness was especially gratifying to her friends. In view of her uniform calmness of feeling, she scarcely expected such vivid tokens of divine favor in her last moments. She labored to the last to express her gratitude to God for this distinguished favor. Though dead, she nevertheless speaks to us. Let her children and friends listen to this silent voice, and be bidden by it onward and still onward on the same ‘Highway’ on which she was conducted to the great ‘Building of God’ in Heaven.

G."

There were five children:

John H.¹, single. Died February, 1901.
Elizabeth A.,⁴ single. Died February 8, 1903.
Joseph⁴, died at age 17.
William G.⁴
Mary F.⁴, unmarried.

JOHN H.⁴ PUGH.

"Mr. John H. Pugh, for many years well-known in commercial and financial circles in this city, died at about 3 o’clock yesterday morning at his residence, 1020 West Lanvale Street, of paralysis. He was identified with the old Baltimore Gas Light Company and its successors for about 25 years, and after retiring from its service was prominently connected with the stockholding interests in the company. He was a native of Baltimore and a son of the late David Pugh, of Wales, who came to this country in the early part of the last century and built the gasworks here, the first in America, of which he was the chief engineer. Mr. Pugh never married. He leaves a brother, Mr. William G. Pugh, who is connected with the Consolidated Gas Company, and one sister, Miss Mary F. Pugh, with whom he resided.

“The funeral of Mr. John H. Pugh, who died last Tuesday, took place yesterday from his late home, 1020 West Lanvale Street. Services were conducted by Rev.

ELIZABETH A. PUGH.

"Pugh.—Died, in Baltimore, on the 8th day of February, Miss Elizabeth A. Pugh, a valued member of the Third Reformed church.

"The deceased illustrated, in her life and character, those graces which should be found in the conduct of those who are followers of Jesus. Her hand was always open to the cause of the Gospel. She was always ready to listen to the numerous appeals that have to be made. She always gave as the Lord had blessed her. Through long years of suffering, which only acted as the trimming of the vine, she grew in grace and in the love of her Saviour. Her loyalty to the Reformed Church never wavered. She firmly believed that it had a mission. Every sign that this was being apprehended and executed by others brought joy to her heart. Though she was prevented from doing much, she was ever ready to encourage others. She fell asleep in Jesus, and testified that His love did not fail, when the feet were chilling in the cold waters of the river of death. Her church has lost a valuable member, her family a life that was an inspiration, and her circle of friends one who leaves a large space vacant. May God bless this bereavement of His hand to the glory of His name and to the good of His people. One of His chosen has fallen, but the work still goes on."

WILLIAM G. PUGH (4-4) married Julia Morrow. To them was born a son William Morrow. The mother dying, left the child to the care of the father, grandmother and aunts and Wm. G. later married Mary Stevenson and to this union were born the following children:

John David, James G. and Margaret Stevenson.

WILLIAM MORROW PUGH (5-1) married Eleanor Myers. To them were born the following children:

Joseph, Julian, and Eleanor.

JOHN DAVID PUGH (5-2) married Addie Austin and they live at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. To them were born:

Mary, Margaret, Hale, and Eliza.

JAMES G. PUGH (5-3) married Helen Nusser, residing near Lutherville, Maryland. There is one child, William Nusser Pugh.

MARGARET STEVENSON PUGH, (5-4) married Alexander Johnson. They live at Govans, Baltimore County, Maryland. There are two children:

Mary Stevenson, and Nannie Gardner.
Families of the Third Generation

"The continued narrative here given is my own recollection of reminiscences as obtained from time to time. I place it at the disposal of those who wish to make it a permanent record.

"The Fouses partook of the nature of their parents. They had a strong physique; were hale, hearty, and naturally industrious, and willing to earn their living by the sweat of the brow. They were frugal and economical; they dealt honestly; they were charitable and willing to help their neighbors in time of need; and their integrity has never been doubted. They loved character and a good name more than money, as shown by the lives they lived in the several communities. They esteemed each other as members of a large family, and were glad to meet and visit each other frequently, learning of each other's welfare, and trying to contribute to each other's happiness. They generally made useful citizens in their communities, and were willing to assist in supporting churches and missions in their neighborhood. They were particular to pay their honest obligations. Each one sought by integrity, industry and frugality to secure a good position of usefulness, and to procure a home for himself or herself, in which laudable ambitions all succeeded."

"Father and aunt also spoke of the marriages of the older children in grandfather’s family: Catherine, the third daughter, was the first to leave the parental roof of this pioneer family. On April 14, 1811, she married John Philip Garner, at the old Fouse homestead in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania."

"April 3, 1828, father Adam, married Susanna, daughter of John Michael Garner, Jr. They soon afterward took up housekeeping in the little stone spring house, a few rods west of Uncle Frederick’s home. Here they resided until the fall of the following year. The early part of that year father purchased the interest of the heirs in the farm of Samuel Hoover, two miles south of where he was then residing. He made this purchase with the view of making it his permanent home. Grandmother told father at that time, that if they moved away, she and Margaret, nicknamed 'Peggy,' would go with them." (J. G. F.)
The next to leave the parental roof was the second daughter Elizabeth\(^3\) [10]. She married Abraham Miller, also of Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, on March 10, 1814. Soon after their marriage they emigrated to Ohio, and settled in the forest where they opened a farm in Plain Township, Stark County, and there resided during their lives. Their residence was six miles north of Canton.

"On June 21, 1814, the same year, Jacob\(^3\) [12], the fourth child, married Elizabeth Miller at the Fouse homestead in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. The following year they also emigrated to Ohio, and settled on the west side of Congress Lake, Lake Township, Stark County, where they opened a farm and resided there during their lives, fourteen miles north of Canton.

"A few years later, John\(^3\) [13], the fifth child, married Christina Miller, a sister of Elizabeth. They were married on March 12, 1817, and soon thereafter emigrated to Ohio. At first they lived nearly one year in the original log house, erected by Abraham Miller on the Miller homestead. During this time Mr. Fouse selected a quarter section of land, twelve miles north of Canton, in Lake Township, Stark County. He entered his claim, and letters of patent were granted him on October 8, 1818, for 160 acres. He then erected a small house on his claim and moved there the same fall, and commenced to improve the property. Mr. Fouse's career was short. He died in July 1825. They had four children, but the oldest, Nicholas, died in infancy. The mother left the farm after Mr. Fouse's death and moved down to her brother's, Abraham Miller, where they had lived the first year. Their farm and effects were appraised, and Abraham Miller was appointed guardian for the three children. The farm was rented, and out of the proceeds, the widow got her one-third, and the guardian the remainder for the benefit of the children. In 1848, on the fourth of May, Frederick, their son married Elizabeth Gearty, and shortly after that, went to farming on their old homestead. Priscilla died at age 16, and Savilla had married Isaac Madlem. The mother Christina, remained with her brother for a few years longer and then the remainder of her days she lived with her children, Savilla and Frederick.

"William Fouse\(^3\) [14] married Susan, daughter of Peter Bowers, on August 6, 1818. After their marriage, they moved to the mountain tract, in the spring of 1819, of which we have already spoken, where he devoted his time and energy in reducing the forest and cultivating the soil, besides conducting a small country store for the accommodation of the farmers of the neighborhood. The younger brothers continued their labors on the old farm under the direction of grandfather, performing that which was necessary for the comfort of those dependent upon support at his hands until March 1823."

The father had passed the allotted span of life, being 75; and willingly quit his activities in the shop. He thus gave Frederick, Theobald and Adam a better chance to practice smithing under his supervision.

"July 4, 1821, Frederick married Catherine Acker, daughter of Leonard Acker. Soon after a house was erected on the eastern side of Clover Creek, on the homestead which later on became the farm house. Frederick continued working under grandfather's management until the spring of 1823, when he (Nicholas Fouse) sold his farming implements and live stock to Frederick and Theobald and had them farm on shares until 1825."

"March 25, 1823, Theobald married Nancy, daughter of Christian Shontz. They then started housekeeping in part of the old Fouse mansion house. It was the purpose to have these two brothers, Frederick and Theobald, farm jointly, and, if needs be, eventually divide the farm, which was done January 1, 1825. Under the new order of things Adam was thrown upon his own resources. We remember hearing him say (referring to the time that his brothers, Frederick and Theobald, took up farming) that his father told him he could not give him any land to make a start. That he was now free and at liberty to adopt any vocation that he might desire, though he was only 18 years of age. He continued as in the past to chop cordwood in the winter, unless very inclement and cold, and then he worked at the loom. In the summer he followed the carpenter trade which consisted mostly of hewing logs, as nearly all the buildings, both houses and barns, were simply plain log structures. Shingles, however, took the place of clap boards and thatched roofs. These were all hand made and required much labor. The two brothers, Frederick and Theobald, each farmed the land which they bought from their father January 1, 1825, until the fall of 1832, when Theobald was offered a farm by Thomas Jackson in Woodcock Valley, and joining that of his father-in-law Christian Shontz, containing 216 acres for $3000. He then talked the matter over with Frederick, who agreed to buy Theobald’s part of the homestead farm, then Theobald bought the Jackson farm that fall and moved there in the spring of 1833. This gives the reason for Theobald moving to Woodcock Valley, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania."

[9] MARGARET FOUSE, daughter of [2] Nicholas and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse, was born October 12, 1786. Notwithstanding her sickness and suffering, as heretofore detailed, and being a cripple all her life, she was a very useful woman in her community. She was the sewer and dressmaker not only for the family, but also for the community. She also did the knitting of the stockings, mittens, and gloves. She could not go to school, and her parents were her instructors. She was proficient in the German language, and it was a comfort to her to read the Holy Scriptures daily, and to have that Book of Books as a teacher and comforter all her days. She was always in her place in church, when she was well, and when the weather was not too inclement.

"Uncle Frederick, soon after grandmother's death (August 8, 1829), built two rooms to the north end of his house, where Aunt Margaret could live in comfort. He also kept a safe horse (named 'Nelly') for her to ride to church and elsewhere. She could not go alone however, someone had to go with her to help her on and off the horse, as well as open gates or let down bars. There were no buggies or carriages in that neighborhood in those early days. She was also a lover of prayer meeting, and was always present at the appointments unless the weather was too inclement. She always took an active part in the meetings. She was greatly gifted in prayer and her supplications to the Lord for mercy upon the people of this sinful world would touch every heart within hearing. To serve the Lord was her chief concern."

"Mention has been made of Aunt Margaret having moved to our house in 1854. She felt age creeping over her. Though she had a healthy heart and a strong constitution, she felt that she was getting frail because of her sufferings and age. She was nearing three score and ten years. She began to be much afflicted with rheumatism, and since Uncle Frederick's wife had died ten years prior, and had but one daughter (Elizabeth) at home, Aunt felt that since our parents were living and had three daughters at home, that if she took sick, there would be more help with us to wait on her. Aunt was very thoughtful through her life, and prepared for temporal as well as spiritual life; long years before her death she prepared her burial clothes, and when the hour of demise came all was ready. She many times spoke of being ready and willing to die whenever the summons came. In the spring of 1855, she became very much afflicted with a complication of diseases which were fast weakening her, and someone had to be with her all the time. Sister Elizabeth mostly attended to her wants and was her nurse. She had a bed in aunt's room and cared for her at night. Aunt's suffering in her last sickness did not last long. She breathed her last on May 9, 1855, aged 68 years, 6 months and 27 days.
The branch of Hans Jacob Frey nourished in the male line in Weiler through five generations. It became extinct with the death of John George Frey on December 5, 1893. He left, of two marriages, three daughters, who are still living. The oldest one is in Hilsbach; the second in Waldangelloch, (one mile) distant from Hilsbach; and the youngest one married in Weiler.

On November 7, 1676, Hans Frey contracted a second marriage with Margarethe Volck, daughter of Vinegrower Wolf Volck, in Weiler. This wife died on December 5, 1701, 49 years old. She, therefore, was born 1652. Of this marriage likewise four children are traceable:

1. Hans Martin, b. July 1, 1677; ^Sept. 4, 1678.
3. Tobias, born June 1, 1684.

TOBIAS FREY was a wagoner in Weiler and married on July 17, 1709, one Anna Maria Peters, of Eppingen, county seat, two hours (6 miles) distance from Hilsbach. To this couple was born, in Weiler, three children:

1. Conrad, born March 10, 1715.
3. Anna Maria, born Dec. 6, 1722.

Since then the name of Tobias Frey has disappeared from our church records. Notices concerning his emigration to America are not to be found in our records. The agreement of these statements with the corresponding entries in the church records of Hilsbach and Weiler is hereby certified.

PLATE 5

ELIZABETH M. FOUSE MILLER [12], AND CHRISTINA (MILLER) FOUSE [13].
GOTTFRIED FREY.

The "Spangler Families,"* were revealed three ancestors of Gottfried Frey.

The statement justified the inference drawn from the Lancaster records, that Tobias was the father of Gottfried.

The only flaw is the fact that Tobias' wife was named Anna, while his widow is designated as Barbara; but a second marriage probably accounts for this discrepancy.

The bond between Tobias, Martin and Gottfried can not be explained on the theory that had first been formed, that Martin was a son or younger brother of Tobias.

It is probable that the Hans born October 12, 1666, who is set forth in the Hilsbach statement "concerning him no further notice can be found," left Weiler and eventually drifted to America, or that a son of his named Martin was himself an emigrant; or Martin may have been a descendant of Hans Jacob, Tobias' older half-brother.

Letters addressed to the pastor of a Protestant church at Urdorf, in an attempt to trace Kaspar's ancestry, met with no reply.

From the German records given, it will be seen that the descendants of Gottfried Frey are interested in Hilsbach and Weiler, two German villages, now in Baden, only a mile and a half apart. Hilsbach is the parish town, the pastor conducting services at both places.

The population of Hilsbach is stated in Rev. Greiner's letter; that of Weiler, in 1895 was 967.

Gottfried Frey was doubtless baptized in the church at Weiler, an illustration of which is given. There is also shown the ancestral home of the Spenglers, of whom five sons and a daughter married Freys, 1614-1632, 1635, 1636, 1671-1677. -JSpangler Families 117.
Thus all her sufferings were over and she was laid to rest in the faith of her Savior, whom she loved and served all her days.”

[10] ELIZABETH FOUSE, daughter of [2] Nicholas and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse, was born August 11, 1788; March 10, 1814, she married Abraham Miller, Jr., born January 31, 1787; son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Clapper) Miller. Soon after their marriage in Pennsylvania they moved to Ohio, settling on a farm purchased June 24, 1813, part of Southeast Quarter, Section 4, Plain Township 11, Range 8, six miles north of Canton, Stark County, Ohio, where they continued to reside during their lives. They were among the pioneer settlers of the state and were members of the Reformed Church at Cairo, Ohio (see Plate 5).

ABRAHAM MILLER, SR., father of Abraham Miller, Jr. [10] came from the province of Bavaria, Germany, about 1776. He landed at Baltimore, Maryland, but unfortunately the early records of that port of entry were not preserved. Soon after landing he went to the neighborhood of Funkstown, Frederick County (now Washington), Maryland. These were stirring times, and after considering the situation of the Revolutionary patriots he enlisted as a private in a company then recruiting near Funkstown. See Records of Maryland Troops in the Continental Service during the War of American Revolution 1775-1783,—“Capt. Henry Hardman’s Return, made July 19, 1776. Passed by Henry Shryock, July 19, 1776; page 51, Abraham Miller.” “A List of Recruits belonging to the German Regiment Commanded by Lieut.-Col. Weltner, White Plains, September 5, 1778;” page 267, Abraham Miller, 9 months. The same reference, page 324, “A List of Substitutes Furnished by the Different Battalions after their being Classed in Order for the Draught, Frederick County,—Passed June 3, 1778 Abraham Miller, Jr., 9 months, German Regiment.” We thus have records of Revolutionary service apparently for both father and son at the same time, with terms of service coinciding.*

To serve as a soldier was nothing new to the patriarch, Abraham Miller, Sr., as from tradition we learn, he had served in the Seven Years War in the army of the German Kingdom before coming to this country, and, by having such experience at soldiering in the fatherland, he was an excellent soldier for this country. We have no record of the full number of engagements in which he participated, but we know that he served with his company and regiment in the following battles: Stony Point, Brandywine, Germantown, Trenton, Monmouth, at the siege of Yorktown, and was with Washington's army at Valley Forge. He fought with credit to the close of the war, and then was honorably discharged. After their discharge, these soldiers returned to Funkstown, the place of their enlistment.

*Rev. Abraham Miller [85], Kent, Ohio, was a member of Sons of American Revolution. He died April 24, 1911. Abraham Miller, Jr. [10] was born January 31, 1787, and the junior Revolutionary soldier may have belonged to another family.

Soon after Abraham Miller, Sr., returned from the Revolutionary War, he married Elizabeth Clapper and engaged in farming. Pages 118-123, Maryland Census of 1790, for Washington County, Maryland, give Abraham Miller as having one male over 16, one under, and two females, which corresponds with his family record, as his oldest son Abraham, Jr., was born January 31, 1787. We do not find him making any purchase of land until October 27, 1796 (Book E, No. 1, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, page 428), 170 acres, for which he paid £200 to William Phillips. He also bought 50 acres from Phillip Hartman (Book G, No. 1, do., page 511) October 3, 1799. This was part of the tract for which warrant was granted to William Phillips, March 28, 1774, and patented to him September 25, 1791, all of record in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. The patent covered 220 acres. Abraham Miller secured the whole of it. The farm he purchased was four miles north of Grandfather Nicholas Fouse's [2] home on the same stream (Clover Creek). We find Mr. Miller sold a parcel of land from this tract to Adam Sorrick, on June 27, 1798, containing four acres. The consideration was £8, 17 shillings and 6 pence. This deed is recorded in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. Here we notice by the record that at that time Mr. Miller was a widower, as the deed has only his signature. The whole farm then laid in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, in the township of Woodberry, lying on both sides of Clover Creek. It is one of the best farms in Morrison's Cove, and has a splendid spring of water on it. The Clover Creek public road, leading to Williamsburg, passes near the spring and the buildings, which are three miles south from said town, and one mile north from the Union Church and graveyard, where Mrs. Abraham Miller, and Grandfather and Grandmother Fouse are buried. We find that this Union Church is where the Millers and Fouses worshipped at that time. Here we conclude that Grandfather Miller and Grandfather Fouse knew each other for many years. While, Mr. Miller came to this country first, they no doubt kept up a correspondence between them. As already stated, when Mr. Miller landed at Baltimore, Maryland, he speedily went to Funkstown, etc. Grandfather Fouse apparently followed him. After the close of the Revolutionary War they must have met each other, and renewed their acquaintance. They were both married in the neighborhood of Funkstown, Maryland. Mr. Miller soon after his marriage must have taken up the occupation of farming and remained in the state of Maryland until 1795—see land purchased. Grandfather Fouse had come to Pennsylvania in 1789, and Abraham Miller in 1796, and then purchased a home from William Phillips, four miles from the Fouse home and adjacent to where Grandfather Fouse and Grandfather Miller as elders were charter members and trustees in buying a lot of land (82 perches) to establish a German Reformed and Lutheran Union Church (Book P, No. 1, page 561). Christian Acker and Adam Sorrick were the Lutheran trustees. The church was then built in 1810 and was the first church in the Cove of these denominations. Mr. Miller was also one of the pillars of this congregation and church while in the community. His residence was within one mile of the church. They had the same faith and worshipped at the same church for many years. Abraham [10] and Elizabeth Miller [12], son and daughter of the patriarch, married into the Fouse family and were children of the patriarch’s first wife, Elizabeth (Clapper) Miller who died in 1796. Christina, who later married John Fouse [13], was a daughter of his second wife, and was a noble and kind hearted woman, as well as the other children in the patriarch’s family.

Two years later Mr. Miller married for his second wife, Sibilla Lower of the neighborhood where he then lived. She also was noble hearted and true, and was a good wife to him and a kind mother to his children. She was frugal and helped him in every way she could, and reared their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Mr. Abraham Miller and his wife, Sibilla, sold the remainder of their farm, containing 216 acres, to Michael Bosler, on the eighteenth day of April, 1812, for a consideration of five thousand, eight hundred and fifty ($5850) dollars. We notice here that United States money came into use in payment of this tract. This deed was also recorded in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, April 19, 1814. In 1846 Blair County, was established in Pennsylvania, and all is now in that county. We know not whether Grandfather Miller left the farm immediately after its sale, but it appears he remained in that neighborhood nearly two years after the sale, as he and his son Abraham, made several trips to Ohio, where they selected and purchased a farm June 24, 1813, containing 168.6 acres, in the virgin forest, from Abraham Croft. The consideration was $1344.48, which is a part of the Southeast Quarter, Section 4, Plain Township 11, Range 8, six miles north of Canton.
Dear Son:

Your letter from far away America reached us by the hands of the brave Captain Sanders, and it gave us great joy. And when, a few days later, the father of your true friend came to see us, our joy was beyond measure.

America, according to your writing, must be a beautiful land. We rejoice greatly that your home is with such good God-fearing people, and that the Indians in your community are peace-loving people.

Dear Henry, since you have been away from us the conditions in South Germany have been very much worse. The French have wrought much devastation, and this is pressing us very hard at this time, and besides this, we are now suffering the plague of high taxes. Thousands would gladly leave the Fatherland if they had the means to do so. A merchant from Frankfort was with us last week, and informed us how along the Rhine a number of families have banded together and are planning to accept the invitation of an Englishman named William Penn, who recently visited this community, to settle in that beautiful land and there establish new homes.

After I had received the information I went at once to our pastor, whose parents live in Worms, on the Rhine, and begged him urgently to learn what truth there was in these reports, and to find out, if possible, if there would be any opportunity for us to join them and go to the New World. He then informed me that these reports were all true, and that he was informed by one who had inside knowledge that in a place called Kriegsheim, near Worms, many were preparing themselves to go to the New World. When I gave the good man your letter to read he was greatly surprised and said that you were on the land to which these emigrants were going. It is the good providence of God that has shown these burdened people so glorious a land. We, also the Plattenbach family, are only waiting for a good opportunity when the dear Lord will bring us to you.

They prepared to emigrate the next spring to their new farm. His son Abraham, then married Elizabeth Fouse [10], March 10, 1814. A few days later the father and son and their wives, with the family, started on their trip to Ohio. For their transportation they used a Conestoga wagon, and a good team of horses. After they landed in Ohio for a time they had no shelter, as their property was unimproved. They camped under a large maple tree. For shelter from the sun, they tied the tops of bushes and corner of sheets stretched from one bush to another for a covering under which to cook and eat. At night for refuge from large brown wolves, and other wild animals, they slept in their covered wagon until a house could be logged up. They soon erected a small log house, put on a roof of clap boards; and when chunked and daubed, and dried, it was ready for use, and was occupied by them for some years, until a better one could be built. This house was built near a good spring, which furnished water for all purposes. The place where the original house stood is marked, but the house is razed. These grandparents and their children were truly amongst the pioneer settlers of that part of the state. The farm mostly had large and heavy timber on it, but there was no market for the same. The land was of the best quality. At first it was hard for them to eke out a living. There were no railroads in those days, all transportation had to be done by teaming or hauling. Goods for the supply of merchants at Canton had to be hauled by teams from Pittsburgh, a distance of one hundred miles. Through this hauling farmers could earn a little extra money. When in need of salt and sole leather, which they were obliged to have, they would take a load of wheat to Cleveland, a distance of fifty miles, and often were thankful when the wheat would sell for enough money, wherewith to buy a barrel of salt and a side of sole leather, and pay the expenses. Those pioneer days gave the husbandmen and their families many hardships which later generations do not comprehend. At first many tears were shed by the women, until they became accustomed to the country and climate. As there were then many swamps in Ohio, early settlers suffered much from fever and ague, which increased their hardships. In those days all were producers and but few consumers, since there were no manufacturing establishments nearer than Cleveland and Pittsburgh, and even there the population was small, and the produce markets overstocked. Land was then cheap and persons living in towns, had large lots and raised for themselves nearly all they needed. Money was very scarce and hard to earn, so every person was obliged to economize. But the Millers had considered all this and
Your brother Peter is learning shoemaking, and will soon be free. America is the dream of Elizabeth, and Catharine, only six years old, asks us daily "Will we soon be going to our brother in America?"

Your dear mother, as also your brothers and sisters, greet you heartily, and pray to the dear Lord that Tie may protect and keep you.

Your True Father,
Heinrichi Fkky.

The feeling of unrest and the desire to try their fortunes in the New World, set forth in the above letter, grew apace, and the tide of emigration from Germany to Pennsylvania attained such volume that the authorities in this State became alarmed, notwithstanding the fact that Queen Anne was herself active in inviting these settlers.

"The Golden Book," so called because of its illuminated title page, contained a picture of that august lady, with glowing words of encouragement for those pressed to come to England, to be sent from there to the English colonies in America.

The earliest German settlements were made in what is yet known as Germantown, thongli now in the corporate limits of the city of Philadelphia, subsequently extending back in what is now Montgomery and Berks Counties, several townships in these counties bearing German names. Later Chester county was invaded, and a large body of Mennonites from Switzerland and Germany settled at Pequa, now in Lancaster County.

"The Germans were principally farmers. They depended more upon themselves than upon others. They wielded the mattock, the ax and maul, and by the power of brawny arms rooted up the grubs, removed saplings, felled majestic oaks, laid low the towering hickory; prostrated, where they grew, the walnut, poplar, chestnut—cleaved such as suited the purpose into rails for fences—persevered untiringly until the forest was changed into arable field. They were those of whom Governor Thomas said, 1738: "This Province has been for some years the asylum of the distressed Protestants of the Palatinate, and other parts of Germany: and, I believe, it may be truthfully said, that the present flourishing condition of it is in a great measure owing to the industry of those people; it is not altogether the fertility of the soil, but GOTTFRIED FREY. The number and industry of the people that makes a country flourish.'

For these causes and to such a land Tobias Frey decided to leave the little town of Weiler and undertake the long journey to the New World. Doubtless in the way depicted in Heinrich Frey's letter, a number of families in Weiler and other towns in the neighborhood, united in sundering the ties which bound them to friends and fatherland, and took the eventful step which eventually transformed them from subjects of a German Elector to sovereign citizens of a great Republic.

We know that Tobias had as companion at least one of his neighbors, in the person of Hans Casper Spengler, and the list given may include other citizens of the little village in Baden. The list is headed by Rev. G. M. Weis, who was born January 23, 1700, either at Eppingen or at Stebach, both towns less than fifty miles distant from Weiler. It is just possible that Weis may have been the pastor at Hillsbach, the church town for Weiler, or he may have gathered up a band of Germans to emigrate to the promised land. He became quite a famous pastor in America, and some of his descendants are living in York today.

The journey was doubtless down the Rhine on the slow flat boats of that time. Arriving at Rotterdam, passage was engaged on the ship William and Sarah, William Hill, master, which stopped at Dover, England, and then began the long voyage to America. A voyage of this kind, at that time, took about six months, and was both dangerous and uncomfortable. Crowded together in unventilated quarters, with poor food, many emigrants died on the way and were consigned to the bosom of the deep. Some unscrupulous captains actually lengthened the passage in order to make more money off the unfortunate passengers. We know not what kind of a man was Captain Hill, nor how speedy and comfortable his boat; but on September 18, 1727, went energetically to work to open the new country, as they believed they could better their situation. They were men of intelligence and determination, and through their integrity, industry and frugality, they and their descendants usually made their mark. They were, in general, men of good habits and of high moral character, and were much esteemed in their communities. The children of the Patriarch Abraham Miller were noble hearted, naturally industrious and charitable. They were natural mechanics, some were inventors, and all carried business to successful issues.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF ABRAHAM MILLER

"In the name of God, Amen, I, Abraham Miller of Plain township in the County of Stark and State of Ohio, being in good health of body and of sound and disposing mind and memory (praised be God for the same) and being desirous to settle my worldly affairs whilst I have strength and capacity so to do—do make and publish this my last will and testament, hereby revoking and making void all wills by me at anytime heretofore made;

"And first and principally I commit my soul into the hands of Almighty God who gave it and my body to the earth to be buried in a decent manner at the discretion of my Executors hereinafter mentioned; and as to such worldly Estate wherewith it has pleased God to intrust me in life, I dispose of the same as follows:

"I will that all my just debts as shall be by me owing at my death, together with my funeral expenses and all charges touching the proving of or otherwise concerning this my will, shall in the first place out of my personal Estate and effects be fully paid and satisfied. I give and bequeath unto my son Abraham Miller the plantation on which he now dwells, being the South East quarter of Section four, township eleven and Range eight, subject however to the payment of one hundred and fifty dollars, which he shall pay to my Executors hereinafter mentioned, in the following manner, fifty dollars thereof to be paid three years after my decease and then fifty dollars annually until the whole is paid,—and also subject to the maintainance of his mother as is herein after mentioned, and on the payment as aforesaid and on the faithful maintainance of his mother he shall hold the said quarter Section to him and heirs and assigns forever; I also give and bequeath unto him one horse and mare, one wagon, plow, harrow, the iron of the old carriage wheels,—and all the horse gears belonging to me, my two hackles, a large splitting axe, two iron wedges, a frow, a drawing knife, all which is now in his possession, as also my windmill,—I also give and bequeath unto my three sons John Miller, Henry Miller and Lewis Miller all the fractional Section of land which I hold, being Section fifteen in the first township and tenth range—containing four hundred and seventy seven acres and Sixty five hundredths to be divided as they have already agreed between them, subject also to the payment to my Executors the respective sums of One hundred and fifty dollars each, to be paid as follows—three years after my decease, each of them shall pay fifty dollars and then fifty dollars annually until just when he so crossed is not known but he was one of the settlers who, believing the Susquehanna to be the line, in 1732-34, took grants from the Governor of Maryland for their land, which they received free of taxes.

Affairs, however, did not turn out as happily for them as they had been led to expect, as appears by the following petition presented by them to the 'resident and Council of the Province of Pennsylvania.'

The petition of Most of the Inhabitants on the west side of Susquehanna River, opposite to Hempfield. In the County of Lancaster, Humbly Sheweth, That your petitioners, two or three years past (being many of us then newly arrived in America), & altogether Strangers to the Boundaries of the two Provinces of Pennsylvania & Maryland, were, by many plausible pretences and fair promises, persuaded to settle under the Government of the Latter, Supposing from what we were told that these Lands were within that Province, and that the River Susquehannah was the Division; But, after we were seated, finding the usage we received was very different from that to the rest of the Government, and what small substance we had was often made a prey to some Persons Impowered by them; And, tho' we Often made known our Cause of Complaint, could have no Redress, Nor the Promises which had been first made us, in the Least Regarded; Being also lately told by some in Power there, that we were worse than Negroes, for that we had no Master, nor were under the protection of any Laws, and since Informed by them that the River Susquehanna Could not be the bounds, as we had at first been told, but that an East and West Line could Divide the Provinces; and also observing that the People on the East Side of the said River, Inhabitants of Pennsylvania, who live much more to the Southward than we do, Enjoy'd their Possessions peaceably, SThe author of the "Spangler Families" places Casper Spangrler's settlement in York County in 1729. Considering the close intimacy of the two men, it is quite probable that Tobias crossed the river about the same time.

GOTTFRIED FREY.

Wee, from these Reasons, Concluded we had been Imposed upon, & Deluded to Answer some purposes of the Government of Maryland, which are Not Justifiable, and might in the End tend to Our Ruin, and that we were not Settled within the true and Real Bounds of that Province, as we had been made to Believe; And from a Sense thereof, and of the wrong we were doing to the Proprietors of Pennsylvania, in living on their Lands (as we now conceive we are) without paying Obedience to the Laws of your Government, Unanimously Resolved to Return to our Duty.

Your Humble Petitioners therefore pray you would Impute our Late Errours to Our want of Better Information, and would be pleased to receive us under the Protection of your Laws and Government, To which, for the future, we promise all faithful Obedience & Submission.

This petition was signed by forty-eight Germans, among whom we find the names of Tobias Fry (as the English translator wrote it), Martin Fry, and Tobias' fellow-Weilerite, Casper Spangler, showing that Tobias and Casper were still closely associated, and that the common name, if not a closer tie, bound together the two Freys.

Naturally, the Maryland authorities were displeased at this renunciation of allegiance by their former settlers, and steps were taken to dispossess them of their newly-formed homes. This was just as logically resisted both by the settlers and by the Pennsylvania government, and the conflict is known as "Cresap's War," in the course of which some of the Germans were imprisoned by the Maryland authorities, and all of them suffered anxiety and hardships.

In the end, the British government sustained the contention of Pennsylvania, and the present York County continued a part of that Province.

By this happy solution of the dispute, Tobias Frey remained the owner of 450 acres of land, which he, in his deed to Baltzer Spangler, describes as having received a patent for from the Penns October 30, 1736. A search at Harrisburg for the record of this patent revealed nothing. This land was located in the then town-the whole shall be paid, and on the payment of the whole they shall hold the same to them, their heirs and assigns forever,—I also give to my son Henry the bay horse which he took from home—and unto my son Lewis I give the gray mare which he took from home and the wagon and all other articles which I gave them from home they shall hold in partnership—I give unto my son John the sum of fifty dollars which is to be considered in lieu of the horse and other articles which I have given unto my other sons which said fifty dollars shall be allowed him in the first payment which shall come due on his land.

I give unto my daughter Susanna who is intermarried with Abraham Lancer the South West quarter of Section number four in the Eleventh township and Eighth range, which she shall have and hold to herself, her heirs and assigns forever. Although it is my wish and desire that the said Lancer do the shoemaking for myself and wife during our natural life, if we find him the leather.

"I give and bequeath unto my four daughters viz: Catherine who is intermarried with Philip Henney, Elizabeth, who is intermarried with Jacob Fouse [12], Mary who is intermarried with Christopher Henney, and Christina who is intermarried with John Fouse [13]—each of them four hundred dollars which shall be paid them by my Executors out of my estate so soon as it can be collected, which shall be paid equally, that is to say every dollar collected at one time, shall be equally divided between them, until each of them shall have received the sum of four hundred dollars.

"It is my will and desire that my loving wife Sibilla shall have, during her natural life, the dwelling house in which I now dwell, the springhouse, stable, garden and all other improvements and the inclosed land from my southerly fence to run northward to the crossing of the second run or rivulet and contain about three acres,—It is also my will that after my decease my son Abraham give unto my loving wife her maintainance in the following manner, to wit, to give her annually fifteen bushels of good wheat, five bushels of rye, twenty bushels of corn, ten bushels of oats, twenty five pounds of good scutched flax, ten bushels of potatoes, one hundred pounds of good pork, fifty pounds of good beef, twenty pounds of sugar,—hay for one cow, to be delivered on her stable, all the above articles to be delivered at her house,—he is also to furnish her with a good sufficiency of firewood ready cut to be laid on the fire or in the stove, and to be delivered at her house and to be continued so to do during her natural life.

"It is also my will that three hundred dollars of money be left outstanding during her life and that my Executors pay her annually the interest thereof and if the said interest is not sufficient for her, the Executors shall be bound to collect and pay her of the principal;—I also give and bequeath unto her all my household goods and moveable effects of which I may be possessed at my decease, all my cattle, sheep and hogs and the live stock belonging to me,—I also give her a small debt which is now owing to me by John Fouse [13],—my son Abraham has my stock of bees on the shares—now it is my will that he give her annually the third of the honey and wax during her life—I have two large Bibles and two other large books which it is my will that she have them during her life and at her decease they are to revert to my children, and all other (of) my household and kitchen furniture, beds and bedding, which shall be left at the decease and is not otherwise disposed of, shall be equally divided among her children or their legal representatives by my Executors and the house and land shall thenceforth belong to my son Abraham, his heirs or assigns.

"Further it is my will, that after all and singular the legacies and bequeathes before mentioned are distributed and divided so as aforesaid and anything should remain that, in that case such residue shall be equally divided among all my sons and daughters aforesaid or their lawful heirs.

"And lastly, I appoint my son Abraham and John Fouse my Executors of this my last will and testament, hereby revoking all wills, legacies and bequeathes by me heretofore made, allowing this and no other to be my last will and testament. In witness whereof—I the said Abraham Miller have to this will, set my hand and seal, dated the sixteenth day of August in the year of our Lord, Eighteen hundred and twenty three.

ABRAHAM MILLER (Seal).

Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said Testator as his last Will and Testament in the presence of us who in his presence and at his request have subscribed as witnesses.

\textbf{[11] CATHARINE\textsuperscript{3} FOUSE}, daughter of [2] Nicholas\textsuperscript{2} and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse, was born September 5, 1790. April 14, 1811, at the Fouse homestead in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, she married \textit{John Philip Garner} of Woodcock Valley, same county, born September 1, 1790; son of \textit{John Michael} and \textit{Catharine (Seiss) Garner}, and brother of John Matthew Garner, who married Mary Brumbaugh ([E 18] \textit{Brumbauch Families}, pages 424-430, in which is a summary of "The Garner Family"). Soon after their marriage they moved into Woodcock Valley, same county, upon a farm which her husband bought from his brother John Michael Garner for $494.50, being about one mile north of where the village of Marklesburg (James Creek Post Office) was later established. Here they prospered and there seemed to be a bright future before them; but, alas, the storm of life overtook them on Christmas eve, 1824, when their buildings were destroyed by fire. Mr. Garner was a powerful worker, being a model of physical strength and endurance, as well as a good manager; but the fright, together with the loss of property, caused him to loose his natural energy and manliness of purpose. He withdrew from business interests, and Mrs. Garner naturally and modestly assumed the control and management of the family and farm. She admirably succeeded in training the children to correct habits of life. Mr. Garner did many chores on the premises, and for a number of years made his own shoes. After the infirmities of age came upon the parents, all their children being married, they disposed of the homestead to their son-in-law John Acker [30], in 1868, and made their home with their son William [38] in Morrison's Cove. When they vacated the farm it was well equipped with buildings. The red stone dwelling house, frame barn, wagon shed, weave house, wash house, two story stone spring house, wood house, blacksmith shop, pig pen and cave constituted the improvements at the eastern end of the farm; and at the central part of the farm stood the red house erected in 1854. The frame barn was built in 1848, the sons Frederick [34] and Adam [35] did the carpenter work.

These aged parents were not permitted to remain very long at their latest home. Grim death took Mrs. Garner in December 1870, aged 80 years, and Mr. Garner followed her to the Great Beyond in July of the next year, aged 81 years. They were both laid to rest in the old church grave-yard on the Fouse premises already named. They were members of the German Reformed Church, and lived and died in that faith.

John Philip Garner, above mentioned, was a son of John Michael Garner, Sr., who was born at Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1728. He came to America with his parents at the age of 10 years, according to tradition. The parents must have emigrated to America in 1739 and landed at Baltimore, Maryland, in the fall of the same year, and it took them six months to cross the ocean. In those early days there were no records kept at Baltimore of the date of landing, name of the ship, nor of the captain, nor the number of passengers carried; at least none have been preserved.

After the landing at Baltimore, they emigrated to Sharpsburg, then Frederick County, Maryland, and settled in that neighborhood, engaging in farming. We have not yet been able to learn the given names of the parents of John Michael Garner, Sr.

John Michael Garner, Sr., resided in the neighborhood of Sharpsburg Maryland, where he met Catharine Seiss, a native of Switzerland, and the acquaintance naturally ripened into marriage September 24, 1769. Soon after their marriage they went to housekeeping, and started at farming in the Maryland community. We learn by tradition that their home was near Antietam Creek, and close to where the Battle of Antietam was fought during the Civil War in 1862. Mr. Garner followed farming until the latter part of the War of the American Revolution, when the patriots were much in need of more men. He then felt it a duty to cast his lot with the patriots and accordingly enlisted in a company then recruiting near Funkstown, Maryland, by Capt. Henry Hardman. This company was to replenish a regiment of volunteer infantry recruited some time previous at Hagerstown, Maryland. Mr. Garner enlisted as a private, with other German citizens and patriots, to fight for liberty. They served with their company and regiment, and participated in several engagements and fought with distinction to the close of the war. After the victory was won and freedom proclaimed, they were honorably discharged and mustered out. After Mr. Garner’s return home, he again continued to farm until the fall of 1785. He concluded he could better his condition by leaving Maryland, and by going to the wilds of Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, where he could buy land much cheaper. Accordingly, they started that fall by the old Chambersburg and Bedford Road, now Turnpike, as far as Bloody Run, now Everett, where they turned north following Tussey’s Mountain on the east side until they reached Hopewell Township (now Penn), Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, in Woodcock Valley, where they settled on a farm one and one-fourth miles north of where the village of Marklesburg and James Creek Post Office afterward were situated. Later he purchased the pre-emption and improvement right to the tract of land on which they lived; pre-empted by Robert Whitner, containing 279 acres and 59 perches and allowances. On the twentieth of June, 1794, he paid to John Penn, Sr., and John Penn, Jr., £112 and 5 shillings for the deed of patent for this tract of land which was recorded August 19, 1794, in the County of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, in Deed Book “D”, page 248, in the name of “Michael Galding” in the place of John Michael Garner.

On this property they labored and reared their family of seven children, five sons and two daughters. The town of Huntingdon was their principal market, twelve miles distant, where everything they wished to market had to be hauled by teams. It was their principal place of transacting business. They improved and enjoyed this homestead as a home to the times of their death. Their remains rest in what is now known as “The Frank Graveyard,” about one and one-fourth miles north of the village of Marklesburg, Pennsylvania, on the public road leading to Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

George Garner died March 18, 1911, aged 89 years, 4 months and 22 days, and rests in the Lutheran Cemetary, near the village of Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. The farm is occupied by his son Winfield Scott Garner [292]. Many of the descendants continue to live in that community, while the majority of them are widely scattered over the United States. The Garner, Brumbaugh and Fouse connections are of much interest to many of the relatives. While the marriages appear much intermingled, yet there is not a single couple in consanguinity, or closely allied blood.

John Michael Garner, Sr., and Catharine (Seiss) Garner, had five sons and two daughters; all married and had families; viz., John Garner, the oldest son, married Mary Fread about 1796. They were blessed with nine children; Catherine, John, Michael, Matthew, Jacob, Philip, Susan, Mary and Henry Garner. The second son, John Michael, Jr., on the sixteenth day of December, 1800, married Catherine Acker. They had fourteen children: Elizabeth, Mary, Susanna, (who married Adam Fouse [17], April 3, 1828), Catherine, Barbara, Margaret, Magdalene, George, John, Michael, Philip (and a twin not named), Henry and Jacob Garner. John Matthew Garner, third child, on August 12, 1810, married Mary Brumbaugh (a sister to Grandmother Fouse). They had six children: Catherine, Susan, Elizabeth, John, George and Samuel Brumbaugh Garner. Susan Garner, fourth child, married Daniel Stouffer. They had nine children: Elizabeth, Catherine, Jonathan, Martha, Mary, Daniel, Nancy, Jacob and Frances Garner. Anna Mary Garner, fifth child, married Jacob Grubb, and they had ten children: Elizabeth, Abraham, Andrew, Catherine, Susan, Mary, Jacob, Samuel and John, (twins) and Sarah Garner. George Garner, the sixth child, married Catherine Smith, and had seven children: Elizabeth, Henry S., Hannah, Solomon, David S., Catherine and Andrew Garner. John Philip Garner, the seventh child, on April 14, 1811, married Catharine Fouse [11] (third daughter of Nicholas Fouse [2] and Margaret Brumbaugh Fouse). They had twelve children: Jonathan, Elizabeth, Margaret, Sarah Daniel, Frederick, Adam, Benjamin, Philip, William, Michael F. and Catherine Garner. John Michael Garner, had sixty-seven grandchildren.

The descendants of these families in general are upright, faithful and God-fearing people; and, as far as we know, were loyal to our government when the South rebelled, and when President Abraham Lincoln called for volunteers to put down the rebellion. About forty-two of these descendants volunteered, and bore arms in defense of their country. They were faithful and true soldiers, and did their duty. Some were left dead on the battlefields, some died in hospitals, some were captured and died in Southern prisons, while others had the privilege of returning to their homes to enjoy the freedom and liberty of this country for which they fought.
Gottfried Frey is described as having received a patent for, when the former purchased some adjoining tracts he took out, in 1763, a patent for 450 acres.

Why a new patent if the first was valid; and observe how close the date to that when Gottfried discovered the necessity of procuring a patent. This explains why there is no evidence of any sale of Tobias' Teal estate, and also shows what Gottfried was doing in the interval between his marriage and 1762; doubtless working on his father's tract during the latter's lifetime, continuing working on it for the benefit of the widow, and after her death acquiring the same by agreement with the heirs and perfecting of the title.

Gottfried seems to have been the originator of the real estate business in the vicinity of York. As early as 1763 he laid out all of his ground fronting on Market (then High) street, into building lots. These lots began at a point nearly opposite the present Broad street, and extended to the present Harrison street, a distance of over 4,800 feet, along the then Great Road to Wright's Ferry, now East Market street, and running in depth Southwardly to Low (now King) street. There appear to have been 74 of these lots, with a frontage of 65 feet each, of which some were unsold at the time of Gottfried's death. All of them were sold subject to the payment of ground rents, to Gottfried or his heirs, a common thing at that time, when all land paid an annual ground rent to the Penns.

The first lot sold, apparently, was No. 12, to Mathias Sitler, on October 1, 1763, for a ground rent of 30 shillings, and which later was sold to Andrew Nebinger; in 1765 lot No. 10 was sold to Joseph Updegraph, and according to the description in the deed Lot No. 9 then belonged to Baltzer Zurnewalt, and No. 11 to Gottlieb Ziegle.

The Stone House. It is likely that when Gottfried first took to himself a wife their dwelling was the settler's rude log cabin, for which material was plenty and labor easily provided. Later on in life, perhaps only 2 Deed Book D5. 2 Deed Book 21 210.

[12] JACOB² FOUSE, son of [2] Nicholas² and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse, was born November 7, 1792. June 21, 1814 he married Elizabeth Miller in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, born May 31, 1789; daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Clapper) Miller. Soon after their marriage they moved to Ohio, and settled on the west side of Congress Lake, part of Southwest Quarter, Section 3, Lake Township 12, Range 8, Stark County, fourteen miles north of Canton. They were pioneers, cleared a farm in the forest, and lived there throughout their lives. Both parents were members of the Reformed Church at Uniontown, Ohio. Jacob died May 2, 1845, and Elizabeth died April 8, 1866 (Plate 8).

JOHN\(^3\) FOUSE, son of [2] Nicholas\(^2\) and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse, was born November 12, 1794. March 12, 1817, he married Christina Miller, a sister of [12] Jacob's\(^3\) wife, Elizabeth Miller, and daughter of Abraham and (2) Sibilla (Lowry) Miller; born March 17, 1801. Soon after their marriage, they also emigrated to Ohio. They began housekeeping in the original log house, erected by her brother Abraham Miller on the Miller homestead, where they lived nearly one year. During this time, Mr. Fouse selected part of Southeast Quarter, Section 9, Lake Township 12, Range 8, Stark County, Ohio. He entered his claim, and a patent was granted to him on the eighth day of October, 1818, signed by President Monroe, and Josiah Meigs, Commissioner-General Land Office, for 160 acres (see Plate 9). He then erected a small log house and removed there that fall. They were among the pioneer settlers, and lived twelve miles north of Canton. They were members of the Reformed Church at Uniontown, Ohio (Plate 5).

WILLIAM\(^8\) FOUSE [2] son of Nicholas Fouse\(^2\) and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse) was born May 29, 1797. August 6, 1818 he married (1) Susan Bowers,\(^a\) born in Blair County, Pennsylvania, October 19, 1797; daughter of Peter Bowers. After marriage they moved to the "mountain tract," in the spring of 1819, and he there reduced the forest, cultivated the soil, and also kept a small general store for the farmers of the neighborhood. He resided on a farm five miles south of Williamsburg, Blair County Pennsylvania, and was the owner of several farms. He was prosperous, a man of ability, and was noted for his strength.

Susan died June 19, 1850.
March 7, 1852, William\(^8\) married (2) Susan Keely, born February 20, 1798, and died June 27, 1858. August 28, 1859, he married (3) Elizabeth Longenecker; and the latter died January 6, 1878, aged 72 years (Plate 10).

Whether Gottfried himself took any part in the War of the Revolution, is uncertain. The records show that Godfrey Frey was Captain of a militia company from 1777 to 1783; one of the militia who arrested British prisoners and brought them to the stockade; and Captain of second company, 3d Battalion in 1782. But the dates 1782 and 1783, being after his death, make it more than probable that this refers to his son Godfrey. Being fifty-three years old at the outbreak of the Revolution, it is likely that he took no active part; but that in spirit and enthusiasm he was on the side of liberty can justly be inferred from the fact that the three of his sons able to bear arms were in more or less active service.

His Last Days. It was undoubtedly the existence or threatened approach of the illness that proved to be his last, that moved Gottfried, on the 8th day of February, 1782, to make the following will:

In the Name of God Amen. WHEREAS I lived to be old and also sick, yet in Rood under understanding and faculties of mind therefore I call to mind my end and order as follows:

My soul I commend to my Creator & Redeemer and my body to the earth in sure hopes that at the great Judgement-Day the same will he raised and united again with the soul. Therefore my desire is to be buried in an honest and Christian manner.

Concerning my worldly estate which I have acquired through the blessing of God I make the order and division in the following manner.

1—All my just debts and funeral expences shall be justly paid.

2—I bequeath unto my Wedded House-Wife Margaret her seat and Dwelling in my Mansion as long as she liveth. Further all the Grain in the Barn and on the loft. Further the Grain which is sown out for the ensuing year. Further all the meat which I had slaughtered for the use of the Family. Further the Hemp and Flax. Further her Bed with what belongs thereto. [15] FREDERICK FOUSE, son of [2] Nicholas and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse, was born April 27, 1800. He married Catharine Acker July 4, 1821, and she was born October 10, 1797; daughter of Leonard Acker. Frederick was a farmer and blacksmith, and prospered. In 1830 he built on his farm one of the first sawmills in that locality. In 1859 he also built a grist mill about 15 rods below the sawmill; both on Clover Creek, and both of decided convenience and benefit to the public.

Frederick and his wife lived on the old homestead farm throughout life. They and their family united with the Reformed Church (Plate 11).

[16] THEOBALD FOUSE, son of [2] Nicholas and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse was born December 26, 1802, on the original Fouse homestead, elsewhere described and illustrated (Plate 4). He was strong, energetic and active in his discharge of the duties devolving upon a large family operating a farm in those early days.

Early in life he learned by precept and example the lessons of obedience, industry, helpfulness and uprightness. Moreover, the religious life of the home produced a moulding influence on his plastic soul. From childhood he was piously inclined. Consciousness of the higher and better life was awakened by the home life and teaching, together with the fervent preaching of the gospel. It is generally understood that at a very tender age he had ministerial proclivities.

Presumably he was about 14 years of age, when he was received into full communion with the Reformed Church through the rite of confirmation by the Rev. John Dietrich Auran. Under the earnest and efficient instruction of this servant of God, in addition to his being taught the catechism by his devout father, he was well rooted and grounded in the doctrines and duties of the Christian religion. He therefore seems to have had rather a clear conception of what was involved in becoming responsible for his own religious life. The knowledge of the sacred scriptures and of Christian duty which he thus acquired in his boyhood was of great practical benefit to him later in life. His school advantages were limited to about three months of instruction in the German schools, and possibly the same period was spent in the English schools. Not being satisfied with these school facilities, he assiduously applied himself to studies in his parental home. No doubt it was a good Providence that selected this particular locality as his habitation in early life. It is true he was not blessed with educational and social advantages, such as children in the city enjoy, but he had natural environments especially conducive to the development of true manhood. The material world, as a book, was open before him. Here he could drink in knowledge as he could not from the printed page, or in the recitation room. Here he had representations and demonstrations of God's wisdom and power. The parental home being at the base of Tussey Mountain afforded him the opportunity of witnessing enrapturing and inspiring phenomena, such as draperies of shifting clouds and fog which the great Creator hung around its summit, or the awe inspiring lightning and fury of the storms. Cultivated fields, tangled woods, the ceaselessly restless streams, the cheery songs of birds, and many other objects made their impress on the young, susceptible mind. All these combined facilities and natural advantages moulded a good Christian character.

When a young man he found remunerative employment throughout the year. General farm work was his occupation in summer, and cutting cord wood for charcoal furnaces in the vicinity, during the winter. His daily work did not so absorb his mental energies as to retard his growth in grace. Spiritual and intellectual progress was not only continued, but also stimulated and energized by taking an active part in Christian work.
THE THIRD GENERATION

His custom was to attend and participate in the midweek cottage prayer meetings, as well as those held on the Sabbath. Attendance at these services would occasionally necessitate miles of travel. He was not satisfied with reading a portion of the sacred scriptures at these meetings, but to the best of his ability he would explain God's word, and conclude with earnest exhortations to consecration to the service of the blessed Master. In this way his ability as a public speaker came to be recognized, and it was the heart-felt conviction of many people that Theobald should become a minister of the Gospel.

He was married March 25, 1823, to Nancy Shontz, born October 9, 1804; daughter of Christian Shontz, born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and Margaret (Huber) Shontz. They commenced housekeeping on part of the old Fouse homestead. As before stated, Theobald and Frederick jointly conducted the farm until it was divided in the purchase from their father January 1, 1825. These brothers continued in ownership of the several farms until the fall of 1832, when Frederick bought his brother's portion of the original farm, and Theobald purchased a farm of 216 acres in Woodcock Valley from Thomas Jackson for $3,000, adjoining the farm of his father-in-law, Christian Shontz. It was on the east side of Tussey Mountain, and in a direct line only about one and one-half miles from the place of his birth. In the spring of 1833 they moved to this farm which was situated on the east side of his father-in-law's farm, and one and a half miles south of his sister Catharine's home.

His marriage, although a memorable event in the history of his life, did not so modify his plans for the future as to cause him to turn a deaf ear to the earnest cry for his services in the holy ministry. It was convenient to enter upon housekeeping under his parental roof, where the studies so auspiciously begun were further prosecuted. Under the guidance of the Holy Spirit the desire to become a Gospel minister was intensified. Not only his friends, but also his pastor, the Rev. Mr. Aurandt, who furnished him with such suitable literature as was at his command, encouraged him to heed what seemed to be an irresistible call. Father Aurandt, however, entered into rest (April 24, 1831) before this earnest spiritual son was far enough advanced to become his immediate successor in the pastoral office. Here now was a shepherdless flock. Who should lead them into the green pastures and by the still waters of God's grace? To this beginner in theological studies this circumstance presented the call with tremendous force.
FOUSE FAMILIES

At this date it cannot be determined what the leading motive of this move into Woodcock Valley was, but it seemed providential. He entered an open door of usefulness in that community. He became an important factor, especially in the kingdom of the blessed Lord, as the subsequent pages will indicate. From the very beginning of his settlement in this locality his presence as a Christian worker was felt. Amidst the cares and labors on his farm he managed to devote some time to the preparation of work in the Lord’s vineyard. Occasional trips were made on horseback to Alexandria, fifteen miles distant, to receive instruction from the Rev. Moses Kieffer, the young and efficient pastor of the Water Street charge. Being an apt and diligent student in both the college and the seminary from which he graduated, Mr. Kieffer was evidently qualified to map out a course of study as well as to impart knowledge.

Mr. Fouse through the valuable assistance thus obtained, could study to advantage, and he made progress in the studies assigned. Accordingly at the annual meeting of Mercersburg Classis at Bedford, Pennsylvania, in July, 1842, he made application for license to preach the Gospel. Having sustained a satisfactory examination by the committee his request for license was granted. It is said at the time the Rev. B. S. Schneck congratulated the Reverend Kieffer, saying, “Your pupil gave a good account of himself.”

The ordination and installation was held the first Sunday in October, 1842, in the Old Stone Lutheran Church about two miles north of Mr. Fouse’s house and near the site of the village of Marklesburg, laid out a few years later. The committee conducting this impressive service consisted of the following brethren: Reverends Moses Kieffer, Jacob Ziegler, and Christian Winebrenner.

This servant of the Lord had almost reached the fortieth milestone in life’s journey before entering upon what he conceived to be his real mission in the world. Many a one, being for years handicapped as he was in the course of preparation, would have abandoned all aspirations in that direction, and permanently adopted a pursuit requiring less mental preparation. But was not this delay of a disciplinary character? It certainly helped to develop patience, determination, faith and a steadfastness of purpose. During this period of qualification in theological studies, he engaged in practical work, such as visiting and praying for the sick and conducting prayer meetings. Hence in some particulars he entered upon his ministerial work better equipped in actual experience than many who have both a collegiate and a seminary training. At the outset he could appear before an audience to officiate at pulpit and altar with remarkable composure. This preacher of the Gospel had the distinction of entering upon his pastoral duties without a change of residence. Immediately after his installation he took up the work incident to the ministerial office, with a deep sense of its magnitude, on the one hand, and of his inefficiency on the other. But there was a firm reliance on Divine strength and guidance. His pastoral field was composed of four preaching points: Russell's and Grove's in Woodcock Valley, on the east side of Tussey Mountain, and Beavertown and Woodberry, in Morrison's Cove, on the west side. To this charge he soon added four more regular congregations: Marklesburg, or his home congregation, the Ridge congregation in Woodcock Valley, and two in Morrison's Cove, viz.—Mt. Pleasant and Sharpsburg. Beside serving the above named congregations regularly he often preached at Etriken's school-house, where he gathered a number of members. Soon after his death a regular congregation was established in the latter place, and a church was built to care for the members of that section. He also preached at stated times at Little Illinois, and Paradise Furnace, and Trough Creek Valley. During his pastorate he built four new churches and rebuilt two.

Tussey's Mountain, in 1846, became the dividing line between Huntingdon and Blair Counties. Woodbury, however, is in Bedford County. In the performance of ministerial duties on the west side of the mountain it required considerable traveling. The routes were somewhat circuitous, and some of the roads were decidedly rough, particularly the mountain roads. He crossed this mountain regardless of weather conditions, not only during the day but also at nearly all hours of the night, not fearing the wild animals, such as bears, panthers and wild cats which roamed thereon.

In the early part of his ministry he traveled exclusively on horseback, but toward the close the buggy was oftener used, the road conditions being somewhat improved. In making the circuit from his home to the remote congregations it necessitated about forty miles of travel. In extent of territory it was a laborious field. Nine or ten horses and eight saddles were worn out in the service. At that period of the country's settlement, there was no concentration of population within his pastoral bounds. The people constituting the members of his flock, and adherents of the Reformed faith, were widely scattered. Some of the members were already organized into congregations and had their houses of worship. There was an urgent demand for his services here and there. A prominent feature of his early labors was from time to time to gather together the shepderless at convenient places and preach the Gospel to them, and, where circumstances warranted it, effect an organization. His home community afforded such a strategic point. A number of families of the Reformed household resided within a reasonable distance of his residence. To them and to all others interested a cordial invitation was extended to assemble on his premises for divine service, which was held either in the dwelling-house or in the barn. These meetings proved to be the humble beginning of an energetic and influential congregation.

An encouraging number became charter members of the organization.
Among them there were thrifty people. On the pastor's farm a frame church was erected in 1847, being situated on a little eminence near Marklesburg. The pastor cheerfully donated a plot of ground for this edifice, and for burial purposes, besides generously contributing from his own purse toward the enterprise. His family took pleasure in furnishing the fuel (wood for two ten plate stoves), and performed the duties of janitor without compensation to the end of his ministry.

As here, so elsewhere congregations were organized and churches erected, until the great majority of the members of this charge were provided with houses of worship within a reasonable distance from their homes.
At first he held services in dwelling-houses, barns or school-houses, for the spiritual edification of families desiring his comforting and instructive ministrations. In this way a nucleus of a congregation would be formed and later on an organization effected. Thus he lengthened the cords and strengthened the stakes of Zion, and proved himself to be a great organizer.

Jacob's Church near Grafton was built some years before the congregation was organized. For a while a congregation existed in the Little Valley, Huntingdon County. After a very influential family withdrew from this locality and settled in another part of the charge, this congregation became extinct. This pastoral charge, known as the Woodcock Valley charge, in the latter years of the Reverend Fouse's ministry consisted of Beavertown, East Sharpsburg, and Millerstown congregations in Blair County; and Hickory Bottom, near Woodberry, in Bedford County on the west side of the Tussey Mountain; and Grove's, Marklesburg, Russell's and Jacob's congregations in Huntingdon County, on the east side of the mountain.

In 1864 he reported to Mercersburg Classis five congregations and 519 members. At this date the Russell congregation was not a part of the Woodcock Valley charge. It was detached from this charge and added to an adjoining charge to strengthen it. But this arrangement not proving satisfactory to the members of the Russell church they were restored to their former charge, as they preferred Reverend Fouse to minister to them in holy things.
THE THIRD GENERATION 45

By the time he submitted the last annual statistical report of his charge to Mercersburg Classis (1873) there were eight congregations and a few over 700 members.

In some communities it was the custom for two or three denominations to unite in the erection of a church, but Mr. Fouse managed to build houses of worship without joining with other congregations.

The only union church in the charge was Grove's, and that was built prior to his ministry. The Menonites had a small interest in it, and a few members, but soon quit preaching there, after Mr. Fouse became the regular pastor. Scores and scores of people have wondered how this servant of the Lord who had no education, such as is acquired at the higher institutions of learning, and who had not even a good common school training, could maintain his position as pastor of the same field for a period of thirty-one years, and so acceptably officiate in two languages; for oftentimes the occasion required him to speak both in English and German at the same service, the transition from the one to the other being made without a pause. The only satisfactory explanation is, it was the gift of God. He fully relied on the ever present God who gave him wisdom, knowledge, and language when preaching his sermons, as he never used any prepared notes, but spoke as the Holy Spirit guided him.

The redeeming grace of God was his standard theme. The person, life, work, death, resurrection and ascension of the Christ formed his central subject. Hence in the selection of texts he confined himself almost exclusively to the New Testament. His discourses were practical, and were delivered with great fervor. Frequently he became so earnest and solemn in his presentation of Gospel truths that many in the audience would be moved to tears.

In one respect this eminently useful servant of the Lord had a peculiar position to fill as he had a large circle of his own kith and kin to whom to minister. Amongst his members were his brothers and sisters, father-in-law and his family, nephews and nieces. But he had the profound respect, confidence, and hearty support of all. Being a relative seemed to be much in his favor. His brothers and sisters, together with their children, apparently sought opportunities to be helpful to their pastor in building up the Kingdom.
His throne of power was the pulpit. On account of the territorial largeness of his field, he could not devote time and energy to pastoral visitations, as is the case where there is a concentration of membership. Catechising the young, visiting the sick, and burying the dead made heavy demands on his time and strength. It occurred now and then that his services were required at two different places at the same hour to conduct funeral services. In circumstances such as these, arrangements were usually made for him to officiate at one of the funerals at the appointed hour, and in the case of the other the interment would be made at the time selected, and the funeral service would be held subsequently on a Lord’s Day instead of the regular service.

On funeral occasions his services were often desired outside of his own communion. He was well acquainted with the people. He knew them in the common ways of life; and, being of a deep sympathetic nature, he was peculiarly fitted for comforting the distressed. How often he had to traverse the vast territory over which his charge extended in addition to his regular Sunday services, we have no way of determining.

During the fierce struggle for the preservation of the Union this loyal and patriotic citizen urged his members publicly as well as privately to stand by the government. He deprecated war, but at the same time he felt that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the gospel of freedom and loyalty to the civil authorities. It implies liberty. To be true to the principles enunciated in the sacred Scriptures, he could not do otherwise than encourage his members to defend the Federal government. This involved the consecration of some noble sons on the altar of this country. As a father he divested himself of all feelings of selfishness in the matter of surrendering sons for military duty. No effort was made to spare his own sons. Seven of his sons and two sons-in-law enlisted. Four sons and one son-in-law were in one company. Every section of his charge was represented in the army. The enlistment of so many of his kindred and others under his pastoral oversight multiplied his cares, and gave him additional duties and responsibilities. Two daughters and daughters-in-law with small dependent children were unable properly to operate the farms while their husbands were in the army. They naturally depended on Father Fouse for counsel. His presence and advice in these homes were much desired.

During this civil strife he had many sad duties to perform. A brave son or a valiant husband would fall on the battle-field, another would pass away in a hospital, another in a Confederate prison. The consequence was homes of sadness, and broken hearts were in need of the Balm of Gilead. This venerable pastor’s tender and sympathetic nature was often deeply affected. He officiated at a large number of funerals of soldiers, speaking pathetic words of comfort and consolation. On two similar occasions he had need of other ministers coming to his home, and his home church, to dispense the consolations of the Gospel to him, as two of his noble soldier sons had entered into rest, and in the midst of these sorrows his beloved and faithful companion was called from her sphere of helpfulness to her eternal reward. Her congenial and consoling presence in the home and vicinity was greatly missed.

In making appointments for evening service no hour was mentioned. It was simply “At early candle light.” Candles were then used to illuminate the churches. In the early part of his ministry there were no railroads, hence there was no uniformity of time in some of the rural districts. The people were in the habit of going to evening service at dark.

Two communion services were held annually at each church, one in the spring, the other in the autumn. They were commonly called “Big meetings.” These were seasons of spiritual refreshing, and were largely attended. At times late comers could not gain admittance to the churches.

Prayer-meetings were frequently held before the regular services. The pastor was not expected to be present. This season of prayer and song deepened the spirituality of the people and prepared them to be devout worshippers at the service conducted by the pastor. This feature of the laymen’s work tangibly aided the pastor. The families residing in close proximity to the church gladly entertained the visiting members. The pastor’s home church was especially well attended by members of the other congregations. The injunction of St. Paul, “Use hospitality,” was practiced in his home. Their thirteen beds were frequently occupied. It made no difference whether there were few or many to be provided with bed and board, all were welcome. Not only on such occasions were people well cared for at this hospitable home, but also at any time duty or interest made it necessary for people to be there. Jew and Gentile, rich and poor, friends and strangers there found an open door.

He became, in a certain sense, a benefactor when he purchased about 900 acres of land in one tract, the greater portion of which was covered with timber. It was within two miles of his home farm. No one in the neighborhood seemed to be able or willing to handle this proposition when the land was for sale. After he became the purchaser, he had the tract cut into 6 or 7 lots which were disposed of to accommodate people who desired to provide a home for themselves.

Mr. Fouse was beloved by his ministerial brethren and could affiliate with brethren of other households of faith. He was careful to avoid everything which would wound the feelings of others. The long continuance of his pastoral relation is evidence of the strong hold he had on the affections of his people. He was one of them. They helped to develop him, and he in turn helped to develop them into strong Christian characters. He was the right man in the right place, hence his success.

It was his delight to have ministerial brethren of neighboring charges and professors of literary institutions assist him in his work, which indicates that he was of a generous disposition and wished to have his people enjoy the presence and services of other clergymen.

As he left neither diary nor journal of his labors, it is impossible to give an exact summary of the sermons preached or of the thousands of miles traveled from the time he began his labors until his decease.

The leading statistics are approximately as follows: His ministry extended over thirty-one years; he baptized 900 adults and children; he confirmed 800, besides the reception of members in other ways; funerals, 580; marriages, 350.

He was not largely remunerated for his services, but did the work for the sake of precious souls. His benevolent contributions some years were large, but the more he gave the more he seemed to have.

This remarkably successful worker in the vineyard, after a brief illness, fell asleep in Jesus on Friday, August 22, 1873, aged 70 years, 8 months and 27 days. On the following Lord’s Day his lifeless form was conveyed from his late residence to the church erected on his own premises, and in which he often preached the Gospel of consolation to sorrowful hearts. Not half the people could enter the church. Each of the eight congregations of the charge was largely represented. The deceased was so widely and so favorably known that people regardless of denominational affiliations felt that they had lost a friend, and manifested their respect for and appreciation of the departed by attending the funeral services. The services were in charge of the neighboring ministers of Mercersburg Classis, all of whom participated therein. The principal discourse was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Moses Kieffer of the same Classis. He said he regarded the deceased as his first student in theology. He was chairman of the committee to ordain the departed brother and friend. In his discourse he took occasion to encourage the shepherdless flock to remain steadfast in the faith, and he assured them that the chief Shepherd would in due time, send them an under shepherd to lead, guard and feed them. A deep solemnity pervaded the audience throughout the services. The mortal remains were then gently laid to rest close by the church, in the hope of the general resurrection in the last day. The interest manifested at the grave was likewise deep and impressive.

Within a reasonable time, after this beloved pastor was called from the church militant to the church triumphant, the members of the charge erected a suitable monument to mark the resting place of his body, as a feeble expression of their love for him who so faithfully and zealously ministered to them.

Almost forty years have elapsed since Father Theobald Fouse departed to receive his crown. One by one his family of fifteen children have crossed the narrow stream dividing time from eternity, until only one is left.

As will be observed elsewhere in this volume, one of his sons and two of his grandsons entered the Gospel ministry. The aged, weary father rests from his labors, yet his works follow him. Others are in possession of some of the fruit of his labors, and many precious souls were made happier and better for his having lived and labored (Plate 12).

In the spring of 1829, Adam Fouse purchased the farm of the Samuel Hoover heirs, on the banks of Clover Creek, Huntingdon (now Blair) County, Pennsylvania, two miles south of the farm on which he was reared. "He and his mother were planning that after father and mother moved to their new home grandmother and Aunt Margaret [9] were soon to follow. But on August 8, 1829, by the sudden death of grandmother, all these plans were changed. Father moved the same fall, as had been planned, and took Jonathan with him, and gave him a home and cared for him. Uncle Frederick³ [15] took Margaret³ [9] to his home, thus the two brothers fulfilled their dying mother's request."

Adam³ Fouse and his wife continued living on this farm to the time of their death. By occupation he was a farmer and carpenter, and did his own smithing. He was a man of much ability and a prosperous farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Fouse were consistent members of the Reformed Church, and reared their children in that faith (Plate 13).

CLOVER CREEK GERMAN REFORMED CHURCH

January 2, 1832, the Fouse children and some neighbors met and entered into an agreement to build a German Reformed Church on the old homestead in honor of Nicholas² Fouse [2] and Margaret² (Brumbaugh) Fouse. Frederick³ [15] and Theobald³ [16] agreed to give the ground for the church and graveyard site, besides paying their pledges—the agreement is reproduced, showing the signatures, terms, etc. (see Plates 14 and 15).

"The contract was then given and the church built the same year, 1832. Frederick Fouse then having a sawmill, agreed to furnish the lumber, which was sawed early in the spring and a dry kiln built to dry and season the lumber such as had to be dry. The church was built in the fall as shown in the contract elsewhere. But twenty years later this Gottfried Frey, kindly handed the letter to him, and thus was started correspondence and personal visits which resulted in the discovery of the people whose names are recorded in this section.

Reconciling Tradition and Fact.

To 1133 Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Chaney, 11411 Mrs. Annie Virginia Waters and 11422 Mary Yeakle, the writer is indebted for what little information of Godfrey and his children he has been able to procure. Mrs. Chaney knew that her father was descended from Margaret Frey, and was able to give some information concerning the Koontz family. She also had heard of the tradition that Godfrey came from Freystown and was one of the builders of the Reformed church, which in early times was described as the Dutch Presbyterian church. There had also been told to her the story that Godfrey had fought with Washington, and one of her descendants referred to the fact that history told of a Colonel Fry who accompanied Washington to Fort Duquesne. Miss Yeakle modified this tradition by saying that it was not Godfrey, the father of Sarah Frey, but one of his brothers, who was the military man. The story about the trip to Fort Duquesne, if true, would be fatal to the theory, since was only seven years old when Washington made the attempted journey to Fort Duquesne; but the name of the Colonel Fry who was to have charge of the expedition which never reached the fort was Joshua Fry, of Virginia, described by history as "an English gentleman of worth and education," a man old enough to have acquired a reputation, and answering Washington's own request that the command be given to an elder and more experienced soldier. It is hardly probable that Joshua had a brother who would have been a father as late as 1789, the date of the birth of one of Godfrey's children. Besides, Joshua is described as an "English" gentleman, whereas the father of Margaret and Sarah was of German speech.
Godfrey Frey, of York, fills the military tradition, as amended by the "brother" story, since George Frey undoubtedly saw military service during the Revolutionary period; though not a trip to Fort Duquesne as Colonel commanding, and whether he personally saw or fought under Washington may well be doubted. Returning soldiers often garnish their tales for the benefit of admiring nephews and nieces, and these stories lose nothing by repetition and years, and so the actual war experiences of George Frey, be they much or little, may well have given rise to great stories of sacrifice and heroism. After the foregoing paragraph was in type the writer was fortunate enough to have the opportunity to inspect a copy of the "Biography of Joshua Fry and Census of his Descendants," which is in the Congressional Library at Washington, D.C. The name Godfrey does not appear as a descendant of Joshua, and nothing seems to be known of his brothers. Hence, the connection of the Godfrey Frey of Montgomery County, with the "fine old English gentleman" of Washington's time, is a myth. The reference to the building of the first Reformed (or Dutch Presbyterian, as the Reformed churches were frequently called in those days) Church is fulfilled by the appearance of the name of Godfrey Frey as one of the charter members of the Zion Reformed Church, of York. This may have been either Godfrey or his father Gottfried, since both doubtless were much interested in the erection of the church of their faith. The reappearance of family names is always a sure indication of relationship. Godfrey Frey (of Montgomery County) had a daughter named Margaret, the name of its mother, and Margaret named her only sons Godfrey and George, the latter being the name of the younger brother of 11, who actually was a Revolutionary soldier and evidently the hero of the "soldier Uncle" stories. Mrs. Waters was particularly strong on the tradition that Godfrey Frey had owned the land on which part of Freystown was built, and there was an interest in it for his descendants, as he had... never sold it. So strongly was this tradition impressed on the family that one of them asked the writer whether it was possible to recover any part of it at this time. This, to the mind of the writer, is the most convincing proof of the identity of the Godfrey Frey of Montgomery County, with the Godfrey Frey of York.

We have seen that Godfrey Frey did own fifty acres of such land. There is no deed from him for any land on record, only the recital in a deed between other parties that the tract conveyed adjoined "lands formerly of Godfrey Frey, Jr., now of George Luttman." This was in the days of ground rents, and Godfrey may have thought he was selling his patrimony subject to the payment of such an annual rental, when he perhaps actually sold it outright. He evidently thought that legal proceedings would restore to him his property, a belief which with advancing years would become a settled conviction, to be told and retold to and by his descendants with the additions and exaggerations that always accompany tales of fortunes to come from past ancestors.

It is believed that all these circumstances, some slight in themselves and some of great weight, taken together, furnish irrefutable proof of the identity of the Godfrey Frey, of Montgomery County, as the oldest son of Gottfried Frey, the young emigrant. The common name and religion, the disappearance at one point and appearance at the other, the family names, the military brother, the church building, and, above all, the ownership of land in Freystown, far outweigh the tradition of connection with Joshua Fry, a tradition unsupported by any fact and flatly contradicted by time and the published biography of the man with whom connection was claimed. It is questionable whether many statements made in family histories of descent or connection with persons more than one hundred and fifty years ago are as firmly established by as competent and conclusive evidence as this assertion that the descendants of Godfrey Frey, of Montgomery County, Md., belong in a book of the descendants of Gottfried Frey, of York, Pa.
His Children.

George Andrew Gilbert the writer learned that Godfrey Frey lived in Montgomery County, Md. The United States Census of that county for 1790 records Godfrey Frey in Montgomery County, Md., but mentions no township or district.

In 1800, according to the same authority, he was the only male in the family, with one girl under 16, one under 26 and one female, doubtless his wife, over 45.

The Godfrey Frey of Paradise township, given in the census of 1790, and the Godfrey Frey of Dover township, given in the census of 1800, may have been identical. He may also be the same Godfrey who in 1804 had a daughter Catharine baptized in Zion's Reformed Church, and who married Thomas Metzler's widow.

On September 24, 1782, there was baptized, in Zion's Reformed Church, Salome, daughter of Gottfried and Margaret Frey. This could hardly have been a child of the first Gottfried, owing to his wife being nearly 60 years of age. It probably is the original form of Godfrey, and may refer to 11 Godfrey, or to the Godfrey of Paradise township.

The fact that 11 Godfrey was then in York township has led us to count this Salome as one of his children.

In this connection may be mentioned the fact that Mrs. Waters has a faint recollection of the name Salome as belonging to the family. Her first impulse was that the girl known as "Sally" Frey, and who afterward married Charles A. Galezio, was really named Salome. This, however, is impossible, as the Salome baptized in York in 1782, as the daughter of Gottfried and Margaret, could not have been the Sarah Frey who was born in 1789. But it is highly probable that the name of one of her grandmothers' sisters was more or less frequently mentioned in Mrs. Waters' presence.

No other York County records of any children of this Godfrey Frey can be found. As above stated, the Census of 1800 gives him with one girl under 16, one under 26, and a female, doubtless his...

church became inadequate for the community, and was rebuilt (named Salem’s Reformed Church) in 1853, when all the original Fouse promoters were yet living. The building committee for the new church to be built was Frederick Fouse and Adam Fouse. The new church was built of brick, 40 by 60 feet in size. The building committee then gave a contract to make the brick on the Fouse premises and sold the old church to D. L. Martin for a storeroom and dwelling at Fredericksburg, Pennsylvania, but excepted the floor, joist and pews to put in the basement of the new church. The building committee did its work well. They gave their energy and time, besides each paid $1,000 to help pay for the new church. This church was dedicated in October, 1853. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Henry Harbaugh, D.D. assisted by the pastor, Rev. Theobald Fouse, and Rev. F. A. Rupley, D.D."

"This was a fine country church and large enough to accommodate the people of that growing community. But unfortunately some years later, the stone foundation under one corner gave way and caused a large crack at the north end of the church, which made it unsafe. A congregational meeting was called and the members voted to rebuild the church. The consistory then bought a lot adjoining the old lot but separated from it by the public road, and built the new church on it in 1884. This church was erected during the pastorate of Rev. J. David Miller. The dedication sermon was preached by Rev. I. N. Peightel, assisted by Rev. F. A. Rupley, D.D. and the pastor. This was the third church erected mostly by the Fouse kin inside of fifty-two years. Then all the Fouse promoters were dead except Adam Fouse, who saw the new church completed, and worshipped there three years, when his days were ended. He rests in peace in the old churchyard, and lived to the ripe age of 82 years, 3 months and 4 days."

"The new church was also built of brick, two stories high, and is a fine structure for a country church. In the construction of this church they used most of the material from the old church such as was found to be in good condition, which saved them a lot of money. The building committee for this church was Adam Garner Fouse, Geo. B. Greaser, S. B. Isenberg and John M. Rhodes. In this congregation and six others, comprising the Woodcock Valley charge, Uncle Theobald Fouse, preached from 1843 to 1873; or from his installation until his death, August 23, 1873, aged 70 years, 6 months and 27 days."

"The children in father’s family were all instructed in the Heidelberg catechism and confirmed by Uncle Theobald Fouse during his ministry.
Father was a consistent member of this congregation and was elected an elder at its organization, and held that office until his death, May 5, 1887, the last survivor of this pioneer family to be called to rest. He served as elder in this congregation fifty-five years, and took a great interest in this church and was one among its most cheerful and liberal givers. He was also much interested in home and foreign mission work, and gave assistance to both. We never knew father to be away from church service unless he was away from home, or on account of sickness. He was the leader at prayer meetings (after uncle Theobald moved to Woodcock Valley). He was also Sunday school superintendent for many years. He reared his children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. He required all his children to attend church, prayer meeting, and also Sunday school, while under the parental roof. He never omitted to say grace before meals. He always required the Bible to be read by the children, and had family worship in the evening before retiring. We shall always respect our parents for such Christian training."

"While father could read fairly well in the English language, his prayers were always in German. He was a great lover of his mother tongue. He was kind and indulgent to his children, and was kind and charitable to the helpless and poor. He always took great pleasure in visiting the sick, praying with them, and speaking words of cheer and comfort to them, as well as showing his sympathy."

"Nicholas Fouse [2] and his wife Margaret rest in the lot purchased by the former in 1809. Four of our uncles and aunts are laid to rest in the old churchyard on the Fouse premises, now in Blair County, viz:—Margaret [9], Catharine [11], William [14], and Frederick [15]; Father is also buried there; Theobald [16], and Jonathan [18] in the Reformed Churchyard near Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania; Jacob [12] and John [13] in the Union Churchyard, Uniontown, Stark County, Ohio; and Elizabeth [10] in the Union Churchyard (Snyder's) near Cairo, Stark County, Ohio.

In most cases husbands and their wives are laid side by side. All graves are marked with marble monuments or tombstones, where they may be seen by future generations." (J. G. F.)

Susanna (Garner) Fouse died April 6, 1870, aged 65 years, 3 months, 16 days (Plate 13).

[21] JONATHAN⁴ MILLER, son of [10] Elizabeth³ (Fouse) Miller and Abraham Miller, was born on the old Miller homestead near Canton, Ohio, September 15, 1818; and on September 19, 1839, married Lydia Cassler, daughter of Lewis and Nancy (Wise) Cassler. Mr. Miller lived on the old homestead for several years after his marriage where his first child was born December 14, 1840. About 1841 or 1842, they moved to a farm which Mr. Miller owned and, about 1847, bought a water power sawmill adjoining his farm; about a year later he erected a more modern mill at this place. About 1850, he sold his farm, but retained the mill, and bought a farm which had belonged to his father-in-law, Lewis Cassler. Mr. Miller undertook various other enterprises, and lost all that he had gained up to that time. He was a born mechanic, and after his losses worked at various occupations with but indifferent success. In 1865, he bought 160 acres of unimproved land in Clinton County, Iowa, and in 1866, with his family, took up his residence there. In the spring of 1869, he sold this land and with his family again set out, this time for Missouri. After traveling by wagon for over 300 miles they arrived at Maryville, in the northwestern part of that state some time in the following June. He rented a farm for two seasons, and in 1871 moved to Easton, Buchanan County, where he opened a blacksmith and repair shop, which business he followed to the time of his death, October 21, 1875. Mrs. Miller lived with her children until her death June 20, 1907 (Plate 16).

[30] ELIZABETH4 GARNER, daughter of [11] Catherine3 (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born November 19, 1814, in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. She spent her early life at the parental home, described elsewhere in this volume. About 1834 she married John Acker, son of Henry and Susanna (Ditch) Acker. They located on the latter's parental home farm close by the Nicholas Fouse homestead. Here they remained until they were removed by death.

They acquired some property in addition to Mr. Acker’s homestead. When Mrs. Acker’s parents were advanced in years, and too infirm to care for themselves, Mr. Acker purchased their farm. He had also other real estate holdings. Elizabeth died January 21, 1874, at the age of 59 years. Her husband died in 1885. They set their children a good example of piety; were devout members of the Beavertown Reformed Church. They were an unassuming couple; they led busy, useful and honorable lives, and were kind and hospitable.

[31] MARGARET4 GARNER, daughter of [11] Catharine3 (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born August 17, 1815, in Woodcock Valley, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, north of where the village of Marklesburg was subsequently located. On March 26, 1835, she was married to Jacob C. Hoover of Morrison’s Cove, born February 26, 1809; son of Samuel Hoover, who was son of Adam Hoover. They began housekeeping in the house at the sawmill near the residence of Mrs. Hoover’s grandfather, Nicholas Fouse. It is quite a coincidence that the two sisters Elizabeth and Margaret should begin housekeeping so closely together. About 1842, Mr. Hoover, whose trade was carpentering, purchased and took possession of a farm four miles north of Martinsburg, on Piney Creek, Huston Township, Huntingdon (now Blair) County, Pennsylvania, and this proved to be their place of residence until their translation from earth to the spirit world. Here they faithfully worked, year after year, performing such duties as are incident to farm life. To some people it might seem to be a monotonous life, but to them it was not so; there was a thrill of joy in the thought that they were doing their duty. Mr. Hoover was born and reared on the banks of Clover Creek two miles south of the original Fouse homestead in Huntingdon (now Blair) County, Pennsylvania, on what was then known as the Samuel Hoover homestead farm, later purchased by Adam Fouse [17]. Mr. Hoover and Mr. John Acker, who married sisters and daughters of John Philip Garner, were the carpenters to build the Reformed Church on the Fouse premises in the year 1832. Mr. Hoover had a fair education and taught subscription school several terms. He took much interest in educating his only son Daniel to become teacher and surveyor.

In 1865, while Mr. Hoover was plowing, he discovered the barn on fire at the far end from the house. A strong wind prevailed, and both barn and house were destroyed. The origin of the fire was a mystery, and it was a heavy loss. Their only son was at the time doing military duty in the United States Army.

Bereft of their only daughter and feeling that they could, to a limited extent, have a daughter’s place supplied, they adopted a girl and later another one. Mrs. Hoover proved herself to be a very kind and indulgent mother to these adopted girls. It was her delight to keep her house in a very tidy condition, and in this particular it would have been hard to find her peer.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover were members of the Beavertown Reformed Church. Mrs. Hoover died March 14, 1885 (69-6-28) and Mr. Hoover died September 12, 1885 (76-6-14).

Their son Daniel, who never resided elsewhere and who had practically taken possession of the homestead while the parents were living, naturally inherited all the property, real and personal.

[32] SARAH Garner, daughter of [11] Catharine (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born September 28, 1817, at the homestead, one mile north of the present site of Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. She was joined in holy wedlock with Henry Peightel of the vicinity of McConnellstown, Pennsylvania, in 1836. They settled a mile south of the latter place and continued to reside there until after Mr. Peightel died.

Although the parents had limited school advantages, they took a deep interest in the education of their children and afforded them the best public school and social advantages obtainable in the neighborhood. The school house being situated within about two minutes' walk of the house, neither distance nor inclement weather was a hindrance to their attendance. Proximity to the school house was an inducement to the teachers to apply at the Henry Peightel home for boarding during the term, and their applications were favorably considered. Here the children were practically fitted for life's duties. The parents being devout members of the Reformed Church at McConnellstown, naturally had their children attend upon the services of God's house at that place and also go there to Sunday school, and all became members of the Reformed Church.

The Christian home life, together, with the preaching of the Gospel and the instruction imparted in the Sunday school, greatly helped to develop Christian character. It was in the home more particularly that the mother's influence was manifested. She was devoted to her family; she planned and toiled for them; and she had a sweet, gentle voice.

When, on account of the infirmities of age after her husband's death, she could not superintend the work on the farm, her only son occupying his own farm a few miles distant and all the daughters except one being established in their own homes, she with the youngest daughter Lydia vacated the farm and moved to McConnellstown, Pennsylvania. She resided there until she fell asleep in Jesus, October 1, 1911, at the ripe age of 94 years and 3 days.

During the last days of her earthly pilgrimage her memory was impaired and eyesight failed her. Notwithstanding this she was exceedingly patient. It is remarkable that a person could attain to such a great age with only a few gray hairs. Her daughter Lydia Ida [163] faithfully ministered to her in the declining years of life (Plate 19.)

[33] DANIEL GARNER, son of [11] Catharine (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born November 13, 1819. June 22, 1841, he married (1) Margaret Upperley, who was of German parentage. They started housekeeping in the original Nicholas Fouse mansion, where they lived for several years. He then moved to Frederick Fouse’s farm at Beavertown where he lived and farmed until 1851. He then sold his farming utensils and moved to the sawmill house that was built for Grandmother Fouse in 1826, where he lived one year, then emigrated to the state of Wisconsin, Grant County, and farmed there for several years. Then he bought a farm in Fennimore Township, twelve miles north, and farmed there until he became disabled, when he rented this farm and returned to South Lancaster where he lived to the time of his death.

“He was a man highly esteemed, his life honorable and upright; his life at home and abroad was always the same, ever ready to do good. His home was always open to all, whether rich or poor. His early religious training was a solace and a comfort. He was never so happy as when his children and grandchildren were gathered around his amply provided table, and never too tired to give thanks to his Creator for all of his manifold blessings.”

“There was no German church near, and soon a few were gathered together and a Presbyterian Church was established. Father’s house was the haven of rest for the ministers. Sometimes they held services in our house, but later built a small chapel west of us at what was called ‘Hurricane’. It was built on Uncle Benjamin Garner’s land, and a cemetery near by in which five of my uncles’ small children were buried, three dying with cholera. Later father, mother, three sisters and two brothers united with the Congregational Church of Lancaster. Father, mother and sister Angeline [170] were buried from church within 3 years.”

“When the Civil War broke out my brother Dawald [165], aged 19, enlisted; with father’s consent and blessing left for the scene of war and bloodshed. Father was a staunch Republican.” (Letter from Mariah J. (Garner) Clifton [169]).

Mrs. Margaret Garner died May 6, 1852. Mr. Garner married (2) Elizabeth Sorrick, born April 3, 1828; daughter of Peter and Catharine Sorrick. Elizabeth died April 16, 1896, and Daniel Garner died April 11, 1899 (Plate 20).

[34] FREDERICK GARNER, son of [11] Catharine (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born near Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, March 7, 1822. He spent his early life on the parental home farm. April 17, 1845, he married Margaret Sorrick of Blair County, daughter of George Sorrick. They began housekeeping at Marklesburg, their dwelling house being possibly the third house erected in that village, and on the lot adjoining the one belonging to Adam Garner. About 1853, they disposed of their property and moved to Williams County, Ohio. On account of climatic conditions they did not long remain there, but returned to Pennsylvania and settled in the vicinity of Mrs. Garner's parental home. Margaret died March 28, 1855.

January 11, 1857, Mr. Garner married (2) Fanny Shissler, who lived near Sharpsburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania. In 1859 Mr. Garner moved with his family near Louisville, Ohio. After some years of residence there he sold his farm and purchased one close by Canton, Ohio, and in this locality he spent the remainder of his days.

After his second wife was called away by death, Mr. Garner married again, on September 14, 1886, (3) Miss Caroline Shock, born in Stark County, Ohio.

Frederick Garner was a carpenter in early manhood, but, after permanently locating in Ohio, his chief employment was tilling the soil. He was industrious, honest and kind hearted, and a life long member of the Reformed Church. He died at the ripe age of 85 years, in September 1907: His widow's address is Canton, Ohio.

[179] + Franklin, b November 9, 1858; m Melissa Roath.

[35] ADAM Garner, son of [11] Catharine (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born March 17, 1824, at the homestead near the site of Marklesburg in Hopewell, now Penn Township, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. He was baptized April 19, 1824 by Rev. J. D. Aurandt, the sponsors being his Uncle Adam Fouse and Susanna Garner his espoused wife. He spent his childhood and youth on the home farm. His educational advantages were very limited. At that period of our country's history, the school term was short and the branches taught were orthography, reading, writing and arithmetic. The lack of a knowledge of books was in some measure supplemented by home training. Home is the first and most important school of character. Here the young learn cheerfulness, patience, self-control and the spirit of service and duty. He learned to speak the German and English languages. This energetic young man made choice of the carpenter's trade. Environments had much to do in turning his mind to this occupation. The village of Marklesburg, laid out in 1844, one mile south of the parental home, became an inviting field for mechanical labor. Frederick and Adam Garner, two enterprising brothers were early on the ground as mechanics and purchasers of lots for dwelling houses. They selected adjoining lots, the latter's deed was dated March 28, 1845. Adam erected a substantial frame dwelling house which is now owned and occupied by Henry H. Summers.

September 11, 1845, Adam Garner was united in matrimony with Catharine Summers, born May 23, 1823, see [61], daughter of Henry and Sarah (Boyer) Summers, by Rev. Theobald Fouse. This young couple came from parental homes where industry, honesty, economy and the love of God were impressed on the mind by precept and example. Hence in making the transition from these homes to their own they had rather a clear conception of the obligations and responsibilities of home life. The housewife was diligent and faithful in her sphere, as was the mechanic in his.

One day in February, 1851, while shingling a roof a raw wind prevailed, his body became benumbed by cold. This exposure was followed by typhoid fever which ended the earthly career of a modest, industrious, and useful man, and a consistent Christian, March 9, 1851 (26 years, 11 months and 23 days). His body was laid to rest in the graveyard connected with the Marklesburg Reformed Church. Of this church he was an humble and faithful member. He and his brother Frederick were the contractors for the church edifice, built in 1847. The latter received as his share $57 and the former $50. The results of Adam's toil can be given approximately. He with his brother Frederick erected four houses and one barn besides the church above mentioned, and by his own labor or supervision six barns, three dwelling houses, several shops and stables—he also made furniture.

The desolate widow, having dependent children to care for, was under the necessity of adjusting domestic affairs in accordance with existing conditions. While the children were small it seemed expedient to change the place of residence several times, but not far from Marklesburg.

After twelve years of widowhood, September 24, 1863, she was joined in matrimony to Jacob Garner (a first cousin of her first husband and as his third wife), born November 7, 1821, son of John Michael and Catharine (Acker) Garner. This resulted in moving from Marklesburg to near Williamsburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania. In this home she performed her duties faithfully and satisfactorily for almost 18 years. She fell asleep June 11, 1881, aged 58 years and 19 days. Interment was made at the Lutheran Church four and one-half miles south of Williamsburg, Pennsylvania. She was a devout member of the Lutheran Church from her youth.

[36] Benjamin\(^4\) Garner, son of [11] Catharine\(^3\) (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born May 11, 1826, in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. On March 2, 1848, he married Catharine Sorrick, born July 23, 1826, in Woodbury Township, Blair County, Pennsylvania; daugh-
In fact, Mr. Turner has been told that there was at least one daughter, but no one sees able to give her married name, if she was married, or to locate any of her descendants.

Daniel is said to have been born in Washington County, Md., which lies across the Potomac river from Shepherdstown. Whether this indicates a removal or whether Shepherdstown was at that time the postoffice for that portion of Washington County the writer is unable to say.

John's birthplace is unknown. Abraham died in 1799, as said about 55 years, as he was over 21 years old when his father died in 1767. After his death Tulianna went to Baltimore, doubtless because her brother Samuel was living there at that time, and died in that city. The time of her death and place of burial is unknown.

Both John and Daniel were the fathers of what in these days would be considered large families, and it is probable that the pages of this book would be considerably increased in number if the other children of Julianna could have been discovered; but the writer felt that in justice to his chances of finishing the work, and out of consideration for those who were awaiting its appearance he could not afford to wait any longer for what might never be found.

The same confusion of spelling the name appears here as with the Frey family. The writer has followed what he believes to be the better orthography, save in those few instances where he knows the other methods prevailed.

NOWING

John to be the older of the only two children of Julianna about which the writer has been able to learn anything, he is here treated as the first child of 15. It is just possible that the word "knowing," used above, is too positive a term; but as John's first child was born about 1812, while Daniel was married in that year, it looks as if the former might be the elder of the two boys, although it doesn't always follow that the elder child is the first married. The writer has adopted Mr. Turner's order of birth of the two children, believing that he had some good reason for putting them in this way. About all that is known of John is that a number of his children were born in Hagerstown, Md.; that he moved to what was then called Franklintown (now Columbus) Ohio, in 1830, the trip being made in wagons. His wife's maiden name was Elsie Martin. When he died or where he was buried has not been ascertained, nor are either of these facts known concerning his wife. There has been great difficulty experienced in getting information about his descendants. Much of the following, especially that part which only gives names, has been obtained from Mr. Turner, who is still compiling the Hiestand records, and doubtless will do so to the day of his death. The other information has been secured by writing to people whose addresses were obtained either from Mr. Turner or from some one of their relatives. It is given as the best the writer was able to do under the circumstances. So little data has been furnished that even the order of birth of his children is uncertain, the succession given by Mr. Turner being manifestly erroneous in some instances. As numbered herein it is approxi-
ter of Peter Sorrick. Mr. Garner was a member of the German Reformed Church at Marklesburg, Pennsylvania, and his wife was a member of the Lutheran Church on Clover Creek, Pennsylvania. Mr. Garner was a carpenter and followed that trade until about 1854, when they moved to Lancaster, Grant County, Wisconsin, he having bought a farm there. He then followed farming for a number of years. They both united with the Presbyterian church at that place, no church of their persuasion being located there.

In the fall of 1864, Mr. Garner enlisted as a private in Company E, Twentieth Regiment of the Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. He participated in several engagements, noticeably Franklin Creek, Mississippi, and Spanish Fort, Alabama. He was honorably discharged at Galveston, Texas, July 14, 1865.

Some years after his return home he purchased some land near Hickman, Nebraska. Here he farmed for a number of years. His wife died in 1895 of typhoid pneumonia. After his wife’s death, he was afflicted with many infirmities, and was much affected by the loss of his eyesight. Mr. Garner was blessed with earthly goods, and he and his wife did much in the support of the church and charity. He died October 31, 1904. The bodies of himself and his wife rest side by side in the cemetery at Hickman, Nebraska (Plate 21).

Garner turned his attention to tilling the soil. They started housekeeping on a farm belonging to Adam Fouse, Sr., one-half mile north of Rebecca Furnace on Clover Creek, Blair County, Pennsylvania. They continued on this farm until the spring of 1864, when they moved to Iowa, near Davenport, where they lived to the times of their death. Their farm is among the best in the state, in a beautiful plateau near the Mississippi River. Their children inherited the land and now cultivate it. They divided the land and built new buildings, and occupy them for their homes. Mrs. Garner died August 1, 1895, and Mr. Garner died November 11, 1896 (Plate 22).

[38] WILLIAM⁴ GARNER, son of [11] Catharine⁴ (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born December 15, 1831, at the homestead in Woodcock Valley, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. He grew up on the farm engaging in such work as farmers’ boys usually perform. On the twenty-ninth of December, 1853, he married Eve Sorrick of Morrison’s Cove. The distance between the parental homes of this young couple in a bee line would be possibly two miles, but Tussey Mountain being between the said homes made the distance by public road about six miles. Their first experience at housekeeping and operating a farm was on Mr. Garner’s parental home farm. Here they resided and labored for about eight years, when they crossed Tussey Mountain to take possession of the farm of Mr. Garner’s Uncle William Fouse. Their next home was on his Uncle Adam Fouse’s farm, joining the Rebecca Furnace farm, where he farmed until 1866, when he purchased a farm a mile and one-fourth south of the old Fouse homestead. During their residence there, arrangements were made for Mr. Garner’s parents to spend the remainder of their days at his home, but they were not permitted to tarry long in this home. The mother was called to her reward in December, 1880, and the father in July, 1881. Wheat growing in Morrison’s Cove not being so remunerative as some years previously, Mr. Garner decided to go west, and with his family moved to Nemaha County, Kansas, where they purchased a farm and lived there for a number of years. As it will appear on another page, their oldest daughter was the only child who married before the departure of the family for Kansas. They then sold the farm in Nemaha County, and bought another in Jackson County, four miles from Holton, where they have since lived. The farm contains 80 acres, and is of the best land in the state for the production of corn, etc.

William Garner died at his home in Jackson County, Kansas, May 14, 1914 (83 years, 4 months, 23 days) from the effects of old age. He united with the German Reformed Church when a boy, and was a member of that church at death. The body was interred in the cemetery at Holton, Kansas. The widow, three sons and five daughters survive him. Mrs. Garner’s address is Holton, Kansas, R. R. No. 3 (Plate 23).

[39] MICHAEL F.⁴ GARNER, son of [11] Catharine⁸ (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born August 1, 1833, and on April 26, 1862, married (1) Elizabeth S. Showalter. By occupation Mr. Garner was a carpenter but a large part of his life he followed farming. He rented a farm from his Uncle Adam Fouse, north of Rebecca Furnace, where he lived for a number of years. His wife died February 10, 1877. He then abandoned farming and again followed the carpenter trade. March 20, 1880, Mr. Garner married (2) Alice Fenstermaker and then lived for several years in Pleasant Valley in Blair County, Pennsylvania, where he followed his trade. Later he moved to Ohio, on a farm near Canton, where he followed farming to the time of his death, March 4, 1900. Mrs. Garner's address is Canton, Ohio.

To the first union six children were born, viz:

[212] + Adam⁸, b February 15, 1863; m Sarah Knepper.
[213]    Joseph Frank⁸, b April 12, 1865; d February 14, 1866.

[216] + Margaret⁸, b August 23, 1872; m Eli Smith.
[217]    Abraham⁸, b September 9, 1876.

To the second union three children were born, viz:

[218] + James Calvin⁸, b April 20, 1882; m Emma Miller.
[219] + Henry Edward⁸, b December 15, 1885; m Mabel Grace Hershberger.
[220]    Harrison⁸, b February 16, 1889; d August 26, 1892.

[40] CATHARINE⁴ GARNER, daughter of [11] Catharine³ (Fouse) Garner and John Philip Garner, was born May 1, 1835, at the homestead near where Marklesburg (Penn Township, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania), was later located. In December, 1855, she was married to Abraham Myers of the same community, her uncle Rev. Theobald Fouse officiating. The ceremony was performed in the Red House which became the family dwelling house a year or more previous to this occasion. This young couple settled in Marklesburg. Mr. Myers being a carpenter, continued to work at his trade. After some years of residence in this village they moved to Catherine's parental home to take charge of the farm, as all her brothers were located elsewhere and the aged parents could not operate the farm. Here they remained until Mr. Myers by will became the owner of the undivided half of his maternal grandfather's farm. They took possession of this property and subsequently acquired the other half of the farm by purchase. This has been and is one of the most desirable farms in that locality.

Mr. Myers died July 6, 1885. The earning power of the family had begun auspiciously. His plans in the line of business were carried out. Mrs. Myers with the assistance of the family made farming a success. All the children were trained to be industrious, honest and upright.

THE FOURTH GENERATION

The mother like her sisters is a tidy housekeeper. She has lived to see the day that nearly all her children have homes of their own. Mrs. Myers is a member of the Reformed Church at Marklesburg, and all her children in early life became members of the same Church.

The children received the usual education afforded by the public schools of the township in which they resided. They are now rather widely scattered, as will appear elsewhere in this volume.

Mrs. Myers with one daughter continues to occupy the home property. A farmer and his family have possession of part of the dwelling house.

[49] FREDERICK 4 FOUSE, son of [13] John 3 and Christina (Miller) Fouse, was born March 17, 1825. In his early days, he went one session to college at Canton, Ohio, then taught school one winter, which was an assistance to him in training for business. He was a man of ability, had mechanical ingenuity, and was a good business man. He had been elected to fill several offices in his township; was a powerful worker and quick in thought and action. In politics he was a Democrat. On May 4, 1848, he married Elizabeth Gaerte, born November 25, 1827, daughter of Caspar Gaerte (see [86]), and with her occupied his parental homestead for many years. They then settled on a farm near Akron, Ohio, where he died January 13, 1884 (Plate 28).

ELIZABETH (GAERT) FOUSE AND FREDERICK FOUSE [435]
THEO BALD A. ("DEWALT") FOUSE [51].

(From Brumbach Families, copyright 1915.)
[51] THEOBALD ("DEWALT") ADAM⁴ FOUSE, son of [14] William⁴ and Susan (Bowers) Fouse, was born May 9, 1820, and on April 13, 1843, married (1) Margaret Duncan, who was born September 18, 1819, and died May 18, 1849. They resided on a farm on Clover Creek, Blair County, Pennsylvania. There were four children born to this union:

[287] + George W.⁵, b June 29, 1844; d December 13, 1861.
[288] + William Duncan⁶, b December 23, 1845; m Linda B. Knodle.
[289] + Daniel Duncan⁷, b May 23, 1847; m Malinda Bossler.
[290] Rozella⁸, b May 18, 1849; d August 19, 1849.

April 8, 1851, Mr. Fouse married his first wife’s sister, (2) Elizabeth Duncan, born October 18, 1825, and died August 12, 1852. They were daughters of Edward and Susanna Duncan. To this second union one son was born:

[291] + Calvin Sylvester⁹, b December 28, 1851; m Rosanna Fisher.

March 5, 1854, Mr. Fouse married (3) Agnes Greaser, born August 29, 1839, in Germany. To this union were born eight (8) children:

[292] + Anna Malinda⁹, b January 3, 1855; m Winfield Scott Garner.
[293] + Mary Elizabeth⁹, b June 26, 1856; d July 20, 1909; m Charles Winfield Ferry.
[294] + Susan⁹, b August 26, 1857; m William P. Erb.
[295] Martin G.⁹, b November 5, 1859; d August 27, 1901.
[296] Levi R.⁹, b December 18, 1861; d June 28, 1873.
[297] + Mahlon L.⁹, b November 29, 1864; m (1) Anna M. Cooper; m (2) Ella Jane Bear.
[298] + Dewalt H.⁹, b March 6, 1868; m Magdalene Lavina Weisgerer.
[299] + Laura A.⁹, b December 9, 1872.

Mr. Fouse and his wives were members of the Reformed Church, and all are buried at Salem’s Reformed Church at Drab. Their children were all brought up in the faith of the Reformed Church and are all members thereof (Plate 29).

[52] MARGARET⁴ FOUSE, daughter of [15] Frederick⁴ and Catherine (Acker) Fouse, was born September 22, 1822, and on March 2, 1843, was married to Jacob A. Nicodemus who was born December 4, 1819, and died at Foreston, Ogle County, Illinois, May 3, 1887; son of Jacob and ——— (Arlenbaugh) Nicodemus. After her husband’s death, Mrs. Nicodemus continued her residence at Foreston until her death, which occurred in 1906. Both Mr. and Mrs. Nicodemus, as well as their children, were all members of the Reformed Church. The parents are interred at Foreston, Illinois (Plate 30).

Children (13), surname Nicodemus:

[300], [301] Twins and not named.
[302] + Wesley Fouse⁵, b April 26, 1846; m Lucinda Acker.
[303] + Susanna Fouse⁵, b December 25, 1847; m (1) Daniel Acker, m (2) George Bowers.
[304] + Reuben Fouse⁵, b May 16, 1850; m Mary H. Boydston.
[305] + Mary Agnes⁶, b June 14, 1852; m Levi Diehl.

[311] + Catherine Fouse⁶, b February 26, 1864; m John O. Fager.
[312] + Margaret Elizabeth Fouse⁶, b June 22, 1866; m Joseph M. Faber.

[53] SOLOMON B.⁴ FOUSE, son of [15] Frederick⁴ and Catherine (Acker) Fouse, was born at the original Fouse homestead, May 30, 1824. March 7, 1854, he married Matilda Enyeart, born near Marklesburg station, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1835. She was the daughter of Thomas and Mary (Wilson) Enyeart who lived on the Raystown branch of the Juniata River near Marklesburg. Thomas Enyeart was born December 11, 1808, and died June 28, 1854—he was son of William and Elizabeth (Wilson) Enyeart. Mary (Wilson) Enyeart was born November 30, 1814, and died September 3, 1875—she was daughter of Samuel and Mary (Wilson) Glasgow.

Mr. Fouse was reared on the farm, but upon becoming of age he learned the carpenter trade and followed the latter until 1855. During this time he erected many houses and barns in Blair County, and some in Ohio. In 1856, he turned his attention to farming, which he continued until his death, October 6, 1858. His remains lie in the cemetery at Salem's Church, on the Nicholas Fouse premises. Mr. and Mrs. Fouse were members of the Reformed Church.

September 26, 1861, at Beavertown, Blair County, Pennsylvania, Mrs. Matilda (Enyeart) Fouse married (2) John Eberly, of Waterside, Bedford County, Pennsylvania, born December 20, 1822, and died October 16, 1890, aged 67 years, 9 months, 26 days—buried at Waterside. Matilda Fouse Eberly died February 15, 1907 (72 years, 1 day) and was buried in Rose Hill Cemetery, Altoona, Pennsylvania.

[54] WILLIAM ACKER FOUSE, son of [15] Frederick and Catherine (Acker) Fouse, was born December 26, 1825, and on June 1, 1848, married Catherine Greaser, born February 14, 1827; daughter of Geo. and Agnes Greaser. They resided on a farm on Clover Creek, near Drab, Blair County, Pennsylvania. Mr. Fouse died July 28, 1912, aged 86 years, 7 months and 3 days (Plate 31).

Children (11):

[55] CATHARINE FOUSE, daughter of [15] Frederick and Catharine (Acker) Fouse, was born May 2, 1827. She married George Greaser, born March 8, 1825, in Ellerbach, Hessen Darmstadt, Germany; son of George and Agnes (Katzelmoyer) Greaser. Catharine and her husband lived on a farm near Beavertown, Blair County, Pennsylvania. About 1862 they moved to the Greaser homestead, about 3 miles south, where Mrs. Greaser died January 6, 1874. Mr. Greaser died July 4, 1879. Both were interred at Salem Reformed Church, Clover Creek, Pennsylvania. George Greaser had married (2) Elizabeth Fouse [77] (Plate 32).

[56] ELIZABETH FOUSE, daughter of [15] Frederick³ and Catharine (Acker) Fouse, was born April 17, 1830. January 3, 1865 she was married to Albert G. Boyd, born July 14, 1805. Mr. Boyd died November 25, 1886. His wife died October 29, 1913, and was buried in the Salem Reformed Church cemetery, close to where she was born.

The family lived for a time at Iola, Allen County, Kansas; later near Foreston, Ogle County, Illinois; and last their address is Hackettstown, N. J., R. R. No. 1 (Plate 33).

One daughter, surname Boyd:

[337] + Mary Catherine⁶, born October 15, 1870; m (1) Harry C. Boerner; m (2) Thomas F. Miller.

[57] JACOB ACKER FOUSE, son of [15] Frederick³ and Catharine (Acker) Fouse, was born January 17, 1832. January 2, 1855 he married (1) Sarah Rhodes, born August 27, 1834, daughter of Abram and Eliza (McGraw) Rhodes (see [79]). Mrs. Fouse died January 19, 1858, and was buried in Salem Reformed Church cemetery.

September 1, 1859, Mr. Fouse married (2) Margaret Shontz Grove, born December 16, 1838; daughter of John and Catharine (Shontz) Grove, also a sister of Nancy Grove, who married Henry⁶ Brumbaugh ([E224] in Brumbaugh Families). The ceremony was performed by Mr. Fouse's uncle, Rev. Dewalt⁴ Fouse [16].

Jacob Fouse was reared on the old Fouse homestead farm which he purchased. After his second marriage he sold it and purchased one near McConnellstown, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, and moved upon it.
ELIZABETH (FOUSE) BOYD [50], ALBERT G. BOYD AND MARY CATHERINE BOYD [337].
THE FOURTH GENERATION

His farming always produced successful results, but in 1904 the family moved to Huntingdon, where he leads a retired life. He is a Republican, member of the Reformed Church, and an active man, as can be seen by reference to Plate No. 34. Residence, 714 Warm Spring Avenue, Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

Son by first marriage:

[338] + Jacob R., b January 7, 1858; m Mrs. Lavenia (Blackburn) Good.

Children by second marriage (3):

[339] + Mary Alice, b August 16, 1860; m Samuel Grubb Lininger.
[340] + Harry Brumbaugh, b May 22, 1864; m Mary Louise Wicke.
[341] + Anna Grace, b May 30, 1870; m Lemuel Lawrence Vanorman.

[60] ADAM FOURSE, son of [16] Theobald and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born March 6, 1824, in the original Nicholas Fouse homestead mansion erected in 1793, on the banks of Clover Creek, Huntingdon (now Blair) County, Pennsylvania, the birthplace of not only his father (Theobald Fouse [16]) but five brothers, children of Nicholas and Margaret (Brumbaugh) Fouse [2] were born, viz: John, William, Frederick, Adam and Jonathan—also six more of the older brothers and sisters, children of Theobald and Nancy Shontz Fouse, viz: Christian, John, Margaret, Elizabeth, Benjamin and Catherine. Adam, the first of fifteen children in his parents' family, shared in the privileges of a good Christian home. In his boyhood days, subscription schools afforded the only opportunity to secure education, and were kept open only several months during mid-winter; besides the teachers were required to teach both the German and the English languages, and often did not succeed very well in either. However Adam, being studiously inclined, made good progress in the branches taught. In the spring of 1833, he, with his parents, moved to Woodcock Valley, in the same county. A year later the public school law of Pennsylvania was passed, but was yet in its formative state. While he attended public school in connection with the duties of the oldest son on the farm, it gave him many advantages for self improvement, and he thereby acquired a fair business education.

In 1849, Mr. Fouse married Elizabeth Jane Simonton, at the home of her father, Jefferson Simonton, near Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. Miss Simonton was born June 18, 1832. After marriage, they resided near Marklesburg until his death. Early in life Mr. Fouse was a carpenter and had also learned the trade of tanning and followed the latter business for many years; later he purchased a farm adjoining that of his father. He then abandoned the tanning trade and took up farming, which business he followed until his death September 28, 1884.
Mrs. Fouse survives and with her youngest daughter (unmarried) lives on the farm. They are members of the Reformed Church. The remains of Mr. Fouse rest in the Reformed Church cemetery near Marklesburg, Pennsylvania. The farm is owned by their son Benjamin Simonton's Fouse [343], of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

Owing to physical disability, Mr. Fouse was denied the privilege of emphasizing his loyalty to the government, by bearing arms in the field in defence of our country’s flag. He was, however, a great comfort and blessing to his aged father, while his seven brothers were at the front.

About 1868, Adam was elected county commissioner for Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, on the Republican ticket—he always was a member of that political party.

“Adam Fouse was a lifelong member of the Reformed Church; was for many years in the eldership; he was a worker, as teacher and superintendent, in the Sunday school. He was a man of exemplary life; never entered a liquor saloon, never used tobacco in any form; he was held in respect and in the kind regards of his neighbors and associates.”

Children (5):
[342] Mary Ann*, b May 24, 1849; d at age 40; unm.
[343] + Benjamin Simonton*, b October 10, 1851; m Mary M. Knodel.

[61] CHRISTIAN FOUSE, son of [16] Theobald* and Nancy (Shontz)
Fouse, was born February 27, 1825. December 4, 1845 he married (1)
Barbara Summers, born February 6, 1825; daughter of Henry and Sarah (Boyer) Summers. Barbara died February 8, 1864.

Owing to the close ties between the Summers, Boyer, and Fouse family lines further details are here given, largely furnished from the records of Rev. Henry Summers Garner [181]; Henry Summers, Sr., married Barbara ——, and they lived to the north of Hagerstown, Maryland, from which locality came so many of the early settlers in the Woodcock Valley, Hunt-formed cluirloili, his name appearing as one of the signers of the Church Articles on July 1, 1754. Further on, however, these same Lutheran church records contain the following significant entry:

Samuel, b. Dec. 14, 1790; son of George and Magdalena Frey.

This settled, beyond controversy, the fact that Samuel Prey was a son of a George and Magdalena Frey, the date of birth as given above agreeing within one day of the date of birth as calculated from the record on his tombstone, which gives date of death and age, the discrepancy of a day being readily accounted for by an error in substraction. The mention of a George Frey in the will of Gottfried, and the fact that George was named by the church records as father of Samuel, naturally led to a search of the court records for anything connected with that name. From the Register's Office it is evident that however much real estate George Frey owned in his lifetime, at his death there was nothing for the courts to deal with. His name, in connection with any estate of his, could not be found, but in 1806 the name of Samuel Frey appeared on the index to the records, and reference to the proper book revealed the fact that he asked for the appointment of his brother Jacob as his guardian.

Immediately following that statement is this:

Mar. 26, 1806. Jacob Frey, brother of Frederick Frey, an orphan minor child, son of George Frey, deceased, presented his petition asking for the appointment of a guardian of said minor, and the court appointed Gottlieb Ziegle as guardian.'

The name Ziegle at once raised the query as to his connection with the Frey family and what the reason for his appointment, rather than some one else. Reference to the Register's office showed the existence of the will of a Gottlieb Ziegle, and an inspection of that document led to the discovery that the testator's daughter Magdalena was married to George Frey. This explained why Gottlieb Ziegle (2d), an uncle of the minor, was appointed his guardian.
In the records of Zion's Reformed Church, of York, Pa., are found the following:

On October 6, 1776, was baptized a child of George Frey and his wife, Maria Magdalena, named Maria Magdalena. Witnesses: Gottlieb Ziegle and wife Barbara.

Born Feb. 23, 1782, Elizabeth, daughter of George and Magdalena Frey.

Jacob, baptized Nov. 14, 1784; born October 22, 1784. Parents, George Frey and Maria Magdalena.

Daniel, born January 1, 1786; son of George and Magdalena Frey.

The fact that Gottlieb Ziegle and his wife appeared as witnesses to the baptism of Oct. 6, 1776, is additional evidence that they were closely related to the young couple.

The theory formed from the guardian appointment, the will and the Zion Reformed Church entries was established as a fact by certain additional court records.

In a subsequent chapter, under the title Catharine Frey, is given the history of the discovery of the records pertaining to the estate of Gottlieb Ziegle, (2d), who died intestate and unmarried, whereupon his estate descended to his brothers and sisters, and the children of such brothers and sisters as were deceased. Among the names of his heirs appear those of the children of Magdalena Ziegle, married to George Frey: George, Jacob, Daniel, Samuel and Frederick Frey, and Catharine Metzel, Mary Grant and Elizabeth Weigel. Another record names "Mary, eldest sister of Gottlieb Ziegle (2d), married to George Frey;" and the will of Gottlieb Ziegle (ist) mentions his daughter "Magdalena, married to George Frey." As the writer had been told by his father that Jacob Frey was a brother of Samuel's, as the names of the other brothers as recalled by William Frey and Marcellus Frey agree exactly with those given in the above list as those of the sons of George Frey, and as the names in Zion's Reformed church record are also given, this was persuasive evidence of descent from George Frey.
ingdon County, Pennsylvania. About 1780 (?) they moved into that valley, and he there died in 1809 and his wife died in 1827. They had children: Daniel; Jacob; Henry, born February 25, 1793, and died March 23, 1845; Mary; Catharine; Margaret; Susan; Henry Summers, Jr., married Sarah Boyer, born May 15, 1799, and died February 21, 1872. Sarah Boyer was daughter of Henry Boyer, born May 15, 1799.

Henry and Sarah (Boyer) Summers had children: Jacob, born February 2, 1822, and married Elizabeth Enyeart, April 2, 1863; Catharine, who married Adam Garner [35]; Barbara, born February 6, 1825, and married Christian Fouse [61]; David, born September 17, 1826, unmarried; Sarah, born September 21, 1830, married Daniel Harris; Henry, born June 2, 1834, married Elizabeth Beaver.

After the death of his wife, Barbara, Christian Fouse enlisted as a private in Co. K, 78th Reg. Pa. Vol. Inf. to serve during the war. At its close he was honorably discharged, and mustered out of the service. He returned home and resumed farming.

May 22, 1866, Christian married (2) Eliza (Frank) Shontz, widow of William D. Shontz, and sister of Sarah (Frank) Fouse, the first wife of Adam Garner Fouse [82], and sister of Maria (Frank) Brumbaugh, widow of the late Andrew Boelus Brumbaugh, M.D. ([226 in Brumbaugh Families].

Christian Fouse and Eliza, with part of the latter’s children by her first marriage, actively farmed near Alexandria, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, until shortly after Christian’s death July 18, 1882. Mrs. Fouse lived at Huntingdon, Pennsylvania with her daughter Mrs. Ella Grace Jackson [361] until her death November 6, 1914 (Plate 35).

Children by first marriage (11):

[347] + Sarah Ann, b October 20, 1846; d March 3, 1894; m James Stone.
[348] Nancy, b December 21, 1847; d September 25, 1848.
[349] + Joseph, b June 18, 1849; m Anna B. Fisher.

[361] + Ella Grace, b July 31, 1877; m Theodore Cunningham Jackson.

[62] JOHN FOURSE, son of [16] Theobald and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born June 26, 1826. November 22, 1854, he married Rebecca Summers, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Boyer) Summers and a sister of Margaret Ann Summers, who married David Fouse [75]. After John's marriage, he resided for several years on the John Plummer farm, in Woodcock Valley, in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. He next moved near his father's home, on a part of the old Enriken farm, which had been purchased by his father from the Enriken estate. Here he continued to reside until about 1866, when he moved into the house formerly occupied by his Grandfather Shontz, and subsequently purchased a part of the old home farm, which has since belonged to his descendants. In the early part of 1865, he enlisted and served as a private in Co. K, 78th Pa. Vol. Inf. At the close of the war, after being honorably discharged, he returned home and resumed farming, in which he was always successful. He died August 24, 1891, and is buried in the churchyard belonging to the Reformed Church near Marklesburg, Pennsylvania, of which church he was a lifelong member. His wife was also buried in the same churchyard (1906). She also was a life long member of the Reformed Church. John was small of stature, but a hard worker, and for several years before his death did not enjoy good bodily health.

One son:

[362] + Jacob Summers Fouse, b ———, 1835; m Martha Ellen Donnelson.

[64] ELIZABETH FOURSE, daughter of [16] Theobald and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born December 12, 1828; died June 7, 1893. She was united in marriage to Anthony Beaver Shultz; son of David and Eliza-
It is worthy also to note that while in 1789, according to the above assessments, there is apparently a George Frey in York township and also in York town, the U.S. Census for 1790 gives only one George Frey as head of a family in the entire county, and places him in York town. So far as the writer has been able to discover there were only two lines of Freys in the neighborhood of York at the time covered by the above conveyances, that of Gottfried and that of Martin. The latter left only two sons to survive him, Tobias and Martin. Tobias, the elder, settled in Dover township. Martin, born in 1739, married Anna Maria Small; but evidently could not have been the father of a son who was married before 1773. In fact, according to his will, he had but one son, named Martin, and three daughters. It is against all probability that in a territory as sparsely settled as York town and York township, there should have been two men by the same name, of the same occupation, and with wives bearing the same Christian name. Two more things bear out this theory of the identity of the two Georges: Gottlieb Ziegle's land adjoined that of Gottfried Frey, and doubtless the matter of propinquity had much to do with the union of the two families. And from two descendants of lo Adam Frey the writer heard the tradition of the relationship of that line to that of George, a relationship which could only come about through a common descent from Gottfried. Therefore, it was with perfect assurance that the Avriter bottled up the demon of doubt, and accepted Gottfried Frey as his great-great-grandfather, and the ancestor of the people whose names are recorded in this volume, feeling that this was not mere matter of assertion or belief, but actually established by incontrovertible evidence.

A Gratifying Discovery. After having accepted this theory, at first with much misgiving and later with more confidence as the various records above mentioned were found, two years after the first steps were taken in tracing the other descendants of Gottfried Frey the writer was surprised and gratified to learn of a remarkable piece of evidence confirming what the foregoing had built up, and assuring him that three-fourths of the work spent in this volume was not resting on a foundation that might at any moment be swept away by the discovery that there were after all two Georges, that the line from Kaspar to Gottfried had naught to do with the children of Mary Magdalena Ziegle, and that there was no connection between Godfrey, Julianna and Adam on the one hand and George on the other. Practically all the correspondence in the compiling of the information in this book was done on stationery bearing at the top a facsimile of the signature of Gottfried Frey to his will, which facsimile appears on the title page of this work. One day there came into the writer's office Robert F. Metzel, of Washington, D. C., and stated that he had in his possession an old Bible, which had belonged to his great-grandmother Catharine Metzel, and that in it there was a piece of paper containing the signature of Gottfried Frey. Mr. Metzel was positive that the signature was the same as the facsimile on the letter head received by him from the writer. The Bible also contained a line "Jacob Frey's Bible," and the name Catharine Frey, written in German. There is also an entry giving the date of birth of Catharine Frey, something the writer did not have before. There is nothing to show positively that this Bible ever belonged to Gottfried Frey, and as it contains no other reference to him, and gives no data concerning any of his family, it is not likely that it was used by him. The claim of Jacob Frey, a younger brother of Catharine's, that it was his, and her maiden name appearing in it shows that the book was doubtless in the home of George Frey before Catharine's marriage, possibly it was presented to her by her grandfather (she was seven years old at the time of his...

In the early part of 1865, Mr. Shultz entered the United States Army for one year, or during the war. He served as a private in Co. H, 78th Pa. Vol. Inf. At the close of the war, being honorably discharged, he returned to his farm. Mr. Fouse and his wife were members of the Reformed Church near Marklesburg, and they lie buried in the cemetery belonging to that church.

[65] BENJAMIN[18] FOUSE, son of [16] Theobald[19] and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born March 5, 1830. After his marriage with Anna Greaser, (daughter of George Greaser, Sr.) on February 2, 1860, he lived at the old home near Marklesburg until enlistment in the Union Army, in Co. K, 78th Pa. Vol. Inf., in 1865. He died in the Crittenden General Hospital at Louisville, Kentucky, August 22, 1865. His remains were brought home, and buried in the graveyard of the Reformed Church near Marklesburg, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Fouse lives with her daughter near Drab, Pennsylvania, which is her postoffice address (Plate 36).

[66] CATHARINE FOUSE, daughter of [16] Theobald and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born January 11, 1832. February 10, 1853, she married Samuel H. Grove, born January 31, 1826; son of Benjamin Grove. For a year or two after their marriage, they resided at the old Benjamin Grove home in Woodcock Valley. Later they moved to a farm near Entiken, where their children were born and where they resided until her death in the spring of 1868. Mr. Grove enlisted in Co. D, 205th Pa. Vol. Inf., in which he served from 1864 until the close of the war. After being honorably discharged, he returned to his home and engaged in farming, which was his main occupation during life. Mrs. Fouse died suddenly a few days after their youngest child, Samuel T., was born.

[68] MARY FOUSE, daughter of [16] Theobald and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was the first child born to these parents in Woodcock Valley, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, that lived to adult life. She was born March 10, 1835, and died March 21, 1885.

Mary Fouse, on January 8, 1857, married Benjamin Hoover, born October 31, 1828; son of Ludwig and Susannah (Grove) Hoover. The Hoover family is of German origin, early settling in Maryland, later in Pennsylvania. Benjamin Hoover successfully cultivated the homestead farm near Grafton, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, giving especial attention to fruit and stock raising. He was highly esteemed in his community; was a Democrat in politics; and an active member in the Reformed Church, serving as deacon or elder therein until his death December 15, 1893 (Plate 37).

GEORGE FREY was born Aug. 13, 1751, either in the stone house, or in a more humble building occupied by Gottfried before he had acquired title to the land. His early life was of course that of a farmer's son, in a time when farming was much more laborious than it is now; but later he, like his brother Godfrey, learned a trade, George making saddlery his choice, as is evidenced by his designation in the deed to him of the lot on George street.

His War Record. Having arrived at the conclusion that there was but one George Frey in York during the period from 1751 to 1800, of adult age, it follows that anything relating to a man of that name from that place concerns the subject of this section. As this era covers the time of the War of the Revolution, the question naturally arose whether this ancestor was one of the brave men who won independence for the new Continent.

The proper place to go for information on this subject seemed to be the United States authorities at Washington, so an inquiry on this subject was duly made to the War Department. In due course of time came the reply that the name of George Frey did not appear on their records; but admitted that the records of that time were very incomplete, and advised search of the Pennsylvania records for further information.

From the Pennsylvania Archives we make the following extracts:

George Frey in list of soldiers "who received pay" in the Revolution; 5 Series, Vol. 4.
George Prey in Capt. John Ehrman's district as liable to military duty; 6 Series, Vol. 2.

George Prey was in Wm. Lindsay's company of militia from Dec. 8, 1781, to Feb. 7, 1782.

The name of George Prey appears as a member of Col. Henry Haller's Regiment, stationed at Newtown, Bucks County, Pa., in Jan., 1777; but the writer is unable to say whether it was this George or whether Col. Haller was a York County man.

In the Spangler Families, we find in the list of the men in Capt. Wm. Bailey's company, on June 14, 1776, these three names in immediate succession: George Prey, Gottlieb Siegle, Prederick Siegle. Quite naturally, George and his brothers-in-law appear grouped like that.

Capt. Bailey's company, according to the Moravian Church records, existed in 1775, 1776 and 1777. It became a part of the five battalions from York County that marched to Eastern New Jersey in 1776 to form the Plying Camp. On their arrival in New Jersey 400 of these men were taken to form two battalions, and the remainder returned home. Subsequently 500 more York County men were added to the Camp. Just how long this Plying Camp was in service the writer is unable to say. They went as far as Elizabeth, N. J. This Plying Camp, formed at the request of Gen. Washington, was to consist of 10,000 men, and was to be stationed in the Jerseys as a central force, ready to act in any direction, as circumstances might require. It was under the command of Gen. Mercer, and the Spangler Families, 403.

troops from its ranks were engaged in the battle of Long Island, and the minor operations around New York and in the retreat through New Jersey. Whether George Frey and his comrades were members of the two battalions that remained with the Camp seems incapable of actual demonstration; but from the traditions about the soldier uncle and his heroic experiences related to and by the descendants of Godfrey Frey, it is more than probable that the former saw actual service of a most severe kind, and may have seen the great General himself; this is undoubtedly so if he was a member of Col. Swope's battalion, which suffered greatly in the battle of Long Island.

By Act of Congress the so-called militia were put on the same footing as the regulars, and men who enlisted and were willing to go and actually did go to the front, ready to do their full duty, are not to be lightly deprived of the honor due them as soldiers of the Revolution, even if not engaged in any great battle. Pretensions as to experiences that never occurred could readily have been discovered at that time, and the probabilities are all on the side of George Frey having served his country in its hour of need to the best of his ability and opportunity.

The term of enlistment for the Flying Camp expired in December, 1776. In April, 1778, we find George Frey was a member of Col. David Jamison's militia regiment*.

As Conrad Frey, a member of this same regiment, was a pensioner as late as 1804, it could hardly be denied that he was a soldier of the Revolution, and if he, why not the other members of the same regiment.

It is not known just where this regiment was engaged. Perhaps it was the desire to be free to heed the call to arms that led George to sell his property in April, 1776, and then, when the urgency was great in June, of that same year, he was ready to go to the defence of his country without any anxiety as to the possessions he would otherwise have been compelled to leave in the charge of a young wife.

[71] DEWALT SHONTZ FOUSE, D.D., son of [16] Theobald* and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born November 15, 1840, in the house now owned by Samuel Shontz Fouse [74], in Woodcock Valley, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. During his youth, he helped his father on the farm and attended the public schools of the neighborhood. In the summer of 1858, he attended a select school at Marklesburg, Pennsylvania, taught by William A. Houck. In the winter of 1858-59, he taught school at what was called "High Germany." In the summer of 1859, he again attended the select school at Marklesburg, but taught this year by Andrew B. Brumbaugh, afterward Dr. Brumbaugh, of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania. In the fall of 1859, he entered Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and continued there until the fall of 1861, when on September 16, he enlisted in Co. C, 53rd Reg. Pa. Vol. Inf.—Capt. John H. Wintrode, of Marklesburg, Pennsylvania. This regiment was attached to 4th Brigade, 1st Division, 2nd Army Corp., commanded most of the time by Gen. William Scott Hancock. He participated in the opening campaigns about Washington during the winter and spring of 1862; then in the Peninsula campaigns from Yorktown to Richmond; was actually engaged in the battles of Fair Oaks, Allen's Farm, Savage Station, White Oak Swamp, and Malvern Hill. When the army was moved back to Washington, he took part in the battles of Chantilla, South Mountain and Antietam—then in the battle of Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862; Chancellorsville, May 3-4, 1863; Gettysburg July 1-3, 1863; Bristow Station and Auburn in the fall of 1863, and at Mine Run, November 1863. During the winter of 1863 and 1864, his command lay along the Rapidan River in Virginia, and participated in all the great battles of 1864, from the Rapidan to Petersburg—known as the "Wilderness campaign." When Mr. Fouse enlisted, he was made Third Sergeant of the Company, and later First Sergeant; and December 1, 1862, was commissioned First Lieutenant of Co. C, 53rd Pa. Vols., in which capacity he commanded the Company most of the time, frequently acted as Adjutant of the Regiment, and in the fall of 1864, acted as Assistant Adjutant General of the 4th Brigade, 1st Division, 2nd Army Corps. His time having expired, and being afflicted with malarial troubles, he resigned and was mustered out of service October 9, 1864. He returned home and voted for Abraham Lincoln in November of the same year.

He then entered the Theological Seminary at Mercersburg from which he graduated in May, 1867. Thus, while his seminary course was complete, his college course was cut short by the war. He was ordained to the ministry in May, 1867, at Pattonsville, Bedford County, Pennsylvania. In June, 1867, Mr. Fouse went to Iowa and took as his first field the Boulden charge which he served seven years. On leaving the Boulden charge, he took the Lisbon charge which he served until October 1, 1889, when he accepted the office of "General Superintendent of Home Missions." This position he held until July, 1905, when the Board by direction of General Synod elected a general superintendent and three district superintendents. Mr. Fouse became a district superintendent for the Interior Synod, which office he held until October 1, 1910. The most of his ministry has been among the missions of the West. On June 16, 1892, the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by the Heidelberg University, Tiffin, Ohio.

January 30, 1868, Mr. Fouse married Sarah Ann Geissinger of Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania; born February 24, 1836; daughter of John and Jane (Barrack) Geissinger. Mrs. Fouse died October 1, 1904, in Denver, Colorado, while visiting her son Rev. David Henry Fouse [395]. Mr. Fouse then made his home with his only daughter, Mrs. Mary Naomi Kinsley [398], at Lisbon, Iowa, until his death March 13, 1912 (Plate 38).

A MINUTE FROM THE RECORDS OF THE BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS*

"Report adopted by the Board of Home Missions at its meeting in July, 1909, with regard to the long and self-sacrificing service of Superintendent Dewalt S. Fouse:

"The Board of Home Missions of the Reformed Church in the United States here places on record, its appreciation of the long and faithful services of Rev. D. S. Fouse, D.D. Forty-two years ago to-day he preached his first sermon as a missionary in the West. Fresh from the Seminary, he had caught a vision of opportunity to which he could not be disobedient and which still abides in his heart. His earnest, self-sacrificing and successful labors as a missionary for 22 years made him the natural and eligible candidate for the important office of General Superintendent of Home Missions when all the Home Missionary interests and activities of the Church were consolidated under the General Synod twenty years ago. Here he found a wide field of usefulness and he gave himself to his work with all his characteristic earnestness and zeal. He held this position until four years ago, when he was assigned the specific oversight of the Missions in the Interior Synod. Dr. Fouse has lived to see the work in the West grow from a few struggling missions to a mighty Synod, while at the same time the whole Church has been awakened and developed in missionary interest and liberality. He was a pioneer. He helped to lay the foundation for the years to come. While such noble service always brings its own sufficient reward, it is eminently fitting in view of his retirement from office that the Board should here place on record this testimonial of its appreciation of the important work which this worthy servant of the Church has accomplished.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 7th, 1909.

AN APPRECIATION BY DR. CHARLES E. SCHAEFFER.

"The death of Rev. Dr. Dewalt S. Fouse removes from the ranks of our ministry one of its leading members. For many years he occupied such a prominent position and figured so conspicuously in our church councils, and particularly in the missionary work in this country, that it will seem strange not to see him in our midst. His earthly life began in a quiet and peaceful country home in Central Pennsylvania. He sprung from strong and sturdy stock. His early life was spent on the farm where he not only developed a strong physique, but also acquired those habits of industry and perseverance, of thrift and economy which stood him so well in his subsequent career. Upon the completion of his theological studies he responded to a call in the then far West. Our Church at that time had but a few congregations west of the Mississippi River. A few of the pioneers of our faith had established several outposts in that large open field, but the territory lay almost an unbroken wilderness before them. The great and influential cities that now characterize our civilization in the West were then but small towns, and some had no existence at all. Dr. Fouse was not the only minister who heard and heeded the call of the wild, but most of the others who went West stayed a while and then returned to the East and stayed here. Dr. Fouse became indigenous to Western soil. He stayed out there during all his future days. He had caught the vision, he recognized the opportunity and thus he became early in his ministry a force for his Church and the Kingdom which perhaps he could not have exerted elsewhere. After serving in the pastorate for a number of years he was on March 29, 1889, elected by the Board of Home Missions as its General Superintendent. He entered upon the duties of his office October 1, 1889. Our Home Missionary work was at that time in a critical situation. It was a time of reorganization. For a number of years prior to this the District Synods had been carrying forward the home mission work of our Church. General Synod's Board was practically inactive. But now there was to be a reconstruction. The District Synods were asked to hand their home mission work over to the General Synod's Board, and conditions required that there should be a strong and efficient leader at the head of this work, one who could inspire confidence and rally the different sections of the Church. He was charged with a grave responsibility. The transfer of the work of the District Synods was not unanimously approved by the Church. There was considerable feeling in the matter, prejudice was aroused. The situation demanded an exceptional man to head this work. The unanimous choice of the Board fell upon Dr. Fouse. He had been a member of the Board for some time and was at least partially acquainted with its methods and work. He was then in the very prime of his life. His strong physical presence, his broad, manly shoulders were suggestive of native and acquired ability to carry heavy and responsible burdens. He gave himself wholly to his work. He rallied the divided forces of the Church. He brought into line the various elements and gave the Church a vision of its task as it never had before. Living as he did, on the western border of our Church, he was far from the base of supplies and was removed from the inspiration which association with his brethren and representatives of other denominations in this work could bring. Frequently his duties took him away from his home and family for months at a time. It was the time when the apportionment system came into full vogue. In the Ohio Synod he collected for a time much of the apportionment by a house-to-house canvass. This gave him valued experience and a knowledge of actual conditions among the people which he highly prized.

With the reorganization of the Board in 1905, when headquarters were established in Philadelphia, he became the Western superintendent, with special oversight of the missions in the Interior Synod. To this special work he devoted his last years. Many of the missions in the Interior Synod owe their origin to Dr. Fouse’s initiative. The brethren eagerly sought his counsel in the matter of organization, location and building of churches. For years he was a leader on the floor of the Interior Synod, and his ripe judgment was generally followed. The Interior Synod at Freeport, Illinois, 1909, upon the completion of his twenty years’ service with the Board of Home Missions, established a Church-building Fund and named it in his honor, the “Dr. D. S. Fouse Church-building Fund.” He took a deep interest in Iowa Classis, of which he was the treasurer for many years. It was his zeal and energy that brought Iowa Classis always into the front line in the payment of the apportionment. He would never allow any of its congregations to be delinquent in its apportionment. He likewise was warmly attached to his church at Lisbon, where he and his family worshipped for many years.

His large physical frame sheltered a heart as tender and true as that of a woman. “It is the heart that makes the theologian.” In life’s struggle heart counts for more than head. He was of a peculiarly cheerful, hopeful, optimistic nature. His sense of humor saved him from many times of despair. He could put life and spirit into a brother who found himself in the depths. One can scarcely realize that the work with which he was identified and which is of such vast significance, is but a little more than a generation old. He is one of the last of those early pioneers. He lived his life into his work, and being dead he yet speaketh. His career is a testimony as to what true devotion and zeal may accomplish for the Kingdom.
In October, 1909, after serving the Church for twenty years, he resigned his position as district superintendent."

[72] REUBEN\(^4\) SHONTZ FOUSE, son of [16] Theobald\(^3\) and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born July 17, 1844. He enlisted in Co. C, 53rd Pa. Vols. on September 16, 1861, when he was but a little over 17 years old. He seemed to be robust in body, but, in fact, was not as strong as the appearances seemed to indicate. While camped on the north side of the Chickahominy River, Virginia, he was taken down with a low form of typhoid fever, as the physician termed it. He did not seem to suffer because of this indisposition; and, therefore, when the battle of Fair Oaks began on May 31, and the troops were ordered to march, he was determined to fall into ranks and go with his Company, although entreated to remain in camp. The river was very much swollen because of the recent heavy rains, and the soldiers were compelled to wade in the water to their arm-pits in order to reach the bridge. The Regiment with the rest of the Brigade arrived on the battlefield of Fair Oaks during the night, and early on June 1, became engaged with the enemy. The subject of this notice was in this, his first and last battle, and nobly did his duty. But a seemingly deep seated disease had seized him, and during the month of June, as the troops were camped in front of Richmond, he declined in health, until on the morning of June 28, he died in the little shelter tent with his messmates about him. At this time, and a few days previous, there was terrific fighting on the right of our army, as General Porter endeavored to stem the onslaught of Stonewall Jackson. That night the whole army began to retreat for the James River. A rough box was procured, the body embalmed, and given into the care of Corporal H. B. Geissinger for burial. By him it was taken home, and lies buried in the churchyard near his native home, the church in which he was baptized and confirmed.

[73] FREDERICK SHONTZ FOUSE, son of [16] Theobald\(^3\) and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born April 9, 1846. He enlisted on July 21, 1861, for three years, or during the war. He became a member of Co. G, 5th
Reg. Pa. Reserves. He was only 15 years old when he enlisted. He served in his Regiment until the end of his enlistment, in 1864. In the summer of that year, he reënlisted and became a member of Co. D, 205th Pa. Vols., in which he served until the end of the war.

December 13, 1862, at the battle of Fredericksburg, Virginia, he was severely wounded. Let us quote his own words: "Few of us who were rushed across the pontoon bridges, and ordered to scale 'Marie Heights,' expected to survive. In the midst of the fray, I was severely wounded by a minnie ball—my right arm was shattered below the shoulder. As best I could, I scurried to the rear, reported at the field hospital, and was put in line for amputation. I was unwilling to submit to amputation, and prevailed upon a nurse to staunch the blood and bandage the wound. I then went across the bridge to the general hospital five miles distant, where after no little persuasion the surgeon put the arm in splints and recommended that a 2 months' furlough be granted to me. After some delay I was allowed to go home, and in May returned to my Company." In 1901 an abscess formed causing intense suffering until some foreign matter was removed. The arm began to heal, but an abscess formed in the right ear. This required an operation under which he died October 1, 1902, almost 40 years after he received his original wound. He was buried in West Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in which city he lived for many years.

April 8, 1866, he married Harriet Emma Long, born January 20, 1849; daughter of George and Caroline Emma (Craig) Long. After marriage they lived for some years in Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, where he served for a time as deputy sheriff. He was present at the execution of Boner and Van Bodenburg, the two murderers of the Peightels. He resided for thirty years in Philadelphia where he was engaged most of the time in the insurance business for different companies. Mrs. Fouse yet resides in Philadelphia.

CATHARINE FRP: Y.

No other record of the death of George Valentine Metzel could be found, and there is no tombstone that marks his grave. Thirty-six years later, on February 18, 1839, letters were granted on the estate of George Valentine Metzel to Thomas and Charles Metzel, and the same properly advertised.

Now the scent is hot. Across the corridor to the office of the Clerk of the Orphans' Court, and soon there is seen the record of the proceedings to sell the deceased's real estate.*

Alack and alas! the unsympathetic page sets forth that "said George Valentine Metzel died intestate, leaving to survive him a widow, since deceased," giving no name. Here was a reference to the woman who was possibly the connecting link between the Frays and the Metzels, and yet not even her name appears on the record. But it gave the names of Thomas' father, brothers and sisters. Surely someone living 80 years ago might have heard Mrs. Metzel's baptismal name, although it is easy to see how a man may be spoken of as George Metzel, while his wife is only known as Mrs. George Metzel. So there began a search among the oldest inhabitants, even to writing to one who had moved out of the city. Vain effort! Several remembered Mrs. Kolb and her mother, but no one knew anything of George Valentine Metzel, or his wife's christian name. Once more were his grandchildren appealed to, and then the statement was made that their grandparents were buried in the yard adjoining Christ Lutheran church. Thither hastened the scribe, to find that the chapel covered the spot where their bodies are supposed to lie. And though a visit to the cellar showed a few old monuments, there was no solution as to the name or date of birth of George V. Metzel's wife.

In the files of the York Gazette for 1839 was found the following entry:

DIED. — On February 15, 1839, Catharine Metzel, widow, aged about 65 years.

- JO. C. Docket T 144.
Was she the widow of the George Metzel whose estate was administered upon in 1803, or the George Metzel of 1839? What was her maiden name?

A new complication arose from a story told by the daughters of Thomas Metzel, that after the death of their father's first wife, about 1830, his mother and sister kept house for him. Asked what George V. Metzel did while his wife and daughter were keeping house for another, even though that other was his son, they were at a loss to explain.

A wise genealogist will not confine himself to but one problem at a time; if he does, his task will never be finished. While looking for daughters of George, or a husband for Elizabeth, the writer ever had in view the question of the descendants of the other children of Gottfried. Adam had by this time been identified, and his children were being traced; but how about Godfrey, Samuel and Henry?

Then was recalled the statement of a deceased uncle, that Samuel Frey, son of George, had "inherited money from an uncle." To inherit from an uncle, means that said uncle died after one's parent, and childless. If this proved to be an uncle on the father's side, it would obviate searching for any descendants of that son of Gottfried.

An entry was found of the appointment of guardians for minor children of George Frey; but no intimation as to any inheritance from any estate. Judging from the statements of George's financial condition, contained in the paper already referred to, it is more than likely that these guardians were chosen for the purpose of apprenticing the boys to some trade. Baffled in the search for any inheritance from the Frey side, the mother's side was taken up, but no relative of hers died till long after the date of the appointment of guardians. Still in a half-hearted way the quest was continued, and then, in 1816, was found the death of Gottlieb Ziegle, the second of that name. Following up the record, there was found the entry that the administrator's account had been presented, "as it appeared to the Court that nearly all the money had been paid to the heirs," the account was £Infra, Subject 167. 60. C. Docket 1 230.
[74] SAMUEL^4 SHONTZ FOUSE, son of [16] Theobald^3 and Nancy (Shontz) Fouse, was born May 6, 1848. He enlisted in Co. K, 78th Pa. Vols., as a recruit early in 1865. His extreme youth precluded his entrance into the army at an earlier date, although he desired very much to enlist prior to this time. He served to the end of the war, his discharge dating September, 1865. He returned home, and engaged in farming for his father. After being at home several years, he married (1) Margaret Beyers, who bore him one child ([406] Carrie J.^5) which died in infancy. Mrs. Fouse also died soon after the death of her child.

A few years later, he married (2) Maria Stouffer. They have no children of their own, but adopted a little girl, who has become as near to them as one of their own could possibly be. She is married to Bruce Summers, and resides on the old Fouse homestead, which is now owned by the subject of this notice. Samuel S. has purchased a property in Marklesburg and resides there, while his farm is in the care of Bruce Summers. The world has dealt kindly with him, excepting that his army life gave him a recurrence of rheumatism, which some years ago made it necessary to remove the right eye—a very great loss. He is a useful citizen, and a strong support of the Reformed Church congregation, whose building stands on his farm, and for which he gave the church a deed.

[75] DAVID^4 FOUSE, son of [17] Adam^3 and Susanna (Garner) Fouse, was born April 1, 1830, at the homestead on the banks of Clover Creek, about five miles northeast of Martinsburg, Huston Township, Huntingdon (now Blair) County, Pennsylvania. He was the first of ten children in his father's family, all with one exception growing to manhood and womanhood, the one son Daniel dying in his youth. Prior to David's birth, his father had purchased a large farm on which he reared his family in a well regulated Christian home, where they were taught to work. The father being a successful farmer, purchased other farms, and had much building to do. David, being the oldest, had a large responsibility resting on him, as is the case with most older children in assisting their parents. When David was four years of age, the law was passed creating the public school system in Pennsylvania. It was many years after this before the system was understood and appreciated; hence when David reached school age the system was only in a formative state, and the farmer's boy at that time had small chances for learning. However, with these disadvantages, and the short terms of school in the winter, added to his anxiety to assist in the work at home, he managed to acquire a fair proficiency in reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling and geography. Mr. Fouse was a robust farmer, 6 feet 1½ inches tall, and possessed much mechanical ability. Being skilled in the use of blacksmith’s and carpenter’s tools, he did all his own smithing and carpentering, as well as much in that line for his neighbors.

January 20, 1853, Mr. Fouse married Margaret Ann Summers, born April 15, 1827; daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Boyer) Summers and sister of Rebecca who married John Fouse [62]. Mr. Fouse owned a farm one and one-fourth miles to the south of Marklesburg, in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, which was their homestead where his children were born, reared and taught the art of farming. This farm is owned by his son John S.5 Fouse [411].

Mr. and Mrs. Fouse were members of the Reformed Church and reared their six children in the same faith. Mrs. Fouse died December 9, 1896, and Mr. Fouse died March 1, 1909; both are resting in the cemetery of the Reformed Church, near Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania (Plate 39).

[76] MARGARET5 FOUSE, daughter of [17] Adam5 and Susanna (Garner) Fouse, was born May 28, 1831. October 5, 1851, she married George Nicodemus; son of Jacob and ——— (Aerlenbaugh) Nicodemus. They moved to Ohio, where they lived about eight years; they then settled on a farm in Illinois, where they resided during the Civil War. Mr. Nicodemus joined the Union Army and served in Co. R, 15th Reg. Ill. Vol. Inf. At the close of the war he was honorably discharged and returned to his home and family to again pursue his occupation of farming. After some years they left Illinois and moved to Hartley, O'Brien County, Iowa. Mr. Nicodemus died July, 1900, and Margaret, his wife, died September 12, 1902. They both rest in the cemetery at Hartley (Plate 40).

no longer strange that people might remember the grandmother of 1839 and yet have no knowledge of the grandfather who died in 1803. Now-a-days the Register's office shows time of death as well as grant of letters; and when a second set are issued the words de bonis non—of the goods not—administered upon are used.
The absence of these things in the earlier period is the writer's only excuse for a blunder which destroyed his peace of mind for weeks, and which threatened, at one time, to cause the omission of a large and interesting family from these records, Catharine Frey was born Jan. 3, 1775, according to the Bible heretofore referred to, and the date in the Zion Reformed church, Jan. 19, 1775, is probably that of baptism. The date of her marriage to George Valentine Metzel, a tailor, can only be approximated by reference to the birth of her first child, in 1794. Her married life was but a few years, and she remained devoted to her children and faithful to her first love, living in the home George provided for her, except for the few years she kept house for her son Thomas, down to the day of her death, Feb. 15, 1839. Her children all reached maturity, and a prolific list of descendants follows:

1. ANNA MARY METZEL, popularly known as "Polly" was probably born in 1794: d. before Apr. 3, 1839, as she was not living at the time of the partition of her father's estate. She married Thomas Rothrock, a tanner living on South Beaver street, York, who was born June 7, 1794. The date of his death is unknown, but as there were no children born after 1829, and this was not the era of race suicide, it is plausible that Thomas died in 1830. His paternal ancestors were: Philip Rothrock, grandfather of Thomas Rothrock, came to this country from Gunnstadt in Pfaltz, in the Palatinate, in 1732. married Catharine Kuntz, b. 1720, and settled in Manchester township, near York. He seems to have been a printer by trade, as he printed the Continental money while Congress met in York. He was one...
GEORGE FREY, of the Commissioners of York County in 1781. He died Feb. 28, 1803, leaving to survive him the following children: Jacob, John, Philip, Peter, George, Valentine, Benjamin, Joseph, Frederick, Catharine (married Bentz) and Anna Maria (married Meisenkop and afterwards Berry). In his will he mentions 260 acres of land which he owned in Rowan County, N.C., and it appears that some of his descendants are now living in that State.

His son Benjamin, against the remonstrances of his father and brothers, enlisted in Morgan's Virginia Rifle Company, as it was passing through York on its way to Boston. That he was never heard of afterwards is evidenced by the fact that Philip's will, twenty years later, provided for the payment of Benjamin's share if he should be heard of in a certain time.

John Rothrock, one of the sons of Philip, b. Feb. 18, 1744, was 2nd Lieutenant in the 5th Co., Capt. Emanuel Herman, of the 2nd Battalion of York County Militia in the Revolution. He was a saddler by occupation, and was first married to Dorothy Gump, by whom he had two children, John and Daniel. After her death he married Charity Worley, daughter of Francis Worley, the surveyor of Springetsbury Manor. The result of this union was nine children: Elizabeth (married Updegraph), Mary (married Fahs), George, James, Charity (married Test, one of whose grandsons was John W. Buckingham), Jacob, Henry, Thomas and Susan (married McCurdy). John lived on the northeast corner of Market and Penn streets and died Aug. 28, 1805. George and Henry Rothrock settled in Bellefonte.

The children of John W. Buckingham paid a rare tribute to the memory of Philip and John Rothrock, their great-great-great-grandfather and great-great-grandfather respectively, when they had their bodies exhumed from the old Moravian Cemetery at the time it was abandoned, a few years ago, and reinterred in Prospect Hill Cemetery. It is an example that might well be followed by many others, whose ancestors' graves are neglected and eventually lost.

Mrs. Greaser has lived all her days on the old homestead farm on Clover Creek, four miles northeast of Martinsburg, and has an interest in the said farm. She was born two years before the present mansion house was built, and saw every building erected which now remains on the farm, excepting the smoke-house. The landscape view of this farm appears as Plate No. 2. Mrs. Greaser's address is Martinsburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania, R. R. No. 2 (Plates 41 and 42).

[79] BARBARA Fouse, daughter of [17] Adam and Susanna (Garner) Fouse, was born November 11, 1835. November 3, 1859, she married John McGraw Rhodes; d Abraham and Eliza (McGraw) Rhodes [see 57]. They live on a farm near Clappertown, Blair County, Pennsylvania. In connection with farming, they have also conducted a store for a number of years. Their postoffice address is Barbara, Pennsylvania, named after Mrs. Rhodes (Plate 43.)

[80] JOHN GARNER Fouse, son of [17] Adam and Susanna (Garner) Fouse, was born June 6, 1837. He was the sixth child in his father's family. He entered public school at the age of 7 years and made good progress in the branches taught, notwithstanding the short terms and the limited training of teachers. At best the public schools in the rural districts were of poor quality, as the school system was yet in its formative state, the law establishing public schools in Pennsylvania having been passed in 1834.

At the age of 20 years he was requested by the secretary of the board of education of Huston township to teach school, and after due consideration responded to the request. He continued to teach for seven successive winters, two terms at Beavertown, one at home or Acker school, Huston township, two terms at Sharpsburg, and two terms at the Skyles school in Taylor township, all in Blair County, Pennsylvania. In the summer he worked on the farm and at his leisure endeavored to better qualify himself to teach the branches taught. He attended a normal institute at Martinsburg, Pennsylvania, under the superintendency of attorney John Dean, later judge of common pleas court of Blair County, and afterwards judge of the supreme court of Pennsylvania. The institute was in session five weeks in the spring of 1858, and in the fall of the same year he attended a select training school for the improvement of teachers, for two months, at Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. This school was taught by William A. Houck, later Reverend Houck. In the spring of 1859, he took another course of two months training at the same place, the school being conducted during that session by the late Dr. Andrew Boelus Brumbaugh, of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

After the Civil War was in progress he helped to recruit a company of soldiers and himself enlisted as a private in Co. E, 104th Pa. Vol. Inf. After being in the service some time he was appointed Third Sergeant of his Company and served in that capacity until the close of the war. His Regiment was under the command of Brigadier-General McKibben of the Provisional Division in front of Petersburg, Virginia, and under Major General Ferrero in the Third Brigade, Twenty-fourth Corps, Army of the Potomac. On August 25, 1865, he received an honorable discharge at Portsmouth, Virginia. His Regiment was then ordered to Camp Cadwalder (located at Philadelphia) and there mustered out of service. Upon his return home he engaged in farming and taught school that winter.

September 20, 1866, he married Mary Ellen Shoemaker, daughter of Henry and Matilda (Snyder) Shoemaker of Martinsburg, Pennsylvania, who was born May 15, 1849. She was educated in the public schools of Martinsburg and went several terms to the Juniata Collegiate Institute of her native town. She was accomplished in the necessary branches of education to assist her to be a useful and a good helpmate and was well versed in the art of good housekeeping; always was agreeable, kind-hearted and a true companion. She always had an even disposition, and always met people with a smile and greeted everyone with kindness. She was an excellent wife, and a good, kind mother—a good, thoughtful adviser in her family. In her walk through life she showed herself to be a Christian. She loved her church, and her Saviour; and was in her place at church when her health permitted, taking an active part in all Christian work. She was guarded in her conversation, and never talked more than was necessary. She was very much loved by her family and everyone who had the pleasure of knowing her.

After their marriage, Mr. Fouse's father ceded a part of the homestead farm to them, and they bought forty acres in addition from the Peter Shoenberger estate in 1867. In the same year, with the assistance of his father, he built a house and barn on the property and moved there in the fall. Thereafter he devoted his time to farming, dealing in live stock and selling machinery. He continued these pursuits until March, 1888, when he sold all of his property and with his family moved to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to assume the management of the Alta Friendly Society, which pursuit he now follows. Before moving to Pittsburgh, he bought a property at 300 Orchard Place, Knoxville (Mt. Oliver P. O.), Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where the family live. Mr. Fouse, wife and children are all members of the Reformed Church. Mrs. Fouse died January 14, 1912, after a lingering illness, and suffering for two years; aged 71 years and 8 months. Funeral services were held at her late residence, 300 Orchard Place, Knoxville, Pennsylvania, by her pastor J. H. Prugh and Rev. Lewis Robb, January 16, at 2 p.m. Her body rests in the family lot in the South Side Cemetery, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania (Plates 44^a and 45).

With his brothers and sisters he shared the privileges and blessings of a well regulated Christian home. Educational facilities in his early life were limited. Though the public school system was established somewhat previous to his school age, yet when he entered, it was still in a poorly developed state. Not until in the early fifties was the value of having public schools fully appreciated. During this decade he attended the winter terms of three months' duration, and spent the remainder of the year helping on the farm. He was of a studious nature and employed a large portion of his leisure time with his books in order to advance himself in the branches then taught. In this way he prepared himself for teaching, which profession he afterward followed. He, however, attended a select training school for teachers for a term of nine weeks in the fall of 1859 at Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. This school was conducted by the late Dr. Andrew Boelus Brumbaugh. In the fall of the same year he passed a favorable examination under County Superintendent John Dean, later Judge Dean, and was appointed a teacher when he had not yet reached the age of 17 years. He taught for five terms, the first at Beavertown, the second at the Skyles school, and the remaining three terms at the home or Acker school, all in Blair County, Pennsylvania. At the home school he had as pupils a number of his old fellow classmates. After having taught these five terms he enlisted in Co. E, 104th Pa. Vol. Inf., to serve one year, or during the Civil War. His Regiment was under the command of Lieut. Col. Theophilus Kephart of Norristown, Pennsylvania, in the Third Brigade, Provisional Division under Brigadier-General McKibbin, and Maj. Gen. E. H. Ferrero, 24th Corps, Army of the Potomac. He was honorably discharged at Portsmouth, Virginia, on August 25, 1865. At once returning home, he relieved his father at the plow, it being near the time for fall seeding of wheat. He had long desired to prepare for the Gospel ministry, rather intensified by the tendency in army life away from the Divine, and his father's consent was earnestly sought. The latter had planned to give to each member of his household a home, and he expected each member to do his part. He ultimately consecrated the youngest of the family to the Divine calling.

Ever obedient, Mr. Fouse accepted the plan in good faith, turning his best efforts toward making the changes to follow the division of properties and the erection of buildings, at the same time taking an active part in the affairs of the community. November 25, 1870, he was elected president of the Huston Township Coöperative Mutual Fire Insurance Company which he managed successfully until March, 1876. In the meantime he also filled the position of secretary to the board of school directors of the same township for three years.

October 19, 1871, Adam Garner Fouse married (1) Sarah Frank, born September 4, 1842, on the Frank homestead in Penn Township, Huntingdon County Pennsylvania (where married); daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Baer) Frank; and sister of Elizabeth (Frank-Shontz) Fouse, second wife of Christian Fouse [61]; and also sister of Maria Baer (Frank) Brumbaugh, widow of the late Andrew Boelus Brumbaugh, M.D., of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Fouse was educated in the public schools, was refined, kind-hearted and true. He brought his bride to the Fouse homestead farm (see Plate 2), now owned by himself and his sister Elizabeth Greaser, where he had been engaged in farming. This was nothing new to her since she was reared on the farm. She was an excellent and faithful wife, and a good, kind mother, doing all she could to make her family and others happy. She was amongst the best of housewives, doing everything neatly and with care. She was a Christian lady, loved her church and Saviour; took an active part in all Christian work, and was always in her place at church when her health permitted. She was of a quiet nature, amiable and very conservative in conversation about others. She was very much loved by her family, and all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance.

They continued on the farm until February, 1876, when Adam Garner Fouse went to Philadelphia to assume the management of a mercantile reporting agency, but the business did not appeal to him, and after two years he returned to farming. In 1888, a year after his father's death, he returned to Philadelphia to assume the management of the Alta Friendly Society. He continued at this until January 1, 1893, when he received the appointment of comptroller of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, in which position he continues.

The health of Mrs. Fouse began to fail in 1905 and she died September 3, 1906, in Philadelphia, after a lingering illness of over a year. She was buried in the Salem Reformed Church Cemetery, on the original Fouse premises at Beavertown. After the death of his wife he continued housekeeping with his two children, Clara and Adam Irving, until September 28, 1909, when he married (2) Mrs. Eloise (Reese) Guthrie, daughter of Benjamin Thomas and Anna M. Reese, born January 8, 1864, near Westchester, Chester County, Pennsylvania. She attended public school in the neighborhood, graduated from the Downingtown High School, and then taught school until her marriage to Mr. Guthrie, in 1884. Her parents are of Quaker lineage. Mrs. Fouse is an excellent housekeeper, and a refined, excellent lady. Mr. Fouse and his family attend the Presbyterian Church. Residence was 838 North Forty-first Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania\(^\text{a}\) (Plate 47).

its earlier stages. He attended the school during the winter months.

bodied and a good workman; but disliked farming, preferring to work with machinery, and at the carpenter trade. He did some farming, but later followed carpenter contracting which is his present occupation. During the Civil War he enlisted as private, at 19 years of age, in Co. B, 208th Reg. Pa. Vol. Inf., of which Alexander Bobb, of Martinsburg, Pennsylvania was Major; First Brigade, 3rd Division commanded by Maj. Gen. John F. Hartranft (of Norristown, Pennsylvania); 9th Army Corps, in front of Petersburg, Virginia, Army of the Potomac. Mr. Fouse participated in several engagements and was wounded at the battle of Fort Steadman, March 25, 1865. His command wished him to enter the camp hospital, but he refused, preferring to remain with his Company and Regiment. During the final battle, in front of Petersburg and Richmond April 1-3, 1865, when the Confederate lines were broken, he marched with his command until word was received of the surrender of General Lee, at Appomattox Courthouse. He then returned via Petersburg to City Point on the James River, and via Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River to Washington, D. C., where he remained until June, 1865, when occurred the national parade and inspection, after which he was honorably discharged. After his discharge, he returned to his home and worked with his father on the farm until 1867. He then took up the carpenter trade, and in that year assisted in building several houses and barns on his father's properties, and on others. December 12, 1867, he married Mary Jane Auranldt, born January 20, 1848, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Kemp) Auranldt. Residence, 513 Fifth Avenue, Altoona, Pennsylvania (Plate 48).

[84] LEVI GARNER 4 FOUSE, son of [17] Adam 3 and Susanna (Garner) Fouse was born October 21, 1850. He entered the public schools, and like the other children attended school only during the winter months, working on the farm in the summer. Being the youngest child, his father decided to give him a college education and fit him for some profession. His father desired him to study for the ministry. In March, 1868, he entered Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio. After the term he returned home for the vacation and concluded to enter Mercersburg College for the fall term, which he did and remained until December, 1869. Against the wishes of his father he abandoned college and undertook to prepare himself for commercial life. He secured a position as clerk with Jones and Laughlin, Pittsburgh, in a store run in connection with their iron works, remaining until 1871. He then visited his father’s home. At this time he assisted in organizing The Huston Township Mutual Fire Insurance Company, home office Fredericksburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania. He was made general agent and solicitor for the company. Soon thereafter he associated himself with Samuel Wineland Grabill in a mercantile business from April, 1871, to April, 1872, at which time he sold his interest in the business to his partner, and resigned his agency in the fire insurance company. He then engaged in the manufacture and sale of “The Dr. Wengert Family Medicine” with main office at York, Pennsylvania. The business prospered at first, but the panic in 1875 caused heavy losses, and, in 1874, Mr. Fouse turned his attention to the mercantile reporting business. In December, 1878, he founded the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, and the Fidelity Mutual Aid Association (now known as the Alta Friendly Society). Both companies were successful from the start. Mr. Fouse has continuously been president and actuary of the former, and a director of the Alta Friendly Society. Prior to 1896, under the presidency and management of Mr. Fouse, the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company erected an office building at Nos 112-116 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, at a cost of $1,000,000, for the accommodation of their steadily increasing business. “In the thirty-five years of his presidency, the Fidelity Mutual grew to be one of Philadelphia’s largest financial institutions, operating in forty-one states, and with $135,000,000 in outstanding insurance” (Plate 50).

“Mr. Fouse was regarded as one of the best constructive minds in the life insurance business. He was the originator of the disability clause in life insurance, under which total and permanent disability relieves the policy holder of all further premium payments. When Ex-President Cleveland became Chairman of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents one of his first official acts was to appoint Mr. Fouse a member of the Executive Committee, in which capacity he continued to serve until the time of his death."

"In the early days of his life insurance career he served the United States Army Officers' Association in the capacity of consulting actuary, computing valuable war-hazard tables from the government records, dating back to the inception of the War Department. These tables are recognized as authoritative. He also did important work for the Order of Foresters, the Ministerial Sustentation Fund of the Presbyterian Church, and for other organizations, but in recent years his duties in connection with his own company demanded practically all of his time."

In 1900 Mr. Fouse took an active part in the organization of the Philadelphia Casualty Company. "Mr. Fouse was a fluent writer and contributed largely to insurance literature. Articles written by him appeared in the 'Yale Readings in Insurance, 1909', published by the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and in numerous insurance journals, statistical, economic, and other publications. He lectured on life insurance before the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce of the University of Pennsylvania during the year 1904-05. His lectures were published in the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science."

"At the time of his death, Mr. Fouse was a director of the Third National Bank, the Central Trust and Savings Company and prominently identified with a number of other Philadelphia institutions. For many years he had been an elder in Northminster Presbyterian Church and, until his health began to fail, he was also superintendent of Northminster Sunday School. He was prominently connected with Pocono Pines Assembly, a member of University Lodge No. 610, F. & A. M., a Knight Templar, a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, American Statistical Association, the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia, and numerous other organizations"a January 10, 1870, Levi Garner Fouse married Mary Bell Hause, born February 11, 1851; daughter of Harmon and Susan (Minnich) Hause, of Mercersburg, Pennsylvania. He was partially paralyzed in 1900, but had been frequently at his office until several weeks before his death in Philadelphia, January 16, 1914 (Plates 49 and 50).

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE FIDELITY MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

"It becomes our sad duty to record upon the minutes of this Company the death on January 16, 1914, of L. G. Fouse, its President and Founder, whom God, in His all-wise providence, has removed from the field of life's labors.

While a sense of deep loss to this Company is heavy upon us; and while the grief of a personal bereavement almost too great for words is in our minds and hearts; nevertheless, we feel that it is a privilege, sorrowful yet proud, to inscribe here our debt of admiration and love to the leader whose ability, wisdom, and single-minded goodness were an inspiration to the institution which he directed, to the business of life insurance throughout the country, and to all those who came into contact with his work and personality.

The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company was conceived by him thirty-five years ago, and under his continued Presidency has grown to the splendid position it now occupies in the insurance and financial world.

He brought to the work of this Company all the energies of a powerful mind, an unclouded vision, and a strong executive genius. A born organizer and builder, with that patient, unswerving devotion to a purpose and that capacity for infinite detail which marks constructive talent, he possessed also the clear-eyed imagination, the almost prophetic zeal of the explorer and discoverer who ever leads the way to new and greater fields.

He devoted this rare combination of gifts to the development of this Company, not as a passive leader and advisor, but as a worker of works, laboring unceasingly and untiringly with all the resources of a powerful mind in a strong man's body. Possessed of a remarkable ability to read character and determine fitness, he surrounded himself with associates who loved their work as men love only the work for which they are suited and able. Toiling as many hours—and as many minutes—as the last man under him, he had a kindliness and thoughtfulness for the interests of others which endeared him to his fellows from the topmost to the lowest.
Yet his kindness was never without justice; and his justice never without kindness. Leading, he always himself worked; and working, he always lead.

Thirty-five years of such work and such leadership, inspiring and teaching all who worked with him, resulted in building this Company into a monument that stands enduringly in the respect of the insurance world and in the faith and security of thousands of American homes.

Nor has the Company of which he was President for so many years alone benefited by his genius and labors. The life insurance business at large has gained in strength, in ideas, and in ideals, by his connection with it. The independence of thought, the imagination to conceive, and the courage to test conception, gave, not only to his own Company, but to all life insurance many of its best and most advanced features. The high purpose, the sincere belief in the dignity and public benefit of insurance as an institution which he carried into all his work made that business a better business for all who are engaged in it.

Society at large has lost in him a useful citizen and forceful member. The same strength of body, mind and character which made him a towering figure in the field of his work, exerted an influence beyond that field which is almost impossible to measure. This influence of strength was widened and deepened by the kindliness, the sincerity and goodness which won the love and loyalty of all those whose lives came into contact with his.

Thus, while it is with deep regret we here inscribe our sorrow for the loss of our President and our friend, we feel that there is much we cannot lose, and for which we and this Company must be ever thankful. For the work that he has done cannot die, the child of his creation is a living thing that must ever grow. All the work, the ideas, the improvements which grew under his guidance, remain. Beyond all, the spirit of labor, courage, and loyalty to the highest ideal of life insurance which his example fostered in this Company will continue to be the guiding light which will lead to greater heights untrod; while the memory of his strength and his kindness will ever be an inspiration to those who carry on the work.

Therefore, be it resolved that we, the Board of Directors of The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company, lament the loss of our President and friend; and that the foregoing expression of our love and regard for his worth and goodness be spread upon the minutes of the Company; and that a copy thereof be sent to his family as a token and assurance of our sympathy for them in their great loss.”

FOUSE FAMILIES

MEMORIAL STATEMENT ADOPTED BY THE ASSOCIATION OF LIFE INSURANCE PRESIDENTS AT A MEETING HELD IN NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 6, 1914.

"It is with profound sorrow that the Association of Life Insurance Presidents records the death of Mr. Levi Garner Fouse. Always original, forceful and far-seeing, his services to the Association were peculiarly helpful at the time of its organization, and as a member of its Executive Committee his active interest continued to the time of his death. His loyalty and willingness to coöperate in all that was best for the interests of the Association were abundantly shown by the time he devoted willingly to its affairs. Even in the days when physical infirmity made it impossible for him to attend its meetings, by personal correspondence and through his fellow-officers whom he sent to represent him, he kept closely in touch with its activities and thus continued to lend a hand to its work.

As organizer and head of The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company his ability as a business man and his clearness of vision as an underwriter were amply shown. The strength and success of his Company are enduring evidence of his integrity, persistency and capacity. Its prosperous condition is a great tribute to his faithfulness and energy.

In all movements looking toward bettering conditions for all life insurance companies he was a force. He served his own Company well but always in a way that served also the best interests of the life insurance business as a whole. In his death this Association and all life insurance companies must join in mourning a common loss."

ADDRESS BY REV. W. COURTLAND ROBINSON, D.D., AT FUNERAL SERVICES OF LEVI GARNER FOUSE, JANUARY 19, 1914.

"Many of us who are here this afternoon have been witnessing with grave concern, the slow weakening of a great oak, and now the tree has fallen in the forest. Not indeed, as we sometimes feared, by a sudden stroke of the woodman, but rather slowly sinking by the insidious working of hidden enemies of health and life.

"The passing of such a man from our community brings to us a sense of crisis. So many interests are touched, when such a power hath been taken out, that we realize that there must be many radical adjustments, and we look forward, it may be with some solicitude. We can understand the spirit of the Psalmist when he cried,—‘Help, Lord, for the Godly men grow few, and the righteous fail from the children of men.’ And at such a time thoughtful people look again to the foundations; to those who are closest it seems as if the ‘earth were removed and the mountains cast into the midst of the sea’ and those of serious mind look to the rock on which they stand. They peer eagerly to see, if possible, the invisible and eternal.

“Memories come into the mind as it were a flood, and we pick out those things that we love and hang them upon the walls of our mind. And it may be that we view the future through windows that are clouded with anxiety and sorrow.

“We have gathered here this afternoon to do honor to the memory of a man whom we knew, and that we may extend our hands in loving sympathy to those who are most sorely bereaved. *

“When a man dies, there is an instinctive and inevitable summing up, the forming of a judgment. ‘It is given unto man once to die and after that judgment.’ Not only the righteous and perfect judgment of God, but the more imperfect judgment of men. We are as those who climb the mountain side, and look back upon the valley. We see its courses and beauties more clearly than when we were a part of it. As we walk side by side in this work-a-day world, our judgments are superficial and unjust. We see the incidents on the surface, and sometimes do not see the great current of the stream. We have our rival ambitions, our contrary opinions, and our diverse emotions; and thus we never see men or things as we should. A small thing close to the eye shuts out the greater thing beyond. Perhaps this is why the Master said, ‘Judge not that ye be judged’ and why the Apostle said ‘Who art thou that judgest?’ But when death intervenes we see the life in its entirety; then we catch its tendencies, and gather up its forces; then we see more clearly whither it was going, and the great purposes hidden within it. Even then indeed our judgment is not perfect, for who can know the heart of man save God, Who made the heart, and Whose all-seeing and loving eye penetrates its holiest sanctuary?

“I take it that if you and I were but to bring to our mind in a single adjective, the chief impression of Mr. Fouse, we would use the adjective ‘strong.’ He was a strong man. Nothing feeble about him. Strong physically, at least so it seemed. That was my impression of him a little more than six years ago when I first saw him. He gave me then the impression of a man of great physical strength, for then he was at the full flood of his manhood. He walked like a strong man, he looked like a strong man. No labor too hard, no burden too heavy, no problem or perplexity too exacting, but he would go forward to it with courage and confidence. He seemed to glory in physical strength. But even then I am told disease had begun its devastating work. Doubtless he overused this gift of God, and labored when he should have rested. He bore burdens that should have been put aside—persisted when nature cried out for respite.

"Strong intellectually. He was splendidly endowed of mind. He improved it by careful training. He investigated, and he was able to bring correct deductions from his investigations. He had a mind both analytic and synthetic, and surely when both are given unto one man, they make his mind strong. Again and again we would discover how carefully he thought out things. Even after his first sign of illness, I was surprised to learn how he studied into his own trouble, and how accurately he measured it all. I am told that, more than most men, he mastered the details of his business, and understood the methods and ways and the intricacies of the complicated insurance world.

"Out of this came the great strength of judgment. His conclusions were formed carefully. I do not believe that any of us, can remember what we might call a ‘snap judgment.’ When a conclusion was arrived at, it was based on reason. It was buttressed and protected—it was hard to find the weak place in the armor or a hole in the wall. He had a reason for the faith in him. Not that he was infallible, but he always knew why he decided thus or so. He was therefore strong in purpose. Having reached his conclusion, and brought it to the light of conscience, and viewed the whole affair, he had a strong purpose. Enemies could not frighten him, or yet good friends swerve him. A purpose once formed went on steadily to the end. This was his characteristic even after feebleness of flesh had crept upon him. A splendid fidelity of purpose. Of course possessing these qualities he was strong in execution, a masterful executive. We only have to look at the great company represented here, which he took as a little blade, and which has grown to be a great tree, for thirty-five years he has been executive head. It takes a master mind to do such things. We had the benefit of it in our own church. For twenty-two years he was the executive head of our Bible school, and he led it always with great care, with great attention to details, and yet with a splendid massing of forces. He gave to us and this school just as willingly of his strong nature as to his business.
"It is not disparaging to the many noble and willing workers to say that the school today, of which we are proud, owes a special and peculiar debt to him.

"Yes, strong in execution, and equally strong in sympathy; not a self-centered man. He loved to overflow the interests of his own company. He reached out to the larger things, always pressing on to the greater insurance world. The interest of his own Bible school did not confine his interest, he must reach to the Association. The interest of his own church, which he surely loved, did not confine him, he must think of his denomination. He had a peculiar feeling and sympathy for the ministers of our church; and it is doubtless due to his executive ability, more than to anyone, that we have the splendid plan of Ministerial Sustentation in the Presbyterian Church today. Not his idea originally, but in due time it fell to him to give it just that moulding that made it practical, and led to its adoption by the church. All the ministers who will receive this benefit will owe a debt to him. He showed a strength in sympathy for others. He had in his nature that which was touched by things and people, never demonstrative, it was often hidden; it might be shown in a very business like fashion, and yet it was there. Again and again I have talked with him concerning men and things and I do not recall an utterance that did not have in it a sign of charity and sympathy for others. He loved to give young people a chance. There are those who would testify to this. Only this morning I was told how he did just the right thing in the right time to relieve a mother anxious for her daughter. He was strong in sympathy and affection. Strong in sympathy, strong in faith. He believed in God and in Jesus Christ His Son, and was never ashamed of his faith. Self confident among men there was notable in him great reverence and humility when he approached God, conscious of his own imperfections, he yet gloried in his Saviour. He loved the church and the congregation of God's people. He loved this church faithfully, and so long as health permitted he was always in it and at our mid-week services. For many years he was elder, the highest honor bestowed on laymen in the Presbyterian Church, and faithfully filled the duties. He watched every phase of the work more carefully than any other man I know, for most of us become more or less specialists.

"One of the pathetic things that we have witnessed these last few months is his insistent coming to this room in great feebleness, because he loved the house of his Father. Strong in faith. Yes I am sure I have chosen the right word, a strong man. Yet there is that which is stronger than the strongest man, there is that which causes the strongest to grow weak. The strong hath become weak and fallen in his place.

"Is that all? If it were all, I indeed would not be a comforter, but a messenger of despair. I go to this Book which he loved, and which he loved to have youth and children learn, and I find that it speaks another message, which tells me of 'joy at God's right hand.' 'That he has rested from his labors and his works follow.' It tells me that 'God will satisfy those who trust Him, with long life,' that means more than a few years; and it tells me that Jesus has gone 'to prepare a place for those who trust Him.' It tells me that 'eye hath not seen nor ear hath heard nor hath it entered the heart of man the glories that God hath prepared for them that love Him.' It tells me that we are saved not by our poor faulty righteousness, for no man is perfect, but it tells me that believers are clothed upon with the spotless righteousness of Jesus, if so be that they put their trust in Him and acknowledge His name. It tells me that he will take those who have thus trusted Him, and as an Advocate and Friend, lead them by the hand into the very presence of the Father and present them before Him, clothed in His own spotless radiant majestic righteousness. We sorrow dear friends, but we sorrow not as others who have no hope. If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so they that believe in Jesus will God bring with Him.'"

CIVIL WAR RECORD OF THE FOUSES⁶

"We will now say a few words in reference to the loyalty of the Fouse relatives, during the Civil War, when the South rebelled, and when war was declared by the President (Abraham Lincoln) of the United States. While the Fouse families regretted the necessity for the President's call to arms, yet sympathized with the North, all the Fouses then living and their kin, were true to the North; and when the call came from the President for men to defend the Union, many of them volunteered (encouraged by their parents) to take up arms to assist in crushing the rebellion. Like all good and true soldiers they were brave and did their duty. Some were left dead and lost on the battlefields; some died in the hospitals; some were wounded and recovered; and fortunately most of them were permitted to return home to enjoy the freedom and liberty of the Union, vouchsafed to them by the Constitution of the United States, after a bloody war of four years.

⁶ Placed in this portion of the book because most of the volunteers were of the fourth generation.

"The reader not acquainted with the characters and spirit of the Fouse clan might infer from an examination of the military records of the participants in the Civil War of the sixties, that they spring from a war-like tribe, and that they foster a passion for war. But those who are familiar with their history know them to be law abiding and peace loving citizens. They deprecate and deplore war more on account of the dire consequences, but they seem also to realize that God now and then carries forward His work through the terrible agency of war.

"The idea of militarism is ingrained in human life and character. The nation that has none of it has never held much of a position in the world and has never accomplished much of anything for the welfare of mankind. The Bible teaches that through the instrumentality of war the Canaanites were dispossessed of the land promised to Abraham's posterity and Israel was made a nation. In the historical account of many wars is not the hand of God discernible? War and conquest, have built up Kingdoms and Republics like Greece and Rome, England and the United States."

"War in the hands of the great King saved England from the blighting invasion of Paganism, and the religion of Mohammed, and prepared her for the higher destiny that awaited her.

"It became necessary to resort to the sword to make the American Colonies free and independent states.

"In these heroic and bloody conflicts for freedom, the love of God and love of country were the noble and controlling passions of the human heart. Taking into consideration the great sacrifices that were made by the Revolutionary fathers to establish this American Republic so favorable for the development for a higher civilization and Christianity of a higher type than had been realized in any other part of the world, it is no wonder that when the call came for men to help defend the Union so many of the Fouse relationship promptly responded. They felt it was their duty to their Great King of Kings, and to their sweet land of liberty."
"The majority of them came safely through the military conflict and lived to see the nation stronger than it was before the bloody strife, and a portion of that strength is due to the development of certain elements in militarism in the people at large.

"A good percentage of the relationship doing military duty to preserve the Union had before their enlistment entered the services of King Emanuel, hence they were Christian soldiers before shouldering the United States musket. We hope that future generations of this noble and free country may never be called upon to take up arms in a similar conflict.

"After the soldiers' return from the army to their respective vocations, they took up the work of the Lord's valiant soldiers of the Cross.

"The records in the War Department at Washington, D. C., tell the number of the Fouse Kin who volunteered. Twenty-six took part in the Civil War and helped to subdue the rebellion, and are also noted in this history, giving the families to which they belonged. Rev. Theobald Fouse had seven sons in the Civil War, viz: Christian, John, Benjamin, Dewalt S., Reuben, Frederick, and Samuel, and two sons-in-law, Anthony Shultz and Samuel Grove. Adam Fouse had three sons in it, viz: John G., Adam G., and Henry S., and one son-in-law, George Nicodemus. Theobald A. Fouse had two sons, viz: George W. and William D. Jonathan Hoover, one son, William. Jacob C. Hoover, one son, Daniel. Jacob Heimbaugh, one son, David. Michael Heimbaugh, one son, Jacob. John Miller, one son, Abraham. Jacob Hopple, son-in-law of Jonathan Miller. Frederick Garner, one son, Alfred. Daniel Garner, one son, Dewalt, and two sons-in-law, William Warren Waddle, and Frederick Leibert. Sarah Peightel, one son, John. All these were in active service in the defense of their country.

"We believe that the present and future generations of the Fouse families will be thankful that so many of the 'Fouse Kin' were willing to enter the arena of the conflict (1861-1865)—if needs be to lay down their lives to save the Union for which their forefathers so nobly struggled and fought in 1776-1783" (Jno. Garner Fouse).

Families of the Fifth Generation

[85] ABRAHAM 4 MILLER, son of [20] John 4 and Catherine (Clay) Miller, was born February 25, 1838. His father died in 1839, and his mother in 1842, leaving him an orphan at the age of 4 years. After his mother's death, he was cared for by his grandmother, Mrs. Abraham Fous Miller, who was kind and true to him as most good grandmothers are. He was early taught to work and practice economy. At school he was an apt student, loved his books and made good use of his time. He advanced rapidly in all the branches taught and passed a satisfactory examination. At 17 years of age, he began teaching and taught for several sessions, at the same time continuing to study for his own improvement. He had saved money and entered Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio, to prepare himself for the ministry. While at college the Civil War broke out; and, under President Lincoln's first call for troops, he enlisted April 22, 1861, and was assigned to Co. H, 8th Reg. Ohio Vol. Inf. On account of illness he was honorably discharged August 1, 1861. He then returned to college, finished his course of studies and, at the General Synod of the Reformed Church at Dayton, Ohio, May 26, 1862, was licensed to preach the Gospel. He organized his first congregation in Louisville, Ohio, November 21, 1863, and in 1868-69, built a new church of brick. He organized a second congregation (St. Peters) near Marlboro, Ohio, during the same year. Both these churches have been replaced by larger and better structures. He built a third new church at North Georgetown, Ohio, in 1883. He organized a congregation at Salem, Ohio, 1892; built a new church at Alliance, Ohio, in 1896; also one at North Jackson, Ohio, in 1905. The last one he built at Kent, Ohio, in 1908. It seems Mr. Miller performed his share in the organizing of congregations, and in the building of churches. In 1900, Mr. Miller was elected chaplain of the Department of Ohio G. A. R. He was elected president of the East Ohio Synod at Canton, Ohio, in 1904, and re-elected at Akron, Ohio, 1905. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Wurtemburg College, Springfield, Ohio. Mr. Miller was an able preacher and did a good work wherever he was located. He did missionary work exclusively throughout his life.

December 5, 1858, he married (1) Mary Dipple, who was born April 10, 1840. She died January 20, 1860, without issue. Mr. Miller then married (2) Mary Smith. This union did not prove congenial, and a separation followed. Mr. Miller again married, May 10, 1871, (3) Mary Miller (but no kin). She was born December 21, 1844, and died November, 1882, without issue. December 5, 1883, he again married (4) Mary E. Stiber, who was born May 1, 1859. This marriage proved a blessing to each of them, and they lived a happy and congenial life. But alas, the reaper death claimed Mr. Miller at his home, 200 Williams Street, Kent, Ohio, April 24, 1911. Thus the town of Kent lost a very able and good preacher, and a good citizen, beloved by all who knew him; and his wife, a kind, devoted and loving husband. They were childless. Mrs. Miller retains their home and her address remains the same (see [10], p. 25, and Plate 51).

[86] ADAM LEWIS Miller, son of [21] Jonathan and Lydia (Cassler) Miller, was born December 14, 1840, on the old Miller homestead, near Canton, Ohio. In March, 1863, he went to Whitely County, Indiana, where on February 9, 1888, he married Sarah Eta Cocklin, born October 29, 1844; daughter of Adam and Barbara (Gaerte) Cocklin. They moved to Clinton County, Iowa, where their first child was born March 18, 1869. In the spring of 1874, they moved to Buchanan County, Missouri. Mr. Miller followed farming until 1884. In 1876, he was elected Justice of the Peace for Marion Township, Buchanan County, Missouri, and has since held the office continuously. In 1895, Mr. Miller located at Stockbridge, Missouri, where he is engaged in carpet and rug weaving. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are members of the German Reformed Church, and he is an independent Democrat. Address, Easton, Missouri, R. F. D. No. 3, Box 58 (Plates 17 and 52).

a Mr. Adam Lewis Miller says the name is "Gaerte," and that Caspar Gaerte, native of Alsace, or Lorain, was father of Elizabeth who married Frederick Fouse [49] and of Barbara, mother of his own wife (see Brunckoch Families, page 398).

Mr. Miller has greatly assisted in gathering Miller-Fouse facts for this portion of this volume, and cordial thanks are herewith extended to him.

village of York Nov. 22, 1778, as is shown by the Zion Reformed church records. He was a laborer by occupation, living nearly all his life in Freystown. In the war of 1812 his patriotic soul was aroused; he enlisted and started for the front; but peace was declared before he became actively engaged. For his services his widow subsequently received a pension from a grateful government. For a number of years he lived in the "stone mansion" of Gottfried's, which then belonged to the Hambly estate; whether he was aware of the family connection with the old house we are unable to say. He died suddenly about 1849. His wife was Anna Mary Sleeger, who died about 1878, in her ninety-second year.

The influence of propinquity in marriages is strikingly illustrated in George Frey's family, as three of his children, George, Anna Mary and Leah, married three children of John Spangler, living in the same township, who was a great-great-grandson of Caspar Spangler, the emigrant, whose descendants are given in the "Spangler Families," and whose ancestors are traced back to the year 1150. Elsewhere is given an illustration of the Spangler house in Weiler, Baden.

[88] JOHN CASSLER MILLER, son of [21] Jonathan and Lydia (Cassler) Miller, was born May 29, 1845, on his father's farm near Canton, Ohio. In 1866, he with his father and family moved to Iowa, and in 1869 to Missouri, in 1871 to Easton, Missouri. In March, 1875, he moved to California, remaining there until 1879, then returned to Buchanan County, Missouri, and bought a farm near Easton. His mother and one unmarried sister kept house for him. In 1881 he entered mercantile business at San Antonio, Missouri. October 15, 1882, he married Dora Emeline Anderson, who was born March 8, 1859, daughter of Robert G. and Elizabeth (Lyons) Anderson. He served several years as postmaster at San Antonio, Missouri. In 1900, he moved to Montana. Mr. Miller's postoffice address is Kalispell, Montana, R. D. No. 3, Box 31 (Plate 17).

[90] ELIZABETH MILLER, daughter of [21] Jonathan and Lydia (Cassler) Miller, was born October 27, 1849; March 19, 1874, she married John Franklin Rapp, born June 3, 1848; son of George and Elizabeth (Schneider) Rapp. Elizabeth was educated in the public schools of Stark County, Ohio, and John in those of Buchanan County, Missouri; both are members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and they own and live upon a fine farm three miles southeast of Easton, Missouri. Mr. Miller is Republican. Address is Saxton, Buchanan County, Missouri, R. R. No. 1 (no children—Plate 17).
[91] MARY⁸ MILLER, daughter of [21] Jonathan⁴ and Lydia (Cassler) Miller, was born May 23, 1853. November 23, 1874, she married Jacob Hoppel of Easton, Missouri; son of Jacob and Sarah (Leveringhouse) Hoppel. Mr. Hoppel was educated in the public schools of Pennsylvania, and Mary in those of Ohio.

Jacob Hoppel enlisted in Co. C, 44th Mo. Vol. Inf., and participated in a number of engagements during the Civil War. He was honorably discharged at St. Louis in 1865, and returned to Easton, Missouri, where he engaged in farming. In 1903 he sold his property and moved to Spokane County, Washington, where they yet reside. Address, Deer Park, Washington, R. F. D. No. 2, Box 8 (Plate 17).

Mrs. Whitmore was educated in the public schools of Ohio, and her husband in those of Iowa; they are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

After marriage, they moved to San Antonio, Missouri, and Mr. Whitmore, with his wife's brother John Cassler⁵ Miller [88], engaged in mercantile business. In 1888 he was appointed deputy sheriff of Buchanan County, Missouri. Some time in the nineties they moved to Stewartville, DeKalb County, Missouri, where they have since lived. He is a Democrat, a notary public, conveyancer, etc. (Plate 17).

[106] LAFAYETTE⁶ CASSLER, son of [23] Elizabeth⁴ (Miller) Cassler and William Cassler, was born December 15, 1846, near Cairo, Stark County, Ohio.

The subject of this biographical sketch was reared on the farm and spent his childhood and youth at the parental home. He obtained the rudiments of an education at the public school of the neighborhood in which the family resided, and made fair progress in the branches taught. He no doubt had to do his part of the work on the farm, and this did not give him so much time for self improvement as he desired. He later made excellent use of opportunities. In March, 1859, he made a public profession of his faith in Christ as his personal Saviour, and early in life he had the love for Gospel effort but was not prompt in yielding to the Divine call to the holy ministry. He, however, served the Master for about 27 years in the line of Sunday school work and prayer meetings, etc.

September 21, 1869, he married Melevina Amelia Weaver, born August 21, 1844; daughter of George and Charlotte (Ginther) Weaver. After living a number of years in Ohio, on account of Mrs. Cassler's physical condition, change of residence became a necessity. Therefore, on September, 1886, he removed to Cook County, Texas. Soon after his settlement in Texas he was induced to preach occasionally, but then refused to be known as a preacher. In August, 1893, he received a marvelous baptism with the Holy Ghost, and was at once commissioned to preach the Gospel. In 1895 he located in Custer County, Oklahoma, and immediately became a pioneer preacher with an unlimited field before him. He was ordained by Bishop Joseph Key, in November, 1899, at Ardmore, Oklahoma. He became a pioneer worker and evangelist in the propagation of Holiness in Oklahoma; also a member of the Oklahoma Holiness Association, and an incorporator of the Holiness Commission; and for a short time he was editor of the first publication of the said society. In the state road campaign of 1907, he took the platform for state wide prohibition and helped to make Oklahoma "dry." His labors are chiefly amongst the poor and neglected. He receives no stipulated salary in compensation for his services, and accepts only free-will offerings. For forty-two years he has been able to pay the Lord's tenth, and even more, and provide for his family and other necessaries that are incumbent on him to pay. He was pastor of the Pentecostal Church of the Nazarene at Mangum, Greer County, Oklahoma, but recently took charge of the church of the same name at Castle, Oklahoma* (Plate 54).

* Owing to frequent changes of location, it was difficult to locate Rev. La Fayette Cassler. Once located, he was prompt to assist with facts, sent his photograph with check to pay for the illustration, and an order for four volumes of the history—one for each daughter.

[153] Daniel C. Hoover, son of [31] Margaret[4] (Garner) Hoover and Jacob C. Hoover, was born on Clover Creek, near Drab postoffice, July 28, 1836. About 1842, his father purchased a farm four miles north of Martinsburg on Piney Creek, Huston Township, Huntingdon (now Blair) County, Pennsylvania. He was the only son reared in his father's family (his sister died at the age of two years). He entered school at the proper age, when the public school system was in its formative period. He was an apt and industrious student and made rapid progress in the branches then taught. In addition he studied surveying under Professor Miller and the Scranton Correspondence School. He also attended a Normal Institute five weeks at Martinsburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania, in the spring of 1858. In the spring of 1859, he attended for two months a select training school for teachers at Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, taught by the late Dr. Andrew Boelus Brumbaugh of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania. He taught school for a number of winter sessions, worked on his father's farm in the summer and in addition did surveying. In later years he made surveying a business, in connection with his farm work. He was known as an expert in calculating surveys.

During the Civil War, he enlisted in the service of the United States as a private in Co. E, 104th Reg. Pa. Vol. Inf. A short time after entering the service he was appointed Third Corporal of his Company. Mr. Hoover was an excellent penman. He was detailed as clerk for several months by the government while in service. He served to the end of the war with distinction, was honorably discharged at Portsmouth, Virginia, on the 25th day of August, 1865, and was mustered out at Camp Cadwalader, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. After returning home he resumed farm work and also did surveying.

April 1, 1871, upon the resignation of Jacob Higgins, he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Huston Township Cooperative Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Fredericksburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania, and rendered efficient service. December 2, 1867, he married Eliza Jane Rhodes, of Piney Creek, daughter of A. D. and Eliza Ann Rhodes. Mr. Hoover died November 23, 1910, and was buried in Fairview Cemetery, Martinsburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania.

[155] JOHN⁶ PEIGHTEL, son of [32] Sarah⁴ (Garner) Peightel and Henry Peightel, was born November 14, 1839. This was the only son who grew to manhood. He was reared on the parental home farm near McConnellstown, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. He was a young man of sterling qualities, and became quite a help to his father in operating the farm. In the winter season he attended the public school after the free school system became operative. The school term at that period was limited to three months. It was difficult to secure good teachers. Notwithstanding the many disadvantages the pupils had in those days, the subject of this sketch made satisfactory progress, and at the termination of his school days he had a fair business education.

December 4, 1862, Mr. Peightel married (1) Margaret Hamer, born August 27, 1840, of the same county. After marriage he continued to work on his home farm until in the early spring of 1865, when he enlisted to serve in the United States army. He was assigned to Co. K, 78th Reg. Pa. Vol. Inf. In September the same year, he was honorably mustered out of service. Returning home to his family he again engaged in farming. His wife died May 2, 1875, aged 34 years, 8 months and 5 days. September 20, 1877, married (2) Margaret Bauer Greaser, born August 30, 1846; daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Bauer) Greaser, who also died January 13, 1883, aged 36 years, 4 months and 13 days.

When the oldest children were grown up Mr. Peightel purchased and took possession of a farm in Hartslog Valley, about two miles north of his parental home. Here he spent the remainder of his life, passing away April 14, 1894, aged 54 years, 5 months. His son Thomas for some time before the termination of his earthly career was an invalid, the result of an accident.

[761] Margaret, b January 3, 1883; d August 11, 1883.

[159] MARY JANE PEIGHTEL, daughter of [32] Sarah (Garner) Peightel and Henry Peightel, was born at the homestead a mile south of McConnellstown, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, February 16, 1848. She attended the public school from early childhood until she was in her teens. She was married to Samuel Dean Heffner, of McConnellstown, Pennsylvania, May 6, 1869. They resided in Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, a short time. The oil industry encouraged them to locate at Parker's Landing, Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, then at Petrolia, Butler County, Pennsylvania, and later at Bradford, Pennsylvania, where they still reside. Mr. Heffner is superintendent of the water department of Bradford. They attend the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Heffner is of a jovial disposition and consequently carries sunshine with her wherever she goes. Relations, friends and nephews are always welcome at her home (Plate 55).

Children (2), surname Heffner:

[764] + Daisy May, b February 17, 1873; m Hon. Robert Patton Habgood.
[765] + Henry Clay, b August 8, 1874; m Minnie Hane.

[160] MARGARET ANN PEIGHTEL, daughter of [32] Sarah (Garner) Peightel and Henry Peightel, was born June 6, 1850, at the homestead near McConnellstown, Pennsylvania. December 24, 1873, she was married to George P. Booth of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. She attends the Presbyterian Church. For a number of years they have resided at Bradford, Pennsylvania. (No children.)

[161] SARAH ALICE PEIGHTEL, daughter of [32] Sarah (Garner) Peightel and Henry Peightel was born near McConnellstown, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, June 8, 1852. All the daughters in the mother's home were taught to be good housekeepers. Sarah attended the local cultural schools, and also was much interested in instrumental music.

In 1876 Sarah Alice Peigeltel married Micaiah Reden Evans, M.D., born April 5, 1843, in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania; son of Abraham and Mary Ann (Corbin) Evans—Abraham was son of Roland and Mary Evans. Dr. Evans attended the common schools, Saltillo Academy, and graduated (M.D. 1876) from Jefferson Medical College. He served three schools and has served as school director in Saxton, Bedford County and in Huntingdon, Pennsylvania; practiced medicine at Donations and at Saxton, Bedford County, and at Huntingdon, where he continues in the active practice of his profession. He has served as president and secretary of Huntingdon County Medical Society and is deacon in Reformed Church, at Huntingdon.a

Children (3), surname Evans:

[767] + Ernest Newton, b December 16, 1876; m Elizabeth Helen Vincent.
[768] Mary Bertha, b ——.
[769] Lillian May, b ——.

[162] SUSANNA PEIGHTEL, daughter of [32] Sarah (Garner) Peigeltel and Henry Peigeltel, was born near McConnellstown, May 19, 1854.
She attended public school. She was married December 23, 1880, to William S. Hallman of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania. For several years Mr. Hallman was proprietor of a temperance hotel in Huntingdon, but for a number of years they have been living a retired life in the same town.
Mrs. Hallman, like her mother, delights in keeping her house in a tidy condition. They are members of the Reformed Church at Huntingdon Pennsylvania. (No issue).

[163] LYDIA IDA PEIGHTEL, daughter of [32] Sarah (Garner) Peigeltel and Henry Peigeltel, was born at the homestead a mile south of McConnellstown, Pennsylvania, November 15, 1857. Her school advantages were such as were obtainable in the public school within a few minutes walk of the Peigeltel residence. Their home being provided with an organ in her childhood, she took an interest in music, both instrumental and vocal. Early in life it was her pleasure occasionally to entertain company with her performances on the organ and singing. Her sisters being established in their own homes, it fell to her lot to remain with her mother in the decline of life. To be free from the cares and responsibilities of managing the farm and to be convenient to church and to enjoy other advantages, she and her mother moved to McConnellstown, Pennsylvania.

Lydia Ida patiently and faithfully performed the duties which devolved upon her in caring for her mother until the latter’s earthly pilgrimage came to an end. She is a member of the Reformed Church at McConnellstown, where she resides.

[164] MARY ANN GARNER, daughter of [33] Daniel and Margaret (Auperly) Garner, was born in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, October 24, 1841. November 29, 1869, in Grant County, Wisconsin she married Henry Smith, who was born in Hessen Darmstadt, Germany, August 10, 1837, and is a son of Adam and Elizabeth (Henkel) Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the Evangelical Church and live on a farm near Stitzer, Grant County, Wisconsin.

[169] MARIAH JANE Garner, daughter of [33] Daniel⁴ and Elizabeth (Sorrick) Garner, was born May 25, 1854. She married Watson Elilugh Clifton, December 13, 1871. He was born in Platteville, Wisconsin, August 16, 1841; son of William and Frances Clifton. Mr. Clifton is a carpenter, Progressive Republican, and both he and his wife are members of the Congregational Church.

Mrs. Clifton has shown especial interest concerning her general portion of this family history, and cordial thanks are hereby returned to her for that assistance. Residence, Lancaster, Grant County, Wisconsin.

Children (2), surname Clifton:

[812] + Archie Roy, b July 17, 1874; m Sarah Winnifred Goodnough.
[813] + Lester Eugene, b April 12, 1879.
GEORGE FREY. Of Michael all that is known is that he appears on the assessment books of Dover township in 1805, 1810, 1817 and 1818, his occupation being a weaver, and his taxable property a small house and lot and one cow. The last of the Lanius deeds shows that Elizabeth and Michael were both living in 1830, and that is the last data that could be found about them. At that time Elizabeth was only 48 years old, and it was hoped that she had lived long enough after that date to bring her within the recollection of some one who might yet be living; but the hope was in vain. The Zion Reformed Church records show the baptism of two children of Elizabeth and Michael Weigel, Elizabeth Weigel, b. Dec. 14, 1804. Susan Weigel, b. Apr. 9, 1806. Doubtless, when these children reached maturity, they married, and thus, with the change of name, their identity as Weigels has been lost. At the graveyard connected with Quickel's Church there is a tombstone erected to the memory of George Weigel, b. Aug. 4, 1803; d. Sept. 27, 1842. This man might have been a son of Elizabeth's, the name George lending color to this view.

[171] REUBEN PETER PHILIP* GARNER, son of [33] Daniel* and Elizabeth (Sorrick) Garner, was born April 21, 1838. He married Fannie Luella Starr, born July 22, 1861; daughter of William and Mary Starr. Mr. Garner is a Congregationalist, Prohibitionist, and resides on his father's farm at Lancaster, Grant County, Wisconsin.

Children (2):

[815] + Laura Marie* b December 11, 1881; m Clarence Hinch.

[172] WILLIAM DANIEL* GARNER, son of [33] Daniel* and Elizabeth (Sorrick) Garner, was born May 2, 1860. April 10, 1901, he married Emma Jane Neuroth, daughter of Christopher and Anna (Samuel) Neuroth. Mr. Garner is a Progressive Republican, Congregationalist, and resides at Lancaster, Grant County, Wisconsin. (No children.)

[173] ABIGAIL LANDA* GARNER, daughter of [33] Daniel* and Elizabeth (Sorrick) Garner, was born April 17, 1863. She married August Kohlenburg, born April 11, 1863; son of Gottlieb and Bertha (Storms) Kohlenburg. Mr Kohlenburg is a farmer, Republican, and address is Drexel, Cass County, Missouri.

Children (4), surname Kohlenburg:

[820] Allen Gottlieb*, b August 9, 1893.

[174] EMMA LUELLA* GARNER, daughter of [33] Daniel* and Elizabeth (Sorrick) Garner, was born February 3, 1866, and on October 26, 1887, married Barnard Irwin Kerr, born May 5, 1865; son of William and Martha Kerr. Mr. Kerr was educated in the common schools; is a Democrat; and he and his wife are members of the Congregational Church. Address, Archie, Cass County, Missouri.

Children (3), surname Kerr:

[824] Irene Martha*, b March 26, 1893.
[175] ULYSSES GRANT Garner, son of [33] Daniel and Elizabeth (Sorrick) Garner, was born February 21, 1869. February 11, 1902, he married Caroline Hoefnner, born December 2, 1886, daughter of Leonard and Rosine (Vogel) Hoefnner—latter both born in Germany. Mr. Garner is a contractor for concrete construction, and his address is Drexel, Cass County, Missouri.

Children (7):

[827] Elizabeth Caroline, b December 29, 1902.
[828] Paul Henry, b January 1, 1904.
[829] Lawrence Harold, b October 27, 1906.
[830] Virgil Ulysses, b August 21, 1908.
[833] Ruth Agnes, b January 31, 1913.

[176] ALFRED Garner, son of [34] Frederick and Margaret (Sorrick) Garner, was born October 25, 1845, at Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. In 1859, for a brief period, he lived with his parents in William County, Ohio. After his father's second marriage, he spent several years with relatives in Morrison's Cove and in Woodcock Valley.

Before attaining 17 years of age, he enlisted in the service of the United States Government, Co. H, 107th Ohio Vol. Inf., and, after spending two years and nearly four months in the army, was honorably discharged. On his return home he worked at the carpenter trade and became a skilled mechanic. For a number of years he was in the employ of C. Aultman and Company, in their shops at Canton, Ohio. Frequently the said Company sent him out to carefully install machinery.

August 1, 1869, Mr. Garner married Celinda Schlodtt, born in Ohio, October 3, 1848. Since 1908 he has been prison chaplain in Canton, Ohio. Residence, 1427 Logan Avenue.

One son:

[836] Calvin L., b August 23, 1870; m Sallie E. Patterson.

[177] ELI Garner, son of [34] Frederick and Margaret (Sorrick) Garner was born March 21, 1850, at Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. At a very tender age he was deprived of a mother's care and sympathy. In his tenth year he went with his father and stepmother to Ohio to reside. As he grew up to manhood, he learned the carpenter’s trade. For some years he worked for the C. Aultman Company in their shops at Canton.

March 13, 1873, he was married to Maggie McCartney of Blair County, Pennsylvania. They reside at Canton, Ohio.

Children (2):

[839] Wilbur L.°, b May 28, 1876; unm.
[840] Paul°, b May 18, 1884.

[176] Franklin° Garner, son of [34] Frederick° and Fanny (Shiffler) Garner, was born November 9, 1858, in Blair County, Pennsylvania. In very early childhood the family settled near Louisville, Ohio, and some years later close to Canton, Ohio. He enjoyed good school advantages compared with those of his two brothers. Like his father and brothers, he became a carpenter. He worked for some time in the C. Aultman Company’s shops at Canton but later followed agricultural pursuits.

January 27, 1881, he married Melissa Roath, born in Stark County, Ohio, April 10, 1862. They reside at Canton, Ohio.

One son:

[843] Howard°, b June 7, 1889.

[180] Harrison° Garner, son of [35] Adam° and Catharine (Summers) Garner, was born at Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, August 20, 1847. He was amongst the first children to begin life in this village. In his fourth year he was deprived of a father’s fostering care. At the earnest solicitation of his paternal grandparents, in his seventh year he was transferred from his maternal home to the farm on which his father was born and reared. As he developed physically and mentally, he became more and more serviceable in the home and in the field. The farm was then operated by his uncle, William Garner. After entering his teens he spent a winter or two with his mother, and this afforded him better school advantages than he had while on the farm. In the fall of 1863, he began the study of telegraphy under W. C. Long at Marklesburg station. January 15, 1864, the teacher resigned, leaving the young pupil in charge of the office, depot agency, and a small store. The inexperienced operator now realized the importance of an education to equip him for the performance of the duties of his office. He procured books and studied them, and in this way acquired knowledge fitting him more fully for his position, and at the same time adding to his fund of general information. In April, 1864, the railroad company transferred him to the Coffee Run office, now Entrekin, Pennsylvania, and June 27, 1864, he was promoted to the Huntingdon office, at $30 per month. In August, 1864, he went to Reno, thence to Erie, Pennsylvania. He worked at various other offices for railroad companies, as at Galion, Dayton, and Cincinnati, in Ohio; and for the Western Union Telegraph Company, at Chicago, Illinois. In April, 1878, he withdrew from this line of work and became chief clerk in the store room of J. C. Tarrant's shoe factory at Cincinnati which position he filled until January, 1899. When his labors at the factory terminated, for the benefit of his health, he sought and found outdoor employment as a salesman which position he retained until his last illness, which was about ten days before his death, November 4, 1902, aged 55 years, 2 months, and 14 days. He was buried at Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mr. Garner united with the Lutheran Church at Marklesburg, Pennsylvania, in youth, and later united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in Cincinnati, Ohio. May 1, 1878, he married Lou A. Maclaskey, born March 5, 1853, in New England. They were married in Cincinnati, where they lived, and Mrs. Garner has recently made her home with her daughter in Chicago, Illinois.

Children (2):

[846] + Grace Tarrant, b April 11, 1880; m Merle E. Robinson.
[847] + Leslie Henry, b August 10, 1881; m Ethel Weishroett.

[181] HENRY SUMMERS GARNER, son of [35] Adam and Catharine (Summers) Garner, was born May 29, 1849, at Marklesburg, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania. Being under two years of age when his father was translated from this world to the one beyond, he never learned by actual experience what a priceless boon it is to be piloted through the formative and developing period of childhood and youth by a kind and wise father, but learned to know that a father's place was measurably supplied by others. It was his good fortune to be surrounded from childhood to early manhood by hallowed influences. In his boyhood days he was associated with men whose language was exceptionally chaste. Up to the time of his seventh year, his home was wherever his mother was domiciled. At that time his mother was induced to forego, for a while at least, the comforts and cares of housekeeping to accommodate a relative in need of her services. This circumstance prepared the way for the son to enter the home of his maternal grandmother, Sarah (Boyer) Summers. The two dwelling houses being in close proximity on the same farm, the transition from the one home to the other was made without making much impression on his mind. As regards correct habits of life and domestic tranquillity this was a good home for a boy. Trained to habits of industry, economy and honest living, he was encouraged to attend public school regularly.
On account of a siege of typhoid fever in the fall of 1863, the greater portion of a four months' school term was lost. But this sickness brought about a turning point in the history of this young man’s life, in that it awakened a consciousness of his relationship to a kind Heavenly Father.
At that time the Sunday school was in operation from spring until fall and closed in autumn. He was a regular attendant at the Sunday school services at the Markleburg Reformed Church. It was his pleasure to read such books as the library contained. Many hours during the summer were devoted to reading this literature and committing to memory the answers to questions in a “Union Question Book.” The knowledge of the Bible acquired at that period has been of service to him in riper years.

On his return from the Summers (now Fouse's) School in February, 1864, he was notified that arrangements were made to change his home—to go from his Uncle Jacob Summers to his Uncle Henry H. Summers, who then resided on the Daniel P. Brumbaugh farm. Early next morning he gathered together nearly all his belongings and tying them in a bundle journeyed on foot to the new home. He attended the Coffee Run public school the same day, and continued to the end of the term. A year later his uncle enlisted as a soldier in the Union army, and his family was then removed to his father-in-law’s. Here there was employment for him in the summer of 1865. In the fall he concluded to accept a pressing invitation to enter his step-father’s home near Williamsburg, in order to take advantage of school facilities superior to those heretofore enjoyed, with a view of preparing for teaching. A winter's term followed by a short session of subscription school and a quarter session at Martinsburg Collegiate Institute, in the fall of 1866, enabled him to pass the examination for teaching. He taught school that winter near Martinsburg, and saved sufficient funds so that he could spend the summer term of 1867 at Kishacoquillas Seminary, Mifflin County, Pennsylvania. This was followed by a second term of teaching, which was at the Acker schoolhouse, Morrison's Cove. He boarded at the hospitable home of Adam Fouse, a great uncle. In this home there was not only a religious, but a denominational atmosphere. Here he was “challenged” with the claims of the Christian ministry.
THE FIFTH GENERATION

Having been confirmed at 16, after a course of catechetical instruction, by the Rev. Theobald Fouse, and wishing to do what he conceived to be his duty under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, he determined to prepare himself for the high and holy calling, and to go to school with that end in view. Mercersburg College was a young institution of much promise, and was attracting to her classic halls many young men, and some from the pastoral charge to which he belonged, and the conclusion was to go there. He passed through this college, ranked third in a class of nine, and began a seminary course at Mercersburg, but completed it at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, May, 1877. When Mercersburg College was changed to an Academy, the graduates of this college were enrolled as graduates of Franklin and Marshall College.

May 28, 1877, he was licensed to preach the Gospel by Mercersburg Classis in annual session at the Marklesburg Reformed Church. It was a singular coincidence that this occurred in the same church in which he had been confirmed. A period of patient waiting ensued. Discipline in it served to test and strengthen faith. Willing to work, a call came from the Schellsburg charge, Bedford County, Pennsylvania. For this charge there was earnest prayer made, but no one was written to in reference to the matter. With a due sense of the overwhelming solemnity of the sacred office and work, he entered upon the duties in said charge, being ordained and installed March 14, 1878. He labored in this charge over six years. Another field of usefulness presented itself and Juniata Classis decided he should go; hence Scottdale, Pennsylvania, was his next field. He was there from May 1, 1884, to September 30, 1888; at Fairview charge from October 1, 1888, to December 27, 1896; and at Harrold charge from January 1, 1896, to April 1, 1904. From that date to January, 1908, he served vacant charges, chiefly within the bounds of Westmoreland Classis and continued to reside at Greensburg, Pennsylvania. He spent four months in 1907, as principal of the schools at St. Paul’s Orphan Home, Butler, Pennsylvania.

The years 1908 and 1909 were spent as pastor of Stonestown charge, Somerset County, Pennsylvania. His present field is at Dayton, Armstrong County, Pennsylvania. His duties have been such as are incident to the office of a Gospel minister. The material part, or visible fruit of his labors is as follows: Organized three congregations; erected two churches for the newly organized congregations, one at Ruffsdale and one at Youngwood; repaired five churches and two parsonages; purchased three church bells; purchased six organs, four in one charge in eighteen months; freed three churches from debts of five to ten years standing, aggregating $3,600. His preference has been charges affording considerable out of door work, as his constitution required physical exercise. In 1909, he traveled about 3,100 miles chiefly in the buggy, and in the same year preached 161 times.

He has filled the following positions of trust and responsibility: treasurer of Classis, vice president of Synod, president of Classis, eight years a director of St. Paul's Orphan Home, president of public school board for three years. His life and labors as the servant of the Lord can be properly estimated by Him only who sees the end from the beginning.

October 17, 1888, Mr. Garner married Anna Mary Kunkle, born February 11, 1864, on the Kunkle homestead in Armstrong County, near Apollo, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania; daughter of Franklin and Leanna Catharine (Vockey) Kunkle. Mrs. Garner attended district public schools, and several terms of select school elsewhere. She was organist for six years in the home church, and also after marriage, for about the same period in churches of which her husband was pastor. Her services as a singer are frequently desired. Address, Dayton, Armstrong County, Pennsylvania* (Plate 56).

DAVID AUGUSTUS FREY, b. Feb. 4, 1826; d. July, 1900.

Printer and Publisher. Founder of the York Pennsylvanian in 1851, a weekly newspaper which flourished for over fifty years. In 1876 he admitted his son, David E., into partnership, which continued for a year, when the latter retired on account of ill health. In 1879 V. K. Frey was given an interest, and when David A. retired in 1887 the son continued the business until the discontinuance in 1906.

In 1854 David A. Frey married Mary Johnston King, a daughter of Henry King, who owned a large farm on both sides of the Codorus creek above Penn street. Mrs. Frey was a descendant of Yost Harbaugh, a French Huguenot who fled to Switzerland on account of religious persecution and emigrated to America, purchasing a tract near Kreutz creek. He was one of Gottfried Frey's fellow laborers in the erection of the first Reformed Church at York.

Mrs. Frey was born Oct. 15, 1836, and died in July, 1906.

[236] DAVID Heimbaugh, son of [41] Mary (Fouse) Heimbaugh and Jacob Heimbaugh, was born March 15, 1844. November 28, 1872 were the family finances that the mother eeked out by selling ginger cakes and bread, and in early life young Samuel juggled his mother's wares through the streets of York. "When he had but just entered his teens" his mother died, and the younger children were scattered among those who could give a home for their work. At first Samuel was placed with a man in Freystown who proposed to have him work at weaving in the winter and in a brickyard in summer; but the death of the benevolent gentleman put an end to this transaction. Then an uncle attempted to teach him the trade of gunsmith; to this Samuel did not take kindly. Then he was apprenticed for a term of five years to a shoemaker. Possibly it was for this that a guardian was appointed. Whether the young man by this time realized that he simply was compelled to learn some trade to make a living or whether he took more kindly to this occupation than the others is unknown; certain it is that he became an adept at the art, learning it so well that at the end of his apprenticeship he set up in business for himself, and soon had several employes working for him. Though he made other business ventures which were much more profitable, he continued in the shoemaking trade for over twenty-five years and taught it to at least one of his sons. But Samuel saw other things besides leather and pegs, and when he was but twenty years old he married Anna Kissinger, daughter of Philip Kissinger, and a lineal descendant of Christine von Sitler, the daughter of that German Baron whose mythical fortune has lured contributions from many Pennsylvanians in a vain attempt to recover alleged millions. Anna was born May 3, 1790, and is the one grandparent whose kindly features the writer saw and can recall to this day. Samuel married with thirty dollars in his pocket. To provide a home for his bride he bought a lot of ground on which was erected a small log cabin; but this only provided room for his shoemaker shop. So he purchased an abandoned still house, and used the

DAVID HEIMBAUGH (1836) AND AMANDA (BAIR) HEIMBAUGH (1833 AND RECENTLY).
This humble habitation was situated at what is now 666-672 East Market street, and, with some additions and alterations, was his home up to a few years before his death. The work on this house was nearly all done after shop hours, and the extra toil and exposure resulting therefrom brought on a chronic rheumatism, from which he suffered all through life, and which bowed his spine almost to the extent of a deformity. As the additions, one-story high, all fronted on the street, he facetiously termed it a "three-story house along the ground." The final completion of a home started a train of thought in Samuel's mind which led to the purchase of several low priced tracts of land and the gradual erection thereon of cheap houses which were sold to people in poor circumstances on the installment plan. During his lifetime he built fifty such houses, and many a poor man acquired a home in this manner that otherwise would have had to pay rent all his life. He also reached out into the country and buying tracts of so-called barren lands he cut the timber and used it in the burning of lime and brick, to which business he turned his attention after he abandoned the shoemaker's calling. After the wood was cut off much of the lime burned thereby was put on the land, and with its soil thus enriched a tidy profit was made on the sale of the originally barren tract.

In those days patriotism largely found expression in military ardor and the little York of that time had more active militia companies than the populous city of today. Samuel Frey was for years, notwithstanding his physical afflictions, captain of one of these companies, and was generally known by that title. Samuel's family record gives several instances of intermarriage and the results of propinquity, in a little more varied degree than that of his cousin George.

Jacob Kaincr, and subsequently married Sarah Kaincr. Jacob Ramer moved on a farm in West Manchester township, from which John Gallatin removed, and in the summer the Gallatins came to reap the grain so much the previous fall, at which time 1677 Anna Mary Frey was visiting her sister. The acquaintance there made resulted in her marriage to Albert Gallatin. Likewise at this wedding or soon thereafter 1677 Samuel Frey met Delia Gallatin, and three years later they were married. John Drayer went to Michael Boeckel's in Freystown to learn the tailoring trade, and he and young Boeckel married the remaining two of 1677's daughters. Samuel was esteemed by his neighbors to such an extent that he held several minor offices, and in 1851 was elected to the office of County Treasurer by the largest majority ever received up to that time by a candidate of his party; but on Dec. 5, 1851, before he could take possession of the newly acquired office, he died, in a house standing on the site of the present No. 713 East Market street, now occupied by 163225, leaving to survive him his widow and ten children.

There are produced herewith illustrations of nine of these children, and, in the absence of any portrait of his own, his features must be imagined from a composite group of these descendants. His widow and a crippled son made their home with the oldest daughter to the day of their death, the widow dying Feb. 18, 1870, and the son (1674 Emanuel Frey) Nov. 7, 1871. Samuel's descendants, numbering more than any of his brothers and sisters or cousins, are given herewith:

[279] REUBEN⁶ FOUSE, son of [49] Frederick⁴ and Elizabeth (Gearty) Fouse, was born March 4, 1853. December 28, 1875 he married Salina Royer. They lived on a farm near Hartville, Stark County, Ohio—the same tract preempted by his grandfather John Fouse, October 8, 1818 (see Plate 9). Reuben, being next to the oldest son, became possessor of the farm, but does not live on it. Being mechanically inclined, he followed contracting and building. He lived at Akron, but became paralyzed about eleven years ago, and, unable longer to work, he and his wife went to Kansas City, Missouri, in 1910, with his son Winnefred. The mother died there in 1911, and Reuben took the body back to Akron, where he has since remained (Plate 62).

One son:

[280] JACOB J.⁶ FOUSE, son of [49] Frederick⁴ and Elizabeth (Gearty) Fouse, was born January 17, 1855, and November 28, 1878, married Emma J. Wise. They reside on North Hill, Akron, Ohio. Occupation, carpenter and joiner. Mr. Fouse is an expert mechanic and builder, and an overseer of contracts, and is a very busy man. He and his wife are very comfortably situated on Tallmadge Street, Akron, Ohio. They are blessed with plenty of this world’s goods and are charitably inclined. They are kind to their neighbors, friends and relatives, and ever receive them kindly at their hospitable home. They are members of Trinity Reformed Church. Mrs. Fouse is educating a young man for the ministry. (No children. Plate 62.)

[281] EDWIN P.⁶ FOUSE, son of [49] Frederick⁴ and Elizabeth (Gearty) Fouse, was born May 1, 1857, and married Mary Rose on December 24, 1878. They reside in Akron, Ohio, and are members of the Trinity Reformed Church of that place, taking an active interest in all its services.
Mr. Fouse is a handy, all around man and can suit himself to almost any kind of work, as occasion requires. He lives on his own farm, part of the Akron homestead farm, and does some farming but devotes much of his time to other business. At present he is employed with one of the rubber manufactories of the city (Plate 62).

[283] Minodes Fouse, son of [49] Frederick and Elizabeth (Gearty) Fouse, was born February 12, 1861, and March 23, 1883, married Christina Rose. He follows the carpenter's trade in Akron, Ohio. The family are members of the Reformed Church of that city.

Mrs. Fouse died November 5, 1909. She was an excellent help-mate and a kind, good mother. The family residence is 500 Schiller Avenue, Akron, Ohio (Plate 62).

Children (3):

[1136] Charles M., b March 16, 1883.
[1138] John Floyd, b September 22, 1887; m Hazel Weaver.

[284] Fernando Fouse, son of [49] Frederick and Elizabeth (Gearty) Fouse, was born December 14, 1864. December 25, 1884, he married Lydia Rose. Occupation, carpenter and joiner. They are members of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Fouse from his boyhood has been mechanically inclined and in his youth worked with his brothers at the carpenter trade, but of late years he takes contracts to manage and oversee all kinds of buildings and is considered an expert in erecting and finishing buildings. They reside on Schiller Avenue, Akron, Ohio (Plate 62).
THE FIFTH GENERATION

One son:
[1140] William Earl, b October 28, 1890, address, 506 Schiller Avenue, Akron, Ohio.

[285] WILLIAM F. FOUSE, son of [49] Frederick and Elizabeth [Gearty] Fouse was born February 2, 1867, on the original Fouse homestead preempted by John Fouse, his grandfather, in October, 1818, in Stark County, Ohio. A few years after William's birth, his father bought another farm near Akron, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, and moved over there in the spring of 1872 when William was 5 years old. Thus he spent his boyhood days on the farm, and in the country school. After he finished his course in the public schools, he entered Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio. He next entered the University of Ohio, at Wooster, and graduated therefrom in the class of 1893. He then commenced to read law and engaged in teaching school to meet expenses. He followed this occupation for several years, but it did not appeal to him as a profession although the years he spent in teaching were a success. He preferred law to teaching, and kept on reading law. He was examined in June, 1897, and was admitted to the bar in Ohio. He then abandoned teaching, and opened his law office in the city of Akron, Ohio. He has been successful in his practice, and with it handled a lot of real estate and placed mortgages for his clients; and has also interested himself in real estate to some extent in the development of manufacturing interests of the city.

August 26, 1894, Mr. Fouse married Ada Keller, daughter of Joel F. and Susannah Keller, of Sulphur Springs, Ohio. Mr. Fouse and family are members of Trinity Reformed Church of Akron, Ohio. The congregation honored him by electing him a deacon, which office he has held for a number of years. Residence, 576 Schiller Avenue, Akron, Ohio. (Plate 62).

Children (2):
[1142] Howard Keller, b April 1, 1895.

[286] IRA FOUSE, son of [49] Frederick and Elizabeth (Gearty) Fouse, was born May 20, 1870. September 30, 1892, he married Bessie Greenland, of Jamestown, New York. Mr. Fouse died at Akron, Ohio October 20, 1896, and his wife died December 8, 1897, in the same city.
One daughter:

[1145] Ruth Elizabeth⁴, b May 13, 1893; address, 2 Stearns Avenue, Jamestown, New York.

[287] GEORGE W.⁵ FOUSE⁴, son of [51] Theobald ("Dewalt") Adam⁴ and Margaret (Duncan) Fouse, was born June 29, 1844. When the Civil War broke out in 1861, he enlisted in the service of the United States among the first calls for troops, at the age of 16 years. Death claimed him December 13, 1861.

[288] WILLIAM DUNCAN FOUSE⁵, son of [51] Theobald Adam⁴ and Margaret (Duncan) Fouse, was born December 23, 1845, and lived with his father. In the winter he went to school and in the summer he worked on the farm.

On the seventh day of August, 1862, when not 17 years of age, he enlisted in the nine months' service in Co. B, 125th Pa. Vol. Inf. He arrived home on the eighteenth day of May, 1863. On the twenty-fourth day of June, 1863, he again enlisted in Co. D, 22nd Pa. Cav., for a term of six months. In this Company he received the appointment as Sergeant. After serving his full term, he received an honorable discharge on the fifth day of February, 1864. He then remained home and helped his father on the farm until the eighteenth day of August. Then there was another call for more men to serve in the army. He enlisted the third time for one year or during the war, and served in Co. B, 208th Reg. Pa. Vol. Inf. He participated in the engagements at Antietam, Chancellorsville, South Mountain, Fort Steadman, and the three days' fight, April 1, 2, and 3, 1865, in front of Petersburg, Virginia. He was with his command on the march to capture the Confederate Army, under General Lee, when Lee surrendered at Appomattox Courthouse. His command then returned via Petersburg, Virginia, to City Point, where they embarked on a steamer and went to Washington, via the James River, Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River. In Washington, D. C., he lay in camp until the inspection and grand parade, in June, 1865. He there received an honorable discharge and was mustered out of service; returned home and worked with his father on the farm.

January 10, 1878, he married Linda B. Knodl, born February 26, 1856, and followed farming for many years; later he quit farming and accepted a position in Altoona, Pennsylvania, and moved there with his family about the year 1890, and resides at 410 Fifth Street (Plate 63).

[298] DEWALT H.® FOUSE, son of [51] Theobald Adam⁴ and Agnes (Greaser) Fouse, was born March 6, 1868. In early life he became desirous of gaining an education, though his advantages were somewhat limited. During the winter school term he attended the public school at the "Ditch" school house, Huston Township, Blair County, Pennsylvania, where he made good progress in the different branches of study. During the summer months he worked on the farm to help support the family until the age of 20 years. During the summer of the year 1888, he attended a term of school at the Theological Seminary, Greensburg, Pennsylvania. In the fall of the same year he passed a successful examination under the county superintendent, obtained a teacher’s certificate, and was appointed teacher of the "Rebecca Furnace" school by the Board of Education in Huston Township. After ending the term successfully he attended the summer term of school at the Juniata Collegiate Institute, Martinsburg, Pennsylvania, teaching again the next winter. He continued this course for a number of years, when he was granted a teacher’s professional certificate. With the exception of two years in which he was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Altoona, Pennsylvania, as assistant baggage-master and clerk, he taught ten continuous terms of school, always being employed in his native township. In the spring of 1900, he resigned his school to accept a position as clerk in the office of the Pittsburgh Limestone Company, Ltd., at Williamsburg, Pennsylvania. In 1903, he was made assistant to the superintendent where he is still employed. Address, Williamsburg, Blair County, Pennsylvania.

GEORGE FREY, on a farm belonging to Mrs. Gallatin's father at the edge of Frey-town, later on his farm in York township, and which they purchased after Mr. Frey's death. Subsequently lived near Loganville, York Co., and later in York, where Mr. Gallatin engaged in the manufacture of cigars for a number of years, but retired from all business years before his death on October 25, 1895.

Some of the Gallatins have expressed the thought that they might be descendants of Albert Gallatin, the financier and statesman of the early days of the Republic, but this is impossible, because he was born in 1761, while John Gallatin, doubtless the grandfather of the husband of 1676, was the owner of land in Heidelberg township in 1787. His son John, who died about 1854, at Jefferson, aged at least 62 years, was the father of at least three sons and four daughters, the oldest son, if not the oldest child, being Albert Gallatin, the young man who fell in love with "Polly" Frey the first time he saw her at her sister's house. The name Gallatin is said by a genealogist in the Pennsylvania German Magazine, to be a corruption of the Swiss Gallaudet, a theory borne out by the fact that among the Germans of his neighborhood the original John was indiscriminately called Golliday and Galladin, subsequently anglicized into Gallatin.

Possibly the children of 1676 and 1677, though not descendants of the famous Albert, are sprung from another branch of the common Gallaudet tree. Albert and Anna Mary were the ancestors of seventeen children, some of whom died unnamed. Such as were duly named and recorded in the family Bible, follow hereafter:

[638] CHARLES FREDERICK⁶ BROUSE, son of [122] Savilla⁵ (Snyder) Brouse and Rufus Brouse, was born June 27, 1884, in Lake Township, 2 miles northeast of Greentown, Stark County, Ohio. His early life was spent in the country. He secured an elementary education at the public school at Chapel Hill. Gifted with a good mind, and studious habits, he made rapid progress in his studies and entered upon a thorough course of preparation. From the public school he went to the High School at Greentown, thence in 1901 to the preparatory department at Heidelberg University at Tiffin, Ohio, and graduated from this University (A.B. 1906). In the fall of 1906, he entered the Central Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at Dayton, Ohio, at which institution he finished the prescribed course of study in 1909. Having accepted the call from the Reformed Church at Marshallville, Wayne County, Ohio, at once he
The difficulty in the case of this sixth son was not the question of deciding which of two men was a lineal descendant of Kaspar, but to establish beyond cavil that the one Adam Frey who appears in York County records in the last third of the eighteenth century and the first third of the nineteenth was the son of the pioneer lad from Weiler.

As previously stated, the writer from boyhood was acquainted with Charles H. Fry, who was one of his earlier school teachers, and soon heard of a family tie between them, although how near he was never told. It is characteristic of the indifference existing among Americans as to their ancestry that no one seemed to know just how near or remote the connection was, and later on it seems that Charles doubted it entirely, as he was of the opinion that his father came from Berks county, secured a position with a Windsor township farmer, married his employer's daughter and founded that line of Freys or Frys, for both spellings have been used by this branch.

The danger of trusting entirely to tradition is forcibly illustrated in the experience of 1654 Alex. J. Frey, who, in a conversation with Samuel F. Frey, a descendant of the Adams county line, said: "We both come from Berks county people," a statement wholly incorrect, so far as Alexander was concerned, as Tobias, though he may have been in Berks county a year or two in the period between 1727 and 1729, was not of the Henry Frey stock which...

figures largely in Berks and probably Chester county affairs: while the Adams county line is most probably sprung from a Samuel Frey who settled there before 1770 and who seems to have been a younger brother of Gottfried's, born after Tobias' arrival in America; or from John Peter, a nephew of Gottfried.* This idea doubtless had its origin in the minds of both Alexander and Charles by reading in Pennsylvania history of the settlement of Freys in this country before 1681, forgetting about the Freys who came after that time. The records of Zion Reformed church, at York, give the names of three children of Adam Frey, Henry, Regina and Daniel, in the period between 1786 and 1793. While there was a church at Freysville as early as 1771, it is possible that it was served by the York pastor, and the records he has left of his ministerial acts include those of the Windsor charge as well as of the York congregation, so there is no evidence from these records as to whether Adam lived in York or in Windsor township at the time of the birth of these children. One fact tending to locate Gottfried's Adam is contained in the deed executed on July 28, 1783, by which he sold his patrimony to George Stake, in which he described himself as of York township. In the deed executed in 1789 conveying to him a lot in Freystown in trust for his son Henry, he is also described as of York township. In 1792 he is assessed with two houses in Freystown. As his name does not appear in the Windsor township assessment prior to 1795 it is a fair presumption that there was but the one Adam, and that he was Gottfried's son. However, to base a genealogical connection on but one "fact," and that fact a mere inference, is skating on very thin ice, and the writer is happy to be able to record several other circumstances tending to strengthen the link binding the Windsor township line to the Weiler emigrant.

ANIEL, the second son of Adam Frey, having left no descendants, there was scarcely anyone from whom anything of his life's story could be learned. He was born September 9, 1793, this fact being evidenced both from the records of Zion Reformed Church and from the tombstone in a private burying ground near Landis' mill, in Springettsbury township, that marks his last resting place. How the correspondence of these two records proved a link in the chain identifying Adam Frey, of Windsor township, as the son of Gottfried Frey, of York township, has already been told. Daniel was married, his wife's Christian name being Sarah; but they had no children. He was a laborer by occupation, and much of his life was spent near the place where he is buried. He died March 7, 1859.

EAVING the home of his childhood, the County and State where his grandfather, father and uncle played the part of sturdy pioneers, stoutly resisting the encroachments of the savage Indians and the civilized land-pirates from across the border, this seventh son of Gottfried deliberately entered the enemy's country and spent the mature years of his life as an honest and industrious inhabitant of the Monumental City.

The writer has been unable to find any record of Samuel Frey's birth. At the time of his father's death he was under age and on June 11, 1782, when John Herbach was appointed his guardian, the petition states that he was seventeen years of age.

On April 4, being then of full age, he received his fifty acres devised to him by his father; in this deed he is described as house carpenter, of York town.

On March 19, 1789, Samuel Frey, "house carpenter, of Baltimore," and Anna, his wife, sold some Freystown lots. Subsequent conveyances locate him in Baltimore, but the wife's name does not appear in the acknowledgement. All of these deeds set forth his relation to Gottfried, leaving no doubt of the fact of the hegira of Samuel to Baltimore.

It was the discovery of these deeds that led some of his grandsons to believe that Samuel Frey came to York from Baltimore.
but they evidently overlooked the fact that the Samuel born in 1791 could not have made conveyances in the period from 1787 to 1795.

It will be recalled that the Hiestand tradition is that Julianna Frey, in her widowhood, went to her brother in Baltimore, and Samuel seems to have been the only son of Gottfried who lived in the Monumental City.

When reference is made to the Baltimore records the result is ambiguous, to say the least.

Samuel Frye, carpenter and joiner, leased some ground in Howard's addition to the city and made some conveyances of parts thereof, at various times between Dec. 3, 1796, the date of purchase, and May 8, 1848.

The name is written Frey and Frye, indiscriminately.

Finally on April 29, 1853, a Samuel Frey devises his estate to his wife Belinda, and his son John.

In the sale of his property there is mentioned a lot of "cabinet ware."

If the last named party is Gottfried's Samuel he lived to the ripe age of 88 years.

Also, he must have had two wives, as the early deed names Anna and the last will gives Belinda as his wife's name.

The York church records show three children born to Samuel and Anna, all before the removal to Baltimore:

Elizabeth, b. Aug. 25, 1789.

Samuel, b. May 23, 1791.

Anna, b. Apr. 17, 1792.

Perhaps the Samuel of the 1853 will was the son born in 1791.

At any rate the task of tracing out this line in a large city threatened to take more time than the writer could devote to it, and it is left for other hands to do this work, if anyone sees fit.
