In 1776, the General Assembly of Virginia dissolved
the District of West Augusta into three new counties MONONGALIA, OHIO, and YOHOGANIA. All of the latter and parts of the others were made a part of Pennsylvania by the Mason-Dixon survey.
Once a part of Augusta Co., VA and called the District of West Augusta, Monongalia Co. was created in 1776. Thirteen separate counties have been formed from Monongalia. The county's seven districts were set up for elections, location of property, and petty justice.

The first meeting place was at the home of Jonathan Cobun, about 2 miles east of Morgantown. Courts were then held on the plantation of Theophilus Phillips (New Geneva, Fayette Co., PA) and at the home of Col. John Evans. Zackquill Morgan's home was used from 1782 until a courthouse was built in Morgan's Town.

In 1782, John Evans was appointed Clerk of the Court. He lived in the Flatts near Morgantown and kept the records in a small building there. This office burned in 1796 and is what is meant by, "The courthouse burned!"

Monongalia Co. birth and death records date from 1853 (no death record, 1864); marriage, probate, and land records from 1790. These are in the custody of the County Clerk who also has surveyors records (1791-1862) and unpatented land records (1779-1790). The Circuit Court records date from 1789 & are kept by Circuit Clerk.

This county was part of the hunting grounds for the Shawnee Indians and was the scene of numerous Indian raids and massacres.

The old whipping post stood on the Courthouse Square until it was abolished in 1849. The slavery issue caused WV to become a state, yet the last slaves were sold in Morgantown as late as 1864. Monongalia County is rich in history!

The following death records are not consistent as to content but generally give: name of deceased, death date, place, age, birthplace, and parents (or spouse.)

For certified copies, write the County Clerk, Morgantown, West Virginia 26505.
