DANIEL KINGERY
Dear Cousins All:

We are Americans and like to judge a man by what he is, not by his ancestry. Yet it is of interest to know something of the sources. This is not intended to be a "book" but a mere skeleton which perhaps some ambitious relative some day may attempt to clothe with literary flesh.

The list contains many names. None has won wide fame, but none has broken into politics or prison. All seem to have lived quietly and decently, doing their duty as citizens without fail or flourish. Not a few have served their country in war, and two, John Russell Kingery and Daniel Newton Kingery, gave up their lives in the service.

The difficulty about any family history is that it will not "stay put." Births, marriages and deaths continue to occur and the record never is closed. It will be a favor if any of you who can will send me additional facts.

My brother, Professor David Newton Kingery, of St. Paul, generously insisted on paying the cost of printing.

Westerville, Ohio, April 15, 1922.

H. M. KINGERY.
This family or clan appears to have emigrated from Germany early in the eighteenth century and settled with other Deutsch—not Dutch—immigrants in Lancaster county, Pa. The earliest mentioned in some old papers in my possession is Christian Gingery, who died in 1778—the inventory of his possessions is dated August 15 of that year. The name, by the way, has eight different spellings in these old papers—Gingirich, Gingerich, Gingery, Gingrey, Gingerig, Gingrich and Gingry, and, from 1790, Kingery.

John Ginger, son of Christian, whose original commissions as lieutenant (1776) and captain (1777) in the revolutionary forces I have, was living in Warwick township, Lancaster county, as late as 1783, but seven years later was in Washington county, Md., and was arranging to buy land from one Joseph Smith in Virginia. It was in Rockingham county, Va., that Grandfather Kingery was born. When he was a little boy the family moved to Greenfield, Ohio, where the father farmed and conducted a flourmill. He died in October, 1826.

John's children were Samuel, Benjamin, John, David, Jacob, DANIEL, Elizabeth, Mary and Susanah.

Both of Grandmother Kingery's parents seem to have been of Irish descent, their families having migrated from the north of Ireland about 1760 and settled in South Carolina. At least three of the four sons of James (or David) Morton fought in the revolutionary war. John, born 1762, married Margaret Alexander, who was born about 1765. They lived in South Carolina till near the end of the century, and then, because they disapproved of negro slavery, removed to Kentucky. Finding slavery there too, they went on into Ohio in 1801. They settled first near Hillsboro, but in 1807 moved to South Salem, Ross county, where they spent their lives and were buried. She died June 22, 1837, he December 14, 1841.

Their children were James, Joseph, John, Samuel, Jane, Mary and Catherine. Mary became wife of Daniel Kingery, who heads the genealogical list that follows.
