PREFACE

The recording of the Stewart Family, as presented on pages 10 through 49 of this book, was started in 1908 by Mrs. Jennie Murray Stewart, wife of John Henry Stewart (p. 29), of Shelbyville, Kentucky, and completed in 1915. It was compiled from diaries, church and court records, letters and family Bibles contributed by the descendants of James and Rebecca Marchant Stewart (p. 11). Mrs. Jennie Murray Stewart's book was donated to the Genealogical Society of the Church of Latter Day Saints by Jewell A. Thornton, March 20, 1958, and is numbered 39109. It is stamped "J. Z. Stewart, Logan, Utah."

In 1960, Mrs. Dora Johnson Stewart, wife of George Washington Stewart III (p. 38), of Denver, Colorado, came into possession of Mrs. Jennie Murray Stewart's recording and, through much research and correspondence with the descendants of George Washington Stewart, Jr. (p. 29), of Indiana, brought the family history up to date on that line. Realizing how family data disappears with the passing of each generation, it was her desire to combine all the information gathered thus far into a printed book and share it with other members of the family.

In February of 1965, Mrs. Dora Johnson Stewart provided the financial assistance, together with the results of her research and correspondence, to her great-niece, Mrs. Betty White Wilson (p. 48), of Garden Grove, California, who commenced preparation of the book for publication. The numbering system, as explained on page 10, was employed for clarification of the relationships of each person in the recording. Every name appearing in this book is indexed in the grey section at the back of the book and there are over three hundred surnames listed. The Pictorial Section is from the collection of Mrs. Wilson.

Errors and omissions are inevitable in a record of this nature and, in many instances, correct interpretation of Mrs. Jennie Murray Stewart's recording is very questionable. Any and all corrections and additions will be most welcome, and it is hoped that future supplements may eventually be issued to owners of this book.

It is hoped that all who possess "The Stewart Book" will find much enjoyment in its pages and that this record may be the means of promoting a closer acquaintanceship among the various branches of the Family.

Special thanks is given to Mrs. Dora Johnson Stewart, for without her vision and initiative, this book would never have been started.

STEWART

SCOTLAND, History: Stuart - In the male line the family traces descent from a certain Alan, steward to an eleventh century bishop of Dol, in Brittany. Alan's grandson, also named Alan, migrated to England in the reign of Henry I Beauclerc, 1100-35. This Alan's son, WALTER, moved to Scotland where he became steward to King David I, the Saint, 1124-33. In 1158 the office and title of steward was made hereditary in Walter's family. Hence the name "Steward" or "Stewart."
SECTION I

HISTORY

(Compiled and contributed by Mrs. Dora Johnson Stewart)
"Origin of Stewart Family" contributed by Henry Clay Ritchie as found in the Stewart Book compiled by Mrs. Jennie Murray Stewart - 1915)
ORIGIN OF THE STEWART FAMILY

Alan, son of Flahold, a Norman, accompanied William, the Conquerer, into England and obtained by his gift the land and Castle of Oswestry in Shropshire. Alan's second son, Walter, passed into Scotland in the service of David I and had a large estate conferred upon him by that monarch along with the dignity of "High Steward of Scotland," which became hereditary in his family. The name STEWARD was assumed by Walter's descendants as a surname (derived from his titles) who for decades of years spelled the name STEWART. The office of High Steward was a great dignity and power under the Scottish Crown during the 12th, 13th and 14th centuries. The High Steward possessed the privilege of holding the first place in the Army of Scotland next to the King when in battle. The lands conferred on Walter, the Steward of David I, included the barony of what is now the County of Renfrew, Inverness, Hassendean, Teviotdale, Lauderdale. For seven generations the Stewardship descended without a break from father to son. Alexander, the 4th Steward, was regent of Scotland during the minority of Alexander 3rd. James, 5th Steward, was one of the six regents of Scotland after the death of Alexander the 3rd. Walter, 6th Steward, was one of the principal leaders in the Battle of Bannochburn. His marriage to Marjory, daughter of Robert the Bruce, eventually brought the Crown of Scotland to the Stewart Family. Few of the Royal races of Europe can boast so long a line of unbroken ancestry as the Stewarts.

EARLY SCOTTISH RULERS

Ordered relations may be dated from 924 when Constantine, King of Scots, chose the Saxon King, Edward the Elder, as his father and Lord. Ecclesiastical Ceremony of Coronation was not introduced until late in the 8th Century.

A coronation chair, called Lia Fail, or Stone of Destiny, said to have been brought from Tara Island, Ireland to Iona when first king of Scotland was crowned, is still part of coronation ceremonies of British Sovereigns. When Kenneth Mac Alpine became king, this stone was moved from Iona to Scone. In 1296 it was carried away by Edward I of England; Again taken by Scottish Nationalists on Christmas Eve 1950; handed back to the Curator of Arbroath Abbey in April, 1951; returned to Westminster Abbey February, 1952.

KENNETH MAC ALPINE

About the middle of the 9th Century Kenneth Mac Alpine, son of a ruler of a body of Scots, but of Pictish descent, through his mother, united in his own sovereignty, the Picts and Scots. His kingdom was Perth, Angus, Argyle, Mearns and Fife, with Scone as capitol.

The reign of Kenneth and his immediate successors, Donald, Malcolm, Constantine, (Grig) or (Eocha), Donald II, Constantine II, Kenneth II, Malcolm II, Duncan and Macbeth, were one continued warfare.

Kenneth Mac Alpine, called Traditional founder of Scottish Kingdom, died 858.

Malcolm I Mac Donald, succeeded to the throne 943, died 954. Malcolm II Mackenneth succeeded to the throne 1005, died 1034. Malcolm III, Mac Duncan, surnamed Canmore, died 13 Nov. 1093 near Alnwick, Northumberland. He was the son of Duncan I who was slain by Macbeth in 1040.

With help of his uncle, Siward, Earl of Northumberland, he defeated Macbeth in 1054; killed him in 1057. He was crowned at Scone. His marriage to Margaret 1067, sister of Edgar, the Aethling, Saxon pretender to the throne of England, provoked retaliation by William the Conqueror 1072. His reign had important bearing on the Consolidation in Scotland. Margaret, who soon died, was later canonized. She was largely responsible for the ecclesiastical reform of Scotland,
ALEXANDER I

Alexander I, King of Scotland 1107-1124, born 1078, died 1124 in Sterline. He was the fourth son of Malcolm Canmore. He succeeded to the Throne of Scotland following his older brother, Edgar (1097-1107). Alexander married Sibyll, natural daughter of Henry I of England. Comparatively untroubled until 1115, insurrection by Northern clans. He founded the Abbeys, Soone and Incholm; initiated a diocesan Episcopate while his determined resistance to claims of York and Canterbury, on the Sea of St. Andrew, did much to secure not only Scottish church, but Scotland itself.

DAVID I

King of Scotland 1124-1153; born Carlisle, England; 1084; died 24 May 1153; youngest son of Malcolm III and St. Margaret. Became Earl of Cumbria 1107 by will of his brother, King Edgar. His marriage to Matilda, widow of Simone de St. Liz, he became an English Baron. In a struggle for English Crown between his niece, Empress Matilda, and Stephen following the death of Henry I (1135) he favored Matilda. He invaded Northumberland, defeated in Battle of the Standard near Northallerton; he concluded peace at Carlisle; joined Matilda in London and fled with her to Winchester. The following year he escaped to Scotland, once more invaded England unsuccessfully. Thereafter he developed his own kingdom.

His reforms were introduction of Normal Feudal system, a feudal court, office of Chancellor for administration of laws, and publishing of Royal charters. He also founded many monasteries, Bishoprics of Brechin, Dunblane, Caithness Ross and Aberdeen. Founded Burghs of Edinburgh, Berwick, Roxburgh, Stirling and Perth. He was succeeded by his grandson, Malcolm IV.

MALCOLM IV

King of Scotland 1153-1165; born 1141; died 9 Dec. 1165 near Jedburg; surnamed (Maiden) succeeded his grandfather, David I, in 1153. He suppressed two rebellions in Scotland but was forced to relinquish Northumberland and Cumberland by Henry II.

WILLIAM THE LION

King of Scotland 1165-1214; born 1214 in Stirling; grandson of David I and brother of Malcolm IV, whom he succeeded in 1165. William fell into hands of the English 13 July 1174. For security he was taken to Normandy. The Treaty of Falaise was revoked in 1189 by Richard I of England in consideration of payment of 10,000 marks. William had several disputes with the church, but was early benefactor and founded the great Abbey of Arbroath in 1178.

ALEXANDER II

King of Scotland 1214-1249; b. Haddington 1198; d. 1249. Holds a high place among Scottish kings. A league with English Barons against King John caused his excommunication. Two years later the Scot Church was confirmed. He brought to a temporary close the feuds of two nations by treaty in 1217. Married Princess Joan 1221, eldest sister of Henry, upon his accession of English throne. The alliance thus established was broken after her death without issue 1238. Alexander's second marriage to a daughter of a noble of France. He died of fever on Kerrera, near Oban.
ALEXANDER III

King of Scotland 1249-1286; b. 1241; d. 16 Mar. 1286. Succeeded his father, Alexander II in 1249. Married Margaret, eldest daughter of Henry III of England. Margaret b. 1240; d. 1275. An alliance between Scotland and Norway was strengthened in 1282 by marriage of King Erick Magnusson to Alexander's only daughter, Margaret (1261-1283). Soon after Alexander became of age, he was required to defend his kingdom against Haakon IV of Norway. The utter rout of Haakon secured for Alexander the allegiance of Isle of Mann.

MARGARET

Queen of Scotland 1286-1290. Called "Maid of Norway." Engaged to Edward, Prince of Wales; died under mysterious circumstances, on her voyage to her new home in the Orkneys. Following this event thirteen claimants to the throne had to be considered. The two most likely were John Baliol and Robert Bruce; posterity of last three kings had become extinct with the death of Margaret. By mutual consent, King Edward was chosen to decide the issue, which he bestowed on John Baliol. Bruce now retired to England, took service in English Army and fought against Baliol in war which subjugated Scotland to England.

Interregnum 1290-1292

JOHN BALIOL

King of Scotland 1292-1296. Great-grandson of David, from his eldest daughter, Margaret. John Baliol b. 1249; d. 1315. John Comyn, son of Baliol's sister, a nobleman, who arrived in Dumfries about the same time as Bruce, met him in the church of the Friars Minor and there Comyn was stabbed to death.

Interregnum 1296-1306

ROBERT I BRUCE

King of Scotland 1306-1329. Earl of Carrick, b. 11 July 1274; d. 7 June 1329 at Care Cross. After Comyn's death, Bruce assumed the title of King. He was crowned at Scone 27 Mar. 1306 as Robert I Bruce. Later deposed by Edward's army under Aymar de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, 19 June, forced to conceal himself on Island of Rathlin. After one year (1307?) Bruce returned, surprised his own castle at Carrick, defeated the English. In two years regained most of Scotland. On 23 June 1314 the Battle of Bannockburn and many decisive battles followed. In 1323 this bloody war ended by "Thirteen Year Treaty", however, only four years later Bruce renewed it, after abdication of Edward II, in favor of his son Edward III. In 1328 England was forced to renounce all claim over Scotland.

DAVID II BRUCE

King of Scotland 1329-1371. Son of Robert I, b. 5 Mar. 1324 at Dumferline, Scotland; d. 22 Feb. 1371 in Edinburgh; succeeded his father to the throne; crowned in 1331. Two years later Edward II of England invaded Scotland. David and young Queen Joan, daughter of Edward II were forced to flee to France. Through efforts of Scottish nobles, in 1341 David II allowed to return and rule. In 1346 David undertook the ill-fated invasion of England. The Scottish troops were met at Nevilles Cross, Durham; totally defeated; David imprisoned in Tower of London until after Battle of Poiters. Restored to Scot Throne in 1357 upon meeting ransom imposed by English. After death of his Queen in 1362, David married Margaret Logie, whom he divorced in 1369.
ROBERT II BRUCE, STEWART - Seventh Steward

King of Scotland 1371-1390; b. 11 Mar. 1316; d. 13 May 1390; called founder of Stewart Dynasty; son of Walter III; the sixth Steward of Scotland, through his mother, Marjory, a grand-son of King Robert I the Bruce, he was heir to the throne. Named by Parliament in 1318, provided Bruce died without an heir.

ROBERT III

King of Scotland 1390-1406; eldest son of Robert II; b. 1340 out of wedlock, but later recognized; d. 4 April 1406. Created Earl of Carrick, he succeeded to the throne of his father in 1390, changing his name, originally John Stewart, which was unpopular because of connection with John Baliol, he became Robert III.

The new king, who had been kicked by a horse in 1387, was nominal ruler. His younger brother, Robert, Earl of Fife and later, first Duke of Albany, exercised a real power until 1399 when the King appointed his elder son, David Stewart, Duke of Rothesay, Lieutenant of the realm. A feud developed between uncle and nephew. In 1402 Albany procured a warrant for the arrest of Rothesay, in King Robert's name. Rothesay died that year, presumably starved by his ambitious uncle. The King, alarmed at fate of heir, sent his younger son, James, later King James I, to be educated in France. In 1406 the boy was captured at sea by the English. Robert died shortly after.

JAMES I, son of Robert Bruce

King of Scotland 1406-1437, b. July 1394; d. 21 Feb. 1437 in Perth; third son of Robert III, second of Stewart Kings. To escape the fate of his brother, David, King Robert ordered him to France. He was captured and held captive eighteen years in England by Henry IV and V. He was given a good education and just before his release, he married Joan Beaufort. James was crowned King of Scotland at Scone 21 May 1424. During thirteen years he did much to curtail feudal lords. This resulted in his assassination by Sir Robert Graham at instigation of Walter Stewart, Earl of Atholl.

JAMES II, Son of James I

King of Scotland 1437-1460, b. 16 Oct. 1 at Roxburgh, Scotland; d. 3 Aug. 1460; crowned at Holyrood in his seventh year. Archibald, fifth Earl of Douglas, was named Regentin 1449. James married Mary, of Gelderland, assumed power in his own name, ending the struggle between the House of Douglas and factions of Sir Alexander Livingston and Sir William Crichton. But James murdered William at Stirling Castle in 1452. Later James attacked English forces at South Scotland and was killed by an exploding cannon at Roxburg Castle.

JAMES III, Eldest son of James II

King of Scotland 1460-1488, b. 10 July 1451; d. 11 June 1488 Bannockburn, Scotland. He was crowned at Kelso in 1460. During his minority, power was in hands of Boyds of Kilmarnock, one of whom married the King's sister, Mary, 1467. Two years later, James married Princess Margaret of Denmark and assumed the Government. He was opposed by his brothers, Alexander, Duke of Albany, and John, Earl of Mar, who was murdered in 1479, but Albany escaped; seeking support in England, was recognized by Edward IV in 1482 as King of Scotland.

Two years later the rebellious nobles made the King's son, James, head of their party and routed the Royal party near Bannockburn on the 11th of June 1488. The King was murdered the same day.

JAMES IV, Son of James III

King of Scotland 1488-1512; b. 17 Mar. 1473; d. 9 Sept. 1513 at Flodden, England. Crowned at Scone 1488 soon after the death of his father, James III. Under his rule, Scotland advanced in political importance. In 1503 he married Margaret, daughter of Henry VII, from whom the Stewarts derived their title to English throne a century later. He was unable to remain at peace with his brother-in-law, Henry VIII. After making a treaty with Louis, of France, in 1512, James invaded England, was defeated at Flodden and killed, with many nobles.

JAMES V, Son of James IV

King of Scotland 1513-1542; b. 10 April at Linithgow, Scotland; d. 14 Dec. 1542 in Falkland; began to govern in his own right in 1528. He married Princess Madeline of France at Paris in 1537. After her death he espoused Mary, daughter of the Duke Guise in 1538. When his uncle, Henry VIII of England, invaded Scotland 1542, James was deserted by his Protestant nobles; defeated at Battle of Solway Moss. He died the next month, several days after the birth of his daughter, Mary, Queen of Scots. Noted for his efforts to protect p. or from oppression, he was called "King of the Commons."

Mary Abdicated

Queen of Scots 1542-1567

JAMES VI, known as James I of England and Scotland

King 1567-1603, b. 19 June 1566 in Edinburgh; d. 27 Mar. 1625 at Theobalds, Hertfordshire. Son of Mary, Queen of Scots, and Henry, Lord Darnley, great-grandson of Henry VII of England. With forced abdication of his mother, in 1567 he was proclaimed King. During his minority, the country was governed by a succession of regents; Earls of Moray, Lennox, Mar and Morton. Most of this time he was under tuition of George Buchanan.

James soon found it advisable to ally himself with Queen Elizabeth. Mary was executed in 1597. James was not much moved and soon married Anne, daughter of Frederick II, King of Denmark. 23 Nov. 1589 James succeeded to the crown of England, on the death of Elizabeth, proceeded to London. Although James had behaved with great lenity toward the Catholics, those in England were disappointed and gun-powder plot was concerted in 1605. He lost his eldest son in 1612, a Prince of great promise, then nineteen years old. The following year the eventful marriage of his daughter, Elizabeth, to the Palatine Elector took place. James had wished to marry his son, Charles, to a Spanish Princess, but this failed. His reign saw the beginning of colonization in America, with the founding of Jamestown in 1607. Also a complete new translation of the Bible 1611, still referred to as King James Version. His political writings were reprinted in 1928.

Anglo-Saxons were driven to America by religious intolerance — Saxon-Celtic quality from Scotland, England and Ireland, also Welsh, came in search of new homes and free land. This was start of "Thirteen Colonies" and the Pilgrims who landed at Plymouth Rock.
Landing of the Pilgrims and founding of Jamestown in 1607 was the beginning of Virginia Colony. Eighteen languages were spoken in New Amsterdam. In 1643 between the Restoration and English Revolution of 1689 most Colonists were English, and came to Virginia and Maryland.

Following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, an important element of French Huguenots came also. Many of them or their descendants became prominent during the Civil War.

Of equal importance, Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, About mid 17th Century thousands sailed directly to Virginia. At time of Revolution one-sixth of American Armies, under George Washington, were Scotch-Irish. Pursuant to a grant of rights made by the Virginia Company in 1618, the Governor, George Yeardly convened a popular elected assembly, the first in America. Internal difficulties within Virginia Company led James I to abrogate its Charter. Virginia then became a Royal Colony in 1624.

Henry IV secured to Huguenots their rights, by Edict of Nantes. This was first document to grant religious freedom, or tolerance, in any country.

The thirteen Colonies proclaimed themselves the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA in 1776, based on dates of original land grants or charters; Virginia 1606 King James I granted a Charter to London Co. 1612-1623. This colony was governed by Virginia Co, created in 1609. From 1624 until the Revolutionary War, Virginia was a Royal Colony.

NEW HAMPSHIRE
Royal Grant in 1622 to Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Mason. A line of division in 1629 - Gorges area to North named Maine; Mason's area to South became New Hampshire; became Royal Province in 1679.

Massachusetts
Bay Co. chartered by King Charles I, 1629. Pilgrims settled in Plymouth in 1620. They were independent until 1691 when a new charter annexed Plymouth and Maine to Massachusetts. Heirs of Gorges were bought out by Mass. in 1678.

Maryland
Began as proprietary colony with charter granted to Calvert I of Baron of Baltimore in 1632. Reverted to son and heir, Cecilius Calvert, second Baron, whose brother, Leonard, established first settlement of St. Marys in 1634.

Connecticut
Chartered in 1663 by Charles II

Rhode Island
Chartered in 1663, an outgrowth of Roger Williams settlement in Providence in 1636. Connecticut and Rhode Island were only two self-governing colonies at outbreak of the Revolution.

North and South Carolinas
Began as one by Grant in 1663 of Charles II. To eight court favorites, the northern part had separate government and legislation until 1691. After that, the North part was ruled by Deputy Governor until 1712. In 1729 both were purchased by the Crown, and then became Royal provinces.

New York
Meanwhile, Dutch West Indies Co. had founded New Netherlands in 1621. Swedes settled Fort Christina 1638. Governor Peter Stuyvesant in 1639 compelled Swedes to accept New Netherland's sovereignty. After 9 years King Charles II seized this domain and secretly gave it to his brother, James, Duke of York, the future James II. This was then renamed New York.

JAMES STEWART, ESQUIRE AND HIS DESCENDANTS

(Extracted from the recording of Mrs. Jennie Murray Stewart, wife of John Henry Stewart, Shelbyville, Kentucky; Begun in 1908 and Finished Nov. 1, 1915; and brought up to date by Mrs. Dora Johnson Stewart, wife of George Washington Stewart III, from personal knowledge and correspondence with members of the Stewart Family and research in the Denver, Colorado Public Library; Began 1960 and finished 1965.)
other descendants in the record may be readily determined.

Any other descendant or relative can also be given on the following pages. (See Index.) By working this numbering system, it is easy to determine an ancestor or relative. However, this system is not complete. To determine a "descent," one must consider this chart and try to understand the procedure.

The procedure is to determine the first generation of the "descent," which is the generation of the ancestor or relative. The second generation is the generation of the ancestors or relatives of the first generation. The third generation is the generation of the ancestors or relatives of the second generation, and so on. Each child of the third generation takes the last name of the first name of the ancestor or relative.

JAMES STEWART, ESQUIRE, and His Descendants

JAMES STEWART, ESQUIRE, and his wife, ELIZABETH, came from Scotland to Frederick County, Virginia. He had been educated in Edinburgh. Records show a patent from Virginia Company at Quarter Court in Virginia to JAMES STEWART, Esquire, of Buckham in Scotland, on the forenoon of November 20, 1722. One other early recorded date is JAMES STEWART was a witness to a deed June 6, 1727. Sold 3,000 pounds of tobacco for 100 acres of land. (The above was copied by Isaac Newton AKIN, a lawyer and a son of REBECCA STEWART AKIN, of New Albany, Indiana, from diary of REBECCA MARCHANT STEWART and papers of her husband, JAMES STEWART, and left to his daughter, FLORENCE AKIN LUCE, and loaned to Mrs. J. H. STEWART and returned.) ELIZABETH and JAMES had 5 sons.

Children of JAMES and ELIZABETH STEWART:

1. JOHN of Bourbon Co., Va. (now Ky)
2. JAMES, Jr. b. 8 June 1743 Berkley Co., Va.; m. Rebecca MARCHANT

SECOND GENERATION

Served as a soldier in the Rangers Revolutionary War, Westmoreland Co., Va. (now Penn.,). He came with others from Red Stone Old Fort, Va. (now Brownsville, Penn.) about 1779. That was the point of navigation from Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland down the Ohio River to Virginia (now Kentucky).

He purchased land from the Henderson Company on Beargrass Creek, Harrods Creek and Goose Creek, but by defective title and litigation in Virginia courts the land grant was declared null and void.

For protection from Indians, they fled to a place on the Ohio River called "The Falls", but sometimes referred to as "The Rapids. A friend advised them to cross the river, which they did and settled on the Rodger Clark Grant, Clark County, Indiana.

JAMES STEWART, JR. also served as a Private in Captain Andrew Lynn's Company of Rangers 1778-1783, Westmoreland Co., Va. (now Penn.,). He served with Captain William Harrod's Company in 1780 at stations near the Falls, now in Jefferson Co., Ky. About 1779 he emigrated to Beargrass, Va., now Ky. He owned large tracts of land. As his children matured, they were given farms by their parents; some in Clark County and some in Floyd County, Indiana.

REBECCA (MARCHANT) STEWART, wife of JAMES, JR. was a descendant of French Huguenots who fled from France to England, and later to Virginia. Following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, all Protestants had been terrorized by the persecution inflicted by some Catholic kings. REBECCA gave each of their children a Bible. Some are claimed to be in possession of descendants at the present time. REBECCA and JAMES, JR. had 11 children, as listed on the following page.

George Washington STEWART was a captain and merchant. He owned ships which ran the Mississippi River from New Orleans to St. Louis and Louisville. Held interest in 'Julie Dean', owned the Chancelor and New Uncle Sam. The last two named were sold to the U. S. Government. Uncle Sam was converted into a gunboat and renamed 'Black Hawk', carried 36 guns and became flagship of Mississippi Squadron.

He also owned the 'Bee' and the 'Sir William Wallace', which he sold and bought a farm near Shelbyville, Ky, which was the family home for many years. Thoroughbred horses and other fine livestock were raised there. This was all sold at Executor's Sale on Thursday, 15 September 1887. Posters advertised this as: "Consisting of 361 acres of land, lying on West side of Shelbyville and Eminence Turnpike, four miles North of Shelbyville, Kentucky." The notice was signed by Mary Bethia STEWART and Wannatta SHELBY, Executors. The farm was generally referred to as 'The Station' by the family and others familiar with that part of the country.

2-11-2-4 GEORGE WASHINGTON STEWART, JR. (p. 33)

Son of Mary Bethia WINSTANDLEY and George Washington STEWART. Like his oldest brother, John Henry, George was in service of U. S. at time of Civil War. He served three years and six months as a soldier, Private of First Lieut. Leane (?) Company D, 40th Regiment of Indiana Volunteers. Discharged from service 29 May 1865. He was a prisoner of war at Cahaba, Alabama, sometimes referred to as Castle Morgan, also Libby Prison. He was a passenger aboard "Sultana" on way home up the Mississippi River when the boilers blew up. About 2,000 lives were lost, either by fire or drowning. Some 300 were rescued or saved in various ways. Being an exceptional swimmer, George W. was one of these few. "Transport to Disaster", written by James W. Elliot, published by Holt, Rinehart & Wilson, deals with this story. A woodcut, used as illustration, appeared in Harper's Weekly 27 April, however, this tragedy was soon forgotten by a nation stunned by the assassination of its president, Abraham Lincoln.

George W. Stewart b. 22 June 1845, Carlyle, Ind.; d. 29 April 1921, Edgewater (now) Wheatridge, Colo.; b. Crown Hill Cemetery, Jefferson Co., Colo.; married 26-Dec. 1871 to Mary Isabel PATTISON, b. 3 Oct. 1850 in Illinois; d. 10 Feb. 1934 in Edgewater (now) Wheatridge, Colo.; also b. in Crown Hill Cemetery. Mary Isabel PATTISON can also be found in the "Quackenbush" records. She was the daughter of Rebecca BURT and Lewis PATTISON.

George W. Stewart, Jr. and his wife, Mary Isabel PATTISON, came with their family to Edgewater, Colo., from Oklahoma 4 May 1901. He bought a garden tract on Howell Avenue, about one fourth mile south of Jefferson Ave; (This same location now referred to as Kipling St.); and West 44th Avenue, Jefferson Co., Colo. Mary Isabel PATTISON STEWART was a very diligent worker in getting a church for that neighborhood. In a few years, what was then considered a fine church, was erected on the southeast corner of the intersection already mentioned. About 1962 this building was demolished and a more, modern and larger church now stands on the northwest corner of the same intersection. The land for the first building was donated by Mrs. Elizabeth EATON, a real pioneer, and her daughter, Mrs. Peter PETERSON. Strangely enough, the new building stands on property once owned by Arnold HALL, son-in-law of George W. Stewart, Jr. and husband of Minnie Alice STEWART.

2-11-2-4-6 EGBERT FLOYD STEWART (p.30)

At an early age, Egbert STEWART went to China as a missionary. He later married Grace Benson LEWIS to whom he was engaged before leaving the States. At that time they joined the Christian Missionary Alliance Mission. After the death of his wife in 1923, Egbert returned to China. In the early 20's he married Alda Grace VAN BUREN, also a missionary teacher in China. They hazarded many dangers during political turmoil and changes of government. They saw the Revolution of China, the Japanese Occupation, and beginning of Communism. As Chairman of the Mission he helped negotiate for the release of Howard Smith, who had been captured by Ho Long, a Communist General, and held for ransom.

He did extensive pioneer work, and became Chairman of the field for some time. Because of Communism, the missionaries had to leave that field and return to Central China where, on the death of that Chairman, Egbert was made Chairman of Central China.

Bert and Grace worked under Japanese occupation, and the onslaught of Communists, much of their time was spent in famine and war refugee work. Bert was also in charge of the Men's Bible School. Because of broken health, and a stroke, they were forced to return once more to the United States just in time to escape Concentration Camp when World War II broke out. *See WOOLSEY FAMILY

OTHER AVAILABLE PHOTOGRAPHS

I have in my possession numerous old and valuable photos and tintypes which were given to me by my Grandfather, Warren E. Woolsey. It was my original intention to share these treasures with you by including them in this book. However, any method of satisfactory reproduction proved to be too expensive. Therefore, I have tried to do the next best thing by giving you prints of the oldest photos I have and listing the balance.

If you wish prints, please refer to the picture as listed below and the size of each photo and how many prints you wish and I will advise you of the cost and delivery. The cost of the negatives has been included in the price of this book, and there will only be a nominal charge for each print plus postage.
