EXTANT GERMAN CHURCH RECORDS FROM VIRGINIA
AND WEST VIRGINIA: A CHECKLIST

By PEGGY S. JOYNER

The format of the checklist of the extant German church records in Virginia and West Virginia differs somewhat from the Maryland list preceding it in this REPORT. All registers in which German was used have been included, thus extending its scope into the 1840's. Much of what Pastor Frederick S. Weiser has written in the introduction to his Maryland list applies to the Virginia records as well.

Church records have become a major research source for genealogists. When early family Bibles or tombstones no longer exist, there are few sources which establish vital statistics and parentage of individuals until 1853 when Virginia first required births and deaths to be registered with the courts. Church records often provide information which is not preserved in any other record.

No extensive survey of the church records written in the German language in the Virginias has been published. Church and denominational histories have not included records of individuals from the registers. Early efforts of several historians are responsible for many of the German registers of the Virginia churches to be located in a central location.

Almost forty-five years ago Dr. J. Silor Garrison assembled a number of records of the Reformed Church and had photostats made of selected volumes for deposit with the Virginia State Library. Dr. Frank L. Crone performed a similar service with respect to the Lutheran church records so that registers of seventeen churches were available at the Virginia State Library by 1958 when Francis Coleman Rosenberger published a brief assessment of these documents as genealogical sources.

William J. Hinke and Charles E. Kemper published the records of Peaked Mountain in 1905-6. William J. Finck, pastor (1912-1931) of Emmanuel Church, New Market, transcribed and translated not only several church records, but also diaries of Christian Streit and Paul Henkel.

Under the direction of William E. Eisenberg preparations were made between 1955 and 1966 for a comprehensive history of the Lutheran church in Virginia. George M. Smith surveyed the entire field on behalf of the Virginia Synod. He listed all surviving records of Lutheran congregations, finding several which were not known to exist at that time. He then made transcripts and translated the portions written in German. The results of this concentrated effort were deposited with the Virginia State Library pending eventual publication. The listing compiled by George Smith in 1966 was the first one indicating the status of all extant German-language records in both Virginias. The Virginia State Library has made full use of this list for the benefit of innumerable family researchers.

Jewell T. Clark and Elizabeth Terry Long have recently compiled an extensive survey of the church records of all denominations in the collection of the Virginia State Library for a forthcoming library publication.

In March of 1971 Ronald A. Bremer of the Research and Field Operations Department of the Genealogical Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints initiated the microfilming project for Mormon purposes which has also proved beneficial to researchers. These films can be ordered at the Mormon branch libraries.

Most of the earliest records have never been located although a surprisingly large number of registers have survived the ravages of time and wars. World War I in particular led many organizations and individuals all over the country to divest themselves of vestiges of a German past. The Reformed register of the Germanna and Germantown churches begun by Pastor Henry Haeger soon after 1714 and most records of Hebron Lutheran Church from 1733-1774 appear to be lost. The registers for both Lutheran and Reformed of the Woodstock area and of several West Virginia churches have never been found. The first register of Hawksbill Church was reportedly destroyed during the Civil War. Repeated inquiries in Ceres, Bland County, where the German register of Sharon Lutheran Church is allegedly held by a private party, have been fruitless.

The Virginias had about thirty-one German congregations in 1776. By 1793 there were about sixty-three. While records have not been found for some of these congregations it is encouraging that unknown records are occasionally discovered. About 1953 the ledger (1779-1872) of St. John's Church in Augusta County was sold by an individual to an antiquarian in New Jersey who contacted Klaus Wust. Through the efforts of Wust and the University of Virginia Library, the latter purchased the ledger in 1958. The memorandum book of the Rev. Johannes Braun has been found and published. One of the records of the two German churches of New Market has only recently surfaced.

The registers contain generally the same type of records. Baptisms were always recorded, usually including dates of birth. Very few burials were entered. Marriages were rarely noted, perhaps due to the fact that ministers were required to submit lists of the contracting parties with date of marriage to the courts. Some of these Ministers' Returns have survived. Some couples were married by the ecclesiastical practice of publishing banns and no bonds were secured through the courts.

The registers frequently contain additional records not shown in the following checklist which is limited to records written in the German language. They include deeds to church property and administrative matters. Photostats at the Virginia State Library often include loose papers which had been inserted in the registers. Some volumes which succeed the ones shown in this checklist are available at the churches or in various institutions.

Researchers should be aware that entries are not always in chronological order. Early communicant and confirmation lists can often be found near the back of the books with later records. The translations do not always include all of the lengthy communicant lists and sometimes the later English entries were not transcribed along with the translations. Records in this listing may be found in repositories other than the ones shown.

This checklist, as any such endeavor, would have been impossible without the willing cooperation of numerous individuals. Special thanks are due to George M. Smith, Administrator of Woodlawn Plantation, National Trust for Historic Preservation; Klaus Wust, editor of the Shenandoah Genealogical Source Books series; Grace Showalter, Menno Simon Historical Library, Eastern Mennonite College; Jane Païro, Virginia State Library; Micheal Plunkett, Manuscript Division, University of Virginia Libraries; Beryl B. Maurer, West Virginia University; Mary Harter, editor of the Henckel Genealogical Bulletin, and Frederick S. Weiser, editor of the publications of the Pennsylvania German Society.

Records: Five volumes 1772-1908. In German until 1830's.

Vol. 1—1772-1884; 185 leaves.
Contains baptisms, communicant and confirmation lists.

Vol. 2—1787-1796; 27 leaves.
This photostat at VSL appears to be the original register.
These records seem to have been transcribed into the register, 1772-1884, but not in the same order.

Vol. 3—1883-1908; 57 leaves.
Continuation of earlier registers.

Transcripts and translations:

Vol. 4—1772-1884; 134 leaves.
Christopher H. Droegenmueller and Leslie A. Miller, 1926, typescript translation, includes most items from Vol. 1.

Vol. 5—1806-1887; 62 leaves.
H. L. Shuetz and Leslie A. Miller, 1927, translation. Referred to as a "Supplement," the records included are from a volume or collection not available at the Virginia State Library. It has been suggested that these records were kept separately by the Reformed members. Included are baptisms, communicant lists 1817-1819.
