REMOTE ANCESTRY

The Dark Ages had passed and civilization was emerging from the Middle Ages when the name of Sturm appears in history. There was a Jacob Sturm, a German statesman and reformer, who was born at Strassburg, August 10, 1489, where his father, Martin Sturm, was a person of some importance. He was educated at the Universities of Heidelberg and Freiberg, and about 1517 entered the service of Henry, Provost of Strassburg, a member of the Wittelsbach family.

He soon became an adherent of the reformed doctrines, and leaving the service of the provost became a member of the governing body of Strassburg during the Peasants War; represented the city at the Diet of Spires and others and gained fame by his championship of its interests. As an advocate of union among the Protestants he took part in the conference at Marburg in 1529; but when the attempts to close the breach between Lutherans and Zwinglians failed, he presented the Confessio tetrpolitana, a Zwinglian document, to the Augsburg Diet of 1530.

As the representative of Strassburg, he signed the "protest" which was presented to the Diet of Spires in 1529. He was on friendly terms with Philip, landgrave of Hesse.

Owing largely to his influence, Strassburg joined the league of Schmalkalden in 1531. The troops of Strassburg took the field when the league attacked Charles V in 1546; but in 1547 the citizens were compelled to submit, when he succeeded in securing very favorable terms from the Emperor.

He died in Strassburg, October 30, 1553.

The next Sturm appearing in history is Johannes Sturm. Some undertake to trace the ancestry of the family recorded in this book to Johannes Sturm, a German educational reformer, born in Sleiden, Luxemburg, October 1, 1507. In his fifteenth year he was sent to Liege, where he attended a school of the Brothers of the Common Life. Three years later he continued his studies at Louvain, then the most enlightened center of higher studies north of the Alps, where shortly before there had been founded a college for the teaching of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. Besides his zeal as an educational reformer, he all through life had the ambition to write a Latin style framed on the best models of antiquity. It was at this time, therefore, that he began the study of Cicero. He remained some five years in Louvain.

In 1529 he went to Paris, and at first gave himself to medicine, with a view to securing a settled competence. But his natural instinct asserted itself, and he returned to the study of Cicero, on whom he gave courses of lectures in the College Royal. Besides lecturing on Cicero, he also taught dialectics, and had some famous men as students. As a sympathizer with the new teaching in religion, identified as yet only with the name of Luther, it was at some risk that he made his home in Paris. When a request was made to him (1536) by the authorities of Strassburg to come to their assistance in reorganizing the education of their town, he accepted their offer. By its position on the frontiers of France and Germany, Strassburg played a part of the highest importance in the political and religious history of the sixteenth century. Both in the religion and politics of his time Johannes Sturm took a prominent part, and on different occasions was sent on missions to France, England, and Denmark. In religion, he took sides with Zwingli against Luther.

Before his settlement in Strassburg, its magistrates had shown an enlightened interest in public instruction; but guided and inspired by him the town became one of the most important educational centers in Europe. Two years after his arrival (1538), a new gymnasium was established, with Sturm as its rector, and at the same time boarding houses were erected for poor students with the object of suppressing the medieval practice of mendicancy. Elementary and secondary education were thus provided for; but it was his ambition that the higher studies should also be within the reach of every youth of Strassburg. The divided councils of the town, however, and the outlay the organization of such studies would imply, delayed his scheme until as late as 1544. In that year was founded the Strassburg Academy, which, together with the gymnasium, supplied a complete course of instruction in all the learning of the time. His ideal in education was "to direct the aspiration of the scholars toward God to develop their intelligence, and to render them useful citizens, by teaching them the skill to communicate their thoughts and sentiments with persuasive effect." In carrying out this ideal, he showed his superiority by his judicious gradation of the course of study, and by his novel and attractive methods of instruction. It was his chief praise that beyond all his contemporaries he succeeded in correlating public instruction to the moral and intellectual development of his time. He presided over this institution for forty years, and was regarded as the greatest educator produced during this period.

In 1570, the Strassburg school numbered several thousand pupils, among them about two hundred of noble birth, twenty-four counts and barons and three princes. Not simply from Germany, but from Portugal and Poland, Denmark, France and England, youths were sent to Sturm. His influence extended to England and thence to America.

Says an English writer: "No one who is acquainted with the education given at our principal classical schools, Eton, Winchester and Westminster, forty years ago, can fail to see that their curriculum was framed in a great degree on Sturm's model."

He wrote a biography of Jacob Sturm. He died in Strasburg, March 3, 1589.

It is not apparent from history what relationship, if any,
these two men bore to each other and it can not be said definitely that the Jacob Sturm who was born in 1759 was descended from either of these men; but from the similarity of names carried down for generations to the present time, that would seem a reasonable inference. There is a lapse of time between the death of Johannes Sturm and the time of the American Jacob Sturm of more than one hundred and fifty years and one might think that a multitude of the name might have been born and gone forth in the meantime, but the Thirty Years' War intervened from 1618 to 1648, and the Rhine territory where these people lived was invaded time after time and overrun by friend and foe; sacked and pillaged, with death and destruction dealt on all hands in one of the most savage and relentless wars of history.
1. Jacob Sturm

The person with a German name today, who seeks to know why his ancestors came to this country nearly two centuries ago, must cast his eyes backward to the Reformation and the century and a half following thereupon.

The Thirty Years’ War was both a civil or political and a religious war and one of the most destructive of history. The whole intellectual, moral, and religious character of the German people received a shock that almost threatened it with annihilation. Statements are made by authorities that seventy-five percent of the people in many of the districts were destroyed. One authority says: “Germany was ruined for a century. Two-thirds of the population had disappeared, two-thirds of the movable property had been destroyed; five-sixths of the villages were gone. Wurttemberg fell from 500,000 to 46,000; Ansbach from 80,000 to 16,000. One city was plundered twenty-eight times.” Judge the setback to industry, and the inevitable decay of German trade and wealth.

Before these wars, the region of the Rhine was considered the garden of Germany. The terrible disorders of these wars dealt a deadly blow to their prosperity and glory. Famine and pestilence followed, and it took a hundred years to recover in any considerable degree from their terrible disasters.

These wars did not abolish tyranny among the rulers nor do away with intolerance and persecutions among the religious. About this time William Penn was undertaking his “holy Experiment” in Pennsylvania and made two trips to this region of the Rhine, setting forth the opportunities of this new land and the civil and religious liberties enjoyed. The rulers of England at the same time were encouraging emigration to their colonies.

During the first three-quarters of the eighteenth century, great numbers of Germans came to America, mostly coming down the Rhine and embarking from Rotterdam and landing at Philadelphia, but many came by way of England; the former making their way West, South and Southwest into Pennsylvania, Maryland, and the Shenandoah Valley in Virginia, and the latter landing at Norfolk and mostly finding their way into the Northern and Northwestern part of Virginia.

An ordinance of the Colony of Pennsylvania passed in 1727 required all immigrants to subscribe to the Oath of Allegiance to the King of England. As a result there are in the Pennsylvania Archives complete records of all immigrants arriving at Philadelphia from 1727 to 1776.

“As early as 1710-1712 German emigrants came to Maryland, settled in the region between Monocacy and the mountain, on the spot where Fredericktown was subsequently laid out by Patrick Dulany, 1745. This first settlement was soon extended to the Glades, Middletown and Hagerstown. Between 1748 and 1754, twenty-eight hundred Germans were brought to Maryland, many of whom settled in Baltimore.”

Reference to the Pennsylvania Archives shows that on August 21, 1760, on the Ship Anderson, Captain Hugh Campbell, from Rotterdam and touching at Cowes, England, Johan Jacob Sturm arrived at Philadelphia and took the oath of allegiance. He found his way into Maryland, ap parently about the beginning of the French and Indian War, 1754-1768. Tradition has handed down the fact that he lived in or near Sharpsburg, Maryland, a town some fifteen miles south of Hagerstown and laid out by Joseph Chapline in 1763. His children were born here. This region is a very beautiful rolling country; the land is very fertile and one can understand why it attracted the German immigrant who had so recently come from the beautiful and fertile country of the Rhine.

Shepherdstown, West Virginia, is just on the opposite side of the Potomac and some two or three miles from Sharpsburg, Maryland. It is the site of Shepherd College and one of the West Virginia Normal schools. The history of the Lutheran Church has been lately written by Professor Duke of Shepherd College. He says: "History affords no more pathetic chapter than that of the devastation of the Rhine Palatinate by Louis XIV. It seems to have been the purpose of this cruel and proud monarch, when he found himself like a lion at bay in the presence of his foes, to surround himself and his beautiful France with a desert barrier as a protection against invasion. Consequently the fair Palatinate (as well as Alsace and some other provinces) was given over to fire and sword. Mantheim, Old Heidelberg, Spier, Worms and Bingen (and many other towns) were destroyed. The Count of Tesse, to whom the spoliation of the country was entrusted, in reporting to his superior officer, Turenne, says: 'I do not think that for a week past my heart has been in its right place. I did not foresee that it would cost so much to personally attend to the burning of a town with a population in proportion like that of Orleans. You may rely upon it that nothing at all remains of the superb castle of Heidelberg. Four hundred and thirty-two houses have been burnt and the fire is still raging.'

"Out of this region of desolation came the peace loving, God-fearing Palatines to try their fortunes in the new World."

Dr. Haithcox, a minister of Shepherdstown lately wrote an article for the Baltimore American in which he says: "Across the Atlantic they (the Germans) came to find a land as beautiful and even more fertile than their Rhineland. From the Delaware along the Susquehanna, they spread through Pennsylvania's Carlyle Valley, across Maryland and in Antietam, over which they built splendid Roman arches of stone, one of these becoming so tragically famous in the Civil War; then crossing the Potomac they came into the Valley of the Shenandoah. * * * They brought here the industry and thrift that had made a paradise of their fatherland. Accustomed to congregated town life, they gathered into villages, like Shepherdstown and Sharpsburg, to till the neighboring lands, unlike the English plantation lords of Lower Virginia, who built their manor house in the center of their broad domains. The farms were smaller, better cultivated, and, with the vine, they transplanted the customs of their old home.

"In the village the highest hill was crowned by a church spire like the ones along the Rhine or in the high burgs of Germany. In a few years they retrieved their fortunes by their industry, were happy, contented, fearing God and minding their own business."

The people of this region lived in peace and amity with their Indian neighbors until the breaking out of the French and Indian War when it became the objective of many Indian raids. Braddock in his campaign passed through or near this region and his defeat did not help matters for the settlers. After Braddock's defeat, Washington was in command of the forces in this region with headquarters at Fort Loudon, near Winchester, Virginia, about twenty-five or thirty miles south of Sharpsburg.

During the French and Indian war there was great suffering among the settlers, who, until that time, appear to have been happy and prosperous.

The writings of Washington give us a pathetic picture of the terror of the inhabitants when the country was overrun by Indian war parties carrying death and destruction wherever they came. Washington, now Colonel of the Virginia Militia, built Fort Loudon in 1756, near Winchester, which was his headquarters during a part of the war.

 Colonel Adam Stephen was stationed at Fort Cumberland in 1755. Washington wrote in a note book of that year: "I proceeded to Winchester, where I arrived on the 14 Sep. On the 5th Oct. reached Fredericksburg. Continued my journey to Col. Baylor's where I was overtaken by an express sent from Col. Stephen, commanding at Fort Cumberland, informing me that a body of Indians had fallen on the inhabitants, killed many of them, and destroyed and burnt many of their houses."

Washington wrote Governor Dinwiddie: Oct. 11, 1755, "I arrived yesterday (at Winchester) about noon, and found everything in the greatest hurry and confusion, by the back inhabitants moving in, and those of this town moving out. I was told by Col. Martin, who had attempted to raise the Militia, that it was impossible to get above 20 or 25 men, they having absolutely refused to stir, choosing, as they say, to die with their wives and families. Col. Fairfax, who arrived in town while we were on a scout, immediately sent to a noble captain, not far off, to repair with his company forthwith to Winchester. With coolness and moderation this great captain answered that his wife, family, and corn were all at stake; so were those of his soldiers, therefore it was impossible for him to come. Such is the example of the officers, such the conduct of the men; and upon such circumstances depends the safety of our country!"

Again he writes: "The rangers intend to march down on Monday next. They will be immediately followed by all the inhabitants of those parts, that had come together under their protection. I think it absolutely essential that there should be two or three companies, exclusive of rangers, to guard the Potomac waters until such time as our regiment is completed."

In another letter: "Captain Waggoner informs me that it was with difficulty he passed the Ridge, for crowds of people were flying as if every moment was death. The Indians are really frightened out of their senses."

"Winchester, April 7th, 1756. The enemy have returned in greater numbers, committed several murders, not far from Winchester, and are even so daring as to attack our forts in open day. Many of the inhabitants are in a miserable situation by their losses, and so apprehensive of danger that I believe, unless a stop is put to the depredations of the Indians, the Blue Ridge will soon become our frontier."

These extracts from Washington's letters are given to show something of the dangers and hardships which our ancestors met with and had to endure or overcome in getting a foothold in this new country which they had chosen for their home.

There has been a tradition handed down that Jacob Sturm, our first ancestor in America, served in the French and Indian War, but it is only recently that the evidence has been found to substantiate the tradition.

The Maryland Historical Magazine, Volume 9, pages 260 and 261, gives lists of soldiers receiving pay from the State of Maryland on the Colony of Maryland for services in the French and Indian War in the year 1757. The lists are taken from the Maryland Archives. Among the names given is Jacob Sturm. His arrival in Maryland was probably before the beginning of the French and Indian War.

It is not known when or to whom he was married, but his wife's name was Margaret, as shown by deeds for real estate sold and recorded at Frederick, Maryland. Frederick County at that time included all the territory from just east of Frederick to the western border.

He was probably married in 1754 or 1755; this opinion is based on the fact that his second son was born in 1759. There were four sons. We have no knowledge or record of any daughters.

Jacob Sturm was a party to several real estate transactions from 1763 to 1773 which are shown on the records at Frederick, Maryland. The first purchase of record is forty-five acres along the Potomac River bought in 1763. The next is a deed from Joseph Chapline to Jacob Sturm for a lot in Sharpsburg, dated March 25, 1764—Record J 233. The next is a deed from Noah Foster to Jacob Sturm of a tract of twenty-five acres described as Spurgeon's Delight, part of Anteatom Bottom Banks of the Potomac River near Teaggs Ferry, L 169, recorded February 17, 1765. The next transaction is the sale of the tracts containing forty-five acres and twenty-five acres in one deed from Jacob Storm and Margaret, his wife, to Henry Ready. Recorded June 3, 1773—consideration—$160 (Pounds).

There seems to have been, even at this early date, some confusion or indecision as to the spelling of the name; whether to use the original German form, Sturm; or the English translation, Storm.

Soon after the sale of his property in Maryland he moved with his family to Virginia. It is probable that his new home was not far from the Maryland State border, for when the Revolutionary War came on, one of his sons enlisted in Virginia, and one in Maryland. We have been unable to find any record of Jacob Sturm, the immigrant, after he took up his residence in Virginia, and we can not say when or where he died.

SECOND GENERATION

2. JOHN STURM (2) JACOB (1)

John Sturm was born near Sharpsburg, Maryland, probably about 1755 or 1757. He was the eldest son of Jacob and Margaret Sturm. In the Bible of Charles W. Sturm, who was a great grandson of Jacob Sturm (1), and who died in 1918 in his eightieth year, was found a paper written in his own hand, evidently some thirty-five years before his death, and no doubt after a talk with his uncle, Jesse Sturm, the following:

"My great-grandfather and great-grandmother both came from Germany. Uncle Jesse says he does not know whether they were married or not when they came to this country. John Sturm, grandfather's brother, served on Washington's staff and was also at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown on the 19th of Oct. 1781."
We have ample proof of the foregoing in the Virginia State and United States government records.

There have been no records found that would indicate anything of his life or activities after the Revolutionary War.

3. JACOB STURM (2) JACOB (1)

Jacob, the second son of Jacob Sturm, the immigrant, was born in the year 1759 or early in 1760. There is some conflict in the records as to the date of birth. The headstone at his grave says he was born in 1760. This headstone was placed there in recent years to replace an old one cut from native sandstone. The original headstone was cut and placed by Jesse Sturm, youngest son of Jacob, soon after his death. The inscription thereon is as follows: “J. STURM, Died APRIL 6, 1842—AGE 83.”

Jacob Sturm

When we see the descendants of one man in the space of one hundred and sixty years from his birth numbering two thousand or more, a very great number of them having lived beyond three score and ten, himself and others reaching four score and more, and still others above ninety, and we see that they were all a healthy, rugged and stalwart class of men and women; sober, intelligent and industrious citizens; an independent, moral, upright and forward looking people, we can not but think that there was a man with qualities out of the ordinary.

This man and his descendants have seen our country grow and develop from a vast wilderness fringed on the East with a line of sparsely settled colonies to its present prosperous and powerful position. He helped in the long and hard task of the colonies to gain their independence. Many of his grandchildren were in the struggle to maintain the union which he helped to form, and many of the present generation were in the World War just closed.

While the ambitions of this family have mostly not been in the direction of political preferment, many of them have been the friends and advisors of those in prominent places and many of them have filled places of more or less importance and honor, to which they have been elected or appointed.

In our republic, the unit of government is the citizen. The position and title of Citizen if carried with the proper dignity, self-respect, realization of its responsibilities and a proper effort to carry them out, is of no mean worth and importance. The descendants of Jacob Sturm with but few, if any, exceptions can lay claim to this title.

He was born near Sharpsburg, Maryland. In his boyhood, the family moved to Berkeley County, Virginia, where they lived until the Revolutionary War. This was in the pioneer days of this region, as this part of the state was only settled a few years before his birth. Educational advantages in this region were very meager during his boyhood. He grew up in this frontier environment into a rugged youth and a thorough woodsman.

In the meantime, the Revolutionary War had broken out and his elder brother, John, had joined the army. This no doubt fired his patriotism and zeal, so that on July 19, 1776, when he was only seventeen years old he enlisted in a Maryland Company being raised by Captain Henry Hardman, This enlistment was evidently (a) for a short time, for we find him on December 8, 1776, enlisted in Captain Jonathan

Morris' Company for a period of three years. (b) In the Maryland Archives, in an alphabetical list of names given of the 7th Maryland Regiment, this record appears: "Jacob Storrom, Private, enlisted 8th Dec., '76—discharged 7th Dec., '79." The name appears on Captain Henry Hardman's muster roll as Jacob Storam and on Captain Jonathan Morris as Jacob Storm (Storum, Storrum), or in the entire record the name is spelled in five different ways and none of them quite right.

In this connection it may be well to look somewhat into this matter of names, especially the names of German immigrants.

In cases where the names were representative of a vocation, trait or some other meaning, the name was translated into the English word for it. In other cases, an attempt was made to produce the German sounds in English. In either case, the names are sometimes quite different, though the derivation is apparent to one acquainted with both languages.*

In the Maryland Archives a large percentage of the names of the soldiers of the Revolution are spelled in two or more ways.

The 7th Maryland Regiment seems to have been pretty active as the records show them to have been at Valley Forge, White Plains, Fish Kill, and other places where actions are recorded.

After the expiration of his three-year term of enlistment and his discharge December 7, 1779, he evidently enlisted in a Virginia regiment. He took part in the siege of Yorktown and was at the surrender of Cornwallis; these facts appear from various sources.

* Kuhns—"German and Swiss Settlements in Pennsylvania."
After the death of his wife, February 19, 1839, Jacob Sturm lived at the home of his son, Isaac, on Tetrick's Ridge; a part of this homestead later came into the possession of Isaac's eldest son, John. After the death of John, among his records and papers, there was found the discharge papers of Jacob Sturm, showing that he was a Fourth Sergeant in a Virginia Regiment at the time of the surrender of Cornwallis.

REVOLUTIONARY DISCHARGE FOUND

Messrs. James and U. G. Sturm Have Valuable Relic

"Messrs. James and U. G. Sturm were in the city Thursday to probate the will of the late John Sturm, their father, who recently died at the age of eighty years, on his farm near Worthington, having lived all his life in this county, all grown and having families, and all citizens of this county. He was a brother of Senator Jesse F. Sturm, their father being Isaac Sturm, who was a son of Jacob Sturm, a soldier of the Revolution.

James Sturm says he found a portion of his great-grandfather Jacob Sturm's discharge from the Revolutionary Army, showing that he was a fourth sergeant in one of the Virginia regiments, and was at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

He was of German descent and came into this region early after the close of the Revolutionary war, and was the ancestor of all the Sturms of this region of the state, who have preserved the worth character of their ancestor. He was buried in the Sturm graveyard near Worthington."

After his services in the Revolutionary War, being of a mechanical turn, he took up wood-working and building and became a millwright. One to be a successful millwright must be a master of mechanics and also have the qualifications of an architect. It is quite probable that he gained this knowledge from James Rumsey, a mechanical genius, a millwright and the inventor and builder of the first steamboat. It is generally believed and taught that Robert Fulton was the inventor of the steamboat, but the honor belongs to James Rumsey, who was born in Maryland and later took up his residence in Berkeley County, Virginia. General Washington attested to the fact of Rumsey's invention, and Congress after Rumsey's death recognized his claim and voted a medal to his family.

The town of Bath or Warm Springs, Berkeley County, Virginia, owing to the medicinal quality of the waters was a sort of resort and General Washington had a residence there which he occupied on occasion. While there in 1784, Rumsey, who also lived there at that time, invited him to see a trial of his steamboat.

Washington's Certificate

I have seen the model of Mr. Rumsey's boat constructed to work against the stream, examined the powers upon which it acts, been an eye witness to an actual experiment in running water of some rapidity, and give it as my opinion, although I had but little faith before, that he has discovered the art of working boats by mechanism and small manual assistance against rapid currents; that the discovery is of vast importance; may be of the greatest usefulness in our inland navigation, and if it succeeds, of which I have no doubt, that the value of it is greatly enhanced by the simplicity of the works; which when seen and explained, may be executed by the most common mechanic.

Given under my hand and at the town of Bath, County of Berkeley, in the State of Virginia, this 7th day of September, 1784.

(Signed) George Washington.

Jacob Sturm was married in 1784 to Catherine Frushour, daughter of Wendle Frushour who lived on Sleepy Creek, Berkeley County, Virginia.

After their marriage, they lived two years at Warm Springs, or Bath.

The records of Berkeley County and other sources show that about this time James Rumsey built a mill on Sleepy Creek and that it was either built for Wendle Frushour or it was soon thereafter acquired by him as it was a part of his estate at his death in 1784. Looking at all these circumstances in the light of history and the records, it is most probable that Jacob Sturm got his knowledge of mechanics and of mill building from this mechanical genius, James Rumsey.

After living at Warm Springs two years, he took up his residence at Cumberland and lived there six years or until 1792. In the year 1790, the first Federal Census was taken and we find him with a wife, and three children under sixteen, listed as in Frederick County.*

After six years in Cumberland the pioneer spirit must have taken possession, for he then started westward following the old Braddock Road built in 1755, at the time of Braddock's campaign in the French and Indian Wars. This old military road with but few changes in line and grade is now the old National Road. At Georges Hill, twenty-four miles west of Cumberland, he took up his residence and lived there three years, going from there to the crossing of the Youghahenay at Braddock's Ford where he stayed three years; then he pushed on westward, crossing over the mountains at or near Uniontown and Brownsville, and made his way up the Monongahela to a point seven miles above Morgantown on Scott's Run, where he lived seven years.

Much of this region was at that time a wilderness; it only having been settled a few years. This was in 1796. The last struggle between the Indians and the white man in Monongalia County was in June, 1791, or five years before his arrival.* After living there seven years, he pressed on further and took up some land on Teverbaugh Creek. This was in 1803.

The records at Clarksburg show that he came into possession of this tract of land on Teverbaugh Creek in 1804. Here he began clearing the land and building a home, in this wilderness so recently occupied only by the Indians.

Here in the wilderness the pioneers built their homes, raised their families and formed the small social centers that the circumstances permitted. The mode of life tended to individualism, independence of character, love of liberty, morality and right living. Here his family was brought up, three being born in the new home. His children were all portly, rugged and healthy, intelligent, and among the best in citizenship. At first the new settlers depended almost entirely upon corn for bread and the means for reducing it to a form for making bread were crude in the extreme. After he had provided shelter and cleared ground to raise some crops, he bent his energies and utilized his knowledge in building a mill for grinding corn. The first mill was built in 1806 on the waters of Teverbaugh Creek. In 1811, he built another and larger mill for grinding wheat as well as corn and also a saw mill in connection with it. This same year, he, with his neighbors, built a church and the new saw mill furnished the lumber for it.

This church was the place of worship for a large community; people coming from a great distance owing to the good will of the community and the hospitality of the Sturm home. The church, with some modifications and repairs, is standing in good preservation to this day. (1921)

For an intimate and personal acquaintance with the life of Jacob Sturm II, the present generation is fortunate in having the benefit of the knowledge and memory of Jesse F. Sturm, only living grandchild, who has written a brief sketch of his recollections of his grandfather.

A Brief Sketch of the Life and Activities of Jacob Sturm II
By a Grandson

"I can only give a brief sketch of his life, having known him personally only about three years and much of the information must be hearsay and tradition. My first memory of him was when I was but a child of five years of age. I knew him pretty well for about three years. Grandmother Sturm died in 1839 and he came and lived with us most of the time until his death three years later.

At this time he was very aged. I should say he was about eighty years old. One could see plainly what he had been in the prime of manhood. In stature fully six feet; broad shoulders; muscular in every member of his body; symmetrically formed; must have been in the flush of manhood a model man physically. The cranium, phrenologically, would indicate a strong, well-developed brain. His physiognomy was symmetrically formed except the characteristic Sturm nose, which was quite prominent. The heavy, shaggy brow overjetted the well-set hazel eyes beaming with kindness. The smiling countenance, which showed the temperaments to be well distributed, indicated a well-developed, intelligent, moral mind. Of his religious views I do not know, but that he was a very moral and upright man there is no doubt.

Grandmother Sturm was a great Christian, a saint, 'the grand old woman,' so said all the people of the country-side.

Of his prior activities, personally, I know nothing; it is only by reputation that I write. He was known far and wide as an expert woodman. None could excel him in the use of the broad-axe. Wielding it overhand, he could split the line from end to end.

He hewed logs for most of the best houses and barns that were built in this part of the country in his day. It was only the well-to-do who could afford to build such a house or barn. Many of them stand to this day in this country as monuments to his skill.

The poorer classes lived in cabins built of round logs. He was a natural born mechanic; worked at many mechanical businesses.

At the time I knew him he worked most at coopering, at which he was an expert. I remember my older brothers going out on the hills to get cedar timber to make wooden ware, such as buckets, churns, washtubs, etc.; it may seem strange, I can remember when in our community all such vessels for domestic use were made of wood and home-made at that. He also made barrels and hogsheads. At this work I have watched him by the hour. The old, he worked briskly and with precision. He seldom stopped to talk, yet would... occasionally chat and joke merrily with his friends—a number one story teller.

The first framed church built in the community, he, with the assistance of his neighbors, built near where he lived on Teverbaugh Creek, more than a hundred years ago. There it stands, tho' it has been remodeled once. It was built from the lumber sawed in his own mill; the first saw mill built in all that country. This house was among the first church houses built in this territory, now Marion County, the chief gathering place for the gathering together of the peoples far and near, for moral, religious and social culture.

Years ago, I talked with old people who lived far away, at that time, who had come to these gatherings; they declared it was the most charming, moral, and elevating center in scores of miles around.

Thus, full of years he passed away and was buried in the family burying ground on the old home place near the church in 1842. He was one of God's noblemen. The above is a brief history of Jacob Sturm II, the grandfather of the writer.

ANCESTRY OF CATHERINE (FRUSHOUR) STURM, WIFE OF JACOB STURM.

On September 26, 1732, according to records in the Archives of Pennsylvania, there arrived at Philadelphia from Rotterdam the ship, Mary, of London, John Gray, Master, carrying immigrants designated as Palatines. They numbered sixty-nine males above sixteen, one hundred and twenty-two women and children, in all one hundred and eighty-three. Among these immigrants was Hans George Froschauer, the founder of this Frushour family in America.

A party of these immigrants, of whom he was one, formed a colony and settled in New Jersey. Some time later a part of the colony, not satisfied with the low ground near the coast, went further inland and settled on Sleepy Creek, in Virginia, near what is now called Berkeley Springs, Morgan County, West Virginia. At that time it was in Frederick County, Virginia. In 1772, Frederick was divided and Berkeley County formed. The County of Berkeley as then formed embraced the territory now included in the three counties of Berkeley, Jefferson, and Morgan.

We know of only one child, a son, Wendle Frushour, who was probably born before his parents came to America, or if not, then very soon thereafter, as Catherine seems to have been a younger child and she was born in 1765. It is not improbable that he was married around 1750 to 1755.
The rent roll of Berkeley County, Virginia, for the years 1774, 1775, 1776, 1777, 1778, 1779, 1780 and 1781 shows Wendle Frushour as the owner of two tracts of land, one four hundred acres and the other one hundred and forty-one acres.*

Where a second tract is given as in this case, it means that it had been inherited or purchased within those seven years.

Wendle and Mary Frushour had eight children at the time of his death: John, Frederick, George, Mary, Catherine, Barbara, Lucy and Sophia.

A will made by him on August 20, 1793, disposes of a considerable property for those days. The will was evidently written by himself without the aid of a lawyer and can hardly be said to be a model for clearness; however, the provisions were evidently plain to those who benefited by it.

He must have died but a few months after the date of his will as the appraisement or inventory was made April 1st, 1794.

The Appraisement may be of interest as showing the values in those days put upon implements and stock of the farm and articles of household use.

An Inventory of Part of Goods of Wendle Froshour, Dec'd.

4. PETER STURM or STORM (2) JACOB (1)

Peter was the third son of Jacob I, the immigrant, born near Sharpsburg, Maryland, in January, 1762, and later moving with the family to Virginia. He was only fourteen years old at the beginning of the Revolutionary War and we have found nothing in the records to show that he served in that war. He was married, probably about 1786, to Barbara Frushour, a sister of the wife of his elder brother, Jacob II. He was a blacksmith, as shown by an item in the settlement of the Wendle Frushour estate where Peter Storm was paid £10 - 5s - 5d for smithwork.

The following sketch was taken from the History of Ross and Highland Counties, Ohio, (page 293), published by Williams Bros., Cleveland, Ohio, 1880.

"Peter Storm and his family, consisting of his wife and nine children, emigrated from Martinsburg, Virginia, in the Fall of 1802.

They started on their journey early in September and arrived at Haller's bottom, in the Paint Creek Valley, about the first of October. Many of their old neighbors and friends accompanied them on their journey a number of miles, and then bidding them a sorrowful adieu, returned to their home in the firm belief that they should never hear of the emigrants alive again. Two sons, George and John, then lads of fourteen and twelve years of age, drove two cows from Virginia, walking the entire distance. Mr. Storm raised one crop of corn in Haller's bottom, and then purchased of General McArthur one hundred and fifty acres adjoining the farm now owned by his son, John.

He was a blacksmith, and established a shop on his farm soon after his settlement. He had a family of twelve children; the three youngest born in this township; all are now dead (1880), except three, the oldest of whom is John."

Peter Storm died February 19, 1843, at the age of eighty-one years and one month; he was therefore born January, 1762. His wife Barbara died January 11, 1859; age ninety-two years. She was born in 1767.

5. NICKOLAS STURM (2) JACOB (1)

Nickolas Sturm was born near Sharpsburg, Maryland, in probably 1763 or 1764. When a young boy, he moved with the family to Virginia where he grew to manhood. He married Elizabeth_______, who was born in 1770. He took up his residence in Randolph County, West Virginia, although the family, or mostly all, appear to have moved later to Barbour County, West Virginia.

Prior to 1852, Justices of the Peace were appointed by the Governor, and held office for life if they chose to do so. Bosworth's History of Randolph County records that Nickolas Storm, Daniel Booth and Benjamin Riddle were appointed to the office of Justice of the Peace in 1811.

The old family records were destroyed in 1861 when Union Soldiers burned the residence of his son, Jacob.

Nickolas died on March 17, 1811.

6. DAVID STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

David Sturm was the eldest child of Jacob and Catherine (Frushour) Sturm. The year of his birth was probably 1786 and the place Warm Springs, Virginia. He followed the fortunes of the family in their travels westward and was some seventeen years old when they finally reached the place which they made their permanent home; that was on Teverbaugh Creek in (then) Harrison County, Virginia. On March 17, 1814, he married Rebecca Moore, daughter of Phoebe Moore, who was born in 1796, and died April, 1873. He acquired a farm of four hundred and seventy-five acres near Tetrick's Ridge where he lived eighteen to twenty years and where most of his children were born.

In the year 1833, he sold the farm to his brother, Isaac, and went west, locating near the State Line between Indiana and Illinois, probably on the Illinois side and not far from Danville, Illinois. Many of his descendants still live in this region. In 1839 while at work assisting at house-raising, he was caught and crushed by a timber or log, from the effects of which he died.

7. MARGARET STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB(1)
Margaret Sturm was probably the third child of Jacob Sturm. The first Federal Census was taken in 1790. Jacob Sturm lived in Cumberland, Maryland, at that time. The census record lists Jacob Sturm as a resident of the County in which Cumberland was situated, and as having three children; David, born about 1786 and Margaret, born about 1790. The one born between these must have died in childhood as we have no further record of it. Margaret Sturm married Spencer Martin March 17, 1808; she was his second wife.

Spencer Martin, born March 6, 1772, was a son of Charles and Elizabeth (Burrows) Martin. Spencer was the father of eighteen children, seven by his first wife, Mary Snider, and eleven by his second, nearly all of whom lived to comparatively old age and all influential citizens; one son was a member of the West Virginia legislature and a grandson (Benjamin F. Martin) was elected a member of Congress from Marion County, West Virginia.

Many of this family lived in the community just west of Worthington and between the waters of Teverbaugh Creek and Helen's Run. The members of this family were mostly Southern sympathizers during the Civil War and for that reason the region where they lived was known at that time and is still referred to as South Carolina.

He died February 13, 1849, near Worthington, West Virginia.

8. JOHN STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB(1)
John Sturm, third child of Jacob and Catherine (Fruh-our) Sturm, was born in Cumberland, Maryland, January 14, 1792; married Tabitha Martin in the year 1812, and died September 29, 1854. He was a farmer, lived on Teverbaugh Creek, Marion County, West Virginia, and owned a farm adjoining the one on which his father lived.
His wife, Tabitha, daughter of Spencer and Polly (Snyder) Martin was born January 14, 1794 at Helen's Run and died in Marion County, West Virginia, January 22, 1867.

The following obituary of Phoebe (Sturm) Nay was written at the time of her death by Asbury P. Sturm, a nephew, and dated Farmington, West Virginia, December 8, 1876.
"Phoebe Nay, the subject of this sketch, was the daughter of Jacob and Catherine Sturm. Jacob was born in Maryland, Catherine in eastern Virginia. I am not in possession of the date of their marriage. Jacob Sturm was a soldier under George Washington, and was present at the surrender of General Cornwallis at Yorktown, Va., Oct. 19, 1781, which practically ended the war of the Revolution. In 1796 they were living near Cumberland, Md., where Phoebe was born on the 15th day of August in that year. The following year they crossed the mountains in search of a home in the West. For some cause they stopped near Morgantown on the Monongalia River, changed their plan, and in 1803 settled on the waters of Teverbaugh, in what is now Marion County, W. Va.

The country was then a wilderness, and their right to stay was questioned by Panthers, Wolves, Bears, etc., and in numbers. They were blest with a healthy, robust family of children. David, John, Daniel, Isaac and Jesse, were their sons. And Nancy, Margaret, Phebe, and Elizabeth were their daughters.

The mother of these children was a woman of great fortitude, and force of character, plain and unpretending in her manners, but full of human kindness. The sick and suffering never applied to her in vain, if it was in her power to assist them. Her religion was not in manner, but in deed and truth. No one ever called in question her piety. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church in her childhood, and through her long and eventful life she was a power for good. The influence of such a life could not be lost upon her children.

Phoebe was married to John Nay, Jr., the 26th of May, 1813, in the 17th year of her age. She was "born again" at the age of 19, and joined the M. E. Church, and remained a Methodist, during her long and useful life. She had many traits of her venerable mother. Plain, frank, kind, and genial in her manners, she was much esteemed by her neighbors. She was a woman of more than ordinary physical, and mental vigor. She was modest, and dignified in her bearing, and deeply devotional. In the days of her strength, her prayers at Camp meetings were the admiration of listening multitudes. Preachers and people were moved by her pathetic appeals, and supplications at a Throne of Grace. Her very soul seemed absorbed in her devotions. She was faithful and true, as a mother kind and indulgent to a fault. For 61 years she was a member of the church, and her own testimony is that she never "back slid", as given a few days before her death. For some years, she had been in poor health—gradually sinking, under the weight of years. Some six weeks ago, she sent for me, thinking her end was near. I hastened to see her and found her ready, and waiting for the summons. Death had no terrors. In a free and easy way, she recounted the battles of life, and summed up her experience and feeling thus: 'I am a poor unworthy creature; I have done many things wrong, but I did not do them intentionally—they were errors of judgment. I always aimed to do right—I have come through many hard places—I have never backslid—I shall soon be at home.' These were her words taken down as she uttered them. I shall not soon forget that interview. She lingered until the 4th of December at 2 o'clock, p.m., and fell asleep, and was buried the next day, amid the sorrows and tears of a large circle of relatives and friends. Peace to her ashes.

10. DANIEL STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)
Daniel Sturm, third son of Jacob and Catherine (Frushour) Sturm, was born on Scotts Mill Run, Monongalia County, Virginia, August 11, 1798. When he was five years old the family moved to a farm on Teverbaugh Creek, near Worthington, Harrison County, West Virginia. He lived on this farm most of his life and patented several tracts of land on the waters of Teverbaugh Creek. He married, February 5, 1821, Elizabeth Martin, who was born October 8, 1798 and died May 7, 1869. She was a daughter of Spencer Martin by his first wife, Mary (Snider) Martin. After the death of his father, he bought the old farm and lived there until the death of his wife, when he went to live with his son, Charles W., at Littleton, West Virginia, and lived there until his death, April 17, 1880.

11. ISAAC STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Isaac Sturm, fourth son of Jacob and Catherine (Frushour) Sturm, was born on Scotts Mill Run, in Monongalia County, W. Va., October 6, 1802. Within a year the family moved to Teverbaugh Creek, in what was then Harrison County. He received his education in the schools of the neighborhood. The time necessary for obtaining an education was limited, even if the schools had been of the best.

The struggle for existence in those pioneer days was intense and the terms of the schools were only two to three months each year. He, therefore, received a rather meager common school education. A higher education could only be obtained in those days by crossing the mountains; the nearest place at that time being Staunton, Virginia. Few, if any, in those days in this region were able to bear the expense which that would require.

Natural ability means much. He had the natural abilities that could not be held down by a lack of education. In his early years this region was thinly populated, but was being settled up rapidly. There was much demand for mechanics in building houses, barns and mills. He worked with his father and learned the trades in which he excelled, those of house and mill building, wood and timber work in general. He was a successful business man. He was married in 1824, and in 1833 he bought a farm of four hundred and seventy-five acres, situated near Tetricks Ridge, from his brother, David. Here he lived until his death. He read a great deal and had a good library. Physically he was a good specimen of manhood; around six feet in height, of strong and symmetrical build; his physiognomy showing an even tempered, good-humored disposition.

In politics he was a Whig. His church affiliation is not known but there is every indication that he was a moral and a religious man. His death, in the prime of manhood, was accidental. He and his brother, Jesse, were fishing in the West Fork river near Worthington. The method they were using was to take a rifle, and climbing into a tree with branches overhanging the water, shoot the fish from that position. He had climbed a tree and as he was taking the rifle, muzzle foremost, from his brother below, the hammer was caught on a limb and the gun discharged, the bullet striking his arm and body. He was taken to the home of his brother, Jesse, at Worthington, which was nearby, and tenderly cared for but he died in ten days—on July 25, 1840, in his thirty-eighth year.
There were eight children left—the eldest under sixteen, the youngest under two—for the wife to rear to manhood and womanhood; this she did with much credit to herself as their lives will testify. He was married April 17, 1824 to Margaret Martin, sometimes called Peggy Glover. She was born April 11, 1800 and died September 11, 1865, in Marion Co., W. Va.

12. NANCY STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Nancy Sturm was the third daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Frushour) Sturm. We have no record of the date of birth, marriage, or death. She was probably born in 1805 at Braddock’s Ford, Maryland. She married Samuel Freeman, son of Samuel and Sarah Freeman, and their home at the time of their death was in Missouri where they lived the greater part of their married life.

Jesse F. Sturm, who knew the family slightly, gives the information that they had seven or eight children, but we have no further information and no further record of the family.

13. JESSE STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Jesse Sturm, the fifth son of Jacob and Catherine (Frushour) Sturm, was born near Worthington, Virginia, September 12, 1809. The first settlers had ventured into this region but little more than thirty years before, and Jacob Sturm, the father, had lived here only six years; therefore, the region was still rather sparsely settled and still somewhat of a wilderness. He grew up like other boys of that region and time at hard work, clearing the forest, preparing the ground for raising grain for bread, cutting trees, splitting them into rails and fencing the fields to protect the crops and any other work that was necessary to be done; working with his father on the farm and at various mechanical pursuits—carpentry, mill building, barn building, boat building and cooperage, as well as making various articles of use in the home such as utensils, and household furniture; many of these articles were homemade. He and his brothers were all taught by their father to be expert in many mechanical activities. This physical and mental training developed vigor in both mind and body, thus enabling them in after life to fill their places in society with some distinction as citizens in economics, morals and religion. Among his associates and acquaintances Jesse was considered the Solomon, the man of wisdom, of the family.

On July 21, 1831, he married Matilda Davis, who was born November 6, 1812, near Worthington, West Virginia and died November 14, 1896 at Wyatt, West Virginia. She was the daughter of Caleb Davis who was a veteran of the War of 1812, and Susan Davis.
A few years after his marriage he built a mill at Worthington, West Virginia, on the West Fork River. He lived there and operated the mill for several years. He sold this mill to the Lucases and they operated it for some time.

April 5, 1852, in the great flood of the West Fork of the Monongahela, the Lucas mill at Worthington and the Griffin mill at Shinnston, Harrison County, were washed away. The mill was rebuilt by the Lucases on the old foundations and it is standing to this day. Soon after selling the mill he bought a farm one mile north-east of the mill. After living on and working the farm for three or four years, he sold it and built the first brick house erected in Worthington. He lived there for eight or nine years when he bought a small farm of thirty acres situated near the mouth of Bingamon Creek from James A. McIntire. This land was mostly in Harrison County but a small portion was in Marion County. The date of the deed is February 25, 1853, Deed Book 38, page 256. At this point there was a good mill seat and he at once proceeded to erect a flouring mill for grinding both wheat and corn and in connection therewith a saw mill for sawing all kinds of lumber. The mill was operated by water power as most mills in this region were at that time. A timber dam some ten or twelve feet high was built which was later replaced by a stone one. This mill served a large community and was kept running almost constantly. It was known far and wide for the excellence of its product. He operated this mill about twenty years and during this time he established a boat yard near the mouth of the creek where he built many flat boats or barges for transporting coal and other articles. The lumber and timbers for the boat were sawed in his mill and the finished boats were floated to Pittsburgh where they were sold.

Marion County was formed in 1842 from parts of Monongalia and Harrison Counties. The first County Court was held on April 4, 1842, and Jesse Sturm was one of the first Justices of the Peace appointed by this court. (Dunning-ton's History of Marion County, p. 79-80). On page 182 the author says: "Among the men who have held office, or figured prominently in the political affairs of the county of the past, and those who are at present conspicuous in politics, and may be classed among the men of prominence and influence we may name: Thos. L. Boggess, Thos. G. Watson, Wm. J. Willey, James Neeson, John S. Barnes, David Cunningham, Richard Thomas, Wm. B. Ice, Benj. Fleming, Ephraim B. Hall, Ellery R. Hall, John J. Moore, Frank Con-away, Wm. C. Brice, W. M. Dunnington, Jesse Sturm, John C. Clayton, Alfred Pritchard, Jas. H. Furbee, Alfred Hood,
A. W. Knotts, J. E. Wells, Wm. C. Haymond, Amos Pritchard, Robert Lowe, S. W. Hall, Elias Blackshear, John B.
Crane, Lindsay B. Haymond, C. L. Smith, U. N. Arnett, jr., Thos. H. B. Staggers, Jacob Haydon and others." He was a bridge builder and at various times took contracts for the masonry work for bridges as well as the superstructure. The Baltimore and Ohio was the first railroad to be built and operated in this county. The line was built westward from Baltimore to Cumberland, then across the mountains to Grafton and June 23, 1852, its completion to Fairmont was celebrated. In the meantime they were pushing the line toward Ohio. He built two bridges for the railroad where it crossed Buffalo Creek between Farmington and Mannington. He also built shortly afterward, a bridge across Bingamon Creek near its mouth.
His abilities were such that if he had been of an acquisitive bent of mind he might have been a great industrial leader. He had the mechanical genius and the executive ability but he only employed them a portion of the time in providing the necessaries and simple comforts for his family; the balance of his time he devoted to study, investigations, and he gave a portion of his time to the ministry. He preached at various points—mostly in Marion County—and was regarded very highly among his followers. He followed the old Biblical injunction and never asked or received any pay for his ministerial work.

He was an adherent of the Republican party from the time of its formation and was an ardent supporter of Lincoln. He was active in the proceedings that led to the separation of the western part of Virginia from the eastern and the formation of the new state of West Virginia. He was a prominent figure in the Mass meeting at Clarksburg, April 22, 1861.

An excerpt from Haymond's History of Harrison County will show the attitude of Jesse Sturm, Felix S. Sturm, and other members of the family:

"The slave states regarded the election of Mr. Lincoln as a blow at the system of slavery, and instantly threats of secession from the Union were made and public meetings began to be held to express their sentiments upon the political situation.

After the Presidential election the first public expression of opinion of Harrison County was set forth in a mass meeting held at Clarksburg on the 24th of November, 1860, which declared that the people would first exhaust all constitutional remedies for redress before they would resort to any violent measures; that the ballot box was the only medium known to the constitution for a redress of grievances and to it alone would they appeal, and that it was the duty of all citizens to uphold and support the lawful constituted authorities.

The first meeting of the Union people was held at Clarksburg, January 19, 1861, to nominate two delegates from Harrison County to the Convention, which by an act of the legislature were to be elected to meet in Richmond as above stated. The meeting was presided over by Charles Lewis with Mr. David Davison as Secretary."
After passing resolutions announcing devotion to the Union, and that they would adhere to it for "weal or woe," they adopted the following platform upon which their candidates should stand.

Resolved, That we will support no man as a delegate to the Convention to be held in Richmond on the 13th day of February next, who is not unequivocally opposed to secession and will not so pledge himself.

Resolved, That we will support no man who will not pledge himself to oppose and vote against the appointment of persons to represent this State, in any convention, having for its object the establishment of a provisional or other government, or of persons to any body convened for the purpose of forming a Southern Confederacy or government.

Resolved, That we will support no man who will not pledge himself to vote against any ordinance, resolution or motion that has for its object the withdrawal of the State from the Federal Union.

Resolved, That we will support no man who will not pledge himself to vote against any resolution to be laid down as an ultimatum, and the refusal of which by the other States to be considered just cause for seceding from the Union.

Resolved, That we will not support any man who believes that the convention to assemble at Richmond on the 13th of February, 1861, or any other State authority can absolve the citizens of this State from their allegiance to the General Government; and that we will support no man who does not believe that the Federal Government has the right of self preservation.

Resolved, That we will support no man who will not oppose all deliberation and discussion by the members of said Convention in secret session.

Hon. William A. Harrison read the proceedings of an enthusiastic Union meeting held on Friday evening at Shinnston in which members of all political parties participated, declaring their devotion to the Union and their opposition to secession.
Upon the platform adopted, Hon. John S. Carlile and Charles S. Lewis were nominated as Candidates for members of the Convention.

The States Rights party nominated Robert Johnston and Benjamin Wilson as Delegates to the convention by a meeting held January, 1861.

Mr. Johnston issued a lengthy circular to the voters taking the extreme Southern view of the condition of affairs, denounced in severe terms the 'Black Republican party' and the people of the Northern States generally and stated that Mason and Dixon's Line ran North and West of his feelings and opinions.

The campaign was short, but the candidates issued circulars defining their views and addressed the people at different places in the County and the election resulted in the choice of John S. Carlile and Benjamin Wilson as delegates to the Richmond Convention.

The convention met, a majority of its members being in favor of the Union, but the firing on Fort Sumpter, the call of President Lincoln for 75,000 troops precipitated matters and on April 17 in secret session an ordinance of secession was passed.

The members of the convention from North Western Virginia returned to their homes.

On the evening after Mr. Carlile's return home quite a number of citizens called at his residence. They stood in the doorway of his house, seemed depressed and disturbed and spoke a few words in solemn tones to his neighbors and friends. He warned them that by the prejudice and passions of designing men a conspiracy was formed to destroy the National Government, and that his lips were sealed as to the action of the convention, but that they would be opened in a short time, cautioned his hearers to decide the policy to be pursued in the present crisis, and earnestly requested them to remain true to the Stars and Stripes.

The time for action had now arrived and on the 22nd day of April, 1861, there assembled on short notice a mass meeting in Clarksburg of twelve hundred of the citizens of Har-which would tend to give the forces of the Union an advantage and thus shorten the war.

He made a model for a repeating rifle. Jesse Tyler Sturm, son of the subject of this sketch, and a soldier in the Civil War from its beginning to the end, stated that on a visit to his father's home during one of his furloughs he was shown the model of this repeating rifle, and he thought it one of the finest pieces of mechanism he had ever seen. This forerunner of the present machine gun was taken to Pittsburgh by its inventor and with entire absence of any mercenary spirit, only thinking of his duties to the cause he cherished, he turned it over to a manufacturer without any thought of royalty or remuneration and not even asking that his name be used in connection with it. Repeating rifles made after this model, or a close copy, were used during the latter part of the war with great effectiveness.

There is another instance of his mechanical genius being of great value. When the company headed by Cyrus W. Field was laying the first cable across the Atlantic it parted in mid-ocean. Many attempts were made to recover and splice together the broken cable without success.

The project was about to be abandoned when Jesse Sturm submitted to Cyrus W. Field the outlines of a plan and the details of a device which would recover and hold the ends until they could be spliced. They followed his plan and used his device and succeeded in recovering and splicing the cable and completed the laying of the line to the other side. Field wrote him a letter of appreciation and acknowledged their indebtedness to him for their success.

He was a man of great strength, about six feet tall, trim built, and weighing about 180 pounds. A nephew, Jesse Flowers Sturm, relates an incident which gives one an idea of his strength. He was quarrying large stone for the construction of a mill dam. He had assisting him his son, John F., and his nephew, Jesse F. Sturm, both of whom were young men of rather more than ordinary strength, recognized as two of the best wrestlers among their associates, at a time when wrestling was among the leading sports of the day. They had no derrick nor jacks, as we have in these days, for loading the stones onto wagons or drags for transporting them from the quarry to the dam but rolled them onto the drag or wagon by hand. Instead of crowbars of steel they used spikes made from saplings or small trees, large enough and strong enough to withstand the lifting power of two men without bending much and cut to about five or six feet in length. The young men were trying to roll a large stone, one end of the spike resting on the ground and a point in toward the center resting up against the near edge of the rock and they lifting on the spike in their endeavor to roll it over; they used all their strength without moving the stone and bending the spike but little. The elder man saw their efforts and said, "Boys, let me try it."
He took the spike and made a lift alone and his effort bent the spike almost double.

In the year 1873, he sold his farm and mill near the mouth of Bingamon and bought property at Wyatt and moved there; soon after moving to Wyatt he built a steam mill in that town; a few years later he sold this mill to Daniel Ashcraft and retired from active business. He was a great student and thinker.

He was the author of a pamphlet or brochure entitled
"Sturm's Theory of Creation."

There is a book called "Sturm's Reflections" translated from the German which shows a profound knowledge of nature, philosophy and the manifestations of God in nature.
This book was treasured and looked upon by the people of German descent in the Shenandoah and Potomac valleys as second only to the Bible. The thoughts and sentiments in this book are so much like those of Jesse Sturm that, were it not impossible, one could very well believe it was written by him. He died December 12, 1885, in Wyatt, West Virginia.

14. ELIZABETH STURM (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Elizabeth was the youngest child of Jacob and Catherine (Frushour) Sturm, born May 24, 1811, near Worthington, Virginia. She was above the ordinary in physical proportions, and was of a happy and jovial disposition, a trait which she transmitted to her children. She was married on June 7, 1832 to Armstead Martin, son of Charles Martin. He was born December 30, 1803 and died July 29, 1884. He was a farmer and teamster. He maintained fine teams for haul-Maryland, born near Hagerstown. He was one of a family of twelve—eight sons and four daughters, nearly all of whom married and raised families. His family was distinguished for the size of its men, six of the sons being six-footers or over, and weighing at least two hundred pounds apiece. He is to this day a man of large physical presence. His father was an athletic farmer and blacksmith, and his mother was also of robust build. The former died at the age of eighty-one, she at ninety-three. John remained at home assisting his parents in their labors until they left the comparatively barren farm in Virginia, and came to the fertile Paint Creek Valley. They emigrated in 1802, in a four-horse wagon, fording the Ohio at Wheeling, and settled first in Haller's bottom, near their subsequent home, where they rented land and raised one crop. The next year they removed to a tract of one hundred and fifty acres in what has come to be known as "Storm's hollow", on the present line of the Springfield Southern railroad, five miles from Bainbridge, which they occupied in the spring. The father had brought but one hundred and ten dollars with him, all of which went for part payment on the land and household equipment; and the family for a time tasted the bitterness of poverty. Game abounded in the neighborhood; the father was a good hunter, and in a single Fall killed eighteen bears near his home, the meat from which was taken by John to Chillicothe and exchanged for necessaries and medicine.

In March, 1812, young Storm volunteered for service in the war then commencing with Great Britain. He received a place in the company of mounted rangers commanded by Captain Manary, which was afterwards selected by General Harrison as his body guard, and took full part in the adventures and hardships, returning at last safely to his home. March 2, 1815, he was married to Miss Diana DeHart, daughter of Samuel DeHart, who kept a grist mill on the north fork of Paint. She died March 31, 1866, after a lingering illness; and he writes of her in a published account of his life: ‘She was a helpmate indeed to me. ’ They had ten children. " Most of the surviving children live or near their father. For the last sixty years his life has been uneventful. He has accumulated a large property, owning about twenty-eight hundred acres of land, of which fifteen hundred acres are well located in Indiana and Illinois. He has also considerable interests in turnpike and railway property. The Dayton Southern, which passes for five miles through his land, honors him in ‘Storm's Station,’ situated a mile from his house. Notwithstanding his great age, he still enjoys good general health, and takes much daily exercise on horseback."

An incident is related in D. T. & I. Railroad News of October 1, 1934:

"Nearly fifty years ago, a northbound passenger train, running through Southern Ohio, was flagged by an old man, and the train wheezed to a halt. The conductor recognized the party and cried, 'Get on, Uncle Johnny.'

'No, no,' said Uncle Johnny, 'I just wanted to know if you were coming along this way tomorrow, as I wanted to go to Bainbridge and get shaved."

Uncle Johnny Storm had given the newly founded Springfield, Jackson & Pomeroy Railroad right-of-way over nearly five miles of his land, and in return, Storm's station had been named in his honor.

He died July 21, 1886, in his ninety-ninth year.

24. HENRY STURM (3) NICKOLAS (2) JACOB (1)

Henry Sturm was a son of Nickolas and Elizabeth Sturm, and was born in 1795. He lived in Randolph County, Virginia.
The first definite record we find is his marriage in 1815 to Elizabeth Stalnaker, daughter of William Stalnaker. In 1841, he married Susan Alexander, who was born in 1803.

He must have been a man of some prominence and standing in the county for in 1831 he was appointed Justice of the Peace by the Governor. He was elected as a Randolph County Representative or Delegate to the General Assembly of Virginia in 1839, 1843, 1847 and 1851. He was a Major of Militia in 1831 and served as a Colonel in the Confederate Army during the Civil War although he must have been at least sixty years old at the time.

A grandson of his states that he was in three wars, the War of 1812, the Mexican War of 1846, and the Civil War, 1861.

SO. FELIX S. STURM (4) JOHN (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Felix S. Sturm was the eldest son of John and Tabitha (Martin) Sturm, born March 5, 1816, and died February 17, 1882. He was a successful farmer and owned some three hundred acres of good productive land situated about two miles north of Shinnston, West Virginia, on the West Fork of the Monongahela River. This farm adjoined the one known as the "Big Elm Farm" which was owned and occupied during and before the Civil War by Richard Everson and later by William Hood and was supposed to be the location referred to by Granville Davidson Hall in his story, "The Daughter of the Elm."

In the seventies, Felix Sturm and William Hood jointly built a dairy and cheese-making establishment and went into the business of manufacturing cheese on a large scale. They brought in several Swiss cheese-makers and carried on the business for several years.

He was a Republican in politics and an ardent Union man before and during the Civil War. He was a man of considerable influence politically, although he never held an elective office.

An ordinance of secession was passed April 17, 1861, at Richmond, Virginia. On April 22, 1861, there assembled at Clarksburg a mass meeting of twelve hundred citizens of Harrison County and adopted the following:

"Resolved, That it be and is hereby recommended to each and all the counties composing North Western Virginia to appoint Delegates, not less than five in number of the wisest, best and most discreet men to meet in convention at Wheeling on the 13th day of May next, to consult and determine upon such action as the people of North Western Virginia should take in this fearful emergency.

Resolved, That Honorable John S. Carlile, Waldo P. Goff, J. Davis, Thomas L. Moore, Solomon S. Fleming, Lot Bown, William Dunkin, William E. Lyon, Felix S. Sturm, Benjamin F. Shuttleworth and James Lynch, be and are hereby appointed delegates to represent this county in said convention. Thus the movement started which culminated in the formation of the State of West Virginia."

Felix Sturm took a large part in the proceedings which led up to this result.

He was married, first, on May 10, 1838, to Celia R. Wamsley, daughter of David and Mary (Bartlett) Wamsley. She was born in Harrison County, West Virginia, January 1, 1816, and died August 23, 1853 in Harrison County and is buried near Shinnston in the Tetrick-Sturm Cemetery. His second wife, Mary Griffin, to whom he was married in 1854, was born March 11, 1817, and died June 3, 1898.

County, West Virginia, and died September 30, 1840.

Caroline Sturm was born January 19, 1828, in Marion County, West Virginia. She was married to Eli Cunningham.
They spent most, if not all, their lives on a farm at Wyatt,
West Virginia. He was a substantial farmer and business man. He was, in a way, slightly eccentric; at least, somewhat droll. He owned a farm, a part of which was a large creek bottom with various low places that would collect water in wet seasons and make necessary a certain amount of drainage. He was engaged one day in digging a ditch to drain the water from these low places when some boys came along and remarked that it was a very muddy job. "Yes," he said, and added, "the Bible says the Lord made the world in six days. I think he could have put six more on it to very good advantage."

75. PERRYGREEN B. STURM (4) DANIEL (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Perrygreen Buckingham, sixth child of Daniel and Elizabeth (Martin) Sturm, was born near Worthington, West Virginia, July 9, 1829. He received his education in the common schools and at an early age learned blacksmithing and wagonmaking. He, with his five brothers and one sister, was brought up on a farm, a part of the land formerly owned by their grandfather, Jacob Sturm. The brothers were all portly men, Perrygreen and Charles being over six feet tall. He was married, first, to Amy Freeland, on August 25, 1850. She died July 19, 1852. They lived in Worthington, West Virginia. In the great flood of the West Fork River in 1852, their house was surrounded with water and in the absence of her husband, she waded to dry land, the exposure resulting in her death.

He was married, second, on March 31, 1853, to Elizabeth J. Barnhouse, daughter of Andrew and Phoebe (Clayton) Barnhouse. She was born March 31, 1833 and died April 30, 1901. They took up their residence in Mannington, West Virginia, where he worked at his trade. He built and owned the first brick residence in Mannington, (owned in 1921 by the Hope Natural Gas Company.)

In the war of 1861-65, he enlisted in the Confederate Army. In one of the engagements he was captured and sent to military prison at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio.

He bought a farm near Mannington on Price’s Run and built a home there. He was ordained local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Mannington, May 2, 1870, and a deacon in the M. E. Church May 7, 1875. He died January 29, 1880.

81. JACOB STURM (4) ISAAC (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Jacob Sturm was the second son of Isaac and Margaret (Martin) Sturm, born September 13, 1826, near Worthington, West Virginia. He was a farmer, a timberman and a successful business man. He was genial, jovial, and a good story teller. While he did not seek elective office, he was chosen as one of the delegates from Marion County to the Wheeling Convention of May 13, 1861, which was one of the steps toward the formation of the new state of West Virginia.

He was a man of very rugged constitution and lived to be nearly 87. It is said that at the age of 86 he walked from Sturm's Mills to Manningtown, a distance of some six or seven miles. He was married April 1, 1847, to Isabel Fowler, daughter of R. J. and Anna (Nichols) Fowler. She was born July 11, 1829 at Fairchance, Pennsylvania, and died August 18, 1903 at Worthington, West Virginia. She is buried at Little Bingamon Creek in the Ashcraft Cemetery.

Jacob died February 7, 1914 at Worthington, West Virginia.

85. JESSE FLOWERS STURM (4) ISAAC (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Jesse Flowers Sturm was the fifth son of Isaac and Margaret (Martin) Sturm. He was familiarly known as "Dock" Sturm; but while he knew a lot about medicine from reading books on that science and had experience in the application of home remedies, yet he was not a doctor. He got this sobriquet from the fact that Dr. Jesse Flowers, a noted practitioner of the time, and for whom he was named, was the family physician when he was born.

He was born September 26, 1834, one mile west of Tetricks' Ridge in Harrison County, Virginia, now Marion County, West Virginia. When he was six years old his father died leaving a widow with the care of eight children ranging in ages from sixteen to two years. As he expressed it, his boat was cast upon the sea of life almost without a rudder.
His elder brothers taught him farming and the use of tools. His meager education was obtained through a few weeks' attendance in the winter at the nearest neighborhood school until he was fourteen years old. At this time, he went into the timber business for himself. He would buy a tract of timber, go into the woods and fell and hew the trees into what was known as ship timber. He and his brothers had a team with which they hauled the timber to the river where it was rafted and floated to market at Pittsburgh.

He continued in this business for twenty-one years and by buying and selling as well as producing it himself, he was quite successful.

He was married to Hanna Holbert, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Ann Holbert of Little Bingamon on August 20, 1859. She was born June 19, 1839 and died June 13, 1914. They lived on a farm on Little Bingamon Creek until their death.

During the War of the Rebellion, he was a strong Union man. Notwithstanding he had a wife and two small children, he enlisted in the Union Army early in 1865. He served in Company G, 7th West Virginia Regiment. He got to Washington on his way to the front when he was taken down with a fever and was sick several months so that he was not in any battles. He was honorably discharged in July, 1865.

In politics he was a Republican. He served three terms in the lower house of the West Virginia Legislature and two terms in the Senate. He was elected as a member of the Lower House from Marion County in 1883, again in 1886 and again in 1894. He was elected to the Senate from the Second District in 1898 and re-elected in 1900.
He has stated that he never sought a nomination he did not get and was never defeated in an election. The only fight he ever had to make was for his last nomination and election to the Senate. Dr. Brownfield, a prominent physician of Fairmont, West Virginia, was his opponent for the nomination on the Republican ticket, but although Dr. Brownfield had strong social and political backing in Fairmont, the county seat of Marion County, he was defeated. Brownfield was much disgruntled by his defeat and decided to run as an independent candidate; thus the Republican voters were divided and the Democrats united, but Sturm carried the election, defeating both of them.

He was a member of many important committees and he was a recognized power in legislation during the time he was a member of the two law-making bodies. He was a member of the Board of Education of his district for twelve years and president of the Board for six years. By reason of his long experience in politics and legislation and of his mature judgment his advice and counsel were much sought after by the leaders of his party in the state.

He knew former United States Senator Stephen B. Elkins intimately and visited him at his home. He knew personally most of the governors of the state, and quite intimately the first Governor Francis H. Pierpoint, who was his attorney for many years before he became Governor. He continued his interest in politics until his death.

He was a remarkable man. His schooling consisted of a few months' training in the rudiments of education. The school attended was the little log school house set up in a clearing in the forest, with split saplings for seats, fitted with peg legs and no backs, and with oiled paper for windows, yet he became a man of rare knowledge.
His reading in his young and mature years was extensive and carried on with method and intelligence. He knew the main points of ancient and modern history and could draw apt conclusions from them.

He climbed well up the ladder of success in politics, society and business. He had a keen and well-trained mind; was strong in debate; intelligent and entertaining in conversation; genial and sympathetic in manner. He was of robust but not large build, weighing about 180 pounds; was a man of great strength and activity; in his young days he was the champion wrestler of his size or class in the entire surrounding community.

He lived many years beyond the allotted three score and ten. To the advantages of a robust and active ancestry he added those of intelligent, temperate and clean living. He was active and in full possession of all his faculties until his death, January 12, 1930, well along in his ninety-sixth year.

Children of Jesse Flowers and Hannah (Holbert) Sturm:

429 (1) Jennie, b. 5-25-1861; d. 6-8-1877.

HARRISON STURM (4) ISAAC (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Harrison Sturm, born November 30, 1836, was the sixth son of Isaac and Margaret (Martin) Sturm. He owned a farm and lived in Marion County all of his life. He was a substantial farmer, a good citizen, and of sterling honor and integrity in all his dealings. In 1827, he was married to Sabra Martin who was born December 10, 1838 and died December 7, 1910. She was the daughter of William and Ruth (Wright)
Martin. Harrison served as school commissioner of the Mannington District for two years. He died December 11, 1898 in Marion County, West Virginia.

87. LOUISA STURM (4) ISAAC (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Louisa Sturm, born September 15, 1838, was the eighth and youngest child of Isaac and Margaret (Martin) Sturm.
On June 21, 1854, she was married to John L. Shinn, who was a son of Asa J. and Anna (Flower) Shinn, and who was born June 26, 1836 in Fulton County, Illinois and died June 14, 1922 at West Milford, West Virginia.

"The History of the Shinn Family" contains the following record of John L. Shinn: "Born in Fulton County, Illinois, June 26, 1836; returned with his father to Virginia in 1844; where in the private schools of Harrison County, The Old Field Schools' of our earlier and better days, he received a good English education. Teaching seemed to agree with his tastes, and to him at that time, as to thousands of others then and now, it afforded the readiest means of livelihood. This he followed three or four years. The leaven of piety then began its work, and like hundreds of other good teachers, he conceived it to be his duty to declare the word. Politics, the pulpit, and marriage have depleted the teachers' rank more than all other agencies combined. He became a Universalist preacher and proclaimed the doctrine with vigor. He enlisted in 1861 in the Eighteenth Regiment of Virginia State troops for service in the Union Army, remained in the service until the close of the war, when in 1865 he moved to Hancock County, Illinois, where he remained ten years; thence to Neosho County, Kansas, (1875), and in the same year to Wilson County, where he now resides (1902). In 1878, he was elected County Superintendent of Public Instruction for Wilson County. He owns a large and well-stocked farm where he lives a happy and peaceful life."

Louisa (Sturm) Shinn died March 13, 1918 at West Milford, West Virginia, and is buried there.

John Fletcher Sturm was the eldest son of Jesse and Matilda (Davis) Sturm and was born at Worthington, Virginia, October 26, 1834. The family lived in Worthington or vicinity until 1852. In the meantime, in working with his father in the construction of mill dams and bridges, he had learned the trade of stone-cutter and stonemason. In 1851 he, in connection with his father built the abutments and piers for two bridges across Elk Creek between Farmington and Mannington, West Virginia, for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, which was then extending its line through to the Ohio River.

In the year 1852, the family moved to a small farm near the mouth of Bingamon. He was now eighteen years old and had attended the neighborhood schools and had received a fairly good common school education. About a mile from the family's new location there was a school house, known afterward as “The Old Burnt School House.” It was situated on the high ground about one hundred and fifty yards southwest of the west end of the bridge across the West Fork of the Monongahela River at Enterprise. This school was taught several terms by Samuel Spencer, a man of considerable learning and ability as a teacher. He was also a surveyor and engineer, being very good in mathematics.

John Fletcher attended this school for some time and among other branches he received special instruction in mathematics and surveying. In after years, most of the ordinary calculations encountered in his business he made mentally and seldom used paper and pencil for that purpose. His father at this time was building a mill near the mouth of Bingamon Creek and this gave an outlet for his energy and skill as a mechanic. When the mill was completed, its operation was turned over to him and was continued in that capacity for nearly twenty years. He made a reputation for the mill for excellence of product approached or equalled by few, if any. The mill could not be operated continuously owing to lack of water for power in the dry seasons. He utilized these dry seasons by taking contracts for building bridges and cut stone foundations for residences. Just before the Civil War, he built the cut stone foundation for the residence of Peter B. Righter. This place was situated on Coons' Run about two miles from Enterprise and was one of the finest country homes in the State at that time. This home was burned during the war, probably by reason of the fact that Righter was an active Southern sympathizer. The foundation stood for forty or fifty years and may be standing yet as a monument to the skill of the builder.

On February 18, 1858, he was married to Harriet Virginia Harrison, who was born April 28, 1838 and died September 4, 1910 at Enterprise, W. Va. She was the daughter of James and Rhuama (Boyer) Harrison. She traces her ancestry to the Virginia Harrisons, and from among whom three presidents came.

They built a cottage near the mill where they lived for thirteen or fourteen years and where six of their children were born.

The Civil War came on soon after he settled in his new home; the people of the neighborhood were very much divided in their sympathies. His nearest neighbor, except his father's family, was a Southern sympathizer who joined the Confederate Army at once. He had a wife and young child dependent on him, therefore, he was not expected to enlist; however, his eldest brother, Jesse T. Sturm, aged 17, and four of his wife's brothers enlisted at once in the Union Army and served during the entire war. He joined the Home Guards and helped in whatever useful purpose they may have served. At the close of the war, he entered into partnership with two brothers-in-law, Joseph B. Harrison and Levy S. Martin, in buying a two hundred acre farm from Henry McCord. This farm was situated a little less than a mile east of Enterprise and was known as the Higgenbotham Farm. He still operated the mill and his partners looked after the farm; but a few years later he and Mr. Martin bought Mr. Harrison's interest and soon afterward he turned over the operation of the mill to his younger brothers and moved to the farm where he lived until within a few years of his death.

A few years after the purchase of Mr. Harrison's interest he bought the interest of the other partner, and continued for many years the successful operation of the entire farm after buying a further addition of about fifty acres. Although looking after the management of his farm, he did not overlook opportunities in the contracting field.

He and his brother, James N. Sturm, formed a partnership in 1873, after he had secured a contract for the construction of a bridge across the West Fork River at West Milford, West Virginia. This was a special partnership which ended with the completion of this contract. A year or two after this, he built the masonry for the Bridge Street bridge across the river at Shinnston. Various other smaller bridges were built.

He joined in forming a special partnership in 1884 with William I. Sturm, Joshua Spencer and his son, Lloyd E. Sturm, and secured a contract from the Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company, on an extension of line called the Fairmont, Morgantown and Pittsburgh Railroad, for building three large railroad bridges; one situated in Morgantown, West Virginia; one two miles south of Morgantown, and one
The Homestead had once belonged to an old pioneer, Thomas Reeder. He had built a residence on the farm which was one of the finest of its day in that region. It was built of hewn lows on a strong foundation. The outside was covered with plank "weatherboarding" and the logs on the inside were covered with ceiling. The old house was torn down in 1883, and a new house built. The cut stone foundation was built by his son, L. E. Sturm, and the house by F. C. Richardson.

In 1880, the form of administration of the probate business of the county was changed from a court consisting of a Judge to one consisting of three Commissioners who looked after the probate and fiduciary business, the roads, charitable institutions, public buildings and various matters. He was elected as one of these commissioners and drew the short term which was two years (the others being four and six). James M. Lyon drew the four-year term and Sidney Haymond the six-year term.

He was elected again in 1889 for a full six-year term and served for the years 1891-1892-1893-1894-1895 and 1896. During his incumbency, the present (1931) County Court House, the sheriff’s residence and jail were erected. After the expiration of his last term of office of Commissioner, he was approached by the recognized leaders of his party and urged to stand for the nomination for sheriff and assuring him he would be nominated if he would consent and that his nomination would be equivalent to election.

The office of sheriff of Harrison County, being also the Treasurer, included the matter of collecting the taxes and disbursing all funds of the county.
The Sheriff of Harrison County was one of the best, if not the best, paid by salary and commissions, of any office in the State. He took the matter into consideration for a few days but finally declined to enter the race. He was asked to name a man, who, in his judgment would be the best man to put up and he suggested John Fleming. Fleming was nominated and elected.

In 1904, he sold his farm to two of his sons, one half including the homestead residence to Lucius R., and the balance to Arthur M. He moved to a cottage in West Enterprise where he lived until his death, May 19, 1908.

The following appeared in The Shinnston News dated Thursday, May 21, 1908.

"John F. Sturm Buried Today.

"John F. Sturm, an aged and highly respected citizen of Enterprise, died at his home Tuesday night, after a long illness of paralysis. He was stricken about three years ago, since which time he has suffered almost continually from the affliction and during the last year he has been unable to leave his bed.

Deceased was a life-long citizen of the county and was one of the most progressive citizens, being engaged in the contracting business for many years in addition to farming. He was twice elected to the position of county commissioner and on one or two more occasions served an unexpired term as member of the court. He was a man of mature judgment and sound business acumen, whose services were for the best interests of the county.

Mr. Sturm was a son of the late Jesse Sturm of Wyatt, who was one of the prominent men of his day in this county. He was aged seventy-three years, having been born October 29, 1834. He is survived by a widow, who is a daughter of James Harrison, deceased, and six sons and three daughters. The children are: L. E. Sturm of Columbus, Ohio; Arthur M. of Enterprise; John J. of Shinnston; Lucius R. of Enterprise;
Charles D. of Clarksburg; Perry Clyde of Enterprise; and Mrs. Dora Richardson, wife of F. C. Richardson, of this place; Mrs. Jeannette Selby, wife of Dr. Selby of Clarksburg; and Mrs. Fannie Ice, wife of Homer Ice of Enterprise.

Deceased was a member of the Christian Church and a Mason, being the oldest member of St. John's Lodge No. 24, of this place. Funeral services were conducted at the family residence at 2:30 today by Rev. W. M. Long, of Clarksburg, following which the remains were laid to rest in the Odd Fellows cemetery. The funeral was in charge of the local lodge of Masons and was largely attended."

Mary M. Sturm was born in Harrison County, Virginia, now Marion County, West Virginia, May 26, 1839, fourth child of Jesse and Matilda (Davis) Sturm. She died December 21, 1908.

Excerpts from an article in the Telegram of Clarksburg, West Virginia, at the time of her death:

"She was a grand-daughter of Jacob Sturm, Sr., who enlisted under the banner of the Revolutionary patriots and followed the fortunes of the illustrious Washington in our country's struggle for independence. He was with the 'father of our country' amid the hardships and stern realities of the long, cruel war and with him at Yorktown when he received the sword of Cornwallis. His son, the Reverend Jesse Sturm, father of Mary M. Hess, was one of the pioneer ministers of the Monongahela Valley. He was not only a preacher of great power but a student, a thinker, and a man of far-seeing vision and great strength of character. His name is cherished for his benevolence, for the heroic Christian service he rendered in the establishment of new churches and for his intense loyalty to the Union.

"He was among the first to protest against the action of Virginia in seceding from the Union, and was a prominent and commanding figure in the Clarksburg mass meeting, where on April 22, 1861, were taken the first steps that led to the formation of the new state of West Virginia.

"With such an ancestry, it is not difficult to account for the splendid traits of character and the spirit of loyalty to country and flag that animated the breast of Mary M. Sturm.

"She was in the prime of young womanhood in 1864 when she heard of the sickness, suffering and privations of the soldiers who were fighting for the Union. It did not take her long to decide as to her duty. Mounting one of the best horses on the farm, she traveled during some of the hottest days of July appealing to everyone she could reach for aid for the cause of the Union. The country people were poor but she accepted offerings from five cents to any amount they would give and collected and turned over a snug sum for the relief fund. She received the sincere thanks of those in charge at headquarters and in the columns of the 'National' published at Fairmont, West Virginia in 1864, appeared most complimentary reference to her act, saying among other things:

"When or where has such self-sacrificing devotion to the welfare of the soldiers been exhibited? Were half our young ladies so devoted to the cause of the Union, how much good could be done; how much pain and suffering could be alleviated and how much the sooner the war would end in the overthrow of the rebellion. Who will emulate the example of Miss Sturm? Let us teach our children to honor the patriotic ladies who minister with angel hands to our heroes."

On September 6, 1866, soon after the close of the war, she became the wife of Jeremiah W. Hess, who was a son of Peter and Orpha (Sandy) Hess of Harter Hill, Marion County, West Virginia. He was born August 17, 1841, and died March 25, 1910. He enlisted in the Civil War on June 27, 1861 and was discharged at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, on May 22, 1866. He was a private in Company "E", 3rd West Virginia Infantry, Company "C", 6th West Virginia Cavalry. He served under Captain Phillips and Captain P. J. Potts of Infantry and Captain Robert I. Lindsay of Cavalry. He was under command of General Polk at the Battle of Bull Run, where he was wounded; first battle, McDowell, Virginia; second, Strasburg; third, Crosskeys, Virginia; fourth and fifth, Rapidan and Rappahannock, Virginia; sixth, Bull Run on August 28-29, 1862; seventh, came back to West Virginia, and mounted, fought Rock Gap near White Sulphur Springs; eighth, Drap Mountain. On December 8, 1862, he started on Salem raid, arriving at Martinsburg, then joined General Sheridan's army and fought up and down the Shenandoah Valley. He was engaged in fourteen battles.

He was promoted to Commissary Sergeant of Company "C" of the Sixth Regiment of West Virginia, Volunteer Cavalry on March 25, 1865, Lieutenant Colonel R. E. Fleming commanding the Regiment.

He was elected to the House of Delegates of West Virginia twice, first in 1894 and next in 1896. He acquitted himself with distinction as a legislator and stood loyal and true to the Republican party and the people of the state. He served many years as justice of the peace.

All his life he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and an active Sunday School worker. He was a prominent Odd Fellow, belonging to the lodge at Wyatt. He was also a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

100. SUSAN STURM (4) JESSE (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Susan Sturm was the fifth child of Jesse and Matilda (Davis) Sturm. She was born in or near Worthington, Virginia, September 3, 1841 and died in Tecumseh, Nebraska, October 12, 1905. In 1866, she was married to Thomas Hudson Brooke. He was born August 9, 1844, in Preston County, West Virginia. At the time of their marriage he was in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company at Mannington as telegraph operator. Soon after their marriage, which was just after the close of the war, the westward movement got under way and the railroads began to push their way into the vast territory west of the Mississippi River; they joined the movement and found their way to Tecumseh, Nebraska, where he was employed by the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad and was made their agent at Tecumseh. He also had charge of the express and telegraph offices. He held this position for many years. Finally he moved to Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and was made manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company for that city, a position he held until his death.

He was a man of powerful physique, quick intelligence, strong will and kindly disposition. On their trip west, the family took a steamboat, going down the Ohio River to its mouth and up the Mississippi; before they reached their destination the boat struck a submerged rock or snag which tore a hole in the bottom, letting in large quantities of water causing it to list and settle alarmingly. The pilot steered the boat toward the bank and soon had the bow grounded not far from the shore. The stern was settling and about to sink. Wild panic ensued. The crew and the rougher men among the passengers were scrambling to get off and make their way to safety.

The Captain took a position on the bow and with drawn pistol declared he would shoot the first man who attempted to leave before all the women and children were safely off the boat. Mr. Brooke sprang to the Captain's side and drawing his own revolver backed the Captain's command and the men were held in check until all the women and children were safely landed.

When he was approaching the age of seventy he felt so active in mind and body he felt he did not want to retire. The rules of the Western Union required that every employee reaching the age of seventy should be retired with part pay or pension for the rest of his life. He took the matter up with his superiors and used such persuasive arguments that they took it up with the higher officials, but it seemed that it was an ironclad, unbreakable rule. He was so persistent, however, and advanced such strong arguments that the matter was finally brought to the attention of the Board of Directors in New York City and, inasmuch as he had been in the employ of the company from boyhood, they passed a resolution granting his request to continue in active service, as long as he desired. He died September 6, 1921.

111. JESSE TYLER STURM (4) JESSE (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Jesse Tyler Sturm was the sixth child of Jesse and Matilda (Davis) Sturm, born in Marion County, Virginia, February 11, 1844. At the age of nine, the family moved to near the mouth of Bingamon Creek in Harrison County.

Here his time was spent in assisting in the working of a small farm and the operation of a flouring and saw mill until he was seventeen years old when the Civil War came on. The duties connected with his daily occupation made him strong of limb, muscle and wind but he was rather small for his age so that he did not fill the requirements of the government for a United States soldier at that time.
However, he joined a company of Minute Men under Captain Jesse Shaw.

Their duty was to drill, scout and be useful generally in protecting the loyal people and their property, and beating back rebel bands making incursions into that part of the State.

When President Lincoln made his call for 600,000 troops, he was a year older and was larger. He enlisted in Company H., 14th West Virginia Volunteer infantry. They rendezvoused at Wheeling with Colonel Core in command. They were soon sent to Clarksburg. Here further drilling was done to make them into full-fledged soldiers. In November, 1862, they were ordered to New Creek, a station on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad one hundred miles east, where they went into camp until spring. During the retreat of the Confederate Army from Gettysburg, they had an engagement with a detachment of Lee's army at Hedgesville.

After some minor operations up the Shenandoah Valley they went into winter quarters at Burlington. In May, 1864, an expedition, consisting of three brigades under General Crook, went into southwestern Virginia. They had an engagement at Cloyd's mountain with Generals Breckenridge and Morgan—defeating them and destroying quantities of stores at Dublin Station and destroying the railroad bridge across New River. After accomplishing their purpose, they returned and headed toward the Shenandoah Valley. They encountered a force at Lexington and had a skirmish. They joined Hunter and under him drove the enemy to Lynchburg where they had an engagement, but finding an equal or larger force well entrenched, and their ammunition having become exhausted, they retreated west by way of Salem and on to the Kanawha River and by boat and rail to the Potomac and Shenandoah Valleys.
Early was in this territory, having been thrown back from his menace of Washington. The forces under Hunter sparred with Early for some time, having many minor engagements until about mid-summer when the command was taken over by Sheridan, when real fighting began. He was in sixteen battles in all; the last three being among the hardest fought battles of the war. These were the battle of Winchester on September 19, where Sheridan made his famous ride, celebrated in poem; Fisher's Hill, September 22, and Cedar Creek, October 19, 1864. This last battle cleared the Shenandoah Valley of the rebels and there were no further operations in this territory during the war. Thus he fought over the ground where his grandfather grew up and from where he enlisted in the Revolutionary War nearly one hundred years before.

In the battle of Fisher's Hill he and a few of his comrades got well in advance of the rest of their company and got into close quarters with the enemy; several near him fell, but he passed through this battle as well as the entire war without receiving a single wound, however, when this battle was over there were found forty-two bullet holes in his clothing and equipment.

At the close of the war he was only just past twenty-one; he attended the Harter Hill school the following winter to add somewhat to the rather limited education obtained in boyhood in the short terms of the country schools at that time. However, the sobering influences from the participation in four years of war, the consequent mingling with all classes of people in many different places gave him a knowledge of human nature and an outlook that equipped him for meeting the duties of life better, probably, than any university degree.

He was married February 11, 1867, to Lavinie Jane Hess, daughter of Peter and Orpha (Sandy) Hess. She was born in Marion County, W. Va., January 28, 1847, and died April 5, 1930 at Caldwell, Kansas.

About this time Horace Greeley was giving out his famous advice to young men to "go west and grow up with the country." The government was offering homesteads in Kansas and other western states to those who had been soldiers in the war of the Rebellion. Early in 1872, he went west and took up a homestead in Sumner County, Kansas, where he raised his family and lived until his death, July 25, 1920. He chose an exceedingly fertile quarter section (160 acres) of bottom land in the valley and on the banks of the Neosha River. It was six miles from Caldwell, Kansas, which is on the border between Kansas and Oklahoma and fifteen miles from Wellington, the county seat. When he arrived in Sumner County, the nearest railroad town was Wichita, fifty miles away where they hauled their grain for the market. He has seen Sumner County grow from a wild prairie region to one of the finest and most prosperous communities in the country with many important towns and a number of railroads traversing the county in every direction.

He was elected Justice of the Peace in November, 1873, and served until 1883 when he was elected Township Trustee and Assessor, serving four years. He took the United States Decennial Census in 1880 and in 1887 was elected County Treasurer. After serving one term of two years, he was re-elected and served another term. In 1908, he was elected Trustee of the Sumner County High Schools, for three successive terms of four years each, but after serving nine years he resigned on account of ill health. In 1918, he was elected Justice of the Peace and held the office until his death.

He also served in several honorary capacities. He was appointed by the Governor as a member of the River and Harbor Congress which met at Atlantic City; he was ap-pointed by Governor Capper a delegate to the Inter-State Wheat Congress, was reappointed and held the position at the time of his death. He was active in shaping the policies of the Republican party of the state for many years, having taken part as delegate to many county, congressional and state conventions.

He was urged by the party leaders to run for State Senator in 1918 in a strong Republican district where a nomination was equivalent to an election, but he declined to run because his health was not robust.

In 1910, at the age of sixty-six, and forty-five years after the Civil War, he wrote a series of articles for a newspaper in Wellington, Kansas, and for the "Shinnston News" of Shinnston, West Virginia, describing his experiences as a soldier and his recollections of the events in which he took part. This work is looked upon by many as a masterpiece of description of events and personal experiences, especially after the lapse of so many years. He received a letter from Granville Davison Hall of Glencoe, Illinois, author of "Rending of Virginia," "The Daughter of the Elm," "Lee's Campaign into West Virginia," etc., who was born and reared in Shinnston, West Virginia, who says:

"I get the Shinnston News and have read your sketches in it, of your army experiences. I found them so readable that I called the attention of my sister and wife to them as they appeared and we agreed that we had never read anything so graphic and vivid, describing a soldier's sensations and experiences in battle. A paper of that character was put in my hands by a scholarly friend here a few months ago for the Atlantic Monthly, and I must say that in my estimation it did not compare in effectiveness or in clear, simple and expressive diction with yours. I said to my folks at the time it seemed a pity your sketches could not be put together and preserved in book form."

183. JAMES NOAH STURM (4) JESSE (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

James Noah Sturm was the eighth child of Jesse and Matilda (Davis) Sturm, born in Marion County, Virginia, May 23, 1848. The family moved to a newly acquired farm at the mouth of Bingamon Creek when he was five years old. He had a natural inclination toward mechanical work and he was taught by his father the use of carpentry and masonry tools. He attended the common school and a special or private school and prepared himself for a teacher. He taught two or three terms at the Sturm schoolhouse.

He was married November 2, 1870, to Matilda Robey, born January 2, 1849 and died in 1931, who was a daughter of Henderson and Louise (Wamsley) Robey of Enterprise, West Virginia.

In the seventies, he entered the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and was made superintendent of a quarry at Little Hocking, Ohio, where stone was quarried, dressed and shipped to points along the line for use in the construction of bridges. He held this position for several years; later he was superintendent in the construction of the Rockebay Lock on the Muskingum River for the United States Government. In 1886, he, W. P. Sturm and L. E. Sturm formed a partnership under the name of J. N. Sturm and Company, and secured a contract for building several bridges for the Ohio River Railroad which was building the section of its line from Parkersburg to Point Pleasant, West Virginia. In 1887, they built a thirty-foot stone arch bridge for the Scioto Valley Railroad near Chillicothe, Ohio, and an abutment and two piers for a bridge across the Scioto River for the Dayton, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad, a line running from Ironton to Dayton, now a part of the B. & O. Railroad system. In 1888, they built several bridges for the Monongahela River Railroad, a line then building from Fairmont to Clarksburg, West Virginia. Other work done by the company was a number of bridges for the Peoria and Eastern Railroad, a part of the Big Four system in 1892 and 1893, an arch viaduct for the same at Danville, Illinois, in 1895; the substructure for the Marion County, West Virginia courthouse in 1897; bridges for the Norfolk and Western Railway in 1898 and 1899.

In January, 1890, the partnership of J. N. Sturm and Company was dissolved, after which he secured and executed a few contracts individually. He had a bright intellect, was a genial companion, a good story teller, and an interesting conversationalist. He died June 20, 1903.

104. FREDERICK HARRISON STURM (4) JESSE (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Frederick Harrison Sturm was born in Harrison County, West Virginia, June 30, 1850, the ninth child of Jesse and Matilda (Davis) Sturm, and was married March 3, 1874 to Jeannette J. Mick of West Milford, West Virginia. She was the daughter of Mathias and Eliza (Queen) Mick and was born October 3, 1855 in Harrison County.

After his marriage, he operated his father's flouring mill at Wyatt, West Virginia, for several years. He then successfully operated flouring mills at Wallace, Harrison County, West Virginia, and at Camden, Lewis County, West Virginia. He next moved to West Milford, West Virginia, where he lived until his death, October 15, 1916.

443. JENNIE SHINN (5) LOUISA (4) ISAAC (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Jennie was born in West Virginia, February 19, 1864. She attended the public and normal schools of Illinois and Kansas, and then taught school successfully for several years. During Cleveland's administration she was a teacher of the Sac and Fox Indians at their agency in Indian Territory, being appointed by President Cleveland. She was married June 28, 1916 to George W. Sturm, son of Jacob and Isabel (Fowler) Sturm. He was born March 10, 1861.

See No. 406 for sketch of George W. Sturm.
Lloyd Elmer Sturm was a native of Virginia, born January 28, 1860, but his birthplace, Enterprise, Harrison County, was two years later placed within the boundaries of the new State of West Virginia. His parents were John Fletcher and Harriet Virginia (Harrison) Sturm. Lloyd was the eldest of a family of ten.

He was educated in the common schools at Enterprise, and before completing his own education, he took up teaching when seventeen years of age. He taught four terms of school in West Virginia. He finished his education in private schools at Shinnston.

After this he turned his attention to railroad contracting in the state of his nativity. Natural mechanical ingenuity and skill combined with knowledge gained through practical experience in mechanical work developed his ability for contracting. His first work on railroad construction was done in 1880 in Washington County, Ohio, where the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad had an extensive program under way. He engaged in this type of work continuously for four years with his uncle, James N. Sturm, as a partner. This partnership continued until the completion of the underpass on the Big Four Railroad at Danville, Illinois.

In 1884, he established his own organization as a railroad contractor, confining his attention very largely to masonry construction. In the early years he helped construct the Fairmont-Morgantown and Pittsburgh Railroad, now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio System, from Fairmont, West Virginia, to Uniontown, Pennsylvania. He also helped build the Ohio River Railroad, now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, from Wheeling, West Virginia to Kenova, West Virginia. He did the masonry and bridge work on these.
and his success in those undertakings led him to seek broader fields of labor.

In 1887 he came to Ohio and began operations there as a railroad contractor with headquarters at Portsmouth, first building bridges for the old Scioto Valley Railroad, now the Norfolk and Western. In 1891 he went to Waverly, Ohio, where he resided until 1905, when he removed to Columbus. His work has been on the Big Four Railroad to a considerable extent and since 1898 he has also been engaged on work for the Norfolk and Western Railroad Company, for which he has built about seventy or more bridges. He constructed the steel and concrete bridge over the Scioto River at Portsmouth and has done other work that is considered remarkable engineering feats. In 1906 to 1909 he was largely employed by the Southern Railway and the South and Western Railway Company in Tennessee.

In 1906, he, together with Charles Silliman and John L. Dillard, engineers on the Norfolk and Western Railway, with whom he had come in contact in his work, formed a corporation, The Sturm and Dillard Company, to engage in railroad contracting in all its phases and Mr. Sturm became its President. In 1909, he with others formed a corporation, The Concrete Materials Company, to produce sand and gravel for street, road, and building construction purposes. He also became President of this organization, which was very successful until its sale to The American Aggregates Corporation.

In 1923, The Sturm and Dillard Company, in fulfillment of a contract with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, built and operated a large plant at Syracuse, Indiana, for the production of ballast for the railroad and commercial aggregates. Later, The Sturm and Dillard Company bought the plant outright. In 1928, The Sturm and Dillard Company received a contract to build a section of the Ches-peake and Hocking Railway, in the vicinity of Circleville, Ohio. Mr. Sturm, foreseeing that the Railway Company would be in need of large quantities of ballast and like material to complete its roadbed, bought a tract of land adjacent to the right of way, rich in sand and gravel deposits from which a large tonnage of material was supplied to the Railway, and later a large modern sand and gravel plant was built, from which shipments of three thousand tons have been made in a day.

In 1929, he had a contract for thirteen miles on the Big Sandy and Cumberland Railway, rebuilding from narrow gage to standard gauge railroad. From 1931 to 1933, he received a contract for the relining of tunnels near Covington, Virginia, on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad.

Mr. Sturm was one of the best known bridge builders in this country. He was known throughout the United States in this connection, his ability placing him among the foremost representatives in the line of his chosen profession.

His friends knew him as a courteous, genial gentleman, and those who served him recognized him as a just employer, and all his business associates esteemed him not only for his ability, but for the straightforward principles which characterized his professional career.

On February 12, 1890, he was married to Nellie O'Connor, daughter of John and Margaret (Dunn) O'Connor of Portsmouth, Ohio.

Lloyd Sturm died August 26, 1932 and is buried in St. Joseph's Cemetery at Columbus, Ohio.

448. JEANNETTE ALICE STURM (5) JOHN (4) JESSE
(3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Jeanette was born June 12, 1868, the daughter of John Fletcher and Harriet (Harrison) Sturm. She was married October 19, 1886 to Lawrence Short, son of Samuel Short. He died October 17, 1889. On March 21, 1894, she was married to Vinton A. Selby, son of Jeremiah James and Caroline (Morlan) Selby. He was born in Sedalia, Missouri, November 8, 1871. At the age of four, his parents brought him to West Virginia when they located on the South Fork of Hughes River near Smithville, Ritchie County, where he grew to manhood.

Receiving his medical training at the Kentucky School of Medicine at Louisville, Dr. Selby was graduated from that institution June 23, 1893, at the age of twenty-two as a doctor of medicine. He then began and continued the practice of his profession until his death.

The degree of doctor of health was conferred upon him after he took a special course in public health work at the University of Georgia in 1923, and his work along this line especially after he had become county health officer in January, 1924, was of such progressive character as to arrest nation-wide attention, as shown by testimonials received by him from eminent health authorities.

At the beginning of the World War, Dr. Selby immediately applied for a commission and passed the examination, but was detailed to public health service in Washington, D. C., and did not get into active service before the armistice was signed.

Immediately after being retired from his duties in Washington at the end of the war, Dr. Selby’s health became poor and he spent a year on a ranch near Victoria, Texas. From there he was sent by the Southern Pacific Railroad to its town of Empaline, Mexico, four hundred miles below the border, where for four months he had charge of the railroad hospital. His health returning, Dr. Selby came back to West Virginia and located at Salem, where he engaged in general practice.

Dr. Selby was a member of the Harrison County Medical Society, the West Virginia State Medical Association and the American Public Health Association, and was affiliated with the Knights of Pythias Order.

Dr. and Mrs. Selby removed to West Milford, West Virginia, and later to Clarksburg, West Virginia. Dr. Selby died at his farm home, near Sharpsburg, Ohio, February 12, 1932. Mrs. Selby died March 4, 1936 at New Martinsville, West Virginia.

John was born at Enterprise, West Virginia, February 14, 1871, the son of John Fletcher and Harriet (Harrison) Sturm. He was elected County Commissioner in 1912. He took office January 2, 1913, served five years and resigned December 31, 1917. He was appointed Deputy Assessor in 1922 and served until 1928. Then he was appointed Internal Revenue Collector in 1929, his term expiring in 1933.

At Shinnston, West Virginia, on December 25, 1894, he was married to Lela Tetrick, daughter of Ozias and Nancy (Davis) Tetrick. She was born in Enterprise, July 9, 1876. They have four children, and reside in Shinnston, W. Va.

Children of John J. and Lela (Tetrick) Sturm:

Perry Clyde was the youngest son of John Fletcher and Harriet (Harrison) Sturm, and was born January 13, 1876. He was married December 29, 1899 to Mary L. Morgan, daughter of T. Fleming and Betsie (Davis) Morgan. She was born December 21, 1977.

For twenty-five years, “Spark”, as he was known, operated a dairy on the Bridgeport road, near Clarksburg, West Virginia. An outstanding Republican, he was elected a member of the Harrison County court, assuming office January 1, 1921, and serving a six-year term. He was president of the court his last two years in office. During his period in office, he maintained a home on Buckhannon Avenue, Goff Plaza, as well as the residence on the Bridgeport road. The last few months before his death, he had been serving as a farm land appraiser for the federal government.

He was a member of Late Lodge, No. 63, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Bridgeport. He was an ardent sports fan and attended nearly every Bridgeport High School game, as well as other outstanding sport events in Clarksburg.
P. C. Sturm died June 1, 1934 at his home on the Bridgeport road. He is buried in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery in Enterprise, West Virginia.

The following is an editorial from the Telegram of Clarksburg, West Virginia, written at the time of his death:

"There were few persons in Harrison County so widely known and so well liked as P. C. "Spark" Sturm, farmer, dairyman and former president of the Harrison County Court, who died yesterday at his farm-home on the Bridgeport road.

"A lifelong resident of Harrison County, Mr. Sturm was a member of one of the earliest families that settled in this section. Like most of his progenitors, he devoted the greater part of his life to farming, dairying and livestock raising, and took great pride in his vocations.

"'Spark' Sturm was the kind of person who knew everyone from the humblest to the highest, as life's standards are measured, and he always spoke to everybody and was friendly and kindly. His excellent knowledge of the county and its citizens made him a most efficient member of the county court.

"Mr. Sturm was an enthusiastic sports fan. Especially did he offer assistance and encourage youths in athletic pursuits in local schools. Fortunately, and unlike many others, who have reached the late fifties, he never permitted himself to lose sight of youth's viewpoints and perspectives.

"In civic and community affairs, and in athletics, 'Spark' Sturm served his community loyally and faithfully throughout a most active life. His passing is mourned by all who knew him, especially by members of the Telegram's editorial staff, who will always remember his many acts of kindness as a private citizen and his courteous treatment while he served in public office for so many years."

454. WILLIAM WALLACE HESS (5) MARY (4) JESSE (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

See No. 336 for sketch and names of children.
Born September 9, 1871, at Wyatt, West Virginia, James Noah Hess was the son of Jeremiah and Mary (Sturm) Hess. He was married October 20, 1895 at Little Bingamon, Marion County, West Virginia, to Lenna Leota Hess. She was born October 20, 1874 in Marion County, the daughter of Jeremiah F. and Minerva Jane (Cunningham) Hess.

Perhaps no other citizen of the county was more widely known than “Jim” Hess, as he was familiarly known to all. Active all of his life, or since he reached his majority, in many business enterprises, fraternal and civic organizations, he formed a much larger acquaintance than the average person, due to these connections and affiliations and also because of his honesty, his kind, gentle and unassuming disposition.

When twenty-five years of age, or in 1896, Mr. Hess became a deputy clerk in the office of the Harrison County Court. He served in this position until 1902. November 30, 1903, the organization of the Empire National Bank was perfected and Mr. Hess was made an assistant cashier of the institution, which place he held constantly until his death, January 10, 1924.

Mr. Hess’s banking position was only one of several places of trust and honor he held during his career. For fifteen years he held the position of secretary of the West Virginia Fair Association, of Clarksburg, and prior to this he was secretary of the West Virginia Central Agricultural and Mechanical Society, commonly called the “Old Fair,” which was then held on the site of what is now Highland Park. Mr. Hess was also a director in the Clarksburg Building and Loan Association.

No other citizen in Clarksburg took a greater interest in the schools than Mr. Hess and for many years he worked untiringly as secretary of the Board of Education in the Clarksburg school district which position he held when he died.

In the fraternal life of the city, Mr. Hess was one of the most active members of the Masonic bodies. At the time of his death he was treasurer of Hermon Lodge No. 6, of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Clarksburg, which position he held for a number of years. He also was secretary of the lodge from 1906 to 1913.

Mr. Hess was a thirty-second degree Mason and was a member of the Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Nemesis Temple, Parkersburg; of the Scottish Rite Bodies, of Wheeling; of Adoniram chapter No. 11, Royal Arch Masons; and of Clarksburg Commandery No. 13 of the Knights Templar, of which he was a past commander.

A member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Clarksburg, he took a leading part in the religious activities of that city.

Margaret, daughter of Lloyd Elmer and Nellie (O'Connor) Sturm, was born July 4, 1892 at Waverly, Ohio. She was educated in the public schools of Waverly and in the private schools of Columbus, Ohio, where she went with her family to live in 1905. She attended Ohio State University for one year and then spent three years in a private school in Philadelphia. During 1917 and 1918, Margaret taught school at Irving College in Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania. During the World War she held a position at the National Headquarters of the War Camp Community Service in New York City. For the following three years, she was employed in the Business Manager's Office and also the Librarian's Office at the Ohio State University in Columbus.

931. HARRIET VIRGINIA STURM (6) LLOYD (5) JOHN (4) JESSE (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Harriet, daughter of Lloyd Elmer and Nellie (O'Connor) Sturm, was born in Waverly, Ohio, October 31, 1893. She received her education in the public schools of Waverly, Ohio, and in the private schools of Columbus, Ohio. She attended Ohio State University for one year, and for the next three years continued her studies in a private school in Philadelphia. She was married July 15, 1919 to Walter Lindsey Avery, son of Frank E. and Jessie (Williams) Avery. They reside in Maplewood, New Jersey.

Walter Avery was born in Columbus, Ohio, December 19, 1892. His father took an early interest in his business training. At the time of his graduation from high school, where he was president of his senior class, he had already been active for four years in the automobile business, with F. E. Avery & Son, Central Ohio distributors for Packard Motor Cars and Trucks.

After two years of engineering training at Ohio State University where he was a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity, he took active charge of the automobile business for three years. Later, upon graduating from Harvard University in 1917 he joined the Signal Corps, Aviation Section, as a cadet, starting training in June 1917 at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and being given command of his group of thirty cadets. He was selected as one of four cadets of this group of thirty, for immediate flying training in France, because of best physical and mental record during the course.

He sailed for France, September, 1917, and spent five months in flying schools, taking his elementary flying at Tours, France, his aerobatic at Issoudun and aerial gunnery at Cazeaux. He received his First Lieutenant's commission. and in March, 1918, because of his ability to speak French, skill in the air and executive ability, was given command of French chasse escadrille Nieuport No. 471, made up of American pilots and assigned to the air defense of Paris. For distinguished service at the front with this squadron, Walter received the Croix de Guerre with star, and when the Commanding Officer, Le Comte de Gramont, was shot down in flames, Lieutenant Avery had the rather unusual distinction of being given command of this French squadron.

He put in a request for transfer from Paris sector to a more active air sector. He was transferred July, 1918 to the American Army, to the then newly formed and now famous First Pursuit Group, 95th Aero Squadron. Piloting his flying machine guns, he had three months of almost daily fighting in the air, against German planes at Chateau Thierry, Fismes, the Vesle River and the Argonne Forest, and against German infantry and transport columns at St. Mihiel. He received official confirmation of shooting down three Germans; one at Chateau Thierry, one at Fismes, and one in the Argonne Forest.

At Chateau Thierry in single combat behind the American lines, he shot down the famous German ace, Captain Menkhoff, credited by both French and British Air Service with forty-two victories. He received the United States Distinguished Service Cross and the French Croix de Guerre with palm because he had engaged Menkhoff, altho his own plane was badly damaged in another fight a few minutes previous.

Shortly before the Armistice, Avery was shot down behind the German line, north of Verdun, in single combat with five German planes and spent the last month of the war in a German prison camp with a broken jaw. After the Armistice, he was returned to France, December, 1918, where he spent one month in the United States hospital at Allerey. He sailed for New York on the S. S. Leviathan, February, 1919 and was discharged at Camp Sherman, March, 1919.

After his marriage in 1919, Avery returned to France for a four-year period, serving as Office Manager of the Standard Oil Company's large organization in Paris. Upon returning to the United States in 1923, he held the position of Office Manager at the head office of the Pure Oil Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a year. Then for three years he was Secretary and Treasurer of the Central Ohio Distributor for Oakland-Pontiac automobiles, continuing his flying with the Army Air Corps Reserve.

He has held positions as Airways Superintendent for the Aeronautics Branch of the United States Department of Commerce; as General Operations Supervisor with the Curtis Flying Service; as Manager of the Curtis-Wright Airport located at Caldwell, New Jersey; as General Manager of the Curtis-Wright Airport at Valley Stream, Long Island, and at Roosevelt Field, Garden City, Long Island. Later, he became associated with Transcontinental-Western Air, Inc., being located for a time at Newark, New Jersey, then was assistant to the Vice-President of the same company in their main offices in Kansas City, Missouri, later becoming superintendent of passenger service. At the present time he is superintendent of passenger service with Eastern Air Lines, located at Newark, New Jersey.

He was educated in the public schools at West Milford, West Virginia and was graduated from the West Milford High School in 1918. He attended West Virginia Wesleyan College where he was a member of the Student Army Training Corps of the United States Army in 1918, and was mustered out of service in January, 1919. In 1922, he took a course in pharmacy at the Max Morris School of Pharmacy in Macon, Georgia, and was registered to practice pharmacy in the State of Georgia by the Georgia State Board of Pharmacy in December, 1922, and was admitted to practice pharmacy in West Virginia by the West Virginia Board of Pharmacy in April, 1923. He was employed in drug stores in and about Clarksburg, West Virginia, until 1926.

He then went with the Viking Distributing Company of Charleston, West Virginia as a sales representative selling oil and gasoline products in central West Virginia. Following this for about a year, he entered the garage business for himself. In 1929, he accepted the position of manager of the store operated by Harrison and White Drug Company of Clarksburg. From 1928 until the time of his death, he was employed by his brother, Charles V. Selby, druggist, of Clarksburg.

Robert was married May 17, 1923 to Willa Kyle, daughter of Jasper S. Kyle. She was born April 17, 1895. They had no children. Robert died May 25, 1936.

Charles, son of Vinton A. and Jeannette (Sturm) Selby, was born September 21, 1903, in Fairmont, West Virginia, He was educated in the public schools of West Milford, West Virginia and was graduated from Salem High School at Salem, West Virginia, in 1922. He was graduated from the Louisville College of Pharmacy, Louisville, Kentucky, in 1925 with the degree of Ph. G.; was registered to practice pharmacy in West Virginia by West Virginia State Board of Pharmacy in June, 1925. For five months he was engaged chiefly as a relief pharmacist working various parts of West Virginia and Kentucky. He then entered the employ of Eli Lilly and Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, as pharmaceutical salesman and located at Zanesville, Ohio. In a few months, he was transferred to Cleveland, Ohio, as city salesman with the same company, remaining with them for two years, when he resigned from their employ. For a short time he accepted a position as city salesman for Sharp and Dohme of Baltimore, being located in Cleveland. He then returned to Clarksburg, West Virginia and entered the employ of Wells-Haymaker Company, retail druggists of that city. At the end of six months he accepted the position of manager of one of the drug stores operated by the Harrison and White Drug Company of Clarksburg. 973. VICTOR HOWELL HESS (6) JAMES (5) MARY (4) JESSE (3) JACOB (2) JACOB (1)

Victor was born at Wyatt, West Virginia, July 26, 1896, the son of James Noah and Leuna (Hess) Hess.

He volunteered and entered the service in the First West Virginia National Guard, Machine Gun Company, on June 11, 1917, at the age of twenty years. He enlisted at Camp Cornwell at Fairmont, West Virginia. Glenn F. Williams of Clarksburg, West Virginia, was Captain of the Machine Gun Company and Robert Lynn Osborn, also of Clarksburg, was Colonel of the regiment.

He left Camp Cornwell on September 2, 1917, for Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Mississippi; was transferred from First West Virginia National Guard Machine Gun Company to Co. "D", 137th Machine Gun Battalion of the regular army; was promoted from private to the position of assistant to supply sergeant with rank of Corporal on November 6, 1917; was transferred to Company "D", 139th Machine Gun Battalion, and about May 1, 1918 was ordered to Camp Hancock, Augusta, Georgia. On June 13, 1918, he was promoted to sergeant of Training Camp No. 15, Main Training Depot, Machine Gun Training Center and was made instructor in

1. Machine Gunnery
2. Infantry Drill
3. Liaison Signalling
4. Gas and Flame Defense
5. Physical Training and Bayonet Drill

Lieutenant Hess entered the Officers' Training School at Camp Hancock, was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry, United States Reserve Corps on December 10, 1918, having been in the service exactly eighteen months.

It was Lieutenant Hess's most ardent desire to be sent to the battle front, and he even offered to sacrifice his rank for that of private in order to have overseas service, but his request for more active service was not allowed on the ground of his special abilities as an instructor, it being pointed out by the officers concerned that, while men were needed on the fighting line, it was equally important that well-equipped men should render patriotic aid back home by giving their efforts and their abilities to training and properly preparing those who were going to the front. Should those in training not be sufficiently prepared before crossing the ocean for active service much would be lost, it was pointed out. While it was a matter of regret with Lieutenant Hess that he was unable to go to the fighting front, he served his part to the best of his ability with a full sense of duty given as the circumstances of his case decreed.

Victor Howell Hess after his discharge from the army was employed in the State Road Commission headquarters at Charleston, West Virginia.
