Every man," says Ralph Waldo Emerson. "is a bundle of his ancestors."

"Genealogy fosters the love of Americans for America, and strengthens the bond of brotherhood between those whose common heritage is our land and our laws."

Whether that small portion of the human race to which we belong had its descent through the First or the Thirty-third Families of Virginia, or the Pilgrim Fathers, or sprang full-panoplied but less gifted from the brain of Jove, is of little interest to the world in its furious rush to the shrine of Mammon, and we are willing that it shall so remain. In the rapid whirl of the age, these questions are not practical. But, nevertheless, in each family of civilized nations there exists a natural curiosity to trace out the various branches. To this unexceptionable end we dedicate a few leisure hours, out of multitudinous responsibilities and business cares, hoping that the fruits of varied research may prove interesting to those whom the ties of nature and of marriage have brought into one relationship with us.

FAMILY HERALDRY.

In Fairbairn's Crests of the Families of Great Britain and Ireland, in which Kingdom the Gibbens, Buckners and Butchers had their ancestry, are found several heraldic insignia, which, as curios, are worth preserving and presenting in this volume.

The English and Irish branches of the paternal name, in their union, seem to have used, as fancy or local reasons dictated, one and another of several crests.

The one adopted by our ancestry, as used by branches spelling the name Gibbens—Gibbins—Gibbines—is here printed:

The attire of a stag, on ducal coronet, of silver and gold, with the motto, "Per ardua ad astra;" interpreted, "By means of high deeds, to the stars."

The others used are:
- Gibbens—Gibbins—Gibbons—English:
  "A fish in hand."
- Gibbons—English:
  A demi-lion, rampant, holding an escallop of silver.
- Gibbons—Irish:
  A dexter and sinister arm, in armour, embowered, hands supporting a heart, inflamed.
The crests used by maternal ancestors are:
Boucher—Bouchier—of London:
   An owl.  Motto:
   Non vi sed voluntate.—Not by force, but by good will.
Butcher—Boocher:
   An oak-slip acorned.
Boucher, of Salisbury, Wilts:
   A greyhound, sitting, of silver, with collar of gold.
Beach, or Beecher, of Kent and Bed.:
   A demi-lion, of silver, out of a coronet of gold.

The crests used by Buckners, and also by Jackson and Birch families, while it was not pretty, was characteristic of energy and vitality:
   A fleur-de-lis, gu, with adder entwined, head issuing from the center leaf.
TRANS-ATLANTIC.

From Hayden's Virginia Genealogies, and other sources, is obtained the following:

William Gibbons, an English gentleman, after the middle of the seventeenth century, was born and resided in Wiltshire.

His daughter, Sarah, 20 May 1717, married Alexander, son of Rev. John Scott, M. A., Dapple Parish, Scotland. He came to Virginia to escape political troubles in Scotia.

One of William Gibbons' sons, born 6 March 1710, fell heir to the estate in England and in Virginia in 1717.

Harriet, daughter of William Gibbons, married Horatio Dade. He served under his kinsman, the "Pretender," and fled Scotland, but subsequently returned to Britain and received Holy Orders.

Sir John, another son of William Gibbons, was long a member of Parliament for Middle Essex.
Judge William Ashton Gibbons, was born in Stafford county, Virginia in 1782, and died 16 November 1829. He married Elizabeth Westwood James, of Dumfries, Va., and was Chancellor of the Richmond District Court in May, 1813, and member of the State Senate in 1816, and also of the Constitutional Convention in 1829.

William Gibbons, born in Georgia, represented that State in the Continental Congress from 1784 to 1786.

James Gibbens was, from 1825 to 1828, Superintendent of the U. S. Marine Hospital at Richmond.

J. Gibbons was Private of Musicians at Fort Sumter in 1863.

Thomas Gibbons was a citizen of Georgia, and in 1801 was appointed Judge of the U. S. Court for the District of Georgia.

Thomas Gibbins was a seaman in the Virginia State Navy, and in the officers' report declared "entitled to bounty card for three years' services during the Revolutionary War."

Cornelius Vanderbilt, the First, sold his line of coast vessels, and hired himself out to Thomas Gibbons, at $1000 a year, as captain of the Little Raritan steamer, and thus learned steamboating, and earned the title of Commodore.

William, a son of Thomas Gibbons, succeeded to the ownership of the line of steamers, one of which was commanded by Vanderbilt. He resided at Madison, New Jersey, a lovely retreat which is called "The Forest." He was courtly, and became almost as wealthy as Captain Vanderbilt, whom his father had so assisted.

In 1813 Major James Gibbon was a member and on the Standing or Executive Committee of the Order of Cincinnati; and was selected to take action upon the death of General James Wood, whose name gave title to our county and who died 16 June of that year.
As far back as information extends relative to this patronymic in America, there have been usually only two males born in the one generation, both short-lived. The ancestral tree had its roots over in the Fatherland, where, under different orthography, the name may be recognized if not the lineage traced. In the way that the curious derive a meaning for all proper names, it is claimed that Gib means a follower of, and Ben leadership, and hence Gibbens, a follower of chieftain Ben, Bon, or Bin. It is not difficult to conclude that as the branches dwelt in Ireland the name took the spelling Givens, and Gibbins, and in England Gibbon, Gibbons and Gibbens, a variation which even now is known to exist upon the family records of brothers and sisters.

It cannot be said that the stock, as it exists on American soil, came over in the Mayflower, nor among those who landed at royal Jamestown, nor in the Spanish Colonies, to the South, nor from the sunny clime of imperial France, but nevertheless the family reached this Continent from Trans-Atlantic soil. The first trace our limited research discovers is the arrival of two brothers of Irish descent. One, Benjamin, had wedded an English lady of the Dent family, and located, before the close of the Indian wars, upon the South Branch of the Potomac river, in Hardy county, Virginia, and there were born of this union two sons, James and John. How many, if any other children, is not known.

The widow of Benjamin Gibbens, in after years, wedded Benjamin Riggs, by whom were born several children. This name was quite prominent in the pioneer era of Wood county, in social and professional circles. Several members of this family had moved west across the Alleghanies, and settled also on the Little Kanawha river. To Benjamin Riggs and the widow of Gibbens were born four children, Elizabeth, Townsley, Sarah and Thomas. The mother, Gibbens-Riggs, and Sarah, died and were buried near the Pribble settlement, on the opposite and west side of the stream; the others, it is traditionally stated, emigrated to or near Vincennes, Indiana.

The name of the father of Benjamin Gibbens is conjectured to be either Thomas or William.

As a mere item of curiosity and fact, it may be stated that in a file of old Virginia papers, Thomas and Andrew Nicholson, acting executors, 6 December 1802, advertise 10,000 acres of land in Fayette county, Kentucky, located and for sale on the North Branch of Sandy river. This land, the notice continues, was surveyed in 1785, and patented to James Gibbon, assignee of David Clayton and William Neberland in August of the same year.

The records of Harrison county, of which territory the present area of Wood county formed part, show a deed, dated 21 December 1796, by James Warner, of Delaware, to James Gibbons, of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, consideration $3,400—then a large sum—for four tracts of land, aggregating 3,400 acres, situated on the West Fork of Rush Run and Middle Fork of Monongalia and Buckhannon rivers. The latter part of this early document names the purchaser distinctly as John Gibbons. This gives opportunity to infer that the two brothers, John and James, were then passing across the wilderness of the West, and that eventually one went to Kentucky, then a county of Virginia, and the other, our grand-parent, found a home nearer the Ohio, on the shores of the Little Kanawha river.

Of the two known sons of Benjamin Gibbons, family tradition states that James, the elder, settled in Bourbon county, then attractively pronounced and spelled "Kane-tuck," where the descendants, highly honored, spell the name Gibbons.

The other son, John, married, about the year 1795, Katherine Herbert, or, as she in after years continued to letter it, Herboh, Herbaugh, and Herrabaugh. She was of German descent, and doubtless by nativity a Marylander. She was born 20 June 1782, and died 19 April 1875, nearly 93 years in age. In Hardy county, near the foot of its lofty peaks, in the dense forests, was destroyed by fire their home and all household goods, including records and papers. A similar calamity fell upon many of the pioneers who, enamoured of the rich soil, and pure air, and ample space for free homes, with nature's game preserves, ventured into the hunting grounds of the Indians west of the Alleghanies.

Soon after, John Gibbens moved west to Wheeling, where two children, a son and a daughter, were born. Thence, about the year 1800, they migrated to the Little Kanawha river, near the mouth of Stillwell creek. He tilled the forests, tilled the soil, hunted game for the table, and raised his growing family; and in August, 1807, died and was buried in Prible's graveyard, twelve miles above the mouth of the river. Out of the grave grew, years after, a stately tree, which only recently was cut down and borne away. Such forest monument was one common to many a brave pioneer, who ventured into the wilderness away from ancestral comforts, conveniences and civilization: This paper memorial will be more durable and legible than marble shaft would have been. John Gibbens is said to have been a man of fine presence and physique, energetic, fearless, but retiring in disposition and gentle in voice and manner—a fair specimen of English-Virginia manhood. He left to the widow six children and a seventh to be born within three months of his demise.

Left alone, in a sparsely settled country, with a helpless family and limited means, Catharine Gibbens struggled bravely with the vicissitudes of fortune, the perils and deprivations of the frontier, and endeavored to support her children and educate them, amid limited opportunities, to an honorable manhood and useful womanhood.

Their children were:

1. Sarah .......................... Born 9 October 1797,
   Wedded Amos Barnett.

2. James .......................... Born 2 February 1799, Wedded Gehannah Kettle.

3. Rachel .......................... Born 22 January 1801, Wedded Frances Champlain.

4. Jefferson .......................... Born 2 October 1802, Wedded Hannah Butcher.

5. Elizabeth .......................... Born 26 March 1804, Wedded John Hannaman.

6. Nancy Dent .......................... Born 12 November 1805, Wedded Abraham Enoch.

7. Louisa .......................... Born 8 November 1807,
   Who died single.

In the course of three years, in January 1809, after her husband's death, Katherine Gibbens wedded Anthony Buckner, of historic family, a widower much older than herself, and by whom were born eight children. Their names are given in the sketch of the Buckner family.
Jefferson Gibbens.

Presiding Justice of Wood Co.
JEFFERSON GIBBENS,

When scarcely six years of age, saw his father's remains borne across the threshold of their pioneer cabin toward its last resting place in a neighboring burial ground. To his children in after years he spoke of the sad scene, and the impression left upon his young mind by the heart-felt sorrow and lonely air with which the loss invested his mother and her household of infant and helpless children none of whom were old enough or strong enough for years to aid her much in the after struggle for support or their education.

He was born October 2d, 1802, in the primitive log house of their Stillwell creek home, which, like an opening in the blue sky, peeped from the clearing in a vast wilderness around. Neighbors were miles away in either direction.

In a memorandum among his papers was found, after his death, a brief biography, from which we quote a few paragraphs.

"The first rays of the light of this world shone upon my countenance at the mouth of Stillwell creek, on the Kanawha river. The scenes, views and occurrences of that day, and many days and months that followed, passed from my mind as quickly as seen and heard. The earliest appearance of the beauties of this world and the events transpiring that became indelibly impressed on my memory, I suppose to be about three years thereafter, on a small farm at the mouth of Riley's run, which empties into Walker's creek three-fourths of a mile from its mouth where it empties into the Kanawha river. There on the Southern slope lay a small piece of meadow, reaching from half way of the cultivated ground to the creek. Adjoining and above was a piece of ground, about the same size or larger, in corn. About knee high above these two areas of ground were about two rods square of shade trees, the tops of which, though not high, were thickly clothed with leaves, so much so as to exclude the rays of the sun from the ground. Adjoining this shade was a flax patch containing about a half acre of ground. At the upper part of this Southern-sloped little farm, close under the hill, was our dwelling house. My father and mother went down to pull flax—a needed product in those days of home-made and home-spun clothing. They took me and placed me on the ground near the foliage of those shade trees, stepped off two or three rods and were soon engaged intently in pulling the fibered weed. I remember now, after a lapse of fifty-seven years, the scenery surrounding me, the emotions of mind and my childlike desires and fears at visible objects. It seemed I had just come into life. I looked around me in the shade. There were wild flowers of various colors and shapings. Below was the meadow, not of all fine timothy, but mingled with weeds and flowers of every hue, next the corn, green and beautiful to my sight. Then my eyes would rest upon the growing flax, where my father and mother were pulling it, as I thought, for the flowers alone. Many of the flax and cockle stalks were yet green and in full bloom. The flax was frequently put in motion by a light breeze of air. The meadows, grass and corn were likewise in motion. They seemed to my infantile orbs of vision like three different lakes, the waves producing many colors. I being placed on higher ground could view them all at the same time. Becoming weary of the beauties that had somewhat taxed my mind so heavily, I had almost fallen asleep, when another strange object aroused me to my feet. I discovered a copper-snake crawling toward me. As it came near, I thought it was a handsome thing, and reached out to take hold of it. It coiled up, and I hesitated and shrank from my first desire. It struck at me, biting me on the instep of one of my feet. Not then hurting me much, I watched to take hold of it again. It then ran off a short distance, took a bite of some peculiar weed, and then threw itself into a coil and struck me a second time. I then became sick, or afraid, and rolled down from the snake and cried aloud. My parents soon came to me and took me home; and my fields of Paradise had now vanished.

"I was soon held over a fire, with the withering and trembling snake on the hot coals of wood, with bruised garlic and gun-powder bound to the wound. In this situation I fell asleep, and when I awoke I was but little injured by the copper-head.

"My father soon moved higher up the Kanawha river on Lee creek, more than a mile from its present mouth, which is on the opposite side of the river from Newark.

"Here he lived until the year 1807, when he was taken sick with the yellow fever—prevalent in wilderness days—and died, leaving my mother with six small children to care for, support, clothe and educate. The country being thinly settled, added much to her loneliness and affliction. A few years after, my mother married again, and Col. Anthony Buckner, a widower, became my step-father, and shortly after this event we were moved down to where Claysville now stands. Then there was nothing more of the settlement than a grist mill and one dwelling of logs. My stepfather soon after this purchased a piece of farming land in woods, four miles above, directly on the Kanawha banks, and built thereon a new house and moved into it in the fall of the year. The next spring I began to go to school."

How diligently he "improved each shining hour" of limited educational opportunity, may be seen by the following certificate:

"This may certify, to all to whom it may concern, that I consider Jefferson Gibbens, a member of my school, duly qualified to instruct in the various branches of an English education, and that he sustains a character unimpeachable for morality, probity and integrity.

"Wood County, Va., August 23, 1819. Caleb Hammond."
The step-father was a slave owner, austere in manner, and no one, white or black, upon the plantation, was exempt from severe labor. In the farmer's leisure season, late fall, deep winter and early spring, young Jefferson Gibbens grasped every opportunity for school and study. He became an expert penman in the round Washingtonian style, an excellent arithmetician, and, armed with his late preceptor's voucher of competency, he crossed over the Ohio into the Northwest Territory, then considered the Far West, in the winter of 1820 or 1821, and taught school for three terms in Jackson county, Ohio. With his savings, while thus engaged, he purchased of the U.S. Government, 80 acres of land at one dollar and a quarter per acre, and built a house upon it. Some years after he sold this first acquisition of property to Thompson Leach, one of the pioneer emigrants to Virginia. 'Ere the death of his stepfather, and on urgent solicitation of his mother, he abandoned teaching, and returning to the old home estate, took his place in farm work and supervision till he was 27 years of age, when, April 30th, 1838, he married Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Susan (Peadro) Butcher, who was born in Randolph county, Virginia, January 13, 1813, and who died in Parkersburg, August 21, 1872. She was of English descent, a Scotch Presbyterian in her religious faith, and after her removal to the village at the mouth of the Kanawha, their home thenceforward was ever open to Christian workers of all denominations.

He was in height six feet, weight 156 pounds, muscular and active, hair black, eyes gray and unusually piercing, complexion light, changing in after years to a more florid tint, quiet and unassuming in manners, firm in convictions of duty, unswerving in integrity, and open and generous in all his ways.

She was five feet tall, weighed when wedded about 100 pounds, which increased in subsequent life to an average of 111, eyes blue, complexion fair and peachy, and as a bride in the coveted height of that era's fashion, wore curls, which gave her quite a girlish appearance, as she stepped forth in a number two shoe.

The morning after the wedding—which was a banquet and "frolic" for the entire large acquaintance within the ten miles square of the neighborhood—the groom went, in charge of his cargo, a large flat-boat of staves, the best legal-tender of the times, down the Kanawha, out into the Ohio river, and down its current to the port of Cincinnati. Upon sale of boat and contents, he returned to greet his bride, in the hospitable home of her parents, where she waited his presence, with anxious but happy heart.

They were not long in determining their course of action. Selecting one of the large canoes—or poplar dug-outs from the ferry, they with all their household goods, one feather bed each from the parents, sundry articles of clothing and marital equipments, one ham of bacon, a sack of meal and some fruits from the orchard, launched out into the stream, he paddling and she steering the unique barque on the bridal trip to the town of Newport, or Parkersburg. It was a primitive but proud voyage. It was an age not very remote from the Indian days, when canoes and perogues were common and almost the only means of conveyance. Upon landing, they went into a house which every one believed haunted. Strange noises, like the ascending and descending of footsteps upon stairways were heard nearly every night in the dense silence of a post-midnight hour. The bride, a rural lass of only eighteen, on being informed of the rumor by neighbors in the vicinity, declared laughingly that she had no fears. Afterwards it was found that rats, in their search for food through the vacant rooms, had caused the haunting sounds, and these were soon expelled from their hunting grounds. The building was a two-story frame, which has long since vanished with the march of City improvements. It stood at the corner of Ann and Kanawha streets, where the present Hotel Buckingham is located, and was first occupied by Thomas Neale as an ordinary. To it upon several occasions the County Court of "Gentlemen Justices" had adjourned its sessions in formative times. Here in later years widow Dexter had an Inn and Bakery, and the Swann House succeeded it in more modern era. The Gibbens pair at once set their new home in order, added to their limited furnishings needed articles, and swung out their shingle of "Entertainment for Man and Beast," at the corner of the house in its second story, to be seen from the river bank and the land approaches. Industry, an accommodating spirit, and economy, brought prosperity. With their accumulations were in time, added a bakery, a supply of cordials, and cider and spruce-beer, and candy, and a variety of general merchandise. And often did mother and father, on closing their store department at night, sit down, before retiring, in front of the huge log-heap fire, and count over the day's receipts in "bits and fips," the coin of the realm, and agree upon methods of the best appropriation of the funds in hand. No visions of balls, banquets, theaters and luxurious living flitted into their fancy, but every dollar earned was to be expended to bring its profit in return. In the oft-repeated words of theirs in after years, they were as "happy in their little nest as birds of air in joyous spring." Each assisted in mercantile attendance upon the public. He was tall, agile, and straight as an arrow, and she petite and light-footed as a fawn; and as she flitted in and out around the counter, with curled tresses and bright eyes, some one would ask, "little girl, where's your father?"

They were both fond of vocal music, and graced with melodious voices, kept their home resonant with song, from the note books of the day. As a child, in long-subsequent years, when in other homes, have we in memory at the dawn of day and even before in the mellow candle-light, as if in our up-stairs bed, heard the voice of father down stairs, where he had gone earlier still to make the fires and put the tea-kettle on in readiness for mother's using, with clear emotional voice singing one of the old stirring hymns or songs. Happy days! Happy years! Primitive blisses! To day, even with its myriad conveniences, of electric lights and cars, natural gas, city-water works, and other possessions, offers no joys comparable to those innocent years, entombed in a vanished past. Are we old, antiquated? Perhaps.

Frugality, energy, fair dealing brought prosperity. Their surplus beyond current expenses and trade needs was invested in lots and then buildings. Father loved the construction of houses, and as far as his means afforded was public spirited and spent his accumulations in improvements in the town of his choice. As he built new and better houses, he moved consecutively into each. The old two-story annex to the present Buckingham, which lies nearest the Ohio and faces toward Blennerhassett Isle, was his first building and among the earliest ones of brick material in that portion of the village of "The Point." Originally it had deep porches at rear in each of the stories. A few years after he built a large two-story frame dwelling farther up the Ohio on the same lot. It had a large grassy lawn in front, faced the broad river, had locust trees here and there in the surrounding spaces, and between this homestead property and the river bank, was stretched the Ohio River Road, which was among the first roads of the county and extended from the point along the river, over Pond Run, and miles up the paw-paw-bushed shore to opposite the mouth of the Muskingum. Still beyond this road was the extended bank, with huge forest trees and thickets to the edge of the already crumbling shores of the stream.

Subsequently he erected on the Ann street front of this lot a two-story brick residence and store house, and occupied it for long years. This building still stands, and improved with a mansard roof and shaded by the elevated work and track of a railroad, is the property of his son Gordon Butcher Gibbens. One side of this structure, ere new transportation powers planted feet upon its sunlit windows, was a general store, and in the dwelling portion beside it began the writer's first days of mercantile effort and education at the age of thirteen. Many years later, about the year 1854, he erected, upon the square above, which entire lot, from Neal or Second up Ann to Court or Third streets, and bounded by the Ohio road and river, on the other side, he had originally purchased of Robinson, the Parker heir, for one hundred dollars, a two-story and basement brick dwelling, which is now owned by his son-in-law, Frank Rex, who wedded the only daughter Leonora. Here, in this mansion, with its broad porches facing, and till railroad-track occupancy between, overlooking the grand Ohio, and the vista of islands above and below, and the Belle Pre on the north-western shore, the parents lived and both died.

With an education above the average, an endowment of practical common sense, and a growing reputation for strict integrity, he was first, in February 1831, made Constable, an important trust in village affairs, which in 1832 he resigned. Years after he accepted the position of a Magistrate, serving almost a generation in that capacity. Neither private documents nor the city records, as preserved, enable us to state when he first became an official of the town, for there are no minutes of Council extant earlier than 27 May 1844. But return of poll sheets yet on file show that at the election, 27 May 1837, there were chosen seven Trustees for the Town of Parkersburg, one of whom was Jefferson Gibbens.

From that date, during life as often as he would accept the trust, he was kept in the Council, either as member, its Judicial officer, street commissioner, or Mayor. He was Trustee and recorder in 1844–5–6 and in 1851, but resigned, as he had at the same time the office under commission of Governor, of a Justice of the Peace. In 1859, 60 and 61 he was Trustee and Recorder again. In 1865 he was elected Mayor, and afterwards was added to his duties that of Street Commissioner. Under his administration wharves were extended and paved with stone, and so also were several adjacent streets. In 1866 he would have been again pressed into service as Mayor, but positively declined to serve on account of private business and declining health.
He as a Justice of the Peace by commission and partiality of the Governor of Virginia, when the office paid in honors and sense of duty performed, not in fees, the ultimate reward being High Sherifffalty in proper time, as the oldest living magistrate. His commission dates 13 December, 1842, and his qualification and oath of office January 16, 1843. He served in this important capacity until 1850, when the office was made elective, and he was chosen one of twenty members, and by them Presiding Justice of the County Court of Wood, and served for eight consecutive years, when he declined re-election.

He never asked for an office, because his own business was too profitable to hunt emoluments outside, but always held some post of duty and honor while he was willing to accept and act therein. He filled each public trust fearlessly, conscientiously and impartially. His per diem as Presiding Justice for the year 1855 was only ninety-six (96) dollars.

He was one of the most progressive citizens of his section, aiding in many valuable ways as well as by liberal stock subscriptions to public enterprises, among them the building of the Northwestern Branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad from Grafton to the Ohio river, and of the Marietta and Ohio line from Parkersburg westward.

In politics he was a Whig of the Henry Clay school, but in 1860 voted, among a few resolute ones in the county, for Lincoln and Hamlin, and when the civil war opened its fury in the land, and it was essential to cross with troops on to Southern soil, he was almost the first to meet them at the waters edge, and extend an earnest and assuring welcome. In 1864 he was, upon the unasked recommendation of Governor Boreman, appointed Provost Marshal under Capt. Benj. F. Stone, First District of West Va., under the Enrollment Act.

Brave to do the right, but with little self-assertion or confidence, he often declined proposed nominations for legislative and higher positions.
During the Oil Excitement, and rush of prospectors into Wirt county, he started a branch general store at Burning Springs, and placed his younger sons in charge. Upon one occasion when flat boating from Parkersburg up the Kanawha an assortment of groceries and other goods, he exposed himself to sun and water, by wading in the swift current over one of the riffles and pushing the boat, and thereby received a sun stroke from the effects of which he never entirely recovered.

The later years of his life were those of suffering with fortitude and without murmer, and 21 March 1874 he passed over into the unknown, leaving as the best heritage of his four children, a spotless name, over whose official and social memory hangs not the shadow of suspicion.

At the sudden death of his wife, 21 August 1872, he seemed lost and to have parted with much of his business energy and ambition, for he was a lover of home and its quiet domestic pleasures.

Nothing can here be more appropriate than a brief tribute to the memory of a sainted mother. Hannah Butcher was the daughter of Thomas and Susan (Peadro) Butcher, born in Randolph County, Va., 7 January 1813. Her mother was a Baptist, devout without being repellant. The daughter imbibing religious predilections, after marriage became one of the original members forming the First Presbyterian church, organized in February 1833. She was a magnificent housekeeper, in the old style, loved to make home beautiful and attractive to husband and children and to keep the table supplied with abundance of splendidly cooked food, her own skillful hands assisting and supervising in preserving and fruit canning and the preparation and preservation of dainties for winter use. She was ever active in benevolence, and the auxiliary work of her church. Was President and Secretary, and chief worker in the Ladies Sewing Society of the Presbyterian church. Through the efforts and needle work of these noble women in Israel was the house of worship carpeted, chandeliered, and improved and kept in repair, and through their earnings principally was the Juliann Street Parsonage—now the residence of a citizen—erected and furnished and kept in trim for each pastor. She was patient in suffering, Christian in her social life; devoted as daughter, mother, wife, she sleeps in Jesus.

She filled a place in the household and the community of loving friends not easily attained. Her domestic virtues were clothed with a beauty and tenderness which made them the crowning grace of an admirable life. A firm believer in the doctrines and order of the Presbyterian church, yet ever ready to recognize the spirit of the Savior wherever manifested. Her place in the sanctuary and the prayer-meeting was never vacant so long as physical strength permitted attendance. She was a careful and constant Bible reader. When the Angel of Death presented the sudden summons she was ready. Cheerful in all the duties of life, the smile of Christian hope still lingered upon her face, sweet even in death. Ready to help in every work of Christian benevolence, she has gone to the realms of endless day. With a large circle of admiring friends, yet she was best known and most sincerely and deeply beloved at home, and there was the loss felt most keen by her husband and children. Her trust was in Christ alone for Eternal life. We shall hear her sweet voice no more amid the paths of earthly life, but the echo of her Christian life will long influence those who now miss her presence and her cheerful face.

The following verses from the pen of her oldest son, but expresses the feelings and tender emotions of all her children:

OUR SAINTED MOTHER

Death touched her gently, and she passed beyond
Our presence into realms of light.
Our Christian mother, she our hearts loved well,
Who gave us being, made our childhood bright.

Oh, how our human hearts are dumb with sorrow,
Too deep for tears, or words themselves to tell.
The day is dark, and darker seems the morrow,
And life itself to us a funeral knell.

The flowers of Spring that else would be a pleasure,
The verdant woods, and e'en the warblers lay
Come sadly to our eyes, and ears, and life-paths,
Till earth seems only night without one ray.

She loved us—who will love us now as she,
With tender care, and words sincere and sweet?
I care not when I go to meet her there,
If soon it be to lay me at her feet.

Why should I linger in this earthly vale,
To feel the thorns and worry with each pain?
Oh, angels of the better land, bear me away,
Or bring my mother to my arms again.

Vain prayer! Oh, Heaven forgive this wish of mine.
She dwells in sphere beyond all pain and tears.
My skies are dark; the time cannot be long
Till swift shall pass away allotted years.

I see the gates almost ajar, and angels wait
To open wide for those who wish to come.
Do I not wish with the seraphic throng
To mingle in my mother's heavenly home?

Since childhood's sunny morning I've been out
Upon a sea all tempest-tossed with waves,
While one by one dear forms have passed away,
And left me grieving by earth's silent graves.

Who next shall have the Master's summons
To pass from storms into a crystal sea?
I peer into the night with scarce a star-beam,
And vainly wish it might be me.

I shall not see her in the dear old homestead,
Nor hear her voice with music in its tone.
Youth's dream has vanished. I am old in sorrow:
Upon life's sea I seem to drift alone.

For none can be as true as Mother's love.
No one so tender, half as kind and good.
My life will miss her, as a bird doth miss
Some captured songster from the lonely wood.
The children are:
1.—Leandro; born 23 May 1831; died 29 May 1831, buried in Holliday's grave yard.

2.—Alvaro Franklin; born 1 March 1837, who married first Bessie Eagan, and second Mary Barr Bayley, and who resides in Washington, D. C.

3.—Leonora; born 11 May 1839, who wedded Frank Rex and resides in the homestead in Parkersburg, W. Va.

4.—Gordon Butcher; born 19 February 1842, who married Florence Blair, and resides in the city of his nativity, Parkersburg, West Va.

5.—Adrian N.; born 11 November 1844, who wedded Lizzie Higginbotham, and now resides in Cincinnati, Ohio.

6.—John Thomas; named after both grand parents, born 31 May 1847; died 6 June 1847, and lies buried beside the graves of his mother and father in the old Cook Cemetery, now called Riverview.
ALVARO FRANKLIN GIBBENS.

The oldest living son of Jefferson and Hannah (Butcher) Gibbens bears this Spanish-sounding baptismal name. He was born in Parkersburg, in the two-story frame which, like the palace of Alladin, has vanished save in memory, and once stood facing the broad, sweeping, pawpaw-skirted Ohio, 1 March 1837.

He was not "rocked in the cradle of the deep," but tradition in the family states that, from the whim of a fashionable craze, or circumstances beyond control, in the days when Cabinet shops and furniture stores existed only in distant cities, his first cradle was a sugar trough, brought down Kanawha from the maple camp of the Butcher Bend homestead, and doubtless well lined with snowy, homemade woolen cushions and ruffles to soften its primitive and hard outlines.

Till the age of 13 he attended the select schools of the town. First, that of a Miss Josephine Dexter, then located on Second or Neal street, near the present site of the Ohio River Railroad depot; then under the teaching of Miss Ann Powell, at corner of Littleton or Fifth street, and Ann, where he recollects to have often been sent below the hill toward Pond run for locust switches to discipline himself and others; then to a school kept in the old Baptist edifice near the bridge approach of the Baltimore & Ohio track, and west of Ann street, by Rev. Geo. C. Sedgwick; then to Prof. Jno., C. Nash, in the old Methodist church, which with tall, rotund, brick-plastered pillars, stood on Littleton or Fifth street, south side, between Juliann and Market streets, about where the Sentinel Printing office now stands, and almost opposite the old residence of John A. Hutchinson, Sr. Then early in 1850, he went into his father's dry goods and grocery store till 1854. Whilst he was faithful in every effort, from sweep-boy to clerk, book-keeper, and assisted to make a success of merchandising, and so far met the tastes of patrons, customers and the confidence of his father, as to be sent by stage and rail to Baltimore to buy for the store a stock of dry goods, which satisfied the market, yet he never liked the occupation.

At seventeen years of age he went East, in company with a friend of the family, on this mission, then several days staging from Parkersburg to Fetterman, where the Baltimore & Ohio cars were met, and the trip thence made by rail. While on this trip, after making a purchase of nearly 2000 dollars worth of goods, he visited, with an Elder of his mother's church, who was a delegate, the Synod of Virginia, then holding a session in Alexandria. He also spent several days in Washington, sight-seeing the National Capitol, and watched with curiosity the raising of the huge marble pillars which grace the east front of the Extension of Congressional halls. As one of the reminders of his emotions upon that tour, he still preserves, safe from all but family reading, a copy of a lengthy poem, attempted in narrative, of the journey and its incidents.

Not long after his return home, he was tendered by his father a Collegiate course instead of mercantile responsibilities. His father could easily see from the sons' use of every spare hour, night and day, spent pouring over pen or book that his heart was not behind the pile of goods on shelf or counter. Having no taste for measuring molasses by the pint or calico by the yard, he accepted the scholarship certificate, and studied one year under Rev. Jacob Winters in preparation for College. In September 1855 he went to Jefferson College, at Canonsburg, Penn., and entered the Freshman Class, and graduated therefrom in 1860. He was member and Archon or President a term, of the Philo Literary Society, delivering on graduation day, the Valedictory in behalf of the Class, before a packed audience in Providence Hall. In the Senior year he studied French, as an extra, with Preceptor Ewing, and studied and recited with the class in Law to President Alden, and years afterwards, when in clerical position, continued his legal readings, but never was examined for practice at the bar. By desire of his father, after graduation in 1860, he made a tour of nearly a year through Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and down Ohio and Mississippi rivers to Memphis, Tenn., reaching the latter place in December 1860. Here he was about to accept a chair as Professor in a Southern school, but the cloud of war grew suddenly threatening, schools failed to re-open, and a visit one night to the hall of the Minute Men, clearly convinced him that the South meant war, if necessary to accomplish their ends, and his purpose of location below Mason and Dixon's line was reversed. He took steamer North to St. Louis, Missouri, then visited an uncle in Alexandria below the Des Moines river, taught school one month at La Grange Seminary, a Baptist male and female College in Spring of 1861. Then, in Summer of that year, he taught district school in Memphis, Scotland county of the same State, and subsequently taught a private school in La Grange. Here a Company for Southern service was forming, and he was tendered and was expected to accept command. Not relishing the attitude this was likely to place him in, and at earnest urging of his parents, he left the land beyond the Mississippi, and reached his paternal home at Parkersburg in August.

Here chaos and alarm and clash of political fealty to State and Nation disturbed nearly every home. Catching the spirit of his father, who as a Whig had promptly arrayed himself with the Federal cause, Alvaro desired to enter active army service. Yielding to the objections and pleadings of both parents, he gave up the intention, and became a clerk in the Post office under James M. Boreman, brother of the Governor in the Fall of 1861, at the entering salary of 25 dollars per month. The soldiers of McClellan passing through and others constantly in regiments stationed near the city, all fresh from home and sweethearts, made the position burdensome and irritating. In September 1862, he was transferred to the United States Internal Revenue Assessor's office, under A. G. Leonard, and remained in the place till 1864. Having one-half of his time from revenue duties, with pay in proportion, he served as Chancery Commissioner of the Circuit Court of Wood County, was Notary Public, and also recorded deeds in clerks office of the Court House. In 1865 he resigned his revenue position, and accepted clerkship in the General Land office at Washington City, where he spent an entire year in the Virginia Military Division of that Bureau. This year he received from his Alma Mater the degree of A. M. In 1866, having familiarized himself with many of the customs and workings of the public service, he resigned his clerkship, and, along with Dr. James G. Blair, became one of the editors and proprietors of the Parkersburg Gazette, a leading Republican weekly paper. He continued in this publication eight months till 1866, when it was sold to J. C. Walker, and thereafter published as a democratic organ.

He was again clerk in the Revenue office under Assessor Leonard, till removal of headquarters to Wheeling, when in 1867 to Sept. 1870 he was Deputy Collector of U. S. Revenue under General B. F. Kelley. Resigning this position, he removed to Charleston, Kanawha county, and became a partner and principal editor of the West Virginia Journal, the most influential exponent of Republican faith in the Kanawha Valley, and from 1871 until October 1875 was in charge. From that date till October 1876, one year, he served as clerk in the Division of Statistics, Warrant Bureau, of the U. S. Treasury at Washington. This position he resigned and returned to Charleston, his residence in the meantime having burned down. January 1st 1877, President U. S. Grant appointed him Postmaster at Kanawha Court House. This responsible appointment he held till July 1, 1881. His old desire for editorial work asserting itself, at the solicitation of party friends he started, 17 September 1881, edited and published the State Tribune, which he conducted four years, and then sold to a company who continued to publish it, as the exponent of vigorous Republicanism at the Capital until the Fall of 1891, when it was merged with the Daily Star and became the Star-Tribune.

He was again, in January 1885, commissioned "Postmaster for four years," and continued in the office till suspended, October 10 of that year, by order of a democratic Administration.

On 29 May 1873, in Kanawha Presbyterian church, at Charleston, Rev. James Richards, D. D., officiating clergyman, he was united in marriage with Bessie, daughter of Andrew and Catharine (Nagle) Eagan. Her father died at sea, and her mother came to America in 1848. She was refined in tastes, and cultivated in manner, and made home one of the most attractive spots on earth for her husband, relatives and friends, a Christian woman, God's best gift to mortal. She was helpmeet, adviser and companion. At her own urgent request, with advice of the Postmaster General, she was chief clerk in the post-office during his first term of service, and was faithful and popular. After long suffering she died at their beautiful house on Virginia street in Charleston, and her dust beloved lies entombed in Spring Hill Cemetery of that city, where facing the Southern skies, a lovely monument has been erected to her cherished memory. As further record of her virtues, her bereaved husband wrote and put into print a pamphlet with poetical tributes to her memory.

At the division of the Presbyterian congregation and membership in Charleston, in 1872, he adhered to the Kanawha succession, Northern branch, and became deacon, serving for years as Treasurer and President of the Board. April 17, 1889 he was chosen an Elder, and Trustee also for three years. The Presbytery, at its Point Pleasant meeting 16 September 1891, appointed him a commissioner in their behalf to the Synod which met 5 October in Scranton, Pennsylvania. He was also selected as delegate from his, Kanawha, church to Grafton session of Presbytery, 12 April 1892, but previous engagements prevented attendance at both meetings. He was Secretary of the Kanawha County Bible Society from 1888 to 1893.

In 1870 and 1871 he was Corresponding member from West Virginia of the International Executive Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, causing the convening of the first State Association in and for West Virginia at Clarksburg.

He is fond of historical research, and from its birth to his removal from the State, and even later to January 1894, was Vice President of the Historical and Antiquarian Society of West Virginia, having been one of the Charter members, Secretary of its Executive Board, and zealous in its organization and advocacy.

He, in 1877, became one of the charter members of Lodge 465, Knights of Honor, at Charleston, West Va., and still continues in that Beneficial Order, in which he has held position of Lodge Dictator, Member of the Committee on Laws in Grand Lodge, Trustee and a representative to the Supreme Lodge, session at Charleston, South Carolina, May 10 to 20, 1892 and also for the sessions 1895 and 1896. Is also a member of the National Union, a similar Benefit Association in which he carries $3000 insurance.

He is a Knight Templar Mason, and has written for the Masonic Review at Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Voice of Masonry at Chicago, numerous fraternity poems which have been widely copied by journals and magazines of that order. He was, in Chartiers Lodge No. 297, Canonsburg, Pa., entered as Apprentice, 13 June 1859; Crafted 11 July, and raised to the Sublime degree of Master Mason 23 July 1860, while attending College. Was received and ballotted for in Royal Arch Masonry 16 June 1866, in Jerusalem Chapter, U. D. Parkersburg, West Virginia, and July 16 made Mark Master, Past Master as Senior Warden of a regular lodge; Select and Royal Master and Most Excellent Master October 1, and exalted in Royal Arch degree 5 December 1866; and was elected High Priest of Jerusalem Chapter No. 55, June 5 1871. Was Knighted in Wheeling Commandery by petition received 23 March 1868, and acted upon 22 June 1868. Became a Charter member of Tyrean Royal Arch Chapter No. 13 and of Kanawha Commandery No. 4 K. T. Charleston. January 25 1889 he was admitted a Noble of the Mystic Shrine, Osiris Temple of Wheeling West Virginia.

In 1870 he was a prominent candidate before the Republican State Convention of West Virginia, for the nomination as Auditor, and withdrew in favor of a soldier who was subsequently defeated. He was an organizer in politics, though he is now turning his attention to real-estate and literature. Was member of the State Republican Executive Committee two Presidential campaigns, 1884 and 1888. In the latter year he was President of the Kanawha County League of Tariff Clubs, and member of the Executive Committee of the State League of Protective Clubs, representing the third Congressional District in this as in the State Committee.

June 11, 1891 he wedded Mrs Mary Barr Bayley, a lady of rare beauty, manners and refinement. She was born 25 December 1849, at the homestead, “The Meadows,” in Lexington, Kentucky. In 1868 she married Col. William E. Bayley, an officer in the Ninth Regiment Illinois Cavalry, who died 28 January 1885, leaving to her guardianship two children, Warfield Beale, born 12 March 1869, and Charles Abercrombie Dunbar, born 4 June 1877, both of whom are now with their mother in her Washington home. She and A. F. Gibbens were wedded in St. James Episcopal church at Chicago, the Rector, Floyd W. Tomkins officiating. She is the daughter, on paternal side, of William P., and grand daughter of Dr. Elisha Warfield of Lexington, Kentucky. Her mother was Miss Maria E. Griffith, of Natchez, Mary Barr (Warfield) Gibbens.
Mississippi, a sister of the celebrated Rosa Vertner Jeffries, nee Vertner, and her grandmother was Miss Mary Barr, daughter of Robert Barr, whose father was Count Barr de Barr, a Huguenot of France, and on the maternal side her great great grandfather was Lord Abercrombie of Scotland, and her grandfather Griffith was direct descendant of the Prince of Wales.

Thus she is nobly endowed by birth, mental inheritance, and education. She graduated at St. Mary’s Hall, Burlington, New Jersey, is a lover of Music, and ardent in Art handling the brush with the touch of one devoted and determined to reach the highest point of excellence. She is alike proficient in China, oils, pastels, or with Ideal Tapestry. With her varied accomplishments and an exquisite taste, she is skillful in culinary and the intricacies of house-keeping. Is attached and devoted to domestic life, and believes it both the duty, preference and pleasure of a true wife to make home the most magnetic spot on earth for husband and children.

The harmonious and delicate decorations, and neatness throughout in their dwelling indicate her ability and practical sincerity in this regard.

Amid all his multifarious duties, business and employment Alvaro has found leisure to court the poetical Muse, and complete other literary work. For past three decades he has been contributor of poems and other literary articles for the leading magazines, reading by invitation in 1866 a poetical recitation on Fraternity before the Theta Delta Chi of Carlisle, Pennsylvania. He was chosen Laureate and delivered the Reunion ode at the Quarter-Centennial of his class in 1885, at Washington and Jefferson College, the Alumni Annual being presided over by its President, General James A. Beaver. He was then selected to serve again in 1895. He is one of the editors of Prominent Men of West Virginia, a statistical and biographical volume of 1022 pages, and 200 illustrations, issued in 1890. His portrait and poem-selections appear in the “Poets of America,” published at Chicago in 1890. In another volume of 350 pages, “Poems in Autograph,” by Heringshaw, is printed “Beyond the Night,” one of his sonnets in facsimile. In 1892, three of his poems were published in a volume of 227 pages, titled “Flowers by the Wayside,” compiled by H. H. Bevis of Cincinnati. He has, of his own verses, in contemplation the issuing of a volume, “Sparks from the Anvil of Thought.” He is also in process of writing a complete History of his native Wood County, Virginia, to include Pioneer times and lives of Pioneers West of the Alleghenies.
The old mansion of the Gibbens family is the residence of the third son of Samuel Shaeffer and Lucetta Salome Rex. Franklin was born 13 September 1837 in Schaeffers-town, Lebanon county, Penn. The ancestors of his mother were German, being connected with the Rev. Henry Melchor Muhlenburg, the first German Lutheran preacher in the United States, and also related to Governor Andrew Shulze of Pennsylvania, whose ancestry came from Saalfeldt, in Saxony. On the paternal side the ancestry was English-German.

In 1838 the parents of Franklin Rex removed to Philadelphia, where they continued to reside till 1860, when they migrated West to Parkersburg, Va. His education was that of the public schools of the Quaker city; graduating from the High School in July 1854. He was for a number of years thereafter in a broker's office. Upon removal to the city of Parkersburg he engaged in mercantile business; from March 1864 to September 1866 served as chief clerk in the U. S. Assessors office of Internal Revenue under Albert G. Leonard.

In September 1866 a position as clerk in the Second National Bank of Parkersburg; being tendered him, he accepted, and continued in employ of that corporation until June 1893 when failing health compelled him to sever his connection therewith.

In 1854 the subject of this sketch became, by confirmation, a member of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church of Philadelphia and continued in membership therewith until several years after his removal West, where by letter he united with the First Presbyterian Church of Parkersburg. Upon the formation of Calvary Presbyterian church, he became one of the membership, serving therein as Deacon until the union of the churches, when he was elected an elder.

On the 24 June 1864 Frank Rex was made a Master Mason in Mt. Olivet Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 113, now No. 3 of Parkersburg. In 1865 he received the Chapter degrees in Wheeling Union Chapter No. 1, but demitted therefrom upon the organization of Jerusalem Chapter No. 55, now No. 3 of Parkersburg. The Templar degrees were received by him in Wheeling Commandery No. 1, and he was one of the Charter Members at the organization of Calvary Commandery No. 3 K. T, serving as Eminent Commander thereof for the first two years of its existence. He was High Priest of Jerusalem Chapter No. 3, R. A. M. for a number of years, also Worshipful Master of Mt. Olivet Lodge No. 3 for several years. Has held subordinate positions in the Grand Lodge of Masons of the State of West Virginia, and has been the Representative of the Grand Lodge of Michigan near the Grand Lodge of West Virginia for some years. In the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of West Virginia which was organized in 1871 he was elected Grand King, and re-elected in 1872, and elected Grand High Priest in 1888. He is the representative of the Grand Chapter of Delaware, near the Grand Chapter of West Virginia. In 1871 the order of High Priesthood was conferred upon him in a Council of High Priests at Wheeling. He has occupied various stations in the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of West Virginia, serving as Grand Commander for the years 1879 and 1880, and until May 1881. He has had the honor of representing the Grand Commanderies of Ohio, Kentucky and Georgia near the Grand Commandery of West Virginia. In 1891 he became a member of Osiris Temple, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Wheeling.

He is also a member of Parkersburg Lodge No. 7 I. O. of Odd Fellows, and of Paran Encampment No. 3 I. O. of Odd Fellows.

He is also a member of Hope Lodge No. 10, Knights of Pythias, and one of the charter members of Parkersburg Division No. 3, Uniform Rank K. of P., and has the honor of being Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General under Brigadier General John W. Mather, commanding the West Virginia Brigade U. R. K. of P.

He is also member of the Knights of Honor, and of the Legion of Honor.

At the homestead of Jefferson Gibbens, on the evening of 24 December 1874, in the presence of a few of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties, Franklin Rex and Leonora Lelia Gibbens were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. They still reside at the old homestead No. 213 Ann Street. She was born 11 May 1839, was thoroughly educated in the best select schools of the vicinity, was baptized into and continues a member of the First Presbyterian church, the one to whose early success her mother so largely contributed. In disposition she is cheerful, in taste domestic, and is the sunshine of the home circle who know her best. The engraving of her was taken from a photo at the age of 48.

Their children were:

1.—Allena Lucetta; born 1 June 1876.

2.—Hannah; born 18 September 1879, who died in July 1880 and was buried in the Rex lot of the I. O. O. F Cemetery.

Franklin Rex died 18 October 1895.
Ah! sweet sister, we are going.
But no longer side by side:
Here our barques are separating
On this dashing tide.
Neath yon moon, whose silvery light-gems
Sparkle on each wavelet's crest,
We have prattled to the starlight
'Ere our eyelids sank to rest.

Listened to the river's gladness.
As it kissed the pebbly shore,
Then went murmuring to its gulf-home.
Where it met the tempest's roar:
Chased the butterfly at noon-tide.
With its airy pinions gay,
Round the wild flowers that were sleeping
On the banks, their life away.

But 'tis past. We're separating:
Oh, it fills my heart with pain!
Separating on life's current.
Will we ever meet again?
Yes, Time's current, drifting onward.
Bears us to a golden sea.
On whose shores of holy quiet,
I shall meet again with thee.

And amid the stars that charmed us,
In gay childhood's hopeful hour.
We shall know the truth of Heaven.
Realizing dreams of yore.
Farewell, heart with love sincerest.
Farewell sister, gentle one.
God protest thee till life's current Brings us home around His throne.

GOD PROTECT THEE. NORA.

1860.
The youngest living son of Jefferson and Hannah (Butcher) Gibbens was born in Parkersburg, Virginia, 11 November 1845, and 13 April 1871 wedded Miss Lizzie Higginbotham, who was of English ancestry, and was born in Quebec Canada, 25 May 1849. He was for years a partner and compositor in the printing establishment of Gibbens Brothers, occupying the building of the estate, known then as Masonic Hall on Ann Street.

He abandoned type-setting and went with his family to Terre Haute, Indiana, where he only remained a few years. Thence he removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he now resides.

The children of this marriage are:

2. Hannah; born 3 Dec 1873, who died 16 May 1876.
3. Dora Ada; born 29 September 1875.
4. An infant, born and died in 1880.

The deceased children lie buried in the Gibbens lot of River View Cemetery, Parkersburg, West Virginia.

1. Willie Jefferson, 13 July 1896 married Mrs. Ida (Noble) Bliss, a widow with children. She was born in Indianapolis, Ind. 20 January 1864.
   1. Willie (Bliss) born 27 April 1884.
   2. Nora (Bliss) born 6 September 1890.

Adrian N. Gibbens died 27 August 1897. Dora Ada the daughter, 24 June 1897 married J. A. Griffith of Cincinnati, Ohio, and died 5 July 1897.
GORDON BUTCHER GIBBENS,

The fourth child of Jefferson and Hannah (Butcher) Gibbens, was born in Parkersburg, Virginia, 19 February 1842. He received a fair English education in the select schools of the period, and a practical training in the store of his father, who was one of the early Mayors under the charter as a city.

During the opening days of the war he was an Independent Scout in front of the Union forces. By trade is a practical printer and engraver. In newspaper life he was local editor of the Parkersburg Gazette, in its palmy days, and later of the Daily Times. Along with Dr. James G. Blair, as editor, he established and was publisher and coproprietor for six years of the W.Va. Educational Monthly Magazine, the first periodical of its kind in the State. He has been one term Grand Dictator for the State of the Knights of Honor, and its Representative to the Supreme Lodge of the United States for two terms; was Treasurer of the Wood County Building Association, then of its successor, the Mutual, and now for the sixteenth year of the Traders; was chief deputy and cashier during the administration of Col. Geo. W. Patton, U. S. Marshal for the District of West Virginia, and held a similar position under his successor, Geo. W. Atkinson; was deputy collector of internal revenue under Gen. I. H. Duval, filling out the unexpired term of the late O. G. Scofield, and in 1889, as the Republican nominee, was elected Mayor of Parkersburg by a majority of 188 votes, carrying every ward in the city, over one of the most popular Democrats. The next term, another was made the party candidate, and the city went under Democratic control. During his municipal administration the system of sewerage was inaugurated and the principal lines were completed, the durable and popular street paving with brick was begun and the main business streets were completed.

He was one of the directors of the C., P. and N. Railway, which proposed a line of road from Parkersburg to the Virginia tide-water.

He is a member of the beneficial order of Elks, and for two terms has held the highest State position in the Order, that of District Deputy.

He was unanimously, and against his will, in 1892, nominated as the Republican candidate for the State Senate from his district. The aggregate of the counties was heavily Democratic, and he, notwithstanding the great political landslide that year, was defeated by an unexpected reduced majority of votes. During the campaign he made thirty-five speeches, an average of two a day. In his native county of Wood he ran 289 votes over every name on the ticket. During the campaign of 1894 he was selected as chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee of the Fourth district of West Virginia. Besides personally directing the conduct of that successful campaign, he visited the twelve counties of his district, making twenty-one speeches.

October 16, 1867, he married Florence, only daughter of the late James G. Blair, D. D., LL. D. She was born at Greenfield, Ohio, February 26, 1848, and completed her education at the Hillsboro (O.) Female Seminary. She comes of old New England stock.

Her father, Dr. Blair, was born in Marcellus, New York, in the year 1816; graduated at Middletown(Conn.)Seminary died at Fairmont, West Va., on December 23, 1878, and was buried in the Odd Fellows cemetery at Parkersburg.

His ancestry were of Scottish origin. His grandfather, Rev. David Holmes, was an itinerant Methodist minister, serving a half century in his chosen work. His mother was also a noble type of the early Methodists of seventy years ago.

Dr. Blair devoted his entire life to the ministry and educational matters.

His footprints as an educator may be seen in Cazenovia Seminary, New York; Blenden Seminary, at Westerville, Ohio; Greenfield (O.) Seminary; in the chair of natural science; as Vice-President of the Ohio University at Athens and as Principal of the State Normal School at Fairmont, West Va. As minister, editor and teacher, his rare ability as an educator has left its impress upon many of the marked men of the nation. March 10, 1843, he married Olive Jones Winslow, at Columbus, Ohio. She was born at Brattleboro, Vermont, in 1820, and died at Parkersburg, January 14, 1892. Her remains were laid away beside her husband in Odd Fellows' cemetery.

She was a direct descendant, on her father's side, of Gov. Winslow, of Massachusetts, who came over in the Mayflower, and, upon her mother's side, of the Jones and Hazletons, the pioneer settlers of Jamestown, New York. She was a lady of rare culture and refinement, being a graduate of Amherst Seminary, Mass.

The children of Gordon Butcher Gibbens and Florence Blair are:

1. Merton Blair, born 11 December 1868. He is a young man of fine business qualifications, a careful and correct accountant and inherits his father's methodical and intelligent business tact. He is a graduate of the Toledo (O.) Commercial College, is assistant Treasurer of the Traders Building Association, of his native city, and is Secretary and Treasurer of the Globe Printing and Binding Co., with an established business in West Virginia and Eastern Ohio. He was offered a Congressional secretariaship at Washington in 1895 by Congressman Warren Miller, of the Fourth W. Va. district, but declined the honor. He is a Lieutenant in Company E, of the Second Regiment, West Virginia National Guard, was on duty and bore himself bravely during the great mining strike of the summer of 1894.

2. Alice Gordon, born 13 August 1871, who 4 March 1891 wedded William W., son of Luther M. and Virginia (Neale) Smith. He was born 12 August 1866, at Parkersburg, W. Va., and is a book-keeper with the Standard Oil Company. To them has been born a daughter, Doris Cole, 4 June 1892.

3. Bessie Nora, born 21 June 1874, who at Marietta, O., 18 February 1891, wedded Jesse Litten Cramer. He was born 15 April 1870, at Clarington, O., and is a coal dealer and steamboat manager, a partner of the firm of L. Cramer & Son. To them were born, 29 December 1891, a daughter, Olive Litten, and 12 November 1894, another daughter, Elaine.

4. Florence Winslow, born 8 April 1879.

Since above sketch was printed, changes have occurred, as follows, in the branch of Gordon B. Gibbens:

1. Merton B. 7 July 1898, married Laura Janet Hupp. She was born March 16 1897. They have one child, William Blair, born 28 April 1899.

With the advent of this branch of that family to America is connected a sorrow and a romance.

Sometime in the year 1782, a certain Count Peybolt, of Prussia, became involved in political difficulties, and was forced to flee from his native country, after his estates and most of his valuables had been confiscated. He naturally turned his thoughts toward the young Republic of the United States, across the wide Atlantic, then considered a journey of both peril and magnitude.

Finally, viewing this land as the asylum of the oppressed, he made up his mind to leave forever his birth-clime, and migrate. He secured passage for himself, wife and two children, in a small sailing vessel; and, hastily gathering up his few remaining personal treasures, they embarked.

The Count and Countess both died during passage, on board the vessel, and were entombed in oceanic waters, leaving the orphaned children to the protection and care of the Captain, who, upon arrival at the port of Baltimore, claimed the right to do with the boy and girl as he liked. There was none on either shore of the traversed ocean to say nay to his purpose, and the boy was bound out to a General Barnett, a prominent planter in Eastern Virginia. The girl, Mary, two years younger than her brother, was similarly disposed of to a family in Western Pennsylvania, all trace of whose subsequent life has been lost.

The General liked the boy so well that he adopted him as his own, and gave him the name of John Barnett. As the youth grew to manhood, he proved to be unusually worthy and industrious; and, in the year 1793, he so won the confidence of his adopted father, and the heart of the daughter, Mary, that they were married.

The maiden name of Mary's mother was Polly Clayton Mount, and Indian blood flowed in her veins equal to that of the lovely Pocahontas, the Chieftain's daughter. General Barnett, whose estate and home was near Manassas Gap, Prince William county, Virginia, gave the loving couple his assent and blessing, an excellent start in life, a group of negro servants, and the power to purchase a tract of land in the enticing West: and, soon after the birth of their first child, they removed to Wood county, on Kanawha's shores, then embowered in dense forests, and perilous from bear, panther and wolf. He was about twenty years of age when he wedded the daughter of his foster-parent. The first fruit of this union was a son, christened Amos, signifying strong, courageous.

Their family roll is:

1. Amos; born 25 July 1795, who, 5 June 1815, wedded Sarah, daughter of John and Catherine (Herbert) Gibbens.

2. Mary, born 5 May 1797, who, 3 July 1814, married Willis Leach. She died 20 February 1878.

4. George, born in 1801, who, 21 January 1824, married Margaret Riley.

6. Rhoda, born ............... , who, 31 December 1826, married Thompson Leach.

Upon removal, with wife and one son, West of the Alleghanies into the wilderness of Wood county, then in Harrison, he built a primitive dwelling, cleared several hundred acres from thick forests; and, in process of time, added adjoining acreage until he owned a splendid and extensive farm. Here he lived long years, respected and useful among settlers who were ignorant of his noble parentage. He was born 7 April 1770, and died 21 April 1852, and his wife the real Barnett, was born 17 March 1763, and died 6 October 1858.

In the inventory of his estate, 5 March 1854, the names of the following servants appear, with valuation:

HERALDRY.

One of the crests used by both Barnard and Barnett was—Out of a ducal coronet of gold, a demi-bear, rampant, of silver, muzzled, sa.

Charles Barnett, of Stratton Park, Biggleswade, Beds., used:

A Trefoil.
Sarah (Gibbens) Barnett.
AMOS BARNETT.

The direct descendant of Count Peybolt and General Barnett enlisted in the United States Army, from Wood county, for the war of 1812, serving with credit through the entire conflict. The regiment was commanded by Colonel Booth, of Harrison county, the company in which Barnett enrolled was formed near Elizabeth, by Captain Henry Steed, and left the recruiting station 25 August 1814, and was discharged 15 February 1815. The latter part of his service was at Alexandria, on the Potomac.

Upon his return home he wedded, 5 June 1815, Sarah, daughter of John and Catherine (Herbert) Gibbens. She was born near Wheeling, Virginia, under Fort Henry's protection. The early years of their married life were spent upon the farm, in clearing and improving the homestead. About 1830 he engaged in transportation and the sale of merchandise up and down the Ohio and Little Kanawha rivers, extending his trips, as profit demanded, even up the Great Kanawha. The "Store-Boat," as the name in black letters outside appeared, was the usual flatboat, built by primitive skill from poplar gunwales and hewed oak boards, and covered with sawed pine boards and painted canvass. This was steered or piloted down the current, or pulled slowly up when required, stopping at each farm house and settlement along the route, exchanging goods for home produce, skins and furs.

In April, 1835, he used a similar flat with heavy oars, and workmen, to remove his family and household goods to Kanawha Salines. He here purchased a house for dwelling and store purposes, and industriously aimed to improve his own and the village interests. He patronized and assisted the establishment and support of the best schools, became a prominent citizen and a pertinacious leader in the Whig party.

In 1845 he purchased salt property, and under many difficulties and much financial loss, manufactured salt, taking it West and South, and depositing it at different points on the Mississippi river. In 1849 he bought valuable property in Keokuk, Iowa, and a farm on the Mississippi just below the Des Moines junction. In 1850 he abandoned salt production, and removed his family to the Mississippi purchase, locating his married son, Franklin, on the Iowa property, a few miles North.

For a few years he farmed upon the alluvial soil; and then, leaving wife and family to cultivate the corn and grain crops, he went to California during the gold excitement, remaining in and near the mines, purchasing and selling fruit during the years 1854 to 1856, when he returned to his Mississippi river home. Here he remained but two years, when the Pacific fever possessed him, and he returned to the California attraction. On that slope he spent the years 1858 to 1860, when he was glad to rest from his roving and seek the quiet and home comforts on the farm near Alexandria, Mo.

He loved plowing and corn-planting, and pursued it for the next nine years, until his death, June 29, 1869. He lies buried at St. Francisville, Mo. In his allotted years he was ever energetic, honest to a fault, kind-hearted but reticent, and lived a Baptist in religious faith. His companion was conscientious, devoted to her church, the Methodist, was mild in voice and manner and sweet in disposition.

For a few years after his death his son, Jefferson, and the widow and daughter, Lucy, dwelt upon the farm. The frequent overflows in the Des Moines and Mississippi rivers, with other causes, made further farming disagreeable and a financial loss. The property was sold and removal made across the Des Moines river to the Keokuk property. Here Jefferson F. died, 22 October 1887, and his mother, in an implicit religious faith, passed away, 20 April 1890, at the home of her daughter, Lucy Harlan, in Athens, Missouri. They were both buried at Keokuk.
Their children are:

1. John Gibbens, born 2 August 1816, who in 1839 wedded Emeline R. Miller. He died at Keokuk in 1845, and she soon after. Their children are: Mary, who died within two years of birth; William A., who was blown up in a steamboat, between Wheeling and Parkersburg, in 1878; and John Philip, who remained single and went first to Colorado, thence to Muskegee, in the Indian Territory. Was there in October 1878. Widow Barnett, in 1852, wedded a Rust.

2. James Monroe, born 2 December 1818, in Wood county, Va., who died in October, 1836.

3. Jefferson F., born 5 December 1820; married Nancy Sophronia Hannaman, and died 22 October 1887, and lies buried at Keokuk, Iowa. He was studious and reflectful, fond of reading and genial in his ways.

4. Mary Catherine, born 6 May 1823, and died in 1825.

5. Susan Clementine, born 11 September 1825, who 21 June 1854 wedded Rev. Henry N. Turner, in Alexandria, Mo. He died in December 1854, and 22 November 1866 she married Rev. Loren L. Knox, D. D., of Wisconsin, who was born 8 January 1811. This union gave a son, Loren Henry, born 3 November 1868, who is a graduate from the Northwestern University, of Evanston, Illinois, where the family now resides, at 1329 Judson avenue. He is literary in his tastes, and in 1893 received a $5000 prize for an essay published in Public Opinion, of Washington, D. C. At present he is practicing law in Chicago. His father is an able divine, of the Methodist faith; has written and published several religious volumes. Mrs. Susan (Barnett) Knox spent the earlier years of her life in teaching, is still an attentive reader of substantial books, and student of Nature as well. For years she attended, from the home of her uncle, Jefferson Gibbens, the excellent select school of Festus Hanks.
6. George W., born 19 November 1827, who died 6 June 1868 at Santa Barbara, Cal. He went to that State in 1849, thence in 1752 to Australia, and subsequently returned to Vancouver, or Victoria City, and finally to Southern California, there died on his way home.

7. David E., born 8 April 1830, who died 12 November 1854 and is buried at Fulton, Mo.

8. Franklin, born 3 June 1832, who 18 March 1856 at Keokuk, Iowa, married Naomi Barrett. She was born 28 February 1837, in Morgan county, Ohio. He is a clerk by occupation, has a mind delighting in inventive thought and experiment, and believes that aerial navigation is practical and near. He moved to Kansas City, Mo., 12 November 1893.

Their children are:

1. Fred. Perry, born 29 March 1857, who 29 September 1851 wedded Fannie Adell Griffin, of Carthage, Ills. To them three children were born. They are: Raymond G., born 8 October 1882; Edith Edna, born 10 May 1888; Agnes Adele, born 14 July 1891. He is a stenographer and court reporter at Kansas City, Mo.

2. William Wilson, born 18 December 1858, and died of typhoid fever at Buena Vista, Colorado, 8 November 1881.

3. Alvaro Percy, born 29 August 1862, who 1 September 1885, married Emma B. Layton, of Fort Madison, Iowa. He is a stenographer at Kansas City, Mo. Their child, Christine, was born 2 November 1888 and died in November 1888. The mother died 25 October 1890.

4. Robert Crary, born 7 June 1869, who was in the employ of the drafting department of the Link Belt Company, and is now with Tuttle & Pike, Civil Engineers, Kansas City, Mo.

5. Edward Sidney, born 2 December 1871; a stenographer in Kansas City, Mo., who 17 July 1894 married Roberta Elizabeth Samuel. He is in the Kansas City, Fort Scott and Memphis R. R. Co.'s offices.

6. Mabel E., born 7 March 1875, who is at home, a graduate of the High School.

6. of No. 8. Eleanor Mabel, 6 November 1895 married Emerson Clyde Gates. Have a daughter, born 4 March 1897. Live at 2109 Park Ave. Kansas City, Mo.
This family were among the early settlers West, but have left little save the skeleton of a genealogical record behind them. It is believed that no descendants now dwell in the county.

Daniel Kettle and Catherine, his wife, 30 August 1813, deeded to Thomas Butcher, 60 acres of land on the West side of the Little Kanawha River, part of a tract conveyed by the Commonwealth to Paul Armstrong, and by him to James Gillespie, and by him to said Daniel Kittle.

Abram Kettle and Christina Westfall married, and emigrated from New Jersey Colony to the South Branch of the Potomac river. Thence they moved to the Tygart Valley river, near Beverly, Randolph county, Virginia. Their children were seven sons and four daughters: Jacob, Richard, John, Daniel, possessor of the 60-acre tract in Wood county, Abram, Moses, George, Prudence, Betsy, Ingra, and Mary, who, 24 February 1810, married Michael Greathouse.

Of these, George, born 14 July 1774, who died 15 January 1815, wedded, 17 May 1793, Caty Bickel. She was born in Randolph county 20 June 1773. By her there were born: William, 11 April 1795; Rachel 28 September 1796; and Gehannah, born 25 December 1797, in Randolph county, where, 16 April 1819, she wedded James, son of John and Katherine (Herbah) Gibbens.

The first wife of George Kettle died in 1801, and 28 October 1802 he wedded Elizabeth Wees. From this union there were born Jesse, 11 November 1803, who married Sarah Burke, had four children, and died 9 December 1848; Job, 28 April 1805, who was twice married, had three children and died 26 May 1877; William, born 4 April 1807, who married Letitia Berry, had three children and died 22 December 1854; Stephen, born 21 November 1810, who married Nancy Fullerton, had three daughters and died 7 June 1849; Lydia, born 6 November 1812, who married John Fullerton, had seven sons and three daughters, and died 26 June 1870; and David, born 4 August 1821.

Some of the Kettle family are buried in Norfolk, Virginia, where Abram was stationed in the U. S. Service during the War of 1812; others in Burke's graveyard in Scioto county, Ohio; and at Wheelersburg in Kettle's, and in Bennett's grounds, of same county. Between the years 1807 and 1810 he dwelt in Wood county, Virginia; it is not known how much longer, or when he emigrated to Ohio. George, Sr., died 17 November 1813, and was buried at Norfolk, Virginia. His wife, Caty, died at Beverly in 1801, and Elizabeth years after.

Elder Job, son of George and Elizabeth (Wees) Kettle, whose name was familiar in our county in Pioneer times, had his residence, in later years, ten miles northwest of Portsmouth, at Friendship, Ohio. He was ordained a preacher in the Free Baptist denomination, and was in service for forty years, devoting part of his time to his trades, blacksmithing and farming. His first wife was Rachel Stockham. She died in the first year of their marriage. He subsequently wedded Lucinda Pool, and by her had two daughters. Rachel married Eli Calder. They dwelt in Portsmouth. Sarah was a school teacher in Scioto county. The third wife was a widow, Elizabeth Montgomery, with three children. They have one son.
Near one of the block houses used as a fort and place of retreat, not far from the mouth of the Little Kanawha river, was born, 2 February 1799, James, eldest son of John and Catherine (Herbah) Gibbens.

At eighteen years of age he apprenticed himself to Col. Turner Boulware, to learn the trade of carpenter and house-joiner. April 16, 1819, he wedded Gehannah, daughter of George and Katy (Bickel) Kettle. She was born in Randolph county, Virginia, 25 December 1797. Within four years her mother died, and some years after her father and step-mother emigrated to Western Virginia. In 1817 she embraced religion, and in 1834 united with Porter's church, Free-will Baptists. March 17, 1820, he went to Cincinnati on a prospecting tour, then visited Mr. Renick, and about 10 April of same year, returned to his sister's, Mrs. Amos Barnett, in Virginia.

He there rented a tract of land from Thomas Butcher, and 23 October 1824 moved upon it. The next March he gave up the farm and moved to Scioto county, Ohio. He entered land, 14 January 1836, in Porter Township, from the United States Land Office in Chillicothe. This tract he cleared of timber, built thereon, moved into his cabin 1 May 1837, and there dwelt till 8 March 1871, when he moved to the Webber, formerly the Harvey farm.

In December, 1824, he was severely hurt and crippled by the falling of a tree upon him, and for fifteen years not only suffered greatly, but was much disabled. During these dreary years he was cheerful and patient.

In 1833 he united with Porter's Church of Free-will Baptists, was chosen Deacon 6 December 1834, and clerk 4
December 1841, and held both these positions till the year 1875. He was quarterly-meeting secretary eight years, was first local school director and then clerk for twenty-five years. He was superintendent of the Township School Board for three years and then resigned the trust.

He was slightly above six feet tall, weighed about 165 pounds when in the prime of life, in later years wore long beard; was bald-headed, easy in manners, generous in disposition, industrious, temperate, and would rather himself suffer than to inflict wrong upon another; loved peace with all his neighbors, and it was his honorable boast that he had never been concerned in a law suit in his life.

His farm was three miles distant from Wheelersburg. His companion and counsellor died 24 May 1884. He then sold out his farm, and bought five acres, with a house, on the line of the C. W. & Balto Railroad, fourteen miles from Portsmouth. He died there 2 September 1886. They were both buried in grounds near Wheelersburg.

Their children were:

1. Caroline, born 11 July 1820, who wedded Lewis V. Burke. Their children are twelve.

2. George Washington, born 5 March 1822, who wedded Cordelia Savage, and by her were three children.

3. John, born 26 January 1824, who died 28 March 1824, and was buried in the Kettle graveyard.

4. William, born 5 February 1826, who married Laura P. Davis, and by her were born nine children.

5. Randolph, born 11 August 1827. In 1860 he started for New Orleans and never returned. It is supposed he was swept into the maelstrom of civil war, and, unable to reach the North previous to the Mississippi blockade, was pressed into military service and died in the South.
6. Harriett Melissa, born 19 January 1830, who, 17 January 1854, wedded Sardine Brown, a farmer. To them no children were born. Residence, Kingman County, Kansas.

7. Thomas Jefferson, born 6 October 1831, who, 3 March 1857, married Ann Eliza Coyle, and by her have eleven children.

8. Martin, born 7 October 1833, died 18 December 1833.

9. Robert Martin, born 13 July 1835, who, 3 August 1862, wedded Mary Ann Call. To them were born eleven children.

10. Lucy Drew, born 14 February 1838, who, 2 October 1870, wedded Christian Hawkins. He died. She has one child, Arclissa, who, 25 December 1880, married Rutus J. Brunton. To them was born 19 June 1882, a daughter, Rocksey.

11. Cyrus Stetson, born 7 November 1839. He enlisted in and was Sergeant of Co. A, 33d Ohio Vol. Infantry, was wounded by a shell in front of Atlanta, Georgia, and died 13 August 1864.

This name is German, and doubtless immigration was from that country to Virginia in Colonial days. It is evident by a deed, made 1 January 1796, by John Hannaman and Susannah, his wife, to Adam Flesher, for 272 acres of land on the east side of the West Fork river, consideration $2000, that the ancestors came to Wood county prior to 1800 from the territory of Harrison. At that period the region of the lower Little Kenawha was densely wooded and sparsely populated.

Among the early Wood county deeds, in Land Book No. 1, is recorded a conveyance of land, owned previously by Capt. James Neal, dated 16 September 1799, from Christopher and Mary (uxor) Hannaman to William Hannaman; also one from the same grantors to Peter Hannaman. It is also of record that William Hannaman, 2 August 1797, for $300, sold to Charles Parsons 400 acres of land on the waters of Stone-Coal creek, which had been patented to Christopher Hannaman in the previous May. As early as 16 August 1798, John Stokely conveyed to Christopher and he to William Hannaman, for £187, several parcels of land, one of 38½ acres, originally deeded from James Neal, adjacent to lands of Stokely on Neal's Run, and two acres by separate deed, 16 August 1796, and one small lot 68x30 feet and two other lots, Nos. 4 and 5, in Springville, or Newport. The deeds to Christopher Hannaman show that both William and he, in February 1801, occupied cabins in Newport, upon the disputed jurisdiction. Prior to that, 11 March 1800, Captain Neal had conveyed to Christopher Hannaman, for $10, eighteen acres of ground and a cabin on the west side of the Little Kenawha river, adjoining lands of Hugh Phelps, "a few perches above Neal's Station."

The presumption is, from these various transfers and connecting incidents, that Christopher and Mary were the parents of William and Peter. The tradition is that they had two sons by these names, and, it may be, a third, John. If Peter and William were brothers, as the supposition is, then William had four children, John, Isaac, William, jr., and Caroline.

The family is an honored one in early days, and prominent in the management of county affairs. Farming seems to have been, as it is to-day of the descendants bearing the name, their principal occupation.

WILLIAM HANNAMAN.

In the early land records the wife of this pioneer appears to have been Mary. At the first session of the County Court of Wood, for organization, appeared on the minutes, William Hannaman as one of the sitting Justices, "Gentleman," and his resignation was tendered, and accepted by his companion magistrates, 7 May 1807. In 1801 he was Ensign, and, in 1802, Lieutenant, in Captain Dewey's Company of the Second Battalion of the county regiment of the militia. Near the Blennerhassett conspiracy era he and his family removed from the county and left no trace behind them.
PETER HANNAMAN.

His first wife was named Lee, doubtless a daughter of the Ranger, David Lee, who was a pioneer in that section, and who gave designation to the creek bearing such name, emptying into the Little Kanawha river.

Their children appear to have been:

2. Enoch, who died at Athens, Ohio, while attending the University.
3. Mary (or Polly), and
4. Isaac, both of whom died with fever and were buried in one grave.

The father of these four children was a large man, not fleshy, about six feet tall, weighing 200 average pounds, with light hair and fair complexion. He died 28 September 1825. His second wife was Matilda, daughter of James and Sarah (Martin) Robinson. By this marriage was born only one child, named Peter Thomas.

PETER THOMAS HANNAMAN.

He was born 28 October 1825, and 22 February 1850 wedded Rebecca Cade, who, a widow with a family, now resides near Leachtown. She was born 23 February 1830. He died 18 June 1878, and with deceased children lies buried in the Robinson graveyard on the farm of their ownership.

Their children are:

1. Matilda Ann, born 26 November 1850, and died 30 March 1881. She married, 4 April 1872, Richard Thomas Tucker, and by their union were born:
   1. Clarence Walter, born 10 May 1873.
   4. Lulu Mandana, born 14 July 1879.
2. William Benjamin, born 22 December 1851, who died 12 July 1878.
4. Sarah Elizabeth, born 11 January 1856, who died 30 August 1878.

   3. Carrie, born 10 February 1892.
10. Dora Frances, born 3 April 1868, died 7 July 1869.
JOHN HANNAMAN,

Nearly 12 miles from the mouth of the river Kenawha, on the north side, stands the homestead of the eldest branch of the Hannaman family, with the old Staunton Turnpike, once the avenue of a crowded migration westward, passing the doors of a two-story frame building now occupied by a son, Albert J. Here lived and passed away John, Sr., one of the sons of Peter, and probably a grandson of Christopher Hannaman.

He wedded 20 January, 1825, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Catherine (Herbert) Gibbens. She was born 26 March 1804, and died 8 August, 1876. He was born 14 March 1801, and died 3 July, 1878. They were both, with deceased children buried in the graveyard on the home place.

The homestead was originally 400 acres, the extent of the pre-emption right. To this was subsequently added of adjacent land 230 acres. He owned, also, on the opposite side of the Kenawha, a farm of 118 acres, and 300 acres known as the "Round Bottom Farm," close to Newark, now owned and cultivated by his son, Enoch Franklin.

He was honest, capable, discreet, and economical yet liberal, and useful in his district and throughout the county, filling numerous positions of trust and responsibility. He was a Justice of the Peace, and prompt in duty and attendance upon the terms of the court. His commission dated 20 April, 1846, and he qualified into office on the 18th day of the following month.

Their children were, 10:

1. Emily Catherine, born 12 December 1825, who 1 June 1847 wedded Jeptha W. Bibbee. She died 26 October 1848.
2. Nancy Sophronia, born 26 November 1826, who 28 April 1848 wedded Jefferson F. Barnett. Their only child, a daughter, died in infancy, and he died 22 October, 1887, in Keokuk, Iowa. The widow, restored to her maiden name, married 14 September 1856 James S. Baker, who was born 27 August 1826 in Beaver county, Pa., and who died 25 January 1874. By this second union were born two children:

1. John Franklin, born 19 February 1858, who lives in Newport, South Parkersburg, and 12 August 1879 married Josie Leach. She was born 5 October, 1858. They have a son:

2. Albert Clarence, born 24 February 1864, who 11 March 1890 wedded Dollie M. Kennedy, of Pittsburg, Pa., and is now a law student, and resides at 1437 Wrightwood avenue, Chicago, Ill., and has no children.

The address of Mr. N. S. Baker is Leachtown, W. Va., where she resides in a neat frame dwelling upon her valuable farm.

4. Enoch Franklin, born 14 October 1831, who 23 September 1856 wedded Elenor Rozilla Pilcher, granddaughter of Thomas Butcher. On the south side of the Little Kenawha river, a little above and on the opposite side from Newark, is the home of the eldest living son of the Hanneman family. He is a farmer, with a two-story frame residence overlooking a valuable farm. In his early manhood he was a clerk in the store of his uncle, Jefferson Gibbens, in Parkersburg. She was born 5 April 1840. Their children are:
   1. Victoria, born 20 January 1858; died 16 October 1858.
2. Benjamin Franklin, born 27 August 1860, who 27 October 1878 married Sarah Anna Flowers. She was born in 1858. They reside at Elizabeth, W. Va. Their children are:

GIBBENS-ENOCH.

HENRY ENOCH.

On his return homeward from a tour down the Ohio river in 1770, General George Washington, then surveyor of Virginia, and associates found Old Town Creek, in Green county, Pennsylvania, so high as to wet them in crossing, and when they reached Cox's the river was too deep to cross on horseback, and they were compelled to use a canoe, and swim their unwilling steeds. At the forks of Cacapehon, November 28th, they dined in the hospitable home of Henry Enoch.

He was a man of stability, intelligence, and of more than local popularity, and was a grantor of patents for Virginia, then claiming the territory of that section. He was a leader, and was a delegate from the district of Augusta, at the important meeting held at Fort Pitt, 16 June, 1775, in which his views had prepondering weight.

Hebrew names seem to have had preference in the family, and still continue in the private and public records of the descendants. In that language the name signifies "consecrated."

So far as can be ascertained, there were four sons and three daughters in the Enoch family: Elizabeth married...
William Craig,* doubtless one of Washington's associates upon his trip down the Ohio in 1770, and who settled in Miami, Ohio. Rachel married Henry Sergeant, and they fixed their home in the great Kanawha Valley. Henry, Jr. located in Warren county, Ohio.

Abram, the eldest, of the Ohio county militia, at Baker's Station below Grave creek, in 1791, in defence from an Indian attack upon the Virginia side of the Ohio river, proposed to go in pursuit of the savages. Eighteen men, including his father Henry, and other three sons, joined the gallant officer. Enoch led his men to the conflict. The determined foe fired upon the party, and Abram received a rifle ball in the breast, and fell dead on the spot. The men fled to the fort, and the next day, after early dawn, found their leader scalped. His remains were tenderly carried over the river to within range of the fortification, and decently buried in a rude repository at the head of Cresap Bottom. The father, whose four sons were all in this noted engagement, sadly withdrew to his home in Washington county, Pa., and there in after years died honored and lamented. Isaac and William, with only slight wounds, escaped, and subsequently migrated to Wood county, Virginia.

5. Minnie, born 28 September 1865, single.

The History of Winnebago County, Illinois, has cut of Hiram R. Enoch.
The third of Col. Enoch's daughters, Hannah, in 1786, wedded Thomas Prebble, a youth who had sailed down the Atlantic coast to the Mexican gulf, then ascended the Mississippi and Ohio rivers to Fort Pitt. Upon her marriage the father presented the bridal pair a patent or deed for a large tract of land on the Little Kenawha below the mouth of Hughes' river, then in Harrison, afterwards in Wood, now in Wirt county. They did not, however, settle upon the donated tract till about or a few years later than 1793. The Prebble family are sketched elsewhere in this volume, and were numerous.

At this period came Isaac to the same locality, and William to the mouth of the Kenawha river. The latter became one of the cabin holders at the "Point." A deed appears upon the land records, in which Henry Enoch and Elizabeth, his wife, owning in "Springville, now Newport," lots 4, 5 and 6, deed them to Stephen R. Wilson. April 6, 1801, he was one of the commissioners selected by the court of "Gentleman Justices to promote and receive subscriptions for the purpose of erecting public buildings at the mouth of the river, to be reported on at next sitting." His home, a cabin of logs, stood near Rifle Run, which passed into the river about where Juliana crossed First, formerly Kenawha street. William Enoch, 12 October, 1809, sells Caleb Bailey, in "Newport on Kenawha river, lot 20 feet south of Enoch's blacksmith shop toward the Court House, until it strikes the street laid off to run between the Court House and said Blacksmithshop, then up said drain and with last mentioned street to North part of the survey made for John Stokely of 60 acres." This conveyed the blacksmithshop, and houses and stable, shops, &c.

It is supposed he moved away from the county to near Indianapolis, Indiana, within a few years thereafter, as all trace in records and among the family of honored relations has been lost. A son, Hiram, is said to reside at Rock Island, Illinois.

Isaac was, in November, 1800, Lieutenant in Captain Rowell's company of the 1st Batallion of the Wood county militia. The court, 6 August, 1805, allowed him and John Sergeant to erect a mill and dam over the Kenawha river, "to be three and a half feet high, 15 feet wide, and 30 by 20 inches deep." He was deputy sheriff 3 June, 1806. February 4, 1810, he married. In 1811 he was licensed to keep an ordinary, and had a ferry, near his grist mill, over the Kenawha river, authorized by the Court, 28 September, 1807. On 4 December, 1809, he was allowed to erect upon his property, and over the same river at Lee's Riffle a dam for a mill site.

He married Amy Tracy, and their children were:

1. William, who married Sydney Lee, and died 4 November 1847.
5. Amy, who in 1840 married James Clash.
7. Lavina, who married 13 June, 1833, Elisha Hickman.

   3. Louisa, who married in 1844, Thomas Melvin.
   5. Clarinda, who 20 February 1848, wedded George Weese.
   6. Abraham, who married Jane ...........................................
      2. Dovener, who October 9 1873, married Catherine Devore.
         She aged 17, he 22.
ABRAHAM ENOCH,

One of the sons of Pioneer Isaac located near the banks of Hughes' river, a component stream of the Little Kenawha. His homestead is thus described in an advertisement during the oil era, by Capt. J. A. Payne, agent of the Highland Oil Company, who had purchased part of the tract:

"The Enoch tract farm, on South Forks Hughes' river, near Greenville, two miles from Newark, on Kenawha river, 18 miles from Parkersburg, 330 acres, 170 acres of bottom land under fine cultivation, balance in woods and grass; two orchards with peach, apple, and cherry trees; house 45 by 20 with a wing, two stories, meat and spring-house, and garden; also a tenant house with five rooms; Greenville built on part of the original farm."

He was a farmer, and served as Justice of the Peace for twenty-six years, and successfully held other local places of trust in Wirt county, after its formation and separation from Wood; and, in later years of life became a member, along with his genial wife, of the Presbyterian church, and served as elder in the same. In 1863 he removed to near Rochester, New York, but after ten years, in 1873, returned to his original location in then West Virginia.

He was born 20 January, 1804, and 14 October 1830 married Nancy Dent, daughter of John and Catherine (Herbert) Gibbens. She was born 12 November, 1805, and died 14 February, 1887, at Freeport. He died 16 November, 1881, aged 77 years and 10 months.

1. Isaac Lafayette, born 20 September 1831, who 14 October 1858 wedded Teresa Gale, daughter of John A. and Ann (Butcher) Vaughan. She born 11 January 1836. He has filled every office in his county, from road-overseer to legislator, and conducted all creditably and satisfactorily, and held office continually since he was twenty-one—a proof of the high estimation his fellow-citizens have entertained for him, as trustworthy and capable. He was county assessor for four terms; Justice of the Peace; Mayor of Elizabeth, the county seat; councilman of the town; president of his district school board; member of the West Virginia House of Delegate in 1872, and again in 1875. He was a notary public for years; also revaluer of real estate for Wirt county at census of 1880. He resides at Well's Dam, below Elizabeth, West Va. Their children are:

2. Martin Van Buren, born 30 December 1832, who 1 May 1856, wedded Mary Bayless. She was born 18 August 1836. At the age of 17 he was elected Captain in the militia, and so served till 1854, when he was chosen Colonel in command of the 171st regiment. At the outbreak of the civil war he was ordered by the Virginia authorities at Richmond to assemble his companies, and to retard or prevent the crossing of the Union forces into the South along the Ohio border. This order Colonel Enoch refused to obey, and resigned his commission. He was twice elected a member of the Board of Supervisors of the county and was appointed by the Board of Public Works to re-value realty in Wirt county. Is now in employ by the Government at Burnside, Philadelphia. His residence is Greencastle, West Virginia. Their children are:

General Buckner Fairfax.
FAIRFAX—BUCKNER.

Col. John Fairfax, descendant of the noted English family of the name, which furnished seven generations of Lords, a distant relative of the Lord Fairfax, of Virginia, was born 10 December 1762, and died 22 December 1843, in Preston county, Virginia. Fairfax meant fair hair.

He was at one time Superintendent of the Washington estate at Mt. Vernon, and a relative of its distinguished owner. He was of attractive appearance, in height over six feet, blue eyes, fair complexion, and dark hair. He served as Justice, Sheriff, and Colonel of the militia-regiment in Monongalia, and subsequently represented Preston county in the legislature. He wedded Mary, daughter of Samuel and Clarissa (Buckner) Byrne, of Prince William county, Virginia, by whom were born five children:

George William, who died young; William, who migrated to Missouri, and there died; John, who was killed in a steamer explosion on the Mississippi; Mary, who wedded Aquilla Martin, and whose descendants reside near Kingwood, West Virginia.

Buckner, the third son—known as General—named in honor of his maternal grand-father's family, was born 30 March 1798, and 30 March 1828, wedded Rebecca, daughter of James Parsons, of Romney, Virginia, and became prominent in the Monongalia-Preston section. He was Surveyor at the age of twenty; Member of the House of Delegates in 1837-8, in 1846-7, and in 1851; Justice of the Peace; and Brigadier General of 10th Brigade, 3d Division Virginia Militia, till its discontinuance. He died 30 March 1880. He was useful, kind, obliging, firm in purpose, and of unblemished reputation in private and public life.

William, the grand-father of General Buckner Fairfax, was a resident of Prince William county, Virginia, and his wife was named Elizabeth, by whom were three sons and six daughters. By will dated 6 October 1793, was given to his son, Hezekiah, 330 acres of land; to William 400, and to John 250 acres of his possessions. The daughters named are Ann Warder, Benedictine, Catherine Gaines, Elizabeth Pell, Esda Calvert, and Sarah. To his wife he devised four negroes: Genet, Quincy, Fanny and Libba.

BYRNE—FAIRFAX—BROWN.

About the year 1720 George Byrne, a man of some wealth and of good family, left Ireland, and located in Prince William county, Va. The name in all the records and by himself was spelled with only four letters, the final one, E, being added by the descendants, at an unknown period, and now universally used.

He was a practical surveyor, and the drawings and maps made by his pen, are still on file in the county clerk's office, and are finely executed. On his return from duty in running the lines of the then new town of Winchester, he was bitten by a mad dog, and died within a few days thereafter. His wife was named Lydia, and by her there were three children.

In 1740 George Byrne, a General Surveyor for Prince county, and his wife, Lydia, acknowledged a deed to certain lands, and had it placed on record.

In 1744, George Byrne and Lydia his wife gave bond, with Cuthbert Harrison as security, in the sum of £500 as guardians of William Brown, an orphan son of William Brown, late of Prince William county.

In 1766 Lydia conveyed her right of dower away, in a tract of land called "Spiller's Neck," on Occoquan waters, to her son, Samuel Byrne.

Elizabeth, who, married first a Buckner—it is supposed Bolivar. The husband was descended from a family possessing large landed estates in Caroline county the "Neck" of Virginia. From this branch of the name descended the Generals, Judges and Ministers so celebrated in war and peace—in the South, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Missouri and Louisiana. From this first marriage were born Anthony, Ann, and Clarissa, or Clary. Colonel Anthony, or John Anthony Buckner, of Prince William county, as his second wife, wedded Catherine (Herbert) Gibbens, and lived and died in Wood county, Virginia, in 1826.

Elizabeth Brown, formerly Widow Buckner, nee Byrne, 29 December 1783, made her will with these words: "Item. I give and bequeath unto my son Anthony Buckner, one negro girl named Esther, with all her increase to him and his heirs.

Item. I give and bequeath unto my daughter, Ann Cornwell, one negro woman named Juda, with all her future increase to her and her heirs.

Item. I give and bequeath unto my daughter, Clary Byrne, one negro named Hagar, with all her increase." This Clara Byrne was the wife of Samuel, and later on became the wife of Col. David Scott, of Monongalia. He was sheriff of that county in 1783, and John Fairfax in 1806.
Mary, who wedded George Ash, living and dying in Prince William county, with eight children as issue.

Samuel, who married his niece, daughter of Elizabeth and Bolivar (?) Buckner, and by her had seven children.

Peyton, who wedded Barbara Linn, migrated to the mouth of Salt Lick, on Little Kenawha river, and there died 11 May 1824. Col. Benjamin W. Byrne, who was State Superintendent of Free Schools for West Virginia, was a grandson. One of Peyton's sons was named Peyton Buckner.

Charles was Major of Militia, and long Clerk of Frederick county, dying in 1843.

Thomas, physician, married Rebecca Dorsey of Morgantown, was a member of Legislature from Monongalia, went to Missouri in 1820, and there died.

John was by occupation, a farmer, and died in Missouri.

Sarah, born 1768, who first married Thomas Bland, and by him had three children: John, Samuel and Thomas. Next she wedded Jacob Zinn, and by him were born five: Major William B., Charles, Clara, Permelia and Peyton.

Mary, about 1790, married Col. John Fairfax, from whom descended General Buckner Fairfax, of Terra Alta, Preston county, West Virginia, who died in 1880.

Elizabeth, wedded Archibald Anderson, on Little Kenawha, and had three daughters and a son, Samuel.

Anthony, or John Anthony Buckner, son of Elizabeth (Byrne) Buckner and (Bolivar) wedded a Seal. From this union were born Clarissa and Mary; the second marrying Abner Sanders, and the first wedding George, son of George Creel, Sr., who died near Davisville, Wood county, West Virginia.

Colonel Buckner, 1809, wedded Catherine, widow of John, son of Benjamin Gibbens, of English-Virginia ancestry.

About 1756, Elizabeth, widow of ... Buckner, wedded William, orphan son of William Brown, of Prince William county. He was born 1722; died in 1806. He was Captain under General Green, in the Revolution, twenty years after marriage. By this union were:

1. John, who was Clerk of the county of Prince William, 1805-8, wedded a Thorpe, and had three children:
   1. William.
   2. John, Jr.
   3. Mark.

2. Thomas, born 7 September 1760; wedded Nancy Ann Ash 20 October 1785, and died in Preston county, aged eighty-four. Their children were eight:
   1. Elizabeth.
   2. John Buckner, who wedded a Miss Morgan, and moved to Wayne county, Ohio.
   3. George.
   4. Lydia.
   5. Samuel Byrne.
   7. Mary Ann.
   8. Thomas F., who married Elizabeth Zinn, and died in Ritchie county, Virginia.

3. Lydia, who wedded Uriah Burns, and lived and died in Fauquier county, Virginia.

4. Mary Ann, who married Moses Tibbs, and moved to Indiana.
The distinguished Herbert family, so numerous near the Potomac, at Alexandria, and throughout Maryland, is supposed—as the tradition is—to have originally spelled their name Herabaugh, Herrabah, Herbah and Herbok.

Catherine Herbaugh, or Herbah, was of German extraction, born 20 June, 1782, near Moorefield, on the South Branch of the Potomac, in the ancient county of Hardy, Virginia.

She had several sisters and only one brother, Philip, who moved with his family, in 1797, to Brown county, O., nearly opposite then Limestone, now Maysville, Kentucky. No record is existing further, as all papers and books were lost by fire in the burning of the dwelling by Indians. Her father was of Teutonic descent and the mother of Anglo-Saxon blood.

About the year 1795, when under fourteen years of age, she married John Gibbens, and shortly afterwards with him emigrated West to near Wheeling, Ohio county, where their first child was born—and subsequently settled on the Little Kenawha river, near Stillwell. Afterwards the family moved up the stream higher, to Lee Creek more than a mile from the mouth, which in on the opposite side from Newark.

Here he lived upon the tract afterwards known as the "Dickv Timms" place, farming, hunting, fishing, till about August, 1807, when he was taken ill with the yellow jaundice, and died, leaving a widow of rare pioneer qualities, with six small children.

Within three years after Gibbens' death—the marriage license dates 4 January, 1809—his widow married Anthony Buckner, a widower older than herself, and they moved down to a farm where Claysville, now Davisville, stands; which settlement then contained only one grist mill—the Creel site—managed, and subsequently bought by Peyton Butcher—and a log dwelling house. Soon after, Buckner's grown daughters by a former wife, married, and their father purchased a tract of land in the dense woods, four miles above, on the North side of the Kenawha, and built thereon a new log house, and in the Fall moved into it, and began clearing out a farm, which afterwards was known as the "Buckner Estate." The children by this second marriage were eight, as named in the Buckner sketch.

Anthony Buckner, Sr., died in October, 1826; his widow died on the morning of April 19, 1875, aged 92 years, ten months and twenty-nine days. Ripe in years, and beloved of all, she passed away like the setting sun.

John Gibbens, her first husband, was buried in the Prebble graveyard, twelve miles up the Kenawha river; Anthony Buckner on the farm now owned by Gordon B. Gibbens, and called "Cool Spring Villa"; and Catherine, widow of both, on the hill of the Buckner farm, which faces the current of the Kenawha, and 'neath the forest trees. Here, also, repose the remains of her daughter, Louisa, or Eliza; and her son, Alexander, to whom the home tract and two-story frame fell.

Louisa Gibbens, was a member of the Methodist church, was pious, earnest, jovial, and devoted to her mother all her life long. She died 17 April 1878.

John Gibbens, the first husband of Catherine Herbah, was tall, six feet, weight averaged 155, was slender, dark hair, eyes grayish-blue, manner gentle but positive.

Anthony Buckner, her second husband, was in stature five feet, weight averaged 150 pounds, hair light in color, eyes dark brown, and voice deep and sonorous, even to brusqueness.

Catherine Herbah in height was about five feet, four inches, in weight 200 pounds, hair in youth black, eyes of blue, complexion fair. She was, in her younger days, athletic and graceful, and ever light of movement. Among pioneer neighbors she was considered the best dancer in the 'Bend.' She was nimble with loom and spinning-wheel, and from flax and wool, raised and produced upon the plantation, she manufactured garments for the ordinary wear of the family and servants. Many were the woolen socks and mittens, warm and enduring, she spun from the wool, and knit with her own hands, for children and grand-children; many the counterpanes, quilts and blankets, woven by her and stored in large piles, at the old homestead, in reserve for use or gifts to descendants at marriage. The old loom has passed into wreck, but one of the spinning-wheels she used nearly a hundred years ago, rests in the parlor of a grand-son of the Gibbens name, in the National Capital, prized as a family relic beyond expression.

Many were the incidents related to our young ears, of the pioneer dangers, perils and escapes from Indians and wild beasts, in which our dear, brave grand-mother had a part. Most of these have passed from memory, a few only have left their tracings. The Herbah home in the East was destroyed by fire, and the plantation in the wilderness of Wood county, on the Kenawha river front, not far from the present over-looking burial ground was the sight of an Indian camp, in the days of scouts and rangers. At this point once stood an old cabin, a stopping place in their hunting excursions along the Valley, from Shawnaese-towns in Ohio, to the settlements in the interior. Another of these rests or sites was near Newark.

On one occasion, while riding through the deep woods homeward, Grand-ma Buckner, then wife of John Gibbens, stated that she heard the howl, well-recognized, of a panther, the fiercest and stealthiest of forest foes. It seemed to be in the line of her proposed path. She knew the habits of the ferocious, velvet-footed animal was to watch upon a hill, or bluff, or high tree, over-looking its expected prey, thence to pounce upon it. There was no way to avoid or pass around by other route. So, spurring her horse, she passed on and forward, and heard its approach near on a hillside ahead. Just as she came in view of the supposed rendezvous, whence she believed it would make its spring, she cast behind from her shoulders a red woolen wrap, as a decoy, and caused her steed to dart forward, which he willingly did. While the panther, with glaring eyes, dazed by the bright colored garment, a moment paused to examine it, horse and rider had passed from the dense thicket into the open clearing, and were soon too far away for successful pursuit. The escape was marvelous, and its recital long years after seemed to thrill her heart, and afford her opportunity for expression of sincere gratitude for delivery from apparent death. The place of delivery and panther spring was long known in the settlement as "Aunt Katie’s Trap."

The panther scarcely ever came very close to the pioneer cabin, and avoided the clearing, generally keeping within the dense shaded thickets and along the narrow trails of other animals and man. The bear, wildcat and wolf ventured nearer.

Another instance of woman’s courage and adroitness, is worth relating here. Late one evening a fierce-looking bear, with rapid trot and hungry eyes, approached the cabin of Anthony Buckner on his Kenawha clearing. The Colonel was absent on some affair at a distance, and only the mother and small children were at home. The favorite dogs—useful protectors in primitive era—ran bruin up a large tree standing a few paces from the house. Grand-ma Buckner saw her opportunity, promptly took down the ever-ready rifle from its hickory rests over the door, and aiming the gun with cool caution and wonderful precision, brought the animal with a roll and a thump to the ground.
From danger to joy, the family suddenly increased their larder and their comforts. The skin of this bear was carefully kept, and often used as a snow-robe for sleigh rides in the long after winters, when the intelligent labors of Col. Buckner had opened and widened the paths into useful roads.

In our childhood hours, listening to the recital of such adventures, from the lips of Grand-father Butcher and Grand-ma Buckner, we in awe believed our ancestors real heroes and heroines. And they were to us, and they are in history. Constant watchfulness and deliberate coolness were the necessity and only safety of our progenitors. They were heroes as much as if they had braved the perils of warfare on the field of battle. Many of them did, and left their wives, junior sons and daughters to protect the home, whilst they marched under the leadership of Washington and his generals.

When the war proclamation of Emancipation from slavery was made, the Widow Buckner, familiarly known as "Aunt Katie" in all that section, told the house servants, Maria and Polly, that they were now free, and might go where they pleased; but both seemed anxious and dejected and begged to remain in the household, and in their old duties in the kitchen as long as an indulgent "mistress" should live. The request was granted and they remained till the death of their former owner, years afterward, faithful and happy. Maria was buried in the Buckner enclosure. Polly went into the service of Isaac L. Enoch, at Newark, in whose employ two girls, descendants, still remain. Their mother, Polly, was buried at Elizabeth.
I seem now, as we come down in buggy the tree-shaded road, over the hill near the old Buckner homestead, to see the straight, plump form of our grand-mother, standing on the porch, looking hillward, expecting soon to welcome her son, Jefferson, in one of his frequent visits from the city, twelve miles away. Nearer, leisurely and cautiously, lest we overturn our conveyance, we wind down to the foot of the hill, and a huge gateway to the lane near the antique house, almost touches the horse's head, who knows just where to stop. I alight, swing it open with eager hands, and we drive up close to the garden fence and the huge stair-step block of tree-stumps. Ah! mother like, she shows her gladness in voice, eyes, in warm caresses. Was ever voice so melodious, so soft, so winning? Did she love to have us there? Why, of course. Wasn't she our grand-mother, and we her pets?

Short of stature, broad and benevolent face, a huge but becoming sun-bonnet cast over her sweet face, one would scarcely believe she ever had the trials of pioneer life, and bereavement. Didn't she find us the choicest apples, peaches, cherries, and the most delicious sugar-maple eggs saved for us? Didn't she load the buggy, homeward destined, with abundance of all things nice, from orchard, pantry and buttery, not forgetting a speckled chicken, or a blinking white shoat, for our own dear selves, and our very own? Didn't she have Uncle Bush take us to the woods and cut us an armful of canes and shinny clubs to use with our rocker skates next Winter on the ponds near Parkersburg? Sweet memories! golden hours! Happy grandma! happier proteges.
"An English genealogical work, entitled, A Royal Descent, contains" says a writer in the Richmond Critic, of 1890, "the predigree of a family of Buckner's, but the volume could not be found in the library of the British Museum."

Among English representatives of the name were: Rev. William Buckner, chaplain to Archbishop of Canterbury, who in 1632, was fined and imprisoned for licensing the printing of Prynne's Historio—Matrix; Thomas Buckner, Alderman of London, whose daughter married Rowland Hill (she dying in 1634) and was grand-mother of Chief Justice Holt; John Buckner, a royalist in civil wars, whose property was confiscated by Parliament, but who was allowed to make composition, and Admiral Buckner, who died in 1815.

All of the name in Virginia, the South and the West, are believed to be descended from John Buckner, (3) whose first grant of land was in Gloucester in 1667, and who in 1669 had in the same county another 1000 acres granted, in which his name appears as a headlight, showing that he was the immigrant. He had a grant in old Rappahannock, (which included the present counties of Caroline, Essex and others) in 1671; was a vestryman of Petesworth Parish in 1677, and possibly was the John Buckner who was Clerk in 1683, though the latter may have been his son."

William Buckner was a member of the House of Burgesses, under King William the Third, and was on the Committee to revise all laws of the "Ancient Colony and Dominion of Virginia," in 1699.

In the records of Stafford county, Virginia, appears; Phillip Buckner 21 November 1699 wills to his two sons, Robert and Andrew, and to his cousin, William Buckner, of York, and to his cousin, John Buckner, and his cousin, Thomas Buckner, certain lands and property."

In June 1708 appears: "Know all men by these presents, that I Anthony Buckner, doth covenant and agree to give to the Widow Ellis all of the Estate of Captain Ellis, deceased.

ANTHONY BUCKNER."

John Buckner, in 1752, makes his Will, and devises his property to his wife, Elizabeth, and his only child, Susannah. Susannah died in 1755, and 9 April 1756 Elizabeth Buckner made deed for the Estate to one Dade.

Anthony Buckner, it may be a direct ancestor, patented land on the South side of the Rappahannock in 1672-3. Richard, son of John Buckner, as the patent states, had a grant on the same side of the same river in old Rappahannock county in 1684. He was the ancestor of the Buckners of Caroline and Fauquier, and it is believed of most of those in the West and South.

"The land granted included 'The Neck'—in the present Caroline—an Estate which was in possession of the family until after the war, and the original grant was long preserved."

The name is a cherished and historic one in the South, in Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina, Missouri, as well as in Louisiana; and those who bore it have filled prominent places in war, in legislation, and in the church.

The Woodfords and Buckners of Virginia intermarried. John Thomas Woodford, born August 1812, wedded Elizabeth H. Buckner; a sister, Lucy, born 31 March 1821, married William T. Buckner; and another sister, Sallie, born 1825, wedded William Buckner, and their descendants still live in Bourbon county, Kentucky.

Before the formation of Wood county—just how many years cannot now be stated—Colonel Anthony, or John Anthony Buckner, as many entitled him, a widower with two daughters, Clara and Mary, moved west of the Allegheny slopes. He was then immediately from Hardy, and prior to that from Prince William county, Virginia. He was born 15 July 1748, and descended from, and had in a marked degree, the characteristics of the Buckners of the landed plantations of "The Neck," and was connected with the Lee, Fitzhugh, Fairfax, and Washington families of the Potomac colonies.

In the era of forests, savages and carnivorous animals, he began his home near the banks of the Little Kenawha river within the territory of Wood county. oner had acted, should be hung." He was further asked: "Did you not say that you would give five pounds for Col. Burr's head?"

Looking keenly at the prisoner, he said: "Yes, by G—d, and I'll do it yet."

The silence for a moment was painful. You might have heard a pin drop. As he poured out these emphatic, but not very elegant or courteous words, his piercing brown eyes, that seemed to look through one, flashed fire upon the marbelized face of the distinguished defendant, but no order of contempt therefor issued against him.

He and his son-in-law, George Creel, Jr., had, the night before going to the Island, sat during all its December hours, moulding bullets for the volunteer militia.

Of course, at the instance of the accused, who was also his own counsel, Buckner was rejected from the panel.

He was recorded 2 July 1810 as a grand juror, and 5 1816 as foreman of the County's Inquisitorial body. To this responsible duty he was often assigned. By act of 24 January 1814, in the final location of a site for the Judicial Seat of Wood county, he was appointed, with others, to contract for building a new court house, and to sell the old public property.

About the year 1809, he married as his second wife, Catherine, widow of John Gibbens, and resided on a farm where Davisville now stands. Soon after he purchased a tract of uncleared land four miles above on the North side of Little Kenawha river, raised a log cabin, moved into it, and began felling and clearing away the heavy trees, vines and undergrowth.

By his first marriage we have record of only two daughters, and by his last alliance of eight children, three of whom are at this date living. Of the first marriage were born:

1. Mary, born about 1777, who in .......... married Abner Saunders, of Caroline county, Virginia, and by him had six children. Sketch at close of Buckner division.

2. Clara, born 8 January 1779, who in 1798 married George Creel, Jr., son of George, Sr., a grand-son of the elder David Creel. He was born 21 December 1778, and died in May, 1807. Clara Buckner was very tall, with mild disposition, and the pride characteristic of her Fairfax ancestry. She died 9 March 1858, and was buried in the old Creel graveyard near Davisville, beside her second husband, Jeptha Kincheloe. Their children were:

1. John Buckner—usually called Colonel—born in 1799, who wedded first, Ann W., daughter of Daniel Kincheloe, Sr., 20 January 1823, who died 26 February 1824. He died 10 January 1838, and the second wife in April 1864. From the first union was born a son, George, who died in early manhood. Secondly, 5 April 1827 he married a cousin, Permelia A. Jane, daughter of Abner Saund-rs. By her were four children:
   2. Laura M., who 16 April 1861, wedded Charles B. Rockhold.

2. Bushrod Washington, born 1804, who died in January 1875. He first 3 May 1832, wedded Aleinda R., daughter of Robert Kincheloe, and by her had five sons and five daughters. 2d in 1859, he married Rebecca Thomas, by whom were two children. First wife born 19 June 1809; died 3 March 1854. Second wife died in 1854. By first wife were:

   1. George R., born 9 July 1833, who 21 March 1879, wedded Catherine Harris. She died 16 July 1895, aged 45 years. Postoffice, Davierville, West Virginia. Children are:
      1. Richard Lee, born 21 March 1880; died 17 June 1886.
      2. George R., Jr., born 2 October 1881.
      4. Andrew Jackson, born 10 April 1885; died 24 June 1886.
      5. Lewis Kincheloe, born 14 October 1886.

   2. Lucy F., born 16 October, 1835, wedded 21 July 1853 Marcellus Clark. He was born 1 September 1829; was in the Mexican war, member of Capt. Dan Drake Henry's com-

Colonel Buckner was a slave-holder and loved farming and hunting; was kind of heart but austere of manner, strong in his integrity and convictions of right, and rather small of stature.

While in Prince William County he sold in 1785 one negro girl to a neighbor, Ringo, and in 1787 sold another, indicating his migration West at or near that period.

In Will Book 3, Page 46, February Term, 1827, is found a report to the court of an appraisement of the estate by John Barnett, Thomas Pribble and Samuel Butcher, appraisers, which foots up as value of personal property, other than slaves, $1,711, and of slaves then owned as follows:

1 negro woman, Edna. value........ $ 100 00
1 " " " Esther. " "........... 180 00

In 1822 he agreed with his step-son, Jefferson Gibbens, to give him one-sixth of all farm products for his super-vision and culture of the home place.

In a suit thereafter, in 1824, for services, he states that the farm yielded an average of

- 6,000 bushels of Wheat
- 6,000 " " Rye
- 6,000 " " Corn
- 6,000 " " Potatoes
- 6,000 pounds " Tobacco

In stating an account, J. Gibbens itemizes:

ABNER SAUNDERS.

Two brothers of the Saunders name, Nimrod and Abner, who came to the Wood county frontier at the dawn of the century, were of old Welch stock on the mother’s side, that had dwelt on Virginia soil since the Protectorate. On the paternal side they claim descent from the celebrated Indian Chief, Powhattan, whose blood coursed through the veins of historic Pocahontas. The uncles and elder brothers fought under Washington. Abner resided upon a farm opposite Newark, named “Cool Spring;” was born in Caroline county, Virginia, in 1771, and died 3 April 1838. He married Mary, daughter of Col. Anthony Buckner. She was born about 1777, and died 8 April 1862. He was buried at Claysville, and she at Newark, West Virginia.

Their children were:

1. Gustavus Buckner, born .......................... who 23 December 1824 married Mary, daughter of James Foley. She died without issue, and 19 Feb’ry 1835 he wedded Elizabeth Crook, daughter of Allen Davis. By her was an infant, dying 21 June 1838. He died in 1875, and she moved to Lafayette, Mo., among relatives.
2. Parmelia A. Jane, born ... who 5 April 1827, as a second wife, married Col. John Buckner Creel. His first wife was Ann W. Kincheloe, married 20 January 1823, and by her one son was born, George W., who died in 1850. He died 10 January 1838; she died 26 February 1824. His second wife died in April 1864. The children by her were:

2. Laura M., born 13 October 1829, who 16 April 1851 married Charles B. Rockhold. She died 12 August 1894. Their children are:

"NOT BY FORCE, BUT BY GOOD WILL."
SAMUEL BUTCHER, Sr.

It is more than probable that this patronymic was Boocher or Beaucher, and Boutcher, and even Beecher, and finally it has come down to us, Butcher. An old deed for land in Harrison county, Virginia, has the same individual name written both Boocher and Butcher.

The French, "BeauCher," made it signify splendid affair and in forestry the meaning is Beech-wood. One of the characteristics of those pioneers who bore the name this side the mountains, is certainly hardiness, combined with durability, firmness, tenacity.

As the crest of one branch in Father-land, was used "an owl," and underneath the motto, "not by force, but by good will;" whilst another division of the family had as its insignia, "an oak-slip, acorned;" another, used also by Martin and Mackay, was "a lion passant, gu., in dexter paw a crescent of silver;" and the Salisbury-Wilts branch used a "grey hound, sitting, of silver with collar of gold."

Rev. Jonathan Boucher was born in 1738 in Cumberland county, Virginia; taught school in Port Royal, Caroline county, and was connected with the Carrs and Addisons, of Maryland. He went to that colony and was appointed by Sir Robert Eden, Govenor, as an Episcopal clergyman, to the rectory of St Ann, Annapolis. While there residing in July 1771, he became tutor to John Parke Curtis, son of Mrs. General Washington by her former marriage. When the Revolution broke out he went to England, and never returned. A volume of able sermons, preached in America, was there published and warmly commended.

The ancestors of Samuel Butcher, the elder—and first of four of the name—came from England. It is not certainly known in what year or from what section of the British Island. Yet it is recorded that a John Boutcher came to America, from Hartford, England, before 1668; for his daughter, Ann, 17 July 1668, wedded, in New Jersey, Vincent Rougmon (or Runyon), of Poitiers, France.

John Butcher, of Alexandria, Virginia, and Ann Evans, of Philadelphia, Pa., were married at the house of Mr. Powell, in Arch street, 30 October 1770, by Rev. Morgan Edwards.

Robert Butcher, in 1792, was a spy for three months and eighteen days on the frontiers of Virginia, as appears from the rolls of William Neil Muster-master.

Gasper Butcher, as a private, served three years in the infantry, Illinois regiment and Western army, and was declared entitled to bounty land in Virginia.

William Butcher was on the Maryland rolls as private in Montgomery's Infantry of the Revolution; was on the pension rolls 10 April 1822, and died 20 October 1825.

The first Samuel Butcher, from which our record begins, settled in Colonial days in Pennsylvania. The manuscript roll of Captain Cooke's company of 13 July, 1756, on file in the State Department at Washington, states that "at the age of twenty-four he enlisted, 10 January 1755, in Amelia County, Virginia; that he was 5 feet 7 inches tall, a planter, sandy hair, fair complexion, freckled and round-shouldered." This would make him as born in 1751.

From near Lancaster, Penn., leaving behind him "John Sr., and Samuel Butcher, Jr.," he migrated to near Bloomfield, in Loudon county, Virginia, then Prince William and afterward Fairfax, under the shadows of the Blue Ridge mountains, not far from where the old Baptist meeting-house, "Ebenezer," and the burial ground beside it, of two acres, and donated and endowed by his munificence, still remain, and bear the Butcher name, among an honorable but remotely scattered posterity.

Later, the congregation of Ebenezer divided into the new and old schools, and the old held on to the original stone building, and locked the other out. So the latter erected another and larger frame upon the same two acres.

Samuel, the first, married Susannah ....... ... One of the sons, Samuel, second, moved to Fauquier and then to Randolph county, and built a mill on his extensive acreage seven miles below Beverly, on the old Grimes farm, where Elkins now stands. In the War of the Revolution he and his friend, the elder Henry Peadro, were active against the mother country, England. During the struggle he was detailed from his regiment and company to serve as wagon master. The Indians still frequented their hunting grounds near the clearings.

The father, Samuel first, had seven children, and John, the eighth, as follows:

1—John, who wedded Susannah Lewis.
2—Susannah, who wedded James Grady.
3—Mary, who wedded Benjamin Overfield.
4—Elsa, who wedded John Pierce.
5—Hannah, who wedded Jenkins Phillips.
6—Elizabeth, who wedded John Buskin.
7—Samuel, Jr., (2d), who wedded Hannah Drake.
8—Jane, who wedded Joseph Hickman.

COLLATERAL ADDENDA.

1...Once owned 250 acres, a part of the "White Hall" farm. This paternal tract lies between two county roads, is a mile wide and a half mile long, and the boundary fences were of white flint and durable lime-stone. The dwelling upon it was burned in 1867. He died without issue.

The will of Abraham Lewis, a Loudon county pioneer, dated 12 February.
His will, with its early Virginia wording, reads:

WILL OF SAMUEL BUTCHER, Sr.

In the name of God, Amen, the twelfth day of September, Anno Domini, 1769, Samuel Butcher, of the Parish of Cameron, County of London and Colony of Virginia, farmer, being very sick and weak in body, but of perfect mind and memory, Thanks be given to God: Calling unto mind the mortality of my body, and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to Die, do make and ordain this my last will and testament: That is to say, principally and first of all, I give and recommend my Soul into the hands of God that gave it: and my body I recomend to the earth, to be buried in decent Christian-like manner, at the discretion of my executors, nothing doubting that at the general resurrection I shall receive the same again by the mighty power of God: and, as touching such worldly estate wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me in this life, I give, demise and dispose of the same in the following manner and form:

Imprimis: I order and appoint Jenkins Phillips and Benjamin Overfelt to be my whole and sole Executors, to pay my funeral debts and costs, and also all other debts that is against my worldly estate.

Imprimis: I give and bequeath to Susanna, my dearly beloved wife, after my decease, the whole use of my plantation, on which I now live,

1812, names Rebekah as his wife, and their children as follows: "Isaac, to whom is given the Fulling mill; Jacob, James, Joseph and Abram, jr.; Nancy, Guy, Mary, Martha, Beck; and Susannah, to whom is devised 15 pounds; son Isaac and John Butcher, executors."

Susannah Butcher died before 14 September, 1831, and is then is recorded an inventory of her property.

In Deed Book B, page 317, appears sale of land by John Butcher to George William Fairfax.

2. He was born in 1747 and died 9 January, 1815; she was born in 1754 and died 20 February, 1818. Their remains rest in the stone-fenced enclosure of the Ebenezer church grant, situated about 7 miles from Romald Hill Station, Va. A son, Edward Butcher, who 21 May, 1809 married Sarah Taylor, became a noted physician in his day, and left three children: Sarah, born 15 August, 1821, who died 27 October, 1831; Dr. Francis T., who 17 June, 1834 wedded Jane Sereno Powell; and a sister, Maria, who married John C. Powell. Their descendants are all Baptists. The 5 daughters of Dr. James Grady were Susan, born in January, 1789, who married a Bean, and died 2 May, 1818; Elizabeth, who married a Sands, and in 1832 moved to Zanesville, O.; Mary Bean, born 12 October, 1795, who married Richard Chew, and died 30 January, 1841; Jane, who wedded Dr. Robert Chew, uncle of Gen. Preston Chew, of the Confederate service. (General Chew has a son, Col Robert P. Chew, in Jefferson county, W. Va.); and Urie, who died single, during the war.

3. Peter and Deborah Overfield, 16 May, 1818, deed to John H. Butler 57 1/4 acres in London county.

Benjamin Overfield had sons: Samuel, who moved to Harrison county; Peter, John and Hudson, who moved to Henderson county, Kentucky, along with Martin, their brother; Nancy, born in 1794, who married, as a second until my beloved son, Samuel Butcher, arrives at the age of 20 years, with all the stock she pleases to keep and the two negroes; and after Samuel arrives to 20, give her two cows, my brown mare, side saddle, and all the household and kitchen furniture, and the negroes to be sold, if she sees fit, in a 12 months after my demise, the money to be equally divided between her and seven children.

Item: I give to my well beloved son, Samuel Butcher, after he comes to the age of 21 years, the whole plantation that I now live upon, with all the undivided land that lies between John Butcher, Benjamin Overfelt, Jenkins Phillips, Susanna Butcher, and the lot which was laid out for Else Pierce, with four horses or mares not exceeding 8 years old, and gears, plows, hoes and irons, and all utensils of husbandry, with four cows and six sheep that his mother shall give him for the benefit of the place while he is under age.

Item: I give my eldest son, John Butcher, the sum of 20 pounds, current money of Virginia, to be paid him by my executors in one year after my demise, and I do cut him off from any other claim whatsoever from my estate, real or personal.

Item: I give to my well beloved daughter, Hannah Phillips, 170 acres joining the land of Peter Romine, Sr., to her heirs and their assigns forever.

Item: I give to my well beloved daughter, Elsa Pierce, that plantation that I have lately purchased of John Palmer, Sr., containing 235 acres:

wife, John Humphrey Butcher, a cousin, and died 7 August, 1834, Susan, who married a Richardson and had five sons, Achilles, Bushrod who died young, Joseph, Henry, and John, lawyer at Springfield, Mo.; Francis Marion; and Joshua, born 17 April, 1797, who 7 March, 1816 married Ann Bitzer, and died 4 October, 1834, leaving 2 daughters and 3 sons.

Martin C. Overfield, of Henderson county, Ky., sells to John H. Butcher, of Loudon county, Va., for $500, 9 acres in the latter locality, on which Benjamin and Mary Overfield lived and died before 1822, lot No. 4 in subdivision of lot 4, divided among the heirs of Martin Overfield, deceased. At that date, 1824, Harrison H. Grigsby was clerk of the county court of Henderson county, Ky. This was stated, as his "full share of the tract of land wherein his grandfather and grandmother lived and died."

A Mary Overfield, born 24 February, 1833, died 19 June, 1838.

4...If Elsa married John Pierce, then he was born 11 March, 1774 and died 25 October, 1842. In a London county deed book, 2 A's, page 312, 13 April, 1801, is stated Alice as wife of Griffith Pierce. This may be the "Elsa," daughter of Samuel Butcher.

5...Benjamin Philips was the father of Jenkins Phillips, and from his Will, 18 November, 1780, of record in London county, appears as his other children,—John Philips, a brother being named as executor—Asael, Samuel, Hume and Sarah. In Randolph county, about 1818, Benjamin Philips owned land near Eli Butcher.

7...Book G, pages 13 and 14, a deed of land is recorded from Samuel Butcher to his daughter, Elizabeth Buskin.
I give it to her and heirs born of her body; but if she shall leave no heirs at her death, then it is to be sold, the money to be equally divided between the rest of my children and wife, excepting my son John, and the cost of the law suit to be paid out of my estate: that she is to have it clear of all incumbrance.

Item: I give to my beloved daughter, Jane Butcher, 150 acres of land lying between the Baptist Meeting House and Thos. Lewelyn, to her and heirs, and their heirs and assigns forever. The same lot was laid out for Elsa Pierce; and, further, I do order that Lease land that I purchased from John Hendrickson be sold as soon as possible after my demise, by my executors, the money to be equally divided between my wife and seven children. John excepted.

Item: I give to my well beloved wife one bond of forty-two pounds, dated in the year 1765, from John Butcher, Sr., in Pennsylvania.

Item: I do order and give that one bond due from Samuel Butcher, Jr. in Pennsylvania, of 80 pounds, bearing date 1765, with one year's interest, to be equally divided among my seven children, as soon as my executors can get it after my demise; the two youngest children's part, Samuel and James, two pounds are to be put at interest till they come of age. Likewise, the interest of the 500 pounds due 20th of October next, to be equally divided between my seven children, the two youngest's part to put at interest, as before mentioned. Then the interest of the said 500 pounds I give to my well beloved wife, as long as she lives; then, after her death, I give it as followeth:

Item: I give my daughter, Elizabeth, 20 pounds, part of the 500 and the remainder of the 500 pounds to be equally divided between my seven children. John only excepted: Elizabeth to have her equal share besides the 20 pounds.

And I do hereby utterly disallow and disannul any former testaments, wills, legacies and bequests, and executors, by me in any way before named, willed or bequeathed. notifying and confirming this and no other to be my last will and testament.

E. BINNS. Clerk.

In the Autumnal days of brilliant October, 1894 when the sun and frost and season had decorated with dreamy magnificence the forests, led by perusal of the foregoing old wills, of record in the office of Loudon county at Leesburg, and imbued with a desire to view and foot-tread the Butcher Plantation—perhaps one of the oldest on American soil—a descendant of the Fourth generation from the elder Samuel, visited the spot but faintly outlined in its boundaries by the wording of the document. Taking train to Round Hill, on the Round Hill and Washington Railroad, and thence special conveyance of horse and buggy southward about seven miles, the locality was reached.

The original tract—plantation, as clearings or home acreage was then denominated—constituted over 1000 acres of finely located land near the base of the Blue Ridge Mountains, not far from the present village of Bloomfield, in the Parish of Cameron.

Here, about the middle of the Eighteenth century, one or two decades before the War for Independence of the Colonies, our male ancestor on the maternal side, reared his cabin from the wilderness growth, and carved out a home, and from year to year improved and cultivated its broad acres. He had served faithfully in the Indian wars, and was entitled to a share of the domain he had aided to protect in the colony of Virginia. Endowed with both patriotism, taste, energy and enthusiasm, he soon opened up to the sunshine many sloping meadows, planted, and in process of time matured, extensive orchards, substituted a durable stone mansion and out-laying buildings of the same material for barns, servants quarters, and attendants, erected magnificent stone walls, to fence in the extensive area, and to divide into numerous fields, enjoyed by himself and family the heritage of his efforts, advanced the educational and financial welfare of his neighbors, the settlers encouraged and liberally supported and endowed the church, and in the very prime of life passed away and left a meritorious example and heritage to his children. His principal ambition appears to have been to be "useful in his day and generation," and serve the Supreme Master in family and church. He and his wife were Baptists, as were most of his children, and were devout in creed and practice, and caused the erection of a house of worship and during life the sustenance of a religious Society still existing and worshipping upon the two acres donated to "Ebenezer" congregation. Within the two-acre enclosure, also fenced in by stone wall, are at present, in addition to the cemetery portion, the old church in its plain simplicity and excellent preservation, where sermons are delivered now on alternate Sabbaths. The ancient structure is about 25 by 35 to 40 feet, rectangular walls and arched roof, and doubtless appears as it did in the time of its completion. Quite near it has been erected a larger, loftier and more modern but frame church, worshipped in by the newer lights of Baptist faith, and not far away stands a school house in and out of whose doors flit the children of the neighborhood, taught regularly, six months of the year, by order of the Free School Board of the District. Ah! sad to relate, none of these little ones bear the Butcher name, few the names of any of the settlers of four generations ago. Passing through the gateway of the dividing fence, into the sky-roofed repository of the dead, and reading the inscriptions of the marble and stone memorials, not one designates the grave of the donor of the soil. One looks in vain, as he winds in and out of the sections, for even this grateful remembrance of Christian fidelity and church membership and activity. While modern, well-chiseled shafts mark and name the resting place of the immediate generations, there are numerous sunken graves with headstones of crumbling sand-stone and with no inscriptions or illegible ones. These, doubtless, are the silent reminders of an honorable ancestry. The church register of deaths may, if it has been so long preserved, show the day of demise and spot of burial for Samuel Butcher and his son John, but there was none living to point them out to a visiting descendant of the benefactor. Silently, in the mid-day of a glorious October, we stood near "Ebenezer Meeting House," glanced inquiringly yet with admiring awe upon the tree-mantled Blue Mountains, almost in front of us, emblematic of the Eternal, and the durability of the earthly, rock-ribbed creation, yet compelled to recognize the passing away of the generations of men, the nobler creation, and his disappearance from the legible records of succeeding generations.
Of the old homestead only interior-blackened, storm-beaten walls remain, with 5 chimneys touching the extending branches of old reverential oak and chesnut and hickory trees. The broad chimneys, wide walls and liberal areas indicate a substantial mansion in the olden time. After the close of the Civil War, in 1866 or 1867, accidental fire consumed the main building, leaving unharmed the servants quarters and outside structures. All of these are in good preservation, and some are occupied by ebon faced families who knew neither the Master or his slaves of the last century. The ownership of the diminished domain has passed into stranger hands, Henry Fadely of Leesburg being its present possessor.

After the death of the elder Samuel, which must have been not far from 1769, as that is date of his will, Samuel Jr., moved west of the mountains into Randolph county, and the eldest brother occupied the premises.

The situation chosen for the Butcher settlement was a knoll or summit and amid forest trees spared from the woodman’s axe, and near an incessant spring of water. Curbed in, this spring still remains, but use of its water has been abandoned. Near by still remain a few apple and cherry trees of the old orchard. Native trees group themselves here and there over the gently sloping meadows and fields. In the debris of the old stone walls, and beside the long line of well-kept fences are still found in abundance chips of white, red and shaded marble or quartz. The moss-covered sand-stone, which also enters largely into fencing walls, bears impress of the storms of a century and may be longer.

Standing on the old ancestral spot, I can almost imagine I see the curtain of a hundred and twenty-five years lifted. I seem to see the half hundred negro servants go in and out, and the Master riding over the fields directing the routine of the farm work, and the golden grain being mowed down with the rows of sable reapers, each fat and sleek, with sickle in hand, followed by the rakers and bundlers; then later in the Fall, the flails drop with monotonous music upon the barn-floors, or the merry huskers of corn, as they toss the corn-ears one way and the husks another. Or see the "black boys" with slow gait and chubby song, morning and evening, drive the plump cows to the milkmaids of lighter hue. I can almost hear the spinning wheel hum and the loom—indispensable necessities in pioneer era—rattle in its efforts to manufacture linsey-wolsey, jeans and woolen garments for family and retinue of servants. In adjacent fields I note groups of cattle and horses, and nearer countless savory chickens, and herds of geese—the source of immense leather beds and downy pillows—waddle up to the streamlet passing away from the pure spring.

Anon I hear merry music of festivity in the mansion, and in the quarters laughter and song. Then comes the angel of death and carries away one or another, and the shadows deepen.

Samuel Sr. of Indian war service passes into the silent land. The sons glow with ardor and patriotism as the smoke of an approaching struggle for American independence looms up. Under the banner of liberty they enlist and valorously serve till Peace brings a recognition.

In the subsequent peace era marriages ensue of daughters and sons. The great western wilderness on the Ohio and beyond invites migration and spreads the family. John remains on part of the plantation, and Samuel, the favorite of his father, departs first to Randolph county, where a portion of his family, years after, remain, and he and son Thomas pass on and locate on the Little Kanawha, where they spend the remainder of their days, and where descendants of the name and blood hold places in public esteem, and display the hardiness and generosity of their ancestors.

From visions of the past into the realities of the present, I awaken, and lifting my feet from the soil once trodden by ancestors four generations ago a steed of muscle and blood returns me to the habitations and pursuits of active life.

Samuel, second, was born 28 Mar. 1756, and died in Wood County, Va., 2nd. May 1847, aged 92 years, one month and 5 days. He wedded Hannah, daughter of Thomas and Euree (Humphrey) Drake, a collateral relation, it is traditionally said, of Sir Francis, the great rover, millionaire and admiral. Her father came from Wales, and she was born 16th Aug., 1761, and died 2nd. Feb., 1844, aged 83 years, 4 months and 17 days. They were buried in the Kincheloe-Vandiver graveyard, 'neath the primitive and beautiful cedars, which gave this plantation the title, far and near among the gentry of that day, of "Cedar Grove."

He was also in the Revolutionary War; was brave, patriotic even in his extreme youth, and sensitively proud. In the distribution of land bounties, the young government limited it's land-grants to soldiers, who would swear that their earthly possessions were not over $5000. This clause so offended Butcher that he declared, "it his country or it's officials, valued lives and services by dollars, and because he happened by thrift and economy to possess, long years after danger, over the 5000 amount, would grant no pensionary reward, his children should never accept any gratuity whatever afterwards."

He once owned land at Harper's Ferry, as a young man after his military services in the war for Independance.

To Samuel Butcher, 23rd. Sept. 1799, William Cleaver deeds 175 acres of land in Randolph, a part of 1000 acres survey by military warrant granted to James Walker, for services under the King of Great Britain, and on the west side of Tygart's Valley river, near the mouth of Leading Creek, with houses, buildings and orchard.

On the 23rd. of June 1800, Cornelius Westfall and wife Elizabeth deeded to Samuel Butcher 97 acres of land on Tygart's Valley River, for the sum of 150 dollars.
On the first of July 1815, Samuel Butcher, of Wood County, for the consideration of 1700 dollars, deeds to Levi Ward, two tracts of 175 and 90 acres on the west side of Tygart’s Valley River, near the mouth of Leading Creek.

Earlier than 1800, Samuel, Second, located on a large tract of land in the Bend of the Little Kenawha river, opposite the mouth of Walker’s creek in Wood county, Virginia, then Harrison, where a tree marking the boundary of his purchase, stood a few years ago. The county records show that he purchased land of the elder Thompson Leach, who obtained from Virginia by a Treasury Warrant.

He had ferry-right over the Kenawha River, from his clearing or plantation. He was a slaveholder, of indulgent nature, and owned about a dozen slaves, and was a hunter, as well as pioneer farmer. From the Bend tract he moved in old age to Fountain Springs, the inheritance in after years of his son Thomas. When age and febleness crept on he and his devoted companion made their home, first with their son, Thomas, at the old homestead, then went to dwell with his son-in-law Atwell D. Vaughan, on Stillwell, where the aged pioneer, husband and wife died. For many years prior to his decease he was blind, and used a cane to call any one to his side, by knocking upon the floor.

His Will, Book 4 page 50, is recorded the 18th of June 1844, and connected with devise to his daughter Susan, the wording reads: “With slave, Melvina, who shall be hers till 25 years old, then my Executor to obtain and furnish her proper freedom papers, at expense of my son-in-law, Atwell D. Vaughan; but if said slave run away or desert service of my daughter before she is 25 years of age, and be retaken, she shall not be entitled to freedom until she is 30 years old, at which time she shall be furnished with freedom papers.

RELIGIOUS DEVOTION.

THIS INDENTURE, made the 16th day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty four, between Samuel Butcher, of Wood County, State of Virginia, of the first; and John II. Butcher and Edward B. Grady, of the County of London and State aforesaid of the second part.

WITNESSETH, that whereas Samuel Butcher is vested with the legal right and title in an to a certain lot of land in the said County of London, on which the house called the Ebenezer meeting house now stands which was devised to him by his Father Samuel Butcher, dec'd, and embraced in a larger tract, as will more fully appear by reference had to the Will of said Samuel Butcher dec'd, now on record, which lot of land was intended by the said Samuel Butcher as a place of Worship for the Baptist denomination or Society in the neighborhood, the use of which Lot, together with the house and improvements thereon, he the said Samuel Butcher is desirous to secure to the said Baptist Denomination or Society. Now this Indenture further Witnesseth, that the said Samuel Butcher, as well for and in consideration of the premises, as the further consideration of one dollar to him in hand paid by the said John II. Butcher and Edward B. Grady, the receipt whereof he doth hereby acknowledge, he the said Samuel Butcher hath granted, bargain'd, sold, alien'd, released and confirmed, and by these presents doth grant, bargain, sell, alien, release and confirm unto the said John II. Butcher and Edward B. Grady Trustees herein appointed, and for the use and purposes hereinafter mentioned, a certain Lot or parcel of Land in the County of London aforesaid, on which the house called the Ebenezer Meeting house, now Stands, and bounded as follows: Beginning at a white oak corner to the tract sold by the said Samuel Butcher to Samuel Torbert, thence, according to the deed made to said Torbert, N. 17 3/4 degree W. 20 poles to two small black oaks, another corner of said Torbert, thence S. 87 E. 16 poles to a black oak, another corner of said Torbert, thence S. 17 E. 20 poles to a black oak, another corner of said Torbert, thence N. 87 W. 16 poles to the Beginning, containing two acres of Land, together with all and singular the premises and appurtenances unto the same belonging or in anywise appertaining. To Have and To Hold the said hereby granted Lot of Land with the appurtenances unto the said John II. Butcher and Edward B. Grady or their assigns, or the survivors of them, or successors of them or his or their assigns, forever. And the said Samuel Butcher for himself, his heirs, Executors administrators, the said hereby granted Lot of Land with the appurtenances unto the said John II. Butcher and Edward B. Grady or their assigns, or the survivor of them or their Successors or Successor or their assigns, free from the claim and demand of himself and themselves, and from the claim and demand of all and every other person or persons whatsoever, shall, will and do warrant and forever defend by these presents: Upon trust. Nevertheless, and for the uses and purposes hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, the said Trustees and their Successors shall hold the said property herein conveyed as a place of Worship for the Baptist Society in the Neighborhood of the same, and inasmuch as difference of sentiment amongst the Baptists, have arisen and may arise, which ought not to be cause of separation between Brethren, it is not intended that one party so differing in sentiment shall use and enjoy the property herein conveyed to the exclusion of the other party, but the said Trustees are by these presents hereby authorised and Empowered to permit any party of Baptists whom they may consider of good order and good Standing in the Society, to use and enjoy the said property for the purpose of Worship, provided that no party shall have the exclusive privilege of the house more than two Lords days in the month: and to the intent that the said Baptist Society may thus, and forever enjoy the use and privilege of the same: The said John H. Butcher and Edward B. Grady are hereby appointed trustees, with full power to keep alive and in existence the Trusteeship, by filling vacancies which may occur by death, removal, resignation or disability of either of the Trustees hereby appointed or which hereafter be appointed, hereby giving the survivor in the event of any vacancy so occurring, by either of the aforesaid causes, full power to fill such vacancy by any person, he, the survivor may think proper to appoint thereto, and the person so appointed to fill such vacancy, shall exercise the same power and authority, that the two Trustees herein appointed have, under this Indenture.

In witness whereof the said Samuel Butcher has hereunto set his hand and affixed his seal the day and year first before written.

SIGNED, SEALED AND DELIVERED IN THE PRESENCE OF:

Wood County to wit:

We, H. D. THOMAS DRAKE, SR.

This branch of a noted family migrated from Bucks county Pennsylvania, to Loudon in Virginia, in early day. The farm was not far from Snicker's Gap, on Beaver's Dam Creek. It was said traditionally that they came from England, and were related of course laterally, to the celebrated Sir Francis, a millionaire sea-captain.

This tradition, impressed upon each of at least six generations in Virginia, has grown into an assumed fact, and induced repeated associations of descendents and connections to cause examinations of county and family records, far and wide this side the Atlantic, for substantial tracings and proof of genealogical heritage.

Thirty years ago the Wood County connections, Butchers, Peadros, Hopkins, Timms, Leonards and others, sent into New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania, a representative to search files public and private, to discover, if might be, threads to lead to the Emigrant Ancestor, and establish lineal relationship with the Great Admiral and the Fortune supposed to await lawful heirs. Nothing of advantage was reached in the research, beyond connecting the Humphreys, Drakes and Butchers of Virginia with each other.

Thomas Drake, Senior, and two brothers, so it is stated by a descendant, came over from England and settled in Pennsylvania, near Philadelphia. They were brothers of one Sir Francis Drake, and Elizabeth Hays claims she had in possession Sir Francis pocket-book and spectacles. Thence Thomas Drake and Eurah Humphrey, and her father, and a nephew of Eurah Drake (his wife) and Mr. Greyson, came to Virginia and settled together near the foot of the Blue Ridge, not far from Bloomfield. There are many Drakes in New Jersey and a town in that State is named 'Drakeville'.

Two hundred or more years ago the two principal divisions of the name in England were those of Devonshire and Yorkshire. The arms of both were the same, while the crests differed. At what period the first of the name came into Britain is not known nor from what portion of the Continent they emigrated. It is historically stated that families of the name made their appearance at the beginning of the twelfth century. The earliest mentioned in English records is in 1272. A "history of the low countries printed in 1582, mentions "les maisons et families tres noble Drace." And still more remote in Germany are the Drakinborchs, that is, "Drakes of the fortress." So in Ireland, the first is found at Drakerath, that is Drake's Fort.

The English family of Drake from which Sir Francis was descended was a Devonshire division. He had several sons. Francis became a seaman and was under the tutelage and guidance of Hawkins, a kinsman. When he became experienced he took command of vessels and went out on voyages of his own. He was a law-abiding Englishman, honored by his Sovereign, Elizabeth, who dined with him on board his ship, on the 6th of April 1593. He presented her with a service of gold for her table.

Sir Francis Drake was born in 1545; was buried at sea off Puerto Cabello, in a leaden coffin. He married the daughter of Sir George Sydenham of Combe, Sydenham, Devonshire. Settlement after marriage was dated 25 August 1595. He left no issue. A brother, Thomas, married and had a daughter Elizabeth, who wedded John Bamptylde. Thomas died 4 April 1606, and his son Francis represented Devon County in Parliament, and was elevated to Baronet in 1622. He was twice married. His first wife left no issue. His second wife had five sons: Francis, Thomas, William, Joseph and—. His last marriage settlement was dated 17 January 1627. His son, Thomas, married Susan, daughter of Willion Crimes of Buckland Crimes; settlement dated 21 July 1641. Their son, Francis Drake, wedded three times. By the two first he had only daughters. Thirdly, he married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir Henry Polaxfen of Nutwell Court, Devon County. Settlement was dated 17 February 1689. He died in 1714. His son, Francis Henry Drake—the fifth Sir Francis—married Annie, daughter of Samuel Heathcote of Hensly Haunts. He had sons: (1) Francis Henry, born 26 August 1722, who died unmarried, 19 July 1794. (2) Francis William, who became Vice Admiral of the Red. He married and left daughters only; (3) Francis Samuel, who was rear-admiral in Rodney's fleet. He was created Baronet, 12 August 1782, and died without issue in 1789. His sister, Annie Polaxfen Drake married George Augustus Elliott—1st Lord Heathfield—and had two children: Francis Augustus Elliott—2d Lord Heathfield—, who died unmarried. His sister, Annie Elliott married John Troyton Fuller; issue six sons. The third one, Thomas Troyton Fuller assumed the additional sur names and arms of Elliott and Drake, but died without children. His brother, Rose Henry Fuller, Capt., in the Royal Navy, married Margaret, daughter of the late Robert Sheffield, Baronet, and had issue: Francis George Augustus Fuller, who was born 24, December 1837; married Elenora Halford, and has a daughter married.

It is stated that just here and by the Fuller line the Drake estate is held in England, inherited by the female line, though entailed to the male issue. When the Francis Drake who wedded thrice had only daughters and before he had male issue, it is stated that he put the property in trust for them. He died in 1714, and Annie Polaxfen Drake was the only one of the Drake name who left heirs. Her son died, and the daughter married Elliott, and there the Drake named passed away in England, and the Fullers assume it. There have been two concerted and influential efforts to reach it, and many unsystematic researches, even among the Butcher connections, but all have failed to bridge the chasm from this to foreign shores.

An old American ancestor, Richard Drake, who may have been directly paternal to the Thomas Drake Senior of the Blue Ridge branch, came to Virginia before 1731, as early perhaps as 1710. Jemima Drake was there in 1694. Richard Drake lived and died in Southampton County, Virginia. There was a John William and a Thomas Drake, living there too. Jemima may have been their mother.

Arms and Crests in Heraldic England.

The Shield is divided into quarters; the first and fourth are for Drake: Sable (the dark) with a fesse wavy (of white or silver) between two pole-stars (white or silver). It is upon the left hand quarter, and on the lower right hand quarter.

White or silver color signifies Innocence, Temperance, Hope. Sable signifies Gravity, Constancy, Grief for loss of friends.

Crest.

A ship under sail, passing around a terrestrial ball, drawn by a hand out of a Cloud; on an escroll, with the words, Auxillo Divino.

Arms of Elliott.

2d. division of Shield is gules (or red). The bend is yellow on it is a baten of azure color. On the chief (or blue part) the arms of Gibraltar; viz, two white (or silver) pillars and castle (white), from the gate hangs a golden key, under which is inscribed the wods, "Plus ultra".

Fuller Crest.

A Lion's head of white (or silver) issuing out of a Ducal Coronet, gules. Residence or seats in Devonshire, England of the Drake, Elliott and Fuller families: Nutwell Court, Buckland Abby, Sheafhayne House.
They may have been brothers, but no facts appear to prove when they emigrated or whence. Some believe from Pennsylvania, and others direct from English birth-land. As in England births and baptism and deaths were recorded carefully by a Herald, whose office and duty was to preserve all such facts for reference, it ought not, apparently, be difficult to find there in musty archives the Drake ancestry of the American descendants who fixed their homes on soil of the “Old Dominion.”

There was a Richard Drake mentioned in the Will of Sir Francis, Admiral. He died in 1604, and left a son, Francis. This latter Francis, who died in 1614, might have been the Father of Richard Drake of Virginia, as he lived there in 1713, but there exists in America no proof to establish this relationship, and yet in England must exist, in musty archives or locked repository, all evidence necessary to show where the Virginia Drakes came from and their lineal ancestry.

Richard Drake of Virginia had eight sons: Francis, the eldest, lived and died in Nash County, N. C. They all married and left sons and daughters, and their descendants are connected with various families in several of the Southern States—the Bentons, William, Summers, the Brocks and others of equal prominence.

Thomas Drake Senior from whom this sketch is begun, was a Presbyterian and his chosen life-companion a Baptist. He was born 13 July 1728, married about the year 1760, Eurah Humphrey. He died 25 July 1811; she born 1 Jan. 1739 and died 2 February 1817.

Thomas Drake Sr. of Loudon County, Va., 16 November 1819, deeds in trust to Abner Humphrey and Edward B. Grady, to secure payment of $2,099.30 to John Humphrey Butcher a tract of land, 64 acres and 39 poles, formerly owned in part by Martin Overfield and in part by Mary Overfield, “Beginning at a white oak on stony Knob, corner to Winn, thence to corner of Bruson.”
The Humphreys are still numerous in the vicinity of the old Butcher plantation.

David Humphrey and Thomas were brothers, and both Colonels in the Revolutionary War. Abner was son of David. Uriah, wife of Thomas Drake, was sister to Col. Thomas Humphrey, and Aid to Washington.

In Book W. page 132 of Loudon county records, appears a deed from Hester Ross to Thomas Drake, for 476 acres of land “adjoining those of his and Butchers and Richards,” the consideration being 340 pounds, date of conveyance is 1795.

Mr. Bean, as first wife, married a daughter of Abner Humphrey and niece of Grandmother Drake. Abner Humphrey—who with some descendants lies buried in the Ebenzer enclosure—was born 27 Oct. 1763 and died 17 Dec. 1824. Mary, his wife, was born 11 Sept. 1748 and died 11 March 1814. They had a daughter Hannah, who married Isaiah B. Beans, and who was born in 1789 and died in Baltimore 27 Nov. 1827; another, Nancy Urton, born in 1797, who died, 14 April 1816; a son Abner G. born 7 Sept. 1799 who died 23 Oct. 1824. Thomas G. Humphrey—perhaps another son—was born 6 April 1810; and died 16 August 1836. Jesse Humphrey was born 25 Sept. 1768 and died 1 Jan. 1815; Winey, his wife, was born 19 Jan. 1770 and died 6 March 1802. They had a daughter Letitia, born 8 July. 1792, who married John Walker, and died 4 April 1821. Thomas L. Humphrey—in 1895 in age 73 years—lives with his son William, upon a well-improved farm on the road to the Butcher plantations.

In the Butcher Church yard, near Bloomfield, are the remains of pioneer Chamblins, Richard, Gradys and Glasscocks.

The children of Thomas and Urie (Humphrey) Drake were 8:

BUTCHER-HART-HART

ELY BUTCHER.

THE RANDOLPH HOME.

Near the banks, on the east side, of historic Tygerts Valley river, located in pioneer era the Butchers, who emigrated from the ancestral home in London. From the Blue Ridge they passed to the shadows of the Allegheny range, Cheat ridges, in the days of bear, deer and panther. Mountain encircled Beverly, once almost entirely owned by the eldest son, is still the abode of a prominent branch of the descendants.

In the valley, at the foot of a hill, stands the dwelling of the Ely Butcher posterity. On part of the old acreage, in sight till destroyed by fire in 1896, stood the newly erected Court House, and the fair grounds. On one side of the homestead still appears an orchard, in front an extensive meadow with hay stacks rail-fenced. In front on the south side passes the road and in one corner of the yard beneath an oak tree stands the moss-lined, stone-curbed old well, from which comes dripping, pure, sweet water, delicious to weary traveler. In the rear, on hilltop, in a cluster of forest trees, is the family burial ground, scarce within view.
Ely Butcher.
where rest the remains of past generations, where are cut the inscriptions, "sacred to the memory of."

Southwest, beyond the elevations, in view, only a few miles distant, is Rich Mountain, where was fought one of the celebrated contests of the civil war.

About six miles north is the new town of Elkins, where Stephen B. Elkins has his palatial residence named "Hal liehurst" in honor of his wife, and adjoining which is the superb mansion of the father-in-law, ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, overlooking a wonderfully beautiful valley, stretching away forty miles toward blue-tinted peaks. Near this latter town was the plantation of Samuel Butcher, and the mill built upon what was known as the Grimes farm. The primitive mansion has long disappeared. Just where it stood is now impossible to determine, or who first purchased the acreage even the deed books fail to disclose to our casual research. Gone are the pioneer families of the settlement. Their descendants by inter-marriage may be seen here and there in the vicinity.

The Peadros, Colletts, Reeders, Trippletts, Kittles and similar family names, along with the Butcher one, still are bourne by the living of the vicinity.

During the war General McClellan had his headquarter encampment on the meadow levels, at end a little north of the house and between it and Files Creek; from the hills in the rear and over the house passed shots of the cannon aders occasionally. The acreage was stripped of rails, stock, fowls and edibles by the marauding soldiers. It fell a prey to the devastation of both armies.

As did the Butchers in Loudon county, so did the Peadros in Randolph set apart land for church purposes. Ely, eldest son of Samuel and Hannah (Drake) Butcher, resided and was born 15 August, 1779, in Barbour county, near Phillippi, and died 20 December, 1862.

Along with his father he built a mill on the banks of the stream, not far from the present town of Elkins. He was a man of force and enterprise, and alive to improvements to benefit the community in which he dwelt. He held by their choice, numerous local offices within the county. In 1815 he was Commissioner of Revenue; in 1816 a Justice of the Peace; also contractor for the erection of the new jail in 1817; and for years kept a hotel and was a prominent merchant, having large landed interests in town and farms near and upon the mountains.

By legislative act of 27 Feb, 1827 he was one of the commissioners to open books for subscription to the North-western Road Company. In 1834 he kept a ferry over Tyger's Valley river. Sept. 25 1841 he sold to the Justices of the county a lot on the east side of Walnut St. in Beverly, one fourth of an acre, "for purpose of building a Jail."

In 1832 a Postoffice existed at his plantation, called "Butcher's Ferry" in Barbour county, it was previously Wyatt's Ferry. He was commissioned its postmaster 19 Feb. 1831.

About, 1844 he built his home near Beverly, and there died honored and lamented. In an inclosure on lofty knoll near the homestead, shadowed by a huge chestnut tree, lie the remains of the dead of this division of the family.

This branch assert that the name was originally spelled in England Boutcher, and that time and convenience in free America caused the omission of the "o" in writing and spelling.

He was twice wedded, his first wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Edward and Nancy Hart, who was born in New Jersey, 11 March 1780, and married 27 Sept. 1804. She died 24 Oct. 1823.

His will in Book A, pages 248-49-50, reads:

In the name of God, amen. I, Ely Butcher, of the County of Randolph and State of Virginia, being of sound mind and disposing memory, do hereby revoke all former wills and testaments by me heretofore made, and declare the following as my last will and testament, that is to say:
Margaret (Hart) Butcher.
First, That all my just debts and funeral expenses be first paid out of the proceeds of my personal estate.

Second, I will and bequeath unto my son Ely B. Butcher, a bond for two thousand dollars which I hold against him, after deducting therefrom the amount of his account against me.

I also give and bequeath unto my said son, Ely B. Butcher, all the beds and other furniture which I leaned him.

Third, I will and bequeath unto my son, Fountain Butcher, to him and his heirs forever, all that part of the tract of land on which I now reside, adjoining Beverly, which lies westward of the following lines. To-wit:

Beginning at a stake or stone on John Stalnaker's line a short distance from the creek and near a large sugar in Stalnaker's field at a point in said Stalnaker's line where a straight line running from the road towards the creek with the ditch crosses said Stalnaker's line and running thence northwardly to the mouth of said ditch; thence with the middle of the road westwardly to where another ditch crosses the road; thence the same course to a stake a few rods west of a blackoak and in a line between the black and the next mentioned white oak, thence a straight line north-westerly to a white oak sapling, the division line between Earle's lines and me, and a few rods north of Earle's corner, containing about 50 acres. I also give and bequeath unto my said son, Fountain Butcher, 50 acres of wood-land to be taken off the land adjoining Allison Daniels, 50 acres beginning at a white oak line tree in the division between Allison Daniels 50 acres, and my land, and running north-westwardly above the Tavener Cabin far enough to make 50 acres, thence 70 E to the outline. I also will to the said Fountain Butcher one undivided half of a tract of 356 acres of land on the left hand fork of File's Creek, adjoining lands of Jacob Daniel's, also lot 2 of one thousand acres on Cheat River, and one undivided half of lots No. 15 of 175 acres, No. 18 of 817 acres and No. 22 of 592 acres on Greenbrier River. I also give unto my son Fountain Butcher all my houses and lots in Beverly, and the house and lot which I got of Wm. L. Callihan, but the foregoing bequests to the said Fountain Butcher are subject to this reservation, that he is to pay to my representative for the benefit of my estate the sum of $200.

Fourth, I also give and bequeath to my son Ely B. Butcher lot No. 3 of 1,000 acres of land on Cheat River, lot No. 13 of 672 acres on Cheat Mountain, also one undivided half of lot No. 25 of 889 acres on Greenbrier River.

Fifth, I give and bequeath unto my son Creed W. Butcher all the residue of the farm on which I now reside, not heretofore willed to Fountain Butcher, with the buildings and improvements thereon, and also the residue of the upper place next to Daniel's, after deducting the 50 acres of wood-land heretofore willed to Fountain Butcher, also all the farming utensils and carpenter tools, also my wagon and gears. I also give to my son Creed W. Butcher, the remaining half of the above mentioned tract of 35¢ acres of corn on the left hand fork of File’s Creek, also lot No. 1 of 1,000 acres on Cheat River, and lot No. 11 of 672 acres on Cheat Mountain, and one undivided half of lot No. 17 of 10,000 acres on Greenbrier.

Seventh, I will and bequeath to my wife, Margaret Butcher, two beds and bedding, two bedsteads, one set of chairs, one stand, one small falling-leaf table, one clock, and what cupboard furniture she wants out of which we have, and any other small articles of house-hold and kitchen furniture she may want out of which we have. I also will and bequeath unto my wife, Margaret Butcher during her natural life, the room now occupied by me as a bed room, being the corner room immediately over the cellar of the dwelling house now occupied by me, provided she uses and occupies the room to live in.

I also direct that my representatives, after the payment of debts and legacies, do loan out all the money belonging to my estate, and collect the interest annually and apply the interest to the support of my wife, Margaret Butcher, and that if the said interest shall be insufficient for that purpose that so much of the principal as may be necessary to supply the deficiency be annually applied to that purpose, and my will is that the above provision for my said wife be in lieu of right of dower in my estate.

After the death of my wife, my will is that the money then remaining on hand be collected and equally divided between my 3 sons, Ely B. Butcher, Fountain Butcher and Creed W. Butcher, to them and their heirs forever.

As to my daughters, Edith Daily, Emily Lee and Mariah Ashford, and my son, Edward G. Butcher, I have already given them what I considered their share in my estate.

Lastly I appoint my son, Ely B. Butcher, executor of this my last will and testament.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal this sixth day of April 1859.

Ely Butcher.

Signed, sealed and acknowledged by the said Ely Butcher, as and for his last will and testament in the presence of the undersigned witnesses, who in the presence of each other and in the presence of the testator, have subscribed our names as witnesses thereto.

REEDER-BUTCHER.

RICHARD H. REEDER.

Cornelius, the emigrant ancestor, came from England with the Third Lord Baltimore, one of a colony of Catholics.

A brother, Benjamin, located near Clarksburg, and represented Harrison county in the Virginia Assembly, and was prominent in local affairs in the Pioneer era. In Randolph county is recorded a deed from Benjamin Reeder and wife, Eleanor, to Simon Reeder, consideration 100 dollars, for a tract of land at the mouth of Beaver Creek, on the east side.

From the Maryland homestead several members of the family migrated, with the tide of home-seekers, west. The records of Randolph county show that on their way toward the setting sun, they lingered for years in that mountain-encircled section. A deed in 1797 from Cornelius Reeder and Sarah, his wife, conveys to Richard Reeder ninety-five and a half acres of land on the waters of Tygart Valley River, for the sum of twenty pounds.

By Ely Butcher, his attorney in fact, Richard Reeder deeds, at dawn of the century, to Jesse Phillips, consideration 200 dollars, a tract of 121 acres on Beaver Creek.
Thence in after years he removed to Chestnut Run, one mile from Burning Springs, now in Wirt county. The farm is now owned by Alexander Owens' heirs. Thence in March, 1828, he embarked, with his family and household goods, upon a flat-boat, down the Kanawha river and up Tygart creek, and located on what is now known as the "Uncle Dicky Reeder" farm, at present owned by a grand daughter, Frances Graham, who married E. Lafayette Stephens. In an enclosure upon the homestead tract, about one hundred yards from the residence, are buried Richard Senior, and his wife, Urah Butcher.

The elder of this given name was a soldier of the Revolution, and the son a Lieutenant in the War of 1812.

The junior, who is the subject of this sketch, was born 7 August, 1776, upon the farm of his father in Montgomery county, Maryland, where the Reeder graveyard still remains. He served in the second Britain struggle, from 15 July, 1813, to the disbanding of the Company, 17 August 1814. He was appointed Assistant U. S. Marshal for Western Virginia in 1820 and held the place till 1840, when he resigned. He died 15 February, 1878, having lived over a century in years. He was known all over the county, and loved as one of the most reliable, industrious and valuable citizens. His wife was Urah, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Drake) Butcher, a pioneer of many descendants and was esteemed throughout Loudon, Randolph and Wicod counties of Virginia. She was born 27 January, 1782, married 11 October, 1801, in Randolph county, and died 3 March, 1867. Their children were:

Simon Reeder, who died in 1830, had a son Benjamin, of Harrison county Va. who was United States Marshal for 3rd District of Western Virginia, from 1817 to 1824. He died in December, 1842, aged 80 years. His brother Richard married Urah, daughter of Samuel Butcher.

One of his sons, Thomas S., was born 29 February, 1800, at Morgantown, Va, and died 3 January, 1853.

Thomas S. had a son, Benjamin A., who was born 11 March, 1835. He served in the Civil War, in Company E., 3d W. Va. Infantry.

BUTCHER-PEADRO.

THOMAS BUTCHER.

In the days when the deer, nimble-footed and innocent of deadly fire-arms, came frequently in daylight glare to the settler's cabin, and the bear and the wolf prowled boldly near at night, this son of Samuel Butcher, with a long line of Virginia and English ancestry to his credit, located on a fine tract of land on the south side of Little Kenawha river, near the mouth of Walker's creek, in the curve which was afterwards known far and wide, among the social gentry of that era, as "Butchers Bend." Along with him from the East came James Greathouse, Solomon Deputy, Abram Kettle and Joseph Gillespie, with settlement rights, as descendants of fathers who were in the Revolution.

Our young boyhood long after, when the dense forest had given place to meadows dewy and fragrant, and Virginia worm fences, rived from luxuriant forest timber, divided from orchards of cherries, peaches and apples, enjoyed and feasted eyes and palate upon the rich abundance hanging from swinging bough and freighted branch, and covered the ground beneath the huge trees.
Perhaps it was a child's fancy and mere delight, but we have never since cessation of our autumnal visits to that grand-paternal mansion, with its hospitality and productiveness, gazed upon such great thrifty trees, seen or tasted from so prolific and luscious a treasury.

I shall never forget what my childish eyes saw at Grandfather Butcher's plantation. The orchards and the switch-top apples that hung high in the air, and reminded me of delicious apple dumplings and cobblers for dinner; of the well, with moss-covered edges, and bucket out of which came crystal-cold water; of the heavily laden damson plums that glittered overhead beyond the guarding thorns; of the hounds that made the night resonant with sound in dreary moonlight, or when fox or deer crossed the meadows near the House; of the old peach and apple-still down the slope within the orchards, and the immense copper-worm from which trickled the odor of brandy, pure as dew drops but more inspiring, and untaxed and unrestricted; of the looms and spinning wheels in adjacent cabin, whence were turned out snow-hued yarns, linsey-wolsey, walnut-hued and sky-tinted jeans for home-made wear of old and young, white and black, girl and boy; of the immense log-heaps of hickory oak and pine which lay in ready reach of the isolated kitchen, where willing servants made hoe-cake skillet-bread and more tempting pastry; of the spacious barns where horses and cows fed, hay oats and cutters were stationed and attracted numerous pullets; and the loft where we searched for hens eggs and summer-saulted in rainy days over corn fodder and oat straw; nor the dusky boys whose plump cheeks and eyes glistening with humor, showed a kind master; of the servants' cabins encircling the south bluff toward the river; of the pens of fat hogs, with cute little piggies; the huge log smoke house where hung from rafter and beam the bacon hams in long rows in process of curing. Of the well-filled, stilt-founded grainery where between slats and open work peeped a boat load of corn, bins of wheat, ready for sacking shelling or market; of the long-rifle, powder-horn made scraped and trumpet like, of the shot and bullit pouch too, all hung across hickory pegs over the door, neath the huge antlers of an elk.

Across the river, near the old homestead, upon the hill, he had the right of a Ferry as late as 1815. One of his ebon-faced servants attended public wants, rowed the popular flat and the rough-hewn canoe, leisurely making his diagonal way from shore to shore, as his dripping oars now and then momentarily rested on their pinions, while his bright face sparkled with curiosity, or his glad tongue responded respectfully to questions of the traveler.

He owned about 500 acres of land, part inherited and part purchased; was approachable, kind-hearted to a fault, and good-humored, industrious, despising duplicity or evasion of duty.

In Randolph county, of Virginia he was born 3d April 1784, married 7 May 1807, Susan, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Kettle) Peadro. She was born in 1788 and died 1st October 1866. Her parents were early pioneers of the Indian era, and the male line noted for daring, as rangers and scouts in defence and warning to the settlers. She was pious and devoted to her home, and her religion, and was one of the earliest members of the Baptist church in that entire section. He died 9 November 1838, from paralytic stroke, and both were buried in the family grounds on the old home farm in the "Bend."

In warm September, 1895, our footsteps for the first time in life trod the soil of Randolph county near the base of a historic mountain. That political division eighty years before was the birth place of our sainted mother, and we were curious if possible to identify and locate the spot. In vain we asked the oldest living native where the farm of our grandfather Thomas Butcher was situated. It had passed from the memory of the oldest.
Next we sought the land records, to discover date of purchase and sale. The misty volumes disclosed:

That, in 1809,—Deed book 5, p 179—conveyance was made by Henry Petrow and Elizabeth his wife, to Thomas Butcher Jr. of Randolph, consideration blank, for 100 acres of land on the North side of Eberman Creek, adjoining John Spraul, and Richard Kittle; beginning on the east bank of said creek, corner of Henry Petro, and running across the creek with J. Sprawls line, thence with Sprawls line to Kittles corner, thence with Kittles line to an ash by Richard Kittles fence, thence up the North side of the Creek with Petro's line to where it crosses the Creek; it being all that part of said Petro's land on which he now lives, that lies on the North side of Eberman's Creek.

Later on, 18 August 1812, Book 6, P 270, Thomas Butcher and Susannah Peadro his wife, sell the land as thus described, to John Phillips, of Hardy county, and on the 7 August 1813, Henry Steed and Ezekiel McFarland as Justice take the wife's acknowledgment in Wood county.

Some years after Phillips dies and the widow conveys to John Weese the 100 acres.

This brings the record down three generations, to the memory of the living neighbors.

About one fourth of a mile east of Yokum station on the West Va., Central railroad, which is distant from Beverly three and a tenth mile and from Elkins three and six tenths, lies the mouth of Eberman Creek. Roaring creek is just beyond the ridge of mountains in sight, and empties into Tyger's Valley River, in the distance.

Wending our way rapidly from the station, about a hundred yards over the meadow, and up a slight rise, near an abandoned log building which proved to be the "Meeting House" of the pioneer age, inquiry was made of an elderly man who was weed-cutting with two horses, as to the location of the Butcher-Phillips-Weese cabin. Without any hesitation he promptly unhitched his steeds, fastened them under the shade of an oak, and insisted upon guiding me to numerous historic points within vision, and pointed out within a few yards of the railroad track the ancestral dwelling sought, now owned by his brother Samuel Bosworth Ward, whose post-office is Lick, Randolph county.

The identical cabin in which our mother eighty-two years ago was born still stands, though years ago by its present occupant, has been weatherboarded over the original material. The ell has been torn down and in its place a frame extension erected.

Poetic and sentimental it may be considered, but to us our footsteps were on sacred ground, and our thoughts rolled down the four score years to the wooded and pioneer past.

We saw the grand and great-grand parents, in the Indian era, braving the perils and deprivations of the wilderness, and with a colony of friends, who subsequently intermarried, locate in the untouched forests.

We saw the huge trees in the small clearings disappear, the primitive sheltering cabin of unhewn logs rise in the opening, and the blue smoke of hickory, oak, elm and sycamore from the hospitable hearth stones curl up into mid-air. We saw the hounds chase the meek-eyed deer, and the inquisitive bear draw near, the sable slaves in the diminutive corn-patch, and the stealthy mocasined savage tempted by our ancestors invading the ancient hunting ground, to plunder, rapine and merciless warfare. We pictured the struggles of the whites with the red, the capture of part, the wounding of others, the years of captivity and restraint, the adoption into tribal families, the redemption of prisoners at conclusion of peace treaty, their return and welcome to parental homes. We saw gladly the dawn of peace, the extension of the cabin garden into broad farm, the erection of mills, the setting up of a primitive house of worship on the hill, where near by reposes the dust of a noble generation. Rosy faced children, artless of this day's fashion and folly, grew up, loved, married, and in couples and groups, sought near-by or other and distant homes. We saw our grand parents, with our dear mother as babe, seated upon pack horses, following the crowded emigrant wagon westward in narrow, hatchet-marked paths, over mountain and down gorge and ravine, toward the wilderness of the Ohio and Kenawha valleys. We witnessed their hardships, deprivations, industry and courage in carving out a better destiny in a newer territory.

From this mental retrospection our eye turned to the ancestral cabin on Eberman creek.

There it stood in view, upon a sunlit morning, a simple picture of rural quietude, which our memory shall every preserve.

In the yard stood a large hickory tree and a walnut one near. The orchard was beside the garden enclosure on the bank of Eberman creek, dividing the ancestral Thomas Butcher land from the Henry Petro place, and near by about 100 yards east, empties into Tyger’s Valley River on which also the Butcher lines front. It stood on land in sight of the Baptist church, on the elevation. A picket fence is around the house, meadows on one side, with stacks of hay and pens of rails.

About one fourth of a mile up the creek the John Peadro mansion, a two story log house, is still standing, in its primitive material, built about or before 1800, and now occupied by Lytle.

In a field near was shown the spot where pioneer John Peadro was struck and died. Between it, in a small drain, and John Peadro’s cabin, is an old well where the Henry Peatro house once appeared. Not far away is pointed out the location where Indians captured the Peadro father and sons.

While pensive, in dreams of other years, a century in the past, we note the storm rising along the remote mountain side. Shelter is sought during a heavy shower, in the old abandoned church. A half hour and the rain ceased; the clouds rolled by, the breeze sprang up, the tinkle of cow bells in the meadows reached our ears, the hopper and katy-did in fields chip and whirr, and the usual melody of rustic life begins anew, and we soon whirl away from the ancestral cabin into the great world of facts and industry and competition for existence and prosperity, and responsibility.

To Thomas and Susan (Peadro) Butcher were given ten children:

1. Elizabeth, born 25 April 1809, who in 1825 wedded Rev. Daniel Morrell, of the Methodist Episcopal church. She was lovely in feature and disposition, refined in manner, cultured, ever hopeful and bright and winning. He was tall, thoughtful, and varied in his ability and occupation. Was in succession lawyer, clerk, minister, and once kept school upon Washington’s Bottom, near the home of Robert Edelen. He was born in Mass, came west as a young man, visited “Butcher’s Bend,” and there won a lady of character. He taught school in Parkersburg; was the first clerk of the Circuit Court of Jackson county in its organization and was thus appointed by Judge Summers, who greatly admired his fidelity and integrity. Col. Benjamin Wright was at the same period Clerk of the county court. He was postmaster at Jackson Court House 31 October 1848, and was reappointed 25 June 1856. About the beginning of the Civil war he moved to Peoria, Illinois where she died 18 June 1861. He was dignified, sedate, but cheerful, and his wife popular among the members of his own and other churches.

One son, Webster, blessed their union. He was born in April 1826, and about 1850 married Almira, daughter of Orange P. Wedge of Belpre, Ohio. At one time he was a lawyer in Missouri; lived awhile in Greenville, on the Little Kenawha River, then at Ripley; once in Atlanta, Georgia; and at Peoria, Ill. They have three children, one boy and two girls, one of the latter named Martha.
Mordon Henry, born 16 February 1811, who 29 November 1832, wedded as his first wife, Ann Frances Thurman, of Prince William County, Va., who was born 17 October, 1813, and died 29 September, 1871, leaving 13 children. His second wife was widow Celia (Hannahs) Dale, of Catlettsbug, Ky. married in February, 1872. She died in June, 1884; he died 1881; both are buried in “Butchers Bend” enclosure. The first wife was buried at Guyandotte, W. Va.

He was for years a clerk in the general store of his brother-in-law, Jefferson Gibbens; was long in employ of Jackson & Thompson, wholesale grocers. From 1847 to 1850 he dwelt at Fountain Springs; was in Kanawha County in the salt region, from 1836 to 1842. While there or soon after, he bought the small steamer “Freedom” and used it to transport salt in barrels from the Salines to places of commission along the Ohio river. He was at Claysville in 1845, and at Guyandotte in 1871. Was a devout and zealous Methodist, was sober, industrious, and under suffering and the vicissitudes of fortune patient and cheerful. 7. Edwin Samuel, born 17 June 1820, who 18 September 1857, married Mary Jane, daughter of Benjamin and Miriam (Flowers) Wright. She was born 12 December
Edwin Samuel Butcher.
1832, in Ripley, Jackson county, of Virginia, received a Seminary education, and her father was prominent in local position in his home county. Uncle Ed. Butcher received a fair education, and resides not far away from the homestead, the original entry into Wood county of the Butcher ancestors, honored for his integrity, respected for his kindness of heart, and generous conduct and modest demeanor, for his firmness of character and industrious habits. For years he lived in a story and a half frame cottage, just over the hill and facing the Kenawha current, and in sight of his birthplace. When the oil excitement in Wirt county, and the increase of population therein, caused the construction of a turnpike past his land, he crossed the hill and built a new and larger house on the road from Parkersburg to Burning Springs, the oil-Dorado of the section. Here for years he kept open house, engaged in merchandizing and farmed alternately with the seasons, raising a large family, and accumulated tract after tract of adjacent land, till he is one of, if not the largest landholder in his native county.

Before marriage he was first clerk in the store of his brother-in-law, Jefferson Gibbens, at Parkersburg, and afterwards became a partner in the general store lower Ann street near the Point.

He has been called to serve his fellow citizens in several places of trust, and ever performed the duties well and ably. He was one of the County Commissioners from 1880 to 1886, six years; was a member of the Board of Supervisors under the old constitution for several years and was faithful in every trust; and was President of the Board of Education in his district. Of recent years his energies have been devoted to raising of stock.

Their children are:

1...Sarah Elizabeth, born 18 June 1852, who 17 January 1889 wedded Joseph E. Carle, a widower with three children, Ethel, Mabel and Blanche. He was born in 1845, is a farmer and merchant, living near Volcano Junction, and served in the Legislature of 1891. By his second marriage were born:

2...Janie, born 17 August 1891.
2. Benjamin Hudson, born 23 November 1854. He received a common school education in his district, attended the State Normal school at Fairmont, then went to Marietta College, and in June 1877 graduated in law from the Columbian University, Washington, D. C. Upon graduation he was admitted to the bar in that city.

From September 1877, to May 1880, he practiced law in Wood county, West Virginia. He was elected, a Democrat, member of the House of Delegates in the session of 1878-9, the youngest of that body. His Republican opponent was ex-Governor W. E. Stevenson, over whom he was elected by a fair majority. In May 1880, he located in Colorado. After a few years, on account of ill health, he returned home. In the State of Colorado, with its rich minerals and grand mountains he served as a member of the House of Delegates, as State Senator, and as District Attorney of the Ninth Judicial District. He was a candidate for Congress in 1898 in Fourth West Virginia district, but was defeated for the nomination.

Andrew Delmar Hopkins, Ph. D.
ANDREW DELMAR HOPKINS,

Is the son and only heir of Andrew E. and Miriam F. Hopkins, born in Jackson county Virginia, and grew up on his grand-father Evans’ farm. Was taught in the district and high schools of the county, and devoted all of his spare time to the study of shells, birds and their eggs, plants and insects. On the farm he improved the exhausted soil and stock, and promoted the agricultural interests of his county and State. In 1876 he was appointed by the State Board of Centennial Managers on a local board to collect and forward specimens of farm products and natural resources to the Philadelphia Exposition. He was instrumental in organizing the Jackson County Fair, and became its president; was mover for a State Sheep Breeder’s and Woolgrowers Association, organized at Parkersburg in 1879, and its vice president and secretary. In 1889 he largely promoted organization of Farmers Institutes over the State. In that year he was appointed special agent in Entomology for the West Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station. His investigation of forest destruction led to discovery of a cause and the remedy, and in 1892 he was sent to Europe to study the natural enemies of the pine and spruce insects in Germany. Thence he brought over the desired insect and placed in our forests in large numbers. In 1893 the West Virginia University conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and in 1896 elected him to the chair of Economic Entomology therein.

In 1899 he was commissioned by the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate forest insects in California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho. He was eminently successful in obtaining desired results.

He is a member and a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of the Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Science, the American Foresting Association, (of which he is vice-president for West Virginia,) the Entomological Society of Washington, the Entomologists Society of Ontario, the Association of Economic Entomologists, the Biological Society of Washington, the Ohio Academy of Science, the National Geographic Society and the West Virginia Academy of Science, to all of which he has contributed numerous papers on economical and scientific subjects.

He has issued twelve bulletins and six reports from his department of the station; and has also contributed a large number of articles to scientific and other journals, and is authority in his line of study and research throughout the United States.

1...Clyde, born 18 March 1893.
2...Layman born 3 June 1894.
3...Heber, born 27 October 1896.
The family, in early times, had located in western Pennsylvania, then a part of Virginia. Thence removal was made to Augusta County, on the present line of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, in Greenbrier county, where many descendants now live, in one of the best agricultural sections of the State. In 1761 Mrs. Robert Renick —in history entitled Renax—the daughter of Sampson Archer, who had a family of five children, William born in 1745, Robert, Jr., Thomas, Joshua, and Elizabeth, were attacked by a band of Shawnee Indians, and Robert, the father, was killed and scalped, and the mother carried into captivity, where soon after arrival at the wigwam on site of present Chillicothe, Ohio, she gave birth to a posthumous child. In 1766, after nearly five years of life among the Indians, under provision of the Boquet treaty that all whites in captivity should be restored to their friends by redemption, Mrs. Robert Renick was brought to Staunton, Va., and with two of her sons, William and Robert, Jr., who became pioneers, settled in Greenbrier county. Betsy, Jr., had died on the Maumee; Thomas returned in 1783 and settled on the Scioto, near Chillicothe. Joshua never came into civilization, took an Indian wife, became a chief among the Miamis, amassed a fortune and died in 1810 near Detroit.

Edward I. Renick, of the Greenbrier branch, grew up a boy in Georgia, and attained prominence in public affairs, for long years serving as Chief Clerk in the Department of State at Washington; is interested in literary and genealogical efforts and continues to collect material for a complete history of the Renick name in the United States.

William Renick, a half brother of George, had his home on the Robinson farm in the territory of Wood county, adjacent to the Beeson tract, and thence about 1824 migrated to Jackson county, Missouri. He had four children, Job, Felix, William Jr, and a fourth name unknown. Deed book 4, page 322, has conveyance from Jacob Beeson to William Renick, of Hardy county, Va. dated 13 April 1812 for consideration of $7,666.61 to land on Ohio river, two tracts, one for 258 acres, the other one for 287, 3-4 acres, equal 545.3-4 acres.

In 1817 Felix Renick, sent to Philadelphia, Pa. a fine drove of 100 head of cattle, across the mountains from Ohio. 20 of the best sold for $160 per head, the lot averaging $133, the market being $10.50 and $11 nett. George Renick and Joseph Harness in 1818 drove to New York in charge of Drinnin. The 100 head at home valued at $52 each, sold in New York for $69 each.

A brother of William, George Renick, moved from Wood county, his home on the Robinson farm, to the Miami Valley.

From eastern Penna in the spring of 1814 to the South Branch of the Potomack, near Moorfield, came George Renick, whose wife died in 1820, leaving 9 children, the youngest of which married Nelson J. Turney.

A George Renick, born 7 September 1776, in Hardy county, died in Ohio 15 September 1863. He had married
Dorothy Harness, of Hardy county. By here were 7 children. He wedded in March 1825, a second wife, Mrs. Sarah Boggs, sister of Gen. James Denney. He had 3 brothers, Felix, Thomas and William, and 3 sisters, Margaret, who married Daniel McNeil, of the South Branch, Kitty who married John Welton, and Rachel who married Peter Hull, of Pendleton county. His father was William Renick who died in Hardy in 1805, and he had an uncle named John.

One George Renick, in October 1793, removed from Hardy county, Va. to Clark county Kentucky. His wife was Magdaline Reed, and they reared four sons and two daughters. One of these sons was the celebrated stockman, Abram Renick of Kentucky who was born in Clark county 17 January 1803, and who died in 1886 or '7, leaving all of his property (he never married) to his grand-nephews Abram, Morris, W. J. Scott and Brinkley M. Renick—all brothers—of Clintonville, Kentucky.

Another George Renick, who lived on the South Branch of the Potomack, was the father of William Renick who went to Kentucky, at the beginning of the century, and whose children were:

One of the name, the George Renick who lived in Wood county, of Virginia, taught school at Nigger's Run in 1815. His wife was Mary Maxwell, of Lewis county and related to Congressman of that name. They came immediate from Randolph, and in Missouri descendants inter-married with the Ewing family. Their children were:

1. Elizabeth, born 1 January 1791, who married Peyton Butcher. She died 14 May 1850.
2. Maxwell, whose wife was Sarah, lived in Beverly.
3. John, who married in Greenbrier county, and moved to Indiana.
5. George, who moved to Indiana.
6 Samuel, to Arkansas.
7 Isaac.
8 Absolom.
9 Mary, who moved to Indiana.
10 Deborah, who married Ben. Epperson; Indiana.
11 Teney, who migrated to Indiana.

The records of Randolph county, W. Va., show that 25 February 1790, George Rennix married Judith Westfall and that he was in Beverley, in June 1800. The Rennick family left Wood county 18 December 1818 for the West.

With his father, Peyton Butcher, came to Randolph, in early day and purchased land, and there dwelt several years. After reaching Wood county he engaged in milling business, and for years he managed the grist and saw mill at Claysville, known as the George Creel Mill, Bald Eagle Ripple. He was born 28 of June 1786, and died 26 January 1853. He wedded 10 December 1810 in Beverley, Elizabeth, daughter of George Renick, of Hardy. She was born 1 January 1791, and died 14 May 1850. She was one of the family so celebrated in Indian era for bravery, endurance and tact. They are buried in the Kincheloe-Van-diver enclosure on the old farm now the Poor Farm of the county. The two-story frame dwelling is still standing close to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad track, opposite the station at Davisville. It was built by Thomas Glasscock, one of the best carpenters ever in the county. In September 1810, Samuel Ball deeds to Payton Butcher 2000 acres on the Gauley river. Their children were:

1 Samuel, born 11 September 1811, who 17 April 1836 wedded Jane, daughter of James and Eleanor (Dawkins) Melrose. She was born in Wood county, 26 November 1814, and died 2 August 1888. Her father was in the war of 1812. They settled at Fountain Springs, in 1859. He died 27 January 1884. Their children are

2. Eleanor, born 26 March 1837, who in the fall of 1853 married John Thomas Taylor. He was born 15 March 1830. She died 24 June 1878 of bronchitis. Children are:

PEADRO-KITTLE.

HENRY PEADRO.

It is stated traditionally, that this family came from the banks of the Rhine, and was of German-French extraction. Early deeds for land in Randolph county have a varied spelling of the name, Petro, Peatrow and later in Wood county, Peadro.

As early as 1789, 25 August, a deed appears to have been made in Randolph county of Virginia, from Nicholas Peatro and Mary his wife to Henry Peatro—supposed to be his son—for 195 acres of land on the East side of Tyger's Valley River, adjoining lands of Daniel Westfall and Abram and John Kittle, consideration 10 pounds.

The Kittles, Collettes, Westfalls, Butchers and Peadros seem to have located in a settlement in that portion of the wilderness of Randolph, near a fort or blockhouse, as protection from the unfriendly and bellicose Indians. The dangers common to each family bound them together, till by intermarriage they became even down to the present generation of descendants, "Virginia Cousins."

The brother of Henry—Leonard—and two of his sons, Paul and Philip, were twice captured by the savages, escaped once, and the second time one of the youth released himself, but the brother, Paul, never returned. The probability is that he suffered the fate of many a paleface in the days of privation and Indian warfare. The family and connections became quite noted in border conflict. They resided, after the Peace Treaty, upon a clearing, which by industry and energy became an excellent and valuable farm, about three miles north of Beverly, part of which is now owned by Washington G. Ward who married a Collett, and by George C. Lytle who resides in the ancient log-cabin of John Peadro, a structure over a century old. His postoffice is Lack, Randolph county, W. Va.

Hunting deer, bear and smaller game became a pastime and necessity for food after the war ended. Each planter became a hunter, and kept numerous dogs. These domestic animals frequently warned the settler of approaching or lurking red skins, indicated by the dogs seeking the cabin, with every hair standing on end.

Henry was at one time captured and adopted by the Indians. He married Elizabeth Kittle, whose family connections at that time were extensive in the Western settlements. He died about 1832; she 7 January 1834. The old mansion of logs stood a short distance from the mouth of Eberman Creek, not far from the Wilson Fort, built for protection of the Frontier settlers. On the site where a well is now used by occupiers of the John Peadro cabin home, was the first dwelling in the wilderness.

The will of Henry Peadro, is:

In the name of God, Amen! I, Henry Peatro of the County of Randolph, being sick and weak in Body but of sound mind and disposing memory, for which I thank God, and calling to mind the uncertainty of human Life, and being desirous to dispose of all such worldly Estate as it hath pleased God to bestow me with:

First, I desire, after my debts are paid out of my personal estate:

I give and bequeath to my beloved wife Elizabeth Petro all my personal estate during her natural life, and then at her decease to dispose of the balance as she may deem it expedient, with the exception of twenty dollars which I give and bequeath to my grand daughter, Phoebe Collett.

I give and bequeath to my daughter Susan Petro, now wife of Thomas Butcher, two dollars to be paid out of my real estate.
I give and bequeath to my daughter Christeny Petro, now wife of David Evans, two dollars to be paid out of my real estate.

I give and bequeath to the heirs of my son John Petro deceased, two dollars, to be paid out of my real estate.

I give and bequeath to my two Daughters—Nancy Petro, now the wife of Thomas Collett and Sallie Petro, all my real estate in the County of Randolph to be equally divided Between them to be enjoyed by them and their heirs forever, provided they pay the above heirs each two dollars, viz. Susan Petro, now wife of Thomas Butcher and Christeny Petro now wife of David Evans, and the heirs of my son John Petro Deceased.

And lastly, I do hereby constitute and appoint Thomas Collett, and my beloved wife Elizabeth Petro executors of this my last Will and Testament, hereby revoking all the former Will or testament by me heretofore made,

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal this 24 day of December in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and thirty-three.

Signed, sealed, published and declared as and for the Last Will and Testament of the above named Henry Petro.

John Chenowith.
George Weese.
Jehu Chenoweth.

Randolph Co. Court, January Term 1834. This last Will and Testament of Henry Petro Deceased was presented in Court and proved by the oaths of John J. Chenoweth, Geo. Weese, and Jehu Chenoweth, subscribing witnesses thereto, and ordered to be recorded.

Valley Baptist Church.

One of the old log churches, in an abandoned state, now stands near the antique burial enclosure, upon the rising ground and by the road side, not far from the old Thomas Butcher mansion, near the mouth of Eberman Creek, which empties into the Tygars Valley River. In later day it was weatherboarded over the log walls, on two of its sides. These smoother coverings have partly fallen away revealing the original material and the stone and clay daubing between logs. It is about 25 feet square, and about the same in height, and two stories. A gallery runs on three sides of the interior, with steps to it in one corner. It has windows in both stories, 5 in the rear, 1 at gable end, 2 in front and one broad entrance door facing the burial ground. The deed of conveyance of the ground to the "Deakens" of the Baptist Church, dates in 1818, and specifies that the walls of the Meeting House were then up. Huge oak trees over the road side might have shaded the horses of the pioneer families who came on Sabbath to worship there. In one corner still stands a walnut tree.

Deed 28 September 1818, from Henry Peatro, to John Kittle, Jno. J. Chenoweth, Geo. Weis and Thos. Collett Jr. "deakins," of the regular Baptist Church, known by name of the Valley Church, for $30.00, one acre and 8 poles, with walls of a meeting house raised thereon by said church, part of lands on which Henry Peatro lives.

On an elevation, near Yokum station, within sight, is the old burial ground of the Colletts, Peadros and Kittles. It is shaded by huge oak trees, and now enclosed by a board fence. The old crumbling and almost illegible stone slabs which mark the resting place of pioneers, are seen scattered all over the area of a half acre, amid marble stones of more recent era.

Among legible inscriptions are:

Caleb Kittle, son of Ely & Rebecca Kittle, died 12 June 1834, aged 2 years.

Moses Triplett, died 24 June, ................aged 39.
(Very old.)

John K. Chenoweth, died 29 March 1848, aged 40-3-19.

Florence M., daughter of Parkinson & Anzing Collett, born 14 July 1870, died 6 April 1886.

Sarah, wife of John K. Chenoweth, born 19 November 1812, died 2 December 1889.

Elizabeth, daughter of Thos. & Nancy Collett, died 11 March 1850, aged 23-6-21.

Nancy, wife of Thos. Collett, died 24 June 1862, aged 63.
Thos. Collett, died 1 December 1870, aged 83.

Morgan Kittle, died 7 April 1888, aged 52-10-21.

Eli Kittle, died 12 November 1863, aged 63-9-6.

Geo. Wees, died 6 November 1855, aged 74-6-25.

Buthy, wife Geo. Wees, died 1 June 1872, aged 88-2-4.

Sarah Kittle, daughter of Jessie W. & Sarah Kittle, born July 26 1834, and died July 31 1834.

The children of Henry & Elizabeth (Kittle) Peadro, were:

1. Susannah, born in 1788, who 7 May 1807, married Thomas, son of Samuel Butcher, and by him were 10 children.

(Pages 221 to 237)

2. Sallie, born 20 November 1790, who 9 March 1815, wedded Solomon Collett, son of Thomas, Sr. She died 20 March 1817. Their only child was:

1...Phoebe, born 22 August, 1816, who married Jonathan Arnold, of Beverly, Va.

3. John, born 20 November 1790, who 22 December 1813, married Tasa, daughter of Samuel Butcher. He was killed 19 March 1830, in a controversy as to a division line fence, by a handspike in the hands of Fred Wilson, at a log-rolling. The spot is shown in a drain not far from the old home of the Peadros. Their children are eight:

BUTCHER-M'NEIL-RUST.

BAILISS GRIGSBY BUTCHER.

Was born in 1790, and first in 1819 wedded Martha, known as Patsy McNeil* of Pocahontas county, Va. Second he married, 10 January 1825, Susan Oryd Rust in Parkersburg. He owned a lot in Beverly, 24 April 1818, and was postmaster there 7 February 1818, and was postmaster there 7 February 1819; in 16 February 1816 he entered land on the divide of waters of Bonakey Bun from Ford Run. He moved to Wood county before 1831, and was postmaster from 31 January 1833 to 7 April 1835 at "Walker's Mills." While there he and Susan, his wife, 30 September 1830 in Wood county, deed to George Bickely of Randolph, for $20, two certain lots in Beverly on east side of Walnut street, one-half acre, lots 7 and 8. He moved west not far from that date, and records show that 26 June 1837 from the county of Fontaine, Ind., they deed to Edmond Wyatt of Virginia, for $550, land on a ridge in Randolph county, dividing Bonakay Run from Ford Run. He subsequently

*John McNeel, pioneer, of Frederick county, Va., married Martha Davis, of Wales in 1740, and came to the "Levels" of Pocahontas, Greenbrier county, in 1755; was in the Dunmore war at battle of Point Pleasant, Oct. 10, 1774, and then enlisted and served through the Revolution. He had two sons and three daughters: Abram, Isaac, Miriam, Nancy and Martha. Abram married, second, Miss Bridges, and had three sons, Washington, John and Abram. Martha married Bailiss G. Butcher (Patsy); Miriam married Chris. Beard; Nancy married Jas. Rankin; May remained single.
located in Pocahontas county, near Greenback, and there died at the home of his son, Dr. Oscar Butcher.

Oscar, born in Randolph county, Virginia, 24 December, 1820, and 16 May 1849 wedded Sarah J. Beard of Falling Springs, Greenbrier county, Virginia. She was born at Lewisburg 19 March 1826, and there died 15 March 1881. He moved to Indiana at the age of ten with his father, studied medicine under Dr. Creigh, of Delphi, and attended medical lectures in the College at Chicago, then began practice at Falling Springs, West Va., where he married. Two years after he moved to Greenback, Pocahontas county, and was the only physician within twenty-five miles. There he remained till 1860, when he went to Huntonville and joined the Confederate army.

In the expedition of the Southern army down the Tygart Valley, in September 1861, he acted as guide to Brigadier General Donelson, and by his skill and the courage and bravery he exhibited in the engagement at Stuart’s Run, where single-handed and alone, in advance of the army, he engaged two officers of the enemy, took one a prisoner and despatched the other who offered determined resistance, and secured the arms of both, and the horse of one of them as trophies of his valor, and then captured several privates. For this, as well as his kindness to the whole command, he was honorably mentioned by the General in his official report, and a letter of thanks in the name of the Brigade was sent to him. His son, William F., at Baker City, Oregon, has the sword received back from General Donaldson after the raid, for his bravery, upon the handle of which his own name and that of his General and the reason of presentation were engraved.
It had been previously captured by Butcher, surrendered to his general, and then engraved and returned to his possession.
He died, a refugee, at "Lock Willow," near Church-ville, Virginia, 21 December 1861.

In the Revolution and early American history the Vaughan family were active and prominent. John Vaughan was a Lieut. in the State Line of Va. and for three years service received, 21 February 1784, warrant for 2,666½ acres of land; Roland Vaughan was a soldier in the U. S. Inf'y; and William Vaughan, from Penn'a. was employed as midshipman in 1816, at Sacketts' Harbor.

The immediate ancestor of this branch of the name located in Kentucky, on the Licking river. Daniel had four sons and four daughters. Of the daughters, Mary, 9 January 1734, married William Harris; Matilda died single in Parkersburg, aged 32; Elizabeth, married Benjamin Ogden, and resided in Kentucky; and Catharine also married and settled in that State.

One of the son of Daniel Vaughan, John A. born in 1804 was twice wedded. First, 25 August 1825, he married Susan Van Lara, and she died without issue. Second, ... ... he wedded Anna Barrett, by whom were four:

1. James Monroe, who first, 3 June 1838, married Joanna Taylor; second, 15 June 1873, he wedded Indiana Hill.

Children:
1. Matilda born 9 May 1841; died 29 May 1842; buried in Holliday's graveyard.
2. Winther, born 20 November 1850; died 19 July 1852.
4. Ellen, who 3 November 1842, wedded Mathew C. Mad-doxx, and died aged 20.
5. Anna, who died aged 20.

Third, John A. Vaughan wedded Ann W. Butcher a widow, who was born 15 August 1800, and had first, 22 November 1823, married Abram, son of Thomas Prebble. Pribble died without issue, and 6 January 1828 she married, as third wife, her cousin, John A. Vaughan. He died April 1841; she died 20 April 1861. Both are buried in the Butcher cemetery. The children by widow Butcher -Prebble were:

1. Mary Frances, born 1 March 1829, who 4 January 1849, married Joshua Eli Butcher of Leesburg, Va., and there died 14 June 14 June 1851, leaving two children, both dying in infancy.
2. Irving Cornelius, born 24 May 1831, who 17 June 1852, wedded Lydia, daughter of John and Nancy (Cooper) Barnett. She born 14 July 1828. They reside upon a farm about a mile and a half below Kanawha Station, in Wood county. Their children are:
   1. Mary Frances, born 25 March 1853, who 22 November 1876 married George S. Crandall of New York. He born in 1851; reside at Holdrege, Phelps county, Nebraska. Their children are:

3. Teresa Gale, born 11 January 1834, who 14 October 1858, wedded Isaac L. son of Abraham Enoch, by whom were five children. (See Enoch sketch, p 92-3.)

4. Hannah M., born 22 November 1839, who 23 September 1863, wedded Oliver Phelps Dunham. He was the son of William and Jane G. (Simpson) Dunham, who settled on Washington's Bottom, in 1808. He was born in Weston Va. 18 April 1832; was in Wood county a Justice of the Peace in 1877-8, and from 1869 resided at Valley Mills. To them were born four:

1. Anna Jane, 27 May, 1865, died 25 November 1866.

2. Grace D., born 8 February, 1868, who 27 April, 1892, wedded H. Mills of Williams District.

4. Francis Marion, born 22 July, 1874.

5. Anna, born and died in 1840.
In the United States Navy Exhibit, 1893 World's Fair, among relics and paintings, is mentioned "Portrait of Commodore Edward Prebble, born 15 August 1761, died 25 August 1807. His first cruise was made in 1777-8; in 1779 entered the provincial marine of Mass as a midshipman, commissioned as Lieutenant in the U. S. Navy in 1799, and in June of same year was made Captain; in 1803, he was ordered to command the squadron sent against Tripoli, his flagship being the 'Constitution.' On arrival at Tangiers he opened and successfully concluded negotiations which averted a war with Morrocco. He commanded during the war with Tripoli, and upon being relieved received the thanks of Congress and a gold medal. He was buried on Murray's Hill, Portland, Me".

An only son, Edward Deering, was born 22 February 1806. There was a captain Enoch Preble, born Mass. 2 July 1763, who married Sally Cross, a brother of Commodore Edward.

Abram Preble, the common ancestor of all of the name in America, came over from England with the "Man of Kent," and settled somewhere about 1635 in Scituate, Plymouth Colony, and after arrival married a daughter of Elder Nathan Tilden.

The name is usually written in America with two b's. It is said to be originally Previle, of Norman origin. "All the Prebbles," says Christopher Preble of London, "are of dark complexion."

The arms are recorded in Heraldic College:

He beareth gules, on a pale or, between 4 lions' heads erased, argent, three diamonds sable, by the name of Preble, and was confirmed by William Flower, Norroy, on 20th October 1585 and 27th year of Queen Elizabeth, to George Preble, of the City of York, Esq., one of the Queen's Justices of the Peace within the East Riding of County of York. A man well-born, and descendant of worthy progenitors."

THOMAS PRIBBLE.

This pioneer, doubtless a close relative of the Commodore, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. At the close of the Revolutionary war he joined an exploring expedition and sailed down the Atlantic coast, to the Gulf of Mexico, and up the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, to where the city of Pittsburg now stands. After a short stay there he went out with a corps of engineers for the purpose of surveying the lines of the present Greene County. On this survey his heart was captured and in 1786 he married Hannah, daughter of Henry Enoch, a grantor of land patents. As a bridal gift, Enoch gave the wedded pair a patent for a large tract of land on the Little Kenawha, in what is now Wirt county, West Virginia, then in Harrison. He surveyed and located the grant in 1791 and later came from Redstone, Western Pa., to build a cabin and settle upon it. When he came through the settlement, which was forming at the "Point," now Parkersburg, to his tract

"Genealogical sketch of the first three generations of Prebles In America, by Captain Geo. H. Preble, U. S. Navy, printed by David Clapp & son, Boston, 1868, 325 pages."
as given him, he found Indians scarce, but bear, deer, buffalo, wolves and turkeys abundant while the river was bountifully filled with fish. He remained about six months, and was then joined by his wife and family from the Pa., homestead. With them also came her brother, Isaac Enoch.

Before that date, as a settler he had been preceded by a Mr. Deem, who had planted an orchard, which upon Pribbles arrival was found to have been barked by the bears. Still earlier had come a prospector, named Leisure, whose father having been killed by the Indians, caused him to leave the region in the path of their trail from Pt. Pleasant, to Clarksburg.

To the Pribble pioneers were born twelve children, five daughters and seven sons, all of whom lived to a ripe old age. The father died in October 1835, and was for many years a Justice of his section in the old county of Wood. Their children were:

2. Hiram, born 28 June 1793, who 17 July license 1828, August 17 1828, wedded Deborah, another daughter of Samuel Butcher. He died 22 March, 1887. Their children were seven, as named in his sketch.

3. Hugh, who wedded Perseelia Jackson, by whom were twelve children: Nanby, Arilda, Nancy Lucinda, Elzada, Hannah, Mary, Henrietta, Melinda, Jackson, Kate, Artimicia and Hugh.

4. Thomas Jr. who wedded Delilah Walker, by whom were born two children. William and Van Buren.

5. Hedgman who married 30 August 1832 Priscilla de Vaught, by whom were seven: Thomas, Henry, Hiram, Frank, Mary, Elizabeth and Roxanna.

6. Daniel who wedded Amanda Jackson, and located in Ritchie county. Their children were seven: Mary, Hannah, Thomas, Abram, Lydia, Jane, Donna, Laura and Cecelia.

10. Elizabeth who wedded James Fought, From this union were ten children: Alfred, Canzada, Thomas, Hannah, Mary, Hiram, Kitty, Hedgeman, Abram, Love.

11. Amy, who married 7 October 1819, John Foster, and bore to him seven children: John, Hannah, Commodore, Mary, Alfred, Nancy and Thomas.

HIRAM PREBBLE.

With his parents, Thomas and Hannah (Enoch) Pribble, he came to Wood county in 1796, and located on a farm of 300 acres, where Newark is now located, on the Little Kenawha river, in Wirt county. His mother was a daughter of Henry Enoch. He was born 28 June 1793 in Greene county, Pa., then considered part of Virginia. August, 17828 he wedded Deborah, daughter of Samuel Butcher, She was born in Randolph county, Virginia, 26 January 1804, and died April, 20 1853, and was buried in the Kincheloe cemetery. He enlisted in the war of 1812, in Capt. Wm. Prince’s of Wood county Militia and was sent to Ft. Meigs in the northern part of Ohio, and remained in the service till mustered out at the close of the struggle. Then he engaged in milling and merchandising at Greenville. He was a pensioner until his death at Freeport, Wirt county, 22 March, 1887, and was buried in the Fought cemetery near. His wife died 20 April, 1853, aged 49 years, buried in the Kincheloe cemetery.

Their children were:

1. Abram, born 22 August, 1831, who died 17 or 31 June, 1832 or 33.

4. Artemisia Peadro, born 18 October 1839, who 31 October 1866, wedded Thomas J. Steers. He was born 12 March 1844, at Safe Harber, Penn, and is by occupation a railroad contractor. They reside at Parkersburg, W. Va. and have six children:

1. Dora Virginia, born 29 August, 1867.
2. Laura Christina, born 16 November, 1869.
3. Kit Constance, born 29 September, 1871, who 10 July 1894, wedded Thomas R. Stephenson, who was born 29 November 1868, and is in employ at Ohio River Railroad depot at Parkersburg.
4. Thomas Pribble, born 18 August, 1874; clerk in Ohio Railroad office.
5. James Bayard, born 1 August, 1876; died 22 September 1885.

5. Hiram Butcher, known as "Bee", born 12 October 1841. He is single, resides at Freeport, and is in milling, timber and merchantile business. He took charge of the mill at Greenville after his father became aged.

6. Josephine Louise, born 5 April 1844 who 3 January 1865 wedded Oliver S. Fought. He was born at Newark, 28 February, 1842, and is a mechanic. Their children are four:

2. Huldah Frances, born 11 December, 1867.
3. Louis Hiram, born 23 October, 1870; died 10 December, 1881.
4. Alfred Franklin, born 5 January 1874.
Dora Francis, born 7 January 1847, who 12 June 1872, wedded James W. Wandling. He was born 12 February 1846, in Hedgeville, Va., and died 9 February 1890, of la grippe; was a traveling salesman for a Philadelphia shoe house. The widow resides at Elberon, W. Va. Their children are:
1. Ethel Francis, born 21 June 1873.
3. Ralph Covert, born 7 December 1877.
4. Pearl Sue, born 7 May 1879.
5. Emma Laura, born 17 January 1883.
Little can now be ascertained as to the ancestry and nativity of this pioneer family. The roll of delegates of the Virginia Assembly in several years contains the name of Daniel Kincheloe, as the member from Harrison county, doubtless the same ancestry as the branch in Wood county.

Two brothers, Daniel and Robert, came from Tidewater, Virginia, and temporarily resided in one of the mountain counties, bringing their slaves, and in 1795 migrated toward the Ohio, and settled upon a large tract of land on the north side of the Little Kenawha River, about five miles from its mouth, which had previously been purchased by Daniel. It was then an unbroken wilderness. The upper division was the home, till death in 1820, of Robert. He was industrious, military in his bearing and active in public affairs; was commissioned a Justice of the Peace 2 March 1812, and became High Sheriff in 1819 and 1820; was in 1801 Captain of a Company in the 2nd Battalion of the county militia, and was subsequently promoted to Major of the 1st Battalion, resigning the position in March 1810. He in 1793 wedded Mary daughter of George Creel, Sr. She was born 7 September 1773 and died in 1859. He died ... leaving ten children.
His brother, Daniel, Senior, lived just below, on the beautiful tract, now known in part as the county Poor Farm. He kept a ferry in early day over the Kenawha river; was a man of quiet demeanor, earnest and eminently hospitable. His will is dated 4 August 1826 and is of record in the book of that year, page 246. Daniel was captain and a recruiting officer in the War of 1812 for the 3d Reg'l. U. S. Rifles, appointed 17 March and accepted 28 March 1814; relieved in June 1815. Matthias Chapman, County Surveyor, was his First Lieut. and they recruited at Parkersburg and Clarksburg as enlisting stations.

On 27 March 1808, he deeds to William Prince for $200, a tract of 100 acres, part of his survey.

He wedded Jane Whittcotton Chinn (1) She was born in 1769; died 11 May 1829. He born in 1750; died 4 August 1834. Their children were:

Elizabeth, born in 1794, who in 1818 married Thomas, son of Lewis and Patsy (James) Vandiver. He born 18 July 1788, and was killed in battle during the Civil War, in Missouri. She died 30 March 1824. Their children were two:

At Clarksburg, February 22 1817, "The Western Virginian, published by Gideon Butler, states that from April first next, it will be discontinued, and there will begin the Republican Compiler, a "Republican newspaper."

In it Daniel Kincheloe advertises his stock of merchandise, "the superior quality, variety, and elegance of which, has not yet, perhaps, been equalled in this country."

He also notifies, "All whom it may concern that all retailers of goods, wines and spirituous liquors who have not taken proper license will be prosecuted." He signs himself, "Collector for the 4th collection district of Virginia."
2. Daniel Jr., born in 1797, who in 1824 married Hannah, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Drake) Butcher. She was born \ldots\ldots\ldots\ldots, 1805, and died 10 July 1882. He died 20 December 1868.

He was the owner of 1000 acres of land, located on the Little Kenawha River, known as Pine, or "Cedar Grove," from its verdant forest trees, and the beauty of its approach and surroundings. He dealt largely in grain and cattle. His life was full of noble deeds, performed in his naturally quiet manner.

In 1856, with wife and six children—the other five having died in infancy—he moved to Carrollton, Missouri, purchased a large farm, and engaged successfully in the culture of hemp.

In early era an enclosure amid cedar trees was made the burial place of connections of the family. It is located east of the old home, on an elevation, where repose the remains of Samuel Butcher and wife, Peyton, a son, and wife, the Vandivers, Leonards and Pribbles. Cedar Grove church is west of this enclosure upon the same farm, and beside it a grave-yard for other parties in the neighborhood. Their children were:
