The writer has long felt the need of a history of his native county, and in common with many citizens of that part of Ohio, has come to the conclusion that the lack of a suitable history has been due not so much to the dearth of interesting material as to the absence of a diligent collector sufficiently interested in the subject to gather the material up. While the present volume is concerned chiefly with the record of names and events connected with the first thirty years of the century, it will be found that the pioneer annals of Harrison county embrace by no means the least interesting portion of the county's history. So far as it goes, therefore, this book is offered as an attempt to supply a deficiency, the existence of which must be realized by all who have tried to learn something of the history of Harrison county.

Two or three of the sketches given in these Collections were printed in an abbreviated form during the year 1898 in the Cadiz "Republican." These have since been re-written and largely added to, and a number of others have been prepared, with a view to giving the reader as extensive a record of early Harrison county history as may be contained within the limits of one volume.

The second part of the book will be found to contain a very large amount of invaluable material for the student of the county’s pioneer history, being made up of much of the county’s land, marriage, burial, and will records. In the preparation of these records for printing, where such a vast number of names and dates have to be gone over, copied, re-copied, and arranged in order, it is very difficult to escape occasional errors in the spelling of a name or the transcribing of a date. While the utmost pains have been taken to prevent such errors, it is impossible to eliminate them all.

Following is a list of the principal sources of information regarding the history of Harrison county and Eastern Ohio to which the writer has had access:

Records of the Probate, Recorder’s, Comissioners’, Sheriff’s, Clerk’s, Auditor’s, and Surveyor’s offices of Harrison county.

THE SCOTCH-IRISH IN HARRISON COUNTY.

There is, perhaps, no one subject taught in our schools and institutions of learning to-day on which more misinformation has been imparted to the students than that of American history; and probably there is no part of that subject concerning which American people are more in ignorance than the part relating to their own racial origin.

Good Americans, generally, approved of the spirit of Mark Twain's rejoinder to Max O'Rell, when, in the course of a recent international exchange of compliments between the French and the Missouri humorists, the latter, to the charge that the average American did not usually know the name of his own grandfather, allowed that such might be the truth; but thought that Brother Jonathan was more apt to be sure of the name of his own father than were some others. The oft-repeated story of the observation made by a successful American gentleman traveling in Europe, who, when shown by an English lord the pictures of the latter's illustrious ancestors for some hundreds of years back, admitted that he had nothing of the kind at his home in America, because he was an illustrious ancestor himself,—is a characteristic illustration of the spirit in which, until quite recently, matters of race and family history have generally been regarded by the busy American workers of the present day.

Nevertheless, there is one class of our fellow citizens which has never been negligent in preserving the traditions and histories of their fathers; and never backward in letting America and the world at large know all about their merits and accomplishments. These are the people of New England—a people who, from the time of their first settlement in America, have preserved written records of most of their communities, and of almost every member living in and making a part of those communities; so that, as a consequence, there are few persons of New England descent living in the United States to-day, but who can find pages and volumes of history and eulogy in print as perpetual monuments to the virtues of one or several of their more or less remote progenitors.

Another and much more important consequence of this habit of committing to writing the history of men and communities in New England, is, that nearly all of our so-called histories of America have been written by New England men, are based chiefly upon New England records and examples, and have necessarily had to pass over in silence, or in a cursory way, the history of those other portions of our country and our citizens, of whom none of these written records have been preserved.

It is not strange, therefore, that in most of our schools to-day, and, I venture to say, in the public schools of Harrison county, American history is taught chiefly from books written by New England men, or their descendants; is viewed in these books from the conventional New England stand-point; and is based largely upon New England traditions, prejudices, and, in some cases, misrepresentations.

The chief misrepresentation to which attention may be called at this time, is the one so repeatedly made in certain of the newspapers and reviews, and by certain orators, and after-dinner speakers, that all the progress made by America since it was first colonized, and all the glorious history of which Americans are so proud, has been made because its people are of the Anglo-Saxon race, and in their progress are only continuing in the new world what their English forefathers had begun in the old.

Now, as a matter of fact, no such thing is the case. And while there should be no just praise withheld from the descendants of Englishmen for what their forefathers have done for America, it would be as great a wrong to them if we were to say that they had done nothing whatever, as it is to other Americans, of non-English origin, for the descendants of Englishmen to claim that the English have done it all.

How can these claims that the great men of American history are of exclusively English origin be considered in face of the fact that, of Washington's hundred generals, more or less, not half of them were of English blood; or, that of the great generals of the civil war on both sides, but little more than one-third were of English extraction; or, that of our twenty-four presidents, less than half the number have been of that stock; or, that of our great editors, three-fourths have been non-English in origin; or, that of our great judges, less than half have been English; or, that of American inventors of world-wide fame, about three out of every four have been of another race than English; or, that of the great leaders in the National congress, not half of them have been English by descent; or, that in our population to-day, nearly one-half are of other races than English. Yet these facts are all capable of ready demonstration, and can be verified by any one who will take the trouble to consult any standard biographical and statistical dictionary.

In the State of Ohio, for instance, if the English are to have the sole credit for all the good that has come to America, what would become of the fame of Arthur St. Clair, of Jeremiah Morrow, of Allen Trimble, of Duncan McArthur, of Joseph Vance, of Wilson Shannon, of Mordecai Bartley, of Reuben Wood, of Rutherford B. Hayes, of Seabury Ford, of William Medill, of James E. Campbell, of Thomas L. Young, of Joseph B. Foraker, of Charles Foster, of William McKinley, and of some few others who have been governors of the State? Or, of Presidents Grant, Hayes, Garfield, and McKinley? Or, of certain supreme court judges, such as Jacob Burnet, John McLean, Joseph R. Swan, John C. Wright, Thomas W. Bartley, W. B. Caldwell, William Kennon, Hocking H. Hunter, George W. McIlvaine, W. J. Gilmore, Rufus P. Ranney, Josiah Scott, John Clark, W. W. Johnson, and John H. Doyle? Or, of certain well-known journalists, such as Whitelaw Reid, W. L. Brown, John A. Cockerill, Joseph Medill, Samuel Medary, W. W. Armstrong, the Farans and McLeans, and Richard Smith? Or, of Bishop Simpson, of John A. Bingham, and of Salmon P. Chase? Or, of William Dean Howells and of John Q. A. Ward? Or, of Generals U. S. Grant, Phil Sheridan, Quincy A. Gilmore, James B. Steadman, Irvin McDowell, John Beatty, O. M. Mitchell, James B. McPherson, Henry W. Lawton, and the fighting families of the McCooks?

No, the truth of the matter is, that a vast proportion of American people, sometimes classed by the historians as British, have had their hard-earned laurels transferred to the brows of the so-called Anglo-Saxons, or English; and very much of the honor and glory which are so frequently claimed for the English in this country, really belong to the people of another, and a distinctly different race.

These people are the Scotch-Irish, as they have come to be called, who have done vastly more in the settlement and development of the central and southern portions of our country than the English, and yet a people who have been too busy making history to spare the time to write it; and one whose early annals, for this reason, have been, until recent years, so far neglected as to be well-nigh forgotten. This is the race to which belong, with the exception of those of Howells, Garfield, and Sheridan, probably all of the names given above; and to the same race, also, belong, it is safe to say, at least seventy-five per cent. of the sturdy farmers and substantial citizens of Harrison county.

It is needless to ask in addition, therefore, what would become of the fair name and fame of Harrison county, if the English were the only people who have made America what it is to-day.

Nevertheless, the Scotch-Irish communities and people of Harrison county, as a rule, have few traditions or remembered history back of the time when settlements were first begun there, in the early years of the present century. These people know in a general way that their respective fathers or grandfathers came from the East—from Pennsylvania usually—and in most cases from the territory originally included in the counties of Washington, Westmoreland, Cumberland, York, or Chester. The majority of them know that they are of Scotch-Irish descent; without understanding clearly what that term, in its American sense, signifies, some having the impression that it means the descendants of a married couple, of whom one parent is Scotch, and the other Irish. It may be that this feeling of belonging to a mixed nationality deters them from making any inquiries as to what are the real sources of the Scotch-Irish blood.

If the facts are ascertained, however, they will find that they have a race history than which no other nation or people can boast one more proud, whether it be English or German, Roman or Castillian. The Scotch-Irish are not, nor have they ever been, of Irish blood—using the latter word in its racial sense; but are purely Scottish. Their emigrant ancestors in this country, to whom the name was first applied, were people of unmixed Scotch descent, who came to America from their Scottish communities in the North of Ireland; and all the glorious history and ancestral traditions of their Scottish forefathers belong to their descendants in Harrison county to-day, just as much as the history and ancestral traditions of the English belong to people of early New England stock.

And, truly, it is a noble heritage, and one that will not suffer a whit by comparison with that of the English. It begins in the time of Agricola, the Roman general, who, when he had conquered all the present territory of England, and carried his victorious banners north to the Grampian hills in Scotland, found there a foe who could effectually hinder his further advance, and cause him for the first time to acknowledge that here was at last an unknown and unconquerable race beyond his own conquered ULTIMA THULE. It continues in the plundering forays and invasions of the Scots and Picts, who carried their dreaded arms from one end of the island to the other, unchecked; and, later, in the piratical incursions of the Vikings, who came westward from their safe retreats within the Norwegian fiords, to fight, to plunder, to destroy, and eventually to settle, among the sea-girt islands and peninsulas of western Scotland. Its dark and bloody deeds are instanced by the tragic history of Macbeth; and its bright and chivalrous actions are shown by incidents like that of the Battle of Otterburn, so spiritedly set forth in the glowing pages of Froissart, who says of it, that "of all the battles that have been described in my history, great and small, this was the best fought, and the most severe." Scotland's early glory came in the days of William Wallace and Robert Bruce, when its independence was won from the English by the sword; and continued through the two centuries following, because kept fresh by the blood of opposing Scots and English shed on more than two hundred battlefields. Its high ideal of freedom was realized first in the days of Knox and of Melville, when those men bid defiance to tyrants, and dared declare that rulers were amenable to law, and could be punished by law; and was again vindicated in the days of their successors, the Scots clergy, who, "when the light grew dim, and flickered on the altar, ... trimmed the lamp, and fed the sacred flame," and kept alive for themselves, for their children, and for all mankind, the precious heritage of human liberty.

The Scotsman is of composite race. The forefathers of three-fourths of the Scotch-Irish in Harrison county lived in the western Lowlands of Scotland, and their blood was of various strains, blended into what finally became that of the Scottish race. The basis of the race was the Romanized Briton (and from this line the Lowland Scot gets his Celtic blood, and not from Ireland), with more or less marked departures, occasioned by intermarriages, first with the Picts and Scots, then with the Angles, the Danes, and the Norsemen. From the last-named stock comes most of the Teutonic blood of the western Scot; while the Angles occupied and largely peopled the east coast. After the eleventh century, the Normans came into Scotland in large numbers, and occupied much of the land; so that many families can claim Norman descent. Long before the seventeenth century, when the emigration to Ireland began, the various race groups had become fused into one composite whole, having the attributes of the Celt, the Norse, the Angle, and the Norman; thus typifying many centuries ago the identical race which we are beginning to recognize here as the American—a combination of the Teuton and the Celt. Let us hope the type may include all the virtues of both without the defects of either.

The real history of the forefathers of that part of the American people who live in Harrison county, therefore—with a few individual exceptions—is not to be found in the pages of the historians and writers of England; but of those of Scotland. Their lives and spirits have been not unworthily portrayed by the wizard hand of Scott, and their joys and sorrows have been divinely sung in the inspired notes of Burns. And it is in the heart-touching stories of Maclaren, and Barrie, and Stevenson, that we find the true prototypes and the doubles of ourselves and our friends in Harrison county.

The history of Scotland as a country, and of Scottish men and institutions, however, is as a sealed book to ninety-nine out of every hundred students in most of our high-schools and colleges; and it is partly because of the entire absence of any information to the contrary in the ordinary historical text-books, that the erroneous impression has gained ground in so many places outside of New England, that our American colonies and American institutions are almost entirely of English origin.

Now, to bring the matter nearer home to the readers of this history, let us take a few of the family names that are so well known in Harrison county, and see how many of them are English, and how many are Scotch.

In 1898, Mr. Orville Dewey contributed some interesting articles to the Cadiz Republican, giving an account of the early history of his own family, and from this we learn that the Deweys came from Connecticut. They were English, although there were many of the early Scotch-Irish who settled in New England. The Hollingsworths were originally Pennsylvania Quakers, tracing back through the North of Ireland to England. The Browns were also English; likewise, the Scotts, Arnolds, Laceys, Hearns, Woods, and others. But the early representatives of nearly all of these families having intermarried with the Harrison county Scotch-Irish, their descendants living there to-day are more Scotch than English. Other originally English families from the North of Ireland may be mentioned, of whom were the Hammonds, the Phillipses, and the Haverfields; but their forefathers lived and intermarried amongst the Scotch for so long a time before coming to America that their descendants in Harrison county to-day can hardly be said to retain more than a trace of the English blood, or traits, or anything else English but the names.

The Cunningham family originated in the district of Cunningham, in Ayrshire; as did likewise the Carrick and Kyle families in the other two districts of that county.

Other Ayrshire family names represented in Harrison county are those of Aiken, Alexander, Allison, Anderson, Barclay, Blair, Boggs, Boyd, Caldwell, Cannon, Clark, Cochran, Collins, Coulter, Crawford, Culbertson, Dunlap, Ervin, Ferguson, Fullerton, Fulton, Hamilton, Hunter, Jackson, Jamison, Kennedy, Logan, McCready, Mitchell, Montgomery, Moore, Morrison, Patton, Porter, Rankin, Rea, Richey, Rogers, Simpson, Thompson, Vance, Wallace, Watson, Welch, Wiley, Wilson, and a great many more besides.

The McFaddens are first mentioned in history in connection with their residence on the Island of Mull, off the coast of and belonging to Argyleshire. All the “Macs” living in Harrison county, it may be safely said, are of Scottish descent, and usually Celtic or Highland Scots. The prefix “Mac” (meaning “son of”), is of Celtic origin, and in early times it was rarely found in connection with the names of the Lowland clans, except in the cases of McCulloch and McClellan, and a few other ancient Galloway families. Later in Scotland’s history, however, the “Macs” were carried pretty much all over the country, and into Northern Ireland, as the clans continued to migrate and to intermarry with the Lowlanders. The name, McConnell, is corrupted from McDonald, or McDonnell, at one time the largest and most powerful of the Highland clans.

From the counties of Wigtonshire and Kirkcudbrightshire (once forming the ancient principality of Galloway, and from whence come the Galloway cattle,) besides the McCullochs and the McClellans, come also the Agnews, Boyles’, Douglases, Carnahans, Carsons, Glendennings, Gordons, Hannas, Herrons, Kerrs, McCreas, McBrides, McMaths, McMychens, McMillans, Maxwells, Ramsays, Stewarts, and others.

James Hogg, the “Ettrick Shepherd,” and poet, was from Selkirkshire, and the name also occurs in Perthshire.

From Fifeshire come the Bealls, the Hendersons, and also some of the Gillespie families.

From Elginshire come the Birnies.

From Inverness, in the Highlands, come the McBeans, McKinleys, and Finlays, (all septs of the once powerful Clan Chattan, of whom the chiefs were McIntoshes and McPhersons); also the Davidsons and Grants.

From Lanarkshire, the Biggars.

From Edinburghshire, the Craigs, Kerrs, Gilmores, Ramseys, and Waddells.

From Sutherland, in the northern Highlands, the McKays, McCoys, McKees, etc., many of whom are also found in Galloway.

From Dumfriesshire, south of Glasgow, the Carothers', Elliotts, Dicksons (and, possibly, also the Dickersons), the Johnstons, and the Kirkpatricks.

From Caithness, the most northern county of Scotland, the McRaes (and, possibly, also the Raes, Reas, or Rays, although many of this name lived in Galloway and Ayrshire).

From Renfrewshire, the Knoxes.

Nearly all the Scotch who settled in the North of Ireland at the time of the first plantation of Ulster (1606 to 1625), came from the western Lowland counties of Scotland, lying on the opposite coast and less than thirty miles distant from county Down. The greater part of them came from Ayrshire and Galloway, and those two districts in Scotland were the nesting-places of the early Scottish ancestors of the majority of the people living in Harrison county to-day. The scene of Scott's "Guy Mannering" is laid in Wigtonshire (the western half of Galloway), as is also that of much of S. R. Crockett's "Galloway Herd." All readers of Burns, and of Stevenson's "Master of Ballantrae," are familiar with Ayrshire. The places and people of these districts are also well known to those who have read of the persecutions and sufferings of the early Scottish Covenanters.

The story of the Scottish emigration to Ulster may be outlined in a few paragraphs. It begins near the close of the year 1602, when Con McNeale O'Neale, of Castlereagh, got into serious trouble, by reason of not having his wine-casks full at the time when he had invited some of his relatives to have a "wee drop" with him. Con ruled the Upper Clannaboye, the north half of County Down; and happened to be holding high state in his halls of Castlereagh with his brothers, and cousins, and relatives of near degree. They were all "proper" men—to use a Celtic term of respect—and quite naturally drank Con’s cellar dry; whereupon he despatched retainers to Belfast, two miles distant, for a fresh supply of wine. There his servants had a quarrel with certain soldiers of Queen Elizabeth, who were stationed at Belfast Castle, and they came back to their master without the “drink.” This naturally roused Con to fury, and he threatened dire vengeance on his clansmen if they did not return to the fight, punish the English, and recover the wine. The second encounter proved more serious than the first; an English soldier was killed, and the Irish Government took the matter up. Con was charged with “levying war against the Queen,” and thrown into the Castle as a prisoner, from whence he seemed likely to escape only by the loss of his head. In this extremity, Con’s wife appealed for help to Hugh Montgomery, Laird of Braidstane, in Ayrshire, whose home lay on the Scottish coast, across the Irish channel. Montgomery, for a “consideration,” agreed to help Con to escape; and to that purpose immediately sent his relative, Thomas Montgomery of Blackston, who was the owner of a trading-sloop, to Carrickfergus Castle. Arriving there, the canny Thomas, without loss of time, proceeded to make love to the keeper’s daughter; and to such good effect, that having been admitted to the Castle, he contrived to get the prison-guard to drink a very large quantity of what was possibly some of the same wine over which the fight had arisen. Con was then furnished with a rope, by which he let himself out of a window, found Thomas Montgomery’s sloop waiting for him in the Lough, and was across to Braidstane and safety within a few hours. Here, Con entered into an agreement with Hugh Montgomery, by which he agreed to cede to him half his lands in Clannaboye (the proportion afterwards being increased to two-thirds), on condition that the latter should procure him a free pardon from King James for all his offences, and get Con admitted to the King’s presence, and allowed to kiss the King’s hand. Through the assistance of Mr. James Hamilton, an influential courtier, this pardon was later obtained, and Con admitted to His Majesty’s presence; and two-thirds of Con’s estates were in due time confirmed to Hamilton (who also required a “consideration”) and Montgomery by the Crown.

As soon as the patents were issued by the Irish Council, Con’s beneficiaries crossed into Scotland again, to call upon their whole kith and kin to aid them in the plantation of their estates, it having been a condition imposed by the King, in confirming the grant, that the lands were to be “planted” with English and Scottish colonists; and to be granted only to those of English and Scottish blood, “and not to any of the mere Irish.” To Hamilton fell the western portion of North Down, to Montgomery, the eastern; and both seem to have added to their estates, as Con O’Neale was forced to sell the third which he had reserved for himself. Both were Ayrshire men, and both from the northern division of the county. Hamilton was of the Hamilton family of Dunlop; and Montgomery was from near Beith. The former founded the towns of Bangor and Killyleagh, and raised churches in each of the six parishes embraced in his estate—Bangor, Killinchy, Holywood, Ballyhalbert, Dundonald, and Killyleagh. Montgomery’s estate embraced the country around Newton and Donaghadee known as the Great Ards. He belonged to a family having numerous connections throughout North Ayrshire and Renfrewshire, and to them he turned for assistance. His principal supporters were his kinsmen, Thomas Montgomery, his brother-in-law, John Shaw, son of the laird of Wester Greenock, and Colonel David Boyd, of the noble house of Kilmarnock. With their help he seems to have persuaded many others of high and low degree to join in trying their fortunes in Ireland, among them being the Montgomeries, Calderwoods, Agnews, Adairs, Cunninghams, Shaws, Muirs, Maxwells, Boyles, Harvies, and many others with good west-country surnames.

The success of this settlement made by Hamilton and Montgomery was immediate; for four years after the foundation of the colony—in 1610—Montgomery alone was able to bring before “the King’s muster-master a thousand able fighting men to serve, when out of them a militia should be raised.” Four years after this time, in a letter written from North Down by the Earl of Abercorn to John Murray, King James’s secretary of state, he says, in referring to the same colonists: “They have above 2,000 habile Scottis men well armit heir, rady for his Majestie’s service as thai sall be commandit.” This muster of 2,000 men able to bear arms, represented an emigration of at least 10,000 persons.

Meantime, across the river Lagan, in county Antrim, a plantation had been made by Sir Arthur Chichester, then Lord Deputy of Ireland. This, though not at first peculiarly Scottish, was soon to become so. In 1603, Chichester obtained a grant of the Castle of Belfast, and around this fortress a village soon sprang up. The Commissioners’ Survey, taken in the year 1611, reports that “the town of Belfast is plotted out in a good forme, wherein are many famelyes of English, Scotch, and some Manksmen already inhabitinge, and ane inn with very good lodging." The Settlement Commissioners passed along the north shore of Belfast Lough, finding everywhere houses springing up, and in every part of the Lord Deputy's lands, "many English famelies, some Scottes, and dyvers eyvill Irish planted." While South Antrim was thus "planted," mainly by English settlers, the northern half of the county was opened up for settlement, without the violent transference of land from Irish to Briton, which was carried out in other parts of Ulster. The northeast corner of Ireland had been long held by the MacDonnells (the Highland pronunciation of this name is MacConnell), a clan which also peopled the island of Jura, and Cantyre on the mainland of Scotland. The chief of these Scoto-Irishmen, Randall MacDonnell, after the Earl of Tyrone's rebellion, resolved to throw in his lot with the Government, and turn loyal subject. This he did, and as reward received a grant of the northern half of county Antrim, from Larne to Portrush, and the honor of knighthood. He set himself to the improvement of his lands, letting out to the natives on the coast, and also to the Scottish settlers, such arable portions of his lands as had been depopulated by the war, for terms varying from twenty-one to 301 years. These leases seem to have been largely taken advantage of by the Scottish settlers, who allowed the natives to keep the "Glynnes," or Glens, and themselves took possession of the rich land along the river Bann, from Lough Neagh to the town of Coleraine, near its mouth. Thus, in time, county Antrim, from north to south, became nearly as Scottish as the portion of county Down lying north of the Mourne mountains.

The plantations in counties Down and Antrim, however, were limited in scope in comparison with the "Great Plantation in Ulster," for which James I.'s reign will be forever remembered in Ireland.

About the year 1607, O'Neill, Earl of Tyrone, and MacDonnell, Earl of Tyrconnel, with a number of the lesser Irish chiefs, having rebelled against the King and been proclaimed traitors, their lands were confiscated by the Crown; and all of northern Ireland—Londonderry, Donegal, Tyrone, Cavan, Armagh, and Fermanagh—passed into the hands of the King.

The plan adopted by James for the colonization of these six "escheated" counties, was to take possession of the finest portions of this great tract of country (amounting in all to nearly four millions of acres); to divide it into small estates, none larger than two thousand acres; and to grant these to men of known wealth and substance. Those who accepted grants were bound to live on their lands themselves, to bring with them English and Scottish settlers, and to build for themselves and for their tenants fortified places for defence, houses to live in, and churches in which to worship. The native Irish were assigned to the poorer lands and less accessible districts; while the allotments to the English and Scots were kept together, so that they might form communities, and not mix or intermarry with the Irish. The purpose was not only to transfer the ownership of the land from Irish to Briton, but to introduce a British population in place of an Irish one.

James seems to have seen that the parts of Scotland nearest Ireland, and which had most intercourse with it, were most likely to yield proper colonists. He resolved, therefore, to enlist the assistance of the great families of the southwest, trusting that their feudal power would enable them to bring with them bodies of colonists. Thus, grants were made to Ludovick Stewart, Duke of Lennox, who had great power in Dumbartonshire; to James Hamilton, Earl of Aboyne, and his brothers, who represented the power of the Hamiltons in Renfrewshire. North Ayrshire had been already largely drawn on by Hamilton and Montgomery, but one of the sons of Lord Kilmarnock, Sir Thomas Boyd, received a grant; while from South Ayrshire came the Cunninghams and Crawfords, and Andrew Stewart (Lord Ochiltree) and his son. But it was on Galloway men that the greatest grants were bestowed. Almost all the great houses of the time are represented—Sir Robert MacLellan, Laird Bomby, as he is called, who afterwards became Lord Kirkeudbright; John Murray of Broughton, one of the secretaries of state; Vans (Vance) of Barnbarroch; Sir Patrick McKie of Laerg; Dunbar of Mochrum; one of the Stewarts of Garlies, from whom Newtown Stewart takes its name. With the recipient of 2,000 acres, the agreement was that he was to bring "forty-eight able men of the age of eighteen or upwards, being born in England or the inward [i.e., southern] parts of Scotland." The progress of the colonies in the different counties is very accurately described in a series of reports by Government inspectors, at various periods between the years 1610 to 1630, and in the letters of Chichester himself, which are to be found in the Calendar of State Papers for Ireland, and in the Carew Papers (both published by the British Government).

The most interesting of these reports are those regarding "undertakers" (as the grantees were called), who took possession in the year 1610, made up their minds to remain and to thrive in Ulster, and who founded families whose names were afterwards to be well known in Ireland. In Donegal, on Lough Swilly, will be found on the map the names of two villages, Manor Cunningham and Newtown Cunningham. The men who introduced so Scottish a name into °( Irish a county are thus noticed in the report of 1611: “Sir James Cunningham, Knight, Laird Glangarnoth, 2,000 acres, took possession, but returned into Scotland.
Three families of British residents preparing to build . . . John Cunningham of Cranfield, 1,000 acres, resident with one family of British . . . Cuthbert Cunningham, 1,000 acres, resident with two families of British; built an Irish house of copies, and prepared materials to re-edify the Castle of Coole-McEtreen.” In county Tyrone, “The Earl of Abercorn, chief undertaker in the precinct in the county of Tyrone, has taken possession, resident with lady and family, and built for the present near the town of Strabane some large timber houses . . .
His followers and tenants have since May last built twenty-eight houses of fair copies, and before May by his tenants, who are all Scottish men, the number of thirty-two houses of like goodness.” “The Lo. Uchelrie [Lord Ochiltree] 3,000 acres in the county of Tyrone, being stayed by contrary winds in Scotland, arrived in Ireland at the time of our being in Ar­ magh, upon our return home, accompanied with thirty-two followers, gen. of sort, a minister, some tenants, freeholders, and artificers.”

In 1618, the Irish Government instructed Captain Nicholas Pynnar to inspect every allotment in the six “escheated” counties, and to report on each one, whether held by “natives” or “foreign planters.” Pynnars report (published in the Irish State Papers), presents a very exact picture of what had been done by the settlers in the counties inspected—Londonderry, Donegal, Tyrone, Armagh, Cavan, and Fermanagh. He states that, “there are upon occasion 8,000 men of British birth and descent for defence, though a fourth part of the lands is not fully inhabited.” Of these, fully three-fourths must have been Scots; and if there be added the great colonies in Down and Antrim, there must have been an immigration from Scotland of between 30,000 and 40,000 in these ten years.

The only county in which the Scottish settlers failed to take firm root was Fermanagh, for there, in 1618, when Pynnar reported, a large number of the Scottish proportions had been sold, and were held by Eng­ ishmen. The result is seen in the small number of Presbyterians in comparison to Episcopalians to be found at the present day in county Fer­
The most exact account of the emigration to Ulster is contained in a book of travels in Scotland and Ireland, by Sir William Brereton, of Cheshire, England. He states that he came to Irvine, in Ayrshire, on July 1st, 1635, and was hospitably entertained by Mr. James Blair, and that his host informed him that “above ten thousand persons have within two years last past left this country wherein they lived, which was between Aberdine and Enuerness [Inverness], and are gone for Ireland; they have come by one hundred in company through this town, and three hundred have gone hence together, shipped for Ireland at one tide. None of them can give a reason why they leave the country; only some of them who make a better use of God’s hand upon them have acknowledged to mine host in these words, ‘that it was a just judgment of God to spew them out of the land for their unthankfulness.’ One of them I met withal and discoursed with at large, who could give no good reason, but pretended the landlords increasing their rents; but their swarming in Ireland is so much taken notice of and disliked, as that the Deputy has sent out a warrant to stay the landing of any of these Scotch that come without a certification.”

The closing sentence of the foregoing extract gives us a brief and characteristic description of Scottish motives and methods in the colonization and settlement of a new country, that may well be applied to every one of their successive migrations, or “swarmings,” from that day to this. It was the spirit of unrest, the thirst for adventure, and, chiefly, the desire to better their worldly condition, that led them into the Land of Promise in that day, and at numerous periods since. They came without regard to the jealous forebodings of the governing few, already on the ground, who feared they themselves would be outnumbered by the strangers; they likewise paid no regard to the official restrictions by which the rulers of Ireland at that time, and the Councils of American colonies a century later, sought to prevent their entry.

The emigration from Ireland to America of the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of these Scottish colonists of the sixteenth century began soon after 1700; and for more than three-quarters of a century afterwards, Ulster poured into America a continuous stream, sometimes reaching the dimensions of a flood, of people of Scottish birth or descent. In 1718, several hundred of them came together from the Valley of the Bann, south of the town of Coleraine, in county Londonderry, landing at Boston. Here, they were not permitted by the Puritans to remain, but were obliged to go out to the frontiers, forming colonies along the coast of Maine, at Londonderry, in New Hampshire, and at Worcester, in Massachusetts. In the latter place, they built a church, and contemplated having Presbyterian services, after the manner of their fathers; but the bigoted Puritans, then in the majority, tore down the building in the night; forced them to abandon the project, and taxed them to support their own State Church. Many of these settlers were thus obliged to move further out towards the frontier, where they founded the towns of Pelham and Coleraine, in Massachusetts.

A great many Scotch and Scotch-Irish also emigrated to New York, to New Jersey, and to Maryland, Virginia, and the Carolinas. But it was to Pennsylvania, the Quaker Colony, that the great bulk of the Ulster migration came. They began to reach there before 1710; and before 1720, thousands had come into the colony by way of Newcastle, Del. (then included in Pennsylvania). At first, they generally settled near the disputed Maryland boundary line. Before 1730, they had occupied much of the lower lands in the townships of East and West Nottingham, Cecil county, Maryland, and Mill Creek and White Clay Creek in Newcastle county, Delaware. In Pennsylvania they settled in the townships of London Britain, New London, Londonderry, London Grove, East and West Nottingham, Upper and Lower Oxford, East and West Fallowfield, Sadsbury, East and West Caln, and the newer townships between, in Chester county; Little Britain, Colerain, Bart, Sadsbury, Salisbury, Drumore, Martic, and Donegal in Lancaster county; and Derry, Paxtang, and Hanover, in Dauphin county. They had also gone into Bucks county in large numbers, settling in Warwick and Warminster townships, along Neshaminy creek; and in Northampton county, in Allen and Hanover townships.

James Logan, then secretary of the province, and himself a Scotch-Irish Quaker, writing of them to the Penns in 1724, states that they had generally taken up the southern lands (towards the Maryland line), and as they rarely approached him with proposals of purchase, he calls them “bold and indigent strangers, saying as their excuse, when challenged for titles, that we had solicited for colonists and they had come accordingly.” They were, however, understood to be a tolerated class, exempt from quit-rents by an ordinance of 1720, in consideration of their being a frontier people, and forming a cordon of defence about the non-fighting Quakers. They thus served to protect them, if need be—and the necessity often arose—from the murderous incursions of the Indians, and from Maryland and Virginia invaders who claimed part of the land as within the bounds of their own colonies.

In 1729, Logan expresses himself as pleased to find that Parliament is about to take measures to prevent the too free emigration from Ulster to America. "It looks," he writes, "as if Ireland is to send all its inhabitants hither, for last week not less than six ships arrived, and every day, two or three arrive also. The common fear is that if they thus continue to come they will make themselves proprietors of the Province. It is strange that they thus crowd where they are not wanted... The Indians themselves are alarmed at the swarms of strangers, and we are afraid of a breach between them—for the [Scotch-Irish] are very rough to them." In 1730, he writes and complains of the Irish as having in an "audacious and disorderly manner" possessed themselves about that time of the whole of Conestoga Manor, a tract of about 15,000 acres, which had been reserved by the Penns for themselves, as it contained some of the best land in the Province. In taking this land by force, he says, they alleged that "it was against the laws of God and nature, that so much land should be idle while so many Christians wanted it to labor on, and to raise their bread." This same spirit on the part of the Scotch-Irish led them in after years (1745-50) to settle in the Tuscarora and Path Valleys, where their cabins were burned by the provincial authorities, and later (1763-8), along Redstone creek in what is now Fayette county, where they were warned off by the Quaker Assembly, "under pain of death;" and later still (1779 and 1784-7) along and near Short creek, in what is now the territory of Jefferson, Belmont, and Harrison counties, Ohio, where they were repeatedly driven off by United States troops, their cabins burned, and their improvements destroyed; but to which localities they as persistently returned and rebuilt, and remained on the land, improving it, until the Territory was thrown open for settlement.

In another letter written by Logan, about the same time (1730), he says: "I must own, from my own experience in the land-office, that the settlement of five families from Ireland gives me more trouble than fifty of any other people. Before we were broke in upon, ancient Friends and first settlers lived happily; but now the case is quite altered."

Logan's successor, Richard Peters, had a somewhat similar experience with the Scotch-Irish emigrants of his day. In a letter written by him in 1743, he states that he went to the Manor of Maske, to warn off and dispossess the squatter settlers. This was another choice tract of upwards of 40,000 acres, located in the wilderness by the Penns as a reservation, lying on both sides of Marsh creek, then in Lancaster, now in Adams county, being the site of Gettysburg, and including the bottom lands southward to the Maryland line. On that occasion, the people who were settled there, to the number of about seventy, assembled and forbade Penn’s surveyors to proceed. On the latter persisting, the settlers broke the surveyors’ chain, and compelled them to retire. Peters had with him at the time a sheriff and a magistrate; and many of the settlers were afterwards indicted; but a compromise was effected, by which the squatters were permitted to lease and purchase the Penn titles for a comparatively insignificant consideration; and they were left in possession.

The reasons for the emigration of the Scotch from Ulster to America are in part the same as those given to Brereton by the emigrant from Scotland to Ireland in 1635, which are noted above. But there was another and more cogent reason in addition. In Ireland, notwithstanding the fact that they had saved that country to Protestantism and to the Crown in the revolution of 1688, the Scots were grievously and unjustly discriminated against in the matter of their religion, which was, of course, generally of the Presbyterian form. These discriminations took the form of certain enactments by the Bishop’s party in the Irish Parliament (which was then entirely ruled by the ecclesiastics of the Episcopal or State Church). These enactments deprived Presbyterians of the right to hold office in Ireland, required them to pay tithes in support of the Episcopal clergy, prohibited marriages from being performed by any but a Bishop-ordained priest, either of the Roman or Episcopal Church; and annulled marriages theretofore performed by Presbyterian ministers, declaring illegitimate the children of such marriages. Adding to these the economic causes arising from a discriminating tariff levied against Irish woollens and linens, in favor of the English manufacturers, and the raising of rents by the landlords, to whom a great majority of the Ulster Scotch-Irish were but tenants, and we have a sufficient explanation of the reasons for the exodus which took place from Ireland to America during the eighteenth century. Archbishop Boulter, Primate of Ireland, writing to the Bishop of London in 1728 concerning the emigration to America, says:

My Lord—As we have had reports here that the Irish gentlemen in London would have the great burden of tithes thought one of the chief grievances that occasion such numbers of the people of the north going to America, I have for some time designed to write to your lordship on that subject.

But a memorial lately delivered in here by the Dissenting ministers of this place, containing the causes of this desertion, as represented to them by the letters of their brethren in the north, (which memorial we have lately sent over to my lord lieutenant), mentioning the oppression of the ecclesiastical courts about tithes as one of their great grievances. I found myself under a necessity of troubling your lordship on this occasion with a true state of that affair, and of desiring your lordship to discourse with the ministry about it.

The gentlemen of this country have, ever since I came hither, been talking to others, and persuading their tenants, who complained of the excessiveness of their rents, that it was not the paying too much rent, but too much tithes that impoverished them; and the notion soon took among the Scotch Presbyterians, as a great part of the Protestants in the north are, who it may easily be supposed do not pay tithes with great cheerfulness. And indeed I make no doubt but the landlords in England might with great ease raise a cry amongst their tenants of the great oppression they lay under by paying tithes.

What the gentlemen want to be at is, that they may go on raising their rents, and that the clergy should still receive their old payments for their tithes. But as things have happened otherwise, and they are very angry with the clergy, without considering that it could not happen otherwise than it has, since if a clergyman saw a farm raised in its rent, e. g., from 10 to 20 l. per annum, he might be sure his tithe was certainly worth double what he formerly took for it. Not that I believe the clergy have made a proportionable advancement in their composition for their tithes to what the gentlemen have made in their rents. And yet it is upon this rise of the value of the tithes that they would persuade the people to throw their distress.

In a conference I had with the Dissenting ministers here some weeks ago, they mentioned the raising the value of the tithes beyond what had been formerly paid, that a proof that the people were oppressed in the article of tithes. To which I told them, that the value of tithes did not prove any oppression, except it were proved that that value was greater than they were really worth, and that even then, the farmer had his remedy by letting the clergy take it in kind.

And there is the less in this argument, because the fact is, that about the years 1694 and 1695, the lands here were almost waste and unsettled, and the clergy in the last distress for tenants for their tithes, when great numbers of them were glad to let their tithes at a very low value, and that during incumbency, for few would take them on other terms; and as the country has since settled and improved, as those incumbents have dropped off, the tithe of those parties has been considerably advanced without the least oppression, but I believe your lordship will think not without some grumbling. The same, no doubt, has happened where there have been careless or needy incumbents, and others of a different character that have succeeded them.

I need not mention to your lordship that I have been forced to talk to several here, that if a landlord takes too great a portion of the profits of a farm for his share by way of rent (as the tithe will light on the tenant's share), the tenant will be impoverished; but then it is not the tithe but the increased rent that undoes the farmer. And indeed, in this country, where I fear the tenant hardly ever has more than one-third of the profit he makes of his farm for his share, and too often but a fourth or perhaps a fifth part, as the tenant's share is charged with the tithe, his case is no doubt hard, but it is plain from what side the hardship arises.

Another thing they complain of in their memorial is, the trouble that has been given them about their marriages and their school-masters. As to this I told them, that for some time they had not been molested about their marriages; and that as to their school-masters, I was sure they had met with very little trouble on that head, since I had never heard any such grievance so much as mentioned till I saw it in their memorial.

Another matter complained of is, the sacramental test, in relation to which I told them the laws were the same in England.

As for other grievances they mention, such as raising the rents unreasonably, the oppression of justices of the peace, seneschals, and other officers in the country, as they are of no ways of an ecclesiastical nature, I shall not trouble your lordship with an account of them, but must desire your lordship to talk with the ministry on the subject I have now wrote about, and endeavor to prevent their being prepossessed with an unjust opinion of the clergy, or being disposed, if any attempt should be made from hence, to suffer us to be stript of our just rights.

The spirit of emigration—fostered no doubt by the accounts sent home by their countrymen who had preceded them—seized these people to such an extent that it threatened almost a total depopulation. Such multitudes of husbandmen, laborers, and manufacturers flocked to the other side of the Atlantic, that the landlords began to be alarmed, and to present ways and means for preventing the growing evil. Scarce a ship sailed for the colonies that was not crowded with men, women, and children. It is stated by Proud, in his history of Pennsylvania, that by the year 1729, six thousand Scotch-Irish had come to that colony, and that before the middle of the century, nearly twelve thousand arrived annually for several years. In September, 1736, alone, one thousand families sailed from Belfast, on account of the difficulty of renewing their leases.
The first extensive emigration took place from about the year 1718 to the middle of the century. A second emigration occurred from about 1771 to 1773, although there was a continuous current westward between these two periods.

The cause of this second emigration was somewhat similar to the first. It is well known that a greater portion of the lands in Ireland are owned by a comparatively small number of proprietors, who rent them to the farming classes on long leases. In 1771, the leases on the estate of the Marquis of Donegal having expired, the rents were so largely advanced that many of the tenants could not comply with the demands, and were deprived of the farms they had occupied. This roused a spirit of resentment to the oppression of the large landed proprietors, and an immediate and extensive emigration to America was the result. From 1771 to 1773, there sailed from the ports in the north of Ireland, nearly one hundred vessels, carrying upwards of 25,000 passengers, nearly all of whom were Presbyterians. This was shortly before the breaking out of the Revolutionary War, and, as has been often remarked, these people, leaving the old world in such a temper, became a powerful contribution to the cause of liberty, and to the Independence of the colonies.

The Scotch-Irish emigrants landed principally at Newcastle and Philadelphia, and thence found their way northward and westward into the eastern and middle counties of Pennsylvania. From thence, one stream followed the Cumberland and Virginia valleys into Virginia and North and South Carolina, and from these colonies, passed on into and settled Tennessee and Kentucky. Another powerful body went into western Pennsylvania, and settling on the head waters of the Ohio, became famous, both in civil and ecclesiastical history.

The Pennsylvania Scotch-Irish began to settle west of the Blue Ridge mountains before 1750, where up to that time the Indians held undisputed sway. Fear of an Indian outbreak led the Penns in that year to send the justices of Cumberland county over the mountains into the Tuscarora, Aughwick, and Path Valleys, where the settlers were dispossessed, their cabins burned, and their bonds taken that they should return to the older settlements. Some of them did return for a brief period, but soon went back, while others hid themselves away in the woods, and after the justices had departed, built themselves new cabins, and continued to improve their “claims.” Before 1760, small settlements were made by members of this hardy and adventurous race around the military posts of Forts Bedford, Redstone, and Ligonier; and in 1768,
Rev. John Steel and others were sent by the Provincial authorities to warn off the settlers at Redstone (in Fayette county) and Turkey Foot (in Somerset county). In 1769, however, the land having been ceded by the Indians, all of southwestern Pennsylvania was thrown open to settlement, and within the next ten years more than 25,000 people were living in the territory now comprising the counties of Westmoreland, Allegheny, Fayette, and Washington. In 1790, the population of these four counties amounted to upwards of 63,000, Washington county alone containing nearly 24,000 inhabitants.

In his “Introductory Memoir to the Journal of Braddock’s Expedition,” Winthrop Sargent gives an estimate of the character of the Scotch-Irish, which, although properly objected to by some as exaggerated, is not an unfavorable description of many of the early pioneers of Pennsylvania:

They were a hardy, brave, hot-headed race, excitable in temper, unrestrainable in passion, invincible in prejudice. Their hand opened as impetuously to a friend as it clinched against an enemy. They loathed the Pope as sincerely as they venerated Calvin and Knox; and they did not particularly respect the Quakers. If often rude and lawless it was partly the fault of their position. They hated the Indian while they despised him, and it does not seem, in their dealings with this race, as though there were any sentiments of honor or magnanimity in their bosoms that could hold way against the furious tide of passionate, blind resentment. Impatient of restraint, rebellious against everything that in their eyes bore the semblance of injustice, we find these men readiest among the ready on the battle-fields of the Revolution. If they had faults, a lack of patriotism or of courage was not among the number.
CHAPTER II.

THE FRIENDS, OR QUAKERS, IN HARRISON COUNTY.

The founder of the society of Friends was George Fox, who was born at Drayton in the Clay, in Liecestershire, England, in July, 1624. His father was a Puritan weaver, and the son, originally intended for the church, was apprenticed to a shoemaker and dealer in wool. "In 1643," he says, "I left my relations, and broke off all familiarity with young or old." For the next few years, he was in spiritual darkness, and groped after the light. He dates the beginning of his Society from Liecestershire, in 1644. The course of Quakerism was at first toward the north of England. It appeared in Warwickshire in 1645; in Nottinghamshire in 1646; in Derby in 1647; in the adjacent counties in 1648, 1649, and 1650. It reached Yorkshire in 1651; Lancaster and Westmoreland, 1652; Cumberland, Durham, and Northumberland, 1653; London, and most other parts of England, Scotland, and Ireland, in 1654. In 1655, Friends went beyond sea, "where truth also sprung up," and in 1656 "it broke forth in America, and many other places." (Fox's Journal, II., 442.)

The Society of Friends was not organized by the establishment of meetings to inspect the affairs of the church until some years after Fox began preaching, and then a prominent part of the business of these meetings was to aid those Friends who were in prison, for persecution followed hard upon their increase in numbers. In 1661, 500 were in prison in London alone; there were 4,000 in jail in all England; and the Act of Indulgence liberated 1,200 Quakers in 1673. But Quakerism flourished under persecution. They showed a firmness which has been seen nowhere else in the annals of religious history. Other Dissenters might temporize, plot against the Government, or hold meetings in secret; the Quakers, never. They scorned these things. They received the brutal violence of the Government in meekness; they met openly, and in defiance of its orders; they wearied it by their very persistence.
Nevertheless, the simplicity, the earnestness, the devotion, and the practical nature of this system of theology, when contrasted with the dry husk of Episcopacy, and the jangling creeds of the Dissenters, won them adherents by the thousands. They came mostly from the lower ranks of society, but from all sects.

Quakerism is distinctively the creed of the seventeenth century.
Seekers were in revolt against the established order. It gave these seekers what they were looking for. In theology, it was un-Puritan; but in cultus, modes, and forms, it was more than Puritan. The Quaker was the Puritan of the Puritans. He was an extremist, and this brought him into conflict with the established order. He believed that Quakerism was primitive Christianity revived. He recognized no distinction between the clergy and the laity; he refused to swear, for Christ had said, swear not at all; he refused to fight, for the religion of Christ is a religion of love, not of war; he would pay no tithes, for Christ had said, ye have freely received, freely give; he called no man master, for he thought the terms, Rabbi, Your Holiness, and Right Reverend con­ noted the same idea. He rejected the dogmas of water baptism and the Puritan Sabbath, and in addition to these, claimed that inspiration is not limited to the writers of the Old and New Testaments, but is the gift of Jehovah to all men who will accept it, and to interpret the Scriptures, men must be guided by the Spirit that guided its authors. Here was the cardinal doctrine of their creed, and the point where they differed radically from other Dissenters. Add to this the doctrine of the Inner Light, the heavenly guide given directly to inform or illuminate the individual conscience, and we have the corner-stones of their system.

In July, 1656, Ann Austin and Mary Fisher, the vanguard of a Quaker army, appeared in Boston from Barbadoes. They were the first Quakers to arrive in America. They were imprisoned and shipped back.
In October of the same year, a law was passed, which provided a fine for the shipmaster who knowingly brought in Quakers, and obliged him to carry them out again. The Quaker was to be whipped, and committed to the house of correction. Any person importing books, "or writings concerning their devilish opinions," or defending their "heretical opinions," was to be fined, and, for the third offense, banished. Nor was any person to revile the magistrates and ministry, "as is usual with the 24 HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS OF HARRISON COUNTY

Quakers.” The law of October, 1657, imposed a fine for entertaining a Quaker. If a Quaker returned after being sent away once, he was to lose one ear; if he returned the second time, the other ear; and the third offense was punished by boring the tongue. The law of October, 1658, banished both resident and foreign Quakers, under pain of death. In Massachusetts, Quakers had their ears cut off; they were branded; they were tied to the cart-tail and whipped through the streets; women were shamefully exposed to public gaze; and in 1659-60, three men and one woman were hanged on Boston Common. Such was the welcome of the first Quakers to American soil.

Pennsylvania, the Quaker Colony, was founded by William Penn, in 1681, under a patent granted by Charles II. on March 4th of that year. The first colony left England in August, 1681, in three ships, the John and Sarah, from London, the Amity, from London, and the Factor, from Bristol. The John and Sarah is said to have landed first; the Amity was carried by a gale to the West Indies; and the Factor, having proceeded up the Delaware as far as the present town of Chester, was, on December 11th, frozen up in the channel, and its passengers obliged to pass the winter there. William Penn had sent his cousin, Captain William Markham, with the colonists, as deputy governor, and did not emigrate himself until the month of August, 1682, when he embarked on the Welcome. After a passage of some two months, during which smallpox broke out among the emigrants, and carried off one-third of their number, Penn and his fellow colonists landed at Newcastle, Del., on October 27th. Of the history of Penn's colony, and of the Quaker government during the next ninety-three years, and until it was finally overthrown in 1776 by the Revolutionary Scotch-Irish, it is not necessary here to speak. Much of this is familiar history to every school-boy. But the influence of the Quakers in the settlement and growth of the states south of Pennsylvania, has never been sufficiently recognized; and as it was from these states that most of the Quaker emigrants to Harrison and adjoining counties came, it will be appropriate to inquire into the history of the Quaker in the South. “They appeared in Virginia,” says Dr. Stephen B. Weeks (from whose work on Southern Quakers and Slavery much of this sketch is condensed), “soon after their organization; they were in the Carolinas almost with the first settlers; they were considerable in number and substance; they were well-behaved and law-abiding; they maintained friendly relations with the Indians; they were industrious and frugal; they were zealous missionaries; and through their earnest and faithful preaching became, toward the close of the seventeenth century, the largest and only organized body of Dissenters in these colonies.

“They have always been zealous supporters of religious freedom. They bore witness to their faith under bodily persecution in Virginia; under disfranchisement and tithes in the Carolinas and Georgia. By reason of their organization and numbers, they were bold and aggressive in North Carolina, in the struggle against the Established Church. They took the lead in this struggle for religious freedom in the first half of the eighteenth century, as the Presbyterians did in the latter half. They continued an important element in the life of these states until about 1800, when their protest against slavery took the form of migration. They left their old homes in the South by thousands, and removed to the free Northwest, particularly Ohio and Indiana. These emigrants composed the middle and lower ranks of society, who had few or no slaves, and who could not come into economic competition with slavery. They were accompanied by many who were not Quakers, but who were driven to emigration by the same economic cause, and so great was this emigration that in 1850, one-third of the population of Indiana is said to have been made up of native North Carolinians and their children.

“Soon after 1800, Quakers disappeared entirely from the political and religious life of South Carolina and Georgia. They now number only a few hundred in Virginia. They are now relatively less important in North Carolina than in colonial days, but are still an important factor in the making of that state.”

Under the Ordinance of 1787, passed by Congress for the government of the Northwest Territory, neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except for crime, was to be allowed in any part of this territory; and with a legal guarantee in the organic law of the territory, it became a fit home for men who found themselves driven to migration by the institution of slavery in the South.

When we come to study these Quaker migrations in detail, there is little to differentiate those of one state from those of another. They went in substantially the same way, but owing to difference in location, pursued different routes. At first, North Carolina Quakers went very largely to Tennessee, while Virginia Quakers, being nearer, went directly to Ohio. In this way, Virginia Quakers took possession of Ohio, while North Carolina Quakers pressed on to Indiana.

The first settlers going West, after the opening of the Northwest Territory to settlement, stopped naturally in Ohio. As there were then no Friends’ meetings in that territory, Quaker emigrants left their certificates at Redstone (in Fayette county) and Westland (in Washington county), Pennsylvania. The first certificate to Westland meeting is dated June 24, 1785. Most of the certificates to Westland and Redstone came from Virginia meetings. The migrations of Carolina Friends to this part of the West were few, until after the establishment of the Ohio meetings. After 1785, certificates from Virginia monthly meetings to Redstone and Westland became numerous; about half of them represent families, some of them being young couples who turned to the West for their fortunes. Those Friends who took certificates to Redstone and Westland were but the advance guard of the western migration which set in about the year 1800. They continued to go to these meetings for a year or two longer; thus South River sent twelve to Westland in 1801, and the southern Goose Creek sent fifteen in 1801 and 1802, of which thirteen were families, besides a considerable number sent before the beginning of the present century. Meetings were soon established within the Northwest Territory, and then Westland soon disappears as a stopping-place. Thus, in 1802, we find certificates from South River to “Concord Monthly Meeting, Northwest Territory;” but this name almost immediately gives place to “Concord Monthly Meeting, State of Ohio,” and the migrations at once become very numerous. Mr. Williams’ very full account of the emigration of his own family from North Carolina to Concord settlement (in Colerain township, Belmont county) will be found in the Chapter on Harrison County Pioneers. During the first ten years of the century, most of the emigrants from Virginia went from Crooked Run, Hopewell, South River, and the two Goose Creek Monthly Meetings; during the second decade they went from Hopewell, South River, and the southern Goose Creek Monthly Meetings. The migration from the northern Goose Creek and Hopewell became active again about 1825, and continued so until 1836. The meetings in Virginia which belonged to Baltimore Yearly Meeting were the first to send out settlers, for they were nearer the western country, and had less to hold them in the way of local associations. From 1812-16, there was a considerable migration from the lower meetings of the Virginia Yearly Meeting. Of the meetings belonging to this Yearly Meeting, South River furnished the greater number of emigrants. From this meeting there went eighty-six families, and forty-three single persons, their removal covering the forty years from 1801 to 1840. In the same way, migrations from the southern Goose Creek began with the century, were to Westland first, and then to Ohio. These removals sapped the life of the Meeting; and it was laid down in 1814. In 1811, the movement began among all the lower meetings. Emigrants from Virginia went largely to Ohio. Those who took certificates to the Indiana meetings belong to the later period.

The first migration from North Carolina to the West was made directly over the Allegheny mountains, by the adventurers who laid the foundations of Tennessee. The first considerable movement of Friends from North Carolina to the Northwest was made from the Contentnea Quarter. It was emphatic and sweeping in its character. It was literally a migration. A letter written from Concord, Belmont county, Ohio, (the Quaker settlement a few miles southeast of New Athens), by Borden Stanton, one of the leaders of this migration, to Friends at Wrightsborough, Ga., who were also thinking of going West, and who did so at a later date, has fortunately been preserved. It reveals to us the motives, the troubles, and the trials of these modern pilgrims to an unknown land. It is dated 25th of 5th month, 1802, and reads as follows:

Dear Friends—Having understood by William Patten and William Hogan, from your parts, that a number among you have had some thoughts and turnings of mind respecting a removal to this country; and as it has been the lot of a number of us to undertake the work a little before you, I thought a true statement (for your information) of some of our strugglings and reasonings concerning the propriety of our moving . . . .

I may begin thus, and say, that for several years Friends had some distant view of moving out of that oppressive part of the land, but did not know where, until the year 1799, when we had an acceptable visit from some traveling Friends of the western part of Pennsylvania. They thought proper to propose to Friends for consideration, whether it would not be agreeable to best wisdom for us unitedly to remove northwest to the Ohio river,—to a place where there were no slaves held, being a free country. This proposal made a deep impression on our minds . . . .

Nevertheless, although we had had a prospect of something of the kind, it was at first very crossing to my natural inclination; being well settled as to the outward. So I strove against the thoughts of moving for some time . . . as it seemed likely to break up our Monthly Meeting, which I had reason to believe was set up in the wisdom of Truth. Thus, I was concerned many times to weigh the matter as in the balance of the sanctuary; till at length, I considered that there was no prospect of our number being increased by conviction, on account of the oppression that abounded in that land . . . .
Under a view of these things, I was made sensible, beyond doubting, that it was in the ordering of wisdom for us to remove; and that the Lord was opening a way for our enlargement, if found worthy. Friends generally feeling something of the same, there were three of them who went to view the country, and one worthy public Friend. They traveled on till they came to this part of the western country, where they were stopped in their minds, believing it was the place for Friends to settle. So they returned back, and informed us of the same in a solemn meeting; in which dear Joseph Dew, the public Friend, intimated that he saw the seed of God sown in abundance, which extended far northwestward. This information, in the way it was delivered to us, much tendered our spirits, and strengthened us in the belief that it was right. So we undertook the work, and found the Lord to be a present helper in every needful time, as he was sought unto; yea, to be as "a pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night;" and thus we were led safely along until we arrived here.

It appears by a copy of the minutes of a monthly meeting on Trent river, in Jones county, N. C. held in the ninth and tenth months, 1799, that the weighty subject of the members thereof being about to remove unitedly to the territory northwestward of the Ohio river, was and had been before that time deliberately under their consideration. And the same proposal was solemnly laid before their Quarterly Meeting, held at Contentnea on the ninth of the tenth month; which, on weighing the matter and its circumstances, concluded to leave said Friends at their liberty to proceed therein, as way might be opened for them; yet the subject was continued till their next Quarter. And they having (before the said Monthly Meeting ceased) agreed that certificates be signed therein for the members, to convey their rights respectively to the Monthly Meeting nearest to the place of their intended settlement, showing them to be members whilst they resided there; such certificates for each other mutually were signed in their last Monthly Meeting, held at Trent aforesaid, in the first month, 1800; which was then solemnly and finally adjourned and concluded, and their privilege of holding it, together with the records of it, were delivered up to their Quarterly Meeting, held the 18th of the same month, 1800.

They stopped first at the settlements of Friends on the Monongahela river, in Fayette and Washington counties, Penna., to prepare for their new settlement over the Ohio. They brought their certificates with them, laid their circumstances, with extracts from the minutes of their former monthly and quarterly meetings in Carolina, before Redstone Quarterly meeting, and received the advice and assistance of Friends there.

Thus they proceeded, and made their settlement in the year 1800; and were remarkably favored with an opportunity to be accommodated with a quantity of valuable land at the place which was chosen for their settlement by the Friends who went to view the country, before the office was opened for granting lands in that territory.

Borden Stanton continues (Friends' Miscellany, XII., 216-223):

The first of us moved west of the Ohio in the ninth month, 1800; and none of us had a house at our command, to meet in, to worship the Almighty Being. So we met in the woods, until houses were built, which was but a short time. In less than one year, Friends so increased that two preparative meetings were settled; and in last twelfth month a monthly meeting, called Concord, also was opened, which is now large. Another preparative meeting is requested, and, also, another first and week-day meeting. Four are already granted in the territory, and three meeting-houses are built. Way appears to be opening for another Monthly Meeting; and, I think, a Quarterly Meeting.

I may say that as to the outward [i.e., worldly possessions], we have been sufficiently provided for, though in a new country. Friends are settling fast, and seem, I hope, likely to do well.

This seems to have been the first considerable migration from North Carolina to the West. It seems also to have been the only case on record where a whole meeting went in a body. But it was not the only case of removal from Contentnea Quarter. Removals from this Quarter either to the West, or to upper meetings of the same Quarter, continued until Carteret, Beaufort, Hyde, Craven, and Jones counties were depopulated of Quakers, and the meetings there laid down. Friends in these counties now reported to Core Sound Monthly Meeting, in Carteret county. Migration from Core Sound began in 1799, when Horton Howard, secretary of the monthly meeting, took a certificate to Westland. Josiah Bundy and Joseph Bishop also removed to Westland that year. In 1802, ten parties asked for certificates; no destination was given, but we are justified in assuming that it was Westland or Concord. In 1802-04, the movement was to Concord, Northwest Territory. There was then no more emigration from there until 1831. Migrations began from Contentnea Monthly Meeting in 1800. Between 1800 and 1815, we find thirty-six certificates issued. Two were to Redstone, one to Indiana, and all the rest to Ohio, most of them to Concord.
In the following list, an attempt has been made to give the names of those families which were the leaders in the westward migration, or which furnished the most recruits to it, from the various monthly meetings in the East. The names of the meetings to which the particular families went have also been given, with an approximation of the date:

Hopewell Monthly Meeting, Va., sent to Concord (1803-05), members of the families of Lupton, Piggot, Jenkins, Pickering, Miller, Ellis, Steer, Bevin; to various other monthly meetings in Ohio (1804-): McPherson, George, Walter, Wickersham, White, Walton, Wilson, Allen, Adams, Branson, Cope, Crampton, Faucett, Hackney, Janney, Lloyd, Little, Lupton, Pickering, Steer, Smith, Swayne, Townsend, Taylor.

Goose Creek (northern) Monthly Meeting, Va.—To Concord (1805-08): Evans, Pancoast, Sinclair, Spencer, Gregg, White, Whiteacre, Canby, Dillon, Smith; to other meetings, nearly all in Ohio (1820-54): Talbott, Buchanan, Rose, Hampton, Hughes, Nichols, Bradfield, Treher, Mead, Wilson, Birdsall, Brown, Shoemaker, Taylor; to Salem, Columbiana county (1806-07): Craig, Smith, Canby, Janney, Gilbert.

Crooked Run Monthly Meeting, Va.—To Concord (1803-06): Faucett, Pickering, Wright, Lupton, Piggott, Holloway, Branson, Como, Smith, Wright, Sharp.

Goose Creek (southern) Monthly Meeting, Va.—To Concord (1802-06): McPherson, Bond, Coffee, Broomhall, Pidgeon.

Cedar Creek Monthly Meeting, Va.—To Salem (1812-23): Stanley, Blackburn; to Short Creek (1813-41): Moorman, Terrell, Maddox, Hargrave, Creek.

White Oak Swamp Monthly Meeting, Va.—To Ohio meetings, not specified (1811-36): Ratcliff, Crew, Ladd, Harrison, Bates, Hockaday, Hargrave, Terrill, Andrews, Binford, Johnson, Ricks. Most of these went to Short Creek.
Western Branch Monthly Meeting, Va.—To Concord (1805-33): Bond, Morlan, Curl, Johnson, Anthony, Lewis, Larow, Moorland, Perdue, Howell, Powell, Butler, Stanton, James, Draper, Ricks, Chapel, Hunnicutt, Trotter, Lawrence.

Mount Pleasant Monthly Meeting, Va.—To Concord (1805): Vimon, Davis, Bundy, Woods; to other Ohio meetings (1804-24): Thomas, Lundy, Bond, Ballard, Sumner, Beek, Pierce, Stalker, Scooly, Green, Gray, Williams, Robinson, Pierson, Wildman, Ward, Johnson, Pike, Lewis, Cary, Hunt, Anthony, Hiatt, Betts, Bundy, Jones, Chew, Davis.

Piney Grove Monthly Meeting, S. C.—To Ohio meetings (1805-12): Stafford, Mendenhall, Beauchamp, Thomas, Marine, Moorman, Harris, Morris, Lingagar, Almond.

Rich Square Monthly Meeting, N. C.—To Short Creek (1805-11): Patterson, Maremoon (or Moreman), Taylor; to other Ohio meetings (1805-12): Patterson, Maremoon, Hicks, Crew, Reams.

Contentnea Monthly Meeting, N. C.—To Concord (1802-05): Hall, Edgerton, Outland, Doudna, Albertson, Dodd, Bailey, Morris; to other meetings in Ohio (1805-34): Copeland, Bundy, Collier, Cox, Price, Hollowell, Hobson, Spivy, Thomas, Peele, Hall, Jinnett.

Bush River Monthly Meeting, S. C.—To Ohio meetings, not specified (1805-12): Galbreath, Marmaduke, Mendenhall.

Wrightsborough Monthly Meeting, Ga.—To Ohio meetings, not specified: Butler, Hollingsworth, Moore, Jay, Pearson, Killey, Henderson, Williams, Brooks.

Core Sound Monthly Meeting, N. C.—To Concord (1802-04): Harris, Thomas, Scott, Williams, Mace.

Cane Creek Monthly Meeting, N. C.—To Ohio meetings, not specified (1805-09): Stanton, Haydock, Cox, Hadly, Baker, Clark, Hussey, Hasket, Moffitt, Hale, Ratcliff.

Springfield Monthly Meeting, N. C.—To Ohio meetings, not specified (1803-32): Pidgeon, Reece, Newby, Kersey, Bundy, Tomlinson, Mendenhall, Wright, Kellum, Beard, Harlan, Millikan, Spears, Spencer, Hoggatt.

The locations of the various monthly meetings named in the foregoing list are as follows:

Bush River.—Newberry county, S. C., eight miles northwest from Newberry.

Cedar Creek.—Hanover county, Va.

Contentnea.—Wayne county, N. C., fifteen miles north from Goldsboro.

Core Sound.—Carteret county, N. C., six miles north from Beaufort.

Crooked Run.—Warren county, Va., nine miles south from Winchester.

Deep River.—Guilford county, N. C., twelve miles southwest from Greensboro.

Goose Creek (northern).—Lincoln, Loudoun county, Va.
Goose Creek (southern).—Bedford county, Va., ten miles southeast from Bedford City.

Gravelly Run.—Dinwiddie county, Va., about four miles east from Dinwiddie.

Hopewell.—Frederick county, Va., six miles north from Winchester.
Mount Pleasant.—Frederick county, Va., nine miles southwest from Winchester.

New Garden.—Guilford county, N. C.
Piney Grove—Marlborough county, S. C., nine miles north from Bennettsville.
Piney Woods.—Davidson county, N. C., twelve miles north of east from Lexington.

Rich Square.—Northampton county, N. C.
South River.—Campbell county, Va., near Lynchburg (?).
Springfield.—Guilford county, N. C., near High Point.
Western Branch.—Isle of Wight county, Va., seven miles, nearly southeast from Isle of Wight Court House.

White Oak Swamp.—Henrico county, Va.

THE GERMANS AND THE VIRGINIANS IN HARRISON COUNTY.

That industrious, thrifty, patriotic, and generally intelligent portion of the population of Harrison county, familiarly known as the PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH, but more properly the Germans, are descendants of those hardy pioneer settlers who immigrated to Pennsylvania and Maryland from various German states, commencing as early, at least, as the year 1683. Perhaps there is no people who were more frequently the subject of remark in the early history of Pennsylvania, and during the last century, than these Germans, whose numerous descendants are now to be found in every State west and south of Pennsylvania.

Though more than twenty-five thousand names of German immigrants are recorded in the Pennsylvania Archives from 1725 to 1775, few of those are recorded who arrived in Pennsylvania prior to 1700. In volume seventeen of the Archives, Second Series, may be found the names of all who took the oath of allegiance between 1727 and 1775, comprising about thirty thousand names, with the names of the vessels in which they came to America, ports from which they sailed, and dates of departure. Probably four-fifths of the Germans living in Harrison county to-day can find the names and dates of arrival of their emigrant ancestors in that volume.

In 1683, some Germans arrived in Pennsylvania, and commenced a settlement at what is now Germantown. Among these, were Pastorius, Hartsfelder, Schietz, Spehagel, Vandewall, Uberfeld, Strauss, Lorentz, Tellner, and others. About the year 1684 or 1685, a land company was formed at Frankfort-on-the-Main, which bought 25,000 acres from William Penn. Those who left their Fatherland from 1700 to 1720, the Palatines, so-called, because they came principally from the Palatinate States, along the Rhine, whither many had been forced to flee from their homes in France, and other parts of Europe, endured many privations before they reached the Western Continent.

In 1708 and 1709, upwards of 10,000, many of them very poor, arrived in England, and were there for some time, in a starving, miserable condition, lodged in warehouses, with no subsistence beyond what they got by begging on the streets; until some sort of provision was made for them by Queen Anne. In 1709, 3,000 of them were sent to Ireland, but of this number many returned to England, on account of insufficient provision having been made for them by the Royal Commissary. In the summer of 1710, several thousand of these Palatines, who had been maintained at the Queen’s expense in England (and for sometime afterwards in America), were shipped to New York; and of these, many came to Pennsylvania. Among these German emigrants were Mennonites, Dunkards, German Reformed, and Lutherans. Their number was so great, that James Logan, Secretary of the Province of Pennsylvania, wrote in 1717, “We have, of late, a great number of Palatines poured in upon us without any recommendation or notice, which gives the country some uneasiness, for foreigners do not so well among us as our own English people.”

Those who arrived between 1700 and 1720, settled in the lower parts of Montgomery, Bucks, Berks, and Lancaster counties. In 1719, Jonathan Dickinson wrote, “We are daily expecting ships from London, which bring over Palatines, in number about six or seven thousand. We had a parcel who came out about five years ago, who purchased land about sixty miles west of Philadelphia [the Pequea settlement, in Lancaster county], and prove quiet and industrious. Some few came from Ireland lately, and more are expected thence.”

From 1720 to 1730, several thousand landed at Philadelphia, and others came by land, from the province of New York. The latter settled in Tulpehocken, having left New York because they had been ill-treated by the authorities of that province. The influx now became so great as to cause some alarm. It was feared by some that the numbers from Germany, at the rate they were coming in during the last three years of this decade, would soon produce a German colony here, and perhaps such a one as Britain once received from Saxon-land, in the fifth century. Jonathan Dickinson went so far as to state, that it was apprehended Sir William Keith, a former governor, with two of his friends, had sinister projects of forming an independent province in the West, towards the Ohio, to be peopled by his friends among the Palatines. In 1727, six vessels arrived at Philadelphia with Germans; three in 1728; three in 1729; and three in 1730.

From 1730 to 1740, about sixty-five vessels, filled with Germans, arrived at Philadelphia, bringing with them ministers and schoolmasters to instruct their children. A large number of these remained in Philadelphia; others removed seventy to eighty miles from that city—some settling in Lebanon county, and others west of the Susquehanna, in York county.

From 1740 to 1755, upwards of one hundred vessels arrived with Germans; in some of them, though small ships, there were from 500 to 600 passengers. In the summer and fall of 1749, not less than twenty vessels, with German passengers to the number of twelve thousand, arrived.

At first, the immigration of Germans into Pennsylvania was confined to the Sectaries, the Quietists, and the other religious denominations, who, on account of their extremity in doctrines and practice, found it difficult to get along with their more conservative Protestant brethren. The Labadists, for instance, were followed by the Mennonites, who took up much land, and formed many communities in the counties of York, Lancaster, and Adams; by the Seventh Day Baptists, the followers of Spener, who established their monastery at Ephrata; by the Voltists, and the Cocceians; and by the hundred other sects of the day. But after these Sectaries came the Deluge. The Germans had found out that there was a land of peace on the other side of the Atlantic; and they knew by sad experience that their own country was a land of war. A man was deprived, practically, not only of the enjoyment of his own religion; but he was also robbed incessantly of the fruits of his labor. This was a state of things which he naturally rebelled against, and emigration afforded him the only relief.

The religious fanaticism of Louis XIV., which so long desolated the low countries, and which, when he revoked the edict of Nantes, deprived that monarch of his best and most thrifty subjects, broke in upon the Palatine in the shape of one of the most desolating wars of which there is any record in history. Turrenne, Saxe, Vendome, Villars, Villeroy, Taillard, Marsin, Berwick, Noailles, and Luxembourg, each in his turn, helped to desolate the Palatine, and to contribute immigrants to the colonies. The homeless and ravished peoples of Germany sought and found homes in the new land of peace and plenty. At one time the immigration of German Palatines into Pennsylvania and Maryland was in excess of all other immigration. Many hundreds thus came into Maryland, many thousands into Pennsylvania. They came chiefly from the harried Palatinate, but also from Alsace, Suabia, Saxony, and Switzerland. There were Wittenbergers, and people from Darmstadt, Nassau, Hesse, Eisenberg, Franconia, Hamburg, Mannheim—all classed as “Palatines.”

In 1700, there were nearly 145,000 Germans in Pennsylvania, the total population then not exceeding 435,000. These included the Sectaries above referred to, the Dunkards, and the Hessian soldiers, who had been taken prisoners by Washington’s army, and preferred not to be exchanged after the Revolution. A great proportion of this latter class settled in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, from whence many have come into Harrison county. These German subsidiary troops were bought in Brunswick, Hanau, Anspach, Waldeck, Hesse-Cassel, Hesse-Darmstadt, Brandenburg, etc., in large numbers. They cost George III. the sum of $8,100,000, and 11,000 of them died, or perished in battle. The other immigrants were German Calvinists, Moravians, Schwenkenfelders, Omishites, Dunkards, Mennonites, and Separatists (or Seventh Day Baptists).

Up to about 1760, the Germans in Maryland were supplied from these plentiful sources, by way of Pennsylvania. A good many Palatines came in by direct consignment to Chesapeake Bay, but the great majority of the Germans drifted down from York and Lancaster counties, Pennsylvania, and occupied the land along Antietam creek, and about Hagerstown and Frederick in Maryland, and the lower Shenandoah Valley in Virginia.

THE VIRGINIANS.

The first settlers of the Virginia Panhandle were mainly of the Cavalier class, many of them coming from the northern and eastern counties east of the mountains, and a few from the Virginia valley, the latter usually being of Scotch-Irish descent. In later years, when the Scotch-Irish occupied Washington county, many of them crossed the line and settled in Ohio (now Brooke) county, Virginia, in the vicinity of Wheeling. Some of the early settlers in Harrison county were from that section; and not a few were of the old tide-water, horse-racing, gambling, and cock-fighting class, which before the middle of the century, formed the aristocracy and much of the middle-class population of Virginia. Dr.
Joseph Doddridge, although himself born in Bedford county, Penna., belonged to this latter class, his father, originally from Maryland, having settled near West Middletown, in Washington county, about 1773. The son became first a Methodist, and later, an Episcopalian clergyman, and settled at Wellsburg, where he died in 1826. Two years before his death, he wrote a book, called “Notes on the Settlement and Indian Wars of the Western Parts of Virginia and Pennsylvania, from 1763 to 1783,” which contains the best written account we have of the early customs, habits of life, and occupations of those pioneers, many of whom were the forefathers of Harrison county citizens of the present day. In reading Doddridge’s account, it must be borne in mind that he wrote of two very different classes of settlers, that class amongst which he spent his life being for the most part of the cavalier type—the jolly, rollicking, careless, lawless, and often shiftless character so long associated with the development of the slave-holding South. The other class was the Scotch-Irish—sometimes erroneously called the Puritans of the South, sober-minded, God-fearing, Psalm-singing Presbyterians, for the most part, whose only relaxation after a week of hard toil in the forest or field was to ride or walk from one to fifteen miles to meeting of a Sabbath, there to listen to a series of dry theological dissertations, lasting from morning until night, with but a brief intermission for lunch. Some unfriendly and untruthful writers about the Scotch-Irish, have sought to apply Doddridge’s description of the least law-abiding of his fellow pioneers as a general condemnation of this race; maliciously misrepresenting the facts as to the class about whom the description was written. A direct testimonial as to the character of the two classes, given by an eye-witness more than a century ago, has but recently come to light, being an extract from the Diary of Rev. David McClure, published in 1899. David McClure was the first Presbyterian minister to labor in the settlements west of the Alleghenies, having come out as a missionary in 1772, traveled among the Indians of Ohio as far west as Coshocton, and ministered to the scattered settlers of Western Pennsylvania for a period of six months or more. Under date of December 17, 1772, Mr. McClure writes:

Attended a marriage, where the guests were all Virginians. It was a scene of wild and confused merriment. The log-house, which was large, was filled. They were dancing to the music of a fiddle. They took little or no notice of me, on my entrance. After setting awhile at the fire, I arose and desired the music and dancing to cease, and requested the bride and bridegroom to come forward. They came snickering and very merry. I desired the company, who still appeared to be mirthful and noisy, to attend with becoming seriousness, the solemnity. As soon as the ceremony was over, the music struck up, and the dancing was renewed. While I sat wondering at their wild merriment, the lady of a Mr. Stevenson sent her husband to me, with her compliments, requesting me to dance a minuet with her. My declining the honor, on the principle that I was unacquainted with it, was scarcely accepted. He still politely urged, until I totally refused. After supper, I rode about three miles, to the house of a friend.

The manners of the people of Virginia, who have removed into these parts [Fayette county, Penn.], are different from those of the Presbyterians and Germans. They are much addicted to drinking parties, gambling, horse-race, and fighting. They are hospitable and prodigal. Several of them have run through their property in the old settlements, and have sought an asylum in this wilderness.

Doddridge states that the first settlements along the Monongahela were commenced in 1772. In 1773, they extended to the Ohio. The first settlers came mostly from Maryland and Virginia, and generally traveled by way of Braddock’s route. Some from Pennsylvania came by the military road, passing through Bedford and Ligonier. Their removals were generally on horses with pack-saddles. Settlement entitled the settler to 400 acres of land, free. Their claims were usually located by means of the tomahawk, with which they blazed the trees marking their boundary lines. Hence, such claims came to be called “Tomahawk Rights.” They usually chose ground in a hollow or depression, for their houses and barns; so that whatever came to the house might come down hill.

Generally, the male members of the prospective settler’s family came over the mountains in the spring, and after clearing a plot of ground, planting a small patch of corn, and sometimes erecting a rough log cabin, they went back for their families, and brought them out in the fall. They depended much upon lean venison, wild turkeys, and the flesh of the bear at times, for food. They awaited with much anxiety for the first growth of the potatoes, pumpkins, corn, etc., and when the young corn came, it was made a time of jubilee, and the green ears were roasted for a feast. When the corn hardened and was gathered in the fall, it was customary to provide meal for the family Johnny-cake (“journey-cake,” it was then called) by grating the ears on a tin-grater.

The original settlers were usually their own mechanics, and each man made everything needed by himself, that could not be conveniently brought along from the older settlements. The hominy-block and hand-mills were found in most of their houses. The block was hollowed out at the top by burning, and the play of the pestle ground the corn. Sometimes a sixteen-foot sweep was used to lessen the toil, in pounding corn into meal for mush or cakes. The hand-mill was another and a better contrivance, made of two circular stones, the under being the bed-stone, and the upper, the runner. These were enclosed in a wide hoop, or band, having a spout to discharge the meal. The “runner” was moved by a long staff, or pole, passing through an upright fixed in the stone. Such mills are still used in the Holy Land, as they were in the time of Christ.

Their water-mills were tub-mills, readily made, and at small expense. This mill consisted of an upright shaft, at the lower end of which a water-wheel, four or five feet in diameter was attached, the upper end of the shaft passing through the bed-stone, and carrying the runner, secured to its top. Sifters were used in lieu of bolting cloths, made of deer-skin parchment, stretched over a hoop, and pierced with small holes, by means of a hot wire.

The material for their clothing, aside from deer-skins, was spun by the women of the household. Almost every pioneer woman could weave linsey-woolsey cloth, and make the family clothing. Every family tanned its own leather. The tan-vat was a large trough, sunk in the ground; bark was shaved and pounded; wood-ashes were used in lieu of lime, for removing the hair; bear’s grease, hog’s lard, and tallow served for dressing the leather, instead of fish-oil; the currying was done with a drawing-knife; the blacking made of hog’s lard and soot. Most families contained their own tailors and shoemakers. Those who could not make shoes, easily learned to make shoe-packs, which were made, like moccasins, of a single piece of leather, fitted to and removed from the foot by means of a cord gathering. In cold weather, these moccasins were stuffed with dried grass, deer’s hair, or dried leaves, to keep the feet warm. Plows were made of wood; harrows, with wooden teeth; and cooper-ware of staves.

Fights were of frequent occurrence among the younger male members of the community; and the method of fighting was very dangerous to the participants. Although no weapons were used, fists, teeth, and feet were employed at will; and the favorite mode of disabling an antagonist was to gouge out one of his eyes.

The furniture for the tables, for several years after the settlement of the country, consisted of a few pewter dishes, plates, and spoons, but chiefly of wooden bowls, trenchers, and noggins. If these last were scarce, gourds and hard-shelled squashes made up the deficiency. The iron pots, knives, and forks, were brought from east of the mountains, with the salt and iron, on pack-horses.

For a long time after the first settlement of the country, the inhabitants married young. There was no distinction of rank, and very little of fortune; on this account, first love usually resulted in marriage; and a family establishment cost but a little labor, and nothing more. Marriages were celebrated at the house of the bride, and the announcement of a prospective wedding created a general sensation; it was looked upon by young and old as an occasion for frolic, feasting, and fun; and was more efficacious in gathering a crowd of people together than even a log-rolling, house-raising, or hunting expedition. The groom usually started early from his father’s house so as to reach the home of the bride by noon, the hour generally set for the ceremony—as it was always followed by a bountiful dinner. The assembled company were all pioneers, and there being no store, tailor, or dress-maker within a hundred miles of the trans-Allegany settlements, they all came dressed in home-made garments. The men wore shoe-packs or moccasins, leather breeches, usually made of buck-skin, linsey hunting shirts, and leggins. The women dressed in linsey petticoats, and linsey or linen bed-gowns, coarse shoes, stockings, kerchiefs, and buckskin gloves, if any. The horses were caparisoned with old saddles, old bridles or halters, and pack-saddles, with a bag or blanket thrown over them; a rope or cord formed the usual girth. The wedding procession, on such occasions, marched in double file, where the horse-paths permitted—for they had no roads. Such paths were sometimes barred by fallen trees, and sometimes barred with mischief aforethought, by interlocking grapevines and saplings, to intercept the progress of the procession. Sometimes a party of neighbors would wait in ambush, and when the procession came up, fire a blank charge from their rifles, which covered the party with clouds of smoke, created surprise and shrieks amongst the ladies, and chivalrous bluster on the part of their escorts. As the procession neared the house of the bride, it sometimes occurred that two or more young men would start for the domicile on horseback, full tilt, to win the bottle of whiskey, which it was previously understood would be hung out from the entrance to the cabin as a prize for the first arrival. The start of the race was announced by an Indian-like yell; and the more the route was encumbered by fallen logs, brush, and muddy hollows, the better opportunity it gave the rival swains to show their horsemanship. The bottle gained, the winner returned to the party, first handing it to the groom, and thence it went from one rider to another, in the manner of a loving cup, each taking a draught, the ladies included.

For the wedding dinner, the table, made of a large slab of timber, hewn out with a broad ax and set on four sticks, was spread with beef, pork, fowl, and sometimes deer and bear steak. Sometimes, there were a few old pewter dishes and plates, but the majority of the guests ate from wooden bowls and trenchers. A few pewter spoons were generally to be seen, but the most of them were made of horn. If knives were scarce, the men used their scalping-knives, or hunting knives, which they always carried in the belts of their hunting-shirts.

After dinner was over, dancing commenced, and it usually lasted until the following morning. The figures danced were reels, quadrilles, and jigs. The dance always commenced with a quadrille, which was followed by a jig; none were allowed to steal away for sleep and if the girls became tired, they were expected (as chairs were very scarce) to sit upon the knees of the gentlemen.

About nine or ten o'clock at night, some of the young ladies would steal away with the bride, and see her safely tucked in bed. The bridal chamber was frequently a loft or attic, above the dancers, to which access was gained by climbing a ladder, and such a chamber was floored with clap-boards, lying loose, and without nails. Some of the young men, in the meantime, would lead away the groom, and send him up the ladder to join his bride; followed later in the evening by refreshments, of which the chief constituent was a huge flash of whiskey, called by the frolickers, "Black Betty."

These entertainments sometimes lasted for several days, none desisting until the party was thoroughly fagged out. If any of the bride’s neighbors felt themselves slighted by not being bidden to the festivities, it sometimes occurred that they would show their resentment by cutting off the manes, foretops, and even tails of the horses belonging to the wedding-party.
CHAPTER IV.

THE FIRST SETTLERS IN EASTERN OHIO.

In 1888, there was held in the city of Marietta a Centennial celebration, to commemorate what was said to be the first settlement of the territory northwest of the Ohio. Properly speaking, it was the first settlement only in the sense of being the first authorized by the United States Government. This settlement was made in 1788 by a colony of New England families from Connecticut and Massachusetts, mostly officers or participants in the War of the Revolution; and no colony in America was ever planted by a more liberal and estimable body of men and women than were these Marietta colonists. They included the Meigs’, the Putnams, the Cutlers, the Danas, the Sproats, the Whipples, and many other famous New England families. Their purchase embraced about 1,500,000 acres of land lying along the Ohio River from Marietta, west, and including Meigs, much of Athens, and portions of Washington and Gallia counties.

The first settlements in the territory west of the Ohio River were made by families from Pennsylvania and Virginia, nearly ten years before 1788; and there were more white settlers living in eastern Ohio as early as 1785 than the whole number comprised in the Marietta colony of 1788. These pioneer settlers had established two or more towns, and set up courts of justice before 1785, and, although some of them were occasionally driven off their lands by soldiers sent out by Congress for that purpose, the majority seem to have continued as permanent settlers, and in some instances their descendants are living in the same localities today.

memoration of the admission of the State into the Union; and the year 1904 will witness the hundreth anniversary of the laying out of the town of Cadiz. The Centennial of the settlement of Harrison county would nominally be about 1900,—1800 being the year in which the land office was opened at Steubenville for the sale of lands in the territory now included in Harrison. The records of that office during the five years following that date show, among others, entries of land titles in what is now Harrison county by the following named settlers: James Arnold, Arthur Barrett, Thomas Barrett, James Black, Robert Braden, George Brown, George Carnahan, John Carnahan, Samuel Carnahan, Joseph Clark, Robert Cochran, John Craig, Thomas Dickerson, Samuel Dunlap, James Finney, Samuel Gilmore, Eleazer Huff, John Huff, Joseph Huff, William Huff, James Hanna, James Haverfield, Thomas Hitchcock, Joseph Holmes, William Ingles, John Jamison, Joel Johnson, Joseph Johnson, William Johnson, Absalom Kent, George Layport, John Love, John Lyons, William McClary, John McConnell, Robert McCullough, William McCullough, John McFadden, Joseph McFadden, Samuel McFadden, John Maholm, Samuel Maholm, Robert Maxwell, Thomas Maxwell, William Moore, Samuel Osburn, Baldwin Parsons, John Pugh, Rev. John Rea, John Ross, Jacob Shepler, Samuel Smith, Martin Snyder, John Taggart, Thomas Taylor, Hugh Teas, Robert Vincent, Thomas Vincent, John Wallace, Michael Waxler, Daniel Welch, James Wilkin, Thomas Wilson.

Of these, it is known that the McFaddens, Craigs, Jamisons, Gilmores, Hannas, Reas, Welches, Moors, and Lyons' came from Washington county, Pennsylvania; the Arnolds, Dunlapps, Dickersons, and Maholms, from Fayette county; and most of the others were without doubt from the same districts. The probability is that many of these settlers were in Harrison county before 1800; as the date of their recorded title is not necessarily the date of their first settlement on the land; and it was the custom of that day, as it is in the western states to-day, to make improvements, and to reside on pre-empted land for some months or years before acquiring title from the Government. It is reasonably certain that Alexander Henderson occupied the land near Cadiz, until recently known as the Walter Jamison farm, as early as April, 1799; having removed from Washington county, Pennsylvania, with his family, about that time; and that Daniel Peterson then resided with his family at the forks of Short creek.

R. M. Coulter stated that the first white child born within the present limits of Harrison county was Jesse DeLong, born in what is now Short Creek township, about 1776; he died at the age of 106, leaving descendants who are still residents of Tuscarawas county.

Charles A. Hanna, Chicago:

Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your letter sent to me at Station Fifteen, Ohio. I have moved from Harrison county, April 1st, 1897.

In regard to the DeLongs as early pioneers of that county, I will give you all the information I am in the knowledge of, which is not very much; but am willing to state the facts as far as I know.

Solomon DeLong, the father of Jesse, comes of French descent, having emigrated from France to Maryland, near Baltimore, from thence to Pennsylvania, near Philadelphia; from there they went to West Virginia, before Wheeling was built, there being nothing there but a block-house where Wheeling now stands. They crossed the Ohio river and built their cabin on Short creek, where Bridgeport now stands. At that time, there being no other white families on the Ohio side of the Ohio river, they were quite frequently driven back to the block-house for refuge from the hostile Indians.

His wife's maiden name was Lamasters. To their union quite a family was born, the exact number is not known, but Jesse was the fifth child in order of birth.

The DeLong family have always been noted as warriors. Solomon and his brothers, as well as his older sons, took part in the Revolutionary War, and also the War of 1812. He settled at Bridgeport, on Short creek, about the year 1775. His son, Jesse, was born there the first of May, 1776. The length of time they lived there is not exactly known. From there they came to Little Stillwater about two miles east of Dennison, and entered a tract of land of 160 acres—that, at the present time, is owned by Mr. Kinsey—that being the place of his death; the date I do not know. After his death, the widow went back into Harrison county to live, near Franklin, or Tappan.

Their pioneer life in Harrison county was before the counties were divided as they now are. Jesse DeLong was a pioneer of Tuscarawas county, being one of its first settlers. He entered the land east of Dennison, now Thornwood Park. He was accidentally shot in a bear hunt by Dan Iler, in Harrison county, on the land now owned by William McCauley, near Station Fifteen. By that, he was crippled for life, became quite an invalid in his old days, dying May 8, 1882, at the age of 106 years. His mother also lived to near the age of 100 years. The DeLong family in politics were Whigs, and Republicans of the staunchest kind, and were also strong believers in Methodism. He was united in marriage with Nancy Wagner. To them twelve children were born, and of that number there are but two now living. One son, Jesse-William, of Oreana, Macon county, Ill., and Espy, who was a resident of Harrison county for twenty-five years. I purchased a farm and moved on it the first of April, 1872, and left April 1, 1897, and have lived in Midvale since that time.

I believe that the DeLong family would be termed pioneers of Tuscarawas, more than of Harrison county.

I have given about all I can think of at present. Hope this will be satisfactory, and of some good to you in your work. Yours,

ESPY DELONG.

From this letter, it would appear that Jesse DeLong was not born in Harrison county at all. It may also be remarked, that, if he was born on Short creek, he could not, as his son states, have been born at the site of Bridgeport, in Belmont county; for Short creek runs through Warren township, Jefferson county, and enters the Ohio at Warrentown. If he was born as early as 1776, it would seem very improbable that he could have been born in Ohio at all, unless it was during the temporary sojourn of his parents west of the river. Two or three years later than 1776, however, a number of settlements had been made in Ohio.

There are traditions in Harrison county of early settlements along Stillwater creek; but whether these have ever been verified or not, the writer does not know. However, there are good reasons for believing that in the territory now composing the counties of Mahoning, Columbiana, Jefferson, Stark, Carroll, Harrison, Belmont, Guernsey, and Monroe, were scattered cabins of pioneer settlers as early as the Revolutionary War. What these reasons are may here be presented:

To the Salt Springs in the present county of Trumbull, white hunters had resorted as early as 1754, and salt was made there by Pennsylvanians some twenty years later.

From the old settlement of Wheeling and its vicinity a number of adventurers crossed the river from time to time and erected cabins. A number who came out with General McIntosh to Fort Laurens in 1778, as axemen, scouts, hunters, etc., are supposed to have remained and built homes on several of the branches of the Ohio and the Muskingum.

The first attempt to drive out the squatters northwest of the Ohio was made in October, 1779, when Captain Clark, of a Pennsylvania regiment, with sixty soldiers, was sent to Wheeling by Colonel Brodhead, then in command of Fort Pitt, with orders to cross the river and apprehend some of the principal trespassers, and destroy their huts. Captain Clark did not succeed in finding any of the trespassers, but destroyed several huts, and reported that many improvements had been made along the Ohio from the mouth of the Muskingum to Fort McIntosh (Beaver, Pa.) and thirty miles up some of its branches.

General Brodhead's report of this expedition will be found in two of his letters printed in volume twelve of the Pennsylvania Archives (First Series), pp. 176-177, which read as follows:

To His Excellency, John Jay, Esq.:

Sir—Since I did myself the honor to address you by a former letter, some of the inhabitants from Youghagenia and Ohio counties [the western portion of Washington county, Pennsylvania, and the Panhandle of West Virginia], have been hardy enough to cross the Ohio river, and make small improvements on the Indian lands, from the river Muskingum to Fort McIntosh, and thirty miles up some of the branches of the Ohio river. As soon as I received information of the trespass I detached a party of sixty men under command of Captain Clarke, to apprehend the trespassers and destroy their huts, which they have in a great measure effected, and likewise dispatched a runner to the chiefs of the Delawares, at Cooshocking, to prevent their attacking the innocent inhabitants, but as yet have received no answer from them. Capt. Clarke informs me that the trespassers had returned, and that the trespass appeared to have been committed upwards of a month ago.

It is hard to determine what effect this imprudent conduct may have on the minds of the Delaware chiefs and warriors, but I hope a favorable answer to the speech I sent them. I presume a line from your Excellency to the Governor and Council of Virginia, will tend to prevent a further trespass and the murder of many innocent families on this frontier.

I have the honor to be, with perfect respect, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

D. BRODHEAD, Col. Commanding.

To His Excellency, General Washington:

Dear Gen'l—I immediately after I had closed my last (of the 9th of this instant), I received a letter from Colonel Shepherd, Lieutenant of Ohio county, informing me that a certain Decker, Cox, and Company, with Indians, had crossed the Ohio river, and committed trespasses on the Indians' lands; wherefore, I ordered sixty rank and file to be equipped, and Capt. Clark, of the 8th Pennsylvania Regiment, proceeded with this party to Wheeling, with orders to cross the river at that part, and to apprehend some of the principal trespassers and destroy the huts. He returned without finding any of the trespassers, but destroyed some huts. He informs me some of the inhabitants have made small improvements, all the way from the Muskingum river to Fort McIntosh, and thirty miles up some of the branches. I sent a runner to the Delaware Council at Coochoching, to inform them of the trespass, and assure them it was committed by some foolish people, and requested them to rely on my doing them justice, and punishing the offenders, but as yet have not received an answer.

I have the honor to be, with perfect regard and esteem, your Excellency's most Obed't Humble Servant, D. BRODHEAD.

After the treaty of Fort McIntosh, it was feared that there would be such a rush of squatters into that portion of the territory bordering on Pennsylvania and Virginia, that evil results would ensue, and, accordingly, means were taken both to drive out the intruders already there and prevent the entrance of others. June 15, 1785, Congress ordered the following proclamation published and circulated in the territory:

Whereas, it has been represented to the United States, in Congress assembled, that several disorderly persons have crossed the Ohio, and settled upon the unappropriated lands; and, whereas, it is their intention, as soon as it shall be surveyed, to open offices for the sale of a considerable part thereof, in such proportions and under such regulations as may suit the convenience of all the citizens of the United States, and others who may wish to become purchasers of the same; and, as such conduct tends to defeat the object they have in view, is in direct opposition to the ordinances and resolutions of Congress, and is highly disrespectful to the federal authority, they have heretofore thought fit, and do hereby issue this proclamation, forbidding all such unwarrantable intrusions, and enjoining all those who have settled thereon to depart with their families and effects, without loss of time, as they shall answer the same at their peril.

The intrusion was confined principally to the territory now forming the counties of Columbiana, Jefferson, Stark, Carroll, Harrison, Belmont, Guernsey, and Monroe, and the names of the intruders in 1785, were as follows: George Atchison, Jonas Amspoker, Albertus Bailey, William Bailey, John Buchanan, Henry Cassil, Walter Cain, Jacob Clark, James Clark, John Castleman, Charles Chambers, William Carpenter, Henry Conrad, John Custer, Thomas Dawson, Nicholas Decker, Solomon DeLong, Daniel Duff, Zepaniah Dunn, Hanamet Davis, Jesse Edgerton, John Fitzpatrick, Henry Froggs, John Goddard, Joseph Goddard, Archibald Harbson, Robert Hill, Adam House, Wiland Hoagland, Thomas Johnson, William Kerr, Frederick Lamb,

In March, 1785, Colonel Harmar, commandant at Fort McIntosh, had sent out troops to dispossess the squatter settlers whose names are given above. The squatters actually banded together to resist the United States troops; but a compromise was effected, whereby they were allowed to prepare temporary houses on the Virginia side before leaving their homes in the Northwest Territory. Some of them retired from the Ohio country, temporarily, but subsequently most of them returned, and their descendants are now numerous in Eastern Ohio and in the valleys of the Tuscarawas and the Muskingum.

The extent and location of these settlements at that early period within the limits of what was then Jefferson county (including Belmont) are shown by the report of Ensign Armstrong, who was sent by Colonel Harmar down the Ohio river from Fort McIntosh, with a detachment of soldiers, for the purpose of enforcing the Government's orders; and, also, by the Journal of General Richard Butler, one of the Commissioners appointed by Congress to treat with the western Indians. Ensign Armstrong's report is as follows:

Sir:—Agreeable to your orders, I proceeded with my party, on the 31st of March, down the river. On the first instant we crossed Little Beaver, and dispossessed a family. Four miles from there, we found three families living in sheds, but, they having no rafts to transport their effects, I thought it proper to give them until the 31st inst., at which time they promised to demolish their sheds and remove to the east side of the river.

At Yellow creek [south of the site of Wellsville], I dispossessed two families and destroyed their building. The 2d inst., being stormy, nothing was done. The 3d, we dispossessed eight families. The 4th we arrived at Mingo Bottom, or Old Town [Mingo, Jefferson county]. I read my instructions to the prisoner, [Joseph] Ross, who declared they never came from Congress, for he had late accounts from that honorable body, who, he was convinced, gave no such instructions to the Commissioners. Neither did he care from whom they came, for he was de-terminated to hold possession, and if I destroyed his house he would build six more within a week. He also cast many reflections on the honorable the Congress, the Commissioners, and the commanding officer. I conceived him to be a dangerous man, and sent him under guard to Wheeling. Finding that most of the settlers at this place were tenants under the prisoner, I gave them a few days, at which time they promised to move to the east side of the Ohio river, and to demolish their buildings. On the evening of the 4th, Charles Norris, with a party of armed men, came to my quarters in a hostile manner, and demanded my instructions. After conversing with them some time, and showing my instructions, the warmth with which they first expressed themselves began to abate, and for some motive lodged their arms with me till morning. I learned from the conversation of the party that at Norris' Town (by them so called), eleven miles farther down the river, [probably the site of the present village of Warrentown, at the mouth of Short creek], a party of seventy or eighty men were assembled with a determination to oppose me. Finding Norris to be a man of influence in that country, I conceived it to my interest to make use of him as an instrument, which I effected by informing him it was my intention to treat any armed parties I met as enemies of my country, and would fire on them if they did not disperse.

On the 5th, when I arrived within two miles of the town, or place where I expected to meet with opposition, I ordered my men to load their arms in the presence of Norris, and then desired him to go to the party and inform them of my intentions. I then proceeded on with caution, but had not gone far when paper No. 1 was handed me by one of the party, to which I replied, that I would treat with no party, but intended to execute my orders. When I arrived at the town there were about forty men assembled, who had deposited their arms. After I had read to them my instructions, they agreed to move off by the 19th inst. This indulgence I thought proper to grant, the weather being too severe to turn them out of doors. The 6th I proceeded to Hoglin's, or Mercer's Town [Martin's Ferry], where I was presented with paper No. 2, and, from the humble disposition of the people, and the impossibility of their moving, I gave them to the 19th, and I believe they generally left the settlement at that time. At that place I was informed that Charles Norris and John Carpenter had been elected Justices of the Peace; that they had, I found, precepts, and had decided thereon. I then proceeded on till opposite Wheeling, where I dispossessed one family and destroyed their buildings. I hope, sir, that the indulgences granted some of the inhabitants will meet your approbation. The paper No. 2 is a copy of an advertisement, which is posted up in almost every settlement on the western side of the Ohio. Three of my party being landed, I left them about forty miles from this place under care of a corporal. The remainder I have ordered to their respective companies, and the prisoner I have delivered to the prison guard. I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Ensign.
This record shows that a number of white settlements existed on the west side of the Ohio river in 1785; that some of them were quite populous, over sixty names of the principal settlers of Mercertown alone being given; and that they had so far advanced in setting up a civil government as to have elected two Justices of the Peace, who had already decided cases tried before them. Armstrong failed to break up the settlement, and met with such bitter opposition that he compromised with them, giving them a certain length of time, at the end of which they agreed to leave, if the Government did not rescind the order. Few of them left, however. The Journal of General Richard Butler, who was appointed by Congress, in 1785, as one of the Commissioners to treat with the Indians, shows the subsequent action of the Government and the settlers in the matter.

General Butler started on his mission in the fall of 1785. He left Fort Pitt September 26, 1785, accompanied by General Samuel H. Parsons, Colonel James Monroe (afterwards President of the United States), and others. He arrived at Fort McIntosh, at the mouth of Beaver creek, where Colonel Harmar still commanded, and where a detachment of troops was furnished to accompany the Commissioners. The party set off in boats from Fort McIntosh on September 30th, and General Butler kept a diary of the events of the expedition, from which it will be seen that a portion of his duties was to warn off the settlers that were located on the west bank of the Ohio river. In his Journal, under date of September 30th, he speaks of meeting the United States surveyors at the Pennsylvania state line, who were then just making a beginning for the survey of the first seven ranges of land within the Northwest Territory. The following extracts are from his entries for the succeeding days:

October 1st.—Passed Yellow creek and found several improvements on both sides of the river. Put in at one Jesse Penniman's, on the north side, five miles below Yellow creek; warned him off. Called on one, Pry, who I warned off, also; this appears to be a shrewd, sensible man. He assured me that he would go off; that he would go to Kentucky. . . . He seemed not well pleased, though he promised submission. At this Pry's house, we met one William McCullum, from the Illinois; he says he passed General Clark at the Falls. . . . Passed on to the Mingo towns, where we found a number of people, among whom one Ross [the same who had been made a prisoner, and carried to Fort McIntosh by Ensign Armstrong six months before]; seems to be the principal man on the north [west] side of that place. I conversed with him and warned him and the others away. He said he and his neighbors were misrepresented to Congress; that he was going to Congress to inform them that himself and neighbors were determined to be obedient to their ordinances.

Passed on to near Cross Creek, eight miles below the Mingo towns.

Cross Creek, Sunday, October 2d.—Capt. O’Hara had a fine cow killed for the troops, who arrived at nine o’clock; had the men served with provisions, who were set to cooking, while some loaded flour and corn for the use of the troops and cattle, and all was got ready and started at one o’clock. The people of this country appear to be much imposed upon by a religious sect called Methodists, and are become great fanatics. They say they have paid taxes which were too heavy.

Called at the settlement of Charles Norris, whose house has been pulled down, and he has rebuilt it. At this place found one Walter Kean, who seems but a middling character, and rather of the dissentious cast. Warned all these off, and requested they would inform their neighbors, which they promised to do.

Called at the settlement of one Capt. Hoglan, whom we also warned off. His house had also been torn down and rebuilt. We informed him of the impropriety of his conduct, which he acknowledged, and seemed very submissive, and promised to remove, and to warn his neighbors off, also. Come on very well to Wheeling, where we stayed all night. This is a fine settlement, and belongs to one Zane.

These records are sufficient to show, therefore, that the first white settlements in Ohio were not made at Marietta, in Washington county, but were made in the present townships of Steubenville, Wells, and Warren, in Jefferson county, and Pease, in Belmont county; and, as Mr. William H. Hunter, in his admirable history of the Pathfinders of Jefferson County, points out, “These people were real settlers, in the sense that they had built cabins and block-houses, and cultivated crops for subsistence. They possessed horses; for we know that John Carpenter, after making a clearing in 1781, on the site of Portland [in Jefferson county], took two horses to Fort Pitt, with which to convey salt; we know that a son of John Tilton’s was killed by Indians while up Short creek after his father’s cows. We know they had houses. . . . They were a religious people, . . . so religious, in fact, were these settlers on the bottom lands of Jefferson county—Mingo Bottoms, extending from what is now Mingo Junction, to the present southern line of the county—that Colonel Butler reported that they were great fanatics. We know, also, that Rev. George Callahan held the first Methodist Episcopal services in the Northwest Territory, in 1787, at Carpenter’s Fort.” Carpenter’s Fort was located on Short creek, not far above its mouth, and near the present Portland station, on the Cleveland and Pittsburgh railway. See an article on "The Holmes Family," in the Lancaster (Ohio) Gazette, July 15, 1899.

We get another glimpse of the Norristown (now Warrentown) settlement as it was in the summer of 1787, during the progress of the survey of the Seven Ranges, by referring to the diary of John Mathews, a nephew of General Putnam, who came out from Massachusetts to assist in the survey. On August 5th, 1787, he was at Esquire McMahan's house, a few miles south of Mingo Island, on the Virginia side of the Ohio river, whence his Journal proceeds as follows:

6th. At 9 o'clock A. M. embarked on board of a boat for Muskingum, in company of Captain Mills, Lieutenant Spear, and Doctor Scott. Twelve o'clock, stopped one mile above Short creek, on the northwest side of the river [Warrenton]. At this place are about ten families collected, and are determined to stand it out against all opposition, either from the Indians or the troops. After a drink of good punch, proceeded on our way. At six, arrived at Wheeling, and tarried all night.

Interesting as it is to trace the footsteps of these early pioneers, however, we can find but little information of them on the records during the next ten years; and it was not until after the year 1800 that extensive settlements began to be made in Harrison county. Settlers had come into the county in considerable numbers before 1805, and taken up much of the choicest lands along the streams. The best means we have of determining their centres of settlement is to examine the history of the early churches of the county. It was characteristic of that race of people which chiefly settled Harrison county that its pioneers usually established a church or preaching station, even if it were no more than a "tent," as soon as they became seated with their families in a new country. We find, accordingly, that two of these stations were erected to accommodate the worshippers who lived in what is now Harrison county, as early as 1803, one at Daniel Welch's (Beech Spring, or Unionvale), and the other a short distance south of the present village of New Athens, (Crabapple). The next year, occasional preaching services began to be held on the site of the present town of Cadiz.
CHAPTER V.

HARRISON COUNTY PIONEERS.

The first white settlers in Harrison county came here before any roads were built, and it is reasonable to suppose, before it was possible to bring with them any wheeled vehicles. Their household furnishings, salt, and flour or meal, were brought by pack-horses; and the first avenues of travel in the county were probably old Indian trails or paths, following the courses of the streams, or piercing the seemingly endless forest along the tops of the high ridges, or "divides." The first to come were the Indian fighters, scouts, and hunters, of whom a number lived along the Ohio river frontier, contemporaries and neighbors of the Wetzel brothers, of Adam and Andrew Poe, of Captain Samuel Brady, and of Major McCulloch. Among these, Jacob Holmes, Robert Maxwell, and Joseph and William Huff settled along Indian Short creek, as it was then called, the Huffs locating near the site of Georgetown. In a letter from Curtis Wilkin, a relative of Joseph Huff, published by Mr. Hunter in his history of the Pathfinders of Jefferson County, the writer states that Joseph Huff did not settle on Short creek before 1796; and that his house was the frontier house in that vicinity for upwards of three years. William Huff shot an Indian near where Georgetown now stands, about the year 1800, because he had boasted in Huff's presence of the number of white men's scalps he had taken. Of Jacob Holmes, Mr. Curtis Wilkin, of Kenton, Ohio, in a letter to the Steubenville Gazette, written March 6, 1899, says:

Jacob Holmes was my grandfather, and my information is derived from Jacob Holmes himself, from his wife, and from my mother. John Huff, my grandmother's brother, married Sallie Johnson, a sister of John and Henry Johnson, who were captured by the Indians [in Warren township, Jefferson county, in 1793], killed their captors, and returned home. John Huff settled at Columbia, on the Ohio river, a few miles above Cincinnati, at about the close of the last century, and lived to be an aged man, dying there something over fifty years ago. Besides his sister (my grandmother), he had a brother, Eleazer Huff, and a son in the vicinity of my father's farm in Highland county.

Jacob Holmes was born December 8, 1768, in Rockingham county, Va. While Jacob was a small boy, his father moved to Bedford county, Pa., and a few years later to Washington county, Pa., near Catfish, now Washington; then a few years later to what is now Brooke county, W. Va., and settled on Buffalo creek, not far from the Ohio river. Here our subject grew to manhood, and in 1791 was married to Elizabeth, daughter of Michael and Hannah Doddridge Huff. Shortly after his marriage he was employed by the United States Government as an Indian scout, and, in company with his brother-in-law, Kinsey Dickerson, and a man named Washburn, was thus employed for three years. For his services he received a tract of land on Short creek, a few miles north of where Mt. Pleasant now stands. To this place he moved his family in the spring of 1796, my mother being but six months old. He resided on this farm some twenty-five years, when he sold to a man named Comley, and removed to the northern part of Harrison county. The farm on which he then located is now in Carroll county. He resided here until 1832, when he again sold out and removed to Fairfield township, Highland county. In the summer of 1838, he again sold out, and bought a farm one mile north of Kenton, Hardin county, to which he moved in the spring of 1839, and there he died October 14, 1841.

In another letter Mr. Wilkin writes:

Joseph Huff was the brother of my grandmother, the wife of Jacob Holmes. My grandfather, Michael Huff, had the following sons: Michael, who was killed by the Indians on the Mississippi river, in the early settlement of Illinois; Joseph, who I think died in Harrison county many years ago, not far from where his father settled in Jefferson (now Harrison) county, and near Georgetown; William, who died near the same place; John, who died at Columbia, a short distance above Cincinnati, about 1842; Samuel, who died in Highland county about 1846; Eleazer, who died in Highland county about 1833. The old Huff Bible, that contains the record of all the Huff family, is now in possession of David C. Holmes, of Kenton, a grandson of Jacob Holmes.

Henry Howe, in his history of Ohio, written in 1847, states that in April, 1799, Alexander Henderson and family, from Washington county, Pennsylvania, "squatted" on the southwest corner of the section of land on which Cadiz stands; and at this time Daniel Peterson resided at the forks of Short creek, with his family, the only one within the present limits of Harrison county. If this statement be true, then Joseph Huff could not have settled in Harrison county much before 1800.

Major Erkuries Beatty, father of the late Dr. Charles C. Beatty of Steubenville, who was paymaster of the western army, came to the Ohio country in 1786 and 1787, in the discharge of his official duties, and kept a diary of his tours and transactions. On the 31st of July, 1786, Major Beatty set out from Pittsburgh to descend the Ohio river. On the second day afterwards, he made the following entry in his diary:

August 2. Started early, stopped opposite the mouth of Little Beaver and breakfasted with the surveyor, who is waiting for troops. Arrived at Mingo Bottom 3 o'clock, where Capt. Hamtramck's, McCurdy's, and Mercer's companies encamped, and had just been mustered and inspected by Major North. Showers of rain to-day. The troops encamped on the bank of the river opposite the lower end of a small island.

August 3. Waiting for Major North, who is going with me to Muskingum. About 2 o'clock two detachments from Capt. Mercer's company, one commanded by Lt. Kersy, the other by Ensign Rigart, marched to destroy some improvements on the river ten or fifteen miles up Short creek.

"Ten or fifteen miles up Short creek" would locate this settlement which the soldiers were about to destroy, at somewhere between Adena and Georgetown, and if Major Beatty's information was exact, it would indicate that some of the hardy pioneers of that day had penetrated the wilderness and made improvements in Short Creek township as early as 1786.

The first survey of the public lands northwest of the Ohio river was that of the Seven Ranges, made in pursuance of an act of Congress of May 20, 1785. In July, 1786, the surveyors, under the direction of Thomas Hutchins, who had been appointed geographer of the United States, assembled at Pittsburgh. John Mathews, a nephew of General Rufus Putnam, one of the surveyors, came on from Massachusetts to assist in the survey, arriving at Pittsburgh July 26, 1786. His diary, kept during the progress of the survey, has been published. He spent the early part of September, 1787, at the house of Esquire McMahan, in Ohio (now Brooke) county, West Virginia. On the 20th, a small party proposed to cross the Ohio and go out into the woods for a few days to dig ginseng. In those early times, when the plant was plentiful, it was a source of profit to the frontier inhabitants, who had few articles to give in exchange for money, or the more valuable articles of merchandise brought out by the traders. This proved to be rather a hazardous trip, as the Indians were hostile, and killed all the white men they found encroaching on their hunting grounds. Mathews' journal proceeds:

September 20th, 1787. A little before sunset the Squire and myself crossed the Ohio, and went about two miles, and tarried all night at a house which was left by the inhabitants [who had probably fled, from fear of the hostile Indians then in the vicinity].

September 21st.—Four men joined us, and we set off by Williamson’s Trail a little before sunset. We encamped half a mile beyond the Big Lick, on the head waters of Short creek, in the ninth township of the fourth range.

The ninth township of the fourth range comprises the north half of the present township of Short Creek and the south half of Green, in Harrison county; and the “Big Lick” may have been the spring near which some twelve or thirteen years later Daniel Welch established his horse-mill—in his day known as Beech Spring, from which the first church erected in Harrison county took its name.

The ginseng diggers proceeded westward along the ridge dividing the waters of Short creek and the Stillwater, and dug ginseng four days. Mathews says: “It grew here in great abundance. Men accustomed to the work could dig from forty to sixty pounds a day.”

September 28. Collected our horses and prepared to start for the river. At 1 o’clock completed their loading. At sunset, encamped within about sixteen miles of the Ohio.

29th. Arrived at the river about three o’clock P. M. We were much surprised to hear that three men had been killed and one taken prisoner by the Indians, about ten miles up Cross creek, who were out after ginseng on Sunday last. Two of the party made their escape. They had also killed a family the week following, up Wheeling creek, and done considerable other damage. While we were out we were very careless and came on their trail, but very fortunate they did not fall in with us. I feel very happy that I have reached my old quarters, and will give them liberty to take my scalp if they find me out after ginseng again this year.

October 13th. This evening McMahan returned from over the river, where he had been with a party of men in pursuit of some Indians, who yesterday morning killed an old man near Fort Steuben. He did not discover them, but by the signs thought them to be seven or eight in number.
Nov. 30th. A part of this month I have been on the west side of the Ohio, with Mr. Simpson and Colonel Martin, assisting them in the survey of the lands they bought at public sales in New York.

Dr. Thomas R. Crawford, for forty years pastor of Nottingham Church, in his book of “Reminiscences,” published at Wheeling in 1887, gives the following account of an Indian fight which took place within the present boundaries of Harrison county more than a hundred years ago:

The earliest visit of white men of which we have any account, into the territory of which this county was ultimately formed, was in the fall of 1793, when Capt. William Boggs, Robert Maxwell, Joseph Daniels, — Johnson, and — Miller were sent out from the old blockhouse [Fort Henry], located on the ground afterwards occupied by the city of Wheeling, West Va. These men were Indian scouts and spies. They made their excursion from the mouth of Wheeling creek up to the dividing ridge, and crossed over on the evening of the second day after they left the river, to the headwaters of Stillwater, venturing rather far into the interior with so small a force. This little band of daring men struck up a fire and camped at a spring on the banks of a stream, near to the place where the old Crawford brick house now stands. The party prepared and ate their supper, and being much fatigued with the journey of two days through an unbroken wilderness, they lay down to rest around the burning embers of a camp fire, not expecting an enemy near, for they had seen no recent traces of the red man from the time they left the Fort. Soon they were wrapped in sleep, only to be awakened and startled by the hideous yell of Indians, followed by the report of firearms. A ball took effect in the knee of Captain Boggs, which so crippled him that he was unable to flee. He called to his companions, “Make your escape, if possible, and leave me to my fate,” which they did, leaving their brave leader to perish at the hands of a terrible and cruel foe. Three out of the four that fled arrived safely at the block-house, and reported the disaster that befell their expedition. Measures were immediately taken, and a company of men was sent out in a short time to seek for the remains of Mr. Boggs. After much precaution in travel, the party found the place where the spies had encamped on that fatal night, and soon discovered the mutilated body of their captain; took up the remains and buried them a few rods northeast from the above-named spring, on one of the tributary streams of Big Stillwater, which ever after has been called “Boggs’ Fork,” from the name of this adventuring but unfortunate man. It is to be regretted that all traces of the grave of this brave and trustworthy soldier have disappeared.

lished in 1891, of Robert Cochran, who was born in what is now Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, in 1771. He came to Allegheny county with his father's family, when eighteen years of age. Shortly after the year 1803, he emigrated to Ohio, and bought eighty acres of land in what is now Harrison county, paying $200 for the same. Here he built himself a cabin of poles, daubed inside and out with mud, having a stick chimney, puncheon floor, clap-board roof, and clap-board door. Here, in winter seasons, he was joined by John Maholm, an old friend from Pennsylvania, and together they lived in Mr. Maholm's cabin, eating supper and breakfast in company, and each working on his own "clearing" during the day.

During the fall and winter of 1804-5, Mr. Cochran secured the services of a man to do his cooking, hired a mill-wright and several axemen, and erected a two-story grist-mill, worked by horse-power. No iron was used in its construction, except some strengthening bands around the trundle head and spindle; wheels and parts were all made of wood, and all hand-made, as saw-mills were unknown in the county at that day. The mill-stones were brought down the Ohio to Steubenville and hauled across the country, the trip occupying four days. Unwieldy as it was, the mill was kept constantly going, day and night, Sundays excepted, the farmers coming for miles around to have their grinding done. It was a common sight to see men occupying the time, while waiting their turn for grinding, in throwing the tomahawk at marks attached to trees. As time passed on, this mill was superseded by water-mills, but in dry seasons, when water failed, the neighbors were obliged to return again to Cochran's horse-mill. It was the first mill erected west of that of Daniel Welch, at Beech Spring, and in early days was of great benefit to the pioneers. The land on which Mr. Cochran settled lies about half a mile north of Cadiz, and is now occupied by his descendants.

The early pioneers came to Harrison county from Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Maryland, but chiefly from Washington county, Pennsylvania. The journeys from localities east of the mountains were sometimes long and full of danger. The paths across the mountains were rough and difficult. Pack-horses were at first the only means of transportation; on some, the pioneers packed the stores and rude agricultural implements, and on others, the furniture, bedding, and cooking utensils, and again, on others, their wives and children. Horses which carried small children were each provided with a pack-saddle and two large creels made of hickory withes, in the fashion of a crate, one over each side, in which were stowed clothes and bedding. In the center of each would sometimes be tucked a child or two, the top being well secured by lacing, so as to keep the youngsters in their places. The roads, frequently, were barely passable; sometimes lying along the brink of precipices; frequently overflown in places by swollen streams, all of which had to be forded; horses slipping, falling, and carried away, both women and children were often in great danger.

The creels would sometimes break and send the children rolling over the ground in great confusion. It was no uncommon thing for mother and child to be separated from each other for hours whilst on the journey to their new homes, in a wild forest, amidst beasts, and exposed to attacks by the Indians. When the pioneer reached his destination, he usually put up a brush shelter, until he could build his cabin. The latter was made of rough logs, without nail, board, or window-pane. He then turned his attention to clearing a small plot of ground on which to raise such food as was needed for the support of his family.

The food question was the all-important one with the settlers. Their hard labor resulted in giving them keen appetites, and much account was taken of the feasts, merry-making parties, and public gatherings. The quality of the food was not so much regarded as the quantity. Times were when the providential appearance of a deer averted starvation, and the fortunate catching of a fish, or the trapping of game, eked out a scanty subsistence. Journeys of many miles were made for a few pounds of flour or meal.

Their cabins contained little or no furniture; beds with no mattresses, springs, or even bed-cords—the couches being spread upon the floor, and sleeping apartments separated by hanging blankets. About the fireplace were found hooks and trammel, the bake-pan and the kettle. Sometimes chairs were represented by sections of a tree of the required height. Upon the shelves were spoons of pewter, blue-edged plates, cups and saucers, and the black earthen tea-pot; and later, perhaps, one corner of the room was occupied by a tall clock, while in another corner stood an old-fashioned, high-post, corded bedstead, covered with an "Irish chain" quilt—a marvel of patchwork ingenuity and laborious sewing.

The following extracts from a letter written by Robert Van Horn in 1895, furnish an interesting account of the incidents of an early trip over the Allegheny mountains, made by one of the pioneer families in Harrison county. Mr. Van Horn was born at New Athens in 1812, the son of Edward and Margaret Hamilton Van Horn. He writes:
My grandmother’s maiden name was Martha McMullan, and she had a sister, Jane, married to John Perry. My first certain knowledge of them finds Grandmother living in Nottingham township, Chester county, Pennsylvania, and Uncle John Perry near by, on the Susquehanna river, running a herring fishery.

The country, though near Philadelphia, was new, and covered largely with pine forests, and the ground was strewed with the resinous knots of decayed trees, like the bones of dead animals. These knots were gathered by the poor, and laid by, to burn in the winter, instead of candles, and many an armful my mother carried home to her humble dwelling.

Part of my mother’s time, when a girl, was spent in the family of her uncle, John Perry, and part of her occupation was to hunt the cows in the woods, morning and evening. Rising early, she would stick a herring in the hot ashes to roast, and when done she would take it for a morning lunch, and hie away to the woods, as blithe and merry as a lark, her ears alert for the tinkling of the cow-bell.

How long the families remained there, I do not know; but Uncle Perry resolved to seek a better country, if not a heavenly one; and, like Abraham of old, he gathered up his substance, and, with his family, which was quite numerous, and my grandmother and her family, making together quite a respectable caravan, he started for the far West, a distance of some three hundred miles. Their goods seem to have been drawn by a single train, of four or six horses. There may have been more, but tradition does not say so. Perhaps the children, if not the mothers, “walked afoot.” The only incident of the journey which I can recall was as follows:

On reaching the top of one of the mountains, they found the western slope, which was quite long and steep, covered with a solid sheet of ice from top to bottom, making the descent extremely perilous. A consultation was held, and, as on all similar occasions, advice was plenty, and my grandmother contributed her share in true womanly style. She wanted him to cut down a great big sapling, and tie it to the hind end of the wagon, TO HOLD IT BACK! And old Uncle Perry, in true masculine style, after listening to this and other suggestions equally wise, went and did just as he had a mind to. He did not cut down the sapling, nor anything of the kind; but by rough-locking and careful driving, reached the foot of the perilous descent in safety. On reaching the bottom of the hill, he stopped the team, took off his hat, and, wiping his brow, said that he had had that hill on his mind ever since he left home.

On reaching their destination, they located in the extreme western part of Washington county, near West Middletown. Just how long they remained there, I do not know, but it must have been a number of years, for there several of the Hamilton children married and three of them died.

My father and mother removed to Harrison county in 1807, with their three oldest children. And some years before, the Perrys, Gastons, Alexander Morrison, and Grandmother Hamilton, had all settled near Morristown, in Belmont county.

On Saturday, May 5th, 1900, the writer paid a visit to a native of Harrison county, who was born near Cadiz, November 5, 1800, nearly one hundred years ago. This was Thomas West, who lives on a farm near Lafayette, in Coshocton county, Ohio. He was born a few miles north of Cadiz, the son of William and Sarah Boyd West, and grandson of Morris West. His parents came to Harrison county before 1800, and settled on the farm where he was born. There they died in 1830. He was married to Eliza Tipton, of Cadiz, niece of Rev. William Tipton, in 1831; and they removed to Coshocton county about 1844.

Thomas West stated that his father went from Steubenville into what was then the backwoods of Jefferson (now Harrison) county, and built himself a log-cabin, afterwards returning for his father (Morris West), who accompanied the family to their frontier home. At that time, and for some years afterwards, there were no roads in the county, and the settlers found their way from place to place by means of blazed trees, or trees from which a small portion of the bark had been chopped off, so as to leave a mark. Thomas West had as a schoolmate one Philip Kail, and some of his neighbors were Samuel Maholm, Nathan and Lemuel Green, and James Forbes. He went three miles to school, making his way through the forest by means of the blazings, and could not remain for the afternoon sessions, as he had to return home before evenings in order to avoid the wolves. The United States spelling book was the principal book used in his school days. The school-houses which he attended were all log buildings, and the light was let in by means of a square hole cut out between two logs, the opening being covered with greased paper. The boys were warned by the teacher against punching holes through the windows with their quill pens, and suffered severe punishment if caught in such an act.

The first religious meetings were held in private houses, traveling circuit riders occasionally visiting the settlement and preaching for them. When a log church was afterwards erected (now Bethel church), the services were attended by many in the neighborhood, but the attendants usually wore their every-day suits and dresses, as few of the pioneers possessed clothing that could be called "Sunday best." Man and wife usually rode to meeting together, on the back of the same horse.

Clothing was generally made of coarse linen. For winter wear, it was customary to weave the cloth with two "shots" of wool alternating with every two "shots" of tow thread. The pioneers had plenty to eat and live on, though it was a rough diet. After the first few years, they had plenty of meat and potatoes, turnips, milk, and butter—"hog and hominy, milk and butter," as Mr. West expressed it. When a small boy, his principal occupation was to pick up brush, following the men, whose labor for many years after settlement was chiefly devoted to making clearings here and there in the forest, upon which they might plant crops. One of Mr. West's earliest recollections was that of an adventure the family had with a bear. When still a small boy, his father had cleared sufficient of his land to give him a space for two fields, and had constructed a fence between, which ran from the cabin to the timber line. While this fence was building, one day when the men had come in for their supper, an occasion arose for using the family ax, and it was found that it had been left out in the clearing, at the end of the fence. Thomas was sent out to fetch it, and ran down the field alongside the fence to where it lay. As he ran, he noticed that the family pig was running down the field on the other side of the fence, as if expecting to receive some food from the hands of the boy, as was its wont. As Thomas reached the ax, and stooped down to pick it up, he heard the pig set up a terrific squealing, and saw it held tightly between the forelegs of a large black animal, which stood up on its hind legs, and seemed to have conceived a wonderful affection for Tommie's pet piggie. At the same time, his father began to shout and to clap his hands vigorously, and by so doing succeeded in starting the bear back to the woods, where it dropped the hog between the forked limbs of a low tree, and then departed. The men got down a gun, and started into the woods, but failed to find the bear. They brought back the hog, however, but its life had been crushed out, and its back broken in three places by the bear's tight squeeze.

Pork was the chief animal food of the Harrison county pioneer. In the early days, the salted meat was packed in a trough, which was set deep in the ground near the front of the cabin door, and a clap-board top staked down over the trough, to keep wolves and other beasts from getting at its contents. Mr. West said that when he had grown to be a man, he bought salted pork from Edward Healey, a neighbor, who told him that he hadn't seen the bottom of his meat hogshead for seven years, "and it was as good meat as ever went into a man's mouth," said Mr. West. "Salt was salt in those days. It is not so good now, and it is

"The ploughs were all made of wood," he proceeded, "excepting a couler to split the ground, and a small share-point. Threshing was done with a flail. I have whipped out hundreds of bushels of wheat on the puncheon floor of a log-barn. Johnny-cake was a staple article of diet. It was baked by putting it on a smooth board and setting it before a fire, with a stone before it, to keep it from falling down. When one side was done, we turned it over, and baked the other side. Wheat bread was baked by making a hole in the earthen fire-hearth, into which the loaves were placed, the hole covered with a flat stone, and live coals heaped on the stone. Sometimes the wheat was so rank, that it made you sick to eat bread made from it, and even made the hogs sick. This may have come from poisonous herbs being ground up with the flour, but it was usually thought to be due to the wheat having too much shade while growing. In the early days, the crops were planted in small patches, wherever clearings had been made, and the patches were surrounded on all sides by the tall trees of the forest. I remember one day a distant female relative came to visit at our house at a time when the wheat was too rank to make wholesome bread. My mother had to serve corn-bread, or Johnny-cake, and explained the reason for doing so by saying that the wheat that year was unfit for bread. Our visitor was inclined to turn up her nose at Johnny-cake, and thought my mother had invented the excuse about the wheat bread, merely to hide her poverty; so she stated that she was very fond of bread made from wheat grown on new soil, and liked no other kind so well. This nettled my mother some, as she could see from the manner of her visitor that her own hospitality was questioned; and she resolved to give her all that she desired. So my mother made up some of the new wheat flour into bread, and at the next meal let her visitor eat her fill. The result was, a very sick woman, and no doubt a wiser one. We used to go two miles to the house of a neighbor to get our grinding done. He had a hand-mill, and sometimes it was necessary to wait for hours before our turn would come to take the mill. Later, when Bower's mill was set up [at the site of Bowers-town], I often rode horseback through the woods to that mill, with a bag of corn or wheat behind, had it ground, and carried the meal or flour home. One afternoon, while returning from the mill, I noticed a number of wild animals, like large dogs, which followed the horse, and one of them, once or twice snapped at my feet. But I was a small boy then, and my feet did not reach down very far; so I did not become uneasy. When I reached home, my parents told me that the animals which followed me were wolves, and they marvelled at my escape without injury. I had never seen wolves before, and when I found out what had chased me, became very much frightened at my experience.

"In the early days in Harrison county, fist fights were of very frequent occurrence, and public gatherings of all kinds usually ended with a fight between one or more pairs of fighters. While I was still a little boy, my uncle, Augustus West, was forced into a fight with a bully, during the time of a camp-meeting which was held in the woods near our house. This occurred one day after the services had been held. My uncle was standing on the grounds, talking with some of his friends, when a big, swaggering fellow came along, elbowing people out of his way, and looking and walking very much like a big Brahma rooster that is spoiling for a fight. 'I am the best man that walks the road,' he said, when he reached the place where my uncle was standing with his friends. Now, my uncle was not naturally a fighting man, and I think if he had been choosing a place for a fight he would not have picked on the grounds of a camp-meeting. But he hated a bully, and when the fellow repeated his brag, my uncle said to him in a quiet tone, 'Stranger, untried.' This was enough to egg on the bully, and he struck my uncle. Then the fight began. Uncle Augustus was a short and heavy-set man, built like a Dutchman's horse, and he could parry the blows of his antagonist until he finally succeeded in 'cutting his wind.' Then he sailed into him, and very soon had him with his back on the ground.

"General musters were often held at Cadiz, and in the country near there, and I attended many of these when a young man, although not myself a member of the militia, on account of my defective hearing. One day, at muster, I saw two men fight for three-quarters of an hour. Their names were Salsman and Watson. Salsman stripped for the fight, and prepared himself for it better. Watson was dressed up, and as he was something of a dandy, would not take off his coat, nor even his stock and necktie. The kind of neckties they wore in those days were very large and cumbersome, and I do not see how Watson could have fought as he did with that cloth wound around his neck. After the fight was over, Salsman had to keep his bed for three weeks. Watson was able to get around again in a few days; and probably would not have had a scratch if he had prepared himself for the fight as the other man did.

"About the time I was married, wheat sold in Harrison county for forty cents a bushel. A day's wages for a reaper was fifty cents, or sometimes a bushel of wheat was given for a day's work. I hired out to work one summer for a bushel of wheat a day. In the fall, when pay-day came, the price of wheat had risen to $1.00. My employer then wanted to pay me in money on the basis of the value of wheat when I began working; but of course, I could not agree to that.

"When I started for myself, the first sheep I bought cost me seventy-five cents each. At that time a good big four year old steer fetched ten dollars. Before that time, a farm laborer's wages was generally not much over twenty-five cents per day. My son-in-law has some men hired on this place where we are to-day, and pays them as much for a day's wage as men used to get for working a week and a day.

"I used to go to Cadiz to do my trading, generally dealt with Kilgore and Lyons, and knew the Olmsteads, the Pritchards, the Maholms, and McFaddens, most of whom were engaged in business in that town. One day a neighbor and myself went to Cadiz, and after doing our trading, and getting what provisions we had come for, the store-keeper (I am not sure, but it may have been Mr. Kilgore), asked us if we were going back home without taking out new calico dresses for our wives. We told him that we had no money with which to buy calico dresses, that it took all our surplus earnings, beyond what went to improving our farms, to buy such necessaries as we could not raise ourselves. He told us that we could buy the dresses without paying for them then, that he would trust us for the price, and we could pay for them at another time. This was my first experience in buying on credit, and it seemed so complimentary to my neighbor and myself that the store-keeper should trust us, that we both bought some of his calico, and our wives had fine new dresses. And we afterwards paid for them, too. Men were not trusted in those days unless it was pretty certain that they would pay. Credit then was not so free or general as it is to-day."

John S. Williams, who edited the American Pioneer, published at Cincinnati in 1843, wrote a series of articles on his knowledge and experience of pioneer life, which are of especial interest to Harrison county readers, as he was an early settler in the Concord settlement in Colerain township, Belmont county, south of Mt. Pleasant, and not far from the southeastern corner of Harrison county. In the spring of 1800, with his mother, sister, and brother, he emigrated from Beaufort, North Carolina, to what was then a part of Jefferson county, in the Northwest Territory. Some of his pioneer experiences were recounted, as follows:
In April, 1800, we sailed from Beaufort for Alexandria (Va.), in company with seventy other emigrants, large and small, say twelve families. We had one storm, and were once becalmed in Core sound, and had to wait about two weeks at Currituck inlet for a wind to take us to sea. From thence to Alexandria we had a fine run, especially up the Potomac bay.

At Alexandria we remained several days before we got wagons to bring us out. Here everything was weighed. My weight was just seventy-five pounds. We stopped near two weeks on what I think was called Goose creek, in Virginia, before we could be supplied with a wagon to cross the mountains, in place of the one we occupied, which belonged there.

The mountain roads, (if roads they could be called, for pack-horses were still on them), were of the most dangerous and difficult character. I have heard an old mountain tavern-keeper say that, although the taverns were less than ten miles apart in years after we came, he had known many emigrant families that stopped a night at every tavern on the mountains. I recollect but few of our night stands distinctly—say, Dinah Besor’s, Goose Creek, Old Crock’s, near the South Branch; Tomlinson’s, Beesontown [Uniontown], and Simpkins’, and Merrittstown. Our company consisted of Joseph Dew, Levina Hall, and Jonas Small, with their families. [For a further account of these emigrants, see Chapter II., which relates to the emigration of Southern Quakers to Harrison county.]

After a tedious journey, we all arrived safely at Fredericktown, Washington county, Pa., where we stopped to await the opening of the land office at Steubenville, Ohio. Here, we found Horton Howard and family, who had come on the season previous. Here, also, the children had the whooping-cough. Those whom we left at Alexandria came to Redstone Old Fort [Brownsville], ten miles below Fredericktown, where they sojourned for the same purpose; and although, as we thought, unfortunately detained, they were the first at their resting place.

Jonas Small, Francis Mace, and several other families from Redstone returned to Carolina, dissatisfied with the hills, vales, and mud of the Northwest, little dreaming of the level and open plains of this valley. Horton Howard and family started first from Fredericktown; Joseph Dew, Levina Hall, and ourselves, made another start in September, or early in October. We started in the afternoon, and lay at Benjamin Townsend’s on Fishpot Run; we lay also at the Blue Ball, near Washington, at Rice’s, on the Buffalo, and at Warren [at the mouth of Short creek], on the Ohio. These are all the night stands that I recollect in fifty-five miles. We arrived safe at John Leaf’s, in what is now called Concord settlement. From Warren, Joseph Dew and Mrs. Hall proceeded up Little Short creek, and stopped near where Mt. Pleasant now is. In what is now called Concord settlement, four or five years previously, five or six persons had squatted and made small improvements. The Friends, chiefly from Carolina, had taken the land at a clear sweep.
Mr. Leaf lived on a tract bought by Horton Howard, since owned by Samuel Potts, and subsequently by William Millhouse. Horton Howard had turned in on Mr. Leaf, and we turned in on both.

If anyone has an idea of the appearance of the remnant of a town that has been nearly destroyed by fire, and the homeless inhabitants turned in upon those who were left, they can form some idea of the squatters' cabins that fell. It was a real harvest for them, however, for they received the rhino for the privileges granted and work done, as well in aid of the emigrants in getting cabins up as for their improvements. This settlement is in Belmont county, on Glenn's Run, about six miles northwest of Wheeling, and as much northeast of St. Clairsville.

Emigrants poured in from different posts, cabins were put up in every direction, and women, children, and goods tumbled into them. The tide of emigration flowed like water through the breach in a milldam. Everything was bustle and confusion, and all at work that could work. In the midst of all this, the mumps, and perhaps one or two other diseases prevailed, and gave us a seasoning. Our cabin had been raised, covered, part of the cracks chinked, and part of the floor laid when we moved in, on Christmas day. There had not been a stick cut except in building the cabin. We had intended an inside chimney, for we thought the chimney ought to be in the house. We had a log put across the whole width of the cabin for a mantel, but when the floor was in we found it so low as not to answer, and removed it. Here was a great change for my mother and sister, as well as the rest, but particularly my mother. She was raised in the most delicate manner, in and near London, and lived most of the time in affluence, and always comfortable. She was now in the wilderness, surrounded by wild beasts, in a cabin with about half a floor, no door, no ceiling overhead, not even a tolerable sign for a fireplace; the light of day and the chilling winds of night passing between every two logs, the cabin so high from the ground that a bear, wolf, panther, or any animal less in size than a cow, could enter without even a squeeze. Such was our situation on Thursday and Thursday night, December 25th, 1800, and which was bettered but by very slow degrees. We got the rest of the floor laid in a few days; the chinking of the cracks went on slowly, but the daubing could not proceed until the weather was more suitable, which happened in a few days; doorways were sawed out and steps made of the logs, and the back of the chimney was raised up to the mantel, but the funnel of sticks and clay was delayed until spring.

In building our cabin, it was set to front the north and south, my brother using my father's pocket compass on the occasion. We had no idea of living in a house that did not stand square with the earth itself. This argued our ignorance of the comforts and conveniences of a pioneer life. The position of the house, end to the hill, necessarily elevated the lower end, and the determination to have both a north and a south door added much to the airiness of the domicile, particularly after the green ash puncheons had shrunk so as to leave cracks in the floor and doors from one to two inches. At both the doors we had high, unsteady, and sometimes icy steps, made by piling up the logs cut out of the wall. We had a window, if it could be called a window, when, perhaps, it was the largest spot in the top, bottom, or sides of the cabin at which the wind could not enter. It was made by sawing out a log, placing sticks across, and then, by pasting an old newspaper over the holes, and applying some hog’s lard, we had a kind of a glazing which shed a most beautiful and mellow light across the cabin when the sun shone upon it. All other light entered at the doors, cracks, and chimney.

Our cabin was twenty-four by eighteen. The west end was occupied by two beds, the center of each side by a door, and here our symmetry had to stop, for on the side opposite the window, made of clap-boards, supported by pins driven into the logs, were our shelves. Upon these shelves my sister displayed, in ample order, a host of pewter plates, basins, and dishes, and spoons, scoured and bright. It was none of your new-fangled pewter, made of lead, but the best of London pewter, which our father himself bought of Townsend, the manufacturer. These were the plates upon which you could hold your meat so as to cut it without slipping and without dulling your knife. But, alas! the days of pewter plates and sharp dinner knives have passed away, never to return. To return to our internal arrangements. A ladder of five rounds occupied the corner near the window. By this, when we got a floor above, we could ascend. Our chimney occupied most of the east end; pots and kettles opposite the window under the shelves, a gun on hooks over the north door, four split-bottom chairs, three three-legged stools, and a small eight by ten looking-glass sloped from the wall over a large towel and comb-case. These, with a clumsy shovel and a pair of tongs, made in Frederick, with one shank straight, as the best manufacturer of pinches and blood-blisters, completed our furniture, except a spinning-wheel, and such things as were necessary to work with. It was absolutely necessary to have three-legged stools, as four legs of anything could not all touch the floor at the same time.

The completion of our cabin went on slowly. The season was inclement; we were weak-handed and weak-pocketed—in fact, laborers were not to be had. We got one chimney up breast-high as soon as we could, and got our cabin daubed as high as the joists outside. It never was daubed on the inside, for my sister, who was very nice, could not consent to “live right next to the mud.” My impression now is, that the window was not constructed till spring, for until the sticks and clay were put on the chimney we could possibly have no need for a window; for the flood of light which always poured into the cabin from the fireplace would have extinguished our window, and rendered it as useless as the moon at noon-day. We got a floor laid overhead as soon as possible, perhaps in a month; but, when it was laid, the reader can readily conceive of its imperviousness to wind or weather, when we mention that it was laid of loose clap-boards, split from a red-oak. That tree grew in the night, and so twisting that each board laid on two diagonally opposite corners, and a cat might have shook every board on our ceiling.

It may be well to inform the unlearned reader that clap-boards are such lumber as pioneers split with a frow, and resemble barrel staves before they are shaved, but are split longer, wider, and thinner; of such our roof and ceiling were composed. Puncheons were planks made by splitting logs to about two and a half or three inches in thickness and hewing them on one or both sides with a broad-axe. Of such our floor, doors, tables, and stools were manufactured.

The monotony of the time for several of the first years was broken and enlivened by the howl of wild beasts. The wolves howling around us seemed to moan their inability to drive us from their long undisputed domain. The bears, panthers, and deer seemingly got miffed at our approach, or the partiality of the hunters, and but seldom troubled us. We did not hunt for them. The wild-cat, raccoon, 'possum, hornet, yellow-jacket, rattlesnake, copperhead, nettle, and a host of small things, which seemed in part to balance the amount of pioneer happiness, held on to their rights until driven out gradually by the united efforts of the pioneers, who like a band of brothers usually aided each other in the great work. These things, as well as getting their bread, kept them too busy for law-suits, quarrels, crimes, and speculations, and made them happy.

When spring was fully come, and our little patch of corn—three acres—put in among the beech roots, which at every step contended with the shovel-plough for the right of soil, and held it, too, we enlarged our stock of conveniences. As soon as bark would run (i. e., peel off), we could make ropes and bark boxes. These we stood in great need of, as such things as bureaus, stands, wardrobes, or even barrels, were not to be had. The manner of making ropes of linn-bark was to cut the bark in strips of convenient length, and water-rot it in the same manner as rotting flax or hemp. When this was done, the inside bark would peel off and split up so fine as to make a pretty considerably rough and good-for-but-little kind of a rope. Of this, however, we were very glad, and let no ship-owner with his grass ropes laugh at us. We made two kinds of boxes for furniture. One kind was of hickory bark, with the outside shaved off. This we would take off all around the tree, the size of which would determine the caliber of our box. Into one end we would place a flat piece of bark or puncheon, cut round to fit in the bark, which stood on end the same as when on the tree. There was little need of hooping, as the strength of the bark would keep that all right enough. Its shrinkage would make the top unsightly in a parlor now-a-days, but then they were considered quite an addition to the furniture. A much finer article was made of slippery-elm bark, shaved smooth, and with the inside out, bent round and sewed together where the ends of the hoop or main bark lapped over. The length of the bark was around the box, and inside out. A bottom was made of a piece of the same bark, dried flat, and a lid, like that of a common band-box, made in the same way. This was the finest furniture in a lady's dressing-room, and then, as now, with the finest furniture, the lapped or sewed side was turned to the wall, and the prettiest part to the spectator. They were easily made oval, and while the bark was green, were easily ornamented with drawings of birds, trees, &c., agreeably to the taste and skill of the fair manufacturer. As we belonged to the Society of Friends, it may be fairly presumed that our band-boxes were not thus ornamented.

To the above store of bark ropes and bark boxes must be added a few gums before the farmer considered himself comfortably fixed. It may be well to inform the unlearned reader that gums are hollow trees cut off, with puncheons pinned on, or fitted into one end, to answer in the place of barrels.

The privations of a pioneer life contract the wants of man almost to total extinction, and allow him means of charity and benevolence. Sufferings ennoble his feelings, and the frequent necessity for united efforts at house-raisings, log-rollings, corn-huskings, &c., produced in him habitual charity, almost unknown in these days.

We settled on beech land, which took much trouble to clear. We could do no other way than clear out the smaller stuff and burn the brush around the beeches, which, in spite of all the burning and girdling we could do to them, would leaf out the first year, and often a little the second. The land, however, was very rich, and would bring better corn than might be expected. We had to tend it principally with the hoe, that is, to chop down the nettles, the water-weed, and the touch-me-not. Grass, careless, lambs-quarter, and Spanish needles were reserved for the better prepared farmers. We cleared a small turnip patch, which we got in about the 10th of August. We sowed in timothy seed, which took well, and the next year we had a little hay besides. The tops and blades of the corn were also carefully saved for our horse, cow, and the sheep. The turnips were sweet and good, and in the fall we took care to gather walnuts and hickory nuts, which were very abundant. These, with the turnips, which we scraped, supplied the place of fruit. I have always been partial to scraped turnips, and could now beat any three dandies at scraping them. Johnny-cake, also, when we had meal to make it of, helped to make up our evening's repast. The Sunday morning biscuit had all evaporated, but the loss was partially supplied by the nuts and turnips. Our regular supper was mush and milk, and by the time we had shelled our corn, stemmed tobacco, and plaited straw to make hats, &c., &c., the mush and milk had seemingly decamped from the neighborhood of our ribs. To relieve this difficulty, my brother and I would make a thin Johnny-cake, part of which we would eat, and leave the rest until morning. At daylight we would eat the balance, as we walked from the house to work.

To get grinding done was often a great difficulty, by reason of the scarcity of mills, the freezes in winter, and the droughts in summer. We had often to manufacture meal (when we had corn) in any way we could get the corn to pieces. We soaked and pounded it, we shaved it, we planed it, and, at a proper season, we grated it. When one of our neighbors got a hand-mill, it was thought quite an acquisition to the neighborhood. In after years, when in time of freezing or drought, we could get grinding by waiting for our turn no more than one day and a night at a horse-mill, we thought ourselves happy.

To save meal we often made pumpkin bread, in which, when meal was scarce, the pumpkin would so predominate as to render it almost impossible to tell our bread from that article, either by taste, looks, or the amount of nutriment it contained. To rise from the table with a good appetite is said to be healthy, and with some is said to be fashionable. What then does it signify to be hungry for a month at a time, when it is not only healthy, but fashionable? Besides all this, the sight of a bag of meal, when it was scarce, made the family feel more glad and thankful to Heaven then, than a whole boat-load would at the present time.

Salt was five dollars per bushel, and we used none in our corn-bread, which we soon liked as well without it. What meat we had at first was fresh, and but little of that; for had we been hunters, we had no time to practice it.

We had no candles, and cared little for them, except for summer use. In Carolina we had the real fat light-wood—not merely pine-knots, but the fat, straight pine. This, from the brilliancy of our parlor of winter evenings, might be supposed to put not only candles, lamps, camphine, Greenough's chemical oil, but even gas itself to the blush. In the West we had not this, but my business was to ramble the woods every evening for seasoned sticks, or the bark of the shelly hickory, for light. 'Tis true that our light was not so good as even candles, but we got along without fretting, for we depended more upon the goodness of our eyes than we did upon the brilliancy of the light.

One of my employments on winter evenings, after we raised flax, was the spinning of rope yarn, from the coarsest swingling tow, to make bed-cords for sale. "Swingling tow" is a corruption of "singling tow," as "swingle-tree" is of "single-tree." The manner of spinning rope yarn was by means of a drum, which turned on a horizontal shaft driven into a hole in one of the cabin logs near the fire. The yarn was hitched to a nail on one side of the circumference next to me. By taking an oblique direction, and keeping up a regular jerking, or pulling of the thread, the drum was kept in constant motion, and thus the twisting and pulling out went on regularly and simultaneously, until the length of the walk was taken up. Then, by winding the yarn first on my forearm, and from that on the drum, I was ready to spin another thread.

The unlearned reader might inquire what we did with the finer kinds of tow. It is well enough to apprise him that next to rope yarn in fineness was filling for trousers and aprons; next finer, warp for the same, and filling for shirts and frocks; next finer, of tow thread, warp for sheets and frocks, unless some of the higher grades of society would use flax thread. Linen shirts, especially seven hundred, was counted the very top of the pot, and he who wore an eight hundred linen shirt was counted a dandy. He was not called a dandy, for the word was unknown, as well as the refined animal which bears that name. Pioneers found it to their advantage to wear tow linen and eat skim milk, and sell their flax, linen, and butter.

Frocks were a short kind of shirt worn over the trousers. We saved our shirts by pulling them off in warm weather, and by wearing nothing in the day-time but our hats, made of straw, our frocks and our trousers. It will be thus perceived that these things took place before the days of suspenders, when everyone’s trousers lacked about two inches of reaching up to where the waistcoat reached down. Suspenders soon became a part of the clothing, and were a real improvement in dress.

The girls had forms without bustles, and rosy cheeks without paint. Those who are thin, lean, and colorless, from becoming slaves to idleness or fashion, are, to some extent, excusable for endeavoring to be artificially what the pioneer girls were naturally; who, had they needed lacing, might have used tow strings, and if bran were used for bustles might have curtailed their suppers. Those circumstances which frequently occasioned the bran to be eaten after the flour was gone, laced tight enough without silk cord or bone-sets, and prevented that state of things which sometimes makes it necessary to eat both flour and bran together as a medicine, and requires bran or straw outside to make the shape respectable.

Not only about the farm, but also to meeting, the younger part of the families, and even men went barefoot in summer. The young women carried their shoes and stockings, if they had them, in their hands, until they got in sight of the meeting-house, where, sitting on a log, they shod themselves for meeting, and at the same place, after meeting, they unshod themselves for a walk home, perhaps one or two miles. Whether shoes, stockings, or even bonnets, were to be had or not, meeting must be attended.

Turnips, walnuts, and hickory-nuts supplied the place of fruit till peaches were raised. In five or six years, millions of peaches rotted on the ground. Previous to our raising apples, we sometimes went to Martin’s Ferry, on the Ohio, to pick peaches for the owner, who had them distilled. We got a bushel of apples for each day’s work in picking peaches. These were kept for particular eating, as if they had contained seeds of gold. Their extreme scarcity made them seem valuable, and stand next to the short biscuit that were so valued in times gone by. Paw-paws were eaten in their season. When we got an abundance of apples, they seemed to lose their flavor and relish.

Pasturage was abundant in summer, being composed mostly of nettles, waist high, which made us fine greens, and thus served for both the cow and her owner, and yet, like everything else on earth, seemed to balance the account by stinging us at every turn. Even the good pasturage of this new country, considered as pasture, had its balancing properties; for the same rich soil from which spring nettles and pasture in such abundance, brought forth also the ramps, or wild garlic, which, springing first, was devoured by the cows. Cows could not be confined, for want of fences, nor dared we neglect milking, lest they might go dry; and so for two or three weeks cows were milked, in pails, and the milk thrown out and given to the hogs. We never milked on the ground, as it seemed a pity, and some said it was bad luck.

Our axe-handles were straight and egg-shaped. Whether the oval form and the crooked bulbous ends of the present day is an improvement or not is immaterial here to inquire; but had we used the present form then, I should at times have been fixed to the axe. The hand that holds this pen had, before it felt the cold of twelve winters, been so benumbed by chopping in the cold as to have the fingers set to the handle, making it necessary to slip them off at the end, which could not have been done were they of the present shape. After the fingers were off, a little rubbing and stretching from the other hand would restore them, but would not dry up the blood nor heal the chaps with which they were covered.

These, and kindred things, are well calculated to make one, by contrast, appreciate the blessings of leisure and ease; until they become too common, when we lose our relish of them, and the gratitude we ought to feel for time even to think.

Note.—Morris West, grandfather of the centenarian, Thomas West, whose reminiscences appear in the foregoing chapter, seems to have settled in the southeastern corner of Archer township, about a mile and a half east of north from Cadiz. His name does not appear on the list of original grantees of land by the United States. Neither does that of his son, William West, the father of Thomas. On July 8, 1809, Bazaleel Wells, the original patentee, deeded a portion of section 31, township 10, range 4, being the southeastern section in Archer township, to Morris West. Some mention of Morris West may also be found in the sketch of the history of Bethel Church.
CHAPTER VI.

EARLY DAYS IN CADIZ.

The land upon which Cadiz was built was granted to Zaccheus Beatty by the United States Government, April 29, 1804, and was by him conveyed to Zaccheus Biggs, October 16, 1805. Biggs was the first receiver of the Land Office at Steubenville, having been appointed July 1, 1800. He was also one of the surveyors in 1805, of Short Creek, Athens, and Moorefield townships; and doubtless in that way became acquainted with the resources and richness of soil of the country now included within the bounds of Harrison county.

A portion of the site of Cadiz is said to have been occupied by one Garret Glazener, for a blacksmith shop, about the year 1800; but this statement rests mainly on tradition, and is open to confirmation. The first horse path, or trail, reaching this point from the East without doubt led to Wellsburg (or Charlestown, as it was first called), and probably entered the present limits of the county at a point nearly east of Beech Spring Church. Another path left the Ohio at Warrentown, and followed Short creek to its head-waters, and from thence to a connection with the Charlestown road. As soon as the land office was opened at Steubenville (1800), and probably before that date, a third route, following the old Indian trails, was opened between the site of Cadiz and the river, later continued on to what is now the town of Cambridge, in Guernsey county, and since then known as the Steubenville and Cambridge road. The opening of this road was no doubt occasioned by the fact that most of the emigrants into the Northwest Territory, wherever they crossed the Ohio, had to proceed to Steubenville to make their filings in the land office before taking up their lands; and many, whose destination was west of the sources of Short creek, would naturally proceed by the shortest route to regain the main traveled road through this latitude, which led west from what is now Wellsburg. The intersection of these two roads was at the site of Cadiz.

In Mr. Archer Butler Hulbert's monograph on "The Indian Thoroughfares of Ohio," published in the January (1900) Quarterly of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, and since issued in book form, the author defines the route of an early Indian trail which passed through Harrison county, and which he designates by the name of the Mingo Trail. This lead from the Mingo Bottoms (Steubenville), on the Ohio, to Will's Town (now Duncan's Falls, a short distance below Zanesville, in Muskingum county), on the Muskingum. If a straight line be drawn on the map of Ohio, connecting these two points, it will be found to pass through Harrison county a short distance south of Cadiz. Mr. Hulbert states that this Trail passed "across the highlands of Noble, Guernsey, Harrison, and Jefferson counties. This route is identical with that denominated the "Federal Trail" in Dr. Robertson's History of Morgan county, Ohio (p. 126). Undoubtedly, it is practically the route of the present Steubenville and Cambridge road, which was first known as the Steubenville and Zanesville road.

In speaking of Indian trails, Mr. Hulbert says: "It is possible to believe, that in the earliest times, the Indians traveled only on rivers and lakes. When they turned inland, we can be practically sure that they found, ready-made and deeply worn, the very routes of travel which have since born their name. For the beginning of the history of road-making in this central west, we must go back two centuries, when the buffalo, urged by his need of change of climate, newer feeding grounds, and fresh salt-licks, first found his way through the forests. Even if the first thoroughfares were made by the mastodon and the mound-builder, they first came to white man's knowledge as buffalo "traces," and later became Indian trails. . . One who has any conception of the west as it was a century and a half ago, who can see the river valleys filled with the immemorial plunder of the river floods, can realize that there was but one practicable passage-way across the land for either beast or man, and that on the summit of the hills. Here on the hilltops, mounting on the longest ascending ridges, lay the tawny paths of the buffalo and Indians. They were not only highways, they were the highest ways, and chosen for the best reasons: 1. The hilltops offered the driest courses. 2. The hilltops were windswept. 3. The hilltops were coigns of vantage for outlook and signalling.

"An interesting proof of the use made of Indian trails by the white man is found in the blazed trees which line them. There is not an important trail in Ohio which is not blazed, and it is well known that the red men were not in the habit of blazing their trails. . . . Upon the high summits of the long ranges of hills one may to-day see upon the aged tree trunks savage gashes made not less than a century ago, as the writer has ascertained by a study of the blazes made in Washington county on roads laid out by the surveyors of the Ohio Company, 1795-1800."

While there was no wagon road in Harrison county before 1800, it is reasonable to suppose that both the paths above referred to were widened and made passable for vehicles soon after that date; for the emigration that followed the opening of the Steubenville land office poured in like a hugh wave. In fact, large numbers of people had come into the adjoining counties in Pennsylvania and Virginia, months before the opening of the land office, to be on the ground and ready to get in early, and have their pick of the choicest land; just as a few years ago was the case in the Indian Territory, when Oklahoma was opened for settlement. It may be readily understood, therefore, that when the bars were first let down, the settlers came in with a rush; and during the next three or four years many of the best sections in the present townships of Green, Short Creek, Cadiz, and Athens had been pre-empted.

The town of Cadiz was laid out by Zaccheus A. Beatty and Zaccheus Biggs, the plat being acknowledged by Z. A. Beatty, one of the proprietors, before Benjamin Hough, Justice of the Peace, October 29, 1804, and recorded the same day at Steubenville, Jefferson county. The lots were numbered, 1 to 141. The streets were South, Warren, Market, Spring, North, Muskingum, Steubenville (now Main), Ohio, and Wheeling (now Buffalo).

The first deed for a lot was made by Zaccheus Biggs and wife, Eliza Biggs, to John Finney, the consideration being $20. The date of the deed was February 28, 1806; recorded March 4, 1806; Lot No. 4. From that date to the time of the organization of Harrison county (February 1, 1813), the following lots were sold, some of the deeds for the same appearing on the records of Jefferson county only:

John Finney, February 28, 1806, Lot 4; consideration, $20.
Phineas Ash, March, 1806, Lot 88; consideration, $44.
John Perry, March 22, 1806, Lot 22; consideration, $13.
James McMillen, April 9, 1806, Lots 74 and 75; consideration, $36.
John Pritchard, of Fayette county, Pa., April 9, 1806, Lot 87; consideration, $27.
Martin Snyder, Aug. 11, 1806, Lot 86.
Andrew McNeely, Aug. 12, 1806, Lots 112 and 129; consideration, $70.
Sarah Young, Dec. 31, 1806, Lot 13.
John Maholm, October, 1806 (?), Lot 70; consideration, $30.
Jacob Browne, of Brooke county, Va., Oct. 9, 1806, Lots 110 and 111; consideration, $137.
Samuel Boyd, Nov. 7, 1806, Lot 91.
John Pugh, of Frederick county, Va., Dec. 8, 1806, Lot 14; consideration, $30.
Joseph Harris, Dec. 31, 1806, Lot 108.
Jacob Arnold, June 17, 1806, Lot 109; consideration $65.75.
Peter Wilson, June 25, 1807, Lot 31.
John L. Baker, Aug. 17, 1807, Lot 130; consideration, $12.
Zaccheus A. Beatty, Oct. 7, 1808, Lot 79.
Rebecca Paul, of Philadelphia, Oct. 17, 1808, Lot 69; consideration, $30.
Rudolph Hines, July 24, 1809, Lot 82.
John Ourant, of New Lisbon, July 24, 1809, Lot 102; consideration, $30.
John McGaughey, before Sept. 22, 1809, Lot 77.
William Orr, before Nov. 14, 1809, Lot 89.
John McCray, June 12, 1810, Lot 55; consideration, $40.
William Grimes, March 26, 1810, Lot 99; consideration, $30.
John Sherrard, Aug. 4, 1811, Lot 130.
James Simpson, Dec. 5, 1810, Lot 100; consideration, $30.
William Sherrard, Aug. 4, 1811, Lot 130; consideration, $14.56.
Isaac Meek, Sept. 14, 1811, Lot 103.
Adam Snyder, Dec. 18, 1811, Lot 144.
Samuel Jackson, Jan. 13, 1812, Lot 145.
Thomas Dickerson, Feb. 28, 1812, Lot 113; consideration, $50.
Robert Stephens, of Fayette county, Pa., Feb. 14, 1812, two acres adjoining the northwest corner of Cadiz; consideration, $46.
William Vaughn, March 7, 1812, Lot 149.
John McClintock, April 16, 1812, Lot 117; consideration, $30.
Easter Tingley, April 15, 1812, Lot 101.
John Pugh, Jr., April 15, 1812, Lot 14.
George McFadden, April 15, 1812, Lot 83.
Charles Chapman, April 15, 1812, Lot 92.
John McFadden, Samuel Carnahan, John Craig, William Hamilton, and John Jamison, “trustees, appointed by the Associate Reformed Congregation of Cadiz,” April 15, 1812, Lots 58, 59, and 60 (the site of the old Union church, now occupied as a residence by Mr. A. H. Carnahan); consideration, $20.
Robert Cochran, April 16, 1812, Lot 30.
Nathan Adams, April 17, 1812, certain lands “on the waters of Short creek, in the town of Cadiz, being Lots 122 and 138”; consideration, $75.50.
Robert Kelly, April 18, 1812, Lot 4; consideration, $13.
Job Gatchel, Oct. 7, 1812, Lot 54.
Henry Pepper, Nov. 25, 1812, Lot 114.
Henry Howe’s description of Cadiz in 1807, published in his Historical Collections in 1847-48, is no doubt familiar to most of the readers of this volume; and as it was taken by Mr. Howe from the lips of some of the original settlers, it gives us the most direct account we have of the establishment of the village. While a comparison of this description with the foregoing list of lot-owners, shows that Mr. Howe’s informants did not include all the first settlers in their account, the latter is especially valuable as giving us an idea of the business and occupation of many of the early fathers. Howe’s description is as follows:

Cadiz, the county seat, is a remarkably well-built and city-like town [this was in 1847], four miles southeasterly from the center of the county, 115 easterly from Columbus, twenty-four westerly from Steubenville, and twenty-four northerly from Wheeling. It contains one Presbyterian, one Methodist Episcopal, one Associate (Seceder), and one Associate Reformed church. It also contains two printing presses, twelve dry-goods, seven grocery, and two drug-stores, and had, in 1840, 1,028 inhabitants.

Cadiz was laid out in 1803, or 1804, by Messrs Biggs and Beatty. Its site was then, like most of the surrounding country, a forest, and its location was induced by the junction there of the road from Pittsburg, by Steubenville, with the road from Washington, Pa., by Wellsburg, Va., from where the two united, passed by Cambridge to Zanesville; and previous to the construction of the national road through Ohio [built in 1825-27], was traveled, more, perhaps, than any other road northwest of the Ohio river. In April, 1807, it contained the following named persons, with their families: Jacob Arnold, inn-keeper; Andrew McNeely, hatter and justice of the peace; Joseph Harris, merchant; John Jamison, tanner; John McCrea, wheelwright; Robert Wilkin, brick-maker; Connell Abdill, shoemaker; Jacob Myers, carpenter; John Pritchard, blacksmith; Nathan Adams, tailor; James Simpson, reed-maker; William Tingley, school-teacher; and old Granny [Sarah] Young, midwife and baker, who was subsequently elected (by the citizens of the township in a fit of hilarity) to the office of justice of the peace; but females not being eligible to office in Ohio, the old lady was obliged to forego the pleasure of serving her constituents.

The first celebration of Independence in Cadiz was on the 4th of July, 1806, when the people generally, of the town and country for miles around, attended, and partook of a fine repast of venison, wild turkey, bear meat, and such vegetables as the country afforded; while for a drink, rye whiskey was used. There was much hilarity and good feeling.

Mr. Howe's list contains the names of but thirteen families; but the list of first lot-owners shows the names of at least twenty persons who had purchased lots or were residents of Cadiz before 1808.

It will be not without interest to locate these earliest lot-owners, so that we may be able to form some idea of the appearance of the village in 1807. It is not probable that all of the lots sold up to that time were built upon; and those on which houses stood were doubtless surrounded by forest trees, or the stumps of trees. The houses, of course, were of the rudest description, small log cabins, containing one, two, or three rooms, similar to those of which a few are still to be seen in parts of Harrison county, although by no means so well-made. Some of these log cabins are still standing in Cadiz, without a doubt, covered up and disguised by the more modern weather-boarding, and with additions and extensions built on since the days of the pioneers, but with the same eighteen inch thick walls, of oak or walnut timber, as when their sites were first built upon.

Beginning at what was then the eastern extremity of Market street, at the intersection of the present Buffalo street (then called Wheeling street, and forming the southeastern boundary of the village), and proceeding thence to the northwest, we find the first corner lot on the right was owned by John Finney. The lots, it should be observed, were originally all sixty-six feet wide; the most of them on the main streets have been since subdivided into narrower and more numerous lots. At that time, three lots constituted a quarter of a block (the lots being 198 feet in depth, or three times their width). The lot next to John Finney’s was bought by John Pugh. Directly across the street (late the residence of John Rea) and the adjoining ground stood the domicile of Sarah Young, then, as in recent years, the site of a bakery. Adjoining her lot was that of John Perry, which extended to the alley (later occupied by the residence of Tunis Hilligas); across the alley, on the opposite side of the street, Peter Wilson bought; and there were no more houses between his and Ohio street. Crossing Market street again, and proceeding further up the hill, we come to John Maholm’s place (now occupied in part by the residence of Wilson Houser). On top of the hill, turning to the right, and into Steubenville (now Main) street, the second lot from the corner (now occupied in part by the post-office building), belonged to Martin Snyder; and next to him, reaching to the alley, was the lot on which stood John Pritchard’s story and a half log-house. Beyond him was Phineas Ash; while Robert H. Johnson owned the two lots directly across Main street from Pritchard and Ash. Half a block down the street from Phineas Ash, on the further corner of Spring and Main streets, was the lot of Samuel Boyd. On the corner now occupied by the Farmers’ and Mechanics’ National Bank stood the house of Joseph Harris, his lot extending along Market street back to the alley (now occupied by the Bank, Opera House, and the buildings between). Below him, in the middle of the next quarter-block, Andrew McNeely owned the second lot above Muskingum street, the street which then formed the northwestern boundary of the village, being the lot recently occupied by the Smiley family. Directly opposite Andrew McNeely’s was John Baker, who bought in 1807. Passing around the front of the Public Square, and down Main street towards Warren, the first house was Jacob Arnold’s tavern, which stood on the site of F. J. Wagner’s bakery. The remaining two lots in that quarter-block (now occupied by the old Music Hall and the Swan House) belonged to Jacob Brown. The lot since occupied by the United Presbyterian church then belonged to Andrew McNeely, and it is probable that his cabin stood on that spot; although, as stated above, he also owned the lot nearly opposite the Presbyterian church, above the present residence of Dr. S. B. McGavran. The two lots on the opposite side of South Main street, between the Presbyterian parsonage and the Hearn residence, belonged to James McMillan.

This completes the list of lot owners whose deeds bear dates prior to 1808, seventeen in all; but in addition to the names of some of those given above, Henry Howe mentions seven more, as living in Cadiz in 1807. These seven did not obtain titles to lots until a later period; and in most cases there is no way of determining where they lived in the meantime. Perhaps some of them may have been inmates with some of the house-holders, and it is not unnatural to presume, that Mine Host Jacob Arnold, had permanent accommodations for at least a few "regular boarders," until they could better provide for themselves. Again, some then classed as citizens of Cadiz may have had their homes on their farms outside of the village, as it is certain a number of those whose names appear as lot-owners were also extensive land-owners in the county. The nearest that can be done towards locating the remaining seven residents mentioned by Howe, is to give the location of the property first purchased by each one of them, which was as follows: Connel Abdill, in 1832, bought the lot on Market street now occupied in part by the K. W. Kinsey homestead. John Jamison lived on his farm near Cadiz. John McCrea, in 1810, bought the lot at the corner of Market and Ohio streets, since occupied in part by James Bullock's residence. Jacob Myers appears to have been a tenant. James Simpson, in 1810, bought the lot across the alley from and southwest of the home of Frederick J. Wagner; and the lot next to James Simpson's was purchased in 1812 by Easter Tingley, William Tingley not acquiring any titles until 1825. Robert Wilkin, brick-maker, may have lived out of town, or bought his lot at second-hand.

Connel Abdill, before May 18, 1832, Lot 39, (see Thomas Lee).
Nathan Adams, Nov. 14, 1809, Lot 89, (deeded by William Orr); July 24, 1811, Lot 107; before March 20, 1815, Lot 93, (see Jacob Snediker); April 7, 1812, Lots 122 and 138, "on the waters of Short creek, in the town of Cadiz;" March 25, 1813, Lots 148 and 150, (deeded by Jacob Arnold; before Feb. 4, 1815, Lot 171, (see Benjamin Bennett); before Aug. 20, 1816, Lot 174, (see Jacob Holmes); before Dec. 18, 1818, Lots 172 and 173, (see Hines Mechan and David McGyre); before Sep. 12, 1831, Lots 175 and 176, (see James Knox); before Dec. 20, 1837, Lots 169 and 170, (see Daniel Morris).
Isaac Allen, before Aug. 7, 1829, Lots 187, 188, 190, (see Reuben Allen.
Reuben Allen, Aug. 7, 1829, Lots 187, 188, 190, (deeded by Isaac Allen).

Jacob Arnold, July 17, 1806, Lot 109; before Dec. 18, 1811, Lot 144, (see Adam Snider); before Jan. 13, 1812, Lot 145, (see Samuel Jackson); before March 7, 1812, Lot 149, (see William Vaughn); before May 13, 1812, Lots 142 and 143, (see John Braden); March 6, 1813, Lot 21, (deeded by Francis Mitchell); before March 25, 1813, Lots 148 and 150, (see Nathan Adams).

James Arnold, before March 24, 1819, Lots 191 and 192, (see Thomas Bradford and John McIntire); before March 29, 1819, Lot 193, (see James McElroy); before June 12, 1819, Lots 186 and 189, (see Robert Clark and Zebedee Cox).

Rezin Arnold, March 13, 1818, Lot 178, (deeded by Andrew McNeely).

Phineas Ash, March —, 1806, Lot 88.

Walter B. Beebe, May 24, 1813, Lots 145, 155, and 156; Dec. 6, 1819, Lots 159, 162, and 163.

Benjamin Bennett, Feb. 4, 1815, Lot 171, (deeded by Nathan Adams).

Samuel Boyd, Nov. 7, 1806, Lot 91.

John Braden, May 13, 1812, Lots 142 and 143, (deeded by Jacob Arnold).

David Bradford, June 27, 1814, Lot 158.

Jacob Brown, of Brooke county, Va., April 9, 1806, Lot 111; July 19, 1806, Lot 110.

Joseph Burnell, March 29, 1825, Lot 81, (deeded by William Henderson).

John Burns, May 27, 1815, Lot 160.

Charles Chapman, April 15, 1812, Lot 92; March 24, 1815, Lot 104, (deeded by John Forney).
Robert Clark, June 12, 1819, Lot 189, (deeded by James Arnold).
Robert Cochran, April 16, 1812, Lot 30.
Zebedee Cox, June 12, 1819, Lot 186, (deeded by James Arnold).
John Craig, April 16, 1812, (see John McFadden).
James Crossan, April 2, 1850, Lot 197, (deeded by William Knox).
Robert Croskey, June 18, 1814, Lot 84, (deeded by Thomas Stoakes).
Thomas Dickerson, Feb. 28, 1812, Lot 113.
John Finney, Feb 12, 1806, Lot 4, (the first lot sold in Cadiz; deeded again by Zaccheus Biggs to Robert Kelly, April 18, 1812).
John Forney, before March 24, 1815, Lot 104, (see Charles Chapman).
William Foster, before Dec. 31, 1806, Lot 13, (see Sarah Young).
William Gilmore, before Feb. 29, 1848, Lot 153, (see James Matthews).
William Grimes, March 26, 1810, Lot 99; Sept. 14, 1811, Lot 131; April 1, 1815, Lot 120, (deeded by Thomas Henderson).

Jacob Snediker, March 20, 1815, Lot 93.
Adam Snider, Dec. 18, 1811, Lot 144, (deeded by Jacob Arnold).
Martin Snyder, Aug. 11, 1806, Lot 86.
Jesse Sparks, before June 5, 1836, Lot 146, (see Samuel Osburn).
Robert Stephens, of Fayette county, Pa., Feb. 4, 1812, two acres adjoining the northwest corner of Cadiz.
John Stoakes, March 25, 1814, Lot 34, (deeded by George Bohrer).
Thomas Stoakes, before June 18, 1814, Lot 84, (see Robert Croskey).
Henry Stubbins, Oct. 20, 1827, Lot 179, (deeded by Andrew McNeely).
John Sullers, May 24, 1814, Lot 147, (deeded by Kins Cahill).
Abraham Timmons, May 18, 1822, Lot 5.
William Timmons, before May 10, 1849, Lot 180, (see Benjamin Timmons).
Easter Tingley, April 15, 1812, Lot 101.
Philip Trine, before Aug. 3, 1836, Lot 195, (see James Allen).
William Vaughn, March 7, 1812, Lot 149, (deeded by Jacob Arnold).
John Ward, Aug. 15, 1815, Lot 80, (deeded by Daniel Workman).
George White, Aug. 6, 1833, Lot 194, (deeded by William Knox).
Samuel Williams, before May 14, 1814, Lot 70, (see Robert Kelly and John Maholm).
Peter Wilson, June 25, 1807, Lot 31.
Daniel Workman, before June 5, 1813, Lots 33, 37, 48, 52, (see John and Samuel Rankin); before Aug. 15, Lot 80, (see John Ward).
Sarah Young, Dec. 31, 1806, Lot 13, (deeded by William Foster).
In the foregoing list it will be observed that on April 16, 1812, all the lots remaining unsold in the original plat were conveyed to Pritchard, Maholm, and Harris. Joseph Harris transferred his interest in these lots to John Pritchard and John Maholm, who later conveyed them as follows:
John Burn., Lot 97, May 27, 1815.
William Grimes, Lot 136, May 24, 1814.
John Hanna, Lots 125, 126, and 141, June 29, 1814.
Conrad Hilligas, Lots 28, 42, and 43, June 18, 1814.
Phineas Inskeep, Lots 1, 2, 16, 17, 18, 19, June 10, 1814.
William Jamison, Lots 118, 133, and 134, July 25, 1814.
Robert Kelley, Lots 8, 10, 25, 26, 27, May 14, 1814.
Jacob Kidwiler, Lot 50, April 4, 1817.
Samuel McFadden, Lot 73, June 18, 1819.
Andrew McNeely, Lots 119, 132, and 135, May 27, 1814.
James Means, Lot 121, Aug. 17, 1816; Lots 94, 95, and 96, Aug. 29, 1818.
Trustees Methodist Episcopal Church, Lot 3, April 20, 1816.
John Pugh, Lots 57 and 61, Jan. 20, 1815.
Zachariah Pumphrey, Lot 12, June 10, 1814; Lots 56 and 62, before Aug. 31, 1816, (see Michael Swagler); Lot 71, Jan. 6, 1817; Lot 6, March 7, 1817; Lot 23, before March 27, 1817, (see Joseph White).
John and Samuel Rankin, Lots 34, 35, 36, June 14, 1814.
Philip Riley, Lot 98, April 22, 1816.
Thomas Shaw, Lot 72, July 25, 1814.
Sarah Simpson, Lots 128 and 139, April 22, 1816.
John Speer, Lot 51, Jan. 28, 1824.
John Timmons, Lot 20, Jan. 31, 1824.
Moses Urquehart, Lot 49, Jan. 27, 1824.
Joseph White, Lot 23, March 27, 1817, (deeded by Zachariah Pumphrey).

The total number of lots in the original plat of Cadiz, as laid out by Biggs and Beatty in 1804, was 141. The first addition to the village was platted about 1812 by Jacob Arnold, who kept tavern in a log-cabin standing on the lot now occupied by Mr. F. J. Wagner. Arnold’s addition consisted of nine lots, numbered from 142 to 150. These are the lots on the southwest side of Market street (“Gimlet Hill”), lying between Buffalo street and the alley opposite the old home of the Boggs family. The deed for the first one of these lots sold bore date May 13, 1812. A second addition was platted by Messrs. Pritchard and Maholm on May 24, 1813, containing seventeen lots, numbered from 151 to 167, forming the irregular block lying between Market, Buffalo, and Spring streets, and the Cemetery avenue. A fourth addition was platted by Nathan Adams, containing nine lots, numbered from 168 to 176, from which the first lot was sold Feb. 4, 1815. These lots lie along the southwest side of Bingham avenue. Another addition, also containing nine lots, was platted by Andrew McNeely May 1, 1815, the lots numbering from 177 to 185. These lie along the northeast side of Spring street, southeast of Buffalo. Another addition, comprising lots 186 to 193, laid out by James Arnold March, 15, 1815, extend along the southwest side of South street, between Main and Ohio, now occupied in part by the residence of Mr. Gar­ret Shank. Lots 194 to 198 were platted by William Knox May 25, 1836, and extend from Muskingum street down the northeast side of Market, to the beginning of Lincoln avenue. Lot 199 was platted by Andrew P. Hanna June 1, 1837, when he deeded it to the school directors. It is now partly occupied by the residence of Melford J. Brown, Jr.

Besides the above, Messrs. Pritchard and Maholm platted a second addition to Cadiz, which was filed May 24, 1813, consisting of a dozen lots, which were sold to the following purchasers:

John Braden, Lot 13, May 8, 1818.
Rowland Craig, Lot 12, July 4, 1816.
Thomas Hogg, Lot 11, May 8, 1846.
John Maholm, Lots 7, 8, and 9, June 29, 1824.
James Means, Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, before June 2, 1825, (see William Tingley).
Matthew Simpson, Lot 6, April 22, 1816.
William Tingley, Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, June 2, 1825, (deeded by James Means).

Another addition to Cadiz, containing eight lots, was platted by Jacob Arnold, and the plat filed March 30, 1816, which was some two years after all the lots had been sold. The purchasers of these lots were as follows:

Nathan Adams, Lot 7, March 25, 1813.
Daniel Arnold, Lot 8, May 15, 1812.
Benjamin Bennett, Lot 5, Sept. 18, 1813.
James Boyd, Lots 2 and 3, Nov. 26, 1812.
John Braden, Lot 1, Jan. 1, 1813.
Phineas Inskeep, Lot 6, Nov. 28, 1812.
William Vaughn, Lot 4, March 7, 1812.

In Brown's "Western Gazetteer, or Emigrant's Directory, published by Samuel R. Brown, at Auburn, N. Y., in 1817, may be found a brief description of the counties and towns of Ohio. Mr. Brown states that "Harrison county is settled chiefly by emigrants from Pennsylvania.
Cadiz, a small village of twenty houses, is situated on a hill, twenty-six miles west of Steubenville, on the Zanesville road. This county has four or five other villages, mostly new and small."

The following extracts from the diary of Dr. Richard Lee Mason will not be without interest in connection with the history of Harrison county before 1820. In the fall of 1819, he emigrated from Maryland to Illinois. His diary is now in possession of his daughter, who resides in Jacksonville, Ill.; and it was printed by the Chicago Record in the daily issues of that paper during the early part of January, 1897. Dr. Mason, with his friend, Dr. Hall, left Philadelphia for the West on Monday, October 4, 1819. They reached Pittsburg on October 12th. From there, the journal proceeds:

Oct. 15. Left Pittsburgh at seven o'clock. Traveled over a poor and hilly country for thirty-six miles. Passed a few travelers bound to Ohio. . . . Crossed the Ohio river after night at Steubenville. Stopped at Jenkinson's, an intelligent, gentlemanly, hospitable man. Visited the market. Beef, good, six and a quarter cents a pound.

Oct. 16. . . . Rainy day, fatigued by broken country, determined to spend this day in Steubenville, a busy little village on the bank of the Ohio. Purchased a plain Jersey wagon and harness for $60.

Oct. 18. Myself and friend proceeded on our journey. We ar­ at Siers' [Sears'], a distance of thirty miles, at dusk, much relieved by the change from our horses to the wagon. The roads were muddy, the weather drizzly, and the country hilly. Buildings indifferent. The land was fertile and black. Trees uncommonly tall. Passed the little village of Cadiz. In this country, a store, a smith shop, and two or three cabins make a town. Passed ten or fifteen travelers. Great contrast between the quality of the land from Chambersburg to Pittsburg, and that which we have already traveled over from Steubenville, in Ohio.

Oct. 19. Left Siers' at six o'clock a.m. The morning fair and cold. Roads extremely rough. Country fertile, but hilly. Log cabins, ugly women, and tall timber. Passed a little flourishing village called Freeport, settled by foreigners, Yankee Quakers, and mechanics. Remarkable, with two taverns in the village, there was nothing fit to drink, not even good water. The corn-fields in the woods, among dead trees, and the corn very fine. We arrived at Adair's, a distance of twenty-seven miles, at six o'clock p.m. Passed some peddlers and a few travelers. Value of land from Steubenville to Adair's, $2 to $30 per acre. Lots in Freeport, eighteen months old, from $30 to $100. . . .

Oct. 20. Left Adair's at six o'clock, a.m. The country extremely hilly, and not quite so fertile. Independent people, in log cabins. They make their own clothes, sugar, and salt; and paint their own signs. They picture a lion like a dove, a cat like a terrapin, and General Washington like a bird’s nest. Salt wells and sugar orchards are common in this country. Steep hills, frightful precipices, little or no water, and even a scarcity of new whiskey. Ragged and ignorant children, and but little appearance of industry. Met a number of travelers, inclining to the East, and overtook a larger number than usual, bound to the Land of Promise. The evening being rainy, the roads soon became muddy. We arrived at Silver’s Travelers’ Rest, at six o’clock. Distance, twenty-nine miles. Passed a little village called Cambridge.

If good Dr. Mason could return to Harrison county now, and ride again over the road between Steubenville and Cambridge, doubtless he would find the trees not so tall, and certainly the women not ugly; but it is to be feared that the happy days of old will never return again to Harrison county, when it can be said of it that water there is scarcer than new whiskey.
While it becomes necessary, in outlining the history of the early settlement of Harrison county, to make frequent and extended references to the organizations of the Presbyterian and United Presbyterian churches in the county, it should be understood that such reference is made solely for the purpose of enabling us to gain what light we may from such occasional facts as are preserved upon their records; and, while these records are sadly lacking in detail and continuity, and at best give us but occasional glimpses of the real life and growth of the communities with which they are concerned, they are practically all we now have left in the way of contemporary data; and constitute the chief source of information in regard to Harrison county during the time its territory was still a part of Jefferson.

The most valuable and least appreciated of these early records are the old tomb-stones in the church graveyards. Taken together, they afford a more nearly complete roll of the early membership of the church and the settlement than we can now obtain from any other source. Much valuable information is also furnished by the sessional records of the churches, where such have been kept, and the books preserved. It is much to be regretted that the session book of the Presbyterian church at Cadiz, which had been in use for, perhaps, more than half a century, was lost or mislaid a few years ago, and has never been recovered.

The writer is fortunate in being able to present to the reader of these sketches a brief account of the beginnings of the early churches in Harrison county, written by the man who founded them, thus being in the nature of a contemporary document. This consists of an outline sketch of the history of the congregations of Rev. John Rea, the pioneer preacher of Harrison county; and it was written as a part of his farewell sermon delivered to the Beech Spring congregation in January, 1851.

Before presenting Mr. Rea's sketch, let us survey his field of labor, and the conditions under which he entered it.

The first Presbytery organized west of the Allegheny mountains was that of Redstone, erected by the Synod of New York and Philadelphia in May, 1781. Its territory embraced the present counties of Westmoreland, Fayette, Armstrong, Indiana, Allegheny, Beaver, Washington, and Greene, in Pennsylvania, and adjacent territory, including the Panhandle of western Virginia. Its membership at the time of organization consisted of but four ministers, viz., Revs. James Power, John McMillan, Thaddeus Dodd, and Joseph Smith. Within the next three years Revs. James Dunlap, John Clark, and James Finley were added to the Presbytery; and this organization continued to provide for the spiritual needs of the greater portion of the population west of the mountains until 1793. In that year, the Presbytery of Redstone was divided, and that of the Ohio formed,—those ministers whose charges were nearest the river being detached from the parent body, and erected into the new Presbytery. They were John McMillan, John Clark, Joseph Patterson, James Hughes, and John Brice.

The bounds of the Ohio Presbytery first extended to the Scioto, or beyond; and nearly all of these original members of the Presbytery made missionary tours into Jefferson county before any churches were organized in what is now the county of Harrison. The first regularly installed minister to preach to congregations, composed, at least, in part, of Harrison county people, was Rev. Joseph Anderson, who was also the first minister installed by the Ohio Presbytery in what is now the State of Ohio. He was licensed by the Presbytery on October 17, 1798, and engaged at once in missionary work in the Western Territory, where he succeeded in gathering congregations at several points. On August 20, 1800, he was installed as pastor of the three churches of Richland (now St. Clairsville, Short Creek (now Mount Pleasant), and Cross Roads (now Crabapple). If this congregation of Crabapple was the same as that now known by the name, and it probably was, then the latter must claim priority in organization over that of Beech Spring; although the year of its erection is usually given as 1804. From the fact that Mr. Anderson gave up the charge of Crabapple in 1802, however, it is possible that the people there were not sufficiently strong numerically to sustain a minister, even for one-third of his time, and that its permanent organization was accordingly deferred until after Mr. Rea was settled at Beech Spring. Robert McCullough represented Crabapple Church, as an elder, at a meeting of the Presbytery in 1801.

Mr. Anderson was ordained by Rev. John McMillan, at Crabapple, but his principal congregation was that now known as Mount Pleasant; and there can be no reasonable doubt that many of the then residents of Short Creek township who were inclined to be church-going people were members of the congregation, and some of them communicants, of the church of Mount Pleasant. The first ruling elders of that church were Richard McKibben, Thomas McCune, James Clark, and James Eagleson.

It was not until the years 1802 and 1803 that the settlers began to come in large numbers to that part of the county now comprising the townships of Short Creek, Green, Cadiz, and Athens. A year later (1804), John Rea was licensed by the Presbytery of Ohio, and entered this field as a supply for the people of Beech Spring and Crabapple.

Rev. John Rea was born in Tully, Ireland, in 1772, the son of Joseph and Isabel Rea. About the year 1790 he emigrated to America, and first resided in Philadelphia for a short time. He left there, on foot, and started for the west, traveling usually without company; and, after crossing the mountains, located in Washington county, where, in 1793, he married Elizabeth Christy. He made his home for a time in the house of James Dinsmore, then a ruling elder of Upper Buffalo church, by whom he was encouraged and assisted in his attempts to gain an education. A few years later, he entered Jefferson College, and was graduated in 1802, being one of the members of the first class graduated at that institution. On August 22, 1805, having been duly called by the congregations which he had served as supply, Mr. Rea was ordained and installed as pastor of Beech Spring and Crabapple. In April, 1810, he was released from Crabapple, and thenceforth gave all his time to Beech Spring, where he continued in active charge until 1848, although not finally severing his connection with that church until some three years later. He died February 12, 1855.

The work of Dr. Rea has been summed up in a few words by Rev. W. F. Hamilton, in his History of the Presbytery of Washington, who says:

Dr. Rea was in an eminent sense a pioneer minister. His early labors were largely evangelistic. Several churches now exist on the territory once wholly occupied by him. It may safely be said that no man exerted a greater influence than did he in forming the religious character of the early inhabitants of a large section of Eastern Ohio.

In the words of Dr. Crawford, "the early history, not only of this vicinity [Nottingham], but of the Presbyterian Church in Eastern Ohio, is closely connected with the biography of Dr. Rea. In the early part of his public work he was remote from his clerical brethren. In the whole region that now embraces the territory of four Presbyteries, in the eastern part of this state, there were but six Presbyterian ministers, where there are now [1888] over one hundred; and not more than twelve or fifteen churches, where there are now one hundred and eighty-five. Such a man as Dr. Rea was destined to make and leave an impression behind him—an impression not easily erased from the minds of those multitudes acquainted with his early self-denial and successful labors."

He is quoted by Dr. Crawford as saying near the close of his life: "My early toils and dreary travels were on horseback, through the bounds of your present charge, as also through a large district of country, mostly traversing paths through an unbroken wilderness; and wherever an early settler was found, and, more especially, wherever and whenever I heard of one in our communion, him I visited, by day and by night, at all seasons of the year."

An examination of the records of the Presbytery of the Ohio, now in possession of Dr. W. J. Holland, of the Carnegie Museum at Pittsburgh, shows an application for supplies for the people of Indian Short Creek to have been made on October 19th, 1802, the Presbytery then being in session at West Liberty. On Wednesday, October 20th, Mr. James Hughes was appointed to supply "at Daniel Welsh's on Short Creek, the third Sabbath of December, and Mr. [George M.] Scott on the first Sabbath of April." The Presbytery met at Washington, Pa., again in January, 1803, and on Wednesday, the 19th, Jacob Lindley was appointed to supply at "Welch's, on Indian Short Creek, on the second Sabbath of March." In June, 1803, Presbytery met at Ten Mile, and on Wednesday, the 29th, applications for supplies were received from the "heads of Indian Wheelin [Crabapple] and Short Creek." Rev. Joseph Anderson was appointed to preach at head of Indian Wheeling creek on the first Sabbath in August; and Rev. James Snodgrass, at Welch's, on the second Sabbath of July. At Montour's, on Wednesday, Oct. 19, 1803, the Presbytery received an application for supplies from "Welsh's on Indian Short Creek," and Mr. Hughes was appointed for the first Sabbath in April, 1804. At Ten Mile, on Wednesday, Dec. 14, 1803, Mr. Nicholas Pittinger was appointed to supply at "Crabapple on the third Sabbath of January, and at Beech Spring on the fourth Sabbath of January." This is the first time these two congregations appear on the records of Presbytery under the names by which they have since been known. On Tuesday, April 17th, 1804, Presbytery having met at Cross Roads (in Washington county, Pa.), applications for supplies were again received from Crabapple and Beech Spring; and on the 19th, Rev. Samuel Ralston was directed to preach at Crabapple one Sabbath at discretion, and Rev. Joseph Anderson at Beech Spring on the third Sabbath of May, and at Crabapple one Sabbath at discretion.

At the meeting of Presbytery held at Cross Creek, Washington county, Pa., on Wednesday, June 27th, 1804, John Rea, as the name appears on the records, was licensed to preach. On the following day, Mr. Rea was appointed to preach at Beech Spring on the first Sabbath in August, at Crabapple on the second Sabbath in August, at "Stillwater" (this may have been Nottingham or Cadiz), on the fourth Sabbath of September, and at Crabapple again on the fifth Sabbath of September. On the same day, Rev. William McMillan (afterwards president of Franklin College), was appointed to supply at Beech Spring on the third Sabbath of September. At the meeting of Presbytery at Raccoon, on October 16, 1804, applications for further supplies were received from Beech Spring and Crabapple. On Thursday, the 18th, Rev. Joseph Patterson and Rev. Elisha Macurdy were appointed to preach at Beech Spring on the second Sabbath of November, and to administer the Lord's Supper. Mr. Anderson was also appointed to preach there on the fourth Sabbath of November, and at Crabapple, on the first Sabbath of the following April. Mr. John Brice was appointed to preach at Crabapple on the third Sabbath of November. "Mr. Rea, being appointed by Synod to itinerate as a missionary, no appointments are to be made him prior to next meeting of Presbytery." The next meeting was held at Cross Creek on Christmas Day, 1804, and Mr. Rea was appointed to supply at Beech Spring on the first and third Sabbaths of February, and at Crabapple on the second and fourth Sabbaths of the same month.

Presbytery met at West Liberty again in April, 1805, and on the 16th instant, "a call was presented for Mr. Rea from the united congregations of Crabapple and Beech Spring, which being read, was put into his hands for consideration." Mr. Rea having signified his acceptance of the call, the Presbytery, on Thursday, April 18th, "agreed to proceed to the ordination of Mr. Rea in August next, provided the way be clear, and appointed him to prepare and deliver a sermon on Isaiah, lv., 7, as part of trial. Mr. Brice was appointed to preach the ordination sermon, and Mr. Macurdy to preside and give the charge." The Presbytery met at Crabapple on Tuesday, August 20th, 1805, and on the 22d of the same month, "the Presbytery proceeded to the ordination of Mr. Rea, and did with fasting and prayer, and the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery, solemnly ordain him to the holy office of the Gospel ministry, and installed him as pastor of the united congregations of Crabapple and Beech Spring. Mr. Brice preached on the occasion, and Mr. Macurdy presided and gave the charge."

The size of Mr. Rea's congregation at the time of his installation, and for some years thereafter, may be very closely approximated from the reports preserved in the records of Ohio Presbytery. On April 16th, 1806, less than eight months after the beginning of his pastorate, the Presbytery, having met at Upper Buffalo, "called on each member to report the number of existing communicants in the congregation, and the number of persons baptized." Mr. Rea reported that Beech Spring and Crabapple had 131 communicants, and that ten infants had been baptized by him since the beginning of his ministry. The next report, under date of Dec. 20th, 1808, shows but 109 members in communion, fifteen having been added during the past year, and thirty-five infants baptized. On January 9th, 1810, the total communicants were 191, fourteen having been added during the past year, and twenty-five infants baptized. At this meeting of Presbytery, Mr. Rea reported that the congregation of Crabapple was in debt to him in the sum of sixty dollars, which became due on the 16th instant. On October 17th, of the same year, the report shows 146 communicants, fifteen having been added since last report, and eighteen infants baptized. On April 21st, 1812, there were 119 communicants, twenty-seven having been added during the year, and one adult and twenty-nine infants baptized. April 19th, 1814, the number of communicants was 185, twenty-five having been added, and four adults and thirty-two infants baptized. April 18th, 1815, there were 201 members, sixteen having been added, and twenty-three infants baptized. On April 16th, 1816, the total number of members was 222, of whom thirty-three had been added during the year, and fifty-five infants baptized. April 15th, 1817, the report showed a total communion of 239, thirty-three having been added during the year, and three adults and thirty-three infants having been baptized.

I have come here to-day, in somewhat feeble health, to discharge what I deem a solemn duty; to take my leave of, and bid a final adieu to a church that has been under our care, and where we have lived and labored for nearly half a century—a church where we have lived to see one generation pass all away, and another rise in its room.

That justice, in some measure, may be done thereto, reference must be had to her early history, and to some of the changes that have shaped her destiny thus far.

To prevent being tedious, we shall do little more than outline it.

This church was organized some time in the fall of the year 1803, by two Rev. Fathers, Patterson and Macurdy, who are now no more. Three persons were chosen, and set apart at the time as ruling elders, and a communion followed. This appears to have been the beginning, the morning of the existence of what has since been called Beech Spring, a name said to have been given to it by Mr. [Daniel] Welch, and took its rise from a group of beech trees that enclosed a large spring of water on a lot of five acres he had generously donated for the use of the church, on the west corner of his section.

The year following another young man and myself, of the first class of students that graduated at Jefferson College, having finished a course of Theological studies under the direction of Rev. Dr. McMillan, were licensed to preach the Gospel by the Presbytery of Ohio, June, 1804. After a tour of three months through the interior of this State, and another up the Allegheny towards the Lakes, the winter following I supplied here, and at Crabapple, by order of Presbytery. In April, a joint call was prepared by these two congregations, then in union, and forwarded to Presbytery signed by the following persons, viz: John Miller, S. Dunlap, W. Watt, Henry Ferguson, Jesse Edgington, D. Welch, Esq., and William Harvey. You will readily excuse me in the mentioning of these names, when it is remembered that these were the men who founded the Church of Beech Spring; these were the men who called me, who first gave me the hand of fellowship, and welcomed me to these woods; most of whom I remember with affection, and would gladly visit were they living; but they are no more; the last died the other day. This call being accepted, I was accordingly ordained and installed pastor of the united congregation of Crabapple and Beech Spring by the Presbytery of Ohio, August, 1805. [The first elders of Crabapple were Robert McCullough, William McCullough, and David Merritt.]

The field covered by these two societies, at the time of our settlement, was very extensive, and the labor proportionably great. Crabapple claimed as being within her bounds, the whole extent of country between the south fork of Short creek and the farthest part of Nottingham. Beech Spring was equally, if not still more extensive, including the entire region of country from the Piney Fork and the Flats, on west to Stillwater. All passed under the general name of Beech Spring. There was no Smithfield, nor Bloomfield, nor any other field, whereby to fix our limits. All was Jefferson county, and Steubenville, the seat of Justice.

Over all this extensive field, claimed by both churches, we had to travel. Wherever one was found, or whenever we heard of one in our connection, him we must visit; day and night, summer and winter, all seasons of the year, without a road in most places, save the mark of an axe or the bark of a tree, or the trail of an early Indian. No man that now comes in among us at this distant day, and highly improved state of the country, can so much as conjecture the labor and fatigue of the primitive pioneers of the Ohio forests, out of which the savage had just begun to recede, but continued still in large encampments in some places, near the skirtings of little societies, where the few came together to worship under the shade of a green tree.

The two churches under our care lay nearly twelve miles apart. Many Sabbath mornings, in the dead of winter, I had to travel ten miles to the place of meeting in Crabapple, having no road but a cow-path, and the underwood bent with snow over me all the way. Worn down by fatigue, and frequently in ill-health, I was more than once brought near the confines of the grave.

In all the region around, there were but two clerical brethren who could afford me any assistance, where now there are two Presbyteries and well-nigh thirty preachers. Notwithstanding all this, I must say of those early times, as Jehovah once said of Israel, eight hundred years after, “I remember thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thy espousals, when thou wentest after me in the wilderness, in a land that was not sown.” Those were the best times, and that generation, that Israel, as a nation, ever saw. During the first years of these two congregations, a great and good Providence was evidently seen over them. They prospered exceedingly. Their increase was unprecedented; within our knowledge, we have seen nothing like it; without anything very special that could be called a revival (though something of the effects of the great western revival still remained, and appeared at times in our meetings), yet so rapid was their growth, that in less than five years each became able to support a minister all his time.

Accordingly, in April, 1810, the union existing between these churches was by mutual consent dissolved, and the way opened for each to employ a pastor. Shortly after, a call was prepared by this congregation for the whole of our time, and received through the same Presbytery as before. About this time there were several small societies forming at some distance from us, and appeared to be promising. From one of these societies an earnest request was forwarded to the session at Beech Spring, that some part of their pastor’s time might be granted them. With this request the congregation complied, and for some years the fourth of our time was spent in laying the foundation of what has since become a numerous and respectable congregation, known by the name of the Ridge.

After the division of Jefferson county had taken place, and a new county formed out of it, Cadiz, then a small village, became the Seat of Justice of Harrison county. This village lay within our limits, and was considered a part of our congregation. Here we organized a church, at the request of the villagers, and labored a part of our time for three years; since which our ministry has been chiefly confined to this place alone.

For several years after, this church continued still more to increase, until she became, as was generally supposed, the largest in the State of Ohio. Out of this congregation, at different periods, there have been formed not less than six contiguous organized churches. Still, she continued to maintain her standing entire, until April, 1848, when age and infirmity made it necessary that I should resign, and the pastoral relation of forty-three years was at length dissolved.

Having thus briefly outlined the history of this church,—for

"Why should the wonders He has wrought,

some notice is due to its officers.

In the Presbyterian Church the membership of elder is recognized in all her courts. The interest this class of men take, or the course of conduct pursued by them, will go far in shaping the destiny, the well-being, or ill-being of any church. In the organizing of this church at first I had no concern; it took place before my settlement. But in the course of years, as the congregation increased, frequent additions had to be made, until at one time we had not less than ten members in session. All were chosen by the people, and ordained by myself, with the exception of three, viz: James Kerr, Sr., John McCullough, Esq., and Dr. Thomas Vincent. These were valuable men, and useful members of the session. They obtained their ordination elsewhere, and were received as such here.
CHAPTER VIII.

HARRISON COUNTY IN 1813.

Harrison county was erected from parts of Jefferson and Tuscarawas. As at first constituted, the county included the southern portion of Carroll county; while the western half of Franklin and nearly all of Monroe townships were retained by Tuscarawas county. Carroll county was erected in 1832, from parts of Jefferson, Harrison, Columbiana, Stark, and Tuscarawas, which left the northern boundary of Harrison as it is to-day. The original townships of Jefferson county, which covered nearly all of the present territory of Harrison, were Short Creek and Archer. As organized in 1803, Short Creek township included all the present townships of Nottingham, Moorsfield, Cadiz, Athens, Short Creek, and the south three-sevenths of Green, besides three tiers of sections in Jefferson county; while Archer included the eastern halves of Monroe and Franklin, all of North, Stock, Rumley, Archer, and German, and the north four-sevenths of Green, besides the southern tier of sections in Carroll and the northwestern portion of Jefferson counties.

Harrison county was organized under an act of the Legislature passed January 2, 1813, to take effect January 1, 1814. On January 12, 1813, the Legislature amended the act, making it take effect February 1, 1813, which, accordingly, is the date of erection of the county. On January 14, 1813, the Legislature appointed three commissioners, to locate the county-seat for the new county, and named Messrs. Jacob Myers, Joseph Richardson, and Robert Speer for this purpose. On the fifteenth of the following April, these commissioners made their report to the common-pleas court for Jefferson county, naming the village of Cadiz as the county-seat.

While Harrison county was still included within the territory of Jefferson, the second war with Great Britain broke out. Jefferson county furnished at least one full regiment, consisting of thirteen companies and 1065 men, and contributed to the formation of others. The officers of the regiment were as follows:

Of the companies enumerated in the foregoing list, at least three were enlisted wholly or in part within the territory of Harrison county. The first was that of Captain Joseph Holmes. Following is a muster-roll of this Company, taken from the records of the Adjutant-General’s office at Columbus, under date of August 26, 1812:

Captain Aaron Allen's company was also largely recruited in Harrison county, and the adjoining townships of Jefferson and Belmont, the most of the company enlisting for six months' service, from September, 1812, to March, 1813. The roll of this company is as follows:

A third company was that of Captain Allen Scroggs, enlisted September 21, 1812, to serve until November 30, 1812. The roll of this company is as follows:

It will be observed that many of these names are repeated on the rolls of two or three of the companies given above. This may have been caused by the transference from one company to the other, or by a tour of service in each one of the companies.

Another Company was organized in Harrison county, before its separation from Jefferson, and took the field against Great Britain. This was the Company of Captain Baruch Dickerson, in service in 1814.
Before giving its muster-roll, the following account of its organization and record may be repeated, the same having been dictated by the aged Joshua Dickerson, in two interviews had with him in the fall of 1896. Mr. Dickerson spoke as follows:

"I was but six years old, or thereabouts, when the Indians living along Lake Erie made frequent marauding excursions through this part of the State. This was about the year 1810 or 1811. There were no incidents of cruelty in this immediate neighborhood, but apprehending well the danger that might be, the settlers sought to prevent further trouble. Although I was but a child, I remember well the occurrences; perhaps my memory of this is strengthened somewhat by having heard my father relate the matter repeatedly.

"David Barrett, a Quaker, came to my father, and asked what he advised doing, to prevent trouble with the Indians. Father said, 'in time of peace, prepare for war,' and on election day a Militia Company was formed. After the election, the Company numbered sixty, and in a short time reached a hundred. David Barrett having organized the Company, was chosen its first captain; Samuel Gilmore, first lieutenant; John Jamison, second lieutenant. Two years later, Baruch Dickerson, having succeeded David Barrett as captain, the Company was called out to serve against the British.

"The Company was to serve nine months, but was out only six. They went from Cadiz, first, to Steubenville, then north to Sandusky. During the whole six months there was no actual engagement; only on two or three occasions were any shots fired. The camp life was very disagreeable. At Sandusky, they camped in a swamp, where they were obliged to cut down cedar trees, roll the logs together, and cover them with cedar branches. These cedar branches formed their bed, and covering.

"Samuel Gilmore was sick when they started home. He lived where Samuel Cochran now lives; he was a broad-shouldered, well-made man, of about forty years, and had three or more children. Gilmore, two days before his discharge, being on the way back to Cadiz, took the fever, and not at that time having a horse, was in bad condition; and refusing assistance from his comrades, walked thirty miles. Then the officers contributed sufficient money to purchase a horse, and Gilmore rode the remainder of the way to Cadiz, for the last two days of his march being held on the horse by his companions. The Company reached Cadiz on a Saturday, where a large assemblage was waiting to welcome their return.

Gilmore was able to recognize only his wife among the crowd; was at once conveyed to his home south of the village; and during the following week [Sept. 8, 1814], he died.”

The roll of Captain Baruch Dickerson’s Company, as shown on the records of the Adjutant-General’s office at Columbus, is given below, the Company forming a part of Lieutenant-Colonel William Cotgreve’s (or Colgrove’s) Second Regiment of Ohio Militia. It will be observed that the titles of some of the officers differ from those given in Mr. Dickerson’s account. This may possibly be accounted for by the fact that it was customary for the militia companies of that day to elect new officers every year or so. The Company as made up to fight the British numbered but thirty-six men, and was enlisted March 12, 1814, for service until September 12, 1814, as follows:

Captain, Baruch Dickerson; lieutenant, John Jamison; ensign, Samuel Gilmore; sergeants, William Haverfield, Charles Holmes, Laken Wells; musicians, James Robb, David Young; privates, Samuel Browning, Ezekiel Chambers, Samuel Carson, John Carson, Joseph Craig, Andrew Foster, Moses Foster, Michael Fivecoats, Isaac Hitchcock, James Haverfield, John Hurless, John Hovey, Samuel Holmes, Elsy Holmes, James McConkey, Samuel McConkey, Aaron Mecham, Benjamin Nelson, Joseph Parrish, John Richison, Francis Smith, David Scott, Bazaleel Steel, Francis Warpenboy, Nathaniel West, John Walraven, Henry Welday, George Young.

While on the subject of the war with Great Britain, it will not be out of place to record in this place the names of some of the surviving soldiers of the Revolutionary War, who afterwards located and lived in Harrison county. So far as known there are no printed records of these veterans in existence, save the names of those who were pensioners, and as such enrolled on the pension lists of the Government. The first of these pension rolls was published by Congress about 1820, in volume four of Executive Papers, No. 55, first session of the Sixteenth Congress. In this roll, which is very lengthy, the pensioners are classified as to residence only by States, and it is not possible to determine to what counties they then belonged. In 1835, a second roll was printed by Congress, showing the pensioners then living, or whose heirs were drawing pensions, with their place of residence, and age. To Harrison county at that time were credited the following:

Timothy Boyles, of the Delaware Line, age, 96 years.
HARRISON COUNTY IN 1813

Thomas Haley, of the Maryland Line, age, 74 years.
Thomas Johns, of the Virginia Line, age, 92 years.
James Larkins, of the Pennsylvania Line, died July 13, 1828, aged 70 years.
Neal Peacock, of the Maryland Line, died Aug. 17, 1827, aged 74 years.
John Parker, of the Pennsylvania Line, age, 68 years.
Henry Rankin, of the Pennsylvania Line, age, 72 years.
In the Government Census for 1810, a list of pensioners was prepared, and printed in the Census Report. This gave the names of all then drawing pensions for Revolutionary, or other military service, which included pensioners of the War of 1812 and of the various Indian Wars. Harrison county then contained the following pensioned veterans:
In Rumley township, George Dickerson, aged 94.
In Washington township, John Parker, aged 81.
In Cadiz village, William Boggs.
In Cadiz township, Robert Alexander, aged 45; Charles D. Wells, aged 82.
In Hanover village, Charles Conaway, aged 88.
In North township, Mordecai Ames, aged 90.
In Stock township, Frederick Walters, aged 80.
In Nottingham township, William Todd, aged 84; Isaac Suddith, aged 80.
The following letter, written by Walter B. Beebe, then a young lawyer, who had but recently emigrated to the West from his home in Massachusetts, gives an interesting description of the settlers and conditions which he found in the newly organized county, where he had determined to seek his fortune. It will be observed the letter bears a date scarcely two weeks later than the date of organization of the county:

Cadiz, County of Harrison, State of Ohio, February 14, 1813.

Honored Parents:—I take this opportunity to inform you that I am well and in good spirits. Since I left home, I have become tolerably well acquainted with the science of traveling. I started from St. Clairsville (the place from which I wrote you), on or about the 1st of December, and took a convenient route through the middle section of this State, a route of about 500 miles. The more I get acquainted with this part of the country, the better I like it. It is certainly the best land I ever beheld. Judge Ruggles went with me to Chillicothe, the seat of Government, at which place the Legislature was then sitting. I got acquainted with Governor Meigs, and many of the members, who all appear to be very friendly to young men emigrating to this part of the country. Governor Meigs is a Yankee, from Middletown, Connecticut. At Chillicothe, I was examined by the Judges of the Supreme Court of this State, and admitted to practice as an attorney and counsellor at law in the several courts of record in this State. I found a good many counties in my route, which I thought would be good places for an attorney, but was induced to settle in this, the county-seat of Harrison county, from the following considerations, to-wit: Notwithstanding this county was set off and organized when I was in Chillicothe, yet it is an old settlement, and the settlers are generally rich. The inhabitants of this county, and counties adjoining, have but few Yankee settlers, but settled by Virginians, Pennsylvanians, Germans, Scotch, and Irish, who are more litigious and quarrelsome than the Yankees are, and pay their money more freely. There is no lawyer in this county, and I have the assurance of being appointed State's attorney, which will be worth eighty a year, and will be attended with but very little trouble and very little inconvenience to other business, being only barred in criminal prosecution from appearing against the State of Ohio.

This county is so situated that there are five other counties within one day’s ride of it, and it is the practice in this State for lawyers to practice in adjoining counties. It is the healthiest part of the State, and the water is good. These, together with other considerations, have induced me, after having been a bird of voyage for three months, to pitch on this place for my permanent home.

This town is about twenty miles from the Ohio river, about seventy miles from Pittsburgh, and sixteen miles west of St. Clairsville. It is the shire-town of the county, and will soon be a populous town. I think my prospects are as good as a young man can reasonably expect, and I have no fear, if I have my health.

I am in a land abounding in very many of the good things of this life. I have seen good pot-turkeys, weighing twenty pounds, sell for twenty-five cents; hens and chickens, six cents. Money is very plentiful in this State, probably more plentiful than usual, owing to its being near the N. W. army. I remain, your dutiful son,

To Capt. Stewart Beebe,

WALTER B. BEEBE,

It is to be regretted that some of our eastern writers of American history, who have never been west of the Allegheny mountains, cannot have the advantage of a visit to Ohio, and learn as General Beebe did, that Yankees were exceedingly scarce there, outside of the Marietta and Western Reserve settlements.

The first courts of Harrison county were held at the houses of Thomas Stokes and William Grimes. At a meeting of the county commissioners held April 12, 1813, they entered into an agreement with the trustees of the Associate Reformed congregation of Cadiz, leasing the meeting-house belonging to that society for the term of three years, for the purpose of holding the courts of the county. On October 24, 1815, this lease was extended for a second term of three years, or until the newly begun court-house of the county should be completed. The first term of court was held in the house of Thomas Stokes on May 3, 1813.
Very little business was transacted at this term. The second term was held August 24-26, 1813. Judges Benjamin Ruggles, President, and James Roberts, Samuel Boyd, and Ephraim Sears, Associates, occupied the bench. The court appointed Walter B. Beebe as prosecuting attor­ ey for Harrison county, and allowed him the sum of $33.33, as salary for his services during the August term. The first grand jury was composed of Andrew McNeely, foreman, William Smith, Zachary Baker, William Mercer, William Hamilton, Samuel Gilmore, William Moore, Thomas Hitchcock, John McConnell, William Conwell, Richard McKibben, and John Taggart. On motion of Mr. Beebe, Rev. William Knox, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was licensed to officiate at marriages within the State of Ohio. The Court also licensed John Adams to keep a tavern at his place of residence in Nottingham township, for the term of one year; and likewise, William Grimes and Messrs.
Middie, Niel and Maholm, to keep taverns in the village of Cadiz. The first empanelled jury was composed of Messrs. John Paxton, Samuel Osburn, Jonathan Seers, Robert Croskey, Samuel Dunlap, James McMillan, Samuel Huff, David Barrett, John Clark, Andrew Richey, James Porter, and Benjamin Johnson. The grand jury returned one indictment for larceny, four for riot, and seven for assault and battery; thus apparently vindicating Lawyer Beebe’s judgment as to the quarrelsome character of some of the Ohio pioneers.

The following named persons served on the judicial bench of Har­

President Judges—Benjamin Ruggles (1810 to 1814), George Tod
(1814 to 1816), Benjamin Tappan (1816 to 1823), Jeremiah H. Hallock

HARRISON COUNTY SETTLERS IN 1813.

Following are the names of some of the early settlers and non-resident land-owners of Harrison county (outside of Cadiz village) up to and including the year 1813. This was the year in which Harrison county was erected, its territory before that time being comprised in Jefferson county. This list includes the names of all those who had land patents issued by the United States Government before 1815; and it is from the dates of these that many of the dates in the list are taken. Nearly all of these patents were issued after 1804; although, as a matter of fact, in almost every case, settlement and improvements had been made on the land by the patentee or his assignor, from one to five years before. The first lands sold in Harrison county after the opening of the land office in Steubenville were under a credit system, which gave the purchaser four years' time after the date of his entry to make his payments; and patents were not issued until the payments had been completed. In some cases time of payment was extended for some years beyond the original period, so that the patent may have been dated several years after settlement was begun. A full list of all Harrison county land patents issued by the United States will be found in the latter part of this volume. Several dates in the following list are taken from the old township book of Short Creek township, an abstract of which was prepared by Mr. Oliver Cope, and printed in the Cadiz Republican near the close of the year 1895. Other dates, particularly those prior to 1804, are taken from family histories and records, and not to be relied upon absolutely. In this regard the list is not so full or correct as could be desired, and the writer regrets that the data at his command does not include more of the early settlers of Harrison county.

In Archer Township before 1814.—Samuel Amspoker, 1803; William Anderson, 1811; Comfort Arnold, 1810, from Pennsylvania; Daniel Blair, 1812, from Somerset county, Pa.; William Barnhill, 1811; John P. Besides the names given above, a list of the first lot-owners in the town of Cadiz will be found in connection with the account of its early settlement; and, as stated before, a complete list of the Government land patents issued for lands in Harrison county, is given in another portion of this book. There were many early settlers in the county, however, who did not get their land directly from the Government, but bought it at second-hand from the original pre-emptors. The names of some of these are given in the following supplementary list, covering the period from 1814 to 1829, inclusive. This list is very incomplete; and it is a matter of regret that more records are not available to the writer. But such as have been obtained are here given; although many families will find the names of their pioneer ancestors missing, when they properly deserve a place in such a list as this:

CHAPTER X.

CRABAPPLE AND UNITY CHURCHES.

While Beech Spring was the first Presbyterian church organized within the present limits of Harrison county, the congregation of CRABAPPLE, composed largely of Harrison county people, and for five years united with Beech Spring under the same pastoral charge, was gathered some three or four years before that of the latter.

Crabapple church is situated in Wheeling township, Belmont county, about two miles south of New Athens, and a short distance north from Uniontown. Near here, at the beginning of the present century, the settlers were perhaps more numerous than in any other part of the county. The most of them had come from Washington and Fayette counties, Pennsylvania; and for some years before 1800 the Presbytery of the Ohio, whose members were then chiefly stationed in Washington county, had sent nearly every one of their number on missionary tours to the new settlements in the Western Territory, as Ohio was then called. Among these ministers were Rev. John McMillan, Joseph Patterson, and Elisha Macurdy, the first named being one of the earliest Presbyterian ministers to settle west of the Allegheny mountains, and at that time perhaps the most prominent.

On October 17, 1898, Rev. Joseph Anderson was licensed by this Presbytery, and at the same time appointed to visit the settlements west of the Ohio river, and to preach at "Indian Wheelin Creek" (St. Clairsville), on the fourth Sabbath of October, and at "Indian Short Creek" (Mt. Pleasant), on the first Sabbath of November. He continued to supply these churches occasionally, and on October 15, 1799, at a request of a committee from these churches, the Presbytery appointed Mr. Anderson as a stated supply for one year. On April 15th of the following year, however, a call from the united congregations of Indian Wheeling Creek (now first called Richland, and later, St. Clairsville), Short Creek (Mt. Pleasant), and Cross Roads (Crabapple), was made for the pastoral services of Mr. Anderson, and accepted by him. His ordination took place at Cross Roads, Western Territory, on August 20, 1800, Presbytery having met at that place the day before. This is sometimes erroneously stated to have been the first ordination of a Presbyterian minister in what is now the State of Ohio; but such is not the case, Rev. James Kemper having been ordained and installed, at Cincinnati, by the Presbytery of Transylvania, as early as October 23, 1792. It was, however, the first ordination by the Presbytery of Ohio within the present limits of that state.

Mr. Anderson was a member of the church of Upper Buffalo, in Hopewell township, Washington county, Pennsylvania, and probably pursued his studies in part at the Canonsburg Academy. He was a man of deep and abounding zeal, a faithful and devoted laborer, and in an eminent sense, a pioneer. Within two years after his installation, Cross Roads (Crabapple) ceased to be a part of his charge, owing, doubtless, to increased labors resulting from his rapidly growing congregations. In April, 1813, his pastoral relation to Short Creek (Mt. Pleasant) was dissolved; but in 1830, Short Creek is again coupled with Richland in Presbytery's report to Synod. In 1827, Richland is first reported as St. Clairsville, and in 1829, is reported as his sole pastoral charge. He was released October 3, 1830; and in June, 1835, he was dismissed to the Presbytery of St. Charles. His death occurred at Monticello, Mo., in 1847, in the eightieth year of his age. Mr. Anderson's wife was a daughter of Rev. Joseph Smith, first pastor of Cross Creek and Upper Buffalo churches, in Washington county, Pennsylvania.

Robert McCullough and William McCullough were the first ruling elders in Crabapple church. In this capacity, Robert McCullough represented the infant congregation in a meeting of the Synod of Virginia held at Washington, Pennsylvania, in 1800; and he also attended the meeting of the Presbytery of Ohio in the following year. The organization of the church, nevertheless, seems to have become dormant in 1802, and so continued for a year or more. In the spring of 1804, however, in union with the newly organized congregation of Beech Spring, Crabapple presented a call to Rev. John Rea, whose acceptance of the same, and subsequent labors in this field, have already been related in connection with the former sketch of the history of Beech Spring Church.

A somewhat different account from the above, of the permanent erection of Crabapple congregation is given by Mr. J. A. Caldwell, in his "History of Belmont and Jefferson counties." Mr. Caldwell says:

In the year 1803, Robert and William McCullough sent to Georgetown, Harrison [then Jefferson] county, Ohio, for Samuel Hanna, to "come up and help" them to form a "praying society." He came, and from this germ planted in the wilderness, sprang Crabapple Presbyterian Church, the first and largest church organization in Wheeling township, Belmont county, Ohio. The first sermon was preached by the Rev. John Rea, and the church organized with forty members, in 1804, by Rev. Joseph Anderson and Dr. [Samuel] Ralston, a committee sent by the Presbytery of Ohio. The early records are lost, but the following families were among the first members: The McCulloughs, McKibbons, Campbells, Snedekers, Brokaws, and Merritts. The first bench of elders was composed of William McCullough, Robert McCullough, and Daniel [David] Merritt.

While the account is probably correct, so far as it goes, yet, undoubtedly it refers to the second organization of the church. Rev. Joseph Anderson had certainly gathered the nucleus of the congregation here as early as 1799, and it seems to have continued as one of his preaching stations for two or three years afterwards. The records of the Presbytery of Ohio show a meeting of Presbytery at Cross Roads, Western Territory, as Crabapple was then called, on Aug. 19, 1800, as stated above. At this meeting were present, Revs. John McMillan, James Hughes, John Brice, and Thomas Marquis, all well-known ministers of Washington county, Pennsylvania, and elders, Samuel Dunlap and John Irwin. On Wednesday, August 20th, "Presbytery proceeded to the ordination of Mr. Joseph Anderson, and by fasting and prayer, and with the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery, solemnly ordained him to the holy office of the gospel ministry, and installed him pastor of the united churches of Richland, Short Creek, and Cross Roads, W. T." Dr. McMillan preached on this occasion, from 2d Corinthians, v. 20; and Rev. John Brice gave the charge.

Mr. Anderson relinquished the charge of Crabapple in 1802, as stated above; and in August, 1805, was succeeded by Rev. John Rea. An account of Mr. Rea's five years' ministration here has been given in the sketch of Beech Spring Church, which during that period was united with Crabapple as one pastoral charge. At the end of five years (in April, 1810), he withdrew from Crabapple, that he might give all his labors to the Beech Spring congregation. The Crabapple division of his charge had become too laborious for him, spreading over a district of nearly fourteen miles square; for the territory of the future churches of New Athens, Morristown, and Nottingham was within its bounds. The latter was then a mission station, under the care of the pastor and elders of Crabapple.

The following extracts from the records of the Presbytery of Ohio will give us an idea of the strict orthodoxy of the early fathers of Crabapple congregation; and it is possible they may also furnish one of the reasons for Mr. Rea's withdrawal from the charge of this congregation.

The Presbytery met at Cross Roads, in Washington county, Pa., on October 10th, 1808. On Friday, October 21st, "Samuel Hannah, a member of Crabapple congregation, appeared in the Presbytery with the following charge:

"The Reverend John Rea is hereby charged with preaching and circulating heterodox sentiments at the following places, viz., at Crabapple, the Sabbath on or about the 20th of April last, and on Monday at Samuel Hannah's, at an examination: That the Covenant of Grace was not made with Christ, but with man only, and that man promises faith and repentance on his part; and maintains, that if the Covenant of Grace was made with Christ, he could not be the Mediator of it.

"The Presbytery agreed to take up the charge, and ordered the parties to appear before them at their next meeting, prepared to have the matters brought to an issue."

Upper Buffalo, December 21st, 1808. "The Presbytery proceeded to the consideration of the charge which was at the last meeting brought by Samuel Hannah against the Revd. John Rea. The charge being read, Mr. Rea denied that ever he had taught as stated in the charge." Witnesses were accordingly sworn and examined, William and Robert Mc Culloch on that day, and Andrew Ackelson and William Wylie on the day following. Presbytery then "ordered Mr. Rea to prepare a written explanation of his sentiments." On the 23d, "Mr. Rea brought in a written explanation of his sentiments, which being read and considered, the Presbytery proceeded to consider the several items in the charge; and judged that they were not supported by the testimony."
Rev. Thomas B. Clark, a licentiate of the Presbytery of Hartford, was ordained and installed pastor of Crabapple in 1811, preaching one-fourth of his time at the Nottingham mission station; and continued until 1818, when his relation to this charge was dissolved.

The third pastor was Rev. Samuel Cowles, who was installed in 1819, and continued seven years. After Mr. Cowles, there occurred a vacancy of several years, supplied from various sources; and then Mr. Jacob Coon, a licentiate of the Presbytery of Washington, preached as a candidate for settlement, received and accepted a call, and in 1834 was ordained and installed. He remained four years.

Rev. Moses Allen was the fifth pastor of the church. He studied theology under his father-in-law, Dr. John McMillan, and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Ohio in 1807. He remained for thirty years in the bounds of that Presbytery, and then removed to the state of Ohio, where he was installed as pastor of Crabapple church in 1839. He continued in this relation from that time until his death, a period of seven years.

In June, 1847, Rev. McKnight Williamson was installed pastor of this church, and remained for five years and nine months. He was succeeded by Rev. William R. Vincent, who served for thirteen years. Mr. Vincent was followed in succession by John P. Caldwell (1869-1872), T. J. Milford (1874-1882), and George S. Hackett (1883).

The first structure used by Crabapple Church as a place of worship was a so-called "tent," being nothing more than a rude pulpit, erected in the forest, possibly built against the side of a tree, and with a small projecting roof or hood of clap-boards, designed to protect the minister and his bible from the sun and rain. His congregation usually stood around in groups, or seated themselves on the grass, or on fallen logs. Soon afterwards, a log house was built, which later was succeeded by a brick building, and this in turn gave place to a frame structure, which has continued in use since its erection.

About the year 1835, under the ministrations of Rev. Jacob Coon, Crabapple church seems to have reached the flood-tide of its prosperity. Its communicants then numbered over three hundred, with a Sabbath school of some two hundred members. Revs. William M. Grimes, Thomas R. Crawford, James Grimes, Robert Armstrong, Robert Tannehill, and Joseph Lyle were reared in this church, and received their early religious training in its Sabbath school.
UNITY CHURCH

The first sermon preached to the families of this congregation was delivered by Rev. Joseph Scroggs, about the year 1812-13. As Dr. Scroggs was not licensed by his Presbytery until October, 1813, it is possible the date of his visit may not have been until after that event. The church was regularly organized as an Associate Presbyterian congregation by Rev. John Walker, in 1814, and at that time consisted perhaps of no more than eight families, whose heads were as follows: John Trimble, James Cook, Robert McCracken, Alexander McCall, Robert Hammond, John Love, Thomas Love, and John McCaskey. The first bench of elders was composed of Messrs. John Trimble, Robert McCracken, Alexander McCall, and Robert Hammond.

Of the first minister of this congregation, more than a passing notice is required; as few men have had a greater or more beneficial influence upon the moral welfare of the county, than John Walker. He was born in 1786, in Washington county, Pennsylvania; was educated at Jefferson College, and studied Theology with Dr. John Anderson, at Service, Pa.; was licensed in the summer of 1809 by the Presbytery of Ohio, and ordained July 11, 1811, by the same; served as pastor of Mercer and connections in Pennsylvania, until September 14, 1814; was installed over Unity, Mt. Pleasant, and Cadiz, in the summer of 1815. As his congregations increased, he resigned Cadiz in 1818, but retained the others until his death, which occurred March 8, 1845, from erysipelas. He was not distinguished for scholarship, but possessed an exceedingly enthusiastic temperament, which made him very energetic and active in his labors. He was a pioneer in the temperance cause, even to total abstinence; was very decided in his opposition to Free Masonry; and was intensely bitter in his hostility to slavery. He was always ready, even anxious, to defend his views, and oppose what he regarded as error. Hence, he was engaged in a number of public discussions, the most memorable of which was that with Alexander Campbell, the founder of the Campbellite Baptists. Mr. Walker desired to establish a classical school in Harrison county, and as none of the villages would take hold of the matter, he, in connection with a neighbor, laid out a town upon the adjacent portions of their farms, which they named New Athens. Here he started a classical school, and rested not until he succeeded in getting from the Legislature the charter of Franklin College. He studied medicine in his youth, and practiced more or less in an amateur way during his whole ministry. In later years he felt a necessity to open a regular practice. The burning of his house, together with a boundless hospitality, and a general financial mismanagement, made him very poor. For some time before securing the charter for his college, he conducted it as an academy in New Athens, under the name of the "Alma Mater," in active rivalry with a similar institution carried on by Rev. Donald McIntosh, in Cadiz. In the archives of Franklin College is found the record of a single meeting of the trustees of that academy, held on September 28, 1824, the names of the trustees being: Rev. Salmon Cowles (president), John McCracken (secretary), Rev. John Walker, John Whan, John Wylie, Alexander Hammond, Alexander McNary, Daniel Brokaw, and John Trimble. At this time, the project for a charter for the academy at Cadiz was being agitated; but by the superior activity and tact of Mr. Walker, the charter was obtained for the academy at New Athens, under the name of "Alma College." This name was changed at the next meeting of the Legislature to that of Franklin College. The charter is dated January 22, 1825, and the original incorporators were Revs. John Rea, Salmon Cowles, and John Walker, and Messrs. David Jennings, William Hamilton, John McCracken, John Wylie, James Campbell, David Campbell, John Trimble, John Whan, Daniel Brokaw, Alexander McNary, and Alexander Hammond. To these were added by election, at the first meeting of the trustees under this charter, held April 5, 1825, Rev. Thomas Hanna, John McGlaughlin, Stephen Caldwell, Joseph Grimes, and Matthew Simpson. At this same meeting of the trustees, the Rev. William McMillan (a nephew of Dr. John McMillan), of Canonsburg, Penna., was elected President, with John Armstrong, of Pittsburg, as Professor of Mathematics; and on June 8th of the same year, the college was formally organized.

At the Semi-Centennial Celebration of the organization of Franklin College, held at New Athens, June 23, 1875, Dr. Andrew Finley Ross, then president of the institution, sketched the history of the school from its organization; and from his address on that occasion, the following account has been condensed.

The leading spirit in the enterprise was Rev. John Walker, a minister of the Secession church. Mr. Walker was a fit son of that particular branch of the church; a church characterized by its zealous orthodoxy and sturdy theology. He was a man of deep conviction upon the subject of equal rights. Hence, he entered into the anti-slavery contest with all the ardor of his impetuous nature, and during that long controversy, was one of the leading anti-slavery spirits of the West. By the superior tact and energy of Rev. John Walker, the charter of Franklin College was obtained. Dr. William McMillan was elected President, and John Armstrong, Professor of Mathematics. Dr. McMillan was the nephew of Dr. John McMillan, the original founder of Jefferson College at Canonsburg, Penna., of which institution he had been for some time president. He had thus been associated with and reared under the tuition of that noble band of men, the Smiths, Powers, McMillans, and Ralstons, who were so instrumental in planting the seeds of Presbyterianism and sound learning in the country west of the Alleghenies. John Armstrong was the mathematical oracle of western Pennsylvania. He made all the almanacs, and solved all the mathematical propositions. Learned societies in Europe recognized his attainments by admitting him to their fellowships. What are the results? In this small college, with its two professors, were educated such men as the Hon. John Welsh, of the Supreme Court of Ohio; the Hon. William Kennon, a member of Congress during Jackson’s administration, a friend and adviser of the President; Wilson Shannon, a former governor of Ohio; Dr. Joseph Ray, the well-known mathematical writer, whose works have maintained a longer popularity and gained a wider circulation than perhaps any other mathematical works ever written; besides giving to the church such men as Drs. Johnson, Bruce, Henderson, Walkinshaw. Surely, this is harvest enough for less than seven years. Dr. McMillan died in 1832. [He was followed, in succession, by Revs. Richard Campbell and Johnson Welsh]. In 1837, the Board appointed as president, Dr. Joseph Smith, then pastor of a church in St. Clairsville, the grandson of Rev. Joseph Smith and Dr. James Power, both noted pioneers of Presbyterianism in western Pennsylvania. He was thus from the same stock, and reared under the same tuition with Dr. McMillan.

The anti-slavery agitation was becoming more and more intense. The people who attended the ministrations of Rev. John Walker were almost to a man strongly anti-slavery. The Presbyterian General Assembly was divided. The congregation of Crabapple was divided, although Rev. Jacob Coon, the pastor, was strongly anti-slavery. Dr. Smith opposed agitation of the question. Mr. Coon left Crabapple, removed to New Athens, and organized a Presbyterian church. Dr. Smith resigned the presidency, and Mr. Coon was elected in his stead. The majority of the Board was composed of anti-slavery men, but it was not their intention to commit the college to this principle. Coon was succeeded in a year, by Rev. William Burnett, an Associate Reformed minister, from near Pittsburgh, but born in South Carolina, and conservative on the slavery question. He resigned within a twelve-month, followed by Professor Armstrong.

In 1840, the Board appointed Rev. Edwin H. Nevin, President; George K. Jenkins, Professor of Mathematics; and Rev. Andrew Black, Professor of Languages. The members of the Board then resolved to throw themselves entirely upon the side of the anti-slavery sentiment of the country. The place had already come to be regarded as the hot-bed of Abolitionism in eastern Ohio; and Mr. Nevin's eloquent denunciation of the monster iniquity, aided by the hot shot of Rev. John Walker, soon began to tell upon the community.

The college had become involved in debt, and the creditors sued for their claims. The anti-slavery men, then in control, were unable to meet these claims, for various reasons, and in consequence, the property of the college was taken in execution, and sold by the sheriff. Thus Franklin College, after her long struggles, found herself without a home. But this was not all. The college edifice, with its appurtenances, was purchased by the colonization, or pro-slavery party, and under the name of "Providence College," they succeeded in establishing a rival institution. The anti-slavery men, however, were adequate to the crisis, and notwithstanding the demands that had already been made upon their liberality, they at once raised funds for the erection of a building for the accommodation of Franklin College. To secure it from the claims of the old creditors, yet unliquidated, and for the satisfaction of which their property had been sacrificed, they located their edifice upon their church lot, thus vesting their title in the trustees of the church; and so Franklin College was accommodated with a home. The popular qualities of President Nevin and his associates in the faculty attracted at once all the students that resorted to the place, and Providence College, after a feeble effort to gain a hold upon the public patronage, was abandoned. The anti-slavery men had now fairly won the field. President Nevin, in having the bell cast for the new college, placed upon it the words: "Proclaim Liberty Through all the Land."

Dr. Nevin was succeeded in 1845 by Rev. Alexander D. Clark, who remained until 1861.

The sons of Franklin College are found occupying high positions all over the land. She has given to the Senate of the United States a Cowan, a Fowler, and a Sharon; and to the House of Representatives, a Kennon, a Bingham, and a Lawrence. She is represented in the halls of medical science by an Armor; on the Supreme Bench of Ohio, by a Welsh; on that of Alabama, by a Bruce; and in the theological seminaries of the country, by a Bruce, a Clark, and a Henderson. Seventy-five per cent. of her graduates have entered the Christian ministry, and some of the most distinguished and useful men who adorn the pulpit are found among them.

In his "Pathfinders of Jefferson County," Mr. William H. Hunter has recorded considerable of the once forgotten history of the Abolition movement in Ohio, and in referring to that part of the subject connected with Harrison county, he says: "The Short Creek valley, from Cadiz to Mt. Pleasant, and including the region about New Athens and Crabapple church, just over the divide, on the head waters of Wheeling creek, was noted for its warmth of abolition sentiment, from 1820 down to the close of the irrepressible conflict—abolition of slavery, pure and simple;
the hard-headed, austere Seceders, the followers of Dr. John Walker, and other ministers of his kind, would tolerate no compromise, and they looked upon Benjamin Lundy's colonization schemes with almost the same disrespect that they would consider any half-way measure proposed by the pro-slavery advocates. Franklin College, founded by John Walker, was long recognized as the fountain-head of the abolition sentiment of eastern Ohio, and it is but natural that the people first to drink of the stream were powerfully influenced; and further, it was in accordance with the eternal fitness of things, that numerous 'underground stations,' so-called because slaves were surreptitiously conveyed along certain routes, kept hid during the day, and hurried during the night season from one station to another, on their way to Canada, should be established in this valley.

"Of course, there were stations at the mouth of Short creek, one kept by George Craig, and one by William Hogg. One was kept by Joseph Medill, on Warren Ridge, near Hopewell M. E. Church. There were many in Mt. Pleasant, the slaves being kept during daylight in any of the houses in the village, and there is authority for the statement that one good Friend kept a number of strong negroes on his farm from corn­ planting until after harvest. The house of Rev. Benjamin Mitchell was a noted station, there being a trap-door in the kitchen floor, through which runaway slaves reached a large hole in the ground when slave-hunters were searching the premises. The Updegraff house, a mile west of Mt.
Pleasant, and that of David Robinson, west of Trenton, were also well known to the slave on his way to liberty. The Bracken house in Mt.
Pleasant was so constructed that the negroes could enter an attic by means of a trap-door in the roof, after climbing a ladder. Benjamin Ladd, the Quaker philanthropist, kept the Smithfield station. The one at Lloydstown, named for Jesse and Isaac Lloyd, was kept by Eli Nichols; one at Unity, kept by Rev. John Walker, the courageous Seceder minister; at Hammond’s Cross Roads, by Alexander and John Hammond—John Hammond, Jr., and Joseph Rodgers, now of Cadiz, being conductors between this point and Hopedale; one at the house of James Hanna (brother of Rev. Thomas Hanna), near Georgetown; one at the house of Cyrus McNeely (founder of Hopedale College), between Hopedale and Unionvale; one at the house of Judge Thomas Lee, near Cadiz; one at Miller’s Station, by David Ward; one at Richmond, by James and William Ladd; and from here, the negroes were conducted to the home of Judge Thomas George, on Yellow creek, and then to Salem, in Clarkiana county, from which point they had comparatively safe passage into British possessions.”

Those who harbored fugitive slaves in those days ran great risks, the penalty being $1,000 fine, and imprisonment.

John Walker was succeeded at Unity by Rev. William Wishart, who began his ministry in September, 1847, and served until April, 1868. He was followed, November 30, 1869, by Rev. William G. Waddle.

The first meeting-house of Unity congregation was built in 1815, on the site of the present graveyard. The structure was built of round logs, and was twenty-five feet in size. It had a clap-board roof, and the whole of one end of the house was occupied by the fire-place. This building was very primitive in construction, and defective in ventilation; so that the congregation, in order to avoid the smoke, which filled the room when a fire was burning, worshipped on the outside during the winter season, whenever the weather was sufficiently mild. The second building, made this time of hewn logs, was erected in 1820, and was entered through three different door-ways. This house was built under the direction of Rev. John Walker, near the site of the present building, and was occupied by the congregation until 1833, when a third building, of brick, was erected in its stead. The brick house was fifty-five by sixty-five feet in dimensions, and it is said to have accommodated 500 worshippers. It stood until 1875, when the present frame structure was erected.

The congregation reached its greatest period of prosperity about the year 1841, under the ministrations of Rev. John Walker. At that time the membership numbered nearly two hundred and fifty persons, more than twice its present size.
CHAPTER XI.

THE EARLY CHURCHES OF CADIZ.

In taking up the history of the early churches of Cadiz, we find that some years elapsed after the town was established before any church organization was made. The Presbyterian worshippers of the community were then included in the congregation of Beech Spring, and ministered to by Rev. John Rea, who undoubtedly preached in Cadiz at private dwellings before 1810. Most of the first settlers who took up lands in the vicinity of Cadiz seem to have been of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian faith, among them being the large families of the McFaddens, Gilmores, Jamisons, and Craigs, from Washington county, Pennsylvania. The membership of this church in America is made up chiefly from descendants of the Scotch-Irish immigrants who came to America from Ulster after the close of the Revolutionary War. More than ninety per cent. of the pre-Revolutionary emigration from Ireland consisted of Presbyterians of the Old School. The later emigrants, on first coming to Pennsylvania, where their relations or friends had settled many years before, found much of the best lands taken in these older settlements. Though at first they settled in the western counties of the Keystone State, they were not satisfied with their condition, but usually took up with the earliest opportunity of bettering it. This came to them with the opening to settlement of the lands in the Northwest Territory; and it was not many months after the land office was opened at Steubenville before many of the choicest tracts in the vicinity of Cadiz were occupied by these Washington county Scotch-Irish. During the time between their removal to Harrison county, and the organization of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church at Cadiz, it is hardly reasonable to suppose that they were without occasional religious services. The present United Presbyterian Church of Cadiz, as of other churches of that denomination throughout the country, was formed in 1858, by the union of the two former congregations known as the Associate Presbyterian and the Associate Reformed Presbyterian churches. Prior to the formation of the Second Ohio Associate Reformed Presbytery, in 1824, Cadiz was included in the territory of the Presbytery of Monongahela, and as such was doubtless often visited and preached to by ministers belonging to that Presbytery who were residents of Washington county. And it is reasonable to assume that many of them came as missionaries before the formal organization of the congregation in 1810. The writer, not having the minutes of Monongahela Presbytery before him, is unable to give any details as to the number or frequency of these early "supplies"; but that they were provided and paid for, there is no reason to doubt. It is also very probable that a small log church building may have been erected in Cadiz township by this congregation some years before the erection of their meeting-house in Cadiz village.

We find from the records of Harrison county, that Lots numbered 58, 59, and 60 in the town of Cadiz (the present residence of Mr. A. H. Carnahan), were deeded on April 16, 1812, to "John McFadden, Samuel Carnahan, John Craig, William Hamilton, and John Jamison, trustees appointed by the Associate Reformed congregation of Cadiz," for the purpose of a meeting-house for public worship. We can therefore determine positively that prior to the date here given, this congregation was fully organized and able and ready to sustain a minister. An historical sermon was delivered by Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D., then pastor of the United Presbyterian Church at Cadiz, on August 26, 1876, giving the history of the congregation from the time of the organization of the Associate Reformed church. This history is so full of interest, and contains so much information regarding the subject to which it relates, as to be in every way worthy of permanent preservation; and the historical part of Dr. Meloy's discourse is therefore given here in full:

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church of Cadiz was one of the earliest mission stations west of Pennsylvania. As early as October 10th, 1810, we find them petitioning the Monongahela Presbytery for supplies. Rev. Buchanan was appointed to preach in Cadiz the 2d and 3d Sabbaths of March, 1811. Supplies were afterwards frequently sent them. June 23d, 1813, an application was made to have the Lord's Supper dispensed; Mr. Buchanan was appointed for that service, and to preside at an election of ruling elders in that society. Rev. Buchanan reported to Presbytery, the following September, that Joseph McFadden, George McFadden, William Hamilton, and Robert Orr, had been elected ruling elders. At the same meeting Revs. Riddell and Buchanan were appointed to dispense the supper at Cadiz on the fifth Sabbath of October, 1813, and to attend to the ordination of elders the preceding Friday. On the 30th of October, 1813, Joseph McFadden and Robert Orr were ordained and installed to the eldership. George McFadden declined accepting the office, and William Hamilton was absent.

November 10th, 1813, application was made for the moderation of a call by Cadiz, and Upper Wheeling, a society near Uniontown. There was, however, a connection existing between it and Lower Wheeling and Short Creek. Discretionary power was then given to Mr. Buchanan, who was, in general, to be guided by the resolution—"that, provided Lower Wheeling and Short Creek shall satisfy the member who shall be appointed to moderate, that they willingly relinquish the connection existing between them and Upper Wheeling, then, and in that case, he shall proceed to this business." The minutes of the two subsequent meetings of Presbytery were lost, and the Clerk records such business as he could recall. He forgot to record the report of Mr. Buchanan. The result, however, was, that Mr. Buchanan proceeded to moderate, and Mr. William Taggart was elected Pastor.

The first house of worship used by this congregation was a log building, erected on grounds purchased from Zachariah Biggs, situated on the corner of South and Ohio streets. The purchase price was $20. The deed for these lots is on record in Jefferson county. The log building was torn down and a substantial brick erected in 1828. This house was occupied by the congregation until 1870. Its cost cannot now be determined. It was not completed till 1833, when the pews were sold to pay for its completion. The total value of sixty-six pews was $1,812, the lowest being appraised at $10, and the highest at $40. Nearly all the pews were sold, as the amount received was $1,740.67.

The Trustees were incorporated by act of Legislature, Feb. 18, 1830, and were John McFadden, Thomas Patton, William Hamilton, David Thompson, and Thomas Bingham. William Haversfield was elected the same year, in place of Thomas Patton, deceased. The building committee were John McFadden, David Thompson, and Thomas Bingham. Mr. Bingham very often advanced money, and generally settled by taking the even hundreds and deducting the odd dollars and cents, for which, doubtless, the congregation felt duly grateful, although no record is made of their expressing it.

The building was no doubt one of the best in Cadiz, and was esteemed at the time most eligibly located. Yet why our fathers persisted in erecting store rooms and hotels on front streets and churches out of town, or on back streets, it is difficult to tell. They certainly did not advocate the penance of wading unnecessarily through the rich mud of Harrison county, on scriptural or sanitary grounds. It was the custom of the time to spend most of the Sabbath in and about the Church. The forest trees had been cleared away, where the old graveyard now is, but on every side the chestnut and oak and maple afforded a pleasant shade under which to hitch the horses, eat the Sabbath biscuit and discuss the sermon. It is even hinted that in those days there were worldly men, who talked about stock and politics, and women who discussed their neighbors' dresses, and gay young people who arranged for week night meetings that were not strictly ecclesiastical. And to that old grave-yard, now so sadly neglected, the mourner went, Bible in hand, and read over the verses on the new gray sand-stone, now fallen and broken, dropped a flower on the grave where now the briers and old ivy twine together, and with wet eyes turned again to the house of God to hear a reverend pastor tell of a Savior who is "the Resurrection and the Life." But the mourner and the mourned have met together, the grave encloses both.

As already noticed, the first pastor elected was Mr. William Taggart.
He, together with Mr. Samuel Findley, had been taken under care of Presbytery as students, on Sept. 5th, 1809. He was licensed Sept. 1st, 1813. He delivered his ordination trials at Cadiz, Nov. 9, 1814. Rev.
Findley preached the ordination sermon from 2d Corinthians, ii., 16,
"And who is sufficient for these things," after which Mr. Taggart wasordained to the office of the holy ministry," and installed pastor of the united congregations of Cadiz and Upper Wheeling. He was about thirty-two years old when he began his labors here, and fifty-five when he wasreleased. He gave to this field the years of his vigor. He was a man of very fine reasoning power. He spoke slowly, and at times with apparent hesitation, but when the discourse wascompleted, antecedent and consequent, premise and conclusion, were bound together by a chain that could not be broken.

It must, however, be confessed that Mr. Taggart took ample time for the elucidation of his text. His discourse never fell short of an hour, and frequently reached twice that length. The order in public worship then was to have, after the invocation prayer, the reading and explanation of the psalm. This exercise was as long as a modern sermon, and as it proceeded, more and more of the hidden beauties of Divine truth were displayed. Each thought of God is a deep, and the pastor loved to bring up its treasures, that the people might sing with full hearts. The precentor then gave out, and the people sang one line at a time. It was something of a departure to mingle bass with the air, but this was occasionally done. On communion Sabbaths, there were long debarrances made, that seemed to shut out the very elect from the table. Tokens of admission to the table were distributed on Saturday, and were brought on Sabbath to the table, where an elder received them. The male portion of the congregation carried the leaden token in the vest pocket, and the female, carefully tied up in the corner of a snow white 'kerchief, Seated upon rude slabs, the rustic sofa of the early times, Mr. Taggart spoke to the people all the words of this life. Socially he was a man of courteous though dignified demeanor, and was greatly beloved.

We must not, however, take the salary paid, or rather promised him, as the measure of the people's affection. Nominally it was $180 for half his time; yet there is a record in the full, clear hand of Thomas Patton, Clerk, that on the 11th of September, 1830, there was owing to the pastor $663.60. That is, the congregation was less than four years in arrears. On the 2d of June, 1836, we find the following record: "After a careful investigation it was found that there was a balance yet due Mr. Taggart of $1,122." On the 27th of May, 1837, this amount was reduced to $350.50. An excuse for this tardiness that was somewhat amusing, though it might be a terror to rich fathers-in-law, was, that Mr. Taggart had stock in a St. Clairsville bank and had married a rich wife. The Uniontown church took all of Mr. Taggart's time, and he removed there in 1838. On September 6th, 1865, Rev. William Taggart ceased from his labors. His body rests in the grave at St. Clairsville. This old and honored servant of God was not called to his reward until the eighty-fourth year of his age. To him the shadows had grown very long, and the rest of the evening time was sweet.

In 1838, Rev. Thomas Speer was elected pastor, but declined the call. Two hundred and fifty dollars a year was appropriated for the payment of supplies, and raised by a levy on the pews.

On the twenty-seventh of September, 1839, Rev. Parks moderated in a call which was made in favor of Rev. Alexander Wilson, his salary being fixed at $500. His labors began November 1st, 1839. Rev. William Burnett preached the sermon on this occasion, and a copy was requested by the congregation for publication.

The women of the church were not in those days supposed to have much to do with its management, as we notice that on January 25th, 1841, it was announced from the pulpit that the "male members" would detain to attend to congregational business. Possibly this may account, in part, for imperfect management, as we certainly would fail to-day without the help and counsel of our sisters. We were not surprised, therefore, to find that the congregation, six months later, appointed a committee to wait upon Mr. Wilson and inquire of him whether he would be willing to accept of $400 as his salary or stipend, after the present year. Charles Warfel, one of the members of that committee, refused to serve, and if he were living I would commend him for it. During the years 1841-42, the male members frequently met and attempted to doctor the salary, which was falling constantly behind. The arrearages were, in '41, $36.76; '42, $93.31, '43, $116.67. At last the collectors, seemingly in utter despair, resigned, and new ones were appointed. It was then resolved, November 23d, 1844, that these arrearages be assessed on the pews. To this plan there must have been serious objections, for on January 27th, 1845, this resolution was repealed.

The male members met in October, 1845, and reported the following arrearages: 1842, $93.31; '43, $109.67; '44, $181.50; '45, $384.00. A report on this subject was presented by S. McFadden, C. Warfel, and M. H. Urquhart.

Joseph Braden, Moses Urquhart, John Mitchell, James Patton, Samuel Carnahan, and David Carnahan were chosen singers, and two of them were allowed to rise at one time. The worldly business in which Mr. Wilson was constantly engaged, was some excuse for a low salary, and might have justified a petition for his release, but it was no excuse whatever for neglecting to pay a debt when it fell due.

At this time the number of families in this congregation was seventy-seven, and of communicants, 144.

In December, 1850, Mr. Wilson tendered his resignation. The congregation adopted the following, which may seem very strange, so far as the connection between the statement and resolution is concerned:

Whereas, it is the duty of every congregation to support the pastor, and: Whereas, the said congregation has withheld from the said Alexander Wilson that support which a faithful pastor merits; therefore:

Resolved, That no objections be made by the congregation to the prayer of said Petition to Presbytery.

The congregation then attempted to settle with him on the basis of $300 a year. Mr. Wilson claimed fifty dollars more, and after appealing to Presbytery, his claim was paid, and for once the congregation was free from debt.

It would indeed be difficult to tell how a pastorate, involved in such constant and harassing troubles, could be successful. The services of Mr. Wilson were doubtless rendered ineffective by them, and yet the congregation maintained its position and even advanced during his pastorate.

Two candidates were again before the congregation December 6th, 1851, some twenty-five of the "male members" being present. Rev. Thomas Cunningham received 17 votes, and James Forsythe, S. Rev. Lorimer moderated in this call, February 24th, 1852. Rev. Cunningham having declined to be a candidate, the blank was filled by inserting the name of Rev. James C. Forsythe. He was installed October 27th, 1852. His salary was at first fixed at $500, but was afterwards raised to $600.

A meeting was called October 31st, 1857, to regulate the singing of the congregation, at which the clerk was directed to stand at the pulpit rather than in the center of the house, the vote being 40 to 25. It was also decided, by a vote of 50 to 15, that the psalm should be sung without lining out. Gradually the old landmarks that had arisen with the necessities of the time, faded away; they filled their purpose; and while these customs were dear to many, they yielded to the claims of the present, and were willing to give up all but the principles which as a church they had maintained. The pastorate of Rev. Forsythe was brief. He resigned April, 1858.

The congregation enjoyed considerable prosperity under his ministry; and with the union of the two churches, the Associate Reformed Congregation of Cadiz ceased to exist.

We now return to the other branch of this church.

THE ASSOCIATE CONGREGATION OF CADIZ

was organized A. D. 1813. Its first place of worship was a "tent," which had been pitched a short distance north-west of the present depot of the P., C. & St. L. R. R. This tent was a house of worship for the pastor alone. It was about six or eight feet square, was reached by high steps, was under a roof that fell off to each side, and was boarded up in front to about the height of the pastor's waist. The congregation sat outside on logs, and benches made of split timbers, under the shade of the trees. If it did not rain or storm they experienced no inconvenience. A slight rain did not spoil our mothers' bonnets. In the winter, services were held in the court house or in private houses of members. The location of the tent was finally changed to a part of Mr. Grimes' farm, nearer town, where afterwards a brick church was erected. It does not appear that there was entire unanimity about the new church. The first resolution in regard to it was adopted May 7th, 1827, at a meeting of which John Miller was chairman, and James Lee, clerk.

Resolved, That this congregation take up a subscription to build a brick meeting-house, sixty feet long and forty feet wide.

The following January a motion was lost that the ground then occupied be sold and the house built on a lot owned by George Craig. It was, however, ordered, that "the trustees have discretionary power as to the size of the meeting house, according to the funds subscribed." A second resolution was "to see what additional funds could be raised, provided the house would be built on George Craig’s lot;" an expedient which, resorted to some forty years later, secured the present location of our church. At a subsequent meeting it was determined not to build on Craig’s lot, not to build a house in connection with the Union congregation, and that the house should be one story.

On the first of January, 1830, the fifty-eight pews were appraised, the values ranging from $2.25 to $7.50, the whole value, $275.50. The largest subscriber was to have the first choice. No pew was to be sold for less than its appraised value. No person could purchase more than two pews nor less than one. The minister’s salary was to be assessed by a regular per centum on the pews so sold. In case any one refused or neglected to pay his assessment, three months grace was to be given him, and if not paid at that time, the pew was to be offered for sale to make up the deficiency. In case it did not sell, the pew was to become the property of the congregation. It was further made the duty of the trustees to raise what money they could from those not purchasing pews, in order to lighten the assessment on purchasers, until all the congregation, or those subscribing, shall have obtained pews. It will readily appear how, under such financial management, this congregation would be kept out of debt. There is nothing in the records to show that they were ever seriously troubled. Occasionally they got in arrears, but prompt measures were taken to remedy this. How much more the Word preached would profit under such circumstances. There was no action taken but such as was based on principles of fairness and honor. A good financial pilot was at the helm. Shrewd business ideas prevailed then as now. In a slip torn from a will which had been written at that time and was used to mark the page in the congregational book, I find the following bequest of Mr. W——, of Bloomfield: “I will and bequeath my big brass clock to whichever of my sons-in-law will give the most for it.” But as that was only a book-mark of the clerk, it would not be fair to hold the congregation responsible for it.

This church was not well located. The site was low, much lower at that time than is indicated now. Arrangements for ventilation were not much cared for in those days, and had not been needed when worshipping at the tent. Many a good sermon has been spoiled by bad air. In June, 1847, a new and violent form of disease suddenly appeared among the flock. From what we can learn from the symptoms of this fatal disease, it was the typhoid fever. No such name was then known, and, as it was at first confined entirely to members of this congregation, it was universally called the “Seceder fever.” Many of the members died from it, among whom was the amiable wife of the pastor. This disease spread throughout the country, and showed equal violence when preying on the members of other churches and upon heretics. Many of those attacked died. The physicians, ignorant of its nature, in some cases, resorted to that old foe of human life—the lancet, and aided the disease in quickly reducing the sufferer. The angel of death brooded over many homes, and the mourners were often met on the streets. It is impossible to tell certainly the cause of this malady. It was asserted that a stranger who had contracted the disease abroad, was that Sabbath a worshipper, and that there was a pool of water under the church. This was denied. Some light is gained by a bill which I find for digging the earth from about the church. Impure air must have given rise to the disease, and this may have resulted from a full house with too limited a supply of fresh air and too much of what had been de-oxodized a score of times. The miasmatic influence was in the air, and may have arisen from physical causes not even guessed at, as has often been the case since. The house was blamed, and whether guilty or not, it was well that suspicion attached to it. It never had been comfortable. Members of the congregation attended services as usual, but strangers sought some other place of worship. It was therefore resolved soon after to build a new meeting house, forty-five by fifty-five feet, and a committee was appointed to select a site. A committee was also appointed to find how much more funds could be raised to build in town than on the present lot. Lot numbered 103, on Steubenville street, was purchased from William Reid for $200, and a frame house, yet standing, was erected thereon. Part of the material of the old church was put in the foundation of this building. This house was occupied until the time of the union of the churches, when it was sold to Mrs. Hatcher, for $1,400.

This congregation was organized about 1813, though occasional sermons had been preached here before. The first record is Oct. 1st, 1814. "The Rev. John Walker accepted the call of and took charge of said congregation." He was installed sometime between the 24th of May and the 4th of July, 1815, and was at the time twenty-nine years of age. His time was divided between Mt. Pleasant, Unity, and Cadiz. The installation occurred at Unity. Revs. French and Allison were appointed to this duty, but Mr. Allison was prevented from attending. Thomas Maxwell was ruling elder. The winter following, William Braden was installed, and Joseph Braden ordained to that office. The roll of the congregation rapidly increased under Mr. Walker's labors. But, alas! poor human nature. Discipline soon had to be exercised against offenders. Greater and lesser offences were strangely combined in the early discipline of the church. The first offence was intoxication. The offender was rebuked, and notification given to the congregation. The friends of the next accused, will pardon me for naming her—"Mrs. Agnes Crossen confessed her sorrow for violating the laws of the church and breaking her own vows, in that she was married without publication." She was accordingly admonished—possibly not to fall into the same offence again, which she was not likely to do while her husband lived—and then restored to church privileges. The musters of the time were fruitful causes of offence, also the huskings and choppings. Any one who sets up the claim that there was no drunkenness at that time, need only read over the session records.

Rev. John Walker, the first pastor of this church, was, in many respects, a remarkable man, and was esteemed a preacher of great ability. His utterances were easy and rapid. With a quickness of perception, he knew well to say the right thing in the right place. His manners outside the pulpit were agreeable and easy. Outside of his profession he was shrewd and active. He was instrumental in securing the location of Franklin College at New Athens, and would have gone forty miles on horse or foot to secure a student for that institution. He was a good physician, and had an extensive practice; and, as he looked after both the souls and bodies of his hearers without receiving much pecuniary compensation, he became very popular, and was widely known. He conformed to the custom of his time and preached sermons of immoderate length.
To this day there are some who delight to tell how long the services were at the Tent. This was signally so on Communion Sabbath, when there was the most minute examination of heart and life. The offences of the time were most severely denounced, and the man who had tossed a copper, marked the ashes with a stick, or resorted to any similar form of divination, did not go unwarmed. The weightiest matters, too, were not neglected. Persons who grew tired of sitting, rested themselves by standing. The Sabbath evening examination on the shorter catechism properly belonged to exercises of the day. To criticize a sermon, or comment on the dress, manners, or bearing of the minister, would have been esteemed a serious offence. The people carried their Bibles, and committed the text, and the older members of the family were questioned about the introduction, divisions, and application. Dr. Walker was released about 1820, and gave his entire time to Unity. He died March 8th, 1845, in the sixtieth year of his age, and thirty-sixth of his ministry. His body rests in the cemetery at Unity, and on his tombstone are the words:
"Remember ye not, that when I was yet with you I told you these things!"

Mr. Thomas Hanna accepted a call to Cadiz, Piney Fork, and Wills Creek, and was ordained as pastor, December 16th, 1821. The number of families in the Cadiz church at this time was forty-one, in Piney Fork, thirty-eight, and in Wills Creek, fourteen. He was soon after released from the Wills Creek branch. In 1835 his whole time was given to Cadiz.

At the time of Mr. Hanna's settlement, the session consisted of Robert, Henry, and Thomas Maxwell, James Alexander, William Henderson, and James and Thomas Lee. William Miller and Richard Hammond were ordained, and James Hanna installed June 19th, 1834. Francis Grove was installed, and Matthew Clark was ordained and installed, May 11th, 1837. Dr. Hanna was not a fine pulpit orator, nor was he regarded as a profound theologian. He was, however, a very instructive preacher. His sermons were often so systematically and minutely divided that one who took away the divisions carried the whole sermon. He had a very kind heart and was eminently sympathetic. It became convenient for him to live in Washington, Pa., owing to his marriage with Miss Foster, then, and for many years after, the honored Principal of the Washington Female Seminary. He was released April 24th, 1849. Dr. Hanna took charge of the church in Washington in May, 1850, and continued as pastor until physical prostration compelled him to give up the field. He died February 9th, 1864, in the sixty-fourth year of his age, and the forty-third of his ministry. His memory is fondly cherished by his people.

There were many offenders against the law and order of the church during his pastorate, and there was not one meeting of the session in six that did not have one or more persons arraigned. Intemperance was doubtless the prevailing evil. But it was often the case that persons felt encouraged in carrying complaints to the session, just as children do to a parent or teacher. One man, when riding to Cadiz, had boasted with an oath, that he could ride down all the Whig horses in the county; occasional hearing; marrying without publication; shooting for pennies; dancing; neglect of ordinances; unfair dealing; cutting bee trees; teaching on fast days; with an occasional sin of a graver nature, occupied most of the session’s time. The cases seemed to grow the more they were dealt with, until the 7th of April, 1848, the following committees were appointed: Robert Maxwell and Thomas Lee were appointed a committee to confer with three persons, whose names I withhold, for occasional hearing; James Hanna, a committee to confer with three others about attending a ball; William Henderson, a committee to confer with W. W— and wife, for neglect of ordinances; and Matthew Clark, a committee to confer with J. D. B—— for the same offence. A large amount of business, truly, for one day. The church militant was rapidly earning the title of the church litigant. Discipline, however, in most cases was effective, and the erring were brought back. The membership of the church constantly increased, and its spiritual condition was healthy.

On the 5th of June, 1839, Thomas Lee presented the following:

Resolved, That all members of the Secession Church who approve of a resolution passed at a political meeting, held in Cadiz on the 15th day of May, A. D., 1839, approving of the course pursued by the State and National Administration on the subject of abolition, are guilty of a breach of the moral law, and the principles of the Secession Church.

The vote on this resolution stood, ayes four, noes four. The moderator asked time to decide. A month later he cast his vote in the negative. A month later the vote was reconsidered, and the resolution adopted. An appeal from this was taken by Robert Maxwell. The whole matter was finally referred to Synod. The Church had already seen the “impending crisis,” and was preparing for the noble stand she afterwards took and maintained on the day of our nation’s trial.

The Solemn Covenant engagement to duties is also recorded, although the date is not given. It was about 1840. There are but seven persons members of this church at the present time who joined in it. The scene must have been one of deep solemnity when the congregation, with uplifted hands, swore to live for Christ. A single sentence of this lengthy engagement will suffice: “We do, with our hands lifted up to the Most High God, hereby confess, and before God, angels, and men; solemnly declare, that we desire to give glory to the Lord by believing with the heart; confessing with the mouth; and subscribing with the hand, that in Him we have righteousness and strength.”

The congregation was vacant about a year, when Rev. J. R. Doig was called, and became pastor in May, 1850. He was never installed, owing to a neglect on the part of Presbytery. He had supplied the congregation during the preceding winter, in the absence of Dr. Hanna, who was most of his time in Washington with his new wife. When, therefore, Dr. Hanna resigned in the spring, Mr. Doig was ready to take his place. He was at that time a professor in Franklin College, and continued to reside in Athens. His work, therefore, could not have been so effective as it otherwise would have been.

Mr. Doig, in the fall of ’51, was taken ill, and remained so during the entire year. This, together with the death of his partner, induced him to resign, after having held a last communion with his people.

Rev. Samuel Patton was the next pastor. He was ordained and installed December, 1853. His relations with the people are said to have been pleasant, although he was not here long enough for his labors to be deeply impressed on the minds of the people, or to gain a lasting place in their memories and hearts. Two causes may have led to his early removal. He married in the congregation, and possibly imagined that what is true of a prophet is also true of his wife. He had preached at Detroit before settling at Cadiz, and the people there desiring his return, he accepted their call, and was released July 12th, 1854. His pastorate lasted only a little over six months. He labored but a short time in Detroit, when the Master called him home to an early reward.

For about two years the congregation depended on supplies, and but few records were kept to show either its spiritual or financial condition. Mr. J. S. McCready was ordained and installed as pastor, August 7th, 1856. He soon gained a deep hold on the affections of his people. He was kind and unobtrusive in his manners, courteous in his bearing, yet firm as a rock in his convictions. His preaching largely partook of these characteristics, and was of a kind to set forth the truth in both its attractiveness and strength. He had early imbibed an abhorrence of oppression, and showed by his conduct the sincerity of his faith. The religious instruction of the colored children of Cadiz had been neglected. He organized, and during his ministry superintended, their Sabbath School.

The Universalists had for some years gained a foot-hold in Cadiz. In 1857, Mr. McCready was challenged to discuss the question by an able debater named Emmet, who had often been engaged in discussions of this kind. The debate began Tuesday morning, and closed Friday evening. A writer who was familiar with the debate, says: “The truth was not only vindicated, but rendered triumphant. The Universalists were repelled, routed, and overcome.”

They have not had a single sermon in Cadiz since.

Meantime, the two churches, whose separate history we have been tracing, were growing more closely together. Unkind words and acts had been hidden away under the sacred mantle of charity. It was even hinted that the churches were already one—one in worship and in heart, and so nearly one in faith that but few were able to tell the difference between them. There were over-cautious ones who deprecated union, over-timid ones who deplored it. God’s time had come. The two streams were to flow in one, and to be so commingled that the separate source of either could not be traced. The Associate Synod was meeting in Pittsburgh, and the Associate Reformed in Allegheny City, on the 26th of May, 1858. The vote on union had carried in the Union Synod. Great anxiety was felt about the result in the Seceder Synod. It was also carried there. The union was complete. A few discontented spirits still sought to maintain the Associate Church, but they had not the force of head or heart of a Marshall or a Clarkson, and no recruits could now come from over the water. Their numbers, small at first, are now less than 1,200. The United Presbyterian Church, pledged to maintain the truth and forbear in love, continued to bear forward the history of the illustrious ones whose bans had been proclaimed.

This cause in Cadiz found itself now with two congregations, two houses of worship, and one pastor, Rev. Forsythe having resigned. A basis of union between the two congregations was agreed upon. Each congregation was to choose three of its members, who were to constitute the Board of Trustees. The church was to be called the "First United Presbyterian Congregation of Cadiz." The trustees of the Associate congregation were to transfer all their property to the new Board. The United Church was to occupy the brick house, and the pews in it were to be forever free. Each congregation was to have an equal number of elders. The United Congregation was to meet on the last Saturday of March to ask for the moderation of a call. These conditions were signed by Andrew Jamison and John McFadden, on the part of the Union Church, February 20th, 1859, and by Martin Wilson and John Carnahan, on the part of the Seceder Church, February 26, 1859. In accordance with these propositions, the Seceder church building was sold to Eliza Hatcher for $1,400, and the congregation worshipped in the old Union Church. The elders of the Seceder Church were Alexander Haverfield, William Miller, John Carnahan, Daniel Mitchell, and Thomas Jamison—five. Those of the Union Church were Joshua Hamilton, Robert Davidson, and Charles Warfel—three. Andrew Jamison and James C. Love were elected to make the number equal. Mr. Love was installed, but Mr. Jamison declined to serve.

Rev. McCready demitted his charge April 19th, 1859. On the 3d of the following May a call was unanimously made for his services by the First U. P. Congregation of Cadiz. This call was accepted on the 14th of the following June. The congregation seemed now to enter on a career of unbounded prosperity. But already the dark shadow of civil war was beginning to fall on our country. The aggressions of the slave power were felt. This church had always, in the branches from which it came, denounced slavery. But now, alas! its extension became largely a political issue. On this subject our church gave no uncertain sound. Rev. McCready had not waited to be an abolitionist until slavery was overthrown. He was not one of those braves who stab the dead Percy. He was a patriot; and was willing to seal with his blood the testimony of his lips. He entered the Union army, August 14th, 1862, as Captain of Company H, 126th O. V. I. Two months later he wrote to his congregation: "Your pulpit was not silent in regard to those sins which have convulsed the land. Nor did it give an uncertain, non-committal sound, taking its cue from the dictation of party politics. It was ‘known and read of all men.’ Seven years ago, when thousands of statesmen and divines who are now with it, were against it, it preached what it preaches today, and what all the pulpits are coming rapidly to preach. It had not to be impelled by divine judgments. To these truths, which I have preached to you, dear brethren, if I fall in this struggle, I am a martyr. But for their influence, I had not been here. My home was as dear, my life as sweet, my congregation as near to me as others are to them. As for official promotion, I was stepping down. As for money, I am probably losing. Besides, what is money, compared with life and home comforts?

“But you and I had raised up a standard for God’s truth. We stood up for its divinity. We had talked—the time came to act. God demanded sacrifice in its behalf. The clergy of the South had shown how much they were willing to dare for this error—this great self-evident lie—this blot upon civilization—this outrage upon all religion, and all virtue. God put the question to us: Were we willing to do and dare as much for truth, for liberty, for country? What could I reply? I may fall! your beloved sons and brothers may fall! Be it so. Our testimony in behalf of God’s truth is not lost. You will reap the benefit of it in future years.”

As such letters from the absent soldier pastor were read, feeling in the congregation ran high, and some refused to hear them at all. Others, who had sons and brothers and husbands with him, were indignant at this, and for a time the peace of the congregation was much disturbed. C. L. Vallandingham was nominated for Governor of Ohio in 1863, by the Democratic party. He was at the time banished for disloyalty, and was stopping at the Clifton House, in Canada. The following resolutions were passed by the Session:

- Resolved, That it is utterly inconsistent with the principles of the United Presbyterian Church to vote for C. L. Vallandingham for Governor of Ohio.
- Resolved, That we consider that voting for that candidate involves a great moral question, and that no member of the United Presbyterian Church can vote for him without ignoring his principles on slavery and countenancing and encouraging disloyalty.

These resolutions were read on the 27th of September. Rev. McCready obtained leave of absence and came home soon after. He moderated the Session, and dispensed the Supper Oct. 17th, 1863. It would have been strange if he, fresh from the field of battle, where his brave boys then were (save those who had fallen), could have been silent. He was not wont to conceal his convictions of the truth. Thirteen families and a large number of adherents withdrew from the church. A few of these never formed any ecclesiastical connection, but most of them were received into the communion of the Presbyterian church of Cadiz. It was my privilege to meet Mr. McCready after his return from the army.
He talked of the field at home but spoke no words of bitterness. Doubtless he would have suffered more had it not been a time when such mighty emotions were swaying the hearts of men. In the army, Captain McCready was the same in modesty, candor, firmness, bravery, and courtesy, that he was at home. His company, brave as any in the army, united with him in daily prayers to the God of battles. On the 6th day of May, 1864, Mr. McCready was wounded in the left arm during one of the terrible battles of the Wilderness. He was carried from the field, taken to Washington, and finally died in Baltimore, at the house of Mr. Carson, Sept. 7th. His end was peace.

The church was draped in mourning. All classes wept for him. Even those who had spoken harshly, now spoke with broken utterance. But no sincerer mourners gathered about his bier than the colored men whose constant friend he had been. He, of all the ministers who served this church, is the only one who died while its pastor.

On the night of the 31st of December, 1864, your present pastor arrived in Cadiz to fill, by arrangement, the appointment of Rev. Mr. McKenzie. Another brother had been secured to preach, but generously refused when he heard that I was present. But as he was paid the regular per diem for listening to me, I did not feel that he was greatly injured.

The appearance of the house was not in the least prepossessing. The arched ceiling had been painted blue, and an occasional board had partly broken loose from its fastenings and threatened to drop, like the famous sword of Damocles. The pulpit had come down from its original height, but was still reached by a flight of stairs—about eight in number. An ill-fitting window was directly at the back of the little pulpit-box, and an occasional blast of wind from the north reminded me that there was a broken pane in it. The day was unpleasant and the congregation small. A slight survey of the audience convinced me that there were many earnest and intelligent men and women among them.

I preached twice afterwards, and in the early spring was elected pastor. The entire congregation united in the call. My regular labors began the third Sabbath of May, 1865. I was ordained and installed June 23d, 1865, by the Presbytery of Wheeling. Rev. Campbell preached the sermon from 2d Cor. v., 20.

The congregation was at the time somewhat discouraged. Withdrawals had been frequent. The salary promised was $800. It was, after six years, generously raised to $1,200. It was still the custom to preach two sermons on Sabbath, with a half hour's interval. Changes, however, had been made. The word "male" had disappeared from the record of our proceedings, and the singing was led by a choir, most of whom were ladies. The excuse for this was that the young men of the congregation had generally gone to the army. The Sabbath School was re-organized, and Charles Warfel elected Superintendent. The Session consisted of Joshua Hamilton, Daniel Mitchell, Alexander Haverfield, John Carnahan, and Charles Warfel. Robert Paxton and Alexander Campbell were ordained and installed May 11th, 1866; J. D. Osburn and Samuel Kyle, May 22d, 1868, at which time Ebenezer McKitrick was installed. T. C. Grove and James Megaw were ordained and installed Nov. 8th, 1873.

The propriety of erecting a new church had been considered for some time. The first meeting was held in 1867. The proposition was discussed at some length, and with considerable warmth, and was voted down by an overwhelming majority. Subsequent meetings were held, at which it was argued that the church was needing repairs; that in a few years a new one must be built; that the present one could not be made comfortable; that it was located at such a distance from the main street that it would not be possible to keep a good pavement to it; that money was plenty, and the congregation abundantly able to build. It was argued on the other hand that the old church could be repaired at a very slight cost; that although money was plenty, building materials were high; and that the present location was eligible, affording ample hitching room for the horses. The advocates of the new church constantly gained in number, until finally in the fall of 1868, a committee to solicit subscriptions was appointed. The congregation subscribed liberally. About $7,000 was raised, and there was nearly $2,000 in the treasury remaining from the sale of the Associate church. It was finally determined to build on a lot adjoining the church property on Steubenville street. This lot was purchased and additional subscriptions taken. Many of the congregation, however, had talked about the present location. But Mrs. McNutt still occupied rooms in the old hotel located on it, and was, in her infirmity of mind and body, unwilling to remove. She died about this time (January, 1869). A meeting of the congregation was called. The matter was left in the hands of a committee, and $4,000 additional was subscribed on condition that the new church be located on the McNutt lot. This lot was purchased for $3,200. The congregation had now six lots, and the jest was made that they were going into the real estate business. The transaction, however, was carefully managed. The old church property was sold for $2,500, and the lot first purchased, at an advance of $100. The old buildings were also sold, and work on the new church commenced. As it progressed, changes were made in the original plan. The ladies had joined in the work and raised a considerable sum with which to carpet and cushion the house. The children also helped. The people had a mind to the work. Comfortable stalls were erected for the horses.

The basement of the church was occupied in the spring of 1870. As the work neared completion, a proposal was made to sell the pews and stalls. To this there was earnest opposition. An effort was made to raise the balance, but failed. The pews were then appraised. The lowest valued at $10 and the highest at $100. The total appraised value was $2,700. The pews were all sold, and also the stalls.

The building committee consisted of John C. Jamison, Walter Craig, W. L. Hamilton, Andrew Jamison, William Hamilton, Sr., and David Cunningham. Their work was done to the entire satisfaction of the congregation, and was a standing evidence of fine business management. The Ladies' Mite Society contributed $2,000. The church was dedicated on Thursday, Nov. 24th, 1870 (Thanksgiving Day).

The congregation has suffered heavily from removals. Joshua Hamilton, one of the oldest members of Session, removed to Springfield. His loss was deeply felt, as also the removal of the younger members, Alexander Campbell and Samuel Kyle. Death, too, has greatly thinned our roll. Dr. Wilson, a man who had been eminently useful in the church, who had been a power in its meetings for prayer, was gathered home January 10th, 1872, aged 87 years. Our hearts were again made sad by the sudden death, from typhoid fever, of Elder C. Warfel, whose name had often appeared on our records. He was at the time a ruling elder and trustee, and had long and efficiently superintended the Sabbath School. He died February 2, 1871. His remains were taken to the church, which was thronged with the congregation and friends, among whom were many colored people, to whom he had been a constant friend.

Alexander Havercld was, after a few months' illness, released from earthly labors January 24th, 1875. His death made a breach in the Session which could not be easily filled. He had long been a devoted friend to the congregation, and was a man of large religious information.

On the 11th of August, 1876, Daniel Mitchell died. He was one of the oldest members of the Session, and a man of irreproachable character. He was conscientiously regular in the observance of religious ordinances.

Of the history of our church in Cadiz no one need be ashamed, while all her true children may rejoice in it. I have neither sought to magnify the virtues nor palliate the faults of our fathers. One loved pastor fell in the great struggle for the life of our country and the freedom of a race. From her communion there went forth as heralds of the Gospel such men as Hans W. Lee, Thomas B. Hanna, and John B. Clark, who, though early called from earth, held places second to none in the churches, and in the affections of the people. A daughter of one of the early and earnest men of this church is pointing the sisters in Egypt to the Lamb of Calvary.

While the Associate Reformed congregation was doubtless the first regularly organized religious society in Cadiz, it is probable the citizens were first ministered to by the Presbyterian minister at Beech Spring—Rev. John Rea. He is said to have preached his first sermon in Cadiz in 1804, standing under the shade of a large forest tree, which stood on the site of the present court-house. At this time, it is thought, there were but two buildings in the village, namely, Garret Glazener’s blacksmith shop, and a log dwelling-house.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The first mention of Cadiz, as a separate congregation on the records of the Presbytery of Ohio, appears under date of Wednesday, June 11th, 1816. The Presbytery having met at Raccoon, in Washington county, Pa., applications for supplies were made from Cadiz and Freeport. Mr. Joseph Stevenson was appointed to preach at Cadiz on the second Sabbath of July, and Elisha Macurdy one Sabbath at his discretion. Rev. John Rea was appointed to supply at Freeport on the first Sabbath of July. The Presbytery met again at the same place on October 15th, 1816, and applications for supplies were again received from Cadiz and from Freeport. On the following day, “Mr. [John] Munson, a licentiate from Presbytery of Hartford [Ohio], was granted leave to itinerate, and ordered to supply Cadiz the fourth Sabbath of October, and Freeport, the first Sabbath of January.” Rev. Moses Allen was directed to preach at Cadiz on the second Sabbath of December, and John Rea, one Sabbath at discretion. Rev. Joseph Anderson was likewise appointed to preach at Freeport on the third Sabbath of November; and Andrew Gwinn, at Cadiz, on the second Sabbath of November. From this time on, supplies seem to have been sent as frequently as Presbytery could furnish them, until the installation of a regular minister.

The following account of this church is taken from an historical sermon delivered by Dr. W. P. Shrom at Cadiz, on August 21st, 1884:

If the records to which we have had access are correct, there was but one white family living within the limits of what is now Harrison county previous to the year 1799. This was the family of Mr. Daniel Peterson, and his place of residence was at the forks of Short creek. During the year 1799, Mr. Alexander Henderson and his family moved into this vicinity from Washington county, Pennsylvania. In the following year immigration set in, chiefly from western Pennsylvania, and the ancestors of a large portion of the present inhabitants made this region their home—the names of Craig, Jamison, McFadden, and others being almost as familiar then as now.

The immigration was evidently very rapid, for in 1820 the population of the county is given at 14,345, and in 1830 at 20,920, while the population as given in the census of 1880 is only 20,455, being less than that given in 1830 by 465.

The county was organized in 1813 from portions being struck off from Tuscarawas and Jefferson counties. The town of Cadiz was laid out in 1803 or 1804, by Messrs. Biggs and Beatty. The present ground was then covered by a heavy forest, and inhabited by the Indian and such wild animals as abounded in this region. The town was laid out at this precise point because of its being the junction of two roads—the one from Pittsburg via Steubenville, and the other from Washington, Pennsylvania, via Wellsburg, leading to Zanesville. Before the building of the National Pike, this was the chief thoroughfare through the State from east to west. Very early in the history of the settlement of this county, attention was given to the organization and building of churches. The first church built in this region was what is still familiarly known as Beech Spring Church, one mile west of the eastern boundary line of this county. Its first building was a small log structure which was destroyed by fire. This was succeeded by a larger one, holding 1,000 people, and was the center to which all Presbyterians tended from a wide range of country. It was at one period the largest Presbyterian church in this State, numbering upwards of 400 members. The Rev. John Rea became pastor of this church in 1804, at which time what is now Cadiz, was regarded as in the central portion of his parish. His first sermon in this immediate vicinity was preached in 1805 in a private house. As was then the custom, he continued to preach at different points in his large parish, and this region became one of these preaching points. The services were generally held on Sabbath afternoons or evenings in private houses or in the log school-house, as was most convenient. This continued until the spring of 1817, when, under the direction of the Presbytery of Ohio, with Mr. Rea as chairman of the committee, the Presbyterian Church of Cadiz was organized.

In his historic sketches, Mr. Rea says: “I first saw the ground on which Cadiz is now located, in 1804, when the place now occupied by the court-house and other public buildings, was a forest of oak, walnut, and sugar trees.” Mr. Rea continued to preach after the organization of the church, as stated supply until 1820. The history of the church from its organization is a little more difficult to trace, from the fact that the early records of the church have been lost. The earliest sessional record we have been able to find is June 18, 1831—so that fourteen years of the most valuable records are wanting.

The church was organized under Ohio Presbytery, and was for a time under its care. Then in 1819 the Presbytery of Steubenville was struck off by order of the synod of Pittsburg, and this church then belonged to that Presbytery until 1839, when the Presbytery of St. Clairsville was organized, under whose care the church is at this time.

In Steubenville records of 1820, Cadiz church appears with several others—the last on the list as “vacant, not able.” The same record occurs in 1821, with the addition that Obediah Jennings, of Steubenville First Church, was appointed to preach at Cadiz. At a meeting of the Presbytery, held April 16, 1822, at Two Ridges, Matthew McCoy appeared before Presbytery, and presented a call for the pastoral services of Mr. Donald McIntosh, and was granted permission to prosecute the call before the Presbytery of Ohio, of which he was then a licentiate. The call was accepted, and Mr. McIntosh was ordained and installed pastor of this church, October 17th, 1822, Rev. Obediah Jennings preaching the sermon, and Rev. John Rea delivering the charge (whether to people or pastor is not stated).

Rev. Donald McIntosh was the first pastor that served this church. He was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, but came to this country early in life, and graduated in his collegiate course at Jefferson College, in the year 1817, and was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Ohio.

He continued to serve the church as pastor until 1826, when the pastoral relation was dissolved on account of ill-health. Mr. McIntosh then returned to the State of New York, and from there he went to Florida, in 1828, where he died in 1830. Thus early in life the first pastor passed away to his eternal rest and reward.

The second pastor was the Rev. John McArthur. He was born March 25, 1803, in Argyle, Washington county, N. Y. He removed to Ohio in 1819, took the degree of A. B. at Jefferson College in September, 1825, and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Hartford, October 3, 1827, then in session at New Lisbon, and was ordained and installed pastor of the united charge of the Ridge and Cadiz churches—in the former Nov. 19, and in the latter Nov. 20, 1828, and continued until October 3d, 1837, when his relation was dissolved by the Presbytery of Steubenville. Mr. McArthur then removed to Miami University, and entered upon the duties of a Professorship in the Greek language, to which he had been elected, and for twelve years he taught in this university, and preached to a small congregation until his death, which occurred in 1849.

The third pastor was Rev. James Kerr. He was born Dec. 23, 1805, in the county of Wigton, Scotland. He emigrated to America in 1832. He finished his education at the University of Glasgow, was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Baltimore, April 27, 1836, and was ordained as an evangelist by the Presbytery of Winchester, April 22d, 1837, and labored in Hampshire county, Virginia, until July 15th, 1838, and being invited he visited the Church of Cadiz as a candidate, and in due time received a call and was installed pastor, May 6th, 1839, by the Presbytery of St. Clairsville, and remained sixteen years the incumbent of said office until his death, which occurred April 19, 1855.

The fourth pastor was the Rev. William M. Grimes, who was born at Crabapple, Belmont county, Ohio, September 15th, 1821. He took the degree of A. B. at Franklin College in September, 1844, was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of St. Clairsville on the 18th day of April, 1850, and was ordained and installed pastor by the same Presbytery in the Church of Concord, November 20th, and in the Church of Beallsville—the one-half of his time in each place—and remained in this field of labor about six years. A call from the Church of Cadiz, Ohio, was presented in the Presbytery of St. Clairsville for the ministerial labor of the Rev. William Grimes, and after considerable discussion, the pastoral relation between Mr. Grimes and the Churches of Concord and Beallsville was dissolved on June 17th, 1856, with a view of his accepting the call from Cadiz, and he was installed pastor of this church in October, 1856, by the Presbytery of St. Clairsville. A call from the First Church of Steubenville, Ohio, was presented before the Presbytery of St. Clairsville for the ministerial labors of the Rev. William M. Grimes, and the pastoral relation between the Rev. William M. Grimes and the First Church of Cadiz was dissolved on January 25th, 1876, after a pastorate of over nineteen years. Very much might in truth and justice be said about each of these pastoral relations, but especially the last. Its unusually happy relations of pastor and people—the unusual results—all would be sufficient reason for continued remark. But we deem it best to leave this for future occasion, your own familiarity with this portion of the pastoral history making this the less necessary.

The fifth pastor was the Rev. Robert Dickson, called September 18, 1876. Mr. Dickson was born in County Down, Ireland, in 1818, and was educated at Belfast Royal College. The first nine years of his ministry were spent in Ireland. He came to the United States in 1850, and continued his ministry in Pennsylvania and Ohio. He served a term during the war, as Chaplain of the 100th Pennsylvania Regiment. He was called from the Second Presbyterian Church of New Albany, to take the pastoral charge of the church in Cadiz, and continued at this place until 1881, when he was called to Clifton, Ohio. The church was without a regular pastor for about two years following.

Your recent pastor is the sixth in order. The installment took place on the 14th day of June, 1883. What the results will be remain to be seen.

There have been since the organization of the church thirty elders elected, of whom ten are now living, and constitute the present session.
The first were Matthew McCoy, John Hanna, and William Ramsay, who seemed to have been elected at the time of organizing the church.
[Among other early elders were Robert McCullough, John Megaw, and Peter Barger]. Most of these have been men who have left a good record, and whose influence is seen and felt to this day in the church and in the community.

I have not been able to secure either the names or the number of those who composed the church at the time of its organization, except three elders already named. But previous to the pastorate of Mr. Kerr, there had been 323 identified with the church. During his pastorate, 279 were added. During the pastorate of Dr. William M. Grimes 664 were added. During the pastorate of Dr. Dickson, 146. Since the dissolution of his pastorate, 52 have been added, making a total membership of 1,464, of whom far the larger part have passed from the church militant to the church triumphant, and we trust uniting with the former pastors in praizing God in the upper sanctuary—464 remain, while many are scattered to every quarter and some are holding places of responsibility and trust in other churches. Two at least are preaching the Gospel to other churches.

The ground on which the present church building stands was purchased from Daniel Kilgore for a consideration of $150.

There have been two church buildings on the ground. The first was built about 1831 or 1832. It was a large building for the time, with galleries on three sides, and was built at a cost of about $5,000 or $6,000.
The money was raised for building by subscription, and paid partly in
and the wood work by Mr. Robinson. Before the erection of this building the services were held in the Court House and in private houses, and also in the Associate Reformed Church.

With the building of the present church you are all too familiar to need any word from me. It was dedicated May 25th, 1871, the sermon being preached by Dr. S. J. Wilson, of Allegheny Seminary, the house costing about $40,000.

The method of ministerial support in those early times was quite liberal, as compared with the cost of living. Subscriptions were some­
At its organization in 1820, the church had to receive support from the committee of Domestic Missions, which then composed the present board of Home Missions. It has not in the past been forgetful of and will not in the future forget its debt of gratitude to this agency of the church, for helping new and growing churches in the days of their infancy and necessary financial weakness. The church has had two seasons of special revival, one in 1840 under the ministry of Rev. James Kerr, when many were awakened and converted, and another beginning in 1865 and continuing for two years, during which time 120 persons united with the church. This was under the ministry of Dr. Grimes.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH*

was established in Harrison county as early as the year 1801. The first Methodist emigrants settled on the south branch of Short creek, and consisted of Joseph Holmes, Samuel Humes, William Walraven, Isaac Buskirk, and others. Soon after, Thomas Dickerson came from Redstone, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, and cleared some land and built a cabin near the settlement. Through his labors and influence a Class was formed, prayer meetings were established, and the people instructed in religion. Following the labors and progress of this good man, came the itinerant minister—Asa Shinn—and the first M. E. church of the county was erected and named “Dickerson.” In the year 1802, the first seed was planted by Henry Johnson, who penetrated the forest to that place, and gathered to him after awhile a Methodist class. As early as 1814, there were societies organized at Rankin, Deersville, Bethel, Morris West’s, two miles northeast of Cadiz, and at Cadiz. In the years 1807-8, Rev. James B. Finley traveled through this region and organized a number of classes in the western part of the county. He preached with such power as to impress himself and his message upon the minds of the people, so that neither were ever forgotten. Rev. Finley has given us in a book of his life, an account of his work during these years and a description of his circuit as it had been formed by the Rev. James Watt. It was called “Wills Creek Circuit,” and was not less than seventy-five miles in extent. “Beginning at Zanesville and running east, it embraced all the settlements on the Wheeling road, on to Salt Creek and Buffalo fork of Wills creek, thence down to Cambridge and Leatherwood, on Stillwater, including all the settlements on its various branches to the mouth, thence up the Tuscarawas through New Philadelphia, thence up Sandy View to Canton, and on to Carter’s, thence up Sandy to Sugar creek and down said creek to the mouth, thence down the Tuscarawas to William Butts, thence down to the mouth of White Woman, thence after crossing the river, and including all the settlements of the Wapatomica, down to Zanesville, the place of beginning."

About this time the societies and the classes in the territory of Harrison county were placed in West Wheeling Circuit. This circuit was composed of three counties, Harrison, Belmont, and Jefferson, and belonged to the Baltimore Conference. While in the Baltimore Conference, Thornton Fleming was presiding elder, and R. R. Roberts preacher in charge. At a conference held in 1808, the West Wheeling Circuit was transferred to the Western Conference, with James Quinn, presiding elder; Jacob Young, preacher in charge; and James Wilson, James Watts, and Thomas Church, assistants. Together with these brethren were others, named, Revs. Michael Ellis, Caleb Humphrey, and Archibald McElroy, the latter at that time a vigorous local preacher, and afterwards a regular itinerant for years.

The early history of the church scarcely furnishes a more singular character than that of McElroy. He was without advantages in his youth, and of very limited education. But endowed with good sense, great natural and moral courage, and withal an honest man, he enjoyed the confidence of all who knew him. Possessed of stout frame, manly bearing, and open and frank countenance, and being absolutely "fearless in pursuit of the right, he won the respect of all, even those of the baser sort." At a time when the traffic in intoxicating liquors was some part of almost every man's business, and when scarcely a man was to be found, either in the pulpit or out of it, to open his mouth upon the subject, McElroy came forward with lance and trumpet—an unpolished lance, but a trumpet with no uncertain sound—and made war with the beast. He delivered hundreds of temperance lectures, the most electrifying ever heard in the State of Ohio. Without any temperance organizations, or newspapers to support him, with many of the clergy opposed to him, and very few to encourage him, alone in those pioneer times, he lifted up his standard. As a preacher he was earnest, enthusiastic, and successful. It is said that at one of his quarterly meetings the church could not hold the congregation, and they resorted to a grove in the neighborhood. The master of a dancing school in the place and some of his pupils went to the church late, and finding it vacated, danced awhile, when the master said: "Now let us go to the church and get converted." When they reached the ground the preacher, Rev. Swayze, was closing his sermon with a thrilling exhortation. The master listened for a few minutes, and fell to the ground crying aloud for mercy. McElroy was on hand, and when he saw the dancing master down, he improvised an altar and cried: “All hands to, here’s a bull in the net, here’s a man who taught the people to serve the devil by rule, and I pray God to break his fiddle, convert his soul, and turn his heart to sing his praise.” Rev. J. B. Finley says in his Autobiography that this occurred at St. Clairsville, but Alfred Brownson insists that it took place at Cadiz.

In those years, when churches were very small, and when the settlers lived in cabins, and many of them in rude huts, the people sought the groves, and camp meetings were of wonderful interest and success to the new and restless church. We have accounts of these meetings being held within the bounds of West Wheeling Circuit as early as 1808. In that year there was one held at St. Clairsville, under the management of James Quinn and Isaac Young, at which, with very little ministerial assistance, more than one hundred were added to the church.

A camp meeting was held near Cadiz in 1812, which was attended by many of the leading preachers of the Conference. Bishop Asbury came from a meeting at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, to attend the meeting at Cadiz. Jacob Gruber, then presiding elder of the Ohio District of the Baltimore Conference, accompanied him. Rev. William Lambden, who was probably in charge of West Wheeling Circuit, was present, with the able support of such men as Rev. J. B. Finley, Rev. Michael Ellis, and Rev. Archibald McElroy. The order at the meetings was generally good; but a slight interruption occurred on Saturday night. On that occasion Bishop Asbury took the stand at midnight, and after saying some kind things, told the rabble that the Methodists were not all sanctified, and if they persisted in disobeying the rules of the meeting they would find that out. The Bishop preached during the meeting. The ministrations were all able, and much good was done.

Just when the Methodists of Cadiz commenced their worship is not known. As early as 1806 or 1807, a few families met together from time to time, going from house to house with prayer and religious services. More frequently, than at any other place, these services were held at Brother James Simpson’s, the father of the renowned Bishop Simpson. The services continued until about 1815, when the society was organized, and a Board of Trustees chosen for the purpose of erecting a house of worship. This Board consisted of Matthew Simpson, the Bishop’s uncle, William Tipton, Joseph Tingley, and Thomas Inskeep. On April 20, 1816, they purchased the lot at the south corner of Spring and Buffalo streets, and erected thereon a small church. In this church the Methodists of Cadiz worshipped without pride or ostentation, and without preserving much history, for twenty years.

In this building, which is still standing, although now much dilapidated and used for a tenement house, the renowned Bishop Simpson preached many of his most powerful sermons. In fact, he was at this time sent as an associate pastor to the church, and made his home there.

Being of very progressive views, he suggested to the church the advantages of having a Sabbath School. The older and wiser brethren shook their heads and said it would not do to bring the children into the church with their dirty faces on Sabbath, that they had hard work enough to keep the house clean and in order as it was. The young preacher finally succeeded in the organization of a Sabbath School in the house, upon the condition that he would give the house an extra sweeping after Sabbath School. This is reputed to be the first Methodist Sabbath School established, and the only one existing in the entire county for many years.

Before the removal of Mr. Simpson, measures were introduced with a view to the incorporation of the Society, and to replace the old church with a more commodious and better structure. In December, 1835, the Legislature of Ohio passed an act of incorporation, and Matthew Simpson, Edward Tipton, William Tingley, Robert McKee, James Poulson, Phillip Trine, John Davis, George White, and Elijah Laizure are named in the act as trustees. The Matthew Simpson named at the head of the list was an uncle to the Matthew who afterward became Bishop Simpson.

When this church was incorporated, Cadiz was the chief appointment of the then St. Clairsville Circuit. The other appointments were Dickerson’s, New Athens, Stiers, Uniontown, Eaton’s, Wesley Chapel, Bates’, Neff’s, Weige’s, Crozier’s, Mt. Glenn or Cross Road, Scott’s, Bridgeport, Martin’s Ferry, Cose’s, and Harrisville; two preachers on the circuit. The first record of names of preachers is Rev. I. C. Taylor, pastor in charge when the second church was built, and James Drummond, his colleague, the latter having been received on trial at the conference the spring previous.

Cadiz remained on this circuit until 1866, when it became a regular station. The lot upon which the second church was built, and upon which now stands the third commodious structure, was deeded to the congregation by William Tingley and wife. Mr. Tingley was permitted to live many years afterward, and was one of the church’s most ready and willing workers. Among other names as members appear Edmond Tipton and wife, Robert McKee and wife, Michael McConnell and wife, Charles Chapman, wife and daughters, Judge Turner, Mrs. Major Lacy, Thomas Thompson, Matthew White, Mrs. William Arnold, and Mrs. Dr. McBean. All of them have been called from the church militant to the church triumphant. The second church building was commenced in 1835, but was not completed until 1836. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. Wesley Browning, of Wheeling. Bishop Simpson, who was stationed then in Monongahela City, preached at night.

The present beautiful church building was erected in 1876.

NOTTINGHAM AND FREEPORT CHURCHES.

For several years after the beginning of the present century, the territory comprising Nottingham congregation, together with the region where Cadiz and Freeport are now located, as well as many other points in eastern Ohio, were mission fields, sustained in part by the Synodical Home Mission Fund of the Presbyterian Church, which had its officers and headquarters in Pittsburgh. For nearly sixteen years there was only a mission station in the vicinity where Nottingham Church now stands; and all was connected with the pastorate of Crabapple. So far as known, Rev. John Rea, pastor of Beech Spring and Crabapple, preached the first sermon in this region, on the second Sabbath of June, in the year 1806, on the old Cunningham homestead. The history of

has been made familiar to many residents of Harrison county, through the sketches published in 1886, in the "Reminiscences" of Dr. Thomas Crawford, for forty years the pastor of this congregation, and though the good Doctor's form is now missed from its accustomed place in the church, it is to be hoped the remembrance of his genial, helpful, kindly presence will live forever in the hearts and minds of his congregation and their posterity. In detailing the history of this church, we will follow Dr. Crawford's own words:

In this sketch we propose some historical reminiscences of the Presbyterian Church of Nottingham—its pioneers, pastors, progressive work, and historical incidents. In the preparation of this narrative I was

For several years the territory of this congregation was considered within the limits of Crabapple and Cadiz churches. Although eight to nine miles distant, it was traveled by our forefathers, in hot and cold weather, and often on foot, more regularly than do some of us who live but two or three miles distant from the house of public worship. To remedy this inconvenience and exposure, a preaching point was established in this vicinity, and the first sermon ever preached by a Presbyterian minister in this part of Harrison county was by the Rev. John Rea, D. D., in the summer of 1806, at the root of a large chestnut tree, standing on the eastern slope of the hill, near where the barn now stands on the Cunningham farm, and about one-half mile from this house.

The same element that settled Western Pennsylvania settled Southeastern Ohio, and gave to it, as to the former, the Presbyterianism which both possess to a very large extent. Those pioneers came into an unbroken wilderness, which required hard labor and much self-denial to gain a subsistence, and for a time many of them lived in rude and uncomfortable cabins, but were not disposed to leave their religion behind them, as is too frequently the case with many emigrating to a new country, for no sooner had they found a home for themselves in the western wilderness, than they sought a place where they might worship the Lord our God.

Ninety-five years ago this whole region was an unbroken forest, and over these hills and through these valleys roamed the wild beast of the wood, and the more savage men, with their implements of death. Near to this site passed the Indian trail to their hunting grounds in the Muskingum and Scioto countries. At the close of the Revolutionary War, peace was declared, but only established between Great Britain and the United States.

The Indians still continued hostilities on our frontier settlements, partly owing to the deceptions and frauds imposed upon them by the early traders. Scenes, however, began to change for the better, which opened up the way for a daring and enterprising population to come into the Northwest Territory and to settle in companies, even before Congress declared Ohio to be regularly constituted a State.

But those emigrating so early not only encountered the common hardships of a frontier life, but for a few years were continually exposed to attacks from savage warriors, under such cruel leaders as the renegade "Simon Girty," "Old Cross-fire," and "Red Jacket," who, with their Indian forces, infested this whole region, and continued more or less for several years after the white population began to locate in communities near some garrison or block-house, into which they were often compelled to flee in times of alarm, both for defense and safety.

The first settlements in this vicinity were made from 1798 to 1803. Abraham Brokaw, John Glenn, William Ingles, George Laport, Thomas Wilson, Arthur Barrett, — Jones, and — Moffitt, and perhaps others. These were but the advance of a great mass of people that in a few years scattered over a large tract of country. So, as by magic, the Northwest Territory was settled, and signs of civilization were evident, by subdued forests, newly erected dwellings, followed by the school house and church building.

So far as we can learn, the first families that came into the bounds, and identified themselves with the congregation of Nottingham, were those of Abraham Brokaw, John Glenn, Richard Baxter, Adam Dunlap, Samuel Lafferty, and John Price. These were the pioneers of Presbyterianism in this region, and amid many trials and discouragements labored earnestly to establish a nucleus of a church, in which they finally succeeded.

When peace was ratified with the Indians, and Ohio admitted into the Union of States, the tide of emigration began to flow strongly in this direction. In 1802, the great western thoroughfare passed not more than three-quarters of a mile from Nottingham Church, which was the route from Pittsburgh by the way of Steubenville, and from central Pennsylvania by the way of Charleston (now Wellsburg), forming a junction in this county, which induced the location of Cadiz; then running west nine or ten miles, forked on the lands of William Ingles (now owned by James Roland). The right branch of this road passed through the “White Eye” plains, and on by “Fort Defiance,” into the Sandusky region; the left branch running by the way of Zanesville into the Scioto and Miami valleys. Howe, in his “Historical Collections” of this State, says, “that previous to the construction of the National Road through Ohio, this road was perhaps traveled more than any other route west of the Ohio river.”

Mr. Ingles, then residing at the junction of the western division of this road, found it necessary to keep a public house, for the accommodation of the unexpected rush of emigration into this and other settlements further west. In the spring of 1802, he erected a large double log cabin, considered in those days a magnificent house; and supposed to be the first “Hotel” ever kept in the bounds of this county. A part of the remains of this old tavern was still to be seen, until quite recently, as a monument of the past, though vacated long since, and in a retired and lonely spot, less than one mile north of this place, but deserted both by residents and roads.

Some award to our county seat the first public-house erected in the territory of Harrison county, which, according to history, is incorrect. Cadiz was laid out in 1804, by Messrs. Biggs and Beaty. In 1806, is the first record we have of a hotel kept in that town, by Jacob Arnold.

At this day of comparative ease and plenty, we know but little of the self-denial, privations and hardships endured by the early settlers who came into the wilderness to find a home. They mostly emigrated from New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and some of them soon sought for a place where they might worship God according to the dictates of conscience, and after the order of their Puritan fathers. But few of the first inhabitants were religiously educated, and especially in the Presbyterian faith; and that few were necessitated for a time to travel some distance to worship in the church of their choice. In 1804, the church was organized at Crabapple, by the Presbytery of Ohio, under the direction of Drs. McMillan and Ralston, nine miles distant from our present house of worship. A committee was appointed to confer with Rev. John Rea, D. D., and the elders of Crabapple church, as to the propriety of establishing a mission station in the "Ball-Lick" settlement. It was thought better, for the time being, that all in this vicinity should form a connection with that congregation, until further developments of divine Providence, which soon indicated a change, because of the distance and inconvenience of travel, constraining those in this region to have a place for public service nearer home.

In 1806, a stand was erected in the forest at the base of a large tree (before noted), where Dr. Rea preached his first sermon in this part of the county. Six weeks after, he returned and held religious services in the same place, encouraged by a much larger attendance than on the former occasion. A council was held by a few, in connection with the preacher, as to the propriety of an organization at this point; but on more mature reflection it was thought advisable to make this an outpost for missionary work, tributary to Crabapple church, and that their pastor should continue to labor here part of his time, preaching and administering the sealing ordinances of the church to such as desired them, to which all parties agreed. Although there was no formal organization of this church until several years after, yet it was virtually organized under the ministry of Dr. Rea, who continued for five years to preach occasionally at this point, a part of the time in a private house, and in suitable weather, in the grove.

In 1808, a tent was erected on the south side of the graveyard, by Abraham Brokaw, Robert Baxter, John Glenn, and Adam Dunlap. This tent was occupied in the summer season for eight or ten years, and the house of Robert Baxter in the winter or stormy days.

In the call that was made out in 1805 by the church of Crabapple and vicinity for the labors of Rev. John Rea the one-half of his time, the representatives of Nottingham interest signed said call with the express understanding that a part of the pastor's services would be employed in this region, if desired. Fifty pounds per annum was the sum specified in the call, one-half in cash and the other half in produce; the latter to be delivered at a certain flouring mill near the mouth of Big Short creek. In keeping with these conditions, the supplies of grain increased rapidly, at such prices as 20 to 25 cents a bushel for wheat, and 12 to 25 cents for corn and rye. It soon became necessary for the minister to have his large stock of produce manufactured and put into market, that he might procure some funds wherewith to replenish his library, and supply the wants of his household. When a sufficient number of barrels and lading were ready to fill a flat boat, a man of approved character and ability was employed to take the oversight of the cargo, and ship it down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to some southern port, make sale, and bring back the returns, which, after paying expenses, were often quite small.

Mr. Rea was the first minister of the gospel of Christ to gather a group of worshippers in the western part of Harrison county, and amid great difficulties and much self-denial, continued his mission to this people until the Beech Spring congregation presented a call for the whole of his time, with a salary of one hundred pounds sterling, payable semi-annually, which he was constrained to accept in 1810, and immediately occupied all his time in that church.

Mr. Rea established the Nottingham Mission, in 1806, and served it at stated times from the beginning, until 1810, when all his labors were required at Beech Springs, where his pastorate continued forty-five years, and during all this time, he was much beloved and appreciated by the people. The older members of the congregation were enthusiastically attached to him, both as a preacher and spiritual adviser, and well they might be, for he was untiring in his exertions for their wel-

Thomas B. Clark, a licentiate of the Presbytery of Hartford, Ohio, came into this vicinity in the spring of 1811, and supplied the Mission Station every fourth Sabbath for six years; for there was no formal or-organization of a church here then, though often considered and desired by the scattered families of the “Ball Lick” settlement, but from some cause unknown to us, it was still postponed, perhaps from the pretext that regular preaching, and the sealing ordinances were enjoyed at this place, as an outpost of Crabapple.

Mr. Clark was ordained and installed at Crabapple by the Presbytery of Ohio, June, 1811, and continued to preach there, and fill this appointment until he was dismissed in 1818. He had the credit of being quite punctual in his engagements, and rarely failed to meet his contracts for public worship, although his labors were abundant, for his pastorate covered a territory of about fourteen miles square.

When coming to this place, his road passed a flouring mill, on a branch of Stillwater. Being a conscientious and zealous man, he was exceedingly annoyed by the running of this mill on the Sabbath, and was in the habit of reproving the miller (Mr. Logan) for his desecration of the Lord’s day. On one occasion, when coming to his preaching place at the “Old Tent,” as he passed on Sunday morning, near the hour of public service, discovering that the mill was in motion, he stopped his horse, paused for a moment, as if reflecting on What Washis duty, at length dismounted and tied up his bridle-strap, went into the mill to dissuade, if possible, his reckless friend from a continued violation of civil and divine law. But Mr. Logan evaded the minister, for, going out at the rear door, he locked it after him, and coming round he secured the other door, “making,” as he said, “a prisoner of the parson,” and keeping him confined until the hour of public worship had expired.

Then Mr. Clark, for a few moments, directed his discourse to the transgressor, and kindly remonstrated with him on what was his duty in reference to the claims of God and the commonwealth, and in view of his family and himself in future. His exhortations were not lost, for the Lord succeeded these efforts to the reformation of Mr. Logan, who became the warm friend of Mr. Clark, changed his course of life, and in a few months made a profession of religion under his ministry.

In the spring of 1821, Rev. William Wallace, an evangelist, under the direction of Steubenville Presbytery, came into this neighborhood, and after preaching here and elsewhere for about six months, he made application to Presbytery, by request of the people, for an organization of a church at the “Tent.”

The request was granted, and Mr. Wallace was chairman of a committee that organized the Church of Nottingham, November 17, 1822, with twenty-two names on the roll, as follows: Archibald Todd, Nancy Todd, Thomas Morrow, Jane Morrow, William Crawford, Adam Dunlap, Abraham Brokaw, Margaret Brokaw, Elizabeth Lafferty, Samuel Lafferty, John Glenn, Nancy Glenn, John Price, Mrs. Price, William Hamilton, Elizabeth Hamilton, John Reed, Ann Reed, Robert Baxter, Margaret
Baxter, Mary W. Wallace, and Sarah McKibbon.

The following persons were elected ruling elders, and immediately ordained and installed, namely: Archibald Todd, William Crawford, and Thomas Morrow.

Rev. William Wallace, a member of the Presbytery of Steubenville, having spent a few months in this and other missionary points in the western part of the county, a call for one-half of his labors was made out by the congregation of Nottingham, March 18, 1822, signed by Archibald Todd, Robert Baxter, and fourteen others, moderated by Rev. John Rea, and carried up to the April meeting of the Presbytery and put into the hands of Mr. Wallace, who, signifying his acceptance, was duly installed pastor.

The stipend was to be paid quarterly, one-fourth in cash and three-fourths in produce. Money was scarce, and little to sell with which to procure it. The products of the ground were few, until the wilderness was subdued and turned into cultivated fields; and after a supply of grain was had, the markets were so distant, the labor of shipping so tedious and costly, that when the expenses were paid the agriculturist had little left.

The whole amount of salary promised Mr. Wallace was but three hundred dollars per annum, paid equally by this and the Freeport Church. To us this appears like short allowance for the preacher, as it surely was. Yet it would go as far in those days toward supporting a family as more than double the amount would do with the prices of these times.

Rev. William Wallace, son of John and Margaret (Anderson) Wallace, was born in Chester county, Pa., March 17, 1787. He finished his academic education at Jefferson College, Pa.; studied Theology under the direction of James Hervey, D. D., and was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Presbytery of Steubenville in the spring of 1821. He entered the service of his Divine Master as a domestic missionary, going through the new settlements of eastern Ohio, and hunting up families of the Presbyterian order, and when finding one or more such families in any destitute place, he would publish a notice for preaching at some convenient point, and in this way was instrumental in gathering up and forming nuclei from which have arisen some of our most prominent congregations.

After reporting progress to Presbytery, he was appointed chairman of a committee that organized several churches in this territory, and among them the Churches of Nottingham and Freeport, and to each of the last named places he gave one-half of his labors for eighteen years, until his health so failed that he was compelled to resign his charge in 1839, and after two years of increasing infirmities, he died of heart disease, December 18, 1841, in the fifty-fifth year of his age, having spent twenty years in the work of the ministry.

Rev. Gilbert M. Hair was then in charge of this congregation two years. Mr. Hair graduated at Washington College, Pa., in 1838, studied Theology (while teaching an academy in Martinsburg, Ohio), with Henry Hervey, D. D., and was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Presbytery of Richland, October, 1840. He received a call from the congregation of Nottingham, and was ordained and installed pastor of this church in the Spring of 1841, by the Presbytery of St. Clairsville, and continued in this relation two years. Another opening offering itself more to his mind, he then asked and received a dismission in April, 1843, to the church at Wellsburg, W. Va. Mr. Hair, after laboring successfully in fourteen different charges, died June 5, 1884, at Elyria, New York.

Thomas R. Crawford, a licentiate of the Presbytery of Steubenville, immediately received a call from the church of Nottingham. He began his ministerial work October 19th, 1846, and in due time was ordained and installed pastor, continuing in this office forty years. He graduated at Franklin College, Ohio, in 1844, and on the same day was chosen Professor of Mathematics in said College; and during the time of his teaching there, he read Hebrew under the President, Rev. A. D. Clark, D. D., and Theology under Dr. Rea. He soon left college for the purpose of completing his studies; and was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Presbytery of Steubenville, October 6th, 1846.

He was born near New Athens, Ohio, March 8th, 1821, and when but a few months old, his parents and family removed to Jefferson county, near Steubenville, Ohio. At the age of fourteen, he began his academic studies, preparatory to entering college. In the eighteenth year of his age, he united with the church under the ministry of Rev. Jacob Coon, of New Athens, during a revival of religion that occurred among the students in 1840.

After he received authority to preach, he took a traveling certificate to the Presbyterian church and Presbytery of Marion, but never reached the place; for when ready to start, Dr. Rea insisted on him filling an appointment at the Church of Nottingham, which was vacant, and at once he received a call, and returning his traveling certificate to the Presbytery of Steubenville, was regularly dismissed to the Presbytery of St. Clairsville, and in due time was ordained and installed pastor of said church, for two-thirds of his time; and the one-third at Deersville, as stated supply for nine years, from October, 1846, when he was called to spend all his time and labors at the Church of Nottingham.

At the time of my installation as pastor, the Board of Elders consisted of Archibald Todd, Nathan Tanneyhill, Alexander Russell, Alexander Beall, William Kirkpatrick, and John W. Milligan. Shortly after, Joseph Rea and Allen Wallace were added to the Session; but one of the former is still living and quite infirm, being far advanced in years. All those men were reliable and trustworthy in counsel. In 1863, A. J. Rea and Samuel M. Wallace were introduced into the Session. In 1870, John W. Hilton, Jacob Compher, and William Scott were added to the Board of Elders.

The first house of worship erected by this congregation was a log-cabin, which stood a short distance above the “Old Tent,” and was built in 1821 by Abraham Brokaw, Thomas Morrow, Archibald Todd, Adam Dunlap, and Samuel Lafferty. The last two named men having good teams, were requested to draw in the logs, whilst the balance of the labor was divided according to choice. The ladies, by personal efforts, procured the nails and glass. It was a rude structure, but answered the purposes for the time being. In the winter season, a pile of logs was built on an earthen platform in the center of the building, and fired up to warm the auditory, whilst the smoke escaped as best it could from the roof. This house corresponded in the main with the improvements of those days, and was equal in architecture to the dwellings of the worshippers. There were no Boards of Home Missions and Church Erection in those times to aid young and feeble congregations to build houses or sustain preaching in their midst. There was, however, a Synodical Fund for the purpose of aiding mission stations. Money was scarce and hard to be got; and had there been convenient markets, there was not grain to sell, for the land was not yet cleared out, but crops were produced abundantly in proportion to the ground brought under cultivation.

The second house of worship was a brick building, fifty by forty feet, and began to be constructed in 1828, but was not completed until 1833. The congregation worshiped in this edifice twenty-nine years, until it became rather small for the people that desired to attend church, to be comfortably seated. It was deemed necessary to call a meeting to consider

According to previous notice, the people met in the month of August, 1859, to confer upon the subject, in relation to building a third house of worship. The books were opened at said meeting, and about one-half of the whole amount of money necessary to complete the structure was subscribed on sight, in less than thirty minutes. Duplicate papers were prepared and sent around to the absentees, and in due time returned with the required money pledged. A building committee was appointed at a meeting held February 3, 1860, and directed to erect a house seventy-three by fifty feet in the out, with gallery in front, twenty-feet story in audience room, and tower one hundred and six feet high.

The committee, after receiving sealed proposals on a certain day, let out the contract to Mr. John McGraw, of Wheeling, W. Va., who undertook and finished the entire building ready for occupancy, in a satisfactory and workman-like manner. And this house was dedicated, free from debt, to the worship of Almighty God, April 18th, A. D. 1861, and continues to this time.

FREEPORT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

This church was organized in 1821, by the Presbytery of Steubenville. Messrs. Holliday, Leaper, and Kincade were ordained and installed ruling elders. For five years before that date the congregation had received occasional supplies from Presbytery, some account of them already having been given in connection with the sketch of the Presbyterian Church of Cadiz. The first pastor was Rev. William Wallace, who divided his services equally between Nottingham and Freeport. He supplied both pulpits until the spring of 1839, when he was compelled to resign, on account of failing health. He died of heart failure, Dec. 18, 1841. Mr. Wallace was a man of ardent piety and practical worth. The Freeport church attained a larger membership and greater efficiency under his pastorate than it has ever enjoyed since.

Rev. John Hattery, an evangelist from Washington Presbytery, became stated supply at Freeport in 1843, for two-thirds of his labors, and remained until 1847. He was succeeded by Rev. Samuel Mahaffey, who served as stated supply for something over eight years. From 1857 to 1859, occasional supplies were sent by Presbytery; and in the latter year Rev. John B. Graham became stated supply, giving Freeport a portion of his time, and remained until 1865, when he was dismissed to the Presbytery of Washington. After his departure, Rev. Samuel Mahaffey was again invited to supply Freeport for one-half his time, and served the congregation from 1867 to 1873. He was succeeded, three years later, by Rev. H. R. McDonald, who remained until 1881.
CHAPTER XIV.

DICKERSON, BETHEL, AND RANKIN CHURCHES.

The following Historical Address, giving an account of the early history of Dickerson Church, was delivered by Mr. Joseph Holmes, one of the trustees, at the dedication of the new building, near Cadiz, on October 7, 1888:

The history of the Dickerson Society commences early in the present century. As early as March, 1801, Joseph Holmes moved to the farm on which he lived and died. Soon after, the following settlers came into the neighborhood: Joseph Huff, William Walraven, Thomas Dickerson, Eli Dickerson, William Scoles, James and Thomas Worley, Abraham Holmes, and William Welling. In the Fall of 1802, Thomas Dickerson settled on the farm on which Dickerson Church is located. He was a man of strong religious convictions, and during the same Fall, he succeeded in the organization of a prayer-meeting circle, at which he gave religious instruction to those who attended the meetings. The meetings were held weekly, from house to house in the neighborhood, and they increased in numbers and interest from time to time, under the supervision of Thomas Dickerson. In 1804, a Society of Methodists was organized, with Thomas Dickerson duly appointed class-leader.

Among the first members of the society were: Thomas Dickerson and wife, Joseph Holmes and wife, William Walraven and wife, William Scoles and wife, James Worley and wife, Abraham Holmes and wife, Eli Dickerson and wife, William Welling and wife, and James Jones and wife. Preaching was held like the prayer-meetings, from house to house. In those days, sermons were like angel’s visits, “few and far between.” The first quarterly meeting was held on the farm of Joseph Holmes in the summer of 1805. This meeting was conducted by the Rev. Asa Shinn. Methodists and others from beyond and about Wellsburg, on the Ohio river, and from the Holmes Church, on Short creek, came to the meeting, not only to renew the friendship of other years, but to aid in pushing forward the cause of Christ.

It may seem strange to those of modern times, when we describe the arrangements for holding this first quarterly meeting. The meeting was held in the grove. The seats were made of rails, logs, and puncheons. A few puncheons were used for a platform. In each of two trees, standing about six feet apart, a notch was cut, and in those notches was placed a puncheon about sixteen inches wide, and on this the preacher laid his Bible, and this was the make-up of the preacher's pulpit. The meeting was one of great spiritual power, and several persons united with the church.

The second quarterly meeting was held on the farm of Thomas Dickerson in 1807, with the same arrangements, and like results. In 1813, a quarterly meeting was held in the barn of Thomas Dickerson, conducted by Rev. James B. Finley. From 1807, preaching services became more frequent. Asa Shinn, James B. Finley, Bishop Roberts, and the Rev. McElroy, were some of the early itinerate ministers who have preached in our community.

The first church was built in 1817; although the selection of a site for a church had been made in 1806. The first burial in the cemetery was in 1807. The ground was conveyed by Thomas Dickerson and wife to Joseph Holmes, William Scoles, William Welling, James Worley, and Abraham Holmes, as trustees of the M. E. Church.

The organization of the Dickerson Church is clearly traceable to the labors of Bishop Asbury and Bishop McKendree, from the fact that the first members of the church came from Virginia and Pennsylvania, direct from the fields of labor of these great and good men. But directly to Thomas Dickerson, more than to any other, belongs the honor of the organization of the church at this place. He was blessed with a fine social nature, and a vigorous constitution. His piety was deep and uniform. . . . From 1817 to 1828, the church moved steadily forward. In 1828, Thomas Hudson and S. R. Brockunier were appointed to the West Wheeling Circuit, and this circuit included the Dickerson appointment. During this year, there were some accessions to the church, and the membership was greatly revived. But the year 1829 is especially remarkable for its great spiritual prosperity at Dickerson's. During this year, Thomas Hudson and William Tipton were travelling the circuit and Joshua Monroe, Presiding Elder.

At the first meeting of the Quarterly Conference that year, a resolution was passed to hold a camp-meeting on the farm of Thomas Dickerson. The meeting was appointed, and was largely attended. In the "Life and Times of Rev. Thomas M. Hudson," he says, as the meeting progressed, the work of revival greatly increased, awakenings becoming more general, and conversions more frequent every day. . . . He tells us, that among the numerous subjects of that great revival that he received into the church at Cadiz, were many interesting young men, five of whom became ministers of the Gospel. Bishop Simpson was one of them.

Some weeks after the close of the camp-meeting, Hudson determined to hold a meeting at the Dickerson appointment. As a result of this meeting, over sixty persons professed conversion. This revival included to a greater or less extent the families of the entire neighborhood, and bore its fruit for many years.

From 1829 to 1835 the church was in a prosperous condition. But during 1835 and 1836 many members of the Dickerson appointment removed their membership to New Athens. The number of members thus removing was about twenty-five. This greatly weakened the Dickerson Society. This removal of membership was caused by a new church being built at New Athens. But those remaining still adhered to the Society with a strong faith. In 1839, the second camp-meeting was held, on the old camp ground. As a result of this meeting, several persons united with the Society.

From 1840 to 1850, the membership remained about the same. There were several additions to the church during 1851 and 1852, but during the winter of 1853, a revival meeting was held by Rev. D. P. Mitchell and Rev. J. D. Knox. This was the last protracted effort ever held in the old church building.

It was the opinion of many and the desire of others, that as soon as Thomas Dickerson was gone, the old church should be abandoned, and that the members of the Society should either go to Cadiz or New Athens—but those persons were much mistaken. Thomas Dickerson died. The workman fell, but still the work went on. The mantle of Thomas Dickerson was resting on the shoulders of his son, Joseph Dickerson. By much labor of his own, with such help as he could secure, the second church was built, in 1854. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Dr. Nesbitt. After the building of the new church, the Society received new life. The membership increased from sixty-five in 1856, to ninety-three in 1858. For the next two years after, the membership remained about the same.

The next four years were years of war, and while the Society and community were loyal to the church, they were also loyal to the Government. In proof of this, twenty-eight of the young men that were either members or patrons of the Society gave their services to their country. Within a circle of one and one-fourth miles from the church, thirty-eight of our best and bravest young men left for the seat of war. It is not saying too much when we declare, that the Dickerson neighborhood furnished more soldiers to the square inch than any other country-place in the county.

This history would be deficient without the names of its class-leaders from its organization to the present. They are as follows: Thomas Dickerson was leader for forty-eight years. During the latter part of his life, he had an assistant. The next, in order, were Joseph Dickerson, Joshua Dickerson, A. H. Thomas, William Perry, Washington Soule, Joseph Holmes, Abraham Holmes, R. B. Green, S. M. Dickerson, and G. B. Holmes. From 1804 to 1855, there was but one class. In the latter year, it was divided into three classes, and a leader appointed for each class.

Time has removed nearly all who were born before the building of the first church. Only three remain with us [in 1888]. They are, Asa and Mary Holmes, and (Knob) Joshua Dickerson. Only seven persons now hold their membership with us who were members of the Society when the second church was built. The others have either died or removed to other places. Joshua Dickerson's membership—now the oldest—dates from 1837.

In the history of the Society, we deem it necessary to briefly refer to others who have gone from our midst, and were either members of the church or Sabbath school.

From the family of William Scoles, two young men went forth to preach the Gospel. The family of James and Susan Jones furnished five Methodist preachers. A. H. Thomas died when he was Presiding Elder. During the last decade, O. W. Holmes and W. H. Dickerson have entered the ministry from this Society; also, David Porter, who was a member of the Sabbath school.

There are others who have taken high positions in life. From a class of twelve young men in the Sabbath school, which I had the pleasure of teaching, were Capt. Joseph Dickerson, Capt. Thomas McElravy, Capt. John Finley Oglevee, ex-auditor of the State of Ohio, Col. J. T. Holmes, of Columbus, Abraham Thomas, a minister of the North Ohio Conference, Dr. Hamline Welling, of Columbus, Capt. William McElravy, of Iowa, William Oglevee, of Illinois, Rev. D. S. Porter, David Harrison of Kansas, James Oglevee of the 126th O. V. I., now resting in the cemetery at this place, and Robert McElravy, who was killed in the capture of Richmond.

BETHFL CHURCH.

The following sketch of Bethel Church was written by Mr. J. Fletcher Birney, of Means, Ohio, and printed by him in 1894:

Rev. James B. Finley, the pioneer of Ohio Methodism, organized the first class in this vicinity, at what is now the home of Joseph L. Thompson, one mile north of Cadiz, in the year 1811.

It consisted of nine members, as follows: Morris West, leader; John Baker, Sr., and Margaret Baker; William Foreman, Sr., and Sarah Foreman; Zebedee Baker and Cassandra Baker; Joseph Kent, and Elizabeth Chaney.

In 1814, when John Birney, Sr., from Ireland, and his brothers, Hugh and William, with their families, from Pennsylvania, arrived here, two other classes were formed, one at the Baker farm, one mile west of the church, on the Cadiz and Jefferson road; the other at what is now the home of Mrs. Samuel Pittinger, one-half mile south of Jewett. Hugh Birney, Sr., and John Baker, Sr., led the classes alternately. Robert McKee and Richael McKee, and Nancy Moore (Foreman), joined soon after.

The three classes continued until 1818, when Bethel Society was formed. In March of that year, one acre of land was purchased of Robert Orr, for which twenty dollars was paid. It was deeded to John Baker and others. On this lot the old log church was built. It was about thirty feet square, and stood about twenty-five feet west of and parallel with the present building. The door was in the center of the east end. The pulpit was in the west end, with a window on each side of it. The seats were split logs, with legs in them. In the rear part of the house, they were placed north and south; and in the fore part, east and west.

The preaching then, was at noon on Thursdays.

Rev. Jacob Young followed Rev. Finley as circuit preacher.

From the building of the church, to 1830, the following persons united with the organization: Hugh and Jane Brown, Robert and Margaret Birney, Mrs. Keziah Wheeler, Mrs. Nancy (Foreman) Moore, Mrs. Mary Ralston, Abraham and Deborah Busby, Rebecca Busby, William Kent, Sr., and his wife.

From 1830 to 1840: Samuel Foreman, Lemuel and Mary Green, Ellen Gallagher, Otho and Mary Baker, Evan Baker, John and Leucintha Ralston, Charles Conaway and wife, Lydia Ryan, John Brindley, Sr., and wife, James McKee, Hamilton and Hugh Birney, Jane Scarlot, Abram and Mary Mattern, Mary, wife of George Lease, Sr., Cassandra Fife, Jacob and Rebecca Dennis, Jacob Lewis, Sr.

Of the above named persons, but four are now [1894] living (Hamilton Birney, John Brindley, Sr., Jane Lease, and Deborah Maxwell). The rest have gone to their reward. Most of their bodies rest in Bethel cemetery.

The present church is about forty by fifty feet. It was begun in 1839—Rev. Pardon Cook the preacher in charge. Its seating capacity is about 300. The brick was made near where the church stands, by James Means, of Cadiz; the mason work was done by Andrew and James Jelly; the carpentering, by T. W. Wells, who lived near the church. The pulpit, at first, was one of the upper story kind, as it took three high steps to get into it; and the preacher had to stand up to see over the top. The seats were high-backed, and closed at the bottom. The building cost $1,600. . . . It was dedicated by Revs. Edward Smith and A. J. Rich, entirely free from debt, in 1840.

Following were the preachers who ministered to Bethel congregation from 1825 to 1860 (Cross Creek Circuit): William Tipton and W. Hank, 1825-26; J. Monroe and S. Adams, 1826-27; J. Monroe and J.

Bethel appointment was first in the bounds of Knox Circuit, Muskingum District, Western Conference, with James Quinn Presiding Elder. The Conference for that year (1811) was held at New Chapel, Shelby county, Kentucky, on November 1st, 1810. In 1813, it fell into the Ohio Conference, and in 1825, into the Pittsburgh Conference. The Circuit then bore the name of Cross Creek, which it retained until 1834, when it was changed to Richmond. In 1838, the Conference was held at Cadiz, Bishop Enoch George presiding. Bethel was then joined to Cadiz Circuit, which had been formed the year previous. In 1847, the Circuit was composed of the following appointments: Cadiz, Bethel, Athens, and Harrisville. Stiers was added in 1850, and Jefferson in 1852 (formed in 1847, by David Welling). Rumley and Hanover (the latter formed by C. Thorn and W. Devinney), in August, 1853, and Jewett (formed in 1847), in December, 1853. The same year, Harrisville, Athens, Stiers, and Dickerson’s were joined to other Circuits, leaving five appointments. In 1854, Rumley was dropped. In 1864, Cadiz and Dickerson’s were joined, leaving Bethel, Jefferson, Jewett, and Hanover. The Circuit was then named Bethel Circuit, which name was retained until 1887, when it was changed to Jewett. After the formation of the Society at Howard Chapel (Cadiz Junction), in 1892, a new Circuit was formed, consisting of Bethel, Howard Chapel, Mount Hope, and Asbury Chapel, and named Bethel Circuit, which name it still retains.

The District bore the following names: West Wheeling, 1825-26; Barnesville, 1826-32; Steubenville, 1832-36; Wheeling, 1836-40; Steubenville, 1840-47; Cambridge, 1847-76; New Philadelphia, 1876-94.

Presiding Elders, to 1860: Rev. W. Lambdin, 1825-28; Rev. D. Limerick, 1828-29; Rev. J. Monroe, 1829-32; Rev. W. Browning, 1832-

Deceased members, with year of death: Cash Adams, 1892; Maggie C. Ault, 1891; John Baker, Sr., 1847; Margaret Baker, 1829; Otho Baker, 1855; Mary Baker, 1870; Evan Baker, 18—; John Baker, Jr., 1879; Rezin Baker, 1876; Sarah T. Baker, 1892; William Baker, 1890; Laura B. Baker, 1886; Mollie Baker, 1889; Mary Jane Baker, 1863; John Birney, Sr., 1854; Rebecca B. Birney, 1843; Hugh Birney, Sr., 1861; Elizabeth B. Birney, 1828; Nancy C. Birney, 1854; Robert Birney, Sr., 1871; Margaret Birney, 1866; John N. Birney, 1876; Hugh Birney, 1880; Robert Birney, 1884; Rachel M. RANKIN CHURCH.

This church was organized about the year 1814, by Rev. James Roberts and Thomas Dickerson. Services were held for some five years in the log-cabin of Thomas Rankin, during which time, among others, the following members were enrolled: Thomas Rankin, Mary Rankin, James and Hester Rankin, William Johnson and wife, Joshua Dickerson, John Early and wife, Jonathan Early and wife, Margaret Early, Arthur Barrett, Isaac Barrett, William Jones, Rachel Jones.

In 1819, Thomas Rankin donated an acre of ground to the Society on Section 31, in Moorefield township, for the site of a church, and burying ground. Soon after, a log building was erected, and the membership of the church materially increased. At one time, it numbered over 100 members. Four ministers were sent out from this church, namely, Benjamin Johnson, Baruch D. Jones, John Moffit, and Allan Moffit. Before 1850, the membership began to decrease, and at one time the roll was reduced to thirteen members. In 1870, a new building was erected; and since that time, the congregation has regained much of its former prosperity.
CHAPTER XV.

THE RIDGE CHURCH.

This church is the oldest religious organization in Archer township, and one of the oldest Presbyterian churches in Harrison county. The congregation has had four different preaching places or building sites since the church was set off from that of Beech Spring. The first of these was at the house of William Barnhill, then standing on section four. The second location, and site of the first church building, was on the northwest quarter of section eight; the third, on the southwest quarter of section seventeen; and the present building, on the southwest quarter of section twenty-three, near the village of Hanover.

The following history of Ridge Church is condensed from an Anniversary Discourse, delivered by its pastor, Rev. Robert Herron, D. D., at the church on December 13, 1873 (printed at Uhrichsville, Ohio, 1874):

The importance of having a continuous history of this church on record engaged the attention of the session early in the present pastorate. The importance of this was the more manifest from the fact that all the first records, both of the session and the congregation, were lost or mislaid, so that they could not be reached. This solicitude on the part of the session led to the adoption of the following resolution, which is taken from the records of the session of Ridge Church, Sept. 26, 1851:

The Moderator was appointed to collect the facts, and write out a history of the church from its organization to the present time. The Moderator in due time submitted the following report to the session, which was accepted and approved by that body:

"According to the foregoing action of the Session, I have taken considerable pains to collect and arrange, in a historical form, all the facts relating to this church. I regret, however, that after having written to the Stated Clerks of the Presbyteries of Ohio and Steubenville, I am unable to ascertain how many persons were organized into a church here, or who were the ruling elders at the time of its organization."

The report was then presented, containing a historical sketch of this church, drawn from such information as could be gleaned from tradition, in the memory of a few of the older persons yet living among us; from congregational records commencing with the year 1835, and from sessional records commencing in the year 1842, which will be made the basis of our historical sketch, until the commencement of the present pastorate.

The Ridge Church, under the direction of Divine Providence, owes its existence to the following circumstances: The boundary of Beech Spring on the west extended for a considerable distance down the valleys of Stillwater and Connotton creeks. Hence, those members of this church found that their regular attendance upon the means of grace dispensed in the church where they worshipped was attended with great inconvenience. This fact induced them to ask the congregation to give their consent for their pastor, Rev. Dr. John Rea, to come and preach statedly among them a portion of the time. To this request the congregation readily assented. The pastor, with a self denial and zeal in his Master's service, by which his long ministerial life was characterized, cheerfully came to break unto them the bread of life eternal. The extent of this self denial can be learned, partially, it is true, by reflecting on the fact that every time he visited this part of his charge, he travelled from home a distance of from ten to twelve miles, over roads new and poorly made, in a broken country. Dr. Rea's labors commenced in this way in the spring of 1810, and continued until the spring of 1817, a period of seven years. The proportion of time which Dr. Rea spent in this manner cannot be satisfactorily ascertained; but it is judged to have been about one-fourth of it, during this period.

He commenced his labors by preaching in the house of Mr. William Barnhill, on the farm now owned by Mr. John Reed, on the road leading from Smithfield to the road leading from Cadiz to Congress Furnace, and four miles from the point of intersection with it where the church now stands. He preached and administered the ordinances of religion, alternating this place occasionally with other dwelling-houses for a few years, when it was deemed advisable by the parent congregation to settle upon some place for holding their public services. Accordingly, a location was selected on the New Rumley and Cadiz road, on the farm now owned by Mr. John Lisle, three miles north of Cadiz. There they erected a house of worship, in which they were accustomed to assemble during the remainder of Dr. Rea's ministrations among them. This building—a log-cabin—was, doubtless, of small proportions, and of humble pretensions, yet it would sustain a favorable comparison with the dwellings of those who assembled there to worship the Most High; for they did not dwell in ceiled houses.

The Providence of God appeared to indicate in the spring of 1817, that this society should be left without the stated means of grace, by Dr. Rea's withdrawal from them. Dr. Rea proposed to the people, now respectable in numbers, that they should covenant with God, and with one another, that they would remain united together, whatever should befall. This agreement was made by the whole body holding up their right hands. Thus ended Dr. Rea's official connection with the germ of the Ridge Church.

A Presbyterian church was now about to be organized in Cadiz, and it was believed that if this society should continue to assemble in its present place of worship, it would stand in the way of that church's progress. This consideration prompted removal from this spot to another, on the northeast corner of the farm of John Endsley, Sr., now owned by his grandson, John E. McPeck. Here a tent was set up, and around it the people were accustomed to assemble for Divine worship.

The society now felt the necessity of assuming an organized form, as a Presbyterian church. In order to do this, they presented a petition to the Presbytery of Ohio, whose boundary extended thus far westward. This petition was favorably regarded by the Presbytery, and a committee, consisting of Revs. Messrs. Snodgrass and Clark was appointed to visit the field, and organize a church if the way were found to be clear. The committee discharged their duty, and organized the Ridge Presbyterian church, on the 17th day of October, 1818.

The Synod of Pittsburgh ordered the organization of the Presbytery of Steubenville previously to this committee's reporting to the Presbytery of Ohio, as to their action in the premises. This resulted in placing the name of the Ridge church on the roll of the churches of the Presbytery of Steubenville, without its being found on the roll of churches of the Presbytery of Ohio.

The organization continued to worship in this vicinity, occupying private houses and barns for two years, when they removed their place of worship to the village of Hanover, where they erected a tent for preaching purposes, north of where the Methodist church now stands. They met here, and in adjacent dwelling houses, for devotional purposes until February, 1823. But not finding this an eligible site on which to build a permanent house of worship, they secured, by purchase, two acres of ground from Mr. George Hospelhorn. One of these was used for building purposes, and the other was appropriated to burial uses.

At a meeting of the congregation held March 15th, 1823, it was resolved to proceed at once to erect a house of worship, and a tent. The house was for use on inclement Sabbaths, and the tent was to be occupied in favorable weather. The house was to be built fifty feet long by thirty wide, with a story twelve feet high. The tent was to be built eight feet long and six feet wide, and be weatherboarded.
Messrs. Samuel Buchanan, John Archibald, and Samuel Welsh were appointed a committee to carry out this action of the congregation.

This church building was completed and occupied by the congregation in the latter part of the following year. No doubt the work went forward as rapidly as the means of the people could drive it onward, as their number was small, and their resources limited.

This church now became united with the church of Cadiz as one pastoral charge. They unitedly called Rev. Donald McIntosh to become their pastor, giving to each part one-half his ministerial labors. The salary promised him from this branch of his charge was two hundred dollars: one-half cash, and the other half in produce, at the following rates—wheat, fifty cents per bushel; rye and corn, each thirty-three cents per bushel. The grain was to be delivered to Mr. Matthew McCoy, Cadiz, Ohio, with whom Mr. McIntosh boarded, being an unmarried man. The writer of this paper has in his possession a book, in which the following note is inscribed, by Mr. John Morrison Forsythe: "The Reverend Donald McIntosh, this 9th day of February, 1823, began his heavy labors in Archer township. It shall be said of this man, and that one, that he was born there." Mr. McIntosh was regularly installed pastor over this united charge; and from a communication sent to the trustees of this congregation, it appears that he also had charge of an academy for two years, when he resigned it, in order that he might devote himself entirely to his ministerial work.

Mr. McIntosh’s care of this charge continued until 1826, when failing health required his resignation, in order to admit his travelling southward. Mr. McIntosh is remembered as an accomplished scholar and an instructive preacher. He died soon after in East India.

Rev. John McArthur became pastor of the same united charge in the year 1828. Mr. McArthur was regarded by his co-presbyters as a thorough scholar, and well-skilled in the doctrines of the holy Scriptures; a faithful expositor of God’s word, and an acceptable and instructive preacher.

Mr. McArthur was born in Washington county, New York, March 25th, 1803. He graduated in Jefferson College, at Canonsburg, Pa., in 1825; studied theology under the Presbytery of New Lisbon, and was licensed by them in the fall of 1827; married Miss Christina Ann Robertson, daughter of Rev. James Robertson, of Carrollton, Ohio, in the winter of 1829, by whom he had six sons and one daughter. Two sons died in infancy. His wife survived him about seven years.

Mr. McArthur continued in this relation until 1836, when his time was entirely devoted to the Cadiz branch of his charge. The memory of Mr. McArthur was ever carefully cherished by all who were under his pastoral care. He is believed to have been the instrument in the hand of God in moulding this church in the pattern of sound doctrine and good government.

tion obtained a charter as an incorporated body in the year 1835, by act of the Legislature of Ohio. The incorporators in this act were, “Walter McClintock, Jacob Richey, Samuel Buchanan, Ralph Atkinson, Jacob Vasbinder, Thomas Day, James L. McLane, James Megaw, John Lyons, George McPeck, John Welsh, Jr., William Lisle, Thomas Albertson, William Miller, and James McClintock.”

He afterwards became professor of languages in Miami University, at Oxford, Ohio, and died at Indianapolis, Ind., in July, 1849.

Rev. William Doane McCartney became pastor of this church, devoting his entire labors to it, in 1838, and sustained this relation to it until 1842, when, at his request, the pastoral relation was dissolved.

Mr. McCartney was born in Montrose county, Pa., January 20th, 1806. He made a profession of religion in the Presbyterian church of Derry, Pa., September, 1822; graduated at Washington College, Pa., 1832, and immediately commenced the study of theology in the Western Theological Seminary. He was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Washington, April, 1833; and by the same Presbytery he was ordained to the whole work of the ministry, June 27th, 1836.

Mr. McCartney and Miss Maria Jane Stewart, of Washington county, Pa., were united in marriage, April 25th, 1837. The result of this marriage was four children. One of these, the wife of Mr. D. S. Noble, ruling elder in Wellsville church, survives him, Mrs. McCartney and his other children having preceded him to their heavenly home.

He was called to bear severe afflictions near the close of his life, but the full vigor of his mental powers, and the sustaining grace of the Lord Jesus Christ were with him to the end, and that end was peace. He fell asleep in Jesus near Wellsville, Ohio, July 27th, 1863, and his mortal remains repose in Bethel churchyard, awaiting the resurrection of the just.

Rev. James Cameron became pastor of this church in the year 1844, and sustained that relation until the year 1847, when, at his own request, the pastoral relation was dissolved.

Mr. Cameron was born in the city of Pittsburgh, Pa., June 1st, 1813. He obtained his primary education in the place of his nativity, and graduated at the Jefferson College, Pa., in the year 1839. Soon after he entered the Western Theological Seminary, where he completed the prescribed course of study, and was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Ohio, in the year 1842.

He received and accepted a call from this church to become its pastor, and in the year 1844 the Presbytery of Steubenville ordained and installed him pastor over this church. Two-thirds of his labor were to be given to this church, and the remaining one-third to Centre Unity. His record here is that of an industrious and efficient pastor, who did what he could to extend the interests of this part of the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Mr. Cameron’s wife was Miss Isabella Richey, of Pittsburgh, Pa., by whom he had four children—three sons and one daughter—all of whom, with their mother, survive him. His death occurred May 1st, 1866, in Brunswick, Ill., and was the result of paralysis.

The following records are found amongst the papers of Mr. Samuel Buchanan, deceased:

"Messrs. Walter McClintock and Jacob Richey were ordained Ruling Elders for the Ridge congregation, by Rev. Mr. Clark, August 21st, 1819.

"Messrs. Ralph Atkinson and Jacob Vasbinder were ordained Ruling Elders for the Ridge congregation, by Rev. Mr. McIntosh, August 22d, 1823.

"Messrs. William Patterson and Samuel Buchanan were ordained Ruling Elders for the Ridge congregation, by Rev. Mr. Rutherford, April 29th, 1827."

An election was held for Ruling Elders, by the congregation, it is believed, in the year 1834, which resulted in the choice of Messrs. James Megaw, Thomas Day, James L. McLane, and John Lyons. They accepted the office, and were ordained and installed by Rev. Mr. McArthur.

On the 20th day of August, 1844, Messrs. Alexander Osburn, Hugh McIlravy, and George McKinney were elected Ruling Elders by this congregation. Mr. Osburn had formerly been a Ruling Elder in Crabapple church, and therefore only required installation in this church. The other Elders elect were ordained and installed by Rev. Mr. Cameron.

Messrs. Robert Scott, Samuel Adams, and Samuel Osburn were elected Deacons by the congregation, August 20th, 1844, and were ordained and installed in their office by Rev. Mr. Cameron a few weeks afterwards. Of these, Messrs. Adams and Osburn remain in the discharge of their duties amongst us; but Mr. Scott has fallen asleep, as we believe, in Jesus, and was fully ripe for eternal glory, through the saving grace of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Thus far we have traced the way along which the Lord led this church in paths which are known to us only as revealed by the pen of the historian, or handed down by tradition. From this time forward we are enabled to speak of things which we ourselves have seen.

The present pastor formed a slight acquaintance with this congregation in the fall of 1847, while preaching a few Sabbaths to relieve a sick friend, Rev. Ephraim Ogden, then temporarily in charge of the congregation. The congregation becoming vacant, he was invited by the congregation at a meeting held June 20th, 1848, to visit them, and if he and they were mutually satisfied, to become their pastor. This invitation was accepted, and his labor in this way commenced on the fifth day of the succeeding July. His ministrations being regarded as satisfactory, a meeting of the congregation was held on the 20th day of September, next, for the purpose of taking the sense of the congregation on that subject, and on the vote being taken, it was unanimously in favor of the candidate's election as pastor, and a call was accordingly made out for two-thirds of his ministerial services, promising him a salary of three hundred dollars a year in half yearly payments. He being a licentiate, under the care of the Presbytery of Washington, the Presbytery of Steubenville gave the congregation permission to prosecute the call before that body. The Presbytery of Washington placed the call in his hands, and it was by him accepted October 14th, 1848, whereupon he was dismissed to the Presbytery of Steubenville. . . . Presbytery ordered that the ordination take place at Corinth on the 17th day of the approaching November, and assigned to him Hebrews, xii., 1. . . . The ordination took place according to the order of Presbytery, Rev. Dr. Beatty presiding, asking the constitutional questions, and leading in the prayer of ordination.

Presbytery directed that the installation of the pastor elect take place on the 13th of the approaching December, and appointed Rev. Joseph H. Chambers to preside, preach the sermon, and propose the constitutional questions, and Rev. Dr. Brown to deliver the charges to the pastor and people. The installation services took place as directed by Presbytery, according to the stipulations of the call.

A careful canvass of the church was now made by the session of the church, in order to ascertain the strength of its membership. The result of this investigation showed that at that time there were seventy-two persons in full communion in the church. Several of these were aged and infirm, so that the active working force of the church may be set down as sixty.

Trustees—George Fisher, John Lyons, John Welch, Jr., Hugh McLlravy, Joseph Buchanan, and Thomas Day.
Treasurer—George McPeck.
Clerk of the Congregation—William Smiley.
Precentors—(Who stood before the people, gave out the lines of the hymn, pitched the tune, and led in singing it)—John Welch, Jr., Hugh McLlravy, George McKinney, and Samuel Osburn.

Additions to the church officers to 1873:
Moses Cole and Isaac Pratt were elected to the office of Ruling Elder, and ordained and installed February 10th, 1853.
Samuel Herron and John E. McPeck were elected to this office, and ordained and installed October 13th, 1860.
Robert Anderson, formerly a Ruling Elder in New Hagerstown church, was elected and installed in this office, February 3rd, 1862.
Samuel Osburn was elected to this office, and ordained and installed January 18th, 1867.

John E. McPeck, having withdrawn from the membership of the church, owing to a change of residence, and having now returned to us, he was elected and installed in this office, October 28th, 1870.
Present Church Officers [1874]:
Ruling Elders—John Lyons, Samuel Herron, Robert Anderson, Samuel Osburn, and John E. McPeck.
Deacons—Samuel Adams and Samuel Osburn.
Congregation's Clerk—G. M. McPeck.
Treasurer—George McPeck.

It is proper that in this place there should be given a brief resume of the pastor’s labors and successes during the quarter of a century just now closing.

The labors of this time were commenced by giving two-thirds of my time to this church, and the remaining one-third to Centre Unity. This arrangement continued until January 1st, 1864, a period of fifteen years, when this congregation began to occupy my entire time, until the present. The reported number of sermons, of members received, and of baptisms administered, will cover only those pertaining to this congregation.

I have preached twelve hundred sermons in the interest of the Ridge church, in discharging my pastoral duty to it.

I have received into full communion in the Ridge church three hundred members. Some of these persons have come to this church on letters of dismissal from other churches of our own order; and a proportion of them have come from other denominations; but much the larger part of these additions have been made on examination.

I have administered the ordinance of baptism, in the interest of this congregation, to twenty-seven adult persons, and to two hundred and seventy-five infants.

I have solemnized the marriage of one hundred and twenty-nine couples, that being, in some instances, of the parents and the offspring.

It has been my lot to be present and officiate, wholly or in part, at the funerals of one hundred and eighty-five persons. These have, however, not all been in connection with this congregation, nor even with the Presbyterian church.

Nearly two generations of men have passed away since the organization of this church. It is not known that any one of the original members is now living.

If we limit our range of vision by the horizon of the last twenty-five years, we find, to-day, in the session of this church but a single member, Mr. John Lyons, Sr., who was in it at that time. Two others, Messrs. Hugh McIlravy and George McKinney, are believed to be yet living, in other localities.

To-day, there are but fifteen living members in connection with us, who were members of this church at the commencement of the present pastorate, and who have retained their membership in it until the present time.

The condition of the church is specially encouraging. During the present year she has sent forth a colony of thirty persons to form a church in the neighboring village of Fairview, on the P., C. & St. L. Railway, called Buchanan Chapel. And still are left one hundred and fifty active workers in the cause of Christ, besides a few fathers and mothers in Israel, who linger among us to bless us with their counsels and prayers.

The congregation is free of debt, and owns a substantial and convenient brick house of worship.

FIRST LANDOWNERS IN HARRISON COUNTY.

The first measure providing for the establishment and maintenance of government by the United States in the territory northwest of the Ohio river, was an ordinance passed by Congress on April 23, 1784. The ordinance was reported by a committee of which Thomas Jefferson was chairman, and contained a clause prohibiting slavery in the territory after the year 1800. This provision, however, was stricken out before the ordinance was finally passed. The only important result accomplished under the first ordinance was the beginning of the survey of the territorial lands.

Congress, having purchased from the Indians at the treaty of Fort Stanwix, October 27, 1784, whatever title the Six Nations had to lands in the valley of the Ohio, now sought to provide for the survey and disposal of the same; and on May 20, 1785, was passed, “An Ordinance for Ascertaining the Mode of Disposing of Lands in the Western Territory.” This ordinance provided that a surveyor should be appointed from each State.

On May 27th Congress chose as surveyors: Nathaniel Adams, New Hampshire; Rufus Putnam, Massachusetts; Caleb Harris, Rhode Island; William Morris, New York; Adam Hoopes, Pennsylvania; James Simpson, Maryland; Alexander Parker, Virginia; Absalom Tatum, North Carolina; William Tate, South Carolina; and on July 18th, Isaac Sherman, Connecticut. Benjamin Tupper was appointed instead of Rufus Putnam from Massachusetts, as the latter was then surveying lands in Maine, and could not serve. Caleb Harris and Nathaniel Adams having resigned, Col. Ebenezer Sproat and Winthrop Sargent were chosen in their places.
The surveyors were to divide the territory into townships, six miles square. The first north and south line was to begin on the Ohio river, at a point due north from the western terminus of a line that had been run at the southern boundary of Pennsylvania; and the first east and west line was also to begin at the same point.

It was provided that as soon as seven ranges of townships had been surveyed, the Geographer should transmit the plats of the same to the Board of the Treasury. The Secretary was then to take by lot a number of townships and fractional townships, both of those to be sold entire and of those to be sold in lots, such as would be equal to one-seventh part of the whole seven ranges, for the use of officers and soldiers of the Continental army.

The survey was begun in July, 1786, under the management of Thomas Hutchins, the Geographer of the United States. He started on the Pennsylvania line at the north bank of the Ohio river, and first ran a line west through Columbiana and Carroll counties, now known as the "Geographer's Line," a distance of forty-two miles, setting a post each mile. Every six miles was a township corner, and from these corners the south lines were run to the Ohio river, and the north lines to the southern boundary of the Connecticut, or Western Reserve. Hutchins began numbering sections at the southeast corner of the township, which was called section 1, thence north to the northeast corner, which was section 6. Section 7 began at the bottom again, west of section 1, and the numbers were carried up to section 36, which was in the northwest corner. In Charles Whittlesey's tract on the "Surveys of the Public Lands in Ohio," it is stated that this is the first application in the history of land surveys, of the rectangular system of lots in squares of one mile, with meridian lines and corner posts at each mile, where the number of the section, town, and range was put on the witness trees in letters and figures. This system of numbering was followed in the survey of the Ohio Company's lands about Marietta, and in the Symmes Purchase. It was changed to the present system in 1799, by which the numbering of the sections begins in the northeast corner of the township, and proceeds alternately from east to west, and thence west to east.

The plan originally adopted by Congress for the sale of the lands in the Northwest Territory, proposed to sell it in tracts of two million acres; the second ordinance, in smaller tracts, of one million. Under the last ordinance, the contract of the Ohio Company, on the Muskingum, and that of Judge Symmes and his associates, between the Miamis, were made, the former for two millions, the latter for one million acres. By a subsequent ordinance, passed in May, 1785, seven ranges of townships, each six miles square, were surveyed westward from the Ohio river and the Pennsylvania line, which were divided and offered for sale, in quarter townships; first at Pittsburgh, and afterwards in Philadelphia. Harrison county lies between the western lines of Ranges three and seven, its townships thus being included in the four western ranges.

In May, 1796, an act was passed by Congress, directing the Surveyor General to cause the public lands to be divided into townships of six miles square; and one-half of these townships, taking them alternately to be divided into sections of one mile square, and the residue into quarter townships of three miles square. In the year 1800, another law was passed, ordering a portion of these lands to be subdivided, and sold in half sections, of three hundred and twenty acres. When this law came into operation, land offices were established at Cincinnati, Chillicothe, Marietta, and Steubenville, and a large quantity of the richest and most productive soil was brought into the market.

Before that time, the tracts of land offered for sale by the Government were so large that men of limited means were unable to purchase. The smallest tract that could be bought was a section, containing six hundred and forty acres. Under this arrangement, most of the lands in the present townships of Short Creek, Athens, Green, and Cadiz were entered by the section; thus indicating that the first comers were men of more than ordinary means or enterprise. Although the later provision for the accommodation of the settler of limited means was of much importance, yet it was not sufficiently so as to advance the settlement of the Territory with much rapidity. But an act passed at a subsequent session of Congress which ordered the sections and half sections to be subdivided and offered for sale in quarter sections (160 acres), at two dollars per acre, on a credit of four years, was of vastly more importance; as it enabled thousands to become landowners who otherwise must have remained tenants; and it thus encouraged and increased emigration to the western country.
The Act of May 18, 1796, (First Statute at Large, 464), and the Act of May 10, 1800 (Second Statutes at Large, 72), provide, in substance, for the sale of public lands to the highest bidder, one-fourth of the purchase money to be paid at the time of sale, one-fourth within two years, one-fourth within three years, and the remaining one-fourth within four years from date of sale. The Act of March 2, 1831 (Third Statutes at Large, 612) provides for the relief of purchasers of the public land, where the purchase was made prior to July 1, 1820, and they had been unable to comply with the provisions of the previous act.

In all credit sales patented prior to the passage of this relief act, it is safe to assume that the purchase was made within the four or five years preceding the patent. Cash entries, as a rule, were made from six months to two years prior to the date of patenting, although in the case of a few suspended entries, this rule would not apply.

Hence, as a general rule, all patents issued for lands in Harrison county prior to 1821 (and many during the next four or five years after 1821), bear a date from four to five years later than the date of the original entry and settlement of the land.

In the descriptions of lands given in the following list, the words, "section," "township," and "range" have been omitted, and are to be understood as following the three numbers describing the location of the respective tracts. For instance, "all 6.9.4" means "all of section 6, township 9, range 4," which would locate the tract as section number 6 in Short Creek township. "W½ SW 6.9.4 means, "the west half of the southwest quarter of section 6, township 9, range 4," which would locate the tract as eighty acres of section number 6 in Short Creek township.

A section of land comprises 640 acres, the common subdivisions of which are half sections (containing 320 acres), of which there may be the north half, the west half, the south half, or the east half; quarter sections, or "quarters" (containing 160 acres), of which there may be the northeast (NE) quarter, the northwest (NW) quarter, the southwest (SW) quarter, and the southeast (SE) quarter, as well as adjoining halves of two adjoining quarters; eighth sections, or "eighties" (containing eighty acres), of which there may be the north half of the northeast quarter (N½ NE), west half of the northeast quarter (W½ NE), etc., east half of the northwest quarter (E½ NW), etc., east half of the southwest quarter (E\(\frac{1}{2}\) SW), etc., south half of the southeast quarter (S\(\frac{1}{2}\) SE), etc., as well as any two adjoining or cornering half-eighties; and sixteenth-sections, or "forties" (containing forty acres), of which there may be the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter (NW NE), etc., and so on through sixteen different descriptions, as well as any two adjoining or cornering twenty acre tracts which taken together comprise forty acres.

It will be remembered that there are thirty-six sections in a township, the numbering beginning with the section in the southeast corner, which is numbered one, and proceeding thence north to the section in the northeast corner of the township, which is numbered six, thence beginning again on the south line of the township with the section adjoining number one on the west, which is numbered seven, and proceeding north to section twelve; and so on; the section in the northwest corner of each numerical township being numbered thirty-six. The different numerical townships and ranges of Harrison county correspond with the geographical names of the different townships as follows:

Township 8, Range 4: Sections 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 12, 16, 17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 28, 29, and 30 form the south half of Short Creek township.

Sections 34, 35, and 36, form part of the east one-sixth of Athens township.

Sections 1, 2, and 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, 25, 26, 27, 31, 32, and 33 form the east three-fourths of Wheeling township, Belmont county (adjoining Short Creek township, Harrison county, on the south), in which are located Crabapple and Unity churches.

Township 9, Range 4: Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, 25, 26, and 27 form the north half of Short Creek township.

Sections 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 12, 16, 17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 28, 29, and 30 form the south three-seven of Green township.

Township 10, Range 4: Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 27, and 28 form the north four-sevenths of Green township.

eighty acres), and 30 (excepting the west 160 acres) form the south two-fifths of German township.

one-sixth of Archer township.

Section 26, the north half of 35, the west 160 acres of section 30, and the northwest 80 acres of section 29 form part of the southeast corner of Rumley township.

Township 11, Range 4: Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, 25, 26, and 27 form the north three-fifths of German township.

Sections 31, 32, and 33 form part of the east one-fifth of Rumi­

The remainder of township 11-4 lies in Jefferson and Carroll counties.

Township 9, Range 5: Sections 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 12, 16, 17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 28, 29, and 30 form the south three-fourths of Athens township.

Sections 34, 35, and 36 form part of the east one-seventh of Moorefield township.

Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, and 9 form the west fourth of Wheeling township, Belmont county.

Sections 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, 25, 26, 27, 31, 32, and 33 form

fourth of Athens township.

Section 31 forms the northeast corner section of Moorefield township.

Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 34, 35, and 36 form the west six-sevenths of Cadiz township.

Township 11, Range 5: Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, 19, 20, 21, 22, the south half of sections 5, 11, 17, and 23, and the east two-thirds of sections 25, 26, 27, 28, and of the south half of 29 form the township of Rumley.

Sections 6, 12, 18, 24, the north half of sections 5, 11, 17, and 23, and east fourth of section 30 and of north half of 29 form part of the south one-third of Rumley township.

Township 12, Range 5: Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, and the east fourth of sections 25, 26, and 27 form part of the north two-thirds of Rumley township.

The remainder of township 12.5 lies in Carroll county.

Township 10, Range 6: Sections 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 12, 16, 17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 28, 29, 30, 34, 35, and 36 form part of the south three-fourths of Moorefield township.

Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, 25, 26, 27, 31, 32, and 33 are in Belmont county.

Township 11, Range 6: Sections 1, 7, 13, 19, 25, and 31 form part of the north one-fourth of Moorefield township.

Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 34, 35, and 36 form all of Nottingham township.

Township 12, Range 6: Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, 19, 20, 21, and 22 and the south portion of sections 5, 11, 17, and 23 form the west eight-elevenths of Stock township.

Sections 6, 12, 18, and the north portion of sections 5, 11, and 17 form part of the southwest quarter of North township.

Sections 25, 26, 27, 28, 31, 32, 33, 34, and the south portion of sections 29 and 35 form the east two-fifths of Franklin township.

Sections 24, 30, 36, and the north portion of sections 23, 29, and 35 form part of the southwest corner of Monroe township.

Township 13, Range 6: Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, and 15 form the northwest portion of North township.

Sections 19, 20, 21, 25, 26, 27, 31, 32, and 33 form the northeast portion of Monroe township.

The remainder of township 13.6 lies in Carroll county.

Township 11, Range 7: Sections 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 12, 16, 17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 28, 29, 30, 34, 35, and 36 form the south three-fourths of Freeport township.

Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, 21, 25, 26, 27, 31, 32, and 33 are in Guernsey county.

north one-fourth of Freeport township.

Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 34, 35, and 36 form all of Washington township.

Township 13, Range 7: Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, and the south portion of sections 5, 11, and 17 form the west three-fifths of Franklin township.

Sections 6, 12, and 18, and the north portion of sections 5, 11, and 17 form part of southwestern portion of Monroe township.

The remainder of township 13.7 lies in Tuscarawas county.

Township 14, Range 7: Sections 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, and 15 form the northwest portion of Monroe township.

SOME HARRISON COUNTY BURIALS.

The following records have been gathered from tombstones standing in the principal cemeteries of Harrison county, particularly, the older cemeteries. The records have been collected at various times during the past five years. In the case of the graveyards of Beech Spring, Crabapple, Unity, Nottingham, Dickerson, Cadiz, and Ridge, all the tombstones standing at the dates the lists were made, have been examined, and their records are here given, without regard to the date of birth of the decedents. In all other cases, only those burials are recorded of those who were born prior to 1830, with a view to including only the pioneers of the county. A complete list of all the burials in the graveyards herein given in part, would make a record beyond the limits of one volume.

The location of many of the various graveyards not within the limits of the villages of the county may not be out of place in this connection: Beech Spring graveyard is situated at Beech Spring Church, on the southwest corner of section one, in Green township, about two miles southeast from Hopedale. Dickerson graveyard is situated near the center of section thirty-two, in Cadiz township, about half-way between Cadiz and New Athens. Crabapple and Unity graveyards are situated in Wheeling township, Belmont county, the former about two, and the latter about three miles southeast of New Athens. Bethel graveyard is situated in the southeast quarter of section twenty-eight, in Green township, about half a mile north of Folks' Station. Ridge graveyard is situated in the southwest quarter of section twenty-three, in Archer township, about a mile southeast from Hanover. Nottingham and Rankin graveyards are both in Moorefield township, the former in section six, and about a mile southwest of Rankin, which is in section thirty-one, one mile south of Cassville.
BURIALS IN BEECH SPRING GRAVEYARD.

The following will abstracts, as well as the preceding list of marriages and most of the tombstone records given herein, have been gathered and arranged by Mr. William P. Hanna. It is to his industry and painstaking care in the preparation of this data that the readers of the present volume are indebted for what it is safe to say, is the largest and most valuable collection of material for family history that has ever been published in any similar single volume work on county history in Ohio or elsewhere.

These will abstracts alone will furnish more information about the families of the early settlers of Harrison county than is contained in a dozen of the usual "Biographical Encyclopedias," which are sold in such large numbers throughout the country. At the same time, there is much information about the membership of a family that is not always to be found in a will. Many of the wills mention but one or two names of the family, when there may be half a dozen members. In examining the following abstracts, therefore, it is not to be taken for granted that they give the exact extent of the family at the time the will is written. In attempting to trace the genealogy of one's family from these will abstracts, the record may be pieced out in many cases by reference to the list of marriages, and to the burial lists given elsewhere.

The thanks of the writer are due for courtesy and assistance rendered by ex-Judge E. B. McNamee and Judge John B. Worley, of the Probate Office; by Benjamin R. Green, county Surveyor; by S. Edwin Thompson, Recorder; and by many others, who have assisted in the collection of the data herein presented:

JOHN GASTON, b. about 1600, in Scotland (or France), of Huguenot de­scend; m. in Scotland, and had, among others, three sons: John, William, and Alexander, who emigrated to county Antrim, Ireland, about 1660-1668; of these, probably John (whose name appears on hearth-money rate list for Ire­land in 1669, is of Magheragall, county Antrim) had issue, among others, several sons, some of whom remained in Ireland, and some emigrated to America, as did also the sons of other brothers; of the emigrants of that gen­eration the names of eight are known (and the children of William, son of John last named), viz., Hugh of New Jersey, Joseph of New Jersey, Joseph of Pennsylvania (probably a son of Hugh), William of Pennsylvania (probably a son of Hugh), John of New Jersey (probably a son of Hugh), James of New Jersey (probably a son of Hugh), John of Connecticut, Alexander of Massachusetts. Of these, the last two were brothers, and are said by Marshall Gaston's account to have first landed in New Jersey, with one or more other brothers, who re­mained there; it is probable that they may have been brothers of Hugh and Joseph of New Jersey; they have also been identified in part as brothers of the William who remained at home, his residence being Caranleagh (Car­nough?), Cloughwater, county Antrim (near Ballymena), Ireland. In the ac­count given below, these nine progeni­tors of the Gaston family in America will be designated as follows:

William Gaston (1st).

Joseph Gaston of Pennsylvania (1st).

John Gaston of New Jersey (1st).

James Gaston (1st).

1881; xi. James, b. Nov. 1, 1813). One account of Alexander Gaston (b. 1769) states that he was the son of Ephraim Gaston, who was the son of Ebenezer Gaston, who emigrated from Ireland to America in company with his brother, Matthew (d. unm.); and that Alexander Gaston had a brother, Joseph, who settled in southern Indiana; and another brother who settled in West Virginia. This account probably assumes Joseph, son of John, who married in South Carolina and settled in Butler county, Ohio, to have been the brother of Alexander.

Hugh Gaston, Jr., probably a son (or grandson) of Hugh Gaston (1st), b. 1734; d. June 25, 1808; m. (1st) Mary Sloan, b. 1742; d. Aug. 14, 1766; daughter of William and Mary Sloan, of Bedminster (?) township; m. (2d) Mary Adams, b. 1741; d. Feb. 16, 1793; daughter of John and Agnes Adams; m. (3d) Mary Kirkpatrick, b. In Bedminster township, Nov. 23, 1761; d. July 1, 1842; daughter of David and Mary McEwen Kirkpatrick (the former b. at Wattlesneach, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, Feb. 17, 1724; son of Alexander and Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, who emigrated to America with his family in 1736, and m. March 31, 1748, Mary McEwen); Hugh Gaston had issue by first wife: 1. William, b. April 12, 1763; d. Dec. 15, 1763; 2. Joseph, b. Dec. 18, 1765; d. Aug. 14, 1777; had issue by third wife: 3. Samuel Kirkpatrick, a physician; m. Nancy T. Cooper, daughter of Henry Cooper, of Chester, Morris county (had issue: i. Henrietta); 4. John, b. 1796; d. Feb. 17, 1800. Hugh Gaston, Jr., of Bedminster, had sisters: Elizabeth, b. 1737; m. Thomas Kirkpatrick; and m. Captain William Logan, of Peapack; had issue, among others: 1. John.

Elizabeth Gaston, b. 1737, sister to Hugh Gaston, Jr., and probably daughter of Hugh Gaston (1st), m. Thomas Kirkpatrick, who settled near Liberty Corners, Bernard township, Somerset county, N. J.; had issue: 1. John, m. Anne Coriell, daughter of Elias Coriell (had issue: i. Sarah, m. John Layton, and settled at Plainfield; ii. Elizabeth, m. John King, of Liberty Corners; iii. Thomas, m. James Gaston (1st), probably a brother to John Gaston of New Jersey (1st), his name appears as a subscriber to the fund for building Allentown Church parsonage, 1758, in connection with that of John Gaston of Upper Freehold (1st, above); possibly, he may have been the son of that John—whose oldest son, James, was baptized at Tennent Church, March 28, 1742. The name of James Gaston also appears as a member of the congregation of Lamington Church, in Bedminster township, Somerset county, N. J., during the pastorate of Rev. James McCrea, which terminated in 1766. A James Gaston also took up land in Mount Bethel township, Northampton county, Penn., in 1773 (probably son of William, 1st), and the name of James Gaston appears on tax-list of Cecil township, Washington county, Penn., 1787 and 1788; and on that of Rostraver township, Westmoreland county, Penn., 1789.

Joseph Gaston of New Jersey (1st), d. in Bernard township, Somerset county, N. J., shortly after March 31, 1777; member of Basking Ridge Presbyterian congregation; m. Margaret ———, who survived him (probably his second wife, as a Joseph Gaston and Margaret Lines were married in Somerset county, about Nov. 2, 1772); emigrated from Ireland to New Jersey about 1720; probably a brother to Hugh Gaston (1st); had issue:

GEORGE LAYPORT (or Leporth, as originally spelled), of French Huguenot descent, emigrated from Maryland to the Beech Flats, near Steubenville, Ohio, before 1800; thence removed to Cadiz township, Harrison county, before 1806, settling on the farm now used as the county infirmary; his settlement at the first was on the frontier, and during the border wars with the Indians, his cabin was burned by them, and his son Thomas, aged eighteen, killed; after peace was declared, one of the Indians who had taken part in this attack, boasted of it in the presence of John Layport (Thomas's brother), during a general muster held in New Philadelphia. The brother attempted to kill the Indian on the spot, but was restrained. He afterwards followed him from New Philadelphia across Harrison county, to Salt Run in Jefferson county, and then despatched him while the Indian was stooping down to take a drink (from account of Rev. E. Layport; see also page 54, for a similar incident). George Leporth was one of the famous hunters of Harrison county in pioneer days, all kinds of wild game, turkeys, deer, wolves, and bears then being plentiful in his neighborhood. He was also a skilled trapper; and set large steel traps for bear. "On one occasion," says Howe, in his "History of Ohio," "two of his sons, having trapped a wolf, skinned it alive, and then turned it loose," as an awful example to its fellows of what was in store for them in case they molested the settler's fold. George Leporth once set a trap for a bear, which was accustomed to follow a certain trail; and placed it by a log which the bear would have to step over, expecting it to step into the trap. But it happened that a Methodist missionary came along the trail that day on his way to a preaching station, near what is now Asbury chapel; and his horse stepped into the trap intended for the bear. Not being strong enough to release the trap by himself, the minister was obliged to wait until Leporth came along before he could proceed. Three McCullough families seem to have settled in the vicinity of Crabapple Church near the beginning of the century, and the heads of the three families were either brothers, or very closely related. In addition to John McCullough, whose family is given above, Robert and William McCullough settled in Wheeling township, Belmont county, just south of New Athens, and were among the organizers of Crabapple Church, both appearing among the first bench of elders. They both also appear to have come from Hopewell township, Washington county, Penn., within the bounds of Upper Buffalo Presbyterian Church. In the call extended by the united congregations of Cross Creek and Upper Buffalo Churches to Rev. Joseph Smith, in 1779, are to be found the names of George, Robert, and William McCullough. William McCullough, of whom some account is given below, mentions in his will a brother, Peter.

WILLIAM McCULLOUGH, b. 1748; d. March 18, 1831; probably removed from York or Cumberland county to Hopewell township, Washington county, Penn., about 1779, where he (or possibly his father of the same name) appears as an elder of Upper Buffalo Presbyterian Church as late as 1793; served in the Revolutionary War; removed before 1800 to Wheeling township, Belmont county, Ohio, where, with Robert McCullough, he helped to organize Crabapple Church; m. The name, Simeral, is a corruption. It was originally Somerville, and was so written many times during the eighteenth century by the ancestors of families now bearing the name, Simeral. The Harrison county Simerals are probably descended from John Simeral, who removed from Adams county and settled in Hempfield (now South Huntingdon) township, Westmoreland county, Penn., before 1772, with his brother, Thomas Simeral (who died there in 1772) and sister, Mary Kincaid (wife of Robert Kincaid). John Simeral established a ferry across the Youghiogheny River at the present town of West Newton (originally called Simeral's Ferry, and later, Robbstown). He died there after 1794, leaving children: Joseph, John, Alexander, Mary, and Elizabeth. Margaret Simeral died in Westmoreland county, 1779, leaving. children, Isaac and Martha, and perhaps more, as George Simeral's name appears as a witness to her will. James Simeral died there in 1781; and William Simeral, in 1796, leaving as next of kin, Sarah Simeral, who was appointed administratrix of his estate.
