In 1879 Mr. Livingood, feeling that his original field was more congenial in many ways, returned to Reading, where he ever after remained. Except for a comparatively brief connection with the Staten Island Terra Cotta Company, which he formed upon his return to Reading, he devoted himself wholly to his profession. He was for a few years treasurer of the company, which carried on the manufacture of fire brick at Staten Island, N. Y., but disposed of his interest in order to give all his time to legal work. As a pleader Mr. Livingood had no superior at the Berks county Bar. His learning, his accuracy, his thorough comprehension commanded the attention of his fellow practitioners whenever he gave utterance to an opinion, and these, combined with ready eloquence and unrivalled ease of delivery, won him an interested and sympathetic audience in the courtroom, no matter which side retained him. He was a man whose personal character and habits were an example, and whose integrity and adoration of all his associates, his co-workers as well as his clients. His private affairs demanded all his attention, and he neither sought nor held public office, his only services of such nature being given as solicitor for the almshouse, which position he held three years. He was, however, both interested and active in politics, as an ardent member of the Democratic party, and he was president of the Keystone Club during the McClellan campaign. His church connection was with the Presbyterians, and he held membership in a Masonic lodge at Reading, being past master of the same. His death carried mourning into the wide circles outside his home, for he was universally liked.

On Aug. 20, 1863, by the Rev. E. J. Richards, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Mr. Livingood married Anna H. Jameson, of Reading, and to them were born four sons, namely: (1) James J., who is manager of the Spa Spring Clay and Brick Works, and makes his home in New York City. He m. Miss Elizabeth Potter, of Woodbridge, N. J., and they have one son, James J. (2) Albert J. m. Irene Rhoads, and died at the early age of twenty-seven years, leaving one son, James S., who is in Philadelphia. (3) Paul, a druggist, was previously in business in Allen- town, Pa., but is now in Philadelphia. He and his wife, Mrs. O. S. of A. His religious affiliations were in the Lutheran Church, and in political faith he was a Republican.

WILLIAM STRONG, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States from 1870 to 1878, was born at Somers, Conn., May 6, 1808. While sixteen years of age he entered Yale College, and was graduated in 1828. He subsequently taught a classical and mathematical school, occupying his leisure hours in the study of the law, and so continued until February, 1832, when he entered the Law Department of Yale College. In October, 1832, he was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of Connecticut; and in November of the same year he opened a law office at Reading, and made that place his residence. In political life he was a Democrat, and as such served several terms as a member of the city councils and as one of the controllers of the public schools. In 1846 he was elected as the representative to Congress from the Berks county district and re-elected in 1848. In 1856, he declined a re-election and returned to the practice of his profession. In 1857, he was elected a judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for the term of fifteen years, but he resigned this position Oct. 1, 1868, to resume the practice of his profession at Philadelphia. On Feb. 18, 1870, he was appointed by President Grant associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. An accident which happened to him at this time caused his resignation under the Act of Congress. While a resident of Reading he was for many years a director of the Farmers Bank. He was counsel for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company until he was elevated to the Supreme Bench. In religious faith he was a Presbyterian, and for many years a ruling elder. For several years he was one of the vice presidents of the American Bible Society and also of the American Sunday-school Union; and in 1873 he was elected president of the American Tract Society. He received in 1867 the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Lafayette College, and in 1871, was made a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He was granted by Nassau Hall, Princeton, N. J., and also by his Alma Mater, Yale College. His remains were brought to Reading and buried in the Charles Evans Cemetery.

JAMES T. REBER, President of the Reading National Bank, and one of the city's men of capital, business and social importance, is a descendant of one of the very old families of Berks county, Pa. On account of its prominence and its numbers and wide distribution, some of its members have taken a justifiable pride in looking up its early records. A well known citizen of Reading and a member of this family, Morris B. Reber, has with careful research compiled a volume which bears the title "Genealogy of the Reber Family, descended from Johan Bernhard Reber, 1738." From this interesting work we quote a few lines:

"The idea of preparing a genealogy of the Reber family was probably suggested by the finding of the original passport of Johannes Reber still preserved, who was, for a long time, believed to be the first one of the large family of Rebers who emigrated to this country. This passport shows that he came from Langenselbold, Germany, which is situated in the department of Cassel, Konigreich Prussia. While visiting in that part of the country, in 1882, Mr. James T. Reber found recorded in the old church book of the Evangelical Church
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

(Rev. Frederick Hufnagle, Pastor), the names of four brothers, Johan Bernhard, Hans, Johan Conrad and Michael Reber.

"This church book dates back to the year 1563, so that it might be possible to obtain the ancestors of these four brothers since the sixteenth century. We have been satisfied to make a record only from the earliest emigrant to this country.

Johan Bernhard Reber, the first of these brothers, is recorded in the same book as having one son, Johannes, mentioned below. The Pennsylvania archives, containing the names of 30,000 early emigrants, mention the arrival of John Bernhard Reber, from Rotterdam, Holland, on the 'Snow Two Sisters', landing in Philadelphia and qualifying Sept. 9, 1738, by swearing allegiance to Great Britain. We can learn of nothing pertaining to his whereabout life or his arrival in this country. The passport, however, of the son who came to this country in 1742 is still intact.

"Johannes Reber, whose date of birth is unknown, son of Johan Bernhard, was married Feb. 8, 1758, to Johanna Magdalena Hahn, daughter of Conrad Hahn. They had two sons born in Germany, Johannes, Dec. 16, 1756, and Ludwig Friedrich August, Sept. 11, 1740. According to his passport, he left his native country for America, April 23, 1742, bringing his family with him, although it is known that the second son, Ludwig, died on board the ship. Being a member of William Penn's colony, his first object was to find a desirable location. Having selected some acres of land about six miles west of Reading, in Lower Heidelberg township, at the big bend of the Tulpehocken, in a beautiful and desolate valley known afterward as the 'Blue Marsh', he moved thither with his wife and son, built himself a home which served the double purpose of shelter and protection against the Indians and wild animals, his only neighbors. This quaint old building, with its large, square fire-place in the center is still standing on the farm formerly occupied by Mr. Henry Shofer, of Reading.

"Reber is recorded in the Pennsylvania archives, that John Reber was naturalized May 13, 1768, and also that he, like many others of the early settlers, was concerned in numerous disputes regarding the rights of ownership of their land. During the time that he resided in this locality, he was blessed with an increase to his family of three sons. When a child, the chief and the leading men of reading were also the leading men of Lancaster, Ohio, where numbers of their descendants may be found. The remaining brother, Thomas Reber, was born in Pennsylvania in 1746, was married to Elizabeth Kerschner, born Nov. 1, 1747, died Dec. 22, 1803, and he left ten children.

"James T. Reber, the immediate subject of this sketch, was born April 29, 1834, at Sinking Spring, Berks Co., Pa. He was educated in the public schools and afterward engaged in the hardware business for forty years, from 1853 until 1893, trading as Bard, Reber & Company. James T. Reber was married to Miss Sarah W. Potteiger, Oct. 3, 1854. They have had seven children born to them, of whom Benjamin died aged nine years, the survivors being; C. Alice, wife of Joseph F. Templin, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Valeria E., wife of Isaac L. Deeter, in the Reading railroad service at Reading; Morris B., for a time enterprising in the grocery business, branch house representing a large New York concern; Clara R.; and James C., a manufacturer of Reading. The mother of these children died Jan. 31, 1903, aged sixty-seven years."

In addition to the business interests already mentioned, Mr. Reber has been president of the Reading National Bank since March 14, 1893, the date of its organization. As one of the most responsible citizens, he has been chosen for offices of responsibility as his leisure time permitted, serving for three years in the common council and for three years an unexpired term as prison inspector. He is a Knight Templar Mason and an Odd Fellow.

"Mr. Reber is prominent in the Reformed Church, in which he has been an elder for many years, and for six years he has been treasurer of the board of Home Missions. For more than twenty years he has been a member of the Bethany Orphans' Home; was treasurer of the board of publication of the Reformed Church of the United States for over twenty years; and has been a member of the board of Home Missions of the Reformed Church for many years. In 1907 he was elected trustee of Franklin & Marshall College, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

GEORGE FREDERICK BAER, President of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company since 1901, and the leading attorney at Reading for the thirty years preceding, was born Sept. 26, 1842, in Somerset county, Pa. When six years old, his parents removed to the county-seat from a farm situated three miles distant. He received his preliminary education at the Somerset Institute. When thirteen years old, he manifested an interest in the printing business, and entering the office of the Somerset Democrat, worked at setting type for upward of two years. Appreciating the need of a better education, he resumed his studies in an earnest manner at the Somerset Academy; but he continued there only a year when he accepted the position of chief clerk and bookkeeper of the Ashota Mills, a large lumber manufacturing establishment located ten miles from Johnstown. After a position he held about a year, when his ambition for a more thorough education caused him to leave school and leave, and he entered the Sophomore class of Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, Pa. This was in the fall of 1868, but his course there was terminated by the breaking out of the Civil War. He and his brothers then prepared the paper mentioned and they conducted the publication in an editor until the following September, when Harry enlisted in the Union army, becoming an officer of Company B, 54th Regt., P. V. I., and he was left in sole charge of the newspaper. He worked assiduously at the case during the daytime, and edited the paper at night, having been sufficiently pressed for time so as to be compelled to compose the editorials and set them up in type while standing before the case. During this interesting period of his life, he continued a private course of studies with the expectation of returning to the college which he had left so abruptly and which he had left with the earnest and persistent exercise of his concentrative powers before the printer's case, which unwittingly prepared him so thoroughly for the arduous labors of professional and business life. He edited and published the Democrat until August, 1862, when his patriotic spirit also asserted itself for suppressing the Rebellion, with the enemy approaching the border of his own country, and he raised a company of volunteers from Somerset and vicinity, which was mustered into the national service as Company E, 133d Regt., P. V. I., and of this company he was commissary captain, though not yet twenty years old. He served for the period of five years (nine months), and was mustered out of service with his company on May 26, 1863. For part of the time, he acted by detail as Adjutant-General of the 2d Brigade, in Humphrey's Division. His regiment joined the Army of the Potomac at the second battle of Bull Run, and his company participated in the battle of Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. Its most distinguished service was in forming the advance line of the army in the famous charge on Fredericksburg Heights, Dec. 13, 1862.

After returning home from the army, Mr. Baer selected the law as his profession, and after pursuing a regular course of legal studies in the office of brothers William and Herman (both attorneys at the Somerset Bar), he was admitted to practice at the April term, 1864. He began immediately the practice of his profession, and under the guidance of his brothers for the following four years was made thoroughly familiar with the intricacies of the profession in all its branches, more especially in the department which related to pleading and the trial of cases. He then removed to Reading for the purpose of locating there, having visited the place several months before, and on Jan. 22, 1868, was admitted to the Berks County Bar. In a few years after his location at Reading, his practice began to increase rapidly, and he was each year for more successful. The trial of cases gradually became the prominent part of his practice, and within a decade his services were engaged in every important case in the local courts. This is shown on the records in the honorary's office and in the published reports of cases by the Supreme and Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. This extensive and highly remunerative practice before the courts, local and Supreme, both State and national, continued for thirty years, when his important services as solicitor to the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company during this period eventually, resulted in his selection as president of the re-organized corporation, and he has been re-elected annually for the past eight years, evidencing the highly satisfactory character of his services in its management.

On account of his prominent connection with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, Mr. Baer quite naturally became an important factor in the management of the Reading Iron Company, the largest industrial enterprise at Reading next to the shops of the railway company, and after having advised this great corporation (whose interests are situated in different parts of Pennsylvania, and give employment to thousands of men) during the same period of time while acting as solicitor of the railway company, he became its president and directed its extensive business affairs in a most successful manner for twelve years. In accordance with his labors in connection with the Philadelphia & Reading and other railroads, he retired as president, but he has been officiating since as the chairman of its board of directors. His management resulted in making the corporation one of the largest producers of wrought-iron pipe, as well as steel-iron, etc., in Pennsylvania, with large trading relations extending all over the world. He has also been prominently identified with the management of the Temple Iron Company, the Pennsylvania Steel Company, and the Cambria Steel Company, for a number of years as a director, acting as president of the last named since Jan. 1, 1900.

In 1886, Mr. Baer organized and established the Reading Paper Mills, and since then has operated them in a most successful manner. The corporation comprises three plants (one at the foot of Ringman street, one at the foot of Court street, Reading, and the third opposite Reading at the mouth of the Tulpehocken creek) all equipped with the best machinery for the production of the finest book and manilla papers, which are in constant demand. They employ three hundred hands and constitute one of Reading's important industries.

Mr. Baer co-operated with other public-spirited men of Reading in establishing the National Bank in 1883; the Reading Hospital in 1884; the Reading Trust Company in 1886; the Penn Common in 1887; the Wyomissing Club in 1890; the Reading Free Library in 1898; the Berkshire Club in 1899; and he has continued to take an active part in the management of all of them excepting the Penn Bank. These enterprises are particularly important in securing Penn Common as the property of Reading from the possession of the County of Berks, and he has officiated as president of the Board of Park Commissioners since its creation by the City Council. Since 1890, he has served as one of the board of managers of the Charles Berks Memorial, and in 1900, Mr. Baer erected the first large modern fire-proof office-building in Reading, situated at the corner of Court and Church streets, seven stories high, and embracing eighty rooms, adjoining the rear of his office building on Washington street. The first two floors are occupied by the business offices of the Reading Iron Company.

During this long period of time, the services of Mr. Baer as a public speaker were in constant demand. Many of his more important addresses have been published in pamphlet form. They display the great scope of his learning, and the concise and forcible style which marked him for many years. His numerous speeches and books in carrying on litigation before the higher courts, both State and national, show great care, thorough preparation, and complete knowledge of the respective cases; and they evidence in a high degree his superior literary culture as well as his comprehensive legal attainments. Among the numerous addresses and lectures delivered by him, the following may be mentioned:

Land Tenure—Before the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, Oct. 25, 1887.

Relation of Tariff to Wages—Before Single Tax Society of Reading, Jan. 19, 1891.

Address of Welcoming the Convention of Pennsylvania German Society at Lancaster (of which he was elected the first president), April 15, 1891.

Influence of Reformed Church on Civil Government—At dedication of new Theological Seminary of Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, May 10, 1894.

German Banks in Pennsylvania—At opening of it for University of Pennsylvania, March 21, 1896 (being first of four addresses on that occasion).

Appeal to Democrats—Issued in summer of 1896, which resulted in organizing the "Gold Democrats" and aided materially in the defeat of the "Silver Democrats" who controlled the National Convention and nominated Bryan for President of the United States.

Oration—Unveiling of Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument at Allentown Oct. 19, 1899.

Work Is Worship—Before the Y. M. C. A. of Reading, on Jan. 1, 1900, and amplified and delivered before Franklin and Marshall College, on Jan. 16, 1902 (Mr. Baer having been then, and is still, president of the Board of Trustees).

Address—Laying of corner-stone for new Science building at Franklin and Marshall College, June 13, 1900.

Argument before the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission—made at Philadelphia April 8, 1904.

Mixing of Coal—Last lecture of a popular course of eighteen lectures delivered at different places in Schuylkill county, at Pottsville, April 8, 1905.

Railroad Legislation—Open letter to Pennsylvania Legislative, issued Feb. 7, 1907.

Mr. Baer has been prominently identified with Franklin and Marshall College since 1872, as a member of the board of trustees, officiating as president of the board since 1894. During this time he has labored efficiently for the advancement of the institution and contributed liberally toward its financial support. In 1886, the College conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws, and the Alumni Association, at its annual meeting in 1895, elected him as its vice-president.

Mr. Baer was brought up as a firm believer in the sterling principles of the Democratic party, and he has shown himself to be their fearless advocate. Upon locating at Reading he took an interest in local politics, and gave party welfare much of his time; but he was never ambitious to fill any public office because he was too busily engaged with his large legal practice and business enterprises. He has at all times been a generous contributor.
toward the campaign expenses, and he has exerted a powerful influence in national politics, as well as in the county and State.

Immediately after coming to Reading Mr. Baer and his wife identified themselves with the Second Reformed Church, and there their children have been reared. When the church was rebuilt they were generous contributors. On all special occasions, the auditorium is profusely decorated with costly flowers from their conservatory, which elicit much praise and admiration.

In 1866, Mr. Baer was married to Emily Kimmel, daughter of John O. Kimmel, attorney at Somerset, and Mary Parker, his wife. To this union have come five children: Marion married William N. Appel, an attorney at Lancaster; Helen married William Griscom Coxe, of Wilmington, Del.; Mary married Isaac Hiest, an attorney at Reading; Emily married Frank L. Connard, at Reading (he dying Jan. 21, 1908); Nellie married Heber L. Smith, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Baer has taken a very active part in local charities, more especially in the successful management of the Widows' Home, from its foundation in 1876. She has also been a member of this church, of the First Bank Club, and the Needle-Work Guild, serving each society as president. In social affairs she has been the acknowledged leader for many years. Her receptions in their costly and beautiful home "Hawthorne," on Mineral Spring road, have been superb; and it was there, during the celebrations on the historical occasion of the "Sesqui-Centennial of Reading," June, 1898, that she and her husband "displayed a remarkable spirit of liberality in welcoming and entertaining distinguished visitors, and affording them unusual opportunities of seeing and knowing the social, industrial and municipal affairs of Reading, and of realizing its growth, wealth and importance as a promising centre of population." When Mr. Baer became president of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company in 1901, he secured a home in Philadelphia, and he and his family have occupied it since, during the winter and spring of each year. Their home is embellished with a rare collection of books and paintings.

Mr. Baer's father was Major Solomon Baer. He was born in 1794, in Northampton (now Lehigh) county, near Unionville, and when six years old he accompanied his paternal uncle and uncle, to a farm near Mount Beulah, in Northumberland. They remained there sixteen years, then settled on a farm in Somerset county, Pa., about twenty-five miles farther west. He died in 1832, aged eighty-eight, having lived at Somerset from 1819.

His grandfather was John Jacob Baer, of Northampton county, Pa., who was born in 1755, and was brought up on a farm, and followed farming there until 1800, when he removed with his family to Maryland, and there carried on farming until his death in 1828.

His great-grandfather was Christolph Baer, who emigrated from Zweibruecken in 1748. Upon his arrival in Philadelphia, September 30th, he immediately proceeded to Northampton county, where he had purchased several tracts of land. The original patent issued to him describes one of the tracts as "Bruin's Choice," a free translation of the name of his ancestral home.

ISAAC ECKERT, until lately president of the Farmers National Bank of Reading, is one of the leading citizens of that place, a man of distinctive prominence in its commercial life, in which he maintains a name which has long been a synonym for worth and integrity, as well as marked business ability, in this part of Pennsylvania. The Eckert family is one of the oldest in Berks county, having been located here for almost two centuries. As the name implies, the Eckerts are of German origin.

Valentine Eckert, born in Langensalza, Hanover, Germany, in 1723, came to America with his parents in 1740, therein the Tulpehocken Valley, in the western part of Berks county. He became quite a prominent man in his day, becoming a citizen of this country after twenty-one years' residence here. He took a leading part in the Revolution and the events leading up to and following that struggle. In June, 1776, he was one of ten who represented Berks county in the Provincial Conference, and the next month was one of a delegation of eight members from Berks county to the Provincial convention convoked for the purpose of framing a constitution of government,soundly fiscal and capable of sustaining the old proprietary form. He was a member of the Provincial Assembly in both 1776 and 1777. During the war he commanded a cavalry company, was wounded at the battle of Germantown, became sub-lieutenant of the county in 1777, and served as such until he became lieutenant of the county, in the year 1780. He was a judge of the first Common Pleas, holding that office for seven years, until by the Constitution of 1790 a president judge took the places of the various judges. In 1816, though then very advanced in age, he removed to the State of Virginia, where he died, at Winchester, in December, 1821, in his eighty-eighth year.

Peter Eckert, son of Valentine, passed all his life in Berks county, and engaged in farming and merchandising near Womelsdorf, the family home.

Isaac Eckert, son of Peter, was born in January, 1800, in Womelsdorf, and there received his early education in the public schools, later attending the grammar schools of Reading, and the University of Pennsylvania. In his majority he became associated in business with his older brother, William, the sons succeeding their father in the grocery business, which they continued at Womelsdorf until 1828, in which year they moved their establishment to Reading. There they continued it until the year 1832, when Dr. Eckert withdrew from the firm to enter the iron manufacturing business in partnership with his younger brother, Dr. George N. Eckert. In 1842-44 they erected the Henry Clay Furnace, at that time one of the largest anthracite furnaces in the country, and in the year 1855 a second stack was completed. After Dr. Eckert died, on June 28, 1865, Isaac Eckert became sole proprietor of these works until his retirement, in 1873, when he passed them over to his sons, Henry S. and George B. This was not his only connection in the iron manufacturing line, for in 1832 he became president of the Leesport Iron Company, of which he remained the executive head until his death, and engaged in managing extensive iron interests, in which he was one of the largest stockholders. Naturally his influence extended to other business enterprises, and he became especially well known as president of the Farmers Bank, an institution founded in 1814, of which he was chosen president in 1834. He served as such until the age of eighty-two years, and upon his death, which occurred Dec. 13, 1875, was succeeded therein by his son Henry S. Eckert.

Mr. Eckert was just as active in matters affecting the general welfare as he was in commercial circles. He served many years as president of the Berks County Agricultural and Horticultural Society, of which he was one of the founders, and was interested deeply in other enterprises calculated to advance the best industries of this section. Originally a Whig in politics, he became a Republican upon the organization of the party, and in 1860 was a delegate to the Republican National Convention, held at Chicago, which placed Abraham Lincoln at the head of the ticket; in 1864 he was a Presidential elector from the State of Pennsylvania. Throughout the war he did his utmost to aid the Union cause, both by liberal contributions and by his influence in directing public sentiment in his city.

He married Judith Hahn, daughter of Dr. Hahn, of Montgomery county, and she was survived by his widow and three children, Henry S., George B., and Rebecca, the last named the wife of F. R. Stetson, of New York City. As a memorial, after Mr. Eckert's death this family presented a full chime of ten bells to Christ Episcopal Church of Reading, of which Mr. Eckert had been a member.
Henry S. Eckert, son of Isaac, was born in Reading, where he received his preparatory education in the public schools. He then became a student at Franklin and Marshall College, from which he graduated, after which he entered business life. Becoming associated with his father in the iron business, he soon qualified so thoroughly for its demands that he was able to take the management of the works himself, and on July 1, 1873, the year of their father's death, but shortly before that event, he and his brother George B. formed a partnership to engage in the iron business, under the firm name of Eckert & Brother. Before long the Henry Clay Furnace became their property, but with all their new responsibilities they passed successfully through the financial panic of 1873. They not only carried on the manufacturing business, but improved the facilities which they considered necessary, and by this work, and their long experience in the iron trade, they soon occupied a position of importance in the iron trade of the city.

While his health was beginning to decline, he had entered the business of the Farmers Bank in 1873, and continued to hold that position until his own death, in 1899, when his son Isaac succeeded him in the management. A year later he was also a trustee of the Union Trust Company and of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, the latter a Philadelphia institution. He was one of the promoters of the Penn Street Passenger Railway, which was put into operation in 1874, and which played so important a part in the development of East Reading. He was one of the projectors of the Berks County railroad, from Reading to Slatington, becoming a member of the board of directors upon the organization of the company, and he also served as a director of the Wilmington & Northern Railroad Company. He was a director of the Reading Hospital and of the Charles Evans Cemetery. For over twenty years he gave his services as president of the school board of control, and in recognition of his valuable work the Eckert school, erected in 1873, was named in his honor.

As a large manufacturer Mr. Eckert was naturally inclined to a belief in the principles of protection, and accordingly upheld the principles of the Republican party, in whose workings he took an active and efficient part. In 1866 he was the Republican nominee for Congressman from his district, running against J. Lawrence Getz, but although supported handsomely by his home city, which gave him a majority, he could not overcome the normal Democratic majority of the district.

In 1857 Mr. Eckert married Carrie Hunter, daughter of Nicholas Hunter, an ironmaster of Reading, and four children were born to them, viz.: Isaac, Helen (Mrs. Herman Meigs), Hunter and Kate M. (Mrs. Reeves). The mother passed away March 28, 1880. Mr. Eckert was a member of the Society of Friends, and served as vestryman for a number of years before his death, and he was a zealous worker in all its enterprises.

Isaac Eckert, at present one of the most notable figures in the business life of the city of Reading, was born there May 27, 1859. He received his education in the public schools of the city and at Lafayette College, from which institution he graduated in 1879, after which he immediately turned his energies to the line of business which his ancestors have followed for generations. The business was sold to the Empire Iron & Steel Company. Mr. Eckert served from 1893 until 1908, when he resigned owing to failing health. He has since been president of the Farmers Bank, now the Farmers National Bank, whose presidency he has held over by a member of this family for almost seventy years, Isaac Eckert being the third generation of the family to occupy that office. The circumstance is remarkable, not only for the unusual length of time the position was held in the family but as indicative of continued moral and mental strength. Mr. Eckert was also president of the Deppen Brewing Company, an important business concern of the city, but this, too, he resigned on account of failing health; he occupies a high position among the most substantial businessmen of the city. He is, however, not active in either politics or outside matters. Both his father and grandfather were, though he is a man of high public spirit and ready to lend his influence or financial aid to worthy projects which have the advancement of the city or the general welfare as their object. He is a Republican in political sentiment, and interested in local government, particularly social and educational affairs.

In 1879 Mr. Eckert married Eliza Kaufman, daughter of William M. Kaufman, and they have had two children, William K. and Carrie.

William K. Eckert, of Reading, is interested in numerous enterprises in the city. He is a native of Reading, born in 1879, son of Isaac and Eliza (Kaufman) Eckert. In his youth he attended the local grammar and high schools, graduating from the latter in 1898, when he went to Cornell University. There he spent two years, at the end of which time he returned to Reading and read law with Isaac Hiester. On Dec. 12, 1901, he took the degree of a secretary and received the commission of a director of the Deppen Brewing Company, which position he resigned in 1908, to enter the banking business, which is his present occupation. He is a director of the Farmers National Bank and of the Colonial Trust Company, two of the strongest financial institutions of the city, and in 1906 was elected second vice-president of the former institution, with which his family has been long associated. He is one of the most successful young business men of his native city, where he has a host of friends.

Mr. Eckert married, Dec. 12, 1905, in Reading, Miss Mary L. Barby, whose family is mentioned elsewhere in these pages. Barby is a well-known old and prominent families of the city. Mr. and Mrs. Eckert reside at No. 812 North Fifth street, Reading, and are well known and much esteemed in that locality. They are members of the Episcopal Church.

William A. Good, first County Superintendent of Public Schools of Berks county, from 1854 to 1860, was born in Philadelphia in 1810. He was educated in the Reading Academy, studied theology in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at York, Pa., and was married Dec. 12, 1836, in Reading, to Elizabeth Hiester. Soon afterward he accepted a call from the Reformed Church at Hagerstown, Md., where he officiated as pastor for several years. From that congregation he went to Mercersburg, Pa., to serve as rector of the Preparatory Department of Marshall College. After remaining there six years he returned to the principal of the Hagerstown Academy for five years. He was then called to the pastorate of the Reformed Church at York, Pa., in which field he labored earnestly for six years.

He next removed to Reading and assumed charge of a select school for young ladies. At the expiration of the fifth year he became principal of the Reading Institute and Normal School, and remained there three years. In the meantime he was elected superintendent of the common schools of Berks county, being the first to fill that office. Most of the people of the county were members of the Reformed and Lutheran Churches, and averse to the new order of things. It was feared that in the rural districts the superintendent would encounter much opposition, but he understood the peculiarities of the people, and instead of raising a storm of opposition won their confidence and support, and he was re-elected for a second term. While thus engaged in the school affairs of the county, he also officiated as pastor of the Bernville, North Reading, and Franconia congregations to a certain extent his churches, and while superintendent of the common schools, endeavored, in his private intercourse with the people, to interest them in the cause of Sunday schools, in this man-
WARREN J. WOODWARD, second President Judge of Berks county, from 1861 to 1874, under the amended Constitution of Pennsylvania, was born Sept. 24, 1819, at Bethany, Wayne Co., Pa. His father, John K. Woodward, was a civil engineer and journalist, and at the time of his decease, in 1825, was prothonotary of Wayne county. His grandfather was an associate judge of that county for fifteen years, and sheriff in 1807.

After acquiring an academic education at Wilkes Barre, Warren J. Woodward taught school for several terms in his native county. At the age of seventeen years he directed his attention to newspaper publications, and continued his connection with them till 1840. He then returned to Wilkes Barre, and selecting the law as his profession, entered the office of his uncle, George W. Woodward, a practising attorney at the Luzerne county Bar, for the purpose of pursuing the necessary course of study. While in this office his uncle was elected to the Bench, and Judge Woodward of the Judicial District of Pennsylvania. His preparation was completed under the preceptorship of Hon. Edmund L. Dana, and he was admitted to the Bar Aug. 1, 1842. He continued in active and successful practice for fourteen years. In April, 1856, the Legislature erected a new judicial district out of Columbia, Sullivan and Wyoming counties—the 26th in the State—and the Governor appointed him to the position of president judge; and in October following he was elected for the term of ten years. His reputation spread rapidly into adjoining districts. Half of his term had not expired, yet some of the old districts offered him the nomination for the president judgeship on the Democratic ticket. This was a flattering recognition of his judicial character and ability; but he declined the honor. In 1861, the term of the president judge in Berks county was about to expire, and the major part of the attorneys gave him a pressing invitation to become his successor. The Democratic ticket at Reading, Aug. 31, 1861, gave him the nomination by acclamation, and this he accepted. In his letter of acceptance, besides expressing his gratitude for the high honor conferred upon him, and his opinion about the impropriety of law judges participating in political struggles, he informed the committee that in the midst of the far-reaching war then raging, it was most positively for the preservation of the Union of all the States, and for the enforcement of the Constitution. His sentiments were highly approved, and in October following he was elected by a large majority over a local candidate for the same position.

Judge Woodward moved to Reading and took his seat upon the Bench in December, 1861. His judicial and social deportment at once inspired the citizens with unqualified confidence. The Civil War caused much commotion in the county. The Democrats were displeased with the extreme course of the Republican administration in national affairs, but he, notwithstanding his election by them, advised co-operation and the enforcement of law to restore peace. His earnest public actions in behalf of the war, in conjunction with prominent and influential professional and business men, contributed a powerful influence toward the creation of a proper spirit in that alarming period. His attachment as a member of the Democratic principles and association is worthy of special mention.

During his term he was unusually devoted to his office, and his administration of its responsible duties gave entire satisfaction; and he became thoroughly identified with the interests and welfare of the county. His re-election was therefore assured. Shortly before the expiration of his term, the Legislature had established a District Court for Luzerne county, and the Bar of that county unanimously invited him to accept the office of president judge of the new court. When the movement became known to the attorneys of Berks county they held a special meeting and passed resolutions expressing the highest regard and confidence for him, and inviting him to remain with them. The thorough appreciation of his course upon the Bench by the entire community, and the earnest expressions of good will by all the attorneys who practised under him, induced him to remain in the county. He was nominated by acclamation at the Democratic convention in June, 1875, and was re-elected for a second term of ten years by a large majority.

The new Constitution of the State increased the number of the justices of the Supreme Court from five to seven members, and the two new members were to be elected in 1874, one by the Democratic party and the other by the Republican. The superiority of Judge Woodward's judicial qualifications and experience brought him prominently before the Democrats of the State as a worthy candidate for this important position, and he received the nomination of their State Convention. This honor was given to him without solicitation of any kind on his part. The office truly sought the man. Upon his nomination he received congratulations and letters, and the people of Berks county rejoiced at this honor, though by it they would suffer the loss of his valuable services.

Shortly after the election, the Hon. Edward M. Paxson, the Republican candidate, elevated at the same time to the Supreme Bench, visited Judge Woodward at Reading. Whether they cast lots for precedence in the order of succession to the position of chief justice, and Judge Paxson won it. Judge Woodward took his seat Jan. 1, 1875, and filled the office with honor and distinction till his decease, Sept. 23, 1879. He was particularly regarded for devotion, ability and conscientiousness in the discharge of his duties. His remains were buried at Wilkes Barre.

Judge Woodward was elected president of the Reading Benevolent Society at Reading in 1871, and he filled this office until his decease. He took a deep interest in the benevolent affairs of the community, and gave generously toward the relief of poor people. In 1875 he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Franklin and Marshall College. While upon the Bench in Berks county, he adjudicated many cases and his opinions were not questioned by writ of error or appeal. These cases were compiled by G. A. Endlich, Esq., an attorney of the Berks Bar, and published in two volumes in 1885. They are known as "Woodward's Decisions." toward securing a convenient and prominent place for its business, and the building is not only the finest and largest of its kind at Reading, but also one of the finest in the country. This was accomplished in 1888, and has been securing the management of this financial institution and proving a most substantial investment.

Mr. Kraemer married, in 1877, Ella Hall, of Huntingdon, Pa. They are active members of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church at Reading, and since their marriage have resided at Stony Creek. He has been serving as an elder of the congregation since January, 1906, filling a position which his father had filled for many years.

Louis Kraemer, the father, was born at Berleberg, in the province of Westphalia, Germany, on Jan. 2, 1838, and was reared on a farm and lived in that place. He learned the trade of dyeing at Barmen on the Rhine river, a prominent textile manufacturing town. Upon completing a thorough apprenticeship, he emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1848, while still under age, and located at Manayunk, where he secured the position of dyer in the manufacturing plant of Joseph Ripla. He remained at this place three years, and then went to Norwich, Conn., to assume charge of two large dyeing establishments, one at that city and the other at Greeneville, an adjoining town. After continuing there nearly fifteen years, he visited Reading, Pa., and, becoming favorably impressed with the city as a promising center, he selected a site for a mill on the Antietam Creek, at a point three miles east from Reading. In 1864 they commenced making woolen goods under the name of Kraemer, Schaefer & Co. In 1879 the company was re-organized under the name of Louis Kraemer & Co., and the works have been operated under this name ever since. This industry has been very successful for over forty years, the goods manufactured obtaining a high reputation, and being shipped to all parts of the United States. Quite naturally a thriving settlement was formed in the vicinity of the plant by its employees, and this came to be known as Stony Creek, comprising nearly fifty dwellings, with a population exceeding 200. The leading spirit in the community was the founder of the plant which supports the people, all of whom respected him highly for his simple but noble nature and true Christian character. His love of people under and about him and the reciprocation between them was so admirable as it was appreciable.

Mr. Kraemer, the father, was married in 1859 to Catherine Pfeil, daughter of John Pfeil, of Westphalia. They were the parents of four children, of whom the son named is the only survivor. They were members of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church of Reading, becoming members and members of the organization, which they withdrew from the First Reformed Church. The wife died in 1872, and the husband in 1903.

During the last twenty-five years of his life Mr. Kraemer made several trips across the ocean, giving special attention to Switzerland and Germany, for which countries he had a strong affection. The establishing of "Textile," a promising industrial suburban town (since absorbed by Wyomissing), a mile west of Reading by young German manufacturers from Barmen on the Rhine, is directly attributable to his great success and influence.

SAMUEL BELL, clerk of the United States Circuit court at Philadelphia, for thirty-seven years, was born at Reading, Berks county, April 28, 1827. He was educated in private schools and at Yale College until his eighteenth year, when he went to Philadelphia to engage in the wholesale dry goods business. He served two terms as a State senator, 1851, and then became a partner of B. A. Knight, trading under the name of Knight & Bell, for a number of years.

When the Civil war broke out, Mr. Bell enlisted and served three months. Afterward he acted as one of the commanding officers of the Philadelphia and Suburban Battery, and served as paymaster in the United States Army by the appointment of President Lincoln. In February, 1865, he was elected a member of the Union League, and he has been prominently identified with this influential organization until the present time. He became a member of the Meade Post, G. A. R., at Philadelphia, and filled that position until his decease in 1891. He was elected a member of the First City Troop of Cavalry at Philadelphia in 1851, and is now the oldest surviving member of this popular and historic military society.

In 1870 Mr. Bell was appointed by Judge McKenna as the clerk of the United States Circuit court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and he filled this important office with great success for thirty-seven years, resigning Jan. 1, 1907, on account of his age. He was appointed United States Commissioner at Philadelphia in 1874, and is still serving this office, notwithstanding his advanced years. He was a member of the board of school directors, and filled the position by re-election for twenty-seven years, officiating as president of the board for twenty-two years.

His father was the Hon. Samuel Bell, merchant at Reading and associate judge of the courts of Berks county. He was born at Reading in 1823. For many years until his decease in 1863 he was a prominent member of the First Presbyterian Church. He married Louisa Bowman, daughter of Jacob Bowman, of Brownsville, Pa., and their children were: Mary Greer, Jacob B., Samuel (above), Sterling, Goodloe B., Arthur G., James Lowly, and Mary Louise. His grandfather was William Bell, born in Ireland in 1763. He emigrated in 1791, and settled at Reading, Pa., where he was successfully engaged in the dry goods business and the manufacture of flour in several grist-mills for many years, until his decease in 1858. He married Mary Greer, also born in Ireland, daughter of Arthur Greer, and they had one child, Samuel.

DR. CHARLES MECK SELTZER, physician at Philadelphia for thirty years, was born at Philadelphia March 29, 1838. He received his preliminary medical education at private schools and in the Eastburn Academy, which he attended until 1875, when he took up the study of medicine in the University of Pennsylvania, graduating and receiving his diploma in 1878. He traveled abroad for a year, attending the hospitals in England, France, Italy and Germany, and upon his return he was appointed resident physician of the Episcopal Hospital, which position he filled successfully for two years; afterward he attended the hospital as visiting surgeon from 1881 to 1887. In his private practice he was associated with Dr. Horace Y. Evans from 1886 to 1893, but since then has been engaged in practice by himself. For fifteen years he lectured on Anatomy, Physiology and Hygiene in the Eastburn Academy and during the year 1894 he filled the position of professor of Hygiene in the Medico-Chirurgical College. During his first ten years of private practice he was visiting physician and surgeon to numerous institutions, including the Charity Hospital, Northern Home, Odd Fellows Home, Angora Home, and several others. Since 1895 he has been acting as the supervising medical examiner of the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, at Philadelphia, with many physicians under him. Of late years Dr. Seltzer has gradually been devoting his time and energies to matters of hygiene—especially to the production of pure milk and scientific agriculture, also to the disposal of the waste of large cities, particularly garbage and its reduction to sanitary by-products.

In 1855 he was married to Emily Stulb, daughter of Joseph Stulb, of Philadelphia, and they have a daughter, Mary Louise. His father was Franklin Peter Seltzer (cousin of Jonathan F. Seltzer, whose sketch appears in this publication), born at Womelsdorf in 1823. When he was a boy six years old his parents removed West, driving all the way to the city at night. Orange were among the first settlers. He was educated there and remained at that vicinity at farming until 1845, when he went to Philadelphia and entered a wholesale grocery store as a clerk, where he continued until 1847. He then formed a partnership with his cousin, Jacob Sheetz, for conducting a wholesale grocery and liquor business, and they were partners for fifteen years. Their store was at Third and Callowhill streets. In 1868 he became the owner of the store he had continued at the same stand with increasing success until 1873, when he removed to a larger and more central property, No. 1017 Market street, which he purchased. At this stand he became still more successful, with his trading relations extending throughout Pennsylvania and into the adjoining States; and he continued actively engaged until his decease in 1886, having been identified with the mercantile life of Philadelphia for forty years. He was largely interested for twenty years, in the "Continental Hotel," then the leading hotel of Philadelphia, and at his decease he was succeeded by his son Charles, who became president of the board of managers and officiated until 1903. He was married to Louisa Meck, a daughter of Isaac Meck, of Lititz, in Perry county, on the Farm, and she is survived by their children: Charles M.; Anna Maria, married to Dr. Henry A. Smith; Alice Louise; Susan May, married to John H. Zebley; Henry Fister, married to Margaret Moore; Ralph Edgar, married to Helen Thomas; Elizabeth Maud; Walter Harold, who died in 1905, aged twenty-six years; and a daughter who died in infancy.

Dr. Seltzer's grandfather was David Seltzer, born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, at Womelsdorf, and he assisted his father at farming until 1829, when he moved with his family to Ohio. He was married to Elizabeth Sheetz, while at home, and they had five children, including a son Franklin Peter. Upon his first wife's death he married Margaret Kuntz, by whom he had two children, and after her decease he married a third wife, whose name was Kuhn. [For antecedents see sketch of J. R. Seltzer, in this publication.]

COL NICHOLAS LOTZ was born Feb. 29, 1740, and emigrated to Pennsylvania when a young man. He first settled in the western section of the county, and there married a young woman by the name of Meyer. Some time previous to the Revolution he located at Reading, and became the owner of the two mill and the mill had on the Woyemissing Creek, which he conducted very successfully. When the struggle for independence began, he was prominently identified with the patriotic movements at Reading. He served as one of the ten delegates from Berks county to the Provincial Conference, which assembled at Philadelphia in January, and while there he took an active part in the enlistment of men. He was commissioned a Lieutenant-colonel, and participated in the movement of the "Flying Camp" from Philadelphia to New York, where he was engaged in the battle of Long Island and taken prisoner. He was admitted to parole within certain bounds on April 16, 1777, and exchanged on September 10, 1779. In 1780 he was appointed commissioner of Forage, and whilst serving this appointment he purchased a large amount of supplies for the army, consisting of flour, oats, cattle, sheep, etc. A receipt book of his still extant in 1893, shows receipts for provisions for the army from Aug. 1, 1780, to Dec. 3, 1784, aggregating $203,093. He advanced large sums of money from his own purse for the government, but unfortunately was never fully repaid.

Colonel Lotz represented Berks county in the General Assembly from 1784 to 1786, and again from 1790 to 1794; and he filled the appointment of associate judge of the county from 1795 to 1806, having succeeded Colonel Joseph Hiester in that office. He died Nov. 29, 1807. He left to survive him, eight children, seven sons—Philip, Nicholas, Jacob, John, Henry, Michael, and William—and one daughter—Rosa (m. John Yeager). His remains were interred in the grove at the Church at Reading, and from thence removed to the Charles Evans' Cemetery. He was a man of splendid physique, well proportioned, six feet three inches tall, and weighed about three hundred pounds.

In 1794 Gen. Washington, then President of the United States, visited Reading while on his way to Carlisle. Col. Lotz was at the head of a party of prominent men who arranged a military parade in honor of Washington. The latter reviewed the parade from a second story window of Federal Inn, the building now occupied by the Farmers' Bank.

Lotz was the son of Col. Nicholas. His family Bible is in an excellent state of preservation, and the entries were made by himself. We copy these entries:

"My father, Nicholas Lotz, died on Nov. 29, 1807, aged 72 years, 9 months and 8 days. My dearest wife, Catharina Lotz, died March 13, 1821, aged 42 years and 14 days. His marriage to his first wife was as follows: April 16, 1797, Philip Lotz and Catharina Rapp were married. Philip Lotz had eleven children. The oldest was William, born April 4, 1799, who resided many years at No. 213 North Sixth street, Reading, and who aided largely in erecting the present St. John's Reformed church. Next to the youngest child was Mary, the late widow of Peres Hain, a well-known member of St. Paul's church. She was confirmed by Rev. William Pauli in the First church in 1834, soon after its erection."

The Bible mentioned above is the property of Daniel Miller, author of "History of the Reformed Church in Reading," who also was the happy possessor of a large Latin German, which was the property of Col. Nicholas Lotz. It is a book of sermons which explain the Apostles' Creed, the Lord's Prayer and the catechism. It was published in Jena in 1638. Col. Lotz gave this book to his son John. On the fly leaf in the beginning of the book is this transfer: "This book belongs to John Lotz after my death. Witness my hand, written on the twenty-third day of November, 1808. Nicholas Lotz." On Jan. 18, 1808, John Lotz transferred the book to his brother Philip Lotz.

The descendants of Col. Nicholas Lotz are numerous in Reading. Mrs. Hoffman, wife of the late Rev. Henry Hoffman, was a great-grandchild. Mr. Chas. K. Snell, present secretary of the First church consistory, is a great-great-grandson.

GARRICK MALLERY, fourth President Judge of Berks county, was a native of Massachusetts. After obtaining a preliminary education, he entered Yale College and was graduated in 1800. He soon afterward became principal of an academy at Wilkes Barre. While occupying that position he engaged in the study of law, and was admitted to the Bar about 1818. Being well-adapted by nature for the study of law, he became familiar with his profession by diligent study, and soon acquired a practice which extended over a large portion of northern Pennsylvania. In 1825 he was elected a member of the House of Representatives, and during his legislative career was instrumental in securing the enactment of certain bills which led to the great improvement of the North Branch region. In 1832, Governor Wolf appointed him president judge of the Third Judicial District, then composed of Berks, Northampton and Lehigh counties, and he served the appointment for three years. The Hon. William Strong, of the Supreme court of the United States, was married to a daughter.

ELIJAH BULL was for about thirty years one of the important figures in the commercial world of Reading. He was probably best known in his connection with the Reading Stove Works, Orr, Painter & Co., of which firm he was a member for over thirty years before his retirement, thereafter continuing to serve as director until his death. Other business interests which made him prominent in the city were his association with the National Union Bank, the Building and Loan Association and the Reading Hospital. Mr. Bull was regarded with great esteem as the architect of his own fortunes, for he rose to a position of distinction from ordinary circumstances.

Mr. Bull was born Jan. 20, 1835, at Springfield, Chester Co., Pa., son of Thomas and Sarah A. (Painter)
Bull, and grandson of Elijah Bull, the latter a native of Chester county, where he spent all his life. He owned and operated large tracts of farm land. He was mustered into the volunteer service of the war of 1812, but before the detachment of which he was a member reached the front the war had been brought to a close.

Thomas Bull, father of Elijah, was born in Springfields, Berks county, Pennsylvania, and there received his education. He was reared to farming which he followed in his native county until the spring of 1846, when he moved to Pottsville, Pa. There he took up the vocation of a blacksmith, but he died within a short time thereafter June 13, 1847. He married Sarah A. Painter, and they had five children: Levi, Buckwater, of Spring City, Chester Co., Pa.; Charles, of Reading, was a stove molder, engaged in the works of Orr, Painter & Co.; William; Elijah, and Mary m. the late B. F. Graff. Mr. Bull m. (second) Maria Croyler, and to them were born two children, namely: Susan, m. to Reuben Rishel, and Thomas, who resides in St. Louis, Missouri.

Elijah Bull received a good education in the public schools of Chester county. Going to Philadelphia, he learned the trade of a stove molder, and there followed that occupation until he was thrown out of employment by the closing of the works on account of the panic of 1857. Thus 1858, a part of the year at his trade, teaching school in Chester county during the winter months. In 1864 he began teaching in Mahanoy City, where he continued three years, during which time he became superintendent of the schools. On Jan. 1, 1867, he became a member of the firm of Orr, Painter & Co., manufacturers of stoves, hardware and castings. In February, 1866, the firm was incorporated as the Reading Stove Works, Orr, Painter & Co. Soon after becoming a member of the firm Mr. Bull assumed charge of the shipping department, and discharged the duties of that position with fidelity until the death of Mr. Orr, when he was made a member of the board of directors. The latter position he retained until 1898, when he retired from active participation in the affairs of the company, though he continued to hold stock and serve as a member of the board of directors. The extent of the business done by this concern may be judged from the fact that over four hundred workmen were employed in the various departments, engaged in molding, casting, grinding, cleaning, grinding and polishing, nickel-plating, finishing and mounting. Four branches are conducted—in Chicago, Boston, Buffalo and Philadelphia, representing thousands upon thousands of stoves made and sold annually. Mr. Bull was a director of the Mutual Union Bank of Reading, and a member of the Building & Loan Association. He never took any active part in public matters, his business duties having occupied all his time and attention. He was a member of the board of managers of the Reading Hospital, and liberal and generous along lines of true philanthropy. Mr. Bull was a member of the Memorial M. E. Church of Reading, and was at one time president of its board of trustees. He joined the Odd Fellows in 1854, affiliating with Welcome Lodge, No. 229, of Philadelphia, and was also a member of Mt. Penn Lodge, Knights of Pythias. He enlisted for emergency service during the Civil war in the 42d regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers.

On Dec. 31, 1867, Mr. Bull married Mary A. Amole, whose father, George Amole, of Chester county, Pa., was born Oct. 12, 1808, and died Feb. 20, 1876. He was a farmer and conducted a farm of 233 acres in Chester county. Mr. Bull died Jan. 18, 1890, and his wife survived until Sept. 18, 1903. Their only child, Edna Marguerite, was married May 13, 1905, to Henry C. Keast, a native of Michigan, born Sept. 24, 1862, son of Charles and Anna E. (Evite) Keast, both of whom were born in Cornwall, England, and Mrs. Keast have one child, Kenneth E., born Aug. 7, 1906.

Mr. Keast came to Reading in childhood and received his education in the public schools and the Interstate Commercial College. For some time he was chief packer for C. K. Whitner & Co., leaving them in 1908 to enter the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with which he has since remained. He is chief clerk to Mr. A. H. Kline, the Chief Inspector of Lumber of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He is a Republican in politics.

NATHANIEL POTTS HOBART was born in Philadelphia Oct. 3, 1790, read law in the office of John C. Smith, and was admitted to the Bar of his native city; removed to Pottstown, where he was appointed justice of the peace by Gov. Simon Snyder; joined Capt. Daniel De B. Keim's company of Washington Blues in August, 1814; marched with it to Camp Depot, and there joined the 1st Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers Oct. 7, 1814, and served as fourth sergeant of the company until Dec. 5th of the same year, when they returned to Reading; admitted an attorney of the Berks County bar Jan. 3, 1818; was clerk in the prothonotary's office, under John Adams, for several years; was assistant clerk in the House of Representatives at Harrisburg, under chief clerk Francis R. Shunk. In 1827 Governor Shulze appointed him clerk of the Orphans' court and court of Quarter Sessions of Berks county, which positions he held until 1830, when he removed to Pottstown. In 1830 he was appointed auditor-general of Pennsylvania by Governor Ritner, and held the office for three years. He resided at Pottstown from 1830 until his death July 3, 1860. He married April 18, 1813, Joanna Holland, and their children were: John Potts (who became an attorney in Pottsville), Sarah P., Eliza R., Anna Sophia, Robert H., Nathaniel B., William R. and Ellen G. Hobart.

EDWARD BURD was a practising attorney at Reading, having been admitted to practice in the courts of Berks county in 1772. He removed to Reading from Lancaster. When the company of Capt. George Nagel marched to Cambridge, in Massachusetts, during July and August, 1776, Burd was one of number of devoted and patriotic sons who went along at their own expense; and when the "Flying Camp" was raised he was chosen major of Haller's regiment. In the Battle of Long Island, in August, 1776, he was taken prisoner, and while imprisoned addressed a letter to Hon. Jasper Shupps, at Lancaster. On August 12, 1776, he was appointed prothonotary of the Supreme court, and he continued to officiate in this position by re-appointment until Jan. 2, 1800. His autograph is reproduced herewith:

JOHN SILVIS ERMERTROUT, second County Superintendent of Public Schools of Berks county (eldest son of William and Justina Silvis Ermertout), was born at Womelsdorf, Berks county, Sept. 27, 1827. When he was two years old his parents removed to Reading, and there he was reared. Developing a great aptitude for study, he entered Mercersburg Academy in 1843, from which he was graduated in 1845, the first honor man of his class, though not yet eighteen years of age. He remained in the college as a tutor, teaching the languages and lecturing on history. At the same time he was a student of the Theological Seminary connected with the institution, and from this seminary he was graduated in 1848, and then ordained as a minister of the Reformed Church.

For a time he was editor of the Reformed Messenger. In 1852 he was installed pastor of the Reformed Church at Norristown, Pa., where he served for six years. He returned to Reading in 1859, and opened a select school. One year afterward he was elected one of the common schools, and he was twice re-elected, serving from 1860 to 1869. In 1865 he was active in founding the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, became its first principal, and continued as such until 1871, when he resigned, preparatory to making a public profession of his faith in the Roman Catholic Church, and removed to Baltimore, where he edited a Catholic journal. Subsequently he taught in the St. Charles Borromeo Seminary at Overbrook, near Philadelphia.

An immediate action of the board of trustees of the Keystone State Normal School, he was recalled to that institution, and he filled the chair of Mental and Moral Science and English Literature, until his death in 1881. The vast influence he exerted in educational matters can hardly be overestimated, and the institution which he promoted at Kutztown will always constitute an enduring monument to his memory.

JONATHAN JONES was a son of David Jones, one of the earliest settlers of Caernarvon township, Berks county. He was born in that township in 1738. Upon the breaking out of the Revolution he raised a company of Associates in that locality, and was appointed a captain in the 1st Pennsylvania Regiment, of the regular Continental army Oct. 25, 1775. He was ordered with his company to the “British Barracks,” at Philadelphia, and acted as part of the escort of Harriott, the British Admiral. When the Philadelphia was burned he was ordered into Northampton county, Va., to protect it against Lord Dunmore. The alarming state of affairs in Canada led to the revocation of this order, and, by command of Congress, he marched with his company of eighty-three men for Quebec, over the snow and “hardship and terrible winter march consumed two months. After the precipitate retreat from Quebec, he voluntarily returned, at the risk of capture, and recovered valuable papers. He was with Arnold in his pursuit of the British, after the battle of the Cedars, and took part in the battle of “Three Rivers,” June 8, 1776. He showed unimpaired and distressing sufferings of the army in its disastrous retreat to Ticonderoga, and underwent at that post the severe and exacting routine of military duty incident to its fortification and defense to resist the attack of General Carleton. He was stationed there from July 9 to Nov. 15, 1776. On Oct. 31st the time of enlistment of his men ran out, but through his exertions they consented to remain as long as the enemy was in their front. After a year’s active service he was promoted to the rank of major, Oct. 5, 1776, and to lieutenant-colonel of his regiment, which he retained as long as he held it, to the 2d anniversary of the new armament, March 12, 1777. His constitution was so shattered by the hardships and exposure of the campaign against Canada that he was obliged to return home to recruit his health in the winter of 1776-77. Having partially recovered, he rejoined his regiment in the spring of 1777, the command of which devolved upon him after the resignation of Col. James Irvine, June 1, 1777. Two companies of the regiment were then on duty in Philadelphia and the remainder were guarding the upper forries of the Delaware. Increasing ill health, however, obliged him to resign his commission in the latter part of July. In December, 1778, he was appointed by the Assembly a commissioner under the test laws, and he was a member of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania from Berks county from October, 1779, to October, 1780. His health continued steadily to decline, and he was shortly afterwards stricken with paralysis, which he died, after a lingering illness, on Sept. 26, 1782, at the early age of forty-four. He was buried at Bangor Church, Churchtown, of which members of his family had been wardens and vestrymen from its earliest foundation.

HIESTER FAMILY. One of the old and important families of Berks county is that of Hiester, and the ancestry can be clearly traced to Johannes and Catherine Hiest, who spelled their name in German Huster. They had three sons who came to America, John, Joseph and Daniel by name. John, born in 1707, in 1750 married Mary Barbara Epler, and died in 1777. Joseph, born in 1710, married Elizabeth Strunk, and died in 1777. Daniel, born in 1713, in 1742 married Catherine Schuler, and died in 1795. They were natives of the town of Elssof, in the Grafschaft of Witgenstein, Westphalia, Germany. These brothers settled in Pennsylvania early in the eighteenth century, and their descendants have been more or less prominent in the various walks of life in the same section ever since.

Jacob Hiester came to America in 1738 and first went to live in Goshenhoppen, then Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county. Several years afterward Joseph and his brothers, John and Daniel, united in purchasing from the Proprietary government between two thousand and three thousand acres of land in Bern township, Berks county. Here Joseph and his family resided while Daniel remained at the old homestead in Goshenhoppen. Joseph and his wife Elizabeth had the following children: John, born in 1754, died in 1826; John Christian married Susan Reber; Catherine, born in 1758, died in 1813, married Nicholas Leib; Daniel, born in 1761, died in 1827, married Magdalena Albright; one son married Barbara Kauffman; another son married Susan Anman; Ann Eliza, born April 8, 1766, married Jacob Van Reed; Joseph, born in 1768, died in 1830, married Elizabeth Beck; and William, born in 1770, died in 1828, married Anna Maria Bentz.

Daniel Hiester had several sons who were distinguished: John, born in 1746, was a member of Congress in 1807-08, resigned, and was succeeded by his son Daniel, who served in 1809-10; Daniel of Montgomery county, born in 1747, was a representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1789 to 1797, and from Maryland from 1801 to 1805; Gabriel, of Berks county, served thirty years in the State Legislature; William, the youngest son, for a short time served in the Continental army. His son William, born in 1791, of Lancaster county, was a member of Congress in 1833-35, and died Oct. 15, 1853.

The first named John Hiester had a son Joseph, who was a member of the convention to ratify the Constitution of the United States; was repeatedly elected to the State Senate and House; was a member of Congress in 1797-1807, and from 1813 to 1821, resigning to assume the governorship of Pennsylvania. He died June 10, 1821.

John Hiester, grandfather of John K. Hiest of Reading, was a son of the Joseph Hiest who was born in Germany in 1710. John was born in Berks township, Berks county, Sept. 25, 1754, and died Sept. 17, 1826. He is buried at Bern Church, which he helped to erect. He owned a tract of 200 acres, which was divided after his death into five acres each. This was all woodland where he secured it. His wife was Catherine, and they had the following children: John died unmarried; Ann Eliza married Jacob Gieding; William died unmarried; Daniel died unmarried; Catherine married David Bohn; Daniel died unmarried; John Christian married Catherine Kramer; Yost married Rebecca Reber; and Jacob.

Jacob Hiester, father of John K. Hiest, was born in Bern township July 1, 1801, and died in March, 1873. He was a lifelong farmer, and died on the farm on which he was born and on which he had spent his whole life. His portion of the old Hiest farm was some sixty-six acres, to which he added twenty acres. In politics he was a Democrat, but he held no office except that of school director, a position he filled for six years. He and his family were members of the Bern Church, of which he was one of the leading elders. For many years he served as a lieutenant in the State militia, and he made a fine appearance as a man of commanding presence. He married Susanna Kramer, daughter of John and Catherine (Ruhl) Kramer, of Bern township, and they had the following children: Adam, a farmer on the old homestead, married Rebecca Gring; Lydia married John Moyer, a farmer of Heidelberg township; Gabriel died young; John K. is residing at Reading; Catherine died unmarried.
JOHN K. HIESTER was born in Bern township, on one of the old Hiester stands, Nov. 2, 1848. His education was obtained in the township schools, at a Reading academy, and at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown. In the latter he was a teacher at the academy school in Bern township, and during the winter of 1868-69 he taught in Maiden-creek township; later taught one year in Bern township; three terms in Ruscombmanor township; three terms in Exeter township; one term in Jefferson; one term in Ontoloucke; two terms in Birdsboro; three terms in Cumru; two terms in Roberson, and then this and terms in Bern township, in all thirty-two terms, his services being given all over the county, with fifteen terms in his native township. He thus became widely known, and is held in high esteem, and he constantly meets his former pupils, many of whom never received other instruction than that he gave them.

During the summer months, until 1890, Mr. Hiester worked upon the farm in his native township, but in that year he came to Reading and in the following year he purchased his comfortable home at No. 314 South Thirteenth street, where he has resided ever since. After establishing his home at Reading he continued to follow his profession during the winter months until 1898-99, when he taught for the last time. For five summer seasons he was in the employ of Alderman Giesemier and subsequently worked as labor boss and shipping clerk in the Johnson Foundry & Machine Company, where he continued for over twenty years; with the wealth which he went to the American Iron & Steel Company, where he has remained until the present.

On Oct. 30, 1890, Mr. Hiester married Hettie A. Deisher, born Oct. 30, 1857, a daughter of William and Sarah (Stayer) Deisher, the former of whom is a farmer and business man of Bern county. To Mr. and Mrs. Hiester have been born three children, namely: S. Adella, born Feb. 21, 1892; Morris W., born in August, 1893, who died in October, 1893; and William L., born June 17, 1895.

Mr. Hiester has spent almost all of his life in Berks county, but in January, 1869, he went to Lee county, Iowa, where he worked on a farm until his return to Berks county in the following October. Politically he is a Democrat. He is a member of the Bern Union Church and of the Reformed denomination. His wife worships in Grace Lutheran Church.

Thomas K. Hiester, one of the prominent farmers of Bern township and a representative member of an old and leading family, was born where he now resides, Dec. 16, 1861. He is a son of Harrison K. Hiester and a grandson of John Christian Hiester (son of Joseph, born in 1710). The grandfather was a man of ample fortune, owning two farms near the unknown Bern Church, and he was noted both for his fine personal appearance and for his good judgment and foresight. He and his wife lie buried at Bern Church. He married Catherine Kramer, a native of Bern township. They had five children: Benneville; Jared; Harrison K.; Washington, twin of Harrison, now residing on North Queen street, Lancaster, the oldest surviving member of this family; and Maria, who married John Eyreick.

Harrison K. Hiester, father of Thomas K., was born in Bern township Aug. 6, 1832, and died April 27, 1904; he was laid to rest in Bern churchyard. He was the owner of the old homestead, consisting of 134 acres, and later he bought an adjoining farm of 107 acres from his brother Benneville, the transaction taking place in 1876. He was an enterprising farmer and a man of progress in his community. At the time of his death he was serving as school director. In politics he was a Democrat. He was a prominent and popular member of the Reformed and of the Bern Church. He married Rosabella Kischner, born Sept. 16, 1834, who died Feb. 24, 1878, aged forty-three years, five months, eight days. They had issue as follows: Kate, widow of Aaron Bohn, lives at Mt. Pleasant; Ellen married J. F. Yerger; Thomas K. is mentioned below; Emma married Jonathan G. Bohm, of Bern township; Rosa married Adam Gruber; Sallie, deceased, married Cyrus Bohn; Annie married Henry Stamm, of Penn township; Jemima, unmarried, resides at Reading; Edward K. lives in Bern township; Harry lives in Penn township; Lizzie, residing in Bern township, is married to Grant Hartman.

Thomas K. Hiester was educated in the township schools and the Kutztown State Normal School, and in 1879 he taught school in Bern township. Then he was employed by his father until 1888, when he began to farm the homestead for himself; he bought the property in 1880, his farm contains 134 acres of very valuable land, which, under Mr. Hiester's excellent management, is very productive. Like the other members of his family he is identified with the Democratic party and is sound on all its doctrines. He has served on the township election board and in 1896 he was a member of the school board of which he has been since, having twelve schools under his supervision. He is a long member of the Bern Reformed Church and one of its deacons.

Thomas K. Hiester married (first) Eva Bohn, a daughter of Emanuel and Elvina (Krick) Bohn. She died Dec. 31, 1891, aged twenty-three years, seven months, nine days, and was buried at the Bern Church. She was survived by two children, William and Edna, the former of whom resides at home; the latter married Daniel Glicker, a well-known young man of this community. Mr. Hiester married (second) Ruth Fisher, daughter of James and Frances Fisher, and they have had two children: Walter, who attends school; and Mabel, who died aged ten months, June 9, 1902.

EDWARD K. HIESTER, a well-known young farmer of Bern township and a member of the old Hiester family of this section, was born on the Hiester homestead May 1, 1871, son of Harrison K. and Rosabella (Kischner) Hiester. He attended the public schools of his native township and during 1888-89 was a student for two sessions at the Kutztown State Normal School, after which he worked for his father on the farm. In 1898 he began to farm for himself and bought one of the Hiester homesteads. It is valuable land, and Mr. Hiester improved it by erecting fine buildings and modernizing his residence to a large degree, putting in a system of water pressure. His land adjoins the Bern Church property. In 1899 he married Sallie Schwoyer, daughter of Cornelius and Sarah (Looser) Schwoyer, of Centreport, an old and respected family. They now reside on the farm they own; they have had three children: Abner, Harry, Earl, Bertha, Edward J. and John.

Politically Mr. Hiester is a Democrat, and he has served as township assessor. He is serving in his third term in this office and is a popular public official. For two years he served as a deacon of the Bern Reformed Church.

COL. DANIEL UDREE was born in Philadelphia Aug. 5, 1751. Removing to Berks county, he settled in Oley township, where he became extensively engaged in the manufacture of iron. He operated the Oley Furnace and Rockland Forges very successfully for over thirty years, owning, in connection with those industries, several thousand acres of land. He was established in business by his uncle, Jacob Winey, a prominent capitalist and merchant of Philadelphia.

Colonel Udree was enlisted in the Revolutionary war for several years, commanding a regiment at the battle of Brandywine where his horse was shot under him. He took an active part in the local militia for many years, and served as major-general for one term of seven years about 1815. He represented Berks county in the General Assembly from 1799 to 1803, and also for the year 1805, and while there showed an earnest interest in legislation in several measures. He was the representative in Congress for the Berks District for two terms, from 1813 to 1815, and from 1823 to 1825. It was while he was at Washington, during his last term in Congress, that John Quincy Adams was elected President. He, however, was one of Jackson's supporters. He died July 18, 1858, leaving a large estate. He was the last really prominent and representative man. who lived in Oley, and one of the few Congressmen selected from the country districts of the county. He was a well-developed man, rather below the medium height, and his conversational manner was quick and nervous.

JOHN BANKS, the fifth President Judge of Berks county, serving from 1836 to 1847, was born near Lewiston, Juniata county, Pa., in the year 1793. His paternal grandfather emigrated from Scotland. His father being a farmer, his youth was spent mostly on a farm, but the advantages of a liberal education were not denied him. He entered upon the study of law, was admitted to the Bar in 1819, and soon after removed to the western part of the State. He located in Mercer county, and there attained eminence at the Bar. Without any solicitation on his part he was nominated and elected a representative in Congress, and two terms of Congress. He was consistently a Whig, and a prominent Whig in Pennsylvania, becoming in 1836, the last important position being that of professor of Greek at the University of Pennsylvania. His wife was Catharine Muhlenberg, daughter of Major Peter Muhlenberg, of Reading. She died in 1894 aged sixty-seven years. They had four sons; Ernest A., Henry M., Charles A., and John P.

Rev. Dr. Henry Ernest Muhlenberg, his great-grandfather, was also of Lancaster, and his maternal great-grandfather was the distinguished Revolutionary hero, Gen. Peter Muhlenberg.

FREDERICK SMITH, Attorney General and Associate Justice of Pennsylvania, and one of the most distinguished men that Berks county produced, was born at Reading in 1773. He was a son of the Rev. John Frederick Smith, an eminent divine of the Lutheran Church in Pennsylvania, and a descendant of John Smith, one of the pioneers of that denomination in America. He obtained a superior classical education, and, selecting the law as his profession, after a careful preparation was admitted to the Bar at Reading Aug. 7, 1795. He soon won prominence and distinction, both as a counselor and as an attorney in important litigation. In the meantime he became actively interested in local politics, and served as a member of the Legislature in 1802 and 1803. He was appointed deputy attorney-general for Berks county in 1818, and filled that position three years. He served from 1823 to 1828 as attorney-general of Pennsylvania, and as an associate justice of the Supreme Court from 1827. At the time of his death, his judicial career, though brief, was distinguished. He died at Reading Oct. 4, 1850. He was a member of the Roman Catholic church. He married Catharine Leaf, of Philadelphia. His two sons, Henry W. Smith, Esq., and George Smith, were prominent in the local affairs of Reading for fifty years anterior to 1878, when they died.

JONES. The Jones family was founded in this country by Rev. Thomas Jones, who was born in the year 1702 in Newtonettage, Glamorganshire, Wales. In 1729 he married Martha Morris, and in 1737, they came to America with several children, arriving at Philadelphia July 10th of that year. Rev. Thomas Jones first settled in the Great Valley of Chester county, Pa., where he took up lands, and where his neighbors included a number of Baptists, mostly of his own nationality, some of whom had crossed the Atlantic over thirty-five years earlier. In 1711 they had organized the Great Valley Baptist Church, and in 1719 the Montgomery Church. In 1738 a number of these people, all of Welsh extraction, members of the Great Valley and Montgomery Baptist Churches, removed to Lancaster county, Pa., settling along the Tulpehocken Creek, near its junction with the Schuylkill river, on the southwardly side of the Schuylkill river, opposite what is now the city of Reading. The adults of this little company were as follows: Thomas Jones and wife; David Evans and wife; James James and wife; Evan Lloyd and wife; George Rees and wife; John Davis and wife; Thomas Nicholas and wife; James Edwards and wife; James Thomas and wife; Henry Harry; David Lewis and Thomas Lloyd. The children, finding themselves to be too far from their remote relatives, requested leave to be constituted into a distinct society, which accordingly was done Aug. 19, 1738, and the same year the new church joined the Philadelphia Association of Baptist Churches. In the year 1740 Thomas Jones was also ordained a minister, and became pastor of this church, which was called the Tulpehocken Baptist Church. After the river which runs through the neighborhood. For two years services were held in a small log cabin erected on the property of Hugh Jones, but in 1749 the congregation built two meeting houses on lands presented to them by the Rev. John H. Jones, who lived about six miles from the Schuylkill river at Sinking Spring and the other several miles nearer the river. The church continued to prosper for a time, but became extinct sixty years later, "owing to the departure of Baptist families to other parts, and the coming of Germans in their stead." The church building was purchased in 1799 by the Philadelphia Baptist Association. The parts on which the ancient graveyards are located are still held by the Philadelphia Baptist Association, but are at present under the care of the First Baptist Church of Reading.

Rev. Thomas Jones died March 22, 1788, in his eighty-seventh year, and his wife Martha (Morris) died June 9, 1787. A grave vault is there, and modern-day visitors may walk through the graveyard of the Great Valley Baptist Church in Chester county, where their graves are suitably marked. Their children were: Thomas, Samuel, Griffith, Elizabeth and Sarah. They became allied by marriage with the Davis, Broomfield, Spencer, Lloyd and Cornog families, and from them sprang a host of descendants, many of whom still live in the vicinity of the homes of their fore-fathers, though the majority are widely scattered over the United States.

Thomas Jones, son of Rev. Thomas and Martha (Morris) Jones, was born in Wales in 1738. On Oct. 6, 1762, he married Elizabeth Jones, whom he was to outlive by six years, and the following named children: Martha, Susanna, Sarah, Mary and Samuel. Of these, Martha m. Llewellyn Davis; Sarah m. Roger Davis; Mary m. Mr. Geiger; Susanna m. Dr. Kuhn, of Lancaster, Pa. The father of this family was a large landholder in Heidelberg township, Berks county, and was a farmer by occupation. "At the very beginning of the Revolution he assisted in organizing the Associates of Berks county, and was in active service for a time as major of one of the battalions of this county." He was one of the eight delegates from Berks county to the Provincial Convention which met at Philadelphia July 15, 1776, "for the express purpose of forming a new government in this Province on the authority of the people only." The convention appointed a committee of Safety, approved the Declaration of Independence, and prescribed for justices of the peace, oaths of renunciation of the authority of George III., and oaths of allegiance to the State of Pennsylvania. Dr. Thomas Jones was a member of the Provincial Convention. Thomas Jones was commissioner of Berks county from 1779 to 1786. He died in March, 1800, and is buried in the Baptist graveyard at Sinking Spring. He was the last surviving male member of the T cholpehocken Baptist Church. His wife, who survived him several years, lived at his side, and their graves were marked, but the stones were removed.

Samuel Jones, son of Thomas and grandson of Rev. Thomas, was born on the homestead in Heidelberg township where his father erected a house in 1775. This house is still standing. He was a farmer by occupation, owned a large and valuable tract of land in Heidelberg township, and had slaves whom, however, he set free. The most noted of these slaves was Dinah Clark, a well known character in Reading in her day. The negro quarters occupied by the slaves on the Heidelberg farm are still standing. Samuel Jones donated the land upon which the eight-cornered building at Sinking Spring—used first as a Baptist meeting house later as a school house, now as dwelling—was erected. The original deed of this property is held by the First Baptist Church of Reading.

Samuel Jones married Elizabeth Huey, and to them were born four children, namely: M. Agnes, wife of Hon. James K. Getz, at one time mayor of Reading; Ellen A., widow of Dr. Christian N. Hoffman; Elizabeth, widow of Dr. S. H. Frank; and Oliver, who died a schoolteacher. (3) Margaret Jones m. Dr. Darrah.

(4) Mary C. Jones m. Jacob Van Reed.

Samuel Jones, D. D., son of Rev. Thomas Jones, was born Jan. 14, 1735. In his youth he was baptized into the membership of the T cholpehocken Baptist Church. He was educated in the College of Philadelphia, graduating in 1769, was ordained to the ministry in 1772, and became pastor of the Pennepek Baptist Church, which was organized in 1688, and is now known as the Lower Dublin Church of Philadelphia. He retained that pastorate for fifty years, and he was known as one of the most scholarly and influential preachers of his time, being the most influential minister of his denomination in the Middle Colonies. The Philadelphia Baptist Association in 1764 sent him to Rhode Island to assist in founding Rhode Island College, now Brown University. He remodeled the rough draft of the college charter, which then received the sanction of the Colony of Rhode Island. Later he was offered the presidency of the college, and the college agreed to send a vast and useful influence over the rising Baptist Churches of our country, and himself educated many young men for the Christian ministry. He was a large and firmly built man, his face was the image of intelligence, and good nature, which, with the air of dignity that pervaded his movements, rendered his appearance uncommonly attractive." He died Feb. 7, 1814, and is buried in the Lower Dublin Church.

JACOB MORGAN was the most prominent Revolutionary character of Berks county from 1777 to 1783, and as such brought great credit to the county and great honor to himself. He was born in the district of Caer-narvon, in the northern part of Wales, in 1716, and emigrated with his father, Thomas Morgan, to Pennsylvania some time previous to 1730. About that time a colony of Welsh people, including Thomas Morgan and his family, migrated up the Schuylkill Valley from Philadelphia to the mouth of the French creek, and thence along and beyond the headwaters of that creek until they reached the headwaters of the Conestoga creek, in Caer-narvon township. There they settled and took up large tracts of land which was then a part of Lancaster county, but since 1752 a part of Berks county. The tract taken up by his father was at and in the vicinity of Morgantown. It included the town-plan which he came to lay out in 1770, and which he named after the family, a custom quite common in that day throughout the county. Jacob Morgan was a native of the Line of Pennsylvania in 1756, Jacob Morgan was thirty-eight years old, and until that time he had been engaged at farming. In December of that year, he was commissioned as a captain under the Provincial government, and he continued actively engaged in this military service until 1776, when he returned home and resumed farming. When the Revolutions began, he was nearly sixty years of age. In June, 1776, he was selected to represent the county as a delegate to the Provincial Convention, and in July following as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention. In 1777, upon the creation of the office of lieutenant of the several counties for the purpose of aiding the Executive Council in effectively prosecuting the war, he was selected by the Council to fill this very important position. This preference evidences his distinguished character, for at that time Berks county possessed a number of prominent and influential men. In the prompt and faithful performance of his duties he was very successful, the Executive Council, in his letters to Dr. Samuel Jones, expressed the high regard and esteem for his energy in having the county fill promptly the numerous orders for troops. He resigned in December, 1780. While filling this office he was always recognized as a colonel, and was addressed as such by the Executive Council. He officiated as a judge of the county for the years 1768, 1769, 1775, and from 1774 to 1777; and also as a justice of the court of common pleas.
ROBERT PORTER was the third President Judge of Berks county. He was the eldest son of Gen. Andrew Porter, and was born at Philadelphia Jan. 10, 1768. When only eight years old, the Revolution had begun in earnest and his father had enlisted to serve the United Colonies. Toward the close of the war, his father was colonel of the 4th Pennsylvania Regiment of Artillery, and Judge Porter, when only thirteen years of age, was enlisted in one of the companies under the command of his father. At the conclusion of the war, he resumed his studies at Philadelphia, and selecting the law as his profession was admitted to the bar May 15, 1789. After being employed in a successful practice for twenty years at Philadelphia, he in 1810 was appointed president judge of the Third Judicial District, which comprised the counties of Berks, Northampton and Wayne. He filled this honorable position for twenty-two years, and then, resigning his commission, retired to private life. He died at Reading, on the northwest corner of Fifth and Penn streets, during his term of office. He died June 23, 1842, at Brookville, Pa., aged seventy-four years. He was a man of profound learning and superior legal attainments. Henry M. Dechert, Esq., of Philadelphia, whose sketch and portrait appear in this publication, is a grand-son.

DR. NATHAN C. SCHAEFFER, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was born Feb. 3, 1849, in Maxatawny township, Berks county. He was educated in Maxatawny Seminary (now Keystone State Normal School), Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, Theological Seminary at Mercersburg, and in the Universities of Berlin, Tübingen and Leipsic. He then taught in Mercersburg College, and Franklin and Marshall College, and for sixteen years was principal of the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. In 1895 he was elected President of the National Educational Association at Ashbury Park, N. J. He has served the following prominent positions: President of the Pennsylvania State Teachers' Association: secretary of the National Council of Education; president of the Department of Superintendence of the National Association; president of the Pennsylvania German Society; Chancellor of the Pennsylvania Chautauqua at Mifflinburg from 1903 to 1905; member of the Pennsylvania Commission on Industrial Education; and editor of the Pennsylvania School Journal, since 1893. He is editor of a volume of Bible Readings for schools; author of "Thinking and Learning to Think," and of "History of Education in Pennsylvania," contained in three volumes of "History of the State," published by the Mason Publishing Company at Syracuse, N. Y. He was commissioned State Superintendent of Public Instruction on June 1, 1893, and re-commissioned in 1897, 1901, and 1905. He served as lecturer on Pedagogy in the Graduate Department of the University of Pennsylvania during the absence of Dr. Brumbaugh, while serving as Commissioner of Education in Porto Rico (1900-1901).

Dr. Schaeffer is a son of David Schaeffer, of Maxatawny township, and Esther Ann Christ, his wife (daughter of Solomon Christ and Elizabeth Bieber, his wife, of the same township). He married Annie Ahlum, of Quakertown, Pa., and they have seven children: Clarabelle, Helen (m. Prof. Huff), John, Frederick (teaching at Mercersburg), Grace, Annie and Mary.

HIRAM H. SCHWARTZ, first Orphans' court Judge of Berks county, from 1883 to 1891, was born in Maxatawny township, near Kutztown, in 1836. At the age of twenty-two he went to Lehighton and there worked on a farm, and while so engaged attended the local schools until he was sixteen years old. He continued his preparatory education in the Van Derveer Boarding School for several years; then entered Franklin and Marshall College, and after taking a regular course was graduated in 1855. Missions in Lehighton public school for two years; and then he was elected school superintendent of Lehighton county, an office he very successfully filled from 1857 to 1860. During this time he took up the study of the law at Allentown, in the office of the Hon. Samuel A. Bridges, and succeeded to practice in 1858. Taking up law again at Allentown, he was located at Kutztown two years, he located at Kutztown, and he continued in active practice in Berks county until he received the appointment of Judge of the Orphans' court in June, 1883, from Governor Pattison, which office has been created by a special Act of Assembly; and at the next election in November of that year he was elected for the term of six years. He officiated until his death Aug. 25, 1891, after a protracted illness. After having located at Kutztown in 1860, he became interested in various enterprises there. He was particularly interested in the cause of education, and identified himself with the establishment of the Keystone State Normal School, which he served as a trustee until his decease.

GEORGE D. PENROSE (deceased) was born in Maiden-creek township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Ephraim and Lydia Ann (Smith) Penrose. The Penrose family is a very prominent one in Pennsylvania, of English descent and of Quaker belief. George D. Penrose was a life-long farmer of Maiden-creek township, where he owned and operated a valuable farm. He and his wife were members of the Society of Friends, he belonging to the Hicksite branch, and she to the Orthodox. They had one child, George D.

George D. Penrose was educated in the common schools of Berks county, passed through the high school at Reading, and took an advanced course at Swarthmore College, the great Quaker educational institution which ranks with Yale and Harvard. While he was still a youth he learned telegraphy, and after completing his education he followed it for some years and subsequently became an operator for the Pennsylvania & Reading Railroad Company. In 1883 he accepted a similar position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and on promotion was sent to the general office in Philadelphia. He was a young man of marked ability, and continued to find recognition with his employers and became assistant auditor for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company. He was filling this important position at the time of his death, which took place Aug. 2, 1889, as the result of an accident. It had been the custom of himself and wife to spend the summer seasons at Atlantic City, where Mr. Penrose enjoyed the surf bathing, and it was during a season there that he was drowned. This came as a source of universal regret to his family, his employers and to a very large circle of friends.

On Oct. 16, 1884, Mr. Penrose was married to Catharine M. Yarrington, daughter of Thomas O. and Catharine S. (Feather) Yarrington, both of English descent. One child was born to this marriage, Edwin Y. In political faith Mr. Penrose was a Republican. Fraternally he was an Odd Fellow.

The Yarringtons came from England early in the 17th century, and were among the earliest settlers in Stonington, Conn. Abel Yarrington, grandfather of Thomas O., lived in their direct line, and settled in Wilkes Barre, Pa., where he established the first ferry across the Susquehanna at that point. He was a soldier in the Revolution. Of his sons, five in number, the third was Luther.

Luther Yarrington, son of Abel, was born in 1776, and died at Wilkes Barre in 1838. He married Hannah Abbot, a descendant of George Abbot. The latter, a native of Yorkshire, England, born in 1615, emigrated to America in 1640, and became one of the founders of Andover, Massachusetts.

Thomas O. Yarrington, son of Luther and Hannah, was reared in Exeter. He became a civil engineer, and followed that profession for many years. He died June 3, 1905, aged eighty-six years. He married Catharine S. Feather, daughter of William and Margaret (Strohecker) Feather. Mrs. Yarrington died Dec. 7, 1902, the mother of seven children: Abbot died in infancy; William F., of Macho Chunk, m. (Miss) Hannah (Dodson) Alsever, of Reading. Enid McCauley, daughter of the Rev. C. A. McCauley, and had two children—Edith (deceased) and Charles (deceased in November, 1905, aged ten years); Amelia m. George W. Manning; of New York, and has one daughter, Grace Y.; Thomas O., of Reading, m. Emma Heatherington; Catharine M. is m.彭rose; and Margaret m. William H. Albright, a job printer at Reading, and has two children—William Y. and Frank Y. The Yarringtons are all members of the Episcopal Church.

Peter Feather, great-grandfather of Mrs. Catharine S. (Feather) Yarrington, appeared on the list of taxables in Reading in 1758. Peter Feather, Jr., son of Peter, was born in Exeter in 1788 and married Margaret(Levan) Kenna, daughter of Balthzer and Maria A. (Levan) Van Kenna, and granddaughter of Casper Van Kenna. Maria A. (Levan) Van Kenna was born in Exeter in 1720, daughter of Isaac Levan, one of the first settlers.

William Feather, son of Peter, Jr., and Margaret, was born in Exeter in 1849; married in 1863, owned and operated a tannery at Hamburg, Berks county, at the time of his death. He married Margaret Strohecker, who was born in Reading in 1876, daughter of John and Julianna Strohecker, residents of Reading a century ago. Mrs. Margaret (Strohecker) Feather died at Hamburg in 1874. John Strohecker, Sr., father of John and grandfather of Mrs. Feather, served in the Revolution as first lieutenant, Capt. George Will's Company, Major Hiester's Battalion of Militia, of Berks county, Pa., in service at Newtown, Jan. 2, 1777.

DAVID F. GORDON, seventh President Judge of Berks county, from 1849 to 1851, was born at Philadelphia Nov. 20, 1795. He received a classical education at the University of Pennsylvania, studied law, and was admitted to practice in 1816. He remained in that city until 1834, when he returned to Reading and married Margaret (Van) Kenna, the daughter of Balthzer and Maria A. (Levan) Van Kenna, who had married his father. He was admitted to the Bar in several courts of Berks county. He continued in active practice here for eight years, and then purchased the Berks and Schuylkill Journal, a weekly English newspaper, published at Reading. He published this paper very successfully until 1838, then sold it and resumed his law practice. After practicing for eleven years, he was appointed president judge of the county, which had just been erected into a separate judicial district. He remained on the Bench until December, 1851, retiring then by virtue of the amendment to the Constitution, under which the office of judge became elective, and the Hon. J. Fringle Jostle was chosen to fill this position for ten years. He was recognized as an able judge, and thoroughly conscientious in the performance of his judicial duties. Upon retiring from the Bench, he resumed his legal practice at Reading. He died Dec. 27, 1859.

ALBERT J. BRUMBACH, manufacturer and banker at Reading, was born at Brumbach's Woolen Mills in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., Oct. 11, 1840. He was educated in the township schools and at Lee's Academy in Reading until he was fourteen years old, when his father placed him in the woolen mills which he was operating, to learn the trade of a clothier. After learning the business thoroughly in all its departments, he, upon arriving of age, purchased the premises. Shortly afterward the building was burned down, but he immediately rebuilt the mill, introducing the latest improved machinery. This was in 1864, and the plant was named the St. Lawrence Mills, after a certain grade of woolen cloth which his father had begun to manufacture there in 1856, and sell through a commission house at Philadelphia. The building is built of stone, two stories high, and has at present three sets of machines which are run by steam, as well as water-power supplied by the Antietam creek flowing near by. Various improved machines have been substituted for old machines to meet the demands of the business. The hands are generally employed, and the product consists chiefly of worsted carded cotton. The goods were sold through commission houses and merchants at Philadelphia until 1870; then until 1895 by traveling salesmen who developed in this way a large and profitable trade throughout the greater part of the United States. In 1895 Mr. Brumbach established a fine three-story brick factory building (14th and Mulhenberg streets) for the manufacture of sheets and other goods, and since then he has been converting the cloths produced at the St. Lawrence Mills into all sizes and styles of the articles mentioned. He employs there 120 hands, and has a large and constant demand for his goods.

Besides carrying on his two plants very successfully, Mr. Brumbach has shown an enterprising spirit in other affairs, relating to internal improvement and the public welfare, as well as to manufactures. He took an active part in establishing the Oley Turnpike from Black Bear to Pleasantville, acting as a director of the corporation since 1878, and as secretary since 1888; he was prominent in establishing the East Bethel Turnpike (from Ninth and Penn streets, in Reading, to Black Bear in 1895 which was the first street railway operated by electricity at Reading), and has officiated as president of the company from the beginning until the present time. He assisted in establishing the Penn National Bank of Reading in 1883, serving as a director since then, and as president since 1897; the Reading Cold Storage & Ice Company in 1900; the Reading Glove & Mitten Company; the Penn Shoe Company in 1902, and the Printz Furniture and Carpet Company in 1907 (embracing large stores at Hazleton, Rochester and Newark); all of which he has served as director, and of the last-named was president in 1905. He was prominently identified with the rebuilding of the Schwartzwald Church in Exeter township by acting as chairman of the meeting, in 1870, which took earnest steps in behalf of the new church; also with the extension and improvement of the fine cemetery there, serving as secretary of the company for about twenty years until 1901; serving for many years as a director and was one of the singers. He has been affiliated with the Freemasons at Reading (Chandler Lodge) since 1861.

In 1862 Mr. Brumbach married Sarah Ann Dunkel (daughter of Solomon Dunkel, of Exeter); by whom he had six children: Solomon, superintendent of the St. Lawrence Mills, m. Margaret (Hiester) Seger; William, watchkeeper at mills, m. Edwina Jack; Albert, superintendent of pants factory, m. Carrie Esterly; Ida m. Stockton Snyder, and both were killed in the Honda wreck, California, May 11, 1907; Kate m. William J. Ermentrout; and Emma m. Custer Ammon.

Mr. Brumbach's father, William Brumbach, was born in 1814 in Exeter township, where his father became the owner of a woolen mill in 1830, and while still a boy was put in the mill to learn the business. In 1842, he and his brother Jacob became the owners of the plant, and they carried on the business as partners for three years when Jacob withdrew. William then operated the plant himself in a successful manner until 1853, when he purchased the Housum grist mill (which was situated along the Antietam creek near by), and from that time he carried on the two mills until they were destroyed by fire in 1863. He then went to Union county, Pa., and became a partner of Mr. Griffey & Brumbach, who operated the White Deer Woolen Mills. A few years afterward the senior partner died, and the firm name became Griffey & Brumbach, and this firm carried on the plant until Mr. Brumbach's decease in 1898. He was married twice. His first wife was Sarah Spats, daughter of Jacob Spats, who carried on farming and butchering in Exeter, in the vicinity of the woolen mills. To this union were born four children: Emma m. Jacob A. Strohecker; Albert J.; Sarah m. William K. Leithiser; and Elizabeth m. J. B. Smith; of whom two, Rachel Schneider, daughter of David, of Oley, and by her he had four sons, David, George W., Aaron and Thomas, who learned the business of manufacturing woolen cloth with Albert J., and they have been operating a plant of their own at St. Lawrence under the name of Brumbach Brothers; and one daughter, Mary, m. C. O. Snyder. He died in 1868; his oldest son, Peter, died in his twenties; his second wife, Rachel Schneider, is still living at age eighty-two years.

Mr. Brumbach's grandfather was Jacob Brumbach, who had learned the fulling business at the De Turck mill in Exeter, near Monroe, and in 1830 purchased a small plant established along the Antietam creek near where the St. Lawrence Mills are located, which he operated until 1842 when he sold the property and business to his two oldest sons, William and Jacob. He died in 1873, aged ninety-four years. He was married twice: first to Dorothy Bar (born 1795, died 1822), and second to Susanna Gunbert (born 1795, died 1838), and had eight children, viz.: Lydia m. John Wagnier; William m. Sarah Kline; Rachel m. Elizabeth Ann Tea; Catharine m. William Levan; Louisa m. Moore John; Rebecca m. William Levan; and Daniel m. Lydia DeGour, living at Covington, Kentucky.

Mr. Brumbach's wife, father, Solomon Dunkel, was a farmer of Exeter. He married Elizabeth Althouse, of Dundor, who died young; they had children, viz.: Anna M. Amos Dick; Mary m. John Hoyer; Caroline m. Henry Egolf; Miss Elizabeth; Morgan died 1888; Kilian m. Maria Messinger; David, and James.

ADAM B. DUNDOR, M. D., a retired physician and surgeon of Reading, Pa., was born in North Heidelberg, Berks county, May 17, 1838, son of Isaac Dundor, and a member of the fifth generation from the emigrant who came from Alsace-Lorraine to Philadelphia in 1741. The family owned in Heidelberg Huguenot stock, and the name was originally spelled Dandelor. Jacob Dundor, founder of the Dundor family in America, was born July 25, 1720, son of Miguel Dandelor, who never came to America. Jacob Dundor made the voyage to America in 1741, sailing on the ship Friendship. He located in Bern township, Berks Co., Pa., where he died May 20, 1789, leaving his widow, Anna Maria (Brecht) Dundor, and children as follows: Maria C., Susannah, John, Michael, John Jacob and Catherine E.

John Jacob Dundor, son of Jacob, and great-great-grandfather of Dr. Adam B., married Marguerite Brown, by whom he had children: born: Jacob, John A. Christian, John (2) and Margaret.

Jacob Dundor, son of John J., died Dec. 12, 1828, leaving a son, Jacob, Jr.

Jacob Dundor, Jr., married Elizabeth Klopfl, born Nov. 28, 1788, died Dec. 19, 1842. They were the parents of these children: Isaac, born March 13, 1800, and died Jan. 33, 1873; Jacob; Samuel K.; Catherine; Eliza; Caroline; Sarah, and Lydia. Jacob Dundor, Jr., and his wife were both interred in North Heidelberg cemetery. They were devoted members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Dundor was a Democrat. He was a prosperous farmer and owned valuable lands in North Heidelberg township, continuing to follow agricultural pursuits during his long and useful life.

Isaac Dundor, son of Jacob, Jr., and father of Dr. Adam B., was educated in the schools of his native township, and was reared to agricultural pursuits. He retired from active life and located in Reading several years before his death, which occurred at the age of 75, in 1873. He married Elizabeth Barks, daughter of John Barks, and she died in 1890, aged seventy-nine years, the mother of two children: Jonathan, born March 8, 1833, died April 22, 1866; and Adam B.

Adam B. Dundor received the rudiments of his education in the schools of North Heidelberg township, and later took an advanced course at Freemont Academy. Chester county, still later entering Freeland Academy (now Ursinus College), subsequently taking a classical course at Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, graduating therefrom in 1862. While there he registered as medical student under the preceptorship of Dr. William Moore, of Womelsdorf, and remained with him two years, during which time he made it his business to enter Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia. Taking the doctor's degree, Dr. Dundor then took a special course at Long Island College Hospital, at Brooklyn, N. Y., and received the degree of M. D. in the spring of 1864. The year following in regular and full residence at Freehold, N. J, from Franklin and Marshall College. The Doctor located in Roselonia in 1864, remaining there until 1867, when he decided to make the city of Reading his field of practice, where he has continued to reside since. He first opened an office on Franklin street where he remained three years, and then removed to his present fine home, in which he maintained an office until he retired from practice in 1896. There never has been any doubt as to his ability or standing in the profession, as from the very beginning of his active career he has been successful in diagnosis and treatment, and he has had the unbounded admiration and esteem of his fellow practitioners. From 1870 to 1873 he was physician to the Berks County Poor House and Hospital, and from 1873 to 1877 prison physician. In 1883 he became a member of the board of health, from which he resigned in 1902, after serving nine years as its president. Dr. Dundor has made a careful study of hygiene and sanitation, and he has had the ideal physician's sense of duty in looking after the health of the people. As a member of the board of health his work has been, indeed, colossal, and more than that, it has been of such a nature as to bear good fruit. The nearly perfect system of vaccination was the result of his labors. As a member of the committee on School Hygiene, he personally looked after this work, was thoroughly inspected every room in every school building in the city, together with the heating, ventilation and plumbing of the buildings, the furniture of the rooms, location of black-boards, in fact every thing in any way affecting the health of the pupils. In most complete tabulated form the records of his work were presented to the board, while his report suggesting needed changes, etc., was one of the most practical and sensible ever handed in by a city official anywhere. When he retired from the presidency of the Berks County Medical Society, Jan. 22, 1904, the address on the subject of School Hygiene, and so complete was it that it was retailed, so well conceived, that it should be carefully studied by the building committees of school boards all over the country. This address is a plea for the health and happiness of future generations, an appeal to common sense, and is of so high a standard of excellence—the outcome of the scientific investigations of a conscientious scientist, working for the greatest good of all the people, which in itself is the loftiest type of patriotic endeavor—that it is worthy the dignity of a State document to be printed and spread broadcast among all people. He has been a great friend of education and no man in the State of Pennsylvania has worked harder in the cause of the child and the student than has Dr. Adam B. Dundor.

Dr. Dundor was married in 1864 to Emma R. Kalbach, daughter of Isaac Kalbach, and five children were born of this union, two of whom died in infancy. The children surviving childhood were: Henry I., who died in 1876; Edward; and Eleanor R. In religious belief the family are members of the Lutheran church. The Doctor is a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 257, F. & A. M.; Exceisior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and Friendship Lodge, K. P., of Reading. His name: rofession connects him with the Berks County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania Medical Association, the American Medical Association, and the American Academy of Medicine. He was also a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Dr. Dundor is a very talented writer, and his works are well read and widely known. Among his works may be found: "A Plea for Old Standard Remedies"; "Sanitation and Sanitarians"; "Rheumatism; Epilepsy and Treatment by Bromide of Potash"; "Cocaine Intoxication and Its Dangers, Moral Pollution and Sanitation"; and the "Old and New Obstetrician."

HENRY VAN REED, first additional law judge of Berks county in 1869, was born Aug. 31, 1821, in Cumru (now Spring) township. His grandfather, John Van Reed, settled there about the time of the Revolution, and his father was born there in 1786. He was educated at Reading, Lititz, Lafayette College and Dickinson College, graduating from the last named institution in 1843. Upon returning home he selected the law as his profession, and pursued a regular course of legal study in the office of David F. Gordon, Esq., afterward president judge of this judicial district. On April 5, 1844, he was admitted to the Bar, and soon established a large and lucrative practice, which he continued for twenty years.

In 1851 he made a trip to California, visiting his brothers, who were living in some city of the West. In April, 1869, the State Legislature authorized the qualified electors of Berks county to elect an additional law judge. At that time the Governor was a Republican in politics, and having been authorized to appoint a suitable person to act as such judge till one should be elected, he appointed Mr. Van Reed to fill the vacancy on July 13, 1869. The appointment was given to him without any solicitation on his part. He occupied his seat on the Bench and discharged his duties in a superior manner till Dec. 6, 1869, when his successor was qualified. Subsequently, from Jan. 23, 1875, till Jan. 2, 1876, he again filled the same office by appointment from the Governor to supply a vacancy caused by the promotion of the then incumbent to the office of president judge. Judge Van Reed represented this district as one of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention which was held in 1872 and 1873.

During the progress of the Civil War, he was an ardent supporter of the national administration in every way, and his strong patriotic feelings impelled him to express himself in the most positive manner in favor of prosecuting the war. When the State of Pennsylvania was threatened with an invasion by the Rebels, in September, 1863, he enlisted with a large number of the most prominent men of his county in Company G, of the 2d Regiment of the Pennsylvania Volunteers, commanded by Captain F. S. Bickley. This company was marched to and beyond the State line and performed military service for eleven days when it was discharged. During the excitement throughout the State, owing to the battle of Gettysburg, in the beginning of July, 1863, he enlisted again in Company C, 42d Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, and acted as a sergeant. This regiment was composed entirely of Berks county companies. It was under the command of Col. Charles H. Hunter and continued in service from July 6th to August 12th.

Mr. Van Reed died June 30, 1885, after an illness of several years. He married Catharine Gernant, daughter of George Gernant. She died Jan. 13, 1883. They had two children: George and Anna.

SAMUEL F. MILLER, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, was born at Richmond, Ky., in 1816. He was appointed by President Lincoln in 1862, and came to be an authority on constitutional law next to Marshall. His father was born at Reading, Pa., and had removed to Kentucky shortly before 1816, where he engaged in farming.

GEORGE DE BENVILLE KEIM, a prominent merchant, politician and official of Philadelphia, was born at Reading, Berks Co., Pa., Jan. 18, 1831, a son of John May and Harriet (de Benville) Keim.

John May Keim was a prominent hardware merchant at Reading for many years. He married Harriet de Benville, and they had six children, namely: Ellen, who married John Wickersham; Mary, who married Isaac Lathrop; Esther, who married Leonard Myers; George de Benville; Anna, who married Amos Michener; and John May. Further data see the publication entitled "Keim and Allied Families" which was compiled by D. Randolph Keim.

After receiving a thorough education at Reading and at "China Hall," in Bucks county, Mr. Keim engaged in a general hardware business at Reading until 1862, when he went to Philadelphia, and purchased the store of Rufus Smith, on Commerce street, east of Fourth. After continuing with him for seven years he started in the saddlery hardware business for himself, at Third and Race streets, which he carried on until 1872; then he organized the firm of Keim, Kennedy & Co., which did business successfully until 1876, when the name was changed to Geo. de B. Keim, Ltd. & Co. and so continued for nearly twenty years. In 1871 Mr. Keim became the owner of the Coleman Bolt Works, and operated the plant for a number of years. He was also identified for some years with the Union Banking Company, as a director, and with the Citizens' Bank as president.

In 1873 Mr. Keim represented the United States as a commissioner to the World's Fair at Vienna. At its close he traveled for a year over many parts of Europe and brought home with him many rare and costly paintings and works of art. This collection he continued to add to, and by many persons his collection is considered the finest owned by a private individual in Pennsylvania. For many years he resided at No. 1138 Spruce street, and he had a summer home at Edgewater Park, N. J., occupying a fine estate on the eastern bank of the Dordwark river; he also owned a farm and "shooting-box" in Maryland. While enjoying sport at the latter place he contracted a heavy cold, which developed into pneumonia, and he died after a short illness, March 10, 1893. He had a large circle of friends who appreciated him very highly for his genial, frank and straightforward nature.

In 1850 Mr. Keim was married to Miss Sarah Childs, of Milestone, Pa., by whom he had six children: Harriet de Benville, Mary L. Ellen W., Walter M., John M. and Fanny Granville. In 1888, Mr. Keim was married (second) to Miss Elizabeth Archer Thomas, daughter of Joseph Thomas and Belinda Jane (Mitchell) Thomas, the former of whom was a distinguished citizen of Philadelphia. They had two children: George de Benville and Elizabeth Thomas.

JOHN W. GILBERT, of the firm of Heffner, Gilbert & Croll, leading clothiers and men's furnishers at Reading, Pa., was born Sept. 5, 1856, near Gilbertsville, New Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa., son of Elias Y. and Rebecca (Wartman) Gilbert, and grandson of John and Sarah (Yerger) Gilbert.

John Gilbert was born near Gilbertsville, Pa., a little branch of the old native Pennsylvania side of the early residents of that name, and he and his wife were the parents of two children, Elias Y. and a daughter who died in infancy. After Mrs. Gilbert's death, John Gilbert married (second) Esther Bickel. By this union there were children as follaws: Jesse, Lydia, Henry, John, Milton, Emma, Percival and Augustus. In religious belief the grandparents were members of the Lutheran Church. He was a blacksmith by trade, and this occupation he followed for many years, dying aged sixty years.

Elias Y. Gilbert was born on the old Gilbert homestead near Mechanicsville, Berks County. He received a good common school education, and during his vacations worked in his father's blacksmith shop, learning the trade. This he followed for a short time, and then engaged in the hotel business, first in Berks county, and later, after a short time spent in the butcher business, returned thereto, continuing in that occupation for forty years. In 1871, fourteen years of this time was being in Pottstown. He died Dec. 1, 1898, and his wife followed him to the grave April 3, 1901. The children born to this union were: Mahlon W., born Aug. 16, 1850, in New Hanover, Montgomery county, is deceased; Elizabeth W., born Dec. 21, 1853, in New Hanover, died unmarried; Sarah A. W., born Oct. 18, 1854, in New Hanover, married C. W. B. Todd, Feb. 21, 1901; John W., born Sept. 5, 1856; Ellen W., born Sept. 11, 1859, in Boyertown, Berks county, married Nevin Gery, now of Philadelphia; Elias H., born Feb. 19, 1861, at Colebrookdale; Emma W., born Oct. 29, 1865, in Colebrookdale, Berks county, married W. M. S. Gilbert, now of Reading; John W., born Sept. 27, 1869, at that place, married Anna Ratz, and they live in Pottstown; and Eli married a Miss Ida Moll, of Alburtis, Lehigh county.

John W. Gilbert attended public school in Berks and Montgomery counties and Perkiomen Seminary. At the age of seventeen he engaged in business, in the grocery line, and this he followed during the summer months for three seasons. When twelve years of age he engaged at clerking in a general store at Forgedale and at Landis Store. He then clerked in his father's hotel for four years, during this time attending the Seminary. Later he taught school for two years, afterward, in the butchering business at East Greenville and Alburtis, still later going to Philadelphia, where he was employed eleven years by W. L. Graver as traveling salesman. In 1890 Mr. Gilbert came to Reading. He was appointed steward at the Berks County Alms House, where he remained about five years, and at the end of this time engaged in the men's furnishing goods business on Fifth street. In 1897 the firm of Heffner, Gilbert & Croll was established, commencing operations at No. 528 Penn street, which store they conducted until 1904, when, on account of their steadily increasing business and lack of room they removed to their present fine store, formerly the Brillig store, and the firm continued the finest stocks of men's furnishings and clothing in Pennsylvania. They also have a custom tailoring department, where the finest domestic and imported suiting are constantly kept on hand. A corps of cutters and first-class tailors are kept busy turning out suits of the finest cloth in this section. The company employs ten clerks, and the building, which is 34 x 300 feet, is equipped with all modern improvements and appliances.

Mr. Gilbert was married in 1879 to Miss Amanda Sallade, daughter of Abraham Sallade, and two children were born to this union: Bertha, and Helen, both of whom reside in Philadelphia. In his political belief Mr. Gilbert is a Democrat. He is a member of Vaux Lodge, No. 406 F. & A. M., and of the K. G. E.

E. RALPH ADAMS, who at the time of his death was superintendent of the Philadelphia & Reading Telegraph Company, was born Nov. 5, 1850, at Robesonia, Berks Co., Pa., son of Reuben and Magdalena (Jones) Adams.

Reuben Adams was born also in Berks county. He carried on a blacksmith and machine business at Robesonia, where he died in November, 1893, aged seventy-five years. He was married in June, 1886. They had four children named: Richard, of Missouri; Rufus, who died at Denver, Colo.; E. Ralph; Emma, deceased, who married Samuel Kurtz; John; and Valeria, wife of George Fisher. E. Ralph Adams was a pupil in the public schools until the age of fourteen years, when he took charge of the telegraph service at Robesonia, for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway. This was in 1862, and he continued to be in the employ of this corporation until his death, with the exception of 1871 to 1874, when he was with the Western Union Telegraph Company, at Sedalia, Mo. After his return to the former company he was made manager of the Sixth street office at Reading, in 1875 becoming superintendent of the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia office of the company as manager. Nine months later he was promoted to be superintendent of the whole service, and this responsible position, gained entirely through his own merit, he held up to the time of his death, which occurred March 8, 1895. He was a member of Lodge No. 5, B. C. M.; Excelsior Chapter, Reading Commandery, K. T.; and Philadelphia Consistory. He belonged also to Mt. Penn Council, Royal Arcanum, and to the Philadelphia & Reading Relief Telegraph Association.

In 1871 Mr. Adams was married to Loretta Loag, a daughter of William R. and Eliza (Strong) Loag. They settled at what is now known as Loag's Corner, Chester county, where they engaged in farming. She is the youngest of their children, the others being: Margaret, deceased, wife of Michael P. Boyer, a prominent attorney at Reading; John, deceased, who was proprietor of a hotel at Scanton, Pa.; Emma, widow of James Thompson, of Hillsboro, Ind.; Sarah, deceased; and Sarah, deceased; Mary of Philadelphia; George, deceased; and Anna, wife of Theodore J. Bell, of Chester, Pa.; Frances, also of Chester. Mr. and Mrs. Adams had two children, viz: Fred E., who is supervisor of the Shamokin Division of the Philadelphia & Reading Telegraph Company, and wife, Lue G. Felix; and Florence L., wife of R. Ray Holmes, representative for the Equitable Life Assurance Society at Reading, Pennsylvania.

CLYMER FAMILY. In tracing this family, the first of whom we know are Christopher Clymer of New Philadelphia, Catherine, who lived in Bristol, England. They had two children, Richard and William, who came to America about the year 1705. Both married, but only Richard left issue.

Richard Clymer and his wife, Elizabeth, had five children. Three of them died in infancy. Two sons, Christopher and William, both married and both left descendants, Christopher's son George having been one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

William Clymer, second son of Richard, married Anne Judith Roberdeau and left but one child. This was Daniel Clymer, born 1845, who was taken into the firm of General Roberdeau, Daniel's father, having died between Daniel was quite young. Daniel Cunningham Clymer married Mary Weidner and they had three children: Ann, who died unmarried; William, who married Susan Righmyer and had eight children, all of whom died childless; and Edward Tilghman. Edward Tilghman Clymer, son of Daniel C., married Maria Catherine Hiester, and they were the parents of seven children, as follows: Daniel Roberdeau, born March 31, 1819; William Hiester, born Oct. 9, 1820; Edward Myers, born July 10, 1822; Weidner, born May 12, 1824; Mary Hiester, born Nov. 5, 1827; and George Edward, born Jan. 8, 1830. DANIEL ROBERDEAU CLYMER, eldest son of Edward Tilghman Clymer and Maria Catherine Hiester, was born at the Clymer homestead in Caernarvon township, Berks Co., Pa., March 31, 1819. After receiving his education at Liditz, Lancaster county, he engaged in the mercantile business in Reading, Pa., which he pursued until 1852. In 1853-54 he was mayor of Reading, and some years later held a position with the East Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which he resigned in 1869, after which time he was not in business. He was also a lawyer, having been admitted to the Bar Aug. 20, 1837, but was never engaged in the active practice of the law. He married at Mercersburg March 31, 1846, Delia Pierson, daughter of Silas and Sarah Pierson of Morristown, N. J. Mrs. Clymer was born Jan. 8, 1824, and died June 14, 1861. They had five children: Maria Hiester, born June 2, 1847; Sarah Anna Moore, born June 24, 1849; Delia Pierson, born May 28, 1851; Daniel Roberdeau, Jr., born Nov. 6, 1854; and Henry Hoover, born Oct. 27, 1856.

Mr. Clymer was well known over the whole State and highly esteemed by a large circle of friends. He was a devout member of the Episcopal Church, and was looked upon as a faithful and upright Christian gentleman. His death occurred after a short illness at his residence in Reading, Pa., May 5, 1869.

WILLIAM TILGHMAN CLYMER, second son of Edward Tilghman Clymer and Maria Catherine Hiester, was born at the Clymer homestead in Caernarvon township, near Morgantown, Berks county, Pa., Oct. 9, 1820. His father dying while the children were all small, the subject of this sketch was placed in the charge of his uncle, William H. Clymer, of Plymouth county, Mass., who was in his uncle William’s store for a short time, and subsequently sent to Lititz to school. He afterward came to Reading and he and his brother, Daniel R. Clymer, opened a dry-goods store at No. 518 Penn street. Later they moved their store to the building on the southwest corner of Fifth and Penn streets, which property they bought. Some years after William Clymer sold out his interest in the store to his brother Daniel, and in 1846 he and his brother Edward M. Clymer purchased the charcoal furnace at Mt. Laurel, Berks county, where he—William H. Clymer—resided until 1882, with the exception of about two years in 1864, when he moved to Reading. In 1860 he and his brother purchased the old Oley charcoal Furnace near Friedensburg, one of the oldest charcoal furnaces in the United States, and commenced mining iron ore extensively. The Temple Furnace, a large and perfectly equipped anthracite furnace situated at Temple, five miles north of Reading, was built by William H. Clymer & Co., and operated by them until 1870, when the Temple Iron Company was organized with William H. Clymer as its president. About 1880 the Clymer brothers had the Mt. Laurel Furnace changed from a charcoal to an anthracite furnace, and a railroad, one mile in length, was built from the East Pennsylvania railroad at Temple to the furnace. After these improvements were made the brothers organized the Clymer Iron Company, a corporation which included in its operations the Mt. Laurel Furnace, Oley Furnace, extensive limestone quarries at Bower’s Station, iron ore mines near Pricetown, and a number of mines along the East Pennsylvania railroad. This corporation, of which William H. Clymer was president, was entirely independent of the Temple Iron Company, of which he was also the president. About a year before his death Mr. Clymer resigned the presidency of the Clymer Iron Company, of which he had been president, and was succeeded by his brother, Hiester Clymer. He, however, retained the presidency of the First National Bank of Reading, which he held from 1876 until his death, and the presidency of the Temple Iron Company. He removed with his family to Reading, Pa., in September, 1882, and died there July 29, 1883. He had a large acquaintance and was greatly respected for his sterling character; was a man of excellent judgment, and his advice was frequently sought upon many important matters. He was brought up an Episcopalian and was a member of Christ Church, Reading, at the time of his death.

On June 12, 1855, Mr. Clymer married Valeria, eldest daughter of Levi B. Smith. She was born March 14, 1828, and died Aug. 17, 1901. Their family consisted of six children: Emily Smith, born July 16, 1856; Edward Tilghman, born Aug. 8, 1857; William Clymer, born March 21, 1860; Levi Smith, born April 2, 1863; Valeria Myers, born April 29, 1865; and Frederick Hiester, born May 2, 1869.

EDWARD MYERS CLYMER, third son of Edward Tilghman Clymer and Maria Catherine Hiester, was born at the Clymer homestead in Caernarvon township, Berks Co., Pa., July 16, 1822. He went to the local schools in his early years and in 1837 entered the Abbeville Academy in Lancaster county, and to the academy of Joshua Hoopes, at West Chester. He then selected the law as his profession, and after pursuing his legal studies for a while under William Strong, Esq., he entered the Harvard Law School, from which he graduated in 1845. Upon his return to Reading, he was admitted to the bar in 1846. He then opened a law office and soon acquired a lucrative business, which he continued until 1857, at which time he became thoroughly interested in projecting the East Pennsylvania railroad, from Reading to Allentown. His efforts in this enterprise were entirely successful and he became the first president of the company, and continued in this office until the road was leased to the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company. In 1874 he was chosen president of the Coal Company belonging to the New York & Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which it owned and operated in Pennsylvania, and he held this position until his death, which occurred in New York City, May 25, 1883. He was popular in social and business circles and united to a more than common business sagacity an abundance of well-directed energy, a quality which received marked development in building the East Pennsylvania railroad, and the proposed continuation of a system of underground railroad under Broadway, New York. He was married, Jan. 27, 1864, to Ella Maria Dietz, daughter of William H. Dietz, of New York City. They had but one child, a son, Edward Myers Clymer, born May 18, 1869, who succeeded him as the head of his family.

MARY HIESTER CLYMER, only daughter of Edward Tilghman and Maria Catherine Hiester, was born at the Clymer homestead, Caernarvon township, Berks Co., Pa., July 19, 1825. She was married Aug. 10, 1852, in Christ Church, Reading, Pa., by the Rev. Milton Lightner, rector, to her cousin, William Bingham Clymer, the eldest son of Henry Clymer and grandson of George Clymer, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Clymer was born at the homestead, near Trenton, Bucks Co., Pa., his mother having been Mary Willing. He received a liberal education, graduating with credit at the College of New Jersey in 1855, and in the law school at Philadelphia. When quite young he assumed the management of the Bingham estate. In 1842 he was appointed agent for the northern counties of Pennsylvania, and in 1845 established the general office of the estate at Wellsboro. His management of the large property was highly successful, so that in 1867 he was appointed a trustee. He ever carefully considered the rights and interests of all, and enjoyed the confidence of the trustees, while his courtesy, kindness and perfect integrity commanded the respect of the tenants and others on the estate. Mr. and Mrs. Clymer died four days after each other, where all their children were born with the exception of the third, who was born in Philadelphia. The children were all baptized by Rev. Mr. Marple, rector of Christ Church, Wellsboro. In July, 1889, they sailed for Europe, taking all their children for the advantages of education; and while abroad, on the 28th of May, 1873, Mr. Clymer died of apoplexy in Florence, Italy. The family then returned to Philadelphia in the autumn. Mr. Clymer’s remains were sent home and are interred in Charles Evans cemetery, near Reading, Pa. In November, 1878, Mrs. Clymer and her children left America with the intention of settling on the Continent, but she and two of her children, Richard and Maria, were drowned in the English Channel before they reached their destination, the vessel in which they took passage having been lost Nov. 26, 1878. The following children were born to Mary Hiester Clymer and William Bingham Clymer, Hiester, born June 10, 1853; Maria, Dec. 19, 1854; Ellen S., Dec. 9, 1856; Richard Willing, April 10, 1858; Maria Hiester, Feb. 11, 1862; and Rose Nicolls, Sept. 19, 1866.

HIESTER CLYMER, fifth son of Edward Tilghman Clymer and Maria Catherine Hiester, was born at the Clymer homestead, Caernarvon township, Berks Co., Pa., Nov. 24, 1858. He received a liberal education, graduating from the College of New Jersey in 1847, and taking up the study of law was admitted to the Bar of Berks county, April 6, 1849, after which he practiced in Reading and Potts ville. He married April 3, 1856, Elizabeth M. Brooke, daughter of Matthew Brooke, of Birdsboro, Pa. They resided in Reading, where their two children were born and died, and where Mrs. Clymer died Oct. 9, 1870. He was a delegate to the Democratic Convention at Charleston, in 1860, and in the same year was one of the Revenue commissioners; served as State senator from 1860 to 1868; became a member of the Democratic party in the latter year, but was defeated by Governor Geary. In 1870 he was appointed by the governor a member of the Board of Public Charities, then just organized. In 1873 he was elected a representative to the XLVIIIth Congress from Berks county, as a Democrat; and served on the Committee on the Library of the House of Representatives of the United States. He was re-elected to the XLVIIth Congress, and was placed on the committee on Expenditures of the War Department, and the Joint Standing Committee on the Library; also re-elected to Congress in 1876 and 1878. In 1880 Mr. Clymer was succeeded in Congress from the Berks District by the Hon. Daniel Ermentrout, and from that time until his death resided in Reading. His discussion with State Senator A. K. McClure, in February, 1881, in the State Senate, on the repeal of the tonnage tax on the traffic of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, brought him prominently before the public. The crowning act of his Congressional life was his presentation to Congress of the special committee report touching the rascality of William B. Belknap, President Grant's Secretary of War, which created a great sensation throughout the land. His career in the Senate of Pennsylvania was distinguished for his uprightness of demeanor, fidelity and eloquence in debate, and steadfast devotion to the best interests of the Commonwealth. He was interested in the iron business, and at the time of his death was president of the Clymer Iron Company.

Mr. Clymer married April 26, 1883, Mrs. J. B. Clemens (nee Eliza), of St. Louis, Missouri. Mr. Clymer died June 12, 1884, at which time he was vice-president of the Union Trust Company, Philadelphia; president of the Clymer Iron Company, which operated the Mt. Laurel and Oley Furnaces; a director of the Reformed Fire Insurance and Trust Company from the time of its organization, and a trustee of the Charles Evans Cemetery.

Hiester Clymer and Elizabeth M. Brooke had two children: Elizabeth M., born Jan. 20, 1857; and Edward Brooks, born March 18, 1859.

GEORGE, the youngest child of Edward Tilghman Clymer and Maria Catherine Hiester, was born at the Clymer homestead, in Caernarvon township, Berks Co., Pa., Jan. 8, 1830. He was sent to the Reading Academy and from there to Princeton College, from which institution he graduated in 1849. He then became associated with his brothers, William, Edward and Hiester, in the iron business in eastern Pennsylvania, owning the Mt. Laurel and Oley Furnaces and other property connected with the iron business. In 1853 he went to Mexico and joined a party who surveyed the route for a railroad from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico. In the summer of 1861 Mr. Clymer raised a company of cavalry which became attached to the 6th Pennsylvania Regiment, Col. R. H. Rush, of which Mr. Clymer was made major in March, 1862. During 1863-65 he was occupied in mining in Nevada and Chihuahua, Mexico. In 1870 Mr. Clymer severed his connection with his brothers in the iron business and removed to Cincinnati, where he became interested in the Swift Iron & Steel Works of Newport, Ky., of which his father-in-law was president. Mr. Clymer was elected vice-president in 1874 and removed with his family to Newport. In 1881 he returned to Reading and again became interested in the iron business, and after the death of his brother Hiester became the property and operated the furnace until two years before his death, when he retired from active business and settled in Reading.

Major Clymer married June 29, 1803, Alice Cary Swift, daughter of Alexander Swift, of Cincinnati. She died in Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 14, 1873, leaving two children. Mr. Clymer died in Reading July 7, 1895. He was the worshipful master of Lodge No. 69, F. & A. M., during the years 1855 and 1856, and was also a member of the Sons of the Revolution and of the Loyal Legion. The children of George Edward Clymer and Alice Cary Swift were as follows: Edwin Swift, born June 16, 1871; and George Alexander, born July 25, 1872.

LEWIS CRATER, Secretary and Treasurer of the Reading Steam Heat and Power Company, and Secretary and Treasurer of the Warren County Traction Company, is one of the representative citizens of Reading, and he is descended from one of those sturdy emigrants from the Palatinate, who sought religious freedom in the New World.

The name Crater was originally "Greter," as is evidenced in the original oath of allegiance to the King of Great Britain, signed by the emigrant ancestor when he landed at Philadelphia. This paper is on file in Harrisburg. The different branches of the family have adopted various spellings—Greder, Grader, Grater, Krater and Crater. The change from "G" to "C" was originally through "K." On May 28, 1800, Governor John McKean recorded the property of George Heebner, and the papers were made out by one Thomas Richards in the name of John Crater. The error was not discovered until about 1800, when the property was sold, and in order to save trouble, the new papers were signed "John Crater." The family records show the great accuracy of its memory has been tilled of the soil, and they have been law-abiding, hard-working, honest, upright and strictly conscientious.

Religious persecution in Germany broke out with renewed frenzy in 1732, and about 30,000 Protestants were driven from the country in the middle of winter. Among these fugitives were (1) Jacob Greter and his family. From Colonial Records, Vol. III, p. 515, it is found that Jacob Greter was one of 291 "Palatines" arriving at Philadelphia, Pa., in "the ship Samuel of London, Hugh Percy, master, from Rotterdam, but last from Deal, on the 17th day of August, 1732." By occupation he was a weaver, but after coming to Pennsylvania, he purchased a tract of land along the Perkiomen river, at or near what is now known as Grater's Ford, and there he also carried on farming. That he was not among those who sold themselves for a term of years to pay for his passage, but was able at once to purchase land, goes to prove he was a man of some means. Later records show his wealth increasing. In the census report of Perkiomen or Van Bebbers township, Montgomery county, June, 1756, there is this entry: "Jacob Greter, weaver, owner of 220 acres of land." Again, in the history of Perkiomen township, that same year is found "Jacob Kreter, owner of 220 acres of farm land at Grater's Ford, also a saw and grist mill." Records in his own handwriting indicate more education than was common in those times. In his religious faith he was a follower of Menno Simons, and it is not clear whether he was a preacher at the time of his arrival in Pennsylvania, but from the earliest entry in the minute-book of the Skippack Church it is shown Jacob Greter was one of the most active members, and the general opinion is that he was a real bishop. His descendants for several generations clung to the Mennonite faith, but as the country grew and education became more general, the younger members of the family joined more progressive denominations, and adopted the dress and customs of the times. In the old family record of Jacob Greter the names of those of his children have been lost owing to the leaf being torn off, the date of birth however being left. One of these three was undoubtedly "Lewis." Jacob Greter's children were: Jacob, born May 23, 1759; Maria, April 18, 1731; George, March 14, 1746; Mary, Feb. 29, 1736; Paulus, July 8, 1738; Barbara, June 21, 1740 (married Frederick Hubler); Christian, Jan. 30, 1743; and Michael, July 7, 1745; — born June 8, 1750; — born May 2, 1753; and Michael, in 1758.

(II) Johannes Greter, son of Jacob, was born April Vigilance 1765; period correspondence January, the He Rev. 1775; Phila. May, Reading Ephraim, In a member 1779 former doors 1875; which politics, acknowledged His the the number 10, the of born Henry 1734. His children were: Maria, born Oct. 17, 1760; Jacob, Oct. 1, 1763 (died May 27, 1764); Johann, July 13, 1765; Abraham, April 19, 1768; Cadarina, May 25, 1771; Ludwig, Jan. 5, 1775; Elizabeth, April 6, 1779 (married Henry Hall). (III) Johannes Grater (2), son of Johannes Greter, was born July 13, 1765. He married and became the father of a large family (all of whom adopted the spelling of the name, Crater), as follows: Abraham, born March 2, 1792; Jacob, Dec. 28, 1793 (died single); Phillip, Jan. 21, 1794; Isaac, Nov. 26, 1795; David, Feb. 15, 1796 (died in 1899); Catharine, Oct. 19, 1802 (married John Young); Elizabeth, Feb. 3, 1805 (died Aug. 27, 1805); Henry, March 22, 1808 (died in December, 1815); and Israel, Feb. 18, 1812 (died single). (IV) Abraham Crater, son of Johannes Grater, was born March 2, 1792. He married a daughter of Rev. Henry Pennypacker, great-aunt of former Governor Pennypacker, of the State of Pennsylvania. To their marriage were born six children, namely: Ephraim, born May 1, 1814, is mentioned below; Elizabeth, born May 20, 1817, died Dec. 7, 1834; Margaret and Christiana, born Sept. 10, 1818, both died unmarried; Jacob, born July 1, 1820, married to Frances, and died Nov. 17, 1893; and John, born Feb. 22, 1822. (V) Ephraim Crater, son of Abraham, was born May 1, 1814. His education was obtained in the district schools. He grew up on the farm, and made farming his life work. He married Dec. 18, 1836, Susan Longacre, and they became parents of eight children. (Sixth generation, born Oct. 7, 1837, died Oct. 17, 1872; Lavina, born Aug. 21, 1839, married Joseph Lukens; Anna, born Sept. 10, 1841, married Jacob Nyman; Lewis, born Aug. 9, 1843; Catharine Elizabeth, born Jan. 3, 1845, married Joseph Nyman; Jacob L., born Feb. 16, 1847, lives in Pottstown; David L., born Nov. 28, 1850, and Abraham L., born Sept. 18, 1853, died Nov. 9, 1873.) Ephraim Crater, the father, was a stanch old-line Whig in politics, but at the formation of the Republican party, joined its ranks, and ever afterward was one of its active workers. He was a strong Abolitionist, and was one of the workers in the old underground railway. His good wife died May 3, 1878, aged sixty-four years, eight months, fifteen days. They were believers in the Mennonite faith. (VI) Lewis Crater, son of Ephraim, born Aug. 9, 1843, received a good substantial education in the common schools of Chester county. Reared in the atmosphere of politics and public affairs, he soon decided on making some sort of a trade and opportunity to show his loyalty, and on Sept. 10, 1861, he became a member of Company H, 50th P. V. I., and participated in thirty-three engagements besides a number of skirmishes. He was once slightly wounded, had his sword cut from his side, and he was promoted from sergeant to lieutenant, and was again promoted to full colonel of the regiment, closing his service as adjutant of the regiment. He was honorably discharged July 31, 1865. After the war, Mr. Crater returned to Pennsylvania, and entered Bryant and Stratton's Business College at Philadelphia. For some time he taught penmanship in the schools of Philadelphia, but failing health necessitated a change of employment. He moved to Reading, and accepted a position in Philip Albright's grocery, later becoming a clerk in the dry goods establishment of H. A. Hoff, where he remained one year. He then became an accountant in Earl's Banking House, and continued there until it closed its doors in 1867. His next position was as chief clerk and bookkeeper for William McIlvaine & Sons in the Reading Rolling Mill, until that concern suspended operations in 1897. Since that time Mr. Crater has been a public accountant, and is considered an expert in that line. In 1888 he was elected Secretary and Treasurer of the Reading Steam Power Company, and has since held that office. He was a member of Mt. Penn Paper Box Company, Ltd., in which he held the office of secretary, until 1908, when the company dissolved. Mr. Crater is a writer of considerable ability, especially on historical subjects, for which he has a decided fondness. In 1867 when Col. Bates was gathering data for the history of the troops of the State of Pennsylvania Mr. Crater furnished very much of the data relating to the 50th regiment, and some years after wrote and published a history of the 50th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He wrote the "History of the Grater Family" and the "History of St. Peter's M. E. Church." In his fraternal relations, Mr. Crater is a member of the G. A. R, in which he has served as Post commander; a companion of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, Commandery of Pennsylvania; and a member of the Union Veteran Legion; the P. O. S. of A.; Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F.; Veteran Castle, No. 481, K. G. E.; Society Army of the Potomac; Army of the Cumberland and Army of the Tennessee. On Sept. 20, 1865, Mr. Crater wedded Miss Rosie C. Lowe, daughter of Peter Lowe, of Lebanon, Pa. Four children blessed this union: Emma May, born Jan. 9, 1867; m. Arthur E. Suter, of Zurich, Switzerland; Mary Minerva, born June 20, 1868; Annie Lulu, born Sept. 21, 1870; m. Jan. 15, 1875; and Morton Murray, born Jan. 14, 1872. THOMAS C. ZIMMERMAN, known all over Berks county as the talented editor of The Reading Times, is an enterprising and aggressive newspaper man, a clear-headed thinker, and an able and versatile writer. His best works, by which he has achieved distinction as a literary genius, are the translations of German poetical masterpieces into English, and his rendering of English poems into the Pennsylvania German vernacular. In these two fields of work he is acknowledged by the best authorities to be without an equal. He is a poet by natural instinct, self-training being the means by which he has developed his native powers of expression. In presenting through the columns of The Reading Times, his translations of English poems into Pennsylvania German, he has proved himself entitled to the highest regard of the class of worthy citizens of the Keystone State allied with him by race, in whose interests he has ever been an earnest and indefatigable worker. The only school education Mr. Zimmerman ever enjoyed was the public school training he received during the years of his boyhood in Lebanon, Pa., where his birth occurred Jan. 23, 1838. Thus he never had the advantages of a classical education, and therefore all the more credit is due him for making such splendid progress in his work and opportunities. When thirteen years of age he was apprenticed to the printing trade, in the newspaper establishment of the Lebanon Courier. Upon the completion of his term of service he went to Philadelphia, and worked on the Philadelphia Inquirer a short time, until Jan. 5, 1856, when he came to The Berks and Schuylkill Journal, in Reading, as a journeyman printer. In 1859 Mr. Zimmerman removed to Columbia, S. C., where he worked on the State laws, in the printing establishment of Dr. Robert Gibbs, who afterward became surgeon-general of the Confederate Army. In March, 1860, Mr. Zimmerman returned to Reading, as the anti-Northern sentiment had become so intense and virulent in South Carolina, the hotbed of secession, that his life was endangered, though he never openly opposed the course of the secessionists while in that section. Upon his return to Reading he once more entered the employ of The Berks and Schuylkill Journal. Under its proprietor, Jacob Knab, who became postmaster of Reading in May, 1860, he acted as clerk until the close of his superior's term of office, in July, 1865. During this period Mr. Zimmerman contributed some striking articles on postal reform to the United States Mail and other journals, which called out a correspondence with the then postmaster-general, Mr. Dennison, and some of the suggestions solicited were incorporated into that official's report. When he finished his connection with the post-office he resumed his work in the Journal office, and in January, 1866, became co-proprietor and associate editor of the paper. Up to the year 1869 the firm bore the name of
J. Knabb & Co.; in that year they also became the proprietors of the Daily Times, which, in 1871, was consolidated with the Evening Dispatch, under the title The Times and Dispatch. The Reading Times Publishing Company was organized in 1897, with Mr. Zimmerman as president and editor. This paper is one of the foremost journals in the State, and exerts a marked influence on the general and material development of the city, standing in high esteem with the political leaders in the State and at Washington. After more than half a century of journalistic work in Reading, he retired in October, 1908. In commemoration of the event a public subscription dinner was given him at the "Mineral Springs Hotel," in which upward of eighty leading citizens of Reading and adjoining communities participated.

Mr. Zimmerman was happy in the choice of his vocation and his home. He is a great lover of nature, and evidently believes, with a distinguished writer and fellow-pedestrian, that "the shining angels second and accompany the man who goes afoot, while all the dark spirits are ever looking out for a chance to ride." It was his habit for nearly forty years to take daily walks into the country, accompanied often only by his favorite dog, returning after a long excursion to his editorial desk by noon. Nothing turned him aside from the calling for which he was so eminently fitted. He had many flattering offers to emigrate, but never made any of them. In all new ventures he were declined. In his early manhood he had arranged to enter the law office of Hon. William Strong, and was importuned to study for the ministry; his manifest destiny, however, made and kept him a journalist and writer of no mean ability. A brother editor comments on the journalist's abilities of Mr. Zimmerman. "Mr. Zimmerman is a writer of force and ability. His writings are pure, easy and graceful. He is witty and humorous when occasion demands. In controversy he is gentlemanly at all times, and in argument he is fair and generous to his opponents. He has a genuine taste for literature, poetry and the fine arts, as many of his articles attest. He is one of the ablest writers in the old Commonwealth. Many of his articles show alike the eye of the artist, and the hand of the litterateur." One of these productions, that most widely published and copied, was a sketch of his visit to the Luray Caverns in Virginia, the beauty of which inspired the moment, as seen by the Hotel and Cave Company, who caused to be published upwards of sixty thousand copies in illustrated pamphlet form for general circulation. The newspapers of Richmond, Va., copied this article, and the favor it met with called out the request that Mr. Zimmerman also write up the undeveloped resources of Alabama.

Mr. Zimmerman was united in marriage with Tamsie T. Kauffman of Reading, on June 31, 1867. Several years previous, in 1863, he enlisted in Company C, 42d Pa. V. I., but that company did not see active service. He was one of the founders of the Pennsylvania German Society, as well as one of the reorganizers, in 1898, of the Historical Society of Berks County. He has been for many years a member of the Board of Trustees of the Asylum for the Chronic Insane of Pennsylvania, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Reading Free Public Library. The Honorable John D. Zimmerman has been made the Honorary President of that body. He was also a member of the 27th National Conference of Charities and Corrections—office at Chicago; was also elected President of the Pennsylvania Association of Superintendents and Trustees of the Insane Asylums and Poor Houses of the State of Pennsylvania, 1906-08. In October, 1908, he was elected President of the Pennsylvania German Society.

Mr. Zimmerman has delivered quite a number of addresses on public occasions. He has been selected half a dozen times or more to speak before the Pennsylvania German Society in other parts of the country, such as Lancaster, where the Society was organized; once in the court-house in response to the address of welcome, and in the evening of the same day at the banquet in the same city; once at Lebanon; once at Harrisburg; and twice at Allentown, besides numerous occasions in Reading. He was subsequently selected by the Society as its special representative before the Chautauqua Assembly at Mt. Grafton, at which time he was elected one of the vice-presidents of the district. Within the last ten years Mr. Zimmerman has made upward of a hundred public addresses in various parts of the Commonwealth. He has frequently been mentioned as an available candidate for mayor of Reading, and twice his name was presented for the Congressional nomination from the Berks Legislative district, both of which honors he declined. He is a well-known figure in Reading; and has been the recipient of many compliments which were won by his lofty, manly spirit, universal friendship of heart, and strong sense of right and duty; he is in particular favor with the Germans, in whose behalf he has written and spoken much.

Very early in life Mr. Zimmerman began to read poetry for the intellectual pleasure and profit which its elevated diction afforded him, and at the age of eighteen he had already made considerable progress in a predetermined systematic perusal of the whole line of English poets, or of as many of them as lay within his reach. The instinct of the translator asserted itself in marvellous maturity, when he determined to make the third edition of The Reading Times. Hundreds of these matchless translations from the German classics into English appeared from time to time, the Saturday issue of the paper invariably containing a translation into English of some German poem, the original and translation appearing close together in parallel columns; in recognition of their merit he has been made the recipient of many presents, from friends at home and abroad. Worthy of mention among these are seventy-five volumes of German poetry from an admirer residing in Berlin, Germany; his collection of tobacco pipes from Germany, England, Ireland, France, Denmark, Finland and Holland is palpable evidence of the widespread influence his work has had, and has shown remarkable aptitude and poetic skill in all his translations, preserving with remarkable fidelity the exact measure of the original poems, and the rhythmical beat of each syllable with remarkable fidelity.

One of his most noted translations from the German, viz. The Prussian National Battle Hymn, appeared in the Berlin (Germany) Times, with a half-tone portrait of the author of the translation.

Some very original work has been done by Mr. Zimmerman in his translations of English classics into Pennsylvania German, that curious mixture of German dialects and English words which is the idiom of an ancient language of half of the inhabitants of Berks county. His first attempt, Clement C. Moore's "Twas the Night before Christmas," caught the fancy of the press at once, and its favorable mention brought him congratulatory letters from such men as Prof. Haldeman, the eminent philologist of the Unions of Pennsylvania; Hon. Simon Cameron; Gen. Hartman; P. F. Rothermel, painter of the "Battle of Gettysburg"; Prof. Porter of Lafayette College; Prof. Horne of Muhlenberg College, and other men of prominence in the literary world. Poems of Tom Thumb, Oliver Goldsmith, Heine and Longfellow followed, and were received with hearty interest by the German people.

"Luther's Battle Hymn," a translation from the German into English, was a wondering inspiration, and fairly ran up and down the country, as soon as it was given to the public through The Reading Times. In five weeks it passed through eighteen issues of letters to the paper that published it, from eminent divines, philosophers, poets, historians and others in the higher walks of society. Notwithstanding there are some seventy or eighty translations of this magnificent poem, Mr. Zimmerman's effort has been characterized by Rev. Dr. Pick, the publisher of the translations, as "the newest and best that has been made." The new version was especially favored by being sung with enlarged choir in different denominations of
A rock-bound fortress is our God,
A good defense and weapon,
He helps us out of every need
That doth us press or threaten.
The old, wicked foe,
With zeal now doth glow;
Much craft and great might Prepare him for the fight
On earth there is none like him.

With our own strength there's nothing done,
We're oft high lost, deserted:
For us doth fight the proper One,
Whom God himself elected.
Dost ask for his name?
Christ Jesus—the same!
The Lord of Sabaeth,
The world no other hath;
This field must He be holding.

And were the world with devils filled,
With wish to quite devour us,
We need not be so sore afraid,
Since they can not overpower us.
The Prince of this World,
In madness though whirled,
Can harm you nor me;
Because adjudged is he.
A little word can tell him.

This Word shall they now let remain,
No thanks therefor attending;
He is with us upon the plain,
His gifts and spirit lending.
Though t' body he t'ken,
Goods, child, wife and fame;
Go—life, wealth and kin!
They yet can nothing win:
For us remaineth the Kingdom.

Mr. Zimmerman's translation of Schiller's "The Song of the Bell" met with even more favor from the public; no less than twenty columns of newspaper matter made up of letters from all over the world came to the translator, and though twenty years have elapsed since its first appearance, Mr. Zimmerman's version continues to draw inquiries for the translation from far and near. The Philadelphia Ledger says: "Mr. Zimmerman's translations have been highly commended by literary authorities at home and abroad. He has shown a special gift for making his English readers familiar with the spirit of the best German poets. Even those who are well at home in German will find a special interest in comparing the translation with the original, for he is sure to find that Mr. Zimmerman has not only seized the meaning of the author, but has so put it into an English clothing as to show that the real bone and sinew of the original still lives in its new dress. Hon. Andrew D. White, U. S. Minister to Germany, in a letter to Mr. Zimmerman about his translations writes: "They have greatly interested me, as you seem to have caught their spirit and rendered them admirably. I am not sufficiently strong in literary criticism to compare them with other translations, but they seem to me to be thoroughly well done. I have also been especially interested in your translations into Pennsylvania German of some of the poems. Although not a philologist, the reading of them has also greatly interested me, and they, too, 'seem very spirited and in all respects interesting.'"

Prof. Marion D. Learned, of the Department of Philosophy, University of Pennsylvania, says: "A masterful hand is visible in all the translations.*

* It is perhaps safe to say that Schiller's 'Song of the Bell' is the most difficult lyrical poem in the German language to render into English with the corresponding meters. Your version seems to me to excel all other English translations of the poem, both in spirit and in rhythm. Especially striking in point of movement is your happy use of the English 'psychic' in reproducing Schiller's feminine rhymes. Your version, however, while closer adhering to the form of the original, maintains at the same time dignity and clearness of expression, which translators often sacrifice to meet the demands of rhythm. Your poetic instinct has furnished you the key to this masterpiece of German song." The New York World says: "Mr. Zimmerman's rendering [Schiller's 'Song of the Bell'] is a triumph of the translator's art, and recalls the work of English 'Glori'or.' The New York Herald says: "Mr. Zimmerman has placed his name in the category of famous litterateurs by a very creditable translation of Schiller's 'Song of the Bell.'"

The following ably written criticism is from the pen of J. B. Ker, who, while a resident of Scotland, once stood for Parliament: "To Col. T. C. Zimmerman—Sir: Having read and studied your noble translation of Schiller's 'Song of the Bell,' I have been forcibly impressed by the music of the language into which you have rendered the poem. This is a merit of capital importance in the translation of this poem. In estimating the value of translations of the great German poems, it is necessary to bear in mind the weight which the literary and critical consciousness of Germany attached to the ancient classical canons of poetry. There is no question here as to whether the ancients were right. The point for us is that their influence was loyally acknowledged as of high authority during the Augustan age of German literature. Proof of this can be found in German choral music, distinctly as it is super-above and appears in Lessing's famous 'Dramatic Notes,' where the poetic diction of Aristotle are treated with profound respect. In the study of Aristotle's work on the Poetic, nothing is perhaps more striking than his dictum that poetry is imitation, with the explanation or enlargement so aptly given by Pope in the words:"

'Tis not enough no harshness gives offense,
The sound must seem an echo to the sense.
Soft is the strain when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream in rustic numbers flows;
But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
The hoarse, rough waves should like the torrent roar;
When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,
The line, too, labors, and the words move slow,
Not so, when swift Camilla scourcs the main,
Flies o'er the unbending corn, or skims along the plain.'

"Not knowing the German recognition of the law and acknowledging its realization in the works of the leading Teutonic poets, one of the crucial tests of a translation of a great German poet is, Does the language into which the original is rendered form an 'echo to the sense'? It seems to me that one of the strongest points in your translation of the 'Bell' is that the words which you have selected and gathered have sounds, which, like the music of a skilful musical composer, convey a signification independently of their literal meaning. Not to protract these remarks unsuited, few words could more appropriately refer to the music of strong and distant bells than your rendering—"

'That from the metal's unmixed foundling
Clear and full may the bell be sounding.'

"Very slight poetic capacity must admit the music of these words as eminently happy in the 'Song of the Bell.' The echo to the sense is also striking in the sound of the word-symbols in many places throughout the rendering where the poet describes the occurrences conceived in connection with the bell's imagined history. Speaking of the visions of love,"

'O, that they would be never-ending.
These vernal days with lovelight blending,'
the way in which the penult of the word 'ending' conveys the idea of finality, while the affix of the present participle prolongs the word as though to say that it is a beautiful and enviable realization of the Aristotelian rule, a prolongation of the words which expresses doubly a prolongation of desire. The four lines reading:

'Blind raging, like the thunder's crashing
It bursts its fractured bed of earth
As if from out hell's jaws fierce flashing,
It spewed its flaming ruin forth,'

have a vehement strength and a rough and even a painful and horrid sound which apply with singular propriety to the horrible images by which the poet presents the catastrophe to our quickened apprehensions. The beautiful lines,

'Joy to me now God hath given,' etc., in which the bell founder exults, avoiding, as they do, the deeper vowel sounds and preserving as it were a series of high musical notes save where the gift descends from heaven to earth, where the vowel sounds fall from high to low, form a delightful resonance of the happy sounds they embody. The general experience of translations is that they are more prosy than sonorous or musical. Few, however, if any, will deny the melody of your language in many places and its remarkable appropriateness in others, and those who have worked on similar translations can best judge how great is the success you have accomplished in this valuable contribution to Anglo-Saxon literature."

Mr. Zimmerman published a collection of his addresses, sketches of Outdoor Life, translations and original poems in two volumes, entitled "Olla Podrida." The volumes, which were published in the fall of 1903, were received with great favor, almost the entire edition having been sold in a month's time, a number of the public libraries having become purchasers.

We present to our readers a few short selections from Mr. Zimmerman's translation of "The Song of the Bell":

"Firmly walled in earth and steady,
Stands the mold of well-burnt clay,
Quick, now, workmen, ye are ready!
Forth must come the bell today!
Hot from forehead's glow
Must the sweat-drops flow,
Should the master praise be given;
Yet the blessing comes from Heaven.

"The work prepared with so much ardor
May well an earnest word become;
When good discourse attends the labor,
Then flows employment briskly on.
Observe with care, then, what arises—
See what from feeble strength escapes;
The man so poor, each one despises,
Who ne'er foresees the form he shapes.
'Tis this that man so well adorneth,
For mind hath he to understand,
That in his inner heart he feeleth Whate'er he fashions with his hand."

"O sweetest hope! O tender longing!
The earliest love's first golden time!
The eye, it sees the heavens thro' -I-ring
With rapt'rous sights and scenes sublime;
O, that they would be never-ending,
These vernal days with lovelight blending.

"Through the streets with fury flaring,
Stalks the fire with fiendish glaring,
Rushing as if the whirlwind sharing!
Like the blast from furnace flashing
Grows the air, and beams are crashing, Pillars tumbling, windows creaking.
Mothers wandering, children shrieking,
Beasts are moaning,
'Neath the ruins; all are frightened,
Bright as day the night enlightened.

"From the steeple,
Sad and strong,
Th' bell is tolling
A fun'ral song.
Sad and slow its mournful strokes attending
Some poor wand'er tow'rd's his last home wending.
Ah! the wife it is, the dear one;
Ah! it is the faithful mother.
Whom the Prince of Shadow unheeding,
From the husband's arms is leading,
From the group of children there,
Whom she blooming to him bare;
On whose breast saw, maid and boy,
Growing with maternal joy.
Ah! the household ties so tender
Sundered are forevermore;
Gone into the realm of shadows
She who ruled this household o'er.
Now her faithful reign is ended;
She will need to watch no more;
In the orphaned place there rul's a
A stranger, loveless evermore.

"And this henceforth its calling be,
Wheroeto the master set it free!
High o'er this nether world of ours,
Shall it, in heaven's azure tent,
Dwell where the pealing thunder lowers,
And border on the firmament.
It shall, too, be a voice from heaven,
Like yonder starry hosts, so clear;
Who in their course extol their Maker,
And onward lead the wreath-crowned year.
To earnest things and things eternal Devoted be its metal tongue,
And, hourly, Time, with swift-winged pinions,
Will touch it as it lieth on.
Its tongue to dest'ny twill be lending;
No heart itself, from pity free
Its swinging ever be attending Life's changeful play, whate'er it be.
And as the sound is slowly dying
That strikes with such overpowering might,
So may it teach that naught abideth,
That all things earthly take their flight."

Following is Reading's Official Sesqui-Centennial Hymn, as written by Thomas C. Zimmerman, and sung on Tuesday evening, June 6, 1898, by a chorus of 600 voices, to an audience of 20,000 people, assembled on Penn's Common:

"All hail to Reading's name and fame!
And let the welkin ring
With song and shout and roundelay,
As we together sing,
And may our songs, with glad acclaim,
To heaven, like incense rise,
While glowing hearts in tones proclaim
Her glory to the skies."
"Tis sev'n score years ago and ten
Since this fair town was born;
Its sweet young life must have exhaled
A breath like rosy morn.
So let us sing till yonder hills
Send back the joyous song;
Till echoing dales and rippling rills
The gladsome sound prolong.

"Let others tread life's stately halls,
Where princely pleasures flow;
Give us our homes, like jewels set
In evening's sunset glow.
And may our hearts, in swelling pride,
Forgotten those of old—
The men of Reading's pristine days—
Whose hearts have long grown cold.

"Let all, therefore, with mingled voice,
Repeat the glad refrain;
Let civic pride, in flowing tide,
Rejoice with might and main.
And God, the Father of us all,
With His protecting care,
Will bless us while we praise in song
Our city, bright and fair."

Mr. Zimmerman also wrote the Sesqui-Centennial of Berks, which was adopted by the Historical Society of Berks as the official hymn. Following is the translation:

Air—"America."

"Hail, beautiful Berks! to thee
Let song and minstrelsy
Their tribute pay!
Let joy in rapture break
Till echoing hills awake,
And woodland summits shake,
On this glad day.

"Our sires, long since at rest,
With mem'ries, sweet and blest,
Were at thy birth.
With axe and brawn and brain,
They toiled, with might and main,
A dear loved home to gain
On this green earth.

"And now, with upturned eyes,
Your children's gladsome cries
Their homage bring.
From all our mines and mills,
From Manatow's hills,
And Ontelaunee's hills,
Let praises ring.

"Then hail the natal day
When Heaven's fav'ring ray Shone on thy face.
Let joy, in civic pride,
Gush forth, on every side,
And music's swelling tide
Add strength and grace.

"Our fathers! God! may we
Be ever true to thee
Through all our days.
Thy Name be glorified,
Our hearts be sanctified,
As, with exultant pride,
We sing thy praise."

Mr. Zimmerman was also the author of the memorial hymn sung at the dedication of the McKinley monument in the City Park, in the presence of one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Reading.

One of the proudest achievements of Mr. Zimmerman's journalistic career was the erection of a monument to Stephen C. Foster at his home in Pittsburg, which, according to the Pittsburg papers, had its real inception in an editorial prepared by Mr. Zimmerman for the Reading Times, after a visit to that city and finding no memorial to perpetuate the memory of the world's greatest writer of negro melodies. The editorial was republished in the Pittsburg Press and indorsed by that paper, which also started a fund to provide a suitable memorial and called on the public for popular subscriptions, the ultimate result being the statue which now adorns Highland Park, in that city. The following from the Pittsburg Times, in a personal notice of Mr. Zimmerman's visit to that Park several years ago:

"Out Park not too many days ago—by noticed a handsome, military looking gentleman making a minute study of the Stephen C. Foster statue. Every feature of this artistic bit of sculpture, from Foster's splendid face to Uncle Ned and the broken string of his banjo, was examined with affectionate interest. The man was Col. Thomas C. Zimmerman, editor of the Reading (Pa.) Times, and the statue was the fruition of his fondest wish. Col. Zimmerman has been for many years one of the staunchest admirers of Foster's imperishable songs and melodies. Sixteen years ago while in Pittsburg visiting the late Major E. A. Montoth, he asked the latter to show him the monument to Foster and was painfully surprised to discover that no such memorial existed. Shortly after his return to Reading he wrote an editorial for his paper, calling the attention of the world in general and Pittsburg in particular to the neglect of Foster's memory."

MILTON BRAYTON McKNIGHT, son of David McKnight and Elizabeth Hiester, his wife, was born in Reading, Sept. 30, 1855. Paul McKnight, his great-grandfather, of Scottish ancestry, came to America in 1753, from the North of Ireland, and settled in Chester county.

Phineas, son, John McKnight (born May 31, 1774—died March 9, 1855), came to Reading in 1808, and conducted a Branch of the Bank of Pennsylvania of Philadelphia, which Branch Bank was afterward incorporated as the National Union Bank of Reading.

David McKnight (born May 2, 1814—died Aug. 29, 1873), a son of John McKnight, assisted and succeeded his father in conducting the Reading Branch of the Bank of Pennsylvania, and upon the incorporation of the Union Bank of Reading (afterward the National Union Bank) became its first president, and held this office until his death.

On his mother's side, Elizabeth Beck Hiester (born May 5, 1817—died Oct. 11, 1897) was a daughter of Joseph Hiester of Reading (born Aug. 4, 1768—died April 16, 1830), and a granddaughter of Joseph Hiester (1711-1772), who came to America from Westphalia, Germany, in 1737.

M. Brayton McKnight attended the local public schools, graduating from the Reading high school in 1872, and entered Amherst College the same year, from which college he was graduated in 1876. He then read law in the office of his brother-in-law, Charles H. Schaeffer, Esq., of Reading, and was admitted to the Bar of Berks county in 1881. Going to Colorado in the fall of 1879, he was admitted to the Bar of that State and took a clerical position in the office of Hon. Robert S. Morrison, a prominent attorney of Georgetown, Colo. Returning to Reading the following year, he resumed the practice of law. In 1881 he assisted in the incorporation of the Mt. Penn Stove Works, a company just forming for the manufacture of cooking and heating appliances, and being elected secretary and treasurer of the new corporation, he relinquished his law practice and devoted his whole time to manufacturing. He retained the office of secretary and treasurer of the Mt. Penn Stove Works for twenty-five years, and in 1907 he was elected president of the company, which office he now holds. During this time the company has grown to be one of the prominent manufacturing and business enterprises of Reading.
Mr. McKnight was married in 1880 to Ida May Geise, who died in 1882, without children. On March 31, 1886, he married Helen Amelia Holmes (daughter of Robert Holmes, of Reading), who died on Nov. 3, 1901, leaving two daughters, Helen, born June 16, 1889, and Katharine, born May 23, 1901.

Mr. McKnight is identified with various business enterprises of Reading, is on the board of directors of the Mt. Penn Gravity Railroad, the Reading & Temple Railway, the Reading & Wolverton, the Charles Evans Cemetery Fund, and the Reading Sanitarium for the Treatment of Tuberculosis, and is a member of the Berks County Historical Society, the Pennsylvania-German Society and the Pennsylvania Forestry Association.

CHARLES H. SCHAESSER, one of the most prominent and influential citizens of Reading, is well known in the financial circles of that city as president of the National Union Bank. Mr. Schaesser was born in Columbus, Ohio, in the year 1840. His father and grandfather were clergymen, distinguished members of the Church, his father having been for many years professor in the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, and later having been the founder, first professor and president of the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, where he remained until his death in 1879. Mr. Schaesser received a collegiate education at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, from which he graduated with honor in 1860, and thereafter he conducted a classical academy at Reading for several years. During this period he also read law in the office of the late Congressman Daniel Ermentrout. In 1863 he enlisted in the service of the United States and was at the front until his regiment disbanded in the fall of that year. On Aug. 9, 1864, he was admitted to the Bar and since that time has been in continuous practice, being concerned in much of the most important litigation that has been before the courts of Berks county, the Supreme court of Pennsylvania, and during most of his professional career has been attorney for many of the most important corporate interests of the community.

Mr. Schaesser has been prominently identified with the Democratic party from the first, and in his earlier years was a prominent speaker and the leader of his party, representing it in county, State and national conventions. In 1872 he served a term as a member of the city council, but was never a candidate for any other office. He long served the public as a member of the board of health until his resignation in 1902, nineteen years, during which time the most valuable improvements and reforms in the work of the board were inaugurated and established.

Mr. Schaesser has always been prominently identified with the public interests and institutions of the city and county. In 1873 he drew the charter of the first passenger railway built in the city of Reading, organized the company, and has been connected with the city interests as attorney and director during all the subsequent developments of the system. Since 1869 he has been the counsel for the National Union Bank of Reading, one of the leading financial institutions of the city, became a director in 1874, and vice-president in 1888. Since March 1900, Mr. Schaesser has been president of this institution.

During all his legal and business career Mr. Schaesser has at various times contributed articles to the educational and legal magazines, and other publications of the city, county and State, which gave him a reputation as a writer, and in the case of the Reading Eagle have the foundations of its future prosperity his contributions to its columns were highly appreciated. In connection with his banking interests, Mr. Schaesser is also a director of the Reading Trust Company, the Reading Gas Company, the Reading City Passenger Railway Company, and also of the Reading Bank. He is also president of the Reading Water Company. He is an active member of the well-known Berks County Historical Society, while his war record entitles him to his connection with Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R. Since 1860 Mr. Schaesser has been a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, in the vestry of which he served a number of years as elder, and to which his family also adhere.

In 1867 Charles H. Schaesser and Amelia M. McKnight were united in marriage. Mrs. Schaesser is a member of one of the old and prominent families of the county. Four sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Schaesser, all of whom, except the eldest, E. Carroll, are engaged in Reading and Philadelphia, the youngest, E. Carroll, being a member of the Berks county Bar.

In every walk of life, indeed, Mr. Schaesser has made an impress for good. Of profound legal mind, scholarly and liberal-minded, his influence has been felt not only in the parochial upbuilding of Reading, but in the development of the moral, religious and educational movements in the community in which he has for so long been so prominent a figure.

JACOB B. FRICKER. It is most consonant that in this work be incorporated a sketch of the career of this well-known and honored citizen and prominent business man of Reading, for not only is he a native of the city which is now his home, but he is also a representative of one of the prominent pioneer families of the county in which his entire life has been passed. Mr. Fricker was born in the old homestead at No. 807 Penn street, Dec. 18, 1839, son of Jacob and Catherine (Allgaier) Fricker, both likewise natives of the old Keystone State.

Jacob Fricker was born in Huntingdon county, where he was reared and educated, and where he remained until he was about twenty-two years of age, when he came to Reading and secured a position as foreman and manager of the hat factory of Jacob Sauerbier. He retained this incumbency about twelve years, and then engaged in the same branch of enterprise on his own responsibility, forming a partnership with Harry Brown and establishing their factory at No. 807 Penn street, in 1853. On that site, during the next seven years, he erected a building, which is still standing, and in an excellent state of preservation. In the rear of this building the firm established their fur-hat manufactory, utilizing a log house. At the same time they established a wholesale and retail store at the corner of Fifth and Court streets, where Tragle Bros. large currier building now stands. Mr. Fricker continued to be actively identified with this business until his death. The business demanded considerable traveling on his part, as the custom in those days was for the manufacturers to go about from one locality to another, selling their products or exchanging them for new fur-pelts. On one of these expeditions he contracted a severe cold, the ultimate result of which was his death, in March, 1847. In 1828 Jacob Fricker married Catherine Allgaier, who survived him many years, continuing to reside in the old Penn street homestead for sixty years. She died in 1888. Five children were born to Jacob Fricker and wife: Peter H., who was engaged in the manufacture of fur hats in Reading, and who was a prominent member of the old Ringgold Band, died in 1860; Andrew J., a printer and box manufacturer, also identified with the Reading Lumber Company, and the representative of the Tenth ward in the city council, died in 1895; Sarah E. died in 1886; Jacob B.; George, who was engaged in printing and manufacturing, died in 1900. As per family arrangement the estate was not settled until 1905, a period of fifty-eight years, when Jacob B., the sole survivor, became the owner of the old homestead.

Jacob B. Fricker was reared to manhood in his native town, and after completing the course of the Reading schools, he found employment as a clerk in a successful mercantile establishment. He followed this vocation for a number of years, with different firms, and during the Civil war was employed as a clerk in the post-office, and later was clerk and teller in the First National and the Reading bank. In 1861 he became associated with the De Long Brothers, tailors, and continued in their employ for many years occupied the southeast corner of Ninth and Muhlenberg streets, and with them in 1876 he established a wholesale leather house in Philadelphia, and at this writing still remains a partner of this firm. In 1884 he formed a partnership with Lambert A. Rehr, and under the firm name of Rehr & Fricker, they engaged as contractors and builders. The business was incorporated July 10, 1894, at No. 107 Pine street, and they control a large and important business, having erected more than 1,000 houses in Reading. This fact in itself offers the most effective voucher for the correct business methods and technical ability of the firm, whose reputation has ever been of the highest, and whose splendid success has been richly deserved.

Mr. Fricker is a man of progressive spirit and has identified himself with various other enterprises which have contributed to the material advancement and prestige of his home city. He is one of the organizers, and remains an interested principal in the Reading Lumber Company. Mr. Fricker was a charter member of the Reading Fire Insurance Company many years, but recently severed his connection with the company. For the past ten years he has been the manager and treasurer of the Reading Abattoir Company, which he organized and now has incorporated by the State of Pennsylvania. He is not only treasurer but also one of the largest stockholders. He is president and stockholder of the Crescent Brass Foundry Company and takes a lively interest in the management of the same. In politics Mr. Fricker is a staunch supporter of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and his religious faith is that of the Reformed Church. He, and his wife are prominent members of St. Paul's Reformed Church, within which he was identified since its organization, and of whose choir he has been a member for thirty years, also taking an active part in the work of the Sunday-school. He has served on the building committee of six different churches of the Reformed denomination, those of St. Thomas, St. John, St. Andrew and Zion, on the first church buildings of St. Stephen and St. Mark, on the Sunday-school building of St. Paul's, and on the Seminary building of the Reformed Church of Lancaster, Pa., and in each instance he gave most valuable assistance by reason of his fine technical knowledge as a contractor and builder.

In 1888 Mr. Fricker married Miss Annie E. Getz, daughter of the late Peter D. Getz, an honored pioneer of Reading, and to this union have been born three daughters: Mary F. m. Thomas G. Mull, and has one daughter, Helen; Martha A.; and Annie F., the two last named remaining under the parental roof. Mr. and Mrs. Fricker were members of the Mozart Musical Society, being original members, and they continued interested in same as long as it was in existence. Mr. Fricker is a loyal and public-spirited citizen and has an abiding interest in all that concerns his native city, which is endeared to him by the gracious memories and associations of the past as well as of the present.

I. S. AND D. H. HUYETT, proprietors of the Standard Paper Box Manufacturing Company, which is located at Nos. 441 to 445 Pearl street, Reading, are well known in their community as honest, straightforward business men. Their success is due to their push and energy, and to their natural business ability, and they are considered representative citizens of their native city. They are sons of Amos and Henrietta (Smith) Huyett, the former of whom was for many years a prominent contractor and builder, and also operated a planing mill, doing much to advance the material growth of Reading. During the Civil War he was one of the first to enlist and he served throughout that struggle. He died in 1861, aged fifty-four years.

Amos Huyett was twice married. He married (first) Henrietta Smith, who died in 1870 at the age of thirty-three years. They were the parents of five children as follows: I. S., who are mentioned below; Ella K., Lydia R., Lydia B., and Henry E. Mr. Huyett married Lydia Rick, who passed away in 1908, at the age of seventy. In religion the family were Lutherans. Fraternally the father was a member of the I. O. O. F. and in politics was a Republican.

I. S. Huyett, junior member of the firm of the Standard Paper Box Manufacturing Company, was born in 1851. On May 12, 1887, he married Jennie L. Heller, daughter of Anthony W. Heller, and one child was born to this union, Amos W., who is now attending school. Mr. Huyett is a member of Vigilance Lodge, I. O. O. F., and the B. P. Elks, Lodge No. 115, of Reading. A prominent member of the family is a member of the Lutheran Church.

D. H. Huyett, junior member of the firm, was born in 1863, and on March 4, 1898, he married Catharine Hull, daughter of Henry Hull. They are the parents of Daniel, Dorothy and Catharine. Mr. Huyett is prominent in fraternal circles, being connected with St. John's Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 435; Reading Chapter, R. A. M., No. 152; De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; Reading Lodge of Perfection; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Williamsport Consistory; and Lodge No. 115, B. P. O. Elks, of Reading.

The Standard Paper Box Manufacturing Company was organized in 1884, and the business was commenced, at the head of the Reading box exchange, with the manufacture of paper boxes, cartons and candy boxes and supply shoe, millinery, candy and hardware concerns with their product. The plant, three stories in height and 60 x 100 feet in dimensions, is equipped with a one hundred horse-power boiler, and gives employment to an average of seventy hands. From a small beginning the business has grown rapidly, and now controls a well defined trade throughout this section of the State.

ALPHEUS S. BEHNEY, one of the prominent members of the Penn National Bank, of Reading, and one of the most substantial citizens of that city, was born Nov. 17, 1843, at Fredericktown, Berks Co., Pa., son of Samuel and Sarah Jane (Bashore) Behney.

This family is one of the oldest in Pennsylvania, and the name has been variously spelled Beni, Baney, Behne and Behney. The founder of the family in the Lebanon Valley was Peter Behney, of Heidelberg township, who died in January, 1794, leaving a wife, Catherine, and children: George Peter, Jr., Jacob, Melchoir, Eva, Elizabeth, Christina, Barbara, Magdalena, John and Anna Elizabeth. It is also shown in the Pennsylvania Archives that in 1793 a family of Beni emigrated to this country and located in Lebanon county. In 1870 the Behney family, a numerous family located near Fredericksburg, Lebanon county, where he took up about 1,000 acres of land, and there spent the rest of his life, dying at an advanced age. Up to the time of his death, Peter Beany (or Behney) wore no garb other than in Continental style. Several of his sons, including Melchoir, served in the Revolutionary war. Melchoir Behney, son of the ancestor, and great-grandfather of Alpheus S., was born in Lebanon county, and spent his life there, being buried at Fredericksburg. He was a farmer by occupation, and one of the early horse dealers of this part of Pennsylvania, the first of the family to take up the trade in which so many of the name have become famous, in fact, one Jacob Behne, of Myerstown, was the largest horse dealer of the United States in his day. He always had on hand from 500 to 600 head, sold horses to Barmum & Bailey, the showmen, to the Brewers, and to horse dealers all over the country.

Melchoir Behney was twice married, his first wife bearing him two children, sons, and his second wife, a Miss Fisher, bearing him one son and two daughters. Mr. Behney's second wife was the sister of the wives of his sons by his first marriage. He was a leading citizen of his day, and did much toward promoting movements for the public good.

Martin Behney, grandfather of Alpheus S., was a farmer, and spent his life in the vicinity of his birthplace, as a public-spirited and influential citizen, and died at an advanced age. He married a Miss Fisher, a sister of his step-mother, and she bore him seven children: John; Jacob; David, his life in the Civil War; Samuel; Peter; Lewis; and Amos S.), Kate B., Sarah, S. nley; Sally m. William Bohr; and Rebekah died unmarried.

Samuel Behney, father of Alpheus S., was born on the old homestead in 1806, and died at Myerstown, in 1885, at the age of seventy-nine years. He learned distilling in his youth with his father-in-law, an occupation which he followed for several years, and then engaged in the manufacture of brick, at Fredericksburg and later in Myers-town, continuing in this line of business for some fifty years, and furnishing the material for hundreds of houses and buildings in the vicinity of these places. He was a captain of the militia at Jonestown in the days of the old battalions, and upon his removal to Myerstown was succeeded by Mr. Long. He was one of the public-spirited and progressive men of his day and locality, and was a pillar of the Reformed Church. Samuel, born 16, 1808, son of Mr. Nathan and Lydia (Seidel) Hawk, natives of this State.

Nathan Hawk was a prominent manufacturer of wool hats for many years in Reading, on South Eleventh street, under the style of DeHart, Hawk & Co., and was one of the best known business men of his day, retiring in 1880 to enjoy the fruits of a long and active business life. He was a graduate of the Union College, and died away in 1905, aged seventy-six years, while his wife still survives him. The children born to this worthy couple were: George W.; Ida m. Sylvester Fritz, a dairyman; Anna m. John Bauer, a barber of Reading, Pa.; and Miss Laura. In politics Nathan Hawk was a stanch Republican. When the war broke out he was one of the first to enlist, and he was a member of one of the first companies to leave Reading for the front.

George W. Hawk attended public school at Reading, as well as the pay schools, and his first employment was in his father's factory. He learned the trade of dyeing, which he followed for seven years, he held the position of superintendent of the Union Canal. Later he became superintendent of the sheet-iron mill in this city, having been an ironmaster by trade. He was a man of much ability and was a citizen who ever commanded the high regard of his fellow citymen. Both he and his wife continued to reside in Reading until their deaths, and John S. Thompson was their only child.

John S. Thompson secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of Lebanon and Berks counties, and supplemented this by a special course in Brunner & Ingham Commercial College, in Reading. He initiated his business career by taking a position in the offices of the Union Canal Company, of which his father was president, and he was thus engaged for a period of three years. He then entered upon an apprenticeship at the trade of paper making, to which he continued to devote his attention for five years, after which he was engaged for a time in the butchering business in company with his father-in-law. In 1888 Mr. Thompson was appointed assistant postmaster of Reading under Calvin Goodman, and he retained this incumbency until 1895, at the conclusion of which time he was identified for four years, at the expiration of which time, in 1895, President Cleveland conferred upon him the appointment of postmaster at Reading, an office for which he was specially well equipped, by reason of his marked executive ability and his skill in the local lodge chapter and commandery work. He is held in excellent administration and gained the unqualified commendation of the postal department and of the local public. He retired from office in 1899 and resumed his connection with the Reading Fire Insurance Company. One year later, however, there came a demand for his services in the office which he now holds, that of secretary and treasurer of the Colonial Trust Company, of Reading. The company was organized in 1900 and he has held his present office from the initiation of its business, which has grown to be one of wide scope and importance. The company has erected a magnificent nine-story office building, the finest structure of its kind in the city, and in the same are located its finely appointed counting room and offices. The administrative ability and personal popularity of Mr. Thompson have been recognized factors in promoting the up-building of the business of the company, which is incorporated with a capital stock of $280,000.

Mr. Thompson was a prominent supporter of the cause of the Democratic party, and for four years he represented the Sixth ward in the city council, simultaneously serving as a member of the board of education. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained to the Knight Templar degree, holding membership in the local lodge, chapter and commandery. He is also identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and he and his wife hold membership in the First Baptist Church.

On March 9, 1878, Mr. Thompson married Miss Sarah A. Rader, daughter of the late George Rader, a representative business man of Reading, and to this union have been born two sons: George N., who is teller in the offices of the Colonial Trust Company, of Reading; and John P., who is an expert chemist, being employed as such in the Laboratories of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Altoona, Pennsylvania.

HENRY KARL JANSEN, manufacturer of textile machinery at Wyomissing, was born at Barmen, Germany, Feb. 8, 1866, and was educated in the local schools there, attending until 1881. He then learned the trade of a machinist in all its branches, serving the regular apprenticeship of three years. Afterward he followed the customary life of a journeyman mechanic for four years, working in various machine shops in the industrial centers of the Rhine Province, for the purpose of becoming an expert machinist. With this experience he determined to emigrate to America, and in 1888 he went to New York City. He shipped in an east-bound vessel, landing at the port of New York, and after working a while as all-around machinist became, on account of his proficiency, the foreman of the place, and he filled this position until 1892. In that year he moved to Reading and formed a partnership with Ferdinand Thun, a German friend from Barmen, for manufacturing textile machinery. In the organization of the Textile Machine Works in 1900, Mr. Janssen became its president, and he has filled that position to the present time. He also was one of the incorporators and has served as vice-president of the Berkshire Knitting Mills and the Narrow Fabric Company since their organization, having assisted in establishing all of these industries at Wyomissing.

In the building up of Wyomissing, and its erection as a borough in 1906, Mr. Janssen took a very active part, and at the first election of the borough officials he was chosen one of the councillors. In 1897 he erected a house on a lot of ground adjoining the Textile Works, and this was one of the first dwellings in the borough. It is situated on the corner of Moro avenue and Van Reed road.

In 1890 Mr. Janssen married Minnie Raecker, daughter of Henry Raecker, of Lippspringe, Westphalia, by whom he had four children: Harry, Minnie, Helen and Elsie (who died young).

Albert Janssen, father of Henry Karl, was born in 1834, along the lower Rhine on the borders of Holland. He learned the business of a book publisher and upon locating in Barmen when he was twenty-six years old, carried on that business, and continued it until his decease in 1878. He also, as a young man, went to Japan, where he became a member of the Nassau, and by her he had six children: Albert and Helen, both of whom died when thirty years old; Henry Karl; Ernst, a dyer in Barmen; Johannes, a wholesale merchant at Barmen, and a member of the city council; and Paul, a provision merchant and hotel proprietor at Offenbach, in Hesse.

EDWIN FOSTER SMITH, civil engineer, in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company since the year 1869, was born in Catawissa, Pa., Aug. 18, 1841, son of James Foster Smith and Ellen Eliza Cadwalader, his wife. He is a descendant of Sarah, wife of Smith of Warwick, and of his mother's side is of Welsh descent. His earlier education was acquired at Reading, where he graduated from the high school with the class of 1858. He entered Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y., and graduated with the degree of A. B., later receiving from Union University the degree of Civil Engineer.

In October, 1869, Mr. Smith entered the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company in the engineering department and remained in that employ until the year 1865, engaged on construction work and the locating and building of new branch lines of railroad. During this period, he also served two short term enlistments in the Civil war, one under the State of Pennsylvania in 1862 and one in the service of the United States in Company F, 26th Pennsylvania Emergency Volunteers, in 1863.

In the fall of 1865 he entered the service of the Schuylkill Navigation Company, of which he subsequently became the chief engineer and general manager. In 1878 there was added the Susquehanna and Tidewater Canal in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

In the year 1891 Mr. Smith, who had for some years been the chief assistant engineer of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, was called to take charge of the construction of the Reading terminal railway and station in the city of Philadelphia, one of the first of the large terminals in this country, and one that has attracted much attention, not only in itself and its appurtenances, but as changing the business conditions of a large surrounding district of the city. He has remained with the railway company up to the present time in the practice of his profession, in charge of hydraulic, steam and electrical plants, and given much of his time as consulting engineer to the development and installation of electrical plants operated by water-power. One of these is at Sewalls Falls, on the Merrimac river, New Hampshire, where the dam and structure was designed and built by him as early as the year 1892, and is one of the earliest examples of the modern system of distribution of power by electricity. In the course of an extended practice of his profession Mr. Smith has served as consulting engineer for many interests involving the solution of problems of hydraulic engineering, designing and building a large part of the extensive water works system of the city of Reading; serving on the board of engineers appointed by the aqueduct commissioners of the city of New York in 1901, to report on questions of engineering construction in relation to the new Croton dam and Jerome Park reservoir; in the investigation of the conditions affecting the Castlewood project, Colorado; and has engaged in the location and plans for the Nicaragua ship canal, and many others. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Franklin Institute, and the Engineers' Club of Philadelphia.

In 1867 Mr. Smith was married to Nancy King McCurdy, daughter of Dr. J. K. McCurdy and Elizabeth, his wife, of Reading, by whom he has three children. Mrs. Smith's father was a prominent citizen in Schuylkill County, where he oper- ated a store on North Fifth street, near Pottsville; he took an active interest in educational affairs at Reading, officiating as the first president of the board of school controllers from 1833 to 1867; and he and his family were devoted members of the First Presbyterian Church for many years. He died in 1872.

Mr. Smith's brother James Foster Smith, was born at Pittsburg, Pa., on Christmas Day, 1813. He was descended from Scotch-Irish parentage, his grandparents having emigrated to Pennsylvania about 1783 and settled at Pittsburg. In 1832 his parents removed to Blairsville, Pa., and there he received his preliminary education. In the age of twelve years he was obliged to support himself, and he devoted his leisure time to study, inclining toward mathematics and civil engineering. When sixteen years old he entered the service of the Portage Railroad Company as roadman; when twenty-three he became assistant engineer of the Catawissa Railroad Company; and when twenty-four, the chief engineer of the Morris Canal Company, designing and building during the years 1837 and 1838 the tide-lock at the outlet of the canal in Jersey City, which is still in use. In 1839 and 1840 he was in the service of the Catawissa Railroad Company, having designed the celebrated high trestle bridge over its line; and in 1841 and 1842 in the service of the New York & Erie Railroad Company. In 1845 Mr. Smith became the superintendent of the lower division of the Schuylkill Navigation Company and served as such until 1845, when he was appointed the resident engineer, taking charge of the reconstruction of the canal between Philadelphia and Reading and finishing it in 1848. In 1850 he was elected the chief engineer, and removed with his family to Reading. He filled this responsible position until 1875, when he relinquished the more active duties and acted as consulting engineer until his retirement in 1877.

During his engineering career Mr. Smith designed and constructed many important hydraulic works, including many of the dams on the Schuylkill river, the Columbia dam across the Susquehanna river, 6,843 feet long; the coal shipping landings at Schuylkill Haven; and the extensive wharves, with automatic coal-transferring machinery, and the wharf on the Delaware river.

Mr. Smith resided forty-eight years at Reading, took much interest in local affairs, and was a devoted member of the First Presbyterian Church, having served as deacon, elder and trustee for many years. He died Jan. 31, 1898, aged eighty-four years.

EDWARD H. FIBERT. The successful government of a large city like Reading, Pa., requires the best efforts of substantial, reliable and public-spirited men, and one of these is found in Edward H. Filbert, City Treasurer.

The Filbert family is an old one in Berks county. Gabriel Filbert, grandfather of Edward H., was born at Womelsdorf, where he was engaged in farming.

Adam Filbert, son of Gabriel, born in Womelsdorf, moved to Reading, Pa., April 1, 1800, and there died Jan. 5, 1802, aged sixty-six years. He was a miller by trade. He married Catherine Moyer, a daughter of one of the oldest families in Berks county; and daughter of Henry Moyer, a cabinet-maker and undertaker. They had six children, five of whom survive, namely: Annie, wife of Lee L. Hartzel, with the Yocum cigar factory; Charles F., a coal dealer at Reading; William H., a druggist at Sisginaw, Mich.; Benj., a carpenter; Edward H. Filbert, the father, was a member of William Rankin Lodge No. 5,; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; and Golden Rule Lodge, I. O. O. F.

Edward H. Filbert was born at Womelsdorf, Berks county, Jan. 15, 1831, on the old homestead, and after completing his school in the City of Reading, he spent one year in Bright's hardware store. He next became connected with the Reading Hardware Works, after which he was clerk in the freight department of the Reading Railroad for six years, going then into the employ of the United States Express Company, as cashier, and remaining about six years in that connection. Mr. Filbert was City Treasurer from Nov. 14, 1889, to fill out an unexpired term as assistant treasurer, and when Treasurer Tyson assumed control, April 7, 1902, he was retained in a position for which he had shown eminent qualifications. He was elected City Treasurer Feb. 18, 1908, and inaugurated April 6, 1908.

Mr. Filbert was married June 3, 1890, to Miss Clara L. Steiger, daughter of John and Henrietta Steiger, of Reading. She died May 5, 1905, survived by two children, Lee Edward and Marguerite.

Mr. Filbert is a member of the following organizations: Industrial Lodge, No. 111, F. & A. M.; Reading Lodge of Philadelphia Commandery, No. 14, A. A. S. R.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 123, A. A. S. R.; Council No. 15, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Royal Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Reading Lodge, No. 115, B. P. O. E.; Reading Aerie, No. 86, F. O. E.; Washington Commandery, No. 63, P. O. S. of A.; Progressive Lodge, No. 470, I. O. O. F.; Wyo- missing Council, No. 1354, R. A. T. Liberty Fire Company, No. 5; Schuylkill Rod & Gun Club; Ninety-eighth Social Union; Oley Valley Rod & Gun Club; Temple Club; and North Eastern Democratic Association. In politics he is a Democrat, and he is secretary of the 15th Ward Democratic Club of Reading.

Charles F. Fitzsimonds, son of Adam and Catherine (Moyer) Filbert, and brother of Edward H., was born in Womelsdorf, Pa., in 1838. He attended the public schools there. In 1858 he engaged in the coal business at the corner of Greenwich and Moss streets, Reading, and remained there seventeen years, meeting with good success in his undertakings, and in 1875 building up a good patronage. The next five years were spent at No. 1141 Moss street, after which in 1900 he moved to No. 730 Oley, his present location. He sells all kinds of anthracite coal, and keeps two wagons running all the time.

On Oct. 22, 1853, Mr. Filbert married Mary Hans, daughter of Richard V., and Martha A. (Shultz) Hans. They have one daughter, Martha, who married Walter M. Deem, and has two children, Mary and Richard. In religious faith they are Lutherans. Mr. Filbert is a popular member of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, the Knights of the Golden Eagle and the Hampden Fire Company.

SAMUEL H. GRING. Among the representative business men of Reading, who have been identified with the large interests of the city, may be mentioned Mr. Samuel H. Gring, a prominent lumberman, contractor and financier. Mr. Gring was born in Cumru township, Berks Co., Pa., Jan. 29, 1835, son of David and Mary (Hill) Gring, and grandson of David Gring.

The great-grandfather, Samuel, son of Johannes (who emigrated in 1743, and who founded the family in America), came from Holland, and settled in Cumru township, where he became an extensive land-owner and died a wealthy man. His son, David, was born in Cumru township, but in early life located at Tulpehocken Creek, where he took up a tract of land, built mills, and like his father became very prosperous. He died at the age of eighty-eight years in February, 1847. By his first wife, a Miss Walsmith, he had eight children as follows: John, who was a contractor; Henry, a manufacturer of the Reformed Church; William, a miller; Daniel, a minister of the Reformed Church; Susan, who died unmarried. Mary, m. to a Mr. Lichty; Elizabeth, m. to a Mr. Troxel; and Kate, m. to Mr. Ringler.

David Gring followed in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, and at the time of his death, Jan. 26, 1800, at the age of eighty-eight years, ten months, seventeen days, he was the owner of several farms and a large farm. He was a Whig, and later became a strong Republican, as prominent in the affairs of his day, and served as captain and major in the State militia for eleven years. He married Mary Hill, who died May 16, 1853, at the age of eighty-one years, seven months, twelve days. To this union were born twelve children, eight of whom grew to maturity, as follows: David, a miller; Daniel (engaged in farming); Samuel H.; Annie (m. George Zerr); Mary (m. Joshua) Grill; John (a miller and tanner); Charles (proprietor of a hotel); and Franklin (a farmer). The family were all members of the Methodist Church.

Samuel H. Gring was educated in the schools of Spring township and remained on the farm home until twenty-five years of age, working about the home mill, driving a team, and turning his hand to any employment that presented itself. He then went to East Cocalico township, near Denver, where he purchased a mill and remained until 1877, selling it out in this year and removing to Newville, Cumberland county. Here he engaged in a lumber business, buying a tract of timber land which he converted into lumber for railroad purposes, and in 1876 he removed to Muhlenberg, locating in his present home two years later. This house was built near Birdsboro and at that time Mr. Gring owned a barn on the farm; it was the property of Dr. Muhlenberg. His next lumber enterprise was back of Lewistown, where he purchased a tract of pine and oak timber. He then went to Mount Rock, Cumberland county, and afterward in turn to a tract near Mechanicsburg, to near the Loop in Perry county, Pa., to Bloomfield, Perry county (where he operated two saw mills), to Turley Valley (where he operated three mills), to Huntingdon county, Pa. (where he carried on operations for three years), and to Bedford county, Pa., until 1886, in which year he purchased 10,000 acres of land, building a railroad sixteen miles long to get lumber out, this road later known as the Delmont branch of the Birdsboro and Blaine railroad. In 1890 he returned to Perry county and leased seventy-one tracts of timber land, surveyed the line to New Germantown, a distance of thirty miles, and in September of that year grading was commenced, ties put down and rails laid. By Jan. 28th of the following year, sixteen miles of railroad had been built, and the following year the road was built to Blaine, and in 1892 completed from Newport to New Germantown. Mr. Gring's son, David, Gring, is the president of both of these roads, including the one from Duncannon to Bloomfield, which is known as the Perry County Railroad, and father and son deal extensively in lumber. In North Carolina, Virginia and throughout the South, also being the owners of twenty-five lumber companies.

On Dec. 14, 1856, Mr. Samuel H. Gring married Catharine Hoyer, daughter of Simon Hoyer, a bridge-builder. She died June 8, 1900, aged sixty-three years. Nine children were born to this union: George E. with his wife, Emma Caldwell, and has five children—Bruce, Rodney, Herbert, Wilber and Elizabeth; Kate m. Daniel B. Snyder, and had nine children—Sue S., Evan G., Lucy M., Charles L., Lester B. and four that died young; Elizabeth m. John Leitheiser, and has two children—Hattie and Grace; Samuel m. Margaret Ruth, and at her death had had four children; Charles died at the age of twenty years; Susan died at the age of four years; and three died in infancy.

Religious belief Mr. Gring and his family are members of the Grace (Alsace) Reformed Church of Reading, being a member of the finance committee. In politics a Republican, he was treasurer of the township of East Cocalico, Lancaster Co., Pa., during the latter years of the war.

RAYMOND MOHR, the founder of the well-known firm of Raymond Mohr & Son, of Birdsboro, this county, was a resident and business man of that place for the long period of half a century, having settled there in 1837. He made his early success as a contractor and builder, and later displayed equal ability in the undertaking and furniture line, having for many years the only establishment of the kind ever conducted in Birdsboro. His son, Edwin F. Mohr, has succeeded to his interests, having been associated with him for many years, and at the time of his death had for many years been in control of the business in a manner fully equal to the best city directors. In addition to undertaking he engaged in the furniture business, conducting the only store of the kind that the town ever boasted. This store he designed and erected himself, adjoining his dwelling, and he always made it a point to keep a stock and assortment equal to city standards. He had a most active career, meeting with uncommon success. Besides many other financial interests, he possessed at the time of his death forty houses in Birdsboro, and owned property in other places. His building business was the most extensive of any in the county outside of Reading; his furniture store controlled a trade almost as great as some of the big Reading houses, and in his work as a funeral director he personally supervised over five thousand funerals. He was one of the oldest undertakers in continuous business in the county and his reputation extended throughout Berks county and beyond. Mr. Mohr was born Sept. 30, 1834, near Gibraltar, in Robeson township, this county, on his father's farm, the property at present occupied by Mrs. James Trate. Samuel Mohr, his father, was a carpenter by calling, and had a great reputation as a builder of barns, following the method in North Carolina and Virginia of building from the tree, and framing it together with tenon and mortise, fasten-Company, No. 1, of Birdsboro. When St. Mark's Lutheran Church was instituted in Birdsboro he was one of the first members, and he continued an attendant and a supporter of the cause. He was ever alert for the welfare of Birdsboro in business, took an eager interest in current events, and in the management of his varied interests displayed an industry and activity comparatively phenomenal.

Mr. Mohr departed this life Feb. 14, 1907, leaving a wife and two children: Mary Louisa, now the wife of Reese E. Beard, of Reading; and Edwin F., residing in Birdsboro, Pa. A son, Louis Raymond, died Dec. 17, 1893, aged twenty-one years.

EDWIN F. MOHR, son of Raymond Mohr, of Birdsboro, was born April 29, 1875, in Birdsboro, and received his education in the public schools. He has given all his working years to the business in which he is still engaged, and which he learned thoroughly under paternal instruction, supplemented by his own well-directed efforts. He took a course in the Massachusetts School of Embalming, from which he graduated Nov. 18, 1898, and has spared no pains to make the service from his establishment up to the best standards anywhere. His methods and equipment are first-class in every respect, and he has kept his business up in every line. For some years he was engaged in the furniture business, his stock of furniture and carpets equaling those found at the large business centers. Very recently he relinquished this department of trade, to give his entire attention to the wholesale and retail furniture business, which is progressive and enterprising, being one of the most active young business men of the borough, and is broad and generous in his dealings, whether in business or private life. He is well known in his line, being a prominent member of the Funeral Directors Association of Pennsylvania.

On June 23, 1899, Mr. Mohr married Miss Sadie Geyer, daughter of Henry A. Geyer, of Birdsboro, and they have had one son, Raymond. Mr. and Mrs. Mohr are members of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, and in fraternal connections he is an Odd Fellow, belonging to Neversink Lodge, No. 203, and is also a member of Fraternal Order of United Leders, and of Reading. He also is a member of Friendship Fire Company No. 1, of his native town. He is a Republican in political faith, and active in the work of the party, representing it in county and State conventions from time to time.

Since Mr. Mohr has given his sole attention to the undertaking business, he has kept pace with the leaders in that line and is excelled only by directors of the large cities in ability to conduct funerals. His knowledge is ever added to by the investigation and adoption of the latest processes and he is painstaking and assiduous in his efforts to enhance his skill and be a credit to his associates in business and profession, and give satisfaction to his patrons. He constantly improves his needed paraphernalia, and never allows his equipment to deteriorate or become incongruous with the times. As a consequence he has gained for himself the respect of his competitors, and drawn to himself a large clientele, in his local town and from a large radius in the surrounding districts.

IRWIN T. EHST, director of the National Bank of Boyertown, director and secretary of the Franklin Improvement Manufacturing Company, manager and secretary of the Union Mutual Fire and Storm Insurance Company, secretary, treasurer and general manager of the Boyertown Gas Company, and interested in many other of the largest and most important industries of Berks county, was born in Oley township, Nov. 19, 1850.

(1) Nicholas Ehest (also spelled Ihest and East, and in the Pennsylvania archives among the list of emigrants Ish) was the ancestor of the American branch of the family. He was born in Switzerland in 1711, and he came to the New World on the ship "Pink Pliaisance," which qualified at Philadelphia Sept. 21, 1782. He located in Colebrookdale, Montgomery County, and began farming and business, he was the owner of about 400 acres of land, near Gablesville, on the Popodickon creek. This tract has been divided into four farms, namely: the one on which the original buildings are located, now owned by Jacob B. Bechtel, and containing 103 acres; the second owned by the widow of John; the third owned by William C. Eddinger; and the fourth by John B. Bahr. On the part owned by Jacob B. Bechtel is a private burying ground where Nicholas Ehest and his wife, as well as later generations, are buried. The inscription on the tombstone of Nicholas Ehest, who died in 1804; and his wife, who died in 1806, reads: "Hier ruhen die Gebeine von Nicholas Ihest, war alt 93 Jahre"; and the inscription of his wife: "Hier ruhen die Gebeine von Veronika Ihest, war alt 90 Jahre." The Ehest family are members of the Mennonite Church, and many of them are buried at Boyertown and Bally meeting houses. The children of Nicholas Ehest and his wife were: Daniel (whose children were Elizabeth, Magdalene, and Ann, a daughter), Abraham, Molly and Elizabeth.

(II) Abraham Ehest, son of the ancestor, became the father of four children: Samuel; Nicholas; John; and Anna (in Henry Freed, and lived for some years near Norristown and then moved to Michigan, where both died, the parents of Catharine, Dinah, Anna, Mary, a daughter not named, Abraham, Henry, and John).

(III) Samuel Ehest, son of Abraham, met an accidental death in December, 1812, while in Philadelphia with a team. His three sons and six daughters were: Elizabeth, Polly, Dinah (born 1800), Abraham, Anna, Catharine, John L., a son (no name), and Helena, the last named being a possible child.

(IV) Nicholas Ehest, son of Abraham, married Catharine Lettsah, and settled in Chester county, Pa. They had three sons and five daughters, namely: Catharine, Dinah, Elizabeth, Mary, Abraham, Jacob, and Magdalena.

(IV) John (Johannes) Ehest, son of Abraham, was born April 12, 1782, and owned the farm now the property of Jacob B. Bechtel. In 1806 he married Anna Margaret Weise (born July 28, 1786, died Dec. 10, 1810), and they had two children. He married (second) in 1812, Elizabeth Schwertley. To this second union were born three sons: Daniel, Ehest, and Magdalene, and three daughters: Magdalene, Catharine and Anna. Of these Abraham and Samuel are both living (1908). Abraham was born March 28, 1817, on the original Ehest homestead, and he now lives at Barto, spending a part of his time with his son, Rev. John, who lives between Bally and Clayton. He is a most remarkable man, well preserved, bright, humorous, and possessed of a wonderful memory, has never been obliged to wear glasses. At the age of twenty-one, he weighed 210 pounds, and now in his ninety-second year weighs 240. He married Susanna Moyer, born 1821, daughter of Michael Moyer. She died in 1889, the mother of two children, Rev. John, Henry, Abraham, Susanna, David and Jacob.

(V) John (Johannes) Ehest, son of Abraham, was born May 5, 1805, and at his death, Dec. 9, 1886, he was buried in Bally Mennonite Cemetery. He was a farmer in Colebrookdale township, but later he and his son Levi conducted a tannery near the Pike line in Oley township. He married Magdalena Gabel, born Feb. 22, 1806, died Jan. 1, 1890. They had four sons and one daughter: Leah, who married John H. Funk; Jacob, who conducted a hotel in Reading; William, living in Washington township; Henry G.; and Levi, of New Berlinville.

(VI) John L. Ehest, son of John L., was born in Colebrookdale township, July 7, 1853, and he died on his farm in Washington township in 1890, and is buried at the Mennonite Meeting House at Bally, formerly called Churchville. He was a good quiet citizen, true to the teachings of his faith. He married Rachel Tea, daughter of Henry G. and Elizabeth (Maul) Tea, both natives of England. Their children were: Irwin, Madora, Allen, a butcher at Bechtelville; Warren, living near Boyertown; William, a school teacher in Washington township; Ammon, of Reading; Annie, m. to Allen Erb, of Bechtelville; and Cora, m. to Elmer Oberholtzer, of Bechtelville.

(VII) Irwin T. Ehest, son of Henry G., was born in Oley township Nov. 19, 1860, and was reared upon his father's farm, attending the public schools in the vicinity of his home, and later Prof. D. B. Brunner's Scientific Academy, Reading. In 1879 he was licensed to teach school, and he taught one term in Washington township. He then came to Boyertown and learned the printer's trade in the printing office of the Boyertown Messenger. For about four years the firm was Ehst & Emes, the partner being Calvin F. Emes, and they carried on a stationery and printing establishment, but Mr. Ehst, since April, 1889, has been alone. Mr. Ehst is a progressive and public-spirited man, and he has taken an active interest in many public enterprises of his town and county. He is a director and stockholder in the National Bank of Boyertown, Burial Casket Company (employing 350 people), the Union Manufacturing Company (employing sixty people, and making all kinds of castings), and a director of the Franklin Improvement Co., builders. He is the principal owner of the Boyertown Cane Company of which he is secretary, treasurer, and general manager, and he is the business manager of Ehst & Co., largest real estate dealers in and about Boyertown. He is a director of the Manatawny Mutual Fire and Storm Insurance Company.

Mr. Ehst has been prominent in the public life of Boyertown. In politics he is a Republican, and for five years he was justice of the peace, and since 1896 he has been a notable public. He has been the adjudicator of a number of estates. At the time of the Opera House fire, Jan. 13, 1908, he was appointed by the Burgess as chairman of the Relief committee, with the privilege of choosing his own colleagues, to organize a committee of the finances of the operation and burial of the 171 dead, caring for orphans and relief, and the distributing of the $23,000 popular subscription.

Fraternally Mr. Ehst is a Mason, belonging to Stichter Lodge, No. 254, F. & A. M., Pottstown; Bloomsburg Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree; Bloomsburg Consistory, 32d degree; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading. He also belongs to Washington Camp, No. 104, P. O. S. of A., of Boyertown. He is unmarried.

LEVI H. FOCHT, head of the firm of L. H. Focht & Son, general contractors and builders, is one of the leading men in his line in Berks county. He maintains his business headquarters in Reading and his home in the borough of Birdboro, and is actively identified with the most progressive interests of both places. The business in which he finds his chief interest was established in 1870, and his experiences in his work occur in and around Reading, although his operations are by no means confined to this locality.

Mr. Focht was born Aug. 3, 1850, in Robeson township, Berks county, where his family has long been located. He is of German descent. His grandfather, George Focht, who died Jan. 1943, and John, who died in Robeson township. But he was also an undertaker and cabinetmaker, and in the pursuit of those callings settled in Birdsboro, where he carried on business for a number of years. A clock which he made in 1832 is now one of the cherished possessions of his grandson, Levi H. Focht. George Focht died March 1, 1859. He married Catherine Huyett, and they had the following named children: John, born June 14, 1804; Samuel, born Aug. 8, 1805, who was engaged in business as a carpenter in Reading, as such building the McIlvaine rolling-mill and also the first house erected by E. & G. Brooke in Birdsboro; Daniel, born April 20, 1807, who was the father of Levi H. Focht; Mary, born Jan. 18, 1809, who married a Hiester; Charles, born Jan. 5, 1812, who also followed carpentering; George, born Jan. 1, 1814; and Jacob, born July 18, 1815, a carpenter of Reading, who was the last survivor of the family, dying Dec. 26, 1886. This family were all Lutherans in religious belief.

Daniel Focht was born April 20, 1807, on the homestead in Robeson township. Practically all of his active years were spent in the service of the Schuylkill Navigation Company, whose employ he entered in early manhood, and he was so reliable a workman that at one time he had charge of construction and repairs on the Schuylkill canal. He also cultivated the homestead farm after his father's death. He met his death by drowning in the canal, about two miles above Birdsboro, Oct. 14, 1871. Daniel Focht married Catherine Hemmig, daughter of David Hemmig, who died June 6, 1889, at having six children, of whom their union were born nine children, eight of whom lived to maturity, viz.: Mary Ann, born May 21, 1834, m. Raymond Mohr (deceased); Sarah, born Nov. 21, 1835, m. Lewis Fritz; one died in infancy in 1837; Catherine, born Sept. 19, 1839, m. David Mock; David, born Oct. 30, 1841, m. Mary, b. Oct. 1840, l. Mrs. Martha (Lincoln) Focht, who still resides in Reading; Fred, born Oct. 24, 1843, m. Jeremiah Deeter; Elizabeth, born March 21, 1845, m. Jeremiah Weidner; Hannah, born April 17, 1846, m. John Lacey; Levi H. was born Aug. 3, 1850. The father of this family was a Lutheran in religious connection, the mother a member of the Reformed Church. He was a Democrat in political matters.

Levi H. Focht was educated in the public schools of Birdsboro, and began work at the early age of thirteen, in the employ of the Schuylkill Navigation Company. He was engaged in repair work on the canal for two years, after which he commenced to serve his apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, under his brother-in-law, Raymond Mohr, of Birdsboro. He also learned undertaking. For a time he found employment on the Perkiomen railroad, later working for Berton & McDonald, bridge builders, of Philadelphia, on a number of bridges in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. When only eighteen years old the firm of Birdboro undertook the construction of a wooden bridge across the Pompton river on the line of the Midland railroad of New Jersey—conclusive evidence of his remarkable ability in the building line. In 1870 he began to take contracts on his own account, and he was successful from the beginning, for his youth seemed to make no difference in the confidence which his patrons had in his integrity and capability. In 1873 he established himself in Birdsboro, and many of the most important buildings in that borough, including structures in both the business and residence parts, are of his construction. He deserves the greatest share of the credit for the beautiful section of Birdsboro now included in the eastward extension, formerly known as Lincoln-town, most of the attractive and substantial residences which have made that locality famous having been erected according to his plans and under his supervision. Since 1874 Mr. Focht has had his business headquarters in the city of Reading, as more accessible to the extensive territory embracing the Lehigh and Schuylkill valleys. In the spring of 1906 he admitted his son, George Walter Focht, to a partnership, under the firm name of L. H. Focht & Son, and their offices are located in the Baer Building, in Reading, where they enjoy all the modern facilities for the conduct of their widespread interests.

Mr. Focht has been a member of the Board of Directors of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, having erected most of the stations along their line, besides many elegant and commodious residences along the line of the Pennsylvania road. He also put up the stock farm buildings on the estate of Mr. A. J. Cassatt; an addition to the Haverford (Pa.) College buildings; the Wood Memorial Chapel, adjoining Christ Cathedral, in Reading; and various other structures which display his artistic and architectural ability, as well as his thorough workmanship in the merely mechanical part of the work. He has always depended upon the excellence of his work to gain him new customers and retain the old, and he has had no reason to regret the course he has pursued throughout a career filled with unusual activity. The firm has a reputation second to none for work of high quality, reliability and irreproachable standards, and few business houses in any line enjoy such unlimited confidence either among patrons or business associates.

Mr. Focht has always been vitally interested in the welfare of his home borough, Birdsboro, and he has found time to advance its interests in numerous ways. He has served twenty-four consecutive years as member of the council of that borough, and has been a member of the Birdsboro Fire Company since its organization, acting as treasurer of the company for twenty-one years. He has been a stockholder in and director of the First National Bank of Birdsboro since its organization, and in this connection he has been the president and a director of the Reading National Bank since its organization. He is a stanch Republican in political faith.

In the fraternal circles of Reading and Berks county generally Mr. Focht is a familiar and popular figure. He is a high Mason, holding membership in Chandler Lodge, No. 357, Ex-elsa Chapter No. 118, Commandery No. 103, K. T., and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., all of Reading; and Philadelphia Consistory, thirty-second degree.
He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., belonging to Neversink Lodge, No. 514, of Birdsboro; to the I. O. R. M., at Birdsboro; the Fraternal Order of Eagles; Reading Lodge,
No. 37, B. B. O. Elks, and Mount Pleasant Council, No. 37, O. U. A. M.

On May 23, 1874, Mr. Focht married Alice Beard, daughter of Jeremiah Beard, of Birdsboro, and to them were born two sons, George Walter and Levi Roy, the last named dying March 12, 1889. As previously stated, George Walter Focht is now in partnership with his father in the contracting and building business. He married Miss Alice Huyett, daughter of Isaac Huyett.

WILLIAM ENGLE, a prominent and well-to-do business man of Reading, who is the owner and operator of a paper business, was born in Montgomery county, Dec. 5, 1813, of Daniel and Mary (Crisher) Engle, grandson of John Engle, and great-grandson of Jacob Engle, who was an officer in the Continental army, and fought under General Warren at the battle of Bunker Hill. Jacob Engle was one of those who came from Germany to drill troops prior to the great struggle for freedom, and on peace being declared he received a large tract of land from the Government for service rendered. He settled upon a portion of this tract, which was located in Montgomery county, Pa., and there resided the balance of his life.

John Engle, grandfather of William, was born in Montgomery county in 1764, and operated a part of the land deeded by the Government to his father, also carrying on a butchering business in connection therewith all of his life. He married and became the father of the following children:
Jacob, John, Daniel, Samuel and one daughter. As far back as is known the family were Lutherans in religious beliefs, and in politics were Whigs. Daniel Engle was born in 1809, in Montgomery county, and when seventeen years of age came to Reading, where he learned the coopering business, and for many years manufactured cedar hollow ware, becoming very successful. He retired several years prior to his death, which occurred July 2, 1884, and his wife resides away. In 1857 aged sixty-six years, he had seven children were born to this couple, seven of whom reached maturity: Anetta m. Daniel Fisher, of Philadelphia; Daniel is deceased; William H.; George is assistant superintendent of the Merrick Iron Company, of Philadelphia; Rosie m. Milton Palmer, of Reading, Pa.; Mary is deceased; and Richard is employed by his brother, William. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Engle were Lutherans.
In political belief he was first a Whig, and later became a Republican.

William Engle received his preliminary education in the schools of Reading, and later attended the Reading high school. In young manhood he learned the trade of a cooper, which he followed for some years, and in 1866 engaged in the manufacture of paper boxes. Starting in a very small and primitive way Mr. Engle worked his way steadily upward, now owning one of the most complete plants in the State, and controlling some of Reading's best trades. He is an average, twenty-five hand immigration in his plant, which is located at Seventh and Walnut streets, and his business is steadily increasing. Mr. Engle was married in 1867 to Amanda Marshall, daughter of Dr.
Jacob Marshall, and one son was born to this union, Walter, who is superintendent of his father's plant. Mr. Engle married Mrs. Gertrude Moyer, of Reading.

In 1863 Mr. Engle enlisted and went to the front with the Pennsylvania Militia, but in 1863 joined the Independent Ringgold Artillery. He is connected with the G.
A. R. Mr. Engle is a Lutheran, while his wife is an Episcopalian.

SYDENHAM E. ANCONA, son of Morris M.
Ancona, M. D., and Mary Ann (Knapp) Ancona, was born in Birdsboro, near Lititz, adjoining Lititz, Lancaster county, Pa., Nov. 20, 1824.

M. M. Ancona was a native of London, England, born
Feb. 9, 1791, and died at Pottsville, Pa., March 20, 1854.
His father was M. Ancona, a marble and statuary mason, who died in London, of which city his ancestors, for some centuries, had been residents. His wife was a Montc more, and, as were the Anconas, of Italian descent.
They were merchants at Leghorn and are presumed to have come from the city of Ancona, Italy.

The family moved in the spring of the year 1826 from Lititz to Bern township, Berks county, about two miles from Birdsboro, near South Hill; from this place to Lebanon about the 1st of April, 1829, and in 1830-31 to Kelly's Corner, near the Conewago creek, Lebanon county; from Kelly's Corner in 1833 to Porter's Store, on the road from Colebrook Furnace to Elizabethtown;
in April, 1836, to Caernarvon township, near Churchtown, Lancaster county, where they remained until 1840; from there to Alsace township, Berks county, near Stony Creek. He worked on a farm in Saucon township, Lehigh county, for four months. The subject of this sketch then, upon the suggestion of his father and in response to an advertisement in the papers, applied for a position at school in Upper Township, and was employed by the executors of the estate of Valentine Wagner.
This school at the time was the only English school west of the river, except the public schools at Womelsdorf. The compensation was ten dollars per month besides board.
The following year the compensation was increased to fifteen dollars per month. He taught there two years, and in the summers of 1843 and 1844 at home. In the fall, seeing an announcement in the papers that twenty-one teachers were wanted in Earl township, Lancaster county, he, among some fifty other applicants, was examined at New Holland, passed and obtained a school.

In June, 1845, he made a trip to New York and Boston by way of Providence, returning to Reading, and leaving in July for Niagara Falls and Canada. At that time the method of reaching New York was by stage via Allentown, Easton to Morristown, N. J., and from there to New York by rail. After leaving Niagara he proceeded to Buffalo, then to a town of from one to two thousand inhabitants, going from there by steamer to Cleveland about the 20th of August, and from the latter place to Akron by canal boat. From this point, with a companion whom he happened to meet, and who proposed to remain with him, but Mr. Ancona decided it was not for them to enter business, Mr. Ancona proceeded as far on the canal as Chambersburg, Pa., where they separated.

After some months at home, given up to farming,
Mr. Ancona accepted in 1845 an English select school at Seybert's Mills, in Upper Tulpehocken township, Berks county, having about twenty pupils at this school and done very successfully in instructing them. He had some very bright boys there, notably Charles Albright, who afterward became a general in the army during the Civil war, a prominent lawyer, and was elected to Congress on the ticket at large from Pennsylvania some years after the close of the war.

He decided in the year 1846 to discontinue teaching school, on the invitation of Daniel H. Feger, who had obtained a position with the Reading Railroad Company.
Mr. Ancona accepted a position in the service in the same department with him as an assistant timekeeper, devoting himself with all his energy and giving his entire attention to the requirements which they demanded. He continued with the railroad company until 1853, when he was appointed chief clerk and bookkeeper from December, 1851, having been acting as assistant timekeeper previous thereto. At the close of December, 1851, he took charge of the general books of the company, which were then in a condition of unbalance and in a neglected condition. He succeeded at once in the work, although he had had no previous experience in double entry bookkeeping.
FROM A PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN IN WASHINGTON, D.C. WHILE A MEMBER OF THE 38TH CONGRESS
When nominated for Congress in 1860, without having given the company any notice of his purpose, he was warmly congratulated by the general manager of the company. It was 1849, and the company had not hitherto enjoyed the gratifying communication from the president of the road that his election to Congress would not interfere with his position with the company, and that they expected him to return at the end of the session.

During his connection with the railroad company, in 1849, together with his brother-in-law, Daniel H. Feger, he organized a military company known as the Reading Rifles, which was composed largely of young men employed by the Reading Railroad Company, engineers and mechanics forming a notable organization numbering some two hundred, thoroughly armed and equipped with rifles furnished by the State. It had a band of music made up of its own members, and was decidedly one of the crack volunteer organizations of the country. It was attached to the 1st Brigade, 5th Division, P. V., under the command of William H. Keim, of Reading. The company made several notable excursions to Philadelphia as the guests of the celebrated State Fencibles, then under the command of Col. James Page. They were received by the State Fencibles in the grounds surrounding Independence Hall, and were presented by Colonel Page, in behalf of the State Fencibles, a handsome silver-mounted rifle, and a gold medallion containing Colonel Page's portrait with a suitable inscription. In 1854 the company went on an excursion to Washington and Mount Vernon. They passed through Philadelphia under the escort of the State Fencibles. At Washington they were received by the "German Jaeger," commanded by Major Schwartzman, of this company, and, with this company, of the District of Columbia at the time. They were received by the President of the United States, General Pierce, and his Secretary of War, Jefferson Davis, in the East Room of the White House, having 137 men in line, and 150 officers. In presenting the company, each man was introduced by name to the President and Secretary of War. The company was complimented by both the President and Mr. Davis. The company was entertained by Hon. J. Glancy Jones, the representative from Berks county, at his home. The arsenal and navy yard were visited. At Mount Vernon reached under the escort of Major Schwartzman and his company. Returning home, they stopped over in Baltimore, the next day at York, had dinner at Columbia, and were received in Lancaster by the Buchanan Rifles and entertained at a banquet at Fulton Hall in the evening. They attended the reception tendered to Louis Kossuth, the celebrated Hungarian patriot; also the reception to the first Japanese legation that visited the United States.

Mr. Ancona retired from the Rifles soon after this excursion in consequence of a political controversy with men who had left the Rifles and joined a rival organization. He was then invited to take command of the Reading Troop, a cavalry company that dated its organization from the Revolutionary war. He accepted, and was subsequently elected major of the Reading Battalion by a very large majority. Mr. Hiester Clymer, later his successor in Congress, was supported by the opposition, but Mr. Ancona was nominated by the Committee on the Judiciary, and took the ballot of Mr. Clymer in the Ringgold Light Artillery, which was the finest military organization in the United States.

In February, 1861, Governor Curtin sent Maj. Gen. William H. Keim (5th Division, Pennsylvania Volunteers, to which the brigades of Judges Black and Capt. James McKnight to ascertain whether their companies could be held in readiness to respond to a call in defense of the government. They conferred with their men and had them pledged by oath to go out in defense of the government, then threatened with secession, to call upon all of their State's citizens to serve for the State, but for the Ringgold Artillery only. In April, after the President's Proclamation, and on the same day that the call came from Governor Curtin, Mr. Ancona went to Harrisburg to ascertain whether his company was also to be sent, but was advised that for the time being no cavalry companies would be called.

On July 4, 1861, the XXXVIIth Congress was called in special session, and Mr. Ancona was elected as a representative from Berks county, he communicated with General Cameron, who was a nephew of Cameron and had been a member of the Reading Rifles. He then asked the General what the probabilities were of his company being called. The General replied that they "had more men than they wanted," and hence Mr. Ancona made no further effort to obtain recognition. A very short time thereafter a mustering order was issued, and the Reading Rifles was called. The company was mustered in, divided into two companies, the one under George Clymer as captain and the other under J. C. A. Hoffeditz. Thus he failed to get into the service owing to circumstances over which he had no control.

Mr. Ancona was elected to the XXXVIIth Congress in 1860 and took his seat on July 4, 1861, at a special session called by President Lincoln. He was also elected to the XXXVIIIth and XXXIXth Congresses. He served on the committee on Commercial Affairs, which as he says, "offered little opportunity for recognition, as most business was conducted in closed rooms.

About this time General Grant was considered a favorite candidate for the Presidency, and the so-called radical representatives of the House, including such men as Thaddeus Stevens, William D. Kelley and Henry Winter Davis, of Maryland, did not favor his nomination. Mr. Blaine predicted, however, that he would be nominated on the Republican ticket. This proved to be correct.

Mr. Ancona retired from the service in 1862, and the country was then at war. Congress was then in session, and Mr. Ancona was named to the committee on military affairs. In 1863 he was named to the committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. Ancona retired from the service in 1862, and the country was then at war. Congress was then in session, and Mr. Ancona was named to the committee on military affairs. In 1863 he was named to the committee on the District of Columbia.
After his failure to obtain the renomination for a fourth term to Congress, in 1869, his colleagues from Pennsylvania petitioned President Johnson name him for naval officer, port of Philadelphia. Strong and representative Republicans in his district had requested Senator Cameron and others to favor his confirmation by the Senate, this being done without his request and knowledge until one day communicated to him by Judge Kelly, of Philadelphia, in the committee-room on Military Affairs. He was not at first prepared to again run for Congress, but peremptorily declined.

Mr. Ancona had been connected with the fire department of the city of Reading for some years when on the suggestion of Gen. George M. Keim he took the presidency of the Reading Hose Company. General Keim headed a subscription with the hundred dollars toward the purchase of a steam fire-engine in 1858. With his accustomed energy and determination he succeeded in getting the first steam fire-engine into Reading at a cost of thirty-six hundred dollars. It was called the Novelty, and was built at the Novelty Works in New York, by L. I. Lambert. In 1867 he, with a few others, organized the Hampden Fire Company, of which he was the first president. He has been re-elected and occupied this office for forty-two years continuously. He is also a delegate to the Firemen's Union.

He was one of the founders of the Reading Firemen's Relief Association since its organization and has always been prominently and actively connected with the volunteer fire department of the city of Reading. He was a member of the Reading school board and the president of that body for several terms. He served for many years with Judge Stitzel and Charles Breiner, Sr., as a member of the local board of charities, appointed by the Governor. Governor Pattison appointed him a trustee of the State Asylum at Harrisburg. He was one of the originators of the Reading Steam Forge, Cotton Mill, a director of the Reading Savings Bank, and was identified as an active citizen and a leader in the building and savings associations for over sixty years.

Having some relations with the officers of the Fire Association of Philadelphia, he proposed to the fire department in the city of Reading the organization of an insurance company for insurance against loss by fire on a plan similar to the plan of the Fire Association of Philadelphia, which had grown out of the old volunteer fire department of that city, and had an accumulation at that time of some millions of assets. The necessary legislation was obtained, but he could not convince the representatives of the various fire companies in the Firemen's Union of the practicability of the plan, and then organized a stock fire insurance company with a capital of $100,000, of which $35,000 was subscribed by his friends. Twenty per cent was paid in so that he had $7,500 in cash when the company organized. He started business July 3, 1877, and was elected secretary and treasurer. The company had a board of directors, composed of some of the leading business men of the city. Judge J. Pringle Jones was elected president, and Maj. James McKnight, vice-president. He served as secretary and treasurer for over thirty years, when a small beginning of $7,500 he increased the paid-up capital to $50,000, and net surplus over and above the capital to $300,000.

He also, during this period, succeeded in organizing the Reading Trust Company, with many of the stockholders of the Reading Fire Insurance Company, and was elected one of the officers of directors and officers, and served as secretary and treasurer.

With the tendency to consolidation of insurance business by the insurance companies, by re-insurance and otherwise, with strong competition by companies with large aggregations of capital, and owing to excessive losses for two years previous to 1898, he was impressed with the belief that the Reading Fire Insurance Company that had reached the greatest success it could attain under the adverse prospect, and he therefore determined to effect a re-insurance of the Reading Company with some large company to continue the Reading Company as before, and to have all its policies underwritten by such a company, taking all its revenues, and paying all its expenses and the rental, which would be equivalent to a dividend of from ten to twelve per cent to the stockholders of the Reading Fire Insurance Company. After several negotiations with companies in the United States and Europe, where he went in 1896-97 with this purpose, with the hope of effecting such a transaction, he received a communication to enter into negotiations with the Hartford Fire Insurance Company. He met Mr. Chase, the president of the company, and seemed in a fair way of coming to an agreement, but the methods proposed to accomplish the purpose and meet our requirements, and were promptly declined. Mr. Edward Cluff, of New York, who had heard of these negotiations, had at the same time proposed an arrangement with the Scottish Alliance, which was declined. The president of the Scottish Alliance had been called for, however, and a meeting was arranged in New York for this purpose, which finally resulted in the sale of the stock of the Reading Fire Insurance Company, with the consent of a large number of the stockholders, the Scottish Alliance paying the stockholders twenty dollars a share, and from which they had received an average dividend of eight per cent per annum for thirty years.

During a period of over fifty years Mr. Ancona was an active member of the Masonic fraternity. In 1848, with some associates and friends, he organized a lodge known as Chandler Lodge, No. 227, of which he became Worshipful Master. He was also a member of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and received the degree of Knight Templar in Philadelphia. He was also appointed Eminent Commander, but he did not attend the meeting for the installation of officers by reason of the death of his father. In 1870, with a few friends, he applied for authority for another Commandery, K. T., which was granted and became known as Ancona Commandery, No. 49. He was appointed to and accepted the position of Eminent Commander, with the understanding that he would do no more than preside for the year at their meetings. He was appointed District Deputy Grand Master for the District of Berks, Lebanon and part of Montgomery counties in 1861-62-63-64, and 1874-75-76.

He was elected president of the Penn Street Passenger Railway, the first road in the city of Reading. He was also one of the projectors and directors of the Mt. Penn Gravity Railway Company in 1889, and has continued as director in it ever since.

A long and busy life he has found time to travel extensively, not alone the many trips through every State and Territory of the United States, but frequent trips abroad and to the Indies. He has devoted his attention to public matters and the common good, giving them the advantage of his wide experience and close observation. Philanthropic and charitable, and intense in all his undertakings, he has well filled to the fullest measure, and enjoyed the blessings of a life of over fourscore years, retaining full possession of his vitality, energy and mental faculties.

Edward S. Wertz, who conducts the Wertz Milling Company at Reading, one of the best known establishments of its kind in Berks county, was born in Harrisburg, Dauphin Co., Pa., Feb. 23, 1850, son of Samuel and Maria (Sweigert) Wertz.

Samuel Wertz, his father, was born March 2, 1809, in the Canton of Aargau, Switzerland, and in his native country learned the business of wool fulling. He came to America, settling first at Frankford, Philadelphia, where he manufactured cotton laps and wadding. He subsequently removed to Harrisburg, where he operated a flouring and woolen-mill and remained until 1856, at which time he was engaged in business at the old Ritter Hotel stand, in Exeter Township. In the same year he removed to Spring township, Berks county, where he purchased the old Althouse Mill property, which he rebuilt, making vast improvement in the establishment, and he successfully operated it as a flour and feed mill until 1870. That year he settled in Reading and opened the flour and feed store which he conducted until his retirement, in 1880. His death occurred in 1884, when he was seventy-five years old.

Mr. Wertz was twice married. His first wife, Maria Sweigert, a native of Lancaster county, Pa., died in 1852, leaving six children, namely: Louisa M., m. Amos Price; Elizabeth, deceased, m. Herman Striehecker; George W.; William H., m. Margaret Ayres; On April 29th, 1867, Mr. Wertz m. (second) Catherine Waldenmyer, daughter of John Waldenmyer, and to this union two children were born, Augustus and Frank. Mr. Wertz was a member of the Reformed Church, while his wife held to the faith of the Lutheran denomination. In politics he was a staunch Democrat.

Edward S. Wertz was quite young when his father came to Berks county, and here he received his education in the public schools. From boyhood he was employed around his father's milling establishment, and when sixteen he left home to complete his apprenticeship at the miller's trade. He went to Huyett's Mill at Steelington, in Cumru township, remaining there in the capacity of a superintendent, until he reached a position at Womelsdorf, having charge of a flouring mill owned by a Mr. Fisher. There he also spent a year, and then accepted a similar position at the old Hiester Mill, in Bern township, later going to Reed's Mill, in Robeson township. Going to Chicago, Ill., in 1871, Mr. Wertz took charge of the mill, and remained there for fifteen years. He was also in business, at the end of that time returning to Reading, where he was employed by Heilman & Co., hardware merchants, who were then located on the present site of the Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart store. After two years' service with this firm he went to the old Wertz Mill property in Spring Township, and for twenty-five years carried on the business, on the mill there. It was one of the old-style burr mills, and was one of the first to be adapted to the modern roller-process, the necessary changes being made by Mr. Wertz, who during his occupancy of the property rebuilt the establishment four times. He enlarged as well as modernized it, increasing the capacity as trade demanded from a fifteen-barrel mill to a seventy-five-barrel mill. It was there he first manufactured the now celebrated Wertz Roller Cream Flour, which has gained an enviable reputation throughout this section of Pennsylvania. Mr. Wertz still continues the manufacture of this brand, which has long been a favorite in the trade, and for which he has sustained its high quality to the present time.

In 1898 Mr. Wertz removed to Reading, where he established his present plant, his mill and office being at No. 135-141 Buttonwood street and conducted under the name of the Wertz Milling Company. His mill is one of the largest and best equipped in the State of Pennsylvania, no device of approved pattern known to flour manufacturers having been omitted in fitting it up, and the conduct of the plant and standard of products are accordingly high. All the products are disposed of to the local trade. The brands manufactured by the Wertz Milling Company are Roller Cream, Gold Dust, White Ra and Minnewa, all of which have proved a decided success throughout this section. Besides his milling business Mr. Wertz is interested in other lines, being an extensive dealer in farm products and having the largest hay storage plant in the city of Reading. During the year 1905 he handled 185 carloads of grain, hay, etc., and his business is steadily on the increase. In this line he gives employment to eight men. He is one of the directors of the Pennsylvania State Millers' Association.

Mr. Wertz was married Sept. 11, 1873, to Miss Sarah Kercher, daughter of William Kercher, of Bern township. They have had no children of their own, but have reared two children, Namely: Bessie, who was reared and educated in Lebanon county; and Hannah Malburn, wife of Harry Focht, Mr. Wertz's able assistant in his milling operations. With all his extensive business cares Mr. Wertz finds time to take a public-spirited interest in local affairs, and to devote to benevolent and charitable objects. He is secretary and treasurer of Kissing's Church, of which he has been a member for many years, and in September, 1908, he was elected an elder. He served as superintendent of the Sunday school for a period of thirty-eight years. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Topton Presbyterian Church, and a member of the board of directors of the Reading Fraternal, where he is a Mason, holding membership in Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, K. T.; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

A. ELLSWORTH LEINBACH, vice-president of the J. G. Leinbach Company of Reading, was born Oct. 24, 1862, in the city with which his whole business career has been identified. His parents were Mahlon A. and Mary E. (Adam) Leinbach.

Mahlon A. Leinbach was born April 14, 1840, in Bern township, Berks county, but while very young his father removed to Exeter township, and the boy attended school there. He has always been engaged in the manufacture of pants and woolen goods, and gained his first insight into the details of that work under William Brumbach, with whom he remained a number of years. From there he went to the Reading Mills, of which his father was then the owner, and was given an interest in the firm, being one of the organizers of this large plant. He was active in its management till July, 1904, when he retired from the firm, although he still retains stock and is one of the directors. He is also a director of the Mt. Penn Gravity Railroad, of the Reading Cold Storage Company, and a member of the firm of Leinbach & Sons. In 1862 Mr. Leinbach married Miss Mary E. Adam, of Berks county, and they had a family of seven children, only two of whom are living, A. Ellsworth and Charles E. The latter resides at home and is foreman of the spinning department in the Reading Mills. The family residence is at No. 211 North Fourth street, where Mr. Leinbach built a home specially adapted to his own needs and ideas. With his wife and sons he is a member of the First Reformed Church.

A. Ellsworth Leinbach during his boyhood attended the Reading schools, and then entered the Reading Mills. He advanced steadily through different positions, becoming familiar with the various departments of the factory, and is now in charge of the weaving departments. His official position, since the incorporation of the company, has been vice-president, and he has proved himself to be a most efficient, capable and wide-awake business man. He has been active in the life of the county, and has always worked for the Republican principles, and has done much service for his party, as delegate to county and State conventions, as secretary of the county committee, and as chairman of the Seventh Ward Republicans, while he has also been a member of the school board of Reading for several years. In 1884, A. Ellsworth Leinbach married Miss M. Alice Lotz, daughter of Caspar and Rebecca (Nagle) Lotz, of Reading. Two children have been born to them, viz.: Ada L., who was graduated from Marshall Seminary, at Oak Lane, Philadelphia, in 1904, married William A. Helmman, a young business man of Reading; and Caspar R. D., who died Feb. 10, 1905, aged fifteen years, three months and twenty-two days. The family residence is at No. 314 Oley street. Socially Mr. Leinbach is a member of Isaac Hiester Lodge No. 660, F. & A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree; Harrisburg Consistory, 33rd degree; Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; and Reading Lodge, No. 115, B. P. O. Elks.

DR. CHRISTIAN NICHOLAS HOFFMAN, physician at Sinking Spring for forty-five years, was born in Northampton county, Pa., Aug. 11, 1833. He received his preliminary education in the township schools and at Nazareth Academy. Later he attended the Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1862. He immediately located at Sinking Spring and continued in active practice forty-five years, retiring in June, 1906, on account of illness. He died July 6, 1907. He built up a large practice which reached out into the country for ten and even twenty miles, which evidences... his great success and the confidence the people had in him. His devotion to his profession was extraordinary, he hardly ever taking any vacation, and this burden was shared with great fidelity by his devoted wife. He was recognized as an able physician and was highly respected among his fellow townsmen. In politics he was a Republican, and in religion a member of the Reformed Church in Northampton county. For some years he took an interest in the Order of American Mechanics. Dr. Hoffman was the last of his family, which had boasted of seven doctors in two generations, including himself and his brother, his uncles and cousins.

In 1879 Dr. Hoffman married Ellen Ann Jones, daughter of John H. and Margaret (Seitzinger) Jones, and they had two daughters: Katherine Jones, who married W. W. Webber, and has two children—Harold Hoffman and Christian Hoffman; and Margaret Adelia.

Paul Hoffman, father of the Doctor, was a farmer of Northampton county and was born in 1803, and died in 1866. He married Catherine Peysher, and they had four sons: Paul J., Christian N., Rev. Philip P. A., and Dr. James.

Michael Hoffman, the grandfather, was also of Northampton county. Mrs. Hoffman's grandfather was Samuel Jones, who married Elizabeth Huey, and was the father of four children, John H., Thomas H., Mary (m. Jacob Van Reed) and Margaret (m. Dr. Darrah). Her maternal grandfather was Jacob W. Seitzinger.

LEVI E. LEFEVER, chief burgess of the borough of Boyertown, who, since 1897, has resided in his comfortable and attractive home at No. 131 Reading avenue, has been long identified with the agricultural and business interests of this section of Berks county. He is a representative of one of the old established families, and was born April 5, 1857, in this borough, son of William and Rachel (Eschbach) Lefever.

Anthony Lefever, great-grandfather of Levi E., was born May 12, 1767, and died May 26, 1833, aged sixty-five years, fourteen days. The family records tell that his wife was accidentally burned to death from sparks from the old-fashioned fireplace. Their children were: Anthony, Levi, Mrs. Charles Keller and Mrs. Jonas Schmehl, all of whom reared families of their own.

Levi Lefever, son of Anthony and grandfather of Levi E., was born June 4, 1796, and died an accidental death, Dec. 27, 1835, three days after his marriage, six months, twenty-three days, and was buried at Brickettown, Berks Co., Pa. His wife Mary, born Aug. 6, 1796, died Sept. 10, 1839. He was a farmer and owned and conducted a business of this kind at Pricetown, where he had his property. He had two sons: William and Levi H.

William Lefever, father of Levi E., was born Oct. 26, 1830, at Pricetown, Pa., and resides at Sassamansville, in Douglass township, Montgomery Co., Pa., a well preserved man. In his early years he worked as a stone mason, later coming to Boyertown, where he conducted a firm with two of his father-in-law, Joseph Eschbach, for a time. He has been interested in partnership with his brother, Levi H. Lefever, and they conducted a general store at Sassamansville for a number of years, after which they sold out, Levi H. coming to Boyertown, where he conducts a general store, but William remained at the old place for continued storekeeping for a time, and then began cigar manufacturing together with farming. He did a large business and continued active in it until 1905, when he retired. He married Rachel Eschbach, and to them were born twelve children, as follows: Minerva m. John Reaminger, of Boyertown; Levi E.; Mary m. Harry Hoffman, of Reading; Irwin, deceased, m. Maria Gerhart, and has five children; John and Louis; Amandus resides at East Greenville, Pa.; Amanda m. Rev. Harrison Moyer, a minister in Carbon county; Kate m. Rev. Amandus Herbst, of York county, Pa.; Dr. Rufus E. is engaged in medical practice in Reading; Emma died young; and three died in infancy. Mr. Lefever has long been a leading citizen of his community, and he has been frequently appointed administrator to settle up estates.

Levi E. Lefever attended the public schools of Boyertown and Mount Pleasant Seminary, and when sixteen years of age learned the tinsmith's trade, serving an apprenticeship of four years. He worked at this trade at Boyertown until 1878, and then embarked in a business of his own as a tinsmith and handler of stoves, etc., which he continued for twenty-eight years. His whole attention, however, was not claimed by this enterprise for he owns a fine farm of ninety-nine acres, situated in Earl township, three and one-half miles northeast of Boyertown, on which he has developed a substantial agricultural establishment which is well stocked and it is a remunerative piece of property. In 1905 he erected the present frame house which replaced a log house that had stood since the days of the Revolutionary War. Mr. Lefever is treasurer of the Electric Light Company, of which he was one of the organizers and which was chartered in July, 1908. Since 1906 he has been president of the Keystone Fire Insurance Company and to all these important business interests he gives due attention.

In 1878, Mr. Lefever was married to Rosa Ann Ritter, daughter of Lewis Ritter, of Colebrookdale township, and to this marriage have been born the following children: Charles resides at Boyertown; Marion resides at Pottstown; Ralph resides at Pricetown; Rufus resides at Boyertown; and William resides at Philadelphia. Mr. Lefever is a member of the Boyertown Ammonia Company, and has been recognized as one of its leading members, and has held all the offices. Since 1901 he has been chaplain of the Masonic Order. Mr. Lefever and family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, at Boyertown.

Mr. Lefever has been active for many years in fraternal organizations, and on various occasions has been elevated to offices of trust and responsibility in the same. He is a member of Salah Castle, No. 78, Knights of the Mystic Chain, in which he has held all the offices. He has been chaplain of Popodickick Tribe, No. 388, Order of Red Men, is district deputy, and has held all the offices in the organization. He is the degree master of the staff, is past grand and also degree master of Boyertown Lodge, No. 764, I. O. O. F., and belongs also to the order of Eagles, at Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

In his political affiliations Mr. Lefever is frankly and unequivocally a Republican, and has frequently served as a delegate to county and State conventions and for twelve years served as inspector of elections and committeeman at Boyertown. For three years he served as a school director and has always taken an interest in public education. When only twenty-three years old, Mr. Lefever was elected a member of the borough council and served through one year, which was the length of term at that time. In 1901 he was again elected to the council and served his term of three years, and in February, 1906, was elected chief burgess for a term of three years. He stands as a representative of the best citizenship of his community.

HARRISON LANDIS, successful manufacturer of lumber and boxes at Philadelphia, was born in Washington Township, Berks county, near Bally, Dec. 23, 1852. He received his preliminary education at the township school, and at Boyertown (in Mr. Pleasant Seminary and Hanley's Academy), and then attended the Mennonite Educational Institution at Wadsworth, Ohio, for two years. Upon his return home he taught public school at Niantic near by for one term, and then assisted in clerking in the country store of his uncle, Jacob Landis, which was situated on the premises adjoining his father's farm. He then took a regular course in the business college of Bryan & Stratton at Philadelphia, and entered the office of the paint works of Ziegler & Smith, where he was engaged as a clerk for five years; and was next in the well-known steam-shipping office of Peter Wright & Sons for three years.

With this preparation for a business life, Mr. Henry H. Shep (his brother-in-law, manufacturer of cigar-boxes since 1876) formed a partnership with him in 1881, and under the firm: name of Henry H. Sheip & Co. they developed a constantly increasing trade until 1899, when they sold out to Henry H. High, who then established "High's Manufacturing Co." Since then, the corporation has been carried on successfully, with Mr. Landis as secretary and treasurer. They started with twenty hands, but now have over 800, notwithstanding the introduction of many costly labor-saving machines. Their annual volume of business exceeds a million and a half of dollars, and their purveyors' relations have been developed to extend throughout the United States and into many foreign countries; and from the manufacture of cigar-boxes they have gradually branched out until their products include small wooden boxes of every variety, veneered boxing lumber, and casing for electric wiring of buildings; they also deal in all kinds of general store goods. It is the only large plant of the kind at Philadelphia, and has been kept running constantly from 1881 until the present time.

In 1876 Mr. Landis was married to Emma Louisa Sheip, daughter of Levinus and Lucy Ann (Hagen) Sheip, of Bucks county, and sister of his partner in business. By her he had three children: Stanley Winfield and George Clarence (both of whom are engaged in the financial department of the works mentioned), and Mabel (m. Howard G. Moyer). His wife dying in 1883, he in 1892 married Mary A. Gyger, only child of John and Sarah (Nightingale) Gyger of Philadelphia, by whom he has two children: Mary Esther and Mildred.

His father was George Oberholtzer Landis, retired farmer of Washington township, Berks county, who was married to Mary Mohr, daughter of Andrew Mohr of Macungie, Lehigh County, by whom he had seven children: Harrison, above mentioned; Emma; Henry m. Emma Stiefer, and is now in Japan, where he has been connected with the Meiji Gakuen, a Presbyterian College; Evan m. (first) Emily Hamer and (second) Mabel Prouty; Sarah m. Clement Bechtle; Irwin m. Sophie Hammell; and Oliver m. Clara Stoudt. The mother died in 1896, aged seventy-six years. The father died Oct. 29, 1906, aged eighty-two years.

His grandfather was Henry H. Landis, born in 1798, died in 1860; m. in 1823 to Susanna Oberholtzer, daughter of Jacob, deceased; Mary, Esther and Amanda.

The Landis family was founded in America by Hans Landis, a native of Holland, who left his native land during the early half of the eighteenth century, locating in Douglass Township, Montgomery County, Pa. He was the owner of a tract of land located near Congo, which he disposed of in 1780 to James Good, for five hundred and seventy-seven and one-half bushels of wheat as part payment on the property. Among the descendants was Henry H. Landis, the grandfather of the subject of the above sketch.

A. M. HIGH, postmaster of Reading, Pa., and the most potential force in the Republican party of that city, is a son of Joel and Marie (Merkel) High, and was born in Richmond township, Berks county, Dec. 19, 1849.

The High family is of German descent, but generations ago settled in Pennsylvania. Solomon High, grandfather of A. M., was born in Richmond township, where he followed the occupation of a farmer. In politics he was a Whig, but during the latter years of his life he belonged to the Republican party. He was a member of the Reformed Church, and was a captain in the old State Militia. He was the father of three children, one son and two daughters. He died in July, 1874, his wife surviving him many years, and dying in 1891.

Joel High, father of A. M. High, was also a native of Richmond township, and after obtaining an education in the public schools of his district, turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He became one of the most substantial farmers in his section, and died in 1872. His wife died in 1866. The latter, whose maiden name was Marie Merkel, bore him eleven children as follows: James; Joel; A. M.; Jacob; Solomon; Daniel; Samuel; Charles; and Wilson. Emma and Mary, all three deceased.

Mr. High was a man of education and wide information, attended the common schools in his youth, and afterward took a course in the Keystone State Normal of Kutztown. He then taught school for two terms, after which he clerked in a general store at Fleetwood, Berks county. After remaining there for one year, in 1868 he returned to Reading, accepting a position of bookkeeper of the store of B. H. Brown, continuing there for one year, and then holding a similar position for a year and a half in a general store. He next embarked in business for himself, establishing a tailor shop and general store at No. 824 Penn street, where he was successfully engaged for nineteen years. He was then associated with John Rieger, in the lumber business, but after a period of six years the latter was succeeded by Mr. High's son, Mr. High and his son conduct a high class tailoring business, having a large patronage. Although giving the closest attention to business Mr. High's eminent qualifications for a political force and influence in his party, brought him to the fore many years ago, and for twenty-three years he has been the recognized leader of the Republican party in Berks county, the Philadelphia Record, of Aug. 30, 1903, in an exhaustive article on his political career, dubbing him the "Regent of Berks." Recognizing his invaluable services to the party, he was made postmaster of Reading, in 1901, and reappointed in 1903 and again in 1907. He has been four times a delegate to the Republican National Convention, having been the first delegate chosen in the United States for the successive conventions of 1888, 1892, 1896 and the third one chosen for 1904. His services at the head of the organization were invaluable to the cause, and by his honest and energetic methods of conducting campaigns he strengthened the hold of the Republican party in Berks county, even gaining friends in opposing factions. A man of magnetic presence and fine character, he has a large following, and is a "tower of strength" politically and socially.

Mr. High married Miss Lizzie Delp, and they have had three children: Harry S.; Howard J., deceased; and Wayne M. The family is one of the best known and most popular in Reading.

WARREN L. DAVIS, son of James and Anna (Greatrake) Davis, was born at Birdasboro, Berks county, Oct. 24, 1868. After receiving a common school education in the local schools, he, while yet a boy, established a messenger service between Birdasboro and Reading, which he carried on successfully for a year and a half. Then he located at Reading and learned printing, but not being satisfied with this he entered the employ of George S. Herbein, dealer in furniture and carpets, and continued with him six years. During this time he qualified himself thoroughly for accounting, and entered the hardware house of Bright & Lerch. Appreciating his efficiency, they in 1893 selected him as their chief clerk and treasurer, which position he held until the death of Mr. Lerch in 1898, when the firm changed to Bright Company. In the new firm he performed the same duties as Mr. Lerch and also remained their treasurer until July, 1901, having been in their employ for thirteen years.

In 1901 he was offered the responsible position of general bookkeeper of the Farmers National Bank, of Reading, the oldest and strongest bank in Reading. He accepted this position and his proficiency was so great that in August, 1903, he was promoted to be cashier, and this position he has held most creditably until the present. Mr. Davis married, Dec. 25, 1895, Laura M. Dillon, daughter of Moses and Louise R. They have two children, Stewart and Anna Louise. They belong to St. Barnabas Protestant Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM K. GRIM was a very prominent and influential citizen at Boyertown, and his death Aug. 14, 1905, was greatly deplored. The Grim family is one of the oldest in the county, and owes its residence here to... the emigration from Germany of Johan Egidius Grim. The home of the family was originally in Normandy, and the lineage is traced back to a Baron there in the time of William the Conqueror. One branch of the family went to Alsace, and to that branch the Berks county Grooms belonged.

(II) Johan Egidius Grim came to America in 1798 with the Rev. John Casper Stoever, and he settled first in Weisenburg township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, but it appears he later came to Maxatawny township, Berks county, and secured a large tract of land. His house was a most substantial one, and to it other settlers fled for refuge in time of Indian disturbances. Two of his sons served on the war of the Revolution, and most of his descendants are members of the Lutheran Church. The will of "Gitti, alias Gideon" Grim was made Jan. 28, 1760, and was probated Oct. 1, 1761, when Jacob and Henry Grim, his sons, were appointed as executors. In this will he gave his land to his sons Jacob and Henry; fifty pounds to his daughter Cattara; fifty pounds to his wife (who married Casper Merker); thirty pounds to Francis Roth "son of my daughter Margret."

(II) Henry Grim, son of Gitti, was born in Maxatawny township in 1733, and died in 1804. He married and had three children: Jacob, Jonathan and Gideon.

(III) Gideon Grim, son of Henry, was born in Maxatawny township, where he became an extensive and successful farmer. His death occurred in 1823, when he was aged sixty-three years. By his wife, Elizabeth Kirby, an Englishwoman, he became the father of five sons and two daughters, namely: David, who died unmarried; Nathan, who married Polly (Tressler); John, and Benjamin, millers at Weisenburg, in Lehigh county; Joshua, a farmer on the homestead; Hannah (m. John Seigfried); and Dinah (m. John Dreher).

(IV) Gideon Grim, son of Gideon and Elizabeth, was born on the old homestead in Maxatawny township Aug. 31, 1792. He lived to the age of eighty years in Exeter township at the home of his father-in-law, Henry Knouse. In 1830 he purchased in Colebrookdale township two farms of about ninety acres each, with a hamlet, and these he operated until his death April 27, 1853. He was buried in the Boyertown cemetery. He hauled the product of his farm and tannery to market in Philadelphia by team, and was well known throughout the county. He was an official member of the Lutheran Church. He married Esther Knouse, and had two children: William K.; and Levi, who died at the age of eighteen.

(V) William K. Grim was a son of Gideon and Esther, and was born in Exeter township May 28, 1825. He early learned the tanner's trade from his father, and often used to accompany the latter on his trips to Philadelphia, and at the age of sixteen William K. began making these trips alone. He operated the tan yard until 1874, when that enterprise was abandoned on account of the scarcity of tan bark. A flour and gist mill was then built on the property, and this is still in operation. Two years before this Mr. Grim had moved to Boyertown, and in the business life of that town he at once entered, taking an active part therein until his death. He built the largest tannery block, was instrumental in organizing the National Bank of Boyertown, of which he was a director for some years, and later he was one of the organizers of the Farmers National Bank, in which he was a director and later vice president. He was a heavy stockholder in the Colebrookdale Iron Company, established and incorporated in 1886, and located at Pottstown, and after he became its president its scope was largely increased, their goods being shipped to all parts of the world. In politics Mr. Grim was a Democrat, and for thirteen years was burgess of Boyertown, and during the administration of President Cleveland was a member of the Democratic party, and in that faith died Aug. 14, 1905.

On June 11, 1853, William K. Grim married Loretta B. Rhoads, daughter of John and Catharine Rhoads. She was born Aug. 21, 1823, and died Aug. 4, 1906. Her maternal grandparents were Henry and Sarah Boyer. Henry Boyer and his brother Daniel were the first settlers of Boyertown, and from them the town derived its name. To William K. and Loretta B. Grim were born four children: Mahella, Sarah (m. Frank W. Sabold, manager of the New York Telephone Company, at Yonkers, N. Y., who in 1903 became associated, in an official capacity, with the Hudson River Telephone Company, N. Y., at which place he died April 16, 1904), William R., and Kate.

(VI) William R. Grim, son of William K. and Loretta B. Grim, was born April 24, 1880, and was given the benefit of a good education. After studying in the public schools, he went to Muhlenberg College and then to the Medical College, graduating from the latter in 1828. He read law at Salina, Kansas, and was there admitted to the Bar. He later went to Texas, and located at Texarkana, where he became cashier of the Texarkana National Bank, and in 1903 was elected its president. This bank is a strong financial institution, and is a power in its locality. Mr. Grim is also interested in railroads. He married Sarah Hauberger, of Philadelphia, and they have two children, Emeline and Loretta.

MARTIN S. CROLL, President of the National Bank at Exeter, Berks Co., Pa., and son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Croll, who settled in Exeter township, 1837, was born Aug. 19, 1844, in Maxatawny township, Berks Co., Pa., son of John and Catherine (DeLong) Croll. The family is of German extraction and its founder in Pennsylvania was Philip Croll, who settled in Montgomery county. His four children bore the names of: Christian, Henry, Michael and Polly.

Henry Croll, son of Philip, and great-grandfather of Martin S., married a member of the Gilbert family, and they became proprietors of a tanning and leather business, which became known as the Joseph Gilbert Company. Martin S. Croll attended the local schools and the Quakertown Academy, following which he taught school for two seasons, but on April 1, 1869, turned his attention to a business career, becoming a clerk for Joseph Miller, a merchant at Foglesville. Some months later he accepted a similar position at Rothrocksville, and remained there three years. On March 13, 1867, he entered into partnership with his brother, Edw. Smith, and they leased a store and hotel at Monterey, where they conducted a successful business for five years. The business was then removed to Rothrocksville, where they continued until 1889.

In the meantime, Mr. Croll had become interested in additional enterprises. In 1884, the firm became associated with Silas Croll, in a coal and lumber business at Farmington. One year later, Silas Croll withdrew, but the enterprise was continued by the other partners until 1893. In 1893 a farm was purchased at Tipton, on which Mr. Croll erected a fine residence. The firm of Croll & Smith, which included Mr. Croll, Mr. Smith, Mr. Hartley, and Mr. DeLong, was dissolved. The following capitalists make up the board of directors: M. S. Croll, Mr. Hartley, George Schwartz, Rev. J. H. Raker, Edward DeLong, B. Frank Baer, A. F. Smith, Samuel Heacock, Irwin Geary, Dr. J. H. Worley and W. H. Clymer. The bank has met with success from the beginning. It is capitalized at $85,000 and has large fortunes and reliable men behind it. It probably has the most modern bank building of any in this section of the State, its equipment including burglar proof vaults.

On June 10, 1865, Martin S. Croll married Elizabeth A. Grim, daughter of Jonas Grim, a well-known farmer of North Wetzel County, who, directly or indirectly, have left many of the Croll's neighbors. Charles Alfred, both of whom have proved themselves good business men and enterprising citizens. In his political affiliation, Mr. Croll has always been a Democrat and, at various times, has served in most of the local offices, has been township auditor and deputy collector of internal revenue. For three years he served effectively as a member of the borough council of Tipton and has also been town treasurer. Many and increasing business cares have prevented his acceptance of numerous honorable offices and positions of trust at the head of various organizations to which his admiring fellow citizens would have elevated him. He has always taken a lively interest in charitable and philanthropic enterprises, and it was largely due to his earnest efforts that the Lutheran Orphan Home was located at Tipton, in 1896. For many years he has been an active worker in the Lutheran Church, in which he has been both elder and deacon. He is a man who, in every respect, is entitled to the good will, respect and thorough esteem of his fellow citizens.

REV. WARREN F. TEEL, P.H. M., principal of the Schuykill Seminary, Reading, has acquired a high reputation by his efficient services at the head of that institution. In the various capacities and positions of trust at his institution, he has always handled its affairs with commendation from all quarters. Within a half the attendance had increased to sixty, and the year after he became the head of the Seminary it was deemed advisable to seek new accommodations, to meet the demands of increased patronage and steady development. In the spring of 1902 Mr. Teel and Prof. Bowman came to Reading, and with two others made a visit to Selwyn Hall, to ascertain its desirability as a new location for the Seminary. A favorable report was made, and consequently a meeting of ministers of the East Pennsylvania Conference was called on the same day, and a committee was appointed, with Mr. Teel as chairman, for action upon the removal of the Seminary to Reading. It was decided to acquire the property for the permanent quarters of the school, and the purchase was made in July, 1902. Work was at once begun, repairing and remodeling, and Mr. Teel succeeded in securing $10,000 from the business men of Reading to encourage the work. The Seminary was opened in Reading Sept. 15, 1902, and has been in a prosperous condition ever since. During 1906-07 the students numbered 120, the class of 1907 consisting of twenty graduates. The equipment and accommodations have been added to until they compare favorably with those of any similar institution in the State. The location, at the corner of Thirteenth and Exeter streets, in the northeastern part of Reading, is particularly beautiful, the grounds lying on the western slope of Mount Penn, commanding a fine view of the city and surrounding landscape. In the original building, formerly known as Selwyn Hall, a spacious library, and a large, fine auditorium, surrounded by sately trees, are the office, library, class-rooms, dining-hall and dormitory for ladies. The other two buildings are an imposing chapel, with dormitories for the men, and a fine modern gymnasium, which was enlarged in 1907, an additional story having been erected. The dormitories are spacious and comfortably furnished, are ventilated and lighted with electricity, and heated with steam, and all the buildings have been made attractive for the enjoyment of the students.
within and without, repairs and additions being attended to promptly under the efficient system which now prevails. An endowment of $50,000, gathered during the years 1906 and 1907, has been convincing proof of the confidence placed in Mr. Teel by the friends of the Seminary, and has enabled him to carry out some of his most cherished plans for the continued welfare of the school. Its affairs at present are established upon a liberal and substantial basis.

The special advantages afforded by the Schuylkill Seminary as a college preparatory school are worthy of note. The courses in Latin and Greek, as well as in other branches, fit students for not only the freshman but also the entry of the best Colleges in the country. The courses in history and literature are comprehensive and thorough, the laboratory is well equipped, and all the work done is of the most practical character, either as a preparation for higher studies or as an accession to general knowledge. The faculty is composed of eleven instructors, men and women of character and purpose, who are not only fitted to teach the branches of study which the special student but also to direct the work and ambitions of their pupils into the most useful channels. The vice-president, Rev. Edwin D. McHose, Ph. M., is instructor in science and the higher mathematics, he makes a specialty and has published articles on this subject. Rev. Charles B. Bowman A. M. B. D. previously mentioned, has been associated with Mr. Teel from the beginning of his labors in the Seminary; he is a graduate of Drew Seminary and is serving as principal of the theological department and professor of Greek and theology. The department of English is in charge of Ida L. Hatz, Ph. M., and the department of music is presided over by Amy M. Young, a graduate of the Philadelphia Academy of Music.

Mr. Teel was ordained a regular minister of the Evangelical Church in 1862, and he is as successful in religious work as he is in educational circles. He has frequent pulpit calls, from his own and other denominations, and is in constant demand as a speaker at Y. M. C. A. gatherings. His constant association and contact with young people gives him steady inspiration for such work, in which he is particularly strong, and in which his personal character has proved to be a factor of immense value. His influence is counted upon as much as the actual work which he accomplishes. He has traveled extensively in this country, having visited thirty States of the Union, and thus has widened his knowledge of the conditions affecting his work, acquiring material for new thought as well as broadening his associations of laborers. During the seven years of his connection with the Schuylkill Seminary he has won notable honors in every department of his work, as an able manager, an efficient instructor and a devoted Christian laborer. His practical ideas have won the confidence and support of the best element in the community, while his earnest labors to bring the Seminary up to the highest standards as an educational and Christian institution have met with the universal approval of patrons and the denomination under whose auspices it is conducted. Mr. Teel is an active force in the Evangelical Association, and he has been elected delegate to the General Conference this year (1907).

On Aug. 15, 1906, Rev. Mr. Teel was married to Miss Bessie J. Dubs, of Rebersburg, Pa., a former instructor of music in the Schuylkill Seminary, located at Fredericksburg, Pa. Mrs. Teel was born at Freeport, Ill., daughter of Charles and Helen (Mallory) Dubs.
JOSEPH P. O'REILLY, contractor at Reading for upward of twenty-five years, was born at that place Aug. 27, 1852. He received his education in the city schools at Villanova College, in Delaware county, Pa., and upon quitting school learned the trade of stone-cutter under Christian Eben, who had been engaged in the business for many years at Reading. He continued with Mr. Eben for four years, and then engaged in the business for himself for about a year, when he started contracting in the construction of public works of various kinds. This was in 1852, and since then he has been prominently and successfully engaged in taking city and county contracts for roads, culverts, sewers and bridges. Among the large iron bridges spanning the Schuylkill river which are of his construction may be mentioned the "Exeter Bridge," the "Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge," the "Western Avenue Bridge," the "Schuylkill Avenue Bridge," the "Cross Keys Bridge" (above Tuckerton), and the "Berne Bridge" (above Shoemakersville).

Mr. O'Reilly married Clara A. Tea (daughter of Samuel H. Tea and Emily E. Hyneman, his wife), and they have three children: James, Gerald and Claire.

Mr. O'Reilly's father was Owen O'Reilly, also a large contractor in the construction of public works at Reading for thirty years. In 1856 he put up the "Askey Bridge" for the Lebanon Valley Railroad (crossing Sixth at Woodward), which was then regarded as a remarkable piece of engineering. The bridge was highly admired by engineers and contractors. He was born in 1815 at Patrickstown, County Meath, Ireland, and emigrated to America in 1838, locating at Reading. He died in 1902. He married Elizabeth B. Felix, daughter of Anthony Felix, of Reading, and they had nine children: Agnes C., a sister of charity for forty years, now at Emmitsburg, Md.; Sallie B., a sister of charity for thirty years, now at Washington, D. C.; Eugene P., m. to Helena Rauen; Simon P., m. to Sallie C. Reber; Mary B., who died in 1902, aged forty-one years; Joseph P., above; and three—James, Ann and William—who died in infancy.

Owen's grandfather was James O'Reilly, of County Meath, Ireland, born in 1771, died in 1851. He m. Bridget Conathy, of the same county, born in 1772, died in 1848. He had fourteen sons, among them Owen. And his great-grandfather, also named James, had seven sons, among them the said James. His mother's father was Anthony Felix, born in 1781, died in 1863; m. to Catherine Martin, born in 1783, died in 1861. Her grandfather was Nicholas Felix, born in 1751, died in 1813. He was enlisted in the Revolution, with the company of Capt. Charles Gobin, in Hiester's Battalion, which was engaged in the battle of Camden on Aug. 16, 1780. He emigrated from Germany in 1744.

Mr. O'Reilly's wife's father, Samuel Hains Tea, was a lineal descendant of Richard Tea, a surveyor of Hereford township before the Revolution, and an ironmaster during the Revolution. In 1776 he was elected to officiate as one of the Supreme Executive Councilors of the State, but he declined to serve, doubtless because he was identified with the Friends, who opposed the war.

OSCAR B. HERBEIN, M. D., physician at Strausstown, has taken his father's place in that community, where the name has been identified with the practice of medicine for thirty years. In the year 1855, at which time he was twenty years old, his father, William Herbein, erected a small distillery about eighty years ago. Later the property passed into the hands of Reuben Herbein, who built the mill and distillery which he operated successfully for some years. The Herbeins were among the first families associated with the Eplers in the organization of what has since been known as the Epler Church (Lutheran and Reformed) in Bern township, one William Herbein being a member of the building committee.

John Herbein, grandfather of Dr. Oscar B. Herbein, lived in Bern township, where he followed farming, owning land there. He is buried at Epler Church. He was twice married, first to Mary Shearer, by whom he had four sons, Gideon, Jonathan, Isaac S. and David (twins), all now deceased. By his second wife he had three sons, William, Adam (now living at East Greenville, Pa.) and Daniel, of Allentown.

Isaac S. Herbein, M. D., father of Dr. Oscar B. Herbein, was twice married, first to Catharine O'Reilly, (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. O'Reilly), to whom he had three sons, Gideon, Jonathan, and William (twins), all now deceased. By his second wife he had one son, William, born in 1865, at which time he was in the grocery business at Philadelphia with George A. Leinbach for two years, meantime continuing his professional studies at the Jefferson Medical College. He graduated from that institution in 1865, and in 1866 practiced in practice at Strausstown, where he remained to the close of his life. He built up a large practice, and was actively engaged in the duties of his profession until he died, Nov. 11, 1905, at the age of seventy years.

Dr. Herbein is buried at the Zion's (Blue Mountain) Church. He was of a quick, active mind and progressive ideas, and took considerable interest in the life of the community in which he was an important figure for so many years. He served eight years as justice of the peace, and for twelve years was a school director. In political faith he was a Democrat.

Dr. Herbein married Catharine G. Batteiger, born Jan. 12, 1834, daughter of Jacob and Charlotte (Goodman) Batteiger, of Upper Tulpehocken township. Mrs. Herbein now makes her home with her son. She had two children: Deborah, who married George J. Kurr and died May 8, 1890; and Oscar B. in local fraternal societies, belonging to Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M.; to Lodge No. 77, I. O. O. F., at Strausstown, of which he has been secretary for six years; to Camp No. 664, P. O. S. of A., which he organized in 1893 and of which he is a past president; and to Charlotte Lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, No. 187, in Reading, and to one of the Blue Mountain Electrical Company, of which he is now serving as vice-president. He is a Democrat in politics, and an active worker in the local ranks of the party. In religious matters he is identified with the Reformed members of the Zion's (Blue Mountain) Church.

LEV1 B. PAXSON, one of the most widely known mechanical engineers and long in the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, was born in Berks County, Pa., March 22, 1827, of mixed German and German descent. His father's ancestors were English Quakers, while his mother was of German origin. He was married in 1861 to Mary A. F. Kraft, of Reading, Pa., and there were six children born to them, four of whom, three daughters and one son, lived to reach adult age.

Mr. Paxson entered the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company as a brakeman on a coal train in October, 1847. In February, 1848, he was promoted to be engineer on a coal train engine, and after about two years was given an engine to run, and continued to serve as a locomotive engineer until the summer of 1852, when he arranged with the Company to go into the Reading Machine Shops as an apprentice to the machinist's trade for a term of four years. A short time before the expiration of this term he was taken from the shops and given the position of wreck master, and later was assigned the additional duty of foreman of the Reading Round House. In February, 1864, he was appointed master machinist at Port Richmond, Philadelphia, and in December, 1866, he was made superintendent of the Mahanoy and Broad Mountain Shops with offices at Mahanoy Plane. In February, 1871, he was transferred to Reading, with title of master machinist in charge of the shops of the system. In January, 1875, he was appointed engineer of machinery, and retained the position until February 29, 1886, at which date he left the services of the Company for a time. On July 1, 1888, he was appointed acting superintendent of motive power and rolling stock equipment, and the following year was given the full title, and he retained that position until August 1, 1899, when he assumed the position of consulting mechanical engineer, a place specially created for him.

B. MORRIS STRAUSS. Strauss is the name of one of the old and honored families in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, whose members in their different generations have been prominent in the public life of their local communities, and several of wider fame throughout the State and nation. Thrift seems to have followed the history of the family since its first coming to America from the Fatherland, back in the eighteenth century, and many of its members have held positions of influence in the financial world. This review has chiefly to do with the gentleman whose name is mentioned above, but it is entirely proper to mention first some of the more salient points in the family history.

On Sept. 26, 1732, there landed in the city of Philadelphia from Wurttemberg, Germany, two brothers; the name of Strauss, Albrecht and John Philip. They were mere boys, the elder, (1) Albrecht, swearing in his oath of allegiance, then necessary to take on landing, that he was but twenty; while (2) John Philip left a record in his family Bible that he was born on Sept. 13, 1713. They soon approached Berks County, Pa., where in the vicinity of what is now Bernville they each took up large tracts of land, a part of the original acres still being held by members of the present generation. They were both Lutherans, so that their later marriages, the births of their children, and indeed the whole Strauss family history, became a part of the records of that church.

Albrecht Strauss, the elder of the brothers, was the great-great-grandfather of B. Morris Strauss. He took up a tract of 350 acres, upon which he settled and reared a large family, eleven children in all, their mother, whom he married in 1734, being Anna Margaret Zerbe, who came of the family of Jacob Zerbe, from Schuylkill, New York, in 1723. The children of this marriage were, (1) Maria Barbara, born Nov. 16, 1735, m. June 2, 1744, John Kloss (now Klohs), born in Breckhebel, Hanau, Germany, Dec. 6, 1723, son of Thomas and Margaret Kloss, with whom he came to America in 1738. They resided a little north of Reading and were the parents of ten children, six of which he survived and are as follows: Maria Elizabeth, viz. to Abraham Schneider; Maria Barbara, m. to John Adam Spengler; Maria Christina, m. to Conrad Scheep (Shepp); Maria Magdalena, m. to Philip Huyett; Maria Catharine, m. to William Diehm; and Jacob—all leaving numerous descendants. (2) John Jacob Strauss, born May 5, 1737, m. Elizabeth Brecht, Aug. 21, 1759. They lived on a part of the homestead acres north of Bernville and became the parents of nine children, viz.: Albrecht, who remained on the homestead; John, who settled near Orwigsburg, Schuylkill county; David; Elizabeth; Philip; Jacob; Samuel; Michael; and Catharine. This branch also became numerous and left many descendants.

B. Morris Strauss was born in 1888, son of John and Catharine Zerbe, the latter of whom was the great-great-granddaughter of B. Morris Strauss. He attended the public schools of Bernville and later entered the University of Pennsylvania, where he obtained his degree in 1912. He was afterwards employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, where he held various positions, including that of superintendent of motive power and rolling stock equipment. He was also elected a director of the Company in 1923. He has been active in a number of fraternal organizations, including the American Legion and the Elks Lodge.
Northumberland (now Union) county, Pa. They had a family of eleven children: John George, John, Maria Catharine, Jacob, Maria Christina, Henry, Samuel, James, Elizabeth, Ann Mari, and Samuel. (4) Casper, born Jan. 27, 1751, married Elizabeth Schreck. They left issue, viz.: John (Dec. 2, 1780-April 7, 1876), Ludwig, Benjamin, Matilda, Susanna, and Anna Maria. (5) Maria Catharine was born Dec. 22, 1752. (6) John Philip, born Nov. 9, 1754, m. Susanna Maria, Sept. 23, 1785, and maintained the homestead and died there July 20. 1816. Their children so far as known were: John, Susanna, Joseph, Philip (Feb. 1, 1790-May 13, 1829), Daniel, Elizabeth, Syria, Maria Magaret, and Mary Magalena. (7) John Jacob, born May 5, 1757, m. Barbara Zerbe, June 14, 1785. He died Oct. 22, 1822, his wife probably preceding him in death. They had the following children so far as known: Catharine, Barbara, Daniel, Magalena, Peter, Sarah, Adam and Susanna. (8) Christian, born June 16, 1756, m. Aug. 4, 1794, Eliza, daughter of Joseph Schneider. They had as far as known two children, Elizabeth and Catharine. (9) John Matthias, born April 16, 1796, m. (first) Magdalena Schneider, on May 25, 1790. After the death of his wife he m. (second), Sept. 10, 1797, Frederica Gottel. He died March 4, 1819, and his wife survived him. (II) John Samuel Strauss, youngest child of Albrecht and great-grandfather of B. Morris, was born May 13, 1761. On Nov. 10, 1784, he married Catharine Oxenbauer, (Nov. 10, 1758), daughter of Balthaser and Maria Appalonia Ummelhauer, the owner of a large tract of land including the site of Bernville, Pa. He became the owner of the homestead by purchase on Aug. 5, 1784, whence they resided all their life. He, as also did his cousin, John Philip, son of Philip, served actively in the Revolutionary struggle, and was an influential and useful citizen of his locality. He died March 25, 1835, his wife having preceded him, Dec. 16, 1831. They had a family of thirteen children, viz.: John, the founder of Straustown; Maria Magdalena, m. to Tobias Henne; John Philip (Sept. 29, 1786-Feb. 12, 1850, m. Catharine Oxenbauer); John, m. Catherine (Nov. 23, 1788-Nov. 9, 1877); Elizabeth Strauss (Feb. 19, 1790-Aug. 19, 1875), m. to Elias Redey; Susanna; Joseph; John William (Oct. 26, 1795-May 13, 1885); Catharine; Benjamin (April 30, 1800-Dec. 14, 1886); and Jonathan. This family was noted for their longevity. (III) Benjamin Strauss, son of John Samuel, was born on the old homestead April 30, 1800, and at its division by John Samuel, his father, before his death, he was allotted a share thereof. He married on Dec. 12, 1829, Rebecca, daughter of Jacob and Juliana (Shelhammer) Long, born April 30, 1811. In his youth he lived in Virginia for some time. He then returned to his native place and followed the calling of a tailor. He afterward purchased a large farm (the dwelling-house on which place, a large, commodious and substantial one and one-half story log building, was known in Colonial times as “Casper Snaveyl’s Indian Fort,” where a posse of soldiers were regularly stationed to protect the settlers during that perilous period) adjoining now Meckville, Bethel township, Pa., on which he resided the rest of his lifetime. His wife died Dec. 3, 1861. They had two sons, Percival Long and Joel. (IV) Percival Long Strauss was the eldest son of Benjamin, and is now living retired in Reading after an active life in the mercantile business and lumber business. He married Malinda, who died on April 16, 1896, the daughter of Jacob and Mary Ann (Batdorf) Smith, farmers of Bethel township. They were both descendants of the earliest settlers, his ancestors Smith, Eisenhauer, Fetterhoff and Heberling having been prominent at and during the making of the city and township of Reading. He obeyed the call of the Schoenbruck brothers, fried large marl to the Erie Company, located near York, in 1732, and was of the leaders in the making of the first settlement at Tulpehocken. To Percival L. and Malinda (Smith) Strauss were born twelve children: Harry, who died aged ten years; Sophia, who died at thirty-five; John; Lebanon coppersmith and builder; and contractor; Mary Ann and Emma Rebecca, at home; James, City, Mo.; James, a hotel-keeper, Reading; Lavinia, wife of Dr. Frank W. Bucks, Reading; William, a merchant at Rehrersburg; Berks county; Elizabeth, wife of George Schreib, at the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia; Percival S., also wife of William Chester State Normal School and the University of Pennsylvania, and now a teacher in the Philadelphia high school; and B. Morris. These children are all occupying responsible positions in life and are all living up to the record made by former generations.

Morris Strauss was born on the family homestead in Bethel township, Sept. 20, 1855. He passed the early part of his boyhood on the home farm, securing the rudiments of his education in the common schools. Later he attended the Swatara Institute at Jonestown, and afterward the Millersville State Normal School. He finished his literary education at Palatinate College, Myerstown; and attended school at Reading. While he was on the point of being decided on the law as a profession, he now took up its study with John Benson as his preceptor and on May 26, 1880, was admitted to the Lebanon County Bar. His admission to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania followed in 1885, and to the Supreme Court of the United States, Oct. 1, 1897. He became a member of the Lebanon County Bar in 1898. He is also admitted to practice in the Superior Court of the State. Mr. Strauss lived and practised his profession with success at Lebanon, where he was prominent in local affairs, having served a term as clerk of the water board of that city, and then located at Reading, where he has since maintained offices at No. 20 North Sixth street.

Mr. Strauss has been a lifelong Democrat, and takes an active interest in the political life of the city, county and State. He is a member of the Hope Lutheran Church, and is interested in several societies which have for their object the preservation of family, county and national history. He is thus a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Berks County Historical and the Pennsylvania German Society. In April, 1903, he with several others started a movement among the descendants of the two original emigrants, Albrecht and John Philip, to invite all the members of the family in a yearly reunion. All the meetings have proved a source of great pleasure to all and are always largely attended, the latest one having been held at Strauss-town, founded by John Strauss, a grand-uncle of our subject. From the number of the members that attended it is safe to say that the descendants of these two early emigrants number from 8,000 to 10,000, most numerously found in Berks and Schuylkill counties, yet settled in almost every State of the Union.

Mr. Strauss married (second) Miss Hannah S., daughter of Elwood S. and Sarah R. Layton, and they are the parents of one daughter, Anna Margaret.

ISAAC G. TRENT, one of the well-known citizens of Reading, Pa., who is filling the responsible position of superintendent of the Reading Hardware Company, was born in Lebanon county, Pa., Sept. 22, 1841, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Ludwig) Trent.

Christian Treat, grandfather of Isaac G., was a well-known man of Berks county. Pa. He was of English descent, his father coming from England at an early date. He married Catharine Glass (or Glase), and they had children. Followed John, who lived and died at Milton, Pa., m. Rebecca Slough; Christian, who lived and died in Robeson township, m. Jesta Slough, a sister of Rebecca; Betsy m. John Homan; Polly m. John Moore; Catharine m. Fred Foreman, the grandfather of Harry Foreman, who was burned in the Boyertown fire in 1908 with his wife, two daughters and his sister, Sophia Foreman; Susan m. John, and a son of the above name; a daughter of John, Mary, Catharine, David, Hannah, Henry, Isaac, Elhanan, Susan, Isaiah and Samuel; Henry was father of Isaac G.; Isaac died at Selingsgrove; Abraham m. Lovina Trostle, and died in Reading; Joseph died in Philadelphia; Peter died in Reading; Christian Treat, the author of the above, died at York, Pa., and his wife married (second) Philip Hartz. She died in Reading.
Henry Treat was born in Robeson township, Berks county, and received his education in the public schools. Early in life he was employed about the iron furnaces and learned the iron-making business, which he followed for the balance of his life, dying in 1851. He is interred in the old Lutheran cemetery at the corner of Sixth and Washington streets. Henry Treat married in 1833, Elizabeth Ludwig, daughter of Henry Ludwig, and took as his last name one of the Quaker member of his early years; he mentioned when he settled at Williamsport; 26, Feb., 1793, he and Lydia was the second child of this marriage. His deceased son, William, was the youngest of his five children, the last to die, and his last child was born Jan. 14, 1833, m. Aug. 31, 1815, in Chester county, Miss Sarah Harry. He went west to Indiana, and there died Dec. 14, 1842. His wife died Jan. 23, 1837, leaving four sons, Jesse, Samuel, M. B., and Joshua, and one daughter, Sarah. (8) Isaac, born April 23, 1789, was known as the strongest man of Eastern Pennsylvania. He left no family. (9) Joshua born Aug. 17, 1791, became a well known teacher in Reading, and died Feb. 22, 1849. His wife was born Feb. 17, 1798, and died Feb. 6, 1854, leaving an only daughter, Sarah. (10) Elizabeth, born Dec. 8, 1793, left no descendants.

Benjamin Davies was born March 17, 1781, and on Jan. 27, 1805, was married to Miss Mary Williams. Eight children were born to them, all deceased except the young-est. (1) Abner, born Nov. 6, 1806, m. and died, leaving three children, William, Lenora and Myers. (2) Lydia died in childhood. (3) Elizabeth, (4) Samuel, and (5) Anne died in early life. (6) Mary W., born Sept. 10, 1816, m. Charles Dehart, and had children, William, Elizabeth, David, Mary, Edward, Charles and Emma. (7) Lydia W. was a teacher of Berks county, and died unmarried, leaving four children, Howard, Anna, Mary and Jessica. The mother of this family died, and on Feb. 16, 1828, Mr. Davies m. (second) Miss Mary Martin. By this union there were four children: Samuel is mentioned below; Elizabeth, born Sept. 26, 1840, m. Herman Dersch, and had children, of whom five are living—John, Gertrude, George, Rebecca and Helen; Rebecca, born Aug. 31, 1843, m. William Hutchinson, and had nine children, of whom William, Ruth, Elizabeth and Rebecca are living (Mr. Hutchinson enlisted Aug. 10, 1861, in Company H, 88th Pa. V. I., was wounded in the right thigh during the second engagement at Bull Run, 10, 1861, and was discharged before Petersburg, and held in Libby Prison until mustered out March 30, 1865); Joseph, born July 2, 1846, became a machinist by trade and m. Miss Margaret Hale, and of their ten children there are living. Mary, Anna, Katherine, Rebecca and Martha Nora.

Benjamin Davies, father of this large family, became a prominent citizen in Reading. Beginning in the shoe business, he was for some time established on Penn street between Fourth and Fifth. When the Farmers National Bank was opened, Mr. Davies opened the books and was made its first bookkeeper, and later he served for a time as cashier. In 1850, he purchased a large building, in which he has continued his business for a period of forty years. This fact alone bespeaks his place in the business world of Reading, while his personality made him very popular socially. In religion he was a strict observer of the customs of the Friends. He died in 1854, in his seventy-fourth year, while his wife survived him until 1884, when she died aged eighty-eight, the greatest age attained by any member of the Davies family.

Samuel Davies was born in Reading, May 4, 1839, and until he was fifteen years old he attended the public schools. He then entered the Philadelphia & Reading railroad shops, in order to learn to be a machinist, and he remained there four years. He next spent about a year and half in the lathe department of the Scott foundry, and afterward was employed at various places, including Lebanon, Pittsburg and Wheeling. Returning to Reading, he was engaged at the Johnson foundry and machine shop of James Johnson, and in the latter part of the war broke with the war broke with the company. He enlisted in the State service in April, 1861, and on June 6, 1861, he was mustered into the United States service under Capt. William Briner, Company D, 3d Pa. R. V. C. He served all through the war in the Army of the Potomac, was in a number of hard fought battles, like the Seven Days Fight around Richmond, the Wilderness, Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam and Frederick'sburg, and was brevetted first Lieut., and at Philadelphia in the fall of 1864. The government gave him employment in Nashville, and Mr. Davies spent some time in that city, before going back to Reading. There he again worked as a machinist, for the railroad until 1881, but in that year he went into business for himself.

The concern of which Mr. Davies is now sole proprietor has passed through various phases of existence. Originally, in 1881, the firm name was Miller, Price & Co., and the concern dealt in iron and machine business. Six years later it became Miller, Printze & Co., and then Davies, Printze & Co., and finally in 1904 Mr. Davies took entire control of the plant. It is now known as the Industrial Foundry and Machine Works, and is located at Nos. 259-251 South Ninth street. There are about two hundred and fifty men employed in the trade, though largely a local one, is of good volume.

On Dec. 13, 1866, Mr. Davies married Miss Margaret Birch, daughter of the late Dr. Solomon Birch. Five children were born to them, as follows: Mary Elizabeth, who died at the age of two years; Harry and William are both mechanics employed with their father; Beulah, who was graduated from the Reading high school in the class of 1895, taught in that city a few years and then married Joseph H. Skilton, a resident of Philadelphia; and Margaret, of the class of 1900 in the Reading high school, is now teaching at the Pear and Buttonwood school. Mr. Davies served during the war as a captain of D. H. V. M. and then served in the express service, and is now a member of G. A. R. Post No. 16, of which he is past commander. He also belongs to the Union Veteran Legion, and holds the official rank of past colonel. In politics he is a Republican.

DR. ABRAHAM NESTER FRETZ, who for over thirty-four years has been engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery at Fleetwood, Berks county, was born Aug. 7, 1839, in Hereford township, son of Daniel Fretz.

Daniel Fretz was born in Hereford township in 1805, was reared to agricultural pursuits and followed farming in the vicinity of his birth until his death, in 1839. He married Mary Seibert, daughter of John Seibert, of near Hill Church, and to this union were born six children: Abrah- nam N.; Lewis, m. to Lavana Rambo; Annie, who died young; Irwin, m. to Mary March; and Priscilla and Annie, who both died young.

Dr. Abraham N. Fretz's early education was secured in the public schools, and after a thorough preparation at Mt. Pleasant Seminary at Boyertown, he entered the University of Pennsylvania and graduated from the Medical Department in 1863. The country then being in the midst of the Civil war, he enlisted at Washington, D. C., and, receiving the appointment of acting assistant surgeon, was mustered into the foreign hospital service at Newport News and vicinity until 1866. Then, under the Reconstruction Act, Gen. J. H. Schofield appointed him president of the board of registration, with headquarters at City Point, Va., and he filled this responsible position in the most satisfactory manner until the fall of 1869.

While at the latter place Dr. Fretz identified himself with the affairs of Prince George county, and the electors of that district elected him as one of the Assembliesmen. There being two parties in that State, viz., the Radical Republicans and the Liberal Republicans, he was chosen on the ticket of the latter, and served in this honorable position from 1869, 1870, and 1871, and was extremely popular for many years. In 1866 he returned to Pennsylvania and took an additional course of medical lectures in the University for a year, after which he established himself in medical practice at Linfield, Montgomery county, and was successfully engaged at that place until his retirement in 1875, to Fleetwood, Berks county, where he has been in active practice ever since.

Dr. Fretz, upon locating at Fleetwood, took an active interest in educational affairs and quite naturally his fellow-citizens selected him to be a school director, and he served as such from 1877 to 1884. In 1887 he was elected as one of the justices of the peace of his borough, and he has been re-elected in this position by re-election, and has, in the present time, showing the high appreciation of the community in his judicial integrity. In politics he has been a Democrat, and upon settling in the county he identified himself with its political affairs, as well as with those of the State and nation. He frequently represented the borough in conventions, and in the county conventions 1893 and 1902 he officiated as chairman.

Dr. Fretz was married in 1863 to Emma Roberston, of Philadelphia, daughter of Thomas Robertson, and to this union, one son, Thomas, has been born.

Dr. Fretz was born 1866 at Philadelphia, attended the schools of Fleetwood, and after a preparatory course at the Keystone State Normal School, he attended Lafayette College, from which he was graduated in 1890. He continued the higher branches of study at Princeton University, from which he was graduated in 1892. In 1900 he was elected president of the grammar schools at Newark, N. J., and he filled that office until the present time, holding the position in the most satisfactory manner until 1907, when he was appointed to a similar position in New York City, which he still holds. He was married to Mary Madeira, daughter of John H. Madeira, of Blantond, and one daughter, Emily, was born to this union. Mrs. Fretz died in 1893.

NEVIN M. DAVIS, a civil engineer ranking deservedly high in his profession, came of a family long established in York county, and his death, April 12, 1909, was deeply deplored. Davis was a son of the Rev. William F. P. and Ellen E. (Myers) Davis.

The Rev. William F. P. Davis was a minister of the Reformed Church. He lived to the age of only fifty-two years, passing away in 1883. At the time of his death he had a charge in Berks county that embraced Wernersville (Hanover Church), Sinking Spring's, Kissinger's and Yoocum's Churches. He married Ellen E., daughter of Benjamin Myers, a retired business man of York and founder of the Farmers Insurance Company, of that place. The children born to this marriage were as follows: William S., a graduate of Lehigh University, and now general manager of the Lebanon Textile Works; Louisa Bell, now Mrs. Charles H., Wilson, of Reading; Myra, now Mrs. Henry B. Welsh, of Reading; and Mary, now Mrs. David J., Steiner, of a Lehigh University man, assistant city engineer of Reading from 1903 to 1909; John Henry, a clerk in the Second National Bank; Martha, at home; and Nevin M.

Nevin M. Davis was born Aug. 28, 1864, in New Oxford, Adams county, where his father had his first charge. After leaving school he entered Franklin and Marshall College, and was graduated in 1885. The first position he secured was with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Co., as civil engineer, and he was with the company for seven years. During this time he was assistant engineer in the construction of the Allentown Terminal and the Philadelphia, Harrisburg & Pittsburg Terminal Railways. Another work with which he was concerned was the Port Reading Railway from Boundbrook, N. J., to Port Reading. Mr. Davis also held the position of assistant engineer for the Central New England and Western Railway, with headquarters at Hartford, Conn., and had charge of the maintenance of the famous Poughkeepsie Bridge. In 1892 he gave up his position with the railroad and opened an office on his own account, taking engineering contracts. He was at first associated with the firm of Davis Bros., but in 1898 that was dissolved and Mr. Davis had his office alone in the Wanner Building, Reed and Court streets. His work as a consultant in his profession, and his work was always the highest class. Mr. Davis was also connected with various electric railways, and directed the engineering work on the Reading & Womelsdorf Electric Railway. He was chief engineer of the Safe Harbor Steam Railway in Lancaster county.

Mr. Davis was married Jan. 14, 1893, to Elizabeth Fry Stein, daughter of Jacob Stein and the late Ellen Elizabeth Stein, of Allentown, where Mr. Stein was a retired farmer. Three children were born to them, but Elizabeth, the second, died in infancy. The other two are Frederick Stein and Robert Stein, both in school. Mr. and Mrs. Davis both belong to the First Reformed Church. Paul Benjamin, also

Mr. Davis had for many years belonged to the Masonic fraternity, and is connected with various other organizations, in most of which he has been very active and held important offices. He is Past Master of Reading Lodge,
No. 549, F. & A. M.; Past High Priest, and at present secretary of Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M.; Past Eminent Commander of De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; Past Thrice Illustrious Grand Master of Allen Council, No. 23, R. & S. M., No. 14, R. & I. O. O. F, of Harriton Commandery; fellow member of Scottish Rite Masons, 33d degree, and a charter member of Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and he served as Oriental Guide for nine years. Mr. Davis also represented the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar of the State of Louisiana, to the Grand Commandery of Pennsylvania.

In 1850, Mr. Davis was an ardent Democrat, serving at the time of his death as representative of the Sixteenth ward on the school board. He served as county surveyor for three years. He was a member of the Americus Club, the Union Fire Company No. 13 (since its organization) and had held most of the offices in it. He was president of the Firemen's Union in 1860 and 1861, and a member of the Firemen's Relief Association as delegate from his company to the organization at large. In whatever capacity, he always rendered most valued and efficient service.

The most important professional and political position held by Mr. Davis was that of engineer to the county, March 1890-07-08, during which time he designed and introduced into Berks county bridges of reinforced concrete. The most noted of these bridges is the one across the Schuylkill river at Dauphinville, consisting of four seventy-five-foot spans of reinforced concrete, and a total length of four hundred feet. This bridge was completed and opened in 1871. Mr. Davis was highly complimented by his profession and by the public in general for the many handsome structures he designed and erected, which will ever be monuments to his memory.

ABNER KEELEY STAUFFER, for many years one of the prominent members of the Berks County Bar, was a descendant of Henry Stauffer (a son of the imperial Hohen-Stauffen family of Germany), who came to America from Rhenish Germany early in the eighteenth century. Mr. Stauffer was born at Boyertown, Berks Co., Pa., Oct. 11, 1836, son of John and Elizabeth (Keeley) Stauffer.

Judge John Stauffer was born July 4, 1792, and died Nov. 28, 1854. He served as county surveyor, and was later honored with election to the State Legislature, in which he served in 1829-30. From 1840 to 1850 he served as associate judge of Berks county, and so long as the political party then in power had the reins of government, was declared by them to be the Democratic nominee for Congress, which was equivalent to an election in Berks county. But because of failing health he was obliged to decline the honor, and he died in 1854, just four years after his term as judge had expired. Mr. Stauffer was at all times all things to his wife, and was always ready to have his disputes adjusted, his reputation as a wise, considerate judge having extended far and wide, and his fame as a counselor being scarcely equalled in the county.

Judge Stauffer married Elizabeth Keeley, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Keeley, the former a prominent farmer in Douglass township. Mrs. Stauffer was born Oct. 1, 1798, and died Dec. 30, 1857. She was the mother of ten children, five sons and five daughters, of whom two survive, viz.: Elizabeth, widow of Abraham G. Schwenk, of Schwenkville, Montgomery Co., Pa., a settlement founded by the father of Mr. Schwenk, who at one time owned 12,000 acres of land in Harriton county; and Amanda, widow of Rev. Abraham E. Dechant, of Pennsburg, a minister of the Reformed Church, who was born in Montgomery county Jan. 26, 1823, graduated at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, and at the Reformed Theological Seminary of that city.

Abner Keeler received his preparatory education at Mt. Pleasant Seminary, in his native town, which institution was organized by his father in 1850. He was graduated from Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, in 1858, and after teaching school for one year at Boyertown came to Reading in 1860, here taking up the reading of law with the late John S. Richards. He was admitted to practice April 15, 1861, on the very day which witnessed the issuance of the proclamation of President Lincoln calling for 75,000 troops, this proclamation being read in court, all the members of the Bar then assembled taking the oath of allegiance. On June 28, 1862, Mr. Stauffer was appointed a member of the Pennsylvania Volunteer Corps, and served with loyalty and fidelity until his company was mustered out because their services were no longer required, practically at the end of the war. He returned to Reading, and in 1867 he was nominated by the Republicans of Berks county for the State Senate, and made the gallant and successful fight for Reading by a large majority, running far ahead of his ticket, but being defeated in the county.

This was but the beginning of a most active career. Mr. Stauffer was always deeply interested in all matters of public moment, and did yeoman service for his city. He served three terms—1867-1873 — as city councilman, and was always a public-spirited citizen, and had the good fortune to live in Reading at a time when the legal system, which is the grand charter of the city, was in the hands of gentlemen who were, as a rule, of the public-spirited class, and with whom Mr. Stauffer was associated. He was always interested in all public matters, and was always ready to exercise his influence in the direction of the public welfare. Mr. Stauffer served as a lawyer as well as his courage as a man in making free (in 1883) the three bridges which cross the Schuylkill at Reading, the citizens formerly having been forced to pay toll. Mr. Stauffer discovered that this toll was collectible only until the cost of the bridges (and repairs needed during the time the original cost was being made up) was paid. He went over the records for eighty-eight years, a truly Herculean task, and found that not only had all costs been secured from the tolls, but also $7,000 in excess, proving by facts and figures the injustice of the conditions, and when these were properly brought before the court the bridges were made free. He worked over this problem for six years, and for this service the councilmen presented him a set of resolutions thanking him in behalf of the city. A third very important measure for which the city is indebted to Mr. Stauffer was the securing to the city of the old parade ground, now Penn Common, thirty-nine acres, for $1,000, and leased (but without legal warrant) by the commissioners of Berks county to the Agricultural Society for a period of ninety-nine years, at an annual rental of one dollar. This resulted in lengthy litigation, the lower court deciding against the city, but the Supreme court reversed the decision and gave judgment in the city's favor.

Mr. F. P. Baer was associated with Mr. Stauffer in making this fight, Mr. Baer bringing the case before the Supreme court. Both gentlemen declined pay for their services, and the Board of Trade and city councils spread upon their minutes the most eulogistic praise of the eminent and public-spirited services that Mr. Stauffer and Mr. Baer had rendered.

Mr. Stauffer was married Sept. 25, 1850, to Emma Louisa Ranninger, a daughter of one of the pioneer bookbinders of Lancaster, Pa., whose bindery was a familiar landmark. Mrs. Stauffer was born Feb. 7, 1841, and died Oct. 21, 1865. Two children were born to this union, viz.: Ella Selina, born March 11, 1862, died May 5, 1866, as the result of a fall. Edgar Emery, born March 8, 1865, died July 27, 1865.

Mr. Stauffer married for his second wife Mary High Keim, daughter of Col. John Keim, a lumber dealer of Reading, and later a banker at Dubuque, Iowa. At the death of Mrs. Stauffer, who died in 1891, the newspapers of Reading vied in their tributes to the virtues of mind and heart, one of them saying, in an extended obituary, "She united the old Keim family of Berks and the Randolph stock of Virginia. She was descended maternally from the Tuckahoe branch of the Randolphs of Virginia, and was a granddaughter of Col. Thomas Beverly Randolph, one of the first graduates of West Point. She was of the tenth generation in descent from the Algonquin princess, Pocahontas. She became the beloved mother of four children, all of whom survive, viz.: John Keim, Frederick Randolph, Anna Keim and Mary Virginia. William Wirt Mills, of New York, a son of Mrs. Stauffer by her first husband, Capt. William Wirt Mills, of Dubuque, Iowa, also survives.

Of the children, John K. Stauffer, a graduate of Yale College, class of 1895, is connected with the Times of Washington, D. C., and is Washington correspondent for the New York Evening Post and for the Philadelphia Stating Bulletin. Frederick Randolph Stauffer, now a lawyer in practice at Reading, was graduated from Yale, class of 1905, and then studied law with Hon. George F. Baer and Jefferson Snyder, Esq. In June, 1907, he was nominated for District Attorney of Berks county on the Republican ticket but subsequently withdrew because ineligible to serve, as he had not been in practice the required length of time. The daughters graduated from the Reading high school and the National Park Seminary, at Washington, D. C. They are socially prominent in Reading.

Mr. Stauffer was a Knight Templar Mason, belonging to Reading Commandery, No. 42. He was a member of the Episcopal Church, and a valued member of the congregation of Church of the Ascension, Reading, and he was one of the founders and treasurer of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Reading. In 1872 Mr. Stauffer was made a director and trustee of the Reading Public Library, continuing to serve as such to the end of his days, and he gave considerable time to furthering its interests. He was always interested in the work of the town of reading, and when he retired to the company when the failure of the Reading Savings Bank threatened to sweep it away, and it was he who fought for so many years for a city appropriation. Primarily a professional man, with large interests, he thus found time on many occasions to give his best efforts to the advancement of the civic welfare and the promotion of enterprises in which his concern personally was simply that of a public-spirited citizen. Though past seventy, Mr. Stauffer enjoyed excellent health until a week before his death, when he contracted a cold which ended in pneumonia, and he died at the family residence, No. 1513 Hill Road, Nov. 4, 1906.

HIRAM J. BIGONY, a prominent and influential citizen of Mohnton, Pa., engaged in the manufacture of hosiery, was born June 2, 1832, at Sanatoga, Montgomery Co., Pa., son of William W. and Mary L. (Weida) Bigony.

Hiram J. Bigony is the son of Joseph Bigony or Pichonot, and the seat of the family was in Languedoc, France. The first of the name here was Jean Bigonet, a native of the city of Nimes, who came in 1752. On May 27, 1753, he was married in Germantown, Pa., to Catherine Elizabeth, the widow of Henry Oinas. In 1773 arrived Francois P. Bigonet, who located in the Falkner Swamp in Montgomery county, Pa., where he married Maria Brant in 1779. They had children: Joseph, grandfather of Hiram J.; Mary, m. to Isaac Yost; Susan, m. to George Rinehart; and a third daughter, who was killed while still young on her way home from Philadelphia.

Hiram J. Bigony was born in Montgomery county, Nov. 14, 1790, and died Oct. 7, 1869. For some years he lived in Amity township, Berks county, but later he returned to Sanatoga, Montgomery county, where he died. He was a prosperous farmer and also did some driving and auctioneering, making occasional trips to Canada for cattle. On Dec. 13, 1811, he married Rachel Worley, born Sept. 17, 1791, who died aged seventy-five years, seven months, twenty days, daughter of Henry Worley, of Pottstown. Their children were: Francis, born July 25, 1814; John, Feb. 28, 1816; Joseph, March 1, 1818; Mary Ann, March 11, 1820; Henry, Feb. 17, 1822; Leah, Sept. 17, 1824 (residing at Alden Station, Pa.); and Samuel and Ephraim, twins, March 9, 1828; Frank, Sept. 7, 1830; and Reuben and William, twins, Dec. 24, 1832.

William W. Bigony, father of Hiram J., was born in Amity township, and when a young man learned the tailoring trade of his brother, Joseph, of Longswamp township. This he followed for about twenty-five years, and in 1869–71 was engaged in the hotel business at Alburys, Lehigh county, and Monterey, Berks county. In 1872 he removed to Greenwich township on a small farm near Grimsville, and he engaged in the droving business there until 1890, when he removed to Edison, Cumru township, where he died Nov. 15, 1905, after seventy-four years. He was a well known cattle dealer of his day, and also was very successful as an auctioneer. On Feb. 12, 1860, Mr. Bigony married Mary L. Weida, born May 31, 1858, in Longswamp township, and still living, and the parents of Daniel and Eliza (Weider) Weida. To this union there were born four children: Thomas, a farmer; Henry, a teacher in Reading; and Hiram J., who was born in 1880, aged nineteen years; Hiram J.; Sallie, born May 22, 1861, is single; Ella died in infancy; Lizzie, born Jan. 8, 1866, is unmarried; William F., born March 1, 1865, is an insurance agent and resides in Reading; John died in infancy; Emma, born Oct. 29, 1874; and Mary, born Sept. 29, 1877.

Hiram J. Bigony was educated in the public schools, the Keystone State Normal School and the Eastman Business College, graduating from the latter in 1892. His boyhood days were spent on his father's farm near Grimsville, and at an early age he began teaching school in Greenwich. He was the first teacher in Greenwich township, and in the next twelve years, Mr. Bigony was instrumental in organizing debating societies, which were largely attended, doing much good in their various localities. Mr. Bigony was himself an excellent debater, being quick-witted, logical and forceful in the presentation of his arguments. From 1877 to 1879 Mr. Bigony assisted his father in the cattle business, and in this manner came into contact with business men throughout Eastern Pennsylvania. In the spring of 1893 he formed a partnership with John and Charles Richwein, of Mohnton, under the firm name of Electric Hosiery Company, manufacturers of seamless hosiery. They erected a plant 24 x 68 feet, two stories high, and here employ forty-five people, their product being 200 dozen daily, which find a ready market throughout the country. In January, 1906, Mr. Bigony was elected a director of the Wyomissing Hosiery Mills of Mohnton, of which he was later made treasurer and general superintendent, and this well established firm has two mills. The plant at Mohnton is 30 x 100 feet, three stories high, and employs sixty people, while the other plant, at Rheinholds, Lancaster county, is 30 x 50 feet, two stories high, and has thirty hands.

In 1895 Mr. Bigony built a modern, two-story brick residence on Chestnut street, Mohnton, where he resided until 1905, and in this year moved into his present residence on Wyomissing avenue, which has a gray sandstone front and bay windows. In politics Mr. Bigony is a non-partisan, voting independently. He was prominently identified with the incorporation of Mohnton into a borough and was chairman at the first election, and this well established town is now a borough. Fraternally he is connected with the Knights of Pythias, No. 485; P. O. S. of A., No. 211, and Sr. O. U. A. M., all of Mohnton.

On Oct. 2, 1904, Mr. Bigony married Lizzie H. Weidner, daughter of John Y. and Catherine (Hornberger) Weidner, a complete sketch of whom will be found elsewhere. To this union there were born three children, as follows: E. Madeline, born Feb. 1, 1896; Blanche, Dec. 13, 1901; and Warren W. Aug. 23, 1905 (died Nov. 23, 1905). Mr. Bigony and his family are members of Zion's United Evangelical Church, of Mohnton, of which he has been a trustee for many years. He is also an active member of the Sunday-school, and take a great interest in the work of the organization, being cheerful and liberal givers of both time and money. Mr. Bigony is considered one of the borough's good substantial men, and he enjoys an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity. On April 30, 1907, he was elected a member of the school board, and is now serving as secretary of that board.

WILLIAM MORRIS GRISCOM, president of the Reading Hardware Company, one of the leading business enterprises of its kind in the country, of which he was the principal organizer in 1851, is now residing at Bryn Mawr, near Philadelphia, in comfortable retirement from active pursuits. He was born Oct. 14, 1825, at Oxford, Chester Co., Pa., son of Samuel and Ann (Fowell) Griscom.

Andrew Griscom, the great-great-grandfather of William M., emigrated to the New World from England in 1680, and settled at Philadelphia, residing on Second street, opposite the home of William Penn. He built the first brick house in Philadelphia, and served as one of the city's first aldermen, and died in 1694. He married Sarah Dale, and by her had four children: Samuel, David, Tobias and Sarah.

Tobias Griscom, son of Andrew, was a farmer, and settled between Philadelphia, Pa., and Gloucester, N. J. He married Deborah Gabitas, and they had five children, namely: William, Tobias, Mary, Andrew and Samuel.

Of this family, Andrew Griscom, born in 1711, died in 1773, was the great-grandfather of William M. He married (first) Susanna Hancock, by whom he had three children, Sarah, John, and William; and after her death married (second) Mary Bacon, by whom he also had three children: Mary, Andrew and Deborah.

William Griscom, the grandfather of William M., a farmer of Mannington, Salem Co., N. J., was born in 1747 and died in 1813. He married Rachel Denn, born in 1764, who died in 1800, and they had a family of seven children: John, William, Samuel (died in infancy), Everett, Rachel, Samuel (2) and David.

SAMUEL GRISCOM, the father of William M., was connected for upward of twenty-three years with the Schuylkill canal management. He was born at Salem, N. J., in 1785, and was reared on a farm. Upon reaching manhood he determined to become a builder, and in this he learned the trade of brickmason. Developing an aptitude for building operations, he located at Philadelphia, where he was engaged in erecting dwelling-houses for ten years. While so engaged he came to know some of the directors of the Schuylkill Navigation Company, and, valuing his abilities and success as a builder, employed him to fill the position of civil engineer and manager of the canal, to look after the construction department. Immediately after his appointment to this position, in 1826, he fixed his residence in Philadelphia, which was the central point of the canal between Potts ville and Philadelphia. In the performance of his duties, he distinguished himself by the construction of dams, locks and viaducts, and the maintenance of the artificial channel; which is evidenced by his retention for twenty-three years.

While filling this important position he discovered a bed of cement rock along the eastern bank of the Schuylkill near the Shipp Dam, three miles above Reading, and, building the necessary oven, manufactured large quantities of superior cement, which was profitably used in the construction of many new bridges and roads. The cement, which he developed, became much esteemed by the canal company and others, and was sold throughout the state.

In 1840 Mr. Griscom entered into business for himself, and, devoting his attention to the manufacture of cement, buildings, and large works, he became one of the largest manufacturers in the United States. His business had become so extensive that he was obliged to employ a large number of skilled mechanics and laborers.

Mr. Griscom married (second) Mary (Cleaver) Griscom, who died in 1865, and by whom he had two children, Mary and Horace.

Emeline. The mother died in 1860, aged seventy-two years, at Reading, to which place she had removed after Mr. Griscom's death.

William M. Griscom, the great-great-grandfather of the present Mr. Griscom, was three years old when his parents removed to Reading, and there he pursued his preparatory education until he was twelve years old, when he entered the Clermont Academy, situated in the vicinity of Frankford, near Philadelphia; he remained in that institution for two years. Being inclined to mechanical pursuits, his father secured an apprenticeship for him in the famous "Norris's Locomotive Works" at Philadelphia, where 125 apprentices were at that time learning the trade of machinist, but after he had been there less than two years the prevailing panic throughout the State caused the works to suspend operations, and he was obliged to return home.

Mr. Griscom then entered the hardware store of Keim & Miller, at the southeast corner of Third and Penn streets, Reading, as a clerk, and by so doing started a career in the hardware business which has been continued very successfully until the present time, covering altogether a period of seventy years. He served in this store for about three years, but wishing to fill a similar place with better prospects for advancement he went to Philadelphia, and there obtained employment in the large and prosperous hardware store of R. & W. C. Biddle. In three years he succeeded in developing such a large and profitable trade in the Schuylkill Valley and the territory beyond the Broad Mountains, through the assistance and influence of his father, that he was invited to become a member of the firm. Appreciating this honor, he secured an interest in the business and continued as a member of the firm for five years. An opportunity was then presented for him to engage in the manufacture of charcoal iron in Centre county, and withdrawing from the firm he directed all his efforts to the successful operation of the furnace for the next three years. The plant was called the Howard Iron Company. While operating this plant, Mr. Griscom became interested with his brother-in-law, Matthew Harbster, whose sister Ellen he had married, in establishing a foundry at Reading for the manufacture of all kinds of building hardware and he advancing the necessary capital they together put up a small plant and established an enterprise which was the foundation of the Reading Hardware Company. In a short time the prospects for a large and profitable business became so encouraging that he disposed of his interest in the iron works mentioned and devoted all of his time to the development of the hardware business.

In the year 1851 he had attended and been associated with the Biddle firm, gave him unusual advantages in building up the trade and influence of the new enterprise, and thereby he was enabled to supply orders from different sections of the country, which kept the plant busy from time to time. Mr. Griscom required constant enlargements year after year, until in a quarter century the enterprise so modestly begun was one of the largest and most prosperous industries in Pennsylvania.

In 1878 Mr. Griscom went to Europe in behalf of the works, and he there succeeded in gradually developing a very large trade for the company. The special exhibit of their articles was made at the Paris Exposition of 1878, and proved highly creditable and beneficial, and for which they received a bronze medal. In the countries of Europe, as well as in the United States, they came to supply the building hardware for the finest and largest structures, thereby establishing their plant at Reading was recognized as the equal, if not the superior, of any similar plant. While abroad, Mr. Griscom returned annually to make necessary arrangements for filling his orders, and in so doing he traveled across the Atlantic ocean about fifty times. Finally, in 1894, on account of his age, he was advised to discontinue his residence abroad, and returning to Pennsylvania he purchased a property at Bryn Mawr, near Philadelphia, which he improved according to his ideas of a home for himself and family, and he is now enjoying its well-deserved comforts. In the reorGANIZATION of the hardware works, in the spring of 1907, he was elected president of the corporation.

On May 23, 1847, Mr. Griscos married Ellen Harbster, who was born at Hamburg, Pa., July 3, 1828, daughter of Henry Harbster, of Hamburg, and died April 22, 1864. To this union there was born one child, Alice. On Aug. 9, 1859, daughter of Girard Miller, also of Hamburg, and by her he had four sons and two daughters, as follows: Andrew, William M., Jr., Frederick G., Edgar DeWare, Ethel L. and Grace Millicent, all of whom were born in Germany, while Mr. Griscos was living at Berling.
RACHEL DENN GRISCOM (sister of William M., and dughter of Samuel Griscos) was the founder of the "Widows' Home" at Reading, and one of the noblest characters in Berks county, having been known for her human and charitable spirit in the community for sev-te-ny-five years—a period extending from the dawn of her early girlhood; until she went to her eternal rest at the age of ninety-two, and the board of managers, and which she had been intimately associated for twenty-five years, truly said of her at the end of her remarkable career:
"Her life is a noble example of womanly power through the life of the highest feminine virtues.
Ann Griscos was born at Salem, N. J., Nov. 5, 1808.
While she was an infant, not a year old, her parents removed to Philadelphia, and there she was brought up and educated under the superior influence of the Society of Friends until she became seventeen years of age.
With a natural inclination to carry on the vocation of a teacher, she secured a school at Hancock Bridge, N.
J., near her birthplace, and by industry and experience, after teaching there for a season was employed to teach in the "Friends School," at Philadelphia, in 1826, but she was there only a few months when her parents removed to Reading and she went with them.
There was a large settlement of Friends in Maiden-creek township, eight miles north of Reading, and learning of Miss Griscos' success as a teacher, they employed her to carry on their school. She continued teaching this school until the common school system was accepted by Reading in 1835, and then she started an academy where public notice were; and for a time for about twenty-five years, she was engaged at teaching either in the public schools, or in private female seminaries, or on her own account. Soon after beginning at Reading, in 1837, she reported a school attendance of 116 pupils, fifty-eight in the first class, twenty-six in the second, and thirty-two in the third. Her salary was then only thirteen dollars a month. The last school which she taught was in the Exeter meeting house in, 1860.
Miss Griscos will be principally remembered, however, as one of the organizers of the "Home for Widows and Single Women of Reading;" indeed as the very first person to suggest the propriety and necessity of establishing a charitable institution of this kind at Reading.
She and a number of other Christian ladies assembled repeatedly in the law offices of the author of this history, at No. 546 Court street, during the year 1875, and formulated the plans which culminated in the incorporated body in January, 1876. The petitioners signed the application for a charter in this office. As the secretary, she was most active and zealous, always hopeful and determined and her great perseverance was eventually rewarded by the recognition of the community and the establishment of the "Home." Her indomitable spirit in this enterprise were the cause of her death in the eight-year old age of eighty-three years, after a continuous service of fifteen years as the secretary, she declined a re-election. Upon the announcement of her purpose, the board of managers passed the following highly appropriate and laudatory resolution, Jan. 15, 1891:
"No mere words of sorrow or resolutions of regret can convey an idea of the loss the Board of Managers sustained in the resignation of Miss Griscos as secretary—the last of her class among the several women whose its origin; to her praiseworthy industry much of its systematic arrangement is due; to her influence among the people, who accepted what she approved, much of its success is due. Her faith in the benevolence of her neighbors often enabled this Board to undertake work which a less omniscient and far-sighted mind seemed impossible. May her example of untiring industry and Christian philanthropy have a lasting influence on the members of this Board."
The retiring secretary addressed this reply to the Board, Feb. 12, 1891:
"Accept my heartfelt thanks for your kind resolution in regard to my past services as secretary. Those service were made and well repaid by your unwavering consideration, indulgence, aid and cheerful, helpful gifts.
We have journeyed together in harmony and prospered.
May the future bring you, to the Association—and to my successor the same progress, prosperity and grateful consciousness of Divine aid and appreciation."
During Miss Griscos' declining years, the author of this history called to see her a number of times socially at her home, No. 227 South Fourth street, and to him her noble spirit was always inexpressibly beautiful and inspiring. She died at Reading Jan. 8, 1901, at the age of eighty-five years, after being two years and a half had come to know her and to appreciate her worth to the community mourned her departure. The managers of the Widows' Home felt their loss particularly, and on the 10th of January following passed an appropriate resolution of regret.

JOHN G. NIETHAMMER has been engaged in business in Reading on his own account for the past twenty years, and during his honorable career has sustained the high reputation which the name Niethammer has long borne in this city.
Baldhiser Niethammer, grandfather of John G., was a native of Germany, where he followed farming and engaged in the cattle business, and where he died. He and his wife, Anna Maria Seager, were the parents of two children: Elizabeth, who married and died in Germany; and John George, father of John G., of Reading.
Mr. Niethammer was born at Weitenberg, Germany, and there received his education. He came to America July 19, 1852, landing in New York City, at nine o'clock in the evening, and after spending two days there came to Reading. His first occupation was as superintendent of a large sawmill near that city, from which he passed to the timber business, and then to the Schuylkill and Tulpehocken rivers. Mr. Niethammer was next employed at the Berks County House for several years, and then moved to Muhlenburg Hall, No. 757 Penn street, and this he conducted successfully until his death, March 30, 1890, a period of thirty-three years. He was one of the first importers of Rhine wine to Reading, making a special trip to Europe for that purpose. He was connected with the Teutonic Lodge of Masons. Mr. Ni-ethammer was married in Reading, in March, 1855, by the Rev. Mr. Keller, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, to A. Mary Gessler, also a native of Germany, born Sept. 17, 1835, who came to America March 18, 1853. After the death of her husband Mrs. Niethammer continued the business for eight years, and in 1898 removed to No. 122 North Eleventh street, where she died June 21, 1905. Both she and her husband were buried at the Charles Evans cemetery. Of their children: Mary Catherine m. Samuel P.
Rown, born in 1859; Anna Margaret and Ella Elizabeth, both single, live at the Eleventh street home; John G. is mentioned below; Annie M. died in infancy; Peter B. marrried Luca Miller, and resides in East Reading; and Jacob B., an inventor, and a very popular young man of the city, who took a prominent part in the work of the John G. Niethammer was born in Reading in 1862, and received his education in his native city, first attending the public schools and subsequently Eastern College. He was given an early training in business methods. Then he went to Lancaster, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he was employed by a Mr. Casper Kohler, having charge of the office for about a year. Returning to Reading at the end of that time he assisted his father as clerk for a few years, remaining with him until he started his business for himself. When Mr. Niethammer was about twenty-three he opened the establishment known as Niethammer's Cafe, at No. 13 North Eighth street, and engaged in the hotel and restaurant business very successfully for nineteen years, becoming as well and as favorably known in his line as his father. He finally sold out to a Mr. Hamer in order to devote himself to another enterprise in the manufacture of cigars. On March 21, 1904, he commenced this business in the old Rainbow fire house, No. 3 North Eighth street, where he conducted a thriving establishment in partnership with Charles E. Nagle and Hiester C. Nagle, the firm being known as the N. & N. Cigar Company, until Jan. 1, 1909, when he purchased his partners' interest and is now the sole owner of the business. Employment is given to twenty-five skilled workmen, and only high grade products are made, a few of the brands being the “Triple N.,” which is in both five and ten-cent varieties, the “Jerry Murphy” and “Honor Bound,” both of ten-cent, and the “N. B.,” the “J. G. N.,” both fifteen-cent cigars, and the “Hoya-Unea,” a twenty-five cent cigar. The local trade is large and steady and there is also an extensive out-of-town business. Besides his manufacturing interests, Mr. Niethammer has a retail cigar store at No. 17 North Eighth street, and in connection therewith has six bowling alleys, three pool tables and a billiard table. He put up the building in which this establishment is located, a four-story structure, in April, 1904. Mr. Niethammer's energy and progressive spirit have won him a standing among the substantial business men of the city, and he enjoys the confidence and respect of his associates wherever he is known.

On April 16, 1885, Mr. Niethammer married Eleonora Loewen, and their home is at No. 45 South Eighth street. Mr. Niethammer devotes his time and attention to business chiefly, but he has served fifteen years as treasurer of the Reading Hardware Company, in which he is much interested. Mr. Niethammer has been the owner of some very fine horses, and at one time owned the famous "Major N.," widely known and a great favorite throughout this circuit.

CALEB WEIDNER, city clerk of Reading and one of the prominent workers in the Democratic party, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, Nov. 11, 1860, son of George D. and Susan (Clark) Weidner, and member of an early settled family of the county. Peter Weidner, great-grandfather of Caleb, was born in Oley township, Berks county, April 13, 1759, and he died at the Falls of the Schuylkill, where he had conducted a ferry for many years, March 30, 1822, at the age of sixty-two years, eleven months and twelve days. His wife, Susan Levering in her maidenhood, was born Nov. 28, 1757, and she died Oct. 17, 1845, in the eighty-seventh year of her age. Their children were: Henry, born Aug. 30, 1781, died Feb. 5, 1846; Charles, born Sept. 11, 1783; Elizabeth, born Aug. 6, 1785, died Aug. 14, 1785; Peter, born Sept. 4, 1786, died June 15, 1788; Peter (2), born Feb. 6, 1789; John, born June 22, 1791; Margaret, born Feb. 17, 1794; Elizabeth, born July 26, 1795, married D. A. Miller, Feb. 4, 1815; Susan, born Jan. 26, 1799, died Dec. 15, 1800; Susan (2), born Oct. 25, 1801; and Catharine, born Oct. 28, 1803.

Peter Weidner, son of Peter, born at the Falls of the Schuylkill Feb. 6, 1789, learned the cooper’s trade in his youth, and followed it all his life. In 1833 he came with his family from Roscoboro to Stroudsburg, and he died at the latter place June 21, 1879, in the eighty-seventh year of age. He was twice married. By his first wife he had three sons: Charles, who died at Birdboro; Malcolm, who died at Philadelphia; and John, who died at Stonetown. For his second wife Peter Weidner married Elizabeth Clark, who lived at the age of seventy-four years. Their children were: Jane, m. to William Sherman; Susan, m. to Thomas Wolf; Mary, m. to Caleb B. Ruth; Margaret, m. to George Hart; Peter, who died young; and George D., mentioned below.

George D. Weidner, son of Peter and Elizabeth, was born at Stonetown, June 29, 1844. In his young manhood he learned telegraphy, and for many years he was station agent at Exeter, now Lorane. During the Civil war he evinced his patriotism by enlist ing in Company K, 151st Pa. V. I., and was assigned to the Army of the Potomac. He participated in the battles of Antietam and Gettysburg, and was wounded. He remained for some time in the hospital at Harrisburg, and after his release and partial recovery he came to Reading and learned the cigar maker's trade. This he was obliged to abandon on account of his health, and he then worked at the Signal tower near Exeter until 1868. The next year he timed the trains at Quinter's Bridge, and continued there until 1868. From 1868 until 1872 he was operator at Exeter station, and in the latter year he purchased the store and hotel property at Exeter, and these he successfully conducted until 1888. The next two years were spent in Wayne township, Schuylkill county, where he owned a valuable farm which he cultivated. His wife, Mrs. Weidner, died at the home of her father in Berks county, her family home has since been maintained. Since locating in Reading Mr. Weidner has worked at different vocations, for several years being in the employ of the railroad. Mr. Weidner married Miss Susan Clark, who was born April 1848, daughter of William and Susan (Hiester) Clark. Eight children—six sons and two daughters—blessed this union: Miss Mary; Kate, m. to Frederick Weidneshamer, of Reading; Caleb; George, m. to Laura Weidner, daughter of Henry Weidner, of Reading; Harry, of Reading; William, m. to Elia Morris, and engaged as a barber in Reading; Winfield S., of Reading; and Walter, a well known showman who has traveled all over the United States.

Caleb Weidner, son of George D., attended school in the township and later in Schuylkill county. He early started out for himself, working upon the farm in Schuylkill county. On Dec. 2, 1864, he accompanied his father to Reading, where he has since resided. He has been the main support of his mother since before he was eleven years of age. His first employment in this city was with the Reading Hardware Company, with whom he remained for two years. He then learned the hatter's trade with John H. Hendel, and this he followed for some years. On Feb. 21, 1868, he was married to Elmer H. Beard, in the city engineer's office at the city hall, after four years of efficient service with the city engineer he was elected by the council to the office of city clerk of Reading, on March 11, 1907, and in April following assumed the duties of that office.

Mr. Weidner is one of the leading men at the city hall, and wields a powerful influence in local politics. He has always been a Democrat, and has been a worker for his party since he was nineteen. He has frequently been a delegate to county conventions, and in 1906 was a delegate to the State Convention. His first political office was election inspector of the 12th ward of the 7th ward. Since 1900 he has been a member of the city Democratic executive committee, and is vice president of same. The future looks most promising to him. He has kept himself upright and honorable, keeping his promises and fulfilling his obligations, and he has won the respect of men in all parties.

Mr. Weidner was instrumental in the reorganization of the Wool Hatters' Union of Reading, which is a chartered institution. Of this he was president from 1892 to 1904. In 1894 he was elected national vice president, and was president, for a number of years, of the International Hatters of North America, after having been twice sent as delegate to that convention by the local association which he placed on so high a standard. He is a mem-number of many organizations, among them being: Lodge No. 549, F. & A. M., Reading; Reading Chapter, No. 152; Allen Council, No. 23, R. & S. M., Allentown; De Molay Commandery, No. 9; Rahay Temple, Mystic Shrine; Reading Aerie No. 66, Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which he is treasurer; Freedom Circle, No. 7; brotherhood, stock holder and vice president of the Eagles Mountain Home Association. He also belongs to Washington Fire Company No. 2, of which he was trustee for six terms. He is likewise connected with a number of social clubs. In his religious faith he is a member of the First Reformed Church. He is well read in history, and has written a large tract of land trade, having his shop and home at No. 331 South Tenth street, Reading. He is active in religious work and identified with independent church activities as a member of the Gospel Tabernacle in Reading. In 1866 Mr. Weidner married Malinda Price, by whom he has two children: Harry J., a shoemaker of Reading; and Annie, m. to Jeremiah Auge, of Reading.

(V) Reuben Weidner, son of William, son of Jacob, son of Tychicus was born in 1823 and died in 1889. He m. Mary Beam, and had a family of five children: Annie m. Alvin Levan; Elias m. Amanda Cleaver; Helen m. Chester B. Cleaver; William m. Hannah George; Amanda m. Charles Holt.

After the death of (III) Jacob Weidner (eldest son of Tychicus) his widow Elizabeth, nee Price, remarried, her second husband being Peter Weidner, a younger brother of her first. Peter Weidner was born in 1774 and died in 1838, in his sixty-fifth year. His widow survived a number of years, dying July 4, 1857, being eighty-eight year of her age. He was a farmer, and owned a large tract of land in Pike township, this county. To Peter and Elizabeth Weidner were born two children, viz.: John P. and Mary. Their daughter, who was the youngest, m. David Weidner, and they settled at Milton, Pa., where they both died.

(IV) John P. Weidner, son of Peter, son of Tychicus was born in Pike township, Berks county, April 13, 1823, and died March 7, 1885, in his seventy-third year. He was a weaver and farmer by occupation. By his wife, Elizabeth Keppert, he had a family of ten children, namely: William R., Jonathan, Sarah, John R., Eliza, Kate, Leanda, Caroline, Mary and Charles.

(V) William R. Weidner, son of John P., was born in Pike township, Nov. 27, 1837, and is a farmer by occupation. He has lived successively in Oley, Ruscommanor, Alsace and Exeter townships, having made his home continuously on one farm in Exeter from 1881 to the present time. In 1884 he married Emma Himmelreich, by whom he had these children: Seth, Amanda, Emma, William, Katie, John and Daniel (twins) and Thomas.

(V) John R. Weidner, brother of William R., was born in Pike township, Oct. 18, 1843, and lived upon the farm in that township until 1886, in which year he moved to Reading, where he has lived ever since. In 1881 he married Malinda, and has for many years been engaged in the building and contracting business. In 1867 he was married to Hattie Brown, by whom he had one child, Clara, and in 1889 he was married to Elva F. Weber. Nine children have been born to the second union, namely: Nora, Howard, Florence, Bessie, Almeretta, John, Benjamin, Minerva and Edgar.

(III) Jonathan Weidner, one of the sons of Tychicus, of Oley, was born there in 1766, and died in 1838, in his seventy-third year. He was a farmer, who lived on a farm near Pricetown, in Ruscommanor township. He m. Bevvy Gamble, and their family consisted of three children: Abraham, who lived in Alsace township, m. Katie Beck, and they had two daughters, Bevvy and Amelia; Bevvy m. John Focht; Jonathan was born in 1805 and died in 1861.

(V) Jonathan Weidner, son of Jonathan, was born in 1805, and died in 1861. He was married to three children: Augusta, who is mentioned presently; Maberry, of Allentown, Pa.; and Sarah, m. to Elias Becker.

(V) Augustus Weidner, eldest son of Jonathan, was born Aug. 14, 1838, is a huckster and farmer by calling, and lives near Pricetown. He m. Maria Diehl, and they have seventeen children:陀; joy; Katie m. Harry Fritz; Hannah m. Howard Hartman; Olivia (deceased) m. Oscar Bush; Anna M. m. Howard Homan; Edwin m. Nora Ballard; Augustus m. Lizzie Kern; Irwin m. Louis Everhart; John died in childhood.

(VI) Daniel W. Weidner, brother of Gideon, was born Oct. 12, 1844. When seventeen years old he commenced to learn shoemaking, and has ever since followed that trade, having his shop and home at No. 331 South Tenth street, Reading. He is active in religious work and identified with independent church activities as a member of the Gospel Tabernacle in Reading. In 1866 Mr. Weidner married Malinda', by whom he has two children: Harry J., a shoemaker of Reading; and Annie, m. to Jeremiah Auge, of Reading.
(II) Lazarus Weidner, son of Adam the emigrant an-ccestor, settled in Oley township, where he and his brother Tychicus owned adjoining estates. These lands were separated by a lane which has since become a public road.
In 1749 Lazarus paid his federal tax of 18 pounds.
His will was probated in 1802, the executors being his son Jacob and his sons-in-law George Yoder and Jacob Preiss. An item of the will was to the effect that Elizabeth, a daughter of John Lobach, was to have 15 pounds in money. The following children were mentioned in the will: Abigail Catherine Seidlitz; Elizabeth m. Jacob Preiss; Mary m. George Yoder; Jacob; Daniel; Isaac; David, and John.

(III) Jacob Weidner, son of Lazarus, obtained the homestead in Oley, and he is buried there in a private cemetery on the farm. His wife, Veronica, died in 1865. They had the following children: William G. came into possession of the homestead; Samuel G. m. Hannah Yoder; John G. obtained part of the homestead; Catharine m. Thomas Weidner; Rachel m.
Samuel G. Reiff; Sarah m. (first) Henry Adam and (second) Henry Miller;
Anna m. David Fry; Caroline m. Israel Leinbach.
Both of the parents died at South Bethlehem, Pa., in December, 1906, at about the same time, and they were buried the same day in one grave.

PANNEBECKER-PANNEPACKER. Few families have contributed to the State of Pennsylvania as many men of sound judgment, wisdom and unselfish partitism as that founded in America by Hendrick Pannebecker, who was born on or about March 21, 1674. He came to Amer-cas from Flandern, on the Rhine, near Worms. There is a reference to him in an account book of Pastorious, on the 3d of 1st month, 1702. About 1699
he married Ewe Umstat, daughter of Hans Peter Umstat, of Germantown. They had eight children: Martha, 1706-761; Adolph, 1708-1789; Peter, 1710-1770; John, 1713-1754
(who was prominent in the early days of the Revolution);
Jacob, 1715-1752; Henry, 1717-1792; Barbara, and one other daughter who married a Keyser.

Peter Pannebecker, son of the emigrant Hendrick, mar-rried Elizabeth Keyser, and they became the parents of a son, Amos.

William Pannebecker, son of Peter and Elizabeth, was born Aug. 26, 1740, and he married Mary Hause. They had a son Jesse.

Jesse Pannebecker, son of William and Mary, was born
Feb. 1, 1768. He was a farmer near Keely's Church, Schwenksville, and is buried in the cemetery there. He married (first) Salome Berkey, and among their children were: Jesse B. born in 1829; Amos; and two daughters.
His second wife was a Livengood, and to this marriage were born: Moses and Elias.

Jesse B. Pannebecker, son of Jesse, was born at Schwenk-sville, Montgomery Co., Pa., Sept. 23, 1820; he died at his home in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, April 23, 1885, and his remains rest at Fairview cemetery, Boyertown. He was a blacksmith by trade, and for ten years worked in his shop at Eshbach. He then spent eight years in farming at the same place, after which he moved to Colebrookdale township, where he had a farm of thirty-eight acres, and this he cultivated from that time on until his retirement. He added twenty-eight acres to his original tract. His industry and good management brought him success, and about eleven years before he died he was able to retire and to pass his last years in the enjoyment of the competency he had earned.
As a public-spirited citizen, he was in the front rank.
His political principles were those of the Republican party, and he ably filled the offices of school director and tax collector. Like all his family he belonged to St. John's Lutheran Church at Boyertown, and he at various times held all the offices in the gift of the Church. He is buried in the lot in Fairview cemetery. He married (first) Mary Bechtel, born Oct. 20, 1811, daughter of Gehart (or Gehrart) Bechtel and wife (whose maiden name was Erdman). Both Gehart Bechtel and wife are buried in the Mennonite graveyard at Bally. Mrs. Mary (Bechtel) Pannebecker died Feb. 11, 1875. The only child born to Jesse B. and Mary (Bechtel) Pannebecker was Amos B.
Jesse B. Pannebecker married (second) Esther Krause (1819-1905).

AMOS B. PANNEPACKER, son of Jesse B., was born at Esh-bach Corner, in Washington township, Berks county, Oct.
26, 1843. He attended the old pay school held in a spring-house at Eshbach, on the John Reidenauer farm. The children were a Mr. Siegenthale and Mr. John Trolleflin. Later he attended a public school. He gave his services to his parents on the home farm until he attained his majority, and continued working for his father after that time until he was twenty-eight. After his marriage he began farming for himself in Colebrookdale township, two miles south of Boyertown, where one of his father's farms, he continued to be his home until 1882, when he rented the farm of seventy-five acres. The farm on which he now lives he purchased in 1894. It consists of 110 acres of fertile land, and is improved with substantial buildings, part of which Mr. Pannebecker himself erected. He is married to Catharine Pennebecker, with whom he lives in the homestead. Besides his farm he is interested in the Clayton Creamery, and is president of the Clayton Creamery Association.
This Creamery averages about five thousand pounds of milk daily the year round. He is also interested in the Boyertown Candy Company, and in a number of different enterprises.

Mr. Pannebecker has been active in local matters as a strong Republican, and for two years he served the township as supervisor. He was township committeeman for a number of years and was delegate to a number of county conventions. He is a member of Christ Lutheran Church, there, and at Niantic, which he has served as deacon and elder, and at the present time is serving as trustee. His wife belongs to the New Mennonite Church at Bally.

On Dec. 24, 1870, Mr. Pannebecker married Ammie Clemmer, daughter of John and Susan (Bauer) Clemmer, of Washington township. To this union was born a daughter, Esther, who is married to Robert E. Bechtel, a farmer on Mr. Pannebecker's farm. They have had two children: Amos H., who died aged two and one-half years; and Rosa.

On Oct. 4, 1877, the anniversary of the battle of Germantown, was held a reunion of the descendants of Hendrick Pannebecker. The site selected was the camp ground occupied by Washington and the Revolutionary army at "Pennebecker's Mills," on the Perkiomen creek. The program on that occasion included an oration by Samuel W. Pannebecker, since Governor of the Commonwealth; a hymn, written by Isaac R. Pennebecker, and adapted to Mennonite music, commemorative of Leonard Keyser, a Mennonite martyr, who was one of the forefathers of the family, to be sung to illustrate the first epoch; the ballad of Washington at Pennebecker's Mills, written by the family Winthrop in his novel "Edwin Bohrertott," to be read or sung as an illustration of the Revolutionary epoch; and "Gen. Pennebecker's March," by Pierre Latour, to be played for the present epoch.

The story of Leonard Keyser as given by Van Braght is as follows: "In the year 1627 was the learned and good Leonard Keyser taken and condemned to be burned. As he was called to the fire, he overtook a cart, and he broke off a flower that grew in the field and said to the judges, for they rode along with him, 'If ye can burn this little flower and me, then have ye judged aright; if not, take heed and repent.' Thrice the great fagots were heaped around him at the stake and kindled. Nevertheless when they had burned away, his body was found unmarked save that his hair was singed and his nails were a little brown. Like-wised the little flower yet lay in his hand unchanged. Thereupon, the sheriff cut his body into pieces and cast them into the Inn. But a judge was so moved to tears that he yielded up his office, and one of the sheriffs became a Mennonite brother and ever thereafter lived a pious life.

HYMN.

When Leonard Keyser heard the cries Of grief for martyred dead, And saw the place of sacrifice Whereo'er his pathway led, He pleaded not, with useless prayer To scorn his bigots near, But plucked a flower that bloomed so fair It made the waste more drear.

One flower that had escaped the breath That swept the withered land; God's symbol of a life from death He held it in his hand. "If ye have power," he spake, "this hour With all the fires ye light To burn my body, or this flower, Then have ye done aright."

His eyes upraised saw not the glare Of torch on hoisting crowd, But far above the fagots' flare A rift within the cloud— A promise sent from God on high That hate should surely fail; No wealth could then His power defy Nor in the end prevail.

We seek not. Lord, to know the spell That wrought Thy will divine, We know Thou dost all things well; The miracle was Thine To cast the bonds to fall, to take From death all trace of pain And mark of fire, and then to make The flower to bloom again.

The fagots' blaze like noontide hours Gave vigor to truth's germ, And years but seemed the summer showers To make its root more firm. Upon the Inn's dark ebbing tide The martyr's corse was thrown, A witness of his creed he died, A faith his children own.

Upon those waves the good ships bore Truth's fruitage to the sea Whose surges broke upon this shore Of peace and liberty. And Thou, O, God! whose hallowed hand Upheld the troubled sea Whereon our sires sailed to this land, We live our prayers to Thee—

To ask that for these kinfolks here Thou wilt extend Thy care As when Thou mad'st the rift appear Above the fagots' flare; We thank Thee for Thy blessings given To all this gathered throng, And sing Thy praises unto Heaven In one triumphant song.

REV. ZENAS H. GABLE, a prominent clergyman of the Lutheran Church, who came to Reading Aug. 17, 1873, having accepted a call to six different congregations, is one of the most highly esteemed and beloved ministers of his denomination in the State. The Rev. Mr. Gable was born Aug. 13, 1842, in Northampton county, Pa., son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Livingood) Gable, and grandson of Jacob and Elizabeth (Freesie) Gable. The Gable family originated in Germany, and its founder in America was Peter Gable, who with his wife Catherine came to Bucks county in 1702.

The children of Jacob and Elizabeth (Freesie) Gable were: Daniel, Mary, Sophia, Aaron, Tobias and Lucy A. Jacob Gable died March 8, 1842, aged sixty-three years, and his wife Feb. 24, 1856, aged seventy-eight years.

Daniel Gable was born in Bucks county, Pa., Sept. 18, 1810, and was a farmer and carpenter, which occupations he followed all of his active period, dying Aug. 26, 1886, aged eighty-one years. His wife passed away July 1, 1897, when eighty-seven years old. Their children were: Edwin, Charles and James, deceased; Sally A.; Thomas M., and Zenas H. Gable.

Zenas H. Gable was educated in the common schools and at Gettysburg (Pa.) College, from which he was graduated in 1865, subsequently attending the Mt. Airy Seminary, and graduating in Theology in 1868. He was ordained June 10, 1868, his first charge being at Scenery Hill, where he was located from 1868 to 1873. He came to Reading Aug. 17, 1873, and took charge of the following congregations, which he has faithfully served to the present time: St. John's, Gibraltar; St. Mark's, of Birdsboro; St. James, of Geigertown; Allegheny, of Alleghenyville; Wyomissing, of Goulgersville; and Rosben, of Poowill. New churches have been built in each of his parishes during his pastorate. He also organized a congregation at Shillington and a church was built in 1876. He celebrated his quarto-centennial in 1898, in each of his churches. The Rev. Mr. Gable is a man whose earnestness and piety have made him a power in the community. Not only is he a clear and convincing preacher and spiritual teacher, but he is also an able administrator, as the material prosperity of his congregations shows.

Rev. Mr. Gable was married Dec. 24, 1868, to Thusselda, daughter of Rev. Jacob Vogelbach, of Philadelphia, and six children blessed this union, as follows: Matilda E.; Rev. Charles Jacob; Sue A.; Rev. Luther D.; Edmund J., who is the pastor; and Dr. William S. Gable Medical College, of Philadelphia, graduating in the class of 1906. Mrs. Gable died April 2, 1908. In political matters Rev. Mr. Gable is independent, voting rather for the man than the party.

DENGLER. In the year 1737 Jacob Dengler emigrated to America, coming from Germany, probably from Wittenberg. His brother Andreas, who soon followed, died in America unmarried. Jacob Dengler settled near Amityville, and there built a forge and manufactured various iron implements. His remains are buried at the Swamp Church.

Henry Dengler, the progenitor of the Denglers in Oley township, was a grandson of Jacob, and was born Oct. 3, 1792, in Amity township. He married Sarah Guldin, a lineal descendant of the Rev. Samuel Guldin, who emigrated to this country in 1719, and was the first Reformed minister in Pennsylvania. Henry Dengler moved from Amity to Friedensburg, now Oley, in 1809, and embarked in a mercantile business, in which he continued until near the close of his life. He was very active in public affairs, and took a deep interest in church matters, being one of the chief promoters of the building of the First Reformed Church in 1809, donating the land and contributing liberally otherwise. For many years he served as an officer of the Reformed Church. His death occurred March 19, 1860, when he was sixty-seven years, five months and sixteen days old. His wife Sarah died Oct. 30, 1883, aged seventy-six years, seven months and twenty-five days. Their children were: Henry; John G.; James G.; Harriet m. John C. Nipe, and lives in Philadelphia; George lives in Clarion county; Washington, who enlisted at the age of eighteen, served for two years in the Civil war, was captured July 24, 1863, and was kept a prisoner in Richmond until March 23, 1864, when he was taken to Andersonville, Ga., and there he died of starvation May 6, 1864; Jacob died in February, 1905, aged seventy-one years, leaving a family as follows, Mrs. Charles Leithausier, Elmer, Howard, Mrs. Reily, William, and Mrs. Worths A. Dries, all living.
The Rev. James G. Dengler has been in the ministry of the Reformed Church since June, 1874. He is a graduate of Franklin & Marshall College at Lancaster, and of the Theological Seminary located there. For nearly a quarter of a century he served one charge in Sellersville, Bucks Co., Pa. Dr. Dengler has been a frequent contributor to various publications, both religious and secular, and is a scholarly man of marked attainments and as a religious leader he has few equals in devoted piety and earnestness of both life and teachings.

James G. Dengler, the revered veteran school teacher of Berks county, is a resident of Friedensburg, Oley township, where he was born Oct. 29, 1837. His education was obtained in the Oley Academy under Prof. Jacob H. Major, and the Freehold Seminary under Prof. Hunisucker. He was licensed to teach in public schools under the first county superintendent of Berks county, Rev. William A. Good, in 1837, and taught the first term in Oley township, at School-house No. 1. Prof. Dengler has since been teaching every consecutive school term (except during his army service), and also has conducted select schools each spring term. He has instructed thousands of boys and girls of Berks county, forming their characters through his excellent example, as he shaped their minds with his wise precepts, and he is held in highest respect by the entire county. He is now teaching the grandchildren of his first pupils. Prof. Dengler possesses a kind and benevolent disposition which is shown in his intelligent face, and he is possessed of a long, lank frame, a little bent under the weight of his long life. During the many years that he has labored in Berks county he has witnessed many changes, especially in the public school system. His first salary was twenty-four dollars a month, twenty-two days. Not only has he instructed the children placed under him the text of their books, but he has given them the benefit of his wide experience, his varied reading and exhaustive studies, and has never failed to hold up the highest possible standards before their young eyes.

On April 18, 1861, Mr. Dengler was filled with patriotism and enlisted in Company C, 7th Pa. V., at Hanover, and was in active service at Martinsburg, Va. His first enlistment was for but three months, but on Oct. 30, 1861, he re-enlisted at Reading, Capt. James McKnight commanding, for three years, in Battery M, U. S. A., and saw some very hard service, passing through the entire Peninsula campaign, and participating in the battles of the Wilderness, and was mustered out Oct. 30, 1864, at Staten Island, N. Y., he was in the Sixth Army Corps.

Having thus devoted over three years of his life to his country, Prof. Dengler came back to Reading, where he arrived after midnight on Oct. 31, 1864, but so anxious was he to get back to his district and school that he went by a distance of ten miles. The following day he engaged to teach the school he had left three and one-half years before at the call of duty, and he accepted the position at the earnest solicitation of his friends, who were anxious to secure his distinguished services. Prof. Dengler has also been active in church work ever since young manhood, and is a member of Friedens Reformed Church, of which he has been deacon, elder and trustee. He is a trustee of the Friedens cemetery company; a trustee of the Oley Academy that was founded in 1837, and has held this office since 1875. Since his youth Prof. Dengler has been a teacher in the Sunday-school, and is at this time a member of Minnewaska Lodge No. 154, K. of P., at Oley, also O. U. A. M. Council, No. 23, of the same place. In addition to all his other duties Prof. Dengler is the correspondent of all the Reading daily papers at Friedensburg.

Prof. Dengler has been twice married. His first wife, to whom he was married in January, 1860, was Catherine Schlotman, daughter of John and Lydia (Shade) Schlotman. She was born in Oley in 1839, and died May 5, 1875, aged thirty-five years, the mother of children as follows: Anna, deceased, has four children, and lives at Philadelphia; Millie, deceased; Minnie, deceased; May, deceased; and James, deceased, and lives at Friedensburg; Lilla, deceased, m. Alexander Bieber, of Reading; Harvey, an enterprising life insurance man of Allentown, and superintendent of the Allentown district of the Baltimore Mutual Life Insurance Company, married in infancy; and Calvin and Clara died in infancy. In 1878 Prof. Dengler m. (second) Kate Ritter, whom he married on the 7th day of October, and they had three children: William, who has a R. F. D. mail route at Oley, is married and his children are, Blanche, Harvey, John and Ella; John was drowned when fourteen; Sallie is a school teacher in Oley and has been teaching since 1906.

It is fitting to close this too brief biography of so distinguished an educator by an account of a delightful ceremony at the teachers' institute in 1907, held at Reading. Prof. Dengler in recognition of his long and faithful services as a public instructor was presented a silver loving cup, fifty dollars in gold, and seventy caratings. The last named representing the number of years he had lived and celebrating his birthday. Those having the matter in charge very fittingly selected his birthday for the presentation day, and the speech which accompanied the gifts as well as his reply will never be forgotten by those present. Many men sacrificed much for their country, there are thousands of teachers in the country today, but there are few who have been both instructor and soldier in one as has Prof. Dengler. When he served upon the battlefield he was an excellent soldier. After his military life was over, he came home and once more entering the schoolroom resumed his peaceful vocation, and did much to raise the standard of teaching in the county today, but there are few who have been both instructor and soldier in one as has Prof. Dengler. When he served upon the battlefield he was an excellent soldier. After his military life was over, he came home and once more entering the schoolroom resumed his peaceful vocation, and did much to raise the standard of teaching in the county.

I. A. DEISHER, a well-known business man of Reading, Pa., who is engaged in the jewelry business at No. 511 Penn street, Reading, was born in Hamburg, Pa., Aug. 13, 1866, son of Henry and Valarya (Fink) Deisher. He was raised at Kutztown and has always been a farmer, following these occupations throughout a long and useful life in Kutztown and later at Hamburg. He was a very energetic business man and accumulated a considerable fortune, retiring shortly prior to his death. He and his wife were the parents of a large family of children, several of whom died young, those who lived to maturity being: Gereon, William, Henry and Catherine (married William D. Shomo). The family were members of the Lutheran Church, and in politics Mr. Deisher was a Democrat, holding for some years the office of director of the poor. His son, Henry Deisher, received a common school education, and attended classrooms at a seminary at Collegeville, after leaving which he worked on the farm and became a successful farmer. He is now living retired with his son, to Mr. Deisher and his wife, who died in 1888, were born three children, two of whom died in infancy, I. A. being the only survivor. Henry Deisher is a strong character in religious matters. In his political views he is a stanch Democrat.

I. A. Deisher was educated in the high school at Hamburg, and when a boy entered the drug store of Adam Bodenhorn, with whom he worked for four years. At the end of that time he apprenticed himself to the jeweler's trade with W. W. Apple, with whom he served his time, going thence to Harrisburg, where he worked for six years with Philip Theilheimer. After the latter's death Mr. Deisher purchased his employer's interest in the business, carrying it on for four years. In 1897 he came to Reading, purchasing the Burkart store at Nos. 424-426 Penn street, and in April, 1908, he moved to the larger and more centrally located store at No. 514 Penn street. He handles a first-class line of jewelry, silverware, cut glass and novelties, and makes a specialty of repairs, especially optical, being a skilled mechanic and optician. Mr. Deisher was for many years a member of the Bucklin School of Optics, the Spencer Optical Institute, the McCormick Optical College and the McCormick Neurological College, the first two colleges located in New York, and the last two in Chicago. He has been very successful in this branch of the business.

In 1885 Mr. Deisher married, in Pittsburgh, a native of Topton, Berks county, and two children were born to this union: Esther and Clarence. Mr. Deisher is a member of the Elks, the Royal Arcanum and the Hephaestos. In both religious and political views he is broad and liberal, believing that every man should use his own judgment in these matters.

SAMUEL L. KURTZ, M. D., is well known through Berks county, both as a physician and surgeon of skill, and as a survivor of the great Civil war. He was born Sept. 27, 1832, son of Samuel and Mary (Longacre) Kurtz.

Joseph Kurtz, paternal grandfather of the married couple, was born Dec. 18, 1788, in Chester county, Pa. On Oct. 19, 1787, he married Fannie Miller, and their children were: John, born Sept. 23, 1788; Abraham, Nov. 27, 1789; Joseph, Jan. 10, 1791; Henry, July 10, 1792; Barbara, Aug. 5, 1793; Leah, Sept. 19, 1794; Samuel, Nov. 12, 1795; Elizabeth, Nov. 23, 1796; Daniel, Oct. 30, 1797; James, Thomas, Caroline, Franklin and Sarah, born 1800; Christian, Nov. 8, 1801; Jacob, Oct. 1, 1803; Daniel, Jan. 22, 1804; Anna, March 20, 1805; Jacob, Oct. 25, 1806; Susannah, May 25, 1808; Daniel (2), Aug. 1, 1809; and Susannah (2), July 1, 1812. The family were members of the Mennonite Church. Joseph Kurtz died March 18, 1829.

Samuel Kurtz, father of the Doctor, was born in Chester county, Nov. 12, 1795, and his education was obtained in the common schools. Upon reaching his majority he turned his attention to farming, a vocation which he followed for many years in Pickeland township. In 1834 he removed to Juniata county, where he operated a farm for six or seven years at East Salem, and there he died April 23, 1838. His first wife, who was a daughter of Jacob Longacre, died in the prime of life. She was the mother of: Joseph, born Aug. 22, 1819; Jacob, born Aug. 1, 1822; Annie, born Dec. 18, 1825, married William Cross; Samuel (1), born Oct. 21, 1826, married Sarah; Mary, born March 14, 1836, married George D. Taylor. This branch of the family were Methodists. After the death of his first wife Mr. Kurtz married Mary Miller, by whom one child was born, Fannie, who became the wife of George D. Taylor, the father of Dr. Taylor, of Reading. Samuel Kurtz's third wife was Mary Jacobs. No children were born to the last marriage.

Samuel L. Kurtz was educated in the schools of Juniata county, and in old Trappe Seminary, now Ursinus College. Later he read medicine with Dr. Henry Geiger, of Montgomery county, and in 1851 entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1854. His first field of practice was at Phoenixville, Pa., where he remained two years, and then removed to Oakland Mills, Juniata county, remaining there until the fall of 1861, when he was appointed assistant surgeon of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserve Corps. He continued to fill that position until June, 1863, when he was promoted to surgeon of the 85th Pa. V. L. With this regiment he remained until Nov. 22, 1864, when, at the expiration of the term of service of the regiment, he was honorably discharged. He settled in Reading, locating at No. 340 South Fifth street, and his present office is at No. 412 South Fifth street.

The Doctor is a member of the American Medical Association; of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, of which in 1891 he served as president; and of the Berks County Medical Society, serving his second term as its president. He is also a member of the Reading Medical Association. He was one of the original members of the board of trustees of the Reading Hospital, and has served upon its staff since its organization. He is a member of the board of health, and is examiner for a number of life insurance companies. Fraternally he is connected with the Masons, being a member of Phoenix Lodge, F. & A. M., Buckland No. 93, and also a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the U. S., Commandery of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Kurtz married, in 1854, Miss Sarah Morgan, and to this union three children have been born: Dr. J. Ellis, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, is a physician and surgeon at Reading; Frederick Nicholas, M. D., of Muhlenberg; and Clarence M., also a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, practising at Reading. Dr. Kurtz is a Republican in politics, and was one of the Harrison electors in 1888. He is a vestryman in St. Barnabas Episcopal Church.

GERHART. Benjamin Gerhart, the grandfather of Peter William Gerhart, Jr., superintendent of the treatment department of the "Grand View Sanatorium," was formerly a resident of Lower Heidelberg, near Brownsville, and for the last thirty years of his life was a resident of Wernersville. His occupation was that of a gratter of trees and gardener. He died in 1903, aged seventy-six years. He was married, Oct. 24, 1854, to Anna (Lamm) Werner, and by her had twelve children: Calvin E., m. Amelia Lambert; Frank P., m. Emma Peiffer; Ellenora S. m. Alfred Webber; and after his decease George F., m. Anna M. m. Gustave Bien; Albert B., m. Sue Reinhold; Agnes Priscilla m. Thomas Furry; Joseph W., m. Anna Fidler; Catherine Louisa; Elizabeth, Wilhelmina m. Harry Parker; and two died young.

PETER WILLIAM GERHART, Jr., superintendent of the treatment department of the "Grand View Sanatorium," a position he has filled for nearly twenty-five years, was born in Lower Heidelberg, near Brownsville, on April 18, 1862. His mother dying when he was only eight years old, he was placed on a farm, and continued there (except for three years he spent at Reading), helping and going to school, until he was sixteen years old. Then he went to Cumberland county for the purpose of attending school, but he acquired the English language while assisting in farming and stock raising, and he remained there for three years. He then returned to Wernersville, but remained only six months when he went to Ohio and secured employment on a farm in the vicinity of Lima. He continued on this farm for four years, at the end of which time, his health failing, he found employment as a reporter on a local newspaper, filling this position for three years. In 1886 he returned to Wernersville and secured a position as stable boss in the large stables of the "Grand View Sanatorium," and he displayed such intelligence in his work, and gave such satisfaction to the proprietors, Drs. Wenrich & Deppen, that after the short time of three months they promoted him to the treatment department of the institution. Showing great qualifications and ambition, he continued there until the fall of 1888, when under their advice he took a regular course of instruction in the Philadelphia Polyclinic and College for Graduates in Medicine, for the purpose of learning massage and medical electricity. He graduated in June, 1889, and upon his return to the Sanatorium was placed in charge of the treatment department, where he has remained until the present time. Being interested in local educational matters, Mr. Gerhart was elected a school director of the township in February of 1898, and has served in that capacity ever since. He has served as the school board's secretary for three successive years, and also was chosen a representative from Berks county for three successive years to the State Directors' Convention, which meets annually at Harrisburg.
Mr. Gerhart was married to Ida Rebecca Wenrich, the only daughter of William H. Wenrich, of Bernville, and they have had three children, Sarah, J. Clarence, and one that died in infancy. Mr. Gerhart was elected an elder of St. John's (Hain's) Reformed Church in January, 1909, and immediately chose his treasurer. Socially he is a member of Odd Fellows Lodge No. 855, Wernersville, of which his wife, Mrs. Gerhart, is a member, and of the church. Their children are: Sarah Billman, daughter of John Billman, of Upper Tilden (now Tilden), and they had three children: Willis E., Ida Rebecca, and one that died young.

John S. Wenrich, of Bernville, his grandfather, m. Lydia Himmelberger, and had two children, William H. and Rebecca. Mr. Morris Kershner. Her great-grandfather was Paul Wenrich.

GEORGE W. GERHART, another son of the late John Peter Gerhart, was born Aug. 4, 1863, in Lower Heidelberg township. He received his early education in the township school and supplemented it with study at the Keystone State Normal School. He was first licensed to teach by Prof. D. S. Keck, former superintendent of Berks county, and commenced his work as teacher in the fall of 1882, in Heidelberg township, where he was engaged for five terms. He was reared upon the farm, but has never followed farming since he began life on his own account. He served as a legal deputy, and is engaged in the mercantile business. In the spring of 1888 he formed a partnership with Mr. Fidler under the firm name of Fidler & Gerhart, this relation lasting for one year. Mr. Gerhart then took Henry Miller into partnership with him, and they did business together for thirteen years under the name of Gerhart & Miller, or the larger part of that time being served as a merchant, and is employed at present in Robesonia. At the end of this period Mr. Miller, by mutual consent of the partners, withdrew from the concern, John I. Miller becoming a member of the firm, the name of which remained unchanged. This association continued for a few years, and in 1904 Mr. Gerhart formed a partnership with Mr. Moyer under the name of Gerhart & Moyer. They enjoy the confidence and patronage of the community to a gratifying degree, and have a high reputation for enterprise and progress as well as honorable dealing. They carry a complete line of general mercantile line, and extend over a radius of fourteen miles around Robesonia.

Mr. Gerhart is a man of active disposition, and takes part in the life of the community in lines outside of his direct business interests. He is a staunch Democrat in political opinion and willing to work for the success of his party. He has served as a delegate to the State and county conventions, and has been elected to local offices of trust, having been school director and tax collector of his township. He is also prominent in church work, he and his family being members of St. Paul's Reformed Church of Robesonia, of which Mr. Gerhart is at present an elder. He was most active in the erection of the present fine edifice, in 1904, which cost the congregation over $15,000, serving as a member of the building committee, of which he was treasurer. He has been treasurer of the church ever since its organization. It is very prosperous, and Mr. Gerhart has been one of its most devoted workers. Socially he is a member of the Knights of Pythias, holding membership in Lodge No. 119, of Robesonia, of which he is a past chancellor. He owns the Wagner Hall building, a three-story brick block 30 x 60 feet in dimensions, the first and second stories of which are used by the firm of Gerhart & Moyer, and the third as the meeting place of various secret societies. Mr. Gerhart also owns the property adjoining this building on the north. Here he razed the old building and built an addition to the stone 30 x 30 feet in the rear and 35 x 60 on the north, making the most up-to-date store in the Lebanon Valley. It is lighted throughout by electricity, and is heated by steam. He purchased both buildings in 1907. He also owns the property across the street which he uses for his residence.

In May, 1887, Mr. Gerhart was married to Miss Annie Fidler, daughter of William and Annie (Klopp) Fidler, the former of whom was in business in Robesonia as a manufacturer of cigar boxes. To Mr. and Mrs. Gerhart have been born six children, namely: Estella M. Horace (who died in infancy), Robert R., Luke W., Edna A. and Lyman R. Mr. Gerhart is giving all his children good educational advantages, being convinced of the value of proper training. Estella M., a graduate of the township high school, was married in May, 1908, to Walter V. R. High (son of D. K. High), who with his brother Henry V. R. High is engaged in the honey business at Bernville, where they reside. Robert R. is a graduate of the township high school, and the latter is also a graduate of the Interstate College of Reading. For his industriousness and responsible position of teller in the Wernersville National Bank, at Wernersville, Luke W. is now attending the Interstate Commercial College.

H. WILLIS BLAND, President Judge of the Orphans' Court of Berks county, was born August 20, 1845, at Blan-dons, that county, a village which derives its name from his paternal ancestors. He attended the public schools of Birdsboro until he was thirteen years of age. On August 31, 1861, when he had barely reached the age of sixteen, he enlisted at Philadelphia as a private in Company H, 82nd Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and in the following year was promoted successively to corporal, sergeant, second lieutenant, first lieutenant, and captain. His five years' term of enlistment, was mustered out September 16, 1864. The regiment was engaged principally in the campaigns in Virginia, participating in a number of the severest battles of the war, including those of Fair Oaks, Malvern Hill, Antietam, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. After the war, he entered the law profession, was admitted to the bar at Robesonia, and continued the practice of law there. He held various municipal offices, and was a leader of his political party. Before and after his admission he participated actively in politics, at first as a Republican, and subsequently to 1872, when Horace Greeley was the candidate of the Democratic party for President, as a Democrat.

The seat of county of Berks was created by the Act of June 12, 1833, and at the general election in the fall of that year Hiram H. Schwartz, Esq., who had been the temporary appointee, was elected judge for the term of ten years. Judge Schwartz having died on August 25, 1891, Judge Bland was on the 10th of the following month appointed by Governor Pattison to fill the vacancy, and in 1892 was elected for the full term of ten years, beginning on the first Monday of January, 1893. At the end of that period he was re-elected for the term expiring in January, 1913.

During his practice at the Bar Judge Bland acquired a reputation as an advocate of unusual eloquence and marked ability. He was a close student, and his success was due not alone to forensic talent, but to thorough legal equipment as well. As a judge he has not disappointed the promise of his career as a lawyer. The Orphans' court, though a forum concerned solely with the estates of deadbeats, has become attracting a less degree of public attention and spectacle interest than the co-ordinate tribunals attended with trials by jury, is nevertheless, in the end, of vital importance to every member of the community. The duties and responsibilities of its presiding officer are commensurate with the significance of its position, and he is held to the same high standards of character. The office of chancellor is one of the highest dignitary consequences, and Judge Bland endeavors to measure up to the high standard set by the historical shining lights of the Bench whom he consistently emulates, and has abundantly justified the confidence which his constituency have reposed in him.
by repeated elections. As a citizen he is deservedly held in universal public respect and esteem.

Outside of his official position he is connected with various civic organizations for the uplifting of humanity. His oratorical gifts are frequently called into service upon public occasions; and on whatever topic he may deliver his discourse he always carries an able and forceful. In the cause of the surviving soldiers of the Civil war he naturally takes a deep personal interest, and in their most notable gatherings is usually selected as their principal speaker. He is affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic, being a member of McLean Post, No. 16, of Reading.

CHARLES VOELKER has since 1905 been principal owner of the Berks Manufacturing Company, of Reading, and he has been long known as a business man of that city, having conducted the "Farmers and Mechanics Hotel," in West Reading, for a number of years. Mr. Voelker is a native of Germany, born Oct. 12, 1856, in Feldkarl, Bavaria. He was reared in the Fatherland, whence he came to America in 1878, settling at once in Reading, where for the most part he has since had his home. In Germany he had learned the trade of a brewer, at which he is invested in the employments, and in 1880, he engaged, in one of the leading breweries of the city. Later he was engaged in the business on his own account, in Pottstown, Montgomery Co., Pa., where he remained several years, finally selling his interests in that line. Returning to Reading in 1893 he entered the hotel business, becoming proprietor of the "Farms and Mechanics Hotel," in West Reading, which he has since kept, finding the venture congenial and profitable. In July, 1905, in company with his eldest son, Charles T. Voelker, Mr. Voelker purchased the plant and business of the Berks Manufacturing Company, Ltd., at No. 184 Court street, under the firm name of Charles Voelker & Son, and at that time the product of the factory, which consists of sunbonnets and aprons, amounted to about five hundred dozen weekly. Under their enterprising management the weekly output has been increased to fifteen thousand dozen, in the manufacture of which steady employment is given to forty hands. These goods are of high grade and excellent workmanship, and are marketed through jobbers all over the United States and Canada. The constantly growing trade has necessitated the erection of a new factory, which is now in course of construction, and which will be one of the finest manufacturing plants of its kind in the country. It is a four and one-half story building and extends, in dimensions, three stories and basement, and will be equipped with the most reliable and up-to-date machinery obtainable, every facility for the most expeditious dispatch of work compatible with the manufacture of high class articles being included in the appointments. The company are also adding to the working force from time to time, finding considerable difficulty in keeping up with a steady stream of orders. Mr. Charles Voelker, the senior member of the firm, is a hard-working and reliable business man. He has been remarkably successful in his latest venture, which is advancing to a place among the appreciable industrial leaders of the city. He is a citizen of sterling merit, and though he takes no active part in public affairs is public-spirited and interested in the welfare of the city in which he found a fruitful field for his efforts. He is a Democrat in politics, and a Catholic in religious faith. Mr. Voelker married Caroline Rothenberger, like himself a native of Germany, and eight children have been born to them; Charles T. (who is in business with his father), Lewis, Edward, Mary, Carrie, Catherine, Anna and Joseph.

CHARLES T. VOELKER, manager and part owner of the Berks Manufacturing Company, was born in Reading Jan. 29, 1884, and received early education in the schools of Pottstown, supplementing it with courses at the Reading Business College. He is thoroughly fitted for the superintendent of the plant, the marvelous growth of which since it came under the present management is due in a great measure to his executive ability. He is a young man of forceful personality and excellent business judgment, and his energy has made itself felt in every department of the factory, which has a most creditable showing under his guiding hand.

AUGUSTUS M. BROWN, cashier of the First National Bank of Mohnton, and one of the well-known and highly respected citizens of Shillington, was born May 17, 1863, at McKeansburg, Schuylkill Co., Pa., son of George and Catherine (Mast) Brown.

John Brown, his grandfather, was born in Rockland township, Berks county, where he followed the occupation of a farmer and tailor, later moving to Schuylkill county and purchasing a farm, on which he died at the age of fifty-nine years. His wife's maiden name was Maul. They had three children: Ephraim, who died in Schuylkill county; George; and Charles, who died at Pottsville.

George Brown was born in Rockland township, Berks county, and accompanied his father to Schuylkill county, where he engaged in the lumber business, furnishing mining timber. He also followed farming in Brunswick township, that county, but in 1871 he located in Amity township, Berks county, where until his death he engaged in the milling business. Mr. Brown married Catherine Mast, a native of Schuylkill county, and they had one child.

Augustus M. and Howard.

Augustus M. Brown attended the public schools of his native district, also spending three sessions at Multenham Academy, and entered the Berks National Bank, at Reading, as a messenger. Faithful service and marked ability earned him promotion from time to time, and he continued with this well known banking house for a period of twenty-three years. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank at Bernville, Oct. 15, 1897, situated on Main street, on the bank's own property, a tract of 120 x 250 feet. He became its cashier, and held that position until March 1, 1909, when he resigned to become cashier of the First National Bank of Mohnton, and he now resides at Shillington. Mr. Brown is a self-made man and is recognized as one of the ablest of Berks county's bankers. In politics he is a Republican, and he is connected socially with Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M., and the Royal Arcanum. He is a member of Friedens Lutheran Church, where he has served as a deacon and a teacher in the Sunday school.

Mr. Brown was married to Anna M. Eachen, daughter of Henry and Eliza (Posen) Eachten, and they have had two children, Emily M. and George A.

REV. THOMAS THEOPHILUS JAEGE, for forty years a preacher of the Gospel, died May 13, 1888, in Reading, Pa. The Rev. Mr. Jaeger, who was born in Greensville township, Berks county, Aug. 29, 1836, came of a long line of ministers of the Word of God, his great-grandfather and grandfather having been ministers in Germany, while his father, the late Rev. G. F. I. Jaeger, was one of the best known and most beloved pastors in the Lutheran Church in this section of the State.

Rev. G. F. I. Jaeger was born in Hildesheim, Germany, and he received his literary training there, attending several of the best universities. On coming to America, in 1817, the Rev. Mr. Jaeger taught school for one winter in Northampton county, Pa., and the following year located in Berks county, where the remainder of his life was spent. While teaching in the old schoolhouse near Hamburg, he began to study for the ministry; and he was ordained in the Lutheran faith in 1819. He at once began preaching, and he continued in active service until four years prior to his death. At various times he had as many as fifteen congregations in charge, and he was the pastor of six congregations at the time of his death in 1874.

When Ordained in 1817, he preached peripatetically, also engaged in the charge of the White Church Lutheran congregation. From June, 1819, to 1874, he baptized nearly 7,000 children, gave catechetical instruction to nearly 4,000 persons, married over 1,200, preached 2,500 funeral sermons, and gave communion to over 50,000 persons. The Rev. Mr. Jaeger died at his residence on South Oak street, Hamburg, Berks county, shortly after eleven o'clock, Sunday morning, Nov. 16, 1879, being at this time the oldest member of the Pennsylvania Ministerium. His funeral was largely attended, the Rev. Mr. Groh, of Boyertown, preaching the sermon in German, and the Rev. Dr. Fry, of Reading, in English. Rev. G. P. I. Jaeger had preached his first sermon Oct. 18, 1818, at Dunkel's Church, and he was there buried among the people to whom he had given his labors for a period of sixty-one years.

The Rev. Mr. Jaeger was married to Mary 'Audenreid, ofMcKensgus, Pa., and to them were born these children: Rev. Thomas Theophilus; Samuel; William, of Baltimore; and Lewis F., of California; Mrs. Jackson Levin, of Hamburh, Pa.; Mrs. James S. Berger, of Philadelphia; Mrs. E. S. Salade, of Tamaqua.

Rev. Thomas Theophilus Jaeger pursued his preparatory course and classical studies for about three years at Mercersburg and Gettysburg, after which he entered upon his theological course under the instruction of Rev. John W. Richards, then pastor of St. John's Church, Easton, Pa. During the summer of 1847 he received a license (ad interim) from the president of the Mercersurgium, and was admitted to the forming ministerial acts, which license was renewed when he was received into the Ministerium at its annual meeting in Easton in 1848. His ordination took place in 1850, at the Synodical meeting at Pottsville, Pa., and his first regular charge was in Lancaster county, Pa., where he served congregations in and around Brickerville, and Muddy Creek. He remained about two years at the latter place and then removed to Womelsdorf, taking charge of the congregations there and at Rehersberg, and later the churches at Myerstown, Bellemont, Reed, Bern and North Heidelberg. In 1855 the Rev. Mr. Jaeger removed to Reading, in Berks County, as pastor of a large number of congregations. At the time of his death he had charge of the following Lutheran congregations: Bern, Oley, Spies, Shalters and Kissinger churches.

His ministerial life covered forty continuous years, with the exception of the years 1865, 1866 and 1867, when on account of ill health he was forced to discontinue his work. During his long labor in the Gospel he preached 5,258 sermons, baptized 6,263 children, performed 1,748 marriage ceremonies, officiated at 2,472 funerals, confirmed 3,606 catechumens, gave communion to 74,750 persons, and prayed with the sick 2,860 times. On May 4, 1888, he had a stroke of paralysis, which was but the beginning of the end, his death occurring May 13th, and he was interred in Charles Evans cemetery.

On Dec. 14, 1848, the Rev. Mr. Jaeger married Mary A. Palsgove, of Mercersburg, Pa., and they had a family of ten children, seven of whom died in infancy. The three surviving are: Miss Nora S., who lives with her mother at No. 522 Oley street, Reading; Mrs. Jefferson Snyder, of Reading; and Mrs. John Kendig, of Philadelphia.

The Rev. Thomas T. Jaeger was justly considered one of Berks county's representative men. The influences of his life had always been in the direction of temperance, education and morality. His services in the religious body, where he labored so faithfully for so many years but cemented more closely the bonds between him and his fellow men. As a preacher he was fearless in the exposition of the Word of God, and the fruitful results of his work brought him comfort and encouragement in his declining years.

AMANDUS N. FEGLEY, M. D., who has carried on the practice of medicine at Oley Church, in Oley township, Berks county, since 1871, was born Sept. 16, 1842, in Douglass township, Montgomery Co., Pa., son of Jonas and Anna (Nyce) Fegley.

George Fegley, his grandfather, was born in Douglass township, where his father also lived, and there passed all his life, engaged in farming. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. His wife's maiden name was Fox, and among their children were: Jonas, John, Daniel, Sallie, and a daughter whose name is not recalled.

Jonas Fegley, born in June, 1800, died in May, 1861, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. He was a farmer by occupation, and owned 100 acres of good land. He was a Democrat and interested in local affairs, serving many years as school director. Mr. Fegley married Anna Nyce, born in October, 1806, died in November, 1869, daughter of John Nyce, a farmer of Oley, a member of the County Historical Society, Montgomery county. Mr. and Mrs. Fegley are buried at the Sassamansville Church, in Montgomery county. They had a family of ten children, namely: Hannah is deceased; Mary is the widow of John Dotts; Edward is deceased; Leanna m. Levi Sassaman: Miss Fletta is married to Samuel W. Messler; William is deceased; Eliza m. Abner Wit; Amanda N.; and Miss Sarah lives at Pottstown.

Amandus N. Fegley was reared on the farm, and received his early education in the local public schools. Later he attended the academies at Frederick and Trappe, and afterward taught school for three years in Douglass township before taking up the study of medicine. He began to read with Dr. Francis Kipne, of Frederick, and attended lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, graduating from that institution in the spring of 1870. For a few months he was located at Balliettsville, in Lehigh county, Pa., in the fall of 1870 returning to Jefferson Medical College, where he continued to study until the following spring. He has since been located at Oley Church, in Oley township, Berks county, where he has acquired an extensive practice. He has not only been a successful medical practitioner, but has also proved to be a most useful member of the community in other relations, everything which affects the general welfare receiving his influence and support. He was one of the organizers of the Oley National Bank and became a member of its first board of directors. He was trustee and secretary of the Oley Cemetery for many years; is a member of the Berks County Historical Society; and a member of Griesemersville Lodge, No. 1109, I. O. O. F., of which he is a past grand. He is an active member of the Lutheran Church, and has served since 1892 as treasurer of his church. He is a Democrat in political sentiment.

Dr. Fegley married Sarah Koch, daughter of the late Tobias Koch, who was a retired farmer of Gilbertsville, Montgomery county, and six children have been born to this union, four of whom are deceased. The survivors are Sallie and Walton. Walton, who is engaged as knitter at Dr. L. K. Francis & Son's Knitting Mills, married Lila Haas.

MORTON L. MONTGOMERY, the compiler of this history, was born at Reading Nov. 10, 1846. He was educated in the common schools till 1863, having spent the last three years in the High School; and, being inclined to mathematics and drafting, he then entered the office of Daniel S. Zacharias, county surveyor of Berks county and city engineer of Reading, for the purpose of learning practical surveying and civil engineering. He continued in this office eight months, when he went to Pottsville, Schuylkill county, at the request of Mr. Zacharias, to enter a larger field for the prosecution of his studies, and he was there employed as draftsman, civil and topographical engineer, who was constantly engaged in important work for prominent coal operators. After remaining with Mr. Hoffman the greater part of two years, he returned to Reading, and entered the office of Jacob S. Livingood, Esq., as a student-at-law. He spent the required term of three years with Mr. Livingood, and besides prosecuting his legal studies looked after his professional practice, the labors of which consisted in the preparation of cases, arguments, proceedings in partition, conveyancing, etc. After traveling for a time in the fall of 1890 through the Middle and Eastern States, he entered the Law Department of Harvard University and remained there two terms. Upon returning to Reading, he spent a short time in the office of Samuel L. Young, Esq., in order to comply with the new rules of court which had been adopted during his absence and required the last year of study to be passed in a lawyer's office. He was admitted to the Bar on Aug. 28, 1871, since which time he has been in active practice at Reading.

Shortly after his admission to the Bar, he became interested in the history of the county, and, after he had collected a considerable material relating to the early settlements and formation of the townships, and the development of all the districts of the county, he determined to publish the "History of Berks County." In the course of his investigations he contributed a number of historical articles to the press, and in 1836 published the first volume of Hand-Book of Berks County, Pa." In 1836, he issued a prospectus, announcing his proposed publication of the "History of Reading," but finding soon afterward, in the course of his undertaking, that the practice of law and the labors of an author and publisher could not be conducted together successfully, he entered into a contract with Messrs. Peck & Richards, publishers of histories, etc., at Philadelphia, for the publication of the "History of Berks County" in one large octavo volume, to comprise all the history of the entire county, and thereby conclude his undertaking more speedily and satisfactorily, and the publishers named issued the work (comprising 1,250 pages) in 1836. The labor of Mr. Montgomery in behalf of this history was necessarily arduous during a period of ten years, he having carried on his investigations and researches without any assistance, visited many places, traveled throughout the county repeatedly, and examined county records, newspaper files, and libraries here and elsewhere, besides looking after his increasing legal practice.

In 1889, Mr. Montgomery published a "School History of Berks County" (pp. 300) for use in the local schools, and the book having received the indorsement of the leading educators in the county, it was adopted and introduced in all the districts. At a number of county institutes, it was earnestly recommended. It was the first book of the kind published in the United States, and Mr. Montgomery received much commendation from prominent educators and school journals in all parts of the country for his enterprise and zeal in behalf of encouraging the study of local history in connection with national and general history.

Shortly after this school history had made its appearance, he began to deliver lectures on the "Life and Times of Conrad Weiser, the First Representative Man of Berks County," and on the "Revolutions of Berks County," in all parts of the county before local teachers' institutes at the request of the county superintendents, and he continued these lectures successfully until 1895, when, under the auspices of the Reading Board of Trade, he published the former in a pamphlet of 40 pages, and 3,500 copies of this pamphlet were distributed gratuitously among all the schools in the city and county for the purpose of securing a suitable memorial to Conrad Weiser.

In 1894, he published a volume of 300 pages, entitled "Berks County in the Revolution," and this was also the first book of the kind issued to show what a participating county in the Revolution had done in behalf of independent representative government. These three publications are in the leading libraries of the country from Boston to San Francisco, which evidences their popularity. About this time, he also compiled the "Centennial History of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M.," a volume of 230 pages, which was presented by the Lodge to the members as a suitable memento of the occasion.

In 1898, the Sesqui-Centennial of the founding of Reading was properly celebrated under the auspices of the Board of Trade, and the executive committee having employed Mr. Montgomery to compile and publish a suitable book in connection of the event, he issued a superior work of 300 pages, which was highly appreciated for its conciseness and comprehensiveness.

After the lapse of more than twenty years, numerous persons, who appreciated the necessity of having the history of the county published again, embracing all the important events which have occurred since, suggested to Mr. Montgomery that he should resume his "History of Berks County." Agreeing that such a revised history would be acceptable to the public, he accordingly made the arrangements with Messrs. J. H. Beers & Co., publishers of histories, at Chicago, Ill., for its compilation under the title "Biographical and Historical Annals of Berks County," and this large and comprehensive work is the result of his labor in that behalf.

Mr. Montgomery's father, John Leonard Montgomery, was born in Northumberland county, near Sunbury, in 1813, and moved to Reading in 1841, where he was engaged in the hardware business for twenty-five years, and then conducted the flour business for a number of years, after which he lived in retirement, until his decease, in 1880. He was married to Catharine Rush, of Reading, daughter of Philip Rush, by whom he had five children: Jonas (married to Mary Remlinger); Morton Luther; Mary Elizabeth; Sarah, and John, the last two dying in early girlhood. His mother, Sarah Rush, was born in 1815, and her parents were Philip and Sarah Rush, who raised at Reading the second company of volunteers in the Revolution, which was engaged in active service, more especially at the Battle of Long Island, on Aug. 27, 1776. She died in 1853, aged sixty-seven years. They had three sons and four daughters, including Catharine, above mentioned. Before his marriage Mr. Montgomery was intermarried by marriage with all the prominent families of Cumru, Heidelberg and Robeson townships.

His mother's ancestors on the father's side were residents of Reading from the founding of the town in 1751. His great-grandfather, Michael Rosch, was born at Remmingsheim, near Worms, in 1773, and emigrated to Pennsylvania from Rotterdam, on the ship "Duke of Wurttemberg," having qualified Oct. 10th. He was accompanied by his wife, two sons (Michael and Stephen) and four daughters. Immediately after landing at Philadelphia, he proceeded to Reading, and there purchased a lot (No. 169, on south side of Penn street, below Tenth) which he improved by the erection of a dwelling-house under the conditions of purchase, and obtained his patent in 1753. He lived on these premises until he died in 1796. In 1767 he also secured by patent the adjoining lot on the corner (No. 192). His wife was Catharine Fischer, daughter of John Fischer, of Remmingsheim. She died at Reading in 1775, aged seventy-one years. Their six children survived them. He and his descendants have been members of Trinity Lutheran Church at Reading since its establishment in 1751.

His grandfather was the second son, Stephen Rosch. He was born in 1749 at Remmingsheim. He learned the trade of cooper at Reading, which he followed until his decease in 1816. In his last will, dated 1815, he still signed his name Rosch, in German. In 1770 he married Magdalena Gittman, daughter of John Gittleman, who lived in Berks county beyond the Blue Mountains and was there engaged in farming. She died in 1828, aged seventy-eight years. They had three sons (Stephen, John and Philip) and two daughters.

Mr. Montgomery married Florence Baugh Bush, daughter of Mr. Andrew Baugh, his wife, Mary Price Baugh, of East Coventry, Chester county, and they have a daughter, Florence Baugh, married to Joshua Brooke Lessig, banker and iron manufacturer of Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Bush was born at Philadelphia in 1805, studied medicine and was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1832. After spending two years for a year, he began an introductory practice of medicine at Philadelphia, and continued in that place until the death of his father in 1836, where he located in East Coventry township, Chester county, and there carried on an active practice for twenty-five years. He then directed his attention to the active practice of the county, and he died in the midst of his profession.
was an accomplished linguist, speaking the German, French, Spanish and Italian languages, and was also a fine Greek and Latin scholar, keeping up his interest in these languages until he died.

Dr. Bush's father, Andrew Daniel Michael Busch, was born Dec. 6, 1769, at Wandel, in Rheinland, Prussia, near Dusseldorf, and was thoroughly educated in the University of Berlin. After his graduation he emigrated to Pennsylvania, locating at Philadelphia, where he became extensively engaged in the wholesale shoe business, and he followed this business successfully for nearly forty years. For a considerable period before and after 1800, his philanthropic spirit in behalf of immigrating Germans, who landed at Philadelphia, gave him much distinction. He died in 1836. Dr. Bush was his only child.

Dr. Bush's wife, Mary Price Baugh, was a lineal descendant of John Sebastian Bach, of Eisenach, Saxony, who came to Pennsylvania in 1730. Her father was John Baugh, born in 1763, who was also a lineal descendant of Rev. Jacob Preiss, who emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1719.

MILTON H. De LONG, a member of the furniture and undertaking firm of T. & M. H. De Long, at Topton, died at his home in that town Feb. 20, 1892, at the age of forty-seven years, one of the most highly esteemed and substantial citizens of his community. He was born in Rockland township, Sept. 6, 1845, son of David D. and Catherine (Haas) De Long.

David De Long, though born in Upper Macungie township, Lehigh county, passed the greater part of his life in Longswamp township, Berks county, where he followed the trade of weaver, buying and selling carpets, and he also engaged in farming. He was frugal and industrious, and his business prospered by his industry. By his wife, Catherine Haas, who was born in Longswamp township, he became the father of the following family: (1) David died at the age of twenty-eight years. (2) Henry, born Dec. 18, 1838, clerked in a store at Hancock; he m. Adelaide Fenstermacher. (3) Milton H. is mentioned below. (4) Mary, born Dec. 18, 1827, was employed in a furniture business at Topton; she m. Angelina Fenstermacher. (5) Alvin H., a hotel proprietor in Longswamp township, m. Catherine Zondt. (6) Sally Ann died aged two years. The father died Sept. 6, 1869, and the mother Nov. 28, 1877.

Milton H. De Long was given an excellent education, completing his literary training in Collegeville Seminary. His first venture into the mercantile world was when he and Jacob Steininger had a store in partnership at Bowers Station. He next was for a number of years employed as a clerk in the marble yard of Schweyer & Leiss, at Bower's Station. From there he went to Bridgeport, where he was similarly employed for a year and a half. Returning to Topton he and his brother Tilghman opened the furniture and undertaking business in which they were successfully engaged when Milton H. died. He had a high reputation for business integrity and in his private life as well as in the business world so ordered his actions that at his death it could be truthfully said that "No better man lived in Topton."

Mr. De Long was twice married. On Sept. 23, 1809, he wedded Catherine Kaiser, of Longswamp township. This union issued no issue, and Mrs. De Long passed away Dec. 6, 1871. On March 23, 1857, he married Louisa E. Knoske, who was born in Reading, March 2, 1858, daughter of Capt. Edward and Catherine (Bower) Knoske. To this union was born a daughter, Kate Eula, April 26, 1882, who graduated from the 5th grade at Wiltse Normal School, Kutztown, in 1900, and taught school one term at Morganville, and two terms at Leesport, and who married, Sept. 15, 1903, Dr. Oscar F. Kunkel, of Albany, and has two children, Alton De Long and Lester De Long. At his time of death Milton H. De Long was serving as director of the poor, having been elected to that office only a few months prior to his death. He was also elected as the borough of Topton as president of the school board.

KNOESE. The Knose family, to which Mrs. Milton H. De Long belongs, had its early home in Germany. Johann Heinrich Knose was born at Herrenstadt, near Breslau, Prussia. He married Rosina Trautschen, and both died in their native land. Johann Heinrich and Rosina had two children, who were: (first) Maria, who married (second) July 1, 1766, Elizabeth Koch, daughter of William and Margaret (Neufanger) Koch, of Schuykill county, and their married life covered a period of more than half a century. He died Sept. 24, 1859, and his wife, Elizabeth, born Sept. 1, 1782, died Feb. 16, 1868. They had a family of four sons and five daughters, namely: Wilhelmina, David Hottenstein: Louisa m. John Trago; Elizabeth m. Benjamin Miller; Maria m. Skiles Trago; William: Capt. Edward; Charles; and two died young. Mr. Knose made his home in Kutztown from 1811 to 1856, in the latter year locating in Reading where he was at the time of his death. He was an eloquent minister of the Gospel, and did much for the spread of Christianity in his section.

Capt. Edward Knose, son of Rev. Johann, was a well-known citizen of Berks county and an honored veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Kutztown, and there learned the tailor's trade. For some time he clerked in a store in Reading, and then located at Bower's Station in Maxatawny township. While there he brought the first car load of hard coal ever shipped to that town. He was prominent at the time of the Civil war, being a lieutenant in the Ringgold Light Artillery (to which he belonged for nine years), his commission being dated Feb. 26, 1861. On May 9, 1861, he enlisted for two years in Company D, 4th N.Y. V. I., and was discharged May 5, 1863. He re-enlisted in December, 1863, at New York, as a private to serve three years in Company G, 3th N.Y. V. Artillery, and was transferred to Company A, Jan. 6, 1864. He was a private in that company until his promotion to second lieutenant, July 10, 1864, and discharged Feb. 18, 1865, resigning his second lieutenant. He was made captain May 29, 1865, at Harper's Ferry, Va. At the battle of Antietam a bullet passed through his hat, and grazed his skull, necessitating his removal to a hospital. The hat is still in the possession of the family.

Mr. Knose married Catharine Bower, daughter of Jonas Bower, and she was born in 1821, and he died in 1806; they had six children: Catherine, m. to Capt. Edward Knose; Elizabeth, m. to James Wissman; Aaron, born April 25, 1828, and died Feb. 21, 1905.

HARRY DRY SCHAEFFER, district attorney of Berks county, was born Nov. 14, 1873, on the old Dry homestead in Rockland township, Berks county, and belongs to the family which has been identified with the affairs of the county for several generations. His grandfather, Jonathan Schaeffer, was a well-to-do farmer of Richmond township.

George B. Schaeffer, father of Harry Dry Schaeffer, was long engaged in the coal, lumber and iron ore business in Fleetwood, this county. After serving some time as deputy sheriff, under Sheriff Kemp, he was elected to the office of sheriff, in which he served with fidelity some three years, from 1887 until 1890. He is now living retired in Fleetwood. He married Mary Anna, daughter of Benjamin E. Dry, formerly of Rockland township, this county. Mr. Dry died about two years ago, at the age of eighty-seven, while living in the City of Reading. The Drys are remarkable for their longevity, and Mr. Dry's sister, who was buried in September, 1906, reached the advanced age of ninety-six years. Mr. Dry was a merchant at Dryville, Rockland township, and for years was one of the leading business men of that place. He lived a most useful and active life, having served his county in the Legislature and as registrar of wills, and was justice of the peace of Rockland township for over twenty-five years. Mr. and Mrs. George B. Schaeffer had a family of eight children, as follows: Wester and Llewellyn, coal and lumber dealers at Fleetwood, doing business under the firm name of Schaeffer, Wanner & Co.; Warren, at school; Kate and Sue, at home; Minnie, m. to Dr. Fred Kelchner, of Philadelphia; Rosa, wife of Dr. George S. Bleiler; and Harry Dry.

Harry D. Schaeffer attended the public schools of Fleetwood and later the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, where he was graduated in 1891. He then took a course at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., and was graduated in 1895. Mr. Schaeffer matriculated at the University of Pennsylvania as a law student, and after a year at that institution began reading law in the office of D. Nicholas Schaeffer. He was admitted to the Bar in 1899, since which time he has been engaged in the active practice of his profession in Reading. Under the firm name of Dunn & Schaeffer, he formed a partnership with Harry J. Dunn, former clerk of Quarter Sessions. Mr. Schaeffer was appointed assistant district attorney in 1902, and served in that capacity for the three years under District Attorney Kutz. In 1907 he was elected as district attorney and is filling that office at present.

On April 17, 1901, Mr. Schaeffer was married to Miss Annie R. Wanner, daughter of the late Louis A. Wanner, who was a member of the firm of Schaeffer, Wanner & Co., of Fleetwood. One son, George Wanner Schaeffer, has come to cheer their home. Mr. Schaeffer is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Kutztown Lodge, No. 377. He also belongs to the Reformed Church.

HENRY MAY KEIM was born of a family which has been prominently connected with the city of Reading and county of Berks since the time of the earliest settlements therein. His father was Gen. George May Keim, who represented his district in Congress and died at the beginning of the Civil war while preparing to leave with his troops for the front. His grandfather was Gen. George de Benneville Keim, who was born during the war of the Revolution and was in the military service during the Whiskey Insurrection. His great-grandfather was John Keim, who was one of the leading merchants of Reading, where he amassed a considerable fortune. His great-great-grandfather was Michael Keim, who was one of the earliest proprietors of the "Old White Store" at Fifth and Penn streets, shortly after it was first established by Conrad Weiser; and his great-great-great-grandfather was John Keim, the elder, who arrived in Pennsylvania shortly after its foundation, and settled in Oley township, Berks county, about 1733.

Henry May Keim was born at Reading, Aug. 16, 1842. He graduated at the Reading high school in 1858, at the head of his class, and he entered the Sophomore class at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., graduating in 1862. Shortly after his graduation he enlisted for service in the Civil war; in Company I, 13th Pennsylvania Militia, and served for some time under Col. MacManus, H. V. 13th P. M. He was mustered out of the service the second time the following year, during Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania, when he was commissioned lieutenant in Company A, 53d Pennsylvania Militia, and received distinguished mention from his adjutant officers. He undertook the study of law in the office of Jacob S. Livingood, Esq., and was admitted to the Bar of Berks county Aug. 7, 1865.

During the years 1874 and 1875 he served as one of the three auditors of the city of Reading. In 1876 he was elected to the Democratic county chairmanship in the county for the first time. Beyond all previous figures, in recognition of his valuable party services and general ability, in 1885 he was appointed by President Cleveland United States consul at Charlotte-town, Prince Edward Island, where he most creditably represented his government and gained the highest respect of the people of that province. On his return from service he was elected president of the Valley Railroad of Ohio, with his offices at Cleveland. The financial troubles of the country occurring about this time having forced the railroad into a receivership, he was appointed one of the receivers, and by his careful management soon succeeded in bringing it out of the receivership and restoring it to prosperity. Upon the completion of his task he returned to Reading in fulfillment of his long-cherished desire to continue his residence here.

Mr. Keim was devotedly attached to the places, people and traditions of his native county, and was foremost in all undertakings deemed for the public welfare. He was a trustee of various important institutions, and was uniting in his exertions in behalf of the sesqui-centennial celebration of the founding of the city and in the movement to liquidate the debt of the Reading Library and to establish it as a free library. He was one of the organizers and original corporators of the Historical Society of Berks county, and from the beginning its corresponding secretary and member of the council. His public spirit, his careful attention to detail, and his zeal in all his undertakings made him a most useful member of society, while his uniform kindness and affability made him a general favorite with all classes and attached his near associates very closely to him.

In 1867 Mr. Keim was married to Miss Emma E. Trexler, daughter of Horatio Trexler, and she survives. He died at his residence in Reading, Feb. 18, 1899. Mr. Keim was a devout member of Christ Protestant Episcopal Church at Reading, long joined in his boiled dinner. When he reached the age of sixty he was elected as a vestryman, and he filled that position for a continuous period of thirty-five years, his services terminating with his decease. His devotion to the Church was so highly appreciated that a tablet was erected to his memory on the south wall of the sanctuary, on which is inscribed the following expression: "A faithful friend—An Earnest Churchman—A sincere Christian." A Bishop of the Church said of him: "He was a perfect type of a Christian gentleman."

DE LONG. The first settler of the De Long family in America was Peter De Long, a French Huguenot, who came to this country in 1732. His son, Henry, the great-grandfather of Tilghman De Long, was born, perhaps, in France.

David De Long, son of Henry, was born in America, Jan. 4, 1770, and died Nov. 12, 1828. He married Barbara Gery, and they had the following children: Daniel m. Catherine Long, of Butler county, Ohio; Benjamin m. Catherine Rohrbach; David; Catherine m. Martin Kersher; Esther m. John Fenstermacher; Susannah m. Jacob Schrader; Mary m. George Rohrbach; and Elizabeth m. Jacob Hass.

Anna J. De Long, daughter of Mrs. De Long, was born July 6, 1815, and died Sept. 6, 1893, at the age of eighty-two years and two months. He married Catherine Haas, who died Nov. 28, 1877, aged sixty-four years, five months, eleven days. They had children as follows: David died aged twenty-six years; Henry, born Dec. 18, 1838, m. Adeline Fenstermacher, and is deceased; Milton H., who married Louisa E. (Kneusk), and they have four children; Emma, who married Charles S., of Philadelphia; and William H., who married Susan W. Tilghman; Alvin H., residing on the old homestead, m. Cather-INE SAUL; and Sally Ann died when two years old. David De Long, the father, carried on farming in Longswamp township, Berks county, through all his active years.

TILGHMAN DE LONG, son of David, was born Aug. 2, 1849, in Rockland township, Berks Co., Pa., and was educated in the public schools as they were in his boyhood. He grew up on the farm, and also worked in the ore mines. When nineteen years of age he apprenticed himself to David Zimmerman, at Monterey, with whom he learned cabinetmaking and undertaking. After serving three years with this man he went to Schrader, Felix & Kline, a well-known firm at that time, now doing business as Reading as Schrader & Kline, and remained there until 1872, when he came to Tipton and embarked in business for himself. Mr. De Long at first worked alone, doing all his manufacturing by hand, but as his business increased he took an apprentice, this being Charles Fenstersmacher, who has continued with him ever since. His skill as a workman and his promptness in filling his contracts soon brought more and more business to Mr. De Long and he added more assistants, two of whom, Jonathan Barto and Lewis Keller, still are of his right-hand men. He began equipping his plant with some machinery that he put up himself first operating it by hand and later by horse-power, and recently he has built a new factory of large dimensions which he has equipped with the latest improved machinery. The year round he gives employment to from fifty to seventy-five men, who are mainly the following manufacturers of Eastern Pennsylvania. His specialty is in the line of bank, hotel, store and church fixtures.

In 1905, Mr. De Long organized the T. De Long Furniture Company, of which he is president and principal stockholder, his sons, Ellwood and Victor, being partners. At the same time he built a large store, which includes the retail furniture and undertaking business at Tipton and Fleetwood, the latter of which is managed by the other son, Irwin D. De Long. Mr. De Long officiated as undertaker at over 2,200 funerals before he delegated the Fleetwood branch of the business to Irwin De Long, Aug. 15, 1898. He is still active, though he employs Mr. Schofer to attend to the Tipton branch of the undertaking business.

On April 4, 1874, Mr. De Long was married to Angelina Fenstersmacher, daughter of Reuben and Polly (Mensch) Fenstersmacher. Her father, now deceased, was long a prominent merchant in this section of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. De Long were born children, as follows: Minnie Renner, born Aug. 3, 1875, died Nov. 7, 1876; Irwin David, born Aug. 7, 1877; Ellwood F., born June 23, 1879; Charles Franklin, born May 29, 1881, died Aug. 22, 1883; Ada Angeline, born Feb. 28, 1885; Reuben D., born Oct. 15, 1889; and had one child, deceased; Victor Wilson, born July 2, 1884, m. Laura Fisher, and has one daughter, Lulu Rachel; Eva Helen, born Oct. 23, 1888, resides at home; and Lulu May, born Nov. 16, 1893, died Dec. 2, 1899.

Mr. De Long is a staunch Democrat and on many occasions has been chosen by his fellow citizens to perform the duties and responsibilities attaching to important offices. He has filled all the minor borough offices, for three years was a director of the poor for Berks county, and at present is serving his second term as a member of the Tipton town council. His good judgment, his business foresight and his liberal charities, make him an ideal citizen. He applies the same principles in looking after the interests of public business as he has always done to his private affairs, by which he has built up from a very small beginning a trade that extends all over the world, shipments of his goods having been made to all parts of the United States and Canada, and some to Europe.

ELWOOD F. DE LONG, vice-president of the T. De Long Furniture Company, was born and reared at Tipton, where he first attended school. Later he became a student at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, and afterward attended the Drexel Institute of Art, Science and Industry. For a long time he filled the position of designer for the large furniture factory and now is sales manager for the firm. He married Minnie Christ and they have one son, Karl Christ. He belongs to Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M., Kutztown; and to Camp No. 172, P. O. S. of A., of A., Kutztown. He was a member of Camp No. 172, P. O. S. of A., and Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M., Kutztown. He belongs to the Reformed Church.

IRWIN DAVID DE LONG, manager of the Fleetwood branch of De Long, Son & Co., dealers in furniture and house furnishings of all descriptions at Tipton and Fleetwood, was born at Tipton, Aug. 7, 1877. His education was acquired in the borough schools, and the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. In the spring of 1895 he entered Schissler’s College of Business at Norrisburg, N.Y., and completed the course there in October following. In the spring of 1897 he entered the Massachusetts College of Embalming, and graduated therefrom June 25, 1897, later taking a post-graduate course, which he completed Nov. 13, 1898. He also took a post-graduate course in the Philadelphia Training School for Embalmers, completing the course there in October following. On Feb. 15, 1906, the firm of De Long, Son & Co., was formed by the following: Tilmahn De Long, Irwin D. De Long, and Jacob J. Schofer. They carry a very large stock of furniture and, in fact, all house furnishings, and operate stores at Tipton and Fleetwood. The senior member of the firm, Mr. Tilmahn De Long, is one of the most highly respected men in the county, and has the largest trade of any undertaker in Berks county outside of Reading.

Socially Mr. Irwin D. De Long is a member of Camp No. 172, P. O. S. of A., of Tipton; Orion Castle, No. 501, K. G. E., Tipton; Willow Valley Lodge, K. P., Fleetwood; Kutztown Aerie, No. 336, F. O. E.; Fleetwood Castle Co., No. 39; O. K. M. C.; Yutira Tribe, I. O. R. M.; Arabian Degree Kean; Bizzards Association, and Haymakers. He is a member of the Fleetwood Reformed Church, while his wife belongs to the Lutheran Church.

On June 14, 1900, Mr. De Long was married to Katharine H. Drey, daughter of George L. and Katharine (Fish) Drey of Bowlers. They have one daughter, Janice Ethel. Mrs. De Long greatly assists her husband in the undertaking business.

JOHN J. KUTZ, lawyer of Reading, is descended from an old and honorable German family which has left its impress on the institutions of the county. He was born in Reading, Jan. 16, 1855.

Jacob, John, Adam, John, Adam, John, thus run the Christian names of the Kutz family from the great-great-great-grandfather to the present generation. Jacob and the first John were leading farmers of Berks county before the days of the Revolution, while the first Adam moved into the village of Reading and began the manufacture of hats, being, together with Samuel and John (also the great-grandfather of Mr. Kutz), pioneers of that industry in the country, a business which the grandfather also carried on, as did the father of our subject, Adam Kutz, a member of the firm of Kutz, Arnold & Co., until the date of his death, in 1876. He married Mary R. Seidel, daughter of Jacob Seidel, a retired farmer of Chester county, John J. Kutz was born in Reading and is a product of her institutions so far as his primary training is concerned. He later attended Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., where he graduated in 1884, Matriculating then at Yale University, he took his literary degree in 1889, and then he received his degree of Bachelor of Law from the graduate department of that University. He continued his study in the office of Cyrus G. Derr, and in 1890 was admitted to the Bar of Berks County. Since that time he has been engaged in the practice of law, and in addition is interested in financial and industrial lines. He is a director of the Union Bank, in Reading, a director of the Pennsylvania Trust Company, a director of the Reading Gas Company, vice-president of the Mt. Penn Stove Works, and president of the Columbian Cutlery Company.

Mr. Kutz was the candidate of the Republican party for district attorney in 1895. He is a member of the Wyoming, Berkshire and Tuesday Clubs, and a member of the Lutheran denomination.

Mr. Kutz was married to Mary McIlvain, Jan. 26, 1898. Mrs. Kutz is the daughter of the late Morton C. McIlvain, an iron-master of Reading, who married Sidney H. Leoser, and on both sides of the family comes of stock. On the maternal side, Michael Hillegass, was the first treasurer of the United States. On her father’s side she was the great-granddaughter of John Morton, who was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and was in the Congress of the United States during the Revolutionary War. Her great-grandfather, Thomas S. Leoser, was a distinguished veteran of the Mexican war, having been captain of what was familiarly known as the Reading Artillers. Three of Mr. Kutz’s uncles were in the war of the Rebellion, Lieut. Howard McIlvain, Capt. Charles McKnight Leoser and Lieut. Christopher Leoser.

James A. Schofer, a prominent representative of the business life of Reading, located at No. 108 South Fifth street, is proprietor of that well-known establishment on South Fifth street—Schofer’s Bakery. He was born Dec. 30, 1838, in Exeter township, Berks county, son of Christopher H. Schofer (who is mentioned elsewhere).

James A. Schofer obtained a portion of his education in the common schools of Exeter township, association with the world through many years of activity in business completing it. His first work was the driving of a bakery wagon, attending to the weekly stock of goods. His attention was continued in this work until he was twenty-eight years old. Wishing to perfect himself in the bakery business he went to Philadelphia and completed his trade under J. A. Moss, who had been chief steward at the “Continental Hotel” for fifteen years.

After learning all that this competent instructor could teach him, Mr. Schofer returned to Reading and entered his father’s bakery establishment, remaining there until 1885. Then, in company with William Miller, he engaged in the baking business on Douglass street, between Ninth and Tenth, remaining three years, at the end of which time he sold out to his partner and returned to his father’s employ. Here he remained until 1894, when he started again on his own account, at his present quarters. From a small beginning, Mr. Schofer has built up a fine trade and he has one of the most complete plants in that part of the State, equipped with every known device for modern baking. It is located at Nos. 108-109, South Fifth street, a brick structure of pleasing architecture, 48 x 230 feet in dimensions, and it is interesting to note the space given to the various departments in an up-to-date sanitary plant of this kind. The sales room and office contain 870 square feet; supply room, 420 square feet; first-floor bakery shop, 1,096 square feet; second-floor bakery shop, 800 square feet; first-floor bread room, 1,349 square feet; second-floor flour room, 1,349 square feet; sifter and blender room, 2,444 square feet. The rear building is four stories high and each floor contains 4,000 square feet. There is nothing in the line of plain or fancy baking that this modern baker cannot accomplish, while fancy baking and choice confections of every kind, for entertainments on any scale, for weddings and social functions, come entirely in the line of Mr. Schofer’s capacity. He has a large order of work from the most experienced workmen, uses seventeen horses and keeps his delivery wagons out constantly. He has eight persons for office work, a telephone girl, and everything found in a metropolitan establishment of this kind. It is a credit to Reading.

In 1888 Mr. Schofer married Ella C. Kline, a daughter of Elam and Catherine Kline, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Schofer have had the following children: Robert R., who is manager of his father’s store; Henry H., deceased; James F., a clerk in the establishment; Mabel A., a pupil in the Reading high school; Edward K. and Charles. In September, 1905, Edward K. of the above family, was accidentally killed while delivering goods to the “Mansion House,” Reading. He belonged to the class of 1908, Reading high school, was particularly bright and was a great favorite with his classmates. His death was a terrible blow to his parents. The family belong to St. Luke’s Lutheran Church, where Mr. Schofer has been superintendent of the Sunday-school for seventeen years.

Mr. Schofer has been eminently the architect of his own fortunes and his success but points the way for others to follow persistently the path of industry and economy in youth. In politics Mr. Schofer is a Democrat, although he has never cared for political offices.

J. Allixon Orr, one of Reading’s representative business men, superintendent of the Mt. Penn Stove Works for twenty-five years, and for thirteen years a partner in the Reading Radiator Company, of which he later was president, held a position of recognized influence in the industrial circles of the city. Mr. Orr was born March 9, 1845, near Chester Springs, Chester Co., Pa., son of William and Margaret (White) Orr, and grandson of Robert Orr, and he died Oct. 1, 1907.

Robert Orr was born in Ireland, and was brought to America in childhood. His parents located near Yellow Springs, and there after reaching manhood he engaged in farming. He died in 1853. For many years he was sexton of the Vincent Baptist Church. His five children were: William, George, John, Jesse and Mrs. Catherine Sturgis. William Orr was a shoemaker by trade, but later he became superintendent of an ore quarry. The latter years of his life he devoted to farming. He became a man of some substance, and lived to the age of seventy-eight years. His wife, Margaret, died aged seventy-four years. They had three sons: John W., of the Mount Penn Stove Works; Jesse, deceased; and J. Allixon. In religious belief, the parents were Baptists. The father was a Democrat.

J. Allixon Orr was afforded better educational advantages than were many of the youths of his day. He attended Franklin Hall and Elkland Seminary, both excellent schools. After completing his education he became a clerk in a general store in Chester, remaining six years. In 1868 he came to Reading as a stovemounter for Orr, Painter & Co., but twelve years later he went to Philadelphia, where he purchased a milk route, which he carried on for two years, returning to Reading at the end of that time. He then accepted his late responsible position with the Mount Penn Stove Works where he had charge of 130 workmen.

On Dec. 31, 1868, Mr. Orr married Cassie R. Saylor, and they had six children, three still living, as follows: Jesse, chief shipping clerk for the Mount Penn Stove Works, m. Katharine Goodhart; Bertha is at home; and Edwin was a student in the Electrical Department of the Pennsylvania State College. The home of the family is at No. 40 North Third street. Mr. Orr was a member of the Royal Arcanum. In politics he was a Republican.
EDWARD S. KREMP, lawyer, Reading, comes from an ancestry which had its origin in Alsace-Lorraine, several generations of the family having resided in Saar-Union, while under the jurisdiction of France, of which municipality his great-grandfather, John Kremp, of Griffiths, Berks Co., Pa. (March 12, 1747, died Feb. 26, 1836), was Mayor from 1810 to 1819.

Xavier Kremp, grandfather of Edward S., was born April 13, 1791, and was for a number of years municipal clerk of Saar-Union.

Dominic Kremp, son of Xavier, born June 18, 1832, came to Reading in June, 1850, taking up his residence in Reading, Berks Co., Pa. He dealt for many years in real estate but is now living retired. His wife was Matilda Leitham, daughter of Martin Leitham, a prominent farmer of Bally, Berks county. To them were born three children: Mary E., Anna A., and Edward S.

Edward S. Kremp is a native of Reading, born Nov. 16, 1865. His early educational training was gained in the public schools of the city, and he later attended St. Vincent's College, at Latrobe, Pa., where he graduated with honors in 1886. Beginning the study of law in the office of Cyrus G. Derr, of Reading, he was admitted to the bar in November, 1889, and has since continued to practice.

Mr. Kremp married, in 1890, Miss Elsie Boas, who comes from distinguished ancestry, being the daughter of Capt. E. P. Boas and Elizabeth Kupp, the latter the daughter of Major Henry S. Kupp, of Birdsboro, Berks county, a man almost from birth a military man, who having sold his farm in 1879, enlisted in the war of the Rebellion. Her mother, Rebecca (Morgan) Kupp, was a daughter of Colonel Morgan, the founder of Morgantown, Berks county, and the line here runs back to the Morgans of Revolutionary fame. To Mr. and Mrs. Kremp has been born one daughter, Augusta.

Mr. Kremp at one time owned the beautiful country seat known as "Ravenswood" in the suburbs, which was built by him, and he is the author of "Caws from Ravenswood," a booklet of poems which appeared in December, 1895, and which two months thereafter was translated into German by Professor Wilhelm Hartmann.

F. J. KANTNER, M. D., a well-known physician, of Reading, Pa., where he has been successfully engaged in his profession since 1888, is one of the leading citizens of the city. He was born Sept. 12, 1852, in Penn township, Berks county, son of Joel and Elizabeth (Leib) Kanten.

Thomas Kanten, grandfather of the Doctor, was born in Tulpehocken township, Berks county, in 1790. He became a prominent and well-to-do farmer, and he also operated an old-time apple-jack distillery, accumulating a comfortable competency. He died in 1859, and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Catherine Heister, was born in 1792, and died in 1878. They were the parents of the following children: Lydia m. John Zerby; Isaac m. Maria m. Jacob Spangler; Margaret m. Isaac Krull; Joel; Levi D.; Ada m. Hannah M. Bennewitl Deiger; Zeth; Elizabeth; Israel; and Augustus. In religious belief the family were all members of the Reformed Church, and in political matters they were Democrats.

Joel Kantner, son of Thomas, received his education in the common schools of Upper Tulpehocken township, and early in life he became interested in working in wood. He was a skilled and ingenious mechanic, and there was hardly anything in the line of wood or iron work that he was unable to make or repair. He built many church pipe organs in his locality, some of which are in use at the present time, and he also manufactured melodions. In addition to the above, Mr. operated a small farm. He was a member of the Reformed Church, and supported it liberally to the extent of his ability to do so, and he died in its faith in April, 1888, aged sixty-six years. His first wife died in 1859, aged thirty years. He married (second) Leah Miller. His four children were all born to the first union, and were: Washington, of Reading; Dr. J.; William T. of Reading; and Levi, who died aged forty years. In politics Mr. Kantner was a staunch Democrat.

Dr. F. J. Kantner's early education was secured in the schools of Penn township, and he later attended Stoubsburg Academy, subsequently teaching school for one term each in District and Jefferson townships, and later he attended the Womelsdorf Academy for two terms under Professor Grumbine, teaching a sewing machine and musical instrument business, but afterward returned to the old home where he remained about one year. At the end of that time Mr. Kantner moved to Bernville, remaining there until 1877, when he came to Reading and accepted a position with C. M. Maxwel, selling pianos and organs, later engaging on his own account at No. 317 Penn street in the same business. Mr. Kantner took up the manufacture of reed organs on a large scale, but finding competition too great, he sold out his business to take up the study of medicine, having previously read medicine with a view to entering the profession, but abandoning the idea on account of lack of funds with which to pursue his studies. He entered Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia in 1885, and was graduated therefrom in 1888, with the degree of M. D., at once opening offices in Reading, where he has since been engaged in a lucrative practice.

1878 Dr. Kantner married Mary C. Zellar, of Marion township, Berks county. Four children have been born to this union: Laura L., a teacher in the public schools of Reading; Harry H., an attorney-at-law; Mary A., wife of Dr. Stryker; and Lottie, at home. Dr. Kantner is a loyal Democrat in politics, and was elected coroner of Berks county for one term.

CALVIN KLINE WHITNER, president of the Farmers' National Bank of Reading and founder of the mercantile business of C. K. Whitner & Co., at Reading, Pa., who has become known throughout Berks and surrounding counties as one of its leading merchants, was born in 1841, in the southern part of Oley township, son of George and Christiana (Kline) Whitner.

Rev. John George Wittner, of Bellheim, Germany, the great-grandfather of Calvin K., was born in 1735, educated at the University of Heidelberg, and in 1766 was sent by the Holland Deputies as a missionary to America, landing at New York in the fall of that year. He was a son of Rev. Abraham Wittner, a Protestant minister in Germany from 1734 to 1743, and subsequently a councillor to the Consistory at Heidelberg.

Mr. Calvin Wittner, his grandfather, was born in 1773, in Ulster, Milford the county of Ulster, New York, and subsequently removed to Northumberland county, in the vicinity of Zionsville. He was brought up to farming and about 1800 located in Albany township, Berks county, where he carried on farming until 1810, when he removed to Columbia county, and there engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death in 1854, at the age of eighty-three years.

Mr. Wittner was married to Miss Sarah Brim, and she bore him an only child, George, born Aug. 3, 1800, the father of Calvin K.; and by his second marriage he had eleven children.

George Whitner, his father, was a farmer near the "Yellow House" in Oley for many years. He died Jan. 13, 1809, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. He was an earnest advocate of the common school system, against much local prejudice, and his influence assisted in its adoption by Oley township in 1850. He having been a great admirer of Hon. Thaddeus Stevens, who was the champion of the cause of public schools before the people and the State Legislature. During this period, about 1845, the spelling of the family name was changed from Wittner to Whitner. He married Christiana Kline (born Dec. 2, 1804, died Dec. 10, 1872), daughter of David Kline, of Amity township, and a lineal descendant of Elder Zillah, who was born in Germany in 1718, emigrated to New Jersey in 1747, and settled at Smith's Orth, Berks county, about 1750, where, as one of the "Breaden" or "Dunkards," he preached the Gospel for upward of twenty years. They had eight children: David, Rebecca, Abraham, Hiram, George, Samuel, Sarah and Calvin, of whom the only survivors are Hiram and Calvin. The first two children, David and Rebecca, died whilst young, and Sarah at the age of nineteen years. Abraham became a banker at Pottsville, having been connected with the Miners' Bank for many years. Hiram served as a teacher in the public schools in Berks county; became a graduated physician of Jefferson Medical College and practised in Berks and Schuylkill counties; served as a surgeon in the Civil war; then located at Chicago, Ill., where he invented and introduced "The Whitner's Patent Safety Device for facilitating the work of and protecting window cleaners of large public buildings, which has come to be extensively used in all the principal cities throughout the United States. George served as postmaster of Reading from 1881 to 1885. Samuel served in the Civil war with the Ringgold Light Artillery as Captain of Fifty-Fifth Artillery, and as quartermaster-sergeant from 1863 to the close of the war.

Calvin K. Whitner received his education in the township schools, and worked on his father's farm until nineteen years of age, when he entered the country store of Spang & Son, at Spangsville, situated about a mile north from the farm, which had quite an extensive trade on account of the "Spang Forge" at the Manatawney creek near by. He remained here about a year, when he became clerk for Isaac Plank in his general store at the "Half Way House," eight miles north of Reading, on the Lebanon Road. After having laboured faithfully for three years, he became ambitious to conduct a store of his own, and feeling qualified to do so established himself at Friedensburg, in Oley township; but after carrying it on for two years he decided to go into a larger field, with greater opportunities for success, and, disposing of his store stock, went to Reading in 1868.

After looking over the business situation at the county seat for a short while, and determining to follow a mercantile life there as his chosen vocation, he found employment in the large and prosperous establishment of Hiram & Ephraim Whitner on Penn Square, in order to become thoroughly acquainted with the manner of conducting business in a growing city, which was different from that in the country. He continued with this firm until the spring of 1877. With this preparation, and appreciating the great resolution necessary to embark at that trying time in business for himself, he opened a dry goods store with a single department and six salesmen at No. 432 Penn Square, in a room 20 feet wide and 90 feet deep. Here he persevered with a constantly increasing trade for six years, when his quarters were found to be altogether too small, and, being obliged to secure a larger place to accommodate the increasing demand, he was enabled to obtain the opportunity being then afforded, he secured just such a place as he needed in the immediate vicinity, a few doors to the east, on the same side of Penn Square, at Nos. 442 and 444. In the spring of 1883, he removed to the new quarters, with a floor space increased to nearly four thousand square feet (the room being 30x120 feet), and started with ten departments and twelve salespeople. His announcement of a "Grand Opening on March 17th" was greeted with a flattering recognition by the public. His course of dealing was found to be straightforward and satisfactory, that notwithstanding his efforts to meet the demands of his customers, he was not overcharged; in 1891 he enlarged the room, added four new departments, and increased the number of salespeople to forty.

In 1898, he purchased the adjoining property to the west, when he remodelled and extended the whole interior, in order to cover a space of 49,000 square feet, developed the departments to thirty-one; and increased the salespeople to 215, or over five times the number in 1891. Since then, the departments have been somewhat changed and consolidated, so that now they number twenty-eight, but the salespeople have been increased from time to time, to the number of ten, to his "Daylight Store" not only from all parts of the city, but also from many places in the surrounding counties. The brightness, cheerfulness and cleanliness of his establishment are not exceeded anywhere. The details of his business have been gradually developed to a high state of perfection, even to drilling his employees to the tap of a bell to meet a sudden emergency—such as a panic caused by a real or false alarm of fire. Having been asked to what he attributed his success mainly, he remarked epigrammatically: "From the start of my career as a merchant, I have made my business a constant pleasure for myself as well as for my employes, and not pleasure as a means of profit." In 1889, Mr. Whitner's son, Harry K., was admitted as a partner in the business, and the firm then became C. K. Whitner & Son; but the son's promising career as a superior business man of Reading in the footsteps of his father was cut short by his untimely decease in 1897.

In 1891, the son-in-law, John Rick, was also admitted as a partner.

Notwithstanding his great devotion to the establishment of his business in a thriving community, Mr. Whitner has shown much interest in the religious, social and financial affairs of Reading for many years. He and his family are members of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church, in which he officiated as a vestryman for several years. He is a trustee of the Y. M. C. A.; a director of the Reading Mutual Fire Insurance Company; president and director of the Merchants' Association of Reading.

In the Sesqui-Centennial of Reading, in 1898, he was chairman of the "Historical Committee," which superintended the publications of the great and successful occasion, which was compiled by the author of this revised history of the county.

In 1864, Mr. Whitner married Amelia Knabb, daughter of Daniel D. Knabb, of Oley, and Sarah (Hill) Knabb, his wife, and to this union there were born three children; Charles. Whitner, M. K. (Mrs. Arthur E. Carver of New York), and Charles Harry K. Whitner m. Es- tella Davis (daughter of Charles Davis and Emma Par- ker, his wife), of Reading, and he died in 1891, aged twenty-five years, leaving a son, Harry Davis Whitner. Charles Whitner died in infancy. Mr. Whitner's first wife died in 1879, and in 1876 he married (second marriage) Mary Shalter, daughter of George Shalter, an ironmaster of Cumru township, and Eliza (Kline) Shalter, his wife. There were four children born to this second marriage: George Shalter, who died in 1901, aged twenty-four years, after having shown much promise as a business man in his father's store; Elizabeth S.; Carrie G. (m. John Rick, of Reading, and has one daughter, Mary Elizabeth, and one son, Horace Whitner); and Mary S. Mrs. Whit- ner died June 9, 1909.

Mrs. Whitner's, father, George Shalter, carried on the iron furnace business at the Menhit Penn Furnace in Cumru township, several miles south of Reading, Pa., for a number of years. He died there in 1881, in his eighty-second year, after he had lived for a number of years in retirement. His wife survived him until 1892, dying at the age of seventy-seven years. They were the parents of ten children: Richard m. Hettie Swartz; Isabella m. William M. Kaufman; Sarah m. Cyrus Hun- ter; Emma m. Dr. John Kalbach; Mary m. Calvin K. Whitner; William m. Mary Kurzt; four children died young.

JAMES M. HIGH, a prominent citizen of Amity town- ship, Berks county, was born in Richmond township, this county, Aug. 23, 1846, son of the late Joel and Maria (Merkel) Hoch. He was reared upon his father's farm, and was educated in the common schools, White Hall and Oley Academies and the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. At the age of eighteen years he began teaching in Pottsville, Cumru, and taught five years in one and two summer terms in the select school at Fleetwood.

On Sept. 24, 1869, Mr. High with his family moved to Amity township, where he had purchased the Mount Pleasant Mills from his father-in-law, David Dry. This was then an old style custom mill, but in 1873 Mr. High remodeled it, substituting turbines for the old fashioned water wheels, and changed it to a flour mill. In 1899 he again remodeled it, this time installing a complete roller process, and changing the name to the Amity Roller Mills, under which he is still operating, turning out annually large quantities of flour and feed, for which he finds a ready market. He also has a well cultivated farm of some forty acres in connection with his mill.

Mr. High is a firm believer in Republican principles, and takes an active part in politics. Notwithstanding his party is in the minority he served his township three years as school director, and fifteen years as justice of the peace. Since 1891 he has been a notary public, and was re-appointed only last February (1909). He served three years in the Pennsylvania legislature and for forty years has followed farm surveys, duties which require an intimate acquaintance with the soil of the countris, and to which he has always held the confidence of the community.

In addition to all these many duties, Mr. High is secretary and director of the Yellow House Creamery Association; and a director of the Sinking Spring Fire Insurance Company, of which he has also been president, for thirty years. He moved into the Yellow House from where he can look after his many interests. His son Wilson D. at the same time moved to the mill. Mr. High and his family belong to the Reformed Church, in which for twenty years he held the office of elder.

On Nov. 23, 1867, Mr. High married Amanda Y. Dry, daughter of David Dry, late a prominent farmer of Rockland township. They have had three children, namely: Wilson D., a miller in his father's mill, m. Ellen Herben, daughter of the late Aaron Herben; Maria D. m. Samuel R. Rhoads; and Annie D. m. Edwin H. Schearer, one of the proprietors of the Yellow House.

A. RAYMOND BARD, a member of the firm which makes up the well known business house of Reading, the Bard Hardware Company, was born at Tremont, Pa., in 1873, son of George W. and grandson of Adam Bard. Adam Bard was the founder of and large and important business of the city of Reading. Originally the firm was made up of Adam Bard and James T. Reber, and the location was at No. 741 Penn street. The business was organized in 1856, and continued at the original location until 1875, at which time the firm bought property at Ninth and Penn and Eighth streets. Adam Bard remained a member of the firm until 1875, after which the members of the firm were George W. Bard, D. P. Schlotz, A. F. Kramer and James T. Reber. The latter retired in 1893, and at the same time James M. Bard was admitted to the firm, and in 1897 A. Raymond Bard became a partner.

George W. Bard was born near Ephrata in 1841, but moved to Reading in early childhood. He was a student when he enlisted for service in the Civil War, entering the 83rd Pa. V. I., and for three years he honorably wore the Union, blue. After the war he took his chances as a soldier. He then entered into the hardware business at Tremont, in Schuylkill county, and when his father retired he took his place in the firm of Bard, Reber & Co. The company owns a four-story building which extends from Penn to Cherry streets. Their business is both wholesale and retail, and the house is known for its reliability all over the State. George W. Bard married three times. His first wife received the firm name, and died, leaving three children: Alma, wife of Dr. C. H. Shearer; A. Raymond; Charles W.; Claude M.; George P.; Mary E.; R. Lynn; William D.; and George A. and W. Hugh. Mr. Bard is a director in the Pennsylvania National Bank, a director in the Bankers Agency Co. of Reading (chartered Oct. 12, 1883) of which he was one of the founders. He is also a director in the Reading Trust Company and of the East Reading Electric Railway Company. Mr. Bard and family reside at No. 27 South Ninth street. A. Raymond Bard attended the public schools of Reading and was graduated from the Boys' high school in 1889. He then entered a business house of the capacity of cashier, and spent one year in Philadelphia, connected with the Phoenix Bridge Company. Since he entered the firm of Bard Hardware Company he has been in charge of the office, as well as purchasing agent for cutlery, paints, bolts, etc., and is a competent and shrewd man of business. He is a very popular citizen. During the Spanish-American War he was in the service for nine months, a member of Company A, 173rd Pennsylvania Volunteers, and during five months in Porto Rico, being acting Hospital Steward in the Reserve Medical Corps. He has numerous business connections, one of these being treasurer of the East Reading Electric Railway Company, of Reading. He is superintendent of the Sunday school of Trinity Lutheran Church, and treasurer of the Humane Society of Berks County. For five years he was president of the Luther League of Pennsylvania, and for two years was president of the Reading High School Alumni Association, during which time he founded a Free Scholarship Fund, of which he is treasurer.

DANIEL F. KELCHNER, one of the leading business men of Fleetwood, proprietor of the Fleetwood Creamery, owner of a creamery at Moselem Springs, is a member of a family whose first representative came to Berks county between 1731 and 1741.

Matthias Kelchner was the first to settle in Richmond township, Berks county. Tradition says that four brothers, George, Matthias, Michael and Henry, emigrated between 1731 and 1741. Records show that Hans George Kelchner crossed the ocean on the "Pennsylvania Merchant," landing at Philadelphia in the fall of 1731, and that he and Matthias were brothers. It is probable that these were the same years of age, since his name is not on the passenger list. On the "Pennsylvania Merchant," landing in 1733, was Michael Kelchner, whose brother Henry also came to America. These four settled in eastern Pennsylvania.

Michael Kelchner, son of Matthias, was a taxable in 1759, in Richmond township. He married Maria Eva Frey, whose tombstone bears the following inscription: "Maria Eva Freyin, wife Michael Kelchner, had 4 sons 1 daughter. In 1761 she married Peter Steetzel. With him she had 3 sons. She was married first in 1752. She was born June 24, 1730, died March 14, 1807, aged 76 years. His name was Peter; his wife lived at the north end of Perry township." Three of Michael Kelchner's children were: John m. and had a son, Henry; Jacob m. (first) Magdalena Wanner, and had children—Catharine, Maria Elizabeth and Daniel—and (second) Maria Wanner, and had children—Jacob, Samuel (who had an only son, Isaac), Mary and Hannah. Daniel Michael Kelchner m. Feb. 29, 1779 at Leem Book I. p. 98) and his death occurred soon afterward. He gave to his wife, Maria Eva, one-third of his large estate. His father Matthias and his friend Christian Rothermel were his executors. It is probable that two of his children died young, as one item in his will is as follows: "That the three children shall be sent to church and school diligently, and that they shall be instructed in English and Dutch."

George Kelchner, of Richmond township, on Dec. 13, 1794, made his will as recorded in Will Book B, p. 356, and witnessed by Casper Merkel and John Christ, with Peter Kelchner, son of George, and the latter's wife and executed, and Peter Kelchner received the Richmond township home. The six children were: Peter; Mrs. Jacob Yoh; Henry; John; Jacob; and Esther.

John Kelchner, probably a son of George, lived in Rockland township. He made his will in October, 1836, and it was probated in November of the same year, and recorded in Book C, p. 408, his sons, Benjamin, and Samuel Beard were executors. Leah Lora, daughter of his wife, was remembered in the will.
Jacob Kelchner was born in Richmond township, July 11, 1801. He passed the greater part of his life engaged in farming, being born on a farm and a half miles from Fleetwood. In 1834 he married Anna Sheirer, who was born in Maxataway township. Thirteen children were born of this union, namely: Samuel; Mary; Joel; Edwin; Martin; Jacob; Hannah; Esther; Caroline; Isaac; Charles Augustus; Daniel F.; and Wilson R. The father died April 21, 1861.

Daniel F. Kelchner was born in Richmond township Oct. 6, 1852, and his education was acquired in the public schools of his native township and Keystone State Normal School at Latrobe. He was but seventeen when he began teaching, a profession he continued in for three terms in Richmond and Ruscombmanor townships, and at the end of that time he accepted a clerkship in a general store at Fleetwood. He followed this business for ten years, and then began in the produce business, continuing in same up to the present time. He is also engaged in the operation of the Fleetwood Creamery, and of another at Moselem Springs, each of which ships about 5,000 pounds a year to the Philadelphia markets, where good returns result. In July, 1901, Mr. Kelchner added the manufacture of hosiery to his list of interests, and gives employment to eight persons. This additional line has added to the reputation for honesty, and is industrious and energetic, quick to see the practical side of new methods and adopt them in his work.

Mr. Kelchner married Sept. 9, 1885, to Emily Peters, daughter of Joseph and Maria (Hoch) Peters, the former of whom, now deceased, was engaged in a mercantile business in Molltown. Five children have been born to this union: Raymond, Harry, Walter, Daniel and Emily. Mr. and Mrs. Kelchner are members of the United Evangelical Church at Fleetwood, in which he has been a trustee some years. He is superintendent of the Sunday-school, and is in charge of that in its work for their future. He is also town clerk, and for four years was school director, for six years a member of the borough council. In 1907 he was one of the organizers of the Fleetwood National Bank, of which he is now president. He is a large property owner, and is a leading useful citizen, thoroughly respected in both public and private life.

SCHULTZ (Line of Melchior, 1680-1734) Hereford township, in the extreme eastern end of Berks county, and bounded on the east by Lehigh county and on the southeast by Montgomery county, is the home of a number of families of German origin, and among these the Schwenkfelders, founded by Kaspar Schwenkfeld (1490-1561), a Silesian nobleman and mighty factor in the Reformation. Many of the Schultz, Kriebel, Yeakel and a few other Schwenkfelder families have their homes in this district of Berks county, while about thirty Schwenkfelder families live in the adjoining region of upper Montgomery and western Lehigh counties.

The Schultz or Scholtze family is traced to one Mathias Schultz, who was born A. D. 1612, on a Sunday (Invocavit), lived through the thirty years' war, and died A. D. 1683, in the seventieth year of his age, at Lower Berg, near Magdeburg, at whose feet he was the principality (now a government district) of Liegnitz, Silesia. His son, Melchior Schultz, is said to have been born A. D. 1647, and died on a Sunday (Invocavit), A. D. 1708, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. And his son, also called Melchior Schultz, who was born June 26, 1680, and died Feb. 15, 1734, in the fifty-fourth year of his age, at Bertholdov, Saxony, about two months before the emigration to this country, then being contemplated. The last named Melchior Schultz was the father of George, Melchior and Christopher, all of whom married, and descendants of George and Christopher still flourish in Berks county.

George Schultz, son of Melchior, died Oct. 30, 1776, aged sixty-five years. On Jan. 31, 1774, he married his daughter of Abraham Yeakel, and their children were Abraham and Melchior. The mother died Dec. 13, 1797, aged seventy-nine years.

Melchior Schultz, son of Melchior, died Sept. 1, 1787. He was twice married, first to Maria Meschter and second to Maria Hartranft, but had no issue by either wife.

Rev. Christopher Schultz, Sr., the youngest son of Melchior, was born at Lower Harpersdorff, Liegnitz, Silesia, March 26, 1718. In the spring of 1726, owing to religious persecution, this family with others left home and possessions and fled by night, arriving at Bertholdov, in Saxony, May 1st. Here Christopher became a shepherd boy, but his humble circumstances did not quench his spirit or ambition. In his youth he evinced a burning desire for books. His father, Christopher, introduced him in his study of the Latin, Greek and Hebrew languages. He also had the kindly assistance of Count Zinzendorf: The three orphan boys, George, Melchior and Christopher Schultz, joining some forty Schwenkfelder families, forever turned their backs upon their native land, embarking for Philadelphia, where they arrived after a ten-month voyage of about five months, Sept. 22, 1734.

Young Christopher kept a diary ("Reise Beschreibung"), which is found in print in the "Erlauterung." At a comparatively early period he was looked upon as a leading spirit among the Schwenkfelders, and was chosen their minister, serving as such efficiently, in a fellowship of four, for thirty years. He was the chief organizer of the Schwenkfelders into a religious body or congregation, composed the catechism still in use, compiled their hymnbooks and wrote their constitution, as well as a "Compendium" of religious dogmas of faith of 600 octavo pages.

For many years, up to the end of the American Revolution, "Father" Schultz, as he was called, kept up correspondence with friends left in Germany. He lived in stirring times and had varied experiences. At the age of eighteen years we find him, with his two brothers, selecting our state of residence. In one year he bought two miles north of Philadelphia, two miles west of what is now the borough of East Greenville, where they had found an excellent spring of water. Here, in 1736, assisted by Melchior Newman, carpenter, they commenced felling the tall oaks, rolling them on a scaffold over a trench, sawed them by hand into three-inch planks, whereof the outside walls of their capacious two-story house were constructed. Wagon wheels were made of the same article, horse collars were skillfully plaited of straw, traces were made of hemp, the grubbing hoe preceded the plow with wooden moldboard. There was no sawmill or gristmill within the miles, and every resource of their skill and ingenuity was used to the utmost to supply the many lacks experienced in a new country. For clothing the Schultzes raised their own flax and wool, spun it with the aid of a single spindle, erected a weaver's loom, and wove the yarn into cloth.

The three brothers lived in peace and harmony, and at the end of about ten years, under the blessing of Providence, they had considerably extended their landed domains, increased their flocks and filled their coffers, so that the question which once engaged the attention of Abraham and Lot, at their paring, now confronted them. The result was that Melchior and Christopher sold out to their brother, George, the former going as far as three miles north, where he bought a farm; Christopher, having married in 1744, now bought and settled at Clay- ton, Berks county. Here he lived to the end of his life. Among the early records of Berks county we find the last will and testament of Christopher Schultz, a model of the kind. It is dated the 24th day of October, A. D. 1788, and was witnessed by his friends, Abraham Schultz, Gregory Schultz and George Kriebel; in it the testator, among other things, disposes of about 800 acres of land located in Berks, Montgomery and Northumberland counties, Pa., including two of the finest farms in eastern Berks; one of them, late that of his brother Melchior, had been bought by the testator about three weeks before his death, from Andrew. His family, all of whom survived him, consisted of his wife Rosina, a daughter of Baltzer Yeakel, and four children, Regina, Andrew, David and Susanna.
It might well be asked how the one-time shepherd and weaver boy of Berthseldorf came to have so much property at his disposal. Matt. 19: 29. He could work on the farm, or at the loom, perform deeds of kindness, courtesy and condensation, without compromising his dignity, which are barely audible in the family. "To God alone the honor."

Father Schultz died on the 9th of May, 1789, aged seventy-one years, one month, thirteen days. The immediate cause of his death was apoplexy. His end was one of serene contentment and blessedness. He died as he lived, and like his Eckardt, he had left the world, barely audible in his family. were: "A little while and ye shall not see me, and again a little while and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father.”

The Rev. Christopher Hoffman, of Skippack, preached the funeral sermon, for his text the words of Paul, II Timothy 4: 78, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith," etc.

Andrew Schultz, son of Rev. Christopher, born Jan. 29, 1733, died Feb. 5, 1802, aged forty-nine years, six months. In 1776 he married Charlotte Yeakel, who died Feb. 11, 1825, and they had issue: Christopher, Susanna, Esther, Maria, Christina and Henry.

John B. Schultz, son of Rev. Christopher; born April 10, 1757, died Aug. 4, 1833, aged seventy-six years. He resided in Hereford township, Berks county, immediately adjoining the Schwenkfelder meeting field. In 1781 he married Anna Kriebel, and the following are the names and years of birth of their children: Susanna, 1782; Andreas, 1786; Christopher K. 1790; Philip, 1793 (died 1817); Maria, 1795; Jeremiah, 1797; Christina, 1799; Regina, 1801.

Abraham Schultz, son of George Schultz, the elder brother of Rev. Christopher Schultz, was born March 23, 1747, in Upper Hanover, Montgomery Co., Pa. He was a great reader of books, and, having a retentive memory and comprehensive mind, he became one of the best educated men of his time. He was a member of the Schwenkfelder religious society, and served it in the capacity of trustee, school inspector, teacher and catechist. The community frequently called his services into requisition as scriber and counselor. In 1790 he was elected a member of the General Assembly from Montgomery county. He died on Dec. 25, 1822. In 1771 he married Regina Yeakel, daughter of Christopher Yeakel, and their children were: Benjamin, born July 20, 1772 (died Dec. 1, 1840); Anna, born June 20, 1775; Isaac, March 4, 1778; Abraham, Feb. 12, 1780 (died Aug. 1802); Frederick, Aug. 10, 1784 (died Dec. 17, 1794); Joseph, Jan. 22, 1787; and Melchor, June 23, 1789.

Rev. Melchor Schultz, the son of George Schultz, born March 25, 1756, died June 11, 1826, aged seventy years and nineteen days. In 1781 he married Salome Wagner, and they had children: Christina, Regina, Maria, Henry W., Sarah, Frederick and Susanna (twins) and Rosina. Rev. Melchor Schultz was a minister of the society of Schwenkfelders for a long time, and he was likewise a farmer, living in Worcester township, Montgomery county.

Adam Schultz, son of Abraham, was born Sept. 20, 1775, in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa., and died Aug. 30, 1831, of typhoid fever, on his farm near Treichlersville, in Hereford township. His two sons died but a short time after, of the same disease. He owned a sawmill which is still located, and engaged in both farming and sawmilling, likewise operating a distillery, making apple-jack and rye whiskey. He also owned 214 acres in Washington township, now owned by Mary Ann Schultz. Like all his family, he was a Schwenkfelder in religious faith. On May 31, 1801, Mr. Schultz married Maria Kriebel. June 28, 1789, daughter of Andrew Kriebel, died May 1, 1858. They had children as follows: Abraham, born April 12, 1803 (died Dec. 5, 1814); Israel, June 4, 1805; Jesse, April 8, 1808 (died Nov. 7, 1831); Adam, Sept. 21, 1810 (died Nov. 12, 1831); Andrew, May 19, 1813; Enoch K., March 31, 1816; Sarah, Sept. 1, 1818 (was drowned May 11, 1820); Regina, Oct. 9, 1821; and Solomon, Nov. 9, 1824 (died June 4, 1854, at St. Paul, Minn., and his remains were sent to Clayton, Pa., and interred at the Washington Meeting-house).

Enoch Schulz, son of Adam, was born March 31, 1815, on the farm where his father had lived. In 1838 he removed to Hereford township, and died on the farm where he was born Aug. 31, 1855, aged sixty-nine years, five months. He was a farmer and also carried on sawmilling from his youth until his death, a period of over fifty years. His sawmill, now operated by his son, Daniel N. Schultz, was conducted before 1800 by his uncle, Caspar Yeakel, and was purchased by Adam Schultz in 1801 or 1802, and a sawmill had been established there long before. The present mill is the third on the site, and was erected by Enoch Schultz in 1874. He also put up the present large brick dwelling, in 1877, and had previously built the barn, in 1854. This property was in the Schultz name from 1783, and was purchased by Berthelsdorf County, and Casper Yeakel from Charles Maberry in 1875.

In 1800 Abraham Schultz bought Caspar Yeakel’s share of the farm. Enoch K. Schultz was a Republican in politics, and in religion a member of the Schwenkfelder Church, in which he held the office of deacon.

Henry Schultz married Leah K. Neuman, daughter of Samuel and Regina (Krauss) Neuman, of Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, the former of whom was a chairmaker by trade, and also made pipe organs. Mr. Neuman made an organ for each of his three daughters. Mrs. Neuman lived to be nearly one hundred years, and Mrs. Neuman, died May 31, 1857. The Schultzes became the parents of ten children, namely: Sarah m. Abraham S. Krauss; Lydia m. Enos S. Schultz; Levi m. Salis Reiff; Erwin N. is mentioned below; Regina m. Nathan M. Schultz; Susanna m. William S. Schultz; Daniel m. Susan G. Schultz; Esther died unmarried, of typhoid fever, aged twenty-one years, twenty-one days; Mary m. Samuel R. Seibert, and died Sept. 6, 1902; Emma m. unmarried of scarlet fever. Enoch K. Schultz died Aug. 31, 1885, and his wife passed away March 31, 1907, aged eighty-five years, six months, three days.

Erwin N. Schultz, of Chapel, Hereford township, Berks county, proprietor of the Chapel Planing Mill, was born July 26, 1847, on the Enoch K. Schultz homestead in Hereford township, and there attended the public schools. His boyhood days were spent in work upon the farm, and he continued to work for his parents until he was thirty years old, learning the carpenter's trade at the same time. He then started in business for himself in the sawmill business, in which his father was engaged. After leaving home he took up the carpenter’s trade, which he followed over a district covered by a radius of eight miles, working as boss carpenter and employing as many as nine men. He was principally engaged in building houses and barns, his principal contract being for the Perkiomen Seminary, at Pennsburg, Montgomery County, a large institution which he put up in 1892, and on which a force of twelve men was employed from August until April. In 1892 he built an addition to the Palm roller-mill.

In the spring of 1878 Mr. Schultz came to his present home in Hereford township, which he bought from his father-in-law, Joshua Schultz, the following year. Here he has his home and business, having remodeled the house and barn, built several additions to the buildings and put up the present planing-mill, where he keeps three men constantly employed. He makes doors, sashes, window-frames, blinds, shutters, and other planing-mill products, which he sells in the surrounding towns and district, and he is a man whose personal integrity and high standards command the respect and good-will of all who know him. He is tall and well built, robust in constitution, very cordial in presence, and is well known throughout the region.

On Nov. 10, 1877, Mr. Schultz married Susanna S. Schultz, born March 10, 1842, daughter of Rev. Joshua Schultz, died Oct. 17, 1905, aged sixty-three years, seven months, seven days. Two children were born to this union, Cora S. and Oscar S. Mr. Schultz’s second marriage was to Mrs. Emma S. (Schultz) Yeakel, widow of William K. Yeakel, whom he wedded May 4, 1907. The family home is a comfortable residence on the Green Lane & Goshenhoppen turnpike. Mr. Schultz and his family are members of the Schwenkfelder Church, in which he is now serving his second term as deacon. He is a Republican in political opinion.

Jefferson Snyder, attorney at law at Reading since 1875, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, at what is now known as the village of St. Lawrence, Nov. 6, 1848. After receiving his preliminary education in the local schools, he attended the Young Men's Seminary (now Ursinus College), he took a regular course at Lafayette College, and graduated with distinction in 1872, having received the highest honors of his class and delivered the valedictory in the graduating exercises. He then served as a tutor in the college for one year. With this preparation, he entered the law offices of George F. Baer, Esq., as a clerk and student, and, after a course of reading for two years, was admitted to the Bar Aug. 9, 1875. He then opened an office and carried on an introductory practice for two years, when he was selected by Mr. Baer to become his assistant. Mr. Snyder's ability and character were so highly appreciated by Mr. Baer in the course of a few years that the latter, Sept. 5, 1879, voluntarily parted with him, and Mr. Baer continued a partner in the business until 1901, when he became the president of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and on that account was obliged to discontinue the practice of law in Reading.

The law business was very large and diversified, and as Mr. Baer became more and more engaged in enterprises of various kinds, of a public as well as of a private character, the responsibilities of his management were gradually thrown upon Mr. Snyder, and he proved himself thoroughly competent to take care of it. Philip S. Zieber, Esq., was admitted to the office in 1898 (having been a student and admitted to practice as a lawyer from the same office in 1884, and having become familiar with the business by assisting in the office work until that time), and the name was then changed to Baer, Snyder & Zieber, being thus continued until Mr. Baer withdrew, when it became Snyder & Zieber; and as such they have carried on a very active and lucrative practice until the present time. The intricate and extensive legal affairs of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and of the Reading Iron Company, in Berks county, have been looked after and directed in this office since 1870, which has been a most lucrative business. The general character of the work, the accomplishments of these attorneys; and the law reports of the State during this long period of nearly forty years show the great volume of litigation conducted by them before the several courts. Mr. Snyder's son, Thomas Jaeger Snyder, Esq., has been a member of the firm since 1902, having studied law in this office and then been admitted to practice before the several courts of the county.

In 1877 Mr. Snyder married Anna Lizzie Jaeger, daughter of Rev. Thomas T. Jaeger, of Reading, and Mary A. (Palsgrove), his wife, of Mercersburg, Pa., and they have three children: Mary, m. to John M. Brister, surgeon of the 128th Pennsylvania Infantry, at Reading; and John Kendig, who is studying music at the New England Musical Institute, at Boston.

Mr. Snyder's father was Benjamin Leinbach Schneider, farmer, merchant and manufacturer of woolen goods in Exeter township, along the Antietam creek, near "Black Bear." He died in 1869, aged thirty-five years. He married Rachel Schmehl, daughter of Jacob Schmehl and Barbara (Breidegam), his wife, of Rushcmanor township. She died in 1861, aged seventy-seven years. They had seven children: Adeline, m. to Harrison Seidel; Jefferson, m. Emma Louisa, m. to Harry Crenn, of Philadelphia; and two who died. The two who died were Agnes, m. to Jacob Happel; Mary Olivia, m. to Isaac Devens; and Stockton, m. to Ida Brumbaugh, both of whom were killed in the "Honda Wreck" on the Southern Pacific railroad in California May 11, 1907.

His grandfather was David Schneider, farmer of Oley, along the Monocacy creek, about a mile above the "Oley Line" hotel. He died in 1866, aged sixty-nine years. He married Mary Magdalena Leinbach, daughter of Thomas Leinbach, farmer, of Oley, and they had seven children: Simon, Benjamin, Joel, Jackson, Rachel (m. to William Brumbaugh), Mary Ann (m. to Harrison Yoder), and Emma (m. to Daniel Happel).

Mr. Snyder's wife's father, Rev. Thomas T. Jaeger, was an active and influential Lutheran minister in Berks county many years. His father, Rev. Gottfried Frederick Immanuel Jaeger, for sixty years an honored minister of the Lutheran Church in Berks county, born at Illigen, in Wurttemberg, Germany, in 1706, emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1817; located at Hamburg, Berks county, in 1818, where he then began to preach as a minister of the Lutheran Church; and died at Hamburg in 1879. In 1829 he married Mary Audenried, daughter of Lewis Audenried, of McKescnburg, in Schuylkill county, Pa., and they had eleven children, including Rev. Thomas T. His wife died in 1888, aged ninety-one years.

Thomas Myers Richards, for fifty years connected with the Reading Railway Company, and from 1875 to 1905 the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company, was born at Pottsville, Oct. 27, 1835.

Mr. Richards attended the public schools of Pottsville until 1843, when his parents removed to Reading, and he attended the local schools until he was thirteen years old. He then worked in different stores for ten years, and entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, Oct. 3, 1858, as a clerk in the office of the master machinist, and he was afterward connected with this great railroad, with the exception of the time of his service in the army. In 1867, he was transferred to Portland, Oreg., in charge of the shipment of coal, and he continued there until 1875, when he was promoted to the head of the coal sales department of the P. & R. Coal and Iron Co., with quarters in the general office building, No. 227 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. His services were so highly appreciated that March 15, 1905, he was elected second vice-president of the company, and April 2, 1906, first vice-president. His employment with the company covers an extraordinary period of time, and his promotion to the head of the coal department, which is the largest in the country, in point of traffic, attests in the highest degree, the ability of the firm in the discharge of his responsible duties, but his great fidelity to the enormous financial interests of the company.

In April, 1861, Mr. Richards responded to President Lincoln's appeal for troops in the Civil War, by raising a company of infantry, which became Co. G, of the First Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers. They were mustered into service April 20, 1861, and Mr. Richards was elected second lieutenant. The company was discharged at the end of its term of enlistment, July 26, 1861. He assisted in raising another company for nine months, which on Aug. 16, 1862, was mustered in as Company E, 128th Pennsylvania Volunteers, at Reading. He was employed in the discharges of the company during the war, and was appointed captain Sept. 15, 1863, which commission he held until his discharge, May 19, 1865. He was wounded at the battle of Chancellorsville May 3, 1863. Upon the company's return to Reading, he re-entered the employment of the railroad company which had retained his position for him. He died Sept. 5, 1906, after several months' illness.

Elmer E. Stauffer, prominent in the business, religious and social life of Boyertown and vicinity, comes of an old family whose early home was in the mountains of Switzerland. Extracts gleaned from various sources, as quoted from the obituary of Mr. Stauffer, written during his voyage from Switzerland, through Germany, Holland and England, to America, give the earlier history of the family.
(I) Daniel Stauffer, a descendant of the ancient house of Hohenstaufen, in Suabia, was born at Alzheim, near the Rhine, in Switzerland, about 1630, and there he also died.

(II) Hans Stauffer, son of Daniel, was born at Alzheim about 1650 or 1653. In 1695 he married a widow named Kinget Heisland. They belonged to a religious sect called Mennonites, and in 1700 they were driven by persecution to North America, but first they went to the Palz. The diary reads as follows: "In the year 1700, I, Hans Stauffer, left my own native land, the Schweiz, on the 5th day of November, with my wife and children—Jacob, aged 13, Daniel, 9, Elizabeth with her husband Paul Fried, and one child named Mary. After a stormy voyage, on Jan. 20, 1710, we arrived in London." In the spring after a perilous voyage they landed probably at Philadelphia, and settled at or near Valley Forge, Chester county, in the land of Penn. It is said that Hans Stauffer is buried in the Mennonite graveyard near Valley Forge. The sons who survived him were: Jacob, Daniel and Henry.

(III) Jacob Stauffer, eldest son of Hans, was born at Alzheim in 1696, and accompanied his father to America in 1719. At Valley Forge he married, and afterward moved to a place called Hereford (now Washington township). The country was then a vast wilderness, and a remnant of one of the Indian tribes resided there. He was one of the first settlers and original purchasers of a plantation in that neighborhood, which joined the land which the elder John Capitolin and his family, the Footers, had purchased. He died intestate. His grain was carried on horseback to the gristmill somewhere below Norristown, twenty miles away. Like many of his descendants he was a Mennonite, and he is buried in the Mennonite cemetery adjoining his plantation. His children were: Henry, born 1745; Christian, 1748; Susan, 1750; Esther, 1729; Abraham, 1737; and John, 1737.

(IV) Henry Stauffer, son of Jacob, was born Aug. 13, 1725, and he died June 10, 1905. He went to Collegeville, Pennsylvania, where he purchased a farm and developed it. His grave is in the cemetery of the Mennonites at Boyertown, on a lot he gave to the congregation of that faith for burial purposes. In 1770 he married Maria Buckwalter.

(V) Jacob Stauffer, eldest son of Henry, was born Aug. 2, 1754, and he bought his father's farm in Collegeville township, there following farming. He died March 20, 1829, and is buried in the Mennonite cemetery at Boyertown, which was then known by the Lutheran and Reformed Churches. In 1783 he married Susanna Huff, and among their children were: Catherine, Esther, Maria, Judge John, Henry and Elizabeth.

(VI) Judge John Stauffer, son of Jacob, was born July 1, 1782, and he died Nov. 5, 1846. He was a great friend of education, and was a leading citizen of Boyertown. The Stauffer mansion, which he erected and which is now occupied by Elmer E., is a fine building, and contains much hand carved wood. Judge John Stauffer married Elizabeth Keeley, and they had twelve children, among whom was William K.

(VII) William K. Stauffer, son of Judge John, was born in Boyertown Sept. 19, 1819, and he became a foremost man there. He died April 1, 1891, in a room immediately below the one in which he was born. This old home has some sixty acres of valuable land, and this Mr. Stauffer has cultivated. He was a surveyor and conveyancer many years, and was a useful man in his district. He was secretary of the cemetery board, and in this was succeeded by his son Elmer E., who also succeeded him as treasurer of the old Boyertown Water Company. Mr. Stauffer was a pillar in the Evangelical Church, and did much toward the promotion of that church. He married Harriet Gilbert, daughter of Henry and Lydia Gilbert, the former of whom, now deceased, was a miller in Colebrookdale. She was born Nov. 6, 1824, and now lives with her son Elmer E. They had children as follows: (1) Irwin G., born 1846, died 1849. (2) James G., born 1848, died 1849. (3) Sidney G., born 1850, died 1851. (4) One born in 1852 died unnamed. (5) George Washington, born 1853, died 1857. (6) Rev. William Henry, born Aug. 28, 1857, was educated at Mt. Pleasant Seminary, Palatinate College (one year), and Ursinus College, from which he graduated, after which he again graduated at the Northwestern Theological College, at Naperville, Ill. He is now the minister of the Evangelical church, and is now stationed at Lykens, Pa. He married Sybilla Schneider, of Suspen- Bridge, N. Y., and their children were: Grace, Milton, Edith (deceased), Edna, Ruth, William and Arthur. (7) Francis G., born Aug. 6, 1859, married Feb. 22, 1881, Lizzie Keiper, of Naperville, Ill., where he also attended Northwestern College, and was graduated. Their children were: A son born in 1866 (died in infancy); and Leslie De Witt, born April 3, 1886, a noted student and attending a college course in the Yale College, of Delaware, Ohio. Francis G. is in the fene and wire business. (8) Elmer E. is the youngest in the family.

(VIII) Elmer E. Stauffer was born on the old Stauffer homestead July 2, 1864. He was educated in the public schools of Boyertown, Mt. Pleasant Seminary, and Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. He took the civil engineering course, but on account of his father's ill health, he was compelled to abandon his college education for the time, and consequently did not graduate at Easton, but later, in January, 1886, graduated from Bryant & Stratton's Business College at Philadelphia. After his return home he engaged in carving houses, together with the large estate building house there. And was interested in the grading and surveying for the borough of Boyertown, and in 1907, when the brick street paving was put down, he was elected by the council as engineer with an assistant to oversee that the work was done according to the specifications. He is associated in business with Horace E. Tyson, under the firm name of the United Evangelical Church, Boyertown, and he served the church faithfully as treasurer and trustee many years. He has been superintendent of the Sunday school since his young manhood, and in many ways has proved himself an earnest worker in the cause of Christ. Mr. Stauffer has invested in many large estates, among these the Kuser, Levengood and Bleyer estates. He was also executor of his father's estate. In politics he is a Prohibitionist, but in home elections often votes the Republican ticket, always trying to vote for the best man and for the best interests of the community. He was a member of the school board three years, and was also secretary, and helped on the plans of the present high school.

On Oct. 16, 1888, Mr. Stauffer married Andora F. Tyson, daughter of Abraham and Susan (Fetterolf) Tyson, of Royersford, Pa. Mrs. Tyson was a sister of Dr. A. H. Fetterolf, President of Gittard College, Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer have three children: Eva May, Walter Tyson and William Everett.

JOHN A. MATTHEW, a prominent citizen and successful hardware merchant at Womelsdorf, Pa., was born in Boyertown, Nov. 21, 1846, son of Elias and Elizabeth (Manderbach) Matthew. His paternal grandfather lived at Newmanstown, Lebanon Co., Pa., and is buried there. Elias Matthew was born at Newmanstown, Pa., Nov. 18, 1816, and died Sept. 12, 1893, aged seventy-six years, nine months, twenty-four days. By trade he was a stonecutter, and he became quite well-to-do, owning his own home. He married Maud Manderbach, born March 18, 1842, and died Nov. 30, 1888, aged sixty-four years, eight months, twelve days. Her father, John Manderbach, served as sheriff of the county. To Elias Matthew and wife were born five children, as follows: Maria m. John K. Beidler, of Cumberland county, Pa.; John A.; Sarah m. S. L. Gabel, deceased; Adda m. S. E. Illig, a harber at Womelsdorf; and Harry D., a successful merchant at Berlinville, Pa., m. Mame Bennethum.

John A. Matthew attended the schools of his native town, and also the schools in Heidelberg township. His brothers, Charles O., a farmer, and Charles H., passed their boyhood in the farm in Ohio, but when the Civil war broke out he returned to his home, and enlisted from Womelsdorf in June, 1863, becoming a member of Company K, 42d Pennsylvania militia, which was enlisted for three months, but was in service only six weeks, going as far as Hagerstown, Md., and returning to Ohio and passing the winter. After Charles daugh-tered, Charles, a postmaster, has remained with Matthew; and Charles H., a merchant, has engaged in trade since the large Minnesota to Hettie M., daughter of John G. Grimville, in the town, which he sold in 1888, and then left to go to Hagerstown, Md., and take up the study of law.

He was married on Aug. 29, 1865. After the war he was unable to work for nearly two years because of a sore foot. In 1868 he bought out the omnibus route from Womelsdorf to the railroad station, which he ran daily for twenty years. In 1888 he opened a hardware store on High street which he still conducts, and in which he has been very successful. He owns his own building, and this has a frontage of sixty-six feet. In politics he is a Jefferson Democrat, and he has filled a number of local offices of trust and responsibility, among them those of burgess of Womelsdorf, town constable, and member of the school board for six years and treasurer for a number of years. He and his family are Lutheran members of Zion Union Church.

Mr. Matthew married Lizzie Geissler, of Reading, and they have had five children: Luther H., associated with his father in business; Paul A., a tinsmith; Grace E., at home; and Anna Martha and Rosa May, both died in infancy.

John G. Geissler, father of Mrs. Matthew, was born in Wurttemberg, Germany, where his father, also named John G., carried on tinsmithing. He learned his father's trade, beginning at the age of thirteen years, and after finishing his apprenticeship assisted his father in the business. In the spring of 1847 he came to America, arriving in Reading in April. Here two of his uncles were engaged in the tinsmithing business, and they gave him employment. He wrote home to his father of the great opportunity in Reading. He accordingly left his homestead, and crossed the ocean in the same year, bringing the entire family, and soon becoming well established in the stove and tinware business in Reading. All the sons made their father's trade their life work with the exception of John M., of Minnesota, who is an extensive farmer and member of the Legislature.

On Jan. 1, 1861, John G. Geissler, Jr., started in the stove and tinware business for himself at Sinking Spring, and in 1863 transferred it to Womelsdorf, where he was afterward located, later being assisted by his son, Charles B. Their establishment was one of the largest of the kind in the county. It occupied all of the building on Front street, once used by Congressman Ermentrout's ancestors as a hat factory. As long as he lived Mr. Geissler worked in the store from morning till night, and accomplished a great deal in the course of the day. For some years he did not go on roofs, but in his younger days preferred roofing to any other branch of his trade. He had a comfortable residence at the corner of Second and Franklin streets, Womelsdorf. He married Margaret, daughter of George Buck, long since deceased, of Temple, a Revolutionary soldier. Mrs. Geissler died in 1883. Their children were: Elizabeth (Lizzie) m. John A. Matthew; Anna M., a tinsmith; Charles G., engaged in the stove-

ness in Minnesota; John M., of Womelsdorf, was for fifteen years with A. S. Valentine & Son; Miss Rosa kept house for her father, Mr. Geissler was one of Womelsdorf's most useful citizens, and his friends were numerous. He had been a member of the town council, and member of the school board. Fraternally he was one of the early members of Williamson Lodge, No. 309, F. & A. M. of Womelsdorf; also of Harmon Lodge, No. 10, Womelsdorf; Col. Schell, F. & A. M., of Reading; I. O. O. F., of Reading; and formerly belonged to Goethe Lodge, Harugari. He died Jan. 20, 1899, aged seventy-six years, ten months and five days.

IRA P. ROTHERMEL, eldest son of John K. and Susanna E. (Peters) Rothermel, was born in Maiden-creek township, Berks Co., Pa. His father was a descendant from one of the earliest families in the county, and a prominent farmer in Richmond township, and our subject's youth was mostly spent in assisting in the arduous duties of the farm. The advantages of a liberal education, however, were not denied him. He was educated in the public schools of his township, Brunnner's Scientific School, Reading, and the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown. After teaching a country school in Ruscombmanor township for one year, he entered Lafayette College, from which institution he graduated in the classical course in the year 1885.

The following year Mr. Rothermel came to Reading, and began the study of law under the direction of Frank R. Schell, Esq., and after the latter's decease, which occurred a few months later, he entered the law offices of Jacob S. Livingood, a distinguished lawyer, under whose preceptorship he continued and concluded his law studies. He was admitted to the Berks County Bar Jan. 21, 1888, and later to the Supreme court and the Superior court of this State. Since his admission to the Bar he has assiduously carried on his profession in a successful manner, mostly in the line of office practice and in the settlement of estates.

Mr. Rothermel became affiliated with the Freemasons at Reading in 1891, where he joined Chandler Lodge No. 227, Excelsior Chapter No. 237, and Reading Commandery, No. 42, Knights Templar. In manner, Mr. Rothermel is modest and unassuming, by nature kind and genial, hor-nable in all his dealings and generous to every one in word and deed.

Mr. Rothermel was married to Elizabeth Grim, and they have three children, John G., Daniel G. and Catharine G. The family are active members of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church. Mrs. Rothermel is a daughter of Daniel P. Grim, of Kutztown, and a grand-daughter of Col. Daniel B. Grim, who conducted a large farm, and also the R.R. Hotel at Grimville, in the upper section of this county.

BENJAMIN E. BIEBER, chief burgess and prominent citizen of Topton, where he is the owner and proprieter of a general store, was born on the old Bieber homestead, in Longswamp township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Jonas and Annie (Eck) Bieber.

Jacob Bieber, grandfather of Benjamin E., was a farmer and laborer in Longswamp township, and was very well known. He married Susan Keim, who was born in Oley township, Berks Co., Pa., and they had six children, named: Jonas; Jacob; Susan (m. Samuel Warmkessel); Elizabeth (m. Jacob Long); Hettie (m. a Mr. Weiser) and Mrs. Reuben Walb.

Jonas Bieber followed farming and shoemaking all his active life. He was married in early manhood to Annie Eck, daughter of Daniel Eck, and they had the following children: William E.; Benjamin E.; George E. (m. to Annie Geist); Emma (m. to Charles A. Fegley); Elizabeth (m. to Alvin Dunkel); Mary (unmarried); Louisa, twin sister of Benjamin (m. William Well, who survives her); Susan (m. Henry Sticher); and Lillie (m. Jonas O. Weiler).

John E. Bieber was reared in the neighborhood of his place of birth and he attended the local schools. His first work was done around the iron ore mines, but later he became a clerk in the general store at Topton, of which he is now proprietor. He carries an excellent stock and does a very satisfactory business. He has been active in the public affairs of the community and enjoys the confidence of his fellow citizens to a very large extent.
As Chief burgess of the town, he fills the highest office in their gift.

In 1850, Mr. Bicher married Montana Gerhart, daughter of David and Sarah (Romig) Gerhart, the latter of whom was a daughter of John and Sallie (Frederick) Romig. Mr. and Mrs. Bicher have one son, Lloyd J., born Oct. 7, 1887. He is a graduate of the Topton high school, and is now learning business methods as his father's assistant in the general store. The family belongs to the peace-loving L. B. Smith's church, in which Mr. Bicher has served as a deacon for about sixteen years. He is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

LEVI B. SMITH. The Smith family from which Mr. Levi Bull Smith was descended is of Scotch extraction, their name being originally Wilson. In the reign of James I. of England they crossed the North Channel into Ireland, taking up their residence in the northeastern section of that country, where they left numerous descendants. The change of name is accounted for by an interesting circumstance handed down in the family tradition.

Just before the battle of the Boyne, when King William III., was reomitting that famous field, his horse cast a shoe. There was no farrier to replace it, but McDonald, in whose neighborhood the incident occurred, being, like many other farmers of the region, something of a blacksmith, volunteered his services, and the horse, and thus enabled the King to proceed. From that time his neighbors, who like himself were in sympathy with the cause of William, dubbed McDonald "the Smith," and the name clung to him, and was adopted by his family as a patronymic.

Being staunch Presbyterians, the Smiths, together with a large proportion of the Irish tenantry, at a subsequent period resisted the rigorous proceedings of the Established Church of England to enforce the provisions of the "Sacramental Test" law, under which they were required not only to pay tithes to the Church, but to conform to all the requirements respecting a marriage civil rigour, under pain of invalidation of all religious acts performed without its pale. To enforce obedience to this arbitrary measure, the absentee landlords raised the rents of all their recusant tenantry, and otherwise rendered their condition intolerable. This was among the causes which induced the Scotch-Irish emigration in the first half of the eighteenth century to the Colony of Pennsylvania, founded preeminently upon the principle of absolute liberty of conscience.

Among the earliest of the emigrants were John Smith and his wife Susanna, of County Monaghan, Ulster, who came over in 1729, the year after the enforcement of the "Test." After a long and stormy voyage they landed at Philadelphia, and took up their new residence in Uwchlan township, Chester Co., Pa. With her brother John came Mary Smith, who married William Fulton, one of their grandchildren being Robert Fulton, born in Little Britain, Lancaster county, whose name is indissolubly linked with the evolution of the invention of the steamboat.

John and Susanna Smith were the parents of fifteen children. One of these, Robert, was born on the voyage to America. The father died in 1765, and the mother in 1776. Three of the elder brothers having gone out to seek their fortunes elsewhere, the family homestead came into the possession of Robert, who became a prosperous and respected citizen and was prominently connected in his later years with public affairs. During the French and Indian war he was in the Provincial service with the rank of captain. At the outbreak of the Revolution he entered warmly into the Patriot cause and was commissioned captain of the 1st Battalion of Associators of Chester County. In 1775-76 he assisted in the construction of a line of chevaux-de-frise across the Delaware below Philadelphia, designed to obstruct the progress of the enemy by a river to the city, and in the laying out of the land fortifications of the city. He was a member of the Committee of Safety. He was a member of the Convention of 1776, which devised the first Constitution of Pennsylvania after Independence. In 1777 he was appointed lieutenant of the county of Chester, with the rank of captain. His name was entered 1786, being charged with the arduous and responsible duty of raising, arming and provisioning the military forces of the district. He was sheriff of the county in 1777 and 1778; member of Assembly in 1785-86, and during the same period a trustee of the loan office. In 1791 he was elected a burgess of the county, and continued in that office until his death in December, 1803.

Robert Smith was a staunch Presbyterian, and an elder of the church at Brandywine Manor, of which the Rev. John Carmichael, like himself an ardent patriot, was pastor during the Revolutionary period. He married in 1788 Edwina Vaughan, daughter of John Vaughan, of Uwchlan township, who survived him until 1822, dying at the age of eighty-six. Of their sons, Jonathan was for many years connected with the first United States Bank and with the Bank of Pennsylvania, of which latter he was cashier, and was one of the founders of the Pennsylvania Insurance Company; John was an iron-master, and Joseph an iron and shipping merchant of Philadelphia.

John Smith, iron-master, father of the subject of this sketch, was born at the old homestead in Chester county April 8, 1762. In early life he was manager of the Warwick furnace in Berks county, and in 1781 was one of the subscribers to the subscription for the purchase of Thomas Bull, a distinguished Revolutionary patriot, long associated with the iron industry in eastern Pennsylvania in connection with the well known families of Rutter and Potts. Having married in 1790, Elizabeth, daughter of Colonell Bull and his wife Ann Hunter, John Smith removed in that year to Dale Furnace, in Hereford township, Berks county, of which he had become co-owner with Thomas and Joseph Potts, Jr., and six years later went to Joanna Furnace, on Hay creek, Robeson township, having become partner in that establishment with his father-in-law, Colonell Bull, and Thomas May. Joanna Furnace is now owned by Robert, Potts and Thomas Rutter, being named in honor of the wife of the first owner. The substantial stone mansion house, still standing, though modernized, was erected in 1793. Attached to the estate were numerous tracts of woodland, aggregating several thousand acres, from which the works were supplied with charcoal. Having eventually acquired the entire ownership Mr. Smith resided at Joanna until his death, which occurred April 2, 1815, when he was aged fifty-three. His wife survived him twenty years, dying in 1835. They left ten children, three sons and seven daughters. The foremothers were: Thomas B., Levi B. and John Vaughan. Of the sons the eldest married James Richards; Sarah Bull, Jacob Loeser; Margaretta Vaughan; Elizabeth Bull, Joseph O'Brien; Susan Grier, Rev. George Burcker, and Jane Correy, Goodloe H. Bowman. Mary Cobean died unmarried.

Levi Bull Smith was born at Joanna Furnace Feb. 8, 1806. He received a liberal education, graduating at Princeton College in 1824. He subsequently studied law at the law school at Litchfield, Conn., and was admitted to the Bar of Berks county, Pa., Jan. 10, 1827. He married April 10th, of the same year, Emily H. Badger, a native of Bucksport, Maine (born Jan. 1, 1807), and a member of the maternal side of the Bucke family, of Puritan stock, who emigrated to New England in 1635. From 1829 to 1831 he was engaged in farming at the old Reading Furnace, in Chester county, and from 1831 to 1833 was in the mercantile business at Mount Airy, in Union township, Berks county. In the latter year he removed to Joanna, and became the partner in that works of his cousin, John Smith, and in 1835 formed a partnership with John Darling & Smith, in which he was the chief partner and continued to manufacture pig-iron exclusively. He was a member of the Henry Smith & Sons. The manufacture of pig-iron exclusively was carried on with profit for many years before, during and subsequent to the Civil war, the end passing into the sole ownership of the son, Col. L. Heber Smith, in 1877, and the works discontinuing operations in 1905.

Upon his retirement from the active management of the iron business he removed in 1863 to Reading, where the remainder of his life was passed. He was one of the founders of the First National Bank and a part of life in the business of its president from its incorporation until his death. These institutions, being government depositories, and under the management of men of patriotic principles, not only built up an efficient financial system but materially aided in sustaining the credit of the government at the most critical period of its history. With ability and success he performed the ultimate restoration of its authority. In those troublous times Mr. Smith's most ardent sympathies and active efforts were devoted to the triumph of his country's cause. He gave freely of his means for the raising and equipping of troops for the field, and his vigilant attention to the thwarting of the opposition schemes of the enemies in the rear.

An Abolitionist in principle and an old-time Whig in his political faith, he became from the foundation of the Republican party one of its most zealous supporters. Whilst never seeking public office he was named as the Republican candidate for Congress in the Berks district in 1860, and his popularity was shown in the fact that he ran considerably ahead of the State ticket. In the townships of the southern section of the county adjacent to his home his vote was especially strong. Having been placed the same year upon the Lincoln electoral ticket, he withdrew on the ground of the incompatibility of that position with his Congressional candidacy. At an earlier period he was upon several occasions a delegate to county and State conventions of the Whig and Republican parties. His judgment upon questions of finance was eminently conservative and sound, and the same shrewdness and forecast which he evinced in the management of his own lands were shown him in the conduct of several of the various business relations which he assumed toward others during his residence in Reading in the latter part of his life. Among these were his membership of the board of managers of the Reading Gas Company and of the Reading Fire Insurance Company, of the latter of which he was one of the organizers. Every associated effort for the literary culture and social betterment of the community received his co-operation and support.

In his denominational affiliations Mr. Smith was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He was a member of the vestry of St. Thomas Church, Morgantown, and of St. John's Church, Reading, then recently organized, and of the diocesan convention. In 1858 he was a delegate to the general convention which met in New York City. Upon his removal to Reading he became a vestryman of Christ Church, remaining such until his death.

Personally Mr. Smith was of a genial and companionable disposition, possessing a marked and never-failing trait of humor, which made his presence at all times enlivening and agreeable. To be just to all men and faithful to his own was the ruling principle of his character and life. After a brief illness the end came to him at his home Aug. 8, 1876, when a few months advanced in the seventy-third year of his age. His estimable wife died Dec. 16, 1882. They had ten children: (1) Nancy Valeria, born March 14, 1828, married June 12, 1855, William Hiester Clymer, whom she survived, dying Aug. 17, 1901, leaving six children. (2) Elizabeth Frances, born March 19, 1830, married June 15, 1869, the Rev. Elia J. Richards, D. D., a clergyman of the Presbyterian denomination, for upward of twenty-five years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Reading, whom, together with their only child, Jane Ellis (born April 8, 1870), she survives. (3) Bentley Howard. (4) William Darling. (5 and 6) Levi Heber and Emily Annette. (7) Mary Badger, born Oct. 28, 1836, married Jan. 23, 1864, Richard W. Vaughan, born Aug. 20, 1842, died July 23, 1878. (8) Thomas Stanley. (10) Edward Hunter, born April 17, 1847, died Sept. 7, 1856. (9) Thomas Stanley, born Aug. 18, 1839, at Joanna Furnace, attended Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., and, with his father and brothers, engaged in the iron manufacturing business. He was captain of Company A, 128th Regiment, P. V., mustered Aug. 8, 1862, for nine months' service, and was promoted Feb. 1, 1863, to lieutenant-colonel; was taken prisoner at the battle of Chancellorsville and confined for a time in Libby prison, being subsequently exchanged. After the death of his father he acquired the sole ownership of the Joanna estate, and carried on the works until within a few years of his death, which occurred at his residence from September 17, 1868, to Jennie Grubb, of Lancaster, Pa., who, with six children, survives him.

Thomas Stanley Smith, M. D., was born at Joanna Furnace, Jan. 25, 1845, graduated at Amherst College in 1866, and at the Jefferson Medical School in 1868. He subsequently spent a year at the University of Leipzig, Germany, pursuing studies in chemistry, a branch in which he especially excelled. Upon his return he filled the position of lecturer on physical diagnosis in the summer course at the Jefferson College. He practised his profession in Reading for a period of ten years, devoting his attention particularly to operations, and acquired a notable skill. Dr. Smith's scientific attainments were of a high order, and had his ambition been for eminence in his profession, he possessed the genius to attain it. His health failing, his career was cut short by death, Nov. 25, 1887, in the forty-third year of his age.

CAPT. AARON ZIEGLER, proprietor of one of the largest retail wall-paper establishments in the city of Reading, with business rooms at No. 355 Penn street, is one of the leading citizens of the city, and a man whose services to his country in the dark hour of her need were of such value that he merits highly the title by which he is better known. A veteran of the old guard whose fast depleting ranks is a reminder that Time's ceaseless march is removing us farther and further from one of the greatest wars of history—a war fought on both sides with a courage and tenacity of purpose unequalled, and befitting the Anglo-Saxon blood which, commingling in fratricidal strife, cemented the nation's disjointed parts into a splendid and magnificent compact structure, alike worshiped by her loyal people, and revered by the whole world. The story of Captain Ziegler's movements during the Civil War would, if told in all its lights and shadows, be worthy the pen of a novelist of the realistic school. The necessary brevity of this review precludes relating much of interest, but if the reader will "read between the lines," he will be ready to give credit where credit is due.

Captain Ziegler comes of a line of agriculturists, who settled in Bunker Hill, Lebanon county, Pa., in pioneer times, and who in their different generations were distinguished by loyal service to the commonwealth. In this county Daniel Ziegler, grandfather of Captain Aaron, passed his life as a farmer. The father of the Captain, also named Daniel, was in his turn a contractor and builder, with residence at Myerstown, Pa. He lived to the advanced age of eighty-four, dying in 1883. His wife was Martha Catherine Shepler, daughter of Henry Shepler, a farmer of Lebanon county. The family of which the Captain was the youngest member consisted of seven children.

Captain Ziegler was born at Myerstown, Lebanon county, Feb. 20, 1841. His boyhood, passed in humble but honest toil, laid the foundation of a splendid physical constitution, without which he would no doubt have succumbed to the rigors of the war in which he was called to engage ere he had reached maturity. He became quite an expert at the trade of his father, while being helpful to him at odd times, giving his attention more to the artistic feature of decorating, in painting and paperhanging. It was while engaged at this occupation that the Captain heard the tocsin of war resounding through the country, and responded to the call of the President for the defense of "Old Glory."

Aaron Ziegler had as a boy and youth watched with keen interest the oncoming storm, and while the Presidential campaign was on, which precipitated it, his blood warmed for the inevitable struggle. During that winter he participated in the feverish anxiety of the people, and was ready when the call was made to offer his services to his country. It is true that like all the others of the first enlistment, the boy was mightily afraid the strife would be over before he could get to the front, but that does not detract from the bravery of the act. Sufficiently the boy got to the front in a "front style" with such vigor as to carry him even beyond the lines for a period, during which he was an unwilling boarder at some of the famous, or rather infamous, Confederate "hotels."

The first enlistment of the Captain was in the Myerstown Rifles, Captain Jerome Myers, for the three months' service. This company was not attached to any regiment, and when they reached Harrisburg, the quota for the three months' service being filled, the company was ordered to Camp Curtin, where it remained until the passing of the Act organizing the Pennsylvania Reserves. He then re-enlisted in Company I, 7th Pennsylvania Reserves, the company then being commanded by Captain Jedediah Ziegler, and the regiment by Colonel Elisha B. Harvey. To follow this company through the vicissitudes of the war which drew out its cruel length through the ensuing four years would be but the relation of battles fought and hardships endured. It is enough to say that it was with the Army of the Potomac, that of its surge against Lee, acquitting itself nobly in field and camp. This is witnessed by the fact that of the ninety-five who marched out of Myerstown on that July day of 1861, but sixteen answered to roll-call as they stood again in their home town after the conflict. These ninety-five had been cut to one-third the half of the time of the Battle of the Wilderness, where the company was engaged. They were subsequently captured by the Confederates on May 5, 1864. Then ensued the horrors of Southern prison life, the rigors of which carried away seventeen of the company, the rest to be paroled in an emaciated and most pitiful condition. The Captain's personal experiences during these harrowing months were such as came to all, with the exception of those who occurred during an attempted escape from the prison at Columbia, S. C. Getting well away from his captors, he spent three weeks in the swamps and lowlands, pursued by the bloodhounds and henchmen. Weak and almost exhausted from hunger and exposure, he one day became aware that they were close on his trail. With the blood hounds baying closely behind him, he attempted to vault a rail fence, and in his weakness fell in such a manner as to injure his right leg—and the game was up. He was recaptured and thenforsaken treated with greater severity than he had endured. The injury was so severe that it will continue to cause the Captain trouble through all his life. During his prison experience the Captain was confined in the following places: Dauphin, Va.; Macon, Ga.; Savannah, Ga.; Charleston, S. C. (where 500 officers were confined and lay under the fire of their own guns on Morris Island for three weeks, being in constant danger of exploding shells); and Goldsboro, N. C.: the time of imprisonment covering eleven weary months. Carrying 180 pounds not one of which was superfluous, strong and healthy at the time of his capture, Captain Ziegler returned after his parole broken in health and weighing but 120 pounds. He remained the Captain's title came to him by brevet for gallant conduct at the battle of the Wilderness. He had risen by successive promotions from the ranks to second sergeant, to first sergeant, second lieutenant, and first lieutenant. He was in command of the company while first sergeant for five months, and for over a year while first lieutenant, and led it in many of its herculean engagements.

"All honor to the Old Guard,
   They did their best;
They have laid aside the old sword,
Shall it not rest?"

The war over, Captain Ziegler and his compatriots surprised many European critics by returning quietly to the avocations of peace. He took up the tangled threads where he had cast them aside four years before, and continued that line of work until 1871 in his home town, where he moved to Reading, where he has since resided. His business location was for a time at Seventh and Court streets, and later at No. 425 Penn street, where he operated successfully for eleven years, from which place he removed to his present location, No. 335 Penn street, where he conducts one of the largest wall paper and paint houses in the city.

A splendid soldier, Captain Ziegler has been equally faithful as a citizen, ever true to his ideals of good government. He has been a Republican all his life, though in 1880 he was prominently mentioned for appointment to the postmastership of the city. He holds membership in many of the best fraternities, notably the Odd Fellows, the Red Men, and the Knights of the Golden Eagle: the last of course is a popular member of the different soldier organizations—the Grand Army of the Republic, the Veteran Legion, and the Ex-Prisoners of War Association. His church affiliation is with the First Reformed Church of Reading.

On Nov. 25, 1866, Captain Ziegler married Miss Clara Bennethum, daughter of John L. Bennethum, who for many years conducted a hotel at Myerstown, and later was in the clothing business in Reading. To this marriage one son was born, named Aaron D., now in attendance in the public high school. Full of years, passing into a happy and peaceful old age, with many of the friends of his youth on this side to do him honor, this old soldier keeps on a life of work, spending, receiving the grateful acknowledgments of a united republic, and meriting the universal esteem which is accorded him.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN BOYD is of mixed English and Pennsylvania-German blood, son of Edwin Bond and Catharine Anne (Stump). He was born Oct. 31, 1861, the anniversary of the German Reformation, in Greenwich township, Berks Co., Pa., near Lenhartsville, a township noted for teachers who have become ministers of the Lutheran and Reformed Churches.

Edward Bond, his paternal grandfather, emigrated to America from several older brothers, John and Thomas, from Longingdon, on the Itching rivulet, a branch of the Avon river, in Warwickshire, England, ten miles from Coventry and eight from Warwick, near the place where Shakespeare was born. These three brothers, with a number of other English emigrants sailed from Liverpool in the vessel “Montezuma,” landing in Philadelphia June 14, 1859. Being craftsmen in wood and iron industries, Grandfather Bond and his brothers sought employment in Schuylkill county, then new territory, in the construction of roads, the one production being yet, however, in its infancy—though the mining of the “black diamond” was the excitement of the country at that time, attracting adventurous laborers from all over the world. The older brothers, John and Thomas, having been married, later on settled in Tamaqua, where Bond’s drug store and Bond’s blacksmith shop are well known to this day. Grandfather Edward Bond came across the Atlantic as a single young man and remained settled at Port Clinton in the Schuylkill Water Gap, the very “port” or mouth of, the anthracite coal region. There he married Miss Mary Magdalene Yenser, reported to have been of German-French extraction.

It was at Port Clinton that Edwin Bond, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born on Feb. 22, 1859. When he was only nine years old his mother died, and his father, a carpenter, lost his life by accident, Aug. 25, 1854, while working on a bridge of the Little Schuylkill railroad. He helped to construct that road, which was at first laid with wooden rails, covered with iron sheathing. The coal cars were moved originally with horse-power. An interesting incident is remembered in this connection, which shows that the Bonds early took an active interest in public education. It is known that the adoption of the public school system was originally submitted to the voters of the various precincts. The cause had been several times before the voters, but had been as often defeated in the Port Clinton district. It so happened that a deep snow fell the night before another election, when the matter was before the voters again, and the anti-public school party not being on their guard, John Bond, one of the emigrant brothers, who furnished some half dozen or more teams to haul coal down the Little Schuylkill, on the morning of election day said to his men: “Now, boys, this is our opportunity. We can’t haul coal today. Let’s haul pro-school voters to the polls.” They did; and the result was that the public school party were victorious in all the precincts somewhat earlier than in the adjoining districts, and it became a leader in the line of progress and enterprise.

When yet a half orphan Edwin Bond was temporarily placed by his father with James Moyer, a wholesale cigar dealer and manufacturer of Hamburg, this county. When his father so soon also died, he was given a more permanent home at his own request by his maternal uncle, George Yenser, who lived in Albany township, Berks county. Thus by a strange coincidence the father of our subject, Edwin Bond, was confirmed in the Lutheran faith in the same New Bethel Church of Albany in whose cemetery, the grave of his grandfather in the ground, George Stumpf, was resting. Later George Yenser moved to Greenwich township, near Lehertsville, where he became a prosperous farmer and was one of the prime movers in the erection of the Friedens Evangelical Lutheran and Reformed Church of that place.

Subject of this biographical sketch, was a product of moral love and influence. Edwin Bond did not forget, as Moses in Egypt did not, the religion taught by his mother. He was of a pious and devoted turn of heart and mind. Edwin’s brother, John Bond, left the drug store to his namesake in Tamaqua and moved to Kansas. A younger brother, George, lived for many years in Ft. Wayne, Ind., where he invented a practical feature of the telephone. There were three sisters: Ellen, who died a few years ago in Pottsville, Katie, wife of Jacob Boyer, of Lewis-town, and Sarah, wife of Frank Diehl, of St. Clair, the last two still living in Schuylkill County.

Whilst our subject is the third generation in this country of paternal English descent, he is the fifth generation as to his maternal German lineage. The first maternal ancestor in America was John George Stumpf, who emigrated from Germany, it is believed from Wurtemberg, between the years 1717 and 1720. Bayard Taylor, in his “History of German Immigration,” states that the period was a trying period for many German citizens, when the rude and arbitrary Frederick William I. ruled over Prussia. “The collective history of the German States—for we can hardly say ‘History of Germany,’” when there really was no Germany—at this time, is a continuous succession of wars. The public and diplomatic interests of the time directed that these be settled in another.” The War of the Spanish Succession raging along the Rhine kept the southern part of Germany in a state of convulsion for some years. The luxury, jealousy and extravagance of the petty princes made life hard for the common people.

“...In Wurtemberg the Duke Eberhard Ludwig so oppressed the people that many of them emigrated to America between the years 1717 and 1720 and settled in Pennsylvania.” This history well corresponds with what our subject remembers related by his maternal grandparents about the hardships the earlier ancestors endured in the mother country; that they came to America being obliged to earn off their passage across the waters after they had landed on these shores. But they prized their religious and political liberty higher than their homes and landed possessions yonder, which by the ravages of war and cruel confiscation were to them of little value. That the Stumps came from Wurtemberg, Germany, is further substantiated by an account found in “Thirty Thousand Emigrants,” which states that Philip Stumpf came across with 290 passengers on the ship “Jacob,” Adolph D. Grove, captain, sailing from Amsterdam, by way of Shields, England.

The family tradition was that John George Stumpf was “bought” out in one of the lower sections of Pennsylvania, possibly near New Hanover, Montgomery county, until he had earned his freedom, when he moved with others from New Hanover to Albany township, Berks Co., Pa. For it is stated by Rev. Prof. W. J. Mann, D. D., and Rev. B. M. Schmucker, D. D., in “Halle Reports,” that “Allemaengel,” as Albany township was first called, was largely settled by people from New Hanover (Vol. I, p. 415). The name “Allemaengel” is said to be of German origin, and is supposed to designate the poverty and misfortune of the first settlers, who found a barren country where there was “no land and no water” and the idea is not sustained by others; for the Rev. Dr. Schmidt, who was secretary of the Government of Pennsylvania in the year 1796, has added in the written minutes of the Synod by way of explanation the word “Allemaingao, showing that the former name for “Albany was of Indian origin, and likely meant the very opposite of “wanting all good and necessary things.” Furthermore, the Rev. J. H. Dubbs, in his “History of the Lehigh Valley” (p. 304), compares “Allemaengel” with “Egypt,” as a section of country at the southern slope of the Blue Mountains known for its fertility. It is a fact established by research of the part of the first Church Record and Constitution of the New Bethel Lutheran and Reformed Church located in this very “corner” of Albany township names the community as “Das Rosenberg,” that is, “The Valley of Roses,” and hence instead of being “sterile” it was a land “flowing with milk and honey,” besides why should a barren country take the name of New?” The New Bethel Church Record dates back to 1761, and John George Stumpf must then have lived for some time in that community. At any rate, he was one of the earliest members, if not founders, of that church. It is also a matter of record in the “Halle Reports” that the Rev. Pastor Schaum, an associate and co-worker in the Rev. John Stumpf's labors here, was married on Aug. 7, 1753, to a Miss “Maria Dorothea Stumpf,” who may have been a near relative, for the

When the subject of our sketch was a boy of about twelve years the late Amos Trexler, who then conducted a tannery on these same premises, pointing to an immense willow tree standing close by his pits, said: "There stands your great-great-grandfather's riding whip!" Being asked for an explanation, he said, that when long ago John George Stump was out on business one day riding on horseback through Indian trails, he brought home a little willow whip which he had tied to his saddle tree and which, as he arrived home, he flung into the streamlet there. The riding whip developed roots and grew into a mighty tree, standing as a silent witness to future generations of him who thus inadvertently planted it, destined to be a more enduring monument to his memory than the soft sassafras stonewalls quarried on his own lands for his own sepulture in the New Bethel cemetery.

The next in line of kinship was John Stump, who seems to have moved farther south. His remains lie buried at the Dunkel's Church in Greenwich township. The third was Samuel Stump, born Oct. 16, 1794, and died May 16, 1872. Philip Wunderlich, who was born April 15, 1801, died March 22, 1875. Both are buried at the Friedens Church of Lenhartsville, which they helped to erect. They lived on the southwest side of Round Top Mountain, where our subject was born. They were the parents of the following children: Nathan, of near Kimesville; Joel, of Liscum; Peter, of Lenhartsville; Moses, Aaron, Samuel and Gideon, all deceased; Mary, widow of Isaac Miller, of Oklahoma; Elizabeth, of Kempston, widow of Nathan Dietrich, who died on the old George Yenser homestead in Albany; and Catharine, the youngest daughter and mother of our subject.

With the Rev. Frank J. Dietrich he learned the shoemaker's trade before the days of shoe factories, when there was a great demand for hand-made shoes. Early he learned to wield the hammer and ply the awl. He continued at work in his father's trade till his eighteenth year, when his parents 'gave him free' out of kindness to allow him an opportunity to prepare for the Gospel ministry, as in fact they did all their surviving six sons and three daughters. He began for himself as many ministers here and elsewhere have done. In a newspaper article concerning Mr. Bond and his work which appeared in the Berks county paper not long ago it was said: "For many years the teaching profession in Berks county has been a stepping-stone to the ministry, and ninety per cent of the ministers of this county of all denominations have been public school teachers before they took up the preaching of the Gospel. One of these prominent teacher's who gave up school life for the pulpit, was Rev. William Frank Dodge."

He obtained his common school education in the Zettlemeier's school, near Lenhartsville, which place has lately been selected as a health resort by Banker Eckert of Reading, where the financier has erected a beautiful and well equipped summer home. The school was from 1887 to 1907 conducted by superintendents Peter Nagle, Percival Christman, Frank Kaufman, each for four years, Moses S. Greenawalt for seven years, and George W. Ziegler, M. D., now in Philadelphia, for one year. The adjoining school in Albany township taught by Amos S. Greenawalt, being more advanced, was attended for one term. Country schools then were only open five months in a year, of which a month and more on an average was omitted in fall on account of the busy harvest season in the family trade.

In the fall of 1880 he attended seven weeks select school at Heinle's, in Albany, taught by the now well known Rev. Frank S. Dietrich, then a student in the Theological Seminary in Philadelphia. Our subject taught four terms; one under Supt. Samuel A. Baer, the Miller-Chluauer school in Albany, in 1880-81; and three under Supt. David S. Keck—the Wageman's or Independent district school in Greensville, 1881-82; the Lenhartsville school, 1882-83, in both of which he had incorporated into a borough, and when seventy-two pupils were enrolled and sixty averaged during the term; and the Neff's school in Maxatawny township, 1883-84. Between public school terms he attended the spring and fall sessions at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, from 1881-84. He entered Muhlenberg College, at Allentown, in 1884, and graduated in 1888. While at college he was a member of the Euterpean Literary Society, which elected him to the associate editorship of "The Muhlenberg" in 1888. At the end of the Sophomore year he received a $15 prize for a contest essay entitled "The Physical Basis of Murder". In 1887 he won the senior oratorical prize of $25 in 1887, and honorable mention for standing in class seventh. He entered the Theological Seminary of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Philadelphia in 1888, and graduated in May, 1891. He was ordained to the office of the ministry in the Lutheran Church by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania in Emanuel's Church at Pottstown, Pa., May 26, 1891, and immediately thereafter became pastor of the Lutheran Church at Tower City, Schuylkill Co., Pa.

Mr. Bond was married to Miss Amy H. Brehm, originally of Lancaster county, later of Allentown, whose ancestors, the Bowers—of which family David Bowers and Benjamin Brehm—are still living in Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 1, 1891. This union was blessed with two sons and two daughters, Paul, John, Mary and Anna, all of whom survive. Their mother died of blood poisoning July 30, 1901, aged thirty-six years. Her remains rest in the Zion's Lutheran and Reformed cemetery in Tower City, Pennsylvania.

During his first pastorate of over thirteen years a debt resting upon St. Paul's Church of Tower City was paid, a new and commodious parsonage was erected and St. Peter's Church at Orwin, Pa., was renovated. While at Tower City he was secretary of the Pottsville Conference of the Luth. Church and has been in the Conference in the Berks and Montgomery Conferences. In August, 1904, he received a call to the Bowers Longswamp Parish, consisting of four thriving congregations in southeastern Berks which he accepted when Rev. M. C. Horine, D. D., was President of the Synod, and Rev. E. T. Horn, D. D., LL. D., was President of the Reading Conference, to which the parish belongs. He was installed Nov. 27, 1904, at the Huff's Church in Hamburg township, Rev. F. K. Bernd, now President of the Reading Conference, and Rev. John H. Raker, the second superintendent of the Lutheran Orphans' Home, at Topton, Pa., conducting the installation services.

A newspaper article mentioned, Mr. Bond has since "answered the many calls to ministerial duties of four thriving Berks county congregations—one of the largest Berks county charges of the Lutheran denomination, consisting of Bowers, Longswamp, New Jerusalem and Huff's Churches. During thirty years he has been served by Rev. D. K. Humbert. This is one of the charge by a church where a minister must be of the most strenuous type. The congregations are widely scattered in the mountainous sections, and they have a membership of several thousand. In a service of seventeen years Rev. Bond preached over 500 sermons, baptized nearly 1,200 children, confirmed 700 members, performed over 500 marriages and conducted nearly 500 funerals, besides making hundreds of addresses at public gatherings and collecting thousands of dollars for benevolent and church purposes."
Mr. Bond was married again, on Oct. 20, 1904, in Tower City, Pa., to Mrs. Katie Eva Snyder, a daughter of the late Philip Kebres and wife Sarah (Grunabiein), originally of Lebanon County, Pa. Her mother stood in Tower City, Pa. Mr. Bond with his family now resides in the Uriah Biery homestead at Shamrock, Longswamp township, this county.

Having been in humble circumstances, Mr. Bond received aid from the Ministerium of Pennsylvania through the recommendation of his pastor, the late Rev. B. S. Smoll, and the Rev. F. J. F. Schantz, D. D., chairman of the then executive committee, to complete his collegiate and theological training, which aid, out of gratitude and love, and from a sense of bounden duty, he has by strenuous efforts returned, that the same might be used again and again. He has been a zealous contributor for the welfare of his denomination and the Ministry. His beloved parents, to whom he owes a never-to-be-paid debt of gratitude, are still living at Lenharts-ville, nearing the seventieth milestone in their toilsome pilgrimage of life.

FISHER. The Fisher family is traced as far back as (I) Henry Fisher, the great-grandfather of Daniel D. Fisher, of Oley township. He was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, but came to Oley township when a young man and took up some 333 acres of fertile land one mile north of the “Yellow House,” most of which land has been in the possession of the family ever since. He was a man of common sense and when he put up his home in 1801, he built it so substantially that it still stands as a comfortable shelter for his great-grandchildren. He is buried in Huntington county, his death occurring while on a visit there. His daughter Polly had married Henry S. Spang, of Huntington, and he had gone to pay her a visit, but he was advanced in years and the trip proved too much for him. On Jan. 1, 1871, he married Susanna Ruth, also of Heidelberg township, born Oct. 29, 1861, daughter of Christian Ruth. After forty years, four months and eleven days of married life, she died May 12, 1905, aged fifteen years and thirteen days. She was the first to be buried in the then newly acquired burial plot of the Oley Churches. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fisher: John, of Oley, but later of Hereford township; Samuel of Oley township; Daniel, of Oley township; Henry, of Oley, who left home and as his whereabouts could not be traced, was given up as lost; Sally Abraham married to Jacob V. R. Hunter, of Reading, who operated Sally Ann Furnace, of Rockland township, Berks county (named after Mrs. Hunter), which furnace was discontinued in 1869; and Polly, married to Henry S. Spang, also one of the pioneer iron-masters of Pennsylvania, who operated the Etna Works, of the Yellow House, Pennsylvania, and has a son, Russell (they reside with Mr. Fisher); Nevin D. and Daniel W. are unmarried and residing at home; Mary Eliza died in 1885; Henry Wayne died in 1890; and twins died in infancy.

Mr. Fisher is one of the most prominent men of Oley township, and his public spirit and progressiveness he has placed him before the people of his locality upon many occasions.

JOHN B. DAMPMAN was born in Chester county, Pa., July 29, 1851. He is the son of Jacob and Catharine (Dampman) Dampman, both descended on his father’s and mother’s side from the early settlers of Chester county.

Mr. Dampman was educated in the common schools of Chester county, was a student in New England schools, and afterward graduated from Pennington (N. J.) Seminary. He taught school in his early days, and in 1873 entered the office of George F. Baer, as a student at law, being admitted to the Bar of Berks county in 1875. He engaged in the practice of his profession for six years, and in 1881 became the founder of the Reading Herald, continuing as its editor and proprietor for fifteen years, during which time he made it a newspaper of considerable force in the community. In 1896 he sold the Herald to William McCormick and went upon the staff of the Pittsburgh Times, as editorial writer and literary editor. He remained there for upward of five years, during which time he became a prominent and well-known figure in Pittsburgh journalism.

In 1901 he resigned from the Times, and returning to Reading took up the profession of advertising, in which he has had considerable success, especially in the line of bank advertising and in political advertising, though he has been busily employed also in mercantile commissions. In his new line, he has conducted many important campaigns, one of which was the notable contest which resulted in the formation of Greater Pittsburgh.

Mr. Dampman was one of the founders of the Reading Press Club and has taken a prominent part in newspaper organizations, having been for a time a member of the governing board of the International League of Press Clubs, of which he was one of the founders. He was also an officer of the Press Club and represented that organization at several national conventions.

Mr. Dampman married in 1879 Miss Annie L. Frees, of Reading, and has one son, Lieutenant Paul E. Dampman, of the United States navy, who graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1904, and has since seen service in various parts of the world.

DANIEL H. DEETER, master mechanic of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, is a native son of Reading, Berks county, born in 1833. His father, Henry Deeter, was with this company for forty-seven years, the services of father and son covering the remarkably long period of sixty-five years.

Henry Deeter died Sept. 28, 1887, at the age of fifty-nine years, eleven months, after a successful career as a railroad man. When only a boy of thirteen he became locomotive fireman for Timothy Jackson, and at the early age of sixteen was made a locomotive engineer. He continued in that capacity, serving also as wreck master and engineer for the company until the close of his life. Mr. Deeter, a very private man, and never married, had born to him two children, namely: Emma (m. William Noll); Henry H., who is foreman in the Port Richmond shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company; Annie (m. J. W. Ben nemith); Isaac L., a machinist; Miss Mary E., who is living in Philadelphia; and Daniel H. The family of this family was a member of the Reformed Church. For thirty-eight years he belonged to the I. O. O. F.

Daniel H. Deeter was educated in the Reading public schools and private institutions. He took up the study of mechanical drawing under Robert E. Frenzel, and later his private investigations in this line from SchwenkfelderGood and Kemmerer of the Philadelphia & Reading shops, serving his time as a machinist, as well as in drafting, in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company. All of his working years have been passed in the employ of this concern. He left the office to acquire practical experience in the care and operation of a locomotive, serving as fireman, engineer, wreck master, round house foreman, assistant road foreman of engines, road foreman of engines and on July 16, 1900, he became master mechanic of the Philadelphia and New York division of the road. On November 1, 1877 he was raised to the present position of master mechanic at the Philadelphia & Reading locomotive shops in Reading. Here he has 2,500 men under his supervision, and some idea of the volume of work done in the vast establishment may be gained from the statement that an average of ninety locomotives is turned out every week.

Mr. Deeter has devoted his entire life to acquiring proficiency in his chosen calling. He has never spared himself in adding to his general knowledge by study or research, and has not only kept abreast of modern times and methods but has been the leader in many of the most progressive mechanical improvements in his time. The position he holds is sufficient evidence of his ability, and as of his right classed among the foremost men of the present time in his branch of mechanics. His practical experience in his work has been most comprehensive. Mr. Deeter is a self-made man in the truest sense. He has acquired his position and the knowledge which enables him to hold by his own efforts, never relaxed under the many demands made upon his strength and time. His attainments are noteworthy, and have gained him the respect and admiration of all the men with whom he has been brought into contact. Mr. Deeter is a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, and the Reading Railway Company. He is a member of A. O. N. M. S. He is a member of the Second Reformed Church, and is independent in politics.

On June 3, 1884, Mr. Deeter married Frances C. Harrison, and they had two children; J. Harrison, a graduate of Haven College, Philadelphia, who died Aug. 25, 1907, aged eighteen years; six months; and Evelyn, at school.

ANDREW SCHULTZ, in his lifetime one of the extensive land owners of Berks county, with a comfortable home near Barto, was born in Hereford township, Berks county, May 19, 1813, a descendant from an old family which came to America from the Kingdom of Saxony.

Melchiur Schultz was born June 26, 1860, and he died Feb. 15, 1874, in the forty-fourth year of his age, at Berhelisdorf, Saxony. His death took place just about two months before the time set for his emigration to America. His children were: George, Melchior and Christopher, the latter of whom became minister.

George Schultz, son of Melchior and brother to Rev. Christopher, married, Jan. 31, 1744. Maria, daughter of Abraham Yankel, and they made their home in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery, Co., Pa. Their children were: Abraham, born March 25, 1756; George Schultz died Oct. 1778, aged sixty-five years, and his wife Maria passed away Dec. 18, 1797, at the age of seventy-nine years.

Abraham Schultz, son of George and Maria, was born in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, March 25, 1747. He was a great lover of books and, having the facilities of the school in Philadelphia, he became one of the best educated men of the time. He was a member of the Schwenkfelder religious society, and he served it in the capacity of trustee, school inspector, teacher and catechist. The community frequently called his services into requisition as scrivener and counsellor. In 1786 he was elected a member of the General Assembly from Montgomery county. He died on Dec. 25, 1814. In 1774 he married Regina Yankel, daughter of Christopher Yankel, and their children were: Benjamin, born July 20, 1772, died March 20, 1802; Adam, born Sept. 20, 1775; Isaac, born March 4, 1778; Abraham, born Feb. 18, 1781; Henry, born March 21, 1784. Yet Frederick, born Aug. 18, 1784, died Dec. 17, 1794; Joseph, born Jan. 22, 1797; and Melchior, born June 23, 1790.

Adam Schultz, son of Abraham, was born Sept. 20, 1775, in Upper Hanover township, and died Aug. 30, 1831. He lived at Treichlersville, in Hereford township, where he was engaged in farming, owning a fine farm of 140 acres there and one of 214 acres in Washington township. He was very successful in his undertakings, and became very well-to-do. On May 21, 1803, he married Regina Kriebel, who was born June 25, 1780, and who died May 3, 1858. Their children were: Abraham, born April 12, 1803, died Dec. 5, 1914; Israel, born Nov. 1, 1806; Jesse, born April 8, 1808, died Nov. 7, 1831; Adam, born Sept. 21, 1810, died Nov. 12, 1831; Andrew, born May 19, 1813; Enoch, born March 31, 1816; Sarah, born Sept. 1, 1818; died May 11, 1820; Regina, born Oct. 9, 1821; Solomon, born Nov. 19, 1822; died June 4, 1834.

Andrew Schultz, in the subject proper of this sketch, was in his early life a farmer at Treichlersville. He was a man of much enterprise and became quite wealthy. He owned three farms lying adjacent to each other, three-quarters of a mile Southeast of Barto. The tract originally contained 314 acres, but this he divided into three equal parts, each three sets of buildings. He also owned a farm of seventy-seven acres in township. He built a grist mill in Montgomery county, which is now owned by William Himmelwright. He built himself a large three-story brick residence near Barto, and there he died Nov. 27, 1855. He is buried at the Schwenkfelder church near Clayton. He married Sarah Mohr, who was born Sept. 1, 1818, daughter of Andrew and Catherine Ann (Meckling) Mohr, of Centreville, Lehigh Co., Pa., and was married May 10, 1839. They had five children: Anna, who died young; Emory, who died aged thirty-two years; Mary A. M.; and Harrison, who died aged twenty-three years.

Miss Mary A. M. Schultz, daughter of Andrew, is now residing at the old home near Barto. She was educated in the public schools and at the Potterton Seminary for Ladies, and was one of the first teachers of Miss N. Ermentrout, teaching one term at Barto in a school-house long since torn down. She is a member of the Schwenkfelder Church near Clayton, in Hereford township. Miss Schultz is a charming woman and is very attractive. She has a valuable collection of rare china and books.

ALBERT RITTER, who has been known to the citizens of Reading for nearly half a century as a professional musician, was born in that city Feb. 26, 1838, son of Joel and Angeline (Bechtel) Ritter, and member of a family long known to Pennsylvania.

The Ritters are of German descent. The first American ancestor was one of the early settlers of Oley (or Exeter) township, and his descendants have lived in that locality for a period of one hundred and fifty or more years.

Francis Ritter was born in Exeter township, where he continued farming successfully all his life. On Jan. 3, 1879, when Der Reading Adler was established, he purchased an interest in same, and put his son John in the office to learn the printing and publishing business. He was the father of seven children, namely: Daniel, born in 1776, married Susanna Snyder, and died in 1853; John is mentioned above; Jacob; Samuel, born April 13, 1790; m. Catharine Kast, and died Sept. 8, 1860; Mrs. Charles Kessler; Mrs. Nicholas Seidel; and Mrs. Samuel Christian.

Hon. John Ritter, son of Francis, was born in Exeter township, Feb. 6, 1779. He was reared upon a farm, and at the age of eighteen went to Reading and entered the Adler office to learn the printer's trade. He devoted himself to study to make up for lack of early advantages. He continued with the Adler office, and on June 29, 1802, became the owner of a half interest in the plant. He was prominent in public affairs, and during President James K. Polk's administration served (1843-45) in the Congress of the United States, and a strong party man. Mr. Ritter died Nov. 24, 1851, aged seventy-two years, and his wife Catharine (Frailey) Ritter, in 1863, aged eighty years. Mr. and Mrs. Ritter were the parents of nineteen children, all of whom are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery, having been formerly interred, however, in the old Reformed Church cemetery at the corner of Washington and Reed streets. All of these children, with the exception of three, died before reaching their majority. The three reaching mature years were: Joel; Louis, born April 3, 1813, who obtained the Adler from his father and was its proprietor for many years, aged 82, who died Oct. 16, 1899; and Aaron, born April 15, 1816, also a printer connected with the Adler, who died at No. 232 Penn street, Reading, Nov. 11, 1873.

The family were originally members of the Reformed Church, but later became Universalists. Mr. Ritter donating the plot of ground on which the Universalist church now stands. Mr. Ritter was a man of high principles and was widely known for his great part in advancing the interests of the city of Reading.

Joel Ritter, son of Hon. John, was born in Reading Dec. 15, 1811, and was educated in Reading Academy. He, too, was a printer by trade, learning this and gaining the knowledge of a journeyman should be conducted in his father's office. He then became editor of the Jefferson Democrat, and continued as such some time. He next embarked in the lumber business in Reading, locating in the lower part of the town, where he continued until 1850, when a freshet greatly damaged his property, and he abandoned the business. He was always interested in politics as a firm believer in Democratic principles, and from 1839 to 1842 served as prothonotary of Berks County. During President Buchanan's administration he held a position in the United States Customs Department at Philadelphia. For seven years prior to his death Mr. Ritter was an invalid, and he was reared fifty-six years. He was twice married, his first wife, Angeline Bechtel, dying in 1840, when twenty-six years of age, and leaving two sons, John Francis and Albert. He married (second) Miss Barbara A. Roland, and to this union were born: Anna and Francis, who both died in infancy; Henry, who died in 1879; and Ida, who resides at No. 325 Washington street, Reading. Mr. Ritter was past master of Lodge No. 82, F. & A. M.; was exalted a Royal Arch Mason in 1841; and made a Knight Templar in St. John's Commandery in Philadelphia in 1848. John Francis Ritter was born Jan. 24, 1836. He received his education in Boyertown Academy, and was appointed to the West Point Military Academy July 1, 1853, graduating therefrom July 1, 1856, at which latter date he was appointed second lieutenant, 5th United States Infantry. He served in Florida against the Seminole Indians, 1856-58; afterwards was stationed in Pennsylvania, and in frontier duty in the Utah Expedition, 1857-60. Mr. Ritter's army record continues as follows: March to New Mexico, 1860; Fort Fontenot, N. M., 1860; Fort Dodge, N. M., 1860-61; Fort Union, N. M., 1861; promoted first lieutenant, 5th U. S. Inf., March 27, 1861; transferred to 15th U. S. Inf., May 14, 1861; Battery, May 14, 1861, May 16, 1862; promoted captain, May 14, 1861; engaged in action of Apache, Canon, March 28, 1862; Peralta, April 14, 1863; brevetted major March 28, 1862, for "gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Apache, Canon, N. M."; in campaign resulting in the capture of Confederate General Shelby May, 1862; made Colonel, 1st Missouri Cavalry, Aug. 9, 1863; in camp near Helena, Ark., Sept.—Nov., 1862; acting inspector general of the Army of the Southwest, November, 1862; in the defenses at Memphis, Tenn., Dec., 1862—July, 1863; commanding brigade 16th Army Corps, March, 1863; in command Third Brigade, Davidson's Cavalry Division, in campaign resulting in the capture of Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 10, 1863; brevetted lieutenant-colonel, Sept. 10, 1863, for gallant services at the capture of Little Rock; on leave of absence Oct. 14, 1863—Jan. 6, 1864; in command of cavalry brigade, 7th Army Corps, Little Rock, Ark., January—July 18, 1864; in command of Division, 15th U. S. Inf., Dept. of Arkansas, May 18, 1864—June 16, 1865, and of company at Lookout Mountain, Tenn., April—August, 1865; on leave of absence, Aug. 12—Sept. 24, 1865; in garrison at Mobile, Ala., Sept. 24, 1865—Jan. 18, 1866; Vicksburg, Miss., January—September, 1866, being acting assistant inspector general of the Department of Mississippi, March 7—Sept. 25, 1866, transferred to 33d U. S. Inf., Sept. 21, 1860; in command, Natchez, Miss., Sept. 21, 1866—Dec. 1, 1866; Macon, Ga., Jan. 4—April 15, 1867; and Rome, Ga., April, 1867. His last regiment was the 8th United States Infantry. He died at Catskill, N. Y., Aug. 11, 1872, and was buried in the family plot in the Charles Evans cemetery, Reading. He had the respect and esteem of officers and men; he all recognized his great kindness of heart and irreproachable character.

Albert Ritter was educated in the common schools of Reading, and also at Clinton Liberal Institute, Clinton, N. Y. Returning to Reading he engaged as a dry goods salesman for Asa M. Hart for two years, and then took up the study of music. He was organist of St. Peter's Church (Catholic), and for ten years at Trinity Lutheran Church. He has given his life to his art, studying under both French and German instructors, and he taught music in Reading for a period of forty-five years. He retired in June, 1908. Mr. Ritter is well known not only all over the city of Reading, but in the surrounding country as well, having been one of the leaders in his profession. He is a member of St. John’s Lodge, No. 433, F. & A. M., in which he is past master. He was made a Mason May 14, 1869; is past high priest in Reading Royal Arch Chapter, No. 152; member of Creigh Council, No. 16; past commander of De Moyal Commandery No. 8, K. T.; and is a thirty-second-degree Mason, formerly belonging to the Supreme Council for Pennsylvania. He is a charter member of Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and also belongs to the Masonic Veterans. For eleven years he served on the board of managers of the Masonic Home of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia. In 1865 Mr. Ritter enlisted in Company E, 11th Pennsylvania militia, Emergency Corps, and later re-enlisted in the 43d Pennsylvania, serving as first corporal until discharged by General Orders. He is a member of Gen. William H. Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R.; and at present (1909) he is serving as Aide-de-Camp on the staff of Gen. Henry M. Nevius, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is connected with the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Department of Pennsylvania, and is a member of the Republican party since its organization. He has not been connected with its local management. He is the advocate of a high standard of municipal government, and a warm supporter of every movement for civil, social and moral reform. He has no superior in his own community in the zeal and energy which he devotes to the promotion of organized charity and practical benevolence.

FREDERIC A. ROLAND. One of the prominent business men of Reading is Frederic A. Roland, Cashier of the Second National Bank. In matters of finance Mr. Roland is looked upon as a safe and conservative counsellor, and his careful and efficient service has done much to place the institution which he represents in the enviable position it holds in the financial world.

Mr. Roland is a son of Henry A. and Jane W. (Heyl) Roland, of New Holland, Pa. He is descended from an old and prominent family, which has been associated with affairs in America for about two hundred years. The Rolands were originally from the region of the Rhine in Germany known as the Palatinate. Jacob Roland, great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was one of the thousands who on account of religious persecution left Germany, and came to America some time after 1709. In 1733 a large tract of land in the vicinity of New Holland, was granted to him by Thomas Penn, one of the Proprietors of the Colony of Pennsylvania. Since that time the family has been more or less prominent locally and in the affairs of the State.

In 1775, Jonathan Roland, a son of Jacob, and great-grandfather of Frederic A., was one of the Committee of Safety chosen to provide for and protect the country during the trying times of our war for Independence.

Henry Roland, grandfather of Frederic A., was during his life prominent in the local affairs of his district. Mr. Roland’s father, F. P. Roland, a native of Pennsylvania, was a distinguished officer under General Washington and during and following our war with Mexico.

Henry A. Roland resided during his life time in New Holland, taking an active interest in local enterprises. A gentleman of deep learning and high principles, his advice was eagerly sought and cheerfully given. He died in 1901, at the advanced age of eighty-one, and lies buried amongst his forefathers in the Trinity Lutheran Cemetery at New Holland. He married Jane W. Heyl, daughter of Philip and Margaret Heyl. She is descended from an old Philadelphia family, whose lineage dates from 1702.

Besides Frederic A. four other were also born to this union: Dr. Oliver and William H. Roland, both of Lancaster, older sons, the latter a leading attorney.

Frederic A. Roland, who forms the subject of this review, was born in New Holland, and passed the formative period of his life among the scenes and people which gave sturdiness to his ancestry. He was carefully educated in the public schools, and later matriculated at Princeton College, New Jersey, from which famous institution he graduated in 1879. The following year he came to Reading with the intention of entering upon a legal career, but after the study of law for a period of nine months, he accepted a position with the Second National Bank as teller, and in 1889 was promoted to the Cashiership, which position he has since honored. Mr. Roland is also a Director of the Second National Bank. He was one of the original Committee appointed to organize the Reading Clearing House Association in 1906, and has been an active officer of that important Association ever since.
WILLIAM D SMITH
JACOB D. HOFFMAN, a substantial and highly respected farmer of Perry township, Berks county, was born April 16, 1846, in Windsor township, son of Samuel and Hannah (Dunkel) Hoffman.

Mr. Hoffman belongs to a family which has been established on American soil for many generations. The earliest portion of whom we have authentic information was Jacob Hoffmann, who came from the Rhine Valley during the middle of the eighteenth century. In 1756, when the first tax of Greenwich township was collected, he was a taxable. It is known that he had these children, George and Michael. The former was the great-grandfather of Jacob D. Hoffman, and the latter is mentioned elsewhere in this work. He served in the Revolutionary War for the freedom of his country from oppressive British rule. The following record of his service is in evidence.

Pennsylvania State Library Division of Public Records.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 17, 1906.

To Whom It May Concern:

I hereby certify that the name of Michael Hoffman appears as that of a private on the roll of Captain Michael Funer's Company, of Berks County Militia, stationed at South Amboy, N. J., September 5, 1776. Later his name appears again as a private on the Roll of Captain Jacob Baldy's Company which was mustered into service August 10, 1780.

Custodian of the Public Records of the Pa. State Library. [The seal of the Department of the State Public Records is affixed to the document.]

George Hoffman, the great-grandfather of Jacob D. Hoffman, was a farmer all his life. His wife was Hannah Schappell, and they had a large family of children, among whom were: Michael, born in 1786, died in 1874; and George, who, tradition says, settled in Hereford township. Jacob, who worked in Windsor as a post office in Berks county in 1847, he mentions these children: Jacob, Henry, Dora, Elizabeth (which was also the name of his wife) Christian, Abraham, Hannah and Rebeka.

Michael Hoffman, grandfather of Jacob D., was born Nov. 28, 1786, and died Jan. 10, 1874, at the age of eighty-seven years, one month and twelve days. The major part of his life he devoted to the cultivation of the homestead, which is situated in Perry township, and is now owned by George Hoffman, a grandson. He erected the stone house which is still standing in an excellent state of preservation. Frequently he made trips to Philadelphia with four or six horse teams, and exchanged farm products for general merchandise such as the farmers needed. He was an influential man and wielded considerable political influence, being elected on the Democratic ticket to the State Assembly in 1845, 1846 and 1847, riding to the State Capitol on horseback and taking some of his provisions with him. His salary was seventy-five cents per day. He was an official member of Zion's Lutheran Church, was regular in church worship and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He married Catherine Shappell, born Sept. 15, 1780, daughter of Eberhart and Catherine Shappell, natives of Germany. Mrs. Hoffman died Dec. 29, 1854, and her husband for many years after her death, were born these children: Samuel, oldest born (1808-1879); George (1811-1887) m. Abbe Fisher (1816-1871); Michael (1813-1874) m. Esther Wartzenclus; Charles (1816-1900) m. Rachel Dunkel, and Benjamin (1820-1896) m. (first) Susanna Fisher and married (second) Elizabeth Bailey.

Jacob Hoffman, eldest son of Michael & Catherine Hoffman, was born Nov. 28, 1808, and died in the year 1879. He obtained a good education in the pay schools of his day and in the Morgantown Academy, after graduating from which he engaged in agricultural pursuits, in which he continued for the remainder of his life. He was a successful man, owning in six sections of land. He was a prime of the farm. In 1844, he made a trip to the west; in 1847, he was a director in the Shoemakersville Building & Loan Association, of the Farmers Assistance and Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and of the Reading Savings Bank. Politically he espoused the principles of Thomas Jefferson. He was elected as a Democrat to the office of county surveyor, as which he served from 1848 to 1850, and as justice of the peace, serving in this office for upwards of fifty years. He was an active worker for Zion's Church of Perry township, and an official for many years. He married Hannah Dunkel, and they had these children: Elizabeth (first), Hannah (second), Michael (third), Jacob D. (fourth), Esther (fifth), and Caroline (sixth).

Jacob D. Hoffman was educated in the public schools until he was sixteen years old, when he entered Freeland Seminary, under the well known Henry Hunsecker, later Dean of the Academy, and completed his education in 1863 at Fairview Academy, one of the oldest and best known academies in the State, and has held the position of principal of the same for the last nine years. Subsequently he taught school for five years, four terms of this being at the Hoffman school in Perry township. In 1865 he associated himself in the mercantile business at Shoemakersville, with Richard Dunkel, the firm name being Dunkle & Hoffman, which continued for one year. Mr. Hoffman then turned his attention to farming and operated the home farm in Windsor (now Perry) township for two years, and then purchased the Bausher farm, of 180 acres, for which he paid $97.25 an acre, two years later making a very advantageous sale of the same, receiving $105 per acre. He settled on his farm now known as Hoffman's residence in 1870, and two years later he purchased his father's farm of 140 acres of good land, and then moved to this farm on which he remained for ten years. He made many improvements during each year, adding materially to the value of the farm. In 1880 he bought his present farm, worth of 160 acres, which is considered some of the best land in the district. Among the modern improvements which he has installed here is a large water tank constructed back of his barn, from which with a two-horse power gasoline engine, he pumps water all over the place. He was one of the prime movers in the building, at the cost of $975, of the Windsor Castle Creamery, and the success of this industry is largely attributable to Mr. Hoffman, who has continued its president from its organization. In 1888 he bought his father's old farm upon which he was born and reared, but some years ago he sold it to his son, George R., now occupies it. It was the desire of our subject that this old farm should remain in the family, and that it should be known as the Hoffman homestead for generations to come.

Mr. Hoffman is one of the most thrifty, prosperous and up-to-date farmers of Perry township, and more than that he is a man of sterling qualities. His word carries weight. His name is mentioned in the highest light, and followed by his neighbors. Politically he is a stanch Democrat, and wields strong influence. On numerous occasions he has been elected to office, having served as school director both in Windsor and Perry townships; was auditor in Perry township for six years; and at present is superior of his district. From 1879 to 1881, inclusive, he was auditor of Berks county, and audited the record of the late Adam M. Dundore, county treasurer. On many occasions he was a delegate to county conventions. Mr. Hoffman is a Lutheran, and with his family regarded as one of the oldest and best member of Society. In 1885, he was elected the last supervisor of his district, and for the past twelve years church treasurer.

On June 3, 1865, Mr. Hoffman was married (first) to Mary Ann Sunday, daughter of George and Mary (Siegfried) Sunday, and a granddaughter of George Sunday. To this union were born the following children: Charles L. m. Elmina Strasser, had two sons, Clinton and Willie (deceased), and had three children, Milton, Mary (deceased) and Wilson; Annie m. Franklin G. Jacoby; and Catherine (deceased) m. Allen Burkhardt and had children, Reana V., Erna M. and Jennie (deceased). On Dec. 17, 1887, Mr. Hoffman was married (second) to Catherine (Shappell) Stump, widow of Alfred Stump and daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Adam) Schappell, and they have one son, Jacob C., at home. By her first marriage Mrs. Hoffman has one son, Elmer L. Stump.
Mr. Wanner's grandfather was John Wanner, of Maiden-creek township, where he was born Oct. 10, 1808. He removed at an early age to Ruscombmanor township, there married Elizabeth Biehl (a daughter of Jacob Oberholtzer) and had six children: Maria Magdalena (m. David Sharadin);
Anna (m. John Mertz); Ephraim, single; William (m. Elizabeth Deisher); John Daniel (m. Elizabeth Bower); Joel B. (m. Louise Zieber); Peter Christian (m. Sarah A. Moyer); John Charles, single;
Dr. Charles Herman (m. Hannah Hilbert); Elizabeth (m. John Humbert); Amos B., above; and Henry, single.

His great-grandfather was Peter Wanner, a farmer of Colebrookdale township, who married three times. His first wife was Esther Rothermel; his second, Anna M. Schwartz, and his third, Magdalena Rothermel.
They had six children, the third named an only child, John Wanner above named.

His great-great-grandfather was Martin Wanner, who emigrated from Pennsylvania to the Palatinate in 1735, on the ship "Samuel," landing on the 17th day of August.

JACOB B. OBERHOLTZER, miller and farmer of Colebrookdale township, who conducts the White mill, located on Swamp creek, was born on the family homestead in Washington township, this county, Oct. 29, 1844. The Oberholzers have lived in Berks county for several generations. According to the Pennsylvania Archives, the name came to America in the early days of the Commonwealth, viz.: Hans Jacob Oberholtzer arrived in 1730; Jacob Oberholtzer arrived in 1732, at which time he was twenty-eight years old, and had a daughter Elizabeth, aged six years, and a son Samuel, aged three years, to accompany him for the New World: Hans Georg Oberholtzer arrived in 1754. One of the two first mentioned settled in Milford township, Montgomery county (now included in Lehigh county), and there is a well-founded tradition that Jacob Oberholtzer, great-grandfather of Jacob B. Oberholtzer, whose name heads this sketch, was of this Montgomery county stock. The family is of Swiss origin, and its members have clung to the Mennonite religion. They have been upright in morals, successful in business and true to the traditions and faith of their forefathers.

Jacob Oberholtzer, previously mentioned as the great-grandfather of Jacob B. Oberholtzer, located about 1770 in Colebrookdale township, but Oberholtzer now included in Washington township. There he continued to make his home until he died, in May, 1811, full of years. He owned land and followed farming. In 1779 this pioneer paid a tax of £121, 10s. sterling. In 1805 he paid $3.70 and his son, Jacob, Jr., $1.79. In 1809 he was president of the bank of Chester, Jone and Dreibelbis, having had by the third name, a Christian man. His will, made Nov. 28, 1810, and probated May 27, 1811 (sons Christian and Jacob, executors), is on record in Will Book A, page 584. He was survived by his wife, Esther, who bore him the following named children: Christian, Jacob, Abraham, Martin, Eve
(m. Abraham Stauffer), Barbara (m. Jacob Stauffer), Esther and Elizabeth.

In Book 7, page 376, there is on record a German will of one Jacob Oberholtzer (the executors being Regina and Joseph Oberholtzer), who may have been a son of Christian Oberholtzer or one of the Montgomery county Oberholtzers.

Martin Oberholtzer, previously mentioned as one of the children of Jacob Oberholtzer (who died in 1811), made his will Aug. 21, 1862, and died the following year in Washington township, where he had spent all his life, engaged in farming. His sons Jacob and Isaac were the executors of his will, which has six children in all, namely:
Polly (m. a Hauserberger). Elizabeth (m. George Yohn), Susanna (m. Matthias Linsenbriker), Isaac, Sarah and Jacob.
Jacob Oberholtzer, born Dec. 5, 1773, another son of Jacob Oberholtzer (who died in 1811), was also a farmer in Washington township, where he owned land. He was a blacksmith by trade, and followed that line of work in

J. EDWARD WANNER, assistant cashier of the National Union Bank, and president of the Reading school board, is a descendant of one of the earliest families which settled in the northeastern section of Berks county.
He was born at Reading on July 11, 1864, and was educated in the local public schools. Upon his graduation from the high school in 1882, he took a commercial course in the Eastman National Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in the fall of that year; and in 1883 he became a clerk in the National Union Bank of Reading, with which financial institution he has continued until the present time. He was gradually promoted from one position to another, and on Feb. 26, 1901, he was elected as assistant cashier by the board of directors on account of his superior record in the service of the bank for nearly twenty years.

In 1892, Mr. Wanner assisted in organizing the Reading Paper Box Company. His brother Howard officiated as president from that time until his decease in 1893; then he succeeded him in the position, which he has filled until now. In 1900 Mr. Wanner was one of the incorporators of the Greath Machine Works for the manufacture of stationary engines, &c., and he was selected as one of the directors, and also vice-president of the company, filling these positions until the present time.

Upon reaching his majority in 1885, Mr. Wanner identified himself with the Americus Club, the leading Democratic Society at Reading, and he took an active part in its success. He has held the position of several years president of the Club several years afterward; and having filled this position for a number of years, when the president, Jefferson M. Keller, Esq., died in 1889, he was elected as his successor. The members have appreciated his services so highly that they have maintained him since then as their president.

In 1894, the Democratic electors of the Seventh Ward elected Mr. Wanner as a school controller, and he has been one of the representatives of the Ward in the board of controllers continuously until now. In 1898 the controllers selected him to be the president of the board; and again in 1903, 1906, 1907 and 1908. While connected with the board, twelve large modern school buildings were erected in different parts of the city; and during his later presidency the superior high school for boys was erected at a total cost of $365,000, this great structure in the cause of local education and the gain of the great deal of money. As a school controller, Mr. Wanner has affiliated with the Free Masons, Elks, Wyomissing Club, Penn Wheelers, and the Junior Volunteer Fire Company.

His parents were amongst the first members of the Second Reformed Church at Reading upon its organization in 1848, and joined the church at that time in his membership until now. The father of Mr. Wanner was Amos B. Wanner, Esq., a prominent member of the Berks County Bar for many years. He was born in Maxat叭wny township (near where the Normal School is situated) in 1831, educated in the local schools and at a seminary at Philadelphia, and admitted to the Bar as an attorney-at-law at Reading in 1857. He became a very successful practitioner and was in active practice until his decease in 1882. He represented the Reading District in the Legislature during the years 1875 and 1876, having been elected on the Democratic ticket; he served as a State Legislator to the Democratic National Convention which assembled at St. Louis in 1876; and he represented the Seventh ward in common council from 1892 to 1884, officiating as president of that body during the first year. He was married to Clementine C. Zieber (a daughter of Philip Zieber, of Reading, for many years in business in Berks county, and prominently identified with the insurance and real estate business in this section of the State). She was born in 1883 and died in 1893, shortly after his marriage. They had three children: Howard
P. (a practicing attorney at Reading who died in 1905 at the age of thirty-four years); George A. (who is engaged in the manufacturing and insurance business at Reading); and J. Edward, the subject of this sketch.
connection with farming. He married Esther Moyer, born March 16, 1784, died Jan. 13, 1843, who bore him two sons and one daughter, Susanna and John M. reaching maturity. The daughter married Henry Landes, and they had a daughter Susanna, who became the wife of a Jacob Oberholtzer. As both Mrs. Landes and John M. Oberholtzer preceded their father to the grave the latter's estate was divided among the grandchildren. Mr. Oberholtzer made his will Jan. 19, 1858, and it was probated April 19, 1859. The executors were his friends Jacob M. and Jacob C. Oberholtzer. He died April 3, 1859.

John (Johannes) M. Oberholtzer, son of Jacob and Sarah, married Anna Bliem (daughter of Jacob Bliem), born Nov. 4, 1815, died Oct. 26, 1884, and to them were born six children, viz.: Mary, who married John Bechtel; Hettie, wife of Eli Bechtel; Amos, of Bechtelsville; Jacob B.; Anna, wife of Joseph Moyer; and Minerva, wife of H. S. Stauffer. All this family were Mennonites and active in church life. Mr. Oberholtzer is buried at the Mennonite Cemetery, Bally. Jacob B. Oberholtzer reared to farming, growing up on the old home place in Washington township. As he was only twelve years old at the time of his father's death responsibilities came early to him and his brother, both remaining at home. Jacob worked for his mother until he was nearly twenty-five years old, he and his brother buying the homestead in 1869, after which they continued to cultivate the place together until 1872. That year Jacob B. Oberholtzer moved to Bechtelsville, where he lived until 1903, when he came to the place he has since occupied, in Colebrookdale township. He has the old Bechtelsville mill property, originally owned by one Michael Renninger, and which Mr. Oberholtzer has owned since 1874, and which he has conducted. Mr. Oberholtzer is a man who takes an interest in the public welfare as well as in his own affairs, and he was prominent during his residence in Bechtelsville as one of the organizers of the borough, becoming its first secretary and later serving as chief burgess; he also served as township auditor and school director. Since settling in Colebrookdale he has been elected to the office of township auditor, in which he served efficiently. He is a Republican in political opinions.

On Nov. 6, 1869, Mr. Oberholtzer married Malinda Clemmer, daughter of Christian and Barbara (Gehman) Clemmer, and granddaughter of John Gehman. Mrs. Oberholtzer died June 25, 1888, at the age of forty-three years, and is buried at the Mennonite meeting-house at Bally. She was the mother of five children, namely: Eli, who lives in Douglass township, Montgomery Co.; John, of Philadelphia; Ida, who is unmarried and keeps house for her father; and Abraham and David, both of Philadelphia. Mr. Oberholtzer and his family hold fast to the religion of their forefathers, being New Mennonites in faith. They belong to the church of that denomination at Bally.

JAMES F. RHoads, assistant superintendent of the Reading Hardware Company, and one of the representative business men of Reading, Pa., was born at Lime- rick Square, Montgomery Co., Pa., Jan. 2, 1858, son of Levinus Rhoads.

(1) Jacob Rhoads, the first of the Rhoads family of whom there is definite mention, was a farmer and miller of Boyertown, Pa., where at one time he owned large milling interests. He had two brothers, John and Henry, both of whom lived and died at Boyertown. Jacob Rhoads owned the old mill at Mohrsville, which he built and he died at Boyertown, where he is buried. His wife was a Miss Kline, also of Boyertown, where she died. To Jacob Rhoads and his wife were born: Lydia m. Sebastian Buchert, and they died in Montgomery county; Deet- er died in Montgomery county; Samuel died in Montgomery county; Jan. Rhoads died in Montgomery county; Mrs. David Wise died in Montgomery county; Daniel; Maria m. John Peltz (both died in Philadelphia); Rebecca m. Abraham Harberger, and died in Montgomery county.

(II) Daniel Rhoads, grandfather of James F. Rhoads, was born in Montgomery county, in 1801, and spent his life engaged in farming in his native county, he owning an excellent farm in New Hanover township, where he moved in 1837. This farm of eighty-five acres he farmed until his death in 1884. His wife was Catherine Yerger, daughter of Jonas A. Yerger and wife (whose maiden name was Reiff), and their children were: Levinus; Sam-uel J.; John; and Anna A. at Swash, Montgomery county; Lydia married Henry Spiter, and died at Reading; John Y. died at Engiesville, aged sixty years; Jacob Y. died at Boyertown; Mary m. Daniel Botts; and Henry Y. died at Reading.

(III) Levinus Rhoads, father of James F., was born in New Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa., Nov. 21, 1828. Learning the saddler's trade in Montgomery county, he followed it for four years, but then embarked in farming in Marlborough township. On April 2, 1865, he sold his farm and removing to Reading, engaged in the grocery business, and later operated a hotel for about twelve years. The hotel, the "Montgomery House," is still very popular, and is a monument to him and his progressiveness. In 1890 he retired and now lives in his own home at No. 918 North Eleventh street. In addition to this property he owns valuable realty in Reading.

On Dec. 15, 1855, he married Catherine Rahn, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Smith) Rahn, of Montgomery county, and their children are: James F.; Lizzie m. Linneas Seid-ers, resides at No. 1022 North Tenth street, Reading, and has one daughter, Ada; Hiram, who died aged thirty-eight, m. Sallie Moyer, who now resides at No. 956 North Front street, Reading, and has two children, Ada and Laura; Henry, who is now a merchant in Reading; and Levinus Rhoads is a Democrat, although never very ac- tively identified with political life. He has now retired from business affairs, and is passing the sunset of life in peace and quiet, and in the enjoyment of a well-earned competency.

(IV) James F. Rhoads received his education in the public schools of Reading, having been brought to this city when a boy. While attending school, he worked in the grocery store of his father. From 1871 to 1882 he was employed in the grocery business in Reading, but in the latter year he entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Company, commencing as a clerk on January 16th. From that position he was gradually and successively pro-moted until he finally attained his present responsible position, through merit alone. Having filled all the various positions of this big plant, he is peculiarly fitted for his present position, and his worth is recognized by his firm.

On Oct. 22, 1882, Mr. Rhoads was married to Miss Angelina Eiler, daughter of Peter L. and Emma (Brenizer) Eiler, the former a well-known merchant of Reading, Pa., where Mrs. Rhoads was born. Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads have a very pleasant home at No. 908 Pear street. They have seven children.

Fraternally Mr. Rhoads is a member of the Reading Hardware Relief Association, and he is also connected with the Liberty Fire Company, of Reading. His religious belief is that of the Lutherans, and he is a member of the Grace Lutheran Church, and is very active in its work. In political opinions he is a Republican, but like his father he is no politician, he preferring to exert his influence in a private way. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads are very promi-nent in church and social circles. Mr. Rhoads has built up for himself a lasting reputation as a man possessing most excellent personal traits of character. He is up-wardly honorable in his business transactions, and is imbued with that generous public spirit that is always ready to assist in whatever is calculated to promote the welfare of his community.
AUGUSTUS HARNER, one of the venerable residents of Berks county, Pa., who until 1896 was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Heidelberg township, is now living retired near Shaver's schoolhouse, and has the respect and esteem of the entire community. Mr. Harner was born Jan. 20, 1827, in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Jacob and Susanna (Wann) Harner.

Daniel Harner, grandfather of Augustus, was a tobacco dealer at Rebersburg, a substantial business man of his locality, and one of the first to engage in that line in his section. He is buried at Rebersburg church, in Bethel township. Daniel Harner's children were: Jacob; George, whose son Horace worked in a bank in Reading; Frederick, a legislator of Berks county from 1865 to 1867; and Ann, who married a Ritter, a farmer, and in the latter's time the family was located in what is now Berks county, Pa.

Jacob Harner, father of Augustus, was a resident of Cumru township, and being in humble circumstances, worked on the old Seitzinger farm where the State Constabulary has been situated for many years. He married Susanna Wann, and both are buried at Aulenbach cemetery in Reading. Jacob Harner passed his last days at the home of his son, Jacob, Jr. To Mr. and Mrs. Harner were born these children: Augustus; Amelia m. John Kachel; Margaret m. Albert Cleaver; Jacob, of Reading. m. Louise Koch; Mary Ann m. George Strunk, of Reading; and James, a boiler-maker of Palmyra, died in Reading.

Augustus Harner obtained his education in the paupers' school near where he lived in Cumru township, and he was reared on the farm on which his father worked. In 1857 he purchased the old Shower homestead in Heidelberg township, and here he has since resided, being actively engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1906, since which time the farm has been rented to his son-in-law, Mr. Noll. On this property of seventy-five acres, Mr. Harner erected all of the present buildings, the house being built in 1874, as well as the substantial 80 x 40 barn. He has always been industrious and hard-working and never lost in the pursuit of his life that he can afford to enjoy some of the fruits of his hard labor. Mr. Harner is very well read, the Bible being one of his favorite works. He can speak both English and German fluently, and in spite of his eighty years is very well preserved, both in mind and body, and is an excellent conversationalist. In political matters he is a Democrat, and his popularity in this section has been attested by his election to various offices of trust and responsibility in his township. Mr. Harner is a Reformed member of Hain's Church, of which he was deacon and elder, while his family attend the Corner Church.

In 1853 Mr. Harner married Mary Ann Shower, born Jan. 24, 1829, who died Nov. 24, 1898, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Wenrich) Shower, and to this union one child has been born: S. Agnes m. William Noll, and of their two children, a son and a daughter, their daughter married Ulysses Leman and has two sons: Paul Augustus and Charles Alfred.

WILLIAM F. HECHLER, one of the leading citizens of West Reading, Pa., who is serving as one of the first councilmen of the new borough, was born Aug. 22, 1859, in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Amos and Elizabeth (Kissling) Hechler.

Rudolph Hechler (Hechler), the founder of this numerous family in America, came to this country from the Fatherland prior to 1741, and settled in Exeter township, where he became the owner of considerable land. In 1759 he was one of the heaviest tax payers of the district, paying 56 pounds in taxes, and he was considered a leading citizen of his locality.

Daniel Hechler, the grandfather of William F., was a cabinet-maker by trade, an occupation which he followed in Exeter township, where he died at the age of eighty-seven years. He married a Miss Ritter, who reached the age of seventy-five years, the family being buried in the Ritter cemetery at Exeter township, and Mr. Hechler at Alsace Church. They had children as follows: Elam, a hatter, settled in Reading; Amos; Laurence died in Schuylkill county; Elizabeth died single; and Mrs. Joseph Snyder.

Hechler, father of William F., was born in Exeter township, but as a young man removed to Penn township, where he worked first at farm work, and later at blacksmithing. He also learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for upward of thirty years, then engaging in the saw mill business in Luzerne county, Pa., and later at Reading. He next went to Caroline county, Md., where he died in 1873, at the age of forty-eight years. Mr. Hechler was married to Elizabeth Kissling, daughter of John and Catherine (Spayd) Kissling, of Penn township. She died in Caroline county, Md., at the age of forty-four years, five years after the death of her husband. Both are buried at Burn Church in Penn township. Mr. and Mrs. Hechler had these children: William F.; Leander m. M. H. Cohee, of Caroline county, Md., and died in 1875; Charles W. is of Wilmington, Del.; and Rosanna m. Irwin D. Klopp, of West Reading, Pennsylvania.

William F. Hechler attended the schools of Penn township and his first work was on the farm, where he continued until nineteen years of age. He then learned the cabinet-making trade, which he followed for nine years, after which he took up carpentering, an occupation at which he was engaged for a like period, after which he served a term of sixteen years at the old West Reading Planing Mill. In 1905 Mr. Hechler engaged with Schrader & Kline, of Penn street, working at cabinet making. Mr. Hechler came to West Reading in 1889, and in 1895 built his home at No. 516 Penn avenue. He is a Democrat in politics and has become very prominent in public matters. For three years he served as a member of the school board of Spring township, and while in office, in 1899, assisted in building the large schoolhouse now located in the borough of West Reading. On May 7, 1907, he was elected to the council of West Reading, as one of the first members of that body. He is a member of St. James Reformed Church of West Reading, for three years served in the consistory, and for several years was also a teacher in the Sunday-school. Fraternally he is connected with the Royal Arcanum, the Brotherhood of America, and the Sr. O. U. A. M.

Mr. Hechler married Rebecca Rishel, daughter of William and Maria (Wenrich) Rishel. To them there have been born children as follows: Annie m. William H. Mat- tes; Evan W. m. Annie Hunter; Paul H., of Coatesville, Pa., m. Annie Sunday; Rosie m. Morris Wagner; Katie m. Edward Adams; William, single; Miss Sallie and Adam, twins, of whom the latter died at the age of eight months; and May Edna died when twenty-three days old.

CYRUS J. RHODE. Many years ago there lived in Rich- mond township, Berks county, a Frederick Rhode, who according to family tradition came to America from England, but was by nationality a German. He engaged in farming, married and had a family, but from the information on hand it can not be found who his wife was.

Among other children, this Frederick Rhode had a son, William, born in Richmond township. He was reared on the farm, but learned the trade of stone mason, following that occupation in Greenwich township, whither he removed, for many years, during this time helping to erect many of the substantial stone and brick farm buildings which are such a characteristic feature throughout Greenwich and the adjoining townships. Later in life Mr. Rhode engaged in farming near the town of Grims- ville, and he continued at agricultural pursuits until advanced years, when he gave up active work and from that time on lived retired. In politics he was an old-line Whig, but when the Whig party dissolved he became a Democrat and adhered to the faith of that party for the remainder of his life. He never aspired to public position, but in local affairs bore his full share of the responsibilities required of the citizen. He was interested in educational matters and served as school director in his district. He was a member of the Re- formed Church.
William Rhode married Mary Zimmer, daughter of Daniel and Caroline (Wright) Zimmer, of Greenwich township. She was born in 1832, and was a member of one of the old representative families of that part of Berks county. Daniel Zimmer was born and always lived in Greenwich township, and by occupation was a shoemaker. His death occurred in 1892. Mr. Zimmer was in his 83rd year at his death. It is not definitely known, it is strongly probable that Daniel Zimmer was a descendant of Rudolph Zimmer, who in 1741, when only eighteen-years of age, came from Germany to America in the ship "Freundschaft." He landed at Philadelphia Oct. 12th of that year, and shortly afterward started to go to Pennsylvania, where he was upon the tax list of 1756. Caroline Wright, as her name indicates, was of English descent, but little is known of her ancestry. She had a brother, who during the Civil War was a colonel in the Union army. William Rhode died in 1884, and his wife in 1892, and they were buried in the graveyard of the Union Church at Grimsville. To them were born these children: Eliza A. m. Willoughby Gehringer; Cyrus J.; Anna E. m. Albert Flough; Chester W. m. Emma Stern; Lewis F. m. Hannah Tyson; Charles H. m. Emma Reinhardt; Agnes m. James Love; Westa m. Charles Fritz; Jonathan and Frederick m. and live at Omaha, Nebr.; M. M. m. Rudolph Reinhard; Lena m. Jas. Rosser and Caroline m. Helan Kleffner. Besides, there were also Clara and Ida, who died young.

Cyrus J. Rhode, the second child of William and Mary (Zimmer) Rhode, was born June 11, 1852, near Grimsville, Greenwich township, Berks county. Until reaching the age of 12 years he remained upon the farm, occupied at such duties as were usually allotted to Pennsylvania farmer boys and attending the district school. For the purpose of acquiring a knowledge of the English language he lived a winter with a family named Bush in the northern part of Chester county, and attended a public school there the following spring. He found himself not only for the exacting duties of his calling for which he had prepared himself, but he then concluded to learn a trade, and did consequently serve an apprenticeship at bricklaying, working at this occupation for several years in his own locality and at different points in the Lehigh Valley, as well as at Allentown, Carbondale and in New York State as far up as Syracuse. Later a thirst for knowledge impelled him to spend several terms at the Keystone State Normal School, where he made such good progress in his studies that he was encouraged to try his hand at teaching. He began this profession in Weisenburg township, where the length of term was four months and the salary thirty dollars per month. He taught the latter, and Appledore, Pa., for the second ten years continuously the school in Grims's independent school district, all in Lehigh county. His duties as teacher not occupying all of his time, he at intervals engaged at fire insurance and lumbering, in which he then laid the foundation of a business that has spread and grown upon his hands ever since.

In 1884 in order to give his children the advantages of the Keystone State Normal School, Mr. Rhode located in Kutztown, where after a short residence he purchased a bakery and continued in that business for a period of eleven years, at the end of which time, his insurance and lumber business having grown to such large proportions, he was compelled to give up his time and devote it to them. In these lines he has continued to the present time and is now rated as one of Kutztown's busiest citizens. He has been secretary of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Berks and Lehigh counties, for twenty-one years, and also represents a number of other leading companies as agent. His lumber business is quite extensive and consists of purchasing tracts of timber, which he converts into merchantable lumber. He has also had an extensive experience in erecting lightning rods, to which reference can be made appropriately in this biography. For fifteen years he has engaged at this occupation one of the highest and most exclusive interests. Notwithstanding the strong prejudice which exists against lightning rod agents generally has succeeded in giving entire satisfaction wherever he has been given work to do. He has furnished his patrons a good article at a fair price and dealt with them honorably, and by these means has won their confidence and respect. Of the 42,000 buildings that he has rodded since starting in the business not one has been burned by lightning, which is the best evidence that the material he supplies is of the best quality and that his work is well done. He puts up from 20,000 to 30,000 rods a year, and the lightning rod business is as reputable as any other, if reputedly conducted.

While Mr. Rhode has been a busy man he has yet found time to give attention to public affairs. He is a Democrat in politics, and since living in Kutztown has served one term on the council, and as a member of the school board for two terms. He was for a school director that the handsome school house was built in Kutztown. He is a pronounced friend of popular education, and has done much to promote the efficiency of the public schools and to encourage the young to make use of them. In 1894, Mr. Rhode was elected a representative in the State Legislature from Berks county, reelected in 1896, and served faithfully through two terms in which Democrats were decidedly in the minority. In 1903 he was elected a justice of the peace for Kutztown, and is now serving in that capacity.

On Oct. 2, 1872, Cyrus J. Rhode was married to Amanda F. Knerr, of Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, on July 12, 1849, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Knerr) Gehringer, and granddaughter of David and Susannah (Derr) Knerr, all of Lehigh county. To Mr. and Mrs. Rhode have been born four children, as follows: Minerva E. m. David B. Levan and lived in Kutztown, until her death in 1900; John Knerr, Jr., m. Mary E. m. and lived in Reading, and has two children, Harold and one deceased; Homer J., an eye specialist of Reading, is mentioned below; and Solon L., who graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, is now attending lectures in the University of Pennsylvania. Mr. Rhode and family belong to the Reformed Church, where his ancestors worshipped for generations.

Dr. Homer Jones Rhode, specialist in Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Reading, was born in Weisenburg, Lehigh county, Dec. 9, 1877. His early education was obtained in the public schools of Kutztown, and later at the Keystone State Normal School. He was graduated from the latter institution in the class of 1895, after which he took post-graduate work preparatory to studying medicine, and then taught two terms of school at Richhill, in Bucks county. Entering the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, he graduated from the fast famous Medical School in 1900, and was since appointed resident physician of St. Joseph’s Hospital, Philadelphia, where he remained one year. In July, 1901, he entered the Wills Eye Hospital, Philadelphia, and there he served as resident surgeon for one year, after which he took charge of Dr. S. Lewis Ziegler’s practice in Philadelphia, during that gentleman’s trip abroad. In the fall of 1903 Dr. Rhode established himself in Reading, where he has since been located, and has built up an extensive practice in his specialties. Since 1904 he has been connected with the Reading Hospital. He is a member of the Berks County Medical Society, the Reading Medical Society, the State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association.

On April 9, 1904, Dr. Rhode was married to Miss May Friel, daughter of James Friel, of Philadelphia, and they have had these children: Dorothy, who died aged eighteen months; Homer J., Jr., and Virginia. The Doctor and his wife attend the Reformed Church. Socially he is a member of St. John’s Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M., Reading. His home is located at No. 230 North Sixth street, and there he and his good wife delight in welcoming their many friends.

CHARLES P. HOFFMAN, manager of the G. M. Britton Company, Pottsville, Pa., and director in the Merchants National Bank, of that city, was born in Friedensburg, Oley township, Berks county, Sept. 20, 1866, son of Rev. P. A. Hoffman and his wife, Arazesta M. Bodder.
Rev. P. P. A. Hoffman was born in Cherryville, Northampton county, March 25, 1836, and died at Reading, June 30, 1888, in the fifty-third year of his age. He was educated in the common schools, and later attended the Merserburg Preparatory School, then that college and Theological Seminary, graduating at an early age. He was installed at Friedensburg, in Berks county, and preached at Friedens Church there for twenty-five years, or until his death. His fifty-fifth inst held at Hill Church with the presence of a large congregation, which congregation he served from his entry into the ministry until his death. The Friedens charge consisted of four congregations, viz.: Hill, Friedens, Lo- bachsville and Pottstown. He was an able minister and eloquent preacher. For some years before his death he lived at Reading, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery there. In 1864 he married Aravesta M. Boder, daughter of Charles and Susanna (Mason) Boder. Mr. Boder was a hatter and furrier at Bethlehem, where he was a member of the town council and a very prominent citizen. To the Rev. Mr. Hoffman and wife were born the following children: Jonas, of Chicago; Bertha B. m. to Thomas Finne, of Reading; and C. Herbert, of Pottsville. Charles P. Hoffman received the benefit of an excellent education, attending the public school, Oley Academy, a preparatory school at Bethlehem, and graduated from the Reading high school, in 1875, with a commercial certificate. He became a bookkeeper for the Manhattan Hardware Manufacturing Company, of Reading, serving in that position for two years. In 1887 he became collector for the Galey & Britton Instalment House, of Reading, and his promotion to a better position was soon merited. In 1894 the firm opened up the Pottsville branch in a small store under the management of Mr. Hoffman, and this has since become the largest furniture, carpet and cloth store in all Schuylkill county. It employs thirty-five to fifty persons and enjoys a large and lucrative trade. Besides making this store a mecca for the better class of household goods, he has found time to devote to the best interests of the city. He is broad-minded and public-spirited, and is ever in the front rank of new enterprises. He has become the standard bearer for those interests that stand for progress and civic advancement—and the leader in all public demonstrations and parades. He advocates and favors every advancement and public good for the city. During the first years of his connection with the firm of Galey & Britton (a partnership that has since divided), Mr. Hoffman continuing with Mr. Britton) he conducted for three years the Tropical Garden, then located at Eighth and Penn streets, Reading. Mr. Hoffman is one of the two former members of the Merchants National Bank, of Pottsville, and has since been one of its directors, secretary of the board and a member of the Finance committee. He is actively identified with church, political, social and fraternal associations in Pottsville. With his family he attends Trinity Reformed Church. He is past master of Reading Lodge, No. 540, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M.; past commander of De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; and a charter member of Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading, which he has had the honor of representing at the Imperial Council of North America. Socially he is a member of the Sphinx Club; a charter member of the Sphinx Club; a member (and past president) of the Commercial Club; The West End Fire Company; Schuylkill County Historical Society; and Liederkrantz. He has been president of the Merchants' Association of Pottsville and vicinity since 1903; president of the Pottsville Civic Society, which he organized in 1902; president of the Pottsville Electric Light Company in 1905; he is a member and chairman of the Finance committee of the board of control of the famous Third Brigade Band. Mr. Hoffman is one of the leading men of Pottsville, and he has the well merited respect of his fellow citizens.

In 1855 Mr. Hoffman married Sue E. Bickley, daughter of the late Capt. Frank and Amelia (Lotz) Bickley of Reading. Mrs. Hoffman is a graduate of the Reading high school where she was a classmate of her husband.

DR. JOEL B. BOWER, D. D. S., of Boyertown, one of the leading dentists of Berks county, was born in this town Dec. 27, 1840, son of Henry O. and Barbara (Borneman) Bower, and grandson of John Bower.

(1) Hans Bower, the American ancestor of the family, emigrated from Switzerland between 1708 and 1717. He settled in Colebrookdale township, with other Mennonites who fled because of persecution. In time he bought three different tracts, and his first purchase consisted of 215 acres which he bought from Thomas Hopkinson. His second purchase which was 201 acres, he secured in 1734, and the third was made from the Penns in 1734, for which he paid twenty-three pounds, five shillings. This land was located in Hereford town, and is now owned by Rev. John Esh. In 1749 he sold this tract to his two sons, Michael and Abraham (whose children were—George, Samuel and Jacob).

(II) Michael Bower, son of Hans, and great-great-grandfather of Dr. Bower, married Fronica, daughter of Johannes Landis. On July 18, 1749, Hans Bower married to his son-in-law, Christian Meyer, for the sum of 325 pounds; also a tract containing seventy-four acres and twenty-eight perches, for 175 pounds. His children were: Samuel, Fronica and Anna.

(III) Samuel Bower, son of Michael, was born Aug. 6, 1840, and he is buried at Reading. He was a merchant in Douglass township, Montgomery county. His wife was Elizabeth Ziegler, and they had children as follows: Susanna, Barbara, Deborah, John, Elizabeth, Samuel, Hannah, Andrew and Christopher.

(IV) John—Bower, son of Samuel, was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, Dec. 24, 1773, and died there March 30, 1854, and he is buried at Bally. He bought a farm of 156 acres in 1814 for $13,000. This he sold to John Moyer in 1850 for $5,600. He was a well-known farmer and a most excellent man. During the panic of 1814 to 1830, he hauled rye flour to Philadelphia, receiving seventy-five cents per hundred pounds. Later he prospered, and although many lost their farms during this time of stringency, he did not. His wife's maiden name was Susanna Overholtzler, and they had five children: Catherine married Samuel B. Latshaw; Elizabeth m. Jonas Sassaman; John O.; Samuel O. and Henry O.

(V) Joel B. Bower, was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, Jan. 6, 1807, and died there Feb. 14, 1867. He was a clockmaker, and made 130 grandfather clocks, some showing the movement of the moon. His grave is at the Mennonite Meeting House at Bally. The last clock he made, completed about 1845, is in the possession of Dr. Joel B. Bower of Boyertown. Mr. Bower was well-known from house to house in eastern Berks county, repairing clocks. His wife was Barbara Borneman, also a native of Montgomery county. They had six children, as follows: Dr. Joel B.; John, deceased, a farmer in Douglass township; Priscilla, deceased, wife of Levi Esh; Johanna, deceased wife of Daniel B. Rittenhouse of Montgomery county; Dr. Daniel B., of Boyertown; Elizabeth, living at Boyertown, widow of John Bechtel.

(VI) Joel B. Bower was reared in Douglass township, where he attended school, but later he went to the Philadelphia Seminary, and then studied with his uncle, Dr. J. H. Borneman, who was a dentist at Boyertown. Still later he attended the Philadelphia Dental College, from which he graduated in 1887. He immediately located at Boyertown, where he followed his profession for a period of forty-five years. In 1903 his son Dr. A. L. Bower took charge of the office. In 1892 Dr. Bower opened a dental office at Pottstown; he was succeeded by his son Dr. Samuel Bower now conducts. His son Dr. Daniel Bower is now the charge of the Pottstown office for ten years prior to his death in 1905. Dr. Joel B. Bower and his family are members of the Mennonite Church of Boyertown, and he is very active in Church work. He resides in his own house on Philadelphia avenue.
Dr. Bower has been married three times. His first wife, Sevilla Stanfield of Boyertown, died at the age of twenty, leaving a son, Henry, who died soon thereafter. He married (second) Elizabeth Latshaw, of East Vincent, Chester Co., Pa., who bore him five children: Dr. Daniel, born March 2, 1873; died unmarried, Feb. 15, 1905; Jacob died at the age of four years; Miss Mary lives at Boyertown; Dr. Abram L is mentioned below; Dr. Samuel, of Pottstown, graduated from the Philadelphia Dental College in 1902, and married Blanche Grubb, of Chester county (no issue). Dr. Bower married (third) Annie B. Blankenship, who died Oct. 16, 1906, aged sixty-nine years (no issue).

Dr. Abram L. Bower, son of Dr. Joel B. Bower, was born Jan. 23, 1879. He graduated from the Boyertown high school in 1894, and from the West Chester State Normal School in 1896. He taught school two terms, after which he attended the Philadelphia Dental College two terms and graduated from the Dental Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1901. He has practiced dentistry since at Norristown, Pottstown, and Boyertown, in which latter place he is now engaged. Dr. Bower has been granted nine patents and a number of other patents for his inventions have been allowed by the Patent Office, and two have not yet been issued. He has invented a dental preparation to be used in the operation of capping live and exposed nerves in teeth. This method and preparation were quickly adopted by the dental profession and are now largely used for that purpose. His other inventions relate to railway signaling, chiefly cab signaling, where three classes of signals are transmitted to the train through a single circuit from the rails to the engine and displayed in the cab in front of the engineer. These three classes of signals are clear, cautionary, and danger, shown by colored electric incandescent lamps, the colors being white, green, and red, respectively. Bells are also automatically rung in the cab to call the engineer's attention to a change in the signal displayed.

Dr. Bower's device also makes the service application of the brakes when caution is indicated, and the emergency application of the brakes when danger or stop is indicated. The throttle also is operated, shutting off the steam. The entire device operates automatically but it is adapted so as to be instantly controlled by the engineer.

His inventions also include block signals for electrically operated trains or trolleys which automatically shut off the power or reduce the speed of the vehicle by introducing resistance into the motor circuit. Also a governor to prevent the application of the brakes when the speed is not over six miles per hour; also a distance device which automatically displays the danger signal after the train has proceeded a certain predetermined distance without receiving a clear or cautionary signal impulse from the devices on the roadbed. This distance device detects any failure of the other devices to operate. The Block Signal and Train Control Board of the Interstate Commerce Commission authorized a practical test of these devices, to be made by the Board in March or April of 1909, on the Colebrookdale Branch of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad near Pottstown. Dr. Abram L. Bower married Hannah O. Landis of New Britain, Pa. They have two children, Joel L. and Elizabeth L.

GEORGE BRUBAKER, one of Reading's substantial business men, who conducts a lumber yard on South Third street, is a native of Reading, born Jan. 20, 1854, son of Solomon and Anna Mary (Reifl) Brubaker.

George Brubaker, grandfather of George, married Barbara Hoover, and they settled at New Holland, Lancaster county, where Mr. Brubaker was a leading farmer and influential member of his community, while his wife was a Mennonite, and they were the parents of these children: Sally m. Samuel Baer, a farmer of Lancaster county, and had children, Anna and David; Isaac m. and had one child, Isaac; John died young; and Solomon.

Solomon Brubaker was born in Lancaster county in 1814, and remained at home until his eighteenth year, when he engaged at clerking in stores at Hinkletown, Reamstown and Ephrata, and it was while working at the latter place that he was induced by Philip Bushong of Reading to enter the clerking business. Mr. Brubaker turned his attention to the milling business in company with Joseph Raudenbush and a Mr. Frill, and during the war purchased Mr. Frill's interest, carrying on the business alone until 1889, when he sold out to Barnhart & Koch, who in turn sold out to the Bushongs, now the owners of the business. In 1874 Mr. Brubaker organized the lumber business now operated by his son on South Third street. Here he successfully continued to operate until 1880, when his death occurred, in his sixty-sixth year. Mr. Brubaker was prominent both in a business and social way, and on the Republican ticket was elected a councilman in the old Spruce ward. Mr. Brubaker was an attendant of the Universalist Church. His widow survived him until 1899, and died when sixty-nine years of age. They were the parents of four children: George; John, who died aged two years; Isaac, died in infancy; and Sally L, who married John E. Hartman of Ephrata, a farmer. Mr. Brubaker was widower of M., Anna M., Matthew (deceased), Carl and Marion.

George Brubaker was educated in the common schools of Reading, in the old Spruce ward, later attending the high school and subsequently took a course in Chester N. Farr's Business College. Upon completing the prescribed course he entered the employ of his father, with whom he continued until the latter's death, when he continued the business for his mother, and after her death purchased it, since which time he has been conducting it for himself. Mr. Brubaker is a reliable business man, of honesty and integrity, and he controls some of Reading's best trade, being the only one in the city to handle Washington cedar.

Mr. Brubaker was married in 1885, to Miss E. Amanda Schwartz, born in Berks county, daughter of James Schwartz, and two children were born to this union: Anna Mary, a graduate of the Girls high school of Reading, and L. Elizabeth, attended high school. Mr. Brubaker is a member of Neversink Fire Company. He is highly esteemed in his community as a good neighbor and a useful and public-spirited citizen.

CHARLES RICK, a veteran of the Civil war who has been living retired in Reading since 1904, was for many years one of the proprietors of Rick Brothers' foundry, also known as the Reading Butt Works. Mr. Rick was born in October, 1840, in Bern township, Berks county, son of Charles and Ellen Louisa (Ruth) Rick, and grandson of John George Rick.

Herman Rick, great-grandfather of Charles, came to America with his parents in the early part of the eighteenth century, being then about twelve years of age, and after receiving his education in the pay schools of Bern township, he engaged in farming, at which he continued for the remainder of his life. Among his children was John George.

John George Rick, son of Herman, married Catherine Weiser, grand-niece of Conrad Weiser. Mr. Rick engaged in farming in Bern township, and became a large land owner and highly respected man. He was a member of the German Reformed Church, was a Whig in politics, and was very patriotic and public-spirited.

Charles Rick, father of Charles, was educated in the primitive schools of his day, and early in life conducted a general store at Centrepot and later at Peacock's Locks, coming to Reading in 1843, where he was engaged in a mercantile business and in real estate operations. The latter years of his life were spent in retirement. He died in reading on Feb. 18, 1879. The children of Charles Rick were the parents of the following children: Cyrus, for many years cashier of the Farmers' National Bank, and a member of the firm of Rick Brothers, m. Emma Madeira; John, who died in 1900, was also a member of the firm of Rick Brothers (m. Emma Ammon); Charles; Mary m. Franklin Dundore, of Philadelphia, and had three children—Charles, Frank and Ella; James, of the firm of Rick Brothers, now proprietor of the Rick Knitting Mills of Reading. m. (first) Ellen Trate, and (second) Julia O'Hara, and had five children. He is a member of the Reading Evangelical United Church of Christ. After the death of his first wife, he married Ellen M. William A. Arnold, deceased, and had six children—William, John, Franklin, Anna, Ellen and Mary.

Charles Rick was educated in the public schools of his locality, and in 1837 graduated from the old high school. Until the outbreak of the Civil War he worked in various stores, but in May, 1861, he went to the front, in the capacity of a soldier, at Washington, D. C., and was discharged in July, 1861. He then re-enlisted in Company E, 128th Pa. V. I., becoming first sergeant, and was discharged as first lieutenant after nine months service. On his return to Reading, Mr. Rick entered the office of the general superintendent, G. A. Nicolls, of the Reading Railroad as clerk, and continued with that company until 1871, when he resigned to engage in business with his brothers, who had founded, in 1867, the business of Rick Brothers Foundry, or Reading Butts Works. He continued in this business until his retirement in 1904, at which time the firm sold out.

In 1886 Mr. Rick married Emma A. Paul, a native of Berks county, daughter of Rev. W. A. Paul, of the Reformed Church, and to this union there have been six children: Mary m. F. H. Muhlenberg, and has four children—Hiester H., Charles R., Ernest and Mary; Miss Grace; Mabel m. H. P. Wele, of Reading; Beatrice m. Lindsay McCandlish, and has one child, Jane R.; Miss Florence is at home; and Arthur is a member of the firm of Hutchinson-McCandlish Coal Company, Reading.

Mr. Rick is a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States; and of Chandler Lodge No. 297, A. M. He is a Republican in politics, and in 1874 he was a member of the common council. He is a director of the Charles Evans cemetery, the Reading City Passenger Railroad Company, and the Mount Penn Gravity Railroad.

F. C. SMINK, president of the Reading Iron Company, is associated with so many enterprises typical of the commercial prosperity of Pennsylvania that he is not only considered a representative business man of Reading, but of the State as well. The Reading Iron Company, to the direction of which the greater part of his time is devoted, has been the nest independent plants of the kind in the United States.

Mr. Smink was born in 1845 in Kutztown, Berks county, Pa., son of H. B. and Elizabeth (Ebert) Smink. He was educated in the public schools of Reading, graduating from the high school in 1864, after which he taught school during the winter season, doing farm work in the summer months. He has since been identified with Reading. His first position in this city was that of bookkeeper in the shoe manufacturing establishment of H. F. Felix, with whom he remained two years. In 1864 he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, secreting G. A. Nicolls, in which service he remained three years, the year in which he resigned to accept the chief clerkship in Bubush Brothers Bank. Soon afterward he was promoted to cashier, and acted as such until the bank failed, in 1877. Mean time he had also become treasurer and general manager of the Berks & Lehigh Railroad Company, and president of the Keystone Hardware Company. The latter concern also suspending business in 1877, Mr. Smink entered the service of the Reading Iron Works as general business manager, Jan. 1, 1878. He continued in that capacity until 1880, in which year the works failed. On the organization of the Reading Iron Company, Mr. Smink was made secretary, general manager, under the presidency of George F. Baer, whom he succeeded in 1902 as executive head of the company.

Mr. Smink has risen to a position of influence from a modest beginning. Starting as a clerk, he has progressed gradually and surely, to a position of unquestioned influence. Besides filling the presidency of the Reading Iron Company, he serves as a member of the executive committee as well as a director of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, as well as a director of each of the subsidiary companies owned or controlled by that company. He is a member of the Reading Board of School Trustees, is a director of the Deer Park Land Company; and a director of the Spanish-American Iron Company; the Pure Oil Company; the Cornwall & Lebanon Railroad Company; the Schuykill & Lehigh Railroad Company; the Maryland Steel Company; the Penn Mary Coal Company; and the Philadelphia & Reading Telephone Company. He is also interested in several iron and mining companies of lesser magnitude.

In December, 1866, Mr. Smink married Clara C., daughter of Augustus and Elizabeth (Seidel) Thompson, of Reading, and they have four children, namely: Harry A.; Augusta, now the wife of Samuel Heim; Emily M., wife of J. Bennett Nolan, Esq., and Elizabeth. The family are members of Trinity Lutheran Church.

Mr. Smink's social connections include membership in the Wyomissing Club, the Berkshire Country Club (of which he is president), the Manhattan Club of New York City, Pennsylvania Society in New York, the Railroad Club of New York, American Institute of Mining Engineers, the Philadelphia City Club, of Philadelphia, and Franklin Institute, Philadelphia.

HARRY A. SMINK, only son of F. C. Smink, was born in the city of Reading in 1887. He received his early education in the public schools of his native place, having attended a preparatory school, and in 1892 entered the employ of the Reading Iron Company, with which he is still connected. He began as a clerk, and was advanced upon his merits, until in 1897, he was promoted to the assistant superintendent of the Tubeworks of the Company. In that position he has ably filled since. The charge is a responsible one, over two thousand people being employed in the plant.

Mr. Smink married Rosie Deysher, daughter of William G. Deysher, and they have two children, Frank and Russell. The family are Catholic in religious connection.

FERDINAND THUN, manufacturer of textile machinery and president of the borough council in Wyomissing, was born in Barmen, Germany, Feb. 14, 1866. He was educated in the schools of that place and graduated from the technical high school in 1883. He then entered the office of a large establishment which manufactured braid, laces and dress trimmings, constituting one of the principal industries of Barmen, for many years a famous manufacturing center of Germany—and continued there three years, when he determined to visit America. He proceeded to Stony Creek Mills, Berks county, Pa., reaching the place in September, 1886, and secured employment as bookkeeper in the office of Louis Kramer & Co., the senior proprietor being an old friend of his father. While so employed he devoted his spare time to the study of the English language. After remaining there until the spring of 1888, and having successfully acquired the English language, he returned to Barmen, but was at home only a short time when he left temporarily in the United States, and there to engage in the manufacturing business. He directed his special attention to the manufacture of braid, ribbons, etc., following the following February, by which time he had familiarized himself with the practical side of this business. He then went to New York City, where he was employed in a large factory for three years, serving for a considerable part of that time as an assistant superintendent of the works. While there he met a young man, also from Barmen, Henry K. Jausen, an expert machinist in the manufacture of textile machinery, and they agreed to form a partnership in that branch of business and industry. He is a director of the Reade Trust Company, for the city of Reading, Pa., where they had friends, and where the prospects of success made it appear encouraging. They accordingly went to Reading in 1892, and in a modest way started the new enterprise at Nos. 220-222 Cedar street, employing only a few hands. In four years they had become so successful that they required a larger place with greater facilities for increasing development. They selected a tract of several acres of land at Wyomissing, where they erected a factory capable of accommodating 900 hands, and theirs was the first industrial establishment in that place. In 1900 they organized and incorporated the company under the name of the Textile Machine Company, with Mr. Janssen as president, and Mr. Thun as secretary and treasurer, which positions they have held until now. In November, 1906, this company employed 300 hands, a remarkable increase in ten years, showing the skill, energy and success of its projectors. Mr. Thun was instrumental in establishing at the same place the Berkshire Knitting Mills and the Narrow Fabric Company, two new industries which employ nearly 600 hands.

In 1902 Mr. Thun started the Wyomissing Suburban Building and Loan Association, and in 1906 the Wyomissing Building and Savings Association, and he has served as treasurer of both organizations until the present time. With these large and promising enterprises at Wyomissing he naturally became very active in the movement for establishing a borough, and upon its incorporation in 1907 he was elected one of the first councilmen, and in the organization of the council was chosen president.

In 1896 Mr. Thun married Anna M. Grebe, daughter of Louis Grebe, of Stony Creek Mills, by whom he has six children: Anna, Margaret, Wilma, Hildegard, Ferdinand and Ann. Ferdinand Thun, father of Mr. Thun, is a native of Barmen, born in 1830. He learned the foundry business there, which he followed successfully for forty years, and he has been living in retirement since 1890. He married Julia Westcott, of Barmen, who died there in 1881, aged forty-two years. They had four children: Ferdinand, Emil, who succeeded his father in the foundry business; Mary; and Emilie. The last three are living at home in Barmen.

EDWIN BOONE, vice-president and cashier of the National Union Bank, of Reading, was born on the Boone homestead, in Exeter township, Berks county, Jan. 14, 1846. His emigrant ancestors were among the first settlers in this county, coming from England and settling along the headwaters of Monocacy creek, in what is now Exeter township, prior to the year 1720. His father, Em. H. Boone, was long a resident of Reading, and there became a well-known man in his line, serving for more than forty years as foreman in the Philadelphia & Reading car shops. Ellis H. Boone married Ann Cleaver, daughter of Derrick Cleaver, whose ancestors were also among the first settlers of that section of the county. Their son, Edwin H. Boone, was educated in Reading, and was only fifteen years old (having left high school) when tendered a position as clerk in the National Union Bank, with which institution he has ever since been connected. He accepted the clerkship March 4, 1861, the day Lincoln was first inaugurated President. It is of interest to note that Lincoln's ancestors were near neighbors of the Boones in Exeter township, before 1730. Mr. Boone commenced his business career with a determination to succeed which he has never relinquished. He gave evidence of ability from the start, and was promoted steadily until he attained the position of cashier in 1878, though then but thirty-two years of age. Over twenty years later, in 1901, he was honored with election to the office of vice-president, and still retains both responsibilities. In all the years he has been intrusted with the heavy obligations of these positions his vigilance and fidelity have been marked, and no cloud has ever marred the success and integrity of the management. Under his management the bank has enjoyed continual success, and a steady growth, the business transacted in 1906 amounting to over $23,500,000. But it is only due to the directors of the bank to say that Mr. Boone's services have been both appreciated and rewarded, and he has the satisfaction of knowing the confidence of those in authority at the bank and of the public upon whose patronage its prosperity depends.

Mr. Boone's alertness, keen perception, knowledge and long experience in matters of finance have brought him into many congresses and councils, and in contact with some of the greatest minds and financial interests of the country. Whatever threatened or encountered, whether depression or panic or stringency of any kind, the National Union Bank has had in Mr. Boone a pilot who knew the channel and knew of every reef and ledge, and whatever the tempest this commander carried his barque safely through to the calm sea.

During the year 1892, seeking a respite from business cares, Mr. Boone made a tour of the United States, visiting many points of interest, and extending his trip through Nova Scotia and Canada. Six years later, in company with Messrs. James A. and Dr. Charles A. O'Reilly, he visited France, sojourning most of the time in Paris. The tour in 1902, in company with Rev. F. C. Hunzinger, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Church of Reading, he journeyed to Jamaica, stopping at Kingston (since destroyed by earthquake), where they remained for three weeks, meeting many of the distinguished and influential citizens of the Island. This jaunt proved so enjoyable to Mr. Boone and his companion that another was planned, and in 1905 they set sail for Europe, visiting France, England, Holland and Germany.

While in London rare respect and privileges were extended them. They were shown through the Bank of England, an unusual courtesy to those having no connection with the Bank. Certain evidence were established through a five dollar National Union Bank note bearing the signature of Mr. Boone as cashier. This was accepted as a satisfactory sponsor, and they were shown through this historic institution, being specially interested in the printing, as all currency until 1880 and now the Bank of England is printed there. They were also admitted to both Houses of Parliament, while in session, and at a time or on a day when visitors were excluded.

In the summer of 1907 these two friends took a six weeks' trip together, on this occasion visiting Norway, Sweden, Denmark, northern Germany and Holland. They sailed from New York on July 17th, on the "Noordam," of the Holland-American line, and though the trip across was not particularly pleasant, the weather being cold and foggy, they had the novel experience of coming close to an iceberg, so close that the vessel was slowed down until it was six hours before it passed. This is the greater danger than a collision. Icebergs at that season show little of their bulk above the surface, and are a source of danger avoided by every captain. During the trip the fog at one time prevailed for thirty-six consecutive hours. At Hamburg, Germany, the friends boarded the tourist steamer "Vasa," and thus had a delightful voyage along the romantic and mountainous coast of that country, also penetrating many of the fjords which indent the mountains, whose sides slope directly into the sea. The marvelous color effects on the water, the snow-covered mountains, the mountain forests, the beautiful cascades formed by the melting snow—all the bold scenery of the coast was pleasantly varied by the trips up the fjords, which afforded them many delightful glimpses of peaceful farm and village life. The wonders of the midnight sun were among the glories of that far northern land they enjoyed to the fullest.

From Bergen, Norway, they went to the larger cities of Scandinavia, visiting Christiania, the capital of Norway; Stockholm, with its beautiful public and private buildings, parks, streets and places of amusement; Upsala, the great university town, the intellectual center of the country; and Gothenburg, founded two hundred years before the discovery of America, and rebuilt in modern times; Copenhagen, and Berlin, where they remained for a week, on Sunday attending divine service in the new Dome Church, and during their stay visiting many noted places of interest. From that city they proceeded to Stockholm, where they embarked on the "Ryndam," of the Holland-American Line, arriving at their home on August 27th. The tour was one of unusual interest and enjoyment, and Mr. Boone and his friend live through their experiences again in many places throughout the country.

Fraternally Mr. Boone is a 33d-degree Mason, and is likewise a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. He belongs to the First Baptist Church, with which he united in boyhood, and since 1879 he has served as treasurer of that church.

On April 9, 1868, Mr. Boone was united in marriage with Mary J. Buchanan, and to them have been born two daughters: Mary, now the wife of Theodore Bond Harrison, whose home is at Germantown, Pa.: and Annie, wife of Henry Moore Hawkesworth, living at Brookline, Boston, Massachusetts. Mr. Harrison is a well-known manufacturer of electrical apparatus, and a safe counselor, though never obtrusive, generous and charitable without ostentation, and upright in every relation of life.

COL. GEORGE NAGEL was born near Coblentz, Germany, about 1728, son of Joachim Nagel. He came to Reading about 1755, and engaged in blacksmithing. He served as an ensign in the French and Indian War, and in 1763 he returned to Reading and resumed his trade. In 1771 he was elected sheriff of Berks county. When the Revolution commenced he raised the first company in Berks county to fight for American liberty. His company participated in the campaign of 1777 in Massachusetts. He was a brave and true soldier, and rose to the rank of colonel. Col. Nagel continued in the military service until 1783, when he returned to Reading and engaged in the mercantile business. He continued in this business until his death in March, 1789. His remains were interred in the Reformed cemetery. He married Rebecca, daughter of Mordecai Lincoln, of Exeter township.

CAPTAIN PETER NAGEL, a brother of the above Col. George Nagel, was born near Coblentz, Oct. 31, 1756, and came to Reading as a young man and learned the trade of a hatter under Samuel Jackson, the first hat manufacturer at Reading. He followed this occupation until 1800, first as a journeyman, then as a manufacturer. During the Revolution he was prominently connected with military affairs, and was a captain from 1777 to 1783. He held various civil offices, including justice of the peace, coroner and county treasurer in 1806. He was appointed sheriff subsequently held by a son, a grandson, and from 1873 to 1875 by a great-grandson, the late Dr. Hiestcer M. Nagel. He took an active part in the military parade in 1794 in honor of President Washington, and held a re-enactment of the distinguished gentleman at his house, at the site of the present Norbertine church, the guests of honor being the “Father of His Country.” Capt. Nagel was a man of fine, commanding presence, and nearly six feet tall. He died Nov. 30, 1834, and was buried in the Reformed graveyard. Afterward his remains were removed to the Charles Evans’ cemetery. His name appears frequently as one of the church officers. Mr. William N. Coleman, a well-known citizen of Reading, now eighty-six years of age, is a grandson of Capt. Peter Nagel. The latter possesses an excellent oil painting of Capt. Nagel, which he prizes highly.

JOHNSON WILMER FISHER was born in Reading, June 18, A. D. 1870. Henry B. Fisher, his grandfather, was born in Oley township, Berks county, and was well known in the manufacturing world in his day. For many years he operated the H. B. K. M. Fisher’s Woolen Mills, located on the Swamp Creek near New Berlinville, Colebrookdale township. He came to Reading in 1857, where he continued the same business for some years and where he died March 16, 1887. He married Mary B. Johnson.

Henry J. Fisher, his father, was born near New Berlinville, Colebrookdale township, Berks county, Pa., and moved with his parents to the city of Reading in 1866, where he has since resided and been actively engaged in the grocery business. He was a loyal defender of the Union, having served for three years in the Civil War as a member of Company H, 104th Pennsylvania Volunteers. He married Eliza C. Keever, daughter of Henry V. and Lydia C. Keever, of Reading, and had two children: Johnson Wilmer, and Mary L.

J. Wilmer Fisher attended the old Friends’ School in Reading, and the public schools, leaving the public schools at the age of fourteen to take up the trade of life. He was not satisfied with his education, however, and after his day’s work as an errand boy in his father’s grocery store, he attended night school and prepared to take up civil engineering. He thus gained sufficient knowledge to enable him to accept a position as rodman in the city engineer’s office at the age of sixteen, where he served for five years. He was afterward appointed to the positions of rodman, transitman, assistant engineer and general superintendent of the department. In the spring of 1894 he resigned his position in the city engineer’s office to accept the position of assistant to the superintendent of the Water department, and while acting in this capacity prepared the first detailed plan of the water pipe system of the city. Having formed the determination to adopt the law as a profession, he resigned his position in the Water department in the fall of 1894 and matriculated as a student at the Dickinson School of Law, at Carlisle, Pa., from which institution he graduated in 1897. He registered as a law student in the office of Judge Sager, afterward in the office of Judge McKissick, and was admitted to the Cumberland County Bar June 9, 1896. He took the examination for admission to the Berks County Bar, to which he was admitted Nov. 9, 1896, and has since been admitted to practice in the Supreme and Superior Courts of Pennsylvania, the United States District and the United States Circuit Courts. Since his admission to the Bar he has continued in the active practice of his profession and enjoys a large clientele at the present time.

Mr. Fisher is active in the affairs of the Republican party and his face is a familiar one at all its conventions, to many of which he has been a delegate, and he is an exceptionally valuable man in the field, having been very useful in State and National campaigns. In 1901 he was nominated for district attorney. In 1904 he was chairman of the Congressional Conference of the Berks and Lehigh Congressional District, which placed in nomination William H. Souden of Allentown, Lehigh county, as the nominee for Congress. He was the Republican nominee for the Berks and Lehigh Congressional District, and received a large complimentary vote, and in 1908 was prominently mentioned for the appointment to the Common Pleas Bench to succeed the late Judge Ermentroat. He is at present treasurer of the Republican county committee and has held that position for many years. Mr. Fisher takes a keen interest in local affairs. He served as a member of the Reading School Board for eight years, during which time he was chairman of many important committees, and as chairman of the Finance committee for a number of years inaugurated many reforms in conducting the business of the board. He is an active member of the Board of Trade and a member of its committee on Legislation. He is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, his maternal ancestors having been members of that church, since its organization in 1748. He is active in Masonic circles, and is a charter member in the Hiestcr Lodge No. 601, F. & A. M.; a member of Excelsior Chapter No. 277, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery No. 42, K. T.; Philadelphia Consistory, 32d degree; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also a member of Gen. George G. Meade Camp No. 16, Sons of Veterans.

CHARLES M. RICHARDSON, one of the most extensive creamery operators in Pennsylvania, was born Oct. 8, 1858, in Ontelaunee township, Berks county, where his father and grandfather resided before him. William Richardson, his grandfather, lived at one time in Bern township. He was located at Baltimore during the Civil war. He died in Ontelaunee township, leaving one son, Emanuel.
Emanuel Richardson, the subject of the present sketch, was born in Ontelaunee township and there followed farming, also engaging in milling to some extent. Moving to Exeter township, also in Berks county, he bought the old “Daniel Boone” homestead, containing 163 acres, upon which he carried on farming until his death. He married, September 21, 1812, Mary, daughter of John Fisher, of Oley township, and had the following children: Charles M.; Kate, the wife of Edward Beck; Owen, of Reading; Mary, wife of Daniel Snyder, of Reading; Frank, of Reading; Wilson, of Berne; and Ella, wife of George Lee, of Reading.

Charles M. Richardson attended the public schools of his native county and later (1878-1879) the business college of Prof. D. B. Brunner, at Reading. He was engaged in creamery work as early as 1883 in Exeter township, near Stonersville. He made his first independent venture in the creamery business in 1888 at Lyon Valley, Lehigh Co., Pa. During the twenty years which have since intervened he has developed his business and increased his operations to such an extent that he is now interested in more than thirty creameries located throughout this State and New York. He is president of the High Ground Dairy Company, of Brooklyn, N. Y., which operates a number of large creameries in New York State, and has interests in large and small creameries in the State of Pennsylvania. He is also a member of the firm of Richardson Brothers, of Berne, Pa., and is associated with Mr. Howard E. Allen, of Reading, Pa., in the firm of Ahrens & Richardson, New York City. He is vice-president of the Harvard Dairy Company, of Harvard, Susquehanna Co., Pa., which operates eight large plants in that county. He is also a member of the firm of Richardson Brothers, of Reading, Pa., in the firm of Richardson & Franks, and also a member of the firm of Richardson Brothers, of Berne, Pa., and is associated with Mr. Howard E. Allen, of Reading, Pa., in the firm of Ahrens & Richardson, New York City. He has also obtained control of ten small plants, scattered along the East Penn branch of the Reading Railway, between Allentown and Reading. These plants he operates independently under the management of S. W. Hackock, Bernville, Berks Co., Pa.

In 1891 Mr. Richardson located at Bernville, Pa., at which place he has since made his home. He is prominent and active in the public life and welfare of the borough. He has served for thirteen years as a member of the school board, acting at various times as secretary and president. He was treasurer of the Old Home Week Committee in 1907 and is at present the secretary of the First National Bank of Bernville, with which he has been connected as a director since its organization. He is a member of the Reformed Church, which he has served as both deacon and elder. He has also served as treasurer of the Lutheran church for a number of years.

In politics he is a Republican, and for the past few years he has been the Republican committeeman of the borough. In fraternal connection he is a member of I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 125 and of P. O. S. of A. Camp No. 132.

As for his private life, Mr. Richardson married Elizabeth T. Snyder, daughter of Squire William H. Snyder, of Oley Line, Berks Co., Pa. His family consists of four sons: Edgar S., a graduate of Princeton University, class of 1905, and at present a registered student-at-law from Berks county in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania; Lewis S., also a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania; Charles S. and Frank, both students in the Bernville grammar school.

HENRY F. PRINTZENHOFF, a retired contractor and one of the leading citizens of Hamburg, Berks Co., Pa., who has been prominently identified with all public measures calculated to be of benefit to the community, was born July 7, 1847, in Rockland township, this county, son of Dr. Frederick Printzenhoff and the former Amanda Printzenhoff, daughter of Frederick Printzenhoff. The name Printzenhoff signifies “Prince’s Court.”

Frederick Printzenhoff emigrated to America from Germany in his young manhood, and, locating in Philadelphia, followed coach-making until his removal to Friedensburg, Berks county, where he continued the same business until his decease, in 1898. He was married to an Englishwoman, and became the father of five children: Charles, William, Jerome, Caroline and Amanda.

Charles Printzenhoff, eldest son of Frederick, was born in Philadelphia in 1813, and while a boy accompanied his father to Friedensburg, where he learned the trade of a tailor, following subsequently the hotel business at different places for varying periods of time. In 1866 he removed to White Deer Mills, in Union county, where he died in 1901. His wife, Sarah Fisher, daughter of John Fisher, of Oley township, was born in 1818, and died in 1895. Their children were: Mary Ann, who married John Cottle, of Bernville; Caroline, who married David Berker; Henry F.; James, who died young; Adeline, who married Adolph Randt; Ellen, who married Henry Smith; Franklin, who married Amanda Koch; Mahlon, who married Ellen Fisher; Catherine, who married Lewis Spiece; Hannah, who married Charles Simpler, and Sarah, who died young.

Henry F. Printzenhoff was educated in the schools of Kutztown, and learned the trade of carpenter, which he followed until 1869, when he went to Philadelphia, engaging in bridge-building in the employ of the Philadelphia Bridge Company until 1890. He then entered into partnership with William J. Armstrong, and did business under the name of Armstrong & Printzenhoff, constructing bridges and other contract work. His firm put up bridges on numerous railroads, including the Jersey Southern & Pine Creek, the Wilmington & Northern, and the Shenandoah Valley; and immediately after the Johnstown flood this firm had the first construction party there, with 572 men, for the purpose of re-constructing bridges, large buildings, etc. They also constructed the wharves at Philadelphia, along the Delaware avenue front, from Race street to South street, for which they received high praise. During his work in the vicinity of Hamburg Mr. Printzenhoff was attracted by the beauty of the village and decided to make it his home. He erected a superior dwelling-house and purchased several farms near-by, aggregating over 200 acres, and these farms he is operating successfully, making a specialty of poultry. When the citizens of Hamburg were discussing the question of introducing improved lighting for the public streets and private dwellings he encouraged the matter greatly, and assisted materially in establishing the Hamburg Gas Company, of which he has officiated as president since its organization, in 1904.

RICHARD RICHARDS, formerly chief burgess of Boyertown and superintendent at present of the Boyertown Ore Company, an important enterprise of this place, was born Jan. 24, 1832, in Cornwall, England, son of Richard and Elizabeth (Tremyn) Richards, both natives of Cornwall.

Richard Richards, the father, was born in 1800, and died aged seventy years. He followed mining as his business. His wife died when his son Richard was eight years old. Their children were: Margaret, Elizabeth, Thomas, Frances, Richard, William, Benjamin and Mary Jane. The name of Richards is not an unusual one in England, and on the same vessel crossing the Atlantic he accompanied another Richard Richards to America, was another passenger, named Simon Richards, also of Cornwall. The two men of the same name became acquainted and discussed their possible relationship, but did not establish their kinship. Simon Richards settled in Cumru township, Berks county, where he acquired a small farm, but for many years he has been at rest in the graveyard at Yocom’s Church. He reared a family and his son James became supervisor of Cumru township, and his numerous children still reside there or in Reading.

Richard Richards, of Boyertown, is a man of large experience in mining and he was only eight years old when his father left the world. He was nine years of age when he ceased work in the mines, and at that time he was only sixteen when he went down into some of the deepest pits, even to the depth of 600 feet. In the spring of 1858, hoping to better his fortunes, he started to America, landing at old Castle Garden, New York. During the first year he lived at Phoenixville, Pa., but in 1854 he came to Berks county and secured employment in the Moselem iron ore mine, where he continued until April, 1855, when he went to Tamaqua and found work in the coal mines in Schuylkill, and later in Luzerne county. In the fall of that year he came to Boyertown and here he has remained ever since, as time passed becoming closer and closer to the Pennsylvania Reading Company, with which he has been superintendent of that great corporation. He has a complete and comprehensive knowledge of the mining industry and has seen wonderful changes in his day in methods and results. The Boyertown Ore Company, a consolidation of the different ore companies at this place, closed mining in March, 1907, and since then Mr. Richards looks after the properties and cares for the buildings. Despite his long life of hard work, both physical and mental, Mr. Richards retains his strength and healthful appearance. He is known for his kindness of heart, and this quality is revealed in his countenance.

Mr. Richards was married twice. On Sept. 10, 1857, he married (first) Lavina Boyer, daughter of Daniel Boyer, who, with his brother Henry, founded Boyertown. Mrs. Richards was born in 1825 and died in 1881, and was buried in Fairview Cemetery. They had one daughter, Mary (m. Thomas Clark, a native of Cornwall, England, who is connected with the Walter Sanitarium at Wernerville, Berks county). Mr. Richards, m. (second) Dec. 24, 1890, Sallie B. Shuler, born July 5, 1857, died Dec. 28, 1890. He is a member of the M. E. Church and was one of its organizers at Boyertown, one of the first trustees and a steward for nearly a half century. In his fraternal relations, he belonged to the Union, the Knights of the Mystic Chaste, Madison Lodge, I. O. O. F., at Pottstown; Stichter Lodge, No. 254, F. & A. M., Pottstown; Phoenix Chapter, No. 198, R. A. M., Phoenixville; and Palestine Council, No. 8, R. & S. M., Phoenixville.

In his political views Mr. Richards has always been a Republican, and has been honored by election to office in a normally Democratic town, for years serving as a member of the town council, and in the eighties as chief burgess. On many occasions he has attended conventions of his party as a delegate. Above all he is a good citizen and has many times shown that he has the best interests of the place at heart.

EDWIN R. GERBER is a son of Levi R. and Chester (Hartman) Gerber, and his early ancestors were some of the first inhabitants of Reading. He was born at Reading Nov. 30, 1856, and was educated there in the common schools and the Keystone State Normal at Kutztown. Upon quitting school he learned printing and turned his attention to reporting to the Reading Daily News. In 1887 he became prominently connected with the Reading Telegram as one of the founders, and continued with this daily newspaper until 1905, when he was obliged to discontinue the service on account of his work as mayor of the city, to which position he had been elected at the spring election of that year on the Democratic ticket. His activity, ability and sterling qualities for a number of years in the city had won the respect and confidence of his political associates, and his advocacy of municipal improvements had been so earnest and successful that his elevation to the office of mayor was quite natural.

Mr. Gerber served very efficiently as secretary of the Board of Trade for five years from 1900 to 1905, and as president of the Board of Public Works for four years from 1901 to 1905. In 1905 he was re-elected for another term in both positions, but he was compelled to resign the office of his duties as mayor so as to devote all his attention to the office. He has been a very active member of the Americus Club, the Elks, and the Press Club. Mr. Gerber is president of the General Light Company of New Jersey, engaged in the manufacture of acetylene gas machines, and is secretary and treasurer of the Langer & Gerber Engraving Company of Reading. His more active duties are as business manager of the Reading Telegram. He has ever been much interested in public charities, and is now a member of the local board acting with the State Board of Reading.

Mr. Gerber was married June 7, 1881, to Lizzie J. Drase, daughter of Jacob H. Drase, of Reading. They have two children: Viola, and Howard, the latter a chemist in the city laboratory. They are members of the Trinity Lutheran Church.

D. W. STEHMAN, formerly a prominent business man of Reading, particularly identified with banking interests, was born in 1837, at Middletown, Dauphin Co., Pa., where he was reared and liberally educated.

Stehman was cashier of the Middletown National Bank. For many years he was treasurer of the borough, was a member of the Middletown Market Company, and of the cemetery association, served on the town council and held many positions of trust and responsibility at that place. In 1887 Mr. Stehman came to Reading, and accepted the position of secretary of the Pennsylvania Trust Company, which was unanioumsly tendered by the board of directors, to which position he was re-elected in 1888, and made also assistant to the treasurer, H. T. Kendall. In 1892 he succeeded Mr. Kendall as treasurer, and held this position until his death. He was an acknowledged business ability and of the highest integrity. His loss was deeply felt by the company with which he had been identified for so many years, and at a meeting of the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Trust Company, held Feb. 9, 1904, the following resolutions were adopted: Resolved, That we make this record of the feelings of the board of directors upon the deeply regretted death of our late trust officer and treasurer, D. W. Stehman, and this is followed by a statement which showed the great trust and confidence reposed in him by his fellow officials, as well as testimonials to the personal esteem in which he was held by them.

Mr. Stehman was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, of which he had been treasurer for a number of years. He was notably charitable, liberally contributing to benevolent enterprises. His death was a distinct loss to Reading.

In 1874 Mr. Stehman married Mary Van Reed, daughter of John and Amelia (Addams) Van Reed. Two children survive, John V. R. and Edith A.

CHARLES S. FOOS. The city of Reading takes justifiable pride in the high status of its public school system, and the prestige gained along this important educational line has been to a large degree due to the able and uniriting efforts of the present superintendent, Charles S. Foos, whose popularity is of the most virile order. He is prominent in educational circles in the State and nation, and is thoroughly en rapport with his work.

George Foos, the father of Charles S., was born in Reading, son of George Foos, Sr., a prominent contractor in the fourth and fifth towns. He was the first school board of Reading, and for many years also a member of the board. Foos, father of Charles S., attended the public schools and later learned the carpenter's trade as an apprentice to his father. At the opening of the Civil war he enlisted and served his term. On his return to Reading he entered into partnership with his father and conducted a large building and building business, with offices in the old Foos carpenter shop, on Reed, near Washington Street. The building was in the possession of the Foos family for nearly one hundred years, and has been sold but lately. Mr. Foos was interested in all public affairs and served on the school board from 1887 to 1895, representing the city in 1894, and was instrumental in the enlargement of the Poplar street building, and also in the addition of the Girls' high school, and that the location be at Eleventh and Washington streets. He cast his first vote for Lincoln, in 1860, and never missed an election, being a stanch Republican. He was twice married, his first wife being Catherine, a daughter of the late Benjamin Schmeck, a prominent farmer of Muhlenberg, and his second wife was Lizzie Kochel, who survives him. Beside his widow there survive three children: Charles S., Mrs. A. H. Mellinger and Mrs. S. T. Schmehl, all of the city of Reading. Mr. Foos was a genial, public-spirited man, and had a host of friends. About ten days before his death, after a long walk into the country and seemingly in the best of health, Mr. Foos was stricken with apoplexy, and lingered in a semi-conscious condition until he passed away Nov. 4, 1908, aged 68 years, 9 months and 14 days.

Charles S. was born Dec. 17, 1863, son of George and Catherine (Schmeck) Foos. He is indebted to the public schools of his native city for his early educational discipline, and was graduated from the Reading high school as a member of the class of 1882. He was Latin salutatorian of his class, and delivered the first address of the sort ever given in the school. In 1883 he was graduated from the Hopkins Grammar School, New Haven, Conn., from which he matriculated at Yale, from which institution he was obliged to withdraw by reason of a disordered condition of his eyes. Later, however, he carried forward his higher educational work, having completed special courses in Harvard University, the University of Chicago, and the University of New York. In 1898 he received the degree of Master of Arts from Lafayette University. Mr. Foos early identified himself with newspaper work, having been a reporter on the staff of the Reading Eagle and other Reading papers at different times. In 1888 he was appointed an instructor and later principal of the Civil War and City Museum in Chicago, and in 1888-89 he was an instructor in Stewart Academy, Reading; in 1889-90 he was principal of the high school at Orwigsburg, Pa.; in 1890 he became instructor in English in the Boys' high school, of Reading, retaining this incumbency until 1899, when he became principal of the school which was at that time reorganized upon its present amplified basis. In 1902 he withdrew from the principalship to assume the duties of his present responsible position of superintendent of the public schools of Reading, in which capacity his work has been admirable in every respect. He was re-elected by unanimous vote in 1905 and again in 1908, and in 1905 was also granted an increase in salary without a dissenting vote.

Mr. Foos is a member of the National Federation of State Educational Associations, of which he was elected president in 1909; was elected president of the Pennsylvania State Educational Association in 1906 and is now president of that Association, and is a frequent contributor to leading educational periodicals. His services are much in demand as a public speaker, especially in conventions of educators and as a commencement orator, anniversary and post prandial speaker. In this line of work he is called upon several hundred times each year, and is always timely and felicitous in his utterances. He is a member of the board of managers of the Reading Young Men's Christian Association, is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, of whose Sunday school he was superintendent, and he was also a member of the executive committee of the Berks County Sabbath School Association. He is prominent also in fraternal societies, especially the Masonic order, and he has been a frequent delegate to national and State bodies of the same. He is past master of Schuylkill Lodge, No. 138, F. & A. M., of Orwigsburg; a member of Excelior Chapter, No. 257, Royal Arch Masons of Reading; past grand master of Iron Commanding, No. 43, Knights Templar. He is past regent of Wyomissing Council, No. 1584, Royal Arcanum, and is affiliated with the Sons of Veterans, and the Patriotic Order Sons of America, besides holding membership in the Reading Board of Trade, the local Press Club, and other organizations.

Of their four children Mr. Foos married Miss Mary Demarest, of Paterson, N. J., and they have four children: Irvin Demarest, Frances Alice, Charles George and Florence Demarest.

DR. EDWIN M. HERBST, State senator from the Eleventh District and a prominent physician of many years of experience, was born in Pikesville, Berks county, Sept. 10, 1857, son of the late Capt. George S. Herbst, and his wife, Violette (Maurer) Herbst.

The early home of the Herbst family was in Altenburg, Maaselwitz, Saxony, where was born Dr. William Herbst, father of the Senator. At the age of sixteen he emigrated to America. He located in Philadelphia, and there under the guidance of a prominent physician he began the study of medicine, continuing with him until he graduated from Jefferson Medical College. Being now equipped to enter upon the practice of his profession, he located in the town of New Pike township, and there for forty years devoted himself to his calling. Not only did he become the leading physician, but he became a prominent, public-spirited citizen, taking an active and intelligent interest in the affairs of the community. In politics he was a stanch Democrat, and in 1861 was elected county treasurer, an office he held for a term of two years. The last two years of his life were passed in retirement. He died in 1880. He married Catharine Schall, and their children were: George S.; Dr. William; Mary, who married G. A. Hinterleiter; Hannah, who married Edmund W. Gilbert; August; and John S., all deceased.

Capt. George S. Herbst, son of Dr. William, was born in Pikesville in 1830, and was educated in the district schools. His father was the owner of the Rockland Iron Forge, and when the son reached maturity he was placed there as manager, in which capacity he was still serving when the Civil war broke out. He was one of the first to answer President Lincoln's call, and on April 23, 1861, he was mustered into the service of his country, becoming captain of Company D, 7th Pa. V. I., which company was recruited for the three months service at Pleasantville. At the end of his term of enlistment, he returned home with the services of his company unimpaired, and by the end of the war was 26 years of age. He was killed away Dec. 26, 1865, at the age of thirty-five. In 1864 he married Violetta Maurer, daughter of Henry and Susanana (Dotterer) Maurer, the former of whom was recorder of deeds of Berks county, 1842-45, and Justice of the peace for many years, being a leading citizen of the county for half a century. Capt. and Mrs. Herbst had one son, Dr. Edwin M. In politics Capt. Herbst was a Democrat, and in religious belief a Lutheran. His social connections were with the I. O. F. and O. U. A. M.

Dr. Edwin M. Herbst was prepared for college in the public schools of his native city. Entering Pennsylvania College he graduated therefrom in 1875, with the Latin salutatory. In the fall of that year he entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and in the spring of 1878 received his degree of M. D., with honorable mention for the Henry C. Lea prize. Since 1880 he has been actively engaged in caring for the afflicted at Oley, where he has built up a large and successful practice, and has won a warm place in the affections of the many he has helped, professionally or otherwise. His ability, coupled with a frank genial manner, has inspired the utmost confidence.

Like all his family, Dr. Herbst is a Democrat, and is actively interested in the success of the party and the prosperity and well being of his community. From 1899 to 1902 he served as chairman of the county committee, and for the past twenty years he has been elected District or State delegate to the party's councils. In 1901 he became member of the Board of Health, at a temporary physical disability impaired his usefulness during the early part of his term. However, he made his presence known and felt before the session closed, and in 1903 he was nominated by his friends for President pro temp., an honor seldom given to a new member. Early in the session he created a marked favorable impression by his eloquent speech in favor of the erection of a monument to the memory of the Pennsylvania soldiers who fell in the war of the Rebellion. In 1905 he was again elected to the Senate, and served through the special session in 1906, and in April, 1908, he was again nominated by his party at the primaries, receiving 400 votes more than his two next highest competitors in a very spirited contest. In November he was elected for his third term in the Pennsylvania Senate, being the first senator from Berks County to obtain this honor thrice. During the term of 1901 he served on the following committees: Public Health and Sanitation, Education, Law and Order, Agriculture, Congressional Appropriation and Judicial Appportionment; in 1902, on Appropriations, Agriculture, Congressional Appropriation and Judicial Appportionment; in 1903, on Appropriations, Agriculture, Congressional Appropriation, Public Health and Sanitation, Pensions and Gratuities and Law and Order; in 1905 on Agriculture, Education, Library, Municipal Affairs, Public Health and Sanitation and Pensions and Gratuities; at the special session of 1906 on Agriculture, Appropriations, Education, Forestry, Library, Military Affairs, Municipal Affairs, Public Health and Sanitation. His great-grandfather, George Schall, was a member of the Senate of Pennsylvania seventy-five years before Dr. Herbst, representing the same district.

In 1899 he was elected director in the Farmers’ National Bank of Boyertown, and on May 17, 1907, became its cashier. His connection with the bank has been of great benefit to that financial institution. From 1891 to 1893 he was lazetto physician of the Port of Philadelphia, and from 1893 to 1898 was pension examiner at Reading. In what professional way Dr. Herbst placed he proves an able man, capable of managing large affairs with skill and wisdom.

Dr. Herbst is a member of a number of fraternal organizations, among these being: Minnehaha Lodge, No. 194, K. B.; Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E. (of which he is past officer); Huguenor Lodge, No. 3, F. & A. M., of Kutztown (of which he is past master); and Reading Chapter, Consistory and Commandery. He also belongs to the Sigma Chi college fraternity. In his religious faith he has not departed from the teaching of his fathers, and is a member of the Lutheran church.

On Nov. 28, 1889, Dr. Herbst was married to Lottie Stettler, of Kutztown.

HENRY MALTZBERGER, lawyer of Reading and United States commissioner, was born in Reading, Oct. 10, 1858, son of Charles C. and Margaret C. (Haas) Maltzberger. His grandfather, John Maltzberger, was a tobacconist of Reading.

Charles C. Maltzberger was also a tobacconist of Reading. He died in 1874, at the comparatively early age of forty. His wife was the daughter of Charles F. Haas, a brewer, of Zanesville, Ohio. They became the parents of four children. John died at the age of three years; Marguerite E. M. Robert Job, chemist, formerly chief chemist of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, later member of the leading firm of chemists, Booth, Garrett & Blair, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Henry; and Charles J. was formerly superintendent of the American Iron & Steel Manufacturing Company, but later in the service of the Reading Iron Company.

Henry Maltzberger was reared in Reading and passed through the graded schools, graduating from the high school in 1874. He was prepared for Yale at the Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven, Conn., and entering College, took his B. A. in 1880. Maltzberger then returned to Reading, and entered the law office of his uncle, Harrison Maltzberger, at that time a prominent lawyer of the City, but now deceased. After two years of study, he was admitted to the Bar of Berks county in November, 1881, and has since been actively engaged in public and private practice. He is a member of the Berks County Bar Association, and a member of the American Bar Association. On July 3, 1905, he became United States Commissioner for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, at Reading.

A Republican in politics, Mr. Maltzberger has taken an active interest in the councils of his party, and was for some years secretary of the County committee. He was a member of the Census Select Committee in 1890. Mr. Maltzberger is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, and also belongs to the Washington Library Company, of which he is vice-president.

JOHN G. XANDER, of the Xander Machine & Supply Company, is not only a machinist of ability, but an innovator whose machines have brought him much national prominence. He was born in Hamburg, Pa., Aug. 6, 1854, Mr. Xander remained there in school up to the age of fourteen, when he entered his father’s shop to learn the machinist’s trade from his father, George A. Xander, who was a man of considerable ability in that line himself. After mastering his trade, Mr. Xander went to work and had various employment in the Harbster (now the Reading) Hardware Company. He worked there five years, and in the meantime developed such a marked taste for mechanical pursuits that he entered the employ of the Reading Iron Company as foreman in the tool room. He remained with them one year, then went to work with Mr. J. T. Schall, manufacturer of hat machinery, with whom he remained from 1882 to 1892. In the following year he went into partnership with James T. and James C. Reber as the Acme Manufacturing Company, to continue the manufacture of bicycles which Mr. Xander had patented and made after he left Wilhelms & Company. The new firm continued till 1897 when Mr. Xander sold his interest to the other, and left Reading to locate instead in Lebanon, Pa. There he organized the Keystone M. & M. Company, and for four years was engaged in the manufacture of bicycles on a very extensive scale, but in 1900 he disposed of his interests there, returned to Reading and opened his present establishment at No. 290 E. Main St.

He does an extensive business in general machinery, in the manufacture and repair of automobiles, and in the manufacture of hat machinery, filling orders for the last all over the United States and Europe. Mr. Xander is also a designer and builder of special machinery, besides having on the market a water motor for running washing machines, and the Xander Brazing Compound, for cast iron and other metals, all of which are sold and used over the entire country. Mr. Xander is a man who has proved his claim to a foremost place in his line of work, and who has reaped substantial financial returns for his work. In addition to the above business, he is on the staff of the General Adjustment Bureau of New York, as machinery expert, in appraisement of machinery. His establishment is an official station for the American Motor League.

Mr. Xander married, in 1873, Miss Matilda Richards, like himself a native of Hamburg, Pa. Their only child is a daughter, Florence, cashier for the W. H. Wilhelms Company. The family are all members of St. Andrew’s Reformed Church. Mr. Xander’s business interests have left him little time for any political work, but he is an intelligent student and observer of conditions, and in voting he always acts as an independent stand. He is a member of Camp No. 78, P. O. S. of A., of Hamburg, and of the Veteran Association of the same order.

ELDRIDGE ZIMMERMAN. The ancestors of Eldridge Zimmerman, prothonotary of Berks county, Pa., came to this country as early as 1865.

Isaac Zimmerman, grandfather of Eldridge, was born in Maxatawny township, Berks county, where his life was spent as a farmer.

Daniel Zimmerman, son of Isaac and father of Eldridge, was a farmer and hotel keeper. He was a school director at Kutztown, and was recorder of deeds for Berks county for the years 1879, 1880 and 1881. He was sixty-three years. He married Susan Caroline Fisher, daughter of Jacob Fisher, of Kutztown, where he kept a hotel. They had three children, viz.: Mary, wife of A. S. Hottenstein, a lawyer of Milton, Pa.; Jacob F., U. S. storekeeper and gauger at Kutztown; and Eldridge of Topton, Pennsylvania.

Eldridge Zimmerman was born April 18, 1852, in Maxatawny township. After completing the common school course at Kutztown, he attended the State Normal School there, and subsequently taught school for two terms. He then engaged in the grain, flour and coal business at Kutztown, in which he continued for three years, and then served as deputy recorder during the years 1879, 1880 and 1881. After retiring from this position he returned to the JOSEPH O. FLATT, Sr. (deceased), founder of the brush manufacturing business now conducted by the firm of Joseph O. Flatt & Co., was a native of Baden, Germany, born Oct. 4, 1829. There he spent his youth and early manhood, receiving the thorough training characteristic of his age, and his industries. He learned the trade of machinist in the Fatherland, not only familiarizing himself with the more practical details of the work, but also attending several of the leading technical schools of Germany, acquiring an education above the average.

In 1856 Mr. Flatt came to America, and settling in Reading, Berks Co., Pa., found employment readily with the Philadelphia & Reading Company, with which he remained until the panic of 1872. On Oct. 22d, of that year, he turned his attention to the manufacture of brushes, a business in which he continued the remainder of his life. He made a financial success of the undertaking, and won high personal standing by his honest and upright methods of dealing. His death, which occurred in 1894, was widely mourned in Reading, where he left a large family and numerous friends and acquaintances who admired and respected him as an able and useful citizen.

Mr. Flatt married April 7, 1857, Carolina W. Maurer, a native of Saxony, Germany, and a daughter of Christian and Henrietta (Grasser) Maurer. Children as follows were born to this union: Anna and Mary, twins, died in infancy. Charles married and became the father of two children, Sally and Walter. William, a printer, m. Sally M. Jones, and has two children, V. M. and Addie. Frank married Miss Anna M. J. Hoffman, and has one child, Hattie. Mary married Mr. William Flatt, and has one child, Hattie. Mary married Mr. Harry Wentzel, of Philadelphia. Anna (deceased) m. George Hoffman. Frederick died at JOSEPH O. FLATT, senior member of the firm of Joseph O. Platt & Co., brush manufacturers of Reading, has passed on in his life in the city. He was born in Reading, Aug. 27, 1872, son of the late Joseph O. and Caroline W. (Maurer) Flatt, and received his education in the public schools and at Brunner’s Business College. Immediately after leaving school he began keeping books for his father, by whom he was employed until the latter’s death. George W. Flatt, his younger brother, also a member of the firm, then took over the management of the business. He has been with his brother Joseph O., Jr., in that capacity since 1898. His father, Joseph O. Flatt, was a member of the firm from 1898 until 1894.

The firm was established in 1894, and the business has been in continuous operation ever since. Joseph O. Flatt, Jr., now the senior member of the firm, is the son of the late Joseph O. and Caroline W. (Maurer) Flatt. He was born in Reading, Pa., March 4, 1876, and received his education in the public schools and at Brunner’s Business College. He began working in the business in 1892, and has been with the firm ever since. The firm is located at 122 North Ninth Street, and employs about 50 people. The business is well known in the trade, and is regarded as one of the leading brush manufacturers in the country.

In March 1894, Mr. Flatt was married to Anna C. Berend, and they have one daughter, Catherine. The family home is at No. 122 North Ninth Street. In fraternal life Mr. Flatt is quite prominent as a member of a number of Masonic bodies, being past master of Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M.; member of Excelsior Chapter, No. 337; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, and Rajah Temple, A. M., O. N. M. S. He is also a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle and of the Schuylkill Fire Company. Mr. Flatt is in the retail business, and his business acumen has earned him an honorable place in the community.

George W. Flatt, junior member of the firm of Joseph O. Platt & Co., brush manufacturers of Reading, is one of the young business men of that city, but the house with which he is connected was founded by his father thirty years ago. Mr. Flatt was born in Reading, March 4, 1876, son of Joseph O. and Caroline W. (Maurer) Flatt. He was educated in the public schools of the city, and since leaving school has been identified with the business he is now conducting, working with his father until the latter’s death. On Jan. 1, 1895, he and his brother Joseph O. formed the partnership which still exists. George W. Flatt is a graduate of the Reading public schools, and has been in the business since 1892. He is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle and the Schuylkill Fire Company. Mr. Flatt is in the retail business, and his business acumen has earned him an honorable place in the community.

HENRY AUGUSTUS MUHLENBERG (1), congressman and first minister to Austria, was born at Lancaster, Pa., May 13, 1732. He was the eldest son of Rev. Henry E. and grandson of Rev. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, the American ancestor of the family who, in 1741, emigrated from Saxony as a missionary of the Lutheran Church to the German population of Pennsylvania. The family is of Pennsylvania origin, and the name is associated with the history of the state.

The family home is at No. 122 North Ninth Street. In fraternal life Mr. Flatt is quite prominent as a member of a number of Masonic bodies, being past master of Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M.; member of Excelsior Chapter, No. 337; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, and Rajah Temple, A. M., O. N. M. S. cungie township, Lehigh county. The five sons, namely: Lawrence, Paul, Peter, John and Christian, all settled in Berks county.

Abraham H. Rothermel, the subject of this sketch, is a descendant in the fourth generation from John Rothermel, of Wachbach. His father, Abraham Rothermel (1822-1903), was a son of Peter Rothermel (1775-1856), who was a son of Peter Rothermel, the son of the aforesaid John Rothermel. All of Mr. Rothermel's paternal ancestors in America, with the exception of his father, whose remains are interred in Spies's Church Cemetery, lie buried in the Rothermel family cemetery, at Walnuttown, Berks county.

Mr. Rothermel's mother was Magdalena (Heckman) Rothermel (1858-1888), daughter of Adam and Catharine (Heffner) Heckman, of Alsace township. His paternal grandmother was Magdalena Iaeger, daughter of Frederick Iaeger, of Oley township (1748-1822), and his paternal great-grandmother was Magdalena (Dreibelbis) Rothermel, daughter of Jacob Dreibelbis. The last named, as well as Frederick Iaeger, above mentioned, were soldiers of note in the war of the American Revolution.

HON. W. OSCAR MILLER, former State senator and now a prominent citizen of Reading, where he is engaged in practice as a lawyer, also dealing in real estate, is an active worker in the Democratic party, and is known throughout the State as a politician of sagacity and foresight. He was born in Maxatawny township, Aug. 28, 1857, son of Joseph and Mary (Ziegler) Miller.

John Miller, great-grandfather of the Hon. W. Oscar, lived in the vicinity of Fogelsville, Lehigh Co., Pa. The Miller family have been noted for their longevity.

John Miller (2), son of John, was born near Fogelsville, in Lehigh county, but in his young manhood came to Maxatawny township, Berks county, and engaged in farming for the remainder of his life. His political views made him a supporter of the Democratic party. He was a member of the Reformed church, and in that faith he died in 1846. He was the father of five sons and one daughter, namely: Charles, who died in Maxatawny township, in May, 1905, aged ninety-nine years, two months, twenty-nine days; John, who died in June, 1905, aged ninety-five years; Rosalind, who married Napoleon Drescher, and died at the age of eighty-three; Jonas, who died aged seventy-two years; Joseph; and Josina.

Joseph Miller, son of John (2), was born in Maxatawny township, Jan. 21, 1819, and there grew to manhood with a full practical knowledge of farming. He attended the common schools, and for two winters a subscription school. His health, the result of internal injuries received in a fall from an apple tree, occurred in August, 1890, in his seventy-second year. He married Mary Ziegler, born May 3, 1839, and to this union were born the following children: W. Oscar; Mamana m. A. S. Heffner, a coal and lumber merchant at Tupton, this county; Sally married A. Stein; and Susie married the Rev. James O. Leibensperger; and George F. Joseph Miller, the father, was a staunch Democrat, and served as school trustee for several terms.
W. Oscar Miller was given the benefit of a good education. After finishing the common school he went to Kutztown, and graduated there from the Keystone State Normal School in 1875. He then entered Lafayette College, and later went to the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, graduating from the Law Department in 1879. The following year he was admitted to practice in Reading, and for a quarter of a century he has had his law offices at No. 610 Washington street.

From the time he attained his majority he has been active politically under the name of Henry Friedensburg. As early as 1887 he was a delegate to the State Convention, and in 1889 was elected district attorney, an office he filled to the general satisfaction of the public. In November, 1896, he was elected to the State Senate. As chairman of the County committee in 1892 and 1894, he did yeoman service for his party, and in 1896 he was a delegate to the National Convention at Chicago which nominated William Jennings Bryan for President. As editor of the Reading Democrat he has been able by his forceful and logical arguments to mould public opinion in favor of the reforms he advocated. In 1896 he made a statement one week before election that there would be only 375 Gold Democrat votes cast for Palmer and Buckner in the county, and the results showed 416; while in 1900 he predicted Gov. Patton's majority to within one vote of the correct result in the county.

Mr. Miller married March 23, 1889, Emma L. Reider, daughter of Augustus and Elizabeth (Heffner) Reider, of Pricetown, granddaughter of John Reider, and great-granddaughter of Daniel Reider (1794-1891). To this union has been born one daughter, Frances.

HENRY H. FRY, former county treasurer of Berks county, and a prominent lumber dealer of Oley township, was born July 12, 1863, in Ruscombmanor township, near Pricetown, where he was educated in the public schools. He was reared on the home farm where he remained until he was sixteen years old, when he entered the country store of Daniel Brown, at Pricetown, and he remained there two years, when he became a clerk in the store of B. A. Glase, Son & Co., at Friedensburg. After continuing there a year the senior partner died, and his son, Peter L. Glase, purchasing the Baer general store at the same place, persuaded Mr. Fry to work for him. He acted as clerk for seven years in that store, and then became a partner of the firm of Glase & Co. They have carried on the business together from 1899 until the present time. In 1894 Mr. Fry began purchasing tracts of timber, converting the trees into lumber, railroad ties and telephone, telephone and trolley poles, and he has been very successful. He officiated as a school director in Oley township for three terms. In November, 1905, he was elected county treasurer, and served his term of three years, which expired in January, 1909.

In 1887, Mr. Fry was married to Anna L. Stitzer, daughter of Daniel Stitzer, and Annetta Ahrens, his wife, of Oley township, by whom he had four children: A. Paxton, Sarah, Mary, and Elmer.

William Frey, father of Henry H., was engaged in farming in Ruscombmanor township until his decease in 1882, when he was aged sixty-three years. He officiated as a county commissioner from 1873 to 1876, having been elected on the Democratic ticket. He married Annie L. Haas (1824-1894), daughter of George Haas, of the same township. They had eight children: James (m. Hannah Brown); Nathaniel (m. Clara Hans); Sarah (m. Mayberry Angstadt); Caroline (m. Thomas Leinbach); Amos (m. Isabella Fox); Lewis (m. Mary Brown); Henry H.; Augustus (m. Annette Jarrett). Brother of William and grandfather of Henry H. was of the same township. He married Catharine Rothrock, by whom he had eight children: George (m. a Reinheimer); Charles; William; Julia (unmarried); Catharine (m. John Wahl); Maria (m. Henry Keller); Sallie (m. Nicodemus Noll); Margaret (m. Jacob Krick).

JOHN D. MISSIMER was for twenty-five years before his death managing editor of the Reading Eagle. Born in 1847 at Denglers (now Mount Penn), Berks county, he was a son of John Missimer, a prominent Democrat and member of the Pennsylvania Legislature for several terms. Just prior to the Civil war he was librarian to the House of Representatives in Washington. John D. Missimer attended school in Washington until he received the appointment, secured by Maj. S. E. Ancona, then Congressman from this district, as cadet at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. He made a voyage to foreign parts, but finding a dislike to the life of the navy was allowed to resign. Early in life he gained considerable reputation as a writer of verse and sketches for the newspapers, and he naturally drifted into newspaper work, being for some time associated with the famous "Brick" Pomeroy in the publication, in New York, of an illustrated weekly paper that enjoyed a national circulation. His connection with the Reading Eagle commenced about 1872, when he became a reporter on the staff of that journal, with which he was thereafter identified until his death. He soon acquired the reputation of being one of the most affable and capable newspaper men in the city, and in 1880 he succeeded J. Warren Conrad as managing editor, which position he continued to hold until his sudden death, Sunday, April 22, 1906.

As a general all-around newspaper man Mr. Missimer had few equals. He did his work with a thoroughness which made the paper a complete epitome of each day's events. He was a master of details, concise, able and industrious, and possessed the faculty of condensing an item or "boiling it down" to substance. In his relations with his subordinates he was genial and sympathetic. At the close of his thirtieth year with the Eagle his fellow-citizens celebrated the anniversary by rendering him a banquet, as a tribute to his fidelity to the paper and his courtesy to them.

Mr. Missimer was a ready and easy writer, and a number of years ago he contributed many serial stories of interest to the New York Weekly, the Saturday Night, and other weekly and monthly publications. He wrote "The Amish Girl" and several other dramas, which at different times were presented to appreciative and delighted audiences in Reading and other cities. For years he contributed much to metropolitan dailies, and three years before his death he founded the Reading Financial Bulletin, which he published to the last day of his days. It was a publication devoted to the subject of local investments.

A few years before his death he wrote and published a pamphlet on the libel law, which was intended as a guide to young newspaper writers, and it not only had a large sale among that class but also among experienced newspaper workers all over the country, and the author received many letters from successful publishers in praise of the work. During his last days he wrote the history of the famous "Conway Cabal," a conspiracy fomented in this section during the Revolutionary war to depose Washington from the position of commander of the Continental army. It is supposed to have been hatched in Reading, and Mr. Missimer invested his work with a great deal of local color. Its preparation involved the consultation of many authorities, and he devoted himself to it with his accustomed vigor and thoroughness.

From the time of his young manhood Mr. Missimer entered heartily into the social life of the city, and in his later years he was a frequent and popular spectator among congenial friends. His popularity and felicity of expression are attested in the fact that he was frequently called upon to act as toastmaster at banquets, and in this role appeared at his best. He was always most happy in his introduction of the speakers. He was a member of the Republican Council, Royal Arcanum; the Reading Press Club, the Berks County Historical Society, Trinity Lutheran Church, and a trustee of St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mr. Missimer married Anetta Richards, who survived him with one daughter, Grace.
JAMES S. FOCHT, general superintendent of the Job Wilbur Mining & Milling Company, of Providence, R. I., and a successful farmer residing near Greenawald Station, in Albany township, Berks county, was born in Windsor township, this county, May 12, 1836, son of Daniel and Hetty (Steff) Focht, and grandson of George Focht, of Windsor township.

Daniel Focht, the father, was born on his father's farm in Windsor township in 1818, and early in life learned the stone-mason's trade, which he followed for a number of years. Later he purchased a farm near Windsor Castle, consisting of twenty-four acres but this he soon sold and removed to a farm in Centre township, where his death occurred in 1901. He was a staunch Democrat in his political views, and for some time he served as supervisor of Centre township. In religious belief he was a Lutheran and belonged to St. Michael's Union Church.

Mr. Focht married Hannah Stepp, daughter of Samuel Stepp, of Centre township, and twelve children were born to them, namely: David, Mary, Catherine, William, Benjamin, Reuben, Ellen, Senora, James S., Frank, Samuel and Isabella.

James S. Focht was educated in the public schools of Centre township, which he attended until he was eighteen years old. This was chiefly in the old Roth school, to which vicinity his parents had moved when he was two years old. At the age of twenty-two he entered the Huntington College Institute, in Huntington county, and after three months hard work was licensed to teach by Prof. Samuel A. Baer. His first term was taught at Klinesville, at a salary of twenty dollars for a term of five months. He then taught four terms in Greensville township, and three in Windsor under Superintendents Baer, Keck and Zechem. For four years Mr. Focht engaged in a mercantile business at Lenhartsville, and in connection with this he also for one year conducted the "Farmers & Drovers Hotel," the hotel stand having now been his property since 1905. After giving up teaching entirely, he became connected with the Job Wilbur Mining & Milling Company, of Providence, R. I., superintending their mining in Berks and other counties of the State. In 1885 he purchased an old house, homestead, located at Greenawald in Albany township, and known as the Tresker tannery, consisting of one hundred acres. This farm he purchased for the Wilbur Company, and on it is found "Talckene," a mineral deposit which is used exclusively in the manufacture of oil cloth and linoleum. An average of 100,000 gallons of linseed oil are shipped from Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Focht owns the old Focht homestead in Centre township, consisting of 106 acres, and also an adjacent tract of fifty-four acres, at one time the property of his father. On this tract are a new set of buildings, and the land is in an excellent state of cultivation. On the homestead Mr. Focht erected in 1905, a 12 x 12 ft. well built concrete foundation. There is running water in both barn and hen house, as well as in the residence. The house is of brick, with large double porches, and was erected by Daniel Focht in 1868. Mr. Focht also owns several houses in Lenhartsville, and also a factory building. He is the largest tax payer in that borough.

In politics Mr. Focht is a strong and influential Democrat. He has held many township offices, and was the first chief burgess of Lenhartsville borough, of which he was a leading spirit in the incorporation. He was justice of the peace in Lenhartsville, and served the third commission before moving to Albany. He was also deputy coroner and school director, and he is thoroughly interested in the cause of education. In 1908 he was one of five candidates for county treasurer, but was unsuccessful, and is a candidate again for 1911.

In Church and Sunday-school work he has long taken an active part, having served as elder at Friedens Church, and served the third commission before moving to Albany. He was also deputy coroner and school director, and he is thoroughly interested in the cause of education.

In December, 1881, Mr. Focht was married to Agnes B. Euler, daughter of Valentine and Rebecca (Bechtel) Euler, of Penn township. Eleven children were born of this union: Charles F. m. Kate Smith; Alice Agnes graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in the class of 1907, and is now teaching at Lenhartsville; George W. and William J. are students at the Keystone State Normal School; J. Herbert, Edgar B. and Elda May are at home; and a daughter and three sons all died in early infancy.

EARLY. There are a dozen or more distinct families in the United States bearing the name of Early or Earley. Some are of English origin, some of Irish, and others of German and Swiss descent, but by far the larger number trace their line to the German Fatherland.

Older generations of the family by which this sketch is especially dedicated spelled the name Oehrle, or Oehrln or Ehrl, and Thomas Oehrle went from Laufen, Wurtzberg, and settled at Jesingen, Oberamt Kirchm, in that Kingdom. In 1760 he married Agatha Endriss. Whether he first settled there and then married, or whether he came there immediately after his marriage is not known, but it seems likely that he met his wife while traveling as a journeymen. They had nine children: John George, born 1729; Anna Mary, 1733; John, 1755; Agnes, 1767; Jacob, September, 1769; Barbara, 1811; Rosina, 1848; and Thomas, May, 1867. The mother died in 1771. There is no record of the father.

(II) Thomas Early, youngest son of Thomas, born in May, 1857, became very prominent. He was a school teacher, and later became court clerk at Jesingen. On Feb. 25, 1710, he married Margaret, daughter of Jacob Pferle, judge and treasurer of the town. She died Feb. 8, 1755. Nine children were born of this marriage: Thomas, born 1710, died 1713; Christine, born 1712; John Jacob, born 1714, died 1717; John Martin, born 1716, died 1717; Anna Catharine, born 1718; Anna Margaret, born 1720, died in infancy; George and John Jacob (twins), born 1722, both died under five years of age; and John, born Jan. 9, 1724. There died of natural causes: Christine, daughter of Conrad Algaier, then judge of Jesingen. This marriage occurred either late in 1755, or early in 1756. To this marriage were born: Thomas, born 1736, died in 1746; John George, born 1738, died in 1746; Agnes, born 1741; and Anna Barbara, born 1741, married George Hartman, a farmer at Jesingen, and died in 1798; Christine, born in 1743; and Conrad, born in 1746, died in 1747. Thomas, the father, died Nov. 25, 1746, aged fifty-nine years and six months.

(III) John Early (Johannes Oehrle), youngest son of Thomas Early, to his first marriage, left Jesingen, Kirchen, An der Teck, Wurtzberg, for the New World. He settled in Philadelphia in the ship "Brothers" Aug. 24, 1750. He immediately proceeded to Londonderry township, Lebanon (then Lancaster) county, but before January, 1752, he had become a resident of Reading, Berks county. On January 8, 1752, a congregational meeting was held, at which one of the duties of the superintendents of the school was the building of a church for the newly organized congregation. His name also appears in the first list of contributors toward its maintenance. On April 10, 1753, he married Susanna Brumbach. One child, Christian, was born to them Jan. 1, 1756, and some time has been recorded by the middle of October and second week of November, the wife and mother died (according to records of Trinity Church) in the faith of the Reformed Church. Shortly after the death of his wife John Early left Reading to settle on the banks of the Swatara. At first he settled about a half mile southwest of Bindnagle's Church, on a part of the original Bindnagle tract. In February, 1759, he purchased an additional tract of 233 acres, named "Betines" in the original survey made for the Rev. Leonard Deininger in 1751. To this tract John Early at once moved, and in 1790 he sold the northern part to his son Christian, and the remainder passed into the hands of his son John. On March 11 (Stoever says March 10), 1755, he married Regina, daughter of John Albrecht Sichele; she was quite young, but not more than eighteen. To this marriage was born the following family: John, born July 31, 1757; John William, Aug. 10, 1763; Thomas, Nov. 4, 1767; Anna Catharine, July 7, 1772; Anna Margaret, Feb. 28 (or March 1), 1779; and four others who doubtless died in infancy, as their names are not recorded. John Early died Oct. 19, 1796, aged seventy-two years, nine months, ten days, and is buried at Bindnagle's Church, where his grave is marked by a red sandstone. He was a man of wide influence. On Dec. 31, 1782, he preached his last sermon at Bindnagle's Church. His father left him a gift of seven pounds and eight shillings, and he was one of the trustees of a fund left by George Berger in 1785, for the same purpose. Tradition says his second wife, who survived him many years, she being of rank as sponsor at the baptism of Jacob Early, son of J. William, in 1811, was buried beside him at Bindnagle's church. John Early's "passing," as a preacher and a judge, was preserved many years, but was lost finally at a Harrisburg printing office.

(IV) John Early, eldest son of John and his second wife, Mary Regina, born July 31, 1787, married, Sept. 4, 1777, Margaret, daughter of John Adam Deininger. Their children were: Magdalena, born Feb. 24, 1778, married David Earnest, near Hummelstown; John Jacob, born Dec. 12, 1779; John William, born March 5, 1782; and Daniel, born Feb. 9, 1784, died March 4, 1813. Immediately after his marriage John Early settled on the old 'Betimes' homestead, and lived there the rest of his life. He acquired considerable position, and to him was added that part of the Joseph Longenecker farm lying outside and south of the town of Palmyra. His estate as inventoried by his executors amounted to a modest fortune, but much of it was in notes on which he was the security, and these were practically valueless. He also owned a considerable farm, and paid considerable fines, when commissioned Aug. 27, 1790, justice of the peace for the third district of Dauphin county, embracing Londonderry and Annville townships. Some warrants issued by him and served by his brother Thomas, who was a constable, are still in existence, one of them bearing the date September, 1782.

Mr. Early had the usual experience of those who attain prominent position, and suffered many annoyances caused by petty jealousy, in one case being accused of stealing a wagon wheel, when the prosecutor had not the least ground for his accusation, and instead of humiliating Mr. Early was obliged to pay heavy costs for his folly. John Early was one of the organizers of the Evangelical Lutheran congregation at Campbellstown in 1792, and this accounts for the fact that when the new Bindnagle's church was erected in 1803 his name seldom appears. He died March 1, 1810, aged fifty-two years, seven months, and his will was proved at York, Aug. 27, 1810. The Church at Campbellstown state that they were buried there, as was also their son Daniel, who died in 1813.

(V) William Early, son of John and Margaret (Deininger), born March 5, 1783, was better known as "Squire William Early." He married Dec. 12, 1803, aged eighteen years, nine months, six days, the first of the family to attain such advanced years. He was twice married. On March 2, 1801, he wedded Catharine Hirsche (or Hershey), born in 1780. To this union came seven children, namely: (1) Margaret, born May 1, 1802, married Oct. 7, 1830, Henry Laudermilch, and died in 1889. (2) Barbara, born Dec. 11, 1803, died May 17, 1827, when pursuing his theological studies at the newly established seminary at Gettysburg. (3) Catharine, born March 22, 1805, died May 31, 1811. (4) John, born Oct. 10, 1806, attained the age of ninety-one years and nearly six months. (5) William was born Sept. 13, 1808. (6) Jacob, born Sept. 8, 1810, lived only a little over nine months. (7) Jacob (2), born June 2, 1812, died when eight years of age, falling, says family tradition, from the top of the large poplars in front of his father's home. Mrs. Catharine (Hirsche) Early died Aug. 1, 1815, aged thirty-five years. On Jan. 30, 1816 (Jonestown church record made by B. B. Hoffman), Squire William Early married (second) Christina Kreider (cousin to his first wife). She was a widow of a Mennonite preacher who ministered unto the people for sixty years. To this marriage also were born seven children: Catharine, born Nov. 7, 1818, married Gabriel Wolfersberger, and died in Har- risburg, where all her sons, except Reuben, of Palmyra, reside; Joshua Hiester, born Jan. 25, 1818, died 1903; Martin German, born Jan. 10, 1820, died 1900; Christina, born Oct. 6, 1821, died 1903; married about 1847-50 Thomas Getz; Mary Magdalene, born Nov. 26, 1822, died Sept. 22, 1846; Elizabeth, born May 14, 1828, died 1907, became a local preacher of the United Brethren. On Dec. 2, 1823, John William Early, father of the above family, was appointed by Gov. Joseph Hiestet justice of the peace. Soon after his appointment the common school was established and he took an active part in the ensuing bitter controversies, being a stern opponent of the public school system. Not alone did he oppose it by words, but he donated land on which a school house in which to teach the German language was erected. It was still standing a few years ago, but had long since become a public school.

(VI) William Early, third son of John William Early, was born in Londonderry township, Lebanon county, Sept. 13, 1808. His education was acquired in special and private schools of his day, and he early turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, following that line all his active life, owning the farm previously owned and occupied by his father. His death occurred near Harrisburg, Aug. 10, 1876, when he was a little past sixty-eight years of age. He married Leah Detweiler, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Williams) Detweiler. To this union came six children, namely: John William; Henry; David; Leah, who died aged four years; Mary L., who died aged three years—child of sin. One child, William, died in infancy, in religious faith the family were all Lutherans.

(VII) REV. JOHN WILLIAM EARLY, son of William, is active in the ministry of the church of his fathers, the Evangelical Lutheran. He was born near Palmyra, Londonderry township, Lebanon county, Sept. 3, 1835. His early days were spent on his father's farm. For about three years he attended a private school in charge of Alexander Dasher, and then the common schools, after their introduction. He entered the preparatory department of Pennsylvania College in 1852, and graduated in 1857. After a year spent at home recruiting shattered health, he, in the fall of 1858, entered the Theological Seminary, and was ordained by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania, June 7, 1860. After supplying the pulpit of St. Michael's, Germantown, during the sickness of the pastor, Dr. C. W. Schaeffer, he took charge of congregations in Lancaster county, Pa. He spent eight years in that county, and then removed to the northern part of the State, serving congregations at Selingsgrove, Stone Valley, Danville, etc. Having spent twenty-five years in that section he came to Reading to be near his sons, employed there, also to be where he could be nearer the sources of historical and genealogical research in which he was interested.

He was secretary of the Fourth (or Lancaster) Conference from 1861-68, of the Fifth or Northern District from 1869-75. He filled the office of president of this latter Conference from 1874-77, and again from 1880-83.

Since residing at Reading the Rev. Mr. Early has prepared and published the "Lives of Lutheran Ministers of Berks County"; and the "Sketches of the Lutheran Congregations of Berks," besides preaching, he has never occasion offered, and acting as Statistician of the Conference until 1908.

On Jan. 8, 1861, he married Jane M., eldest daughter of Rev. L. G. Eggers, then pastor of the Stouckshausen parish. Their children, all residing in Reading, are: Lewis Gustavus, of No. 131 South Ninth street, Reading, night editor of the Reading Times, m. Anna B., and has two children, George William and Annetta Margaret. Martin Luther, a carpenter at No. 505 South Fifth street, m. Magie E. Garman, and has seven children—Paul Frederic (now at No. 1931 East Monmouth street, Philadelphia, Pa.), M. William, W. John, W. John, Ada, W. John, and W. John. John William, Jr., Leah Esther, Charles Garman and Clarence Robert (at home); Henrietta Catharine m. Harry W. Grim, No. 939 Ritter street, and has two children, William George and Ralph Early; David Frederic, No. 141 South Sixth street, m. Margaret H. Hiester, and has one child, Albert Hiester; John Henry, assistant to his brother in the Times office, is at home; and Leah Jane is also at home.

JOSEPH N. SHOMO, a retired merchant of Hamburg, Berks county, was born in that place Oct. 27, 1833, son of Joseph Shomo, of Hamburg, grandson of John Shomo (1752-1836), and great-grandson of Bernard Shomo.

Joseph Shomo, father of Joseph N., was born in Hamburg in 1794, and there he died in 1867. The mother of John N. Shomo was Mary Lesher, daughter of Isaac Lesher, a hotel-keeper in Richmond township. The following are his brothers and sisters: John, Elizabeth, Charles, William, Amanda, Mary, Harrison and Ellen. Joseph came between Mary and Harrison: he is now the only surviving member of the family.

After receiving a common school education Joseph N. Shomo entered a general store at the age of fourteen years, and was engaged as salesman until his twentieth year, when he went to the State of Ohio to engage in the store business, but on account of the climate he was obliged to return to Hamburg after a trial of two years. He then entered the firm of Shomo Brothers, with his brother, William, and remained with him as salesman for fourteen years, until 1889, when he purchased the Union Grist Mill in Hamburg, carrying on the milling business for three years. The dust of the mill proving injurious to his health, Mr. Shomo discontinued the business, and after selling the mill he purchased the "Washington House" at Hamburg, which he conducted successfully for nineteen years, until he retired from active business life.

Upon the establishment of the Keystone National Bank at Reading, Mr. Shomo became one of the directors, and he has continued as such to the present time. He officiated as a town councilman for two terms, serving as president of the council for four years, and was also a trustee of the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, for upward of ten years, by appointment of the Governor. When the Pennsylvania Railroad Company came to extend its branch railroad through the Schuylkill Valley, beyond Reading, to Pottsville, in 1884, the management selected Mr. Shomo as a special agent to adjust all land damages by reason of the construction of the railroad, and in this responsible position he performed his duties to the entire satisfaction of the company. In 1901, when the county office of controller was created to take the place of the county auditors, the Governor appointed Mr. Shomo as the first incumbent to serve until the 1st of January, 1902, and he filled this appointment in a very creditable manner. His careful supervision of the fiscal matters of the county for seven months resulted in the saving of many thousands of dollars and this service proved at once the utility and importance of this new local office.

Mr. Shomo was married in 1861 to Helen S., daughter of Daniel Wolf, who was born and died in Hamburg, and his wife, Sevilla Weiser (Fesig). Mrs. Wolf was born in Womelsdorf, and later lived with her grandfather, Jabez Weiser, on the Conrad Weiser farm, at the age of fifteen she came to Hamburg, and at nineteen was married. Mr. and Mrs. Shomo have one daughter, Carrie (m. to S. H. Moyer). They are active members of St. John's Lutheran Church, Mrs. Shomo having been a most devoted worker in the church and Sunday-school of this congregation since her girlhood. She has been the superintendent of the infant department for the past sixteen years, and this long-continued service evidences the love of her pupils and the appreciation of the church officials.

R. MONROE HOFFMAN, son of Peter and Mary C. (Althouse) Hoffman, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, Oct. 16, 1862, and educated in the common schools of Reading, graduating from the high school in 1882, qualifying himself particularly for a business career. He started as a clerk with the firm of B. W. Gris & Co., and after serving them for several years entered the employ of the Farmers National Bank, with which he continued for eighteen years. His fidelity and proficiency were appreciated by the directors of the bank, and he was gradually promoted from one position to another until he became the cashier, and he served as cashier until August, 1903, when he resigned. Shortly afterward he was elected secretary and assistant treasurer of the Reading Trust Company, and has been filling these positions until now. He has been much interested in the success of the Homeopathic Hospital, serving as a trustee since 1905.

Mr. Hoffman was married to Rebecca H. Schaeffer, daughter of Nicholas S. Schaeffer and Susan High, his wife, of Muhlenberg township. They are members of the First Reformed Church at Reading. He has officiated as treasurer of the congregation for seventeen years. He is also one of the elders and has repeatedly represented the church as a delegate to the classis, the Eastern Synod, and to the General Synod of the Reformed Church, and is at present the treasurer of the Eastern Synod of the Reformed Church.

HARTMAN. The common ancestor of the Hartman family in America was Valentine Hartman, a pioneer of Alsace township. His remains and those of his wife lie side by side among those of other members of the Hartman family, in the old graveyard at Spies' Church in Alsace township. A brown sandstone marks his grave, and upon it appears the following inscription:

VALENTINE HARTMAN
ER WERDE GEBOREN 1738
IN AUGUST, UND STARB
21 JULY 1794
ALT 50 JAHR.
HIER RUHET DER LEIB VON
MAGDALENA HARTMAN GEBORNE IM JAHR
1740 UND STARB
DEN 19 OKTOBER 1814
ZEICHTE 4 SORNE
UND 2 TOCHTER
WAR ALT GEWORDEN
74 JAHR."*

The following were probably the children of Valentine and Magdalena Hartman, all of whom are buried in the same old graveyard at Spies' Church: Valentine, born 1766, died in 1835; a daughter; Jacob, born in 1771, died in 1837; a daughter; Johannes, born in 1777, died in 1843; Daniel, born in 1780, died in 1840. Near the grave of the elder Valentine Hartman is a brown sandstone on which is the following inscription:

"DENKMahl VON
TOCHTER NAMEN
JUDITH HARTMAN
 Geboren 1727, Storb
IN DECEMBER 1790
ALT 64 JAHR."*

The elements have almost obliterated this inscription. There is doubt as to the fourth word, the word back of "Tochter" is almost entirely effaced. Judith Hartman probably was a sister of the elder Valentine Hartman, born in 1738.

Among other interesting facts relative to the Hartman family gleaned from gravestone inscriptions to be found in the burial ground of the Oley church, are: Adam Hartman (son of George and Elizabeth Hartman), born Oct. 6, 1793; died Sept. 7, 1865, aged seventy-one years, eleven months and one day. He married Anna Margaret Von Matthias, born Aug. 14, 1795, died May 3, 1872, aged seventy-six years, eight months, nineteen days. David Hartman, born Nov. 27, 1805, died May 13, 1805, aged eighty-two years, one month and twelve days, married Elizabeth Von Moyer, born in 1812, died in 1880. Joseph Hartman, born Jan. 3, 1829, died March 2, 1879, aged fifty-five... four years, one month and twenty-nine days, married Elizabeth Von Esbach, born in 1827, died in 1877, and they had one son and three daughters. John M. Hartman, born Jan. 16, 1829, died May 29, 1900, aged seventy-one years, four months and thirteen days.

SYDNEY J. HARTMAN, cashier of the First National Bank of Oley, Pa., was born in Alsace township, Jan. 4, 1874, and he is the great-grandson of John Valentine Hartman, who was the first of the family to settle on the Hartman farm in Alsace township, which property is now owned by Ephraim R. Hartman. The tract then consisted of 170 acres, and much of it was woodland. When John Valentine Hartman secured it from a man by the name of Lanciscus. This man one day while hunting brought home in his pocket a little pine tree which he planted on what is now the Hartman farm. It grew into a fine tree and stood for more than one hundred years, but in 1876 a violent hail storm broke it down, and thus passed away one of the old landmarks of Alsace township, if not of Berks county.

The barn on the property was built by John Valentine Hartman in 1814, but the house was built by Valentine Hartman in 1840. There is a famous peculiarity of the place which is never runs dry, and adds materially to the value of this really fine property. The Hartman farm was used during the life of the old State militia as a drilling ground once a year. There annually all able-bodied men between twenty-one and fifty-five came and were given military training. The present condition was as follows:

John Valentine Hartman was married to Catherine Deibler, and they are both interred in the old Spies's church burial ground, the following inscriptions appearing on their tombs: John Valentine Hartman, born Nov. 4, 1766, died May 3, 1835, aged sixty-eight years, six months and one day. Catherine Hartman, born in 1789, died in 1872, aged fifty-one years. The children of John Valentine and Catherine Hartman were: (1) William settled near Circleville, Ohio, where he was three times married, and had twenty-four children. (2) Samuel lived and died in Alsace township, and is buried in the Spies's church burial ground; he had children. Gideon, Valentine, Lewis, Israel, Samuel and Emma, and Justina. (3) Abraham lived at Spies's church where he is buried, and had three children, Rebecca, Sarah and Susan. (4) Valentine. (5) Hannah married John Ritter, who moved to Union county, Pa. (6) Polly Maria, born in 1806, died in 1851, married Reuben Schneck. John Valentine Hartman was one of the early settlers of his district, and among the heirs of the Hartman family is an account book kept by him showing the income and expenditures of the district during his term of office, and the items in his careful pennmanship afford a good idea of the early history of those times.

Valentine Hartman, son of John Valentine Hartman, was born in Alsace township in 1808, and died there in 1882. All his life he followed farming and became a prosperous landowner and proprietor of the Hartman farm, now owned by his son, Ephraim Hartman, father of Sydney J. Hartman. In politics Valentine Hartman was a Republican after the formation of that party, and served as his district as assessor. In religious matters he was connected with the Spies's church, and is buried in the family lot of the old Spies's church cemetery. He married Mary Rothermel (1814-1889), daughter of Leonard Rothermel, of Maiden-creek township. The following children were born of this marriage: Levi, of Oley township; Catherine, who died at the age of twenty-four years; Jeremiah, of Friedensburg; Valentine, who died in 1907, aged sixty-eight years, at Friedensburg; Harrison, who died about 1879; Moses, of Belleville, Ill.; Amos, deceased; M. J. and Jabez Rapp; Amanda, who married Levi Cronrath, has one son, Thomas; and lives in the township; Ephraim R.; Emma, who died in infancy; Sarah, who died in 1872, and is buried at Spies's church; Mahlon, an extensive farmer at Freeburg, Ill.; Ezra, of Friedensburg; and Hannah, who married Appolomus Shalter, of Alsace township. During his long and useful life Valentine Hartman was a prosperous and representa-

Ephraim R. Hartman, father of Sydney J. Hartman and son of Valentine Hartman, was born July 7, 1848, in Alsace township, where he lived until he attained his majority, working on the family homestead. In 1873 he began farming for himself in Alsace township on the Pricetown road, continuing there until 1901, at which date he settled at Friedensburg to engage in a general merchandise business, but after nineteen months he sold his interests to H. R. Berger, the present proprietor of the store. Mr. Hartman then retired, and now resides at Friedensburg in a handsome, large stone residence, which was once known as the Benneville Glase house. In addition to his home, he owns a valuable farm of 151 acres in Alsace township, the Hartman farm; the foundry and machine shops at Fleetwood, formerly known as the Schaeffer & Merkfield company, now occupied by the Reading Metal Body Company, a successful corporation employing 120 men. He is also the owner of No. 657 Penn street, on which he built Leitham's Hotel. The frontage of 30 feet 6 inches, and being in the very center of the business part of the city, is very valuable. In addition to his other interests Mr. Hartman was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Oley incorporated in 1907, of which he is now director. He is also a director of the Oley Knitting Mills where thirty people are employed. During the Civil War a very valuable iron ore mine was worked, 4,000 tons of ore having been taken from the mine which is located on the Hartman homestead. In all of his business enterprises Mr. Hartman has been very successful, and he has not only won prosperity, but also the confidence and esteem of his associates for his honorable methods and unflinching integrity of purpose. In religious affiliations Mr. Hartman and his family are members of the Reformed denomination of Spies's church.

In 1872 Mr. Hartman married Amanda Gass, daughter of Jacob Gass, of Muhlenberg township, and these children were born to them: Sydney J.; Esther M. Jabez Hartman, of Lehigh county, Pa., now a grocer at Reading; Warren G. is cashier of the First National Bank, at Fleetwood, Pa.; Valentine is a student of Franklin and Marshall College; and six died young.

Sydney J. Hartman was educated in his township schools, the Upper State Normal School, the Oley Academy, and was finally graduated from the Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, Pa., in 1897, having entered that institution in 1893. Following his graduation he was appointed principal of the Leesport high school, and held the chair for one term, resigning to become a teacher in the Berks Grammar school. Later he became a grammar school teacher at Brielle, N. J., and remained in that capacity for four years, thus completing his successful career as an instructor. He then became bookkeeper for William F. Remppis Co. at Reading where he remained for four years, or until his election to the position of cashier of the First National Bank of Oley, located at Friedensburg, where he has remained, his connection with the bank adding to its financial strength and firmly establishing its management in the confidence of the business public.

Socially Mr. Hartman is a member of Oley Castle No. 119, K. G. E. He is a member of Friedens Reformed church. Sydney J. Hartman is highly regarded as one of the most representative young business men of Oley. He has a wide circle of warm personal friends, as well as many business associates, who recognize his ability and excellent business training, which fit him so well for his responsible position.

R. HARTMAN, son of Valentine Hartman, and father of Ammon S. Hartman, an aged and very substantial resident of Oley township, was born in Alsace township on the Hartman homestead Sept. 17, 1835. He was brought up on the farm, working for his father until he was twenty-two years of age, at which time he engaged in farming on his own account on one of his father's farms of fifty-eight acres in Exeter township. Here he resided for twenty-two years, and in 1860 he bought the farm, and made wide improvements. This farm was a fine farm of 135 acres located on the road from Yellow House to Friedensburg, and on the Oley turnpike from Yellow House to Reading. This is regarded as the best farm in Oley township, and is well supplied with substantial buildings. The house is of stone, and was built by Casper Griesemer in 1799, while the barn was built by Daniel Griesemer in 1839. The crops are excellent and the profit is good. This farm is also rented. Mr. Hartman owns still another farm, this one being of seventy-four acres, at Pleasantville. As are his other farms, this one is well located, is well stocked and has good building-material. Mr. Hartman has a very industrious, moved family. Mr. Hartman owns considerable woodland, and resides near his 133-acre farm on a small tract he purchased from Benneville Griesemer.

A portion of the house was built over one hundred years ago, and the other was put up in 1868. The three acres of land surrounding the house are well laid out, and there is plenty of fruit. A very large spring supplies water that is recognized as good as any in the world, and Mr. Hartman takes great pride in the spring. Not only is Mr. Hartman a large landowner, he also holds bank stocks and bonds, and is one of the heaviest tax payers of the township, and a man whose word is as good as his bond.

On Oct. 4, 1857, Mr. Hartman married Mary Ann Shaeffer, daughter of Capt. Henry Shaeffer, of Light Horse Brigade fame in the Civil war. Mrs. Hartman was born Oct. 2, 1833, and died Oct. 19, 1903, aged seventy years and seventeen days, and is buried at Spiey's church in the Hartman family lot. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hartman were: Henry, born in 1858, died in 1881; Emma R., born in 1860, died in 1881; Abner, born in 1861, died in 1882; Ammon S.; William C., born in 1864, died in 1865; Mary Ann, born in 1866, died in 1873; Calvin, born in 1867, died in 1905; m. Hannah Long, and had five children—Jacob (m. at Oley township); Carrie, born in 1871, died in 1873; Elizabeth, born in 1875, died in 1877; and Miss Clara is at home attending her aged father, whose great comfort she is. This young lady is a model of daughterly love and devotion and the affection between her and her father is beautiful. Since her mother's death she has endeavored to fill her place, and is rewarded by seeing the pleasure her father takes in her ministrations.

Ammon S. Hartman, second vice president of the First National Bank of Oley and a prominent business man of lower Berks county, was born in Alsace township, Jan. 21, 1853, son of Levi R. Hartman. Until his twenty-second year, when he married, Mr. Hartman worked for his father farming, but in 1854 he began working for himself and for eleven years worked in Oley township on shares. He then sold his farm stock, and in that same year (1897) moved to Oley Line, buying a farm of 122 acres from Hiram Kaufmann. This land was located at Oley Churches, and at the time of his purchase there were no buildings upon it, so that he has built the substantial ones now standing. The house is 39 x 40 feet with a kitchen and summer house attached, and is 35 years old. He also has a carriage shed, a big wagon shed, 30 x 40 feet, a straw shed and pig sty and good chicken house. Although lumber was then cheap, compared to present prices, these buildings cost him $7,500.

In addition to his home property, Mr. Hartman owns a 200-acre farm, located near the Manatawny Church, near Mertinctown. This property belonged to Jacob Griesemer and Mr. Hartman purchased it at an assignee's sale in 1896, and it is now rented. In 1898 Mr. Hartman went to Wyomissing, a suburb of Reading, and purchased two houses and twelve building lots. However, after two years he moved to Friedensburg where he bought a 120-acre farm. After securing this property, he erected the coach making establishment opposite his home, where he is conducting a large and constantly growing business. He gives employment to five skilled mechanics, and manufactures farm implements until the spring of 1908, when he sold that branch of the business to Charles H. Hoppes, of Oley. He also owned the building and store at Manatawny, where he built a warehouse, renting the property to Tilghman Hausman for three years, but he has recently sold James Brumbaugh, who in turn disposed of it to Manatawny Castle No. 461 K. G. E., of which Mr. Hartman was the organizer and a charter member. So interested was he in the success of this society that he had a lodge hall built and made many improvements upon the property.

Mr. Hartman bought two farms from Mahlon D. Clauer of Manatawny, and these he sold five days later to C. B. Cleaver of the same place at a good profit. Mr. Hartman is a man of progressive ideas and is always interested in matters calculated to prove beneficial to the community. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Oley, of which he became a director, and leading financiers, a substantial and respected farmer of the several communities in which they reside, and they are all worthy of the name. They are all prosperous, influential and progressive, and each in his way has borne an important part in the development of his locality. They are all industrious, honest and frugal, and ever ready to bear a part in the support of their church. Surely the name of Hartman is one that is honored and respected not only in Berks county but wherever it is found.

John H. Stoner, select councilman from the Eleventh ward of Reading, who is engaged in an extensive dry goods business at No. 919 Buttonwood street, was born in 1838, in Myerstown, Lebanon Co., Pa., son of the late Augustus D. and Susan (Myers) Stoner, the latter being a member of the old Myers family after whom the village of Myerstown was named. August D. Stoner has been many years engaged in the mercantile business at Myerstown, as a member of the firm of Dinges & Stoner.

John H. Stoner attended the public schools of his native county, after leaving which he became a clerk in the firm of A. D. Stoner & Son (composed of his father and brother, Myers R.) for five years, 1883-1888, he lived in Ohio, and in 1886 he came to Reading, where he clerked for several years, and in March, 1903, bought out the well-known stand and business of J. Fred Gerhard, which he has conducted with much success to the present time. Mr. Stoner is a Democrat, and although not a politician accepted the nomination to the select council, when he was elected in 1906, serving in that body with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. He is fraternally connected with Washington Camp No. 64, P. O. S. of A., with which organization he connected himself in 1870; the P. O. S. of A. Veteran Association, and the North Eastern Democratic Association.

In 1859, Mr. Stoner was married to Lena Eckert, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Hilberbrand) Eckert, and to this union there have been born two sons, namely: Roy A. and Russell E., both attending school. Mr. Stoner has a prosperous business, and may well be classed with the substantial men of his community.

WILLIAM NOLAN, deceased. In recalling the names of those former citizens of Reading who contributed through many years to her commercial development, that of William Nolan comes naturally to mind, for he was a man whose native ability, executive capacity and high sense of business integrity made his life one of usefulness in many directions. He was born in Queen's County, Ireland, March 17, 1840, and died Feb. 28, 1903, after an illness of six months, at his home at No. 520 Walnut street, Reading. His parents were James and Annie (Bennett) Nolan.

The parents of this William Nolan were natives also of Ireland. In 1846 James Nolan brought his family to America and established his first home in the city of New York. From there he subsequently removed to Reading, where he died in 1858. In the twelve years of life accorded him after landing in the United States James Nolan proved himself a man of intense energy, within that period building more and gaining a greater reputation than many others complete in a whole lifetime. He engaged in railroad building and contracting and was one of the capable constructors of a part of the Lebanon Valley railroad and that section of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad that connects Allbourn with Dauphin. He was also a member of the firm of the Reading Viaduct, with their mother, returned to New York after his decease: William, Charles, James, Thomas, Edward, Kate and Mary. Kate is the wife of William Kearns, of Reading, and Mary is the wife of Dennis McAvoy, of Norristown.

William Nolan was six years old when his parents came to America and he went to school both in New York and in Reading. Although he returned to New York with other members of his family after the death of his father, he had made friends in Reading to whom he was anxious to return, one of these being Henry Jacobs, who was then master mason for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, with whom he secured himself as a stonemason. Even then, Mr. Nolan exhibited those steadfast traits that later so thoroughly characterized him, and before he had attained his majority he was appointed foreman of a large gang of workmen, who were employed by the large contracting firm of Riley, McGraw & Co., of Lancaster, in their building for the Lehigh Navigation Company. His work on this and other similar tasks was so satisfactory that it not only satisfied his employers but it also gave him the courage to embark in business for himself. He selected as a partner John Jacobs, a man who was industrious and ambitious like himself, although the firm’ started with no capital and no capital, they made some money out of their first large contract and also brought their ability to the attention of those requiring any kind of stone or mason work.

In this business connection, like every other one with which he was connected, Mr. Nolan was a leader, possessing the foresight which is often as necessary to success as is technical ability. He kept on the alert and secured contracts at Reading, Easton and other points, for work of more or less importance, and thus was fully experienced when, under a sub-contract, he completed the viaduct bridge for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, at Reading, a piece of work which the ablest of the ablest engineers of the country. Mr. Nolan was always disposed to feel that this was the real foundation stone of his subsequent untiring business success. Shortly after this came the organizing of the firm of William Nolan & Co., his partners being his brother, Charles Nolan, and John Dunn. With William Nolan at the head the firm was busy and prosperous, and during its duration completed many bridge contracts, not only in Pennsylvania but also in other States.

Perhaps the main work of William Nolan’s business career was the organization of the firm of Nolan & Brothers, now the Nolan Construction Company, which, for a period approaching a half century, held the head in the line of railroad contracting and bridge building in this section of the country. The firm was made up of William Nolan and two of his brothers, Charles and James Nolan, all men of the same fiber, fitted by nature for this close association. The firm established headquarters at Oil City and the series of stone bridges which they built on the Oil Creek & Allegheny railroad, and a fine series of many other structures in Pennsylvania, and thoroughly filled an imperative need at that time but possessed the substantial qualities which made them enduring and also the artistic attractiveness which was so often a marked feature of Mr. Nolan’s work. A recont of but a small part of the enormous amount of building and contracting work done by his prosperous business firm, dating from 1871 to the recital, would include some of the finest roads, viaducts, bridges, arches and other structures that adorn the landscape and make possible the great transportation industries of a large part of the Atlantic seaboard. This firm executed all the masonry work on the Philadelphia & Erie railroad between Renovo and Driftwood, including the large stone viaducts at Hemlock and St. Mary’s; built thousands of feet of masonry on the low grade division of the Pennsylvania railroad from Driftwood, on the Susquehanna, to Redbank on the Allegheny; built the Linden line for the Pennsylvania railroad, around Williamsport, and also the bridge over the Susquehanna, and the bridge across the Schuylkill, at Port Clinton, for the Philadelphia & Reading railroad.

In 1873 this company secured the contract to erect the great Richmond street bridge at Philadelphia, with its twenty-three tracks, for the Philadelphia & Reading Company, and in the following year began the building of all the mason work on the Bound Brook railroad, from Bound Brook, N. J., to a point in the same State on the Delaware river, an undertaking of great magnitude, which was promised and successfully completed for the accommodation of visitors to the Centennial Exhibition in 1876. During the next few years this firm built the connections links between the New York City & Northern, and the Sixth avenue electric railways: the Ashew arch over the Fairmount Park drive, on the west bank of the Schuylkill; double-tracked the main line of the New York & Erie railway, from Caldwell to Hawkins, N. Y.; built the great drawbridge across the Hackensack, the bridge over the Susquehanna, and the bridge over the Chemung river, at Corning, New York.

In 1882 this firm continued its large operations. In connection with Thomas A. Reilly, capitalist, of Pottsville, they built the branch railroad from Shamokin to Milton in Pa., for the Pennsylvania system, and this included all the structures of a $1,000,000 bridge, including the erection of that noble bridge, with its mighty spans and total length of 2,600 feet of strength, which was proved when the floods of the memorable year of 1889 beat upon it and over it and it stood the strain, when many lesser structures went down. Another piece of fine work was the building of a portion of the Pattemon bridge for the Philadelphia & Reading railroad and also a portion of the Pennsylvania railroad, between Reading and Pottsville. In association with I. N. DuBarry, this firm built nine miles of the Tohickon branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. In the latter part of 1880 the firm contracted for the Great Western railroad; built the railroad bridge at Port Jervis, N. Y.; the bridge for Pottsville, for the New York & Erie railway; the bridge spanning the Delaware, at Hancock, N. Y.; other bridges located in the environs of Philadelphia; and in the short space of eighteen months built the beautiful bridge on the Norristown branch of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, over the mouth of the Wissahickon.

In the face of such a remarkable aggregation of completed work, it is totally unnecessary to dwell upon the difficulties met and overcome, for even the casual reader must recognize that undertakings of such magnitude would involve the handling of an immense working capital and the directing force of master minds. One of these belonged to the late William Nolan. With his brothers, he personally supervised much of the work as it progressed, and so careful, so practical and so thorough were his methods that no fault of construction ever escaped him. He was a man of ideas also, and not content with the opportunities offered in his own land, great as they were, went abroad and in his later work incorporated many details of construction which he gained from contemplating many of the most notable buildings in Europe. Mr. Nolan continued as the active head of the firm until 1896, when he retired, an accident which he suffered in 1888 probably contributing as a cause. During his later years, while still connected with the administrative side of the firm Nolan's benevolence, a trustee, these profitable years were spent in the leading hotels in Philadelphia and was there met socially and in business relations by men of affairs and prominence from every section.

No mention has yet been made of Mr. Nolan's connection with business interests outside of those connected with the firm of Nolan & Brothers. He was for some time large enough to have occupied the whole time and attention of an ordinary man. But Mr. Nolan was not an ordinary man, and he became identified with other important enterprises, many of these being directly concerned with the building of Reading, the city of his pride. He was a stockholder in a number of successful concerns, a director in many, and was the promoter of a number of the infant industries of the city which later became giants. He was a man of public spirit and of such benevolence that, while a member and one of the trustees of St. Peter's Catholic Church, and its munificent benefactor, his distribution of charity was not confined to his own religious body, but was given to those in need, no matter what creed they might be. Since his death St. Peter's congregation has built a fine new edifice, and its great organ, which cost the sum of $6,500, was placed there. Nolan commanded respect and enjoyed the warmest friendship and esteem. He was too prominent a man not to be more of less of a politician, but he never accepted any public preferment and served in but one office, and that without compensation, being a trustee, for a time, of the Huntingdon Reformatory. In his views on public questions he was an ardent Democrat, and he was frequently sent as a delegate to State and national conventions of his party.

Mr. Nolan married May 9, 1867, Miss Katherine McDonough, and to this happy union was born a family of nine children, namely: Anna, Kate, James, William, Jr., Charles J., Thomas G., Edward Campion, Bernard J. and Reilly. Anna, the eldest daughter, married Charles P. Briner, a civil engineer, and has been happy in her marriage to Frederick G. Jones. William, president of the Nolan Construction Company, married Margaret Coppinger. Charles J. married Lottie M. Schaeffer. Thomas G. married Annie M. Cavanaugh. Edward Campion, vice-president of the First National Bank of Reading, married Cora Louise Sembower, daughter of Clarence H. Sembower. The family is one of both social and financial prominence in Reading.

CHARLES S. RHOADS, of Birdsboro, member of the firm of Huyett & Rhoads, shoe manufacturers, has been engaged in his present line, and connected with the same enterprise, since his youth. He is a thorough business man, and has gained his present standing by the most honorable and commendable methods, holding the respect of all who have had dealings with him. He is a native of this county, born in 1862 in Amity township, son of Abraham L. and Harriet (Straub) Rhoads.

Abraham L. Rhoads was a successful farmer all his life, and during his younger years also followed cattle driving, which he found very profitable. He owned a farm in Amity township, and was considered well-to-do. He lived to the advanced age of eighty-one years, dying in 1905, and his wife survived him, passing away in 1907 at the age of seventy-nine. He was a Lutheran in church connection, she a member of the Reformed Church. Of the children born to them five lived to maturity: Irvin, Calvin, Charles S., Alice (m. William E. Henderson), and Ida (m. Samuel Fix).

Charles S. Rhoads received his early education in the public schools of his native township, and then for three terms taught school, after which he entered the Bryant & Stratton commercial school in Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1884. He again taught school, this time continuing for five terms, making eight terms in all, and had his first business experience, as clerk in a tea and grocer's house in Philadelphia. About 1890 he settled in Birdsboro, where he at once became interested in shoe manufacturing with E. & A. Huyett, continuing in partnership with them until 1900. In that year, Mr. E. R. Huyett retiring on account of ill health, the present firm of Huyett & Rhoads (A. H. Huyett and Charles S. Rhoads) was formed. They manufacture infant's, children's and men's footwear, and their orders keep them constantly busy. From sixty to seventy-five hands are employed. The firm has a substantial position among reliable business houses in this section of the county, and is steadily widening its patronage and improving the output to a creditable degree.

Mr. Rhoads married Laura M. Huyett, daughter of Isaac and Catharine Huyett, Baumstown, and to them have been born eight children, namely: Garson, Verna, Earl, Marian, Vernon Norman, Melvin and Harold. Mr. Rhoads is a member of the Lutheran Church and much interested in the local activities of his church. He is a member of the National Shoe Manufacturers' Association.

A. H. HUYETT, senior member of the shoe manufacturing firm of Huyett & Rhoads, located at Birdsboro, began his shoe business when he was sixteen years of age, and has followed it without interruption to the present day. The establishment with which he has been connected since its foundation has for many years been regarded as one of the reliable industrial factors of the borough.

Mr. Huyett was born in 1870 in Exeter township, Berks county, son of Isaac and Catherine (Root) Huyett, who are still living on a farm at Baumstown, this county. He was educated in the schools of his native township, where he passed his youth and early manhood, being reared upon a farm. When he was sixteen he and his brother, E. R. Huyett, engaged in the manufacture of children's shoes, holding the business for the first two years at home. But it was evident that under more favorable commercial conditions the trade would expand rapidly, and the young men moved to Birdsboro and began in a modest way what has since become one of the profitable manufacturing establishments of that place. They did business under the firm name of E. & A. Huyett. At first they employed only four hands, but the demand for the product grew steadily, and now the factory gives constant employment to between sixty and seventy-five operatives. In 1900 Mr. E. R. Huyett, the senior partner, retired because of poor health, and Mr. A. H. Huyett then entered into partnership with Charles S. Rhoads, who had been associated with the business from 1890. The average daily output is from sixteen to twenty cases of children's and infants' shoes, of an excellent grade at a medium price, which find a ready market throughout the States. The plant is very modern machinery for the work, and the factory is well managed and run, with due regard for the health and comfort of the employees as well as the interests of the proprietors.
In 1892 Mr. Huett married Annie D. Seifert, daughter of Reuben and Harriet (White) Seifert, and to them have been six children, viz., Benliah, Erma, Russell (who died when six months old), Marie, Dorothy and Paul. The family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which Mr. and Mrs. Huett belong; Mr. Huett is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. In political matters he is independent, voting as his principles dictate, and has done little active part in public affairs. His energies are devoted almost exclusively to his business affairs, which have well repaid his earnest and efficient labors.

REV. FRANKLIN K. BERND. The earliest American ancestor of the Bernd family came from the Palatinate, Germany, and entered in the United States in 1691. Simeon Bernd, at Philadelphia, Sept. 7, 1748, in the ship "Mary Galley," George Lawson, captain, and his name stands upon the records as Peter Bernd.

This progenitor had a son, George, who was married twice, but the names of his wives are missing. By his first marriage he had two sons, namely George and Peter, and by his second marriage also had two sons, John and Philip. These four sons settled in Bucks county, and as far as is known spent the remainder of their lives there.

George Bernd, the elder of the two sons of the first marriage of George Bernd, was a tailor by occupation, and practiced this trade not only in his own home, but at certain seasons of the year at the homes of his patrons, going from one to the other and making clothes for their families, as was the custom in those early days. He was organist for the Indian Field Lutheran congregation in Bucks county, and afterward for many years for the congregation at the "Six Corners," or St. Paul's, Lutheran Church in Montgomery county. He died at the age of seventy-eight years, and was buried in the old graveyard at Pennsburg, Montgomery county.

He married Miss Magdalena Gable, a member of an old and representative family of the vicinity of Pennsylvania, and to them there was born in August, 1812, a son, Francis Gable.

Francis Gable Bernd grew to manhood in Rich Valley near the boundary line of Bucks and Montgomery counties, and obtained the full advantage of the schools of that locality. He inherited his father's taste for music, and, practising the art from his earliest youth, became an accomplished musician, excelling as a performer on the organ. He was not merely an efficient performer, however, but thoroughly understood the mechanism of the organ which under his skilful manipulation produced the music, and frequently persons who desired to purchase instruments consulted him about the mechanism of organs of different makes. He was also a successful school teacher, was able, ambitious and progressive, and the first teacher in Lehigh county to whom was awarded a professional certificate. The various employments afforded by music and teaching were his life-work, he confining himself to them exclusively, and achieving in them a distinction which but few men attain. When in his prime he was without doubt among the most thorough and progressive musicians and educators in the State of Pennsylvania, outside of the cities. In 1845 he married and settled in the town of Egypt, Lehigh county, where he continued to reside the rest of his life, being organist to one congregation for forty-one consecutive years. He died in February, 1892, and his wife in 1886, both being buried in the cemetery at Egypt. He married Christina Kline, daughter of Michael Kline, and granddaughter of Michael, Sr., both leading farmers and influential citizens of Klinesville, Montgomery county, and who are buried in the graveyard of the Six Cornered Church, and is survived by members of his family.

To Francis G. Bernd and wife were born children as follows: Maria m. Hiram Ruch; Keturah m. Sylvester J. Runk, of Portland, Me.; R. R. m. Anna R. K.; Victor K.; Lydia F. m. Peter Laubach; and George T.

Franklin K. Bernd, the third child of the above family, was born March 16, 1850, in the town of Egypt, Lehigh county, and there grew to manhood. As soon as he reached eligible age he entered the public schools of his native place, from which he entered the high school of North Whitehall township, then taught by Eli G. Schwartz, Esq. In April, 1867, having completed the high school course, Mr. Bernd entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, remaining there the following summer session. By this time he had decided to become a teacher and on application was elected as an assistant instructor for the following winter in a school in North Whitehall township, of which his father was principal. In the spring of 1868 he returned to the Keystone State Normal School, where he continued his studies until the summer of 1869, when he graduated in the elementary course. He then returned to North Whitehall township and superintended a school in the following spring re-entered the Normal school and in 1871 graduated in the scientific course. During the winter of 1871-72 he taught a graded school in Bath, Northampton county, and then in the following spring was called to the Keystone State Normal School and given the principalship of the Model school, which position he held for five years. At the end of that time he went to Carbon county, where from 1877 to 1880 he was principal of the public schools of Puckerton and Lehighton, and then relinquished teaching for the purpose of preparing for the ministry.

In the fall of 1880 he entered the Evangelical Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1883. Soon thereafter he was elected pastor of the Jordan Lutheran congregation at Guthsville, Lehigh county, which he served very acceptably until in 1889, when he was again called to the Keystone State Normal School, this time to fill the chair of Latin and Greek. His ability and zeal as a minister of the Gospel and as a scholar and educator by this time being generally recognized, Muhlenberg College in 1898 conferred upon him the honorary title of A. M. But with reputation and honors came more exacting labors, and in 1900 he was elected professor of the Greek and Latin course. After he offered to decline, but about the same time came a call to the eastern portion of the parish of the late Rev. B. E. Kramer, consisting of a congregation at Maxatawny and another at Mertztown, which a sense of duty impelled him to accept. Circumstances not favoring an immediate separation from the position he had filled satisfactorily for so long, he for upwards of a year served as pastor at this charge and also as a professor on the Normal school faculty. In 1901 he resigned his position at the Normal school and since then has been devoting himself exclusively to his pastoral duties in this charge, which, since his election to the professorship, has been the St. Peter's (or Becker's) congregation in Lebanon. He preaches in both English and German and is a faithful and assiduous worker in the Lord's vineyard. In 1905 he was elected by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania a delegate to the General Council of the Lutheran Church of America, which was held in Milwaukee in October of that year; and in 1907 he was elected to the Reading Conference, which office he held two years. He is a member of the Pennsylvania German Society, and also of the Berks County Historical Society, occasionally contributing articles of a biographical character to the proceedings of those bodies.

In 1875 Rev. Franklin K. Bernd married Miss Hattie M. Heilman, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1874, and a daughter of Moses and Levina (Lauchnor) Heilman. Moses Heilman was a son of George Heilman, a farmer, and was born in Heidelberg township, Lehigh county. He was a merchant Miller and hardware dealer for a number of years, and his wife, Levina Lauchnor, was of American birth, but of German-French descent. To the marriage of Rev. Franklin K. Bernd and Hattie M. Heilman were born the following children: Margaret, who became the wife of Elmer A. Krauss; Florence; Katie; Alice, and Mary. Like their parents all of these daughters are graduates of the Keystone State Normal School of Kutztown, and at the present writing four of them have already been teachers.
GULDIN. The early home of the Guldin family was at St. Gall, Switzerland, where records of it are found as far back as 1259. D. The first of the name found in America was Simon Guldin, who emigrated to Berks county, Pennsylvania, in 1710, and lived there about forty years, after which time he moved to Pennsylvania. Simon Guldin was one of the founders of the Reformed Church in Pennsylvania, and is considered the first minister in Berks county. He was buried in Berks county, Pennsylvania, and his grave is still marked by a monument.

(II) Samuel M. Guldin learned blacksmithing and then together with Engel Peter and a Mr. Bartolet, all blacksmiths, went to Oley, then known as "The Land of Great Trees," about the year 1718. Each built a log house, and began to clear the land. These houses were built somewhere on the east side of the Yellow House and Friedensburg. On May 22, 1723, Samuel M. Guldin married Elizabeth Hilseweck. Their children were: Samuel, born July 12, 1723; Susanna, Oct. 5, 1724; John, Feb. 23, 1726; Mary Magdalene, Aug. 26, 1728; Frederick, Aug. 2, 1739; Daniel H., Johanna Esther (twins), April 20, 1755; and Cramer (twins), Sept. 17, 1758.

Berks county was incorporated in 1758 and Samuel M. Guldin was one of its first county commissioners. At that time there were still Indians in the county, and without doubt this ancestor bore his part in defeating the people and exterminating the dreaded foe. The records show that at least three of his children married and reared families.

(III) Daniel H. Guldin, son of Samuel M. Guldin and his wife Elizabeth, was born April 20, 1735, and he died Aug. 17, 1817. In 1762 he married Catherine Elizabeth Geltbach, and she died about 1766. Their children were: Samuel G., 1765-1769; Daniel G., 1764-1846; John Jacob, 1766-1826; Samuel G., 1769-1775; John G., 1770-1852; Elizabeth G., 1773-1848; George G., 1774-1814; Abraham G., 1776-1838; Samuel G., 1777-1854; Frederick G., 1779-1835; Peter G., 1782-1826; David G., 1784-1799.

(VII) John R. Guldin, postmaster at Yellow House, and agent of the National Bank of Boyertown, was born in the house where he now resides, March 15, 1867. He was educated in the common schools, and Prof. D. B. Brunner's Business College, at Reading, from which he graduated in 1885. Having been reared upon the farm, and reared and educated in Berks county, he early began farming for his father on the homestead. The property is a very fine one consisting of eighty-five acres located at Yellow House, in Amity township. Mr. Guldin supervises the work upon this very valuable tract, and makes it pay well. Since 1897 he has been employed in the banking business, and gives employment to three men in this line, and runs three teams delivering to his customers throughout a wide section. Mr. Guldin is one of the owners of "Yellow House Hotel," having succeeded to his father's interest in it upon the latter's death. This old landmark is often referred to by writers of Berks county, and was used for many years as a place of accommodation for the traveling public. Mr. Guldin's residence is just opposite the hotel, and is a large stone house, well supplied with all modern conveniences, and surrounded with a magnificent lawn. At midnight, Aug. 14, 1908, his large barn was burned to the ground, including its contents, consisting of the year's crop, three thoroughbred cows, one bull, thirteen trained hounds and about one hundred chickens,—a total loss of $6,500. Mr. Guldin immediately rebuilt on practically the same site, and now has the only barn in his section that has a complete concrete base, one staple high. In addition to being the agent for the National Bank of Boyertown, he has been a member of the Reading Club, and has been engaged in the insurance business.

Before he was of age, in 1888, Mr. Guldin was placed upon the Democratic ticket for auditor of Amity township, and being elected served that and two succeeding terms, nine years in all. In politics he is a Democrat, and has always taken a lively interest in township affairs. Fraternally he is a member of Wohling Tribe No. 179, Order of Red Men, at Yellow House. He and his family are members of Amityville Reformed Church, of which he was elder for some years, and is now treasurer.

On Feb. 20, 1891, Mr. Guldin married Sara L. Rhoads, daughter of Frank and Rebecca (Lorah) Rhoads, of Amity township. To Mr. and Mrs. Guldin have been born these children: Paul R., a graduate of Mercersburg Academy, in Franklin county, Pa., Class of 1908, and now taking a course in Agriculture, at Cornell University, Class of 1918; Grace E., now Mrs. Helen Geiger of Lebanon, a graduate of Lebanon State Normal School, and an accomplished young lady.

Mr. Guldin is a sportsman, and is very fond of hunting, keeping a large number of hounds for fox hunting. At times his pack numbers thirty. He also has foxes, opossums, coons and other wild animals.
a great favorite throughout all of Berks county, where he and his family occupy so desirable a place in the confidence and esteem of its people.

PROF. R. A. TOWNSEND (deceased), for many years a well known and successful educator, was a native of Lancaster county, born on a farm near Smyrna, about the 16th day of March, 1844. His father was a Quaker, of English descent, and his mother, whose maiden name was Catharine Wagner, was of Dutch ancestry. Prof. Townsend was the youngest of thirteen children, of whom only two survive, all the others having passed away at nearly the same age. The two still living are John, of Norfolk, Kans.; and Samuel, of Christians, Lancaster county.

Prof. Townsend secured the rudiments of his education in what was known as the Bart township school, which he attended until he was seventeen years old. He then went West with his brother George and sister-in-law, and settled in Illinois on the unbroken prairie, in the region of Philo, Champaign county. Not far from there was a boarding school which he attended for fifty-three weeks of the two years he was in that part of the country. He also continued his studies by himself while working on the farm, and would carry his Latin books to the field and study when occasion offered, which often occurred. On the death of his father he returned to the East, and entered Bucknell University of Lewisburg, Pa., where he graduated in 1864, the valedictorian of his class. Continuing his work he took the degree of A. M., standing second among the applicants for that honor, and attracted much attention by the unusual quality of his work. It was said by the late Rev. J. R. Loomis, LL. D., then president of the University, that his record in several of his studies was the highest ever attained in the college.

After leaving the University, Prof. Townsend went to Lancaster to read law under Judge John B. Livingston, and during the period he was residing there he also engaged in the present Judges Landis. When examined for the Bar his unusual powers were again demonstrated, for he was given the highest certificate ever recorded in the prothonotary's office there. The examining board said that they knew of no adjective adequate to describe this degree of scholarship. His future as a lawyer was most promising, but nevertheless his inclinations were toward the teacher's profession, and when a vacancy occurred in the Lancaster high school, he turned his back upon the law and began his long career as a teacher by becoming assistant to Dr. J. P. McCaskey, the principal. He taught there two years and then received the appointment to the professorship of mathematics in the Mary Sharp College, Winchester, Tenn. Later he removed to Ghet College, in Kentucky, where he was professor of Latin and Greek, and thence to Vincennes, Ind., where he was first instructor and then principal of the high school. Prof. Townsend was in reality the founder of this school, beginning in 1870, with an attendance of thirty-five pupils, which increased rapidly until at his departure in 1882 there were 300 students. From 1872 until he left Vincennes, he filled the office of city superintendent.

From 1882 until his death Prof. Townsend was located in Reading, and during those twenty-two years, still engaged in his beloved profession, his influence far reaching in its effect and unusual in its scope. Unlike some teachers, he made "his boys" his friends, mingling with them on the best of terms and always encouraging and developing them. His recitations, instead of being dreaded, were looked forward to with pleasure and his pupils took the greatest pride in their work. In 1884 he was made principal of the Literary department of education in the Boys' High School, where everything was in his personal charge, and where his success with timid and nervous boys was specially noteworthy. While never glossing over their faults or compromising with them, he nevertheless made kindness and patient long suffering a feature of the too much manliness and strength of character developed in the boys under him proved conclusively the wisdom of his methods. During his career in Reading, Prof. Townsend occupied successively the positions of assistant, assistant principal and principal.

A man of Prof. Townsend's character could scarcely have failed his country in her hour of need at the time of the Civil war, and he was one of the veterans who survived that struggle. He had enlisted while still in college, was a quartermaster sergeant in Company A, 18th V. L. and served in the battle of Gettysburg in 1863.

In 1868 Prof. Townsend was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Matilda Conroy, a successful and popular teacher, who as a student had attained a high degree of scholarship, and was salutatorian of her class. Their happy wedded life was blessed with eight children, four of whom only have survived him. They are: Roberta Ella, wife of Herbert A. Brown, chief train dispatcher for the Texas & Pacific railroad, with headquarters at Marshall, Texas; Frank A., employed as a draughtsman in the office of the water superintendent, Mr. Neubling, No. 25 North Eleventh street, Reading; Sarah E., principal of the school at Ninth and Union streets, Reading; and Thomas W., baggage master for the Texas and Pacific railroad, at Marshall, Texas.

The last months of Prof. Townsend's life were darkened by illness and suffering, and for much of the time he was confined to his bed. His trouble was caused by a surgical operation on February 23, 1910, the result of nature, it was his custom to take long walks into the country on Saturdays and Sundays, but on this particular Sunday it was too cold and rainy for him to go out as usual, so he spent the day in-doors reading to himself and his family. In the evening before retiring, he started out for a short walk down Pennsylvania to Front park street intending to ride home. Just as he was passing Lighty's Music Store a terrific explosion of acetylene gas occurred which blew out the fronts of two stores and damaged property all around. Prof. Townsend was hurled into the street, landing on his left side, and was made helpless by the force of the impact. On coming to himself he went home and was sent by his family to a hospital a few cuts on the head and face, but before long the full effect of the shock appeared in the steady decline of his health from that time. On June 19, 1902, was the graduation of the last one of his children, Thomas W., from the high school, and on that day the father finally went to bed, never to leave it again until his death, Oct. 4, 1902, when his sufferings were over. He left the record of a life rich in usefulness and honor, and in the affectionate esteem of numbers who owed to his wise guidance and counsel much of their happiness and success in life.

In 1903 was published a very long, and we append a brief account of its early history, by Dr. Samuel Townsend, Esq., of Brooklyn, N. Y., foreign freight agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The name has been spelled in at least fifty-seven different ways, each spelling found in print. The original Townsend in England came from Normandy with William the Conqueror in 1066, and took part in the battle of Hastings. According to William the Norman, he received a grant of land in Norfolk and named it Raynham. "Rayn" means river, and "ham" (home) means home, and thus Raynham means river home. This grant of land from William the Conqueror in the possession of the Townsends. Very few of the English nobility so patented on the original grant of land made to them, but the Townsends have retained their possessions for over 800 years, and through all the revolutions and wars in which England was engaged during that period. The name then was Norman; and, while meaning the same as Townsend, it was spelt in several different ways: "at Haute," "head" or "end;" and "ville;" towns are sometimes used in Norman, means at Town's-end in English. Seventeen of the fifty-seven spellings begin with the preposition "at," as "at town's-end." In French the same is spelled de Boutville: "de" means "at," "Boute" means "end" and "ville" means "town."

These different names and spellings become very important should any future
Townsend choose to continue archaeological researches in this direction. Townsend is the proper modern spelling in both in England and in this country. That the name is uniformly spelled Townsend is a matter of congratulation and prevents many inconveniences. For the spelling Townsend, there is high authority. Edmund Burke, the great English statesman, says, "It seems not improbable that the Townsend is the most correct, 'hend' being derived from 'henden' [Saxon] or Latin 'hendere, to take or hold.'

On the monument to commemorate the battle at Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 17, 1777, is a bronze relief of "The King and his Ministers." In this picture beginning on the left are Lord North, Archbishop Markham, and King George III. Lord Charles Townsend, prime minister, with outstretched hand is advising King George III to some course of action. "The present Marquis of Townsend, whose father was Lord Chancellor to Queen Victoria, and whose picture is in the group, 'Victoria and her Court,' married a sister of the Duke of Fife, whose son, owing to his marriage with a daughter of the Prince of Wales, may some day reign in England." Should this Townsend ascend the English throne and become King of England and Emperor of India, then the English Sovereign, through his great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, and by the blood of the lineal descendant of the great-grandfather of Egbert, the first English King who held a Grand Lodge of Masons in York in 826.

Many other interesting references have been found concerning the three brothers who settled at New York City and became very wealthy—Richard, John, and William Townsend. The last named sailed in the ship ‘Welcome’ with their worthy friend, William Penn, arriving at Newcastle, Delaware, in 1682. William Townsend emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1712, settling near West Chester, Pa., in 1725. From these the Townsends of Chester and of Lancaster counties are descended.

DR. ELIAS CAREY KITCHIN, of Amity township, one of the most distinguished and best known citizens of Berks county, was born in Solebury, Bucks Co., Pa., Nov. 27, 1827, son of William and Ellenor (Carey) Kitchin, and grandson of William Kitchin, and died at his home in Brohmfieldsville, March 13, 1909.

William Kitchin, the grandfather, was a farmer in Bucks county. He was a man of much learning, devoted to scientific pursuits, and he was prominent among the old orthodox Quakers. His wife was Ann Paxson, a member of the orthodox Quaker family.

William Kitchin, the Doctor’s father, was born in Solebury township, Bucks county, Feb. 12, 1789, and died Oct. 16, 1873; he was buried at Solebury Quaker meeting-house. Like his father he was a strict orthodox Quaker. For seventeen years he was president of the Bucks County Fire Insurance Company. In 1812 he married Ellenor Carey (1794-1877), daughter of Elias and Hannah Carey, and eight children were born of this union: Elias (died small), John, Ann, Thomas, William (a retired merchant of Bucks county), Dr. Elias C., Paxson (of Northampton county), and Samuel (deceased).

Elias C. Kitchin gave evidence of an unusually brilliant mind as a very small child, being able to read before he was three years old. His father was superintendent for the contractor making the Delaware division of the Pennsylvania canal that was finished in 1830, and the Doctor is still considered the most correct of the workmen seen there. In 1833 he was sent to a Quaker school, where he spelled in a class with girls fifteen and sixteen years old. In 1844 he went to work on the Bucks County Inquirer, published at Doylestown, but this work proved too hard for him, and it was four years before he recovered from the effects. During his years of ill health he became interested in medicine, and Dr. Livezy, a graduate of Princeton, who afterward became a professor in the Female Medical College, Philadelphia, took him in charge, and in 1850 he graduated in medicine. In January, 1851, he located in Berks county, and entered upon the practice of his profession at Yellow House. In 1857 he erected there his late home, one of the most beautiful places in that part of the county. Here he was living, caring for a large number of patients, being friend and adviser to almost everybody in his township, active in public affairs—altogether a very busy and useful man—when the Civil war broke out.

Dr. Kitchin was a stanch Protectionist, and when he moved to Berks county he was warned that to be popular there he would be obliged to become a Democrat, but he was true to his principles, and for eighteen months he presided over the Know-Nothing Council, during his administration greatly changing the political complexion of that township by one hundred votes. He was a Republican from the organization of the party, and was one of a committee of twenty for the first Republican convention at Reading, and was the last survivor of the twenty men who signed. Of the seventy-two soldiers furnished by Amity township for the Civil war, sixty-five were Republi

At the outbreak of the Civil war Dr. Kitchin did not enlist, thinking it his duty to care for his patients, but when he learned the Confederates were marching into Pennsylvania he started for Harrisburg with his rifle. There he chanced to meet Surgeon-General Kitchin, who made him assistant surgeon, and he was assigned to the 21st Pennsylvania Cavalry, remaining with that regiment until its term of service had expired. He was then ordered to Reading to recruit, and after much difficulty succeeded in recruiting Company H, 21st P. V. C. They proceeded to Washington, where they were dismanned, he being appointed to the pall bearers, and doing much useful work in caring for the remains of the fallen at the firing line, being the only surgeon that remained with Surgeon Le Moyn, that he was recommended for promotion, and was made surgeon of the 155th P. V. I., with which regiment he served until the close of the war, taking part in the fights at Hatcher’s Run, Five Forks and Appomattox. At Appomattox he dressed the wounds of the last soldier injured in Lee’s army, and gave a Confederate who made himself known as a Mason $50 to enable him to get home to Shelbyville. Dr. Kitchin was mustered into service Feb. 21, 1864, promoted from assistant surgeon to surgeon Jan. 30, 1865, and was mustered out June 2, 1865. He proved himself an able and fearless soldier, cheerfully and effectively doing his duty in whatever capacity he was ordered. When the war was over he returned to his home and resumed his professional work.

In 1856 Dr. Kitchin married Ellen Filbert, daughter of Samuel and Charlotte (Kline) Filbert, the former for some years proprietor of “Yellow House.” Mrs. Kitchin died Oct. 23, 1900, aged sixty-six years, ten days. Two children were born of this union: William F. and Charlotte. The Doctor was prominent socially, belonging to McLean Post, No. 16, G. A. R., Reading; to the F. & A. M. Leesport Commandery, K. T., of which he was the last surviving charter member, and to the Knights of the Red Cross, and the Knights of Malta.

One of the Doctor’s last requests was that the address at his funeral be made by Judge H. Willis Bland, of Reading; that members of the Masonic Lodge act as his pall bearers, and that companions of the G. A. K. conduct the services at the grave. This was done, and a large number of friends came to pay their last respects to one whom they knew so well.

DR. EDWARD BROBST, of West Leesport, died Dec. 31, 1907, aged seventy-four years, three months and six days. He was one of the best known physicians in the county, and one of the last of that noble class of men known as “family doctors”—a firm friend and counselor of every member of the family, sometimes through two or three generations, in health as well as in sickness.
He was born at Rehersburg Sept. 15, 1833, son of Valentine and Mary (Miller) Brobst, and a descendant of Philip Brobst and wife Cerine, who came to this country from Germany or Switzerland in search of home and fortune.

Philip Brobst and his wife Cerine made their home in Albany township, Berks county. His will, made in 1747, and probated March 21, 1760, made provision for his children as follows: Michael, one hundred acres of land and a good grist mill belonging thereto; Martin, a tract of fifty acres and a good new grist mill; Valentine, his just proportion of the estate; Barbara, to have fifty pounds in money; and Dorothy (wife of Johannes Fetherolf), fifty pounds in money.

From the Pennsylvania Archives, Vol. XVII, pp. 75-77-81, it is learned that one Hans Michael Brobst (or Probst) and his family emigrated from Switzerland or Germany on the ship "Samuel," which qualified at Philadelphia Aug. 17, 1733. This family was listed as follows: Michael Bropts, aged fifty-four; Johan Michael, aged twenty-one; Barbara Brospts, aged fifty-three; and Barbara Brospts, aged eight.

In 1799, in Albany township, Michael Brobst was taxed for forty-three acres of land; the list of taxes paid were: Michael Brobst, fourteen pounds (or $27.24); Martin Brobst, fourteen pounds (or $37.24); and Valentine Brobst, sixteen pounds (or $42.56). These amounts were reckoned by allowing $2.66 United States money for a Pennsylvania pound.

The will of Martin Brobst, of Albany township, was probated June 9, 1766, and Anna Elizabeth Brobst was named executrix. This document is in German script, and mentions several children.

Valentine Brobst, mentioned above as son of Philip and Cerine, emigrated with his brothers from the Old World in 1766, and settled on thirty acres of land in the regular territory within a radius of seven miles from West Leesport. In 1803 he enlisted as surgeon in the United States Army, but contracted typhoid fever while at Hagerstown, Md., and was given sick leave. In December, 1804, he re-enlisted as surgeon, being assigned to the 143d Pa. V. L. In 1812 he was a Captain. In 1813, he opened a practice at Dunville, Luzerne county. There he remained, however, only until 1865, when on account of the continued urging of friends, he settled at West Leesport, where he quickly attained a high standing. In his younger days, many of his visits were made on horseback. The roads were never in too bad a condition, nor the weather too one... In 1865, he ventured out to relieve suffering or distress, and the demands made upon his time and strength would have long before worn out a less robust man. He was always keenly alive to the advance of medical science, and spent much time in study, and his reputation spread throughout the neighboring counties, he being often called in consultation by the practice of the doctors in the county.

In spite of the cares of his large practice Dr. Brobst did not neglect his duty as a citizen. He was greatly interested in all public questions, especially those pertaining to his home town and county. He was in favor of the incorporation of West Leesport. For some years he served in the office of auditor. His home was built in 1866, and from that time until his death he delighted in welcoming his friends there. He was a tall, well-built man with a kindly benevolent face, ever winning affection from the many with whom he was brought into such close contact. On Saturday, Dec. 21st, he was stricken with apoplexy, and while his great vitality enabled him to rally from the first shock, others followed, and his spirit winged its flight but a few hours before the passing of the spirit of Death. Dr. Brobst left his only child, a daughter, who was the last descendant of his line. He left by marriage two children of his own immediate family, he was a Lutheran in religious faith.

Dr. Brobst was twice married. In 1854, he married Louisa, daughter of George Zacharias, of Bern township, who bore him two children: Henrietta, wife of George Filbert; and John, who died aged one year... In 1856 he married Sarah Groff, daughter of Samuel Groff, of Groffdale, Lancaster county. To this union came one daughter, Carrie, now the wife of Henry G. Lenhart, member of the firm of S. H. Lenhart & Sons, merchants, of West Leesport. Dr. Brobst was a life long member of the fraternity of Sons of Liberty. In 1865, he was a member of the Trinity Union Church. He was a consistent member of the Berks county Medical Society from the date of its organization.

Dr. Francis H. Brobst, of Reading, is a son of William and a grandson of Daniel Brobst. Daniel Brobst was a grandson of Michael or Martin Brobst, of Albany township.

"Brobst Heirs Association" is the name of an organization founded by the descendants of the original settlers for mutual aid in securing possession of certain coal lands originally belonging to the family. At the meeting of the Trustees, Charles H. Brobst, No. 1238 Franklin street, Reading; Rev. Howard B. Jones presiding, steps were taken to have the case reopened. Among those present were: Dr. James C. Brobst, Lititz; Dr. John A. Brobst, Bernville; Henry Stump, Friedensburg; John K. Stump, Kutztown; Harry A. Brobst, Reading; and Charles H.
Brobst, Reading. Mrs. Elmira A. Phillips, of Pottsville, a member of the Board, was unable to be there.

ANDREW JACKSON FINK, president of the firm of George W. Beard & Co., Inc., contractors and builders, Colonial Trust building, and one of the most prominent young business men of Reading, was born in that city in 1872, son of Andrew Jackson and Catherine (Hedler) Fink.

Andrew Jackson Fink, Sr., was born in Reading July 6, 1840, son of Benjamin Franklin Fink, a well-known carpenter in the early part of the nineteenth century. He attended the public schools and later learned the carpenter’s trade under the careful guidance of his father. He took a keen interest in public affairs, and in 1879 was elected a member of the school board; serving several terms. He was elected by the people to an office he held about three years, and then engaged in a general contracting and building business, erecting many houses in the city, especially in the northwestern part. In political sentiment he was a Democrat, and he was a familiar figure at ward meetings and conventions. He was a good logical speaker, his keen wit scoring many a point against his opponents. With the exception of the offices previously mentioned, he held no political position.

He was a charter member and first president of the Schnykill Fire Company, and member of the Eighth Ward Democratic Club. His church membership was with St. John’s Lutheran Church. For many years he was an elder of the church, who preceded him in death some years. Of the children, the following survived the parents: Clara (m. to Samuel Jacob); Kate (m. to James Gilbert); Ella (m. to James Grist); Florence and Annie (unmarried); and Andrew Jackson. Mr. Fink was survived by his brother, John, of Reading; and his sister, Rebecca, wife of James Kerst.

Andrew J. Fink, son of Andrew Jackson, Sr., was born in 1872, and attended the public schools of the city, and then began the study of architecture with A. F. Smith, with whom he remained two years. He then became connected with Conrode & Saylor, remaining one year, and next spent two years at civil engineering with the Reading Railroad Company, and for three years was with L. H. Focht, builder. In 1892, with George W. Beard, the present firm was formed by Mr. Fink, who became president after the latter’s retirement. The firm has done over $2,000,000 worth of business, being the leading contractor in eastern Pennsylvania. The following buildings are maintained suitable offices in the Colonial Trust Building, Reading, Pa., and a branch office at Easton, Pa., and employ on an average from 300 to 400 men. They have done building at Wilkes-Barre, Easton, Harrisburg and Hazletohn, although their business comes principally from Reading.

The firm is connected with the Elks, the Knights of Pythias, and the United Order of Good Templars. They have done considerable business, and have been associated with the buildings constructed by this company: Girls’ high school, Reading, $125,000; First National Bank, Easton, $125,000; Dairy Building, State College, $90,000; Montello Brick Company, works at Perkiomen, $110,000; and at Wyoming, $80,000; F. & R. Round House, Rutherford, $50,000, and Power House, Ash Conveyor, etc., Reading, $135,000; St. Stephen’s Church, Reading, $30,000; Second Reformed, Reading, $27,000; Grace United, Reading, $22,000; St. Mark’s, Reading, $42,000, and at Lebanon, $32,000; Masonic Temple, Reading, $60,000; Acme Bicycle Works, $52,000; J. G. Mohn & Bros., factory, $30,000; Hendel Hat Company, Reading, $90,000, and factory, $22,000; C. W. Hendel factory, Reading, $15,000; St. Thomas’ church, fishing, $11,000; Trinity United Evangelical church, Reading, $10,000; Addition to Widows’ Home, Reading, $28,000; Coaling Station, Harrisburg, for Reading Railway Company, $35,000; Keystone Cold Storage, Reading, $40,000; Hershey building, later occupied by the American Stores; Town & Country Company, Reading, $40,000; John S. Shade & Sons, Reading, $15,000; Woodward street Market House, $14,000; Gately & Britton, $15,000; Wertz & Co., warehouse, $12,000; Reading Car Wheel Company, foundry and other buildings, $15,500; Bright & Co., warehouse, $18,800; Pennsylvania Knitting Mills, $14,000; Atglen, $25,000; school at Moss and Elm streets, $25,000; Miller & Sons warehouse, $24,500; Reading Railway for coal station, $26,000; Nolde & Horst stocking factory, $24,600; Curtis & Jones shoe factory, $47,000; J. G. Leinbach pants factory, $28,000; freight station, $32,000; Lansdale, $12,000; alterations to County court house, Reading, $51,000; C. W. Hendel residence, $28,000; for J. W. Kutz, $25,000; for Frank W. Hanold, $20,000; for Howard L. Boas, $31,000; Prospect Dye Works, $15,000; J. G. Hansen cigar factory, $12,000; addition for George F. Baer, $10,000; Nurses Home, Reading; Reading Bank, $15,000; Annie Goodenough, $20,000; for Mrs. Bishop, $10,000; Hope Lutheran Church, $25,000; Rajah Temple, $28,000; George W. Biehl’s apartment house, $10,000; City Pumping Station, $80,000; Boys’ high school, Reading, $250,000; and many small buildings which cost less than $10,000 each, and are too numerous to mention.

Mr. Fink was married to Miss Laura G. Goodenough, and to this union were born: Dorothy and Donald. In religious belief the family were Lutherans, and members of St. Luke’s Lutheran Church. Mr. Fink is a Republican in politics, and has served on the school board two terms, and as a member of the board of public works, of which latter he is now president. He is a member of Lodge No. 39, F. & A. M., Reading Chapter; DeMolay Commandery No. 9, K. T.; Allen Council, No. 23; Harrisburg Consistory, 32°, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He also belongs to the Knights of Malta, Reading Lodge of Elks, Wyomissing Club, the I. O. U. A., the Union Fire Company, No. 19, and the Reading Board of Trade.

Mr. Fink has always taken deep interest in all the affairs of the city, and has devoted a great deal of time in the interest of progressive movements.

GEORGE D. HUMBERT, who stands in the front rank of attorneys at the Berks county Bar, has resided in Reading since 1897. He hails from Kutztown, where he was born Aug. 31, 1871, son of John Humbert, and grandson of George Humbert, of Kutztown.

George Humbert, the grandfather, was a farmer for some years, and later engaged in carpentering at Kutztown, and an owner of considerable real estate. He was the owner of considerable real estate, all of which he acquired by his own efforts. He married Susanna Biehl, of Richmond township, and they had three children: Jacob, a school teacher who died in young manhood; Edwin, who died at his home in Kutztown about 1900; and John.

The son, George D., was born on a farm in Lehigh county, in 1833, and was reared on a farm in Maxatawny township. As a young man he learned the carpenter’s trade, but later began teaching in the public schools, and after some years of experience there became an instructor in the Maxatawny Academy. His next work was as a teacher in the Schuylkill County Normal School, which he afterwards developed into the Keystone State Normal School. For many years he was trustee of this school, and was most active in the best interest of the institution, having superintended the erection of a number of its large buildings. He successfully conducted a shoe store in Kutztown for eighteen years, and in 1878 sold out to William Sheradin. He then devoted himself to surveying and to his work as justice of the peace, which office he held for twenty-five years. In politics he was a Democrat. For a number of years he was an official in Trinity Lutheran Church. He was a charter member and master of Huguenot Lodge, F. & A. M., of Kutztown. His death occurred May 16, 1996, in his sixty-fourth year.

John Humbert married Elizabeth Wanner, who was a daughter of Jacob Wanner, of Kutztown. The Wanners were an old and honored family of Maxatawny township. Mr. and Mrs. Humbert were the parents of five children, all of whom are well known and respected in the community. The surviving children are: Lizzie E. (m. U. J. Miller, a traveling salesman at Kutztown); Maggie (m. Allen S. Christ, a stationer of Kutztown); and George D.

George D. Humbert received excellent education advantages, passing from the public schools of Kutztown to the Keystone State Normal School, and graduating from the latter institution in 1899, after which he took a poet-graduate course for one year. He then taught school, teaching for one year in the grammar school of Kutztown, then one year at the high school, and for four years was principal of the schools of Bath, Northampton county, Pa. While at the latter place he introduced an engine and fire system of grading yet used there with great success.

In 1895 Mr. Humbert became a law student in the office of George W. Wagner, and on Nov. 14, 1898, he was admitted to practice at the Berks county Bar, and he has since been admitted to the Superior and Supreme courts. He has built up an extensive and mercifully interesting in some of the hard fought and most prominent criminal and civil cases in the last decade. Among these cases handled by him in a manner that has won him high repute may be mentioned the Commonwealth vs. Antonio Taddei, Sr., in which case he was of counsel for the defense (the defendant was charged with killing three men on Penn street, on the night of July 3, 1901, and was acquitted); the Commonwealth vs. Emes, charged with murder in the first degree, but convicted only for involuntary manslaughter; Weidenmyer vs. Jackson Rope Walk, the plaintiff receiving a verdict of $1,400 for finger torn off; Spatz vs. Spatz, on the occasion of the Spatz vs. Spatz, was charged with killing a state policeman; and many others. Mr. Humbert's well-appointed offices are at No. 40 Sixth street, Reading. In 1902-03 he was solicitor for the County Alms House, and he has since been a popular candidate for district attorney. He is a prominent and influential Democrat of the City Executive Committee (in 1902), and also a member of the County Standing Committee of the Fifth ward, Reading. In the midst of his busy professional life he has still found time to take an interest in the cause of education, and for a time was an instructor in night school. In 1898 he succeeded his father as a trustee of the Keystone State Normal School, being one of two trustees from Reading, and he is a member of the Finance and Accounts committees.

Mr. Humbert is a member of Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M., of Kutztown; Reading Chapter, No. 181, R. A. M.; De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; Philadelphia Consistory; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Washington Camp, No. 163, P. O. S. of A.; Court Victory, No. 123, F. of A.; and Lodge No. 115, B. P. O. E., of Reading, of which he is Past Exalted Ruler.

On Nov. 14, 1906, Mr. Humbert married Gusie L. Pennock, of Reading, and they now reside at No. 604 North Third street, Reading.

JAMES NOLAN, president of the Reading Trust Company, and for many years engaged as a railroad contractor, was born Jan. 9, 1844, in the town of Claysville, Greene county, Pa. James Nolan, his father, was born in Ireland in 1798. He married Annie Bennett, of the same country, by whom he had children as follows: Mary married Dennis Mcavoy; Catharine m. William Keerns; Charles m. Katherinne Eisenbine; William m. Kate McDonough; Thomas m. Nellie Jackson; James; Edward m. Mary Leader. The father, in 1849, determined to emigrate to America, and he and his two daughters proceeded to New York to make arrangements for the rest of the family, the mother and sons joining them the following year. He carried on the business of stone-cutter at New York until 1855, and afterwards went to Reading. Berks county, where he engaged in stone bridge work on the Lebanon Valley railroad. He died in 1857, aged fifty-nine years; his wife survived him forty-two years, dying at Reading at the remarkable age of ninety-four years.

When but five years old James Nolan emigrated with his father and brothers to America, landing at New York. He received his education in the public schools of that city, and when seventeen years of age began an apprenticeship as a stone-cutter in the erection of the great St. Patrick Cathedral, on Fifth avenue and Fifty-first street. After he had been so employed for two years the building operations were suspended on account of the Civil war. He then turned his attention to learning the trade of a boiler-maker, and continued at it for four years, after which he entered the employ of his brothers, Charles and William, railroad contractors. After working for the brothers several years, until 1870, and showing great aptitude for the business, he was admitted into partnership with them. Under the name of Nolan & Brothers they did business for thirty years. They were prominently identified with the construction work of the Pennsylvania railroad and the Philadelphia & Reading railroad on all their branches, and, in carrying out their contracts, established a very high reputation, being recognized in railroad and financial circles as one of the most successful firms of Reading and the country. Though not inclined to engage in municipal contract work, they constructed at Reading the Hampden reservoir and several squares of the Buttonwood street sewer, west from the railroad, which was the beginning of the extensive storm water sewer system in Reading.

Mr. Nolan has been identified with the financial institutions of Reading for more than twenty years. He is at present a director in the Farmers National Bank, Reading Steam Heat and Power Company, Reading Brewing Company, Reading Stove works, and is president of the Reading Lighting and Power Company, the Reading Academy of Music Company and of the board of trustees of St. Joseph's Hospital. From the time of attaining his majority, he has been an active adherent and supporter of the Democratic party. In 1903 he was given the nomination of the Democratic party by the Democratic committee, and bought the ticket with Robert E. Pattyson for governor and G. W. Guthrie for lieutenant-governor.

Mr. Nolan married Kate Stewart, the only child of Dr. Lemuel and Angeline (Smith) Stewart, and they had three children: James Bennett, who graduated from Columbia University, and is a member of the Berks County Bar, married May Smink, a daughter of Frank C. Smink, president of the Reading Iron Works; Angela married Thomas Hall Ingham, of Philadelphia; Mary is not married. The mother of these children died in 1882.

CHARLES B. SPATZ, former member of the Pennsylvania State Legislature and the editor and publisher of the Berks County Democrat and Der Boyertown Bauer, was born in Philadelphia Nov. 25, 1865, son of Charles and Julia (Busch) Spatz. The Spatz family is highly connected in Germany, and closely related to the Krupps of famous gun manufacture.

Charles Spatz, father of Charles B., was born in Elberfeld, Germany. He learned the printer's trade, and he did the following greater part of life. His education was broadened by travel, and he became an excellent linguist, speaking fluently German, English, French, Russian, Polish, Hebrew and Italian. He was married, and had two children when he came to America, bringing his little family with him. He found employment at his trade, and in 1871 he moved to Boyertown, buying the Boyertown Dem., which he conducted until his death Aug. 7, 1884. He was an active Democrat in politics, and in religion was a member of the Reformed Church. In 1878 Mrs. Julia Busch, and their children were Mrs. William Grosscup, of Camden, N. J.; Mrs. Gussie Orr, of Camden, N. J.; Charles B.; and Mrs. Otto Janssen, of Camden.

Charles B. Spatz was educated in the public schools, Kainyken Academy and Mt. Pleasant Seminary. Both his older sons have been familiar with the printer's trade, and he is but nineteen when his father died and he assumed the management of the estate. Like his father he published the paper in both English and German, but later he took a more advanced ground and published two papers, the Democrat, an English weekly, and the Bauer, a German sheet. Both are progressive, newsy papers, and are very popular. The plant is equipped with the latest machines, besides modern job presses. The politics of both papers is Democratic.

Mr. Spatz has always been interested in politics, and has been several a delegate to State and National Conventions. He served two terms in the State Legislature, beginning with 1896, and he took an active part in the legislation at that time, being the author of the first resolution acknowledging the belligerent rights of Cuba passed by any Legislature; and he was also responsible for legislation for many years for many of the rights of the small town of Potstown; and is also a member of Pottstown R. A. Chapter; Nativity Commandery K. T., No. 71; Bloomsburg Consistory; 32d degree Masonry, and Rajah Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

On Jan. 17, 1899, Mr. Spatz married Anna M. daughter of Andrew Muntz, of Reading. They have five children: Flora, Carl, Ruth, Frederick and Anna.

COL. WILLIAM HEINS, who died April 27, 1899, at his home at Eshbach, after an illness of some six months, who was a member of a prominent family of the community, and for years had taken a prominent part in the commercial and municipal life of the town.

The Heins family was one of the best known in Pennsylvania county, Pa., its early home being at Germantown. Various members of the family were active in the Revolution. The grandfather of Col. William was a farmer living near the village of Mt. Airy, now a part of Germantown, and he became one of the wealthy and influential men of that time and place. His children were: Peter; Charles; Abraham; Daniel; Hettie; m. to John Sinor; Sally, m. to a Beecher; Sarah, deceased; and a daughter m. to Jacob Bechel, who was a well known respected farmer of the township.

Daniel Heins, father of Col. William, was born in Germantown, in 1779, and was reared on his father's farm. Upon reaching manhood he engaged in the hotel business, becoming proprietor of the "Washington House" in Germantown, one of the most popular public houses there. In 1824 among the distinguished guests he entertained was General LaFayette. Later in life he had charge of the "Dove Hotel" in Mt. Airy, and also carried on farming. In his religious faith he was loyal to the teaching of his parents, and he died Feb. 23, 1842. In March, 1836, he married Elizabeth Herring, who died May 25, 1833, the mother of the following children: John, born Feb. 10, 1817, was a farmer owning a part of the farm where the Norristown (Pa.) Asylum now stands; Hannah, born Nov. 18, 1819, is deceased; Susan, born Feb. 2, 1821, is deceased; Anna Margaret, born March 5, 1825, is deceased; Elizabeth, born Jan. 29, 1827, became the wife of John Guesen, of Philadelphia, and died Sep. 7, 1827, of Montgomery county, and there died May 25, 1858; and William.

Col. William Heins was born in Germantown July 21, 1823, and was reared upon his father's farm, receiving such education as the common schools afforded. His first venture for himself was as a clerk in a store in Sassaamsville, Pa., and after some years he removed to Bechtelsville. He then moved to New Berlinville, Berks county, where as a clerk and huckster he continued for but one year, then removing to Limestone, Douglass township, where he was employed in a similar line by Peter K. Ludwick. The latter then sold his business and with Col. Heins went to Amity township, and engaged in the manufacture of gunpowder with young Heins as teamster, hauling the powder from that point to Philadelphia, Lancaster, Carlisle and Chambersburg. Col. Heins continued in this business for some years after which he went to Bechtelsville, and there for five years was employed at huckstering by Isaac Bechel. After five years in this business on his own account he bought a farm of sixty-two acres at Eshbach, carrying on general farming. He also fitted up a store in his house, and did a large and paying business among his neighbors. In December, 1894, his son Daniel succeeded to the business, and the Col. turned his attention more to farming. In the spring of 1871 the family moved to Manheim township, where the father engaged as a contractor, our subject working as an apprentice. On June 14, 1872, they moved to Tamaqua, and on the morning of the 16th, the father was taken with smallpox, and in a house not yet fixed up, the son cared for him for thirteen days, the father dying June 29, 1872. Young Obadiah B. with three men buried part in passing the bill to charter the Reading & Lehigh Railroad, running from Reading to Allentown, and now called the East Pennsylvania Railroad. He served in a number of local offices, was committed to a Union license commissioner for four years. During the Civil war he filled the quota for his township. Like all his family he was a Lutheran in religious belief.

On Jan. 16, 1859, Col. William Heins married Anna Deisher, daughter of Peter Deisher, of Eshbach. He died July 18, 1894. The children born to this union were: Daniel, who succeeded his father to the store; Horace, a baggage master on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad; Amelia, who died in infancy; Katie, who died at an early age; William, employed in the United States Mint in Philadelphia; Mary; James and Alvin, both deceased in youth; Emma, wife of Daniel Eshbach, who has charge of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad freight depot at Lancaster, Pa.; and Warren, on the home farm.

MISS MARY HEINS, daughter of Col. William, was educated in the Keystone State Normal School, graduating in the class of 1887. For fourteen consecutive terms she taught school at Barto, and two terms at Heydt's school in the same township. After her father's death she was obliged to give up teaching to devote herself to the management of her property, personally looking after her farm of fifty-six acres. She also owns the store building at Eshbach. Miss Heins has taken an active part in Sunday School work for the last fifteen years, and is a thoroughly educated intelligent woman, highly respected throughout her district.

OBADIAH B. DORWARD, controller of the city of Reading, was born at Hamburg, Nov. 26, 1855, and is a member of a family for several generations conspicuous for good and useful citizenship.

Daniel Dorward, grandfather of Obadiah B., was born in Greenwich township, Jan. 1, 1779. He lived below Krumsville on a small farm, which he cultivated. His earlier life was spent as a shoemaker. He died at his home March 25, 1858, and is buried at Oristim church. His wife, Maria Christina Arnold, born Sept. 26, 1870, died March 13, 1858. Their children were: Ephraim, Joseph, Anna, Eliza, Charles and Daniel. In 1801 when the father, Daniel Dorward, became the owner of the farm on which he died, he purchased it from one Conrad Haffner.

Obadiah B. Dorward was born in Greenwich township in 1817, and was a stone mason and plasterer, also working at the brick layer's trade, and as a butcher and tanner, and it said he was skilled in every trade he worked at. He died of smallpox June 29, 1872, and was buried at Tamaqua. His wife, Martha Bachman, of Hamburg, married Obadiah B. Dorward, in 1861. She died at their home March 25, 1858, and is buried at Oristim church. Their children were: Manasses, who died of lock-jaw in his young manhood; Frank, of Norristown, who served as a soldier in the Rebellion in which he participated in thirty-two engagements, and was wounded nine times; Mahala, who married George Miller; Henry, a soldier in the Rebellion, who was killed in front of Petersburg when but sixteen years of age; Cyrus, of Pottsville; Albert, who died at Roanoke, Va., in 1898, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery, Reading; Obadiah B.; John A., of Reading, manager of Lee's London show, and one of the best animal trainers in the country; and Elizabeth.

Obadiah B. Dorward passed his boyhood days in Hamburg, and there in the public schools obtained his early education. He was but fourteen when he left Hamburg and came to Reading, where he lived with his sister, Mrs. George Miller. In 1870 he returned to Hamburg, and in 1877 removed the family to Reading. In the spring of 1871 the family moved to Manheim township, where the father engaged as a contractor, our subject working as an apprentice. On June 14, 1872, they moved to Tamaqua, and on the morning of the 16th, the father was taken with smallpox, and in a house not yet fixed up, the son cared for him for thirteen days, the father dying June 29, 1872. Young Obadiah B. with three men buried him in the cemetery at Tamaqua. The young man had great trouble in getting back in the "American humid," but finally in 1826 he was duly accomplished, and he remained there until August, when he came to Reading and finished his trade. In 1880 he went to Hamburg, where he had charge of the building of the furnaces at the Hamburg Rolling Mills, and he continued there in charge of the mills four years.

Mr. Dorward is an active Republican, and has taken an interest in politics ever since he attained his majority. His first presidential vote was cast for Rutherford B. Hayes. In 1907 he became a candidate for city controller, and in February, 1908, was elected by a flattering majority over his competitor. He took the oath of office on April 10, and then announced the appointment of his deputy, William W. Britton, of the Thirteenth ward (whose house numbers also count thirteen). Mr. Dorward is a controller who believes in the application of honest business methods to the conduct of his office and he has the confidence of the citizens.

Fraternally Mr. Dorward is a member of the Bricklayers' Union, which he joined in 1883, and of which he was president until 1907, when having been elected to his present office he resigned. He was a member of the Arbitration committee for years, and vice-president of the State Conference from 1904 to 1906, rendering this body much service. In 1886 he became a member of Fidelia Chamber, No. 5, Q. K. of F., and in 1887 he joined the Consultory of the Order, and has ever since taken an active part in it. He is a past grand officer of both bodies, and when he passed through the Grand Chapter he received an honor higher than that previously bestowed on any officer in that body, being presented with a jewel that is the only one of its kind in existence. Mr. Dorward and his family are members of St. Stephen's Reformed Church, Reading.

In 1880 Mr. Dorward married Alice Kline, eldest daughter of Alexander and Mary Ann (Goodman) Kline, of Franklin Township. Their early winters were spent in Berks county, and twenty years later his family settled in Reading. Mrs. Dorward is adopted a younger sister of Mrs. Dorward, Maeme Kline, who is now Mrs. William G. Batzel, of Reading, and the mother of one son, Carrol.

JAMES H. WAGNER, proprietor of the Crown Knitting Mills, at Mohrsville, Berks county, was born March 16, 1861, in Centre township, and is a member of the fourth generation of his family in this country.

John Wagner, his great-grandfather, was a native of Germany, and came to America with his wife when a young man, settling in Berks county, Pa., at what is now Bern Township. He was engaged in butchering, in which business he was very successful. He died at that place, and is buried at St. Michael's church.

John Wagner, the grandfather of James H. Wagner, was born Feb. 8, 1801, in Upper Bern township, Berks county, but moved to Lebanon county where he died, and is buried at Newmarket. He was a butcher and followed that business in Lebanon county. On Feb. 10, 1821, he married Maria Schilling, daughter of John Schilling, and they had the following children: Jesse, deceased at Hamburg, Pa., whose children are Frank, Jacob, Dr. John, Elias, Catherine and Mary (Mrs. Tobias); Valentine, who married John S.; and two daughters and one son who died young.

John S. Wagner was born Sept. 24, 1826, in Heidelberg township, Lebanon Co., Pa., and lived in that county until twelve years old, when he came to Centre township, Berks county. He did farm work, and when twenty-two years old, he walked from his home near his hearth to the mill where he worked, and after he had been employed by the Union Iron Company, he was employed by the firm of Schrack & Wagner, until 1858, when he went to Mohrsville and engaged in the manufacture of a new line of woollen goods.

He married Minnie Schlor, daughter of Martin and Caroline (Schilling) Schlor, of Mohrsville, in 1850, and they had four children: William, born 1851; Mary, born 1854; Martin, born 1856; and Jacob, born 1858.

Mr. Wagner was born in February, 1850, in Mohrsville, Berks county, Pa., and was brought up in that township. He was educated in the public schools of the township, and after finishing his education, he entered the counting house of the firm of Schrack & Wagner in Mohrsville, where he remained for ten years. He then entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and was employed on the line as engineer, and later in the employ of the Reading & Philadelphia Railroad Company, and was employed as engineer on the line.

Mr. Wagner was married to Carrie S. Schilling, daughter of Martin and Caroline (Schilling) Schlor, in 1873, and they have three children: John, born 1874; William, born 1875; and Jacob, born 1877.

REV. GEORGE WASHINGTON GERHARD is by descent, as well as by education and choice, a lifelong member of the Reformed Church. His great-great-grandfather, Frederick Gerhard, who emigrated from Langenselbold, Hesse-Cassel, Germany, to America in 1777, and settled in Berks county, Pa., was a staunch upholder of the Reformed Church. The same is true of the father, grandfather and great-grandfather.

His parents were Elias Gerhard and his wife Sarah (daughter of Daniel and Judith Kaufman). He was born at Berksville, Berks Co., Pa., and was between sixty and sixty-five years old when his father was accidentally killed by a runaway horse. His mother had died six months prior to his father's accidental death. After the father's death the young boy made his home with Aaron R. Bucks, at Stouchsburg, Berks Co., Pa., and was employed in the office of Mr. Bucks, and he spent his youth on the farm. He worked on the farm during the summer months, and was the student of the Whitehall Academy of Stouchsburg during the winter months. At the age of sixteen years he taught one term of public school in Alsace township (Hartman's school), close to Spies's Reformed and Lutheran church. At the close of the school term, April, 1878, he entered Palatinate College, at Reading, Pa., and was a student the remainder of the year. In the fall of 1877 he entered the Sophomore Class at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., and graduated from that John G. Glaes, a venerable citizen of Washington township, Berks county, was born there Dec. 13, 1828, son of Samuel and Sarah (Gehry) Glaes.

Abraham Glaes, his great-grandfather, was a taxable resident in Greenwich township, this county, in 1756. He had three sons: Frederick, who is mentioned below; Jacob, who located in Oley township; and Christian, who located in Amity township.

Frederick Glötz, as he spelled the name, son of Abraham, was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, in 1756. When twenty years old he entered the Patriot army for services in the Revolutionary war, in which he served as a teamster, being so engaged at Valley Forge. In his later years he drew a pension. He was a tanner by trade, and in that capacity in Pike township for many years, also engaging in farming in that township, where he owned a tract of 105 acres, near Lobachsville. The close of his long life was spent in retirement at the home of his son, Sebastian. He died in 1841, at the age of eighty-five, and is buried at Huber's Church, at Niants, Montgomery county. He was a Lutheran in religious faith. By his first wife, Elizabeth Zimmerman, daughter of Sebastian Zimmerman, of Maxatawney township, he had the following children: Daniel; Abraham; Jacob; Sebastian; Henry; Solomon; Sarah, Mrs. Frey; Elizabeth, Mrs. Trout; and Rebecca, Mrs. Gregory. His second marriage was to a Miss Pottee.

Sebastian Gläs, son of Frederick, was born in 1796 in Pike township, Berks county, where he resided until his removal to Washington township in 1828. There he bought the farm and pottery now owned by his son John, the seventy-five acre tract being especially valuable for the supply of pottery clay located near by. He died on this place in 1869, a member of the Reformed Church, in which he had served for a number of years as deacon, treasurer and elder. In politics he was a Democrat. Sebastian Glaes married Sarah Gehry, daughter of John Gehry, of Upper Hanover, Montgomery county, and eight years after the marriage was born a son, Frederick, who was the wife of Daniel Heidt, of Washington township; John G. is mentioned below; George died at the age of twenty-seven years; Frederick, of Pottstown, is a millwright; Charles died in childhood; Samuel died young; Mathilda married George Gilbert, a farmer of Washington township; Charles died young.

John G. Glaes was reared on the farm and received his early education in the local public schools, later taking a course in the Pottstown Academy. He studied surveying in the seminaries at Freeland and Mount Pleasant; attended Tremont Seminary, at Norristown; the Elmwood Institute, and Heidelberg College, at Tiffin, Ohio. After leaving school he taught school for fifteen consecutive years, teaching in Ruscombeanor township as a fellow instructor of James N. Ermentrout (who was a great friend of Mr. Glaes), and then began surveying and conveying, in which line of work he continued for thirty years, becoming expert in the art. He was a Lutheran. The latter also learned the pottery business, which he still carries on at the old homestead.

Mr. Glaes has always been considered one of the most valuable citizens of his community, in every phase of local activity which tends to promote the general welfare and advancement. He has been identified with the official life of his township, as well as its educational and industrial concerns, and served as county auditor from 1864 to 1867; justice of the peace from 1867 to 1877, and town assessor for a number of years. In political sentiment he is a Whig, and is of the old school in his political ideas. His interest is sought and valued, for his intelligence and clear mind are undisputed, and although now well advanced in years he is active and capable, and holds the esteem of his fellow-citizens in an unusual degree. He has been a constant reader and is remarkably well informed, and his library is large and well selected. He takes an active interest in local affairs.

Among his most cherished books, however, are a large German Bible, published in 1798, and a geometry which was printed in 1806, and which formerly belonged to Rev. William A. Good, once county superintendent of schools; later Michael McCulloch used it at Yale. Mr. Glerman was an observer of books, and he could name the most obscure volume in the library of the most famous public library. He has written several poems which have brought him more than local fame—"Der Sifer, der Schmoker, der Tschaer un Gâmler," in Pennsylvania German (Deutsch); "Easter Greetings," and a masterful composition entitled "Sixty Years Ago and Now" (A. D. 1846-1906), which has attracted particular attention.

On June 5, 1877, Mr. Glerman was married to Susan Francis, daughter of John and Susan (Snyder) Francis and granddaughter of Jacob Francis, a farmer of Amity township and a zealous member of the Lutheran Church. John Francis was born in Amity township, Dec. 17, 1801, and died there in 1856. He was a most industrious man, and was quite an active man in his community, serving as town assessor and as a captain in the old State Militia. He was president of the Berks County Fire Insurance Company. He died in 1890, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. To him and his wife were born ten children, six sons and four daughters: Catherine; wife of Rev. L. D. Leverman, a minister of the Reformed Church, of Philadelphia; Lizzie, who lives with her brother-in-law, John G. Glerman; Daniel, deceased, who was proprietor of the Reading Herald; Solomon, deceased, who was a blacksmith at Dayton, Ohio; Amos, a millwright, of Dayton, Ohio; Sarah, deceased; Susan, Mrs. Glerman; John Glerman, Jr., died young; Jacob, deceased, who was at one time engaged as bookkeeper for the Reading Railway Company and later mining in the quartz ledges; and Samuel, a carpenter in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Susan (Francis) Glerman was born Feb. 9, 1841, and she died Jan. 18, 1888, just a few days before the completion of her sixty-seventh year, being one of the victims of the Opera-house catastrophe at Boyertown which devastated so many homes in this district. She is buried at Amityville. Mrs. Glerman was long one of the most esteemed and widely known residents of her district. She conducted a large and handsomely furnished establishment for a number of years, giving employment to many hands, and from 1900 until her death was the postmistress at Passmore, which office was discontinued after her death. She was a devout church member and active church worker, and for many years served as superintendent of the infant class of the Sunday-school at Amityville. Her intelligence and energy made her one of the most beloved women in her neighborhood.

RALPH H. MENGEN, senior member of the firm of Mengel & Glerman, who are extensively engaged in the real estate and insurance business, is a member of the third generation of his family identified with business and public affairs in Reading, and the Mengels have been settled in Berks county for over a century.

Nicholas Mengel, the first ancestor of the family in this country, was a native of Germany and came to America with his parents and was enrolling therein early part of the eighteenth century. Following a custom quite common in those days, and having no money to pay their passage, they were bound out upon their arrival here to defray the cost of their transportation. Nicholas Mengel becoming the servant of John Gernant, an agriculturist of Maiden-creek township, Amity county, Pa., his term expired in three or four years, after which he continued with Mr. Gernant for some time, and being industrious and economical he not only paid his way but was enabled to accumulate a little. He finally purchased 300 acres of land in Maiden-creek township, of Nicholas, who was born on the old homestead in Maiden-creek township. When he started life on his own account he moved to Fritztown, Berks county, where he ran a sawmill for some years, and in 1789 he moved to Cærnarvon township, this county, where he purchased 300 acres of land and passed the remainder of his life continuing to run a sawmill. His family was a numerous one.

Henry Mengel, son of Peter, was born in 1784, and was a lifelong farmer. He married Hannah Schoener, who was born in 1788, and they had the following named children: Matthias, Peter, Christiana, Hannah, Amelia and Emily.

Matthias Mengel was born Jan. 13, 1814, on the old Mengel homestead near Morgantown, in Cærnarvon township. He received his early education in the subscription schools of the period, and being ambitious to add to his knowledge continued his studies in private, becoming unusually well informed. His father wanted him to enter the legal profession, but he himself had no leaning toward such work in his early life, and he was past twenty-four when, on Jan. 30, 1838, he entered the office of Elijah Dechert, Esq., as a student-at-law. He was admitted to the Bar of Berks county, April 9, 1840, and commencing practice in the town of Reading gained a very large patronage in the city and vicinity, in the active prosecution of which he continued for the remarkably long period of over sixty years, and died Feb. 18, 1905. Mr. Mengel was active for many years in the municipal government, serving as alderman for, altogether, thirty and one-half years. He was first elected to that office in the year 1845, was re-elected for the two succeeding terms, and was chosen again in 1868 and for many terms thereafter. The length of his service is sufficient evidence regarding the value of his services. He served two years as water commissioner, being appointed to fill the unexpired term of George K. Levan, Esq. in 1849, and was elected to a full term in 1850. In 1863 to 1868, and served as a notary public from 1880 until he died. In political sentiment Matthias Mengel was a staunch Democrat, but he voted according to his own views of the fitness of the case when it came to electing local officers. Though always a hard worker Mr. Mengel was of a sympathizing and amiable turn of mind; he was the friend and confidant of many of the most prominent citizens of Reading, and he was popular with the public and respected by his friends and associates everywhere.

Matthias Mengel was twice married, first to Mary Ann Phillips, daughter of Jonathan Phillips, of Chester county. To that marriage two children were born, both of whom were brought up in Reading, and Jonathan P., both of whom are deceased. The mother of these died Aug. 19, 1860, and Mr. Mengel subsequently married Amelia M. Soder, who survives him. She also became the mother of two children: Matthias, a practising physician of Chester county, Pa.; and Levi W., Professor of Chemistry, in the Boys' high school, Reading.

Jonathan P. Mengel was born in Reading in 1849, and passed away at the early age of thirty, in 1879. He married Alice V. Hain, and they had three children: Ralph H., J. Hain, and a daughter that died in infancy. Mr. Mengel was a young man of admirable character, and his untimely demise was mourned by many outside of the immediate family circle.

Ralph H. Mengel was born Jan. 8, 1872, in Reading, and received his literary education in the public schools, graduating from high school in 1890. Having passed the Preliminary examination for admission to the Bar he read law under the tuition of Hon. H. Willis Bland, Esq., with whom he continued for one year, until Mr. Bland was appointed judge. He then read in the office of Cyrus G. Derr, and was admitted to the Bar Nov. 6, 1895, since which time he has been engaged in legal work in Reading. On Feb. 27, 1899, he was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and on Dec. 2, 1903, he was admitted to the Superior Court. Mr.
Mengel, however, has not confined himself strictly to legal business, having made several successful ventures into other fields, in which he has found his professional knowledge invaluable.

In 1896, upon the death of their uncle, George P. Zieber, Mr. Mengel and his brother, J. Hain Mengel, purchased the real estate and insurance business formerly conducted by that gentleman at No. 60 South Sixth street. They organized for business under the style of Mengel & Mengel. In 1898 they purchased the Twede building, North Sixth street, which they greatly remodeled, moving their offices to that location, where they have since remained. Their rooms are handsomely and conveniently equipped for the accommodation of their large patronage, the firm being one of the best known business concerns in the city. They have the largest business of the kind in Reading, and give employment to a large corps of men and assistants. Both members of the firm rank among the most progressive citizens of Reading, are members of the city Board of Trade, and are giving substantial aid toward making the city one of the foremost in the Commonwealth. The firm issue monthly a valuable business publication, Mengel's Real Estate Register, which has a wide distribution and is considered authority on real estate of Reading and Berks county. It is a thirty-two-page pamphlet.

In addition to the interests already mentioned, Mr. Mengel serves as a director of the Commercial Trust Company, which he helped to establish, and is also its legal adviser. A man of sound business judgment from the important affairs entrusted to him, Mr. Mengel is one of the best known young business men of Reading, and he has won his way to the front rank of successful citizens by the exercise of a rare degree of tact and ability.

Mr. Mengel has numerous social connections, being a member of the Reading Alumni Association; the American Club; the Temple Club; Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F.; Friendship Commandery, No. 247, A. and I. O. Knights of Malta; Washington Camp No. 417, P. O. S. of A.; Lodge No. 62 F. & A. M.; Reading Royal Arch Chapter, No. 152; De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; Philadelphia Consistory, No. P. R. S. 33; Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14°; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

On Oct. 6, 1904, Mr. Mengel married Miss Deborah D. DeTurck, a daughter of Lewis P. and Sarah P. (DeTurck) DeTurck, and they reside at No. 532 Walnut street, Reading.

J. ISAAC BICKEL. In the death of J. Isaac Bickel, Bern township lost one of her best and most respected citizens. He was born Nov. 2, 1838, in North Heidelberg township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Jonathan and Magdalena (Gasson) Bickel of that place.
The Bickel family has long been one of importance in upper Berks county. Anthony Bickel, son of the ancestor, was a farmer in North Heidelberg township, where he owned a farm of 100 acres, which is now the property of Peter Ruth. A barn that he built is yet standing. He was a member of the Reading Alumni (now North Heidelberg) Union Church, where his remains were laid to rest. After his death his oldest son, Joseph, obtained the farm and after Joseph's death, his oldest son, Elias, became its owner. Elias Bickel sold it to Peter Ruth and moved to Reading, where he was in a hotel business on the site where the post-office now stands. Anthony Bickel married a Miss Romick, and they had six children, namely: Joseph (had children—Elias, John, Jesse, Moses, Joseph, Jared, Leah, Matilda, Mauleine and Catherine); Anthony, who lived in North Heidelberg township, a blacksmith (had children—William, Benjamin—residing at Mt. Pleasant, Pleasant Hill and Eliza); Jonathan; Daniel; Mrs. Mordecai Lengel, who lived beyond Bernville; and Mrs. Henry Troutman, of Mount Eden.
Jonathan Bickel, born April 18, 1800, died July 21, 1874, aged seventy-four years, three months, and was buried in the North Heidelberg Church graveyard. He and his wife owned eighty acres of land. His wife was Magdalena Wenrich, daughter of Johannes Wenrich. They had the following children: (1) Daniel. (2) Jonathan, a farmer, who lived in Iowa, later in Ohio, was buried by the side of his wife in Iowa. His children were: Elias, Isaac and a daughter. (3) Frank resides at Mohnton. (4) James resides in Reading. (5) Polly married John Faust (deceased) and moved to Nebraska, but later lived at Milton, Pa., where she died. (6) J. Isaac.

Daniel Bickel, son of Jonathan, was born in North Heidelberg township, Feb. 20, 1833, and owned the homestead farm in North Heidelberg township, which he conducted until 1882. He resides with his son, Gasson Bickel, in Lower Heidelberg, near Wernersville. His physical health is remarkably good notwithstanding his years and he hauls the milk from the farm to the neighboring creamery. Formerly he served as school director in Lower Heidelberg township. He and family are members of the North Heidelberg Church, where the family have had a burying plot. He has identified himself with the religious bodies where he has lived, and during a residence of eleven years in Cumru township was an elder in the Gogblersville Church. He is also a contributing member of Hain's Reformed Church. His wife, Rebecca Gruber, died in Cumru township, April 7, 1873, aged forty-six years. They had sixteen children all of whom are dead except Cornelius, residing in Reading, and Gasson, who is a farmer in Lower Heidelberg and has a son, James.

Daniel Bickel, son of Anthony, moved to Fairfield county, Ohio, and settled two miles from Basil, where he followed farming and blacksmithing. Of his two sons, Ephraim and William, the latter still survives.

J. ISAAC BICKEL attended the public schools during his boyhood and was the principal city farm boy on the home place. He engaged later in that occupation in Cumru, Muhlenberg and Bern townships, locating in the latter in 1892, when he bought the old Jack Adams farm of 163 acres. This is a very valuable land, being also favorably located midway between the Van Reed paper-mill and the Bern church. He built the worthy town hall and had a large business, and at the time of his death was valued in that connection. He was a man of excellent business ability, was a director of the school board of Bern, and took a deep interest in educational affairs, and in the welfare of his community. At one time he was the Democratic nominee for Poor director. He had been identified with the Berks County Agricultural Society from its inception, and was keenly interested in its work. During the Berks County Fair in the year prior to his death, he was one of the superintendents of stock. His judgment on all agricultural matters was considered reliable. He was widely known, as well in the Reading city, where he served a large milk route for twenty-eight years.

On Nov. 12, 1839, Mr. Bickel married Angelina F. Werner, daughter of Thomas and Kate (Fidler) Werner, and a history of the representative Werner family will be found elsewhere. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bickel were: Henrietta m. William Henning; Thomas Wellington resided at Shillington; Ellen lives in Toledo, Ohio; Mary m. Evan P. Christ; Moses A., who farms for his mother and looks after his late father's estate, m. Hannah Boyer, and they have had two sons, Paul I. and Raymond (died aged ten months); Jonathan died aged two years; Eva m. Thomas R. Griesemer, an exemplary young man, met death with his father; and Millie K., Ulysses Werner and Agnes E. reside at home.

On Oct. 8, 1904, Mr. J. Isaac Bickel and his son Charles were driving home from Reading. They occupied a spring wagon, to which two horses were attached. At Leis's Crossing, their wagon was attacked by a man on the railroad train. The man, who was not a conductor, nor express train struck the team, killing one of the horses, and throwing the occupants out. Charles Bickel was killed instantly, but the father was brought to Reading Hospital, where he was able to give his name before lapsing into the unconsciousness from which he never awoke. Both father and son were laid to rest in their own churchyard, with over eighty vehicles in the burial procession.
WILLIAM FRANKLIN WEBER, alderman of the Eleventh ward, Reading, Pa., has for many years been a popular and useful citizen of that city, and has frequently received the endorsement of her people at the polls.

Anthony Weber, grandfather of William F., was born in 1752. He was the son of a small farm in Germany, and he also followed the occupations of butcher and brewer. He married Marie Schneckenberger, and they had children as follows: Fidel; Martin, a brewer; Rosalia, who was married and lived in Germany; Maximilian, a shoemaker, who came to America in 1849; Marcus, a wheelwright, who came to America in 1855; and Ambrose, a miller and machinist of Reading, who came to this country in 1850.

Fidel Weber, father of William F., was born in Wurttemberg, Germany, Aug. 14, 1826, and came to this country in 1850. Before leaving the old country he had learned lock-smithing, and after settling in Reading, was employed at his trade, at the Reading Railroad shops. By faithful and diligent service he was transferred to the machine department of that company, and was employed there continuously for fifty-one years. In 1903 he was placed on the pension roll. Mr. Weber always took a deep interest in public affairs and was an ardent and earnest advocate of good government and permanent improvements. He was a Democrat in politics and represented the Second ward in the common council in 1871, and the Tenth ward in the school board during the year 1875. While attending to public duties, Mr. Weber never missed a meeting, and could be relied upon as being an honest and faithful public servant.

From the time he reached the voting age he never missed an election and took untold interest in his party. Mr. Weber was also interested in building associations, and during his time was president of more than twenty, of which the most important were the Ringgold, Germania, Columbia, Homestead and Fidelity Associations.

He resided in the Second ward forty years, and for the last ten years of his life lived at No. 220 Tenth street.

On Sept. 12, 1852, Fidel Weber married Amelia Wentzel, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Body) Wentzel, and they became the parents of the following children: Alfred died at the age of four; James and Ida died in infancy; Edwin Harrison died in October, 1902, aged thirty-six years, leaving a widow, Sarah (Lincoln) and three children, Harry, Robert and Irene; John M. is a machinist with the Philadelphia & Reading Company; William F.; Emma m. Newton Knerr, of Philadelphia; Henry is foreman in the Scott Foundry; Anna Victoria m. Isaac Quinter, a shoe dealer of Reading; Amelia m. Martin Bright, of this city; and Isabella m. Martin. Mr. Weber was the father of seventeen grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren, and a sister, Theresa, of Reading; the latter, however, has since died. He was a member of Germania Lodge, I. O. O. F., Reading Relief Association, and in religion of the Reformed Church. Mr. Weber passed away, Sept. 3, 1907, from the effects of cataract.

William F. Weber was born in Reading, Feb. 9, 1855. He passed his boyhood in the pursuit of an education in the excellent schools of his home town, and at the age of thirteen began his active business life as a carrier of the Post and Eagle, daily papers of the city. After a short period in this branch of the service, he became apprenticed to the printing trade in the office of the Daily Eagle. He finished his trade in this office, and afterward served four years there as a journeyman. Mr. Weber then accepted a position in the Freight Department of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. However he did not stay but was returned to the printing business, taking "cases" in the Telegram.

Taking quite an interest in politics Mr. Weber was elected to the common council from the Tenth ward, at which time he was the youngest member of that body. In 1889 he was elected a member of the same body from the Eleventh ward, being also at that time president of the famous Eleventh Ward Democratic Club, an organization which was a powerful political factor during the three years he served as its head. Shortly after the expiration of his term, April 16, 1891, he was appointed alderman of the Eleventh ward, by Governor Pattison, to fill the unexpired term of George Kramer, who had died the previous March. The following year, 1892, Mr. Weber was the aldermanic candidate of his party, and after a hotly contested election was elected by a majority of 437, the term being for five years. Again in 1897 and in 1902 he received the indorsement of his constituents, by majorities of 517 and 443, respectively. During the years of his incumbency Mr. Weber has given the most painstaking and careful attention to the needs of his ward, and in matters which affected the weal of the whole city has ever been found on the side of progress.

In March, 1889, Mr. Weber married Miss Kate Eggelhoff, daughter of William Eggelhoff, a respected resident of Reading. To them have come three sons: W. Wayne; Walter W., a machinist; and Edwin C., a member of the class of 1908, Reading high school, who is now taking his college course in Civil Engineering.

Alderman Weber was for thirty-three years a member of the Reading Hose Company, during which time he served for eleven years as president, and is now on the Honorary Roll. He is affiliated with the Order of Red Men and the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and is a member of the First Reformed Church. His activity in political circles has made him a valued member of the Eastern Democratic Club, and in all the varied interests of his home city, he is ever ready to do a full share of the necessary work. As a citizen he is universally esteemed for his loyalty to home institutions, and as a friend and neighbor all unite to do him honor.

W. WAYNE WEBER, son of William F., is a graduate of the Reading high school, Class of 1897. He served as time-keeper for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company two years, and then became associated with the Reading Cement Company as its clerk and secretary. In 1906 he was engaged with the Interstate Railway Company, with offices in Philadelphia, and since 1907 he has been salesman for eastern Pennsylvania for the Edison Cement. He was a member of the Democratic Northeastern League, and was chairman one term. In 1906-07 he was a member of the State Legislature from the First District of Berks county. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Red Men, and is an active member of the First Reformed Church.

FRED B. HOSSLER, justice of the peace, farmer and surveyor of Tilden township, is one of the oldest justices in Berks county, having served continuously since the year 1867. Mr. Hossler was born April 3, 1839, on the farm in Tilden township where he now resides, and he is a great-grandson of Frederick Hossler, who first settled in the Heidelberg district. Thence he removed to what was then Bern township, settling where the Squire now lives. He took up about 325 acres of land, and lived and died here, and he is buried at St. Michael's Church. He divided the farm into three tracts, giving one to each of his three sons.

John Hossler, son of Frederick, also died in Bern township, and is buried at St. Michael's Church. His wife was Rachel Rickert, and their children were as follows: John (died young); Henry, Benjamin (died in Schuylkill county); Elizabeth (m. John Conkling); Sarah (m. Samuel Meck); Catharine (m. Peter Fink); and Rebecca (married Henry Fink).

Henry Hossler, son of John, was born July 17, 1804, on the old homestead, and died there Aug. 27, 1892. He, too, is buried at St. Michael's Church. His property originally comprised 187 acres, part of which he sold, the homestead at present consists of 34 acres. Henry Hossler engaged in general farming throughout the last six years, passing his last years in retirement. He was a captain in the State militia, and was a Democrat in politics. Henry Hossler married Mary Ann Scheid, and they had a family of six children: Four died young; John died at Anburn, Schuylkill county; Fred B. is mentioned below.
Fred B. Hossler attended the public schools in the locality of his home and later went to Morgantown Academy, and he taught school for one term in Upper Bern township, now Tilden township. He then went to Port Clinton, and he resided for six months, in 1866 returning to the home farm, where he has ever since been located. As previously stated, the farm contains 130 acres, all of which is valuable land and in a profitable state of cultivation. Squire Hossler is well known, especially in his public capacity, having been first elected justice of the peace in 1869, so that his period of service in that office alone covers over forty years. He had previously served eleven years as township auditor. In addition to farming Mr. Hossler has done considerable surveying, and he is a substantial and much respected citizen of his locality. He is also a homeopathic veterinary, of considerable experience, having hunted over forty years on farms. He is a member of St. Michael's Lutheran Church and of Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M., of Hamburg, Pennsylvania. In politics he is a Democrat.

Mr. Hossler married Matilda Savage, daughter of Joseph Savage, of Tilden township, and they have two children: Alvin E., who is in the express business at Hamburg, Pa., and married Bessie Hadesty, and they have one son, Herbert; Lillie Jane married Milton S. Balthaser, of Kutztown, who died Jan. 11, 1909, and was buried at St. Michael's, leaving to survive his wife, Lillie, and three minor children—Curtis F., Miriam and Wayne.

DANIEL R. BECHTEL, merchant at Huff's Church, in Hereford township, was born at Bechtel's Mill, in District township, the original Bechtel homestead, March 9, 1846.

Peter Bechtel, great-grandfather of Daniel R., was an early settler of East District township, in Berks county. Prior to 1774 he had settled there, and in 1790 he was the owner of much land. He died about 1794, and is buried in the cemetery on the farm now owned by David B. Rauch. This was a private burial ground where many Mennonites were buried. It is now in a dilapidated condition, but some of the tombstones are still standing. The Kaufman, Zimmerman, Noll, and Johan Friedrick Huff and wife graves are in good condition. Most of the burials here took place prior to 1812 when Huff's church and its cemetery were established. Peter Bechtel had a number of children.

Jacob Bechtel, son of Peter, was born during the war of the Revolution. He was a man of more than ordinary intellect, industry, and the owner of considerable land. He and his wife attended the Mennonite church at what is now Bally. They are buried in the cemetery on the Rauch farm. They had four children: Polly m. Abraham Mensch; Sussanna m. Henry Hoyn; Elizabeth m. Jonas Heistand; and John.

John Bechtel, Jr., of the second generation, was born at the Bechtel Mill homestead in District township, April 29, 1805, and he died May 10, 1876. He became a farmer and miller. The property contains about 200 acres of land. The present frame mill was built in 1799, and is still in good condition, and used for milling purposes. The sawmill attached to the property is now operated by Frank Benfield. The present barn was built by John Bechtel in 1860, and the stone house by Jacob Bechtel. John Bechtel was a man very well known in his section, and he was always active for the best interests of the community. He and his family were Lutheran members of Huff's Church. John Bechtel married Maria Rohrbach, born June 17, 1815, daughter of George Rohrbach, and she died April 18, 1865. Their children were: Henry, John, Annie, Betzy, Sarah, Susanna, Maria, Catharine, George and Daniel R.

Daniel R. Bechtel was educated in the township schools and his home training was along agricultural lines. In 1841 he began clerking in the general store of George Gernand, at Breinigville, Pa., where he remained one year. In 1872 he went to Zionville, in Lehigh county, where he bought Frank N. Gery, and he conducted the store four years. In 1876 he located at Huff's Church, in Berks county, where he has built up a fine business, carrying on a general store to the present time, a period of thirty-two years. His stock is good and his customers are always well pleased. He resides in a large brick residence which he built in 1890. The well kept lawn adds to the attractive appearance of this, one of the finest places in the township.

In politics Mr. Bechtel is a Republican, and from 1876 to 1890 he was postmaster at Huff's Church. He and his family are Lutheran members of Huff's Church. Mr. Bechtel married Sally Ann Biddenden, daughter of Samuel and Catharine (Berkley) Biddenden, and granddaughter of Jacob and Susanna (Young) Biddenden.

FREDERICK A. MARX, who has his law office at No. 528 Washington street, Reading, and his home at No. 932 North Fifth street, same city, was born at Kutztown, Berks county, March 19, 1876, and has been practicing law since 1900. On March 15, 1907, he left Kutztown and took up his residence in Reading.

Mr. Marx is a member of an old and respected family of the county. His grandfather, Samuel Marx, was a resident of Kutztown, and there his father, James H. Marx, still lives. James H. Marx was educated for the law, and has for many years been a member of the Berks county Bar. He has taken an active interest in public affairs, and has been honored with many of the borough offices, having served on the school board and as town clerk. He married Sarah Springer, daughter of Augustus Springer, a jeweler of Kutztown. Of the five children born to them, two died in infancy; Sallie died at the age of twenty-one, while attending school at Philadelphia. Living members of the family are Frederick A. and Anna, the latter the wife of Charles S. Ort, a merchant at Quakertown, Pennsylvania.

Frederick A. Marx received his early education in his native place, and after his graduation in 1892 from the Normal School there was sent to Lafayette College, where he graduated in 1896. Having settled on the law as a profession, he now took up its study in the office of his father, and was admitted to practice in 1900. Later he was admitted to the higher courts. Mr. Marx took a final course at Dickinson Law School.

Mr. Marx married Oct. 21, 1903, Miss Rebecca H. Fenstermacher, daughter of John P. S. Fenstermacher (a cousin of General Gobin), postmaster of Kutztown and a conductor in the Philadelphia & Reading passenger service, with which road he has been connected since boyhood.

Mr. Marx is a Democrat in politics. He is active in the religious life of the community, being a member of Trinity Lutheran Church of Kutztown. He became a member of Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M., on Dec. 26, 1901, and served as its worshipful master for the year 1905. On July 11, 1908, he resigned membership in Huguenot Lodge, and transferred with Isabel B. Marx, Lodge No. 660, F. & A. M., constituted on that day, in the city of Reading, being one of the twenty-five charter members and its first worshipful master. He holds membership in Adonal Castle, No. 70, K. G. E.; and Charles A. Geresch Council, No. 1004, Jr. O. U. A. M. He retains his interest in educational affairs, having been a member of the school board of Kutztown, until his removal to Reading.

JOHN H. MILLER, who has been prominently identified with all the leading interests of the borough of Topton for many years, was born April 1, 1845, in Maxatawny township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Charles and Marie (Heffer) Miller.

John Miller, his paternal grandfather, lived in Lowhill township, Lehigh Co., Pa., but later moved to a farm in Maxatawny township, Berks county, the same being now owned by Rev. A. J. Fogel. He had six children as follows: Caroline (first) Caroline Bortz, has three children—Alfred, Mary and Catherine—and (second) Eliza A. Good and had one child—Lizzie; Jonas m. a Miss Weiser, and had two children—Jemima and Sallie; Joseph m. May Zeigler, and had six children—Oscar, Alvin, George, Sallie, Montana and Fiana; Joshua m. Fredericka Zangle, and had children—George, James, Emma, Francisco and Charles; Esther m. Napoleon Dresher, and had children—Joseph, John, Fiana, Rosalinda, Angeline and Jane.

Charles Miller, the eldest of the above family, was born in Lower township, Lehigh county, on the banks of the Jordan river, Feb. 14, 1806. He accompanied his father to Maxatawny township and worked on the home farm until his marriage, when he bought the farm now owned by his son, John H. Miller, in Maxatawny township, on which he lived until May 12, 1905, when his long and blameless life closed at the age of ninety-nine years, two months and twenty-eight days. He was a member, and in the latter part of his life an elder, of the Reformed congregation of the Siegfried Church in Maxatawny township. In political feeling he was a Democrat, and he always took an active part in politics, but never solicited an office. On Oct. 6, 1844, he married Ann Free LAND, daughter of Dr. Daniel Diener, of Kutztown, P. A., aged thirty-six years and five months, daughter of Jacob and Esther Heffner. Mrs. Miller was born and reared on a farm now owned by her only son, John H. Miller, in Maxatawny township. She was a devoted Christian all her life, and was baptized April 5, 1839. Jacob and Esther Heffner had a family of six children, the other beside Mrs. Miller being: David, Daniel, Solomon, Lydia and Esther. Charles Miller and wife had two children: John H. and Mrs. Eldridge Zimmerman, both residents of Topton, and three grandchildren, namely: Charles D. Zimmerman and Milton and Harvey Miller.

John H. Miller was afforded far better educational opportunities than were given many youths of his day. After close attendance in the public schools of the township, he spent two terms at McAllisterville Academy, in Juniata county, one term at Freeland Seminary, now Ursinus College, in Montgomery county, and two terms at Fairview Seminary, now the Keystone State Normal School. Having a preference for business rather than farming, he accepted a position with J. A. & Isaac Fegley who carried on a hotel and general store business at Monterey, Berks Co., Pa., and after serving there for two years, he accepted a position with J. W. & H. Fegley where he was engaged in the coal, grain and lumber business at Tooton Station, on the East Pennsylvania Railroad. At the same time he was appointed station agent at the place for the railroad company, which position he filled for sixteen years, giving it up on account of ill health. He was then associated with R. Berks & Heffner for two years. Mr. Miller then associated himself with P. L. Diener and B. C. Bear, trading under the firm name of Beir & Diener & Miller, and bought out the firms of Butz & Heffner, and Diener & Ubil, also engaged in the same business together with a general store business. A combination was effected in 1852 in business for some five years. In the meantime Mr. Miller was attending also to his duties as station agent for the railroad company, and served as secretary of the Tooton Iron Company, and also of the Tooton Loan and Building Association, which position he held from the day of its organization until it had run out, which was in eight and one-half years, when all shareholders had drawn out two hundred dollars, par value less fixed premium. Later on, in connection with his railroad duties, Mr. Miller associated himself with P. L. Diener, D. D. Hirtshites, Jacob Carl and Jacob Lesher, under the firm name of Diener, Carl & Co., and engaged in the same line of business on the lands of Charles Miller, Edwin A. Trelux and Nathan Lunn. Two years later Mr. Miller sold out his interest in the ore business and devoted himself for a time exclusively to his railroad business.

A short time after resigning his position as station agent, he accepted that of salesman for the sale of hard and soft wheat, flour, and provisions, for the firm of Philadelphia, which position he held for eight years. Then he and his son, Harvey A. Miller, accepted work as sales agents for the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., a position in which he continued until six years later, when the company decided to sell all their products direct and to dispense with sales agents. This closed Mr. Miller's active participation in business although not his active interest. In 1887 he was elected a director in the Farmers' National Bank of Reading, a position he still holds. In 1878 he was one of the incorporators of the borough of Tooton, and is now holding the position of councilman, to which he was elected in 1905. For fully fifteen years he served as a school director, and his advice has been asked and his judgment consulted in almost all that has particularly concerned the development of the town's various public interests. For two terms he served as grand-jury of the peace. In 1904 he helped to organize the Crown Knitting Company of Tooton, now employing about one hundred hands, and turning out about 12,000 half hose a day, shipping their product all over the United States.

On Oct. 20, 1865, Mr. Miller was married, by Rev. A. J. Herman, to Eliza A. Knuth, of Maxatawny township, daughter of Solomon and Maria (Knab) Knuth, of Junia township. In the two sons were born, namely: Milton Robert, born Aug. 20, 1866; and Harvey Albert, born June 13, 1868. The older son married Ida L. Sell, daughter of Daniel K. and Mary (Knab) Sell, and they have one daughter, Pauline, born March 24, 1891. The younger son married Jennie C. Trelux, daughter of Charles D. and Catherine (Hair) Trelux, and they have two children, Marie K. and Mae E.

Mr. Miller was baptized April 20, 1845, by Rev. Charles Herman, and his sponsors were Amos Closser and his wife Esther. He was confirmed in the fall of 1861, by Rev. Charles Herman, and became a member of the Reformed Church of Maxatawny, called Siegfried's Church. He is one of the seven men who, forty years ago, organized the Tooton Union Sunday school (and was for many years its superintendent), which was the nucleus of St. Paul's Church, now a flourishing body of Tooton.

FREDERICK LEAF SMITH, A. B., A. M. (deceased), represented the third generation of his family devoted to the legal profession and was himself for many years a prominent member of the Berks county Bar. He was a son of Rev. E. S. Smith, of the Free Reformed Church of Maxatawny, called Siegfried's Church. He is one of the seven men who, forty years ago, organized the Tooton Union Sunday school (and was for many years its superintendent), which was the nucleus of St. Paul's Church, now a flourishing body of Tooton.

Judge Frederick Smith was one of the most distinguished citizens of his time in Berks county. He was born in 1803, and received unusual educational advantages for the time, and after careful preparation for the profession of law was admitted to practice Aug. 7, 1795. He had been thorough in his studies and was equally conscientious in the preparation of his cases, and he soon won a prominent position among the lawyers of his day. Like many of his contemporaries, he was interested in politics. From 1802 to 1808 he was a member of the Legislature; in 1818 he was appointed deputy attorney general for Berks county, a position he held for three years; from 1823 to 1828 he was attorney general of the State under Governor Shulze, by whom he was appointed associate justice of the Supreme Court of the State in 1828, and this honorable position he filled with great credit until his death. Judge Smith was clear and logical in his reasoning, and just and impartial in his decisions. He died at his home in Reading, after but a brief illness, Oct. 5, 1830, aged fifty-seven years, seven months, four days. His remains were interred in the Roman Catholic cemetery, but later removed to the Charles Evans cemetery. The Ber Associations in Reading and in Philadelphia passed resolutions in testimony of his high character and distinguished ability. He married Catharine Leaf.

Henry W. Smith, son of Judge Frederick Smith, was born Jan. 4, 1804. He received the benefit of a good literary education, studied law under the wise and able instruction of his father, and was admitted to the Bar Jan. 5, 1825. He became an active politician, and was a delegate to the State Democratic conventions of 1832, 1835, 1841, 1844 and 1846, and to the National Democratic convention in 1833. In 1836 he was a candidate for Congress; in 1843 and 1844 he served as a member of the Legislature, and again in 1846 became a candidate for Congressional honors. Twice he was the candidate of his party for the office of president judge. In his profession, like his father, he attained high rank, and he had achieved from it an extensive practice. The successes that came to him were the result of careful, painstaking work, and he was a student as long as he lived of what he considered the "noblest profession on earth." In 1872 he gave able service to the State as a member of the Constitutional convention. He died Aug. 27, 1878, and he was survived by his wife, Mary, and one son, F. Leaf. Mrs. Smith was born Dec. 11, 1811, and died March 5, 1881.

F. Leaf Smith was born Aug. 31, 1831, and received his early education in the public schools of Reading. During the last forty he entered Georgetown (D. C.) College, from which he graduated in 1854 with the degree of A. M. He was a most industrious student and rapidly gained a knowledge of the language and literature of the ancient world, and he passed through the classical curriculum with ease. His literary gifts were notable, particularly his ability as a poet, and on the day of his graduation he had the honor of delivering a discourse on "The Influence of Philosophy" before President Pierce, who was present at the commencement exercises. In 1856 he received the degree of A. M. from his alma mater. After leaving college Mr. Smith took up the study of law for which he had inherited a talent, which was greatly strengthened and developed by his constant association with his father, while the latter continued in active practice. Owing to the fact that his father had acquired a competent estate and he was the only child, there was an absence of that incentive to full development of his powers so essential to the average man. Withstanding this absence of the spur of necessity Mr. Smith practised his profession with commendable diligence and remarkable success, continuing for a number of years. He was a wise counselor, a diligent student of his cases, and an able trial lawyer, and as long as he maintained his interest in the practice of the law stood in the front rank of the profession, becoming one of the most prominent members of the legal fraternity in his section. That he was not merely a lawyer is shown in the fact that he added to his professional attainments a varied and sound knowledge of business, and possessed the attributes of character and practical judgment which rendered his opinions as a man of affairs valuable in the management of his own business as well as that of his clients.

In personal integrity, in inflexible devotion to the interest of his clients, in sobriety of feeling and bearing to his profession, in his temper for the law where it was declared by the court, and in his habitual deference to the judiciary, he was a model for imitation. The benevolent feelings of his heart were displayed by regular and unostentatious giving to charitable objects, and his sympathy with the beauties of nature by his interest in the botanical culture of plants and flowers. His home life was one of remarkable purity, sincerity and unflinching honesty.

On July 2, 1879, Mr. Smith married Mary Coulter, and they had one child, Marie Carroll, who resides in the old family home on South Fifth street, Reading, where Mr. Smith passed away April 10, 1898.

ADAM F. E. GRILL, one of the foremost citizens of Cumru township, Berks county, resides in the borough of Shillington, Pa., in a fine residence at the northwest corner of Lancaster and Wyomissing avenues. He was born on his father's farm, now the property of Joshua Dunn, Jan. 28, 1857, son of Levi and Mary (Eshelman) Grill.

Philip Grill, great-grandfather of Adam F. E., was an extensive land owner in Spring township, having fully 255 acres. He died on the farm on which he had resided all of his life, and his remains were interred at Sinking Spring burying-ground. He was the son of John, born in 1731, who had the name of Lesher. They had these children: Christina married Philip Kappes; Samuel obtained the original homestead, erected the present buildings upon it, and then moved to Ohio; John was given another of the old homesteads, later removed to Centre county, Pa., and then followed them to Cumru township. He married Eliza. m. Jacob Brossman, and removed to Upperhills, Ill.; Adam Philip m. Sarah Mohn, sister of Catherine Mohn; and Joseph.

Adam Grill, grandfather of Adam F. E., was born in Spring township, and was a lifelong farmer, owning the farm now in the possession of our subject, where he lived the major portion of his life. He married Catherine Mohn, whose father, Mr. Adam Grill, was born in Spring township, and was a thrifty farmer, living in the township of Adamstown, Lancaster county; Catherine m. Christian Kress; Elizabeth m. Henry Von Neida; Mary m. Richard Hornberger; Levi; Sallie m. Nicholas Mosser; Adam lived on the old homestead; Lydia m. James Leiningen; Daniel was a tax collector of Reading, Pa.; and Henry resided at Newhook, Cumru township.

Levi Grill, father of Adam F. E., was born in Cumru township, Nov. 5, 1830, and his entire life was spent in agricultural pursuits. For many years he lived on the Lancaster Pike, midway between the Five Mile House and Gougersville, his fine farm consisting of 100 acres. He built the present home upon it in 1874, the barn being built by his father, Adam Grill, in 1888. This property has a good meadow of twelve acres, eight acres of woodland, and an excellent spring of clear water. In 1853 Mr. Grill was married to Mary Eshelman, daughter of Daniel and Lydia (Heberling) Eshelman, and to this union there were born two sons: John E., a well known merchant of Reading, Pa.; and Adam F. E.

Adam F. E. Grill received his education in the public schools of his native township, and at the Keystone State Normal school, Kutztown, Pa. At the early age of fifteen years he began teaching school in the village of Mohnsville, when there was but one school at that place. He finished his school work here, after which he taught in different other schools in Cumru and Spring townships and then went back to Mohnsville and took charge of the grammar school there to teach his twenty-third and last term, when the hamlet had grown to be a large town. His long career as an educator was begun in 1872, when D. B. Brunner was the superintendent of schools of the township, and Adam F. E. Grill worked upon his father's farm, where he had spent his boyhood days. In politics Mr. Grill is a Democrat, and in 1893-3 he was elected township committeeman, and in the latter years was elected county chairman of the Democratic party, a position he filled with efficiency for a full term. He was the last judge of election of Cumru township when it had over 800 voters, it being then divided into five voting precincts.

On Feb. 18, 1895, Assistant U. S. Treasurer W. B. Baer of Philadelphia appointed Mr. Grill to a responsible position in the Philadelphia U. S. Sub-Treasury, and in this position he has served most acceptably ever since. His work consists of counting and assorting money, and in the last fourteen years he has handled hundreds of millions of dollars. He has charge of the Assorting Tel- ler's desk. For the past ten years he has made daily trips from his home in Shillington to Philadelphia. In 1899 Mr. Grill built his fine residence at Shillington, it being one of the most beautiful and substantial brick residences of the place, and in 1903 he erected two fine brick residences on Lancaster avenue on a side lot of his property. He has two other good houses on Lancaster avenue, one of which he became the residence of the following child, and he has also obtained the old Grill homestead, which belonged to his grandfather and father, in which the latter was born.

On Jan. 27, 1877, Mr. Grill was married to Mary Huyett, daughter of Gerson and Eva (Gaug) Huyett, and granddaughter of John and Elizabeth (Harman) Huyett, an old and honored family of Berks county. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Grill. Mr. Grill stands high in the esteem of his fellow-citizens, and is one of the most substantial men of his locality and an influential molder of public opinion in his township.

entire Porto Rico campaign. In Porto Rico he was promoted to the rank of artillerist, and when he was mustered out Nov. 17, 1898, he was so rewarded. In 1899 he came to Reading and engaged in contracting and building, following these lines successfully until May 1, 1908, when he was appointed at the request of the council to be the city manager of Reading, which responsible position he now holds, his practical knowledge of contracting and building making him an excellent city official.

Mr. Henne resides in his own home at No. 134 West Greenwich street, Fifteenth ward, of Reading. He is a Republican in politics and is very prominent in the councils of his party. He belongs to the Lutheran church, while his wife is a member of the Reformed church.

On Nov. 21, 1903, Mr. Henne married Emily Tyson, daughter of Irwin and Ellen (Becker) Tyson, of Schuylkill Haven, and they have one son, Allen T. Naturally Mr. Henne is a Democrat in politics, and he is a prominent member of his party. He belongs to the Lutheran church, while his wife is a member of the Reformed church.

The Rittenhouse family originally came from Holland, the family being established in America in 1690, in which year the progenitor established the first paper mill in America at Germantown, Pa. Dr. Samuel R. Rittenhouse, father of Dr. Jacob S., was born near the Trappe, Montgomery Co., Pa., Jan. 18, 1852, son of Jacob D. Rittenhouse, one of the substantial agriculturists of that section, who died of apoplexy aged sixty-one years, April 17, 1843. Samuel R. Rittenhouse attended the public schools of his native town during his younger years, and then took a medical course in the University of Pennsylvania from which he was graduated in 1853. He immediately entered upon practice as an allopatic physician near the Trappe, but not being satisfied until he had received the best education possible, he returned to the University the following fall and attended another course of lectures, also taking advantage of the Clinics at the University Hospital. During the following year he formed a partnership with W. C. Trexler at Exeter, Berks county, and they acquired a large and remunerative practice which they held until 1855. At the time he had no faith in the Homeopathic School of Medicine, having been led to believe that it was nothing more than a delusion; but the wonderful accomplishments of that year opened his eyes, as it did those of every other man who was deeply interested in the advances of medical science. He decided, therefore, to make a careful investigation, and at once read the Organon and studied the Homeopathic Materia Medica. With the coming of faith in the new school, faith in the old school began to wane and finally made its departure, when upon testing the medicines in active practice he became thoroughly satisfied with the principle of Hahnemann—Similia similibus curantur. In 1857 he removed to Millerton, now Macungie, Lehigh county, where for years he had charge of a large practice. Indeed, it grew to such an extent that it required his entire attention, his health became greatly impaired, and, fearing that it would be necessary to relinquish his practice entirely, he removed to Reading in October, 1868, where he hoped to better the condition of his health. He soon after took up practice again, and continued with much success until his death, June 26, 1899. Dr. Rittenhouse was a member of the Medical Societies of Berks and Schuylkill counties, the Homeopathic Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania, and the Reading Society of Natural Sciences. He frequently contributed papers to medical journals of both schools, and was a writer of merit. During the Civil war he was an enthusiastic advocate of the Union cause, and contributed numerous articles to local papers intended to stimulate patriotism in the people and to continue the support of the Union. He was a consistent Republican, and in 1863 was the popular candidate of his party for the State Legislature, but was defeated at the polls.

Dr. Jacob S. Rittenhouse was but seven years of age when his father removed the family to Reading, and there he obtained his elementary education in the public schools, later taking a course in languages and the natural sciences at the Scientific Academy under the pretorship of the Hon. D. B. Brunner, after which he matriculated at the Hahnemann Medical College of Philadelphia in 1882. On April 3, 1885, he was graduated, and the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon him. During the last year in college he was elected by the class to "quiz" them on the subject of pathology and the practice of medicine. After his graduation he became associated with Dr. Reading, and during the winter of 1887-8 he attended the New York Polyclinic and other well-known hospitals, devoting particular attention to the diseases of the ear, nose and throat. He has since made a specialty of these subjects, and is at present the present United States Pension Examiner for the District of West Virginia.

Professionally Dr. Rittenhouse is a member of the Reading and State Homeopathic Societies, and is an exponent of the Hahnemann Medical Society of Reading. His two other connections are with Vigilant Lodge, I. O. O. F.; the Encampment, L. O. O. F.; and the A. O. U. W. For many years he has been extensively interested in horticulture and fruit growing, and he is one of the judges of apples at the fairs of the Berks County Agricultural Society. He belongs to the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society as an active member, and to the American Medical and Homeopathic Societies. Dr. Rittenhouse is a man of high character and is greatly respected by his fellow-citizens and practitioners.

On June 12, 1888, Dr. Rittenhouse was married to Emma K. Griesemer, daughter of Benneville D. and Hannah K. Griesemer, and four children were born to them, namely: Ruth Elizabeth Rittenhouse, Esquire, born Jan. 18, 1892; Samuel B., born Oct. 14, 1893; and Ruth Helen, born Dec. 14, 1897.

CHARLES M. PLANK, a lawyer of Reading, who has been somewhat prominent in Republican politics for a number of years, is descended from French-Huguenot stock. His grandfather, Jacob Plank, resided in Cambridge, Lancaster county.

Adam Plank, father of Charles, was a farmer in Lancaster county in the early part of his career, but later moved to Reading. At the age of twenty one he was in business until his death in 1880, at the age of seventy-two years. He married Joanna Moll, daughter of John and Elizabeth Moll, of Salisbury township, Lancaster county. Of their eight children, five are deceased, as follows: Winfield Scott, who died when four years old; Margaret; Elizabeth, who married Mr. Charles W. Rice; Catherine, who died aged fifty; and Mary. The wife of Charles M. Plank is the wife of James A. Lanning, of Camden, N. J.; Ida M., wife of Henry M. Phillippi, of Reading; and Charles M. Plank was born Sept. 23, 1860, and was reared in Reading, where he received good school advantages. He graduated from the high school in the class of 1876, and for three years thereafter taught school. Having decided upon the law as his life work, he began his study in the office of the late Daniel H. Wingerd, passed the examination in 1851, and at once began practice. In the ensuing years he has acquired a very comfortable clientele, and is now a popular member of the United States District and United States Circuit courts. He has confined himself principally to private practice, yet at various times he has been engaged in legal work in the public service, for four years acting as assistant city solicitor, for three years as solicitor for the school board and for three years as deputy collector of Internal Revenue in the United States District and United States Circuit courts.

Mr. Plank has given considerable attention to public affairs. He is a good "mover," and a valuable man in Republican councils. He has been chairman of the Republican county committee for ten years and his face is a familiar one in all the local conventions of his party, and in State and national conventions as well, he having been delegate to State conventions nineteen times. He was a delegate in 1896 to the national convention in St. Louis which nominated McKinley. Mr. Plank's name has given strength to the local Republican ticket in several elections, and in 1896 he was the candidate of his party for State senator. He was not elected, and known freedom hope, however, so that his defeat was not a disappointment. He came out of the contest with the rather startling record of having carried the city of Reading by a plurality of 2,380 votes, and he came within 1,383 votes of carrying the district. Mr. Plank is a communicant of the Episcopal Church, with membership at All Saints Church.

Mr. Plank married Sept. 29, 1897, Helen A. Althouse, daughter of the late Franklin A. Althouse, of Reading, who for forty-one years was in the railroad service.

SALLADE. The Sallade family is of French Huguenot origin. At the time of the Revolution of the Edict of Nantes, the head of the family fled to Zweibrücken, Rheinpfalz, whence five of his sons came to America. These five were: Jacob, who came over in 1749, and located in Tohickon, Bucks Co., Pa.; Peter, who came in 1750; Frederick, in 1751; Nicholas, in 1752 (died in 1770); and Thomas, in 1764. One of the sons went to Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Nicholas Sallade, who came to Pennsylvania in 1752, located in Dauphin county, where he died in 1770. He had a son John.

John Sallade, son of Nicholas, became a man of prominent position. He served as an officer in the Revolution. He married a daughter of Rev. A. P. Bedfort, of Luzerne county. In 1775 when but eight years old she was carried into captivity by the Indians and taken to Miami county, Ohio, but after many years was rescued by the expedition under Col. Henry Banquet. Among the children of John Sallade were two sons: George, mentioned below; and Col. Simon (1785-1854), who served several terms in the State Legislature.

George Sallade, son of John, was born Feb. 4, 1766, and died April 1, 1852. He moved from his native town of Womelsdorf to Rogersford, and then to Hereford. From Hereford he went to Alburts, but after a short stay there returned to Hereford, and there lived in a great degree of comfort, for a time on that time. On occupation he was a blacksmith. His remains were interred in the cemetery at Huff's Church. He married Eve Kinner, who died April 23, 1837, aged sixty-six years. She was born in Womelsdorf. Their children were: William, who lived at Millerstown, Lehigh county; Charles, Abraham, Rebecca, Elizabeth, Sarah and Anna.

Abraham Sallade, son of George, was born at Rogersford, in Montgomery county, Aug. 16, 1809, and was but a boy when he accompanied his parents to Berks county. He followed his trade of shoemaker near Harlem, on the property owned to him by Jacob M. Gery, and he did an extensive business for the time employing three or four apprentices. For two years he was proprietor of the hotel at Huff's Church. He died May 30, 1865, and is buried at Huff's Church, as is also his wife. Five generations of the family sleep here. Abraham Sallade married Julia Levian, who was born Jan. 13, 1819, and died April 60, 1884, in the sixty-sixth year of her age. They had eight daughters and three sons: William H.; Sarah Ann; Hannah M.; Eliza; Louisa; Dr. James W., of Auburn, Pa.; Lydia Amosella; Abraham G.; Amanda, who married John W. Gilbert; and Ida Eliza. Immediately after his marriage to William A. Good. In 1848 he was licensed to teach school by the first county superintendent, William A. Good, and taught his first term that fall. He also taught under county superintendents John S. Ermentout and David B. Brunner. After teaching eleven consecutive terms, he spent a year, from 1875 to 1876, in Germany, and then re-entered the school room, teaching one term in Hereford, ten in Harlem, and one at Huff's Church. In 1861 he learned the stone-cutting trade during the summer and out of school hours, and has followed it ever since with the exception of five years when in office. He still has a very extensive practice, and has made a name for himself in his time. Prior to entering politics, he employed a number of men and carried on the business very extensively. His son, J. Frank, is now in the business having his yard at Pottsville, opposite the Charles Baber cemetery. In politics Mr. Sallade is a Democrat, and from his youth has been interested in his party. At the age of twenty-two he was inspector of elections, and since then he has helped to hold elections over thirty years in all. He has been school director, auditor and delegate to county conventions; was county auditor from 1874 to 1878; clerk of Quarter Sessions Court, 1891-1894; deputy county treasurer 1894-96; justice of the peace 1875-1891, and 1900-1905, and he is one of the best known men in his township. He has a valuable tract of thirteen and one-half acres, and in 1896 built his present home. He and his family are members of Huff's church, belonging to the Lutheran congregation.

On Jan. 16, 1863, Dr. Sallade married Sarah Ann Gery, daughter of Ezra N. Gery, who is now aged ninety-one years, and they have had five sons and five daughters, namely: James A., J. Frank, Ida L., Mary A., Jerome W., Anna M., J. Henry (killed on the railroad), Sarah J., Ira E. and L. Stella. Fraternally Mr. Sallade belongs to Huguenot Lodge, No. 577, Kittstown; Pennsburg Lodge, No. 171, and also the Encampment; East Greenville Castle, No. 295, of G. O. E. S., and Juniata No. 470, P. O. S. of A., Slesholtzville, and in 1862 was district president of the southeastern district of Berks county.

Dr. James W. Sallade, veterinarian of Auburn, Pa., was born in Hereford township, Berks county, Aug. 14, 1850, son of Abraham and Julia. He attended the public schools of his native town, and was graduated in 1866 at Swedesville, Montgomery county, and then entered Kalkynsee Academy at Boyertown, and later the Keystone State Normal School. He taught school six terms in Hereford and Boyertown, and then worked in the iron ore mines and assisted in the building of the Colebrookdale Railroad. During school vacations he also worked and at his expense clerked in a country store. He was always ambitious, and whatever he has always looking forward to something better and something higher. In 1875 while teaching school he organized the Hereford Debating Club, which became the parent of the Hereford Literary Society, which has had so much to do with the development of literary tastes in that locality. In his growing manhood Dr. Sallade became interested in politics, and in 1872 he was appointed police and deputy warden of the Berks county jail, after which he was made steward of the Insane Department of the Berks County Poor House, a position he held six years. He then attended college as a student at the Ontario Veterinary College, from which he was graduated as a man in 1883. He opened an office in Reading and practised for some short time, after which he was in Toppers until 1895. He then moved to Pottsville, Schuylkill county, where he established an extensive practice. He is one of the first graduate veterinarian.
in the county. He employed several assistants, and trained a number of younger men for college, fourteen successful practitioners in various parts of the country owing their early training to him. Dr. Sallade graduated in March, 1833, and in August of that year he took an active part in organizing the Pennsylvania State Veterinary Medical Association, of which he was elected the first president, serving as such in all for four years. In 1888 he became a member of the United States Veterinary Medical Association, and in 1894 issued the call and organized the Schuylkill Valley Veterinary Medical Association. In 1885 he was appointed by the Governor of the State a member of the Pennsylvania State Veterinary Medical Examining Board, a position he still holds. In 1906 he successfully published the Civil Service Examination of Pennsylvania, and was employed by the Federal government in scientific work. For three years of his residence in Schuylkill county he has been in charge of the sheriff's office and the same number of years of the County Almshouse. He is a man of remarkable application, and by his power of systematizing his work, is able to accomplish more than most men. He has a high ideal, and is endeavoring to perform his duty as a man and a citizen, giving of his time and his knowledge to the safe guarding of the public.

In 1872 Dr. Sallade married Mary Ann Covely, daughter of David Covely, and granddaughter of the late Michael Gerry, former county commissioner of Berks county. To this union have been born three children: Anna Maria, wife of Dr. F. H. McCarthy, a former student of Dr. Sallade's who succeeded to the latter's practice; Katie May, an accomplished young lady at home; and Ida Jason, who was accidentally killed on the railroad in 1893, at the age of thirteen.

ABRAHAM G. SALLADE was born in Hereford township, April 23, 1857, son of Abraham and Julia. He was reared on the farm and obtained his education in the public schools of his native township. He began life for himself by driving ore teams at the Sieszoltzville mines, and later was foreman of the mines, for fourteen years, when he number of years was underground. His next work was as a mine contractor, and then he became superintendent of the Sieszoltzville mines, and also superintended numerous other mines in the same locality. In 1892 owing to failing health he quit the mine business, and engaged in the lumber business, a line he followed for fourteen years. In 1906 he went South, and located at Birmingham, Ala., where he had charge of a coal mine for the Berks Coal Company, and conducted it successfully until they sold out to another company. When Mr. Sallade returned north he was made foreman for Fehr & O'Rourke, at Reading. In January, 1907, he married Catherine M. Croll, and on Feb. 21, 1909, they have a daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Sallade have one son, William M. Sallade, and this office is filling at the present time.

GEORGE ROBERT GREGORY, register of wills of Berks county, Pa., is a representative of the sixth generation of the Gregory family in America. He was born in Hereford township, Dec. 19, 1869, son of Nathaniel and Matilda (Wieagner) Gregory.

As far as can be ascertained, the first of the Gregory family to come to America was Richard Gregory, who settled in Hereford township, Berks county, Pa., possibly as early as 1735. He died in 1765. He was the father of fifteen children: James, Richard, David, Andrew, Jacob, Gregory, Michael, Noah, Mrs. Matthew Knight, Mrs. John Robinson, Mrs. Judith Rhoads, Mrs. Anna Betty, Mrs. Margaretha Poige (who settled in Longswamp township), Mrs. Elizabeth Kurtz, Sarah and Hannah. In 1793 among the taxables in Hereford township were Richard Gregory, Sr. ($15), Richard Gregory, Jr. ($60) and John Gregory ($12). In 1830 the family consisted of John, the son of the above, married Catharine Gehris, of Hereford township, daughter of Jacob Gehris (the executors of whose will were Peter Hauk of Allentown, and Peter Gehris of Hereford township). They went to North Carolina, where they were living when he received the legacy from his father Richard in 1832 (the father's estate apparently was not finally settled until 1872 when the release was filed in the Recorder's office at Reading). He later removed to Green township, Columbia county, Ohio, and was there living when he inherited property from his father-in-law Jacob Gehris, in 1852.

(II) John Gregory, eldest son of Richard, died in 1874. He was a Captain in the French and Indian War. His children were: John, Peter, Richard (resided in Longswamp township, and had a son, John), Mary (m. John Swartz), Mrs. Christina Finch, Susannah (died unmarried in 1808, and her brother John administered her estate), Elizabeth, Michael, and Samuel. The family was employed by the Federal government in scientific work.

(III) John Gregory, son of John, was born Sept. 16, 1751, and died Dec. 24, 1835. His wife, Maria Elizabeth, was born June 6, 1753, and died Aug. 6, 1837. Their children were: Philip (settled in Erie county, Pa.), Peter, Samuel (born Dec. 26, 1790, died unmarried in Hereford township, Jan. 18, 1866), Richard, Robert (born March 31, 1795, died April 29, 1877, married Catharine Wiand, born Jan. 6, 1804, died Nov. 19, 1887), David (of Monroe county, Pa.), Catharine (m. Conrad Weinman, of Erie county, Pa.), Elizabeth (m. Jacob Gery), Judith (m. Henry Mester) and Lydia (1801-1851). Letters on the estate of John Gregory, Jr., former county commissioner of Berks county, at the time he inherited from his uncle Samuel in 1869. (4) Samuel lived in Burlington, Des Moines Co., Iowa, when he received the legacy from his uncle Samuel in 1869. (5) Susanna married Reuben Henry, and died the mother of Mary Jane, Annette, Alfred, of whom Mary Jane married Emanuel Arnold. All three reside in Monroe county, Pa., and all received from the estate of Samuel Gregory. (6) Clara died leaving no children.

(IV) Robert Gregory, son of John and Maria Elizabeth, was born March 31, 1795, and he died at 11:00 a.m., April 29, 1877. He married Elizabeth Wiegner, who was born Jan. 6, 1804, and who died Nov. 19, 1887. Their children were: William, who left no issue; Nathaniel; Lydia, Mrs. Seip, who died leaving a son, Edward G., now of Longswamp township, Berks county; and Sarah, Mrs. John M. Snyder, of Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, whose children were—Allen, Jacob and Katie (Mrs. Yoder).

(V) Nathaniel Gregory, son of Robert, was born in Hereford township, April 1, 1838. He was reared to farming, and followed it for many years. About 1880 he engaged in the hotel business at Harlem, and in this he has since continued. His stand was formerly known as 'Gerry's Hotel' and the village was called Perryville. In politics he was a Democrat, and for many years he served as school director. He was a delegate to many county conventions, and he has always been actively interested in his party's success. He is a member of the Reformed congregation at Huff's Church, and has been both deacon and elder. His marriage to Mrs. Elizabeth K. C., of Kutztown, Pa., Castle, K. G. E., at Harlem, he has been keeper of the Excelsior when the village was called Perryville. Matilda Wieagner, was born April 7, 1836, daughter of George Wieagner, of Hereford township, who owned the old historic Wieagner's Mill on the Perkiomen. Their children were: (1) George Robert. (2) Eugene Harvey m. Lizzie Gery. (3) Howard m. the daughter of James and Mary Rauch, and has two children, Anna and Elise. (4) Diana m. Adam Seinholtz, and had children, Calvin, Herbert, Annie, Mamie, Gertie and Florence.
HISTORY

VI. George Robert Gregory received his early education in the public schools of his native district, and later attended the Normal School at Kutztown, graduating therefrom in 1892. When eighteen years old he began teaching in the public schools of Pike township, his first certificate being granted by Prof. D. S. Keck. He taught in all nine terms, eight of which were in Hereford township. Since he was nineteen Mr. Gregory has taken a great interest in the affairs of the Normal School at Kutztown, and has been associated with the affairs of that institution.

In 1896 he was made assistant clerk in the county commissioner's office, a position he ably filled three years. He then became a clerk in the office of the Register of Wills, and in 1899 was appointed deputy register, serving one year more under Mr. Mabry. He continued to fill that office under the administrations of William R. Kemmerer (1903-1904) and also under Wilson M. Dunn (1905-1908), when Mr. Gregory became Register of Wills himself, having been elected by the remarkable primary vote of 8,031, and general election vote of 16,024. His long service as deputy fitted him for his position, and he is a very obliging and able official.

Mr. Gregory has been connected with a number of secret societies. At the present time he is Worshipful Master of St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M.; member of Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree; Oley Lodge, No. 218, I. O. O. F., in which he is Past Grand; East Greenville Lodge, No. 332, K. of P.; Cashmere Temple, No. 37, D. O. K. of K.; Court Victory, No. 123, Foresters of America; Harlem Castle, No. 335, K. G. E., in which he is past chief; and Mt. Penn Commandery, uniform rank, K. G. E. In the Eagles he has been District Grand Chief of District No. 2, since 1905, and has also served as Second Grand Guardsman. At the annual initiation of the Order he who has committed the entire Ritual, and he has taken an active interest in everything that tended toward increasing the membership and the finances.

Mr. Gregory married June 13, 1901, Sallie A. Rothenberg, and they have had three children: Homer L., George W., and Matilda R., the last named dying Dec. 29, 1907.

GARRETT BROCK EVERTS, of the Reading Times, is the grandson of Garrett Everts, who was court crier of the Lancaster county courts for many years, and who died at the age of eighty-three years. Garrett Everts had four children: Peter, John H., and Sarah (Spatz, later of Mohnton, by whom he had a daughter, Rebecca m. William Boyer), and Matilda, who m. Everts, and had the family of Rev. J. A. Everts, of Reading, who have committed the entire Ritual, and he has taken an active interest in everything that tended toward increasing the membership and the finances.

In 1909 he established the Reading Times, a newspaper which he has continued to operate for many years. He is a member of the Reading Times company, and has been associated with the management of the newspaper for many years.

Mr. Everts was born in Baltimore, Md., Oct. 9, 1855, and was educated in Baltimore and in Lancaster, Pa., after which he became an apprentice to the printer's trade in the office of the Lancaster Intelligencer, this being in 1872. On Oct. 23, 1881, Mr. Everts removed to Reading, where he has ever since resided, his first position being with the firm of Everts, as a compositor, with which he remained one year, the firm being succeeded by Everts & Company, printers. In 1888 Mr. Everts was transferred to the linotype department of this publication, and he then holds a responsible position therein.

Mr. Everts belongs to the Foresters, Typographical Union No. 96, the West End Social Club and the Keystone Hook & Ladder Co. In religion he is a Presbyterian, and he is a constant attendant and liberal supporter of that denomination. In politics Mr. Everts is a Democrat.

Everts's uncle, Strickler R. Everts, was for many years the champion skater of Lancaster county, and, although now advanced in years, can to-day give the younger generation lessons in the art of fast and fancy skating. The Everts family was one of the oldest and best known in Lancaster. Garrett B., its representative in Reading, who has spent twenty-five years of his life in this city, has determined to make the "Capital of Old Berks" his permanent abiding place.

AARON R. WARNER, chief burgess of Mohnton, and substantial business man, was born Sept. 14, 1854, near the "Kurtz House" in Cumru township, son of Levi and Mary (Reich) Warner.

Mr. Warner spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits in Cumru township, where he died at the age of sixty-seven years. He married Mary Reich, daughter of Samuel Reich, and to them were born children as follows: Catherine m. David Schlichter; Sarah m. (first) Henry Thompson, and (second) Henry Myers; Mary m. Samuel Fittinger; Rebecca m. William Boyer; Franklin R. m. Agnes Marks, of Mohnton; and Aaron R.

Aaron R. Warner attended the schools of Cumru township, and at the age of eighteen years learned the hatters trade with George Hendel, being later employed with John H. Spatz, his father-in-law, with whom he continued for about thirteen years, and when the company of John H. Spatz & Co. was formed he became a partner. At the death of John H. Spatz, Mr. Warner and Isaac S. Spatz continued the company until 1901, when Mr. Warner withdrew from the firm. He has a farm in Cumru township, adjoining Mohnton, of 154 acres of land, which he purchased in 1888. In the same year he erected his handsome residence in Mohnton, one of the finest on Wyominging avenue. In 1900 he erected the Mohnton Electric Light Plant, a brick structure of one story, and this is the means of lighting many factories and private residences of Mohnton, as well as lighting the public streets. Mr. Warner was elected chief burgess of Mohnton borough on the Republican ticket, Feb. 16, 1909, receiving 212 of the 261 votes cast.

Mr. Warner married Annie S. Spatz, daughter of John H. and Mary (Snader) Spatz, and to them have been born: Maysie; Paul S., who has Rural Free Delivery route No. 19 from Mohnton; Clayton, attending the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy; Warren, attending school; Aaron, Jr., also attending school; and Edwin. Mr. Warner is a member of Zion's U. E. Church, being trustee and treasurer thereof, and for the past fifteen years has been a teacher in the Sunday-school.

NAFTZINGER. The Naftzinger family now well represented in upper Berks county was founded here by (I) Matthew Naftzinger, who came to this country from Switz- erland and settled in an early day in Bern (now Upper Bern) township. He took up land, and passed the remainder of his life on the property, being buried at the grave of the barn which was owned by James M. Hix, in Upper Bern township, about one mile due west of St. Michael's Church, at the place where he made his settlement.

(II) Jacob Naftzinger, son of Matthew, took the farm of his father and lived and died there, and he, too, was buried in the home burial plot. The farm then comprised 110 acres.

(III) Peter Naftzinger, son of Jacob, is buried at St. Michael's Church. He also owned the old homestead, where he passed his life. He married Magdalena Haines, of Schuylkill county, Pa., and to them were born the following children: Peter, living in Williamsport, Pa.; Jacob died aged sixty-two years; Sarah is living in Centre township; Isaac H. is mentioned below; Joseph died at the age of twenty-seven years; Polly lives at Centreport, Berks county; Fiacetta is deceased; Hon. Frank, of Tilden township, Berks county, served in the State Assembly; Peter died young.

(IV) Isaac H. Naftzinger was born on the old homestead in 1845, and passed his active years in farming, now... living retired on a place adjoining the homestead taken up by his great-grandfather. He owns fifty-two acres of valuable land, and was engaged in its cultivation until 1904, since when he has lived retired. Mr. Naftzinger married Mary A. Epting, daughter of Henry G. Epting, of Tilden township, and ten children have been born to this union, namely: Harry E.; Lillie, wife of Frank S. Reber; Peter E., K. L., Jacob E., Mary, wife of Joseph Seyfert; Sarah, who died when two years old; Fayetta, wife of William Tobias; Polly, who married Jerome Bagenstose; and Rebecca, who married Milton Klopp and resides on the old homestead.

(V) Harry E. Naftzinger, son of Isaac H., was born Aug. 12, 1866, and attended the local schools. He is now successfully engaged as a huckster. In politics he is a Republican, and has held a number of township offices. He married Lillie R. Epler, daughter of J. K. Epler, of Tilden, and they have two sons, Isaac N. and William J. Mr. Naftzinger is a Reformed member of St. Michael's Church.

(V) Peter E. Naftzinger, son of Isaac H., was born Dec. 25, 1870, in Tilden township. There he attended the local schools, and in 1888 began teaching, which profession he has since followed, being well known in this connection. He is now teaching the West Hamburg school in Tilden township. For the last ten years Mr. Naftzinger has also been successful in business, in April, 1906, having been one of the founders of the firm known as the Berne Shirt Company, of which he is the manager. His partners in this business from the beginning have been his brother, Jacob E. Naftzinger, and Mr. John H. Hamm. They are located at Berne Station, where they have a factory 26 x 40 feet in dimensions, and employ from forty to fifty hands in the manufacture of all kinds of men's and boys' shirts. All the latest improved machinery is employed in the production of their output, which has a ready sale, the company dealing directly with the retailers. The industry is an expanding one, and all the hands have high standing in the community both personally and in a business sense. Mr. Naftzinger is assistant postmaster at Berne.

Mr. Naftzinger married Miss Katie A. Hartman, who died July 14, 1906, and is buried at St. Michael's Church, in what is now Tilden township. Two children were born to this union: Florence R. and Esther R. Mr. Naftzinger is a Reformed member of St. Michael's Church and is now serving as deacon, and as a member of the Consistory of that church. In fraternal connection he belongs to Lodge No. 103, I. O. O. F., of Hamburg, Pa.; to the Knights of Malta and Berne Masons; and to Camp No. 146, P. 0. S. of A., at Centreport.

(V) Jacob E. Naftzinger, son of Isaac H., merchant and postmaster at Berne, Berks county, was born in Tilden township Nov. 22, 1873. He received his education in the township schools, and was only sixteen when he began teaching school, a profession he followed altogether five terms in Greenwich, Bern, Tilden and Upper Bern townships. For the next four years he was engaged in clerking in Hoff & Bros. hardware store, in Reading, after which he went to Milford, Va., where he embarked in business as a store-keeper. He remained there eighteen months. Jacob E. Naftzinger has had a family of children, of whom are recalled: John, Charles and Thomas. In religious work his family have been members of the Reformed Church for many generations and have done much in its support in this section. In politics the Naftzingers were never office seekers, but they were often sought by officials, and officials of both Republican and Democratic have come from the family.

Thomas Van Reed, father of Wellington, was born in Spring township, Berks county, and his education was secured in the old fashioned log schoolhouse, where oiled floors and varnished seats were unknown. He became one of Sinking Spring's leading farmers and a man of much influence in his locality. He and his wife having attended Irving College, Mechanic's Institute, have been members of the Reformed Church for many years, and have done much in its support in this section. In politics the Van Reeds were never office seekers, but they were often sought by officials, and officials of both Republican and Democratic have come from the family.

Mr. Naftzinger married Esther N. Seyfert, daughter of Franklin and Caroline (Wagner) Seyfert, and they have a family of four children: Herman, Samuel, Wayne and Ruth. In politics Mr. Naftzinger is a Republican. He belongs to St. Michael's Church, being a member of the Reformed congregation, and socially holds membership in Vaux Lodge, F. & A. M., of Hamburg; Lodge No. 103, I. O. O. F.; and Camp No. 442, F. 0. S. of A., of Centreport.

SHERMAN S. FOUTZ, supervising deputy of the Knights of the Maccabees for eastern Pennsylvania, is a well-known and very popular citizen of the city of Reading. Pa. Mr. Foutz was appointed as county auditor of Harrison county, Ohio, Sept. 3, 1867, where his parents Jonathan and Rebecca Jane (Caldwell) Foutz, were also born on the old Foutz homestead. The father died in September, 1900, aged fifty-five years, while the mother still survives.

Sherman S. Foutz was educated in the Harrison county, Ohio, public schools, and the New Hamburg Academy, and after leaving the latter engaged in the fire insurance business for four years. He was then appointed to a clerkship in the United States Treasury Department, at Washington, D. C., under President Cleveland. He remained in this position for two years, at the end of which time he resigned his position to become manager of the Knights of the Maccabees for the District of Columbia and Virginia. On April 11, 1903, Mr. Foutz was appointed supervising deputy of the Maccabees for eastern Pennsylvania. When Mr. Foutz took this office there were but ninety-two members in Eastern Pennsylvania, and there are now therein 1,500 members. Mr. Foutz's duties take him all over the Eastern part of the State, and he is a member of the Supreme body, which meets every four years.

Sherman S. Foutz married Aug. 11, 1887, Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of John Wilson, of Harrison county, Ohio. Two children were born to this union: Oscar W., at a young age embarking on the sea; and Merl, who has entered the School of Reading of Reading and Madison, class of 1910. Mr. Foutz, besides the Maccabees belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of Malta and the Modern Woodmen. In religious faith he is a Lutheran, and in political principle a Democrat. Mr. Foutz is very popular throughout the Eastern part of the State, where he is well known and highly esteemed for his many sterling traits of character.

WELLINGTON VAN REED, secretary and treasurer of the Sinking Spring Fire Insurance Company, vice-presidential of the Auburn Stone Brick Company, and a director in the Swaykill Valley Railroad, was born in Spring township, Berks county, Oct. 15, 1840, son of Thomas and Eliza (Ruth) Van Reed, and grandson of John Van Reed, who descended from an old and honored Holland Dutch family.

John Van Reed was born in Berks county, Pa., and his education was secured in the old fashioned log schoolhouse, where oiled floors and varnished seats were unknown. He became one of Sinking Spring's leading farmers and a man of much influence in his locality. He and his wife having attended Irving College, Mechanicsburg, class of 1910. Mr. Van Reed married at Sinking Spring, Berks county, May 6, 1870, Miss Ann Barlow, daughter of John Barlow, and was the father of five children, of whom were recalled: William, John, Albert and Charles. In religious work his family have been members of the Reformed Church for many generations and have done much in its support in this section. In politics the Van Reeds were never office seekers, but they were often sought by officials, and officials of both Republican and Democratic have come from the family.

Thomas Van Reed, father of Wellington, was born in Spring township, Berks county, and his education was obtained in the common schools. When a young man he learned the wool fuller's trade, which he followed for twenty years, also owning and conducting a valuable farm. He died in 1899, aged seventy-five years, his wife dying when sixty years of age. Mr. Van Reed was the parents of the following children: Levi, Henry, Daniel, Wellington, Charles, Thomas, John and Eliza (m. to Adam G. Larch, and living in Wernersville, Pa.). Thomas Van Reed conducted an old-fashioned inn at Sinking Spring, but when the Lebanon Valley Railroad was built he gave it up. He was a man of good principles and was highly esteemed in his community.

Wellington Van Reed received his education in the common schools of Spring township, and also attended the old Reading Academy for three years. When a young man, however, they employed the young man on the farm of Henry M. Otto, with whom he remained seven years, and then resigned to engage with the old Reading Adler, when Charles Kessler was proprietor and owner. He clerked in this well-known establishment for six years, but in 1865 resigned to engage in business for himself, locating on Penn Street, between Third and Fourth. Here he opened a store for the sale of wool suitings, linings, trimmings, etc., and does an extensive business today at the same location, having never changed his place of business. The greater part of his time, however, is given to insurance and financial ventures. For the past thirty years he has been prominently identified with the Sinking Spring Fire Insurance Company, which was organized in 1848, and is one of the most reliable companies in the State. It insures farm and city property, and the company has gained the reputation of being one of the solid, safe and conservative institutions of the country.

Mr. Reed married Catherine Kessler, daughter of Charles Kessler, and to this union there were born: Elizabeth m. E. L. Lindemuth; Annie m. J. E. Lebkicker; Mary is single; and Helen m. James A. Behm.

Politically Mr. Van Reed is a Democrat, but has never been an office seeker. He has been a member of the Reading school board for the past thirty-four years, being the oldest member. He and his family are members of the Second Reformed Church, in which he has served in many official capacities. Fraternally Mr. Van Reed is a member of Oley Lodge, I. O. O. F.; Lodge No. 63, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237; Reading Commandery No. 49; Temple, R. & J. M. S.; Knights of the Golden Eagle; Mt. Penn Council, Royal Arcanum; and the Improved Order of Heptasophs.

Jesse G. Hawley, lawyer, journalist and public-spirited citizen, was for over forty years a leading resident of Reading. He was born at Pughtown, Chester county, Aug. 1, 1839, and died April 19, 1905, aged sixty-three years, eight months, eleven days.

His parents were Jesse and Esther Trumble (Meredith) Hawley, and his ancestors were among the earliest settlers of eastern Pennsylvania. He first attended the South Cornwall School, near a farm where his uncle, James M. Meredith, was the teacher. Next he was sent to Greenwood Dell Boarding School, in West Bradford township, taught by Jonathan Gause. Later he went to the Millersville State Normal School, and having chosen law as his profession he entered the National Law School at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His studies there were interrupted for a time, and he engaged in teaching school—a vocation which has been the stepping-stone for so many successful men. After this he taught in Amity township, Berks county, in the meanwhile reading law. In September, 1859, he came to Reading, and completed his legal preparation in the office of the late Major Samuel L. Young. He was admitted to the practice of his profession in September, 1860, and at Berks Bar took his place as a speaker of force, and he won some notable victories before juries. He practiced law about four years, but it was toward journalism that the natural bent of his inclination led him. On April 1, 1864, he and his late partner, Charles Kessler, the Reader Ad, the Reader Adler, the prominent political organ of the county. Mr. Hawley soon sought a wider field for his talents, and on Jan. 28, 1868, Messrs. Ritter and Hawley founded the Reading Daily Eagle. This marked the transition period in Berks county between the day of the German newspaper and the rapidly rising tide of its successor—the English daily. The Eagle was started as a four-page paper of six columns to a page. In the meantime they secured by purchase the Gazette and Democrat, a weekly founded about 1810, changing its name to the Weekly Eagle. Mr. Hawley brought to the field of daily newspaper work a fine physique and mature mind. He was an able writer and possessed the unerring instinct for knowing the needs of the people and supplying them. He had ideas and put them into practice. They were never small, and he had the conviction that the success of the paper was built. Life, energy and enthusiasm were put into the work, and the Eagle soon began to attract attention. Mr. Hawley recognized from the start that there were two sides to every question; that each had a right to a hearing; and he readily granted that it was the more occasion to print fairly and fully, allowing the reader to draw his own conclusions. He was probably the first American newspaper publisher to establish a complete system of rural correspondence, but since then he has had a host of imitators among those who realize that local news is the prime source of a paper's success. The Eagle took a democratic part in the proceedings. For years he offered prizes to the Reading high school boys for the best essay in literature, and prizes for meritorious work by pupils in the county schools. He realized that the school was the foundation of the true greatness of the State, and he did much to advance the cause of education. He was a supporter to every worthy object, though in many cases his name was not connected with the giving. He was ever enterprising and progressive in his ideas. He devoted his newspaper to building up and advancing the interests of his community and never for that purpose of striking down either an organization or an individual. Though he wielded power, he never used it to advance his own interests but remained until the end a splendid example of the independent editor. He left a lasting impression on the community in which he lived.

Mr. Hawley married, Dec. 15, 1863, Kate E. Ritter, daughter of the late Louis Ritter. When the Reading Eagle Company was bought out, Mrs. Hawley became president, in which capacity she served until her death, June 1, 1906. Two daughters remain: Edith, wife of William Seyfert; and Helen, wife of Edwin A. Quier. Mr. Seyfert is now president of the corporation, and Mr. Quier vice-president.

Charles R. Buck, proprietor of the Boyertown Steam Laundry and one of the enterprising business men of that borough, was born at Red Hill, Montgomery county, Nov. 7, 1819, son of Charles Buck, and his wife Christena, and grandson of Jacob Buck.

(1) Jacob Buck was a native of Berks county, and by trade was a blacksmith, for some years living and working at Longsawm. He moved to Hereford, Berks county, and then to Sumneytown, Montgomery county, and always followed his trade. He is buried at Old Goshenhoppen cemetery. His wife was a member of the Schneck family of Berks county, and is buried by his side. They had issue as follows: Charles, Daniel, Henry, Jacob, James, Camilla, Maria, and Caroline. Jacob Buck had a brother Joseph, who lived and died at Hamburg, Berks county, and another brother who lived at Ashland, Pa. Joseph Buck had a son Harry P. who lives at Hamburg, Berks county.

(II) Charles Buck, son of Jacob Buck, and father of Charles R., was born at Farm township, Berks county, and was born Aug. 3, 1800. He died Dec. 18, 1902, aged eighty-two years and four months, and is buried at New Goshenhoppen Reformed church, East Greenville, Montgomery county. He was also a blacksmith by trade, and followed that trade a number of years. In April, 1862, he deserted from Red Hill to Green Lane, the main cornedway, and engaged in farming, and nine years thereafter retired in comfortable circumstances. He was an active man in the church, and he and his family were members of the Reformed church at New Goshenhoppen where he and his wife rest from their labors. In politics he was a Democrat, and served very acceptably as school director in Marlborough township, Montgomery county. His wife was Christiana Royer, a descendant of one Pennsylvania's old and honored settlers, and she was born in 1854, and died in 1883. They had three children: William H., of Green Lane, formerly a school teacher, is now a farmer and a prominent man in his local community. He has been justice of the peace for thirty-three years, serving his seventh continuous term, and has also served continuously as school director since 1850; Charles R.; and Ellen R., married Herman Hillegas, a coal, feed and lumber merchant at Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania.

(III) Charles R. Buck was educated in the common schools of Montgomery county, at Mount Pleasant seminary, Berks county, under the tutorship of Prof. L. M. Koons. When Mr. Buck was twenty, he learned the mill-making trade from John R. Kepler, of Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, and followed it for fourteen years in Berks county. In 1860 he had a successful farm mill and cottages at Marysville, in Berks county, being consumed. Having lost his property, Mr. Buck went to work for P. A. Bragg & Co., in the cigar and box factory, as paying clerk, and thus continued for three years. In 1888 he embarked in the huckster business, operating between Boyertown and Philadelphia for ten years. In this he prospered, and built up a large trade, shipping as many as 1,000 dozen eggs per week as well as all other kinds of produce in like proportion. In 1888 Mr. Buck organized the Boyertown steam laundry, which he has since operated with marked success. Employment is given seven people, and the company is the largest of the kind in the valley of the people of Boyertown. The plant is conveniently located on Jefferson street, between Rhoades and Philadelphia avenue, and it is 40 x 24 feet with an annex.

Mr. Buck is a Democrat in politics, and served very creditably as justice of the peace, from 1898 to 1903. He was a member of the school board in Colebrookdale township for four years and has always taken an active interest in local events. He has been a delegate to the county convention, and was a candidate for the office of prison inspector of Berks county. Paternally Mr. Buck is a member of Washington County, N. C., P. O. of E. B. Castle, No. 298, K. G. E. of Boyertown, and is Clerk of exchequer of the Castle, having held that office since 1902. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church of the Good Shepherd, of which he is trustee; he was made an official of the church in 1894, and has continued in office ever since. He is very liberal in his contributions and can always be depended upon to do even more than one man's part towards the advancement of any measure, either in church or civic life, tending towards the uplifting of humanity.

On Nov, 6, 1875, Mr. Buck married Sarah Johnson, daughter of Abraham B. and Catherine (Gruber) Johnson, of Boyertown. They were married at Lebanon, Nov. 1854, and died Dec. 25, 1903. Her many virtues are tenderly cherished by her husband and children and her loss is still mourned. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Buck were: Flora, m. to Milton W. Briel, who is connected with the Boyertown Casket Company and they have two children, Kathryn and Lillian; and Charles A., born April 15, 1889, who is his father's assistant and a bright, young business man. The family stands very high in the community, in both a business and a social way.

NICHOLAS BUCK, the emigrant ancestor of many of the name, was descended from an ancient family long established in the vicinity of Thornville, Lorraine. The date of his birth is unknown. The Buckville branch of the family descended from Nicholas Buck, Jr., his third son, who was nineteen years old at the time of his father's death. Lorraine is within the valley of the Rhine and on the frontier of Germany, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, and suffered severely from war during the years between 1670 and 1738. The calamities occasioned by such long strife induced one Nicholas Buck, a single man, to embark at Rotterdam, on the ship "St. Andrew" for America. He arrived in Philadelphia, Sept. 25, 1762. For a short time he lived near Reading, and then came by way of Goshenhoppen to Springfield township, Bucks county. There he settled down and spent the remainder of his life. There is doubt as to the exact year of the emigration of Nicholas Buck. The ship "Edinburgh" arrived in Philadelphia Sept. 1762. Those in the list of emigrants that are mentioned Michael Hartman and "John Nickle Buck," the former no doubt the father of Nicholas Buck's second wife whom he married in 1766. In 1760 he signed a petition asking for a road in Springfield township. On this he wrote his name "NICKY Buck." On April 21, 1761, he married Mary A. Lamb, daughter of George and Barbara Kohl, of Nockamixon. The first child, Leonard, was born Sept. 1, 1763, and the second son, Joseph, in 1764. The wife and mother died Jan. 7, 1765, at the age of twenty-two years. On May 13, 1766, Mr. Buck married (second) Elizabeth, daughter of Michael and Margaret Hartman. The children were: Nicholas, Jacob, and Catharine, Barbara, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Mary Ann. In his last marriage record the father is mentioned as a widower and farmer. In 1768 he purchased from Ludwig Nuspickel, a tract of land of forty-six acres. In 1777 he was in the Revolutionary war.

Leonard Buck, son of Nicholas, married Elizabeth Kraberm, in 1769. He was a farmer. In 1766 he inherited under conditions half of his father's estate. He died in 1800, aged forty-six years. His widow survived some years. Their four children were: Mary, Catharine, Sarah and Jacob. Joseph Buck, son of Nicholas, married Rosina. He had a son John and other children. He sold to his brother his holdings in real estate and removed to Whitehall township, in Lehigh county, in 1800.

Capt. Nicholas Buck, third son of the ancestor Nicholas, in 1789 married Mary Magdalena, daughter of John Eck, of Upper Salford. In 1795 he bought a tract of sixty-four acres. In 1803 and later he was a collector of taxes in Nockamixon. In 1807 he raised a company and had it fully equipped and prepared for action the following spring. This company of militia continued to have him as its captain until a few years before his death. He had six children: Elizabeth, Nicholas, Sarah, Mary Magdalena, Jacob S. and Samuel.

Major Jacob Buck, fourth son of the ancestor Nicholas, was born in Springfield, May 1, 1770. He was a farmer. In 1790 he married Susanna, daughter of Philip and Elizabeth Sprank of Hock's. He conducted a public house at Nockamixon in 1800. In 1814 or sooner he became the owner of the "Bear Tavern" at Red Hill. About the same time his brother John became the owner of "Sorrel Horse." Major Jackson's children were: John, Jacob, Elizabeth, Nicholas, Samuel, Catharine and Joseph. His descendants are numerous and reside chiefly in Bucks county, Philadelphia county, and parts of Jersey. He was long a member of the board of Freeholders of Bucks county.

Major John Buck was the youngest of the ancestor's sons. He was born Feb. 19, 1775. In 1795 he married Salome McCarty. He, too, early in life had a penchant for the militia. In 1808 he was a captain of a company organized by his brother Jacob. He served this company as major until the close of the war with England. In 1808 he purchased his brother Jacob's property at Revera. The tract consisted of 136 acres and on it was the famous "Sorrel Horse" hotel, which was built of logs. After many years' service this hotel was torn down in 1818. He was the father of ten children: Elizabeth, John, Joel, Edward, Martha, Reading, Enos, Thomas, Elizabeth (Brown) and Nicholas. His descendants live in Bucks county, Philadelphia, New Jersey, Illinois and the West.

GEORGE R. MALTZBERGER, a prominent tobacco manufacturer of Reading, bears a name well known in that city as a synonym for honesty and reliability. John Maltzberger, grandfather of George R., was for many years one of Reading's most honored citizens, although others occupied positions more in the public eye. He was born in Reading March 17, 1815, and his whole life was identified with the city. He was given a common school education and then learned the manufacture of tobacco products. Later he learned brick laying and was engaged at that trade until 1846, when he returned to the tobacco business and laid the foundations of the large concern now conducted by his son. At first he had only a small establishment in the house where George R. Maltzberger now lives, at No. 58 South Fifth street, and he continued to improve both the factory and the family residence, and he also acquired the property now occupied by the store, adjoining the residence, at No. 36 South Fifth street, where he was until his death.

John Maltzberger was married to Miss Elizabeth Coleman, and children were born to them as follows: Henry, deceased; Mary, Mrs. James C. Brown, deceased; Harrison, a prominent attorney in Reading, now deceased; Charles, deceased; Emma, Mrs. John O. Geise, of Germantown, Pa.; and George R. The father of this family passed away in January, 1878, aged sixty-three, and his wife survived him until February, 1882, when she too died, aged sixty-seven. He was a member of the Reformed Church and she of the Lutheran. They were very popular in Reading, where they had a host of friends. Mr. Maltzberger was widely known as a man of absolute adherence to his word, and was held up as a constant example to others. He was a prominent member of Lodge No. 65, A. F. & A. M. and also an active participant of Odd Fellows. He served for a long time on the board of directors of the Reading Hospital. He was one of the founders of that institution, and subscribed a large amount of money for its support, after his son Harrison succeeded to the chairmanship of the board. John Maltzberger made many other donations to charitable institutions, besides giving much help to individuals, but kind hearted and generous as he was known to be, the full extent of his philanthropic work was never made public.

George R. Maltzberger was born in Reading Aug. 27, 1846. He went first to public schools, in an old building on the site of the present Chestnut street school, and then to the Reading high school. He also went for a while to a school at Second and Chestnut, now a part of the old foundry property. When he had finished his studies he went into his father's tobacco store, and was still there when the latter died. From that time until 1882, the business was conducted by the estate, but in that year George R. Maltzberger purchased the establishment and has since managed affairs for himself. He manufactured a good grade of five and ten cent goods, and is engaged for the most part in a wholesale trade filling orders in the different States. He has been constantly successful and has also built up a very large trade.

Mrs. Maltzberger was a Miss Ella C. Kershner, daughter of the well-known carriage manufacturer of Reading, John H. Kershner. They have had five children, but two of them are deceased. The others are: Elizabeth, George R., Jr., and John S. Mr. Maltzberger is a Presbyterian in religious faith, but has never united with any church.

In political views he is a Republican, as was also his father in later years, though just before the war he was one of the stanchest Abolitionists.

SAMUEL W. DIEFFENBACH, a highly esteemed citizen of Tulpehocken township, Berks county, and the popular proprietor of the "Brown House" at Mount Aeetna, was born June 15, 1866, in the same township, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Fisher) Dieffenbach. John Jacob Dieffenbach, the great-great-grandfather of Samuel W., had the reputation of being the first American-born citizen to make a pipe organ in this country, one of his first instruments being made in 1737 for the Tulpehocken church. He lived about one and one-half miles west of Millersburg, Bethel township, Berks county, where he was a Christian, and succeeded his father in the business for many years. John Jacob Dieffenbach came to the Tulpehocken settlement from Schoharie, N. Y., and was first engaged in building wagons, plows and harrows for the farmers. He had, however, an ambition to build church organs, and while on a trip to Philadelphia, carefully inspected the imported organs. Returning home he began to learn how to weld the seams of the metal pipes, nor did any one else in all this part of the country. Finally a foreign tramp came along, and taught Mr. Dieffenbach the secret of the work. This was the beginning of an extensive industry. Mr. Dieffenbach manufactured bony pipes, for which he later procured elephant's tusks, sawing them into shape and polishing them himself. Among his children were Christian and Th. The last named was succeeded in the cabinet making and undertaking business by his oldest son Henry, now advanced in years and living on the old homestead.

Christian Dieffenbach, son of John Jacob, succeeded to the organ business. He died at an advanced age, the father of the following children: David, grandfather of Samuel W.; Elizabeth, who died in Millersburg, at the age of eighty-one years (m. John Wagner); Catherine, who resided near the old homestead, where she died June 9, 1909, aged seventy-five years (m. Joseph Nattsinger); July, who died unmarried when over seventy years of age; and Jonathan, who died in Maumisburg, Ohio, aged sixty-eight years.

David Dieffenbach, son of Christian, carried on the business founded by his grandfather and built a number of instruments, being later succeeded by his son, Thomas. He married Margaret Dieffenbach and had the following children: Elias, a cabinet maker and contractor in Bethel township, making a specialty of bridges and churches, died aged eighty-six years (m. Catherine Holtzman); Thomas, born Jan. 23, 1831, and died in Millersburg in his eightieth year (m. Maria Loose); David, born Jan. 11, 1833 (m. Hannah (Stout) Malone); Loeiza (m. Amos De Hart of Myerstown); Caroline, who died unmarried aged seventy-six; and Samuel.

Samuel Dieffenbach was born near Freystown, Bethel township, where he received his education and learned the trade of shoemaker, at the same time working more or less at carpentering and wheelwrighting with his brother David. Subsequently he engaged in buckstatering, and this he carried on until his death Aug. 26, 1906. On Jan. 29, 1861, he married Elizabeth Fisher, daughter of Peter and Susanna (Stout) Fisher. She is now making her home at Mt. Aeetna, in the house built by Mr. Dieffenbach in 1876. Of the six children born to Samuel Dieffenbach and wife, four sons died young, the survivors being Miss Mary, who lives with her mother; and Samuel W.

Samuel W. Dieffenbach received his early education in the public schools of the district and the high school, and after leaving school he assisted his father in the business, then in the country. In 1881, he was then appointed U. S. storekeeper and gauger at various places in the county for a period of six years. He married Lizzie Harnish, daughter of Christian and Sallie (Smith) Harnish. Two children were born of this union: Ella Mary, at home; and Anna Maria, who died aged one year. Mr. and Mrs. Dieffenbach reside at Mt. Aeetna, where for eight years they have successfully conducted the "Brown House."
Mr. Dieffenbach is an active member of the Lutheran denomination, while his wife belongs to the Reformed faith. He is a Democrat in politics, but has never aspired to office. Fraternally he is connected with Camp No. 69, P. of A., and the O. of U. A. He has a pleasing personality, and is very popular throughout the township and county.

B. FRANKLIN KLEINGINNI, a versatile and useful citizen of the borough of Mohnton, Pa., where he is efficiently serving as a councilman, was born Nov. 18, 1858, on the old family homestead in Cumru township, Berks county. The name was originally spelled Kleinginny.

Johannes, great-grandfather of B. Franklin, was a native of Switzerland, and came to America on the "Bilander Thistle," George Huston, commander, sailing from Rotterdam. He landed at Philadelphia, and took the oath of allegiance Oct. 28, 1738. In 1739 he owned land in Cumru township, paying four pounds (equal to about $10.04). He died in 1778, and his son Johannes, according to records in the Berks county courthouse, was made executor of the estate.

II. Johannes Kleinginny, son of Johannes the emigrant, was a farmer in Cumru, where he owned land. He bought three tracts, the first of thirty-nine acres from Jacob Benneville; the second of twenty-four acres Feb. 3, 1790, from Peter Gower; the third of fifty acres June 23, 1795, from George Breining. On his property is an old cemetery in which, it is believed, he is buried, but the graves are marked with only rough sandstones from which the inscriptions have long since been effaced. Among his children were: John, born July 16, 1776, died Jan. 23, 1860, aged eighty-three years, six months, seven days; Daniel, born May 14, 1778, died unmarried Dec. 4, 1856, aged seventy-eight years, six months, twenty days; John Adam, born May 3, 1783, died March 15, 1861, aged seventy-seven years, twelve days; and Benjamin, born July 14, 1791, died Dec. 12, 1878, aged eighty-seven years, three months, one day.

III. John Kleinginny, son of Johannes, born July 16, 1776, followed in the footsteps of his father, and engaged in agricultural pursuits, becoming in time the owner of the homestead. He married Susan Krck, who was born April 26, 1788, daughter of George Krck; she died Sept. 10, 1854, the mother of the following family: Levi, who settled in Exeter township; Benneville, mentioned below; Harriet, m. to George Rollman, of Cumru township; Susanna, m. to John Haas, of Cumru township; and Mary, m. to Elias Warren, of the same township.

Benjamin, son of John, was born Nov. 11, 1819. He early learned the principles of successful farming under the guidance of his father. He devoted his entire life to that calling, and was the owner of the old family home in Cumru, consisting of 164 acres of land. His father had erected most of the buildings, but he himself erected the summer house the year he died. He was an old-time school master, and taught for five years, meeting with no little success as he was an able scholar, and an excellent penman, a high accomplishment in his day. He died March 13, 1875, aged fifty-five years, four months, two days, well-respected and well-known, with many dear friends. He was one of the founders of the Wyomingville cemetery, in which his remains were interred. In politics he was a Republican, and he held various township offices, giving of his time and ability freely for the good of the community. He was earnest and progressive, and he had the unbounded confidence of the people. He married Eliza Hendel; she died Feb. 18, 1793, from Eliza, with whom he was connected.

Amanda A. m. August Schweitzer, of Reading; Kate m. George Hain, of Reading; Sallie is mentioned below; James P. m. Maggie Krck; and Walter S. m. Carrie Wolfskill, and resides in Mohnton.

Franklin Kleinginny, son of Benneville, was born at the old family home, and there reared, attending the township schools and assisting on the farm. At the age of sixteen he left home to learn the hatter's trade with George Hendel & Son, of Edison. Since March 1, 1879, he has followed this trade during the busy seasons. He is a remarkable artist in the handling of tools, and for mechanics in general. As a young man he learned the watch making trade by analyzing an old grandfather's clock which had wooden wheels, and he does a great deal of repairing in the evenings. He is also an able electrician, having learned in company with several of his neighbors in Mohnton and his kindred the art of building and caring for Zion United Evangelical Church of Mohnton. He can handle a saw and chisel as well as a good carpenter, and he has helped in the erection of a number of houses and factories. His own residence in Mohnton is at the corner of Main and Church streets, and is fitted with all modern improvements, and surrounded by a well-kept lawn and cement pavements.

Mr. Kleinginny is a Republican, and served the district as judge of election. In the spring of 1907 when Mohnton was incorporated into a borough, he was elected a councilman, and is now serving on the Highway committee. He and his family attend Zion United Evangelical Church.

On April 18, 1886, Mr. Kleinginny was married to Miss Eva Ann Matz, who was born Jan. 13, 1866, daughter of Henry and Amanda (Huyett) Matz, the former a farmer in Cumru, and the latter a daughter of John Huyett. To Mr. and Mrs. Kleinginny were born three children, one son and two daughters, as follows: Mayme m. Edward Rudy, a cigar maker at Mohnton, and they have a daughter, Helen; a son died in infancy; and Carrie May m. Cleveland Hawkins, of Mohnton.

V. Miss Sallie Kleinginny, daughter of Benneville and sister to B. Franklin, was born in Mohnsville, and is engaged in the manufacture of furniture, even to making her own clothes, cares for her garden, with whose flowers she has phenomenal success, plays the organ, carries on an extensive correspondence, and in fact accomplishes more than the majority of women blessed with the usual number of hands and feet. She lives alone in a property inherited from her father, and is a '"well-dressed," charming woman who has endeared her to many friends. She devotes much time to reading, and is a devout student of the Bible. She is a regular attendant at the United Evangelical Church at Mohnsville. Many of the things she does are done by intuition, and she cannot explain either manner or method except by illustrating. She receives many callers, and all with courtesy. Knowing that her accomplishments are remarkable, she is exceedingly patient with her visitors, and cheerfully shows how she manages the many things she does, and when it comes to that, those who have seen her ask "Is there any thing a woman with two hands could do, that this woman has not done successfully?" So far it is safe to say she has accomplished everything she has tried, but she regards the killing and dressing of her first chicken as her most difficult feat, although since the first one she has killed several others.

Miss Kleinginny sells some of her needlework and also produces poles, but is chiefly conversant with comfortable circumstances. She lives her bright independent life, and finds happiness and contentment in a knowledge of duty done, and she takes great pleasure in her many friends.

CHARLES WANNER SNYDER, a popular citizen of the borough of Kutztown, Pa., who has been known to the people of that city as a professional photographer and artist, was born April 25, 1862, in Kutztown.
Benjamin Snyder, grandfather of Charles W., was a shoemaker of Alsace township, but in later life removed to Kutztown, where he died Dec. 22, 1817, aged eighty-six years, in the old historic house on Walnut street which is now 109 years old. For many years he lived in the house at the corner of W. Main and Nestor streets which is now the home of his grandson, Charles W. Benjamin Snyder married Eliza Binder, whose parents came from Germany, and their children were: John (m. Abbie Straussner); Anna (m. George Bossler); Samuel; William (m. Matilda Ziegler); Mary (m. Ferdinand Herr); Sarah (m. Isaac Ziegler); and David (m. Caroline Bieher).

Samuel B. Snyder, son of Benjamin, was born March 30, 1817, in Alsace township, Berks county, and died in December, 1893. Early in life he came to Kutztown, where he learned the trade of shoemaker, an occupation which he followed all of his life. Mr. Snyder married L. Izetta Adam, daughter of Jacob Adam, of Perry township (whose genealogy appears elsewhere), and to this union were born children as follows: Alinda m. Henry Kemp; Henry and Alfred died in infancy; Catherine was twice married, left one daughter, Minnie Keyser, and died in 1855, in her thirty-fifth year; Charles W.; and Annie died in her twelfth year.

Charles Warner Snyder was taken by his parents when seven years of age, to Maxatawny township, and there obtained his early education in a select school near Rothrocksville, and later at the Siegersville Academy, which was in charge of Prof. George H. Heffner. He then attended the Keystone State Normal school, after leaving which he learned the trade of harness-making which, however, he pursued for but one year. Mr. Snyder had learned shoemaking at home, and this he followed for a few years only. After leaving school he learned, during spare moments, the art of photography with James Eck, and this he has followed to the present time with much success. He also learned free-hand crayon work under Miss Clara Hartman, now the talented wife of Dr. Samuel A. Baer, Ph. D. Mr. Snyder is a scenic artist of some note and a skilled sign painter. Since 1872 he has, however, given the greater part of his time to photography.

Mr. Snyder is the honored president of the town council, a position which he has held for five years, having been Democratic member of the borough council for the past six years. He and his family are members of St. Paul Reformed Church, of which he is an elder. Mr. Snyder is very public-spirited, it being through his quick action that the great fire which is now famous Kutztown Park was saved from the woodmen. Mr. Snyder began the movement for the saving of the park through public subscriptions and in this he was very successful.

On Nov. 23, 1877, Mr. Snyder married Sallie A. Jackson, daughter of Charles H. and Amanda (Busby) Jackson; and to this union have been born these children: L. Carl m. Albert Lesher, now deceased, and has two children Carl and Earl; Annie m. Wayne Hammel, and has had two children, W. Errol and Robert E. (died when two years old); Grace E. died in her fourth year; James E. died in infancy; Sadie E. graduated at the age of seventy; and is now at the Keystone State Normal School; and Mary R. George C. and Walter E. are at home. Mrs. Snyder died Feb. 8, 1900.

STRUNK-STRUNK. A Strunk family lived, as is supposed from all accounts, in Upper England, in what is termed Rhine Prussia, on the west side of the river Rhine, or near the river Moselle, between the towns of Trier and Coblenz, about 50 degrees north latitude and about 7 degrees east longitude, from Greenwich. This family left two sons. Andrum and John Wyant. Andrum died in 1714.

(1) John (John) Wyant Strunk, the ancestor who founded this old family in Berks county, was born in 1693. He came to America in the ship "Phoenix," landing at Philadelphia Oct. 20, 1744. There were 104 passengers on board this ship. Coming on to Berks county, he settled in Heidelberg township, engaged in farming, and was successful in tilling the soil. He reared a large family to follow in his footsteps, and his descendants reside in that section of Berks county as well as in the southeastern part, and are numbered among the most representative people of this portion of the Keystone State. Johan Wyant Strunk married first Hannah Loving; second Hannah Lawrence. He is buried at Lotzert, where he died April 26, 1783, and is buried on the Strunk private burial-ground in Amity township, now almost entirely destroyed, on land formerly owned by Jacob Strunk. (II) Lorentz Strunk, son of Johan, was the first of the name to locate in Amity township. He, too, was a farmer, and is buried probably in the private burial-ground. One of his sons was Jacob. (III) Jacob Strunk was a resident of Amity township. He was born Aug. 18, 1760, and died Nov. 1, 1828, aged sixty-seven years, two months, thirteen days. He owned a farm in the township. Jacob married Rebecca Sellsderf, of Elam Kline, a farmer of Exeter township, who died and is buried at Schwartzwald Church). Jacob Strunk and his wife are buried side by side in the north corner of the old burial ground at Amityville Church. (IV) Amos K. Strunk, youngest son of Jacob and Maria (Kutz) Strunk, was born Nov. 8, 1812, in Amity township. He came to the vicinity of Boyertown, Berks county, at an early age. He married Amelia B. Haws, daughter of John V. R. Haws, and they had five children, three girls and two boys. Amos K. Strunk took an active interest in public affairs. From historical records it appears that he held official positions in this town, township and county for a period of forty years. He held a commission as justice of the peace for about twenty years in Boyertown. He also published a book of all the persons who held office in Berks county from 1752 to 1860. This work required a great amount of patient research, and an accuracy that could challenge criticism. The citizens of the county did not fully appreciate the value of his services, but he found much pleasure in the compilation, because it added much value to the history of the county in which he spent nearly his whole life. (V) Oliver H. Strunk, youngest son of Amos K. and Amelia B. Haws, was born at New Berksville, Pa., Nov. 8, 1847. Unlike his father he did not remain in Berks county, but at an early age traveled over the country so that he had the advantage of seeing at least fifteen of the states in the United States. He came back to Berks county at the age of about twenty-three. He graduated from the Mt. Pleasant Academy in Boyertown, of which L. M. Koons was principal. Here he prepared for Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, and graduated from that College in 1877, as valedictorian of his class. In the fall of the same year he entered the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster, and graduated from that Institution in 1880. He was ordained a minister in the Reformed Church and served in the same year. He was called to the Bloomsburg charge and served as their minister four years and a half. He resigned the charge to become the pastor of St. John's Reformed Church at Schuylkill Haven, Pa., and entered upon his work there Dec. 15, 1884, and has served this congregation for nearly twenty-five years. This membership in church and Sunday school, and the benevolence of the people have about doubled in this period. He is the only minister of the gospel in the Strunk family. He married Josephine L. Rutledge, of Lancaster, Pa. They had five children, two of whom are living, the son in New York City and the daughter at home. (IV) Samuel Strunk, son of Jacob and Caroline (Gind- er), was born in Amity township in 1825, and died in 1899. He is buried at Schwartzwald Church in Exeter.
township. By occupation he was a farmer, and he owned a farm of thirty-three acres in Exeter township. Samuel Strunk was a prominent Democrat, held the office of poor director for Berks county from 1873 to 1876, was supervisor, tax collector, assessor (for thirty-six consecutive years) and school director of his township, and tried to carry out his ideals of good citizenship in every way. He married (secondly) Sarah Dunkle (of Reading, Pa.) born in 1822, died in 1905, aged eighty-two years. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Strunk had these children: Jacob S. is mentioned below; Caroline, widow of Peter Glassmoyer, lives at Reading, and has two children, Cora S. (of Reading) and Howard S. (of Springfield, Mo.); Mary, now of Berks county, married John Snyder, and has two children, Maria S. and Robert S. Dunkle, of Reading; Ammon S. is mentioned below; Samuel S., of Kansas City, was a farmer, but in 1907 sold his farm and now lives retired (he has had three children, Frank R., George R. and Emma K., deceased); Henry S. is mentioned below.

This old and representative family is worthy of all honor. Its representatives are not only well known throughout Berks county, but are also to be found among the substantial people in various parts of the country.

(4) JACOB S. STRUNK was born July 11, 1847, in Exeter township, and was reared upon his father's farm. He attended the common and grammar schools at Reading, and worked on his father's farm until he was eighteen years of age. In 1869 he became foreman of construction on the Oley turnpike, and was thus employed for four years. In 1873 he commenced farming on his own account on the Charles Brehmesser farm in Exeter township. In 1876 he went to the Amos Reiff property, which he farmed three years, and then coming to Oley settled on the Jacob Herbein farm, of 135 acres, where he remained for thirteen years, and then bought the old Samuel Hoch farm, one mile west of Griesemersville, near Limekiln post-office. Here he has since lived, although in the spring of 1907 he retired from active life. The old Samuel Hoch farm is one of the most fertile lands in the Oley Valley. The farm, 98 feet long, was built in 1823 by Samuel and Elizabeth Hoch, who also built the big stone house, in 1808. Politically Mr. Strunk is a Democrat, and was school director of Oley township for six years. He and his family belong to the Reformed denomination.

In 1870 Mr. Strunk married Lucy Herbein, daughter of Isaac and Susan (Moyer) Herbein, of Exeter township. She died in 1905. They had these children: Sarah Ann m. Charles Cleaver, and died in 1901; Mary m. Edward Kieffer, of Reading; Deborah m. Solomon De Turck, of Reading; Ammon S., of Exeter township; Emma m. Charles Cleaver; Hannah m. James Fisher, who farms his father-in-law's farm in Oley township; Grover, unmarried, resides at home and is now a student attending school; Laura is unmarried.

(V) AMMON S. STRUNK was born May 25, 1854, in Exeter township, and there spent his early life working on his father's farm, during the busy seasons also working for neighboring farmers. He received his education in the local common schools, which he attended during the winter time, and later taught school, doing excellent work in that profession in his young manhood. He graduated from the Berks County Normal School, and at this time was a valued public servant, having been appointed census enumerator in 1880; in 1881 he was appointed deputy sheriff; in 1883 became deputy to the clerk of the Orphans' court; in 1884 was elected register of wills, serving a term of three years in that office. While in this office he registered as a law student in the office of D. Nicholas Schieffer, Esq., and later was admitted to the Bar.

In 1904, while in the midst of a contest for the nomination for county controller, Mr. Strunk was stricken with paralysis. Though confined in the hospital and unable to do work for himself, he continued for his lifetime to succeed in securing him the nomination under his powerful leadership and political sagacity. However, an independent candidate, Dr. H. F. Livingood, was elected by 4,088 majority over the regular nominee—something that had never happened in the "Gibraltar of Democracy." He died March 16, 1906, thus ending a short but strenuous life.

(V) HENRY S. STRUNK is a native of Exeter township, born March 16, 1864, and began his education in the "Old Hill School" in that township. He was only sixteen years old when licensed to teach, and in three terms of teaching in his native township was commissioned for two years to be open to sons of farmers, he saved sufficient money to enable him to take a course at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, from which he was graduated in 1885.

In the fall of the same year his brother, Ammon S. Strunk, appointed him deputy register of wills, which he continued to do for eight years, during which years—1891-92-93—he filled the office of register with signal credit and ability. Resigning the position of deputy register of wills in the fall of 1901, Mr. Strunk accepted a position as teller in the Neversink Bank of Reading, then being organized. He served in this position until October, 1908, when he was elected cashier of the bank. By virtue of his able service in the various positions of trust he has filled, Mr. Strunk is well and favorably known throughout the county.

On April 6, 1896, Mr. Strunk married Sarah Trimble Dwight, a daughter of Francis G. and Ida (Hoeckly) Fowkes, and has three children, Isaac, Bob and born three children: Grace D., Blanche D. and Henry D.

Samauel L. Dunkle, broker, located at No. 703 Penn street, and residing at No. 136 North Eighth street, Reading, is a native of Berks county, born in Bern township, Dec. 17, 1851.

His parents were David and Catherine (Lesher) Dunkle, farming people in Ontelaunee township, this county, and his grandfather was Michael Dunkle; his great-grandfather was Peter Dunkle, whose remains rest in the old burying grounds of Dunkle's Church, Greenwich township, this county. He was born in Berks county, in Germany, the arrival in America being in or about 1755.

David and Catherine (Lesher) Dunkle died in 1866 and 1868, respectively, and are buried in the old cemetery at Germant's Church, in this county.

Samuel L. Dunkle was left an orphan at the age of seventeen years. He was raised on the farm, and attended the public schools where he mastered all the branches taught at that time. He then attended Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport, Pa., for several terms. In 1870 he taught public school in Windsor township, Berks Co., Pa., and in 1872-3 he attended the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he was graduated in bookkeeping and business laws. On March 30, 1873, he secured a clerkship in the general store of Sunday Bros., at Leesport, Pa., at a salary of $50 per year and board. At the expiration of three months he accepted a position in the general store of James A. Koller at Centreport, Berks county, at $150 per year and board, and on April 1, 1874, he became a member of the Firm of Sunday & Dunkle, successors to James A. Koller, at Centreport, in the general store business. At the end of four months Mr. Dunkle disposed of his interest in the firm of Sunday & Dunkle, and in September, 1874, he went to Fredericksburg, Va., and organized the D. & S. Dunkle general store business. In 1878 he again disposed of his business and taught public school for two terms in Lebanon county, after which he resided at Myerstown, Pa. In 1881 he traveled quite extensively throughout the far western States, and in February, 1882, he engaged in the Loan and Brokerage Business at No. 703 Penn street, Reading, where he is still to be found in the same line, in which he has been very successful, having a large patronage in the loan business, and a good trade in the sale of watches, diamonds, jewelry, etc. During all these years he has extended his closest attention to his business and patrons, and has always conducted it in the most upright methods. In the meantime he has also engaged in other pursuits during the years of 1896-7-8 he was also engaged in the manufacture of hosiery in the Ammon building, on South Front street. He has been a director of the American Casualty Company of Reading, Pa., since its organization in July, 1902. In March, 1906, he organized the National Porcelain Company, manufacturers of electrical porcelain specialties, in Trenton, N. J., of which he is president.

On March 20, Mr. Dunkle married Miss Mary R. Loose, daughter of Abraham and Susan (Ritter) Loose, of Centre township, Berks county. Three children have been born to them, as follows: Claudius C., a machinist employed in the Navy Yard at Washington, D. C.; Calvin, a musician residing in Trenton, N. J., after five years of naval study in Germany; and Bayard L., also residing in Trenton N. J., where he is treasurer and general manager of the National Porcelain Company. In 1898 Mr. and Mrs. Dunkle made an extended tour through England, France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Italy. They are members of the First Reformed Church of Reading.

JACOB M. BORDNER. Among the representative citizens of Berks county, one, who stands high in the regard of his fellow-men is Jacob M. Bordner, county commissioner, who, for more than a quarter of a century, has been conducting the stage route between Bernville and Reading. Mr. Bordner was born Sept. 16, 1854, in Bethel township, son of Percival and Lovina (Miller) Bordner.

Daniel Bordner, grandfather of Jacob M., was a farmer of Bethel township, where he died at the age of forty-five years. Jacob's father, Percival Bordner, and he had three children: Percival: Isaac, who served as a sentinel during the Civil war; and Elizabeth, who married the Rev. Mr. Bixler, a local preacher.

Percival Bordner was born March 23, 1830, and died in 1903, his active life having been spent in Bethel township, although shortly before his death he removed to Myerstown, Pa. He was buried at the Salem churchyard at Millersburg. Mr. Bordner married Lovina Miller, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Gruber) Miller, of Bethel township, and they had these children: Jacob M.; Kate M. Israel Frante, of Bethel township; Percival resides in Cincinnati, Ohio; Theodore died at the age of forty-four years; at Daniel lives in New Jersey; John died at the age of three years; Henry lives in the West; and Charles lives in New Jersey.

Jacob M. Bordner attended the public schools of Bethel township and the Palatinate (now Allbright) College of Millersville. Following school he engaged in clerking for G. M. F. Rick at Millersburg for three years. After one year spent in clerking for J. B. Miller at Bernville, he began to drive the stage for the late Tobias Barto, of Reading, and in 1889 purchased the stage route, which he has since conducted very successfully. He also does a large produce business, conducts a grocery store and butchering business, and is one of the best known business men of his locality. Mr. Bordner was elected to the office of borough assessor six years, served as tax collector five years, constable twenty-three years, and school director for twelve years, six years of which time he was treasurer and one year secretary of the board. He was a committee-man for eighteen years, served eleven years as borough delegate, in 1893 was appointed mercantile appraiser, and was nominated by the Democratic party at the primary election, April 11, 1908, to the office of county commissioner; he had a majority of 2,158 votes above the second highest nominee, and was elected, and took office Nov. 9, 1908. His religious belief is that of the Lutheran Church. Socially he is connected with Camp No. 113, P. O. S. of A. and Consistory No. 15; Lodge No. 122, I. O. O. F., Bernville; Schaefferstown Castle, K. G. E.; Good Fellows of Stouchsburg; and Rebekah Lodge at Leesport, and the officers of the organization of the Bernville Fire Company, was a member of that body.

In 1878 Mr. Bordner married Ellen H. Bright, daughter of Amandon and Clara (Hain) Bright, and they have had three children: John A., who died aged two years, five months, twenty-one days; Harry A., telegraph operator at Robesonia; and Clara A., who graduated from the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown at the age of seventeen years, taught four years in Bernville, Berks county, and one year in Bucks county, and is now teaching her fourth term in Schuylkill Haven, Pennsylvania.

JOHN P. S. FENSTERMACHER. On Sept. 9, 1738, the ship “Glasgow,” Walter Sterling, master, arrived at the port of Philadelphia from Rotterdam. Among the emigrants on board were Mathias Fenstermacher, aged sixty years; Jacob Fenstermacher, aged twenty-nine years; and Wilhelm Fenstermacher, aged twenty-five years. Where these three Germans settled is not definitely known, but it is probable it was in Longswamp, Berks county, for in 1756 there appeared upon the tax list of that township three Fenstermacers, Mathias, Jacob and Philip. As near as can be ascertained one of these early taxables—probably Jacob—had a son John who married Elizabeth Kutz, and settled in the vicinity of Orwigsburg, Schuylkill county. John Fenstermacher and Elizabeth Kutz, his wife, were the parents of fifteen children, thirteen of whom grew to maturity. Four of their sons, Daniel, Hugh, John and Jacob, lived all their days in Schuylkill county, and many of their descendants are yet residing there. Daniel and John were born in Berks county, but Elizabeth married a man named Aughinbaugh and lived at Lebanon; Lidy married a man named Ducer, and Barbara married a man named Dietrich. Lidy and Barbara are still living, the former in Potts ville, and the latter in Tower City. Two other daughters, Sarah and Rebecca, also married and they lived and died in Schuylkill county, but further information concerning them is lacking.

A son named William, who was the ninth child of this large family, married and settled at Shippensburg. He died in June, 1898, in the seventy-fourth year of his age, and his descendants are still living in that town.

John and Elizabeth (Kutz) Fenstermacher had a son named Joseph who married in Schuylkill county, Sept. 9, 1816. He grew to young manhood at Orwigsburg, then went to Reading, and learned carriage building. Shortly after completing his trade, he located permanently at Lebanon, where he followed his trade during most of his active years, and always bore the reputation of being a skilled and satisfactory workman. Later in life he engaged in the restaurant business, and for about fifteen years was also a tipstaff in the courts. He was a person of fine physique, measuring six feet in height. He was good-natured and generous, and participated freely in politics, which along with his character and duties of his trade, made him one of the best and most popular men in Lebanon county. Joseph Fenstermacher married Mrs. Louisa Gosher, widow of Henry Gosher, and daughter of Col. Jacob and Elizabeth (Leisenring) Shindel, a descendant of brilliant ancestry. In 1678 there lived in Gemmelsbach, Providence of Erbach, Germany, Conrad von Schindel, and his wife Barbara. On Oct. 16, 1685, there was born to them a son, whom they named Johann Conrad. This Johann Conrad von Schindel, on Jan. 10, 1710, married Susanna Trelker, and by her had ten children, the youngest of whom was a son named Johann Peter, who was born in Euerlebach, Germany, Feb. 22, 1732. In 1751 this Johann Peter Schindel came to America in the ship “Neptune,” landing at Philadelphia Sept. 24, 1751. He settled where now is the city of Lebanon, Pa., and long afterward was engaged on the side of the colonies in the Revolutionary war. He died in Lebanon May 29, 1784. In America most of his descendants have omitted the letter "c" from Schindel, preferring to spell it Shindel, and the title "von" has been dropped by all of them. Johann Peter Shindel married Anna Margretta Gephart, and had eight children, the eldest of whom was a son, John Peter, born Aug. 21, 1766. He also was a soldier of the Revolution, afterward a member of the State Legislature, as justice of the peace for many years, and in 1826, chief burgess of Lebanon. This John Peter Shindel was generally known as Peter Shindel, and so always signed his name. He died Sept. 17, 1829. He married Anna Maria Mngaa, of Snyder county, and by her had eleven children. The third of these eleven children was a son Jacob, who was a soldier in the war of 1812, and afterward a colonel of militia, known as Colonel Jacob Shindel. He married Elizabeth Leisenring, of Sunbury, and by her had six children, of whom Louisa, fathered by the second husband, John Fenstermacher.

To Joseph Fenstermacher and Louisa, his wife, the following children came: Elmina T., born Oct. 9, 1842, m.iram W. Hess, of Lebanon, Pa., deceased; Jacob A., born April, 1844, died in Jan., 1845; Winfield Scott, born Oct. 6, 1846, m. Rebecca Hultzeizer, of Finesville, N. J., died Oct. 17, 1848, m. Anna S.; Thomas M., born March 16, 1858; John P. S.; Joseph S., born April 11, 1850, died in Jan., 1851; Rebecca, born Feb. 6, 1856, died Feb. 9, 1856; Anna L., born Feb. 11, 1858, m. Aaron B. Fry, of Lebanon, Pennsylvania.

John P. S. Fenstermacher was born in Lebanon March 30, 1853, and grew to manhood in that city. His education was obtained in the public schools of his native town and was limited, as he early had to apply himself to the earning of a livelihood. At the age of fourteen he became a railway news agent, running between Lebanon and Philadelphia, and by his pleasing ways became very popular with the patrons of the trains. Frank B. Gowen, then president of the Philadelphia & Reading Company, learned to know and like him, and had him promoted to the position of brakeman when yet seventeen years of age. From brakeman he rose to baggage master, and from that on Jan. 15, 1885, to passenger agent at the Kutztown branch, a place he held continuously till 1909, a period of twenty-four years, and with the former he engaged in banking in San Francisco for some months, but the East called him, and he returned to his profession in Reading, the same year.

On July 13, 1869, Mr. Van Reed, on the recommendations of the Republicans of the county, was appointed to the office with powers similar to the president judge, by Gov. John W. Geary. This was in consequence of an act passed by the Legislature authorizing an additional judge, and his term of office was to continue until his successor was duly elected and qualified, which was on the following 6th of December. Judge Van Reed had always been a good Republican, but he did not believe that a judgeship should be made a matter of political self-seeking, and true to his convictions at no time offered himself as a candidate. What came to him was the unsought reward of faithful and efficient service. From Jan. 12, 1875, to Jan. 2, 1876, he again filled the same office, having this time been appointed by Gov. John A. Andrew to fill a vacancy. He filled the office with dignity and impartiality, and the wonder of the Democratic majority made his filling it by election impossible. After leaving the Bench he gradually retired from practice. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1872-73. During the Civil war he was at first a Union supporter, but the contest, and in Sept., 1863, he became a member of Company G, 2d Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, commanded by Capt. F. S. Bickley, to repel the threatened invasion of the State. They performed military duty for eleven days, and were then discharged. At the time of the battle of Gettysburg, he again enlisted, becoming sergeant in Company C, 40th Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, under Col. Charles H. Hunter, and served from July 6 to Aug. 12, 1863.

At his death, June 30, 1885, many highly eulogistic addresses were delivered by members of the Berks County Bar, and in the resolution passed it was said of him: "As a lawyer and judge he was able, conscientious and painstaking. As a man he despised sham and hypocrisy; and he took for his own example the Christian virtues. He had the rare gift of courage equal to his convictions; and therefore in public as well as in private life he acted as he believed an honored, upright man should act, without regard to the perversions and consequences.

On Sept. 2, 1852, Judge Van Reed married Miss Harriet, daughter of George Gernant. She died Jan. 13, 1883. Their children were: George R. and Anna.

George R. Van Reed was born in Reading Sept. 21, 1853. He obtained his earlier education in the public schools and then entered Lafayette College, at Easton, graduating therefrom in 1874. He became division engineer for the South Mountain & Boston Railroad, and later assistant engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, being stationed at Paoli. He assisted in the construction of the Schuylkill Valley Division, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, continuing in that service until he came to Reading, then the company from 1876 to 1880, a very able civil engineer, and met the many difficulties in that work afforded him keen enjoyment. He read law under Garrett Stevens, of Reading, and Jan. 21, 1888, was admitted to the Bar, but he never engaged in practice. He died Aug. 12, 1908.

In 1831 Mr. Van Reed married Miss Effie, daughter of John H. Knapp, of Menomonee, Wisconsin.

THOMAS P. MERRITT, son of Abraham and Margaret (Irick-Budd) Merritt, was born at Mt. Holly, N. J., Sept. 29, 1844. He received his education in the schools of his native place, and in the University of Lewisburg, Pa. (now Bucknell), and upon completing his special course of preparation for business located in Philadelphia, engaging in the lumber business with a firm trading as Norcross & Sheetz. After remaining with this firm several years, he went to Norristown and started in business for himself. He continued at Norristown until 1879, and then removed to Williamsport, for the purpose of carrying on the wholesale lumber business and manufacturing all kinds of lumber.

Shortly after 1870 Mr. Merritt took his younger brother, A. Howard Merritt, into partnership, and they traded as Merritt Brothers until 1889, building up a very extensive business, and shipping lumber to all parts of the country. Disposing of their business at Williamsport, the firm purchased the well-established lumber yard of Boons & Randenbush, at Reading, and moving to that place have since been engaged in the retail lumber business in a very extensive and successful manner, having in the past thirty years supplied a large proportion of lumber used in the construction of the many thousands buildings which were erected in Reading during this time.

Immediately after locating in Reading, Mr. Merritt identified himself with its numerous social affairs, but more especially of a business nature and the enterprising men of the community soon learned to appreciate his worth by selecting him to fill prominent positions and cooperating with him in establishing financial institutions. His first public position was on the board of health. This was in 1879, and he was afterward reappointed, and in coming interested in public charities, he participated in the proceedings of the Reading Benevolent Society, and served the Society as its president; and he served the Associated Charities of Reading as vice-president. When the State of Pennsylvania established the large hospital in the vicinity, near Bernville, in the name of the insane, he was selected by Governor Pattison as one of the first trustees, and he was reappointed by Governor Hasting, serving in this position for six years, and he was chosen by the board as its treasurer. In 1894, though a Democrat, he was reappointed by Governor Pennypacker for a third term.

Mr. Merritt assisted in organizing the Pennsylvania Trust Company in 1886, and the Reading National Bank in 1893, and he has served on the board of directors of each body from their inception until now. He was also one of the projectors of the Reading Electric Light & Power Company for supplying light and power for the city; of the Reading Steam Heat & Power Company, for supplying steam heat to dwellings and public buildings in the central portion of the city; and of the beautiful suburban town Wyomissing, about seven miles west of Reading along the main thoroughfare.

The municipal affairs of Reading attracted Mr. Merritt's earnest attention, and to put himself in a position to favor them he became a member of the Board of Trade. When councils established the park board in 1886, they selected him as one of the first four commissioners, and he officiated until 1890—the first important step in the creation of the park system having been taken at that time. In 1894 he was elected president of the Board of Trade, and he filled this position very successfully for four years. During his incumbency the first steps were taken toward a proper celebration of the Sesqui-Centennial of Reading in 1898, which culminated in a most successful demonstration. Upon the organization of the Historical Society of Berks County in 1898 he became a member of the Society, and he was selected as one of the executive council, which position he has served since then. And about this time he was appointed by councils as one of the trustees of the Reading Library, and he has served by reappointment until now. He represented Pennsylvania as one of the Commissioners to the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893, by appointment of Governor Pattison.

When Mr. Merritt reached his majority, he identified himself with the Democratic party, and he has been a staunch advocate of its principles ever since. Upon fixing his residence at Reading, he at once manifested a keen interest in local politics through the party, and his name became a household word throughout the people; indeed, so prominent had he become by 1890 that the Democrats placed his name on their ticket for mayor, and he was elected, evidencing his unusual popularity. During his official term, from 1890 to 1893, numerous important questions were considered, more particularly a power rate case, which he conducted before the commissioners, and they received his earnest encouragement.

Mr. Merritt was made a Freemason in 1867 at Norristown, becoming a member of Charity Lodge, No. 190, and he still retains his membership in that lodge; he was made a Knight Templar in Hutchinson Commandery, No. 39, but he transferred his membership to Reading Commandery, No. 42, of which he was eminent commander in 1888. He has taken the thirty-third degree. Immediately after locating in Reading, Mr. Merritt was admitted to membership in Christ Episcopal Church, and he has since then shown much interest in the welfare of the congregation. He has served as a vestryman since 1886.

Mr. Merritt married Emma P. Rambo Nov. 30, 1871. She is a daughter of Nathan Rambo and Ann Broades (Carrie-Ross), his wife, who are descendants of the oldest families in the Schuylkill Valley in the vicinity of Norristown, Pennsylvania.

MORRIS C. BERGER, farmer of Penn township, the present tax collector of that township, and a director of the First National Bank of the borough of Bernville, is one of the most respected citizens of his section of Berks county. He was born near here, and has cultivated the soil for over forty years, and on one homestead here, several generations of Bergers having lived in this region.

Mr. Berger's great-great-grandfather had the following named children: Elizabeth, born Feb. 8, 1750; George W., Sept. 29, 1761; Tobias, Jan. 21, 1763; Catharine, July 9, 1766; Moric B., April 8, 1768; Johannes, June 24, 1769; Maria M., June 9, 1771; Diana Maria, April 27, 1773; Maria Magdalena, Sept. 18, 1774; John Christian, Nov. 5, 1777; Johan Ludwig, Jan. 28, 1779; Johan Philip, born June 3, 1782.

The great-grandfather of Morris C. Berger lived and died near the Blue Mountains. His children were born as follows: Sarah, Feb. 12, 1797; John, April 16, 1798; Solomon, May 5, 1801; Catharine, Dec. 2, 1803; Elizabeth, Sept. 14, 1805; Daniel, Sept. 16, 1807; George, Sept. 7, 1809; William, July 30, 1811; Susannah, May 18, 1814; Joseph, Feb. 30, 1818; Benneville, Sept. 21, 1850.

Johann Berger, born May 5, 1801, owned a farm in Bern township, which he cultivated. He married Elizabeth Pottenger, and to them were born six children: Adam; Levi, of Bernville; John, who died young; Rebecca, m. to Daniel Strouse (their daughter, Miss Strouse, of Bernville, has the record of the great-great-grandfather's children previously given); Esther, who died unmarried; and Eliza, m. (first) to Benneville Bethram and (second) to William Schlappich.

Adam Berger, son of Solomon and father of Morris C. Berger, born in 1830 in Bern (now Penn) township, died in 1882. After his father's death he took the homestead, where he passed most of his life, and besides managing the place he was for many years engaged in the conduct of business with his brother Levi and other members of the Berger brothers. They built many churches, among them being St. Michael's, Leesport Union, which they rebuilt after its destruction by fire, St. John's Reformed at Schuylkill Haven, Mohrsville Union and three Baptist churches. Adam Berger was a well-known man in his day in public affairs as well as in business life, served his township as school director, and was also active in religious matters being a prominent member of the Benneville Reformed Church, in the work of which he was deeply interested. He married Elizabeth Hafe, daughter of Samuel Hafe, and to them were born four children: James and John, who both died at the old homestead; Morris C.; and Mary, who died at the old homestead. The mother now lives, her only surviving child, Morris C. Berger, in Penn township.

Morris C. Berger was born in Penn township, April 11, 1863, and there attended the public schools. He was eighteen when his father died, and though rather young took charge of the homestead at that time, making a success of it. His land comprises eighty-five acres, three miles northeast of Bernville, and is in very good condition, giving evidence of his care and intelligent management. He has prospered well as the result of industry, and while the First National Bank of Bernville was organized he became a member of the first board of directors, and is still serving in that position. He is progressive and energetic, and has done his share toward the advancement of the township, having given six years of his time as school director, for five years of that time acting as treasurer of the school board. For three years he has been a tax collector of the township. He is a Democrat in politics and a worker in the local ranks. For the party, he has been a member of the election board of the township. Like his forefathers he clings to the Reformed denomination, being a member and deacon of St. Thomas Church, Bernville.

Mr. Berger married Rebecca Seaman, daughter of William and Rebecca (Wertz) Seaman, and eight children have blessed their union: Alva, who taught three years in Penn township before her marriage to Milton Potteiger (they have a daughter, Pearl); Kate, wife of Elwood Kramer (they have one daughter, Ruth); Alvin, a teacher, who taught four terms in Penn township; Mary M.; Allison; Edwin; Stephen; and Earle.

C. W. B. Todd, a representative business man of Reading, Pa., who is proprietor of the "Merchants' Hotel", at the corner of Third and Penn streets, was born Dec. 30, 1839, in Montgomery county, Pa., son of John and Christina (Bachman) Todd, and grandson of Andrew Todd.

John Todd, father of C. W. B., was also a native of Montgomery county, and was a leading manufacturer of spinning wheels when nearly all the cloth used was spun by hand. He was known far and wide for his superior workmanship in his business, and his trade extended far into the surrounding counties. Later in life Mr. Todd engaged in farming. He was one of Montgomery county's best known and most highly respected men, and his popularity was proved when he was elected sheriff by a handsome majority. He proved himself a man of ability, and then conducted the court house office with credit and distinction, and to the satisfaction of all. He died in 1862, at the age of eighty-four years, and his faithful wife in 1873, when seventy-four years old. Mrs. Todd was a good wife and loving mother, and was well known in her neighborhood as one who could be depended on in times of sickness and trouble. Mr. and Mrs. Todd were born children as follows: John, M. D., of Pottstown, Pa., married (first) a Miss Smith, and (second) a Miss Heller of Boyertown, Pa.; William, a contractor of Norristown, Pa., m. Mary Saylor; Christina B. m. Horace Royer, and their deaths occurred within a week of each other; Emily married W. Kratz, of Leesport, Pa.; Samuel M., M. D., is of Boyertown; and C. W. B.

C. W. B. Todd received his education at the "Trappe" in the Freehold Seminary (now Ursinus College), and after leaving school he apprenticed himself to learn the blacksmith's trade, which he followed until the outbreak of the Civil war, when, in 1861 he enlisted in the 2d Pennsylvania Reserve Corps as a musician. After serving thirteen months he was honorably discharged, and returned home, where he was engaged at various occupations for some time. He then accepted a position as traveling salesman for an agricultural implement firm, and this he followed successfully for several years, and in 1901 he came to Reading, leasing the "Merchants' Hotel," which he has conducted with much success to the present time. At the time of Mr. Todd's lease the hotel had been neglected and allowed to run down, but Mr. Todd has built up a fine, first-class trade, and today the hotel is considered one of the most of the moderate rate houses in the State. The house contains sixty-six sleeping rooms. Having been a "Knight of the Road" himself, Mr. Todd fully understands what is required for the comfort of traveling men, and his place is fully equipped with every convenience. He personally attends to the care of the house and is doing a splendid business, and he sees that nothing but the best that the rates can afford enters this department. Mr. Todd is very popular in fraternal circles, and is a member of the Amityville Lodge, F. & A. M., of Trappe, Pa.; Chapter No. 152, Reading; De M., and Commandery, Reading; and Rahaj Temple, A. O. N. M. S.

In 1872 Mr. Todd married Miss Adaline Schwenk and to them have been born these children: Emma, and C. Wallace B., who married, Feb. 21, 1901, Miss Sallie Gilbert. Mr. Todd is a Democrat, but claims the right to vote independently.

RHoads. The name of Rhoads (original spelling Roth) has been continued through many years in Berks county, Pa., whither came Mathias Roth from Germany at an early date, settling near Boyertown. In the present generation are Jonson brothers, proprietors of the "Hotel Allen," and John, Gilbert Rhoads, deputy prothonotary, both well known and highly respected in Reading.

John Rhoads, their grandfather, a grandson of Mathias and son of Jonathan, was born on the old Boyertown homestead, and after a life devoted to agriculture, died within the borough limits in the house erected by his father, Jonathan.

Dr. Reuben B. Rhoads, son of John, was born on the old Boyertown farm. He became a physician, and besides his practice in medicine, was a surgeon in the army of the Rebellion, at one time was warden of the Berks county prison, and later was burgess of Boyertown. He married Catherine Gilbert, daughter of Adam Gilbert, of Douglass township, Berks county. Five children were born to this union: Margaret Elizabeth, who died at the age of thirteen years; Ben Jonson, proprietor of the "Allen House"; Laura, wife of Harvey Bridenbaugh; Mary Ella, wife of George Guldin; and John Gilbert. Ben Jonson Rhoads, son of Dr. Reuben, was born at Zieglerville, Montgomery Co., Pa., March 24, 1861. He was educated in the public schools of Amityville, in Berks county, and was licensed to teach under Prof. T. A. Price. For a time, he taught in some of the neighboring schools, and for a time was in Earl township, but after teaching three terms in all he directed his attention to farming, for five years engaging in that calling on his father's farm. Going then to Boyertown he assisted his father in the coal and lumber business for about five years. In July, 1893, he was appointed postmaster of Boyertown by President Cleveland, and in that office he served efficiently for upwards of five years. In 1800 he came to Reading, and his first employment was as a clerk in the Citizens Bank, a position he filled acceptably for two years. He assisted in straightening out the business of the Citizens' Bank and was transferred to the National Bank. For three months then he served as deputy prothonotary under his brother, John G. In May, 1802, Mr. Rhoads purchased the stock and good-will of the "Hotel Allen", and since then has conducted that popular hostelry with great success. He has made many improvements in the building, and brought the whole to the plane of an up-to-date, progressive hotel. The stand is well known to the traveling public, and the table bears a very high reputation.

Mr. Rhoads is a member of Reading Aerie, No. 66, E. O. E.; Metacomet Tribe, No. 416, I. O. R. M.; Junior Fire Company; Humane Association; Eagles Mountain Home Association; Berks County Retail Liquor Dealers Protective Association.

On Feb. 5, 1889, Mr. Rhoads was married to Miss Laura Weidner, daughter of Charles and Elmira Weid-er, of Amity township. They have had four children, one of whom died in infancy. The others are: L. Gertrude m. H. W. Ulrich, an electrician of Philadelphia; Carl M. is a bar clerk for his father; and John G. is a member of Reading's First Company. Mr. Rhoads is well known as a loyal Democrat, and he has long been active in the councils of his party.

JOHN GILBERT RHOADS, son of Reuben B. Rhoads, was born Jan. 17, 1865, and he received his education in the schools of his native town and in Reading high school, graduating from that institution in 1886. The next three years he spent in the coal and lumber business, after which he went to the Philadelphia Bridge Works at Pottstown, where he was engaged at structural iron work.
In 1885 he became deputy prothonotary, and in 1897 he was defeated for the position of prothonotary by one vote under the Lodge. At the end of his term he was again appointed deputy prothonotary, a position he still holds. He was elected to the school board for the City of Reading in 1907, and reelected for four years Feb. 16, 1909.

Mr. Rhoads married Clara Ritter Guldin, daughter of Jeremiah R. Guldin, and to this union were born: Mag-gie Esther, who died in infancy; and Clarence G., living in New Berlinville. The wife and mother died April 9, 1892. Mr. Rhoads married (second) in 1896, Annie May Hartenstein, daughter of Henry Hartestein. One of their children, Frederick, born of this union, died in infancy and Catherine Rhoads still survive. Mr.
Rhoads is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is very highly esteemed in Reading where his many sterling traits of character are known and appreciated.

ALBERT BRODEN, superintendent of blast furnaces of the Reading Iron Company, and one of Reading's prominent and influential citizens, was born in Sweden, April 22, 1831, and was educated at Skara College, in his native country.

Mr. Broden came to America in 1873, and located in Reading, where he has ever since been connected with railroad and iron work, with the exception of one year spent in the United States of Colombia, building blast furnaces. He also spent six months at Ogden, Utah, for Richardson L. Jones, making an experimental blast to determine the value of iron ores in the Rocky Mountains. Since 1887 he has been connected with the Hon.
George F. Baer, in the iron interests, and since that time he has been superintendent of the Reading Iron Company's furnaces, and is also manager of the Tempest Furnace.

Mr. Broden is a member of the Wyominging and Ber-sire Clubs. He is connected with St. Matthew's Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Broden through the storm and stress of American business life, for the past eighteen years, has been a notable example of the success of well-directed energy.
Cool, careful, thorough, he has mastered details and brought about results which could only have been complicated by one well equipped by Nature, and molded by experience.

F. RICHARD MEINIG, a representative business man of Reading, where he owns a well-equipped factory and thoroughly operates a large iron and iron manufacturing industry, was born near Chemnitz, Saxony, Germany, May 10, 1874.

In his native land Mr. Meinig secured an excellent education and then thoroughly learned the business of manufacturing fabric gloves, mastering every detail. In 1890 he came to America and became the foreman of the Reading Glove Company and has been foreman and foreman of the company since that time.

In 1897, the E. Richard Meinig Company erected a factory on McKnight street between Greenwich and Oley streets. It is of brick construction, four stories and basement, with dimensions of 210 x 50 ft. There has been added an addition two stories high with dimensions of 180 x 30 ft. This glove factory has the name of being the most complete in its equipment of any building of its kind in the world. Employment is given to from 700 to 800 employees, and the product is sold in the United States and in other lands, probably reaching every enlighting country. Mr. Meinig possesses a capable business acreage together with high standards of commercial life and a personal character above reproach.

In 1903, Mr. Meinig married Maria Vogt, daughter of Hans and Catrina (Horst) Vogt, also of German birth.
They have four children: Ernst, Louisa, George and Karl.

JAMES GAUMER TREFICHER, a well-known resident of Kutztown, who has for a number of years been engaged in farming in that section, is a native of Berks county, born at Treichlersville, Hessen, Germany, Nov. 1845, son of David M. and Luzetta (Gaumer) Treich-er.

There is a tradition in the Treichler family that the immigrant ancestor was Jacob Treycler, and that he came from the city of Treichlerdorf, Holland, landing at Philadelphia, Oct. 16, 1727. It is also believed that his wife was born in Amsterdam, Holland. The Treichlers originally settled in New Jersey.

Samuel Treichler, Sr., grandfather of James G., is supposed to have been the first of the family to come to Berks county, where he settled in Hereford township. It is said he came from Kintnersville, Bucks county, on a horse and ruder. He purchased the first house buildged as rafters. He followed mercantile pursuits and also engaged in the manufacture of lined coal oil, and was the founder of Treichlersville, Berks county. Born July 14, 1776, he died March 29, 1965, aged eighty-eight years, 八个 months, fifteen days. He married Maria Magdalena Mumbauer, daughter of Philip and Barbara Mumb-bauer, born May 15, 1781, died Dec. 28, 1851, aged seventy seven years, seven months, ten days. They had these children: John, Jacob, David, Samuel (born Oct. 15, 1806, died Jan. 29, 1860), Joseph, Mollie (m. Samuel Wehr), Sally, Anna, and two who died in infancy. The will of Samuel Treichler, Sr., is on file in Will Book 31, page 100.

The executors were his sons David M. and Joseph.
The following children are mentioned in the will: Jacob, John, David M., Samuel, Sarah, Mary and Joseph.

Anna Treichler (1763-1792) and Elizabeth Treichler (1768-1851), sisters of Samuel Treichler, Sr., were the second and third wives, respectively, of Jacob Gery, an early resident of Hereford township, who was married three times.

David M. Treichler, born May 6, 1809, died of Bright's disease May 24, 1875. He was a farmer and miller at Treichlersville, and successful in business. He was a Republican in politics, a member of the Reformed Church, and is buried at New Goshenhoppen Church at East Greenville, Montgomery county. Mr. Treichler was married in May, 1810, to Luzetta Gaumer, daughter of John Adam Gaumer, born Nov. 30, 1814, died Dec. 5, 1898, aged eighty-four years, fifteen days, and they had these children that have lived to the present time, viz.: Maria, born Sept. 15, 1808, married; James G. is mentioned below; Emma m. Jacob Bittenbender; Lucinda m. John Smith and died in 1888; David G. m. Maria Schantz; Caroline m. J. M. Grimley; Samuel m. Amelia Lorentz.

James G. Treichler was reared on his father's farm and attended the schools of his district and the Normal Academy at Quakertown, of which Rev. Dr. A. R. Howe was principal, and later the Macungie Academy, of which Prof. Oliver Fell was principal. In 1877 he left the farm and became a salesman for Artman & Treichler, dealers in carpets, oilcloth and woodenware, of Philadelphia, and during a period of eighteen years he was their sales manager field, and sold for the largest part of Pennsylvania and also the central part of the State. In the spring of 1895 he moved to Kutztown, the old Kutz farm, which came into his possession and which he owns to this day, and for six years his fine team carried milk in Kutztown and vicinity from his dairy. He has about forty head of Guernsey and Jersey cows, all high-bred stock, for which he paid as much as $240 a head. His farm is in the highest state of cultivation and is one of the finest farms in the rich Maxatawny valley. His was one of the first barns in Berks county to be lighted by electricity. In every detail he is an up-to-date agriculturist and he operates his land with modern, improved machinery.

Mr. Treichler was instrumental in starting building operations in the section of Kutztown north of the Sacoy creek, and since the spring of 1900, when the building boom started, more than sixty fine residences have been erected of which the Treichler mansion at the corner of Park and Treichler avenues is one of the handsomest and most modern buildings in the community. He is a director in the Building and Loan Association and was also director and treasurer of the Kutztown Park Association.

On Oct. 7, 1876, he married Anna Eliza Levan, daughter of David Levan, a prosperous farmer of Maxatawny township, and his wife, Lydia Jarrett, who had three children, viz.: Anna Eliza m. James G. Treichler; Sarah m. H. R. Nicks; Alvin lived in Reading many years, but died in Kutztown where he was born. Mr. and Mrs. Treichler have two children: Annie L. has been thoroughly educated; David L., who resides at home, assists in managing the estate. In politics Mr. Treichler is identified with the Republican party. He and his family are members of St. John's Reformed Church at Kutztown, in which he has been an elder for some years.

ERWIN C. GERY is the present proprietor of the hotel at Siesholtzville in Hereford township, Berks county, which has been in the hands of the Gery family for over fifty years. This family was established in Berks county one hundred and seventy years ago by Jacob Gery, Erwin C. Gery being a member of the fifth generation in direct line of descent from this pioneer.

Jacob Gery, born May 9, 1721, came to this country from Switzerland, landing at Philadelphia Sept. 3, 1729. He was a "captain farmer" and purchased a number of years with Valentine Griesemere, of Hereford, in Berks county, Pa. In later years, like his Biblical namesake, he married his master's daughter, Gertrude Griesemere, born May 15, 1728. Jacob Gery purchased six hundred acres of land, located partly in what is now Upper Hancock township, and partly in Hereford township, Berks county. He sold some of it, clearing the remainder, upon which he erected the necessary buildings and made many improvements. His old place is now the property of a descendant, Thomas H. Gery. The original dwelling was used as late as 1803, when the house which is at present on the place, being engaged in running a school there for a number of years. Jacob Gery understood the art of making tile, and erected a hüt and kilns for manufacturing the same, and on this account the place was known from the Delaware to the Schuylkill river as Gery's Tile Hut or "Ziegel Huette." Jacob Gery died on Feb. 8, 1802. They are buried in the old graveyard at New Goshenhoppen Church. Nine children were born to this pioneer couple: Jacob, John Adam, John, Peter, Michael, Rebecca, Elizabeth, Anna Maria and Catharine.

Jacob Gery, son of Jacob and Gertrude, was born Feb. 18, 1754, in Montgomery county, Pa., and died Sept. 18, 1828. He owned seventy-four years, seven months, seventeen days; he is buried at New Goshenhoppen Church. By occupation he was a farmer, owning a large farm. He was married three times, first to Elizabeth Lauer, by whom he had four children, Jacob, Peter, Sarah and John. His second wife, Anna Treichler, 1764-1833, he married in his third union with Elizabeth Treichler (1768-1851), sister of Anna, he had children as follows: Elizabeth, Michael, Joseph, David, Maria (or Polly) and Julia.

Michael Gery, son of Jacob and Elizabeth, was born Feb. 22, 1795, on the old Gery homestead, and died at Perryville (now Harrington) in Hereford township, Aug. 7, 1870, aged seventy-five years, five months, twenty-five days. Coming to Hereford township in 1823, he passed the rest of his life there, owning a seventy-four-acre farm at what is now Harlem, which he cultivated. He also carried on an oil mill which stood on his farm, at the source of the river, and which he operated for a number of years. He was twice married, to the first, Margaret, who died in infancy, and to the second, Rebecca, a daughter of John Griesemere, of Maxatawny township, Pa. Their marriage was on Dec. 14, 1818. In 1828, Mr. Gery married again, to a daughter of Jacob Treichler, of Maxatawny township, and to them was born a son, Jacob C. Gery, who died in infancy. To his first wife was born a daughter, Rebecca, who married Henry B. Ewing, of Maxatawny township. Later, Mr. Gery married two times more, and had three children by each marriage. He was a most industrious and successful man, an able farmer, a prominent member of the community, and was engaged in various lines of business, and was a director of the Maxatawny Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which he had been for many years. He was a public-spirited man, ever ready to aid the community in any way, and was a member of the board of directors of the Maxatawny Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was a director of the Maxatawny Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of which he was a director many years, and the family has been represented on the board of directors up to the present time. Michael Gery retiring in favor of his sons, Charles N. and Charles, in 1859, his son Charles N. retiring in favor of his son, Erwin C., who has been a director of the company since 1890. Michael Gery and his son and grandson have been chosen many times as county and State delegates in their connection with this concern. The grandfather was a man of medium height, but stout, commanding in appearance, and much respected among his friends and acquaintances. He was twice married, first to Sally Nuss, born March 7, 1796, died July 25, 1844, aged forty-nine years, four months, eighteen days, and they had a family of twelve children, six sons and six daughters: Daniel, Ephraim, David (1820-1884), Charles N. (1824-1879), Charles, Sarah, Franklin, Caroline, Matilda and Michael. By his second wife, Elizabeth (Moll), he had two sons, Milton M. (who is an auctioneer) and Jacob M. Michael Gery and his family were German Reformed members of Huff's Church, where he is buried.

Charles N. Gery, son of Michael, was born Oct. 28, 1824, and was married to Mary A. Fell, daughter of Charles N. and Mary A. Fell, of Maxatawny township, Berks county. He was less than a year old when his father settled in Hereford township, Berks county, and there he received his education, attending the old parochial schools then in vogue. Remaining upon the farm until he was eighteen, he then entered the store at Henningsville, in Longswamp township, Berks county. In 1845 he moved to Siesholtzville, where in partnership he kept the store for one and a half years, after which they conducted the store at Harlem (then Perryville) for eight years. and a half years, at the end of that time dissolving partnership. Returning then to Siesholtzville he again commenced keeping store there, and he has been interested in that business ever since, the firm now being Gery & Moll, as it has been ever since he admitted his son-in-law, William M. and six children were born to them: (1) Malinda m. William B. Moll, who is mentioned elsewhere in this work. (2) Sally Ann m. Alfred Schall, and is deceased. (3) Erwin C. is mentioned later. (4) Allen G. is mentioned elsewhere. (5) Cassie Ann m. Dr. J. L. Roth, of Red Hill, Montgomery Co., Pa., and is deceased. (6) Mary M. is a professional nurse, at the State Hospital for the Insane, surgeon at Coopersburg, Pa., where he is also the proprietor of the "Vanness Hotel." Charles N. Gery and his family are Reformers members of Huff's Church, which he served as treasurer for fourteen years.

Erwin C. Gery was born Dec. 2, 1832, and has passed practically his whole life in Exeter township. He received a thorough education, which was begun in the township schools and continued at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown (where he was under three principals, Profs. John S. Ermentrout, Horn and Scafeef), the Seminary at Kulpsville, Montgomery county, and the Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which he was graduated in 1875. His boyhood days were spent in Siesholtzville, where he clerked in his father's store from the time he could be of any use, also assisting in the hotel and upon the farm. After graduating from the business college he clerked in the store until the age of twenty-two he left there and entered the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and after three years came to Reading, where he was for the same period of time proprietor of the "Bridgeport Hotel." On the passage of the Brooks high license law he closed the hotel and started coal, flour and feed business. In 1894 he erected the fine business building which he now occupies and continued the business, adding a stock of fancy groceries.

Mr. Gery even as a boy had opinions as to public matters. When he reached man's estate and went into business for himself this characteristic became more marked, and the wisdom that came with experience, personal and by observation, these combined, began to attract the attention of his friends and neighbors on account of their soundness. At thirty he was in Reading's common council, where for two terms his voice was heard and respected in the framing of ordinances for the betterment of the city. This was back in 1887-88. Again in 1894 he became a member of the city's legislative body, this time as alderman from the Fifteenth ward, and was serving his fourth term. Though a Democrat in political faith, Alderman Snyder does not allow politics to enter into questions upon which he is called upon to vote in the councils of the board. In national, State and county affairs he is however, a practical man, believing thoroughly in the efficacy of Democratic principles and their application.

Unlike many leading men, Alderman Snyder takes a lively interest in religious affairs. He is a working member of the St. Mark's Reformed Church of Reading, for the past ten years has acted as treasurer. During the building of the splendid $55,000 church edifice in which the congregation now worships. Mr. Snyder was a member of the Building committee and disbursed the funds, calling forth the thanks of his church brethren for the satisfactory manner in which that part of the work was done.

In the business world Alderman Snyder is regarded with a similar respect. He is the first past president of the Pennsylvania Retail Coal Dealers Association, and now secretary of the Retail Coal Dealers Association of Reading. Since the death of his father he has been treasurer of the Oley Turnpike Road Company. He is also a member of the fraternal organization known as the F. O. O. F. of America.

On July 6, 1881, Mr. Snyder married Sarah H., daughter of John G. Brower, of Boyertown, a contracting carpenter of that place. To this union have been born three children, as follows: Elmina, born 1888, wife of John D. Bear, of Reading; William B., born 1887, in business with his father; and John LeRoy, a student in the public schools.

The life of Alderman Snyder has been one of earnest endeavor for the advancement of society in general and Reading in particular, and he is now enjoying the merited esteem of a host of friends, who delight to do him honor on all proper occasions.

ISAAC F. MARCH, late one of the most respected citizens of Birdsboro, where he had been prominent in the business world and active in the town government for many years, was a native of Philadelphia, born there July 6, 1841.

Early deprived of his parents he was reared by relatives near Pottstown. As soon as he was old enough to learn a trade, he was sent to a grist mill near Amityville, there to acquire such knowledge as would enable him to be a first class miller. For many years he worked at the Livingood mill on Ironstone creek, and later he operated March's Mill on the Manastawny near Pottstown, and for about five or six years similarly engaged in the lumber and coal business, but in time gave it up and opened a line at Bridgeport under the firm name of I. F. March & Son. At the end of a few years he sold out to his sons, who still carry on it under the name of I. F. March's Sons.

During the last three years of his life he had a number of interests, and among the positions he held may be mentioned: president of the Alabama Coal, Mineral and Lumber Company, of Cordova, Ala.; general manager of the Berks Coal Company, of Jasper, Ala.; president of the Watts Creek Felico Coal Company of Wofford, Ky.; director of the Electric Coal Company of Dighton, Ala., vice president of the First National Bank of Birdsboro.

Mr. March was always a busy man, but like most busy men he kept constantly on the alert for anything that affected the interests of his community. He was keenly interested in public affairs, and was active in the work of the Democratic party. In 1891 he was elected treasurer of Berks county, and served a three-year term. He also served three years as a trustee of Birdsboro, being the first Democrat to win that honor after the two parties had named candidates or changed from the former method of naming tickets. He was connected with the Birdsboro Electric Company and Friendship Fire Company, No. 1. He had been a member of and an official in the Amityville Lutheran Church, and after locating in Birdsboro joined St. Mark's Church. He was prominent in Masonic circles, and also belonged to several benevolent societies. He was a member of the Democratic party, and was eminently successful; as a citizen he was enterprising, progressive and public-spirited; and in his home he was friendly and social with a host of warm friends. He died Jan. 13, 1900.

On Sept. 14, 1861, by the Rev. George F. Miller, Mr. March was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Livingood, daughter of Matthias and Elizabeth (Reimart) Livingood, of Amityville. She survives him, and still makes her home in Birdsboro, where she is greatly beloved for her many kindly deeds. The children born of this union were: (1) Matthias m. (first) Sallie Ludwig, and had two children, William and Dethel; (2) Lilla M. Keiger, who bore him five children, Russell, Anna, Ellsworth, Robert and Henry. (3) Irvin m. Annie Knabb, and has one child, Paul. (4) Isaac m. Anna Nagle, and has three children, Ralph, Sylvan, and A. Flicht. (5) DeKalb m. Harri- son Koch, and has five children, Sarah, Ruth, Esther, Isaac and Henry M. (6) Morris m. Ida Herflicker (no issue). (7) John died at the age of five days. (8) Linton m. Leah Hoffman and has one child, Linton E. (9) Mary F. m. John R. Haws, and has one child, John M.

JAMES B. FUNK, miller near Clayton, in Hereford township, Berks county, was born Jan. 17, 1845, in Washington township, this county, and has lived at his present place, on the Butter Valley creek, since 1873. He is a son of Philip H. Funk and grandson of Rev. Henry Funk.

(i) The first of the Funk family to come to America was Henry Funk, who emigrated from the Palatinate or from Holland in 1719, and settled in Franconia township, Montgomery county, Pa. He built a mill along Indian Creek, and also carried on a large farm. He was a deep scholar, and was well educated for the times, and was the author of two books which passed through several editions. His greatest work probably was what he did in connection with Diehlman Kalb, he supervised the translation from Dutch into German of "The Martyrs Mirror," a great historical work on the Mennonites, 1,512 folio pages, which was printed at Ephrata, Pa., in 1748, and was the largest work published in Colonial times. Henry Funk was a member of the Palatinate and bishop of Mennonite Church. He died in 1760. By his wife, Anne Meyer, he had ten children—four sons and six daughters—one of the sons bearing the father's name, Henry (2).

(ii) Henry Funk (2) son of Rev. Henry, was born in Montgomery county, Pa., about 1733. In 1786 he moved to Virginia, and in 1788 he emigrated to Pennsylvania, where for many years he was a Mennonite minister, but during the Revolutionary times, he took the part of Congress and the American people, and for this he and his adherents were expelled from the Mennonite communion. However, he was again welcomed, and married and had three children—six sons and three daughters.

(iii) Jacob Funk, son of Henry (2), was born in 1761, and died in Chester county, Pa., in 1817. He, too, became a minister in the Mennonite church. He married Barbara Showalter, and they had thirteen children, all of whom except Jacob accompanied their father to Virginia.

(iv) Jacob Funk, son of Rev. Jacob, was born in 1787, and died in 1836. He became a Mennonite minister in Hereford, now a part of Washington township, Berks county. He married Mary Hoch, and they had six children, among them a son named Philip H.

(v) Philip H. Funk was born in Washington township, near Schuylkill county, and in his earlier life taught school in Lancaster county, but later engaged in farming. He was a Mennonite, and was buried at the Hereford meeting-house at Bally. His wife was Anna Bechtel, daughter of John Bechtel, and they had two children—Ephraim and James B. After the death of Philip H. Funk his widow married Jacob Johnson, by whom she had three children: Ephraim; Abraham, who died at Reading, where he was a well-known dentist; and Milton, of New Berlinville, Pennsylvania.

(vi) James B. Funk, son of Philip H., was born in Chester township, Berks county, where he was engaged at the Cemmer school, at Clayton; and the fifth and last term at Huber's Church, in Montgomery county. Having been reared upon the farm, he turned to agricultural pursuits when he settled down after his marriage, which occurred in 1868, and for three years rented land at Clayton, in 1873 coming to his present home. Here he has since carried on both farming and milling with much success, proving himself to be a man of substantial business ability. He now owns a farm consisting of 135 acres of fertile, productive land, formerly the homestead of David Clemmer, who erected the present stone house upon the place in 1857. Mr. Funk has made a number of improvements during his ownership, including an addition to the barn, and has added to the value of the place. At various times he operated the engine house by David Clemmer during the forties, but the engine house was added by Mr. Funk. His establishment enjoys a large patronage, the proprietor being noted for his integrity and honorable dealings. He is an influential and esteemed citizen of his locality, held in the utmost respect, and his fine home and family would be a credit to any community.

Mr. Funk is a progressive citizen, as shown by his connection with various enterprises affecting the general welfare. He has been treasurer of the Hereford Turnpike Company since 1893, and is a member of the Clayton Butter and Cheese Company, of which he was one of the organizers when it was first organized, and since its organization, and is treasurer of the board of directors, which consists of five members. He has been a school director of his township for many years, and is still holding that office. He was elected on the Republican ticket.

In 1860 Mr. Funk married Susan Clemmer, daughter of David (Clemmer) of Eastman's. They had six children who have been born to them, as follows: Oswin assists his father; Ambrose is in Pendleton, Oregon, where he is at present serving as deputy sheriff; Horace is a respected public school teacher in Hereford township; Warren is a student at Colorado Agricultural College; and the Mennonite minister in Janigir, Central Provinces, India; and Cora, unmarried, is at home. Mr. Funk and his family are members of the New Mennonite Church at Bally, in which he is a faithful and active worker and is at present serving as deacon.

HOWARD E. HARBERST, who makes his home at No. 128 West Oley street, Reading, is a representative of one of the city's oldest families. He was born March 2, 1861, in Reading, son of William and Ellen (Matthews) Harbster, the former the founder of the Reading Hardware Company.

Mr. Harbster received his education in the schools of his native city, and when a boy entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Works, known as "Harbster's." In the fall of 1877 he entered a preparatory school to make himself ready to enter Yale College and remained there for four years, two of which he spent in his father's business. In 1881 he left Eastman's Business College, after graduating from which, in 1884, he again found employment with the Reading Hardware Company, working in the various departments of this great enterprise until after his father's death, in June, 1885. In 1886, in company with his brother, Frank, he engaged in the brass foundry business at the old Keystone Hardware Works, Tenth and Muhlenberg streets. There he continued for a short time, when he purchased his brother's interest, and conducted the enterprise alone until 1889, when he took as partners Miller M. Deem and George Tyson, the firm continuing under the firm name of Harbster & Co. The plant was then removed to Ninth and Bingaman streets, where the company added the manufacture of novelties and specialties and in 1890 Mr. Harbster organized the National Brass Works with H. K. Getz, president; H. E. Harbster, vice-president, and general manager; Charles Peacock, treasurer; W. B. Deem, superintendent of the machine department; and Joseph S. McConnell, bookkeeper. The company continued on the old grounds until 1892, when the site of the present plant was purchased and the buildings erected. Mr. Harbster continued with the company until 1893, when he sold his interest and engaged in the brass foundry business with William Fline at Second and Beach streets. This they continued until 1897, and in this year Mr. Harbster engaged in business for himself on South Front street. Later, in company with George Miller, Mr. Harbster started the plant now occupied by Dick Brothers, but sold this to engage in the foundry and platers' supplies business. Mr. Harbster is considered one of the most influential business men of Reading, and he is possessed of much executive ability. He is a member of Reading Lodge No. 549, F. & A. M., and Wyoming Council, Royal Arcanum.

Mr. Harbster married Mary A. Kline, of Reading, and to them have been born two children, Wilson H. and Elizabeth. Mr. Harbster is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, while Mrs. Harbster attends the Reformed Church.

REV. J. J. CRESSMAN. On Normal Hill, on the western borders of the flourishing borough of Kutztown, resides the Rev. J. J. Cressman, one of the best known and best loved Lutheran clergymen of eastern Pennsylvania. Like most of the ministers of the Lutheran faith in this State, Rev. Cressman is of German descent. His great-great-grandfather came to America from Saxony about the year 1735, and settled in Philadelphia county, where he spent what of life remained to him. At that early period family records were either poorly kept or wholly neglected, and consequently little is known concerning this early ancestor, his first name even being lost in obscurity. It is known, however, that he had a son Frederick Cressman, who died July 4, 1787, and a daughter who died Dec. 5, 1787. On Feb. 24, 1781, Christian had a son born whom he named John, and who early in life removed to Northampton county, where he died Feb. 14, 1853. This John Cressman had a son named Abraham, who became the father of Rev. J. J. Cressman.

Abraham Cressman was born in Lower Mt. Bethel township, Northampton county, Feb. 1, 1817. In 1840 he moved to Moore township, near Petersville (living there the rest of his life). He died Nov. 8, 1893. His first wife was Lydia Frutchey, who bore him eight children, and died July 4, 1870, at the age of fifty-four years, four months, nine days. His second wife was Catharine Elizabeth Smith, who bore him two children. Four of the sons of the first marriage entered the ministry of the Lutheran church, three of whom are still living, the Rev. J. J. Cressman being the eldest of the three. The fourth to enter the ministry died suddenly Oct. 6, 1898, while pastor of the first Lutheran church of Ridgeway, Pa., and his remains are buried at Bethlehem.

Rev. J. J. Cressman was born in Moore township, Northampton county, Jan. 10, 1841, and was baptized in the Friedelville Church on July 25th of the same year by Rev. W. F. Mensdorff. His boyhood was spent upon the farm, his father's farm, where he was engaged in the toils and pastimes adapted to his strength. On reaching the required age he was sent to the district school where he soon became known for his studious habits and good conduct, qualities that all through his scholastic career were marked characteristics. Rev. Dr. F. A. Muhlenberg, Professor of Greek in Pennsylvania College, said of him: "Rev. Cressman was one of the best students I ever had." At sixteen he took a course of catechetical instruction under Rev. Augustus Fuchs, and by him was confirmed in Immanuel Lutheran Church near Petersville, Northampton county. He next sought employment at teaching and for several years taught in the public schools of Moorestown and Flicksville with very gratifying success. For the purpose of attaining a higher education, and to prepare himself for the sacred calling he had in view, he then quit teaching and entered an academy at Weaverville under the management of Prof. Savage. After spending a year in Prof. Savage's academy he entered the Collegiate Institute of Easton, Pa., of which Mr. Cressman was principal and Selden J. Coffin, D. D., one of the instructors, and under them completed his academic course. In the fall of 1860 he entered the freshman class of Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, and graduated from that institution in the summer of 1864. This college being situated near the theatre of the great Civil war, and for a time actually enveloped by the conflict, he pursued knowledge under distracting circumstances. When the Confederate invasion came in 1863 he and many of his fellow students enlisted in Company A, 36th regiment of Pennsylvania Militia, and under General Couch assisted in the defense of the State. Their regiment was one of the first commands upon the ground and participated in the early stages of the battle of Gettysburg, and a large portion of the regiment was captured. Young Cressman was captured by the Confederates. Their caps, coats and shoes were taken from them, and after being paroled, they were marched, bareheaded and barefooted to Harrisburg, by way of Shippensburg and Carlisle. Exhausted and suffering from hunger and exposure, they were sent from Harrisburg to a parole camp near West Chester. From these hard conditions young Cressman broke away, and as quickly as he could he made his way back to Gettysburg to look up the personal effects he had left there. These consisted of a lot of books, some furniture, a new suit of clothes, a valuable watch and the money which was intended to cover his school expenses for the year. With the exception of two or three books and a few pieces of furniture, all these articles were gone. The loss to him was very serious and embarrassing, but though sorely discouraged he wasted no time brooding over his misfortunes.

Although a paroled prisoner his sense of duty did not permit him to remain idle in face of the awful wreck of broken homes and ruined lives. He went to the provost and volunteered to assist in burying the dead—blue and gray—and to re-inter such as had been only partially buried. This gruesome work done he returned to his home in Northampton county, but soon after reaching there was stricken with typhoid fever and became dangerously ill. For four weeks he hovered between life and death, and four months elapsed before he was able to resume his studies at Gettysburg.

While at college and in the seminary he made good and proper use of his vacations. He permitted none of his time to go to waste, employing it all either tutoring, selling books, working on the railroad, or improving his experience. James Smith, a contractor on the Lehigh and Susquehanna railroad, is an interesting episode in his life. Applying to him one vacation for employment he was put to work at a bridge building at Penn Haven. After working five days he was promoted to the foremanship of a gang of carpenters to construct a depot and other buildings in the vicinity. His daily wages were $3.65 and although he paid at the rate of $21 a month for board and had other expenses besides, he in six weeks saved the round sum of $100, almost enough to see him through a year at college.

After graduating from college he entered the newly established theological seminary and is now located at Mt. Airy, Philadelphia. He was one of that institution's first regular students, and his name was enrolled upon its records before it afforded proper accommodations for the young men who came eagerly to seek the pure Lutheran doctrine at the blessed fountain of its learned faculty, consisting of Drs. C. F. Schaeffer, C. P. Krauth, W. J. Mann, C. W. Schaeffer and G. F. Kretol.

Upon completing his course at the seminary he was ordained to the ministry by the Synod of Pennsylvania at Lebanon in 1867. He then received an unanimous call from a parish at South Easton, and accepting it labored there for a number of years, for the most part teaching in the Sunday school and preparing the congregation for the subsequent building of a new church. He also actively interested himself in education, and was instrumental in founding the South Easton borough high school, of which he was elected the principal, a position he held continuously for six years. In this capacity he originated the system of having the principal and made superintendent of the borough schools, which, with his church work, gave him almost a greater amount of labor than he had time and strength to perform. Doing double duty in this way, he found was impairing his health, and in the fall of 1876 he resigned both his school positions and his pastorate. He now resides in Kutztown, in the capacity of a tutor and editor of the Kutztown Record. This he was allowed to enjoy but a few months, as prominent members of St. John's Church at Kutztown and Friedens of Bernville—then comprising one charge—tendered him an urgent call to come and minister unto them. He hesitated to accept as the two churches were twenty-two miles apart, and to attend to their wants properly involved much travel and an incredible amount of labor. But with the understanding that better arrangements should be made within a year or two he accepted and entered upon pastoral relations which continued for twenty-four years without alteration, and in part still exist. In the spring of 1901 he resigned the pastorate of Friedens church at Bernville, leaving its congregation with a new church edifice, built a few years before, completely furnished and paid for, and with money in its treasury. Since resigning the charge he has given himself exclusively to St. John's Church at Kutztown. Here also his zeal and energy have borne good fruit, and with his good people here he feels very much at home. The present St. John's Church edifice he had the honor of helping to finish in 1877, and with the assistance of Rev. J. S. Hermann, the Reformed pastor, to dedicate; and with the assistance of Rev. J. H. Leinbach (successor to Rev. Hermann) he collected the money needed to liquidate the debt remaining unpaid at the time of its completion, and to make subsequent important improvements. The church building presents a fine appearance, is in splendid condition in all its details, elegantly furnished, and the organ, one of the finest in the county and one of the finest in the world. Its congregation never wearies in well doing, and is warmly attached to the pastor who watches over its spiritual welfare.

The Rev. Mr. Cressman's pleasant home on Normal Hill was built in 1866, with the assistance and liberality of his good people. Besides being convenient and comfortable it is neat and attractive. The house is surrounded by a yard and garden, 112 feet front by 350 deep, partly donated by his friend and neighbor Charles Deisher. Every tree, vine and shrub, as well as every post in the fences and railings, was raised by the Rev. Mr. Cressman on his own hands. Both in theory and practice he is a disciple of the strenuous life, but busy as he has been and hard as he has worked his career is dotted full of pleasant incidents which he loves to recall and dwell upon. Among these are the receptions tendered him by his people at South Easton in April, 1867, and at Bernville in March, 1877, and the party given him on his sixty-fifth birthday by the members and friends of his Kutztown charge. These fondly treasures as marks of the appreciation of his labors, and for their comforting influence he gives God the praise.

At the South Easton reception a valuable gift was thrust upon him, no informing anyone of the fact, and was an amusement to all who were present, and also a topic of conversation in the community for some time. As the large party was about to be invited to adjourn to the dining room, the pastor happened to look out of the window noticed that one equipage had not as yet been cared for. It consisted of a beautiful sorrel horse and a fine buggy, perfectly new. No one in the company seemed to know to whom it belonged, but the good pastor insisted that the horse should be put up and fed before he would sit down to dinner. This evoked broad smiles all around the room, and to allay his anxiety he was finally informed that the gift was to him. He stated that the horse had lately been fed, and could easily wait until after dinner when his new owner could take formal possession of him and test his qualities. He was also informed that if agreeable to him the horse could be kept in the stable of one of his good members and cared for free of charge. The generous donation touched the loved pastor deeply and his face illumined with a smile that was the delight of all present.

The Rev. Mr. Cressman is a great lover of books, and owns one of the finest private libraries in Berks county. It comprises over 1,500 volumes, some very rare and of great value, and he has them so carefully arranged and is so familiar with their order that he can find almost any volume he desires in the dark. The books are all housed in well constructed and costly cases, planned by the owner himself, and constructed under his immediate supervision.
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

On Aug. 27, 1865, the Rev. Mr. Cressman was married to Emma C. M. Walter, of Allentown, and they have six children, as follows: Charles F. S., who holds a civil service position at Greenville, Pa.; Krauth H., who is superintendent of an Indian reservation at Naper, Nebr.; John L., who resides at Harrisburg, and is a railway mail clerk on the Pittsburg and New York; Abraham L., who is connected with the cement business at Nazareth, Pa.; Benjamin F., a teacher at Macungie; and Esther Lydia, who married John D. Wink, and has two sons, David Deshler and Charles Frederick.

Although devotedly attached to the Lutheran Church, his home is in Heidelberg township, and he is a stock edifice, and caring faithfully for his own flock, Mr. Cressman is tolerant and liberal with those who hold religious views at variance with his own. He in no wise interferes with other people's business, and avoids giving offense, aiming to be just and fair in all the relations of life, with words of good cheer and a smile for all. His mission in life is to do good to his fellow men, and this he endeavors at all times to fill.

REV. FRANKLIN KRICK HUNTZINGER, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Church at Reading for forty years, was born in West Cocalico township, Lancaster county, May 18, 1890. The family name is Krauth, Huntzinger and Leah Krick his wife, of Lower Heidelberg township, in Berks county.

His great-grandfather, John George Huntzinger, emigrated from Germany in 1749, having taken passage on the ship "Jacob" from Amsterdam and been qualified on Oct. 2d, of that year. He became a resident taxpayer of Brunswick township, beyond the Blue Mountain, then in Berks county, where he carried on farming until his decease in 1802. He had nine children: Six sons—Jacob, George, John, Henry, Michael and Daniel—and three daughters—Rosina, Molly and Catharine. His son Michael located in Heidelberg township, Berks county, and carried on farming near Brownsville until his decease in 1845. He left a widow and seven children: Three sons—Jared, Daniel and William—and four daughters—Anna, Harriet, Catharine, and Mary.

The eldest son, Jared (the Rev. Mr. Huntzinger's father), was born March 27, 1815, in Lower Heidelberg township, near Brownsville, and was there reared on his father's farm. In 1843, he removed to West Cocalico township, Lancaster county, and was there engaged as an undertaker and carpenter for three years, when he returned to Berks county, and purchased a farm near Wernersville, which he carried on successfully until his decease, Dec. 27, 1892. He was a liberal-minded man and always showed an active interest in education and other public affairs. In 1840, he married Leah Krick, a daughter of Peter Krick and Anna Hill, his wife, of Spring township, and they had twelve children: Eva m. Reuben T. Landis; Elizabeth m. (first) Richard Grossman, and (second) Jacob Hassler; Amelia; Franklin K.; Benjamin K. (whose sketch and portrait appear in this publication); Mary m. Daniel Hertzog; William became a merchant in Indiana; Amanda m. Daniel Stuber; John m. Mary Krick; Adam m. Mary Gensemer; Henry m. Elizabeth Hemminger; Emma, who married Mr. George M. Huntzinger, and seven brothers and sisters. He died Dec. 27, 1892, aged eighty-five years. The parents were devoted members of the Lutheran Church at Sinking Spring, in which Mr. Huntzinger filled various offices for a number of years.

The fourth son, the subject of this sketch, was two years old when his father removed from Lancaster county to Berks county. He received his preliminary education in the district school, and at the Reading Classical Academy (which was conducted by Prof. D. Brunner) and the preparatory institutions maintained under the auspices of the Lutheran Church for the education of ministers until the opening of the University of Pennsylvania, and was admitted into the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia. He pursued the prescribed course of studies with great earnestness for three years, and was graduated on May 19, 1869, and ordained as a minister a week afterward in Trinity Lutheran Church at Reading.

Shortly before this time, the Trinity Lutheran congregation had organized a Sunday-school in the northeastern section of Reading (Ninth and Green streets) with a view of establishing a congregation there, and the people of that vicinity, having come to appreciate the character and work of the pastor, desired to have a church building. He accepted this call and the result of his endeavors was very successful, for he founded a church which has flourished until the present time, and of which he has continued to be the devoted pastor, a continuous period of forty years. In 1868-69 a large two-story and two-story and one-half storey brick edifice was built in the site of the chapel by the congregation, and in this the members have continued their worship until the present time. The membership is about seventeen hundred. The attendance at the services has always been uniformly large on account of the pastor's popularity. The church services were conducted by him in a German, third language (Sunday morning in the German, and evenings in the English) until December, 1907, when he began to preach in the German language only every other Sunday morning, on account of the increasing demand for preaching in the English language.

From 1869 to 1884 Rev. Mr. Huntzinger also served as the pastor of the Cocalico Lutheran Church, in Spring township; from 1870 to 1876 at Friedens Church, at Lehurtville, and at St. Paul's Church, near Hamburg; from 1873 to 1897 at Alsace Church, at the northeastern boundary of Reading; and from 1874 to 1904 at St. Peter's Church (Becker's), in Richmond township. All the congregations of these several churches were served by Rev. Mr. Huntzinger while serving St. Luke's at Reading.

He has baptized over eight thousand children, officiated at nearly four thousand funerals, and solemnized nearly three thousand marriages. He also took great interest in the establishment of the Lutheran Orphans Home at Toppenish, in October, 1896, and became one of the first trustees, serving since then as such trustee, and also as the president of the board since 1897.

In 1869 Rev. Mr. Huntzinger married Mary M. Hassinger, daughter of John Hassinger and Catharine Birch, his wife, of Reading, and they became the parents of two children: Ida Catharine, who died at the age of twelve years, and Charles Henry, who died at the age of fifteen years. In all Mr. Huntzinger's labors as a clergyman, Mrs. Huntzinger has given him her warmest sympathy and most effective co-operation, to which he attributes a considerable share of his ministerial success. Mrs. Huntzinger's father was George Hassinger, and her mother (daughter of Charles Birch) died in 1890, aged seventy-nine years.

In 1887, Mr. Huntzinger's health having become impaired, his congregation granted him leave of absence, and he made an extended trip to Europe for recreation and recuperation during a period of three months. He was accompanied by a personal friend, George Eltz, and they together visited Ireland, Wales, England, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and France. In 1897, he made a second foreign tour, visiting the northern and central portions of Germany, the land of his ancestors.

In 1903, in company with Mr. Edwin Boote (cashier and vice-president of the National Union Bank of Reading), he spent a month visiting Jamaica, one of the West Indian Islands. In 1905, with Mr. Boote again as a companion, he made a third journey to Europe, covering five weeks, they having visited France, England, Holland and the Rhine country, and they again in 1907, during July and August, traveled abroad, visiting Sweden, Denmark and Germany. On the fifth day of the trip going (which was a Sunday) Rev. Mr. Huntzinger was invited to conduct religious services, and in appreciation of his most interesting sermon a large audience raised a subscription money which, for his suggestion, was presented to the South Holland Life Saving Association.

Rev. Mr. Huntzinger took a sixth trip abroad by visiting, from Jan. 22d to Feb. 3d, 1909, a number of the West Indian Islands (St. Thomas, Porto Rico, Haiti, Santo Domingo, Grenada, Dominica, the Bahamas, Martinique, J. K. Huntzinger.
Cuba, Jamaica); Venezuela and Panama, where the construction of the canal was going on and in two hours passed from the waters of the Atlantic ocean to the waters of the Pacific. While inspecting the canal he met the distinguished party of President-elect Taft. On way home he had the extraordinary pleasure of wittnessing the Presidential reception of the battle-ship "Cleveland and the whole fleet passing his ship, the "Ocean," on both sides within speaking distance. During the homeward journey on the vessel, Mr. Huntington was invited to hold religious services on Sunday, Feb. 21st, and on that occasion the audience, comprising over three hundred passengers (who had come to know that he had been pastor of St. Luke Lutheran Church at Reading for forty years), openly said that they could well understand how a pastor of such ability and pleasing address should continue his ministration to a single congregation for so long a period of time.

JEREMIAH DIEROLF, burgess and one of the leading citizens of Bechtelsville, Pa., was born in Pike township, Berks county, Sept. 23, 1851, son of George, grandson of Adam and great-grandson of Andras.

(1) Andras Dierolf, the ancestor of the family in America, is found in 1782 already settled in Earl township, Berks county, then a peninsula, and his residence, the house in which he was born, is still in Bechtelsville.

(2) Andras Dierolf died in 1804, in the Revolution. His will, which he made Jan. 10, 1803, is on record in Will Book 4, page 262, in the Berks county court-house.

Andras Dierolf died in December, 1804. His children were as follows: Peter; Henry; Adam; John; Abraham; Abraham; Elizabeth, wife of Philip Endi; Catherine, wife of John Day; and Christiana, who died before her father, her child, Elizabeth, being mentioned in Andras Dierolf's will. The executors of the will were Peter Dierolf and John Fayer.

(3) Adam Dierolf lived in Pike township, back of the Hill Church, where he is buried. He was a Lutheran member of that church. He was born Nov. 1, 1812, and died Jan. 12, 1875. His wife, Margaret, was born in 1771, and died in 1841, in her seventieth year. They had these children: Rebecca m. George Fraunheiser; Maricha m.
John Moyer; Betzy m. Adam Shenkel; Adam; George;
Andrew had children as follows—John, Levi. William, Abraham and Caroline; and Charles had children as follow—James, Adam, Charles, Lizzie, Mary and another daughter.

(4) Adam Dierolf, son of Adam and father of Jeremiah, was born Dec. 1, 1803, lived near Hill Church in Pike township, and was a shoemaker by trade, also cultivating his own small tract of land. He died Sept. 29, 1884, and was buried near his home in the Hill church. His wife, Amanda, was Elizabeth Fraunheiser, daughter of John Fraunheiser.
She was born in 1812 and died in 1890. They had these children: John F.; Polly, widow of Wendell Bassinger, a native of Germany; Elizabeth, widow of Percival Heydt; Jeremiah; Jacob; Samuel; Adam and Catharine.

(III) Adam Dierolf, son of Adam and brother of George, married Polly Moyer, of Pike township, and they had the following children: Adam, John, Jacob, Mary, Kate and Sally. Shortly after his marriage Adam Dierolf moved to Clarion county, Pennsylvania.

(IV) Jeremiah Dierolf son of George, was reared in the township in which he was born, and attended the district schools, until twenty. He early became acquainted with farm life, and learned all its details. About 1887 he embarked in a tailoring business at Bechtelsville, and followed it twenty years. He employed as many as thirty people, having a pay roll larger than that of any other man in the township. He was not a capitalist, but it was the fact that he had the reputation of being the fair and just man in the community, and his work cut by houses in Philadelphia and made up in Becht-svilie but returned to Philadelphia. Mr. Dierolf was very successful in this business. He has a fine peach orchard covering seven acres in Colebrookdale township, and one of nine acres in Washington township. The family residents and farmers all around are a constant source of com-tact, of which he is the leading citizen, and most influential man in politics. He is a Democrat, and served the board the greater portion of the time. He is chief burgess of Bechtelsville and is interested in the best enterprises of the town. Fraternally he is a member of Lands-ville Council, No. 1007, O. of I. A. He and his family are consistent members of the Lutheran denomination of Hill church, where many of the Dierolfs are buried.

On July 14, 1877, Mr. Dierolf was married to Mary Ann Fry, daughter of the late Isaac and Maria (Diers).
Fry, of Distant township. Their children are: Henry, who is a farmer in Washington township; Annie married Charles Moyer, and lives at Bechtelsville; Gertrude mar-
rried Rev. Aaron L. Brumbach, of Spring Grove, Pa.; Clara died in infancy; and John is an operator for the Pennsylvania Railroad. The family are well and favorably known throughout Berks county, and are entitled to claim with just pride of what he has accomplished in his long and useful life.

(IV) John F. Dierolf, son of George and brother of Jeremiah, was born April 29, 1835, at Kummers Mill in Washington township, and now resides in Colebrookdale township. He was reared to farm life, and is a laborer. He makes his home with his son John H., in Colebrookdale township. He and his family are all members of Hill Church. He married Leah Heydt, daughter of Jacob Heydt, of Washington township. She died in 1906, aged seventy-four years, four months and fifteen days, and was buried in Hill cemetery. Their children were: John; Amanda m. Henry Meitzler; Jacob resides at Reading; Dianah m. Addion Muther, of Boyertown; and Mary Ann,
Elizabeth and George are all three deceased.

DR. ALBERT RIGGS DURHAM, a well-known druggist at Reading, Pa., holding especially close relations with the citizens of that place by his untiring efforts on behalf of the Reading Library, in which he was serving as librarian, as well as secretary and treasurer of the board of the original company, devoting to that cause a whole-hearted zeal to which was largely due the flourishing condition of the institution, died in 1896.

Albert R. Durham was born in the village of TANKannock, Wyoming Co., Pa., in 1842. His father, a merchant, was seized with the gold fever and in 1850 went to California. He died on his way home three years later, born out by the exposure and hardships he had undergone. Left an orphan at this early age, the boy's youth was passed in various places, and he lived in Northern New Jersey, Schuylkill county, Pa., the Wyoming Valley and at Davenport, Iowa. In the latter place he saw real frontier life, for at that time the only railroad to the West stopped at what is now Rock Island, Ill., and on the banks of the west side of the Mississippi river Indians were camped.

In 1857 Dr. Durham, then fifteen years of age, settled in Reading for what proved to be a permanent residence.
He was admitted to the high school on a special examination, and three years later was graduated at the head of the class of 1860. During this period he began writing for the Reading newspapers, and finally drifted into the office of the Gazette, and later of the Schuylkill Journal.
During the Lincoln campaign he also did a great deal of reporting for the Leader. His first experience in library work was also gained at this period and aroused the deep interest in the subject from which later Reading was to profit so much. In the latter part of his high school course he was librarian of the library there, and his work was so satisfactory that shortly after his graduation he was chosen to take charge of the Reading Library. This institution had up to this time passed through various charts and shaped for itself a place in the political life of the city when Lee invaded Pennsylvania, joining Company C, 42d P. V. I. In both cases he received honorable discharges.
Returning to Reading in 1868, he began studying pharmacy under Dr. J. K. McCurdy, and he was ever afterward engaged in that business, his career covering about thirty-eight years. For the greater part of that time he was alone, but for nearly eleven years he had been in partnership with Dr. McCurdy, at No. 16 South Fifth street. Dr. Durham belonged to the Berks County Pharmaceutical Association, and was for two years its president. He was also a member of the latter organization from its inception. He was one of the few druggists who by law are entitled to use the prefix "Dr." to their names.

When the Reading Savings Bank closed its doors in 1877, the Reading Library was involved in its failure, because the president of the bank was also president of the Library Company, and held all its property in his own name as trustee. Dr. Durham promptly began a canvass among the stockholders of the Company, enlisting its friends in an attempt to save it, and came to a meeting called for the purpose of reorganization, with proxies enough to elect a board of directors, whose plans and patient labors have since culminated in the great achievement of establishing the library firmly upon its own feet. From that time on until his death Dr. Durham was not only chosen secretary and treasurer of the board, but was made librarian. From the date of his installation there was no halting in the progress of the Free Library movement. The time was ripe, and there were many friends able and willing to assist in the work. The result is more than gratifying, and within the last two years the number of pupils drawing books has risen to over 15,000 while there are now over 10,000 books in the library, in addition to about 6,000 government publications, a collection gathered in a special room on the third floor. Dr. Durham was well read and conversant with a number of languages, and was comforter to the literature of all countries. He was often called the "Father of the Public Library of Reading."

Dr. Durham was married Feb. 9, 1869, to Miss Sarah Ann McCurdy, daughter of his late partner. In the year after their marriage eight children were born to them, five of them now deceased—Ann Blythe, John McCurdy, Elizabeth Riggs, Caroline Rose and Sallie McCurdy. The three who survive are: Helen, Mrs. Frederick C. Heckman; Marian; and Donald Blythe, an instructor in Mt. Tamalpais Military Academy, San Raphael, Cal. Dr. Durham served for many years in the first Protestant Reformed Church, a member of the choir, and for some time choir master. He belonged to the Reading Choral Society, Reading High School Alumni, Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., Pennsylvania Library Club, and the Keystone State Library Association.

JOHN S. SCHAPPELLE, a resident of New Berlinville, Berks county, was born July 23, 1858, in Greenwich township, son of Jesse Schappelle. He is a member of a family long and numerously represented in the county, and accounts of its early history and origin will be found elsewhere. Here we give only the direct line of John S. Schappelle.

(1) According to the tombstone inscription at Zion's Church, in Perry (formerly Windsor) township, Jeremiah Schappelle was born in 1715, and he died Oct. 15, 1804. According to the האמריקאיس دنكد دنكن جيريمي, he was married April 17, 1749, and he died June 8, 1801. The will of Jeremiah Schappelle is on record in Berks county court-house in Will Book A, p. 505. It was made Feb. 11, 1803, and probated Jan. 7, 1805. At the time the will was made he was a resident of Windsor township. The following children are mentioned in the will: Ebenezer (who was made executor of his father's estate), Matthias, Jeremiah, Magdalena and Dorothy. In the cemetery at Zion's Church is a tombstone bearing the following inscription: "Elizabeth Schappelle, wife of Jeremias, formerly of Deitschland, born Feb. 16, 1771, died July 9, 1817, aged forty-six years, five months, twenty-three days." This probably refers to the wife of Jeremias or Jeremiah, son of (1) Jeremias.

Earlier forms of this name were Schappelle, Chappelle, Schobb and Shobel, but it is now more commonly found Schappell, Schappell and Schappel.

(II) Jacob Schappell, son of Jeremias, was better known as "Jockey, a nickname evidently taken from the German pronunciation of his name, meaning young man, and he was born in Germany, Feb. 2, 1744, and he died Sept. 11, 1826. As stated above he was the executor of his father's will in 1804. His wife Susanna was born Feb. 2, 1751, and she died July 24, 1828. They are both buried at Zion's Church. Jeremias, Eberhard and Jockey Schappell were descendants of the original Zion's founders. Tradition says Jacob and Susanna reared a large family, some of their children, however, dying in infancy and childhood. Of those of whom there is record may be mentioned: Peter, born April 19, 1770; Col. Jeremiah, born March 20, 1774; Daniel, who was a taxable resident in Manheim township, Schuylkill county, in 1782, a son of a family and where his descendants still live; and Hannah, who married George Hoffman, a farmer of Perry township.

There is a valley in Perry township known to the residents there as Schappells Dale, because of the many Schappells living there.

Peter Schappell, son of Jacob and Susanna, born April 19, 1770, died Nov. 18, 1851. He was a farmer in Windsor township, and he and his family all belonged to Zion's Church, and are buried in the cemetery there. He was twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth Lenhart (1768-1790), and his second Annie Kosch (1778-1841). His children were: Jacob located in Schuylkill county; Benjamin died young; Daniel settled in Schuylkill county; Samuel settled in Windsor township; John settled in Richmond township, Berks county; Mary m. William Miller; Kate m. Martin Eisenhaut; Elizabeth m. Jacob Boyer; a daughter m. Anthony Adam; and Solomon.

Jesse Schappell, son of Peter and Annie (Kosch), was born in 1790 and died aged forty-eight years. By trade he was a weaver, but he also worked on farms in Windsor township. He married Sarah Heffner, daughter of Jacob and Beckie (Dietrich) Heffner, and they had issue as follows: John; Betsey m. Moses Miller; Benjamin died young; John (2); Simon died aged seventeen years; Jesse became a farmer of Perry township; Mary m. Jacob Levan; Ann m. Isaac Hardinger; Kate m. (first) Henry Kemmerling and (second) Samuel Trautman; and Samuel settled in Albany township.

(V) Jesse Schappell, son of John and Sarah (Heffner), was born in 1832 and in 1851 he went to Windsor township July 17, 1839. When quite young his father sold his farm, and the boys were sent away from home for some time, one of the stipulations of the contract being that young Jesse should be sent to school for a period of nine months, but when reckoning was made it was found that he had secured less than eight months' schooling. During this time he learned to read and write German fairly well, which education he had ever received. Mr. Schappell and his wife are devoted Christians and regular attendants at the U. B. Church in Shoemakersville. On Dec. 14, 1850, Mr. Schappell married Elizabeth Shiffler, born Jan. 18, 1832, daughter of Reuben and Susan Appen (Angey) Shiffler. To them have been born the following children: P. S. Shappell; William H. died in infancy; Joseph W. lives at Danville, Ill.; Alfred H. is of Virginville, Pa.; John S.; Sarah died unmarried, aged forty-three years; George Washington resides at Allentown; Samuel D. settled in Arkansas; Charles R. lives at Danville; D. O. is of Centreport, Pa.; and Sevena Andora died in infancy.

(VI) John S. Schappell attended the public schools of Windsor township until his parents moved to Perry township, where he went to school until he was fifteen years old. He was reared to farming, and when twenty-one years of age he commenced to learn stone-cutting, with D. H. Leeser, then of Boyertown, now of Wernersville. He remained in Mr. Leeser's employ for six years, after that in 1884 engaged in business on his own account at Boyertown. After continuing the business very successfully for seventeen years he sold out to W. S. Shollenberger, and subsequently lived retired for a brief period, owing to poor health. He then entered the employ of H. L. Minter, of Pottstown, working for him five years. In 1896 he bought the fine residence at New Berlinville where he now lives, though he is engaged in the establishment of Horace Storb, in Pottstown, as marble and stone cutter. He is in close touch with affairs and one of the substantial citizens of his locality.

On Nov. 1, 1884, Mr. Schappell was married to Clara L. Stauffer, daughter of Jacob B. Stauffer. No children have been born to them, but they have an adopted daughter, Ida M. Schappell, daughter of Charles K. and Alice Stauffer of Pottstown, who has been brought up as a daughter since she was five months old. She is at present a student in the Myerstown College, at Myerstown, Pa., taking the full college course, and is especially talented as a musician.

Mr. Schappell and his family are consistent and active members of the United Evangelical Church at Boyertown, Pa., and he was formerly a working member of the church at Pottstown, serving as steward and trustee during his residence at that place. He is liberal in his support of the church and religious movements generally.

WILLIAM M. CROLL, county treasurer of Berks county and junior member of the well-known clothing firm of Heffner, Gilbert & Croll, of Reading, Pa., was born April 9, 1866, in Upper Macungie township, Lehigh Co., Pa., son of Martin S. and Elizabeth (Grim) Croll.

William M. Croll received his early education in the public schools of Berks county, and was subsequently supplemented by the Keystone State Normal school, and the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He taught school for one year, but in 1889, in company with William H. Smith, engaged in the mercantile business at Rothrocksville, Berks county, this firm continuing in existence until 1897, when Mr. Croll formed a partnership with D. A. Heffner and John W. Gilbert. The firm of Heffner, Gilbert & Croll are the largest dealers in clothing and gentlemen's furnishings in this section of the State. The business was first conducted at No. 528 Penn street, whence in 1904 it was removed to the old Illig stand, larger quarters being necessary, and here it has since continued. Mr. Croll is a thoroughly capable business man, as are his partners, and the firm enjoys the confidence and patronage of the entire community. He is also secretary and treasurer of the Berks Coal Company, at McCalla, Ala., and in January, 1909, was elected a director of the Berks County Trust Company.

In 1889 Mr. Croll married Miss Emily E. Earhart, and while at Rothrocksville served as postmaster for the Maxatwany postoffice. On April 11, 1908, he was nominated for the office of county treasurer by over 3,800 majority over the next man, and by 1,091 over the other four candidates together. At the election in November following he was elected by 6,859 majority, about 3,000 ahead of the National ticket.

In 1889 Mr. Croll married Miss Annie M. Muhns, daughter of L. F. Muhns, proprietor of the "Arlington Hotel," at Slatonng, Pa., and two children have been born to them, John J. and Mary Elizabeth Muhns.

Michael Keith, the grandson of Michael K. Keith, married a Miss Harting, and their children were: Michael; Daniel m. Susan Blankenmill; Christian m. Catharine Hatt; Samuel m. Sarah Leininger; William; Rachel m. Jacob Keith; and Susan never married.

WILLIAM GARBER ROWE, who has been prominently identified with the mining interests of the country for a period covering thirty-five years, was born in Reading, Sept. 16, 1849, son of William Rowe and grandson of John Rowe, a native of England.

John Rowe was an expert mining engineer, and traveled all over the United States, and opened copper mines near Shannonville and Phoenixville, Pa., then went to Australia to operate gold mines, and finally to Brazil, where he died of yellow fever, when fifty-two years of age. He was known as one of the most skilled engineers and prospectors of his time.

William Rowe, son of John, as born in England, and came to America with his father when fourteen years. He always engaged in the mining business, and, like his father, was very successful. He traveled through Cuba and Australia, and in 1849 went to California to engage in gold mining. He opened the first iron ore mine of the Eastern Pennsylvania valley, which was very successful, and he likewise operated in Berks, Lancaster and Chester counties. He was very skilled in his profession, and was known as one of the leaders thereof. Mr. Rowe died April 3, 1906, having been for twenty-five years retired. He married Julia V. Vache, who survived him and resided at No. 1040 Penn street, Reading, until her death, February, 1907. They had four score years of age. To Mr. and Mrs. William Rowe were born: H. T., engaged in plumbing on Penn street, Reading; Thomas M., a druggist; Mrs. T. B. Maurer, of Long Beach, N. J.; Mrs. A. F. Smith; Misses Mary M. and Jane A., at home, and William Garber.
William Garber Rowe attended the schools of Reading, and under his father's instructions became skilled in mining. He has been actively engaged in that occupation since 1871. For seven years he was superintendent of the Edwin L. Company, and operated the mines in Orange county, Va. He was for ten years at Barto and operated the Rods mines at Boyertown, and was superintendent of the iron ore mines for the Reading Coal and Iron Company. In 1901 Mr. Rowe, knowing the value of the ore deposit in the location of Boyertown, bought the mineral rights including the Phoenix near California mine, the Warwick, Gable No. 1 and Gable No. 2, and the Lewis estate, in all covering over 300 acres in fee simple and mineral rights. They are a continuation of the large Cornwall ore beds in Lebanon county, Pa., and next to them for quantity thus far discovered, the largest deposit in the Boyertown Ore Company. They have title to the mineral rights under Boyertown from one end of the borough to the other. Since 1902 this company, of which Mr. Rowe is general superintendent, have conducted the mining operations, and they have on hand large quantities of ore and are shipping daily.

Much trouble was caused in the operation of these mines in the past, and one of the most exciting of the experiences was that of 1887, when William Garber Rowe and George F. Baer were operating the Rods mine. A cofferdam was located between this and the Phoenix mine, and a large section of the latter was cut away from the vein of ore, and, as was alleged, broke through this dam and continued this drift into the Rods property. One morning at 7:30 o'clock, Mr. Rowe received a telegram at his home in Reading, stating that the Phoenix miners were trying to take possession of the Rods mine. He at once consulted with his partner, then drove his trotter to Boyertown, covering the distance in one and one-half hours. Upon reaching the scene Mr. Rowe went underground and found the men in his mine. All were arrested and taken before Squire Schoenley, of Gablesville, and held under bail for forcible entry. The case was taken to court and Mr. Rowe won.

The most complete plant is the Gable No. 2 mine. The shaft house is of structural iron, making it perfectly fireproof. There is a double-acting first-motion engine of 300 horse power. Since Mr. Rowe assumed charge of the mine larger tanks have been placed in the shaft, and these 1,000 tons of water are elevated each minute, day and night, thus controlling the coming water from all the mines. The company proposes to install a new plant at the Warwick shaft similar to that at the Gable No. 2, and thus opening up the operations which have been lying idle for twenty years. Mr. Rowe also has mines at Gardner, Lehigh county, and Siesbottsville, Berks county.

Mr. William Garber Rowe married Zipparah E. Bechtel, daughter of Abraham B. Bechtel, and she died in January, 1881, leaving two children: William A., who was associated with his father in mining operations until his death, Aug. 6, 1908, when thirty-two years of age; and Miss Leonore, at home. In politics Mr. Rowe is a Republican. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Reading, and resides at No. 1156 Franklin street, that city.

REV. JONAS O. HENRY, pastor of the Topton Lutheran parish, is the great-grandson of John Adam Henry, who came to America from Germany and settled near Wanamakers, in Lynn township, Lehigh Co., Pa., and later resided on a farm about one-half mile south of Lynnport, Lehigh county. He was a farmer by occupation.

Joseph Henry, son of John Adam, was born on the family homestead in Lehigh county, Dec. 14, 1810. His home was near Lynnport, Lynn township, Lehigh county, where he died July 5, 1871, and was buried at Jackson- ville, Pa. He married Miss Judith Kistler, who was born April 14, 1806, and who died May 24, 1879, and was in- terred in Jacksonville. They were blessed with eight children, five sons and three daughters, as follows: Daniel K.; Moses m. Sabina Long; Jacob m. Rebecca Koenig; Benjamin m. Sarah Greenawalt; Charles m. Sarah Schlenker; Katherine m. Elias Wagaman; Florence m. Reuben Ebert; and Angelina m. Elias Denglcr.

Daniel K. Henry, son of Joseph, was born Feb. 18, 1836, in Lynn, township, near Lynnport. He followed agriculture as his life work in Lynnport Valley. He died April 5, 1901, and was laid to rest at New Jerusalem Church in Albany township, Berks county. He married Miss Sarah Wagaman, born Dec. 7, 1856, in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, died April 2, 1881; she was laid to rest at New Jerusalem Church. This marriage was blessed with nine children, five sons and four daughters, namely: Harrison, a farmer near Jacksonville, m. Delia Snyder; Joseph, a carpenter at Kutztown, m. Rosa Hollenbach; Monroe, a carpenter at Lynnport, m. Emma Hollenbach; George, a farmer at Rising Sun, m. Missouri Kemmerer; Jonas O., of Longswamp township; Rosa m. Lewis Snyder, of New Tripoli, Pa.; Cordelia m. Wilson Snyder, of Pleasant Corner, Pa.; Sarah Jane m. Amandus C. Oswald, of Rising Sun, Pa.; and Lizzie M. m. William Sechler, of Hynemansville, Pennsylvania.

Jonas O. Henry was born March 2, 1874, at Stein's Crossing, Lehigh Co., Pa., and was reared on the home farm and received his early education in the local schools. For three years he taught school and later entered Muhlenberg College where he was graduated in June, 1899. He completed his course in theology in the seminary three years later, and on May 26, 1902, he was ordained a minister of the Lutheran faith in St. John's Church at Easton, Pa. On the last Sunday in November of the same year he was installed by Rev. G. F. Speiker, D. D., and Rev. H. S. Fegley, as pastor of the Topton Lutheran parish, consisting of St. Peter's, Topton, St. Paul's, Fleetwood and Christ (of Rockland township) Churches to which charge he has faithfully ministered ever since.

JEREMIAH MOLL D'URK, who has been warden of the Berks County Prison since 1904, was born in Maiden-sreek Township, Oct. 1, 1857, and received his education in the public schools of the township and at the Keystone State Normal School. He then served as a clerk in general stores at Molltown and Schaefferstown in Berks county for four years, and conducted a store for himself at the latter place for two years. While residing at Schaefferstown he officiated as the assessor and tax-collector of Jefferson township for six years, and he was also elected one of the justices of the peace of that township on the Democratic ticket. In 1896 he filled the position of deputy county treasurer, and in 1897 and 1898 served as a clerk in the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company. While filling this last position the board of supervisors of the county elected him clerk of the prison and his services proved so highly satisfactory that upon a vacancy occurring in the position of warden in July, 1904, they elected him to serve out such for the unexpired term. His management of the prison affairs until the following December having been very successful, the board elected him for the succeeding term of one year, and his continued superior management has led to his annual unanimous re-election until the present time, notwithstanding his adherence to the Democratic party. He is now serving his sixth term. The grand juries of the county and the State Board of Public Charities have frequently commended his management of this public institution.

In 1881, Mr. DeTurk married Catharine S. Stetzler, daughter of Jacob Stetzler, farmer of Perry township, and Esther Shappell, his wife. They have six children: Elder (m. to Sallie Lieb), Herbert, Jeremiah, Elmer, John and Elmer. Mrs. DeTurk has been the matron of the prison since her husband's incumbency as the warden, and the management of her department has been equally commendable. The family is connected with the Reformed Church. He has been a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle for twenty years, having joined the Castle at Schaefferstown while residing there.

Mr. DeTurk is a lineal descendant of Isaac DeTurk who located in Oley township in 1712, as one of the first settlers in that section of the county. His father Jeremiah was a son of Abraham, who was a son of John, who was a son of John, who was a son of the immigrant.

The father was born in Exeter township in 1817, but was reared in Maiden-creek township on a farm which he afterward came to own and operate in a successful manner for thirty-five years. He died in 1891. He married Catharine Moll, of the same township (born 1817, died 1881), by whom he had ten children: Sarah (m. to Solomon Stoudt); Amos (m. to Louisa Deisher); Ellen (m. to Allen Moser); Mary and Catharine (single); Jeremiah M.; Esther (m. to William C. Dries); and three who died in infancy.

Jacob Stetzler (Mrs. DeTurk's father) was a son of Daniel Stetzler and Catharine Hoffman, his wife; and Daniel Stetzler was a son of Martin, all of Perry township. Jacob Stetzler's wife, Esther Shappell, was a daughter of Jeremiah Shappell, of Perry township. [See genealogy of Shappell family in this publication.]

Mr. DeTurk's mother was a daughter of David Moll of Maiden-creek township, who died in 1857 leaving eleven children: George, John, Daniel, Samuel, Peter, Catharine (above), Lucy (m. Charles Coleman), Elizabeth (m. Peter Adam), Diana (m. William Yerger), Lydia (m. William Hieter) and Mary (m. Henry Buchard). And her grandfather was Michael Moll, farmer of the same township, who died in 1810 leaving a widow Anna Margaret and eight children: John, Daniel, Michael, Henry, Peter, David, Catharine (m. Samuel Ely, Jr.) and Susanna.

LEMUEL STEWART, M. D. (deceased), who practised medicine and surgery at Reading from 1848 to 1853, was born near Stouchsburg, Berks Co., Pa., Sept. 1, 1815, son of Jacob Stewart.

Jacob Stewart was of Scotch Ancestry. He married a daughter of Conrad Weiser. They were old and respected farming people of Berks county, and their children were: Rebecca m. Adam Ulrich; Priscilla m. Mr. Miller; Ursilla m. a. Mr. Royer; Clementine died unmarried; William was accidentally drowned at Hagerstown, Md.; and Lemuel.

The early education of Dr. Lemuel Stewart was secured in the common schools, but later he pursued higher branches at St. Mary's College at Emmitsburg, Md., where he became a convert to the Catholic faith. Dr. Stewart was an unusually brilliant man, was thoroughly versed in English literature, and spoke and wrote other languages fluently. He was a brilliant writer of both prose and poetry, and at his early death left many works of high merit. A large part of his medical papers were written in French. One of his medical books, which is widely known, bears the name of "The Physician and the Public." He was graduated in medicine at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and his certificate was signed by Professor Jackson. On numerous occasions Dr. Stewart addressed both literary and medical societies, and he was always listened to with the respect and admiration which his learning and oratory commanded.

Dr. Stewart married Angeline Smith, daughter of George and Margaret (Bright) Smith, granddaughter of Frederick Smith, Judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and great-granddaughter of Johan Frederick Schmidt, born Jan. 9, 1747, and died May 16, 1812. Dr. Stewart and wife had two children: Margaret, who died aged three years, and Katie, who became the wife of John Nolan, and at her death left three children: James Bennett, Angela and Mary E. Mrs. Stover is a member of the Catholic Church. Dr. Stewart died in 1853 at Reading.

HENRY STOYER, manufacturer of paper boxes at Shoemakersville and Fleetwood, Berks Co., Pa., who has been placed prominently before the public in business and political life, was born Oct. 14, 1848, at Hamburg, this county, son of Samuel F. Stoyer.

Samuel Stoyer, of Greenwich township, grandfather of Henry, married Catherine Focht, of Windsor township, and to this union there were born children as follows: Samuel F.; Benneville m. Catherine Raubenhold; Daniel m. Anna Miller; Elizabeth m. Jacob Kepner; Hannah m. William Kepner; Catherine m. John Billman; and Salli m. William Deisher.

Samuel F. Stoyer, son of Samuel and now of Bethel township, where he has been a farmer for thirty years, was born and reared at Hamburg. He married Catherine Weidner, daughter of Jonathan Weidner, and to them were born twelve children: Henry; Susan m. Andrew Schmelzel; Franklin m. Mary Schreck; Sarah m. John Peiffer; Charles m. Clara Moore; Caroline m. Warren F. Kline; Amanda m. George Snyder; Ida m. Samuel Strauss; Anna m. Charles Strauss; Samuel m. Clara Resh; Joel m. Mame Reber; and John died in infancy. Mr. Stoyer received his education in the public schools of his native place, upon leaving which, while still a boy, he assisted at butchering and store-keeping until his twentieth year, then going to Centreport, where, after serving as a clerk in the butchering business for two years, and for four years in the general store of James A. Koller, he engaged in the huckstering business for nineteen years. While engaged at the latter occupation, Mr. Stoyer came to know the whole northwestern section of the county, and his acquaintanceship afterward was afterwards of great political assistance to him, for in 1893 he secured the nomination for county commissioner on the Democratic ticket, and was elected. He served in this important county office for a term of three years, from 1894 to 1897. Upon the erection of the borough of Centreport, in 1884, Mr. Stoyer served in the council for three terms, and also in the school board for the same period; and when his name was on the Democratic ticket for election, there was no nomination against him on the opposition ticket, he receiving the unanimous vote of the electors, an exceptional honor.

Upon assuming the office of county commissioner, Mr. Stoyer removed to Reading so as to be able to devote all of his time to the interests of the county, and he served his term with great fidelity to his trust. At the expiration of his term, he served as collector of ward and county taxes for four years. In 1905 he purchased the Acme Paper Box Factory at Shoemakersville, and in 1907 he purchased the Fleetwood Paper Box Factory which he has been operating successfully to the present time. He manufactures all sizes of paper boxes, which are supplied to the mills in the village and vicinity. He retains his residence in Reading, traveling to and fro daily in operating his business.

Mr. Stoyer married Catherine Dunkel, daughter of Jacob Dunkel, of Upper Been township. She died in 1879, leaving of her three children: Sallie (m. W. P. Brown). Mr. Stoyer mar., (second) Annie Schiffer, daughter of Reuben Schiffer, of Perry township, and to this union were born: Katie HENRY B. LEVAN is descended from Hugenot ancestry. His great-great-grandfather, Daniel Levan, fled from France to Amsterdam, Holland, during the time when the Hugenots were persecuted. He was married in France to Marie Beau.

Isaac Levan, son of Daniel and Marie, emigrated from Amsterdam, Holland, and located in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., in about 1730, being one of the first settlers there. He was engaged in farming until the latter period of his life, when in 1770, he moved to Reading, Pa., where he died in August, 1786. He and his wife, Mary Margaret, had the following children: Abraham, Isaac, Daniel, Jacob, Mary (wife of Peter Feather) and Judith (wife of Samuel Weiser).

Jacob Levan, Sr., son of the emigrant, was born at the old homestead in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., about 1736 and died there in January, 1814. He was engaged in farming all his life. He was married to Susanannah Ludwig, and had the following children: Abraham, Daniel, Jacob, Margaret (m. first) Peter Rightmeyer, (second) John Wollison, Judith (m. Henry Leese), Susanannah (m. John Stitzel), Elizabeth (m. Samuel Kurst), Mary (m. Henry Werner), Hannah (m. Godfrey Kershner), Catherine (m. Jacob Goodman), and Sarah (m. Adam Stitzel).

Jacob L. Levan, Jr., grandson of the emigrant, Isaac Levan, was born at the old homestead in Exeter township, Jan. 1, 1784, and died Jan. 1, 1853. He was married to Catherine Fegeley, of Richmond township, Berks Co., Pa., and they had the following children: Isaac; and Anna, who m. Capt. Henry Schaeffer.

Isaac Levan, son of Jacob L., was born at the old homestead in Exeter township, July 21, 1816, and died Jan. 7, 1857. He was married (first) to Rebecca Brumbach, daughter of Jacob Brumbach, and (second) to Louisa Wein, daughter of Henry Wein. His children were as follows: William, Jacob, Isaac, George (deceased), Henry B., Daniel (who died in infancy), and Rebecca (m. John Knorr).

Henry B. Levan, son of Isaac and Rebecca (Brumbach) Levan, has for nearly a quarter of a century been postmaster at Lorane, Exeter township, Berks county, where he has been engaged in a general merchandise and hotel business. He was born in Exeter township June 29, 1859, and was educated in the public schools. After the death of his father he went to live with Joseph Levan, his guardian, with whom he remained until nineteen years of age, when he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, as telegraph operator. He spent about eleven years in that employment. In 1883 he purchased property in Lorane, where he has since been located in business with the exception of two years. In addition to his mercantile business Mr. Levan has also dealt extensively in coal and feed, has served as postmaster since 1853, with the exception of the two years that he was out of business and has done much toward making Lorane the hustling, enterprising village that it is. He has always been esteemed and respected by his fellow-citizens, who recognize and appreciate his many sterling qualities of character. In politics he is a Democrat, while fraternally he is connected with Reading Lodge, No. 62, F. & A. M.

In 1883 Mr. Levan was married to Isabella Ganser, daughter of Joseph Ganser, of Reading, and she died in 1893, when thirty-seven years of age. She was the mother of one child, Harvey Ralph, who is employed by his father in the store. Mr. Levan is a member of the Schwartzwald Reformed Church.

EZRA S. HASSLER, a prominent merchant and influential citizen of Wernersville, Pa., where he has resided for fifteen years, was born June 27, 1854, in Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, son of Philip and Sarah Ann (Seidel) Hassler.

Philip Hassler, great-grandfather of Ezra S., lived in the vicinity of Friedensburg. His wife was a Miss Shofer or Shaffer, and their children were: William, of Friedensburg; Mrs. Sally Roemer, of Kutztown district; Mrs. Moses Sarig, who moved West; and Jacob.

Jacob Hassler, grandfather of Ezra S., was born in Berks county in 1801, and died in 1875. He attended school in Reading, while the only school building was a log house, and in early life lived near the Oley line, where he owned a small farm. He was also a cabinet maker by trade, and this he followed at his house, which was situated on the Reading road two miles from Friedensburg, working until his retirement, when he removed to Reading and there died. He is buried at Spies' Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. He married (first) Elizabeth Fox, by whom he had children as follows: Eliza, Benjamin and Isaac, all of whom died young; Philip; Jonas died at Milton, Pa.; Sarah m. Adam Schadel, and died of small-pox; Susan m. Daniel Hartman, and died in May, 1903; William lived at Yellow House; Amos died at a Soldier's Home; and two died in infancy. Mr. Hassler m. (second) Mrs. Judith (Lukens) Mohler, and they had two children, and this union: Mary Ann, of Reading, m. (first) Israel Rauenzahn, and (second) William A. McDonough; and Louisa m. (first) Albert Herbine, by whom she had one son, Harry, and (second) William Merkel, now also deceased.

Philip Hassler (Hassler), father of Ezra S., was born Aug. 6, 1839, in Oley township, and died in Ruscombmanor township, March 11, 1880. He was a cabinet maker by trade, and also engaged in farming, owning a tract of about thirty acres of land. For a number of years Mr. Hassler was a constable of his district. He is buried at Pricetown. Mr. Hassler's wife, Sarah Ann Seidel, was born at Hamburg, Pa., Nov. 2, 1828, and died in Ruscombmanor township, May 18, 1895, being also buried at Pricetown. They had these children: Ezra S.; Wellington S. resides at Akron, Ohio; and Emma A. m. Albert Evans, of Berks Co.

Ezra S. Hassler attended the common schools of his native locality until reaching the age of seventeen years, and in 1873 was licensed to teach school by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner, subsequently teaching in Pike and Richmond townships, Berks county, for two years. He then learned telegraphy from William Schantz, of Blandon, Pa., and was appointed station agent at Reinholds Station, Lancaster county, where he remained for a period of thirteen years. During the latter year of his service with this company he was also engaged in the mercantile business at Reinholds, but in 1887 removed his business to Spring Grove, Lancaster county, where he continued with much success for five years, being also the postmaster at this point during President Cleveland's administration. He came to Wernersville in 1892, and erected his present building, 31 x 88 feet, two stories high, with a frontage of fifty-three feet on the main street. He has the leading mercantile establishment of the town, and carries a complete, up-to-date line of general store, strictly cash business and enjoying the confidence of the community. Mr. Hassler is a Democrat in politics, and has been greatly interested in public matters in Wernersville, and has served as postmaster thereof for four years, during Cleveland's second administration. Fraternally he is connected with Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., which he joined in 1878; Royal Arch Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M., which he joined in 1886; and DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, K. T., which he joined in 1892. He

Mr. Hassler married (first) Oct. 13, 1876, Adaline K. Menterz, of Stevens, Pa., born Nov. 27, 1835, who died Aug. 31, 1878, leaving one daughter, Bertha May, born July 29, 1877, who died April 28, 1882. Mr. Hassler m. (second) Catharine E. Bucks, daughter of David and Ellen (Hain) Bucks, and they have two children: Ralph B., born at Reinholds Station, Jan. 6, 1887, is assisting his father in the mercantile business and on his own account is conducting the musical department in the same estab. as a student at Wernersville High school, class of 1905. Mr. Hassler's daughter, Ruth Irene, was born Aug. 9, 1897.

BERTHOLD J. IMHOFF. Reading has among her distinguished men, Berthold J. Imhoff, artist, decorator and frescoer, a man of genius who thoroughly understands his art and makes a specialty of church and mural decorations. On Jan. 14, 1868, Mr. Imhoff was born in Mannheim, Germany, and was there educated, beginning to learn the painter's trade when only fourteen years of age. For three years he served an apprenticeship, then worked for others for another three years, when he entered the College of Oberwinter where he took a course in graining and marble work. Once more he resumed working for others to gain sufficient money to carry out his ambition, and was called back to his native church at Halleshörden-Halle. On leaving school he became foreman for a large decorating firm, and received large compensation for his work. Still he was not satisfied, but entered the art institute at Karlsruhe, Baden, where he studied art in his higher forms, and in March, 1893, he landed in America and located in Ohio, where he worked for five months, then returned to Philadelphia where he believed there was more appreciation to be found for his excellent work. While in that city he was in the employ of Sima, and did some of his best work. Once more he crossed the ocean, and locating at Pforzheim, Germany, he engaged in business for himself. There he remained until 1900, and during that time he entered, in 1898, the academy of art at Düsseldorf. Selling out his business in America, he returned to his native land. In the spring of 1904 he returned to America, this time locating at Reading, and purchasing a valuable property at the corner of Eleventh and Green streets he has established himself in a very large business and is recognized as the leader in art circles. His studio is 18x42 feet and is specially arranged with regard to light and space. Five artists work under his direction.

While Mr. Imhoff is so well known as a decorator, he is also an artist and one of his most famous paintings is the Death of St. Joseph. The painting is 7x10 feet, and the group includes St. Joseph, the Blessed Virgin, Jesus and a ministering angel. Being a devout Catholic Mr. Imhoff has handled the subject reverently as well as artistically, with a due regard to coloring and background which makes it a masterpiece. Another notable painting by this man of such diversified talents is Jesus in the Temple, 4x6 feet. He has upward of one hundred others, suitable for churches and private residences, and all display his wonderful power and his skill at figure work.

Mr. Imhoff has frescoed over one hundred churches since his return to Pennsylvania, among which may be mentioned: St. Stephen's Reformed; St. Luke's and Trinity, Lutheran; Salem Evangelical, of Reading, while Columbia, Lebanon, Slatington, Phoemixville, Tamaqua, Allentown, Pottsville, Wilkes-Barre, Williamsport, Hazleton, York, Philadelphia, Mahanoy City, etc., have had him do frescos of homes for religious worship. Mr. Imhoff has also decorated the Academy of Music, Masonic Temple, the residences of Ferdinand Winter, Mrs. Catherine Archer, John Hendel, Rev. Father Bornemann, Mr. Isaac Frey of Douglassville, Pa., and Mr. Sternbergh, of Reading, etc.

Some of Mr. Imhoff's masterpieces are to be found in St. John's Catholic church at Pottsville; St. Mary's Catholic church at York; German Catholic church at Hazleton; Catholic church at Williamsport; Trinity Lutheran church, Reading; Lutheran church, Hananyo City; Baptist church, Reading; Spies's Union church, Alsace township; Reformed church, Hazleton; Lutheran church, Myerstown; and St. Paul's church, Reading. Of all these, St. Paul's church, Reading, is his masterpiece. The architecture of the church is Romanesque, and this necessitated rich colors and heavy ornamentation. Above the main entrance is a picture representing the parable of the Prodigal son. The center of the ceiling shows three large compositions, 12x18 feet, "The Descent of the Holy Ghost," "The Assumption of the Blessed Virgin" and "The Coronation of the Virgin," these forming the last three mysteries of the rosary, the preceding twelve being depicted in the painted windows. There are two other large compositions, "The Adoration of the Magi" and the "Death of St. Joseph"; eight panels, each containing a single figure; small medallions showing the symbols of the rosary and the instruments of the passion. The sanctuary arch, as is fitting, is marvellous in both execution and design. The main composition is 40x5 feet. In the center the risen Savior sits enthroned, and on either side and a little below him are the Blessed Virgin and St. John the Baptist. Between heaven and earth is the Holy Spirit surrounded by the cherubim. On the earth, grouped about the cross, are the apostles and evangelists, Saints Peter and Paul standing a little higher than the others. Other figures appear, all tending to bring out more fully the subject of the whole composition, "The Church of God. There are about fifty figures in all, five occupy four of the seventeen panels, and each panel is an angel, one bearing the pillar at which the Savior was scourged, and the other the spear that pierced His side, and the sponge with which they quenched His thirst. In this work Mr. Imhoff has used the best models, and his historical accuracy is above question. If he left no other work than St. Paul's, Mr. Imhoff's fame as an artist would be complete.

The delightful home of Mr. Imhoff is artistically treated, and is one of the most beautiful in the city. He has risen on his own ideas in its decoration, and tried to reproduce something of the style of the Fatherland in his own residence. That the result is artistic and very pleasing goes without saying.

In 1891 Mr. Imhoff married Matilde J ohner, daughter of Joseph and Leopoldina (Helmuth) Johner. Joseph Johner was Mr. Imhoff's teacher of painting at Bonn dorf. To Mr. and Mrs. Imhoff have been born these children: Alexander, Hubert and Berthold, who were born in Germany and are now deceased; Rosina; Paul, deceased; Maria, Georgina and Katharina. The family are all Catholics and belong to St. Paul's Catholic church. In politics Mr. Imhoff is independent, preferring to vote for the best man rather than be bound by party lines.

The family history of Mr. Imhoff is rather meagre, although it is known that his grandfather was Leopold Imhoff. Among the sons of Leopold Imhoff was Leopold Imhoff, Jr., father of Berthold Imhoff, and he was an Obersjäger and lived in Karlsruhe. His wife was Rosina, and of their seven children were: Alexander, Leopold, Berthold and Max.

There are very few men in America who are so well fitted by nature and training to represent the true artistic conceptions of the people as Mr. Imhoff. Combined with his high artistic sense of the true values, he has a thoroughly practical conception of the requirements of his business, and his results fully justify his methods. Mr. and Mrs. Imhoff are the center of a circle of charmi-ing people, whose appreciation of art and higher culture makes them delightful companions, and the artist and his wife dispense to them and their other friends a delightful hospitality, that makes their home a favorite gathering place. The young people are already disposed in several directions which will undoubtedly be fostered by their parents who thoroughly recognize the value of careful training under proper instructors.

GEORGE de BENNEVILLE KEIM, one of the distinguished sons of Berks county, for many years a resident of Philadelphia on account of his prominent connection with the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, was born in Reading Dec. 10, 1831. His father was Hon. George May Keim, who for thirty years was prominent in the financial, industrial, military and political life of Reading, in which city his lineal antecedents had been prominent since 1785.

George de B. Keim received his preliminary education in the local schools and at Georgetown College, District of Columbia, and at the age of fifteen years entered the sophomore class in Dickinson College, where he was graduated in 1849. Having become much interested in the subject of chemistry, he took a practical course in law under Mr. Charles M. Wetherill, of Philadelphia, with special reference to the analysis of minerals; but after a year's study in the laboratory he decided to turn his attention to the study of law. He entered the office of Charles Davis, Esq., a successful attorney at Reading, with whom he remained two years, and on April 10, 1851, he was admitted to practice before the several courts of Berks county.

Mr. Keim found his ability recognized and almost immediately entered upon busy practice at Reading, which continued for three years, when his father induced him to remove to Pottsville, in order to look after large interests in coal lands in Schuylkill county, which were owned by his father together with Dr. William Wetherill, Jacob W. Seitzinger and others. Upon removing to that place he was admitted to practice before the courts there and he made a special study of coal land titles, and naturally many prominent coal land owners became his clients, bringing him both reputation and increased emolument. Some years later when the Philadelphia & Reading Company decided to control the coal trade by securing important tracts of land and organizing a coal and iron company, Mr. Keim's comprehensive knowledge of the situation and recognized ability were so highly appreciated that he was selected to be the company's solicitor for the purpose, and his identification with the company's affairs continued from that time, with increasing prominence, for twenty-five years.

In 1873 he was appointed general solicitor of the company, and as the offices were located in Philadelphia he removed there with his family. His professional services in the management of the law department were of the highest order, and the company retained him in this important position for eight years, until 1883, when he was elevated to the office of vice-president. Before and about this time the company was involved in so many financial difficulties and embarrassments, that it was forced into the hands of receivers and appointed three receivers, and he filled the important position with great credit for four years, when the receivership was terminated. He and his associates were highly complimented for their skill, energy and devotion in restoring the solvency of the company. In a re-organization of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, he was appointed one of the three receivers, and he filled the important position with great credit for four years, when the receivership was terminated. He and his associates were highly complimented for their skill, energy and devotion in restoring the solvency of the company. In a re-organization of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, he was appointed one of the three receivers, and he filled the important position with great credit for four years, when the receivership was terminated.

George de B. Keim, who for many years was a prominent hardware merchant and financier of Reading, was one of the incorporators in the founding and establishing of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad; and his uncle, Wirt Robinson, was on the staff of engineers who built the road.

The criminal prosecution of the "Mollie Maguires" by the Philadelphia & Reading railroad in the coal regions was a most laborious and hazardous undertaking, and the president of the company, Franklin E. Gowan, Esq., not only accomplished a brilliant success in destroying this malicious and nefarious secret society, but displayed extraordinary and with the only needed courage. In his great endeavors and final success, Mr. Keim was of much valuable assistance to him in the preparation and direction of the cases, although not publicly concerned in the noteworthy trials.

Historical matters relating to his native county and State received Mr. Keim's early attention. In 1853, shortly after his admission to the bar, he identified himself with the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, and he continued in active membership for forty years, having officiated as first vice-president from 1868 until his death, a period covering twenty-five years. He was also a member of the Sons of the Revolution; of the American Philatelic Society; and of the Society of the Finance Company of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, which he assisted in re-organizing. While residing at Reading, from 1849 to 1855, he took an interest in local matters and joined the militia and the volunteer fire department. He was possessed of a truly sociable nature, which he displayed at all times in a straightforward, unpretentious manner. He was very fond of both literature and art, and owned a large library of valuable books, while the numerous choice paintings which adorned his home, at No. 2000 De Lancy Place, gave evidence of culture and critical artistic taste. After his death, Mrs. Keim presented all of the valuable books comprising historical works of great value and numbering about a thousand volumes, to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

In 1853 Mr. Keim married Elizabeth Cocke Trevention, only daughter of Dr. Louis Cruger and Elizabeth Marion (Cocke) Trevention, of Charleston, S. C. The latter was a daughter of Buller and Elizabeth (Barron) Cocke. Mrs. Keim's father was the only child of Hon. Louis Trevention, a justice of the Supreme court of South Carolina, and his wife Henrietta Morrell (Nethercliff) Trevention, of Savannah, Ga. To Mr. and Mrs. Keim two daughters were born: Julia Mayer and Susan Douglass. The latter married William Lyttleton Savage, of Philadelphia, son of William Savage, and Sarah, of Philadelphia. Mr. Keim died Dec. 18, 1895, and his remains were interred in the Keim lot in the Charles Evans cemetery. Reading. His death elicited many testimonials of regret and condolence, which were highly complimentary to his life and character.

DREIBELBIS-DREIBELBIES. The early home of this family was in southeastern Switzerland, in the part originally a portion of the German Empire.

(1) John Jacob Dreiblebis (Dreibelbis) came to America from Hanneshwal, Switzerland, crossing the ocean on the ship "Mary" from London, and landing at Philadelphia Oct. 26, 1729. He was a passenger in a ship carrying nine male passengers over sixteen years of age, and one hundred and twenty-two women and children. It is probable that John Jacob was single. He used to say in the spring of the year, "now the Rhine is overflowing, because of the snow melting on the Alps. The exact date he settled is uncertain, but in 1743 he settled on the farm located about one quarter of a mile east of Fleetwood, now the property of Milton Shollenberger. This farm originally consisted of 157 acres, but it has since been divided into two farms, one now owned by Charles Leibelsberger. On the part owned by Mr. Shollenberger John Jacob Dreiblebis built the first set of buildings near a spring of fine water, which the Indians named "Dreibelbis spring." This spring and the stream in that vicinity live with brook trout until some time before the Civil war. John Jacob Dreibelbis was a farmer and became a very extensive land owner. In 1759 he was the largest tax payer in Richmond township, paying a federal tax of thirty pounds. On April 11, 1752, he obtained by warrant from the State two tracts of land in Richmond township, Berks county, and they were for fifty acres and the other for one hundred. On Feb. 3, 1753, he obtained a warrant for one hundred acres, and on April 12, 1753, for five hundred acres. In appearance Mr. Dreibelbis was small and of dark complexion, with black eyes and hair, indicating that he was of Jewish extraction. The Kellers, Watters, Biebers and one family of Merkles were his neighbors. He died in 1761. He married either a Merkle or a Rothermel, probably the first mentioned and daughter of George Merkle, and his six children, three sons and three daughters, were: Abraham; Martin; Jacob; Mary Elizabeth m. John Wagner; Mary Magdalena m. (second) Martin Wanner; and Phillibenna, who went with her brother Martin to Schuylkill town, m. William Koch, and her three daughters married, respectively, a Huntzinger, a Rausch and a Holler. The last will and testament of John Jacob Dreibelbis, made Feb. 5, 1761, and probated Feb. 21, 1761, is written in good English and is on record in Will Book 1, p. 46. According to his will, he gave the following to each of his daughters 150 pounds in lawful money. "My oldest son Abraham shall have all that tract in Richmond township, 157 acres." "My executors shall build a house for my son Martin on land given him lying on the Mesim (Moselem) Road. The house must be 30 feet long and 24 feet wide." "My executors shall also build a house for my son Jacob, on land bequeathed to him near the road leading from Easton to Reading." And lastly I will and do order that my younger children shall be taught to read and write. The will is signed by the testator in good legible German. The executors were Daniel Dreibelbis, Jacob Haak; Michael简直是，a son of John Jacob Dreibelbis, who was the mother of five children. He died at birth Jan. 10, 1839; the second, born Oct. 7, 1830, lived but three hours; George Washington, born Oct. 6, 1831; Maria Carolina, Aug. 28, 1833; Sarah, May 2, 1835; Daniel, Feb. 10, 1837 (lived in Kansas); Rebecca, Aug. 1, 1838 (m. Daniel Freeman, of New Ringgold); Jacob Edward, Feb. 15, 1840; Lewis Martin, Sept. 7, 1841; Catharine Maria, Oct. 7, 1845; William H., Oct. 1, 1844; Benjamin F., March 25, 1846; Joseph, April 17, 1848; Alfred H., July 13, 1850; and Sarah Louise, Oct. 24, 1851. (V) George Washington Dreibelbis, son of George and Anna, born Oct. 6, 1831, married Rebecca Sassaaman, and was among the first who settled in the vicinity. He had three children: Henry, of New Ringgold, Pa.; Cordilia (Nester), of Geneva, N. Y.; and Mary (Bachman). (VI) Jacob Edward Dreibelbis, son of George and Anna, was born Feb. 15, 1840, now lives at Lehighton, Pa., to which place he removed after the death of his wife, March 7, 1879. He is a farmer by trade, and his apprenticeship was served at New Ringgold. When the Rebellion broke out he enlisted from or near there. On his return from the service he married, and settled at Tamaqua, Pa., working in what is known as the Anderline tannery. His wife was Catherine Bänkes, daughter of Abraham Bänkes, of Allentown, Pa., who was popularly called "Es Rothe Tal!"—the Red Valley—below New Ringgold. The branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad leading from Lizard Creek Junction to Pottsville goes through the old home. They had children as follows: Rev. George A.; Ambrose Eldrid, of Lehighton, Pa.; Carrie Joanna, a foreign missionary; Lewis Daniel, of Perth Amboy, N. J.; and Mary Elizabeth, who married Thomas C. Catelle, of Wilmington, Delaware. (II) Martin Dreibelbis, second son of John Jacob, was born in "Moselem" in Richmond township, Oct. 5, 1751, and died at Schuylkill Haven, Pa., in 1799. In 1775 he moved to Manheim township across the Blue Mountains in Schuylkill county (then Berks), where he was the founder of Schuylkill Haven. He opened many enterprises and became very prominent. He married Catharine, daughter George Markel (Merkel), of Richmond township, and their children were: Martin, Margaret Mush; Daniel m. Christina Leise; George m. Mary Magdalena Weber; Mary m. Jeremiah Reed; Elizabeth m. John Hughes; Catharine m. Michael Moser; Rebecca never married; and Christina m. Benjamin Pott, founder of Pottsville, Pennsylvania. (III) Martin Dreibelbis, son of George and Mary Magdalena Weber (or Weaver), who lived to the age of eighty-eight years. He is thought to have died in young manhood, and it is probable that both are buried at Friedens Reformed Church, on the banks of the Little Schuylkill, where many of their descendants are also buried. Among their children was a son George. (IV) George Dreibelbis, son of George and Mary Magdalena, was born June 1, 1808. He married Anna Heisler (also spelled Heslers), a sister of Rev. Daniel Yost Heisler, D. D. (the latter an intimate friend of Dr. Henry Harbaugh). Mrs. Dreibelbis was born March 20, 1810, and died in 1885. He had four children, and they were: Jacob, who was born Jan. 10, 1839; the second, born Oct. 7, 1830, lived but three hours; George Washington, born Oct. 6, 1831; Maria Carolina, Aug. 28, 1833; Sarah, May 2, 1835; Daniel, Feb. 10, 1837 (lived in Kansas); Rebecca, Aug. 1, 1838 (m. Daniel Freeman, of New Ringgold); Jacob Edward, Feb. 15, 1840; Lewis Martin, Sept. 7, 1841; Catharine Maria, Oct. 7, 1845; William H., Oct. 1, 1844; Benjamin F., March 25, 1846; Joseph, April 17, 1848; Alfred H., July 13, 1850; and Sarah Louise, Oct. 24, 1851. (V) George Washington Dreibelbis, son of George and Anna, born Oct. 6, 1831, married Rebecca Sassaaman, and was among the first who settled in the vicinity. He had three children: Henry, of New Ringgold, Pa.; Cordilia (Nester), of Geneva, N. Y.; and Mary (Bachman). (VI) Jacob Edward Dreibelbis, son of George and Anna, was born Feb. 15, 1840, now lives at Lehighton, Pa., to which place he removed after the death of his wife, March 7, 1879. He is a farmer by trade, and his apprenticeship was served at New Ringgold. When the Rebellion broke out he enlisted from or near there. On his return from the service he married, and settled at Tamaqua, Pa., working in what is known as the Anderline tannery. His wife was Catherine Bänkes, daughter of Abraham Bänkes, of Allentown, Pa., who was popularly called "Es Rothe Tal!"—the Red Valley—below New Ringgold. The branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad leading from Lizard Creek Junction to Pottsville goes through the old home. They had children as follows: Rev. George A.; Ambrose Eldrid, of Lehighton, Pa.; Carrie Joanna, a foreign missionary; Lewis Daniel, of Perth Amboy, N. J.; and Mary Elizabeth, who married Thomas C. Catelle, of Wilmington, Delaware. (VI) Rev. George A. Dreibelbis, son of Jacob Edward and Catherine, was born at Tamaqua, Pa., Oct. 14, 1862, and is now located at Shanesville, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia, and he received his first schooling. He was but nine when his mother died and was buried at New Ringgold, and his father removed to Lehighton. Young George was placed with the David Wertman family for board and clothing, and they sent him to a neighboring school taught by teachers of German stock. The first two years were spent from the south side of Blue Mountains, Heidelberg and Stein's Corner. He remembers his benefactors with gratitude, and he called them always "Father" and "Mother." Mr. Dreibelbis worked for the Lehigh Valley Railroad three years, and then returned to the Wertman home and began teaching school. He entered Franklin and Marshall College in 1884, and after graduation in 1888 entered Myerstown Theological Seminary, where he was graduated in 1893. He then entered Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, graduating in June, 1890. The following year he entered the Theological Seminary at Lancaster, and was graduated therefrom in May, 1893. That spring he was licensed and examined by the Lehigh Classis, with position at Lehighton. He was licensed immediately after he was licensed he received a call to the Caroline Charge, Heidelberg Classis, Central Synod of the Reformed Church. He served this charge with great satisfaction twenty-three months when the Board of Home Missions commissioned him to go to the Paudling Mission in Paulding county, Ohio. In June, 1895, he moved there, and on Sept. 9, 1896, his wife Amanda died. She was a daughter of Lewis Davis, of that township, born June 16, 1824. About two years later he married (second) Orpha Arwilda Klingler, daughter of Adam F. Klingler, of Whiteville, Ind., and they have had children: Louise Henrietta, Adam Jacob, Helen Matilda, and George Michael (born Nov. 19, 1896, died March 28, 1908). Since 1896 the Rev. Mr. Dreibelbis has been pastor of the Shanesville, Ohio, charge, of St. John's Classis, Central Synod. He is a broad minded, Christian gentleman, and is kindly and benevolent.

(VI) AMBROSE ELDER DREIBELBIES, second son of Jacob E. and Catherine (Bänkes) Dreibelbis, was born in New Ringgold, Schuylkill County, Pa., July 16, 1844. His boyhood days were spent at Tamaqua and Lehighton. When but a lad of ten years he left home, and secured employment with Thomas Wehr, a farmer in West Penn township, Schuylkill county, where he attended the township school, and this with the public schools of Tamaqua and Lehighton afforded him his educational privileges. In September, 1856, he left the farm and secured a position as clerk with William Kemerer, in the general store business at Lehighton, which position he held for eight years, at the end of that time being compelled to leave on account of failing health. Next he secured a position with the Lehigh Valley Rauy Co., and was employed by that company in their Laurel local parking offices at Packerton, where he held a responsible position for a period of twelve years, again leaving on account of ill health. In September, 1866, he accepted a position as traveling salesman for the wholesale fruit and produce house of O. J. Saeger, at Lehighton, and this position he holds at present writing. Politically Mr. Dreibelbis is a Prohibitionist, and has been nominated by his party for sheriff, member of the State Legislature and of Congress. He is a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Lehighton, which he joined when a young man seventeen years of age, and has been a consistent member of that church, he being a local preacher, and has served his church in official capacity for many years, on the board of trustees, of which he was Secretary and Treasurer; and has served on the board of stewards for twenty-one years consecutively and is the recording steward. He is serving his eighth year as superintendent of the Sunday school. On March 14, 1885, Mr. Dreibelbis married Miss Emma Amelia Kemerer, daughter of Nathan and Lucinda Kemerer of Lehighton. Six children have been born to them, two sons and four daughters. Wilmer Clayton, a student at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia; Warren Hubert, a storekeeper; and two daughters, Eula and Bertha. She resides at Mauch Chunk, Pa.; May Ethel, deceased; Martin Lorraine; Bertha Katherine and Carrie Evelyn.

(VII) CARRIE J. DREIBELBIES, daughter of Jacob Edward and Catherine (Bänkes), was born in New Ringgold, Schuylkill County. After the removal of the family to Lehighton, Carbon Co., Pa., she attended public school. In 1890 she entered home mission work in Philadelphia and other cities; and in 1895 entered the Union Missionary Training Institute, in Brooklyn, N. Y., where she took a four years course, and graduated in the spring of 1899. In the autumn of the same year she was admitted to entrance work, being appointed by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church to go to Korea. In the summer of 1900 with other missionaries she was driven out by the Boxer uprising, and went to Nagasaki for seven months, at the end of that time returning to Kiau-Ian. In 1908 she adopted a Chinese baby girl, eight days old, according to Chinese laws. In the spring of 1905, she returned to America on furlough and brought the little girl with her, and the next year (1906) secured papers of adoption for her in the court of common pleas of Carbon county, Pa., naming her Mary Elizabeth Dreibelbies. On Aug. 13, 1906, Miss Dreibelbies was appointed by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in the United States to return to China, and take up work at Yochow, in the Province of Hunan. She sailed in the autumn and lived there one year, when failing health obliged her to return to America. Politically she is a Democrat. She married Jacob Edward and Catherine, who were born at Tamaqua, Pa., July 6, 1868. He married Florence Koos, of Lehighton, Pa., and they had one son, Edward Thomas, born at Lehighton, Pa., Sept. 28, 1894. Mr. Dreibelbies moved to Perth Amboy, N. J., Nov. 1, 1898. His wife died April 29, 1907.

(V) WILLIAM H. DREIBELBIES, son of George Dreibelbies and Anna (Heisler), was born at New Ringgold, Pa., Oct. 1, 1844. His youthful years were spent around his native place. When the Rebellion broke out he enlisted in 1861 in Company H, 48th Pa. V. I., and came home in December, 1862, to the family farm near New Ringgold until 1869, when he went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he obtained work with the Standard Oil Company, continuing with that company twenty-eight years. He is now living retired in Cleveland. On Oct. 29, 1870 he married Mary McNamee. Five children were born to them: William, July 29, 1871 (deceased); Mabel, born Aug. 26, 1874; Emma, July 21, 1876 (deceased); Isabella, Jan. 22, 1879; George, Dec. 3, 1880 (deceased). Mabel m. George Stebner; and Isabelle m. Sylvester Hubbell.

(V) ALFRED H. DREIBELBIES, son of George and Anna (Heisler), was born at Ringgold, Schuylkill Co., Pa., March 17, 1860. His boyhood days were spent at Tamaqua, and he was employed by the Dreibelbies in their coal forwarding offices at Packer's Depot, where he held a responsible position for a period of twelve years, again leaving on account of ill health. In September, 1866, he accepted a position as traveling salesman for the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Co. of Ringgold. He then learned the blacksmith's trade with the same company, and this trade he followed for twelve years. For four years he was engaged in bridge building for the same company, and one and one-half years was brakeman. For a period of thirty-five years he was employed by this same company, part of the time as special police. In 1871 he came to Reading, and in 1876 was followed by his family. In 1894 he became an employee of the United Tract Company, as motorman, on the Perkiomen division, and in this position he continues to hold. In 1871 he married Molly A. Slouch, daughter of Thomas and Caroline (Boyer) Slouch, of Ringgold. She died Aug. 27, 1900, and is buried in the family lot in the Charles Evans cemetery, Reading. Their children were: Esther, born Nov. 15, 1875, died young; Louis M. C., born Jan. 11, 1874, died young; Annie L. E., born March 2, 1876, keeps house for her father; Bessey M., born June 15, 1870, died young; Barbara R., born July 31, 1880, died young; and Amos A., born July 19, 1882, Harry S. Brobst, a nephew of Mr. Dreibelbies, also makes his home with this family; he, too, is an employee of the United Tract Company. Mr. Dreibelbies is a member of the Temple Lodge, No. 103, I. O. O. F., of Reading; Encampment No. 52, P. O. S. O. M.; Castle No. 63, K. G. E.; Lodge No. 301, Red Men; and the Relief Association of the United Tract Company. His religious connection is with St. Luke's Lutheran Church of Reading.

(II) Jacob Dreibelbis, son of John Jacob, was born in Richmond township, on the original Dreibelbis homestead, May 9, 1754, and died April 19, 1831. He was reared to manhood on the farm near Fleetwood, and lived there until his marriage. On Oct. 2, 1778, he bought a farm from his father-in-law, George Merkel, located at Virginia, on the east side of that township in the same county. Mr. Merkel had purchased because of the heavy timber upon it. This tract then consisted of 247 acres of land, and it is now owned by his grandson, Joel Dreibelbis.
Here in 1878 he built a log house, and this served three generations of the family. It was torn down in 1868, and its site is now occupied by the large brick residence built in that year by Joel Dreibelbis. In 1899 the barn was destroyed by lightning, and the one that was erected in its stead stood until 1894, when it was replaced by a modern barn. This new barn was destroyed by fire Aug. 3, 1908. Joel, son of John, was born Sept. 23, 1817. A modern barn was rebuilt the same year. The heavy timber was bought along the southern Atlantic coast. The land that George Merkel sold in 1778 to his son-in-law Jacob Dreibelbis, he bought in 1760 from William, Joshua, Jeremiah and Hezekiah Boone, sons and executors of George Boone. George Boone on Jan. 4, 1794, obtained from the royal heirs of the Gregg estate, and Richard Penn, a tract of 800+ acres on the Ontelaune, and the land purchased by Jacob Dreibelbis from George Merkel was a part of this tract. In 1899 Jacob Dreibelbis built the large stone store building in Virginville. This building is 35 x 45 feet, two and one-half stories high. The land on which Virginville is built was all embraced in the Dreibelbis acreage, which included also part of the lands now owned by the Aug. Dreibelbis estate, Jacob Dreibelbis (of the Fifth generation) and part of the land of Orlando Dreibelbis. The Virginville store building is the only building built by Jacob that is still standing, and it has always been used as a mercantile house, and it has never been out of the family name, being now owned by George A. Dreibelbis, son of Joel. Jacob married Mary Magdalena Merkel, born Nov. 22, 1759, daughter of George and Christina Merkel, and died July 3, 1832, after a married life of fifty-four years. They had eleven children, forty-five grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. Their children were: Hannah, born Aug. 28, 1778, m. Jacob Dunkel, Mar. 27, 1845; Esther, born Feb. 14, 1779; Michael Dietrich, m. Jacob, and died Jan. 21, 1785; Jacob, born Feb. 23, 1785, died May 6, 1857; John, born July 22, 1787, died Oct. 8, 1847; Molly, born Sept. 27, 1789, m. John Bernd, and died Sept. 17, 1873; Samuel, born 1792, died 1876; William, born Nov. 14, 1793, died Sept. 18, 1889; Elizabeth, born Nov. 7, 1797, died May 3, 1861; David, born March 14, 1802, died Nov. 9, 1866; and two died young. Jacob Dreibelbis and his children were members of the German Reformed congregation of Richmond township, and he is buried in the cemetery adjoining St. Peter's Church. He was a foremost member of this church, and served as an officer. In 1809 he was a member of the building committee that erected the third building at that place. In 1815 he served in the Virginia legislature. In 1780 he was a soldier in the Revolution. He was one of the early residents along the Ontelaune, purchasing his land for the excellent timber and very fine water there.

(III) Jacob Dreibelbis, son of Jacob, was born in Richmond township, on the old homestead, Feb. 23, 1785, and died May 6, 1857. He was a life long farmer, and was a very prominent man. He was well built and very strong. When eighteen years old he was elected a captain in the State Militia, an office he filled very efficiently for twenty-seven years, when he became disqualified by age. He was a member of St. Peter's German Reformed congregation, and did substantial service in the erection of the church in 1809. The remains of both himself and wife rest in the cemetery adjoining this church. For many years he served as town supervisor, and during the war of 1812 rendered valuable service to his government. On Jan. 31, 1813, he married Elizabeth Hefner, born July 7, 1792, daughter of George and Magdalena (Hummel) Hefner, of Greenwich township, and she died March 11, 1873. To this union were born five sons and five daughters: Mary, born in 1813, died June 12, 1886, m. Samuel Heiny, and had children—Marie E., Florenda, Catharine, Esther, Amelia, Theresa and Enoch J.; George, born May 7, 1815, died Jan. 13, 1835, unmarried; Jacob, born May 1, 1817, died Jan. 8, 1841, m. Elizabeth Fegeley, and had a son—Samuel; Simon, born May 1, 1819, died May 30, 1890, is mentioned below; Peter, born March 14, 1821, died April 28, 1889, m. Elizabeth Lesher (still living), and had children—Sarah and Rev. Emanuel L. (a Lutheran minister at Melrose, N. Y.); Elizabeth, born Aug. 8, 1824, died aged forty-five years, m. Henry, son of Tilden, township, and had children—Joseph R. and John; Samuel, m. Ellen, and had children—George, who served in the Civil War, and died in 1908, and Ada, m. John, and had children—Esther, born Nov. 24, 1829, died Oct. 29, 1871, m. Joseph Rauenhold, of Hamburg, and had children—Peter, Amanda, Amelia, George, Mary, Alice and William; Salome, born 1835, died 1907, m. Charles Levan, of Maxatawny township, and had children—Susan, Jacob, Salome, Nicholas and Henry; and Hannah, born July 27, 1834, m. Samuel, born 1835, m. Rosa Kramer. Simon Dreibelbis the father worked for his father for a number of years, and later from 1840 until 1890, kept a hotel in Virginville, Perry township, continuing to conduct his 136-acre farm in conjunction with the hotel.

(V) Cleophas S. Dreibelbis, a successful business man of Berks Co., Pa., who is engaged in milling and farming near Shoemakersville, in Perry township, was born March 2, 1846, in Richmond township, on one of the Dreibelbis homesteads, son of Simon and Leah (Strasser) Dreibelbis. His educational advantages were rather limited. Being confined to the public schools of his district, and but a few terms there. At the age of seventeen years he commenced to help his father on the home farm, and this he faithfully continued until thirty years old. For a number of years he hauled mine ore in dull seasons, and in the winter months would go butchering among the farmers. His territory covered a large radius of miles and his services were always at a premium. In 1884 Mr. Dreibelbis began farming for himself on his father's farm consisting of 141 acres of land near Shoemakersville, Pa. This farm he purchased from his father, and some years later added twenty adjoining acres, and this large property he has greatly improved by fertilizing the soil and by the large barn, by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam and by the large and efficient stone dam. He also manufactures a superior brand of corn meal and buckwheat flour, which he sends into all of the populous places of the East and to Canada. Mr. Dreibelbis is an ideal farmer and has made his business a paying industry. He has applied in practice the valuable hints and advice of that great agriculturist, the Rev. J. D. Dietrich of Montgomery Co., Pa., and has been materially benefited by the latter's lectures. Mr. Dreibelbis has a fine dairy of thirty-five cows. He understands cattle and the feeding of them, having two silos which he fills annually with cut corn with the stalks. His milk is shipped daily to Pottsville, Schuylkill county, and his milk receipts amount to considerably more than the average for milk receipts; his milk receipts were only about $800 annually. Mr. Dreibelbis is an enthusiast on the modern methods and principles of farming. Since 1873 he has been a member of the Industrial Grange No. 29, of Shoemakersville, and has been delegate to many State conventions of that body. In politics Mr. Dreibelbis is a Jeffersonian Democrat. He was a member of the school board during his term of office for twelve successive terms and eleven years was secretary of the board, materially benefiting the schools of his district by faithful and efficient service, but refused re-election, feeling that he had done his... full duty in that line. He was county committeeman for one year in his township, and has attended a number of conventions of the Democratic party. He is a thoroughly honest man, who by hard, incessant labor has accumulated a comfortable fortune, and his many acts of neighborly kindness have made him esteemed by all who know him. He is a member of Zion's Union Church of Perry township, belonging to the Reformed denomination, and has served as deacon and trustee thereon. Mr. Dreiblebis, born Dec. 18, 1807, m. Catherine Anna Wartzenluft, by whom he had children : J. Carolus, born Feb. 28, 1869, m. Mary Egolf; Samuel M., born May 30, 1870, died in infancy; Ellen S., born Feb. 22, 1873, m. Henry Miller; Simon D., born March 1, 1874, died an accidental death aged eighteen years, eight months and twenty days; Dreibelbis H., born Dec. 28, 1875, and Chester Bauer; and Daniel C., born Dec. 11, 1877, m. in St. Louis, Mo., after returning from the Cuban and Philippine wars. Mrs. Dreiblebis died of typhoid fever Aug. 31, 1878, aged thirty-one years. Mr. Dreiblebis m. (second) March 16, 1880, Martha Ann Noll, daughter of Henry Noll, and they have these children : William H., born Dec. 2, 1880, m. Dina Rothermel; Israel W., born May 14, 1883, died in infancy; and Charles B., born Oct. 14, 1884, Sarah A., born Feb. 7, 1887, and John J., born June 14, 1889, are at home.

(IV) JOEL DREIBLEBIS, son of Jacob, was born Dec. 22, 1826, at Virginville, and is one of the representative men of northern Berks county, and despite his advanced years is still active in mind and body. He is well posted on religion, politics and public events. He has given a great deal of attention to archaeological studies, and has one of the finest complete collections of Indian relics in the county, consisting of arrow heads, spear heads, drills, axes, tomahawks, jasper blades, knives, beads, pestles, spades, badges, turlebacks and all kinds of working implements for sowing, boring, cutting, etc. This valuable collection consists of about 15,000 specimens, of which 800 are hammers. This collection is especially interesting to its owner because he and other members of his own family collected them all on his own property. The country about Virginville was a densely populated Indian settlement and the home of the chief of the Sacunk tribe. Since Mr. Dreiblebis became interested in the relics more than 40,000 have been gathered on his farm. The more valuable specimens in his collection are the kid-gut balls, which have nearly all been kept in drawers and cabinets, while the small ones repose in frames which decorate Mr. Dreiblebis's study. During 1907 and 1908 the local and metropolitan press wrote and published descriptions and photographs of the collection. Mr. Dreiblebis was reared upon his father's farm, obtaining his education in the private and public schools of his vicinity. In 1847 his father sent him to near Lewistown, in Union county, to become proficient in the English language. There he remained for two and one-half years, living with a relative of his mother. Returning then to Berks county he worked on his father's farm in the summer, and taught school. In 1850 when the public school system was established in Greenwich township, he was one of its first teachers, serving there three years with high efficiency. In 1853 when his own township adopted the free school system, he became a teacher at Kerchner's where he taught two terms. In 1855 Mr. Dreiblebis began farming on his father's farm, continuing it two years as a tenant when his father died. At the ap- praisement of his father's estate he took the homestead, and continued farming successfully until 1890. He has been one of the first farmers to adopt new machinery, and his mower and reaper were among the first seen in this locality. His farm is located one-quarter mile south of Virginville, and two miles from it. His premises are supplied with an abundance of fruit and grapes, apples, pears, peaches, pears, and other kinds of fruit. His orchard is equally well supplied with a large number of apple trees. The farm is situated on a well-drained piece of land, and is one of the most beautiful farms in the vicinity. Mr. Dreiblebis has been twice married: his second wife being Miss Hannah Blandina, has saved the jaws of 1000 chubs and suckers, and by a process cleaned them, and has tastefully arranged them in various designs on velvet, making frames of different sizes, and these have been much admired by the many visitors to her home. Mr. Dreiblebis and his family are members of St. Peter's German Reformed Congregation of Richmond township, and the family burial lot is in the cemetery adjoining. During the erection of the present church edifice in 1850, no one contributed more liberally of time and means than Mr. Dreiblebis. He was deacon and trustee of the church, and served on the building committee. For more than a quarter of a century he has been an elder in the steeples of the church bears the following inscription: "Donated by Joel Dreiblebis to the German Reformed Congregation of St. Peter's Church in Richmond township, in 1904." Mr. Dreiblebis has also been liberal in his contributions to the United Evangelical Church in Virginville.

(V) JACOB D. DREIBLEBIS was born Oct. 1, 1855, in Richmond township, near Virginville, son of Joel Dreiblebis. He spent his boyhood on his father's farm, and his education was obtained in the schools and academies of his native township, which he attended until attaining the age of eighteen years. On April 8, 1882, Mr. Dreiblebis married Hettie Ann Leiby, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Mengel) Leiby, the former a stone cutter and farmer in Perry township. To this union this children as follows: a son died in infancy; and Joel F. Mr. Dreiblebis is the owner of the well-known summer resort, "Ontelaune House," which he built in 1902 on the banks of the Ontelaune river, opposite Virginville. The hotel is located on an elevation, this affording a view of the lovely valley of the Ontelaune country. The Ontelaune is met at Virginville by Sacunk Creek, and the best fishing in this part of the State is to be found in this creek, as there are black bass, trout, suckers, catfish, sun-fish and eels abounding. The fresh, pure air, the fine fishing and boating and the restful quiet are very beneficial, and afford great inducement to residents of cities in the eastern part of the State. The hotel is largely patronized by the building modern and substantial. Mr. Dreiblebis has retired with his family on one of his farms near Virginville, on which he bought at public sale in 1893, which was formerly owned by his uncle Simon, deceased. In his dealings with his fellow men he is upright and honorable, and as a citizen he is public spirited. In politics Mr. Dreiblebis is a Democrat. He and his family are members of St. Peter's Reformed Church, of which he has served as trustee.

(VI) JOEL P. DREIBLEBIS, son of Jacob D., was born Nov. 7, 1882, on his grandfather's homestead. He assisted his father in farming till 1901-1902, when he attended the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, Pa., and he attended Schuylkill's College at Pottsville, Schuylkill Co., Pa. In 1908 he bought the Kutztown Bottling Works, and moving to Kutztown has since been engaged in their operation. On Oct. 1, 1904 he married Hattie S. Moyer, daughter of William Moyer, of Greenwich township, and they have one daughter, Helen Annie.

(Charles George A. Dreibelbis, son of Joel, was born on the Richmond township homestead Oct. 13, 1868. He was reared upon the farm and educated in the public schools of his native township and later in the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown. He began farming on the homestead in the spring of 1893, and has since pursued that vocation with much success. He has a large collection of farm machinery, and is thoroughly up-to-date in his methods. On Aug. 3, 1908, he suffered a severe loss in the burning of his barn with the year's crops. He owns the Virginville store property, which he purchased at public sale in the fall of 1907. He was one of the organizers of the Kutztown Savings Bank, and has since served as a director. In 1909 he was elected a director of the First National Bank of Kutztown. He has been prominently identified with the Democratic party, and since 1904 has been a justice of the peace, being re-elected in the spring of 1909 without opposition. He was school director of Richmond township three years, was a member of the board, and has been delegate to a number of county conventions. He attends the Reading market once a week, holding the same on the 112 in the Penn street market. Mr. Dreibelbis married Clara E. Dreibelbis, daughter of Dr. David and Emma (Schultz) Dreibelbis, Jr. This union has been blessed with children as follows: Daniel David, born May 17, 1890; Daniel, Dec. 14, 1891; Stella E., May 6, 1894; Simon Jan., Jan. 24, 1896; Paul J., Dec. 21, 1897 (died April 23, 1898); Sallie H., Feb. 21, 1901; George P., Sept. 25, 1904; Anna Blandina, June 26, 1906; and William J., July 22, 1908. Mr. and Mrs. Dreibelbis have also an adopted daughter, Maude Bucks Dreibelbis, who has been with them since she was seven years old.

John Dreibelbis, son of Jacob, was born July 22, 1759, and died Nov. 8, 1847. He was a farmer in a good township, owning the farm now the property of his grandson, Dr. Perry K. Dreibelbis, of Dreibelbis Station, along the Berks & Lehigh Railroad. He married Susanna Kershner, born Feb. 27, 1789, died March 29, 1866, and both are buried at the New Jerusalem (Dunkel's) Church near Dreibelbis Station. Their children were: Nancy L., born March 28, 1816; John, born April 17, 1819, m. John Heimly, and had a daughter—SUSAN; Manasses, born May 30, 1813, is mentioned below; Ephraim, born Feb. 1, 1815, d. April 6, 1887, m. Mary Fister, and had two children—George and Sophia; Diana, born Jan. 14, 1817, d. Oct. 5, 1877, m. May 26, 1861; Franklin Melvin (twins to D. and A.). Catherine, born June 1, 1861, m. George P. Dietrich, and had children—Samuel, Carrie and Willie. The parents and their children are buried at the New Jerusalem (Dunkel's) Church.

Mrs. Manasses Dreibelbis was a daughter of Peter Dreibelbis, born Aug. 16, 1784, d. Aug. 6, 1810. He married Elizabeth Altenderfer, born May 3, 1791, d. Oct. 15, 1844.

Her grandfather, Peter Kline, Esq., was born Feb. 15, 1760, and died Nov. 27, 1836. He married Eva Margaret Lichly, born Jan. 21, 1765, d. May 9, 1831. All these ancestors are buried at the New Jerusalem (Dunkel's) Church.

Perry K. Dreibelbis, son of Manasses, was born in Greenwich township, Feb. 7, 1858. He completed the course in the public schools of his native township, and took his course in veterinary surgery at the Ontario Veterinary College, Toronto, Canada, from which he was graduated March 27, 1885. Returning to his native township, he opened an office and began practice, which he has since followed, having built up a large practice over an extensive territory. In addition he is interested in farming, owning a fine place of ninety fertile acres, upon which substantial and commodious buildings have been erected. The farm was formerly the property of his father and grandfather. He is a man of high standing in his section, respected throughout the neighborhood, and for nineteen and one-half years served as postmaster at Dreibelbis Station, which was named after his father. The post office was opened June 12, 1868. It was established from Virginville in 1905. He is a member of the Reformed Church, and has for many years been secretary of the consistory. On Dec. 28, 1878, Mr. Dreibelbis married Miss Louisa A. Seip, daughter of John B. and Maria (Reigelman) Seip, of Lenhartsville. They have no children.

Samuel Dreibelbis, son of Jacob, was born in Richmond township in 1792, and died in Venango county, Pa., where he is buried, in 1876. He was twice married, first to a Close, and second to a Rahn of Leesport. Before coming to Berks county he conducted a mercantile and feed store along the canal at Shoemakersville. Sometime after his marriage to Miss Rahn, who had relatives and acquaintances in Venango county, he moved to that place and there carried on farming. He held the office of justice of the peace for some years. Six of his children were born of his first marriage. His children were: Moses, Esther, Sarah, Charles, Samuel, Jacob and Catharine.

William Dreibelbis, son of Jacob and Mary Magdalena, was born Nov. 14, 1793, and died Sept. 18, 1869. He was a merchant at the old stand in Virginville for thirteen years. Later he removed to his farm, which consisted of eighty acres, and he lived thereon until 1839, in the latter year purchasing the tract which is now owned by his son Gustavus, and there engaged in the hotel business, in connection with farming, until his death. He married Susanna Miller, daughter of George Miller, and the children were: William; William; Hannah; m. John Wanner; Jacob; George; Mary m. William Merkel; Charles J.; Eliza m. William Hottenstein; and Gustavus.

Gustavus Dreibelbis, son of William and Susan, was born March 27, 1846, on the premises he occupied until his death, March 19, 1899. He spent his early days in Virginville, and was educated in the schools there. In 1867 he purchased the seventy-nine acres of excellent land from his father, and there he made his home. On this farm is located Dragon’s Cave, a natural curiosity, which has been explored several hundred feet, and which is supposed to be a continuation of Crystal Cave, several miles away, which is visited by many each year, having been explored for several miles. He was a director in the Windsor Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and from 1894 was secretary of this well-known institution. He conducted the “Virginiaville Hotel,” which has been a hotel stand since the American Revolution, and was an able business man, honest in his dealings and highly esteemed. In 1871 he married Mary, daughter of William S. and Esther (Hinkle) Merkle, of Maiden-creek township, and their children are: William, of Reading; Howard; Harry; Alice m. William J. Hein, of Virginiaville; Annie m. Maurice Mertz, of Fleetwood; John, of Moselem; Frederick M., of Virginiaville; Sallie M.; and George Logan, of Kutztown.

(III) Dr. David Dreibelbis, son of Jacob, was born on his father’s farm in Richmond township March 14, 1802, and died Nov. 9, 1886. He was a member of the Evangelical Association. In February, 1825, Mr. Dreibelbis married Sarah Lesher, born in Greenwich township, April 11, 1806, daughter of Isaac and Marla Lesher. She died May 9, 1872, the mother of the following family: (1) Esther (1853-1900) m. Reuben Ely. (2) Sarah (1859-1938) and (3) Maria (1855-1934, widow) m. Dr. H. B. Mohn, who died in 1908. (4) Eva Ruffina (1843-1873) died single. (5) Dr. Samuel L. and (second) Alfred Schappell.

(IV) Dr. SAMUEL L. DREIBELBIS, of Reading, son of David and Sarah (Lesher), was born March 29, 1848. He was educated in the common schools and later at Union (New Berin), in Union county, from which he was graduated in 1868. After that he attended Lebanon Valley College, Annville, one year, and then entered Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1871. He has since been practising very successfully in Reading. The Doctor is a Republican in politics. He has been prominently identified with the First United Evangelical Church at Reading, and was the superintendent of the Sunday-School eighteen years, and class leader fourteen years. He has been president of the Berks County Sabbath-School Association six years, and has done excellent work in church and school. He was actively interested in the organization of the Homeopathic Hospital in 1891, and has since then been its obstetrician. On Nov. 29, 1872, Dr. Dreibelbis married Louisa Ely, daughter of Rev. Solomon and Elizabeth (Merkel) Ely, and to this union were born four children: Lloyd died in infancy; Laura m. Dr. Robert E. Strasser, of Reading; Bertha m. Howard A. Watkins; and S. Leon, who graduated from the Reading high school class of 1903, and in 1907 from Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, assists his father in his large practice in Reading, and makes a specialty of surgery, and is most successful.

JOHN K. ROTHERMEL. In every age and country, whether in a crisis or in times of peace, there is generally one person who looms up in especial prominence, and such constitute the famous men in history. The country districts are no exception to this social experience; they also have men of local eminence, and such a man, it may be truly said, was John K. Rothermel in the community in which he lived. This local distinction he had not sought; he was neither ambitious nor proud; he did not want office; he preferred to be a private citizen. It was his character and dealings with others that account for this estimation.

John K. Rothermel was born in Maiden-creek township, Berks Co., Pa., Oct. 5, 1835, and died Feb. 27, 1908, on his farm in Richmond township, although his home was then at Fleetwood, Pa., and was buried at the Beck-er's St. Peter's Church, of which church he was a member and one of the founders. He was a son of Daniel and Esther (Koller) Rothermel, of German descent, a lineal descendant of John Rothermel—who died on the ocean leaving his orphan children to settle (1730) in the New World—and of the fifth generation of the Rothermel family in America: 1st generation John, 2d Peter, 3d Peter, 4th Daniel, 5th John K., the subject of this sketch. On May 20, 1861, he married Susanna Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Benjamin B. and Sarah (Kindt) Peters. His family consisted of the following children: Ira P., Sallie, John P., Esther, Sue, Florence and Harry P. His widow and children survived him. Ira married A. Lizzie Grim, of Kutztown; children, John, Daniel and Catharine. John married Sallie K. Bechtel, of Reading; children, Julia and Leonard. Esther married Jacob H. Peters that account for this estimation. He was a man of originality and independence of thought. He was an advocate of education, good schools, and good teachers, a director of schools of Richmond township, served several terms, first in his community to introduce the English language into a German family as best he could. He sent his children to the Normal school at Kutztown where the daughters graduated and the sons prepared for college. Ira is a graduate of Lafayette College, and a successful attorney-at-law, residing in Reading. Sallie is a teacher in Fleetwood. John is a graduate of the Medical Department, University of Pennsylvania. Esther and Sue were at one time teachers. Florence, a graduate of Dickinson College, is now a teacher in the Camden (N. J.) high school, and was formerly a teacher in the State Normal School at Kutztown. Harry, a graduate of Lafayette College, is now professor in the Boys’ high school, Philadelphia, and was the organizer and first principal of the Shoemakersville (Pa.) high school.

He was a farmer by occupation all his life. When the Northampton Iron Company opened their mines in Richmond township, he was chosen as their superintendent as long as the mines were operated. He was also president of Rothermel & Co.'s iron ore mines in Maiden-creek township, but soon relinquished farming while thus engaged. He owned and operated several very large farms and was unusually successful.

In politics he placed citizenship above partisanship. Although religiously inclined and a member of the German Reformed Church, his religion was not of the emotional kind. His Christianity was practical—loving his neighbor as himself, God above all else, contributing liberally but unostentatiously to both church and charity.
GEORGE A. RAVEL, a merchant of Reading, is a native of that city, born there Dec. 28, 1865, son of George Ravel, Sr. The father still resides in Reading, but has retired after his long years of labor as an iron-molder.

George A. Ravel was sent first to the public schools, and then to a parochial one, but at the age of twelve his attendance was broken off, and he went to work as an errand boy for Jonathan Mould.

He worked in Reading from 1877 to 1887, and was promoted a number of times acting as clerk in various departments, and finally being put in charge of the domestic department. After a year spent in Chicago, still in the mercantile line, Mr. Ravel remained there until 1888, and on Oct. 13, 1888, opened a store of his own in a private house, located at No. 113 North Ninth street. He began with a room twenty by thirty feet, but two years later he built an addition twenty by forty-five feet, and remained in those quarters until 1897. He then bought the property and erected a store building 20 x 100 feet, four stories in height, where he carries a full line of notions, dry goods and ladies' and gentlemen's furnishings. He employs twelve clerks, and has a constantly increasing volume of trade. In 1903, he felt his health failing somewhat from overwork, Mr. Ravel took Mr. E. P. Fidler in as a partner, thus lightening his own responsibilities. Mr. Ravel has also given much time to building operations, lately, and during the past four years has erected forty buildings in different parts of the city. He is a most capable business man, with unusually good judgment, and ranks among the most successful merchants of the city.

The wife chosen by Mr. Ravel was Miss Annie M.
Bitting, daughter of Jacob and Sallie Bitting, both now deceased. Three sons have been born to this union, Harry, Walter and George, all attending school. The family reside at No. 1257 Eckert avenue. Mr. Ravel is a member of St. Peter's Catholic Church, but his wife belongs to the Reformed Church.

DR. FRANKLIN B. NICE, physician at Hamburg for upward of fifty years, was born in Hummelstown, Dauphin Co., Pa., Aug. 26, 1830, and during his infancy his parents removed to Hamburg, Berks county.
After a thorough preparatory education he studied medicicine under the direction of his father, and then attended a regular course of lectures in the Jefferson Medical College, from which he was graduated in 1851. After practising for a while under his father, he established an office of his own at Hamburg, and continued in active and very successful practice until shortly before his decline, June 29, 1905. For several terms he officiated as county and district surgeon, 1876-78, and also as a state school commissioner, but his increasing practice, which extended into the county for many miles, prevented him from doing any considerable work in municipal, social or political affairs.
He was recognized as a superior and devoted physician;
and the large number of accounts unpaid at his decease evidenced his sympathetic and generous nature. Financial matters engaged much of his attention, and in their management he was very successful.

Dr. Nice was married to Elizabeth Heffner, daughter of Daniel Heffner, a farmer of Perry township, and Elizabeth Graft, his wife (who was a daughter of Abraham Graeff, a farmer of Maiden-creek township), and they had two children: Benjamin H., also a practising physician at Hamburg from 1877 to his decease in 1907; and Lizzie, who was married to Rev. J. G. Neff, a native of Kutztown, who for a number of years served as pastor of the Reformed church at Shenandoah and Bangor; he departed from this life Aug. 25, 1906.

Benjamin Reinard Nice, son of Franklin B., was a successful physician with a large practice at Hamburg and vicinity for thirty years, from 1832 to 1862.
He was married to Margaret Brugler, by whom he had ten children: John, Milton, Franklin, George, Walter, Caroline (who married Enoch Koller), Margaret (who married John Sunday), Anna Mary (who married Rev.
Frederick Kolb, a well-known Presbyterian minister), and two children who died in their infancy. Of this family Mrs. Anna Mary Kolb, now eighty odd years old, is still living at Alburtis, Pa. She is the mother of Rev. John Kolb, a noted Presbyterian missionary, who is doing a noble work in South America.

John Nice, the grandfather, was born in 1767 in Fred-crick township, Montgomery Co., Pa., and died in 1844.
He married Hannah, daughter of David Reinard, who was born in 1788 and died in 1817.

Anthony Nice, the great-grandfather, emigrated with his brother Cornelius from Hesse, Wales, and settled in Philadelphia county, Pa., where he carried on farming until his decease, at Nicetown, a village named after him.

A. N. KISSINGER, manager and owner of the extensive storage, auction, and flour house at Nos. 31-35
South Eighth street, as well as president and general manager of the well-known Farmers' Market House, located at Reading, Berks Co., Pa., is rated as one of the most substantial and progressive business men of the Key-Stone State. He is a son of Washington S. and Elizabeth (Yost) Kissinger, born Dec. 5, 1850.

Washington S. Kissinger was a son of a man of unusual natural force and broad business capacity. After receiving but an imperfect common school education, at Reading, he became employed, while still quite young, on the canal near that city. Later he located in Reading, and in time became an owner of some fine and sand businesses, buildings and the Farmers' Market House.
At the time of his death in Reading, 1873, he was not only an acknowledged business leader and a progressive citizen, but the owner and operator of several valuable farms in Berks county. His wife, Elizabeth Yost, died in Reading at the age of seventy-three. Their only child, a daughter, Mrs. A. N. Kissinger, besides A.
L., now near Blandon, is a wholesale grain dealer at Birdsboro, Berks county; George W., formerly a sign painter and skilled mechanic; Mrs. Mary A.
Dick, widow of the late Henry D. Dick, of No. 106
South Ninth street, Reading; and Mrs. Susan Dubson, living near Blandon, are their only children.

A. N. Kissinger received a common school education in the schools of Berks county, locating at Reading, April 1, 1870, and entering the employ of C. S. Birch & Co.
In the following year he established a clothing and shoe business, later he and his father also associating themselves at the same location the same year, and practised in the flour and feed business, continuing together until the death of the latter in 1873. The Market House business was founded May 10, 1871, and July 16, 1871, A. N. Kissinger assumed its active management. He has continued in that capacity ever since, has been one of the most prominent men in the management of the Farmers' Market House. Under Mr. Kissinger's management extensive and important improvements have been made in the original house erected by his father, so that he now as president, general manager and one of the largest stockholders controls the largest and most complete market in the city. This was incorporated in January, 1907, as the Farmers' Market House Company. For the accommodation of out-of-town patrons he has erected a three-story stable, with sleeping apartments attached.

Kissinger's Storage House is a four-story structure, 60x120 feet in dimensions, weekly and semi-weekly sales being held therein. On March 1, 1885, C. Carroll Briner was admitted to partnership in the feed, flour and storage business under the firm name of Kissinger & Briner, the location of the house being as at present. This continued till Mr. Briner's retirement in February, 1897, after which the firm of Kissinger & Son was formed.

A. L. Kissinger, son of Mr. Kissinger, is one of the directors of the company. Under Mr. Kissinger's stratgetic and able management, the business has developed to large proportions. On Jan. 17, 1907, in company with others he formed the Kissinger Market House Company, embracing the following markets: Nos. 2, 3 and 4, located at Ninth and Cherry street, Peach and Cherry streets, and Nos. 834-836 Penn street. They have recently inaugurated the building of a large wholesale and retail flour and feed warehouse to be located at 836 Penn street.
urated the successful Saturday afternoon and evening market, in addition to their tri-weekly markets.

Personally Mr. Kissinger has reached a leadership in the business field in a time of life which makes it probable that his future will bring him into even more than State prominence, Mr. Kissinger is connected with no secret organizations, although socially he is very genial and popular. For his standing he has depended upon no extraneous efforts, solely upon his individual honesty, astuteness and ability. He is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, and has served as a vestryman of that organization at different times for nine years.

On April 16, 1874, Mr. Kissinger was married to Miss Sallie R. Spohn, of Reading. She died March 11, 1903, leaving three children: Clifford W., Sarah E. and Anita M. On Oct. 19, 1904, he married (second) Miss Mary L. Vid, devoted much labor for thirteen years, born a son, Warren Nicholas. Mr. and Mrs. Kissinger reside at their comfortable home, No. 1030 Penn street, Reading, enjoying the comfort and culture attendant upon the prosperity and intelligence of the modern business man.

DR. ROBERT WALTER, founder and proprietor of "The Walter Sanitarium," near Wernersville, in Berks county, the largest and most successful health resort in Pennsylvania, was born Feb. 14, 1841, in Canada (township of Esquesing, county of Halton, Province of Ontario). He received his early education in the township schools and at the local academy. When he was fifteen years old, he entered a store as clerk and filled the position successfully for a year, after which he was employed as cashier and bookkeeper in a large tannery, where he continued until the chief employer died one year afterward. Notwithstanding his youth, the interested parties retained him to settle up the estate, which he accomplished satisfactorily: and his grandfather dying he was requested to administer his estate also, and this he did in such manner as to lead to the settlement of other estates. For a year he was assistant Division court clerk and then he directed his attention to teaching in the public schools for several years; and learning stenography, he followed this occupation for some time, being employed for a while in the land office of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company at New York.

During much of this time he was more or less an invalid, with the chances for continued life against him, and though his case was regarded as hopeless, by Dr. Richardson, he persuaded him to take a course of treatment which he himself had originated, and which had come to be everywhere employed in the sanitariums. The results so encouraged him that he re-signed his position in the land office and devoted himself to a more complete study of medicine, to which he had grown more and more attached.

In 1872, he married Enniece C. Lippincott, of Dirigo, Maine (a graduated physician from the Hygieo-Therapeutic College of New York in 1865), and accompanied by his wife located in New Jersey, where he delivered lectures on mental science, a subject which had received a great deal of his attention for a number of years. He attended a course of medical lectures in the college from which his wife was graduated; and he too was graduated from the institution in 1873. Upon his graduation he took charge of a sanitarium and mountain home in Franklin county, Pa., and while serving this position he was invited to visit Berks county and carry on a health resort on South Mountain, near Wernersville. He accepted this invitation, and leasing the place, conducted it successfully for three years. During this time he abandoned the water-cure idea and originated the sanitarium treatment, as it is now understood.

To the termination of this lease, Dr. Walter decided to start an establishment of his own, and in 1878 began the erection of the first institution in this, and it is believed the first in any, country, devoted to the treatment of invalids and the preservation of the health of well people by purely sanitary methods. This building was erected on South Mountain, one mile south of Wernersville, and he moved into it in May, 1877, his success already established becoming still more pronounced, and has continued without interruption for thirty-five years. His patronage almost from the first came from all parts of the United States, and his establishment necessarily grew with his patronage until it became one of the famous resorts of the country. Now it is admittedly the largest, most complete and most successful sanitarium in Pennsylvania.

The institution comprises a number of contiguous, substantial stone buildings, five stories in height, 350 feet long, and numerous tracts of farming and woodland, which altogether cover 500 acres. It is thoroughly equipped with all modern conveniences and appliances. The view in the rear along and about the mountain sides is picturesque, but the end and west hills from the mountains of Reading in the east to the hills of Lebanon county in the west, a distance of thirty miles, and from the South Mountain across the rolling fields and hills of the Tulpehocken, Schuylkill and Ontelaune Valleys to the Blue Mountains, a varying distance of forty miles, with all the growing towns, rich enterprises and internal improvements, is indescribably grand.

During the great development of his sanitarium and his sanitary methods, Dr. Walter was also intellectually a thoughtful and busy man, for he published a monthly and a tri-weekly paper and a book dealing with sanitary topics, an octavo volume of 390 pages entitled "Vital Science," and a large octavo volume of 300 pages entitled "The Exact Science of Health," the latter being based upon the same principles that have made astronomy and chemistry to be regarded as among the exact sciences.

Besides graduating from the Hygieo-Therapeutic College of New York in 1873, Dr. Walter took a special course of lectures in Hahmemann Medical College at Philadelphia, and was graduated from that institution in 1888.

Dr. Walter and his wife have five children: Maud M.; Robert L. (m. Alice Betts); Mabel H.; Estella M.; and Earnest A. The first two are graduated physicians. His wife and the first three children from the time of quitting school have co-operated most earnestly with him in the successful development of his great sanitarium.

His father was George Walter, of Devonshire, England, a farmer and occupation a farmer and by relationship connected with the Walter family of Southern England. He married Elizabeth Vodden, a daughter of Robert Vodden, also of Southern England. They emigrated to Canada in 1837, and to Ontario in 1839, thus being among the pioneers of that section. He died in 1892, at the age of eighty-four years; and his wife died in 1884 at the age of sixty-eight.

They had five children: John George, Robert, Sarah, Mary, Albert Lorenzo, Elizabeth, Frances Amelia, Augusta, and Emma Maria. Mrs. Walter is the daughter of John Lippincott and Sarah Kitchen, his wife. John Lippincott's father was Jacob Lippincott, of Shrewsbury, N. J., who being a Friend and conscientiously opposed to war, moved to Nova Scotia to avoid Revolutionary operations. Jacob Lippincott was of the same lineage as the numerous Lippincotts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

JACkEs GicKeR MATTERNES, M. D., of Centreport, has been located there in the practice of medicine ever since his graduation and is in command of a good patronage. He was born Sept. 16, 1869, in Lower Heidelberg township, son of Abraham and grandson of Isaac Matternes.

Heinrich Matternes, the great-grandfather, was an early settler in Cumru township and followed milling there. Isaac Matternes, the Doctor's grandfather, was raised on the South Mountain, back of Wernersville, and attended the Hains Church school. He learned the shoemaker's trade and followed it for some time at Reading, eventually moving to Mt. Pleasant, in Penn township, where he died. at the age of eighty-three years. He assisted in digging for the foundation of the second house erected at Wormersville. He was a well-known man in his day. His first wife, whose maiden name was Mehl, died at the age of thirty years, the mother of five children: Abraham, Isaac, Jr., Amanda, Mary (m. Peter Miller) and one that died in infancy. His second wife Mr. Matternes married a Mrs. Pfaff, by whom he had two children.

Abraham Matternes, son of Isaac, was born in Lower Heidelberg township. He learned milling, which he followed a few years, and then went to work in Van Reed's paper-mill, where he contracted smallpox, from which he died in March, 1873, at the early age of thirty-three years. He was twice married, first to Amelia Shell, of Bern township, who died without issue. His second marriage was to Mrs. Caroline Himmershitz, daughter of Daniel Gicker, and to them were born two children: James Gicker and Sallie, the latter the wife of Harry Haag, of Lower Heidelberg township.

James Gicker Matternes attended the Blue Marsh school in Lower Heidelberg township and had two months at select school in Mt. Pleasant. In the spring of 1887 he entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, from which he was graduated in 1900. In the spring of 1891, which he engaged in teaching, five terms in all. For three terms he was in Lower Heidelberg township, one term in Washington township and one term in Penn township, and meantime he began preparation for the profession to which he intended to devote his life. He read medicine with Dr. D. H. H. Smith of Mt. Pleasant, from which he graduated in the spring of 1894 entered Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, graduating in 1897. He has since been located at Centreport borough, where he has gained a large practice, being one of the best known physicians of his locality. He is a member of the Berks County Medical Society and the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, and has a large share in the lodges belonging to Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M., of Hamburg, Pa.; Exceisior Chapter, No. 237; Reading Commandery; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; to the K. O. T. M.; to Camp No. 446, P. O. S. of A., of Centreport; and Perry Lodge, No. 1055, I. O. O. F. In 1899 Mr. Matternes married Miss Mary E. Plies, daughter of Benjamin Plies, of Bernville, this county, and they have had two children, Helen May and Lawrence Abraham. The Doctor is a member of the Bern Reformed Church. He is a Democrat in politics and has been school director at Centreport.

David Engle Stout, deceased, paymaster of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company for forty years, was born in Mahanoy township, Berks county, six miles north of Reading, Feb. 10, 1830. He was educated in the local schools and at an early age became a clerk in the hardware store of John M. Keim, at Reading, where he continued until 1844, when he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company. In 1847 he was appointed paymaster, and this responsible position he filled in a most satisfactory manner for forty years, retiring in 1887, with the highest respect of the officials. He lived retired from that time until his death at Jen Grove, N. J., Sept. 12, 1894.

Mr. Stout took an active part in the local affairs of Reading for many years, more especially of a financial nature, having assisted in the organization of the Union Bank, the Reading Gas Company and the Reading Trust Company, and he served as a director in each. He also served as a contractor for several terms. In his early manhood he was interested in the Junior Fire Company, acting for a time as secretary. He became a member of Christ Episcopal Church at an early age, and showed a constant interest in the welfare of the congregation, officiating for a time as superintendent of the Sunday-school, and treasurer of the church, and of other parishes with which he was subsequently identified for upward of fifty years. He was also greatly interested in the charitable societies of Reading, contributing liberally toward their success.

His brother Mr. Samuel Stout served as a Whig and became a Republican upon the formation of that party. He represented the Berks district of Pennsylvania in the National Republican Convention of 1860, which nominated Abraham Lincoln for President; and in 1864 he was a member of the Pennsylvania Electoral College on the Republican ticket headed by Lincoln. He was at one time associated as District-Deputy Grand-Master of Berks county.

In 1848 Mr. Stout was married to Margaretta Duey, of Philadelphia, by whom he had five children: Emily D., who married Samuel R. Kerper; Edward H., who married Katherine Kerper; David D.; William H., who married Mary McCoy; and Charles E., who married Mary Pidcock.

His father was John Stout, born at Schuykill Bend, in Maiden-creek township, and he carried on farming. He married Elizabeth Engle, and had ten children: Mary, John, Solomon, Esther, Valentine, James, Jacob, David, Charles, Alfred. His grandfather was John Stout, who was born in Bern township, in 1737, and who was brought up to farming. In 1772 he purchased a farm of 162 acres in Maiden-creek township, and then moved thereon carrying on the cultivation of this land until his death, in 1801. He was married to Maria Catharine Kerchner, whom he had eight children: George, Jacob, John, Daniel, Samuel, Catharine (who married Henry Boddy), Barbara (who married George Snyder) and Elizabeth.

His great-grandfather was John Michael Staudt, who emigrated with his father from Germany in 1733, when twenty-three years, and located at Schuykill Bend, above Reading (now Stout's Ferry), where he carried on farming until his death in 1776. He had nine children: John Jacob, Michael, George William, John George, Jost, Anna Barbara, Catharine Elizabeth, Appolonia and Catharine.

Rev. Achilles Johnson Long, A. M., the well-known Lutheran minister at Rehersburg, whose pastoral church included the churches at Stouchsburg, Rehersburg, Newmanstown, Millbach, Little Tulepocken and Schaefferstown, gave his entire mature life to the work of his chosen profession, and the great good he accomplished is manifest in the spiritual well-being of the many who came within the radius of his influence. He was born at Claussville, Lehighton county, Oct. 20, 1847, son of Ephraim and Hannah (Kline) Long.

The Long family is of Scotch-Irish descent. About 1790 four brothers came to this country, and located in New Jersey. John Long, grandfather of Achilles Johnson Long, son from New Jersey into Lowhill township, Lehigh Co., Pa., where he followed his trade of millwright. He married Elizabeth Heilman, and among their children was son Ephraim.

Ephraim Long was born in Lowhill township, but on reaching manhood he went first to Allentown, and later to Schnecksville. From the latter place in 1850 he moved to Egypt, and there he continued to reside until his death, June 6, 1901. He had a large general store and hotel, and also engaged in the real estate business, and had a wide acquaintance. He married Hannah Kline, who was born in Lehigh county, and who died in 1893. Their children were: Achilles Johnson; Alice m. Rev. S. H. Fegley, of Lehigh county; Josephine died in 1895; Agnes m. Samuel Black of Ashley, Pa.; Alfred is engaged as a coach manufacturer at Blooming Glen, Pa.; Eugene took his father's seat on the Egyptian; Harvey is unmarried and at home; and Walter has a music store at Allentown. The family were all reared in the Lutheran faith, and have been active in church work.
Rev. Achilles Johnson Long received his first mental training in the common schools, and in 1865 he went to Freeland Seminary, Trappe, Montgomery county, and in 1866 to Fort Edward Institute, New York. In 1867 he entered the Academy of Muhlenberg College, and the following year the College proper, graduating in 1871, and receiving a purse of twenty-five dollars for his German oration. While there he distinguished himself as a member of the Eutopian Literary Society, and the Chi Phi fraternity. Acting upon his decision to enter the ministry he became a student in the Theological Seminary and Phi Beta Kappa, and in May, 1874, graduated there. He received a call to Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church on the Tulpehocken (near Stouchsburg), and was ordained to the ministry in Trinity Lutheran Church, June 2, 1874, and was installed as pastor of the Tulpehocken charge, Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church, June 9, 1874, by the Rev. Dr. Hintertennet, president of the Third Conference, and Rev. Dr. Horne, principal of the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, and on the same day was also installed as pastor of the Rehersburg Church. He served these churches thirty-four years, and also had charge of St. Elias Church at Newmanstown, St. Paul's Union Church at Millbach, Little Tulpehocken in Jefferson township, and St. Paul's at Schaefferstown. In 1893 the Sesqui-Centennial of Christ Church was celebrated, and the good work accomplished there by the Rev. Mr. Long was highly praised. This church was originally a part of the Rehersburg charge, and after the Rehersburg church was split into difficulties. The original church was built in 1785, and this building was badly damaged by a dynamite explosion Nov. 6, 1884. It was rebuilt and Aug. 1, 1887, was struck by lightning and this time wholly destroyed. Though sadly disheartened, the members went to work and in spite of the heavy financial loss, the church was rebuilt. Altogether during his ministry the Rev. Mr. Long erected five splendid churches. On June 17, 1907, the Sesqui-Centennial of the Rehersburg church was appropriately celebrated, and the thirty-two and one-half years of Pastor Long's pastorate stand out conspicuously in the history of the church for the wonderful results he obtained financially and spiritually. He was close to the hearts of his parishioners and his unselfish devotion to duty merited the high esteem and affection in which he was held. Ministers from many places came to join in the celebration and to pay tribute of praise and respect to Rev. Mr. Long. The occasion was a most happy one, and will long be remembered by his friends who came from all parts of the world to participate in this. On Jan. 4, 1876, the Rev. Achilles Johnson Long was married to Deborah I. Minnich, born in North Heidelberg township, daughter of Adam and Isabella (Klopp) Minnich, the former a school teacher in early life but now a farmer in North Heidelberg. This union was blessed with three children, Am. E., Ada L., and Mabel M. The Rev. Mr. Long was a practical business man, and he brought his churches all to a sound financial condition. He was a director in the Womelsdorf National Bank and a member of the board of trustees of the Orphans' Home at Topton. He was a charming companion and was highly respected and charitable, and he had the confidence of the entire community. He died Sept. 13, 1908, beloved by all who knew him.

JOHN A. BRITTON, a substantial citizen of Reading, Pa., as a member of the well-known dry-goods firm of C. K. Whitner & Co. is prominently identified with the business interests of the city. He was born in Reading in 1833, son of John A. and Leah (Borkert) Britton.

John A. Britton was educated in the public schools of Reading, and at the age of fourteen years started to work as an errand boy for Lewis Briner, at the corner of Penn and Third streets. After four years with Mr. Briner, he entered the employ of John D. Mishler, proprietor of the original Globe Store, and here learned the business in all of its details, finally resigning to become salesman for Dives, Pomroy & Stewart, at the time that that firm occupied the quarters now held by C. K. Whitner & Co. Later he engaged in a mercantile business for one year with John E. Lewis, at Lebanon, Pa., but disposing of his interests he returned to Reading and engaged with C. K. Whitner as salesman, later becoming manager, and in 1898 he was admitted a member of the firm.

In 1891 Mr. Britton married Sally A. Ruth, and to them have been born two children, namely, Calvin A. and Ruth A. By a former marriage Mr. Britton had one son, Harry A. Mr. Britton is fraternally connected with several societies, in which he is very popular. He is a member of the St. Paul's Reformed Church. His business interests connect him with the Board of Trade and also the Merchants Association.

PROF. GEORGE L. KLEINGINNA, M. E., Ph. B., an author of some note, and for some years a well-known and popular educator of Berks county, was born there Dec. 31, 1872, in Bern township, son of Joseph and Leah (Leisy) Kleinginna.

Mr. Kleinginna was reared on his father's farm, on which he lived until twenty-one years of age. He obtained his early education in his native township, and in 1893 entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, from which he was graduated in 1895. Prior to entering this institution, Prof. Kleinginna had taken a commercial course in the Reading Scientific Academy, where he was supervised by the Rev. Mr. Britton. He began teaching school in Bern township when nineteen years of age, and after graduating from the Normal school he was appointed teacher of the Shillington grammar school, in Cumru township, where he continued successfully for six terms. He then purchased the Reading Scientific Academy from Prof. D. B. Brunner, and conducted it very ably for four years, at the end of that time selling out to the Reading Commercial Business College, by whom the Academy is now being conducted. During the school term of 1905-06, Prof. Kleinginna taught the Mohnton grammar school. In 1900 he received the degree of Ph. B. from the University of Michigan. He gave up teaching in the spring of 1908, to become a member of the Saylor Drug Company, at Allentown, Pa., of which he is now vice-president. He organized the Berks County Teachers' Association, incorporated in 1909, and was elected its first president, which office he still holds. He is one of the organizers and original directors of the National Text Book Company located at Reading. Prof. Kleinginna is an author of some prominence, his "James Snow," written while he was conducting the Reading Academy, meeting with a large sale. While at the same institution he also conducted a monthly pamphlet entitled the "University Chronicle," which met with much success.

In politics Mr. Kleinginna is a Democrat, placing principle before partisanship. He is a leading citizen of his community and has shown himself to be very public spirited; he was one of the original spirits in the movement which ended in the incorporation of Shillington as a borough. He and his family are connected with Grace Lutheran Church, where he has been a member of the Consistory since 1903.

On April 9, 1898, Prof. Kleinginna was married to Annie E. Kauffman, born May 23, 1876, daughter of Samuel and Priscilla (Kauffman) Kauffman, and two children were born to this union: Pearl E., born Nov. 11, 1900, who died Nov. 9, 1902; and Paul R., born May 27, 1903. On March 23, 1909, the Professor and his family moved to No. 243 South Twelfth street, Reading. Both he and his wife have many warm friends.

CHARLES W. HERBINE, a well-known business man of Reading, Pa., who was formerly superintendent of the Pennsylvania Knitting Mills, was born in Reading, in 1869, son of Charles and Catherine (Rapp) Herbine, natives of this city.

Charles Herbine was for many years engaged in the hotel and baking business in Reading, and became a substantial man. He died March 3, 1899, and his wife survives him. Of their seven children five are living, as follows: Emma; Oliver; Edward; Fannie (m. E. M. Quackenboss), and Charles W. The family as far as is known were members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Herbine was a Democrat in politics.

Charles W. Herbine was educated in the common schools of the city, and entered life which he distinguished the telegrapher a year before 1897, Walter Reading, the son of Abram, born in Lancaster county, July 27, 1839, son of Abram and Hannah (White) Herr, grandson of Abram, Sr., and great-grandson of Hans Herr.

Abram Herr, Jr., the grandfather of the Doctor, was a leading citizen and distinguished himself in various offices, both in the city and the county, and followed these occupations throughout life, becoming very successful. He was a prominent man of his generation, and was a leader in the ranks of the Whig party. He and his wife were members of the Mennonite Church. They were the parents of the following children: Abram, Martin, John, Barbara and Sallie.

Abram Herr, son of Abram, Sr., was born in 1803, in Lancaster county, and early in life began driving teams between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, before the days of the railroad in Pennsylvania. He married (first) Hannah Wasden, by whom he had a son, and (second) Elizabeth, Martha, Mary and Dr. Abram Herr. His wife died in her fifty-fourth year, and he married (second) a Mrs. Long, but no children were born to this union. Mr. Herr died in 1892 at the age of eighty-nine years.

Mr. Herr received his preliminary education in the schools of his native county, after which for a year he studied under Dr. Farnstock. He then went to Ashland, Ohio, where he spent two years studying dentistry, then going to Philadelphia. After practising in the latter city for two years, he came to Reading in 1866, opening an office on Penn street, south of Sixth, where he has resided for seventeen years. In 1876 he removed to his present place. He has been a close student and is a careful practitioner, is successful in his business, and is very highly esteemed in his community, where he has taken a great interest in local matters, especially in education.

In 1861 Dr. Herr married Louisa Ferguson, and to them were born eight children, only three of whom now survive: (1) Elmer E., born in Ashland, Ohio, May 31, 1862, m. Catharine Schrack, of Reading, and has three children: Lulue L., a teacher in the Reading public schools; Villanella, m. to Edward Rush, of Philadelphia, where they reside; and Chester A., a telegrapher for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Reading, m. to Gertrude Frey, of Reading, where they reside. (2) Luther, born in Reading, Oct. 29, 1867, now living in Philadelphia, m. Catherine V. Hartman, of Reading, and has seven children: Walter A., working on railroad locomotives for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with his father; Franklin R., a foreman of a machine shop in Reading for college in the central boys' high school, Philadelphia; and Luther, Jr., Helen L., Meriam N., Carrie and Marie, all in school. (3) Walter S., born in Reading July 1, 1875, a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry and now practising dentistry with his father, and (4) John J., Pottinger of Reading, and has one son, Abram Walter Scott. Dr. Herr is a member of the Reading School board from the Eighth ward. He is a staunch CHRISTIANA BAUER, daughter of John and Wilhelmina (Beltz) Bauer, of Reading, by whom he had ten children: William m. Ella Brown; John H. (above); Emma m. Dr. Samuel Ermentrodt; Edward m. Ella Beachor; Howard m. Ida Seiders; Ida m. Joseph Meysey; Katharine m. Dr. F. X. Wolf; Albert m. Catharine Schroeder; Theodore m. Sallie Rowe; and Florence m. H. W. Frees.

John Keppelman, the grandfather, was a distinguished soldier under Napoleon, and for valorous conduct at the battle of Wagram was awarded two medals of honor, which have come into the possession of his grandson, and are highly prized by him. He died at the age of forty-six years, and his wife lived to be ninety years old. They had four children, but their son John was the only one to come to America.

ABRAM HERR, D. D. S., one of the leading dental practitioners of Reading, Pa., is a member of one of the earliest settled families of Lancaster county, Hans Herr, a Mennonite minister, having emigrated from Switzerland, and settled in that county in 1709. Dr. Herr was born in Lancaster county, July 27, 1839, son of Abram and Hannah (White) Herr, grandson of Abram, Sr., and great-grandson of Hans Herr.

Abram Herr, Sr., the grandfather of the Doctor, was a leading citizen and distinguished himself in various offices, both in the city and the county, and followed these occupations throughout life, becoming very successful. He was a prominent man of his generation, and was a leader in the ranks of the Whig party. He and his wife were members of the Mennonite Church. They were the parents of the following children: Abram, Martin, John, Barbara and Sallie.

Mr. Keppelman represented the Sixth ward in the city councils from 1886 to 1897, four years in the common branch and eight years in the select; during which time many public improvements were ably advocated by him and established by a vote of the electors, more especially the sewer system and paved highways. Since his early manhood he has been an earnest support of the Democratic party. He became a Freemason in 1881, in Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, which was mainly organized by his father in 1865; and he is a member of the Harrisburg Consistory, and of the Shrine at Reading. He was chiefly instrumental in having established at Reading the Reading Council of the Royal Arcanum, a mutual life insurance association, which has secured a large membership.

Mr. Keppelman is president of the Board of Trade (1909). He is a member of the board of managers of the First National Bank.

In 1876 Mr. Keppelman was married to Mary E. Arthur, daughter of Col. John E. Arthur, and Rebecca Moyer, his wife, of Reading, by whom he had three children: Mamie, who died in infancy; Robert, who died in youth; and Arthur, an attorney at Reading, m. to May Sternbergh.

John Joseph Conrad Keppelman, father of John H., was born in 1827, in Baden-Baden, Germany, where he learned the trade of locksmith. He emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1848, and located at Pottsville, but he remained there only a short time while he moved to Reading and engaged in the foundry business which he carried on quite extensively for many years, having established and operated very successfully three plants on North Sixth street, the second on North Fifth street and the third in Riverside. He died in 1907. He married Elizabeth, Martha, Mary and Dr. Abram Herr. His wife died in her fifty-fourth year, and he married (second) a Mrs. Long, but no children were born to this union. Mr. Herr died in 1892 at the age of eighty-nine years.

In 1861 Dr. Herr married Louisa Ferguson, and to them were born eight children, only three of whom now survive: (1) Elmer E., born in Ashland, Ohio, May 31, 1862, m. Catharine Schrack, of Reading, and has three children: Lulue L., a teacher in the Reading public schools; Villanella, m. to Edward Rush, of Philadelphia, where they reside; and Chester A., a telegrapher for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Reading, m. to Gertrude Frey, of Reading, where they reside. (2) Luther, born in Reading, Oct. 29, 1867, now living in Philadelphia, m. Catherine V. Hartman, of Reading, and has seven children: Walter A., working on railroad locomotives for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with his father; Franklin R., a foreman of a machine shop in Reading for college in the central boys' high school, Philadelphia; and Luther, Jr., Helen L., Meriam N., Carrie and Marie, all in school. (3) Walter S., born in Reading July 1, 1875, a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry and now practising dentistry with his father, and (4) John J., Pottinger of Reading, and has one son, Abram Walter Scott. Dr. Herr is a member of the Reading School board from the Eighth ward. He is a staunch Republican in politics, and fraternal is connected with the I. O. O. F., being a charter member of Vigilance Lodge, No. 194.

DR. REUBEN D. WENRICH, proprietor of the "Grand View Sanatorium," near Wernersville, was born in Lower Heidelberg township May 15, 1842. He received his preliminary education in the township schools until he was fourteen years of age and for the next five years attended advanced institutions at Womelsdorf, Stouchsburg, Poughtown, Trappe, and Millersville. He then entered a course at Drexel Institute and then at Duff's College of Medical College at Philadelphia in 1861. During the winter months from 1858 to 1862, he taught public school, and while teaching he determined to become a medical practitioner. In the summer of 1862, he entered the office of Dr. D. D. Detweiler at the Trappe, where he continued during that season, and the next summer he read medicine in the office of Dr. William J. Schoener, at Strausstown, Berks county. During the winter months he attended lectures in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from that institution in 1864. He then selected Wernersville as a place to start the practice of medicine, and after carrying on a successful practice there for nearly ten years he became a partner of Dr. James W. Deppen, an experienced physician at Wernersville, in medical practice. They also engaged in a general merchandise business, and dealt in coal, lime and lumber. Dr. Wenrich was associated with Dr. Deppen in a most agreeable and successful manner until his decease in 1893, a period covering more than twenty years.

In 1879, Dr. Deppen and Dr. Wenrich purchased the "Mountain Home," a famous health institution situated on the South Mountain, two miles south of Wernersville, which had been carried on for about thirty years by different parties. Then they directed their attention to this great enterprise and gradually withdrew from the business operations at Wernersville. Their joint management of it until Dr. Deppen's decease was very successful, they having increased and improved the plant in various ways, and developed its patronage to extend throughout the United States. They changed the name to "Grand View Sanatorium," and it has been so known up to the present. Its situation commands a magnificent view of the Lebanon and Schuylkill Valleys, reaching to the Blue Mountains on the north, and to the city of Reading on the east, a view which has won the admiration and praise of the numerous patrons of the institution. On the death of Dr. Deppen, Dr. Henry M. Fisher became the sole owner of the institution, and since then he has secured adjoining farms and woodland, thereby increasing the total land area to about 600 acres. Costly permanent improvements were made to the plant, in January, 1907, comprising a large carriage house and barn, 101 x 100 feet; extension of main building for commodious dining-room to accommodate the guests, numbering at a time from 100 to 200; and power-house for installing electric plant and boilers for power, light and heat for the buildings. It is recognized as one of the finest and most complete health resorts in the United States.

On the organization of the National Bank at Wernersville in April, 1906, Dr. Wenrich gave it his active encouragement, and he has since served as one of the directors thereof.

In 1863 Dr. Wenrich married Miss Sarah Gockley, daughter of Michael, of Wernersville, and by her he had seven children: Dr. George G., a graduate physician of the University of Pennsylvania, m. to Anna May Corr; Dr. John A., also a graduate physician from the State University, m. to Grace Alvina Gaddies (he and his brother are on the medical staff of the Sanatorium); Eliza, m. to T. J. Gibson; Maria A. C. m. to W. W. Gockley; and four who died young. Mrs. Wenrich died in 1896, aged forty-eight years. Her father was the son of Deitch and Eva (Moore) Gockley, and the grandson of John Gockley, a farmer of Cocalico township, Lancaster Co., Pa., who had settled there before 1700.

Dr. Wenrich's father was Adam Wenrich, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg. He was married to Eliza Klopp, daughter of John Klopp, of North Heidelberg, and by her had five children: Richard M. m. Mary Koch; Franklin J. m. Sarah Klopp; Emma E. m. Franklin Miller; Reuben D.; and Jemima m. Jacob Yoder. The father died in 1881, aged forty-seven years; and the mother died in 1877, aged sixty-eight years.

Matthias Wenrich, Jr, father of Adam, was a farmer of Heidelberg. He married Sophia Kalbach, and by her had eleven children: Daniel m. Hannah Hain; Adam; John m. Anna Schaeffer; David L. m. Magdalena Raben; Henry F. m. Elizabeth Wallhorn; Maria F. m. Adam F. Stouch; and three who died young. The father died in 1879, aged sixty-eight years; and his wife in 1889, aged seventy-seven years.

Matthias Wenrich, Sr., father of Matthias, was a farmer of Heidelberg. His father was also named Matthias, and he was a farmer of the same township, his farm having continued in the same family until 1859.

JOHN W. FISHER, one of Berks county's representative citizens and substantial men, who served as director of the poor of Berks county, and as justice of the peace of North Heidelberg township, was born Nov. 9, 1844, in Marion township, son of Daniel and Sarah (Fisher) Fisher.

It is traditional that this branch of the Fisher family had its origin in America in one Sebastian Fischer, who in 1723 was a member of a party of thirty-three families to come from the Schoharie Valley, N. Y., and settle in Tulpehocken and Heidelberg townships, Berks county. One of these families was the Heidelberg township: Jacob, who paid twenty pounds tax; Ulrich, who paid five pounds tax; and Adam and Ludwig, who paid one pound each: and from one of these ancestors descended John Fisher, the grandfather of John W. Fisher. John W. Fisher came to Berks county from Schuylkill county, and settled one mile west of Womelsdorf, where he engaged in farming. He married Elizabeth Leininger, and to them were born nine children: Elizabeth m. Henry Grime of Penn township; John settled in Logan county, Ohio; Daniel; Henry lived in Marion township, and he served as deacon. In politics he was a Democrat. To Mr. and Mrs. Fisher were born two children: John W.; and Albert Adam, a resident of Lower Heidelberg township.

John W. Fisher received his education in the public schools of North Heidelberg township, and also spent one term in Freehold Seminary, now Ursinus College. When but seventeen or eighteen years of age he left school, his first term being in Centre township, and in all was an educator for twenty-five years, sixteen of which were taught in the home district. In addition to school teaching, Mr. Fisher spent the summer months in work on his thirty-acre tract, and was also performing the duties of justice of the peace, a position to which he had been elected when he was but twenty-one years old. In 1877 he leased a larger farm, belonging to Jonathan
E. Stump, a tract of ninety-one acres, which was still later increased to 110 acres, and cultivated this property for ten to eighteen years on shares or one-half. Mr. Fisher subsequently purchased, in addition to the above, 133 acres, and he also owned the eighty-acre tract purchased by him some sixteen years prior.

Mr. Fisher always took a great interest in educational matters and held a permanent State certificate. When at twenty-one years of age he was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace, in which he served for forty-one years and so impartial were his judgments that he never had a decision reversed. He was elected director of the poor in 1902, and served in that office for three years. He was always an active Democrat. In March, 1907, Mr. Fisher removed from the farm to Reading, his death having resided in his handsome double brick residence, in which he died. He was a director of the Farmers' Mutual Assistance and Fire Insurance Company, of Berks county, and served as treasurer of this organization for nine years. Mr. Fisher was a member of the Lutheran Church, while his widow is of the Reformed faith, and both have been active in church work.

In 1854 Mr. Fisher married Ellen M. Lamm, daughter of the late Benjamin and Lydia (Ruth) Lamm, of North Heidelberg township, and twelve children were born to this union, the survivors all being of Berks county: Adeline E.; William L.; Lillie A.; Emma V.; Henry G.; Messina Brossman, of North Heidelberg township; Eula E. M., of North Heidelberg township; Allie M., of Michael A.; Fox, of Jefferson township; Heela M. died at the age of six years; E. Nora is at home; Diana R. M., Alvin Christian, of Reading, m.; Minnie E., Moyer, of Heidelberg township; John C., a minister of the Lutheran faith, ordained by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania in May, 1907, and now in charge of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of The Advocate in Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.; Cora M. L., Lloyd B. Minnich, of North Heidelberg township; Anna G. M., Howard E. Brown, of Robesonia; F. May m. Herbert C. Schell, of Friedensburg, Oley township.

Mr. Fisher died Feb. 12, 1909, and his remains are interred in the family plot in Heidelberg cemetery, of which he was the organizer. Mr. Eames was secretary from the date of its organization, 1889, up to the time of his death.

MARCUS BEIM EACHES, business manager of The Reading Herald, was born in Reading April 15, 1869, and with the exception of one brief interval has been identified with printing and the newspaper business practically from the time he was thirteen years old. At that age, in 1882, he entered the printing office of B. F. Owen, Nos. 515 and 517 Court street, Reading, and there served at the case and trade until 1889. In the latter year he became pressman in the employ of John B. Dampman, owner of The Reading Herald, then located at No. 506 Court street. In the spring of 1890 he was advanced from pressman to advertising solicitor, which position he held until 1895, when he changed to the Reading Eagle, having been charged of the Eagle newspaper as manager for a period of twelve months. Following that, for about seven months, he was with the Pennsylvania Telephone Company as special agent, in November, 1896, returning to his connection with the Herald, with which he has remained ever since. He was advertising manager for three years before his retirement, when he was then appointed business manager, which position he has since occupied. Mr. Eames takes pride in the fact that his association with the Herald covers a period of substantially twenty-eight years, as he was one of the first carrier boys on the Spirit of Berks (started by Dr. Burt), and is the successor of the Herald, and has since retained his interest and connection.

During the Spanish-American war the Herald, originally a morning paper, under the new ownership of William McCormick, the present proprietor (the business being looked after by Mr. Eames), added an afternoon edition, running two complete papers from one equipment, so the business has doubled, and an afternoon edition soon over topped that of the morning edition that after a period of about eight months the morning edition was dropped altogether.

Mr. Eames long ago demonstrated his reliability and worth in his chosen field. To his energetic and progressive tactics the paper owes much of its popularity and success, and its steadily increasing growth is the best commendation of his policy. He is a man who has never been otherwise than successful, just from the broadest standpoint, and not merely by the financial standards. In his active career he has seen much of his country and has a wide acquaintance with associates in the same line of interest. He is a member of Reading Lodge No. 549, E. & A. M., the Press Club, and St. Paul's Reformed Church.

In 1892 Mr. Eames married Mrs. Kate Shafer, and has one son, Robert Morse Eames, born Dec. 28, 1894. The family residence is at No. 1154 Franklin street, Reading.

JOEL H. WELLER, merchant and successful business man of Boyertown, Berks Co., Pa., was born near Hill Church, Pike township, Oct. 29, 1849. The family history of the Wellers is very interesting and is as follows:

(1) Peter (he spelled the name "Peatter") Weller came to America in 1749 from his native land, Germany, where he was born in the year 1729, and located in Reading, Pa.; his father, Rev. William Weller, was an attorney and solicitor of the county, and in the latter part of his life was rector of St. John's church, in the town of Reading. He died in 1795, aged seventy-five years, and is buried at the Hill Church, his grave being marked by a monument erected in 1890 by his descendants. This monument was dedicated Aug. 24, 1890.

(II) Joel Weller and his father, Gideon Weller, were the moving spirits in erecting the monument to the memory of their honored ancestors, and it was their earnest desire that the younger generations of the family should assume the responsibility of the care of ground and monument. Peter Weller had three sons: Philip, John Adam and Peter, Jr.

(III) Philip Weller had sons as follows: Abraham; John; Peter; George; Philip, and Jacob. The two brothers of Philip had no issue.

(IV) Gideon Weller had sons as follows: John, Samuel, Peter and Abraham. John, brother of Abraham, had sons of Philip, who had these sons: Adam; George; Benjamin; Joseph, and Peter. Peter of John and Abraham had these sons: Charles; Jacob; Benjamin and David.

(III) George Weller, son of Philip, had these sons: Thomas, Gideon (father of Joel H. Weller), Israel, Joseph, David, Adam, George and Israel.

IV) Gideon Weller was born in District township on the Weller homestead, Dec. 13, 1831, died Jan. 5, 1899, aged 87 years, 22 days, and was buried at Hill Church. He lived in Pike township near Hill Church, on his farm of 100 acres, and during his active life he was a farmer. But he had been confined to his bed for some years before his death. His first wife was Mary Hartlein, daughter of George Hartlein, of Earl township. She died in 1879, aged forty-four. Their children were: Joel H.; Daniel, of Pottstown; Lewis, of Hill Church; Joseph, of Hill Church; Mrs. Catherine Weiser, of Boyertown; Mr. and Mrs. Landis, of Pa.; E. M. of Winterland, of Berks Co., Pa. He married (second) Hettie Fromheiser, who died in 1899. By her he had five children: Olivia; Lizzie; Alice; Civilla and James. Since 1899 the Weller family has had re-unions, and the gatherings which take place at Gideon Weller's are occasions of much interest and pleasurable enjoyment. The Weller family has long been identified with District township, where George Weller, the grandfather of Joel H. Weller, was born, as well as his son Gideon.
(V) Joel H. Weller attended the schools of his township for three months each winter, and this constituted a term. During the rest of the winter months he assisted his father by threshing with the flail and chipping wood. In 1865 he learned the tailoring trade from John Stauffer of Bechtelsville, and this he followed for fifteen years at Boyertown, to which place he came in 1871. In 1888 he opened a general merchandise business near Philadelphia avenue, where he has since continued, now controlling an excellent trade not only from the people of Boyertown, but the territory contiguous to it. He carries at all times a full line of general merchandise, and because of his enormous amount of business and his excellent selection, he is enabled to offer specially attractive inducements. In addition to his other interests Mr. Weller built three houses at Boyertown in 1890, which are very handsome residences.

In 1874 Mr. Weller married Miss Emma Bahr, daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth (Shauer) Bahr, of Boyertown, and they have two children: Mamie (m. Thomas Gabel, of Boyertown) and Miss Oblivia. Mr. Weller and his family are consistent members of the Reformed Church of the Good Shepherd of Boyertown, where he has served as deacon and elder. Formerly he was a member of Hill Church. In 1874 when the church at Boyertown was built Mr. Weller collected $5,000 for its erection, and rendered the church very valuable assistance, receiving the heartfelt thanks of the congregation. He narrowly escaped with his life at the time of the Boyertown Opera House fire Jan. 13, 1868, being the last to leave the building alive; he was confined to the house for months with the burns received, and has never fully regained his health. Mr. Weller is a large-souled, capable, energetic man, whose capacity for business and executive force is remarkable, as he demonstrated when he carried through the erection of the new church home, and the raising of the monument to the Weller family. Without him many things that have been accomplished in Boyertown is impossible to carry on without the assistance of the Weller family. Mr. Weller has been satisfied with merely subscribing to any undertaking, but gives largely of his time and personal attention. In his business relations he is affable, courteous, prompt in meeting all obligations, and in every way has proven himself the right man in the right place whenever his services have been required to carry on anything, whether of public or private interest.

(VI) Charles Weller, son of Daniel, has a son (VII) Earl—a representative in the seventh generation of the family in America.

JOHN A. HIESTER, alderman of the Sixth ward, Reading, and one of that city’s most prominent and influential citizens, is descended from the Hiesters who have been prominent in Pennsylvania affairs for so many years.

John Hester, grandfather of John A., was a farmer of Berks county, as was also his son, Benneville, the father of the alderman. Benneville Hester died in 1857, aged forty-two years. His wife was Sarah Brown, daughter of Daniel Brown, and who was born in Berks county. They had six children: Henry died in 1866, aged nineteen years; Daniel F. is a carpenter; Amanda married Issac Menviller, a farmer of Berks county; Sarah m. James Keller, of Kansas; Emma m. Joshua A. Schlegel, of Topeka, Kans.; and John A.

John A. Hester was born in Cumru (now Spring) township, Berks county, Sept. 21, 1846, and was educated in the public schools. When nearly twelve years old his father died, and, after working on a farm for a time, young Hester went to Monroe county, where he had charge of a sawmill. Tiring of this he located in North Heidelberg and became a farmer. His friends elected him as a member of the Board of Education. He in 1882 Mr. Hester removed to Reading and established a livery and boarding stable, and this business, still owned and managed by him, has grown to large proportions. Mr. Hester served efficiently as a director of the poor for nine years, so efficiently, indeed, that he was elected alderman of the Sixth ward of Reading, on the Democratic ticket (although the ward was largely Republican) in February, 1903. While a resident of Bernville, in 1876, Mr. Hester was elected chief burgess of the place although only thirty years old at the time.

Mr. Hester was married in 1872 to Catherine E. Weber, daughter of Z. Weber, a carpenter of Bernville. Ten children have been born to this union: Charles, who died at the age of three years; Mary M. has been employed in the U. S. Mint Service at Philadelphia since 1894: Martha m. Edwin Laram, a clerk at the Philadelphia and Reading freight station at Reading; John C. is a carpenter; and Mrs. M. has been engaged in the mercantile business in the summer of 1904, after serving three years, two years of which were spent in the Philippine Islands, where he was made provost sergeant; James D. and Herbert are at Reading; Eleanor is at home; and Arthur and Catherine are at school.

Alderman Hester belongs to Mt. Penn Lodge No. 65, K. of P.; K. G. E., No. 49; the Home Circle; the Literary Society; Schuylkill Fire Company, No. 12, and to the uniformed rank of this company. In his religious affiliations he is connected with the Reformed Church. The alderman has two offices, one being at No. 10 North Third street, and the other at No. 20, the same street.

WILLIAM F. McLEAN, one of the most prominent farmers of Berks County, Pa., and a leading citizen in the affairs of Heidelberg township, owns a fine farm of 155 acres of good land, three miles west of Boyertown, on the Berks and Dauphin pike. He was born Oct. 17, 1854, in Philadelphia, Pa., son of Daniel J. and Adeline F. (Futcher) McLean.

The great-grandfather of William F. McLean, who was the progenitor of the family in this country, came here in middle life from Aberdeen, Scotland, and was a member of the in-mill. He is unmarried and had children at the time of his location in America.

William McLean, son of the progenitor, was born Feb. 15, 1778, at Philadelphia, and died Jan. 20, 1844. He married Sarah Douglass, born Sept. 10, 1783, who died at Philadelphia, Dec. 31, 1843, and both are buried at the old Philadelphia cemetery. Mr. McLean was a jeweler all his life, and was very successful. He and his wife had these children: Elizabeth, born Oct. 3, 1801; Andrew, born Feb. 22, 1803; Martha, May 23, 1804; John D., Feb. 28, 1806; William S., June 3, 1808; James V., Jan. 29, 1810; John D., June 10, 1813; John D., Apr. 10, 1813; Robert M., Oct. 4, 1815; Col. George F., July 21, 1817 (was colonel of the 86th Pa. V. I.); Daniel J., July 14, 1819; Jonathan D., May 4, 1821 (Lient.-Col. of the 88th Reg. Pa. V. I.); Joseph A., May 22, 1823; and Mary E., March 25, 1826. Lient. Col. Joseph A. McLean was killed at the head of his regiment while leading a charge on the Confederate masked battery at the second battle of Bull Run, and his body was never recovered, resting in an unknown grave on the battlefield. McLean Post, G. A. R., No. 16, was named in this hero’s honor.

Daniel J. McLean, father of William F., was born at Philadelphia, July 14, 1800, and was married May 20, 1800, in the place now occupied by his son William, to Eliza, a case maker by trade, which he followed for many years at the old stand at Dock and Walnut streets, Philadelphia, under the firm name of McLean & Harper. Much of the concern’s business was done in the South, and at the outbreak of the Civil war the partners sustained much loss, and finally mutually agreed to sever their business connections. Mr. Harper, however, continued the business on a smaller scale. Mr. McLean also served in the militia of emergency men who were mustered in at Philadelphia during the raid of the Confederates into the State of Pennsylvania. Mr. McLean was active in the out, and the Republican party, serving a number of years in the city council from the then spread being highway commissioner. He was on the presentation committee when the city of Philadelphia awarded General McColgan a gold medal for bravery; participated in the Philadelphia Council's reception committee, June 9, 1860, when the first Japanese embassy visited the United States, and was on a similar committee, Feb. 21, 1861, when President Abraham Lincoln visited Philadelphia. He is buried at the cemetery at Womelsdorf.
BIographical

Mr. McLean was married to Adeline F. Futcher, born Oct. 17, 1824, who died Aug. 28, 1892, and was buried at Mt. Vernon Cemetery, Philadelphia, daughter of William and Catherine (Talberr) Futcher. One child was born to them, and Mrs. McLean, William F. McLean, was educated in the public and pay schools of Philadelphia which he left at the age of nineteen years, his last schooling being in the Philadelphia High School for Boys. In the spring of 1872 his parents removed to the old Manderbach property, opposite Womelsdorf station, in Berks county, this removal being made for the health and welfare of his parents in the person of McLean's father. Here William F. McLean taught in the public schools for three terms, and at the end of this time engaged in the poultry business, raising fine thoroughbred poultry, which he sold in different parts of the country, disposing of their eggs all over the United States. This he followed with much success until 1876, when he was appointed to the position of turn-stile keeper at the entrance gate to the exhibition of the Philadelphia Centennial, serving with ability until the end of the exposition, by which time he had been promoted on merit to a lieutenancy. His duties completed here, Mr. McLean turned to poultry raising which he continued until his father-in-law, William Scheetz's death, in 1894, when he purchased one of the latter's farms at appraise- ment and since that time has been giving his entire attention to the cultivation thereof. He breeds thoroughbred Jersey cattle and has also made numerous importations from England of Scotch cattle. He has no less than 135 acres of which forty acres are woodland located on the South Mountain, and it is very highly cultivated. Mr. McLean is a practical agriculturist and has his farm furnished with the best and most modern farm implements, and in the spring of 1897 he built an addition to his residence. He operates a dairy, the product of which he sells to a creamery. In politics Mr. McLean is a Republican, but in local matters votes independently.

On Nov. 30, 1873, Mr. McLean was married to Mary Agnes Scheetz, daughter of William and Henrietta (Depp- her) Scheetz, and to this union were born: William S., John and Isabella Filbert, and resides at Robesonia, and has charge of the hospital department of the State Asylum at Wernersville; Walter D. m. Catherine Schetz, works for his father and resides in the tenant house; Robert D. resides at home; and Edgar F. died in infancy.

WILLIAM E. FISHER, one of the leading young attorneys of Reading, is descended from an ancestry who were sturdy yeomen in Germany prior to the days of the American Revolution. They emigrated to this country before that great struggle, and were least looked upon as farmers in Berks county during its continuance, and indeed to the present time.

John Fisher, great-grandfather of William E., was a member of the war of 1812, and participated in the battle of Baltimore, in August, 1814. He was engaged in boat building on the Schuylkill and Delaware rivers, married the daughter of a family of four sons and one daughter, one of whom, Daniel Fisher, was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch.

Daniel Fisher was also engaged in boat building at the time of his marriage with Sarah Gruber, daughter of John Adam Gruber, of Heidelberg township Pleasantsville, in Berks county, he having married the daughter of a family of four sons and one daughter, one of whom, Daniel Fisher, was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch.

Daniel Fisher was also engaged in boat building at the time of his marriage with Sarah Gruber, daughter of John Adam Gruber, of Heidelberg township Pleasantsville, in Berks county, he having married the daughter of a family of four sons and one daughter, one of whom, Daniel Fisher, was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch.

John W. Fisher (father of William E.) in his early days worked on a farm, and was a student at Freeland Seminary, now Ursinus College, Collegeville, Montgomery Co. At the age of nine he began school, making his first teacher's certificate under John S. Ermentrout, county superintendent of Berks county. He taught school for twenty-five years in all; The first term in Centre township, and the balance in North Heidelberg.

At the age of twenty-one years, he was appointed justice of the peace of North Heidelberg township and was appointed for nine successive terms, holding that office up to the time of his removal to North Heidelberg township in 1907. In 1864, Mr. Fisher married Ellen M. Lamm, the youngest daughter of Benjamin Lamm, now deceased, who for many years was an influential and well-to-do farmer of North Heidelberg township. Benjamin Lamm's father was John Lamm, and he had four sons and four daughters. Benjamin Lamm was married to Lydia S. daughter of Frederick Ruth, of Lower Heidelberg township, and he had four sons and four daughters. To John W. Fisher and Ellen M., his wife, were born twelve children, as follows: Adelaide E., who died March 25, 1881, aged sixteen years; Lillie A., m. to Nelson Brossman, of North Heidelberg township; Emma V., m. to Henry G. Stamp, of Heidelberg township; Sallie L. m. to Michael A. Fox, of Jefferson township; Heela M., who died Aug. 11, 1878, aged six years; Ellen Nora, at home; Diana R., m. to William Alvin Christman of Womelsdorf; William E.; John C., a Lutheran clergyman of Germantown, Philadelphia; Cora C., m. to Floyd K. Munich, of Robesonia; Anna G., married to Howard E. Brown; Ada McLean, and F. May, married to Herbert C. Schell, of Oley.

William E. Fisher was born in North Heidelberg township, July 11, 1873, and passed his youth on the farm, developing a good physique and laying the foundation for his future education. He attended the country schools in the winter and summer, was engaged in general farm work, and during the winter of 1894 and 1895 he taught Leon's school in North Heidelberg township. In the spring of 1895, he entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, as a student, and subsequently was a student there during the fall and spring, when not teaching school. During the winter of 1895 and 1896 he taught the Forge School; in North Heidelberg township, and on March 7, 1895, he was admitted to the law school of Philadelphia University. He graduated in 1897 he graduated from the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. For a time thereafter, Mr. Fisher continued his studies under private instruction, giving particular attention to Latin and mathematics. On Nov. 6, 1897, he was successful in the preliminary examination as a student at law, and registered as a student in the office of Ermentrout & Ruhl, and for the following three years he studied law under the preceptorship of Christian H. Ruhl, one of the foremost practitioners at the Reading Bar. During the winter of 1897 and 1898 he taught school at Newmanstown, Lebanon county, in connection with his legal studies. During the winter of 1898 and 1899 he taught in the public schools of Robesonia. On Nov. 12, 1900, he was admitted to practice law in all the courts of Berks county, and immediately thereafter opened an office at No. 38 North Sixth street; and practised his profession until March 25, 1908, when he removed his office to No. 541 Court street. On Nov. 11, 1902, on motion of his predecessor, Christian H. Ruhl, he was admitted to practice in the Superior court of Pennsylvania, and on Jan. 5, 1903, on motion of William Kerper Stevens, at present a Judge of the court of common pleas of Berks county, he was admitted to practise in the Supreme court of Pennsylvania. Since this admission to the Bar he has enjoyed a large practice, principally in the Orphans' Court of Berks county, where he has been engaged in the settlement of a large number of decedents' estates.

On Oct. 1, 1904, he, in connection with his law practice, engaged in the building business, and since that time has erected in the city of Reading one hundred and ninety-five houses. Mr. Fisher has the confidence of his clients and those that are doing business with him as a builder.

In 1896, Mr. Fisher married Minnie Ellen, daughter of John E. Moyer, a retired farmer of Robesonia, Berks county, Pa. They reside at No. 145 West Douglass street, Reading, Pa. Mr. Fisher has always taken an active part in the political life of the county, engaging in every campaign since he arrived at voting age. He is a Democrat, and was solicitor during 1902 for the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Insurance Company. Since 1876 he has been a member of the Reading, Pa., and a vestryman of that church since Easter, 1900, and takes an active part in all that pertains to church life. Mr. Fisher is a member of the following Masonic organizations: St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M.; Exce1sior Chapter, No. 227, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, A. A. S. R.; Philadelphia Consistory, A. A. S. R.; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; and of Progressive Lodge No. 470, I. O. O. F., of Reading, Pennsylvania.

LOUIS RICHARDS, law writer and member of the Bar of Berks county, Pa., was born May 6, 1843, at Gloucester Furnace, Atlantic Co., N. J., of which his father, John Richards, was proprietor. The latter, a native of Berks county, came of a vigorous stock, of Welsh descent, his paternal ancestors having settled in Amity township as early as 1736. For many years he was engaged in the iron manufacturing business, principally in the State of New Jersey, also representing Gloucester county in the Assembly in 1836 and 1837. From 1844 to 1854 he resided at Mauch Chunk, Pa., as proprietor of the Carbon Iron Works at that place, and in the latter year removed to a handsome country seat known as "Stowe," in the vicinity of Pottstown, Montgomery county, where he died Nov. 29, 1871, at the patriarchal age of eighty-eight. The subject of this sketch was his youngest son, and only child by his second wife, Louisa (Silvers) Richards, a native of Montgomery county, N. J., descended upon the maternal side from the well-known Rogers family of that section, and, in the third generation, from Henry Lawes Luttrell, second Earl of Carmarthen. Employed in early life as an instructor of youth, she was distinguished for her mental culture, marked individuality of character, and social tastes and accomplishments. Her decease occurred Jan. 26, 1880, when well advanced in her forty-eighth year.

Mr. Richards received his preliminary education in the public schools of Mauch Chunk, and subsequently took an academic course, attending the West Jersey Collegiate School at Mount Holly, N. J., the Hill School at Pottstown, and the Upland Normal Institute at Chester, Pa. In November, 1861, he came to reside at Reading, commenced the study of the law under the direction of his cousin, John S. Richards, Esq., a highly talented and widely-known practitioner at the Berks county Bar, and was admitted to practice Jan. 16, 1863. While a student he served in the Pennsylvania Militia, during the invasions of the State by the Confederate armies in 1862 and 1863.

Having an early inclination to write, he contributed largely to the press, both before and after his admission to the Bar, furnishing incidentally accurate reports of all the cases tried in the county courts. In 1869 he married, and engaged in journalism, becoming a partner and editor of the Democratic Journal, and a partner, and editor of J. Knab & Co., in the publication of the Reading Times and Dispatch and the Berks and Schuylkill Journal, the daily and weekly organs of the Republican party in Berks. In 1871 he sold his interest in the firm, and resumed the practice of the law. In 1875 he purchased his father's farm, which he occasionally occupied until 1882, when he disposed of it to the Pennsylvania Iron Company, which erected thereon a very large manufacturing plant.

For many years Mr. Richards devoted much attention to municipal law, and the municipal affairs of his adopted city. While serving as a member of its Councils in 1875-
Mr. Richards has four children—three sons and a daughter—all of whom have reached maturity.

LATSHAW. The Latshaw family is well represented in Washington township, Berks county, and there, to-day, especially prominent may be found John H. Latshaw, a farmer near Passmore; David H. Latshaw, a merchant at Bechtelsville; Samuel B. Latshaw, miller, coal merchant, and farmer; and Jacob S. Latshaw, a retired farmer at his home near Pine Hill.

(II) Frantz Latshaw, the emigrant ancestor of this old Mennonite family, was a native of Switzerland. He came to America on the "Morton house" which qualified at Philadelphia, Aug. 24, 1728. On the list of passengers his name is spelled "Franz Latshaw." He located in Colebrookdale township, Berks Co., Pa. His last will and testament was made in 1781, and was probated Oct. 29, 1795. He left a large estate, which he divided equally among his children. Tradition says that his first wife died, leaving him a number of small children and no one to help in the house. Accordingly he went to Philadelphia (as the pioneers were obliged to do in those days for merchandise or help) for a woman to look after his home and children. He was told of a young woman in good repute whose husband, a Mr. Hutter, was going on the voyage to America, leaving his widow with two small children. At Philadelphia she began a struggling life with her children, finding a place as servant in a Germantown family. Latshaw became acquainted with her, persuaded her to accompany him home as housekeeper, and later they were married. Her son, Jacob, was born and then also the Latshars' son, John, was born. The early part of their life was taken into the Rutter household, the Rutters being the early iron masters of Colebrookdale, and he fell heir to some of the Rutter money, also being remembered in his step-father's will. He was a Mennonite and is buried at Boyertown; his birth occurred in 1796. Frantz Latshaw and his second wife, Anna, sold their farm in 1828, moved in his will, as recorded in book B, page 398, were John, Frantz, Abraham, Jacob, Mary Lantts (Lands), Henry Gabel (step-son), Rebecca Shelly (deceased, the mother of six children) and Catharine Lantz (step-daughter). Of these Abraham lived on the Hereford township farm; and Frantz and Catharine Latshaw, his wife, lived on the Latshaw farm in that township.

(II) John Latsha, eldest son of Frantz, the emigrant, lived in Colebrookdale township, where he died in 1794. He made his will in 1787, Will Book B, page 360. He made his home with his brother Jacob. If he was married he had no children, and his estate was divided among his brothers.

(II) Frantz Latsha (LATCH), second son of the emigrant, made his will April 1, 1802, and it was probated July 1st of the same year. His wife, Esther, survived him, and was bequeathed 400 pounds in gold. They had three sons, Frantz and Jacob receiving all the land in Hereford township, and John the homestead.

(II) Abraham Latsha, third son of the emigrant, lived in that section of Colebrookdale township, now included in Washington township. He died in 1814. His will was in English script, but German words, is on record in Vol. 4, page 114. His children were: Samuel, Johannes, Catharine, Heinrich (who lived for a time in Clayton, and then left for parts unknown), Alexander and Abraham.

(III) Abraham Latsha, son of Abraham, was born in Colebrookdale township, now Washington, in May, 1769, and died July 29, 1843. He took title to the farm he operated from the Mennonite cemetery at the meeting house at Bally. Abraham Latshaw and wife had the following children: — David, born in 1804, m. Elizabeth; Samuel, born in 1809, m. Elizabeth; John, born in 1817, died unmarried in 1840; and Catharine m. Isaac Johnson.

(IV) Samuel Latshaw, son of Abraham, was born March 18, 1797. He died June 30, 1882, and was buried at Bally Meeting House, being a member of that church. He was a farmer on the farm now owned by Jacob S. Latshaw, at Passmore, a tract of eighty-eight acres. He married Sarah Becher, Dec. 27, 1826, who died March 27, 1844; July 2, 1876, after fifty-seven years of wedded life. Their children were: Anna, born March 17, 1826, m. (first) Jonas Sassa- man, and (second) Isaac Bechtel; Susanna, born Oct. 23, 1828, m. Samuel M. Bechtel; John B. and Abraham, born Dec. 7, 1831, m. Susanna R. Moyer (born Jan. 6, 1838), lived in Pottstown, and had a daughter, Lizzie.

(V) John B. Latshaw, son of Samuel, was born in Washington township, on the old farm at Passmore March 25, 1858, and died March 4, 1887. He was a farmer, though in his early Latsha farm, for a time he followed carpentering. He married Maria Hiestand, born July 11, 1837, and died Sept. 16, 1898. They are both buried in Hereford Mennonite Meeting House cemetery. Their postoffice address was Congo, near which station they owned a large farm.

(II) Maria, born July 11, 1837, was the daughter of Henry H. and Maria L. Hiestand, born Nov. 24, 1850; who died Jan. 23, 1899, is deceased; John H., born April 26, 1871; Franklin, born in 1873, died in 1874; Harvey H. born Feb. 17, 1876; David H., born Feb. 28, 1878. (VI) SAMUEL H. LATHAW, son of John B. and Maria (Hiestand) Latshaw, born March 4, 1883, the son of a gristmill located at East Coventry, Chester Co., Pa., to which property there is a seventeen-acre farm. He married Hanna O. Bechtel, of Bechtelsville, Berks county, and they have three children—Verna, Irene and Ella.

(VI) MALINDA H. LATHAW, daughter of John B. and Maria (Hiestand) Latshaw, born Nov. 24, 1866. She married Aaron L. Bauer, a successful farmer and dealer in farm implements in Douglass township. They have one child, Harvey. Mr. Bauer has six children by a former marriage.

(VI) JOHN H. LATHAW, son of John B. and Maria (Hiestand) Latshaw, born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, April 26, 1871. His education was acquired in the common schools, and West Chester Normal School, attending the latter institution one term. He grew up accustomed to the work of the farm, and was but eight years of age when his father died, and the farm was turned into the hands of the 102-acre farm fell upon his shoulders. He farmed for his mother until one year before her death in 1898. The farm was then sold to his brother Harvey, who still resides there. In November, 1898, Mr. Latshaw bought his present farm of sixty-four acres in Douglass township, Montgomery county, at the Berks county line. He is very successful in his work, and has made many modern improvements about his place. His walks are of cement, and the whole place is kept neat and clean, presenting a most attractive appearance. The land is very fertile, and is all level and well cultivated. Mr. Latshaw keeps four horses and ten head of cattle, but in the winter season has from fifteen to twenty-five head of cattle. He is a director and secretary of the Congo Creamery Company, which averages about 3,600 pounds of milk daily.

Mr. Latshaw is a Republican in politics, and has served as a select officer. He and his family are members of Hereford Mennonite Meeting House, at Bally, of which he has been chorister for many years, and he has held the same position in the Sunday-school since he was eighteen years old.

On Jan. 22, 1897, Mr. Latshaw married Annie F. Clemen, daughter of Abraham and Mary (Funk) Clemen, of Pottstown. They have the following children: — Anna C., born Dec. 14, 1897; Elsie C., Anna C., Stanley C., Lloyd C. and Mary C. (VI) HARVEY H. LATSHAW, son of John B. and Maria (Hiestand) Latshaw, was born Feb. 17, 1876. He purchased the homestead of 102 acres, and devotes all his... time to its cultivation, being a progressive and up-to-date farmer, studying the soil carefully. He pays much attention to poultry and to the raising of young pigs. He married Hanna B. Clemmer, daughter of John B. Clemmer, of Bally, and they have two children, Norman and May.

(VI) DAVID H. LATSHAW, son of John B. and Maria (Hiestand) Latshaw, and now the leading merchant at Bechtelsville, was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, Feb. 28, 1878. He attended the local schools of his native district, and was born on the farm where he lived until he was twenty-one years of age. He then became a clerk in the general store of Jacob L. Reiff, at Bechtelsville, and after clerking there for a year and a half, succeeded him in business, buying out the entire property, stock, fixtures and good will. He carries a complete line of general merchandise, and deals largely in wholesale salt, handling the famous Genesee salts. Since October, 1901, he has been postmaster at Bechtelsville. He is a member of the Mennonite Church, belonging like most of the family, to the church at Bally. He has been active in the Sunday-school for many years, being superintendent and chorister in the Bechtelsville Sunday-school.

On Feb. 20, 1902, Mr. Latshaw was married to Mary F. Clemmer, daughter of Abraham and Mary (Funk) Clemmer, and have one daughter, Amy Lola. Beside his store Mr. Latshaw has a forty-two acre farm, and is noted for his success as a potato raiser.

(IV) Rev. John B. Latshaw, son of Abraham, was born in Colebrookdale township April 4, 1804, and at his death Feb. 11, 1878, was buried at East Coventry Mennonite Church. He was reared to manhood in his native district, and after his marriage moved to East Coventry township, Chester county, where he was elected to the ministerial office. He lived at East Heidelberg Church and at the East Valentine Church for many years. He also carried on farming, owning a tract of eighty acres. He married Mary Boyer, born Dec. 4, 1802, and died June 27, 1882. Their children were: Christian Hunsberger; Elizabeth m. Henry Kulp; Abraham lives at Hughesville, Lycoming county; Sophia m. Benjamin Halteman; Samuel B.; Mary m. Jesse Hunsberger; and Susan died aged sixteen years.

(V) SAMUEL B. LATSHAW, son of Rev. John B., now a miller, coal merchant and farmer at Barto, was born in his father's district, Chester county, Oct. 2, 1845. He was educated in the schools of the Perkiomen creek, at the age of sixteen years. He worked for his parents until he was eighteen years of age, when he learned the milling trade from S. H. Hunsberger, in whose employ he remained two years. After working at Pottstown, Pennypacker's Mills, Muncy, Lycoming county, and in Missouri, for a second time he located in Muncy. In the fall of 1868 he rented the Henry Landis Mill at Bechtelsville which he operated four years. In the spring of 1873, in company with Mr. A. L. Ebert, he purchased the old Babb Mill property at Barto, on the West Branch of the Perkiomen creek. This mill was operated by the firm of Latshaw & Ebert for three years, and then Mr. Latshaw purchased Mr. Ebert's interest, since which time he has operated it alone. This mill and property were in the possession of the Babb family for about 100 years, the mill being first used as an oil mill, the original deeds of the property mentioning it as a "oil mill." Mr. Latshaw has greatly improved the property, and in 1885 he added a "roller process." He makes the well known Minnetonka and Snow Flake flours, so popular in nearby towns. Five men are constantly employed in the mill and on the farm. There are sixty-nine acres to the mill property. In 1877 Mr. Latshaw built the barn, 51 x 41 feet. It is the largest barn in the vicinity of the entire community. The pumping station of the Standard Oil Company is partly built on three acres of land which belonged to Mr. Latshaw. In politics he is a Republican, and was township auditor for some years.

He and his family are members of the new Mennonite Church, in which he has always been an active worker, and he has been trustee and treasurer. He is a teacher in the Sunday-school at Bally.

In the fall of 1869 Mr. Latshaw married Annie E. Hunsberger, daughter of Bar and Mary Hunsberger, of Doug-kill township, Chester county. She was born May 20, 1849, and died Nov. 6, 1902, and was buried at Bally. To this union were born: Mary A., of Bally, m. Irwin H. Bechtel (who died in 1902) and has two sons—Irwin and Stanley, and Amy m. Dr. Oswin Berky, of Bally.

(IV) Jacob B. Latshaw, son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Bauer), was born on the Latshaw farm in Washington township, in 1808-09, and after a life devoted to farming in Douglass township, Montgomery county, he died in October, 1882, and was buried at Christ's Lutheran Church, at Niantic. His wife, Anna Sallada, born in 1809, died in 1882, and was buried in the same cemetery. Their children were: Levi, who died unmarried; Abraham, of Reading; Jacob S.; George, of near Congo; David, of Tipton; Maria m. to Jacob Schoeny (deceased); Annie, m. to Joel Stoudt, of near Niantic; Elizabeth, m. to Henry Moyer (deceased), of Niantic; Matilda, m. to Jeremiah Kolz. Of these Levi, Abraham and Annie are deceased.

(V) JACOB S. Latshaw, son of Jacob B., now living retired a mile south of Barto, near the Montgomery county line, was born in Hereford township, Nov. 28, 1835. He was brought up on the farm, and learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed for about seven years. He then began farming on his father's farm in Douglass township, where he lived four years. After that he farmed six years at East Greenville, and then returned to Douglass, where for four years he farmed for Andrew Bauer. The next seven years were spent on the Mary Ann Schultz farm, and in 1885 he moved to his present location. His farm is a part of the original homestead of the Latshaws, and has been in the family name upward of one hundred years. It now contains eighty-seven acres, and everything is in first class condition. In the spring of 1902 Mr. Latshaw retired from farming. He and his family are Lutheran members of Christ's Church at Niantic, of which he has been deacon, elder and trustee. In politics he is a Republican, but he has never cared to hold public office.

On Nov. 14, 1862, Mr. Latshaw m. Emeline Schoenly, daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth (Boyer) Schoenly, of Washington township, near Douglass township, Chester county, born June 15, 1840, and died Sept. 13, 1908, and is buried at Niantic. The children born of this union were: Horace, a grocer at Pottstown, m. Sarah Geisinger, and has two daughters, Stella and Erea; Amanda m. C. K. IRWIN H. BECHTEL, a successful and progressive merchant at Bally, in Washington township, Berks county, was born Jan. 7, 1866, son of William B. Bechtel, and he died May 16, 1903.

William B. Bechtel was born June 20, 1835. He was the first merchant to open a general store in Bally, and after carrying on the business until 1898, sold it and the premises to his son, while he himself engaged in the manufacture of paper, under the name of the West Branch Paper Mill, in a mill located three miles east of the town, and this he continued until his death, July 15, 1903. He established the postoffice at Bally; it has continued in that store until the present time. He was active in church life, belonging to the New Mennonite Church, which he served officially many years. He married Elizabeth Himmelwright daughter of John and Maria (Kiel) Himmelwright, of near Bally, and they had one son, Irwin H. Bechtel.

Irwin H. Bechtel was educated in the public schools and in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. He was licensed to teach by Prof. D. S. Keck, county superintendent, and he taught two terms in Washington township—one term at Dale and the other at Bally. His father then took him into the store, where he gained practical knowledge of the mercantile business under his father's guidance, and in 1898 became the purchaser of the business, conducting it until his death.

Mr. Bechtel and his family were members of the New Mennonite Church at Bally. For some years he was assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school, and then became superintendent, which position he filled in a most satisfactory manner until his decease, ably assisted by his wife.

On Oct. 3, 1893, Mr. Bechtel married Mary Latshaw, daughter of Samuel B. Latshaw, and two children were born of this union, Stanley Latshaw and Irwin Russell. Since her husband's decease, Mrs. Bechtel has carried on the business in a most satisfactory manner, serving also as postmistress.

HERBERT M. STERNBERGH, son of J. H. Sternbergh, was born in Reading, Jan. 5, 1871, and received his education in the Lawrenceville School, near Princeton, and at Harvard University.

After completing his education Mr. Sternbergh entered the firm of his father, it becoming J. H. Sternbergh & Son, and this firm was later merged into the American Iron & Steel Manufacturing Company, which is now capitalized at $5,500,000, of which $3,000,000 is preferred and $2,500,000 common stock, both being fully paid and non-assessable. Our subject was made vice-president of this company in 1901, and was its General Manager until January, 1907. He is also president of the Acme Motor Car Company, of Reading; president of the American Die & Tool Company brought to Reading by Mr. Sternbergh from Wilmington, Del.; and is vice-president of the Kansas City Bolt & Nut Company, of which his father is president. At one time he was a director of the First National Bank, but was compelled to give this up as the duties of his other associations demanded his entire attention.

Mr. Sternbergh was married, in 1894, to Harriet Hoffman, daughter of Dr. Walter J. Hoffman, a noted ethnologist, long connected with the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, D. C., and consul to Mannheim, Germany, under President McKinley's administration. Dr. Berntson, who was married in the fall of 1901, aged thirty-six years. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sternbergh, of whom five are living: Van R. H., Harriet E., Regis S., Marcia T., and Alan May. Mr. Sternbergh is a member of the Wyoming Club. In political principle he is a Republican. He and his family make their home in Reading.

WILLIAM McCORMICK, editor and proprietor of the Reading Herald, was born in 1866, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Mr. McCormick was graduated from Yale in 1887, and since then has been engaged in newspaper work, each year while teaching school in New York State. He was reporter on papers in Boston and Philadelphia; editor of the Times at Bethlehem, Pa., for two years; and in 1893 established the Leader at Allentown, Pa. In 1896 he bought from John B. Dampman, a half interest in the Reading Herald, and one year later became the owner.

Mr. McCormick makes his home in Mount Penn borough. He is unmarried.

GEORGE C. BORDNER, Professor of Higher Mathematics in the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, Berks county, was born May 22, 1870, on the old Bordner homestead, in Bethel township, half a mile east of Millersburg. He is of the sixth generation in descent from the original (1) Balthaser (Baltzer) Bordner, who at the age of thirty-four years, together with his wife Marilies, aged thirty-seven years, and three children—Jacob, Hannah and Melancthon—aged ten, eight and seven years, respectively,—sailed from Rotterdam on the ship "Adventurer," and landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 22, 1732, Balthaser Bordner settled in Tulpehocken township, Lancaster (now Berks) county, immediately after landing, and died there in 1747.

Jacob Bordner (2), son of Balthaser, and great-great-grandfather of Prof. Bordner, was born in 1722. He was executor of his father's estate, and on April 10, 1761, was naturalized as a citizen of Tulpehocken township, Berks county, at the Supreme court of Philadelphia. On June 20, 1761, he purchased from Thomas Smith a tract of land in the present Bordner homestead, which had been leased to Jacob Hoffman, who was unable to pay his rent. Since that time the homestead has been owned by a son of each successive generation. Jacob Bordner married Sarah Bait, and they reared a family of seven children: Jacob (3), John, William, Daniel, and Anna Maria Bordner. The father died in 1792, and by his will the homestead passed to his eldest son Jacob (3).

(III) Jacob Bordner (2), son of Jacob, was born in 1754, and spent his whole life on the homestead. He married to Anna Maria Brox, seven years his junior. They had a family of six children: Jacob (3), John, Catharine, Elizabeth, Julian and Susanna. Jacob Bordner (4) died in 1837, willing the homestead to his eldest son Jacob (3). The widowed mother survived her husband two years.

(IV) Jacob Bordner (3), son of Jacob (2), was born in 1792, and he, too, passed his whole life on the homestead. He married Catharine Lerch, born in 1793, and they had issue as follows: Augustus, Joanna, Mary and Thomas L. Jacob Bordner (3) died in 1867, preceding his wife in death by one year. He willed the homestead to his youngest son, Thomas L.

(V) Thomas L. Bordner, son of Jacob (3) and father of Prof. Bordner, was born May 8, 1824, on the old homestead where his whole life was passed. He was a successful farmer and stock-raiser, and a man of local prominence in politics. A staunch Democrat, he was elected auditor, treasurer and school director at different times, and in 1880 was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention which elected the national delegates to the convention that nominated Gen. Hancock for the Presidency. He and his family have been consistent members of the Reformed church all their lives. He was married to Mary Smith, born in 1830, daughter of Peter and Catharine Snyder, prominent residents of Bethel township. Mr. Bordner died in March, 1899. His children were: William J., born 1849, m. Emma Dunmore; Cyrus P., born 1851, m. Emma Trautman; Samuel T., born 1856, m. Annie Burkhardt; Adeline C., born 1859, is single; Mary M., born 1862, m. Charles C., born 1866; Reuben J., born 1864, m. Mary Weidner; Rebecca S., born 1865, is single; John H., born 1867, m. Emma Deck; Charles L., born 1868, m. Annie Hartman; George C. born 1870; and Ellen N., born 1873, died in infancy.
George C. Bordner was reared on the old Bordner homestead and attended the public schools of Millersburg in Bethel township until 1886, when he began to teach school, teaching one term in Jefferson township, four in Bethel township, and one in the Mt. Aetna Grammar School to Palatine students. At the spring of 1894, he entered the Keystone State Normal School, and was graduated in June, 1895. During the year following graduation he was principal of the Kutztown high school, and in the spring of 1894 he elected an additional teacher in mathematics in the Keystone State Normal School. In the fall of 1894 he returned to the Normal School to prepare for the Sophomore class at Franklin and Marshall College, and again taught mathematics at the Normal during the spring of 1895. In the fall of 1895 he entered Franklin and Marshall College and graduated in the classical course in June, 1898, receiving the degree of A. B., and three years later, in course, the degree of A. M., from his Alma Mater. During the last two years at college he specialized in mathematics, physics and astronomy, and attained to great proficiency in these departments. While still at college he conducted for two seasons a summer normal school at Kutztown, where he taught many men, women for teaching and for entrance to various colleges. After graduating he took charge of the Bernville high school and conducted it very successfully for one year, and after being re-elected in the summer of 1899, he resigned to take charge of the department of Higher Mathematics in the Keystone State Normal Schools. His appointment to this position indicating the esteem in which he is generally held. While serving in this capacity ever since he has taken advantage of every opportunity to raise the standard of his department both pedagogically and scientifically, and by so doing has given it a standing second to none of its kind in the State.

Fraternally, Prof. Bordner is prominently connected with Bethel Lodge, No. 820, I. O. O. F., and Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M. In politics he is a stanch Democrat, and as such takes an active interest in the affairs of the borough of Kutztown, having served for some time as a member of the borough board of school directors in the capacity of secretary of the board. He is a member of the Association of Mathematics Teachers of the Middle States and Maryland, as well as of the American Federation of Science and Mathematics Teachers.

In March, 1898, Prof. Bordner married Mary M. Berger, daughter of Levi and Rebecca (Bertram) Berger. The former is a valued citizen and successful business man of Bernville, and during the administration of President Cleveland was postmaster of that town. Prof. and Mrs. Bordner have four children, namely: Paul B., Claude L., Grace A. and Mary H.

LOUIS A. SASSAMAN, of Reading, belongs to a family several of whose members have attained prominence in the law, being a son of the late Judge Augustus S. Sassaman, for many years a lawyer of pre-eminent standing in Berks county.

Mr. Sassaman comes from German ancestry, whose first representatives came to America many years ago, immediately after the Revolution, and settled in eastern Pennsylvania. They have been in Berks county since the day of his grandfather, John Sassaman, who was of native of Germany, who was a farmer and lived in Douglass township. He was a man of thrift and shrewdness, and left a large estate to his son Christian, who lived and died on one of the best properties in Douglass township.

Augustus S. Sassaman was born on the old homestead in Douglass township Feb. 7, 1834, and received his early education in the local schools and at a classical seminary at Boyertown. In 1853, he entered the junior class at Dickinson College, Carlisle, where he graduated in 1855, after which he engaged in teaching at New Berlin, Union county, in an institution which in 1858 was merged into Union Seminary. He taught ancient languages three years and natural sciences four years, and also gave instruction in German. Meantime he began the study of the law under the direction of Hons. A. H. Dill and Isaac Slenker and resigning his position in the Union Seminary in 1869 spent a year in the office of Judge Slenker, Esq., and was admitted to the Bar at Lewisburg, Pa., Dec. 1, 1869. At the instance of some of his wife's friends he returned to his native county and soon acquired a large and lucrative practice. He continued in the general duties of his profession until 1875, when he was elected additional law judge of the courts of Berks county and served one full term of ten years, from Jan. 2, 1876, to Jan. 4, 1886. Upon his retirement from the Bench Judge Sassaman returned to the practice of the law, and he died at the age of sixty-one years, Sept. 17, 1895, nine years after his retirement from the Bench. His wife was Louisa DeTurk, a member of a noted old Berks county family of Huguenot origin, she being a daughter of Jacob DeTurk, a farmer.

Louis A. Sassaman was the only child of Augustus S. and Louisa Sassaman. He was born Sept. 15, 1868, in Amity township, Berks county. His early literary training was secured in the common schools and at Caroll Institute, Reading, and he later attended Palatinate College, Myerstown, and Dickinson College, Carlisle, where he graduated in 1891. He at once began reading law with his father, and in 1894 was admitted to the Bar of Berks county. His admission to the Superior, Supreme and United States District courts was a matter of later date. Mr. Sassaman at once began practice, being fortunate in having the advice of his father, who was then living in retirement in Reading. He soon built up a flattering clientele, and has for the most part engaged in private practice, but has served the public in several positions, notably as solicitor of Berks county and as prison inspector, which latter office he has held since 1899.

Mr. Sassaman married Sept. 28, 1895, Mary A. Zimmerman, daughter of William Zimmerman (deceased), of Lebanon county, and to this union was born a daughter, Marie, now in attendance at school.

Mr. Sassaman is a well-known figure in the Democratic politics of the city, county and State. He has always been interested in politics ever since the he attained his majority has been in demand as a campaign speaker. His ready wit and keen, forceful logic carry conviction, and he is thus valued greatly by the party leaders in campaigns. He is an active party worker and has been seen at all of the conventions of the party, having been delegate to many county conventions. In the memorable campaign which placed Mr. Pattison in the Governor's chair he was a tireless worker.

Mr. Sassaman is a member of the Woodmen of the World; and has for many years been a member of Friendship Fire Company No. 4, of Reading, and Aerie No. 66, Fraternal Order of Eagles. His religious affiliations are with the Reformed Church.

REV. GEORGE SMITH KRESSLEY, A. M., Professor of Latin, Greek and German, in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, Pa., was born Feb. 8, 1877, in the village of Rotherocksville, in Maxatawny township, Berks county.

Nathan Kressley, grandfather of George S., was a farmer and machinist. In early life he was a resident of Lowhill, Lehigh county, but later he removed to Maxatawny township, where he owned land, and where he engaged in agriculture and pursuits. He was a member of the Morgenland Church in Lehigh county. Mr. Kressley married Abbie Moyer, and they had these children: Frank, Percival M., Oliver, Amanda, Jane, Maria and Annie.

Percival M. Kressley, son of Nathan, was born in Lowhill, Lehigh county, Sept. 5, 1849, and died Feb.
JOHN W. RAUCH, secretary, treasurer and general manager of the Reading Eagle Company, is descended from old established families of Pennsylvania. The Ulrichs, his ancestors on the maternal side, were among the early farmers of Heidelberg township, Berks County, and his father's family belonged originally to Dauphin County. He was born in Hanover township, Dauphin county. Though his father spent his early life farming, he learned the carpenter's trade and became a traveling carpenter and followed that trade till his death in 1872 at the comparatively early age of fifty-four years. He married Matilda, daughter of George Ulrich, a well-known farmer of Berks county, and to their union eight children were born, namely: Grace (Mrs. William I. Graff), who died in infancy; William, who died aged 20; Sarah, Mrs. James McFadden; Margaret, Mrs. John Strickler; Harry, Mrs. James Miller; John H., a farmer in Heidelberg; William, a farmer in Jackson township; and Elizabeth, who married Mr. R. L. Zartman. The family line continues through the children of John H., viz.: James, wife of Mrs. Mary E. Graff; Charles, who married Mrs. Mary E. Graff; and William H., who married Miss Elizabeth Y. Zartman. The family line is continued through the children of William, viz.: William D. Graff, a farmer in Heidelberg; and Mary E., who married Mr. Robert W. Zartman.

JOSEPH RAMBO DICKINSON, a member of the Berks county Bar, is a son of W. Scott and Mary A. (Rambo) Dickinson, and was born in Reading July 31, 1840, and immediately, after entering the office of Jeremiah K. Grant, then district attorney of Berks county, remaining there till September, 1900, when he entered the employ of Ermentrout & Ruhl, a firm composed of the late Daniel Ermentrout, a member of Congress, and C. H. Ruhl. While clerking for these law-offices for many years, he was admitted to the bar in 1869. He is a member of the Superior and Supreme Courts of the State and the United States District, Circuit and Court of Appeals. He is engaged in the active practice of the law and enjoys an extensive practice. He is a Mason; a member of the B. P. O. Elks, Fraternal Order of Eagles, Elks, Liberty Fire Company, and many other social organizations. He belongs to the Trinity Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Democrat, and is interested in a number of financial and industrial enterprises.

On April 8, 1900, Mr. Dickinson was married to Eva M. Ermentrout, daughter of Charles Moyer of Reading. They have two children, a daughter, Anna, and a son, Joseph R.
WAYNE LEINBACH SHEARER, B. S., M. S., M. D., was born in Reading, Berks Co., Pa., Oct. 3, 1876. His early school life he spent in the private school of Miss Jennie Cooper, on South Fifth Street, later attending the Reading public schools at North Second and Delaware streets. He was educated in the public schools.

He was prepared for college in the Carroll Institute, of which Professor Edward Carroll, a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland, was principal. Dr. Shearer was graduated from the Pennsylvania State College June 13, 1900, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science, and in the fall of that year entered the University of Pennsylvania, Medical Department, from which he was graduated June 15, 1904, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine. On June 13, 1906, the degree of Master of Science was conferred by the Pennsylvania State College upon Dr. Shearer.

He has been active in the practice of medicine since his graduation from the University of Pennsylvania. In addition he is treasurer of the Leinbach Box Company, a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of wooden packing cases, crates etc., also secretary and treasurer of the Reading Manufacturing Company, a corporation manufacturing washing machines.

He is a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity and the Theta Nu Epsilon Fraternity, the former of which Greek Letter societies is still active at both the University of Pennsylvania and the Pennsylvania State College. He is also a member of St. John Lodge, No. 43, F. & A. M. of Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; and of Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.

Doctor Shearer is the only child of Benjamin Y. Shearer and Clarie A. Shearer (nee Leinbach). His father, Benjamin Y. Shearer, was born in Bern township, Berks county, Dec. 15, 1848, when he received part of his preliminary education; later he attended the Reading Classical Academy. He taught school from 1864 to 1874, and during the latter part of that period devoted his spare time to the study of law; also the entire year from 1874 until the time of his admission to the Berks County Bar, April 23, 1875, since which time he has been steadily engaged in the practice of law. He married, Oct. 14, 1875, Clarie A. Leinbach. He is a member of St. John's Lodge No. 433, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; and a past commander of Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.

Benjamin Y. Shearer is a son of Samuel T. Shearer, born Feb. 29, 1808, died in 1881, and Catharine D. Shearer (nee Yorgey), born April 1, 1810, died July 1, 1893. He is a brother to William Y. Shearer, James Y. Shearer, M. D., Catharine Y. Hain, Elizabeth Y. Dunmore, Sarah Y. Weitsel (deceased), Aaron Y. Shearer, Amos T. Shearer, and William Y. Hain (deceased). His father, Samuel T. Shearer, was a son of John Shearer, born in 1773, and died in 1847, who in turn was a son of John Christopher Sherrr, who came to America from Germany in 1769, landing at Philadelphia, Pa., in the ship "Minerva," Thomas Arnold captain. During the Revolution he was under Washington when he crossed the Delaware on Christmas, 1776, at Chadd's Ford, etc.

Dr. W. L. Shearer's mother, Clara A. Shearer (nee Leinbach), was born in Bern township, Berks county, June 28, 1851, where she received the greater part of her early education. She was married on Oct. 11, 1875, to Benjamin Y. Shearer. She was a daughter of Christian R. Leinbach and Catharine S. Leinbach (nee Esterly). Her father Christian R. Leinbach, born Dec. 6, 1826, died July 10, 1892, was a son of William Leinbach and Elizabeth Leinbach (nee Rich), an aunt to Mrs. William Arnold, Cyrus Rich, James Rich, etc. Mrs. B. Y. Mrs. B. Y. Shearer is a sister to Annie E. Althouse, Benjamin Leinbach, J. Calvin Leinbach, Catharine E. Graeff (deceased), and Timothy J. Leinbach.

Benjamin Y. Shearer and Clara A. Shearer are living at No. 146 North Fifth street, Reading.

Rev. T. L. Shearer was married June 1, 1905, to Marie Carolyn Hoffman, of Philadelphia, daughter of George H. Hoffman and Emma S. Hoffman (nee Schneider). Dr. Shearer has his office and residence at the Northwest corner of North Front and Greenwich streets, Reading, Pennsylvania.

JOHN H. BRIDENBAUGH, lawyer, of Reading, with offices at No. 529 Court street, is a native of Martinsburg, Blair Co., Pa., born Jan. 5, 1877. He has been in the active practice of his profession since the year 1902.

Henry Bridenbaugh, his grandfather, was a farmer of Martinsburg, Blair county. Rev. Samuel R. Bridenbaugh, his father, was pastor of the Second Reformed Church of Reading. Dr. Bridenbaugh married Lydia A. Bowman, daughter of John Bowman, a merchant, and niece of Dr. J. C. Bowman, of the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster. There were three children in their family, of whom Paul died Aug. 31, 1904, when just entering upon his career in the ministry of the Reformed Church; he was twenty-four years of age, and a graduate of Harvard Theological Seminary. George B. is a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston.

John H. Bridenbaugh received his early educational training at Berlin, Somerset county, and at Carroll Institute, Reading. Having been thoroughly prepared for college at these institutions he matriculated at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, where he graduated in 1899. In carrying out his decision to enter upon a career at the Bar he then went to Harvard Law School, where he graduated in the class of 1902, in which year he was admitted to the Berks county Bar. He has since been admitted to practice in the Supreme court. At Reading he read law in the office of Baer, Snyder & Zicher. He engages in general practice.

While at college Mr. Bridenbaugh became a member of the Kappa Chapter, Alpha Delta Phi, at Franklin and Marshall. He was also connected with the Diagnothian Literary Society at that school, is a member of the Harvard Club of Reading, and is a member and chairman of the executive committee of the Reading Canoe Club. He belongs to the Second Reformed Church, in the work of which he takes an active part, being at the present time superintendent of the Sunday school.

WILLIAM H. LUPPOLD, senior member of the real estate and insurance firm of Luppold & Whitman, of Reading, is a gentleman of wide influence and repute. As a member of the professional circles, in business, and in native life, he has been born in Reading Nov. 5, 1870.

The grandfather of Mr. Luppold, John George Luppold, was a farmer of Brecknock township, Berks county, while his father, John Luppold, now retired, was for many years in the grocery business in the city. Mr. Luppold's mother was Elizabeth Stuber, daughter of Charles Stuber, who was a farmer of Maiden-creek township. There were but three children, Elizabeth, who died at three years, a daughter that died in infancy, and William H.

William H. Luppold is a product of nineteenth century methods in education and business, and he is an example of what they can do when coupled with a fair share of native wit and energy. He passed through the various grades of the city schools, and then took a thorough course in Brunnert's Business college. His father being in the grocery business, he began his career as an assistant to him, remaining in that capacity for some ten years. Having become convinced of the possibilities of the wholesale lines of business, he entered the firm of John Luppold & Company in 1894, in company with Mr. J. Benton Whitman, established offices at No. 526 Court street, and as a member of the firm of Luppold & Whitman has since spent his activities in that line. Mr. Luppold's judgment was not at fault, and he has succeeded beyond the most sanguine expectations of his friends. The strong point with Mr. Luppold is the perfect knowledge he seems to have of the territory in which he is working. Having been reared in the city, there is not a foot of ground unfamiliar to him; this, coupled with the fact that he has an intuitive knowledge of the future possibilities of any particular section of the city, makes him one of the strongest real estate men in the southern section. The firm also does a large business in fire insurance.

Mr. Luppold is a man of family. He married, June 21, 1901, Miss Cora K., daughter of Morris H. Boyer, a farmer of Amityville, Berks county. To them have come two daughters, Helen B. and Alice B., now (1909) six and three years old, respectively.

In the public life of the city, Mr. Luppold has taken an active part ever since he can remember. He is an ardent Democrat, and as president of the Northwestern Democratic Club gives much attention to the interests of his party, in both the local field and the larger state and national. For a period of five years he has represented the Ninth ward on the school board, and gave most intelligent attention to the interests of education throughout the city, which may be truthfully said to possess one of the best school systems in the county. At present he is serving his second term as city assessor, having first been elected to that responsible position in February, 1905, and re-elected in February, 1908.

Mr. Luppold is affiliated with several of the best fraternal and religious organizations among them being the P. O. S. of A., of which he is treasurer, and the Odd Fellows. His religious life has been passed in the St. John’s Lutheran Church, where he is one of the influential and active members.

Life means to us all that which we would have it mean. It is true that untoward circumstances seem at times to thwart our best efforts, but no man is the “victim of circumstances” for any great length of time, unless he wills it so. This, in brief, is the philosophy of William H. Luppold, who by reason of energy and will power is one of the leading men of his city.

JOHN WEILER, publisher of the Reading Post, the Deutsche Eiche and Die Biene, is one of the best known men in newspaper circles in Reading. He was born April 17, 1852, in Essingen, Oberamt Aalen, Kingdom of Wurttemberg, Germany, and was educated in the common and high schools of his native land. After gaining employment in the post-office at Stuttgart, he came to America in 1872, and in the same year entered the service of William Rosenthal, at that time the owner of the Reading Post, as collector. He then, after a short time, became a reporter, then editor, then manager, and finally in 1892 was made owner of the property. He has had general supervision of the establishment. In June, 1908, he purchased the Reading Post printing establishment from Mr. Rosenthal, and in less than one year, after making great improvements, the business had been more than doubled. The Post had been published for forty years when it came into the possession of Mr. Weiler. It is the oldest German daily paper in the State of Pennsylvania outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, and its readers include all classes of the German speaking population, by whom it is regarded as the best public medium of communication.

Mr. Weiler also publishes two other papers—Die Biene is a weekly containing entertaining and instructive matter for the numerous subscribers; and the Deutsche Eiche is the organ of the German Order of Harpaguri, and is an eight-page weekly edited personally by Mr. Weiler. Notwithstanding the vast and responsible work entailed by the publication of these papers, Mr. Weiler has always had time for public interest, and he has taken great pride in the development of his adopted town, and has given much time to furthering the interests of the city. He is an active member of the Reading Press Club, and has officiated as its president for several terms, and he is also connected with all the German organizations in the city, also with the University Moot Lodge, Tentonlia Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M., which he has served as master.

Over thirty years ago Mr. Weiler was married to Miss Louise Hansen, who died in 1907. He has three sons: Philip A., owner of the Keystone Electric Company; George Fred, an electrical engineer; and Harry H., associated with his father and thoroughly interested in newspaper work.

SAMUEL K. SPANG, son of Jacob K. and Sarah (Kaufmann) Spang, was born at Hamburg, Pa., Jan. 14, 1868. He was educated in the schools of Reading, including a business course in the Interstate Commercial College, and upon finishing his preparation, assisted his father for six years as clerk, etc., in the business of manufacturing charcoal iron at Lenhartsville, Berks county, where his father conducted an old-established ironworks. In November, 1891, he became a bookkeeper in the office of the Reading Trust Company, and after filling this position very satisfactorily until December, 1903, the directors selected him as treasurer of the company, which responsible position he has since held.

Mr. Spang was married in 1900, to Ella Rick, daughter of Amos Rick, who for many years was cashier of the Farmers’ National Bank of Reading. They have three children: Emily R., Mary R. and Charles R. Mr. Spang is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, Reading. He has officiated as secretary of the congregation for four years.

His great-grandfather, Frederick Spang, was a prominent iron manufacturer in Oley township before 1800, having then become the owner of the Oley Forge along Manatawny Creek, and operated it very successfully until his death. He was succeeded by his son Jacob S. Spang, and by his grandson Jacob K. Spang. For many years the plant was known as the “Spang Forge,” and the settlement came to be called Spangsville.

LEONARD M. RUTH, cashier of the Wernersville National Bank, of Wernersville, Pa., was born in Lower Heidelberg township, son of James H. and Catharine (Dondore) Ruth. Leonard Ruth, Mr. Ruth’s great-grandfather, was a son of Michael Ruth, and carried on farming near Hain’s Church. He married Elizabeth Weinhold, of Cumru (now Spring) township, and they had ten children, four of whom were Isaac, Josiah, Levi, Elizabeth, Michael W. and Leonard.

Michael W. Ruth, son of Leonard, was a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township. He was born in 1830, and died in 1895. He married Catharine Hain, daughter of John Hain, and she died shortly after her husband’s death at the age of seventy-four years. They had six children: James H. (father of Leonard M.); Frank P. (deceased young); J. Hain (m. Mary Moyer, and after her decease Jennie Rothenberger); Ellen (m. Samuel R. Fisher); Emma (m. Garson M. Huey); and Mary (deceased young).

James H. Ruth, father of Leonard M., was born in Lower Heidelberg township in 1832, educated in the local schools, and brought up to farming, which occupation he has followed up to the present time. He officiated as a school director of the township, for three terms, and also as treasurer, deacon and elder of the Hain’s Church for nine years. He married Catharine Dondore, daughter of John D. and Sarah A. (1861), of Wernersville township. Mr. Dondore was brought up on a farm in Bern township, and carried on farming operations in Lower Heidelberg township. Mr. Ruth had six children: Leonard M.; Jennie (m. Amos Yoder); and Elizabeth, Ellen, Laura, and Mary, all of whom are single.

Leonard M. Ruth was born Aug. 2, 1875, and was educated in the local schools. He graduated from the West Chester State Normal School in 1895, and taught public school for eleven years—in Lower Heidelberg township four years, and as principal of the Robesonia high school for seven years. Upon the organization of the Lower Heidelberg township in 1906, he was chosen one of the directors and cashier, and he has officiated as such until now in a highly satisfactory manner.
In 1904 Mr. Ruth was elected treasurer and deacon in the Hain's Church, and served as such for two years. He was one of the charter members of the Citizens’ Hose Company of Reading, and for many years served as protection of the people of the village from fire, and has since maintained an active membership.

Mr. Ruth married Laura E. Mengle, daughter of Samuel G. and Agnes (Shoup) Mengle, of Lower Heidelberg township. Mrs. Laura E. Ruth was born Oct. 19, 1875, in Muhlenberg Township.

The great-grandfather of Mrs. Laura E. Ruth was Daniel Mengel, of Richmond township. He married Susanna Kind, and they both lived to the age of eighty-seven years. They were the parents of eighteen children, one of whom, Samuel, was the grandfather of Mrs. Ruth.

Samuel married in Lower Heidelberg township, and he married Henrietta Gerhard, of Alsace township, by whom he had four children, Nathaniel, David Llewellyn, Rebecca Jane and Samuel G.

Dr. Samuel G. Mengel, father of Mrs. Ruth, was born April 10, 1836, in Ontelaunee township. He was educated in the local schools, and graduated from the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, in 1870. On Jan. 1, 1872, he married Agnes Shoup, daughter of Richard Shoup, and they had four children, Stella, Laurant, Laura and Carrie, all but Mrs. Ruth dying young. Mrs. Agnes (Shoup) Mengle, the mother of Mrs. Ruth, was born Dec. 28, 1837, in Cummertown, was educated in the local schools, and died in 1883. Two years after the death of Mrs. Mengle, Dr. Mengle moved to Peru, Ill., where he married a second time, and where he is now practising medicine.

Richard Shoup, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Ruth, was a farmer of Cummertown, who died in 1806, at the age of sixty-seven years. He married Elvina Gerhard, daughter of John B. Gerhart, of Lower Heidelberg, by whom he had one daughter, Agnes. After the death of Elvina (Gerhart) Shoup in 1860, Richard Shoup married (second) Kate Lann. They had three children, Titus, Emma and Anthony.

John B. Gerhart, the maternal great-grandfather of Mrs. Ruth, married Sarah Kline, and had five children: Elvina, Sarah, Ellenora, Rebecca, and John K.

Owing to the early death of her mother, Mrs. Laura E. Ruth, at the age of seven years was placed into the care of her Uncle Gerhart, and when he died, she was reared in Lower Heidelberg township, educated in the local schools, and for a few terms attended Abington College, Myerstown, Pennsylvania.

GUSTAVUS ANTHONY NICOLLS, for many years prominently connected with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and one of Reading's most distinguished citizens, was born April 3, 1817, at Abbey View, Thomastown, County Kilkenny, Ireland. He was the eldest child of Colonel William Dann Nicolls, of the English Royal Artillery, who married Maria Graves, daughter of Anthony Graves, a land proprietor in County Kilkenny, Ireland. Three children were born to Colonel and Mrs. Nicolls: Gustavus Anthony, born April 3, 1817; William Jasper, born in 1824 at Exeter, England; and Maria Anne, born in 1825 at Woolwich. The Nicolls family is descended from John Nicolls, of Aran, in Strathmore, near Inverness, Scotland, born in 1540.

Like the uncle after whom he was named, General Gustavus Nicolls, of the Royal Engineers, Mr. Nicolls was intended for the army. His early education was directed with this in mind, under the personal supervision of his father, who kept him at home during his studies at the Waterford Classical and Mathematical Academy, an institution noted for the scholarship of its pupils. He finished his schooling at the Wanstead Military College, near London. His proficiency in all branches of mathematics was well shown in his subsequent success in civil engineering. It was his father's wish that he go to the East Indies immediately upon the conclusion of his student life, and his uncle, Sir Jasper Nicolls, who had served with distinction in South America and India and was then commander-in-chief in India, promised to give him an appointment as aide-de-camp on his personal staff. But the young man had other ambitions, and believing that the United States offered a more congenial field for his talents and energy left for this country, sailing from England in September, 1834.

Arriving in Philadelphia, Mr. Nicolls studied law for a time in the office of Henry M. Phillips. In April, 1838, he was appointed an engineer in the engineer corps of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and in 1836 was promoted to assistant engineer, taking charge of the completion of a section of railroad between Douglassville and Exeter. In 1837 he became principal assistant and was stationed at Reading, and the next year was made head of the supervision of the line. He was elected to this position for eight years, until 1846. He then became chief engineer and general superintendent of the company, holding both positions for thirteen years, by the end of which time the duties had become so arduous that it was necessary to divide the work, and Mr. Nicolls chose the position of general superintendent. He served as such from that time until February, 1871, when he was appointed to act also as president's assistant. This change made it necessary for him to remove his residence from Reading to Philadelphia where he resided until his return to Reading in May, 1877. Meantime, in 1857, he was elected vice-president of the company, and was unanimously re-elected to that position in 1875 and 1876. In 1877 the positions of first and second vice-president were abolished, and then Mr. Nicolls was elected president of the following branch railroads of the company: Reading & Columbia, East Pennsylvania, East Mahanoy, Allentown, and Chester & Delaware River. In 1876 he was chosen president of the Susquehanna & Tide Water Canal Company. These various positions he continued to fill, by annual re-elections, until his death. He was in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company for over fifty years, and his ability, energy and geniality were better witness than his long retention in the various positions to which he was chosen.

Coming to Reading in 1836, at the very dawn of the great developments which have taken place through the combination of iron, coal, and steam, Mr. Nicolls was a prominent figure among those who directed the growth and progress, and his name will always be prominent among the leaders of his day. During his unusually long term of service with the Philadelphia & Reading Company, covering over half a century, he saw the company advance from a modest beginning to colossal proportions. He watched the satisfaction of keener interest and energy had much to do with its growth and progress. During his entire career as an official his constancy to the interests of the company was a prominent characteristic, and his intelligent, systematic management not only resulted in great financial benefit to the road but in many other advantages, as well as in contributing to the safety and comfort of its patrons. His courage and resource were never better shown than during the great riots of 1877 at Reading, when the whole community was aroused and alarmed over the rebellion of excited and dissatisfied railroad employees. He was fearless in occupying his prominent position as a passenger station, giving valuable suggestions for the preservation of the company's property and for the movement of regular trains. His attachment to the company was no less marked than his consideration for its employes. On one occasion during the riots he was endeavoring to restore order and rebuke one of the rioters said to his companions: "Let's shoot that fellow!" "No, that's Nicolls," said the strikers who knew him, "and if you try to kill him, you must do it over our dead bodies."

Though he was probably best known in his connection with the Philadelphia & Reading Company, Mr. Nicolls was a man too broad and widely sympathetic to confine his activities to any one line. He was a director of the Reading Fire Insurance & Trust Company from the time of its organization in 1846 until 1875. In 1862 he was elected a trustee of the Philadelphia & Lehigh Railroad Company. During the year 1862 the "Reading, Marletta & Hanover Railroad"—a branch line of the Philadelphia & Reading system—was completed mainly by his influence. In 1869 he became a charter member of the Philadelphia, Reading & Pottsville Telegraph Company. In the organization of the company in 1847 he was elected a member of the board of managers, to which position he was annually re-elected for a long period.

As a citizen of Reading Mr. Nicolls always manifested a lively interest in its material development and prosperity. Enterprises of various kinds were fostered and the Reading Times, which were published in that paper, swelling the experiences of the party in that country, the sights observed, impressions received, and other interesting material. In 1872 he visited all the countries of Continental Europe. In 1876 he again went to the Continent, visiting the Paris Exposition, England, Sweden, and Russia; some of the impression of foreign travel was reported in a letter in the Reading Times.

He died in his home at 11th and Main streets, before his death Mr. Nicolls was an indefatigable traveler. In 1848 he made a trip to the British Isles which covered a period of three months, during which he visited all the places of importance. In 1856, with a party of friends, he made a trip through the South and visited the Island of Bermuda. While on that expedition he addressed a series of letters to the Reading Times which were published in that paper.

Mr. Nicolls was a devoted and consistent member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Education, Clubs, and the University were not neglected, for a number of years he was a member of Congress from this district, and who was also the first minister from this country to Austria. He was at the time of his decease, in 1844, the Democratic candidate for Governor.

Mr. Nicolls was born in Hanover, the son of Rev. James Nicolls, a clergyman of the old school, to whom he was devoted and who was much interested in his welfare. His father was a Whig and a stern supporter of the Constitution and the Union. In politics he was originally a Whig, later a Republican. In 1866 Mr. Nicolls was offered the nomination for Congress by the Republican party, but his numerous business duties, particularly those concerning the Philadelphia & Reading Company, made it impossible for him to accept.

Reading's active in the various charities supported in the city. He was always a generous contributor to the work of the "Reading Benevolent Society," of which he served as president for eleven years, from 1860 to 1871. The Young Men's Christian Association also found him a liberal and ardent supporter of its work, and he served as president for over two years, the 1880 to 1882. For a number of years he served as one of the managers of the Reading Dispensary and of the Reading Hospital. He served the "Home for Widows and Single Women of Reading" as chairman of the building committee in the erection of its handsome and commodious double residence, three stories in height and constructed of sandstone, at the northwest corner of Walp and Fourth streets, the first charitable undertaking of the kind in that section of the city. The place was planned and prepared for, and when the building was put under his personal supervision. It was finished in 1871, and even now, after the lapse of many years, is regarded as one of the most dignified and tasteful homes in the city.
the true equality of man, and practised this principle by being courteous to the humble, no less than to the high, and by treating all men in the same manner.

Mr. Nicolls always kept the motto of his family, "Fide et Industria," as the guiding rule of his life; and to this influence he ascribed much. The friendship and confidence of those who knew him best know that his triumphs were the well deserved rewards of constant and devoted labor, of untiring thought and an unshrinking sense of duty. His name will ever be associated with the development of the best that has contributed to the growth of his adopted city, whether from material or educational standpoint, and his memory is held in profound respect in the many circles with which he was identified.

WILLIAM O. HEINLY is the present publisher and proprietor of The Hamburg Item, published at Hamburg, Berks Co., Pa. He is a son of David L. and the late Maria Heinly, of Reading, and was born at Evansville on July 10, 1862.

The family locating in Hamburg when he was six years of age, he received his education in the public schools, leaving the high school at the age of fifteen years to enter the Item.—He then established a paper in 1889, having been employed as a printer for a number of years.

In 1884 he associated himself with John B. Clevenstein in the commercial printing and engraving business. After six months the business was divided by mutual consent, Mr. Heinly taking the engraving branch, and he continued this for one year. On Dec. 1, 1885, he entered for the first time the editorial field, assuming the control of the Herald at Claremont, Va., where he continued for several years, returning to the foremanship of the Reading Times job department in 1887.

The death of Mr. Focht, the founder of The Hamburg Item, in September, 1887, necessitated the sale of the office to close the estate. Mr. Heinly purchased the property in December of that year, and took personal control at the close of the year. During the twenty-two years of his ownership the scope and influence of The Item have widened, the paper has been enlarged from a six to a nine, a large quarro, the office expanding from a hand operated press to a folding machine, type-setting machine and stereotyping department.

Mr. Heinly has always taken an active interest in all public matters pertaining to the development of the town of Hamburg and community. He was the prime mover through the newspaper in the organization of the Board of Trade in 1889, and has served as its secretary from its organization to the present. He is a member of the Board of Health, and its secretary; he is the registrar of District No. 227 of the Pennsylvania State Department of Health; served five years as school director, and planned the present improvement of the school grounds; he is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church and its vested choir; also of the Pennsylvania State Editorial Association, the International League of Press Clubs, and the Reading Press Club; Hamburg Council, Royal Arcane of the Community Lodge, I. O. O. F.; Lower American Legion, O. K. F.; Hamburg Castle, K. G. E.; Ontelaunee Tribe, I. O. R. M.; the Brotherhood of Odd Fellows of Boston; the Hamburg Motor Club, and the Hamburg Rod and Gun Club. He is also president of the Hamburg Gas Company, and interested in various industrial enterprises.

He is the father of two children, Esther and Raymond. His wife died in February, 1903.

REV. FREDERICK BENDER HAHN, pastor of Faith and St. James Reformed Churches, whose useful life was brought to an unexpected and untimely close, May 16, 1903, was one of the best known ministers of his faith, and was greatly beloved by all who came within the radius of his pure Christian life.

The Rev. Mr. Hahn was born in Plainfield, Northampton Co., Sept. 8, 1845, son of Richard and Sophia Hahn, pious, industrious people. On the 1st of September, 1848, his early education was acquired in the public schools of his native town, and he afterward attended the Normal School at Kutztown, graduating in 1869. For some time he then studied in the Academy at Mercersburg, after which he went to Lancaster and entered Franklin and Marshall College there, which was graduated in 1875. Having determined to consecrate his life to the service of his Master, he at once entered the Theological Seminary, completing his studies there in 1878, in the spring of which year he was examined and licensed by the Lancaster Classis, and then dismissed to St. Paul's Classis in the Pittsburg Synod.

In 1875 he was ordained by St. Paul's Classis, and received a call from the Reformed Church at Greenville, Mercer county, where he served six years, and where he accomplished the building of a much needed church edifice. He was then one year in Mt. Pleasant, resigning to accept a call to Overbrook, Pa., for a circuit of churches. Here he labored three years. From Meadville he accepted a call from the Board of Home Missions to become pastor of the First English Reformed Congregation in Cleveland, now known as the Hough Avenue Church, and there he performed a very difficult work, being compelled to hunt and settle up debts of the former years of his labors, finally beginning to hold service in a hall which he rented at one dollar per night. In every parish to which he gave his services he accomplished much from his missionary work in all the territory round. He often preached three sermons on Sunday, besides conducting Sunday-school, and, in addition to visiting the sick, and performing the countless tasks that fall to the lot of the average minister, often left him tired and worn at night—but never too tired to answer the call of the poor or afflicted. In 1880 he resigned at Cleveland, and was made pastor of the Kutztown charge, consisting of St. Paul's Church at Kutztown, and St. Peter's Church at Topton. In 1892 he resigned and moved to Reading, taking charge of two congregations—Faith and St. James—and in this field he closed his well-spent life, and his labors were not in vain. It was largely through his personal effort that the debt on St. James was paid, and both charges were left in much better condition than when he became pastor. In 1895 at the organization of Reading Classis, the Rev. Mr. Hahn was elected stated clerk, and he served most efficiently until his death. He was a hard and earnest worker, promptly responding to the call of duty, and considered at no time his own comfort or well being. Often when ill he was urged for his own good to abandon some part of his work, but he always declined, and his last labor was to assist a fellow worker by holding service in Boyertown. In his school days he was an industrious student, and the habits there formed clung to him all his life. No time was wasted, every minute of his waking hours was spent in accomplishing some part of the great work in which he was engaged. Little children instinctively loved him, and he was never so happy as when surrounded by them. Over thirty ministers of the Reformed Church came to do him honor at his funeral, as well as about a dozen ministers of other denominations. Interment was made in the Charles Evans cemetery. The following resolutions were passed by the Joint Consistory:

"Reading, Pa., May 21, 1901.

"WHEREAS, It hath pleased an all-wise Providence to remove by the hand of death from our midst our beloved pastor and friend, Rev. F. B. Hahn, be it

"Resolved, That the United Consistory of Faith Reformed Church of Reading, and St. James Reformed Church, of West Reading, hereby express our humble submission to divine will. That we acknowledge our debt to him as friend and faithful pastor, who for eight years preached to us the pure and simple gospel of Jesus Christ, and led us in paths of justice, peace, righteousness and truth. That we, in behalf of the congregations we represent, do consecrate ourselves anew to the work of the Master whom he loved, with the determination, by the help of this same Master, of making constantly and increasingly effective his teaching and labors among us.

Resolved, That we express our heartfelt sympathy for the stricken family, so suddenly bereft of its head and support, and that we will keep them in remembrance as the widow and orphans of a good man, a dear friend and a faithful pastor.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family and to the Record.

By order of the Joint Consistory,

"G. B. TRECHSEL, Secretary.

Faith Reformed Sunday-school passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, The great and supreme Ruler of the universe has, in His infinite wisdom removed our worthy and esteemed pastor, Rev. F. B. Hahn; and

WHEREAS, The long and intimate relation held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties as pastor of this church and Sunday-school makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him; therefore be it

Resolved, That his labors in church and Sunday-school will long be held in grateful remembrance.

Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy that will be deeply felt by all the members and friends of the Church and Sunday-school, and will prove a serious loss to the community and public.

Resolved, That with deep sympathy for the bereaved family and relatives of the deceased, we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Sunday-school, a copy printed in the local papers, and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

On June 4, 1878, Mr. Hahn was married to Miss Ella R. BRIDENAUGH, sister of Rev. Dr. S. R. BRIDENAUGH, of the Second Reformed Church. Six children blessed this union, two of whom preceded their father to eternal life. Those surviving are: Mary, Edith, Ruth and John. Mrs. Hahn has been a tireless worker in the cause of Christ, and was her husband’s able assistant in the upbuilding of his parishes. Her charity is broad, and she has proved herself a ministering angel in the homes of those sore oppressed; while her own home has been ever open to the poor, the needy and the stranger.

JESSE F. BECHTEL, of Colebrookdale township, Berks county, has long held an honored place in the educational world as a teacher, his enthusiasm and magnetic personality winning his pupils and carrying them boldly forward along the path to knowledge.

The Bechtel family came to America from the German Palatinate. “On Aug. 24, 1728, eighty Palatines with their families, in all 205 persons, who shortly before, after a seventy days’ voyage had arrived in the ship ‘Mortmonhouse’ from Deal, Capt. John Coulitas, in the harbor of Philadelphia, appeared in the halls of Justice in Philadelphia to render the oath of allegiance to the Crown of England, declaring it to be their intention to ‘settle themselves in Pennsylvania.’ The company consisted of eighty males and sixty-nine females upward of sixteen years of age, and fifty-six children. Among the names of the adults belonging to this company of emigrants we find the name of (1) George B., born Feb. 17, 1709, by the father of Isaac and Gerhard Bechtel, heading the list.” Tradition says he came from Weinheim, Germany.

The large German family Bible of George Bechtel is yet in existence. The Bible came into the hands of Gerhard Bechtel, and is now in the possession of one of his descendants. On the fly-leaf is written this note in German: “Diese Buehl ist gedruckt in Deutschland im Jahr 1720. Im Jahr 1730 ist sie George Bechtel von Seinem Vater von Deutschland nach America geschenk worden. Zwischen den Jahren 1750 und 1760 haben sie Gerhard Bechtel.”

“In the course of time the early history of the family has been so obscured in the mists of the past that a clear conception and an unerring presentation of the facts are well-nigh impossible. Among the lists of emigrants who came over in the same ship with George Bechtel are found the names of Noll, Neuhoff, Lashtaw, Dogter, Huber, Heller, Brunner, many of whose descendants still reside in eastern Pennsylvania.”

(II) Isaac Bechtel became a farmer and miller, and had his home in and near Bechtelsville, now in Washington township, Pa. Bechtelsville was laid out by his son, John S. Bechtel. Isaac Bechtel and both of his wives are buried in the old Henderson Mennonite graveyard near Bally, Washington township, Berks county, Pennsylvania. His tombstone bears the following inscription:

Hie ruhen die gebeine des verstorbenen Isaac Bechtels er wurde geboren den 28 ten tag Juny A. D. 1751 und ist gestorben den 3 ten tag April im Jahr 1820, er brachte sein alter auf 81 Jahre, 9 monat und 10 tage. Seelig sind die toten die im Herren stern sein.

Isaac Bechtel married (first) Esther Stauffer (1757-1808), and to this marriage were born fourteen children: Jacob S., born Oct. 9, 1774, m. Anna W. Bechtel; Mary S., born Sept. 22, 1776, m. Abraham Eschbach; Elizabeth S., born Nov. 14, 1778, m. Peter Eschbach; Nancy S., born Nov. 2, 1780, m. Joseph Reif; Susan S., born Oct. 6, 1782, m. William Johnson; Catherine S., born Oct. 15, 1784. John W., born Dec. 21, 1788, m. Maria Hoch; George S., born Feb. 22, 1788, m. (first) Miss Barto, and (second) —— ; Sally S., born Dec. 25, 1789, m. Henry Sassaman; Isaac S., born Oct. 18, 1791, m. (first) Polly Sassaman, and (second) Betsy Kehl; Polly S., born Aug. 30, 1798, m. Henry Oberhoetzler; Abraham S., born July 20, 1795, m. (first) Nancy Bechtel, and (second) Hettie Springer; Gerhard S., born May 3, 1797, m. (first) Maria Erdman, (second) Mary H. Fromheimer, and (third) Christina Gruber; and David S., born Sept. 14, 1799, died Feb. 26, 1800; Isaac Bechtel m. (second) Barbara Birt. To this union no children were born.

(III) Gerhard S. Bechtel, son of Isaac, born May 3, 1797, died Oct. 8, 1881. By occupation he was a carpenter, undertaker and farmer. As an undertaker he had charge of hundreds of funerals in his time in the lower end of the county, making and his assistants made the coffins by hand as needed. For many years he was landlord of the “Washington Hotel” at Eschbachs. He was a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and worshipped at St. Joseph’s Church, commonly known as Hill Church, Pike township, Berks county, and is buried in the family lot of the church. He married Maria Erdman, and they had four children, as follows: (1) Lydia E., born April 2, 1818, died Aug. 2, 1852, m. John M. Stauffer, sheriff of Montgomery county from 1850-62, and their children were: Elvina, Jacob E. (a soldier in the Civil war and now a clerk in the Adjutant General’s office, Harrisburg, Pa.), Mary and Wesley E. (2) Gerhard S., born Feb. 19, 1818, m. Jesse B. Penneyacker, and they had one child, Amos B. (3) Elizabeth E., born Aug. 4, 1826, died March 15, 1871, m. George M. Eschbach, and had children:

(IV) Jesse F. Bechtel, son of Gerhard S. and Mary H. (Frankeir), born Sept. 16, 1852, at Eschbachs, in Washington township, married, Sept. 23, 1876, Mary A. W. Pennepacker, born June 19, 1856, daughter of Eli and Sarah (Wieand) Pennepacker, a distant relative of the Berks county Bechtels. They brought to this union: (1) Marie Cordelia P., born July 8, 1877, at home. (2) Jesse Luther P., born Dec. 30, 1878, graduated from the Philadelphia Business College and College of Commerce, and is now employed by the Boyertown Casket Company, in their store at Philadelphia. He married Anna C., (3) the following, P., born Dec. 17, 1880, married Henry B. Reminger, and has one child, Mae B. Reminger. (4) Abram Grant P., born March 2, 1887, is a graduate of the Pottstown Business College, and is now at home.

Jesse F. Bechtel has resided at Gablesville, in Colebrookdale township, since 1880, in which year he built his present home. At about the age of seven years he came to Colebrookdale township to live with his uncle Jesse B. Pennepacker, with whom he made his home for ten or twelve years, working on the farm in summer and attending the public schools in winter. During the winter of 1896-97, he entered the State Normal School at Kutztown, and graduated in 1897. He is now Supervisor of the Public Schools of the Boyertown, Prof. I. B. Hanley, principal. The same year he was licensed to teach, receiving his first certificate from the late D. B. Brunner, the Superintendent of Public Schools of Berks county. He taught his first term 1870-71 in Pike township, near Hill Church. During the summer of 1871 he again attended the Academy. He has taught in all thirty-six terms, all with the exception of the first term, in Colebrookdale township, having been engaged at the Cleaver's, Gablesville and Weistown schools, and in several families he has taught three generations. He has taught under several superintendents: Brunner, Baer, Keck, Zechman and Rapp. Since 1887 he has held a Permanent Certificate, and since 1893 he has been a member of the Berks county Teachers' Reading Union. For three years, 1873-75, he was a clerk in a general store—one year at Pikeville and two years at Gablesville.

Mr. Bechtel is a member of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, at Boyertown, where for more than ten years he has served as elder, and since 1897 as secretary of the Church council. He has represented his church as lay delegate to the meetings of the Ministerium of Pennsylvania and adjacent States. In 1897, Easton, 1902, Philadelphia, 1903, and Allentown, 1908. For nineteen years he has been superintendent of the Sunday-school (union) at Gablesville. In politics he is a Republican, and he has been a delegate to a number of County conventions, twice a State delegate, and for twenty-four years our representative at the Lehigh Valley convention. From 1894 to 1899 he served as justice of the peace, and in 1899 he was elected enumerator. Mr. Bechtel has a fine collection of Indian relics, numbering some 1,600 specimens, and most of these were found in the immediate vicinity of his home in what is known as Cleaver's Valley, near the Indian Trail, between the Indian village (where the Indians who once lived there) and the Ohio. He also possesses a unique Washington button, made many years ago. It bears the motto "Long live the President!" along the outside are the initials of the twelve colonies. In the inner circle are the initials G. W. He finds great pleasure in his well-kept lawn, which is a great improvement to the adjoining fields.

The first Bechtel Reunion was held Sept. 23, 1897, in the old Hereford Mennonite Meeting-house (since then replaced by a new structure). The original meeting-house there was built in 1735, and its quaint appearance indicated its great age. It was a low wooden building a little larger than the ordinary school house. The joists upon which the roof rested extended far over the sides of the building. This venerable building was occupied by the Old Mennonites, who held services there over 140 years. Many of the descendants of the first Bechtels worshipped there. Among the ministers who served this congregation are a number of Bechtels; in fact, the family has supplied a minister from almost every generation.

CHESTER B. CLEAVER, a well-to-do business man of Reading, Pa., who has served as county commissioner of Berks county, was born in Pleasantville, Oley township, Berks county, Nov. 21, 1830, son of Hiram K. and Catherine (Bertolet) Cleaver.

Cleaver was born in Pike township, and while engaged in farming, also worked at the trade of blacksmith, which he had learned from his father. He owned property in Oley township, which he conducted until his death in 1877, at the age of forty-six years. His first wife died in 1857. They were the parents of three children: Chester B., Annie and Amanda. Mr. Cleaver was married (second) to Esther Greisemer, and there were three children born to this marriage also: Rosella, Catherine and Mary Ann.

Chester B. Cleaver was educated in Oley township, and when twelve years of age entered his uncle's store at Girardville, Schuylkill county, where he remained three years. Then after five months' attendance at the State Normal School at Kutztown, he entered his father's store at Pleasantville, where he remained three years, in the store business at Spangsville, and after a few years returned to farming. In 1879 he purchased seventy-one acres in Oley township, his present home, and here he carried on operations until 1906. He purchased three farms, having in all 174 acres. In 1906 he was elected county commissioner on the Republican ticket, an office he filled with efficiency and to the satisfaction of all concerned. For the past twenty-three years Mr. Cleaver has been engaged in a horse and cattle business, and in 1909 he opened a safe, exchange and livery stable at Girardville, in which enterprise he has been very successful. He is known throughout the county as an able and honorable business man, and his reputation is above reproach.

Mr. Cleaver married Ellen B. Weidner, and to this union there were born four children: Howard, Webster, Warder and Mahon. Mr. Cleaver is liberal in his religious b-lief. Fraternally he is connected with Chandler Lodge, No. 227, of Masons.

FRANK ALFRED TOWNSEND, until Oct. 8, 1907, one of the valued employees of the Reading Water Department, holding the position of draughtsman in the office of the Superintendent and Engineer, is well authenticated just when the first of the name landed on our shores, but it was very early, if not of this branch of the family. John Townsend, grandfather of Frank A., lived and died a Lancaster county farmer, and his son Robert A., the father of our subject, was a school teacher in the same county for some thirty-five years. He married Elizabeth Matilda Comroy, daughter of John Comroy, of Lancaster, who now survives him. She became the mother of eight children, of whom four are now deceased, as follows: Robert, William, Edward and Laura. Those living are: Roberta, who married Herbert A. Brown, chief train dispatcher of the Texas & Pacific railroad at Marshall, Texas; Thomas Walter, assistant baggage master of the same road, at the same point; Sara Elizabeth, principal of the public schools of Tenth and Union streets, Reading; and Frank Alfred.

Alfred Townsend was carefully educated in the public schools of the city, graduating from the high school in 1896 in the English Scientific course, adding also three years of Latin. The following year he took a post-graduate course, and then accepted a position with E. E. Davis, assistant superintendent of Motive Power and Switching, Equipment of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. Remaining in this position from July, 1898, to May, 1899, he was transferred to Division Superintendent Wilson's office at Reading. Until Feb. 12, 1900, he filled the duties of his position acceptably, at which time he was offered the position of draughtsman in the Reading Water Department, which he filled with efficiency. On Oct. 8, 1897, he resigned and went to Marshall, Texas, to manage a project for Mr. H. A. Brown, but not being well satisfied accepted a position with the Texas & Pacific Railroad Company under Master Car Builder Mr. W. D. Minten. He then left this position to become general storekeeper and chief clerk to Master Mechanic A. C. Lees. On Oct. 3, 1898, he was married at Fort Worth, Texas. This position he accepted on Dec. 10, 1908.

Mr. Townsend is as yet an unmarried man. He votes with the party of Lincoln and McKinley and is a communicant of St. Peter's Catholic church. A young man of worth and energy, his future lies in his own hands.

ROBERT McKITTRICK, a well-known resident of Reading, who is employed by the American Steel & Iron Manufacturing Company, of the city, was born March 4, 1847, in Cumberland, England, son of Robert and Mary (Taggart) McKittrick.

Robert, the elder, was also a native of Cumberland, England, and received his education in the common schools there, being later employed around blast furnaces. He became what is known as a furnaceman, and was an expert iron maker, following this occupation for many years. He had been previously employed in a chemical works, but gave this up for the iron work. Mr. McKittrick died in 1890, aged eighty-one years, as a result of injuries received in an accident. He and his wife were Presbyterians in religious belief. They were the parents of six children: James; Agnes; Sarah, who lives in South Africa, the wife of William Davidson; Emma, who lives in the South; the wife of Thomas Harrison; Robert; and Henry, of South Africa.

Robert McKittrick, the younger, was educated in the schools of his native Cumberland, and as a boy learned the molder’s trade which he followed for four years, and later acquired a thorough knowledge of the machinery of this trade, being employed for eighteen years as superintendent of the blast furnaces at Cleater Moor. In June, 1889, Mr. McKittrick came to America, locating at Talladega, Ala., for about two years, and then located in Pennsylvania, accepting a position at Sheridan as foreman of the Sheridan furnace. He remained there for two years and nine months, and then, coming to Reading, he entered the scale works, where he was employed until he entered the employ of J. H. Sternbergh, now the American Steel & Iron Manufacturing Company.

In 1873 Mr. McKittrick was married to Anna Walker, a native of Cumberland, England, and to this union have been born four children: Andrew; Aaron Edward, Robert, Marie, William H. and Harry. Mr. and Mrs. McKittrick are both members of the Episcopal church. In his native country Mr. McKittrick was a member of Sterling Lodge, F. & A. M.

IRWIN M. SHARMAN, a prominent citizen of Ontelaune township, Berks Co., Pa., who is now in the employ of the P. S. V. Railroad Company as operator and leverman near Leesport, has been closely identified with the public interests of his township, of which he has served as justice of the peace and State legislator. Mr. Sharnan was born Sept. 5, 1862, at the old West Reading toll house in Spring township, Berks county, son of Levi and Emeline (Moyer) Sharnan.

John Sharnan, grandfather of Irwin M., was for many years proprietor of the old hotelery known as the “Dry Tavern,” near Spring Township, near the State capital, and also owned the adjoining farm, but subsequently removed to Reading, where he died aged about eighty years. He married (first) a Miss Graef, by whom he had all of his children, and after her death he m. Hannah Graef, sister to his first wife. The children of John Sharnan were: Isaac, John, Daniel, Levi, Reuben and two daughters.

Levi Sharnan was born in 1818 at the “Dry Tavern” in Spring township, reading the ordinary education of the times and later learned the trade of carpenter, an occupation which he followed at Reading, where his death occurred at the age of seventy-six years. He was married to Emeline Moyer, daughter of Jonathan and Mary Moyer, and to them were born four children: Howard is an employee at the City Hall, Reading; John married Lizzie Sturitz, and has four children, Ralph, Birdie, Harry and Howard; Irwin M.; and Edward with his brother John worked as tinsmiths.

Irwin M. Sharnan received his education in the schools of Reading, whither his parents had come when he was three years old, and when eighteen years old he learned the trade of tinsmith with William Breidegam of that city. In 1884, in company with his friend Squire Henry Wentz, then of Reading but now of the State of Washington, he made an extensive trip through Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas and Missouri, and returned in the fall of the year just in time to cast his vote for Grover Cleveland for President. He then made a trip through the South, finally locating at Leesport, Pa., and on Oct. 11, 1894, was elected superintendent of the N. & W. Railroad under Superintendent Hardy, formerly trainmaster of the P. S. V. Railroad at Reading, until 1894, when he removed with his family to Leesport, where he is now employed by the P. S. V. road as operator and leverman. Mr. Sharnan has always taken a great interest in matters pertaining to the welfare of his township, and in 1896 was elected justice of the peace for a period of five years, receiving the re-election in 1901. In 1906 he was elected to the State Legislature, where he served his term to the complete satisfaction of his constituents, and was re-elected in 1908. He is a member of the Leesport Lodge No. 141, I. O. O. F., a charter member and past chief of Leesport Castle No. 503, K. G. E.; venerable councilor of Camp No. 9284, Modern Woodmen, since its institution; charter member and R. S. for three years of Ontelaune Council No. 985, I. O. A.; financial secretary and trustee of Union Fire Company No. 1, Leesport; and a member of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, Despatchers, Agents and Signalmen.

On Feb. 13, 1894, Mr. Sharnan was married to Annie M. Dack, daughter of Jonathan and Mary Dack. Mr. and Mrs. Sharnan are members of the First Reformed Church.

SAMUEL G. BURKHOLDER, M. D., a rising young physician of Reading, was born in Brickerville, Lancaster Co., Pa., March 12, 1871. He is a son of the late George and Elizabeth (Gockley) Burkholder, who followed farming in the above-mentioned county until 1891, when they removed to Denver, Pa., where the mother, Elizabeth Burkholder, still resides. George Burkholder died April 8, 1906.

Dr. Burkholder attended the public schools at Brickerville and at Denver, Pa., during his boyhood days, and later completed his preliminary education at the Millersburg Normal School. At the age of 17 he entered the University of Pennsylvania to prepare for the medical profession. This was strenuously opposed by his father who finally persuaded him... to take up veterinary medicine instead. Accordingly he entered the Ontario Veterinary College in the fall of 1893. This institution was then located at Guelph, where he graduated in the spring of 1894. He was awarded a medal and other prizes by the above named institution as evidences of proficiency. His Alma Mater offered him the chair of veterinary anatomy on the faculty before he was twenty-one years of age. This he declined, and started to practice his profession in the summer of 1894 at Denver, Pa. Shortly after locating there, he joined the faculty of the Denver Normal School and in 1896, he was appointed assistant superintendent of the Animal Industry, and also to assist in the work in the city. Shortly after he had returned to Chicago, he matriculated as a student at the Harvard Medical College, a night school in good standing. From this institution he graduated in June, 1898, with the highest average ever made by any student up to this time. (The college is now extinct.) He continued in the inspection service at Chicago until Dec. 1, 1898, when he was transferred to Nashville, Tenn., to inaugurate inspection service there. In 1899, he was allowed to return to his native city, and he was appointed by the management of the McKillip Veterinary College of Chicago to inaugurate a course in meat and milk inspection to prepare the students for federal positions in this line of work. He was also lecturer on comparative anatomy at his alma mater. His sudden departure from Chicago for Nashville, Tenn., terminated his connections with the above named schools, but only temporarily. He resigned his position as meat inspector at Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 15, 1899, and immediately returned to Chicago, resumed his work at the schools and started to practise his profession, locating on West Lake street. In 1900, he was elected to the faculty of the Northwestern University Medical College, Chicago, from which institution he graduated in June, 1900. In March, 1900, he received the honorary degree D. V. M. from the McKillip Veterinary College. Shortly after graduating from the Northwestern University Medical College, he returned to his native city, and in August, of the same year, he located at Rothsville, Pa., where he practised his chosen profession until February, 1903, when he sold out his practice there, and returned to Chicago to take up post-graduate work. Besides taking a general review in internal medicine, he took a special course at the Chicago School of Electro-therapeutics. In April, 1905, he returned east and located at No. 613 Walnut street, Reading, Pa., where he is enjoying a large practice. Besides doing general practice Dr. Burkholler is Medical Director of the Reading Mutual Life Insurance Company, and also secretary of the Corporation Funding and Finance Company. Both of these companies are rapidly growing to the front in their chosen lines.

In October, 1900, Dr. Burkholler married Miss Rheba G. Smith, of Blaineport, Pa. The union was blessed with two children both of whom died in infancy. Dr. Burkholler is held in high esteem by the various fraternal orders with which he is identified, principal among them being the Knights of Malta and the Masons. The latter order he joined while in Chicago, being a member of Mizpah Lodge, No. 708, of that city. He is also a member of the City, County, State, and American Medical Associations.

OLIVER M. WOLFF, a prominent young professional man, of Reading, Pa., senior member of the law firm of Wolff & Shomo, was born May 28, 1879, in Hamburg, Berks county, son of Oliver J. Wolff.

Abraham Wolff, great-grandfather of Oliver M., was located in Hamburg, where he was engaged in business as a harness maker.

Daniel Wolff, son of Abraham, was born at Hamburg, in 1800, and he, too, became a harness maker. From 1830 to 1861 he also engaged in farming, and he died in the latter year. He married Sevilia Fasig, a direct descendant of Conrad Weiser, and their children were: Charles, Rufus, Mahlon, Frank, Daniel, Sevilla, Elmira, Helen, Adelaide, Walter, Oliver J. and Virginia.

Oliver J. Wolff was born in Hamburg, Feb. 2, 1849, and received his education in his native locality. In his youth he learned the harness-making business, which he followed with his brother Rufus until 1888, when he came to Reading. The same year he entered the prothonotary's office as clerk under D. H. Schwoyer, and in 1895 he was elected to the position of prothonotary of Berks county, on the Democratic ticket, serving the full term of two years. From 1888 to 1901, he was a member of the Lancaster County Bar Association, being a member of the Lancaster Bar Association, and serving as its president in 1901. He entered the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from the Law Department in 1901. He read law in an office in Philadelphia, and was admitted to practice in the several courts of Philadelphia June 19, 1901, and to the Berks county Bar Sept. 8, 1902. On Aug. 20, 1905, Mr. Wolff formed a partnership with William A. Shomo, and they have continued together since that time, with offices at No. 522 Washington street, Reading, Pa. Mr. Wolff's profession connects him with the Berks county Bar Association. He is also a member of the Supreme, Superior, and several County Courts of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the Berks and Kent Law Club of the University of Pennsylvania; B'nai B'rith, the Young Men's Association of the Reading High Schools, and in 1907 and 1908 was elected treasurer thereof; and is president of the Penn Wheelmen of Reading, having been re-elected four successive years. He belongs to Trinity Lutheran Church at Reading.

WILLIAM A. SHOMO, one of the leading young attorneys at law of the Berks county Bar, and a member of the well-known law firm of Wolff & Shomo, was born at Hamburg, Pa., Dec. 25, 1879, son of Harry P. and Emma (Rueck) Shomo.

Mr. Shomo is a member of one of the oldest families in Berks county, his great-great-grandfather, John Shomo, having lived here as early as 1752. John Shomo was a son of Bernard Shomo, who emigrated from Philadelphia from France in the early part of the eighteenth century. His father was a civil engineer of repute in his native country, and he continued to follow this profession after coming to America. He died in Philadelphia, 1750. John Shomo, like his father before him, became a civil engineer, and, so far as is known, followed his profession up to the time of his death, May 5, 1786. It was he who originally surveyed the Sherrkill county coal fields, and he is known to have owned a large tract of land in that section. He was a Revolutionary soldier. He resided in Reading up to the year 1790, when he moved with his family to Hamburg. He was the father of four children: Elizabeth, Joseph, John, and William.

William Shomo, son of John Shomo, was born in 1796 and died Dec. 18, 1842, at the age of forty-six years. He was a successful merchant. He was the father of four children: John, deceased, late of Washington, D.C.; Henry, deceased, late of Fremont, Ohio; Sarah, deceased (m. Thomas P. Wren, of Pottsville); Elias, deceased, late of Hamburg.

Elias Shomo, son of William Shomo, was born in Hamburg March 26, 1827, and died there May 13, 1894, having been a life-long resident of that place. For some years he was in the lumber business, but later he purchased the "Central House" property, one of Hamburg's leading hotels, and there conducted a successful hotel business for many years. He retired from business several years before his death. He was at one time postmaster of Hamburg, and was a leading and influential man of his day. He married Elizabeth Schatz, of German ancestry, and to them were born six children: Sarah, James, Laura, Harry P., Allen L. and Elizabeth.

Harry P. Shomo, son of Elias Shomo and father of William A., was born in Hamburg, Pa., Sept. 28, 1860. He received his education in the public schools of Hamburg and under private tutors. For a number of years he was prominently identified in the furnishing business of the General's Department, at Harrisburg. He is a highly respected citizen of Hamburg and has a wide acquaintance throughout the country. Mr. Shomo married Emma R. Confer, daughter of Alfred Confer, deceased, and to this union have been born three sons: William A., Allen E. and J. Harold. The latter died during January 1908, at the age of nineteen years.

William A. Shomo spent his boyhood days in the borough of Hamburg, where he attended the public schools, graduating from the high school in the spring of 1883. In the fall of that year he entered Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., and graduated in the Class of 1887. He pursued the Latin Scientific course, and at the end of his sophomore year left the college to enter the Dickinson School of Law. From the latter institution he graduated three years later as a leading member of the Class of 1903, with the degree of LL.B. While at College, Mr. Shomo became a member of the Belle Lettres Society and the Sigma Chi Fraternity, and took an active part in the affairs of both. In the law school, he was a member of the Allison Law Society, and was chosen one year as president of his class. While a student at college, he was awarded a gold medal as first prize in an oratorical contest held under the auspices of the State Convention of the P. O. S. of A.

Upon graduating from the Dickinson School of Law, Mr. Shomo was admitted to practice before the Cumberland County Bar, but soon thereafter returned to his native county to follow his profession. At Reading, he entered the law office of Stevens & Stevens, where he remained for one and one-half years, and, then in June, 1904, he passed the State Board examination for admission to practice before the Supreme Court. On Oct. 3, 1904, he was admitted to practice in the several courts of Berks county, and on Sept. 1, 1905, he formed a partnership with O. M. Wolff, Esq., under the firm name of Wolff & Shomo. This firm have a fine suite of offices at No. 522 Washington street, Reading. They enjoy an enviable reputation, and have won the confidence of a large clientele. Mr. Shomo is a member of the Berks County Bar Association, Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., Reading Board of Trade, American Academy of Political and Social Science, and other organizations.

On Aug. 10, 1905, Mr. Shomo was married to Marian Rae Fisher, daughter of the late George and Harriet Fisher, of Reading.

WESLEY D. MOHN, merchant and contractor at Mohnton, Pa., was born in Cumru township, Berks county, May 5, 1853, son of the late Benjamin and Harriet (Deeds) Mohn.

Benjamin Mohn, who was born in Cumru township in 1806, learned the shoemaking trade when a boy, but later went to farming. In 1846 he founded Mohnsville, now known as Mohnton, building the first house at this place. He also erected a gristmill in the same year along Wyo-wissing creek, engaging in this business for about twenty years. He was one of the commissioners in charge of the clearing houses and the agent in the manufacture of boxes, in which he was very successful, to the time of his death. His death, caused by a fall down a stairway, occurred in his eighty-third year, and he was buried at the Mohnton cemetery.

Wesley D. Mohn attended the township schools, and when a young man learned the blacksmith's trade, and also the plumbing trade with Daniel Peiffer at Mohnton. He engaged in the manufacture of wagons, and this he followed successfully for twenty-two years, then engaging in contracting, in which he still continues. He established his store at Mohnton in 1891, and this has become the leading general store of Cumru township.

In January, 1906, Mr. Mohn admitted his son H. Irwin, to partnership, and the firm has since been known as W. D. Mohn & Son. From 1891 to 1897 Mr. Mohn was postmaster, this office having been established by a cousin, Mr. S. K. Mohn. Mr. Mohn is also interested in many other business enterprises, having been connected with the Mohnton & Reading & Beadles Iron Works, and its treasurer in 1903; he has been a director and second largest stockholder in that company since that time. At present he is vice-president of that corporation. He is a director of the Kutztown Electric Light & Power Company, one of the founders of the Mohnton & Reading & Beadles Iron Works, and superintendent of the iron works. Mr. Mohn was one of the instigators in building the Reading & South Western Electric Railway (connecting Mohnton and Reading). He secured the rights of way for this road, and also raised $30,000.00 in stock at Mohnton. This stock was paid back, along with interest at six per cent. on the road changed hands. Mr. Mohn is also senior member of the machine company located at Carpenter and Cherry streets, Reading, known as W. D. Mohn & Co. His interests are many and varied, and he is considered one of the most substantial citizens of Cumru township.

On March 1, 1904, Mr. Mohn married Miss Clara E., daughter of Jeremiah and Mary (Kline) Binkley, and to this union were born children as follows: Margaret, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School in the class of 1901, has taught school for several years; Irwin, in business with his father, married Sarah Fitterling; Minnie, the hardest working of the family; and Clara E., married Adam Bear; Anna, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1904, is now engaged in teaching school; Wayne, a graduate of the Kist College of Stenography, is employed at the Mohnton store; and Pearl attends the township high school. Mr. Mohn is a Republican in politics, and has had several political connections are with the K. of P., No. 485; the K. G. E. No. 211; and O. U. A. M., of Mohnton. He is a faithful member of the Zion United Evangelical Church, having been trustee thereof since 1885, and a liberal supporter of the church.

DAVID F. MAUGER. Being descended through his father from a line of Palatinate German ancestry, and through his mother from the French Huguenots, David F. Mauger has the admixture of blood which stands for the highest type of citizenship in Pennsylvania. He is a son of the late David B. Mauger, and his wife, Amanda Loba, of the county of Berks, and was born in a log-hut in the wilderness at Reading, April 25, 1819. He was a boy of fifty-four years, and a man of greater usefulness to his community in his generation. For a period of fifty-five years, he served continuously in the office of justice of the peace. He had a thorough knowledge of the law relating to the administration of his office, and he probably filed the writer with the land titles, and had more nearly than any local justice of his time. He was an expert surveyor and his surveys and drafts on disputed boundaries and land titles have so effectively settled questions of that character in Lower Berks, that the courts of law are seldom invoked to give judgment upon them. He was identified with many local interests and corporations, and served his community faithfully in a myriad of capacities, a member of several societies, a member of the Reformed Church, and in many another fiduciary capacity. He reared his children in the Reformed Church, and gave to each of his children a liberal education. His eldest son, D. Lorah Mauger, is now the assistant passenger agent of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, with offices at Reading, the youngest son, Samuel Mauger, is a successful druggist in the City of Philadelphia. His only daughter, Sallie, is the wife of Dr. S. H. Shingle, of Philadelphia, and the remaining son, David F. Mauger, is the subject of this sketch.

David Franklin Mauger is a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College of Lancaster. At this institution, he became a member of the Phi Kappa Psi College Fraternity and the Goethean Literary Society. He was graduated with high honors in 1886 which entitled him to an election in the Phi Beta Kappa Society. Upon leaving college, he became principal of the high school in Center Hall, Pennsylvania, which position he held with credit for two terms. He then entered, as a student, the law office of George F. Baer, Esq., now the president of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and was admitted to the Bar at Reading in 1889. Upon his admission to the Bar, he entered into a partnership with his college friend, Abraham H. Reithimer, under the name of Rothermel & Mauger, with which firm he is still associated. This co-partnership is one of the well-established firms of lawyers in the City of Reading, enjoying a large and lucrative practice in all the Courts. Mr. Mauger has served for a term of three years as the county solicitor and for a like term as assistant district attorney. He is the leading Republican in the district party. As an adviser and counselor Mr. Mauger is able and sound, and as a practitioner before the courts and juries, he is skillful and persuasive.

Mr. Mauger is happily married to Miss Mary Gorrell, daughter of the late Robert Gorrell, of Douglassville, for many years a merchant in that place. He is the father of two daughters, Dorothy and Marion. He resides at Douglassville, Pennsylvania.

His grandfather was David Mauger, a farmer of Douglass township. He died in 1875, aged seventy-eight years. He was married to Sarah Bechtel, a daughter of George Bechtel, of Pottsgrove township, Montgomery county. She died in 1881, aged seventy-nine years.

His great-grandfather was Henry Mauger, who emigrated from the Palatinate about 1762, and settled in Douglass township.

His mother, who was eighty-four years of age on the 25th day of April, 1909, was the daughter of Daniel Lorah, of Amity township, and granddaughter of George Lorah, also of Amity township. Her mother was Hannah Knabb, of Oley township. George Lorah was a son of John Lorah, who emigrated from France in 1719 during the time of the persecution of the Huguenots, and settled in Amity township.

WILLIAM HARBSTER (deceased), for many years one of the leading spirits of the manufacturing interests of Reading, Pa., was born Oct. 20, 1838, in Albany township, Berks county, son of Henry and Mary (Bucher) Harbster.

John Harbster, grandfather of William, emigrated to America from Germany, settling in Albany township, Berks county, in 1805. His children married into Lehigh counties, following farming in the several localities.

Henry Harbster, son of John, was born in Berks county and educated in the subscription schools. In early life he learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed some years. He also invented and manufactured coffee mills in Berks county and Lehigh counties in which he met with more than ordinary success. He was a Democrat in political belief, but only took a voting interest in politics. He married a daughter of Sebastian Bucher, and their children were: Matilda, wife of Casper Aman; Hannah, whose third husband was Jacob Newkirk; Ellen, deceased, wife of William M. Griscom; Henry; Marcell, who died in youth; and William. Of this family in 1906 were still living Hannah and Matthan.

William Harbster received his education in the common and subscription schools of Albany township, after which he removed to Boyertown, where he apprenticed himself to learn the blacksmith's trade, remaining in that locality seven years. After his apprenticeship he had been served as a journeyman, and then removed to Reading, where he engaged in work in a foundry and was subsequently employed with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company. Not liking the change, he decided to return to the operations of his calling, and, locating in Hamburg, he opened a smithy, manufacturing and selling iron work for carriages, etc. After remaining here two years, he returned to Reading, and with the assistance of his brother-in-law, William M. Griscom, he founded the Reading Hardware Works. Beginning under very humble circumstances, and at first manufacturing but a few articles, by his incessant energy, excellent management and skilled workmanship the business increased and far exceeded the fondest hopes of its originator and founder. He found it necessary to admit more help, subsequently admitting Matthew and John, his younger brothers as partners, under the style of Harbster Bros. The business continued to prosper under the new management and the brothers succeeded in building up one of the most extensive plants in the world, the Reading Hardware Company.

Mr. Harbster was also the head of the Reading Nickel Plateing Works. His advice was much sought after on account of his being so successful in his own business, and he later became officially connected with banks and other business organizations. In fact, if any new enterprise was founded in which he was not interested, investors seemed to lose confidence, such was the esteem in which he was held. He had a great love of noble character, honesty and upright in all of his dealings, and a great friend of the poor and needy. He gave liberally to any and every just cause and the extent of his philanthropy will never be known to the outside world. Through his death Reading lost one of its most prominent citizens.

Mr. Harbster was married August 18, 1864, to Ellen Matthews, daughter of George Matthews, a native of Lebanon county, Pa. He was of Irish descent, and belonged to a family, the descendants of which figured conspicuously in the affairs of the State. To Mr. and Mrs. Harbster the following children were born: Emma R. m. William Kense; Creigh, John G. m. Annie R. m. John Goodman; Howard B. m. Margaret M. J. Wilhelm Hartmann, native of Germany, and a graduate of the Hamburg Conservatory of Music and that of Munich, from which institutions he received the highest honors, and he has become a composer of much note.

Mr. Harbster was a Republican in his political belief, but never aspired to public preferment. He was a member of Chandler Lodge of Masons No. 227; Reading Chapter No. 152; Creigh Council No. 16; and De Molay Commandery No. 9. He was a consistent member and liberal supporter of Trinity Lutheran Church for many years. Mr. Harbster died June 16, 1885.

JAMES PHILIP SELLERS, clothier at Reading for forty years and still in active business, was born at Allen-town, Pa., May 9, 1844, and there educated, in the public schools and the Allentown Academy. At the suggestion of James Jameson, he went to Reading in 1865, and after working in the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company's shop for eighteen months, entered the large wholesale and retail clothing house of his uncle at the northeast corner of Penn square, where he has continued to the present time.

In ten years Mr. Sellers was a salesman in the store and his great interest and success in the business so won the confidence of his uncle that he was then admitted as a partner in the firm which has been trading for many years at the same stand as J. Jameson & Co. In 1890 Mr. Jameson died; then the firm was re-organized by the surviving partners, William A. Medlar, Mr. Jameson's son-in-law, Charles S. Bachman, a former employee for many years, and Mr. Sellers, as Sellers, Medlar & Bachman, the nephew having taken the uncle's place as the senior partner in the business, which evidences his superior character. In 1900 Mr. Bachman withdrew from the firm on account of his age, and his interest having been purchased by William R. Fenstermacher, of Lenhartsville, the name of the firm was changed to Sellers, Medlar & Co. Mr. Medlar having retired in 1905, his interest was purchased by William J. Frederick, of Allentown, a nephew of Mr. Sellers, whose name was changed to J. F. Sellers & Co. And thus it has continued to the present time. In 1905 Joseph Ritter Sellers, a son of the senior member, was admitted as a partner.

In 1882 the electors of the Seventh ward elected Mr. Sellers to represent them in the Common branch of the city council, and he served one term of two years, having been elected on the Republican ticket. In 1890 he became identified with the Board of Trade, and after serving on different committees, he officiated as its president in 1901 and 1902. At the observance of the sesquicentennial of Reading in 1898, he was president of the executive committee, and much of its success was due mainly to his unremitting labors during a preparatory period of two years. Mr. Sellers has also been identified with the financial affairs of Reading, serving as a director of the Reading Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and of the Pennsylvania Trust Company. In 1886 Mr. Sellers was married to Elizabeth Ritter, the only child of Joseph Ritter and Eliza Witman, his wife, both of whom were descendants of the earliest inhabitants of Reading. By her he is the father of a son Joseph Ritter, who married Minnie Heffner, daughter of Daniel Heffner of Reading, and son of James Heffner Sellers. Mrs. Sellers died in 1900. She was a devoted member of Trinity Lutheran Church from her childhood, as her parents and grandparents had been in the early history of the church, and, on account of her superior voice was chosen as a singer in the choir for fifteen years. She took an active part in the Sunday-school work for many years, and also in works of charity for the congregation as well as the community at large.

Joseph Ritter, father of Mrs. Sellers, was the honored court crier of the Berks county courts for forty years from the establishment of the court house at Sixth and Court streets in 1840, and upon his decease in 1880 the judges and lawyers, at a public meeting held for that purpose, passed highly complimentary resolutions eulogizing his superior character. At a Bar supper, Dec. 20, 1873, in appreciation of his distinguished services and uniform courtesy, they presented him with a fine gold watch and chain.

The father of Mr. Sellers was Philip Sellers, a wholesale tobacco and cigar manufacturer at Allentown for fifteen years. He died in 1853 aged forty-six years. He was married to Elizabeth Worman, daughter of Jacob Worman, of Allentown, who died in 1876, aged seventy-three years. He left three children: James P.; Henry; and Mary, m. to Benneville Frederick, of Allentown, whose son William J. is now a member of J. P. Sellers & Co. His antecedents were brought up in the vicinity of Sellersville, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

Peter Trexler, the paternal grandfather of Col. William, engaged in farming at Mertztown, where he spent his active days. He married Catherine Grimm, a daughter of Peter Griem, an iron master, and that calling together with farming he followed all his active years. He died in 1846, at the age of sixty-four. He married Anna Lesher, who was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, daughter of Jacob Lesher, an iron master of Berks county, who moved to Pottstown about twenty years before his marriage. They had five children, born to Reuben Trexler and wife, namely: Horatio, who at the time of his death was president of the National Union Bank, at Reading; William; Lesher, who became a successful physician at Fort Wayne, Ind., and is now deceased; Caroline, deceased wife of William Schall, of Norristown, Pa.; Lucinda, who married James Rittenhouse, and two others, who are now deceased.

Col. William Trexler was a good common school education, and on reaching young manhood engaged in farming, afterward taking up tanning at his late home farm. He then tried milling and later the coal business, all proving successful ventures and he finally added a general mercantile store. The last few years of his life were spent in retirement. He took great pleasure in his beautiful home, located in Longswamp township.

In 1842 Colonel Trexler was married to Mary Ann Single master, of Macungie township, Lehigh county, daughter of John L. Sellers, a prominent citizen, and who died in 1890. In 1842 the son of the above named James Sellers & Co. Mrs. Trexler died in 1877. To this union were born the following children: Reuben, deceased; Alonzo, late of Huntingdon county, Pa., now deceased; Annie, widow of Harrison Maltzberger, an attorney at Reading; Alvin S., who conducted a tannery and coal yard in Longswamp township, but is now retired; William; Lesher Ashley, a practicing physician at San Antonio, Texas, now deceased; John L. S., of Macungie, Pa.; Mary, who married Hiram Weiler, and who is now deceased; and Henry Clay and Myra, both deceased. Colonel Trexler married (second) Amelia Schall, who died in February, 1890. He was a life member of the Masonic fraternity, and for fifty-three years was postmaster at Longswamp. He was justice of the peace for many years, and also held a number of other local offices, never being defeated if he offered himself as a candidate. He was a Mason, belonging to Burgess Lodge No. 333, F. & A. M., Allentown. In his religious faith he was a Lutheran.

JOEL H. KRICK, the well-known proprietor of the “West End Hotel,” one of the popular hostleries of Reading, located at the corner of Schuykill avenue and Buttonwood street, was born in Reading, Dec. 4, 1831, son of Thomas and Mary (Hinnershitz) Krick, and grandson of Peter Krick.

Peter Krick was a native of Heidelberg township, Berks county, and was a well-known boat-builder in the days when the Schuykill canal was one of the principal means of transportation in this section of Pennsylvania. He followed his vocation for many years at the foot of Buttonwood street, Reading, where his boat-building yard was located, and became very successful. Mr. Krick married Susan Reber, of Berks county, and she bore her husband these children: William R., Joel R., Adam R., Levi J. R., Peter R., Emma (m. William Leas) and Catherine. Mr. Krick was very liberal in his religious views, but was kind and charitable, and few indeed were the subscriptions for a worthy cause that did not bear his name. In politics he was a staunch Democrat, but he never cared for, nor sought, public office.

Levi J. R. Krick learned boat-building under the skilled指導 of his father, following that occupation for many years. In 1887 he turned his attention to the hotel business, following that occupation until his death in 1905, at the age of sixty-six years. He was known for his many sterling traits of character, and was ever liberal to those in need. The children born to Levi J. R. Krick and his wife, Emma (m. Daniel Whitmoyer) are: Mary (deceased, m. Harvey Kissinge) and Rebecca (deceased).
In religious belief the family were connected with the Reformed Church. He was a loyal Democrat, and was elected afill the Town Council, and served in both the common and select councils, and at one time being market commissioner. He was a letter carrier during President Cleveland’s first term. He was connected with several fraternal organizations, and was a member of the Junior Fire Company.

Mrs. Krick died in 1891, aged about forty-nine years.

Joel H. Krick received his education in the public schools of Reading, and when a boy worked in the boat yard which had been founded by his grandfather. Learning the trade of boat builder with his father, he followed this occupation for some time, and in 1885 was appointed under Mayor Getz, a member of the Reading Fire Force, common time as a member until 1887. During Mayor Merritt’s administration Mr. Krick was again appointed to that position. 1889-1893, and upon the expiration of this term he entered the employ of his father in the hotel, in which he has since continued. In 1897 he was elected a member of the board of prison inspectors for Berks county, serving nine years, and for seven years was president thereof.

He was elected by the firemen of the 2nd district as assistant chief of the Reading Fire Department, serving three years. Mr. Krick has always been a stanch Democrat, and has always been a valuable party man in the Sixth ward. He has been a delegate to various county and State conventions. On Nov. 3, 1908, by a large majority of the voters, Krick was elected a director of the poor of Berks county, for a term of three years. He is very popular fraternally, holding membership in the following orders: I. O. O. F.; Fraternal Order of Eagles; P. O. S. of A.; the Independent Order of Odd Fellows; the Haromonic Association; and the Schuykill Fire Company. He was a member of the Junior Fire Company for twenty years, but resigned to join the Schuykill Fire Company in 1901. He is also connected with the Northwestern Benevolent Association. In religion Mr. Krick is connected with the Reformed Church.

In 1886 Mr. Krick married Rosa Weidner, and to this union were born five children, four of whom are living, as follows: James, Joel, Jr., Maud (who married Edward Englehart, is living at No. 252 W. Buttonwood Ave., and is the mother of Joel Henry) and Esther.

ADOLPH KRAEMER, of Reading, Pa., the owner and manager of a printing and publishing establishment at No. 236 North Ninth street, was born July 28, 1875, and is a son of Joseph and Albina Kraemer, who emigrated from the Duchy of Baden, Germany, locating at Philadelphia about a period of time, taking up residence in the northeastern section of Reading, Pennsylvania.

Adolph Kraemer attended the Reading schools until fourteen years of age, wherenupon he entered the printing office of Mr. W. Rosenthal to learn the printer’s trade. For a period of five years he remained at this establishment, working his way during the day into the secrets of the art of printing, and at night studying his books to advance himself further in the knowledge of general literature. For nearly three years he attended a local college, taking courses in business, literature and languages. In 1891 he made a tour of the States for the purpose of studying the various business methods and systems of printing establishments throughout the country, being during this tour employed in about thirty different printing plants. In the fall of 1894, he returned and engaged in the printing business at No. 621 Moss street (home of his parents) in a small back room, operating his one job printing press. In 1897 Mr. Kraemer removed his establishment to larger quarters at Ninth and Oley streets where he acquired the use of an electric motor. In 1898 he removed his place of business to No. 256 North Ninth street, and six months later to No. 210 North Ninth street, where he remained for seven years. In 1903 he purchased the establishment of B. W. Hess, and moved to the present quarters, the desirable property at No. 236 North Ninth street, which he remodeled and rebuilt to suit his increased requirements and he has occupied same since September, 1905. During 1909 he entered into the career of publisher of fiction under the name of The Kraemer Publishing House—in addition to his Book and Job Printing.

On Sept. 2, 1897, Mr. Kraemer married Miss Mary L. Ott, of Reading, daughter of Magnus and Josephine (Albrecht) Ott. This union has been blessed with five children: Louisa M., Marie A., Gertrude L., Theresa B. and Herman J.

HARRY KLINE, postmaster and general merchant at Rehrersburg, Pa., and one of Tulpehocken township’s representative citizens, was born at Rehrersburg, June 25, 1874, son of Frank S. and Rebecca E. (Forry) Kline. Mr. Kline, the great-grandson of Henry Kline, was born Dec. 26, 1818. As a descendant of Rehrersburg’s first settler for many years he kept a large tannery and general store, and where he died July 18, 1855. He married Catharine Shollenberger (born Aug. 4, 1791. died Jan. 27, 1867), and they had these children: Benjamin, grandfather of Harry; Alexander; and Anna Maria, born Aug. 17, 1799, and died June 6, 1842.

Benjamin Kline was also born in Rehrersburg, and after the death of his father took charge of the tannery and general store, the latter of which was closed out at the time of the death of his brother Alexander who had been his business partner. Mr. Kline continued the tannery business until his marriage to Barnett Brothers, and the remainder of his life was spent in retirement with his son-in-law, Dr. Daniel Dechert, Schuylkill Haven. Mr. Kline married Catherine Lutz, daughter of Benjamin Lutz, and to this union there were born two children as follows: Sarah m. Joel Deardorf, who conducted a hardware business in Lebanon county for many years, and died there in 1893; Martha, who died in 1896, m. Isaac Harmer, a hotel keeper of Rehrersburg; James, who for many years worked in his father’s tan- nery, now resides at Lebanon; Genevieve m. Dr. Daniel Dechert, and died in 1898, leaving one daughter; Anna, who died in 1896 at Pottstown, Schuylkill County, Pa., and John Harding, who subsequently removed to Reading; and Frank S.

Frank S. Kline was reared in Rehrersburg, where he learned the trade of tanner with his father, and was in the tannery from the age of twelve years until the business was discontinued, when he went to Myerstown, Lebanon county, and there continued many years. He is now engaged principally in finishing in the spring and fall of each year at East Berkeley.

Mr. Kline married Rebecca E. Forry, daughter of Jacob and Abigail (Troutman) Forry, and to this union there were born the following children: Harry, Margaret, Paul Furman, of Strasburk, Berks county, and has one son, Robert, m. Clara Bertram, daughter of Daniel Bertram, and is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Rehrersburg; Edward is single; Laura is employed at the shirt factory, and Marguerite lives at home. Edward Kline served three years in the Spanish American war, being a member of Troop B, 14th U. S. Cavalry, stationed in the Philippines, and the last nine months of his enlistment were passed in the United States, where he engaged in various cavalries. He won the U. S. Rescue race from representatives of twenty-one cavalries, and rode races Cossack style in every State west of the Mississippi, losing only three races, and he also holds medals for sharpshooting and marksmanship for the three years of his enlistment. He ranked as first sergeant. After receiving his honorable discharge, Mr. Kline returned to his home, and three months later enlisted in the State police force at Pottstown, where he is still in service at the present time. He stands very high, and he is said to be an expert horseman and very well liked by everybody.

Mr. Kline was educated in the common schools of his native town and the high school at Millersburg. An early age he learned the printing trade at Hazleton, and the trade of printing, at home, the latter of which he followed for some years. At one time he aspired to enter the medical profession, but gave up this idea and took up boating as an occupation, following it on the Schuylkill, Raritan, Erie, Northern and Delaware canals. He now conducts a general store at Rehersburg, where he is discharging the duties of postmaster. Mr. Kline is a member of the Reformed Church, while his wife is a Lutheran. In politics he is a Republican, and for some years has been a member of his township, and fraternally he is connected with Vigilance Lodge, No. 149, I. O. O. F., at Reading; and Camp No. 597, P. O. S. of A., at Rehersburg, of which he is a charter member.

In 1897 Mr. Kline married (first) Miss Nettie Stambaugh, daughter of Rev. L. D. and Henrietta (Smith) Stambaugh, and one child, Grace, was born to this union. Mrs. Kline died Nov. 28, 1901, and secondly in 1904, the widow of Selas M. Shade, by whom he has also had one child, Harry.

ARTHUR WITTICH, a dealer in pianos and organs, and a prominent and representative man of Reading, Pa., doing business at No. 116 South Sixth street, was born in Reading, Berks county, July 2, 1860, son of John D. and Harriet (Peifer) Wittich.

John Wittich, our subject's grandfather, lived in Hesse Cottumgau, Germany, during the greater part of his life, was a general merchant there and quite a prominent man. He and his wife, whose name is not known, were the parents of seven children, five sons and two daughters, and of these four came to America, their names being: Henry, George, John D., and Margaret, the latter of whom married Henry Goeltz, and resided in Reading.

John D. Wittich came to America in 1842, and settled first in Philadelphia. He had learned the shoe-making business in his native country, and was also a musician of some note, as well as a composer of much ability. He resided in Philadelphia for about five years and then removed to the coal mines of Scrivlin and other places. He settled in Reading in 1847 and upon making this his home, took charge of the leading orchestras of the city, conducting for them for the following thirty years. His wife was a daughter of Henry Peifer, also a native of Germany, where a part of his family was reared, his two youngest children, however, being born in this country. The eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. John D. Wittich were: Margaret (m. John W. Gerdemann, and resides in Philadelphia); George (deceased); Anna (died young); Catherine (m. Rev. N. C. Fetter, and lives in Doylestown, Pa.); Elizabeth and Stricklin (deceased); Arthur; and Valeria (lives at Reading at the old Wittich homestead, No. 310 South Fifth street). The Wittich family were members of the Reformed Church, while the Peifers were Lutherans. In politics Mr. Wittich was a Democrat, but took no active interest in party work.

Arthur Wittich received his education in the schools of Reading, and after graduating from the Reading high school entered the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music from which he was graduated. He was then instructed by some of the best and most noted masters of Europe and America, and the following twenty-five years was devoted exclusively to the teaching music in his profession he was very successful. He bears the reputation of being an expert in this and other branches of his art. Since practically giving up the instruction of music he has devoted his time to selling pianos and player pianos. He is well known in Berks and adjoining counties, and goods purchased from him can be relied upon to be just as represented. He has one of the best equipped show rooms in the city, located at No. 116 South Sixth street, where first-class salesmen are constantly on hand to display goods. His store is well stocked with the leading makes of pianos, among them being Steinway, Nissen, Henry, Hardman, Packard, Harrington, McPhail and Sterling.

Mr. Wittich married, in 1882, Miss Kate Schrader, daughter of Charles E. Schrader, of the firm of Schrader & Kline, and three children have been born to this union: Otto, Carl and Leon. The family are Lutherans. In politics Mr. Wittich is a Democrat. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum.

CHARLES P. HIGH, a prosperous coal merchant of Reading, Pa., who is also engaged in the flour and feed business, with yards and office at No. 312 Rose street, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, son of William R. and Lydia A. (Krick) High.

Charles P. High received his education in the schools of his native township, and during his boyhood worked upon his father's farm. At the age of nineteen years he left the farm and went to Philadelphia, engaging with the Phoenix Plumbago Mining Company, and while in the employ of that company attended a business college. He subsequently returned to Reading, entering the employ of his brother, of D. K. High & Co., who was carrying on the coal, flour and feed business in Reading, which had been established in 1887 by him, and Mr. High continued in this business until 1890; when he accepted a position at the Philadelphia & Reading freight house. At the end of one year, in company with George Richardson, Mr. High established the firm of High & Richardson, and in 1895 Mr. Richardson withdrew, Mr. High's father engaging in business with him, under the firm name of High & Son. This connection continued until 1903, when the elder High withdrew, and since that time Charles P. has successfully conducted the business alone. He is a very able business man, with ability, and his honesty and integrity have never been questioned.

Mr. Charles P. High was married, in 1895, to Miss Cora Heecher, daughter of William A. Heechler, of Spring township, and in religious belief Mr. and Mrs. High are connected with the Reformed Church. Fraternally he is connected with the P. O. S. of A., and the Order of Independent Americans.

THOMAS A. BOYER, a well-known citizen and enterprising business man of Reading, Pa., is a native of that city, born May 1, 1853, son of Isaac and Mary (Dickinson) Boyer, and grandson of Thomas Boyer, for many years a prosperous farmer of Dauphin county.

Isaac Boyer came from Dauphin county to Reading when a young man, and was employed by a corporation as a teamster, an occupation which he followed all of his life. In religious belief he was a Quaker. He and his wife were the parents of these children: Thomas A., William, Harrison, Annie (m. Jacob Carl), Alice (m. James Reigel), Jemima (m. Joseph Livan) and two children died in infancy. Isaac Boyer died in 1896, aged seventy-two years, and his wife in 1894, when sixty-nine years of age.

Thomas A. Boyer received his literary training in the public schools of the city of his nativity, and when a young man was employed by the Reading Pipe Mill, with which concern he remained, for a period of ten years. In 1883 he commenced the manufacture of rag carpets, in which he has continued to the present time, with much success. He has a large and profitable business, his factory being located at the corner of Pearl and Bingaman streets, and in addition to carpets he handles rugs, linoleums, oil cloth and art squares.

Mr. Boyer was married in 1879 to Hannah E. Snyder, and both are valued members of the M. E. Church, in which Mr. Boyer has held various offices, while Mrs. Boyer is very active in church work, and much interested in advancing the cause of charity, devoting herself especially to the finding of homes for homeless and homeless women who have passed the age of self-support.

DAVID L. HEINLY, who, with his son, John E., is doing business under the name of the Reading Engraving Company, at Reading, Pa., is a prominent and influential business man of that city. He was born on the old homestead farm, near Virginville, Berks county, Jan 31, 1836, son of George, and grandson of John George Heinly.
David L. Heiny was educated in the public schools, and then engaged in a general store business at South Evansville from 1858 to 1867, and then went to Hamburg, where he conducted a similar establishment for four years. He then engaged in the hardware business, with his brother, for ten years, the next four years traveled for the Bard Reber Hardware Co., Reading, and the following eighteen years for the Seltzer-Klahr Hdw. Co., of Philadelphia. He then engaged in the engraving business with his son, John E., as the Reading Engraving Company, at No. 604 Court street, and this work was successfully prosecuted a number of years. He belongs to St. Luke’s Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Democrat, was a school director at Evansville and a freeholder of Hamburg.

David L. Heiny belongs to the Masons, having joined that Order in 1869. He has been a member of the Blue Lodge since that time, and has been a Knight Templar since 1886. He is also connected with the Odd Fellows, having joined that order in 1870. The Heiny family has an association and holds annual reunions, the last few having been held at Kutztown Park. David L. Heiny is president of the association, which numbers from 3,000 to 4,000 members, Harvy F. Heiny, a sketch of whom will be found elsewhere in this volume, is secretary.

John E. Heiny, his father’s partner in the engraving business, was born July 3, 1867, at Hamburg, and was educated in the public schools. He learned the trade of engraving from 1873 to 1880, and worked at this occupation for several years in New York, starting in that business at Reading in 1890. Mr. Heiny was married May 23, 1895, to Bess Maguire, daughter of William Maguire, deceased, of Reading, and four children have been born to this union: Martha, Kathryn, Marian and David, the third two named being boys. Mr. Heiny belongs to St. Luke’s Lutheran Church. Like his father he is a Democrat.

C. Gilbert Steffe, late of Reading, was in the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company for five years before his retirement, in 1904. For a number of years previously he acted as general road foreman for the company. He was an expert in his line and recognized as such in railroad circles all over the country.

Mr. Steffe was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., born in Hanover township, Lancaster county, Jan. 26, 1846, Frederick and Amenia (Unger) Steffe, who were farming people. Some of what late in life his father went to Ohio, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits and remained to the close of his days.

Mr. Steffe spent his boyhood and youth in the public schools of Earl township, helping his father at farming. At the age of eighteen he came to Reading, where he became an apprentice in the machine shop of the Philadelphia & Reading Company. He remained in the shops there three years, for he had determined even then to learn the business of practical railroad from the very beginning. In 1858 he began on the road as brakeman, and later was fireman on both passenger and freight engines, all of which at that time burned wood. During the years 1853-54 he was on the Williamsport branch, with Reading engines, in 1855 returning to Reading, and becoming fireman for passenger trains on the well known “Molakwa” and “William,” for eight years, the last was made fireman for the “Illinois,” the first engine in the United States to burn asphalt coal.

In 1858 Mr. Steffe was promoted to the position of engineer, running trains on the main line. When the Civil War broke out he and others connected with the motive department were enrolled as members of the 8th Regiment, Cal. Volunteers. In 1861 he was honored with the commission of first lieutenant, to which rank he was advanced to colonel of the 1st Cal. Infantry, and was made fireman for the “Illinois,” the first engine in the United States to burn asphalt coal.

THOMAS JEFFERSON OBERLIN, a school teacher in Berks county for over twenty-three years, and a wholesale florist of Sinking Spring, was born at Schaefferstown, Lebanon county, June 21, 1850, son of Levi Schaeffer and Elizabeth (Spangler) Oberlin. He was educated in the local schools, the Palatinate College and the Ursinus College, qualifying himself for the profession of teaching. In 1868 when eighteen years of age, he began teaching public school in the vicinity of Epler's Church, in Bern township, Berks county, and he continued teaching in different parts of the county until 1876, when he located at Sinking Spring, and a year later took over the stock of the Peace and Plenty Florist and Greenhouse Establishment under the name of the Charter Oak Academy, in the Mull Mansion, which he carried on successfully for fifteen years, being supported by pupils from the village and vicinity. Then the township school directors erected a large two-story brick building, and established graded schools, which caused Prof. Oberlin to abandon his academy. Having made a special study of botany and flowers since his boyhood, he naturally turned his attention to the extensive cultivation of flowers, and he has pursued this business in the line of cut flowers during the spring, summer and fall seasons until the present time. Successful as a florist, making about daily shipments to large wholesale dealers in Philadelphia and New York.

Prof. Oberlin made a valuable collection of the flora in Berks county, which he arranged and classified scientifically, the specimens numbering over 1,000, and including several species which are exceedingly rare. Among these he found the very rare orchid, Pogonia affinis, C. F. Austin, in June, 1882, in Cumru township, this county, the third station known for it in Pennsylvania, and the fourth in the United States. This specimen was deposited in the herbarium of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. For this exhibit of botany in the Berks flora, he was highly complimented by the late Prof. Thomas C. Porter, of Lafayette College, the recognized authority on botany in Pennsylvania. Apropos of the subject of botany, Prof. Oberlin, in July, 1897, read a very practical paper, "The Redemption of the Hog Backs," before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, at its session in Horticultural Hall, which paper was widely published in the floral journals of this country.

Upon locating in Sinking Spring Prof. Oberlin identified himself with St. John's Reformed Church, and he took an active part in organizing the first Reformed School in the village and erected the school building, and also served as superintendent, serving in this position for several years. Since 1897 he has been officiating as a member of the consistory, acting as secretary of that body.

In 1902 Prof. Oberlin laid out the Mull plantation in the eastern section of the village into building lots, which number altogether nearly 1,000, and a considerable part of these lots have been sold. They have taken the local name of "Oberlin's addition."

Prof. Oberlin married Eva Ann Muth, daughter of Reuben Muth, of Sinking Spring, and widow of Dr. William J. Thrwechter, of Stouchsburg. By her he has four children, Elizabeth, Mrs. Will R. Myers; Eva Maria, Mrs. Harry W. Burgner; Frederica, Mrs. Floyd E. Groff; and Reuben L. M. Oberlin had a daughter by her first husband, Marguerite, who married Dr. Thomas G. Binkley, a practicing physician at Sinking Spring.

Levi Schaeffer Oberlin was born in 1858 and died in 1893. He was the father of five children: Thomas J.; William Wallace, m. Lillie F. Sallade; Levi P. m. Eveline A. K. Myers; Ida Elizabeth m. Daniel F. Lynch; John Charles m. Kate V. Souders; Tamar A. m. Harry T. Myers; and George F. died in infancy.

Frederick Oberlin, father of Levi S., and grandfather of the present owner, was born near Lebanon county, in 1775. For many years he was the owner and landlord of the "Franklin House" at Schaefferstown, which was built by Alexander Schaeffer in 1746. He died in 1846. He married Maria Schaeffer, daughter of Capt. Henry Schaeffer, and granddaughter of Alexander Schaeffer.

John Adam Oberlin, father of Frederick, married Margaret Stober, and his father, the great-great-grandfather of Thomas J., was Michael Oberlin, who emigrated from Germany in 1731, and settled in the vicinity of Schaefferstown.

Capt. Henry Schaeffer, father of Mrs. Maria (Schaeffer) Oberlin, was a captain in the Revolutionary war, and his company was included in the Second Battalion of Pennsylvania Associates from Lancaster county. This company was engaged in active service in the battle of Long Island, in August, 1776. In 1777 and 1778 he served as a subaltern. In 1778 he took the oath of allegiance to more than 360 persons at Schaefferstown. He married Anna Eva Schweitzer, by whom he had six children, of whom Maria was the third. Capt. Schaeffer's father, Alexander Schaeffer, was born in 1712 in the Palatinate, Germany, and emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1738, landing at Philadelphia. He was accompanied by his wife and several children. He was he who laid out and founded Schaefferstown in 1758.

EDWARD PENGELLY, one of the substantial men of Reading, senior member of the printing firm of Edward Pengelly & Brother, at 115 and 117 West Main St., Reading, Pa., was born Feb. 21, 1868, in Reading, the son of Michael and Frances (Merrifield) Pengelly.

Michael Pengelly came to the United States in 1866, having previously worked as a miner in Chile, South America, for six years. He died in Nevada City, Cal., in 1867. His widow came to America in 1873, with two sons and two daughters, namely; Emily, Edward, Harriet and James H. In religious belief the family are Methodists.

Edward Pengelly was seventeen years old when he accompanied his mother to America, locating at Reading, Pa. Ten days later, Oct. 13, 1873, he entered the office of the Reading Eagle as an apprentice, where he worked until 1880, when he was engaged as a compositor on the Reading News, where he continued for six years, or until it suspended. Mr. Pengelly then went West and for a time worked at Butte City, Montana, and later at Center ville, a suburb of Butte, where he was foreman for six months, at the Mining Journal under Mr. Penrose, who was later murdered. He then returned to Reading, and, in company with five other practical printers, started the Daily Telegram, retaining his interest for four years, when he sold out and entered into partnership with Adam G. Harner in book and job printing. They began business under the name of Pengelly & Pengelly, and the partnership lasted until 1899. On Mr. Pengelly's return from that year the present firm was organized, under the name of Edward Pengelly & Brother, and they control a fair share of the better class of the printing trade of Reading.

In 1889 Mr. Pengelly was married to Emma G. Boyer, daughter of Alvin N. Boyer, and they have one daughter, Frances Merrifield. In 1884 Mr. Pengelly became identified with the Masonic fraternity, and is a member of St. John's Lodge, No. 485. He belongs also to Mount Penn Lodge, I. O. O. F. In politics he is independent. In 1902 Mr. Pengelly enjoyed a pleasant visit to his old home in England.

JOSEPH D. C. UMBLE. One of the familiar figures in the public life of Reading is Joseph D. C. Umble, proprietor of the "Mansion House," a hotel favorably known throughout the East. Since 1893 Mr. Umble has in some way, or in some capacity, been identified with the "Mansion House." He is the son of Capt. Joseph and Phoebe (Dickinson) Umble, the former a prominent figure in the political and business life of Lancaster county, and one of the well-known veterans of the Civil war. He died in Reading, March 1, 1905, at the age of seventy-seven years. At the outbreak of the Rebellion he was one of the first to in- terest himself in the military work of the community, and when a company was formed, went at once to the front, participating in all the campaigns that fall to the lot of the soldier. After the war he was prominent in civil life, being a justice of the peace for a number of years, and register of wills of Lancaster county during 1882-83-84. Mrs. Umble, mother of Joseph D. C., together with her two daughters, Anna Mary and Ida E., have their home at the "Mansion House," and assist in their management. Phoebe E., the third daughter, is the wife of R. M. Erasmus, who became a prominent merchant and banker. The father of Mrs. Umble was Henry Dickinson, one of the prominent husbandmen of Lancaster county.

Joseph D. C. Umble was born in Salisbury township, Lancaster Co., Pa., March 26, 1867. He passed the formative period of his life on the home farm, securing a good common school education in the township of Christiana, is in the Y.M.C.A. Institute at Lancaster. When his father was elected to the office of register of wills, he entered the office as his clerk. This was in January, 1885. In 1886 he took a position with the Pennsylvania Steel Company, at Steelton, as clerk to the manager of their commissary department, and in the experience he secured in that line in the following four years, lies the secret of his success in the hotel business at a later period. Coming to Reading about this time, he was variously employed for several years, in different service for the railroads. The point to be noticed is that he was always "employed" and to this his advancement and prosperity may be ascribed. In the spring of 1904, he became proprietor of the "Mansion House," having previously served there as clerk and manager, and it is needless to add that these experiences well equipped him for the fuller responsibilities. It is but fair to state that under the present liberal regime the house has continued to prosper favor. The hotel is complete in every detail, thoroughly accoutered, and spacious enough for the accommodation of 150 guests. Whether by endowment or acquisition, no matter, we find in Mr. Umble a man of pleasing manners and personality, to which no doubt his popularity is attributable. To the prince, pilgrim or peasant, the same welcome and hospitali-tude is extended on all, within the doors where "Joe" Umble presides.

Mr. Umble is a prominent member of several of the most popular fraternal and club organizations of the city, among them being the Elks, the Masons, the Berkshire Country Club, Wyoming Club, and he is quite active in the State Association of Hotel Men. He is a Republican in politics, though he takes little part in such matters, aside from casting his vote on election day.

Glyndeur Hickman, D. D. S., a prominent dentist of Reading, was born in Chester county, Pa., Sept. 6, 1863, son of John W. and Elizabeth (Lamborn) Hickman, and a grandson of Benjamin and Julia A. (McFarland) Hickman. Benjamin Hickman located at Brag Hill, Chester county, and there cultivated a farm all of his life. Dr. Glyndeur Hickman was educated in the schools of Chester county, and then entered the office of Dr. R. L. McClellan, where he studied dentistry for five years. In 1885 he entered the Philadelphia Dental College, and graduated therefrom in 1886. Two years later he located in Reading, and here he has resided ever since, engaged in the practice of his chosen profession. His well appointed office is located at No. 25 South Fifth street. Dr. Hickman is a member of the I. O. R. M. and the Royal Arcanum.

In 1887 Dr. Hickman married Mary E. Thompson, and two children have been born to this union, namely: J. Earl and J. Marion. Doctor is a member of the Baptist Church. In his political affiliations he is connected with the Republican party.

Howard Erasmus Gerhardt, dealer in pianos and all kinds of musical instruments, was born Jan. 18, 1879, in Millersburg, Bethel P. O., Berks county, Pa., son of Dr. Erasmus and Agnes (Weber) Gerhardt.

The Gerhardt family is of German descent, and Mr. Howard E. Gerhardt has succeeded in tracing his line back to (1) Christian Gerhardt, Burgomaster of Gravenhainichen, Saxony, Germany, who died July 11, 1637. His wife was Anna Dobler, daughter of Gallas Dobler, Court Chaplain at Dresden. They became the parents of a son, Paul. (II) Paul Gerhardt, son of Christian and Anna (Dobler, was born March 12, 1607, and he died June 7, 1676. On Feb. 11, 1655, he married Anna Maria Berthold, daughter of Andrew Berthold. Paul Gerhardt was known as a faithful actor of the poetic, the Luther of the seventeenth century hymnology. (III) Paul Frederick Gerhardt, son of Paul and Anna Maria (Berthold), was born Aug. 2, 1662. (IV) Christopher Gerhardt, son of Paul Frederick, died Aug. 15, 1736. (V) William Gerhardt was a son of Christopher. (VI) Frederick Gerhardt, son of William, was born March 26, 1714, in Langenselbold, Dukedom of Isenberg, Germany. He emigrated to America prior to the Revolution. On Jan. 29, 1737, he married Elizabeth Fisher, daughter of Henry Fisher. With their son John Peter, born Oct. 28, 1737, they emigrated to America, landing at Philadel-phia, Aug. 27, 1739, having made the voyage on the ship "Samuel," Hugh Percy, commander. Shortly after their arrival in Philadelphia, the wife died, and Frederick Gerhardt located in Heidelberg township, Berks county, where, Feb. 14, 1740, he married a widow, Barbara Rieger. On Dec. 10, 1748, he purchased of George Umble a tract of seventy acres of land in Heidelberg township. By trade he was a wagoner. His parents had been members of the German Reformed church, but through a sermon preached in 1742 by the Rev. Mr. Ruetten, a Moravian minister, he became a member of Reck's Church, and subsequently became the principal promoter of the Moravian Brethren in North Heidelberg township, known as the Herr Hüter Church. As an elder of the Moravian Church he attended the first public convention of the Reformed Church in Pennsylvania, held Aug. 29, 1743. He died Nov. 30, 1779, and is buried in the cemetery adjoining the church. Through the efforts of a grandson, John K. Gerhardt, a monument was erected by subscription. Frederick Gerhardt was the father of ten children, namely: (1) John Peter Gerhardt, born Oct. 28, 1737, m. Elizabeth —, and had one child, Andreas (born Oct. 13, 1791, died Oct. 31, 1791), and was buried at Host Church. (2) Conrad Gerhardt, born Nov. 29, 1740, was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Heidelberg township until 1808, when he retired from business and located in Philadelphia. In 1798 he m. Rachael Rogaar Yesslestein, and they had seven children—Rachael, Elizabeth, William, Mary, John, Elonora and Thomas. In 1815 he m. (second) Anna Maria (Berg) Penn, daughter of John Penn. There were no children by this marriage. (3) Elizabeth Gerhardt was born Sept. 29, 1742. (4) Frederick Gerhardt, born Sept. 23, 1744, m. Susanna Dunord, daughter of Jacob and Anna Maria Dunord. In his will, dated Nov. 22, 1822, he mentions three sons and two daughters: Frederick (1780-1845) m. Magdalena Troutman, and had eleven children; Jacob, who m. (first) a Miss Less, had two sons, and (second) Catharine Magdalena Schock, and had eight children; John died in 1852; Anna Maria m. Jacob Ebling; and Barbara m. Mr. Strauss, and died in 1840. (5) Johannes Gerhardt, born Feb. 12, 1747, located in the neighborhood of Churchtown, Lancaster county, and there he and his wife, Susanna Rhoads, were buried. They had nine children: Peter, John, Frederick, Jacob, William, Susannah, Barbara, Christian and a daughter who married a Mr. Bixler. (6) Anna Maria Gerhardt, born June 23, 1750, m. Jacob Meallhausen. (7) Jacob was born Jan 1, 1753. (8) Anthony Gerhardt, born Feb. 10, 1754, died in infancy. (9) Anna Gerhardt was born Oct. 29, 1755, m. Henry Burkholder, and had children: Daniel, Peter, Jacob, Elizabeth, Samuel, Sally and Maria. (10) Catharine Gerhardt was born Oct. 2, 1758. (VII) Jacob Gerhardt, son of Frederick by his second marriage, was born Jan. 1, 1752. By his father's will dated Nov. 26, 1779, he received the farm. He was a private in Capt. Ferdinand Ritter's Company, 6th Battalion, Berks county militia, commanded by Joseph Hiester in the service of the United States in 1780. He died Dec. 13, 1808, and both he and his wife Elizabeth Potteiger (born May 7, 1759, died April 25, 1824, daughter of Martin and Susanna Potteiger), are buried at the Eck Church. They had three sons: (1) Martin Gerhart, born April 6, 1776, died Dec. 7, 1836, m. Marguereta Leiss, and had four children: Isaac m. Catharine Klop, and had four children, Kate (m. George Zimmerman), Emma (m. Nick Hunter, and had two sons, Edward and Frederick James); (2) John Gerhart; Elizabeth Gerhart; and Elias Gerhart. (2) Frederick, born April 13, 1781, is mentioned below. (3) John (born April 11, 1789, died March 20, 1827) m. Anna Maria Klop (born March 5, 1791, died Aug. 28, 1834) and had eight children: John X, Elias, Isaac, Maria, John Nathan, David, John A., and Lewis. John was mentioned in the will of his father.

(VIII) Frederick Gerhart, second son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Potteiger), was born April 13, 1791, and died March 20, 1823. He m. Elizabeth Kalbach (born Sept. 17, 1786, died April 15, 1817). (3) John Filbert, d. 1837, m. Clara Dundore, and to this marriage were born four children: Clara Dundore (m. Clayton Schaeffer); James Dundore (m. Ella Himmelberger); Thomas Dundore (m. Catharine Burkey); and Darius Dundore (m. Kate Hiest). (4) Lizzie Gerhart m. Adam Stump, and their son, Frank Gerhart, born Oct. 24, 1837, died Dec. 27, 1864, entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated therefrom March 14, 1867, with the degree of Doctor in Arts. On Dec. 24, 1875, he m. Agnes Weber (born Feb. 13, 1863), and their children were: Gertrude Charlotte, born July 1, 1876, (m. R. W. Weber); John Luther, born Nov. 24, 1877, (m. Sarah S. Weber); Marian and John Hunter; Howard Gerhart, born Jan. 18, 1879, is the subject proper of this sketch; Ida May, born April 20, 1881, m. Harry E. Gerhart, and has one son, Robert Gerhart (born Dec. 24, 1906); John Isaac, born May 30, 1884; and Sophia Elizabeth and Florence Grace, twins, born Jan. 30, 1886.

Mrs. Agnes (Weber) Gerhart was born Feb. 13, 1853, a daughter of John and Sophia (Snyder) Weber. John Weber was born in 1803; he d. Jan. 30, 1886; and their children were: Reed, (m. Mary C. Weber); John Luther, (m. Ida May Gerhart, born Jan. 18, 1879); Robert Gerhart (born Dec. 24, 1906); John Isaac, born May 30, 1884; and Sophia Elizabeth and Florence Grace, twins, born Jan. 30, 1886.

Mrs. Sophia (Snyder) Weber, mother of Mrs. Agnes (Weber) Gerhart, was born in 1808 and died in 1886. She was a daughter of Peter Snyder (1808-1860) and his wife Eva Rieth (1806-1871). Peter Snyder was a son of George Snyder Jr., and his wife Katharine Koeb, and a grandson of George Snyder, Sr. (the maiden name of whose wife was Rehrer). Eva (Krieh) Snyder was a daughter of Adam Snyder (born 1754, died 1828, ficer in Capt. Furrer's Company, Col. Patton's Battalion), and Juliana Braun (1786-1856) and a granddaughter of Leonard Rieth and Elizabeth Lebo, who donated seven and eight acres of land for church and burial purposes, upon which Reed's church was built.

(XI) Howard Erhardt Gerhardt attended the district school of Bethel township, and later he taught school for one term in Brecknock township. In the fall of 1897 he enrolled as a student at the Inter-State Commercial College, Reading, graduating the following spring. He secured a position with C. H. Lichty as stenographer, and later was given charge of the Musical Merchandise and Sheet Music department, where he laid the foundation of his successful career. On May 18, 1831, he opened a complete music store of his own at No. 757 Penn street, and in March, 1904, owing to the development of the business he was compelled to provide larger quarters, moving to No. 809 Penn street. At this time he formed a partnership with Bertrand H. Farr, under the firm name of Farr & Gerhardt, and they were the first representatives in the United States for the instruments, including the Weber, Steck, Wheelock and Stuyvesant Pianola pianos, the Metrostyle and Theodolist Pianolas, the Orchestrelle, and the Somer, Wegman, Estey and Becker Bros. pianos. They carried a complete line of musical merchandise, sheet music, Edison and Victor machines and records, Regina moving music boxes, and Mr. Gerhardt retired from the firm on March 10, 1909, and on Aug. 30, 1909, he opened a complete music store of his own at No. 813 Penn street. He controls several well-known piano and player piano agencies, and carries a full line of musical merchandise.

Mr. Gerhardt was received into full communion in the Salem Reformed Church, Bethel, by the rite of confirmation administered by Rev. Henry Hilbish, and a few years later he was transferred by certificate to the Second Reformed Church, Reading. In his political faith he is a staunch Republican. He is a member of the following fraternal organizations: Mt. Penn Council, No. 466, Royal Arcanum; Reading Tent No. 426, Knights of the Maccabees; Penn Primary, No. 2, Prudent Patricians of Pompeii; and Progressive Americans, No. 1. He is eligible for membership in the Sons of the American Revolution through five different lines, as follows: Jacob Gerhardt, a private in Capt. Ritter's Co. C of the Berks county militia, in 1780; Capt. Henry Weaver, commissioned captain of the 6th Company, 6th Battalion, Berks county militia, May 17, 1777, Henry Spycker, colonel; Court Martial Man Valentine Meyer, 6th Company, 6th Battalion, May 15, 1785, for desertion; Jacob Fisher's Company, Col. Patton's Battalion, Berks county militia, Aug. 27, 1776; and Adam Read (or Rieth), fifer in Capt. Michael Furrer's Company, Col. John Patton's Battalion, Berks county militia, stationed at South Amboy, Sept. 5, 1776.

Jonathan Fisher Gerhardt, son of Henry and Mary (Bucher) Gerhardt, was born at Heinfelt, Germany, July 8, 1831, and emigrated to the United States in 1854. He married Sophia Schall (also of Heinfelt), and their daughter, Catharine Schenk, m. Robert Charles Seyfert, Bandmaster of the Regimental Band in the German army from the Duke of Wolde, at the Siege of Paris, and later Bandmaster at the Castle at Arolon, the capital of the Duke of Wolde. Robert Charles Seyfert was Bandmaster Robert Charles and father of Mrs. Gerhardt, who was born Oct. 19, 1854, and he m. Amelia Catharine Frentzel, born Jan. 4, 1860, daughter of Frederick William and Margaret (Snyder) Frentzel, Frederick William Frentzel was born Dec. 23, 1834, at Spielberg, Kreis Hanau, Court Vogtland, Kuren, and died Apr. 14, 1881. Mrs. Margaret (Snyder) Frentzel was born Feb. 14, 1830, daughter of Philip Snyder (born March, 1802, and emigrated from the Kingdom of Bavaria, Germany), and his wife Mary Anna Diller, and granddaughter of Adam Snyder and his wife Anna Kline.

MATTHEW HARBSTER, former president of the Reading Hardware Company and a business man who has been prominently identified with some of Reading's most successful enterprises, was born May 18, 1831, in Lehigh county, Pa., son of Henry and Mary (Bucher) HARBSTER.

The Harbster family originated in Germany and was founded in Pennsylvania by John Harbster, grandfather of Matthan. At an early age he came to Berks county, later resided in Montgomery and still later in Lehigh, where he died.

John Harbster, son of John, was born in Berks county. His trade was that of blacksmith, but he was also something of a machinist and realized an ample fortune from the manufacture and sale of coffee-mills. He married Mary Bucher, and they had seven children, Matthan being the fourth in the order of birth. The parents both died in 1890.

Matthan Harbster had what might be termed meager educational opportunities, as he was but a lad when he began to contribute to his own support, engaging in boat-building on the Schuylkill and Juniata canals. After several years' experience in this hard life, his brother William took him into his blacksmith shop, at Hamburg, to learn the trade where he also learned coach-making. When he had completed the necessary apprenticeship, he worked as a journeyman, as was the custom then, until 1851, when the three brothers, Matthan, William and John, became associated in business, and in a little shop at the foot of Sixth Street, under the firm name of Harbster Brothers & Co., they were known all over the United States as the Reading Hardware Company. All three brothers were practical business men, energetic and industrious, and the business was profitable from the start. Its expansion soon made larger accommodations necessary, and in 1858 the concern was re-organized under the name of William M. Griscom coming into the partnership and the firm name becoming then Harbster Brothers & Co., which continued until 1882, when the present name was adopted. Of the original partners only Matthan remains, the other two brothers being deceased.

The Reading Hardware Company conducts one of the largest manufacturing and wholesale hardware houses in the United States and employs 2,500 men in turning out the various products and attending to the vigorous pushing of the business at different points. The works, which cover an area exceeding five acres, comprise substantial brick buildings, three stories in height, all especially constructed for the operations carried on in them, and all equipped with all the modern conveniences known in the business. The buildings include large storage warehouses for the completed articles of manufacture, shops where the artistic finishing is done by expert workmen, a japanning building, and general hardware buildings, shops for drilling, plating, bronzing, polishing, finishing, and all the screw factories, and all of these have been completely furnished with the best mechanical appliances, serving to reduce expense while turning out better and better products each year. The Reading Hardware Company has branch stores in such centers as New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. Its branch representatives cover the whole country and are welcomed wherever the excellence of the products of this concern has been tested. The firm makes a specialty of all kinds of builders' hardware, and special hardware furnishings for the most up-to-date buildings.

In addition to his important duties in connection with this immense industry, Mr. Harbster for a time was president of the Reading Screw Company, whose works were located in Norristown; was formerly president of the Montello Brick and Clay Company, and is also president of the Reading Land and Improvement Company. He is on the governing board of the following institutions: Farmers' National Bank, Reading; Reading Passenger Railroad; and Reading and Columbia Railroad. In former years he was connected with a number of the city's infant industries and his sound advice and financial backing have done much to make many of them the successful enterprises they are today. For sixteen years he served as water commissioner of Reading, and for several years was a member of the school board.

Mr. Harbster married Aug. 12, 1856, Susan Bingham, who died in 1900. She was survived by four children, namely: Ida C., John E., Ellen Kate and Nellie G. Mr. Harbster was married (second) in 1904 to Mrs. Mary Hetrich.

In political sentiment Mr. Harbster is a stanch Republican. He has never accepted office outside of the city, but as a member of the council at various times has demonstrated his public spirit and shown his interest in the welfare of his fellow-citizens. He is a Mason of long standing, and for many years has been a member of Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church.

L. HOWARD GEHRIS, an enterprising and energetic young business man of Reading, Pa., was born in 1877, in Berks county, son of Nathan Henry and Mary A. (Spang) Gehris, a full sketch of whom will be found elsewhere.

Mr. Gehris attended the common schools of his native borough, and on coming to Reading, entered the Carroll Institute, after leaving which he went to New York City. Here he entered the law office of Alexander Thain, with whom he remained three years, later taking a course at the New York University Night School. On completing his studies, Mr. Gehris secured a position as traveling representative for the New York house of The Purdue, Frederick & Co., having his headquarters at Dayton, Ohio, under the Western States. Later, he engaged with another large New York house, trading throughout the Middle Atlantic States, after which he engaged with the well-known Mellin's Food Co., being, for about three years, that company's New York City representative. At the end of this time Mr. Gehris embarked in business on Fulton street, New York, continuing there until his return to Reading, when he engaged with A. B. Sausser in the stove and tinning business, at No. 326 North Sixth street, under the firm name of A. B. Sausser & Co., which partnership continued from August 1, 1901, until March 30, 1906. After the latter date Mr. Gehris was in business on his own account until April 15, 1907, when the Gehris-Herbine Company at Nos. 45-47 Reed street was incorporated for the manufacture of fancy hosiery, of which company Mr. Gehris is secretary and treasurer. He resided at No. 216 North Sixth street, Reading.

Mr. Gehris married Edith V. R. Leinbach, daughter of the late Joseph A. Leinbach, senior member of the well-known firm of Leinbach & Bros., clothiers of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Gehris have two daughters, Madeleine Louise and Mary Alice. In politics Mr. Gehris is a member of the Republican party. At the present time, he is engaged in the hardware business.

His religious faith makes him a member of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church. Mr. Gehris' rise in the business world has been very rapid. He is honest and reliable and has the gift of business ability that has made his success assured. He and his wife are greatly esteemed in their community.

EDWIN A. BOYER, chorister and organist of Maxatawny Zion's Church, and a popular music teacher as well as a composer, was born in Maxatawny township, near Kutztown, Pa., Aug. 28, 1871, a son of Abraham and Lucy Ann (Youse) Boyer, grandson of Abraham Boyer and great-grandson of Philip Boyer.

(1) Philip Boyer was a native of Germany, and came to America before he was married. Meeting his future wife in a foreign city, a pretty romance followed and the young couple were married in Philadelphia, but later removed to Rockland, where they settled. He is buried at Mertz in the same township. The four children born to himself and wife were: Jacob moved to Union county, Pa.; Abraham; William lived in Rockland township; Lydia married Mr. William German, of Salem.

(II) Abraham Boyer, Sr., was born in Rockland township, in 1791, and died in 1849, aged eighty-eight years, and is buried at Mertz church. By trade he was a weaver and butcher, following both callings according to the season, and in addition he owned a fine farm in Rockland township. He was descended from the Washington family of Philip Welder, and she died at the age of eighty-five—many years after her husband. Their children were: Solomon died unmarried; Hettie, deceased, m. Daniel Heist of Rockland; Sarah m. Benjamin Ruppert; Catherine m. Daniel Heist; Betsy died young; Benneville; David; Daniel; and Abraham.

(III) Abraham Boyer, Jr., was born in Maxatawny township Jan. 15, 1879, and for many years was a farmer of Maxatawny township, but during eight years he lived near Breinigsville; atmonteery for fourteen years, and in 1897 he retired to Schofers where he now lives, acting as janitor for the Maxatawny Zion's Church. On June 28, 1897, he married Lucy Ann Youse, daughter of Solomon and Barbara (Noll) Youse, and the following children were born to them: Charles, of Tatamy, Pa.; Louisa m. Henry Ebert, of Monterey; Solomon is of Lehighton, Pa.; Jeremiah is of Lyons, Pa.; Prof. Edwin A.; Alice m. Jeremiah B. Trexler, of Breinigsville; Amanda died young.

(IV) Edwin A. Boyer worked upon the farm for about fifteen years, and attended the local schools, but when only eighteen he began to cultivate his musical talents, under the instruction of Prof. C. A. Marks of Allen town. He is a musician of marked ability, and plays all instruments equally well, although he makes a specialty of the piano and pipe organ. A number of years ago he began to give instruction in music, and since 1902 he has devoted all of his attention to his beloved profession, now having a large class, numbering about forty-five, gathered from Upper Berks and Western Lehigh counties. He is the organist of the Maxatawny Zion's Church and the Maxatawny Union Church. He has been elected to these positions in 1900, and prior to that, from 1894 to 1900, he held a similar position with the Seibertsville Union church. Since 1894 Prof. Boyer has sung at 294 funerals, his services being in great demand upon such occasions, as well as those of a less serious character, which leads the singing at both the churches before mentioned, alternating Sundays, and the choirs in both are excellent owing to his skill as an instructor. Altogether he has played at 1,325 services. He is a composer of both instrumental and vocal music, among his compositions being the Boyer's Reunion March, in 1908, which was played by Unger's Band, of Reading, at Black Bear Park.

Fraternally Mr. Boyer is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., Pioneer Council No. 380, New Smithville. He and his family are consistent members of the Lutheran congregation of Maxatawny and Church.

On April 25, 1896, Mr. Boyer married Lizzie A. Smith, daughter of George L. Smith, a complete sketch of whom appears elsewhere.

GEORGE SOLOMON SCHLEGEL, D. D. S. Among the prominent young professional men of Reading, Pa., may be mentioned George Solomon Schlegel, a successful dental practitioner of that city. Solomon Schlegel, his paternal grandfather, was a resident of Fleetwood, Pa., while his maternal grandfather, Simon Kline, was the pioneer brick manufacturer of Reading. Edmund Schlegel, father of George S., was a farmer, now living in Reading. He married Mary M. Kline, and their only child was George Solomon.

George S. Schlegel was born in Cumru township, Berks county, April 9, 1870, and was educated in the public schools, graduating from high school in 1897. He then attended the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, and in 1900 graduated a doctor of dental surgery. He came at once to Reading, locating at No. 147 North Eighth street, where he has since enjoyed a large and lucrative practice. Dr. Schlegel belongs to Delta Sigma Delta fraternity of the United States, and to the Pennsylvania Dental Band, Reading Dental Society and the Lebanon Valley Dental Association, and the Pennsylvania State Dental Society. He is a life member of the Alumni Association of the University of Pennsylvania. In politics the Doctor is a Democrat. He belongs to Trinity Lutheran Church, and is a teacher in its Sunday school.

Dr. Schlegel was married, Oct. 29, 1903, to Miss Emma Brumbaugh Strohecker, daughter of Augustus J. Stro-hecker, a member of the board of park commissioners of Reading. Mrs. Schlegel is a graduate of the Reading high school, graduating therefrom in the same class as did her husband.

JOHN RICK, one of Reading’s enterprising young business men, who is a member of the firm of C. K. Whitner & Co., was born in 1854, in the city in which he now resides, son of John and Emma (Ammon) Rick.

Herman Rick, great-great-grandfather of John, came to this country with his parents in 1718, being then about twelve years of age. He received his education in the pay schools of Berks county, after leaving which he engaged in farming, an occupation which he carried on throughout life. John George Rick, son of Herman, was also a farmer, and he became a large land owner and influential citizen of Bern township, where all his life was spent. He and his wife, Catherine Weiser, were members of the Reformed Church, and in political matters he was a stanch Whig.

Charles Rick, the grandfather of John, received his education in the early schools of his native township, after leaving which he engaged in a general store at Centreport and Peacock’s Locks, but in 1841 came to Reading, remaining there the rest of his life. He was a retired, and died in the faith of the German Reformed Church in 1878, as did his wife in 1890. Their children were: Cyrus, for many years cashier of the Farmers Bank and a member of the firm of Rick Brothers, m. Emma Madeira; John; Charles, a retired citizen of Reading and veteran of the Civil War, m. (first) Ellen Trate, and (second) Julia O’Hara, and had five children; James, Edward, Albert, Harrison and Julia, all by the second marriage; and Ellen m. William A. Arnold, and had six children, William, John, Franklin, Anna, Ellen and Mary.

John Rick, father of John, was for many years a member of the well-known firm of Rick Brothers, which was established in 1867, and discontinued in 1908. He died in 1900, aged sixty-two years. Mr. Rick married Emma Ammon, and four children were born to them: George, John, Paul and Margaret (deceased).

John Rick was educated in the schools of Reading and later attended a school at Lawrenceville, N. J., after which he took a course at Stoner’s Business College, Reading. He served his time at the machinist’s trade in the Philadelphia & Reading railroad shops, and in 1905 entered the employ of C. K. Whitner & Co., as clerk, being made a partner in January, 1907. In March, 1908, Mr. Rick married Miss Carrie Whitner, daughter of C. K. Whitner, and two children have been born to this union: Mary Elizabeth and Horace Whitner. Mr. Rick is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 115, B. P. O. E., and the Berkshire Club. His religious connection is with St. Matthew’s Lutheran Church.

FRANK I. RAUCH, who holds the responsible position of assistant superintendent of the Reading Eagle Publishing Company, was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, Sept. 1, 1854, son of William and Matilda (Ulrich) Rauch. When he was about five years old the family moved to Stouchburg, Marion township, this county. His earlier education was acquired at the public schools of that township and later he was sent for some time to the Stouchburg Academy. On starting to make his own way in the world he began with farm work, spending four years in that occupation; he then secured employment as a machinist in Reading, where he clerked for one year and following that was similarly engaged at Stouchburg, for a year and a half. In 1874 he removed to Reading and became associated with the Reading Eagle Publishing Company, in the capacity of subscription clerk. Since then he has steadily risen, becoming, several years after he entered as clerk, bookkeeper for the concern and for the last ten years having held the position of assistant superintendent. Mr. Rauch possesses admirable qualifications for his work and well deserves the confidence which the company reposes in him.

On Dec. 27, 1881, Mr. Rauch was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Houder, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth Houder, of Reading, both of whom are deceased. Daniel Houder was for many years in the service of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company. Mr. Rauch belongs to St. Paul’s Memorial Reformed Church, and was secretary of the consistory. Fraternally he has been quite active and belongs to the Elks, the B.P.O.E., and the Press Club of Reading. In the former order he is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 549, as a past master, and for eleven years served as secretary. He is also a past officer in the Elks.

GEORGE W. BIEHL, senior partner of Biehl’s Carriage & Wagon Works at Reading, and actively identified with the business for thirty years, was born in Allentown, Feb. 5, 1854. He received his education in the common schools of Reading. At the age of thirteen years he entered the employ of Conrad Krebs as a helper to his father (who was employed there as a coach trimmer), Mr. Krebs having been the leading carriage manufacturer in Reading. He mastered the trimming trade and started in business on his own account in 1877, locating his shop on Cherry street below Sixth, where he remained until 1880. He then moved his establishment to his present factory on Pearl street, between Cherry and Franklin, with show room on Berks street, and in 1885 the firm of Biehl & Schlegel was added and the company was equipped with modern machinery, and expert mechanics are kept busy in turning out special products, which comprise light carriages, transfer and express wagons, ambulances, embalmers’ wagons, hearses, speed-sleighs, etc. Anything in the carriage making line of manufacture can be furnished by this large and well-known establishment; all kinds of harness can also be procured there.

In 1903, Mr. Biehl admitted as a partner, Wilson H. Eisenbrown, then proprietor of the Eagle Wagon Works, and the two plants were consolidated; and in 1904, on account of the large increase in business, Thomas DeMoss was admitted as a second partner, the firm name becoming Biehl’s Carriage & Wagon Works; and since then this enterprising firm has been very successful. In 1907 they incorporated the Berks Auto Garage Company for selling, repairing and storing automobiles.

In 1871 Mr. Biehl married Emma Morgan, daughter of Thomas Morgan of Reading, and they have five children: George M. (married Julia Pougel), Bessie (widow of Charles F. Worrell, residing at Wayne, Pa.), Alvin J. (married Sophia Skinner), Herbert T. and Pearl. Mr. Biehl is a member of St. John’s Lodge No. 155. F. & A. M., of Reading of the Scottish Rite, 32d degree, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Reading.

George Biehl, the paternal grandfather of Mr. Biehl, was brought up and educated in the schools of Kutztown, and while a young man learned the blacksmith’s trade, which he followed for many years. He died at Kutztown in 1861, aged forty-eight years. He married Mary Bobet and she survived him two years, dying in 1863, aged forty-eight years. They had the following children: William, John A., Henry, Jane (m. Thomas Hemmig) and Emeline (m. Henry Essen). In religious belief they were Lutherans.

John A. Biehl, the father of Mr. Biehl, was born in the vicinity of Kutztown, Nov. 17, 1833, and his education was secured in the advanced schools of that town. His first work was as helper in his father’s blacksmith shop, and after working thus for a short period he apprenticed himself to the carriage trimmer’s trade at Allentown, Pa., which he learned thoroughly in all its branches. He then worked as a journeyman in Allentown, Hamburg, Reading and other cities and was considered a superior workman. He continued working at his trade until 1902, when he retired, making his home with his son until his decease in 1908. In 1853 he married Matilda Wetherhold, daughter of George Wetherhold, of Allentown, and they had one son, George W., the subject of this sketch. Mrs. Biehl died in 1806, when in her seventy-fifth year.

GEORGE B. ALBRIGHT, proprietor of the Market House Saloon, and superintendent of the South Reading Market, and who is well known in business circles of the city, was born in Bern township, Berks county, son of Amos Albright.

Amos Albright was also a native of Bern township, and a blacksmith by trade. He married Tamson Smith, daughter of Thomas P. Smith, and to this union were born children as follows: Mary m. Isaac S. Leining; Alfred S.; Ellen R. m. Monroe Bender; Lucinda m. Robert Smith; Hannah m. Thomas J. Snyder; and Leona F. Albright died in 1901, aged seventy-five years, in the faith of the Reformed Church, which his wife, who survives him, attends. In politics Mr. Albright was a Demo-

George B. Albright was educated in the common schools of Bern township, and followed farming until the age of nineteen years, when he learned butchering and engaged in that business on Sixth street, Reading, for ten years. In 1875, in company with his father-in-law, Abraham S. Kissinger, Mr. Albright started a coal yard at the corner of Sixth and Bingaman streets, and this was continued until 1878, with great success. Mr. Al- bright came to his present stand in 1895 as superintendent of the South Reading market house, which had been built by a company, organized as the South-Reading Market House Company, in 1870. Since Mr. Albright has taken charge many substantial improvements have been made, including a cement floor throughout the building, and a stable, containing 282 stalls to accommodate an equal number of horses. Mr. Albright became manager of the saloon in 1895, and this he has conducted with much success, it being very popular with out-of-town people.

In 1874 Mr. Albright married Mary A. Kissinger, daughter of A. S. Kissinger, now deceased, and six children were born to this union, three of whom survive: William A., Howard and L. Annie. The other three children died in infancy. Not only in business circles has Mr. Albright been prominently connected, but in politics as well, being a staunch Democrat and at one time school controller of the First ward. He has attended both county and State conventions, and is regarded as a strong party man in this section. Fraternally he is connected with Lodge No. 115, B.

GEORGE M. GRAEFF, general manager of Kline &
Ephihimer's department store of Reading, was born in this city Jan. 30, 1840, son of John and grandson of Jacob Graeff.

Jacob Graeff was born in Maiden-creek township, Berks county. He married a Miss Schaeffer and they had three sons: William, of Reading; Frederick and John.

John Graeff, son of Jacob, was born at Reading in 1804, and died in that city in November, 1876. By trade he was a wool hat maker, and followed his calling many years. In religious faith he was a member of the Reformed church, and he is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. His wife was Catherine Stahl, daughter of Major William Stahl, a prominent citizen of Reading, who from 1838 to 1849 served Berks county as coroner. Among other things he wrote a business history of Berks county that is regarded as one of the best records of the county's commercial history in existence. Mr. and Mrs. John Graeff had these children: Sarah; Joseph; Mary; Susan; Marks; George M.; Catherine, m. to Henry J. Reiff, of Reading; Rebecca and Rosa, all deceased except George M. and Catherine.

George M. Graeff was educated in the public schools of Reading, and was one of the first pupils to attend the Reading high school, but he left before completing his course to earn his living. He became a bundle boy, now called cash boy, with Hain & Germant, who conducted a store in the Odd Fellows hall on Penn street, now called Library hall, and was still in the employ of this firm when they retired from business. He was then employed with Asa M. Hart, a dry goods merchant on Penn street, but after several years his employer died. In 1870 he connected himself with the concern of which he is now general manger, as bookkeeper, and was gradually promoted until in 1885 he became general manager which responsible position he still holds.

Mr. Graeff was a member of the old Salome Lodge of Odd Fellows until it was suspended. He is a member of the Order of Red Men; of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., and takes a deep interest in Post work, he having served as a private in Company H, 11th Pa. V. I. Mr. Graeff and his family are members of St. James Lutheran church, and since 1895 Mr. Graeff has been a member of the position for many years, when he was promoted to assistant cashier. He is identified with the Birdsboro Building & Loan Association, and also with the public school affairs of the borough as a director.

Daniel Bower, his father, was a farmer on the homestead in Amity township, for upward of fifty years, having been previously employed a foreman at the Gibraltar forge. Besides carrying on farming, he was actively engaged in conducting a sawmill, on the prem-ises, which was run by water power, supplied by the Monocacy creek. He died in 1894, aged eighty-seven years.

His marriage was to Catharine (Coulter) Henth Martiner, daughter of Archibald and Catharine (Coulter) Lewis, of Robeson township, who was of Welsh ancestry and the descendant of a well known Quaker family. She died in 1868, aged fifty-seven years. They were both buried in the St. John's Church Yard, Robeson township. They had seven children: Catharine (1828-1889) m. John W. Hartranft; Jacob L. (1834), who lives on the homestead, m. Sarah Babb; Justina (1837) is living at Birdsboro; Samuel L. (1842-1908) m. Amanda Ludwig, and they moved to Wilmington, Del.; about 1861 m. George R. Potts, a tenant of Amity township, who died in 1888, and after his death, she moved to Birdsboro, where she now resides; Lewis A. (1848) m. Justina Johnson, and resides in Wilmington, Del., and John Newton. The parents were thrifty and industrious, were widely traveled and universally esteemed for their sterling qualities of heart and mind.

Jacob Bower, or Baur, as the name was then spelled, the grandfather, was a farmer of Amity township, having inherited his farm of ninety acres from his grandfather, Moses Bower. He died in 1867, aged eighty-six years. He married Susanna Hopper, who died. Dec. 28, 1854. They had ten children: Daniel, m. to Elizabeth Matilda Lewis; John, m. to Anna Bush; Jacob H., m. to Matilda Bush; William, m. to Catharine Boyer; Elizabeth, m. to William U; degrove; Hannah, m. to J. Jacob Moyer; Mary Ann, m. to Benjamin Rhoads; Catharine, m. to David Schaeetz; Susanna, and Samuel, who died young.

Moses Bower, the great-grandfather, when a child emigrated from Germany with his parents. He was twice married, and was the father of nine children, as follows: Jacob, Elizabeth, Moses, George, Daniel, Samuel, David, John, and Michael. Moses, the Bower homestead. He was in 1805, and was survived by his widow, one son Michael and twenty-nine grandchildren. He provided amply for his widow, and to his son Michael and grandson Jacob, the grandfather of the subject of this essay, Thomas (who desired to be divided in equal portions subject to certain cash payments on the part of said son Michael and grandson Jacob, to his grandchildren. He was buried at Amityville in the old burying ground connected with the Lutheran and Reformed Church.

JOHN LINCOLN BOWER, M. D., was born in Amity township, Berks county, on the Bower homestead, July 12, 1865. The Bower homestead is part of a five hundred-acre tract of land purchased by Otto Earnest Koch on the commission of Moses Bower Fann, by patent bearing the date of Juni 11, 1705. This property was given and granted by said Otto Earnest Koch to his son Zacharias (who signed his name Zacharias Cogg) by a grant dated the Thirteenth day of April in the Fourth year of the Reign of our Sovran Lord King George, Am, Dom, Reg, Farn^ and remained in his possession until March 10, 1723, when it was acquired by John Waren, who dying without issue, April 24, 1734, bequeathed 150 acres of said property to his brother Jacob Waren. On March 10, 1744, 113 acres of this tract of land were sold by Jacob Waren and his wife Ann (who signed his name Warren). Thomas Waren or Warren was possessed of additional property, for the records show that April 13, 1772, he and his wife Eva sold 1371 acres of land to Moses Bauer (since Anglicized to Bower) the great-grandfather of Dr. Bower, for a consideration of £480 7s. 6d.

Moses Bower was not the first of his family to hold property in this section, for on June 27, 1763, Jacob Waren sold to Michael Bower, eldest son of Moses Bower, thirty acres of land, but May 7, 1767, this property was sold by Moses Bower to his grandson Michael. Michael died in 1805, and in a will dated March 14th, of the same year, he bequeathed his "plantation" in equal shares to his only surviving son Michael and his grandson Jacob, son of Moses Bower, and great-grandfather of Dr. Bower—Michael to have the lower half and the grandson Jacob to have the remaining portion of the "plantation." By reason of these bequests certain cash payments were required to be made by said Michael and Jacob to the widow and grandchildren of Moses Bower.

Upon the death of Michael Bower in 1823 the property passed to his son Jacob, who retained possession until March 13, 1839, when it was purchased by Daniel Bower (grandfather of Dr. Bower) and his brother Jacob H. On April 1, 1847, Daniel became the sole owner and so remained until Aug 4, 1883, when property was purchased by Jacob L. Bower, the present owner and the father of the subject of this biographical sketch. The farm now consists of 104 acres, composed largely of the portion bequeathed by Moses Bower to his son Michael, and lies on both sides of what is now known as the old Pennsylvania Turnpike, the main highway from Reading to Philadelphia, and is intersected by the Monocacy creek. A landmark of the place is a sawmill more than a century old, operated by water power supplied by the Monocacy creek and is widely known as Bower's sawmill. The original structure stands today, and the mill is still in use. Many Indian relics have been found on the farm, bearing mute testimony that prior to the coming of the white pioneer, this must have been a favored locality for the Red Man.

The great-great-grandfather of Dr. Bower, Michael Bauer, or Bower as the name is now spelled, and his wife Catharine and four children—Michael, John, Moses and Labright—were the first of this family to come to America, and came from Germany, landing in Philadelphia, Sept. 10, 1753. Moses Bower died in 1805, and was survived by his wife, one son Michael and twenty-nine grandchildren. He was interred in the old cemetery at Amityville.

The great-great-grandfather, Moses, was the third son of his father Moses. He was twice married, and was the father of nine children: Jacob, Elizabeth, Moses, George, Daniel, Samuel, David, John and Michael. Jacob Bower, the great-grandfather, was born, Oct. 16, 1751, and was the eldest child of Moses and Barbara (Frederick) Bower. He was married to Susanna Happel who died Dec. 28, 1854. They had ten children: Daniel, John, Jacob H., William, Elizabeth (married Robert Updegraff), John, Elizabeth, Mary (married Thomas T. Myers), Mary Ann (m. Benjamin Rhoads), Catharine (m. David Schaeetz), and Susanna and Samuel died in early life.

Daniel Bower, his grandfather, was born Oct. 17, 1807, in Amity township, and died March 30, 1894. He married Elizabeth Bower, his cousin, who died Jan. 13, 1868, aged fifty-seven years. They were buried in St. John's Church Yard, in Robeson township. There were seven children born to them as follows: Catharine, deceased, m. to John Hartrand; Jacob L.; Samuel L., deceased; Justina, living, m. to Birdsboro; Ferdinand; Susan M., widow of William R. Potts, Birdsboro, Pa.; and John N., Birdsboro, Pennsylvania.

Jacob L. Bower, father of Dr. Bower, was born Nov. 23, 1834, in Robeson township. He resides on the old homestead. Mr. Bower for many years conducted the farm and sawmill with unusual success, but for some years he has lived retired. Some years ago, Mr. Bower served his township as school director. He is a solid, substantial and progressive man, and has always endeavored to live up to his high ideals of citizenship. At the time when he married Sarah Babb, daughter of the late John and Mary (DeHartt) Babb, of Alsace township. They have had children, and all survive: Dr. Elmer E., a dentist of Cambden, N. J.; Emma; Dr. John L. and Mary S.

Mr. Bower attended the public schools of his district and this was supplemented by several terms at the Amityville Seminary, following which he taught his home school, Leopard No. 4, for one term. He was graduated from the Jefferson Medical College in 1888, and became a resident physician at the Philadelphia Hospital, and remained there for a little more than fifteen months. After this he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and is one of its oldest medical examiners, having been located in Reading since Oct. 13, 1892.

Dr. Bower is a member of the Berkshire Country Club, the Wyoming Club, the Union League of Philadelphia, and the Pennsylvania German Society. Professionally he is a member of the Reading Medical Association, the Berks County Medical Society, the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania, The American Medical Association and is a member of the Medical Staff of the Reading Hospital.

GOETZ. Among the leading business enterprises of Reading, Pa., is that of Ferdinand Goetz Sons Company, whose main offices at No. 26 Spruce street, New York City. The business now owned as a firm was first established in Reading in 1869, by Winters & Blotz. Mr. Ferdinand Goetz, who was admitted to the firm upon Mr.
Blotz’s retirement, was born in Germany in 1850, and emigrated to America in 1868, first settling in Maryland, and finding employment as a farm laborer. In 1870 he came to Reading, where he continued as a laborer in the building trade. He then entered a position as a reporter on the German Daily Post, owned and published by Mr. William Rosenthal, but finally he became acquainted with the firm of Winters & Blotz. Upon Mr. Blotz’s retirement, Mr. Winters offered Mr. Goetz an equal interest in the business, which the latter subsequently accepted. From the start the business prospered, and he soon became a person of some note in his line of work.

The name Peter* and Stamm is found frequently among the lists of emigrants to America. On the passenger list of the “Hope,” Daniel Reed, master, from Rotterdam, qualified Sept. 23, 1734, is the name of Peter Stamm, aged twenty; on the “Samuel,” Hugh Percy, captain, from Rotterdam, qualified Dec. 3, 1736, is the name of Peter Stamm, aged twenty-five; on the “Francis and Elizabeth,” George North, master, from Rotterdam, qualified Sept. 21, 1742, is the name of Johann Adam Stamm and Werner Stamm; on the “Snow Charlotte,” John Mason, master, from Rotterdam, Sept. 30, 1743, Johannes Stamm; and on the “Union,” Andrew Bryson, captain, from Rotterdam, Sept. 30, 1774, Adam Stamm.

The Stamm family is one of the oldest in Berks county. (1) Werner (or Peter*) and Johann Adam Stamm (or Stamm), brothers, were natives of Switzerland, and emigrated to the New World on the ship “Francis and Elizabeth,” George North, commander, from Rotterdam. It qualified at Philadelphia Sept. 21, 1742, and of the 141 male emigrants who had taken passage many settled in Berks county, their descendants being still found in goodly numbers in the districts where they located. Where Johann Adam Stamm settled, or what became of him, we do not know. The other brother, Werner, was the ancestor of the Stams of Berks county. He was born Nov. 13, 1726, in Bern, Switzerland, and died May 16, 1796. He settled in what is now Bern township, in 1738, amassing a large tract of land in the vicinity of Mount Pleasant, in this county where he lived and died. He and his wife are buried at the old Bern Church. He married May 26, 1748, Catharine, born in 1728, died Nov. 4, 1812. Among his children were two sons named Nicholas and Frederick, the latter the next in the line of descent we are tracing.

(II) Frederick Stamm, son of Werner, the emigrant ancestor, had the following children: John; Frederick; Jacob; Catharine married Abraham Good; Mary m. D. Sun; Magdalena married Maria Michael Brubaker (1812).

(III) John Stamm, son of Frederick, had these children: Benjamin; John; Levi; Henry; William; Lydia m. George Staadt; Maria m. Jonathan Eberling; Catharine m. John Billman; Julian m. Joseph Greth; Cassia m. — Bohn; Eliza died unmarried.

(III) Jacob Stamm, son of Frederick, lived at Orwigsburg, Schuylkill Co., Pa., and his family consisted of two children, Israel and Mary. The latter married a Walborn, of Millersburg, Pa., and later they lived at Orwigsburg.

(IV) William Stamm, son of Frederick and father of Levi S., was born June 20, 1790, in Penn township, and died Oct. 3, 1860. He married Susanna Gerhart, born Dec. 22, 1792, died Sept. 8, 1876, and he and his wife are both interred at the Bern Church. Their children were: Emanuel; Isaac; William; Adam; Jacob; Elias; Levi; Serena m. Nathan Billman; Catharine m. Adam Moyer; Harriet m. William Hetrich; Mary m. Jonathan Spangler. Frederick Stamm, the father of this family, was a farmer by occupation. He was a prominent man in his day, serving as county commissioner from 1822 to 1843.

(II) Jacob Stamm, son of Frederick, lived at Orwigsburg, Schuylkill Co., Pa., and his family consisted of two children, Israel and Mary. The latter married a Walborn, of Millersburg, Pa., and later they lived at Orwigsburg.

(III) William Stamm, son of Frederick and father of Levi S., was born in Penn township Oct. 23, 1815, his birthplace being near Stamm’s Hotel, which is now known as the Pleasant Valley Hotel. In early manhood he learned shoemaking, but he did not follow the trade for long, farming being the principal business of his life. For a period of sixteen years he was engaged in farming in Jefferson township, this county, whence he moved to Penn township, and continuing to carry on agricultural pursuits there until his retirement, in the year 1885. He resides with his daughter, Mrs. Fietta Shade. Though over ninety-three years old he enjoys comparatively good health, and he is a man of genial disposition and pleasant manners, highly honored and universally liked in his community. He has a kind of wise and good sense, and an affectionate and respectful regard for the many who have known him, and he is accorded the utmost consideration wherever he goes—not only the veneration due to his years but the recognition of a life well spent.

Mr. Stamm m. Magdalena Schneider, daughter of William Schneider, whose wife was a Rothenberger. To them were born children as follows: Cassia m. Daniel F. Kling, of Staustadstown, Pa., and lives in Upper Tulpehocken township; William was a member of Company G, 151st P. V. I., and was killed at the battle of Gettysburg; Adam S., a miller, is living in Penn township, near Mt. Pleasant; Alfred, minister at Columbia, this county, through most of his active years, retired in 1906, and now makes his home at Shoemakersville; John is a farmer of Jefferson township; Levi S. is a resident of West Reading; Fietta m. Jacob Shade and resides in Penn township; Franklin, now living at Berwrensville, is a farmer all his active life; Rebecca m. William Longel and resides in Penn township; Allison A., M. D., is engaged in the practice of medicine at Mohnton, Pa.; James, a farmer of Penn township, m. Clara Wenrich. The mother of this family died Sept. 12, 1885, at the age of sixty-six years, and her remains rest in the Mohnton cemetery.
and church enterprises. He is a member of the Reformed denomination, has filled the offices of deacon and elder in his church, and had the honor of taking out the first spadeful of earth removed when the construction of the St. Thomas Union church was commenced, in 1904. In political opinion he is a Democrat, and he took a public-spirited interest in the administration of local affairs, serving as supervisor and school director of Penn township. During his early manhood he belonged to the State militia.

(V) Levi S. Stamm attended the schools of Jefferson township and during his boyhood, and meantime assisting with the farm work at home until ready to commence carpentering. He learned his trade in Tulpehocken township. During the years 1885 and 1886 Mr. Stamm was in Carbon county, Pa., and thence removed to Columbia county, this State, where he lived for about eight years. In 1896 he returned to Berks county, remaining in Reading until his removal to West Reading in 1899. Mr. Stamm has found steady employment at his trade in his present location, being in the employ of a contractor, and bears a reputation for skill and reliability which brings him all the work he can attend to. His character is above reproof, and he merits the respect which he deserves.

In 1870 Mr. Stamm m. Matilda R. Blatt, daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Reigle) Blatt, and to this union have been born the following named children: Robert died in infancy; Rev. James C. is pastor of St. Paul's Reformed Church, in Tamaqua; Clara married Charles H. S. Stamm; Idal married Mr. William D. Baldwin; and Gertrude, the youngest, is with Mr. Stamm in Reading. Mr. Stamm was formerly quite active, having served as deacon during his residence in Bernville. He is a Democrat on political questions.

(VI) Rev. James Calvin Stamm, son of Levi S. Stamm, was born in Bernville in 1879, and was nine years old when the family removed to Birdsboro. Later they moved to Bloomsburg, where he was confirmed in Trinity Reformed Church and graduated from high school with creditable standing. When the family moved to Reading he learned the locksmith's trade at the Penn Hardware Works. But it was his ambition to secure a higher education and engage in professional work, and he accordingly entered the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, where he was given a teacher's certificate at the end of a year's study. He immediately obtained the position of instructor in science and Latin in the Schuylkill Orphan Home, near Reading, where he was principal of the school-room for one year, resigning to become a traveling salesman, in which line he was also successful. He covered the entire South, selling stereoscopes and similar goods, but after almost a year at that work he decided to take up chemistry. However, he changed his mind before he had taken any serious steps in that direction, determining that he would devote his life to the ministry. Entering the Ursinus School of Theology, at Philadelphia, he took the three years' course graduating May 3, 1906. The same year he was made a licentiate in the Reading Reformed Classis. Meantime he had gained experience in the practical duties of a minister of the gospel by serving St. Paul's Church, at Pottstown, as supply, and upon his graduation he was called to become the regular pastor of that congregation. He accepted, was ordained and installed May 27, 1906, and has since been in charge of that pastorate. He gave early evidence that he possessed the requisites of a forceful preacher, and his energy has found many useful outlets in the field in which he is located.

Rev. Mr. Stamm m. in the fall of 1906 Miss Pauline Herbrecht, of Doylestown, Pa., formerly of Philadelphia.

(VII) Adam S. Stamm, son of William, was born on May 22, 1841, in Penn township, and since he was twenty-one years old has conducted the old Stamm mill in Penn township. He has followed farming and milling all his life, and has been very successful in material matters, being a man of thrift and intelligence, energetic and honorable. His business has naturally brought him into contact with most of the residents of his section, and he is held in high esteem by all who know him, being regarded as a straightforward business man and an excellent citizen. Like the members of the Stamm family generally he belongs to the Reformed denomination, being a member of Christ's Little Tulpehocken Church.

Mr. Stamm m. Anna E. Kalbach, who was born Feb. 17, 1843, daughter of Joseph and Anna Elizabeth (Stump) Kalbach, and this marriage has been blessed with nine children: Morris K., Francis and Martha (twins), Isabella R., Ella K. and a son that died in infancy, Edwin A., William J., and Maggie K.

William J. Stamm, son of Adam S., was born July 5, 1873, in Jefferson township. He received his education at the schools of Penn and Upper Tulpehocken townships, attending until he was fourteen years old, since which time he has been engaged at the carpenter's trade, with the exception of three years he worked for his father. He served his apprenticeship with John Moyer, of Bernville, in whose employ he remained for a year and a half as apprentice, until he went to Reading. There he was employed by George F. Foss, contractor and builder, and in 1901 he removed to the borough of West Reading, where he has since lived and labored. These years he worked as a cabinet maker. During his residence in West Reading he has built up a large local patronage in his line, particularly in the execution of fine cabinet work, in which he is especially skilled. There are few mechanics as proficient as Mr. Stamm. He delights in intricate and difficult work, and his ability and sincerity of character and skillful workmanship, and several specimens of his art are worthy of mention. In 1904 he finished a chest 17 by 8½ inches, and 10½ inches deep, which contains 2,384 pieces of wood of seven different varieties; the smallest pieces are diamond shaped, and measure ⅛ by ⅛ inches. Mr. Stamm has also made puzzles of various kinds. He is a master hand at any kind of wood-working. He enjoys the highest standing in his line, and is a prominent member of the Carpenter's Union.

Upon his removal to West Reading Mr. Stamm purchased the brick residence at No. 113 Oohlo street where he and his family have since resided. He m. in 1893 Emma E. Bohn, born Nov. 12, 1870, died Nov. 14, 1900, the mother of five children, viz.: Bertha M., Elsie E., Simon S., William J. and Elizabeth E., of whom Bertha is the only survivor. The others died in childhood, and are laid to rest in the cemetery of Christ's Little Tulpehocken Church, where their mother is also interred.

In 1901 Mr. Stamm m. (second) Lillie M. Webber, born Oct. 8, 1876, daughter of Davilla and Caroline (Strause) Webber, the former of whom is now deceased. One child has been born to this union, Caroline M. Mr. Stamm and his family are members of St. James Reformed Church, in which he at present holds the office of deacon. He is an active worker for the welfare of the church, and has aided faithfully in its upbuilding. In politics he is a member of the Republican party.

CORNELIUS S. STAMM at the time of his death was a well-known resident of Reading. He was born in Bern township, Berks county, March 21, 1828, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Seaman) Stamm.

(I) Werner Stamm, his earliest ancestor in this country, is mentioned above.

(II) Nicholas Stamm, son of Werner, born April 22, 1752, died Oct. 6, 1808. He m. Catharine Lerch, born April 21, 1754, died May 16, 1844. Like his parents, they are buried at the Berks church. Among their children were: Johann Adam, Frederick, Peter, John, Mrs. Benjamin Graeff, Philip, William, Catharine (m. Peter Reinelt, of Reading), Mrs. Caroline Spence, Mrs. Margaret Seaman, Mrs. Barbara Webber.

(III) Benjamin Stamm, youngest son of Nicholas, was born Feb. 21, 1795. He became interested in the stone-mason's trade early in life, and followed it throughout his active career. For several years prior to his death, on Dec. 20, 1873, he lived retired. Mr. Stamm was twice married. By his first wife, whose maiden name was Sea- man, he had four children: (1) William S., chief engineer in the U. S. navy, was on the retired list at the time of his death, June 27, 1909, he married Emily Pax- ton, and had four children, of whom Norman, a resident of Philadelphia, survives. (2) Cornelius S. (3) Mary A. became the wife of James F. Walter, of St. Louis, Mo. (4) Elmira married Samuel Fulton. Benjamin Stamm married (second) a widow, Mrs. Heacock (born Oct. 13, 1814, died April 11, 1897), and three children were born of this marriage, namely: Franklin, Jane (deceased) and Wellington. The family were at one time members of the Republican party, but later became Universalists. Mr. Stamm was a Whig in politics and was on the organization of the Republican party cast his vote in its support. (IV) Cornelius S. Stamm was educated in the schools of Reading. He learned the brick-layer's trade, and followed it for many years, later, however, engaging in contracting, a business he followed for many years. Mr. Stamm was prominently connected with the Masons, belonging to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 162, F. A. M.; and DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, K. T. For many years he also belonged to the I. O. O. F. In his political views he was a stanch Republican, and for several years he was a member of the city council. He died Feb. 21, 1897, at the age of 71. He was a man of large observation, a resident of the city that he had lost an able business man and public spirited and valuable citizen.

On Feb. 13, 1870, in Reading, Mr. Stamm was married, by the Rev. Aaron Leinbach, to Emma M. Rick, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Fisher) Rick; her father born Feb. 28, 1799, and Jan. 18, 1875, died Jan. 1875, his union with her was: William W. B.; and Emily E., born 1876, a teacher in the public schools and an accomplished musician, who died Aug. 24, 1897.

William W. B. STAMP, son of Cornelius S. and Emma M. (Rick) Stamm, was born in Reading April 18, 1874. He attended the public schools and graduated from the high school in 1892. He then took a course in mechanical drawing at Franklin Institute, in Philadelphia, and completed it in 1894. From 1895 to 1897 he studied applied electricity at Drexel Institute, and he is now a thoroughly equipped and practical mechanical draughtsman and machinist, with the E. & G. Brooke Co. at Birdsboro, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stamm is very prominent fraternally. He belongs to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., which he joined in 1901, and was its Worshipful Master in 1908, when the celebration of its sixtieth anniversary was presented at the Grand Lodge in 1909. He is a member of Williamsport Lodge of Perfection, fourteenth degree, and Williamsport Consistory, thirty-second degree, serving as a member of the lodge. Among other Masonic bodies to which he belongs are Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 49, K. T.; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. Mr. Stamm resides with his mother at No. 314 Washington street, Reading.

HON. WILLIAM KERPER STEVENS, Additional Law Judge of Berks county, was born at Reading in 1849. He attended the public schools for several years and after taking a special preparatory course under a private tutor, entered Yale College where he pursued the regular course and was graduated in 1888. Choosing the law as his profession, he entered the office of Isaac Hister, Esq., of Reading, and pursuing the regular course of reading under Mr. Hiestor's direction, was admitted to the Bar Nov. 10, 1884. He immediately engaged in active practice in the office of his preceptor and after carrying it on several years in a successful manner formed a law partnership with Garrett B. Stevens, Esq. (an older attorney, but no relative), and they continued to practise together with increasing success until Sept. 10, 1908, when Mr. Stevens' death terminated the co-operation of additional law judge to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Hon. G. A. Endlich to the office of president judge; then the co-partnership was dissolved and he has been performing the duties of additional law judge until the present time in a most satisfactory manner. The term for which he was appointed by the Governor terminates on the first Monday in January, 1910. At the primary election of June, 1909, he was nominated on the Republican ticket for the office of judge and he was nominated without any opposition, which evidences the superior manner in which he performed his judicial duties.

Immediately after being admitted to the Bar, Judge Stevens identified himself with the Republican party and took much interest in the management of its affairs. In appreciation of his services and ability he was selected as school solicitor for the years 1892, 1893 and 1894, and as city solicitor in 1885. In 1901 he was the nominee on the Republican ticket for Congress from this District. He served as chairman of the county committee for some years and also as a member of the State central committee. He assisted in organizing the Reading National Bank in 1893, the Berks County Trust Company in 1900, and the American Casualty Company in 1903, and served as a director until he became additional law judge, when he resigned. He co-operated earnestly with other gentlemen of Reading in the establishment of the Berkshire Club, and has since taken much interest in their affairs. He is a member of the University Club of Philadelphia, and of the Yale Club of New York.

In 1887 Judge Stevens was married to Mary Deup Davis, daughter of Col. Depuy Davis, and they have a son, Frederick William.

His father was Dr. Sadosa S. Stevens, a prominent and successful druggist at Reading for fifty years. He was born in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, and obtained his education in the subscription schools until he was fifteen years old, when he went to Carlisle and, entering a drug store, became a druggist. He was then engaged for several years until 1849 in a drug store at Philadelphia when he located in Reading and embarked in the drug business, which he carried on in a successful manner until his death in 1900. In the organization of the board of health, he was selected as one of the members and served on the board from 1874 to 1882. He also took much interest in the Reading free library, and the Historical Society of Berks County.

In 1882 Judge Stevens married Eleanor B. Kerper, daughter of Abraham Kerper and Elizabeth Boyer, his wife, of Reading, and they had four children: Frank and Emily (died young); William Kerper; and Bessie Ker- per (m. Rev. William P. Taylor, an Episcopalian clergyman at Morristown, New Jersey).

The first ancestor of Judge Stevens in America was Thomas Stephens, a native of Leicestershire, England, who emigrated from that place to Philadelphia in June, 1777. Two months after his arrival (Aug. 2, 1777), was born his son George, who became a prominent woolen manufacturer of Cumberland county, where his death terminated a life of usefulness. In the War of 1812-15, it was enlisted in the English War of 1812. In 1797, he was married to Margaret Clendenin, and they had two sons: John C. and Thomas Jefferson.

Thomas Jefferson Stevens, grandfather of Judge Stevens, was born in Cumberland county in 1800, and after becoming of age succeeded his father in the woolen business which he carried on for a number of years. He was a man of unusual literary culture, and displayed great fondness for music and painting. He became an intimate friend of the famous scientist and superintendent of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, T. G. Spencer Baird, and through his association with Mr. Baird he acquired a collection of curios. He died in 1884 leaving to survive him his eldest son, Dr. Stevens, who died April 17, 1900.
PHILIP S. ZIEBER, a prominent member of the Berks County Bar, bears a name familiar in the city of Reading, and, indeed, throughout Berks County. His father and grandfather before him having been identified with the manufacturing interests of the city as makers of wool hats. His grandfather Philip Zieber was the pioneer in this industry in Berks county, while Samuel Zieber, father of Philip S., continued the business in New Holland, Lancaster County, the firm he maintained his residence in Reading. Samuel Zieber was born in that city in 1794, and died in 1868. He married Matilda Schmeltzer, daughter of Andrew, a farmer of Bethel township, Berks county, and to them were born three children, of whom Catherine and Emma still reside at home, while Philip S. is the third.

Philip Zieber was born in 1861, in Reading, and was carefully schooled in his native city, graduating from the Reading high school in 1876, as valedictorian of his class. In 1879 he was sent to Lafayette College, at Easton, entering the junior class, where he graduated in June, 1881. Returning to Reading he began reading law in the office of George F. Baer, then one of the leading attorneys of the city, but now president of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and in November, 1884, successfully took the examination for admission to the Bar. Mr. Zieber won his spurs alone, and had established himself firmly when, in 1889, he was made a member of the bank board, then the preceptor, then Baer & Snyder. His acceptance changed the firm name to Baer, Snyder & Zieber, and it remained so until Mr. Baer's election to the presidency of the railway company caused his retirement, when it became Snyder & Zieber. The firm has always employed a large and select practice, serving such important concerns as the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company, the Reading Iron Company, the Farmers National Bank, Penn National Bank, and numerous smaller corporations.

In his private life Mr. Zieber is most exemplary, taking a lively interest in the welfare of the community. He holds membership in the Odd Fellows, is a director in the Penn National Bank and also of the Berkshire Country Club and votes with the Democratic party. In the religious life of the city he is equally helpful and prominent, being a vestryman of the Trinity Lutheran Church, and is identified with its national organization as a member of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Council of the Lutheran Church in America, of which board he was treasurer for a number of years.

It will be seen at a glance that Mr. Zieber bids fair to establish himself in the front rank of his chosen profession.

On Nov. 26, 1889, Mr. Zieber married Miss Annie Gillespie Fry, daughter of Rev. Jacob Fry, D. D., for thirty-five years the beloved and able pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church of Reading, and now occupying the chair of Professor of Modern Languages in the Lutheran Theo-

HISTORICAL OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

John George Rick, son of Herman, was also a farmer, and he became a large landowner and influential citizen of Berks township, where all of his life was spent. He and his wife, Catherine Weiser (a grand-niece of Conrad Rick, Sr.), were members of the German Reformed Church, and in political matters was a staunch Whig.

Charles Rick, son of John George and father of Cyrus, received his education in the early schools of his native township, after leaving which he engaged in a general merchandising business at Centreport and Peacock's Locks. In 1841 he came to Reading, where he was engaged in mercantile business and in real estate operations for a number of years and where he lived retired the remainder of his life. He died in 1878, and his wife, whose maiden name was Ellen Louise Ruth, in 1880, both in the faith of the German Reformed Church. They were the parents of children as follows: (1) Cyrus. (2) John, who died in 1906, was a member of the firm of Rick Brothers. He married Emma Ammon. (3) Charles, a retired citizen of Reading and veteran of the Civil war, was also a member of the firm. He m. Emma Paul. (4) Mary m. Franklin Dundore, of Philadelphia, and had three children, Charles, Frank and Ella. (5) James is mentioned below. (6) Ellen m. William A. Arnold, deceased, and had six children, William, John, Franklin, Anna, Ellen and Mary.

Cyrus Rick was educated in the schools of his native place, and at an early age he entered the Farmers' National Bank, which he has since been associated with in some of the best known in financial circles. On the establishment of the firm of Rick Brothers he was made a member in 1873, and he continued as such until his death, in 1895, in the faith of the Reformed Church.

In 1868 Cyrus Rick m. Emma K. Madeira, daughter of William S. and Rebecca (Shepp) Madeira, and five children were born to this union, four of whom are living: Ella (m. S. K. Spang, and has two children, Emily and Mary), Anna, Mary and Charles.

JAMES RICK, son of Charles and brother of Cyrus, and a prominent business man of Reading, Pa., being at the head of the Rick Knitting Company, was born in Reading in 1844. He was educated in the local schools and served his apprenticeship with one of the large carpenter firms. Later he engaged in pattern-making, and also clerked for the West Reading Iron Company in 1866. In 1867, with his brother John and Franklin Dundore, he engaged in the hardware business under the firm name of Dundore, Rick & Co., at the corner of 3rd and North Broad streets. In 1889 Mr. Dundore withdrew from the firm and sold his interest to Charles Rick, and then the firm changed to Rick Brothers, but the last named did not take an active part. In 1873 one-fourth of the interest was sold to Cyrus Rick, also a brother, as it was the father's wish to have his four sons together in business, but Cyrus never took an active part in the management. In 1904 this property was sold to the Keystone Hardware Company, and leased to the Consolidated Hardware Company. In 1905 Mr. James Rick organized the Rick Knitting Company, and has associated his sons with him in the business. The company was incorporated in 1906, and has one of the successful industries of the city. Directors are: James Rick, Jr., president; Edward Rick, vice-president; James Rick, Jr., secretary and treasurer; and Albert Rick, a member of the board of directors.

Mr. Rick has been twice married. His first wife, Ellen Trate, died in 1881. In 1883 he m. (second) Julia G. O'Hara, and they have had six children, namely: Helen (deceased), James, Jr., Edward, Albert, Thomas and William. Mr. Rick and family are members of Calvary Reformed Church, in which he is a deacon. He has always taken an active part in civic affairs, and from 1888 to 1893 served as a member of the board of water commissioners, where he is a member of several business and social clubs of Reading, besides having been a member of the Wyoming, Berkshire and Maiden Creek Fishing Clubs (of which latter he was one of the organizers and has been president).
CHARLES L. MOLL, who was the competent and faithful city comptroller of Reading, Pa., is descended from German ancestry, who came to America several generations ago, his grandfather, George Moll, having been born in this country.

Alfred Moll, father of Charles L., was born in Maiden-creek township, Berks county, raised at Strausstown, same county, followed milling, and later engaged in farming. He married Emma E. Boltz, daughter of Isaac M. Boltz. He served with the famous 151st P. V. I., and was slightly wounded at Gettysburg. Two sons were born to Mr. Moll: Lehman, who has charge of the stock of the Hooven Mercantile Company, wholesale grocers; and Charles L.

Charles L. Moll was born at Straustown, Berks county, April 3, 1866, and was educated at the Bernville high school and at the Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which latter institution he was graduated in 1884. He taught school for six years in Berks county, and later engaged in the grocery business, continuing therein in Reading for eleven years. In 1899 he was elected city comptroller for a term of three years, and was re-elected in February, 1902, his second term being readily and heartily accorded him. He had in the meantime discharged the responsible duties of the office. He was again re-elected in 1905 for another term of three years, and continued in office to the end of his term, when in 1908 he became the secretary and treasurer of the Mt. Laurel Bag Company, which position he still holds.

He married Elizabeth Sembower, daughter of Henry Sembower, Reading, on Dec. 10, 1886, to Catherine Obold, the daughter of Elias Obold, a retired merchant and justice of the peace of Mount Pleasant, Berks county. Six children were born to this union: Alfred, with the Mt. Laurel Spring Water Company; Abner, with the City Laundry Company; Lloyd, a graduate of the Reading high school, 1909, now assistant shipper for the Barbey Brewing Company; Herbert, with Orr & Sembower, learning the machinist's trade; and Florence and Russell, at school. Mr. Moll belongs to the Order of Elks as well as a number of other secret organizations. Politically he is a Democrat, but he is very popular with men of all parties. He is a member of St. Stephen's Reformed Church.

ADAM M. ROLLMAN, formerly postmaster at Shillington, and now living retired, was born in Cumru township, Berks County, Oct. 7, 1841, son of Henry and Elizabeth Sembower Rollman.

The family has long been resident in Cumru township. William Rollman, grandfather of Adam M., was a farmer and landowner in that section, and his farm descended to his son Henry. He married a Miss Elizabeth Spohn, and they had five children, viz.: Joshua, a farmer and butcher near the "Five Mile House" m. to Miss Amelia Mengel; Henry; William and Sallie, who both died unmarried; and Molly, m. to William Matz, of Reading.

Henry Rollman, born Jan. 21, 1819, was a farmer for the better part of his life. Until 1851 he operated his father's farm of ninety-six acres near Sinking Spring, but later years he sold the place and bought instead the Schwartz farm, of 300 acres, on Mt. Penn. There he remained till 1872 when he sold this second farm also, and moving to Reading, opened a shoe store. He conducted this a number of years, but finally retired not long before his death, Sept. 5, 1890, when he was aged seventy-one years, seven months and twelve days, and he was buried at Sinking Spring Union Church. Mr. Rollman married twice. On July 11, 1840, he m. Elizabeth Sharp Matz, who died April 22, 1855, aged thirty-eight years, one month and twenty-eight days, and was buried at Sinking Spring Church. The only child of this marriage was Adam M. On Oct. 28, 1856, Mr. Rollman m. (second) Marguerite, daughter of John and Elizabeth Swartz. The issue of this second union was two daughters, viz.: Elizabeth, m. to Albert Schuck, of Hyde Park, Pa.; and Mary, m. to Martin Leiminger, of Reading. Mr. Rollman and his family were Lutherans in their religious faith, members of the Sinking Spring Church.

Adam M. Rollman grew up at home, familiar with the routine of farm life, but he was sent to school for a generous portion of the time, attending first the township schools and then a private one in Reading. At the age of twenty-five he took up butchering, and has held the same profession all of his life since. He learned his trade from his uncle Joshua Rollman, under whom he worked a year, and then until 1871, did butchering among the farmers. The next two years he was associated with John Yerg, of Reading, and then from 1873 till 1877 he worked for Henry Hoover, of that city. When he left Mr. Hoover he was with a commission-grocery house for himself, and he selected Shillington as his location, opening a butcher shop there in 1877, which he conducted with most satisfactory results till his retirement in 1901. This, however, was not his only interest, for his wife had previous to her marriage carried on a news and stores business, of which after 1884 her husband assumed a joint management. The preceding year they had built a home on Lancaster avenue and planned it with reference to continuing and enlarging this business at this new location. The enterprise proved increasingly profitable, and was maintained till 1904.

Mr. Rollman also combined with his other duties that of postmaster for Shillington from 1884 till 1894. He was the first incumbent, as the office was established at that time. The village had been called Shillingsville, after the Shillings residing there, but on establishing the office there the postal department asked Mrs. Rollman to suggest a name for the station. As there were so many "villes" in that section already, she proposed the present form, Shilling- ton, and it was at once adopted. Mr. Rollman has always been a strong Republican and his appointment was made by that party. On Sept. 1, 1908, he was elected first chief bargus of Shillington, and declined a renomination, as he felt he had had honor enough.

On April 26, 1877, Adam Rollman was married to Mary, daughter of Henry W. and Elizabeth (Penny-packer) Deeds. The other children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Deeds, were: Angeline, m. to Richard Schnader; Elizabeth, m. to John W. H鲜花x and Henry. The paternal grandparents, Henry and Mary (Warner) Deeds, were the parents of five daughters besides the only son, Henry W., viz.: Susan, Mary, Leah, Harriet and Nellie. Mrs. Rollman is a lady of decided intelligence and has an unusually good memory. From 1867 till 1874 she served as a teacher in the township, but in July of the latter year she definitely a- bandoned that profession and opened the store in Shillington referred to above. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rollman are Lutherans, and members of the Sinking Spring Union Church.

In person Mr. Rollman is tall and well-built and of considerable physical power. A good business man, practical and energetic, he has accumulated a good property, and is now able to live comfortably free from all cares and responsibilities.

EDWARD J. MORRIS gave efficient service as prothonotary of Berks county, elected in 1903 for a term of three years.

John Morris, Sr., grandfather of Edward J., lived in Illinois where he reared a considerable family.

John Morris, son of John, Sr., became the father of Edward J. He came to America in October, 1859, and stopped for a year in New York, then settled in Reading, Pa., where he has since lived. He is at present the tipstaff of Judge Bland's court. After coming to this country he married Catherine, daughter of Charles Ropp, a brewer, and of the five children born to this marriage are now deceased: Rose and John; those living are, Sallie C., a school teacher in Reading; Joseph F., wholesale grocer; and Edward J.

Edward J. Morris was born Nov. 2, 1864, in Reading. He passed through the public schools of the city, and at an early age began his business life as a clerk in a grocery store. He continued in this line for nearly ten years, when he embarked in the grocery business on his own account. Mr. Morris is still interested in the business. He was elected promotorly in November, 1893. He leads a very busy life, being connected with a number of the fraternal organizations of the city, and also is closely identified with local and State politics. He is a member of the B. P. O. Elks, Fraternal Order of Eagles, Knights of Columbus, Total Abstinence Society, and Knights of St. John. He has also taken great interest in Building and Loan Associations, and has acted as secretary of many of them in the past few years. Mr. Morris is at present State financial secretary of the Retail Merchants Association of Pennsylvania; a director of the Retailers Mutual Fire Insurance Company, secretary and treasurer of the Pasteurized Milk and Cream Company of Reading; and president of the Reading Wholesale Grocery Company.

In the political field Mr. Morris is a valued worker in the Democratic organizations. He has been a delegate to many important conventions of the party, notably that of the national organization at St. Louis in 1892, and is at present the Second ward member of the Democratic county central committee. He made a losing fight for the Legislature in his district in 1896, not being able to overcome the large Republican majority normally given.

The church affiliation of Mr. Morris is at St. Peter's Catholic church, and he is quite active in the different charitable institutions connected therewith. He has won a very large measure of the esteem of the general public.

ROMANUS ESTERLY, one of Reading's successful business men, and one of the proprietors of the Reading Biscuit Company, manufacturers of cakes, crackers and biscuits, located at No. 120 South Third street, was born in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Henry Esterly, and grandson of John and Mary (Clark) Esterly. John Esterly, who was a farmer and blacksmith of Exeter township, died when eighty-three years of age, and his wife at the age of eighty-two years.

Henry Esterly attended the public schools of Exeter township, receiving a fair education and early interest in agriculture, by which he was induced to own a fine farm of 110 acres. He continued to operate in that township until 1903, in which year he removed to Mt. Penn, where he has since resided, retired from active business life. For one and one-half years, Mr. Esterly kept the old "Washington House" in Exeter township, conducting it under the name of the "Gechter's Hotel." He is known as an honest, upright citizen, and has the respect and esteem of all with whom he has come into contact. Mr. Esterly married Sarah, daughter of Peter and Mary (Herbin) Snyder, of Oley Valley, Berks county. The children born to this union were: John, of Mt. Penn; Harry S.; Romanus; Alice, m. to Howard Body; George, m. to Catherine Keener, of Reading; and Sallie, m. to Harvey Dunn. Henry Esterly is a Democrat in politics, and for ten years was a school director in Exeter township. He is now serving as inspector of health of Mt. Penn, and as member of town council.

Romanus Esterly received his primary education in the public schools of Exeter township, which he supplemented with a course at Stoner's Business College, and subsequently attended Kutztown State Normal school. In 1888 and 1889, the next year taught schools in his native township, and was then employed as a salesman with F. S. Wertz & Co. bakers, with whom he remained until they sold out to the National Biscuit Company. Mr. Esterly remained with the latter firm until this branch of the business was closed. In April, 1903, Mr. Esterly, with his brother, H. S., formed a partnership, and since that time they have engaged successfully in the baking of cakes, crackers and biscuits under the firm name of the Reading Biscuit Company. They have a fine large four-story building at No. 120 Third street, 60x120, well equipped with all the latest machinery and improvements, employing forty-five skilled workmen. The firm works an average of 126 barrels of flour weekly, and besides enjoying a good, steady local trade, ships the product throughout the surrounding country.

Mr. Romanus Esterly married Miss Sallie Brown, daughter of Charles and Sarah (Levan) Brown, and five children have been born to this union: Mabel, Sarah, Paul, Charles and Frances. In politics Mr. Esterly is a Democrat. He is connected with St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, serving as a deacon and as a teacher in the Sunday-school, and is a member of the Christian Endeavor. Mr. and Mrs. Esterly and their children make their home at No. 721 North Fourth street. Mr. Esterly has made a successful career in business, and his success is due to his native ability, his determination to succeed and his straightforward manner of doing business. He and his wife are highly esteemed in the community in which he has proved himself to be such a useful and public-spirited citizen. Mr. Esterly is a Mason, being connected with the Isaac Hiester Blue Lodge, No. 660.

ADDAMS, On Dec. 22, 1881, by deed recorded in Philadelphia, William Penn granted to Robert Adams, of Ledwell, in Oxfordshire, England, five hundred acres of land, to be surveyed and located in the Province of Pennsylvania. Immediately thereafter, Robert Adams came to America and settled in Oxford township, Philadelphia county (now city), where he died in 1719. From him in direct line Sarah B. (Addams) Zimmerman, of Perry township, Berks county, was descended.

Her great-grandfather, William Addams, settled in Cocalico township, Lancaster county, early in the eighteenth century, and in 1761 laid out the town which is now the borough of Adamstown. He married Anna Lane, of Oxford, England. They had two children, Isaac, Abraham, Samuel, Richard and William, and one daughter. Two of these sons: William and Isaac, removed to Berks county and settled in Heidelberg, now Spring, township. William married Barbara Ruth, and after his death, his brother Isaac married the widows of these sons, William, Isaac, Samuel, John, Peter and Abraham.

Isaac Addams, the elder, grandfather of Mrs. Zimmerman, was born at Adamstown in 1747, and died at Reading in April, 1899. He was a farmer, then a leading merchant and citizen of Reading. In 1778 he was captain of a company of light infantry belonging to Colonel Peter Grubb's Battalion of Associates in Lancaster county. He was a county commissioner and member of the Assembly from Berks county.

His eldest son William (1777-1858) and wife Eve Vining (1778-1865), settled on the Cacossing creek, Berks county, at the Addams mill. They had these children: Kittie, m. to Rufus Davenport; Richard; Rebecca; Josiah; and Amelia, m. to John H. Van Reed. He afterward m. Catherine Huey Van Reed, widow of John Van Reed, and had three children: William; Henry, m. to Maria H. Vining. Henry C. Addams was a leading citizen of his day, and served as county auditor, county commissioner, member of the Assembly, was twice a Presidental elector, a member of Congress two terms, and was associate judge of Berks county 1809-1842.

Isaac Addams, the younger (1779-1844), married Catherine Eckert, and settled at Leesport, Berks county. Their children were: Isaac; Sarah, m. to Michael Haak; Eliza, m. to Charles Kessler; Catharine, m. to...
Dr. Charles Zoller; John E.; Reuben E.; and Annie, m. to John Rankin.

Samuel Addams (1782-1854) married Catharine Huey, at Sinking Spring, and they had these children: Charles H.; Rebecca, m. to Richard Adams; Mary, m. to John Van Reed; Elizabeth; Harriet, m. to Nathan Young; Jane, m. to Edwin Mull; Isaac; Lydia, m. to Rev. Daniel B. Albright; James H.; and John P. He was a member of the Republican party in that State. He was for six months a State senator and declined the governorship. He was the father of Jane Addams, the head resident of Hull House, Chicago, and well-known writer and lecturer.

Edward B. Addams was born May 18, 1778, in the town of Millerstown, Juniata county, where he settled and died in 1849. He had two daughters: Ann Eliza m. Jacob Beaver, and their son, Gen. James Addams Beaver, was a brigadier general of volunteers during the Civil war, and served as governor of Pennsylvania from 1867 to 1869, and since 1869 has been a judge of the Superior court; and Lydia m. Capt. Thomas McAllister, of Virginia, who in the Civil war was captain of a company forming part of the "Stonewall Brigade" under command of Gen. Stonewall Jackson. The latter, who was the latter, was president of Hampden-Sidney College (Virginia).

General John Addams (1780-1832) was long prominent in politics and for about twenty years held local office in Reading. In 1814-15 he commanded the Second Brigade of Pennsylvania Militia, one of the two bodies formed by the State, which was sent out during the winter of 1814-15, to check the threatened British advance from Washington. He died unmarried.

Peter Addams, the father of Sarah B. Zimmerman, was born at Adamstown, Lancaster county, May 31, 1754, and was married to his parents to Quebec town-ship, Berks county, in early life. On Oct. 29, 1811, he married Susan Eckert, daughter of John and Barbara (Gernant) Eckert. He resided at Morgantown, Berks county, Lewis town, Mifflin county and for the greater part of his life in Berks and Centre townships, Berks county near Leesport. He was a farmer and Miller. Originally a Jacksonian Democrat, he became an ardent follower of Henry Clay. In 1825 he was a Presidential elector for Andrew Jackson, and in 1828 was the Whig candidate for Congress, but was defeated. He was a Democrat, and in 1833 was elected to the United States Senate. The children of these: Sarah B.; Annie E., who died in July, 1891; Adeline, who died in May, 1839; and the late Rev. George Eckert, who died at Reading in June, 1862. Peter Addams died Jan. 20, 1852, and his wife Aug. 8, 1844.

Sarah Barbara Zimmerman, eldest daughter of Peter Addams, was born on her father's farm, one mile west of Leesport, in Bern township, Berks Co., Pa., Oct. 8, 1813. About the year 1836 she came with the family to the large farm near Dauberville, in Bern (now Centre) township. After the death of her parents, she, her sister Annie and brother George, continued on the farm until March, 1857, when she became the wife of Seth Zimmerman, and removed with her husband and sister Annie to her late home in Mohrsville, Berks county. Mrs. Zimmerman was a native of Columbia county, and for fifty years was agent at the Reading railroad station. Mohrsville. He died in September, 1888, and his wife died Feb. 7, 1907, in her ninety-fourth year. They had no children.

BERTRAND H. FARR, of Farr's Music House, No. 809 Penn street, Reading, is a member of a very old family in America, the early New World home being in England. It was first established for over one hundred years, having come over from England in the early part of the Puritan movement. Abraham Farr died at Stowe in 1689.

Abraham Farr, the second of the name of whom we have definite record, was a resident of Stowe, Mass. He married Rachel Fasket, and they became the parents of a son, Abraham.

Abraham Farr, son of Abraham and Rachel, was born in Stowe, March 23, 1761. He moved to Chesterfield, N. H., and there died April 29, 1840. He married Polly Harris, who died in her husband's lifetime, and who had been lying in a sickening wheel. Their children were: Rufus, born March 23, 1783, died May 7, 1858; Amy, born June 15, 1785, m. a Mr. Miller, and died in Vermont; Jerusha, born Dec. 7, 1787, m. a Mr. Miller of Putney, Vt.; Polly, born July 7, 1790, m. Ezra Pierce, of South Windham, Vt., and died Oct. 13, 1856; Clarissa, born Jan. 11, 1792, died Jan. 11, 1792; and Polly, born May 11, 1839; Sally, born Aug. 8, 1796, m. Eli Hitchcock; Ira, born Dec. 1, 1797, m. Flónica Stowell, and died March 6, 1870.

Rufus Farr, son of Abraham, was born March 23, 1783, in Chesterfield, N. H., and died at Windham, Vt., May 7, 1856. On Oct. 21, 1810, he married Susan Stone, who was born Nov. 21, 1789, in Groton, Mass., daughter of Asa and Polly Stone, and died at Rochester, Wis., Nov. 16, 1872. To Rufus and Susan Farr were born children as follows: Lurency, born Nov. 11, 1811; Ell, born July 15, 1814, died Oct. 8, 1890; Aurlia, born April 11, 1817; Philesta, born June 9, 1820, died aged 8 years; Sarah E., born Jan. 16, 1823; Merritt H., born April 16, 1827; and Orlando.

Orlando Farr was born on Dec. 9, 1832, at Windham, Vt., at the homestead where his father settled on the Glebe Mountain, succeeding him in the business of sheep raising, and maple sugaring. He farmed as early as 1838 he went to Illinois, and located at Shannon, where he was engaged in the grain and lumber business until 1787, when he moved to Kamrar, Iowa, where he is the owner of a large amount of land and is now living retired. He married Pauline C. Holton, a native of North Walscot, Vt., and they had a family of seven children: Frank D.; Bertha; Hilda; Nellie; Stella died in Iowa in 1903; Florence and Leslie died young; and Edward M. is in Iowa with his father.

Bertrand H. Farr was born Oct. 14, 1883, at Wind- ham, Vt., and was six years old when he accompanied his parents to Illinois. He attended the public schools in that State, and at Webster City, Iowa. At the age of seventeen he began teaching school, and followed that calling three years. In the fall of 1883 he went to Boston, and entered the New England Conservatory of Music, studying piano and vocal music and also the tuning of pianos. Returning to Webster City, he spent the next three years in that business, and then left with the intention of finishing his education at Boston, but upon his arrival at the "Hub," he received a flattering offer to go to Philadelphia, to a Chestnut street music house. This offer he accepted, and he remained in Philadelphia five years, at the end of that time coming to Reading (1881) as a piano tuner. He had his office in the store of C. W. Edwards for fourteen years. He opened a store in Lancaster, in 1900, in the new Y. M. C. A. building, and later sold this to the Weaver Organ Company. In 1904 he formed a partnership with H. E. Gerhardt, in Reading, and under the firm name of Farr & Gerhardt, did an extensive business in pianos, organs, talking machines, musical merchandise, etc. In March, 1909, Mr. Farr purchased Mr. Gerhardt's interest in the firm, and is now carrying on the business alone.

Mr. Farr is active in the ranks of the Republican party and is very well known. He was one of those instrumental in organizing the borough of Wyomissing, and in September, 1906, he was elected its first chief burgess, and shortly after his term of office expired he was appointed a member of Council to fill a vacancy in that body. He built the first house in the borough. In his music business he has devoted considerable time to floriculture making a specialty of hardy plants, such as irises, peonies, phloxes, devoting about fifteen acres to his nursery, and he issued his first catalogue in 1808. It is said to be the most complete catalogue of peonies and irises ever published in this country. He was elected president of the American Peony Society, at the last meeting, at Queencity.

Mr. Farr married Annie Willis, of Farmington, a member of a very old New England family.

JEROME LUDWIG BOYER, who has been prominently identified with the great iron interests of Reading and vicinity for many years, and has gained the reputation of being one of the most prominent directors of these immense industries, is a descendant of one of the oldest and most honored families of Berks county.

He was born at Boyertown, Berks Co., Pa., Jan. 19, 1843, son of Jacob K. Boyer, a distinguished citizen of the Keystone State.

The Boyer family is of French Huguenot extraction and was founded in America by Jacob DeBeyer, the great-grandfather of Jerome Ludwig. He settled in Berks county and there became a man of substance and standing and lived to the unusual age of 108 years. His remains lie in the cemetery at Amityville, one of the oldest graves in that sacred spot.

Henry Boyer, father of Jacob K., was born in 1769 and was a pioneer settler at Boyertown, giving his name to the hamlet, in which he built the first log house and opened the first blacksmith shop. Here he followed blacksmithing for some years, and he took a prominent part in public affairs. In 1824 he was nominated by the Democratic party as their candidate for representative, and was elected, being re-elected in 1827 and 1828. He died at Boyertown, the age of ninety-eight years, and was buried at that place.

He married Catharine Krebs, of Montgomery county. He died at the age of eighty-four years, and they became the parents of a large family.

Jerome Ludwig, who was largely interested in that institution, and was one of the board of directors.

Mr. Boyer is served as adviser of the Home for Widows and Single Women, and during the years 1891 and 1892 he served as president of the board of this institution. He is prominently connected with fraternal organizations, being a member of Chandler Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 227; Reading Chapter, Commandery, No. 49; Philadelphia Consistory; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. In religion Mr. Boyer is connected with Trinity Lutheran Church, and for a period of thirty-seven years has been an official member thereof.

On Oct. 20, 1866, Mr. Boyer married Miss Susan E. McHose, daughter of Isaac McHose, of Reading, and two children have been born to this union: William McHose, chemist for the Reading Iron Company, is the father of one child; Frederick Jacob is a machinist and resides at home.

In 1892 Mr. Boyer was president of the Board of Trade of Reading, and during his incumbency the membership grew from seventy to three hundred. We here give his address, delivered at the banquet held at Neversink Mountain Hotel, Sept. 29th, of that year:

"Gentlemen: Our last banquet, held April 21st at Mineral Springs was a success. The two preceding banquets were eighteen and twenty; to-night we have one hundred and thirty. At the April Banquet we had with us Hon. Erastus Wiman, and I trust none of us has forgotten his grand speech. To-night we have with us Gen. Gregg, without whom the State government could not get along; so we have for the present, loaned him to us, and we hope to have him back to Reading at some future time. We have also present Col. Brown, the inventor of the Segmental Wire Gun, and his very able co-laborer, Lieut. Whistler, from whom we expect to hear.

The Board of Trade was organized April 21, 1881. Its first president, J. H. Sternbergh, Esq., is with us; as are Isaac McHose, Peter D. Wanner and S. E. Ancona, the succeeding and all the presidents. During the first year of its organization the Board had 149 members. It subsequently commenced growing back ward, and in April, 1911, its membership was seventy. Jan. 1, 1892, we had 110 members; at this date we have 216; and on Jan. 1, 1903, we will have 300.

"This Board of Trade represents a city of 70,000 people. We have reason to feel a pardonable pride in our city, its population and its Board of Trade. We are justly proud of the industries that sustain and in return are sustained by; and if we have any individual amongst us who would make invidious and disrespectful comparisons with other cities, may such an one's flesh be mortified and his vanity seared, for we are in such a prosperous condition, as I will endeavor to show you, that none dare to molest us or make us afraid; and I can conceive only the perfidy of man to lower the estimate of our city.

"Think of it! We manufacture stockings amounting to $500,000 per annum. A few years ago some other cities were making this hosiery, and all we had in the matter was buying and wearing them, whilst some of us went about sockless. So we now have boots and shoes. Our city produces $150,000 worth. The stove industry is growing fast.—the present capacity is $650,000. Cotton and silk industries, $1,725,000. An industry in our city, of which many of us know nothing and hear very little, is our sock, good, durable, and cheap. Cotton, wool, and flax. Hardware, locks, iron pipe and machinery, $4,000,000. Iron bridge work, beams and steel, $4,000,000. Bolts, nuts, rivets, etc., $1,000,000.
HENRY R. NICKS, A. M., an educator of note in this section of Pennsylvania, where he is particularly well remembered in his association with the early days of the now famous Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, Berks county, was born Feb. 23, 1818, for his birthplace, and education.

Melchior Nicks, his father, was born in Germany in 1795, and came to America in 1842. For a short time he resided in Baltimore, Md., and then settled on a farm at Redland, Adams Co., Pa., near Littlestown. He married Margaret Rosenberger, and they had children: Henry R., Mary Margaret, Lizzie (a teacher at Littlestown, Pa.), and Magdalena (who died young).

Melchior Nicks lived to be ninety years of age, and during the last twenty years of his life was blind. He understood the profession of veterinary well, and his services were often solicited by his neighbors. Mr. Nicks was possessed of wonderful psychic powers, and, although blind, could tell by touch the ailment from which an animal was suffering. He was also a gifted mathematician, and in his blindness was able to make all kinds of difficult calculations. For instance, he could tell by mental calculation, at any time of the day, his own age in minutes and seconds, or that of any friend who would give him the date of birth and the hour of the day. His powers were very remarkable.

Henry R. Nicks came to America with his father in 1842. He worked on his father's farm in Adams county, attending school whenever opportunity offered, and teaching in his early manhood. In 1856, after strenuous endeavor, he was able to enter the junior class at Franklin and Marshall College, and graduated in 1858, with honors, being the salutatorian of his class.

After graduating from college he continued to teach, filling important stations at Limestoneville and Mechanicsburg. Having the ministry in view he had commenced a course of theological study at Mercersburg, when he was called, through Rev. Dr. E. V. Gerhart, to come to Kutztown and open a classical school. On Nov. 15, 1860, he located at Kutztown and opened what was known for a number of years as Fairview Seminary, in what is the beautiful mansion of Thomas S. Fister, late banker of the borough. Here he began with five pupils, and for a period of months it was a severe struggle, and a problem as to the success of the venture, but hard work, sound scholarship and superior teaching ability enabled him, by the end of 1861, to have been placed in a flourishing condition and continuing until pupils overcrowded the school quarters and the town became filled with boarding students. The success was phenomenal. And by 1863 Professor Nicks began to look around for permanent quarters, and through his efforts a sufficient amount was subscribed to erect what was known as Maxatawny Seminary, which was the Principal's office of the Keystone State Normal School is now located. These schools were the beginning of the Keystone State Normal School, and Professor Nicks was the real founder. He held a position in the institution for seven years, and during his incumbency the institution was in a very flourishing condition. Failing health, however, compelled him to resign in 1874, and thus ended his career as a teacher. The remaining days of his life he spent on the farm, known as the old David Levan farm, where he died Oct. 16, 1903, and he lies buried in Hope cemetery. He was an educator of rare ability, uniriting, and, withal, tactful. He had few equals in the work of inspiring pupils with noble zeal and lofty ambition, and many there are who rise and hold his name.

Professor Nicks married Sarah Levan, daughter of David and Lydia (Jarrett) Levan. David Levan was a son of John Levan, who was the grandson of Jacob Levan, the immigrant, and one of the most prominent early citizens of this section of the country. The Levan family are descents of the famous Rev. John G. Treichler, a well-known farmer and business man of Kutztown; Sarah m. Henry R. Nicks; Alvin m. Anna Weidner, and died at Kutztown in 1888. Professor Nicks and wife had three children, namely: Annie, m. to Nicholas Rahn; Mame, m. to Dr. Oscar W. Sellers, of Philadelphia; and David Levan.

DAVID LEVAN NICKS, an expert civil engineer at Kutztown, was born April 8, 1869, at Myerstown, Pa., and was educated at the Keystone State Normal School and at Lafayette College, from which he graduated in 1898. During the year 1897-1898 he was employed by the Pennsylvania Schuylkill Valley Railroad Company, and from 1902 to 1904 by the Lehigh Engineering Company, Allentown, Pa. For one year he was also in the employ of the United States Bureau of Engineers. He has been in the employ of the city of Reading, one of the resident engineers in the department of public improvements.

On Oct. 23, 1900, Mr. Nicks married Annie E. Stoudt, daughter of Asa and Catherine (Emore) Stoudt, and they have one child, Jarrett Levan, born Oct. 15, 1901.
GEORGE F. HAGENMAN, a leading member of the Berks county Bar, and a most public-spirited and progressive citizen of Reading, was born March 9, 1857, and died one of the victims of the wreck of the special train bearing the members of Mt. Olive Temple Lodge No. 11, Philadelphia, on May 11, 1907.

Judge Jeremiah Hagenman, father of the late George F., was born in Phoenixville, Pa., Feb. 6, 1820, son of Jeremiah F. and Mary H. (Idler) Hagenman, who came to this country from Wurttemberg, Germany, in 1816, shortly after their marriage. The family lived in a one-room cottage in the Phoenix Iron Works for a number of years, the father winning their support by his work as a nail packer in the neighboring nail works. They moved to Reading in 1836, and there the father, Jeremiah F., died in 1856. He was a Democrat in politics, and a Lutheran in religion. His son H. Idler lived to the advanced age of ninety-three years. Their three children were: Lewis; Jeremiah; and Mary (Craig).

Judge Hagenman procured his preparatory education in the schools of his native town, and when old enough began to assist his father in the nail works. But the course of his life was altered by an accident. He was out with a number of companions for the purpose of gathering hickory nuts; they came to a tall tree and this it was decided young Hagenman should climb and then shake off the nuts. In some way the limb was split, and when the branch was broken, although the fracture was set and did not seem severe, the bandages were left on too long, and amputation became necessary. Now, unfit for manual labor, he determined to enter the legal profession. He continued his studies until old enough to teach, in the meantime assisting his father packing nails. In June, 1836, at Phoenixville, he began teaching, and at the end of three months removed to Reading, where he was also engaged in teaching, and at the same time pursued some of the higher branches of study until he was nineteen years of age. He then began the study of law under the direction of the Hon. Peter Filbert, teaching occasionally, and he was admitted to the Bar April 7, 1842. In the following autumn he opened an office in Reading, and entered upon a successful general practice, which he conducted successfully for seventeen years. At the end of that time he entered the National Bank for a term of ten years. In 1875 he was elected president judge, and in 1879 re-elected.

Soon after his admission to the Bar Judge Hagenman began to be actively interested in politics, and until his elevation to the Bench was very prominently identified with the Democratic party. He belonged to a number of State conventions, and was a member of the convention that nominated Horatio Seymour for President in 1868. He was the first incumbent of the office of district attorney elected in 1850, and at the end of three years was re-elected. He was elevated to the Bench as stated above, and his duties there terminated in 1890. His career on the Bench was an honorable one, and rarely, indeed, were any of his decisions reversed in higher courts, though some of the cases tried before him were of the most notable in the history of the country. Among these may be mentioned the Hunsecker case, brought over from Schuylkill county. This trial continued for thirteen weeks, and in the course of the argument one of the attorneys cited the opinion of Judge Woodward, which was in opposition to that of Judge Hagenman. The latter located the decisive character by replying: "I am responsible for my opinion; Judge Woodward for his."

Judge Hagenman was for forty years interested in the public schools of Reading. About 1846 he became a director in the Southeast ward, serving several years. He was elected to represent the same ward (afterward the Third and then the Fourth) on the school board and was afterward re-elected each term until 1883, when he declined. For twenty years he was chairman of the high school committee, and he advocated better buildings and more modern heating appliances. In recognition of his valuable services the Board named the Reading Free Public Library Association after him. He served the county commissioners as solicitor for a number of years, and about 1866 he was instrumental in having them to allow half of court fines to be appropriated toward establishing a law library for the Bench and Bar in the court house. This was done in 1879, and the Library Association was incorporated, which now has a valuable library.

In 1889 Judge Hagenman was elected president of the Keystone National Bank, and he held that position until his death March 26, 1904. He belonged to the Odd Fellows, being affiliated with Salome Lodge, No. 105, I. O. G. I., and was a member of the Council of Grace Lutheran Church. In 1850 Judge Hagenman was married to Louisa E. Boyer, daughter of George Boyer, who was a member of Trinity Lutheran Congregation, and who took an active part in the erection of the church building in 1851. To this marriage were born: son, George F.; and one daughter, Mrs. Hagenman was born one son, George F.

George F. Hagenman was educated in the Reading high school, and then took a three years' private course, his mother's delicate health making him unwilling to leave her the length of time required for a collegiate education. After winning his education he was strongly urged to consider for others that characterized his entire life, and endeared him to all who came in contact with him. After completing his literary studies, he pursued a law course, reading under the direction of the late Henry C. G. Reber, of Reading, and he was admitted to the Bar of Berks county Jan. 29, 1857, and later to the Supreme, Superior and United States District Courts. He practised alone until 1889, when he formed a partnership with his father under the name of J. Hagenman & Son and this was terminated only with the death of the senior member. Father and son showed a marked resemblance in disposition and tastes. Both were sternly just, yet their mercy tempered justice—both loved their profession, yet in their love never lost sight of its mission, and never through legal technicalities were blinded to the welfare of the community.

Like his father Mr. George F. Hagenman was a Democrat, and was active in party work. He was elected county solicitor a number of terms, and acquitted himself with honor. For seven years he was a member of the school board, taking a deep interest in the cause of education. For a number of years he was a director in the Reading Free Library.

Mr. Hagenman had long taken an active part in Masonry, in which he had attained the Thirty-second degree. He belonged to Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., Reading; was past high priest of Chapter No. 152, Royal Arch Masons; was past commander of De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; and a member of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. He was also affiliated with the Odd Fellows.

DR. PHILIP M. ZIEGLER died at his home No. 524 Franklin street, Reading, Nov. 23, 1907, after a long life devoted to ministering to the sufferings of mankind. He was born near Annville, Lebanon county, Jan. 11, 1834, a representative of the fourth generation of the family in America, his great-grandfather, Philip Ziegler, having come to this country from Switzerland in 1793 and located in Berks county.

Dr. Ziegler's parents were Henry and Catharine Ziegler, moved from Lebanon county to Lower Mastersonville, Lancaster county, when the Doctor was but a boy. He attended Mt. Joy Academy and Lititz Academy. Returning then to Mt. Joy he read medicine under Dr. J. L. Ziegler, and after a course at the Pennsylvania College School, graduated from that institution in 1859. He located for practice in Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and won a high place in the estimation of the people.

The Civil war broke out, and he became an assistant surgeon of the 9th V. I., and in that capacity served until the close of the war. When declared, acting under the advice of the regimental surgeon, Dr. Kerr, he applied for a commission as surgeon in the regular army, but while this was pending, he purchased the drug store of Dr. J. Heyl Raser, at No. 2, Penn street, Reading, Pa. His commission arrived in due time, but out of connection to his family and his new enterprise, and continued in the drug business until his death, a period of more than forty-two years.

Dr. Ziegler was by profession a Presbyterian, and was one of the organizers of Olivet Church, at Reading, and he officiated as its first pastor. He labored earnestly and efficiently in developing the congregation and placing it on a sound foundation. While at school he had become proficient in the classics, and never allowed this attainment to suffer by disuse. As a teacher of the Bible class in his chosen church, no matter what other help he might use, he would select a class from his benefit of his study of the lesson in original Greek. Though a man of warm impulses and kind heart, the decisiveness with which he expressed his convictions—and they were never wavering—often gave color to a severity not intentional. Eminently successful in his business, his prosperity was based as much on his unflinching honesty as on sound business principles so that his store became known for honest drugs. Purity rather than price influenced his purchase, and if a salesman deceived and ventured to trade with him again, he found his reception very frigid, and if he persisted the interview would be terminated abruptly in a most startling manner. He was bashful in everything that called notice to personal merit, and seemed uncomfortable when paid a compliment. The earnestness with which he regarded everything in life was stamped on his countenance, giving it a look of severity, yet no man could laugh at a clean joke more heartily than he. While he undoubtedly felt much satisfaction in having been an officer in the Union army, he seemed to think the part he played was too humble to publish by joining any of the organizations based on other service, and it was a long time before he would consent to be mustered into Gen. William H. Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., and just the year before his death he became a companion of Pennsylvania Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion. He was one of the founders of the Reading Hospital, and among its most liberal contributors, and for many years was a subscriber and a regular contributor. He was a man of many interests. He was conducting his business with his usual energy, when suddenly stricken, and the whole community was shocked to hear of his death.

On July 13, 1871, Dr. Ziegler married Sarah Ann McFarland, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Arbuckle) McFarland. To this union were born two children: Howard P.; and Stella, wife of Dr. William W. Livingood, of Reading. He is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Catharine Gelb and Mrs. Isaac Zook, of Mastersonville, Lancaster county.

CHRISTIAN H. RUHL, attorney at the Reading Bar since 1875, and President of the Berks County Trust Company since its organization in 1900, was born in Carlisle, Cumberland county, Pa., Aug. 7, 1853. He was educated in the local schools, and Dickinson College, from which institution he was graduated in 1874. During his course of study in the College he had entered the law offices of Charles E. McLaughlin, Esq., at Carlisle, for the purpose of taking up the practice of law as his profession, and shortly after his graduation went to Reading, county seat of Berks county, Pa. (Aug. 24, 1874). Having decided to locate in a larger county, he selected Berks county for his field of practice and removing to Reading was admitted to the Bar April 15, 1875. He gradually secured an increasing practice by his careful attention to business, and when James N. Ermentrout, Esq. (member of the law-partnership of Daniel and James N. Ermentrout), was elevated to the Bench Jan. 1, 1886, his senior partner, Hon. Daniel Ermentrout (then in Congress from Berks District), was elected to take the place of his brother, and formed the partnership of Ermentrout & Ruhl; and this partnership continued in a very active and successful practice until the decease of Mr. Ermentrout in 1899.

Mr. Ermentrout having been prominently identified with the political affairs of the county during this time, the legal business of the firm was attended to almost wholly by Mr. Ruhl. Their business embraced an extensive practice in all the local courts, and the prosecution of numerous cases and the settlement of intricate estates having involved much litigation, he came to attend the terms of the Supreme court annually during the week set apart for Berks county. He began his practice before the Supreme court in 1877. The State reports during a period of thirty years show cases annually which were represented by Mr. Ruhl, either for the plaintiff or for the defendant, and he has compiled a great many of them in the preparation of his legal cases. Besides appearing before the Supreme and Superior courts of the State, he has also had considerable practice before the District, Circuit and Supreme courts of the United States, which has given him a wide acquaintance with the business of many states of the Union. He has been a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association for many years. In 1904 he represented the association as one of the delegates to the Universal Congress of Lawyers which assembled at St. Louis, Mo.; and in 1905 to the American Bar Association which met at Nashville, Tenn. This time, from 1898 to 1905, he officiated as the Register in Bankruptcy. From the time of locating in Berks county, Mr. Ruhl has taken an active part in local politics with the Democratic party and exerted a large influence throughout the county in the nomination of candidates for office.

Mr. Ruhl has been identified with different financial institutions of this community, either as counsel or director, for many years: National Bank of Boyertown, womelsdorf National Bank, and East Reading Electric Street Railway Company. He was one of the organizers of the Reading Trust Company in 1900, and has since officiated as its president, and of the Reading Glove & Mitten Manufacturing Company in 1898, and has since served as a director.

In 1878, Mr. Ruhl was married to Elizabeth K. Runkle, daughter of John Runkle, of Reading, manufacturer for many years, who died in 1904, aged eighty-seven years. They have been active members of the First Presbyterian Church since their marriage. He served as a trustee of the congregation and as superintendent of the Sunday-school for many years. They also co-operated heartily in the successful establishment of the Homeopathic Hospital in 1888, and the Organ Pipe Association in 1887, Mr. Ruhl serving the former as secretary for five years, and as president for twelve years, and the latter as president since its organization.

Mr. Ruhl's father, Jesse Ruhl, was born in 1812, in Lancaster county, near Mt. Joy. He was a year old when the Civil war broke out, and the family moved in the fall of 1862, thirteen miles east of Carlisle, and engaged in farming. Upon the decease of his father, he carried on the farm until 1865, when he removed to Carlisle, and lived there in retirement until his death in 1891. He was married to Mary Ann Gladfelter, daughter of George Gladfelter, of York county, and they had four children: Joseph (farmer on the homestead); George (for many years in business at Carlisle and died in 1906); Catharine (m. to John Syricker); and Christian Henry (the subject of this sketch).

His grandfather was Christian Ruhl, born in 1751 in Lancaster county, and brought up to farming. He removed to Cumberland county in 1813, and besides carrying on farming was also engaged in lumbering, milling and distilling until he died in 1850. His great-grandfather was also named Christian, born in Lancaster county, following farming, and died in 1829.

His great-great-grandfather emigrated from Holland in 1743, and settled near Mount Joy, in Lancaster county.

WILLIAM RICK, Mayor of Reading for the term of 1908-19, was born July 28, 1875, at the village of Millersburg, Bethel township, Berks county. He acquired his preliminary education in the local schools and at the Keystone State Normal School, after which he entered Millersburg College at Johnstown, and remained there three years, was graduated in June, 1893. He then began the study of law by registering as a student in the law office of Jacobs & Keiser, at Reading, and on Nov. 11, 1896, was regularly admitted to practice before the courts of the county. He then went to the Yale Law School, and graduated in 1899. Immediately upon beginning active practice, he has continued with increasing success until the present time, his offices being at No. 326 Court street. Shortly after entering upon his legal practice, he identified himself with the Republican party, and in appreciation of his services was given the appointment of deputy controller of Berks county by Joseph N. Shomo, who was appointed on May 22, 1901, by the Governor, as the first controller of the county, a position which he filled until Jan. 6, 1902. In 1904 in the organization of the school board of that year, Mr. Rick was elected school solicitor of the Reading school district, and served for the term of 1904-07.

In 1908 Mr. Rick was nominated for mayor of Reading on the Republican ticket, being chosen in preference to several other candidates. His Democratic opponent was Edward Yeager, who had been Mayor three years before, and was very popular with the citizens, and remain there three years, was graduated in June, 1893. Mr. Rick's grandfather was John Rick, who carried on a store and tavern at Centreville for many years. He died in 1839, aged thirty-nine years. He married Elizabeth Fisher, by whom he had eight children: Louis (m. to William Schaffner); Fayette (m. to John Heigold); Gerrick M. F. (m. to Sarah Beyerle); Emma M. (m. to Cornelius Stamm); Lydia (m. to Amos Huyett); John; Sidney, and George (m. to Mary Ann Deppen).

DIE TRICH. The Dietrich family is one of the most numerous and prominent in Berks county. It has been distinguished for the loyal and intelligent citizenship, and for the honorable and upright lives, of those bearing the name. The ancestry was of royal blood in the German empire, and acts of valor and deeds of chivalry of the Dietrich family are found in the pages of German history for more than one thousand years. Five distinct houses of Dietrich or Dieterich have been elevated to the same armorial bearings as have been borne by the kings and emperors themselves in the New World they have participated in all the wars of this country, and many of their names have been among the industrious and useful members of society.

The Dietrich Family Association was founded along original lines in the year 1800 by William J. Dietrich, Reading. Meetings were held in 1800, at Lebanon, and in 1804 and 1806 at Kutztown. At the last meeting were representatives from seventeen States, and also from Canada and Mexico, and upward of three thousand persons were present. Up to the present time this is the largest family gathering ever held in Pennsylvania.

In the following record of the family, the Roman numerals indicate the number of the generation, beginning with the first American ancestor.

1) Adam Dietrich, born in the German Palatinate, in the Rhine Valley, Oct. 28, 1740, was reared to agricultural pursuits in his native country; he also learned the trade of weaver. In 1751 his elder brother, Johannes Dietrich, emigrated to America, and settled in Greenwich township, Berks county, Pa. He was followed to this country by Adam and another brother. In 1767, for the two brothers crossed the Atlantic in the good ship Britannia, and were qualified at Philadelphia Oct. 26, 1767. Casper located in the Hemp-son, Casper, Jr., served as a soldier in the war of 1812. Casper Dietrich had a large family.

For some years after coming to this country Adam Dietrich apparently lived in Lowhill township, Northumberland county, where in 1779 he paid a proprietary tax of $27.96. His occupation was that of a farmer and innkeeper at Sunbury. In 1788, when a federal tax list was collected in that county, he was no longer a resident in Sunbury. In 1790 and 1800, his whereabouts and in 1810 in Berks county he was listed in the tax lists of Berks county, show him a resident in Greenwich township, Berks county. In 1779 he owned there 130 acres of land, four horses and three cows. In 1780-81-82-83 he was assessed with 150 acres, two horses, two cows and 1495 pounds of tobacco. He was granted Adam Dietrich by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for a tract of 200 acres located in Greenwich township, and this he sold, June 3, 1812, to his youngest son, Johann Christian, for $2,796. Adam Dietrich was loyal to his adopted land, and the Dietrich Family Association have certified records that he was a sergeant in Capt. Jacob Baldy’s company, under Lieut.-Col. Joseph Hiest, of Berks county, in the Revolutionary war in 1780.

Adam Dietrich was married before his emigration to America, and two of his children, Johann Adam and Johann George, were born in the Fatherland. He married Maria Barbara Steinbruch, who was born March 13, 1741, daughter of Jacob Steinbruch. She died on the homestead in Greenwich township, June 6, 1821, aged eighty years, two months, twenty-four days. He died in Greenwich township, March 1, 1817, aged seventy-six years, four months, and three days. Both Adam Dietrich and his wife were stanch Lutherans, and were members of the Moselem Church (which was established in 1742), of which he was an official, and they as a couple and family adjoining church always belonged. To this couple were born seven sons and five daughters, all but one of whom lived to old age. All the sons were named Johann, but each was known by his second name with the exception of the sixth son, who had no second name. These children were: (1) Johann Adam, born Dec. 11, 1765, died Aug. 19, 1823, aged fifty-seven years, eight months, eight days. (2) Johann Georg, born May 7, 1767, died Nov. 4, 1845, aged seventy-eight years, five months, twenty-seven days. (3) Maria Barbara, born 1766, m. Johann Christian, and with his family and descendants still reside. (4) Maria Catharine, born 1771, m. Rev. Johann Michael Schmidt, mentioned elsewhere. (5) Johann Jacob, born June 25, 1773, died Sept. 1, 1857, aged eighty-four years, two months, six days. (6) Johann Michael, born April 6, 1775, died June 19, 1861, aged eighty-six years, two months, ten days. (7) Johann Heinrich, born 1777, died 1857. (8) Johann, born Jan. 7, 1779, died July 28, 1830, aged fifty-six years, six months, twenty-one days. (9) Maria Elizabeth, born 1781. (10) Johann Christian, born Jan. 16, 1784, died Nov. 21, 1837, aged ninety years, ten months, eight days. (11) Maria Magdalena, born 1785, was known by the name of Polly. She m. a Becker. (12) Anna Margaret, born January, 1787, died July 14, 1858, aged fifty-one years, six months. She was called Beckie, and she m. Jacob Heffner (1781-1867), of Virginville, Pennsylvania.

(II) Johann Adam Dietrich, a descendant of Adam the immigrant, was born Dec. 11, 1765, in Germany, and when a mere child came with his parents to Pennsylvania. He grew up on the farm, and when twenty-one years old, in 1788, married Catharine Christ, born 1767, who died in Greenwich in 1837, aged sixty-nine years. He lived in Greenwich township for some years, and then came back to a farm he owned in the Stony Run, in Albany township. Here he died suddenly of apoplexy, Aug. 19, 1853, aged fifty-seven years, eight months, eight days. He and his wife are buried at Grimville. His three children were: Johann, born Feb. 26, 1795, died April 1, 1872; George died in infancy; Mary (1800-1864). (III) Johannes Dietrich (1795-1872), son of Johann Adam, lived in the Stony Run, on the homestead which latterly was owned by his son John, who was over six feet tall, and very strong. Johannes Dietrich kept many bees, and was very successful in raising them. Visitors to his family were treated to an abundance of honey, which he had the year around. His sons and grandsons inherited from him the art of bee raising.

In 1823 he married Catharine Kunkel, born in Albany Township, Dec. 8, 1806, and died Sept. 22, 1850, aged eighty years, three years, fourteen days. He was a yeoman, and raised horses, cattle, and sheep, which he had the year around. His four children were: Polly m. Daniel Fenstermacher; Rebecca (1824-1891) m. Johannes Schlenker; Daniel m. Catharyn Dietrich; Anna m. Samuel Miller; Maria C. m. William S. Mosser; John H. m. Polly Leiby (they had no issue); one died young; David (1840-1852). (IV) Daniel Dietrich, son of Johannes, was born in Albany on the homestead in Stony Run, where all his brothers and sisters were also born. He died on the farm at the top of Stony Run hill Oct. 5, 1901, aged eighty-six years, seven months, twenty-four days. He was a life-long farmer, and also raised bees. He was an honest and kind-hearted man, tall, strong and a little stooped; he wore a heavy beard. He and his family were Lutherans and are buried at Grimville. His wife, Catharyn Dietrich, a daughter of Michael Dietrich, died Oct. 10, 1895, in her sixty-sixth year. They had these seven children: Levi D. m. Mary Dietrich; Catharyn m. Augustus Dietrich (they have Newton E. and Walter L.); Daniel m. Emma Reinig; Ellen m. Jacob George; Sarah m. Mr. Baer; Charles A. m. Louisa Kutz; Mary A. m. Nathan Zimmerman. (V) Daniel Dietrich, born May 7, 1767, son of Adam the immigrant, came with his parents to America when a mere child. He located in Greenwich township, near Dunkel’s Church, of which he was an official, and member. He died in 1809, as the name appears as a church official and active member. He died Nov. 4, 1845, aged seventy-eight years, five months, twenty-seven days. He and his wife, Elizabeth Brunner (1778-1846), are buried there with their eight children: (1) Jonas, (2) Jacob, (3) Charles, (4) Emma, (5) John Heinrich, (6) Benjamin Hummel, of Greenwich, and had three children: (1) Jonas, (2) John, (3) Charles. (4) Maria Magdalena (1801-1880) married John K OpenGL, and had four children. (5) George B. (born 1805, died 1878) of Greenwich. He married Polly Riegelman, and had children: (1) John, (2) Charles, (3) George, (4) Keena, (5) Jonas, (6) Daniel (born Nov. 12, 1809, died Jan. 18, 1842). (7) Ann married Benjamin Riegelman, of Greenwich township, and had two children. (8) Lucy married Jacob Lesher, of near Topton, Pa., and had six children.
(III) Daniel Dietrich, son of Johann Georg, was born Nov. 12, 1809, and died Jan. 15, 1842, aged thirty-two years, two months, six days; he was buried at Dunkel's Cemetery near Greenshine. He had a store and barn in Rehersburg, and on Oct. 17, 1830, he married Catharine Lesher (1812-1844), and they had five sons and one daughter, namely: (1) Benjamin married and had children: John, Mary, Ella, Rachel and James D. The last named was the father of Prof. A. M. Dietrich, of Reading. (2) Samuel lived at Lewistown, Union County, where he resided the rest of his days. He had two children, Frank and Laura. (3) Daniel died at Milflington, Pa., at the age of fifty-four. He had three children, Charles, George and Irwin. (4) Joel L. (born June 6, 1837). (5) Isaac is buried at Hamburg. His son Irwin lives at Schuylkill Haven, Pa. (6) A daughter.

(IV) Joel L. Dietrich, son of Daniel, born June 6, 1837, in Greenwich township, was reared to farming. In his young manhood he went to live with his uncle, Solomon Lesher, who was a farmer in Upper Tulpehocken township. There he lived some years, and was married to Catharine Unger, daughter of David Unger, of that township. Mr. Dietrich worked at carpentering for some years, and then engaged again in farming. He owned a farm of over one hundred acres in Jefferson township, near Bernville, and this he cultivated some years. He also owned a smaller tract and sold part of it. He moved and was drilling into Strausstown, where he makes his home at the present time. He is a man very highly respected, and for many years he was active in church life at the Zion's Blue Mountain Church. To him and his good wife were born twelve children, as follows: (1) Franklin P. (born April 2, 1860). (2) George B., of Reading, m. Valeria Groff, and has one daughter, Mary. (3) Milton C. of Reading, m. in 1880 Ida Fox, and their children are: Robert F., Ida S., John J. and Annie C. (4) William A. (born Feb. 24, 1866, died Sept. 9, 1903). (5) Mary M. in 1888, Charles Christian, and has four sons and one daughter. (6) Katie m. in 1890, William Kenney, and has one son and four daughters. (7) Amelia m. in 1889, Calvin Himmelberger, and has three sons and one daughter. (8) Lizzie m. in 1892, Levi Christian, brother of Charles, and has a daughter, Ella. (9) Fietta m. in 1892, Moses Ebling, and they have four sons and one daughter. (10) George W. m. in 1884. (11) Isaac, of Rehersburg, m. Lizzie Gehart. (12) John, a music teacher and organist and chorister of the Rehersburg Lutheran Church, m. Lillian Bright, and has a son, Charles.

(V) Franklin P. Dietrich, son of Joel L., born Apr. 2, 1860, in Schaefferstown, Jefferson township, this county, is a farmer in Bern township. He obtained a common school education, and remained at home until he was thirty-two years of age. He then began farming in Cumru township, near Mt. Penn Furnace, where he remained three years. In the spring of 1902 he went to his present farm, located near Leinbachs, in Bern township. This farm, which contains thirty-seven acres of good land, he purchased from Jacob Balthaser. In his young manhood he learned the painter’s trade, and this he followed for nineteen years, of which time three years were passed in Reading and three years in business for himself at Strausstown. He is an energetic and progressive citizen. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religious connection he and all his family are members of Eplers Lutheran Church. On June 18, 1893, he married Ellen Schlepp, daughter of William and Mary (Savage) Schlepp, of Upper Bern. They have five children, all in school: Lillie, Mary and Charles W.

(VI) William A. Dietrich, son of Joel L., born in Upper Tulpehocken township Feb. 24, 1866, died at Strausstown Sept. 9, 1903, aged thirty-seven years, six months, fifteen days, and was buried at Blue Mountain Church. He was a musician, organist of Blue Mountain Church and Sunday-school for seven years, a leader of the Strausstown choir, and made great efforts to improve the younger element in vocal and instrumental music. He was a man of high ideals, and was greatly beloved by all who knew him. By marriage he was connected with distillery work, and he followed in connection with the teaching of music. He moved to Strausstown in 1895 from Hamburg, having lived in the latter place three years, there following the profession of music teacher with great success.

On April 29, 1895, he married Sallie M. Potteiger, daughter of William Potteiger, a former member of the State Legislature, and justice of the peace of Berks county many years. No children were born to them.

(II) Johann Jacob Dietrich, son of Adam the emigrant, was born in Berks county, June 25, 1773, and he purchased his farm from his father and moved in 1817, Jan. 1, 1857. He was an official member of the Lutheran congregation of the Union Church at Lenhartsville, and is buried in the cemetery there. He was an extensive landowner. In about 1817 he settled at “Spitzenburg,” in Albany township, where he successfully conducted a tannery and hotel for many years. On Jan. 30, 1829, he purchased seventeen acres and three rods from Jacob Trautman, a neighbor in Albany township. On Dec. 22, 1829, he obtained a grant from the Commonwealth, through the Secretary of the Land Office, for sixteen acres, twenty-six perches, for $33.50, and made a tract of land adjacent to said grant. He also purchased a tract from John Stoudt a neighbor, for $3,100. From the Christian Henry estate (to whom it had been ceded by the Commonwealth) he obtained 194 acres, 84 perches, in Albany, and adjoining his other land. He owned about 500 acres of land in the southern end of Albany township, around the south and west base of Spitzenburg part of this land lying across the Albany line into Greenwich township, and he was known as “Spitzenburger Jake Dietrich.” This land is now divided into three large farms: The 148-acre farm owned by Jacob H. Dietrich (son of Samuel P. and grandson of Johann Jacob); the Nathan Stump farm (on which Johann Jacob Dietrich built the present barn in 1837); and the Simon Bautsch farm. The last named tract was the homestead farm of Mr. Dietrich, and on it is a one and one-half story stone house, which was erected in about 1830. It has two rooms over the main part of the house; it had no cellar, and was used as a church many years ago, and also as a schoolhouse, one Karl Cook being the teacher. In a corner in the wall was a hollow or hole, in which the Holy Bible was kept. Mr. Dietrich kept a very popular hotel, known as “Dietrich’s Hotel,” and built a house for marrying and about 1890 built a stone addition on the west side. Battalions days were held annually in an open field at the Spitzenburg, and on this day the militia met and drilled in all the splendor they could muster. Each company tried to exhibit the best discipline. Dietrich’s battalion was always largely attended, and was a very joyous occasion, the ladies in their bright attire adding to the brilliance of the scene. The day, however, usually wound up somewhat disastrously, as the disputes regarding the relative merits of those participating in the day’s work were frequently settled by blows. Mr. Dietrich was also a distiller, and burned down the apple-jack, the ruins of his old distillery still being visible in the meadow facing the house. He sold a “smaller,“ an apple-jack for two cents. He was a man of no little prominence and influence in his district, and while of mild disposition, and kind heart, was unbending in his convictions. He was smooth-shaven, with black moustache, and white teeth, and though small in stature was possessed of great strength, being able to carry twelve bushels of wheat at one time, six bushels of which he could shoulder alone.

1896, Johann Jacob Dietrich married Christina Peiffer (1786-1861), and they became the parents of eleven children, namely: (1) Daniel (born 1808, died...
m. Anna Christman. (2) Samuel (born 1810, died 1898) m. Sarah Heinly. (3) Henry (born 1812) m. Anna Kline. (4) Jacob P. m. Leah Greenanwald. (5) Gideon F. (born 1815, died 1898) m. Susan Moser. (6) Solars. (7) Charles P. (born 1812, died 1899) m. Delphine. He was a well-known citizen of Albany township. (7) Polly (born 1819, died 1900) m. Charles Greenanwald. (8) Sally m. Peter Kline. (9) Moses P. (born 1824, died 1906) m. Anna Dreibelbis, owned and conducted a grist mill on the Ontelaune, at Lenhartsville, for many years. (10) Charles P. (born Nov. 11, 1820), formerly a well known citizen of Albany township, was buried at Reading, m. Kate Smith. (11) Caroline (born 1830) m. Peter Krause, of Klinesville. He died in the nineteenth year of his age, in 1908. She died shortly afterward.

(1) Daniel Dietrich, eldest child of Johann Jacob, was born in Albany township, July 27, 1808, and died of smallpox at Reading, Aug. 30, 1872, aged sixty-four years, one month, three days. He was first engaged in farming immediately west of the borough of Kutztown, from there moving to Oley township, where he was engaged in farming for many years. On retiring from agricultural work, he moved to Reading, and there for ten years conducted a dairy, meeting with great success. In 1833 he married Anna Christian, born May 6, 1814, daughter of Peter Christian. She died Oct. 24, 1883. Both Daniel Dietrich and his wife are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. They had a family of thirteen souls. We have record of the following: (1) James M. (born Aug. 11, 1834, died in Nebraska, Feb. 8, 1901) m. Sarah Neider, of Iowa, and had seven children—Franklin, Daniel, John, Charles, Rebecca, Mary and Amelia—and fourteen grandchildren. (2) Daniel P. (3) Charles C. (born Oct. 20, 1837) lives at No. 923 Elm street, Reading. He m. Sophia Gehret, who has been an invalid since 1898, and they have had four children: Mary Ann, Cyrus (1862-1891), Alice and Amanda. (4) Penrose (born 1838) m. Wilhelmina Mary Buchanan, from the West, and has children: Anna Mary, William F., Edward C., Franklin A., Carrie M., Albert A. and Elmer J. (5) Alfred m. Becky Fisher, and lives at No. 110 North Tenth street, Reading. No issue. (6) Francis F. (born Jan. 6, 1841) m. in 1872, Amanda Jane Zumbrun, of the West, and they live in Nebraska. Their children are: Alvin M., Truman O., Mary E., Evelyn M., F. Valetta M., and Lloyd J. (7) Thomas T. (born Feb. 29, 1848) m. and with his son, Fred W., lives in the West. (8) Alvin, of Yellow House, Berks county, m. Catharine Miller, and has children: Oscar M., Alvin M., Elmer M., Bertha, Anna, Katharyn and Mary. He also has four grandchildren. (9) Michael, died (10) Jacob (born 1850, died 1897) was unmarried. His remains rest in the Charles Evans cemetery at Reading.

(IV) DANIEL P. DIETRICH, the second oldest son of Daniel, was born in Albany township, June 12, 1836. He was educated in the schools of Albany and Greenwich townships, and during fourteen years of age was sent to Columbia county by his father to obtain an English education. While at this place he made his home with his uncle, Gideon Dietrich, and he attended school until eighteen years of age. He remained with his uncle eight years, the last four at work on his uncle's farm. At the age of twenty-two years he went to Montour county, and there in Derry township worked on a farm. In 1859 and 1860 he operated a farm for his father-in-law, Leonard Raub, and he later became foreman for a large lumber company in Cameron county, Pa., remaining there four years. He again worked at lumbering in this section of the state until 1870, when he removed to Richardson county, Neb., where he worked on a farm for three years. He then purchased a farm which he operated for nine years, and then bought 440 acres in Buffalo county, Neb. and 360 acres in Phillips county, Kans. These large farms he operated successfully for sixteen years, selling them at a very large profit. He understood the nature of the Western soil, and raised very large crops. He also engaged in stock raising, meeting with great success. He purchased his land at several dollars an acre, and commenced raising alfalfa, which greatly enlarged the value of the land, and the estate he made always were profitable. During the winter of 1898-99 Mr. Dietrich came East, and, becoming ill, decided to remain in the region of his nativity. Until the spring of 1907 he resided on South Third Street, in Hamburg, and he then located in Reading, where he purchased a fine home at No. 1019 Franklin street. He is now living at 30 West 28th Street, Reading. On June 22, 1883, he married Catharine Raub, daughter of Leonard Raub, and to this union were born children as follows: Sarah died aged twenty-two years; William L. lives at Sweetwater, Buffalo Co., Nebr.; Lucinda C. died in her fourth year; Emma R. m. Wellington Mooney, a native of Columbia county, and they now live at Turbotville, Northumberland Co., Pennsylvania.

In 1900 Mr. Dietrich married (second) Lizzie Hoff, of Hamburg, daughter of John and Ellen (Gehriss) Hoff, of Reading.

(II) Johann Michael Dietrich, the sixth child of Adam the emigrant, was born April 6, 1775, and died near Klinesville, on his large farm in Greenwich township now owned by Daniel J. Fraunfelder, June 19, 1861, aged eighty-six years, two months, thirteen days. He married Sophia Brunner, born in Greenwich, Nov. 8, 1779, died Sept. 23, 1868, aged eighty-three years, ten months, seven days. They had fifteen children, one of which was buried with other in the graveyard at Lenhartsville. They were devout Lutherans, and he was a foremost member of the Lenhartsville church, serving the congregation faithfully as an official many years. He helped to build the church in 1856 and gave liberally toward its support. Michael Dietrich is known, began farming on a large tract located midway between Lenhartsville and Virginville, on the Ontelaune. This farm is now owned by a Luckenbill. On April 14, 1814, he bought a 150-acre tract from George and Eva Hussly, located in Greenwich, one mile east of Klinesville. Here he built a big stone house and greatly improved the land. On Aug. 15, 1853, he sold this farm to his son Michael for $3,600 in gold or silver. Michael Dietrich and wife remained on this farm until they died. Some of their children were born at this place.

After the father's death Michael Dietrich, Jr., lived on the farm, and on April 17, 1867, sold it to his son Eli for $6,660. Eli Dietrich in 1882 traded the farm to Henry Fraunfelder, for a 117-acre farm in Maxatawny, located to the right of the main road leading from Eagle Point to Talmage. The farm has since lived and prospered. The "Dietrich Farm," as it is still known locally, is one of the best farms in the township, and is bounded by lands of other Dietrichs.

Sophia Brunner, wife of Johann Michael Dietrich, was a devout Christian. She read her Bible daily and taught her children the love of the Master. She liked to collect relics, and had many old dishes, cannon, etc. The children of Michael and Sophia Dietrich were as follows: (1) Maria Barbara (Polly), born Jan. 2, 1799, died June 11, 1877, m. Christian Braucher. (2) Michael, born May 12, 1801, died July 14, 1880, married Hannah Will. They had the following children: Mary, William, Catharine, Caroline, Benneville, Abby, Anna Caroline and Eli. (3) Daniel is mentioned later. (4) Lydia, 1805-1863, m. Daniel Stump. (5) Betsy m. John Kistler. (6) Hannah, 1808-1886, m. Samuel Kunke. (7) Sallie, 1810-1895, m. Jonas Wilt. (8) Catharine m. Nathan Fike. (9) Heini ("Harry").

(IV) Benneville Dietrich was born in Greenwich township June 15, 1836, son of (III) Michael Jr., son of (II) Johann Michael, son of (I) Adam the emigrant. He was reared to farm life in his native township. In 1868 he came to Albany township, where he purchased the farm of ninety-five acres on Pine
In 1828 Mr. Dietrich married Salome Fisher, born Sept. 29, 1806, daughter of Philip and Esther (Weaver) Fisher, of Berks County, Pa., and she died July 10, 1876. They had children as follows: Levi F. is mentioned below. Daniel F. is mentioned below. Henry died age sixteen years. Samuel died unmarried. Eliza m. Isaac Rhoads and lives at Shoemakersville.

(V) Charles W. Dietrich was born March 22, 1865, in Albany township. He passed his life to the time of his majority on the home farm, acquiring some part of the land and other lands afforded by his father, and by attaining his majority, he served the farmers about the neighborhood for five years, and then took up residence on his present farm in 1894. The farm had been owned by his father-in-law, David S. Kamp, and consists of a fine and fertile farm of forty acres in woodland. To this Mr. Dietrich has added a tract of 136 acres of wooded land adjacent. One of the particularly strong points of this farm is the excellent and abundant water supply. Mr. Dietrich built a barn in 1889, and in 1896 a substantial frame farm-house. These, together with other minor improvements, have greatly increased the value of the farm. General farming is carried on by Mr. Dietrich and with a success which always attends earnest and persistent agricultural effort in Berks county. He is an influential member of the Democratic party in his locality, and has at different times served as delegate to county conventions. He is now serving as registry assessor of the district, having been elected at the spring election of 1909. In a social way he affiliates with Washington Camp No. 288, O. S. of A., at Steinsville, and Orden der Alten deutscher, No. 544, at Kempton. He and his family are members of the New Bethel (Corner) church, which Mr. Dietrich has served three terms as deacon.

Mr. Dietrich married Oct. 10, 1891, Amanda E. Kamp, daughter of David S. and Francis (Berk) Kamp, of Albany township. Their children are: Ida N., who graduated from the public school of Albany at the age of twelve; Oscar J., Mabel F. and Edna M.

(III) Daniel Dietrich, son of Johann Michael, was born in Greenwich township, one mile northeast of Klinesville Jan. 2, 1803, and died March 22, 1884. He and his wife are buried in the cemetery at the United Brethren Church in Tilden township. He was educated in the pay schools of his native township, and was trained to farming, remaining at home until his marriage, in 1828, after which he located in Albany township, and for a few years belonged to the Democratic party. He lived for three years. In 1834 he located in Bern (now Centre) township, where he purchased a farm of 121 acres from the Kauffmans. This was extremely fertile land, and was located along Irish creek about two miles west of Centreport, and the cultivation of this farm, in the main, belonged to his eldest son, Elmer W., who was a Democrat, and he was a man of high repute and of great influence in his district. In his earlier life he was a Lutheran member of Bellemans Church, serving as an official, but later he became active in Salem United Brethren Church of Tilden township. He was liberal in his contributions toward religious and charitable institutions. At the time of his death his estate was valued at $32,000.
farm on which he formerly lived in Exeter township. He has made his residence since 1868 at No. 203 South Fourth street. While engaged in farming he took a farm of fine horses and cattle, his herd of Holsteins being the largest in the county.

In politics Mr. Dietrich is a Democrat. While living in Exeter township he served as school director. In 1897 he was a candidate for register of wills, and had ninety-seven delegates in the convention. In 1888 he was a delegate to the State Convention, and at the same time his brother was a delegate to the farm mission convention from the country. He and his family are faithful members of the First Reformed Church in Reading, and he has served for more than a quarter of a century as elder. He is prominent in the Classis of the Reformed Church of Eastern Pennsylvania, serving frequently as a delegate and in various other important capacities.

On Nov. 6, 1858, Mr. Dietrich married Catherine A. Althouse, daughter of Henry and Mary (Kissingen) Althouse, of Bern township. They had children: (1) Clara A. m. William A. Helig, of Cleveland, Ohio. (2) Lucy m. John W. Holmes, of Exeter township, Berks county, and in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He is buried at Grimville, by the side of his wife Judith (nee Kutz), a daughter of the late Joseph Kutz, who lived on the Sacoony near Kutztown, and was nearly one hundred years old when he died. For a time he had held the office of delegate in the farm convention, and after he became of age rode on horseback to Ohio, where he lived two years and worked upon a farm. In 1849 he married and for some years was a farmer at Kohler's Hill, in Greenwich. Here one of his horses which had been bitten by a mad dog had hydrops, which causes a great sensation to the dog district. Later Heinrich Dietrich bought a large farm located in Maxatawny township, across the line of Greenwich, and along Weisenburg township, Lehigh county. This farm he operated for many years. He also operated a gravel mill located on this place, in the Meltaugh's mill, sold it in 1879, and had an interest in a 40-acre tract lying adjacent to his large farm, which he sold to his son-in-law, Henry Fenstermacher. Here he lived until, becoming too old, he was requested by his daughter Isabella, wife of Henry Fenstermacher, to make his home with them. This he did, and he died at their home, ripe in years, a highly esteemed man. Heinrich Dietrich was better known as "Harry Dietrich." He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and throughout his lifetime a constant reader. He is remembered with profound reverence by his many grandchildren. He read the Bible often. He was a man of strong convictions and a strict disciplinarian in the family. He had one favorite ejaculation, "By Judas." He was never heard to use God's name in vain. He was tall, about six feet in height, and erect in his bearing until he was seventy-five years old, when he became very stooped and walked with a cane, but he was well preserved in years. He had five sons and six daughters, all his faculties to the last. His thick hair was black until he was sixty-five years old. Altogether he was a man of fine appearance. He was a pleasant talker and loved company. On his eighty-fifth birthday his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren held a birthday gathering on his farm, and he was given the seat of honor at the table, and with happy tears streaming down his cheeks praised God for this pleasant event. He told the gathering that this was his last birthday on earth, and his prediction proved true. In the late afternoon of the last Monday in May, the following month, spirit took its flight. He had preceded his death about twenty-five years. The following were their children: William J., 1843-1876; Susan, born April 7, 1845, is unmarried; Isabella m. Henry Fenstermacher; Henry A., born Feb. 6, 1850, m. Sallie Buchanan, and they live at Ricketts, Pa. (they have Franklin, D., born Apr. 14, 1853, m. Amos Loch; Alfred, 1855-1856; Emma, born Aug. 1, 1857, m. Amos Loch; Annie M., 1860-1882; Sarah, born 1862, is the widow of Sylvester Weil.

(IV) William J. Dietrich (son of Heinrich) was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, Dec. 7, 1858, and died at Hamburg, Berks county, pneumonia, July 19, 1876, in the thirty-third year of his life. He was reared upon his father's farm, and in his youth attended the public schools with regularity. He had a bright mind and was a student. He was made administrator of an estate before he was thirty years old, and was helpful in many ways to his community. He owned a small farm one-quarter of a mile from where his father lived, located in Greenwich township, now owned by Lewis Behler. This he operated until the latter part of 1874, when it was sold and he moved to Hamburg, where his death occurred. He worked in the ore mines in Maxatawny township from 1873 to 1877, and his farm, which was called the "Ricketts Mill," was located on the Susquehanna river. At Hamburg he followed huckstering and butchering, and for a short time worked in the rolling-mill, which is now abandoned. He and his family were devout Lutherans, and constant in their attendance at worship. Mr. Dietrich was a man of fine appearance. On July 11, 1888, he married Mary, daughter of Jonathan Seaman, a foreman in the Tilden township. She was born Dec. 24, 1844, and died suddenly of apoplexy Sunday night, June 4, 1899, in her fifty-fifth year. Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich are buried in the Dietrich family plot at Hamburg. Mrs. Dietrich was a woman of noble character and high intelligence. She had many virtues, and was a pious woman. Being left a widow with six children, the youngest a posthumous son, she reared them in the fear and admonition of God, and her last spoken word was "May the grace of the Lord be with you all." She was esteemed by all who knew her.

William J. and Susanna F. Dietrich had the following children: (1) Lizzie C., 1868-1881. (2) Agnes V., born Feb. 1, 1870, m. G. J. Heintzelman, the financial manager and general superintendent of the Trexler & Turrell Lumber Company, Ricketts, Pa. They have a daughter, Mabel M., and a son, Henry Clay, and (3) Zelvilia J., 1871-1872. (4) Oscar H., born July 23, 1872, m. Aquilla Kostenbader, and has daughters, Mabel and Susan. He is the secretary and treasurer and business manager of the Dietrich Motor Car Company (Inc.) of Allentown, Pa. He is a successful and prosperous business man. (5) David J., born March 1, 1874. (6) William J., is mentioned further on. (7) Alfred M., born Nov. 30, 1876, is married and has one son, Alfred.

(V) William J. Dietrich, of Reading, is a representative and native citizen of Berks county, Pa. He was born at West Hamburg, Tilden township, May 22, 1875, son of William J. and Susanna F. (Seaman) Dietrich, both deceased. When he was five years old his mother moved to Hamburg, and in 1884 they moved to the home of his grandfather, Harry B. Dietrich, in Maxatawny township. From 1885 to 1894 he was hired to farmers in the Limbermill district. On July 14, 1891, he married Sarah E., born Aug. 14, 1872. On Jan. 23, 1896, they moved to Reading, and in (1891) he lived in Lynn township, Lehigh county. The young man even in those boyhood days showed the same conscientiousness in the performance of duty that has characterized all his later years. In 1894 he worked in the lumber-mill at Ricketts, in Wyoming and Sullivan counties, and the lumber-mill at Edginton, Schuylkill county, for seven years. He has always been a leader of the church and is a self-made man. The public schools afforded him his mental training, and he early showed a fondness for books, coupled with an investigating mind—a desire for thorough understanding of every subject within his sphere of observation. In the winter of 1894-95 he last attended public school as a pupil, and in the spring of 1895, he entered the Normal School, at Kutztown, with four teachers from Tilden township. In the examination that was required for their admission, Mr. Dietrich made a high average. In the same year he was also examined by the county superintendent, receiving a certificate, and the board of officials offered him the position of six schools in Mohnton, where he resided. He accepted the grammar school, and taught there three terms; and later, during 1905-06, he taught Yocom's school one term in the same township. He was original in many of his methods to interest the pupils, which won them an admirable report. After three years, he was placed in charge of the town schools. He ordered work and discipline necessary for effective work, and few teachers in the county stood equally high with patrons and pupils. Mr. Dietrich also taught night school in Reading for a number of terms, winning commendation for the success of his efforts.

In October, 1904, Mr. Dietrich was appointed a clerk in the Philadelphia post-office, but this position he resigned in March of the following year because of family ties, his wife and children having continued at their home in Reading. Postmaster Clayton McMichael endeavored to dissuade Mr. Dietrich from resigning, saying that "he had a future in the government postal service," but he persisted, and during 1904-05 worked at life insurance in Reading and Berks county—a business that he had followed to some extent in 1902. Mr. Dietrich is of the temperament that does not permit of idleness, and when he was engaged in teaching, and all the other duties of the postmaster, he found something to engage his time and attention profitably. During the summer of 1900 he was engaged as a conductor on the trolley. During 1901 he represented a New York publishing house before school boards and succeeded in securing the adoption of the textbooks in each of the school districts. Since the early spring of 1906 Mr. Dietrich has been in the employ of J. H. Beers & Co., publishers of Chicago, collecting much of the geographical material used in their Historical and Biographical Annals of Berks County, Pa. Mr. Dietrich has a valuable collection of coins, stamps and china ware. He has a large acquaintance among professional men and those in public life, and has traveled the entire county by political districts a number of times. He is well read, and posted on public questions. His library of standard works has been carefully selected, and contains all the works on local history (Berks county) ever published. He is especially fond of history and has collected much information pertaining to the county. He is a member of the Pennsylvania German Society; and of the Berks County Historical Society, and has contributed articles to both. In the latter he has "Caves of Richmond and Perry Townships," published, and "The Caves of Richmond Pennsylvania," and is preserved in the archives of the Society. In 1903 he organized along original lines the Dietrich Family Association, which held successful reunions in 1903, 1904 and 1906. He is also a member of the P. O. S. of A.; K. of P.; I. O. O. F.; and Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 236, R. A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, fourteenth degree; and Reading Commandery, No. 43, K. T.

On May 20, 1899, Mr. Dietrich married Miss Sally M. Markel, daughter of James F. Markel, of Berne Station, Kutztown township. To this union have been born three children: Naomi Evangeline, Ruth Emily and William Joseph, Jr. The two daughters became members of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution in 1909. Mr. Dietrich is much devoted to his family, all of whom are members of the Evangelical church. His son, Mr. Dietrich has served as an official, and for some years has been teacher of the Men's Bible Class.

(11) Johann Heinrich Dietrich, son of Adam the emigrant, was born in 1777, and was brought up as a farmer. After his marriage he settled one mile east of Klinesville and the farm now owned by Peter Stump. In addition to farming "Heinrich" Dietrich, as he was known, conducted a sawmill. He was a fairly prosperous man, but was drawn into an unfortunate piece of litigation. One Jacob Stein stole some clover seed from him, but through some technicality of the law Dietrich could not obtain his conviction. He spent his small fortune, and died in August, 1857 or 1858, a poor man, in Albany township, where he was not respected by all knew him. In his last years he was confined, but the expense was great. Johann Heinrich Dietrich in the later years of his life lived along the Ontelaune, below the Albany Station, near the railroad. He was a man of dark complexion, of medium height and weight. He is buried at Dunkel's Church. He married Hannah Kramer, who is buried in Klinesville, and had the following children: (1) John F., Christiana Bautz. (2) Adam, who left Berks county when he was about twenty years of age and still unmarried, located in Mercer county, Pa., where he married and reared a family. (3) Hannah. (4) Sally M. Joseph Greenwald and they moved to Emporia, Lyon Co., Kans. (5) Henry, born March 16, 1837, died of small-pox Feb. 20, 1862, aged forty-four years, eleven months, four days. He lived in Greenwich on the farm now owned by Peter Stump. He was known as "Der Wake Mashter Henny" ("The supervisor Henry Dietrich"), holding this office many years. His wife was Sarah (Stump) Opp. They had two children: Ellen and Charles, who was married to Samuel Becker, Mary and Wallace A. (6) Polly m. Samuel Ernest. They are buried at Paradise Church, in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania.

(11) Willoughby Dietrich (son of Henry K., son of Johann Heinrich, and Adam the emigrant) married Ellen Gormley. They had four children. Two of the sons and the daughter reside at New Orleans, La. They are highly educated and prominent in the social and business world. After the Civil war Willoughby Dietrich located at New Orleans, where he is buried. He was a soldier in the Union army from Oct. 5, 1861 to the end of the war, being the first volunteer soldier on record from Greenwich township. He was a graduate of the Government Military School, and was an officer in the army. His brother, Samuel O. Dietrich, was also a soldier in the Union army, and died on the field of battle at Vicksburg, Miss., where he is buried. Peter Dietrich, brother of Samuel O. and Willoughby, was a soldier in the Union army, enlisting when only seventeen years old, and served with honor from the beginning to the end of the war. He returned to Berks county and married Sarah Hunsicker. They have a son Charles, and two daughters living at Seigerstown, Pennsylvania.

(11) Johann Dietrich, son of Adam the emigrant, was born on his father's farm in Greenwich township, Jan. 7, 1779. He engaged in farming in that same district, not far from Dietrich's mill, on a farm consisting of upward of 100 acres. He died upon his place July 28, 1830, aged fifty-one years, six months, twenty-one days, and is buried at the Grimville Church. In 1867 he married Elizabeth Olb, who survived him many years, and at the birth of ten children of his marriage. The parents of these children, as follows: John, Reuben, Samuel, Anna Maria (born 1809), Jonas, Hanna (born 1812), Benjamin (born 1813), David, Evan, Daniel (1828-1834), Joseph, Esther and Catharine.

(II) Johann Christian Dietrich, son of Adam the emigrant, was born on the Dietrich homestead in Greenwich township, Jan. 13, 1807. This farm he purchased from his father in 1812, and on it all his life was spent. He was a farmer, and by industry and frugality accumulated a small fortune. He was a short-set, strong and robust man, very fond of horseback riding. Like most of the family, he was full faced and had very black hair. He was kind-hearted and affable, but firm in his convictions. He was very prominent in his community, and was an official member of the Lutheran congregation at Dunkel's Church, where he and the members of his family are buried. He died Nov. 21, 1873, aged ninety years, ten months, eight days. He married Elizabeth Georg, born Jan. 21, 1808, in Christ Church, Harrisburg, and died Jan. 18, 1870, aged sixty-two years. They were the parents of twelve children, namely: (1) Benjamin (born 1806, died 1894) m. Anna Wiltz. (2) Solomon (born 1807, died 1874) m. B. J. Will. (3) Jonathan (Jonas) (born 1808, died 1870) m. H. L. Ottsy. (4) George B. (born 1811, died 1887) m. Polly Heiny. (5) Beckie m. Jacob Heinly. (6) Samuel (born 1817, died 1889) m. Juliana Schollenberger. (7) Anna m. Daniel Spohn. (8) Hettie (born 1822, died 1904) m. John Moyer. (9) Daniel (born 1824, died 1898) m. Sally Ann Christ. (10) Jeremiah (born 1826, died 1901). (11) Nathan (born 1827, died 1880) m. Elizabeth Stump. (12) Henry (born 1832, died 1905) m. Lydia Moyer.

(III) Benjamin Dietrich, son of Johann Christian, was born in 1806, and died Aug. 26, 1894, at the age of eighty-eight years. He was a prominent citizen and large taxpayer living between Dunkel's Church and the Three Mile House. He married Anna Wiltz, and they enjoyed a happy wedded life of more than fifty years. They were the parents of children as follows: Magdalena (m. Eliza Dreibelbis), Catherine, Henry, Elizabeth, John, Benjamin, Lewis, James W. (m. Elizabeth Fethofer), Henry W. (m. Amelia Heinly), Samuel A., Adam, Susanna and Eliza (m. Rolandus Dreidelbis).

(V) Robert D. Dietrich, rising and respected young farmer in eastern Richmond township, where he owns a fertile farm of fifty-seven acres, was born Oct. 14, 1874, near Dunkel's Church, in Greenwich township, son of Samuel A. He was reared on a farm, and received his early education in the common schools, later attending the State Normal School at Kutztown, Pa. He is well read in history, and has acquired his present property. He is a Lutheran member of Dunkel's Union Church in Greenwich township, as is also his wife. He is a Democrat, and has taken an active interest in the business of his party, and in the progress of his community.

Mr. Dietrich was born on the farm of his father, and married Laura S. Fraunfelder, daughter of W. Adam and Catharine (Lenhart) Fraunfelder, prominent farming people of Windsor township. Five children have blessed this union, namely: Susanna May, born in 1896; Harry Adam, born 1898; Raymond Daniel, born in 1899; Paul Leroy, born in 1900; and Helen Fannie, born in 1902.

(III) Jonathan (or Jonas) Dietrich, son of Johann Christian, was born Dec. 2, 1808, and died Jan. 29, 1862. When a young man he followed blacksmithing and later in life became a farmer, in Greenwich township, where he lived all of his life. He is buried at Moseheim Church. In 1831 he married Elizabeth (Betsy) Scheer, born Sept. 25, 1810, who died June 7, 1897. The following children were born to this union: Ephraim died at the age of his death, which occurred Feb. 6, 1882; leaving a large family, and is buried in Kansas; Jonathan died in 1870; Joel, born in 1837; William, born in 1838, died in 1866; Daniel S., born Sept. 20, 1840, died in Baltimore, Md., May 11, 1907; Henry; Samuel; Edward A., born in 1844; and Elizabeth, born in 1847.

(IV) Daniel S. Dietrich, son of Jonathan (or Jonas), was born in Berks county Sept. 20, 1840. While a young man he moved to Montour county, Pa., where he married Catherine B., daughter of Jacob and Justina (Boyer) Moser. Her father was born in Montgomery county, Pa., oldest son of Peter and Anna (Steinbruch) Moser. Peter Moser was the son of S. P. Moser, who lived in Pottstown, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich were the parents of four sons: S. P. Jacob M., Edwin M. and J. Calvin. Jacob M. is the grandson of Daniel S. Dietrich. His brother, Edwin M., married Susan C., daughter of Samuel and Margaret Moser, who are both of Easton, along with Mark S. and Kenneth, and live in Harrisburg, Pa. Mrs. Catherine B. (Moser) Dietrich died at Milton, Pa., March 14, 1897. The father then moved to Baltimore, where he followed building and contracting until the death of his wife. He then moved to Butte, Mont., and died Oct. 2, 1907. Both the father and mother of the children are buried at Oak Grove cemetery, in Montour county, Pennsylvania.

(V) Prof. S. P. Dietrich, of Reading, was born in Montour county, Pa., Aug. 3, 1866. He was reared on a farm, upon which he worked during the summer, attending a small school, and then until he was fourteen years old. He then attended the Green Academy and Prof. Schneider's select school, at Milton, Pa. At the age of eighteen years he began teaching in the rural schools of Montour county, Pa. In this manner he earned sufficient money to pay his own way through the Williamsport Commercial College and Ursinus College. He graduated from the former in 1888 and from the latter in 1894. In 1897 he entered the junior and senior classes in the Bloomsburg State Normal School under the State board of examiners and passed the same, receiving his credentials with the senior class. After graduation he in 1894 accepted the principalship of the McElroy High School of Bloomsburg; he remained two years. In 1896 he resigned to accept a position in Danville (Pa.) high school. In 1899 he resigned his position in Danville to accept the vice-principalship of the Sunbury (Pa.) high school. He remained in Sunbury, Pa., eight years, and in 1907 resigned to accept a position in the Bloomsburg High School of Bloomsburg.

In 1887, the farm was sold and the enterprise was engaged in milling. He has served in the office of supervisor of this township, and is now acting in the capacity of road-master. He married Rufena Adam, daughter of George Adam, of Green Township, and to this union have been born the following children: Rufena G. is a druggist in Philadelphia; Mahlon J. is a miller by trade; Jane m. Henry Adam; Francis A. is a student in Muhlenberg College; Alice resides at home.

(V) Wilson G. Dietrich, son of Edwin, was born in Green Township, county, March 4, 1869. He obtained an ordinary common school education in his native township and in Albany township, and his early boyhood was spent on the home farm, where he early learned that industry was requisite to success in life. In 1899 he began farming in Maxatawny township, where he lived seven years, removing to Richmond township in the spring of 1906. He now lives on one of the farms of Lawson G. and Calvin J. Dietrich. He is a man of good traits of character, and is industrious and persevering. By thrift and economy he has earned sufficient capital to buy a good farm and is deeply interested in the welfare of his family and children.

On May 20, 1893, Mr. Dietrich married Katie M. Adam, daughter of Benjamin and Catharine (Mengel) Adam, farming people of Perry township. Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich are both members of Dunkel's Church.

(III) George B. Dietrich, son of Johann Christian Dietrich, was born Jan. 20, 1811. He owned land in Richmond township, along the Easton road, two miles west of Kutztown, and while he always followed his trade of carpenter, he also worked at farming. He married Polly Heiny, and they became the parents of three children: James H., born Nov. 22, 1831, died Aug. 26, 1899; Maria, who is unmarried, lives on the old homestead, which she now owns with m. Enoch J. Heiny (mentioned elsewhere in this work).

(IV) James H. Dietrich, son of George B., was born in Greenfield township Nov. 22, 1840, and was there reared and educated, making his home throughout life in the same township. He learned the carpenter's trade with his father, and this he followed in connection with farming all of his active years. He died Aug. 26, 1893.

He married Mary Behler, who survives him and lives with her sons on their farm in Richmond township. Three sons blessed the marriage of James H. and Mary (Behler) Dietrich, as follows: Lawson G., Lawzen, a Democrat in political principle, and actively interested in the success of his party. He is prominently connected with the Dietrich Family Association, which holds its annual meeting in the city.

On April 25, 1891, Mr. Dietrich married Eva E. Trexler, born Dec. 28, 1868, daughter of Benneville and Maria (Hoch) Trexler, the former born Dec. 14, 1839, died Feb. 23, 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Trexler were the parents of five children, three boys and two girls, three of whom are living. Mr. Trexler was a farmer and stock raiser for many years, and died in 1898. Miss Mamie Mrs. Dietrich was confirmed in the Lutheran faith by the Rev. Dr. W. S. Mueller, at Moseslem Church, and there she and her husband both attend. They have no children.

(II) Daniel Dietrich, son of Johann Christian Dietrich, was born at Greenwich, township, Berks county, April 24, 1824, and died at Dietrich's mill in the same township April 20, 1898. He was one of the best known men in all that locality, and for many years conducted what is known as Dietrich's mill, located on the Sacozy on the road from Kutztown to Hamburg, two miles north of the former place. With the mill property were fifty acres of land, which Mr. Dietrich cultivated and improved. He built the large brick residence there in 1857, and the barn some years later. He was public spirited and progressive, and was one of the prime movers in the establishment of the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, and one of its first trustees, serving as such from the time of its organization until his death. He is buried in Hope cemetery at Kutztown. On May 28, 1842, he married Sally Ann Christ, born Nov. 12, 1824, died July 5, 1898. To this union were born ten children: (1) Willoughby, born Jan. 10, 1850, died and is buried at Dietrich's mill; (2) William C., born Jan. 6, 1851, died 1876. (3) Jonathan C., born Nov. 26, 1852, in Greenwich, owns and lives on the old homestead, where he operates a creamery, and is also engaged in the ice business. For a number of years he was chief bookkeeper for the Keystone Shoe Manufacturing Company, and he was deputy county controller under H. F. Leidig and A. L. Rhoads. (4) Mahlon C. (5) Mary Elizabeth, born Jan. 25, 1857, is the widow of Levi D. Dietrich. (6) Franklin, born Aug. 15, 1858, died aged forty-four days. (7) Diana, born Sept. 5, 1859, died March 22, 1882. (8) Aaron, born Oct. 11, 1860, died March 23, 1862. (9) Emma Amanda, born Oct. 23, 1861, died May 31, 1870. (10) Amelia, born April 14, 1863, is the widow of Charles A. Ketzer, and has two children, Anna Bell and William R.

(IV) Mahlon C. Dietrich, grain, potato, lumber, coal and general merchandise dealer, of Kempton, born January 3, 1855. He early became familiar with the milling and lumber business, and on August 3, 1874, located in Kempton, which then consisted of one private dwelling and the hotel, but which has since grown to contain twenty-five houses. He conducted the grain warehouse for Dietrich & De Turk, the firm continued under the name until 1881, when he purchased the interest of his partner, Isaac L. De Turk. Since that date he has been alone, building up one of the largest business of its kind in the State. He has a large stock of general merchandise, carrying everything that might be included among the needs of a farmer. He is an extensive potato shipper—in fact the most extensive on the Schuylkill & Lehigh railroad, a branch of the P. & R. road, and he has many customers in the cities of the east.

Mr. Dietrich is interested in all that tends to the development of his county. He was active in the Dietrich Family Reunion Association, and gave great assistance in the preparation of the family record. He is a member of the New Jerusalem Church, belonging to the congregation.

On Sept. 2, 1876, Mr. Dietrich married Miss Sarah E. Bachman, daughter of Nathan and Eliza (Donat) Bachman, of Lynn township, the former born 1817; died 1908. Mr. and Mrs. Bachman had children as follows: Rev. Adam J., of Schaefferstown, Lebanon county; Rev. James N. (1834-1907), of Lynnport, Pa.; and Sarah E. To Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich have been born two daughters and one son, namely: (1) Annie Elvira, born Nov. 19, 1877, died Jan. 21, 1883; Edgar Adolphus, born Nov. 20, 1886, died Jan. 23, 1889; Blanche R., graduated from the public schools of Albany township in 1906, and is a member of the class of 1910 at the Keystone State Normal School.

Mr. Dietrich is so well known in his district as a shipper of potatoes that a few words from him about the potato growing industry which plays so prominent a part in the agricultural prosperity of the section will be of interest here.

Potatoes are raised on every farm in Albany township and in part of Greenwich township, Berks county, and in the lower section of Lynn township, Lehigh county, which joins the two townships named, are raised more than in any other township. From all these localities a good many are brought to Kempton, Berks county, for shipment. Hence not all the potatoes shipped from that station are raised in Berks county. A good many were raised before the building of the Berks County railroad, which was first operated in 1874. The nearest markets then were Allentown, Reading, Pottsville and Tamaqua. To each place the potatoes are usually carried about five or six days, by the trip taking two nights and one day or two days and one night. Since the railroad was built more have been raised from year to year. The old varieties have been supplanted by new favorites, and many have held their reputation as good yielders. At present the Dewy, Vulcan, State of Maine, Prince Henry, Twentieth Century, World's Wonder, National and Banner are principally raised, and all are a round white potato, good yielders, and also best adapted for the market.

The planting season begins about April 10th. Many turn the sod in the fall, some in the early spring, and make ready to plant with the Aspawnto, or other varieties; the slanting tooth harrow is used, then the weeder and cultivator. The Colorado potato bug or beetle is very injurious to the plants and the growers must spray them in time with Paris green or arsenic; and some also spray for the prevention of the blight, which is a much dreaded disease, as potatoes commence to rot about the time when the first shipments are made in car-load lots, which is about Sept. 1st. York State stock is always about two weeks later, and Michigan and other northwestern States still a few weeks later. The shipping of potatoes is a most hazardous under-taking. All kinds are affected with the potato rot; the cold weather and the overstocked markets have to be contended with. Most of the farmers have not yet provided a good protected storage place, and have to sell about half the stock raised before the cold weather sets in, being therefore obliged to sell those outside the cellars and other protected places. Some three hundred full car-loads and a number of bushels in bag lots are shipped from the different stations in Albany township; six hundred bushels is about the average for a car, or about two hundred thousand bushels at an average price of fifty cents; the shipments amounting to $100,000.

(III) Nathan Dietrich, son of Christian, was born in Greenwich township, July 30, 1827, and died Jan. 24, 1880. He was reared to farm life and when about twenty-five years old began work for himself. He lived in Montour county, Pa., for a time, working on a farm, and then returned to Kempton. When he returned to Greenwich township, Berks county, he began farming at Stein's mill, and then lived on different farms in that locality until the spring of 1860, when he went to Albany township, and purchased farm, now the property of Henry Heffner, which he sold six years later and bought a 150-acre farm from Daniel Kunkel, that is now owned by his son.
Henry S. The barn on this farm is 114 feet long—the largest in the township, and the farm and surroundings are kept in first-class condition. Nathan Dietrich was a Lutheran member of New Bethel Church, in which he was an official. He married Elizabeth Stump, daughter of Samuel Stump, who now lives at Kempton. Six children, all still living, were born of this union: (1) William S., now living retired at Weatherly, Pa., owns two farms and a mill. He is married and has children—John, James, Maud, and Francis. (2) Catharine, widow of Moses Hein, lives at Kempton. (3) Henry S. (4) Rosetta m. Francis Lenhart, a farmer in Albion township. (5) Annie m. Owen Snyder, a farmer at Steins Corner, Lehighton. (6) Anna m. Samuel Kline, a farmer in Albion township. (7) Ella m. Miller, and has three children—Verna, Alma, and Anson.

(H) HISTORY

Reuben A. Dietrich, youngest son of John Adam and Susanna (Arnold) Dietrich, was born in Greenwich township Oct. 20, 1823, on the John Adam Dietrich homestead near Klinesville, and died July 31, 1889. He was a lifelong farmer, succeeding his father on the home place, which now consists of 153 acres of valuable land. He was prosperous, and added seventy acres to this tract, but this estate was sold off again after his death. Mr. Dietrich was originally a Lutheran member of the Dunkel Church, but in 1854, when the Lenhartsville Church was organized, he became one of its members, and he was the first president of that body. He was buried at Catherine Kunkel, born in 1834, daughter of Daniel and Maria Magdalena (Zimmerman) Kunkel, and eight children were born to them: Albert K. is mentioned below: Lewis K. is a prosperous farmer in Kistler's Valley, Lehighton county (he married Alice Howerton, and they have five children: Valorus, William, Lizzie, Edgar, and Norman); Ellen (deceased) was the wife of Alfred Greenwalt, of Bernville; Henry K., born in 1860, a farmer near Lenhartsville, is the vice-president of the Dietrich Family Association (he married in 1889, Mary Seidel, and they have children, Robert, Lizzie, Edgar, Flora, Nora, Harvey and Annie, of whom Lizzie, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, is engaged in teaching); Florenda married George Kutz; Thomas K. owns and farms the homestead (he married Ida Komp, who died June 17, 1907, and has a son, Ira); Charles and James both died in childhood. The fractional ground of this family is at Lenhartsville. Mrs. Catharine (Komp) Dietrich now makes her home with her son, Thomas, on the old homestead.

Alfred K. Dietrich was reared to farming, and when twenty-one years old went to learn milling from Solomon P. Dietrich, who then operated what has been known for many years as the Dietrich Mill. The spring after his marriage Mr. Dietrich engaged in the business for himself at Dietrich's Mill, which he bought about 1889, and which he conducted in all for about thirty years—from 1877 until two years before his death. This mill is located in the Stony Run Valley in Albany township. The first mill at this site was built by a Grimm in 1750, and the present stone mill is at least the second, probably the third, mill at this place. On a stone in the wall of the said garage are the dates 1750 and 1795, the latter being the probable date of the second mill or the repairing of the first. To the mill property belongs a fine farm of ninety-five acres, lying in the potato belt of this section. Mr. Dietrich raised many potatoes, planting twenty acres every year. This property is a valuable one, the buildings being very substantial. The large Swiss barn was erected by Alfred K. Dietrich in 1891. He owned also the old Wiesner homestead in Stony Run Valley, a farm of 122 acres, which he bought in 1898, and which is now tenanted by his son Irwin C., who is also pursuing the farming business and extensively engaged in potato planting. On this farm stands a stone house which was built in 1796, and which originally belonged to one Samuel Miller. On a stone in the west gable of this house is the following:

On Jan. 21, 1877, Mr. Dietrich married Louisa Merkel, daughter of William D. Merkel, of Windsor, and to this marriage were born: Albert C., Anson W., Mary V. (married Elton J. Trexler, of Albany, Pa., and has a son, Clinton M.), Howard W., and Agnes C.

With his family Mr. Dietrich belonged to the Wessnersville Friedens Church, all being members of the Lutheran congregation there, of which Mr. Dietrich served as deacon. He was the third person buried in the new cemetery of that church. In politics Mr. Dietrich was a Democrat. He was a man much esteemed for his devotion to his family and his duty.

DIETRICH (Line of Conrad). This branch of the Dietrichs, so far as is known in no way related to Adam Dietrich and his descendants, has its origin in Conrad Dietrich, who was born in Baltimore, Md., Jan. 11, 1763. In his young manhood he came to Berks county, Pa., and located in Hereford township. He was married there, and in 1790 the Federal Census Report records him the head of a family consisting of four persons, himself and wife and two daughters. Their seven other children were born after 1790. About 1795 he and his family came to Reading, and there he passed the remainder of his life. He owned considerable property, and was regarded as a fairly well-to-do man. His wife was Elizabeth Seisholtz of Longswamp township. Berks county, born March 3, 1769, died Sept. 22, 1837, aged eighty-six years, six months and nineteen days. Conrad Dietrich died Dec. 18, 1841, aged seventy-eight years, eleven months, seven days. They are both buried in the Lutheran cemetery. The tombstone inscription states that they were the parents of nine children—four sons and five daughters. The names of four children only could be ascertained as follows: (1) George settled in the vicinity of Scranton, Catawissa or Tamaqua, Pa., where he manufactured bricks. He was born Aug. 4, 1813, was married, and had a number of children. (2) Jacob, mentioned below. (3) John married Henry Fry of Reading. (4) Conrad is mentioned below.

(1) Jacob Dietrich, son of Conrad, was born in Reading, and he made his home on Tenth street, south of Cherry. He was a laborer, and for many years was the operator of the Liggett & the Trinity Lumber mill on the Washington streets and there he, too, was laid to rest, but later his body with others was removed to the Lutheran cemetery. He married Abby Dieter, and to this union were born three sons and five daughters, namely: (1) Savannah m. Amos Giley, of Reading. (2) Carrie married H. H., and was buried in Schuylkill county, where he had settled and reared a family. He had a son, Al. Dietrich. (4) Catharine m. Fred Ulrich Hains. (5) Susan (born in Reading Dec. 5, 1835) resides in Reading. She m. Charles Houck, a native of Germany, who was a saddler in Reading. (6) David married Eliza M. (born at Reading, but removed to New Oxford). Their children were: James, George, David, John, William, Margaret, and Caroline. (7) Mary died young. (8) John died young.

(2) Conrad Dietrich, son of Conrad, was born at the big dam at Reading, July 26, 1798, and was confirmed in the Lutheran church. He was engaged as a paper manufacturer in Snyder county for many years, but his plant was destroyed by fire in 1840. In later life he moved back to Reading, where he died Feb. 12, 1861, aged sixty-two years, six months, sixteen days, and was buried in Aulenbach cemetery, by the side of his father. He was married twice, first to Mrs. Rachel Rose, he followed her when she married thirdly. Their children: (1) Henry left the parental home when twenty-two years of age, while the father lived in Snyder county, and his whereabouts were unknown for twenty years, when one afternoon, to the surprise of all, he came home only to remain one night and to leave without counting, and finally one where he had lived or or was going. It was afterward learned that he was comfortably situated in Wilmington, Del., and in later years he paid annual visits to his brother, William H., in Reading. By his first wife he had a son, Reuben, who lived at Mechanicsburg, in Cumberland county, Pa. (2) Mary m. Rev. C. H. Keller, a State senator from 1859 to 1862. (3) Adam.
tered, admitted him as a partner, under the firm name of Howard & Dietrich. Some years afterward Mr. Howard retired from business, and Mr. Dietrich entered a partnership with Mr. Patton under the firm name of Dietrich & Patton, and for twenty years they conducted a successful business at the corner of Seventh and Penn streets, where Rosenbaum’s hall now stands. Later Mr. Dietrich conducted a grocery store at the corner of Ninth and Robeson streets. Since 1895 he has been the proprietor of the “Veteran Hotel” of Reading, located at the northeast corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets. In 1860 he married Hannah Brobst, of Reading, who died Oct. 17, 1900, after a married life of more than forty years. She is buried in the Dietrich family plot in Aulenbach’s cemetery. Seven children were born to this union: (1) Martha m. George Snyder, of Reading, and has children—Howard, Chester, George, Bert, Martha, Clara and Hannah. (2) Emma died in infancy. (3) Emma m. Elmer Stott, of Reading, and their children are Eugene, Bessie, Harry, Frank and Wallace. (4) William H., Jr., is mentioned below. (5) Annie died unmarried aged twenty-one years. (6) George F. (born at Reading, Dec. 6, 1868) is associated with his father in the management of the “Veteran Hotel.” In 1907 he was the first assistant for the office of high sheriff, and received the highest vote ever given a Republican candidate for that office. He m. Annie Jenkins of Pottsville. (7) Clara married James Yost, a farmer of Spring township, whose record appears in these volumes.

He is the son of William H. Dietrich, Jr., son of William H. Sr., and proprietor of the “Muhlenberg Mansion” at No. 1537 North Ninth street. Reading, was born at No. 145 Mulberry street, Reading. His early education was obtained in the public schools of the city, and after leaving school he was employed at Mohr’s hat factory for two years with eight months of clothing for the same firm. In the restaurant at No. 503 Penn street, where he remained a number of years. He was next manager for William H. Reist’s cafe, Mr. Reist being proprietor of the “Hotel Penn.” There he continued until 1893, when he assumed the proprietorship of the “Hyde Park” Hotel, in Muhlenberg township, which he conducted with great success for two and one-half years. In October, 1895, he took charge of the Reading “Fair Ground Hotel,” which he carried on until April 1, 1899, when he assumed control of his present stand, where he enjoys a large patronage. He is a successful hotel man genial and popular with his guests, and has many warm friends in Reading.

Mr. Dietrich is connected with a number of social and fraternal organizations, among them being: B. P. O. E. Lodge No. 115, Reading; Reading Aerie, No. 66, F. O. E. (IV) S. E. Castle No. 391, of Hyde Park; Neversink Fishing Club; Junior Fire Company; Juniata County Fishing Club; Old Bachelors’ Club; Marion Fire Company. In his religious faith he is a believer in the doctrines of the Reformed Church.

On March 12, 1891, Mr. Dietrich married Miss Annie Leitheiser, of Quartzville, Pa. Feb. 10, 1906, died April 11, 1906, aged thirty-seven years, two months, 3 days, and they had one son Wilson F. (born Sept. 8, 1893).

REV. GEORGE BORNEMANN, the only priest of St. Paul’s Roman Catholic Church for a continuous period of forty-two years, and most affectionately recognized and spoken of by the community, was born Feb. 9, 1838, at Lingen, in the province of Hanover, Germany, Oct. 5, 1838. He is the son of William Bornemann, a rope-maker, who died at Reading in 1884, aged eighty-two years, and Louisa Rolfs, his wife, who died while he was still a young boy. He emigrated to the United States when fifteen years of age, and after residing for three years in Reading, he was specially educated for the priesthood in Germany and the United States, graduating from St. Vincent’s College at Latrobe, Pa., in 1862, and then extended his ecclesiastical studies at St. Charles Seminary, in Philadelphia. He was regularly ordained as a priest in 1865 by Bishop (afterward Archbishop) Wood. After serving as assistant priest at Philadelphia for a year, and as priest at Newcastle, Del., for the same period, he became pastor at St. Paul’s Church in Reading in 1867, and this large and growing parish he has served most devotedly and successfully for forty-two continuous years, a record unique in the diocese. His communicants have come to number three thousand. During his ministrations the church property at Ninth and Walnut streets, for religious, educational and charitable purposes, has become the largest at Reading, evidencing in a high degree his superior judgment and executive ability.

GEORGE HENDEL, hat manufacturer at Reading for over thirty-five years, was born in 1835, at Adamstown, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he received his education in the local public schools and then learned the hatter’s trade in his father’s factory. He continued in his father’s employ until 1860, when the latter formed a co-partnership with him and his brother John, and they traded together under the name of Levi Hendel & Sons for four years. The partnership was then dissolved, and he and his brother John located at St. Lawrence, in Berks county, and there they carried on business until January, 1867, when they removed to Reading, having erected a plant on Kleckle’s Mill Creek. Their business lasted for three years and then dissolved the partnership. In 1871, he and his brothers. John and Henry B., formed a co-partnership under the name of John Hendel & Bros. and purchased the Wyomissing Woolen Mills, situated on Fifth street below Laurel, which they remodeled and supplied with superior machinery for manufacturing wool hats, and he continued in the firm until 1895, when he sold his interest to his brother John.

In 1878, Mr. Hendel erected a wool hat factory along the Wyomissing creek, near Shillington, and he and his brother John carried on business there until 1895 under the name of Hendel Brothers; and in 1896, they erected another wool hat factory along the Cacoosing creek at Montello, which they operated under the name of Hendel Hat Company until 1895; then he purchased the interest of his brother in the two plants. The former was converted into a fur hat factory, and it has since been carried on by him and his two sons, trading as George Hendel & Sons, employing about 225 hands. The wool hat business in the Montello factory was continued by him and his two sons as the Hendel Hat Company until 1901, when they dismantled the plant and removed the machinery to a factory at Tenth and Oak streets, Reading, and here they have continued the manufacture of wool hats under the same name until the present time, employing about one hundred hands.

Mr. Hendel was made a Free Mason in Chandler Lodge, No. 227, and he is a member of DeMolay Company, No. 9. He has been a Republican for fifty years; and in religious matters identified with the Evangelical church since 1864. He was married to Catharine Mohn, daughter of William Mohn and Polly Gerner his wife, by whom he has two sons: John R. and William H. His wife died in 1865, and his son John R. Hendel, a hat manufacturer at Adamstown for many years. [See sketch of his older brother John Hendel in this publication.]
MAHLON E. WEIDNER, director of the National Bank of Boyertown, proprietor of the Manayunk Flour Mills, in Amity township, and extensive land owner, is a member of an early settled Berks county family.

(1) David Weidner, son of Adam of Oley township, located in Amity township prior to 1792, and settled on a farm now (1909) owned by Matthias Levengood, but which at that time was much more extensive, including the adjoining property now owned by Anthony Albright. On the Levenood farm was a private burial ground which since 1900 has been under cultivation. Here were buried David Weidner and wife, and some of their children and grandchildren. David Weidner was a farmer by occupation. He married Hannah Moser. In the federal census of 1790 he is recorded as having a family consisting of eight persons: the parents, four sons under sixteen years of age, and two daughters.

(II) Jacob Weidner, son of David, in the federal census report of 1790 is recorded the head of a family consisting of eight persons: the parents, four sons under sixteen years of age, and two daughters. Jacob Weidner married Barbara Weidner, and their children were: Peter; Jacob lived in Amity township, where he owned a small farm now the property of a Fry, and he was discharged from service (No issue); Susanna m. a Romiche, and had a blind daughter, Susanna; Elizabeth m. Tobias Fisher; and one whose name is not given. Jacob Weidner owned the farm on the Swamp road in Amity which later became property of John Swan.

(IV) Lewis (Ludwig) Weidner, son of Jacob, was born Dec. 4, 1787, and died Nov. 9, 1847. He was a weaver by trade, and had a shop in Amityville on a lot now owned by John Bertolett. He also owned a small farm at Amityville, which became the property of his son Charles. He and his wife Elizabeth were both Baptists (1791, 1, 1792, and died May 21, 1844), and they are both buried west of the present church at Amityville. They were members of the Reformed congregation. Peter Weidner and his wife became the parents of twelve children, namely: Harriet m. Jared Jones. Charles and Samuel were twins. Nellie m. Charles Goodman. Sallie m. John Lundy, and they moved to Greensdale, Ind., where both died. Lewis (Ludwig) is mentioned below. Anna, born Jan. 6, 1823, m. in 1825, Christopher Renz, a native of Germany, who died Nov. 10, 1876, aged ninety years. The death of Charles, and his wife, Albert, Annie m. Laura and Mrs. Renz now lives with her daughter Laura, widow of Edward G. Davis, of Reading. Peter was next in the order of birth. Aaron, born 1826, died 1847. Elizabeth m. William Schaeffer. Catharine is the widow of Samuel DeHart, of Bloomsburg, Pa. Lydia died aged nineteen years.

(V) Lewis (Ludwig) Weidner, son of Peter, was born in Amity township, Dec. 27, 1820, and died Aug. 25, 1907. He was a laborer and post fence maker, being an expert at the latter. In the possession of his son, Mahlon E., is the following document relating to one of Amos Weidner, 1883. Lewis Weidner was honorably and legally discharged from all the duties enjoined of him as a member of the National Blues attached to the Washington Battalion of Volunteers, within the Second Brigade, 6th Division of P. M. Given under my hand and seal the day and year above written. J. W. Rhoads, Capt." Lewis Weidner was a private in Company B, 205th Pa. V. I., enlisting Aug. 24, 1864, to serve one year. On June 2, 1865, he was honorably discharged. During the latter years of his life he lived with his son Mahlon E. and from the time of the Spanish-American war in 1898, to which he had been appointed an Adjutant, he served his country in time of war. Lewis Weidner married Hannah Engel (daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth), born Oct. 1, 1820, died Dec. 3, 1896, and both she and her husband are buried at Amityville, where they were Reformed members of the Amityville Church. Their children were: Mahlon E.; Francis, of Amityville; George, who died in 1867; Bertolo, of Pottstown; and John, of Reading. Lewis Weidner was principally occupied with the wheelwright's trade. He had served eighteen months of his time when the Civil War broke out. He enlisted Sept. 30, 1861, at Lebanon, Pa., in Company B, 93d Pa. V. I., under Capt. John E. Arthur (afterward Col. Arthur), and was assigned to the Army of the Potomac and served principally with the Sixth Army Corps. While with the regiment (which was one of the fighting regiments from Pennsylvania) he participated in the battles of Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, Seven Days Retreat, Malvern Hill, Chantilly, Harper's Ferry, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Mary's Heights, Salem Heights, Gettysburg, Mine Run, and the Wilderness. In the last mentioned battle Mr. Weidner was wounded in the right fore arm (May 5, 1864), and was confined eight months in the Carver General Hospital, Washington, D. C. He was first discharged Oct. 21, 1864, and re-enlisted and served as a Veteran Volunteer Jan. 1, 1864, and was promoted for merit to corporal, and was honorably discharged at Carver General Hospital Jan. 27, 1865, because of wounds received in battle.

After the war Mr. Weidner learned the milling trade at Solomon Rhoads' mill, serving an apprenticeship of two years. He then worked two years more as a journeyman at the same place and eight years at a neighboring mill. In the spring of 1879 he took possession of the Manayunk Flour Mill, which he had bought in 1876 and which he had built in 1878, and he has successfully conducted this mill for thirty years. In 1884 he entirely remodeled the mill, and installed the roller process, and since then has made many other improvements, having one of the most up-to-date mills in the county, with a capacity of two and one-half barrels an hour. There is a tract of sixty acres of land with this mill, on which in 1899 Mr. Weidner built a new barn 43 x 70. The large stone house was built in 1807 by Othniel R. Sands. In 1893 Mr. Weidner purchased the Amity mill, also on Manayunk, and named it the Glen Alpine Flour Mill. It also has the roller process, and the capacity of two barrels per hour. To this mill belongs thirty acres of land. On this property was a stone mill erected in 1745, but the present brick mill replaced it in about 1840. This mill is conducted by Mr. Weidner and his brother Francis, under the firm name of F. E. Weidner & Brother. The flour is shipped to Philadelphia. Mr. Weidner owns the Ezekiel Rhoads farm of 123 acres in Amity township, which he purchased in October, 1907. He is a director of the National Bank of Boyertown, in which position he was elected in 1896. He is one of the substantial and foremost citizens of the township, and wields great influence in public affairs.

In politics Mr. Weidner is a stanch Republican, and from 1866 to 1902 served as a member of the county committee, giving efficient and faithful service. He has, however, always refused to hold office. Fraternally he belongs to Camp No. 43, Union Veteran Legion, of Reading; Post No. 16, G. A. R., of Reading; and the F. O. S. A., No. 213, of Amityville.

On Sept. 25, 1885, Mr. Weidner married Amanda Shidler, daughter of Solomon Shidler, who in later years lived near Republic, Ohio, where they died and were buried. They became the parents of eleven children: Mary Ellen m. Irwin Reinert; George is deceased; Grant C. died in infancy; Emma m. Marks Boyer, and both are deceased; William H. is a miller at the Glen Alpine Mill; Anna m. George Delcamp; Louisa m. Jeremiah Hine; Irwin died in infancy; John is a farmer in Amity; James operates the Manatawny roller mills; and Sallie died in infancy.

ISRAEL CLEAVER, M. D., a prominent physician of Reading, represents a family that dates back to the time prior to the Revolution. The first of the name in Pennsylvania of whom record is found was Derrick Cleaver.

(I) Derrick Cleaver was twice married. By his first wife he had one child. By his second marriage he had seven children, one of whom was also named John, and he became the great-grandfather of Dr. Cleaver.

(II) John Cleaver was also married twice. By the first union were born Joseph, John, and Ruth. On Nov. 2, 1767, John Cleaver was married by Dr. Joseph Miller, to Catherine Kline, and they had seven children, Peter, Derrick, Isaac, Jonathan, Martha, Rebecca, and one that died in infancy. John Cleaver died in 1790, and his widow married Benedict Martz. After about forty years of wedded life she was again left a widow, and survived Mr. Martz ten years. She died April 14, 1841, aged ninety-two years, eleven months and seventeen days. John Cleaver was a Quaker in religious belief, but as he married out of the church he was dropped from the Society.

(III) Jonathan Cleaver was born in 1785, in Earl township, Berks county, Pa. Of their four children Mildred died at the age of four years; Wilbur M. is the office manager of J. C. McCray & Co., New York City; Hattie M. J. Freeman Boas, office employe of the Reading Hardware Company; and Helen Guthrie is at home, a graduate of the Reading high school and a teacher in Snyder School of Philadelphia. Much earthly property belonged to the M. E. Church. Fraternally Dr. Cleaver is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 579, F. & A. M., and of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, Pennsylvania Commandery. He is also a member of Gen. William H. Keim Post No. 76, G. A. R., while his loyal interest in the school of his early days is evinced by his connection with the local alumni association of the University of Pennsylvania.

EDWIN L. MOSER was for many years at the head of the drafting room of the motive power department of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, located at Reading, Pa. He learned his trade in the establishment where he was until recently engaged, and with the exception of two years spent in Philadelphia was connected therewith until May 1, 1909. He was born in Reading June 5, 1865, son of Solomon and Catharine (Bertolet) Moser. In 1862 John and Catharine Bertolet, grandfather of Edwin L., was a farmer in Baums-town. Berks county, during the first half of the nineteenth century. He died there in 1863.

Solomon L. Moser, son of George, was engaged at various times as a carpenter, cabinet maker, organ builder and patternmaker in Reading. He married Catherine De Turck, daughter of Jacob De Turck, who for many years owned and operated a fulling mill near Baumstown. To Mr. and Mrs. Moser were born the following children: Calvin De T.; Amanda E.; Emma M.; Howard L. and Henry I. died in infancy; and Edwin L.

Edwin L. Moser was educated in the public schools of Reading, and during the winter of 1881-82 taught school, in Spring township, this county. From April, 1885, until August, 1883, he was in the employ of the Reading Hardware Co., and on Sept. 1, 1883, began his apprenticeship to the machine's trade in the Philadelphia & Reading shops. He served his time in the machine shop and drawing room, and in what was then the primitive nucleus of the testing department. Finishing his trade in 1887, he continued intermittently in the shops and the drawing room until transferred to the latter in August, 1888. There he remained, engaged as a draftsman, until June 1, 1891, when he was advanced to the position of chief draftsman. Upon the resignation of Samuel F. Prince, Jan. 1, 1892, Mr. Moser was promoted to be mechanical engineer, and was thus engaged until Nov. 15, 1897, when he entered the position of mechanical engineer having been abolished—where he remained until May 1, 1909, when his health demanded his retirement from the confinement of office work.

Mr. Moser has been twice married. On May 24, 1888, he m. Sallie Schaeffer, a native of Berks county, who died May 12, 1905. To this union were born two children. Esther A. and Ruth K. On Nov. 27, 1907, he m. (second) Elizabeth R. Brunner, daughter of Hon. David B. and Amanda (Rhoads) Brunner. Mr. Moser is a Lutheran in religious belief, and served three years as deacon of Grace Church. Fraternally he is a member of Rodeo Lodge, No. 553, A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also a member of Washington Camp, No. 61, P. O. S. of A.; and of Mt. Penn Council, No. 495, Royal Arcanum.

DANIEL J. DRISCOLL, manufacturer of seamless steel tubing, was born at Reading Dec. 25, 1862. He received his education in the schools of the city and in the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. Resigning from the navy he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company as a clerk in the office of the superintendent of motive power. After serving there several years he secured a position in the large establishment of J. H. Sternbergh, manufacturer of nuts and bolts, for the purpose of learning the business, and he continued with Mr. Sternbergh until 1887, when he established a plant of his own at Auburn, in Schuylkill county, along the Schuylkill river, twenty-five miles north of Reading.

Mr. Driscoll operated this plant in a successful manner until 1896, when he abandoned the further manufacture of nuts, bolts, rivets and bar-iron, and sub-sisted for the manufacture of seamless steel tubes, his establishment being the first plant of the kind in the United States to manufacture seamless tubing from American steel. His product was highly appreciated by the Navy Department of the National government, and he came to supply a considerable proportion of seamless steel tubing in the build-up of the monster war-ships for the new navy. He continued to operate the plant until 1902, when it was absorbed and abandoned by the United States Steel Corporation. However, in one year, Mr. Driscoll succeeded in repurchasing the plant, and after installing new machinery remedied the manufacture of seamless steel tubes. Since then he has carried on a large business under the name of Delaware Seamless Tube Company.

In 1888 Mr. Driscoll married Laura B. May, daughter of Isaac May, and Mary Sterling, his wife, of Shamokin, Pa., and they have four children: Marie, James, Caroline and Elizabeth. They are members of St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Driscoll has established a superb country home, "Doneraile," in Berks county, on a bluff along the west bank of the Schuylkill river, a short distance beyond the Berkshire Club, which commands a fine view of the river and the surrounding country. He is president of the Brandywine National Bank, and a trustee of St. Joseph's Hospital, both of Reading.

Daniel Driscoll, whose father was born in 1824, in County Cork, Ireland, and was an infant about a year old when his parents emigrated to America, locating at Pottsville, in Schuylkill county, Pa. He learned the trade of machinist in the large works of Haywood & Snyder, and continued with them until 1848, when he removed to Reading and entered the machine shop of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company. He worked continuously for this company in the same shop for nearly thirty-two years, when he was transferred from County Cork (Doneraile), Ireland, in 1840, and settled at Philadelphia. They had thirteen children, of whom the following reached maturity: Catharine, who became a sister in the Notre Dame Convent at Cincinnati, Ohio; Agnes, a graduate of the Reading Girls' high school and teacher in the public school; Jean; to Matthew J. Buckley, mechanical superintendent of the U. S. Mint at Philadelphia; Daniel J.; and another son, John A., who was educated for the priesthood in St. Charles Seminary at Overbrook, Pa., ordained as a priest in 1892, and stationed at St. Mark's Church, where he was slain four years afterward. [See succeeding sketch.] Mr. Driscoll's grandfather, also named Daniel, was born and brought up in County Cork. He was married to Mary Conway, of the same county. Their families were prominent in that section of Ireland.

Rev. Driscoll's wife was born in Cornwall, England, emigrated to America when a young man, and settled in Schuylkill county, afterward removing to Shamokin, where he became a prominent mine operator.

REV. JOHN A. DRISCOLL, Catholic priest at Bristol, Pa., for a time, was born at Reading Oct. 14, 1867, and received his preliminary education at the Convent of the Immaculate Heart at Reading, where he remained until he was thirteen years old. He was then a pupil at the Boys' high school until he was sixteen, when he entered the Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo, at Overbrook, Pa., for the purpose of preparing to enter the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church. He devoted nine years to his studies in the most assiduous manner, and finally reaped the reward of his great industry and perseverance by being ordained a priest of the Cathedral in Philadelphia on June 11, 1892. He celebrated his first Mass at St. Peter's Church in Reading on the following day. Shortly afterward he was given the charge at St. Patrick's Church, in Norristown, but his health failed, and he was transferred to St. Mark's Church, at Bristol, where he continued in the active and successful performance of his duties, winning the great love and confidence of the members of his congregation, for nearly four years, when his physical condition was so weakened and he himself so incapacitated that he was relieved of his charge and returned to the home of his mother at Reading (the house in which he was born). There he died on Tuesday, Nov. 24, 1896.

The following extract from an interesting account of his funeral was taken from the Philadelphia Times: "On Thanksgiving evening the remains of Father Driscoll lay in state at St. Peter's Church, where several thousand persons took a last view of the familiar features then cold in death. . . . Members of the T. A. B. Society acted as guard of honor during the night. On Friday morning Solemn Requiem Mass was chanted by Rev. Thomas, prefect of St. James Parish, West Philadelphia, celebrant; Rev. Michael McCabe, of St. Agatha's, deacon; Rev. J. Kieran, of St. Paul's, sub-deacon; and Rev. P. J. McMahon, master of ceremonies, who had been his classmate, and were ordained with him at the Cathedral. Absolution of the body was pronounced by Right Rev. Bishop Prendergast, of the Philadelphia diocese, after which an impressive sermon was delivered by Rev. P. J. Garvey, D. D., of St. James Church, Philadelphia, a lifelong friend of Father Driscoll's who took for his text.
Verses, 8, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14 and 15, Chapter IV, Book of Wisdom.

"For a venerable old age is not that of long time, nor counted by the number of years, but the understanding of a man is gray hairs.

"And a spotless old age.

"He pleased God, and was beloved, and living among sinners he was translated.

"He was taken away, lest wickedness should alter his understanding, or deceit beguile his soul.

"Being made perfect in a short space, he fulfilled a long time.

"For his soul pleased God, therefore he hastened to bring him out of the midst of iniquities, but the people see this and understand not, nor lay up such things in their hearts.

"That the grace of God and His mercy is with His Saints, and that He has respect to His chosen.

"He paid a glowing tribute to the well-known nobility of soul and high intellectual qualities possessed by the departed young clergyman.

"There were a number of religious societies in attendance, and upward of eighty clergymen participated in the solemn, impressive ceremony, which truly manifested their great love for this promising and admirable young priest, and their deep sorrow at his untimely departure."

JACOB KNABB, in whose death, which occurred Jan. 30, 1889, at his home in Reading, this city and section lost a man of more than ordinary distinction, was born in Union township, Berks county, Aug. 21, 1817, son of Jacob, Sr., and Hannah (Yoder) Knabb, and grandson of Michael and Eve Magdalena (Seltzer) Knabb.

Michael Knabb, the grandfather, was a native of Bavaria, born at Pfeledersheim, in the Palatinate, April 17, 1771. About 1787, in company with his two brothers, John and Peter, he came to America, and settled near the Exeter township line, in Oley township, Berks county, Pa., on the farm now occupied by Samuel B. Knabb. The old house was burned in 1816-17, and the same year the present house was erected. A family cemetery on the farm contains the remains of the three brothers and many of their descendents.

Michael Knabb married, on March 11, 1755, Eve Magdalena Seltzer, only child of Jacob and Elizabeth Seltzer, of Heidelberg township, and they became the parents of eight children, Nicholas, Peter, Jacob, Daniel, Susan, Sarah, Catharine and Mary. Michael Knabb died June 17, 1778, in the sixty-second year of his age, and was laid to rest in the family cemetery above mentioned.

Jacob Knabb, son of Michael, was born in Oley township in 1771. Soon after his marriage, in 1800, he moved to Union township, where he prospered as a farmer. He died in February, 1825. In 1800 he married Hannah Yoder, daughter of John Yoder, and a descendant of John (Hansel) Yoder, a Huguenot, who on account of religious persecution emigrated from Switzerland in the early part of the eighteenth century, and went first to England, thence to America, and finally to Pennsylvania, in Oley township, Berks county. From John (Hansel) Yoder, Mrs. Knabb's descent is through John (2) and Daniel. To Jacob and Hannah (Yoder) Knabb were born six children: Daniel, George, Jacob, Margaret, Catharine and Hannah. The mother died in August, 1824, and Jacob, the subject of this sketch, was but seven years old when his parents died. Until he was about eleven he attended the pay schools of the township, making his home with an elder sister. He apprenticed himself to learn the printer's trade under George Getz, of the Berks and Schuylkill Journal, and remained with Mr. Getz for a number of years, and was employed as a printer. In 1845 he was engaged in printing in Reading, and in Harrisburg. In the latter city he worked on the Harrisburg Telegraph, where the State printing was done, and he held the position of foreman for a time. In 1840, with Mr. J. Lawrence Getz, he began the publication of a weekly paper, the Reading Gazette, but in 1843 he sold his share, and the next year found him in Harrisburg, publishing the Clay Bugle, a campaign paper. Later he came back to Reading and became the editor of the Berks and Schuylkill Journal, some time later becoming also its proprietor. This he continued for about forty-five years. In 1866 he associated two partners with himself, and the firm became J. Knabb & Co. Three years later (1869) they published the Reading Daily Times, and some years afterward the Evening Dispatch, and the two papers were consolidated under the name of Reading Times and Dispatch, and published daily and weekly. Prosperity attended the venture, and in 1881 Mr. Knabb erected the substantial four-story brick building, which became the paper's home.

Mr. Knabb's mature life was devoted to the interests of Reading, and he was particularly prominent in all public movements which contributed to the spread of education. The Reading Library received his assistance for many years, and for many years he was its president. Up to the time of his death. During the Civil war he was a leader in the call for services at Gettysburg in 1863, and after the battle of Gettysburg he served in Maryland as a member of Company C, 42d P. V. I.

Mr. Knabb cast his first vote in support of the Whig party, and when the Republican party was formed he became one of its active supporters, acting for some years as chairman of the county Republican committee. In 1860 he was a delegate to the Chicago Convention from the Berks district, which nominated Abraham Lincoln for President. He was postmaster of Reading under that administration, and in 1876 he was Presidential elector from this Congressional district and cast his ballot for President Hayes.

In 1878 Mr. Knabb, with a friend as a companion, made an extended tour through Europe, and his letters, published from time to time in his paper, were so full of interest that he was urged to publish them in book form, but with his natural modesty he declined. In 1858 he published the first directory of Reading.

Mr. Knabb was twice married. In 1846 he married Ellen C. Andrews, daughter of Machiavel Andrews. During the Civil war she was active in caring for soldiers in the local hospital, and was in charge of one of the duty stations of the hospital. She was a member of Christ Episcopal Church, and was a great friend of the poor and needy. Her death in 1875 was universally regretted. In 1879 Mr. Knabb married (second) Ellen M. Jameson, daughter of James and Mary (Worman) Jameson, the former a well-known and successful merchant at Reading. Mr. Knabb early became a communicant of the Episcopal Church, and served as vestryman many years. He held the confidence and good-will of all.

BRUNNER. The Brunner family is an old and honorable one in Berks county, and its representatives in each generation have been noted worthy, assuring its more prominent members being the late Hon. David B. Brunner, a representative from the Ninth Congressional district of Pennsylvania, and his brother William B. Brunner, now of Amity township, and both prominent in educational work.

Peter Brunner, a Palatinate from Erbach, a town noted for its vineyards, in the vicinity of Coblenz, on the Rhine, came to America on the ship "Albany" with 284 other passengers, landing at Philadelphia, Sept. 2, 1749. There were two men on board by the name of Peter Brunner and at the arrival in Philadelphia, one signed his name, and the other's name was written by a clerk. It is not likely that they were related, as they separated after landing. The one who signed his name went, soon after, to New Hanover, Montgomery Co., Pa., and settled there. He was unmarried when he came over, but must have married shortly after. About 1748 he moved to Douglass township, Berks county, and bought a farm along Iron Stone Creek. The deed was not recorded and the tax lists are missing prior to 1770, at which time his name appears on the tax list. By occupation he was a farmer and weaver, carrying on both for a number of years. He acquired considerable property. He sold his son William, Aug. 4, 1800, thirty-eight acres, sixty-three perches. In 1787 he served as a tax collector in Douglass township. It was customary in those days for families or neighbors to get together and set apart ground for burial purposes. In accordance with this custom, those residing in Douglass township set apart 8½ perches about one and one-half miles west of Little Oley for the burial place of Lutherans and Calvinists, and the road leading thereto was dedicated by John Keely, to Henry Yorsey, Sr., Jacob Keely, Sr., Peter Brunner and John Nagle for the consideration of six dimes Dec. 17, 1790. Peter Brunner was a Lutheran, and joined the church at New Hanover, continuing his membership there after his removal to Berks county. The first record of the family is the birth of his first child, Philip, Nov. 1, 1752, and his marriage to Mary Hanover, but the records are so badly worn it is impossible to trace his full connection with the church, but New Hanover was a Lutheran center. Peter Brunner had three sons and four daughters: Philip, born Nov. 1, 1752, was always a delicate child; William, born Dec. 3, 1753; George, born April 7, 1755; Christina Nagle; Elizabeth Wentzel; Maria Eagle; and Margaret Heilig. On Aug. 4, 1804, Peter Brunner made his will and gave all his property to his wife except sixteen bonds, amounting to 800 pounds. The wife died before 1808, and Peter's will was probated Oct. 16, 1812. He was highly corpulent and died in Pottstown. His will states: "The second crop was stricken with apoplexy. He was eighty-four years of age when he died in 1812, and he was buried in the Fritz Burying Ground which he had helped to provide.

William Brunner, son of Peter, was born Dec. 5, 1753, in New Hanover, and accompanied his father to Douglass township in 1765. Like his father he became a farmer in summer and a weaver in winter. The tax lists are missing for some years previous to 1778, when his name appears. In August, 1808, as stated above, he bought 38 A. 83 P. from his father. In 1806 he was assessed on 126 acres. In 1816 he owned 176 acres. He lived in Douglass township, Berks county, until the death of his father in 1812, when he sold his farm and moved to Pottsgrove (now Pottstown), where he continued to farm and weave. He was not satisfied with his place and surroundings at Pottsgrove, and one of his causes of discontent was that he thought his farm was not in the range in which the rains generally moved. He discovered that the people north of Monocacy Hill had more rain than in his locality, and he also noticed that on some occasions the rain clouds came from a northwesterly direction, and seemed to strike the hills between his place and that of his neighbors to the east and west of the Hill. He determined to sell and move north of Monocacy Hill where the people were blessed with a greater rain supply. Accordingly he sold his farm, and bought two tracts of John Kinze, about one and one-half miles north of Monocacy Hill for 2,600 pounds S. 2° 2' 3" Pennsylvania currency, June 29, 1819. The larger tract, owned by Mrs. Henrietta Hess in 1895, contains 92 A. 83 P. while the other was a tract of woodland a mile south of the one just mentioned. William Brunner was a man of restless nature. Taking a fancy to a farm, he thought that place the only place he could live in that he found himself the owner he saw another place still more desirable. As a result he made no less than eleven sales and purchases. He was fond of good horses, and took great pride in driving a lively team. When he lived on his farm in Amity, he purchased his groceries and other household supplies in Pottstown, and in winter when nearly seventy years old he would drive to Pottstown in his sleigh, standing up, and always at a good speed. His wife, Christina Witz, whom he married probably early in 1775, was born Jan. 15, 1754, and is buried at Pottstown, in the western part of the cemetery adjoining Immanuel Lutheran Church. At this time their only son, George, was living with him. After his wife's death Mr. Brunner desired to sell his farm and move to Catawissa, but he soon abandoned that notion and remained on his farm until his death. He died Jan. 18, 1823, and is buried at Catawissa, called "fever" (malaria) and a drought began, extending over the whole Schuylkill Valley, and lasting three years, known as "fever years." Many persons died of the disease, others were too sick to work, and on account of the drought the farms scarcely afforded a living. In one of these years William Brunner raised only fifteen bushels of corn. Land became valueless. He had paid one-third of the purchase money, and still owed about $4,400, but the property had depreciated so much that it was worth hardly one-half of the balance of the debt. On March 24, 1829, he sold his farm to John S. Hiester, a lawyer of Pottstown, for $2,375, and paid the mortgage on the property for that amount, and Mr. Brunner surrendered the farm as it was worth far less than he owed, the transfer being made in settlement of the mortgage. The son George, then rented the farm, and William remained there until he died, Dec. 13, 1823, when he was buried in Pottstown.

George Brunner, only child of William, was born March 6, 1775, in Douglass township. He passed his boyhood and youth on his father's farm on Iron Stone Creek. He worked on the farm and in the meantime learned the weaver's trade. At the age of twenty-four he married Elizabeth Wentzel, daughter of William, of Pottstown, and they settled at Pottsville, in the country village. He was utterly unlike his father. The latter with his restless disposition was always full of life and energy, but George was quiet, with little energy and ambition, and could be easy and contented in any surroundings. His father endeavored in vain to arouse him. While in Pottstown he met and married about 1804, Rebecca Knauer (for whose grandfather, Knauer-town, Chester county, was named). This was a most singular match. He was very slender and had an air of corpulency; he was quiet and slow, while she was positive, quick to discern and was a most successful business woman. Many of their circumstances may be inferred from the story of one of their changes of abode in Pottstown. Houses were scarce, and they were obliged to move on a certain day. No house had been secured, but after the furniture was loaded on the wagons, he heard of an empty house, and went and rented it. In 1819 he moved from Pottstown with his father to Amity, and when the latter sold the home to Mr. Hiester, George and his wife rented it. They prospered slowly, but times brightened and they debated the advisability of repurchasing the farm. Their four children were born here, and Rebecca planned that the eldest should continue the weaving and the younger boys the farm. She and her daughter would do the house work and spin, and George would do the weaving. This succeeded so well that in 1827 the farm was bought back for $2,300, about one-third of the original price. Thus they continued to thrive slowly. In spite of George's quiet acceptance of conditions there were some points on which he was adamant. When Rebecca's relations, who lived in Chester county and spoke nothing but English, came to visit she stayed away from the house. While he never expressed any displeasure at the visitors he was exceedingly shy of English-speaking people, never in the room and wearily Basics in that language, and as soon as the "besuch" was over he would fall asleep again and much relieved. His wife was a woman who enjoyed company, and was a good talker and very pleasant to meet.
When his son David was married and purchased a property south of the home farm, the late owner claimed a quantity of hay that had evidently been included in the sale, threatening to haul it away. To do this he would have been obliged to go through Mr. George Brunner’s farm. Mr. Brunner held a shot-gun and fired it off. He resolved that if any person attempted to drive through his yard with a hay wagon he would arm himself with a pitchfork, guard his gate. The hay was not molested.

Mr. Brunner was a strict and attentive Lutheran, belonging at Amityville, though he owned a good carpenter’s trade, which he sold, and followed the ministry, and usually was passed by the family at Weavertown, and as regularly refused the invitation to ride. In politics he was a Democrat, and was often an enthusiastic worker at the polls on election day. Though not a strong man he enjoyed good health, and died of the infirmities of old age June 30, 1855. His widow lived with her daughter Mrs. Moyer at Baumstown, where she died of dropsy Nov. 12, 1859. Both are buried at Amityville. They had four children: (1) Mary married John Moyer and lived at Baumstown. (2) John is mentioned in full below. (3) Samuel was a strong, industrious man, but he cared little for books, and made all his calculations mentally. He married Rebecca Yorgey and they had a son, George, who now lives at Pottstown. (4) David Brunner, third son of George and Rebecca, was left in Samuel’s care as a child, but wandered off, fell in a ditch, and but for the prompt action of his mother would have drowned. He later owned property south of his father’s, but selling this moved to Fox Hill, where his barn burned. This he rebuilt, sold the property and settled in Amityville. He had great powers of endurance. He was of kindly disposition, and rarely was angered. His wife, Caroline Yorgey, had education, but was a great talker. They had no children.

John Brunner, eldest son of George and Rebecca, was born Aug. 23, 1807, at Pottsgrove. In 1819 the family moved to Amity, where he worked on the farm. He was well educated for the times. From a Mr. Goodman in Oley he learned the carpenter’s trade, and also the wheelwright’s and millwright’s trades, working as a journeyman until 1833. In the spring he moved to Greshville, and began his trade on his own account. After living there two years he purchased his farm of George Dray for $700 (1837). There in 1840 he married Mary, the daughter of John and Sarah Bachman, a strong and vigorous man, and was industrious and progressive. The handling of heavy timbers and fitting together the frame work of a large barn was tedious and laborious, and he decided all this could be avoided if the framing was done on scientific principles. The braces and oblique pieces were the difficulties, so he took his arithmetic and looked up square root, and in a short time he learned to frame the short and long braces. He was the most scientific carpenter in the country, and his reputation spread far and wide. He was not only skilled in carpentry, but could do fine and artistic work, turning clouded glasses and bowls, and his commercial success was due to his more energetic nature. In his younger days he made a cymbal which in form, finish and ornamentation compared very favorably with those made by skillful manufacturers. He was a man of good judgment, and his opinions were always after mature deliberation. In his family he was a strict disciplinarian and he was very exact about sending his children to school. He himself knew the value of an education, and he gave his children all that could be obtained in the common schools, the term then being four months in the winter, and later he sent them to Freeland Academy, near Boyertown, where he was a trustee, and to Lebanon, to help him. His father helping them all he could financially and otherwise. In religion he was a Lutheran and he was a regular church goer, and in politics he was a staunch Democrat. When sixty years old he abandoned farming, his son Amos taking care of that, and William managed the carpentering business. At the age of seventy Mr. Brunner had a severe attack of dropsy, but recovered and for four years enjoyed fairly good health. He began to fail then, however, and died two years later, Jan. 2, 1884. One after another the children had married and left home, except Amos, who stayed with his parents, and they became homebound. In 1833 Mr. Brunner married Elizabeth Bachman, who was born March 26, 1814, and died Jan. 21, 1896, daughter of Daniel Bachman (born 1786) of Ruskcombmanor township. Mrs. Brunner was a kind-hearted, industrious woman, who did everything to keep her home bright and cheerful. She was a good wife, and the family was the happy time of the day, and was devoted to reading, study and the good times that a jolly congenial family thoroughly enjoys. There were seven children in the family: Mary; David B.; John B. taught ten terms of school, and is now a carpenter and builder in Reading; Frederick B., taught five terms at the Boyertown Burial Casket Factory.

Hon. David B. Brunner was born in Amity township, March 7, 1835. He attended the common schools, and was twelve years of age when he began his studies at Commercial High School, and the Reading Scientific Academy. He was apprenticed to his father’s trade, and at this he worked until he was nineteen. Feeling desires of a higher education he prepared himself for college with such assistance as he could procure from teachers of the neighborhood, and in the meantime he taught school. After a short course at Freeland Seminary he entered Dickinson College, in 1856, and taking the classical course, graduated in 1860. He then opened a private school in Amityville, which he conducted for two years. In 1862 he purchased the Reading Classic Academy, and conducted the school with the exception of short intervals until 1888, under the names of Reading Scientific Academy, and Reading Scientific and Business College. In 1869 he was elected superintendent of the common schools of the county, and filled the office with great acceptability for six years, becoming well known throughout the State as an educator. In 1880-81 he served as superintendent of the schools of Reading. In addition to educational work, Prof. Brunner took great interest in mineralogy, and in Indian relics. In 1851 he published “Indians of Berks County," a reliable account of the aborigines. He collected many relics for the finest collection in the State. He was a frequent contributor to newspapers on subjects in which he was interested, and he lectured in all parts of the county on scientific subjects. In 1877 he published an elementary work on English Grammar, which had a wide sale. He was a Lutheran in religious belief.

In 1861 Prof. Brunner married Amanda L. Rhoads, of Amity township. They had five children: Daniel E., who died in 1888; Elizabeth; Edgar A.; Mary; and Dr. Henry F., of No. 126 Oley street, Reading. In politics Prof. Brunner was an ardent Democrat, and on the subject of the tariff he held advanced views. On Aug. 29, 1888, he was nominated after a bitter contest over Daniel Ermentrout for member of Congress from the Ninth Congressional District of Pennsylvania. The confidence imposed he kept sacred, and although to be a remarkably able and useful representative and in 1890 was re-elected. He was a man of quiet and retiring disposition, and was more of a student than a politician. As a speaker he expressed readily what he had to say, but laid no claim to the art of oratory. He was impressive but had no great amount of personal magnetism. He made friends, however, whom he lost possessed of Christian manhood retained. He was a conscientious official, a true patriot and noble man. He died Nov. 29, 1903, and was buried in the Brunner lot at Amityville.

William B. Brunner, of Amity township, was born on the Brunner homestead, July 31, 1842. His Augustus R. Anderson, President of the Board of County Commissioners and a representative citizen of Mohnton, was born in Washington township, Berks county, March 21, 1865, son of Peter S. and Catherine (Ritter) Anderson.

The Anderson family to which Augustus R. belongs is of Irish origin, and is descended from James, a native of that name, who came to this country before the Revolution. He became a clerk in the Oley furnace and forge and is supposed to have boarded at "Woodchopper City." The little colony known by that name was located in Earl township, and sprang into existence about the middle of the eighteenth century.

James Anderson (2) was born in "Woodchopper City" in 1794, and lived to his ninetieth year, passing away in 1883. By trade, he was a shoemaker, but also farmed and was the owner of a tract of forty-four acres in Washington township. He married Miss Rebecca Sphohn, the daughter of Casper and Rebecca Sphohn, and to their six children were born as follows: Hettie m. Gideon Hartline, a farmer at Shanesville; Matilda m. Daniel Mosser, of Reading; Sophia m. Henry Franheiser, a farmer in Washington Township; Rebecca m. Jacob Seachrist, who moved to Fulton county, Ohio; Catherine m. Augustus Nally, Gilbertsville; James, a farmer and shoemaker of Washington Township, was twice married; Jeremiah, of New Berlinville, Pa., m. Miss Catherine Muthart; Peter S.; John, twin brother of Peter, a blacksmith at Shanesville, was twice married; and Jacob died aged forty-two.

Peter S. Anderson was born in Washington township, Sept. 24, 1835, and received most of his education in pay school in that section, with one year in the public schools. As a young man he learned the trade of wheelwright, at which he was employed but four and a half years, when he turned his attention to farming. In 1878 he moved to Reading and has since made his home there, except for a period of six years when he lived with his son Augustus at Mohnton. On Oct. 16, 1857, he married Catherine, daughter of Isaac and Anna (Mosser) Ritter, and they became the parents of: James, of Boyertown; a victim of the Boyertown calamity of Jan. 13, 1908, m. Miss Laura Reppert; Henry died aged nineteen; Audora, deceased, m. Harry Levan; Lizzie m. Albert Reifsnyder; Jacob R. m. Miss Sallie Foust, and he conducts a secondhand furniture and auction house at No. 299 North Ninth Street, Reading, Pa.; Augustus R. m. Miss Rosa H. Snyder; Anna L. and Wellington both died during the "spotted fever" epidemic, and were buried in the same John; Ida died of the same disease two weeks later; Irwin m. Miss Norah Kline, and is a barber in Reading, Pa.; Laura m. George J. of Reading, Pa.; Edwin m. Miss Emma Kelley, of Reading, Pa.; and Kate m. James Bailey of Reading.

Augustus R. Anderson was sent to the public schools during his boyhood, but left at an early age to go to work, and for five years was employed as clerk at the "Union House" in Reading, the beginning of his association with hotel life. The next four years he was in charge of the "Oley Line Hotel" at Lime Kiln, and in 1888 he engaged for a time as clerk in a hat store, and then was employed by a tea and coffee house. In 1891 he was ready to return to the hotel business and accordingly purchased the "Old Mill Hotel," which he later sold to Frank F. Mosser for two years. Results proved entirely satisfactory and April 27, 1893, Mr. Anderson bought the place and at once proceeded to remodel it, adding all the latest improvements. The house has twenty-eight rooms, is well managed and regularly patronized by a large proportion of the traveling public.

Mr. Anderson is essentially a public-spirited man and has done much to advance the comfort and pleasure of his fellow citizens. One of his progressive enterprises was to purchase the Body estate at Mohnton (now Mohnton), held at a high figure, and to erect on that site the upper station at Mohnton, a great accommodation. Just opposite this he built in the spring of 1906 the Mohnton Auditorium, standing near the trolley tracks. This building, 50x100 feet, is finished throughout in yellow pine and hard wood lumber, with all modern appointments, and is used for sociables, band rehearsals, basket ball, poultry shows, entertainments of all kinds. In 1907 there was added at a considerable expense an artistically equipped stage. Politically Mr. Anderson has made himself well known in Berks county, working in the Democratic ranks. He has served as township committeeman, county and state delegate, acting in the latter capacity at the convention where Hon. Robert E. Pattison was nominated for governor. In 1904 he was a candidate for director of the poor, and polled a large vote.

Mohnton became a borough in the spring of 1906, and Mr. Anderson was elected to the first council and chosen as the first President, thus evidencing his popularity in a community not fettered by party lines. On Nov. 5, 1908, he was elected to the office of County commissioner by the sanction of 16,204 voters, a compliment of no mean significance, and of this board he was also chosen president. He was one of the organizers of the Mohnton National Bank, which he has held a directorship since its founding. Socially Mr. Anderson is equally prominent and popular. He belongs to the F. O. E., Aerie No. 66, Reading; Eagles' Mountain Home; the K. of P. No. 485, of Mohnton; D. O. K. K. No. 37, of Reading; the I. O. O. F. No. 518, and Rebekah degree; the Knights of Columbus, Fidelia No. 5 (fall of Reading); to the P. O. S. A., No. 221, of Oley Line, also P. O. S. A. of A. Commandery Lexington No. 2, of Reading; the Liberty Fire Company No. 5, and the Schuylkill Camp Club of Mohnton.

On Nov. 25, 1892, Mr. Anderson married Miss Rosa H. Snyder, daughter of Jacob and Emma R. (Hartman)
Snyder, the former a landlord in Exeter township. Three children were born to them: Emma May; Wellington S., who died May 1, 1896, aged eleven years; and Edna.

DR. LEONARD G. HAIN. Among the members of the medical profession in Cumru township, Berks county, may be mentioned Dr. Leonard G. Hain, who has an extensive practice in the pleasant borough of Shillington. Dr. Hain was born Oct. 27, 1872, in Wernersville, Berks Co., Pa., son of John H. and Rebecca (Gerhard) Hain.

The land of the Hains was in Holland, where the name was spelled Heyn. Through various changes, Hayn, Hohen, Hein, Hean, it is now generally used Hain. At Delftshave (now Delfshaven), a suburb of Rotterdam, in 1500 lived Piet Heyn, with his wife and four sons. The eldest of whom was Piet Peterson Heyn, born Nov. 27, 1577. The latter was a strong-willed boy, bold and adventurous, full of energy, and he was looked upon by the townspeople with some concern. School masters would have none of him. After being expelled from school he went to Rotterdam, with the idea of working on board a fishing vessel. His master, a fisherman, and was often away on long voyages, so the elder son, who was not by any means the hopeless-ly bad boy many thought him, went home twice a week to see his mother. His old enemies, young relatives of the master who had expelled him from school, were against his father and him, and said to his master's wife: "You have to look after your own boys. He was stronger than they, and in spite of their numbers would always defeat them. One night these boys gathered their friends until they had fourteen to wait for the one lad coming home to his mother. Too many were in the secret, however, and Piet's younger brothers heard of it, but they could muster champions enough to make but nine on their side. The fourteen met Piet first, with sticks and stones, but the noisiest one of all he threw into the water, and by that time the brothers and their friends joined him, and together they completely routed the superior numbers, and would have done them violence, but Piet interposed and insisted that all shake hands. That same night he proved his courage and his ability to act quickly in an emergency by assisting in preventing a fire to spread, and the boy who had been looked upon as bad and unruly was lauded by all as the bravest boy in town. Shortly after this he went to sea, and became a prisoner on a Spanish vessel, being held a very long time. He then shipped as second mate on the man-of-war "Commander" under Commodore Jansroon Sael. Before 1601, with nine other war ships all under the command of Admiral Obdam, and English men-of-war under Admiral Lewison, they sailed to find the Spanish fleet. The Spaniards were beaten at great price, the first mate of the "Samson" being one of the many victims. In a storm a few days later the captor was swept overboard, and young Heyn became master of the ship. On his return home, after transacting business in Batagalco, he married Aetje De Reus, and settled in Rotterdam. He was not to be permitted to live quietly, however, and Piet's younger brother was as Vice-Admiral of the West Indian Company's fleet of men-of-war sent against the Spanish. Admiral Willeneus being in command. They captured San Salvador in April, 1626, and Piet Peterson Heyn became Admiral, and was sent after the Silver Fleet of Spain. After many adventures, and the capture of many Spanish vessels, in one battle taking twenty-six ships from the enemy, he eventually found and defeated the famous Silver Fleet (with 12,000,000 florins captured as booty) and carried his prizes triumphantly home to Holland, not honor were heaped upon him. At the battle off Dunkirk (Dunkirk), Friesland, in the North Sea, Admiral Heyn was killed June 20, 1629. His remains were interred in the Church of the Leanting Tower at Delft, and a magnificent tomb was erected there to his memory. In 1670 his statue, made of Uedelfanger stone, was unveiled by the people, and the King, his brother and many noblemen were present to pay tribute to his memory. His portrait hangs in the Admirals room in the Art Gallery at Amsterdam.

Two of the first settlers in the vicinity of Hain's Church, were a part of the 150 families who emigrated from Holland, and settled in 1722 or 1723 at Schoharie, N. Y. In 1729 some dissension caused a removal of several families to the Tulephocken valley, and others to Heidelberg township, Berks county. Among these first settlers we find the name of Hain, or Hohen or Hean. With great industry and self-denial these pio neers erected a house and founded a congregation of the German Reformed Church. The five acres (since increased to seven) belonging to Hain's Church were donated by George Hean (Hain) about 1830, and according to the custom of the time the church became known as Hain's, though its name was St. John's Church from the time it was dedicated under the protection of the "Triune God." Early pastors of this church were Pastors Boehm, Weisse and Schlatter, followed by the well known Rev. Jacob Lishy, of Lancaster county. George Hain, who gave the land for the church, died in 1746. His father, Dr. Leonard Gerhard, was born in Lower Heidelberg township, on the farm on which now stands the Wernersville Asylum. This was the original home of the Hains in this section. He was born Aug. 18, 1743, and died May 4, 1803. After a long and useful life, Mr. Hain owned the farm on which he is still known as "Hain's" by his possession, and was engaged in farming and cattle dealing, being known throughout Berks and Lancaster counties as a man of sterling worth. A staunch Democrat in politics, he was active in the ranks of his party, serving as a delegate to the Pennsylvania Planing Mill; Dr. Leonard Gerhard; Frederick, who cultivates the old homestead farm; and Leah, m. to Charles Hain, who is engaged in the hosiery business at Wernersville.

Dr. Leonard Gerhard Hain was reared upon his father's farm, on which he resided until entering college. His early education was obtained in the township schools, later he attended the Hughes Academy at Bellefonte, Centre Co., Pa., where he prepared for college, and in the fall of 1888 he entered Palatine College, at Leipsig, the preparatory course for medicine. Entering Jefferson Medical College in the fall of 1890, he graduated May 4, 1893, and on June 5th of the latter year engaged in practice at Shillington, being the first physician in the borough. He has gradually built up a large and lucrative practice in a densely settled community within a radius of five miles, and his skillful services have won for him the confidence and respect of the entire section. Personally the Doctor is pleasant and courteous, and as a consequence he is very popular with those who know him. He was one of the organizers and is a director of the Mohnton National Bank of Mohnton.

In political matters Dr. Hain is a Democrat, and for three years served as Almshouse physician. He is a member of Tetonnia Lodge No. 367, F. & A. M., Reading, Reading Commandery No. 7, K. T.; Rajah Temple, A. O. N. M. S., Reading; Reading Elks No. 115; Aerie No. 68, F. O. E., Reading; Independent Americans of Shillington; Knights of Pythias No. 385, Mohnton; and the Golden Eagle, of Kutztown. He and his family are Reformers, members of the Hain Church, of Lower Heidelberg.

On Nov. 12, 1892, Dr. Hain was married to Annie K. Miller, daughter of John H. and Sarah (Kinser) Miller, of Wernersville, Pa., and to this union have been born two children: Stuart J., who died in infancy; and Marguerite L.

J. MILTON MILLER is a member of the Berks County Bar. His grandfather, Jacob Miller, was a pioneer of this county and resided at Hamburg. Dr. Alexander Merkel Miller, father of J. Milton, was a physician of repute, and practised his profession at Tower City. He was elected to the Bar of Berks county, but died at the age of thirty-eight years, in 1877.

Mr. J. Milton Miller was born July 25, 1872, at Tower City. He attended public school for only a few years, and his education was continued after he was twenty years old in the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, Pa. In 1898 he was admitted to the Bar of Berks County, and later to the higher courts. On Jan. 27, 1897, he was married to Miss Sara G. Miller, daughter of J. Russell Miller, who was in the Reading Railroad service for more than forty years, and who was a Corporal of Company A, 88th Pa. V. I., serving in the Civil War for four years. J. Alexander, Richmond P. and Emily L. are the children of this marriage.

Mr. Miller is a Democrat in politics, a member of the Americus Club, and belongs to the Calvary Reformed Church, where he takes an interest in the church and Sunday school work.

D. NICHOLAS SCHAEFFER, one of the leading representatives of the legal fraternity in Berks county, Pa., and a resident of the city of Reading, was born Schaeffer, Aug. 17, 1859, in Kutztown, Berks county, son of David and Esther (Christ) Schaeffer.

His paternal great-grandfather was George Schaeffer, a native of Southern Germany, north of the Rhine, who, in 1750, with 30,000 other inhabitants of that country, emigrated to Pennsylvania. He settled upon a tract of land in Richmond township, which is now owned by his descendants, and there reared a family of five children, two sons and three daughters. This sturdy old pioneer passed to his eternal reward in 1792, after a long and useful life.

Philip Schaeffer, grandfather of D. Nicholas, was born on the old homestead farm in 1770, and became an agriculturist. He manufactured the first threshing machine in Berks county, and met with such success as to warrant him to continue in that line of work the remainder of his life. He was the progenitor of a family of twelve children: George; Peter; Isaac; Jonathan; Daniel; Philip; David; Sarah M. Jacob De Long; Elizabeth M. Solomon Yoder; Anna M. M. Isaac Merkle; and Esther M. Francis De Long. In politics he was a Democrat, while in religious affairs a member of the Reformed Church.

He was a soldier in the war of 1812, our second great conflict with Great Britain, and acquitted himself with credit. Mrs. Schaeffer died in 1849, and her husband in January, 1853, at the advanced age of eighty-three years.

David Schaeffer, the father of D. Nicholas, was born in Berks county, Oct. 3, 1820, and engaged in tilling the soil, after obtaining a good education in the common schools. He was deeply interested in the educational advancement of his community, and was one of the charter members of the Keystone State Normal School of Kutztown, of which he is still a trustee. In May, 1848, he married Esther Christ, who was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, in 1825. Five children blessed this union, and each was given the best educational advantages, and is now a credit to the city, Schuykill County, and the commonwealth. The names of the children, in order of birth, are as follows: Nathan is Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of Pennsylvania; William D. is a Professor in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at Lancaster, Pa.; D. Nicholas; James, is engaged in farming; and Charles is a physician of Allentown.

D. Nicholas Schaeffer, after completing the required course in the common schools, attended Franklin & Marshall College, at Lancaster, graduating therefrom in the class of 1878. Immediately thereafter he began practicing law under the tutelage of George F. Baer of Reading, and was admitted to the Bar in 1878. He then opened a law office in the city of Reading, and soon acquired a large and lucrative practice, which is still his in a much augmented state. He is a man of great determination, industry, and having once entered upon a case he works with might and main, and usually with good results. He is a dutiful citizen and a good neighbor, being held in high esteem by a large number of friends and fellow citizens.

Mr. Schaeffer married, Nov. 13, 1880, Katherine Greiner, daughter of Jonathan K. Grim, and three bright and interesting children blessed their union, namely: Forest G., Paul N. and Harry H. In politics he is a stanch supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, and in religious affiliation a member of the Reformed Church of Reading, of which he is an elder.

SCHULTZ. Among the prominent representatives of the Schultz family in Washington township are the brothers: Owen K., a lawyer and stockman, now living retired, and Joseph K. Schultz, who, in the spring of 1899 retired from the milling business.

The Schultz family came to America from Saxony. Melchior Schultz was born June 26, 1809, and died Feb. 10, 1874, in the forty-fourth year of his age, at Berthelsdorf, Saxony. His death took place just about two months before the time set for his emigration to America. His children were: George, Melchior and Christopher, the latter of whom became a noted minister.

George Schultz, son of Melchior and brother to Rev. Christopher, married, Jan. 31, 1744, Maria, daughter of Abraham Yeakel, and they made their home in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa. Their children were: Abraham, born March 23, 1747; and Melchior, born March 25, 1755. George Schultz died Oct. 30, 1776, aged sixty-five years, and his wife Maria passed away Dec. 13, 1797, at the age of seventy-nine years.

Abraham Schultz, son of George and Maria, was born in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, March 23, 1747. He was a great lover of books and adevotee of memory and comprehensive mind, he became one of the best educated men of the time. He was a member of the Schwenkfelder religious society, and he served it in the capacity of trustee, school inspector, teacher and catechist. The community frequently called his services into requisition as scrivener and church officer. In 1788 he was admitted as a member of the General Assembly from Montgomery county. He died Dec. 25, 1822. In 1771 he married Regina Yeakel, daughter of Christopher Yeakel, and their children were: Benjamin, born July 20, 1772; (died March 20, 1825); Adam, Sept. 20, 1775; Isaac, March 4, 1778; Abraham, Feb. 18, 1781 (died March 23, 1805); Frederick, Aug. 10, 1784 (died Dec. 17, 1794); Joseph, Jan. 22, 1787; and Melchior, June 23, 1799.

Isaac Schultz, son of Abraham and Regina, was born March 4, 1778, and died Oct. 15, 1867. He had owned 160 acres, besides woodland, in Upper Hanover township, and for a time taught school. He had eight children: Amos; Isaac; Abraham; Daniel S.; Christina; Joel; Philip and Joseph.

Amos Schultz, son of Isaac, born May 11, 1809, died at the home of his son, Owen K., May 10, 1895, and is interred in the Schwenkfelder Cemetery. The elder Amos K. Schultz married Elizabeth Kriebel, daughter of Samuel Kriebel, of Worcester township, Montgomery county. They had eight children: Sarah, wife of Joel Schenck of Upper Hanover township; Anna, deceased; wife of A. T. D. Johnson, of New Berlinville; Anna K.; Anna, deceased; Edwin, president of the First National Bank of Boyertown; Owen K.; Lucina, who lives... with her brother Owen K.; and Elizabeth, wife of Josephus Gerhard, of Hereford township. Mrs. Elizabeth (Kriebel) Schultz was born Dec. 23, 1812, and she died March 29, 1891. Mr. Schultz was active in local politics, and served as supervisor of the 1st Ward of Douglass township, Montgomery county, and was director of Schultzville Independent School District, and in many other ways served his community.

Owen K. Schultz, son of Amos, was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, just across the Berks county line, March 22, 1851. He attended the Schools at Washington and New Salem, and worked as a carpenter, but early in this work he has met with success. His farm is one of the most attractive on the west branch of the Perkiomen. A mill dam covers a few of its acres with water, and the mill is located but 120 feet from the residence, and is familiarly known as the 'County Line Mill.' The house was built in 1810 by Amos, and is a substantial brick structure of large dimensions. It is surrounded by a carefully kept lawn, studded with Norway and silver maple trees, and enclosed by an iron fence. The Swiss barn was built by Amos in 1855, and was the first barn in the district to have running water in the stalls.

Mr. Schultz is one of the active business men of his district. He was one of the organizers of the Niantic Dairymen's Association, which conducts a creamery at Niantic, and of this he has been treasurer since its organization, and as such he makes a high grade of butter, and also has a large cheese trade, their product being sold in the community and in Philadelphia. He was instrumental in having the State Road built through his district. He has been a director of the Reading Bone Fertilizer Company since its organization, March 8, 1890, is a director of the Mountaine Telephone Company, Inc., which has thirty miles of wire in the eastern township of Berks county; and is treasurer of the Douglass Telephone Company, operating ten miles of wire, and of which company there were forty-five stockholders. Mr. Schultz is a stockholder of the First National Bank of Boyertown, and acts as its agent, weekly making deposits for the people of his district.

Mr. Schultz has been twice married. On Feb. 7, 1889, he married Lenna Kriebel, of Worcester township, who was born June 8, 1852, and who died April 5, 1887, the mother of two children, Chester and Mabel, both graduates of Perkiomen Seminary, since which time Chester has also graduated from Princeton University, Princeton, N. J., class of 1908, and Pierce's Business College. Mr. Schultz married (second) Sept. 21, 1889, Mary Schultz, daughter of Adonia Schultz, of Worcester township, Montgomery county. The family attend the Schwenkfelder church.

Joseph K. Schultz, son of Amos, was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, Nov. 20, 1854. The district school afforded him his educational advantages, and at home he was trained along agricultural lines. He was twenty-two when he began work in his father's mill, and in 1882 he succeeded to the ownership. This mill was first a grist and flour mill, and in 1895 it was roller-milled. The present name of the mill is the Wave Roller Mill. In 1867, in its history it was called the County Line Mill. It is a four-story building, 40x15 feet, with an addition 28 feet square, and it is run by water from the west branch of the Perkiomen creek. Seventeen acres of land are included in the mill property. At the present time Mr. Schultz's son, Amos, is operating the mill and he turns out three brands of flour that are very popular—"Wave," "Union," and "Schultz's Best." Mr. Joseph K. Schultz retired from the management of the mill in 1899. With his son Elmer he organized the Champion Manufacturing Company, Inc., of Philadelphia, for the manufacture of Pts. and poultry feed powders at Barto, but the main office is at No. 427 Walnut street, Philadelphia. Mr. Schultz has been quite an apiarian, and at one time had as many as forty hives, producing about 500 pounds of honey annually. He resides in a comfortable brick house built by his father.

In 1865 Mr. Schultz married Susan Bechtel Krauss, daughter of George Krauss, an organ builder of Upper Hanover township. They have had four children: Elmer, an insurance agent and real estate dealer in Philadelphia, m. Marie Hirner, daughter of Dr. C. G. Hirner, of Allentown, and has two children, Lippard and Miriam; Hannah m. Joseph B. Bechtel, a jeweler in Philadelphia, and has two children, Francis Clarke and Dwight Earle; Amos m. Irene Seipt, daughter of William Seipt, of Worcester township, Montgomery county, and has two children, Florence and Harry; and John G. Dehli, bank master in Richmond, Philadelphia, Pa., and they have one daughter, Frances. Mr. Joseph K. Schultz and his sons and sons-in-law are Republican in political principle and in religious faith he and his family are Schwenkfelders.

Daniel H. Christian (deceased). One of the best known of Reading's citizens, who was for many years identified with the construction work of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, was Daniel H. Christian, who died December 22, 1903. Mr. Christian was born Oct. 17, 1845, on a farm in Lancaster county, and came to Reading when he was seventeen years of age. He was engaged in the manufacture of hives, and when a large apiary was established in the town he became quite popular with the bees, and his business prospered greatly. He was active in the promotions of the P.R. R. and had a seat on the board of directors, and was interested in the construction of the road for many years. He was a member of the Lutheran Church of Reading, and was a prominent citizen in every way. He was married to Sarah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shuster. They had one son, Daniel H., who is married and resides in Berks county, and have one daughter, Frances. Mr. Christian was a hard worker, and was well known in Reading for his business and social qualities.

Henry Christian, the great-grandfather of Daniel H., was a carpenter in Switzerland, and died in that country in his fortieth year, his death being caused by a fall from a ladder, when he broke his back in two places. His wife, Frenna, was a seamstress and mid-wife, and died in her eighty-ninth year, much beloved in the village where she had lived so long. She and Daniel had three children: one son who settled in Virginia; John, who settled in Wisconsin; and Daniel H.; and a daughter who remained in Switzerland.

John Christian was born in the village of Frenkendorf, Basel Landschaft, Switzerland, Jan. 20, 1786, and was baptized and confirmed in the Reformed Church in Frenkendorf. He attended the village school during the winter, this school being attended most of the time by over 100 children. Later he went to a school at Liestell for three months, but his schooling came to an abrupt end when Napoleon marched into the town with his army of 200,000. Until sixteen years of age young Christian engaged in agricultural pursuits and wine culture. The Napoleonic army having brought hardship upon the Basel Landschaft, there was no money with which to pay the heavy taxes, and times became very hard, this causing nearly 400 families to depart from the wharves of the city, Mr. Christian being one of the last of four single men. He started from the Rhine waters April 10, 1804, and seventeen days later the Swiss emigrants arrived at Amsterdam, whence they took the ship Rebecca, bound for Philadelphia, the contract being sixty-five dollars per person over eighteen years of age and one dollar per day. After some difficulty the ship glided into the English Channel from the Texel Sea, and then to the ocean, and after a very stormy voyage, during which the emigrants experienced much sickness, hunger and thirst caused the death of sixty-four of the 274 passengers, the ship landed on a Sunday morning, Aug. 17, 1804, at the Lazaretto.
below Philadelphia. After suffering from fever for some time, Mr. Christian escaped from the overcrowded hospital and through the friendly services of acquaintances was directed to Philadelphia. Three young friends, and many others who had escaped the terrible journey went to Ohio, and Mr. Christian finally settled at Reading in 1807, where he was married Oct. 19, 1813, to Esterly Deem, daughter of Mr. Jonathan Deem, and wife of Mr. David Bright, who was a carpenter and shopkeeper. Mr. Christian held a position of responsibility in this and on the job holding a lot of work on the hospital and at the marriage of one David Bright. Then Mr. Christian formed a partnership with Michael Bright, this connection however being of short duration, he taking into partnership John Birkenbine, whose share Mr. Christian bought back. In 1808, Mr. Christian sold his interests for $2,450, $1,600 in cash and the residue in two equal payments, and in the spring of 1803 he bought thirty-two acres of land in Exeter township, along the Schuylkill, where he moved his family in the fall of that year. His children were: John, born in 1810, a railroad superintendent, who died Oct. 19, 1875; Edward, born March 13, 1817; Frenna, born 1821, who died of a prevailing fever when she was nearly two years old; and a son, born Feb. 12, 1824. John Christian was a man of more than ordinary education, and in 1855 wrote a forty-eight page book, which is "A Life and Biogra phy of John Christian," in which he gave a graphic account of his journey from the land of his nativity to the land of his adoption, his trials and hardships, and his subsequent prosperity. One of these booklets is now in the possession of Edward Christian's family, of Reading.

Edward Christian, father of Daniel H., was born March 13, 1817, at the corner of Front and Franklin streets, Reading, where his father, John Christian, carried on distilling until 1822, when he removed his family to West Reading. He attended school and was educated in the schools situated about two miles below the Black Bear, where he learned his first lessons, and subsequently a pay school was started by Gustavus Lewis, where young Christian attended. This school was fitted up in a single room in a private house and there he attended to his eight years. A large schoolhouse was built at the Black Bear, which he also attended. In 1830 he assisted his father to join shingles for the barn of George de B. Keim, about half a mile below the Neversink Station, and later in squaring logs for Sey furt & McManus' furnace. In 1838 he went at his trade, that of milling, with Amos Esterly, at Hertzog's mill, on the Perkiomen turnpike, and he remained there three years, polling his first vote in 1839 at Stonersville, where he voted the Democratic ticket, which was his custom to the time of his death, missing but one election, which was held in 1845. Mr. Christian attended school and college, was an expert teacher, and was an officer of his class in school and college. From childhood Mr. Christian was superintendent of the Sunday-school for ten years, and taught a class of young men.

He married, Aug. 21, 1842, Catherine Hoffman, daughter of Christian and Ellen Hoffman, of Stony Creek, Pa., the last of the proprie tors of a grist mill and the first owner of a wool factory in that district. In the spring of 1842 Mr. Christian moved back to the old homestead at Neversink, where he engaged in farming. When the Civil war broke out he was very active in securing recruits. He was well preserved to the time of his demise. He was five feet, eleven inches tall, and very erect, but during the last few years of his life his eyesight failed very rapidly. He was a school director for six years, aiding in the establishment of many schools, and was appointed by the court to appraise damages and lay out new roads in Berks, and in various ways he was a very useful citizen. He was the last of his family, and at the time of his death had sixteen grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. His second wife was Mrs. George Esterly: Jacob H. of Reading; Daniel H.; Edward H., of Mt. Penn, Pa.; and Solomon H., of Reading. Mr. Christian lived in retirement from 1883 at No. 1216 Chestnut street. In religious belief he was a Lutheran, and attended Grace Church of that denomination, in the faith of which his estimable wife died Feb. 19, 1907, aged eighty-three years. Fraternally Mr. Christian was connected with Salome Lodge No. 105, I. O. O. F., in which he was very popular.

Daniel H. Christian attended the schools of his township and was reared on his father's farm, assisting his father in the operation until 1862. He then entered into partnership with the remaining part of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, where he worked for some years, and in 1874 was sent to Lancaster to superintend the laying of tracks on a new branch of the Philadelphia & Reading, extending from Lancaster to Quarryville, and returned to Reading after the completion of the line. In 1876 he returned to Reading and took charge of the West Reading branch, remaining until 1878, when he was sent to Shamokin as superintendent of track repairs of the Mahanoy division. In 1883 he was appointed general supervisor of the Reading Division, with headquarters at Mahanoy Plane but in 1888 he resigned to become coal and iron policeman of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Nescopeck and Wilkes Barre. After a short time he resigned this position and returned to the Reading, in whose employ he was, all told, twenty-one years. He was superintendent of the work of changing the tracks in the Manayunk tunnel and was an expert at finishing and laying rails for large curves, being in later years frequently consulted as to how tracks should be laid to insure safety and easy riding. After the completion of the tunnel Mr. Christian came back to Reading and took charge of the erection of the electric power plant at the Big Dam, for the Neversink Mountain Rail road Company, and later he was appointed superintendent of the road, which was built around the turn of the century to put under his control a large line of track, and while thus employed made a number of important inventions, among which are a brake shoe and fender, the former being used on all Neversink cars. His car fender was adopted by the Philadelphia & Reading Company. One of his most important inventions was the automatic block signal, which is used on the Neversink and other lines, and he also invented an automatic switch, catch and lock, which is used on many portions of the Philadelphia & Reading road at present. For the last eleven years he was employed as electrician by the United Traction Company of Reading, and was an expert in this line. He had charge of all of the electric work on the Neversink road, including overhead work, wires, motors and repairs and rewinding of armatures. While working around the controllers of summer cars at the North Line, removing an incandescent lamp from its socket, being in the act of replacing it with a search light, Mr. Christian received a shock, and soon afterward he expired in the arms of a fellow worker, where he had fallen. Mr. Christian was held in high esteem by his employers, and was a great favorite among the employees, the general declaration among whom was: "I never worked for a better man." Mr. Christian died Dec. 22, 1903, aged fifty-four years.
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Daniel H. Christian was married Aug. 8, 1868, to Mary Catherine Houck, born Aug. 8, 1849, daughter of Henry and Hannah (Gilbert) Houck, and granddaughter of John Houck, of Chester county. To Mr. and Mrs. Christian were born these children: Oliver W., an electrician who took his father's place with the Reading Traction Company, m. Berthe Templin; Pearl, m. Robert Adair, a carpenter, at the Motor Works, Reading; Harry is an electrician and car inspector at the Wilson avenue car barn, Cleveland, O.; and Daniel resides at home with his mother at No. 230 South Thirteenth street, Reading.

CHARLES E. AUAMN. The Chief of Police of the city of Reading is necessarily a man much in the public eye and the present incumbent of that important office, Hon. Charles E. Auman, is one whose private reputation and public conduct are worthy of the trust reposed in him. Chief Auman comes of German ancestors, both his grandfather and father being natives of Bavaria, Germany. The grandfather, Bernard Auman, with his son Cornelius, then a child of three, came to Pennsylvania in 1848, settling in Adams county, where he and his wife were buried. Being a hard worker and good manager, he accumulated property and died in advanced age, a wealthy man. His wife also lived many years and lies beside him in the cemetery at Littlestown.

Cornelius Auman was reared on his father's farm, later purchasing one of his own. During the Civil War he enlisted in Company G, 209th Pa. V. I., under Col. Tobias B. Kauffman, and Capt. George W. Frederick. He was mustered in at Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 16, 1864; was wounded at Port Steadman, Va., March 9, 1865; and was in the hospital when his father died. At present he lives retired at York, Pa. His wife was Agnes Eckenrood, of Bonneyville, Adams county, Pa. They had children as follows: John, a cigar-packer of York, Pa., m. Miss Katie Gottwald, of Hanover, York county; William, a cigar-packer at Schenectady, N. Y., m. Miss Annie Culp, of Gettysburg, Adams county; Charles E.; Margaret is the widow of Frank Sauerwald, and lives at Baltimore, Md.; Augustus, a carpenter living at Gettysburg, Adams county, Pa. Emma Gottwald, also of Gettysburg; Mary died at the age of four years; Annie m. Emory Waltman of York, Penn. Auman.

Charles E. Auman was born at Gettysburg, Pa., Jan. 19, 1871. His boyhood days were spent in Adams county, and there he attended the public schools until he left to learn the cigar-maker's trade, which he has followed at intervals all his life. He came to Reading April 29, 1890, and worked for Glaser, Frame & Co. for seven years, and then for others until his appointment as police patrolman in 1889 by Mayor Adolph Leader. He served three years with great credit, and in 1902 was made inspector of the 4th Precinct of the Ninth ward. In 1908 he was appointed Chief of Police by Mayor William Rick. In the short time he has been in office, Chief Auman has made many very beneficial changes, and he is resolved to mark his incumbency of the position by a vigorous crusade against vice. Especially does he direct the attention of the people to the undesirable places in the tenderloin district. Already there is a marked change, and the people of Reading are beginning to realize the wisdom of his Honor's choice of Chief.

In 1893, Mr. Auman married Catherine M. Plank, daughter of Sebastian and Frances Plank, natives of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Auman have had two children: Raymond S., who died in infancy; and Edna F.

The pleasant residence of Chief Auman is at No. 1037 Elm street. The Chief has always been an active Republican, and has served many times as delegate to city and county conventions. In his personal appearance he is a man of fine physique, tall, well built of good appearance, while his knowledge of conditions of his office and the need for vigorous and energetic action by the police is far reaching, and, as has been said before, he is showing the people of Reading that he knows just what to do in emergencies.

EDWARD C. NOLAN, of Reading, enjoys the distinction of being the youngest vice-president of any national bank in America. Reading between the lines, this means that he has a natural aptness in the management of financial affairs. While this is true, it is also true that the death of his father threw heavy responsibilities on him at a very early age. It is but justice to say that Edward has, today, the common name, has made good. He was born in Reading Aug. 8, 1880, son of William and Catherine (McDonough) Nolan.

William Nolan, the father, was for many years one of the heaviest railroad contractors of the city, his death, on Feb. 28, 1903, at the age of sixty-three, removing from the business circles of Reading a well-known figure. His wife, Catherine McDonough, was the daughter of Dr. Charles McDonough, a prominent practising physician of Berks county for many years, and a member of a family celebrated in the medical world. Their children, nine in number, were: Anna, wife of Charles P. Bower, a prominent civil engineer of Philadelphia, but residing in Reading; Catherine, who is married to Fred Jones, a civil engineer; Bernard J., who studied at Villa Nova College, class of 1907; Francis Reilly, a student at Villa Nova College, class of 1909; and Edward C., who, Villa Nova College furnished Edward C. Nolan with his literary education, his graduation taking place in 1899. A course at the Inter-State Business College followed. Mr. Nolan's first entry into the business world was as bookkeeper and timekeeper for his father and brothers, William, Jr., and Charles, Jr., the brothers at that time conducting operations under the firm name of Nolan Brothers, being the largest contractors in the city. After two years Mr. Nolan engaged in the real estate business, and had hardly made a fair start when the death of his father occurred. This event changed the course of his life. He at once took hold of the work which his father had so summarily laid down, becoming a director in the First National Bank in his stead. In 1904 Mr. Nolan, in company with his brother William and C. P. Bower, organized the Nolan Construction Company, in addition to Nolan Brothers. In 1905 he was elected vice-president of the First National Bank, being the youngest man to hold so important a position in the city. During the month of September, 1905, in company with his brother-in-law, C. P. Bower, and William Nolan, Jr., Mr. Nolan bought the G. W. Hawk Hosiery Co., one of the largest of the kind in the State, and doing a splendid business, and he is serving as treasurer of the company. Mr. Nolan is already one of the leading business men of his city. He continues his real estate and insurance office at No. 24 North Fifth street, having established a fine patronage in that line. He has been president of the Keystone Vehicle Company since February, 1907; is president of the Arnold Safety Razor Company; and a member of the Board of Directors of the United Electric Company.

Although a very busy man, Mr. Nolan finds time to indulge in the social amusements of life, being a popular member of Reading's most exclusive clubs, the Wyominging (in which he is a director and treasurer) and the Berkshire, and he is also a member of the B. P. O. E. He belongs to the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, and is much interested in outdoor life. In religion he is a communicant of the Roman Catholic Church, with membership at St. Peter's. In political faith he is a Democrat.

On Nov. 6, 1906, Mr. Nolan was married to Cora, daughter of Clarence H. and Emma Lou Sembower.

WILLIAM NOLAN, Jr., a prominent railroad contractor, residing at Sinking Spring, was born in Reading May 4, 1874. He was educated in the local schools, and also at St. Mary's College, at Emmitsburg, Md. Then he learned the business of railroad contracting with the firm of Nolan Brothers, of which firm his father was the senior partner, and while still under age he became a partner of Joseph P. O'Reilly. From 1893 to 1896 they executed several large contracts, putting up iron bridges at Reading and Harrisburg, enlarging the waterworks and putting in the sewerage pumping stations at Reading. From 1896 to 1905 Mr. Nolan was associated with his brother, Charles, in railroad contracting, more particularly for the Reading Railroad Company, their father, William Nolan, being interested with them from 1900 to 1902. This enterprise young firm put up all the stone bridge work for the Buffalo and Susquehanna Railroad Company from Shamokin to Weaverville, a distance of thirty-two miles. Their grandfather, James Nolan, had been the contractor for the stone work on this same railroad for thirty miles some sixty years before and their father for thirty-two miles, some thirty years before.

In 1906 Mr. Nolan organized the firm of Nolan Brothers, with his brother Edward C. as partner, for carrying on construction work more extensively, and since then they have successfully executed a large number of contracts. One of these contracts, worthy of special mention, was the extension of the Bethlehem Steel Works, which involved the excavation of over a million yards of rock and earth on an area of forty acres; and its execution required an equipment of nine locomotives, five steam shovels, three hundred dump-cars, two grading machines, one hundred horses, twelve steam drills, four miles of railroad track, etc., all this affording facilities for removing 160,000 cubic yards monthly. They also built the new Saco plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, the Philadelphia & Garrettford Railroad, and the Boyertown & Pottstown Railroad.

Mr. Nolan has identified himself with a number of the financial institutions of Reading by investing in their bonds and stocks; but on account of his absence in giving contract work his personal supervision, he has not become connected with their management.

In 1896 Mr. Nolan married Margaret Copinger, daughter of Michael and Margaret (Duffy) Copinger, of Reading, and by her he has two sons, John C. and Richard. Mr. Nolan’s home was at Reading until 1908, when he removed to Sinking Spring, having purchased a farm of fifty acres adjoining the village on the west, along the main thoroughfare.

William Nolan, Mr. Nolan’s father, was a successful railroad contractor of Reading. He was born in Ireland in 1840, and married Katherine McDonough, a daughter of Dr. Charles McDonough, of Reading. He died in 1903.

JOHN GAENZLE, of the firm of Gaenzle & Leiße, proprietors of the Reading Knitting Mills, is one of a large family of children born to George and Magaret (Sweitzer) Gaenzle.

George Gaenzle came from Omden, Wittenberg, Germany, to America in 1864, and settled in Reading where he followed the business of cloth weaving, at which he was an expert. Since 1889, however, he has been engaged in farming in the vicinity of Reading. In 1884 he also of Wittenberg, and the following children were born to this union: Frederick, who is connected with a cold storage plant at Lancaster, Pa., as an engineer; John, senior proprietor of the Reading Knitting Mills; Henry, connected with the firm of Gaenzle & Leiße in Baltimore; Charles, who is a student in a commercial college in Berlin, Germany; and Frank, in Hamburg; Kate, m. to Daniel Rhodes in the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad service; Mary, m. to John Zieber, also in the Philadelphia & Reading service; Lena; Rosa, m. to Albert Snyder, connected with Curtis & Jones in the shoe trade; and Annie, who is a housekeeper in her father’s home. It is somewhat unusual to find a family as large as this into which Death has never entered.

John Gaenzle was born in Omden, Germany, July 27, 1850, and when his parents brought him to Reading he was yet a child. He went to school until he was ten years old, and then went to work in a cotton mill, from which he went into a photography gallery, learned the business and followed it for himself for twelve years. Retiring from this work he visited California for eight months, and on his return to Reading bought the Reading Knitting Mills. The business was first conducted under the firm name of Gaenzle & Co., Luther E. Gable being the Company.

In 1896, after Mr. Gable’s death, Charles E. Leippe became partner and the firm name became as at present. This industry carries the name of Reading to as many distant points, perhaps, as any other in Berks County. The company justly claims to manufacture the best 84-noodle stockings in the United States and ship goods all over this country. They are the third largest manufacturers of this class of goods in the United States, and give constant employment to 300 people and more than these at times. In addition to the business above mentioned, their subject is a director of the Reading Pure Milk Company, and has other important interests. From 1895 to 1898 he was one of the owners and directors of the Lancaster Cold Storage plant, but disposed of that interest.

On April 1, 1883, Mr. Gaenzle was united in marriage with Ellen Esther Gable, daughter of Amos Gable, the retired artist, whose portraits and landscapes enjoy a reputation not only in Pennsylvania, but all over the United States. To this union was born a son Lester E. Gaenzle, Nov. 1, 1885, who is one of the bright young men of this city, a graduate of the Reading high school, and of the mechanical engineering department of the Drexel Institute, class of 1905.

Fraternally Mr. Gaenzle is a 32nd degree Mason. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is one of the best typewriters in the men of this native county, and it contains and it has numbers of them. He resides in a handsome home at No. 45 North Fourth street, where his friends are always received in the most hospitable manner. He is in the enjoyment of the fruits of honorable business methods and persevering industry.

PAUL WEBER, the well known taxidermist, whose place of business is located at No. 161 Buttonwood street, Reading, Pa., was born in Saxony, Germany, April 1, 1861, son of August and Amelia (Walt) Weber.

Carl Weber came to America prior to 1880. He had followed the trade of a weaver in his native country, but located in Philadelphia he engaged in butchering, continuing in that line until his retirement. He and his wife now live in Philadelphia, where all of their twelve children, with the exception of Paul of Reading, also reside.

Paul Weber received his literary training in the schools of Germany, and while yet a boy studied the art of preserving and mounting birds and animals under Professor Bessler, graduating in the art of taxidermy. On coming to America he located for a time in Philadelphia, whence he went a short time later to Blackwood, N. J., where he remained about two years, and at the end of that time returned to Philadelphia, establishing himself in business. Here he remained until 1903, when he located in Reading. Mr. Weber is an artist in every line of the work and it has been said of him that he can mount any animal, “from a mouse to an elephant.” Specimens of his wonderful work may be seen in nearly every State in the Union. He mounted a beautiful specimen for President Roosevelt's library, and has done work for Senator Penrose, George F. Baer and others.

Mr. Weber was married in 1889, to Helen Helt, a native of Saxony, Germany, and three children have blessed this union: Charles (deceased), Paul J. and Helen. In religious belief Mr. Weber and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church. In his political views he is independent of party affiliations.
FRANKLIN BOONE KERN, one of the foremost citizens of Birdsboro, Berks Co., Pa., where he had been engaged in the general merchandise business for many years, as well as taking an active interest in public affairs, died July 15, 1908. He came of good pioneer stock, and the characteristic traits of the sturdy pioneer spirit were not wanting in Mr. Kern. He was one of those substantial citizens upon whom people instinctively rely in time of need, and he was never found wanting. Mr. Kern was born in Exeter township, Berks county, March 24, 1833. son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Boone) Kern, and another of the pioneer families. At the age of four he gave to the immortal Daniel Boone the civilization "across the mountains."

Michael Kern, grandfather of Franklin Boone, was of German blood, and settled in Exeter township, Berks county, at an early day. His life was devoted to the expansion of the term of enlistment. Mr. Kern was Isaac Boone, who was a cousin of Daniel Boone, and they had a large family, which they reared in the faith of the Lutheran church.

Samuel Kern, son of Michael, was born and reared in Exeter township, and of his training was along the lines of his trade. He then learned the tailor's trade and followed it for many years. He died in 1872, aged seventy-five. His wife, Elizabeth (Boone) Kern, died in 1868, aged seventy-six years. They had two sons, William (m. Hannah Haws, and had five children) and Samuel. Samuel Kern was a Republican, but had never cared for politics. In his religious faith he was a Lutheran.

Franklin Boone Kern was educated in the schools of his native township, and at the age of fourteen he began to learn the tailor's trade. Later with his father he worked at the tailor's trade, but neither proved congenial to his tastes, and he turned his attention to commercial pursuits, entering as a clerk the general merchandine store of Brooke & Evans, at Birdsboro. This he continued until after the outbreak of the Civil war. On Aug. 10, 1862, he enlisted in Company A, 128th Pa. V. I., under Col. Samuel Crossdale, and was mustered in as third sergeant under Capt. L. H. Smith, and with his regiment moved on to Washington, D. C., thence to Fairfax station, and to Frederick, Md., and South Mountain. They participated in the battle of Antietam in September, 1862, and in the pursuit of Stuart's cavalry. They went into winter quarters the latter part of January, 1863, but on the opening of the spring campaign under Hooker, they set forth, and took part in the battle of Chancellorsville May 1-4, 1863. Mr. Kern was captured by the enemy, but escaped. He had been promoted to first sergeant Feb. 1, 1863. On May 12th the regiment proceeded to Harrisburg, and there was mustered out of service May 19, 1863, on account of the expiration of the term of enlistment. Mr. Kern re-enlisted July 6, 1863, as captain in Company I, 429 Pennsylvania Militia, and served during the emergency, being mustered out Aug. 12, 1863.

After his return from the war, Mr. Kern went to Schuylkill county, Pa., and at New Philadelphia clerked in a general store until 1871, when he engaged in business for himself, continuing for ten years. Coming to Birdsboro he established a general mercantile business on Mill street, near First, and here he soon acquired a good trade. People came to know and to respect the enterprising merchant, and to realize that he was not only always fair, but fair in all his dealings. His patronage increased with the years, and he gained a comfortable fortune for himself. He continued in business until 1898, when he sold out and retired.

Mr. Kern was one of Birdsboro's best known citizens, and in all public affairs he took an active and intelligent part. He was a staunch Lutheran, and was a member of the building committee in 1877 when the present edifice of St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran Church was erected. In politics he was a Republican, and he served some time in the council at Birdsboro. His fraternal connections were with Neversonk Lodge, I. O. O. F., of which he was a charter member; Reading Lodge, No. 62, F. & A. M. (which lodge had charge of his funeral services); the Knights of Pythias; and was at one time a member of the G. A. R.

On Sept. 24, 1884, Mr. Kern was married to Elizabeth Hahn, born in Robeson township, daughter of Jacob and Mary Ann (Ehrgood) Hahn. Three children were born of this union: Mary Elizabeth m. the Rev. James Bowman May, an Episcopal minister; Samuel Jacob died aged three years; and Sallie Hahn married Charles Marquetta Stith Beck, of Staten island, and has one child, Franklin Kern.

JAMES L. FREEMAN, who carries on an extensive business in lime and fluxing stone, and crushed stone of all sizes, at Sinking Spring, Berks Co., Pa., was, and they had these children: Moses, Catherine, Jacob, Benjamin and Levi. Mr. Freeman was a farmer in Spring township, where he had removed in early life.

Moses Freeman, father of James L., was born March 18, 1833, at Freemansville, in Cumru township, and died Jan. 4, 1859, aged twenty-five years, nine months, sixteen days. He was a carpenter by occupation, following that trade at Sinking Spring, where he had erected his residence just before his death. Mr. Freeman married Rebecca Luit, born Nov. 8, 1835, daughter of Adam and Elizabeth (Bensing) Luit, and three children were born to this union: Helen C., m. William Schlegel, of Sinking Spring, Pa., and has two children, Nora and Harry; James L.; and Moses, roadmaster at Sinking Spring, has these children, Walter, Bessie, Emma, Moses, Paul, Catherine and Nora.

James L. Freeman obtained his education in the township schools which he left when sixteen years of age, from which time he began at Wernersville, where he engaged in lumbering. In the latter year he engaged in huckstering, which he followed successfully for some time through Lancaster county, subsequently embarking in a mercantile business at Sinking Spring, of which he was the owner and operator until he sold out when he sold out. He was also the owner of a restaurant for some time, but this he also sold. About 1882 Mr. Freeman first engaged in the lime stone business at Wernersville, where he had a lease upon a quarry on Abraham Miller's farm. Here he burned lime and sold furnace stone to Birdsboro, Keystone furnace of Reading, and Warwick iron Company. This business he continued at Wernersville for four years, at the same time conducting a quarry on the Evans farm at Sinking Spring, which he discontinued in 1900 to engage on his own tract at the eastern end of Sinking Spring, consisting of about eight acres. He ships to Berks and surrounding counties, employs ten men, owns his own crusher, and has built up a large and profitable business. He is a man of progress and enterprise and has won a reputation for honesty and integrity in all business pursuits. Politically, he is a stanch Democrat, and cast his first vote for his party in 1878. He was elected tax collector in 1900. Fraternally he is a member of Lexington Lodge, Knights of Pythias, No. 155; Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 77; charter member of the I. O. O. F., No. 660, all of Sinking Spring; and order of Red Men, No. 361. Reading to and his family are members of St. John's Reformed Church of Sinking Spring, in which he has been a trustee, and from 1897 to 1905 deacon.

In the year 1880 Mr. Freeman was married to Sallie Schell, born April 18, 1859, daughter of William and Mary (Smith) Schell, farming people of Heidelberg township. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Freeman: Charles W., a merchant at Sinking Spring; and Clarence J., a trolley car conductor, at Sinking Spring, who married Addie Reinhart, and has a daughter, Evelyn. Mr. and Mrs. Freeman also reared a niece of Mrs. Freeman's, Lou Ludwig, taking her at the age of seven, and giving her the love and care of parents.

CHARLES W. FREEMAN, son of James L., was born Feb. 8, 1881, at Sinking Spring, Pa., and was educated in the borough schools, and the Inter-State Commercial College, Reading, from which he was graduated in 1903. He has assisted his father in the mercantile business until November 1902, when he purchased his father's interest, and since that time has conducted the business alone, with much success. Socially he is prominently identified with the P. O. S. of A., being a member of Washington Camp No. 292, at Sinking Spring, of which he is a past president. He served as district president of district No. 5 from 1904 to 1906, and on Feb. 22, 1907, was elected to the high office of county president. He is also a member of Sinking Spring Lodge No. 660, I. O. O. F., and member of William Johnson Lodge No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf. Mr. Freeman and his family reside at Sinking Spring, where he is a past president of St. John's Reformed Church of Sinking Spring, for two years he served as assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school, where he was a teacher for some time.

On June 7, 1906, Mr. Freeman was married to Miss Nora C. Lamm, daughter of Charles F. and Sallie (Gantt) Lamm, of Lower Heidelberg township. Mr. and Mrs. Freeman have one daughter, Olga Sarah.

Peter B. Freeman, a well-known farmer of Cumru township, is conducting operations near Freemansville, where he was born Feb. 28, 1844, son of Cornelius and Mary (Britton) Freeman, and grandson of George and Elizabeth (Gerhard) Freeman (mentioned above).

Freemansville: a village in Cumru township, was named after Cornelius Freeman, the oldest resident of the place, who was instrumental in establishing the post-office there. Cornelius Freeman was born at this place, Nov. 29, 1819, became a well known citizen and land owner, and a deacon of Yocom's Church. He married Mary Ann Britton, who bore him nine children, as follows: Peter B.; Cornelius; Ellen, m. to Christian Breidenstein; Elizabeth, who died single at the age of nineteen years; John; William; Mary and George, who died young; and Catherine, who died at the age of sixteen years.

Peter B. Freeman was educated in the public schools, and was reared upon the farm, which he left at the age of eight years to go to work in the Mount Penn furnace company. He continued without intermission, being an all around mechanic. He began farming in 1866 on his father-in-law's farm, and this property he purchased in 1871, since which time he has been engaged successfully in agricultural pursuits. He devotes considerable attention to truck farming, attending the markets in the Berks townships. Belonging to the local Democratic organization, he has been a prominent worker in local Democratic politics.

HENRY T. WAGNER, senior member of the well-known firm of Wagner & Emrich, Womelsdorf, Pa., was born April 24, 1859, in Jefferson township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Levi L. and Mary (Troutman) Wagner. Levi L. Wagner, who now resides in his own home at Myerstown, was for more than a quarter of a century engaged in shoemaking, which he was compelled to give up on account of failing health, and subsequently in 1888, he commenced farming. For some years he has been a life insurance agent in the Reading and Myerstown districts.

Mr. Wagner is a member of the Reformed Church at Myerstown. He was married at Myerstown to Mary Elizabeth (Morgan) Freeman, who also survives, and to them were born six children, namely: one who died in infancy; Henry T.; Samuel T. m. Leah Docksalter and resides at Dayton, Ohio; Ella m. Levi J. Emrich, her brother's business partner; Sarah m. Calvin S. Schaeffer, of Greg- ter; and James T. m. Magdalen (Bower) Lavelle Neato- tock; Margaret Neatock; and Edith is single and resides at home.

On August 24, 1889, Mr. Wagner married Lizzie H. Frederick, daughter of Andrew and Justina (Troutman) Frederick, the former a railroad employee at Lebanon, Pa. Four children have been born to this union: Lester H., born Nov. 12, 1892; Paul F., Sept. 7, 1894; Edith C., Aug. 12, 1898 (died Dec. 14, 1904); and Laura M., June 3, 1906.

LEVI J. EMRICH, junior partner of the well-known milling firm of Wagner & Emrich, proprietors of the Womelsdorf Roller Mills, and an enterprising and successful businessman, was born Nov. 10, 1857, in Tulpehocken township, Berks county, son of Daniel and Catherine (Weber) Emrich.
The great-great-grandfather of Levi J. Emrich came from Holland with his two brothers and first settled in New York State, whence they later came to Schuylkill county, Pa. John Sebastian Emrich, the son of the emigrant, who was born in Schuylkill county, and was the father of six children, among whom was Jacob, who was born in Schuylkill county.

Jacob Emrich was a laborer most of his life, but in his later years purchased a small tract of land near Mount Aetna, Berks county, where he died in 1892. He married Sophia Weld, who died in February 1905, and to them were born two children: Annie, who died at the age of twenty years; and Daniel the father of Levi J.

Daniel Emrich, father of Levi J., was born Dec. 4, 1839, in Schuylkill county Pa., and died July 6, 1904, being a member of the Rehoboth Reformed Church. He was a tanner by trade, and moved to Berks county in 1852, settling at Rehersburg, where he worked at his trade. Mr. Emrich enlisted in Company H, 151st Pa. V. I. S., and served his country faithfully, although for six months of his enlistment he was sick in the hospital. Mr. Emrich married Catherine Weber, born Nov. 16, 1837, daughter of Samuel and Pauline (Miller) Weber, and she still survives and lives one mile west of Stouchsburg, along the Berks and Dauphin turnpike. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Emrich are as follows: E. M. Levi, of Reading; Miranda A. m. T. W. Kissinger, of No. 111 Oley street, Reading; Jerome P., a foreman of Myerstown, Pa.; m. Kate Mountz, and has two children, Frank and Sallie; Frank L., a painter and paper hanger at Reading, m. Rose Schlinker, and has one son, William; Wesley G., a cigar maker of Myers-town, m. Kate Bentz, and has three children, Edna, Grace and Wallace; Valeria m. John Callaney, superintendent of the American Iron & Steel Company, at Lebanon, Pa.; Amy F. m. Wallace W. Weighley, a cigar maker of Richland, Pa.; and Miss Alva, with her mother, conducts a small grocery store.

Levi J. Emrich attended the public schools of his native locality until reaching the age of sixteen years, and at this time went to learn the milling business with John G. Franz, of Mount Aetna, Pa., remaining with this gentleman for two years. From this time until 1894 he worked at various mills, and in that year formed a partnership with Henry T. Wagner, under the firm name of Wagner & Emrich, and this connection has continued to the present time, with much success. Mr. Emrich and Mr. Wagner, with whom he was long connected, being of the firm of Martin Brown, were occupied by the firm in 1894, but were totally destroyed by fire on Jan. 13, 1900, and were replaced by the present excellent structure, which cost nearly $15,000. This building, which is three stories high, covers a floor space of fifty square feet, and is equipped throughout with the latest and most highly improved machinery. The firm manufactures a high grade of flour, grain and feed, their best known brand being the IXL, for which there is a ready market not only locally, but all over the county. They are of the firm of Wagner & Emrich, and possess the full confidence of the community.

Mr. Emrich was married Aug. 6, 1892, to Ellen T. Wagner, born Jan. 30, 1862, daughter of Levi and Mary (Trottman) Wagner. Mr. and Mrs. Emrich are members of the Reformed congregation of Tulpehocken Church. In politics Mr. Emrich is a Republican, and fraternally he is connected with Golden Rule Lodge No. 159, I. O. O. F., of Womelsdorf.

GEORGE DELL FAHRENBACK, who makes his home in Penn township, Berks county, was born Aug. 15, 1846, in Hesse-Cassel, Germany, but has lived in this country from boyhood.

Charles William Fahrehbach, his father, was also born in Hesse-Cassel, where he learned the trade of wheelwright, but he was best known as a musician.

He taught music, being a master of many instruments, and was also engaged as orchestra leader in opera houses in his native land. He was a bugler in the German cavalry, and after coming to this country served in the same capacity in the Pennsylvania State militia.

In 1851 Mr. Fahrehbach came to this country, bringing his wife and family, which then consisted of five children, and locating on a farm in Penn township. He engaged in farming and wagon-making, finding his trade very useful in the new world. He became a member of the Reformed Church in Penn township, in which he and his wife were active workers, and he was known as a devoted student of the Scriptures, concerning which he was usually well informed.

Mr. Fahrehbach married Christiana Dell, a native of Rhein-Sachsen, Germany, and they became the parents of six children, five born in the old country and the youngest born in America, viz.: John, who is deceased; George Dell; Adam, who has been blacksmith at the Berks County Almshouse for twenty-seven years, being elected each year by the board of directors: Hannah, deceased, who was the wife of Dr. O. C. Collins; Maria, married to Christian Bohringer, of St. Louis, Mo.; and Caroline, wife of Monroe Strouse, of Clearfield county, Pa. The mother of this family died in 1894, at the age of seventy-five years, and she preceded him to the grave in March 1888, at the age of seventy-four years.

George Dell Fahrehbach grew to manhood upon a farm in Penn township. He had few educational advantages, and began work early, when only nine years of age, at labor upon a manure cart, and learned both his board and clothing. After the second year his wages were three dollars a month, and later he was paid seven dollars a month. Though little more than a boy when the Civil War broke out he enlisted in the Union service, entering Company G, 151st Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry for ninety days, and during two months overtime on that enlistment. Re-enlisting, he became a member of Company B, 55th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry for three years, and after his discharge from that service, in February, 1864, he again enlisted, serving to the end of the war. The list of important engagements in which he participated with his regiment is a long one: Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862; Gettysburg, July 1-5, 1863; Oldtown Creek, May 9, 1864; Proctor's Creek, May 13, 1864; Drury's Bluff, May 12-16, 1864; Cold Harbor, June 1-3, 1864; Petersburg, June 19-26, 1864; Cemetery Hill, July 30, 1864; Chaplin's Farm, Sept. 29, 1864; South Hill, Dec. 10, 1864; Hatcher's Run, March 30, 1865; Peters- burg and Richmond, April 2-9, 1865; Rice's Station, April 8, 1865; and Rappahannock Court House, April 9, 1865. On April 15, 1865, for meritorious conduct, Mr. Fahrehbach was promoted to corporal. He had many thrilling experiences during his service. At the battle of Chancellorsville he was taken prisoner while out sharpshooting, but fortunately escaped soon afterward. At the battle of Gettysburg he was wounded three times the first day, in the arm, the abdomen and the head, his skull being severely fractured. But he continued in active service through the three days of the engagement. He was sent on a dangerous mission within the Rebel lines, and in the Confederate uniform made his way into the enemy's camp between Petersburg and Richmond, at Bermuda Hundred, finding out better the resources, plans and possibilities of the enemy's lines, which he reported to Generals Butler, Gilmore and Smith, upon his return, three days later. He subsequently made a similar trip, at Petersburg, and obtained the desired information without going into the enemy's lines.

After the close of his military service Mr. Fahrenbach returned to Penn township, Berks county, where he worked upon a farm for a year before moving to Luzerne county. There he operated a sawmill for three years, in 1869 returning to Penn township, where he began farming on his own account, renting two farms, comprising 200 acres, of Daniel Strouse. These he cultivated until 1892, and in the meantime he had accumulated considerable property, having bought a farm of 167 acres in 1877. Later he purchased other farms, one of 102 acres and one of 113 acres, in Penn township, cultivating the two larger tracts and renting the smaller one. He has continued to add to his possessions, being at present one of the largest landowners in his end of Berks county, his holdings now including 630 acres of valuable land. In 1893 he moved to Reading, though he has not given up his buildings and operations. In 1908 he put up a fine brick residence on the place where he now lives in Penn township, and which is also improved with up-to-date farm buildings. Mr. Fahrenbach has very valuable limestone quarries on his land, and burns as many as 30,000 to 35,000 bushels of lime a year.

As an active member of the Democratic party Mr. Fahrenbach has been prominent in the local councils, frequently serving as a delegate to county conventions, and he has also held various public offices. For eleven years he was a member of the Penn township school board and for six years served as president of the board. He was president of the Bernville Cemetery Association for nine years. In 1893 he was elected sheriff of Berks county, and served one term of three years, during which time the Italian murderer, Pietro Buccieri, was hung, in 1893.

Mr. Fahrenbach has taken especial interest in old home week at Bernville, and was one of the leaders in that movement, to which he has given much of his time and attention. In 1907 and 1908 he acted as chief marshal. He is a prominent member of the Reformed Church at Bernville, and served as chairman of the building committee that built the present All Saints Union (Reformed and Lutheran) Church at Bernville in 1897, though he was still living in Reading at that time. Sunday-school work has always received his particular attention, and he served as superintendent of the Penn Valley Sunday-school for a period of two years. In fraternal societies he is also very well known, belonging to Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.—being a thirty-second-degree Mason; he also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Odd Fellows, the Grand Army of the Republic and Star of Welcome Lodge, No. 60, Shepherds of Bethlehem. In spite of his many interests and activities Mr. Fahrenbach has found time to do considerable traveling, having visited every State in the Union.

Mr. Fahrenbach married Mary Ziebach, of Bernville, and seven children were born to them, five of whom survive, namely: Sallie, who taught school ten years, married Rev. W. B. Werner, a minister of the Reformed Church, of Schwenksville, Montgomery county, and they have two children, Helen and Emily; John, who attended Stoner's Business College, taught eight terms of school, and is now a pure food inspector for the Government at Cleveland, Ohio (he is married to Cora Haag, of Williamsport, and has one son, Frank); George W. is mentioned below; Mary taught school before marriage to Charles Ziebach and is now living in Penn township (she has one child, George Frank); John H. received his early education in Reading, and is a member of the class of 1909 at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster.

George W. Fahrenbach, M. D., son of George Fahrenbach, born in Bernville township, April 16, 1872, and received his early education in the public schools and Bernville high school. Before taking his professional course he taught school for six terms, in Robeson, Lower Alsace and Spring townships, Berks county, and West Cocalico township, Lancaster county. He then entered the Bernheim Medical College, graduating from that institution in 1900, magna cum laude. Immediately afterward he located at Bernville, which he has since made his field of practice, having a large clientele in and around the borough. He is a member of the Berks County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Socially he is connected with the Sons of Veterans and the I. O. O. F., and he is a member of St. Thomas Church at Bernville, belonging to the Reformed congregation.

Mr. Fahrenbach married Miss Maggie B. Mertz, daughter of Jacob Mertz, of Reading, and two children have been born to this union, Margaret and Charles.

AMMON L. HAFER, member of the firm of Hafer Bros., commission merchants at Reading and prominent factors in the city's business life, was born June 15, 1866, in Exeter, Berks county, Pa., son of Samuel R. and Elizabeth G. (Lincoln) Hafer.

John Hafer, great-grandfather of the Hafer brothers, was a native of Berks county, Pa., and for many years resided on his farm in Exeter township, which he cultivated in addition to working at his trade of stone mason. He assisted in the erection of the old Schwartzwald stone church and of Spies's church in Alsace township. He is recalled as a man of robust appearance. His first marriage was to Gertrude Kline. When she died she was interred at the Reformed Church cemetery, at Sixth and Washington streets, Reading. In exuding her, he married the widow of her brother, the side of his wife, at the Schwartzwald Church. His second wife was Mrs. Diehl (widow), by whom he had no children. To the first marriage were born: George m. Ellen Heller, and had children, William, Phebe, Daniel and Amanda; Daniel m. Charlotte Egelman, and had children, Charles E., Maryetta, John E., Rosetta, Daniel E., Wilhelmina, Edward E. and Anna; John was twice married, and by his first wife, Rebecca Esterly, he had four children—George, John, Mary and Amanda—and by his second wife, Sarah Moyer, he had Henry, Westley, and three daughters; Sarah m. Abraham, and had children, Charles, John, and Samuel; William m. a Miss Lerch, and had two children, William and Margaret; Mathias m. Rachel Romig, daughter of Jacob Romig, and had four children, Samuel R., Amelia (wife of Daniel Yergey), Susan (died in infancy) and Anna (widow of Henry L. Gilbert); Henry m. Rebecca Romig, and had children, Henry, Heryetta, William, Mary, Augustus, John and Cyrus; Levi m. a Miss Hooff, and had children, Adam, Emelia. Louisa and another daughter; and Anna m. Samuel Romich, and had one son, Franklin. All the family are deceased.

Mathias Hafer, son of John, was born in Alsace township, Berks county, and died on his farm in Exeter township, in 1898, aged eighty-two years. He was a life-long farmer and owned a tract of ten acres of land on which he lived. Both he and his wife belonged to the Reformed Church, and they lie buried in the Schwartzwald cemetery. He married Rachel Romig, daughter of Jacob Romig, and they had four children, namely, Samuel R.; Amelia, wife of Daniel Yergey, residing in Exeter township; Susan, who died in infancy; and Anna, widow of Henry L. Gilbert.

Samuel R. Hafer, only son of Mathias Hafer, was born July 8, 1840, in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., and he attended the old subscription schools when his parents paid three cents a day for his tuition, his teacher at that time being Jonathan Moyer. He attended from twenty to sixty days a season and continued until he was twenty-one years of age. Accordingly, he had the habit of visiting the neighboring farmers during his youth. When eighteen years of age he came to Exeter Station, where he later became station agent and embarked also in a general store and hotel business, which he continued for eight years. He then moved to Birdsboro, where, for five years, he engaged in the grain trade in George Wheaton's general store and assisted also in the lumber and coal yard. For eight years thereafter he conducted the Cooperative Association store, and during President Cleveland’s first administration he served as postmaster at that point. In 1888 he came to Reading and since May, 1905, he has been bookkeeper for the commission house of Hafer Brothers, his sons. For some years after his location at Reading, Mr. Hafer conducted a grocery store, for John F. Reifsnyder, whom he later bought out. In 1864, he married Elizabeth G. Linzdon, daughter of John D. Lincoln, a distant relative of the great President. They have five children, namely: Ammon L.; Adelle, wife of John Seigfried; Samuel L.; Matthias L., a grocery merchant at Reading; and Rachel, wife of Harry McKinney, a furniture merchant at Reading. Samuel R. Hafer is a member of the Reformed Church.

Ammon L. Hafer was educated in the public schools at Birdstown, where his boyhood was spent, and at an early age he commenced to work as a clerk in a store in that town, and later went to work in the Brooker Nail Factory, at Birdstown. In 1887 he came to Reading and for two years he drove a team for Daniel S. Esterly, wholesale grocer. In 1899, he entered the employ of John F. Reifsnyder, commission and produce merchant, at Reading, both he and his brother, Samuel L., becoming silent partners in March, 1900. Mr. Reifsnyder died, and on May 1st, following, Hafer Brothers became sole owners, purchasing the good will, stock and fixtures, as per agreement.

In 1895 Ammon L. Hafer married Nellie Lebkicher, daughter of Alfred Lebkicher, of Reading, and they have one son, Lloyd A. Mr. Hafer belongs to Progressive Lodge, No. 470, I. O. O. F., Reading. He is a member of the Second Reformed Church, and was an official of the Birdstown Reformed Church, prior to coming to Reading.

Samuel L. Hafer, member of the firm of Hafer Brothers, the largest wholesale commission merchants at Reading, was born Sept. 20, 1870, in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa. His schooling was obtained at Birdstown, and when sixteen years of age he became a clerk for J. H. Brandley, of that place, with whom he remained for three years. When nineteen years of age he became a salesman for John F. Reifsnyder, commission merchant at Reading, with whom he continued two years and then took service with M. B. Slichter & Co., at No. 6 South Sixth street. One year after, he became a salesman for still another commission firm, Claus & Silvas, where he remained for two years, when he became a broker. He later became the partner of the late John F. Reifsnyder—a partnership which continued until May 1, 1900. On that date the firm of Hafer Brothers became sole owners, Mr. Reifsnyder having died in the previous March. The members of the firm are successful business men of high repute, and they do the largest produce business in Berks county. They employ fifteen men, and have six teams in constant use. They have established trade relations which make them the leaders in the wholesale commission line at Reading.

In 1890 Samuel L. Hafer married Ida M. Endy, and they have the following children: Earl E., Paul E., and Nellie M. The eldest son is a graduate of the Interstate Business College at Reading, of the class of 1906, and he now fills a lucrative position as clerk for the Reading Iron Works. The other son and the daughter are still in school. Hafer and family are members of the Second Reformed Church at Reading, a religious body to which the family has been faithful for generations. He is an Odd Fellow, and belongs to Progressive Lodge, No. 470, at Reading.

James B. Leinbach, a retired citizen residing in Friedensburg, and one of the best known musicians in Berks county, was born in Oley township, July 10, 1846, son of Daniel S. and Susanna H. (Barto) Leinbach, and a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families of the county.

The earliest known ancestors of the Leinbachs of Berks county were Henry Leinbach and his wife Barbara Lerch, of Wetterau, Germany. From them the line of descent to James B. Leinbach is through Johannes, Sr., and Anna Elizabeth (Kleiss); Johannes, Jr., and Catharina (Riehm); John Daniel and Mary Magdalena (Hartman); Benjamin and Catharine (Snyder); and Daniel S. and Susanna H. (Barto).

Benjamin Leinbach, son of John Daniel, and grandfather of James B., was born on his father’s homestead in Oley township, Sept. 25, 1793, and his sponsors were Benjamin and Margaret Leinbach. He died in Oley township, Aug. 29, 1851, and left his wife and six children, and he followed that occupation in his neighborhood for many years. In those days it was customary for the tailors to visit the farmers, and make the clothes for the family. These clothes were of home spun, the pioneers raising their own flax and weaving the cloth. Mr. Leinbach was buried at Friedensburg. He was twice married. His first wife, Catharine Snyder, was a daughter of Daniel Snyder, of Exeter township. She bore him three sons and two daughters; Daniel S.; Augustus, died without issue; Dr. Benjamin died without issue; and Lucy died before marriage leaving no children; and Hannah M. William Glase, and reared a large family. Mr. Leinbach m. (second) Catharina Guldin, and two children were born of this marriage; Sarah died in 1908, aged seventy-six years, unmarried; and Israel died in 1907, aged seventy-two years, leaving children—Benjamin, Charles, and Emma (wife of Aaron Grim).

Daniel S. Leinbach, son of Benjamin, was born in Oley township Feb. 24, 1810, and he died Jan. 3, 1881. In his earlier life he was a farmer, but later became associated as a clerk with B. A. Glase in his large general store. His last years were passed in Friedensburg, and the last year of his life he lived retired, in the residence now occupied by his son, James B. He married Susanna H. Barto, daughter of Benjamin and Catharine (Hunter) Barto. She was born Nov. 16, 1829, and died April 17, 1901. They had one son, James B. James B. Leinbach was reared under the parental roof, and obtained his education in Oley Academy under the instruction of Dr. D. M. Wolf. In 1867, Prof. John S. Ermentrout licensed him to teach, and for two consecutive years he was in charge of the Palm school in his native township. When only ten years of age he began his musical education under Samuel Fellen, a native German of high ability, and later he passed under the instruction of Frederick Herrmann, a student of Leipzig University. In 1867 he began teaching music, having from thirty to forty pupils in Oley and surrounding townships. Since 1863 he has served as church organist, beginning that year in Friedens Church in Oley township, and in 1871 he went to Schwartzwald congregation; from 1875 to 1886 he served the congregation at New Jerusalem in Rockland township. He has officiated at more than two thousand funerals. He and his family belong to the Reformed Congregation at Friedensburg. Since 1893 he has served as an elder, and in 1908 he was made superintendent of the Sunday School. He has served one term as a member of the school board, working as a teacher when he was only fourteen years old. In politics he is a Republican, and always takes a keen interest in his party’s welfare.

Since his retirement from active business, he has devoted his time to the management of his farms. Two of these came under his supervision through his wife, one in Exeter containing 155 acres, and one in Spring township, 120 acres.

On May 27, 1875, Mr. Leinbach married Amelia Sailer, daughter of Adam H. and Mary Ann (Gring) Sailer. They have the following children: with this union: (1) Clement Waldo, a graduate of Franklin & Marshall College, class of 1898, taught school for four terms in the Oley township high school, and since the spring of 1907 has been connected with A. J. Brumbaugh’s pants factory. He m. Chrissie Miller, daughter of Henry Miller, of Monroe county and has three children: Mary Evelyn, Anna Magdalene and Margaret Genevieve. (2) Rev. Henry Jerome was educated in Oley Academy, Franklin and Marshall College, class of 1901, and the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church of the United States; at Lancaster, Pa., graduated in 1904. He was ordained and licensed the same year at Reading, and for upwards of three years served Olivet congregation, Reading, but in the fall of 1907 accepted a call to Jonestown, Lebanon county. He m. Mary Snavely, daughter of George Snavely, of Spangsville, and has a son, Carl.

GEORGE W. DELANY, secretary of the Reading Iron Company, which employs about five thousand men, enjoys the distinction of having been private secretary of David E. Read, president. His ancestors came from France, Germany and Ireland, and his father, Henry Delany, who was born in New York, became a shoe dealer in Philadelphia, where he died in January, 1904, aged seventy-two years. Henry Delany married Johanna Houck, daughter of J. N. Houck, a manufacturing saddler of Easton, Pa.; six of the ten children born of this union are living, and of these George W. is the eldest.

George W. Delany was born in Philadelphia Aug. 18, 1866, and after receiving an education in the public schools of the city, he entered the Read Iron Company as a junior clerk, and he remained with that road for fifteen years, having been during that time stenographer and private secretary to George B. Keim, president of the Reading system. Later he held the same relation to Franklin B. Gowen, who also was president, and a month after the death of the latter, in December, 1889, settled in Reading in a similar position under George F. Baer, the present president of the company, retaining that position until October, 1900, when he became secretary of the Reading Iron Company. Mr. Delany is also secretary of the Deer Park Land Company, was for three years treasurer of the Berkshire County Club, and is now a member of the board of directors and secretary of the club, having resigned the treasurership on account of its onerous duties.

Mr. Delany was married April 14, 1891, to May B. Rothenhausler, a wholesale dealer in glass and crockery ware in Philadelphia. Three children were born of this union: Katharine and Josephine, both in school; and George, Jr. In politics Mr. Delany is an ardent Democrat. In his leisure time he is a large reader and church officer at various times as private secretary to three great railroad magnates was certainly remarkable, reflecting credit upon his intelligence and ability.

DR. CHARLES CLINTON BOYER, the Boyers, as the original spelling of the name Beyer or Bayer indicates, are Rhine Bavarians. The records show that this family dates back into the earliest tribal history of Germany and France, in both of which countries they hold an honorable place today. Many of them became victims of religious persecution at home, and came to America to escape from it. About thirty-five Bayers, as the ship's lists show, came to Pennsylvania before the Revolutionary war. From the well-known fact that the earlier settlers "sent for their relatives and kin," we gather that the Boyer settlers of Pennsylvania were blood relatives in Europe. There are thousands of them now in Philadelphia, Reading, and in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Illinois, etc. Philip Beyer, who came over in the ship "Winter Galley" in 1738, was the European ancestor of Dr. Charles Clinton Beyer, of Kutztown. Philip Beyer, as the connection of events proves, found his way into Bern township, Berks county, where, as the list of Berks county taxables shows, he owned property in the vicinity of what is now known as St. Michael's Church, before 1755. This church was founded a few years before Philip died, and it is likely that he is buried in the cemetery of St. Michael's, but the brown headstones found over the earliest graves of the church reveal nothing concerning him. The early church records, to¬gether with the list of Bern taxables, seem to prove that there were at least four sons, namely: Michael, John, Philip, and Christoph. The other names at this writing, has not been ascertained. Philip disappears from the tax list in 1780.

Christopher Beyer, in all probability the youngest son of Philip Beyer, was born in Berks township, Berks county, about 1740 or 1745. He became a member of the Lutheran Church. To his marriage with Fanny Blanken, the following was written: Christopher, born in 1765; Jacob, 1767; Henry, 1781; Daniel, and two daughters. In 1785, or soon afterwards, the family removed to what is now Bruns¬wick township, Schuylkill county. The elder Chris¬topher's name appears for the first time on the tax list of Brunswick township in 1791. He lived in a log hut, probably constructed by himself, against a hill side in the rear of what is now known as Friedens Church, about a mile north of McKeansburg. Whether or not he was the schoolmaster of the congregation is a little uncer¬tain. Missionaries stopped at his house and preached in his barn, as Rev. W. H. Weller reports, on the congregation of Friedens Church. He was certainly closely identified with this congregation, as we infer from a fragment of church records to which his name is signed. His name disappears from the tax list in 1811, or soon afterward. He and his wife lie buried in Boyer's Row, Friedens Church, but the graves, and the records of their graves were rudely removed when the present church building was erected.

Jacob Beyer, second son of Christopher and Kath¬erine (Reifschneider) Beyer, was born in Bern township, Berks county, Jan. 14, 1767, and became a member of Friedens Church (Lutheran). In 1809 he owned a large farm in Lewistown Valley, about four miles north of Friedens Church. He died April 1, 1829, and lies buried in Friedens cemetery. His wife, Susanna Schaeffer, born Jan. 14, 1775, died Nov. 4, 1849, in the home of a daughter, and is buried in the cemetery of the Lutheran Church, East Germantown, Ind. Their children were: Jacob, Samuel, Joseph, Daniel, Mary, Elizabeth, Susan, Kate and Hettie.

Samuel Beyer, second son of Jacob and Susanna (Schaeffer) Beyer, was born in Lewistown, Schuylkill county, Feb. 12, 1801. He was confirmed in the Luth¬eran Church at 9, 1819, was married by Pastor Schofer to Lydia Bensinger, daughter of Michael Ben¬singer. When his father died six years later, Samuel, who was a blacksmith by trade, took the father's farm, which, as the deeds show, comprised about 300 acres. He sold the Yost farm, which he owned soon afterward, he carried on milling. He was prominently identified with the founding and maintenance of the Lutheran Church at Lewistown. In 1873, when he was serving as township supervisor, he died in the Bauscher home, where he had called to warm himself on a bitterly cold morning. His wife, Lydia, born Feb. 29, 1808, survived him until 1894. They are buried at Lewistown. The sons and daughters of this marriage were: Israel, Samuel, Emanuel, Joseph, Benjamin, William, Jacob, Daniel, John, Catherine, Elizabeth and Caroline.

Joseph Beyer, fourth son of Samuel and Lydia (Bensinger) Beyer, was born Jan. 27, 1831. When he began to go to school the free school bill of 1834 and 1835, framed by Lawyer Breck and saved by Thomas Stevens in Governor Wolf's administration, had just been put into operation by Secretary of State Thomas Burrowes. The Lewistown school fell in line in 1837. The teachers, however, were poorly qualified. Joseph's brother was a teacher as well, and school terms were short, about three months, and the branches the same as those of subscription schools. The rod was freely used, and the pupils were hardly able to under¬stand the importance of an education. The English language was not in high repute in the valley as yet, and German spelling, together with the trapping system in the "paragraph reading" of the German Psalter, was about all that counted for much in serious study. There were no blackboards and few books. The long plank benches were arranged around the walls of the room, with benches for the smaller boys and girls in the middle of the room. However, in which Joseph Boyer received his education, has long since been replaced. Joseph was a miller by trade, but lived on a Lewistown farm the greater part of his life. He was confirmed in the Lutheran Church of Lewistown. In 1856 he married Magdalena Gunsette, daughter while teaching Lutheran Gymnasium in New Alzace, with his father Philip Henry and his mother Margaret (Houser) Gunsette in 1828) and Mary (Lintz) Gunsette (a Lehigh county girl). To this marriage were born: Charles Clinton, Alice Minerva, George Harris and Frank Samuel. Joseph Boyer served his township eight terms as supervisor of roads, took an active interest in the political affairs of his times, and lived to enjoy a ripe old age. At this writing he is seventy-nine years old and his faithful helpmate seventy-five.

Dr. Charles Clinton Boyer, eldest son of Joseph and Magdalena (Gunsette) Boyer, was born at Lewistown, Schuylkill County, on Aug. 6, 1868. He was the first son, was Mr. Benjamin Scheirer, a man of learning, of charming personality and remarkable teaching powers. His last teacher in the public schools was that excellent master of boys, Mr. David Bunscher. He was confirmed in the Lutheran faith by Rev. J. N. S. Erb, and it was Philip Henry's idea of a rock entire. Upon his return from Europe in 1877 Mr. Boyer first came to the Kutztown Normal school, to which he continued to return every spring as a student until 1883. For one term he was a pupil of the now illustrious Dr. Thomas Balliet in his Center Square Academy. He prepared for college under Rev. Mr. Erb, while teaching at the Kutztown Grammar School. In 1885 he was graduated from Muhlenberg College with second honor. He studied Theology at the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia, but, called to the chair of Latin and Greek at Kutztown through Dr. Schaeffer, he completed his theological course under Dr. Hancher, and was ordained with his class in 1888. Then, while teaching, writing and preaching, he completed six years of post-graduate work, graduating from Wooster University in 1894, and receiving the title Doctor of Philosophy cum laude. His thesis on "Psychic Initiative in Education" attracted considerable attention. As a teacher of Latin and Greek, he is esteemed a theorist, under Dr. Hugo Munsterberg, of Harvard University. In 1901 he traveled in Europe, accompanied by Professor George E. Kramlich, the main object of interest being history, education and art.

Dr. Boyer began his teaching career at Patterson, Schuylkill Co., Pa., when he was seventeen years of age. Then he taught an ungraded school in Lewistown for two years. He gave up this school for the Landingsville grammar school, in order that he might take up college preparatory work under the Rev. Mr. Erb of Orwigsburg. This proved to be his stepping-stone to the highest grades at the Orwigsburg High School, where he remained until 1883, when he entered college. In the fall of 1887, after conducting a very successful summer school for teaching at Lynneville, Pa., he was called to the chair of Latin and Greek in the State Normal School, at Kutztown, Pa. Two years later when he had entered upon his duties as professor of Greek in the Pennsylvania Military Academy, at Chester, Pa., he was recalled to Kutztown to teach psychology and English classics. Two years later, after supplying the pulpit of St. John's Lutheran Church at Boyertown, Pa., for six months or more, and confirming a large class of children to Boyertown, he was called back to the Normal again, this time to the chair of Pedagogy, under the principalship of Dr. Hancher. In 1900, when Vice Principal Rothermel became Principal, Dr. Boyer became Vice Principal of the Normal School, a position which he fills with much ability at this writing.

Dr. Boyer has few superiors as a teacher. His rapid promotions were due not simply to his acknowledged ability, but to the progress and modern spirit and method, he is also well proportioned and conservative. He has served the cause of the Normal School and education about twenty-two years at this writing. As an institute instructor and lecturer he is as well received in Maryland, Delaware and to the Society of Berks county, and the subjects on which he has lectured most frequently are "Mental Moods and Tenses." "On the Up-Grade," "Lawlessness in Pupils," "Serpent and Dove in Discipline," "As You Would Like It in Schooldays," "The Roman Child and Ours," "Spencer's Theory of Consequence." "In Touch with the Infinite in Teaching," "Vulcan and Venus," and "An Hour in Europe." He is considered an eloquent and forceful talker, and a master in the art of thinking, and this is as true of his sermons as of his lectures. The most tempting propositions have at this writing not persuaded him to lend his influence in that direction.

As an author Dr. Boyer has won signal success. He published his "Concrete Psychology" in 1891, for the use of his own classes. "Principles and Methods of Teaching," a work that has now gone through many editions, and that is deservedly popular, followed in 1898. "The Remarks of General History," was published in 1900. This work, like that on methods of teaching, is highly praised by the reviewers. His book on "Modern Methods for Modern Teachers" was published in 1909. He is a member of the National Education Association, the Pennsylvania German Society, and the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

In 1889 Dr. Charles Clinton Boyer was united in marriage with Margie Wright, daughter of Calvin D. Wright, a cavalry officer of the Third Pennsylvania Regiment during the Civil war, and his wife, Katherine (Gartley) Wright. She was born Oct. 11, 1869, in Pottsville, Pa. The Wrights were originally English Quakers and the Gartleys Scotch Presbyterians. Through her Gartley ancestry, Mrs. Boyer is related to the Potts family, founders of Pottstown, Pa., and through her father's more distant Lafferty ancestry she is also of Irish descent. She is a cultured artist and possesses a large proportion of much of her energies to church work. There is one son, Karl Wright Boyer, born at Mt. Carmel, Pa., Nov. 26, 1897.

PETER BARBEY, the founder of Barbey's Brewery at Reading, Pa., was born Nov. 9, 1825, in Dierbach, Canton of Bernern, Rhinefall, Bavaria, son of Christopher Barbey. He attended the schools of his native place until he was fourteen years of age, when he entered the brewing establishment of his uncle, Peter Barbey, for the purpose of learning the business. After remaining there three years, he found employment in France and Switzerland and left the brewing establishments during the next four years. In this period of advancement he determined to increase his knowledge of the business in this way by practical experience. He then returned home and, being twenty-one years of age, entered the army in a cavalry regiment where he served as a soldier for four years. At the expiration of his term of service, he emigrated to America, proceeding immediately to Philadelphia, and for several years he was engaged there in different kinds of business: he then located at Reading, and entered the employ of Frederick Lauer, also a German, who had by this time established himself in the brewing business at Third and Ada avenues; he was engaged in the business at Third and Ada avenues; and several years he was engaged in the business of the firm of Charles C. and Alex. M. Lauer. In 1860 Mr. Barbey embarked in business for himself as a brewer, and carried on affairs on with increasing success until his death in 1897.

Mr. Barbey was a Democrat in politics, but never inclined to fill any public offices. He assisted in organizing the Keystone National Bank in 1883 and served as a director until his decease in 1897. He was prominently identified with Teutonia Lodge, No. 368, F. & A. M., in which he was a thirty-third degree, and with Germania Lodge, I. O. O. F., which he was a member for many years.

Mr. Barby married Rosina Kunz, daughter of Phillip Kunz, of Rhenish Bavaria, and they had two children: Katrina, who died in infancy; and John, who, after arriving of age, engaged with his father in the brewing business under the name of P. Barby & Son. Notwithstanding the decease of his father in 1897, the firm name has been continued until the present time.

JOHN BARBEY, son of Peter and Rosina (Kunz) Barby, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 19, 1850. When he was four years old his parents moved to Reading, where he was educated at the public schools, and later in a business college, and was then placed in his father's brewery for the purpose of learning all the details of the brewing business. In this he was very successful, and in 1889 the father admitted him into partnership, and they traded under the firm name of P. Barby & Son. The father died in 1897, but the son has continued the business under the same name with increasing success up to the present. In 1906 the capacity of his large plant was the greatest of any at Reading, a fact which evinces the superior judgment of the young brewer, which has resulted in the success of the brewery for the years it has been under his management.

Mr. Barby has become largely interested in a number of the financial institutions of Reading, particularly the Keystone Bank, Farmers Bank, Colonial Trust Company, and several industrial institutions, in a number of which he is a director. He has been prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity at Reading since 1876, becoming a Mason in Chandler Lodge, No. 227, and a Knight Templar in the Reading Commandery, No. 42, of which he was Eminent Commander in 1886. He has reached the thirty-second degree.

Mr. Barby married Mary Ellen Garst, daughter of George W. Garst, of Reading, a prominent building contractor for many years. They have seven children, six daughters and one son, John.

JOHN B. STERLEY, M. D., one of the most prominent citizens of Reading, Berks Co., Pa., who was distinguished as a physician and surgeon, died in Reading, Nov. 24, 1905. Dr. Sterley was born July 26, 1837, in Limerick township, Montgomery county, son of Philip and Elizabeth (Bertolette) Sterley, both of French origin.

The Sterley family was founded at an early day in Salford township, Montgomery county, by great-grandfather Sterley, who emigrated from Lorraine, France, and the first of his line to be born in America, who removed to Limerick township, carrying on agricultural pursuits in that locality all the rest of his life.

Philip Sterley, father of the Doctor, was born Feb. 28, 1800, and was educated in the common schools. He followed the occupation of his father, being a good, practical farmer and public-spirited citizen. In politics a Whig and later a Republican, he was interested in the success of his party, but never to the extent of running for any office. He died in 1868.

The early life of Dr. John B. Sterley was spent upon his father's farm, and until about sixteen years of age he attended the common schools of his native locality. At this time he went to Philadelphia, where for one year he was employed by his cousin, Simon R. Snyder, after leaving whom he entered Freeland Seminary (now Ursinus College), Pa., for one-half of the time of study. During the other half of the year, young Sterley engaged in teaching in Oley township, but after six months gave up the profession, having fully decided to engage in the practice of medicine. He entered the offices of Drs. Keeler and Groff of Hanover, Pa., to take up his preliminary studies, and shortly after engaged the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated with honor, March 6, 1857. Locating at Earlville, Lancaster county, Dr. Sterley continued there until 1860, when he moved his office to Annville, Lebanon county.

In 1862, Dr. Sterley was called to the U. S. Army as an assistant surgeon, and later, after receiving the commission of surgeon, and at the expiration of nine months was appointed examining district surgeon for the Ninth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, a position he ably filled until June, 1864, when he left the service. Until 1879 he practiced at St. Marys, Linn Co., Pa., but in that year moved to Reading, to which city, its people, its development and its varied interests, he devoted the remainder of his life. The first board of pension examiners of Berks county was organized in 1881 with Dr. Sterley as one of the members, and he served the full period, being returned to the board under the Harrison administration, when he was made president. On May 11, 1898, he was reappointed by President McKinley.

On Sept. 1, 1864, Dr. Sterley was married to Amanda R. Rightmeyer, and the one child of this union, Winfield Bradley, born Sept. 18, 1866, died Jan. 15, 1877.

Dr. Sterley was a Republican in politics. He was one of the organizers and vice-president of the Reading & Southwestern Electric Railroad. His profession connects him with the following societies: the Reading Medical Association; Berks County Medical Society; Rhenish Medical Society; the Masonic order, which he has prominently connected with St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M., and was also an active worker of Gen. William H. Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R. The death of Dr. Sterley brought grief to a large circle outside his own immediate family. His personality was strong and in many ways it made him as of another: "He earned honor and respect in public life as well as affection and veneration in private."

Mrs. Sterley, who survives her husband, resides in Reading, where she is very well known, and where she owns considerable city and suburban property.

BENJAMIN F. DETTRE, one of the older members of the Berks county Bar, was born in Upper Providence township, Montgomery county, July 4, 1846. His grandfather, Abraham Dettra, was a farmer in Lower Sal- ford township, that county, and his father, Abraham Dettra, was a farmer in Upper Providence township, same county. He died about sixty years ago. His wife was Sarah Boas, daughter of John E. Boas, who was an influential farmer and for many years justice of the peace of his township; Mr. Boas died in Chester county, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Dettra had four children, as follows: William C. died when thirty-seven years old; Andora married Samuel Bard, of Montgomery county, and died at the age of forty years; John B. is a member of Montgomery Bar; and Robert F.

Benjamin F. Dettra attended the district school and Washington Collegiate Institute, where he prepared himself for work in the school-room as teacher. He served in the Civil war in the 129th Pa. V. I. and on his return home passed the next five years in teaching in the winter and working on the farm in the summer. He now decided to take up the law for a life work, and began reading in the office of the late Albert G. Green, being admitted to the Bar in April, 1875, and later to the higher courts. He has since pursued the practice of law with ability. In addition to looking after a large private practice, Mr. Dettra has, at different times served as county and city solicitor, and as solicitor for the Board of School Controllers.

Mr. Dettra has always been alive to the public interest, is a supporter of the Democratic party, and is a member of the Rho Arcanum and other insurance companies, and is a member of the Calvary Reformed Church of Reading.

On Dec. 25, 1869, Mr. Dettra married Emma Louise Reese, daughter of William Reese, a farmer of Chester county. Four children have been born to this marriage: Emvma V. died in October, 1903, aged twenty-four; Susan R. and Sarah M., born in 1874 and 1876, respectively; and Paul Sterley was a member of the class of 1906 in the Reading high school.
Strasser. The biography of the individual man is but the history of the human race and his family, plus his environments.

The beginning of time our sun and the myriads of shining stars have been oscillating and radiating infinite energy in the form of wireless waves into the ether of space. Primitive man viewed them with superstitious awe and framed supernatural myths. Science regards them as an electro-magnetic displacement and disturbance of the ether in space and time, traveling 186,500 miles per second. The ether being the source and reservoir of all energy, there is a constant interchange of energy from ether to matter, and matter to ether, transforming it at one time into kinetic, at another into potential energy, thus causing or constituting all the phenomena of life and the universe, and known as the science of Natural Philosophy. But the loftiest ideal of man conceives them as symbols of infinite Wisdom, Power and Love, and as wireless telephonic messages of glad tidings of peace on earth and good-will toward men.

"The works of God are fair for naught Unless we see, in seeing, See hidden in the thing the thought That animates its being."

Mother Nature, the patient teacher, is ever beckoning to man the imitator, and ready to unlock her secrets. But how blind and deaf a pupil is man! Thunder rolled and lightning flashed, for ages back, heard we to use the wireless waves to perform the recent wonders of the X-ray, the wireless telegraph and wireless telephone. Nature never sleeps. Her essence is motion. Ether, matter and motion acting and reacting, forming and transforming, are the bases of all phenomena in time and space. The highest and most mysterious is life with all its environments. Thus is man, his energy, his powers, his physical and mental characteristics—all that he is—indirectly indebted to the wireless ether waves of space. Wave motion is cyclic—crest and trough, nodes and loops of energy. Such is the story of the Universe and Life. Exaltation alternating debasement with intermediate nodes of equilibrium—in fine, evolution, involution, dissolution.

Tradition is ever rife, but vague and mythical, hence the data here given are only such as are based on authentic records. The family name Strasser (or Strascher) is of ancient origin extensively disseminated, and its influence in church and state, in both the Old and the New world was no small factor. The genealogical and heraldry records (Vol. VI, Page 87) at Vienna, Austria, date the origin of the family to the age of Knighthood and Chivalry. They were then Counts of Mergentheim, Swabia (the headquarters of the order of Teutonic Knights in the year 1386), and vicinity, where a Knight Templar whose birthplace and home was Mergentheim, after long and strenuous service in the Holy Land, and being disabled for further service from wounds, returning took unto himself an orphaned nephew, named Edward Strasser. He taught him Astronomy, Astrology, Alchemy and other occult arts he had learned in the East. Edward practiced these arts among many rich Counts and Princesess, compiled books and writings which are understood andStrasser health and fame. He united in matrimonial with Jutta Von Schenck, and died at Mergentheim. A. D. 1197, leaving one son Rudiger Strasser, who loved arms more than the arts of peace. He sold his father's books and possessions, and as a man of war roamed over many lands with a company of knights he called the Black Band. Only after he had had enough of the warrior's life did he marry Euphragine Mehring, the wealthy widow of a patrician at Zweibrücken. Here he lived until his death, A. D. 1232, and left three sons, viz.: Arnold. Gunther and Frederick. Arnold, being of delicate health, Gunther, of great beauty, and Frederick, of no further record of him, nor of Frederick, who, after a duel with Count Von Spanheim, whom he killed, fled and was never after heard from. Gunther, however, remained at Zweibrücken of which he was Mayor (Stadthof), and was succeeded by his son, Henry, a Frankish or Franconian noble family. He died A. D. 1315, leaving one son John Strasser. The latter had no love for arms, engaged himself with books, music, literary work and the fine arts, and lived a quiet private life. His wife was Elizabeth Mastlin, whom he married, she being the daughter and heir of Nicholas, of a good Frankish or Franconian noble family. He died A. D. 1333, during a violent storm, his house was destroyed by fire, and his wife and five children perished, only one small boy being rescued. In consequence of this misfortune the circumstances and standing of this family were greatly reduced, and later we find the family mostly as farmers, mechanics and laborers, and the remnants in the neighborhood of Zweibrücken and the Palatinate in which regions they were still found in the beginning of the 18th century, but accurate and connected records are wanting.

The American Strasser family is without a doubt of German ancestry. Their nativity and time of emigration cannot now be definitely fixed. Tradition has the ancestral home at Wurtemberg, Rheinsh Palatinate, and Zweibrücken, and the time antedates the American Revolution, for we find them enrolled as soldiers of the war for independence as well as all the wars for the defense and preservation of the Union. According to Company Records, Nov. 3, 1749, John Nicholas Strasser enters a caveat against the acceptance of a survey on that piece of land which he holds by warrant of 27th of March—made to George Boone, until he hears as to his claim, signed Richard Peters, to Nicholas Schull, Surveyor General. Also warrants of land by surveyor May 7, 1763, Oct. 6, 1773, etc. The same John Nicholas Strasser, of Albany, Berks Co., Pa., was naturalized April 11, 1763, and as early as 1754 he is assessed £18. 4s. 6d. tax in Albany township, and his name appears for successive years to 1790, with the additional names of John, Jr., a weaver, Henry, Peter George. Until 1772 his name do not appear as a taxable married man in Windsor township. This is the great-grandfather of Dr. Thomas A. Strasser, of Reading, and Strasser's Thal or Valley, Windsor township, Berks Co., Pa., was the permanent if not the original homestead of this family. What was the relation of this family and the American Strasser is not now known, but from the similarity of the names of their children as we shall see it must have been close.

The church books of Zion's Church at or near Windsor Castle record the baptisms of seven children, the first being George and Conrad Strasser. They are Conrad, born August 1744; sponsors, Conrad Strasser and wife Catharina, the parents; Andon, July 1, 1746, sponsor Andon —; Elizabeth, born Nov. 1, 1747, sponsor Elizabeth —; Peter, born April 9, 1749, sponsors, Peter Rothermel and wife Sablya; Mathias, born July 22, 1751, sponsor Mathias —; Phillipus, born 1752; and Johannes, born April 20, 1756. Where these baptisms took place is not stated, but Zion's Church was not then organized. Another record is the baptism of John Henry Strasser, born April 11, 1777; sponsors, Conrad Strasser and wife Dorothy.

Conrad was twice married: his first wife, Dorothe (Houskenhe), bore him six children, viz.: Conrad, born in 1768; John, 1770; Magdalena; John Nicholas, died previous to 1795; John Henry; and George. His second wife, Christina (Rausch or Hummel?) also bore him two daughters and four sons. Their children were: Elizabeth, Caroline, Frederick, Michael (grandfather of our subject), Peter and Daniel.

Accordingly, there was Conrad, the first, father of seven children; Conrad, the second, father of twelve children; and Conrad, the third, oldest son of Conrad the second and brother of Michael. Conrad, the third, was thrice married, first to a Miss Sheidy, by whom he had a son John; second to a Miss Hummel, by whom he had one daughter, Rosina; third to Rosina Hummel, a sister of second wife, and they had nine children, Jeremiah, Jacob, Isaac (m. to Hannah Knittle), Hetty, Sallie, Catharine, Polly, Rachael and Leah.

On Nov. 9, 1799, Conrad Strasser, the second, petitioned to the Orphans' court of Berks county, to appoint guardians for his sons, John Henry and George, they being minors under the age of fourteen years. On the same day Magdalena, a daughter, John (Johanes), John Nicholas, minors above the age of fourteen years, petitioned court to choose guardians; they chose Conrad, the head, and almost immediately appointed him for all the above children. Conrad, the third and oldest son, born in 1768, being of age, was not included in the above. On May 5, 1802, Christina Strasser, widow and relict of Conrad Strasser, late of Windsor township, petitioned the courts—says her husband was about to leave the world. It is otherwise stated that the above petition was filed sometime later. Also, it was later stated that Frederick, Michael, Peter and Daniel are minors under age of fourteen years and have no guardians to care for their persons and estates; the court appointed John George Pocht. The same day appeared Elizabeth Strasser and Magdalena Strasser, daughters and sisters of the above, petitioned court, in behalf of Conrad Strasser, they being minors above the age of fourteen years; they chose Peter Bauscher, which choice was approved by the court. This accounts for the twelve children of Conrad Strasser, the second. The court records show that Magdalena Strasser gave a power of attorney to John Strasser, her next friend, being at that time of Lemont township, Dauphin county, dated 1795, to collect that share of inheritance due her from her mother's estate through the death of John Nicholas (Honnickel) Strasser, her brother. Elizabeth Strasser was married to — Adam (no farther record). Catharine was born Sept. 16, 1785, and married George Liason, the progenitor of the Windsor Sundays, and died March 5, 1850 (tombstone record, Zion's Church). Frederick's name is on the tax lists of Greenwich township from 1810 to 1833, when it disappears. Peter settled at Roaring Creek, Columbia county, and his wife's tombstone at Zion's Churchyard records —“mother of seventeen children.” Daniel lived on one of the original Conrad Strasser farms, died there about 1840, leaving a large family.

Michael Strasser, the grandfather of Dr. Thomas Augustus, the seventh son of Conrad, the second, and his second wife, Christina, was born at the old homestead in Easton, and died there in 1812. His widow, Sarah of Windsor, was about 75 years of age, 1791. He was confirmed in the Lutheran faith at Zion's Church. His father having died about January, 1799 (his will probated Feb. 12, 1799), and he being one of the three youngest sons mentioned in above will, who were to learn a trade arriving at the age of sixteen years, he accordingly became a carpenter and cabinet-maker and his name appears as a taxable single man in Maxatawny from 1810 to 1815. At this time Kutztown was incorporated as a borough and it was here he made his permanent home and carried on his trade. He was a member of the first fire company of Kutztown organized in 1815 and served as first secretary thereof and as a member of the first board of aldermen. He married Sarah Kittling, about 1816, a native of Mifflinburg, Pa., a sister of Mrs. Jacob Humbert, Rev. of David Humbert, Bowers Station. Mrs. Jacob Baldy and Mrs. Peter Fritz of Kutztown were aunts. Jacob of Mifflinburg, was a brother and so was William, of near Blandon. Michael was successful in business, had just finished a new home, and had a promising future, but in the prime of life he became the victim of a typhoid fever epidemic and died about December, 1820. His remains were interred in the old burying ground of the Churchyard at Kutztown, but his grave cannot now be located. Letters of administration were granted to John Wanner and Solomon Kutz, Jan. 7, 1822. He left his widow and one son, Isaac Kittling Strasser, and one daughter, Abigail. The widow was remarried to Solomon Kutz, a widower with a large family. Their issue was seven children: among them, Louisa E., born in 1826, m. Daniel B. Kutz, in 1850, both living over fifty years in the house built by Michael Strasser; Lydia m. John Van Scheet; Susan, born Sept. 5, 1832, m. Harry Scheidt. Sarah, mother of the above, was the orphaned granddaughter of John Strasser, who died on his birthday, June 29, about the year 1846, aged exactly fifty years. Abigail, only daughter of Michael Strasser, was born Sept. 10, 1821, and was married to John Snyder. They reared a large family. Mr. Snyder dying, she married Egedus Butz. She survived him and died in 1906, and was buried next to her husband in the cemetery of Main street and Strasser Alley, where she lived over half a century, reared a large family, and carried on his business.

In 1842, he married Flora Anna Kosher, a daughter of John George Koser and wife Esther (Christ) of Greenwich township. Esther was the oldest daughter of Jacob Christ and Hannah Strasser, (daughter of Peter Menger, of Bethel) or Zion's Church, Grimville, Pa., and her tombstone records: “Esther Kosher, daughter of Jacob Christ, born March 21st, 1794, married Dec. 26th, 1811. Had 3 children, 1 son and 2 daughters. Died Jan. 24th, 1832, aged 37 years, 10 months, and 3 days. Text. St. John 1:12, one of the sisters, was reared by Michael and moved to Tulpehocken; Kate m. a Christman; Polly m. a Messersmith, of Fleetwood; and Hannah m. Martin Wanner, she aged over ninety years. Her brothers were Jonathan, m. to Susan Bieber; Daniel, Jacob and Solomon (the grandfather of Nathan C. Schaefer, State Superintendent of Pennsylvania Schools).

John George Koser, maternal grandfather of Dr. Thomas A. Strasser, was born in Greenwich township, Jan. 7, 1797, on the old homestead, and died at Kutztown Nov. 28, 1873. He was the son of John George Koser of Greenwich and his second wife a Baer, of Albany. His second wife was Anna Maria Helfrich, widow of Sam Helfrich, and sister of Colonel Daniel Grim, and a born Krouse. She had four daughters. Anna Maria, Sallie, Amelia and Betzy Helfrich, and died at Kutztown about 1865. His sisters were: Regina, wife of Henry Adam, who went West; Barbara, wife of John Wanner and left a daughter; and one married to Bailer, and one married to a Kercher, moved to Lehig Gap. The Koser family were pioneer settlers of Green-which and extensive land owners. In 1754 George Koser is taxed £16 4s. 6d.; in 1759, John Koser, £20, and later we have names of John, Jacob, and George. One Jacob Koser (according to Colonial records), and twenty-three years, qualified Sept. 93, 1734, having emigrated in ship “Hope” from Rotterdam; and Christopher Koser, aged thirty-six years, in the ship “Mary” of Lon- don, qualified Sept. 6, 1732. John Koser was naturalized at Northern Liberties, Philadelphia county, on the 24th and 27th of December. The Koser who first emi-grated were natives of Wurtemberg, Swabia.

The Koser family is of Greek origin. In the year 1102 one Herman Abolde, a crusader, armourer and firmer returning homeward from the east, took a Cyprian youth captive in the mountains of the Isle of Cyprus, and brought him safely through Italy and Switzerland to his home in Salzburg, Germany. Here the Bishop Eustachius, after a consultation, himself baptized and named him Herman Koser—signifying, “the rescued, or the redeemed.” He learned the trade of his captor and later became a great warrior, and for his bravery he was rewarded in the form of presents. With these gifts he massacred in Bohmen, Ungarn and Sclavia, with which he made many destructive invasions into Baier, Schlesien and Sachsen. In Schlesien he stole and married a lady of noble family whose name was Isabella Von Koenenrit. During an engagement in the vicinity of Regensburg, while following up the enemy and rashly crossing the Danube at a dangerous place, he was drowned in the year 1145. His four sons followed the footsteps of their father and three remained in the many violent battles they fought. The fourth and youngest, named Ferdinan Strasser, joined the Crusades and returning he found most of his property destroyed. He sold the rest at a small price and moved to Augsburg and from there to Donauworth, where he married Doretie Meiningier, and on his death, A. D. 1203, he left one son Karl Koser. He married Eleonora Schippen of Innsbruck, and left several sons, whose descendants were destroyed during the Thirty Years' war, so that (according to the genealogical tables at Vienna, Vol. III, Page 202,) in the year 1654, only two remained. These two were distinctly related and the one, Albert Koser, was a magistrate or judge (Schultheiss Zu Sohingen) at Ulm, and his descendants were scattered in Upper Swabia and Switzerland. The other one was John George Koser, who was primus or principal (Klosterfocht) of a monastery at Frankfurt-on-the-Main. In the middle of the eighteenth century his descendants are found at Frankfurt and at Marburg, at the Main, and the Rhine, and in various circumstances.

Flora Anna Koser had one brother, Daniel, who died March 18, 1821, in his ninth year. She was born March 22, 1822, on the original Koser homestead, in Greenwich township. She had one sister, Hannah, born July 12, 1826, near Pottsville, and she died February 23, 1855, at Pleasant Corner, Lehigh county; the field being contracted and isolated and not adapted for a permanent home he returned to his native place to await the opportunity of a more promising field. On Oct. 21, 1868, he located at Millerstown, Lehigh county (now Macungie), and married Esther M. Albright, a daughter of Dr. William Herbst, of Trelxertown, as physician and surgeon to the Lehigh County Almshouse and hospital, serving nine years. In 1870 he became a member of Lehigh Lodge, No. 333, F. & A. M., Trelxertown, and several organizations. He served fourteen years as a school director of Macungie. The most important events here were his marriage and the birth of his three children. On May 17, 1870, Dr. Strasser united himself in hymenial bonds with Alawilda Catharine Elizabeth Greasemester, only daughter of Dr. Abraham Greasemester, a most important man of Allentown and his wife Sarah (Stettler) and sister of their son, Abraham, a successful dentist. Dr. Greasemester was born in Hereford township, Nov. 4, 1822, and is still living. His wife Sarah was born December, 1826, near Ziegels church, Weisenburg, Lehigh county, and died Aug. 7, 1907.

The children of Dr. and Mrs. Strasser are: (1) Charles William Thomas, born March 22, 1871, is a graduate of Allentown high school, Muhlenberg College, attended Mt. Airy Lutheran Theological Seminary and graduated from Divinity Department, Yale University. He has served over ten years in the Hamilton church, Monroe county. He was married to Minnie Harmon, of the same, and is succeeded in his work by Dr. R. E. E. He is mentioned farther on. (2) Isaac S. Strasser, son of Dr. Greasemester, born Aug. 8, 1876, a graduate of the Reading high school, is the husband of M. M. Albrecht, a manufacturer and wholesale shoe merchant, at No. 869 Penn street, Reading. They have one daughter, Elizabeth Strasser Albright. A Reading medical practitioner expressed a urgent desire to retire from practice, induced Dr. Strasser to buy the house at No. 210 North Sixth street, on condition that they enter into partnership for a short time until he introduced him into the practice, when he was to become his successor in his business. Accordingly Dr. Strasser moved from Macungie to the above mentioned place, Sept. 5, 1883, but the latter part of the above contract never having been fulfilled, this move proved neither agreeable nor profitable, but entailed a great financial sacrifice on the part of Dr. Strasser. In October, 1888, he moved to No. 31 South Ninth street, and attended special courses on eye, ear, nose and throat diseases at the Philadelphia and New York Polyclinic and postgraduate schools. His practice steadily increased and in April, 1891, he located at No. 914 Penn street, and in May, 1899, he moved to No. 921 Penn street, where having relinquished general practice he still continues the treatment of eye, ear, nose and throat and chronic diseases.

Dr. Strasser is now past sixty-three years and is still a lover of books and nature and although his youthful aspirations have not been realized by a further training, his training has been sufficiently utilized. He has more than compensated for it by his studious life and a library of standard authors. As a relaxation from his professional duties, he has engaged in original research in signalling through space, direct conversions of the energy of coal (crystallized sunlight) into electricity, local and long-distance electric stethoscope for diagnosis of diseases of heart and lungs, transportation of electric power, navigation of space, hearing and lighting, aids of hearing for the deaf, means of a literature for the blind, the phonograph and other fascinating and interesting subjects. In 1899 he discovered the principle of telephony and telephony, by means of loading the lines then centralizing the electrostatic capacity with the electro-magnetic induction and sending along the wires distortion-less waves suffering equal attenuation. He was anticipated by Prof. Pupin, of Columbia University, who referred to it in the idea that in the spring of 1900 he designed a self-restoring a automatic eye or ear for the detection of wireless telegraphic and telephonic waves, and later found it was used in the Italian navy and was the coherer used by Signor Marconi to receive the first wireless signal across the Atlantic on Dec. 19, 1901. He has since continued the work and his experiments, and invented transmitters, repeaters and receivers embodying an entire new and broad principle for telephony, with and without wires, and foresees the possibility at a day not far distant of talking across the Atlantic and the Continent as easily as we talk to New York or Chicago.

Dr. Strasser, having considered through life that the acquisition of knowledge for the betterment of society or race and the conscientious discharge of the duties of his self-sacrificing profession are paramount, found no time for the acquisition of wealth.

RECORD OF EDUCATION. Strasser began his education at the common schools of Macungie and Reading, to which city he had come with his father when a boy, and later attended the high school. He took up the reading of medicine with his father, following with courses in the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, and the Baltimore Medical University, from which he graduated in 1894. After that he did post-graduate work at the University of Vermont, graduating therefrom in 1895, and Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, graduating from the latter in 1896. While there he was on the hospital staff as clinical assistant in the eye and surgical department of Jefferson College Hospital. He continued to practice in Lehigh county in July, 1896, remaining at his father's old location in Macungie until Sept. 28, 1898, when he came to Reading, becoming a member of the staff of Reading Hospital, where he served for a period of five years. Meantime he had entered upon general practice as assistant to his successful father, and in his increasing practice made it necessary for him to resign from his hospital duties at the end of that time. Dr. Strasser is a general practitioner, and has been very successful in his treatment of many complicated cases, giving most careful attention to his patients, sparing himself in no way when life or health are in the balance. He has won the confidence and affection of the community, and he enjoys as much practice as he is able to handle. He was nominated as candidate for Coroner of Berks county on June 5, 1906, his thirty-third birthday, and was elected the following fall, being his first candidacy and the winner over five competitors. It was his lot to officiate at the Boyertown fire which occurred Jan. 13, 1908, and where 171 lives perished. The Doctor is a close student and has associated himself with the various medical organizations of his county and State, including the Lehigh County Medical Society, the Reading Medical Society and the Pennsylvania State Medical Association. The Doctor's offices are located at No. 1024 Elm street, where he also has his home. In politics he is a Democrat.

Dr. Strasser married Miss Laura E. Dreibelbis, daughter of Dr. Samuel L. Dreibelbis, and one child has been born to this union, a daughter, Hazel.

DAVID MERKEL. One of the well-known names in Berks county is that of Merkel. The family has been connected with the history of this section of the State for many years, a worthy representative being the subject of this review. David Merkel was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, May 3, 1837. He was the son of Peter Merkel, and the grandson of Peter Merkel.

Peter Merkel, the grandfather, is supposed to have been a native of Germany, leaving that country with his parents when quite young. He married Christiana Weiss, and together they made their home in the vicinity of Fogelsville. In 1859 he and his family removed to the Lehigh Valley, where they lived for many years. They both lie in the old cemetery at Zeigler's church in Lehigh county. Their family numbered five children: Peter (2); John, who lived in Weisenburg township, and whose only son was named Charles; Jacob, who also had a son Charles, whose home was near Kline's Corner, in Maxatawny township; Jonas, of Longswamp township, whose children were—John, Willoughby and Mary; Daniel, also of Longswamp township, who had three children—Nathan, Eliza and Hannah.

Peter Merkel (2), son of Peter, and father of David, was born in Macungie, Lehigh county, Sept. 23, 1796. His occupation was that of farming, which he followed all of his life. A fine tract of seventy acres of land lying on the line between Maxatawny and Longswamp townships was kept under cultivation. Besides his farm work he took great interest in the affairs of the community, and was also active in the work of Zeigler's Church, being deacon and elder of that organization. Peter Merkel's wife was Catharine Walbert, daughter of John Walbert. She was born Sept. 14, 1801, and died March 27, 1865, aged sixty-three years, nine months, and thirty days. Two years later, on May 30th at the age of seventy eight years, eight months, seven days. Both are buried at Zeigler's Church in Lehigh county. To Mr. and Mrs. Merkel seven children were born, four daughters and three sons: Hettie died unmarried; Caroline m. David Zeigler; Eliza m. Isaac Mayer; John, a resident of Max-atawny township, had children—Albert, William, Harvey, Cassie, Peter, and four who died in childhood; Mary, born Dec. 24, 1834, m. Thomas Warmkessel; David is referred to later; Henry, living near Cedarville, had children—Frank, Harry, Peter, Edwin, Eliza and Hettie.

David Merkel spent the first eighteen years of his life on the farm, where he became proficient in all work pertaining to an agricultural life. Here was acquired the strength of mind and muscle that was to place of section foreman, retaining this position for more than forty years, or until two years before his death. The long service to the railroad entitled him to the well-earned pension which he was receiving at the time of his death, Aug. 31, 1906, at his home one mile south of Rothrocksville, in Maxatawny township, where he had made his residence since 1868. Here on a fine tract of nine acres with a substantial brick residence he lived all of the time that could be spared from the exacting duties required by such an important public utility as a railroad. He was a Reformed member of the Maxatawny Zion Church, in the adjoining grave-yard of which he is buried.

On Oct. 5, 1861. Mr. Merkel married Sarah Matilda, daughter of Peter Schwoyer, of Fritztown, Spring township. They became the parents of eight children: Catharine, born Oct. 2, 1852; Mr. Franklin M.; Mary, born Oct. 14, 1859. Mr. George M., born Feb. 3, 1864, is a farmer in Richmond township; Louisa R., born Oct. 20, 1865, m. Charles Levan, of Maxatawny; Anna Esther, born Nov. 2, 1867, m. Martin Good, of New York City; Laura E., born Aug. 31, 1876, m. James Guldin, a farmer of Maxatawny township; Robert W., born 1874, died 1889; Lillie A., born June 28, 1877, m. John Kemp; Caroline, born 1883, died 1886.

ELMER F. REED, senior member of the firm of Reed & Kurtz, restaurant proprietors at No. 433 Penn street, Reading, Pa., was born April 23, 1841, in Marion township, Berks county, Febr. 8, 1876, son of Franklin B. Reed, and grandson of Daniel Reed.

Franklin B. Reed was born one mile north of Stouchsburg, Dec. 23, 1839, and died Jan. 16, 1903. He was reared to farming, and he followed that occupation all of his life. His home town was operated by himself, and he owned a tract of forty-five acres there, and this tract was crossed by the old Union canal and Tulpehocken creek. He was a man of progressive spirit, and for over ten years was a school director in his township. He was a prominent member of Reed church, at Stouchsburg. He was a man of sound judgment, and his strong voice was carried with effect by him in the councils of the people. He was a member of the board of supervisors for a number of years, and was associated with others in the work of raising the bridge over the Tulpehocken settlement in 1723. He served as a deacon and elder, and also as treasurer of the church. He was always active in public affairs, and was one of the useful men in his community. He was an antiquarian, and he had a large collection of Indian relics, including arrow heads, tomahawks, hatchets, skinners, giggers, etc., all now in the possession of his son, John A. Mr. Reed married Rebecca E. Reed, born Aug. 25, 1841, daughter of John S. and Rebecca (Eckert) Reed. She now lives among her children. Three children were born of this union. Bessie, born in 1864, was drowned in the Union canal at the age of seven years; John A., born Oct. 3, 1871, married Annie Sholl; and Elmer F.

Elmer F. Reed received his education in the district schools, and later attended Stouchsburg Academy, then under the direction of Rev. John Klingler and Prof. Harry Posey. He was brought up on the home farm, working there until he was nineteen years of age. In 1865 he came to Reading and entered the employ of Ezra Weinrich, proprietor of Weinrich's restaurant below Sixth street on Penn, now at Penn and Seventh streets. There Mr. Reed worked for about four years, gaining a very thorough and practical knowledge of the business. In 1899 he began for himself at No. 548 Penn street, and for three years carried on the restaurant there with great success. In 1902 he purchased a partnership with Adam Kurtz under the firm name of Reed & Kurtz, and they have since conducted the restaurant at No. 433 Penn street. They are well known all over the county, and have a very large trade, paying particular attention to working men. They employ seven waiters, and the partners personally look after the business.

Mr. Reed is a member of Camp No. 500, P. O. S. of A., at Reading; and the Liberty Fire Company. He is a member of Reed's Lutheran Church at Stouchsburg. In politics he is a Republican.

On March 3, 1907, Mr. Reed married Hermie Hoffa, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Schoener) Hoffa, of Marion township. Two children have been born to them, namely: Earl Valentine and Theodore Roosevelt.

ADAM KURTZ, junior member of the firm of Reed & Kurtz, proprietors of a popular restaurant at No. 433 Penn street, Reading, Pa., was born Aug. 21, 1877, in Marion township, Berks Co., Pa., son of William and Seleca (Kintzer) Kurtz.

William Kurtz was born March 29, 1884, in Marion township, where the Kurtz family was established in the eighteenth century. All of his life has been spent in agricultural pursuits on the fine 100-acre farm on which he now resides, and on which is situated an old two and one-half story stone barn, a part of which was erected by Johann Jacob Losch, in about 1793, in which year he also erected the old historic house, which was used as a restaurant in Colonial days. William Kurtz was married (first) May 12, 1863, to Amanda Grimes, who died in 1865, in her twenty-first year, leaving two children: Lizzie, m. to David Aithouse, of Womelsdorf; and Sallie, m. to William Boyer, of Heidelberg township.

On July 10, 1867, when he was united with Seleca Kintzer, daughter of Isaac and Rebecca Kintzer, and there were two sons born to this marriage; Adam; and Samuel, born March 2, 1881, m. Lottie Trautman, by whom he has had two children, Mildred and George. Adam Kurtz received no education in the public schools of his native township, and his youth was spent in agricultural pursuits on the old home farm. Deciding that there was a brighter future offered him in the city, he came to Reading in 1885, and for a time was in the employ of E. S. Weinrich, at No. 545 Penn street, but in June, 1902, with Elmer F. Reed as a partner, he established the present business, the connection having continued to the present time. The restaurant caters especially to the working man, and is one of the most popular of its kind in the city. Great success has attended the partners’ efforts. In fraternal circles, Mr. Kurtz is connected with Washington Camp No. 560, P. O. S. of A.; Muhlenberg Lodge, No. 1082, I. O. O. F., both of Reading; Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree; Williamsport Commandery, Knight’s Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also a member of Liberty Fire Company. He and his family belong to First Reformed Church.

On June 1, 1903, Mr. Kurtz was married to Bessie Helen, youngest daughter of Robert and Mary (Reider) Horn, of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz were made in their comfortable home at No. 513 Weiser street.

ROBERT H. DENNISON, Sr., now retired, who was master painter for the Philadelphia & Reading system, with headquarters at Reading, Pa., is one of the best known men in his line in this city, as well as a highly respected citizen. Although a native of another country he has given his allegiance to his adopted land and proved himself a public-spirited, devoted citizen, and is the most successful man born in 1862, at Kingston, Canada, and was but a child when his parents removed to Albany, N. Y., and in the public schools of that city he obtained his education.

His schooling completed, Mr. Dennison apprenticed himself to learn the trade of carriage painter, a calling he industriously followed successfully until 1887, when he was offered a position in the painting department of the New York Central Railroad. This he accepted and held until 1896, when he became master painter for the Philadelphia & Reading Company. In this position he continued to fill until his retirement to the satisfaction of all concerned. He showed great executive ability in his management of the two hundred men under him, his work covering several divisions of the system, and he won the regard and respect of his subordinates as well as his superiors, a state of affairs very essential to success.
In 1887 Mr. Dennison was married to Miss Margaret Acker, of Albany, N. Y., and to this union has been born one son, Robert H., who is employed in the mechanical department of the Philadelphia & Reading Company. The pleasant home and comfortable residence of Mr. Dennison is located on the Kutztown Road, Hyde Park. Mr. Dennison is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M., of Reading; Reading Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 448, K. T.; Philadelphia Consistory, No. 320, of Philadelphia; the local Lodge of Perfection, of Reading; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He also belongs to Reading Lodge of Elks. Mr. and Mrs. Dennison are members of the Episcopal Church.

CHARLES A. SMITH, the well known contractor of Reading, who resides at No. 313 North Ninth street, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 10, 1856, son of Joseph T., whose father was a farmer of Adams county.

Joseph T. Smith attended the public schools of Adams county, and when a young man learned the brick-laying trade. His early business life was spent in Reading, but later he removed to Philadelphia, where he spent eight years, at the end of that time returning to Reading. In 1873 he engaged in contracting in brick, and this he followed very successfully until his death, Aug. 6, 1891. He married Barbara Ritner, daughter of Jacob Ritner, and to this union there were born: Frank, a brick layer is employed with his brother; Charles A.; Mary, m. to George Rippel; John, deceased; Vincent A.; and William A., who was contractor partner until their merger in 1897. For a number of years Mr. Joseph T. Smith was a school controller from the Ninth ward.

Charles A. Smith's educational advantages were secured in the schools of Reading, after leaving which he secured employment in the Scott works, and he continued at various positions until 1872, when he began to learn the bricklayer's trade with H. J. DeLong, of Reading. Remaining with this gentleman but a short time, Mr. Smith entered his father's employ and continued with him until the latter's death, when he and his brother William took up the business, which they continued until William's death. Since this time Mr. Charles A. Smith has continued the business alone with great success. Among the many large buildings of Reading erected by the Smiths may be mentioned the St. Joseph Hospital, and Mr. Smith has also done much work for the well-known firm of Rehr & Fricker.

Charles A. Smith married Maggie Waldman, daughter of Joseph Waldman, and to this union there have been born: Joseph, who is engaged with his father at brick laying; Mamie, William, and Edward. Mr. Smith is a Democrat in politics, but has never cared for office. He is a member of the St. Paul's Catholic Church. Fraternally, Mr. Smith is affiliated with the Eagles.

LOTZ. The records of the Lotz family show that it was founded in America prior to the Revolution by (I) Nicholas Lotz, who was born Feb. 20, 1749, in the Palatinate, Germany. He emigrated to Pennsylvania when still a young man, first settling in the western section of the county of Berks. Some time previous to the breaking out of hostilities in the Rev. War, he had purchased from the Indians the tract of land which became the owner of two miles at its mouth, a princely possession, and he conducted it very successfully. When the struggle for independence demanded his services, he was prominently identified with the patriotic movement at Reading. In January, 1778, he was selected chairman of the standing committee. He served as delegate to the Provincial Congress in June, 1776, and upon his return home he took an active part in the enlistment of men. He himself was commissioned lieutenant-colonel, and took part in the campaign of the "Flying Camp" at New York, where he was engaged in the battle of Long Island and taken prisoner. He was admitted to parole within certain bounds on April 16, 1777, and exchanged on Sept. 10, 1779. He showed great interest in militia matters, being at the head of the battalion in the central section of the county from 1775 through a period of many years. In 1780 he was appointed commissioner of county supplies for the army until the close of the war. The executive council addressed him as colonel, and recognized him as holding such rank.

Col. Lotz represented Berks county in the General Assembly from 1784 to 1786, and again from 1790 to 1794, and he filled the office of associate judge in the commonwealth from 1795 to 1798. Then Mifflin gave him the appointment, not only because of his belief that he was the best man for the exalted position, but also because of the deep friendship which existed between them. While President Washington was at Reading on his way to Carroll, in 1794, Col. Lotz commanded the imposing parade which honored the presence of the distinguished visitor. The review took place in Penn square, and the President was stationed on the second story of the "Federal Inn" (now the site of the Farmers Bank building). Col. Lotz was a tall, finely proportioned man, over six feet in height, and his weight did not exceed 300 pounds. On this occasion, he attracted marked attention not only on account of his commanding presence, but also because of his military, political and social prominence. Col. Lotz died at Reading Nov. 28, 1807, and his remains were interred in the graveyard of the Reformed church, but for they were removed to the Charles Evans cemetery. Eight children survived Col. Lotz: Philip, Nicholas, Jacob, John, Henry, Michael, William and Rosa (m. to John Yeager).

(II) Philip Lotz, son of Col. Lotz, was a life-long resident of Reading and for many years he kept a hotel at Lutz Dam. By trade he was a saddler. In 1850-57 he represented the Southwest ward in the council. By his wife, Catherine, he had children as follows: Sarah m. Ivan Benson; Rebecca m. a Mr. Shamman; Hannah m. George Fichthorn; Mary m. Paris Hain; Molly m. Gotz; and many others. Philip Lotz, on the fourth of July, 1846, was removed to the Charles Evans cemetery. Eight children survived Col. Lotz: Philip, Nicholas, Jacob, John, Henry, Michael, William and Rosa (m. to John Yeager)." and became bar clerk for several establishments, finally establishing himself in the hotel business in which he continued for the first forty years. But he is now almost retired at No. 458 Tulpehocken street, Reading. In 1865 Mr. Lotz married Ellen Catherine Lieb, born March 8, 1850, daughter of Joshua Lieb of Spring township. Mr. and Mrs. Lotz have these children: Sallie C., George E., Rosa, Annie, Edward, Joseph, Ella and Howard, all of whom reside in Reading.

(V) George E. Lotz, son of Andrew Lotz, was born in Reading Aug. 16, 1869. He commenced working in a pipe foundry at Second and Court streets when only fourteen years old, and there remained for several years, when he went to work in a brick yard. After several years he engaged with the United States Express Company, and was with them for nine years, when he changed to the Adams Express Company, and remained with them for eighteen months. For one year he was in the employ of the Union Cab Company, and then for another year he was with a wholesale house. His next employer was W. H. Luden, the candy manufacturer of Reading, whose head teamster he was for three years. On Jan. 8, 1906, Mr. Lotz embarked in the hotel business, and is the proprietor of the popular hotel at No. 153 North Tenth street, which he since conducted so as to win for his hospitality a steady patronage, not only from the traveling public, but also from residents of the city.

For three years Mr. Lotz served as a member of the National Guard, and with Company I of the Fourth Regiment was at Drifton, and at Latimore, Pa. This company was first attached to the Eleventh regiment. He is now a member of the First Regiment, Veteran Reserve Corps, No. 16; the Old Guard Association; the Reading Turnverein; and Nest No. 116, American Order of Owls. He is also the representative of the Liquor Dealers Protective Association. Ever since old enough to cast his first vote, he has been a Democrat.

In 1892 Mr. Lotz married Catharine Raeger, daughter of Henry and Emma (Snyder) Raeger, of Reading, and they have two children, Elwood H. and Walter A.

(111) William Lotz, son of Philip, and father of Casper Lotz, was born at Reading April 4, 1799. All of his life was spent in Reading, where he carried on a large and successful butchering business on North Fifth street at the location of the present Masonic Temple. Mr. Lotz was active in church work, assisting in building the First Reformed and St. John's Reformed churches of Reading. He served on the building committees of both churches, and was very liberal in his contributions. Among other things he contributed the brick used in the erection of St. John's Reformed church at Ninth and Chestnut streets. He married Sarah Hess, daughter of Casper Hess, of Reading, and they had these children: Barbara m. Rev. Henry Hoffman, a Reformed minister; Katharine m. John H. Seltzer; Caroline died unmarried; William died in infancy; Henry is of Reading; Philip is of Reading; Casper H.; Emma m. Albert Briemer, of Reading.

Casper Lotz was born in Reading Oct. 27, 1839, and was educated in the public schools of Reading. He learned butchering from his father, following that line of business all of his active life in Reading. For years he attended the Reading market on Penn Square, and was one of the well known butchers of the city for nearly half a century, and controlled the best trade, always carrying a very fine class of goods. He gave his personal supervision to the work. His butcher shop was on North Fifth street, the present location of the Masonic Temple. This property was the home stead of his grandfather, Casper Hess. Mr. Lotz built his residence, in the southern corner of Fifth and Windsor, and there he also had his shop in business. In 1894 Mr. Lotz retired from business in 1904, and the family now reside at No. 715 North Fourth street, Reading. In politics, Mr. Lotz is a Republican, and in 1864 cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. He served in the common council of Reading from 1850 to 1856. He is a member of the Reformed church.

In 1850 Mr. Lotz married Rebecca Nagle, daughter of Henry and Mary (Homan) Nagle, and they had a family as follows: Alice m. Ellsworth Leinbach, of Reading; Harry W. is engaged in a laundry business at Reading; Sue is at home; William was accidentally killed on the Reading railroad at Blandon, Pa., on June 5, 1904, leaving a daughter Edna. Mrs. Casper H. Lotz died suddenly Feb. 25, 1909.

GEORGE A. LEINBACH, late of Reading, who was well known in business circles as the junior member of the firm of Leinbach & Bros., died at his residence, No. 611 Walnut street, Reading, at four o'clock, Thursday afternoon, Sept. 21, 1905. He was born in Bern township Sept. 29, 1843, son of Christian and Susan (Althouse) Leinbach.

The Leinbach family is an old one in Berks county. Mr. George A. Leinbach's line of descent from the earliest kneeling member of the American race, is through Johannes, (and his wife Catharine Riehm), John Daniel (member of the State Assembly from Berks county in 1790), and Christian (and his wife Susan Althouse).

At the age of eighteen years, George A. Leinbach enlisted in Company A, 31st P. V. I., being mustered in Sept. 5, 1862. On Oct. 21, 1862, he was appointed to sergeant-major of the regiment, and he served until the close of the war, receiving his honorable discharge June 16, 1865. In the fall of the same year Mr. Leinbach and his brother, Joseph A., formed a partnership and engaged in the clothing business, continuing thus until the death of George A. In business circles Mr. Leinbach was known as an active and progressive man, always able to see an opportunity and grasp it. His business principles were hard steady work, fair, square dealing, courteous and gentle manners. The business which he and his brother started gradually enlarged until their establishment became the leading and best known clothing house in the city of Reading.

Mr. Leinbach never took an active part in politics, but in religious work was very active, being very charitable, and distributing much in that way. He was a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church, and was a member of the Daughters of the Revolution. At the last session of the General Synod of the Reformed Church before his death Mr. Leinbach was elected a member of the Board of Ministerial Relief.

Mr. Leinbach married Miss Emma C. Shartle, daughter of Bennevile and Mary (Shenk) Shartle. She survives her husband and makes her home in Reading. The only child born to Mr. and Mrs. Leinbach still surviving is Katharine I., wife of C. Clarence Long, of Reading, and mother of a son, George Leinbach Long.

George Leinbach Long, grandson of George A. Leinbach, possesses a beautiful claw foot Chippendale chair, which was used by John Daniel Leinbach in the Colonial Assembly which met at Philadelphia in 1735. The chair was given to him by his father, but when Mr. Leinbach's term of office expired he bought it for him. He believes, and it has since descended to the nearest and eldest male Leinbach. Its history as printed on the back of the chair is as follows: "Daniel Leinbach, of Gilbertsville, Montgomery Co., was a member of the Colonial Assembly held in the State House of Philadelphia, 1735, and when his term had expired returned to the chair he had used in the Assembly from the State as a memorandum, paying $5.00 for the unique piece of furniture."

D. WEBSTER BLAND KUPP, M. D., a popular physician, residing at Gibraltar, Berks Co., Pa., has met his death in the Mexican war. He was born at Schuylkill Haven, Schuylkill county, July 25, 1835. The original spelling of the name was "Krupp," and the family is distantly related to the noted gun makers.
Frederick Krupp, great-grandfather of Dr. Krupp, emigrated from Germany and became one of the early settlers of Union township, Berks county, taking up a large tract of land opposite Douglassville, and there he engaged in farming and blacksmithing. Frederick Krupp had four sons: William, John, Frederick and Henry.

John Krupp, son of Frederick, was born in Union township, Berks county, at the time his father was professor in both farming and blacksmithing. He was a member of the German Baptist Church of Chester county, Pa. He had seven children: William, Samuel, John, Isaac, Harrison, Elizabeth (m. Jacob Haws, a carpenter and undertaker of Union township) and Mary E. (m. Henry W. Titlow, of Pottstown, Montgomery Co., Pa.).

Isaac Krupp, son of John, was born in the old Kupp home, Feb. 10, 1819, and there grew to manhood. He learned the tailor's trade, and conducted a clothing store at Schuykill Haven, Schuylkill county, Pa., and later one at Pittston, Pa. His health failed, and in 1860 he gave up his mercantile business and returned to the farm, farming for his father. In a few years he purchased the farm and operated it until his death Jan. 3, 1893. In 1840 he became a local minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was a preacher through all the remainder of his life. On Aug. 4, 1839, he married Margaret L. Bland, who was born Jan. 19, 1819, daughter of Edward and Martha Bland. Edward Bland was born Aug. 23, 1774, and belonged to the old Bland family of Mt. Airy, Union township, Berks county, Pa. He was the father of the following children: Edward, born Jan. 22, 1794; Catherine, Dec. 1, 1795; Mary, July 15, 1800; Ann, April 13, 1802; William, Sept. 12, 1804; Samuel, Nov. 15, 1806; Robert, Jan. 22, 1809; Adam, May 5, 1811; John, Jan. 6, 1816; and Margaret L. Jan. 19, 1819. To Isaac and Margaret L. (Bland) Krupp were born four children, namely: Elizabeth Anna, born May 5, 1845, died Aug. 27, 1867; Robert, Dec. 10, 1849, died Feb. 11, 1851; John S. Richards, a leading member of the Berks County Bar, and after graduating with first honors at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., Sept. 1, 1868, took charge of a classical institute at St. Michaels, Md., and died at that place Dec. 30, 1868; Walter Earl, born Sept. 5, 1853, died Nov. 17, 1858; and D. Webster B., born July 4, 1857.

Dr. D. Webster B. Krupp received his early education in the Hill school at Pottstown, Montgomery county, and he began the study of medicine with Dr. Franklin R. Gerhard, of Douglassville, Berks county. After a three-years course he graduated from the Medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., March 15, 1882. On June 1, 1882, he located at Gibraltar, Berks county, for the practice of medicine, and there he has continued ever since. He has built up a large practice and has won a warm place in the hearts of the people in the village and in the surrounding country.

Dr. Krupp is a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party. In 1885 and 1897 he was a delegate to the Republican State convention from Berks county, and in 1892 was alternate delegate to the National Republican Convention at Minneapolis, Minn. For many years he has been a member of the county committee. From 1899 to 1905 he was a member of the school board in Robeson township, sitting at different times the offices of president, secretary and treasurer of the board. Since May 1, 1898, he has been a member of the board of Pension Examining Surgeons and secretary of the board since 1899. He is an ardent friend and supporter of the Hon. Boies Penrose, senior senator of Pennsylvania. In the fall of 1903 Dr. Krupp was raised a Mason in Union Lodge, No. 479, F. & A. M.; he is a charter member and past president of Washington Camp, No. 595, O. E. S.; and is a member of the Berks County Medical Society, which has been a member of the State Medical Society since June 29, 1887, and of the American Medical Association since 1896. Dr. Krupp is both the practical, resourceful physician and loyal friend, belonging to that happy class of useful men, now all too fast disappearing in the rush of modern life—the family physicians.

On March 15, 1882, Dr. Krupp was united in marriage with Amanda Smith, daughter of Jacob Smith, of Shenkel, Chester Co., Pa. To this union were born two sons: Warren Newton, born May 24, 1884, died June 5, 1888; and Webster Bland, born Jan. 13, 1889, graduated from the preparatory department of Dickinson College in June, 1897, and then entered the Medico-Chirurgical College, Philadelphia, Pa., to take up the profession so ably followed by his father. Mrs. Krupp died June 6, 1906. Dr. Krupp married (second) Anna F. (Warmkessel) Wolfe, widow of Dr. William S. Wolfe, of Fleetwood, Pa. This union has been blessed with one daughter, Miriam Bland, born March 6, 1898. Dr. and Mrs. Krupp are members of the Lutheran Church.

SAMUEL C. MAYER, for over fifty years a prominent citizen of Reading, where he died at an advanced age, was prominent both in the business and administration of public affairs of that city.

Mr. Mayer was a native of Lancaster, Pa., born April 17, 1824, son of George Louis and Esther (Clarkson) Mayer. He received his education in his native place, where he passed his early boyhood, being seven years of age when he went to school. His first business venture here was in the hardware line, in association with his cousins, John and William Keim, and later he entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, A. M. Hart, in the dry-goods business. He was also interested in the West Reading Mill, which he served as secretary and treasurer, and in all his enterprises he proved his right to the high standing he enjoyed among business men wherever known.

At the breaking out of the Civil war Mr. Mayer enlisted for service in the Union army, becoming a member of Company C, 426 Pennsylvania Volunteers, and he was a soldier until the close of the conflict. It was after his return from the army that he began to take an active interest in municipal affairs in Reading. He was a staunch member of the Democratic party, and as its candidate in 1873 was elected mayor of the city by a majority of 451 votes, his Republican opponent being William Geiger. He served one term in that responsible incumbency, giving thorough satisfaction to his constituency and maintaining the high reputation he had made in business life. In 1880 Mr. Mayer was a member of the common council, representing the Seventh ward. Mr. Mayer was in poor health for a number of years toward the close of his life, suffering from a complication of ailments, but his last illness was comparatively brief. He died at his residence No. 144 North Fifth street, on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 25, 1906, aged eighty-two years, five months, eight days. He was a member of the Episcopal Church.

Mr. Mayer married Miss Mary A. Hunter, whom he had been connected with for many years, the only surviving member of his family being Miss Mary H. Mayer, principal of the Girls' high school, Reading.

LATshaw. The first of the name of Latshaw in America came to Pennsylvania late in the eighteenth century, and settled either in Chester or Montgomery county, and there John was born. John Latshaw, on reaching manhood, settled in the vicinity of Fritztown, Berks county.

John Latshaw (2), son of John and grandfather of Howard and Adam Latshaw, was born in Spring township about 1804, and died in middle life. He was a tailor by trade, and was also engaged for many years in quarrying stone, which he hauled to Reading and other places.

He married Polly (Mary) Hinnershitz, and to them were born the following children: Jacob; John (3); Abraham; Isaac; Harriet, m. to Solomon Yerger;
Mary, m. to Valentine Moyer; Jonas; Catherine, who died at the age of ten years; Joseph, a farmer of Spring township; and Susan, m. to John Moyer. Both John (2) and his wife are buried at Hain's Church.

John Latshaw (3) was born Nov. 7, 1838, in Spring township, and died Aug. 29, 1908. He was an engineer and was sixteen years with the G. W. Alexander Company, of Reading. During the Civil war he enlisted as a member of Battery of 1st Pa. Light Artillery in February, 1864. He served in the Second Army Corps, Army of the Potomac, and among others participated in the following engagements: Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor and siege of Petersburg. He was mustered out with his regiment June 9, 1865, and was given honorable discharge. Latshaw married Rebecca Recedy, born Dec. 28, 1839, who died Sept. 26, 1902, daughter of John Reedy, of Spring township, and children as follows were born to them: Mary E.; J. William, who died suddenly in 1907, aged forty-three years; Thomas; Adam, of Reading, m. to Christina F. Bower; Howard; and Catherine M., and Mr. and Mrs. Latshaw are buried at Sinking Spring burial ground.

Adam Latshaw, son of John (3), was born at Sinking Spring, May 12, 1868. When still quite young he learned the hatter trade, and during the summer months of the year was at the Alexander Hatter Factory at West Reading, and during the winters he attended school. For about six years he was employed by the Alexanders, and later he worked for Kessler's at Reading for about seven years. In 1895 he commenced working at the John Hendel Hatter Factory, and continued with them as journeyman until 1901, when he was made foreman of the blocking department. This position he has since most capably filled, and being a good mechanic himself, he is able to direct wisely the nine men in his charge. He has his own home in this city, located at No. 118 Hamilton street, and in 1905 he built his present handsome residence, a two-story brick, to take the place of the former home at that number. He is the owner of some fine pigeons, all flying homers, and of these he has from one to three hundred all the time; his best bird won a two-mile prize at the street races in Reading, and he keeps fancy chickens, white, brown and buff Leghorns, as well as other fancy breeds.

On July 6, 1894, Adam Latshaw was married to Christina (or Christie) F. Bower, daughter of John and Christine Freidricka (Bower, Bower, both natives of Wittensberg, Germany, who emigrated to America, landing at Castle Garden July 4, 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Bower have five children; Maria Catharine, Christina Friedricka, Wilhelm Frederick, Rosanna Barbara and Martin Frederick. Mr. and Mrs. Latshaw have one daughter, Rosina Helen, an accomplished musician who began playing the piano when only seven years of age, and who is now attending the public schools.

Howard Latshaw, son of John (3) and brother of Adam, was born in Spring township Sept. 15, 1870, and was educated in the township schools. He was but thirteen years of age when he learned the hatter trade with G. W. Alexander & Co., with whom he served a full apprenticeship of three and one-half years. He continued in the employ of this firm until March 1, 1890, when he engaged in the grocery business at the corner of the corner of Spruce street and Second avenue, West Reading, where he owns a brick dwelling 15x43 feet, with additions. He carries a full line of general merchandise, and he possesses the full confidence of the community in which his business is located, his good trade being a result of his prudent management and his prices moderate. In addition to his home business property Mr. Latshaw owns much other valuable building property in the borough, and he is considered one of the most substantial business men in West Reading. In politics he is a Democrat. He was baptized and confirmed by the Rev. William H. Myers, of Reading, and now holds membership in Bethany Lutheran Church of West Reading.

On Sept. 15, 1884, Mr. Latshaw was married to Annie Eyrich, born Oct. 17, 1852, who died Dec. 9, 1893, daughter of Franklin and Katharine A. of Evans, the former of whom lost his life at the age of twenty-three years, when with his brother on a pleasure trip, he slipped on the deck of a steamer and fell overboard. Mrs. Latshaw had the following half-brothers and sisters: Annie, Richard; Robert; Anna, Mary, and Frank, all of whom are deceased, with the exception of Miss Katharine A., who with her mother resides at the home of Mr. Latshaw in West Reading.

GEORGE H. LASH, deceased, who was long a citizen of the city of Reading, being employed for a period of thirty years at the Seyfert & McManus Iron Company, was born in Baden, Germany, June 21, 1819. Mr. Lash was educated in the common schools of his native country, where he was employed until his twenty-eighth year, at which time, in 1847, he came to America. He at once came to Reading, finding employment as a laborer, but later entered the employ of Seyfert & McManus, in whose iron mill he worked as engineer for thirty years. Mr. Lash died Aug. 21, 1892, aged seventy-three years, two months.

Adam Latshaw, son of John (3) and Jacob, was born in Montgomery county, Pa., whence he removed to Reading, where he died.

Adam H. Leader, one of Reading's successful business men, has been prominent in public life as well, having in 1896 become city comptroller, and later mayor. He was born March 22, 1867, in Reading, son of Jacob and Sarah (Herb) Leader.

Jacob Leader, grandfather of Adam H., was born in Bern township in 1838, and in 1850 located in Reading, where the rest of his life was spent at the molder's trade. He was a staunch Republican, but never cared for public office. His religious faith was that of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, which he attended regularly. In his political views he was a Democrat. His widow resides at No. 924 Spruce street, where the family has lived since 1869.

Adam H. Leader received his education in the public and high schools of Reading, graduating in 1884 from the latter at the age of seventeen years. He learned surveying, and was engaged therein for about seven years. In the end of which time he entered the real estate field, in which he has been exceedingly successful. In 1889 Mr. Leader formed a partnership with Mr. H. H. Roland, and continued this business for a period of twelve years.

Mr. Leader's political affiliations are with the Republican Party, in which he has been a staunch and steady standard bearer. In 1903 he was elected to the city assessor for a term of three years, and he was subsequently placed in charge of the finances of the city, being elected to the position of comptroller, for also one term of three years. In 1899 he was elected mayor of the city of Reading, and served a full term, until April, 1905, after which he entered the contracting field, his principal business being municipal work such as street paving and the construction of sewers and filtration plants, and he is now building a water filtering plant (known as the John Sauer, who passed many years in Reading engaged in shoemaking and in the retail shoe business, died suddenly Feb. 2, 1908. He was a native of Bavaria, born in 1844, son of John Sauer, Sr., and his wife, Anna Eva (Gau) Sauer.

John Sauer, Sr., was born in Hahnbach, Bavaria, Germany, in 1811. In August, 1844, he came to America with his wife and children and located at Reading, Pa., where he found work as a roof-tile and brick mason. In Germany he had married Anna Eva Georg, daughter of Nicholas Georg, and their children were: Abolonia, m. to Christoph Sauer, of Germany (he died in Reading); Barbara, m. to Joseph Waitman, a boiler maker, and living at No. 199 North Ninth street, Reading; John; and Anna, m. to Adam Leithan, deceased. The mother died in January following their arrival in America. Mr. Sauer married a second time, and this wife also preceded him in death. He died in 1894, and is buried in the Catholic cemetery at Reading. He was a member of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, and was a stalwart in its work.

John Sauer, whose name heads this sketch, was sixteen years old when he began to learn the shoemaker’s trade, and he worked at it until a year before his death when failing eyesight caused him to give it up. He still, however, continued his retail shoe business, at No. 330 North Ninth street, a place he had occupied for thirty-five years, and which building he owned. For some years he conducted a cigar shop in connection with his shoe shop, and he made shoes for Martin Streng, whose store was at No. 715 Penn street. When the latter died Mr. Sauer gave up his cigar business, and at the same store, also repaired boots and shoes. He was a fine workman and by steady industry and good business sagacity he amassed a comfortable fortune. Not all of his time was given to retail business; he became interested in the Hampden Knitting Mills Company, and was one of its directors at the time of his death. In public affairs he was more than an interested on-loker—he was an active participant, and as a Democrat represented the Ninth ward in the common council one term, and in the select council two terms.

Mr. Sauer was a member of St. Paul’s Catholic Church and a charter member of the Catholic Literary Union of the Bonificius Brotherhood. In the latter society, organized forty-two years ago, he had been president twelve successive years, and previous to that time had served as vice-president and in other positions. He also belonged to the Holy Cross Benevolent Society of the Catholic Church.

Mr. Sauer married Nov. 26, 1869, Margaret Knapp, daughter of George Knapp, and she with six children survives him, the children being: John E.; Catharine; m. to George Born; George C.; Francis S.; Rose, m. to Jacob Ashenbrenner; and Adam. George Knapp, father of Mrs. Sauer, was a native of Germany, who came to America in his young manhood and settled in Reading. He was a stone cutter by trade, and helped to build the entrance to the Charles Evans cemetery, Reading. He married Margaret Moss, a native of the same German town as he, though they were not married; their six children were: Margaret, Catharine, Barbara and Rosa.

Alvin Dunlap, superintendent of the United Traction Company of Reading, is a self-made man who by the force of circumstances has risen from the ranks to his present responsible position.

The Dunlap family have lived in Berks county for about forty-five years, Mr. Dunlap’s father, Thomas, having come to Reading from Chester county. He was a grocer by occupation and was so engaged at the time of his death, May 30, 1900, when aged sixty-two years. He married Sarah Margaret Smith, who died about six months before his marriage, the mother of ten children, five of whom she outlived. Those who are still living are: William, a street railway conductor; Sarah Ellen, m. to Lewis Schott, a grocer in Reading; Howard F., a farmer in Lancaster county; and Alvin.

Alvin Dunlap was born Sept. 20, 1862, in Reading. Until five years of age he was a pupil at the public schools, but was then obliged to start working. He began in 1875 as a driver of a horse car and has been connected with the street car service ever since. Not many months after his appearance as a driver, he attracted the attention of some one on the staff of the Reading Leader and in the issue of Jan. 23, 1876, he was given a big write-up, and a successful future was prophesied for him. His rise was both steady and rapid, and as early as 1891 he reached the position of despatcher. In 1900 he became assistant superintendent, and four years later, was promoted to his present office of superintendent, and he has about three hundred men under his personal control. His rise has been due to merit alone, for he possesses the qualities specially requisite for success in a traction business.

Mr. Dunlap has been twice married. His first wife, who died about seventeen years ago, was Miss Margaret Dunlap, daughter of Harry F. Hertzig, a conductor; and Ellen, at home. The present Mrs. Dunlap was Miss Sally Endy, daughter of Jedidah Endy, of Reading. Mr. Dunlap is a member of St. James Lutheran Church. In politics he is a good Republican, but has too little time to spare from his duties as superintendent to be active in politics. Fraternally he belongs to Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F.; Castle No. 2, 1876, he is the Golden Eagle; and Juniata Tribe, No. 74, I. O. R. M. He has long been connected with the United Traction Company’s Employees Benefit Association, in which at present he holds the office of treasurer.

Harvey A. Spannuth, proprietor of the Kemp- ton Creamery, was born at Crosskill Mills, Bethel township, Berks Co., Pa., Sept. 14, 1877, son of Emanuel and Lydia (Trautman) Spannuth.

On the memorable Christmas night of 1776, when George Washington crossed the Delaware and surprised and captured the Hessians in the British army, one Henry Spannuth was made a prisoner. He was a native of Brussels and had been hired as a British soldier, but after he had met his American captors and was released by them, like many others he not only refused to take up arms against them, but on the other hand cast his lot in with the struggling patriots and assisted them in their battle for justice. After the close of the Revolution, he settled in Lebanon county, Pa., on land now owned by Jonathan Yeiser. Here he reared his family, and died. His children were: Jacob (twins), Molly, Elizabeth, Catherine, Christian, Eva and Sarah, long since deceased.

George Spannuth was born Nov. 17, 1800, in Jackson township, Lebanon county. In 1823 he married Mary Weber, of Bethel township, and of their seven children six grew to maturity. He was married by Rev. J. Henry, Emanuel, Mary, George and John, of whom the last survivor was J. Henry, who died Feb. 8, 1908.

Emanuel Spannuth, son of George, was born in Jackson township, Lebanon county, Feb. 2, 1828, and died Feb. 15, 1896. In his young manhood he came to Berks county, and purchased the Newcomet Mill in Bethel township, Berks county, and for forty-five years conducted it with great success.
remodeled at great expense and made it thoroughly up-to-date, being one of the first roller mills between Hamburg and Lebanon. It had a capacity of seventy-five barrels per day (twenty-four hours). It is said that altogether the mill cost him $50,000, but he lost it all in the local trade, and regardless of the amount expended on his mill, he made a good per cent on his investment. This mill and the one hundred acres of land belonging to the mill property had been in the Newcomet name for a century. Mr. Spannuth employed six or seven men all the time, and he was succeeded in this mill by his son Acquillas, who now operates it and owns the property. It was burned Oct. 1, 1891, causing a loss of $12,000. Mr. Spannuth was a Republican and for many years was committeeman of his party, and he was delegate to various county conventions. He and his family were members of the Lutheran congregation of Kloop’s Union Church, in which he had held membership for forty years, and was deacon, in the present church was built he was chairman of the building committee. He was buried in the cemetery adjoining. Emanuel Spannuth married Lydia Traut- man, daughter of Jonathan Trautman, and she survived her husband but eleven months. They had thirteen children, who are: Lydia, m. to Isaac Bensing; Amelia, unmarried; Lydia, deceased, m. to Benjamin Strause, and had two daughters; Morris, a miller at Pottsville, Pa.; Andrew, a miller and farmer at Enders, Dauphin county; Dennis, succeeded his father and owner of the homestead; Alice, m. to Isaac Deck, of Fredericksburg; William, a miller at Fredericksburg; Lillie, widow of Jacob Deck, and living at Crosskill Mills; and Harvey A. Spannuth received a good education in the public schools which he supplemented by a course in the Commercial Department of the Lebanon Business college, from which he graduated in 1899. At the age of sixteen he learned millimg under his father, and this he followed for five years. In 1900 he began in the creamery business at Crosskill Mills, and at the same time took a course in the Dairy Department of the Pennsylvania State College. Mr. Spannuth and his brother Acquillas, under the firm name of A. A. Spannuth & Brother, conducted Crosskill Mills Creamery for one year, when the firm dissolved. Mr. Harvey A. Spannuth then operated the Fredericksburg roller mills for two and one-half years. In the fall of 1904 he came to Reading, and for one year was in the employ of the Reading Railroad Company. In 1905 he moved to Lyon Valley, and there conducted the Lyon Valley Creamery and farm for Smale Brothers, remaining two and one-half years. From there he came to Kemptown in the spring of 1909, and has since successfully operated the Kemptown Creamery. He receives about 20,000 pounds of milk per week.

Socially Mr. Spannuth is a member of Fredericksburg Lodge, No. 533, I. O. O. F.; and Jordan Encampment of this order, at Pleasant Corner, in Lebanon county. He and his wife belong to the old Lutheran church at Rehersburg.

On May 29, 1902, Mr. Spannuth married Laura H. Schubert, daughter of David and Catherine Schubert of Snyder, the former a horse dealer in Bethel township. Two children have been born of this union: Ray S., who died in infancy; and Donald S.

MILTON C. KREIDER, alderman of the Fourth ward, Reading, has been prominently connected with the political affairs of that city for a number of years. He is descended from a family of German origin, the founders of which in this country were three brothers, who came to America many generations ago. One of them settled in Lebanon county, one in Huntingdon county and the other in Lancaster county, Pa., Mr. Kreider being descended from the latter.

William Kreider, grandfather of the Alderman, lived in Littitz, Lancaster county. He went to Florida and took part in the Seminole Indian war and was never heard from afterward. Edwin W. Kusinski, then Alderman’s father, was then but four years old. He became a carriage builder and died in Reading May 17, 1904, aged seventy-four years. He married Angelina Missemuer, daughter of Samuel Missemuer, who was in the cigar business at Catawauqua, and they were the parents of ten children. John, E. W., who died in 1876, aged fourteen years; George B., who died in 1866, aged two years; Mary Ida, who died in infancy in 1889; and Clarence, a bookkeeper who died in 1902. The surviving children are: Milton C.; Franklin S., a constable of the Fourth ward; Reading; Annie, who married Benjamin Schoenberger, in the clothing business in Reading; Emma, at home; Roland and Henry, carriage painters of Reading.

Milton C. Kreider was born March 23, 1854, and he was educated in the public schools. Leaving home at the age of seventeen years his first occupation was at herding cattle on the farms. He spent eight years on the frontier, and then returning to Reading, went into the carriage business with his father, becoming general superintendent for the latter. He remained in this position until 1886, when he went to Schuy- lerville, N.Y., and engaged in the hotel business, keeping on his own account, remaining there five years. Returning to Reading he entered his father’s carriage shops again in the position of superintend- ent. In 1893 Mr. Kreider was elected superintendent of the Reading Relief Society. In 1896 he was elected constable of the Fourth ward, and in 1899 he was elected to succeed himself in that office. In 1903, although running on the Democratic ticket in a Republican ward, he was elected alderman of the Fourth ward, which office he still fills.

Mr. Kreider was married April 9, 1881, to Valera Geier. He and his wife have adopted two children: Tracey Redcy and Leroy Hoeracker, both of whom are at school. Fraternally Alderman Kreider is a member of the Red Men; the Fraternal Order of Eagles; and The Commercials. In religion he is a member of the Methodist Church.

JOHN F. REIFSNYDER, in whose death at Reading, Pa., March 17, 1905, this city lost a citizen who had been a factor in the commission business here for many years, was widely known.

John F. Reifsnyder was born in Oley township, April 22, 1848, a son of Joel and Margaret (Jones) Reifsnyder. His father was a blacksmith and followed his business at Unionville, where he died at the age of thirty-three years. His widow died in October, 1908, at Baumsntown. They had four children, George, John F., Matilda and Joel, Jr. (who died July 10, 1909).

Mr. Reifsnyder obtained a common school educa- tion, and when he was sixteen years of age he se- cured employment in the shipping department of the Brooke Iron Company, of Birdville. In 1868, he came to Reading and opened a retail commission house at No. 210 North Ninth street, where he continued for ten years, when, on account of business expansion, he bought the two dwellings at the north-east corner of Ninth and Elm streets. He converted these into an office building for his business and here con- tinued in the commission line, both wholesale and retail. In 1882 Mr. Reifsnyder leased a portion of the Reading Railway freight house, at Eighth and But- tonwood streets, with an office on the Eighth street side. He conducted this business for fifteen years and during this time handled hundreds of car lots of commodities. As an example of his vast trade, in a single year he handled seventy-five cars of bananas and sixty cars of oranges.
Mr. Reifsnyder was married at Reading, in 1870, to Annie G. Lincoln, daughter of the late John D. and Sarah (Gilbert) Lincoln, the former of whom died at the age of eighty-one years and the latter at the age of eighty-five years. They had the following children: Amelia, deceased; Alfred; Harrison, of Reading; Elizabeth; John, deceased; Richard; Martha; Annie G. S. and one other, died young. Mr. and Mrs. Reifsnyder had one daughter that died in infancy. Mr. Reifsnyder invested in Reading property to some extent and in 1893 erected Reifsnyder Hall, which is situated on the northeast corner of Ninth and Elm streets, and which is rented for lodge purposes.

Mrs. Reifsnyder belongs to the same Lincoln family that gave the people of the United States the immortal President Abraham Lincoln. In Exeter township about a mile below Exeter Station there is an old stone house in which lived, up to the time of his death, in 1736, Mordecai Lincoln, who was the great-grandfather of Abraham Lincoln. The Lincoln homestead, which embraces sixty-one acres is owned by the brother, Richard G. Lincoln, who was born in Exeter and is the third surviving brother of Mrs. Reifsnyder. He purchased the property twenty years since, and in many respects he is a typical Lincoln, closely resembling the martyred President. The latter was not born in the old stone house, but it is so closely associated with the early days of the family that its possession is a source of pleasure to the younger generation.

JOHN H. OBOLD, of John H. Obold & Co., hardware dealers, No. 300 Penn street, Reading, Pa., is a representative business man of that city, and was born in Penn township, Berks county, March 8, 1850, son of Elias and Elizabeth (Filbert) Obold. The name was originally spelled Abold, and tradition says that three brothers of the name came to America, one settling in Bern township and one in Heidelberg township, Berks county, while the third, it is believed, settled in Pennsylvania. Nothing definite is known of him.

The progenitor of this old and honored family was Joseph Obold, who settled in Bern township, Berks county, prior to the erection of the county in 1752, and in 1759 he purchased 120 acres of land in the village of Reading, in which he engaged in the lumbering business for several years, paying $190 in taxes. He was granted 300 acres of land on the Upper Schuylkill in 1765, and sold the same to the state in 1770. He was in the service of the state during the Revolution, and was appointed colonel of the Berks county regiment of the state, although nothing definite is known of him.

Joseph Obold, the father of the above mentioned, was born in America in 1730, and died January 28, 1810, in Berks county, Pennsylvania. He married, May 11, 1753, Rebecca, daughter of John and Rebecca (Rajah) Fichthorn, of Reading, Pa., and she was born in Bern, Berks, Pennsylvania, in 1731, and she died in 1805. They had eight children, seven of whom are living, and five of these are the issue of Joseph Obold, with whom we are concerned.

Mr. Obold, who is married, is a representative business man of Reading, Pa., and is engaged in general contracting, is also the owner of a fine 128-acre farm in
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Born township, Berks county, up in which he does general farming and stock raising. Mr. Fichthorn was born Nov. 14, 1848, in Reading, son of George and Hannah (Lutz) Fichthorn.

The grandfather of James Fichthorn was a native of Reading, and received his education in the schools of that city. After acquiring his literary training he chose farming as a vocation, and was actively engaged at that occupation all of his life. He married a Miss Rapp, and to them were born: John, Daniel, William, Lewis, Andrew, George, Charles, Catherine (married to John Schlo), and William. The family were Lutherans, and belonged to old Trinity Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Fichthorn was a Democrat.

George Fichthorn was born in Reading, where he received a good common school education, and when a boy learned the blacksmith's trade, following that occupation practically all of his life. He was a powerful man in body, and was known far and wide for his great strength. He married Hannah Lutz and children were born to them, viz.: Mary C. m. William Onshue; Catherine E. m. John Miller; Susan m. John Obold, Ellis m. John Wright; Ann m. Daniel Ruth; Lucy is deceased; and James.

James Fichthorn received his education in the common schools of Reading, and when yet a boy hired out to William Call, a railroad contractor, driving a team and continuing this occupation six or seven years, when he himself engaged in contracting. This occupation he has continued to the present time with great success, and is at present engaged by the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company, on work that is known to coal operators as "stripping," i.e. removing the loose soil from the coal fields. He also constructs breakers and builds railroads, and for a number of years has been employed in the coal districts of Pennsylvania, principally in Carbon county, now working at Summit Hill. Mr. Fichthorn has been very successful in his operations, and is considered one of Reading's representative business men.

On July 8, 1871, Mr. Fichthorn married Mary A. Heller, daughter of Frederick Heller of Boyertown, Pa., and these children have been born to this union: Ella m. John Roy, and has one child, Alma; Anna m. John Obold; and the children, James, Ruth and George; and Charles, who is at home. In political matters Mr. Fichthorn is a Republican. He is religiously connected with St. James Lutheran Church.

ADAM S. MARTIN, an agriculturist of Berks county, Pa., who is carrying on operations on his farm of eighty-four acres in Windsor township, situated north of the borough of Hamburg, Pa., along the Blue Mountains, was born in Hamburg, Sept. 15, 1865, in Windsor township, son of Samuel and Catherine (Trumbert) Martin.

The Martin family of this section had its origin in John and Jacob Martin, early settlers of Windsor township, who were already settled here in 1759, when the first tax of the district was levied, and who it is thought came to America about 1743. Samuel J. Martin, son of John and grandfather of Adam S. Martin, was born May 9, 1799, and lived in Windsor township, where he died Oct. 2, 1874. He married Esther Breigigan (1793-1865), and they were the parents of the following children: Benneville died at the age of seventy-two years; Elizabeth died at the age of seventy; Sam. Benjamin, who married Rebecca Daniel at age eighty; Joseph died at the age of fifty-one; Samuel; Hetty died when seventy-four years old; Mary died in childhood; James, aged seventy-five, now resides at Port Clinton, Pa.; William died aged forty-eight; and Israel died aged fifty; and Samuel J. and Esther Martin are buried in the old graveyard at Hamburg.

Samuel Martin was born in 1838, in Windsor township, and was a lifelong boatman, living at Hamburg and Leesport, and in later years moving to New York, where he is still engaged in boating. He has been very successful in this line and now owns several canal boats, worth $3,000 each, and several spans of good timber. Jacob S. Martin, m. Joel Heckman, of Shoemakersville; Sarah, who died in childhood; Adam S.; Albert, who died of typhoid fever when twelve years old; and Lloyd, who died at Roanoake, Va., in 1902; as old as the brain when twenty-two years old.

Adam S. Martin attended the schools of Hamburg and Windsor township, and at an early age began boating with his father on the Schuylkill Canal, following this until the spring of 1883, when he engaged in boating for himself until 1886, when the boating business was practically abandoned in this section of Pennsylvania. He then went to New York, engaging in the boating coal business, and in May, 1887, he commenced operations, and in this he continued until 1895, and, being an expert boatman, was successful. In the spring of 1896 Mr. Martin returned to his native township and settled on his father-in-law's farm for four years, after which he began operations for himself, until the death of his father-in-law in July, 1903, when he purchased the interests of the heirs. This property, which consists of eighty-four acres, twenty-five acres of which is woodland, is situated north of the borough of Hamburg along the Blue Mountains and part of the old house which is still standing on the farm was built by Henry Neecker in 1804. Mr. and Mrs. Martin erected a new residence in the spring of 1907, and in various ways have improved their property. Mr. Martin is engaged in the dairy and poultry business and is prosperous. He is one of Windsor township's six Republicans, and is often a delegate to county conventions. He and his family are members of the First Reformed Church of Hamburg.

In 1886 Mr. Martin was married to Lillie H. Heckman, born Jan. 8, 1866, daughter of Elias N. and Lucy Ann (Mengel) Heckman, and granddaughter of Jacob Heckman (Sticker) and the last-named and Mrs. Martin have been born these children: Edna B., born Dec. 9, 1886; William S., March 14, 1890; Mamie F., July 20, 1892; and Carrie M., June 22, 1896 (died aged five days).

WILLIAM B. ANTHONY, proprietor of the Strauss-town Roller Mills, at Strausstown, Berks county, has been established there since 1894. He is a native of Northampton county, Pa., born October 6, 1862, son of Jacob Anthony. His grandfather lived and died in that county.

Jacob Anthony was born in Northampton county and there learned his trade of carpenter. He met an accidental death in the car shops at Packerton, when he was fifty-three years old, and he is buried at Cherryville, Northampton county. He was a member of the Church, and was one of the most respected citizens. Jacob Anthony married Elizabeth Reiber, and to them were born the following named children: Catherine, Mary Elizabeth, Lewis, Lucy, Malinda, William B., John, and Ellen.

William B. Anthony attended the schools of Northampton county, and after twenty years old went to learn the milling trade which has since been his work. He spent three years with the Mauser Mill Company, at Treichlers, and then for two years was with the Wolfe Company of Chambersburg, founders and manufacturers of mill machinery, engaged as a salesman in the erection of mill machinery. His next location was at Centerville, Md., where he remained for three years, thence moving to Cedarville, near Allentown, Lehigh Co., Pa., where he had charge of a mill for L. H. Lichtenwalner for one year. At the end of that time he went to Womelsdorf, Berks county, where he engaged in business on his own account, staying at that place for three years, until he came to Straustown, in 1894. Here he bought out the Webber estate and engaged in the business to which he has since given his time. His mill is considered the most thoroughly up-to-date in the county, if not in the State, the machinery, a three-story and basement stone and brick building, having an irregular form, as it was equipped with all the most approved modern machinery. The old mill was burned May 24, 1907, Mr. Anthony suffering great loss of both capital and business, but he did not despair or lose any time rehabilitation his establishment, beginning work upon his new mill in June, 1907. It is a model plant equipped with a thirty horsepower auto gasoline engine and a large water-wheel eighteen feet in diameter and four and a half feet wide, known as the I X L steel over-shot water wheel. Mr. Anthony manufactures and deals in high-grade roller process flour for family and bakers' uses, also grain, mill feed and allied products. The brand of flour of which he makes a specialty as a manufacturer is a fancy patent known as "Spoofcake," for which there is a large and steady demand; it is sold mostly in Schuylkill county. There are fourteen acres of land connected with the mill, and he marries the ground under cultivation. Mr. Anthony is a wide-awake business man, as his enterprising methods and large patronage testify. He stands high in the community, both as a man of intelligence and high standards, one whose work has contributed to the growth of his section.

Mr. Anthony married Mary A. Mertz, daughter of Reuben Mertz, of Lehigh county, Pa., and eight children have blessed this union: Harry W. (m. Florence Battinger), Ida M. (m. Howard Spatz), Bertha M., Howard J. Esther L., George M., Charles A. and Paul R., M. Anthony is a member of the Mertz Reformed Church. He has been a member of the Reformed Church for years; his wife belongs to the Reformed Church. Socially he holds membership in the P. O. S. of A., the I. O. O. F., and the Ridgely Association.

REUBEN G. SHALTER. On the roster of the representative business men of the city of Reading is to be found the name of Reuben G. Shalter, manager of the Reading Lumber Company. He is a native of Berks county, where the family was established at an early day, and was born in Muhlenberg township, in 1842, son of Jacob and Henrietta (Getz) Shalter, both of whom are deceased.

The name Shalter is also spelled Schalter. Frantz Schalter (1735-1813), of Maiden-creek township, left a will, which is on record in Book D, page 173. Of this Michael Shalter was the executor, and in it are mentioned his wife Elizabeth; son Michael, who obtained the homestead; son Jacob, who obtained the plantation in Alsace; and sons-in-law, Samuel Bernhard, Abraham Kissinger, Daniel Kershner and Peter Rotherenberger. The Federal census of 1790 records that France Schater, of Maiden-creek, had two sons under six, and two daughters under fifteen. Mr. Jacob Schalter, son of Frantz, was born in 1777, and died in 1853, and is buried at Gernard's Church, in Ontelaune township, as is also his wife Susanna, born 1784, died 1841.

Jacob Schalter, son of Jacob and Susanna, and father of Reuben G., followed the vocation of farming throughout his entire life and was a resident of Northumberland county, this State, at the time of his demise, which occurred in 1862. His wife, Henrietta Getz, survived him many years, and died in 1888. Both were zealous and the mill property, members of the Lutheran church. They became the parents of twelve children, namely: Jonathan; Sarah A.; a daughter died in infancy; Sarah C. m. Reuben Hofer; Amanda m. Jacob Hoffman; Elizabeth died at the age of thirteen years; Emma m. John Sheets; Ottila m. Franklin Albright; Henrietta died in childhood; Reuben G. is mentioned below; Jacob; and James.

When Reuben G. Shalter was a child his parents removed to Northumberland county, and in the public schools there he received his early educational training, and continued to maintain his home there for twenty years. Since then he has been a resident of Reading. He remained on the home farm until he attained his majority, and for several years was partly engaged at teaching in the country schools at both private and public schools. Upon locating in Reading he identified himself with the lumber business, in which he became associated with Reuben Hoffa, his brother-in-law, continuing thus until 1886, when he became one of the organizers of the Reading Lumber Company, and with this he has since been identified as owning a one-third interest. The enterprise is one of broad scope, and the thriving business has been built up largely through the effective efforts of Mr. Shalter, who is manager of the concern.

Mr. Shalter is recognized as a liberal and public-spirited man, and was a material business man. In politics he maintains an independent attitude, giving his support to the men and measures which meet the approval of his judgment. He and his wife are members of Trinity Lutheran Church, and are active in the various departments of church work.

In 1862 Mr. Shalter married Miss R. Zacharias, who was born and reared in Berks county, daughter of the late Daniel Zacharias. To this union children were born as follows: Carrie, m. to John Spady; Charles G., who died in childhood; James E., in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company; John E., who holds a clerical position in the post office at Chicago, Ill.; Franklin, who is employed by the Reading Lumber Company; Charles (2), deceased; and Florence R., at home.

Dietrich Shalter, a brother of Frantz of Maiden-creek, was a pioneer in Alsace township, where he owned land. The Federal census of 1790 records that "Dietrich" Shalter was the head of a family of three sons, one over sixteen years of age, and one daughter.

Dieter Schalter (or Shalter), a son, was a farmer in Alsace, and was married to Miss Miller. Their children were: Benjamin, Reuben, Magdalena (m. Levi Gulden); and Charles.

BENJAMIN SHALTER, son of Dieter, became a prominent man in Alsace township, where he was born in 1819. He died in August, 1893. He married Louisa (m. deceased) and their children were: Jacob M., John Gring, of Temple, Pa.; Jeremiah died unmarried; Rebecca m. Albert Knabb, of Reading; Lucretia m. Penrose Wright (deceased); and lived first in Maiden-creek, but later in Red Lodge, Mo. k.; Kate m. (first) Jacob Schmehl, whose children were: Lovina (m. Wash Gulden); Mary (m. Samuel Dulp) and Augustus (m. Kutztown); and (second) Charles S. Yostum; and Appolonius is a farmer on the Alsace homestead.

Benjamin Shalter donated a part of his land for Shalter's church in Alsace, and on April 9, 1860, the cornerstone of the first church was laid. The building is a two-story stone structure, plastered and painted in imitation of brick. It was thoroughly renovated and newly carpeted in 1907, and, together with a recently purchased addition to the cemetery, re-dedicated with appropriate ceremonies. The farm surrounding the church yard is now the property of Appolonius Shalter, a son of Benjamin.

DANIEL H. MILLER, one of the venerated citizens of Spring township, Berks county, Pa., was born at Sinking Spring, August 20, 1838, on the Miller homestead, son of Capt. Daniel and Mary (Hain) Miller.

Sebastian Miller, grandfather of Daniel H., was a native of the Fatherland, who settled in Cumru township some years prior to the outbreak of the Revolutionary war. In that great struggle he bore arms, as
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Captain of the 7th company of the Berks County Militia, which on May 17, 1777, was in active service, his officers being First Lieutenant, Adam Ruth, Second Lieutenant, John Gernant, Ensign, John Ruth, and Captain, Jacob Ruth. Captain Ruth was a farmer by occupation and gave early notice of his abilities in business, purchasing some years ago a property consisting of the farm at Adamstown, on which there was also a tannery; John, a farm at Sinking Spring; Henry, a farm in Cumru township; Capt. Daniel, the property now in the possession of Daniel H. Miller, of Sinking Spring; and Benjamin, the farm near Fitztown, now in the possession of Mr. Miller, above mentioned. Captain Sebastian Miller was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, was a man of courage and enterprise, and was esteemed and respected by all who knew him. He was buried in the Sinking Spring burial ground, adjoining the church. Captain Miller’s sons were: (1) Sebastian, married Catherine Germand, Nov., 30, 1773, died Nov. 7, 1836; he married, in 1789, Hannah Ludwig, and they had six sons and three daughters, two of the former and one of the latter dying in infancy. (2) Henry. (3) Benjamin. (4) George married Susanna Ruth. (5) Daniel. Captain Sebastian Miller also had seven daughters, one of whom married a Ruth, and another a Gernand.

Capt. Daniel Miller, father of Daniel H., was born on the Miller homestead at Sinking Spring, May 2, 1789, and died there Feb. 6, 1844, aged forty-five years, nine months, and twenty-three days, the first county commissioned Captain Henry Willott’s company, which was at York from Aug. 28, 1814, to March 5, 1815, and subsequently he was commissioned captain by Gov. Joseph Hies- ter of Pennsylvania. He was an active official in military affairs of Berks county, and was known and respected as an authority on military matters. Capt. Miller owned the property now in the possession of David G. Miller, of Sinking Spring, a descendant, and was a lifelong agriculturist, becoming well and favorably known in his community. He married Polly (Mary) Hain, born Oct. 14, 1801, who died May 23, 1856, and had several children, among whom was the Rev. James Miller, an educator of the first excellence, and a captain in the Revolutionary War. To this union were born: Hiram (born Sept. 21, 1821, died June 1, 1877) spent his life at Sinking Spring, where he married Euphia (1817-1872), and had one son, John M., of Reading; Isaac, who settled in had two sons, Willard (a very wealthy citizen of Mexico) and Hannah (who died unmarried); Sebastian, a farmer of Danville, Ill., had three children—Harry, Ellen and Daniel; Jennie married Percy G. Smith, a clerk in the War Department, Washington, D. C., Frederick lived in Cal.; and M. Miss K. and lives on the old place; and Elizabeth married Jandon Smith, and resided at Williamsport for many years.

Daniel H. Miller attended the old eight-cornered schoolhouse located on the Van Reed road, for some winters, his teacher being Prof. Henry Stebler, of Chester county. He was reared on his father’s farm, and until fourteen years of age lived with his parents, then engaging in school teaching for two terms at the old Steffey schoolhouse, and one term, in 1867, at the Springs. He attended Graybill’s Commercial school at Reading for nine months, and then resumed teaching, the school term lasting for four months, and the salary being one dollar per day.

In the spring of 1854 Mr. Miller, Dr. Fisborn, and Rev. Eugene Van Reed, went to California, settling in Sierra county, where Mr. Miller engaged in mining, combating the incessant cold and the semi-criminal elements. He located twenty miles north of a town called Minneapolis. He remained in California for thirteen years, and was fairly successful, also traveling in Oregon, Washington, Mexico, Cuba, Panama, and the Central West of the United States, Virginia, New Jersey and other parts of the country. In the fall of 1868 he returned to Berks county, where he has since remained.

In 1891 Mr. Miller erected a fine brick residence on Flying Hill avenue, and here he now lives in quiet retirement. He is of politics is an independent Republican, and from 1894 to 1904 served as a member of the council, a period of twenty years. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and his family are members of the St. John’s Union Church, of which he is a deacon.

In 1868 Mr. Miller was married to Rebecca Reber, born in 1845, daughter of Jacob and Lovina (Faust) Reber, of Heidelberg township. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have two sons, namely: George, born Feb. 19, 1872, who married Ella Frankhauser, who has two children—Esther and D. Shelton, is a dealer in horses and resides with his parents; and J. Norris.

The former of Sinking Spring’s well known young men, was born Oct. 31, 1874, received his education in the local schools, and was licensed to teach, although he has never followed that profession. He has spent all of his active life in dealing in horses, and in this line has been very successful, being judged a capable business man and substantial citizen. In politics he is a Republican. His religious connection is with St. John’s Lutheran Church, whose, since 1899, he has been treasurer of the Sunday-school. In April, 1896, Mr. Miller was married to Alice M. Huyett, daughter of Charles H. and Elizabeth (Beidler) Huyett, and one son, Warren H., has been born to this union.

JACOB NOLDE, of Reading, has had a business career which can find few parallels in the industrial history of Berks county. As the head of the Nolde & Horst Company, manufacturers of hosiery, who have established at this point one of the largest plants of the kind in the United States, his operations bear an important relation to the prosperity of the city. The fifteen hundred employees of this immense concern form a large proportion of its industrial population.

Established as a native-born resident of this section are so numerous that Mr. Nolde’s residence in Reading, dating from the year 1888, seems comparatively brief. Its influence in increasing the wealth of the community is not to be measured by years. The profitable operation of so large an establishment as that conducted by the Nolde & Horst Company affects the welfare of many other lines, and the flourishing condition of this business has attracted to the vicinity various other desirable enterprises. Mr. Nolde is familiar with the practical work of the mills as well as with their management, and he desires his full share of credit due for their wonderful development. The manner in which he has forged his way to the front proves him worthy of the high position he has attained.

Jacob Nolde was born in Berleburg, Westphalia, Germany, in the year 1858, and received the excellent educational advantages of the schools of his native land. Until he came to America, in 1880, he was engaged as traveling salesman of woolen goods. His first location in this country was at Stony Creek, Berks county, Pa., where he found employment as a weaver with Louis Kraemer & Co., with whom he continued until he engaged in business on his own account. When Louis Kraemer & Co. started the Nazareth Manufacturing Company, in Northampton county, Pa., Mr. Nolde accompanied them, remaining there until the spring of 1888, when he disposed of his interests and came to Reading. The Nazareth Manufacturing Company were converting their knitting-mill into a factory devoted exclusively to the production of underwear, and Mr. Nolde purchased the machinery, which comprised twenty machines and the necessary training apparatus. This modest equipment has proved to be the nucleus of one of the largest and most completely equipped factories in the country. The machines were installed in the Thalheimer building, at No. 143 Cedar street, Reading. But a few months later the business outgrew these quarters, and in the spring of 1890 Mr. Nolde found more adequate accommodations at No. 222 Cedar street, in a building 45 x 100 feet in dimensions. While he was in that location he admitted Mr. George Horst to a partnership in the business, and they have been associated ever since. Purchasing the property, they carried on operations there until the year 1890, by which time they had reached the conclusion that it would be economical to have a building especially adapted to the needs of the growing industry. Consequently they invested in a lot 100 feet square, on Moss street, beyond Douglass, upon which they erected a three-story and basement factory 50 x 100 feet. It was a model plant of its kind in every particular, and doubtless gave the ambitious young partners more pleasure than their mature natures have found in the many years of operation. This expensive venture was followed shortly by the panic of 1895, but wise administration and indomitable effort soon made them masters of the situation, and the new industry weathered the storm with such skill that it suffered no decline.

The firm was now finding itself in a position to cope with the large manufacturers, and to be regarded by them as competitors worthy of attention. Up to this time the products of the factory had been a cheap class of goods, but when the fast black and tan goods came to be made generally favored they found it necessary to meet the popular demand and facilitate the demand, and opened a finishing establishment in Philadelphia. Mr. Horst took charge of the new branch, Mr. Nolde retaining the management of the Reading plant, and this arrangement lasted until the concern was incorporated, in 1897. It had previously been conducted on a partnership basis.

After the incorporation the Nolde & Horst Company purchased a tract of land adjoining the first lot, 100 x 160 feet in dimensions, and built an extension 32 x 160 feet, as well as a wing 50 x 100 feet, a dye-house and an engine-room. This gave them facilities for operating fourteen hundred knitting machines, twenty to five hundred hands. On Dec. 7, 1899, fire destroyed almost the entire plant, only the dye-house and boiler remaining. But this disaster in no way retarded the progress of the business. The debris was cleared away at once, and by May 1, 1900, within five months, the knitting mills were again in full working order, with improved equipment, all the new machinery installed being of the latest models. Moreover, extraordinary precautions were taken against a repetition of the catastrophe and to insure the safety of all employed in the building, which was provided throughout with the most approved fire escapes. The expansion of the plant has since that date several additions. In 1903 two extensions, 60 x 32 feet and 50 x 100 feet, respectively, three stories and basement, were made. In 1905 two more of the same dimensions were found necessary, and the same year the dyehouse was enlarged by an addition 40 x 120 feet. On the Ninth street side of the property another building, 50 x 80 feet, has been erected, increasing the floor space to the remarkable area of 230,000 square feet—over five acres. Fifteen hundred people are regularly employed in turning out the product of this vast establishment, and when the addition now being made is open the force will be increased to two thousand. There are only a few modern establishments which have a showing to be compared with this. The output of this factory is confined to hosiery, but the Nolde & Horst Company are also interested in another establishment of similar nature, a large glove factory 50 x 210 feet, five stories in height, and the production of silk gloves exclusively. Moreover, since their operations have attained such enormous proportions, they have found it practicable to extend their attention to allied enterprises, and they are interested in the Windsor Machine Company, manufacturing all their own knitting machines. Excellent management in all respects has not only proved economical, but has facilitated the work in many ways and improved labor conditions for the operatives as well as commercial opportunities for the management.

This record of the success of the Nolde & Horst Company and allied interests is in reality the story of Mr. Nolde's life. He has always been a man of many affairs, but nevertheless his enthusiasm and his best efforts have been devoted to the building up of the concern of which he stands at the head. His energies have found expression in the improvement of every branch of the business, for having been a practical worker himself he understands the necessities of the operative as well as the directive department. The establishment has enhanced the industrial standing of Reading to such an extent that it is regarded with high favor by both capitalists and workers. Mr. Nolde is prominently connected with two important financial institutions of Reading, being a director of the Keystone National Bank, and the Colonial Trust Company. His standing is irrepresible.

Personally Mr. Nolde is well known as a member of the B. P. O. E. and a high Mason, his Masonic associations including membership in Teutonia Lodge, F. & A. M., the Chapter, the Commandery and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He has been twice married, his first union, which took place in 1889, having been to Lydia Lorah, who passed away in 1895. She was the mother of two children, Carl and Ella, both of whom are at home. His present wife was Louisa Horst, sister of his business partner, George Horst, and to them have been born four children, George, Lena, Hans and Nolde, and they are active members of Zion Reformed Church, with which Mr. Nolde united as a charter member. He has acted as secretary of the church organization since 1893.

AUGUSTUS S. Flicker, deceased, known among the hotel men of Reading, Pa., and for fourteen years the proprietor of the "Merchants Hotel" of that city, was born in Oley township, Berks county, Aug. 28, 1847, son of Jeremiah and Mary (Swavely) Flicker, and died Nov. 28, 1900.

The Flicker family has its origin in a Christian Flicker, who located in the hills of Earl township, Berks county, about the close of the American Revolution, in which war he is said to have fought against his will, in King George's Army. He was a German, and came from Brunswick or Hessen. In 1790 the Federal census report records him the head of a family consisting of his person, wife, and a child, Cornelia, one son under sixteen years of age and two daughters.

Jacob Flicker, his son, was the grandfather of Augustus S. Flicker. He was born in Earl township, but removed to Oley township where he died, and was buried in Earl. His son Jeremiah was killed in the war.

Jeremiah Flicker, son of Jacob, owned and operated a large tract of land in Oley township, where he continued agricultural pursuits until his death, in 1863, when in his forty-second year, caused by a fall into a well some three years previous. He was a prominent Democrat, and for some years served as road commissioner. He married Mary Swavely, daughter of Jacob Swavely, and wife (nee Trout). Seven children were born of this union: Jacob m. Anna Drayer, and has five children, Laura, Harry, Ellen, Jennie and John; Augustus S.; Sally; Jeremiah, Jr., m. Mary Carl, and has one child, Anna; Mary m. Daniel D. Beckler, and had five children: Esther, Wayne, Lucy, Marcella, and one who died in infancy; and two others died in infancy. In religious belief the family were members of the Reformed Church.

Augustus S. Flicker was educated in the schools of his native township, and as one of four children began work on a farm, carrying his earnings of $4 a month to his mother. He continued at farm work until he was twenty, and from that time until he came to Reading drove the Almshouse Farm team or was in charge of Amos Young's trotting horses in Exeter township. After he was employed on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad as a fireman until 1876. He then worked on a farm and the following year engaged in bookstoring. His next venture was in the grocery business, in which he continued for nine years and then for a few years with various partners was in the flour and feed business. In 1889 he engaged in the hotel business at the corner of Third and Penn streets. The place was owned at that time by John M. Kissinger. Mr. Flicker bought this property after conducting it for five years. This hotel contained sixty-five rooms, and was one of the best kept hotels in the city.

On Feb. 26, 1878, Mr. Flicker married Emma Snyder, daughter of Lewis and Kate (Gambler) Snyder, and four children were born to this union; Florence (m. Hinck), Anna (m. Benjamin Wamsner), Hugh (m. Fannie Painter), and died in Robeson township), John (died young), and Michael.

James Oneall, like his father, was a farmer all of his life, and followed this occupation in Robeson township. He married Mary Wolfe, and to them were born children as follows: Sarah A. (m. John Pierson), James, Mark M. (m. Jennie Lauderbach), Jacob (m. first) Hannah Frey and (second) Sarah Jacobs, and resides in Robeson township; Ellen (m. George Geiger, of Geigertown), Hugh (m. Ellen Gormley), of Robeson township, and twelve others, the oldest of whom was two years of age, who died in infancy. This was one of the largest families in Robeson township.

James Oneall attended the schools of Robeson township, and was the only boy born twins, born March 25, 1834, of whom Catharine died Oct. 12, 1849, and John, born Jan. 31, 1835, and died in the Blue Mountain Hospital, Phila., Mar. 29, 1892. He enlisted (second) in Company I, 160th Pa. V. I., July 1, 1864, and was honorably discharged Nov. 17th of that year. His third enlistment was on Sept. 1, 1865, in Company E, 75th Pa. V. I. In his second enlistment he became seventh corporal of Job Obock’s company, and throughout his entire service he was a faithful and cheerful soldier, performing his duties with skill and dexterity. He participated in many of the hardest fought battles of the great struggle, including Antietam and Chancellorsville, and was always a brave and gallant fighter. After the war Mr. Oneall returned to Reading and resumed work at the iron works, later learning the hatting trade, which he followed for twenty years, his only time taking care of his small farm, which he still looks after. Mr. Oneall now receives a pension from the Government as reward for his faithful services, and he resides on Oneall street, which was named in his honor. He bears the reputation of being an honest man of sound moral character, and has the esteem of all who know him. In politics he is independent. He is a member of Salem Evangelical Association, of which he is now steward, and is also active in Sunday-school work.

On May 21, 1866, Mr. Oneall was married to Amanda Reichwine, daughter of Cornelius and Elizabeth (Holley) Reichwine, and to this union there were born: Ellen m. Walter Webber, of Mohnton, and has two children, Claude and Ralph; Mary J. m. William Beaver, of Reading, and has two children, Clyde and James; Sadie m. John Werner, of the firm of E. G. Werner & Sons, Mohnton, and has two children, Elmer, and Gertrude since 1902 has been a trained nurse in the German Hospital, Philadelphia. Mr. Oneall also has an adopted daughter, Katie Lausch.

SAMUEL S. WEIS, a farmer on the Weis homestead in Earl township, Berks county, near the Colebrookdale road, was born Sept. 15, 1856, on the farm on which he now resides.

Killian Weis, Sr., his grandfather, was born Dec. 15, 1751, and died Feb. 16, 1840, and was buried in the old cemetery at the Hereford Mennonite Church at Bally of which he and his wife were members. In the United States census of 1790, and every subsequent census, he was a taxable resident of Upper Milford township, Northampton county (a district now embraced in Lehigh county) and as the head of a family consisting of himself, his wife Catharine (nee Lands) and six sons, Jacob, John, George, Henry, Killian (father of Samuel S.) and Samuel (three of whom were under twenty), he had three daughters, Anna (m. John Ebst), Kate (m. Henry Shelly) and Hannah (m. Isaac Longacre).

In Upper Milford township, in what is now Lehigh county, there also lived Jacob Weis, brother of Killian Sr., who was the owner and proprietor of the old Weis’ mill, now known as Kriebel’s mill, in Lower Milford township. In 1790 he had two sons and three daughters.

Killian Weis, son of Killian, Sr., was born Jan. 21, 1778, and died Dec. 23, 1874. He was a life-long farmer and lived in Township 13, of Robeson township. He had a farm now occupied by his grandson, Frank Weis, which is situated on the farm of Samuel S. This farm consists of 100 acres of fertile billy land, on which is found a high grade of magnetic ore. The Berks Development Company have sunk a number of shafts and have found a good grade of ore. Killian Weis also owned the farm now owned by his grandson, Frank Weis. It is spelled Weis and Wise. He married Barbara Shelly, born Jan. 31, 1796, and died June 20, 1886. Their children, seven sons and two daughters, were: Jacob, born Feb. 9, 1825, died Aug. 10, 1899; Catharine and Henry, twins, born Mar. 31, 1836, of whom Catharine died Oct. 19, 1845, and Henry, born Oct. 29, 1845, married Franklin Jan. 13, 1868; Henry, born Aug. 12, 1878, died April 29, 1904; Joel, born 1830, died young; John, born 1832, died Feb. 28, 1899; Elizabeth, born 1834, died Sept. 26, 1908; and Samuel S. is the only survivor. Of these children only two married, Jacob and Killian. John, Henry, Frank, Elizabeth and Samuel S. spent their lives on the old homestead. In politics they were all Democrats. They were steadfast believers in the Mennonite faith, and belong to the Mennonite Church at Boyertown, where the parents and grandparents worshipped. He and his generations lie in the Hereford burial ground at Bally.

Jacob Weis, son of Killian and brother of Samuel S., born in 1825, died Aug. 10, 1899. He was a farmer in Colebrookdale township. He married Elizabeth Moyer, daughter of Michael Moyer, and she died in 1884 at the age of eighty years. They had two children: Elizabeth, born April 18, 1857, and Oscar K. Hausman, of Colebrookdale, and has three sons and one daughter—Morris W. (born Aug. 12, 1882), Edward (Jan. 3, 1890), Jacob (Aug. 12, 1893) and Lizzie (June 23, 1896); and Kate, born Aug. 13, 1895. Since 1900 she has been the home maker for her uncle Samuel S. (she is also a worker in the Mennonite Church). Morris W. Hausman married Sept. 6, 1909. Catharine Johnson, and has two sons, Monroe and Elmer.
FRANKLIN MILLER, who was proprietor of the well-known Excelsior Soap Works, one of the large industries of its kind in Reading, Pa., was born March 3, 1846, on the old Miller homestead in Upper Tulpehocken Township, Berks County, in the community, of his parents and Catherine (Klahr) Miller.

(1) Jacob Mueller, the immigrant ancestor, according to his tombstone inscription at Little Tulpehocken Church, was born Oct. 23, 1697, and died Dec. 18, 1772; married fifty-three years to Catharine, of about thirty years, the son of Jacob Mueller, who with Charlotte (very likely his wife), John Jacob (under sixteen) and Barbara (no doubt another child), all grouped together on the "original list" of passengers, is shown as having landed at Philadelphia Sept. 19, 1732, having come over in the ship "John B." of London. David Crocket, master, from Rotterdam, last from Deal; passengers, 112 males above sixteen, 98 under sixteen; 98 females above sixteen, 85 under sixteen. He came from Germany. In 1739 Jacob Mueller paid $11 tax. He is mentioned as a yeoman in his last will and testament, made Jan. 1766, witnessed by Daniel Heisterhauer and Henrich Kettner, and recorded in Book II, page 117. The oldest son was allowed £25 over and above all others for his birthright. The children mentioned are John Jacob, born Sept. 24, 1728 (was single in 1759); Johannes, born Nov. 9, 1731, married in 1750; Elizabeth Barbara Hess; and Matthias, born Oct. 18, 1743. In the Little Tulpehocken Church records of births and baptisms are found the following children of Jacob Mueller: John Jacob, born Sept. 24, 1728, in Europe. Baptized Sept. 26, 1728 (sponsors: Frederic Samuel Bose, Christopher Haist, Johann Eick and Joh. David Bauer); John, born Nov. 9, 1733, in Pennsylvania, baptized Nov. 10, 1733, by Rev. Philip Boehm, Reformed minister at White Marsh at the time (sponsors, Joh. Henry Fegner and Mary Elizabeth Barbara Schneider); Mary Elizabeth Barbara, born Sept. 29, 1733, baptized Jan. 1737, by Rev. Bartholomew Rugner, who was Reformed pastor at Germantown, Pa., at that time (sponsors, same as for John); Matthias, born Oct. 18, 1743, baptized Nov. 6, 1743, by Rev. Joh. Casper Stoever (sponsors, Matthias Schmidt and wife); Elizabeth Barbara, born June 7, 1745, baptized Oct. 30, 1745 (patronymic not given). It seems doubtful that the last named child belonged to the family of Jacob, the immigrant.

Samuel Miller succeeded his father, Johannes, in the tanning business, and carried it on during his whole life. He married a Miss Moyer, and to them were born children as follows: Michael K. Miller, m. Miss Catherine K. Konig; Lydia Klahr; Sarah, m. Elijah Weaver; Rebecca, m. to Israel Wagner; Catherine, m. to David Koenig; Matthias, m. to Eliza Snyder; Jacob, m. to Mary Gerhard; Samuel, who died in June, 1809, m. (first) to Hettie Christian and (second) to Henrietta Scholl; John, who died aged thirty-five years; Leah, m. (first) to John Miller and (second) to John Kannet; and Samuel, m. (third) to Maria Throg. Miller, father of Franklin K., was born Aug. 3, 1814, and died March 19, 1882, having been a life-long tanner at Straustown, and also owning the old homestead and tannery. He married Catherine Klahr, and to them were born ten children, as follows: Franklin K.; Mary, deceased his William; Theobald, Charles, of New York, who died in March, 1908; Edward and Lewis, twins, born in July, 1850; Sabilla; Levi; and Albert.

Franklin K. Miller received his education in the schools of his native locality, also attending Whitehall Academy for three months, in the winter session of 1855 and 1856. He was reared on the old homestead, and when sixteen years of age learned the tanning trade with his father, following this occupation until his twenty-second year. During 1863, when the Commonwealth was threatened with invasion, Mr. Miller entered the army of the United States, as Company I, 48th Pa. V. I., for ninety days, and received his honorable discharge Aug. 26th of the same year. On returning home, Mr. Miller again took up tanning as an occupation, and on June 1, 1865, removed to Tamaqua, where he followed the trade the next two years. In 1867, forming a partnership with P. M. Barlow, under the firm name of Miller & Barlow, they continued at this place for two years, when Mr. Miller went to North Branch, between Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton, and continued the tanning business at this place until 1875, in December of which year Franklin K. Miller removed to Hazleton and there remained for a period of seven years, for a part of which time he was engaged in operating a currier shop. In 1882, Mr. Miller bought a small soap works in the city of Reading, and manufactured soap and sold samples which he distributed while doing other work. He also obtained a position in a tannery, and in the fall of that year removed with his family to the city. On Christmas, Mr. Miller was laid off from work, on account of slack business, but he obtained a position as a soap foundry, at the meagre salary of one dollar per day, on which he paid rent and supported his large family. Mr. Miller's energy and industry were not to be denied, and on again engaging in the soap business, to which he gave his entire attention, after another lay-off on account of slack work, he found success. While going to and from work in the foundry he distributed samples, orders began to come in and soon his soap had gained a wide reputation. He first carried his soap to market in a basket, next used a wheelbarrow, soon thereafter getting a push cart, and then finally a horse and wagon. The Excelsior Soap Works of East Reading, Pa., is now a three-story, brick building, on a 60 x 110 feet lot, the building being 40 x 60 feet in dimensions. Here a large number of men are employed in the manufacture of laundry, fulling and scouring soaps, the latter two being specialties. Mr. Miller has four teams of horses on the foundry, and his product is sold in the markets all over the State. Success in this case has come when success was due. In all his early struggles with adversity Mr. Miller never lost heart, but at each succeeding reverse started in all his efforts to build up a paying business. He is now considered one of the substantial men of his community, and has a large circle of friends who enjoy... his business prominence. In politics, Mr. Miller is a Democrat. He is a member of Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F., of Reading, and Mount Penn Encampment, No. 152. He and his family are members of St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

On Feb. 14, 1861, Mr. Miller was married to Miss Caroline Nunnenmacher, daughter of William and Esther (Gettle) Nunnenmacher, and to this union there have been born children as follows: George W., Mary, Elva, William, Stella, Henry R. (deceased), Laura, Phoebe and Beulah.

JOSEPH H. MOYER, who died in Reading in 1891, was one of the veterans of the Civil war and had been a resident of the city for the whole of his active business life. He was born in Spring township, Berks county, in 1835, son of John and Elizabeth (Hontz) Moyer.

Educated in the township schools, Mr. Moyer at first took up the vocation of a teacher, but after several years' successful experience, he decided to learn a trade, and at once apprenticed himself to a harness maker. When he had completed his apprenticeship, he established himself in business in that line in Reading, and thereafter made that city his home. When the Civil war broke out he at first continued in his usual routine and did some work on saddles for the government, but on Aug. 16, 1862, he responded to his country's call for more men and enlisted in Company H, 138th Pa. V. I., under Capt. John Kennedy, and Col. J. A. Matthews. He proceeded with his regiment to Washington and thence to the front. He participated in the battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville, besides a number of minor skirmishes and at the expiration of his term of enlistment was honorably discharged at Harrisburg in May, 1865.

Returning to Reading, Mr. Moyer once more engaged in business as a harness maker, and established himself on Penn street, between Second and Third. He was a very good workman and commanded the very best prices, but despite his success he sold out his business after some years, moving to No. 8 North Ninth street, remaining there two years. He then moved to No. 208 Penn street where he retired and after five months he died. Invariably honest in all his dealings he commanded respect from all who had business dealings with him, while his genial personality made him well liked socially also. On political questions he was independent, voting always for the man he considered best fitted for the office regardless of party lines. In religion he was a devout member of the Universalist Church, and socially he belonged to the I. O. O. F. and the American Mechanics, besides being a member of McClellan Post, No. 16, G. A. R., of Reading.

Mr. Moyer was married in 1862 to Miss Margaret C. Wright, and six children were born to them as follows: Lizzie; Annie, deceased; John and Susan, twins, the latter deceased; and Ella and Amy, both deceased.

Mrs. Margaret C. W. Moyer was a daughter of John K. and Elizabeth (Sigman) Wright. Her father was a blacksmith by trade, and a man whose name stood for thrift and honesty, was prominent in the local ranks of the Democratic party, and served efficiently as postmaster during President Jackson's administration. He died in 1848. A son, Charles E. Wright, was one of those who gave their lives for their country during the great Civil war. He enlisted June 7, 1861, in Company D, 3d Pz. V. I., and was killed at the battle of Fredericksburg. Dec. 13, 1862, at the age of twenty-three years.

F. F. BRESSLER, a well known marble and granite dealer, of Reading, Pa., and ex-recorder of Berks county, died Oct. 22, 1908. He was born in Spring township, this county, in 1857, son of Darius Bressler, a farmer, who was born near Adamstown, Lancaster county, and died in Berks county at the age of sixty-two years.

Mr. Bressler attended the public schools of Berks county, after leaving which he spent one year with H. H. Hettinger at Sinking Spring, at the stone cutter's trade. In 1876 he located in Reading, being employed with the Eisenbrow Marble Company, of this city, in which he remained for two years. At the end of this time Mr. Bressler went to New York, where he was employed on the State Capitol at Albany, in 1880-81, from there going to Coatesville, Chester county, where he was engaged in business a short time. Returning to Reading, in 1882 Mr. Bressler engaged in business with Alfred S. Esterly, under the firm name of Bressler & Esterly, they continuing as partners until 1877, when Mr. Bressler engaged in work by himself on Washington street, opposite the post-office. Here Mr. Bressler continued until 1904, when he removed to his new location, at Center avenue and Spring streets, his place of business being fitted with the latest improved machinery. He employed from ten to fifteen skilled mechanics. His shop was a frame structure, 60 x 100 feet in dimensions, and in one of the most desirable locations that could be found for such a business. While Bressler was engaged with the public as an officialHaving been elected recorder of deeds of Berks county in 1901, on the Democratic ticket, in which office he served faithfully for three years. He was a resident of the Seventh ward, and during 1890-91 he served in the select council. He served as a delegate to various conventions, among them the one in Chicago, which nominated William Jennings Bryan for the Presidency, at Chicago. Mr. Bressler was a member of the election board in this ward.

Mr. Bressler was married to Mary Esterly, daughter of the late Amos S. Esterly, of Reading, who was a well-known proprietor of the city, and two children were born to this union, Mabel and Alice. Mr. Bressler was fraternally connected with the Elks Lodge of Reading, No. 115.

JAMES M. YERGER, who was one of the county commissioners of Berks county from Jan. 1, 1906, to Jan. 1, 1909, was born in Upper Tulpehocken township, this county, June 22, 1860, son of William and Diana (Moll) Yerger.

Samuel Yerger, grandfather of James M., was a native of Berks county, born in Bern township. He was a farmer and stock raiser, and was quite well liked by the people.

Mr. Yerger married a Miss Nunnenmacher, and their children were: Joseph; John; Betsy, m. to Elias Spies; and William. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Yerger was a Democrat.

William H. Yerger was educated in the common schools of Bern township, Berks county, and in his youth learned the carpenter's trade, at which, in conjunction with agricultural pursuits, he continued all of his life. Mr. Yerger passed away in 1885, aged sixty-three years, and his wife Diana (Moll) passed away in 1860, when thirty-three years of age. These children were born to them: Cyrus; Elizabeth, m. to Henry Heffner, of Youngstown, Ohio; William; Amos; Amanda, deceased; Clarissa, m. to Franklin Seidel; Annetta, m. to Alfred Stoyer; and James M. Mr. Yerger's second marriage was to Theresa Himmelberger Ulrich, and to this union there were born three children: Wilson; Morris; and Catherine, deceased. Mr. Yerger was a Lutheran. He was a Democrat in his political views, and for some years held the office of school director.

James M. Yerger received his educational advantages in the schools of Centre township, and this was supplemented by an attendance at the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown, Pa. He was elected for seven terms and then engaged in the produce business, shipping to Reading and Philadelphia. After six years Mr. Yerger removed to Reading, being appointed during President Cleveland's second administration to the position of stamp clerk in the revenue office located in the post-office building in Reading. After leaving this position Mr. Yerger was engaged for some time in the manufacture of cigars, disposing of this enterprise to enter the insurance field as agent for the Equitable and Prudential insurance companies, and in this latter capacity he continued successfully until his election to the office of county commissioner in the fall of 1905 on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Yerger took an active part in secret organizations, and is a member of the Masons, Odd Fellows, Rebekahs, P. O. S. of A. and P. O. of A.

Mr. Yerger was married Oct. 15, 1887, to Anna S. Kline, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Green) Kline; five children were born to this union, James K., William, Samuel, Mary and Earl, all deceased, except James K.

HENNE. The members of the Henne family referred to in this sketch are descended from Michael Henne, who passed his life in Berks county. He was born near Bernville, followed farming in that locality, and died there. He and his wife, whose maiden name was Catharine Haag, are both buried at Bernville. Their eldest son, John, and Daniel and Jared.

Jared Henne, son of Michael, was born July 9, 1831, and died Nov. 3, 1906, in Upper Tulpehocken township; he was buried at the Blue Mountain Church. He was a carpenter, following the trade most of his life. He married Sally Fox, daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Herzog) Fox, and she still survives, making her home at Strausstown. They became the parents of five children: Aaron F.; Howard F.; Sally, m. to Abraham Ritzman; Clara, m. to Wilson W. Stause; and John, m. to Agnes Feick.

Aaron F. Henne, eldest son of Jared Henne, was born Aug. 12, 1853, in Upper Tulpehocken township, learned the carpenter's trade with his father, and followed the same for twelve years. For five years he was in the mercantile business at Crosskill Mills. For seven years he farmed on the Jacob Potteiger farm and for eight years on the Aaron Kern farm, in 1906 buying the old William Reber homestead, in Upper Tulpehocken township, near Strausstown, upon which he has since resided. The place comprises twenty-seven acres, to the cultivation of which he devotes his time. He married Hannah Ritzman, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Beery) Ritzman, and they have had twelve children, Charles W. and William J., the latter a barber at Strausstown.

Charles W. Henne, son of Aaron F., was born Feb. 13, 1879, in Upper Tulpehocken township, and received his education in the public schools. For three years after commencing to work he was engaged at clerking in the general stores of J. A. Smith and L. W. Ritzman at Strausstown, and Howard Long at Rehrersburg. On Aug. 1, 1899, he went to Reading, and learned the barber's trade from William Shearer, of No. 117 North Ninth Street. After completing his term, he entered the line and opened the Lincoln Barbers Shop, of which he is still proprietor, with his brother, William J., as his foreman. At Strausstown he learned the cigar business with John Bricker and Calvin Foreman, and in 1905 he opened the La Fama Cigar Company, embarking in business on his own account with only two men employed. He has since turned out a high grade of work. His most popular brands, with more than local fame, are "La Fama 10," "Carrie May," "Henne Value," "1910," "Paddy's Delight," "Little Pets," "Dutch Charlie," "Henne's Reliable" and the Cyclone. Mr. Henne has two men who turn out a high grade of work. His most popular brands, with more than local fame, are "La Fama 10," "Carrie May," "Henne Value," "1910," "Paddy's Delight," "Little Pets," "Dutch Charlie," "Henne's Reliable" and the Cyclone.

Mr. Henne married Kate Unger, daughter of Abraham and Rebecca (Resh) Unger, and four children have been born to them: A son that died in infancy; Hannah R., who died when three years old; Carrie May, and Jacob A.

Mr. Henne is a Democrat in politics and interested in local affairs, having served two terms as assessor of Upper Tulpehocken township, being elected for the second term without opposition, and receiving the highest vote on the ticket. He is a member of Zion's Blue Mountain Church, and is a member of the Masons and Odd Fellows among the secret organizations.

Howard F. Henne, second son of Jared and Sally (Fox) Henne, was born Nov. 9, 1855, in Jefferson township, and received his education in the schools of Upper Tulpehocken. When seven years old he went to learn the shoemaker's trade under J. A. Smith, at Strasstown, remaining with him for seven years, after which he went into business for himself at Strasstown, Upper Tulpehocken township, where he has continued to make his home until the present. Howard F. has done fine custom work, having a large patronage in that line. Mr. Henne has other business interests, being treasurer of a building and loan association, and is a well-known resident of his locality. He has served as delegate to a number of county conventions, has been treasurer of several times, and has acted twice as judge of election, being quite active in local politics as a Democrat. He was formerly fire warden of upper Berks county, having been appointed to that office by the county commissioners; and has also served as school director of Upper Tulpehocken township.

Mr. Henne married Emma Hartner, daughter of Moses and Leah (Feick) Henne, and they have had one son, Martyn R. Mr. Henne is a Lutheran in religion, an active member of Zion's Blue Mountain Church, which he has served as deacon, elder and president of the board of trustees, and is interested in the latter order as a member of the Ridgely Protective Association and a member of the Rebekahs. He was a representative to the Grand Lodge at Wilkes-Barre. Martyn R. Henne, son of Howard F., was born Aug. 16, 1881, and received his early education in the public schools of his home neighborhood. Later he attended the Palmer's Business College of Philadelphia, and then took a special course at the Y. M. C. A., Philadelphia, in Advanced English, Business Law, etc., and has been junior in local circles, and has acted twice as president of the P. O. S. of A. and P. O. F., and is particularly interested in the latter order, being a past grand of his home lodge, a member of the Ridgely Protective Association and a member of the Rebekahs. He was a representative to the Grand Lodge at Wilkes-Barre.

Mr. Henne is a third-degree Mason and a member of Lu Lu Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Philadelphia. He also belongs to the P. O. S. of A., at Strausstown; Veritas Lodge, No. 643, I. O. O. F., at Philadelphia; Palen Masonic Lodge, No. 13, and to the American Institute of Banking, having been engaged with the latter organization in numerous capacities for a number of years.

REV. HARRY CHARLES KLINE, pastor of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, at Hamburg, was born at Philadelphia, Pa., May 27, 1868, son of Christian S. and Amanda Jane (Koch) Kline. The father emigrated from Monsheim, near Worms, Germany, in 1855, accompanying his parents, who landed at New York, and then proceeded to Schuylkill County, Montgomery county, Pa. When a young man he went to Philadelphia and lived with a sister who was married to Philip Monkenbeek, a cigar manufacturer and merchant, who taught him the business, and he then engaged in the same line on his own account at Ninth and Green Streets, carrying the business on successfully until 1877. He then became railroad engineer on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, before employing as such until 1889, when he entered the Baldwin Locomotive Works; he was engaged there as a mechanic until 1896, when he sustained a serious injury, from which he eventually died, in 1898.

Christian S. Kline married Amanda J. Koch, of Lehigh county, and by her had eight children: Harry,
Charles; Howard; Ella; Emma (m. Frank Philadelphia); Catherine (m. Morris Randenbush); Clara (m. Marshall Benner, and, after his death, Clarence Braham); three children died in infancy.

Harry C. Kline received his early education in the public schools of Philadelphia, and later attended Muhlenberg College at Allentown, where he graduated with honors in June, 1894. He prepared for the ministry at the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mt. Airy, graduating from that institution in 1897. In June of that year, immediately thereafter, he was ordained a Lutheran minister at Lancaster, Pa. Soon after his ordination, June 8, 1897, Rev. Mr. Kline located at Hamburg and was regularly installed as pastor of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church, and also of St. Paul's Church, in Windsor township, of Zion's, in Perry township, and of St. Mark's at Shoemakersville, Pa. With the exception of the summer of 1898, while he served for but four years, he has continued to officiate as minister of these churches to the present time.

Immediately upon his taking charge of St. John's Church, new religious zeal in the members of the congregation was developed. This was a severe test of the following year. On Monday, April 3, 1898, to the amazement of the congregation, the beautiful old church was completely destroyed by fire, caused by a large spark which was blown from the destructive fire at the Wilhelm Bicycle Works, several hundred yards distant to the west. The evening before, during a heavy rain, two fine windows had been dedicated, and a large catechusical class had been confirmed in the old church.
Although shocked by the unlooked-for calamity, the minister and his flock were not discouraged, for they at once resolved to build their exclusive Lutheran church, severing their Union relations with the Reformed brethren. They set to work in real earnest to accomplish the task, which was finished by Whitnitside, 1899, when the building was consecrated.
It was then and is still recognized as one of the hand-sumest structures in the section of this superb structure, Rev. Mr. Kline has received much praise for his unremitting and successful efforts, and in 1906 the congregation was highly gratified at the extinguishment of the entire indebtedness against the death, mostly to the personal appeals of the pastor. Rev. Mr. Kline has also shared the visitation building a beautiful Union church, known as Zion's Union Church, in Perry township, which was conseicated on Whitnitside, 1909; he is the Lutheran pastor of that church.

In 1897, Rev. Harry C. Kline married Gertrude Lillian Morgan, and by her have two sons, Aaran Luther and Bernard Leh. Mrs. Kline was given a superior education, more especially in music, under Prof. C. A.
Marks, and she became a music teacher, following that profession for eight years. In 1890, Professor Marks organized his own Cornice Society, with which she filled the responsible position of piano accom-pianist in a highly commendable manner until her marriage in 1897. Mrs. Kline is also an adept in needlework, as the walls of her beautiful and well-kept home attest. She is a lovely character.

Thomas H. Leh, of Allentown, Mrs. Kline's father, born in 1853, died in 1886. He married M. Alice Mumaw, and they had three children: Gertrude (m. Rev.
Mr. Kline), William T. (m. Mayme Matten), and Anna
M. (m. Willis E. Kuehns). Mrs. Kline's grandfather,
William R. Leh, also of Allentown, married A. Maria Gracie, of Reading.

Rev. Mr. Kline, being much interested in local history, has become a member of the Pennsylvania German Society and the Berks County Historical Society, both of which organizations he encourages most heartily.

WILLIAM BRIDEGAM, one of Reading's highly esteemed citizens and retired business men, is a native of Berks county, born June 10, 1836, in Alsace township, son of David and Catherine (Becker) Bridegam, also natives of this county.

David Bridegam was educated in the common schools of his day, and when a boy learned the weaver's trade.
This, in connection with farming a small property, occupied his time during his short life. He died at the age of thirty years, having been married but eight years, and having four children: Louisa m. Philip Her-bine, and had eight children, John (deceased); William, M. Malilon, Louisa, Katie, Amanda and James; William; Augustus died single; and Lewis m. Mary Ann Shadle and had three children, Augustus, Katie and James. Mr. Bridegam died in 1835, while his widow survived him fifty-five years and died aged eighty-six years. The paternal grandfather was David Becker, who married Susan Mesmers, and was a very prominent farming people of Alsace township, and he was an extensive land owner. He, however, disposed of his interests in Berks county and with a large family removed to Ohio, where some of his descendants still reside.

William Bridegam was but five years old when his father died, and his mother not being in affluent circumstances, he was taken to raise by Susan Hassler, with whom he remained until about eight years of age, receiving, however, but a limited education. While yet in his teens, he was apprenticed to the tinsmith's trade, and during this he followed for fifty-four years his honest endeavor and perseverance has accumulated a competency and now in the evening of his life is living quietly, enjoying the fruits of early labor. Mr.
Bridegam has been twice married, his first wife being Caroline Bell, by whom two children were born: Carol-line, deceased; and Susan, who became the wife of William Hobart. Mr. Bridegam m. (second) Cynthia Waltz (now also deceased), and six children were born to this union, as follows: Clara, m. Samuel Hartman; Sarah, is a widow; Kate, m. John E. Hunderson, of Los Angeles, Cal.; William E., is an electrician of Reading, and is deceased; and Florence, m. John Fink, of Schuykill Haven.

In religion the family are members of St. James' Lutheran Church. Mr. Bridegam was formerly a member of the I. O. O. F., and belongs to Reading Council, No. 46, O. U. A. M. He is a very active man for his years, and is most highly esteemed in Reading.

WILLIAM B. YEAGER, proprietor of the Reading Cornice Works, with business situated on the northwest corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets, Reading, was one of the leading business men of this city.
He was born at Reading, in 1831, a son of Abraham and Harriet (Dickinson) Yeager.

Abraham Yeager was one of the business men of Reading for years. For a long period he was a confectioner and later went into the plumbing business in partnership with his father-in-law, William Dickinson, under the firm name of Yeager & Yeager. The business was then located on Sixth street near Penn street, Reading. Subsequently Mr. Yeager was associated with a Mr. Miller and the firm became Miller & Yeager and so continued until the latter's death, at comparatively early age of thirty-seven years. He was laid to rest to rest in Evans cemetery. Mr.
Yeager was survived by a widow and child. He married Harriett Dickinson, daughter of William P. and Elizabeth (Miller) Dickinson, the Miller family being a very old and prominent one at Reading. The children of this union were: William B., of this sketch; Edward, formerly mayor of the city of Reading; Harry; Frank; Clara; and Alice, wife of Henry Heckman, of California.

William B. Yeager was educated in the schools of his native city, including the high school. His first acquaintance with business was as a clerk in the dry goods store of B. H. Brown, where he remained a short time, and then entered the Reading Sheet Mill Works and for one year worked at piling scrap iron. His next business connection was with the firm of Delp & Rapp, with whom he was associated for two and a half years. In 1878 he went with W. T. Hain, working at the tinning trade, and remained with him for sixteen years. That long experience gave him a thorough understanding of his present line of work. During this period he spent some eighteen months in Schuylkill county, in the same business.

In 1887 Mr. Yeager engaged in business at his present site and has met with most encouraging success. The Reading Cornice Works include in their manufactures copper and iron cornices, crestrings, hipping, and finals, roofing, spouting and heater work and sheet metal work of all kinds. His plant is well equipped with all manner of modern machinery and he gives employment to ten skilled workmen. On Jan. 15, 1906, he received a patent right for a metal window sash and frame, which has met with a ready sale. Mr. Yeager visits neighboring towns in the interests of his business and has friends all over the region.

Mr. Yeager was married to Susan Leithaiser, a daughter of Francis and Mary (Adams) Leithaiser, of Hyde Park, Reading. They have a daughter and son, Bessie and Harry, the latter of whom proves a very apt assistant to his father. In politics Mr. Yeager is a Republican. Fraternally he belongs to Chandler Lodge No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, and Reading Commandery, and is a past officer of the Royal Arcanum. Mr. Yeager and family belong to the Lutheran Church. They have a pleasant home at No. 689 North Sixth street, Reading.

A. W. HAAG, a prosperous business man of Reading, carrying on a large millwrighting business on the corner of Walnut and Third streets, was born Feb. 15, 1837, in Berks, Co., Pa., a son of Joel and Susanna (Wenrich) Haag.

His education was obtained in the schools at Bernville and from youth he took care of himself. In 1868 he went to California and helped build the Union Pacific railroad, and was one of the party to travel on the first train over his route. He went to Luzerne county and there worked at sawmill work, having some acquaintances there, and worked also at Allentown. In 1875 he went to Fleetwood and worked on what was the invention of the Haag Reliance Turbine Water Wheel, superintending the setting up of the same, until 1894. Mr. Haag then came to Reading and established his business at the foot of Chestnut street, but in 1896 he opened his present place of business where he has a fine establishment equipped with all kinds of modern machinery for millwrighting. He makes a specialty of equipping dye works. He is a thoroughly competent machinist and stands very high in the trade.

In 1873 Mr. Haag was married to Sevilla Eck and they have eleven children, namely: Katherine, m. to W. L. Pegley; Charles, m. to Jennie Rambo; Sarah, m. to Samuel Pegley; John A., m. to Ada Heck; George, m. to Bessie Fink; Elizabeth, m. to E. Shunk; Mary, m. to John Craig; Caroline, m. to E. Miller; Adam W., jr.; William P. and James H. Mr. Haag is a member of the United Evangelical Church. He is fraternally connected with the Knights of Pythias. While in Fleetwood he was a member of the council, and for several years his trustee. He was also secretary of the board of town councilmen of Fleetwood for six years. Mr. Haag is very well known in the city of Reading, where he is highly esteemed for his many sterling traits of character.

ANDREW HONEKER, a resident of Reading, Pa., who was engaged in the stone-cutting business, was born June 22, 1845, in Wurttemberg, Germany, son of George Honeker, an agriculturist of that country, where he died at the age of sixty-five years.

Andrew Honeker received his education in the common schools of his native country, and was reared on his father’s farm. He came to America in June, 1869, on a vessel of the Hamburg Line, and landed in New York City, where he remained but a few days, then going to the State of Massachusetts. He worked on a farm there for a short time after which he came to Reading and was employed at a sawmill for a few months. His next employment was at Altoona, Pa., for a period of three years, after which he returned to Reading and learned the stone cutting trade with the Eben people, in whose employ he was for a period of twenty years. In 1884 Mr. Honeker engaged in business with John Fisher and Christ Becker, with whom he continued one year, after which he formed a partnership with Simon Abel, this connection continuing for five years. In 1904 Mr. Honeker became the partner of Henry Huber (see sketch elsewhere), and they continued as partners, their yard being located at Elm and Buttonwood streets, as long as Mr. Honeker lived, and after his husband’s death Mrs. Honeker sold his interests. The home of the family is at No. 1167 Green street. Mr. Honeker died July 23, 1908, aged sixty-three years, and is buried in the German Cemetery, Reading. He was a member of St. Paul’s Roman Catholic Church, and of St. Boniface’s Society.

Mr. Honeker married Cecilia Hohm, of Baiern, Germany, and to them were born the following children: Joseph, who is employed in Chicago as a clerk; Maggie; Albert; Annie; Lizzie, and Mary.

RICHARD M. WHITMAN, former chief of police of Reading, is descended from David Whitman, a blacksmith of Robeson township, Berks county.

Abraham S. Whitman, his father, who was a printer and publisher of Reading, died in that city in 1800. He was married at thirty-nine years to Elizabeth (Reeser), daughter of Daniel Reeser, a drover of Berks county, passed away in May, 1901, aged eighty-one years. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Whitman, two of whom, Rose and Kate, died in early childhood. Those still living are: Daniel R.; Mary, who was twice married, to Rev. R. M. Rapp, and who is secretary of the Reading Hardware Company, Reading; Esther, the wife of William Clark, of the Reading Hardware Company; Henrietta, at home; Lilly, the wife of James Johnson, of the Pennsylvania Railroad service; Richard M.

Richard M. Whitman was born in Reading, April 3, 1848. He received his education in the public schools, and then learned the printing business in his father's office, at the Times, and continued at printing for a number of years. He next took charge of the Daily News and remained there nine years, or until the paper was discontinued, when he became one of the proprietors of the Reading Daily Telegram and with this paper he continued three years. He was then twice elected to Common Council from the Second ward, resigning in 1890 to accept the position of highway commissioner of the Western district of Reading. At the expiration of his term he was appointed chief of the Reading Police, serving under Mayors Merritt, Yeager and Gerber, with an interval between Merritt and Yeager. During this interval he was employed on the Times.

Mr. Whitman was married Jan. 20, 1877, to Mary Catherine Shunk, daughter of John and Rachel (Savage) Shunk, the former a tanner and farmer of Heidelberg township, Berks county, and a nephew of the Hon.
Francis Shunk, ex-Governor of Pennsylvania. Two sons and two daughters have been born to this union: Daniel R., a toolmaker of Philadelphia; May; Jacob; and Griselda, who died in childhood.

Mr. Whitman belongs to St. John's Lodge No. 435, F. & A. M., and to the Foresters of America. He is also connected with Liberty Fire Company, in which he has held several offices. In politics he is a Democrat. During his career as chief of police he made many important arrests, and was a faithful and capable officer.

GEORGE A. RICK, president of the common branch of the city councils of Reading, is a native of that city whose connection with its business and public life does credit to his birth and ancestry. He is a member of an old Berks County family, being a descendant in the fifth generation from Herman Rick, the emigrant ancestor of the family, who came to this country in 1712, when twelve years old. From him Mr. Rick traces his line through John George, Charles, and John Rick, the latter for many years a member of the well-known firm of Rick Brothers, manufacturers of tacks and builders' hardware, which was established in the year 1877, and from many years maintained its position as one of the leading industries of the kind in Reading and elsewhere. John Rick married Emma C. Ammon, and to them were born three sons and one daughter: George A., John, Paul A., and Margaret Julia, the daughter dying in September, 1904. Further details concerning the ancestors will be found elsewhere.

George A. Rick was born in Reading, Oct. 23, 1877, and there received his education in the public schools. After his graduation from the high school, June 1, 1895, he entered the office of William H. Dechert, civil engineer, with whom he remained until May, 1898, on the 9th of which month he entered the army in the volunteer service. He became a private in Company A (Capt. Samuel Willits), 4th Regiment (Col. David Brainerd Case), Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, serving until Nov. 16, 1898; he was sent to Porto Rico on his return. Upon his being mustered out of the service, Mr. Rick engaged in the real estate and investment business, which he has continued to the present time. He is a director of the Colonial Trust Company.

In 1906 Mr. Rick was elected to represent his ward in the common branch of the city council, and in 1908 he was re-elected for a term of two years. Immediately following his re-election, in April, 1908, he was elected president of that branch of the city government, and he has occupied the chair ever since. He is a Republican in political sentiment, public-spirited and conscientious in the discharge of his duties, and alive to the needs of his city. He has been re-elected to the office.

On Nov. 12, 1908, Mr. Rick married Margaret Hunter, daughter of John and Marion Hunter, of Alva, Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Rick have two children, John Hunter and Margaret Marion. Mr. Rick is a Lutheran in religious connection, holding membership in St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church.

WALTON G. LEVAN, for many years a business man of Reading, bore a name not only to be found in the military annals of this country, but also well known in France in connection with the old Huguenot days. The family was founded in America by three brothers, Jacob, Isaac and Abraham, who fled from their native land in 1715 to escape persecution and came to Pennsylvania, settling in Berks county, one near Kutztown, one in Oley Valley and one in what is now Reading. A warlike strain has run through their descendants and Mr. Levан is among the defenders of liberty in both 1775 and 1861.

Abraham Levon, grandfather of Walton G., in the earlier part of his life resided in York, York county, a place then known as Little York. He was engaged in business as a hatter and dealt almost entirely, whether for himself or his goods, in the making of hats. He finished, in Baltimore, Md. Later he settled in Reading and carried on the same business there. He was one of the leading supporters of the old Reformed Church there, and when he died, at an advanced age, was buried in the cemetery, at the corner of Sixth and Walnut streets.

Isaac N. Levon, son of Abraham, was born and brought up in York and there learned the trade of a hatter under his father. On moving to Reading, however, he went into the nail cutting line instead, traveling through Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Virginia. He returned to Reading about 1899 and went into the hat business again, opening a retail establishment at No. 927 Penn street where he continued a few years, then bought the property of the well-known firm of John Shunk, 719 Penn street and there continued until his death, in 1892, at the age of seventy-three years. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Guiel, resident of Canada, where Mrs. Levon was born, but later he removed to Connecticut. Mr. Guiel was a famous Indian scout and during the Rebellion his services were employed by the government.

The last years of his life were spent in work among the Indians. Mr. and Mrs. Levon had children as follows: Walton G., John A., Edgar M., Annie A., Ella G. (m. Peter Weber, of Lancaster, Pa.), I. Newton, (of Wilmington, Del.), and Florence (wife of Dr. Charles Wilkofmann, of Reading, Pa.).

Walton G. Levon was born in Baltimore, Md., Jan. 27, 1846. He came to Reading with his parents when only one child, and after completing his education in the public schools began to learn the trade which his father and grandfather before him had followed. This was during the period of the war, and after serving six months of his apprenticeship he enlisted in Company B, 2d Pennsylvania Cavalry under Gen. David Mc. Gregg. He served in all two years and six months and during that time was once seriously wounded, in the battle of Hunter's Run, Oct. 22, 1864. The injury was in the left leg and he suffered from its effects for the rest of his life.

He was discharged July 20, 1865, and returning to Reading, resumed work at his trade where he had left off. He followed that line of work without interruption, in 1869 becoming associated in the hat business with his father at No. 727 Penn street. Continuing with him until 1874, in that year he opened an establishment of his own at No. 45 South Seventh street which he conducted until 1877, when he closed out his store and went back to the bench. He remained in the shop until March 9, 1895, when he and his son established a hat store at No. 903 Penn street, having both a retail and wholesale business. Several years after, to a day, they moved to the present location, No. 847 Penn street. Here his son now carries on what has become known as one of the most progressive hat stores in the city. In the rear of the store there is a plant for manufacturing hats for the local trade, and Mr. Levon was a skilled mechanic himself and superintended his own workrooms. He established a splendid reputation for the output. His son, Isaac N. Levon, became a partner in the firm in 1897 and they did business under the firm name of W. G. Levon & Son. Mr. Levon was actively engaged in business for a few days before his death, though he had been suffering for some months with dropsy. He died Nov. 18, 1906, in his sixty-first year. He was one of the best-known men in his line in Reading.

Mr. Levon married Catharine Boylan, who survives him, residing at No. 704 Walnut street, while his son, Isaac N., resides in the home at No. 133 North Eighth street. They had three children, Isaac N., who married Mary A. Siegfried, and had three children, namely: Bertha A., Walton G. and William A. Mr. Levon was a member of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R.

ISAAC HOLLENBACK, a well known citizen of Reading, engaged in the building business, who resides at No. 600 Schuykill avenue, was born in 1832 in Ontelaunee township, Berks county, near Leesport, son of John and Mary (Hartman) Hollenbach, and grandson of John and Christiana Hollenbach.

John Hollenbach, the grandfather, was a farmer near Leesport, Pa., where many years of his life were spent, and in which he was located for thirty and twenty years, being held in high esteem in his locality. He and his wife Christiana became the parents of these children: Benjamin; Samuel; Daniel; Rebecca, m. to Adam Garhart; Elithhees, m. to a Mr. DeTurck; John; and Kate, m. to a Mr. Schaeffer. In religious belief the family were Whigs. Mr. Hollenbach was first a Whig in politics, and later became a Republican.

John Hollenbach, son of John, was educated in the district schools of Berks county, and as a boy engaged in agricultural pursuits on his father's farm, later engaging therein for himself, following farming all of his life. He died aged seventy-one years, while his widow still survives him, being the mother of five children: Catherine, m. to William Marks; Emma, who died single; Isaac, Sally, m. to Charles Gernant; and John, a retired farmer of Illinois.

Isaac Hollenbach's education was secured in the schools of Bern township, after which he came to Reading and pursued his course in the business college. He then returned to his native place and engaged in farming until 1891, in which year he came again to Reading and engaged in the butchering business, for one year, selling out to engage in the building business, at which he has since continued with much success. He has eight children: three boys and five girls. The northwestern section of the city, among them sixteen on Gordon street, seven on West Green street, sixteen on West Greenwich street, and a row on Schuylkill avenue in the 600 block, in one of which he resides. Hollenbach street, one of the prettiest residence thoroughfares in northwestern Reading, was named after Mr. Hollenbach, and here in company with P. Monroe Krick, Mr. Hollenbach built forty-three houses. He is well and favorably known in his section of the city, serving as councilman of the Fifteenth ward, but declining a renomination on account of his varied business interests. He is a stanch Republican and a member of the North-eastern Republican League, and is fraternity connected with the Schuylkill Fire Company. In religious faith Mr. Hollenbach is a Lutheran.

WILLIAM H. MOYER, of the firm of Strunk & Moyer, feed merchants, of Reading, Pa., was born July 17, 1859, at Reading, son of David and Mary (Bingham) Moyer.

David Moyer, father of William H., born in 1819, was a carpenter at Reading, following his trade here during the greater part of his life. He died in 1875, and his widow died in 1877. They had three children: Clara, David A., and William H.

William H. Moyer was educated in the Reading schools and began his business life as an employee of Aaron Yocum, in a flour mill, with whom he continued for three years. Then began his association with John M. Strunk, for whom he worked eleven years, and in 1889 he was taken into partnership, and the present firm name was adopted. The business was founded in 1868 by Mr. Strunk, and by him was so conducted that it became favorably known all over Berks county. The warehouse is located at 10, 944 Franklin street. The scope of the business includes dealing in flour, feed, grain, hay, straw, potatoes and poultry supplies, and their trade connections enable them not only to do a good business for themselves but to make it of interest to their customers. Their flour is manufactured in large quantities, and is age 32x32 feet.

Mr. Moyer was married to Louisa Zelger, daughter of John and Rosalia (Roland) Zelger, of Reading, Pa. Mr. Zelger died in 1892. For years he had been a valued employee at the Johnston foundry. Mr. and Mrs. Moyer have one daughter, Helen May, who is a pupil at the grammar school. In politics Mr. Moyer is a Republican. Fraternally he is a Knight of Malta; and was secretary of the Rainbow Fire Company for some years. He is a member of the First Reformed Church at Reading.

DAVID DeLONG, now deceased, was a well known farmer of Bern township. He was born in Berks county, Pa., son of David De Long, Sr., who was for many years engaged in farming in Lehigh county—a very prominent man there.

Mr. De Long was always identified with Berks county. He began his farming operations there on a tract of forty acres, which he purchased in 1830, and which he later added considerably. He was successful in his work, being both capable and industrious, and his long life of seventy-seven years was full of useful and kindly deeds.

Mr. De Long married Miss Mary Snyder, and they passed many years of wedded life, broken by the death of Mrs. De Long at the age of sixty years. A large family was born to them, all of them living in or near Reading, as follows: Mary, Mrs. Daniel Moser, of Bern township; Hattie, Mrs. Samuel Savage, of Reading; Catharine, Mrs. Reintart, of Reading; who has two children, George and Katie (Mrs. Howard J.); also William, m. to Clara, formerly Mrs. John Toderrow; Levi, a farmer; John, a son; and Hattie, who was married to a Mr. Zerr; and Mary, m. to Miss Matilda Althouse, and residing on the homestead in Bern township; Lydia, m. to Frank Snyder, of Reading; and Sarah, m. to Levi Wagner. David De Long was a man who held the respect of the community in which he lived, and was of no little influence in the Democratic party. He was a member of the Reformed Church.

DOTTERRER. In 1728 among the names of passengers on the ship "Mortonhouse," was the name of Johan George Dotterrer, who spelled it in the Captain's list Hans Dirk Dodders. In 1756, according to the historian, Rupp, he had settled in District township, Berks county; and in 1759 his name appears on the tax list in that township. Tradition says he was an elder brother of Mathias Dotterrer, who came over in 1749. Of Mathias Dotterrer this name on the passenger list is given as Mathes Dottier, or Dottererer; and as a passenger on the ship "Jacob," Captain Adolph De Grove, from Amsterdam, last from Shields, England, qualifying at Philadelphia, Oct. 2, 1749. On the same ship were Nichlaus and Martin Dottier, who may have been sons of the above mentioned age of sixteen years, each. His son Mathias (1744-1827), about five years old at the time, and because of his age his name would not appear on the passenger list.

(II) Mathias Dotterrer, son of Mathias, born Jan. 22, 1744, became a pioneer of Lower Berks county. His name is variously spelled—Dotterer, Dotterer, Dotero and Todderer. On the red sandstone that marks his grave just south of the Hill Church, is the following inscription: "Mathias Dotterer, son of Mathias and Catharine, Born Jan. 22, 1744, Died June 30, 1827, aged 83 years. 5 months. 8 days. His wife is buried at his side, her grave being marked by the following inscription: "Anna Maria, daughter Adam and Catharine Imholtz, and wife Mathias Dotterer. She was born May 17, 1743, married 1765, and lived in holy wedlock over 60 years. She had two sons, twenty-six grandchildren, forty great-grandchildren at her death, which occurred August 13, 1827, at the age of eighty-eight years, nine months, seventeen days." The second son, Daniel was executor of his father's will (on record in German in West Book 6, p. 99); and Mathias.

(III) Daniel Dotterer, son of Mathias, was born July 4, 1768, and he died Sept. 13, 1844, in the seventy-ninth year of his age. He lived in Earl township, where he owned a farm, and he also owned a tract in Rockland township, bequeathing the latter to his son Henry in his will made Oct. 29, 1834. This will is on record in Will Book 9, page 18; executors, his sons Mathias and Daniel. In the Will Index his name is spelled Daniel Dotterro. He married Barbara Muthart (born June 28, 1763, died Dec. 3, 1843, aged eighty years, five months, five days), and their children were: Mathias, John, Daniel (1792-1840), Jacob, George, Henry, Benjamin and Catharine. Later he attended Warren Lodge, No. 310, F. & A. M.; Norristown Chapter, No. 190, R. A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection. He is a past master of Perkiomenville Lodge, No. 367, I. O. O. F., and since his location in Boyertown has become affiliated with Boyertown Lodge No. 708, I. O. O. F. He rendered such invaluable services to the community at the time of the Opera House Fire in January, 1908. Dr. Dotterre is very prosperous, and his automobile may be seen at all hours. He handles this machine with great skill. On Jan. 1, 1909, in partnership with Claude C. Graeff, F. D., he bought the large wholesale and retail drug store of Charles A. Smith, and when not engaged at his private practice spends his time in the drug store.

The Doctor is very public-spirited, and has taken an active part in public affairs. He is a member of the board of health, and since the resignation of Dr. Weller represents the town on this board. He was one of the incorporators of the Boyertown Electric Light Company, serving as vice president until he was elected by an overwhelming majority as a councilman. He is a member of the Berks County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

On Dec. 17, 1904, Dr. Dotterre married Mary Elizabeth Wagner, daughter of Michael and Amelia (Reller) Wagner, of Obelisk, Pa. They have no children.

(DVI) DANIEL W. DOTTERRE, son of John S., was born in Pike township, Nov. 27, 1854. He received his early education in the town and schools of Boyertown and later attended Professor Hankey's select school at Boyertown. He also attended Friedensburg Academy one term, then under the charge of Prof. S. A. Baer, and later Dr. Daniel Schoedler. In 1880 he began farming for himself on the place where he now lives near Hill Church. He has a farm of 160 acres, all in good condition. In politics he is a Democrat, and he wields considerable influence in the township, as he is a man of high repute and good judgment.

In 1879 Mr. Dotterre married Ellen Drumheller, daughter of David and Lydia (Rhode) Drumheller, and they had children: Ida m. John Hess; Daniel died in infancy; David m. Annie Moyer; John (twin to David) is a cigarmaker; Mamie, Augustus and Elizabeth are at home.

GEORGE C. SUENDER, who resides at No. 1290 North Twelfth street, Reading, Pa., has served as ward assessor of the city for the past seventeen years. Mr. Suender was born in 1845, in Saxon, Germany, son of George and Catherine D. (Eisenhart) Suender.

George Suender was a spinner by trade, an occupa- tion which he followed in his native country, and in 1847 emigrated to America, on the ship "Louisa Maria," Capt. Lew Schwenk. Landing May 7th, of that year, after a stormy voyage of seven weeks, at Philadelphia. After coming to this country Mr. Suender engaged in common laboring and huckstering, and in these occupations continued until his death in 1890, at the age of seventy-seven. He was born in 1813, and died in 1890. They were the parents of children as follows: George C., Charles, M. D., deceased; Catherine, m. to Charles Bast; and Louisa, m. to George Kramer. In religious belief the family were Reformed. In 1856 Mr. Suender was naturalized, and became a stanch Democrat.

George C. Suender received his education in the schools of Berks county, attending pay schools in Bern township and Freeland Seminary, and after leaving the latter institution taught school for five years. In 1868 he commenced farming, continuing there till 1870, when he embarked in the livery business on Pearl, below Franklin street, Reading. One year later he sold out to engage in the flour and feed business with William Komine. He shortly thereafter accepted
in business with him until 1880. In 1880, Mr. Suender engaged in the milk business, and this he carried on until April 30, 1907, when he sold out. Mr. Suender has been prominent not only in business, but in politi cal circles as well. He has long been a staunch adherent of Democratic principles in politics, and has been a justice of the peace for six years.
He has been a member of the board of supervisors for the past seventeen years has served efficiently as ward assessor. He is well known throughout the city, and has many warm friends.

Mr. Suender was married (first) to Elizabeth Kal man, by whom he had two children: Lillie and Elizabeth, m. to John Sheidy. His second marriage was to Louisa Menges, and to them there have been born six children: Katie, m. to Elmer Heilig; Eugenia H.; T.
Howard; Charles F.; Emma, m. to John Dersch; and Vernie. The family is connected with the Lutheran Church.

GEORGE GRAFF, a farmer of Albany township, Berks county, now living retired in his comfortable home at Albany Station, is a native of Neubeuern.
Germany, born Aug. 11, 1835, son of George Michael Graff.

George Michael Graff was born in Bayern, Ger many, May 23, 1793, and died at his home near Wess-nersville, Berks county, June 29, 1879. He came to America in 1839 bringing his family, and first lived for a few years in Philadelphia, from which city he came to Berks county, and made his first location in Greenwich township, on the place where William Era now lives about Klinesville. About 1848 he moved to Albany township, and located where his son Christian now lives near Wessnersville. He owned this farm, which first consisted of fifty-six acres, and this he cultivated until a few years before his death. He was a Lutheran in religious faith, as was also his wife, and they are buried at Friedens Church at Wessner-sville, from which they were members. Mr. Graff had been a tanner in the Old Country, but never followed that trade in America. He was a man of medium height with very black hair. His second wife was Anna M.
(aunt of John Gravois) who was born June 29, 1839, died April 21, 1881. They had four children:
George and Michael, both born in Germany; and Christian and Catharine (m. Samuel Mohn, of Round Top, Albany township), both born in America. Of these children, Michael lived some years in Albany township, and then moved to West Penn township, Schuy kill county, where some years later he sold out his farm, and then went to Tamaqua. He married Polly Kunkel, and their children were: Thomas, George, Charles, Alvin, Jonathan, Mary Ann, Missouri and Cora.
Christian Graff, son of George Michael, a shoemaker by trade, also carries on farming on the old homestead in Albany township. He married Polly Frey (spelled Fra in German), sister to George Graff's wife, Sarah, both doctors of Napoleon Frey. To Christian Graff and wife have been born: Oscar, Mantillas (m. Amanda Zimmerman, daughter of Noah Zimmerman), Richard
(m. Alice Zimmerman, sister to Amanda), Irwin, Elmer and Herbert.

George Graff accompanied his parents to America, and in Greenwich township he learned the shoemaker's trade under Peter Reinhard, and this he followed four years. During the Civil war he enlisted in Company P, 11th Pennsylvania, and was at Gettysburg and in the war he engaged in farming in Albany township, and has a nice farm of 110 acres located in the potato belt on the Ontelaune. He built in 1883 the present barn on his farm, and he retired in 1889, having the previous year built at Albany Station the brick resi dence near the railroad, where he now lives. The large lawn is most attractive. Mrs. Graff is a great lover of flowers and has been very successful in their cultivation, and the beautiful blossoms attract much attention, not only of the passers-by but also of the passengers on the trains of the Schuylkill & Lehigh railroad running close to the Ontelaune, which house is also well posted on public questions. He takes great pleasure in reading.
He and his wife have erected their monument at Friedens Church cemetery.

In 1860 Mr. Graff married Sarah Frey, daughter of Napoleon and Kate (Billman) Frey, the latter a daugh ter of Jacob Billman (who had been connected with the lumber trade, and has been also a summit concern he is a member of independent spirit and persevering dispo sition, and made his own way to a high position in busi ness circles.

Mr. Border is a native of Berks county, born in Al bury township, June 6, 1829. He is of German descent, his grandfather, Samuel Border, having been born in Germany, whence he emigrated to America, settling in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa. Daniel Border, son of Samuel, and father of William, was born in Exeter township and there passed his early life.
In 1860 he married Elizabeth Kline, and they had two children, Daniel and William, the former dying when eleven years old. Mrs.
Border remarried, her second husband being Jacob Bower, by whom she had one son, Jeremiah, who be came a well known physician of Reading.

William Border was only a year and a half old when his father died, and he remained at home with his moth er, and step-father until he reached the age of eleven, when he began to support himself. For several years he hired out as a farm hand, but when he was seventeen the family removed to Reading, and he accompa nied them to the city, which has since been his home.
During his first summer here he found work in a brick yard, and then he did day's labor until he commenced fence-making, in which line he made his first notable success. He continued in that line for twenty-two years, taking orders for the particular kind of fence he sold in every section of Berks county, where he formed a wide acquaintance while traveling around in the pursuit of his business. For the first six months after he quit fence-making he was in partner ship with Mr. Billman, and continued fence-making until at that time. He then formed the firm of William Border & Co., in which his associates were James T. Reber and Adam Bard, and they continued together for eight years, doing a profitable business as manufacturers of parts for wagons, buggies, etc., such as felloes, spokes, shafts, etc.

Mr. Border's next venture was as a money broker, a business which he began in 1873 at a most favorable time for that calling, as the financial panic of that time had just broken out. He followed that line for three years, during which he not only exercised his native ability to the best advantage in various financial transactions, but also made a large and remunerative investment. The accuracy of his judgment, wheth er in regard to men or conditions, was the principal factor in his success at this time. It was about this period that he invested largely in timber lands, upon which he intended to realize by cutting and selling the timber. The success of his investment showed him to be an expert in the valuation of such property. He continued on a similar line for some time afterward, buying land which he laid out into building lots, and he did considerable trading in real estate throughout his active career, also retaining a number of lots for himself about a hundred near Reading. His sales amounted to over $30,000 annually.

In 1894 Mr. Border became a member of the Acme Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of the Stormer bicycle, whose business offered a most promising investment as the demand for bicycles was then at its height. His executive influence soon became apparent, and the company soon doubled its management. The concern, during which time the large bicycle factory on Eighth street, at that time the largest in the city, was erected, in 1896. The product was twenty thousand bicycles yearly, and employment was given to a force of four hundred in their manufacture. The wheels were marketed all over the United States and also in foreign countries, being of high standard make.

In 1893 Mr. Border opened a toy and variety store, the conduct of which he turned over to his grandson, William F. Lease, and this was sold in 1903. Mr. Border had been identified with some of the most notable Reading financial institutions, on Mr. Border's member of the management of the Mercantile Bank of Berks County, Mr. Border became a director of the Schuylkill Valley Bank, the Reading National Bank, and the Reading City Passenger Railway Company, still retaining his stock in the last named.

Though his phenomenal success followed a youth of hard toil, with no promise of the affluence which crowned the efforts of his manhood, Mr. Border was never carried away with his prosperity, and never became a reckless investor or improvident in any way. His rise was steady, and a wise conservatism and excellent judgment to keep him decide deliberately and venture cautiously. Thus, having gained a fortune, like the Dreher's, he never lost it, and his course not only made for his own profit, but won for him a substantial position and gave the enterprises with which he was connected high prestige. He made his way against many obstacles, but he had the tenacity of determination and perseverance, and his successful struggle made him, in his earlier years, a man of courage for large things as time passed. His integrity in all transactions gained him universal respect.

On July 1, 1849, Mr. Border married Emma Harbold, like himself a native of Berks county, born May 26, 1822, daughter of Adam Harbold and granddaughter of Frederick Harbold. She died May 7, 1889, the mother of five children, namely: (1) Ellen Alwilda m. Jeremiah Lease, of Reading, and they have a family of five: William F., m. to Sallie Hafer, has two children, Ella and Catherine; Edwin J., m. to Carrie West, has six children, Lester, Florence, Harold, Grace, Emily and Carrie; Arthur F.; Clarence, and Raymond. This family, with the exception of Arthur F., who is Reformed, belongs to the Lutheran Church. (2) Amanda Othilia. (3) Anetta m. Frank Reinert, of Reading, and they have had three sons: One died in infancy; Leroy, m. to Helen Fleckenstein, has one child, William. (4) Emma and (5) Elizabeth died when young. Mr. Border and his daughter, Amanda, reside at No. 1338 North 12th street, Reading.

Mr. Border is a Republican in political faith and has been almost since the formation of the party. He cast his first ballot for General Washington. He has supported Abraham Lincoln, and has upheld Republican principles staunchly, though he has never taken an active part in political affairs. Fraternally he unites with Freedom Circle, Brotherhood of the Union, and is an Odd Fellow. His religious connection is with the Lutheran Church, to which he was always an active supporter. Among the characteristic traits showing Mr. Border's beneficent spirit was the distribution of all his real estate in 1907 to his three daughters, it being his desire to see the enjoyment of his children in his property while he was yet living. The gift was in his eighty-first year, and enjoying fair health.

WANNER. The Wanner family was one of a half dozen families that came from the southwestern section of Germany or Switzerland prior to 1740, and the name of Frederick Wanner is often mentioned and written in the historical books of Berks and Lancaster counties, tradition, appearance and descendants of these families who are posted on genealogy, in many cases confirm the idea that they were Palatines, who accepted the Christian religion before they came to the New World.

John Martin Wanner, the emigrant ancestor of this old family, came from Germany in the fall of 1738. He had six children, namely: Christian, of whom we have no record; Jacob, who married Mary Elizabeth Dreibelbis, and had issue, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, Peter, Magdalena and Mary; Peter; Margaret, who married a Burghart; Mrs. Muthart; and Mrs. Angstadt.

(II) Peter Wanner, son of Martin the emigrant, was thrice married. He m. (first) Catharine Rothermel, and they had six children, as follows: (1) Daniel is mentioned below. (2) Jacob is not mentioned in the records. (3) Peter m. Catharine Redinger, and had several children—M. Rebecca Bright, and had three children—Susanna, m. to John Adams, and had two children who died in infancy; and Mary and Peter, who were unmarried. (5) Caleb was married, but we have no record of either her or her family. (6) Esther m. a Heckman, and had three children—George, Aaron and Esther. Peter Wanner m. (second) a Miss Schwartz, and by her had three children, all of whom died in infancy. He m. (third) a Miss Dreibelbis, who was Catharine, and they had four children—John Wanner, the grandson of Solon A. Wanner. (III) John Wanner m. Elizabeth Biehl, daughter of Christian Biehl, and to this union were born the following children: Maria, born May 6, 1811, m. into the Sharadin family; Anna, born Feb. 4, 1813, m. into the Mertz family; Elizabeth, born Feb. 4, 1815, died young; William, born Feb. 22, 1817, m. into the Daniel mentioned below; Joel B., born March 5, 1821, a graduate of the Franklin and Marshall College, a lawyer, and during the Civil war a major in the Union army, m. into the Zieber family; Peter Christian, born March 4, 1843, a lawyer and a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College, m. into the Zieber family; and Henry, born March 28, 1834, is a banker and curator, and is unmarried. John Wanner, the father, was a prominent politician, and served several terms in the Legislature.

(IV) John Daniel Wanner, father of Solon A., was born near Kutztown, in Maxaturn township, Berks Co., Pa., Feb. 20, 1810. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Jonas and Elizabeth, Selig Bowler, and to them were born these children: (1) Llewellyn, a graduate of the Franklin and Marshall College, was a member of the Reading Bar, and after a successful career in Reading he went to Goshen, Ind., with his family, where he practised law until his death. He m. Catharine M. G., daughter of Michael Allen in Philadelphia; Charles H., born Sept. 3, 1827, a doctor, m. into the Hilbert family; Elizabeth, born Oct. 15, 1829, m. a Humbert; Amos, born Dec. 25, 1831, a lawyer and a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College, m. into the Zieber family; and Henry, born March 28, 1834, is a banker and curator, and is unmarried. John Wanner, the father, was a prominent politician, and served several terms in the Legislature.

(V) John Daniel Wanner, father of Solon A., was born near Kutztown, in Maxaturn township, Berks Co., Pa., Feb. 20, 1810. He m. John Wanner, the father, was a prominent politician, and served several terms in the Legislature.
ville, Pa., son of George Merkel, an iron master of that place. The only child of this union was a daugh ter, who died at birth, the mother passing away at the same time, April 10, 1882.  (8) Solon A. is mentioned below.

John Daniel Wanner received a common school education, and began life as a school teacher in Maxa-tawny township, later taking up civil engineering, which he mastered successfully in a short time. He then began the study of law, in his spare time, meanwhile working in the dry goods business with Heidenrich & Kutz, for meager wages. The firm kindly let him go surveying several days of the week, and at night when the rest of the family were in bed, he was preparing his reports and making calculations, these being so correct that his surveyings were never questioned by the courts. Raising and educating his own family, besides helping to educate three of his brothers, he was undaunted in his efforts, and success attended his every step. He was a justice of the peace at Kutztown for many years, served as chief burgess, and was clerk of the borough council until age incapacitated him for further work. He also held the office of registrar of wills for several counties, with credit to himself and the satisfaction of all concerned. The whole life of J. Daniel Wanner was an excellent example of ambition, pluck and energy, united with love and kindness toward his neighbors. Honest to himself and everyone who came in contact with him, sociable with everybody he dealt with, and exacting with his family, these are the characteristics, combined with a God-fearing spirit and a keen desire to do right, made up Mr. Wanner's life.

(V) Solon A. WANNER was born Nov. 13, 1850, and spent his boyhood days in Kutztown. There he attended the grammar schools, and later entered the Keystone State Normal School, in 1888 taking the regular course at Eastman's Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., graduating therefrom in 1889. After his return to Kutztown he became a clerk in the Peabody Bank, under his father, and four years later entered the employ of the Farmers State Bank, of Goshen, Ind. He remained there for three years, and then on account of the age of his parents he returned home, and engaged in business on Main street, conducting a branch office for the Keystone and Farmers' National Banks of Reading, Pa. He later engaged in the cigar and tobacco business, and became a yeoman. In 1905 he was called as an expert accountant to examine and audit the accounts of the county alms house, which duty he performed with great credit. Besides being a good business man Mr. Wanner is a musician of some note.

On Sept. 10, 1885, Mr. Wanner was married to Mary A. Leiby, daughter of Alfred and Susan (Wertz) Leiby, and to this union were born children: Lee, a telegraph operator; Vernon; Daniel, an expert electrician at the Locomotive works at Huntington, W. Va., and a clever musician; and Clara Mary, a bright and accomplished daughter, who is now teaching school.

(III) Daniel Wanner, son of Peter and great-grandfather of Charles A. Wanner, married and became the father of three children, Samuel, Thomas and Jacob.

(IV) Samuel Wanner, son of Daniel, was a farmer and miller, and erected a number of grist mills, among which was the Leimbach mill in Fleetwood. He was very prosperous, owning an excellent farm of 100 acres in Richmond township. He was a member of the Reformed Church of St. Paul, of Fleetwood. In politics he was a Democrat. He m. Anna Albright, and they had at least ten children. He now resides on the farm in Alsace township; Thomas A., now retired, who was an iron worker, having a forge in Chester county; Peter A., retired drover; John A., deceased; and Lewis A.

(V) Lewis A. Wanner was a well known and prosperous business man of Fleetwood, and a member of the firm of Schaeffer, Wanner & Co. He m. Hettie Kelchner, daughter of Jacob and Ann (Sheirer) Kel-chner, and to this union were born the following children: Katie, wife of Marvin Moyer, a dealer in wall papers at Quakertown, Pa.; Isaac, deceased; Annie, m. to Henry D. Schaeffer, of Reading; Charles A.; Elizaabeth, who resides with her mother in Fleetwood; Lewis A., a student in the Department of Finance and Commerce at the University of Pennsylvania; and Oliver B., a student at Albright College.

(III) Charles ALBRIGHT WANNER was born Aug. 25, 1876, and received his primary education in the public schools of the place, and later attended the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. Later he attended Albright College, at Myers-town, Lebanon county, and graduated from that institution in 1895. The senior partner in his father's business retired, and the present firm, that of Schaeffer, Wanner & Co., was formed, consisting of Charles A. Wanner, and Llewellyn D. and Webster D. Schaeffer, the two latter being sons of George B. Schaeffer, ex-sheriff of Berks county. The new firm has thus far been very successful.

Charles A. Wanner is a Republican in politics. In religion he is connected with the United Evangelical Church. Besides being a member of the hosiery manufacturing firm of Madeira & Wanner of Fleetwood, he is an honorable and public-spirited citizen, and a representative man of his community.

HERMAN. The Herman family of Berks county, represented in the present generation by that popular official, George C. Herman, Esq., of Maxatawny township, had its early home in Holland, and the four generations who have resided in Berks county, have been prominent in the business and professions of the time, and in their talents and their education to the service of the public.

The first of the family to come to the New World was the Rev. Frederick Herman, a native of Holland, who in 1786 was sent by the fathers of the Reformed Church to preach the Gospel in America. He located in New Jersey, but remained there only a short time, going then to Germantown, near Philadelphia, and there he was living in 1798 when President Washington and the American Congress met there. In fact, his home was secured for the accommodation of the President and his private secretary, Mr. B. Dandridge. At dinner parties he was appointed to place at the disposal of the distinguished guests, "who, when the dinner was over, took the ladies in the afternoon, at ten dollars each per week." The dinners were sent in by a neighboring tavern keeper. From Germantown the Rev. Mr. Herman moved to near Pottstown, in Montgomery county, where he served many congregations, besides paying special attention to preparation of young men for the work of the holy ministry, and died at a ripe old age, after sixty years, of faithful service as a minister of the Gospel.

Rev. Charles G. Herman, son of the Rev. Frederick Herman and Maria, his wife, whose maiden name was Feit, was born in Germantown, Philadelphia county. He, too, became a minister of the Reformed Church, and, locating in Maxatawny township, Berks county, made that locality the scene of his labors throughout the remainder of his life. He entered into rest Aug. 4, 1896, after the age of seventy years, nine months and eleven days. He m. Henrietta Moyer, who was born in Maxatawny township, and they had eight children; Maria, m. to Judge Willoughby Fogle, and now deceased; Hester, m. to Dr. Henry Heilrich, a resident of Allentown, Pa.; Louisa, m. Daniel Brendel, of Bethlehem, Pa.; Jacob Sassaman, deceased; Mary, m. to Mr. Alfred Jasper.

Rev. Alfred Jasper Herman, son of Rev. Charles G. and Hester (Sassaman), was born Nov. 6, 1831, in Maxatawny township, in the house in which he now lives. He was reared in the influence of a Christian home, and was early trained to habits of industry and self-denial. His education was acquired in the common schools; in Easton Academy, under the Rev. Dr. Vandeveer; in the University of New York, where he pursued a special course for two years; and his theological studies under his uncle, the late Rev. Dr. Guldin, of New York City, and his father. The honorary degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa. During the last year of his study in New York City he preached weekly, on Wednesday nights, in the Howsen street Reformed Church, Hempstead, which his uncle was pastor. In 1858, Mr. Herman was called to the Reformed Church ordained, and he immediately became assistant to his father, a position he filled for five years. At the end of that time he took charge of the New Jerusalem Church at Westminister, where he remained for half a century. He also had charge of a number of other churches in that locality, at one time being pastor of eight parishes—an almost superhuman task, yet his industry, his devotion never flagged, and his superb physical health sustained him. In forty-seven years he missed but twenty-five Sundays because of ill health or inclement weather. To his earnest efforts is due the existence of St. Paul's Church, a branch of St. Peter's of Topton. In 1897 when he celebrated the forty-sixth anniversary of his ordination, and the forty-first of his pastorate at the New Jerusalem Church, people to the number of 2,000 gathered from all over Berks and Lehigh counties to do him honor, and to show their affection for their spiritual leader.

The Rev. Mr. Herman was married on June 14, 1853, to Isabella Grim, daughter of Sem and Anna (Kline) Grim, of Lehigh county, and their children were: Ambrose, a practising physician at Lansdale, Pa., m. Alice Breinig; Annie m. Dr. Richard Beck, of Newburg, Pa., and George, who is president of the Democratic Club of Maxatawny township that once belonged to his father. On it is a large pebble-dashed house that has weathered the storms a full half century.

GEORGE C. HERMAN, son of Rev. Alfred J. and Isabella (Grim) Herman, was born on the old Herman homestead June 9, 1882, and was educated in the public schools of his native township, the Keystone State Normal School, Franklin and Marshall College and the University of Pennsylvania. Since his return from school he has resided on the old homestead. In politics he is an energetic worker in the Democratic Club of Maxatawny. For ten years he served as a member of the school board in his township, and held at different times all the various offices of the board. In 1900 he was elected justice of the peace, and has since been re-elected, and he has frequently been a delegate to county conventions. He has been a member of the board of supervisors of the township, since the passage of the new State Road law, and in many ways has been influential in the welfare of the township. With his family he attends, as a Reformed member, Zion's Union Church, and for some twenty years he has been superintendent of the handsome Sunday school, and he is also the teacher of the large Bible class.

In 1903 Mr. Herman was married to Mame E. Pott, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Schall) Pott, of Pottsville, the town being named for her paternal great-grandfather. To this marriage has been born on May 12, 1904, one son, Benjamin Alfred.

DR. CHARLES HUNTER RAUDBENBUSH, who conducts a thriving drug business, at Reading, Berks Co., Pa., was born Oct. 7, 1866, at Adamstown, Lancaster county, son of Dr. A. S. and Sarah (Stauffer) Raudenbush, whose history appears elsewhere in this work.

Dr. Charles H. Raudenbush attended the public schools of his native place, and after graduating therefrom entered the State Normal School at Millersville. After two spring terms at the latter institution, Dr. Raudenbush came to Reading, and in 1882 entered the high school of the city, to which he was graduated with the class of 1886. In October of the same year he entered the drug store of J. H. Stein, at Eighth and Penn streets, Reading, remaining until October, 1889, when he attended a course of lectures on pharmacy at Philadelphia. Graduating from The Philadelphia College of Pharmacy in 1891, Dr. Raudenbush returned to Reading and engaged again with Mr. Stein, with whom he remained until March, 1896, and on May 1st of that year he engaged in business on his own account, opening a store in the Mansion House building. This was the location of his business until April, 1905, when, feeling the need of larger quarters he removed to his present place, No. 39 North Sixth street, where he has since continued. Mr. Raudenbush has one of the finest equipped pharmacies in the city, and he has won the steady trade of a large patronage.

On Oct. 26, 1896, Dr. Raudenbush married Mattie B. Thompson, daughter of Isaac F. and Lydia (Steen) Thompson, of Lehigh county, and of whom four children—two sons and two daughters—have been born.
had fifty-nine grandchildren and thirty-five great-grandchildren. Among his children were these: Charles, of Ohio; Mrs. Thomas Burky, of Allentown; Jonathan S., of Breinigsville; Peter L., of Hamilton, Ohio; and Mrs. Rebecca Billig, of Mercer county, Pennsylvania.

His great-grandfather was Daniel Baer, who was born in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, where he lived until he moved to Mercer county, Pa. Among his children were John, Daniel, David, Benjamin, Phillip, above named, and Catharine.

His great-great-grandfather was Jacob Baer, who was the son of the immigrant, Hans Baer, and is well known in the history of the Baer family. He was the father of thirteen children, six daughters and six sons, whom he gave to each of his six sons a farm. His son Daniel sold his Weisenburg Township farm, and moved to Mercer county, where he raised his family and lived to the end of his life.

JOEL W. HAINLY, proprietor of the original "Sinking Spring Hotel," one of the oldest hotel stands in Berks county, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., July 21, 1861, son of Michael and Lydia (Wiest) Hainly.

Michael Hainly, grandfather of Joel W., was a farmer in Lancaster county, and owned a small property near Blainsport, where he died. He was twice married, (first) to Susanna Bergman, and (second) to Susanna Gushert. His children, all by the first marriage, were: Joseph, who settled near Schoeneck, Pa.; John, who lived at Cocalico; Michael; Susanna, m. to Samuel Betcher; Sophia, m. to Abraham Royer; and Polly (Mary), m. to Adam Noll.

Michael Hainly, father of Joel W., was born July 6, 1831, and died Oct. 5, 1906, after a long and successful life spent in agricultural pursuits. He was a prominent member of the Swamp Church, belonging to the Lutheran denomination. He was a man of very strong personal character, and was the subject of much respect and admiration. His three children, namely: Lydia Wiest, born April 17, 1834, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Stover) Wiest, and she now resides at the old home. They had a family of nine children, all of whom are living: Sarah, m. to Martin DeHart, of Fritztown; Benjamin, m. to Kate Kessler, and living with her on farm at Vinemont; Joel W.; Susan, m. to Wallace Eckenroth, of Douglesville; Emma, m. to John Burkert, of Vinemont; Amanda, m. to Fred Artzbecher, of Cocalico; Mary, m. to Harry Showalter, of Reinholds, Pa.; Kate, m. to Harvey Gehret, of Blainsport, Pa.; and Michael, a gentle, kind, quiet, and very respected man, who died in 1911, in his eighty-second year, and is buried in the cemetery at Cora Keener.

Joel W. Hainly spent his boyhood days at Reinholds, Lancaster county, where he was reared by his father's farm, and remained with his parents until twenty-one years old, at which time he learned the milling business with Richard Leinbach, near Reamstown, Pa., where he worked about one year. For the following five years he worked in August D. Keener's mill at Fritztown, and in August, 1886, he removed to Reading and for a short time operated a stationary engine at a stone crusher. In 1888 Mr. Hainly engaged in the hotel business at the Cacoosing, conducting that place successfully for one and one-half years, at which time he purchased the "Fritztown Hotel," which he greatly improved. He succeeded in building up a large trade, and during his seven years' occupancy of that site did a very profitable business. Mr. Hainly sold out this place in 1896 at a large profit, and after a short time he removed to Reading, in the fall of which year he bought the "Sinking Spring Hotel," one of the oldest hotel stands in Berks county. The sinking spring, after which the village was named, is located on his premises, 100 feet from the hotel building. This interesting spring, which was given its name by the Indians, is very strong and runs from about January to August, when the water disappears into the earth to reappear during January of the year following. The spring never runs dry during the months from January to August.

One part of Mr. Hainly's hotel building was erected prior to 1767, being built of stone nearly two feet thick, is substantial, and to all appearances will remain so for a century or two to come. The four upper rooms are large and spacious, and the Colonial style of architecture prevails. Mr. Hainly, who is genial and affable, makes an ideal host, and has won many friends in this community. He serves the best of liquors, beer and cigars, has excellent table service, and his prices are moderate. His fine park, immediately in the rear of the hotel, is a haven of rest for the traveler. Here may be found the historic sinking spring. The park contains a large pavilion, and is thickly grown with shrubbery and trees, the latter including the Norway, Austrian, Excelsior and Stone pines, and the Douglass, Colorado Blue and Oriental spruce, with Arbor White American and Golden Arbor. Pyramidal and Siberian plants are found scattered about in artistic fashion, and the place is a delightful retreat, where one may find rest from the noise and rush of town life.

On Sept. 19, 1889, Mr. Hainly was married (first) to Kate Hain, born April 27, 1867, who died Oct. 31, 1899, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Halt) Hain, the former a co-builder of Fritztown. Mr. and Mrs. Hainly have three children, namely: George Frederick, Mamie Elizabeth and Robert Michael. On June 20, 1903, Mr. Hainly m. (second) Valeria J. Addams, daughter of Daniel and Susanna (Ulrich) Addams, of Fritztown. Mr. Addams is an old resident of this section, and was an active worker in the Democratic party in his younger days. His children are: Hannah, m. to J. S. Stroh; Maggie, m. to John A. Fry; Ella, m. to F. M. Gaul; and Valeria J., m. to Joel W. Hainly. No children have been born of Mr. Hainly's second marriage. He is a successful member of St. John's Church of Sinking Spring. In politics he is an active Democrat. Fraternally he is a member of Tribe No. 301, Order of Red Men, of Reading; and Castle No. 534, K. G. E., of Sinking Spring.

HENRY W. LONG, teacher and agent for fertilizers, was born on the Long homestead in Upper Bern township, Berks county, April 30, 1866, son of Joel and Sallie Ann (Zettelmoyer) Long.

Joel Long was born in Upper Bern township, Aug. 31, 1838, on the Long homestead, of 130 acres, which was acquired by purchase in 1878. He was a tailor of the neighborhood until his life was consumed in his undertakings. He died March 19, 1901, in his sixty-third year of age. He voted the Democratic ticket. He was honored by his fellow citizens by election to the offices of township treasurer, assistant assessor, assessor, tax-collector, election officer, and he was delegate to county conventions.

He and his family belonged to Shartlesville Friedens Church, of which he was one of the founders in 1870. He was trustee of this church from its organization until death called him to his reward. In 1856 he married in the thirty-sixth year of his age. In 1856 he married Sallie Ann Zettelmoyer, daughter of Martin Zettelmoyer and wife (whose name was Sour). They had seventeen children—nine sons and five daughters—namely: Frank W., James M., Mrs. Hettie A. Rentschler, Henrietta Long (deceased), Mrs. Alice R. Aschenbach, Mrs. Mary K. Weary, Henry W. Irwin M. (deceased), Peter C. (deceased), Howard W. E. (deceased), Jerome (deceased), Angelina, Manasses M., and Wallace Z.

Henry W. Long was reared on the farm, and obtained his education in the public schools, which he attended until he was seventeen years of age. He studied in the Bernville and Strausstown grammar schools, and in the spring of 1887, entered the Key- stone State Normal School, graduating in June, 1889.

HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

He became a teacher in the fall of 1844 at the Bagen- stowe school in his native (now Tilden) township, and after teaching there three years, entered upon the normal course as stated. In 1852 and 1850 he taught at Wernersville, and 1851 to 1884 inclusive at Vogertown, Lancaster county, at an advanced salary. He then returned to his native township and taught for six years as a volunteer. In 1903-04 he was in charge of Shheimer's school, and in the fall of 1906 began teaching at Hahn's school in Muhlenberg township, Berks county. He is an able, painstaking, conscientious and successful teacher, and has the respect of the many pupils he has had during his long career.

In politics Mr. Long is an upholding Democrat, and frequently serves on election boards. He was elected as tax collector of Upper Bern township, in 1893-94-95, which office he filled with honor to himself and credit to his electors. He has been delegate to a number of county conventions. He is a Lutheran member of Shartsville Friedens Church, in which he was confirmed in 1880, by the Rev. D. D. Trexler. He has belonged to the Sunday-school connected with this church since its organization in 1879. In later years he became a teacher and superintendent. When he taught school in Upper Tulpehocken he became superintendent of Sunday-school, which office he filled for three years.

During the summer months Mr. Long filled various positions, such as cigar-packer, clerk, and book-keeper. Since 1900 he has been the manager of the Joel Long estate for the heirs. Mr. Long is an intelligent and upright citizen, and is respected and esteemed by all who know him.

J. HOWARD JACOBS, in whose death, which occurred Aug. 18, 1902, at his home in Reading, that city lost one of its good citizens and a professional man of considerable reputation. He was born in 1858, in the Conestoga Valley, in the lower part of Berks county, son of Samuel and Mary A. (Davies) Jacobs.

Samuel Jacobs was a farmer in the Conestoga Valley. He and his wife, Mary A. (Davies), were members of the Episcopal Church. Of their children, Thomas (deceased) was a resident of Iowa; J. Howard is mentioned below; Mary married Clifton Moore, of Pottstown, Pa.; Annie married William Morris, of Atlanta, Georgia.

J. Howard Jacobs received his early education in the public schools, and then studied law in the office of Judge Banks. After his admission to the Bar of Berks county, he accepted the position of Shenango's, where he was for many years, becoming a leading member of the legal fraternity. Mr. Jacobs died Aug. 18, 1902, and was buried four days later in the Charles Evans cemetery.

In 1860 Mr. Jacobs married Hannah E. Creswell, daughter of Samuel M. and Thomazine (Lincoln) Creswell, farming people, the former of whom was a Presbyterian and the latter an Episcopalian. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs, as follows: Carrie H., who married William Tennille, of Washington, D. C., and has one child, J. Howard Jacobs; Sallie, who married Pierson Hoff, and has one child, D. Pierson; Edward H.; and J. Howard, Jr., all of Reading. Mr. Jacobs was born Margaret Kelbaugh. In his political principles Mr. Jacobs was a Republican, and in religious faith an Episcopalian. For many years he had been identified with the Masons.

DANIEL A. HEFFNER, senior member of the well-known clothing and men's outfitter firm of Heffner, Gilbert & Croll, Nos. 418-420 Penn street, Reading, was born in 1854, in Virginia, Berks county, son of Solomon and Wilhelmina (Weigley) Heffner.

In 1749 Heinrich Heffner came from Eberstadt, Germany, to America and located in Richmond township, Pa. In 1784 he married Maria Eva, daughter of Matthaus Kehlmeir, of that township. Their children were: John Heinrich, 1754-1825; Han Georg, 1757-1818; Eva Catharine, born 1760; Elizabet, born 1762; Eva Magdalene, born 1765; and Catharine, born 1768.

John Heinrich Heffner, son of Heinrich, remained on the old stand in Richmond township, near Virginia. He married Anna Margaret, born Dec. 28, 1759, and they had children: Daniel; John; Henry; Abraham (1789-1854); Samuel (1791-1879); Solomon (died 1876); Polly (was a cripple); Kate (born 1795); Hannah (born 1798); and Jacob (1804-1877, is buried on his land in a private burial ground). John Heinrich Heffner was a soldier in 1777 in the Revolutionary war, and was a prisoner of war in a church in New Jersey. It is said he and neighbors, Merkel, froze to death in his arms. He suffered severe hardships through hunger and cold. He served in Capt. Jacob Baldy's Company, and Philip Gehr's Battalion.

Solomon Heffner, son of John Heinrich, married Rachel Graeff (1802-1849), and they lived in Virginia. Their children were: Susanna, John, Solomon (father of Daniel A.), Hettie, Kate, Mary, Henry and Lydia G.

Solomon Heffner was born in Virginia, and when a young man learned engineering, which, however, he gave up in his latter years on account of failing health, and went into the hotel business. He was married in 1842, of this Union and his wife, whose maiden name was Wilhelmina Weigley, passed away in 1890, remaining a widow to the end of her life. The three children born of their marriage were: Solomon; Emma, m. (first) William Epling, and (second) Henry Smith; and Daniel A. The family were members of the Lutheran Church. In political belief Mr. Heffner was a stanch Democrat.

Daniel A. Heffner was left without a father at a very tender age, and as a consequence his chances for an education were limited, most of his learning being acquired at night schools after a hard day's work. His first employment was on a farm, and he later worked in the ore banks of Berks county, but finally he learned the painting and paper-hanging trade, at which he worked for several years. Going then to Shenandoah, he went into the huckstering business, and later was a clerk in Lenhartsville, from which place he came to Reading as a clerk for B. H. Brown in the dry goods business. Mr. Heffner next removed to Hamburg, where he engaged in a mercantile business, and this he conducted successfully for ten years. At the end of this time he sold out, and in 1884 came to Reading, where he engaged with Meyers & Heim, tailors and dressmakers, and was connected with them in partnership until 1898. In this year with John H. Gilbert and William M. Croll, Mr. Heffner established the business of Heffner, Gilbert & Croll, which did business from 1898 until 1904, at No. 528 Penn street. In the latter named year, on account of press of business, they were obliged to seek larger quarters, and subsequently removed to Nos. 418-420 Penn street, better known as the J. C. Illig stand. Here the firm has done a thriving business, carrying a full line of up-to-date goods. The partners are well known and popular in the community, and the firm has an established reputation for honesty and integrity, having the full confidence of the people. Mr. Heffner has also been prominent in fraternal and social organizations, being connected with Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M., of Hamburg; Excelsior Chapter, No. 437, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, of which he is a charter member; Rajah Commandery, No. 2, K. T.; Temple of the Golden Eagle, Reading; Lodge No. 115, B. P. O. E., and many other organizations. In political matters he is a Democrat. Mr. Heffner and his wife attend the Lutheran Church.

In 1875 Mr. Heffner was married to Agnes Croll, and they have been blessed with two daughters: Minnie S., m. Joseph R. Sellers, of Reading, and has a son, James H.; and Emily May m. Charles Delling, of Reading.
J. HOWARD JACOBS
WILLIAM R. HIGH, a highly respected retired citizen of Reading, Pa., who passed away Aug. 14, 1908, was born Aug. 10, 1835, in Cumru township, Berks county, Pa., son of Daniel and Esther (Rothermel) High, and a grandson of Gen. William High, who married Annie Van Reed.

General William High was also a native of Cumru township, and for years was a prominent agriculturist there. His last years were spent in Reading. For a period of thirty-three years he was a brigadier general of the State militia and he also served as judge of probate. His children were: Charles, Daniel, Ezra, John, Reubin, Isaac (died young), Annie, Sarah, Lucie and Rebecca. The family was strong in its support of the Revised Church.

Daniel High was born in Cumru township and followed farming as his main occupation throughout his life. He died in 1839 at the age of thirty-one years. His widow survived him many years, dying at the age of sixty-five. They had five daughters and one son, as follows: Sarah, m. to Samuel Schepps; Susan, m. to Nicholas Schaffer; Esther, m. to Frederick Bechtel; William R., of this sketch; Amanda, m. to Frederick Hartman; and Mary, who remains single. In religious belief the members of this family were all of the Reformed faith, with one exception. In political sentiment they were Democratic.

William R. High was educated in the common schools of Cumru township, and when the time came for him to choose his life work he decided in favor of agriculture. For thirty-two years he continued to be engaged in farming and stock raising, and was one of the finest and best developed farms in his locality. In 1887 he left his farm in Cumru township and moved to Reading, where he entered into partnership with his son, Daniel K., in the coal business and continued with him until Daniel sold his interest to his father and son Charles P. They conducted the business until 1902, when the senior member retired and Charles P. still continues to carry on the business.

On Dec. 11, 1855, Mr. High was married to Lydia Krick, daughter of Daniel Krick, and they had five children, namely: Daniel K., William, Henry, Ezra and Charles.

Up to the time of his death, in spite of his advanced years, Mr. High very easily superintended the management of the old High homestead; this was originally owned by his maternal great-grandfather M. J. He took an active interest in local politics and public happenings, and was a well known and esteemed resident of his neighborhood. Mr. High was buried in Yocom's Church in Cumru township.

DANIEL K. HIGH, hosiery manufacturer at Robesonia, Pa., was born in Cumru township, on the old High homestead which has been in the family since 1747, May 22, 1856, son of William R. High. His early education was obtained in the district schools and later he went to Palatinate College, Myerstown, and D. B. Brunner's Academy in Reading. He was licensed to preach by the Circuit Superintendents, D. B. Brunner, in 1874. He taught two terms in his native township, one at the Cedar Top school and the other at the Kurtz school, meeting with great success as a teacher. He was reared to farm work, and continued at it summers until he was sixteen. In 1876 he went to Reading and entered the dry goods store of H. B. Renninger in his employ for a period of two years. He then entered into partnership with Howard Kauffman, under the firm name of High & Kauffman, dealers in dry goods and groceries and general merchandise. This firm continued with success for two years, when owing to failing health Mr. High was obliged to sell out to Mr. Kauffman. His brother Wm. F. High, who later also sold his share to A. S. Deeter, and the latter has continued the business to the present time. Mr. High then moved to a farm near Van Reed's paper mill in Spring township, and for five years devoted himself to agriculture. In 1887, with the firm name of D. K. High & Bro., he opened up a coal yard at No. 512 Rose street, Reading, also handling flour and feed. They met with a good trade, and the business has been carried on with increased success by his brother Charles P. High. The firm was continued as D. K. High & Bro. until 1901, when Mr. D. K. High retired, and started in the creamery business on his farm. This he conducted for two years, but on account of the scarcity of milk in that locality he removed to Brownsville, and with M. K. Keith as a partner under the name of High & Keith carried on the business for five years. Again the difficulty of securing milk led to his having a large dairy in a farm building, where feed is grown, and he sold out to his partner, and bought a half interest of Harry W. Sheeler, of the firm of Sheeler & Leinbach, who were engaged in the hosiery business at Robesonia, Pa. Later Mr. High bought out Mr. Leinbach's interest, and he now conducts the business alone under the name of Robesonia Knitting Mills. His factory is a two-story frame structure 40x60 feet. He employs upwards of fifty people, and the out-put is about 250 dozen pairs per day. This consists of men's fine seamless hosiery, and a ready sale is found all over the United States. In 1906 he started his sons Edwin and Walter in a branch factory at Brownsville, where forty people are employed. The capacity of this factory is also 250 dozen pairs per day. This business is most successful. Mr. High still retains his fine farm of 118 acres on the Tulpehocken, near the Van Reed mills (now used by the Acme Paper Company).

Out of politics Mr. High is a Democrat. He was honored by election as school director to fill an unexpired term, and then re-elected, serving as secretary of the board and rendering valuable service to the cause of education. Socially he is a member of Castle No. 49, R. O. S. E., of Reading. Since 1885 he and his family have been connected with St. Paul's Reformed Church at Reading, of which he was a deacon.

On Feb. 26, 1880, Mr. High was married to Clara Van Reed, daughter of Henry Z. and Mary (Leinbach) Van Reed, and granddaughter of Charles and Margaretha (Zacharias) Van Reed. To Mr. and Mrs. High were born three sons; (1) Edwin M., born July 14, 1881, in Spring township, has a liberal education, and is successful in business. He married, June 22, 1907, Rachel M. Taylor. (2) Henry V. R., born in Spring township, July 27, 1883, is a bookbinder by trade, and is manager and treasurer of the C. F. Heller Hosiery Co. He married a Miss Reed when about thirty. (3) Walter V. R., born Aug. 16, 1885, with his brother Edwin is engaged in the hosiery business at Bernville, under the firm name of the Durable Hosiery Mill. Walter V. R. is the superintendent. He married, May 25, 1908, Estella May Gerhart.

GEORGE FIELD, of Reading, who resides at No. 4413 South Sixth Street, has made that city his home since 1865, but claims Philadelphia as his birthplace. His birth occurred Nov. 5, 1836, in a locality known as Francisville, but which is now a part of Seventeenth street and Ridge avenue.

Mr. Field passed most of his boyhood and youth in Conshohocken, and when old enough went into the People's Works, in Philadelphia, to learn to be a machinist. When his preparation was over he took a position for a short time with the Alan Wood Co., in the Schuykill Iron Works at Conshohocken, and then went to Norristown, Pa. This, too, was but a temporary position, as Mr. Field had an offer from the Plymouth Iron Works, which he accepted. On Feb. 9, 1868, he left the Plymouth Iron Works having ac-
