cepted a position at the Monocacy Furnace, where he put the furnace in order, and remained for two years. A place was then offered him in the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Shops, and Feb. 8, 1865, began his long connection with that Company, covering a period of forty-two years. Mr. Field has long enjoyed a reputation as a most competent machinist and was considered one of the Company's most reliable men.

In 1876 the Railway Company sent a party abroad to assemble a locomotive built at the Reading Shops for the Paris Exposition, and Mr. Field, who had charge of erecting the engine at the Reading Shops, was among those chosen for this work. S. D. Blackmun, who was general foreman at that time, C. Gibler Steff, P. H. W. Wooten and Mr. Field composed the party.

They left Philadelphia, April 4, 1876, on the steam collier "Pottsville, No. 14," Captain Samuel Colburn, a vessel owned by the Reading Company, and arrived at Havre April 21st. After remaining there two weeks, seven days of which was required to "assemble the engine, they left Havre May 5th.

Mr. Field has always been a strong Democrat of the Jacksonian type, and has been active in party work in the Second ward. He was made representative from that ward in Common Council in 1869, and was one who helped to vote the market house. Later on he served as Secretary of the Democratic Central Committee, and now is a member of the Philadelphia & Reading Relief and Reading Railway Veteran Associations.

On December 1st, 1906, he was retired and placed on the pension list, having attained the age limit of seventy years.

In 1869 occurred the union of George Field and Miss Amanda Brant, also a native of Philadelphia, and a daughter of Thomas and Catherine (Barndollar) Brant. The issue of this marriage is an only daughter, Kate V., at home.

D. FRANK MARKLEY (deceased), who for many years was engaged in the real estate and insurance business, was born in Maxatawny township, Berks county, May 3, 1842, son of Joseph and Esther (Fisher) Markley, both parents being natives of Berks county, Pennsylvania.

Joseph Markley was engaged in farming in Maxatawny township for many years, but removed to Minnesota in 1876, dying in St. Cloud, that state, in 1889, his widow, Esther Fisher, surviving him but a few years. They had been the parents of five children, four of whom are living.

Frankly he was formerly connected with the I. O. O. F., F. & A. M., and the K. of P., and is now a member of the Philadelphia & Reading Relief and Reading Railway Veteran Associations.

Mr. Markley was married Aug. 11, 1904, to Mamie May Frederick, daughter of Louis and Emmeline Frederick, of Reading, and to them were born two children, Frank Edwin and Mary Elizabeth. Mr. Frederick is the owner of a meat market. Mr. Markley belongs to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Knights of the Columbus, the Monroe Maennerchor, and the Friendship Fire Company, having served in all the offices in the latter organization, is a Past Worthy President of the Eagles, and President of Reading Eagles Home Company, Inc. and has held office in nearly all these societies. He belongs to Trinity Lutheran Church. Mr. Markley is one of the foremost young business men of Reading, is popular in fraternal and social circles, and has a great number of friends.

JAMES K. MERCKEL has been a resident of Reading since 1903, and with but little exception has passed all his life in Berks county. His ancestors have long been settled here.

Abraham Merckel (or Merkel) was born in Macungie township, Northampton (now Lehight) Co., Pa., about 1767, and is a descendant of an old family of French origin. He was a farmer, and in 1785 and 1786 was assessed for 100 acres of land, two horses and three cattle. In 1785 he paid a federal tax of £1 8s 6d, and in 1786 the amount was £1 1s 6d. The tax lists of his native county bear his name as a taxable until 1805. In 1806 he is assessed as a resident of Albany township, and in the county record, his place of residence is given as Reading, Berks county, where he owned a tract on which he lived. The farm is near the present town of Gordon; a big hill on this farm for many years was known as "Merkel's Hill," now "Donat's Hill." It was at this place that his father-in-law, Jacob Donat, had previously settled. Abraham Merckel was an industrious and honest citizen. He was a tall and well-built man, standing over six feet, and was possessed of great strength and endurance. He was a wheelwright by trade. He met a tragic end. During the summer of 1826 there was a drought in the upper end of Berks county. Water had become scarce on the southern side of the Blue mountains, while on the opposite side there was an abundance of rain and water. Therefore Abraham Merckel took his grain to a mill on the opposite side of the mountain, and on the return trip fell into the hands of a band of roughs, one of whom cruelly murdered him. On the slope of the mountain in West Penn township, Schuylkill county (on the road from Jacksonville to Tamaqua), which he had to pass, they marked a large stone bearing the names of robbery, and even the murder of peddlers and cattle dealers centered. That the place was notorious was evidenced by the frequent reference to it in the recollections of the older residents of the section. It was abandoned over thirty years ago, and only crumbling walls and an old well half filled with stones and rubbish mark the site of the once busy and widely known stopping place. While passing the hotel Mr. Merckel was requested to stop off, which he did. He found a number of men playing cards and also, undoubtedly, drinking. One of the card players, a man named Jacob Hawkenstein, commenced quarrelling with Mr. Merckel, who told Hawkenstein it would be to his benefit to keep his peace. Hawkenstein, in confab with one Mr. Campbell, drew his bowie knife and advanced, when Mr. Merckel shot him, and it is said he would kill someone before the day was over. When Mr. Merckel was loosening his horse, which was tied to a tree near a fence, he was stabbed with a knife by Hawkenstein, who had secreted himself behind the fence, and died of his wounds. Hawkenstein thereupon ran away, and at Erfkasten, six miles from the rocks, dens and hollow trees of the Blue mountains, where he died alone and despised of all men. His skeleton was found more than a year after his death by a band of hunters. Mr. Merckel is buried in an unmarked grave at the New Bethel Church in Albany township. He died in the late summer of 1826.

Abraham Merckel married Susanna Donat, who was born Nov. 6, 1779, and died Jan. 25, 1864, aged eighty-four years, two months, nineteen days. Her father, Jacob Donat, was a native of Germany. Four children were born to Abraham and Susanna (Donat) Merckel, namely: Abraham was the father of James K. Merckel, born Jan. 3, 1813, died unmarried March 15, 1894, aged eighty years, eight months, twenty-one days, and is buried at New Jerusalem Church; Catharine, born Jan. 3, 1816, died unmarried Nov. 20, 1879, aged sixty-six years, ten months, seventeen days, and is buried at New Jerusalem Church; Joseph, who called his name Markley, married Esther Fisher, and lived in Reading until 1876, when he moved to St. Cloud, Minn. At a meeting of the Orphans' Court, April 6, 1827, according to the records in Vol. IX, page 206, Elizabeth Merckel, daughter of the late Abraham Merckel, of Albemarle county, Va., was appointed guardian for Catharine and John Shollenberger for Joseph. Abraham Merckel, eldest child of Abraham, was born about 1805-1806, and died in June, 1849, aged about forty-three years. His death occurred in the hay field, from the effects of drinking much cold spring water when intoxicated, and he is buried at New Jerusalem Church, in Albany township. He was a tall man over six feet, and was strong and an excellent worker. Abraham Merckel married Maria (Polly) Kroninger, who was born Sept. 8, 1808, and died Dec. 23, 1878, aged seventy years, three months, fifteen days. Children as follows were born to their union: Anna m. John Cameron, of Sagon, Northumberland Co., Pa.; Catharine m. Jonathon Machmer, who was noted as a singer, and they conducted the Upper Bern Hotel a number of years; Abraham, born Jan. 13, 1832, died Feb. 14, 1808, m. in 1859 Leah Follweiler (1835-1902), and they had a family of seven children; Sarah Jane (m. Aaron Bork, of Berks county, Pa.), was appointed the court's guardian, having been a son, Wm. H., who has his home with his aunts, Louisa and Clara Merckel), Astor (m. Ida Kline), Rosa Alice (m. Francis Allebach, deceased), Cordelia (m. Alfred Allbach, and died leaving a daughter, Leah M.), Louisa P. (a popular school teacher of Albany township), Clara is unmarried and lives in the home-stead with her sister Louisa), and John A. (m. Emma E. Nester, and has two children, Elsie M. and Leah L.); Susanna m. Ferdinand Machmer and later a Mr. Baum, of Hamburg; Aaron m. Valeria Miller and they live at Conshohocken, Pa.; Caroline m. William Machmer, of Strasburg, Pa.; Sarah m. Michael Schaeffer, of Tower City, Pa.; Sarah m. James De Long, of Reading; James K. is mentioned farther on. Caroline and Susanna both lived and died in Michigan.

James K. Merckel was born in Albany township Oct. 7, 1847. He has followed the blacksmith's trade almost from the time he began work, having commenced to learn it when he was only eighteen years old, under his brother Abraham, who at that time had a smithy in the village of Jacksonville, Lehigh Co. Pa. In 1867 Mr. Merckel came to Berne, in Uptown Berks county, where he was engaged at his trade in the employ of another brother, Aaron, who had a blacksmith shop in the village of Berne. In 1870, after several years' work in Mahanoy City and other places, he erected a shop of his own in the "Bockmöhl" (a valley in the southern end of what was then a wilderness, to which he had come about 1867) and there continued to work at his trade until the year 1900. At that time he moved with his family to Conshohocken, at which place he remained for three years in the responsible position of boss blacksmith in the Allen Wood Iron Works, an indisputable evidence of his skill as a mechanic. In the spring of 1903 Mr. Merckel removed with his family to the city of Reading, settling, sitting in his own horne at No. 757 North Eighth street. Mr. Merckel also owns a small tract of good land, comprising twenty-four acres, near Berne station, upon which he lived for twenty-five years. He is a man of industrious habits and is a good citizen. His chapsure is above a story; a above)

Mr. Merckel has been twice married. In 1869 he was united to Sarah Schuman, who was born Oct. 6, 1847, daughter of Solomon and Sarah (Zweitzig) Schuman, and died Nov. 14, 1877, in her thirty-first year, the mother of four children, namely: (1) J. Franklin taught school for fifteen years, but has been engaged as a railway mail clerk since 1904 and is stationed at Pittsburg. (2) Anthony O. m. Ada Chamberlain, of Norristown. (3) Ella V. m. Reuben Blatt, and has had three children, Reuben, Rachel and Ruth (who died in childhood). (4) Sallie M. m. William J. Dietrich, of Bern, and they have three children, Naomi, Ruth, and William J., Jr.

Mr. Merckel's second marriage, in 1879, was to Emma L. Keim, who was born June 28, 1858, daughter of Percival and Susanna (Strasser) Keim, and by whom he has had ten children, namely: John, who died in infancy; Cora L.; Clara A., who is the wife of Samuel Mengel and has two children, Mabel and James; James D.; Lizzie A.; Mame F.; Howard J., born Dec. 16, 1888, who died Feb. 19, 1899; Abbie A.; Lilie L.; and George R., born Jan. 25, 1897, who died Aug. 23, 1997.

Mr. Merckel is a consistent member of the St. Paul United Evangelical Church of Reading, and the work of which congregation he has been quite active, having held various offices.

poused, and he has been in demand for “stump” service in every campaign since his majority. He has frequently been called upon to do like service for the Democratic State Committee, at Lancaster, Harrisburg, Lebanon, and other places. He is a member of the (Democratic) Club, the Northeastern Democratic Association and is the President of his Ward organization. He retains his interest in educational affairs, having been an organizer of and still a member of the Alumni Association of the Reading high schools, and having served two terms as its president. He is a member of the Reading Press Club, the Board of Trade, the Young Men’s Christian Association, and several fraternal organizations. His religious affiliation is with St. Luke’s Lutheran church, and he is connected with the Sunday-school, being the teacher of the Young Men’s Bible Class for the past twelve years.

On Nov. 29, 1900, Mr. Heinly was married to Lydia I. Eckert, daughter of the late Rudolph and Lucetta Eckert, of Lebanon, Pennsylvania.

The family of Mr. Heinly is one of the old families of the State. As secretary of the Heinly Family Association, he has assisted in compiling a resume of its development in this country. Well authenticated records show that the original American ancestor, David Heinly, together with a brother, came from Germany about the middle of the eighteenth century. In Rupp’s “Thirty Thousand Immigrants,” there appears an entry to the effect that David and Matthias Heinly landed in Philadelphia Sept. 19, 1749, having come over in the ship “Patience” from the Kingdom of Wurtemberg and the Palatinate. One of these immigrants, David, was the great-great-grandfather of the subject of this review. He received a patent for three hundred acres of land in what is now Greenwich township, the document being signed by the proprietaries of the State of Pennsylvania, July 21, 1774. In this township he passed the remainder of his days, and lies buried there in Dunkle’s Church cemetery, the tombstone over his grave bearing these words, cut in the sandstone, with German words, but English letters:

“Hier ligt Dävid Heinle,
1726 den 17 Oktober
und gestorben den 3 Oktober 1784.”

On the reverse side of the stone is the following from an old German hymn, written in 1698, and appearing in the Leipsige Gesangbuch:

“Doch die Kron der gerechtg-keid,
Ist mein schmuck und ehrebehld:
Wan ich werd in himmel eingehen.”

The Heinly Family Association was organized in August of 1899, the first meeting being held along Ontelaunee creek, near Virginville, on a part of the tract on which was located the homestead of the original American ancestor, Reunions are held annually, last one at Neshaminy Park, at which there are from four to five hundred members of family present. At the Fifth Annual Reunion, Aug. 15, 1903, a handsome granite memorial in the form of an open book, symbolizing the family record, was erected adjacent to the old headstone referred to above, and was dedicated with appropriate exercises.

If to be well born is half the battle, then is victory certain for Harvey F. Heinly, since the other half will be amply cared for by the wealth of energy and alertness of mind which he has displayed. Of good lineage, happily married, and with hosts of friends, what more could any man ask of the Fates?

YODER. The first of the Yoder (sometimes spelled Yodder and Yotter in the German) name in America were Yost and Hans (or Hance), brothers, who sought refuge in England from the religious persecutions suffered in their native Switzerland. They brought little with them to America besides their Bible. Upon their arrival in the New World they pushed on into the wilderness beyond Oley hills, and finally settled on the Wurtemberg risings. Yost Yoder was one of the most active of the early framers of Pennsylvania. His chief occupations were hunting and trapping, which he always combined with farming, or rather with the “clearing and cultivation of a plantation.” It is certain that he and his brother were located in Pennsylvania before 1714. Nine children were born to Yost Yoder, and of seven of these the record is as follows: (1) Johannes Yoder, born in 1718. After 1739 he removed to Reading, where he died April 7, 1812, and his remains were interred on his father’s land at Yottersville (Yodersville), named after his family, now Pleasantville, in Oley township. The following inscription marks his grave: “Hier liegt Johann Yoder. Er wurde geboren 1718. Verewiget sich mit Catharina Lyster (Lesher) 1747 und zeugte 4 sohne und 5 tochtern. Starb den 7th April, 1812, nach seiner 66 yahr in der celhe gebelit hatte war alt warden 94 yahr und 14 tag.” In 1747 he married Catharina Lyster (Lesher), and had children: (2) Jacob Yoder, born in 1730, having lived married 66 years and aged 82 years. (3) Jacob Yoder removed to the western side of the Schuylkill. On Nov. 6, 1757, at the age of twenty-two years, he enlisted in the Provincial service of Pennsylvania, and was a saddler three years in Capt. John Nicholas Weatherholt’s Company. He was stationed in Heidelberg township, Northampton county, in March and April, 1758 [Pa. Arch., 2d Ser., Vol. III]. He served in the American Revolution as a private in Peter Nagle’s Company, and later in Capt. Charles Gobin’s Company, 6th Battalion, Berks county, Pa. He was in a detachment of guards of the guards of the guards of the guards of the guards of the guards of the guards of the Hessians camp, Reading, to Philadelphia. He married Maria Keim. (5) Samuel Yoder settled on a “plantation” near Lobachsville, about one and one-half miles from Pleasantville, which he received from his father. He had children: John, Jacob, Samuel and Catharine. (4) Mary Yoder married Daniel Bertolet. (6) Catharine Yoder married John Ruppert. (7) Elisabeth Yoder was the wife of Mathias Rhode, and they had children: Jacob, John, Joseph, Abraham, Catharine, Maria and Esther. (7) Esther Yoder married a man named Cunius.

The Yoders in Oley were a great injury to the sheep and hogs of the settlers. It was customary to make pitfalls and thus trap them. Many stories are told of Yost Yoder’s efforts at their extermination. He sometimes disposed of five in a single night. He was a man of remarkable strength and powers of endurance, and possessed famous courage. He made customary hunting trips every fall into the Blue Mountains with his trusty rifle and faithful dog. On his trail at different stages of his journeys he had places of deposit for supplies in hollow trees.

The Yoder Bible, dated 1539, was printed during the lifetime of Martin Luther. It was held continuously by the family until late in 1750, and is now the property of Mary B. Yoder, daughter of David, son of Daniel. It is well preserved, though unfortunately the initials by which it is signed are torn away. This priceless treasure of their faith from the Fatherland was “as a lamp unto their feet” in their flight to America. The Yoders of Berks extended into New York and the West. In the list of representatives in the Fifth United States Congress was S. S. Yoder, of Lima, Ohio.

(1) Hans (or Hance) Yoder, the emigrant brother of Yost, was the builder and owner of what is now known as Griesemer’s Mills (burned in 1847, and rebuilt the same year). This property in the early days was the homestead of the Yoders of Oley. The survey of the plantation under proprietary warrant to Hance Yoder was returned March 25, 1714. At that time Oleen township was the haunt of Indians, wolves, bear and other animals. The wives of the German settlers also bore their part in the subjugation of the wilderness. One day while at work, extending their clearing in the forest, they having shut their children in the cabin as a protection from the beasts which roamed over their land, they were suddenly aroused by the report of a rifle in the direction of their cabin. As it was not unusual for predatory bands of blood-thirsty Iroquois from the North to roam over the country, they hastened in the direction of the shot to see their cabin and a party of savages, who having been refused admittance by the terrified children within retaliated by firing through the closed door. Mr. Yoder at once made an attack with a singletree, and soon put them to flight, with threats of revenge. Returning with increased numbers they demanded satisfaction, but Mr. Yoder's coolness won him friends among them who forced the others to desist. Hans (Hance) Yoder was the father of four sons: Hans (2); Samuel; Peter; and Daniel, born in 1718, who died Aug. 21, 1749, aged thirty-one years, eight months, and was buried in the cemetery at Pleasantville.

(II) Hans Yoder (9), son of the emigrant, married in November, 1746, in Oley, Sarah Shingle (or Schenkel or Shankle). She died at Reading in 1789, and was buried during Whitsuntide in Peter de Turck's plot at Oley. They had sons: (1) Daniel, born 1748, died 1820; married Susan, daughter of Peter 1773, and died 1833, and both are buried at Pleasantville. (2) Martin was a lieutenant of the 4th Company, 5th Battalion, Berks county, May 10, 1780. (3) Jacob, born in Reading Aug. 11, 1758, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war in 1777 and 1778. In 1780 he moved to western Pennsylvania, and in May, 1782, descended the Monongahela, Ohio and Mississippi rivers from Fort Red Stone, Brownsville, Pa., in the first flat-boat (built by himself) that ever descended the Mississippi river, landing at New Orleans with a cargo of flour. He traded with Havana, Cuba, and also in the sugar market in Philadelphia. He was a man of national reputation at the time when Louisiana still belonged to France. His grave at his home in Kentucky was marked 1834, by an iron tablet. He died in Spencer county, Ky., April 7, 1832 (?). (4) Samuel, a Revolutionary soldier, died from a fall off a horse near Oley Courthouse in 1820.

(III) Daniel Yoder, son of Hans, born in 1748, died in 1830. In 1773 he married Margaret Oyster, who was born May 6, 1753, and died Dec. 23, 1833, and both are buried at Pleasantville. He was a farmer, and he made frequent trips to Philadelphia, taking down grain and bringing back merchandise. The early settlers had but few crops at first. Finally they introduced apple trees and Mr. Yoder built a distillery and a flax oil mill, and in time, as the land became more cultivated, he made weekly trips to Philadelphia to dispose of his product. He cut down trees, cleared land, and brought in his smallpox. But these traps or holes are still visible in the pastures and woods. Daniel Yoder loved the free life of the woods, and was on friendly terms with the Indians, often taking hunting trips with them. He was a very powerful man physically. Before 1800 he built his home, which is well preserved and still in use. He had nine children: Hannah, born April 17, 1775, married Jacob Knabb, and died Aug. 23, 1825; Daniel, born Dec. 7, 1777, died Nov. (or Dec.) 27, 1826; Martin, born Oct. 19, 1780, died Jan. 10, 1837; Catharine, born Oct. 12, 1783, married William William, and died Aug. 20, 1822, aged nineteen years, was the last member of the original business firm. He was born in Bern township April 22, 1786, married Philip De Turck, and died Jan. 19, 1864; John, born April 22 or 23, 1788, died unmarried May 3, 1868, and is buried at Pleasantville; Margaret, born Aug. 4, 1790, married Solomon Peter; Samuel, born Nov. 23, 1798; David, born Feb. 5, 1795, is mentioned below.

(IV) Martin Yoder, son of Daniel, was born in Oley Oct. 28, 1790, and died upon his own fine farm Jan. 10, 1837, aged fifty-six years, two months, twenty-one days. He was a tanner at Pleasantville, and also had a store and hotel on his farm, employing a number of people. He was one of the prosperous men of lower Berks county. The merchandise and general freight in the early history of the country were carried in big Conestoga wagons between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and the road between these two points passed by the homestead of Mr. Yoder, through the woodland, thus making his hotel a popular stopping place. This roadway is still plainly to be seen, but no longer in use. Frequently so many adjoiners died the same night that all the beds were filled, compelling the later comers to sleep on the floor, rolled up in blankets. In 1830 he built the barn, and in 1831 the house that now stands on the farm, the latter now the property of his grandson, Henry H. He married Susanna Peter, born Nov. 29, 1783, died March 13, 1844, aged sixty-six years, three months, and they are both buried in the Yoder lot at Friedensville. Their children were: (1) David, who died in Union county, Pa., first married Persod Yoder, born Dec. 16, 1816, died July 23, 1844, who is buried at Pleasantville. His daughter Priscilla, born May 7, 1838, at Pleasantville, died there Dec. 17, 1857. (2) Solomon, born Aug. 10, 1818; married Polly Peter, born Oct. 10, 1825, and died Mary B. Yoder, born in Oley, June 24, 1818, died May 10, 1845, who is buried at Pleasantville. They had two sons and two daughters. Her mother, Charlotte (Bertolet) Yoder, was born in Oley, Feb. 20, 1778, died Sept. 8, 1868, and is buried at Pleasantville (she may have been the wife of Jacob Yoder, born Jan. 2, 1778, who died Aug. 18, 1838). (3) Maria (Polly) married George Kemp, of Lyons, Pa. (4) Martin.

(V) Martin Yoder, son of Martin and Susanna, was born at Pleasantville May 24, 1819, and died Feb. 7, 1888, aged sixty-eight years, eight months, thirteen days. He was a farmer and implement dealer, and owned the farm mentioned above as the home of his parents. In politics he was a Democrat, and for many years was interested in the schools of his district, serving efficiently as school director. He was a candidate for Congress, but was defeated by a small majority by late Gen. S. Ermong. He was a man of affairs, and popular and influential in his district. He married Catharine Hoch, born June 20, 1821, who died June 1, 1879, aged fifty-seven years, eleven months, eleven days. They had four children: Mary, who married Joseph De Long, of Topton, Pa. (her children, Rev. Calvin De Long, his brother and two sisters, are the only living grandchildren of Martin Yoder); there is one great-grandchild, Erma De Long Hertzog); Ezra, born Sept. 7, 1848, who died Sept. 16, 1868; Henry H.; and Susanna, born Oct. 24, 1860, who married Oliver Landenslayer, born April 13, 1870, of Fleetwood, Pennsylvania.

(VI) Henry H. Yoder, son of Martin and Catharine, was born on his grandfather's farm Jan. 5, 1850. His early intellectual training was obtained in the common schools, and later Mr. Yoder attended the Oley Academy. He was licensed to teach in the public schools by Prof. D. B. Brunner, but he never cared for the profession. He was reared upon the home farm and this vocation he has, off and on, followed ever since, beginning for himself in 1874. This was his chief occupation until 1900. In connection with farming Mr. Yoder and his father were engaged in the tanning business as long as he has continued, making a specialty of iron and wire felling. He has purchased the old homestead farm of 236 acres of valuable land, well located and very fertile. It contains valuable magnesia iron ore, and is considered one of the most desirable... pieces of property in Oley Valley. On a board in the front of the barn below the cornice is the following:

- Martin Yoder
- Susanna Yoder

1830.

And on the house is the same, only the year is 1831 instead of 1830. Besides the home farm he owned eighty acres of good timberland. Mr. Yoder has the old military bugles which belonged to his father. In politics he is a Democrat, and he was school director of his township for three years, and since 1891, has been an alderman, re-elected in the spring of 1908 for the fifth time. In 1907 he became one of the organizers of the First National Bank at Oley, of which he is now a director. He belongs to Friedens Lutheran Church, which for four years he served as deacon, and since 1902 he has been an elder.

Mr. Yoder resides on Main street, Friedensburg. He has been twice married. In 1833 he wedded Andora Merkle, born Feb. 15, 1837, daughter of Elias Merkle, of Maxatawny. She died Jan. 15, 1903, and is buried in the Yoder lot at Friedensburg. On May 14, 1906, he married (second) Ella L. Hertzog, daughter of Jacob E. Bogh, of Fleetwood, Co., Ind., and widow of Dr. William F. Hertzog, of Oley township, by whom she had two children: Marion S., of Kutztown; and Solis C., of Oley.

From 1833 to 1838 there lived on the Moon farm in Oley, now owned by Benneville Herbein, Jacob Frey, and John Bond, the present tenant house, at Wagshusen, Wurtemberg, Germany, March 4, 1791. At the age of twenty-six, April 17, 1817, he married Barbara Bauer, then aged twenty. He was a general in the army under Napoleon, and won seven medals of honor. While shot nine times and badly scarred he was not crippled, yet the open wounds that caused him trouble. He claimed he was fireproof. When Napoleon was exiled he refused to serve the new rulers, was arrested and thrown into prison, but friends liberated him and secretly placed him on board an American-bound ship, where he found his wife. He landed in Philadelphia Sept. 11, 1818. He was highly educated, and quite a linguist, speaking and writing seven different languages. For a living he engaged in school teaching, while in Berks county teaching at the Spie's church, and at the same time did what legal work he could get, with mortgages, mortgages, etc., and settling disputes. He also did some business, on his own, but was little interest in his work in this country, being despondent over the downfall of his commander. He was the father of ten children, six of whom lived to honorable old age. He died Nov. 11, 1844, and is buried at Weisport, Carbon Co., Pa. His only descendants now living in Berks county are: Mrs. Louisa Hill, wife of Jenkin Hill, of Reading, and her three sons, Ralph, Layton and Harold Hill; and Mrs. Ella L. Yoder and her two sons, Marion S. Hertzog, of Kutztown, and Solis C. Hertzog, of Oley, and her granddaughter, Est. De Long Hertzog, of Kutztown.

Among the Yoder family relics are zinc dishes made and used before the days of China. Some of the first china in this section found its way to the Yoders. An old sword used in the Revolution, and two bugles made in the old country and bought by Martin Yoder when a boy, are preserved in the barn. He took bugle little interest in his work in the country, this being despondent over the downfall of his commander. He was the father of ten children, six of whom lived to honorable old age. He died Nov. 11, 1844, and is buried at Weisport, Carbon Co., Pa. His only descendants now living in Berks county are: Mrs. Louisa Hill, wife of Jenkin Hill, of Reading, and her three sons, Ralph, Layton and Harold Hill; and Mrs. Ella L. Yoder and her two sons, Marion S. Hertzog, of Kutztown, and Solis C. Hertzog, of Oley, and her granddaughter, Est. De Long Hertzog, of Kutztown.

IV) David Yoder, son of Daniel, was born Feb. 8, 1795, and died Oct. 26, 1881, aged eighty-six years, eight months, eighteen days. He was a lifelong farmer and was assisted by his brother John who never married. David Yoder was a millwright by trade, and made many blacksmith's bellows and windmills, which he sold throughout Berks county, especially in Berne township, where some of his relatives had settled. He owned the farm in conjunction with his brother John. He was county commissioner in 1846-49. This branch of the family are all buried at Yodersville, now Pleasantsville. David Yoder married Hannah Bitler, daughter of Michael Bitler and his wife Hannah Yocum), born July 13, 1797, died Oct. 15, 1852. Their children were: Margaret, who married George K. Levan, of Maxatawny township; Miss Mary B.; Hannah, born July 27, 1824, who died Jan. 11, 1866; and was buried at Pleasantsville; Daniel, born in April, 1827, who lives (V) at Pleasantsville, was born July 16, 1829, who married Nathan Schaeffer, of Fleetwood; and Sarah, born Aug. 5, 1840, who married Abraham Guldin.

(V) Mary B. Yoder, daughter of David, was born Oct. 19, 1821, and now resides on the homestead, which she owns, containing ninety-four acres. She has rented the land. Miss Yoder is liberal in her support of all the churches, but, is, herself, affiliated with no particular denomination. She has been educated both in English and German. Among her cherished possessions is her grandfather's clock, made by Dr. Yoder, for his father, Captain John Yoder, of the Revolution. Miss Yoder is deeply interested in local history and the history of her family, and she carefully preserves everything that pertains to the early days. The original house on her farm was the log cabin which stood in the corner of the garden in front of the new home, the log cabin was the only house when the Indians shot at the children of two ancient pear trees standing on this farm, which Miss Yoder says must have been nearly two hundred years old, the taller one died during the winter of 1907-08, but the other is still alive and bearing fruit. He was the son of David, and later a resident of Oley, was born near Catsawissa, along the Susquehanna river in Columbia county, in April, 1827. He attended a school conducted in a private house belonging to Jeremiah Lee, a Quaker, and his first teacher was Sarah Pierson, who, like the Lees was a Quaker. In his young manhood he learned the millwright's trade from Levi J. Smith. He was a soldier in the Civil war in Company M, 5th U. S. Artillery, under Capt. James McKnight, for three years and three months, serving as a sergeant. For some years he followed farming in Oley. After the war he built a paper-mill in Oley township. He manufactured paper for a number of years, selling out finally to the Reading Paper Company. He built the house at Pleasantsville where he lived retired until his death, being in very comfortable circumstances. For three years he farmed in Pike township, and retained the ownership of his farm there, which consists of some ninety acres; he erected the present house and barn thereon. In politics he was a Republican, and served as school director of Oley township. Practically his entire life was passed in Oley, as he was but a small lad when he accompanied his parents from Columbia county.

John Yoder, great-grandfather of Absalom S. Yoder, of Reading, was born in Oley township, Berks county, and there became an extensive farmer. He made his last will and testament Aug. 24, 1804, and it was entered for probate Nov. 7, 1807, being on record in Will Book A, page 528. He left a large estate, and was survived by his wife Anna. Their children were: David, "who shall get my property situated in Millfin county, Pa., on which he now lives"; John, "who shall receive my plantation in Oley township, consisting of 943 acres"; Frey; Anna, wife of Christian Gerber; Magdalena, who married Abraham Gerber; Elizabeth, who married Stephen Kurtz, of Marion.
twp.; Sarah, wife of David Kauffman; Catharine; and Barbara, who died the wife of Jacob Viney.

Jacob Yoder, third son of John, settled early in life with others of the family in Berks township, and he is buried on his farm in Centre township, now owned by Gareen Y. Christ, his grandson. He was married to the Rickenback family, and his children were: Jacob, Reuben, Elizabeth (who married a King), Nancy (who lived with her brother Reuben, and later with her nephew David, and died unmarried), and Sarah (who married Daniel Dietrich.

Reuben Yoder, son of Jacob, was born in Centre (then Bern) township, and he died at the age of seventy-eight years. He owned four farms, the one on which he lived consisting of 180 acres, another in the same township of 190 acres, a third in the same district of about ninety acres, while the fourth was located near Schaefferstown. He built the present set of buildings on the farm now owned by his son Jacob in Centre township. He was a man of influence, and was a staunch Republican in politics. For many years he held the office of school director, and was treasurer of the board. In those days teachers were obliged to go to his home to collect their pay. He donated the land on which the German Baptist Church and schoolhouse stand, and he is buried in the German Baptist graveyard, midway between Centreport and Shoemakersville. He married Susanna Stepp, and their children were: Ellen, who married Thomas Elcoat; Henry, who married Sarah David, of Lititz, Pa.; Emma, who married Harry F. Long, of Lititz; Israel, Tamsen, Harrison and Mabry, all deceased; Jacob, of Centre township; and Absalom S. The wife and mother died in 1867, and Mr. Yoder married (second) Elena Hiester, and the only son of whom is Michael, of Centreport, Pa.

David S. Yoder, son of Reuben, was born in Centre township, Oct. 14, 1852. He was reared to farming and remained at home until he was twenty-four years of age, when he began work on his own account on a farm in Centre township, on which he remained twenty-six years. On his last place he lived eighteen years—this was the homestead of Johannes Yoder, who had come up from Oley township. Mr. Yoder was a successful farmer and a man of high reputation in his district. He sold out in the spring of 1901, and going to Kutztown built a fine brick home in Lititz, and his farm is now owned by his brother. He has been employed at the Keystone State Normal School since his removal into Kutztown. He is a consistent member of Grace United Evangelical Church at Kutztown. Mr. Yoder has been twice married. His second wife is the former Mary Maria, a daughter of John Kline, of Centreport, where she died and is buried. To this union was born one son, Mabry K., who graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in 1898, and is now teaching at Northampton, Pennsylvania. Mr. Yoder married (second) Feb. 5, 1883, Ida Spatz, daughter of Dr. John Spatz of Centreport, though formerly of Reading. The only son of this union, Clarence H., is a student in the Keystone State Normal School.

Mabry K. Yoder, son of David S., was born Sept. 16, 1874, in Centre township, Berks county. He received his common schools in the public schools of his native township. Later he attended select school at Centreport. When seventeen years of age he was appointed one of the teachers of his township, in which he taught eight years. During vacation he completed a business course in the Reading Business College. In 1897, he was appointed a student at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, from which institution he graduated in 1898. He taught six years in Lehigh county, after which he resigned and accepted a position as teacher of one of the schools in the borough of Northampton, and to this position he has been elected for the third time. He is a faithful member of the United Evangelical Church.

On July 23, 1908, Mr. Yoder married Laura L., only daughter of Phoeo S. and Ida (Walbert) Heffner. Absalom S. Yoder, son of Reuben, was born in Centre township, Berks county, Nov. 5, 1866. His education was obtained at home and in the public schools of his district. Later he attended the select school at Centreport, the Millersville State Normal School, at Millersville, and the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, graduating from the last named institution in the class of 1898. Mr. Yoder began teaching in the fall of 1888 in the same township, and there he taught two terms. In the spring of 1898 he went to Lancaster county, and for four terms was engaged in teaching in Warwick township. He lived at Lititz, where his wife died, and he returned to his native township, teaching the following term in Centre township, where he was located for eight more terms. Mr. Yoder has been a most successful teacher, and he has continued to study and advance ever since his graduation from Normal, by taking a special course in mathematics and ancient classics in the Reading Classical School under Rev. Dr. J. V. George. On Oct. 6, 1902, under civil service rules, Mr. Yoder was appointed to a clerkship in the post-office at Reading, and he has since continued to hold this position.

Mr. Yoder is a member of the United Brethren denomination. He married Sallie H. Yoder, daughter of Alfred and Mary (Haag) Yoder, of Centre township, Berks county, and a member of the same denomination. Their children are: Eliza; Henry; Susanna; and Sarah. Their daughter as follows: Herma R., a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1907, and now a successful teacher at Centreport; J. Russell, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1908; and Daisy E., a student in the Keystone State Normal.

DANIEL S. ESTERLY, a well known business man of Exeter, and a member of the Board of Trade, was born in 1831, in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Joseph Esterly, and grandson of Daniel Esterly, a blacksmith by trade, who followed that occupation in Exeter township, near the "Black Bear Hotel," where he died at an advanced age.

Joseph Esterly was born in Exeter township, and learned the blacksmith business of his father. He followed that trade for some time, later devoting his time to farming. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and was one of the original members of the Exeter Township Fire Company. He was a member of Shiloh Church. He married Lydia Snyder, who died at the age of eighty-three years, and of their family, two children survive: Augusta, who married J. W. Snyder, of Exeter township, and C. W. Esterly, a farmer of Exeter township.

Daniel S. Esterly attended the schools of the place of his nativity until fifteen years of age, and then learned the cabinet makers' trade, which he followed a few years on Penn street, Reading. The work not proving congenial, Mr. Esterly engaged with the Reading Railroad in the car shops, and remained therein for about two and a half years, when he was transferred to Philadelphia, where he became car inspector. After nine and a half years in that position, Mr. Esterly returned to Reading and engaged in the produce business at No. 15 North Sixth street, in 1865, and latter took the business on the block between North Second and North Third street, and continued that business at that place until the spring of 1876. Their business became so prosperous that they had four private cars built, the first one, a four wheeler, being built at a cost of $400, and latter cars running at the same price. In 1872 Mr. Esterly retired from the business and engaged in the wholesale grocery business at No. 818 Penn street, until 1901, when he retired. He was known as one of the largest commission merchants of Reading, his four cars running daily between Philadelphia and Reading. Mr. Esterly built his fine home in...
In politics Mr. Esterly is a Democrat, and is a member of the board of health. He has been a member of the Reading Board of Trade for many years. He is a member of the Baptist Church, has been a deacon for fifteen years, and treasurer of the Baptist Association for ten years. He is also an active member of the lodge by which he is affiliated of Richmond Lodge No. 230, F. & A. M., of Philadelphia; the Good Fellows, No. 32, of Philadelphia; and also the Odd Fellows.

GEORGE E. HAAK is widely acquainted in and known around Reading as proprietor of the Sienna Paint, Koalin & Sand Works, being particularly well known among builders. His reputation in fraternal societies is even more extensive, his services in forming and promoting such organizations in this part of Pennsylvania having been particularly valuable.

Mr. Haak has long been represented among the prosperous agricultural class of Berks county. John Jacob Haak, the first American ancestor of George E., sailed from Deal, England, on the ship "Mortenhouse," John Coulter, master, June 15, 1728, and arrived Aug. 24th of the same year. In that same year he is noted as a member of the Lutheran Church at Tulpchoback, Berks county.

John Haak, the grandfather of George E., was a farmer and large landowner in Alsace township, this county. He married Elizabeth Krause, a native of Berks county, and they had a family of five children, namely: William, Isaac, John, Rebecca (Mrs. Addams) and Michael. They were Lutherans in religious faith, and in politics John Haak supported the Whig party, and later the Republican.

Michael Haak, son of John, was born in 1809 in Berks county, was reared to farming, and continued to follow that calling all his life. Like his father he was a Lutheran in religion and a Republican in politics. He married Sarah Addams, and to them were born the following named children: Annie E. m. William A. Robinson; Mary C. m. Thomas Munce; George E. is mentioned below; Clara V. m. John E. Davis. Michael.

George E. Haak was born Oct. 3, 1842, in Leesport, Berks county, Pa., and received his education in the public schools of Alsace township, Lititz, Lancaster Co., Pa., and Reading. In 1874 he formed a partnership with Francis Keffer, conducting a glass and queensware business at No. 322 Penn street and continuing thus for a time and a half years. After this experience he engaged in business for himself at No. 312 Penn street in the same line, continuing for ten years, and after the death of his father he took charge of the Haak estate, of which he had been appointed executor under the provisions of his father's will. This estate is situated in East Reading, which at that time was counted among the most valuable land in Berks county, the finest deposits of kaolin and sienna in the United States being located thereon. It also contains a valuable sand deposit, unequaled anywhere in the State, the product of which has been approved and advertised by the Reading school board for their buildings, in the construction of which no other sand is used. Mr. Haak furnishes sand and other products to many of the principal builders of Reading. He was one of the organizers of the Schuylkill Valley Bank, and served as a director of that institution for five years. He has been and is connected in social organizations in which he has taken the deepest interest for a number of years. He has a nature which attracts and holds friendship, as is evidenced by his influential standing in a number of fraternities. He is a past master of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M.; past high priest of Excelsior Chapter, No. 237; past eminent commander of Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; and a prominent member of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Reading, of which he was the organizer and first potenlate. Mr. Haak was the first member at Reading in both the Knights of the Golden Eagle and the Royal Arcanum; he was the first captain of a fully equipped company in Philadelphia and first major of the battalion.

REV. WILLIAM F. F. DAVIS was born in Paradise township, York county, Pa., a rural district in the south-eastern part of this State, Oct. 1, 1818, son of John F. and Isabella (Decker) Davis. The latter is the daughter of the late Rev. Frederick William Vandersloot, and granddaughter of one of the earliest ministers of the Reformed Church in this country, of the same name—a sister, according to, of the Revs. Frederick William and F. Edward Vandersloot, and aunt of the late Rev. J. S. Vandersloot, son of the Rev. F. Edward and a cousin of Mr. Davis. She was also a grand-daughter, on her mother's side, of the Rev. Philip Reinhold Pauli, for many years pastor of a Reformed Church in the city of Reading, Pa.—the fathers of the brethren Revs. Williams and Charles Augustus Pauli, and the concluding twenty-five years, they exercised their ministry in the city of Reading and vicinity—the former as successor to his venerable father. Mr. Davis was accordingly a direct descendant both of the Pauli and the Vandersloot families, so long and so prominently represented in the ministry of the Reformed Church of this country.

Mr. Davis was baptized, in infancy, by his maternal uncle, the Rev. F. Edward Vandersloot, and subsequently catechized and confirmed by the Rev. Daniel Ziegler, D. D., and received as a communicant member of the Straeber's church, in York county, Pa. In his youth he imbibed such a love of the sacred office and the work of the holy ministry, as largely represented by his ancestors, but was prevented from entering the sacred office for want of means to prosecute the studies necessary to qualify him for the work. He learned the trade of a saddler and spent a number of years in this occupation. In this way he sought to acquire the means necessary for the prosecution of his literary and theological studies. He commenced his preparatory course in the excellent high school or academy kept for many years and successfully presided over by the late Prof. Geo. W. Ruby, Ph. D., in New Oxford, Pa. Subsequently he entered Marshall College, at Lancaster, Pa., where he graduated in 1861, after which he entered the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church, then located at Mercersburg, Pa., and completed his studies in the same in 1862. During his student life, he was in the habit of working with the farmers, in the vicinity of Lancaster, many of whom still remember him and speak of him with respect as an industrious and skillful laborer. His excellent character and conduct made him a very favorable impression on the minds of these simple-hearted and unsophisticated tillers of the soil. He was a student of the best kind of learning and literature, possessed at the same time both the requisite will and capacity to engage in useful manual labor.

In the spring of 1863 Mr. Davis was licensed by the Zion's Chassis, and during the same year ordained and installed as pastor of the Abbottstown or New Oxford charge, in Adams county, Pa. This first charge he served faithfully and with success for a period of about nine years. After the death of his relative, the Rev. Charles Augustus Pauli, in the fall of 1871, Mr. Davis became his successor in the Sinkg Spring charge, in Berks county, Pa., then composed of five charges, and continued in charge of the Spring, Hain's, Yocom's, Kissinger's and St. John's at Hamburg. Several of these congregations he subsequently resigned and had the charge reconstructed, so that latterly it consisted of four congregations. He served his people faithfully, and, as a consequence, was highly respected and loved by them. In several of the congregations he had as pastor, he was successful in gaining the confidence of members, and thus adding to the numerical strength of the charge. His preaching was of a high order—practical and popular. He preached the Gospel in its purity, excellence and saving power; and his efforts were crowned with signal success. He officiated in both the English and German languages, using them with equal facility, accuracy and effect. Taken altogether, Mr. Davis was one of our most successful and best beloved pastors, sincerely devoted to the spiritual welfare of his numerous parishioners, and well deserving of their grateful remembrance.

Mr. Davis married to Miss Ellen E. Myers, of York, Pa., Oct. 22, 1868. They had ten children, seven of whom—five sons and two daughters—survive their beloved father. Three of the children preceded him to the eternal world.

Mr. Davis was a heavy-built man, of robust constitution and general good health. He was, however, predisposed to apoplexy. As far back as the 13th of March, 1881, he had an attack of this kind, from which, however, he soon recovered sufficiently to enable him to attend to the duties of his calling. On the 21st of February, 1888, he had a second attack, from which he never fully recovered. Still, although partially disabled, he continued to attend to his pastoral duties, but not without considerable effort and inconvenience. At length he was so much debilitated that he could scarcely conduct the services of the sanctuary. A few weeks prior to his decease, he told his congregations that he needed at least three months' rest, and, as advised by his physicians, entire freedom from clerical duties. By that time he hoped to be able to see whether he could further serve his congregations or not. He was advised to take a voyage to Europe, and, on the day preceding his death he completed his arrangements for the voyage. Shortly after midnight, on the 10th of June, he had a third attack of the fatal disease. He lay in an unconscious state until the next morning, Monday, June 11, 1888, when between five and six o'clock, in the bosom of his family, at Reading, Pa., Brother Davis, as greatly fell asleep in Jesus, aged 51 years, 8 months and 10 days. His funeral took place on Thursday following, at one o'clock p.m. The services were held in St. Paul's Reformed Church, at Reading, of which the family were members. A large number of the members of the several churches which Brother Davis served were present to testify partially to the attachment to their esteemed pastor. Some forty or fifty ministers of different denominations were also present at these solemnities, many of whom took part in the same. The services at the house were conducted by the Rev. Dr. McCauley. The assembled multitude then went to St. Paul's Church, Dr. Miller, of York, Pa., read the Scripture lesson and offered a prayer in English. He was succeeded by the Rev. Dr. Kremer in a German prayer. Rev. A. S. Leinbach preached a German discourse from Rev. 2: 10: "Be thou faithful unto death, etc." Rev. Dr. Bausman preached an English discourse from Rev. 3: 10: "He that overcometh shall inherit all things." Rev. J. L. Evans conducted the services at the grave. The brethren, Revs. H. Mosser, D. B. Albright, T. C. Leinbach, A. J. Bachman, John H. Leinbach, and L. D. Steckel, acted as pall-bearers.

Beautiful and affecting was the presence of so large a number of the members of the pastoral charge of Brother Davis to testify their extreme sorrow, and bear testimony to the zeal and fidelity of their beloved pastor. Beautiful and appropriate, also, was it that so large a number of his clerical brethren should be present and participate in the solemnities attending the final interment of a beloved pastor. It was, therefore, an unusual sight to see the stricken wife and mother, with seven sorrowing children sitting beside the open coffin of a beloved husband and a kind father, of whom they had been suddenly and unexpectedly deprived. Here was room for the consoling promises of Him who is the "Father of the fatherless," and a "judge of the widow." Well is it for us all to remember under such circumstances what is written: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit—that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

JAMES C. BENADE, who for a number of years was well known to the citizens of Reading, Pa., as an artist, was born in Lititz, son of Bishop Andrew and Maria (Henry) Benade, the latter a daughter of Judge Henry of Lancaster.

Bishop Andrew Benade, who was the Moravian denomination, and was a prominent man in his day. His death occurred in 1859, at the age of ninety-two years, his wife having passed away several years prior to this. They were the parents of: William, deceased, who was bishop at Philadelphia; Charles, an inventor; James C. Bishop Benade had two daughters, Lucia and Mary, by a former marriage.

James C. Benade was taken to Salem, N. C., when a child, but when ten years of age was brought back to Lititz by his parents, and received his education at Nazareth Hall, Nazareth, Pa. Even at this early age he showed remarkable talent, and when a youth took up oil and colored painting, becoming a noted artist. He settled in Reading in 1857. His death occurred in 1858, at the age of thirty-two years, and he was interred in the Charles Evans cemetery. In 1845 he married Miss Sarah Moers, daughter of Daniel and Henrietta (Nagle) Moers. To this union there were born children, as follows: James A., deceased; Edick H., of Jefferson county, Pa.; Esther H., who conducts a private preparatory school, and Sarah M., both of Reading. In religious belief Mr. Benade was a Moravian.

Daniel G. Leinbach, an aged citizen of Reading now living retired at No. 639 Pine street, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, Dec. 13, 1829, son of Frederick and Maria (Guldin) Leinbach.

Frederick Leinbach, father of Daniel G., was a blacksmith by trade, but owned a farm near Leesport and gave a considerable part of his time to managing that property. Later in life his farming interests were in Exeter township. He died at that second homestead aged fifty-seven years, leaving a widow and children. His wife, whose maiden name was Maria R. He was survived by five children, all of whom except his youngest daughter, who married and whose family still survive, namely: Daniel and Albert, retired; Mahlon; Jonathan G.; and Mary, widow of James Levan, a resident of Reading.

Daniel G. Leinbach received his education in the schools of his native township and between the terms worked at farming. When he reached the age of seventeen he turned his attention toward blacksmith work and under the instruction of his father became an adept at that trade, following it for six years. He then learned bottle making and after mastering that trade, secured a position in the works of the Philadelphia Brewery Company. Thence he went to the Mohawk Valley, where he remained there for thirty-one years, sufficiently attests his efficiency as a worker. On Oct. 13, 1887, he retired from their employ, and for the next eleven years was employed by his brother J. G. Leinbach in the latter's mill. Since 1900, he has given up all active work, excepting to act as bookkeeper at home. In 1949, he retired at his home on Pine street. Mr. Leinbach has accumulated a comfortable property and owns considerable real estate, being the possessor of two houses in the First ward, two in the Second and one each in the Tenth and Sixteenth wards...

On Oct. 14, 1849, Mr. Leinbach married Catherine, daughter of John and Catherine (Heckler) Levan, and the following children have been born to them: Mary, m. to Frank Mallon; Ellen, m. to Charles Evans; Martha, m. to Samuel Rolland; Anna
E., unmarried; she is her father's housekeeper. Mrs. Leinbach died Nov. 4, 1894, aged sixty-eight years and nine months, and was interred in Aulenbach's cemetery. Mr. Leinbach belongs to several fraternal orders, being a member of Mt. Penn Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Reading, having served as its Grand Master. He is also a member of the Rebekah Lodge, I. O. F. Religiously he is a member of the German Reformed Church of Reading. In his earlier days, during the war, Mr. Leinbach saw some military service, enlisting in 1862 for three months. His been an industrious useful life, and he has well earned the freedom from care that enjoys and the respect of the community which is so freely accorded him.

WILLIAM M. FULTON, deceased, was identified with the building interests of Reading, Pa., for many years. He was a descendant of a family whose members were men of influence, highly respected and valuable citizens.

His great-grandfather, Samuel Fulton, a captain in the Revolutionary war for six years, was in the battles of Long Island and Brandywine, in one of the latter, losing his horse during the battle, he rode away with his men nevertheless. He was in the battle of Staten Island, and marched from thence to White Plains. He was in the Indian wars, and in the battle of Shamokin was wounded in the knee. He captured large quantities of furs and booty from the British and Indians.

Samuel Fulton, grandfather of William M., was a color bearer in the war of 1812. He married Jenny McClain, daughter of Andrew McClain, who was a son of Lord Steel McClain, a Scotchman. He came over from Scotland with Lord Baltimore. He, too, was a captain in the Revolutionary war, and for his great bravery at the battle, or the storming of, Stony Point, forty miles above New York, on the Hudson river, was awarded by Congress a gold medal. He ordered the medal given to his namesake, Andrew McClain Fulton, at his death.

Andrew McClain Fulton, father of William M., was a native of Ohio, where he was liberally educated and became an attorney-at-law. In 1873 he moved to Reading and practiced his profession until incapacitated by failing health. He retired from professional work and engaged in farming in Comru township, removing later to Berks county. He lived there until his death. He was living in his eighty years. His first wife, Hatti (Wasson) Fulton, died in 1863, leaving two children, William M. and Jennie, the latter of whom is principal of the Lewistown, Mont., central school. Mr. and Mrs. Fulton were both members of Presbyterian Church. Andrew McC. Fulton married (second) Mary Schwartz, daughter of Hon. John Schwartz, M. C. Four children were born to this union, namely: Elizabeth; John S., of New York; Margaret, who married Horad Wolleth; and Elmer O., of Muhlenberg township, Berks Co., Pa. The father was a Republican in his political belief.

William M. Fulton was born Nov. 2, 1858, in Ashland, Ohio, and was educated in the schools there, completing his training at a commercial college in Reading, after his father settled there. He then accepted a position as clerk in the Philadelphia & Reading freight depot, where he worked for five years and then took up general contracting. This business he followed for the rest of his life, accumulating a large property. He owned a quarry at the west end of the Penn street bridge.

Mr. Fulton was married in 1882, to Catharine R. Kline. Simon and Catharine (Noll) Kline, and to this marriage two children were born, namely: William J. S. McClain, who died aged five months and eighteen days; and Jennie M., who is a graduate of the class of 1907, girls' high school, Reading, and she is now a student at the Teachers College, New York City.

The death of Mr. Fulton took place July 10, 1899. He left a devoted family, members of various organizations, many friends, and attached fellow citizens, to mourn his loss. He belonged to the First Reformed Church, having united with the society in 1883. In politics he was a Republican, and a faithful worker in the ranks of that party. He was always a firm upholder of American virtues. His fraternal connections were with the Masons, he being a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., of Reading.

A. W. FISHER, a prominent wholesale wine and liquor dealer, of Reading, Pa., whose place of business is situated at the corner of Second and Penn streets, was born in West Reading, Spring township, May 27, 1851, son of William L. and Mary (Weitzel) Fisher, and a grandson of John and Barbara (Lichty) Fisher. John Fisher was born in Windsor township, Berks county, in 1800, and lived near Monterey, where he was engaged in the building and furniture business, and where all his children were born. He also had stone quarries and a lime kiln on the Allen town road east of Monterey church. It is thought that he built the old stone church and school house at Monterey. In 1829 he married Barbara Lichty, with whom he had the following children: Charles; Hettie, m. to Joseph Markley; Gideon; William L., the father of A. W.; John; Daniel L., of Philadelphia, Pa.; Sarah; Amelia, m. to Frank Adams, of Reading (they have a daughter, Miss Mary, a supervisor of schools in Reading since 1890); and John; (second) Polly Leader, by whom one son, Glaucey, was born.

Mr. Fisher's father had two brothers and a sister: George; Solomon; and Mary, who married Philip Ziegler, a farmer near Rocktownsville, in Lehigh county, near the Berks county line, and had thirteen children, of whom five, all over seventy years of age, are still living—Daniel (aged ninety-seven years), William (of Allentown), David (in the homestead), Mrs. Amelia, (m. to Frank Adams, of Reading), Mary (aged ninety-one years), and Hettie (m. to Gideon Ziegler, of Allentown). The male name of Mr. Fisher's mother was Hauer, and her brother, the late George Hauer, was a prominent merchant in Windsor township.

William L. Fisher, son of John, was born in Berks county and was educated in the public schools. He was reared to the life of a farmer, and this he followed in connection with trucking, owning a small tract of land near the Cacoosing, where he also conducted a country hotel. It is said that none of this family used malt or spirituous liquors. Mr. Fisher conducted his hotel for several years, and one child who died in infancy to Reading, where he opened a cafe on the site of the present Schuylkill Valley Bank. This was in 1876 and he remained in business with his son, A. W., until his death, in 1882, aged fifty-five years. He was considered a very good citizen. Mr. Fisher was a very powerfully built man, his weight being 285 pounds. He and his wife were the parents of seven children, four sons of whom died in infancy, A. W. being the only son to survive. The daughters were: Emma, deceased, m. to Ephraim Miller; and Agnes, m. to Jeremiah Epping. Both Mr. and Mrs. William Fisher were members of the First Reformed Church. He was a Democrat up to the time of Abraham Lincoln's campaign, when he cast his lot with the Republican party. Mrs. Fisher died in 1874, aged fifty-three years.

A. W. Fisher was educated in the common schools of West Reading, and until 1876 worked upon a farm, when, with his father, he came to Reading and engaged in the cafe business. Like his father, Mr. Fisher is a very large man. At the age of fourteen years his weight was 363 pounds, and today his average weight is over 400 pounds. He enjoys the very best of health, and is as supple and active as the schoolboy who imparted his weight. Since 1895 Mr. Fisher has devoted his time solely to the wholesale business, and built his present place of business in 1901, the structure being three stories high, and 20x98 feet in dimensions. He also owns the property at No. 114 Penn street, and handles a choice line of wines, liquors, having the reputation of conducting one of the best kept places in the city of Reading. He commands the best trade in Reading and the surrounding country. Although giving his business the closest attention, Mr. Fisher finds time for recreation, being very fond of fishing, and many of the fine trout he has yielded to his rod and line. Mr. Fisher spends his vacations at Anglesea, New Jersey.

Mr. Fisher has been twice married, his first wife being Miss Emma Quinter, who died in 1895, leaving these children: William, deceased; George L.; Adam S.; Edgar R.; and Helen M. Fisher's second marriage occurred in 1897, to Agnes Focht, daughter of Solomon Focht. Politically Mr. Fisher is a Republican. He is a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 287, F. & A. M., Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Reformed Church, being also a member of the Maennerchor and the Reading Fishing Club.

KRICK. The Krick family is one of the most numerous and prosperous in the Schuylkill section of Berks county. The name has been a familiar one in that locality for a hundred and fifty years, associated invariably with good citizenship, thrift and integrity, its members in every generation having been jealous of their good repute and mindful of the honorable traditions of their ancestors. All of the land purchased by Frantz Krück (as the name was originally spelled), the founder of the family, in 1731, is still held by his descendants. His posterity is especially well known in Cumru, Spring, Heidelberg, Windsor and Tulpehocken townships, Berks county. Some of his descendants have also located in Lancaster, Union and Mifflin counties.

Krick was a native of Germany, born in the Rhein Pfalz in October, 1702. Having one night in a mischievous mood upset a sentinel (schilder) house he was found out, and in order to escape the punishment came to America, arriving at Philadelphia, Sept. 11, 1731, on the good ship "Pennsylvania Merchant." Setting in the Cocalico, he also taught school near Le Cacoosing creek, in what is now Berks county, Pa., he became the owner of considerable land, originally owning a tract of 350 acres, in five parts, and later increasing his holdings to 750 acres. His property was in Cumru (now Spring) township, and comprised what is now the finest and most valuable agricultural land in the county. He devoted the rest of his life to the improvement of his holdings, and his descendants have followed in his footsteps to such an extent that his property is still in their possession, and in some cases has been farmed by the sixth generation. A part of the original land secured by him from the Penns in 1737 is now owned by Rev. Thomas H. Krick, a descendant of the sixth generation. When the city of Reading was laid out, in 1749, Francis Creek (as the name was Anglicized when he secured land from the Penns) became the center of lots Nos. 48 and 49, in the first townships in Cumru township, an amount equal to $50.54, a Pennsylvania pound being valued at $3.66. He was an industrious and well-to-do man, and the records of his extensive land transactions and dealings with the early settlers are proof that he was well educated, old papers there being signed "Franz Kruck," as it was usual to sign in those days. There is a family tradition that he was of royal blood, and it is certain that he was a man of intelligence and standing. His will, made April 26, 1762, was probated June 4, 1764, the year of his death, which occurred at a ripe old age. He was buried at Sinking Spring, in the Baptist burial-ground, but the lot containing his vault is still standing. He reared a large family of sturdy sons and daughters, all of whom became useful men and women. Thirteen children are mentioned in his will as heirs, and the sons Francis and George were executors of the will. In February, 1782, Frantz Krück sold some of his land to his son-in-law, his father bonds of £50 to each denomination each, and the will specified the dates upon which these bonds were to be redeemed. We have the following record of the family: (1) John, born in Germany, came to America with his parents. In 1759 he paid 23 tax in Cumru township. His name appears in the roster of King George's Company, 6th Pennsylvania Battalion, 1782. This company had organized and was ready to respond to the call, but there was no actual service performed. John was married but had no children. He was a blacksmith by trade. He died in 1800. (2) Jacob also came to America with his parents, and was the only unmarried child among the single men in the tax list of 1759. He was, however, married, as would appear from the baptismal records of Hain's Church. He had the following children: John Jacob, Maria and John George. He served active service in the Revolutionary War in Crown's Company. At his death, 1789, of Berks County Militia in an expedition to Newtown, Bucks county. (3) Francis is mentioned below. (4) George (known as "Blind George"), born May 8, 1738, died Sept. 9, 1825. He m. Margarita Seitzinger and was the father of a large family, Solomon, William, John, George, Isaac, Phillip, Samuel, and eight daughters. He was a taxpayer in Heidelberg township in 1759. A few years later he moved back to Cumru, now Spring township, and purchased a farm between Sinking Spring and Reading, where he conducted a hotel for a number of years. He was a member of the First Reformed Church. He m. Catharine Rader, and was the father of a large family, as follows: Rachael m. Henry Young; Elizabeth m. John Salladay; Katharine m. Philip Getz; John m. a Hornberger; Libia m. Frederic Amman; Susanna m. Jacob Buchart; Mary m. Rudy Miller; Adam m. Catharine Fisher, and lived at Reading; Barbara m. Daniel Neff; Magdalena m. John Luft; Christianna m. a Rupp; Jonas moved to Hollidaysburg; William moved to Hamburg; Peter moved to Lancaster; John Jacob. (5) Margaret m. Michael Seitzinger. (6) Elizabeth m. Philip Worheim. Peter (7) Peter, the youngest son of Frantz Kruck, was born June 27, 1756, and died July 31, 1829. He was a soldier in the Revolution in the 8th Company, 6th Battalion, and saw active service. He was known as "School Teacher" Peter and taught school near Sinking Spring, until his death. He was a member of the First Reformed Church. He m. Catharine Adams, born Oct. 14, 1749, m. Jacob Ruth. (8) Eva. (9) Magdalena m. George Hain.

Frantz (or Francis) Krück, third son of the original settler, was born Nov. 6, 1736, in Cumru, now Spring township, and died April 20, 1814, aged seventy-seven years. He m. Margaret Corn, Nov. 29, 1754, a native of Breinigsville township, Montgomery county, by whom he had six children. He was a prominent man, and his son and namesake was the first Sinking Spring Store. His descendants were prominent in the community, and his name appears in most of the records of the township, and was given to Spring Creek, the Sinking Spring Church, the Sinking Spring Lodge, and the Sinking Spring Hotel. He was a member of the First Reformed Church. He died in 1814.

Krick, (or Francis) Krück, third son of the original settler, was born Nov. 6, 1736, in Cumru, (now Spring) township, and died April 20, 1814, aged seventy-seven years. He married Margaret Corn, Nov. 29, 1754, a native of Breinigsville township, Montgomery county, by whom he had six children. He was a prominent man, and his son and namesake was the first Sinking Spring Store. His descendants were prominent in the community, and his name appears in most of the records of the township, and was given to Spring Creek, the Sinking Spring Church, the Sinking Spring Lodge, and the Sinking Spring Hotel. He was a member of the First Reformed Church. He died in 1814.
March 1, 1736, was first married in 1754, and died March 1, 1830, aged ninety-four years. No children were born to this second marriage. The names of his children appear in his will, and the dates of birth are given in the family Bible: Catharine, born Dec. 20, 1758, m. William Brown; Jacob, born Aug. 27, 1760, m. Hannah Gehrling; John, born Feb. 18, 1762, m. a Mr. Brown; John Adam was born March 4, 1765 (he had a daughter Catharine, who married Henry Snider and had a son, George); John was born April 11, 1767; Philip, born Oct. 4, 1769, moved to Wooster, Ohio; George, born Sept. 8, 1771, m. Catharine Snider (known by bibliographers as Catharine Bohn), born Aug. 29, 1773, m. William Fisher; Francis, born Feb. 8, 1776, m. Hannah Gehrling; Peter, born Feb. 28, 1779, m. Elizabeth Hill. The son Francis, the third of that name, was the sole executer of his father's large estate. The will was witnessed by John Spyker and Jacob Lambert, and was probated June 8, 1814. Francis (2) disposed of his farm to Francis (3) in the same way that Francis (1) had sold it to Francis (2), by bonds.

Francis Krick, son of Frantz and Maria (Spohn) Krick, was born Feb. 8, 1776, at the homestead, and died June 4, 1842, at the homestead (his aged mother died two months, eleven days. He was a farmer in very comfortable circumstances, owning about four hundred acres of valuable land. He was a soldier in the war of 1812-15. He married Hannah Gehrling, born June 4, 1774, died Feb. 3, 1842. They had a large family, two sons and seven daughters, and we have record of the following: Jacob is mentioned below; Katie, born May 7, 1801, died in infancy; Daniel is mentioned below; Elizabeth, born April 11, 1806, m. Daniel Brossman; Sarah, born June 1, 1808, m. Israel Grimes; Hannah, born May 9, 1810, m. Adam Bohn; Maria (Polly), born May 22, 1813, m. Abraham Briel; Esther, born Nov. 22, 1815.

Jacob Krick, son of Francis and Hannah (Gehrling) Krick, was born in 1798, at the homestead, died Dec. 20, 1883. Like all his immediate ancestors he was a lifelong agriculturist, and prospered so well in his chosen calling that he was able to present each of his sons a farm when they left home. He was a zealous church worker, being an official member of St. John's Reformed Church of Sinking Spring, and was known to all as a worthy and substantial citizen. He is buried at that church. Jacob Krick was married April 19, 1829, to Catharine Bohn, daughter of George Bohn (son of Frederick Bohn), of Bern township, and she survived him many years, making her home with her son Adam, in Sinking Spring. She died Aug. 19, 1887. To Daniel and Susan (Bohn) Krick were born children as follows: James, born Jan. 12, 1834, died July 26, 1834; Lydia, born May 31, 1835, m. William R. High; Adam B. is mentioned below; Henry B., born Jan. 16, 1839, died Aug. 3, 1906; Mary E., born Jan. 6, 1851, died May 19, 1905.

Adam B. Krick was born Oct. 27, 1836, in Spring township, and received a good education, attending school at Sinking Spring and Reading, and later studying at the Hudson River Institute, at Claverack, N. Y. During his early manhood he was engaged at teaching for five terms, after which he devoted himself to farming, continuing in that line for nine years. Meantime he had suffered more or less from the results of an accident which occurred in 1852, and which culminated in 1873, when he found it necessary to undergo the amputation of a limb. This naturally caused a complete change in his plans for his life work, and in the year last named he removed from the farm into the village of Sinking Spring, where in a short time he embarked in a mercantile business, dealing in flour, feed and grain, both wholesale and retail. He carried on that business throughout his active career, meeting with excellent success, for he displayed the same ability in the management of his business ventures as he did in his previous undertakings. He never lost his interest in financial affairs and the public school system, and served four successive terms as school director. He was an active member of the Sinking Spring Reformed Church, of which he served as treasurer, for a period of thirty years. In 1863 Mr. Krick married Lucy J. Reber, born April 13, 1844, daughter of Benningville B. Reber (son of Conrad) and Sarah V. R. (High), daughter of William and Catharine (Van Reed) High. Six child-

During his active years Mr. Krick devoted himself thoroughly to business, attending to his work, and the management of his property with intelligence as well as industry, with excellent results. But he also found time for the development of his social and religious tendencies, and the associations growing out of such tendencies, he has lived his life with pleasant interests for his leisure years. He holds membership in Council No. 77, Jr. O. U. A. M., and the K. G. E., No. 334, both of Sinking Spring, and is a past officer of both organizations. He is a Reformed member of St. John's Church at Sinking Spring, which he has served as deacon, and he is also a member of the charitable society, which has extended his worth to the community in various other capacities. While living on the farm he was for six years school director of Spring township. He is a Democrat in politics.

Mr. Krick married, Sept. 19, 1863, Sarah A. Seltzer, daughter of William and Catharine (Ruth) Seltzer, of Womelsdorf, Berks county, and they have had three children, two daughters and one son, the latter stillborn. Of the daughters, Mary Annie m. Isaac Hettenger, of Kansas City, MO, proprietor of the Hettenger Bros. Manufacturing Company, of Kansas City, MO., and farming; Minnie, m. Henry B. Seltzer, of Philadelphia, Pa. Rachel, m. George Seltzer, of Philadelphia, Pa. But their two sons have grown up in the farm business, carrying on the prosperous business, and add honor to the family.

The Krick children were of the following names: James, born Jan. 12, 1834, died July 26, 1834; Lydia, born May 31, 1835, m. William R. High; Adam B. is mentioned above; Henry B., born Jan. 16, 1839, died Aug. 3, 1906; Mary E., born Jan. 6, 1851, died May 19, 1905.
BIOGRAPHICAL

Mr. Krick has displayed his enterprise as much in the development of an up-to-date public utility as in his strictly private affairs. The Sinking Spring Electric Company, in which he is the largest stockholder, is a private concern, but its workings so affect the public comfort and welfare that the community has a much deeper interest in its conduct than in the average commercial venture. This company not only supplies electricity for Sinking Spring, but also for Springmont, Wyomissing, Shillington and Edison. The excellent service of the plant, and its efficient management from an industrial as well as a financial standpoint, are further evidences of Mr. Krick's powers as a man of executive force. His personal character is above reproach.

In 1889 Mr. Krick married Clara V. Hartman, daughter of the late Amos and Rebecca (Yost) Hartman. Four children have been born to this union, as follows: Bessie H., who graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in 1902, is now engaged at teaching in Sinking Spring; Gertrude H., who also attended the Keystone State Normal, is at present teaching in Berks County; Bertha H. is in high school; Charles H., born Oct. 10, 1892, is the fourth of this line born in October, his father, grandfather and great-grandfather having been born, like him, in that month, on the same farm in Spring township. The home of this family is a comfortable dwelling, supplied with every modern convenience for the well-being of its occupants. It is surrounded by a large and well-kept lawn, and is delightfully situated, being one of the pleasant homes in the village.

Mr. Krick is a prominent member of St. John's Reformed Church, of which he has served as deacon for two years, and which has so many dear associations for the members of this family. Many of the earlier generations sleep their last sleep in the graveyard of this old house of worship. Mr. Krick is a Democrat in his political faith, and in social connection he is an Odd Fellow, belonging to Sinking Spring Lodge, No. 660.

Rev. Thomas Henry Krick, a leading minister of the Reformed Church, now located at Coplay, Lehigh Co., Pa., was born Jan. 11, 1868, in Spring township, Lebanon Co., Pa. He was educated at the old homestead near Walter Spring, and was five years old when his parents moved to Sinking Spring, where he attended public school in the lower and middle stone school building. Later he attended the Charter Oak Academy, taught by Thomas J. Oberlin, in his district, and in the spring of 1885 entered the State Normal School at Kutztown, graduating from that institution in 1887. Through the efforts of his teacher, Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, and his thirst for higher education, he decided to take a college course. In 1887-88 he took the college preparatory course at the Normal school, and in the fall of 1888 entered Lebanon College and Lebanon Theological Seminary at Lancaster, Pa., graduating therefrom in 1892.

The same year he entered the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at Lancaster. In 1895 he taught mathematics at the Keystone State Normal School, and he also engaged in canvassing a few summers before his graduation from the theological seminary. In 1895. He had been licensed as a public school teacher when but sixteen years old, by Prof. D. S. Keck. During his college course he specialized in mathematics, in which he is a master. One of his classmates expressed the opinion that had he chosen to continue teaching, he would have filled a chair in mathematics in one of the higher institutions of learning. He also took a very active interest in college athletics, playing on the football team as right tackle for five years. He is six feet and a half inch in height, and built proportionately, and he was generally known as the "impregnable stone wall." The college team saw the "golden age" of its athletic glories during his attendance, defeating nearly all the other college foot-ball teams played against.

Mr. Krick was manager of the team for one year.

On May 22, 1895, Thomas H. Krick was licensed by the Lebanon Classis of the Reformed Church, and on July 7, 1895, he was ordained by a committee of the East Pennsylvania Classis. He began his pastorate at Winnsboro, E. and from which charge he served with high merit for the period of six years. During this time he raised a debt of $1,500 on the church property within one year, remodeled the basement of the church, increased the membership greatly, and the collections for benevolent purposes were increased.

In August, 1903, he accepted a call from the Coplay charge, which is in the cement regions of the Lehigh valley. It consists of three churches, Trinity Reformed at Coplay, St. John's at Mickleys and St. John's at Fullerton. During the seven years of Mr. Krick's incumbency the membership has increased from 120 to 400, and in 1907 the congregation erected one of the finest parsonages belonging to the Reformed Church. At Mickley's a new Sunday-school room was added through his efforts, and in 1902 he organized the Fullerton congregation, which now consists of 167 members.

Mr. Krick is a leading and active member of the Classis of the Reformed Church of the United States, highly esteemed by his brethren for his efficient work, his high character and pleasant disposition. He is secretary of the Spiritual Conference of Ministers and Laymen of the Reformed Church. In 1908 he was elected president of the Lehigh Valley Ministerial Association. He was a delegate in 1899 to the General Synod of the Reformed Church of the United States, which met at Tiffin, Ohio, and in 1908 at York, Pa. He was delegate to the District Synod which met at Elizabethtown in 1898, to the Synod when it met at Lancaster and delegate to its meetings at Sunbury, Pennsylvania, Lebanon and Reading. In 1898 he was president of the East Pennsylvania Classis. His executive ability and skill as an organizer are generally recognized, and he is as highly regarded in his own congregations as he is in other relations. He is a forceful and eloquent preacher, officiating in two languages, and ably proclaims the Word to whose spread he has devoted his life.

For a number of years Mr. Krick took a deep and active interest in the history and genealogy of his own and other families, and in 1907 founded the Krick Family Reunion, which in 1908 held its second reunion on the ancestral acres and was largely attended. He traces his genealogy through the following families: Hoh, Van Reed, Hottenstein, Yost, Herbine, Reber, Bright, Kershner, Bohn, Klieger, Kissinger, Womernin, Sopahan and Krick. He has given considerable time to research on most of these families.

On Nov. 21, 1895, Rev. Mr. Krick was united in marriage with Jennie P. Hain, daughter of Peter L. and Sue L. (Oberholtzer) Hain, of Heidelberg township, and a descendant of George Hain (Hohn), who granted the land upon which is erected the Hains Reformed Church. To Mr. and Mrs. Krick have been born two daughters: Marie H., born July 21, 1898; and Ruth H., born May 12, 1901. Mrs. Krick is an ideal minister's wife and is prominently identified with every phase of church work.

RICHARD B. KRICK, a retired citizen of Sinking Spring, was born Feb. 1, 1835, on the original homestead of Frantz Krick, in what is now Spring township, son of Jacob Krick (son of Francis (3)). He began his education in the pay schools which were then in vogue in his district, attending the old pay school held in the eight-corned school-house which is so fully written up in the archives of the Berks County Historical Society, he having supplied the major part of the information for the article mentioned. Later, when the free schools were established, he attended them for three years. He taught school in the spring years. Much of his education, however, has been self-acquired, and he has "read and observed with intelligence all his long life.

Mr. Krick was reared on the homestead, where he worked until he was thirty years old, and in the spring townships of Northampton and Lehigh counties. He farmed in Spring township, where he continued agricultural pursuits successfully for twenty years. He built the present house on this farm which he still owns, in about 1874, and had previously put up the barn, in 1868. This place was originally a Rollman tract. It comprises sixty-seven acres, and is one of the best farms in the valley. In 1887 he retired to the small tract at Sinking Spring where he has since made his home.

Mr. Krick is a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted at Reading Oct. 27, 1865, for a period of nine months. He actually served, however, but fifteen days, until Aug. 19, 1865, as sergeant of Company E, 107th Pa. V. I. He saw active service at the battle of the Deserted Farm (where his colonel was mortally wounded) and was on picket duty when they fought at Carrsville, Virginia.

Mr. Krick is a Democrat in political opinion and has occupied some position of influence in the community. During the past nine consecutive years as school director of Spring township and meantime acted as president of the board; he was also auditor of the district for a number of years. He is much respected in his district. and has always been known as a good citizen. In spite of his advanced age his mind is clear and he is well preserved in every way.

On Oct. 27, 1859, Mr. Krick married Emma Bickel, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Miller) Bickel, of Reading. She died Dec. 17, 1908, aged seventy years, eight days, and rests in the family plot at Sinking Spring. To Mr. and Mrs. Krick were born three children: Albert died when one year old. Lizzie S., born in 1861, married Miller Evans, of Reading, and died in 1902, the mother of six children, Annie (deceased), Emma, John, Richard, Fred, and Frank (the last named deceased). Jacob B. is mentioned below.

Mr. Krick and his family are members of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring, of which he served as trustee for three years, deacon for some years, and elder two years. He has always been active in the work and enterprises of the church, and is a director of the Sinking Spring Union Cemetery Company. He is a member of Castle No. 334, K. G. E., of Sinking Spring, and has been treasurer since its organization in 1889. He is also active in the Krick Family Reunion Association, and in 1908 made the welcome address at the annual gathering. He has a resourceful mind, and was of great assistance to the historian of the Reunion Association, and also to the volunter.

JACOB B. KRICK, son of Richard B., was born in Spring township, June 23, 1867, and was educated in the local public schools and Charter Oak Academy, as well as the select school known as Carroll Institute on North Fourth street, Reading, then under the care of Prof. Patrick Carroll. Later he entered Lafayette College, but he left that institution to accept a responsible position with the Enterprise Manufacturing Company, of Philadelphia, in whose service he has been since 1889. The company employs 750 persons. Mr. Krick is a member of the Order of Independent Americans. He is unmarried.

HENRY B. KRICK was born in Spring township, Berks county, Jan. 16, 1839, son of Daniel and Susan (Bohn) Krick, and died Aug. 3, 1906, and is buried at Sinking Spring. He was reared to farm life, and soon after his marriage began farming near Sinking Spring, where he lived many years. He later moved to a tract along the pine a half mile above Sinkink Spring, where he lived until his death. His farm consisted of about 150 acres, and belonged to his father. The Henry B. Krick residence is now the property of Robert Lance.

Mr. Krick was a Democrat in politics, and held the office of school director. During the Civil war he served as a soldier and contracted rheumatism, from which he suffered all the rest of his life, and which in fact caused his retirement from active work quite early in life. He was prominent and influential in his community, and was highly esteemed by all.

Mr. Krick married Catharine Smith, daughter of Daniel and Annie (Funk) Smith, of near Denver, Lancaster county. She died Dec. 5, 1904, in the sixty-first year of her age. Five children blessed this union: Daniel, who died in infancy; Anna S., residing at West Reading; Stephen, who died in infancy; Daisy, who resides at No. 521 Weiser street, Reading; and Laura, who died in infancy.

JOHN L. SCHARFF, a resident of Reading since 1887, was born March 27, 1837, at Host, in Tulpehocken township, Berks county. He is a descendant in the fifth generation from Conrad Scharff, the ancestor of a family which became numerous in western Berks county, a few of whose descendants still reside in the vicinity.

(I) Conrad Scharff (also spelled Sharff and Scharff, though Scharff is the correct form) was born March 22, 1697, in Germany, and in 1709 landed at New York with his parents. They located at Livingstone Manor, in New York, but later with many other German families, settled at Schoharie, where they lived in peace and contentment until about 1719. In 1733 thirty-three families moved to Pennsylvania, settling in Tulpehocken, some fifteen miles west of the Schuylkill river. Among these settlers were George and Peter Reith, Gottfried Fitter, Conrad Schuetz, Antonius Lauer, Andreae Walborn, Lorenz Zerbe, Sebastian Fischer, Johan Peter Pacht, Johann Adam Lerch and George Ansbach. In 1738 fifteen other families left the Schoharie and settled in the same vicinity, among this colony being Conrad Scharff. He was a farmer by occupation. It is not known what relationship existed between Conrad Scharff, and Conrad Scharff, but it is likely that they were brothers. Conrad Scharff died May 15, 1776. His wife, Maria Margaret, born July 28, 1721, died April 20, 1781. These pioneers are buried in the graveyard of the Little Tulpehocken Church. On Oct. 10, 1772, Conrad Scharff lived in Schoharie, where he lived in peace and contentment until about 1719. He conducted a farm in the vicinity of Cross Keys, and died Aug. 26, 1845. He is buried at Tulpehocken Church. His family included a son, John, and a daughter, Joanna.

(II) Georg (George) Scharff, the eldest son of Conrad, lived in Heidelberg township, Berks county, where he died some time in the year 1826. He was a farmer, and left his farm by will to his son John. His last will and testament, made in 1825, was witnessed by John and Paul Wenrich. It is in the old style of German script, written in very fine letters, and is exceedingly hard to interpret and almost impossible of translation. It mentions a daughter Elizabeth, who it appears was twice married, one of her husbands being John Riesar, by whom she had John, Samuel and Maria Riesar.

(II) John B. Scharff, younger son of Conrad, was born in Tulpehocken township, he died some time during 1838, his will having been entered on Dec. 20th of that year. It is written in German, was made April 20, 1829, and is on record in Will Book VIII, page 93. His wife, Rosina, must have died prior to the making of this document. The following children are mentioned: Johanna, Johan Georg, Daniel, and Susanna (born July 8, 1788, died March 6, 1857, m. Leonard Zerbe).

(III) Johan Georg Scharff, son of John, born April 6, 1790, died May 28, 1861, in his seventy-second year. He lived and died on his farm near Stoungsbury, which consisted of 151 acres, and which was inherited by his daughter Harriet. After his death, his farm passed to his son Willoughby, who took charge of its management. Harriet died unmarried; Eliza married Benjamin Miller; Rebecca married Isaac H. Wenrich; Willoughby is mentioned below; Jonathan never married; Edward died when young.

(IV) Willoughby Scharff, son of Johan Georg, was born in Mill Creek township, Lebanon Co., Pa., Oct. 10, 1825, and died Jan. 5, 1907, in his eighty-second year. When he was two years old he was brought by his parents to a farm near Stoungsbury, and there he spent the remainder of his life, following farming throughout his active years. He was a Democrat, and served as school director of Marion township. He and his family were members of Christ Lutheran Church. His wife, Mary (Wilhelm), was a daughter of Jacob and Barbara Wilhelm. They had four children: Amanda, Morris W., John W. (a cigar-maker at Stoungsbury) and Emma M.

In 1878 Morris W. Scharff married Amanda E. Peiffer, daughter of Philip and Maria (Zerbe) Peiffer, and they have had two children, Mary E. and Horace P. The daughter married John J. Swalm and lives in Reading. Mr. Scharff is a member and officer of Christ Lutheran Church.

(III) Daniel Scharff, son of John, born Sept. 4, 1793, in Tulpehocken township, died June 17, 1866, in his seventy-third year. He was a farmer, and also conducted the "Cross Keys hotel" and ware house for many years. He died in the vicinity of Cross Keys Canal, in many years. On June 30, 1813, he married Rebecca Leiss Forrer, born May 7, 1789, died Aug. 9, 1847, and to them were born two children, Isaac and Mary, the latter the wife of Jonathan Kloppe, a hotel proprietor in Stoungsbury, Berks Co., and later a miller at Selinsgrove, Pa. Mr. Scharff, when his daughter moved to Selinsgrove, became a resident of Weimesdorff, and lived in the family of his granddaughter, Mrs. George Filbert, but died while at the home of his daughter, on a visit, and he is buried at Host, Berks county.

(IV) Isaac Scharff, son of Daniel, was born Aug. 22, 1814, in the vicinity of Cross Keys, and died Aug. 26, 1845, aged thirty-one years, four months and is buried at Tulpehocken Church. In his youth he attended the Harrisburg Academy for several winters, while he assisted his father on the farm during the winter months. He married Rebecca Leiss (1813-1847), daughter of John Leiss and Rebecca Leiss. In 1837 he moved his family to his farm about a mile east of Myerstown, Lebanon Co., Pa., and became the farmer thereof. He was inclined to music, and more than ordinarily skilled in mechanics. He organized the Washington Band of Myerstown, and conducted the same until his death. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. He lived in the vicinity of Cross Keys. His son John married Lily S.
Maria, who died young; Emma (deceased), m. to George Filbert, after she had finished her education at Linden Hall, Lititz, Pa.; and William.

(V) William Scharff, son of Isaac and Rebecca, attended the common schools, and Academy in Myerstown and finished his education at the Jonestown Institute for some time, and had many students in Womelsdorf and vicinity. In the spring of 1888 he moved his family to Kansas City, Mo., where he still continues his profession. During the Civil War, he enlisted with the band, of Womelsdorf, and did camp service in Camp Cameron at Harrisburg for about two months when his band transferred to Philadelphia, Pa., and mustered into Company E, of the 90th Pa. V. I., as private musician Nov. 26, 1861. He left with the regiment the following spring, for the seat of war, but was taken sick, and placed in the hospital at Washington, where he was discharged and returned home by his own application after many days, and followed his profession again.

(V) John L. Scharff was born March 27, 1837, at Host, Berks county, on the farm of his grandfather John Leiss. In April following, he was taken to his father's farm in Jackson township, Lebanon county, and spent the winter in Myerstown, where he spent his youth, and attended the Myerstown Academy of which his father was a stock-holder. About the age of seventeen he became a teacher in the public schools under Prof. Henry Houck, then Superintendent of schools in Lebanon county, now the honored Secretary of internal affairs in Pennsylvania. In 1857 and 1858, he was a student of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., after which he lived with his widowed aunt in Host (Mrs. John S. Leiss), where he again spent his time in teaching school. In 1860 he became a regiment of Womelsdorf Band, singing in the band (Mrs. Geo. Filbert's) family. He cast his first vote for the great Lincoln, and has been a warm Republican ever since. He was a charter member of the Minnehaha Cornet Band of Womelsdorf, in which he took a deep interest, and in September, 1861, went with the same to Harrisburg, and enlisted as Regimental Band, doing camp duties in Camp Cameron until some time in November, when the Band was transferred to Philadelphia, and on the 26th of that month, were mustered as private musicians for three years in the 90th Pa. V. I. He became a member of Company H of that regiment, and spent the winter in Camp on Nicetown Lane in Philadelphia. In the early spring of 1862, he left with the Regiment for the seat of war, and participated in the battle at White Mountain, and on the 18th day of the following September, was discharged with the band by an order of the Adjutant General at Washington, D.C., July 2, 1863. He was mustered as a member of Company K, 42nd Pa. V. I. for ninety days, and was again discharged on August 11th, following.

On May 18, 1866, Mr. Scharff married Miss Ottila Moyer, daughter of Henry and Anna (Hain) Moyer, of Womelsdorf, Pa. Mr. Scharff then taught the grammar school of Womelsdorf and was also a member of the band, singing at the same time organist and superintendent of the Sunday school of Zion's Church of the same place, and Secretary of Williamston Lodge No. 307, F. & A. M., of which he is still a member. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Scharff: Eva, William, Emma, Ella and Annie. Eva was given a liberal education on the piano by her uncle, and was a teacher on the same, and connected with Church Choirs and the Choral Societies of the able Prof. Ed. Berg, and Mrs. Dr. Howel of Reading. She was domestically inclined, and remained unmarried with her parents. William became a clarinetist and played with the Franklin Band of Philadelphia, a number of years. He was a cigar packer by trade, and died June 25, 1897. Emma was a singer by trade, and a proficient performer on the piano. She was also a teacher of music, and continued his firm with the Franklin Band of Philadelphia, for a number of years. She was a member of the Ringgold Band. He is a member of McLean Post No. 16, G. A. R.; and a member of Grace Lutheran Church of Reading. His home is at No. 349 South Third Street.

WELLINGTON I. ADDAMS, youngest son of Isaac Addams, was born on the old farm about two miles from Sinking Springs, in Berks county, Pa., and received his school education at the grammar school near his home. After that he attended the Freeland Seminary, in Chester county, Pa., and finished at Bellefonte College, in Centre county, Pa. He then went to Philadelphia and took a course at Crittenden's Commercial College, and at once entered the foreign and domestic woolen commission house of T. C. Adams and Co., and continued this for several years. He then took a four months' trip to Europe, visiting England, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy, and on his return went into business for himself as "W. J. Addams & Co., foreign and domestic woolens on commission," at No. 611 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Mr. Addams now married the youngest daughter, Sarah N., of Mr. Robert K. Neff, in 1873, and built a home in Germantown, where they lived for more than twenty-five years. His son Robert N. Addams, better known as "Bob Addams," the caricature artist for "Life," "Judge" and "Puck," made his home in New York, and is well known both here and abroad. His son Clifford J. Addams won the first scholarship prize, $200, at the Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia in 1899, and then started for Paris, entered the art school of Mr. James McNeill Whistler, and continued his studies there until the death of the famous master, after which he was introduced to Mrs. Addams, married Miss Inez Bate, an English lady, who had also studied art under Mr. Whistler, at the same time; Mr. Clifford J. Addams is now living in London, and has painted many important people during the last eight years. Miss Florence Biddle Addams, the only daughter of Mr. Wellington I. Addams, a few years ago married Mr. Robert G. Fell, and lives at their place, "Roslyn," Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Addams retired from business during the fall of 1902 and with his family traveled extensively abroad. He is fond of traveling and now contemplates a tour of the world for 1910. The family spent several winters in the south of France, sojourning at Menton, Cannes, Naples, Carlo, Nice, etc., and made many delightful acquaintances with fellow travelers from London, Paris, Berlin, etc.

ADDAMS. The Addams family are of English ancestry and tradition says they came from Leeds. In their early religious belief they were members of the Church of England, but in later life they became identified with the Reformed Church. They were prominent in the war of the Revolution. Many of their descendants have continued as residents of Pennsylvania. During the life of the Whig party they took an active interest in its support and success. The progenitor of those descendants who have been in Berks county was the father of Robert Addams, of Ledwell, in Oxfordshire, England. Robert is supposed to have emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1681, and then purchased from William Penn 500 acres in Philadelphia county. He was not married, and had a number of nephews and nieces, including William.

(1) William Addams settled in Cocolico township, Lancaster Co., Pa., early in the eighteenth century. In 1751 he laid out the town which is now the borough of Adamstown. He was married Ann Lane of Philadelphia, and they had five sons, Isaac, Abraham, Samuel, Richard and William, and one daughter. Two of these sons, William and Isaac, removed to Berks county, and settled in Heidelberg (now Spring) township. William married Barbara Ruth, and after his death his brother Isaac married the widow.

(II) Isaac Addams, above named, was a prominent man of his day. He was born where Adamstown is now situated, Jan. 27, 1754, and died Oct. 15, 1809, at his residence in Heidelberg township, where he had lived for many years. He was a farmer for some years and then a leading merchant of Reading. In 1776 he was captain of a company of Light Infantry attached to Maj. Peter Grubb's Battalion of Associates in Lancaster county. He was a commissioner of Berks county from 1797 to 1800, and a member of the Assembly from Berks county in 1804 and 1805. He died and resued: William, Samuel, Isaac, Peter, Abraham and John.

(III) William Addams, son of Isaac, was born in Lancaster county March 9, 1777. Early in life he went to Berks county, settling on Cacoococreek, at the Addams homestead, near the old road to Eckert, and here his descendants lived for many generations. "He had a high sense of integrity, good sense and unostentatious sincerity of purpose," won for him a high place in the esteem of the people, and he was frequently called upon to fill positions of honor and trust. In 1813 and 1814 he was county auditor; 1814 and 1817, county commissioner; 1822 and 1824, member of the State Legislature; 1829-49, associate judge of the county; 1835-59, a representative in Congress from Berks county; and twice a Presidential elector. He served as captain of the Reading Troop for many years. He died at his home in Spring township March 21, 1858, aged eighty-one years. He married (first) Eva Van Reed, and they had five children; Josiah, who died in 1860; Rufus Davenport; Richard; Rebecca; Josiah; and Amelia, wife of John H. Van Reed. He married (second) Catharine Huy Van Reed, widow of John Van Reed, and by her had three children: William, John and Valeria (m. John Knapp).

(IV) Isaac Addams, son of Isaac (2), was born Jan. 3, 1804, at Adamstown, but his parents left that place and settled on a farm along the Cacoococreek in Berks county when he was but three years of age. He was educated in the old "pay" schools of the county, and remained at home helping his father on the farm until he attained his majority. He then followed farming on his own account, until his forty-ninth year, when he retired from active labor. In 1839 he moved to Reading, residing on Penn street until 1845, when he took up his residence at No. 52 North Fifth street, where he died in 1854. He, too, was a Whig. In his early life he was at the top of the state militia. He married Rebecca Haak (daughter of John and Elizabeth (Krause) Haak), born in 1789, died in 1866. The remains of both were buried in the family lot in the Charles Evans cemetery. They had four children: Henrietta C. died unmarried; Charles, who died unmarried; Rebecca Van Reed; and they had four children, John V. R. (unmarried), Annie V. R. (who died unmarried in 1909), Mary (who died unmarried) and Charles; Rebecca J. died unmarried in 1899; Wellington I. is mentioned above.

RUFUS ADDAMS (deceased), a well-known farmer along the Cacoococreek, in Spring township, Berks county, was born in that township Sept. 30, 1855, son of Isaac and Rebecca (Haak) Addams. His early training was all along agricultural lines, and he devoted himself all his life to the cultivation of farms in lower Berks county. His comfortable house was frequently occupied by Jacob Haak in 1734, but was remodeled by Mr. Addams in 1892. He also built an addition which made it a very comfortable house, and as well the Swiss barn, 85 x 85 feet. Mr. Addams also owned a farm of 116 acres in Heidelberg township, and this is now the property of his daughter. He retired from active work about ten years before his death, Aug. 12, 1894. He and his family were members of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring, and there in the cemetery connected with that church is the family burial lot.

Mr. Addams married Rebecca Van Reed, who was born March 8, 1840, daughter of Charles and Margaret (Zacharias) Van Reed. She passed away May 2, 1900. Four children came to bless this union, namely: John V. R.; Annie V. R., who died in 1909, aged fifty-five years, seven months, twenty-three days (she was a member of the Reformed Church at Sinking Spring); Mary V. R., who died Jan. 13, 1873, aged twenty-one years; and Charles, born in 1860, who married Annie Gruber, and died aged thirty-one years, the father of two sons, Clinton G. and Charles D.

John V. R. Addams and his sister, Annie V. R. Addams resided together on the old homestead farm, and there Miss Addams died. The place has been given the best of care, and kept with the same care which they had exercised before them. Mr. Addams received his early education in the public schools, later attending Dickinson Seminary, at Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Pennsylvania.

MARTIN D. GRILL, a well known young business man of Berks county, Pa., who is engaged in the manufacture of hosiery at Mohnton, was born Oct. 20, 1874, in Cumru township, son of Adam M. and Sarah (De-wees) Grill.

Adam Grill, the grandfather of Martin D. was a native of Spring township, Berks county, where he was born Aug. 22, 1793. He spent his life in agricultural pursuits in Cumru township, where he owned a tract of 155 acres of land, and here he died May 21, 1858. He married Catharine Mohn, born Jan. 11, 1800, who died March 21, 1848, daughter of Daniel and Barbara (Barrett) Mohn, and there were ten children born to this union: Samuel, m. to Betsy von Neida; Elizabeth, m. to Henry von Neida; Catharine, m. to Chris. Kress; Polly, m. to Richard Hornberger; Levi, m. to Polly Eshelman; Sally, m. to Nicholas Mosser; Adam M., Lydia, m. to James Leininger; Daniel, m. to Mary Maiz; and Henry, m. to Sally Eshelman.

Adam M. Grill was born Oct. 17, 1835, and was reared on the homestead, where he lived until 1904, when he retired and removed to Church street, Mohnton. Since 1897 he has conducted a milk route into Mohsville. He owns a twenty-six acre farm about two miles northwest of that village. In politics he is a Republican. He and his family attend Zion's Evangelical Church, of which he was a class leader, treasurer and trustee at Mohnton's Hill.

Adam M. Grill was married Nov. 6, 1860, to Sarah D., born Jan. 17, 1841, daughter of John M. and Leab G. (Matz) Dewees, and five children were born to this union: William D. m. Ida Miller, and has two children, Leo and Harry; Alice R. died unmarried at the age of twenty-eight years; F. Pierce D. m. Annie H. Fisher, and has three children, Stephen E., Leroy F., and Lillie F.; Martin D.; and Quinton D. is unmarried.

Martin D. Grill received his education in the public schools of Cumru township, and the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, Pa. During the spring terms of 1894, 1895 and 1896, Mr. Grill was engaged in teaching in Spring township, and from the latter year until 1907, was engaged in the manufacture of men's seamless half hose, under the firm name of the Electrical Hosier Company. Thirty hands are now employed at his factory, and these high grade goods find a ready sale throughout the State.

Z. M. Grill was married to Hannah R. Weidner, daughter of John Y. and Catharine (Hornberger) Weidner, and three children were born to this union: John, Stanley and Forest. In politics Mr. Grill is a Republican, while in religious belief he and Mrs. Grill are connected with the United Evangelical Church. Fra-tioned honors have been accorded him by the Knights of Pythias of Mohnton, and the F. O. S. of A., No. 211. Mr. and Mrs. Grill reside in their own home in Mohnton, which Mr. Grill purchased in 1898.

John M. Dewees, grandfather of Martin D. Grill, was a son of William and Elizabeth Martin Dewees, and working at the same trade as his father, that of a shop-carpenter, making all kinds of household furniture. He was also an undertaker, making his own coffins. In 1833, he was commissioned Captain of the 12th Company, 5th Regiment of the Mil-tia of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in the 2nd Brigade, of the 6th Division, composed of the counties of Dauphin, Lebanon, Berks and Schuylkill, his commission bearing date Aug. 3, 1833, and good until Aug. 3, 1842, given and signed by Gov. Joseph B. Kline, a newspaper extract of the minutes of the peace, his first commission bearing date of 1840. He was a justice from the aforesaid date until 1879, his last commission bearing date of April 13, 1874, good until 1879, having held the office for nearly forty years. Legal papers made and issued by him are noted for their neatness, accuracy and execution. Lawyers and court officials often complimented him on his elegant penmanship which he did mostly with the quill. In 1834 he married Leah G. Matz (born Feb. 11, 1812) daughter of George Matz. They had three daughters: Kauffman, M. M., Samuel F. Coldren; Sarah M. m. Adam M. Grill; and Rachel M. m. Jere H. Miller. John M. Dewees was a man of ordinary means, and proved himself to be of great usefulness in this section between the 1840 and 1875. He was a prolific writer in the education system provided by the Act of 1854, and in 1855, when an effort was made to repeal this act he labored hard to interest the people and explain to them the importance of educational advantages provided for by this act. He was a lover of music, especially of the fiddle, zither and accordion. He was the first to introduce the small square dance in Berks township. He died Dec. 14, 1883, and is buried at Mohns Hill burying ground.

JAMES G. KAUFFMAN, farmer and lifelong resident of Centre township, Berks county, was born there Sept. 21, 1862, son of David and Elizabeth (Greim) Kauffman. He is of the fifth generation of his family in Berks county, where his great-great-grandfather settled about the middle of the eighteenth century.

Jacob Kauffman came to America on the ship "Phoenix" landing Sept. 15, 1740, with 550 other passengers from Zweibrucken, Nassau, Wurtemberg and the Palatinate. He and two brothers located in Lancaster county, Pa., but the land there was not what he wanted, so he did not remain long. He did not want to undertake the work of clearing away the forest which then covered that region, and land which could be had for $1.00 an acre. He sold his stock, seemed to him more desirable, so with one brother he came to Berks county, settling in Bern (now Upper Bern) township. He took up a large tract of land in the fertile valley at the foot of the Blue Mountain, near the present site of St. Michael’s Church, recieving a patent for seven hundred acres, part of which was meadow land, with an abundant water supply. He built a log house with a cellar, particularly adapted for defense against the Indians, there being no opening which afforded an easy entrance, and an attack could be repeatedly. The first few settlers then in the vicinity suffered much from the treachery and depredations of the Indians, and they accordingly established a military post, the men carrying their guns when they went forth to their work in the morning and returning to the fort when their day’s work was done. This state of affairs continued from 1754 to 1764, but with all their precautions about one hundred settlers were killed, a brother of Jacob Kauffman being among the number. Jacob Kauffman, himself had many thrilling adventures and some narrow escapes from death, but he continued to work and pro-spor and in time reared a well-to-do man. In later life he prepared a substantial stone mansion upon his farm, and this dwelling is still standing in a good state of preservation. He followed farming on his old homestead until his death in 1804, and he left a tract of a little over one hundred acres (the old homestead) to his son Yost; this is now owned by the John Kauffman Estates, the sixth generation. Jacob Kauffman was buried at St. Michael’s Church, of which he was one of the promoters and an active member. He reared a large family of children, and it is said that his sons became great hunters, deer at that time being very plentiful in that section. Tradition has it that a gun never not seen fired by one of his descendants has killed as many as two hundred deer.

Philip Kauffman, son of Jacob, born Dec. 21, 1737, died Nov. 17, 1843. He was buried at St. Michael’s Lutheran Church, of which he was a member. He served as a soldier in the Revolutionary War. For many years he carried on farming, living on a portion of the original tract taken up by his father, where he remained until his death. He married Magdalena Seaman, daughter of Ludwig Seaman, and to them were born eleven children, seven sons and four daughters.

Philip Kauffman, son of Philip, was born Sept. 24, 1790, in Bern township, after his marriage locating in Centre township. He was reared to farming, and followed that vocation throughout his active years, buying 100 acres in Centre township, now known as the Bushong farm, and also owning 120 acres adjoining the tract. He did not engage in active labors for fifteen years prior to his death, but lived on his own farm. He was a member of the Lutheran congregation of Bellem’s Church, and in politics was a stanch Democrat.

On Feb. 26, 1814, Mr. Kauffman married Magdalena Ke~lin, April 15, 1793, died June 14, 1846, and he survived her many years. He died Dec. 17, 1861, and he is buried at Bellem’s Church. Twelve children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman, namely: Elizabeth, deceased, wife of Valentine Spatz; William, deceased, of Centre township; David, who is mentioned further on; Mary, deceased, wife of John Rothenberger; Lavina, wife of William Logan, of Centre township; Catharine, widow of Dr. John Spatz, of Centreport; Sallie, decessed, wife of John Kauffman; Matilda, deceased, widow of John Rothenberger, of Reading; Levi, decessed, who lived in Leesport; Lydia, deceased, wife of Leonard Schock, of Leesport; Deborah, deceased, and George, deceased, whose family live at Pottstown.

David Kauffman, son of David, was born Nov. 1, 1820, in Bern township, where he was reared, attending the public schools and growing up into an intimate knowledge of farm work. He followed farming on his father’s farm, and prior to his death, he married Emma F. Spatz, who inherited from a widower which is now the property of his son James G. There he carried on general agriculture until eleven years before his death, when he retired, settling in Leesport, where he enjoyed a well-earned competency. Besides the home place he owned two farms in Bern township, one of 120 acres and another of 108 acres, as well as his fine home in Leesport. He was a staunch Democrat and took an active part in the public affairs of his community as well as in religious matters, being a prominent Lutheran member of Bellemans Church, which he served for a number of years as deacon and elder.

Mr. Kaufman married Nov. 24, 1849, Elizabeth Greim, born April 20, 1824, daughter of John and Sarah (Wertman) Greim, of Bern township. He died July 28, 1897, at the age of seventy-six years, and Mrs. Kaufman passed away Jan. 6, 1898, aged seventy-three years; they are buried side by side at Bellemans Church. They had children as follows: Sarah, deceased; Harry, a farmer, of Centre township; Isabella, deceased, m. Isaac Bagenstose, who was a farmer of Bern township; John is deceased; Elizabeth is deceased; David is deceased; Catherine (deceased) m. Samuel Moser; James G. is mentioned below; Louisa G. m. John Winter, of Reading.

James G. Kaufman received his education in the public schools of Centre township, the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, and the Central State Normal School at Lock Haven, Pa. He was twenty when he left school, after which he engaged in farming with his father until 1886, when he took up farming on his own account. In 1886 he purchased the farm of 161 acres formerly owned by his father, a fertile tract supplied with very fine spring water. This farm was first purchased from the Pennsylvania proprietors in 1749 by Benjamin Lightfoot, a pioneer of Berks county, and was purchased by David Kaufman, father of the present owner, in 1856. Mr. Kaufman not only carries on farming, but also breeds stock, fattens cattle, and carries on a dairy business.

On Jan. 30, 1886, Mr. Kaufman married Mary L. Hartman, daughter of George C. and Rebecca J. (Leinbach) Hartman, of Bern township, and nine children were born of this union. Mention is made of the following: George L., b. March 28, 1891; who died Sept. 24, 1897; David Benjamin H., a graduate of the Perkiomen Seminary, 1908, and now a student at State College (he taught school three terms); Laura Rebecca H., who died Aug. 21, 1899; George Robert H., who is a teacher in Bern township at present; James Leinbach H., who is a student at the Keystone State Normal School; Mabel Elizabeth H.; John Greim H., deceased; Irvin Hartman; and Harry E. H. Mr. Kaufman and members of his family belong to Bellemans Lutheran Church at Dauberville, in Centre township, and he has served several years as deacon of that congregation.

In politics Mr. Kaufman is a prominent member of the Democratic party in his locality, and he has acted upon several occasions as delegate to county and State conventions. He has been the choice of his party for a number of local offices, having been elected assessor of the township shortly after he reached his majority, served two terms as school director, and since 1901 has served as justice of the peace. He was appointed to the office in May of that year, and was elected in the fall of the same year. His services in every position have been highly acceptable.

Mrs. Mary L. (Hartman) Kaufman comes of a family that has been well represented in the educational world. She was born in Bern township March 25, 1863, daughter of George C. and Rebecca Jane (Leinbach) Hartman, of the borough of West Leesport. She was the eldest of eight children—six sons and two daughters—the others being: Carrie Jane, m. to M. S. Parvin, of East Berkley; Capt. J. D. L.; a graduate of West Point Military Academy, now a captain in the First U. S. Cavalry, and stationed in the Philippines; Rev. George W., pastor of St. John's Reformed Church at Orwigsburg; Dr. Irvin H., of Reading; Prof. F. G., schoolmaster; Prof. M., Scotch Schools, New Jersey; Harry E., a member of the real estate firm of Barber, Hartman & Co., Philadelphia; and Prof. Winfield L., instructor in Latin and Greek in Perkiomen Seminary. Mrs. Kaufman is a member of the Reformed Church, and is greatly interested in the cause of education, having done much to inspire in her children an ambition for learning. She has been a faithful wife and mother, and her home is most pleasant and hospitable.

JOHN H. BOYER, a substantial farmer and highly esteemed citizen of Amity township, Berks county, and a veteran of the Civil war, was born Dec. 2, 1848, in Exeter township, Berks county, son of Abraham S. and Lucetta Holloway Boyer, and a member of an old and representative family of the lower end of Berks county.

The emigrant ancestor of the Boyer family was John Philip Boyer, who came from the Palatinate to Philadelphia in 1731, with a number of children. He settled in Frederick township, Montgomery county, but later lived in Amity township, Berks county, where he died in the spring of 1753, at a ripe old age. He belonged to the Swamp Lutheran Church, and was buried by the pastor, Rev. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, who reports the matter fully in the "Hallemschen Nachrichten." His will is on record at the Philadelphia courthouse, and in it some of his children are named. Among his sons were: Jacob, the ancestor of the Boyertown branch of the family; and Johann Heinrich.

Johann Heinrich Boyer was born in 1714, in the Pfalz, Germany, and died May 2, 1814, in the one hundredth year of his age. In 1743 he was married to Magdalena Kirchner, and among his children—six sons and one daughter—were:

Philip Boyer, born Dec. 14, 1754, died July 31, 1832. His wife, Christiana, who was born in 1754, also died in 1832, and both were buried in the old graveyard at Amityville. Philip Boyer made a will the year before his death, while a resident of Amity township, and in it bequeathed to his son Philip, who had a son Philip; John; Peter; Mary, m. to George Koch; and Daniel, born in 1792, who died in 1825.

Heinrich Boyer was a son of Johann Heinrich. His father was called the "Danzinger." They had children: Jeremiah, born April 26, 1810, died March 3, 1848, and his wife Nellie, born Dec. 30, 1807, died Dec. 12, 1883, aged seventy-five years, eleven months, thirteen days; Anna Maria, born 1812, died 1832; and Isaac, born 1817, died 1839. All of these Boys are buried in the graveyard at Amityville.

Philip Boyer (also spelled Beyer), grandfather of John H. Boyer, was a grandson of the emigrant John Philip Boyer. He was a farmer in Exeter township. Many years ago he married and conducted what is now the 'Stonersville Hotel.' He was born March 16, 1775, and died Aug. 21, 1836, aged sixty-one years, five months, five days, and was buried in the Amityville graveyard. He married Elizabeth Schrack, born Jan. 18, 1780, died June 3, 1833, aged fifty-three years, four months, fifteen days. They had ten children, as follows: Mary, John, Samuel, Jacob, William, Hannah, Lucy, Abraham S., and two died in infancy, unnamed.

Abraham S. Boyer, father of John H., was a farmer in Exeter township, June 19, 1821, and died May 2, 1905, in Amity township, aged eighty-three years, ten months, thirteen days. In his early years he worked as a farm laborer, but later was engaged in farming in Oley, Heidelberg, and Heidelberg, but in later years he opened up Amity townships, dying in Amity as stated above. His remains rest in the Amityville cemetery. In religious faith he was a Lutheran and he served in the offices of deacon and elder in the Amityville Church. In his political views he was a Democrat, and he served both as school director and as township supervisor. He married (first) Lucetta Holloway, born Dec. 17, 1830, and (second) Betty Boyer, Aug. 13, 1857, aged thirty-six years, four months, twenty-six days. They had seven children, namely: John H.; Charles F., deceased in infancy; Sarah E.; Morris L. H., residing at Reading; George M. deceased in-

John H. Boyer was reared on his father's farm which he left for the first time when he enlisted in September, 1862, for service in the Civil War, entering Company I, 90th Regiment Vol. Militia, for State duty. Capt. Frederick S. Boas, commanding. Subsequently Oct. 23, 1862, he re-enlisted in Company K, 179th Pa. V. I., and served nine months, and was mustered out with the regiment at Harrisburg, July 27, 1863.

After the war, Mr. Boyer became a hired man on the William Yocum farm in Manity township, where he had remained for three years and was then in his father's employ, on the same farm for three more years. In the spring of 1870 he began farming on his father-in-law's farm in Colebrookdale township, where he was engaged for three years, after which he returned to the William Yocum's farm on which he has resided for the past thirty-five years. He lays special stress on dairying, operating this industry with thirty head of fine cows. Since 1875 he has shipped his milk to Philadelphia.

On Nov. 3, 1866, Mr. Boyer was married to Elizabeth Gabel, daughter of David and Mary (Gabel) Gabel, of Colebrookdale township, and they had three children: Catherine, Sarah Ellen and Charles G. Catherine is the widow of Webster Marquett, born in 1862, died in 1898. They had the following children: Edna M., Mayme R., Jennie E., John J., C. Earl and Mary M., the latter of whom died Jan. 21, 1908, aged eleven years, eight months, nine days. Sarah Ellen married William E. Romig and they reside at Reading and have one daughter, Lena B. Charles G., ticket agent at the South Street Ferry, Philadelphia, resides at Camden, N. J., and has had two children, John (deceased) and Anna E.

In politics, Mr. John H. Boyer is identified with the Republican party. He and family are members of the Lutheran Church, at Amityville. Mr. Boyer is a member of McLean Post No. 16, G. A. R., Reading, Pa. and Washington Camp No. 213, P. O. S. of A., of Amityville.

MORGAN L. H. BOYER, son of Abraham S., was born in Oley township, July 27, 1848, and was reared upon the farm. He taught school from 1868 to 1880 in Earl and Amity townships. He came to Reading in 1896 where he has since lived. He is an active Democrat, and has been justice of the peace from 1868. He is a clerk in the county commissioners' office from 1889 to 1891; a clerk in the Register's office from 1891 to 1894; and during 1895 was in the Recorder's office. He was tax collector in Reading from 1901 to 1907. During the Civil War he enlisted at Reading, March 10, 1866, in Company H, 50th Pa. V. I., when only sixteen years old, and was mustered out with the regiment July 30, 1865, at the end of the war. He m., Sept. 2, 1869, Rebecca Kohler, of Greenwich township, and they have one daughter, Cora, m. to William H. Luppold, city assessor of Reading.

WILLIAM M. KEIM: (deceased), who was for many years a popular hotel man of Kutztown, Pa., was born in Pike township, Berks county, in July, 1827, son of George M. and Susan (Mensh) Keim.

George M. Keim was an extensive farmer in Pike township, and he followed that occupation until his death, when his property was purchased by his son, William M., who operated it in connection with hotel keeping. At the time of his death, in 1880, William M. Keim was proprietor of the "Keystone Hotel" at Kutztown. In 1860 Mr. Keim married Mary Ann R. Gonser, daughter of William C. Gonser (see Gonser). They had four children born to this union: Ida Nora m. George Marx, of Kutztown, and had one child, Warren E.; John Ellsworth m. Matilda Reinhart, and is a broker in cotton yarns in Reading; William Oscar died at the age of three years, four months, and Nora Ella died three days old. Mr. Keim was a Lutheran in religious belief, and to that church his widow also adhered. Politically he was a Democrat.

Mrs. Keim came to Reading in 1885, and after living for four years on Fifth street, she purchased two houses on Pearl street, which she rebuilt in 1901. Mrs. Keim was a woman of many admirable traits of character, and had hosts of friends in the community who mourned her decease.

DR. PETER S. MOGEL, a well-known dentist located at No. 814 Penn street, Reading, was born in Tulpehocken township, Berks county, Nov. 18, 1862, son of Emendon B. and Louise (Schade) Mogel.

The name of Mogel has been spelled in nine different ways by the members of the same family—Mochel, Mockel, Mocel, Mogle, Mocel, Mokel, Mokie and Mogul. The family was planted in this country by Valentine Mochel, who arrived at Philadelphia Aug. 28, 1750, on the "Phoenix," John Mason, master. The vessel had sailed from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, and carried 339 passengers. When he arrived Valentine Mochel registered his name, spelling it "Mochel," which being changed to "Mogel" when he drifted to Perry county, above Harrisburg, at a place called Millheim. He took up land, but after being there for some time found the Indians becoming troublesome, so fearing for his family's safety, he migrated to near Centreport, in the vicinity of Bellemans' Church, where he took up a tract of land in 1752, and this land has remained in the family name to the present time, the owner now (1909) being ex-county treasurer David W. Mogel, whose son John operates it. The house as originally built by Valentine Mogel (or Mochel) is still standing, altered only by additions made by the present owner. V. M. Mogel had three children, among them Valentine (2), Valentine Mochel (2), son of the emigrant, was born in Centre township, June 22, 1758, and died April 25, 1830. He married Catharine Meyer, and they had nine children, among whom were: Valentine (3), born Feb. 18, 1788, died Feb. 27, 1872; John C., born Jan. 30, 1792, died Nov. 14, 1867; and Samuel. With the children of this generation came the change in the spelling of the name, doubtless due to the English school teachers, who often tried to Anglicize the German names, and were consequently responsible for many changes, especially the changes in name so common throughout Pennsylvania.

Samuel Mogel, son of Valentine (2), was born Nov. 2, 1805, and died May 4, 1858. He married Sarah Bag- enstose, and they had thirteen children.

Emendon B. Mogel, son of Samuel and father of Dr. Peter S., was born Nov. 11, 1834, in Centre township, Berks county, and he became a well-known man in his district. He was a veterinary surgeon and for many years was located at Bernville, where he died Dec. 17, 1901. He married Louise Schade, daughter of Joseph Schade, and they had two children: Dr. Peter S.; and Rev. Levi S., born Apr. 28, 1880, and now a Presbyterian minister located at Woodburn, Ore., married to Maude McKinney.

Dr. Peter S. Mogel received his preliminary education in the schools of Bernville, and then entered the Dental Department of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, where he was graduated in 1899. He then located at Bernville where for a time he followed his profession, coming to Reading in 1892. He is a member of the Dental Alumni of the State University: of the State Dental Society; of the Lebanon Valley District Dental Society; of the Reading Dental Society. He is a member of the following lodges to which he belongs: Isaac Hiestler Lodge, No. 660, F. & A. M.; Lodge No. 113, B. P. O. E.; and Council No. 495, Royal Arcanum.
Dr. Mogel married Laura C. Burkhart, and they have two sons: J. Vincent and Paul B.

Henry W. Mogel, son of Valentine (2) and Catharine (Meyer) Mohel, was born Jan. 30, 1879, and died Nov. 14, 1867. He was a farmer on the old homestead. He was one of the founders and an official member of Bellema's Reformed Church in Centre township; and has been prominent in public affairs, holding a number of offices.

David W. Mogel, son of Henry W., was born Sept. 17, 1838, and has long been one of the well-known men in the political life of Berks county. In 1887 he was elected county treasurer, and filled that office efficiently for three years. During the Civil War he secured a commission in the Confederate army. His fraternal connections are with McLean Post No. 16, G. A. R.; Washington Camp, No. 165, P. O. S. of A.; and the Pennsylvania Grange. He married Eliza Fryberger, and they had nine children: Morgan F., born July 20, 1882; Albert F., Nov. 5, 1884; Valentine F., Nov. 28, 1886 (died Jan. 30, 1896); Ellen F., April 30, 1889 (died Sept. 22, 1887); Howard F., June 16, 1871; Levi F., Sept. 9, 1873; John F., June 8, 1879; Adam F., March 29, 1881 (died Nov. 17, 1888); and David F., July 28, 1885.

Albert F. Mogel, son of David W., was born Nov. 5, 1864. For some years he was a teacher in the public schools of the interior of Berks county on the Democratic ticket, serving three years. He is now living in Leesport, where he has a general store. He is president of the First National Bank of Leesport. Fraternally he is a member of a Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M., Hamburg; Reading Lodge of Perfection; Philadelphia Constitution. The Masonic degrees: Oley Lodge, No. 218, I. O. O. F.; Washington Camp, No. 165, P. O. S. of A.; Meade Camp, No. 16, S. of V.; Leesport Castle, No. 503, K. G. E.; Ontelaune Council, No. 985, O. of I. A.; Leesport Camp, No. 9284, M. W. of V.; Leesport Temple, No. 10, O. U. A.; Munson County Lodge, No. 729, D. O. L. In April 19, 1887, Mr. Mogel married Alice Henrietta Rahn, daughter of William Rahn. Their only daughter, Emma V., is married to Prof. H. C. Snyder. A son, Adam C., died Dec. 11, 1890, aged two years.

GEORGE H. FELIX has been a resident of the city of Reading, Pa., since January, 1874. He was born in Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., Pa., Dec. 29, 1853. His father, still living in this city at the age of ninety-five years, is Jacob Felix, son of Henry Felix.

Stephen Felix, his great-grandfather, was born in Adam Felix's house in 1779, the first house erected in this country when a young man and settled near Hummelstown, in Dauphin county, where he engaged in farming and followed it through life. He died Oct. 21, 1831, aged eighty years. He married Mary Magdelena Eckenroth, of Elizabethtown, who died Feb. 19, 1819. Stephen Felix was prominently identified with the early history of Pennsylvania and was one of the pioneer members of the Catholic Church, worshipping in the then Mission Church in Elizabethtown, which was erected in 1779.

Henry Felix, son of Stephen, was born and resided at a farm in Dauphin county, Pa., near Elizabethtown, Pa., where his son Jacob was born. His wife was Rosanna Lawrence, born in Goshenhoppen, now Bally, Pa., who died Nov. 9, 1857.

Jacob Felix, son of Henry, married Mary Elizabeth Gross, who was born near Middletown, Dauphin county. The Gross family moved to Elizabethtown in July, 1868, at the age of sixty-three years. She was the daughter of Adam and Elizabeth (Mackey) Gross. The son, Adam Gross, was a son of Andrew Gross, who died Sept. 19, 1859, aged seventy-nine years, and his wife, Anna Maria Gross, who died March 25, 1859, aged sixty-six years. The Gross family, in the presence of the early settlers, were engaged principally in mercantile pursuits, and were also among the early Catholic settlers in this State.

The ancestors on both sides of the family of George H. Felix were honorable and progressive citizens, some of whom took prominent part in public affairs in the first half of the nineteenth century.

Mr. George H. Felix passed his early years in Elizabethtown, where he received a common school education until sixteen years of age, when he began an apprenticeship in the cabinet-making trade with his uncle, who was then engaged in the manufacturing business in that place. He completed his trade when nineteen years of age, after which he was employed as a cabinet-maker in a furniture factory in Middletown, Pa. In 1872 he secured employment in the cabinet department in the Pennsylvania Railway shops in Philadelphia, which continued for about one year. During his stay in Philadelphia he secured a business training in the night school of the Bryant Stratton Business College, which latter served him well, when, with his father, in 1874 he engaged in the retail furniture and undertaking business in Reading. In 1876 the furniture part of the business was discontinued, and their sole attention was given to the undertaking business. This partnership was continued until January, 1897, when the father retired, and the son continued the business until May, 1906. From July, 1899, to January, 1897, he was also engaged in the manufacture of bank and office fixtures, hotel beds, and folding screens.

Soon after locating in Reading, and when still a young man Mr. Felix became associated with some of the leaders of the Democratic party, and winning their favor soon became popular in the party. In April, 1889, he was chosen clerk of common council of the city, which position he held for three one-year terms. Declining a renomination to this office in 1888, he became a candidate for clerk of select council and ex-officio city clerk, and received the caucus nomination over his opponent. Factional differences among councilmen prevented an election. In April, 1884, Mr. Felix again received the nomination, was elected, and re-elected for four succeeding terms, thus serving with great credit five years as city clerk. The clerk of select council was also ex-officio secretary of the board of water commissioners. The business of the Water Department attracted Mr. Felix's attention more particularly, and he made a close study of its affairs. In February, 1891, Mr. Felix was elected by city council a member of the board of water commissioners for the Fourth district for a term of four years, an honorary position to which he was re-elected for three additional successive terms. In March, 1892, he was elected the first city manager of Reading, which position he held for a period of ten years, during which time he took the initiative in making and executing plans for the future development and growth of the water works system, so as to meet the demands of a rapidly growing city population. In the board one of his special desires was to preserve harmonious relations with his colleagues, thus securing united action in his recommendations for the betterment of the system.

His progressive spirit, indomitable energy, and careful judgment, together with the prestige he obtained among his contemporaries, induced the city fathers to support him and the water board in almost any legislation recommended for the extension, maintenance and financial benefit of the Water Department. The one improvement to the water works system which Mr. Felix most persistently urged the city council to support, for many years the most stubbornly resisted by the people of the city, was the installation of the whole water supply by some system of filtration, a work thoroughly practical, economical and necessary to the health and happiness of the citizens. His agitation of this question began in 1895, and securing the support of some of his colleagues in his views, was continued for years until in 1902 he secured authority for a sample filter plant for the Egelman supply. The success of this plant proved a strong recommendation for authority, granted later, to build at Twentieth street and Potomac a plant of the same type for the Antietam supply, the most objectionable drinking water in summer furnished to the citizens. So successful and satisfactory have been the results attained by this improvement, that the citizens generally withdrew their antagonism to the filtration of the water supply, and conceded that Mr. Felix together with the other members of the board had really done a great work, and deserved the commendation of every citizen. This the Board was favored by the fact that a few years later a loan of $500,000 was voted by the people for the purification of the remaining sources of supply, viz.,: the Maiden Creek and the Bernhart Creek, by the same system of filtration.

Mr. Felix continued as a water commissioner until September, 1894, when he resigned and was chosen by the board general manager of the Water Department, pursuant to an ordinance unanimously passed by councils creating that office and prescribing duties. He served in this capacity for a period of seventeen months, when the legality of the ordinance was questioned, and the council finally assigned a few citizens, and a suit in court began to decide it. Not desiring to hold an office of doubtful legality he resigned it Feb. 1, 1906, before the case was tried, thus ending an honorable career in public life of about twenty-two years, thirteen of which were served gratuitously. Mr. Felix, the best people in the city, many of whom regard his efforts in behalf of the city Water Department as laying the foundation for the present excellent water works system. He continues his interest in the water works and takes pleasure in seeing that many of the improvements now being made are along the line he favored in years gone by. He retains his membership in the American Water Works Association, which connection has now covered a period of sixteen years, served five years on its executive committee, and was chosen its president in 1907, and presided in the City of Washington in 1898 at the largest convention it ever held. He is also a member of the New England Water Works Association, and was chosen a member of the Pennsylvania Water Works Association in 1908, and was immediately chosen its second vice-president. He was director of the Second National Bank, and president of the Reading Savings Bank. He is at present engaged in real estate operations, the building and development of real estate on his own account and for others, and is the manager of the West Reading Realty Company.

Mr. Felix has enjoyed twenty-five years of married life. On Feb. 6, 1884, he wedded Katharine V., daughter of Francis J. and Catharine P. Oberst, of Reading. Mr. Oberst, who was proprietor of the Union Boiler Works of Reading, was born in Baden, Germany, but came to this country when still in his minority. Mrs. Oberst, whose maiden name was Winter, was born in Reading and has been a resident of this place since early youth. Johannes Winter who for many years was proprietor of a tannery at Second and Chestnut streets, Reading. Mrs. Felix has two sisters, Mary and Anna, residing in Reading with the father. To Mr. and Mrs. Felix have been born two daughters, Gertrude Loyola and Mary Katharine. Gertrude L. graduated from the Reading high school in 1904, and took a post-graduate course of two years in preparation for a course in Wellesley College which, unfortunately, ill health compelled her to relinquish after a short stay at the college. M. Katharine after leaving the city grammar school completed her education by a three years' course at Mt. Aloysius Academy, Carlisle, Pa., and at the Eastern Hall, Academy of the Sacred Heart, Torrsville, Pennsylvania. Mr. Felix and his family are constant members of St. Peter's Catholic Church. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus and of the Beneficial Brotherhood of the Holy Cross, of which he has been treasurer for the past sixteen years. He has a large acquaintance in the business and social circles of the city.

CHARLES N. FRAME, an enterprising business man of Reading, manager and city circulator of the Reading Eagle, with which he had been identified since 1875, was born Dec. 21, 1848, at Reading, son of Conrad and Catherine (Marx) Frame, and grandson of George Ulrich Fremd, as the name was originally spelled.

George Ulrich Fremd was born June 2, 1773, in Vilmann, Germany, where he married, Feb. 11, 1798, Christina Dorothea Alesesser, born in the same place, June 10, 1774. Prior to coming to America Mr. Fremd had worked as a tenant and carrier, but after coming to this country probably engaged in farming, settling in the vicinity of Reading. His death was caused by an accident while fording the Schuylkill river in 1823, when he was aged fifty years. Mr. Fremd and his wife had the following children: Johann Christian, born Jan. 24, 1799, settled in Mifflin county; Johannes, born May 13, 1803, moved to Philadelphia; Anna Maria, born May 28, 1805, settled in Philadelphia; Christina Dorothea, born Sept. 13, 1807, died Jan. 21, 1814, and they lived in Philadelphia; Eliza, born in Berks county, m. Risden Nichols; and Conrad, born Jan. 27, 1816.

Conrad Frame was a small boy when he accompanied his parents to America, and after the death of his father he lived for a few months with his brother Christopher, then started out to make his own way in the world. He found a position as a boy on the canal, and through his industry and attention to the details of his work he was promoted until the time came when he was made master of the canal boat known as the "ready," which was owned by Darrah & Young, of Leesport, Pa. He continued to follow the boating business until 1848, when he engaged in a mercantile business at Jackson's Locks. Here he did an extensive business in supplying and outfitting canal boats and he continued this enterprise until 1861. In 1865 he engaged in a coal business at the Lancaster bridge, at the Haubner stand, which is still in the possession of the family. He remained in that business until his death in 1885. Both he and his wife, Catherine Marx, are buried at the Charles Evans cemetery. He was a Lutheran in religious belief, while she was reared a Methodist. Mr. and Mrs. Frame had seven children: William J., a retired resident of Reading; Charles N.; George C., deceased; Harry C., formerly engaged in the coal business at Reading; Samuel A., deceased; H. W.; and A. L., who is engaged in a foundry business in this city.

Charles N. Frame was educated in the schools of Reading and attended the old Reading high school, where many of the leading citizens of Reading were educated. When he started to work, his first position was that of clerk and errand boy in a grocery, owned by William J. Rhoads, with whom he remained until the business was sold. He then engaged in the newspaper business with Mr. Markarth, whom Mr. Frame remained until he in turn sold out. For two years following he was a clerk in a general store conducted by David Keiser, whom he left to engage in a grocery business with his father, with whom he remained one year and then accepted a position with an uncle in Philadelphia for a short period. Mr. Frame then returned to his native city, and for two years conducted a flour and feed business, which he subsequently sold and went into a men's furnishing business, and this he disposed of in 1875 in order to accept the agency of the Reading Eagle. Mr. Frame has been very successful in this line, and since 1876 he has been the sole manager of the city circulation, including the hiring of the newsboys and office help, and has in his employ some seventy-five people. It will thus be seen that Mr. Frame is a very necessary factor in the business success of this popular journal.
Mr. Frame was married to Louisa Bertolet, daughter of Maberry Bertolet, and they have had seven children: Robert, Emma, Charles, deceased; Bertolet F., Maria D.; Hel. M., and Mr. Penn Council, D. In their religious belief the family are Presbyterians. Fraternally Mr. Frame belongs to St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M. He formerly belonged to the I. O. O. F., was a charter member of Perseverance Consistory, No. 407, A. M., a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and a member of M. Penn Council, Royal Arcanum. He is a member of the Liberty Fire Company. Mr. Frame has always taken a good citizen's interest in the city's affairs, and has served one year as a member of the council from the First Ward. Mr. Frame has given substantial support to schools, churches, charities and benevolent objects, serving in public spirit when measures looking to the welfare of his fellow citizens have been brought to his attention. He is probably as well known as any citizen of Reading, who has been a resident here for as many years.

FRANKLIN W. GERHART. Among the prominent and enterprising citizens of Berks county was the late Franklin W. Gerhart, whose death occurred Nov. 11, 1888. He was born in Bedford county, Pa., in 1859, but moved to the late Rev. Henry Gerhart.

The following is taken from one of the local papers at the time of the death of the Rev. Henry Gerhart: "Rev. Henry Gerhart, an aged gentleman, for many years a resident of North Wales, died at his home at School street, Tuesday night, Dec. 17, at 11:30 o'clock, of heart disease. He had not been in his usual good health for a week past, but no serious illness was expected from his indisposition. Deceased was at one time a minister, a school teacher and a soldier, serving in the Rebellion, participating in the battle of Antietam. He was born in Bedford, Bedford Co., Pa., Dec. 6, 1819. His father at that time being a member of the county council had been sent from Hatfield by the Reformed Synod of this section of the State. In 1839 the father again became a resident of Hatfield, and Henry attended school in that vicinity. From there he went to Mercersburg College, and after graduating took school for eight years in Kentucky. Then he went to Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster to prepare for the ministry. After finishing the prescribed courses there he received several calls to various churches, but never accepted any of them. He then enlisted for four years in the Union Army under General Sherman and during his army life contracted several diseases, the most serious of which was asthma, and for which he received a pension. Two years ago he was an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Erie, Pa. He was an intelligent and well-read gentleman, and during his leisure hours wrote many interesting accounts of his war experiences besides articles upon religious and historical subjects. The branch of the Gerhart family of which he was a member is a large one, consisting of ten children, as follows: Fannie, now living in North Wales; Christiana, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Jesse Hendricks, of North Wales; Elizabeth, who died in Berks; Emma, who married Mr. Simon, of Lansdale; Samuel who died in Hatfield; Franklin W., who died some years ago while distributing some mail in his store at Limerick Square, and Dr. Alexander Gerhart, who died in Lansdale."

Franklin W. Gerhart attended the public schools and Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, and for a time taught school, later engaging in the mercantile business at Limerick Square, Pa., where he remained until his death. He was postmaster at this point, having the office in his store, and rose early on the morning of his death. While attending to his duties at his place of business he was struck down by what proved to be a fatal disease and his death occurred when he was thirty-nine years, two months and five days old. He was a member of the Reformed Church; in politics he was a Democrat. Mr. Gerhart married Sarah Ann Huber, daughter of Jonas and Maria (Kurtz) Huber, and to this union were born the following children: Clara, M. G. W. Rehrer, and has three children, J. Franklin, Robert and Paul; Simon W., a buyer for a dry goods house of Cleveland, Ohio, has these children, Glen, Clyde, Leslie, Gordon and Margareta; Mary E. m. William Landaw, and resides at home with her mother; Ella m. Charles E. Boles, and is engaged in the hardware business in Reading, and has had children, Earle (died Sept. 25, 1906), Maria and Allen. Mrs. Gerhart came to Reading with her family in 1871, and has since resided at her home, No. 925 Elm street.

Jonas Huber, father of Mrs. Gerhart, followed farming at Gilbertsville, and was a willing contributor of an annual sum to the missions and schools, and is buried in the Royal Arcanum, Reading, and has had children, Milton, who died at the age of twenty-one years; Sarah A., who became Mrs. Gerhart; and Rev. S. M. K. Huber, of Philadelphia.

The Rev. S. M. K. Huber, a minister of the Reformed Church, graduated from Mechanicsburg, Pa., seminary. He married Amanda Fritz, of Limerick, Pa., and they have a family of seven children, namely: Mary B., Martha D., Elia B., Sallie, Nevin, Paul and Bertha.

JOHN S. MATTHIAS, prominently identified with business, political and fraternal circles of Reading, was born in that city, Oct. 23, 1860, son of David and Elizabeth (Whitman) Matthias.

David Matthias lives retired in Reading. His two sons both reside here also: W. C., Superintendent of Fire Alarm at City Hall; and John S., who is the representative of the Lauer Brewing Company.

John S. Matthias attended school in Reading and then entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, where he took a commercial course at the Reading business college when he graduated. He then served as bookkeeper in a brickyard for five years, and spent four years as a clerk in a mercantile establishment at Kutztown. Following this he was connected for some eight years with the Reading Eagle, and then became bill clerk with the United States Express Company for about four years. On Feb. 1, 1900, Mr. Matthias became associated with the Lauer Brewing Company.

Mr. Matthias was married to Sallie E. Wilson, daughter of Lyman Wilson, a well known citizen of Reading. Politically Mr. Matthias is a Republican. In 1894 he was elected a member of the city council from the Fifth ward, by a majority of 216 votes, the largest vote ever given any candidate for the same office in that ward. He is a valued member of Reading Lodge of Elks, No. 113; and of quite a number of other secret organizations.

WILLIAM F. ANTHONY, a contracting bricklayer of No. 327 North Ninth street, Reading, and one of that city's representative citizens, was born Dec. 7, 1849, in Bern township, Berks county, son of Thomas and Rebecca (Spade) Anthony. (Spade) Anthony.

John Anthony, grandfather of William F., was a railroad employee and worked for the Philadelphia & Reading Company many years. He died in Reading at the age of sixty years, and his wife, Henrietta Schantz, having been the parents of eighteen children, seventeen sons and one daughter, among whom were Thomas, Henry, George, William, Charles, Luther, Cyrus, John C. and Emma (m. John Plaster, of Huntingdon, Ind.).

Thomas Anthony was in his youth employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Company as fireman, and later Political Party, Mr. Anthony was a fireman, which he held until the time of his death, in his home.

His widow, Rebecca (Spade) Anthony, who is living at the age of eighty-three years, makes her home with her youngest son, Daniel. Their children were: William F.; John; Selida, m. George Fick; Daniel; and Rebecca, deceased.

F. W. Anthony received his education in Reading attending night schools. At an early age he learned the trades of bricklaying and hatting, the latter with J. H. Spatz at Mohnton. After several years spent at the hatting trade, Mr. Anthony again took up bricklaying, and in 1871 engaged in contracting business. Two years later, however, again engaged in the hatting trade, but did not influence that occupation for any length of time. He once more took up bricklaying, and in 1904 again engaged in the business on his own account, now employing forty-seven hands. Mr. Anthony is very skilled in his work, and some of the finest buildings in Reading, including the magnificent new church erected the German Greek Catholic Church, and Eisenbrown marble plant (which is one of the finest and largest of its kind in the State), and the private residence of Mr. Joseph Ganter at Mt. Penn borough.

Mr. Anthony married Henrietta Goodhart, daughter of John N. and Sarah C. (Lovering) Goodhart, and they reside at 37 N. 9th street. Mr. Anthony organized Bricklayers' Union, No. 21, and served as its first president. He is a member of the 1900 Beneficial Association; the Northeastern Democratic Association; and the Owls, and Turn-Verein Associations. In political matters he is independent, voting for the man, regardless of party ties.

DANIEL F. PRINTZ illustrates in a remarkable degree the power of natural endowments to overcome adverse circumstances, for though he started in youth without promise of any kind he nevertheless reached a position of commanding influence in manufactures, building operations and finance almost at the threshold of his business career, which he has maintained in this community for twenty years with increasing success.

Mr. Printz was born at Reading shortly after the close of the Civil war, on Oct. 26, 1863, and his mother having died when he was but a year old he was allowed to drift along without parental care as to his future destiny. Quite naturally he received a limited education in the elementary branches in the local schools which he attended until he became twelve years of age, and then secured his first regular employment for wages in the Reading Hardware Company. While working as an apprentice, the young Daniel Printz evinced the highest ambition to become a skilled mechanic asserted itself and accordingly within a year he applied for an apprenticeship in the machine shop of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, which had a recognized fame for developing finished workmen. His application was granted and in the next few years, while he continued his apprenticeship, he exerted himself toward acquiring a practical knowledge of the trade in all its branches; and he remained with the company afterward for five years for the purpose of increasing his proficiency.

With this experience in turning out and running machinery, he, at the age of twenty-five years, felt qualified to start in business for himself; and associating himself as partner with Mr. Samuel H. Fulmer, banker of Reading, he purchased a nickel-plating works. Within one year his genius for organizing and directing an enterprise was displayed in the development of the works into an establishment for the manufacture of bicycle saddles and accessories. This was in 1891, when the bicycle craze in the country was at its highest point. The firm was known as the P. & F. Manufacturing Co., and in a few years its productions came to be forwarded to all parts of the world, and its plant to be known as the largest of its kind in the country, with a business of business of unprecedented character, exceeding that of any other similar enterprise in the country.

The spirit of organization, co-operation and concentration was formulating and developing rapidly in the United States during this period, and in the next ten years the P. & F. Manufacturing Company had come to possess so much influence in the line of bicycle accessories that it was purchased by the American Saddle Company, with Mr. Printz included as one of the directors of the company; and this company afterward came to be absorbed by the American Bicycle Company when he retired from the management.

In 1893 the Reading Wood Pulley Company was incorporated with Mr. Printz as one of the directors, and he was chosen as president of the corporation, which position he has filled to the present time, successfully directing its affairs. During this period building operations were going on in several parts of the city, and Mr. Printz became interested in them; and co-operating with Mr. Fulmer and later with Lambert Rehr and Jacob B. Fricker, he assisted in erecting and disposing of several hundred dwelling-houses, mostly in east Reading on and in the vicinity of Perkiomen avenue.

The Reading Stove Works was founded in 1884 to require re-organization, and the stockholders, appreciating the ability of Mr. Printz in managing various enterprises successfully, selected him to become its president. He has filled this position to the present, maintaining its trading relations throughout the country, even throughout the world, in an admirable manner, and keeping up the reputation of the company in the highest and most efficient manner, and has a total capitalization of more than a million dollars by the several companies (made up of associates of his from Reading).

In 1904 Mr. Printz organized the Penn Shoe Manufacturing Company for the manufacture of shoes; and in 1905 he organized the Reading Saddle Manufacturing Company, for the purpose of manufacturing bicycle saddles and hardware specialties which have since been sold extensively throughout the country, and he has officiated at the head of these enterprises to the present time. In 1906, upon the reorganization of the Reading Standard Manufacturing Company, for the increased manufacture of motor cycles, he was elected to act as president of the company. Over two thousand employees are required in the numerous industrial establishments under his control and supervision; and daily reports are submitted or forwarded to him for his inspection and approval, which evidences the extent and important character of his duties and responsibilities.

Mr. Printz represented the ward in which he resides (the Sixteenth) on the school board as one of the controllers from that district for two terms from 1898 to 1906; he has served as a director of the Penn National Bank since its organization; and was chairman of the building committee; and since 1904 he has filled the position of treasurer of the Pennsylvania Street Manufacturers Association.

In 1881 Mr. Printz married Matilda Becker, daughter of Nicholas Becker, of Reading, and granddaughter of Samuel Lewis, a descendant of one of the earliest settlers in Cumru township, at “Lewis’ Neck” along the Schuylkill river, and great-granddaughter of Philip Rush, a descendant of Michael Rosch, Sr., who emigrated from Remlingenheim, in Wurttemberg, Germany, and settled at Reading in 1751. By her he has a son, Harold Ellsworth, who was educated in the local schools and Kenyon Military Academy, Gambier, Ohio.

James Printz, the father of Daniel F., is a machinist of Reading; he married Susan Homan, daughter of Daniel Homan, of Reading, and they had two children: Charles (deceased) and Daniel F. Printz.

DAVID HERTZOG, who for many years was engaged in the lumber business in Reading, Berks county, was a native of this county, born in Oley township, Sept. 16, 1834, son of Jacob and Mary (Greisimer) Hertzog, natives of this county. Mr. Hertzog died at his home in Reading in August, 1902.

Jacob Hertzog was an agriculturist of Berks county, and owned and operated a well-cultivated farm. He was well-known throughout the township. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: William, a blacksmith of Mohnton; Henry, of Pleasantville; Catherine, m. to a Mr. Dilliapine, of Oley township; and David. The family were members of the Reading Lutheran Church.

David Hertzog received a common school education in Oley township, and during his minority engaged in farming. On the death of his father, he inherited a farm near Shillington, Pa., and this he operated for a time, but later embarked in the lumber business, purchasing many tracts of wooded land. He continued in this connection and became a prosperous merchant. Mr. Hertzog was married in November, 1857, to Margaret Yocum, daughter of Daniel Yocum, and four children were born to this union: John, deceased; Daniel W., deceased; Henry F., a prominent hardware merchant of Reading; and Katie, m. to Ellis Worley, of Mohnton. Mrs. Hertzog is a member of the Reformed Church, and formerly took an active interest in the work of that church. Mr. Hertzog was a Democrat in politics, but took only a good-citizen's part by casting his ballot, caring nothing for political preferment.

ALBERT B. KAUFMANN, connected with the insurance business in Reading, is one of the influential men of that city. Mr. Kaufmann comes from German ancestry, his father crossing the sea in 1850, settling in Reading, and following his trade of a tailor with the clothing house, Kaufmann & Meek, and the business was continued for nearly fifty years. He died Feb. 23, 1892, at the age of seventy-one years. He married Christiana, daughter of John and Christiana Boyer, and she died Dec. 11, 1894, at the age of sixty-eight. She was the mother of ten children, four of whom are deceased; the others are Caroline, m. to Charles Driek, a planing mill operator; John, a clerk in Reading; Charles, a tailor with Jameson & Co., for over thirty years; Adolph G., a grocer, member of the firm of Smith & Kaufmann, Reading; Albert B.; and William G., a tailor in Reading.

Albert B. Kaufmann, born Jan. 22, 1857, in Reading, was educated in St. John's Lutheran parochial school of the city. He began his business life early, engaging as an operator in a planing mill, and this he followed for twenty-one years, when he launched out into the real estate and insurance business, which he has continued to the present time. Currently Mr. Kaufmann is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Encampment and the Protestant Junior Association. He is quite active in church work, being a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, where he has served as a member of the choir. He is also a member of the organizing committee of St. John’s Beneficial Society of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Kaufmann is a Democrat in politics.

On Oct. 29, 1888, Mr. Kaufmann married Miss Emma R. Braun, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Braun, both now deceased. Two of the six children born to this marriage, Florence May and Emma R., died in infancy; those living are Adelaide, Elmer T., Walter J. and Ruth Elizabeth.

RANDOLPH S. MECK, assistant cashier of the Farmers’ National Bank of Reading since 1903, was born at Schuylkill Haven, Pa., Oct. 3, 1873. He acquired his education at Refton, Lancaster county, and at Reading, Pa., and upon completing a special course in civil engineering secured a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company as a civil engineer. He continued with the company for several years, remaining in the position of messenger and clerk with the Farmers’ National Bank of Reading. On account of his proficiency and reliability he was rapidly promoted until he became the assistant cashier of the bank in 1903, and has filled this position in a most satisfactory manner until the present time. He is a past president of the Reading Council of the American Life and Annuity Society of Pittsburgh, Pa., and he is prominently identified with the Masonic order in Reading.

In 1896, Mr. Meck was married to Clara A. Ruth, daughter of John A. Ruth, who has been connected with the Reading Eagle and Times for many years. They are active members of Calvary Reformed Church, both taking great interest in the work of the Sunday-school as well as of the church. He is a member of the Consistory, and treasurer of the church. Mrs. Meck is also actively interested in the affairs of the Woman’s Y. W. C. A. at Reading, having been one of the directors for many years.

Mr. Meck’s father is James A. Meck. He was born in 1848, in Bethel township, Berks county, while his father was cultivating a farm there. When a young man he was employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company at Schuylkill Haven, and he continued there until 1878, when he removed to Refton, Lancaster county, and engaged in the coal and lumber business until 1885. He then sold his business and accepted the position of assistant superintendent of the Baltimore Mutual Aid Association at Reading. He was in this position until 1892, and later the position of superintendent until 1904, when he located at Harrisburg, and became the superintendent of the Commonwealth Title Insurance & Trust Company, which responsible position he has since been filling. He was married to Susanna Coho (daughter of John L. Coho, of Schuylkill Haven), in 1873, and they have the following children: Henry C. (cashier of the Reading Brewing Company, m. Mary Ruth); Edgar (manager of a department in the large store of Brown Shoe Company, St. Louis, Mo., m. Fannie Frost); and Randolph.

Mr. Meck’s grandfather was Benjamin Meck, born in 1804 in Longswamp township, Berks county, where he learned the trade of a shoemaker, following it until 1814. He then bought a large farm in Bethel township which he cultivated until his death in 1889. He was married to Elizabeth Ruth (daughter of Jacob Ruth, farmer of Spring township), and they had fourteen children: nine sons and five daughters.

And his great-grandfather was DeWald Meck, farmer of Longswamp township, who was a son of Jacob Meck, a farmer of Oley township.

HENRY G. YOUNG (deceased) was a native citizen of Reading, son of Jacob Young, and one of a family well known in this city.

The paternal grandparents were Jacob and Mary (Scheffler) Young, the former of whom was a native of Reading. He was a prominent brick manufacturer there, having established his plant when the city was only a small town, and continued in it until his death in 1835. His wife survived him until 1854. They were the parents of the following children: Jacob (2); William S.; Charles; Elizabeth, m. to George Geiss; and Maria, who m. Peter Sherman, and had one daughter, Maria. Jacob Young was a Catholic in religious belief, and his wife was a Lutheran. In politics he was a Democrat.

Jacob Young (2), father of Henry G., passed all his life in Reading, where he died at the home of his son, Henry G., in 1893, aged eighty-one years less one month. His brickyard was located where his son’s late home stood, and for thirty years he was in the retail coal business. He was prominent in public life, and was prison inspector twelve years, and county commissioner three years. For many years he was a deacon in Trinity Lutheran Church. He married Catharine Henninger, who died in 1883, aged sixty-four years. They are buried in the Lutheran cemetery at Reading. Their children were: Henry G.; Jacob never married; and Sallie married Joseph Kloppe (deceased), of Reading. All three are deceased.

Henry G. Young was born Dec. 25, 1888, and his life covered a span of more than sixty years, being brought to a peaceful close Jan. 9, 1900. His first ex-experience in business was with his father, a brick manufacturer, but after working for him a while, he gave that up and secured a position in the Navy Yard, where he remained for seven years. At the end of that time he went to Kutztown, and in partnership with Fred Zehm, conducted a foundry for a couple of years. With the drawings from that enterprise he went back to Reading, and worked in a foundry with his father, for whom he worked until 1896, in which year he was elected city treasurer. He was still discharging the duties of that office when death claimed him. For fourteen years Mr. Young also served as superintendent of the Trinity Lutheran Cemetery.
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

In 1863 Mr. Young was married to Miss Hettie A. Rahn, daughter of John Rahn, and a family of five children was born to them as follows: Clara; Fred; Katie, m. to John Miller; Ida, m. to Frank Gendall; and Jacob. Mr. and Mrs. Young belonged to Trinity Lutheran Church in which he officiated as deacon for twelve years. Both were active in various departments of the church work, and were prominent among its members. Mr. Young likewise was connected with several fraternal organizations, in whose aims and methods he took much interest, belonging to the Masons, the Knights Templars and the Odd Fellows. In politics he was a supporter of what he considered the Democratic party, and the last time he was a candidate for a public office was in 1882.

William S. Young, brother of Jacob (5), was born March 10, 1821. He first learned to make shoes, but as that trade did not prove congenial to his tastes, he learned brickmaking, and for many years was in the same line of business, that his father before him had followed. For a long time he was located at No. 62 Spruce street, but later removed to the vicinity of the Philadelphia & Reading depot, and remained there until he retired from business in 1865.

William S. Young's chief connection with public life came after he retired. He had before the war served as market commissioner, and was active in the Democratic party, but the greatest service of his to the community came after his election in 1865 to the office of county commissioner. When he entered upon the duties of that position the county was $600,000 in debt and Mr. Young made it his chief aim to reduce this amount. In 1868 he was re-elected to a second term of three years, and when he retired from office in 1871, the county was not only free from debt, but also had a balance in the treasury, a noteworthy achievement and an illustration of what the application of spare time and hard industry in the.Graphic public service. In 1879 Mr. Young was again nominated and elected county commissioner but he retired in 1881. He always received good majorities, and had the confidence not only of his own party, in which he was for years a prominent counsellor, but of the county at large. He was a good speaker and during the campaign before the election of S. E. Ancona stumped the county for him, while for years no county convention was complete without him. No other man has held three times the office of county commissioner for Berks county, and this fact alone, if proof were needed, would attest the great personal popularity of Mr. Young.

William S. Young was united in marriage to Miss Susan Geiss, and children were born to them as follows: Mary, who married a Mr. Cox, and has two children, Drusilla and Ralph; Hannah, widow of the late R. R. Haws; Susan; Sophia; and William R., who married Sallie Hawes and has four children, Paul, William, Mary and Helen. Mrs. Young passed from this world Dec. 29, 1904. She belonged, as did her husband, to Trinity Lutheran Church, and was an active worker in it. Mr. Young was for many years an Odd Fellow, belonging to Montgomery Lodge, and to the Encampment.

REV. GEORGE B. SMITH. On Jan. 30, 1732, the proprietors of the Province of Pennsylvania granted 633 acres of land near Reading to one Joseph Smith, in Philadelphia county. By the subsequent subdivision of Philadelphia county the larger portion of this tract of land was brought within the confines of Maxawanny township, Berks county, close by the borders of Lehigh. Casper Wister dealt extensively in lands, and in 1748, early in his life, he purchased the property, and designated it the brass button maker of Philadelphia. In October, 1754, Casper Wister and his wife Catherine conveyed 123 acres of this land to one Jost Henry Sasamonhousen, "Blacksmith," who on March 5, 1761, in confirmation of his title to the same, obtained a patent from the proprietor, and Thomas Penn. On Dec. 2, 1761, Jost Henry Sasamonhousen and his wife Petronilla conveyed the same to Henry Sasamonhousen, one of their sons, and on April 19, 1775, Henry Sasamonhousen and Elizabeth, his wife, conveyed it to George Smith, of Macungie township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county. From George Smith it descended to his son, George Smith, Sr., from him to his son, George Smith, Jr., and from him to his son, George L. Smith, who is the present owner and occupant.

Two George Schmits came from Germany to America in the fall of 1740, one on the ship "Patience," and the other on the "Leslie," on Oct. 7. Other George Schmits came in other years, but the weight of circumstances favors the theory that one of the two arrived named was the George Smith who came into possession of this tract of land in 1775. The future investigator through the help of additional facts may be able to determine which of the two it was. Landing at Philadelphia, he in time removed inland with the incoming drift of housekeepers, and settled where now is Fogelsville, within the present bounds of Lehigh county. He and his wife are interred in a family burying ground on the farm which he acquired in 1775, but which long ago crumbled away it cannot be ascertained when either was born or how long they lived. Their son, Joh. Georg Schmit, was born Feb. 12, 1770, while they yet lived in Lehigh county. He married Margaret Klein, born April 10, 1778, and in course of time came into possession of the farm, improved it and designated upon it until the end of his days. He died Jan. 21, 1855, and his wife Margaret Oct. 23, 1850, both being buried in the same little burying ground that contains the unmarked graves of their parents.

When Joh. Georg Schmit came into possession of the premises, it was but an undifferenced stone structure, built in 1740, probably with a view of not merely using it for a house but in case of emergency as a fort as well. This was occupied until 1841, when it was abandoned for a new and larger house, also of stone, which is the Smith family homestead of to-day. From this last house at hand it does not appear fully what family Joh. Georg Schmit and his wife Margaret had, but it is definitely known that they had a son, George, designated as George Schmidt, Jr., and another named John, who lived near Claussville, and there raised a family, among whom were several sons. They also had a daughter, Elizabeth, who died Oct. 12, 1804, at the age of six and one-half years; and a son Jonathan, who died May 1, 1816, in his twenty-third year, both of whom are buried in the aforementioned little family graveyard.

George Schmidt, Jr., was born April 25, 1800, on the property of his grandfather, where he always lived. The country becoming Anglicized at this time, the spelling of the name with him changed from Schmidt to Smith. He married Lydia Leibensperger, born Nov. 10, 1798, in Lehigh county, and to them, were born seven children, namely: Stephen, Henry, David, George, Jr., Alfred, James and Rebecca. (1) Stephen died March 27, 1856, leaving a widow, one son and four daughters. (2) Caroline died Jan. 17, 1838, in her tenth year. (3) David married Catherine Adams, engaged at farming in Lehigh County, where he died on the 27th of April, 1827. (4) George L. (5) Alfred died March 11, 1847, in his seventh year. (6) James, who was a physician, died unmarried May 8, 1861, in his twenty-sixth year. (7) Rebecca married John Kump, of Maxatawny township, who died survived by his widow and three children. (8) Susan, who was at the time of her death, with her husband and three children. (9) Alfred and James rest in the little family burying-ground on their ancestral farm. George Smith, Jr., died Sept. 1, 1890. During his active years he was one of the leading spirits of his locality, enterprising and successful in his own affairs, and bearing his full share of the duties of citizenship, and during his long lifetime was respected and honored by those who knew him. His wife died Feb. 8, 1865, twenty-five years before the death of her husband, and the two rest side by side in the family graveyard.

George L. Smith, the fourth child of George and Lydia (Leibensperger) Smith, was born June 26, 1839, in the same house in which his father was born and in which his grandfather had lived. He grew to manhood upon the old homestead and received the benefit of the schools of his neighborhood, later attending a select school in Reading, of which the late Hon. Daniel W. Gillett was principal. He then returned to the farm and continued at farm labor until he joined the 13th Pennsylvania Infantry, when he went to Lehigh county and there for three years engaged at clerking in a general store. Returning to Maxatawny township, he took charge of the old homestead and has remained upon it ever since, engaged at farming and stock-raising. He married Louisa Dutt, daughter of Thomas and Henrietta (Strauss) Dutt, who paternally is of English ancestry and whose family formerly lived in Montgomery county. In course of time he acquired title to the old homestead and improved it in various ways, making it both home and stock-raising place only a pleasant abiding place, but a home in the highest sense. He is an enterprising and progressive citizen, a man of intelligence and integrity, and enjoys the confidence and respect of all his neighbors and friends. He belongs to the Reformed Church, the church of his family for generations past. In politics he is a Republican. To George L. and Louisa (Dutt) Smith five children were born; namely: Elizabeth, m. to Edwin Boyer; Rev. George B.; Dr. James, a practicing physician living at Allentown, who m. Mary L. Richards, of Maxatawny, and had two children: Margaret (died aged sixteen years) and Anna, m. to George Strump, and had two children: Wayne and Mark (died aged five years); and William, m. to Annie Kilfeather, living at home.

Rev. George B. Smith, second child of George L. and Louisa (Dutt) Smith, was born July 8, 1867, on the homestead in Maxatawny township which his family have owned and occupied continuously for generations. He was reared on the farm and employed at such duties as usually fall to the lot of farmer boys. His education began in the country district school, and was continued in the Keystone Sunday School, Newtown Township. His decision to enter the latter school was to merely obtain something more of an education than that afforded by the country schools, but as he advanced from class to class a desire for more learning grew upon him and he decided to aim higher. Failing in one of his aspirations, he applied to his Principal, Dr. N. C. Schaeffer, the present State Superintendent of Public Instruction, for information and advice, and in reply received a letter that turned his ambitions in the direction of college training. This he regards as the turning point in his career. He subsequently entered one and then another school, but finally entered Lebanon College, and graduated from that institution in 1889. With the advance of years and knowledge came the natural desire for employment, and after careful and conscientious consideration he selected the ministry for his life work. This decision he arrived at unaided and uninfluenced by circumstances, purely from a sense of duty, and after graduating from college he entered the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster, from which he was graduated in 1892.

On leaving the seminary Dr. Smith returned to the place of his nativity and, where he was best known, was formally commissioned to work in the Master's vineyard. On June 21, 1899, he was ordained as pastor of the Reformed Church in East New Hope, at charge of the Reformed Church, consisting of the congregations at Maxatawny and at De Long's Church at Bowmans. The following spring St. Paul's congregation in Kutztown, and St. Peter's at Topton were added to his charge, and in this enlarged field he has ever since been laboring with growing success, ministering to all of his congregations in both the English and German languages.

On Aug. 22, 1893, Dr. George B. Smith was married to Miss Mary L. Reynolds, daughter of Stephen Cromwell and Mary L. (Capwell) Reynolds, of near Factoryville, Pa. They have one child, Arline Augusta Reynolds, born Sept. 4, 1896.

ALBERT S. LEIDY, merchant of Boyertown, comes of a family long settled in Frederick township, Montgomery county, Pa., where he was born Oct. 20, 1845.

Jacob Leidy, his father, is a native of Frederick township, where he engaged in farming, owning the homestead farm of over 100 acres—a very fine place. He and his wife had a family of ten or twelve children, among whom was but one son. Francis. He is buried in the private burial ground of the family in Frederick township, near Keeflers church, on the old Leidy homestead; several generations of the family are interred there.

Francis Leidy, son of Jacob, was born about 1814 in Frederick township, Montgomery county, and died at the age of about forty-five, in 1858, at Pottstown, Pa., where he was buried. In his earlier life he followed farming, but later he was engaged as a hay dealer in Pottstown, continuing to follow that business until his death. He was successful in business and accumulated property.

Mary Leidy was twice married, his first wife being Rachel Smith, daughter of John Smith, of Red Hill, Montgomery Co., Pa., and to them were born three children, one son and two daughters: Rebecca m. Alex. Sassaman, and resides in Philadelphia; Amanda (deceased) m. William Dannaher and lived in Philadelphia; Albert S. is hereinafter mentioned. By his second marriage, with Mary Ann Hoffman, Mr. Leidy had one daughter, who died young.

Albert S. Leidy was born at Frederick and attended the schools at Pottsgrove and the Swamp, in Montgomery county. When young he followed the cigar business for a short time, but when the Civil war broke out he entered the Union service, for which he remained for three years. He was only in his seventeenth year when he enlisted, in 1862, in Company H, 139th Pa. V. I., at Zieglerville, and he was promoted from common soldier to second lieutenant of that company, which was attached to the 6th Army Corps, Army of the Potomac. Though in many fierce engagements Mr. Leidy was never wounded. At the battle of the Wilderness he had a very narrow escape, being struck by a bullet striking the scabbard of his sword, thus saving him from a wound. He says he hated to lose the scabbard, as it was new, and he had just paid $25 for the scabbard and sword, but he picked up another which answered the purpose, and which he still has in his possession. He was mustered out at Philadelphia.

After the war Mr. Leidy engaged in the manufacture of clothing at Zieglerville, following this business in all for fourteen years, and employing at times as many as two hundred people. The product was men's woolen clothing. He then lived for a year at Pottsville, reading law, was selected for the common council, and in 1881 he located in Gilbertsville, Montgomery county, where was in the horse and cattle business for six years. He was in that business with M. L. Ritter for one year. In 1886 he came to Boyertown, where he engaged in the baking and liquor business, continuing same successfully for a period of twenty-one years, at one location. In the spring of 1900 he was succeeded in this business by his son, Joseph Albert.

Since that time he has built a double brick house on Walnut street, Boyertown, near the famous casket factory, and in the summer of 1908 he built a three-story brick store and residence on the northeast corner of Philadelphia avenue and Walnut street, where he is now conducting a grocery store. He is also interested in the casket factory. Mr. Leidy is a member of General Crook Post, No. 597, G. A. R., of Boyertown, and is also connected with Quakertown Lodge, No. 512, F. & A. M.

In 1870 Mr. Leidy married Elizabeth Bryan, daughter of Dr. Joel and Maria (Shaner) Bryan, the former an Englishman who practised medicine at New Berlinville, Pa. Five children have been born to this union: Ulysses S. died in infancy; Oren Ross, a member of the law firm of Leidy & Goodstein, is practising law in New York City; with the New York, 38 Park Row; Austin C. B. resides at Boyertown; Jacob Albert has succeeded his father in the baking and liquor business; Hiram P. resided in the Boyertown Opera House fire, Jan. 13, 1908, when twenty-three years old.

AMOS W. POTTEIGER, successful merchant and public-spirited citizen at Reading for fifty years, was born Nov. 23, 1833, on a farm in Bern township along the Tulpehocken creek, several miles from Reading. He was the eldest of nine children, and lived near the Unionville Seminary (situated along the Schuylkill river near the Chester county line). After leaving school he worked on the homestead farm until he became twenty-one years old, when he entered the general store of Francis B. Shalters, at Reading (Fifth and Washington streets), as a clerk, where he remained one year and then returned to the farm. While on the farm he taught school, acted as a surveyor, and officiated as a justice of the peace until 1848, when he went to Reading to engage in the mercantile business. He then worked at a trade for a few years, and at last he was located on the north side of Penn street, below Third (now No. 251). After they had traded together for a number of years, Mr. Potteiger became the sole owner of the business, which he continued at that place until 1866. Shortly before this time he had purchased a large property on the south side of Penn street, above Third (now Nos. 310-312), where he erected a large three-story brick building, which was the most modern business at that time in Reading west of Fourth street. The plate glass for the show windows was imported from France, and their size attracted great attention many years ago. Potteiger's specialty was clothing up to that time. For several years before his death, Aug. 12, 1897, Mr. Potteiger was the oldest surviving merchant at Reading. He was elected to common council from the Northwest ward for two terms, from 1861 to 1864. While in council he gave much attention to the improvement of the city which was then being made; and he encouraged systematic numbering of the houses throughout the city. Upon the removal of the public market-houses on Penn Square, in 1871, he cooperated heartily with other enterprising men in the western part of Reading for establishing a private market-house to accommodate the patrons as well as the farmers, which resulted in the erection of the large and commodious market-house and the Grand Opera House on the south side of Penn street, west of Fourth, and he officiated as president of the corporation until he died. He and his son also erected the large annex known as the Potteiger market-house in 1895. In the establishment of a new post-office building at Reading by the national government, 1887 to 1889, he acted as one of the commissioners. In politics he was identified with the Democratic party, in which he always took an active interest, but was never a candidate for office.

Immediately after locating at Reading Mr. Potteiger became a member of the Temple Lodge, of aggregation, and he continued a very active member until he died. He officiated as deacon, elder and trustee for nearly forty years, and during this time also took great interest in the Sunday-school, teaching a class the greater part of the time. When Muhlenberg College, at Allentown, was established, he was a liberal contributor. He officiated as a trustee until he died, and his son, Samuel N., became his successor. For many years he was the largest single contributor toward the maintenance of this institution.

In 1849 Mr. Potteiger married Louisa Seidel Kissinger. They had four children: Maria Amanda (m. to George E. Haak); Samuel Newton; Emma (died when eighteen years of age); and Luther (died in infancy). Mrs. Potteiger died Dec. 5, 1907, aged seventy-nine years. Mrs. Haak took much active interest in church and charitable work, having had official connections with the Reading Hospital and Widows' Home for many years. She died in 1905.

Mr. Potteiger's father was John Potteiger, of Bern township, who was engaged in farming and also dealt extensively in cattle. He took an active interest in politics and officiated as the county commissioner from 1850 to 1853. When he entered upon the duties of this office he moved to Reading, of which he continued to be a citizen from that time until his decease. He was born in 1803, and died in 1865. He married Sarah Wobensmith, of Reading, in 1807, died in 1869. They had four children: Samuel (m. to Barbara Beidler); William (m. to Elizabeth Ruth); John (died in youth); Mary Ann (m. to Benjamin S. Fox); Rebecca (m. to Henry B. Fisher); Catharine (m. to William Ahrens); Sarah (m. to James T. Rebber); and Amelia (m. to Daniel Engel).

Mrs. Potteiger's father was Abraham Kissinger, a farmer, born in 1792, died in 1864; he married Susanna Seidel, born in 1795, died in 1875. Their homestead was located in Bern township, opposite Reading and overlooking the Schuylkill river. Her grandfather, also named Abraham, a farmer of the same township, was born in 1750 and died in 1833. He was married to Maria Angelina Kissling, born in 1752, died in 1838. Mrs. Potteiger's parents had nine children: Abraham S. (m. to Lydia Gring); Rebecca (m. to Jonathan Gicker); Mary (m. to Benjamin Foote); James (m. to Hannah Nee); Clara (m. to George Baer); Elizabeth (m. to Christian Geiser); Louise S. (m. to Amos W. Potteiger); Washington S. (m. to Elizabeth Yost); Susan (m. to William Parvin); Amanda (m. to James L. Miller); and Sarah (m. to Charles S. Birch).

SAMUEL NEWTON POTTEIGER was born at Reading, and attended the common schools and in Muhlenberg College, from which he was graduated. Then he read law in the office of George F. Baer, Esq., and was admitted to practice in the several courts of Berks county and the State of Pennsylvania. Besides carrying on the practice of the law since then, he has given much successful attention to real estate and building operations at Reading, being one of its largest builders, having erected many rows of modern dwellings as well as the handsome stone-front Potteiger office building at Nos. 535-537 Court Street, built in 1904. He was one of the organizers of the Schuylkill Valley Bank (adjoining the Potteiger store building) in 1896, and since then has served as one of its directors; and upon the death of his father, succeeded him as a director of the corporations with which he had been connected.

ISRAEL GROMAN, a resident of Reading, was born in Bern township, Berks county, Nov. 8, 1838. The family, which is of German descent, has lived in that county for several generations.

George Groman, grandfather of Israel, was a farmer in Berns county, and his son Charles, father of Israel, worked at stone work, and his son worked as a mason. Their work was mainly in the construction of stone buildings and monuments. Israel Groman was employed as a stone mason and worked on various projects, including the construction of the Schuylkill Valley Bank.

In 1877 Mr. Groman married Asenath (Kissing) Groman, who was born in 1844. They had three children: Fietta, m. to Solomon Kissing; Israel; and Catherine, m. to John Lasch. The family were Lutherans in religious faith.

Israel Groman went to school till he was about sixteen, acquiring as good an education as the township schools offered, and then for three years drove mules along the canal route. For his permanent occupation he decided on carpentry and learned that trade, but before he was fairly established in business, the depression came, and his business increased rapidly from the first and now has a fine local trade, supplying his products to all the best cafes and hotels in the city. He makes principally the Pompey Branch five cents, and Pompey Shorts, for chewing and smoking, ten cents. The business is now conducted under the name of A. R. Groman & Sons.

In 1878 Mr. Groman married Ellen E., daughter of William and Elizabeth Reider. There are three children, Annie, Walter and Lizzie, the last a graduate of the Reading high school. The family have their home in the same building, where their residence portion has been skillfully fitted up. Mr. Groman has been actively in politics but supports the Democratic party. Fraternally he is a charter member of Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 518 I. O. O. F., and belongs also to Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M. He is a man of sound business principles and is always a generous giver to worthy causes.

DANIEL SHAABER, a retired foundryman of Reading, Pa., is a native of that city, born at the corner of Ninth and Franklin streets, Dec. 19, 1832, son of John and Mary (Caldwell) Shaaber.

Mr. Shaaber was left an orphan at the age of eleven years, his father having died five years before, and he went to live with Adam Johnston, with whom he remained until twenty-five years old. Mr. Johnston being in the foundry business, young Shaaber soon mastered the details of the business, and when Mr. Johnston met with financial reverses Mr. Shaaber and Mr. Johnson's clerk, a Mr. Jones, took the business, this being in April, 1858. The partnership continued until 1860, when Mr. Jones sold his interest to Mr. Shaaber, and in this our subject continued alone until 1868, when Adam Johnston and his son, Henry, were admitted to the firm, it then being Shaaber & Johnston until 1877. In this year Mr. Shaaber withdrew from the firm and engaged in the cold storage business at Fifth street and the Lebanon Valley railway until the railroad company erected their bridge at that point, and as the plant was on railroad property it was forced to move. Since this time Mr. Shaaber has lived retired.

A. R. ORTH, a cigar manufacturer of Reading, was born in that city, Nov. 19, 1852, son of William and Susan (Printz) Orth.

William Orth during his active life was a blacksmith by trade, and in time secured a place in the Reading shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, where he worked continuously for thirty-five years. Both Mr. Orth's wife and son were born at Reading and secured a place at the Reading Iron Company.

The family resides at No. 34 Schuylkill avenue.

Mr. Orth attended the public schools till he was twelve years old, and then entered the hat factory run by Kutz and Arnold, at present the property of J. G. Mohn & Brothers. When fourteen he left that place and went into a cotton factory and then at the age of seventeen he began to learn cigar making with Frederick Printz, who was alderman of the Third ward at that time, with whom he remained five months. After he finished his trade he worked for Charles Breneeiser & Co., and then for John Maltzberger. At the end of that time, in 1887, he and Augustus Frame formed the firm of Orth & Frame, successful manufacturers, business, with their location on Court street, above Sixth street. After four years Mr. Orth sold out his interest to his partner and himself resumed cigar making. He was employed first by John Keiser and then for six years by Frank Hunt. In 1898 Mr. Orth purchased Peter's stand on Sixth street, between Charles and Cherry streets, where he has a fine local trade, supplying his products to all the best cafes and hotels in the city. He makes principally the Pompey Branch five cents, and Pompey Shorts, for chewing and smoking, ten cents. The business is now conducted under the name of A. R. Orth & Sons.
Margaret, m. to Frederick Deaser; Mary, m. to Peter Adams; John; George; Sarah; Peter; Rebecca, m. to Jackson Sherman; Jacob, twin of Daniel; and Henry W., deceased.

JEREMIAH SEIDER. Among the prominent business men of Reading, Pa., may be mentioned Jeremiah Seider, of No. 927 Douglass street, who has for some years been engaged in contracting. He was born Jan. 5, 1830, in Reading, son of Daniel and Mary (Yeager) Seider.

Daniel Seider, who was a boatbuilder in Reading in the early 1800's, later removed to Northumberland county, Pa., where he engaged in farming until 1845, then returning to Reading, where he carried on the work of carpenter. In 1880 he was engaged in the Reading Cotton factory, and in 1882 as a soldier in the Union army, he lost his life in the Civil war. He and his wife had about twelve children, of whom Jeremiah was the fifth. Daniel Seider was a Lutheran in religious belief, while his wife belonged to the Reformed denomination.

Jeremiah Seider secured a somewhat limited education in the schools of Reading. He enlisted on April 18, 1861, in the 4th Pennsylvania regiment. He re-enlisted in the Ordnance department and became first lieutenant of artillery, serving ninety days in 1863, and being now the only living officer of that command. After being honorably discharged he engaged in the contracting business, which he has followed to the present time, and was for many years chairman of John B. Jericho Lodge, No. 646, Reading, Pa. Mr. Seider was the first building inspector of Reading, and has been one of the best known contractors of the city. Although he has reached an age when most men are willing to give up their active operations, Mr. Seider has no thought of so doing.

Standing six feet, one inch and weighing 200 pounds, he is robust and hearty, and is in full possession of all his faculties, being able to read without glasses as well as a young man of twenty.

Mr. Seider was married, in April, 1866, to Leann Armbruster, born 1840, and was widowed in November, 1904, aged seventy-two years. To this union there were born two children: Rosanna, deceased; and Jerome, deceased, formerly a letter carrier, and also captain of Company I, 4th Reg. Pa. National Guards. Mr. Seider is a member of McLean Post, G. A. R., formerly a member of G. M. Miller Lodge of Masons, and of the I. O. O. F., in politics he is a Republican.

THEODORE BENZ, now living retired from active work at his home at Mineral Spring Park, Reading, is a native of Germany, born in Baden, Saalbach, Nov. 9, 1835, and he is the only survivor of the seven children born to George Benz, a locksmith, whose entire life was passed in his native country.

Before coming to America Mr. Benz was employed with his brother, but in the fall of 1850 he set sail for the New World, the voyage lasting thirty-two days. He landed at New York City, but went at once to Philadelphia, where with his brother Charles he was employed at the Norris Machine Shop. After some time there he learned the baker's trade, and this he followed steadily until 1859, when he engaged in the oyster business at Reading, to which city he came in 1856. He was located at a corner on Penn street, and for a time was a partner of Capt. Michael Walters. This business was carried on most successfully until the time of the first draft for the Federal army in the Civil war. He served nine months in the Company known as the Hounds-Ward Company, and later was cook for Colonel Knoderer, Wert and Davis. In 1865 he began in the baking business at Reading, having his establishment at No. 814 Walnut street. This he continued for nine years, and then until 1892 he was engaged in the hotel business on Seventh street, between Penn and Franklin streets. That year he moved to No. 928 Penn street, from which place in 1892 he moved to his present location. In 1891 he built his home in Lower Alsace township, or Mt. Penn, on the Old Hessian Camp Ground. He has about eight acres of land, five of which are devoted to grapes and other fruit.

Mr. Benz married Barbara Mohring, who came to America from Germany when five years old. She died in 1876, aged fifty. They had one son, and is buried in the German Lutheran cemetery. Eight children were born to them, two of whom are deceased. The survivors are: Charles W., who has been a clerk in the Penn National Bank since its organization; John G., a plumber in business with his brother William, under the firm name of Benz & Bro.; Edward, aged in business is in the Benz & Bro. Company; William, a member of the plumbing firm of Benz & Bro.; Annie C., m. to Joseph C. Flatt, of Reading; and Miss Lillie, at home. In his religious faith Mr. Benz is a Lutheran. He is a member of Germania Lodge, I. O. O. F., and also of Reading Exposition, spending some months in travel abroad.

WILLIAM A. SMITH, ex-member of the common council of Reading, has spent his whole life in that city, where he was born in 1864, son of Nicholas and Catherine (Hartung) Smith.

William A. Smith was sent first to the parochial schools in Reading, and then to the public schools. After finishing his education he went into the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad company, to become a machinist, but after about five years in that occupation he went into business as a manufacturer of optical supplies and as a practical optician. His place of business is at Nos. 205-206 Cedar street, and he has been very successful. Mr. Smith has always taken an active interest in the welfare of the city and in politics is quite well known. He resides at No. 839 Washington street, his parents' home, in the Eighth ward, and for three terms has represented that constituency in the common council, elected on the Democratic ticket. In this work he has held all the important committees, and was a member of the board of appeals for a number of years. He is a progressive practical man, and was strongly supported by his fellow citizens in the ward. He has also for a long time been prominently connected with the Harmonic Maenads, and for four years has been its president. Besides being a member of the Sons of Veterans, Mr. Smith stands very high in the Masonic fraternity, in which his name is on the rolls of Teutonia Lodge, No. 367; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237; and Reading Commandery, No. 42, in all of which he is past officer. He also belongs to Rajah Temple.

SAMUEL H. SAILER, late a highly respected resident of Reading, was born in Alsace, now Muhlenberg township, Berks county—Nov. 25, 1832, son of Henry and Maria Magdalena Rothenberger, who was born Dec. 13, 1779, and they had two sons: Henry and John.

Henry Sailer, son of Henry and father of Samuel H., was born in what is now Muhlenberg township, Dec. 16, 1796, and worked on the farm with his father until the latter's death in middle life. The young man made a prosperous marriage with Susanna, a native of Salem township. The young man had a vicious disposition, and at all times the family of the Gov. Hiesters offer to continue on the farm, but the latter insisted upon a loan, and in a comparatively short time the money advanced so kindly by the Governor had been repaid, and Mr. Sailer well advanced on the road to prosperity. A few years later he purchased the farm, and settled at West Reading, and sold at sheriff's sale the Governor again insisted on a loan that Mr. Sailer might receive the benefit of the low price asked for the land. Again he justified his benefactor's confidence, and in time became one of the representative farmers of the county. Selling his farm then to Charles Evans he moved to Reading, and passed his last days in retirement. He died March 20, 1880. He had accumulated eight farms, and at his death gave one to each of his children. In his religious connection he was a member of the Reformed Church. He married Sarah Hahn, daughter of Adam Hahn; in neighboring Easton, also eight children were born to them: Sarah, deceased wife of the late John H. Mertz, a farmer of Richmond township; Adam H., a farmer in Exeter township; Henry, a retired farmer in Muhlenberg township; Samuel H.; William, a farmer of Chalfont; Adam, of Amity; and Solomon, deceased, a farmer of Muhlenberg township; and Catherine, who married (first) the late William Lauer, and (second) Jeremiah Guldin, a retired farmer of Muhlenberg township.

Samuel H. Sailer attended the public schools of Berks county and Reading, and also a graded school at Unionville, Chester county. Following the close of his school days he came to Reading, and learned the butchering business with William Lutz, following that business for three years. He then returned to the old homestead farm for six months after which he resumed work at his trade in Reading. After his marriage in 1857, Mr. Sailer worked on hisfather-in-law's farm in Exeter township for two years, and then moved to his father's Spring township farm, which he operated for thirty-three years. In 1890 he came to Reading, and located on No. 44 North Tenth street, where, having put aside the cares of business, he resided until his death Sept. 21, 1908. He owned a farm of 156 acres in Spring township, and another of ninety acres in Lower Heidelberg township.

In 1857 Mr. Sailer married Elenora L. Schaeffer, daughter of Capt. Henry and Annie (Levan) Schaeffer, the former of whom was a large farmer and stock dealer in Exeter township. The children of Capt. Schaeffer were: Mrs. Mary Hartman; Catherine, wife of Mr. Sailer, died in 1893; Rebecca is deceased; Jacob; Elizabeth; and Henry. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sailer were: Mary Ella, wife of John A. Ruth, with the Hollembach & Dietrich liquor store (they have one son, Arthur A., who is with the Heroy Tea and Coffee Store of Reading, and who married Catharine Lawen, and has one child, Ethel.) Ethel was employed by his brother Henry A., and who married Deborah Gass, and has a daughter, Catharine; and Henry A., who is engaged in the butchering business at No. 401 South Fourteenth street, and who married Helen Gass, and has three living children, Carl, Brook, and Ethel. Mr. Sailer was a member of the church in Alsace township, and is buried there.

JOHN JACOBS, who died in Reading May 12, 1894, was a native of Chester county, Pa., born in 1836. Mr. Jacobs, with one child, Florence, finished his education in the public schools, and had learned the trade of stone cutter, after which he went to Norristown to work. He was employed there for several years, and then moved to Reading, where the rest of his life was spent. He worked for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, at first as a stone cutter and later as a foreman, until within the last six years of his life. He was a master of his trade, a fine workman and mechanic, and his perfect reliability was fully appreciated by his employers. In politics he supported the Democratic party, and fraternally he was connected with the Young Men. A man of uniformly good character and actuated by the best motives, his life was an exemplification of his religious faith, and he was a sincere member of the First Reformed Church of Reading.

In 1874 Mr. Jacobs married Mrs. Mary A. Bechtel Winters, widow of David Winters, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Henry Musser, so long Mr. Jacobs' pastor. Mrs. Jacobs was daughter of John C. Bechtel, a farmer of Exeter township of well known Democratic principles. She was born in 1826, and her only brother, Joseph, m. Lydia DeHart, and has two daughters: Catherine M. John Grieff, and Louise M. the late George Fryberger. Mrs. Jacobs has no children. Like her husband she is a devout member of the Reformed Church, and one of its earnest workers. She has many warm friends.

EPHRAIM G. WERNER, senior member of the well-known firm of E. G. Werner & Sons, manufacturers of paper boxes, shipping cases and dealers in merchandise, at Mohnton, Pa., established this great business at the corner of Wyoming Avenue and Chestnut street in 1809.

The business was begun in a very humble way, only one hand being employed, and the first product of the company was hat boxes. The demand for Mr. Werner's goods soon became so heavy that in May, 1901, the firm began the manufacture of square boxes, the box being six cent. 300 boxes were sold in one day, and now employ seventy hands in both factories, and turn out 10,000 boxes daily, their goods finding a ready sale at Reading and in the surrounding counties. The Mohnton factory, a fine two-story structure, 50x60 feet, is fitted with the latest and most highly improved machinery. Their Reading factory, at No. 313 Bingaman street, was opened in 1907, with Mr. J. C. Werner in charge, making a specialty of fancy goods, and turning out some of the best work in the State. The firm also carry on a general merchandise business, and in this line have also been very successful. In politics Mr. Werner is independent and devoted member of the Salem U. E. Church, where he has served for many years as trustee, being now president of the board, Sunday-school superintendent of class No. 1, and leader of the English Bible class. He is one of the pillars of the Church, and is greatly honored by all who know him. Mr. Werner's fraternal connections are with the K. of F., No. 485, and the O. U. A. M.

To Mr. and Mrs. Werner there were born six children: (1) John C. was admitted a member of the firm of E. G. Werner & Sons in January, 1907. He married Jane M. O'Kanes, and has two sons, Edward A., born February 22, 1908, and Robert A., born January 27, 1909. (2) Sarah A., married Norman A. Metzler, and has four children, Alitha, Paul, and John, born February 22, 1908, and Paul and John, deceased. John C. is a member of Camp No. 211, P. O. S. of A., and of the M. W. A. For several years he has been a chorister of the Salem Evangelical Church. (3) Jeremiah died in infancy. (4) Margaret, a musician of ability, who was for many years organist of the church, is now a trained nurse, residing at No. 1380 Wallace street, Philadelphia. (5) Walter S., is also a member of the firm, admitted in January, 1907; he is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M., and of the Schuykill Lodge, No. 149, E. M. & A. M., of the order of Perfection, Fourteenth Degree, and of the M. W. A. He is a member of the Free Will Baptist Church, and they reside at Reading. They have one daughter, Dorothy M. (6) Anna M. died in infancy, Mr.
Ephraim G. Werner was one of the organizers of the Mohnton National Bank, and one of its first directors in which office he is still serving. He also served as chairman of the committee when the present bank building was erected. He is chairman of the Mohnton Cemetery Committee.

JOHN HENDELS SONS. The hat business has constituted a prominent feature of the industrial life of Reading from the beginning of the place, and of all the numerous successful plants which have been carried on here during the past 160 years none has surpassed that which was established by John Hendel and his brother in 1871 on Fifth street below Laurel, and which has been owned and operated by John Hendel's sons in an equally successful manner since.

In 1860, fifty years ago, Levi Hendel and two of his sons, John and George, embarked in the business of manufacturing wool hats at Adamstown, in Lancaster county (ten miles southwest from Reading), under the firm name of Levi Hendel & Sons, and there they carried on their factory for four years. The sons retiring from the firm, they then established a factory at St. Lawrence, in Exeter township, Berks county, a short distance beyond the Black Bear Inn, and after operating it three years moved to Reading, where they erected a more commodious plant on Maple street south of Chestnut. They carried on business there successfully for some years, when they sold the plant and dissolved the partnership. John Hendel then secured a hat factory at the corner of Eleventh and Spruce streets but he remained there only a year when he and his brothers, George and Henry B., trading as John Hendel & Bros., purchased the large "Wyoming Woolen Mills" on South Fifth street below Laurel, and equipped it with the most improved machinery, making it at that time (1871) one of the largest wool hat establishments in Pennsylvania.

Notwithstanding the growing uncertain conditions of the hat trade then, their enterprising spirit nevertheless asserted itself and they developed their business into larger proportions, eventually assuming a great number of employees. In 1879 (Jan. 1) the senior partner, John Hendel, admitted three of his sons (Levi H., Daniel J., and James M.) as partners, and the firm name was then changed to Hendel Brothers & Sons. Subsequently other partners were admitted at different times, and the business was gradually developed to a much greater extent and responsibility.

In December, 1897, the firm determined to discontinue the further manufacture of wool hats and after re-constructing the large factory and equipping it with the latest improved machinery for the production of soft fur hats, medium grade, embarked in the new business, and since then they have manufactured large quantities of fur hats, which are sold at New York City through their own sales agents and shipped to jobbers in all parts of the United States and Canada. They began with 225 hands, but gradually increased their production until they came to employ 400 hands.

HARRISON P. HENDELS, the youngest partner, whilst on a pilgrimage with the "Shrine" to the Pacific coast in 1892, was accidentally killed, and with many others Shrines from Reading at Honda, Cal., on May 11, and in whose interest the firm was purchased immediately afterward by his two brothers, the surviving partners, who have continued the business under the name of John Hendel's Sons, keeping up the superior reputation and credit of the establishment which their enterprising father had created. He was born at Adamstown, Pa., in 1864, and after obtaining his education in the local schools and at Hackettstown, N. J. He then entered the office of his father's factory as a clerk, and filled this position in a most faithful manner until 1895, when he became one of the firm of John Hendel's Sons.

JOHN HENDELS was prominently engaged in the manufacture of wool hats for thirty-five years, and came to be identified with different financial institutions at Reading, more especially the First National Bank and the Reading Trust Company, of which he was a director for many years. In this connection we may note that in 1905, he was very highly esteemed for his superior character as a man; and he had an exceptional career as one of the leading successful manufacturers at Reading for twenty-five years, having operated his large establishment in a most remarkable manner through all the costly fluctuations of that trying period. He was an earnest advocate of Republicanism, and has always appreciated the great importance of supporting the doctrine of protection to home industries. He was a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. and A. M., and of DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, K. T. He took an active interest in matters relating to the development of the Evangelical Church, and served for many years as a class-leader, steward and trustee.

Mr. Hendel was born at Adamstown, Lancaster county, Dec. 7, 1833, and after receiving a limited education learned the trade of hatter under his father, an experienced hat manufacturer, and he was engaged at his trade at that place until 1859, when he formed a co-partnership with his father and his brother George. [For his subsequent career in the wool hat business, see previous sketch of John Hendel's Sons.] He married in 1853 Catharine Stieff, daughter of William Stieff, of Adamstown, and by her he had eleven children: Levi H., Daniel J., James M., Ada, Mary A. (m. Walter A. Boas), George W., Charles W., Edwin F., Harvey G., Enoch B., Catharine A. (m. George G. Guenther), John, George and Harvey died in their youth. James ably represented the firm for a number of years at New York City in the sale of their hats, and died in 1889, at the age of thirty-two years.

Levi Hendel was the father of John Hendel. He was born in Brecknock township, Lancaster county, in 1809, and having been left an orphan at the age of four years, was indentured to a neighboring farmer until his fourteenth year, when he was apprenticed to the hatter's trade of Adamstown. In 1831 he was joined by his brother Joseph, when he became a partner in the firm of Hendel & Brothers, and by his sister Theresa's husband, William Fichthorn, when he became a prosperous workman, he engaged in the business of manufacturing wool hats at Adamstown and he followed it until he died, in 1868. He married Susan Bollman, a daughter of Jacob Bollman, farmer of Cumru ( afterward Spring) township, Berks county, and they had six children: John, George, Ephraim (who died an infant), Louisa (m. William Humbert) and William. After the decease of his first wife, in 1862, he married Susan Will, a daughter of Henry Will, a coach-maker of Cumru township, and by her had two children, Emma (m. Isaac Y. Spang) and William (who died an infant). And his grandfather was John Hendel, who settled in 1731 at Adamstown, where he carried on the business of cabinet-making. He married Catharine Auman, and they had three children: Levi, John and Theresa (m. William Fichthorn).

DANIEL JACOB HENDELS, the senior partner of John Hendel's Sons, a manufacturer of hats at Reading since 1895, was born at Adamstown, Lancaster county, July 8, 1855. He received his preliminary education at Adamstown and Reading, and then took a course of advanced studies in Millersville State Normal School, for several years, until he was sixteen years of age. He then entered his father's hat factory at Reading for the purpose of learning the business in all its branches, and after serving a regular apprenticeship and working as a journeyman he became of age he was appointed foreman of the finishing department, which imposed upon him as a young man a large share of responsibility. He managed this department for several years until 1879, when he was admitted as a partner, at the firm, assuming the skillful manner in which he had discharged his duties.

Mr. Hendel continued with the firm until 1895, attending strictly to business and gradually assuming more and more responsibilities, when the firm was reorganized by the senior partner's three sons (Daniel, Edwin and Harrison). The firm continued the same, but changed the management into itself upon itselfs own management, for which they had been gradually prepared by their father, and in which they since have been very successful, trading under the name of John Hendel's Sons. [See sketch of this firm.]. He was made a Freemason in St. John's Lodge No. 435, F. and A. M., at Reading, in 1883, and was advanced to the thirty-second degree in the Philadelphia Consistory in 1891. He has also been identified with the Reading Commandery, No. 42, Knights Templar, of which his eldest son, George E. Hendel, is a member, and the Reading Commandery, No. 70, Scottish Rite, to which Mr. Hendel was admitted in 1901. Since 1906, he has served as a director of the First National Bank, of which his father had been one of the directors from 1879 to 1903.

In 1890 Mr. Hendel married Amanda M. Bachman, daughter of Charles S. Bachman (a successful merchant-tailor for many years at Reading) and Sarah F. Barndt, his wife, by whom he had three sons: George E. Hendel, Frederick Bachman and Harry Bachman—the last two having been twins, who died in youth.

EDWIN FRANKLIN HENDEL, junior partner of John Hendel's Sons, was born at St. Lawrence, near Reading, March 30, 1866, and was an infant when his parents removed to Reading. He acquired his early education in the schools at Reading, and then attended an advanced school at Hatcettstown, N. J. He learned the trade of hatter in his father's large establishment, where he was employed until 1895; then he and his two brothers, Daniel and Harrison, formed and established Hendel Bros. & Co., including the extensive trade; and since then this co-partnership has carried on the business in a very successful manner. Mr. Hendel was made a Freemason in St. John's Lodge, No. 435, in 1903; and in June of that year he was advanced to the thirty-second degree in the Philadelphia Consistory.

In 1887 Mr. Hendel married Mary A. Faber, daughter of John T. Faber and Savilla Miller, his wife, of Reading, and they have two children: Raymond Harrison and Catharine Marie.

JOSEPH EBERLY, whose death on Feb. 23, 1897, removed one of the most prominent and influential men of Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county, resided on an attractive and productive farm of sixty acres. He was born March 23, 1809, in Lower Heidelberg township, son of Christian and Christina (Flickinger) Eberly.

The Eberly family, which is of German descent, was founded in this country by Peter Eberly, who emigrated from Wittenberg, Germany, in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and soon after landing settled in Lower Heidelberg township, on the farm now owned by Peter Eberly, whose death occurred.

Peter Eberly, grandfather of Joseph, was also a farmer of Heidelberg township, and purchased 250 acres of land near Cushion Hill from pioneer Welsh settlers. His wife, who was a Newcomer, of Lancaster county, Pa., accompanied her parents from Germany when a child. Peter Eberly and his wife are buried in a private cemetery on their property at Cushion Hill, this burying ground being surrounded by a three-foot wall, and they have rough sand stones, on which there are no inscriptions, for tombstones. They had six children, namely: Peter, who settled in Lancaster county, had a grandson, Peter (resides at Mohnton, Pa.); Michael was a farmer of Lancaster county; Christian: Daniel lived on the farm now owned by Peter Feiler at Fritztown; one daughter married a Mr. Hauschen (?), and located in Cumberland county; and a daughter of whom there is no record.

Christian Eberly, father of Joseph, was born in Lower Heidelberg township in 1759, and died in 1827, in his sixty-ninth year. He was a successful farmer and owned two large properties, one of eighty acres near Wernersville. In 1818 he built a stone house on his farm near Montello, and here he died. He conducted the Eberly mills for a number of years. Mr. Eberly married Christina Flickinger, daughter of Joseph Flickinger, of Lancaster county, and they had these children: Elizabeth, who died unmarried at the age of eighty-four years; Susan, who died unmarried, aged fifty years; Samuel, who married Nancy Conrath and lived and died on the farm near Wernersville; Molly, who married Samuel Reish, of Cumru township, and had two sons, Samuel and Isaac; Catherine, who died at the age of eighteen years; and Joseph.

Fritz Eberly was a lifelong farmer, and owned the tract of sixty acres, on which was situated the Eberly sawmill, which later became a grist mill, and was finally turned into a factory, being abandoned in about 1901. Mr. Eberly was a well known and influential citizen, and had the respect and esteem of all. He was a Republican in politics, and his will was not filed following his death. Mr. Eberly was a member of St. John's Reformed Church, where the family have a nice burial plot.

In 1837 Joseph Eberly was married to Martha Sharman, born Jan. 22, 1815, who died Feb. 22, 1894, aged seventy-nine years, one month, daughter of Henry and Agnes Sharman, of Cumru (now Spring) township. To Mr. and Mrs. Eberly were born these children: Samuel, born Jan. 26, 1838; Emanuel, born Feb. 21, 1840, a coal miner at Fritztown, M. D., Mary, daughter of William Fisher, and married. Sarah, born Mar. 3, 1842; Enoch, born Jan. 3, 1844; Eliza, born Aug. 27, 1846; Henry died aged nine years, ten months; Joseph, born Jan. 29, 1855, died Jan. 23, 1897, aged fifty-five years, M. Annie Wenrich; and William, a carpenter, and deacon of the Reformed Church at Spring, M. A. Alice Gromis, and has one son, Wellington.

Samuel, Christian, Enoch and Miss Eliza Eberly are all unmarried, and reside together near Montello, on the Lancaster road in Spring township. They are highly esteemed in the community, and are in comfortable circumstances.

DAVID D. BABB, a highly esteemed citizen of Lower Alsace township, Berks Co., Pa., who is engaged in blacksmithing and operating a well-cultivated truck farm, was born June 35, 1837, in Alsace (now Lower Alsace) township, son of John and Mary (De Hart) Babb.

John Babb, son of John, Sr., and grandfather of David D., married and had the following children: Jesse, who in early life was a farmer, removed to Reading where he died aged seventy-eight years; Benjamin, a tailor of Reading, where he died; and a daughter, whose name is unknown.

John Babb, father of David D., and Sarah married Peter Fies, a wheelwright by trade, who kept the "Black Horse Hotel" for many years, and they had five children—Rachel, Sarah, Benjamin, Mahlon and Jerre; and Rachel married Augustus Eidel, a farmer of Oley, where she died aged seventy-five years.

John Babb, father of David D., who was a blacksmith by trade, conducted the "Centre Hotel" for many years, and there his death occurred. He married Mary De Hart, daughter of John De Hart, and to this union there were born sixteen children, as follows: David D.; Sarah, m. to Jacob Bauer, a farmer of near Baustown; Emma, m. to Henry Christian, a farmer of Alsace township, whose death occurred in Reading; Mary, m. to Richard Long, a cooper who died in Reading; Elizabeth, who died in Reading, m. to Dallas Leinbach; Savilla, who died unmarried in Reading; Rose, m. to Daniel Reider, a bricklayer who now lives in Nebraska; Caroline, m. to Fred Heine, who resides at Omaha, Nebr.; Daniel, a farmer of near Green Tree, Cumru township, m. to Amanda, daughter of Daniel Zieber; George, m. to Isabella Foulk, deceased; and John, m. to Margaret, who died; and he had a homestead, m. to S. Hettie, daughter of Jerre Fick; John, m. to Lucy. Joseph was killed at the second battle of Bull Run, during the Civil war; William, who died young; Martha, m. to Thomas Keller, who works in a woolen mill and resides near the Stony Creek Mills; Minerva, who married John Fisher, deceased, and resides near Reading; Ida, m. to Louis Kern, and residing near Reading.

David D. Bab, was reared and educated in Alsace (now Lower Alsace) township, and from the age of sixteen years assisted his father in the blacksmith shop. There he learned the trade, which he has followed to this present time, also carrying on truck farming. Mr. Bab, was married to Miss Rebecca Marberger, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Hafer) Marberger and she died Aug. 3, 1907, being interred at Spie's Church cemetery. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bab; Sarah Alice, born Feb. 3, 1862, m. William Ibach, and resided near Mt. Penn in the townships; John M., born June 12, 1863, m. Sarah Keller; David M., born Aug. 5, 1867, is single; Annie Rebecca, born June 15, 1869, m. John Klemmer, and they reside at St. Lawrence. Exeter township, where he is a weaver in Brumbaugh's woolen mills. Mr. Bab and his family are members of the Lutheran congregation at Spie's Church.

CYRUS K. SPATZ, who is engaged in operating his 108-acre farm in Muhlenberg township, Berks county, one of the finest properties of the locality, was born June 17, 1841, in Bern township, son of Valentine and Elizabeth (Kauffman) Spatz.

Valentine Spatz, who was a farmer in Bern township, died in 1863 at the age of 84 years, and his wife passed away when seventy-three years of age. He was a member of the Reformed Church, while she was a Lutheran, and both were highly esteemed in the community in which they spent a majority of their lives. Mr. Spatz was a Democrat in his political opinions, and was a school director for some years in Bern township. Valentine Spatz and his wife had children: Cyrus K., Jonathan, Levi, Lovina, William, Elam, Amelia and Benjamin.

Cyrus K. Spatz was reared upon his father's farm in Bern township, where he remained until twenty-seven years of age, and at this time located in Muhlenberg township, where he has since resided. He bought the John Barnhart property of 108 acres, a fine, fertile tract, upon which he built, at a cost of $4000, a two-story brick residence which is one of the finest in Leesport. This home, which is very substantial in character and model in design is one of the finest in Muhlenberg township.

In 1868 Mr. Spatz was married to Catharine Barnhart, daughter of John Barnhart, and to this union there have been born five children: Irvin D. B. m. Mary Shepp, and has three children, Mabel, Charles and Laura; Wilson D. B. m. Bessie Huntsberger, and has four children, Catherine, Warren, Emily and Eber; Catherine m. H. P. Shaffer, and has one child, Catharine; Ella m. Howard Adam, and has one child, Mary; and Florence is single. In religious belief he was Reformed, and was a member of the Hinselitz Church. He was a Democrat in politics, having been a number of time to the office of school director. Fraternally Mr. Spatz was connected with Leesport Lodge, No. 144, I. O. O. F., his wife being a member of the Rebekahs.

Mrs. Spatz was a daughter of Gabriel Gehret, and one of a family of four daughters, the other three being: Amelia, m. to Daniel Baum; Ellen, m. to Thomas Baum; brother of Daniel; and Adeline, m. to Daniel Holtry, deceased.

SAMUEL BEARD, one of the oldest citizens of Reading, Pa., and an honored veteran of the great Civil war, was born in 1846, in Shoemakersville, Berks county, son of Herman Beard and grandson of Samuel Beard.

Samuel Beard, the grandfather, was for some years engaged in the hotel business in Berks and Schuylkill counties, being at one time proprietor of the well-known hotel at Fifth and Washington streets, Reading, now owned by Mr. H. Godfrey. He died at the age of seventy-five years.

Herman Beard, the father of Samuel, was born in Berks county, and for a number of years was engaged in the mercantile business at Shoemakersville, Berks county, also conducting a hotel business at that place. Coming to Reading, Mr. Beard engaged in the hotel business at Fifth and Washington streets, but later went to Pottsville where he was in business for three years. He later returned to Reading, where he died in 1892, aged seventy-six years. He was a Mason of high standing. Mr. Beard married Annetta Yergert, and their children were: Samuel, Sallie and William.

Samuel Beard attended the public schools of Reading, after leaving which he learned the machinist's trade, which he followed from 1854 to 1861, at which time he enlisted in Company H, 25th Pa. V. I., for three months service. After his discharge he veteranized in Company I, 115th Pa. V. I., for three years, and was engaged in various trades, until he was wounded in the battle of Antietam, Sept. 21, 1862, before the muscle of the right arm, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. On receiving his honorable discharge he returned to Reading, and tried to go to work at his trade, but his arm could not stand the strain, and he secured a position as clerk in a hotel at Pottsville, where he remained until 1881. Mr. Beard then went to Nebraska, and for some time was employed in clerking there, but again returned to Reading and engaged with the Reading Iron Company, in the tube works department, where he has been employed to the present time, something over twenty-five years of faithful service. Mr. Beard resides at No. 414 Walnut street.

Mr. and Mrs. Beard had one child: Helen Kate, daughter of Jacob Reed, of Pottsville Schuylkill county, and to this union were born: George R., a printer of Philadelphia, m. Emma Skee; William L., employed at the tube works, is single and resides at home; Nellie, m. Lewis Eastburn, of Reading; and Emma is at home. Mr. Beard is a Republican in politics, and while resident of Schuylkill county, he assisted in taking the census there. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. Fraternally Mr. Beard is a Mason, and has been a member of Pullask Lodge, No. 246, Pottsville, since 1873.

CHARLES W. BECHTEL, general inspector of the city of Reading, was born in that place, son of John R. Bechtel, and grandson of David Bechtel. The latter was a farmer of Douglassville, Berks county.

John R. Bechtel was a real estate dealer and builder in Reading. He married Sophia Ringle, daughter of Jacob Ringle, a boat builder of that same city, and to this union were born seven children, namely: Sarah, Mrs. Stout; Susan, at home; Minnie, wife of George E. Miller, an employee at the city hall; Rena, at home; George L., a clothier; Ernest V., who represents the Fourth ward in the common council; and Charles W.

Charles W. Bechtel was born Jan. 25, 1856, and after attending the public schools, completed his education in Palatinate College, graduating with the class of 1875. For two years he was in the grocery business for himself, but at the end of that time he went into his father's merchant tailoring establishment, then the largest concern of its kind in Reading. He worked for his father fifteen years, and for the next eight years was employed at building for his father. He finally gave up the building business, in 1890 and entered into the general line of dealing in all of the city manufacturing plants, and as he fills the office with great efficiency, he has been reappointed each succeeding year.

Mr. Bechtel was married July 4, 1880, to Miss Mina Geho, daughter of Nicoledemus Geho, shoe dealer at Reading. One daughter has been born to them, Amy, now the wife of Walter G. Taylor, an employe of Dives, Pomroy & Stewart.

In politics Mr. Bechtel is a Republican, and is an active worker for his party, in which turn has made him its representative in various official positions. He was a member of the common council from the Fourteenth ward for a period of ten years, 1890-90, and was also a ward assessor for twelve years. He has been chairman of the Sixth ward for some time, is frequently a delegate to Republican conventions, and holds a prominent place on the board of public works. Fraternally Mr. Bechtel belongs to the B. P. O. E., and in religion he is a member of the Memorial Reformed Church.

JOHN C. PRINTZ, who for many years was a pattern-maker and member of the firm of Davis & Printz, on Ninth, below Bingaman street, was born in 1839, in Bradford, Pa., son of John and Catherine Printz, of Berks County, and grandson of George Printz, a minister of the Presbyterian Church.

John C. Printz was married in 1867 to Lavinia Espenshade, daughter of Henry F. and Louisa (Leaman) Espenshade, an old and honorable Pennsylvania Mennonite family. Mr. Espenshade was for many years a tanner on Cherry below Fifth, street, Reading, and was well and favorably known in that part of the city. He and his wife had these children: Lemuel, a soldier in the Civil war, was wounded in battle and died at a hospital; Daniel F. is deceased; and Lavinia C. m. Mr. Printz.

Mrs. Printz survives her husband, and lives in the home built by him. To Mr. and Mrs. Printz were born the following children: Henry G., who is a pattern maker, m. a Miss Gantz; Etta L. m. Edward Yeager; Ella m. Frank G. Dietrich, a teacher; Mabel m. Jeremiah Romig, a conductor in the employ of the United Traction Company's System; Paul is a molder; Martha m. Gustavus Abraham, a hatter; Fred, unmarried, is in the United States Navy; and Charles died at the age of nine years.

John C. Printz was known to be a man of honor and integrity, and was much esteemed by his acquaintances for his many sterling characteristics. He was a patriotic and highly esteemed citizen of Reading. His fraternal connections were with Montgomery Lodge of the Odd Fellows, of Reading; Knights of Pythias; Knights of Malta; and Friendship Fire Company.

DAVID CLouser, in his lifetime one of Reading's highly esteemed citizens, was born in Oley township, Berks Co., Pa., March 5, 1827, son of Abraham Clouser.

Abraham Clouser was a miller by trade, who followed that occupation in Oley township throughout his life. To him and his wife, whose maiden name was Hart, were born children as follows: David, John, an agriculturist of Ashland, Ohio; Sarah, m. to the Rev. Samuel Mommberger; Maria, m. to Lewis Saxon; and Malinda, m. to the late Frank Clandle, and residing in Berks County.

David Clouser secured his early educational training in the pay schools of Oley township, and at an early age began to learn the carpenter's trade. In 1854 he came to Reading, working at his trade in the city for a period of thirty-five years. He first was employed in the Philadelphia & Reading shops, and later with different contractors, at house carpentering, and was considered a skilled and faithful workman. He erected his late home at No. 323 North Eighth street, Reading, in 1857, and resided there until his death March 5, 1907. His remains were interred at Alsace churchyard.

Mr. Clouser married Sophia Kline, daughter of Henry Kline. She died Oct. 5, 1905, and was buried at the Berks County Alsace Church. Of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Clouser, only two are living: David K., who is a machinist at the Philadelphia & Reading shops, Reading, and now living at the home No. 323 North Eighth street; and Irwin, boss of the air brakes at the Philadelphia & Reading shops, Reading. In his political belief Mr. Clouser was a Democrat, but although he took a deep interest in the success of that party, never cared for public office. He was a Lutheran in his religious belief.

ALTHOUSE The first of the Althouse family to come to America was George Althouse, born May 5, 1744, in Wittenstein (Grafshaft) Germany, and died Feb. 7, 1811. He married Maria Barbara Herbein (born March 21, 1741, died March 23, 1822), and among their children was a son, Peter.

Peter Althouse, born Feb. 3, 1775, died March 5, 1839. He married Catherine Schaeffer, born Oct. 2, 1775, who died Aug. 26, 1886. Their children were: George, born in 1805; died Jan. 6, 1866; Susan m. James and Mary (Albright) Shomo.

Samuel Althouse m. Mary Ann Zacharias, and they had three sons and one daughter: George, born Jan. 15, 1841, died May 29, 1861; John Z., born May 28, 1848, died June 27, 1879; Catherine, born in August, 1844, died Jan. 4, 1865; and Samuel, born Oct. 14, 1847, died by his father before the children died in January, 1849, and the mother Oct. 4, 1865.

John Z. Althouse was born on the property now owned by his widow, near Epler's Church, in Bern township, which was settled by the pioneer of the family in this section. After his marriage Mr. Althouse located in Reading in the home now occupied by his widow, and here resided until his death. He also owned much property in Riverside, a portion of which was donated by his widow to the Olivet Reformed Church, and was a stockholder and one of the organizers of the Berks & Lehigh Railroad.

Charles A., Mr. Althouse's son, married to Deborah R. Eppler, daughter of Jared and Deborah (Rothermel) Eppler, and to this union were born six children: Jennie; Mary; Emily, deceased; Samuel, m. to Caroline Shomo, and father of two children—Dorothea and Josephine; George, who died young; and an infant.

ABRAHAM F. REESER, now living retired from active business life, at No. 217 South Fourth street, Reading, Pa., was born in Bern township, Berks Co., Pa., July 26, 1855, son of Abraham S. and Annie (Feather) Reeser, and grandson of John Reeser.

The great-grandfather of Abraham F., also named John, emigrated from the Berks township, Berks county, at an early date, and there took up a large tract of land from William Penn. Here he settled and made many improvements, engaging in agricultural pursuits for the remainder of his life. Abraham S. Reeser, father of Abraham F., was educated in the schools of his native township, and like his forefathers engaged in farming. He was independent in political matters. Mr. Reeser was a very generous man and gave liberally of his means to any church or charitable institution. He and his wife were the parents of these children: Sarah, Catherine, John, Abraham P. and William. The family were members of the Reformed Church.

Abraham F. Reeser was educated in the common schools of Bern township, but subsequently attended Irvin Academy and still later Lee's school. He then accepted a position with Rhoads & Son as clerk, in Berks county, in the grocery establishment, which was located in the old jail, Fifth street and Washington, the firm also operating a shoe and liquor store in connection with their grocery, as was the custom in those days. Mr. Reeser continued with Rhoads & Son for several years, when he went to Philadelphia, and there he engaged in the provision business until 1862, when he sold out to William H. Wannaker, and returned to Reading. After engaging in the lightning rod business for three years, Mr. Reeser engaged in the store business in Reading, opening the Eagle Shoe Store on Penn street, which he conducted five years, and then sold out, engaging in the real estate business, which he has continued to the present time. Mr. Reeser built the first house in West Reading, opened the first street there, and inaugurated the water system. He also purchased a plot of land and laid out Woodvale, owning at present there about 500 lots, as well as Woodvale Mansion, a summer hotel and one of the finest health resorts in this section of Pennsylvania. He built the Black Bear road, known as the East Reading Railroad, the first mile of the Gravity Railroad, and all the drives on NeverSink Mountain. It has always been active in any movement for the upbuilding of his locality, especially in the way of real estate development and buildings in Reading proper, West Reading and Woodvale (or what is now Mt. Penn).

In politics Mr. Reeser is a Republican, and he served as assessor three years. He is a member of the Reformed Church. Fraternally he belongs to St. John's Lodge No. 456, F. & A. M.

On the maternal side Mr. Reeser is of Prussian and French Huguenot stock. Peter Feather, his grandfather, was born in Berks county, and he owned and operated the "American House" in Reading. He was very public spirited and progressive. His wife was a Miss Levin.

MATHIAS. The Mathias family in Berks county, Pa., is of German origin, the first of the name to come to America being Philip Mattis (as he spelled his name in his will). He will was proved Nov. 1792, and probated Feb. 26, 1793 (See Will Book B, page 331). His death occurred in Earl township. The name Mathias is variously spelled. In the tax list of Earl township, in 1782, it is recorded as Philip Mathew, and in other legal documents it is spelled Matthias, Mattis and Mathias. Philip Mathis owned considerable property, and at his death gave two of his daughters, Elizabeth and Maria Catharine, fifty pounds in money. His son Philip and trusty friend, John Houck, were the executors. His children mentioned in the will were: Eliz-

HENRY A. COLLINS, a substantial business man of Robeson township, Berks county, who is the proprietor of the Seldeltown Grist and Flouring Mill, was born March 15, 1864, in Topton, Berks county, son of Amos and Maria (Albright) Collins.

James Collins, father of Henry A., who was a foreman on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, while engaged in construction work on that road was killed in 1864, and was buried at Reading. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. He and his estimable wife were the parents of these children: Daniel; Clara; Ida, who married Oliver Grubb and had two children, Charles and George; Andrew J.; Curtin and Henry A., the first three named now deceased. Mrs. Collins was married (second) to Amos Weinpelt, whom she bore three children, namely: Howard, Amos and Margaret A.

Henry A. Collins was educated in the public schools of Robeson township and the city of Reading, and after leaving the latter secured employment on the farm of Milton Geiger, of Geigertown, with whom he continued as a laborer for two years. He then entered the employ of the Seyfert's, at Gibraltar, continuing in the iron works for twenty-three years, the major portion of which time he acted in the important capacity of heater. Being industrious and thrifty, Mr. Collins accumulated enough to go into business on his own account, and in 1904 he purchased the Williams & Mill, at Seldeltown, a ninety-three acre tract consisting of farm and timberland, where he has since made many improvements. He has always been enterprising and hard-working, and is deserving of the success which has come to him. Honest and upright in all of his dealings, Mr. Collins has gained an enviable reputation for integrity, and has the esteem and respect of all who know him. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and takes a great interest in the success of his party, although he has never sought public preferment. Fraternally he is connected with Washington Camp, No. 298, P. O. S. of Reading, while Mrs. Collins is a member of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Collins was married in 1888 to Anna M. Hafer, and eight children have been born to this union, as follows: Penrose, Paul, Harry, Herbert, Mark L., James, Margaret A. and Mary L. abeth, Philip, Jacob, Stephen, Maria Catharine, Barbara and Eva Rosina.

(II) Jacob Mathias, son of Philip, lived in Earl township, where he obtained fifty acres of land from a man named Vogal. He died in 1826, and at this time not all the land in the district had been taken up. This tract is now owned by Jacob S. Mathias. Jacob Mathias married a Miss Heatzer, and they are buried at Hill Church. He died in 1825, and his will is recorded in Book C, p. 346. In it are mentioned sons Johannes, David, William and Jacob, and daughters Betzy (m. Mayer), Polly (m. John Emes and second, James Emes), Catharine (m. Henry Emes), and Sallie (m. John Reider). The son Jacob and Michael Motz were the executors of the will.

(II) Philip Mathias (2), son of Philip, the ancestor, was born in Amity township, and died in 1801, and is buried at Amityville. He was a member of the German Reformed Church. His will made May 15, 1801, was probated the 27th of the following June. He married Mary Swavely, who survived him many years; their children were: Anna, deceased, who married George Drumheller, deceased, and lived in Earl township; Philip S.; Enoch, first a farmer in Earl, then a merchant in Gilbertsville, and finally a resident of Reading where he died; Mary, who married Elam Guldin, a man of adventurous spirit, who sold the homestead to Daniel; Jacob, who lived at Conshohocken, Pa.; Hiram, a merchant at Earlville; Daniel, who lived on the homestead many years, and later moved to his present home near Pleasantville; and Mahlon, who died aged nineteen years.

(IV) Philip S. Mathias, son of Daniel, was born in Earl township in 1825, and he died Feb. 28, 1869. He was an early school teacher in Earl township, teaching in all sixteen terms in one district. He owned a 20-acre tract in Earl township, and there his death occurred, and his remains were interred at Oley. He died at the height of his career, being greatly interested in educational matters. He was a member of the Oley Reformed Church. With his wife he is buried in the cemetery at Oley. He married Elizabeth Spohn, daughter of Casper Spohn, a Hessian soldier who remained in Berks county after the Revolution. They had four children: Anna, deceased; Mathias, who married Sarah Long, and lives at Drumheller, Pa.; John; and George, who married Jane Fisher, and lives in Earl township.

(V) Morris M. Mathias, son of Philip S., received his early education in the schools of Earl township, and later attended the Kallymean Academy, at Boyertown. In 1872 he was licensed to teach by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner, and he taught three terms in Pine Grove school in his native township. Later he taught four terms in the Pleasantville Independent district in Oley, and then two terms in Shanesville. He was a successful teacher, was a conscientious teacher, and a conscientious teacher, and remained in the Amity township, and attained a high place among Berks county educators. In 1877 he began farming on the Aaron Weller farm near Shanesville, and this farm became his by purchase in 1885. It contains seventy acres of rich land, and he carried on farming here until the spring of 1908, when he was badly injured. In 1907 he built an addition to the house, and greatly improved the property; the excellent condition of the entire place shows his good management. He also owns several tracts of woodland, one in Earl township, and one in Pike. He is an aggressive citizen, intelligent and progressive, and keenly interested in the development of his community. In 1882, when but twenty-eight years of age he was elected justice of the peace, and has been re-elected continuously since, his present term extending to May 6, 1912. He has settled many disputes, and has many times kept friends and neighbors at court, being in reality the peace-maker of the district. He has served as clerk at many sales, as administrator of estates, and also as executor, and has been made guardian of a number of children. He is an agent of the Boyertown Fire Insurance Company, and has been since 1893. For six years he was auditor of the township. He and his family are members of Oley Reformed Church, of which he was deacon and later elder, and he is secretary of the Oley Cemetery Company.

On Sept. 28, 1875, Mr. Mathias was married to Mary Ann D. Weller, daughter of Aaron and Sarah (Dolper) Weller. Their children were: Sarah, who died in infancy; Olivia W., at home; Warren W., a farmer in Oley township, near Pleasantville, m. to Willi De Turck, daughter of Daniel De Turck, of Oley, and has children M. D., Mary, and Alvin; Erma M. De, daughter of Morris W., graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1902, and now engaged in teaching in Earl township, m. to Alice Clauser, daughter of Henry Clauser, and has children Stanley, Helen and Ralph; J. M. W., a farmer on the homestead, m. to Katie Dry, daughter of Samuel Dry, and has children--Leroy, Mabel and Annie; and Lawrence W., a farmer in Oley, organizer of the Oley Union Sunday-school, and formerly a teacher of music, m. to Ella Fisher, daughter of Daniel D. Fisher, and has one son, Russell.

HENRY S. GOTSCHALL, one of the representatives of farmers of Berks county, Pa., who is engaged in cultivating his fine property in Alsace township, was born June 23, 1839, in Alsace township, son of Daniel and Hannah (Schildt) Gotschall.

George Gotschall, grandfather of Henry S., was a son of John Gotschall and wife (nee Keller). He married Susan Croninger, by whom he had these children: Daniel; Elizabeth, m. to John Neukirk; Sarah, m. to John Holdrie, of Indiana; Ella, m. to John Schildt, of Alsace township; Elana, m. to William Dely; Rachel, m. to Samuel Hellrer; Louisa, m. to Mrs. Magdalena (Fox) Keener; George, m. to Mrs. Elizabeth (Delp) Butterweck; and John, m. to Elmina Schwoyer.

Daniel Gotschall, father of Henry S., was a farmer of Alsace township, where he spent his entire life. He was married to Hannah Schildt, and to them these children were born: Lovina, m. to Amos Hoyt; Henry S.; Sarah, m. to Daniel Bingaman; Daniel, who died young; and Jacob, who also died in youth.

Henry S. Gotschall received his educational training in the common schools of his native township, and attended the Amity township district and a resident of the present property, situated near Seidel's blacksmith shop in Alsace township, is cultivated by the most modern methods and machinery and presents an excellent appearance. He is a stanch Republican in poli-
GRIM. In Weisenburg township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, Pa., in 1728 located John Egidius Grimm (or Grim), who came to this Commonwealth with that noted pioneer minister of the Lutheran Church, John Casper Stoever. The Grim family home was in Normandy and the lineage is traced back to a Baron there in the time of William the Conquerer. One branch of the family went to Alsace, whence came Johann Egidius (also known as Giti and Gideon). It appears that he later settled in Maxatawny, Berks county, where he secured a large tract of land. He built a substantial house, where other settlers frequently sought refuge in times of Indian disturbances. Most of the Landmann area was settled by 1780. If the Grim family did not belong to the Church, and two of his sons served in the war of the Revolution. The will of “Giti, alias Gideon,” Grim was made Jan. 28, 1760, and was probated Oct. 1, 1761, when Jacob and Henry Grim, his sons, were appointed as executors. In this will he gave his land to his sons Jacob and Henry; fifty pounds to his daughter Cattarin; fifty pounds to his daughter Elizabeth (m. Casper Merkel); thirty pounds to Frantz Roth, “son of my daughter Margreth.”

(II) Henry Grim, son of Giti, married and had three children: Jacob; Jonathan, ancestor of Daniel P. Grim; of Kutztown; and Gideon.

(II) Jacob Grim, son of Henry, was born June 17, 1754. On Nov. 2, 1779, he married Catharina Hottenstein, and he died June 24, 1833, aged seventy-nine years, seven days. Both he and his wife are buried on the farm in Maxatawny township, now owned by Mrs. Cecilia (Grim) Butz, of Allentown. This adjoins to the old homestead of his local friends, and the Grim family were born eleven children, namely: Jesse; David; Henry, who died in Philadelphia unmarried; Sem; Daniel; died in infancy; Nathaniel, who died in infancy; a son that died in infancy unnamed; Sarah, m. to John Bailey; Judith, m. to John Appel; Catharina, who died in infancy; and one whose name is unknown.

(IV) Jesse Grim, son of Jacob and Catharina (Hottenstein), had six children: Jacob, father of Mrs. Cecilia Grim Butz, of Allentown; Walter J.; Ephraim; Deborah; William and Allen.

(IV) Jacob and Catharina (Hottenstein), married Anna Kline, and had five children: Dr. Henry; Isabella, m. to the Rev. A. J. Herman; Catharine, m. to Prof. Davis Garber; Louise and Oscar Sem, all of Allentown.

(IV) David Grim, son of Jacob and Catharina (Hottenstein), was born April 12, 1787. He died Oct. 12, 1838, and was buried in the cemetery on the farm owned by Mrs. Cecilia G. Butz. His five children were: Seth K., who had two daughters, Mary (m. William Kline, of Rothrocksville) and Catharina (m. Daniel P. Grim, of Kutztown); Daniel K.; David K., who had two children; Henry, George. Mary A. (m. William Miller, of Philadelphia); and Anna (m. Mr. Bunker); Peter K. who married Elizabeth K. Mosser, and had nine children, David, Mary (m. William J. Frederick, of Reading). Catharine, Amanda (m. John S. Hartzell, of Allentown), Emma (died in infancy), Jacob W. (whose only child, Anna K., is secretary of the Grim Reunion Association), Albert P., R. Matilda (m. Charles Appel, of Allentown) and Anna M. (m. Lewis Shankweiler, of Allentown); and Henrietta K., who married Jesse Kline.

Heinrich Grimm, great-grandfather of Moses K., of Maxatawny township, was born in Maxatawny township in 1738, and he died upon his farm near Bowers Station in 1804. He owned the old Grim homestead two squares from Bowers Station, on which is the old grave of the Landmann family. Heinrich Grimm was a farmer and miller. He married Gertrude Trexler, and they had children: Absalom; Gideon (1760-1823); Jonathan; Daniel; Reuben; Solomon; Ann; and Polly.

Solomon Grim, son of Heinrich and Gertrude (Trexler), was a successful farmer and miller in Rockland township, where he died in 1815. He married Leah Kline, daughter of David Kline, the owner of much valuable property in Maxatawny. They had two children, Reuben, and a daughter that died in childhood.

Reuben Grim, son of Solomon and Leah (Kline), was born on his father’s farm in Rockland township. He was a farmer and miller, and he operated the mill in connection with farming, continuing this double occupation until 1866. He was very successful, and became the owner of three farms. In 1867 he moved to Maxatawny township to the farm now occupied by his son Moses K. He was a man of influence and was a prominent worker in the Lutheran Church at Lyons. He died Dec. 20, 1897. He married Diana Kutz, daughter of Daniel Kutz, of Maxatawny, and their children were: William; Solomon; and Deval, who died aged two years; Moses K.; Amanda, m. to Anthony Dengler, now of Michigan; Louisa, m. to the Rev. Daniel Gaby; and Eliza, who died aged seven years.

Moses K. Grim, son of Reuben and Diana (Kutz), was born in Rockland township, May 8, 1845, and is now a prominent and successful farmer, located near Bowers Station, in Maxatawny township. His early training was along agricultural lines, and when he started out for himself in 1873, it was on the same farm on which he now resides. This consists of 110 acres, and Mr. Grim has been its owner since 1896. He is a man of much business capacity, and is possessed of more than ordinary intelligence, and is greatly es- timated for his frugality. Besides his political affiliations he is a Republican, and from 1900 to 1903 served his township (which is nominally Democratic) on the school board, being that board’s president for one year, and for some time its treasurer. With his family he belongs to Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church at Bowers. For a number of years they worshipped at St. Paul’s Lutheran Church, at Lyons, where his father, Reuben, was an official.

In 1872 Mr. Moses K. Grim was married to Miss Emma C. Weiser, daughter of Elijah and Esther (Biebe) Weiser. Seven children were born of this marriage, namely: Jacob, who married Julia C. F. E., June 30, 1878; William G., April 25, 1881; Walter E., Nov. 4, 1883; Ida May, March 7, 1886; Julius H., July 2, 1888; and John E., April 2, 1890.

Gideon Grim, son of Heinrich and Gertrude (Trexler), was born in Maxatawny township in 1760, and died in 1823, an extensive and prosperous farmer. His wife, Elizabeth Kirby, was of English extraction. She bore him five sons and two daughters, as follows: David, Nathan, Gideon, Benjamin, Joshua, Hannah and Dinah.

Gideon Grim, son of Gideon and Elizabeth (Kirby), was born in Maxatawny township, Aug. 31, 1770, and died in Colebrookdale township, April 27, 1848. He married Esther Krouse, and they had two sons, William K.; and Levi, who died when eighteen years old.
William K. Grim, son of Gideon and Esther (Krouse), was born in Exeter township, May 28, 1825, and was one of the substantial and representative men of Boyertown. In his youth he learned the tanning trade, and this he followed successfully until 1874. In 1872 he moved to Pottstown, a large chartered corporation doing business since 1835. He was very level headed in business matters, and his judgment was frequently to organizational final. In 1853 he married Loretta B. Rhoads, daughter of John and Catharine (Boyer) Rhoads, and they have four children: Mahala, at home; Sallie, wife of Frank Sebold; William R., a bank cashier at Texarkana, Texas; and Kate, at home.

Jonathan Grim, son of Heinrich and Gertrude (Trexler), was a tanner in Maxatawny township, where he lived for many years. His later years were passed in Kutztown. He married (first) Catharine H. Bertlett, and by her had one son, Daniel B., born July 17, 1890, he m. (second) a Miss Snyder, and they had three children: Joshua S., Polly, and Jonathan.

Daniel B. Grim, son of Jonathan and Catharine H. (Bertlett), born July 17, 1890, owned a farm of 220 acres at Grimville, where he kept a store, hotel and tannery many years, amassing a comfortable fortune. He was a State militia man, and in public affairs always took an interested and prominent part. He was known as "Der Hellseder Grimm." In 1819 he married Elizabeth Krouse, and they became the parents of children as follows: Daniel B., born Aug. 31, 1833, now a wealthy and influential citizen of Kutztown; Jonathan K.; Mary; Charlotte; Catharine; Sarah; Charles A.; Susan (Dietrich); and Amelia.

Joshua S. Grim, son of Jonathan by his marriage to Miss Snyder, became a tanner in Maxatawny township, near the Lehigh county line. He owned the farm of 140 acres now the property of Cyrannius R. Grim. His first wife, whose maiden name was Bieber, bore him four children: Jonathan; Catharine; Elizabeth; and Henry P. He m. (second) Mary Zimmermann, daughter of Easau Zimmerman, and the five children of this union were: Charles A., Joshua J., Charles E., and Susan M.

Cyrannius R. Grim, son of Joshua S. and Mary (Zimmermann), was born on his father's farm July 22, 1852. In his earlier years he engaged in tanning, but in 1854 began farming, making a specialty of his poultry, of which he is very proud. For many years he has been one of the active and energetic workers in the Democratic party of Maxatawny township, and in 1899 was elected assessor, an office he has continued to fill to the satisfaction of all ever since. In 1881 he married Amelia L. Rauenhold, and they have six children: Mary E., Walter J., Cyrannius R., Jr., Martha A., Rose Ann L. and Solon D.

DAVID C. KLINE, M. D., for many years a practising physician of Reading, where he is one of the foremost supporters of the Homeopathic school, has been remarkably successful in his professional career, and enjoys deservedly high in the estimation both of his patients and of his fellow citizens. Dr. Kline comes of an old Pennsylvania family, originally settled in Northumberland county.

The grandfather, Isaac Kline, was a native of Northumberland county, and followed farming near Sunbury, in his village. He married Susan De Witt and reared a good sized family.

Harmon G. Kline was born in Northumberland county in 1818, and became a lifelong farmer, as was his father before him. He is now living retired at Sunbury. He is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has been liberal with both his time and means in endeavoring to advance its interests. His wife was Miss Mary Bassett, who was born in 1822, daughter of Luther Bassett. Her father was a native of New Jersey, but removed to Danville, Northumberland county, and flourished for at least thirty-seven years. Mr. and Mrs. Kline have enjoyed more than half a century of wedded happiness and are still traveling life's downward slope together. They were the parents of nine children, who all grew to maturity, the survivors being men and women of real value to their several communities. (4) Luther B. was educated in the Sunbury public school, and professionally in the Jefferson Medical College. Since his graduation he has been practising at Catawissa, Columbia county. (2) Elisha B. attended the Williamsport Seminary, read law, and was just ready for admission to the Bar when he died. (2) Lizze was also sent to Williamsport Seminary, and after finishing her course married F. C. Wallize, and lives at the old Kline homestead. (4) George M. was educated at Williamsport, and is now a merchant in Union county, Pa. (5) Margaret Ellen is the wife of I. L. Bender, of Martinsburg, where he is a contractor. (6) David C. was the next in order of birth. (7) Isaac C. graduated from Lafayette College, and is now a lawyer at Sunbury. (8) J. Simpson was born in Upper Augusta township, Northumberland county, and received his early education in part in New Berlin, Union county. Later he studied law with Charles C. Barkley and was admitted to the Northumberland County Bar in February, 1891. He is prominent in his profession, and is solicitor for his county and for the Pennsylvania railroad. At the close of 1891 he entered the office of James C. Parker, with whom he was associated professionally in the settlement of the Parker estate. (9) Rachel Estelle is the wife of Prof. W. S. Hall, who occupies the chair of Mining, Engineering and Higher Mathematics in Lafayette College.

Dr. David C. Kline attended the Bloomsburg Normal School and Dickinson Seminary at Williamsport, and then, having decided upon medicine as his profession, entered the Hahnemann Medical College at Philadelphia, the leading homeopathic institution in the United States. His degree was conferred in 1883, and, locating at Reading in July of that year, has ever since been associated with that place, and has become a prominent figure at most of the local affairs at all connected with his profession. Always an enthusiastic advocate of the principles of the Hahnemann school, he has done much to spread the popularity of the homeopathic system. He was never active in the establishment of any homeopathic Hospital in Reading, and has done everything possible since to insure its success, having been one of the hospital staff from the beginning. Dr. Kline enjoys a large and lucrative practice, but his specialties are the diseases of women and children, and in that field he has met with remarkable success. In 1885 he took a post graduate course in ophthalmical surgery at Baltimore. He believes that great benefit may be derived from meetings and discussions with other physicians, and so he has connected himself with various professional bodies, including the local Medical Society, the American Institute of Homeopathy and the Homeopathic State Society. He has been president of the latter organization, and under his direction the meetings of the society increased far beyond any point previously attained.

Mrs. Kline was Miss Laura Smith, daughter of Samuel Smith, M. D., of Milesburg, Juniata county, Pa. She was married to Dr. Kline Sept. 31, 1859, and their only child, Rada, a daughter, was born May 15, 1894. Their home is always hospitably open and many, indeed, are the friends who frequent it. The early training of Dr. Kline in religious lines was such as to bring him into sympathy with both the
From Martin Ritter descend principally those of the name who live in Allenton and south of that place, between Macungie and Freemansburg. He came to this country, as stated, in 1749, and secured a patent for a tract of land in what is now Salisbury township, a few miles south of Allenton. He was the father of seven children: Martin, Henry, John, Daniel, Michael, Jacob and Henry (Mrs. Brian). Philip Ritter was the ancestor of the Ritter family in Schoenersville, Rittersville and the region over toward Nazareth.

Francis Ritter seems to have been the ancestor of the Berks county Ritter. and, George Ritter was a pioneer. Francis, born in 1741 in Exeter township, Berks county, died in 1835. To him and his wife Barbara were born four sons and three daughters: Daniel, John, Jacob, Samuel, Mrs. Charles Kessler, Mrs. Nicholas Seidel and Mrs. Samuel Christian.

It is a matter of interest that the only printing-press ever conducted in Berks county was designed and made in 1796 in Exeter, near the Oley line, by John and Jacob Snyder and Francis Ritter. The Seyders were descendants of Hans Schneider, who secured a warrant for 300 acres of land in Oley as early as 1717. The Ritter and Seyders intermarried. On this hand press Der Reader Adler was printed, the first number appearing Nov. 25, 1796. The paper was started by Jacob Snyder and George Gerrish, and Francis Ritter, who had helped to build the press, bought a half interest in the establishment in 1797, after the publication of two numbers, and placed his son John in the office when the latter was eighteen. John Ritter learned type-setting and the details of the printing business, and was one of the publishers of the Adler from 1802 to 1851.

Originally the Ritters lived in Oley and Exeter townships, and the pioneer was buried in the cemetery near the Schwartzwald Church. According to tradition, the pioneer settler secured a large tract of land from the Indians, bargaining for as much land as he could walk around between sunrise and sunset. Later, when William Penn took possession in Pennsylvania, he claimed that the Indians had given him to him, and the pioneer of the Ritter family lost his claim.

Daniel Ritter, eldest son of Francis (1741-1825), was born in Exeter township, Berks county, in 1776. He engaged in farming on the old homestead, quite successfully, all of his life, and died in 1859. He married Susannah Snyder, daughter of Benjamin Snyder (and sister of Elizabeth, his brother Jacob's wife), and she died in 1876, aged eighty-four years. Their children were: Benjamin, Esther, Daniel, Louisa, Ferdinand, William Snyder and Franklin.

William Snyder Ritter, son of Daniel and Susanna (Snyder), was born in Exeter township Sept. 13, 1828. He remained on the home farm until he was seventeen, receiving such education as was afforded by the common schools, and then was apprenticed to his uncle, John Ritter, in Der Reader Adler office, to learn the printing business. He finally purchased the establishment, and continued to work in the same place, in time becoming foreman. In 1856 he gave up work at his trade, and spent eight years in the mercantile business in Reading, the major portion of that time having for his partner David Keiser. In 1864, with Jesse G. Hawley, he purchased the Adler, and under the name of Ritter & Co. the same under which it had been conducted by its former owners— they carried it on with great success for ten years. In 1868 they began the publication of a daily evening paper in English, the Reading Daily Eagle, and in the same year purchased the Reading Gazette and Democrat of Reading. By this partnership, was dissolved in 1874. Mr. Ritter became sole proprietor of the Adler, and Mr. Hawley taking the two English papers and Der Reader Kalendar. In 1876 Mr. Ritter erected what was then the largest printing establishment in Reading.
— a four-story brick building. Some time after this he founded the English daily paper, The Reading Daily News, and the German weekly, The Reading Wochen-News. He also got out Der Neue Readerer Adler Kal-endar, and all these he published successfully until his retirement, in February, 1891. He was a Democrat in politics, and his publications were intelligent exponents of that faith. His pen was vigorous in its warfare for the principles that he held, and his eminence and success won the respect of all. In 1875 he was a delegate to the State convention that nominated the Hon. Cyrus L. Pershing for governor. In 1861-65, with financier Jonathan Montgomery a farmer. This was his second term was president of that body. From 1877 to 1882 he was secretary of the board of education. He was progressive, and was influential in securing the reading waterworks. Whatever position he held, the duties pertaining to that position he conscientiously and impartially fulfilled. He gave great encouragement to the Agricultural Society, and was its treasurer for twelve years. His death, May 2, 1891, was a severe loss to the community.

In 1853 Mr. Ritter married Juliana Shearer, daughter of Jonathan Shearer, and they had seven children: Milford Newton; Jonathan Shearer; William Clinton; Francis Daniel; Henry Snyder; Laura (m. William F. Schwatzwald); and Annie (m. William H. Luden, of Reading).

William Clinton Ritter, son of William Snyder and Juliana (Shearer), was born in Reading Jan. 22, 1860. He obtained a good education in the public schools of the place, which he attended until he was sixteen years old. He then learned the printer's trade, serving an apprenticeship of four years in Der Readerer Adler office, and he has ever since been employed as a journeyman, for a number of years having had charge of the press-room of the Reading Telegram. Since he first joined the force of the Adler, that paper has passed through different hands. Mr. Ritter is a man of sterling worth, and is held in high esteem. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum. With his family he attends the Universalist Church, to which the Ritter's have belonged through several generations. Mr. William C. Ritter married in 1878 Mary A. Hofmann, and they have two children: (1) Julia, a musician, who while a student in the Boston Conservatory met and married F. P. McCormick, a musician at Boston; and (2) Harold H., a graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and now an officer in the United States navy.

Hofmann. The Hofmann family to which Mrs. William C. Ritter belongs is not of long residence in this country. Mrs. Ritter's father, Rev. Andrew Hofmann, having been a native of Germany, he was born in Wiesbaden, Germany, attended the German schools, and there prepared for the ministry. After his ordination he came to America, and located in the Swamp in Montgomery county, being pastor of the Swamp charge for twenty-five years. He died in 1886, aged sixty-five years. His wife, Lovina Graber, was born at Pensburg, daughter of Andrew Graber, a farmer. She died in 1886, aged fifty-eight years. They had eight children: Emil; Oscar; William, Mrs. F. W. Ameringer; Mary; Electra; Frances (m. Jesse Cressman, of Sumneytown, Pa.); Ferdinand (of Philadelphia) and Ferdinandina (deceased); twins; and Mary A. (m. William C. Ritter, of Reading).

Emil Hofmann, son of Rev. Andrew and brother of Mrs. Ritter, is a retired citizen of Reading. He was born at the Falkner farm in Montgomery county Dec. 7, 1847, and was educated in the public schools there, working on the farm out of school hours. His father dying, he was at the age of thirteen obliged to earn his own living. In 1873 he came to Reading, and for nine years was successfully engaged on the shoe shop of the firm of Shearer & Haas, No. 803 Penn street. Before that he had spent twelve years in the same line on Penn street. Above Ninth this business he had learned in Sumneytown. In 1898 he retired and visited Europe, traveling through Germany, France and England for three months, accompanied by his wife. They reside at No. 18 South Eleventh street, and Mr. Hofmann is a member of Zion's Reformed Church, of which he was deacon and elder for many years.

Hon. John Ritter, son of Francis and Barbara, and brother of Daniel, was born in Exeter township, near Schwartzwald Church, Feb. 6, 1779. His early education was limited, and all in German, except for three months when he studied English. When he was eighteen he left his father's farm, and entered the office of Der Readerer Adler, of which his father was half-owner, and there learned the printer's trade. His spare time was devoted to improving his education. In 1802 his father's interest in the paper was transferred to him, and two years later his brother-in-law, Charles Kessler, purchased the other half-interest, and the firm became John Ritter & Co. Mr. Louis Ritter, son, was graduated by all. His integrity was well known, and even those of opposing political parties regarded him and the news he printed as absolutely unimpeachable. Under him the paper was known as the "Berks County Bible." He was a Democrat, and for two terms, 1845-46, represented this district in Con- gress. He was a member of both houses of the legislature, was chairman of the Agriculture Committee of the Senate, and in 1875-1876, long prominent in official position, m. (first) Angelina Bechtel, and (second) Barbara A. Roland, and died July 18, 1868; Louis, born April 3, 1813, is mentioned in full below; and Aaron, born April 15, 1816, continued in his life within the Der Readerer Adler, m. Louisa Doehler, and died Nov. 13, 1873. The Hon. John Ritter was a member of the Universalist Church, as have been all the family for generations, and in 1830 he assisted liberally in the erection of the church edifice, giving it his support as long as he lived.

Mrs. Louisa Ritter, born in Reading April 3, 1813, died there in the house in which he was born, No. 353 Penn street, Oct. 16, 1889. He received his preliminary training in the select schools of Reading, and at an early age entered the Adler office to learn the printer's trade. Here he learned in various capacities until the firm's interests were purchased by Charles Kessler. Mr. Kessler was associate editor and manager of the Adler while the Hon. John Ritter was in Congress, and Louis represented his mother's interests in the paper. He was a very conscientious, accurate and painstaking news gatherer, extremely exact in all of his details, and he was a financier of rare ability. His friendship was sincere and disinterested, and he was courteous and affable, having a kind word for all. He was interested in politics, but although often urged to do so would never accept office. Many years ago he, with Jacob Babb, was in charge of the Scientific printing at Philadelphia, m. official business with which he ever had any connection. Mr. Ritter was also one of the stockholders of the old water board, but this was before the city purchased the waterworks. His father was also one of the original members of that board. Paternally Mr. Ritter belonged to Montgomery Lodge, I. O. O. F.

Mr. Louis Ritter was twice married, his first wife, Maria B. Haas, dying in 1880. In 1882 he married Miss Mary E. Werner, daughter of Daniel Jackson and Esther (Briner) Werner, and she survives her husband, and makes her home in Reading. Mrs. Ritter is a member of the Universalist Church of the Faith. She is connected with a number of charitable organizations, among them being the Widows' Home, the Honeopathic and Reading Hospitals, the Bureau of Employment and the Humane Society. In former years Mrs. Ritter was prominent in church circles, being organist for Dr. Baumgar for four years, and assisting in singing in the choirs of Reading's leading churches.

Her father, Daniel Jackson Werner, was born in Cumru township, and for many years was foreman for Seybert & McManus, in their iron foundry. He passed away after an illness covering eight years, at the age of seventy-four, of disease of heart. At his funeral the Universalist Church was well attended. His wife, Esther Briner, was a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Koch) Briner.

In the death of Louis Ritter the poor of Reading lost one of their most generous friends, it being seldom that any subscription for a worthy cause did not find its way into the hands of Mr. Ritter. Rev. Dr. W. Kent, in his sermon at Mr. Ritter’s funeral, said: “Who can think of Death as anything but a messenger of peace when it closes such a life? Yet here is one who never professed religion in the accepted sense. His religion was not a matter of profession; it was just a matter of devout and childlike loyalty to his God, and steadfast good will and faithfulness to his fellow-creatures. Would that Man had more of such religion.”

Taking up the line of Jacob R. Ritter, of No. 235 Washington street, Reading, the indications are that he is a descendant in the sixth generation from

(I) Ferdinand Ritter in both the paternal and maternal lines. Tradition says that this pioneer ancestor was obliged to leave his native land for some offense against the pope, for which he was to be beheaded. All his property was divided among the ninety-six of his blood, one of whom was an Indian camp in Berks county near the Schuylkill church, and there he lived with the Indians. It was said he married an Indian woman. At any rate, the story goes that a woman who was with the Indians was exchanged for another woman, and married a Ritter. The house he first lived in is on what is now the Charles Brenieiser farm in Exeter, formerly owned by the late Benjamin Ritter, who was a son of Daniel Ritter.

At the rooms of the Berks County Historical Society may be found the early tax receipts of the county, from 1734, which show George Ritter paid $2, 4s., 6d. and Ferdinand Ritter, £3 6s. 9d. in Exeter; there are no tax receipts for Ritters in that year from Oley.

(II) George Ritter, son of Ferdinand, was the next in line of descent to Jacob R. Ritter, whose line on the paternal side seems to come through (III) George, (IV) Jacob, and (V) Susan Ritter. In each case, there was a Samuel side his line from (II) George is through (III) Francis, (IV) Jacob and (V) Susan Ritter. It is known that his paternal and maternal grandfathers were first cousins. (III) Francis Ritter and his descendants are prominently mentioned in the early part of this record.

(II) George Ritter, son of (I) George and grandson of (I) Ferdinand, was the great-grandfather of Mr. Jacob R. Ritter. He was a farmer, lived a little more than a mile below Schuylkill church, and died in Exeter when over ninety years of age. Among his children were Christian and Isaac. This George Ritter was a Revolutionary soldier, and in the Revolutionary War, David Ritter (father of Jacob R.) had the bayonet he used while in the service.

(IV) Christian Ritter, who died in Reading in 1874, in the ninety-sixth year of his life, was one of the sons of (I) Ritter. Christian Ritter passed his early years on his father's farm. One of the events of his boyhood was the visit of President Washington to Reading on his way to Carlisle during the Whiskey Insurrection. In his own words he told the story: “Early in the morning of Oct. 2, 1794, when I was 14 years old, I left Exeter for Reading with a number of residents of Exeter and Oley, and walked back, having heard that President Washington was in town. We disembarked at the corner of Callowhill and Thomas (now Fifth and Washington), where the President was stopping at a hotel while on the way to Carlisle. When he departed we followed on horseback across the Schuylkill, and then we went along the King's Highway and made the first stop at the house of Dr. Peter Palm, at Sinking Spring, at 9:30 in the morning. The Doctor invited the entire party into his house and refreshed them with red-eye, and he gave a toast to the President, who occupied a settee, which is still in the parlor of Mr. Palm’s house. Then they left and pursued their way to Binkley’s Inn, a few miles west. At 10:30 they galloped on their steeds to what is now known as Womelsdorf, reaching there at noon, and all then dinner at Stouch’s Inn. At 2 o’clock the President and his party left for Sittestown, now Lebanon, and were at the Hotel at Reading, Exeter and Oley people returned to their homes.”

At the age of twenty-two Christian Ritter left home and learned the miller’s trade, subsequently being employed in four different mills. After his marriage he came to Reading, and began distilling oils from the flower and vegetable kingdom, ether, wine, sweet spirits of nitre, horse powder, etc. His knowledge of chemistry he had gathered from books alone. He manufactured a blood purifier which he sold in many counties of the State, many doctors buying his medicines. He was but a boy when the first newspaper was started in Reading, under the name of Reading Zephyr. Rev. Mr. Youngman, of Exeter, having been a teacher of Mr. Ritter in Exeter township. Mr. Ritter married Elizabeth Getz, and they lived many years at No. 36 South Third street. After her death he made his home with Charles H. Palm, at No. 58 North Third street, and there he spent his last years. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a Universalist. In 1799, he came into possession of an old powder-horn bearing the date “1734,” which had belonged to one of the first Ritters to come to America.

(IV) Isaac Ritter, son of George and brother of Christian, was born in a home of Jacob R. Ritter, of Reading. He died on his farm in Exeter in 1852, aged sixty-eight years. The old house in which he lived, and which stood on what is now the Samuel and Adam Kurtz estate, in Exeter, was razed by his son John in 1862, and before its destruction his grandson, Jacob R. Ritter, took the dimensions herewith given. It was a two-story structure, 30 by 50 feet, as it then stood. The first part built was of logs, 30 by 30 feet, and the addition, which was of stone, was built eighty or ninety years ago (1909). The fireplace in the log part was 16 by 4 feet in clear. It commenced in the basement, and the walls were 3 feet thick. In the back, there was a second story in the second story, after which it tapered off up to the roof, projecting 3 feet above the roof, about 3 1-2 feet square. John Ritter said he hauled away over a hundred loads of stone. In front of the house was a good spring and a large pond, and, to one side, what is now the Jacob R. Ritter meadow. The spring has long been known as the Trout Spring from the numerous trout found there. At that day there were three times as many trout as at present, thanks to the care Isaac Ritter took to preserve them. He did not allow fishing unless somebody was sick in the neighborhood, or as far as Reading, even if the fish would feed without a cent of pay. The fish were not sold. He tended to them himself. Whole bucketfuls of buttermilk, after the cream was taken off, were thrown into the spring to feed them. He did not care to get as rich as some of his Ritter cousins.

When he was a younger man he had an apple-jack distillery, which was razed about seventy years ago, and the foundations of which are still to be seen near the site of the old house. Some of his apple-jack was hauled to Pittsburg. He also made his own wine. He was also a great lover of bees. He went to the woods and taught them in the beehives which he made himself. He had sometimes as many as thirty. Sometimes he raised them in the fall. When Jacob R. Ritter was a boy Isaac Ritter called all his children and grandchildren home to kill as many as ten or twelve hives of bees, which were destroyed in the following manner: A hole was made in the ground about six inches deep, sulphur was pulverized, made hot and smothered on small racks, which were laid in the hole; the sulphur was set on fire and the bees set over it. In a half hour the bees were all dead. The house was full of smoke and fumes and they called it the bee holocaust. A big long table was set with plenty on it, and each went home with his share of honey.

The old Isaac Ritter barn, with its straw roof, also razed in 1865, is another structure well remembered by John R., who drove the horses to thresh wheat there when he was ten years old. Mr. Ritter was a old-line Whig in politics, in which he took much interest, being a man particularly well informed on historical matters. He had a number of great histories of the old countries. His wife was a born Englishwoman, by name Deter. Eight of his children lived to a ripe age. His family was as follows: David, John, Joseph, Jesty (m. John Boyer), Harriet (m. William Boyer, brother of her sister's husband), Elizabeth (m. Daniel Hechler), Hannah (m. Moses Herbine), Apigalia (m. David Masser) and Mary (m. Daniel Nine).

David Ritter, eldest child of Isaac, born in 1809, was killed in a haymow accident near the Black Bear May 8, 1847. He was a man of mechanical ability and thorough training, learned the millwright's trade, and built mills and threshing machines. He got up the first corn-shelling device used in this section, and which helped to free the farm-laborer from the tedious labor of husking on a treestle and sitting on it and peeling the corn off. One of his corn-shelling contrivances is still preserved by Amos Rife, of Exeter, below the “Black Bear Inn,” for a relic. Mr. Rife recently retired and sold his farm stock, but he kept the corn-sheller. It could be operated by power or hand, and would husk a bushel of corn a day by power, fifty or sixty by hand. David Ritter also built horse-powers for threshing-machines. It was claimed that six horses equalled an eight-horse-power engine, but the power was not so steady.

David Ritter married Susan Ritter, his second cousin, who was a daughter of Jacob Ritter, who was first cousin to David Ritter's father, Isaac. Thus Mrs. David Ritter was a niece of John Ritter, “the learned printer,” who is fully mentioned above. Nine of Jacob Ritter's children lived to a ripe age: Francis, Israel, Amos, Jacob, Charles, Susan (m. David Ritter); Mary (m. Jacob Schmucker); Harriet (m. Benjamin Klever); and Henriette (m. Jacob Phillips).

Mr. and Mrs. David Ritter had seven children: Jacob R., now of Reading, is mentioned below; Annie R. married William Drumheller, and lives at No. 1509 Lehigh avenue, Philadelphia; Elizabeth R., a cabinet-maker, is now living at No. 383 North Twentieth street, Philadelphia; Amelia R. married Philip Eash, now of No. 222 Monroe street, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mary R. is the widow of Obadiah Becker, and is living with her son-in-law, Howard Gregg, at No. 219 Ewing Camfield street, Philadelphia; David R. is employed for five years in the regular army in 1865, when sixteen years old, and was last heard from in 1865, from Lookout Mountain, Tennessee.

Mrs. Susan Ritter and one of her sisters, Jacob R. Ritter and one of his sisters, had coal black hair, which fact was accounted for by the fact of their entangled ancestor's marriage to an Indian woman, and Jacob R. Ritter was called an Indian during his childhood. However, five of his brothers and sisters, and his other Ritter uncles and aunts, had dark brown hair.

(VI) Jacob R. Ritter, one of the best-known cabinet-makers in Berks county, was born at 8 a. m., Jan. 25, 1818, on the Breneiser farm in Exeter township, son of David Ritter. His father dying when he was in his thirteenth year, he lived with his uncle, John Ritter, his father's brother, until he was sixteen and a half years old. One Sunday his uncle, Jacob Schmucker (husband of his mother's sister), came to visit them in Oley, and he suggested to John Ritter that the boy ought to learn a trade, as his father had been such an excellent mechanic. The time being agreed upon, Mr. Schmucker secured him a place and bound him out for four years to Fred Henninger, of Reading, a first-class cabinet-maker. Thus it was that he came to Reading when sixteen years old. The first year he received his board and $35, the second $30, the third $35, and the fourth $40. Upon the close of his apprenticeship he worked as a journeyman six months, when he and Charles Henninger bought out Charles Hahn, engaging in business at No. 717 Penn street, in a two-story frame structure which had been built by Hahn and formerly occupied by the Hantsch brothers in their furnishing business. The Hantsch brothers bought a property on Penn street, between Sixth and Seventh, and then Mr. Ritter and Mr. Henninger rented from Hahn, who owned sixty feet in Penn street, above Seventh (the Hawley estate now owns No. 717 Penn street, 20x270). The latter's trade, frameworker, made chairs there for many years, thirty or forty years, selling them on credit—for six months, nine months, twelve months, or eighteen months, as shown by his old books, which Mr. Ritter has seen. The time was always written in the book, because at that time it was the law in the State that anybody that did not pay his debts had them put in jail. When both Hahn's parents both died he owned considerable property. From 1856 to 1858 Mr. Ritter and Mr. Henninger continued in partnership in the furniture and undertaking business at No. 717, in 1858 dividing their interests, Mr. Ritter taking the furniture end and Mr. Henninger the undertaking. Then Mr. Ritter bought the property from Hahn, 20 feet (No. 717) fronting on Penn street, 270 feet deep to Court street, enlarged the building in the rear and built a brick shop fronting on Court street. In 1861 Mr. Ritter bought from Hahn 20 feet more, No. 719, and erected into large stores and hotels hydraulic elevators, rooms, renting one for a cigar store, and in the other continuing to carry on his cabinet business. The upper stories were occupied with his furniture. In 1865 he built a cabinet-maker's planing-mill on the 40 feet in Court street, spending $8,000 to put the machinery in. He ran it with thirty men, whose wages were from $1.75 to $2.50 a day, piece workers making from $2 to $4 a day. Ten of the men were first-class cabinet-makers. On Penn street Mr. Ritter had a furniture and carpet store, started in 1866, and when he built for J. L. Moyser the four-story house at No. 721 Penn street, he rented the upper floors for his furniture and carpet business. In 1867 he secured the frame building at No. 717 and erected a four-story brick building there, and he then occupied all of No. 717 and the upper stories of Nos. 719-721. He also constructed two hydraulic elevators of his own invention for raising and lowering heavy articles on his property. In 1870 he sold to Reger & Becker, grocers, the property at No. 719 Penn, 20 feet by 150, back to the planing-mill, and later the property at No. 717 to Sohl, Seidel & Co., dealers in furniture. He himself left the furniture business in 1875, and for some time devoted his time to putting into large stores and hotels hydraulic elevators. He was also a builder of houses, built and owned half of the Farmers' Market-house, 40 feet front, and half of the Union House, 60 feet front, thus having a half interest in 100 feet on Penn street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. In about 1875 Mr. Ritter retired from the cabinet-making business, since then devoting himself to job work. At the time of the panic of 1873 in real estate and business, when so many banks broke, his investments amounted to $80,000, and he lost considerable.

Mr. Ritter has made his own casket, a remarkable piece of work. The material is Canada oak and is 8 feet, 6 inches long, 26 inches wide, and 13 inches deep. On the lid is a swinging mirror, enabling a person to see the remains without going near the casket. Mr. Ritter has a bronze medal awarded him at the United States Centennial Exposition in 1876, for a hydraulic hoisting apparatus which he had on exhibition.
Mr. Ritter is the vice-president of the Ritter Family Reunion, in which he is very much interested. He is the present owner of the powder-horn formerly belonging to Christian Ritter (mentioned above), and which is now inclosed in a box frame, and hung in the rooms of the Berks County Historical Society. This came into the possession of Christian Ritter in 1798, and he gave it to Milton S. Palm, who on June 9, 1906, presented it to Jacob R. Ritter. Mr. Ritter was a member of the committee on arrangements for the Ritter Family Reunion. He is an interested member of the Berks County Historical Society, No. 519, of which he is a member.

His memorandum books, which he has kept for many years, contain not only many interesting items concerning his own life, but also much of value and interest about other persons, with whom he has come in contact during his long and busy life. He has a yearly payroll of persons helping him to the press-room or building of the Reading Eagle.

The historic Ritter burial-ground, near the Schuylkillwald church in Exeter, owes its present excellent condition principally to Mr. Ritter's efforts. Three years ago, at one of the Ritter reunions, at Allentown, Mr. Ritter announced that he had purchased that portion of the cemetery in Berks county, and in the course of conversation about family matters and the pleasanties usually exchanged on such occasions, one man present bantered him about the condition of the old graveyard in Exeter, saying that the Ritters ought to be ashamed to have such a burial-ground in their country. 'Mr. Ritter,' said he, 'I am ashamed of this ashed place; it is that extent that he went there in the spring and had a photograph taken; it shows him standing between the gravestones of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Ritter. He appointed George W. Billman treasurer, paid him $10, and then went among his relatives with the photograph, soliciting support for the fixing and future care of the old cemetery, where the pioneers of the Ritter family in Berks county are buried. Soon he had $70 promised, and before long the amount was raised to $192, subscribed by forty-two people, every dollar of which was paid to the treasurer. Samuel and Adam Kutz, who now own the estate on which the cemetery is located, sent a check for $10, when the work was commenced on it. John Kutz, of Reading, is the manager of the estate. Mr. Ritter's aunt, Abigail Masser, in 1859 willed a fund of $50, to be invested at 5 per cent interest, for the purpose of laying the first stone and keeping repair the wall around this burial-ground, and through Mr. Ritter's efforts this was turned over to Mr. Billman.

The old graveyard belonged to the Ritter's ancestors on both sides, and is located a half mile below the Schwartzwald church, being on the line of the Boyertown Traction Company's tracks from the old Post Office across the road and Ritter's Crossing road. It is located seventy-five feet back from the car line, and the road to the entrance through the farm is recorded with a deed made to three trustees—Daniel Ritter (son of Francis), Joseph Ritter (brother of David), and William Boyer (husband of David Ritter's sister)—or their successors forever (one dollar paid in hand) by Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Ritter (Mr. Ritter's maternal grandfather), and her sister, wife of Daniel Ritter (both born Snyders), and John Ritter (son of Isaac) and his wife. Mrs. Elizabeth Ritter was the promoter of the plan. Daniel Ritter (Mr. Ritter's paternal grandfather) died in 1852, Daniel Ritter (oldest son of Francis Ritter) and Joseph Ritter were not satisfied. Therefore the deed was made as mentioned. It gave 20 perches or 74 by 74 feet, and the road through the farm for the cemetery. The place being nearly all occupied in 1852 they seized most ground, 50 by 74 feet in dimensions, which has been walled in. William Boyer, having children, had laid there; all have gravestones. When the Schwartzwald cemetery was started many who had been buried in the old part of the Ritter cemetery were transferred to it.

When assured of proper support Mr. Ritter had work on the cemetery commenced. He hired ten masons with help, and he whole was laid in a cement coping on 20 by 4 inches in dimensions, and had three men at work for three days cleaning up, taking our roots and setting up the gravestones and markers. His brother Isaac made an iron gate weighing over three hundred pounds for his share, and it makes a very suitable ornament for the wall. In short, the place is now a source of pride to all the family. During the war of 1812 General R. R. the British general who was shot near Baltimore in 1814, was buried in this old burial-ground.

On Nov. 30, 1856, Mr. Jacob R. Ritter married Miss Sophia D. Ruth, daughter of John and Sarah (Dick) Ruth. She was born June 27, 1833, died Nov. 9, 1905, and is buried at Sinking Spring. Two children were born of this marriage: (1) Sarah, born Feb. 8, 1858, married Charles Neil, an engineer on the Lebanon Valley railroad since 1889, had a family of ten children, and died in 1903, Mr. Neil dying in 1893; (2) Susan E., born May 23, 1859, died when sixteen days old.

In politics Mr. Ritter is a Democrat, and he served in the common council in 1869-70-71 from the Eighth ward. Of late years he has voted independently, and cast his ballot in support of Theodore Roosevelt. He is a member of the First Reformed Church, and when the church was rebuilt in 1875 he subscribed $500 toward the building fund. For many years he was a member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic lodges.

At the time of the battle of Antietam Mr. Ritter was serving a ninety days' enlistment in the Pennsylvania militia, sworn in at Harrisburg. When Lee crossed the Potomac he was with his command two and a half miles above Hagerstown, Md. That night they lay behind a stone fence, the line extending back to Virginia.

CAPT. EDWARD F. REED, a popular and progressive citizen of Lyons, Pa., was born in Manheim, Pa., near the Schuylkill county almshouse, Nov. 11, 1838, son of George W. Reed, and grandson of Daniel Reed.

The Reed family was early known in Schuylkill county. In 1771, when Pine Grove township, that county, was established, Philip Rith (Reed) was a taxable. He was a native of Berks county, however, a member of the Tulpehocken family. In 1791 Jeremiah Reed, Michael Reed (both married) and Thomas Reed (single) were taxable for Manheim township, Schuylkill county. In 1802, Theodore Reed, John Reed, John (Morris) Reed, Thomas Reed, Sr., and Isaac Reed, were tax-payers in Norwegian township, and John and Philip Reed in Mahantango township, that county.

Christoph, George and Conrad Reed, brothers, were born in Brunswick township, Schuylkill county. Of these, Christoph passed all his life in his native township, and there reared his four sons, Obadiah, George, Charles and Emanuel. George was for many years engaged in the hotel business at Orwigsburg. Conrad, born about 1788, died in his native township about 1830. He was a farmer. His wife, Elizabeth Neyer, bore him six children: (1) David, born near Orwigsburg, Jan. 5, 1819, was a skilled blacksmith for many years, retiring about a quarter of a century ago. For nearly a decade he has lived in Reading with his daughter, Mrs. Hunsicker. At No. 420 North Tenth street, he m. Lucy Ann Haff, and had nine children (seven still living), Emeline, Mary, Harriet, Sarah, Louisa, Elizabeth, Katie, and David Frank (of Summit Hill). (2) Catherine m. John Graver, and went to Wisconsin. (3) Married m. M. Amanda, and settled in Wisconsin. (4) Elizabeth m. Daniel Fegeley. Andrew Lewis settled in Michigan. (5) Henry makes his home in New Ringgold, Pennsylvania.

Daniel Reed, grandfather of Capt. Edward F., resided in Pineville, where he was an early hotel keeper, his hotel being located at the corner of Main and Mahantango streets. He died at a ripe old age, and is... buried either at Pottsville or Orwigsburg. Among others he had children: Jacob, who lived at Pottsville; Thomas; George W.; Hannah; and Daniel, who after a long residence in Schuylkill county, moved to Mercer county, and whose son George W., a member of the General Assembly, 1876-78, and the latter's son, William F., from the same county, 1893-94.

George W. Reed, son of Daniel and father of Capt. Edward F., was born in Pottsville in 1805, and died at Philadelphia March 4, 1860, aged eighty-five years. He married Catherine Kline, of Rockland township, Berks county, daughter of David Kline. They had thirteen children: Thomas; Jacob; Susanna; Mary; Sarah; Edward F.; Kate; Daniel, who was killed in the fight at White House Landing in the Civil war; Lizzie; Malinda; Mary; Reuben; and Amanda, all now deceased, except Mary, Sarah, and Edward F.

Capt. Edward F. Reed was brought up familiar with the duties of a farmer, but at the age of seventeen he learned the cabinet making trade, and in 1832 he engaged in business for himself at Stony Point, carrying on cabinet making and undertaking the manufacture of tools for fifteen years. He then gave up his business to devote himself to his father-in-law's farm. The next year he moved to Lyons, and there erected his present residence. He resumed his former business of cabinet making and undertaking, and continued it until 1887. He then retired from business for twenty years, his son Daniel conducting the business, but in 1889 the latter moved to Rockland township, and Capt. Reed resumed the undertaking, carrying it on until 1904. In 1888 he began conducting a steam double press cider mill, and during the season does a good business in that line. In 1908 he attached to his mill a forty-horse-power boiler, for making apple butter.

On April 20, 1861, Capt. Reed enlisted as a private in Company D, 7th Pa. V. I., for the three-months service. In 1862 he was drafted, and became captain of Company K, 167th Pa. V. I., a nine months regiment, and was mustered out at Reading Aug. 18, 1863.

In 1860 Capt. Reed was married to Elizabeth Sharadin, daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Kieffer) Sharadin, and they have been blessed with five children, namely: James M.; Charles A.; George; Daniel F.; and Emma E. m. to Percival Koller, of Frazer township, whose father, a native of Germany, was a noted florist. He is a man of culture and refinement, and his political affiliations the Captain is an unswerving Republican, and is always interested in the public affairs of his town. In 1908 he was elected supervisor of his township, by over one hundred majority. He is well known and is very popular with all classes.

DAVID H. HAIN, M. D., a well-known physician in Penn township, who has been engaged in the practice of his profession at Obold, Pa., for more than twenty-five years, and is said to have the largest practice of any country doctor in Berks county, was born May 12, 1861, in Lower Heidelberg township, son of Frederick and Sarah Hain.

Frederick Hain was born Nov. 22, 1822, in Lower Heidelberg township, where his entire life was spent in agricultural pursuits. He died April 23, 1875. He married Sarah Hain, and they were born these children: John, who died in Lower Heidelberg township; Eva. m. to Henry B. Werner; Henry, living at Wernersville; Emma, m. to Jacob Huyett, of Frankville Grove, Le Co., Ill.; Mary, m. to William K. Ludwig, of Wernersville; and Dr. David H.

His paternal grandparents had both received a good education in the public schools of Wernersville, and later he attended Palatinate College at Myerstown, and Prof. D. B. Brunner's Business College at Reading. Then he became a student at the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and graduated from that institution in 1881. On March 1, 1882, he located at Obold, where he has built up a very large country practice.

Dr. Hain married Sallie A. Fisher, daughter of Reiley Fisher, and to this union there have been born three children: Edna, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1902, now teaching at Wernersville; Raymond, a graduate of the same institution, now a senior at Bucknell College; and Stella, a member of Class of 1910, at the Normal School at Kutztown.

GOTLEIB BOYER (deceased) will be remembered by the people of the city of Reading, as the leading florist of his day, his stand being in Kissingers Market. Mr. Boyer was born in 1824, in Stuttgart, Germany, came to America when a young man, and passed a large part of his life at Reading.

On first locating in this country, Mr. Boyer settled in Lancaster county, his last residence there being at Ephrata, where he remained for five years. He then located in Reading, where he soon established himself as a florist and gardener, at one time operating three greenhouses. He was considered the leading gardener and florist of his day in the city, although at the time of his death he was conducting but one place of business, the old Kissingers Market stand. Mr. Boyer was a true type of the self-made man. On coming to this country, he knew little of the German language, and on the contrary, knowing little of the language and less of the business methods in use, yet at the time of his death he left a large and valuable estate to his widow and children. Mr. Boyer was a member of the Lutheran Church, and a Democrat in politics.

In 1861 Mr. Boyer married Miss Rosina Linsenmeyer, also a native of Germany, and to whom were born five children, namely: George, born April 12, 1862, of Reading; Anna, m. to Ellsworth Swoyer, of Hoboken, N. J.; Charles, a farmer, of Muhlenberg township, and two girls, who died young.

DR. J. E. KURTZ, one of the most prominent physicians of Reading, belongs to a family noted for its members who have followed the "healing art," his father, Dr. Samuel L. Kurtz, being one of the best known physicians in Reading, and his brother, Dr. Clarence Morgan Kurtz, being another of the skilled medical men of that city.

The maternal ancestors of Dr. J. E. Kurtz came from Wales to America in 1861, and his paternal ancestors were natives of Darmstadt, Germany, who came to this country at various periods ranging from 1727 to 1745, settling in Chester county, Pa., where they followed agricultural pursuits.

Dr. Samuel L. Kurtz married Sarah Morgan, daughter of John Morgan, of Phoenixville, Chester county, of the Berks County Medical Society, all of the land upon which Phoenixville now stands. Three children were born to this union: Clarence Morgan Kurtz, M. D., of Reading; Georgine, m. to Nicholas Muhlenberg, a chemist; and Dr. J. E.

Dr. J. E. Kurtz was born Oct. 15, 1856, at Oakland Mills, Juniata Co., Pa. He was educated in the Reading high school, and at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., from which he graduated in 1877 with the degree of A. B. (the degree of A. M. being later conferred upon him), and at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in which he was graduated Jan. 13, 1880. Since this time the Doctor has been practising his profession in Reading. For a time he followed a general practice, but for many years he has made a specialty of the eye, ear, nose and throat, and in this he has been eminently successful.

Dr. Kurtz was married Oct. 3, 1888, to Mary E. Shoemaker, daughter of Dr. Charles E. Shoemaker, a prominent physician of Reading who died in 1890. Two children were born to this union: Georgine and Francina, both at school. Dr. Kurtz is a member of the Reading (City) Medical Society, of the Berks County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, and the American Medi-
FRANK S. LIVINGOOD is a descendant of one of the early German settlers of Berks county. Though originally Swiss the Loewenguths or Leibungduts emigrated to this country from Alsace where they had lived for over seventy years in the town of Schalken-dorf near Strassburg. Mr. Livingood's ancestor, John Jacob Loewenguth, arrived in New York in 1724 and after residing for a number of years in Schoharie county, migrated to and settled in Tulpehocken township, Berks county, in 1727. In April, 1758, he and his wife were killed by the Indians and their two children were taken captive. A son, Jacob, escaped the massacre. From him was descended the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, who was a practicing physician at Womelsdorf, Berks county, from 1812 to 1872. Dr. Levengood had six sons distinguished in the professions: four as physicians and two as lawyers, of the latter being Jacob Seltzer Levin- good, a member of the Berks County Bar from 1845 to 1906, who married Lucy Jane Shulters; daughter of Francis B. Shulters, a prominent citizen of Reading, his home by adoption. Their son, Frank S. Livin- good, was born in Reading Feb. 24, 1855. He attended public and private schools, and for two years the Read- ing High School; entered Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts, in 1869, and upon graduating there in 1872 entered Harvard College, where he gradu- ated with the class of 1876. He then studied law in Reading in the office of his father, Jacob S. Livingood, being admitted to the Berks County Bar in August, 1879, since which time he has been continuously en- gaged in active practice. He is Vice-President of the Berks County Bar Association.

Actively interested in politics Mr. Livingood was, from 1881 to 1888, chairman of the Republican county committee, and in 1884 was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in Chicago. Mr. Livingood has been president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Reading since 1888, and a trustee of Charles Evans Cemetery Company since 1889. He is treasurer of the Reading Hospital and trustee of the Reading Public Library. He has official positions in a number of societies, and is a member of the following: Pennsylvania Historical Society, Berks County Historical Society, the Pennsylvania German Society, the Pennsylvania State Bar Association, the Wyomis- sing and Berkshire Clubs of Reading, the University Club of Philadelphia and the Harvard Club of New York. He is a member of St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church of Reading.

PHILIP SHAPIRO, one of Reading's bustling business men, and a member of the Reading Board of Trade, who conducts a flourishing tailoring establish- ment at No. 6 South Sixth street, was born Sept. 1, 1861, in Germany.

Mr. Shapiro learned the tailoring trade in his native country, where he also received his literary education. In 1881 he sailed from Hamburg on the Hamburg-Ame- rican Line's steamer "Eifel," landed at Castle Garden, N. Y., July 7th of that year. He worked as a journeyman tailor in New York for two years, and then engaged in the manufacture of coats on his own account, commencing with two machines. His skilled workmanship and honest dealings soon won him a wide reputation, and in Reading, at once opening up his present place of business. Since locating here he has commanded some of Reading's best trade, and has a reputation second to none in his line. He has taken an active part in business circles in the city, and in 1904 was unanimously chosen a director of the Reading Board of Trade. Mr. Shapiro is held in the highest esteem by his friends and associ- ates, and is considered one of the foremost business men of the city. He has been prominently identified with fraternal matters, being a member of the Knights of Pythias, the I. O. O. F., the Red Men, and the John Heine Association of New York City. He has also been associated with the I. O. O. F. of Reading, of which he has served as president and treasurer for three terms each, and is now serving as conductor of the O. B. A., of New York City. He is a member of the Union Fire Company, the Northeastern Democratic League, and a charter member of the Hebrew free school. Mr. Shapiro has been a member of the Union Fire Company since 1890.

Mr. Shapiro was married in 1879 to Anna Etta Cowen, and to this union there have been born: Sadie, Bella, Abraham J., Morris, Michael, Jacob, Dorothy, Margaret and Beatrice. Mr. Shapiro and his family reside at No. 211 Mosa street, Reading, and are held in the highest esteem in their community.

DANIEL E. SCHROEDER. The Schroeders have been established in Pennsylvania since 1720 or 1730, when three brothers, Anthony, Martin and Jacob, came from Germany and settled in Oley and Alsace townships.

The immediate forefathers of Daniel E. Schroeder were farmers, his grandfather, George, following that calling in Alsace township, and his father, John S., in Exeter township. John S. Schroeder was quite a prominent man in his region, his position as sheriff of the county, and also the fact that he filled a position in 1840 to 1850, making him well known. He died in 1891. His wife, Susan E. Boyer, was a daughter of George Boyer, and came of Huguenot stock. She was born in Reading, and died many years before her husband, passing away in 1868. Of their ten children six are deceased, but all but one of them having reached maturity: George; John, who was killed on a railroad; William, M. enlisted in Company H, 2d Pennsylvania Cavalry, and was killed in battle during the Civil war; Charles; Francis and Louis, who died in childhood. Those who survive their parents are: Martha, m. to Daniel S. Keller of Berks County; Lucy, widow of W. G. Bryson, of Philadelphia, Centre county; Joseph, of Reading; and Daniel E. Daniel E. Schroeder was born Jan. 30, 1842, in Reading and received his literary education in the public schools of that city. After finishing school he went into the office of Judge Hageneman, to read law, and in 1865 was admitted to the bar. Later he was also ad- mitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the State and the United States District courts. He has been established continuously in practice in Reading, and has made an enviable reputation for himself.

Mr. Schroeder was married in January, 1870, to Clara L. Clark, of Reading, daughter of the late George B. Clark. Three children have been born to this union, namely: Harry F., in the lawn-mower business; George F., at the head of the shipping department of the Prospect Dye Works; and Estelle H., at home. The family attend the Lutheran Church. Mr. Schroeder is a good Democrat and active in politics. He was one of the originators of the Americus Club, and served as a school director from the Fourteenth ward. He is eligible to membership in the Sons of the Revolution, as his great-grandfather on the paternal side was Capt. John Soder, who participated in the Revolution. His maternal great-grandfather, George Boyer, was a veteran of the war of 1812, in which he served with the rank of lieutenant.

HENRY R. ESHELMAN, in whose death the city of Reading, Pa., lost one of its good citizens, was known throughout musical and church circles as an organist of rare ability. Mr. Eselman was born at Sinking Spring, Berks county, April 6, 1845. Martin Eshelman, grandfather of Henry R., made his home in Cumru township, Berks county, where he died.

Isaac Eshelman, son of Martin, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, Jan. 19, 1817, and died Nov. 6, 1852. By trade he was a tailor, following that business at Sinking Spring for several years after which he went to Centre county, Pa., where he engaged in huckstering until his death. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, and a Republican in politics. He married Ellen Rollman, born Sept. 24, 1817, daughter of John and Millington. He married Catharine Wetzel, born Aug. 27, 1823, and their children are: Annie F. m. to Thomas Fromm, a hatter and shoemaker, at Shillington, Pa.; Agnes F.; William R., m. to Ella Plank; Frank H., m. to Elizabeth Snyder; Emma E., m. to Andrew S. Long; Katie F., m. to Rev. William L. Meckstroth; Jennie F., m. to Joseph Rolland; Isaac, unmarried; Mamie F., m. to James M. Bitter, and Martha, who died young.

In his native locality Henry R. Emelman secured his education, and when a lad he learned the trade of cutter, in which capacity he later served for twenty-two years, four months, eighteen days with the Lebanon Church of Reformed Reading. From early youth he showed marked ability as a musician, the violin being his favorite instrument, and for nine years he served as organist in St. John’s Reformed Church, later acting in the same capacity at St. Mark’s Lutheran Church, where he remained for twelve years. Mr. Emelman was highly respected by all who knew him, and his acquaintance was large. He was married Sept. 6, 1868, to Miss Emeline B. Gouger, daughter of John and Maria (Bamberger) Gouger, and to them there were born two children: Charles m. Emma Kerner, and lives at Franklin, Venango county, Pa., and has one child, Helen R.; and Paul died at the age of eight years.

DOMINIC MAURER, one of the leading business men of Reading, Pa., who is engaged in cement contracting, with office at No. 294 Ninth Eleventh street, and yard at Moss and Green streets, was born in Alsace-Lorraine, Germany, in 1869, son of Anthony Maurer.

Anthony Maurer was a farmer in Germany, and came to America after the death of his wife, in 1888, on the ship “Canada,” of a French line of steamers. Bringing a young girl with him, he settled in New York, May 4th, and came at once to Reading, where he worked as a laborer until his death, in May, 1901. He was married in his native country to Anna Schwartzzen- teuber, who died at the age of fifty-two years. They had children as follows: Joseph, of Altoona, Pa.; Anthony, who resides in Reformed Church; and Rosina, master of the town of Albach, where he is very popular; Eugene, a carpenter in Reading; Margaret, m. to Peter Swope, of Reading; Dominic; Jacob, of Reading, employed with his brother, Dominic. The two eldest of this family served in the German army.

Dominic Maurer received his education in the public schools of his native country, and when a boy learned the trade of making wooden shoes which he followed until coming to America. Here his first employment was in the Scott works, Reading, where he remained one and one-half years, and then went to learn the cement business with his father-in-law, with whom he continued until July 5th, 1901, at which time he embarked in the business on his own account, and has continued therein to the present time with much success. He has erected some of the finest homes in and about Reading, including the home of George Deemer of Stony Creek; John Wager of Reading, and Joseph Waggner of Reading, and was captain of twenty-one men, and did work at Wernersville and at Mineral Springs Park Hotel. He is a property owner of the Ninth ward, where he has a fine residence. Mr. Maurer employs from thirty to forty men in his business, which includes cement pavements, vitrified brick pavements, cement steps, cement copings, concrete buildings, fountains, reservoirs, driveways, stable floors, cellars, all kinds of cement work with the latest process and in the most durable manner. His work is its own recommendation.

In 1884 Mr. Maurer was married to Helen Wagenblast, daughter of Engelhob Wagenblast, of Wurtemberg, Germany. She died March 30, 1909. Their children were: Joseph, a clerk, lives in San Francisco, Cal.; John; Anthony and Dominic, twins, deceased; George; Dominic; Mary; Aloysius; Robert, deceased; Helen; Margaret, deceased; Janet, deceased; Janet (2); and Gusta, who died young.

Mr. Maurer is a member of St. Paul’s Catholic Church and is connected with the Holy Cross Knights of St. George, and St. Boniface’s Society.

EMANUEL RICHARDS, one of Reading’s substantial citizens and old residents, and an honored veteran of the great Civil war, was born in Windsor township, Berks county, April 6, 1843, son of William and Sarah (Smith) Richards, and grandson of John Richards.

John Richards was a native of Scotland, and when a young man came to America, settling in New Jersey where he followed his occupation for several years. After he went to Chester county, Pa., continuing his vocation there and later in Berks county, being engaged at the Windsor furnace. Mr. Richards’ last days were spent in retirement, he passing away in 1847, aged eighty years, in the faith of the Presbyterian Church. Fromm was a Democrat, and lived in Scotland to Abbie Heacocks, and their children were: John, William, Eli, Abbie and Sarah.

William Richards was born in the State of New Jersey, and there received his education. When a young man he learned the furnace business, and locating in Chester county, Pa., was employed for some years at the old Potts furnace. Later he went to Rockland, and was there engaged at what was known as the old Sally Ann furnace, which was then owned by the Yeagars, whose name was later changed to Hunter, and the furnace was known as the Hunter furnace. He subsequently removed to Windsor township, Berks county, working at the old Windsor furnace. After its discontinuance he engaged at work in a foundry at Hamburg for nearly forty years, and was there employed at the time of his death, which occurred after an illness of three months in his sixty-seventh year. His wife, Mary Smith, died in 1894, aged forty-two years, the mother of fourteen children, nine of whom still survive. With the exception of the parents there has not been a death in this family for over fifty years. The children are: Jacob, of Luzerne county; Sarah, m. to Jared Heckman, deceased; and living in Hambur; William, of Chester county; Susan, m. to Joseph Schollenberger, of Hamburg; Emanuel, of Reading; Rebecca, m. to Samuel Berg, of Reading; Charles, of Schuylkill county; Amanda, twin of Charles, m. to James Wier, of Reading; and Matilda, m. to John Xanders. The parents of these children were members of the Reformed Church. The father was a stanch Democrat in politics.

Emanuel Richards received his education in the schools of Windsor township, Berks county, attending the first free school established in that township. In 1861 he enlisted in Company A, 3rd Reserve, being with the Army of the Potomac, and the first three-year men to leave Reading. He remained with the command until the expiration of his term of service, being wounded at the battle of Gaines’ Hill by a shot which passed through his right lung, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. At the same time he was taken to Libby Prison, later being removed to Belle Isle, where he was exchanged. In July, 1864, Mr. Richards volunteered in Company A, 195th Pa. V. I., remaining with this regiment until the close of the war. Upon his return to Reading Mr. Richards apprenticed himself to the shoemaker’s trade with Isaac Bird of this city, and he has followed this trade with success ever since, having been at his present location for thirty-four years.

On Feb. 19, 1868, Mr. Richards was married to Mary Wunder, daughter of Henry Wunder, and of their family of children, five are living: Reynolds, a sheet-iron worker employed by the Philadelphia and Reading Railway; William, in charge of the credit department of Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart, of Reading; Alice, a saleslady at G. M. Britton's store; Ida, at home; and Helen, a clerks at the Reading Iron Works. Politically Mr. Richards is a Democrat. He is connected with McLean Post No. 16, G. A. R., and is fraternally a member of the P. O. S. of A. He and his wife attend St. Barnabas Episcopal Church.

GEORGE P. GANGER, a prominent builder and contractor of Reading, bears a reputation which is the fruit of years of earnest, conscientious and conservative work.

From the form of the name, it is thought that the Ganger family originated in Germany, or France, but since settling in Pennsylvania, mainly in Chester county, it has been very closely allied to the Scotch and Irish, and practically nothing is known of the earlier generations. Mr. George P. Ganger and Mr. J. Benton Ganger are, with one exception, the only persons of this line living who bear the name. The grandfather was George and the father of Chester county, but little is known of him save that he married a Miss Evans and had two sons, Levi and David. He died young. The family were members of the Reformed Church, and it is supposed that the grandfather was a Whig in his political views. The maternal grandparents were German.

David Ganger was born in 1800 and grew up in Chester county, receiving his education in the public and pay schools of that region. After leaving school he learned stone masonry, but as he did not like the work he soon turned his attention to farming instead, and spent the rest of his life in that occupation. He married Miss Eliza Nyse and they became the parents of a family, three of whom lived to maturity. The daughter, Sarah, died, however, in early womanhood. The surviving sons were George P. and Levi.

David was born in Chester county, Sept. 10, 1843. He was brought up to farm work, in which he excelled. He was employed to attend the public schools also, until he was nineteen, when he entered upon a four years' apprenticeship to the stone mason's trade. Having mastered thoroughly his business he went at the age of twenty-three to Reading, Pa., and settled there permanently as a mason and builder. He has steadily increased the scope of his operations, and is now one of the foremost builders in the city. He has done a great deal to make Reading one of the desirable residence cities in the State. He has on his own account built over 200 houses, ranging in value from $2500 to $3000, besides a large number under contract for friends and patrons. His work is always first class and done in the most conscientious manner. During his first fifteen years in Reading Mr. Ganger was employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and has constructed many of the bridges and depots along that well known line. A number of the handsomest structures in the city are Mr. Ganger's work, among the most notable being the city hall, St. Peter's Methodist Church, the Evangelical Church, Mr. Eckert's home, and a great number of other residences.

HISTORY

John Logne, born in 1792, Miss Christie Low, daughter of James Low, of Lebanon county, and four children have been born to them, namely: David, who died in infancy; Sarah, m. to Albert Folk; Mary, m. (first) to Charles Spangler, had one daughter, Mabel, and (second) to John Newi; and Lulu, m. to H. M. Eldridge. Mr. Ganger and his family are members of the M. E. Church. In politics a Republican, he takes, however, no active part in public affairs. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and also of a number of other organizations.

HEIZMANN. The Heizmanns are of distinguished German ancestry, the earliest of whom anything definite is known being one who was knighted by King Otto for distinguished services in the battle of Lechfeld, in 955, between Germany and Hungary. The family name, indicative of valor, was bestowed upon him and also the castle and lands of Schadeck. From him descended the brilliant knights who, in response to the appeal of Peter the Hermit, at the close of the eleventh century, formed a part of the first crusade of the Christians who, with the cry "Deus vult" (God wills it), marched victoriously to Palestine and rescued the Holy Sepulchre. In the vicissitudes of fortune, the family has at times retained the highest distinction, while again it has met with adversity, only to rise again to its previous height. One of the family was Hofmarschall to Kaiser Albrecht I, another became Archbishop of Mayence, and another Stadt Syndicus of Cologne. During the Thirty Years' war, in which Germany was assailed by foreign foes and domestic dissensions, one branch of the family sought refuge in the famous Black Forest.

Charles Lawrence Heizmann, the founder of the family in America, was descended from this branch of Heizmanns. He was born in Lenzkirch, in the Grand Duchy of Baden, Germany, Dec. 6, 1803, and was educated at Neuchatel, Switzerland. At the age of thirty years he came to America on the ship "Marcus," sailing from Rotterdam March 12, 1833, with the intention of making a business trip. After touching at the island of Fajal, one of the Azores, on June 13th, the ship arrived in July at the port of New Haven, where it was learned that cholera was raging in New York City. The passengers were landed at Sag Harbor, L. I., on July 12th, and thence Mr. Heizmann proceeded to Philadelphia, where he remained for some time. Being favorably impressed with the country, its people and its form of government, he concluded not to return to Europe, and therefore located in Reading, Pa., where many Germans had previously settled, and where he established himself in business as an importer and dealer in musical instruments and musical merchandise. Like most educated Germans he was a well educated man, a linguist, speaking, besides his native tongue, English, French and Italian. He became interested in the industrial development of his adopted city, and with characteristic German foresight was instrumental in the formation of the Reading German Building and Savings Fund Association, the first building and saving association in the State. He was elected president. The charter was granted Sept. 18, 1848. He was Roman Catholic in religious faith, holding membership in the church on South Fifth street, of which he served as trustee. Mr. Heizmann died in Reading July 3, 1859.

On April 22, 1834, Mr. Heizmann was united in marriage with Mary Cecilia Eichhorn, daughter of John Francis Eichhorn and Eva Siegfried, whose ancestors settled in Berks county in 1755. All of their children were born in the old family home, on the southeast corner of Sixth and Penn streets, Reading. Mrs. Heizmann was one of a family of five children, namely: Andrew, who married Miss Stover; John, who married Miss Cummings; Andrew, who married Miss Miller; and Charles, who married Miss Mathilda Miller. Their eldest son, Charles, who married Miss Matilda Miller (both died at an early age, leaving two daughters, Alice and Ann); Ellen, who married Charles Troxell, postmaster of Reading under the Harrison-Tyler administration, and a collector of the Port of Philadelphia under the Fillmore administration; Mary Cecilia; and Theresa, who married the Rev. Charles Spangler, of Lippe, a son of the Count of Lippe-Weissenfeld, Germany, and a member of the Lippe-Detmold family. Six sons and two daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Heizmann, and this family has been influential and active in both professional and industrial circles in Berks county for many years. Charles, Robert and Theodore Ignatius are mentioned below. Francis Joseph, born...
BIOPGRAPHICAL

Aug. 14, 1841, died Oct. 22, 1849. Cecilia Eve was born June 2, 1844. Dr. Charles Lawrence and Albert Aloysius are mentioned below. Mary Ann, born Nov. 4, 1853, became the wife of James A. O'Reilly, Esq., a prominent attorney of Reading. Aloysius Adolphus, born Sept. 27, 1858, died Feb. 17, 1839.

Charles Raymond Heizmann was born in Reading Jan. 23, 1835, and received his education in private schools and Smith College, Waltham, Mass., since born in 1859, as for fifteen he entered his father's store to receive a business training. His father allowed the boy to undertake many responsible duties, in the performance of which he not only showed great interest, but also developed self-confidence and executive ability. He was often sent to buy goods in Philadelphia, and early displayed the traits which have since brought him into such prominence in the commercial world. When his father died he assumed control of the business, which he purchased from the estate in 1865, conducting it alone from that time to 1870, when he received his brother Albert into partnership in the business. The old business was conducted successfully, and in 1877 they made a new departure, establishing the Penn Hardware Works. They ran both businesses for two years, at the end of that time finding the new enterprise so promising that they disposed of the store in order to give all their time to the hardware works.

The Penn Hardware Works were first located in a small building on Front street, which the firm leased, and employment was given to ten hands. As the business grew and more space was required, they purchased four acres of land at the foot of Spruce street, between the canal and the Schuylkill, and erected thereon a convenient building which met the demands of the business at that time. But it continued to expand with undreamed-of rapidity, so that the new structure proved inadequate, and additions were needed so much sooner than the proprietors had anticipated. These were made from time to time until all offices and workshops were equipped with substantial brick buildings. Then adjacent property was secured; and in 1906 a new building 60 x 100 feet in dimensions, and four stories in height, was erected, ready for occupancy Jan. 1, 1907. It is very modern in every respect, and completes a block of buildings which contains the largest plants in the United States. The first floor of this new building is used as a store room, the other three floors being used exclusively for plating. The company now manufactures its own gas, for fuel and lighting, a two-story building, 30x80 feet, having been erected for the gas plant. There are six engines of power, two gasoline engines of 60 and 33 horse-power, respectively, a steam engine of 150, one of 30 and one of 120 horse-power, and a new gas engine of 150 horse-power. A new warehouse, seven stories in height and 60 x 120 feet in dimensions, is now (1908) under course of construction. Seven hundred and fifty hands constitute the present working force, which is frequently taxed to the utmost and working overtime. The company is extensively engaged in manufacturing a general line of builders' hardware, and the product is sold all over the United States, Europe and Australasia. Its products are used for the rebuilding of San Francisco. Orders are constantly being received which insure the activity of the plant for months ahead.

Mr. C. Raymond Heizmann is not only a man of excellent talent, but he has mechanical tastes which have developed into the most complete and ready understanding of the industry of his business, and he has designed much of the machinery and many of the appliances in use at the works, and is a patentee of a number of the articles manufactured by the company. The most successful of these articles was a plug tobacco cutter. After sharp competition with the leading manufacturers of the country Mr. Heizmann secured the patent on the machine, which was adopted by the Lorillard of New York for twenty thousand of these small machines, highly finished in nickel plate and bronze. The Penn Hardware Company was incorporated in April, 1896, with a paid-up capital of $415,000; and with Mr. C. Raymond Heizmann as its president, which position he has occupied since the commencement of the enterprise. An establishment of such magnitude confers untold benefits upon the community in which it is located, and the large showing made by the employees in the industrial parade during the Sesqui-Centennial of Reading, celebrated in June, 1898, gave some indication of the number of people directly benefited by profitable and steady employment at this place of business.

Mr. Heizmann took great interest in the celebration, and gave his influence and active aid toward making it a success, serving as a member of the executive committee and chairman of the insignia committee.

On June 9, 1874, Mr. Heizmann was married to Mary M. Miller, daughter of Lewis and Mary A. (Dickson) Miller, and they became the parents of the following children: Mary A., Mary Cecilia, Raymond L., Lewis J., Flora R., Charles Raymond, Jr., Francis Edward and Theodora. Their home is at No. 318 North Fifth street, Reading.

Theodore Ignatius Heizmann was born in Reading Dec. 14, 1838. He attended the private schools of the city and later Mount St. Mary's College, at Emmitsburg, Md., where he remained two years, after which he entered the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N.Y., and graduated in 1856. He became in 1859, with the degree of civil engineer, and for several months thereafter was engaged as assistant to the topographer of the preliminary survey of the Reading & Columbia railroad, and in a similar capacity on the survey of a line between Easton and Nazareth. In March, 1860, he became a survey engineer of the Schuykill & Perkiomen Railroad Company, and by his industry and ability won such rapid promotion that in March, 1861, he became assistant engineer. In March, 1864, he became principal assistant engineer, and in February, 1865, became resident engineer of the Middle division, from Harrisburg to Philadelphia, and in January, 1868, he became resident engineer of the Philadelphia division, between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, with office at Philadelphia. In April, 1870, his office was changed back to Altoona, when he was made engineer of maintenance of way of the main line between Philadelphia and Pittsburg. In January, 1872, he was appointed chief engineer of maintenance of way of all lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company between New York City and Pittsburg, and as such had his office at Philadelphia until his retirement in 1874. Mr. Heizmann has not devoted himself particularly to the line of work since, spending much of his time in foreign travel. He takes keen enjoyment in music and even during his active business career kept up his musical studies for the love of the art. He was vice-chairman of the music committee during the Sesqui-Centennial celebration in June, 1898, and wrote the music for the hymn sung on that occasion. He has been vice-president and a director of the Penn Hardware Company since its incorporation. In 1892-93 he built the St. Cecilia Memorial Chapel at the northwest corner of Forksken avenue and Spruce street, as a memorial to his wife's brother.

Dr. Charles Lawrence Heizmann, who spent all of his professional life from the age of twenty-one in the United States army as assistant surgeon, surgeon and assistant surgeon general, was born April 15, 1846, in Reading, where he obtained his intellectual training in the public schools. After his graduation from high school he entered the University of Georgetown, which institution conferred on him the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He was then prepared for the medical profession in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating therefrom in his twenty-first year, after which he applied for admission to the medical corps of the army, being one of the four chosen of several hundred candidates. In the army service his service has been an active and a brilliant one. He first saw service in the Modoc war on the Western frontier, and the reminiscences of thrilling adventures which he oftentimes relates are very interesting. He accompanied the party making the first survey of Yellowstone Park, and during his service has been stationed at the following posts: San Antonio, Texas; Fort Vancouver; Fort Douglas; Salt Lake City, Utah; Fort Niagara; West Point; Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor; Fort Garry at Winnipeg; Fort Adams, Newport, R. I.; at the Presidio, San Francisco, Cal., during the great earthquake and fire of 1906; and at Manila, in the Philippines, in charge of the Medical Department of those Islands. Some years ago, Colonel Heizmann was honored by the War Department with a semi-official mission to inspect hospitals and consulting with the medical directors of the principal nations of the Continent. He made a careful study of their systems and upon his return published a book upon the subject which is really a work of merit, and has gained him much praise from the physicians of this country. Besides being a work of literary value it has resulted in much benefit to the hospitals of our country, owing to its completeness and exactness of detail. He retired from the army in the year 1908 with the rank of Assistant Surgeon General.

Albert Aloysius Heizmann was born in Reading Sept. 11, 1848, and was educated in the private schools of Reading, the Gratz College, Wilmington, Del., and at the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., graduating there in the English and commercial course in 1865. In the same year he entered the store of his brother, Charles Raymond, at the corner of Sixth and Penn streets, Reading, and in 1870 he became an equal partner with Theodore Cable. The business dealt in books and a large number of musical instruments and merchandise. In 1877 the two brothers, as equal partners, established the Penn Hardware Works, for the manufacture of builders' hardware, and in 1879 disposed of the store and devoted their entire attention to the new enterprise. In April, 1896, it was incorporated as the Penn Hardware Company with a paid-up capital of $415,000. Albert A. Heizmann was elected treasurer of the company. That the business has been a success is evidenced by the fact that the annual statement of Jan. 1, 1908, showed a surplus fund greater than the original capital.

In addition to his work as a member of the Penn Hardware Company, Mr. Heizmann took a great interest in municipal affairs, having been a member of common council from 1878 to 1880, and of select council from 1882 to 1885. In February, 1885, he was elected a member of the board of water commissioners, and was chosen president of the board in 1891, which position he held until Feb. 16, 1892, when he resigned. Mr. Heizmann was a director of the Keystone National Bank for a number of years. Owing to his continued ill health, which compelled him to live in the South the greater part of the year, he resigned as treasurer of the Penn Hardware Company Jan. 1, 1904, but still remained a director. He died June 14, 1909.

On Sept. 3, 1874, Mr. Heizmann married Jane, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Sterling) May, of Shamokin, Pa. They had children as follows: Mary May, born June 27, 1875; Charles Lawrence, born Oct. 18, 1877; William Albert, born Sept. 15, 1882; Henry, born Sept. 15, 1889 (died in infancy); Edith Cecilia, born Nov. 24, 1887; Theodore, born Nov. 13, 1889.

William A. Heizmann, treasurer and sales manager of the Penn Hardware Company, of Reading, is proving his right to a position in the foremost business circles of the city. The name Heizmann stands for all that is substantial, up-to-date and honorable in the local industrial field. Various representatives of the family have won their way to unquestioned standing, and to the younger generation falls the no less difficult task of maintaining and expanding the prestige and fortune of their elders by infusing new aims and new energy into the business whose development has been the pride and the life work of its founders. The Penn Hardware Company, Manufacturers of Locks & Builders Hardware, owned, officered and managed chiefly by members of the Heizmann families, is one of the solid institutions of Reading.

Mr. Heizmann was born in Reading Sept. 15, 1882, and received his early training in the private and public schools of the city, graduating from the high school with distinction in the year 1900. He then continued his studies at Harvard University, where he won a Harvard College Honorary Scholarship, completing in three years the work required for the Bachelor of Arts Degree. In 1904 he was graduated from Harvard with distinction. He then took charge of the foundry department of the Penn Hardware Company, within a short time was appointed assistant treasurer, and in 1908 was elected treasurer, which office he has since held. In addition to the duties which fall to him in that capacity he also has been given charge of the sales department, a measure of responsibility which reflects credit upon the promise which he has already shown.

On Oct. 9, 1906, Mr. Heizmann married Miss Ada Lotz Leinbach, a daughter of A. Ellsworth and Mary A. (Lotz) Leinbach, members of prominent Berks county families elsewhere mentioned. Mr. and Mrs. Heizmann reside at No. 803 Windsor street. They have one child, Anne Leinbach, born Sept. 3, 1907. Mr. Heizmann is a member of St. Peter's Catholic Church, and socially belongs to the Berkshire Country Club and is secretary of the Harvard Club of Reading.

John Roehrich, engaged in the manufacture of artificial ice as proprietor of a large cold storage plant at Third and Buttonwood streets, was born in Baden, Germany, in 1851. In 1865, he accompanied his parents, Christopher and Catharine (Doeman) Roehrich, to America. The father was a paver by trade. After setting up at Reading continued to work at it through his active life. He died in 1881, at the age of seventy-two years. His widow survived until 1890, dying at the age of eighty-one years. They had four children, namely: Elizabeth, Mary, Catharine and John. In religious belief, they were Lutheran. The father was a naturalized citizen of the United States, and was a zealous worker in the Democratic party.

John Roehrich was educated mainly in his native land and soon after coming to Reading was employed by Frederick Lauer as an errand boy. Later he worked at the Felix brewery, the same plant now owned by the Deppen Brewing Company, where he filled the position of assistant brewer-master for upward of eight years. In 1885 he formed a partnership with John Stocker, under the name of Roehrich & Stocker, continuing on until 1891. In 1891 he started a new business at Fremont, Pa., and they continued there until 1891, when they sold the brewery and came to Reading. Purchasing a tract of land on North Eleventh street, opposite the Fair ground, they established a brewery and carried it on successfully until 1897, when Mr. Roehrich sold his interest to his partner. Subsequently he formed a partnership with George J. Raab and they operated the old Keystone Brewery under the name of Roehrich & Raab until 1902, when they sold the plant to the Deppen Brewing Co., and in 1908 this was reorganized with the following officers: President, J. H. Roehrich; Vice President, J. H. Roehrich; secretary, George J. Raab; treasurer, James Taylor; and directors, James Mahony and Dr. John M. Bertolet. That year they erected the Brewery at Third and Buttonwood streets, where thirty-nine men are employed.

After closing out his former business interests, in 1902, Mr. Roehrich purchased a lot of ground (75 by 140 feet) on Third near Buttonwood street in 1903, and built a cold storage and ice plant, and equipped it with modern machinery, with a capacity of fifty tons of ice per day.

In 1875 Mr. Roehrich was married to Catharine Baisch, a native of Berks County, and they have three children, viz: William J., Frank C. and Harry Max. They are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Roehrich is a self-made man. In his business as well as his social relations he is held in the highest esteem.
J. H. REICHERT, of Willow Glen Farm, in Marion township, Berks county, and second vice-president of the International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, Pa., was born in Upper Tulpehocken township, Berks county, Sept. 1, 1866, son of Jeremiah M. Reichert (a soldier of the Civil war), and grandson of Charles Reichert (a Revolutionary soldier).

The family is of Swiss extraction, and was one of the earliest to locate in Berks county, the name appearing in 1739 on the first tax list made up for Bern township.

As a young man Mr. Reichert was a salesman, and about twenty-five years ago he became connected with the International Correspondence Schools at Scranton, and is now serving as second vice-president, having charge of the selling force. He has, however, retained his residence in Marion township, on the homestead of his maternal ancestors, the Maidenfords.

Willow Glen Farm consists of 105 acres, and is one of the landmarks of the county, having been settled by Mr. Reichert's ancestors nearly two centuries ago. The farm house is 177 years old. This place is run on business principles, and after being practically ruined through farming along old methods by generation after generation. When Mr. Reichert took charge he raised the question carefully for weeks and months and at the end of that time had concluded two things were necessary: To discontinue the pasturing of cattle, and to waste less home fertilizer. He worked out a system of green crops, suitable to the climate and soil, and he has a fine herd of fifty-five jerseys (in milk). He has in his farm an excellent dairy and brings two casks of milk a week more to Reading than that sold by other farmers. The milk of every cow is weighed at each milking, and the total daily yield is watched, so that any variations can be quickly noted and the cause caught. In one year the farm produced 154,000 quarts of milk.

On April 15, 1889, Capt. Reichert married M. Krauss. They now live where his ancestors lived, and they have no purchased, and nothing is sold except wheat, milk, and cattle, yet the farm has an annual income of $7,000.

REDCAY. For the last one hundred and fifty and more years the name of Redgay (Redge) has been a familiar one in Lancaster and Berks counties, Pa., where many of the name have spent upright, honorable and useful lives following the peaceful pursuits of agriculture.

(1) Elias Rattge, or Redche, the ancestor of the Redgay family in question, came to Pennsylvania, Sept. 26, 1737, and was married to Maria Krauss, according to Nicholas Rattge, a relative. Both names were written by a clerk, and that of Elias was spelled Ratgen. Tradition says he was related to John Jacob Radge, who arrived in Philadelphia, Dec. 3, 1740, on the ship "Robert and Alice," Capt. Goodman, commander. Elias Rattge settled at once in Robeson township, Lancaster county, and Nicholas in Albany township, Berks (then Philadelphia) county, and on Nov. 28, 1750, the latter received a warrant for fifty acres in Philadelphia county. He was a farmer, but little is known of him. He died in 1760, leaving a family and 128 acres, and children.

In 1778 Elias Rattge (or Redche) secured a warrant from the proprietaries of Pennsylvania for sixty-five acres of land in Robeson township, Lancaster county; in 1779, he was married to Maria Krauss. On Oct. 28, 1765, he purchased of Henry Winterberger 140 acres at Gibraltar, Robeson township, adjoining the sixty-five acres previously mentioned, and there he farmed continuously until 1773. St. John's Church and graveyard are situated on this property. On June 12, 1778, he purchased property he moved to the farm of Elias, Jr., and moved to Cumru (now Brecknock) township, in what was called "the Forest." There he purchased one hundred and thirty-four acres, through which ran the Allegheny creek, and on the banks of that stream he erected a sawmill, which he conducted successfully until the time of his death. He also followed farming on this land. He died in 1786, aged about seventy years, and is buried in St. John's graveyard at Gibraltar.

Elias Redche was twice married. By his first wife, Elizabeth, he had the following children: (1) Elias Redgay, born in 1746, m. 1773, Jan. 11, 1766, of Oley, April 6, 1773, and died Jan. 3, 1829. (2) Barbara m. John Kendall. (3) Mary, born Aug. 5, 1747, m. Gottlieb Christian, May 28, 1770, and died in 1832. (4) Catharine, born April 22, 1756, m. Christian Krauss, Sept. 5, 1773, and died Feb. 14, 1808. (5) Elizabeth, m. Allrich Rapp, Sept. 12, 1786. Elias Redche (son, second) March 21, 1775, Rosina Zigler, widow of Adam Zigler. They had no children, and at his death in 1788 she married Christian Eschelman, a neighbor. (11) Elias Redgay, Jr., only son of Elias and Elizabeth, lived in Robeson township, where he carried on farm, and conducted a sawmill. He was engaged in operations on the two tracts which he had purchased from his father in 1773, up to 1804, when he decided to sell out. He was an extensive dealer in land and a large property owner, owning several good farms and a few timber tracts on which he operated sawmills.

In 1804 he purchased property in Exeter, and in 1805–1806, said during the Revolutionary war he served as a lieutenant of militia from Pennsylvania in Capt. Adam Beard's Company, 3d Battalion, Lieut. Col. Jonathan Jones. He was a great reader and delighted to tell stories of the war. He passed away Jan. 3, 1829, and is buried in the Old Redgay burial ground.

On April 6, 1773, Elias Redgay married Elizabeth Hunter, who was born in 1752, and died Jan. 11, 1816, and to them were born the following children: (1) Henry, born Aug. 13, 1775, m. Mary Catharine Neykirk, of Exeter, who was born Jan. 25, 1779. He died May 22, 1844, and she Sept. 5, 1849, and both are buried in the Muddy Creek cemetery in Lancaster county. (2) John is mentioned below. (3) Elias, born Dec. 28, 1782, m. (first) Jan. 29, 1809, Sarah Harner, of Exeter. She died and was buried in Muddy Creek cemetery, April 16, 1874. (4) (second) July 16, 1828, Elizabeth Strauss, of Bern, who was born in 1806. She died April 14, 1876, and was buried in Exeter cemetery. (5) Maria, born June 9, 1805, Jacob F. Knapp, of Exeter. (6) Elias, Jr. Redgay, of Exeter.

(11) John Redgay, son of Elias, was born in Robeson township, Berks county, about 1778. On April 10, 1810, he, with his father, purchased a farm of John Barr, in Exeter township, which they farmed until 1823, when they sold out. He then moved to a farm near Schwartzwald in Exeter, which had a clover mill operated for him to his death, in 1838, and he is buried in St. John's graveyard. In 1800 he married Esther Rhoads, of Amity township, and they had children as follows: (1) Mary, born Oct. 14, 1807, m. Thomas Lewis. (2) Betzy, born April 10, 1809, m. Pete Romig, and died Oct. 16, 1851.
John, born April 25, 1810, m. Phoebe Schrack, who was born Oct. 21, 1817, and died Feb. 13, 1854. He passed away in July, 1848. (4) Daniel, born Feb. 1, 1812, m. Abby Kint, (born April 16, 1818, died April 13, 1904), and died June 1, 1868. (5) Jacob, born June 13, 1816, died March 21, 1898. (6) Catharine m. John Lewis. (IV) Daniel Reday, son of John and Esther (Rhoads) Reday, was born Feb. 1, 1812, and died June 1, 1890. He married Abby Kint, daughter of Abraham Kint, and they moved to McEwensville, Pa. They were the parents of: Angelina, b. 1842 in township, and on this he lived and worked until March 20, 1811. The place is now owned by the Elisha Brown estate. He then purchased 137 acres on Lancaster pike, between the "Five Mile House" and Gougler ville, in Cumru township, but this being poor and swampy land he sold it a year after, April 1, 1812, and moved to the "Five Mile House," in Brecknock township, Lancaster county. There he purchased a farm and there he lived until his death in 1848. He married Mary Catharine Neykirk, and they had children as follows: Esther, born Dec. 18, 1797, was baptized Sept. 3, 1798. Mary, born Nov. 3, 1801, died July 6, 1810; she was drowned in July, 1810, when he was 10 years of age; and he was born at Gibraltar. Nelly, born April 2, 1803, died Aug. 20, 1853; she m. Abraham Trosle, born in 1809, who died Nov. 23, 1886. Jacob, born Sept. 11, 1804, died Dec. 22, 1812. Heinrich, born Feb. 12, 1809, died unmarried April 14, 1834. Mary Catharine, born Sept. 19, 1810, died aged thirteen days. John, born May 14, 1813, died Oct. 8, 1863; his wife, Mary Ann, was born Feb. 16, 1816. Mary, born May 7, 1817, m. Simon Kindt, who was born May 3, 1822, and died Aug. 15, 1870. Sarah, born May 23, 1819, m. Joseph Stemmen. Susannah, born Dec. 8, 1820, m. William Reday, a cousin, and is still living. Catharine m. Henry Lingling; Elizabeth m. R. Sweigert, and they moved to Cumberland county. Joseph and Rachel are given no record. (III) Elias Reday, son of Elias, was born Dec. 28, 1782, in Robeson township, Berks county, and died at Adamstown, Jan. 28, 1867. He assisted his father with the farm work until his marriage. On Jan. 29, 1809, he married Sarah Harner, a daughter of Heinrich and Catharine Harner of Exeter. The year after his marriage he farmed for himself, and in 1810 he moved to Exeter, where he carried on farming operations until 1831. On March 31st of the last named year he bought the farm of Jacob Rhoads. He moved to Adamstown, Lancaster county, on the Lancaster pike, between Reading and Lancaster. The Lancaster pike was a much used highway and of all the old hosteries in the town "Redcay's" was the most patronized by the travelers between the two points. This hotel was operated by Mr. Reday until 1846, in which year he sold out and purchased a tract of land in the lower end of the town, where he erected a hotel which he owned until the time of his death: Mr. Reday was twice married. He m. (first) Sarah Harner, by whom he had the following children: (1) Henry, born Aug. 9, 1809, died Jan. 18, 1872. He m. L. Snow, Nov. 22, 1822, and died Feb. 22, 1811, and died Aug. 6, 1898. (2) Charles, born Jan. 1, 1811, died Nov. 29, 1887. He m. Mary Pennebecker, who died Feb. 8, 1888. (3) Lidia, born Dec. 13, 1812, m. John Young. (4) Harriet, born Dec. 21, 1814, died March 19, 1875. She m. Isaac Fichthorn. (5) A daughter, born Aug. 21, 1818, died May 25, 1895. He m. Ann Kegerise, born Dec. 19, 1824, and died March 21, 1891. (7) Benneville, born —— 29, 1820, died Feb. 3, 1873. He m. Polly Bulman, born April 5, 1829, died —--. (8) William, born Oct. 15, 1822, is still living; he m. his cousin, Susan Reday, who is also living. On July 16, 1826, Mr. Reday m. (second) Elizabeth Strauss, and by her he became the father of Elias Reday, who is mentioned in full below. (IV) Elias Reday, son of Elias and Elizabeth (Strauss) Reday, was born at the "Upper Hotel" which was kept by his father, at Adamstown, Lancaster county, Nov. 18, 1827. He attended the district schools, after leaving which he entered the butcher business with his brothers, Henry, Nicholas and William. He attended the Penn Square Market House in Reading, and his stand was located in front of what is now "United States Hotel." He was property owner, owning lots two, three and four in Adamstown, and a large tract of land in Iowa, also fifty acres near Bowmansville. A lover of good horses, he was the owner of several speedy ones, which he delighted to drive. While attending market, in the winter of 1859-60 he contracted a cold, which settled in his throat and eventually caused his death April 28, 1860, when in his thirty-third year. In 1858, Mr. Reday married Susan Mohn, daughter of William and sister of Jeremiah G. Mohn, the hat manufacturer. She passed away July 27, 1886, the mother of one child, James Elias Reday. (V) JAMES ELIAS REDAY, son of Elias and Susan (Mohn) Reday, was born Nov. 2, 1859, in Adamstown, Lancaster county. His father, dying before he was a year old, he was brought up by his mother, who sent him to the district schools until he was sixteen years old. In 1875 he left school and entered the hat business with his uncle, Jeremiah G. Mohn & Bros., who were then doing business under the name of Mohn & Prutzman. On Oct. 28, 1877, he left Adamstown for Reading, and in that city he entered the employ of his uncles. In 1880 he was made foreman of their shop, and this position he is still holding. On July 3, 1884, Mr. Reday married Anna B. Allthouse, daughter of Franklin and Amelia (Hinnershitz) Allthouse, and they were the parents of the following children: Harry B., William F., John R. and Susan A. The family reside at No. 1250 Perkiomen avenue, Reading.

ZIMMERMAN. The Zimmerman family in Albany township, Berks county, is descended from Heinrich Zimmerman, who came to this township from Maximavny township, about the time of the organization of the county. In 1756 he was a taxable in Albany. He lived at Stony Run Hill, and his homestead is now owned by a descendant, Noah Zimmerman. Heinrich Zimmerman's son Johannes, born April 19, 1761, died on the home farm April 5, 1824, aged sixty-three years. His wife, Barbara Dietrich (1769-1833) was a daughter of Adam Dietrich.

Johannes Zimmerman, son of Heinrich, succeeded his father to the homestead and was a farmer. His farm consisted of 177 acres. In 1822 he built the present large stone house. He and his wife were Lutherans, and are buried at Wessnersville. They had the following children: Maria Magdalena m. Daniel Kunkel; Mrs. Samuel Brobst; Mrs. Jacob Georg; Moses; John; Daniel and Michael.

Moses Zimmerman, son of Johannes, was born April 23, 1799, and died Dec. 17, 1840. He obtained the homestead at Ranshwyk in 1802 and died Nov. 14, 1841. In 1841, his brother Michael bought it for $2,400. Among other children Moses Zimmerman had Polly and Jonas.

John Zimmerman, son of Johannes, lived in Albany township, in the Stony Run, owning the farm now the property of Matthias Wessner, which farm was given to him by his father. This child was: Anna, Lydia, Eli, Aaron, Daniel, Gideon and Samuel.

Daniel Zimmerman, son of Johannes, was a farmer in Bern (now Tilden) township, where he had a large tract near St. Michael's church, and there he is buried. His wife was a Miss Keller, and among their children were: Andrew, Michael, William, Sarah and Anna.

Michael Zimmerman, son of Johannes, was born Feb. 10, 1802, and died Feb. 1, 1878. He was a lifelong farmer owning the homestead on the Stony Run Hill. He built the present barn in 1848. He also operated a distillery on his farm. His wife, Sarah Stump (1813-1885), bore him five children, namely: William; Noah; Catharine m. Jacob Steckly, of Weisenberg; Samuel m. Mary Ann; and Sarah died young. Michael Zimmerman was a Democrat, and served as school director. He held church offices in Friedens Church at Wessnersville, where the church was organized.

William Zimmerman, son of Michael, was born Nov. 13, 1833, and died May 2, 1906. He lived across the line from Albany, in Lynn township, Lehigh county. He was a farmer, and carefully husbanded his resources, becoming very well-to-do. He married Mary Ann Weisner, and their children were: Sarah Ann (1855-1861); Nathan m. Mary Dietrich; Amanda m. Reuben Shugor; Caroline m. Phaon Kerchner; Mary Ann m. Reuben Shugor, after the death of her sister Amanda; Daniel m. Kate Adam; Jonathan lives on the homestead; and Sinora Rothermel.

Noah Zimmerman, son of Michael, was born in Albany Oct. 17, 1848. He has been living retired at Wessnersville since 1895. He owns the homestead which he farmed until he retired in comfortable circumstances. He and family are esteemed members of the Lutheran congregation at Wessnersville. In 1869 he married Mary Ann Fenstermacher, daughter of Daniel and Polly (Dienrich) Fenstermacher, and they have had four daughters, viz.: Emma m. Jeremiah Weisner; Amanda m. Tilghman Groff; Alice m. Richard Groff; and Annie V. died in infancy.

ROTHENBERGER. The Rothenberger family has lived in Berks county for 150 and more years, and is worthily represented in the present generation by George W. Rothenberger, born in Reading, April 13, 1871, son of the late Cornelius K. Rothenberger.

The ancestor of this family was Peter Rothenberger, who was a Swiss. He came to America on the ship "Brotherhood," which landed at Philadelphia, Nov. 3, 1750. Soon after coming to this country he settled in Alsace township, this county, where he died late in 1773. He was an ancestor to the many Rothenberger descendants who are descended from him. He was a member of the Heptasophs; Washington Camp, No. 691, P. O. S. of A. With his family he belonged to Olivet Reformed Church, Reading, of which for some years he was a trustee. In politics he was a Democrat.

In June, 1760, he married Rosina Drexel, daughter of John and Mary Drexel. They lived at Reading, where his son Peter was born, in April, 1761. In 1765, he moved to Leitch's Crossing, a part of Exeter township, and the buildings at Nos. 35 and 37 Exeter street, and three lots at Exeter and Front streets.

(IV) Cornelius K. Rothenberger, son of John S., was born in Penn township, Berks county, June 25, 1847, and was reared upon his father's farm, working there until he attained his majority. He then entered the brick manufacturing business, in North Reading, and he also followed contracting and house building very profitably until 1885. In 1884 Mr. Rothenberger was in partnership with the firm of Moser & Rothenberger.

(II) Peter Rothenberger, son of Peter and Rebecca, was born in Alsace township, Berks county, Feb. 22, 1821, and died Dec. 27, 1875. He married Elizabeth Zimmerman, Oct. 11, 1878, and died Dec. 17, 1870. Mr. Rothenberger was a farmer, and in early life lived in Alsace and later in Centre township. He and wife were members of the Reformed congregation of the Alsace Church, where they are buried. Their children: Peter; Hannah married John Klob; Polly married Elias Bickel; Molly married Benjamin Herb; and John S.

(III) John S. Rothenberger, son of Peter, was a native of Centre township, born March 5, 1821, died Dec. 29, 1872. He was engaged in the old homestead farm until 1853, when he sold to his brother Thomas Rothenberger, and his father's brother, Michael Rothenberger, purchased a farm for $14,000, on which he spent the remainder of his life. Mr. Rothenberger was married (first) in 1840, to Mary Ann Kauffman (born Sept. 10, 1818, died March 23, 1864), by whom he had eleven children: Cyrus W.; William K.; John K.; Peter K.; Levi K.; Cornelius K.; Milton K.; Samuel K.; Joseph K.; Jacob K.; and Stephen K., who married Mary Ann Baug, in 1878, and they had one child, John K., who married Bertha Moser, in 1878, and they had one child, John K.

(IV) Cornelius K. Rothenberger, son of John S., was born in Penn township, Berks county, June 25, 1847, and was reared upon his father's farm, working there until he attained his majority. He then entered the brick manufacturing business, in North Reading, and he also followed contracting and house building very profitably until 1885. In 1884 Mr. Rothenberger was in partnership with the firm of Moser & Rothenberger.

This firm lasted two years, when the partnership was dissolved. Mr. Rothenberger then lived retired until Feb. 1, 1898, when he returned to the grocery business. He was a fine business man. He was accidentally killed Jan. 18, 1909, by a train at the crossing of Seventh and Penn streets, Reading, and is buried at Charles Evans Cemetery; the three preceding generations are buried at Alsace Cemetery. Mr. Rothenberger was a member of the Heptasophs; Washington Camp, No. 691, P. O. S. of A. With his family he belonged to Olivet Reformed Church, Reading, of which for some years he was a trustee. In politics he was a Democrat. In June, 1760, he married Rosina Drexel, daughter of John and Mary Drexel. They lived at Reading, where his son Peter was born, in April, 1761. In 1765, he moved to Leitch's Crossing, a part of Exeter township, and the buildings at Nos. 35 and 37 Exeter street, and three lots at Exeter and Front streets.

(V) George W. Rothenberger received his education in the city schools, and in Prof. D. B. Brunner's Academy and Business College at Reading. At the age of eighteen he learned the tailor's trade in that city, and for many years has been his occupation. When but twenty-two he engaged in business for himself, and soon built up a lucrative business. He is practical, and he understands his business thoroughly. He employs from six to nine men. Mr. Rothenberger is the owner of the three-story brick residence, No. 906 Penn street, with a frontage of 19½ feet and in depth 120 feet, having purchased this April 2, 1900. In March, 1909, Mr. Rothenberger purchased a private residence at No. 1534 Perkiomen avenue, where he has resided since May 1st.

Mr. Rothenberger was married Sept. 14, 1899, to Anna M. Brown, daughter of the late Albert and Emily (Ludwig) Brown, of Reading, and they have had three children, one of whom, the first, died in infancy. The others are Thomas B. and John F. Mr. Rothenberger belongs to the Second Reformed Church and the Board of Trustees, the latter of which he is a member. He is the son of the late John F. Rothenberger, a farmer of Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, who was married to Elizabeth (Nolt) Rothenberger, daughter of the late George and Anna (Lamp) Nolt, of Hanover township, Berks county, Pennsylvania. Mr. Rothenberger is the brother of the late John, who was a farmer in the same township.

Mr. Rothenberger is one of the substantial citizens of the township, and takes a keen intelligent interest in public affairs. In politics he is a Democrat, and since 1888 has held the office of school director, being one of the very oldest directors in point of service in the county. He has also served as assistant assessor of the township, and was delegate to several county conventions.

With his family he attends Emanuel Lutheran Church of Pottstown, of which for six years he was a deacon.

In 1855 Mr. Rhoads married Sarah Yorgey, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Reifsnyder) Yorgey. She was born March 24, 1840, and died Jan. 20, 1963, and is buried in the Pottstown cemetery. Eleven children were born of this union, namely: Margarette m. Jacob Levengood, of Montgomery county; Annie m. Irwin Sassaman, and lives at Reading; Jacob is a farmer in Douglass township; William lives at Philadelphia; Warren died aged thirty-three years; Emma m. August Maberry (deceased), and lives at Pottstown; Darius is a farmer at Amityville; Isaac is a blacksmith at Amityville; John is a baker at Pottstown; George Y. is a teacher in Douglass township, and Morris is a farmer in Douglass township.

O. B. S. WILDER, a well-known resident of Perkiomen avenue, Reading, who as a general contractor and builder has erected some of the city's most beautiful structures, was born in 1860, in Key West, Fla., son of Barnabas S. and Diana (Waltz) Wilder, the latter a descendant of Michael Waltz, a soldier of the Revolutionary war.

Barnabas S. Wilder was also a native of Florida, and came to Pennsylvania prior to the Civil war. He was a hotel proprietor for many years, and at the time of his death was conducting the "Mansion House" at Carlisle. Mr. Wilder was a member of the Masonic Order at Harrisburg, Pa., and was a consistent attendant on Masonic services at Carlisle, in the faith of which church she died in 1889. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilder: O. B. S.; Bella E., m. to Lieutenant George of the United States Army; and Robert, in the hotel business at Shippensburg.

O. B. S. Wilder was about one year old when his parents came to Pennsylvania, and his literary education was secured in the schools of Dauphin and Cumberland counties. As a youth he learned the carpentering, building and painting trades, and in 1882 he engaged in a general contracting business, in which he has continued until the present time, having erected many buildings throughout the United States and Europe. He has erected many buildings throughout Reading, including the "Crystal Palace Hotel," and the residence of Ferdinand Winter on Center avenue, and his work has gained him an enviable reputation in this line. Mr. Wilder is very fond of hunting, and during the winter of 1906-07 spent some time at this sport in Georgia.

Mr. Wilder was married in 1884 to Emma R. Wahl. He belonged to Montgomery Lodge, I. O. O. F., Reading; and Samuel J. Randall Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., Reading; in political matters he is independent.

GEORGE IRA KEEN, M. D., one of Reading's successful young practitioners of medicine, was born at Reading, in 1870, son of Samuel H. and Mary D. (Landis) Keen.

The Keen family has been known in Reading for several generations and has held the respect of the community. Samuel Keen, the grandfather, died in this city, and here Samuel H. Keen, his son, was born and has resided here all his life. In young manhood he was absent for a short time, operating an engine in Georgia, but for the past forty years he has been with the Reading Railroad Company, his wife being at that corporation's most valued employees. He married Mary D. Landis, a member of a large and honored family of Lancaster county. They reside at No. 3213 Chestnut street, which has been the family home for the past thirty-five years. They are the parents of George Tra, of this sketch; James O., a machinist at Reading; Newton Edgar, a printer, who resides in Philadelphia; and Mrs. William M. Kitzmiller, of Germantown, Philadelphia.

Dr. Keen was educated at Reading and after passing creditably through the high school, he attended Palmer Bible Institute at Boston, and then entered Hahnemann Medical College at Philadelphia, in 1889, where he was graduated with the class of 1892. He entered upon the practice of his profession in his native city, and has met with excellent success. He has established his office in his handsome, newly-erected house on Mansion street. During the late war, Col. Nicholas Lotz made room for the Continental Army. Col. Nicholas Lotz sold the grist mill and twelve acres of land, part of a tract of 200 acres, to Peter Bauman.

Philip Lotz, son of Col. Nicholas, was born in Berks county and was a saddler by trade, an occupation which he followed for several years on Penn street, above Third. He and his wife both died in Reading, and were buried in the Charles Evans cemetery.

William Lotz, father of Philip H., was born in Reading, and in this city received his education. For a number of years he was successfully engaged in the butchering business on North Fifth street, where the Masonic Temple now stands. Mr. Lotz died at the age of eighty-seven years. He married Sarah Hess, and their children were: Barbara; Catherine; Caroline, deceased; William, deceased; Henry; Philip H.; Casper and Emma.

H. H. Lotz attended the public schools of Reading, and then engaged in clerking in a dry goods store. Two years later he engaged in the butchering business with his father, and continued therein for a period of twenty years, and he and his brother Casper, being in partnership one year. He then engaged with George Y., who was in the liquor business on Eighth and Penn streets, and later removed to No. 805 Penn street. He then became employed with a Mr. Jones in the same line of business, continuing with him for a period of fifteen years, then engaging with Martin Sheaffer. In 1900 Mr. Lotz retired from business. He married Caroline Lott, daughter of Nicholas, and she died in 1888, their children being: Sallie J., m. William Auman, has a family of six children; and George m. Miss Sullivan, has two children, and resides in Reading. Mr. Lotz is a Republican in his political views, but takes little interest in public matters. He is a member of the Reformed Church.

JOSEPH TRICKEL, master mechanic of the Penn Hardware Company, Reading, and a highly esteemed resident of that city, was born in 1851, and there received his education. He came to America when seventeen years old, and came direct from New York City to Reading, where he has since resided.

Mr. Trickel learned the machinist's trade in Reading with A. C. Greth, with whom he remained for twelve and one-half years, and after finishing his trade worked as a journeyman for some time. He then engaged with the Penn Hardware Company, and he has continued with that firm to the present time, a matter of thirty years. He started as foreman of the machine shop and since has been a master mechanic. He is one of the oldest employees of the company, and is a very skilled mechanic, having several patented inventions to his credit, and being at the head of thirty-two foremen.

Mr. Trickel married Catherine E. Nicholas, daughter of Adam and Elizabeth (Dreher) Nicholas, the former a pioneer brush manufacturer of Reading, having his foundry at No. 131 North Tenth street. He died at the age of seventy-two years, while his widow survives him and resides with her youngest daughter, Mrs. Christine Regar, No. 1405 Muhlen-

BERK street, Reading, being aged eighty years. Mr. and Mrs. Trickel have one daughter, Annie, the wife of Herbert S. De Hart (son of a plumber), and they reside with Mr. and Mrs. Trickel.

The Trickels are members of the Catholic Church. Politically Mr. Trickel is independent. He is a stockholder in the Penn Hardware Company, and is the owner of considerable property in the city of Reading. Mr. Trickel's first house was on Hillen-berk street, having purchased this in 1876, and since that time he has purchased considerable property, among it being his present home, No. 1236 Peru-riomen avenue, which he bought in 1895. Mr. Trickel's mother paid a visit to the United States when seven-teen years old, went to all of the large cities, and then returned to her native country, where she died.

Mr. Joseph Trickel was the eldest of his parents' children, the others being: Leander, a well-known butcher of Reading; Reinhart, a blacksmith by trade, who died in Philadelphia; Alfred, who served in the German army, and died in that country; Catherine, deceased; and Bertha, who is living in Philadelphia.

BENJAMIN SAYLOR, senior member of the large grocery firm of B. & J. Saylor, Reading, is a native son of Berks county. He has been interested in his present business during a period of over forty years. Mr. Saylor was born in Heidelberg township, son of John and Catherine (Sheaffer) Saylor, the former a country merchant and also a tailor, who died in Reading Jan. 1, 1867. The wife and mother passed away Jan. 1, 1862.

Mr. Saylor began his education in the public schools of his native township, and then spent three years at the Union Academy, at Wormsford. On leaving school he engaged in teaching, following that profession two and one half years at Robesonia, this county. He then went to Philadelphia, and entering the grocery store of his brother John remained with him ten years. Separate stores were first located at Sixteenth and Market streets, and later at Sixteenth and Cherry streets. In 1862 Benjamin Saylor left his brother and volunteered for three years or during the war in the Union army. He entered the service in August of that year as second lieutenant of Company C, 119th Pennsylvania Volunteers, attached to the Sixth Army Corps, and was shortly afterward promoted, becoming first lieutenant of the same company. One year later he was again promoted, becoming captain of Company H, of the same regiment, and continued in that capacity until the end of his service in 1865. His duties led him into participation in some of the most notable campaigns of the war, in the actions up to and including both the first and second battles of Fredericksburg. He was at the storming of Marye's Heights and on to Chancellorville; then followed the engagement at Mine Run, in which so many were killed and wounded, and after that the storming of Rappahannock Heights, in which about a third of the brigade, under Gen. David Russell, were lost. On May 5, 1864, the great campaign under General Grant commenced. Crossing the Rapidan, the troops forged through the Wilderness on to Spot-tsylvania and Cold Harbor, where Captain Saylor lost forty men out of his company in the twelve days they were constantly engaged in fighting day and night. There at Cold Harbor he received his commission as commissary of subsistence of the volunteer service of the United States, in which capacity he served until the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox, April 9, practically the close of the war. In this connection he relates that after the surrender of Lee he received orders to turn over to the latter's army his beef cattle, about 120 head, to feed the starving men. All of Mr. Saylor's service was under General Sedgwick in the Sixth Army Corps. He was honorably discharged Sept. 11, 1865, as brevet major.

The war ended, Mr. Saylor came to Reading, and in the fall of 1866 began his present grocery business in partnership with his brother John. They had a small store opposite the site of the present magnificient establishment, 18 feet front on Fourth street, and 38 feet deep, the brothers buying out the former proprietor, William Fisher. For eleven years they remained at that location, and then in 1877 moved to the present place of business, No. 401 Penn street. Meantime the original store had not been long confined to the tiny room with 18 feet front, but in 1871 the new building was completed on the corner of Main and Market streets. The present store is the result of many alterations, the building being now 30 x 142 feet in dimensions, four stories high, with a cellar 11 feet clear below the first floor. In its construction 500,000 brick and 140 tions of structural steel were used. There are coffee roasters, ma-chinery driven by low and high voltage motors, with grinders, mills and pulverizers—in fact everything that goes to equip a thoroughly up-to-date grocery. Goods are delivered free over the city and adjacent territory, seven wagons and one automobile being employed for that purpose. The cake and pastry department is one of the most important in the city. The bakery is located on the third floor and is a model of neatness, and every precaution is taken to provide only the best and purest materials. A large part of the candy they sell is of their own manufacture, and they also carry a full line of standard mints.

In May, 1888, John Saylor died, and his son, Howard B., succeeded him, the firm name, however, remaining unchanged.

In 1871 Benjamin Saylor married, and his only child was a son John, who in 1907 purchased the interest of his father, B. Saylor, in the grocery business and real estate.

Mr. Saylor is a member of Encampment No. 43, Union Veteran Legion, and of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. He also belongs to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M. For over twenty years he has been a trustee of the First Presbyterian Church.

HERMAN B. SAYLOR, junior member of the firm of B. & J. Saylor, was born at Philadelphia in 1860. He accompanied his father, John Saylor, to Reading, and there received his education in the public and high schools. In 1876 he entered the grocery as clerk, and continued in that capacity, carefully mastering business methods in merchandise and grocery business in particular. At his father's death in 1888, he succeeded him as a member of the firm. In 1904 he was elected vice-president of the Colonial Trust Company of Reading.

Mr. Saylor married Lucy Templin, daughter of the late L. Templin, of Reading, and four children have been born to them: Mary, Lucy, Edward and Josephine. Mr. Saylor is a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelcior Chapter; and Reading Commandery, K. T. His religious affiliation is with the Lutheran Church.

HIESTER M. NAGLE, M. D., deceased, for thirty-five years a physician in Berks county, was engaged in the practice of his profession in Reading from the close of the Civil war until his death. During his residence in the city he was not only one of the foremost medical men, but a citizen whose activities in behalf of his poorer art, and welfare were recognized and appreciated by all classes.

Dr. Nagle was of German descent—a great-grandson of Peter Nagle, who founded the family in America. Peter Nagle settled in Berks county, where his son, Peter, was born July 11, 1782. The latter married Susan Filbert, born April 23, 1785, and they had five children, namely: John F., Augustus W., Peter F., Henry and a daughter. The father of this family died May 2, 1846, and the mother May 26, 1854.

Peter F. Nagle, father of Dr. Hiestor M., was born in Berks county in 1808, and died March 23, 1869. He was a physician and physician first at Williamsport, Pa., later at Milton, this State, then at Reading. He was subsequently located at St. Louis for a time, but returned to Reading to spend his last years.
To him and his wife, who was Miss Catherine E. Dauphin, of Philadelphia, were born six children, two dying in childhood. The others, Peter, Hiester M., Catherine and Joseph, all reached maturity, but are now deceased.

Hiester M. Nagle was born at Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 23, 1834. In his boyhood he went to school in Reading, later continuing his studies at Marshall College, Mercersburg, and at Kessler's Academy, all Pennsylvania schools. He began his medical studies in 1855 with his father, and later read under the direction of Medical Society of the State. He entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, but after one year changed to Jefferson Medical College, from which institution he was graduated in 1857. His first two years of practice were passed in Exeter township, Berks county, whence he went to Fleetwood, in the same county, where he was established at the time the Civil war broke out. On Aug. 14, 1862, Dr. Nagle left home to join the army as assistant surgeon of the 11th Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served until his discharge Aug. 15, 1865. He saw much hard fighting, participated in the siege of Suffolk, and the battles of Deep Bottom, Ream's Station, Richmond, Darbytown Road, Seven Pines, Newmarket Heights, Five Forks, Deep Creek, Amelia Court House, and Appomattox Court House. On Dec. 17, 1864, he was promoted to the rank of surgeon of the regiment, which rank he held at the time of his discharge.

The Pennsylvania Dr. Nagle settled in Reading, in which city he passed the remainder of his life, building up a large and lucrative practice. His years were filled with faithful and tireless service in the alleviation of suffering. He was well known to his fellow practitioners, was a member of the County Medical Society, and the Pathological Society, and was also a loyal supporter of Masonry, belonging to various Masonic bodies in Reading, Lodge No. 62, Chapter No. 152, and Commandery No. 42. He was likewise active in politics and found time to give much personal service to the municipality. He was elected on the Democratic ticket to the office of county treasurer, holding that office from 1874 to 1876, for two years a member of the city council, and during his second year was its president. In July, 1885, he was appointed examining surgeon for pensioners. Thus with his numerous interests, he accomplished an incaulculable amount of good. He was one of the last of an era, such as few are able to show. He died Jan. 30, 1893, and the esteem and affection in which he was held were testified at his funeral, which was the largest ever known in Reading.

On June 18, 1872, Dr. Nagle married Miss Lucretia Boyer, daughter of Henry B. Boyer. Their children were: Harry died at the age of eighteen; Katie died in infancy; Frank died at the age of five; Howard, a machinist; m. Elizabeth Bover, and they have two children, Lucretia and Raymond; Paul; Charles, who m. Sarah Haage, and one of the firm of So-Ny & N. Gehrman; H. Hiester, m. a member of that firm, who consists of the two Nagle brothers and John G. Nietherman.

Mrs. Nagle comes from a distinguished Berks county family. Her grandfather, Daniel Boyer, was the founder of Boyertown, one of the most progressive and prosperous of the county, was the first merchant in the place, and his descendants still carry on that line of business there. Henry B. Boyer, father of Mrs. Nagle, was so engaged for a time, but moved to Reading, and for some years was a merchant in that city. Later he went into the livery business, which he followed the larger part of his life until his death in the ninetys. His wife, whose maiden name was Susan Fritz, died when seventy-two years old. Their children were: Frank, Mary, Harry, John, George, Howard, and Mrs. Nagle. Those living are Mrs. Nagle and her brother, George, the latter a resident of Oakbrook.

ALBERT G. BORKERT, well known in Reading, Pa., as a contractor and builder, was born in that city in 1835, son of Daniel Borkert, a native of Oley Valley, and one of the first large contractors of Reading. He had formerly been a brick layer, but took up contracting in middle life, and many of the fine residences of the city are evidences of his skill. He also built the city hall, a new part of the county jail, and several public school houses and factories. Mr. Borkert followed his business until seventy years of age, and then retired from active work, dying at the advanced age of eighty years. He married Catherine Gantz, who died when fifty-eighth years of age. Their children were: W. G., deceased; Mary, who m. a Mr. Sheeder, of Reading; Daniel, deceased; Augustus, m. to Amanda Brown, and engaged in the contracting business with his brother, Richard; Richard, of Reading; Albert G.; Susan, who died aged thirty-four years; Amanda, m. to a Mr. Goodman, of Wyoming, Berks county; and John, a brick layer, m. to a Miss Goodman.

Albert G. Borkert attended the schools of the Third ward until fourteen years of age, when he learned the brick laying trade with his father, with whom he was employed until the senior Borkert began to engage in contracting business under the name of W. G. Borkert & Bros., and continued under that name until the death of Daniel and William. Our subject then took his son into partnership with him, and the firm has been since known as Albert G. & Sons, having a business at No. 986 Penn street, and residing in the rear. They also carry a fine line of tobacco in connection with the contracting business. The firm built the old Boys' high school, the Girls' high school, the Sixth Church, the first stove foundry on North Third street, and others.

Mr. Borkert married Melinda Wentzel, daughter of Jesse Wentzel, and the following children were born to this union: Thomas, with his father; Harry, a partner of his father; Sarah; Annie; Bessie; Maggie; Katie; and Lillie. Mr. Borkert is a member of the Lutheran Church.

Komp. Three brothers by the name of Komp (also spelled Kemp) emigrated to America from Germany, about the middle of the eighteenth century. One settled about Philadelphia. Deobald, who spelled his name Kemp, located in Maxatawney, east of Kutztown, where he reared a large family, some of his descendants still living in the same locality to this day. The third brother, Martin by name, settled along the Blue mountains in Albany, where he owned much land. In 1774 his name on the tax list appeared as Martin "Kamif," and he was assessed eight pounds tax. He was a pioneer settler and operated a distillery, burning much apple-juice. The Indians for some years were friendly with him and made frequent visits to the distillery which stood where Charles W. Dietrich now lives. Kemp gave them apple-juice which they liked, and they would go to the top of the hill on the south side of the road from the present buildings, and find great pleasure in rolling down hill. Later during the French and Indian War (1756) they made frequent onslaughts upon the settlers. They were nevertheless fearful about a man named Knepper, who it was said bore a charmed life, and frequently fought them. The Christian name of Martin Kemp's (Kemp's) wife was Catharine.

DAVID KOMP (son of Martin and Catharine) lived at Charles W. Dietrich's present home. He owned upwards of 400 acres of land, and was a farmer and distiller. His wife was Maria Petri (1775-1850). They had children: (1) Reuben, born Nov. 23, 1807, died March 3, 1890; married Regina Schwenk (1817-1895). They were farming people in Albany, and lived where their son Daniel now lives. They had children—Daniel, William, Henry, Mary, Amanda, Lazarus and Lydia.
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Both are now deceased. (2) Martin lived in Albany, and had children—Elizabeth, 1815-1822; and Jesia, 1819-1823. (3) Samuel, a farmer at Eckville, in Albany, married Hettie Ernst, and they had Jesse, Manasses, Caroline, Elizabeth, Sarah and Hettie. (4) Jacob lived in the Bushkill country, in Pa., and died Sept. 2, 1887, a farmer in Albany, married Catharine Schwenk, of the same township, and had—Daniel and Jacob (both died young), Martin, David S., and John B.

DR. MILTON D. LICHTENWALNER, a resident physician of Reading, Pa., was born in Lehigh county, in 1846, son of Elias and Fenna (Click) Lichtenwalner, the former a prominent farmer of Lehigh county who owned a farm of 160 acres near Fogelsville. He died when seventy-nine years of age, and his wife in her eighty-first year, both in the faith of the Lutheran Church. Their only child was Milton D.

Dr. Lichtenwalner attended the common and private schools of the place of his nativity, and when thirteen years of age went to Quakertown and entered a school taught by a Professor Horn, remaining there for two years. He then spent a short time at a business school at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and returned home and spent two years at Philadelphia, 1865-6, at the Homeopathic Medical College. He read medicine two years with Doctors Slough and Hulfrich, at Fogelsville, Lehigh county. The Licthenwalner's practised in Macungie, Lehigh county, for three years, and then gave up his profession, and went to Chicago where he spent five years as a bookkeeper in the Grain Exchange. He was also engaged in the hat business at Allentown, and came to Reading in 1883, becoming bookkeeper for J. E. Scheaffer, a wholesale hat dealer. He remained there until Mr. Scheaffer closed out his business in 1903, since when time Dr. Lichtenwalner has lived a retired life. The Doctor is the owner of the old homestead farm in Lehigh county, and also owns another farm of 100 acres in the same county, but resides in Reading at No. 51 South Eleventh street.

Dr. Lichtenwalner was married, in Reading, to Miss Alice Hawk, daughter of Charles Hawk, of Reading, and one son was born to this union, Milton H., who is attending school. The Doctor is a member of Lehigh Lodge of Masons, No. 396, of Trexlertown.

BRIGHT or BRECHT. The ancestor of this old and numerous family of Berks county was Stephen Brecht, a German, who came to this country in 1690. He was one of the emigrants from the Palatinate who landed at New York about 1720. These emigrants first settled at Schoharie, N. Y., but because of the unbearable treatment they received at the hands of Governor Hunter, of the Province of New York, sought refuge elsewhere. Hearing of the justice accorded the settlers in Penn's Province, by the proprietors, and the fertility of the soil, excellent water and other advantages, many of them came into this district. Among them was (I) Stephen Brecht, who desired a tract of good land for himself and three sons. His land was granted him by John, Thomas and Richard Penn, lawful heirs of William Penn, on Nov. 27, 1745 [Recorded in Patent Book A, Vol. 12, page 340]. On this tract he made his home and died Sept. 24, 1747. His remains were interred in the North Heidelberg cemetery among the Moravians. His grave stone lies flat upon the ground, and is the oldest stone that can be found there. The inscription is in good condition. His will was made Jan. 6, 1746, by which his land was divided among his three sons: David, Hans Wendel and George Adam. To George Adam was given the homestead (now owned by Adam Dun- derlein), and the remainder of the land, Dec. 1, 1804, David and Hans Wendel was made soon after this date, and is recorded at Reading April 17, 1754, in Book A, Vol. 1, page 68.

(II) David Brecht, son of Stephen, was born Sept. 8, 1719. He was a resident of Bern (now Penn) town-Bought about 1800 by the first John Brecht and is considered among the best in the community. Peter married Maria Magdalena Stamm and lived near Bernville while remaining. The descendants now live. Jacob is mentioned below.

(IV) Jacob Brecht, son of John and Anna Maria, was born March 23, 1791, and died Aug. 28, 1876, at the age of eighty-five years, five months and three days. He was married to Anna Maria Moser. By the will of his father he was to receive the homestead, but was to give four acres of land to each of his children which the records show that he was faithful in the discharge of this provision. From this union we find thirteen children; eleven grew to maturity while twins died in infancy. The children were: Anna Maria m. David Leiss; Henrietta m. Isaac Leiss; Sarah m. (first) John Kalbach and (second) Daniel Faust; Elizabeth m. Isaac Kalbach; Catharine m. Elias Staude; Rachel m. Adam Dundore; Rebecca m. (first) Jonathan Dundore and (second) Joseph I. Greth; Isabella m. William Klopp; John M. m. (first) Lydia Koenig and (second) Lydia Anna Grime; Aaron M. and Amendon.

(V) Amendon Bright, son of Jacob, was born Jan. 15, 1830. His entire active life was devoted to farming. He lived upon and owned the old Bright homestead of 234 acres of the most fertile section of Penn township, and at death owned several other farms in neighboring townships as well as in Penn. He was very properly engaged in an active business career, but failed in the success of the Democratic party. He was school director of his township, for many years committee-man of his district, for three years prison inspector in Berks county. In 1894 he was elected treasurer of the county, conducting the business of the office most satisfactorily.

He married Clara H. Hain born March 3, 1838, daughter of John D. Hain. The children were: Ellen m. to Jacob M. Bordner, of Bernville, who is now county commissioner; William, a small farmer near Bernville, m. to Mary Hine; Sallie, m. to Frank Schaeffer, of Tulpehocken; Harry, a druggist, who died aged twenty-four years; Annie, m. to Jacob Gruber, of Oholb; Albert H.; Rev. Edwin D., pastor of the Reformed Church at Derry, Pa., who is also engaged as a genealogist and historian, having in preparation a complete record of the descendants of Stephen Brecht; and three who died young. Amendon Bright passed away May 21, 1897, respected by all who knew him.

(VI) Albert H. Bright, son of Amendon Bright, is a prosperous young plumber and gas fitter at West Reading. He was born on the old Bright homestead in Penn township Aug. 25, 1872. He received his education in the Bernville high school. Until he was twenty-four years of age he was engaged in work on his father's farm. He then learned the plumbing trade under the careful tuition of Benjamin Yeich, of Reading. Having mastered the trade he established himself in business in 1900, at West Reading. He was thus the first qualified plumber in West Reading. He has now built up a good trade and satisfies his customers. He also has a Reading license, and does much work in the city.

In his political principles Mr. Bright is an active and firm Democrat, and is keenly interested in the success of his party. His social connections are with Unamis Tribe of Red Men, No. 330, of Reading; and the Royal Arcanum. He is a member of the Reformed Church at Bernville.

Mr. Bright married Cora S. Riegel, daughter of John Riegel. She was born May 18, 1876, and died Dec. 29, 1902. Two children were born of this union, namely: Roy Amendon, born April 18, 1897, and died Jan. 14, 1903; and Charles Adam, born Aug. 19, 1900.

(V) Aaron M. Bright, son of Jacob and Anna Maria, was born in Penn township, Berks county, March 21, 1833, and died at Bernville Aug. 29, 1899, and is buried there. He conducted a general store at Bernville from the time of his marriage until his death. He was active in church and like all his family belonged to the Reformed denomination. In 1854 he married Mary Kilmer, daughter of John and Catharine (Leiss) Kilmer, of Marion township. Five children were born to this union: Darius K., of Mahanoy City, Pa., m. to Julia Catharine Myers; William Y., m. to William O. Reading; Lehman I.; Albert R., of Reading; and Lizzie B., wife of George M. Zellers, of Stoucesburg, Pennsylvania.

(VI) Lehman I. Bright, treasurer of Yocom Brothers, cigar manufacturers, Reading, is a native of Bernville, where he was born May 24, 1859, son of John M. and Mary (Kilmer) Bright. He was educated in the township schools, the Bernville high school, and later in the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, graduating from the latter institution in 1881. He taught school when only eighteen years of age in Penn township, and after his graduation he taught five terms, two at Myerstown and three in the grammar school at West Leesport. In 1886 he came to Reading, and accepted the position of bookkeeper with Yocom Brothers, cigar manufacturers, which position he faithfully filled for seventeen years, when James Yocom became the owner. He has also been incorporated under the name of Yocom Brothers. Mr. Bright became its treasurer, an office he has since filled. He is a director of the corporation, and was also for one year its secretary. He has given his work great attention, and has developed his energies in furthering the corporation's success. They employ on an average 400 people, and their product is known all over the country. Mr. Bright is very prominent in fraternal organizations. He is a member of Progressive Lodge, No. 470, I. O. O. F., and was its efficient secretary for fifteen consecutive years, declining further service on the ground of ill health. He has been an active member of the lodge and served as degree master on the staff for many years. He also belongs to Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, F. & A. M., of Reading; Camp No. 113, F. & O. M., of Bernville; Castle No. 51, K. G. E., of Reading; Mount Penn Encampment, No. 152, I. O. O. F.; Canton Patriarchs Militant No. 2, I. O. O. F. On May 14, 1889, Mr. Bright married Emma Madora Ketner, daughter of Charles and Susan (Rohrbach) Ketner, of the Leesport township. They have three children: Harry, born Feb. 5, 1890; and Helen, Sept. 25, 1893. They reside in their own home, No. 122 South Tenth street, Reading. Mr. Bright and his family attend the Reformed Church.

(VI) Albert R. Bright, of Reading, was born at Bernville, July 24, 1881, son of Aaron M. and Mary (Kilmer). He was educated in the public schools of his town, and the Bernville high school, then under the able supervision of Prof. M. A. Gruber. In the spring of 1882 he entered the State Normal School at Kutztown, and attended the spring sessions of 1883. He taught school two terms in Bright's school house in Penn township, during the terms of 1881 and 1882. He was very successful as a teacher. He was early trained to farm work, and at the age of thirteen had gone to live with his uncle, John M. Bright, in Penn township. He worked on the farm until May 5, 1890, when he came to Reading, and since May 5, 1890, he has been in the employ of the Stichter Hardware Company, Ltd., Reading. This is the oldest established hardware business house in Reading. Mr. Bright is also assistant buyer in the general hardware department, and besides assisting he assists in the clerical work of the firm. Until 1874 Mr. Bright lived in Bernville, where he went to live
MILLER. Among the well known members of the Miller family is Samuel M. Miller of Albany township, Berks county.

Samuel Miller, grandfather of Samuel M., was born May 20, 1798, in Windsor township, Berks county. He located in Albany township at an early age, and died there Sept. 3, 1872. He was a farmer and owned nearly 300 acres of land around Round Top. His farms are now the property of Alfred K. Dietrich and David Weisner. He married Maria Fisher (1804-1883), and their children were: Isaac, who gained wealth in Oktara; Jacob of Eagle Point, Pa.; Samuel; Ann, m. (first) to Leiby, (second) to Daniel, an auctioneer of Lynnville, Pa.; William F. of Reading, Pa.; Mrs. Monroe Buck, of Reading; Moses, of Lehnerts, Schuykill Co., Pa.; and Ephraim, who was buried at Wessmersville. Samuel Miller, son of Samuel, was a farmer in Albany, owning two farms of eighty and seventy acres, respectively. The first is now owned by his son Samuel M. and the other by his daughter Missouri Dresh. He operated a sawmill which stood on the road near the Dresh buildings leading to Samuel M. Miller's home, which was now occupied by his son who bears his name, in 1872. He was a Democrat, and was supervisor of the township where he was well known. By his wife, Sarah Ann Dietrich, daughter of John Dietrich, he had children: Catharine m., Daniel Reeder; Jacob died at New Ringgold; Pa.; Louisa m. William Kerchner; Mary m. Samuel Stump; Lydia m. Edwin Kerchner; Polly m. Alvin Evert; Missouri m. Jonas Dresh; Samuel M.; and Sarah Ann and Charles C. both died young.

Samuel M. Miller, born in Albany township Sept. 21, 1820, is living in the homestead, and is a successful grower of potatoes. In the spring of 1887 he began farming on his present place, which tract he came in his 1892. He is a Democrat, and has been supervisor and constable of the township. In 1887 he married at Boyertown, Bailey, daughter of Michael Bailey. She died in 1908, aged forty-two years. Their daughter, Ida V., m. Frederick D. Feinour.

HENRY H. REINERT. The Reinert family, of more than a century's residence in Berks county, Pa., is worthily represented in the present day by Henry H. Reinert, of Boyertown.

John Reinert was a resident of Amity township, Berks county. His will, made in 1839 and probated in 1847, is on record in Volume 9, page 218. His wife, Mary, was living at the making of the will, and the following children are mentioned: John; Elizabeth; and Catherine (m. Elijah Focht).

Peter Reinert, brother of John and great-grandfather of Henry H., lived in District township, Berks county. His will, on record in Volume 10, page 600, was proved May 19, 1855. His wife was well provided for, and their sons, John and Samuel, were executors. Their children were: John, Samuel, Peter, Carl and Elizabeth.

Samuel Reinert, son of Peter and grandfather of Henry H., was born in 1790, and is buried in the old graveyard at Boyertown. He was a farmer and had an eighty-four acre farm in Douglass township, Berks county. He built thereon a house and barn to take the place of those destroyed by fire one Sunday afternoon while his son was shooting, a spark igniting the straw roof. In 1823 he married Hannah Reinert, born Jan. 16, 1791, died Feb. 19, 1864. Their children were: Mary m. Israel Weasmer, and had no children, although they reared Israel Reiner, whom was given their property; Johannes (John), born April 23, 1816, died Feb. 25, 1822, the father of Harry, and Hannah and family; David (John), m. Feb. 16, 1844; when their father died; David; Samuel died at Moreysville, leaving Jefferson, Eton, Hannah, Harriet and Frank; Hannah m. Marks Saffman, a relative of the late Judge Augustus Saffman of Berks county, and they had children, Irvin, Eton, Curosy, Clayton, Alice and Annie (deceased).

David Reinert, son of Samuel and father of Henry H., was born in Douglass township, and died at Englesville, April 6, 1907, aged eighty-three years, and was buried in Fairview cemetery, Boyertown. By trade he was a carpenter, and followed it for some years in Douglass township on the Reinert homestead, which consisted of eighty-four acres of excellent farming land, now the property of George Miller. David Reinert married Mary Hatfield, a sister of Samuel G. Hatfield, formerly county commissioner, and daughter of Ephraim Hatfield of Douglass township. They had eight children, as follows: Samuel died unmarried; Sarah died at the age of seventeen; Henry H.; Frank died of typhoid fever at the age of nineteen while teaching school; Mary Hannah married Soloman Wendling, of Pottstown; John is of Windsor; Albert; David, of only two weeks old, when their father died; Amanda m. Frank Sands, of Englesville. David Reinert spent his last days with Mr. and Mrs. Sands in their pleasant home at Englesville. He was a man widely known and much respected, and his loss was severely felt not only by his family, but throughout the neighborhood.

Henry H. Reinert, of Boyertown, son of David, was born in Douglass township, July 17, 1852. When nineteen he began to learn the carpenter's trade, and followed it for sixteen years in Boyertown and vicinity. In 1886 he engaged in the produce business, and now conducts a huckster route, buying butter, eggs and poultry, and these he takes to Philadelphia weekly. He has a large retail trade there, and he has made a big success of his business. His home is in his own substantial brick house, and he and his family have a large garden in front. In politics Mr. Reinert is a Democrat, and for one year served as constable. In 1890 he was elected school director, and he served in this office for eighteen consecutive years, and still holds it. For many years he acted as treasurer of the board. Since its organization he has been one of the directors of the Tonton Orphans Home. He and his family are members of the Lutheran Church, of which he was deacon and trustee, and he was president of the church council for two years.

In 1870 Mr. Reinert married Ellen Hartman, daughter of Daniel and Phoebe (Hafer) Hartman, of Douglass township, and they have children as follows: Daniel, a veterinary surgeon at Girard, Erie Co., Pa.; D. Edward, who works with his father in the produce business; Annie, m. to Daniel Leidy, of Boyertown; George W., of Girard, who graduated at the Keystone State Normal School of Kutztown, in January of 1906, who taught her first term of school at Brestville, and the following one in New Jersey, but is now stationed in Boyertown.

JAMES R. TROUT. A prominent citizen of Cumru township, who is engaged in the stone, lime and sand business at Shillington, Pa., was born Aug. 15, 1842, in Boyertown, Berks county, son of Joseph Z. and Mary Ann (Ruth) Trout.

William Trout, grandfather of James R., was born in Scotland, and in 1811, because of the oppression of the people in that country, he came to the United States and settled in Berks county, Pa. He enlisted in the war of 1812 as a substitute for Uthney Snyder, who was at that time working the Oley furnaces, and after the war accompanied the Snyders to what is now Snyder county, Pa., and assisted in the settlement of that county. For many years he was a fine mechanic and boiler maker for the Philadelphia & Reading Company, and George, who lived in Reading, was a tailor by trade, and in later years removed to Pottstown and conducted, in connection with his business, the "Daubs Hotel." He was a prominent candidate for sheriff of Montgomery county, but suffered defeat on account of being a new man in the community. (4) Mary m. William Yerkey, a lamp-black manufacturer of Snyder county, (5) Kate m. the Rev. Mr. Wilker, of Goshenoppen, Pa., (6) Polly m. John Rase, a well-known blacksmith of Goshenoppen, Pennsylvania.

Benneville M. Gaul, who is now living retired in his fine residence on Lancaster avenue, Shillington, Pa., was for a number of years a well known agriculturist and contractor of Berks county, and is now prominent in public affairs. Mr. Gaul was born Jan. 7, 1849, on the Gaul homestead in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Adam and Sarah (Sallada) Gaul. Mr. Gaul, son of Benneville M., was born in Germany, in the Pfaltz of Heidelberg, Germany, Dec. 18, 1793, and emigrated to America in 1764 or 1770, being rated a large property owner in Cumru in 1785. He was married Sept. 4, 1876, to Eliza Yerkey, who was from a town on the Rhine in Germany, and was born Nov. 13, 1742, and died Sept. 22, 1818. Johannes Gaul died on his farm Feb. 21, 1816, and from the inscription on his grave-stone in the Sinking Spring cemetery we learn that he had ten children, seven sons and three daughters, and was buried on his farm near Cumru on April 7, 1775, M. Elizabeth Kissinger, and they had three sons and five daughters. They were married twenty-five years. He died Sept. 28, 1826, aged fifty-one years, five months and twenty-one days. (3) Abraham, (4) William, born June 17, 1780, died March 30, 1867, m. Rosina Miller, by whom he had eight children, Solomon, David, Joel, Levi, John W. and Enoch (twins), Eleonora (m. Ben Krick) and Lydia (m. Daniel Huyett). (4) Christian, born Nov. 17, 1781, who died June 9, 1852, m. Mary Ann Kissinger, who was born in 1785, and they had six children, Abraham (born in 1815, and died in 1891, m. Mary Texter), Christian (born in 1817, died in 1871), Jacob (born in 1819, died in 1859, m. Mary Ann Huyett), Mary, (m. Elijah Ruth), Reuben and Hannah (m. Adam Hain). (5) James is mentioned in the census of 1850, as being in a farm, and from the same we learn that he had a large family, and was a prominent man in the community. (6) Jonas, born Oct. 15, 1796, died April 22, 1861, m. March 11, 1826, Catherine Potteiger (born in 1805 and died in 1860), by whom he had a number of children, all of whom died young but Adam, the father of Benneville M., and Eva, m. to Garson Huyett (born March 5, 1823).

Adam Gaul was born April 5, 1819, in Cumru township and Jan. 30, 1858, he followed agricultural pursuits in his native township, owning the tract now in the possession of William P. High, was prosperous, and at the time of his death left a large estate. Adam Gaul m. Sarah Matz, daughter of John Matz (whose wife was a Shoup), and to them were born eight children as follows: Eliza m. to Isaac Miller; Benneville M.; John, a bachelor of Montello, Pa.; and Sarah who died in infancy.

Benneville M. Gaul attended the township schools until seventeen years of age, obtaining a good, practical education. From youth he lived upon the farm until 1836, when he purchased the old farm stand at Hemmig's Corner. Here he continued to reside for several years, and then in 1892, bought the old Farm farm of sixty-six acres, near Mohnton. After six years upon this farm, Mr. Gaul sold out to Irvin Phillips in 1898, and in 1901 built his present residence on Lancaster avenue, Shillington, a large, sub-ststantial, two-story frame structure. Mr. Gaul also owns seven other good houses in Shillington, and a number of building lots, and since his retirement from agricultural pursuits he has erected fourteen houses in the borough, also assisting in other ways to build up and improve the community.

In political matters Mr. Gaul is a stanch Democrat, and has been very active in the work of his party in this part of the county. He has been elected assessor, registry assessor and school director of his township, being placed in the latter office by the largest majority ever given any candidate for any office in the township. He being a member of the minority party in the district, his election and subsequent re-elections testify to his popularity as a man and efficiency as an official. Mr. Gaul is now a leading candidate for the office of county commissioner, and it is very probable that he will be elected to this important position by a handsome majority, his past spotless record being considered. Mr. Gaul and his family are regular members of Emanuel Reformed Church of Shillington, he having been a deacon of the church for many years, and a member of the building committee in 1883 when the church was erected.

On March 3, 1877, Mr. Gaul married Sarah Kegerise, daughter of Benjamin and Anna (Binkley) Kegerise, and granddaughter of William and Sarah (Yorkey) Kegerise. To this union there were born fourteen children: Andrew T., Andrew W., Andrew W., Frank P., m. Ida Ruth; John A.; George H. m. Mary Koller; Sarah E. died in infancy; Ida L.; William B. died in infancy; Laura A.; Mamie M.; Charles H.; Katie A.; Bessie M.; Jacob A., and Eliza R.

ANDREW S. BOYER, a retired box manufacturer of Reading, Pa., and an honored veteran of the great Civil war, was born in Upper Bern township, Berks county, April 3, 1833, son of Andrew Boyer.

Andrew Boyer, the father, was a farmer in Upper Bern township, owning two farms, of two hundred and thirty acres, respectively, situated about one mile above Bern station. He was also a carpenter by trade, and followed that occupation in conjunction with his agricultural pursuits. He died at the age of seventy-five years, and his wife, who had been Catherine Schlaippich, at the age of seventy-eight. Mr. Boyer was a Lutheran in his religious beliefs, and a Democrat in political matters. His children were: Rebecca, m. to George A. Wagner; Susan, m. to Josiah Linde-muth; Lovinia, m. to Reuben Reiss; and Andrew S.

Andrew S. Boyer attended the district schools of Bern township and an academy at Morgantown, Pa., and in 1851 began business as a clerk at Centreport, Berks county, remaining there for a period of three years. He then held a like position at Shartlesville, and after a period of seven years here enlisted in Company I, 179th Pa. V. I., his term of enlistment expiring Aug. 1, 1863. Returning to Centreport he was engaged for two and one-half years as a clerk, and he then went to Bernville, where he engaged in business with Frank Rick, under the firm name of Boyer & Rick for two years, at the end of which time Mr. Boyer purchased his partner's interest and continued the business eight years. In 1870 Mr. Boyer came to Reading, Pa., and began making cigar boxes by hand, in this way building up a good local trade. For about two years he had his place of business at his home, and he then purchased a three horse-power engine. He took into partnership Mr. George W. Heilig, and in 1886 they built a factory at Cedar and Walnut streets, at first a small building, but which has been enlarged and rapidly at the time of his retirement in April, 1906, the firm was employing from twenty-five to thirty hands. The factory was 70x50 feet. three stories and cellar. In his line of work Mr. Boyer was very well known throughout the city. Since his retirement he has resided at his home No. 819 Elm street.

Mr. Boyer married Matilda Ludwig, daughter of John and Sarah (Blatt) Ludwig, and to this union were born ten children, of whom these survive: Frank J., in the publishing business in Reading, m. Priscilla Heilig, and had children—Ella, Howard, James, Irwin, Lawrence, Harry, William, Edward and Charles (who died in infancy); Sallie A. m. Howard J. Ritter, a draughtsman at the Philadelphia & Reading shops, and had children—Gladie E., Lillian (deceased) and Helen B.; Katie A. m. Henry Rauenzahn, a foreman painter at the Philadelphia & Reading shops, and has two children—Ella A. and Jennie E.; and Thomas W., junior member of the firm of Speer & Boyer, dealers in general merchandise at Bangor, Northampton county, Pa.; and Jennie Speer.

Mr. Boyer is a Republican in politics, and while in Bernville served on the school board and as inspector. He belongs to St. Paul's United Evangelical Church, serving on the building committee, as a member of the board of trustees since the erection of the church, as class leader for four years, and as assistant class leader for two years. Among Mr. Boyer's most highly-prized possessions is a cane, made and decorated by himself while in camp during the war. The carving on this cane, which is very elaborate, was done by Mr. Boyer principally with a pen-kjife and a piece of glass.

SNYDER. The Snyder family in Albany township, Berks county, is descended from Philip Snyder, who moved to that district from Bloomsburg, Pa. He was a wood worker and farmer. His wife's maiden name was Stahler. They had four children—Daniel, m. to Rebecca Zehner; Mrs. John Haring; Rachel; and Bevvy, who never married.

Daniel Snyder, only son of Philip was a wheelwright by trade, and cultivated a farm in Albany now owned by Mrs. Lewis Bailey. He was a Lutheran member of New Bethel (Corner) Church where he and his family are all buried. His wife Rebecca was a daughter of Philip Zehner. They had the following children—William; Jesse died young; Daniel; Mary died unmarried; and Moses.

Moses Snyder, son of Daniel, was born in 1836, and lived at the Boys' Mill, and there he owned a small well-watered farm, on which he built a house in 1909. He m. (first) Harriet Wen, by whom he had a son, William, and daughters. Jane, Mary, Annie and Kate. By his second wife Emma Lutz, widow of Joseph Fry, he has a son Robert.

William Snyder died in 1893, and in 1906, aged eighty-three years, and is buried at Snyder's Evangelical Association. He was a wheelwright and carpenter by trade, and an excellent wood-worker and mechanic. He made his home in Albany. His wife Phoebe Evans, was a daughter of Thomas Evans, of Chester county, Pa. They had children: James E.; Daniel; William; Thomas; Margaret m. Jesse Kamb, of Eckville, in Albany; Lydia m. James Nester, of Albany; and Jane m. William Greenawalt.

James E. Snyder is a well known farmer in Albany township where he was born July 7, 1845, son of William. When twenty years old he was licensed to teach in the public schools by Prof. John S. Ermentrout, and taught three terms in Albany. In 1874 he began farming on his father-in-law's farm, where he has since lived. He owns a farm of 135 acres he purchased. He is a Democrat, has been a school director thirteen years, and was secretary of the board ten years. He is a leading member of Snyder's Evangelical Church, and was class-leader and exhorter, and superintendent of the Sunday-school which has a membership of fifty people. He married Catharine Miller, daughter of Christian Miller. The family here had five children, namely: Jefferson, of Albany, has children—Ida, Viola, Lottie, Carl, and Roy; Jacob lives near Drehersville, Pa.; Monroe, of Albany township, has children—Minnie, William, Bertha, Verna, Pearl, Paul and Roy; William died small; and Idam Harvey J. Kunkel, a farmer near Virglin, Pa., and they have Velma and Freelite.

STUMP The Stump family, now represented in Maxatawny township, Berks county, by Calvin S. Stump, a male teacher in the public schools, and Jacob H. Stump, his brother, a leading undertaker, is one of the oldest in this part of the State.

(I) Henry George Stump emigrated from his home in Germany when he was twenty-eight years of age, crossing the Atlantic on the ship "Edinburgh" and landed at Philadelphia, Pa., in 1758. A land warrant dated Sept. 4, 1754, shows that George Stump purchased from Philip Maurer a tract of 300 acres (by estimation) of land, located in Albany township, Berks county, for 575 pounds “of lawful money to him in hand given.” This warrant which appears in Deed Book 7, Page 12, was not recorded until Nov. 6, 1758. In 1759 when the first tax of Albany township was levied, William Stump paid five pounds; and Daniel Stump is given on the same list as being under twenty-one years old. These two, William and Daniel, may have been sons of the emigrant, Henry George; but of two of his sons, John and Henry, there is definite record.

(II) John Stump, son of Henry George, had four sons, Jonas, Samuel, Daniel and Amos, and these all settled down to pioneer life in Albany township.

(III) Jonas Stump, son of John, became the father of three sons, Benjamin, Samuel and Henry.

(IV) Henry Stump, son of Jonas, was born in Albany township, Jan. 6, 1825, and died in Lynn township, Lehigh county, Oct. 23, 1890, where for some time he had been engaged in farming. He married Rachel Klingeman, daughter of Michael Klingeman, and they had children as follows: Emanuel; John K.; Henry; Oscar; Albert; Moses; Hoke; Fred; and died at Kutztown, Oct. 8, 1907; James died aged twenty-eight years; Daniel m. Jane Heintzleman; and Mary died aged thirty years.

(V) John K. Stump, son of Henry, was born in Albany township, Berks county, Nov. 25, 1833. He is one of the best known residents of Maxatawny township, where he resides in a pleasant home built by himself on Park avenue, Kutztown, adjoining the home of his son, Calvin S. In building this home Mr. Stump made use of the lumber of the historic old “Watch Haus” which was erected prior to 1760 on his grandfather’s property in Albany township as a protection against the Indians. By trade John K. Stump is a carpenter, and at this he has worked all his life with the exception of about fifteen years which he devoted to farming. At the present time he is interested in the manufacture of cement building blocks. In 1875 he married Catherine Leibensperger, daughter of Jacob and Caroline (Peth- off) Liebenspierger, granddaughter of Jonathan Liebensperger, and great-granddaughter of Mathias Liebensperger. To John K. Stump and wife were born children as follows: Calvin S.; Ellen Jane, who is running a successful millinery business at the Park avenue home; Jacob H.; Curtin D., a graduate of the Rucour Training School for Embalmers, New York City, and the holder of a New York State License as embalmer, and now engaged as an undertaker and embalmer at Fleetwood (m. Alice Kiefer); Alfred M., a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1903, and of Muhlenberg College, class of 1908, and now a student at the Airy Theological Seminary in U.S.; Clara, who is engaged in dressmaking at home; and James W., now (1909) a junior at the Keystone State Normal School.

(VI) Calvin S. Stump attended the public schools of Albany township, and later the Keystone State Normal School, from which he graduated in June, 1901. In the fall of 1897 he began teaching school in Albany township, and after his graduation, he taught the Lyons grammar school for four terms, the Eagle Point school one term, and the home school at Swover’s the past three years, and he has the reputation of being a thorough instructor.

On Dec. 25, 1909, Mr. Stump married Mamie Heng- gey, daughter of Wilson and Elizabeth (Brentzinger) Hengey, and granddaughter of Roy Stump, eldest of Roy’s father’s children, the others being Minnie and Stella. Mr. and Mrs. Stump have a daughter, Norma Grace, born Oct. 26, 1906. Mr. Stump is a member of Lodge No. 634, I. O. O. F., of Lyons; the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 1004; and the K. O. T. M., of Kutztown. He and his wife are prominent members of the Maxatawny Zion (Zionsville) Church, where he is confirmed. In politics he is a Democrat, and like his grandfather, father and brothers, seldom fails to cast his ballot on election day to aid in that party’s success.

(VI) Jacob H. Stump, the leading undertaker of Kutztown, was born Jan. 17, 1883, in the old Watch House mentioned above. When he was a year old his parents moved into Maxatawny township, locating near Shofer’s postoffice. He was reared on the home farm, and commenced his education in the local schools, completing it at the Keystone State Normal School.

After leaving school he learned cabinet making with Thomas De Lannoy, at Ripton, Pa., in which trade he remained for two and one-half years. Then he went to New York City, and attended the U. S. School of Embalming, from which he graduated with high standing, April 19, 1903, and in the same year he came to Kutztown. He embarked in the undertaking business, and by close and careful attention to every part of his business, he has won the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens and is firmly established as a business man. He is a member of the State Undertakers Association, and has held a license since 1906.

On April 8, 1903, Mr. Stump married Mattie Z. isch, daughter of Levi and Hettie (Stump) Heff- ner (See Heffner family history elsewhere). To this union there has been born one daughter, Edna May. Mr. Stump is a Lutheran member of Maxatawny Zion Church, and Mrs. Stump belongs to St. John’s Church, Kutztown (Reformed). Mr. Stump is patronally connected with I. O. O. F. No. 634, Lyons; K. G. E., of Kutztown; and Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 1004, Kutztown.

JOSEPH S. BECKER, of Reading, is a scion of a family whose long residence in the State of Pennsyl- vania is indicated by the fact that the name has been perpetuated in the history of the Beckersville in Berks county. Jacob Becker, grandfather of Joseph S., established the post office in the community and the place was named for him. He was for many years engaged in hotel keeping, and both the old hotel and the “Sorrel Horse Hotel” were built and managed by him. Each place had farming land and coffee. Mr. Becker operated the farms as well as the hotels. He died at the age of eighty, leaving a large family, viz.: Eli; Mrs. Samuel Frey; Mrs. Daniel Brown; Mrs. Lizzie Gabel; Mrs. G. N. Frey, deceased; Jacob, deceased; Frank, of Doe Run, Chester county; Samuel, deceased; and Mrs. John Lutro.

Eli Becker, father of Joseph S., was born in Berks county, and received a common school education. He learned the trade of a butcher and followed that for a few years in Chester county. From there he removed to Maiden-creek township, Berks county, and went into the business as long follower by his father, hotel-keeping, continuing this for eight years. Both there and in Chester county he also acted as auctioneer, his name being well known in that capacity for a long time. After leaving the hotel Mr. Becker came to Reading and established himself here in the nursery business, which engaged his attention up to the time of his death. He is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mr. Becker married B. A. Landis, born March 21, 1824, daughter of E. W. Landis, and a family of eight children was born to them: Catherine m. Henry M. De Turck, of Temple, Berks county; Jacob H. is a blacksmith; William H. is self-sufficient as a blacksmith; Samuel H. is a resident and ex-mayor of Cheyenne, Wyo.; E. H. is editor of the Billings Gazette in Billings, Mont.; Franklin is a painter in Reading; and Clara died aged twenty-eight years. The mother died at the age of sixty-five years.

Joseph S. Becker was born in Chester county, Pa., and was apprenticed to a public school. He was there and in Berks county, and until he was nineteen was employed at farming. He then learned the trade of a carriage blacksmith, and for eight years followed it in and near Kutztown. He removed next to Reading and took up horseshoeing instead of his carriage work, learning it under ex-mayor Rowe with whom he remained eleven years. At the end of that time, in 1878, he established a shop of his own at No. 418 Court street, and remained there till May 19, 1904, when he changed to his present location, Nos. 116-118 Madison avenue. There he has built a shop that will compare favorably with any in the State. It is 30x70 feet and has two stories, power to run his machinery. There is also a gas pipe running along the side of the shop which with the aid of a reflector enables him to do shoeing by night as well as by day. He uses only special hand made shoes and has a reputation for good work that has brought him the largest trade in the city. He is also district agent for the well known Harrod's Hoof Ointment, and has introduced that very widely.

Mr. Becker married Miss Caroline Wagner, daughter of Henry B. Wagner, of Schuylkill county. She and her husband both belong to the First Reformed Church. Mr. Becker is a very prominent Mason, belonging to the Father's Lodge No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also a member of Vigilance Lodge, I. O. O. F.

GILE J. WILLSON (deceased) was for many years a prominent figure in Reading, where he was connected with several important commercial enterprises, and where his extensive building operations materially promoted the growth of the city. He was justly held in the highest estimation by his fellow-citizens, and his death, on Oct. 29, 1885, at the age of sixty-four years, was widely felt by the community with which he had so long been identified.

The first of these Willsons in America was the grandfather of Gile J., also named Gile, who, when only seventeen years of age, left his home in England, gave up his inheritance there and came to the Colonies to enter the Patriot army as a private, rising in the course of the war to the rank of major. The Willson coat of arms, used by right of descent from the Ward family, was originally won in the Crusades, and bears the Ward motto, Sub Cruce Salus (salvation by way of the cross), the Willson motto being, in English, "God save or perish." Henry Ward Beecher, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Julia Ward Howe all belong to this branch.

Gile J. Willson was born in New York State in 1824, of New England stock. After his marriage he lived for a time in Winchester, Va., and from there came to Reading, where he settled permanently. He established a jewelry business and the Excelsior Jewelry Company, which was the foremost concern of its kind in the city, located at No. 524 Penn street, where it is still continued by one of his sons, Charles G. Willson, his watchmaking and jewelry manufacturing establishment occupying the second and third floors at that location. About 1871 Mr. Willson also founded the great spectacle factory at Reading, with which he was connected seventeen years. It is now owned by his son, Thomas A. Willson, of Reading (whose summer home is Clare Point Stock Farm, Ephrata, Lancaster county), and managed by the latter's son, Dr. Frederick Willson, one of Reading's prominent men. Mr. Willson's residence at No. 108 North Fourth street, was erected fifty years ago. At that time the city was composed almost entirely of the ordinary brick houses, and Mr. Willson was the first to introduce the innovation of bay windows, putting up on Washington street, above Fourth, a row of handsome homes with the bay window for which they were built was originally deeded to the Quakers for a meeting-house by the Penns in 1702; the original grant, written on parchment, is still in the possession of the family.

Mr. Willson's enterprises were all very successful. He not only gained a reputation as a jewelry manufacturer and merchant, but made several inventions of note which perpetuate his name to the trade. The first dust-proof watch cap, now in universal use among watch manufacturers, was invented and patented by him, and he took out patents on other devices in general use at the present time.

Mr. Willson was the organizer of the Reading Mutual Fire Insurance Company, whose first banquet was held at his home. Many prosperous men of Reading today owe their success to his practical advice and encouragement, for he was always ready to withhold aid or sympathy from the deserving. He was also an active leader as a prominent member of the First Presbyterian Church, and served as president of the board of trustees of that congregation for many years. He was one of the foremost in the erection of the beautiful chapel connected with that church, serving as president of the building committee. But most precious to his memory is the memory of his beautiful home life. He was a most devoted husband and father. He lived for his family, and was never more happy than in his home circle, and when entertaining his family and friends in his home, where all enjoyed his entire confidence and good fellowship. He entered most heartily into all that interested each one of his family. He had a smile and a cheerful word for them at all times. His approval was the highest reward his children asked for any achievement. Words cannot express their love and devotion to him and their more than precious memory of a dear devoted father.

On Jan. 7, 1849, Mr. Willson married Miss Sarah J. Templin, daughter of James Templin, who was a cousin of Betsey Ross, and a descendant of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Berks county. Mrs. Willson's grandfather was a soldier in the Revolution. She had her husband's name, namely: Thomas A., of Ephrata; M. Elizabeth; and Caroline. She succeeded to his father's jewelry business, and who is the ninth in succession bearing the name of Gile Willson—being an abbreviation of the family name of Peckergile, of Lancashire, England. The two older children were born in Winchester, Va., and the family had many relatives in that section, all extensive slave owners. Mr. Willson left the South because his sentiments on the slavery question were in such pronounced opposition to the general opinion there. Slaves had been bequeathed to his children, but he would not allow the children to have them. The house in which Mr. Willson lived while in Winchester was partly demolished during the battle at that point during the Civil war.

M. ELIZABETH WILLSON is very prominent in all the philanthropic work of Reading, and is connected with various charitable organizations, including the Civic League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, where she is also a member of the Woman's Club and a member of the Berks County chapter. She furnished a room in the Homeopathic Hospital of Reading, in memory of her father, which she keeps in repair and will endow. Miss Willson is greatly interested in all that pertains to her father's family, and her bearing their history, is justly proud of her patriotic ancestors and carefully cherishes certain family heirlooms, including a teapot which the Wards brought... from England in 1735, and a cup from which Washington drank at Valley Forge, where Mrs. Gill J. Willson's father, James Templin, was living at the time Washington wintered there; a valuable horn book with the Fellowes charm dating from the first lodge in England and descending from Sir Gilbert Ward, of Crusade times. She is living in the old home, No. 108 North, Fourth street, with her mother.

VAN REED. The Van Reed family in Berks county has been resident here for over one hundred and fifty years. It originated in Holland, whence, in 1750, came Henry Van Reed to find fortune and liberty in the New World. On May 20, 1750, he purchased from one John Patrick a farm of one hundred and fifty acres and one half for $421.00, and by living one year in Philadelphia county, but on the purchase of this land moved onto same, which was located in what is now Amity township, Berks county, but which was then still in Philadelphia county, the township being erected March 4, 1745. Berks county was erected out of Philadelphia, Chester and Lancaster counties March 11, 1752. In 1778 Mr. Van Reed tore down the old log cabin, and in its place erected a large two-story stone building, the western end of the present structure. He died in 1790, the father of nine children, all born on the Amity township homestead. These children were: John, Jacob, Agnes, Susan, Mary, Anna, Esther, Joseph, and Hannah.

The Van Reed homestead is a part of the land granted by the Crown to William Penn. On Sept. 11, 1704, William Penn granted by letters patent one thousand acres of land to Justa Justason, a Swede. This land extended from the river Schuylkill north to Earl Mountain, or what is now known as "Fancy Hill," the line being about 150 perches south from the Swamp road, leading to Boyertown, and was located between two lines running in a northeaster direction 210 perches apart by measurement. These lines were two of the Swede's lines, and are now nearly eradicated by the division of the farming land in the neighborhood to suit the convenience of the owners. In 1746 Mr. Justason conveyed eight hundred acres of his land to one Samuel Savage, retaining two hundred acres himself. This latter part adjoining the Schuylkill river included within its boundaries the village, then called Molaton, now Douglassville. In 1777 Samuel Savage conveyed 300 acres, part of the 800, to one Jacob Reed. The smaller tract was almost all arable land, while the larger (650 acres) was mostly heavy timber land. Samuel Savage was the proprietor of what was then called the "Manatatwyn Iron Works," and he no doubt retained the timber land for the purpose of charging coal and manufacturing charcoal. George Savage, it is believed, first settled upon this small tract and erected the first building upon it—a small one-story log cabin, and a log stable—and he was the first person to carry on farming operations there. He and his family continued in possession until about 1757, when he died, and in that year his heirs conveyed two lots to one John Dunklin. In 1758 Mr. Dunklin improved the place by the erection of a large two-story log building at the eastern end of the log cabin, constructing in its center a large stone fireplace, then a necessary part of every house. Mr. Dunklin died about 1748, and the same year his heirs conveyed the property to a brother, John Dunklin, who after holding the half month conveyed it to his brother-in-law, John Patrick, and in 1760 John Patrick sold it, as above stated, to Henry Van Reed.

When Henry Van Reed died he bequeathed the homestead to his son Jacob, who was then farming in Cumru township (now Spring). In 1819 Jacob Van Reed tore down the old log cabin and erected in its stead a two-story brick, the eastern part of the present building. Down to 1810 the log stable was only used for storing grain, etc., with a frame addition rendered necessary by the increasing crops. In that year Jacob Van Reed built the southern half of the present large frame barn, with heavy stone base and gable ends, and with a bank of hay in the rear. When James Van Reed came into possession of this land it was valued at $229.62 per acre, and this sum he was required to pay to his brothers and sisters in due proportion. He married Ann Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Hiester, and he died in 1858.

Jacob Van Reed was succeeded by his son, the present owner and occupant, Jeremiah Van Reed, who in his father's will was to Van a fixed annuity to possession of this land, and to his brothers and sisters such sum as would value the land at fifty dollars per acre.

From the time of the first settlement until 1819 the water for household purposes was obtained at a spring near by at the rear of the north end of the building, then a well in front of the house was dug. The live stock was always watered at the creek running diagonally through the farm close by the house until 1858, when a well was dug in the barnyard. In 1875 water power was communicated to the pump from the creek 700 feet distant by means of a stout wire worked to and fro by a water wheel. Two orchards are on the farm, one near the house and the other south of the house. The first was planted south of the house in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and some of the apple trees are still standing and bearing good fruit; the north orchard was planted at the beginning of the nineteenth century. All the improvements other than those here-in mentioned have been made by the present owner.

John Van Reed, son of the emigrant Henry, married Catherine Huy, and he became the father of the following children: Joshua, Mary, Lewis, James, John, and Jacob. John Van Reed was a paper manufacturer and owned and operated a mill on Cacoosing Creek.

Jacob Van Reed, son of John, was born in Lower Heidelberg township, Dec. 24, 1819. He was a large land owner and he lived retired for many years previous to his death, Aug. 10, 1900. He married Mary C. Jones, daughter of Major Samuel Jones (a major in one of the Pennsylvania regiments in the war of 1812), and their children were: Samuel John m. Minerva Yeager, and had children, Lewis and James; and Margaret, m. John H. Evans, and had children, Charles V. R. and Jacob V. R. In politics Mr. Van Reed was a staunch adherent to Republican principles. He was a member of the State militia at the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, and was called out with his company. In every relation of life he was found on the side of honor and truth, and he had the well merited esteem of all men.

CHARLES E. LEIPPE, proprietor of the Reading Knitting Mills, was born at Greenland, Lancaster Co., Pa., Sept. 10, 1859. He attended the public schools of Lancaster city and the Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and, after graduating from the latter institution found employment in the match factory of Joseph Loehr, on New York City. He continued in this factory at a small salary for a year, then he entered his father's knitting works at Reading, having declined a position under Mr. Loehr at a large salary; and he continued in his father's employ as bookkeeper until the father's decease, in 1858. He and his brother, J. Harry Leippe, then purchased the plant, and they have carried on the business in a successful manner under the name of "Anchor Bending Works" until the present time, shipping their product to all parts of the world.

In 1899 Mr. Leippe became interested in the manufacture of hosiery, one of the thriving industries of Reading, and, purchasing a half interest in the Reading Knitting Mills, the oldest hosiery works at Reading, he has since then been prominently identified with this great industry. In 1907 he purchased the remaining half interest and from

Mr. Leippe had identified a number of years with the management of the Schuylkill Valley Bank, the Berks County Trust Company, and the Reading Mutual Fire Insurance Company, as a director, serving the last-named as president since 1902. He has also taken great interest in the Board of Trade since 1888, having served this body so important to business interests of the state during the years 1907 and 1908. He assisted in establishing the Homeopathic Hospital at Reading in 1891 and has officiated as treasurer since 1896. He has served as a trustee of the Young Women's Christian Association since its organization, in 1898, and during 1909 he started a movement for establishing a gymnasium on the premises, so as to supply a proper place in Reading for the physical culture of women. He is prominent in Masonic circles as a member of St. John's Lodge, No. 455, Excelsior Chapter, and a member of the temple. He was a member of the Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and of the Lodge of Perfection. In politics he has taken an active part in the welfare of the Republican party at Reading since establishing his residence here, in 1880. In 1900 and 1901 he represented the First district on the board of public works; and in 1905 he was nominated by the Republicans as their candidate for mayor; though not elected the vote for him showed his great popularity.

Mr. Leippe married Alice Josephine Brose, daughter of Daniel Brose (a well-known miller of Schock's Mill, in Lancaster county) and Mary Reich, his wife, who was the daughter of Dr. George Reich (near Maytown, Lancaster county). They have a daughter, Anna Brose, who was educated at Reading, having graduated from the high school in 1903, and at Washington, D. C., in the Washington College. Mr. Leippe has traveled extensively in Europe and in the United States. He spent three months abroad in 1895, accompanied by his wife and mother, and three months in California in 1904, accompanied by his wife and daughter. Mrs. Leippe has taken great interest in religious and charitable matters at Reading for many years. She is one of the lady managers of the Homeopathic Hospital.

Mr. Leippe's father was Jacob Algeir Leippe, who established the "Anchor Bending Works" at Reading in 1880 and carried on it successfully until his death, in 1888. He was born at Steinfurth, in Baden, Germany, Nov. 20, 1834, and, after attending the national schools there, learned the trade of wagon-maker. He emigrated to America in 1854 and settled at Lancaster, Pa., where he worked at his trade for two years, and then located at Greenland, four miles east of Lancaster, for the purpose of engaging in the business for himself. He carried on wagon works there until 1865 and then returned to Lancaster to embark in the manufacture of shafts, rims, spokes, and other supplies for all kinds of vehicles. He named his establishment the "Anchor Bending Works," and conducted operations there until 1880; then, seeing an opportunity at Reading to carry on the business more extensively, he removed to this prosperous manufacturing center and operated his plant here under the same name until his death.

The father, Jacob A. Leippe, married Juliana Vollweiler (daughter of George Vollweiler, of Eppingen, in Baden, Germany, manufacturer of linen), and by her he had twelve children: J. Harry m. Elizabeth Heupel; Charles E.; Mary Elizabeth m. A. C. Hagelans, of Philadelphia; Julia m. Mr. Eisele, of Williamsport; Katie Algeir m. Robert A. Riegel of Philadelphia; Julia Vollweiler m. J. Lewis Lengel, of Reading; Anna Jane, graduated nurse, is assistant superintendent of the Reading Hospital; Jacob A.; Clara Minnie m. Herbert H. Ranck, of Joanna Station, Berks county; Lillie Rose m. George Benninger, of Reading; William Theodore m. Lillie Spears, of Reading; Albert Augustus m. Gertrude Prutzman, of Adamstown. The last two sons are identified with the bending works as partners.

JOHN G. SCHEALER, contractor and builder of Boyertown, Berks county, was born Oct. 15, 1836, in Exeter township. He has followed his present line of business in Boyertown since the early seventies, and many substantial structures testify to the quality of his work. Being a son of John and Catherine (Gardner) Schealer, he is a great-grandson of the founder of the family in this country, who, coming to America from his native land, Germany, settled in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., where he was among the pioneers. He spelled the name Schueler, and there are various other spellings, the most common forms being Sheeler, Schealer, Schuler and Schuyler. When this ancestor was born, when he died and where he was buried are facts unknown by his descendants, who are numerous. He had a large family.

William Schealer, the grandfather of John G. Schealer, was engaged all his life as a farmer and stone-mason in Exeter township, operating the farm now owned by Jacob Spohn. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He and his wife Barbara had a family of eight children, namely: Jacob and William, who died in Reading; Samuel, who lived in Robesonia; John, who lived in Exeter; Benvenue, who lived at Robesonia; Ann, who died unmarried; Lydia, who married Jacob Wentz; and Harry, who lived at various places.

John Schealer, the fourth child of John and Barbara Schealer, was born in Exeter township, Oct. 23, 1798, and died there Dec. 16, 1872, aged seventy-nine years, one month, twenty-three days. He was a farmer and stone-mason by occupation, and during the winter months engaged in butchering. On Dec. 20, 1818, he was married to Catherine Gardner, born Nov. 20, 1800, who died Sept. 29, 1878, in her seventy-eighth year. Eleven children were born to this union, of whom one died unnamed at the age of three days. The others were: William, born Sept. 10, 1819, a carpenter and cabinet-maker of Colebrookdale township, died in May, 1894; Harriet, born Sept. 19, 1821, married Jeremiah Shadler of Seneca county, Ohio, who died before she did, her death occurring while she was out West, in 1894; Elizabeth, born Dec. 13, 1825, married Abraham Dehart (now deceased), of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Valeria, born Feb. 14, 1825, married James Esbach, late of Pike township, this county, whom she survived, her death occurring Dec. 25, 1895; Susanna, born Oct. 14, 1827, is the widow of Henry Wunder, of Reading, and makes her home at No. 1028 Chestnut street, Reading; Hannah, born Nov. 10, 1829, married John Saltzer, of Colebrookdale township, and died Oct. 2, 1899; Catherine, born July 18, 1834, died in infancy; John G., born Oct. 15, 1836, lives at Boyertown; Augustus, born March 15, 1839, married Mary Liven- good, and died March 6, 1872; Samuel G., born in Exeter township Oct. 5, 1842, lives in his own residence at No. 1145 Chestnut street, Reading. The latter is a stationary engineer by occupation, and a highly esteemed citizen of his community. He was married Dec. 26, 1868, to Adeline Wessner, born in 1848, who died in 1905. They had six children, three of whom died in infancy, the others being William O., Lucretia I., and Maude E., the latter of whom is a student at Lehig University.

John G. Schealer attended the pay school near his home when it was taught by an old man named Daniel.
Reider, and later he went to public school. He himself received a license to teach from Prof. William Good, and taught one term in Exeter township, but he early commenced work as a cabinet-maker, having learned the trade in his young manhood. He continued at that work and at carpentry, and in time became established at Boyertown, and at one time was operating on the same line, which he has continued to follow at his present location for the past forty-one years. The class of work which has been intrusted to him is the best evidence of his reliability. Many of the best and largest business buildings and residences in the town are his work, among them the Rhodes Opera House block, the Boyer block, the D. C. Brumbach building, the Lefeaver building, the greater portion of the Boyertown Casket Company's building, and the building of the Union Manufacturing Company. He has erected a number of churches, viz.: The St. John's Lutheran, Good Shepherd (Reformed), English M. E. and German Evangelical churches of Boyertown, the Lutheran and Reformed Churches at Amityville and the new Lutheran church at Pleasantville, all in Berks county; and he rebuilt St. Joseph's, of Hill Church, Berks county. In December, 1898, he completed the new high school building in Boyertown; and he also erected the Friedensburg (Berks county) Academy, and is now building the Boyertown high school building, which will be finished by December 1, 1903.

Though Mr. Schealer's building operations have been extensive they have not engrossed his attention entirely, for he has other business interests. He is president of the Union Manufacturing Company, which was organized in 1893 for the manufacture of all kinds of light and heavy castings, one of the specialties of this concern being the Union Detachable-Handle Sard Iron, which has the reputation of being superior to any other article of the kind on the market. Mr. Schealer is also president of the Boyertown Gas Company, being one of the large stockholders in that organization, which has a paid-up capital of $80,000. He is interested in the Franklin Improvement Company, which owns considerable real estate, and which erected a three-story and basement brick building in Boyertown, 175x45 feet in dimensions, to which an "L" has since been added. Among Mr. Schealer's real estate holdings is a tract of seventeen acres, on which he raises apples, pears, peaches, and other fruits, and he also owns a large orchard, and a cold storage plant with a capacity of 2,000 barrels.

Though a Republican in a town which is Democratic three to one Mr. Schealer has served as burgess and chief burgess of Boyertown, having been elected burgess in 1894 and 1897 and chief burgess in 1900, holding the latter office until 1903.

On Jan. 25, 1863, Mr. Schealer enlisted in Company E, 75th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, his captain being Roswell G. Feltus, and with his company took part in all the battles of the Army of the Potomac until after Chancellorville and Gettysburg, when the regiment was transferred to the army of the Potomac, and Mr. Schealer was discharged at the close of his term, Oct. 26, 1863. He is a charter member of General Crooks Post, G. A. R., of Boyertown, and has been postmaster ever since the organization. His other social connections are with Stichter Lodge, No. 254, F. & A. M., of Pottstown; Reading Chapter, No. 159, R. A. M., of Pottstown; E. 71, K. T. of Pottstown; Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Oasis of Reading; Consistory at Bloomsburg; Oley Lodge, No. 218, I. O. O. F., of Reading; and Camp No. 194, P. O. S. of A., of Boyertown.

On April 3, 1856, Mr. Schealer married Elizabeth Himmelreich, the daughter of John Himmelreich, of Pike township, and they have had two children: Sarah, now wife of William Babb, a farmer of Pike township, Berks county; and Milton, who engaged in teaching for twelve years while a young man, but is now connected with the National Bank of Boyertown, as teller.

ALFRED W. GLASE, a prominent business man of Reading, was born in Friedensburg, Oley township, Berks county, Pa., May 27, 1841, son of Peter Glase.

Jacob Glase, grandfather of Alfred W., was a shoemaker by trade, and followed that occupation in Reading, Kutztown and Oley township, all his life, while residing in the last named section. Their children were: Peter; Jacob; John; Betsy, m. to a Mr. Fisher; and Polly, m. to Jacob Faucht. In religious belief the family were Lutherans.

Peter Glase at first followed his father's calling, that of a shoemaker, but later in life was engaged in other lines of work, continued so for several years he did freighting between Fredericksburg and Philadelphia, and afterward owned and operated a farm. Twice married, his first wife was a Miss Adams, and they had eight children: William, Matilda, Benewell, Amelia, Mary, Rebecca, James and Levi. He m. (second) Miss Catherine Weisner, like himself a native of Berks county. She died aged seventy-three years, and to this union five children were born, Caroline, Jacob W., Peter, Alfred W. and Anna. In religious belief the family were Lutherans, and in politics Peter Glase was a Democrat. His death occurred in 1888, when he was aged seventy-four years.

Alfred W. Glase was sent to the common schools of Oley township, but was still too young to have left school when he was compelled to go to work. He was first employed on a farm, and remained in that line of work until he was eighteen. Then he learned the tinsmith's trade from his brother, and followed that for fourteen years. Meantime he had become favorably known among his fellow citizens and was constable in the Fourth ward, serving in that capacity very efficiently, five years. Since 1887 he has conducted a livery stable and has been very successful, for his establishment is not only but of a high class. His location is at Nos. 515-517 Cherry street, Reading.

Mr. Glase is a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted in the 3d Regiment of Pennsylvania Artillery, afterward attached to Battery A, 1st Pennsylvania Light Artillery, in which he served until the end of the war.

In 1880 Alfred W. Glase married Miss Mary Harrison, daughter of John Harrison. Two children have been born to them, Maud E. and Floyd H. In religious faith they are Lutherans. Mr. Glase is a Republican in his political affiliations, and has been active in local affairs. He is a member of the G. A. R., belonging to Post No. 16.

LEVI WORLEY (deceased), for many years one of Reading's prominent business men, and a pioneer in the coal tar pavement business, was born in Saegertsville, a small town near Allentown, Lehigh Co., Pa., only child of Jacob Worley, a well known farmer of Lehigh county, where he died. For five years prior to his death, Mr. Worley lived retired, dying in May, 1902, aged eighty-six years, in the faith of the Lutheran church of which he had been a member of the Vestry. In politics a Republican, Mr. Worley served as school director from the Eighth ward for a number of years.

Mr. Worley married (second) Mary M. Rush, born July 22, 1839, a few doors from where she now resides, No. 729 Washington street, Reading, daughter of Philip and Barbara (Spohn) Rush, and these children were born to the union: Barbara; John P. R.; Annie; Eleanor; Mary V., and one child who died in infancy.

Mrs. Worley's first husband was Conrad Feger, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Mellon) Feger, and three children were born to them: Barbara; William; and Sarah Jane (Jennie), widow of George S. Yeager, who was connected with the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, located at Ninth and Green streets, Philadelphia. During 1876 Mr. Yeager was assistant master mechanic, and was later transferred to Newton, Bucks county, where he died in 1897, being buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mrs. Yeager resides with her mother, in Reading. Mrs. Worley is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, where she was christened by Dr. J. Miller.

ELMER E. WANNER, senior member of the firm of Wanner & Stief, hatters, at Reading, was born in 1861 in Kutztown, Berks county, son of Peter C. and Sarah (Moyer) Wanner.

Peter C. Wanner was born in Kutztown, and as a boy worked on a farm. Later he owned a farm and tannery one-half mile from Kutztown, which he operated until his retirement some years before his death, in 1899, in his seventy-sixth year. His wife died in 1894, aged sixty-one years. Their four children were: John; Elmer E.; Ellen, m. to J. C. Ziegler; and Ida, m. to P. A. Metzgar. In religious belief the family were connected with the Reformed Church. Mr. Wanner was a member of the Benevolent Association.

Elmer E. Wanner was educated in the schools of Maxatawny township and the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, after leaving which he clerked in W. W. Sheridan's boot and shoe store for two years. He then went to Goshen, Ind., to accept a position in his brother John's leather establishment, where he remained four years. He then returned to his native county, and in 1883 secured a position in J. B. Schaef-fer's wholesale hat house as traveling representative, covering the entire State of Pennsylvania, and continued with that firm for seventeen years. On Dec. 1, 1909, Mr. Wanner entered into a partnership with A. J. Stief, and since that time they have been carriers of a prosperous hat business at No. 605 Penn street. The firm's first class of goods finds a ready sale in the retail houses of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Wanner is considered one of the good, substantial citizens of Reading. He is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, and of the Albert Lodge.

In 1897 Mr. Wanner was married to Mary Frey. They attend the Reformed Church. In political matters he is a Democrat.

SAMUEL HOLL, who died in Reading, Pa., in 1886, in his sixty-ninth year, was for many years a well-known business man and honored resident of the city. He was born in 1817, in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Peter and Elizabeth (Setley) Holl, residents of that section of the county which he occupied.

Samuel Holl received a common school education, and for a number of years was engaged in the wheelwright business on Walnut street, Reading, where the Junior Fire Engine House now stands. He was later employed by Seyfert, McManus & Co., manufacturers of sewing machines, remaining with that firm for several years, but finally returned to his old residence, No. 342 North Sixth street. Mr. Holl married Miss Louisa Orie, who died in 1882, daughter of John Orie, a native of France, who was a member of the army of Napoleon, being one of that great general's aide de camps. Mr. Orie died in 1881, locating at New Holland, Lancaster county, where he died. Mr. and Mrs. Holl are both buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. In politics, a Democrat, Mr. Holl served on the election board of Reading. He was a member of the First Reformed Church, being an elder and trustee thereof. The children of Samuel and Louisa (Orie) Holl were: Julia, the widow of Reuben Shad-NOE, born Dec. 28, 1860, at Reading; and Anna, born Jan. 8, 1884, a position which he held until his death in May, 1890; Anna M.; William O., a molder of Reading; Elizabeth, a teacher in the Reading high school; and Louisa, who was also engaged in teaching for some time. Anna M., Louisa, and Elizabeth reside at the old home of their father, No. 342 North Sixth street, Reading.

JAMES H. RAMER, senior member of the contracting and building firm of Ramer & George, at Reading, Pa., was born Dec. 6, 1844, son of John and Sallie S. Ramer, and grandson of Jacob Ramer, a farmer of Richmond township.

John Ramer was born in Richmond township, where his education was secured in the public schools, after leaving which he engaged in bricklaying and later in masonry work. He died in Reading at the age of sixty-nine years, his wife having passed away in her thirty-eighth year, and their children were: Catherine, James H., Samuel, Jacob, Ellen, John, Annie, William (very young), Lydia and Sallie.

James H. Ramer was educated in the schools of Richmond township, obtaining a good education, and in 1893 came to Reading, where he worked at bricklaying until 1903, in this year entering into a partnership with Samuel George. They have been very successful in their business, and to the present time have erected forty-three houses in the northeastern section of Reading. In political matters Mr. Ramer is independent, and he is a charter member of the Band of Brothers, which was organized in 1897. Mr. Ramer is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Mr. Ramer married Fannie Schucker, daughter of Adam Schucker, and to this union there were born two children: Harry Warren, who died at the age of seven months, eight days; and Eva Elizabeth, who died when nine years, three months old.

JOHN JACOB SHILLING (deceased) founded a family in Berks county now well known there. He was born in Chest Co., Pa., and came to Berks county when a young man, settling at New Holland. He owned considerable land there, built numerous dwellings, and for many years owned and conducted the "Three Mile House," where he lived with his family. He was a man of prominence in his day, and was of striking appearance, being erect, tall, and dignified in bearing and address. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He married Hannah Straub, whose father was Christian (?) Straub, and to them were born children as follows: Levi died unmarried when about seventy years of age; Hettie also died unmarried; Samuel, who laid out Shillington, and gave it its name, married Catharine Whiteman, and they had children—Franklin P. (deceased), Oscar J. (deceased), Mary M. W. and George Washington (twins), Howard M., Frederick E. E., Jacob H. Geiger, son of Jacob and Elizabeth, was born Nov. 16, 1855, and died on the farm now the property of his son, Ezra D., Sept. 15, 1864. He was a farmer. Although in his youth he learned the tailor's trade he never followed it. He married Mary Ann De Turk, daughter of Jacob and Esther (Goodhart) De Turk, who lived in Exeter township. She was born April 19, 1828, and died April 7, 1908. Their children were: Ezra D.; Wellington D.; Jacob, of Philadelphia, who has children—Lawrence, Mary, Margaret, and Jozef; and Lizzie, deceased, m. to William H. Thorpe, of Clayton, N. Y.; and Miss Hettie.

Wellington D. Geiger, now a farmer in Amity township, was born one mile east of Yellow House, October 4, 1856. He attended the township schools and was reared as a farmer's boy, working for his parents until he attained his majority. In 1866 he began farming as a tenant in Amity and has ever since been a tenant farmer in that township, with the exception of three years—1889, 1890, and 1891—when he lived in Douglass township. He has been quite successful and his farm is kept in good condition, and his stock and farm machinery are of the best. He m. Nov. 13, 1883, Mr. Geiger married Amelia Sassa- man, daughter of George M. and Mary (Weyant) Sassaman, now of Pottstown. Their only child, a son, died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Geiger are Reformed members of Amityville Church, in which he has served as deacon. Fraternally he is a member of Wohlink Tribe, No. 179, I. O. R. M. at Yellow House.

Ezra D. Geiger, a farmer at Weaverstown, in Amity township, was born Aug. 6, 1853, in Exeter township, coming to Amity in the second year of his earthly career with his parents. He worked for his earthly father until he was of age. He began farming at the age of twenty on his present place. This was the Augustus K. Lorah farm before it became the property of Jacob H. Geiger. It was originally owned by the Ludwigs, then by Jacob Schaffer, then by the Lorahs. Jacob H. Geiger bought it in 1864, and in 1878 it was transferred to the present owner. The farm consists of ninety-five acres, also forty-eight acres of pasture land. The present large stone house was built in 1894. There is a smaller house on the premises, located about thirty feet from the large one, that must be owned by the heirs of the Lorahs.

In 1876 Mr. Geiger married Delilah Rhoades, daughter of Jonas and Rachel Rhoads, and their children are: (1) Chester, graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in the class of 1909, and is now engaged in teaching in Amity township. He m. Dora Body and they have two children: Evelyn and Esther. (2) Wayne, graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in 1904, and from Lehigh University in 1908, is an electrician, holding a responsible position at Hackensack, N. J., with the Telephone Company. He m. Elsie Brown, and has a daughter, Alice. (3) Vic- tor is still at home. In politics Mr. Geiger is a Dem- ocrat, and is at present serving as supervisor of Amity township; for three years he was auditor. He is a member of Wohlink Tribe, I. O. R. M., at Yellow House. Mr. Geiger and his family are members of the Reformed Church at Amityville, in which he has been very active, and has served as deacon. The early Geigers were Lutherans.

Lewis Napoleon Lowe, assistant city treasurer of the city of Reading, Pa., was born in Phila- delphia, Dec. 9, 1869, one of the eight children born Mrs. John Lowe and Sarah (Stichter) Lowe, the other being Anna E., widow of Charles Snyder, of Philadelphia, (brother of Brigadier-General Snyder, of Reading, and a grandson of Governor Snyder of Pennsylvania); Margaret J., of Philadelphia; Frank S., of Philadelphia; Sallie B., of Atlantic City; and three, Walter, Charles and Edward, who all died in early childhood.

Emma L., Ida C. E. and Ella; Ephraim is mentioned below; Jacob, who was killed in the Civil war, married Mary Bechtel and had one child, who died young; Eliza married Isaac Miller, of Illinios, in which State both died; Isabella died unmarried; Louisa married a Forbes, of Minnesota.

Ephraim Shilling, son of John Jacob, was born Nov. 18, 1822, in Shillington, and lived to his seventy-seventh year, dying Jan. 18, 1899. There he spent his entire life. He not only followed farming, but also his trade of pattern-making, and turned out many violins of sweet tone; in later years he also engaged in wheelwrighting, in connection with farming, cultivating a tract of forty-two acres. In politics he was a Repub- lican.

In 1848 Ephraim Shilling married Catharine Marks, daughter of George Marks, and a family of eight children was born to them, namely: Clara m. Frank Welde; Catharine m. Julius Wagner; Eliza m. John Gauss; John Jacob m. Sarah Steffey, and (second) Sallie E. Berstler; Alexander E., unmarried, lives at Shillington; Hannah m. Jerome Tompkins; Jane m. Horace R. Carl; Andrew m. Lizzie Kane. The family were Lutherans in religion.

Julius Wagner, who married Catharine second daughter of Ephraim Shillington, was born in Germany in 1840, and came to America when eighteen years of age, landing in New York in 1867. After staying for a while in that city he moved to York, Pa., and learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for some time, but being dissatisfied with his progress he located at Lancaster and made himself proficient as a baker. When ready to begin for himself in that line he went to Reading, opened a bakery at No. 276 South Ninth street, and was so successful that by the end of thirteen years he had amassed sufficient capital to retire from that business and enter into building and contracting. While thus engaged he put up sixty-two houses in Reading, some of them on property owned by his wife. Mrs. Wagner is quite an extensive property holder, owning ten lots on Thirteenth street, seven on Fairview, five on Kenney, and three residences in the Tenth ward. Mr. Wagner at present gives his entire attention to managing his wife's interests.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner were married March 18, 1871, and their five children are: Helen Krum; Lucca K.; Elsie T. m. Harry Adams; Mabel m. George Kloppe; and Richard m. Anna Snyder. In re- ligious faith the family are Lutherans. Mr. Wagner is a Democrat in politics.

Geiger. The Geiger family is an old one in the eastern part of Pennsylvania, being located here before the erection of Berks county, in 1732. Philip Geiger, the great-grandfather of Wellington D. and Ezra D. Geiger, of Amity township, was born Nov. 20, 1765, and died Aug. 18, 1861. His wife, Anna Maria Stichter, was born Jan. 18, 1769, and died Nov. 1, 1791. They are both buried in the east side of the old cemetery at Amityville church. With them is buried Maria Geiger (1793-1823), probably a daughter, and wife of Philip Mathias. Another daughter mar- ried a Moyer. The number of the children of this old pioneer couple cannot be definitely stated. There was a son, Jacob, mentioned below; and tradition tells of another son. Philip Geiger lived in Amity township before 1806, as in that year his name appears on the tax list.

Jacob Geiger, son of Philip, was born Aug. 20, 1795, and died in Amity, Sept. 6, 1868. He was a farmer and owned a tract of 160 acres about three-quarters of a mile south of Amityville. He married Elizabeth Harner, born Aug. 21, 1798, died Sept. 17, 1870, and their children were: Jacob H.; Mary Ann; John; Mahlon; Elizabeth m. Alfred Fritz; and Leah Ann.
Lewis N. Lowe graduated from the Reading high school in the class of 1878, and he started his business life as a machinist with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, then becoming chief time keeper for that company, spending the next thirteen years in the trade. He was appointed clerk to the city treasurer in 1902, a position which he efficiently filled until 1908, when he was appointed assistant city treasurer. Fraternally Mr. Lowe is a member of the P. O. S. of A. He is a member of the Universalist Church. In his political affiliations he is a Democrat. Mr. Lowe is descended from English ancestry on his father's side, and on his mother's from French, this accounting for his name. His father's people were natives of North Carolina, our subject's grandfather owning a large plantation and many slaves. The Civil war reversed the family fortune, and four of the sons came North, all of whom are now deceased.

AUGUSTUS BORKERT, who died Dec. 12, 1908, aged seventy years, was one of Reading's leading business men, having been engaged in contracting and building for a number of years. He was born in Berks Co., Pa., on Dec. 2, 1838, son of Daniel Borkert.

Augustus Borkert's school days were spent at the Franklin street school, in Third Ward, and there he attended until about fourteen years of age, when he started his business career as an errand boy in a department store. He remained there for about one and one-half years, and then being equipped with the knowledge of the hat factory to learn the hat business. His father desired him to learn the binding business, and when nineteen years of age he engaged with his father in business and continued with him until the latter's retirement from active life. At this time the six Borkert brothers engaged in business together, and remained connected for some time, but later Augustus Borkert, under the firm name of Augustus Borkert & Bro., engaged in contracting and building, with his brother, and they erected a number of large business houses and residences, among the former being the Scott foundry and the Deibert building and part of Mohl's Hat factory. They also built the Polish school house, and others too numerous to mention. They employed from fifteen to eighteen hands. Mr. Borkert resided at No. 938 A. Penn street, where his death occurred.

Mr. Borkert married Mary Amanda Brown, daughter of John Brown, a Berks county blacksmith, and the mother of James Bady, and lives at Mt. Penn; George, employed with his father, Mary A. Long; Daniel, also employed with his father, Ida M. Zell; Clara M. Harry Rapp, of Reading; Howard J., a clerk for the firm of Gatley & Brenner, of Katie Hill; Ida M. Marshall Huey, who engaged in the coal business on South Tenth street, and they reside on West Oley street; Walter M. Rosa Houck, and they have two sons, Carol and Lester; Walter is employed with his father; Edward was clerking at the tube works, and met his death one day while going home from work at noon time, falling and breaking his neck while running; and Elizabeth is deceased.

Mr. Borkert was a Democrat and served on the common council, representing the Third Ward. The family attended Grace Lutheran Church. In April, 1861, at the call for troops, Mr. Borkert enlisted in Company G, 7th Pa. V. I., for three months' service, was mustered out at Harrisburg, and then his regiment went to Chambersburg, Greensburg, Williamsport, Millersburg and Charleston, and was there discharged, returning to Harrisburg, where he was mustered out of service and returned to Reading. Mr. Borkert was laid to rest in Aslenbach cemetery. His widow resides at the Penn street home.

A. L. FRAME, who for some years has been prominently identified with the iron interests of Berks county, Pa., is now proprietor of the Grey Iron Foundry, formerly the Old Edge Foundry, in Reading. Mr. Frame was born in 1864, in Reading, son of Conrad and Caroline (Perry) Frame. [For detailed history of the earlier generations of the family, see sketch of Charles N. Frame.]

After completing his education in the public schools of his native city, Mr. Frame entered the employ of Glaser, Frame & Co., formerly the Seneca Cigar Company, as a clerk in the shipping department of the Rochester branch, and the next year charge of the salesmen, practically having control of the firm's interests at Rochester during his eighteen months stay. He then returned to Reading and took charge of his father's coal yard, which he conducted from 1888 until 1896, in the latter year removing to Fifth and Walnut streets, where he took charge of a foundry. In 1903 Mr. Frame located at the Old Edge Foundry, which business was in such a condition that it needed a firm, strong hand to guide it to success, and this was furnished by Mr. Frame, who was able to establish one of the finest businesses of its kind in the country. The firm, which manufactures light hardware specialties, have built up eighty-five of its several departments—foundry, galvanizing, platting, japanning and polishing—and enjoys a large, steady trade throughout the country. In 1904 Mr. Frame also established the Globe Lawn Mower & Manufacturing Company, being made president thereof, and in his new, up-to-date factory, where many pieces of machinery to be obtained, he manufactures a high-grade, ball-bearing lawn mower. This utensil is superior in many ways to others, and Mr. Frame has a number of patents on the improved parts. Mr. Frame is enterprising and energetic, and he is favorably known in business and social circles.

In 1888 Mr. Frame was married to Lillie Edwards, daughter of John Edwards, and to this union there have been born two children: Edith and Clarence L. Mr. Frame is a member of Chandler Lodge No. 227; Ex- celtor Chapter; Lodge of Perfection; Reading Commandery, K. T.; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. In politics he is a Republican.

W. E. MILLS, a leading citizen of Reading, Pa., serving as a member of the common council from the Sixth ward of the city, was born in Reading, Sept. 26, 1852, son of Allen and Mary Ann (Swartz) Mills, the former of Reading, Del., and the latter of Cumru township, Berks county, Pennsylvania.

The grandfather of W. E. Mills was born in England, and came to America in early life, locating at Wilmington, Del., where he engaged in the manufacture of paper. He and his wife were the parents of children as follows: Thomas, deceased, was a manufacturer of Philadelphia; John; May J. m. Thomas Anderson; Elizabeth m. Samuel Lengel; and Allen. In religious belief the family were connected with the Episcopal Church. It is believed that Mr. Mills was a Whig in politics.

Allen Mills, father of W. E., was educated in the schools of Delaware, whence he came to Reading, and here for twenty-two years was engaged as an employee of the Mellert Foundry and Machine shop. His next employment was with the Scott works, and he also engaged in pattern-making. Mr. Mills died in 1888, and his wife, Mary Ann Swartz, died in 1900, aged about seventy-three years. Allen Mills was a member of Continental Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Greenbush's Circle. He was well known in Reading, and highly esteemed by all who had business dealings with him.

W. E. Mills was educated in the schools of Reading, and as a youth learned the machinist's trade at Mellerts and McKerseys foundries. On completing his apprenticeship he went to Scranton, and settled upon a claim of 160 acres in Solomon Valley, but removed in 1876 after two years in the country. Upon his return he found employment with the Rolland & Francis machine shop on Cherry and Carpenter streets, continuing there until the following winter, when he engaged at the Mellert foundry, continuing there for a short time. Mr. Mills then entered the employ of the J. H. Sternbergh Company, continuing there for twenty-two years, eight years of that time being foreman machinist, and the last three years master machinist. He then went to Lockport, where he found the same capacity for the American Steel & Iron Company, but in September, 1900 went to work at the Johnson foundry, where he was employed a short time as foreman, and he is now with the American Iron & Steel Company, Reading.

On April 26, 1882, Mr. Mills was married to Miss Esther B. Robinson, born in Reading of Scotch parents, and to this union there were born three children: Willie R., who died aged seven weeks; Jennie M., and Esther A. Miss Jennie M. Mills is a graduate of the Girls high school, where she took the alumni medal for her essay on Literature. Mrs. Mills is a Baptist. Mr. Mills is connected with the Improved Order of Americans, and was formerly connected with the I. O. O. F. In his political belief he is a stanch Republican, and on that party's ticket he was elected, in April, 1906, a member of the common council from the Sixth ward. He has always taken a great interest in ward politics, and is therefore thoroughly acquainted with the needs of his community. He is thoroughly capable and devoted to the interests of his constituents, and makes earnest attempts to serve his city and his constituents in a faithful manner.

John Robinson, father of Mrs. Mills, was born in Scotland, and came to America when a young man, first settling in New York City. Before the Civil war, however, he had come to Reading, and here he enlisted in Company B, 59th Pa. V. I., and was killed while in active service in the battle of Spottsylvania, and was buried in North Carolina. He married Miss Esther Douglas, also a native of Scotland. She died in Reading, Pa., in November, 1894, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson had children as follows: James, who served as a corporal in the Civil war, and died in New York City; Mary died unmarried; Matilda m. Henry Eyrich; William lives in Reading; Annie m. James Werts, of Reading; and Esther B., the youngest, now Mrs. W. E. Mills, never saw her father.

MAGNUS MELLERT, for many years a well-known foundryman in Reading, was a native of Germany, born in Schwartzwald, Baden, and his death occurred in this city in 1890. John Mellert, father of Magnus, left Germany in 1832, and coming to America established himself in Reading, where his wife and family joined him seven years later. He was a locksmith by trade, an expert workman, and is said upon good authority to have made all the locks for the old Berks county courthouse. As time went on he accumulated sufficient means to go into the sheet iron and stove business, and he succeeded to the business of Muller & Sons. That enterprise proved so successful that they launched out in other lines. They established a foundry and machine shop which they conducted with most satisfactory results until 1873, when the panic of that year compelled them to cease operations. John Mellert married Miss Mary Henderskarth, also of Germany, and they reared the following children: Arnold; Charles; Magnus; Constantina, who became the wife of John Sheeler, now deceased, and who resides in Baltimore, Md.; and Otto. The family were devout Catholics.

Magnus Mellert was only a boy when his mother brought him to America, and as his father was in those early days engaged in commerce, he spent his childhood only a meager education. While still very young for such work he was placed in his father's shop, and there tooled early and late, as did his brothers also. But this hard toil brought its just reward, and as the father's business interests enlarged the son proved worthy of his trust, and in 1873 he removed with his father and the latter shut down his factory and then opened up a machine shop of his own. His business grew steadily, and he was one of Reading's substantial men of affairs at the time of his death, in 1890.

In 1854 Magnus Mellert married Ludema, daughter of John and Catherine (Close) Philipi, and grandchildren of Jacob Cloesmiller. To this union there were born three children, namely: John, deceased; Emma, deceased; and Addie, m. to Thomas Moore, a prosperous cigar and tobacco merchant of Reading. There are three grandchildren, namely: Lillie, the wife of Robert Heilman, a shoe merchant on Penn street; Robert; and Ludema. While Mrs. Mellert was a member of St. James Lutheran Church, her husband adhered to the faith of his fathers, and remained in the Catholic Church, where he served for many years as chorister.

ABRAHAM S. RAUDENBUSH, M. D., of Reading, Pa., was born July 24, 1841, in Montgomery county, son of Abraham and Mary (Scholl) Raudenbush, and a grandson of George and Mary (Gearhart) Raudenbush.

George Raudenbush, great-grandfather of Dr. A. S., came to America from Germany, and settled in Bucks county, near Sellersville. He was a farmer and shoemaker by occupation. He was a devout man and his son succeeded him.

George Raudenbush, son of the emigrant George, was educated in the schools of Bucks county and early took to agricultural pursuits, following these successfully throughout his life. After his death his wife resided with a daughter, Mrs. Harriet Althouse. He was the father of ten children, as follows: Jacob, George, Abraham, Samuel, Jesse, Enos, Sallie (m. Jacob Cressman, of Bucks county), Harriet (m. Thomas Althouse), Matilda (m. John Clymer), and Elizabeth (m. a Mr. Leida). In religious belief the family were members of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Raudenbush was a Democrat. He died in 1848, aged about eighty years, and his wife in 1852, when seventy-seven years old.

Abraham Raudenbush received but a meagre education in the schools of Bucks county. He was reared to farming pursuits, and carried on farming near Sellersville, later removing to the edge of Montgomery county, and there resided several years. He then went to Sellersville, and there purchased the old Abraham Schull farm, on which he continued to live until 1863, when he sold the farm, retired and in 1882 moved to Reading to reside with his son. He died in 1892, aged eighty-eight years. His wife died in 1882, aged seventy-six years, the mother of six children: One died in infancy; James is deceased; Elizabeth, deceased, was the wife of Enos Rosenberger, of Kutztown; Mary married Jacob Truckess, and lives in Montgomery county; Abraham S.; and Louisa died in infancy. Mr. Raudenbush was a member of the Reformed Church, in which he was deacon and elder.

Dr. Abraham S. Raudenbush was educated primarily in the schools of Montgomery county and took advanced studies at Freeland Seminary (now Ursinus College). Early in life he evidenced a desire for the medical profession, and read medicine under Keefer & Groff of Montgomery county and remaining with them two years, when he entered Jefferson medical College of Philadelphia, graduating with the class of 1863, with the degree of M. D. His first field of practice was Adamstown, Lancaster county, where he remained eighteen years, and then located in Reading, opening an office at No. 433 South fourth street. After some time he removed to his present location and here he has been actively engaged in practice. The Doctor was for some years a member of the medical staff of the Reading Hospital, being one of the first to hold that position after the hospital opened its doors to the public, and he continued in that capacity until 1902, when he retired. He still retains his position, however, on the staff of examiners of students for resident physicians. He is a member of the Reading and Berks county medical societies and the Pennsylvania Medical Association, as well as the American Medical Association. He was a former member of the Lehigh Valley Medical Association, which meets but once a year for the benefit of the public, and was a Tri-County Sensorial District for Schuylkill, Berks and Montgomery counties. The Doctor is fraternally connected with the Independent Order of Odd fellows. In politics he is a Democrat, but is broad and liberal in his views.

In 1865 Dr. Raudenbush married Miss Sarah Stauffer, daughter of Henry Stauffer, of Lancaster county, and one child was born to this union: Charles H., who is a druggist of Reading, keeping one of the finest pharmacies in the city.

DR. LOT BENSON. The late Dr. Benson was known in the latter part of his life as one of Reading's successful business men, but as a young man he had studied and practised medicine. His life covered the greater part of the twentieth century, and its record was that of a useful and venerable citizen, who had merited and won the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

Dr. Benson was born in Reading Oct. 1, 1803, and after attending the Reading Academy he began his preparation for the medical profession. He took the course offered in the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and after receiving his degree practised for some years in Reading, meeting with considerable success. He found, however, that his tastes inclined him more to the commercial world than to the professional, and a few years later relinquished the practice of medicine and turned his attention to mercantile pursuits. For a number of years he was so engaged at Womelsdorf. In 1845 he came to Reading, and was in the iron business with Eckert & Bro., continuing with them for the remainder of his active life, but his last few years he spent retired from active responsibilities and cares. He died in 1882.

In 1829 Dr. Benson married Miss Eliza Eckert, daughter of Peter Eckert, of Womelsdorf, a member of one of the early families of that district. Four children were born of this union, namely: (1) David E., a well-known ironmaster connected with the Donegal Furnace, at Marietta, Lancaster county; he died young, and left an only child, and was much respected in all philanthropic work. He gave the ground for the Hope Rescue Mission, and proved his interest in many ways. (2) Susan E. (3) Mary C. died in 1872. (4) Rebecca H. died in 1848. The wife and mother passed away in 1889, at the age of sixty-two years. Both she and the Doctor were members of the Presbyterian Church, in which for forty years he served efficiently as elder. A staunch Republican in principle, he nevertheless concerned himself with public affairs only as a good citizen, never as a politician. The family was one highly respected in Reading, and active in various fields.

ABRAHAM HENNFR, a retired resident of Richmond township, Berks county, who was for many years engaged in farming in that section, was born on the old Hefner homestead near Virginville, July 26, 1786.

Heinrich Haffen, great-grandfather of Abraham, and his wife Maria Eva Kelchner, to whom he was married Nov. 28, 1759, were the progenitors of this family in Berks county, Pa. He was the progenitor of the Henry Haffen who came in the ship "Patience" from the Palatinate and the Grand Duchy of Wuertemberg with his passengers, sailing from Rotterdam, via Cowes, Sept. 19, 1749. His family of six children were: Johann Heinrich, Hans Georg, Eva Catharine, Elizabeth, Eva Magdalena and Catharine. Heinrich Haffen was a son of Andreas, of Eberstadt, a town four miles south of Darmstadt, Germany. In 1732, the year of his marriage, he established himself about three-quarters of a mile south of Virginville, on the land now owned by Richard G. Trexler. He brought with him from Germany a box containing many old papers, and was probably a weaver by trade, as he reserved "den Webstuhl und das Gesicht dazum" in an agreement with his son, Heinrich, made April 13, 1784.

Joseph Heinrich, the grandfather of Abraham, was born Nov. 28, 1754, and died June 27, 1825. He was the first born of his parents, and was a farmer in Richmond township, living on his father's land, which was acquired by patent from the Commonwealth in 1784. He married Anna Katherine Kohler, daughter and purchased the Maria Kohler, of Greenwich township. They had ten children, namely: Daniel; John; Henry: Abraham; Samuel; Solomon; Polly, who was lame and died single aged sixty-six years; Kate, m. to Lansing Knapp, of West Penn township, Schuylkill county; Hannah, m. to Daniel Underkoffler, of Mohnsville; and Jacob. While Heinrich Haffen was a prisoner of war during the Revolutionary war, he was confined in a church in New Jersey, and there a great-uncle of Samuel Haffen, of Moselem Springs, was frozen to death. The following is a copy of a valuable paper now in possession of one of the descendants in Berks county: 'Whereas, Heinrich Haffen of Jacob Baldy's company in Col. Heffner's regiment of the Pennsylvania line, made complaint to us, the Subscribers, Commissioners of said county that he could not attend at the Muster and Field days in 1777 and 1778, he being a Prisoner of War and not exchanged, and we find his complaint just, do therefore agreeable to an act of Assembly acquit and exonerate the said Heinrich Haffen from fine which might have incurred from not attending such Muster and Field days. Given under our Hands, the fourth day of October, in the year of Our Lord, One thousand, seven hundred and ninety. (Signed) John Keim, Henry Speyer, Jacob Beyer.'

Abraham Haffen, father of Abraham, who was a farmer and lifelong resident of Richmond township, was born in 1798, and died in 1854. He was the owner of the original Haffen homestead about three-quarters of a mile south of Virginville. He married Polly Kerchner, born in 1801, daughter of Godleb Kerchner, of Greenwich township. She died in the seventy-sixth year of her age. To them were born these children: (1) John, a farmer in Augusta township; (2) Elizabeth, a farmer; (3) Catharine, who married John Kohler, of Greenwich township; Anna m. Charles Zettelmyer, also a farmer of Greenwich township; Polly died single, aged seventy-three years; Sarah died in infancy; Anna m. Samuel Boyer, a stone mason of Richmond township, later of Denver, Columbia Co., Pa., where they died; Susanna died single, aged fifty-one years; Daniel was a carpenter and farmer of Richmond township; Abraham; Carolina never married; and Samuel died when twenty-four years old.

Abraham Haffen, son of Abraham and Polly, was reared on his father's farm, and he followed this vocation until 1806, when he retired from active life. He acquired a liberal education in the free school of his time, but he has since, through observation and study, become a well educated man. At the age of forty-two years Abraham Haffen m. Miss Racy Ann Stoudt, daughter of Benneville and Hettie (Berndt) Stoudt, of Maiden-creek township. The following children were born to this union: Mary, m. to John A. C. Wiesner, a proctor, of Kemptown, Pa., and Samuel, Sallie and Susanna, at home. In the summer of 1855, one year after the death of his father, Mr. Haffen began farming for himself on the Haffen homestead, purchasing the farm at appraisement and continuing thereon until 1880, when he sold this property and purchased the Reeser farm of eighty-six acres in Maiden-creek township, continuing thereon for nineteen years. On this tract he then discovered an inexhaustible amount of a fine quality of cement stone, for the handling of which, a number of leading Reading capitalists formed the Reading Cement Company, to which company Mr. Heffner sold his farm in 1900 for a large figure. At this time he purchased the large brick residence in which he and his family are comfortably situated. Mr. Heffner is considered one of the substantial citizens of Richmond township, and is well known and highly esteemed.

WILLIAM W. SNYDER, who for many years was engaged extensively in mercantile pursuits in Reading and throughout Berks county, was born in Hanover manor township, Berks county, in 1826, son of Jacob and Barbara (Williams) Snyder, prosperous farming people of that section. The corner stone in their house was born the date A. D. 1768.

William W. Snyder attended the public schools of his native township and an academy at Boyertown, in the meantime assisting his father in the duties of the farm. After leaving school he remained at home for a short time, and then went to Evansville, where for a short time he was engaged in clerking, then going to Bower's Station. At the latter place he engaged in a general store business, and continued there for two years, after which he bought in full possession of the well-known and well-established foundry at Kutztown of Haack & Kline, operating it for a period of one and one-half years. Mr. Snyder then went to Spangsville, where he purchased the general store business of a Mr. Spang, which he conducted for three years, then coming to Reading. He engaged in the grocery and dry goods business at Eighth and Penn streets in the Breneiser building for a period of two years, after which he engaged in the same business at No. 235 North Eighth street, the present site of the Schaeffer baking establishment. After continuing there for a period of five years, he spent two years in his native township, and then again came to Reading, locating at No. 304 Eighth street, where Mrs. Snyder lived for twenty-eight years. Her home is now at No. 547 the same street, and she owns the valuable property on the corner of Tenth and Elm streets, now occupied by Mr. Bland as a shoe store.

After locating at Reading, Mr. Snyder engaged in business on the corner above mentioned, in partnership with John Hoffman, the firm being known as Snyder & Hoffman, and he continued there for fourteen years. After selling out to Kline & Mann, Mr. Snyder removed his business to Third and Washington streets and later moved to Bingham & Moyer. He died on a quiet Sunday evening, March 5, 1904, and his burial was at Kutztown. He was a man highly respected by all who knew him, and was beloved and looked up to by his family.

Mr. Snyder was united in marriage with Louisa R. Kemp, daughter of the late George G. and Mary (Yoder) Kemp. She was educated at South Bethlehem College. The Kemp family is an old and honorable one, and the name is perpetuated by Kempton, Pa. The cornerstone in the Kempton homestead on the Kutztown and Allentown road is dated A. D. 1765. In this house was a special room furnished for tramps to sleep in. The Kemps donated the land for Kutztown park, so popular with churches and Sunday-schools, some times as may as six excursions in a week being run to this park. George Kemp, grandfather of Mrs. Snyder, married Catherine Griesmer. Her father, George G. Kemp, was a farming family of Maxatawny town and are of valuable property in the vicinity of Kutztown. He died at the age of fifty-three years, and his widow survived to the age of sixty-three. They had these children: Mrs. Jonathan Grim; David, deceased; George, who died at Springfield, Ohio; Martin, a resident of Lyon Station, Berks county; and Louisa R., widow of Mr. Snyder.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Snyder were: Howard K., a resident of Reading; Solon K., a machinist; Irwin K., a tailor; Laura E., m. to Walter B. Koch, of Reading; Estella V., m. to Clyde W. Gray; and Susan L., m. to Harvey I. Reinhb.

FREDERICK A. HINNERSHITZ, for many years a well-known resident of Reading, Pa., died Aug. 24, 1890, on his home in Riverside. Mr. Hinnershitz was born Dec. 4, 1841, in Alsace township, Berks county, son of Isaac and Rebecca (Harbold) Hinnershitz.

Isaac Hinnershitz, who resided in Alsace township, was an agriculturist all of his life, and was a good Christian and much respected. He married Rebecca, Harbold, of that township, and to them were born a family of eleven children: Henry, Ann Eliza, Lydia, Mary, Frederick, James, John, Isaac, William, Amos and Rebecca. In religious belief the family were connected with the Reformed denomination. In politics Mr. Hinnershitz was a Democrat.

Frederick A. Hinnershitz resided on a farm in Bern township, which was rented by Jacob Bushong by his father, until twenty-one years of age, and in 1861 or 1862 removed to Riverside, where he continued to live the rest of his life. He was employed at the Reading Hardware Company's works until he entered the employ of the Carpenter Steel Works. He died Aug. 4, 1896, in the faith of the Reformed Church, and was buried at Alsace Church. Mr. Hinnershitz was a man of many sterling qualities of character, and on account of which, he was respected and esteemed by those who knew him. In his political belief he was a Democrat.

On Sept. 14, 1861, Mr. Hinnershitz was married to Catherine Fox, daughter of George and Maria (Kemp) Fox. He and his union there was born one son: James, born March 15, 1862, in Muhlenberg township, who married Emma Bahn, and has three children, Mary, Fred and Edith.

LEWIS G. FRITZ, now living at his pleasant residence at Mountain View, was for a number of years well known to the people of Cumru township, Berks county, as a leading hotel proprietor.

Martin Fritz, grandfather of Lewis G. Fritz, owned the land around the "Center House" (Grill post-office), in Cumru township; was a blacksmith by trade, and an early resident of the Yocum's Church district, where he was buried. He married Catherine Retchs, and to them were born children as follows: Harry, John and George, of Lancaster county; Jacob, a blacksmith of Brecknock township; Martin and Elias, twins, the last blacksmiths in the district; Emma, married to Henry Foreman; Catherine; and Harriet (died in March, 1870), married to Cyrus Strohl, of Lancaster county. All of the sons in this family learned the blacksmith's trade, and all are deceased.

Martin Fritz, the father of Lewis G., was born Aug. 11, 1806, in Cumru township, and died at Shillington, just four days before his eightieth birthday. For many years he was a farmer in Cumru township, where he owned considerable land, but several years were spent at Wernersville and Sinking Spring. He was an official member of Yocum's Church. Mr. Fritz married Susan Gregor, daughter of Henry Gregor, and to them were born these children: Lewis G.; John, living at No. 216 West Douglass Street, Reading; Susan, m. to Jeremiah Gehret; Amos; Samuel, who died at the age of twenty years; Henry G., m. to Susanna Hinnershitz; Joseph, who died when twenty years old; and Sarah, m. to John M. Grill.

Lewis G. Fritz was reared on the home farm in Cumru township, and obtained most of his education in the public schools of his native locality, later spending six months in a school at Churchtown, Lancaster county. In 1871 he became the proprietor of the "Green Tree Hotel," in Cumru township, which he conducted. for fourteen successive years, then removing upon the Boyer farm, at the Lancaster bridge, where he farmed for seven years. In 1893 he removed to his private residence near the "Green Tree Hotel," and during the summer and winter of 1898 built the "Mountain View Hotel," which he ran in 1898, and April 1907, when his son, Henry F., succeeded him in the management. Mr. Fritz then erected two nice frame dwellings at Mountain View, in one of which he is now living retired. He rebuilt two brick houses below his residence in 1907, and these he has rented. He was at one time part owner of the famous Burnet Island, located one and one-half miles south of Reading, in the Schuylkill river, his interests in which he sold to the city of Reading in 1906. He recalls very well the historic flood of 1855, and the following incident concerning it is ever fresh in his memory: The Bushong distillery was located at the foot of Penn street, Reading, on the banks of the Schuylkill, and when the river rose the rushing torrents tore the large pig sty from its foundations and dumped over a hundred hogs into the river. They swam one and one-half miles down the river and thirty-three were washed ashore on Fritz Island and saved. This island is quite large, at its highest point being twenty-one feet above the level of the river, and it is of the island six acres have never been under water to the knowledge of the oldest residents here. In politics Mr. Fritz is a Republican, and for four years he was supervisor of the township. He and his family are Luthern members of Christ's (Yocum's) Church.

On Oct. 16, 1859, Mr. Fritz was married to Sarah Ann Focht, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Hemig) Focht, of Robeson township, and to them were born children: Emma Louisa, born July 24, 1860, m. (first) Jacob Adam, deceased, and (second) Frank Boyer; Henry F., born Nov. 18, 1861; Catharine, born June 4, 1865, died June 8, 1876; Sylvester, born Jan. 13, 1868; Margaret, born Oct. 4, 1869, died May 31, 1876; Sarah Ann, born Sept. 23, 1870, died May 27, 1876; Lewis, born Oct. 28, 1872, died May 31, 1876, the same day as his sister Margaret, and both were buried in one grave; George, born May 5, 1875, a carpenter for his father, J. H. Focht; and Mary Agnes M. Hain; Alice, born May 30, 1879, m. William Robinson, and has two children, Catharine May and Ray Sarah; and two boys were still born.

George F. Fritz, youngest son of Lewis G. Fritz, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, May 5, 1879. He attended the common schools of his native district, and later was a pupil at the Reading Academy, then taught by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner. He was reared upon the farm, living there until 1892, at which time he left home to learn his trade, serving his apprenticeship under L. H. Focht, with whom he has continued up to the present time. He is now foreman of a gang of carpenters, and the high reputation enjoyed by his employer is sufficient testimony as to his ability, for the position is a very responsible one. He is a man of good habits and is well liked.

Mr. Fritz was married, July 11, 1896, to Miss Agnes M. Hain, daughter of Abraham U. Hain, and five children have been born to them, namely: Mabel H., Walter H., James H., and Ethel H., since 1898 this family have occupied their own home at West Reading. This place was erected by Mr. Fritz's brother-in-law, the late James M. Hain. The Fritz family belong to Bethany Lutheran Church of West Reading.

In politics Mr. Fritz is a Republican, and in social circles he is a member of Fraternity Castle, No. 303, K. G. E. of Reading.

HENRY F. FRITZ. One of the best known pleasure resorts of the vicinity of the city of Reading, Pa., is the "Mountain View Hotel," situated on the old Morgantown road, one and one-half miles from the city, which is conducted by Mr. Henry F. Fritz, a hotel keeper of many years experience. Mr. Fritz was born Nov. 18, 1861, in Cumru township, son of Lewis G. and Sarah Ann (Focht) Fritz.

Henry F. Fritz received his education in the schools of his native township, and was reared on his father's farm which he continued to operate for ten years after his marriage. He then engaged in the hotel business at Jacksonwald, Berks county, where he continued for seven years, his next venture being in the ice business in Reading, which he conducted very successfully for five years. On April 4, 1907, Mr. Fritz succeeded his father in the management of the "Mountain View Hotel," which has twenty-four finely furnished rooms with all modern conveniences. Mr. Fritz makes a courteous and genial host, and his hospitality is becoming very popular as a pleasure and health resort.

On Nov. 29, 1885, Mr. Fritz was married to Miss Clara Berg, daughter of Isaac and Maria (Noll) Berg, and to them two children have been born: Augusta M. and Carrie C. Mr. Fritz is a Republican in politics, and while a resident of Jacksonwald, served as postmaster for a period of seven years. In 1908 he was elected treasurer of his township, and re-elected in 1909. He has been prominent in fraternal circles, and is a member of the Wyomissing Council, Royal Arcanum, and Camp No. 230, P. O. S. of A., of St. Lawrence, Berks county.

CURY LORD, late of Reading, Pa., was born in Union township, Berks Co., Pa., Aug. 18, 1834, son of Absalom and Margaret (Rice) Lord, natives of Berks county, and grandson of Joseph and Mary Lord.

Joseph Lord was a native of America of Scotch parentage, and was a farmer and collier by trade. To him and his wife Mary were born: Absalom; Emanuel; Maria, m. to a Mr. Green, and Mary, m. to a Mr. Fair, of Lancaster county. In religious belief Joseph Lord and his wife were Episcopalians.

Absalom Lord followed boating on the old Schuylkill canal, and was a prominent figure in the early history of canalizing. He retired about twenty years prior to his death, which occurred in 1869, and his wife, Margaret Rice, passed away in her seventy-second year. They were the parents of six children: Joseph, Daniel, Charles, one that died in infancy, Cyrus, Emanuel, Harriet, John, Mary, William, Absalom, Henry and Peter. Mr. Lord was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics he was a Whig, and later became a Republican.

Cyrus Lord received his education in the schools of Berks county. In 1857 he married Joanna Becker, who died in 1900, aged sixty-four years. She was the mother of three children: Anna, Jacob and Amelia, the last named being the wife of John N. Tomney, of Reading, Pa. Mr. Lord was a member of the Masonic Order, holding membership in St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter; Reading Commandery; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. Mr. Lord was one of the trustees in St. John's Lodge for many years, and the standard bearer in Reading Commandery for a long time, up to the time of his death.

THOMAS P. ANSPACH, a leading business man of Womelsdorf, Berks Co., Pa., who is extensively engaged in the manufacture of cigars, was born in that town, March 19, 1858, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Walters) Anspach.

The Anspach family of Berks county descends from one of the German emigrants that left their native country in the early part of the eighteenth century and came to New York, settling in the Schuylkill Valley, where they lived for several years, steadily bringing that part of the country up to a prosperous condition. It was not long, however, before Governor Hunter inflicted upon them intolerable laws and terribly mistreated these sturdy, industrious settlers, and in the fall of 1723, 150 families fled from the governor's jurisdiction and made their way across the forests into Pennsylvania, many of them settling in Bethel, Heidelberg, and Tulpehocken townships, in Berks county. Among these early Pennsylvanians was George Anspach. Five years later, in 1728, came another large influx of these families, and among the latter was Leonard Anspach, who in 1759 was a taxpaying in Tulpehocken township, paying nine pounds. Also in this year the tax list registered the names of John and Peter Anspach, the former paying eighteen and the latter twenty pounds. One of these was the ancestor of Adam Anspach, grandfather of Thomas P. Adam Anspach and Philip Anspach served in the Berks County Militia, and Michael Forster Company of the Berks County Militia, in the Revolutionary War, serving from June, 1780, until July 15, 1781. John Anspach, of Heidelberg township, was second lieutenant in Capt. John Lesher's Fifth Company of the Battalion of Berks county, May 17, 1777.

Adam Anspach, grandfather of Thomas P., was born on the Anspach homestead in Marion township, and is buried at Host Church. He was a lifelong farmer, owning the old homestead. He and his wife, Magdalena (Kintzer) Anspach, had a family of sixteen children, as follows: David, who had Eliza, Dietta, Sarah and Samuel; Jacob, who had six children; Solomon, who had nine children, John, who had Eliza and Samuel; Samuel, who had Henry, Sue, Samuel, John and Emma; Adam, who had Cyrus, Catherine, Lillie; Jonathan, who was a bachelor; Joseph, who had four children; Isaac, the father of Thomas P.; Mary, who died unmarried; Sallie, m. to Samuel Riegel; Elizabeth, m. to Peter Scholl; Molly, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-one years; and four others who died young. Of this family Jonathan and Mary lived together at Womelsdorf, both now being deceased.

Isaac Anspach, son of Adam, was born June 16, 1819. He owned a cozy little farm of thirty acres lying in the borough of Womelsdorf, where he died May 27, 1881. He was a Lutheran in religious belief, and an official member of Zion's Union Church. He married Elizabeth Walters, born Jan. 8, 1824, died Dec. 30, 1899. They had four children, namely: Frank, born in 1851; John, born in 1850, died in 1852; Lizzie m. George Himmelberger, of Womelsdorf; and Thomas P.

Thomas P. Anspach obtained his education in the borough schools, and was reared upon the home farm, assisting his father. On reaching his fourteenth year he began his career as a cigar maker, and later, when he reached manhood, he engaged in that business as a traveling salesman. In the year mentioned Mr. Anspach began to manufacture cigars, in which business he has continued to the present time with much success. He owns a two-story factory on First street, where he employs half a dozen skilled mechanics, and disposes of his product through jobbers. He erected a fine brick residence at the corner of First and Franklin streets, Womelsdorf, in 1906, and here he and his family make their home. Until Sept. 23, 1906, he had his business on North Third street, when he was burned out, suffering a heavy loss. The two houses on the place had been standing there for upwards of 100 years.

Mr. Anspach is a member of Golden Rule Lodge No. 159, I. O. O. F., and Washington Camp No. 67, P. O. S. of A., both of Womelsdorf, having been connected with the former since 1877, and the latter since 1878. He and his family are attendants of Zion's Lutheran Church.

On Aug. 14, 1880, Mr. Anspach was married to Ida Behney, daughter of Milton and Rebecca (Batdörf) Behney, and to this union there were born three sons: Irwin M., a drug clerk of Womelsdorf, m. Annie Kauffman, of Millerton, Perry Co., Pa.; Frank B. m. Olive Lambertson, of Mapleton, Huntingdon Co., Pa., and has had two children, Ida G. (deceased) and Thomas; and John I., unmarried, is a cigar maker by occupation.

FRANKLIN D. HEFFNER, an influential and well-to-do agriculturist of Berks county, Pa., who is now residing on the original Merkel homestead in the eastern end of Richmond township, was born on the old original Heffner homestead, near Virginville, in Richmond township on Feb. 29, 1839, son of Daniel and Lucy (Wink) Heffner.

Heinrich Haeffner, the great-great-grandfather of Franklin D. Heffner, emigrated from the Palatinate, Wurttemberg, Germany. He was twice married, his second wife being Maria Eva Kelchner, daughter of Mathias Kelchner, an early settler of Richmond township. She bore him two sturdy sons and four daughters, namely: Johann Heinrich; Hans Georg, born in 1757, married Maria Hummel, and died in 1818; Eva Catharine; Elizabeth; Eva Magdalena, and Catharine. Heinrich Haeffner (Häffner) was a son of Andreas Haeffner of Eberstadt, near Heidelberg, Hesse-Darmstadt. He latter married in 1759, and established himself about one mile south of Virginville, on the land now owned by Richard G. Trexler. He was probably a weaver, as he mentioned "den Webstuhl und das Geschirr dazu" in an agreement with his son Heinrich, made April 17, 1874.

During the Revolutionary War Heinrich Heffner (as the name appears in the record) was a soldier in Capt. Joseph Baldy's company. In the winter of 1777-8 he with others were confined as prisoners in a church in New Jersey. One Christian Merkel, also of Richmond township, froze to death in Heinrich Haeffner's arms. The following legal document is on record in the Court House of Berks county: "Berks County, ss: Whereas Heinrich Heffner, of Jacob Baldy's Co., in Col. Philip Gehr's Battalion, has made complaint to us, the Subscribers, Commissioners of said county that he could not attend at Muster and Field days in 1777-1778 as he was a prisoner of War and not exchanged, and we find his complaint just, do therefore, agreeable to an Act of General Assembly, passed the 27th day of March, 1789, acquit and exonerate the said Henry Heffner from the fine which he might have incurred from not attending said Muster and Field days, and given him leave to serve the said fourth day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand, seven hundred and ninety. (Signed) John Keim. Henry Speyerker. Jacob Beyer."

Johann Heinrich Haeffner, son of Heinrich, was born Nov. 23, 1754, and died aged seventy years, seven months and four days, and was married Anna Catherine Kohler, born in 1759, and their children were: Daniel m. Betsey Graeff; John died young; Henry m. Betsey Rahn; Abraham (grandfather of Franklin D.); Samuel, born in 1791, m. Kate Folk, and died in 1872; Solomon m. Rachel Graeff; Jacob, born in 1804, m. Elizabeth Speyler, and died in 1877; Polly was a lifelong invalid; Hannah m. Daniel Underkofler; and Kate m. Lansing Knapp.

Abraham Heffner, son of Johann Heinrich, was born in 1789, and died in 1840. He lived for a number of years at Moselem. To him and his wife, Polly Kershner (1801-1870), were born children as follows: Isaac died young; Elizabeth m. Charles Zettelmeyer, a resident of the old Heffner stand; Polly, died in childhood; Anna m. Samuel Moyer; Susanna died young; Daniel became the father of Franklin D.; Abraham m. Racy Ann Stoudt; Caroline; and Samuel died young.

Franklin D. Heffner, son of Abraham, was born on the old Heffner homestead in 1834, and died in 1899. He received his education in the schools of his day, and when a young man learned the trade of carpenter, becoming a first-class mechanic. He built many buildings in and about the village of Virginville, and taught many men the trade. He also owned a small farm near Virginville, which he now possesses, in the possession of his son, Franklin. In political matters Mr. Heffner was a Democrat. He was a leader in the ranks of his party in this section of the state, serving as school director of Richmond township for many years. He and his family were strict Lutherans, attending Moselem Church, of which he was trustee for a long period. Daniel Heffner married Lucy Wink, daughter of David and Anna (Hill) Wink, farming people of Moselem township. She died in 1814, and in thirty-eight years, and six of her husband are buried at Moselem Church. To them were born four children, as follows: Franklin D.; Mary Ann, who died aged ten years; Amos I., who died in his seventeenth year; and Joel, who passed away when four years old.

Franklin D. Heffner attended the district schools of his locality, and was reared upon the farm on which he was born. For some years he lived on a small farm near Virginville, which lies adjacent to the old Heffner homestead, but in 1891 he bought the fine farm on which he now resides. This property is valuable. It is one of the best farms in the township. It consists of 10 acres of excellent land, the buildings are large, substantial and in excellent condition. The water facilities are of the best. Mr. Heffner is an up-to-date, practical agriculturist, using the most modern machinery and implements, and his good crops are in a measure due to the manner in which he prepares the soil prior to planting. He has a good herd of live stock, and his horses are known throughout the township as one of the best breeds. He is one of the substantial citizens of Richmond township, and a good tax payer. Personally he is quiet and unassuming, and is known to his neighbors and acquaintances as an honorable and upright citizen.

Mr. Heffner is a strong and uncompromising Democrat, but, although he takes an active interest in politics, believing that it is his duty as a citizen to do so, he has never allowed his name to be used as a candidate for public position. He and his family are loyal supporters of the Lutheran faith and consistent members of the church of which Mr. Heffner has been deacon for four years and treasurer for over seventeen years. He was a member of the building committee when the new church was built in 1894, and contributed largely in time, money and material towards its erection.

Mr. Heffner married Mary Ann Dietrich, daughter of Jonathan and Catherine (Keim) Dietrich, of Greenwhich township, and to this union there have been born children as follows: Joel W., Mary C., Daniel E., Katie C., Jonas F., Hannah A., A. Howard, Alice J., Ada L., Franklin J. and Florence E.

Adam Dietrich, great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Heffner, was born in 1740 and died in 1817. He married Maria Barbara Steinhur (1741-1821), who, like himself, had come from the Palatinate, Germany, on the good ship "Brittania," which landed at Philadelphia Oct. 26, 1767. They were the parents of the following children: Johann Adam, 1765-1853; Johann Georg, 1767-1843; Maria Magdalena, 1771-1859; Johann Jacob, 1775-1857; Johann Michael, 1775-1842; Johann Heinrich, 1777-1857; Johannes, 1779-1830; a daughter born in 1781; Johann Christian, 1783-1874; Maria Magdalena, 1785; and Anna Margareta, 1787-1838.

Johann Christian Dietrich, son of Adam, was born in 1788 and died in 1874. He married Elizabeth Georg (1786-1846), and to them were born children as follows: Benjamin, 1806-1877; Solomon, 1807-1874; Beckie m. Jacob Heini; Jonathan was the grandfather of Mrs. Heffner; George, 1811-1887; Samuel, 1817-1893; Anna m. Daniel Spohn; Hettie m. John Moyer; Daniel, 1824-1898; Nathan, 1827-1890; and Henry, 1832-1905.

Jonathan Dietrich, son of Christian, was born Dec. 2, 1802, and died Jan. 29, 1862. He married Elizabeth Schearer, born Sept. 25, 1810, who died June 7, 1897, and both were buried at Moselem Church. They had seven living children. He died in 1855, and in 1891, Jonathan, father of Mrs. Heffner; Joel; William; Daniel; Henry; Samuel; Edwin and Sarah Ann.

Jonathan Dietrich, son of Jonathan, was born Nov. 28, 1835, and died Aug. 6, 1871. He owned and cultivated a tract of fifty acres of land in Greenwhich township, where his income for life was spent. Mr. Dietrich, Catherine Keim and to them were born children as follows: Terinta m. Isaac Hess, a farmer of Maiden-creek township; Mary Ann m. Mr. Heffner; George M. m. Katie Fegley, and is a farmer near Evansville, Pa.; and Katie m. Oscar Luckinbill, of Leesport, Pennsylvania.

GEORGE W. SNYDER, who is well known to the people of Reading, Pa., as a professional musician, has been identified with musical organizations since his twelfth year, and is the present director of the Glen Echo Orchestra. Mr. Snyder was born in 1888, in Bethel township, Berks county, son of Franklin and Elizabeth (Lerch) Snyder.

Thomas Snyder, the grandfather of George W., was a prosperous farmer of Bethel township, and owned land deeded to the family by the Penns in 1730. He married a Miss Wagner, and to them were born the following children: Washington, Davilla, Isaac; Franklin, Henrietta and Clementina. Of this family Franklin Snyder was one of the early farmers of Bethel township, and followed agricultural pursuits all of his life, dying at the age of fifty-four years. His widow still survives. They were the parents of these children: Rebecca; Emma; Sarah, deceased; William F.; George W.; David T. and Ella J., deceased; and Dora M. The family were members of the Lutheran Church.

George W. Snyder received his literary education in the public schools, after leaving which he taught school for five years, then engaging as a brakeman on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, with which road he continued for three years. He then became a United States railway postal clerk, his run being between Allentown and Harrisburg, but after twelve years he resigned, and took up the profession of piano tuning. At the age of twelve years he received his first instruction in music from Prof. L. A. Drum- ter & Co., of Harrisburg, and later graduated from the G. H. Munroe School of Piano Tuning, Boston, having done practical work in the Cornish Piano factory. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., the P. O. S. of A. and the National Association of Railway Postal Clerks. In political matters he is a Democrat.

Professor Snyder married A. Blanche Deck, and to them have been born four children: Percy A.; Robert E. and Mayse A., deceased; and George D. The family attend the Reformed Church.

CYRUS Q. GULDIN, one of the leading business men of Reading, Pa., who is president of the Reading Cold Storage & Ice Company, was born in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, May 28, 1860, son of Horace N. and Elizabeth M. (Eshbach) Guldin, and grandson of John and Maria (Grim) Guldin.

John Guldin, also a native of Berks county, was a farmer and ran a saw mill in his native locality. He was a member of no church, although he favored the tenets of the denominating, and was a good Christian and excellent neighbor. He and his wife had these children: Edward, Henry, James, Cyrus, Mary and Horace N.

Horace N. Guldin was educated in the schools of Boyertown, and in early life engaged in school teaching, later, however, becoming an agriculturist. He is now living retired at New Berlinville, where he has many friends. His wife, Elizabeth M. Eshbach, who died in 1898, aged sixty-two years, bore him three children: James; Cyrus Q.; Delilah (m. Reuben Brown); and Laura (m. Levi Miller).

Cyrus Q. Gulden was educated in the schools of his native township and also in Montgomery county. In 1891, with A. J. Brumbach, J. G. Leinbach, George O. Runyeon, J. A. Strohecker and John H. Printz, deceased, he formed the Realing Cold Storage Company, and was elected president thereof, a position which he has held continuously to the present time. The plant was consolidated in 1907, it being at Reas and Elm streets. It has a capacity of sixty tons, and the storage house has 200,000 cubic feet of space. The plant at South Ninth street has a capacity of 130 tons daily, with 250,000 cubic feet of space. Mr. Gulden is also superintendent of the Glenside Land Company, and the Glenside Water Company; director of the Bramtote Land Company; president of the Exchange Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Philadelphia, and superintendent of the Angelica Water & Ice Company. He is also prominent in fraternal circles, being a member of Stichtler Lodge, No. 254, F. & A. M., of which he is past master, and a member of the chapels of E. J. Dandy and Pottstown, Pa., and the Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. Since 1900 he has made his home in Reading.

In 1882 Mr. Gulden married Lillie Butz, daughter of George W. Butz, of Pottstown, and to them there has been born one child: Elizabeth, who is now engaged in the study of music and art.

JOHN DAVID SCHEETZ, who resides on his well-improved farm in Heidelberg township, is one of the leading farmers of Berks county, Pa., and has been largely identified through his position as a prominent citizen with the general progress of this section since attaining the years of manhood. Mr. Scheetz was born July 15, 1845, in North Heidelberg township, son of William and Harriet (Deppen) Scheetz.

Conrad Scheetz (or Schuetz or Schütz), the great-grandfather of John D., was one of the pioneers who came from the Schoharie, N. Y., in 1725, with that group of the Lengel families, having emigrated from Germany to England, where they were provided with passage to the New World by Queen Anne.

On Christmas Day, 1709, 4000 of these emigrants embarked for New York, and on reaching that port June 14, 1710, 1700 of these travelers died. The survivors lived in tents on island's in the Hudson river late in autumn, when about 1400 removed to Livingston Manor, 100 miles up the Hudson river. Here they improved land, built log cabins, and were in a fair way towards success, when Governor Hunter's treatment became unbearable and many of these sturdy settlers fled through the forest on rudi- cly constructed sleds, which they hauled themselves through the deep snow. Among these early arrivals at the Tulpehocken were: Johannes Pisas, Sebastian George, Peter Riether, Gottfried Tiler, Conrad Schuetz, Antonius Scharf, Johannes Riehe, Joseph Laab, Christian Lauer, Andrew Walborn, Lorentz Serbe, Sebastian Fischer, Johan Peter Facht, Johann Adam Lesch and George Anspach.

John Adam Schütz, son of Conrad Schütz, was one of the most prominent men of his day and locality, served a term in the Legislature and held numerous township offices, and owned considerable land, which is now divided into four fine farms, having originally consisted of upwards of 400 acres. He spelled his name Schütz until after he had served in the Legislature. He was buried at Tulpehocken Church. Mr. Schütz married a daughter of Jost Fishbach, of Heidelberg township, and four children were born to this union: Elizabeth m. John Breidenbach; Jacob; John; and Samuel.

John Scheetz, son of John Adam, was born in what is now Marion township, in 1793, and died Feb. 29, 1869, aged seventy-six years, and was buried at Union cemetery. In 1833 he purchased the well known Conrad Weiser farm, east of Womelsdorf, and here he engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1855, when he retired. He was prominent in politics in his day, and in 1836-37 served in the Assembly at Harrisburg, also holding a number of township offices. He also was the owner of the farm at the St. Daniel's (Corner) Church. Mr. Scheetz married (first) Barbara Schütz, daughter of John Jacob Schütz, and to them were born two children: William, the father of John David; and John Adam, who married and had four children, namely, Alice, Kate (m. John F. P. Marshall, part owner of the C. Weiser farm), Dr. Laurence J. (of New Oxford, Adams county), and Franklin (of Albuquerque, New Mexico). Mr. Scheetz m. (second) Catherine Seltzer, by whom he had one son: Isaac K., who m. Mary A. Seltzer and had four children, namely, Horace (died young), J. Albert (of Chicago), Mary Catharine (m. John David Scheetz) and Amanda (died young).

William Scheetz, son of John and father of John David, was born Nov. 8, 1818, in Heidelberg township, and died March 6, 1885, being buried at the Corner Church. He was a farmer and property owner, but was not the possessor of the fine farm. Until the outbreak of the Civil war Mr. Scheetz was a Demo- crat but after that time he became a Republican, and for twenty-five years served as a school director in Heidelberg township. He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and lived much in advance of his day. He married Harriet Deppen, who died in 1889, at the age of fifty-seven years, daughter of Dav- id and Elizabeth C. (Schall) Deppen. Of their six children, two died in infancy. Those who survived were: John David; William Henry, born June 21, 1846, who for some years was a lumber merchant in North Heidelberg township, was accidentally killed in a trolley accident, July 25, 1907; Alinda m. Nathaniel Lengel, a farmer of North Heidelberg township; and Mary Agnes m. William F. McLean, who resides on one of the Scheetz farms.

John David Scheetz was reared to agricultural pur- suit and enjoyed with the excel-lent of public school teaching in his younger days, this he has followed all his life, working for his parents until his thirtieth year, since which time he has resided on the Conrad Weiser farm, which he purchased in 1892. Until 1904 he carried on practical farming, disposing of his product to the consumer. He became sick, but in the year retired from active work. Mr. Scheetz is a well-read man and a great student. He has made many friends in his community and he and his wife are highly esteemed in the locality in which they have resided for so long. During the Civil war he was appointed by Gen. Thomas D. James, ex-Governor of Pennsylvania, to the position of quartermaster's department, serving in 1864 and 1865.

In 1874 Mr. Scheetz married Catherine Scheetz, daughter of Isaac K. and Mary A. (Seltzer) Scheetz. They have no children.

WILLIAM HAGY, a venerable resident of the city of Reading, who is now spending the autumn of life in the enjoyment of the fruits of his earlier years of toil, was born in West Cocalico township, Lancaster county, Pa., Dec. 12, 1825, and represents a family long identified with that part of the country.

Henry Hagy, his paternal grandfather, is supposed to have been a native of Lancaster county, and certainly all his active life has been passed in the county. He purchased a farm which he owned near Schoenhofen and was also an expert weaver, and according to the custom of those Revolutionary days, spent much time during the winter months in weaving into cloth the flax that had been raised on his own farm and then spun. He married Miss Catherine Stover, and both lived to advanced age, his death occurring in 1844, and hers in 1837. They were members of the Lutheran Church. Their children were: Henry, John, George, Samuel, David, Catherine, Elizabeth, Jacob and Eve.

Jacob Hagy, father of William, was born in 1795, and lived only to the age of thirty-five. He owned a small farm, which he had operated, and his family were left in straitened circumstances. His wife was Miss Catherine Truch; they had three children, namely: William; Lydia m. George Sindel; and Elizabeth, who lives at Reamstown, is the widow of the late Joseph Bechtel. Mrs. Hagy survived her husband until Nov. 4, 1867, when she died aged sixty-nine years, one month and eighteen days. In her latter years she was a member of the Mennonite church.

William Hagy was sent to the schools of Lancaster county, but his father's untimely death compelled him to shift for himself at an early age, and he was hardly more than a boy when he became an apprentice to a tailor to learn the trade. After two years, success attended him, and the following year came to Reading, where he has ever since resided. He found employment at first with James Jameson, and worked with him till 1833, when he started in business with William Donahower, the partnership lasting eighteen months. He then went to Eight Penn streets; end of 1835 he moved to Sixth and the following years moved to North Fifth street, remaining one year. In the spring of 1837, he located at No. 701 Penn street, where he remained till his retirement in 1839. Mr. Hagy still owns the property and retains an office on the premises, spending some time there each day looking after his business. He was always industrious in his dealings and wide awake to every opportunity, so that his success was justly due.

On May 10, 1849, Mr. Hagy married Miss Sarah Ann Bittle, daughter of Elissa Bittle, of Robeson township, Berks county. A family of nine children were born to them, of whom seven lived to mature years, viz.: William D.; Harry B. is treasurer of the Pennsylvania Trust Company, of Reading; Irwin A. resides at Philadelphia; Mary E. m. (first) Henry A. Hetrick, son of John Hetrick, of Reading, and (second) Mathan Harber, of Reading; Emma C. m. Thomas Shaneman, of Lebanon; Anna E. m. Park John, of Reading; Isaac J., m. W. A.; Leonard W., merchant of Reading. The wife and mother died Jan. 17, 1907, aged eighty years and eleven months. Mr. Hagy has been for years a Methodist in his religious faith, having united with that denomination when a young man, and he now holds membership in St. Peter's M. E. Church. In politics he is a Republican.

WILLIAM H. JONES, a well-known citizen of Douglassville, Amity township, belongs to the oldest family in Berks county. Before William Penn was born Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, sent out colonists to the New World, and in 1684 under Capt. Johann Rinkert, three ships came over and established a settlement on Tinicum Island. The Rev. John Campanius Holm was pastor for the Colony, and the first church was built by the government of the mother country. This was a block house, and it stood on the present site of Old Swedes Church (erected in 1749). The Minster, Church, and Grammar School. Originally the ministers of this church were Lutheran in faith, but as time passed on and the Swedish language died out, the congregation elected a minister of the Church of England, and of that denomination the church has continued. On the flats west of the Schuylkill, at Philadelphia, is still standing a house built by Jonas Nielson (tradition says in 1803). Though consisting of but two tiny rooms and a garret, many traditions are extant concerning the importance of this place in early days, and in front of the fireplace George Washington once sat as a guest. Court was also held there. Jonas Nielson is buried at Old Swedes Church. By the custom of the Swedes the baptism of the firstborn child of a father, the progeny of Jonas Nielson became known as Jonasson, which in the next generation was anglicized to Jones. An old deed of partition on record at the City Hall, Philadelphia, mentions William Jones as "a grandson of Jonas Nielson, yeoman, late of Kingsessing, the said William Jones, having an unchangeable custom, changing his surname from Nielson to Jones."

Maunce Jones, a Swede, came from the Wissahickon to Douglassville, in Berks county, with a colony of Swedes in 1701. He located on the east bank of the Schuylkill river where he built a stone house in 1716, where the Douglassville county "covered" bridge spans the river. This house has a very thick wall, and is very substantially built, having in its earlier days been a place of refuge for the pioneer settlers during Indian outbreaks. It is now owned by the Leaf estate. Maunce Jones was a farmer and owned considerable land. He was married to Ongabo, daughter of J. Jonat Yocoy, and was executor of his father-in-law's will in 1766.

Among the Joneses who are buried in the Episcopalian cemetery at Douglassville are the following: Peter Jones, who died Aug. 20, 1758, aged fourteen years; Sarah Jones, who died June 20, 1782, aged thirty years; Jonas Jones, Sr., who died Jan. 27, 1777, aged seventy-seven; Mary, wife of Jonas Jones, who died Sept. 11, 1772, aged sixty-eight years; Jonas Jones, Jr., who died April 23, 1799, aged sixty-five years; Mary, daughter of Jonas, who died Sept. 30, 1805, aged seventy-eight years; Nicholas Jones, who died Oct. 15, 1826, aged ninety years; Rachel, wife of Nicholas Jones, who died May 23, 1791; Jonas Jones, who died March 28, 1820 (or 1829), aged forty-one years; Mary, wife of Nicholas Jones, who died July 20, 1826, aged sixty-nine years; Samuel Jones, son of Nicholas, who died April 28, 1786, aged fifteen years; David Jones, born March 1, 1786, and died Nov. 4, 1822; George Jones, born Sept. 28, 1814, and died Dec. 27, 1882; Hannah Jones, born Nov. 5, 1818, and died April 3, 1884; and Richard Jones, born Jan. 14, 1816, and died Sept. 25, 1875.

Peter Jones, great-grandfather of William H., was born at Douglassville, Oct. 10, 1749, and died there April 23, 1820. He owned all the land including the Huysingue Merschert tract including the James Gorrell farm (eighty-eight acres of which was Jones land). Peter Jones had in all three hundred acres, and he engaged in farming all his life. He and his wife were Episcopalian and are buried at Douglassville. He married Catharine Kirlin, born Nov. 9, 1756, died Feb. 23, 1844. They were the parents of fifteen children, namely: John, born July 9, 1773; Ruth and Elizabeth (twins), July 20, 1773; Peter, Aug. 9, 1777; Hannah, Sept. 9, 1779 (died Dec. 29, 1860, married Jonathan Jones (son of Nicholas and Rachel) born March 2, 1778, died April 23, 1840, and their son Samuel died March 28, 1838, and his son Samuel and eight days); Samuel, Jan. 3, 1782, William, May 25, 1784; Jacob, Feb. 19, 1786; Nathan, May 22, 1788; Thomas, May 7, 1790; Ezekiel, April 2, 1792; Mary (Polly), Sept. 15, 1793; Caleb, July 8, 1796; Catharine, March 28, 1799; and Rebecca, April 5, 1802.

Stephen Jones, son of Peter, was born at Douglassville, Jan. 3, 1782, and died on his way to Douglassville in 1864. He was a blacksmith by trade, and also conducted a thirty-five acre farm. He was very known, and was greatly interested in educational matters. In appearance he was tall and stout, of dark complexion. Both he and his wife Elizabeth Hoover (Huber) are buried at the Episcopal Church in Douglassville. He was a member of the vestry of this church, and was always active in its work. To Samuel Jones and wife were born children as follows: Peter; Richard, who kept a store along the canal at Unionville, now conducted by his grandson, Howard W. Jones; Jacob, who lived at Reading the greater part of his life, but whose children now live in Philadelphia; Julian, who married Thomas May, and lived at Douglassville, an uncle of the third ward Reading, who had Dick and Harry.

Peter Jones, son of Samuel, was born at Douglassville April 19, 1819, and was there reared to manhood, early becoming acquainted with the duties on a farm. He owned the farm that is now managed by his estate. He died March 25, 1896, and is buried at the Episcopal church, a member of the Ethel, and served on the vestry. On Feb. 25, 1847, he married Mary Ann Kirlin, daughter of John and Sarah (Brower) Kirlin, of Union township, the former of whom died at Hamburg in 1859. Mrs. Mary Ann (Kirlin) Jones was born Dec. 6, 1820, and is now (1909) residing on the old farm above Douglassville. She is remarkably well preserved, and she takes a keen interest in the life around her. She is the mother of nine children: Winfield Scott, born May 23, 1848; Samuel H., May 14, 1849; Sarah Ann, Dec. 13, 1850; Newton, Sept. 27, 1852; Elizabeth C., April 30, 1854; Fannie, April 22, 1856; Hannah M., Sept. 15, 1858; William H., Sept. 17, 1860; and Maggie Y., Nov. 21, 1862.

William H. Jones was born at Douglassville, Sept. 17, 1860, and was educated in the public schools of that district. He was trained to farming, and since 1889 he has been farming the old homestead for himself. This farm consists of thirty-five acres of excellent land, and Mr. Jones devotes a great deal of attention to dairying, having shipped his milk to Philadelphia many years. In the winter of 1908-09 he established the first milk route in Douglassville, and this he now serves. In politics Mr. Jones is a Republican. He and his family are members of the Episcopalian Church at Douglassville, in which he is a member of the vestry.

On Dec. 6, 1888, Mr. Jones married Margaret Galley, daughter of William and Sarah Jane (Arble) Galley, and they have two children: Mary Ethel, a member of the Pottstown high school class of 1909; and Herbert G.

CHARLES H. LEINBACH, a well known and prosperous merchant of Reading, comes of German stock, and is a native of Berks county Pennsylvania, in 1723, in the township of Oley, Berks county.

Elias A. Leinbach, father of Charles H., was a son of Christian, who resided in Berks township. Elias A. Leinbach became the postmaster at Leinbach's postoffice, and discharged the duties of that office for a period of nearly fifty years. He married Caroline, daughter of Solomon Hoch, retired, and they became the parents of a large family. Those still living are: Rev. Thomas H., pastor of St. John's Reformed Church at Reading; Rev. Elmer H., pastor of St. John's Church in Kutztown; Sallie E. Laun, m. to John Z. Rieser; Carrie S., m. to Rev. C. C. Schaeffer, of St. Mark's Reformed Church, Reading; and Charles H.

Charles H. Leinbach was born in Berks township in 1818, and was sent to the public school of that section. Later he went both to the Millersville State Normal School and to the State Normal School at Kutztown. Naturally a good student, with these advantages he was well prepared for teaching and followed that profession awhile in his native township, before entering on his business career. At the age of twenty-one he went to Reading as an apprentice under his uncle, who, under the firm name of Leinbach & Brother, conducted a clothing establishment at No. 851 Penn street. The young man showed a decided aptitude for the work, and in 1890 he was taken into partnership. He has been connected with it continuously from that time, and since the death of his uncles has been the senior member of the firm.

On Feb. 26, 1885, Mr. Leinbach married Miss Ella J. Bitzer, daughter of R. R. Bitzer, a prominent coal and lumber merchant of Ephrata, Lancaster county. To this union, there have been born three sons, Raymond Paul and Clarence, and two daughters, Mary and Magdalene. The family residence is a pleasant home at No. 10 North Eleventh street.

Mr. Leinbach is not only deeply interested in religious work, and has devoted much time himself to such labors. He was one of the founders of St. Andrew's Reformed Sunday-school, and has been its superintendent for a period of twenty-two years, with a corps of teachers and officers under him that now numbers nearly one hundred. This Sunday-school was the nucleus from which grew St. Andrew's Reformed Church, and Mr. Leinbach was one of the charter members at its organization in 1889. He was chosen a member of its first consistory and is still a member and officer. He is doing a great deal of Christian work outside of his own church and school. He is president of the Berks County Sabbath School Association, a member of the Reformed Church Publication Board, and also of the Board of Ministerial Relief. In politics he is a Republican.

GEORGE GRAUL, deceased, a contractor and builder in Reading, was born in Berks county, Pa., in 1799. His father was Jacob Graul, who lived many years in Reading and finally passed away there.

George Graul learned the trade of a brick-layer in his youth, but later worked into the contracting and building line, following that successfully for a number of years. During his last years in business he gave up the building line and instead was engaged in farming.

Mr. Graul married Miss Elizabeth Ege, and their wedded life continued till the death of Mrs. Graul in 1863, at the age of sixty-one. Her husband survived her till June 2, 1877, when he, too, passed away at the advanced age of seventy-eight. They left a number of children, as follows: Rebecca, widow of William Bingaman, residing in Reading; Sevilla, deceased wife of Michael Sands; Katie, deceased; Rev. Amos, deceased, a minister of the United Brethren Church, located at the time of his death at Pine Grove, rural delivery No. 23, in Berks county (he m. Sevilla Kern); Mary, born July 29, 1829, residing at 426 Moss street, Reading, in which neighborhood she has lived for sixty years; Elizabeth, Mrs. Daniel Graeff, of Reading (she has four children: Emily, Besse, Mary and George); and Abeline, who died in infancy. The family has always been one held in much respect in the community.

THOMAS W. SWEENY (deceased), a prominent jeweler of Reading, whose skill in his line won him a reputation all over the State, was born in West Chester, Chester county, where he died. He married Elizabeth Hineman of Montgomery county, Pa., May 7, 1785, daughter of John and Barbara Hineman, and to them came James and John.

James Sweeney, born March 29, 1810, married Lovia Wells, of Stover's Mill, Berks county, Oct. 24, 1834. Son of James Sweeney. He died Oct. 14, 1895, aged seventy-three years, six months and two days, and she died May 8, 1893, aged eighty-three years, four months and seventeen days. Both were natives of Pennsylvania, the father of Irish descent and the mother of Welsh. James Sweeney was a shoemaker by trade and fol-allowed that occupation for some years, but in time went into a general mercantile business. During the war he became the government collector of internal revenue and retained the position for a long period, winning universal respect by his ability and character. His death, however, left Newmanstown, 1868, Pennsylvania.

West, the family were Methodists in religious belief although the Wells family, to which the mother belonged were Quakers. James Sweeney was a strong Republican. In 1853 he moved to Reading, and began to learn the jeweler's trade with Solomon Weida, remaining with him until he had mastered the business in all its details. He early displayed his marked aptitude for the work and had no difficulty in finding employment when he left Mr. Weida. Some years later he went to Philadelphia, and followed his trade there until 1858, when he was offered a very promising opportunity for advancing in the world by going into the coal business with his uncle. He tried this for a time, but did not find it congenial occupation and so he returned to Reading and took up the jewelry business again.

Mr. Sweeney established a store of his own at No. 424 Penn street, but after several years there he moved to another location on Penn street, the present number 189. He remained there quite a while, but moving again, went to North Fifth street, in the vicinity of the Gas Company. This did not prove to be a satisfactory location and before long Mr. Sweeney went back to his first location, where he remained in business for many years. During his later years, however, he gave up his retail trade and moving to the rear of his property confined himself to a manufacturing establishment. He was thus engaged up to one week prior to his death, when he was suddenly stricken about four o'clock one morning with a stroke of apoplexy, from which he never recovered.

Thomas S. Sweeney married, April 9, 1859, Miss Pamela Catherine Collier, daughter of John and Harriet (Wanner) Collier, both natives of Pennsylvania, of Dutch stock. Four children were born to this union, but only two lived to maturity: William P., a machinist, m. Miss Annie Boyer, and they have one child, Ruth. Katie B. m. Charles D. Tuke, of Rochester, N. Y., and has two children, Charles H. and Catherine E. Mr. Sweeney was a member of the Methodist Church, and was for a time a member of the Fifth Street Methodist Episcopal Church choir. In his younger days Mr. Sweeney was much interested in secret orders, and was one of the founders of the Knights of the Mystic Chain. The honor of organizing the order was accorded to John O. Matthews, but it was Mr. Sweeney who formulated the degrees. Of a very genial kindly nature, he had many warm friends, and his death has been very deeply felt and regretted.

JOHN D. MISHLER, manager of the Reading Academy of Music, Sixth street, between Washington and Walnut streets, from 1886 to May 12, 1907, with the exception of two years, 1889-1890, is one of the best known amusement managers in the State of Pennsylvania and throughout the country, and surely few managers among them are better known. As he is presenting his career to the readers of the Historical and Biographical Annals of Berks County we take pleasure in quoting briefly from various newspapers of Reading, showing the esteem in which he is held in the community, as voiced by these newspapers.

John D. Mishler was born in Newmanstown, Lebanon county, April 28, 1847, and he moved with his parents, Joseph and Rebecca (Zimmerman) Mishler, to Reading in 1848. After receiving an ordinary education in the pay schools of the city, at seventeen years of age, in 1864, he entered the service of the then leading dry-goods house (now the Common Sense Shoe Store), John S. Pearson & Co., as a package delivery boy, at the salary of $75 a year. He kept the store clean and carried or delivered on a wheelbarrow to residences and hotels goods sold by the firm and between times sold over $15,000 worth of dry goods in the first year, for which the firm made him a present of $25.

"May 9, 1867, he went to Europe and the Paris Exposition, making a four months' tour. He was on the sea twenty-one days, owing to fogs and damage to the machinery of the steamer. His 'death on the sea' was announced in the Berks County Democrat, a then prominent weekly newspaper, as no news could be had of the steamer. He was pronounced dead by the French consul, his own obituary. On his return he visited relatives in Berks, Lancaster and Lebanon counties, giving an account of his travels, people gathering from great distances to hear him, as going across the ocean was then considered remarkable. He was met at the depot on his return by a brass band and many citizens, escorted to the Keystone House (now Hotel Penn) and given a supper. He was the fifth person from Reading who had gone to Europe. His letters to the Berks and Schuylkill Journal were read with much interest and copied by Pennsylvania newspapers.

"May 4, 1868, at Reading, he commenced the retail drug business in No. 353 Penn street (later purchased by Dives, Pomery & Stewart), which he continued until the latter part of 1874, introducing many new ideas in the store and in newspaper advertisements to attract customers. He was always an original, liberal advertiser, and was the first business man in Reading to insert a column advertisement, in 1868—later one of four columns, and he at one time had an entire page of the Times, with an extra edition of two thousand copies of the paper. An early age he was a contributor to newspapers, with a weekly article in the Times, called 'The Man About Town'; he has always been a most valued friend of the press and was the associate member of the Reading Press Club (organized Feb. 18, 1888).

"It was the custom of the only morning newspaper, the Times, published in the then old State House, northeast corner Penn and Fifth streets, to go to press at 9 p.m., the telegraphic news being clipped at 6 p.m. from the Philadelphia Telegraph and The Bulletin: local events following after that were noticed in the second day issue. He secured the consent of the owners of the Times once to go to press specially in the morning, and 'bribed' the printers (with a sextet of beer, four dozen pretzels and a pie) to work an extra four hours. He published his famous paper Dec. 4, 1868, an account written by himself, of over two columns, of a Maennerchor masquerade ball, at Odd Fellows Hall, now the Library building, the first time that such a thing had been done in the city, and that an occurrence after 9 p.m. appeared in the paper the next morning, and it created much surprised comment. He conducted for some years the 'Globe Conductor' in the Berks and Schuylkill Journal, making it a feature of the paper while also advertising his Globe Dry Goods Store."

"He was one of the active men and one of the first directors of the first Penn Street Passenger Railway Company in 1874, running from the foot of Penn street to Nineteenth street. He was a member of the board of health in 1873. In April, 1875, he had a drawing made for a park of the then Fair Grounds, now Penn Common, illustrated in the New York Graphic, the first illustrated drawing in the paper, and advocated their abandonment for a public park, by a liberal purchase of the papers in the city and to leading people in the country. May 10, 1871, he erected in front of his house of business, No. 533 Penn street, a marble public drinking fountain, for which he paid to the city $10 a year for the use of the water. The fountain is now at Penn Common, Eleventh street, above Washington. Prof. Washington Donaldson, the well-known aeronaut, made the only store packing paper balloon ascension ever attempted in this country, from Penn Square, May 17, 1873, in the 'John D. Mishler,' Mr. Mishler having furnished everything for the experiment.

In politics Mr. Mishler is a Republican, but is liberal and broad-minded in his politics as he is in all things. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1889 and 1891, being a member of the new Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, and having withdrawn from lodge No. 367. He is a member of the Masonic Order of Elks.

For over twenty-five years he has been liberal and foremost in charities of all kinds, from the time when the people contributed hundreds of dollars up to now, when they annually give thousands of dollars. His efforts in behalf of the Home for Widows and Single Women were of much assistance to the Board of Managers, and he has not only solicited from citizens for that institution money many times.

"On July 11, 1873, he took at his own expense and entertained for the day 1,300 poor children, to Helmans' Dale, above Lebanon; Christmas, 1872, he gave a dinner to 280 poor children at the City Hotel. Dec. 25, 1882, he gave a grand Christmas entertainment at the Hotel, with an appearance, 'Lost in New York,' and was greatly enjoyed by the children, as well as the Reading newspapers have often found a body entertained at the Academy without charge. In 1887 he inaugurated the idea of an annual Christmas entertainment to all the children of the city, and has contributed to the cost of the Academy hotels, saloons, stores and factories. Over $500 was realized. He was general secretary for seven years of the Associated Charities, organized in 1902.

He organized the Berks County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, April 8, 1891, and was the president for five years, giving much time and effective advice in the prevention of cruelty. He was one of the Citizens' Committee in the introduction in Reading of the 'Pingree Potato plan,' to aid the poor to help themselves. He had a drawing made by William H. Deegan, February 2, 1888, for a public drive along the slope of Mt. Penn from the Common to McKnight's Gap and return. He organized in Reading Dec. 18, 1894, the Pennsylvania Bill Posters' Association and was the president to June 6, 1909. In 1875 he managed the Active Base Ball Club, and placed it at the head of all amateur organizations. In 1897 he was chairman of the executive committee for Reading's Floral and Chrysanthemum Show, both exhibitions being very successful, and the profits of which were divided among the Hospitals. In May, 1895, he was chairman of the Finance committee for the Forty-Second Annual Conclave, Knights Templars, held at Reading, May 27-29; all bills were paid a week after the Conclave and a pro rata of the surplus was returned to the subscribers to the fund. He was again chairman of the Finance committee for the Conclave May 27-29, 1901, with the same financial business result. He was the treasurer of the Finance Committee for the thirty-ninth Annual Pennsylvania Grand Army of the Republic, held at Reading, June 6-7-8, 1905. After all bills were paid the balance in the treasury, with additional subscriptions by individuals, was given to the Charles Evans Cemetery Company, to keep in good condition for all time 'the Soldiers' Monument, the graves and surrounding grounds.'

"His father had erected the first modern theatre in the State, outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, which was opened Oct. 1, 1872, at 533-535 Penn street, Reading, and this he managed until 1886, when he had it removed and the present Academy of Music was erected by a stock company and himself. The Academy has very often been given without charge for charitable and religious purposes. Gus Williams, June 19, 1882, named his most successful play 'John Mishler.' In 1877-78 Mr. Mishler toured the country as manager of the Swedish Ladies Vocal Quartette. From 1882 to 1886 he managed and was with Bartholomew, in newspaper advertisements, and if an entertainment deteriorates from the time he booked it, until the date of its appearance, he so announces in the newspapers that day, and his patrons are always sure of what they will see.

"Mr. Mishler has always taken a lively, progressive, useful, liberal and unselfish, much appreciated interest in the development of the city and the welfare of the people. His greatest achievement was the Sesqui-Centennial. He selected the week of the celebration, June 5-12, 1898, and, as he prophesied it would be, the weather from Sunday morning to Saturday night, was perfect, clear, cool and delightful. He arranged most of the program for the seven days' festivities, and did very much in every way to make the celebration the complete success it was. As chairman of the Finance committee, he solicited subscriptions for $10,416.66. Within two weeks after the celebration all bills had been paid and there was an extra $1,500 to the City and to the committee to give to the payment of the electrical display, $1902.50, that had been ordered by the City Council committee. The $483.66 was paid by the city in 1902.

"Mr. Mishler is an enthusiast in everything that enlist's his attention. No matter what the result may be, he never wavers in the belief that it is right. He has given much time and money in the promotion of the META'S, the FOR CEMETARY, the G.W., and for the fishing of water, October, 1907; he has worked unselfishly to the best of his judgment and ability for success. Always doing, but one who still feels that he has not enough to do. It not for money's sake or popularity—simply that he feels best satisfied when employed—if not for himself, then for others."
country roads better and in advocating a State road from Philadelphia to Pittsburg passing through Reading; he was chairman of the “General Relief Committee,” for the relief of the needy families afflicted with typhus fever during the epidemic in 1868; he is a trustee of the Young Women’s Christian Association and assisted in soliciting more than five thousand dollars to build a gymnasium and to modernize their home, which he assisted in providing five years ago. Evidently Mr. Mishler is one of those very busy men who can find time and will take delight in helping to advance the welfare of his community. He has a mind for business, a mind that is in a sense educational, that is always worth the price paid. There are things of which we may all be more generous. The comfort of sympathy, the stimulus of praise and encouragement, are often more welcome, more appreciated, than that which mere money can buy. Mr. Mishler’s philosophy of life is, however, a very kindly one. ‘The kind of man I am, natured’ he says; ‘just to do the little good one can, to sympathize with one’s friends and to give them a lift when they’re down—to leave the world a little bit better than one found it, that’s all I think a man need aim at, if you ask me.’ He also said: ‘If only half the nice things said about people are dead, were only told while they are alive, how much more happiness there would be in the world.’

Such has been the life of Mr. Mishler as portrayed by his home newspapers; and the writer (Walter Kieffer, of Lancaster), who knew him for over thirty years, desired to bear testimony to the truthfulness of all that has been said of one of Reading’s foremost citizens—John D. Mishler. Beginning a good deal more than a quarter of a century ago, Mr. Mishler gave to Lancaster and other leading neighboring cities the best amusements they had, and he is just as popular in other Pennsylvania cities as in Reading.

Mr. Mishler married Sept. 7, 1871, Louisa C. Habach, daughter of the late August Habach, of Philadelphia, and their home at No. 417 Green Terrace is known at all times as one of the most hospitable in Reading. Three children were born to this union: Rebecca Marie m. J. H. Bowman, manufacturer of steel balls and forg- ing; Maud Viola m. Henry E. Bell, proprietor of the Reading Bill Posting Company; J. Boyd assists his father in the clerical work of his business. No family is more respected, nor none is more beloved in Reading, for their unselfishness and sociability, Mr. Mishler retired from the theatrical business at Reading May 11, 1907. He then agreeably surprised some friends—“each one of whom he remembers for their participation in a specific incident in his life,” by presenting them a copy of “Mishler’s Memoirs,” a neatly printed and handsomely illustrated volume of some two hundred pages, octavo size, telling the story of John D. Mishler’s life from 1847 to 1907. The edition was limited to one hundred copies. The table of contents embraces much that is of interest in the career of the enterprising townsmen who has rounded out a period of more than sixty years of a varied and busy life. In this volume may be found much concerning Mr. Mishler as author of humor, as a propagandist, as an advertiser; his connection with the drama in Reading; his public benefactions; his connection with and fostering care of various charitable institutions; his active participation in the Sesqui-Centennial celebration of Reading, etc. Indeed, the history of nearly all public enterprises in Reading for well nigh half a century contains pages upon pages of the work done by Mr. Mishler. He has always been intensely loyal to Reading and its municipal advancement.

“In his retirement from his long and honorable connection with drama, he is truly a successful man; it is sincerely hoped by many citizens that he may continue to reside here. He is a useful citizen, a wide-awake business man, public-spirited, never weary of well-doing, clean- handed and active in the discharge of whatever he is called upon to do that may inure to the welfare of his city, his friends and his neighbors.”

JONATHAN H. MILLER, a retired citizen of Mohnton, Berks Co., Pa., was born in Cumru township, on the present site of Edison, Jan. 24, 1839, son of Jonathan and Catharine (Hornberger) Miller.

Mr. Miller attended the pay schools of Cumru township until he had attained the age of eighteen years, working on a farm during the summer seasons. He lived at home until his marriage, in 1859, to Mary Gaul, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Fox) Gaul, when he came to Mohnton, and for about twenty years was engaged in operating a grist mill along the Wyomissing. He then learned the hatters business, engaging at that trade in Mohnton, being later in partnership with J. G. Mohrn & Bros. He then entered a partnership with his son, Albert, under the firm name of J. H. Miller, Son & Co., and they continued in that line for a number of years. He worked at his trade with the well known firm of Whorley Bros. of Mohnton, until 1904, since which year he has lived retired. His first wife died July 2, 1876, and was buried in the Mohnton cemetery. She left him two children. His second wife, Mary (Diethrich) Miller, married Mary Diethrich, and resides at Mohnton, the father of two children, Elmer and Arthur. Mr. Miller (second) Mary Fleisher, daughter of Peter Fleisher, and to this union there were born: Edwin is unmarried and at home; Robert m. Lillie Rich- mond, lives at home; John lives at home; and Matthew lives at home, and is unmarried. Mrs. Miller is a daughter of Peter Fleisher, who was born near the Swamp Church, in Lancaster county, Nov. 14, 1819, and died Dec. 26, 1888. He m. Catharine Bresing, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Reedy) Bresing, and they have these children: Samuel m. Mary Steetler; Mary m. Mr. Miller; and James m. Mary Howe.

Mr. Miller and his family reside on the corner of Wyomissing Avenue and Wood Street, in the home which has been built on the site of the old mill. It is three stories high and of sandstone, and is considered one of the finest in the town. Mr. Miller is one of the oldest residents in the town of Mohnton, which at the time he arrived contained but five dwellings. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of Zion’s United Evangelical Church of Mohnton, which he joined in 1870, when it was known as the Evangelical Church. He has served on the building committee of two churches, has been class leader of Class No. 2, trustee and steward for many years, a Sunday school teacher in the Sunday school for many years, now teaching class No. 3. Mr. Miller is one of the honorable and upright men of his township, and as an acquaintance and friend he is honored and esteemed by all with whom he comes in contact.

HENRY PRICE, a well-known contractor and builder of Reading, Pa., residing at No. 510 Franklin street, has been engaged in these lines in this city since 1888. Mr. Price was born Oct. 13, 1846, in Myerstown, Lebanon Co., Pa., son of William Price, also a native of that county.

William Price was a carpenter by trade, an occupation which he followed throughout a useful life. In 1863 he went to Shelby county, Ill., taking his family with him, and there he continued to ply his trade up to the time of his death, when forty-eight years of age. While there he built one of the finest flour mills in the State for a Mr. Schoefield. He was acquainted with President Abraham Lincoln when the latter was still a law student, and was a witness to the President's assassination. Mr. Price married (first) Lydia Wetzel, who died in her twenty-sixth year. The children of this marriage were: Jonathan, who died when twenty-one years of age; Emma, m. to John Rupp, of Indiana; Henry, our subject; Reuben A. Price, engaged in contracting at Reading, and m. to Fannie Kieffer; William, who died when twenty years of age; and one child which died in infancy. William Price m. (second) Leah Anthony, who is still living and makes her home at Myerstown, Lebanon county. She is the mother of three children, namely: (first) Amelia, m. to Edward Schech of Chicago, Ill.; George, of Myerstown, m. to Annie Holtzman; and (second) Mary, m. to Morris Kreider, of Annville, Lebanon county.

Henry Price attended the schools of Myerstown until fifteen years of age, and then was taught the carpenter's trade by his father. In the early part of the 1840's, he left the work of a carpenter was anything but easy, and Mr. Price and his father often had to travel long distances to reach their work. On one occasion they walked five miles to work and five miles home at night on a hot day, and at this time were working fifteen hours per day in the sun, in the heat of the hotel at Tremont, Pa., they had a distance of twenty-one miles to walk twice a week, carrying their tools on their back. Mr. Price secured work at Pottsville, a distance of thirty-eight miles, and thus he also walked. He worked up with his father to Illinois, into what is now Indiana, and there remained three years, or until after his father's death, when his step-mother asked him to accompany her to Myerstown. This Mr. Price did, and from Myerstown came direct to Reading, only arriving, however, to remain a short time. After being employed here for a time, Mr. Price decided to make Reading his home, and here he has continued ever since, engaging in business on his own account in 1858, his first job being four fine residences at Tenth and Franklin streets. Among the many buildings erected by Mr. Price may be mentioned the following: the residences of C. D. Moser and S. H. Fulmer; the Schuylkill Valley Bank; Kissing's Farmers' Market House; Hotel Brighter; the warehouse for the Penn Hardware Company; A. F. Kramer's new building on the James Otto street, and the cigar store of Charles Breneiser, at the corner of Seventh and Penn streets, one of the finest in Reading.

In 1871 Mr. Price married Miss Amanda Seidel, daughter of Francis and Catherine (Fishel) Seidel, they have one daughter, Mary, who married Aaron Helert, and has a fine family. Mr. Price has been in business, and has a daughter, Helet, attending school. Mr. Price is a Republican in politics. He is a Mason of high standing, being a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, Excelsior Chapter, No. 227, Reading Commandery No. 42, and the Mystic Shrine. He is also connected with the Knights of Pythias No. 65, the Elks No. 115, and the Royal Arcanum, and is exceedingly popular in all of these societies. Mr. and Mrs. Price are members of the Trinity Lutheran Church, which they attend consistently and support liberally. He is well known in Reading as a man of many sterling qualities, and bears an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity.

JAMES P. KERSHNER, now living retired at No. 127 North French street, was for many years a wellknown chemical dealer. He was born at Jan. 25, 1845, in Penn township, Berks county, son of Peter and Catherine (Boney) Kershner, and grandson of Philip Kershner.

The Kershner family was founded in this country by Martin Kershner, who settled on a farm in Berks county in 1722, this farm being later the property of his son, Peter, who in turn willed it to his son, Philip. Philip Kershner married a Miss Himmelsberger, and to them was born one son, Peter, who became the father of James P. Kershner.

Peter Kershner, who was a prominent man of his day, engaged in agricultural pursuits all of his life on the farm above mentioned, and died in Penn township, Jan. 28, 1886, aged sixty-four years. His wife, Catherine Bodey, died in 1876, when seventy-five years old. They had a family of fourteen children, twelve of whom grew to maturity: Priscilla m. Cyrus Davis; Mary m. Franklin G. Hain; Eliza died in infancy, as did Mary; Sarah m. Richard Reber; Peter; Rosabella married Harrison K. Hiester; Sidney m. John R. Koenig; Susan m. Richard K. Bohn; Henry J.; Louis P.; George W.; and James P. In religious belief the family were Reformed, and were attendants of Bern Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Kershner was a Democrat, and was director of the poor for some years, being appointed to that position first by the court to complete an unexpired term, and later was elected to the office by the people.

James P. Kershner received his education in the schools of Penn township, and worked on the farm until twenty-four years of age. At this time he learned the butcher's trade, which he followed for twelve years, being then appointed county detective by I. H. Rothermel. He served three years in this capacity, and was then appointed a magistrate, in which capacity he continued one year. For two years he served as law detective, to which office he had been appointed by the courts of Berks county, and a like period was spent in the office of deputy sheriff. He was for one term of three years keeper of the Berks county prison, and was again appointed county detective, under A. H. Rothermel, serving three years, and at the end of this time retired. He was always an honest, capable officer, and none has retired with a cleaner record than he.

Mr. Kershner married (first) Mary, and (second) Melinda Spangler, who died in 1869, leaving one child, Mary, who died in infancy. Mr. Kershner's second marriage was in 1870, to Priscilla H. Wenrich, daughter of Daniel H. Wenrich, three children being born to this union: Thomas, who died aged ten years; Sallie, who died when three years old; and Ellen, m. to Edward W. O'Regan, by whom she has had two children, Stella (deceased) and Marion. Mr. Kershner is a member of Oley Lodge No. 218, I. O. O. F. He has from his early youth been identified with the Democratic party, and has ever been one of the leading members in this section. Mr. Kershner is a good, useful citizen, and is highly esteemed throughout the community.

WILLIAM G. BORKERT (deceased) was born Dec. 29, 1855, on Penn street, Reading. He received a common school education and then learned the hatter's trade, which he followed in the winter, while he worked at the trade of a brick-layer in the summer months. He spent his time in that manner for a number of years, and then gave up the hatter business, devoting his entire attention and time to brick laying and contracting, in which he engaged with five other bricklayers, the firm being known as the Borkert Brothers, and he remained therein until his death, July 29, 1901, when he was seventy-five years and seven months old. He had been in the business about thirty-one years, and few business men were better known.

Mr. Borkert married (second) Catherine M. Miller, born Feb. 8, 1828, daughter of John and Catherine (Kutz) Miller, the former of Lancaster county and the latter of Reading. Mrs. Borkert had two brothers, John W. and Jacob, and one sister, Susan. Mrs. Borkert died Jan. 27, 1906. She and her husband were consistent members of Grace Lutheran Church, of Reading, and were much esteemed as good Christian people. They had these children: John J., a brick-layer of Reading, who married Rosa A. Seiders; Misses Emma A. and Kate A., who reside at home; William D. A., a bricklayer at Reading, who married Ellen Stout; Mary E., who married (first) Charles Fisher, and (second) John Pennypacker, of Reading; and Susan and Cora, both deceased and married.

The Misses Emma A. and Katie A. Borkert reside at No. 1024 Penn street, Reading, in the old home in which their parents lived and died. They are very estimable ladies, refined and cultured, and are well known for their hospitality.

ALBERT F. KRAMER, a member of the Bard Hardware Company, of Reading, which is among the largest jobbers of hardware in Pennsylvania, was born in Berks county, Sept. 27, 1843. He is a son of Daniel R. Kramer, who was a prominent contractor in masonry in that county, and whose other children were: Daniel, John, George, Henry, Edward, Louisa (m. Daniel Linder- muth) and Catherine (m. Adam Snyder).

Every advance which Mr. Alfred F. Kramer has made in life, however slight, has been accomplished solely through individual exertion, and like others who have reached a high and substantial foundation, he may justly count as his inexhaustible fortune, his constant study and perseverance, integrity and industry. He passed his school days in his native county of Berks, gathering what learning he could, and securing an invaluable training in systematic work and economy as a laborer in the neighboring farms. From the age of seventeen to twenty he was especially engaged among agricultural laborers. As it proved, this preliminary training was a requisite preparation for a successful business career, and in 1866 Mr. Kramer became a resident of Reading and a clerk for Bard & Reber, dealers in hardware. After remaining five years in that capacity, in 1881, he was admitted as a member of the firm, under the style of Bard, Reber & Co. The business was established in 1854, and is now known as the Bard Hardware Company, a full history of which appears elsewhere, deals chiefly in building hardware, machinists' supplies, tin plates and coach goods. Since Mr. Kramer has been a member of the firm he has paid special attention to the coach department, being the sole buyer in that line.

Albert F. Kramer married Anna DeTurk, who died April 4, 1904, leaving the following children: Harvey DeTurk, Edith M. and Esther C. Mr. Kramer is a member of the First Reformed Church, and is not only highly esteemed as a straightforward, successful business man, but for his admirable qualities as evinced in all the private relations of life.

W. G. HOLLIS, deceased. The W. G. Hollis Chocolate Manufactory, Nos. 621-625 Franklin street, Reading, Pa., was established by the late W. G. Hollis in 1884, and was first located at No. 58 South Seventh street.

W. G. Hollis was born at Psara, a small island in Greece, and secured a good education in his native country. Seeing better possibilities in America, he sailed in 1878 from that country, and landed at Charleston, S. C., where he embarked in the candy business. There he remained but a short time; however, removing to Alabama, and still later to Canada, whence on account of the climate he came back to the United States, locating in Baltimore. The same year he removed to Lancaster, and in 1884 settled in Reading, Pa. His ability as a candy manufacturer was soon recognized, and from a humble beginning he rose to be one of the principal manufacturers of the product. In 1893 he removed to the company's present quarters, on Franklin street, the building being three stories and basement, 62 x 60, and equipped with all the modern chocolate candy-making machinery, much of which was made and shipped from Paris. The plant is one of the most complete of its size in the state of Pennsylvania, and the reputation of the product is recognized in every State of the Union. Mr. Hollis established a set price on his goods, and both price and goods continued uniform thereafter. He was the first in this section of the State to manufacture chocolates from the bean, importing the bean himself, and roasting and preparing it for the finished product. A force of 110 employees were given work in the various departments, and the firm's policy towards its employees has always been one of consideration and kindness. Many who have been in the employ of the company were started up in business on their own account by Mr. Hollis.

Mr. Hollis died Oct. 12, 1905, but the firm will continue to do business under the same name, W. G. Hollis, it being carried on by his mother, Mr. Hollis' brother, Milton G., having been appointed Attorney in fact.

On Jan. 16, 1909, the plant was totally destroyed by fire and a fine modern building of four stories and basement, equipped with the newest machinery was erected at the old site where the business will be continued as heretofore.

MARCUS LONG. At the age of twenty-seven, Jacob Long, great-grandfather of Marcus Long, with Johan Nicholas Long, arrived in America, Aug. 30, 1737, in the ship 'Samuel, of London, Hugh Percy, captain, captained by Captain George Burgoyne, of Frodensburg, New York, to Philadelphia. They were from the Rhine country, Germany. (I) Jacob Long settled on a portion of land now owned by Marcus, his great-grandson. He was one of the founders of the Reformed church of Longswamp in 1748, and one of the leading citizens of the community. As late as 1786, Jacob Long was appointed collector of his district by the Berks courts and held the office for a number of years. Jacob Long married a Miss Burger, and they had a number of children, among them being Daniel Long, the grandfather of Marcus Long; Frederick; Abraham; Elizabeth, m. to Jacob Groh; Julia, m. to Jacob Geist, and buried in that portion of the old homestead now owned by William Long.

(II) Daniel Long was born in 1780; on the old homestead, where he carried on farming. He married Rachael Snyder, and they had eleven children: Aaron; Jacob; Fayette m. Sarah Warmkissel; Sarah m. Levi Fitch; Samuel; Sallie Zwoyer; Elizabeth m. Thomas Hong; David m. Phoebe; Robert; Catherine m. Reuben Haas; Dr. M. S. M. Mary Schwartz; Dr. Long was of St. Joseph, Mo.; and Daniel died young. Daniel Long died in 1840, a man who was universally respected, and who had always been prominent as a farmer.

(III) Aaron Long, father of Marcus Long, was born in the old homestead, Aug. 10, 1815, and by trade was a tinsmith, but also followed farming, his farm being a portion of the original Long estate. He died there Oct. 30, 1883, aged sixty-eight years. He married Esther Fitch, born Jan. 30, 1816, daughter of George and Nancy (Schwartz) Fitch. They had three children: Marcus; Jonas F., born Sept. 28, 1837, m. Eliza Wagonhorst, and he resides in Napa county, Cal.; Daniel George is a physician at Reading; John F. Long enlisted and was made captain of the 7th Pa. V. C. at the beginning of the Civil war, and served all through that struggle, and was wounded in the left arm. Mrs. Esther (Fitch) Long died Jan. 20, 1884.

(IV) Marcus Long was born on the old homestead May 11, 1856, and was educated in the local schools. At the age of seventeen he was employed as a clerk in the general store of Col. William Tredler, and later by Benjamin Helfrich, who also conducted a general store. Having accumulated a little money, Mr. Long established the select school at Reading conducted by Prof. Lee, and from there he went to Friedensburg (Oley) and attended the Oley Academy under Prof. Hankey. In addition to assisting his father with the farm work, he taught school for eight consecutive terms in the public schools of his native township. He subsequently moved to Mertztown, where for five years

HENRY CROUSE, who was a prominent business man in Reading for many years, was born April 25, 1823, at York, York Co., Pa., and died Sept. 18, 1902.

At a tender age Mr. Crouse was thrown entirely upon his own resources, and his success proved his fine character and many sterling qualities. The greater part of his schooling was obtained at night schools, his days being employed with farmers. In his teen years, he learned the combmaking trade of an uncle, at Selinsgrove, and worked at this trade as long as it was profitable, selling his combs to the stores in dozens lots. Gradually he added other articles and thus began to handle a few notions. He accepted a position as traveling salesman with William Sagee, a brushmaker, with the understanding that he should also sell combs on his trips. He later traveled independently, selling notions through Berks and adjoining counties. He packed his goods in a one-horse wagon and went all through the anthracite coal regions. In 1848 he purchased a large bill of goods, received in New York from Philadelphia. His wife and mother did not feel that this move was a prudent one, but he had better foresight than they, and by 1853 this and other bills had all been settled and he was ready to go into business on Penn street above Seventh, in Reading. Afterward Mr. Crouse secured quarters on Penn street, the key street, between corner of Sixth and Penn for his notion store and he continued in the business until 1869, when with an ample fortune he retired. In 1870, during the German war, with his son Harry W., who had just graduated from Dickinson College at Carlisle, he made a trip around the world, consuming one year and six months. Mr. Crouse was a prominent member of the German Lodge; he was a member of Fairview, now one of the principal cities and great show places of the world.

After his return Mr. Crouse felt like getting into business harness again, and soon interested in a real estate and building business. Later he embarked in lumbering business at Garland, Warren Co., Pa., which he continued until 1884, when he definitely retired. He was a lifelong member of the M. E. Church and was always active in this body, cheerfully filling many official positions. In 1869 he built the church at Ninth and Elm streets, and when the Covenant Memorial M. E. Church was erected, the property and church buildings costing $50,000, he paid all except a debt of $10,000.

Before making his trip around the world, and about 1869, Mr. Crouse had engaged in business at No. 436 Penn street, where the Bon Ton Store is now located. He rented from John S. Pearson and remained there ten years, when he built the four-story iron structure at No. 508 Penn street, the second building of its kind in the city. This property is now owned by Mr. Heim. Mr. Crouse afterward sold out his business to Haas, Lorigamy & Dunkle, which firm took possession of his new building, renting it from him.

In 1848 Mr. Crouse married Mary E. Sanders, daughter of William and Mary (Rhoads) Sanders, and they had two children, Clara E. and Henry W. The former married Samuel W. Loveland, an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and was made chief accountant at Broad street, Philadelphia, and they have two children, Marie and Emily. Henry W. was a graduate of Dickinson College, and at the time of his death, Jan. 7, 1900, was an extensive importer of notions, at No. 345 Broadway, New York City; he married (first) Jennie Thornton, had four children—Elizabeth (an authoress), Clara M. (died aged fourteen months), Lillian J. and Herbert T.—and m. (second) Anna B. McGuire, and had one child, Donald.

The late Henry Crouse was a Republican in politics, and was a member of the council of Reading although he never sought political honors. He belonged to Chandler Lodge, No. 297, F. & A. M. of Reading, and the Free Mason Lodge, I. O. O. F. He was a man who loved his own fireside and took pleasure in providing for the welfare of his family. He is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery, where he had erected a fine monument ten years before his death.

JOHN H. BICKLEY, JR., chief draftsman at the Scott foundry (Reading Iron Company), and one of the city's substantial citizens, was born in October, 1864, at Pottsville, Pa., son of John H. and Maria (A. B.) Bickley.

John H. Bickley was born in Boonton, N. J., and early in life was a rolling mill engineer. At one time he was superintendent of the Haywood Rolling mill at Palo Alto, a suburb of Pottsville, and he built, and was one of the proprietors of, the Hamburg rolling mill, and also a rolling mill at Schuykill Haven and constructed the machinery for the Sternbergh Mill, now a part of the American Steel & Iron Company, at Reading. He retired in 1905, just prior to this having been superintendent of the Ulster Iron Works. Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bickley had three children: Alice M., Minnie M., and Donald E. Bickley.

John H. Bickley, Jr., was educated in the schools of Milldale, after leaving which his father had intended that he should take a law course. This plan did not suit him, however, who had decided upon becoming a mechanic, and seeing that his father's intentions, his father gave him a trial in his shops. He proved to be a good mechanic, and his next employment was with the Phoenix Iron Company, as assistant master mechanic, later with Jones & Lauchlin, proprietors of the American Iron & Steel Company, as assistant to the chief draftsman of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, at Steelton, Pa., then being made superintendent of the mechanical department.
at the Sparrow Point Mill. In 1901 he accepted a position with the Reading Iron Company, as draughtsman, and during the same year was made chief of his department, a position in which he has continued to the present time, having seven men in his employ. In 1903 he had charge of the designing of the brown segmental wire wound gun, which proved such a success to its inventors, and he has also had charge of the reconstruction of the Scott Foundry Department, Reading Iron Company. Mr. Bickley is a skilled mechanic, and a man of much ability. His ancestors were considered the most prominent rolling mill engineers in the early iron industry, and the first two men of his name who worked in mills were in 1845 by his uncles in Danville, Pa., at what is now the Montour Rolling Mill Department of the Reading Iron Company, but which mill was designed and then managed by one of Mr. Bickley's uncles.

Mr. Bickley is a member of Acacia Lodge, No. 20, A. F. & A. M. of Duuck, N. J.; Harrisburg Consistory, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is independent in political matters, and he and Mrs. Bickley attend the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Bickley married Ida M. Miller, and to them has been born one son, John H.

AUGUST GRANZ, superintendent of the Reading Glove & Mitten Company, has been a resident of this country since 1888, when he came hither from his native Germany.

Born in Kaufungern, Saxony, Jan. 31, 1858, Mr. Granz was there given the solid education bestowed on all his countrymen and later served his time in the German army, holding the rank of corporal at the time of his release. While still hardly more than a boy he learned the trade of a baker and followed it, except for the time in the army, until 1878. He then gave it up to learn glovemaking, served a thorough apprenticeship and acquired a further knowledge and experience of every detail of the business by continued work in that line in Germany. In 1888 he set his face toward America, landing at Castle Garden, September 1st, and worked first in New York and New Jersey. In the beginning he found it easier to secure employment at his original trade of baker, but before long he was able to get work at glove making again, and has ever since made his home in that line. His wide experience of the business and his ability attracted attention, and he was offered the place of Superintendent of the Reading Glove & Mitten Company in 1904. He entered upon his duties Dec. 17th of that year, and has since that time established himself thoroughly in the company. He is the buying for the firm and in every act has demonstrated his fitness for the responsibilities of his position.

While still residing in Germany Mr. Granz was united in marriage in 1877 to Miss Mary Heinig, also of Kaufungern, Saxony. They have had only one child, a daughter Hattie, now the wife of Theodore Webber, of New York City. Some years ago Mr. Granz became interested in the work of the I. O. O. F., and joined that organization, in which he has made an assured position for himself in the esteem of its members. For two years he has been a member of Teutonia Lodge No. 387, F. & A. M. of Reading; and he also belongs to the Workingmen's Sick and Beneficial Association.

ALFRED S. SEIDEL. Among the well-known retired residents of Reading, Pa., may be mentioned Alfred S. Seidel, of No. 145 Walnut street, who was for years extensively engaged in business in the city. Mr. Seidel was born in Windsor (now Perry) township, and is a descendant of an old and honored Pennsylvania family.

His emigrant ancestor was Johann Heinrich Seidel, who came to the United States from Alsace-Lorraine in the early part of the seventeenth century and settled in the vicinity of Shoemakersville, Berks county, where he became very prosperous, owning much land. One of his descendants, Jacob Seidel, was born in Hamburg, receiving his education in the district schools of Berks county. Upon reaching his majority he visited Germany, whence he brought a large amount of money, and many family heirlooms. Settling in the mercantile part of Philadelphia, he engaged in agricultural pursuits also carrying on a mercantile business. Jacob Seidel in addition was the proprietor of a hotel on the old Philadelphia Pike, where many noted personages partook of good old-fashioned Pennsylvania Dutch dinners, prepared by Jacob's wife, who was noted for her excellence in Jacob and Elizabeth (Bosier) Seidel were the parents of these children: Benjamin, Jacob, Solomon, Henry, David, Daniel, Sarah, Mary, Eliza and Amelia. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. The male members of the family were divided in their political belief, some being Whigs and others Democrats.

Benjamin Seidel, son of Jacob and father of Alfred S., was engaged in agricultural pursuits for all of his active business life. Several years prior to his death, Feb. 9, 1884, he retired. He married Catherine Selbert, daughter of Jacob Selbert, of Lebanon county, and she died in 1908, having been the mother of these children: Alfreed S.; Jacob, and Monroe (m. Hannah Reber, and had two children: Ida May and Bertha). In 1910 deceased). In religious belief Benjamin Seidel was a Lutheran and his wife a member of the Reformed Church.

Alfred S. Seidel's early education was secured in the common schools of his native locality, and he later attended Franklin & Marshall College and the State Normal School at Millersville, Pa. After teaching school successfully for three terms, he turned his attention to mercantile pursuits, engaging in business at Shoemakersville, of which business, however, he later disposed. He was then appointed justice of the peace and surveyor, had also engaged in conveying, following this for eleven years, when he accepted the position of traveling salesman for a large Philadelphia firm. In 1891 he located in Reading, continuing to represent the firm until 1901, when he retired. He has engaged in various business enterprises, and has been successful in both local and foreign deals.

In 1872, Mr. Seidel married Miss Helen Loose, daughter of William Loose of Reading, and to them there have been born children as follows: Mahlon m. Jane Brown, and has two children, William and Stewart; Claudius m. Emma Ulrich, and has one child, Else; Miss Lillie; Howard m. Fannie Wamsher; William B.; Robert L.; Titus; Allen; and Ida M. and Lyla, deceased. Mr. Seidel is a member of Kutztown Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, R. A. M., No. 152; and Reading Commandery No. 42, K. T. He is independent in politics.

RANCK. Early records show the Ranck family to be of French Huguenot origin, many of the family living in Paris in the sixteenth century. The name was then spelled Rance and Ranc. The Rev. Mr. the Archdeacon of Nantes, and the attendant persecution, drove the family to Germany, where they located along the Rhine. Many of them changed the spelling of the name to Ranke or Ranck, according to the German historian, Lampert von Ranke, himself a member of the family. From Germany some of them moved to Holland, where their descendants still live.

1738, and he was the ancestor of H. Herbert Ranck, of Joauna, Berks county.

Naturalization papers were granted to Phillip Ranck in 1760. His wife's name was Barbara. In 1770 he deeded land to his four sons: Jacob, Ludwig, Phillip Adam and John, and he also had a son Valentine. Of these Ludwig married and had twenty-four children, some of whom located in Ohio. Phillip Adam and John later moved to Union county, Pennsylvania.

Jacob Ranck, son of Phillip and Barbara, was born Oct. 1, 1745, and died Sept. 13, 1827, aged eighty-two years, and was buried in Ranck's graveyard on the old farm. He married Margareta Worst, who died Jan. 28, 1820, aged seventy-four years. They had five sons and two daughters, namely: John and Samuel, who were the only ones to marry; Abraham, Jacob, David, Barbara and Margaret.

Samuel Ranck, son of Jacob and Margareta (Worst), had four children: David, who had two sons, Daniel and Edward, and died in Intercourse, Lancaster county; Samuel, who moved to Carroll county, Illinois; and two daughters, one of whom married a Kessler, and the other a Wagner.

Joseph Ranck, son of Jacob and Margaretta (Worst), was born in 1774, and died in 1845. He married Elizabeth Shively, a sister to his brother Samuel's wife, and they had eight children: Jacob, Barbara, Margaret (born Aug. 27, 1806, died Oct. 23, 1849, married Joseph Ranck), Ann, Elizabeth, Samuel, John, and Catherine.

Valentine Ranck, son of Phillip the emigrant and his wife Barbara, died in 1813, the father of two sons, Michael; and Jacob, whose children were—John, Adam, Jacob, Samuel, Mrs. Benjamin Herr and Mrs. Peter Eaby.

Michael Ranck, son of Valentine, was a teamster in Washington's army. He had one son, Joseph, and five daughters, and of the latter one married a Yoder, one a Good, one a Mussler, one a Witmer and one a Shirk.

Joseph Ranck, son of Michael, married his cousin Margaret Ranck, born Aug. 27, 1806, died Oct. 23, 1849, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Shively) Ranck (above mentioned). To this union were born five children: Jonathan, who lives in western Iowa and had fifteen children, some of whom live in Chicago; Samuel, of Naperville, III., who has several daughters but no children; Peter; John, who died in Ohio; and two daughters, one a Mussler, living in Illinois; and Joseph, of Naperville, III., who has a son who is a missionary in China and a daughter a missionary in Japan.

Ams Ranck, son of Joseph and Margaret (Ranck), married Rebecca White and had four sons and two daughters, namely: J. Clarence, of Denver, Colo.; Joseph A., living in Elsmere, Del.; H. Herbert, on the old homestead at Joanna; Florence M., living in Philadelphia; and Fannie E., wife of J. Warren Barkley, of Wilmington, Delaware.

H. Harris Ranck married Clara M. Leippe, and has three daughters, Esther, Katherine and Margaret.

The Ranck's were agricultural people, and lived near New Holland, Pa. The early members of the family adopted the Mennonite faith on locating in Lancaster county, but later many joined the Evangelical denomination, and many the United Brethren, who have a church known as Ranck's church.

ALLEN R. LESHER, a retired farmer of Richmond township, Berks county, who lives about one mile below Virginville, along the Berks & Lebanon railroad, who was born at the place where he now resides, Dec. 2, 1835, son of Samuel S. and Sallie (Reber) Lesher.

John Lesher, great-grandfather of Allen R., was a native of Germany, born Jan. 5, 1711, only son and heir-at-law of Nicholas Lesher. He emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1734, and first settled in the Upper section of Bucks county, but later in Oley township, Berks county. In 1744, he and two other men erected a forge which became known as the "Oley Forge," and from that time on for fifty years he was prominently identified with the iron industry of the county. He represented the county in the Constitutional convention of 1776, and served in the General Assembly from 1776 until 1782. During the Revolution he acted as one of the commissioners for purchasing army supplies. He addressed an interesting letter to the Supreme Executive Council in 1778, relative to the taking of supplies. [See Berks County in the Revolution, p. 131.]

John Lesher died in Oley township, April 5, 1794, leaving a widow, two sons and five daughters, namely: John (had a son Isaac); Jacob, Barbara (m. Jacob Morgan), Hannah (m. George Focht), Maria (m. John Potts) and Catharine (m. John Tyser).

Jacob Lesher, grandfather of Allen R., and the progenitor of many Lesher's in this country, was born in Oley township, Berks county. He came to Richmond township before 1790, and died in 1804 in Virginville, being buried in a field above Virginville along the road which was a burial ground, but the plow share has turned up the sod and destroyed all vestige of the last resting place of a number of old pioneers. He m. Elizabeth Stenger, who kept a hotel in Virginville for a livelihood, and they had these children: Elizabeth m. John Heater; Jacob m. a Miss Bartholomew; Samuel; Jonas; William; and Polly m. Joseph Shomo, of Hamburg, Pennsylvania.

Samuel S. Lesher, father of Allen R., was born in Virginville at the old hotel stand that was kept by his parents. He learned the trade of a stone mason in Philadelphia, and this he taught to Samuel. He married Sallie Reber, daughter of John Reber, and they had these children: Gabriel died aged seventy-one years; John died aged twelve years; Polly m. (first) a Mr. Young, and (second) David Fulmer; Jacob died three months after marriage; Allen R.; William lives at White Deer, Union Co. Pa.; Louis lives in Pickaway county, Ohio; Lizzie is the widow of Simon Luckenbill; Joel is of Reading; and Sallie is the widow of Daniel Gruber.

R. R. Lesher attended the pay schools of his time, his first teacher being Joe Pike, and later when the public schools were established he attended them for a time. Mr. Lesher has spent all of his life on the farm, on which he now resides, a 100-acre tract. Mr. Lesher retired from active labor in 1898. He is connected with Becker's St. Peter's Union Church, in which he is a trustee, and takes an active interest. It was largely through the influence and activity of Mr. Lesher that a new township was not created back in the eighties, when a strong effort was made to cut off a part of Richmond township and Greenwich township, and create it into a new district. Mr. Lesher performs the duties of a good citizen, and is highly esteemed in his community. In politics he is a Democrat.

O. July 27, 1861, Mr. Lesher married Sallie Sassaman, daughter of William and Sallie (Delp) Sassaman, the former a furniture dealer and undertaker in his time, residing near Fleetwood. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lesher: Louisa S. m. Reuben M. Kline, and their daughter, Mrs. Francis Z. Sieber, has a son, William Allen; Sallie A. m. Wilson M. Kline, and has children—Virginia (m. Richard Sheridan), and has a son, Francis Carlisle; John D. m. Mrs. Franklâle H. Elsie, Webster and Edison; Lizzie m. Eli Gettis; Kate m. Mr. Hon. Jacob A. Lesher; Samuel S. died in infancy; William R. of Virginville engaged in the paper-hanging and painting business, m. Katie Kline, and has two children, W. Paul and Jennie P.
JONATHAN MOULD, merchant, Reading since 1871, was born in Orange county, N. Y., near Newburgh, Feb. 20, 1847, and educated in the pay schools of the vicinity and at the Montgomery Academy. He was reared on his father's farm during the course of his education until he was sixteen years old, when he went to Newburgh to enter the large dry-goods store of A. K. Chandler as a salesman, and he continued there seven years. During the later years he assisted Mr. Chandler in establishing and operating a chain of dry-goods stores in New York and Pennsylvania. In this capacity, he was sent to Reading, Pa., in January, 1871, and after operating the store for one year it was sold to Schofield & Co.

Mr. Mould, during this interval, having come to appreciate Reading as a business center, remained with the new firm, and assisted in the management of the store until January, 1875, when he embarked in business for himself. He established a department store at No. 335 Penn street, and in three years moved into larger quarters at No. 645 Penn street, where he continued with increasing success for twelve years. In 1890, he purchased the two adjoining premises on the east, Nos. 647-49, and upon erecting a large four-story brick store building, 30 feet wide by 270 feet deep, converted the business into a wholesale and retail trade which reaches into the surrounding districts and adjoining counties.

In 1887, his brother-in-law, George H. Bell (after being employed in the store for ten years), was admitted as a partner, and since then the business has been carried on under the name of J. Mould & Co. Mr. Mould has been identified for some years with the Farmers' National Bank of Reading, the Neversink Bank, and a number of industrial enterprises, serving in each of them as one of the directors.

In 1871 Mr. Mould married Julia E. Bell, daughter of Dr. William P. Bell, a prominent physician of Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, N. Y. They are members of the Trinity Lutheran Church at Reading, having been identified with this church since 1871.

Mr. Mould's father was John Mould, of Orange county, N. Y., where he cultivated a farm for many years until his decease in 1888, at the age of seventy-five years. He married Emily Douglas (a daughter of Isaac Douglas, of Catskill, N. Y., where he taught school in the local Academy, and died a young man).

Mr. Mould's mother was Jonathan Mould (after whom Mr. Mould was named); also a farmer of the same place for many years until his decease in 1855 at the age of seventy-three years. He was a lineal descendant of Christoffel Mould, who emigrated from Holland about 1712 and settled at Kingston, N. Y. Several of Mr. Mould's direct ancestors were actively engaged in the Revolution, and they have been honorably mentioned in Ruttenber's History of Orange county, N. Y. His mother was a lineal descendant of William Douglas, who emigrated from Scotland in 1640 and settled at Boston, Massachusetts.

GEORGE H. BELL (son of Dr. William P. Bell), partner of Jonathan Mould since 1887, was born in 1862 at Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., and was educated in the local schools. He entered the department store of Mr. Mould, his brother-in-law, at Reading in 1877, as a salesman, and in several years showed so much proficiency that he was placed in charge of one of the departments. In 1887 he became a partner, and since then the business has been conducted under the name of J. Mould & Co.

In 1894 Mr. Bell married Alice Bryson (daughter of Allen Bryson, of Orange county, N. Y., and Emma F. Mould, his wife, a sister of Mr. Mould). They have three children: Helen, Edith, and George Allan. They are members of Trinity Lutheran Church; and Mrs. Bell is a member of the D. A. R. at Reading, Conrad Weiser Chapter.

HENRY F. TROSTLE. The Trostle family was founded in America by two brothers, Peter and Hans Bernhardt Trostle, natives of Switzerland, who sailed for the New World from Rotterdam on the ship "Samuel," Hugh Percy, master. They landed at Philadelphia Aug. 17, 1733. In the records the name of Peter Trostell is variously spelled. The clerk who kept a list of the passengers aboard the ship spelled it Troksell, while elsewhere it appears Trostel. In 1733 his age was given as forty-two, and that of his wife Anna Maria, as thirty-two. In the same year Hans Bernard Trostel was thirty-five, and his wife, Catharine, thirty. Peter Trostel, aged nine years, and Daniel Trostel, aged seven years, possibly children of the former Peter, were also registered as passengers aboard the same ship.

Brecknock township, Berks county, was largely settled by the Swiss and the Welsh. On the same ship on which came the Trostells were many others whose names are still common (1908) in Brecknock. Apparently a whole colony left their native home and came to America, settling in one locality. Parts of Brecknock township were settled soon after 1733, and these emigrants evidently were the first of the foregoing groups of settlers from Philadelphia. Whether the two brothers, Peter and Hans Bernhardt, settled in the same district is conjectural, but it is evident that the Trostels were a numerous family in Brecknock township in earlier years, the cemetery at the old Allegheny Church (Un.) containing many tomb stones bearing the name Trostle. This church was the place of worship for the settlers for many miles around. Among the tomb stones in the cemetery there are yet readable are those of Heinrich and George Trostel. The former was born June 4, 1724, and died Oct. 9, 1759, aged thirty-five years, four months, and five days. The latter, George, was born Jan. 17, 1730, and died Sept. 11, 1804, aged seventy-four years, two months and twenty-four days.

It is undetermined who were the parents of Heinrich and George, but there is little doubt that they were the children of one or the other of the emigrant ancestors. The Trostle homestead in Brecknock township is in the western part near "Knauer's Hotel." Tradition says that it has been in the family name for more than one hundred and fifty years. There is a house upon this property, built by a Trostle long before the American Revolution. It is of stone, the masonry of superior workmanship and good appearance, and the tradition is that this homestead on this property has never been out of the Trostle name.

George Trostle was the ancestor of Henry F. Trostle of Spring township. He was born in Brecknock township, Feb. 17, 1780, as above stated. There is still in existence an old deed for the Trostle homestead in the western part of the township, which bears the name Trostle. The property has been owned by the Trostle family since the date of the old grant, and is dear to the descendants of Heinrich Trostle.

Henry Trostle, son of George, was a blacksmith by trade, and did a great deal of work for the Indians, with whom he was on the friendliest terms, many stories of his association with the red men being familiar to the older members of the family. He had two teams on the road hauling goods from Philadelphia to Pittsburg. His will was probated in 1824. He married Elizabeth Sweikhart, and they had children: Heinrich (2); John, who was survived by his wife Catharine (who was the executrix of his will made Jan. 18, 1857, and probated Feb. 23, 1857) and children, Levina, Sarah, Caroline, and William; George (3), who was born Jan. 17, 1806, m. to Benjamin Remp, and d. Mar. 15, 1857; Peggie, m. to George Fritz; and Elizabeth, m. to Isaac Griffith.

Henry Trostle (2), born Jan. 15, 1794, died Aug. 15, 1873, and is buried in the Allegheny Church cenetery, of which he was a stanch member. He married Elizabeth Griffith, and their children were: Benjamin, Isaac, Henry (3), John, Eliza, Katie, Cassia and Susan (He married Jeremiah Echenroth, and had four sons and five daughters), of whom Benjamin, Isaac, Eliza and Katie died unmarried. In about 1800, when Heinrich Trolley was six years of age, he witnessed the parting of the Indians and his father, the Indians informing the latter that they were going on the war path, and proving their words by beginning to murder when only a short distance away. At the age of thirteen young Heinrich (2) made his first trip to Pittsburgh with his father's team. It had not been intended that the lad should make the entire trip, but to drive only until he could find some one to do it. This was not to the young man's like; however, and he made the long drive without looking for any one to do the work. This was the beginning of this work for him, and he drove his father's teams until he was twenty-one years of age. He then started out for himself and made many long and oftimes dangerous trips. Later he was engaged in hauling charcoal to Mt. Penn Furnace for a number of years. When not engaged with his teams he worked in a store—the one class of work he preferred the other boys did while he was absent. His wife Elizabeth died in 1842, and from that time until 1848 his household was looked after by his daughter Cassia. In the latter year she wedded Reuben Kachel, who rented the farm until 1859, when he died. Then again Cassia and her father, continuing until 1875, when he died. Cassia, by her marriage to Mr. Kachel, had two sons, Henry T. and Reuben Samuel.

John Trolley, youngest son of Heinrich (2), was a stone mason by trade, but in 1859 he rented his father's farm, and carried it on as a tenant until his father's death in 1875, when he purchased it, continuing to attend to its cultivation until his death. It is now owned by his widow. John Trolley married Julia Hoffert, and they became the parents of two children: Henry m. Mary Huber, and had two children, John (m. to Mary Neinzehelzer) and Sally (died in infancy); and Amanda m. Samuel Kissinger, and had sixteen children, six sons and ten daughters, of whom two daughters are deceased.

Henry Trolley (3), son of Heinrich (2), was born in 1854, on the old homestead in Brecknock township. From 1855 to 1859 he was a tenant on the same farm. He married Elizabeth Meisch, daughter of Samuel George, of Lancaster county, Pa. Their children were: John died in boyhood; Susanna m. John M. Kessler, and has no children; and Henry F.

Henry F. Trolley, son of Henry (3), and now a substantial citizen of West Reading, was born in Brecknock township, Sept. 4, 1859, and was but five weeks old when his father died. He obtained his education in the township schools near his birthplace, and in the Good school in Lancaster county. He was brought up to farming and for a number of years lived with Christian and Benjamin Good in Lancaster county. After his marriage in 1886 to Anna Weiser, he entered the lumber business in Bowmansville. At first he was in partnership with C. M. Beam, under the firm name of Trolley & Beam, and this continued for six years, when he went into business with J. M. Kessler under the name of Trolley & Kessler. This firm existed two years, and was then dissolved by mutual consent. Moving to Ephrata, Pa., Mr. Trolley lived there a year, and for some time was employed as a salesman, also doing various other kinds of work. In 1896 he came to West Reading, and worked for a wholesale produce company, doing hucksterring in Reading. That same year he made a visit to West Reading, and purchased two residences, Nos. 701 and 703 Penn avenue, which he sold. He then erected ten more in the same borough. He lives in a fine three-story brick house at No. 700 Penn avenue.

In February, 1887, Mr. Trolley married Emma Eberly, who was born in 1864, daughter of Israel Eberly and wife (whose maiden name was Oberlin), the former a farmer in Clay township, Lancaster county, and a descendant of Jacob Eberly, a Swiss Menonite who settled in Lancaster before 1738. Mr. Trolley's grandfather, Samuel Eberly (born Feb. 8, 1798, died Jan. 26, 1876) lived in Elizabeth (now Clay) township, and in 1832 built a house; he was the first county treasurer under the constitution of 1837. To Mr. and Mrs. Trolley were born children as follows: Harry died in infancy; Ida Susan; Edwin E.; Mary Edith; and Reuben Samuel. They are members of the Reformed Church of West Reading, and since 1901 Mr. Trolley has been a member of the Consistory. He is a Democrat in politics, and for eight years under President Cleveland's two administrations, 1885-89 and 1893-97, was in the postoffice at Bowmansville, being assistant postmaster during the first term, and postmaster the second term. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

William Trolley married Magdalena Steffy (born Feb. 12, 1795, died May 22, 1883) and they had four sons and two daughters: Richard m. Sarah Swartz, and had two sons and five or six daughters, the sons being Isaac, who is married and living in Mohnton; and Levi m. to Elizabeth Brendle, and had a son Martin (m. Kate Eshelman, and has a son Paul), and three daughters, Catharine (m. Franklin Schweitzer), Margaret (m. John H. Schurman) and Celia (m. Nicholas Schwartz). (2) Jacob m. Ann Steffy. He was a stone mason by trade, but devoted the latter years of his life to farming. Of his children, three sons and five daughters are living: Jacob m. Lydia Eshelman, and has two children; Howard m. M. G. Glass, and has two children; Harry m. Lizzie Garman, and has two children; and the five daughters are all married, but are not living in this vicinity. (3) Levi was a carpenter. He was born April 20, 1833, and died July 10, 1897. He m. Ann Furlow, born Dec. 19, 1828, died Nov. 7, 1896, and they had children: William (born June 28, 1861, died Sept. 22, 1895), Levi (born Dec. 6, 1869, died June 26, 1894), John, Elmer and Sarah. They lived in Lancaster county. (4) Benjamin moved to Lebanon county, Pa. (5) Sallie m. David Lebo, and lived in Lancaster county.

JOHN ARCHIBALD McLENEGAN was born at Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 2, 1841, at the homestead on East King street. When six years of age, he was adopted by an uncle, George B. Withers, Esq., of the Lancaster Bar, and his earliest education was received at private schools in that city. He afterward attended the Strasburg Academy, to which place his uncle had removed on account of failing health. He then assumed the care of his uncle's farms near Strasburg until the latter's decease in 1859, when he accompanied his aunt, Mrs. Withers, to Reading where he secured a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, as son to the late H. H. McLeenigan, in the lines at York and Washington. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted as a volunteer in the Ringgold Light Artillery for three months, and then for three years with the Anderson Troop. He is enrolled as a First Defender. Upon being mustered out of service, he joined a colony of friends and relatives from Lancaster, and invested in farm lands in Wisconsin, where he remained for five years. He then returned to Reading and resumed employment with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, continuing with the company until 1885, and afterward for upward of twenty years filled the position of traveling salesman for the Reading Wooden Mills, visiting the business centers in the South and West and developing a large business for this important enterprise at Reading. In 1895, his health failing, he located with his family on his farm at White Bear, along the Wilmington & Northern Railroad, at this place he died June 10, 1906.

Mr. McLenegan was married to Mary Ann McKnight, daughter of David McKnight, and granddaughter of John McKnight, the first banker at Reading, and they had seven children: Elizabeth Hiester, Selina (m. Frederick E. Yorke, and has a daughter, Dorothy), William and Henry (twins, the latter deceased), John (deceased), Robert Wallace, and Frederick Augustus. The mother died Oct. 19, 1908.

His father was Zephaniah McLenegan, born at Lancaster, in 1801, where he was educated and admitted to the Lancaster Bar in 1828, and afterward came to occupy considerable prominence in the official life of the county, serving as county prothonotary in 1839, and thereafter from 1836 to 1839. He was a man of scholarly tastes, and possessed one of the best private libraries in Lancaster. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and died in 1842.

He m. Henrietta Augusta Musser, daughter of John Musser (for a time Collector of the Port of Phila delphia), Elizabeth (m. Hendrick Hollenbach Muhlenberg). They had four children: Edward (m. to Mary Dunn), Henry Hall (m. to Sarah Reig gart), Charles (died in Rio de Janiero in 1859, aged twenty-two years) and John Archibald.

Mr. McLenegan's grandfather, Archibald McLeneg gan, was born in 1759; in 1767 he was apprenticed to to work on the Monaghan County Ulster, loca cating at Lancaster, Pa. In 1791, he m. Mary Wallace, daughter of William Wallace, and granddaughter of James Wallace who had emigrated to Pennsylvania prior to 1721 and settled in Swartara township. They ten children: Samuel, Elizabeth (m. an Hump deys), Elijah (m. Mary Fordy), Sarah (m. a Randall), Zephaniah, Isaiah, Mary (m. William Wal lace), Athalia (m. a Shepley), Martha (m. Robert Wallace), and Ann (m. the Rev. Mr. Pauli). Archi bald McLenegan was possessed in a marked degree of to raise the virtues which characterize the Scotch-Irish. He was largely interested in farming opera tions in Leacock township, and was a well-known citizen of Lancaster in its early days, being the proprietor of the old "White Horse Inn," which was situated at the east end of King street, and which later became the private residence of his son Zephaniah. He died in 1831.

JOSEPH AUBREY WHITE. The material ad vancement of the city of Reading has been conserved in no small degree by Joseph A. White, who was for a generation years one of the leading contractors and ders of this county, as a member of the firm of White & Wagoner. He now resides on a beau fult farmstead contiguous to the city and devotes his attention principally to floriculture and the rais ing of fine poultry. He was born in Lancaster, Lan caster Co., Pa., June 17, 1853, son of William R. and Rebecca B. (Cline) White.

William R. White was born in the City of New York, in 1819, and was reared and educated in his native city, where he learned the trade of cotton manufactur ever becoming superintendent of a cotton mill in New York. He remained there until about 1840, when he took up his residence in Lancaster, Pa., where he entered the employ of Arnold & Company, a leading cotton manufacturers, with which concern he continued until 1895, when he permanently retired from active business. The last six years of his life were passed in the home of his son, Joseph A., where he died in 1906, and where his widow still resides, a remarkable example of the family of the White. Mr. White married in Lancaster, Rebecca E. Cross, a woman of an average intelligence. He was born in London, England, born in 1835, who accompanied her parents to America, and located at Lancaster, Pa. Mrs. White belongs to the Lutheran church, of which her husband likewise was a member, and in politics he was uncompromising in his allegiance to the Re publican party. Of the eight children of William R. and Rebecca E. (Cross) White, Joseph Aubrey was the oldest; Charles F. was born Aug. 2, 1855; Emily Alice, Oct. 22, 1865; Ada R., Aug. 7, 1868 (is deceased);
Jessie May, March 27, 1870 (died in childhood); Laura V., March 1, 1872; Mary W., Dec. 29, 1876; and Emma R. March 2, 1879.

Joseph Aubrey White was afforded the advantages of the public schools of Lancaster, his native city, and there he served a thorough apprenticeship at the plasterer's trade, becoming a skilled artisan in the line. For several years he followed the work of his trade in New York City, and in 1885 he took up his residence in Reading, where he engaged in contracting and building, in partnership with John M. Wagoner.

The firm of White & Wagoner built up an extensive business and attained a high reputation for reliability and progressive methods. This firm erected about one thousand buildings in the various sections of Read ning, and their enterprise and excellent work contributed materially to the substantial upbuilding and attractiveness of the city.

Mr. White is recognized as a representative citizen of Berks county, and has so ordered his course as to retain at all times the confidence and good will of his fellow men. He has shown a commendable inter est and concern that pertains to the welfare of his home city and county, and the active life of any office or public office he has been signally observant of the duties of citizenship, and has lent his co-operation in the furtherance of enterprises and projects tending to advance the general welfare of the community.

In 1904 he retired from the contracting and building business, and moved to a farm in the north-east section of the city. On this place he has made fine improvements of a permanent nature, including the erection of a handsome and commodious residence of modern architectural design and equipment and he is living the idyllic life of a country gentleman, the while enjoying also the advantages of the city. His farm is largely given over to the Cultivation of fine varieties of flowers, for which he finds a ready market, and to the breeding of high grades of poultry, in which line he is producing some exceptionally attractive new strains. He has secured premiums at various poultry shows and takes much pride and interest in his poultry busi ness.

He is a Republican in his political proclivities and both he and his wife are zealous members of the Lutheran church.

In 1899 Mr. White married Miss Kate Spensler, daughter of Jacob and Lucy Spensler, of Adams coun ty, Pa. They have no children. Mr. White has at ained to success through his own efforts, and is one of the substantial and honored citizens of Berks coun try, where he has a wide circle of acquaintances in both business and social lines.

WILLIAM McH. BOYER, a substantial citizen of Reading, Pa., who is acting in the capacity of chemist for the Reading Iron Company, of that city, was born in Reading, in 1849, son of Jerome L. Boyer. Mr. Boyer secured his education in the schools of his native city, and attended the high school at Birds boro, after graduating from which he returned to Reading, later attending a school at Columbus, Pa. He then entered the preparatory school of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., from which he graduated in chemistry in 1891, and in Aug ust of that year he accepted the position of chemist with the Reading Iron Company. Mr. Boyer's laborato ry is situated at the Keystone Furnace, where he engages in the manufacture of iron. Frethermore Mr. Boyer is connected with the Masonic order, being a member of Lodge No. 549, F. & A. M. He is a Lutheran in religious belief, and attends Trinity Church of that denomination.
In 1898 Mr. Boyer married Emily Eavenson, daughter of Alban Eavenson, who is well known in manufacturing circles of Philadelphia as a soap manufacturer, and to this union there have been born two sons, Jerome Ludwig Boyer, 2d, and Howard Eavenson Boyer.

JOEL M. SCHAEFFER, a retired business man of Fleetwood, residing in a handsome home on Richmond street, was born March 8, 1846, in Richmond township, and has all his life been identified with that section of Berks county.

With the ship "Edinburgh" arrived at Philadelphia, on Aug. 13, 1750, it had among its passengers one George Schaeffer, who came from the Rhine valley, in Germany, and was the first of his family to settle in America. Proceeding to Berks county, he established himself on a farm in Richmond township, and there spent the rest of his life. His children were: Elizabeth, Margaret, Maria, Peter and Philip.

Philip Schaeffer, son of Georg, was born in 1770, on the old homestead in Richmond township. He was a very successful farmer and remained on the old homestead. He made the first threshing machine in Berks county. This proved a great labor saver, and he continued using machines during the remaining years of his life. He married Elizabeth Fetherolf, who bore him eight sons and four daughters, namely: George; Peter; Isaac; Jonathan; Daniel; Philip; William; David; Sarah (m. Jacob De Long); Elizabeth (m. Solomon Yoder); Anna Maria (m. Isaac Merkel); and Esther (m. Francis De Long). As each child became of age he or she was presented with a farm. The children were all of unusually fine physique, tall and strong, and finely proportioned.

Philip Schaeffer, Jr., son of Philip and father of Joel M., was a life-long farmer in Richmond township, and one of whose efforts was the establishment of an unassuming manner of unassuming demeanor and upright character, his most vital interest was his family, to whom he was devoted. He was a member of the Reformed Church of Fleetwood, and in politics was, like all of his name, a Democrat. He married Esther, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Sherradin) Merkel. The Mertks are a family of German origin founded in Pennsylvania by Georg, whose son Caspar was the father of Jacob. Philip and Esther Schaeffer became the parents of seven children, viz.: Levina, Mrs. Samuel Kelchner, of Fleetwood; Hettie, Mrs. Isaac Deburk, of Kutztown; Elizabeth, who died aged seven; John, who married Susan Helbine, of Moselem Springs, Pa.; Joel M.; Maria, Mrs. Martin Kelchner, of Fleetwood; and Martin, who married Susanna Rahn of Fleetwood.

Joel M. Schaeffer spent his boyhood and youth on his father's farm attending the local schools. This was supplemented by a course in School of Collegeville, Montgomery county. At the age of twenty-four he married and his father gave him a farm near his own and for five years the young man followed agricultural pursuits. But in the spring of 1876 he sold out his farm stock and entered upon a partnership with Lewis Wreather that lasted until 1903. This firm, Schaeffer, Wanner & Co., dealt in grain, coal and lumber, and built up an extensive business. In 1885 they reorganized with one new member in the firm, and built a rolling mill with a capacity of seventy-five barrels a day. They manufactured the white Rose and Silver Cloud flour, which are more general in the Lehigh Valley than the product of any other mill in that section, while there is also an active demand in the western part of New Jersey. In 1903 Mr. Schaeffer sold out his interest in the firm to his son-in-law John N. Kaufman. In 1909 Mr. Schaeffer bought the old Dumm mill property at the west end of the borough of Fleetwood, and formed a partnership with his son-in-law, John N. Kaufman and his son, Walter P. Schaeffer, the firm being known as Kaufman & Schaeffer.

In political views, Mr. Schaeffer has somewhat departed from family tradition and maintains an independent stand, but he has always been decidedly active in local affairs, while for six years he served in the town council. He is also prominent in the Emmanuel United Evangelical Church, in which both he and his wife do much work. When the present building was erected in 1884 he was a member of the building committee and his plans and suggestions were heartily approved by the others of the committee. For nine years he has been treasurer of the Sunday-school and is now class leader and teacher of the German class. His wife is equally prominent in the women's work of the church, belongs to several benevolent, literary, and social societies, and to the W. C. T. U. Both are highly esteemed for their upright and Christian lives.

Mrs. Schaeffer was Miss Caroline Catherine Kelchner, and was married to Mr. Schaeffer Nov. 17, 1870. She was a daughter of Jacob and Ann (Sheirer) Kelchner, and granddaughter of Jacob Kelchner; Sr. Her husband subsequently bore the name and one son, namely: Anna Vanilla, who was educated at Schuykill Seminary, Frederick, Md., m. in 1894, John N. Kaufman, and has two children, Joel Schaeffer and Kathryn Willi; and Walter Philip, who was educated in the local schools and in Albright College, Carlisle, Pa., took a scientific course, and who has also done much in voice culture and is a vocalist and musician of note. He is now a member of the firm of Kaufman & Schaeffer, millers and coal dealers, at Fleetwood.

J. NEWTON RHOADS, a very well-known and highly esteemed resident of Reading, Pa., is an official court stenographer, to which office he was appointed Oct. 2, 1891. He is a son of John P. and Eliza (Flickinger) Rhoads, natives of Carlisle, the former of whom died in 1884, aged sixty-four years, and the latter in 1891, being seventy-four years old at the time of her death. They had three children: Martha E., Alfred Milton and J. Newton.

J. Newton Rhoads was born Nov. 2, 1856, and was educated in the Carlisle public schools and at Dickinson College, graduating from the latter institution in 1880. He then engaged in the newspaper business for a time, after which he took up the study of stenography, and engaged in work on the Legislative Record for two years. The next spring he went to Harrisburg, being employed there in the office of Col. W. C. Deming for three or four years. He was official stenographer of the House and County Court for two years, and came to Reading as an assistant court stenographer in 1886.

Mr. Rhoads married, May 30, 1892, Miss Susan E. Rheem, daughter of Jacob Rheem, who was a descendant of the founders of Reamstown, Lancaster county. Two children were born to this union, Edith and Marian, both at school. Mr. Rhoads is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Reading. He is an energetic, conscientious worker, well fitted for the duties of his position.

EDWARD ZARTMAN SCHOLL, architect at Reading, with offices at No. 35 North Sixth street, is descended from two of the pioneer families, and of which he bears both names. The first ancestor of the Scholl family was one George Scholl, who settled in the vicinity of Stouchsburg some few years prior to 1727, and who was an intimate associate of Conrad Weiser, the renowned pioneer. He is on record of making the motion at the first Lutheran vestry held in the county to build a church, the result of which was the erection, in the year 1727, of a log building, which became known as Reed's Church, so named after the donor of the ground. All of Mr.
Mr. Yost was born at New Castile, New York, and came to Reading, in 1813. He married Solinda Jacob, daughter of Benjamin Salome, a descendant of the Indian princess, and one of the two first named being the great-great-grandfather of Rufus R. and James Franklin R. Yost. The last name of these sons, Philip, Jr., was born in Montgomery county August 24, 1797, and in 1828 moved to New Lebanon, where he was married to a lady of this family for more than one hundred years. When fifteen years of age Philip Yost, Jr., served in General Washington's army. In 1833 he married Rosina Benninger, and they had these children: Mary Magdalene, married John Jacob Scholl; Philip, married Susanna, married Rosina Herman, Jonas, Sarah and Philip. Mr. Yost died August 28, 1832.

Nicholas Yost, the grandfather of Rufus R. and James F., was born at New Lebanon, Oct. 27, 1798, and died June 9, 1867. He was an extensive farmer, owning over five hundred acres of land in Cumnock township, along the Morgantown road. He was a great marksman and frequently indulged in shooting matches, seldom failing to bear away a prize. Mr. Yost was a short but well-built man, with dark hair and a ruddy complexion, and was regarded as being more frequently related to his grandchildren how he heard the few remaining Indians on Mount Penn and the Neversink Mountains signal to each other. On Nov. 23, 1817, Nicholas Yost married Susanna Seidel (born Sept. 29, 1798, died June 12, 1851), daughter of Philip and Elizabeth Seidel, of Robeson township, and to this union were born ten children, as follows: Mary married Samuel Hemmig; Elizabeth, twins of Mary, married Washington Kissinger; Rebecca married Amos Hartman; Lydia married Moses Yocom; Susan married Jesse Matz; Amos lived at Cacoosing Creek; Benjamin married Lizzie Loyd; George married Rosina R. Yost; Sarah married Adam Spohn, of Spring township; Louisa married Joseph D. Hornberger.

Benneville S. Yost was born on Millin Island, at the Little Reading Dam, Nov. 15, 1823, and died Sept. 30, 1887. He was the owner of the hotel business at the "Green Tree" for ten years, and also farmed for two years, and one at Hamburg for a similar period. For upward of thirty years he was engaged in the coal business, and the freshet of Oct. 4, 1869, caused the loss of nearly one thousand tons of his coal, which he had stacked along the banks of the Schuylkill river. During the latter years of his life Mr. Yost was a farmer, but retired in 1879, at which time his son, Rufus R., took charge of the farm of 146 acres at Flying Hill. He was a lifelong member of Yocom's Reformed Church, where he is buried. Mr. Yost was also an old school-master, and taught pay school at Weitzeltown (Fritztown), in Cumru township, and also a few terms in Bern township.

The first wife of Benneville S. Yost was Christina Rapp, to whom he was married Jan. 22, 1848, at Reading, and they had these children: William H. R. died in infancy; Nicholas R. also died in infancy; Sarah A. married Robert R. Mast; Franklin R. is married to Lou; Cyrus R. is deceased; Nicholas R. is a resident of Myerstown, Pa.; James Franklin R. is mentioned below. Benneville S. Yost married (second) Clementine Henke, of Reading, who was of German descent. There were no children born to this marriage.

Mr. Yost's grandfather, Nicholas Yost's farm at the "Green Tree" in Cumru township, ship Jan. 5, 1855, attended the district schools, and later studied at Palatinate College for two years, leaving school when twenty years old, with a good education. He was reared to agricultural pursuits, and worked for his parents until twenty-five years old, but in 1880 began working on his own account, spending four years on his father's farm in Cumru township, located at the Flying Hill. He then lived at Myerstown, Lebanon county; for two years, after which he spent four most years in the Folkland Township, in 1890 purchasing the Richard peppercorn farm, in Spring township, a tract of 125 acres of some of the most fertile and productive land in lower Berks county. This valuable farm is well and conveniently situated, and on it is found an inexhaustible supply of water. In the last years that this farm was in the family it is burned by Mr. Yost. He has disposed of as much as ten thousand bushels of lime annually in connection with his farm work. Since the spring of 1907 he has rented his farm, and with his brother, James Franklin R. Yost, has engaged in building houses at Reading, Shillington, Wyomissing and Springmont. At the time he rented his farm Mr. Yost sold his live stock at public vendue, and he realized a large amount thereon, one pair of mules bringing $536, a cow $70, and his thirty head of cattle averaging $50 each.

In 1879 Mr. Yost married Catherine Kurtz, daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Haines) Kurtz, and to this union have been born three daughters and one son: Christina married Weber, Hartz, of Shillington, Pa.; Harry, Laura and Bessie are unmarried and reside on the farm. He is a member of the members of Yocom's (Christ) Reformed Church, of Cumru township.

James Franklin R. Yost was born at the Yost homestead at the Flying Hill, Cumru township, Berks county, Pa., April 18, 1854, and was educated in the schools and at D. B. Brunner's Academy in Reading, which he left when sixteen years of age. In 1889 he commenced farming for himself on a fine tract of 152 acres in Wyomissing borough, Spring township, which he had purchased in 1887 and which he had rented for two years. From 1885 to 1889 Mr. Yost was also engaged in the milling business at Myerstown, Lebanon county, but since the latter year has engaged in farming and building. He purchased the Reaser farm of 164 acres in Sinking Spring, but this farm is now a part of Daniel Wecht's farm. Mr. Yost conducts a fine dairy, keeping about thirty Holstein and Jersey cows, and has a select trade in Reading, to which city he conducts a daily route. In addition he has good horses and mules, and his farm is operated by the latest improved machinery. In politics Mr. Yost is a Republican, and fraternally he is connected with West Reading Castle, K. G. E. With his family he attends Yocom's Reformed Church in Cumru township.

On Dec. 19, 1885, Mr. Yost married (first) Annie Catherine Kachel, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Wagner) Kachel, and to this union were born three children: Stella A., Walter H. and Emma K. Mrs. Yost died Sept. 1, 1896, aged thirty-one years, four months, three days. On Nov. 30, 1899, Mr. Yost married (second) Clara May Dietrich, daughter of William H. Dietrich, of Reading, and to this union there have been born two children, George Washington and Lloyd Allen.

IRVIN K. KELLER, of Reading, proprietor of "Keller's Cafe" (a designation descending from a previous owner, was born Aug. 3, 1866, in Rockland township, Berks county, son of Jeremiah C. and Mary (Klein) Keller. The Keller family (antecedents of Irvin K.) became established in Berks county prior to the days of the Revolution.

The educational advantages granted our subject were meager enough, for his people were in modest circumstances, and Irvin, being the eldest of ten children, was early put to work upon the farm, as such a family meant no little burden and responsibility to his parents.

In 1877 he left his Pennsylvania home for Ohio, accepting a situation with his uncle, J. C. Keller, then foreman of the P. F. Mast Foundry Company, situated at Springfield, Ohio. He was employed as core maker and molder, and after four years of diligent application discovered that the excuctions were too arduous for a "light weight." He then turned his face eastward, returning to Berks county, and soon thereafter engaged with Amos Barto, who was conducting a hotel at Lyon Station, remaining there until the spring of 1893, when he entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Company at Reading, terminating his engagement in 1897.

In 1897 he purchased a farm in Boyertown, and his next venture was with his uncle, Col. D. C. Keller, that proprietor of Keller's Cafe, situated at No. 527 Penn Square, Reading. This was in 1893, and their association covered a period of more than nine years, being dissolved by the Colonel's death, May 22, 1902. After an intermission of two years (in the meantime having formed a partnership with Charles Buck) he became his uncle's permanent successor, and whatever credit might have once been due the "Colonel" for the conduct of his business is as well deserved by and as reasonably attaches to the present owner.

On Feb. 25, 1893, Irvin K. Keller was married to Lizzie C. Keller, daughter of William and Barbara (Con- rath) Keller. The following children were born to William Keller and his wife: Daniel C., a tailor of Bechtelsville, married Lizzie Herb; Mary C. first married Harry Bauer, and her second marriage was to William Schollenberger, a farmer (she and her husband were both victims of the Boyertown fire); Charles C., a tailor of Reading, married Annie Eckert; Hannah C. is the widow of George E. Schmier; Lizzie C. married Irvin K. Keller; William C., a tailor of Allentown, married Wilhelmina Bauer. With his wife, the father of the family, was killed by the train at Lyon Station, Berks county, Aug. 19, 1890.

To Irvin K. Keller and wife, two children were born: Clarence, July 17, 1897 (died March 1, 1902); Esther May, born March 18, 1907. Whatever fortune may have come to this household due credit should be given to Mrs. Keller.

Mr. Keller owns valuable property within the city. He has been successful, for he has been obliging, courteous, reciprocal and fair.

CHARLES S. PHILLIPS, M. D., physician and pharmacist, located at No. 1342 North Eleventh street, Reading, was born July 2, 1849, at Womelsdorf, Pa., son of Charles S. and Eliza (Stephen) Phillips.

Solomon Phillips, the ancestor of the Phillips family, came to America in the ship "Phoenix," which arrived at Philadelphia, Aug. 28, 1750. He lived to a very old age and reared a large family, two of his sons being Michael and Heinrich (the latter the direct ancestor of Dr. Phillips).

Heinrich Phillips resided near Belleman's Church, where he and wife Esther (Mogel) Phillips, lie buried. They reared children as follows: Peter, Jacob, John, Samuel, John Adam and several daughters.
HISTORY

Peter Phillips, grandfather of Dr. Phillips, was a farmer near Bellemans' Church in what is now Centre township, Berks county, where he was born, and both he and wife are buried in the old graveyard near that church. He was accidentally drowned at Lebanon's Dam. He married Maria Catherine Schwalm, and their children were: Magdalena, born Dec. 22, 1809; Anna Maria, Dec. 19, 1813; Charles C., Sept. 3, 1817; Peter, Aug. 27, 1817 (m. John Richard); Catherine, Jan. 31, 1820 (m. first) William Schwenk, (second) George Eyrick and (third) Daniel Rhein; John, June 24, 1822; Caroline, Oct. 2, 1824; Rebecca, April 9, 1827; Reuben, Oct. 16, 1831, and Franklin, Dec. 8, 1835. Of these Catherine and Franklin still survive.

Charles S. Phillips, father of Dr. Phillips, was born Sept. 19, 1813, in what now is Centre township, and died near Reading on his farm, in 1896. He is buried at the Ontelaunee Church. He dealt extensively in horses and the business was very lucrative before the days of railroads. He was also a veterinary surgeon for many years. He married Eliza Stephen, who was residing with her son, Dr. Phillips, at the time of her death, and she rests in the Womelsdorf cemetery. They had the following children: Walker and Charles S., both professional men at Reading; Francis, residing at Philadelphia; George, a physician practising at Oley; John, a prospector and miner, now residing in Central America, but formerly for many years of California.

Until he was twelve years of age, Dr. Charles S. Phillips lived at Womelsdorf, but in 1861 he accompanied his parents to Lebanon, where he attended school. In 1864 he went to Washington City and was in the employ of the Government as a hospital steward, remaining there until Christmas morning, 1864, when he returned to Lebanon.

In 1876, Dr. Phillips was married to Kate Fehafer, a daughter of Michael and Sarah (Geiger) Fehafer, and to this union has been born sixteen children, ten of whom are buried in the family lot at Womelsdorf; namely: Anna, m. to J. W. Gramm; Stella, who died young; Charles, residing at Port Kennedy, Pa.; Maud and Walker, twins, the latter of whom died in infancy; Agnes, who died in infancy; Francis, residing at Reading; John and Louisa, who both died young; Emma; George and David, twins, who both died young; Cris- and David, residing at Taneytown; and Grant and Ernest, both of whom died young. Dr. Phillips and family belong to the Reformed Church.

In politics he is identified with the policies of the Republican party, but he has never consented to hold political office. He is a member of Ashland Lodge, No. 284, F. & A. M., and Griscom Chapter, No. 219, Royal Arch Masons.

BUTZ. Among relics owned by this old and honored family of Berks county, is a Bible, in excellent condition, now in the possession of Mrs. Pianna (Butz) Daylesford, Mr. and Mrs. L. Pianna, of Mt. Penn, Pa. This Bible was brought to America by (I) John Butz, who in 1737, landed at Philadelphia with his two children, Peter and Catharine. John Butz came to this country from Hertzogberg near Krommenberg in the lower part of Bavaria. John Butz died Feb. 23, 1750, in Philadelphia.

(II) This same old Bible shows that Peter Butz (son of John) was married Oct. 22, 1743, to Anna Barbara Carl, who was born in Hessen-Nassau, Germany, and they had these children: Mary, born in 1744; Caroline, in 1746; John, in 1747; Samuel, in 1750; Peter, in 1754; Elizabeth, in 1755, and Anna, in 1761. Peter Butz died in 1789, aged seventy-one, and twenty-five days. His wife died March 6, 1790, aged seventy-six and four months.

(III) Samuel Butz, son of Peter, was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, Aug. 10, 1750. Dec. 13, 1774, he married Anna Mary Romig, born May 31, 1754, died Feb. 21, 1813, and they had children: Peter, born Oct. 29, 1775; Catharine, March 25, 1777; John, April 27, 1779; Susanna, March 6, 1781; Esther, Dec. 29, 1783; Elizabeth, Nov. 28, 1788 (died Oct. 31, 1791); Mary, April 5, 1793. Samuel Butz died Aug. 17, 1838; aged seventy-one years. He was a farmer. (IV) John Butz, son of Samuel, was born April 27, 1779, and died Aug. 19, 1874, aged ninety-five years, three months and twenty-two days. The place of his birth was the same as that of his father, the homestead in Longswamp township. In 1806 he married Anna Yaeger, of Oley township, who died Aug. 24, 1826, aged eight years, eight months, and twenty days. They had eight children, but only three grew to any age; Nathan, Jacob and Anna Maria. In 1828 the Butz family Bible came into the hands of John Butz, who highly cherished it. This very valuable volume was printed in 1704, and is in an excellent state of preservation. It contains the family records, and is of great value.

(V) Jacob Butz, son of John, was married May 25, 1828, to Elizabeth Christman, born May 28, 1809, died Nov. 19, 1895, aged eighty-six years, five months and twenty-one days, daughter of Peter and Margaret Christman. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Butz were: Daniel C, born in 1831; John Peter, in 1833 (deceased); Franklin, in 1835; Fianna, in 1837; Henry A., in 1839 (deceased); Susanna, in 1841 (deceased); Catharine, in 1848, and Jacob, in 1851 (deceased).

(VI) Daniel C. Butz, an aged resident of Oley township, was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, Aug. 26, 1831, a son of Jacob Butz. He was reared to farm work, and has always been a farmer. He began working for himself upon the homestead farm of 134 acres he now occupies in 1860, and farmed this property until 1897 when he retired, and during his active years he was always a loyal member of the Lutheran church. He is a very large man, being 103x42, and the spring water runs through the structure thus simplifying the watering of the stock. Mr. Butz lives in a house on the farm built by his father in 1860. At present Mr. Butz rents the farm, but lives upon it and enjoys his declining years, surrounded by the plenty he has himself accumulated. Mr. Butz is a member of Oley Reformed church, and was a deacon for five years. Mrs. Butz belongs to the Lutheran church.

On Oct. 18, 1859, Mr. Butz was married to Susan D. Hoch, a daughter of Jacob and Catherine (De Turck) Hoch of Oley township. Mr. and Mrs. Butz have a daughter, Mary m. William Marquette, who is now deceased. Mrs. Marquette resides at Friedensburg, and has these children,—Ida, Nora, Sallie, Samuel, George and Mabel.

Mr. Butz and his wife dispense a charming hospitality that makes their home a favorite gathering place for all their relatives and friends. In addition to other interests Mr. Butz is a stockholder in the creamery at Yellow House.

(IV) Peter Butz, grandfather of Lewis B. Butz, was born in Longswamp township, Oct. 29, 1775, son of Samuel and Anna Maria (Romig), but when still young, removed to Whitehall township, Lehigh county. He was a very efficient blacksmith, and made gun barrels and all kinds very successful. On the property forming a large farm he owned. He is buried at United church. He and wife, Susanna Bieber, had children: Samuel lived in North Whitehall township, and had children, William (deceased) Peter, Louise and Katie; Egedius; Enoch, a farmer, also lived in North Whitehall township, and had a daughter, Sarah. (V) Egedius Butz, father of Lewis B. Butz, was born in North Whitehall township, Sept. 30, 1805, and died in Maxatawny township May 28, 1890, aged eighty-four years, seven months and twenty-eight days. The following inscription is found on the tombstone erected to the memory of Egedius Butz and wife:

"Egedius Butz
Sept. 30, 1806
May 28, 1890
84 7-28.
Elizabeth born Bieber
July 10, 1810
Oct. 16, 1877
67-3-6."

Egedius Butz came to Maxatawny township when a young man, soon after his marriage, he marrying a young lady from Maxatawny township which perhaps had something to do with his selection of this township as his place of residence. His wife was Elizabeth Bieber, and they had these children: Abraham; young; Mary m. David Kemp; Susanna died young; Fianna died young; Lovina m. Caston Hoover; Lewis B.; Sarah m. Henry Kohler; Peter died at the age of twenty-one years; Louisa m. Jerry Levan; Elizabeth m. William De Turck; Carolina m. Daniel Sheradin; Claris is unmarried and Emma m. Henry Roth.

(VI) Lewis B. Butz, son of Egedius and Elizabeth, was born in Maxatawny township, Jan. 27, 1837. He was reared a farmer, and made that his life work until his retirement in 1900, having commenced farming for himself when twenty-one. He now owns a fine farm of 100 acres, which was once the property of Egedius Butz and earlier belonged to Abraham Bieber. Mr. Butz made a success of his farming operations, but now rents his property and lives in retirement near the Normal School on the Eastern Road which has been his home since Mr. Butz has taken a deep interest in educational matters, serving as school director for many years. At present he is trustee of the Keystone State Normal School, and has held that office since the organization of the school. He represents the stockholders, and has the honor of being the oldest living member of the board. He also was much interested in the erection of the present church of St. Paul's Reformed congregation, in 1876, serving on the building committee and contributing generously toward the necessary fund. He and his family are members of this church, of which he has been both deacon and elder, and he is regarded as one of the pillars of the church and among its most liberal contributors. In politics Mr. Butz is a Democrat, and he has held many of the elective offices of the township.

On Nov. 17, 1857, Mr. Butz married Catherine Kieffer daughter of Jonathan and Fannie (Shiley) Kieffer, and granddaughter of Abraham and Lizzie (Sebert) Kieffer. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis B. Butz were: Amos A., of Kutztown who has a son, Herbert; John E., born July 7, 1862, and died April 1, 1902, leaving a daughter, Elsie; Ella C., m. to Selden Gerner of Allentown; Alfred, of Philadelphia, m. to Lillian Garrett, and has a son, John Alfred; Ida m. to William R. Smith of Philadelphia.

Such families as this are a credit to Berks county. Its representatives are men of substance, who have borne their part in the development and advancement of their several communities.

CHARLES VAN REED EVANS (deceased), who during the course of a long and useful life was a well-known and most highly esteemed resident of Berks county, conducting a farm in Heidelberg township, was born on the original Evans homestead in Cumru township, March 4, 1810. The Evans family, one of the early established families of Berks county, has contributed its share of prominent citizens in this section in peace and in war. Church-loving, law-abiding and God-fearing, the family has always been noted for the honesty and integrity of its members, some of whom have filled positions of eminence in their day. All the brothers and sisters of the late Charles Van Reed Evans emigrated from about the year 1790, and landed at Philadelphia, whence all went prospecting through Pennsylvania, with the result that Daniel settled in Chester county, Philip (the ancestor of the family herein described) in Berks county, and the third in Montgomery county.

Joshua Evans, grandfather of Charles Van Reed Evans, was born in 1733, and his death occurred in March, 1778, when he was aged forty-five years. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Thomas, was born July 1, 1746, and died in 1813, at the age of sixty-seven, after a widowhood of almost thirty-six years. They were the parents of the following children: Thomas, Hannah, Philo Thomas, Morris, Sarah and Joshua. Mrs. Evans' parents, Philip Thomas and his wife, Esther, lived in East Vincent township, Chester Co., Pa., but they owned outlying land near Reading, upon which their daughter Mary and her husband, Joshua Evans, settled. By the will proved in Philadelphia Oct. 4, 1774, Philip Thomas wills this farm to Joshua Evans' son, Philip Thomas Evans. As previously stated, Joshua Evans and his wife continued to live on the farm, improved it, and built the stone farm house.

Philip Thomas Evans, father of Charles Van Reed Evans, was born on the old Evans homestead, Sept. 29, 1778, and his death occurred July 12, 1864, at the age of eighty-one years, six months and twenty-three days. He m. Susan Bechtel, and lived eleven miles up Maiden Creek. (2) John V. R., born Jan. 29, 1804, died July 5, 1864, aged sixty years, five months, six days. He inherited the homestead. He m. Anne Miller. (3) Joshua, born Dec. 25, 1805, died Dec. 12, 1826, aged twenty years, eleven months, seventeen days. (4) Mary T., born Sept. 11, 1807, m. Peter Bright, and moved to Danville, Montour Co., Pa. (5) Charles V. R. is mentioned farther on. (6) Abner, born Dec. 25, 1811, died May 21, 1816, aged four years, two months, two days. (7) Harry, born Sept. 11, 1814, died Feb. 10, 1814. (8) Henry V. R., born Jan. 28, 1818, died Oct. 29, 1838, aged twenty years, nine months, twenty-one days. He inherited the mill property. (9) Anna Elizabeth, born May 10, 1821, m. Thomas H. Jones, who died in 1850. Mrs. Jones resides in Reading. (10) Charles Van Reed Evans, born March 4, 1810. He received his education in the common schools, the teacher being paid by the patrons of the school. He gave his time to his father on the farm, and with his patrimony purchased his farm in Lower Heidelberg, where he continued throughout his active days, following farming. He spent the last twenty years of his life in retirement, and died April 1894, at the age of eighty-one years, one month, three days, and was buried at Sinking Spring. He was a Republican in politics, and held a number of township offices, was frequently appointed administrator, executor and guardian, and was of well known integrity. In 1836 he married Maria Spohn, daughter; of William and Catharine (Miller) Spohn, and to them were born a family of thirteen children, namely: Josiah S., a soldier in the Civil war, who served in the 90th Ohio regiment under Captain Carpenter, and died in a Southern hospital Feb. 26, 1863; Margaret E.; Jane, who resides at No. 115 North Third street, Reading; Amanda, deceased; John H., m. Anna Elizabeth Van Reed; Maria C., Catharine, James, Sarah and Katie, all deceased; P. Thomas, of Iowa, m. to Sally H. Shepp; Annie S., who died Sept. 24, 1901; and Morecai, who died young.
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

John Henry Evans, a retired farmer and prominent citizen of Lower Heidelberg township, was born March 6, 1844, north of Womelsdorf, in Marion township, son of Charles V. R. Evans. He was educated in the district schools and was licensed to teach when seventeen years old by Prof. John S. Ermentrout, superintendent of schools of Berks county. In 1864, he began his first two terms at Buck's schoolhouse in Lower Heidelberg township, and then worked for his parents until he was married, when he commenced tenant farming, and carried it on for fourteen years. At the end of this time he went to Reading, remaining until after his father's death, and then located on the farm of 366 acres in the Cacoosing district. His home is one mile due west from Cacoosing, along the Bernville road, and two miles due north of Sinking Spring, on one of the old Van Reeds farms, which was formerly the property of the Samuel Jones estate. Samuel Jones had erected a house for his tenants on the corner of his farm in 1791, and a stone from the barn built in 1796 is to be found in the Evans barn wall. The present residence, however, is a two and one-half story brick dwelling, and is built in Colonial style. Mrs. Evans also owned a farm of 116 acres in Lower Heidelberg township, her farm and that of her husband being divided by that of Annie V. R. Adam. Abraham and Sarah Van Reeds, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Jones) Van Reed, and to this union there have been born two sons: Charles V. R., a farmer residing at home; and Jacob V. R., a chemist for the Elk Tanning Company, at Ridgway, Elk Co., Pa. They are both unmarried. Mr. Evans is a Republican in politics, and has efficiently served his township as school director for three years, has been delegate to numerous county conventions, and assistant assessor for twelve years. During the Civil war he served in Company I, 11th Pennsylvania Volunteers. He is a member of St. John's Church, at Sinking Spring, and also attends the church of his faith, the Episcopal, in this district. Both Mr. and Mrs. Evans are intelligent, refined people, and are not only well known in this district but have a large acquaintance in Reading. The Evans family has intermarried with other prominent and old established families of this section, where they have remained for nearly 75 years. Abraham lives in the same house that he built from the same family. In 1867, he married Emma Evans, daughter of John V. R. Evans and granddaughter of Philip Thomas Evans.

Gustavus Augustus Behne, a distinguished artist, whose widow has made her home in her native county, but who died since his death, was himself well known there, both because of his own attainments and as a son of the beloved Dr. John Henry Behne.

Dr. John Henry Behne was born in Nordhausen, Prussia, in the year 1800, and attended different German universities, graduating in medicine at Würzburg, Bavaria. Coming to America in 1840, he located in Reading the same year, and continued to practise his profession there from that time until his death, Aug. 1, 1876. Dr. Behne began his medical career as an allopath in Nordhausen, Prussia. In studying the works of Hahnemann, the pioneer of homeopathy, he changed to the new school. He also opposed the idea of an American homeopathic hospital, and this opposition was the cause of his coming to America. He settled in Reading and was one of the first practitioners of that school in the city. Dr. Behne was not only a skilled physician, but a cultured gentleman, and his fine personal appearance and courteous manners clothed gracefully a character fine and strong, and which had earned for him numerous exclusive and professional popularity he attained. He was particularly well liked among those of his own nationality, but the circle of his friends and patronage was not by any means confined to the German residents of Reading, and he enjoyed an extensive practice, numbering among his regular patients many of the most influential and well-to-do families of the city. People often came to him from different parts of the State for medical treatment. The Doctor became an enthusiastic American citizen, taking a deep and intelligent interest in the progress of his adopted country. He was an Odd Fellow, for many years an active member and secretary of German Lodge, No. 59. He was twice in the first twenty years of the history of the city, one of a Prussian officer, a lady of much ability. She died in Reading soon after they settled here, the mother of one child, Gustavus Augustus. Rather late in life the Doctor married for his second wife a Miss Zabel, of New York, and by that marriage there are two sons to continue the line, John and Paul Behne, who reside in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Gustavus Augustus Behne was born in 1828 in Nordhausen, Prussia. Like his father he was a man of fine personal appearance, and he was remarkably gifted in many ways, his natural endowments being supplemented by training in the best universities in Europe. His mind was highly cultivated, and he was a fine linguist and talented musician. But his artistic nature showed itself most strongly in his painting, and he was thoroughly prepared for his artistic career in the Dusseldorf school, and later in the Munich galleries. He took a special course in portrait painting under Sully at Philadelphia.

In 1856 Mr. Behne married Julia Mayer Keim, who was born in Reading, daughter of Gen. George May, and Julia C. (Mayer) Keim. She was thoroughly educated in the Reading Academy, which was located on the present site of the High School building, taught by a private tutor at Philadelphia, while her father was officiating there as United States marshal for the Eastern district of Pennsylvania. In 1857 Mr. and Mrs. Behne went to Texas, Mr. Behne having received a commission to paint the portrait of General Sam Houston, for which the State paid him $2,000 in gold. They spent some time there, Mr. Behne painting afterward the portraits of Governor Burnett and other distinguished men. On account of the Rebellion they went to Havana, remaining there until 1867, when they went to Munich. While there Mr. Behne produced a number of superior paintings, for which he received high praise from German critics, and Mrs. Behne took up work in foreign languages and music, becoming proficient in Continental literature, and learning to speak fluently the German, French, Spanish and Italian tongues. She gave special attention to music, both vocal and instrumentai, in which line her accomplishments are particularly noteworthy, a source of the deepest pleasure to herself and her friends through many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Behne remained abroad until 1874, when they returned to Reading because of Mr. Behne's illness, staying there until his death in 1876. In that same year while at Bar Harbor, Maine, where they went to procure marine view (for which he had orders), Mr. Behne fell from the rocks and injured his back severely that he never recovered from the effects of the accident. He was obliged to abandon all idea of carrying on his work there, and he and his wife returned to Germany, and made their home in the village of Furstenfeld Bruck, near Munich, where Mr. Behné was finally released from suffering in 1895. He was the last of his family for a long time, until his father's second marriage.

When Mr. Quier was twenty he removed to Reading after her husband's death, and has been residing there ever since.

From her girlhood she has been a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Having always appreciated history and literature, she quite naturally became interested in the welfare of the Reading Free Library and the educational improvement and besides gave them financial assistance, presented to each of these worthy institutions a number of her husband's valuable paintings, which are highly prized for their artistic merit.

Many of his productions have an honored place in Reading homes.

EDWIN ADDAMS QUIER has passed practically all his life in Reading, where he was born Aug. 14, 1869, son of Levi and Emma (Addams) Quier.

Levi Quier has been a prominent business man in Reading for many years. Born at Rittersville, in Lehigh county, Pa., March 11, 1835, he was there educated in the public schools, and upon the opening of his active years learned the business of constructing blast furnaces for the manufacture of iron, under his father-in-law, Samuel McHose, who was one of the well-known furnace builders of Lehigh county. After that experience he served for five years as bookkeeper and paymaster for the Allentown Iron Company, and then from 1859 to 1861 was engaged in the construction of blast furnaces, one of them being at Richmont, Va. Meanwhile his patriotism had become aroused by the stirring events of the Civil war period, and in the latter part of 1861 he assisted in organizing a company at Allentown for the Union service. He was commissioned lieutenant and served with that rank until January, 1864, when he was appointed quartermaster of the regiment, continuing in that position until he received his honorable discharge from the service, in September, 1864. By special detachment he served as recruiting officer at different places, and later as quartermaster on the staff of Gen. J. M. Campbell, participating especially in the campaigns in the Shenandoah valley.

At the conclusion of his military service Mr. Quier located in Dauphin county, in the town of Longenecker, then in the manufacture of fire brick, securing an interest in the firm of McHose & Thompson, of which his uncle, Isaac McHose, was the senior partner. This was in the year 1865, and throughout the forty and more years intervening since that time he has continued his interest in the works, which during all this time have been under his direct management, and of which he is now practically the sole owner.

In 1888 Mr. Quier married Emma Addams, daughter of Reuben E. Addams, of Reading, formerly of Ontelaunee township, Berks county, and to them he has born one son, Edwin Addams. Mr. and Mrs. Quier were members of the First Reformed Church of Reading until the organization of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church, in 1872, when they withdrew from their original connection to form the establishment of the new congregation, of which they have since been active members. He was one of the building committee of the church, serving as secretary of that body, and he and his uncle, Isaac McHose, are now the only surviving members of that committee.

For over twenty years following the organization of the congregation, Mr. Quier officiated as deacon and trustee.

Though he is best known in business circles as a manufacturer of fire brick, Mr. Quier has been identified for many years with the work of the International Union of Ship Builders, during which time he has served as a member of the board of directors; he co-operated with other enterprising capitalists of Reading in establishing the electric light and power plant, and the steam heat plant, for supplying the community with light, power and heat—all of which projects have been very successful, demonstrating their utility so that they have been highly appreciated in the community.

Mr. Quier has always been a public-spirited man, and he represented the First ward as one of the Republican school controllers in the board of controllers from 1878 to 1892.

Edwin Addams Quier received his early education in the Reading public schools, graduating from the high school in 1885. He then entered Lehigh University, graduating from that institution in 1891, after a course in analytical chemistry. Upon graduation, after graduation, he secured an interest in the Reading Fire Brick Works, with which his father has so long been connected, and he has since been identified with that important industrial concern. He has served as secretary and later as treasurer, and has proved himself a success in business as well as in professional work.

In 1895, Mr. Quier was married to Helen Hawley, daughter of Jesse G. and Kate (Ritter) Hawley, and they have had three children: Hawley, Catherine and Edith. Mr. Quier is a member of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church, and his wife is connected with Christ E. Church.

Upon the death of Mr. Jesse G. Hawley, who was the owner of the Reading Eagle, the leading newspaper publication of Reading, the Reading Eagle Company was incorporated, and Mr. Quier was chosen vice-president, in which capacity he has since assisted in the management of the publication.

TOBIAS K. SHENK, a prosperous business man of Reading, Pa., who is proprietor of Shenk's Carriage and Wagon Works, Nos. 1137-1149 Moss street, was born Nov. 24, 1830, son of Peter and Sarah (Kreider) Shenk.

Peter Shenk, who was for many years engaged in farming and carpentering, during which time he gained an honestly earned reputation as a skilled mechanic and practical farmer, is now living retired in Lebanon county, Pa., where for some years he served as school director, a position to which he was elected on the Republican ticket. He and his wife are members of the United Christian Church. They have had four children: three of whom survive namely: Mary, m. to Harry Hocker, of Hockersville, Dauphin county; Sarah, m. to Isaac Imboden, of Cleona, Lebanon county; and Tobias K.

Tobias K. Shenk was four years of age when his parents removed to Lebanon county, where he resided until twenty-two years of age. He was then married to Miss Emma Longenecker, daughter of Benjamin and Anna Longenecker, of Dauphin county. He engaged in farming until the age of thirty years, when he came to Reading, and carried on contracting until 1908. In that year he began the manufacture and general repair of wagons, and the steady increase of his business has demanded more floor space and machinery until he now has one of the best equipped plants in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Shenk are the parents of five children: Clayton, Viola, Raymond, Harry and Mary. In religious belief the family are connected with the Evangelical Church. Mr. Shenk is a Republican in politics.

ROBERT P. R. HUYETT, M.D., one of the leading medical practitioners of Reading, Pa., whose offices are situated on North Tenth street, has been engaged in practice in this city since 1893. Dr. Huyett was born in 1854, in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Joseph G. and Mary A. (Pennyacker) Huyett. Dr. Huyett, grandfather of Dr. Robert P. R., was a farmer and cattle dealer in Cumru township, carrying on extensive operations for many years, and becoming known as a substantial business man and influential citizen. He married a Miss Gaul, by whom he had these children: Isaac; Joseph G. *Mary Ann, m. (first) to Christian Gaul, and (second) to Henry Hettinger; Kate, m. to James Pennypacker; Elizabeth, m. to Samuel Reifsnyder; and Sarah, m. to Henry Close. In religious belief the family were Lutherans, in the faith of which church Mr. Huyett died about 1897, at the age of sixty-one years. His wife died in 1903.

Joseph G. Huyett in his young manhood assisted his father in the cattle business, and later engaged therein on his own account, also operating a farm and mill, to the latter of which he gave his entire attention in later life. About twelve years prior to his death, in 1900, he removed to Chester county. His wife, Mary A. Pennypacker, who survives him, resides in Wilmington, Del., with their daughter. Four children were born to Joseph G. Huyett and wife, as follows: Dr. Robert P. R.; Isaac W., deceased; Joseph and Cora A., m. to A. Ladd, of Wilmington, Del. The family are Lutherans in religious belief.

Robert P. R. Huyett received his preliminary education in the schools of Berks county, the Reading Academv, and Prof. Farr's Commercial Business College, and read medicine under Dr. Christian Hoffman of Sinking Spring, and with Drs. Schomaker and Pancost, then entering Jefferson Medical College, from which he graduated in 1879. After taking a post-graduate course at Philadelphia, Dr. Huyett located in the Temple, where he remained in practice for eighteen years, and in 1893 came to Reading, where he has since continued in his profession.

Dr. Huyett married (first) Mary A. Brown, a native of Robeson township, who died in 1892. He m. (second) Tina (Grush) Michael. Dr. Huyett is a member of the P. O. S. of A., of the Commandery of that order, and of the Knights of the Maccabees.

WILLIAM SHOEMAKER MOHR, a highly esteemed resident of Reading, Pa., and former cashier of the Citizens' Bank thereof, was born at Mohrsville, Berks Co., Pa., June 28, 1844, son of Charles H. Mohr. The town of Mohrsville was founded by the great-grandfather of William S. Mohr, who came from Germany and settled in Berks county. His son, Jacob, was born at Mohrsville, and was widely known as the tavern-keeper there.

Charles H. Mohr, father of William S., was also born at Mohrsville, and when a young man learned the tanning trade, later engaging in that business and in lumbering. He purchased the old brass-bound mill at his tanyard and engaged in the lumber business, in which he continued until his death, in 1897, aged fifty-three years. He married Sophia Kerchner Shoemaker, born in 1820, who is still living and spends her summers at her country home at Mohrsville, and her winters with her daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Addams, at Reading. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mohr were: Mrs. Addams, whose son, Charles P., is in the office of the attorney general at Harrisburg; William Shoemaker; and Charles Shoemaker, now deceased.

William Shoemaker Mohr attended the public schools of Mohrsville, and came to Reading in 1862, engaging with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company as an apprentice to the machinist's trade. After serving his time he was employed in the paymaster's office until 1887 as assistant paymaster, and in April of the year following was one of the original organizers of the Citizens' Bank, which was opened May 10, 1888, with these officers: George D. Stitzel, president; Jerome L. Read, vice-president; and William S. Mohr, cashier. This organization, which was capitalized at $125,000, in 1887 as assistant paymaster, and in April of the year following was one of the original organizers of the Citizens' Bank, which was opened May 10, 1888, with these officers: George D. Stitzel, president; Jerome L. Read, vice-president; and William S. Mohr, cashier. This organization, which was capitalized at $125,000, 1887 as assistant paymaster, and in April of the year following was one of the original organizers of the Citizens' Bank, which was opened May 10, 1888, with these officers: George D. Stitzel, president; Jerome L. Read, vice-president; and William S. Mohr, cashier. This organization, which was capitalized at $125,000, merged with the Second National Bank of Reading Feb. 8, 1902. Since that time Mr. Mohr has retired from active business, living at his home at No. 203 North Sixth street.

Mr. Mohr was married Jan. 23, 1873, to Miss Catherine Stitzel, daughter of the late George D. Stitzel, who died in 1905. Mrs. Mohr passed away Dec. 24, 1877. The only son of this union died when three weeks old. In politics Mr. Mohr is a Republican. He has served as secretary of the Tax Payers' League since its organization in August, 1905. He is a member of Trinity Church, and is treasurer thereof.

DR. ALLEN J. FINK, formerly a druggist at Hamburg, Pa., and a very highly esteemed citizen of that borough, was born in Hamburg, Berks county, Nov. 13, 1888, son of David H. and Jane E. (Gift) Fink, and grandson of Peter Fink, who first located in Berks county.

Peter Fink was born in Greenwich township in 1783, and carried on farming near Virginia until his death in 1863. He married Magdalena Heffner, born 1790, died 1882, daughter of George and Mary Heffner. They had nine children: Kate, Mary, Ann, Betsey, and Julia Fink and James, George, and John Fink.

David H. Fink was born in Perry township in 1833, and there carried on farming for a number of years, later removing to Hamburg, where he was engaged in the hotel business in the "American House" for thirty-five years. After living retired for several years he died in 1893. He was married to Jane E. Gift, daughter of William Gift, and their only child was Dr. Allen J.

Dr. Allen J. Fink fitted himself to become a competent pharmacist by studying and practising in the drug trade for a number of years, and also in the printing trade, and taking a course of lectures in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, from which he graduated in 1888. He located in Hamburg in 1887, for the purpose of carrying on the drug business and manufacturing specialties, and he conducted his store in a very successful manner. In 1895 Dr. Fink associated with Thomas Raubenhold and Solomon K. Hoffman, Esq., for the manufacture of underwear at Hamburg. For this enterprise they erected a two-story brick building, and they have carried on the business ever since, the business being under the name of the Hamburgh Fitting Mills. In 1906, Dr. Fink gave up the drug business and has since devoted himself wholly to his interests in the mills.

In 1908, Dr. Fink was selected by the citizens of the place as one of the building committee of the new Public Library, this being erected and opened to the public in 1904. At the expiration of the Doctor's term he was re-elected. When St. John's Lutheran Church was rebuilt, in 1898, after its complete destruction by fire, Dr. Fink presented in the name of himself and the Hamburgh Fitting Mills a sum of money which was used for the building of the church.

MOYER. Few families of Heidelberg township can trace more clearly an old and honorable ancestry than that of Moyer, reaching back to the days of revolution. The Rev. Heinrich (or Mayor) family was one of the many German Palatinate families of immigrants who in 1708 and 1709 went to England, whence 4,000 persons were given transportation, by Queen Anne, to New York, where they landed Dec. 25, 1709, and June 14, 1710. On the passage and immediately after landing 1,700 of these immigrants died. The survivors camped in tents which they had brought with them, on Governor's Island, and here they remained until autumn, when about 1,400 removed to Livingston Manor, 100 miles up the Hudson river. Being unable to continue, the Governor Hunter, and seeing famine and starvation staring them in the face, 150 settlers went to the Schoharie Valley, some sixty miles northwest of Livingston Manor, whither they traveled through three feet of snow, in the unbroken woods, hauling their baggage on rudey made sleds. At Schoharie they improved the lands which had been granted them by Queen Anne, but about ten years later, owing to a defect in their titles, they were deprived of the property which they had labored so hard to acquire.

Having heard of the just and liberal treatment given to settlers in the Province of Pennsylvania, thirty-three families removed thereto in the spring of 1723, and settled in the "Tulipahaca," which was at that time the furthest inhabited part of the province, northwest from Philadelphia. In subsequent years more than 100 other families followed them and settled in the northwestern part of Berks county, and among these were the Meyers, or Meyers. In 1759, when the first federal tax was levied in Berks county, the following Meyers were taxable of Tulpehocken township, and paid their tax as follows: Rudolph Meyer, twelve pounds; John Michael, eight pounds, and Philip Meyer, three pounds.

In Heidelberg township was one John Meyer, who paid ten pounds tax that year. It is a family tradition that the ancestor of this particular branch of the family was John or Johannes Meyer, and that he had seven children. In the courthouse is his will, which was probated Dec. 28, 1765, the year of his death, he being then a resident of Tulpehocken township. The executors of his estate were his two sons, George and Henry, and in it were the following provisions: George was to receive the homestead of 120 acres, and the "Sebbins house" in No. 200 pounds; Henry was given the mill and house and 198 acres of land. The other children were: Anna Barbara, m. to George Wolff; Eva Catherine, m. to a Stettler; Gideon; Catherine, m. to a Deissinger; and Valentina. By the testator, his "beloved son-in-law, George Wolff," was named guardian over the children of Catherine Deissinger and Valentine Meyer.

George Moyer, the great-grandfather of John E., and Mahlon A., of Heidelberg township, was born in Tulpehocken township, Berks county, and was buried at New Gap, in Upper Heidelberg township, and owned the property now in the possession of Peter Meyer, Sr., a grandson. His children were: John, Michael, Peter, Heinrich, Jacob, Daniel, Mrs. John Holtzman and Mrs. John Bomberger.

Daniel Moyer, son of George, was born Dec. 2, 1782, and died March 18, 1850. He was a farmer of Heidelberg township, where he had a ninety-five acre property and he and his wife are buried at the Corner Church, of which they were members. Mr. Moyer m. Susan Bellem, born Oct. 5, 1781, who died Dec. 3, 1841. Their children were: John, who married Susan Miller; George Moyer, m. Elizabeth and Catherine, who died unmarried; Isaac, and Susan, m. to George Fornald.

Daniel Moyer, son of Daniel, was born Nov. 3, 1818. He lived in Heidelberg township, and died Jan. 7, 1884. He was a lifelong farmer, owning and operating a tract of eighty-two acres. He was a prominent Democrat, holding the offices of school director, supervisor, and delegate to many county conventions. He and his wife are buried at Corner Church, of which they were members. Mr. Moyer married Catherine Host, born Aug. 19, 1815, who died in April, 1892. To this union were born thirteen children, namely: Adam, born March 28, 1838; Emanuel, Jan. 17, 1840; Sarah, July 21, 1841; Amelia, March 16, 1843; John E.; Jeremiah, Nov. 2, 1844; Amanda S., Nov. 17, 1844; Daniel J., June 22, 1850; Isabella C., Dec. 15, 1851; Aaron W., Feb. 18, 1853; Mahlon A.; Albert H., April 16, 1857, and Julius J., Sept. 26, 1860.

John E. Moyer was born April 19, 1845, in Heidelberg township, where he received educational advantages. Mr. Moyer enlisted in Company H, 55th Pa. V. I., to serve three years; was promoted June 5, 1864, to corporal for gallant conduct at Gettysburg, and to sergeant Aug. 6, 1864, for rolling a shell out of a trench where his company was lying, thus saving the lives of many of his comrades. He served in some of the fiercest engagements of the war, and was honorably discharged June 11, 1865, with a gallant record.

On his return from his country's service, Mr. Moyer resumed his labors upon the farm for one year, and then was employed with a railroad repair crew for a like period. For another year he worked on a farm in Wooster, Wayne Co., Ohio, to which he returned for a shorter time after a stay of three years. Mr. Moyer turned to the parental roof, where he continued to work until his marriage, when he began housekeeping at the Robesonia furnace, where he remained five years, his time being spent in earnest, hard labor. For the next nine years he operated his father's homestead, after which he removed to his 100-acre farm in Marion township, Berks county, but after three years removed to the Dr. L. A. Livingood farm of 365 acres, which he conducted for five years. For eight years Mr. Moyer successfully farmed the Jacob Lauck 145-acre farm in Heidelberg township, and in 1901 he purchased the Savage farm in Lower Heidelberg township, a tract of 204 acres, which he cultivated for two years and subsequently retired, at which time he erected a fine frame residence on Main Street, Robesonia. He was also the owner of a farm of ninety-six acres, which he removed for sixty years. He traded for the property at No. 236 South Third street, Reading, on which is located a three-story brick house of fourteen rooms.

In politics Mr. Moyer is a strong Democrat. He has been a delegate to numerous congressional and judicial conventions, and has never declined. Since 1871 he has been school director in Marion township for three years and a like period in Heidelberg township, where he has also been supervisor. In the spring of 1907 he was appointed State health officer, No. 226, of Heidelberg township. Mr. Moyer is a member of a popular comrade of G. A. R. Post No. 471, Myerstown. He and his family attend St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, of the Lutheran denomination, of which he was a deacon, elder and trustee for five years.

In 1871 Mr. Moyer was married to Amanda Ruth, daughter of Francis Ruth, and to them twelve children have been born: Wilson, Maggie, Minnie, John, Allen, Ezra, Irwin, Harry, Samuel (who lives in Valparaiso, Ind.), Susan, Mae and Sarah.

Mahlon A. Moyer, Jr., senior member of the mercantile firm of Moyer & Moyer, of Robesonia, was born Oct. 3, 1856, in Robesonia, was educated in the common schools of Heidelberg township, later attended Womelsdorf Academy with such schoolmates as M. A. Gruber, H. P. Kiser, Dr. H. F. Livingood, John Livingood, etc. He attended the Millersville State Normal School for four terms. For the five succeeding terms, Mr. Moyer taught school in Heidelberg township, and for two terms in Lancaster county. He is a transcribing clerk for three years in the office of the recorder of deeds, under Isaac M. Bechtel, and was, during President Cleveland's first administration, he was appointed a storekeeper and gauger for Berks county, an office which he held for four years. Mr. Moyer then removed to Mount Aetna, where he married, which place he conducted eight years. Because of deaths in the family, the Moyer firm was finally dissolved. Mr. Moyer purchased the interest of Henry R. Miller in the firm of Miller & Gerhard, and has since been associated with this company, which has become Gerhard & Moyer.

In politics Mr. Moyer is a Democrat, and has been active in the success of his party in this section. He is a charter member of the Berks County Institute.

Philip Moyer is a charter member of the Penn Castle, No. 65; K. G. E., of Reading, which was organized in 1884. He is a member of St. Daniel’s (Corner) Evangelical Lutheran Church, of near Robesonia, as was also his wife. In 1888, Mr. Moyer married Ella H. Noecker, born May 6, 1868, who died June 30, 1899, daughter of Israel Noecker, a merchant of Millersburg, Pa. The only child of this union, Edgar M., died in infancy.

CAPT. JOHN A. HIESTER, of Reading, enjoys the distinction of being the only boat-builder on the Schuylkill canal. He has been running excursion boats since 1869, at present owning the two pleasure steamers “Rosie” and “Carrie,” and has been regularly in the employ of the Schuylkill Canal Company since 1869. He has previously been engaged on work for that company from 1864, working with his father until the latter’s death. The business interests of father and son have been closely associated with the history of the canal and navigation company.

Captain Hiester was born in Berks county in 1844, and he has lived in Reading since he was six months old, his parents, William and Elizabeth (Adams) Hiest er, having moved hither at this time. His mother was a daughter of Isaac Adams, who owned an oil mill on the Tulpehocken creek. William Hiest er was engaged as a boat-builder in the early days of the Schuylkill canal and during work on the Schuylkill Navigation Company for many years, carrying on an independent business. He built craft for boatmen as far north as Troy, N. Y., and was considered one of the most reliable boatbuilders in this part of the country. One of his masterpieces was the famous “Regulator,” which he built for the Philadelphia & Reading Company, and he constructed a number of pleasure boats which gave him a reputation along the Schuylkill. He was the first owner of a steamboat on that river, the “J. L. Stichter,” which plied between Reading and High’s Woods. Mr. Hiest er was killed in 1878, and was survived by his wife and two children. Three children were born to this union, John A., Julia, who died aged thirteen years; and Sarah, unmarried, who makes her home with her brother. The father was a member of the Reformed Church, a Republican in politics, and a Mason and Odd Fellow in fraternal connection.

John A. Hiest er was educated in the common schools of Reading, and early began to learn boatbuilding under his father, who trained him thoroughly in his life work. In 1864 he began work for the Schuylkill Navigation Company, and regularly entered the employ of that Company in 1869, and he has built and repaired many canal boats during his long career in this business, often handling as many as five hundred boats in one season. The first boat owned by the Captain was the “J. L. Stichter,” formerly owned by his father, which he rebuilt and renamed the “Escorte;” her length was 55 feet, beam 14 feet, 4 inches; his next boat, the “Gazelle,” also built by his father, was 65 feet long, 14 feet, 4 inches across the beam; later he owned the “Pearl,” 68 feet long, beam 14 feet, 4 inches; all these boats drew 3 feet of water. Captain Hiest er built the “Valley Forge” (for a Mr. Shaw of Valley Forge), length 65 feet, beam 13 feet, draw 3½ feet; the “Atlantic,” length 65 feet, beam 14 feet, 4 inches, draw 3½ feet; the “Martha Washington” (for Caleb, Ruth and Robert Hanna, of Company B), length 65 feet, beam 14 feet, 4 inches, draw 3½ feet; the “Goeden Eagle,” length 73 feet, beam 16 feet, 10 inches, draw 3½ feet; the “Mayflower,” length 26 feet, beam 7 feet, draw 2½ feet; and the “Town,” length 47 feet, beam 16 feet, draw 2½ feet. Since 1868 the Captain has limited his operations to the repair of canal boats for the Schuylkill Navigation Company. Captain Hiest er has a reputation on the river and canal which for many years has insured him steady and remunerative patronage. Having followed his work from boyhood he is familiar with all its phases, ready for any emergency, and always the capable and reliable work-

...ters, and has held various ward offices. He is a member of the First Reformed Church of Reading, and has been a life member of the Guldin Society. He is a member of the First German Reformed Sunday-School of the borough of Reading, signed by his Sunday-school teacher, J. Ermentraut and the Sunday-school superintendent, C. Steiner. This was presented to him when he was but eight years old, and he prizes it very highly. Mr. Kline was a member of the farthest south at Livingston Manor, from which places they followed the migratory tide into the fertile valley of the Tulpehocken. Rupp in his "30,000 Names of Immigrants," shows a Lorenz Zerbe who came from Schobach to Tulpehocken in 1723, and in addition to Lorenz mentions a John Philip Zerbe and a Martin Zerbe among those above twenty-one years of age, who passed the winter of 1710 and summer of 1711 in Livingston Manor, N. Y., and who may have come to Tulpehocken at a later period. The name of John or Johan has been a favorite one in the family, as appears from the tax lists and vital statistics.

John Zerbe, born in North Heidelberg township June 30, 1799, died in Reading in 1874, and is buried at Little Tulpehocken church. He was a tailor by trade, working at that occupation in different parts of the county, and for some years he was engaged in farming. In politics he was a Democrat. He was a member of St. Daniel's Church. His wife, whose maiden name was Martha Keller, died in Penn township in 1871, aged sixty-three years. She was a daughter of John Keller. Their children were: Elias, born Aug. 4, 1822, died March 3, 1853, married to Catharine C. Zerbe, who bore to him four children, and was deceased; Catharine M. Jeremiah Oaks, and both are deceased; Ursia is mentioned below; William K., born Nov. 13, 1837, in North Heidelberg, enlisted Sept. 2, 1862, in Company G, 151st Pa. V. I., served ten months, and now resides in Reading, unmarried; Sarah M., Jonathan J. Frymoyer, deceased, and she resides in Reading; Jonathan A., Clara Moll, and died in Reading leaving no children; and six children died young.

Elias Zerbe, son of John, born Aug. 4, 1822, was a resident of North Heidelberg for a number of years, and in 1870 came to Reading where he followed the carpenter's trade until within a few years of his death, March 5, 1906. Both he and his wife are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. On Nov. 7, 1846, he married Mary Ann Moyer, daughter of George Moyer and his wife Catharine Gerber (1799-1860). To this union were born children as follows: Emma, born Sept. 16, 1847, died at the age of eleven years; Anna, born March 3, 1850, died Mar. 3, 1853; Mary M., born Jan. 25, 1854; James M., born Sept. 27, 1855, lives in Reading; Harrison, born Jan. 9, 1859; George McClain, born Jan. 25, 1864.

Levi M. Zerbe, son of Elias, was born in Marion township Dec. 3, 1853. He learned the carpenter's trade when he was eighteen and this he has followed ever since. For two years he was engaged as a millwright in Reading, to which city he came in the fall of 1871. In 1875 he began working for the Reading Railway Company, and continued there until 1879, when he was appointed on the police force by Mayor Henry Tyson, but at the change of administration two years later he resigned and went back to the millwright's trade, following his trade there until 1880. The next two years he spent first in the contracting business and then as a millwright with Elias Schmehil, of Reading, but in the latter part of 1887 he again returned to the Railway Company, and has since continued there. On March 16, 1897, he was made foreman of the planing mill department, having some eighty-seven men in his employ. He is a member of the Relief Association, and also belongs to the American Mechanics, No. 27 of Reading; the Royal Arcanum, No. 495; and the Schuykill Fire Company. He is a member of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, and is connected with the Trinity Lutheran Brotherhood of Reading. In political affairs he is a Democrat.

On May 15, 1875, Mr. Zerbe was married to Amelia A. Werner, daughter of Frederick Werner, of Reading. Three children have been born to them, namely: Lillie M., who died in infancy; Anna M., at home, and Emma N. (1878-1900), deceased wife of Isaac Mengel, of Reading.

Urias Zerby, son of John and brother of Elias, was born Feb. 16, 1834, and died Jan. 6, 1907, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. For several years he followed farming in Exeter township, and then moved to Muhlenberg township, where he lived until his removal to Reading April 1, 1875. He owned the John Epler farm now all built up and improved as a part of the city along Schuykill avenue. He married Lovina Snyder, who bore him the following children: William A., John, James, Missouri, Irwin, Frank, Mamie and Amanda.

William A. Zerby, son of Urias, and now a well known citizen of Reading engaged in the milk business, was born in Muhlenberg township May 25, 1869. He attended the township schools, and was ten years old when the father removed to Reading. Here in the city he attended the public schools, in the meantime assisting his father on the farm. He has followed the mechanical trade, part time by going into the dairy business at No. 639 Schuykill avenue, where he has built up a large trade. In his political principles Mr. Zerby is a Democrat, and has served as a member of the county committee. He was elected collector for the Fifteenth ward in 1908. In his future career, if he should enter the Magistrate's family, he is a Lutheran and belongs to Hope Church.

On Oct. 8, 1887, Mr. Zerby was united in marriage with Miss Missouri De Long, daughter, of Jacob De Long, of Lehigh county. Their children are: Arthur, Martha, William, Harry, Lester, Hilda and Esther. Mr. Zerby is highly respected wherever he is known.

JAMES H. GULDIN. The Guldins were Pietists of Switzerland. The Hocks were Moravians from the same place. Rev. Samuel K. Guldin and Rev. Christopher Lutz were classmates at Old University of Berne, Switzerland, from 1679 to 1689. In 1692 Guldin was appointed pastor at Steetlen, three miles east of Berne. Shortly after entering the university, Guldin passed through a great spiritual experience and became a Pietist. Prof. Hadorn says that Guldin, Schumacher, Lutz and Dohcs were the fathers of Swiss Pietism. These church fathers became so bitterly proscribed that Guldin emigrated to Philadelphia in 1710, and all of the Guldins of America are descended from him.

The Guldins were originally of St. Gall, Switzerland. Melchior Guldin was born at St. Gall in 1529; was made guildmaster in 1550; senator in 1583, and died in 1586. Melchior Guldin, Jr., was born in 1571 and died in 1645. He was a town clerk in 1604. Paul Gul- din was born of Evangelical parents in 1577. In 1597 he joined the Jesuits, became professor of mathematics at Grazt and Vienna, and died at Grazt, Nov. 3, 1648. He was the author of five Latin books.

(I) Hans Joachim Guldin was born at St. Gall, Switzerland, and became a citizen of Berne in 1633. The maiden name of his wife was Susanna Tribolo, and their children were: Hans, born Feb. 4, 1635; Anna, born Sept. 22, 1636; Samuel, born Sept. 22, 1638.

(II) Hans Joachim T. Guldin, born at Berne, Feb. 4, 1635, married Anna Maria Koch, and their children were: Maria, born Aug. 24, 1660, died in infancy; Anna Maria, born March 19, 1662, died in infancy; Samuel K., born Aug. 8, 1664, died Dec. 31, 1745; Anna Magdalena, born June 16, 1667.

(III) Rev. Samuel K. Guldin, born at Berne, June 8, 1664, married Mary Magdalena Malacrida, and came to Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 24, 1710, and died at Roxboro, Dec. 31, 1745. His children were: Samuel M., born Nov. 8, 1693, at Steetlen, Switzerland; Maria Catherine, born at Steetlen, Jan. 8, 1696; Christoffel, born at Berne, July 17, 1697; Emanuel Fred, born at Berne, March 13, 1699.

IV) Samuel M. Guldin settled in Oley township, Berks county, in 1718, and on May 22, 1722, he married Anna Malacrida. By her he was a blacksmith and farmer. His children were: Samuel; Susanna; John; Mary Magdalena m. Frederick Leinbach; Frederick; Daniel H.; Joanna Esther; and Clara Elizabeth.

V) Daniel H. Guldin was born in Oley, April 20, 1735, and married Catherine Elizabeth Gebhart. He acquired a farm of 260 acres, adjoining the Yellow House property on the north. His children were: Samuel died in infancy; Daniel; John; Jacob; Samuel (2) died in infancy; John G.; Elizabeth; George; Abraham; Samuel (3); Frederick; Peter; David.

VI) John G. Guldin, born Oct. 18, 1759, married Mary Cronrath, and died June 13, 1852. His children were: Daniel; Samuel c. m. Catharine DeHart Ludwig; Rev. John C., D. D.; David; Charles; Abraham C.; and Isaac.

VII) Abraham C. Guldin, born Aug. 10, 1821, married Susanna Y. Weaver, and died April 8, 1884. His wife was born Aug. 23, 1812, and died May 14, 1876. Their children were: Isaac W.; Jeremiah; Albert; Hannah and George.

(VIII) Isaac W. Guldin, born in Amity township, Berks county, Dec. 4, 1834, died in the fall of 1907. He was a well-known and highly respected citizen of that county. For many years he had been a music teacher of Reading. He was twice married. On Dec. 31, 1857, he m. Amelia Van Buskirk. On April 24, 1884, he m. (second) Amanda Hoch Custer. Both of his wives were granddaughters of Eva Rosina Lutz Ludwig.

IX) James H. Guldin, a farmer of Maxatawny township, was born in this township, on the old Guldin farm, March 25, 1867. Reared to farm life, he has continued in this line of work all his life. At first he worked for his father, but upon coming of age he started to farm for himself on the old Charles Miller farm near Monterey. His education was a limited one because of the many demands made upon him in his boyhood, but he has added to his knowledge by observation and experience and is now a very well informed man. In 1892 Mr. Guldin moved to Longswamp township where he lived some time, and then went to Litzenberg, in Lehigh county, but in 1896 he settled in Maxatawny township, and has purchased the old home- stead from the other heirs. It consists of 123 acres of excellent land upon which he made his home until 1901, when he sold the property to Phaon Heffner, and bought the old Stephen Leibelsberger farm near Maxatawny Zion Church, consisting of 92 acres of valuable land. The barn on this property was built in 1828 by Leibelsberger. The farm is well stocked with eleven head of cattle and ten head of horses. Praterinally Mr. Guldin is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M. of New Smithville, Pa. He has been active in public affairs, and is serving his third year as school director; and he has also been delegate to various county conventions, and been judge of elections, etc. He and his family are members of Zion Union Church of Maxatawny township, of which he has served as deacon.

On Sept. 4, 1885, Mr. Guldin married Nellie C. Kershner, a daughter of George W. and Ellen (Shomo) Kershner, of Hamburg. Eight children have been born to them: Charles J.; Solon R.; Mamie M.; Grover J.; Eva S.; James S.; Lawson W. and Florence M. Mr. Guldin comes of an old family whose representatives are well known throughout Pennsylvania and he himself is much respected in his community.

Mahlon Guldin, son of Reuben W., of Maxatawny township, was born on his father's homestead, Jan. 25, 1865, and was there reared and received his early education. Later he attended the Keystone State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1879, and subsequently he took a post-graduate course at the same institution. He commenced teaching in his native township when but seventeen years of age, and he has since taught twenty-two years in his home district, besides six years in a high school in the county, which is a remarkable record. 'Mr. Guldin is one of the active teachers of Berks county. During the summer months he is engaged in various lines. Since 1896, he has been engaged in the poultry business, and is much interested in it, he making a specialty of fancy poultry, especially buff and partridge cochin.

Mr. Guldin is a Democrat, and takes an active part in public affairs, serving as register and assessor of the district and has been sent as delegate to numerous county conventions. He is a member of Camp 141, P. O. S. of A., of Rothrocksville, of which he is past president, and he was district president of District No. 6. During his incumbency a new district was instituted at Longswamp. Mr. Guldin is a member of the Reformed Church, and his wife is a member of the Lutheran denomination of Maxatawny Zion Church.

On Nov. 18, 1893, Mr. Guldin was married to Miss Stella M. Fisher, a daughter of Charles S. and Emma (Geiger) Fisher of Maxatawny, and the daughter of Benjamin Fisher, of Greenwich. Two children have been born of this marriage, Ira C. R. and Homer F.

Reuben W. Guldin, the father of Mahlon Guldin, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, Feb. 18, 1818, and was reared in this district, coming later to Maxatawny township, and settling on the State road near Monterey, upon a farm consisting of 123 acres of valuable land. He farmed all his life and lived retired, from active labor six years prior to his death, which occurred in June, 1894, when he was seventy-six years old. He was a member of Maxatawny Zion Church, and dead, where he is buried. For many years he was a church officer and was a good man, held in great respect. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Geschwind, and they had fifteen children: Sarah; Garion; Matilda; Valentine; Jeremiah; David (died aged seven years); Elias; Ellen; Kate; Amanda; Alice; Reuben; Mahlon; Senora and James.

ALLISON F. MCGOWAN, who died at his home in Reading, May 24, 1897, was for many years prominently identified with the business interests of the city, as a dealer in coal, lime and sand. Mr. McGowan was born at Geiger's Mills, Union township, Berks county. Son of John and Elizabeth (Geiger) McGowan. John McGowan, whose father was of Irish extraction, was a well-known agriculturist of Union township, where his entire life was spent. He and his wife, Elizabeth Geiger, were leading members of St.
Paul's ("Old Forest") M. E. Church. They had the following children: George, James, John F., Allison F., Howard, Sarah, Mary, Elizabeth, Harriet, Emily, Kate and William.

Allison F. McGowan received his education in the Union township schools, and afterward engaged for a short time in teaching. He then became a clerk in his father's store, and after Mr. High's retirement the business was carried on by Mr. Geiger. When the latter gentleman left the business, Mr. McGowan assumed charge, and carried this on until his death, the enterprise being very successful. Mr. McGowan was always considered a man of much business ability, careful and industrious, and he was rated one of the city's successful and representative men. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., of Reading, and of St. Peter's M. E. Church of Reading. He was a great lover of music, and was the choir-master of St. Peter's church for twenty years.

Mr. McGowan married Miss Louisa Geiger, the daughter of Levi and Mary (Zerr) Geiger, and to this union there were born three children: Howard L. and Allison J., both deceased; and William H., who is engaged in the manufacture of underwear at Nos. 740-742 Chestnut street, the firm being known as the Eclipse Knitting Company, and who is the organist and choirmaster of St. Barnabas P. E. church, Reading.

DR. OLIVER H. FISHER was born Oct. 23, 1830, in Douglass township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Silas W. and Anna (Hartman) Fisher, and grandson of Jacob and Anna (Weaver) Fisher and of Conrad and Elizabeth (Richards) Hartman. The other children of Silas W. and Anna (Hartman) Fisher were: Wellington (deceased), Luther, Jacob, and Rebecca (m. Alfred Dietrich).

Oliver H. Fisher was educated in the common schools of Douglass township and in Kallyneyne Academy, Boyertown, under Prof. I. B. Hankey, principal. In the fall of 1870 he entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and in the spring of 1873 graduated. He engaged immediately in the practice of his profession at Amityville, Berks county, Pa., in the fall of the same year went to Pikeville, where he practised until 1879. In the latter year he moved to Pottstown, and also took a position in the law office of W. H. Findley, to whom he rendered many years of service. In 1880 he moved to Gratzers Ford, on the banks of the Perkiomen, in Montgomery county. In 1885 he came to Reading where he has been practicing for twenty-four years.

Dr. Fisher has been married twice. On Oct. 23, 1873, he m. Mary Heilig, daughter of Edward Heilig, of Pottstown. To this union were born three children: Charlie, Lester and Edward. In February, 1883, Mrs. Fisher died at Graters Ford. In 1890 Dr. Fisher m. (second) Ida Wilson, daughter of Joseph Wilson, of Reading.

RAUENZAHN. Christian Rauenzahn, a native of Manheim, Germany, where the family was one of prominence and wealth, was a son of Herr von Rauenzahn. Christian Rauenzahn and his native country country try for cause, being at that time well supplied with means, and settled in Richmond township, Berks Co., Pa., where he became the owner of about 700 acres of land, but he died in very humble circumstances. He is buried in a private burial ground on the old Weidner farm below Pricetown. The name which was first given to his son, John, was Roman Catholic; but later he took the name of his mother, Christiana. Rauenzahn was survived by his wife, Hannah, who died at an advanced age in 1836. Among their children were: Gideon; Isaac; John; Christian; David, who lives in Ohio; a son who died in Indiana; and Mrs. Daniel Ballett. Christian Rauenzahn was the owner of a large brick building which was begun in 1837 and was completed in 1838. This was a rare and valuable book, and the commissioners of the Centennial, held at Philadelphia in 1876, made some effort to secure it to place on exhibition, sending a man from Philadelphia to Pricetown, he however failing to secure it. The privilege passed from Christian to his son, Gideon, and from the latter to his son John, who procured it at public sale, and was sold by him to a concern in Philadelphia.

Gideon Rauenzahn, son of Christian, was born in Richmond township, and died upon his 231-acre farm as a Ruscombmanor representative, in about 1867, when nearly eighty years of age. He was a stone mason by trade, an occupation which was adopted and followed by seven of his sons. He married Elizabeth Brown, daughter of Daniel Brown of Pricetown, and they had a family of thirteen children, as follows: Solomon met his death by drowning, in 1849; Sarah m. Benjamin Wentzel; Hannah m. Daniel Mannville, and in Oklahoma; David m. at Philadelphia in 1887; William B., and Daniel was a stonemason at Pricetown; Jacob, carried on the trade and Reading; Eliz-abeth passed from Samuel to Israel, stonemason of Reading, met his death in a railroad accident; Gideon was a stone mason of Reading; John, a stone mason of Philadelphia, is now deceased; Mary m. Amos Brown, of Stowe, Pa., and Emeline died young.

William B. Rauenzahn was born May 4, 1831, in Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, and was reared on his father's farm, upon which he worked until past eighteen years of age, at which time he learned the blacksmith's trade in Ontelounee township, with Abraham Hughes. This occupation he followed for two years, and then went to Perry township, where he spent a like period at the trade, and in 1857 he came to Reading, where he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. He was a fze-welder for this company at the pipe mill for nine years, and altogether worked for this company as a blacksmith for fifteen years. Mr. Rauen- zahn is one of the few living men in this locality who have shod oxen, this occurring in 1850, 1851 and 1852 while he worked at his trade in Ontelounee and Manheim townships. Among the earliest customers and many Quakers, among them the Wileys, Perkinses, Smiths and Penorses, and Dr. Wiley had a yoke of oxen which were shod by Mr. Rauenzahn on numerous occasions. These big, strong beasts were used at the plows, as well as in wagons, and Wash Wiley's team of oxen was known as the "nosey" team of mkrmakersville. Mr. Rauenzahn recalls many interesting incidents of his younger days, among which might be mentioned the following: It was during his term of apprenticeship, and he was working out during harvesting and harvesting time, to earn spending money, his employer being Quaker Smith. They were hauling hay in hay with four good horses, when the large wagon-load of hay became "stuck" and no amount of urging could make the horses go another inch. At this time the yoke of big oxen were hatched up to the wagon, and to the surprise of all these beasts pulled the load away with comparative ease, which the four horses could not budge. Mr. Rauenzahn was a member of the Reading police force under Mayor Charles F. Evans from 1873 to 1879. Since Kaper with him he has lived over 60 years, his retirement being due to his incapacitation from long-time service. He is a case of hiccoughs, which continued for seven weeks. The case puzzled physicians and attracted wide-spread attention, local and metropolitan papers alike giving much space to it and remedies being sent to Mr. Rauenzahn from over the country. He was eventually cured by Dr. A. N. Seidel, of Reading, who used the use of a common remedy. For many years Mr. Rauen- zahn has been a member of Salome Lodge of Odd Fellows No. 105, and the American Mechanics, both of Reading. He is a Republican in politics, and during 1856, when James Buchanan was elected president, he served as judge of election in his district. He and his family are members of the Evangelical Association.

In 1858, R. Rauenzahn married to Willia Bush, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Brown) Bush born Aug. 17, 1830, who died Sept. 15, 1891, and they had these children: Henry B.; Solomon and Thomas, who died young; Emanuel, who resides in Milwaukee, Wis.; Saltie, who died young; Emma, who met her death in a mining accident, in the silk mill disaster; and Zipporah, m. to Allen Levan.

Henry B. Rauenzahn was born Aug. 16, 1854, in Ontelaunee township, and as a boy came to Reading, where he spent his school days. For many years he was a sand contractor, but in 1886 he embarked in the hotel business at Tenth and Green streets, and since 1898 he has conducted the “North End Hotel.” He is very popular in his district, and enjoys a large and lucrative business. Fraternally he is connected with Salome Lodge No. 105, I. O. O. F., Reading.

Mr. Rauenzahn’s marriage to Mary Hartman, Aug. 7, 1878. She is the daughter of Henry and Hannah (Lease) Hartman, granddaughter of John Hartman, and great-granddaughter of Jacob Bowers, who lived to the remarkable age of 103 years. To Mr. and Mrs. Rauenzahn there have been born six children: Willia Belle; Lillie; and two deceased; Harry S.; Luther; Naomi; and Lydia; an infant son; Emma; an infant son; Edith; an infant son; Dorothy, and two who died in infancy.

Harry S. Rauenzahn was born July 3, 1880, and died April 11, 1909, in Reading, Pa. He attended the public schools until sixteen years of age, at which time he learned the coach-painting trade at the Keystone Wagon works from Charles Dietrich, now deceased. This he followed at Reading for nine years, after which he worked at the Pullman shops at Wilmington, Del., for nine months, and subsequently returned to Reading, and assisted in the erection of the 126-foot brick stacks at the Philadelphia & Reading shops. In 1904 Mr. Rauenzahn became a trolley car conductor for the Reading United Traction Co., and then he continued until his death. He was a resident of the Thirty-third ward, and a brick residence at No. 2044 Kutztown road, purchased by him in 1905. He was a member of Camp No. 663, P. O. S. of A., of Reading, and Tent No. 446, K. O. T. M., also of this city. With his family he belonged to Grace Reformed Church. He was a member of the Masons and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. Rauenzahn was a progressive man in every way and a thorough conservative.

On Sept. 29, 1904, Mr. Rauenzahn was married to Anna Wolf, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Houck) Wolf of Chester county, and they had two children: Luther E., born Nov. 4, 1905, died July 22, 1906; and Marie E.

JONATHAN G. LEINBACH, of Reading, senior member of the J. G. Leinbach Company, comes of an old Berks county family. He was born near Leesport, June 14, 1837, son of Frederick and Maria (Guldin) Leinbach. His father was a farmer, and, as was the custom of the county. While he thoroughly learned the blacksmith's trade and followed it more or less all his life, he also engaged in farming near Leesport, giving the major part of his time to this work. Later in life his farming interests were all in Exeter township. He died in Reading at the age of sixty. The maiden name was Maria Guldin, lived to the age of sixty. Only five of their family still survive, namely: Daniel, Albert, Mahlon, Jonathan G. and Mary, the latter being now the widow of James Levan, and a resident of Reading.

Jonathan G. Leinbach acquired most of his education in the public schools of Exeter township, and at an early age he began helping his father in the blacksmith shop. His inclination for a commercial career early showed itself, however, and when but eleven years of age he obtained a position with William Brumbaugh, a manufacturer of cloth, and remained with him for several years. He left that work to go to York, Pa., to run a woolen-mill, and spent two years there, after which he returned to Reading and entered the employ of the Wyomissing Woolen Company in their factory on South Fifth street. This occupied his attention for ten years. He then moved to Reading, where he was in the lumber business during the Civil war. In 1862 he enlisted in Company I, 128th Pa. V. I., and during his term of enlistment he saw considerable active service. He was taken prisoner at Chancellorsville and incarcerated for a time in the famous Libby prison.

Mr. Leinbach’s first connection with the Reading Woolen Mills was as manager under Mr. Fisher, and later under Robert M. Shouse. In 1867 he was taken into partnership, and the firm name became R. M. Shouse & Co. They did a considerable business then, employing fifty hands and having an annual production valued at $100,000. Their association continued until 1875, when Mr. Leinbach became for a short time the sole owner. But he very soon formed a partnership with Aaron S. Leinbach and William F. F. Davis, under the firm name of J. G. Leinbach & Co. A little later John Shadel was added to the firm, while in 1878 the personnel was again changed. During this time the interest was purchased by Mr. Leinbach. Two years later the firm was enlarged by taking in three of Mr. Leinbach’s brothers, Daniel, Albert and Mahlon, and in 1893 was inaugurated the policy of giving an interest in the business to certain of the older employees, who had been in the factory from twenty to thirty years. This is the only enterprise in Reading in which the hands have been permitted to share in the profits, and the benefits resulting from this generosity of the employers have been mutual. The only surviving members of the old firm are Mr. Leinbach and his three brothers, and the former has carried on the responsibility for the firm ever since 1893. In 1903 the business was incorporated with Mr. Leinbach as president; A. E. Leinbach, vice-president; and S. W. Reiff, secretary and treasurer.

When the firm was organized in 1875 additional ground was purchased, improvements made in the plant, and new machinery introduced. Liberality in these respects has always marked the management of the factory, and it has been maintained constantly at a high level of equipment. In 1903 an addition 50 x 120 feet, four stories in height, was erected. More than two hundred hands are now required in the operation. The manufacture of jeans has been discontinued since 1898* and the product is now confined largely to worsted goods. The output of the business has steadily increased, and the goods, having a superior reputation, are sold all over the United States, after being manufactured into pants and vests. Much of the success achieved is due to the efforts of Mr. J. G. Leinbach and his able assistants, whose progressive spirit, enterprise, and liberal qualities have ever been apparent in the conduct of the business.

Mr. Leinbach’s other interests are large and varied; among them may be mentioned the Mt. Penn Gravity Railroad Company, of which he has been president since 1897, and the East Reading Railroad, of which he is vice-president and a director. Although the city of Reading was normally Democratic at that time by over six hundred, Mr. Leinbach lost by the small margin of 163 votes—a remarkable demonstration of popularity. Both he and his wife are members and liberal supporters of the Reformed Church.
EDWIN L. HETTINGER is a great-grandson of Heinrich Hettinger, a native of Rheineck (later Bietigheim—the Pennsylvania Archives, Vol. V, Second Series, page 637, spell it Bietigheim), in the Kingdom of Wurttemberg, Germany, born in 1760-61, who came to America in 1805, from Amsterdam, landing at Philadelphia Sept. 5th. He made the voyage on the vessel, brought with him his wife Catharine, then aged thirty-three years, and their five children: Heinrich, aged thirteen; Lorenz, aged twelve; Christina, aged eleven; bernard, aged eight; and Mathias, aged six.

After his arrival in this country Heinrich Hettinger lived in the vicinity of the Centerville or in that city itself, later coming to Bernville, Berks county, where he died and is buried. His wife Catharine Miller, born in 1769, bore him seven children in all, the five previously mentioned having been born in the Fatherland, and the youngest two in America. We have the following record of this family: Heinrich, a cooper by trade, lived in Centerville, in Penn township; he had sons Harry, Joseph and John. Lorenz is mentioned below.

Christina Eva probably married John Brossman, as one of the daughters of this family who were born in Pennsylvania and who went to David Kurtz. Bernhard lived in Heidelberg township, farming; his children were Jonathan, William, Levi, James and Mary Ann. Mathias, who lived in Centre township, near Bellemere's Church, had children, Reubena, Adam, Henry, Kate, Julia and Susan. Christian lived in Bern township, he was buried there; his children were Tristan and Emma; his children were John and Lizzie. Lorenz Hettinger, grandfather of Edwin L. Hettinger, was born Nov. 22, 1792, in Bietigheim, Germany. Coming to America with his parents he lived in Philadelphia about twenty-seven years old, following shoemaking, which he learned in young manhood. He then came to Berks county, locating in Bern township and later in Penn township, where he tended Hettinger's Locks, on the Union Canal, for many years. He died at Mount Pleasant in July, 1868, when about seventy-five years old, and is buried at Bern Church, of which he was a prominent Lutheran member, serving as deacon and elder of the congregation. His wife, Catharine Lambert, of Lower Heidelberg township, died when past fifty years of age. Then and even later they were as follows: Mary Ann, Samuel Schaefer; Henry lives at Bern; Augustus is a resident of Wyomissing; Harrison is out West; John died in Virginia, where his family still lives, at Manassas; Lydia m. Benjamin Grimes, of Robesonia, Pa.; Levi L. was the father of Edwin L. Hettinger.

Levi L. Hettinger was born April 5, 1846 at Mount Pleasant, Penn township, Berks county, and was reared upon the farm. But when fourteen years old he commenced boating upon the new abandoned Union Canal, and he also did such work on the Pennsylvania and Schuylkill Canal lines as was being done from John Moyer, of Bernville. He has followed this trade ever since, working in western Berks county until 1882, when he settled in Reading. He and his family have resided in their own home at No. 129 South Tenth street, for many years.

Levi L. Hettinger married Sarah A. Hafer, daughter of Jacob and Anna (Mel) Hafer, and granddaughter of Heinrich and Kate (Zweitzig-Lorah) Hafer, of Muhlenberg township, and five children were born to them: Rosanna, Charles (died at the age of one month), Mathias (died eight months), Litie J. (died aged two years, four months, seven days), Edwin L. and Richard W. The last named was formerly a soldier in Porto Rico and is now a clerk at headquarters, Division of the Philip- pine Islands, War Department. All of this family were members of Grace Lutheran Church at Reading, of which Mr. Hettinger has been deacon, and he also officiated in that capacity at the Bern Church.

Edwin L. Hettinger was born Jan. 27, 1879, in Mount Pleasant (Hetrichstown), Berks county, and received his education in the public schools of Reading. He tioned the Inter-State Commercial College, at Reading. He had previously done good work in that line in the high school, having been on the honor roll in the commercial department in 1897. He was the high school captain in 1899. Following his graduation from the Inter-State College Mr. Hettinger became a clerk in the service of the Pennsylvania Optical Company, with whom he remained four and a half years, when he became assistant credit man with Gately & Britton. He continued to serve in that capacity and when the partnership was dissolved, after which he took his present position with the G. M. Britton Company, of Reading, as manager of the office outfitting department. Mr. Hettinger is commodore of the Reading Canoe Club, which holds annual river carnivals. Since 1906 he has been a member of the Berks County Historical Society.

On June 7, 1900, Mr. Hettinger was married to Miss Eloise Streeker, daughter of Dr. Herman and Evelyn (Tarrach) Streeker, of Reading. Her father was a noted sculptor and famous naturalist, and his collection of butterflies and moths, the largest in America, was sold seven years after his death to the Field Museum, of Chicago, for $20,000; during his lifetime he had refused several large offers for them. He was an authority on lepidoephta. Dr. Streeker had no children, but a large family of nephews in Cincinnati, Ohio, and Eloise, who married Mr. Hettinger. Mr. and Mrs. Hettinger have had four children: Herman S.; Edwin S. and Eveline S. (both of whom died in infancy), and Eloise S. Mr. Hettinger is a member of Grace Lutheran Church and has been an active worker, having served several years as treasurer of the Sunday-school. Mrs. Hettinger is a member of Christ Episcopal Church.

J. O. GLASE, senior member of the carpet and drapery firm of O.O. & Co., of Reading, is a substantial citizen of that city and is prominent in business, political and fraternal circles. Mr. Glase was born in 1856, in Oley township, Berks county, Pa., son of Benneville A. and Rebecca V. R. (High) Glase.

Peter Glase, grandfather of J. O., was a resident of Friedensburg, in Oley township. He made his last will and testament on May 28, 1860, and this was probated Aug. 1, 1868. This will is on record in Vol. XII, p. 56, and his executors are mentioned William and Benneville, his sons. Peter Glase was twice married. His first wife was Mary Adams, and his second, Catharine Weismer. To his first marriage were born eight children: William, Benneville, Levi, James, Matilda, Amelia, Rebecca, and Mary. To the second marriage came five: Jacob, Peter, Alfred, Caroline and Anna, all carpenters.

Benneville A. Glase, who was also a native of Oley township, was engaged all his life in a general mercantile business. He died in 1882, in his sixty-second year, and is buried at Friedensburg. He kept a general store at Friedensburg, and was a well known graduate of that place. He was a Lutheran in his religious belief, while his widow worshiped in the Evangelical Church. In politics he was a Republican, and for many years served as postmaster at Friedensburg. Three children were born to them and his wife: Emma, m. to C. S. Ghear- hard, D. D., deceased; a sister, Mrs. Lensing, of Cincinnati, Ohio; and John O., who is mentioned below.

J. O. Glase was educated in the public schools of Oley township, the Oley Academy and was a member of the class of 1878 of Lafayette College. As a boy he clerked in his father's store, succeeding to the business at the time of his father's death. This he carried on until 1892, when in company with Edward S. Lichtenthaler, he established the business of J. O. Lichtenthaler Brothers, which he subsequently carried on by Henry A. Hoff & Son. It is not only the oldest establishment of its kind in Reading, but is the only exclusive carpet and draping house in the city; the retail salesroom on the first floor at No. 408 Penn street, is 20 x 234 feet, and gives employment to over forty hands. It has been a landmark in the business district ever since its establishment.

Mr. Glase is a member of the Masonic fraternity, holding membership in Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M., Kutztown, of which he is a past master; Elks Charitable Order, No. 377, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T., of which he is a past commander; Enoch Lodge of Perfection; Zerubbabel Council, F. J., 16th degree; Evergreen Chapter, Rose Croix, 18th degree; Caldwell Sovereign Consistory, S. C., 32d degree; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is a charter member of Reading Lodge of Perfection. He also belongs to Minnehaha Lodge, K. P. and Oley Castle, K. G. E.

In 1882 Mr. Glase was married to Alice M. Weidler, daughter of John Weidler of Boyertown, and in 1889, he married his wife (Blickenderfer) Weidler, and to this union have been born two sons, Paul E. and Claude H., both of whom are graduates of the Reading high school and work in their father's establishment.

HENRY CHRISTIAN HIRNER. Among the self-made men of this section of Pennsylvania, who won a prominent position for themselves in the business world, was Henry Christian Hirner, who died Sept. 30, 1890, in Reading, in which city he had lived and died from 1880. Mr. Hirner was born in April, 1833, at Stuttgart, Germany.

In his native country he learned the trade of stone cutter, and on coming to America in 1855 he located at Wilkes-Barre, where he soon became an extensive marble and granite monument and tombstone manufacturer, employing on an average of fifteen men. He made some of the finest monuments in the eastern part of the State, including the Dr. Sterl monument, which he erected at Wilkes-Barre, and which cost $3,000. Owing to ill health Mr. Hirner was compelled to retire from business in 1879; and during that and the four following years, he resided in the valuable real estate holdings, and went on a trip for his health to California, which, however, did not benefit him much. He returned to Pennsylvania, and located at Reading, where he built a large brick residence at the corner of Seventeenth and Hask streets, and this was his home at the time of his death. His widow resided here until her own death. Mr. Hirner was a member of the Masonic fraternity and the Odd Fellows at Wilkes-Barre, and was buried at that place, where a large monument marks his last resting place.

Mr. Hirner was twice married, his first wife dying young. In 1877 he m. (second) Christiana Goetz, who was born Sept. 26, 1849, daughter of Philip and Catharine (Scheiffly) Goetz, natives of Weilheim, near Stuttgart, Germany, who came to America in 1851. They located in Reading, where Philip Goetz kept a hotel at the corner of Fourth and Bingaman streets, and later one at Chestnut, below Third street, where his death occurred. E. S. Lichtenthaler was the Lutheran Church. Mr. and Mrs. Hirner had no children. Mr. and Mrs. Hirner died Feb. 24, 1900, aged sixty-eight years. She was survived by her sister, Mrs. William Heberle, No. 309 North Second street, Reading.

EZRA H. HERBINE, now residing in Amity township, Berks county, is a native of Oley township, the early home of the Herbines (Herbine) in Pennsylvania, the family having been planted here by Peter Herbine.

Levi Herbine, father of Ezra H., was born in Oley township April 5, 1812, and died there Oct. 14, 1891. In his earlier years he worked for neighboring farmers, and later for his brother Daniel for a number of years. He then bought a farm of ninety-six acres in the southwestern part of Oley, and there he made his home from 1851 or 1852 until 1885. He then retired from active work, and purchased a homestead in the Amity township—He married in 1842 to the oldest daughter of Count Lichtenthaler, and there he resided until his death. He was prominent in public affairs as a Democrat, and was at one time auditor of the township. He and his family are buried at Oley Churches. He married Sarah Herbine, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Endy) Herbine. She was born Aug. 20, 1815, and died May 22, 1891. Eleven children were born of this union: Susan m. James Brumbach, of Pleasantville; Levi lives on the homefarm in Oley; Emma is unmarried and lives with her brother Levi; Sarah is the widow of Henry Hertzog; Mary is the widow of Abraham Deeter; Daniel lives at Birdsboro; Abraham died young; Ezra H.; Hannah died young; Albert lives at Friedensburg; and one was still-born.

Levi H. Herbine was born Jan. 23, 1853, and attended the common schools and later Freelander Academy, now Ursinus College, at Collegeville. He later took a course in Farr's Business College at Reading. For several years he was bookkeeper for J. L. Reppier, a wholesale and retail coal merchant at Reading, and then worked for his father on the farm in Oley from 1875 to 1881. In the spring of 1881 he began farming on one of his father's farms in Amity, on the Manatawny, between Yellowhouse and Earlville, and that was his home for twenty-eight years. From 1881 to 1891 he was a tenant, and then his father dying, he purchased the farm, which was known as the Jacob Buchinger farm, and owned by Mr. Buchinger, who at that time lived on a farm on the other side of the farm he purchased it and contained sixty-seven acres, forty-seven perches. He sold this in the winter of 1909 to Augustus M. High, postmaster at Reading. Mr. Herbine is now living retired on one mile south of Amityville. He was very successful in all that he undertook, but he always found time to take a keen and active interest in the welfare of the Democratic party. For six years he was school director, for nine years township auditor, and a number of times delegate to county conventions. He was honest and upright, and has held ever the esteem of the general public. He died Aug. 21, 1912.

On Nov. 15, 1877, Mr. Herbine married Sarah Baum, of Wooster, Wayne Co., Ohio, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Zacharias) Baum. Mr. Baum was a native of Berks county, but in 1865 moved to Wooster, Ohio, where he was engaged in farming until his death, on a farm of 160 acres. Both he and Mrs. Baum are buried at Wooster. They had ten children, as follows: William, of Kansas City, Mo.; Daniel, of Sedalia, Mo.; Mandilla, m. to Robert Beard, of Toledo, Ohio; Charles, who is buried at Wooster; Ammon, who died in 1909, at Indianapolis, Ind. and is buried at Austin, Ind.; Henry, m. to M. J.; Sarah, Mrs. Herbine; Maberry, deceased, and buried at Wooster; Emma, m. to Joseph Felix, of Toledo, Ohio; Kate, twin to Emma, unmarried, of Toledo. To Mr. and Mrs. Herbine have been born three children: (1) Ed- winna graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in 1901, and has on school five terms, four at Locust Dale, in Amity township, Berks county, Pennsylvania. She married Dr. J. H. Ludwig, of Boyertown, and they have one daughter, Mimi. (2) Estella B. graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in the class of 1903, and is engaged in teaching. She is the first term in Douglass township, at Manger's school, three terms in Manatawy, and in the school of 1905 went to Spring City where she still is. (3) Henry L. is a farmer in Amity township. He m. Mamie Marquett. No children.
JOHN PETER EPLER was born in Bern township, Berks county, Jan. 22, 1836, and died at Reading Dec. 29, 1905, aged sixty-nine years, eleven months and seven days. During the earlier part of his life he was a farmer, but in 1865 he removed to Reading and worked for the Schuykill Navigation Company as a member of the repair gang, and continued with them for three years. He then was employed at Bushong's furnace for more than a quarter of a century. Later he became watchman for the Excelsior Brass Company, but in less than a year he was burned to death while at the performance of his duty. He is interred in the Charles Evans cemetery.

On Aug. 30, 1861, Mr. Epler was married to Rebecca Strubble, daughter of Jacob and Annie (Moyer) Strubble, and they had one son, George B. The late Mr. Epler was a consistent member of St. John's Lutheran church, to which congregation his family belong.

Mrs. Epler resides at No. 474 Schuykill avenue, where she conducts a small stationery, confectionery, cigar and tobacco store, and she is well respected in the community.

George B. Epler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Peter Epler, was born Dec. 28, 1861, in Muhlenberg township, where he resides with his mother. He is a stationary engineer, and is employed at the Tragle Cordage Company's works. He married Kate Mahla, daughter of Frederick Mahla, of Germany, who married Louisa Hoffner. Mr. and Mrs. Epler have two children, Stella M., m. to John J. Bidden, now of Providence, R. I.; and George L., living in Reading.

The late John Peter Epler was a grandson of Jacob Epler who married an Epler, but nothing definite is known of him further than that, and that among his children was John Peter Epler, Sr., father of the late John Peter Epler. The father was born in Bern township, in September, 1804, and died Sept. 2, 1877, being buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He was a farmer, and later a shoemaker, and worked at this trade until his death which occurred on Jefferson street in Reading. His wife was Mary Koch, who died in 1847. Their children were: Annie and Catherine died young; Mary m. Michael Wonderle; Louisa m. Irwin Moyer; Aaron was killed in the Civil war; John Peter.

MARTIN M. WITHERS (deceased), who was for many years a prominent citizen of Reading, Berks county, was born in Lancaster county in 1839, son of John G. and Catherine (Moyer) Withers, and grandson of George Withers, a native of Virginia, who removed to Lancaster county when a young man, following agricultural pursuits until his death.

John G. Withers, father of Martin, was born in Lancaster county, Nov. 26, 1798, and was a life-long farmer. He married Catherine Moyer, born Feb. 3, 1806, who died Feb. 6, 1863. He died June 16, 1867. They had children as follows: Franklin; Elizabeth; George; John; Rebecca; Martin M.; Samuel; Elias, who is still living and resides in Spring township, Berks county; and Catherine.

Martin M. Withers received his education in the schools of Lancaster and Berks counties and his early life was spent in agricultural pursuits. After locating in Reading he worked on the old Union Canal until 1869, but the latter part of his life was spent in retirement. He was married April 13, 1847, to Miss Emiline Esenwein, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Kerst) Klapp, and two children were born to this union: Mary Catherine, who died aged five months; and William, who is employed in the U. S. postal service as a clerk. John Withers was a member of St. John's Reformed Church. His political views made him a Democrat.

JOHN ACHENBACH, a resident of Reading for the past forty years, was born in Oderdorf, Hessen, Germany, Nov. 12, 1850, son of Jacob and Margaret Achenbach, well-to-do people, the former an official and highly educated man. John Achenbach passed his boyhood in his native land, and was early in life made accustomed to farm work, but after coming to America he abandoned agricultural pursuits entirely and spent his time employed solely at moldering. He landed in New York City in 1866, but came direct to Reading and made that his permanent home.

Mr. Achenbach's first work was at molding at Seventh and Chestnut streets, and he worked there for a long time. In June, 1875, he revisited Germany, returning in November of the same year. Resuming his former position he took a place at the Scott Works. There he remained till February, 1905, when he retired from active work.

On July 21, 1891, Mr. Achenbach was married to Emma Elizabeth, daughter of John S. Zimmerman, and his wife, Margaret Reesen, (who both belonged to some of the old established families of Berks county) and granddaughter of Christopher Zimmerman. Three children were born to this union, but only one survives, a daughter named Martha Esther, at the present time a student in the school at Fourth and Elm streets. The family resides at North Sixth street, and are members of the German Lutheran church.

DR. A. ESSENWEIN, the well-known druggist and pharmacist of Reading, and proprietor and manufacturer of Kura-Derma, was born in the city of Philadelphia, in 1834, son of Frederick and Mary (Babb) Esenwein, whose other three children are deceased.

Dr. Esenwein was educated in the schools of Reading and Philadelphia, and as a boy found employment as a clerk in a dry goods store. He followed this line of business until sixteen years of age and then apprenticed himself to the drug business with Auguy & Dixon, remaining with that firm four years. During his stay with that firm he attended lectures at the Philadelphia College of Medicine, and was later graduated from the degree of M. D. Dr. Esenwein then engaged in the practice of his profession, but opened a drug store at Ninth and Poplar streets, Philadelphia, where he continued for several years. He was appointed assistant paymaster in the United States Navy in 1861, and served as such for three years, nine months, at the end of which time he removed to the oil regions of Pennsylvania, and continued there until 1869. He then came to Reading as a clerk in S. S. Stevens' drug store, remained with that gentleman for several years, then opening a drug store on his own account which business he has continued to the present time. Dr. Esenwein has been a manufacturing pharmacist for some years, among his remedies being: Kura-Derma, the great scalp and skin remedy, Esenwein's Pectoral and Aromatic Balsam, and numerous others.

In 1850 the Doctor was married to Louisa Leibrandt, and to them were born three children, two of whom are deceased, the other being Richard C., a manufacturer of Philadelphia. Mr. Esenwein was married (second) in 1866 to Kate A. Daniels, and one child was born to this union, J. Berg, who is also with "Lippincott's Magazine." Dr. Esenwein is a member of the Sixth and Elm Street United Evangelical Church, Reading. His politics are independent.

JOSEPH G. KLAPP (deceased), for a number of years connected with the hardware interests of Reading, was born in that city Dec. 30, 1845, son of Daniel and Eliza (Ganand) Klapp.

Mr. Klapp received as good an education as the Reading schools offered, and then when nearing manhood commenced his work in the world by taking a place in a grocery. A few years later he accepted a position with the Bard Hardware Company, and remained with them some years before he left them for Stieger's Hardware Company. He had worked there sixteen years and was filling the responsible position of superintendent at the time of his death. He had in an eminent degree force and executive ability needed for such a position, and enjoyed the entire confidence of his employers. He died March 27, 1893. His death was not only an irreparable loss to the family, but a blow to the entire community, for Mr. Klapp was gifted with the rare power to win and to keep friends.

Twice married, the first wife of Mr. Klapp was Miss Sallie Young, by whom he had the following children: Emma m. to William Kline; Daniel Y., of Reading; Katie, deceased, m. to William Miller; and Abraham J. of Reading. The second Mrs. Klapp, who survives her husband, was Miss Elizabeth Brown. She became the mother of three children, namely: Mary A., a graduate of the Girl's high school of Reading and now a teacher in the city grammar schools; Anna E.; and Florence. Mrs. Klapp is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, while her late husband belonged to the First Reformed Church of Reading. In politics Mr. Klapp was a Democrat.

JOHN S. WAGNER, who died at his home in Reading, Feb. 12, 1896, was for a number of years engaged in building operations in that city, where for a long period he was prominent in political, military and business circles. Mr. Wagner was born April 10, 1837, in Wildheim, Wurttemberg, Germany, son of Michael Wagner, who died in the Fatherland.

John S. Wagner left his native country Aug. 8, 1855, and landed at New York City Oct. 5th of the same year, leaving the latter city the same day for Reading. In his own country Mr. Wagner had learned the trade of wood turning, and this he followed for a short time, but later apprenticed himself to the trade of cabinet maker with Frederick K. Henninger, on Penn street, for three years.

In May, 1859, he was employed in William B. Hertzel's planing mill, and in December of the same year he became manager of the Ringgold Band, of which he was president at the time of his death. In April, 1861, he became a member of the Ringgold Light Artillery, and enlisted with that company for three months' service during the Civil war, being appointed to the 26th Regiment under Gen. C. L. and Gen. Patterson. After the expiration of that term he re-enlisted Aug. 1, 1861, for three years service as a musician in the 23d Pa. V. I., and in Philadelphia, in August, 1862, under General Orders, No. 157, was discharged with all other regimental bands. During his service he was in the battles of Williamsport, Fair Oaks and the Seven Days fight, ending at the battle of Malvern Hill. After his discharge he returned to Reading, and resumed work for William B. Hertzel. For many years Mr. Wagner carried on building operations with Jeremiah Seiders, and in April, 1896, was the building inspector of Reading by Mayor Jacob Weidel, a position which he was reappointed in 1899 by Mayor Adam H. Leader, although of different party views than the latter. In 1871 Mr. Wagner was elected to the city council on the Democratic ticket, was re-elected in 1878, and again in 1890. In 1880 he was elected a member of the State Legislature, taking his seat in Harrisburg in January. In July, 1881, Mr. Wagner became a member of the Pennsylvania National Guards, with whom he served as a musician for nineteen years.

On Dec. 28, 1862, Mr. Wagner married Catherine M. Duerr, who survives him. Mr. Wagner was a man of marked character, a business man of much ability, and a capable public officer. The grandly popular man he made hosts of friends, and in his death many of Reading's citizens felt a personal loss. He is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery.

LEVI S. LANDIS, a prosperous business man of Reading, Pa., who was engaged in shoemaking, was born in 1848, in Washington township, Berks county, son of Jacob O. and Catherine (Stauffer) Landis, and a grandson of Henry Landis.

Henry Landis, who was a grocer and tanner by occupation was very successful in life, and at his death left a comfortable property, which has passed to his grandson, and to them were born the following children: Jacob, George, David, Aaron, Susan and Esther. The family were members of the Mennonite Church. In political matters Mr. Landis was a Republican.

Jacob O. Landis lived in Washington township, Berks county, where he received a common school education. The first in life, engaged in farming, carrying on his father's tannery in the winter months. He is now living retired at the age of eighty-three years, his wife having passed away in 1901, when seventy-five years old. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Landis: Levi S.; Elizabeth; Emma m. Enoch Rohrbach; Susan; Catherine m. James Hirtzmann; Nathan and Amos are deceased; and Ella.

Levi S. Landis received his education in the schools of Berks county, and until nineteen years of age worked on a farm, at this time apprenticing himself to the shoemaker's trade, to which he served his time with Reuben Hard bach of Lebanon. He has followed this trade ever since. He settled in Center Valley, where he remained for twenty-five years, and in 1897 came to Reading, locating at his present stand, No. 609 Schuylkill avenue, where he is doing an extensive business.

Mr. Landis was married to Mary L. Moyer, and to this union have been born two children: Herbert, a clerk in the employ of the Reading Trust Company, m. Ada Mohn, and has one child, Spencer; and Stewart R. is attending the Taylor University. Mr. Landis and his wife are members of the Eighth and Court Street Evangelical Church.

CHRISTOPHER SHEARER. Among the representative citizens and leading agriculturists of Berks county, none is more worthy of mention in this publication than Mr. Christopher Shearer, whose excellent farm is located in Muhlenberg township. Mr. Shearer was born Nov. 8, 1804, in the city of Reading, son of Jonathan and Polly (Rapp) Shearer.

Christopher Johan Shearer, grandfather of Christopher, was the founder of the family in America. He came from Holland and settled at Reading, Pa., where he followed his trade of shoemaker until the outbreak of the Revolutionary war. He was drafted for service and participated in the battle of Long Island, and the retreat through New Jersey to Philadelphia. Here his regiment's term, with nearly all of the other bodies of militia, under the three months' enlistment period, expired. It is probable the farmers would have all returned to their homes and the tradesmen to their trades, had not General Washington made a stirring speech to them in which he demonstrated that all would be lost unless the militia re-enlisted, contracting to serve six months longer, giving them a hope the struggle might end at the see an end. We are accustomed in these days to look upon Revolutionary soldiers as unselfish patriots, but that all of the militia did not belong to this class was shown when in spite of the commander's appeal, the larger number returned to their homes. Among the few who again offered his life and liberty to the country was Christopher Johan Shearer, and he was twice re-enlisted, and he took part in the historic Crossing of the Delaware and the fight with the Hessians. After the expiration of his six months service, he was drafted again into the militia, and fought in the battle of the Brandywine, on which occasion the militia was placed in the front as reserved troops. After years described this battle as having taken place on a calm, smoky day. The firing was done in platoons, each platoon stepping backward after they had discharged their guns. Soldier Shearer knelt down to get a view of the English troops under the cloud of smoke, and in this action was wounded in the left forearm. The next morning news came from the British that the English had made an incursion into the farming country for provisions, and the commander said that the Reading militia had done such good service that he would accord them the honor and pleasure of capturing this foraging party. In spite of his wounded arm, Mr. Shearer determined to assist in this effort and added himself to the body of soldiers that met the British, who were well prepared for the assault. Just at this time General Washington discovered that instead of a foraging party, he had sent his brave Reading militia to attack the entire British army. He immediately sent General Way's division which soon checked the English and prevented the militia from complete annihilation. Mr. Shearer's enlistment, or draft, had now expired, and he returned for a rest of several months, but subsequently re-entered the army and did guard duty at Royersford, being then a non-commissioned officer in his company. After being here for some time the Reading militia found a platoon of British cavalry endeavoring to cross and the former wisely took shelter in a small wood near by, and by rapid firing drove the enemy back. One of the British dropped to his saddle after the firing.

In the days preceding the battle, the political feeling ran high and the German element was largely in sympathy with the British soldiers at that time. Mr. Shearer and wife were members of the German Reformed Church, and while he was absent in the army one of his children died and the church refused burial privileges on account of his service with Washington, and not having paid the last year's assessment of tax on its members. In her extremity his wife turned to the Lutheran denomination, asking from them a burial lot, which they readily granted, and when Mr. Shearer returned to his home and learned the facts he said: "From this time on we are Lutherans," and thus saved the ребенок from which he followed until he was appointed justice of the peace, an office which he held until his death in 1827.

Mr. Shearer was married to Julia Phillippi, who, according to family traditions, was the first female child born in Reading. There was a boy child born in Reading named Dayer, being the first born, but she was the second child and the first female. To Christopher Johan Shearer and wife were born a number of children, of whom but four lived: Jonathan, John, Solomon and Benjamin. In political belief Mr. Shearer was a Federalist.

Jonathan Shearer, father of Christopher learned the shoemaker's trade with his father, and followed it for a few years, after which be became an artist, and some of his paintings can be found in Reading to this day. Subsequently he learned the tanner's and currier's trade with Abel Ebling, and this he carried on for some time but in 1839 he engaged in farming, in which he continued until his death, when he was aged sixty-four years. His wife lived to be eighty years of age, and had a family of eleven children, as follows: Peter, Christopher, Benjamin, Joseph, Julian, Solomon, Mary, Hannah, Daniel, Jonathan and Rebecca. They were all raised in religious belief, and Whigs in politics.

Christopher Shearer was educated in the pay schools of Reading, also spending two terms in the common schools. He learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for fifteen years, and then located in Muhlenberg township and purchased Old Daniel Fetter's farm which was converted into the Tuckerton Fruit Farm. This property became famous throughout the county, a season crop including from 3,000 to 5,000 bushels of potatoes, 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of Bartlett pears, 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of apples, many bushels of cherries and 5,000 to 4,000 bushels of beets. In addition to the crops mentioned about one hundred tons of tobacco and from eighty to one hundred barrels of Clinton grape wine are produced annually. When the Early Rose potato was first offered for sale at one dollar a pound by its producer, Mr. Shearer bought one pound, and planted it to a single eye. He dug them up in July, having developed very early and he planted them again, getting a fall crop of seventeen hundred. The same grape was planted the following year, and were sold at a high figure, thus introducing the fine potato to this section of the country.

When Mr. Bull of Massachusetts advertised three different grapes—Concord, Clinton and a raisin grape—at three dollars per stalk, or nine dollars, Mr. Shearer sent for one of each kind, and the Concord and Clinton grapes have proved very valuable. The Globe peach was a standard variety, and was produced on the Tuckerton Fruit Farm, some of the trees yielding thirteen baskets each of $ measure. These large peaches were exhibited at county fairs, always drawing premiums. They won the first premium at the State Fair at Philadelphia, over Jersey and Delaware peaches, and at the close of the Fair was sold at twenty-five cents each to Jersey and Delaware peach growers.

Mr. Shearer has done more, perhaps, to build up this section of the country than any other citizen. He purchased the court house lot in the township, and also the lot on which the Reformed church building is located, building eleven houses on Lemon alley, two on Eighth street, and four south of Franklin street. He also purchased the corner of Penn and Eighth streets, where he built four houses and bought land on Walnut, Elm and Buttonwood streets. He petitioned the court to open Elm and Buttonwood streets, both being granted, and built a number of houses, being both a contractor and builder. Finally he purchased a five-acre lot below the Charles Evans cemetery.

In 1843 Mr. Shearer was married (first) to Catherine Deen, and to them were born these children: Peter D., Christopher H., Esther, Oliver R., Edmond L., Rebecca, Mary, Catherine and Rose. Mr. Shearer was married (second) to Fietta M. Leese, and to them four children were born: Clara, Sylvan, one who died in infancy, and Gay Y. Mr. Shearer was a Lutheran in religious belief, but is now a Spiritualist. In politics he was first a Whig and then a Republican. He was a candidate for lieutenant governor on the Greenback ticket, and was nominated for congress in the Berks county district, was defeated by the old party, though receiving a satisfactory vote. Though now eighty-eight years old he is still well and strong, and is actively engaged in looking after his truck farm and his numerous properties.

LIEUT. JONATHAN C. BEAR, a substantial citizen of Windsor township, Berks county, and an honored veteran of the great Civil war, who is now living retired on North Third street, Hamburg, Pa., was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, Aug. 6, 1855, son of Charles Bear.

John (or Hans) Bear, great-great-grandfather of Lieut. Jonathan C., emigrated from Zweibrücken, Germany, landing at Philadelphia, Sept. 30, 1743, in the ship "Phenix." He lived for a short time at Germantown, but before 1750 he settled in Weisenburg, Lehigh county, his farm being what is now the Kershsix daughters. He was very well-to-do, and gave each one of his six sons a farm.

John Adam Bear, son of Jacob and grandfather of Lieut. Jonathan C., was born in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, in 1773, and died in 1856. He removed to Maxatawney township, Berks county, in 1812. What is now the Maxatawny School Number One, about one and one-half miles north of Kutztown, which he owned and cultivated for upwards of twenty years. He was married to Susanna Knerr, and they had these children: Jonathan, born in 1796, died in 1887. Eva m. Jacob Schollenberger; John K., married Adam Bear lived in Raisin Center, Mich., had nine children; Charles is mentioned below; Solomon was a large land-owner of Akron, Ohio; Betsy m. Solomon Stoyer, and lived in Mercer county, Pa.; Lydia and Polly lived in Lock-

Charles Bear, son of John Adam, was born in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, July 13, 1808. He was reared on his father's farm in Maxatawney township, receiving his education in the pioneer schools. He learned the trade of stone mason in early life, and was thus enabled to make his active career. Of a very kindly and jovial nature, he had many friends, and was considered a man of high honor and good judgment.

Jonathan C. Bear attended the schools of his neighbor- hood, and was fortunate in having such well known early graduates of Schuylkill College as members of the home faculty which included instructors in Eastern Pennsylvania, Adolph Everhart, and E. Lemke, as teachers. He worked on the farm until eighteen years of age, when he learned the stone mason's trade, afterward becoming a brick layer and plasterer, occupations which he followed for up- wards of twenty years. In the spring of 1855 he first came to Hamburg, and here he worked at his trades, helping to build over 150 houses, including three churches and several schools, and in 1858 as- sisted in building the old church which was destroyed by fire in 1898.

Mr. Bear has been a lifelong Democrat, and served the borough one year as assistant burgess, one term as chief burgess, and one year as chief of police. He was also councilman for nine consecutive years and was chairman of the Finance committee, which graded the streets and put up the lights. He is a member of the First Reformed Church, and served nine years as deacon and a like period as trustee thereof.

In 1855 Mr. Bear enlisted in the Hamburg Artillery, 9th Militia, and served in that company as third sergeant until the Civil War broke out. On Oct. 16, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, 96th Pa. V. I., and became its first sergeant. He was a gallant soldier throughout the war, and was mustered out Feb. 14, 1864. This discharge was by reason of re-enlist- ment, and afterward he served in Company K, 96th Pa. V. I., and was promoted to the rank of second lieutenant, in which capacity he continued until July 16, 1865, when he was discharged with the rest of his company. During the year 1864 he was signal officer for his company, Sixth Army Corps, Gen. Howard's command, a position in which he served satisfactorily until he was called to the position of interpreter, which he obtained through a competitive examination. Lieu- tenant Bear participated in the following battles: Gettysburg, Antietam, Fredericksb- berg, Chancellorsville, what is now the Hartman farm, and the whole of the Wilderness Campaign. His last battle was Fort Steadman. His record was exceptionally good, and outside of a veter- an furlough, was never absent from his regiment for a day in four years.

On Dec. 13, 1856, Lieutenant Bear was married to Caroline M. Mogel, daughter of Daniel and Polly (Machamer) Mogel, and Mrs. Bear died without issue in 1892, in the sixty-third year of her age. Mr. Bear adopted her niece, Ida K. Butler, who is now the wife of J. Jerome Dailins, and has these children: Caroline Butler and Harold W. On Feb. 14, 1895, Mr. Bear was married (second) to Hettian Buck, who died June 24, 1901, when sixty-three years old. Lieutenant Bear resides with Mrs. Dailins, his adopted daughter, on North Third street, Hamburg, in a house which he has owned since 1898.

DIENER BROTHERS, merchants at Hamburg, are sons and successors of Peter L. Diener, who was engaged in the mercantile business at Hamburg for twenty years. He was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, Sept. 18, 1805, and apprenticed to the present site of the Orphans' Home. After receiving his education in the township school and at Collegeville, he secured a position as clerk in a general store, at Dryville, where he was employed for three years. He then engaged in business for himself at Schweyster's, and afterward was in the mercantile, coal, grain and lumber business at Tipton until 1897. At the same time he was in the iron busi- ness. For five years he served as postmaster at Tipton. In 1887 he removed to Hamburg, and carried on a large general store there for twenty years. His son Irwin became a partner in 1898, and his son Henry in 1902. Upon his decease, in 1906, the sons secured the store in the settlement of the estate, and they have since operated the business on a successful manner under the name of Diener Brothers.

Peter Diener married Mary B. Schaeffer, daughter of Jonathan and great-granddaughter of George, who emigrated from the Palatinate in 1750, and settled in what is now the northeastern section of Berks county. She became the mother of five children: Irwin A.; Liz-cured a one-third interest in 1908, and at his father's death, in 1906, he and his brother Irwin A. became the owners. Since then they have conducted the business under the firm name of Diener Brothers, and have increased the stock and made the store one of the largest department stores in the upper section of Berks county.

Mr. Diener was also interested in the silk mill at Hamburg, founded in 1896. He married Pauline E. (Wagner) Tobias, daughter of Charles H. and Mary E. (Wagner) Tobias, of Hamburg, and they have a son Charles H. They are members of the First Reformed Church.

Henry Diener, grandfather of the Diener brothers, was born in Longswamp township in 1803, and married on the same day, 1851, and 1876, and a third at Kutztown. Since the 1864, Kutz survived him, of Berks county. His father, Daniel, of Richmond township, and they had two sons, Peter, L. and Henry L., and five daughters.

John Diener, the great-grandfather, was of Longswamp township, and he married Maria M. Fisher, daughter of Michael Fisher, and they had four sons, John, Amos, Henry and Peter, and five daughters.

Heinrich Bernhardt Diener, the great-great-grandfather, emigrated from Baden, Germany, in 1751, and settled in Oley now Pike township. He had five sons, George and Peter, who settled in what is now Schuylkill county; John and Jacob, who settled in Longswamp township; and Henry, Sr., who lived in Earl township, and he had, a son, Henry, Jr.

S. JAIRUS KUTZ, hosiery manufacturer at Bechtelsville, is a native son of Berks county, born in Maxatawny township, March 2, 1856. He received his education in the public schools of his home district, and in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. He gave his services to his parents on the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-four years, when he began to learn the machinist's trade with Zehm & Brother, at Kutztown. This trade he followed with great success for twenty years—nine years at Kutztown, and eleven years at Reading. For eight years he was connected with the Boss Knitting Machine Works at Reading, as partner, owning a half interest. In 1906 he entered business for himself alone at Reading, employing twenty-five men. In 1908 he located in Bechtelsville, and two years later he erected a large three-story building 100 feet long, 30 by 40 feet, and they employ sixty hands. Their product is seamless hosiery, and they ship all over the country, having a high reputation for general excellence.

In 1877 Mr. Kutz was married to Ellen Bailey, daughter of Joseph and Leanda (Saul) Bailey, of Maxatawny township, March 2, 1856. They reside in Bechtelsville, and have the following children: Bernard L., Paul M. and Jennie E., living; and Stella V., Gertrude E., Vida L. and Findley D., deceased. Of these, Paul M., born Aug. 4, 1887, received his education in the public schools of Reading and is now a sergeant of Company A, 17th Battery, Field Artillery, stationed at Havana, Cuba. Mr. Kutz and his family attend the First Reformed Church.

CALVIN J. KUTZ, son of S. Jairus, and member of the firm of Kutz Knitting Mills, was born near Kutztown May 24, 1889. He attended the common schools, and later the Keystone State Normal School, and Prof. D. B. Brunner's Business College at Reading. He was but fourteen when under his father he began to learn the trade of machinist, an occupation he followed until 1892. He then went to Pittsburg, and worked there for fourteen months, at the end of that time returning to Reading, and with his father and brother, Bernard L., formed the Kutz Knitting Mills, a firm that has won a steady success in its foundation. Mr. Kutz is a member of Camp No. 324, P. O. S. of A., at Bechtelsville, of which he is president. He drew the plans for the present large lodge hall which was built in 1907-08. Mr. Kutz and his family attend the First Reformed Church at Reading. He married Annie Smith, daughter of John Smith, of Lyons, Pa., and they have two children, Grant J. and Pauline M.

BERNARD L. KUTZ, son of S. Jairus, and member of the firm of Kutz Knitting Mills, was born at Kutztown March 31, 1884. He attended the public schools at Kutztown, and later at Reading, to which city his parents had removed, and he graduated from the high school in the class of 1905. He then learned the machinist's trade from his father and brother, and later entered the hosiery manufacturing business with the firm. Mr. Kutz was a member of Chanler Lodge No. 297, F. & A. M.; Exalted Chapter No. 327, P. A. M.; Reading Commandery; and Camp No. 324, P. O. S. of A., at Bechtelsville. He is justice of the peace at Bechtelsville, to which office he was elected by the Democratic party. Mr. Kutz married Florence Will, daughter of Alfred and Annie (Sheffey) Will, of Reading, and the couple have three children, namely: Vida E., Finley J. and Olga V., of whom Finley J. died in childhood.

David F. Kutz, father of S. Jairus Kutz, had children as follows: Cyrenius, Cosmos, Albert, Moses, S. Jairus, Alfred (who died young), Elsworth, Valeria (m. Milton Schollenberger, a farmer of Richmond township), and Eliza (m. Alvin Weiser, a farmer of Bowers Station).

DAVID CAMPBELL, who at the time of his death was superintendent of the Henry Clay furnaces of Reading, Pa., was a son of James and Sophia Campbell, and he was one of a prominent iron masters of the vicinity of Dauphin county, and a very prominent man of his day. He died in 1851, and his wife in 1876, both in the faith of the Church of God. They were the parents of these children: John, Joseph, David, Sophia, Porter, Benjamin, Isabel and Simon.

David Campbell was born at Middletown, Dauphin county, Dec. 30, 1832, and in youth attended the schools of his native home. When a young man he engaged in the contracting business, his specialty being the erection of blast furnaces, and he built many plans and wheeled West. His familiarity with the iron business secured for him recognition among the prominent iron masters of the country, and in 1878 he was offered, and accepted a lucrative position as superintendent of the Henry Clay furnaces in this city, a position he held up to the time of his death.

Mr. Campbell was a veteran of the Civil War, having served in the 127th and 200th Pa. V. I. His first enlistment was in Company H, 127th Pa. V. I. He was later promoted to lieutenant, and in this capacity he served with his command until it mustered out at Reading, May 20, 1865. On Dec. 1, 1864, Mr. Campbell received a lieutenants' commission in Company G, 200th Pa. V. I., and served until mustered out, May 30, 1865.

Mr. Campbell was a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 297, F. A. M., and Simon Cameron Post, G. A. R., of Middletown. Besides his wife, Addie J. Zimmerman, daughter of Philip and Mary (Vogel) Zimmerman, he is survived by a son, Harry E., and three daughters, Mrs. Jacob Bauder, of Chicago; Misses Elizabeth McVey and Helen Meigs, at home; and brothers, Joseph and Porter, of Middletown; Benjamin, of Harrisburg; and John, in Illinois. During his residence in Reading Mr. Campbell was an attendant at the First Baptist Church.

EPHRAIM ARMSTRONG, who for many years was one of Reading's leading tailors, was born in Jonestown, Lebanon county, March 12, 1818. He died in Reading, Aug. 20, 1890. He came to Reading when ten years of age, and for a number of years clerked in his uncle's store, later learning the tailoring trade, which he subsequently followed for thirty years.

Mr. Armstrong took an important part in local affairs, being prominent in the Democratic party, and serving as prothonotary of Berks county for some years, as school controller of the Fifth ward, and at the time of his death holding the position of school treasurer, having served in that capacity for many years with great credit. He was a very capable official and was known by all as one of the most steadfast workers in his field. Mr. Armstrong was a life-long member of St. James Lutheran Church, holding the office of treasurer therein for a number of years.

In 1880 Mr. Armstrong married Mary A. Good, daughter of Bennewell and Catherine (Haas) Good, and of this union were born as follows: Catherine; Sadie; and Lillie May Bennewell Good. Mrs. Armstrong's father, was a native of Lebanon county, and was extensively engaged in farming in the vicinity of Jonestown. He died aged sixty-two years, and she March 9, 1897, when seventy-one years of age. He was the first religiously active member of the Reformed Church. Mr. and Mrs. Good had children as follows: Sarah, m. to Josiah Loser; Mary A., m. to Mrs. Armstrong; Amanda, m. to Henry Fastnacht; Amelia, m. to Henry Peller; and Dr. Frank, of Reading, m. to Mary Rocktasel.

MOHN FAMILY. The founder of this early family in the history of Berks county was Johannes Mohn, the great-great-grandfather of the present generation. He was born at Hanover, Germany, in 1700, and emigrated with his wife and four children to America in 1737. In the Pennsylvania Archives (second series), Volume 17, page 83, it appears that he took passage on the ship "Elizabeth" from Rotterdam, and was qualified Aug. 27, 1733. On page 106 of this publication the names of himself and family, and their ages, are given as follows: Johannes Mohn, 38; Margaret Mohn, 44; Marica (Maria), 10; Mary (Magdalena), 8; and Vernor (Werner), 6; Conon Ludwig (Ludwig), 38.

By the patent records of Pennsylvania it appears that John Moon (Mohn) in 1737 took up a tract of 174 acres of land in Cumru (now Spring) township, and in 1744 another tract of seventy-one acres for a school. Seven years later, in 1751, he purchased by patent 341 acres from Dietrich Marshall (which was a part of 541 acres taken up by Marshall in 1737). This land was situated along the Cacoeosing Creek, in the vicinity of Fritztown. In 1758, he sold the tract of forty-nine acres to his son Ludwig. He was a farmer by occupation. He died in September, 1764, leaving a last will, by which it appears that his four children survived him, and that his two daughters had become married—Magdalena to George Hearn (Hain), and Maria to Jacob Ledy. His younger son, Ludwig, carried on farming in the same vicinity until after the Revolution, and then removed to Brecknock (now Spring) township, where he continued farming, and died in January, 1796. He married Anna Odilia Bautz, and by his last will it appears he had five sons—John, Ludwig, Henry, Daniel and Peter—and three daughters—Susanna (m. Philip Hatt); Elizabeth (m. Geyer); and Margaret (m. Jacob Albright) and Catharine.

Daniel, the fourth son, was born in the vicinity of Fritztown, and when a young man accompanied his father to Brecknock township, where he carried on farming until his decease in 1846. He was married to Barbara Albright, and by her had twelve children: Six sons: Daniel (m. Barbara Fisher); John (m. Elizabeth Kege- ritz); Jacob (described in this sketch). Benjamin (m. first Harriet Deets, and second Sarah Shults); Henry (m. Catharine VonNeida), and Joseph (m. Catharine Burkhard); and six daughters, Elizabeth (died unmarried in 1876, aged eighty years), Catharine (m. Adam Grill), Sarah (m. first Philip Grill and second Simpson Ruth), and two others. Isaac William Mohn (the third son and seventh child of Daniel) was born at Mohn's Hill Sept. 6, 1804. He was a farmer by occupation, having purchased the homestead from his father and cultivated it for a number of years; then he removed to Adamstown and engaged in the business of manufacturing flour, having purchased a grist mill and carried it on successfully for ten years. He manifested much interest in religious affairs and became prominent in the Evangelical Church, serving in all the principal offices. He established a school and church at Mohn's Hill, and some years after his decease his son Jeremiah purchased the church property, and in 1895 erected and dedicated a memorial to his predeces sor's memory, known as Mohn's Memorial Church. He died Jan. 23, 1889. He was married three times. His first wife was Polly Gerner, by whom he had nine children, seven sons (James G., Cyrus, Henry G., William G., Jeremiah G., Richard and John G.) and two daughters (Susanna m. Elias Redcay, and Catharine m. George Hendel). The mother having died May 16, 1853, he was subsequently married (second) to Margaret Adams, and third to Mrs. Katie Palm, by whom he had no children.

JEREMIAH GERNER MOHN, vice-president of the Penn National Bank and prominently identified with the hat industry at Reading as the senior partner of J. G. Mohn & Bros., was born at Mohn's Hill Nov. 1, 1839 (fifth son of William Mohn). His education was acquired in the schools of Spring township, and at Adamstown and Churchtown, in Lancaster county. In 1857, when eighteen years of age, he began clerking in a general store at Redding, which was carried on by his cousin, S. K. Mohn, and after residing at Mohnsville for some time he occupied a similar position in the general store of Mohn & Spatz, at Gouglerville, where he continued a year. While at the latter place, he cast his first vote for President of the United States on Nov. 1, 1860, this having been for Abraham Lincoln, in which fact he takes a special pride. For the next ten years he was engaged in stores at Rein holdsville, Adamstown and Reamstown, filling for four years the position of general manager and bookkeeper in the store of J. R. Reddig, at Reamstown; then in 1870, he became the bookkeeper and shipping clerk in the hat factory of his brother-in-law, George Hendel, at Reading, and while filling this position, he feeling qualified to embark in the same business, he joined his brothers William, Richard and John in the purchase of this factory, and they organized the firm of Mohn Brothers for the manufacture of wool hats. [For his connection with this firm and with J. G. Mohn & Bros., see following sketch of J. G. Mohn & Bros.]

For many years Mr. Mohn has been closely identified with other business enterprises at Reading. He is a director of the Penn National Bank, serving as vice-president since its incorporation in 1883; and also a director of the Reading Trust Company since its incorporation, in 1886; and also a director of the Board of Trade, having served as president in 1905 and 1906. In politics he is a Republican, and as such represented the Third ward in the select branch of city councils from 1888 to 1892.

Inheriting a strong religious nature, he has taken an active part in the United Evangelical Church from its inception in 1894, having previously, since his boyhood, been connected with the Evangelical Church. He was chairman of the building committee in the erection of the fine edifice of the First U. E. Church at Eighth and Court streets, toward which he was a liberal contributor. He is president of the board of trustees (having been a member of the board continuously for thirty-seven years), and has been the treasurer of the Missionary Society. He was a delegate to the First General Conference, a session was held at Naperville, Ill., in November, 1894; and he has been a delegate to the East Pennsylvania Conference from its first meeting in 1894 to the present time. He has been the treasurer of the Albright Collegiate Institute for twenty-five years, and is a member of the board of trustees of that institution; and, in appreciation of its financial efforts, he in 1908 presented to this college the three-story brick building and six acres of adjoining ground (formerly the Behne mansion at Myerstown), which the institution set apart for the use of the young women students and dedicated as the Jeremiah Gerner Mohn Hall. He is also a member of the board of publication at Harrisburg, and of the board of managers of the Chautauqua.
at Lebanon; also president of the board of trustees of the Reading Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Mohn married Jan. 28, 1865, Annie Shirk, daughter of Henry Shirk, of Adamstown, and his wife Hannah Zell (who was a daughter of John Zell); by whom he has a son, Charles Ellsworth. His wife died June 4, 1867. He then, on Oct. 7, 1869, married (second) Susanna, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Lutz) Royer, of Lancaster county, and they had the following children: Ada Mary, a graduate from the musical department of Albright College, who married Herbert Landis (employed since 1891 by the Reading Trust Company); Harry Scott, born May 17, 1874, and Howard R., born May 17, 1879, both dying in youth; and Elmer L. His second wife died Aug. 29, 1883, and on Nov. 10, 1885, he married (third) Emma S., daughter of John H. Spatz, of Mohnton. He has had two children by the wife last named: Maud, born Oct. 7, 1885, who died April 28, 1887; and Luella Faith, now being educated at Albright College.

Charles E. Mohn (son of Jeremiah G.) was born at Reamstown, Lancaster Co., Pa., May 21, 1867. After completing the public school course at Reading he entered State Normal at Berks County, the first Normal School in the state, when he entered his father's hat factory in order to learn the business. He passed through the minor positions, then became a presser and afterward a hardener, filling the latter position at the present time. He has been in the employ of J. G. Mohn & Bros. continuously until the present time for five years when he was a partner in the Mohntown Hat Company at Mohntonville. He married Eulalia Blankenbillier, daughter of Joseph and Emma (Hinnershitz) Blankenbillier. They have one son, Winfield H., now in school. He is a member of the First United Evangelical Church at Reading.

Richard Mohn, a member of the firm of J. G. Mohn & Bros., was born on the old homestead at Mohnton's Hill July 28, 1868. After the completion of his education in the schools of his native township and later at Adamstown, Lancaster county. During the progress of the Civil war, he enlisted on Feb. 23, 1864, in Company B, 55th Regiment, P. V. I., and participated in the battles of Cold Harbor and Petersburg, and of the Richmond campaign; and he was subsequently serving in the Keystone National Bank of Petersburg, Va., Aug. 21, 1865. After his return he worked in a grist-mill at Adamstown which was owned by his brother Henry G. (who had been previously employed there). He worked also in a hat factory at Adamstown, where he had charge of the shipping and packing department. In 1871, he went to Reading and became associated with his brothers in the manufacture of wool hats, under the firm name of J. G. Mohn & Bros., and he has continued with the firm until the present time. He has served as a director of the National Union Bank of Reading for a number of years.

On Jan. 6, 1879, Mr. Mohn married Elizabeth Prutzman, daughter of Samuel Prutzman, of Adamstown, and by her had four children: Edgar P., who died in 1907; William R., manager of the estate at Pine Grove of the late ex-Mayor Weimer of Lebanon: Bessie A.; and Earl S., at home. In politics Mr. Mohn is a Republican. He served as a member of the school board from the Tenth ward; and was the first member of McLean Post, No. 10, G. A. R., for many years.

John Gerner Mohn was born at Mohnton's Hill, in Berks county, Nov. 19, 1846, and received his education in the public schools of that vicinity and at Adamstown, two miles distant. When seventeen years old, he enlisted in the Civil war, having been mustered into the service at Reading on Feb. 23, 1864, with Company B, 55th Regiment, P. V. I., and he continued in the service with this regiment until it was mustered out at Petersburg on Aug. 31, 1865. He participated in several of the largest battles of the war, but was never wounded. Upon returning home he learned the trade of hatting at St. Lawrence, in Exeter township, in the factory of John and George Henkel (the latter having been his brother-in-law), and he continued with the firm until 1871. Having mastered the details of the business, he united with his brothers William, Jeremiah and Richard in carrying on the manufacture of hats in the name of J. G. Mohn & Bros. [For his connection with this firm and with J. G. Mohn & Bros. from 1871 to the present time, see the following sketch of J. G. Mohn & Bros.]

Mr. Mohn married Cecelia A. Harbster, daughter of the late William Harbster (whose sketch and portrait appear in this publication) and Ellen Matthews, his wife, of Reading; and they have a son, William Harbster (having also had three daughters, who died young). They are members of the First Presbyterian Church, in which he has served as one of the trustees since 1884. His wife has been active in religious and charitable work in Reading for upward of twenty years. She has taught a class in the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian Church continuously since 1885, some of the children of the first class which she taught are now teaching, and she is also one of the mother's meetings of the church for the past sixteen years. She has been a member of the Widows' Home since its organization, in 1874, serving as one of its managers for the past ten years. She has been prominently identified with the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. for many years, serving as its treasurer since 1892; and the charitable work of the Reading Benevolent Society has received much of her attention since 1890. Her husband has also been prominently identified with the Y. M. C. A. as one of its managers for twenty-five years, filling the office of treasurer for fifteen years.

Politically Mr. Mohn has been affiliated with the Republican party from the time he attained his majority. From 1874 to 1876 he represented the Third ward in the common council; and from 1876 to 1888 he represented this ward in the school board. He has identified himself actively with a number of local financial and business interests, having been connected with the Keystone National Bank of Reading, the Reading Hardware Company, and of the Consolidated Hardware Company; president of the National Brass & Iron Works, and of the Reading Screw Company. He has been a member of Chandler Lodge, F. & A. M. No. 227, for forty years; and for many years a member of Kemm Post, No. 76, G. A. R.

William Harbster Mohn, Mr. Mohn's son, was born at Reading July 24, 1872, and educated in the public schools and at Blairstown Hall, New Jersey. For a short time he was employed in the hat factory of J. G. Mohn & Bros., and then entered the National Brass & Iron Works in the mounting department. After a short course of five years in this department he was promoted to that of foreman, and in 1902 became superintendent of the plant. He filled the position of superintendent until 1908, when he became associated with Edward Kershner under the name of Mohn & Kershner, for the manufacture of foundry and art metal goods, in which the firm have since been successfully engaged, employing eighty hands. He married Hallie Adams (daughter of Daniel L. Adams, founder of the Reading Radiator Works at Reading), and they have two children, Kathryn and John Daniel. He is connected with the First Presbyterian Church, in which he has taken a very active part, and for thirteen years has served as treasurer of the Sunday-school.

The firm of J. G. Mohn & Bros. has been a prominent industrial enterprise at Reading in the manufacture of wool hats for thirty-five years. It is constituted of three brothers, Jeremiah G. Mohn, Richard Mohn and John G.
Mohn, who had acquired practical experience in the business before starting for themselves.

In 1871, the brothers named and an elder brother, William, purchased the hat factory of their brother-in-law, George Hendel, which he had established at Reading on Maple street, south of Chestnut, in 1867, and carried on until that time. They then organized a partnership under the name of Mohn Brothers for the manufacture of wool hats. The firm began operating with fifty hands and carried on the plant successfully, with an annual production exceeding 10,000 dozen, for three years, when the elder brother, the senior partner, died and the three surviving brothers purchased his interest and reorganized the firm on Jan. 1, 1875, under the name of J. G. Mohn & Bros.; and since then, for upward of thirty years, this firm has been engaged in the wool hat business at Reading with great success, increasing their employees from fifty to three hundred, developing their annual production from 10,000 dozen to 100,000 dozen, and extending their trading relations to all parts of the United States and Canada and also South American countries.

The firm's first factory on Maple street was destroyed by fire on March 17, 1876, but they rebuilt it the same year, and operating in it (Jan,) 1, 1871, they left the Reading Fur Hat Company. In 1878 they purchased the old and well-established hat factory of Kutz, Arnold & Co., on Eleventh street, south of Chestnut, and then began to operate this plant in conjunction with the Maple street factory and the Levan factory at the rear of No. 1026 Penn street, which they had purchased. The shirt plant was carried on very successfully with one hundred and fifty hands until Sept. 6, 1892, when it was almost totally destroyed by fire. They rebuilt it immediately and operated it with increased energy and success until Feb. 13, 1899, when (during a violent snowstorm and blizzard late in the evening, with snow lying on the sidewalks and roofs two and a half feet deep,) a third fire visited their large industrial establishment, verily "like a thief in the night," and caused a total loss. Undaunted, with greater resolution than before, they rebuilt their factory, introducing the latest and best machinery for the manufacture of wool hats, and resumed operations with over two hundred hands; and in 1905 they erected a large addition, which made their plant one of the largest hat factories in Pennsylvania. It is recognized as one of the important industries at Reading which has afforded constant employment to a faithful little army of people, male and female, old and young, and thereby contributed a considerable share in the development of Reading.

Samuel Kegresse Mohn was born Nov. 21, 1824, in Cumru township, Berks county, near Goglsville, and after receiving a common school education, pursued until he was sixteen years old, learned the trade of miller at Adamstown, Lancaster county, which he finished at the age of twenty-one years. In 1846 he accompanied his uncle, Benjamin Mohn, who then established a grist-mill along the Wyominging creek at a point now called Mohnton, and he opened a general store in this mill. He received the appointment as first postmaster of the postoffice established at that place in 1857, which was then named Mohnton. He was engaged in the store business for about fifteen years.

Mr. Mohn was brought up in the faith of the Evangelical Church, becoming a member when sixteen years old, and from that time on showed much devotion to its affairs, becoming in succession class-leader, exhorter and steward. He was for many years a member of the local and district churches in that place in 1849, and has served as one of the trustees until the present time—a continuous period of sixty years. He also took great interest in the Sunday-school work, officiating for many years as superintendent.

Mr. Mohn was married in 1847 to Susanna Spatz (daughter of John Spatz, of that vicinity), and they had ten children, five of whom reached maturity: Charles S. (m. Mary Redday), Susanna C. (m. John A. Bohler), Mary S. (m. John A. Seitzinger), Ella M. (m. George H. Leininger), and Kate (m. Tyson L. Huyett).

Mr. Mohn is a son of John Mohn, and grandson of Daniel Mohn. For his antecedent history in the Mohn line, see preceding sketch of Mohn family.

Benjamin Clouser, who for many years prior to his retirement some time before his death was engaged as a blacksmith in Reading, Pa., was born in Robeson township, Berks county, Nov. 20, 1840, son of John and Anna (Wesley) Clouser. John Clouser was for many years a farmer of Robeson township, Berks county, where he also engaged as a forgerman, and where he died, aged seventy-two years, his wife also attaining that age. They were the parents of ten children: John, Benjamin, Lucinda, Sarah, Thomas and Aaron, twins, Samuel, Henry, Charles and William. In religious belief Mr. Clouser was a Lutheran, while his wife belonged to the Reformed denomination.

Benjamin Clouser received his education in the schools of his native place, and when a boy learned the blacksmith's trade, which was his occupation throughout life. He was a good, practical mechanic, and a hardworking man, and in 1873 he lost by fire an honest Christian gentleman and good citizen. He was a member of the P. O. S. of A., in which organization he has many friends, and was a Republican in politics, although he never aspired to office.

Mr. Clouser married Margaret C. Corbit, daughter of John Corbit, and to this union were born four children, namely: William W. a draftsman employed by Cornelius Vanderbilt of New York; Harry C., a machinist of Reading; Anna, a teacher in the public schools of that city; and Frances, m. to Edgar L. Fulmer, office manager for a New York firm. Mrs. Clouser, who survives her husband, resides in Reading, where she is well known and very highly esteemed.

Richard Trethewey, assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company at Reading, Pa., and a man well known in insurance circles of Pennsylvania, was born Jan. 19, 1855, near Chattanooga, Tenn., son of Samuel and Mary Kent (Burt) Trethewey.

Samuel Trethewey was born March 7, 1822, at St. Hilary, Cornwall, England, son of Richard Trethewey, a miner of Cornwall, and came to America in 1849, locating first in New Jersey and later in Tennessee, and in 1852 he took a trip to California during the gold fever. He was a mining engineer all of his life and from 1877 until his death, May 22, 1905, resided at Friedensville, Lehigh Co., Pa., having been retired for the last thirteen years of his life. He died at his own home in Friedensville, well known and highly esteemed. Mr. Trethewey was married in Cornwall, England, to Mary Kent Burt, born May 12, 1818, at Lostwithiel, Cornwall, who died Feb. 15, 1901, at the old homestead in Lehigh county. They had the following children: Samuel, of Boyertown; William, who was buried at Friedensville; Mary, residing at Pottstown, the widow of Thomas Brown; Charles, Joseph, who resided at No. 3150 Carlisle street, Philadelphia; John H., of No. 121 Oak street, Providence, Scranton, Pa.; and James, of No. 120 Oak street, Providence.

Richard Trethewey spent his boyhood days in Maryland, whence his parents had removed in 1857, and at this time he was a pupil of schools which became free schools after the Civil war. After coming to Pennsylvania he followed zinc mining for eight years, and then spent nine years in the Boyertown ore mines. The following year and one-half he mined for gold, silver and copper at the Butte and Boston mine, at Butte City, Mont., a great mining camp, but in 1898 returned to Pennsylvania and began working as an agent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.
at Bethlehem. The following year he was appointed to an assistant superintendency, and was sent to Pittsburgh, where he remained six months, being transferred at this time to an assistant superintendency at Reading, where he remained with one eminent success. Mr. Trethewey has developed a number of successful insurance men who were formerly in his district, among whom is William H. Spang, superintendent of the Allentown district. Mr. Trethewey is an able insurance man, and during his incumbency of his present office has made a name well known in insurance circles throughout the State.

Mr. Trethewey has been twice married, his first wife being Jennie Schiffer, who died in 1879, in Friedensville, Lehigh county, aged twenty-six years, leaving three children: Florence E., who is single; Jennie M., m. to Wayne Wilson, of Philadelphia; and William E., who is married and resides at No. 530 Broad street, Bethlehem, Pa. He m. (second) Jan. 16, 1892, Addie B. Conner, daughter of Willoughby B. Conner, of Boyertown, Pa., and to this union one child has been born; Paul Richard.

In politics Mr. Trethewey is a Republican with independent inclinations. He is socially connected with Prosperity Chamber, Knights of Friendship, and Washington Camp, No. 104, P. O. S. of A., of Boyertown, and his family are members of Covenant Methodist Episcopal Church of Reading, and they reside in Mr. Trethewey's large brick residence, at No. 960 North Eleventh street, Reading.

GEORGE J. KAPP, one of Marion township's highly respected citizens, who lived retired at Stouchsburg from 1902, was for many years engaged in tailoring. He was born Sept. 22, 1837, in Mill Creek township, Lebanon Co., Pa., son of John and Eliza (Meiser) Kapp, and died Sept. 26, 1909.

Michael Kapp, the progenitor of this family, was of German descent, and a pioneer settler of Heidelberg township, in the district that is now embraced in Jackson township, Lebanon county. His name appears among the list of taxables of Heidelberg one year after Berks county had been separated from Lancaster. Mr. Kapp had two children: Frederick; and Leonard, who had a son Leonard.

Frederick Kapp (Capp), the great-grandfather of George J., was one of the pioneers of the Newmansion district, and for many years was the owner of the farm on which he built his log cabin, and dug a well in sandy soil. He had reached a depth of sixty feet, but while he was at dinner the sides caved in, burying his tools, which stood at the bottom of the well, and there they remained. He was a skillful blacksmith, manufacturing all of his own farming implements in addition to forks and blacksmith nails. He is buried in the old burial ground at the Tulpheckon Lutheran Church. His grave has no headstone, but a relative has a stone near by. Frederick Kapp had children: Gertrude; and Andrew; Molly, m. to Frederick Moyer; and Maria, m. to Jacob Kehl.

Andrew Kapp, grandfather of George J., was born Feb. 25, 1782, at Newmanstown, on the Kapp farm, later owned by his son John. He was a lifelong farmer, and died Dec. 31, 1844, being buried at the burial ground at Newmanstown. He married Elizabeth Miller, who was born Jan. 19, 1783, at Millcreek, Lebanon county, and died Aug. 27, 1867. They had three children: Sarah died unmarried at an advanced age; Catherine, m. to Isaac Gerhart; and John.

John Kapp, father of George J., was born at Newmanstown, Pa., Nov. 24, 1809, and died Aug. 7, 1892, aged eighty-two years, being buried at Newmanstown. He was a lifelong farmer, having an excellent property of 125 acres in Millcreek township, Lebanon county, and was a man of wide acquaintance among the agriculturists of his district. Mr. Kapp was also a well-known sportsman, being an excellent marksman, and frequently won prizes. In his religious belief he was a Lutheran, and he attended St. Elias Church at Newmanstown. Mr. Kapp married Elizabeth Meiser, born Dec. 4, 1807, and died Sept 19, 1875, aged sixty-seven years, nine months, five days, daughter of Elizabeth (Keller) Meiser. They had nine children, all but one surviving, the oldest being seventy-five years of age, and the youngest past fifty-five: Peter, Levi, Elizabeth, George, Thomas, James, Emma, Sarah and John.

George J. Kapp spent his youth upon the home farm, and until he was seventeen years of age remained with his parents, at this time learning the trade of tailor from Frederick A. Schultz, who was a member of the same family from which came Governor Schultz. Mr. Kapp came to Stouchsburg in 1862, and there engaged in the tailoring business with marked success until his retirement in 1902. He had in his employ five assistants, and enjoyed a large trade, much of which in the earlier days consisted in making up home-made woolen material, which was brought to the tailor by the settlers in the surrounding line, with Mr. Kapp having an agency of the Northwestern Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Ephrata, Lancaster county, a position which he held since 1875, during which time he wrote up a large number of risks in this district. Although he was an invalid from the fall of 1906, and was almost entirely confined to his home, he worked, however, very little, while bearing his suffering patiently. He was a man of intelligence, and conversed fluently in both English and German. A Republican in his political affiliations, he always had the welfare of his township at heart, but would never allow his name to be used in connection with any office. He was a member of the Order of Good Fellows at Stouchsburg, being one of the oldest members. He was connected with Christ (Tulpheckon) Lutheran Church of Marion township.

On June 21, 1862, Mr. Kapp married Amanda M. Dorges, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Burkholder) Dorges, and to this union there have been born two children: Ellen M. Frank Walborn, a cigarpacker of Stouchsburg, who was born March 17, 1858, and died April 6, 1905, aged forty-seven years, leaving two children, Ralph K. and Mary A.; and Charles F., born Oct. 30, 1867, met his death in the dynamite explosion at the factory in which he was employed in Marion township, Nov. 6, 1884, in his eighteenth year, and is buried in the Kapp family lot at that church, his last resting-place being marked by the Kapp monument.

JACOB OTTO, who died at his residence, No. 833 Washington street, May 23, 1904, at the age of sixty-seven years, was not an American by birth, but had lived in this country since his seventeenth year. He was born in 1837 in Hess-Darmstadt, and brought to his adopted country the sterling qualities which characterize the German race, and make them so valuable a part of our body of citizens.

When he was sixteen years old Mr. Otto landed in New York City, and proceeded directly to Reading. Although he had learned the trade of shoemaking, he never followed it, and instead worked at tinning under a Mr. Snell. He remained with him for a number of years, and became a very skilled workman. In 1877, he went into partnership in that trade, the name being Mr. Harper, under the firm name of Harper & Otto, and for a long time they were located on Seventh street near Penn, doing a general tinning business. When that partnership was dissolved, Christ Geisler became associated with Mr. Otto and the store was moved to No. 648 Penn street, its present location. In 1889 Mr. Otto bought out Mr. Geisler and conducted it by himself. Nine years later his son John was made manager, but he died while still a young man, and his brother Harry W. was then given the place. Since his father's death, H. W. Otto has continued to conduct the business in the interest of the estate.

Jacob Otto was married at the age of twenty-four years to Miss Katherine Kiruse, and five children were born to them: Emma, Mrs. Charles Leymaster, of Reading; John, who died at the age of thirty-two; Kate, wife of David E. Gring, of Reading; Minnie, who was born in 1873, and died in 1890; and Harry W. Mr. Otto belonged both to the Odd Fellows and the Masons, and was a member of Territoria Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M. A man of many estimable qualities he was esteemed by everyone that knew him, and bore a deservedly high reputation among Reading's business men.

Harry W. Otto was born June 21, 1880, and was educated in the public schools of Reading. In 1896 he was taken into his father's employ and has been connected with the business ever since. Since assuming the sole responsibility he has proven himself to be capable in business, and is very successful in his management. Socially he is a Mason, a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227; and also of the Knights of the Golden Eagle; the Order of Biddarz; the Ivy Leaf Association and the Cader Band.

PETER B. KEEHN, for fifty-two years a resident of Mt. Penn, but now living retired at No. 314 Seventeenth and one-half street, Reading, comes of an old family of this part of Berks county. He was born Sept. 29, 1838, in Exeter township, near Schwartzwald Church, from which neighborhood his parents, Charles and Maria (Biedeman) Keehn, moved into Lower Alsace township soon after his birth.

Jacob Keehn, grandfather of Peter B. Keehn; was a resident of Exeter township and a farmer by occupation, and was married in middle life, but his wife whose maiden name was Brah, attained a good old age.

Charles Keehn was born in Exeter township in the year 1810, and died in 1868. Like his father he followed farming, and he was a substantial citizen, a worthy member of the Reformed Church, and a Democrat in political faith. He married Maria Biedeman, a native of Amity township, this county, daughter of John and Margaret (Hartranft) Biedeman, and nine children were born to this union, namely: Matilda, widow of Henry Allenbaugh; Orlando, an engineer, of Reading; Peter B.; Daniel B., a laboring man, of Mt. Penn; John, a hatter, of Mt. Penn; Almareta, deceased; Sarah, married Mr. Levi Marks, of Reading; Charles, a conductor, of Reading; and Margaret, deceased.

Peter B. Keehn grew to manhood in Alsace township, and there he received his education in the public schools. While still a little boy he entered the Brumbaugh's woolen mills, at St. Lawrence, in which he worked up to the position of weaver and spinner. He continued in that work until 1897, in May of which year his right side became paralyzed and he was incapacitated for active work from that time. Since that time he has lived retired, making his home at the corner of Perkiomen avenue and Twenty-third street, Mt. Penn, where he has lived since March, 1909, when he sold his home, and purchased his present residence in Reading. During his active years Mr. Keehn was much interested in local public affairs, and he gave excellent service as school director in Lower Alsace, which office he held for six years, and as borough inspector. He is a Democrat in political affiliation.

On June 4, 1861, Mr. Keehn enlisted in Company D, 3d Pa. V. C., being one of the first three-years men, and entered the United States service at Camp McColl, D. C., July 28, 1861, serving until June, 1864. He took part in the following important engagements: Mechanicsville, Gaines' Mills, Charles City Cross Roads, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, and Frederickburg. He was promoted to corporal. By virtue of his army service Mr. Keehn is an honored member of the S. A. R., belonging to McLean Post, No. 10, of Reading.

On Sept. 17, 1864, Mr. Keehn married at Reading, Miss Martha Wesner, who was born March 6, 1845, daughter of James and Maria (Kemp) Wesner. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Keehn, viz.: Carrie Dora, wife of Franklin Hafer, of Madison avenue, Reading; Katie O., deceased; Harvey Peter, a farmer at the woolen mill, who married Catharine Faust and resides at Mt. Penn; and Jennie Estella, who is at home.

James Wesner, father of Mrs. Keehn, was a coal-heaver by occupation. He died in Reading about 1877, at the age of seventy-four years, and his wife died in 1885, reaching the age of seventy-eight years. She was a member of the Catholic Church. Mr. and Mrs. Wesner had a family of ten children, namely: Matilda, deceased, was the wife of Samuel Hawkins; Henry, who died in Illinois, married Fannie Diffenbaugh; Barbara Ann married James Schull, and are both deceased; Harriet, deceased, was the wife of George Wedel; Emma married William E. Simpson; Nathaniel died in infancy; James lives in Varna, III.; Ephraim, who married Clara Shupe, lives in Maquoketa, Iowa; Martha is the wife of Peter B. Keehn; Adeline, deceased, was the wife of Samuel Schaefer, of Reading.

JOSEPH GRATE SCHNABEL, a venerable citizen of Cumru township, and a survivor of the great Civil war, was born Jan. 22, 1831, in that township, son of John and Susanna (Grate) Schnabel, and grandson of Jacob Schnabel, and he died Feb. 9, 1908, in the seventy-eighth year of his age.

Jacob Schnabel came to America from Germany, on the ship "Priscilla," arriving at Philadelphia, Sept. 11, 1749, and some years after that date became a farmer in Cumru township, Berks county, where he owned considerable land, part of which was in later years owned by his son, John. He was a Catholic in religious belief, and was buried in consecrated ground in Reading. Jacob Schnabel was the father of the following children: Jacob; Joseph; Benjamin; William; Kate m. Lewis Eckerth; Betzy m. Harry Grate; Polly m. Patrick Odier; and Sally m. a Mr. Hartman.

John Schnabel, father of Joseph, was born in 1785, near Yocom's Church in Cumru township, and died in 1866, was buried at the Catholic Cemetery in Reading. He was a life-long farmer, and owned a tract of eighty-three acres, now the property of Andrew Blankenhorn. Mr. Schnabel married Susanna Grate, who died in 1856, in her eightieth year, and to them were born ten children, as follows: Jacob; Barbara m. Samuel Freeman; Andrew; Joseph Grate; John; Catherine m. Solomon Ash; Susan m. Ezra Bush; Hettie m. John Buthroyed; Elias m. Elizabeth Ruffner; and Sarah m. Henry Hill.

Joseph Grate Schnabel was reared in Cumru township, and there he spent all his life. For many years he was employed in the iron mines, but in 1896 he retired from active life, erected a comfortable little home, where he lived with his daughter, Clara, Mrs. John S. Sonnon, until death claimed him. On Oct. 27, 1882, Mr. Schnabel enlisted under the name of Joseph Snable, in Company C, 167th Pa. V. I., serving with the Army of the Potomac until Aug. 13, 1863, when he received an honorable discharge at Reading. He was a faithful and efficient soldier, and during his service to his country bore his share of the hardships of army life bravely and cheerfully. Mr. Schnabel was a member of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R.; and the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 91, Angelica. In political matters he was a Republican, and for six years served as township supervisor, then resigning.
With his family he belonged to the Reformed congregation at Yocom’s Union Church.

On May 4, 1854, Mr. Schnabel married Catherine White, daughter of John R. and Elizabeth (Mengel) White and began this union were born four children: James, born Nov. 12, 1855; Clara, May 30, 1858 (m. Dec. 31, 1877, John S. Sonnon); John W., March 12, 1860 (died March 21, 1860); and a son died in infancy unnamed.

JAMES SPEARS, an aged citizen of Robesonia, Berks Co., Pa., was born near Glasgow, Scotland, Sept. 15, 1853, a son of William and Christie (Kirkwood) Spears.

William Spears was born near Glasgow, about 1793, and died in 1848 surviving his wife by some few years. He was a weaver by trade. They had seven children: William, James, Alexander, Christie, Jennie, Mary and Ellen. With the exception of Alexander all the children emigrated to America. James came alone, the five others having preceded him by one year. They all lived at Moselem, in Berks county. William was taken to prison and died in the Civil war. He married Jacob Warner, of Womelsdorf, and still survives. Christie married James McCallen and they lived at Fritztown, Berks county, where she died. Mary married Horatio Hillesley and lives at Manayunk, Pa. Ellen lives at Philadelphia.

James Spears learned weaving with his father, in his shop where he allowed the trade for a short time before coming to America. This was in 1853, during the administration of President Franklin Pierce. He settled in Berks county and began to work in the mines at Moselem, where he lived for four years. In the spring of 1859 he came to Robesonia and began working at the Robesonia Iron Company’s plant, where he continued until his retirement in 1901, since then he has occupied his pleasant home on Elm street. During his long connection with the iron works he was variously employed in almost every department, being a good mechanic and a regular handy man.

Mr. Spears is a veteran of the Civil war. He enlisted at Reading, in February, 1865, in Company A, 99th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until the close of the war, being honorably discharged after four months of service.

On Aug. 16, 1882, Mr. Spears was married to Elizabeth Yeager, born March 16, 1858, in Heidelberg township, Berks county, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Mayer) Yonson. Mr. and Mrs. Spears have two children, Leah and William. The daughter married Joseph Putt and they reside at Robesonia; they have one son, James H. S. The son married Priscilla Putt, and they have two children, Jennie and James.

GEORGE PUTT, foreman of the ore roasters at the Robesonia Iron Company’s plant, was born near Robesonia, in Heidelberg township, Berks Co., Pa., Aug. 7, 1862, son of Joseph and Catherine (Brigel) Putt.

Jacob Putt, his grandfather, was a native of Germany, and came to Berks county when he was fifteen years of age. He worked as a teamster, hauling charcoal and iron ore for many years; and all of his sons followed the same business. He lies buried at St. Daniel’s (Corner) Church. His sons were: Joseph, George, Thomas, Jacob, Henry, Franklin, Levi and Frederick. His daughters were: Sophia married Adam Deppen; Susan married (first) Elijah Hassler and (second) John Leninger; Peggy married a Mr. Heckler; Sarah died unmarried.

Joseph Putt, father of George, resided in the house in which the battle was born in Heidelberg township, for nearly fifty years. He followed teaming as a business. He married Catherine Brigel, daughter of Adam and Barbara (Weinhold) Brigel. Mr. and Mrs. Putt have long since passed away and are interred at Womelsdorf. They had the following children: Frank, who was killed at the battle of Cold Harbor, while fighting in defense of his country; Charles, who lives at Moselem; Jacob, who is assistant foreman at the Robesonia Iron Company; Sarah, who was accidentally burned to death in childhood; Ellen I., married to Charles F. Mayer, who is stoke tender for the Robesonia Iron Company.

George Putt left school at a very early age in order to commence work at the furnace, beginning to be self-supporting in 1878, and has continued with the Robesonia Iron Company. He has proved himself such a reliable, steady and efficient employee that he has had substantial recognition at various times, and in 1897 he was appointed foreman of the ore roasters, having a gang of twenty-six men under his charge. In politics he is a Republican, and although he lives in a strong Democratic district he was elected school director in the spring of 1903, in which office he served for three years. He has filled several positions, having been town commissioner for two years, and on different occasions has been chosen a delegate to county conventions. He is a member of Washington Camp, No. 67, P. O. S. of A., of Womelsdorf, and of Lodge No. 119, Knights of Pythias, of Robesonia.

On Aug. 16, 1887, Mr. Putt was married to Fianna Achenbach, born April 6, 1864, a daughter of Levi and Mary (Putt) Achenbach, the former of whom is a stone-mason in Mill Creek township. Mr. and Mrs. Putt have three children: Jennie M.; Maggie M., who married Howard Flickinger, a clerk at Robesonia; and Irwin. Mr. Putt and his family reside in their own home on Main street, Robesonia, which he bought in 1900. With his family he belongs to St. Paul’s Reformed Church, in which he is a deacon. He was a liberal contributor to the erection of this handsome church edifice in 1903.

JOSEPH PUTT, foreman of the laborers at the Robesonia Iron Company’s plant at Robesonia, was born Oct. 25, 1859, in his father’s house in Heidelberg township. He is a son of Joseph Putt. He obtained his education at the Furnace school-house in his native township, but was only ten years old when he began work at the Robesonia Furnace, and he has been working regularly in the same employ ever since, being one of the company’s oldest and most reliable employees. He has charge of the labor force of fifteen men that he has filled since 1904. He is a Republican in politics, and on different occasions has been a delegate to county conventions.

On Aug. 13, 1887, he was married to Leah Spears, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Yonson) Spears, and they have one son, James H. S., who is a young man of fine educational attainments. He was educated in the township schools, graduated from the Robesonia high school, later attended two spring sessions at the West Chester Normal School and still later graduated from the Inter-State Commercial College, Reading. Mr. Putt resides in his handsome home on Elm street, Robesonia, which he purchased in the latter part of 1907. Internally he belongs to Washington Camp, No. 37, P. O. S. of A., of Robesonia, of which he has been a trustee since 1899; and to the Knights of Pythias Lodge No. 119, of which he is past chancellor commander. He is a deacon and member of Zion’s Church of Womelsdorf. Mrs. Putt was reared a Presbyterian, but both her parents belonging to the First Presbyterian Church. She is connected with St. Daniel’s (Corner) Church.

GEORGE K. HOLLENBACH. Among the successful business men of Reading, Pa., may be mentioned George K. Hollenbach, who is engaged in painting and paper-hanging, and in the sale of wall paper, paints and picture and room moldings at No. 335 Elm street,
Mr. Hollenbach was born Oct. 6, 1855, at Centreport, Berks Co., Pa., son of John G. and Esther (Kline) Hollenbach.

George F. Hollenbach, grandfather of George K., was a descendant, possibly a son, of Johan George Hollenbach, who was one of the ancestors of this German Palatinate family in America. He emigrated to this country in the ship "Neptune," which arrived at Philadelphia Sept. 24, 1754, on the same ship being one John Hollenbach, who settled in New York, was a shoemaker and had settled in Albany township, Berks county, prior to 1759, in which year he was a taxable of that district. Johan George Hollenbach had a son, Heinrich, who lived and died in Windsor (now Perry) township, and who married Elizabeth Moyer, by whom he had these children: Thomas (1781-1868); John; Heinrich (1791-1874); Elizabeth (1798-1883); Jacob (1807-1871), married Rebecca Kistler, and had children, Henry, Johannes, Nicholas, Caroline, Rebecca, Lydia, Amelia, Mesitta and Jacob (ex-poor director of Berks county); Maria; Eva (1811-1874), and Catherine married Samuel Ruth.

George Hollenbach, the grandfather, was a resident of Mahantango township, Schuylkill county, where in 1805 he was assessed as the owner of property. The name of his wife is not known, but it is known that he had other children, four sons being born to him, viz., John, George, Hollenbach, the latter of whom was an uncle of Frank Hollenbach, of Mantz, Schuylkill county, who died in February, 1907, aged about sixty years. Frank Hollenbach married Catherine Kressley, who died in September, 1907, aged fifty-six years, and they had seven children, as follows: William, Barney, Ida, Tillie, Katie, Mame and Minnie.

John G. Hollenbach, father of George K., was born Sept. 8, 1827, in Schuylkill county, and when three years of age was brought to Berks county by his parents. He learned the trade of a carpenter by trade, and occupation which he followed for many years. A little later, he resided at West Reading with his son-in-law, Charles Feather, and there he died Jan. 23, 1909, aged eighty-one years. He was a member of Kissing's Lutheran Church, where he and his wife are buried. Mr. Hollenbach married Esther Kline, born in 1830, who aged fifty-three years, and to them were born four children, as follows: Franklin died in infancy; Menton died in 1901, aged forty-seven years; George K.; and Catherine married Charles Feather, of West Reading.

George K. Hollenbach was reared to agricultural pursuits, and worked with his parents until eighteen years of age, when he learned the painter's trade from F. R. Kirst, at Bernville, now at Reading, for whom he worked for two years, the next twelve years being spent in the employ of John G. Rhein, of Reading. In 1888, Mr. Hollenbach formed a partnership with his employer, a connection that continued successfully for four years, and in 1892 he engaged in business on his own account. He carries a full and up-to-date line of everything pertaining to the painting and wall papering business, and employs from ten to fifteen men.

Mr. Hollenbach is a Republican in his politics, and has a great deal of interest in public affairs. He and his family were members of St. Thomas Lutheran Evangelical Church, at Bernville, Pa., at which place the family resided for twenty-seven years. Mr. Hollenbach was a member of the church board during his residence. He is now members of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church of Reading. Mr. Hollenbach belongs to Bernville Camp, No. 113, P. O. S. of A.; the I. O. O. F., No. 122, of Bernville; Esther Rebekah Lodge, No. 4, of Reading; and the Royal and Ridgely Protective Association.

On Feb. 26, 1876, Mr. Hollenbach married at Bernville, to Isabella H. Faust, daughter of Jared and Leah (Stoudt) Faust, and granddaughter of John and Sarah (Klopp) Faust, of Western Berks county. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hollenbach, namely: Mary L. m. Thomas C. Natzinger, of Bethel township; Laura A. died in childhood; Sallie m. Maurice Greenawalt, of Bernville, deceased; John died at the age of eight years; William H.; Charles C.; Emma L., and Lizzie M.

FREDERICK ROW, residing at No. 168 Clymer street, Reading, belongs to a family that has been settled in Berks county for a century. His grandfather came to Reading from Germany, and the two succeeding generations have continued to make their home in that city where the founder of the family settled and died.

John Row, father of Frederick, was a native of Reading, born June 4, 1819. He became a shoemaker and followed that trade during the winter months, while in the summer he made bricks, working up to the last and next years of his life. The house in which his son formerly lived is constructed of bricks made by the father, and was built in 1869. During the Civil war John Row served from Oct. 23, 1862 to Aug. 12, 1863, in Company B. 167th Pa. V. I., under Capt. Melcher, but during his term of service was only in one large engagement, that at Stillwater, Va., where the colonel of his regiment was killed. Mr. Row married Miss Sarah Maurer, who outlived her husband many years, passing away June 5, 1905, while he died in April, 1887. Their children were as follows: Susan, Mrs. Alexander Printz; William H., in the grocery business, and married to Miss Sally Bradagan; John D., a plumber; Elizabeth, Mrs. N. L. Ehrgood; Frederick; Mary, widow of T. R. Darlington; and Sallie, wife of Jacob Rhoad. All are residents of Reading.

Frederick Row was born in Reading, Oct. 4, 1862. He attended the public schools of the city, and was graduated from the high school with the class of 1885. He learned the trade of a machinist, and worked at that for over thirty years. At that time he transferred his attention to electricity, and has been engaged in that ever since. He spent a year and a half with W. G. Sands, and then in 1889, went into business as an electrician on his own account, having his shop in his residence. He is a skilled workman and has built up a large patronage, having up to the present wired 1,000 houses for the West Reading Building and Loan Association, alone, besides doing all the work for the well-known contractor, J. R. Bechtel. He is thoroughly established in his line of work, and is one of the prosperous business men of Reading.

On June 14, 1904, Mr. Row married Miss Sallie M. Lands, daughter of Joel and Catherine (Willman) Landis, of Reading. Mr. Row has no near relatives, has transferred his attention to business alone, but is a prominent figure in local politics and in fraternal circles. A strong Republican, he is now serving as judge of elections for the Sixteenth ward, First precinct, and had been the regular assessor of the Third precinct, Third ward, for eight years. Since 1898 he has been a member of the Board of Trade. A lifelong member and director of the Alumni Association, he is now president of its board of directors, and also served one year as president and two years as treasurer. As a Mason Mr. Row has attained the 32d degree, and is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 549; Reading Chapter; DeMolay Commandery, and Raja Temple, and is engineer and architect of the Lodge of Perfection, and has taken an active part in the Sons of Veterans, in which for six years he was assistant to the State adjutant, for one year assistant State treasurer, and one year State treasurer. A man of active mind and broad interests, Mr. Row has been a great traveler and has not only made himself familiar with the greater part of his own country but has also seen much of Europe.

ROBERT W. SPANG, a veteran of the Civil war, who was one of the first to respond to his country's call in 1861, is a native of Reading, born Sept. 15, 1845, son of Daniel and Mary (Young) Spang.
Daniel Spang was a son of George, who resided in Amity township, Berks county. There were five children, George, William, John, Daniel and Catherine. Daniel was a merchant, farmer and manufacturer of millstones engaged in Reading, later ran a chair factory, and finally engaged in the china and toy business, being located at No. 627 Penn street. He was very successful financially, and was a prominent man in Reading. He married Mary, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Young. His father was a pioneer in Reading, and was well known there, a cabinet maker by trade. His father bought property at No. 627-629 Penn street, where most of the family reside, from the Penns, and the old house is one of the landmarks of the city. Daniel Spang died when only forty-eight years of age, but his wife lived to be seventy-eight. His children were as follows: John, who married Elizabeth, widow of H. D. Van Horn, a wholesale dealer in Philadelphia, who now makes her home in the old family place on Penn street; Mary, deceased; H. W., engaged in the electrical business in New York City; Robert W.; Emma, Mrs. Holtman; Daniel, Jr., who died March 18, 1907; Sallie, also at the old home; and Isaac, formerly cashier of the Reading National Bank, who married Miss Emma Hendel. Daniel Spang was a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, a Republican in politics, and a man highly esteemed by all who knew him.

Robert W. Spang was sent to the public schools, but he was of an active, adventurous temperament, and when only fourteen years of age ran away from home and enlisted in Company B, 53d Pa. V. I., being mustered in at Camp Coleman, Lebanon county. When the war broke out in 1861, he was one of the first to enlist, and saw much active service as a private in the Army of the Potomac, participating in the battles of Yorktown, the Wilderness, Antietam and Spottsylvania. In time he was given a furlough and returned to his home once more. His mother refused to let him rejoin the army, as he was still so young, and he never received a formal discharge until during Grover Cleveland's administration.

On settling down again in Reading Mr. Spang went into the Philadelphia and Reading shops, and learned the trade of a machinist, remaining in the employ of that road for eighteen years. The next eighteen were spent in the electrical business, in company with his brother, and during seven of those years he was in New York and other eastern cities. During the last years of Mr. Spang's life he was employed by the Carpenter Steel Company, at Reading. Mr. Spang married Miss Cordelia Filbert, whose great-uncle was the first mayor of Reading. They have one son, Charles R., a plumber by occupation. Mr. Spang is an active man in his religious faith, but he is not a member of any of the Reformed faith. He is a man well known in Reading and has many friends. One of his greatest pleasures is to recall from his present pleasant vantage ground, stories of the many hardships which he endured in the days of the war.

EDWARD SCHULZE, present proprietor of the Elias Schulze & Son, the firm name under which the immense business of the Liberty Dye Works is carried on, at the corner of Millin and Chestnut streets, Reading, is a son of the late planter and manufacturer who was established by his late father, at Philadelphia in 1891, where it was conducted until 1897 when the plant was removed to Reading and located at No. 133 Pearl street. Two years later the firm purchased the old Henry Keeper tanning property, on which they built and conducted the business, retaining the old style. Elias Schulze was born in Saxony, Germany, and came to America in 1881. His business had been learned and pursued in his native land, and he was an expert in the art of tanning.

Edward Schulze, the present proprietor, was fifteen years of age when he came to America and has been familiar with the dye business since boyhood. For four years he was employed in a silk dye house in Philadelphia, and has had many years of valuable experience. He does business successfully, not only in the vicinity and also for several large Philadelphia firms. He employs from thirty-five to forty hands during the season, and his daily output is from six to seven thousand pounds of dyed goods. The plant is 152 x 100 feet in dimensions, and is equipped with the most modern machinery known in the business. It is a one-story building 40 x 152 feet, while the printing department is a two-story and basement, 32 x 122.

Mr. Schulze is very prominent in Masonry, a member of Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. & O. M. Commandery, K. T.; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

CORNELIUS T. ANDERSON, who was for many years a prominent manufacturer of jewelry in Reading, Pa., was born in 1851, in that city, and died June 25, 1901, in Redlands, Cal., son of David B. and Susan T. (Long) Anderson.

David B. Anderson was born in Chester county, and came to Berks county when a boy, receiving his education in the schools of the latter county. He learned the jewelry business at the age of seventeen, and, following for some time, later engaging in the retail shoe business, this he carried on until his death, at the age of forty-four years. His wife, Susan T. Long, was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., and was the mother of two children: Cornelius T., and Sylvanus, who was in the employ of the L. D. Anderson Jewelry Company, at Reading.

Cornelius T. Anderson was educated in the schools of Reading, Pa., and after completing his literary training was employed as a clerk in a shoe store for a few years. He was then employed by his uncle, Fred Anderson, in the retail and wholesale shoe business as a traveling salesman, but later engaged in the manufacture of jewelry in Reading, becoming quite prosperous. Mr. Anderson then disposed of his business interests in Reading and removed to Redlands, Cal., where he had been living about five years at the time of his death. He was a man who made friends wherever he traveled, and had a wide acquaintance in the business world, where he was highly esteemed for his honesty and integrity. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., and the Royal Arcanum, and for seventeen years was the master of the latter organization. Mr. Anderson was an independent man, and was active in the work of that denomination.

Mr. Anderson married, in 1876, Miss Margaret B. Wood, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. S. (Setley) Wunder, and three children were born to this union: Louis, engaged in the manufacture of jewelry in Reading; Ella; and Robert, at school.

HENRY D. CHRIST, farmer, of Penn township, was born there Dec. 31, 1846, son of John and Elizabeth (Dundore) Christ, also natives of Penn township.

John Christ was born on the old Christ homestead, where he himself later engaged in farming, and where he died in 1887, aged seventy-eight years; his wife died in 1891, aged seventy-nine years. They had nine children, namely: Jonathan, Harvey, Anna, Henry D., James D., Levi, Louisa, Catherine and Sarah. Mr. and Mrs. Christ were members of the German Reformed Church. In politics he was a Democrat.

Henry D. Christ attended pay school in his youth, and at the time the town was settled he had been familiar with farming, which occupation he has always followed. He remained at home with his father until eighteen years old, when he went out West, living at Naperville, Ill., thirty miles west of Chicago, where he was employed at farm work for two years. Returning again to the farm, he was with the firm of Wunder for two years, and after his marriage he engaged in farming on the Peter Phillips place in Centre township, Berks county, where he resided for two years. He has since lived on the old homestead in Penn Township, which he farmed for eight years before his father's death, buying the place in 1888 and improving 106 acres of good land, which he has been improving steadily ever since he took the management. The dwelling on this property is one of the landmarks of the vicinity, and is a fine stone house built over a hundred years ago. The farm has been in the possession of the family ever since it was owned by his great-grandfather, whose name is given to the father of D. Christ. It is located one mile east of the borough of Bernville, and the land is fertile and valuable, with an unusually good water supply.

In 1871, Mr. Christ married Mary A. Phillips, daughter of Henry Phillips, of Mohrsville, Pa., and they have two children, Thomas and Rosa Jane, both of whom are with their parents.

Mr. Christ has long been active in the educational affairs of the township, having served as school director for fifteen years and for ten years as treasurer of the school board. He is a Democrat in politics, and has done local work for the party, having been a member of the township election board. He is a member of St. Thomas' Reformed Church and has served as deacon and elder; when younger he was a regular attendant of the Sunday-school.

CHARLES BRENEISER, Sr., manufacturer of cigars and tobacco at Reading for sixty years, was born at Reading March 24, 1828. He attended one of the first public schools opened at Reading in 1834, but he was not permitted to obtain more than a limited common education, because he was obliged to turn his attention, while still a boy, toward assisting in the support of the family. He first engaged as a helper in laying bricks and then gradually learned the trade, but after some years in this laborious employment he changed to cigar-making, and after serving a regular apprenticeship followed the trade until the last twenty years of his life. He then engaged in the business of cigar-making for himself. This he did in 1847, and he continued at the business with increasing success in the vicinity of Seventh and Penn streets until his death, a period covering more than sixty years. At first he was in partnership with William Harman for several years. He engaged in the manufacture of cigars exclusively until 1861, and then became a manufacturer and dealer in smoking and chewing tobacco, both wholesale and retail; and he ever afterward carried on the two together. As his sons grew to manhood they were led to learn and follow the same business, each being admitted to partnership with him. In this way he had four sons in the business (Thomas, Charles Jr., Edgar and Milton), and trading under the name of Charles Breneiser & Sons. The two sons last named retired from the firm in 1898 to engage in the cigar and tobacco business, wholesale and retail, for themselves, and since then they have traded under the name of Breneiser Brothers, locating on the northeast corner of Eighth and Penn streets in April, 1907. The father's firm manufactures many superior and popular brands of cigars which have a large sale throughout the country. This firm has fitted up the most costly and attractive cigar stand in Reading.

Mr. Breneiser, in connection with his increasing business and property interests, was also engaged in organizing the Union Bank in 1857, and the Reading Trust Company in 1886, and he served as a director of these two prominent institutions until his death. He represented the Southeast ward of Reading in the common branch of the city councils in 1862 and 1863; and the Eighth ward in the select branch from 1869 to 1872. He also assisted in the local board of public charities established in 1874 he was selected by the State authorities as one of the three commissioners, and he filled the appointment until he died. His duties required him to visit the public institutions of the county and to make report of their management and condition to the State. He was one of the first subscribers of the stock in the establishment of the Reading Library Company in 1868, and he always continued to show a practical interest in the library. When about 1870 one of the members of the firm had raised a fund to extinguish the debt on the library building and make the institution free to the public. He was actively identified with the Reading Benevolent Society from 1870, and with the Reading Relief Society and the Reading Hospital from their inception. He was one of the founders of the First and Second wards of the Third and Eighth wards who took the first steps toward converting the open commons at the head of Penn street, and along Perkiomen avenue to Hill road, from an offensive depository for all kinds of objectionable materials to an attractive park, by contributing annually toward the expenses for a number of years before 1857, when it came to be recognized as a park and a part of the park system of Reading. He was selected one of the board of trustees of the Charles Evans Cemetery Company in 1893, and served in that capacity until his death.

In 1845 Mr. Breneiser married Mary Ann Nethart, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Goodman) Nehart, of Reading and had two children, Breneiser, Jr., and Mary Neihart. The first was born in 1828, the second in 1838. Mr. Breneiser died June 30, 1909.

Emanuel Breneiser, the father of Charles Breneiser, Sr., was born in 1784, in Lancaster, Pa., and there learned the trade of tobacco. Locating at Reading about the time he became of age, he carried on this business for about fifty years, and then lived in retirement until his death, in 1859. He was one of the early members of the First Reformed Church. He married, April 15, 1811, Miss Sarah Lewis, daughter of the Rev. Adaline Lewis, of Allentown, and had three children: Breneiser, Jr., Lovina and D. Gehra. His second marriage was to a Miss Breneiser, of Oley, who removed to Reading when a young man, and became the proprietor of a hotel on the northwest corner of Seventh and Penn streets, which he conducted for forty years. Emanuel Breneiser was the father of eleven children: Breneisevillie m. Lovina Drenkle; Charles is mentioned above; George was driven part of a youth driving a boat team on the Schuylkill canal; Sarah m. Samuel Derr; Angeline m. John Call; Catharine m. Peter B. Madeira; Emma m. Peter Eiler; Caroline m. Otto Mellett; three daughters died young. The mother died in 1849, aged fifty-six years.

Henry Breneiser, the grandfather, emigrated from Germany about 1780. He conducted an inn at Lancaster for a number of years and died there in 1786. In his last will he devises his property to his wife Salome, and nine sons, Christian, Valentine, Jacob, Simon, Benjamin, Joseph, John, George and Emanuel.

THOMAS BRENEISER, eldest son of Charles Breneiser, Sr., was born at Reading Dec. 23, 1856. He received his preliminary education in the common schools, and after taking a special course in a business college at Philadelphia entered his father's store as a clerk at the age of sixteen years. He showed great interest in the business, and upon the day when he reached his majority his father formed a partnership with him as the junior partner, trading under the name of Charles Breneiser & Son. When the second son became of age he too was included in the firm, the name being changed to Charles Breneiser & Sons; and so the firm name has continued until the present time. For the past ten years Thomas has been in charge of the management of the business on account of the increasing age of the senior partner. The responsibilities of his position requiring all his time he could not take an active interest in political or social affairs; but Sunday-school work in Trinity Lutheran Church and afterward in Grace Lutheran Church received his active encouragement for many years.

In 1878 Thomas Breneiser married Mary Fredericka Grotevant, daughter of Frederick J. and Rosa (Greiner)
Grovevant, of Reading, and by her he has four children, Elizabeth Grovevant, Caroline Valeria, Amos Pfieger and Stanley Grovevant. His wife's father followed the business of practical jeweler at Sixth and Penn streets for a number of years, and then sold the position to Eckstein for the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company, until his death, in 1878. Her maternal grandfather, Christian Greiner, was a master stone-mason at Reading for many years, having had charge of the stone work in the construction of the court-house, which was finished in 1859.

HENRY K. FURLOW, one of the most popular hotel men of Berks county, who is proprietor of the well known "Furlow (Eight Mile House) Hotel" in Brecknock township, the only public house in the township, was born Nov. 29, 1857, in East Cocalico township, Lancaster Co., Pa., son of Henry and Elizabeth (Kegerise) Furlow.

Peter Furlow, grandfather of Henry K., lived in East Cocalico township, where he followed farming all of his life. He married a Waldschmidt, of German extraction, and they had these children: Polly, m. to John Mohn; Anna m. to Levi Trestle; Sallie, who died young; Susanna, who still lives in Lancaster county; John, who m. to Samuel H.; and Samuel, who died young; John, who died aged eighty years; and Isaac, who died aged eighty-four years.

Henry Furlow, father of Henry K., was born Dec. 26, 1821, in East Cocalico township, and died June 1, 1868, being buried at the Swamp Church in Lancaster county. He had a tract of about twenty-five acres of land, from which he cut the timber, which he burned into charcoal and sold to the old furnaces of Berks county. In 1854 Mr. Furlow was married to Eliza Kegerise, born April 30, 1834, daughter of William Kegerise, and she is still surviving, and has lived with her son Henry K. since 1880. To Henry Furlow and his wife were born these children: William, born in February, 1855, died in his second year; Henry K.; Sarah and Kate were twins, born in December, 1859, the former of whom married Samuel Fry, of Vera Cruz, Pa.; and the latter Henry Whitemore of Rossville, Pa.; John, born Sept. 20, 1865, a farmer residing near Wernersville, Pa., married Lillie Dundore; and Frank, born Nov. 16, 1868, is foreman in a planing mill at Pottsville, having formerly been in business with his brother, Henry K., at Denver, Pa. (m. Ida Printz).

Henry K. Furlow was reared upon the home farm until twenty-one years of age, when he engaged in the produce business in his native and surrounding townships, residing during this time in East Cocalico township. He had a large huckster route, over which he went once a week, handling upwards of 2,000 dozen of eggs and about 800 pounds of butter weekly. This produce he sold at the market and at private places in Reading, and during the time he continued in this business, from 1878 to 1889 he was very successful and made many friends. In 1888 Mr. Furlow and Jacob R. Kessler bought the well-known "Eight Mile Hotel" of Mr. Peter Schaeffer, and made a partnership of the hotel continued for one year, when Mr. Furlow bought Mr. Kessler's interest, and has since been conducting the hostelry alone. He rebuilt the premises in 1904, making one of the finest stands in Berks county, outside of the city of Reading. The hotel is situated at the west end of Brecknock township, where four leading roads meet, and on an elevation which affords a beautiful view. The water is of the best and purest in the State, the table fare is excellent and the rooms are well furnished, comfortable and clean, there being six on the first floor, eleven including a bath on the second, and three on the third. Connected with the hotel is a tract of thirty-four acres, with a small orchard, and also a small vineyard. He has also a fine orchard of fruit trees and a vineyard. He has a pear orchard of 250 trees which bear as many as 600 bushels yearly, the varieties being Kiefer's, Beauty Angelo, Berry Clargo, Clapps Favorite and the Sheldon. He has fifty cherry trees, among them the Richmond, Mount Maranga and Black Damson, and a few grape stalks, and a few varieties of apple, which promise well. The orchard covers about three acres.

On May 8, 1889, Mr. Furlow married Lavinia Kramer, born Sept. 8, 1870, daughter of Samuel and Julian (Ziemer) Kramer, farming people of Brecknock township, and to this union there have been born four children: Susan, born here; Samuel; John, a Democrat, and for a period of twenty-one years, from 1885 until 1906, he was postmaster at Knauers. He and his wife are Reformed members of Allegheny Union Church.

Henry Kramer, Mrs. Furlow's grandfather, lived in Brecknock township, Berks county, and died aged about forty-eight. He married Elizabeth Fritz, and their children were: Susan Johnson, of Honeybrook; Kate Schaeckell, of Reading; Eliza Ziemer, of Brecknock; Lovesia Kachel, of Brecknock; Samuel Kramer; Isaac; Elias, of near Bowmanville, in Lancaster county, and Sarah Sparr, of Morgantown.

Isaac Kramer, son of Henry, and uncle of Mrs. Furlow, lives on his father's farm, and also owns three or four other farms in that neighborhood. He married Elizabeth Hoshauer, and their children are: Amanda Stover, of Bowmanville; Mary Kern, of Brecknock; John Stover, of Morgantown; Sallie Smader of Terrace hill; Cassie Kachel, of Alleghenyville; and Isaac, Jr., of Alleghenyville.

Samuel Kramer, son of Henry and father of Mrs. Furlow, was born March 15, 1827, and died May 18, 1906. His wife, Julia Ziemer, was born July 20, 1835, and died April 1, 1901. Their children were: John, Albert Harvey, Samuel, Peter, Sarah Schweitzer, Elizabeth Kachel, Lavinia Furlow, Katie Hoyer and Henry. Henry, the last named, died unmarried at the age of forty-one. With his brother, Harvey, he was in the huckster business in Reading, but in that line, also carrying on his father's farm (which he now owns) and raising fine crops of tobacco.

HENRY A. BEADENCUP, who for ten years prior to his death, May 9, 1900, was engaged in farming at Birdsboro, Pa., was born in the city of Reading, Nov. 11, 1835, son of Henry A. and Sarah (Printz) Beadencup.

Henry Beadencup was a peddler by trade, but in later life located on a farm in Robeson township, where he died in the faith of the Reformed Church.

Henry A. Beadencup was reared in his native city. As a boy he had followed canal boat driving, later becoming master of the boat. He then learned the peddler trade, and at Birdsboro, where he was bookkeeper for a period of thirty-five years. In 1890 he relinquished his trade to give his attention to his farm in Birdsboro, where his death took place ten years later. He was a Republican in politics, and served efficiently as a member of the borough council, and was fraternally connected with the I. O. O. F., Neversink Lodge; and Chandler Lodge of Masons, No. 227, of Reading.

On May 9, 1857, Mr. Beadencup married Margaret Elizabeth Grant, daughter of George and Mary (Hess) Grant, who lived in Birdsboro from the time she was thirteen years of age. Mrs. Beadencup had but one child, Sarah, who died when six years of age. Mrs. Beadencup was a faithful member of the Birdsboro Methodist Episcopal Church and was well known in church and charitable work. She died Nov. 21, 1908, at the age of sixty-eight years.

Laura Grant, Mrs. Beadencup's nephew, who conducted the farm after Mr. Beadencup's death, was born in May, 1865, in Birdsboro, son of John and Susan (Hartz) Grant, and was educated in Birdsboro. He was married in 1886, to Miss Ida Rimby, daughter of Jacob and Mary Ann (Snyder) Rimby, by whom he has had two children, Mrs. Harry Seidel; Anna, single; Margarette, m. to William Buchanan; Iva, single; Harry, Lewis and Catherine.
WALTER S. LOY, a prosperous farmer and justice of the peace of Perry township, was born Nov. 8, 1850, in Windsor township, near Windsor Castle, Berks county, son of Joseph and Cathrine (Smith) Loy.

The popular tradition that two brothers came from the Rhine Valley in Germany, is confirmed in this case. It is born out in the tradition of the occupation of the family. It is that they were wheelwrights and blacksmiths. His name was Hans Jurick (George) Loy, who was born in 1762 and died in 1834 as a man of fifty-two years old. He settled in Windsor township, and owned the farm of 220 acres now in possession of Joseph L. Smith. His wife was Barbara Bossart, of Windsor township, and they had children: Susanna, m. to John George Focht, who purchased Mr. Loy's farm; Molly, who died single; Jacob, m. to a Miss Billig, and father of Leah, Charles and Nathan; Charles, m. to Deborah Leiby, and father of Catherine, Henry W. and Alfred W. (m. Esther Anna Folk, and had two sons, Alfred B. and William D. F.).

Walter S. Loy, great-grandfather of Walter S., was the first of that name to settle in Albany township, locating in that district prior to the Revolutionary war. He was a farmer and owned the original homestead, which is now in possession of Levi Sechler. As far as is known, Mathias Loy had two sons: Adam; and Michael, who had two sons, William and Peter, who resided in Albany township. Michael owned and cultivated a farm of 154 acres, also in Albany township.

Adam Loy was a weaver and farmer in Albany township, owning the Loy homestead, on which he was born and reared, and on which he lived and died. After him and wife had twelve children, viz: Samuel, Michael, George, Jacob, Jesse, Jeremiah, William, Mary, Susan, Adam, Elizabeth and Joseph.

Joseph Loy, son of Adam, was born Oct. 23, 1828, in Albany township, Berks county, and came to Windsor township, when sixteen years of age; here he acquired land and engaged in farming. He was also a wheelwright by trade and did much of this work for the farmers of his vicinity. Mr. Loy, who is well preserved for a man of his years, resides with his son. He married Catharine Smith, who died Dec. 29, 1895, in her eighty-fifth year, and to this union there was born but one child, Walter S.

Walter S. Loy obtained his education in the public schools and at the Keystone State Normal School, teaching school in his native township from 1871 to 1883. In the following year he entered the iron business, a trade which he learned from his father. He had a shop near Dreiblein Station, which he conducted successfully for five years, then purchasing the 115-acre farm on which he now resides. This property he greatly improved, remodelling the barn and beautifying the entire premises, and after the destruction of his house by fire, he erected a handsome brick residence. He now has one of the finest places in the township, his farm being in good condition, fertile, well-managed and productive. Mr. Loy is a Democrat in politics. He is an active worker in the interests of his calling, having served as delegate to a number of county conventions, as school director in Perry township, and in other minor offices. In the spring of 1904, he was elected justice of the peace, in which capacity he has rendered valuable service to the community. Mr. Loy, one of the pre-dominant men of his locality, is a man of influence and means, is public-spirited, enterprising, and a good citizen, and has won the friendship and esteem of a large number of acquaintances.

On Oct. 30, 1877, Mr. Loy married Hettie M. Kline, daughter of Charles A. and Caroline (Merker) Kline, and they have after marriage have been born and christened, two sons and two daughters, namely: (1) Alice died in infancy; (2) Sylvester K., was educated in the local schools and the Keystone State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1898. He then taught school for two terms, after which he entered Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, Pa., graduating in 1905, and he is now attending Johns Hopkins University in Maryland. (3) Carrie m. in June, 1908, Monroe B. Adam, an enterprising citizen and prominent business man of Morgantown, W. Va., and they have one child. Esther Sechler, born Dec. 16, 1907. (4) Joseph was educated in the public schools and is now attending the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, Pennsylvania.

DAVID K. KAUFMAN. One of the old and honored families of Berks county, Pa., is that of Kaufman, which has a worthy representative in Reading in David K. Kaufman, now living retired after a busy and successful career.

The Kaufman family was founded in America by two brothers, Jacob and Samuel Kaufman, who emigrated from Switzerland to America in 1770, the former settling in the Oley Valley and the latter, the great-grandfather of David K., in Maiden Creek, where he became a very prosperous farmer and stock dealer and a man well and favorably known in his vicinity. The name of his wife is not known, but it is known that their son, Samuel, married Catherine Berndt and had a large family, among whom were: John C.; Daniel, two sons; Eliza and Barbara, of whom married a Mr. Sell, and the other David Haas. In religious belief the family members were of the Reformed denomination. The Kaufmans were Whigs up to the time of the formation of the Republican party when they joined the latter organization.

David Kaufman, father of David K., was educated in the old-fashioned log schoolhouse of his day, where, although the floor was rough and the benches poorly constructed and minus the comfortingly fashioned racks of the schools of today, he received a substantial education. After spending a few years at farm labor, Mr. Kaufman engaged in iron manufacturing, purchasing, in company with Samuel Kaufman, the well-known Mt. Laurel Furnaces property, and built up a mammoth business for those days—in fact, the largest in the county. They were the pioneers of the industry in this section, and their business formed the nucleus of the present Temple Iron Works. It may be truthfully said that Temple owes its present prosperity to the Messrs. Kaufman. The continuation and prosperity of this business until they sold out to William H. Clymer & Co., and Mr. Kaufman removed to Milton, Lycoming county, where he built an iron furnace. These brothers also owned the Moseslem Iron Ore Banks, which are still owned and still are the most extensive in the county, although they are not being operated at present time. Another brother owned and operated the furnace at Leesport. Mr. David Kaufman operated his Milton furnace until his death in 1870, in his fifty-sixth year. David Kaufman m. (first) Eliza Keller, and to this union one child was born, David K. He m. (second) Miss Madary, and to this second union there were born a large family, members of whom reside today in Lycoming county.

David K. Kaufman was born at Mt. Laurel Furnaces June 19, 1845, and educated in the schools of Maiden-creek. When a lad of twelve years he went to live with his uncle, Samuel G. Kaufman, with whom he remained until attaining his majority. He started his business life as a clerk for William S. Baer & Co., with which firm he continued several years, then going to Findlay, Ohio, to accept a position as clerk in Senator H. P. Gates' mercantile establishment. Here he remained one year and then resigned to take a like position with B. B. & Co., of Defiance, Ohio, returning to his native county one year later, continued in the same employment as baggage master and extra conductor with the East Penn Railway, operating between Harrisburg and New York, this road being later absorbed by the Philadelphia & Reading Company. Mr. Kaufman then entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading rolling mill, as a common laborer, and after a short time was promoted to roller, continuing with the company for twelve years and four months. At the end of this time he leased the Reading Oil Refinery, which he operated until 1843, when he purchased a farm in the northern part of the city. On this fertile, well-cultivated tract of eleven acres, on Centre avenue, between Amity and Union streets, Mr. Kaufman engaged profitably in truck farming, until he sold in 1907 for $36,000. The property was very valuable for building purposes, for the 180 building lots and before selling it, Mr. Kaufman received many flattering offers. He is now living retired.

In 1869 Mr. Kaufman married Magdalena R. Klohs, and to this union were born two children: William H.; and Sally A., m. to John G. Willets. Mr. Kaufman (second) m. Rosa Leightheiser, a native of Reading, but there have been no children to this union. Mr. Kaufman is fraternally connected with Mt. Penn Council, Royal Arcanum. He is a member of the Evangelical Church, which his wife also attends. For fifteen years he was a director of the Reading Relief Society. In political affairs Mr. Kaufman is a Republican, but never has his name been on the ballot, and for six years was a member of the Reading school board. He is one of the city's substantial citizens, and is well and favorably known throughout his vicinity.

GEORGE W. STOUDT, a retired farmer living at Shartlesville, in Upper Bern township, Berks county, owns a fine farm of 115 acres in that township, where he followed agricultural pursuits for twenty-four years before his retirement. Mr. Stoudt was born at Rehersburg, Berks county, June 9, 1850, son of Isaac K. Stoudt, and grandson of George Stoudt. Both his father and grandfather were natives of Berks county.

George Stoudt was born above Strausstown. He farmed in Maiden-creek township for a time, later returning to Rehersburg, where he died. He married a Miss Kutz, and to their union were born the following named children: William K., George K., Isaac K., John K., Mary, Sarah and Eliza.

Isaac K. Stoudt was born in Maiden-creek township, and died at Rehersburg. He, too, was a farmer, and he owned two farms, one of sixty-five acres and one of 100 acres, as well as a smaller tract of twelve acres. He was a well-known man in his day and a much respected citizen. His wife, Mary, Moyer, was a daughter of Peter Moyer. To Mr. and Mrs. Stoudt were born six children, as follows: Adam W. is living at Rehersburg; Mary R., born 1872, married Daniel Hartman, and to their union are born the following named children: Philip Peifer; George W.; Amelia m. Adam Dieffenbach; Emma; Kate is deceased; and Franklin P. lives near Millersburg, this State.

George W. Stoudt received his education in the public schools, and was reared to farming, remaining with his father until he reached the age of twenty-six years. He then married, after which he began farming in Bethel township, this county, where he remained for six years, moving then to Upper Bern township, where he bought the William G. Rentschler farm of about two acres. There he made his home, and carried on general farming for twenty-four years, meantime adding thirty-three acres to the original tract. Though he has retired from active farm work himself, Mr. Stoudt still retains the ownership of this land, which is a valuable piece of property, well watered and well located. In 1908, Mr. Stoudt built himself a fine home on the main street, in Shartlesville, and he also owns another good place, which he rents. He takes an interest in the life of his community, being an active member of St. Michael's Reformed Church, which he has attended for many years, and he has been a member of the board of school directors of Upper Bern township. He is a Democrat in political sentiment.

Mr. Stoudt's first wife was Annie Maria Rentschler, daughter of William G. Rentschler. She died in 1896, and is buried at St. Michael's Church. Four children were born to this union: Lucretia m. Harry Groff, and lives near Millersville; Mary; and Bernhard, who resides in Upper Bern township, this county; Carrie, unmarried, is living in Reading, Pa.; and Masic died at the age of ten years. For his second wife Mr. Stoudt married Clara L. Rishel, daughter of William and Maria (Wenrich) Rishel, and to them has been born one daughter, Salie V., who is attending school.

MILTON Z. GILBERT, a worthy citizen living retired above Bechtelsville, in Washington township, Berks county, was born on his father's farm in the same township Dec. 28, 1841, son of John and Sarah (Zoller) Gilbert.

The Gilberts have been a difficult family to trace. There were two Bernhard Gilberts, and the relationship existing between them is not known. Conrad and Bernhard Gilbert both took the oath of allegiance Sept. 23, 1760. Bernhard Gilbert, Sr., married Mary Elizabeth Meyer, and their son Bernhard, born 1766, married Susanna Hornetter. Bernhard and Susanna had the following named children: Henry, born 1791; Magdalena, born 1798; John, born 1801 (sponsors: John Adam and Magdalena Gilbert); and George, born 1803 (sponsors: John and Elizabeth Gilbert).

Conrad Gilbert, on Jan. 27, 1861, bought from Ludwig Harrig, of Detroit township, Berks county, a tract of twenty-three acres, situated partly in McCall's Manor. He was represented as a "taylor." Conrad Gilbert and his wife Anna Elizabeth had eight children, namely: Mary Magdalene, born 1758; George Orwig, son of Gottfried Orwig, a Revolutionary soldier; Catharine, born 1760; Anna Elizabeth, 1765; John Peter, 1766; Anna Maria, 1770; Salome, 1772; Christina, 1775.

Bernhard Gilbert, grandfather of Milton Z., lived in Greenwich township, Berks county, to which place he had removed in his early manhood. Among his children were: John (Johannes); and Catharine, Mrs. Ginder, who lived in Rockland township.

John (Johannes) Gilbert was born in Greenwich township, about 1801, and died in January, 1874. He came from New Hanover, Montgomery county, to Washington township, Berks county, where he became a farmer. He owned a farm of about 50 acres. Among his children were: John, and the other three children of the first union. Milton Z. He built an addition to his house, and followed stock raising for many years. A great many sheep were raised in the neighborhood, and he took the stockings from the wool. He was a Democrat, and for six years was assessor and tax collector, and a member of the peace of the township.

He was active in the Lutheran church, and was a member of the building committee when the Hill church was built. He served as deacon and elder. The Hill church property had considerable woodland, and the wood was ordered cut, Mr. Gilbert being given charge of this work. He married Sarah Zoller, of New Hanover township, who survived him some time. Their children were: Aaron, born 1825; Jesse, 1827; Hettie, 1829; Lydia, 1831; Levi Z., 1833; Lovina, 1855; Henry, 1837; William, 1839; Milton Z., 1841; Elizabeth, 1844; Catharine, 1849; and Mary Ann, 1850.

Milton Z. Gilbert was reared to farm work, and gave his services to his parents until he was twenty years old. After he left home he worked one year on the farm in Washington township, and one season on a farm in Chester county. In 1869 he went to Vermillion county, Ill., where he lived one season. He returned to Berks county the same year.

In 1869 Mr. Gilbert married May Cleaver, daughter of Ephraim and Elizabeth (Gross) Cleaver, of Colebrookdale. She died April 30, 1874, in her twenty-sixth year. The three children of this union were: Ephraim, unmarried; Emeline, m. to John Smith, of Shanesville; and Horace, m. to Alice Fraunheiser, and farming the homestead. Mr. Gilbert m. (second) Oct. 28, 1876, Sarah B. Wolfgang, daughter of Michael and Rebecca (Bare) Wolfgang, of Colebrookdale. Mr. Gilbert has an old German Bible printed in 1743, which he obtained from his father, John (Johannes) Gilbert, and this he prizes very highly.

DR. J. H. WAHL, a successful medical practitioner, who has been in general practice in the city of Reading, Pa., since 1904, was born Aug. 19, 1859, in Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county, son of James and Rebecca (Krick) Wahl.

Michael Wahl, great-grandfather of the Doctor, settled in this township, where he owned a farm and where the rest of his life was spent. He and his wife had the following children: John, Samuel, Jacob, Magdalena, Pauline and Kate.

John Wahl, son of Michael, married Susannah Dreible, and to them were born children as follows: Samuel, Nicholas, John, Daniel, William, Abraham, Amos, James (the father of Dr. J. H.), Susannah and Henry. In religious belief the family were connected with the Reformed Church. Amos Wahl, son of John, married Mary Ann Albert, a native of Berks county, daughter of Henry Albert, and to them were born ten children: Ellen (m. Amos Schilt), John (m. Mary Saylor), Frances (m. Matilda Hauf), Mary (m. Reuben Himeshitz), Emma (m. James Rothenberger), and five who died in infancy.

James Wahl, son of John, was born in Berks county, and there followed his trade of blacksmith, also operating a small farm in Lower Heidelberg township. He died at West Reading, Feb. 4, 1905, aged seventy-three years. His wife, Rebecca Krick, who is still living, resides at West Reading, and is sixty-nine years old.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wahl, of whom two grew to maturity: Katie A. m. Morris Geiss, and has two children—Florence and Raymond; and Dr. J. H. The family were members of the Reformed Church.

Dr. J. H. Wahl received his early education in the common schools of his native place and Brummer's Scientific Academy, and on June 28, 1883, graduated from the Keystone State Normal School. He commenced teaching in Berks county, and later taught in Lebanon county, where he remained for two years, and all the time he was spent in the Boyertown high school. He read medicine with Dr. Samuel M. Todd, and entered the University of Michigan, and later the Medical College of Indiana, at Indianapolis. His first field of practice was the town of Adamstown, Lancaster county, where he spent four years, the next thirteen years being at Granville, Dauphin county. In 1904 he located on West Oley street, Reading, where he has since been located in a general practice. Dr. Wahl is a member of the Medical Staff of St. Joseph Hospital, Reading.

In 1891, Dr. Wahl married Annie R. Mohn, daughter of Samuel Mohn, and to this union there have been born two children, one dying in infancy, and Ethel Pauline, who is attending school. Dr. Wahl is a Democrat in politics, and while living in Dauphin county was for eight years county physician. He is connected with the Reformed Church, while Mrs. Wahl is a member of the United Evangelical Church.

J. M. FRIES, a manufacturing confectioner at No. 1013 Chestnut street. Reading, was born in 1862, at Leesport, Pa., son of John W. Fries, who is engaged in the restaurant business in Reading.

John M. Fries received his education in the public schools of Lebanon and Berks counties, and located in Reading in 1876, being employed as an apprentice with C. M. Groff, with whom he remained eight years. He was with a Mr. Kraft for four years, and with Mr. Brown, who bought out Mr. Kraft two years. Mr. Fries engaged in business on his own account in 1887, at No. 1013 Chestnut street, beginning on a small scale. In 1886 he built a three-story factory structure, 134 x 45 feet, and three years later an addition 27 x 45 feet. Owing to an increase in business, Mr. Fries was compelled to build, in November, 1905, another addition, 30 x 35 feet. Mr. Fries has installed the latest candy making machinery, and during the winter his output is on an average of a ton of candy daily. He manufactures chocolates and Easter novelties, and all hard candies. Mr. Fries makes a specialty of ice cream, Fries' Ice Cream, the celebrated, has been registered. Peach Brand Confectionery is another of Mr. Fries' products, and it is widely known for its excellence. He has a very large trade among private families, having two wagons continually on the streets, and employs about twenty-five hands. His factory is in the rear of his store, and his residence is at 11007 Franklin street. He erected a fine dwelling house at Nos. 1017-19. Chestnut street. The store room at his residence is 27 x 80 feet, and is the finest in the city. His factory is operated by one fifteen, two four and two two-horse-power motors, and a twenty-three horse-served inner and outer. It is a widely known for cleanliness, and Mr. Fries takes pleasure in manufacturing the best of goods. He has installed an ice machine, capacity ten tons, for the manufacture of his own ice.

Mr. Fries married Emma Deifenbach, daughter of Walter Deifenbach, of Reading, and they had three children: William, born to him this residence, James, who has charge of his father's factory, Mr. Mamer Moyer; Edna m. William Criswell, manager of the Lester Shoe Store at Reading; and two died young. The family are Methodists. Mr. Fries is a very prominent member of the 2d T. M. P. O. S. of America, A. M. K. G. E. R. A., and the Princes of Bagdad.

JOHN H. WESLEY, a well-known citizen of Reading, and a soldier of the Civil war, was born June 9, 1846, in Robeson township, Berks county, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. Susan (Shafer) Noel, who were born in the vicinity of Marshfield, Dauphin county.

Mark Wesley was a collier and laborer—an honest, hard-working man. When his son, John H., was an infant, he settled at Reading. To him and his wife Susan (Shafer) were born the following children: Phebe Ann, m. to Isaac D. Whitman; Samuel L., who died at the age of two years; Alpha, who were born to this residence, Col. Claycoth T. M., who has charge of his father's factory, Mr. Mamer Moyer; Edna m. William Criswell, manager of the Lester Shoe Store at Reading; and two died young. The family are Methodists. Mr. Fries is a very prominent member of the 2d T. M. P. O. S. of America, A. M. K. G. E. R. A., and the Princes of Bagdad. After completing his education in the schools of Reading, John H. Wesley entered the cotton mill, where he was subsequently made a foreman, and was working as such when, in March, 1862, he entered the employ of Jacob Shafer, with whom he remained until August 6th, when he enlisted in Company B, 128 Pa. V. I., and accompanied his regiment to the front three days later. He had for officers, Capt. William McNall and Col. Samuel Crossdale. The regiment was mustered at Camp Curtin and was then sent on the John McClellan's army. Wesley was with the Louisiana, in which Mr. Wesley took part in Antietam and the second was Chancellorsville. When his first enlistment of nine months had expired he enlisted in Company H, 45th P. V. I., Captain John Obold, and was discharged after the battle of Gettysburg. He again enlisted in July, 1864, in Company I, 161st Pa. V. I., Capt. George S. Rowbotham, and was elected second lieutenant of the company. The command was sent to Baltimore, Md., and was then shipped to Camp Douglas, Chicago, III., to do guard duty, as there were 1,300 rebel prisoners at that station. After returning East, Lieut. Wesley was stationed at Fort Delaware, where the regiment relieved a detachment to allow them to vote, Pennsylvania soldiers having voted in the field. Soon afterward, in 1864, Mr. Wesley was discharged and returned to Reading, entering the employ of the Reading Hardware Company, as an apprentice to the molder's trade. Completing his apprenticeship, he went to Warren county, Pa., and remained about two and one-half years in the oil fields, then going to Renovo for a short time, where he engaged at his trade. He then accepted a position as clerk in the "Renovo Hotel," but in the fall of 1873 returned to the employ of the Reading Hardware Company, remaining with them until 1877, when he accepted a position with the Keystone Hardware Company, at Tenth and Spruce streets as foreman. After one year he returned to the employ of the Reading Hardware Company, and on Feb. 14, 1879, accepted a position with the Penn Hardware Company, with which company he has continued to the present time in the capacity of foreman on an average of 125 men in the molding department.

In December, 1872, Mr. Wesley married Emma Swegar, daughter of David and Margaret (Bosserman) Swegar, and to this union there were born four children: Esther M., deceased; Marion J., Carrie S., and J. Frank. The latter, one of Reading's most popular young men, was drowned July 4, 1906.

John H. Wesley is a member of Renovo Lodge, No. 495, F. & A. M., and of Liberty Fire Company, which he joined in 1866. He is a staunch Republican in his political belief, but takes only a good citizen's part therein.

ADAMS. Anthony Adam, a potter by trade, was born in the Fatherland in the year 1718, and emigrated to America in the year 1731. He sailed from the ship on the Snow "Molly," commanded by Captain John Cranch. This vessel arrived at Philadelphia, and the passengers, having taken the oath of allegiance to the English Sovereign, were qualified to land, Oct. 28, 1741. Anthony Adam's age is entered on the passenger list as twenty-five years. On Feb. 7, 1746, he purchased a tract of land in the Township of Pennsylvania, a warrant for a tract of 136 A. 146 P. of land in Albany township, then a part of Philadelphia county. This land was surveyed for him by the Surveyor-General of the Province, June 6, 1752. The farm is now in the possession of Nathan Weisner of Round Top, Albany township, Berks county.

Anthony Adam, or Andoni Adam, as he wrote his name, received a warrant for a tract of 135 A. and 47 P. "above Maxstawn," Feb. 7, 1748. In 1761 he sold 140 acres of his land in Albany township to John Reinhard. He was administrator of the estate of Albrecht Stimmel, of Albany township, in 1796, being the chief creditor. His administration account was audited and approved in December of 1768. The date of death of Anthony Adam, of Albany township, is not known.

Anthony Adam (2), son of Anthony of Albany township, was born about the year 1736, and was a resident of the adjoining township of Windsor in 1758, described on the tax list of that year as a single man. He married Rosina Dunkel, widow of Vincent Lesher, of Richmond township. Anthony Adam served during the Revolutionary War as a private in Captain Jacob Ebright's Company, Col. Samuel Ely's Battalion of Berks County Militia, as appears from a muster roll showing that this company was in the service of the United States from Oct. 1, to Oct. 17, 1781 (Pennsylvania Archives, 5th Series, Vol. V, pp. 279-281).

In 1799 Anthony Adam (2) received from the State of Pennsylvania, a patent for 30 acres of land called "Myer's Corners," in Northumberland (Columbia) county, Pennsylvania, and in 1806, received a patent for another tract of 426 acres called "Quincy" on the same creek. These lands he conveyed to his four sons. Anthony Adam died sometime after April 27, 1809. He had at least four children, as follows: Peter, of Windsor township, Berks county; born Oct. 1, 1762, died July 4, 1849; m. Catharina Hausknecht; Anthony (3) was of Briar creek township, Columbia county; Jacob Adam, of Richmond township, Berks county, m. Susan Kline; Abraham, of Briar creek, born Oct. 7, 1799, died in Briar creek, July 6, 1855, m. Sarah Miller.

Anthony Adam (3) established the Adams homestead in Briar creek township, Columbia county, Pa. He was the son of Anthony Adam and Rosina Dunkel, of Windsor township, Berks county, and was born Dec. 23, 1766. He served as a private in Captain Christian Madery's Company of Berks County Militia, which was "Ordered to Wyoming by the Supreme Executive Council of the State of Pennsylvania." This company arrived at Fort Allen Nov. 21, 1787, at Wyoming, November 26th, and was discharged January 6, 1790. (Pennsylvania.) He purchased seventy-five acres of land in Fish Creek township (later a part of Briar Creek). The tract of land called "Manheim," containing 307 acres, was deeded to him by his father, Sept. 3, 1806. On Oct. 15, 1811, he received a deed from his three brothers for his fourth interest (106 acres) in the tract of land called "Quincy." He married Catherine Glass, born Aug. 30, 1786, died in Charleroi T. D. died April 29, 1822. Both are buried in the Briar Creek Reformed Church-yard, five miles west of Berwick, Pennsylvania. The children of Anthony Adam and Catherine Glass: (1) Hannah, born May 10, 1790, died Sept. 3, 1870, m. Daniel Zane, of Briar Creek. (2) William, of Briar Creek, born Dec. 15, 1791, died April 36, 1860, m. Susanna Hess. He served during the War of 1812-1814, as a private in Captain George Hilder's Company in the 112th Regiment of Columbia County Militia, under Colonel Andrew Keller. (3) Samuel, of Briar Creek, born in 1793, died Nov. 29, 1846, m. Esther Hill. (4) Anna, born (3) m. Elsie Engle, and removed to Rock Island, III. (5) Rachel, born Nov. 29, 1797, died April 8, 1852, m. in June, 1817, William Trugh, of Berwick. (6) Abraham m. a Goble, and removed to Rock Island, Ill. He served in the same company with his brother during the War of 1812-1814. (7) Elizabeth m. John Hutton, removed to Dallas in 1827. (8) Susan, born May 12, 1803, died Sept. 26, 1840, unmarried. (9) Mary Magdalene, born in 1806, died June 17, 1879, m. Aug. 22, 1824, Enos Leidy, of Berwick and later of Manayunk, Philadelphia. (10) Sarah Adam, born May 29, 1807, died March 17, 1872, m. Jacob Moyer, of Berwick.

Samuel Adams, son of Anthony Adam and Catherine Glass of Briar Creek township, Columbia county, Pa., was born there in 1793, and remained in the same township. He married June 27, 1819, Esther Hill, who was born March 21, 1802 and died March 9, 1896, daughter of Captain Frederick Hill, proprietor of the old "Fort Jenkins Inn," and his wife, Catherine Conner. Captain Frederick Hill was born March 8, 1772, and died Aug. 21, 1823. He was commissioned Captain of the Sixth Company of the 112th Regiment of the Militia of Pennsylvania, by Governor Thomas McKean, Aug. 3, 1807, as appears by the original commission in the possession of Charles P. Hill, Esq., of Hazleton. Captain Frederick Hill was the son of Frederick Hill of Berks county, by his wife Maria, daughter of Judge Jacob Levan, Colonial Judge of the Courts of Berks County. Frederick Hill, Berks County, father of Captain Frederick Hill, served during the Revolutionary war in the Continental Line. He enlisted May 1, 1776, as a private in Capt. Lewis Farmer's Company in the Pennsylvania Rifle Regiment commanded by Colonel Samuel Miles. After the capture of Colonel Miles and the greater portion of the command at the Battle of Long Island, Frederick Hill, with other survivors of the Rifle Regiment, enlisted in The State Regiment of Foot. He served in this regiment in 1777 as a private in Captain John Nice's Company, participating in the Battles of Brandywine and Germantown. (Pennsylvania Archives, 5th Series, Volume II.)

Samuel Adams and Esther Hill of Briar Creek township, Columbia County, Pennsylvania, had the following children: Anthony, born Feb. 26, 1821, died in infancy; Mary Ann, born Jan. 31, 1822, died March 1, 1877, M.M. (first) Louis Traugh, of Berwick (died Nov. 5, 1850) and (second) Warren Vanderven; Enos L. is mentioned next.

Enos L. Adams, of Briar Creek township, Columbia county, Pa., son of Samuel Adams and Esther Hill, of the above place, was born Aug. 24, 1844. He married Margaret Kisner, who was born March 13, 1847, Margaret Kisner, who was born April 21, 1827, and died May 19, 1872, daughter of John kinetic and Lydia Kinney. Lydia Kinney was born Nov. 10, 1805, and died Sept. 5, 1851, daughter of John Kinney and granddaughter of Major John Kinney, a Revolutionary officer of New Jersey.

William L. Adams, son of Enos L. and Margaret (Kisner), was born at the Adams homestead in Briar Creek township, Columbia county, Pa., May 27, 1850. He was educated at Mt. Union College, Alliance, Ohio, graduating with the Class of 1881. On Aug. 15, 1888, he was married at Fort Worth, Texas, to Lizzie A. Davis, only daughter of Willis G. Davis and Adelia Anderson, of Colon, Mich., and a graduate of the Michigan Seminary, Kalamazoo, Mich. Since March 1890, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Adams have resided at Hoquiam, Washington. They have four children living, viz: Gaylord, born Aug. 8, 1890; Gwinere Sept. 12, 1893; Elizabeth, Jan. 30, 1898, and William L., Jr., May 27, 1907. William L. Adams is President of the First National Bank of Hoquiam, and president of the Keystone Timber Company of Hoquiam.

Andrew Nelson Bodey was born Nov. 30, 1866, and was educated in the public schools of Reading. His first business was as a cabinet finisher, and he continued at this for about ten months, after which he engaged with W. H. Lunden, the manufacturing confectioner. He learned the business, and, step by step, worked himself up, until he now holds the responsible position of manager, being at the head of 450 people.

Mr. Bodey was married, Jan. 11, 1880, to Sallie Tupper, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Tupper, of Reading. Four children have been born to this union: Harry, who died when one and one-half years old; and Norman, Walter and Carl, all at school. Mr. Bodey belongs to the Sons of Veterans, the P. O. S. of A., and the Knights of Friendship. He is a member of his town's German Reformed Church. Mr. Bodey is independent in politics. He makes his home at No. 126 Windsor street.

GEORGE WERT, late a prosperous farmer in the employ of E. & G. Brooke, and a man of many firm friends, was a native son of Samuel and Catharine (Ridge) Wert.

Mr. Wert received his education in the common schools of his native county, and in his young manhood came to Berks county, where he attended the emoluments of Col. C. E. B. Winters and Col. C. E. Wert, at Joanna Furnace. There he continued for the next fourteen years, proving himself a faithful and conscientious workman. On Nov. 1, 1864, he came to Birdsboro, and from that time until his death he was employed by E. T. Weir. He manufactured his own farm and dairy. He thoroughly understood his work, and took great pride in doing it well, winning thereby the high esteem and confidence of his employers. He was honest and upright in all his dealings, and attended very strictly to his own business. It has been said of him that his work was his good deed. He died Aug. 29, 1895, mourned by all who knew him.

On Jan. 14, 1850, Mr. Wert married Amelia Hoffman, daughter of Peter and Margaret (Mock) Hoffman, and of the nine children that blessed their union, seven are still living. These were: Margaret m. William Seigfried; A. m. has three children, George E., Hannah A. and Lula I.; Kate m. Harry Roberts, and has six children, Emma, Millie, Morris, William, Carrie and Albert; Samuel m. Emma Buchter, and has six children, Anna, Elmer, Maggie, Millie, Katie and Harvey; Elizabeth m. Morris John (no issue); Peter m. East Chatham, N. Y., has two children, Carroll and Amelia; George m. Edith Hoffman, and has two sons, G. Howard and Warren; Nettie m. A. Watson Keagy, and has five children, Edith, Alma, Harold, Alice and Marie; and Emma and Amelia died in infancy.

Mr. Wert was a member of St. Michael's Episcopal Church. In his political faith he was a Democrat, and cast his ballot in support of the men and measures of that party. He was an active member of the Junior O. U. A. M., to which, at the time of his death, he had belonged for more than thirty years. Mrs. Wert still makes her home in Birdsboro, where she is highly respected by all who know her.

ANDREW N. BODEY, the efficient and capable manager of Lunden's Candy Factory, Reading, Pa., is one of that city's prominent and enterprising business men. He is a son of Nelson P. Bodey, a dealer in fruits and provisions, who died in February, 1908, aged fifty-nine years. He was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion, in Company E, 151st Pa. V. I., serving nine months, and was wounded during the second days' fighting at Gettysburg, being shot in both legs. He served with his regiment, and, except for these wounds all the rest of his life. Andrew N. Bodey's mother, Isabella (Mengel) Bodey, died when he was three years old, he having been the only child born to this union. Nelson P. Bodey's second wife, Clara, bore him five children, two of whom are now living: Norman, and Addie, the wife of Harry McGrath.
and from that time until his death he engaged in its cultivation. He had a number of children, among whom were: Frederick, Peter and Jacob.

The first Douglass to leave Scotland and settle in Pennsylvania was George, great-grandfather to Mrs. Campbell, who founded the town of Douglassville. His farm, as shown on the township map, is the place and it was his daughter Amelia who became Mrs. Leaf. She died aged eighty-three. The original Douglass homestead at Douglassville has never passed out of the family, interests being still held by Mrs. Campbell.

Through a marriage of Miss Mary May, a niece of George Douglass (2), to George Leaf, Mrs. Campbell is also connected with another old Pennsylvania family.

She is a member of Christ Church and has always been active in the various departments of church work. She is also prominent in the Ladies Auxiliary Board of the Church and has served on the housekeeping committee. The demands upon her time and strength are, however, becoming a little too heavy, and she is gradually retiring from many of her activities, a necessity which is greatly to be regretted.

HENRY HUBER, a resident of Reading since his first coming to this country in 1869, was born in Wurttemberg, Germany, in 1841.

Frederick Huber, father of Henry, lived and died in Germany. He was a stone cutter by trade, and brought with him a small portion of his son’s name. His wife had a large family of children, fifteen of them reaching maturity, namely: Lizzie; Frederick, of New Jersey; Augustus, of Paris, France; Henry; Mary, deceased; Gustave, at the old home in Germany; Hermann, of Germany; Gottlieb, William and Charles, of St. Louis, Mo., the latter now deceased; Frederick of the old home; zmq; Ann, of Leipsic, Saxony; John, of Paris; Ernst, in the stone business at the old home; and Theodore, an engineer in Germany. Three other children died in infancy.

Henry Huber learned stone-cutting from his father, and worked under him until he was twenty-eight years old. He then determined to make a new country, and in 1869 he landed at New York. He proceeded immediately to Philadelphia and secured work there at his trade, but after only two weeks left that city for Reading and has ever since made his home there. He found employment readily and remained for thirty-four years with his original employer, Christian Eben, and with the sons who succeeded him. Finally, in 1903, after his long period of faithful and efficient labor, Mr. Huber gave up his place and left home to revisit the scenes of his youth. He spent nearly four months abroad, and then, on returning to America, went into business on his own account, getting out stone for building purposes, mainly sandstone. Mr. Huber is in partnership with Andrew Honeker, and the firm is located on Locust street, between Elm and Buttonwood, where they do a large business, and bid fair to become one of the leading independent concerns in the city.

Mr. Huber married Miss Pauline Grouper, and three children have been born to them, as follows: Emma, who married Edward C. Haggerty, a sergeant of the Reading police, appointed by Mayor Gerber; Harry; and William. Politically Mr. Huber is a Democrat, and religiously a Lutheran, a member of the Reading Church. During his long period of service under another Mr. Huber fully demonstrated the many sterling qualities of his character, and he well deserves the success that is so abundantly rewarding his efforts now that he is in business for himself.

DANIEL M. GRILL, a citizen of Reading, Pa., who is retired, resides in his home at No. 112 South Third street in this city. Mr. Grill was born in Cumru township, Berks county, Pa., July 14, 1842, a son of Adam and Catherine M. Grill.

Of the Grill family, at least three generations having been born in Berks county. Philip Grill, grandfather of Daniel, married a Miss Lesher, and they were early settlers in Cumru township, where he became possessed of an excellent farm. Their children were: John, deceased, formerly an extensive farmer in Ohio; Samuel, deceased, also owned farming land until 1860; Adam, father of Daniel Grill; Joseph, who died aged eighty-two years at Sinking Spring; Philip, deceased, of Cumru township; Catherine, who married Jacob Hart; Henry, father of Daniel Grill's wife; Charles, who married Rebecca, John, Jacob, Levi, Louis, Catherine, Kate, Polly, Sally and Bessee; Lesh, who married Jacob Brossman; Mrs. Cubbison; and Bessee, who m.
George Matz. In religious belief the family were members of the Reformed Church. Politically Mr. Grill was a Democrat.

Adam Grill, father of Daniel, followed agricultural pursuits all of his life, dying in 1857, aged sixty-four years, while his widow survived him until March 31, 1888, being eighty-eight years old at the time of her death. They were the parents of these children: Bennewell died young, as did also David; Samuel deserted, m. Betsy Venida; Betsy m. Henry Venida; Catharine married Richard Hessinger; Levi, who lives on the old homestead, m. Mary Eshelman; Sarah m. Nicholas Moser; Adam m. Sarah Dewees; Lydia m. James Leningr; Daniel; and Henry, of Oakbrook, m. Mary Heister. Mr. and Mrs. Grill and their family were also members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Grill was a Democrat in politics, and served faithfully for a number of years as supervisor of his township.

Daniel Grill, although receiving a good German education, was but poorly versed in English. He remained at home until twenty-two years of age, when he purchased a farm in Cumru township, and this he operated for thirty-two years, operating a dairy in conjunction therewith. Mr. Grill sold his interests in 1897 and retired to Mohnsville, but in 1903 located in Reading, where he has since resided, his home being located in South Third street.

In 1864, Mr. Grill married Mary Matz, daughter of William and Sarah (Straub) Matz, natives of Berks county, and to this union were born four children: Charles W., m. to Kate Lewis; Frank H., m. to Elizabeth Shonders, and Cress; George, died; and Margaret, m. to Edgar Glasser.

Both Mr. Grill and his wife are members of the Reformed Church, to which he has always given a very liberal interest both spiritually and financially. He is a life-long Democrat, and since coming to Reading has served in the office of tax collector, while during his residence in Cumru township he was treasurer of that township for a number of years. He is a man who is justly held in high esteem by his fellow citizens.

DICK FAMILY. The city of Reading counts among its most valued citizens descendants of German settlers who came to Pennsylvania direct from the Fatherland, bringing with them the solid virtues and thrifty habits which characterize the nationality. The Dick family belongs in this category and it can be traced to one Jacob Dick, who came to America from Germany and is known to have taken part in the Revolutionary war.

This Jacob Dick was the grandfather of the late Amos L. Dick, at the time of his death a venerable resident of Reading. After the close of the Revolutionary struggle Jacob Dick settled in what was then the struggling village of Reading, where he established himself in business, doing chair-making, spinning wheel manufacturing, and also working as a carpenter. The site of the business was where the photograph gallery of Mr. Fritz now stands. Jacob Dick died in 1819; his wife passed away ten years later, and they had two children: ten years, seven months, twenty-six days, at Colebrookdale; Nicholas, born Nov. 28, 1815, died in October, 1878, aged fifty-seven years, ten months, six days, in Cumru township; Jacob, born Nov. 24, 1817, died aged eight years, two months, twenty-nine days; Amos L. was born Aug. 10, 1819; DeTurk, born Sept. 10, 1822, died March 7, 1844, aged sixty-two years, five months, twenty-seven days, in Exeter township; Sophia, born in 1823, married James Smeck, and died May 6, 1870, aged forty-six years, seven months, twenty-eight days, at Reading; Jacob L., born Nov. 14, 1824, died Feb. 6, 1904, aged seventy-nine years, three months, twenty-eight days, in Indiana; Solomon born April 1, 1850, died Oct. 9, 1872, aged forty-two years, six months, eight days, in Indiana.

After their marriage the parents of Amos L. Dick settled in Cumru township, along the Schuylkill river, and the father followed farming from 1806 continuously until 1868, when he retired, dying Dec. 11, 1859. He owned a farm of 155 acres. His wife died March 13, 1870, aged eighty-three years, twenty-one days. They both were interred in the Charles Evans cemetery.

Amos L. Dick attended the subscription schools in the neighborhood of his home, which were the only available schools during his boyhood, and by the time he was sixteen years of age had acquired a knowledge of reading, writing, and arithmetic. His practical education had been in no way neglected, either farm work claiming a large part of his time and attention. In assisting his father he learned how to manage for himself, and in 1848 he married and settled on a farm of 100 acres, which he purchased, in Robeson township.

Mr. Dick remained on this farm for twenty years, in 1868 removing to Reading.

After coming to the city Mr. Dick followed contracting and building for some years, and was very successful. At length increasing years impelled him to retire entirely from business activity. He could recall the time when Reading's population did not exceed 4,000, long before it became a city. He had lived in the city from its early infancy and the dwelling place of some of the most intelligent and cultured people of the great State of Pennsylvania. He occupied a very comfortable home at No. 29 North Ninth street, and was probably one of the most venerable, as he was one of the most esteemed, residents of his city. He died May 19, 1907.

In 1848 Mr. Dick married Amelia Dunkle, born Dec. 18, 1828, daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth (Althouse) Dunkle. The Dunkle family is a very old one in Berks county, having been established here by Jacob Dunkle, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Dick. Her grandparents were Jacob and Christina Carl of Reading, and her parents were John and Sophia (DeLong) Dunkle, and her maiden name is DeLong. Mrs. Dick had one daughter, Emma, who married John DeLong, wholesale leather merchant of Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. DeLong have had three children, viz.: Flora, Howard and Oscar, the latter deceased. Mrs. Dick was one of a large family, her brothers and sisters being: Mary Ann, Caroline, Morgan, Sarah A., Elizabeth C., Albert, Killian G., David G., and James.

Mr. Dick was a life-long Democrat. He was the oldest member of the First Reformed Church at Reading, which he joined in 1839, his wife joining in 1846.

Nicholas Dick, son of Jacob (2), was born Nov. 28, 1815, and died Oct. 4, 1875. He married Esther DeTurk, who still survives, being now one of the oldest residents of Reading. Her home is at No. 140 South Ninth street. Mr. Dick was a life-long Democrat, and a worthy member of the Reformed Church. His father built the residence which still stands on the old Dick homestead, in Cumru township, in 1809. The barn he built in 1809 and the smoke-house in 1810. They were Aug. 23rd.

Henry Dick, son of Nicholas, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, April 24, 1845. He was educated in the district schools and at Brunner's Business College, and then engaged in farming, continuing thus until 1885, when he retired. In 1874 he became interested in the Farmers' Market-House Company, having a half interest, which he retained until the time of his death, May 21, 1901. Mr. Dick was a man of sterling integrity and was at various times elected by his townsmen to hold office, serving as a member of the common council, from the Township, in 1877 and 1879, and declining a renomination.

Mr. Dick married Mary A. Kissinger, daughter of Washington S. and Elizabeth (Yost) Kissinger, and she lives at No. 106 South Ninth street, Reading. They had children as follows: Charles, Franklin and Henry (who is attending Princeton University, as a member of the class of 1909).

C. K. Dick, a senior member of the firm of Dick Brothers, brass founders and pattern-makers, of Reading, was born March 31, 1875. He attended the district schools and the Reading high school, and subsequently took a course at Stoner's Business College, Reading, after which he served an apprenticeship to the trade of pattern-maker, at the National Brass & Iron Works. After a few years of work as a journeyman, he engaged in business on his own account, in 1897 organizing the well-known Excelsior Brass Works, of which firm he served as secretary and treasurer until 1901. On March 1, 1902, Mr. Dick engaged in business with his brother Franklin K., at No. 120 Penn street, the firm being known as Dick Brothers Manufacturing Company. They are employed in the works, the local trade is large and steady, and extends through many States, and the firm is enjoying increasing prosperity.

Mr. Dick married Eva M. Baldwin, daughter of Franklin D. and Amanda D. (Rudolph) Baldwin, of Lancaster county, and one child, Martha Elizabeth, has been born to this union. Mr. Dick is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being connected with Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., Excelsior R. A. Chapter, No. 237, Reading Commandery, No. 43, K. T., Reading Lodge of Perfection, Caldwell Consistory, thirty-second degree, of Bloomsburg, Pa., and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. Since 1901 Mr. Dick has been superintendent of the well-known Farmers' Market-House, Inc., being also treasurer and a director of said corporation.

FRANKLIN K. DICK, junior member of the firm of Dick Brothers, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, June 26, 1878. He spent his early school days in his native township, later attending the public schools of Reading, after leaving which he served fifteen months at the trade of locksmith. He later learned the pattern-making trade, as well as engraving and chasing, and remained with the Reading Hardware Company, his employment extending six and one-half years. On March 1, 1902, with his brother, Charles K., Mr. Dick engaged in business at No. 120 Penn street, under the firm name of Dick Brothers.

On the organization of the firm it was the intention of the brothers to manufacture nothing except brass castings, and they have added to the list of their products, which now include plumbers' supplies and a fine line of plumbers' specialties. The works were first furnished power by a five-horse-power engine, but they now have a seventy-five-horse-power engine and 120 horse-power boiler. The works are equipped with the latest and best machinery, and employ nothing but skilled mechanics.

Mr. Dick married Miss Margaret Schick, daughter of Christian and Mary Schick, of Reading, and two children, Miriam and Carroll S., have been born to this union. Mr. Dick is a member of the First Reformed Church, and is a member of the Sunday-school. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., and of the P. O. S. of A., and is very popular in all of these organizations. His residence is at No. 33 North Ninth street.

ELI D. DICK, a well-known business citizen of Reading, who is associated with the Bard Hardware Company, of that city, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, July 13, 1853, a son of Nicholas Dick and a grandson of Jacob Dick (2), and a nephew of the late Amos L. Dick of Reading.

Mr. Dick attended the public schools of his native township, and one term at Myerstown, Lebanon county, and assisted his father at farming until 1882, in the fall of which year he came to Reading, and accepted a position with the firm with which he is still connected.

Mr. Dick married Miss Catharine DeHart, and they reside at No. 1120 Franklin street. They are the parents of three children: George W., who is attending school; Esther L., deceased; and Mary A. He and his wife are members of the Reformed denomination.

OLIVER MOHR LANDIS, an enterprising business man of No. 427-431 North Sixth street, Reading, Pa., engaged in doing mantel, fire-place, grate, tile and mosaic work, is a native of Berks county, born in 1868, in Washington township, son of George O. and Mary (Mohr) Landis.

Mr. Landis attended the district schools and West Chester Normal school, and then returned to Berks for a short course in Hereford township. Mr. Landis then went to Pottstown and learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed there for three years, and one year in Philadelphia, with some success. He next went to Seattle, Wash., being there one year after the great fire in that city. He also engaged in the Baltimore plumbing business, and thence obtained a position with a well known old Esterly Marble stand, and here he has continued successfully up to the present time.

Mr. Landis married Clara Stoudt, and they reside at No. 332 Windsor street, Reading. They have six children: Russel H., Mary D., Ruth, Grace C., Oliver and Harrison. In political matters Mr. Landis is a Republican. He and his wife attend the First Reformed Church.

AARON S. WAGNER, one of the prosperous business men of Shoemakersville, Berks Co., Pa., was born April 26, 1866, in Penn township, son of Harrison L. and Mary (Speicher) Wagner.

John Wagner, great-grandfather of Aaron S., was born Nov. 20, 1764, and settled on a large farm in Jefferson township, which is now owned by Isaac Henne. He was married three times, the names of his wives being Miller, Leymaster and Conrad. He died July 11, 1841. We have no record of the children by his first wife, but those of the second marriage were John, Isaac, Jacob, Samuel and Daniel. By the third marriage he had one child, who married an old man, and the name of the wife of John Henne. Mrs. Henne survived her husband a number of years; she died, in 1908, at her late residence, Bernville, Pennsylvania.

Daniel Wagner, grandfather of Aaron S., was born in Tulpehocken (now a part of Jefferson) township, and died in 1860, being buried at the Union Church. He was a well-known and influential citizen, was a prominent Democrat, and was active in the affairs of the church. Mr. Wagner married Eva Lengel, who was born in 1818, and died in 1908, daughter of Israel Lengel of Tulpehocken, and had three children: Levi, Elizabeth, Harrison, Charles, William and Martin, and one child, who died when young. He died in 1860, being buried at the Union Church.

Aaron S. Wagner, the son of Daniel, was born in Tulpehocken (now a part of Jefferson) township, and died in 1880, being buried at the Union Church. He was a well-known and influential citizen, was a prominent Democrat, and was active in the affairs of the church. Mr. Wagner married Eva Lengel, who was born in 1818, and died in 1890, daughter of Israel Lengel of Tulpehocken, and had three children: Levi, Elizabeth, Harrison, Charles, William and Martin, and one child, who died when young. He died in 1860, being buried at the Union Church.
Nov. 13, 1894. He was a leading Democrat, and served his township in various offices. He and his family were members of the Reformed Church at Bernville. Mr. Wagner married Mary Speicher, and they had two children, Aaron S. and Alvin S., who received a new high school, under the firm name of Wagner & Miller manufactured hosiery at Reading until 1900, at which time Mr. Wagner formed a partnership with Jeremiah W. Heckman, of Shoemakersville. They engaged in the business with F. J. Fiedler, who continued for a number of years. Mr. Wagner's interest. Mr. Wagner is a Democrat in politics, and socially he is connected with the Odd Fellows, the Shepherds of Bethlehem No. 60, of Centreport, and the Modern Woodmen. He and his family attend the Reformed Church at Shomakersville.

On June 9, 1889, Mr. Wagner was married to Kate Marburger, daughter of William H. and Esther (Reed) Marburger, and four children have been born to this union: Annie R., Mary J., William H. and Marguerite I.

Benjamin F. Sheeder, a prominent business man of Reading, Pa., who is conducting the Sheeder Planing Mill, located at the corner of Spruce and Mifflin streets, was born in Montgomery county, Pa., in 1831, son of Philip Sheeder (born April 15, 1808), a blacksmith by trade, who was engaged as an iron worker.

Mr. Sheeder secured his education in the common schools of Reading, and while still a boy apprenticed himself to the carpenter's trade, working for John Fink & Co., where the Goetz tannery is now located. He continued in the employ of this company for twenty-five years, and then engaged in outside contracting until 1901, when he organized the Sheeder Planing Mill Company, with the following well-known business men: Dr. Walter A. Rigg, and Samuel B. Rigg. This company does all kinds of contract mill work, stair work, etc., the factory and grounds cover an area of 110 x 480 feet, the building being equipped with the latest machinery, doing an extensive amount of work in Reading and the surrounding country, as well as in the States of Delaware and New Jersey. The furnishing all of the building material for the Colloidal Treatment Building at the City Hospital and Masonic Temple, and many others of Reading's substantial buildings. The company employs from twenty-five to thirty hands, and are kept busy the year around. Mr. Sheeder is a member of the Liberty Fire Company. In his personal capacity, he is a matter of history that during the early period of their conversion, the old Psalof Millbach, Lebanon county, and they have children as follows: Harry W., Elsie M. and Thomas C.

LOUIS POHLIG, a well-known resident of Reading, who is engaged in the Deppen Brewing Company of this town as brewmaster, is a native of Germany, born in Saxon, July 4, 1865, both of his parents dying in that country.

Mr. Pohlig received his education in the place of his nativity, and came to America in 1885, settling in Reading. He attended a school of instruction on brewing in New York City, then going to Philadelphia where he was second brewmaster for three years. Returning to Reading Nov. 1, 1901, he engaged as brewmaster with the Deppen Brewing Company, and has continued to act in that position to the present time—brewing porter, lager beer, etc. In religious belief Mr. Pohlig is a German Lutheran. He is a member of the Turnverein, president of the German Beneficial Association No. 227, a member of the German Central American Society, and of the American and Philadelphia Brewmasters Association. In his political faith Mr. Pohlig is a Democrat.

Mr. Pohlig was married to Marie Bohlen, a native of Germany, and to them there have been born two children,—Elsie and Marguerite.

ISAAC SMITH, who died at Albany, Pa., was a native of Albany township, Berks county, born in 1806. He learned the stone-mason's trade early in life, and that was his occupation throughout his active life; also owning and operating a small piece of land. Mr. Smith married Rachel Correll, a native of Albany township, Berks county, and to this union there were born eleven children, as follows: Christian and Charles, both deceased; Mary, m. to Emanuel Sassaman; James; Jonathan; Abraham; Isaac; Julia, who resides at Dredgersville, m. to Reuben Paulay, the latter now deceased; William, who also resides at Dredgersville, Schuylkill county; Emma E.; and a daughter Susan, who died in infancy. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Smith was a Democrat in his political belief, but never cared for public office.

Emma E. Smith, daughter of Isaac, was married to Sylvester Kemp (now deceased) and to them was born one son, W. Wilson, who was educated in the schools of Reading, and is now employed at the J. H. Sternbergh mills, where he has a responsible position. Sylvester Kemp was a son of William Kemp, a native of Kutztown, who located at what is now known as Kemp's Station, after the building of the Schuylkill & Lehigh Railroad.

John Schmidt, grandfather of Mrs. Emma E. Kemp, was born in Albany, where he was engaged as a farmer. He was the father of Isaac; Samuel; Sally (m. Christian Lutz); and Susanna (m. a Greenawalt).

WILLIAM W. WERNER, business agent for Carpenter's Union, No. 492, of Reading, Pa., was born in Garfield, Tilden township, Berks county, April 18, 1851, son of Frederick H. and Lovisa (Mosé) Werner.

Jacob S. Werner, grandfather of William W., was one of Berks county's old carpenters, and he followed that occupation until his death, at the remarkable age of ninety-seven years, two days, erecting many substantial buildings in this section, some of which are still standing, among them being a number of churches in the rural districts of the county. Mr. Werner also worked upon the Farmers' National Bank, Fifth and Penn streets, Reading. He married Mary Seabold, of Montgomery county, Pa., to whom he was married twenty-three children: Frederick; Jacob, Henry and Charlotte. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Politically Mr. Werner was a Democrat.

Frederick H. Werner was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, and with his father he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed all his life, dying Oct. 7, 1905, aged eighty-two years, nine months and twenty-two days. Mr. Werner had never had a day's sickness until the one which proved fatal, although he had served through the Civil war, in which he gained an honorable record as a brave and faithful soldier. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity. After the war Mr. Werner went to Schuylkill county, and after building many of the coal breakers around Pottsville, Tamaqua, Shamokin, Pine Grove, etc., located in Reading in 1855, following house building up to 1879, when he retired. He was a stanch Democrat, but was never an office seeker. Mr. Werner was a trustee of the Lutheran Church, and a valued member thereof, giving liberally to its support. His widow, who survives him, resides in Reading, at the age of eighty-two years, the mother of these children: Amelia, m. to Levi M. Zerbo, superintendent at the Philadelphia & Reading Car Shops; Ellen, m. to Francis Gaenter, a farmer of near Carsonia Park; Ida, m. to John S. Peifer, highway commissioner of Reading; May, who died in 1869, aged twelve years; and William W.

William W. Werner was educated in the Reading common schools and at Kutztown State Normal School at Kutztown, after leaving which he learned the carpenter's trade with his father. Upon completing the prescribed time as journeyman he established himself in the contracting and building business, employing at one time as many as thirty-five to forty skilled mechanics. Mr. Werner has always aimed at securing the best of satisfaction, paying the best of wages and hiring the most skilled workmen long before the Union was established in this part of the State. He has always been a friend of the workmen, and has given much of his time and money to their interests. He takes a great pride in demonstrating to those less skilled in his craft that nothing stands so much in the way of their ultimate success as the want of education, and he is constantly advocating the use of standard books which will increase their ability and widen their opportunities. In order to further this laudable work, he has provided a complete set of many standard works on general subjects which are open to the use of the members in the Union rooms. This indicates the manner of man that Mr. Werner is, and explains, partly, the fact that since he has become business manager, conditions of all kinds of the largest improvement. On the side can be heard words of commendation which are deserved.

Mr. Werner was greatly instrumental in organizing the Union in Reading and has been a leader of the work, serving as president for one term and in his present capacity since 1902. He is connected with Chandler Lodge, No. 227; Excelsior Chapter, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, K. T.; Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Neversink Castle, K. G. E.; has organized three camps of the S. of A. in Reading, belonging to No. 678 of that Order; is a charter member of the Knights of Friendship, and a member of the Sons of Veterans, No. 16. When but twelve years and nine months old, Mr. Werner enlisted in the 93rd. Pa. Inf., and served five and one-half years. He has been active in the ranks of the Democratic party, and served as City assessor for three years, his majority, which was 1599, being the largest in the history of Reading. He also served as tax collector for twenty-three years.

Mr. Werner was married in 1888, to Miss Angelina Reuem, born in Lebanon county. They have two children, daughter of Alexander Etter. No children have been born to this union.

William S. Anderson, Sr., went to Philadelphia, Pa., in early life, and thence to Lebanon, Pa., where he engaged in the manufacture of cigars during the time of the Civil War. He was very successful in this line, but later engaged in the tanning business with a Mr. Greenwalt, under the firm name of Greenwalt & Anderson, they being the pioneers of the special process of tanning hides, in this State, the process being later adopted by all leading tanners. Mr. Anderson continued in this business until his death, five years later, at the age of forty-five years. He married Margaret Eaches, who survives him and makes her home with her son, William S. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson had two children: Neilie G., the wife of Albert D. Deem, of the firm of C. & D. Deem, Reading, Pa., and William S. Anderson, Jr., came to Reading in 1870, and was here educated. His first employment was with Philip Albright, a pioneer local express man located at Fourth and Penn streets, with whom he remained three years. The next two years were spent with the Reading Hardware Company, after which he went to learn the hatters’ business with William H. Rennoll & Co., at the corner of Tenth and Spruce streets. After learning his trade, Mr. Anderson engaged with R. H. Savage & Co., at Thirteenth and Muhlenberg streets, for thirteen years, at the end of which time he came to the Bell of New York, for whom he traveled two years. Returning to Reading Mr. Anderson embarked in business with John F. Doremus, at No. 523 Penn street, engaging in the sale of men’s furnishing goods, shoes and hats, under the firm name of Doremus & Anderson from Sept. 25, 1895, until Jan. 1, 1904, when Mr. Anderson purchased the interest of his partner, and since this time has continued in business on his own account, carrying a full line of hats, shoes and men’s furnishing goods of all kinds. His straightforward way of doing business and the fine quality of the goods which he offers for sale have won him the confidence and patronage of the people of Reading to a large degree, and he is enjoying an ever-increasing trade.

Mr. Anderson married, in 1895, Mrs. Annie Barrett Glasser, and they reside at No. 914 Franklin street. Reading. Mr. Anderson was the mother of two children; one of them, born by her former marriage, Ella F., the wife of Rev. H. Rupp, and Jean M. In religion he is a member of Grace Lutheran Church, and he has served as deacon and elder.

REV. WILLIAM WILBERFORCE DEATRICK, A.M., Sc. D. In the quiet country graveyard attached to the “Bender’s Church” in Butler township, Adams Co., Pa., is a gray slate tombstone bearing the following inscription, in German text:

It will be noted that the arithmetic of the stone-cutter is at fault—married in 1752 and dying in 1797, she could have been married fifty-five years, but born Nov. 15, 1745, July 18, 1797, her age could not have been seventy-two years. Two entries in connection are two entries contained in the old records of a church in Earl township, Lancaster Co., Pa. (discovered and transcribed by Luther R. Kelker, State Custodian of Public Records, of Harrisburg). They were made by Rev. John Waldschmidt, a pioneer Reformed minister, who served widely separated congregations in eastern Pennsylvania. These records are as follows:

Unless the Waldschmidt records refer to other Dietrichs, which seems improbable, it is likely that his “Oct. 31” is more accurate than the “Oct. 1” on the inconsistent tombstone. Whether the John Jacob Dietrich whose Waldschmidt record emigrated from Germany to this country or died in the Fatherland is uncertain. A certain Jacob Dietrich, aged forty, is recorded in the Pennsylvania Archives as having landed at Philadelphia from the ship “Charming Nancy” Nov. 9, 1749, when Anna Diederich came on the ship “Thistle,” Sept. 19, 1748, and John Diederick (probably his wife) Ann Dederick arrived on the ship “Samuel,” Aug. 17, 1731. Whether either of these was the father of John Nicholas is uncertain. There is no record of a John Jacob Dietrich as an immigrant after 1749. As to the date of arrival of John Nicholas Dietrich we have, at present writing, no certain information. The Archives show, however, that on Oct. 7, 1749, one Nicholas Dietrich landed from the ship “Leslie,” Captain J. Ballardine, from Rotterdam. On this ship came 121 immigrants, among them Frederick Bender, Johan Rudolph Müller, Johann Wilhelm Arens, Miller and Peter Miller. These being names of early settlers in Adams county (then York), it may be reasonably inferred that the Nicholas Dietrich arriving at that time was the “Johann Niclas dietrich” of Bender’s churchyard, whose stone declares that he “wahr geboren in deuschlan.” The “Pennsylvania Archives” give a date for Bender as 1748, thus arriving on the ship “Mary Galley,” qualifying on Sept. 1748. His name is first on the list and was spelled on the original list “Derrick.” To John Nicholas Dietrich and his wife Anna Margaretha were born (in addition to the Johann Balser of Waldschmidt’s record) nine children we have no further knowledge, according to tombstones in the same churchyard; Nicholas Dietrich, whose wife Mary Ann “Deatrick” lies buried by his side; Margret Tietrich; William Dietrich; Michael Dietrich; and Martin Dietrich.

Nicholas Dietrich and his wife Mary Ann died childless, but tradition has it that they acted as father and mother to the children of others, bringing up in their home, as some say, no less than seventeen children of other families. Margaret and William never married. On the tombstone of William is this line: “A Patriot of the Revolution.” As he was only twenty-one years of age at the close of that war he must, therefore, have been a youthful soldier. He fell asleep on his country’s birthday, July 4, 1848, at the ripe age of eighty-six years.

Michael Dietrich married Sophia, daughter of Rudolph Spangler (or Spengler), who resided near Heidersburg and later near Abbottstown, Adams county. To this couple were born nine children: Nicholas, Jacob, Rudolph, Michael, Christiana (m. Jesse Smith) Mary (m. George Kessy), Sarah (m. Daniel Difler) and Margaret and Catherine, the last two of whom married.

Nicholas Dietrich, eldest son of Michael, married March 21, 1835, Margaret, daughter of Nicholas and Rebekah (Bushey) Miller. Nicholas was a hard-working, industrious farmer, owning an estate in Tyrone township, known as “Cranberry,” from the wild cranberries growing in a marsh near the farm house. Their seven children were William Miller, Michael, John Bushey, Anna Elizabeth (m. Adam James), Harriet, Elnathan, and Howard Nicholas. Of these John B., who died unmarried, was a soldier in the Civil War.

The eldest son, William Miller Deatrick, was born Jan. 22, 1823. At an early age he was impressed with a desire to become a minister of the Gospel. The way to this calling did not seem open, and so for some time he worked at the trade of milling. At last he gathered funds to go to college, and in 1848 he graduated from Marshall College at Mercersburg, Pa. He continued his studies in the Theological Seminary of the (German) Reformed Church, at the same place, graduating from that institution in 1855, and became a minister of that church. He was ordained in 1855, and his first charge was at Huntington, Pa. During his time of preparation for the ministry, he taught school at Norristown, Mifflinburg, and Milton, Pa., also at Manchester, Md. In 1856 he removed to Pattonsville (now Loysburg), Pa., where he served the "Yellow Creek Charge," a laborious field. In 1862 he removed to Friends Cove, Pa. This charge was also a laborious one, the minister being obliged to ride on horse-back across a high mountain, over a bridle-path (there was no driving road) to serve several of the more distant congregations of his extended parish. He was, indeed, a pioneer abounding in labors. In 1875 he gave up the active work of the ministry to become the Financial Secretary of Mercersburg College, an institution in which he was deeply interested. To attend to the duties of his new office he removed with his family to Mercersburg, Pa. Later he became President of the Board of Regents of Mercersburg College, and to the service of that institution he gave unstintedly of his time and money, the latter hard earned and saved with incredible economy. During the dark days of that institution which now, as Mercersburg Academy, enjoys a high degree of prosperity and rank, and under Dr. William Mann Irvine, as one of the first presidents, he was licenced as pastor of the church he had served for some years the brunt of the financial burden, really saving the school from bankruptcy and extinction, and preserving it for the church he loved so well. For forty-four years he was Stated Clerk for Mercersburg Classis, for thirty years its treasurer. He was also Stated Clerk of the Potomac Synod for twenty-eight years, and treasurer of the Board of Education of the Synod for twenty-five years until his death, which occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles V. Smith, at Bedford, Pa., May 6, 1901. He was also President of the Society of the Relief of Ministers and Widows until he was called from the labors of earth. The Rev. W. M. Deatrick received from his alma mater the degree of A. M. in course, and in 1887 had conferred upon him, in recognition of his signal services in behalf of his church, by Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, Pa., the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. Deatrick married Nov. 9, 1855, Miss Harriet Peyton Sohn, born March 3, 1818, in Martinsburg, W. Va., daughter of Conrad and Ann Ranson Sohn, of Mercersburg. Her mother's maiden name was Christian and she came of a prominent Virginia family, intermarried with the Ransons and other families of the southern section of the State, and died Aug. 3, 1884, and is buried by the side of her husband and parents in the beautiful "Fairview Cemetery," on the southern outskirts of Mercersburg, the home of her youth and last years. This union was blessed with three children: (1) William Wilberforce Deatrick, A. M., Stated Clerk of the Potomac Synod, 1856, graduated from Mercersburg College in 1884, and from the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster in 1884. In the same year he was sent as home missionary to Baltimore, where he succeeded in founding a number of churches, becoming settled pastor of one in Woodberry, one of this system that was then beginning. He was ordained May 10, 1896, when he assumed the pastorate at Mt. Pleasant, Pa. He married in 1890, Miss Mary A. K. Everhart, and one child, Anna Margarette, has blessed this union. (2) Ann Margaret, born in 1864, graduated from the female department of Mercersburg College in 1884, and in 1896, she married Charles V. Smith, A. M., Clerk in Mercersburg Academy, lately principal of Kittanning Academy, Kittanning, Pa.; they have two children, Arthur Deatrick and Harriet Peyton. William Wilberforce Deatrick was born in Huntington, Pa., Aug. 1, 1853. He and his brother, Edward R., attended public school in an old stone school-house near their father's church in Friends Cove. For several terms in summer he attended an academy known as Allegheny Seminary at Rainsburg, about four miles from his home, the daily journey being made, for the most part, on foot. When only sixteen years of age he began teaching, being employed to teach a short unexpired term of the same name in Dr. Elnathan's Church. He was ordained in 1876, and took charge of a set of schools, and gained a reputation in the public schools of the township, having won in examination under the county superintendent a certificate averaging only a slight fraction over one. Latin and Greek were studied under his father and, in the autumn of 1872, he entered Mercersburg College as a freshman. Here he came under the influence of the eminent educator and theologian, Dr. Elnathan E. Higbee, to whose inspiration he attributes, in large measure, the success he has himself attained as a thinker and teacher. In 1876 he graduated from the college with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Continuing his studies, he received from the same institution, three years later, the degree of Master of Arts. In the autumn of 1876 he took up the study of theology in the Theological Department of Mercersburg College. To secure, in part, the funds necessary to the prosecution of his studies he engaged, during his vacations, in the sale of books and during the winters served as tutor in the preparatory school attached to his alma mater. During the summer of 1878 he was a member of the faculty of Juniata Collegiate Institute, a secondary school or academy, at Bellefonte, Pa. In the autumn of 1878 he entered the senior class of the Theological Seminary at Lancaster, from which institution he graduated in May, 1880. He was elected a member of the Mercersburg Classis of the Reformed Church, then in session at Shippenburg, Pennsylvania.

No call coming to him at that time to a pastoral charge, he returned to Martinsburg, where he taught again during the winter. Late in the same year he was elected principal of the public schools of Milton, Pa., closing his work there at the end of the school year, declining a re-election, on the night preceding the day of the dreadful fire of 1880 which laid the beautiful town in ashes. By this time he had received three calls to churches, one being in Clarion, Pa., and D. C. Of those he accepted the call to the New Centerville church in Somerset county, Pa., where he began his labors as pastor on June 1, 1880, receiving ordination on the 16th of the same month. In this field of ministerial activity he labored for three and one-half years. In December, 1883, he removed to Rimerburg, Clarion Co., Pa., and in January, 1884, re-opened the Clarion Collegiate Institute in that town. This institution of the Reformed Church had been closed for some time. Under his management as principal the building was put in excellent repair, a considerable debt paid, and a vigorous school built up. For seven and one-half years he was principal of the institute, so instrumental in preparing a number of young men for college of whom a goodly proportion found their way into the ministry of the denomination under the auspices of which the institution was conducted.

In 1891 he was elected to the chair of Psychology and Psychagogy in the Normal School at Kutztown, Pa., then under the principalship of the late Rev. Dr. C. Schaeffer, Ph. D., the present Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of Pennsylvania. Later, owing to enlargement of the faculty and consequent re-arrangement of the work, his duties were slightly changed, and he is now the Professor of Psychology and Higher English, the High School, having charge of the Morning school, Psychology, English literature, and the English classics. Since his connection with the Normal school he has been active as an institute instructor, and a worker and lecturer at Chautauquas and elsewhere. His engagements at county institutes have taken him not only to many counties in his native State, but to the States of New Jersey, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, and Nebraska. For a number of seasons he was on the teaching force of the Pennsylvania Chautauqua at Mount Gretna, giving, in addition to class-room work, each year an illustrated lecture.

Nothing as a pulpit in charge since 1883, he has been active as a clergyman. During the eighties he "supplied" churches of his denomination at DuBois, St. Petersburg, Emlenton, and Kittanning. In 1903 he filled the pulpit of the First Reformed Church in Reading, during the illness of the pastor, Rev. Dr. H. M. Miller, for a part of the time he preached daily except Sunday. A part of his duties at the Normal school during the past eighteen years has been to turn with other ministerial members of the faculty, in preaching to the students in the chapel, about once every three weeks. Frequent sermons from churches in Reading and elsewhere have kept him fairly well occupied in sermonizing. In addition to these labors, he has been, for eighteen years, chorister of St. Paul's Reformed Church, Kutztown, in the Sunday-school of which church he was superintendent for ten years.

On account of the multiplicity of his duties in school and church he has yet found time for some literary work. He has been a contributor to religious and educational periodicals. For half a year before he left Rinerburg he edited and published The Rinerburg Courier, a weekly local newspaper. For about thirteen years past he has been on the staff of The New Era, a weekly paper, and has contributed many of his poems to the standing weekly, many of which have attracted the attention of the public, and have been reprinted by colleagues of the press. From June, 1902, to September, 1906, he was editor, and manager for most of the time, of The Pennsylvania Chautauquan, the quarterly and, during the sessions of the Assembly, the daily organ of the Mount Gretna Chautauqua. He was one of the joint authors of a voluminous "History of Clark County," published in 1887. He is author of a book on physiological psychology, entitled "The Human Mind and Its Physical Basis," now undergoing revision for a second edition. He has under way, in addition to this revision, another work on the psychology of smaller manuals, one on the study of poetry and the other on letter writing. In recognition of his ability as an educator, of the thoroughness of his scientific studies and his scholarship, as well as of the excellence of his book, Franklin and Marshall College, at its Golden Jubilee in 1903, bestowed on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Science. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Educational Association, having organized the Child-Study Section of that body and been for several years president of the Child-Study Section. He has been for eighteen years an "active member" of the National Educational Association, and for ten years has maintained membership in the Pennsylvania-German Society. He is also a member of the Berks County Historical Society. In November, 1907, he was appointed a member of the Advisory Council of the Simplified Spelling Board, this council being composed of about a hundred of the leading educators of America.

Mrs. Deatrick, M. Emma Jane, daughter of Levi and Matilda (Hackenberg) Deatrick, of Milton, Pa. Mr. Balliet was a son of John and Elizabeth (Schreiber) Balliet. This John Balliet was a son of John Balliet and his wife, Catherine M. Mickley (a daughter of John Jacob Mickley, who hauled the Liberty Bell from Philadelphia to Allentown during the American Revolution), both of Whitehall, Lehigh County, Penn. Matilda Balliet (1761-1837) was the fourth son of Paulus Balliet who, with his wife Maria Magdalena (Wotring) Balliet, lies buried in the southeast section of the old walled burial ground of the Union Church in Whitehall. This Paulus Balliet was the first of the race of Balliets in Whitehall. He was born Sept. 26, 1727, in the Province of Holland, in the State of Trin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.; and Anna Louise, born 1806, who is a student in the Keystone State Normal School. The family lives on "Normal Hill," in a substantial and comfortable home, a brick building, owned by Dr. Desirick and built by him in 1898.

EMIL HOFFMANN (deceased), of Reading, where for many years he was employed in a woolen mill, was of German birth and ancestry, but has spent most of his adult life in this country. Born in Bresla, Prussia, March 18, 1848, he remained in his native land until he reached manhood.

In 1858 Mr. Hoffmann came to America, landing in New York. He at once went to Reading, and secured work at Brumbach's Mill, as boss weaver. Later he was employed in woolen manufacturing on Fifth street, and still later went into the carpet business for himself, employing from five to eight people. His work became so favorably known that Mr. Hoffmann was called upon to help install the looms in the Berks County Prison, and to teach the prisoners to weave carpet. His business enterprise proved a successful one, and he continued to conduct it until his death, which occurred from heart disease Nov. 1, 1888, when he was aged fifty-eight. He was a member for a number of years of the I. O. O. F. In his political principles Mr. Hoffmann was a Democrat and had the respect and esteem of all parties. The best man for the place always received his vote, whether he was a Demo- crat or a Republican. Mr. Hoffmann was a man of many good traits of character.

On Aug. 29, 1865, Mr. Hoffmann married Miss Augusta Brumbach, of Berks County, and they have ten children, of whom four are deceased. The others, all of Reading, are as follows: George K.; William S.; Charles D., a baker; Annie M., wife of William C. Dersch; Emil, m. to Emma Smith, and they live in Reading; and Augusta, m. to Frederick Nithermer, Reading. John A., who was a printer, died Sept. 13, 1908, aged forty years.

Mrs. Augusta Hoffmann was the daughter of John Beck, a machinist and file cutter from Germany. He came to this country May 1, 1840, and at first settled in York, Pa., and with the exception of two years was employed as a machinist in the shops of Small & Sillinger. He had learned his trade in his native land, and was an expert in file cutting. In 1850 he removed to Reading, and secured employment with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, continuing with them until ill health compelled him to leave the business. In his later years he worked as a locksmith and the lock for St. John's Lutheran Church was made by him. He married Anna Maria Siegner, and both were members of the Lutheran Church. The children born to them were: Augusta, wife of Mr. Hoffmann; and Anna Maria, widow of Isadore Mestennson, and residing in Reading.

Mrs. Hoffmann resides at No. 238 South Third street, Reading.

HARVEY K. WEASNER, one of the thrifty young farmers of Douglass township, Berks county, was born there Aug. 1, 1869.

The name of this family has been variously spelled, and the first to bring his family into Douglass township, Berks county, from the earlier Pennsylvania home in Chester county, was Alonzo Weasner, who was born there Sept. 14, 1774, and died in Douglass township, on a farm (now the property of Charles Britzen- hoff) which he had purchased but four months before, Aug. 1, 1835. He is buried in the old cemetery near the Reformed Church. He was twice married. His first wife died on Aug. 1, 1833, and he married his second wife, Catharine (Walter) on Jan. 5, 1835. Their family were six children: Polly m. Samuel Acker, of Cedar Hollow; Catharine (Walter); Betzy (Beidler); John lived in Chester county, as did also Lewis; and Jacob. John Weasner married (second) a woman from Lower Berks county, Catharine Kuetz, daughter of Conrad Kuetz, and they were the parents of: Polly, m. Conrad: William, 1835-1848; Susan (Shanley); and Mrs. Weaver. At the side of John Weasner is buried one "Ludwig Weiser, born Feb. 29, 1808, died Oct. 25, 1889, in the 82d year of age"—probably another son.

Jacob Weasner, son of John, lived in Douglass township, and there owned the farm of seventy-five acres now owned by a member of the Schmeck family. He was born in Chester county in June, 1801, and accompanied his father to Berks county. By trade he was a blacksmith and had a smithy above Wormann in Earl township, where he worked for seven years. Some time before 1839 he located on his farm, and there he died in April, 1866, and was buried at Boyertown. He married Mary Romich, daughter of John Romich, who was born in 1808 at Berlin, and is buried at Boyertown. They had six children: Sarah, m. to John Davidheiser; Harriet, m. to John Eagle; Jacob, unmarried; John R.; Mary, m. to Isaac Eagle; and Eli, m. to Susan Albright, and a resident of Boyertown.

John R. Weasner, son of Jacob and Mary, was born in Douglass township, Sept. 14, 1839, on the old Weas- ner homestead. He was a farmer from 1867 until his son was born in 1870, when he was succeeded by his son. He built the present frame dwelling on his farm in 1880. Since 1904 he has lived in a nice home at Gilbertsville, and besides his farm and residence, he owns property in Boyertown. He has always been industrious and frugal, and owes his present comfortable condition to many years of hard work. His family are Lutheran members of the Boyertown Church. In 1866 he married Lovina Kepner, born in 1839, daughter of William Kepner, of Montgomery county. They have one son, Harvey K.

Harvey K. Weasner received the educational advantages of the common schools and from his boyhood assisted on the home farm. In the spring of 1896 he began on his father's farm, where he has since continued. He has an excellent outfit of farm implements and up-to-date machinery—all that he could possibly use in the cultivation of his ninety-five acre tract. His farm is located in the center part of the township, in the Mau er school district. Everything about the place indicates the care and thrift of the owner. Mr. Weasner has taken a keen interest in public affairs as a Democrat, and for three years was supervisor of his township when he was succeeded by his son. He and his family are members of the Lutheran congregation of the Boyertown church.

In 1895 Mr. Weasner married Mary Weller, daughter of William and Hettie (Frunheiser) Weller, and they have one son, Lawrence W.

JOHN W. RAPP, who is engaged in the building and contracting business, resides at No. 170 West Oley street, Reading, Pa. He was born April 5, 1870, at West Leesport, Pa., son of Alonzo and Susan (Drayer) Rapp, and grandson of John Rapp.

John Rapp, grandfather of John W., was an early settler and shoemaker, living in the vicinity of Lees- port. He had four children: Washington, Thomas, Elmira (m. the late Dr. Snyder, of Leesport, and is deceased); and Abigail (m. Mr. Hitt). He died about 1860.

Alonzo Rapp, son of John, was a railroader, and lived in Reading. He was born about 1849, and died in March, 1877, and is buried at Hinsbergh Church. He married Susan Drayer, and they had two sons and two daughters: Harry G., of Reading; John W.; and Martha and Mary, who have both died, without issue.

John W. Rapp secured his education in the schools of Reading, whether his parents had moved when he was a boy. At the age of fifteen years he learned the paper hanging and painting trade, and after following that occupation for some time engaged in the grocery business. In 1897 he moved to 704 North Sixth street, which business he followed there and at other places in Reading for six years. In 1905 Mr. Rapp engaged in the building business, and in this he has continued to the present time, erecting three modern stone residences on Weiser street.

Mr. Rapp was married to Miss Jennie Shadle, daughter of John and Mary Ann (Houpt) Shadle. Mr. and Mrs. Rapp had four children: E. S., Mrs. S. S. Dyer and Marguerite S. Mrs. Rapp is a member of the Windsor Street M. E. Church. Mr. Rapp is connected with the P. O. S. of A., and the Sons of Veterans, his father having been a soldier in the Civil war.

JUDGE GEORGE W. BRUCKMAN (deceased), one of the last two associate judges of Berks county, which office was abolished during his term of service, in 1873, was one of the most prominent citizens of Reading in his time. He was born in 1711, the son of Carl A., who emigrated from Amsterdam, Holland, and located in the city in early life, here learning the printer's trade. For ten years (1816-1826) he published a German newspaper known as the Readinger Postbote. In 1820 he became a partner of Gottlob Youngman in the publication of the Weekly Advertiser.

George W. Bruckman resided in Reading throughout his life. After receiving his education in the public schools he served an apprenticeship to the plasterer's trade, and followed that business for ten years, until he became clerk to the county commissioner. He served in that position for the following ten years, acted as deputy privat tutor, for six years (1835-1841) under Charles H. Hunter, and served as city treasurer during the years 1857-1858. Later he acted as teller in the Bushong Bank for a time, in 1867 re-entering official life as jury commissioner of Berks county, and continuing as such until 1870. He was one of the first to serve in that office in the county. In 1871 he was elected associate judge of Berks county for the full term of five years, but during 1873 this office was done away with. From 1880 until 1883 the Judge was a member of the select council from the Eighth ward, and this office he filled with the highest credit. At the time of the failure of the well-known Bushong Bank he was appointed assignee and that all who knew him had equal confidence in his high sense of honor and executive ability is demonstrated by the fact that he was chosen to settle many estates. In the discharge of such duties he became well known all over Berks county, of which he was one of the most respected ciudadanos. His friends were numerous, and he was a prominent figure on the streets of Reading for many years. His death, which was widely mourned, occurred May 19, 1897, at his residence, No. 925 Penn street, and was caused by paralysis, from which he had been a sufferer for several years. He came from old Lutheran stock.

Judge Bruckman married May 22, 1896, Miss Caroline H. Heilman, daughter of John B. Heilman, and she survives him, residing at the Penn street home.

John B. Heilman, father of Mrs. Bruckman, died in Reading, May 10, 1903, at the age of eighty-five years. He was a native of Germany, where he followed the calling of a shepherd. He remained in that country for a long time after his marriage, coming to America in 1852. As he was unacquainted here and had no plans for settling, he went from New York to Reading with a Mr. Haak, whom he had met on the boat. Soon after his arrival he found employment in the Philadelphia & Reading shops. He remained with the company for the unusually long period of forty years, a fact which speaks well for the record he made. Before his death he made a visit to his native land.

Mr. Heilman married C. Frederika Sturgzeboch, who died Feb. 16, 1888, and they are buried in the Charles River Cemetery. They had two children: Anna (Hans J. Zoeller) and Charles C., a retired cigar manufacturer who resides with his sister, Mrs. Bruckman; Charles F., a resident of Reading; Mark G., who is engaged in the cigar business in Pottstown; John E., Jr., late of Hot Springs, Ark., who died Aug. 3, 1908, leaving two sons, William J. and Harvey M.; George; and Caroline H., who married Judge Bruckman.

GEORGE M. ZELLER, the popular proprietor of the well-known "American House," at Stouchsburg, Marion township, is a representative of one of Berks county's oldest and most honored families. Mr. Zeller was born Sept. 30, 1868, in Marion township, son of Reily W. and Rebecca (Troutman) Zeller.

Between 1730 and 1751 there landed (qualified) at Philadelphia three emigrants of the name of Zeller, and between 1740 and 1767 a number of Zellers and Zollers are there recorded. But the Tulpehocken Zellers have for their ancestor John Henry Zeller (sometimes Zoeller), who came from Schoharie, N. Y., as the following account from Mr. John Zeller's "Memoirs of the Huguenots in America" shows:

"Among the Huguenot exiles were several branches of the ancient Sallaire or Cellier family of France. The name is met with among the refugees to England and America prior to the Revocation (1685), and even in far-away Cape Colony, where a descendant, General Cellier, became famous as a Boer leader in the Transvaal war. One branch retired to the Palatinate about the period of the Revocation. Of this family was Jean Henri Sallaire, who, with his family, followed the great exodus of Palatinites to London in 1708. In 1709 he came to New York with the Palatinites, where his name and that of his son appear in the list of the settlers of Livingston Manor in 1710. About 1727 he came overland through the trackless wilderness to Tulpehocken, locating near the present town of Sheridan, where he established a considerable estate and where he died at a very advanced age in 1756. His house, a massive stone edifice, erected with a view to protect the family and neighbors in case of an attack from the Indians, is still standing." This house, now an historical relic of the section, and known as "Zeller's Indian Fort," was erected in 1745, on the banks of the mill creek, and, as stated, was used for a fort. But the author of the paragraph quoted was not quite accurate when he called it a "massive stone edifice." He also erected the first meeting-place of these early Schoharie settlers for worship, defense and mutual conference. He died in January, 1756, and his will, made Aug. 8, 1754, was probated Jan. 20, 1756. This will shows a will, and contains the following: His house and land to John George (who obtained the homestead). John Henry, John David, Hartman (The Rev. Mr. Stapleton gives this name as Martin), John, Anna Maria Salzgeber, Barbara (or Barbaralla) Lerew, Catharine Pontius and Anna Elizabeth Battorff. The executors are his son John and son-in-law Leonard Anspach,—accordingly there must have been another daughter.

It appears that some of the descendants of John Henry Zeller removed to Heidelberg in Lancaster (now Lebanon) county, where the proprietary and State tax lists of Lancaster county for 1775 show David Zeller (110 acres), Henry Zeller (100 acres), Peter Zeller (100 acres) and Michael Zeller (40 acres). The first three of these are also shown for 1771. In case of the old townships it must not be forgotten that where mentioned by the Rev. Mr. Stoever and other early preachers they did not always have definite boundaries. Heidelberg, for instance, extended rather indefinitely westward and perhaps through what is now Lebanon county. Tulpehocken and Heidelberg seem also to have overlapped in some places.

The following memoranda undoubtedly refer to some of the children of John Henry Zeller, the emigrant:

The Tulpehocken Zoeller are shown by Rupp as members between 1735 and 1743. The Tulpehocken Reformed Church, formerly known locally as Leinbach's Church, situated in the pike between Stouchsburg and Myerstown. Hans Heinrich Zeller and Johannes Zeller are mentioned by Rupp as among those, above twenty-one years of age, who passed the winter of 1710 and the summer of 1711 in Livingston Manor, N. Y., and who appear to have settled in Schoharie, N. Y., and from that place to have removed to the western part of the state or later.

From the Rev. John Casper Stover's record of Baptisms and Marriages is obtained the following information:

Marriages: Jan. 14, 1743, John Pontius and Anna Catharine Zoeller, of Tulpehocken; Dec. 28, 1743, John Zoeller and his mother, Beckina Catharine Zoeller, of Reading; Oct. 5, 1779, Michael Zoeller and Catharine Dillman, of Heidelberg.

With regard to the descendants of John Pontius and wife Anna Catharine Zoeller, Rev. Mr. Stapleton in his "Memorials of the Huguenots" has the following account: "In 1738 John Pontius arrived and located in Tulpehocken. He was born in Alsace (France), in 1738. In 1743 he married Beckina Catharine Zoeller, a daughter of John Zoeller (should be John Henry Zeller as he correctly states in an article in Notes and Queries by Dr. William H. Eggle, Annual Volume, 1898). He had a considerable family and his sons were great pioneers. They were John Henry, born in 1744; John Peter, born in 1747; John, born in 1751; Andrew; Nicholas; George; and Frederick. Several were among the first settlers in Buffalo Valley (in now) Union county, and in many of the next generation were of the first in Ohio and Illinois."

There are shown as having acted as sponsors: in 1730, Henry Zeller and wife in family of Michael Schauer (now Shower), of Heidelberg; in 1744, John Henry Zeller and wife in family of John Pontius, of Swatara; in 1745, John Henry Zeller, Sr. and wife in family of John Henry Zeller, Jr., of Tulpehocken; in 1746, John Nicholas Zeller and wife in family of John Peter Wissenandt, of "Moden Creek" (supposed to be Muddy Creek in Lancaster county).

From the Proprietary and State Tax lists of Berks county for the years 1767, 1768, 1779, 1780, 1781, 1784 and 1785 is obtained Zeller information as follows: As of Tulpehocken—Hans Zeller for 1767 and 1768, with 100 acres; John Zeller for 1779 and 1780, no land; George Zeller (also Zoller) for 1777, with 50 acres; John H. Zeller (signed) for 1768; Andrew Zeller for 1779 and subsequent years, with 133 to 140 acres; Francis (or France) Zeller for 1779 and subsequent years with 167 acres; Peter Zeller (Albert's estate of 150 acres) for 1784. In 1784 the number of persons for George Zeller is given as nine, for Francis, ten and for Peter none. Zeller are shown for 1785.

As of Reading, Nich Zeller, laborer, for 1779. As of Cumru, Nich Zeller's for 1780 and 1781.

Johannes Zeller, of Tulpehocken township, evidently son of John Henry, the emigrant settler, made his will May 13, 1795, and it was probated Dec. 23, 1805, the witnesses being Christian Lower and Johan Dieffenbach, and the executors Francis (Frantz) Paul Zeller and Valentine Salies. Johannes Zeller's children were: Francis, mentioned below; Peter; Elizabeth, who married John Beiltenen; Catharine, who married Philip Zehring; Margaret, who married Valentine Zeller; and Mary, Mrs. Leever, who had four children, John, Henry, George and Catherine. Johannes Zeller, the father of this family, built the house now on the Weaver farm in Marion township, which is in a substantial condition and likely to last many years. On the east gable the following inscription appears; "Wan Ich einmahl stärben Musta," and another inscription reads: "Hannes Zeller, Cathrina Zeller in 1777."

At Mifflinburg, Union Co., Pa., in the old part of the cemetery just south of the town, lie buried Peter Zellers, born in 1745, in Tulpehocken township, Berks county who died in 1817; and Catharine Zellers, (wife of Peter), born in 1742, who died in 1808, daughter of Jacob Wilhelm. (This Peter Zellers was probably the son of John Zeller.)

Frantz Paul (Francis) Zeller, son of Johannes, and great-grandfather of George M., was born April 8, 1751, and died Oct. 5, 1821, aged seventy years, five months, twenty-seven days, and his wife, Elizabeth, who was born Dec. 16, 1762, died April 23, 1819 aged fifty-six years, four months, six days. He was buried in the old graveyard across the line of Berks in Lebanon county. Frantz Paul Zeller was a sergeant on the roll of John Lesher's company during the Revolutionary war, and in the same company was one Andrew Zeller, a fifer, who it is believed was Frantz Paul's brother. Michael Zeller, a private of Capt. Peter Dillman's company, was born Dec. 5, 1783. Neither Andrew nor Michael are mentioned above in list of Frantz Paul Zellers brothers and sisters. Frantz Paul Zeller owned the old house built by his father in 1779, a stone, pebble-dashed, weatherboarded structure, with a wall two feet thick and plaster between the stones as hard as steel. The farm during his generation consisted of 154 acres, and he it was who erected the present barn. In his will, which he made June 12, 1820, he said that he was old and weak in body. It is signed "Frantz Zeller," was witnessed by Adam Sheetz and Jacob Becker, and was probated Oct. 24, 1821. His children were: John, born 1784; Andrew Zoller, of Reading, John, Benjamin, Peter, Elizabeth (m. Christian Hantz), Daniel, Valentine, Anna Maria (m. Frederick Kuster), Jonathan, Henry and David.

Jacob Zeller, grandfather of Reily W., and great-grandfather of George M., was born June 8, 1790, and died April 4, 1872, aged eighty-one years, nine months, six days, and was buried at the Tulpehocken Reformed Church. He owned the original homestead, and was a farmer all of his life. Mr. Zeller married Susanna Trautman, who was born March 23, 1791, and died Dec. 12, 1842, in her fifty-second year. The children born to them were: Lydia, m. to Peter Wagner; Elizabeth, m. to Isaac Weigly; Jonathan; Catherine, m. to Eli Gehret; Lavina, m. to David Dundore; Jacob, m. to Caroline Kilmer; and John, born in 1833, who died in 1888, m. to beckie Schell.

Jonathan Zeller, grandfather of George M., was born July 10, 1815, and died Jan. 12, 1894, in his seventy-ninth year. He was born on the homestead in Marion township, which he cultivated for many years, and was well-known in the community for his public spirit. He was buried at the Tulpehocken Reformed Church, of which he was a member. Mr. Zeller was married to Catherine Wilhelm, born Feb. 27, 1819, died Feb. 1, 1894, and reared near eighty-four years.

Their children were as follows: Reily W.; Elizabeth m. (first) Henry Kachel, deceased, and (second) George Foos, deceased, and whose son is Dr. Charles S. Foos, superintendent of Reading public schools; and Mary m. Dr. Frank J. Kantner, of Reading.

Robert W. Zeller, father of George M., was born Feb. 17, 1843, in Marion township, and from his youth until 1893 was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In that year he removed to his dwelling at Stouchsburg, where he lived retired. In 1897, however, he returned to the farm, which he operated for a period of three years. Again disposing of his farming property, Mr. Zeller returned to Stouchsburg, and since that time has lived retired from active pursuits. He was the owner of sixty-five acres of land, a part of the original homestead, which he sold to Lewis Webber in 1908. Mr. Webber also owning the old Zeller stand. Mr. Zeller is a Democrat in politics, was school director for six twenty-six years, and was buried in the capacity of treasurer of the board, and has been a delegate to numerous county conventions. With his family he attends the Tulpehocken Church, of which he is a deacon.

In 1864 Mr. Zeller was married to Rebecca Troutman, daughter of Benjamin and Hannah (Leiss) Troutman, and three children were born to this marriage: George M.; Wilson B., of Reading; and Mary, m. to Charles H. Shively.

George M. Zeller was reared upon his father’s farm, and worked for his parents until he was twenty years old, at which time he went to learn cigar making under James Zerbe, at Stougburg, where in 1893 he engaged in the manufacture of cigars. He continued in this business until 1897, also conducting a country store, or back shop, of his product to ladies. Mr. Zeller then engaged in packing cigars for George Druber, a cigar manufacturer at Stougburg, until the fall of 1900, when at public sale, he purchased the property of the “American House,” at Stougburg, from the Isaac L. Moyer estate, and this he has conducted with much success to the present day. In his position as cigar factory and ambassador, Mr. Zeller is one of the best known and most popular men in his township, and also has a large acquaintance in the southern and western portions of Berks county. In addition to his hotel and store building he owned a comfortable residence at Stougburg, and he has been prominently identified with the progress and development of the township. He is an active worker in all the affairs of that community. He is a great fisherman, is one of the crack shots of the Keystone Gun Club, of Lebanon, Pa., where he won medals for marksmanship for five consecutive years, having a record of fifteen straight birds. He has a very valuable bird dog. Mr. Zeller was the pitcher of the first Marion base ball club that held the amateur championship of the county in the early nineties. In politics Mr. Zeller is a stanch Democrat, and takes an active interest in his party’s success, having never missed an election since attaining his majority. Fraternally he is connected with Washington Camp No. 287, P. O. S. of A., Stougburg; Reading Encampment No. 1, and the Commonwealth Casualty Company of Philadelphia. Mr. Zeller and his family are members of Tulpehocken Reformed Church of Marion township, to which he gives his liberal support.

On Sept. 26, 1885, Mr. Zeller was married to Lizzie J. Elges, daughter of Aaron Bright (see sketch elsewhere). To this union has been born one son, Harry Bright Zeller, born on St. Patrick’s Day, March 17, 1886, at Stougburg. He graduated from the township schools, and later attended the Lebanon Business College and the Elmer Deck School of Shorthand and Typewriting.

WILSON B. ZELLER, son of Reily W. and brother of George M., was born in Marion township Oct. 1, 1865. His education was obtained in the public schools, in Palatinate College, Myerstown, and in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. He taught three terms at the Zeller school in Marion, and two terms in the Mohler school in the same township. He learned the duties pertaining to a farmer’s life at home, and he gave his assistance to his father until he was twenty-one years old. He then entered the general store of his father-in-law, Isaac L. Moyer, a merchant at Stougburg. There he continued for nine years. In January, 1888, he was appointed a clerk in the Recorder’s office at Reading, and then he gave six years of service under Recorders Reeser and Bressler. In 1904 he became traveling salesman for S. M. Hess & Bros., manufacturers of fertilizers at Philadelphia, and he now represents that firm in twenty-four counties in Pennsylvania. He possesses the happy faculty of making friends.

In 1885 Mr. Zeller was married to Ada A. Moyer, eldest daughter of the late Isaac L. Moyer, of Marion township. They resided in Stougburg until their removal to Reading in April, 1901. Three children have been born to them: (1) Robert M., born May 27, 1887, graduated from the Reading high school in 1905, with the distinction of being valedictorian of his class; he is now a teacher of mathematics in Marion township; (2) Edna M. (3) Sarah R., born March 20, 1893, died July 13, 1902. Mr. Zeller and his family are members of St. Mark’s Reformed Church, Reading. During the residence in Stougburg Mr. Zeller was connected with the Union Sunday-school for ten years, being superintendent for seven. Socially he is a member of Golden Rule Lodge, No. 159, I. O. O. F., of Womelsdorf; Washington Camp, No. 237, P. O. S. of A., Stougburg, of which he is a past officer, and was district president of District No. 8, for one term. He also belongs to the Literary Association, a reading Democrat, and of great influence in his party. For eleven years he filled the office of school director in Marion township, for nine years being secretary of the board. He was a frequent delegate to county conventions under the old system. In June, 1909, he received the nomination for the office of recorder of deeds of Berks county, after a hard fight.

CHARLES HENRY JONES, son of Hon. J. Glancy Jones, of Reading, Pa., was born Sept. 13, 1837. He was educated as civil engineer in the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y., and served in the engineering corps in the local and general service of the East Pennsylvania railroad. In 1859 he accompanied his father, who had been appointed United States Minister to Austria, and served as attached to the legation until November, 1881. Having returned to America, he studied law under his father’s instruction, and was admitted to the Reading Bar in April, 1883. In the same year he removed to Philadelphia, where he has since actively practised his profession. He was solicitor to the park commissioners during the laying out of Fairmount Park, from 1869 to 1874; was the candidate of the Democratic party for city solicitor of Philadelphia in 1874; counsel for the Department of Protection, Centennial Exposition of 1876; and special deputy collector of the port of Philadelphia under President Cleveland from 1885 to 1889. In 1890 he organized The Trust Company of North America, and served for many years as vice-president of that corporation. For twenty-one years he has been one of the managers and for the past ten years chairman of the board of managers of Christ Church Hospital. He is an able lawyer and was prominent as counsel in many of the notable contested election cases in the Philadelphia courts, and is a representative of the thoroughness and ability with which he sifted out the frauds of a number of municipal elections and unseated the wrongful holders of many important offices.

Jones for many years has been identified with the Pennsylvania Society of the Sons of the Revolution, of which he is chairman of the board of managers and treasurer, and the Colonial Society, of which he is president. Several of the papers he has read before these societies, notably those relating to the appointment of Washington and the army on the banks of the Neshaminy, and at Whitemarsh during the year 1777, are replete with the most interesting information and charming descriptions of the thrilling events of that wonderful year, and have attracted universal attention as the best history of the immortal American Revolution, and served for many years as a lieutenant-colonel in the Continental army; “Genealogy of the Rodman Family from 1620 to 1886,” containing 2,892 names of the descendants of his maternal ancestors, among them. being William Rodman, who served as an officer on the staff of General Lacey during the war of Independence and was a member of Congress in 1812; "Davaults Mill"; "Recollections of Venice"; "A Pedestrian Tour Through Switzerland"; and "The Life and Memoirs of J. Glancy Jones."

JOSEPH W. RICHARDS, cashier of the First National Bank of Reading, Pa., is the oldest son of Rev. Elias J. Richards, D. D., and his first wife, Emily Theresa Ward; the latter a daughter of Joseph Ward, a merchant of Charlestown, Mass., and a member of Puritan stock which settled in Connecticut in 1638. Mr. Richards was born in Philadelphia, Jan. 21, 1844; was educated in preparatory schools at Reading, Danbury (Conn.), and Potts-town (Pa.), and was a student of medicine at the outbreak of the Civil War. On Aug. 10, 1862, he was mustered into service as a private in Company A, 128th Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, a part of the emergency force raised to meet the first Confederate invasion and enlisted for nine months, and served until May 19, 1863, the expiration of the term. The regiment participated in the severe battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville. In the summer of 1863 he served as a corporal in Company C, 44th Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, a part of the emergency force raised by the membership of the city for the defense and enlisted for three months. From 1865 to 1869 he was engaged in the oil business in Cleveland, Ohio, and upon returning to Reading was appointed a clerk in the First National Bank. Of this institution he was in 1899 elected cashier.

Mr. Richards married, in 1872, Annie O. Kerper, a daughter of William Kerper, merchant, of Reading, and a member of one of its oldest families. Of their three children, one, a son, survives. Mr. Richards is a member of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., of Reading.

REV. ELIAS J. RICHARDS, D. D., for upwards of twenty-five years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Reading, Pa., was born Jan. 14, 1813, in the Valley of the Dee, in the West of England, not many miles from the town of Llangollen in Wales, and was the son of Hugh and Jane Ellis (Jones) Richards. His ancestors were tillers of the soil, following the principal industry of the surrounding region. His father was an adherent of the Presbyterian faith, and his mother a devout member of the Church of England. The latter died when he was only three years old, and remained thus a fatherless child until he was about twenty-three years old. He was educated at the University of Edinburgh, and graduated in 1835, with a degree of Doctor of Divinity. He married, first, Jane Stebbins, Nov. 22, 1835, and resided in France with her father, the Rev. Benjamin Stebbins, a summer resident of Philadelphia. The marriage was brought about by the efforts of the Rev. Dr. Stebbins. After resigning the Ministerial office, by the death of the right Reverend Dr. Latrobe, the husband of his first wife [his second wife], he married, Oct. 25, 1835, Jane, daughter of Rev. Dr. A. J. R. Biddle, of N. J., who graduated in the University of Pennsylvania in 1836, and was the daughter of Rev. Dr. W. Biddle. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of New York in 1859. He was ordained by the Presbytery of New York in 1870, and settled in Philadelphia, where he resided until his death. He was a faithful and zealous pastor, and his name was a household word in the community. His death was a great loss to the Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, and his life was a beautiful example of the power of the Spirit to convert and save men. He was a man of great ability, and his sermons were equally noted for their devotional spirit and literary grace. His heart was warmly enlisted in the success of his country's cause during the Civil War, and his discourses delivered upon occasions of national observance were lofty utterances of civic faith and patriotic impulse. In the personality of the man there was intermingled a native dignity of manner, with a pervading tenderness of spirit, which riveted the attention and abided in the memory. The example of his saintly life and character irradiated an influence for the moral uplifting of the entire community, which recognized in him a leading mind and mourned his departure as a public loss. A marble tablet to his memory expressive of these sentiments was erected by three congregations a few months after his decease. His rank in the denomination was deservedly high, and as a recognition of his especial fitness for the office at the time it was conferred, he, in June, 1870, by a unanimous vote, was elected first moderator of the reunited Synod of Philadelphia.

Mr. Richards was twice married. By his first wife, Emily T. Ward, who died in 1857, he had five children, of whom one son and two daughters are living. He married, second, Elizabeth Frances Smith, who, with one daughter, now deceased, survived him.

HIESTER FAMILY. [Taken from Rupp's History of Berks County (1844) pp. 295-297.] The name of Hister is so extensively connected with the general and State governments, that a brief sketch of the family may not be uninteresting. Their remote ancestors were of Silesian origin. From that country they were distributed through Austria, Bavaria, Saxony, Switzerland and the countries bordering on the river Rhine. The immediate ancestors of the present race of that name in this country emigrated from Wittgenstein in Westphalia, and arrived in America in the early part of the 18th century. They were of three brothers, who took up their residence in the first place at Goschenhoppen, then in Philadelphia, now in Montgomery, county. Here Daniel at once purchased a farm which was somewhat improved. After exploring and becoming better acquainted with the country, they united in purchasing from the Proprietary government upward of two thousand acres of land in Bern township, now Berks county. Here John and Joseph settled, while Daniel remained at the homestead. Having thus, with the characteristic prudence of those primitive days, first secured the means of support, they never lost a single day in forming matrimonial alliances with American women, and "set themselves down, each under his own vine and fig tree," to enjoy, in the pursuit of agriculture, the fruits of their virtuous enterprise.

As they had been induced to leave their own native country by the vassalage of an oppressive government, which exacted, not only onerous taxes, but also a portion of the time and labor of its subjects, they naturally cherished in the minds of their descendants, a lofty spirit of freedom. Accordingly, when the Revolutionary war broke out, they were among the first to enroll themselves in the list of Associates. The efficient services of this class of citizen soldiers (which were organized by electing two Brigadier Generals at Lancaster on the 4th of July, 1776), afterward rendered in the campaigns of New Jersey, New York, Delaware, and the lower part of Pennsylvania, is a well known matter of history. Daniel (of Montgomery), John (of Chester), and Gabriel (of Berks), the three eldest sons of Daniel, entered the service as field officers, the two former with the rank of Colonel, and the latter with that of Major. William, the fourth and youngest son, Daniel, although also enrolled, did not, on account of his extreme youth and the infirmity of his aged parents, serve more than one campaign. He was the great-grandfather of Isaac Hiester, Esq., whose sketch follows.

Joseph Hiester, afterward Governor of Pennsylvania, the only son of John, entered the service as a captain in the "Flying Camp," and having been made a prisoner at the battle of Long Island, and confined on board the naval vessel "Resolution," he was, after his exchange to the rank of Colonel. After the war, he and his two cousins, Daniel and John, were elected to the rank of Majors General of the militia in their respective districts. The popularity these men gained by their devotion to duty, and after the triumph of the eventful struggles of the Revolutionary war, never forsook them. After the declaration of peace, they all enjoyed, by the suffrages of the people, a large share in the councils of the State, and general Government.

General Daniel Hiester was the first representative in Congress, elected from Berks County, of which he had in the meantime become a citizen. In 1796 he removed to Maryland, where he was again repeatedly elected to the same office, from the district composed of Washington, Frederick, and Allegeny counties, and during the last year of his decease, at Washington city, in the Session of 1800-01.

Joseph Hiester was elected a member of the convention which met in Philadelphia, in November, 1787, to consider and ratify, or reject, the first constitution of the United States; and in 1788, he was a member of the convention which formed the second constitution of the same State. Under that constitution, he and Gabriel Hiester (who had also been a member of the convention which formed the first State constitution), were repeatedly elected to the Legislature, the latter continuing either in the Senate or House of Representatives, uninterupted, for nearly thirty years. General Joseph, and after his decease, the eldest son of Daniel to Maryland, represented his district, composed in part of Berks county, in Congress, and about the same time General John Hiester was also chosen a member of the same body from Chester county. Both were re-elected for eight terms—three of these years, he resigned in 1820 and he was elected Governor of Pennsylvania, and the latter until he declined a re-election and retired to private life.

GABRIEL HIESTER. [Taken from Montgomery's Berks County in the Revolution (1894) p. 329]. Gabriel Hiester, a son of Daniel Hiester (native of Witgenstein, Westphalia), and Catherine Schuler, was born in Bern township June 17, 1749. He was brought up as a farmer and given such an education as the neighborhood afforded at the school connected with the Bern Church. In 1776, he was selected as one of the representatives from Berks county to the Provincial Convention for the formation of a constitution. In 1778, he received the appointment of justice of the Common Pleas Court of the county, which he held for four years. He was afterward elected to the Assembly, and represented the county for eight years, 1782, 1787-89, 1791, and 1802-04. He was, in the Assembly, especially when the question of framing a new constitution was discussed but he voted against the propriety of calling a convention for this purpose. He was senator from the district which comprised Berks and Dauphin counties for two terms, 1792-95, and 1803-05. The most liberal and by his fellow-citizens indicates their confidence in him as a man of ability and integrity. He was a brother of Col. Daniel Hiester, of Montgomery county; of Col. John Hiester, of Chester county, and a cousin of Col. Joseph Hiester of Berks county.

He died on his farm, in Bern township, Sept. 1, 1824. His wife was Elizabeth Bausman, who survived him eight years, dying in the 81st year of her age. He had four sons, Gabriel, Jonathan, William and Jacob, and two daughters, Mary (m. to Frederick A. Shulze), and Elizabeth. The family name was commonly written Hiester, but he wrote it Heister.

ISAAC HIESTER, attorney-at-law at Reading, and president of the Second National Bank, was born at Reading Jan. 6, 1856. He was educated in the local schools, and graduated from Trinity College, at Hartford, Conn., from which he graduated in 1876. He then studied law in the office of George F. Baer, Esq., for two years, and was admitted to the Bar of Berks county Aug. 13, 1878. Since then he has been actively and successfully engaged in the practice of his profession, not only in the County courts, but also before the Superior and Supreme Courts of the State, as indicated by the published reports of cases. He has been prominently identified with the Berks County Bar Association, having served as vice-president for nine years until 1906, and since then as president. He has also been a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association for a number of years.

Mr. Hiester has officiated as a director and the counsel for the Reading Trust Company since its organization in 1868; also as the president of the Second National Bank of Reading since 1890, having been one of its organizers in 1881. He is also a member of the board of managers of the Charles Evans Cemetery Company, the Reading Library, the East Penn Railroad Company, the Reading Gas Company, and the Reading Electric Light & Power Company as trustee or director.

Feb. 4, 1905, Mr. Hiester was married to Mary Kimmel Baer, daughter of George F. Baer, Esq. They are members of Christ Episcopal Church. He has been a vestryman since 1879. He took an active part in the Sunday-school for many years, officiating as superintendent from 1880 to 1898.

WILLIAM MULLENBERG HIESTER, (father of Isaac) was born at Reading, May 15, 1818, and after receiving his preparatory education in the West Nottingham Academy, Maryland, entered Bristol College, from which he was graduated in 1837. He then studied law in the office of Hon. John Banks, at Reading, attended a course of law lectures at Harvard College, and was admitted to the Bar of Reading in 1840. In 1843, the honorary degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by Harvard College. Soon after his admission to the Bar, he went to Erie, Pa., for the purpose of engaging in the practice of the law at that place, but after remaining there four years he returned to Reading to form a law-partnership with Henry A. Muhlenberg, Esq., which was both a large and successful practice. Both of them took an active interest in Democratic politics, and their ability and devotion were so highly appreciated that they were elected to the State Senate, the former serving from 1850 to 1853, and the latter from 1853 to 1856. Mr. Hiester, during his last year in the Senate, officiated as Speaker.

Upon the election of Hon. William F. Packer as governor of the State, he selected Mr. Hiester as secretary of the Commonwealth, and Mr. Hiester filled this important office with great success from 1858 to 1861. During the exciting presidential campaign of 1860, he supported Mr. Douglas, but when the Civil war broke out he encouraged the Lincoln Administration in the earnest prosecution of the war to the utmost of his ability. In 1863, Governor Curtin, in appreciation of Hiester's patriotic spirit, appointed him as one of the mustering officers, with the rank of major, and during the war the county organized eight regiments of volunteers who had answered the Governor's call for 60,000 men to repel the invasion of the Rebels. These regiments were assembled in the Fair Grounds at the head of Penn street, and the encampment was called "Camp Hiester," after Mr. Hiester. His adherence to the Republican party led to his nomination for Congress by the Republicans of this district in 1864. After the Civil war he lived practically in retirement until his decease Aug. 16, 1878. He was identified for many years with the management of the Charles Evans Cemetery, the Revolutionary Cemetery and the Berks County Historical Society, of which he was the first president, and for years was its director; and he contributed liberally toward the support of local charity. He was married to Julia F. Roland, daughter of Henry Roland, and they had one son, Isaac (above). His wife died Oct. 27, 1904.

Dr. ISAAC HIESTER, a distinguished physician for nearly fifty years of his life in Reading, was the grandfather of Isaac Hiestern, Esq. He was born in Bern township, near the Bern Church, about eight miles from Reading, June 22, 1788. He was given a thorough education at the University of Pennsylvania for the practice of medicine, and after serving as an attending physician in the Pennsylvania Hospital for five years, settled at Reading, where he practised his profession in a most successful manner until his death in 1855. During his practice he prepared a number of articles on medical subjects which received much favorable comment.

Dr. Hiestern manifested great interest in local affairs, whether of a medical or of a financial, industrial, literary, and scientific nature, and his superior character exerted a powerful influence in the successful development of Reading during its really formative period for forty years from the close of our war with England (1812 to 1815). When the Berks County Medical Society was organized in 1824, he was chosen its first president, and upon assuming the duties of the office, delivered a most interesting address. [The proceedings of the meeting and a copy of the address are published in Rupp's History of Berks County (1844), pages 290-294.] He co-operated heartily with other enterprising men of Reading in establishing railroad communications with Philadelphia on the south, and with Pottsville on the north; in supplying the townspeople with spring water for drinking purposes and gas for lighting purposes; and in founding the Reading Academy for increasing the facilities of higher education at home; and when Charles Evans, Esq., came to settle in the outskirts of the town, took charge of the property left by him in Reading and laid out the cemetery which he founded at Reading, he selected Dr. Hiestern as one of them.

In 1810, Dr. Hiestern was married to Esther Muhlenberg (daughter of Gen. Peter Muhlenberg, who distinguished himself by patriotic service during the Revolution), and they had four children: William M. (above); Peter M.; Anna M. (m. to Hon. J. Pringle Jones, judge of Berks county from 1851 to 1861); and Frank M.

HON. DANIEL ERMENTROUT, late of Reading, has left a record of devotion to the interests of that place which has been equaled by few of its citizens, in any day. He was a descendant of the old German stock to which this portion of Pennsylvania owes its principal development, and which is still represented here in large numbers by the posterity of the early settlers. As a lawyer of ability he stood at the head of his chosen profession; as a public official he performed services which will be felt for many years to come; as a gentleman of brilliant mental gifts and winning personality he was sought and welcomed in circles where the highest ideals of social intercourse prevailed. His memory is cherished by many in Reading, for though he lived in the outskirts of communities and embraced many interests, yet his home city always had first place in his heart and received the benefit of the best efforts of his mind. The fellow-citizens who encouraged his earlier endeavors were the same who applauded the achievements of his mature years, and, augmented by the valedictory of sincere friends, was the same who mourned most deeply his sudden taking away. Mr. Ermentrout was distinctly an American citizen, his family having been settled in this country for a hundred years before his birth, but nevertheless he owned many of his most characteristic qualities to the race and to the land of his spiritual and some references to his ancestors will be of interest.

The family is of German noble origin. The head of the house in Europe was living, in 1899, at Monersasz-tiska, in Galicia, near the Russian border. Carl Fried- erich, Baron von Ermentrout, as the name indicates, found in December 16, 1810, in the Imperial Austrian army, and as Knight of the Military Order of Merit, and had long lived in retirement. He married a relative, Anna, Baroness von Ermentrout, and there were no children.

The recorded history of the family begins in 1339, when it was already among the oldest members of the German nobility, forming part of the old "tournement ring of Franconia." To belong to any one of the four tournament circles of those days it was necessary to prove descent from four noble families, all eligible, on both paternal and maternal sides. In other words, the Knight had to prove his "quarterings." Several Ermentrouts participated in a tournament, at Frankfort, as well as in the celebrated Nürnberg tournament of 1433, during the first year of the reign of the Emperor Sigismund. These proofs of eligibility are still preserved.

In ancient documents and old genealogical notes the name spelled Ehrendrau, Ehrendraut, Ermentrat, Ermentrout, Ermentrout, Irmentrat, Irmentrat, Irmentrat, just as it sounded at the moment to the clerks who wrote these papers, as the Knights of those early days were indifferent spellers and usually signed their documents with the imprint of their armorial bearings embossed on signet rings or sword pommels.

The earliest known seat of the family was located in Hadamar, Nassau, where the name is still perpetuated in the little village of Irmentrat, situated on the outskirts of the Westerwald. There they had their feudal holdings and manor house, and in accordance with the customs of the times, held court for private and public justice.

A great stone barn carved with the Irmentrat coat of arms was all that remained in 1864. The castle was but a mass of ruins. They intermarried with other great families in their own and neighboring counties, Nassau, Franconia, Säubia, the Palatinate, etc., and present-day descendants of these inter-marriages have become prominent in Hessen in Bavaria, the Princes and Counts of Metternich in Austria, the Counts of Schwarzenburg in Austria, the Hatzfelds in Prussia, the Schoenborns in Austria, the Baron von Stein on the Rhine and in Prussia, and others of equal importance.

In religion the Irmentrouts at present are Protestants, probably becoming such at the time of the Reformation, as in earlier days members of the family served as Abbots and Abbesses, in "noble knights' abbeys" and convents. In the service of the Crown, the Irmentrouts made their reputation, as military men. Some seem to have been inclined to adventure, as it is recorded that two, who were in the Spanish Moorish wars, were killed by the Moors in Spain. One of them was intrusted with a diplomatic mission to the Duke of Burgundy, in the sixteenth century, and succeeded so well that he was rewarded by his sovereign with the augmentation of his "arms."

Taking up the line in America, we find the same superior ideals of civic duty and manly achievement prevailing in every generation. From its foundation here, the family has been among the most influential and notable in Berks county. Representatives of the name have been members of the full resident body of the county. Some seem to have been more inclined to adventure, as it is recorded that two, who were in the Spanish Moorish wars, were killed by the Moors in Spain. One of them was intrusted with a diplomatic mission to the Duke of Burgundy, in the sixteenth century, and succeeded so well that he was rewarded by his sovereign with the augmentation of his "arms."

John Ermentrout, the first of the name on this side of the Atlantic, came hither from his home in the Palatinate in 1739, and permanently settled in what is now Berks county, Pa., where the family remained until 1829.

Christopher Ermentrout, son of John, was born Feb. 8, 1754, in the family home, near Womelsdorf. His son, John, the grandfather of Hon. Daniel Ermentrout, was born April 27, 1777, and was a Jefferson Democrat. William Ermentrout, son of John, was born Dec. 12, 1799, near Womelsdorf, and died at Reading Jan. 21, 1880, to whose memory he had a monument erected in the local municipal service, as well as a successful merchant, holding the office of county treasurer from 1851 to 1853, and serving for many years as a member of the board of controllers of the public schools of the city, and was treasurer of the board from 1869 to 1877. His religious connection was with the Reformed Church brought by his ancestors from the Old World.

William Ermentrout married Justina Silvis, and to them were born ten children, namely: John Silvis, William C., Benjamin F., Philip M., Daniel, Joseph C., Dr. Samuel C., James, (m. F. C. Ritter) and Elizabeth (m. de Benneville Bertolette).

Daniel Ermentrout, fifth son of William and Justina (Silvis) Ermentrout, was born Jan. 24, 1837, in Reading, at the homestead, No. 52 North Fifth street, and was identified with the city throughout his life. He began his education in the public schools, and then went on to college, where he received his higher literary training in Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, Pa., and in Elwood Institute, Norristown, this State. Meantime he had followed intermittently the profession which has been the stepping-stone for many an ambitious student, teaching for several years, in Reading, Conshohocken and Norristown. Further he had commenced the study of law, under the able direction of Hon. David F. Gordon, who had served as president judge of the Berks district from 1849 to 1851, and who then had a law office in Reading. On Aug. 3, 1859, Mr. Ermentrout was admitted to the Bar, and thus formally launched upon his life work. He began a career which made him thearbiter of the most honored among the native sons of Pennsylvania.

Even at the outset of his independent practice Mr. Ermentrout had more patronage than falls to the lot of the average young lawyer. Success seemed to be his portion, the people gave him their confidence intuitively. But he was a young man, a lad, and during his undergraduate and legal years he had acquired a wide acquaintance in the legal fraternity of this section of the State, but also found ample exercise for all of his talents, the diversified demands of the work bringing into practical use many acquirements for which there is little call in ordinary practice. Moreover, some of the most important public services he performed in his later years, as a legislator, may be traced directly to his experiences in the discharge of his first public office. Having proved his ability and public spirit, he was again and again called to services of responsibility for his community, being almost continuously in office until his death. In 1867 he was chosen city solicitor and was twice re-elected, serving until 1870. In 1873 he was elected to the state Senate, for a term of three years. Meantime, in 1874, the term was lengthened by a year, and when he was re-elected, in 1876, it was a four-year term. At the close of that period, in 1880, he was chosen to represent this district in the National Congress, and, by re-election, was a member of that body for four successive terms, 1881 to 1889. In 1896 he was again elected, and at the end of his term was chosen to succeed himself in 1898, so that he was a member of the LVth Congress, at the time of his death.

In October, 1877, while a member of the State Senate, the Governor appointed him a member of the Pennsylvania Statutory Commission, authorized by the State Legislature to select the two Pennsylvanians to be represented in Statistical Hall, at the National Capitol. A contemporary speech of Governor Hartman was a Republican, but he saw Daniel Ermentrout — 'either he was made for that place.' Mr. Ermentrout used his influence to the utmost in securing the choice of General Muhlenberg and was particularly gratified in the selection, inasmuch as the General was an ancestor of the family of the same name in Berks county, as shown by one of the most notable representatives of the early German settlers, Governor Muhlenberg, who was a member of the National House of Representatives, he proved his lasting interest in the matter by delivering a brilliant address on the Muhlenberg and Fulton statues; by offering resolutions presenting the thanks of Congress for the statues, and by introducing a bill to authorize the printing of the proceedings of Congress in accepting them.

During his first term in Congress Mr. Ermentrout, besides looking after various minor affairs of local interest, accomplished an object which has given him a permanent place among the public benefactors of Reading. As the member for the twenty-first district of Pennsylvania of this district had tried in vain to get an appropriation for a public building in Reading, Mr. Ermentrout, a Democrat in a Republican House, tactfully overcame every obstacle and succeeded in obtaining the amount necessary to put up the handsome post-office which Reading has since known. The bill was passed and its success was won by aggressive methods, but by the exercise of his comprehensive understanding of parliamentary rules, together with a fine discrimination and bonhomie, that won friends for himself as well as for his pet project. His success had wider results than were originally anticipated, for, with the Reading building as a precedent, many other Pennsylvania towns have since been likewise favored. Mr. Ermentrout's efforts in behalf of his home city, directly and indirectly, gained many benefits for Reading, but none, perhaps, gave him more pleasure in the doing than this, and the Reading post-office stands as his best monument—the only one by which he is best remembered.

In 1882-83 he also secured his wish to change the name and location of the Kutztown National Bank; to furnish condemned cannon to McLean Post, No. 16, G. A. R.; petitions and papers from the citizens of Pennsylvania for the passage of a bill to establish a Superior court; for an appropriation to American steamships for ocean mail; at the same time, he gave his country three gold medals for the Ringgold Battery First Defenders, in recognition of their services during the Civil War. He took a strong position in favor of the restriction of Chinese immigration, making several speeches on that subject; also in favor of the extension of the banks' charters, and against the appointment of a tariff commission. This succeeding term was spent by similar activity. He introduced a number of private pension claims which were afterward successfully established, offered petitions and papers to increase the pay of the Capitol police; petitions and papers from the citizens of his State for the enforcement of the eight-hour labor law, and for the establishment of penny postages, from the Berks County Medical Society for a building for a medical museum; from the Reading Druggists' Association for free alcohol, and from the Reading Typographical Union, No. 86, for the Chance-Breckinridge act. In the LVth Congress he was honored with a place on the committee with which were connected the inaugural ceremonies of President Harrison, and was a teller in the count of the electoral vote. It was he who offered the motions and resolutions to admit ladies to the floor of the House; to reserve portions of the House gallery; and to appoint a committee on Inaugural Ceremonies. It was his boast on one notable occasion that he "stood shoulder to shoulder with 'Sam' Randall in defense and support of the tariff interests of Pennsylvania, until his party in National and State conventions decided upon a new policy, and then," said Mr. Ermentrout, with solemn gravity, "national "amidst our Delaware "candy "hand, "I go with my party, and if necessary will "go out of Congress," meaning the decision of the vote for the "Mills bill," which was made a party question, in the LVth Congress, lost him the Democratic nomination for the next (List) Congress, but he was amply vindicated by his nomination and election to the LVth and LVth Congresses. He insisted that a loyal Democrat he must follow his party and that was his platform, under the leadership of a Democratic President, but was voting on him until a new policy was decided upon. "He was the only man in Berks county that ever survived a defeat and again by native force forged to the front and gained a personal victory."

During his four years' work in the LVth Congress, it was evident that his public spirit had suffered no abatement. He presented a bill and joint resolutions donating cannon to the G. A. R., at Allentown; for the relief of Herman Van Marzof; also papers and petitions from... the Reading CigarMakers’ Union against increase in the tariff on tobacco; from Freedom Circle, Reading, relative to the partition of the land; from the Penn Hardware Company of Reading, against standing on record every check on the Reading Tinplate Company, relative to placing tariff on tinplate; from St. Lawrence congregation, against placing church goods on the free list. He used his good offices to obtain all the Government appointments possible for his constituents, secured pensions for numerous families and was instrumental in obtaining funds and plants for the improvement of the public park at the head of Penn street. It was also through his influence, during this term, that Henry May Keim was appointed consul to Prince Edward Island.

In Reading Mr. Ermentrout was particularly active on the question of public education and was a member, from the Seventh ward, on the board of school controllers for a number of years.

In politics Mr. Ermentrout was a local leader in the Democratic party from the time he made his first campaign, as candidate for the office of district attorney. He had decided taste and acknowledged talent for the contests of the political arena, served several years as chairman of the Berks county committee, and never missed a State convention of his party. In 1880 he was a delegate to the National convention that was held at Cincinnati, where he supported Samuel J. Tilden as long as that gentleman was a candidate. His hope of nominating him was abandoned Mr. Ermentrout had the honor of presenting General Hancock’s name to the convention for nomination.

Though his official duties were multitudinous Mr. Ermentrout continued the practice of law throughout his life and made a reputation in the profession which would have been notable had it not been overshadowed by the more conspicuous results of his public service. He was engaged as counsel in important trials from an early stage in his career, both in the local and in the State Supreme Courts, and his triumphs of the campaigning days of the war years during the Civil war period, was filled with interesting and important work. In addition to the usual criminal cases he conducted a number of trials which were the center of wide interest at the time, with the ability which won him much valuable patronage upon his return to private practice.

These are the plain facts regarding Mr. Ermentrout’s life and work. They give some indication of his devoted services and of the achievement of his dearest ambitions. But, unqualified by any reference to the other side of his nature, they give a totally inadequate idea of the man. His gifts as an orator, his literary attainments, his nominal qualities, were appreciable factors in the success of many of his undertakings. During the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia in 1876, while a member of the State Senate, he made a memorable address on “The Pennsylvania Germans in History.” Though he made no pretense of oratorical skill he had a reputation throughout his Congressional life as a clever and able speaker with that personal magnetism which has power over an audience, when combined with the faculty of saying things well, and he was often called upon for speeches and addresses, in the most distinguished gatherings.

At one of the many Washington dinners, where he was usually the life and soul of the party, the brilliant Blackburn of Kentucky, then elected to the Senate, in speaking of the contest on the Mills bill and of the division of the House thereon, said: “Mr. Chairman, it was once said that the Pennsylvania Democracy was divided into three parties, one for Andrew Jackson Democrats and the Pennsylvania Dutch—thousands of votes being cast in that State every four years directly for Andrew Jackson, who was still thought to be very much alive. But, Mr. Chairman, I want to add to that list. I would class them as the Pennsylvania Democrats, the Pennsylvania Republicans, and the Daniel Ermentrout.” This sally created great laughter, and quick as a flash Mr. Ermentrout was on his feet. “Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, for the compliment he has sought to pay me, by making me ‘flock by myself.’ But, Mr. Chairman, I want him and everybody present to know that the real Andrew Jackson was the Democratic President of the United States, the Democratic Speaker of the House of Representatives, and, with five exceptions, the entire Democratic membership of the House of Representatives; and I want to say that, when the time comes, I shall always be found ‘flocking’ with my party and standing on its last National platform, if I have to do it to make a Democrat. I prefer to be an humble private citizen of Pennsylvania and retain my self-respect, through fealty to my party, than cast a vote to curry local and temporary favor. Legislation, whether State or National, is, after all, but a compromise; but I shall always be found following the party leader and the party flag. Three rousing cheers and a tiger were given for Mr. Ermentrout.

It was said of him, by his contemporaries in Congress, that “he had all the nerve, courage and stubbornness of his race, and an iron will, which fought to the bitter end. He hated intrigue and despised all shams. He was open, frank, honest and manly to his opponents. He wore no mask. He had as positive convictions as any man who ever held a seat upon this floor, and he was always loyal to his convictions. On non-essential questions, where men might honestly differ, he was as generous and kindly-tempered as a woman.”

Mr. Ermentrout made a visit to Nashville, Tenn., of a large Congressional party at the invitation of the Managers of their Centennial Exposition, in 1896, Mr. Ermentrout so won the hearts of the people that they sent him word they would give him the greatest office in their gift, governor or United States senator, if he would make his home among them. It was often said of him: “He was the center of attraction wherever he went, whether in a circle of distinguished ladies and gentlemen, or with the very humblest of the immense throng that visited our Centennial. He was liked by all. He loved to make everybody happy. He was a practical politician, a scholar in pleasure-making, adding gayway refinement and zest to each and every occasion. He was the joy of the party.”

Throughout his busy life he continued to be a close student, finding his most delightful recreation in his books, into which he delved with characteristic earnestness. His taste was discriminating and he acquired an astonishing intimacy with the best in the classics and general literature. His linguistic attainments were also unusual, including proficiency in French and German, which he spoke and wrote with ease, and a familiar knowledge of Italian and Spanish, sufficient for ordinary conversation. He was a prolific writer in his scholar. Undoubtedly Mr. Ermentrout received his first impulse in this direction while a pupil in the classical school under Mr. Kelly, who was born in France, of Irish parentage, and whose influence had a lasting effect upon his researches and studies. He wrote fluently and convincingly, his wide experience giving him an outlook both broad and generous. His practical, intelligent views of life, gained in so many different ways, tempered by the kindliness of disposition admired by all, and augmented by study and travel, both in his own country and Europe, gave his spoken and written thoughts a permanency of value. This fact is apparent today whenever his opinions or advice are recalled.

Mr. Ermentrout’s last appearance at any public affair was at a dinner given by the Reading Press Club, a few days before his death upon which occasion he was an honored guest and made his last speech. He was an associate member of this club, a member and one of the foundng members of the Historical Society of Berks County, a member of the Pennsylvania German Society of the Pennsylvania Historical Society and of the American Club. In 1868 he was a member of Company G, Second Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia.

As may be judged from his connection with the local historic societies and his services in the settlement of Pennsylvania and the history of his county, and his researches along this line made him one of the most thoroughly informed men in the State. But in this, as in everything else, he made no pretense of being an authority. His natural modesty and refinement made him chary of exploiting his attainments and he never won ill-will by undue display of his gifts or knowledge.

Mr. Ermentrout passed away at six o'clock, on the morning of the 30th of April, 1896, within a few hours of his sixty-seventh birthday. He was a man of peace, and his death was the loss of a valued citizen of Reading, and the All-Merciful! Alas! the dread summons came to our friend and fellow-member all too soon!

Mr. Ermentrout was united in marriage with Adelaide Louise Metzger, daughter of John Metzger, Jr., of Lancaster, Pa., and to them were born two children, Fitz-Daniel and Adelaide Louise Washington, the former now a practising attorney in Reading. Mrs. Ermentrout's culture and superior accomplishments enabled her to fulfill fittingly the social obligations imposed by her husband's conspicuous position. In Washington they enjoyed the best that that delightfully cosmopolitan society could give them, meeting representative people from all quarters of the globe. One of the most noteworthy functions in which they participated was the grand historic ball given at Reading, in 1879, which surpassed anything of the kind ever attempted in this section and which drew guests of prominence from all over Pennsylvania, the Governor, with his family and entire staff, making a special trip to Reading to honor the assemblage with their presence. The ball was planned and arranged by Mrs. Ermentrout, as Vice Regent of the Valley Forge Association, in aid of the Valley Forge Fund, and was a memorable success socially and financially. Ermentrout's contributions in the United States of the Children of the American Revolution, although the idea originated with Mrs. Lathrop, of Concord, Mass., the writer of children's stories. The Conrad Weiser Chapter of Reading, Pa., is the name of this historic society.

She was also appointed to take charge of Woman's Day, during Reading's Sesqui-Centennial, in 1907, and had a notable gathering on the morning of that day, at the Academy of Music, addressed by the President of the Colonial Dames, the President of the Daughters of the American Revolution and several notable citizens of Pennsylvania. This was followed in the afternoon by a reception to the women of Reading, by these distinguished visitors, who assisted Mrs. Ermentrout in receiving them, at her home, Graustein, on the Hill Road.

After the death of her husband Mrs. Ermentrout spent the latter part of the year 1896 in Europe with her daughter, the latter completing her education in England and France. During the school vacations and for one entire year they traveled, and upon their return to this country toured the United States for a year and a half, visiting numerous places of interest. They still maintain their pleasant home at Wyoming, a suburb of Reading, passing the summer and autumn there and wintering in one of the large cities.

Miss Ermentrout has had unusual social and educational opportunities. While still pursuing her studies in Paris she was presented, with her mother, at the first Court of King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, held at Buckingham Palace in London, July 9, 1902. They were also presented to President and Madame Loubet, at a ball given at the Elysée Palace, the official Paris residence of the Presidents of France. In 1900 Mrs. Ermentrout was granted an interesting interview with Cardinal Satoli, at his residence in one of the old Roman palaces frequented by modern Worthies of Rome. In 1895, she was the fortunate recipient of three distinct attentions from the Vatican, during the Jubilee year, when the Holy City was thronged with visitors, thousands of whom were unable to obtain even a glimpse of the Holy Father. Her extensive travels, in the United States, Cuba and Europe, had broadened her diversified interests and brought her into contact with various other unique and interesting experiences and privileges.

The Metzger family, to which Mrs. Ermentrout belongs, is German and of noble extraction, residing at Dornik for several hundred years, until the death of Sigismund von Metzger, in 1580. He was appointed military architect and later colonel of artillery, by Charles V. of Spain and Austria, and accompanied that monarch in all of his war-like expeditions, in Europe and Africa, dying at a very advanced age. He left two sons, Cornelius and Gustave, brave and expert warriors, whose descendants are still to be found in the Netherlands, Westphalia and North Germany. Mrs. Ermentrout is a descendant of the Netherlands branch. On her mother's side she is descended from the first white settlers of Lancaster county, Pa., in 1709, who, being relentlessly persecuted for their religious belief, fled from Switzerland—some of them French refugees—and found safety and peace in the New World. She numbers among these two of the first clergyman and the first physician ever known in Lancaster county.

PHILIP BISSINGER, president and manager of the Reading Brewing Company and founder of the Bissinger Cafe, was born Jan. 24, 1842, in Duerkheim, Germany, and received his primary education at that place, where he lived until he was thirteen years of age. He then accompanied his parents in their emigration to America, landing at the port of New York. He attended private schools at Lancaster, Pa., for several years, and then secured a position as clerk which he filled until he enlisted for service in the Civil war, Sept. 19, 1861, for the term of three years. He became sergeant-major of the 79th Regiment, P. V. I.; was promoted to first Lieutenant of Company F in January, 1863, and to captain in December, 1863, having command of the company until Sept. 18, 1864, when he resigned.

Shifting after returning home Captain Bissinger removed to Reading, and on Jan. 26, 1866, established a saloon and restaurant at No. 611 Penn street, which he soon developed into the most popular resort at Reading. His success was extraordinary from the start, and in 1882 he purchased the property, making extensive improvements to accommodate the increasing demands of his patronage; and in 1890 he erected a large four-story brick building for offices and halls and storage purposes on the rear of the lot at Court street. By this time the “Bissinger Café” had a reputation for superiority and first-class catering which extended throughout the nation, and numerous banquets were held there in celebration of events in the history of societies of all kinds, more particularly of a fraternal, political and musical nature, and in honor of popular and prominent individuals; and visiting strangers and travelers from all parts of the world found satisfactory entertainment. After having operated the business for about two decades under his father, the business to a faithful employee and manager for many years, Wellington B. Krick, and then retired to enable him and his wife to take a long-anticipated trip to Europe, and for nearly a year they visited the prominent centers there.

In 1886 Captain Bissinger encouraged the establishment of another brewery at Reading, and with the aid of local capitalists succeeded in organizing the Reading Brewing Company. He became the first manager of the plant and filled the position for three years, having in this time secured a large patronage from the community and made the new enterprise a success. In 1887, upon his return from Europe, he resumed his active interest in this company as a director, and in 1898 became its president and general manager; and he has served the company in these responsible positions until the present time, having in the past ten years developed its annual production from about 75,000 barrels to its present 100,000 barrels, and made it one of the finest brewing establishments in the country in point of equipment and sanitation.

For over forty years Captain Bissinger was prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity. He was chiefly instrumental in establishing Rajah Temple at Reading in 1890, and the plans for its unique and attractive hall, erected in 1904, were designed by him. He has also been prominently connected with the Grand Army of the Republic (Kcim Post, No. 76), Loyal Legion, Veteran Legion, and Army of the Cumberland. In 1891 the city councils selected him as the park commissioner for the northeast division of the city and he officiated in this position until 1897, when he removed his residence to the southeast division, where he had erected a fine home on Mineral Spring road.

But it was in the musical culture of Reading that Captain Bissinger was especially influential and successful for a period of twenty years, from 1864 to 1883. Immediately after locating at Reading he became a member of the Reading Maennerchor, and the society, after his father had declined to be its assistant musical director. He filled this position with remarkable success for some years, and then the society united with the Harmonic Gesangverein, another and older musical organization at Reading. In the reorganization of the two societies, the name Harmonie Maennerchor was adopted and Captain Bissinger was selected as the musical director of the new society. His recognized ability as a leader, together with his popularity and sociability, soon won increasing support and encouragement, and the society’s concerts at Reading and other cities were highly appreciated and largely patronized. He held to this position as the direur until 1879, when he declined a re-election. During this time he was also interested in the Germania Orchestra and aided materially in its successful reorganization. In 1876, by special invitation, the Harmonie Maennerchor and Germania Orchestra attended the United States Centennial at Philadelphia and represented Pennsylvania with great distinction. For several years after that the society, under his direction, as the direur until 1879, when he declined a re-election. In 1879 he organized the Philharmonic Society and directed its admirable concerts until 1883, when he was obliged to devote his entire attention to his own business affairs.

In 1880 Captain Bissinger married Ida Sebald Rosenthal (daughter of William Rosenthal, proprietor and publisher of German newspapers at Reading for forty years), who was graduated from the Reading Girls’ High School in 1865, and in 1871 taught the French and German languages there.

George Bissinger, his father, was a native of Germany, and after his emigration located at Baltimore, Md., about 1855, and there followed the teaching of music until his decease, in 1866.

LLEWELLYN U. WELLS, who is in the grocery business at Reading, was born near West Chester, Pa., Oct. 16, 1848, son of Isaac and Sidney (Hoopes) Wells.

Isaac Wells was born Jan. 9, 1820, in Chester county, and received his education in the schools of that locality. When a young man he learned the carpenter’s trade, making a specialty of stair building, becoming an expert in his occupation for a number of years throughout the eastern section of the state. During his residence in Williamsport, Mr. Wells’ health failed him, and he engaged in farming for a short time, and in 1858 located in Reading. Two years later he went to Northumberland county, and subsequently settled for five years in Elizabethtown, Lebanon county, and for the remaining sixty-eight years, the mother of four children: Olivia W.; Llewellyn U.; Anna, m. to William Phillips, deceased; and John Westley, who died in infancy. The family were members of the M. E. Church. In politics Mr. Wells was a Republican.

Llewellyn U. Wells was educated in the schools of Berks, Lebanon and Lancaster counties, and when a young man was taught the trade of carpenter, which was the trade of his father, and he followed this occupation for several years. In 1879 he settled permanently in Reading, and expected his attention to business pursuits, engaging in business at the corner of Minor and Laurel streets, where he remained one and a half years. At the end of that time he located at the corner of Sixth and Laurel streets, and he was located until he sold out.

Here Mr. Wells was married, Sept. 9, 1875, to Miss Ella Fichthorn, daughter of William Fichthor, and to this union three children have been born: Irma, a teacher in the Reading public schools; Aletha, who died aged nine years; and Clarence, employed at the Dun Mercantile Agency, Reading. Mr. Wells is a member of Vigilance Lodge No. 269, I. O. O. F., and of Reading Encampment. In his political views he is a Republican. Mr. Wells and his family are connected with the St. Peter’s M. E. Church, of which he is now serving as steward.

AUGUSTUS B. HASSLER, proprietor of the “Germania Hotel,” at Ninth and Penn streets, Reading, is of German parentage, but is of American birth. His father, also named Augustus, left Germany for the United States in 1832, and settled in Reading where he died.

Augustus B. Hassler was born in Reading in 1854, and received his education in the public schools of that city. He was then employed as a bar clerk at the corner of Fifth and Penn streets, and later went out to the Washington Library Cafe, continuing there until 1881, when he bought out Harry Snyder, who had succeeded Major Ebner as proprietor of the place he first worked in, now known as the “Colonial Hotel.” He ran that hotel successfully for twelve years, and then retired from business. But he was soon eager for the business, and before long was once more in the hotel business, and in 1894 was running what was known as the "Klapperthal Pavilion" at Klapperthal. He remained there from 1894 until 1895, when he became manager of the Penn Hotel Company. He built and operated the "Queen Hotel," which occupies a building four-stories in height, 26x100 feet in dimensions. A portion of the structure is finished off as flats of a high class, while the rest is devoted to the hotel proper, which is one of the most up-to-date places in the city, and is very handsome in its appointments and furnishings. The entrance and office are located on the first floor, and the hotel, both interior and exterior, is finished throughout with the most up-to-date style of Italian tile flooring. Mr. Hassler gives his whole attention to the management of the place and being very popular his hotel ranks high.

Mrs. Hassler was a Miss Annie Kohler, and her marriage to Mr. Hassler occurred in 1878. They have had a large family of children, of whom four died young. The others are: Mr. Harry, Mrs. Rosa, Bertha, and Anthony. The family are members of the Catholic Church. Mr. Hassler is a member of several fraternal organizations, including the Knights of St. John, Columbus Commandery, Eagles, Reading Turn Verein, Bonifacius Society, Reading Liederkranz, Bavarian Society, Quaker Society, the Penn Family Circle, Mountain Spring Association, Rainbow Fire Company, Veteran Fireman's Association, and Encampment No. 43, Union Veteran Legion.

THOMAS C. BAUSHER, a plumber and gas, steam and hot water fitter of Reading, Pa., whose place of business is situated at No. 105 North Sixth street, was born April 12, 1873, in Norristown, Montgomery Co., Pennsylvania.

Mr. Bausher received his education in the schools of Montgomery, Berks and Bucks counties, and when a boy clerked in his native city in a cigar store. In 1899 he came to Reading and apprenticed himself to E. S. Summons, a plumber, and with him served his time for four years. He then engaged with Haage & Tommey, with whom he remained for about seven years, when he returned to the trade. In Mr. Summons' copy shop of Reading. In October, 1904, Mr. Bausher opened his present business at No. 105 North Sixth street, with a complete line of plumbing and steam and hot water heating supplies. Mr. Bausher is an expert in his business, and his trade has grown to such proportions that he has been compelled to hire from three to five men to assist him. Mr. Bausher is a member of the Master Plumbers Association and is secretary of the local at Reading; is connected with Friendship Fire Company, of which he was president from 1896 to 1897; is a member of the Knights of Malta and the F. O. S.; and is also identified with the Boy's Relief Association.

In 1898 Mr. Bausher was married to Sarah Spyker, and to this union there have been born four children: Earl F., Helen M., Florence, and Ralph (died in infancy). Mr. Bausher and his family are members of St. Paul's Reformed Church. The success which Mr. Bausher has gained is but the just due to an ambitious, honest man, who through his own enterprise and energy has worked his way to the top. He may be truly called a self-made man.

J. G. RHEIN, who is engaged in the paper hanging, painting and decorating business at No. 721 Walnut street, Reading, was born July 5, 1850, in Bernville, Berks county, son of Daniel Rhein, the latter a butcher and farmer of Bernville, who also engaged at the shoemaker's trade.

J. G. Rhein attended the public schools of his native town, and was engaged in the manufacture of paper hangings until he was twenty years old, when he learned the paper-hanging trade. Shortly afterward, engaged in this business, which he has continued to the present time, having offices at No. 721 Walnut street, and at No. 101 Walnut street. Mr. Rhein was married (first) to Katie Foust, daughter of Jesse Foust, of Bernville, and (second) to Mrs. Magdalene Koch, who was a member of the mother's family. The two unsuccessful marriages m., to Levi Boyer, of Reading; Edward, m. to Jennie Wiend, of Reading; Lizzie, m. to James Jacobs, of Reading; Florence, m. to Robert Richardson, typewriter at the Boys' high school, Reading; and Carrie, m. to William Rhode; and John, at home. Mr. Rhein's second marriage was to Mrs. Mary E. Heckman, widow of the late Henry N. Heckman, of Reading.

John N. Heckman was born in Pricetown, Berks Co., Pa., Aug. 7, 1847, son of Nicholas Heckman. He attended the public schools and the high school of Reading, and was then employed as a clerk with S. M. Hart, of Penn street. He later engaged in the flour and feed business on Walnut street, continuing therein for several years, when he engaged as a clerk for A. K. Brown, and continued in that gentleman's employ for about four years. Mr. Heckman was then employed by the Dives, Pomeroys & Stewart department store, having charge of the upholding department for several years, retiring, Feb. 7, 1902. Mr. Heckman was a member of the Lutheran Church, and was buried at the Charles Evans cemetery. In politics he was a Democrat. He was a member of St. John's Lodge of Masons, and the Knights of Pythias.

Mrs. Mary E. Rhein was the daughter of John G. and Amelia (Sender) Kuder, the former of whom was born in Lehigh county, near Allentown, and came to Reading when a boy. Learning the cabinet making trade, Mr. Kuder followed that occupation all of his life, and died in Reading aged fifty years, his wife surviving him and attaining the age of eighty-three years. Mrs. Rhein was the only child born to this couple.

WILLIAM KATZENMOYER, deceased, was an employee of the East Penn car shops for many years. He was born at Reading, March 30, 1844, son of William and Catherine (Schreiber) Katzenmeyer.

Ludwig Katzenmeyer, grandfather of William, lived in Heidelberg township, but late in life moved to Reading, where he died advanced in years. He was buried at Alsace Church, where several generations of the family are interred. He was a farmer and owned much land in Heidelberg, near a point of Reading. He was married four times, surviving all his wives. Among his children were: John, Jacob, William, Polly, Fannie (who went West, was never heard from, and her estate is still unclaimed), Kate and Magdalene.

William Katzenmeyer, Sr., son of Ludwig and father of William, was a farmer in Berks county many years, then moved to Reading, where he died advanced in years, aged sixty-three years. His children were the following: Ludwig; Jacob, who died young; Catherine, m. to Henry Snyder; Susan and Rebecca, who both died young; and William. William, Sr., had one step-brother, Henry Beidler, and one step-sister, Elizabeth, m. to Peter Leise.

William Katzenmeyer attended the district schools near his home and then worked for some years on the farm. He came to the East Penn shops, and remained in continuous employ of the company for twenty-three years. His last work before retiring was the painting of engines. Judge Ermentrout then appointed him tipstaff at the court house, in which position he served several years. He died April 26, 1899, at the age of fifty-five years, one month and seven days, and was buried in the Charles Evans cemetery.

Mr. Katzenmeyer was married, May 30, 1868, to Mary E. Koch, daughter of John A. Katzenmeyer (Hopewell). They had sons as follows born to them: William H., connected with the Scott Works, at Reading; Irvin D. and George L., both working in the J. H. Sternbergh plant; and Lyman H., all industrious young men and all living at home with their mother at No. 505 North Eighth street, Reading.

JOHN H. HENNINGER, who conducts a grocery and market at No. 122 Hamilton street, Reading, was born in 1861, in Bethel township, Berks county, son of Isaac and Malinda (Stoop) Henninger, the former of whom followed agriculture throughout his life in Bethel township, where he died in the fifth of the Lutheran Church. The parents of John H. Henninger had three children, Cyrenus W., John H. and Thomas M.
John H. Henninger received his educational advantages in the schools of his native township, and his boyhood was spent much the same as other Pennsylvania farmer lads. He worked on his father's farm until fifteen years of age, when he hired out among the farmers in his vicinity, finally acquiring enough to rent a farm! This he cultivated for fourteen years, and then engaged in butternut business, which he pursued until 1838, and in this year came to Reading, establishing his business of business man. He carries a full line of meats and fancy and staple groceries, and from the start his business has been steadily growing. He is an honest and upright business man, and deserves the patronage of his community.

Mr. Henninger married, April 28, 1889, Susan Brown, of Brownsville, Pa., and to this union were born three children, four of whom are deceased, two sons and two daughters. Those surviving are Paul and Robert, the latter of whom married Annie Miller, of Fleetwood, Pa. In his religious belief Mr. Henninger is a Lutheran. In political matters he is a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party.

ISAAC MAURER, now living retired, was for a number of years extensively engaged in contracting. Mr. Maurer was born in Lower Heidelberg township, Berks Co., Pa., March 18, 1836, son of Daniel and Hannah (Eisenman) Maurer.

John Maurer, grandfather of Isaac, was one of the early residents of Lower Heidelberg township, and a representative farmer of that section of the county. He and his wife were the parents of these children: Daniel, Isaac, Jane, Julia, and four other children, whose names are not known.

Maurer was educated in the common schools of his native township, and he was reared to farm labor, after three years of which he apprenticed himself to the carpenter's trade and this he followed for several years. He next engaged in millwrighting, and he followed this trade for a time, being employed in the old Deitzer grist mill. Later he engaged in contracting and building to a considerable extent, and many evidences of his skill as a builder may be found in this vicinity, including his own handsome, modern residence, which is a model of perfection and will stand as a monument to his memory.

Mr. Maurer married Anna Texter, and to this union these children were born: Hannah, Abbe, Daniel (deceased), Valeria, Emma, Ella (deceased), Mamie, Gertrude, Alice, Annie (deceased) and Harry. In politics Mr. Maurer is independent, voting rather for the man than the party. Honorable in all of his dealings Mr. Maurer is considered an ideal citizen, and a worthy representative of the community in which he resides.

ISAAC MERTZ, who at the time of his death, Sept. 18, 1902, was living retired in Fleetwood borough, Berks county, was for a number of years engaged in farming in Ruscombmanor township, where he was born Feb. 12, 1836. Mr. Mertz was educated in his native township, and was reared to agricultural pursuits on his father's farm, continuing at this occupation until his retirement, when he removed to Fleetwood borough. He was connected with the Reformed Church.

Mr. Mertz married Anna Texter, and to this union these children were born: Reuben; Jonathan M. Ludema Leibinger; Eli m. Hattie Merkel; Maria m. William Schlegel; John Mertz and Anna died in infancy; and Clara (first) Peter Berg (who died in 1892) and (second) Alfred Bauscher.

The father of Isaac Mertz was Abraham Mertz, also of Ruscombmanor township, where he was born 1791, and reared to farming. He died in 1883. Abraham Mertz m. Eva Hoch, and to them were born seven children, as follows: John m. (first) Anna Warener and (second) Sarah Taylor; Susan m. John Merkel; Daniel m. Sarah Kocher; Amos m. Sallie Yoder; Isaac m. Florenda Yoder; Mary m. Jacob Van Buskirk; and Abraham m. Susannah Hoch, a daughter of Gen. William Hoch.

DANIEL S. RITTER, who for many years was engaged in various business enterprises in Reading, Pa., passed away at his home in that city, Feb. 7, 1907, after a long and eventful life. He was born in Exeter township, Berks county, in 1817, son of the late David S. Ritter, Sr.

David S. Ritter, Sr., was born in Alsace township, Berks county, Feb. 9, 1776, and died June 15, 1853, having spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits. He married, Dec. 24, 1798, Susan Snyder, born July 28, 1799, who died Sept. 3, 1875, and they became the parents of these children: Benjamin S., born in 1811, died in April, 1890; Esther, born April 13, 1814, died Dec. 9, 1898; an infant, born June 6, 1816; died June 21, 1816; Daniel S.; Reuben, born Dec. 25, 1819, died in 1826; Louisa, born Feb. 5, 1820, died Feb. 2, 1845; and five other children. He died Dec. 18, 1845, and is buried in the Mertz family cemetery.

In 1835, Daniel S. Ritter connected himself with his brother, and together they engaged in the manufacture of stove pipe, and also in the business of furnishing, which occupied them until 1860, and the firm of D. & J. S. Ritter was well known in Berks county. Mr. Ritter then located on the old homestead in Exeter township, but after six months returned to Reading, locating on Penn street, above Seventh, where he spent a period of fifteen years, during this time being employed at the Philadelphia & Reading shops in building freight and passenger cars. He was also employed on the North Broad street line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which line was for many years owned by Henry Seifert, being there a period of twenty years, and for a time worked at the Scott Foundry as boss repairer. He engaged in the manufacture of brick for a few years. Mr. Ritter's last employment was with the Philadelphia & Reading Company, and he resigned from their employ about six years before his death.

In politics Ritter was a lifelong Democrat, and in 1870-72 served his ward, the Ninth, as a member of the council. He was a member of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, Mr. Ritter was connected fraternaly with Germania Lodge No. 105, I. O. O. F. In his death Reading lost one of its good business men and representative citizens. He was broad and liberal-minded in his views, and his kindly, genial manner won him many friends.

On Sept. 20, 1846, Mr. Ritter married Rebecca Glase, daughter of Peter and Mary (Weisner) Glase. She was born in Alsace township in 1825 and died Jan. 5, 1907. The children born to them were: Robert, born Jan. 3, 1850, died Jan. 22, 1855; Lucy A., born April 1, 1852, died June 20, 1853; James E., born July 12, 1859, died Nov. 11, 1861; Mary J., born Sept. 14, 1862, is the only survivor of the family; and George H., born Sept. 24, 1864, died April 13, 1872.

JOEL W. D. WHITMAN, one of the old and honored residents of Reading, Pa., who has been engaged in painting in the city for over forty years, was born Dec. 17, 1853, in Montgomery county, son of George and Catharine (Deliger) Whitman.
HISTORY OF BERKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

George Whitman was a weaver by trade and followed that occupation in Montgomery county, where he died at the age of forty-seven years. His first wife died at the age of thirty-five years, and he married (second) a Miss Culp, by whom he had these children: Jesse; Lydia Ann, and Lucy A. (m. to John Schol). To George Whitman and his first wife were born these children: Sarah, Maria, Kittie, Etta, Fayette, David, Ephraim, Joel W., D. all being deceased except Ephraim, who resides at Pottstown, Pa., and Joel W. D.

Joel W. D. Whitman attended the schools of Montgomery county, and when a young man learned the cabinet-maker's trade, which, however, he followed but a short time. He next took up painting as an occupation, and April 3, 1866, came to Reading, where he has made his home to the present time. He still resides at his first location, No. 322 North Ninth street, and is one of the oldest men of the district. In 1860 Mr. Whitman married Lucy Ann Sassaman, born July 2, 1841, daughter of Christina C. and Maria B. Sassaman, and to this union there were born children as follows: Hemmer died when nine months old; Luther C. S., who died Jan. 5, 1894, m. Mary M. Smith, and had one child, Helen M. S., who lives with her grandfather; Katie m. Edward Moyer of Reading; Ella S. m. Oct. 28, 1873, aged six years, seven months; Annie E. m. Dec. 24, 1870, aged six months; and Lucy M. m. in 1875, aged one year, ten days.

Mrs. Whitman has been a teacher in the Sunday-school since her sixteenth year, and since 1878 has had charge of the primary class of St. Luke's Lutheran Church. Mr. Whitman also has been a church member, and has for many years been a teacher in the Sunday-school. He is fraternally connected with the Knights of Pythias No. 65, while in political matters he is a Republican.

JOHN S. HARTMAN, a leading business man of Reading, Pa., well and favorably known in the building and contracting line, was born May 11, 1861, in Muhlenberg township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Absalom and Caroline (Felix) Hartman, grandson of Samuel and Elizabeth (Wrightmeyer) Hartman, and great-grandson of Valentine Hartman.

Valentine Hartman was born in Alsace township, near Spies's Church, and he subsequently owned a farm in that vicinity, where both he and his wife died. They were worthy members of the Reformed Church. In political views he was first a Whig but afterward was inclined to the Republican party. The children of Valentine Hartman and wife were: Samuel, William, Abraham, and Kate (m. Valentine Ritter).

Samuel Hartman learned the wheelwright's and millwright's trades, and followed same for many years. He also operated a small farm. His death took place at the age of eighty-two years, and that of his wife, Elizabeth Wrightmeyer, when she was aged eighty-one years. They had ten children, all of whom grew to maturity, and married, their names appearing as follows: Lewis, Gideon. Absalom (born April 28, 1837), Augustus, Samuel, Israel, Christy (of Reading), Elizabeth (m. John Gechter), Ephraim (m. Mary Snyder), and Valentine. In politics he was first a Whig, but later became identified with the Republican party.

Absalom Hartman attended school in Alsace township and then learned the wheelwright's trade with John Feiss, which he followed for several years, and then engaged for several more years in a hotel business at Reading. Prior to this he contracted a store at the corner of Centre avenue and Exeter streets. During the Civil war he was employed by the U. S. Government as a wheelwright, and was first stationed at Martinsburg and later at Harper's Ferry, Va. In 1857 Mr. Hartman entered the Philadelphia & Reading Railway, and was first located at No. 204 Chestnut street, where he resided for a number of years. He died May 3, 1907.

In 1855, Mr. Hartman was married to Caroline Felix, daughter of Solomon and Catherine (Fisher) Felix, and they have had children, as follows: Emma E., born July 13, 1856, died aged five years; Catherine R., born Oct. 28, 1857, is deceased; Amelia, born July 4, 1859, m. F. F. Seidel; John S.; Lillie E., deceased, born Jan. 26, 1864, m. John Forney; Howard L., born in 1866, died in infancy; Annie, born March 21, 1867, m. John Barto; Caroline E., born in 1870, died aged three months; Caroline (2), born Sept. 9, 1871, m. Dr. Abraham Warner; William A., born July 5, 1875, a steel worker, m. Sallie Schweizer; Solomon F., born July 26, 1878, m. Carrie Steiff; Edwin M., a cigar manufacturer, born May 30, 1881, m. Gertrude M. Young.

The father of Mrs. Hartman, Solomon Felix, served in the Mexican war. He was born at Reading and was engaged in various lines of business in this city at different times. He was a shoemaker and a butcher. He acquired a good estate and was a well-known citizen. His children were the following: Lucetta m. Adam Shadler; Catherine m. William Moyer; Emma m. Lewis Reigel; and Caroline m. Mr. Hartman. Mr. Hartman is a Republican in politics. Both he and his wife belong to the Reformed Church. Formerly he was connected with the F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F.

John S. Hartman attended school both in his native township and in the Reading schools. He then learned the molding trade with the Reading Hardware company, and he worked as a molder for some years and then learned to make wheelwright's trade under his father, which he followed for two years. He was next employed by the Philadelphia & Reading company, as a carpenter, and remained with this organization for five years, working in different departments. Mr. Hartman then engaged in carpenter work and bridge building, following the same for ten years, after which he engaged with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, as a carpenter, in a very short time being appointed foreman of his division. After a faithful service with this company which extended over fourteen and one-half years, Mr. Hartman remained one year with the Reading Shoe Works. In 1894 he was engaged in general contracting of building business and has met with well deserved success, his experience being long and thorough.

Mr. Hartman was married to Nellie Hollenbach, daughter of William and Susan (Haines) Hollenbach, and they have two children, Harrison J. and Elizabeth. The former was a graduate in 1906 in the Reading high school and is now taking a collegiate course. The latter, born Sept. 10, 1891, is a high school pupil. The family home of Mr. Hartman is situated at No. 204 Douglass street. In politics he is a Republican. He belongs to Camp No. 61, F. O. S. of A.

WILLIAM R. BUCKS, of Reading, now living retired in his comfortable home at No, 1135 North Eleventh street, was born on the old Bucks homestead near Bernville, in Bern, now Penn, township, Berks county, Jan. 10, 1834.

John Bucks emigrated to America from Berne, Switzerland. He had been engaged in the dairy business in his native land, where the mountains and meadows in the valleys supplied the people with good pasture and water. On coming to America Mr. Bucks began prospecting for a farm and an ideal location, finding it at what is now Scull's Hill, where he commenced with an arable growth of trees and shrubbery, the valleys fertile, and where many of his countrymen had already located. He selected a tract of four hundred acres, the hills covered with wood and shrubbery, and two meadows with fine streams of water running the entire length. Between these meadows, on a rise of land among the brushings and commenced clearing the land for cultivation. There is an old record that shows that in the year 1759, when the first tax was levied in Bern township, John Bucks paid a tax of nine pounds, a considerable amount in those days.

Forney R., grandfather of William B., was born on the homestead in 1773, and later on became the owner of it. He was a farmer and with the exception of the last years, passed all his life in his native locality. He married Elizabeth Riegel, born in 1780, and they had four, children: John; Catharine m. Daniel Dundore; Elizabeth m. Isaac Dundore, and Mary m. Jacob Rieser. They both died in Marion township, and were buried in the Tulpehocken cemetery, he in 1845, aged sixty-six years, and she in 1851, aged seventy years.

John Bucks, son of John and father of William R., came into possession of the old homestead, and was engaged in its cultivation until 1840, when he sold it and purchased the Jacob Reed farm of 125 acres in Marion township, one-half mile from Schuylkill river. He removed there, carrying on farming very successfully for many years. In 1853 he tore down the old stone mansion built a century before with strong, thick walls. It was provided with a dark room on the second floor, at the stairhead of the stairs, where shelter could be found against the Indians, then numerous in that section. On the site of this old house he erected a large brick dwelling. In 1864 Mr. Bucks' son Aaron took charge of the farming, and Mr. Bucks lived with him in retirement until his death in 1889, in his eighty-second year. He married Catharine Rieser, born April 10, 1810, died 1884. They were buried in the cemetery adjoining their farm, church of which they were devoted members. Their children were: William R.; Mary R. m. Dr. George Crum, deceased; Aaron R., who first engaged in the coal business, died in 1894; Emma R. m. Jacob Miller, deceased; John R. resides in Myerstown; Sarah E. m. Henry Krum, deceased; Frank S. resides in Stouchsburg; and Allen died in Reading in 1900.

William R. Bucks attended Stouchsburg Academy during the winter months, and assisted his father on the farm during the remainder of the year. In 1859 he taught one term of school in Tulpehocken township—the year before the county had a superintendent of public instruction. He then attended a boarding school at the Trappe, in Montgomery county, for a term, and taught the following year in Marion township. He next taught five terms in Johnstown, Pa., in 1865. In 1866 he was employed in the township where he taught eight terms, one at Epler and seven at White Oak Hill (so named because of the many stately trees of that species adorning a hillside nearby). In 1867 Mr. Bucks turned his attention to a feed, grain and grocery business along the Schuylkill canal, below Leesport, where he was located for thirteen years. He also cultivated a small farm, which he owned, and his place was one of the busiest to be found along the canal. In 1906 he retired and went to Reading, purchasing his present property.

On Oct. 5, 1865, Mr. Bucks married Amelia Z. Herbine, daughter of William and Catharine (Zacharias) Herbine, of Bern township. She was a consistent member of Epler's Church, and later of Trinity Reformed Church, at Leesport. She died Dec. 18, 1904, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery, Reading. Two children were born of this union: John W., who resides in the grocery business, with Emma Irene Fritz, and before the corner of Twelfth and Green streets, Reading; and Deborah A., who resides with her father, taught school for a number of terms, and later gave private lessons in elocution. Mr. Bucks was a member of Trinity Reformed Church, East Prospect, and served that church as deacon and elder. After retiring in Reading, he transferred his membership to St. Thomas Reformed Church, this city. In politics he is a Democrat, as were both his father and grandfather. He served eighteen years as school director, ten of which he was secretary of the board, and at different times was elected principal. He was a member of the school board. Mr. Bucks, together with James Rieser and Jeremiah Parvin, owns a large tract of woodland in Bern township. It is on the highest point in 'the township, and bears the name of Seidel's Hill. The Buckses as a family have always been people of substance and respectability.

JARIUS WEISSER ZIEGLER, who died May 13, 1909, was one of Reading's well-to-do and well-known citizens, who with his son was engaged in the wall-paper business at No. 154 North Ninth street, under the firm name of J. & B. W. Ziegler. He was a native of Pottsville, Pa., where he was born July 8, 1856, son of Capt. Elijah Ziegler.

Capt. Elijah Ziegler was born near Fleetwood, Berks Co., Pa., and when a young man went to Schuylkill county, locating at Tamaqua, where he learned the carpenter's trade. He was here married to Priscilla Turner, daughter of Abraham Turner, and after their union purchased a farm in the township of Schuylkill, in that county, but six years later returned to Pottsville and served the county as constable for three years when he again removed to his farm. For some years prior to his death he was engaged in bridge contracting and in the little business. He died in 1890, at the age of sixty-two years. During his entire life he was a staunch Democrat, and he was one of his community's most active and influential men. His children were as follows: Emma, Elmina, Loretta, Florenda, Clara, Jarius W. and Erasmus.

Weiser Ziegler was educated in the public schools of Schuylkill county, and continued in his father's employ until coming to Reading in 1885, when he became a clerk. Later he engaged in business for himself, following painting and paper-hanging for some time, and in 1890 opened his wall paper store. He and his son, in partnership, had about ten men in their employ and their business grew to large proportions. They were jobbers in water colors, art novelties, etc., and one of their specialities was the 16 x 20 frame.

In 1888 Mr. Ziegler was married to Miss Henrietta Gerber, daughter of Amos Gerber, of Reading, and one brother, John, is still residing at home. Mr. Ziegler was born March 18, 1859. He married Elsie M. Lessig, daughter of George D. Lessig, of Reading, and they have one son, Howard. In politics Mr. Ziegler was a Democrat, and he and his family were members of the Reformed Church. Fragmently he was connected with Lodge No. 549, F. & A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection; Philadelphia Consistory; and Rahaj Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

FREDERICK W. CRANSTON, Deputy Internal Revenue Collector of the First District of Pennsylvania, and a well-known and highly esteemed citizen of Reading, was born Sept. 29, 1856, in Philadelphia, Pa., son of William and Fannie (Curtis) Cranston.

William Cranston was born June 9, 1822, in Glasgow, Scotland, and in that country and England learned the trade of machinist. He came to America in 1845, locating at New York City, whence he removed to Reading some time later. On reaching the latter city he secured employment in the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, under Superintendent Missimer, but later he connected himself with the Scott Works, where he manufactured sugar-making machinery. He was later engaged in contracting for the U.S. government in Cuba to erect machinery, and while there became superintendent of a sugar plant. On his return to the United States, he went to Philadelphia, where he worked in the Baldwin Locomotive Works until his retirement. Mr. Cranston married Miss Fannie Curtis, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who died at the age of forty-four years, and of them there were born the following children: Mary m. George Roemmele, a chemist with Powers & Weightman; Frances m. George W. Phillipi; Edwin, a machinist, died at the age of twenty-two years; Alfred W., is a contracting machinist of Philadelphia; and William Mac, a machinist. In religious belief William Cranston adhered to the faith of the Presbyterian Church, while his wife a Quakerist. He is one of the oldest Odd Fellows in Pennsylvania, since he joined the order sixty-five years ago, and is also connected with the Knights of Pythias.
Frederick W. Cranston was graduated from the public schools of Philadelphia when nineteen years of age, and immediately thereafter came to Reading and entered the shop of the reading Pennsylvania Railway. He remained there seven years. He was also in the employ of Abraham T. Phillippi, in the plumbing, steam fitting and metal working business, and then became associated with the Carpenter Steel Works, where he had charge of the steam fitting department. On Dec. 1, 1898, he was appointed Deputy United States Revenue Collector for the Fifth District. He was President McKees administration, and since that time the business in the cigar trade has been increased from 74,000,000 to 144-000,000. Mr. Cranston having the largest division to cover of any deputy in the State. He has proved himself to be an efficient, faithful official, filling the duties of his position to the satisfaction of all concerned.

In 1879 Mr. Cranston was married to Miss Emma C. Fox, daughter of John Fox, a veteran of the Civil war, and to this union there have been born eleven children, seven of whom survive: Robert D., who is employed at the League Island Navy Yard, m. Anna Clingaman, and has children Robert D., Jr., and Dolly; Mary R. m. Peter R. Weidmann, and has one child, Carrie; Frederick W., Jr., a street car conductor, m. Hannah Barlett, and has one son, Frederick W. (3); Edwin B., is a cigar maker; William Mac is at Little Falls, N. Y.; John F.; and Charles H., is at school. Mrs. Cranston died in April, 1907, leaving as her children, six sons and two daughters: T. Bern, Leighton, county, Pa., the daughter of farming people near Tupton, Berks Co., Pennsylvania.

Mr. Cranston is a member of Camp No. 29 and Nathan Hale Commandery, P. O. S. of A., and served as Senior Vice Commander of United States for one year (1897).

SIMPLECIUS REBER, residing at No. 19 South second street, Reading, is descended from a family identified with Berks county since 1785, when the paternal grandfather, Johannes, settled there.

Johannes Reber came to America from his native Germany when a boy of only twelve years, and part of his education was acquired in this country. From his very arrival he lived in Bern township, and became one of the influential farmers of that region. He owned very valuable land there and also operated a mill for many years. He married Magdaline Roemhach, and purchased the farm on which he lived. Their children were: Polly, Rebecca, Sarah, James, and Bessie, the last named of whom married a Mr. Ahmeds. So far as known, the family were members of the Reformed Church. Mrs. Reber died in Reading, and her husband died in 1847, aged seventy-six. He was a Democrat in his politics.

Joseph Reber, father of Simplecius, was born in 1802, at the old Reber homestead, and remained there nearly all of his life. He carried on the farm and operated the old Reber Mill, situated on the Tulpehocken, but about 1874 he moved on to a small farm which he had bought some time previously, and there passed the last six years of his life, dying in 1880. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Minnich, passed away five years before him, at the age of seventy-two. They were the parents of ten children: Elias, to whom the father gave over the operation of the farm and mill; Maria, m. to Joshua Eyre; of whom: Polly, m. to Henry Reber; Elizabeth, m. to Charles Gring; Harrison; Sarah, m. to James Adams; Priscilla, m. to William Reeser; Henry; Rebecca, m. to Jacob Richenbach; and Simplecius. Most of the family belonged to the Reformed Church. Joseph Reber was a Democrat like his father.

Simplecius Reber was born on the homestead in Bern township, March 9, 1838, and received his earlier education in the public schools of that section. Later he attended school in Reading. He remained at home helping in the work on the farm until he was thirty-three years old, when he came to Reading and took a position with the Bright Hardware Company. After learning the details of the business with this company, he engaged with the Bright Hardware Company and remained with them fourteen years. In 1901 he left that firm and accepted a position with James A. Schoffer, as engineer in the Lehigh Valley and Reading Railroad, remaining there three years.

On Sept. 26, 1857, Mr. Reber married Sarah A., daughter of Isaac Herben. Their four children are: Ellen, m. to Charles Tobias; Emma, m. to Storm Miller; James; and Sarah A. The family belong to the Second Reformed Church, while in politics Mr. Reber is a Democrat. Their home is at No. 19 South Second street, Reading.

JOHN COLLER HEPLER, late a highly esteemed citizen of Reading, Pa., was superintendent of the Charles Evans cemetery from 1860 until his death, during which time he made this burial ground one of the most beautiful spots in Berks county. Mr. Hepler was born Feb. 17, 1859, in Reading, son of John and Elizabeth (Coller) Hepler, and died Sept. 26, 1907.

The ancestors of this family, who came from Wales, were among the early settlers of Philadelphia. William Hepler, grandfather of John C., located there in 1793, where the remainder of his life was spent, and where, during the yellow fever epidemic, he was engaged in hauling the bodies of the victims to the place of interment. In religious matters he adhered to the faith of the Reformed congregation, and in politics he upheld the principles of the Whig party. His children were: John; Henry George, who married Angelia Gillmor, a cigar maker; and Elizabeth, m. to Dr. William Palm.

John Hepler, son of William, was born Dec. 26, 1800, in Philadelphia, and when fifteen years of age came to Reading and apprenticed himself to the house carpenter's trade for four years and six months. This occupation he followed all of his life and at the time of his death in Reading Dec. 22, 1862, he was a very prosperous man. He was a Republican in political matters, and until 1842 was a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, in this year becoming one of the organizers of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church. Mr. Hepler m. Elizabeth Coller, daughter of John and Catharine (Rickley) Coller. To Mr. and Mrs. Hepler were born: William P., a soldier in the Mexican war, going out as a private in the Ringgold Battery, United States Regulars, and serving under Zachary Taylor until his death of a fever at Saltillo in 1847; John C. and Henry A., and Catharine A., twins, the former of whom died in childhood; and Charles, the latter of whom was married to Mrs. Reeser, widow of Capt. Joseph G. Holmes, and is now also deceased.

John C. Hepler's education was limited to a few months at a pay school during the winter term, and at the age of fourteen and one-half years he became an apprentice to the trade of a tailor under his uncle the late William Hepler, who was serving in the Mexican war and then went to Philadelphia, where he worked for six months and learned cutting. Returning to Reading he entered the clothing and tailoring business for himself, and carried it on successfully until 1860, when failing health compelled him to give up this work. For some time he was employed on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, and then he removed to a small farm in the Hockley Outlots, where he continued until 1880, when he was appointed superintendent of the Charles Evans Cemetery at Reading, taking up the duties of that office on April 1st of that year. This cemetery, which was incorporated in 1846, includes a tract of 118 acres, and under Mr. Hepler's careful management many improvements were made. He performed the duties of his position in a most efficient manner, and inaugurated a system of records for burials of persons who were not lot owners, which is one of the most complete in the United States, it records as follows: The name, number of permit, date of burial, age of deceased, name of lot owner upon which deceased is buried, and number and section of cemetery in which such lot is located. In this Mr. Hepler was ably assisted by his son, John A., who has a thorough knowledge of all the records. During his administration nearly 10,000 burials were recorded.

Mr. Hepler also conducted a greenhouse on the corner of Schuykill avenue and Greenwich street, which is in a prosperous condition. He was a director of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and held an official position in the "Bible-Board of Friends Children."

On Sept. 18, 1854, Mr. Kerper married to Hermelinda Abbott, daughter of William Abbott, a native of England who came to Reading in 1842, and who was a forty-niner of the gold fields of California. Mr. Abbott was a taxidermist, and was employed by the Smithsonian Institution to secure specimens. Mr. and Mrs. Hepler were the parents of these children, all of whom, together with the widow's mother, survive: Mary Meta, at home; George H., a small carrier, who married Margaret S. Lease, of New Oxford, Pa.; and John A., married Katharine E. Bean, of Spring City, Pa., and has two children, J. Merrill and Ernie K.,

In politics Mr. Hepler was a Republican, and represented the Fourth Ward now the Fourteenth, in the common council from 1882 to 1886. He was a life-long member of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, taking an active part in the building of the old church at the corner of Franklin and Pearl streets in 1842, and as chairman of the building committee for the new church at Fifth and Elm streets in 1889. It was greatly through his efforts that the mortgage on the new church was canceled, having the honor and pleasure of burning the mortgage in the presence of the congregation. If Mr. Hepler acknowledged a fad it was the collecting of buttons, and he had, perhaps, the largest collection of this kind in the country, amounting to about 78,000. Among these are buttons of every description, some of the most interesting relics of the battlefields in various parts of the world. He also had a collection of 500 varieties of wood, gathered from all parts of the world, and in addition thereto collected many curios of various descriptions.

WILLIAM F. KERPBR, a lifelong resident of Reading, now living retired, was born in that city May 24, 1842, son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Boyler) Kerper. He is a member of the fifth generation of his family in this country, and of the fourth generation settled in Berks county. Abraham Kerper, the great-great-grandfather of William F. Kerper, came from Germany to America in 1735, locating in Germantown, Pa., where he spent the balance of his life. His son, Valentine Kerper, removed from Germantown to Reading in 1750, while yet a young man, becoming the first postmaster in the city, and at the time of his death was a large property holder there. He was an active member of the Reformed Church. Daniel Kerper, his son, and grandfather of William F., was one of the early hotel-keepers of Berks county, conducting a hostelry nearly all of his life. During his younger days he took an active part in politics, and was sheriff of the county for two terms. He was united in marriage with Rosina Stultz, whose father conducted a blacksmith shop at Eighth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, during the Revolutionary war, and to them were born the following children: Abraham, father of William F.; Margaret, m. to William Silvis; Catherine, m. to Joshua Keeley; Charles; Daniel; John, William, and Caroline.

Abraham Kerper was born in the borough of Reading Aug. 12, 1796, at the old Kerper homestead at the corner of 4th and Walnut streets, and at an early age became an apprentice to the tanner's trade, which he followed successfully the remainder of his life, becoming very prosperous. He was considered wealthy at the time of his death, in 1872. In political matters he was a Democrat, and he served two terms as director of the poor. He was an adherent of the principles of the German Reformers, and married Maria Boyer, who was born in 1804 and died in 1879, and twelve children were born to this union: Rosa, who died in infancy; Daniel, deceased; Mary, m. to James H. Parker, now deceased; Henry, a retired tailor of Reading; Rosanna, who died in infancy; Elizabeth, who died in early childhood; Ellen, m. to Samuel Metzer, deceased, of Reading, and mother of William Kerper Stevens, a prominent attorney-at-law of Reading; James R.; George B., of Cincinnati, Ohio; William F.; Kate, m. to Charles Ringle, both being deceased; and Charles A., who died in the age of 74. Mr. Kerper was a stanch Republican, and was an active member of the Reading Pipe Mill, where he continued until 1904, in which year he was appointed to the position of janitor at the county court house, his term expiring in 1906. Mr. Kerper is now living retired, his home being at No. 409 South Fourth street.

In 1880 Mr. Kerper married Jeanetta Foreman, daughter of John Foreman, of Sinking Spring, and four children were born to this union: Charles R., who is a hatter; John, deceased; Carrie M., and Walter W. Mr. Kerper is a stanch Republican. Both he and his wife attend the Reformed Church. For a period of forty-five years Mr. Kerper was a member of the Junior Fire Company, and he is now identified with the Reading Veteran Fire Association.

JOHN E. BUBB. In the death of Mr. Bubp not alone his family but the whole community suffered a distinct loss. He was an integral part of the city's life in several different fields, and for this he endeared him to numbers of his less fortunate fellow-townsmen. He was born in 1837 in Lower Amity township, Berks county, son of Jacob Bubp. Jacob Bubp was a well-known butcher, and farmer of Brumfieldsville, Lower Amity township. He married Miss Lydia Engle, and they became the parents of two sons; William H., a successful horse-dealer, who died in Reading in 1903; and John E. The father and mother both died at their home in Lower Amity.

John E. Bubp spent his boyhood days upon the farm, but his natural bent towards business was early apparent, and he left home when a mere boy to clerk in a country store. As this did not furnish sufficient scope for his energies, he soon left and when only about seventeen years old came to Reading. Although a mere stripling, his business sagacity was early recognized and he soon really entered upon his career by forming the firm of Levan & Bubp, conducting a general merchandise business at No. 747 Penn street, where the business is now located. They were very successful but in 1867 the new firm of Levan & Metzer was formed to do a wholesale crotckery business at No. 441 Penn street. After one year however, Mr. Bubp withdrew and formed a new firm with W. R. Himnert, and the firm of Hinnerts Hinnert, Bubp & Himnert, conducted a thriving business at No. 747 Penn street, until 1891, when the senior partner retired leaving Mr. Bubp alone in its management. His foresight and sagacity never failed him, and at the time of his death, Feb. 23, 1899, he left a large estate, accumulated by his own efforts. The business has since been continued by his sons, and the firm is now known as John E. Bubp's Sons.

Probably no man in the community stood higher in the honesty and integrity of his dealings than Mr. Bubp and his sudden demise was universally regretted. Progressive in his methods he was the first to introduce delivery wagons in the grocery business into Reading. He was vice-president of the Retail Grocers' Association, and a member of the Board of Trade, as well as an honorary member of the Friendship Fire Company. During the Rebellion he enlisted in Company C, 4th Pa. V. I., under Capt. M. G. Rhoads, and was with them until mustered out with distinction. In politics he was a Republican, but never held office. At the time of his death he was a trustee of the Second Reformed Church and was a member of the consistory for some thirty years. His loss was deeply felt in the church as it was also in the Y. M. C. A., in which he was a member and a generous contributor.
In 1868 John E. Bub married Miss Clara Getz, who was a member of one of the very early families in Berks county, and daughter of Aaron and Mary (Hushower) Getz. Aaron Getz was a blacksmith by trade, and lived in Muhlenberg township. For a number of years he lived retired, passing from this world at the age of sixty-seven years. His wife died aged seventy-three. There were five children besides Mrs. Bub, namely: Sarah, Mrs. Kuterman; Amanda, Mrs. Alvin Boyer; Emma; Aaron, Jr.; and Harry, a United States Express agent at Attenboro, where he died Nov., 1905. Mrs. Bub survives her husband and still lives in the family residence on North Ninth street. To her and Mr. Bub were born four children, as follows: Harry G., who for a number of years was on the reportorial staff of the Reading Telegram, but who is now carrying on a drug business; Bert G., who is now carrying on his father's business; Charles E.; and Nora May, the wife of Howard C. Phillips, teller in the Schuykill Valley Bank at Reading.

The last illness of John E. Bub which ended in his death Feb. 3, 1899, was the result of an injury in falling. Eight days previously he fell while going into the cellar and struck with great force. While his injuries compelled him to keep in the house there were no indications of serious trouble till the morning of February 21st, when he was taken violently ill and finally passed to his reward. Thus at the age of sixty-two years passed from the scene of his earthly activities a man whose deeds reflected only credit on his memory, and whose life may well serve as an example to those following him.

WILLIAM H. LUDEN, prosperous manufacturing confectioner since 1879, with a national reputation in his branch of business, was born at Reading March 5, 1859, and received his education in the local schools. In 1879, before he was of age he began manufacturing candy in limited quantities and disposed of it successfully, which encouraged him to continue. This modest start in business life was made at No. 37 North Fifth street, where he was brought up and where his father had carried on the jewelry business. He continued there ten years, gradually increasing his production of various confections, and then moved into larger quarters which he had secured at the northeast corner of Sixth and Washington streets, and equipped with improvements to meet the demands of his trade. He occupied the entire building (four stories), employed nearly one hundred and fifty hands, and worked up a car-load of sugar weekly, and by this time his trade had come to reach out into the Eastern, Middle and Southern States. By the year 1900 his trade was developed to still greater proportions, so that he was again obliged to secure larger quarters, and he accordingly purchased a property on North Eighth street, beyond Walnut, with a siding extended from the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, where he erected a substantial and commodious four-story building (120 feet front and 110 feet deep) and supplied it with all the necessary improvements and appurtenances for his business and employees. The building was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies in June of that year, and the enterprising proprietor was given many earnest congratulations. And here, too, his business is carried on and expanded. If the quantities which he produces are not yet fully recognized, it is because no one has had an opportunity to become familiar with them. He is one of the leading manufacturers of the country, and produces all kinds of confections, in large quantities, which are shipped to all parts of the United States. During the last several years, his establishment has made a specialty of "Luden's Menthol Cough Drops," which have become very popular throughout the country, the annual sales amounting to five million five-cent packages. From twenty to twenty-five tons of sugar are required daily in the manufacture of his various confections; and the siding from the Philadelphia & Reading railroad to his plant affords the necessary facilities for his enormous shipments, which shows its importance as a factor in the dispatch of his large and growing business.

Mr. Luden is recognized as one of the largest and most successful manufacturers of candy in the United States. During his career, from the beginning, he always treated his employees with kindness and respect, and as a natural consequence they have come to be as much devoted to his prosperity as he is to their comfort and welfare. For a number of years past he has given them an annual "outing," at different places, along some railroad, paying all the expenses himself, which evidences his generous spirit. The high degree of mutual respect and confidence which has been developed between him and his employees is truly admirable and worthy of imitation by other large manufacturers.

Mr. Luden has been a devoted and generous member of the "Church of Our Father" (Universalist) from his early manhood, and his straight-forward spirit has contributed a great deal toward the welfare of the congregation. He served as a trustee of the church for a number of years. In 1890, Mr. Luden assisted in organizing and establishing the Schuylkill Valley Bank of Reading and since then has served as one of its directors; and upon the decease of John Kissing, the president, in 1906, he was selected to officiate in his stead, which important position he has filled until the present time. In 1904 he purchased the "Reading Natatorium," on North Fifth street, which was immediately appreciated, and since then it has been patronized extensively. The basket-ball exhibitions there during the winter and spring seasons have been highly appreciated by large and enthusiastic audiences. Mr. Luden is prominently identified with the National Confectioners Association, the Wyomissing Club, the Berks Club, and the Reading Board of Trade.

In 1889 Mr. Luden married Annie Ritter, a daughter of William Snyder Ritter and Juliana Shearer, his wife, and they have eight children (four sons and four daughters): Harry Ritter, (m. Mrs. Frederick Beck); Howard B., (m. Mary Shearer); Frederick Shearer, Milford Dirk, Jeanette and Wilma. His wife and children have also taken great interest in the welfare of the Universalist Church. Mrs. Luden is a member of Berks Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, being a lineal descendant of John Christopher Shearer, who emigrated from Germany in 1769 and then settled at Reading, in Berks county, where he came to enlist in the Revolution, and subsequently filled the office of justice of the peace for nearly twenty years, dying in 1830, aged seventy-seven. She is also a lineal descendant of Francis Ritter, the progenitor of the Ritter family in Exeter township, who died in 1829 and left four sons—Daniel John, Jacob and Samuel—and four daughters, Daniel having been her grandfather.

Jacob Luden, the father of Mr. Luden, was born at Amsterdam, Holland, where he learned the trade of watchmaker and jeweler and followed that business until about 1850, when he emigrated to Pennsylvania and settled at Reading. In 1855 he established a store on North Fifth street (now Nos. 35-37) and carried on business as a jeweler successfully until his death in 1864, aged forty-two years. He was married to Sarah A. Musser, of Reamstown, Lancaster county, a descendant of one of the early families of that vicinity, and they had six children: Caroline (m. William L. Bailey); Edward Musser (m. Lizzie Etzel); William H.; Sallie A. (m. James B. Marsh); Jacob C. (m. Annie Benson); and one that died in infancy.

RICHARD G. BORKERT, of Reading, Pa., one of the well known contracting Borkert Brothers, and a leading business man, was born in that city, Sept. 1, 1840, son of Daniel Borkert, a complete sketch of whom will be found elsewhere.

Richard G. Borkert attended the Franklin street school, of the Third ward, until he was eighteen years old, and then learned the hatter’s trade, which he followed for about five years, after which he engaged with his father in the brick laying business. When his father died, Mr. Borkert engaged in the contracting business with his brothers, and under the firm name of Augustus Borkert & Bro., was in business with his brother, Augustus, until the latter’s death in December, 1868. Mr. Borkert resides at No. 936 Penn street. He married (first) Sarah Bink, who died in 1898. They had two children, both deceased. Mr. Borkert’s second marriage was to Elmora, widow of John Leininger, and one child has been born to this union: Richard, now attending high school. Mr. Borkert is a Democrat in politics, but has never taken an active part in party work. He is a Lutheran in religious belief. Mr. Borkert served one hundred days in the Civil war, being a private of Company A, 48th Pa. V. I., and was assigned to guard duty. He was mustered into service at Reading, and received his honorable discharge in the same city.

William Young, the father of Mrs. Borkert, was born in Reading, and received a common school education. He learned the cigar making business, but did not follow that occupation for any length of time, engaging in the confectionery business at Seventh and Penn streets, where he became well known in that line, and also as a fruit dealer. Mr. Young had a large vineyard at what is now Twelfth and Walnut streets, and was very prosperous. He died at the age of seventy-four years. He married Sarah Bishop, who died at the age of sixty-three years, and both are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Their children were: Fredericka E.; Elmora, the wife of our subject; Wilhelmina, widow of Emil Bishop; William, of Lock Haven; John; Theophillus; Annie C., wife of William M. Bond; Sarah, wife of Ed. H. Scheaffer, of Reading; Isaac B., (twin to Sarah), m. to Katie Lease, of Reading; and Ida Rebecca. of California.

JOSEPH G. KLINE, who died July 28, 1905, at his home, No. 230 North Ninth street, Reading, was for twenty years one of the city’s prominent business men, and a veteran of the great Civil War. Mr. Kline was born May 8, 1844, at Baumstown, Berks county, son of David and Esther (Gresmer) Kline. Mr. Kline was engaged in the coal business on Sixth street, Reading, and later engaged in the butcher business at Eighth and Walnut streets, continuing in the latter business for twenty years. He died in Reading, the father of these children: Amason; Joseph G.; Jeremiah, of Oklahoma, Kan.; Isaac, of Reading; Mrs. Charles Wanamaker; and Mrs. John Vogel.

Joseph G. Kline attended the public schools of his native city. Until seventeen years of age he worked with his father, but at the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted, Aug. 23, 1861, in Company A, 88th Pa V. I. He was promoted sergeant and given a commission of lieutenant June 14, 1862, and afterwards, retaking his commission, served four years, and being discharged July 10, 1865. He served in a number of the fiercest engagements of the war, and was slightly wounded in the left ear. After his return to Reading Mr. Kline engaged with the Philadelphia & Reading Company, continuing therewith for a period of twenty-one years, first as bookkeeper and later as treasurer. In 1885 he engaged in the grocery business at Tenth and Elm streets, and continued therein very successfully until five months previous to his death, when he retired. Mr. Kline was buried in the Charles Evans cemetery.

On Dec. 25, 1866, Mr. Kline was married to Catherine Koch, daughter of John and Catherine (Hoff) Koch. They have had children: David, born Sept. 22, 1868, died May, 1869; Ellen E. m. Frederick Knipe, who is engaged in the manufacture of saratoga chips, having a large and growing business; Joseph A. is attending business college. Mr. Kline was a member and trustee of the Otterbein United Brethren Church. He belonged to the G. A. R., Brotherhood of the Union, Union Veteran Legion No. 43, Freedom Circle and Mt. Penn Council No. 495, Royal Arcanum. He was a well-known and highly respected man, and made many warm friends. His widow, who survives him, resides at the Ninth street home.

CHARLES LITSCHI, who is now living retired in Reading, is one of our substantial citizens. Born in a foreign land, he has proved himself loyal to the country in which he has earned his competence, by being an upright, public-spirited and progressive citizen, interested in the development and the moral and material welfare of his adopted land. He is a native of Switzerland, born at Wollerau, on the banks of Lake Zurich, Nov. 29, 1850. He received his education in the schools of his native land, and after leaving school learned the business of printing on cloth. This he followed at different places before crossing the Atlantic to the New World. On Nov. 21, 1871, he went to Lorrach, and after a time to Koburg, where he worked from March 9, 1873, until July 8th of the same year. He then went home by way of Stuttgart, and after a few weeks visit with his friends and relatives sailed for America, Aug. 20, 1873, from Havre, France, then in the grip of a cholera epidemic. The eighteen-day voyage was by way of Southampton to New York, and was without incident of note. On September 9th they landed at Castle Garden, and later the Jay Cook bank failed and threw the whole country into a panic. Times were very hard, and Mr. Litschi, going at once to Philadelphia, found himself at the end of fourteen days still without work. Idleness was something of which he knew nothing, and not finding the kind of work he sought, he wandered from one to another until he took a job that presented itself. This was as an apprentice at the baker’s trade, and for his services he received his board and fifteen dollars a month. At this trade he worked from Oct. 18, 1873, until Feb. 24, 1879, when he was married to Katharina Kobel, of Klein Zimern, Hessen Darmstadt. The next day he went to Boyertown, Berks county, and there purchased the bakery owned by a Mr. Reifsnyder. On March 24, 1879, he opened up for business, and he met with success from the start. He had thoroughly learned the art of baking, and as his wares were first class, and his business methods above reproach, he soon won a good patronage and many friends. He continued at this business at Boyertown until Sept. 10, 1899, when he sold out, but he worked for his successor until April 1, 1900. When he had sold the bakery the previous September, his family had moved to Reading, and they have since lived at No. 805 North Tenth street. Since coming here Mr. Litschi has been enjoying his well-earned rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Litschi have become the parents of the following children: Joseph, of Reading; Henry, Charles, and Frank, all deceased and buried at Pottstown; Lewis, a professional base ball player; and Andrew. All of the children were born at Boyertown, the family all belonging to St. Joseph’s Catholic Church. In 1898 Mr. Litschi visited Europe, his trip, which included the principal cities of the Old World, covering more than 8,000 kilometers.

ALBERT LEINBACH, now living retired from active work in Reading, is a native of Cumru township, born Aug. 19, 1835, son of Frederick and Maria (Guldin) Leinbach.

Frederick Leinbach, the father, was also a native of Berks county. While he learned thoroughly the blacksmith’s trade and followed it more or less all his life, he also engaged in farming near Leesport, giving the farm work during winter months. He never engaged in his farming interest were all in Exeter township. He died at Reading at the age of fifty-seven years, and his wife, whose maiden name was Maria Guldin, lived to the age of sixty. Only five of their family still survive, namely:
Daniel, Albert, Mahlon, Jonathan G. and Mary, the latter being now the widow of James Levan, and a resident of Reading.

Leinbach. Leinbach was reared upon his father's farm, and worked there until he was nineteen years of age. He then went to work in Brumbach's wool factory, at St. Lawrence, where he remained upwards of fifteen years. He continued at this work until his retirement, being spinning boss the last forty years. Like many of his family Mr. Leinbach is thoroughly versed in the wool business. Since June, 1904, he has not been actively engaged at anything. In politics he is a Republican. During the Civil war he served in the Pennsylvania militia, and was in a terrible railroad wreck where so many of the soldiers lost their lives.

Mary, Jan. 1859, Mr. Leinbach married Miss Sarah Nagel, who was born Jan. 1, 1840, daughter of William and Henrietta (Ermold) Nagel, of Reading, and granddaughter of Peter Nagel. The Nagels are prominently identified with the early civil and military history of Berks county. William Nagel died May 1, 1848. Four children, two sons and two daughters, have been born to this union: William H., a resident of Atlantic City, N. J.; Benjamin F., of North Fourth street, Reading; Sal- lie E., widow of John F. Morriston; and Hattie, who married Warren J. Thomas, and they reside with her parents. The family residence is at No. 415 N. Fifth street. Mr. and Mrs. Nagel are all members of the Reformed Church, and are active in its work. They rank among the substantial and highly esteemed citizens of Reading.

He was a Democrat.

ALLEN H. DUNKLE, who for many years was one of the best known hotel men and distillers in Berks county, and now is residing retired in his beautiful home at Temple, Pa., was born Feb. 24, 1837, in Berks Co., Pa., son of James and Hannah (Kinnel) Dunkle.

William Dunkle, his grandfather, was the owner of the hotel at Berksley later owned by his grandson, and was operating it as early as 1812, also conducting a farm of sixty acres adjoining. He married Anna Grim, a native of Maxatawny township, and they had but one child, James. In religious belief they were Lutherans, and in political matters Mr. Dunkle was a Democrat.

James Dunkle was born in Ontelaunee township, Berks county, where he acquired his education, and after leaving school he engaged in working on his father's farm until he took charge of the hotel, which he conducted until 1860, when he was aged sixty-three years. He and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church, and became the parents of four children: Alfred, who died at the age of six months; Rufus, deceased, who married Kate Rahn and had three children, Webster, Lilian and Francis; Annie C., who married E. Andrews and had one son, William, a physician; and Allen H. James Dunkle was one of the prominent Democrats of his locality, and during his long and useful life filled a number of important township offices.

Allen H. Dunkle was educated in the common schools of his native township, and as a boy worked on the farm for his board and clothing, which he followed as a journeyman for four years. At the end of this time he learned telegraphy, and for about three years was employed on the Berks & Schuylkill branch of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, then resigning to engage in the hotel business. He also built a distillery, which he operated until its destruction by fire, in 1899, after which he devoted his entire attention to the hotel business, conducting the hotel until 1905, in which year he purchased the Samuel High property in Temple, where he has since lived retired. During his residence here Mr. Dunkle has made many friends, and he and his family, with the respect in which all who know them, Mr. Dunkle is a member of the Lutheran Church, while his wife is of the Reformed faith. In political matters he upholds the principles of the Democratic party.

In 1877 Mr. Dunkle was married to Mary Rahn, daughter of William and Susan (Merkel) Rahn, natives of Ontelaunee township, and three children have been born to this union: Robin, a telegram operator on the Pennsylvania Railroad, who married Sadie Shearer; Lloyd, an electrical engineer, of Chicago, Ill., who married Millie Snyder; and Wayne.

WAYNE DUNKLE received his early education in the common schools and the Keystone State Normal School, at Kuatzen, after which he attended State College. The next twelve months he spent in travel through Kansas, Colorado, Nevada and California, most of this time being spent in San Francisco, where he was engaged in the restaurant business. In 1904 he returned East and engaged in the bakery business, in which he has been very successful. At the start the capacity of his bakery was 500 loaves of bread weekly, but he now readily dispenses of from 5,500 to 4,000 loaves weekly, during the services of two teams and three assistants. His oven was especially designed and built by Reading's expert oven maker, Jeremiah Seider. Mr. Dunkle operates a stall at the Tenth and Windsor street market house, and occupies stall No. 108 in the market at Ninth and Buttonwood street. He is a very progressive, and his honest dealings in business matters have given him an enviable reputation for integrity. Mr. Dunkle is unmarried, and makes his home with his parents.

WESLEY HORNING, who died Oct. 26, 1901, was born in Huntingdon county, Pa., Feb. 12, 1837, son of John and Mary Horning.

Possessed of a good mind and a keen desire for education, Mr. Horning was not satisfied with the work he could do in the common schools in his day, and in 1850 he began what proved to be a four years' course in Philaeland Seminary. He then came to Reading and entered upon his apprenticeship as a carpenter, but before he had completed his term he enlisted in the army for a period of nine months. He served as a private in Company B, 128th Pa., V. I., under Capt. McNoll, was in the battles of South Mountain, Antietam and Chancellorsville, and was honorably discharged May 29, 1863. On his return to Reading Mr. Horning completed his apprenticeship, and then worked at carpentry for twenty-three years. He next became connected with the Reading Car-wheel Works, and was there employed at the time of his death.

On May 26, 1870, Mr. Horning married Miss Clara Whitman, daughter of Benjamin and Catherine (Wight) Whitman. No children were born to them, but they took into their home and hearts a niece of Mrs. Horning, Anna Whitman, and also another child, Stella Garman. The last named became Mrs. James Miller, while Anna married and married Ganten. The religious belief the family were Evangelical, and Mr. Horning was an active worker in the church to which he belonged, at different times having held almost all the offices in it. He was universally held in high esteem for his well known honesty, and his genial disposition and kindly nature made him many warm friends. His wife was a worthy helmpmate, and their thirty years of happy wedded life were filled with acts of charity and helpfulness to the needy or unhappy. Their motto was always the old Biblical commandment "Let not thy right hand know what thou left hand doeth," and in spirit they lived and worked. In Masonic circles Mr. Horning was active and prominent. He joined Lodge No. 83, F. & A. M., Dec. 19, 1865, and served as Worshipful Master in 1888. He joined Excoius Chapter, R. A. M., Oct. 12, 1883, and was High Priest in 1888. On April 27, 1887, he was knighted in Reading Commandery, K. T., and was a member of Rajah Temple, N. M. S. Mysteries. He was largely absorbed by his lodge work, and he never took an active part in politics, although he was always a good Republican.

JOSEPH S. DE LONG, in his life time a highly esteemed and successful farmer near Tipton, in Maxatuny township, Berks county, was born there Feb. 11, 1837, and died Feb. 25, 1896, aged fifty-nine years, fourteen days.
Joseph De Long, his grandfather, was a farmer. According to the tombstone in De Long's Bowers churchyard, his wife, Susanna De Long, nee Butz, was "born March 20, 1782, died Jan. 24, 1874, aged ninety-one years, ten months, four days."

Jacob De Long, son of Joseph, was born on his father's farm near Bowers, March 27, 1803, and died Oct. 23, 1851, his remains being interred at De Long's Church. He was a life-long farmer, and his home is now the property of the De Long estate. In his time the East Penn railroad had not been built, and in order to build his horse power shed, he was obliged to haul his materials from Allentown. While on one of these trips, on going down Griesemer's Hill, he accidentally fell from the wagon, which passed over him, killing him instantly. His death caused great sorrow in the community, where he was universally esteemed. On May 1, 1836, he married Sally Schaefer, who was born Oct. 4, 1803, daughter of Jonas Schaefer, of Fleetwood. She died June 22, 1906, aged ninety-two years, eight months and twenty days. Their children were: Joseph S. ; Philip, living retired at Hamburg, who has children—Annie, Dr. Percy and Elsie; Alfred, a farmer at Monterey, who had ten children, six now deceased, the survivors being—Sallie, James, Luther, and Ruth; and Elizabeth, who married Daniel Merkel, of Fleetwood, and has children—Ella, Lewis, Sallie and Daniel.

Joseph S. De Long passed his entire life as a farmer. In 1888 he came into possession of his father's farm, a fine tract consisting of 125 acres of land. He was also the businessable farmer. The town hall and Zion's Church, in Maxatawny township, property that is now tenanted. In all his undertakings Mr. De Long prospered, and his investments were marked by sound judgment. In politics he was a Republican, and in religion a member of the Reformed Church, and he is buried at De Long's Church.

On Dec. 25, 1869, Mr. De Long married Mary H. Yoder, a daughter of Martin and Catharine (High) Yoder, and granddaughter of Martin and Susanna (Peter) Yoder, of Oley township. Seven children blessed this union: (1) Katie, born in 1871, died in 1876. (2) Sallie born in 1872, died in 1877. (3) Harvey J., born in 1874, died in 1878. (4) Rev. Calvin Martin, born July 7, 1876, was educated in the public schools, the Keystone State Normal school (from which he graduated in 1894), Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster (from which he graduated in 1898), and the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church of America, Lancaster (graduating in 1908). He was stationed at the New Goshenhoppen Reformed Church at East Greenville, Pa., where he is still the honored pastor. He is a brilliant and interesting speaker, and an earnest worker. On May 5, 1906, he m. Besie Mae Bauscher, and has one child, Emma Mary. (5) Lizzie M. rev. John Stoudt. (6) Frederick H., born Sept. 23, 1879, attended the local schools, the Keystone State Normal School, and is now the farmer on the home farm. (7) S. Molly m. Marion Hertog, a clerk at the Kutztown Foundry, Kutztown, and they have a daughter, Erma De Long.

J. GEORGE SCHAFFER, who was for many years engaged in tailoring in the city of Reading, Pa., was born in the Province of Hesse, Germany, Feb. 19, 1826, son of J. George and Elizabeth (Herbst) Schaefer.

Mr. Schaefer was the youngest of his father's family, and he received his education in his native country, there learning the tailor trade from his father. He came to America in May, 1847, and finished his trade with his brother, Peter C., at Reading. Mr. Schaefer came direct to Reading, where he spent the remainder of his life engaged in the tailoring business, chiefly at Seven and Penn streets. A short period before his death Mr. Schaefer lived retired, and he died Dec. 3, 1889, and is buried at St. Paul's Catholic cemetery, which is located at the foot of Neversink Mountain.

Mr. Schaefer was married to Frederika Vogel, born July 17, 1834, six miles from Mr. Schaefer's birthplace in Germany, daughter of Frederick and Ottillia (Neisian) Vogel, and to this union there have been born children as follows: Mary A. resides with her mother; Clara is known in the church as Sister Marcus, and a teacher in a parochial school; Father Joseph A., born in Reading, attended the St. Paul's parochial school of Reading until his thirteenth year; and Catherine, Betty P. O., Westmoreland county, and St. Charles Seminary at Overbrook, Montgomery county, was located at Pottsville, and for five years has been at Manayunk; Theresa, born Oct. 10, 1860, died June 23, 1867; John F., born Feb. 1, 1868, died Feb. 28, 1876; Mary E., born July 30, 1868, died Jan. 18, 1869; and George A., born Aug. 13, 1870, met his death while at the Philadelphia & Reading shops in the cyclone of Jan. 9, 1889.

Mr. J. George Schaefer was a faithful member of St. Paul's Catholic Church. He was a Democrat in his political views, but never took an active part in public matters. His widow, who survives him, still lives at the old home, No. 234 North Ninth street.

CHARLES H. MACHMER, who, as assistant superintendent of the Reading branch of the Prudential Life Insurance Company, is well and favorably known to a large body of his fellow citizens, was born Nov. 21, 1876, at Bernville, Berks Co., Pa., son of Henry S., a veteran school teacher of Berks county.

The Machmer family is one of the old-established families of Berks county that has a history that is interesting to all. Philip Machmer, who was born in Switzerland and came to America in 1758, settling in the rich agricultural domains of Berks county, Pa. He prospered, as in 1759, he paid a Federal tax of £4, in Bern township. He lived at least twenty years after settling here, as his last will and testament, dated Nov. 1, 1779, was registered in the Court of 16, 1773. He and his wife Elizabeth had five children, and they were mentioned in the will as follows: Nicholas, who was under twenty-one years of age when the father died, obtained the house, and he was to pay £500 to his brothers and sisters; Mary m. Bastian Bartlet; Philip and George were ordered by the will to learn a trade when they should become sixteen years of age; and Margaret.

Nicholas Machmer, yeoman of Bern township, died in 1828. He and his wife, Eva, had a daughter, Elizabeth, and two sons, John and Peter.

Peter Machmer, son of Philip Machmer, died in 1840. He bequeathed John Machmer, son of Nicholas, $500, and John Machmer, son of Philip, $200, and also made bequests to David and Daniel Machmer, whose relationship he does not specify. He had no issue.

Peter Machmer, probably a son of Nicholas, was a farmer in Upper Bern township. He made his will Jan. 12, 1852, which was probated May 22, 1854. He and wife Magdalena had sons, John and Benneville.

Michael Machmer made his will Nov. 5, 1851, and it was probated in 1875, the year of his death. His wife, Sophia, was named executrix. The names of his daughters are not mentioned in the will, and, when it was made, his sons, Michael, Franklin and Meckley, were all under age.

William Machmer, born in Maryland in 1777, died in Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, Berks county, in 1865. Among his children were John F., Jonathan and Alan.

John F. Machmer, son of William, died in 1889, in Upper Bern (or Tilden) township, and both he and his father are buried at St. Michael's Church.

Henry S. Machmer, son of John F., was born in Tilden township in 1847, and was educated in the common schools of the township and in Hamburg, and later attended the Millersville State Normal. At the age of seventeen he began teaching, and taught in Upper Bern, Centre, Penn and Bernville. For seven terms he was principal of the Penn grammar school, and taught twenty-four terms in Lower Heidelberg. He is one of the veteran teachers of Berks county, and is a well known figure at teachers' institutes. He served as justice of the peace of the county, and is now serving his fourth term in that position in Lower Heidelberg. He married Susanna Himmelberger, daughter of John Himmelberger, of Centre township. They had nine children, four of whom are deceased. The survivors are: Anson, of Wernersville; Annie, m. to William McGreath, of Allentown, Pa.; Edelhard, H., a pastor at Reading; Charles H.; and Willis J., of East Liverpool, Ohio.

Charles H. Macmahon was reared at State Hill, in Lower Heidelberg township, and there attended the public schools, later entering the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, and still later took a commercial course, in 1898 and graduated. He was a member of the Valley Legion. He attended the Lebanon Valley College. He also attended the Interstate Commercial College at Reading, where he was a student of merit. Prior to identifying himself with life insurance, he taught school in Lower Heidelberg township and one term at Robesonia. In May, 1901, he connected himself with the Prudential Insurance Company, of the city of Philadelphia, and Dec 23, 1903, he was promoted to the position of assistant superintendent. He is a most successful insurance man and ably performs the many responsible duties of his position. He married, in 1902, he has occupied a home of his own, at No. 304 Schuykill avenue.

In 1897, Mr. Macmahon was married to Themson E. Speicher, a daughter of Jacob K. and Themson (Roeder) Speicher, of Robesonia, and they have had three children, namely: Eeyott D., born May 22, 1898; died Jan. 4, 1899; Stanley E., born May 27, 1900; died Nov. 8, 1906; and Russell S., born June 19, 1906.

FRANCIS H. MEE, of Reading, Pa., who has been living retired since Sept. 30, 1904, was for many years a trusted employe in the Philadelphia & Reading rail-road shops. Mr. Mee was born in Maiden Creek (now Berks) Oct. 29, 1854, son of George and Ida (Hafter) Mee. His father was a member of the old English Quaker family which came to Pennsylvania at an early date in the country's history, located in Chester county.

Jonathan Mee came to Berks county from Chester county, and located in the Quaker settlement in Maiden-creek township, where he engaged in the farming, owning a part of the farm now the property of Charles Dunkel. He was a carpenter by trade, and followed that voca tion in addition to farming. He had been a Quaker, but on reaching manhood, married a woman of the Reformed faith. Both he and his wife are buried at Ger nand's Church in Oley township. He had three sons and four daughters: namely: George, John, Charles, Hettie, Sallie, Annie and Mary (Polly).

George Mee, son of Jonathan and father of Francis H., was born in Maiden-creek township, where he followed the trade of a miller all of his life. He died in 1871, in his sixtieth year. He married Juliana Hafter, who died in 1858, aged forty-five years, and she, like her husband, was a member of the Reformed Church. In political matters Mr. Mee was an old-line Whig. To him and his wife were born children as follows: Francis H., Charles, Mary (m. Alvin Luckenbill, deceased), Hettie (m. Henry Loy, of Hamburg, Pa.), and five children were born in Berksville five years after marriage.

Francis H. Mee received his education in the schools of Spring township, where his parents lived for a number of years, and for some time after leaving school worked at farm labor. He then served an apprenticeship to the carpenter's trade, and entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, with which company he continued until his retirement, a period of thirty-nine and one-half years, since which time he has lived a quiet life at his home, No. 1710 Centre avenue, Reading.

In 1858 Mr. Mee married Susan Kissinger, daughter of Abraham and Abigail (Hill) Kissinger, and to them have been born two children, namely: Sallie, George, Daniel, Annie, William, Alice and Ida. In religious belief Mr. Mee is a Lutheran, and his political sentiments are those of the Democratic party. While employed at the car shops he was connected with the Philadelphia & Reading Relief Society.

FRANKLIN R. HIMMELBERGER, the well known carriage and wagon builder of the borough of West Reading, was born near Garfield, in Centre township, Berks county, Feb. 5, 1861, son of Daniel P. and Rebecca (Richard) Himmelberger. The home of the Himmelberger family is in Upper Berks county. This is an old family and at one time quite a numerous one. The Pennsylvania archives record that (I) Valentine Himmelberger emigrated to this country on the "Blindler Townshead," which landed at Philadelphia, Oct. 5, 1757. George Himmelberger, a son of Valentine, came over the same vessel, which qualified at Philadelphia Sept. 19, 1749. They both located in Bern township, Berks county. Valentine died on his farm in 1788. He made his will Feb. 28, 1787, and this was recorded Aug. 2, 1788. His wife had died some time before. Their eight children were: Philip, John, Elizabeth, Catharine, Clara, George, Susan and Anna.

In the Federal Census of 1790 George Himmelberger is recorded as the head of a Bern township family of ten persons, as follows: the father and mother, two sons under sixteen years of age, and six daughters. George Himmelberger died in the fall of 1821. His will, made April 19, 1821, was probated Oct. 16th of the same year, and is recorded in Will Book C, page 248. The testator at the time of his death lived in Bern township. The executors of his will were John Backenstos and others. Elizabeth, his wife, survived him. The will mentions the following eleven children: George, Jonathan, Valentine, Philip, Magdalena, Catharine, Elizabeth (Fisher), Sarah, Sybilla, Susan and David (deceased, who had a son, Georg).

(II) In the Federal Census of 1790, Philip Himmelberger, son of Valentine, the emigrant, is recorded as a resident of Tulpehocken township and the head of a family consisting of ten members, father and mother, five sons and three daughters. Two sons were then above sixteen years of age. The will of Philip Himmelberger is on record in Will Book A, page 396. He died in 1797. The executors of his will were his sons Valentine and John, and Adam Riegel. He left a large estate, and his many carpenter tools were given his sons. At this time of the making of his will he had two unmarried daughters. One of the daughters was named Sabila.

(II) The same Federal Census (1790) shows Jacob Himmelberger (son of Valentine) a resident of Ben township. His family consisted of ten members—father, mother, five daughters and three sons then under fifteen years of age. He died in 1824, and his will is on record in Will Book C, page 315. Among the children were Johannes, Elizabeth and Susanna.

(III) Valentine Himmelberger, son of Philip and grandson of Valentine, died in Upper Tulpehocken township in 1855. In his will on record in Will Book 10, p. 129, are mentioned sons Daniel and Johannes. The former was the executor of his father's will.

(IV) Daniel Himmelburger, son of Valentine, was a farmer and lived in the township. He had a forty-acre farm at Centreville (now Garfield) on which he lived and died. He is buried at Bellem's Church as also his wife. They were members of the Reformed congregation. The maiden name of his wife was Philips. Their three sons were: Isaac, Moses and Daniel P.
(VI) Franklin R. Himmelebrger was reared on his father's farm, where he worked until he was nine years old, after which he was hired out and worked for different farmers until he was nineteen years old, when he learned carriage blacksmithing from Daniel Rapp, the well-known carriage builder at Reading. He remained in Mr. Rapp's employ for six years, and in 1885 he opened a small blacksmith shop at the west end of the Penn street bridge. He continued in this trade two years. In 1887 he associated himself with George H. Smith under the firm name of Himmeleberger & Smith, and this firm existed for a period of thirteen years, engaged in carriage building and general wheelwrighting, being very successful from the start. When the Belt Line was built through Reading it passed through this firm's property, and the firm was mutually dissolved. Himmeleberger built a large plant at the corner of Second and Cherry streets, West Reading, to which he has been adding ever since. The first buildings were erected in April, 1903, but the constantly increasing business has demanded much larger quarters. The main building is 40x100 feet in dimensions, four stories high, basement. There is also a four-story repository 48x60 feet, and several other annexes making the total amount of floor space about 36,000 square feet. He employs from twenty-five to thirty-five skilled mechanics, and he makes a speciality of market and delivery wagons, heavy wagons and light pleasure rigs. His establishment is equipped with all the latest improved machinery, drying oven, ware houses, shelving, etc. Besides handling all kinds of vehicles Mr. Himmeleberger carries a complete line of harnesses, blankets, whips, etc. He does work for a number of prominent business men and such well known firms as Elshheimer & Co., Leinbach & Bro., Sternbergh & Son, Dives, Pomroy & Stewart, W. H. Ludens, Whittners, Mould's, undertakers Seidel & Henninger, George F. Baer, A. L. Rhoads and many others. He is a thorough business man, and is the largest individual carriage builder in the county.

In 1876, Mr. Himmeleberger married Alvilda Gabri, of Earlville, later of Reading, daughter of Evan and Elizabeth (Becker) Gabri. Four children have blessed this union: Libbie V., Beulah R., Ruth A. and Martha M. Socially Mr. Himmeleberger is a member of Pidelia; Chamber No. 5, Knights of Friendship; and Camp No. 212, P. O. S. of A., both of Reading. In politics he is a Democrat. When West Reading was incorporated into a borough, and the people were looking for a conservative man for their first chief burgess, they unanimously selected Mr. Himmeleberger for that responsible position, May, 1907. The work of his administration has been marked by progress and by a business-like conduct of affairs, giving great satisfaction to the people. With his family Mr. Himmeleberger belongs to the First Reformed Church of Reading, in which he is a member of the consistory, holding office since 1899. He was confirmed in Bellefonte Union Church in Centre township in 1876. He is a consistent Christian gentleman, and is regular in his attendance at divine worship.

WILLIAM H. COLEMAN, a tinsmith of Reading, employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, was born in Berks county, on Jan. 1, 1860, son of Henry A. and Hannah S. (Hunter) Coleman.

Henry A. Coleman was born in Berks county, and married Hannah S. Hunter, daughter of Nicholas Hunter, of Oley township, Berks county. Their children were: Hunter, m. to Lavina Strohm, and residing at Fleetwood; William, jr., to Jane Clayton, of Reading; Robert, m. to Sarah B. Shunk, of Reading; Jacob, m. to Annie E. Platte, of Reading; and Eliza, m. to Charles W. Chance, of Reading. Birthplace,

William H. Coleman was reared in Pleasantville, Oley township, by Isaac Yoder, and he received his education in the public schools. When fifteen years of age he commenced learning the trade of tinsmithing at Pleasantville with Maybury Yoder, and after two and one-half years with him, he worked for a time for his uncle, John A. Yoder, merchant of Pleasantville. He then went to Gabelsville, and for three years more was a clerk, but then he removed to Grim's Mill in Colebrookdale township where he farmed until 1899. At that time he found an opening at Reading with the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, and has since continued with this corporation.

On Aug. 7, 1880, Mr. Coleman married Elmira R. Fegley, daughter of John F. and Elizabeth (Royer) Fegley. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman have one daughter, Elizabeth, m. to William F. Dentzer, Jr., of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Dentzer have two children, Clayton C. and Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman have in their family a little girl of twelve, Esther Hartman, who was adopted after she was an infant and her kind foster parents have taken care of her since she was fourteen months of age.

George Kalbach, great-grandfather of Aury E., was the German emigrant of the family, who came to Berks county at an early day and settled in Heidelberg township. He married Maria Span, a member of one of the aristocratic and wealthy old German families, the Spang estate was then settled being valued at $7,000,000.

Daniel Kalbach, the grandfather, bought the old Bittner homestead in Spring township and lived there for many years, becoming a man of importance and establishing a reputation for strict integrity. By his first wife, Kate Yeagly, his children were: Israel of Ohio; and Eliza, who married (first) Samuel Shenfelder, and (second) Mrs. Kate (Lash) Seibert, widow of John Seibert. She had one child of her first marriage, Mary Ann (m. Uriah Reifsnyder). By her second marriage, with Mr. Kalbach, she had the following children: Ellen, m. to Henry Behne; Josiah L. and William.

Josiah L. Kalbach learned the coach painting trade in young manhood, and followed this business for some years, and then went into the candy-making business, establishing himself at Third and Penn streets, where he carried on a successful business for twenty-two years, retiring in 1902. He now lives retired at No. 419 Washington street. Josiah L. Kalbach and wife, Catherine, m. to Ellis Kirk, a cartoonist and sketch artist; and Aury E. The family is one which has been united for generations in religion and politics, belonging to the Republican party and in the business world.
his father's retirement, he has devoted his attention to transportation, teaming for large manufacturing concerns.

Mr. Kalbach was married, in 1889, to Sallie Miller, and their only child died in infancy. He m. (second) Sarah Webber, daughter of Mark and Sarah (Bower) Webber, of Maiden-creek Township, Lehigh Co., who was the daughter to this union: Mark Leroy, born Nov. 23, 1893, at home; Catharine Bertha, born Aug. 24, 1897; and Josiah Bennethum, born Nov. 29, 1899, at home.

KRIEBEL FAMILY. The first of this name in America, (I) George Kriebel, came to Pennsylvania in 1734, a member of the little band of Schwenkfelders who emigrated hither from Silesia, Germany. On Nov. 25, 1740, he married Susanna, daughter of Balthasar and Regina Yeakel, and they had two sons: George, born July 11, 1744; and Andrew, born Sept. 17, 1748. George Kriebel died Sept. 9, 1778, and his wife, Susanna, died Sept. 14, 1775.

(II) Andrew Kriebel, son of George, the emigrant, married May 16, 1771, Susanna, daughter of Abraham Yeakel. She died April 25, 1808, aged fifty-seven years, five months, fourteen days. He passed away April 17, 1830. They had, nine children, as follows: Rosanna, born in 1773, m. in 1818 Daniel Diehl, and died in 1836; Abraham, born Sept. 7, 1774, m. Christina Kriebel; Samuel, born June 13, 1776, m. Christina Schultz; George, born Oct. 6, 1778, died May 20, 1779; Mary, born June 16, 1782, died June 10, 1787; Elizabeth, born Aug. 19, 1783, m. Rosina Schultz; Sophia, born Nov. 1, 1785; Salome, born Dec. 9, 1787; and Israel, born Sept. 14, 1790.

(III) Israel Kriebel, born Sept. 14, 1790, was a farmer and lived near Colvin, in Hereford township, Berks county. He died June 14, 1860. On March 6, 1819, he married Sarah, daughter of Rev. John Schultz, and she died in March, 1859. They had thirteen children: Christiana, born Oct. 12, 1850 (died Oct. 10, 1864); John, Feb. 4, 1852; Samuel, Nov. 11, 1853 (died 1855); Anna, born June 11, 1854; Maria, born Aug. 10, 1856; Henry, March 25, 1858; Elias, Oct. 13, 1839; Regina, Oct. 7, 1831; Joseph, June 28, 1833 (died Dec. 29, 1859); Andrew, Aug. 8, 1835; Anna, 1838 (died 1845); Sarah, 1841 (died 1845); and Mary, July 14, 1846.

(IV) Andrew Kriebel, born in Hereford township Aug. 8, 1835, died Oct. 10, 1876, on the farm in that township now owned by his son Allen S. Kriebel. He is buried at Washington meeting-house. He was engaged as miller in his father's mill in early life, and afterwards in the first two townships in his farm. He married Christina Schultz, born March 8, 1840, daughter of Charles and Polly (Reichenbach) Schultz, died March 6, 1906. To them were born three children, as follows: Allen S., Oscar S., and Mary (m. to Milton Schultz, a farmer of Upper Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pennsylvania).

(V) Allen S. Kriebel, a farmer in Hereford township, was born June 28, 1861, at the place he now lives, and was there reared. He attended school in his native township, and spent his youth and early manhood doing the farm work of the family. On reaching his majority he rented from his mother and continued farming thus for some years. In the fall of 1898 he purchased his father's homestead, where he has been doing well ever since. This property, which consists of sixty acres of farm land and twenty acres of wood land, is located near Treichlersville. The present stone dwelling was built in 1863, by Andrew Kriebel, and the barn was put up the following year, 1863. The stone house replaced a dwelling—part wood, part log—which had stood for over a hundred years. Mr. Kriebel has made a number of improvements on the place since it came into his possession, and it presents a most attractive appearance. In front of the house are two large pine trees and a spruce tree in which he takes especial pride. Good water is one of the valuable features of this farm, and as Mr. Kriebel has valuable live stock he appreciates this fact particularly. He is a modern farmer in every respect, having a full line of up-to-date implements, including a first-class threshing outfit, as he does considerable threshing in the neighboring townships and surrounding townships—his patrons being found in Berks, Bucks, Montgomery and Lehigh counties. He has two gasoline engines, one of six and one of twelve horse-power. In addition to such work, he saws wood, bales hay, shreds cornstalks, etc., for the farmers of his section. He has a telephone at his house and every convenience for the facilitation of his various enterprises.

In 1888 Mr. Kriebel married Keturah Schultz, daughter of Manoah and Annette (Trump) Schultz, of Hereford, and to them have been born eight children: Ada, Chester, Homer, Owen, Irene, Norman, Raymond and Gilbert. Mr. and Mrs. Kriebel are much interested in the education of their family. Their daughter Ada is at present a student in the commercial department of the Perkiomen Seminary. All the members of the Kriebel family have maintained high standing for respectability and good citizenship, and well deserve the respect in which they are held.

Allen S. Kriebel and his family belong to the Schwenkfelder Church, and they are also connected with the Sunday-school, he being a member of the board of managers, which consists of three members, corresponding to the board of trustees of a church. He is a Republican in politics.

One of the treasured possessions of this family is an old grandfather's clock, which formerly belonged to Rev. William Schultz. It not only shows the time, but the day of the month and the movements of the moon, and is a valuable relic.

Manoah Schultz, father of Mrs. Allen S. Kriebel, was born Nov. 23, 1847, in Hereford, and was reared to farming, which vocation he followed throughout his active years. From 1868 he was engaged on his own account, in 1873 obtaining the homestead farm in this township, where he lived until the spring of 1890. He then moved to Treichlersville, where he farmed a forty-acre tract for one year, at the end of that time moving to the Abraham Krauss tract, in Hereford township, which he bought, and where he is now living retired. He is a Schwenkfelder in religious faith and has been active in that denomination, having served as a manager of the Sunday-school for many years.

Mr. Schultz married Annette Trump, born July 23, 1849, daughter of John and Sally (Conrad) Trump, of Hereford, Nov. 6, 1869. To them were born four children: Katie m. Allen S. Kriebel; Ambrose met an accidental death at the age of twenty-six; Sallie m. David F. Clemmer; Anna Amanda died in infancy. Mr. Schultz's second marriage was to Mary Wiand, in 1879. They have had two children.

(V) Rev. Oscar S. Kriebel, A. M., D. D., minister of the Schwenkfelder Church and principal of Perkiomen Seminary, is a resident of Pennsburg, Montgomery Co., Pa. He was born Sept. 10, 1863, in Hereford township, Berks county, and there spent his boyhood and youth. He made a success of his studies in the lower grades of the grammar school, and was permitted to go on attending the high school in the intermediate grades, meanwhile in the local schools. For three or four years during this period he was a very active member of the celebrated Hereford Township Literary Society. His spare hours were devoted to preparing himself to teach school, with such good results that in the fall of 1880, when he was seventeen years of age, he passed a county examination under Prof. S. A. Baer, Ph. D., then superintendent of Berks county, and was licensed to teach in the public schools. He taught his first term in Lower Milford township, Lehigh county, under Mr. J. Krauss in 1880-1881. The two terms following he taught the Schwenkfelder school in his native township, under the superintend-one nine months term in Stronsach, Mich., though he kept at his studies all the while. He graduated with honors from Oberlin College in 1837, and from the Oberlin Theological Seminary in 1902. During the first two years of his theological course in Oberlin he also taught in the preparatory department of the college. He spent the third year of his theological course in Germany, studying at the University of Berlin.

Mr. Kriebel was married in 1891, and he and his wife spent the following year in travel and study in Europe. Mr. Kriebel putting in most of his time at the University of Berlin, Germany. Their journeys took them through England, Scotland, Holland and Germany; and in the latter country Mr. Kriebel gave in special and interesting talks on the church of the country.

Dr. Kriebel has devoted much of his time to the cause of the Schwenkfelder Church, of which he is a minister, being the pastor of the followers of Caspar Schwenkfeld in the "Upper District" of the church in Pennsylvania. He is very active in the denomination, having been a member of the Home and Foreign Mission Board of the church since its organization, and a member of the Publication board, which has charge of all the church publications, including the works and life of Caspar Schwenkfeld von Ossig, known as the "Corpus Schwenkfelderianorum," which was published in five continuous volumes. The first volume appeared in 1908. Dr. Kriebel is secretary of the Publication board.

As principal of Perkiomen Seminary since 1892 Dr. Kriebel has attained front rank among the educators of the State, and he is a lecturer and public speaker of note. He is deeply interested in all educational and intellectual movements which tend to advance the civilization and moral welfare of the country and exert a considerable influence in such circles. His practical work along his chosen lines has been varied and efficient. He is a member of the Civil Service Reform Association of Pennsylvania, and has taken an active part in the good roads movement wherever it has been propagated in Pennsylvania. In his home town he is held in profound respect, and those who know him best speak of him as a scholar, broad-minded, public-spirited and exemplary citizen, a Christian gentleman of the first rank.

In June, 1907, Rev. Oscar S. Kriebel had the honor of degree of Doctor of Divinity conferred upon him by Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster, Pa. Prof. Kriebel has also completed most of the required work for a Ph. D. degree in the graduate department of the University of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the Montgomery County Historical Society, of the Pennsylvania German Society, of the National Geographical Society, and has been for years president of the Private Secondary School Association of Pennsylvania.

On June 30, 1891, Dr. Kriebel married Miss Corinne Miller, of Castalia, Erie Co., Ohio, daughter of Capt. W. W. and Mary (Caswell) Miller. They have had three children, Frieda, Mary and Louisa, the eldest, Frieda, born in Berlin, Germany, during the parents' long sojourn abroad.

In the Civil War Capt. W. W. Miller served as a captain throughout the Civil war, being popularly called the "Boy Captain" because of his youth. He was wounded at Gettysburg. For ten years he was State Secretary of Agriculture of Ohio. On the maternal side Mrs. Kriebel comes from a line of patriotic ancestors who were ever ready to risk their lives in the service of their country. In 1834 she was one of the first settlers of Berks County, and there her brothers having served with distinction in the Civil war; her great-grandfather in the war of 1812-15; and her great-great-grandfather in the Revolutionary war.

PERKIOMEN SEMINARY. At Pottstown, Montgomery County, Pa., two and one-fourth miles from the Berks County line, is located the famous Perkiomen Seminary, which was founded in 1887 by Rev. C. S. M. Wieand, of Pottstown, Pa., who was born and reared in Oberlin at the Oberlin College in 1892, the school opened its doors under the present management, with four teachers and nineteen scholars. The growth of the school has been remarkable. In fifteen years the teaching force was increased to thirty and the total enrollment to three hundred and sixty-one. During the seventy-one years that the school has enrolled 3,200 different students from practically all the counties of Pennsylvania, from fifteen different States of the Union, and from five foreign countries. Out of a total of 891 graduates, since its reorganization in 1892, two hundred and eighty-nine have continued their studies in more than eighteen foreign universities including Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Cornell, University of Pennsylvania, Oberlin, Ann Arbor and practically all the best institutions in the East and middle West.

The institution is equipped with new modern buildings, chemical and physical laboratories, gymnasium, athletic field, etc. A Carnegie library is proposed, but not yet built. It is located in the upper part of the rich and beautiful Perkiomen valley. Pure fresh air and an abundance of excellent spring water supply the school which is heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

The Perkiomen Railroad, a branch of the Philadelphia and Reading system runs through Pottsgrove, Pa. Since 1892 Rev. Dr. Oscar S. Kriebel has been principal of the school. The institution is conducted under the auspices of the Schwenkfelder church. It is managed by a board of trustees consisting of thirteen members, elected by the Church. In 1898 the board consisted of: W. K. Gilbert, president; Rev. N. B. Grubb; Jacob D. Heebner; Hon. John G. Herah, M. D., vice-president; Adam Krauss, secretary; Hiram K. Kriebel; Jesse S. Kriebel; Rev. E. E. S. Johnson; Rev. O. S. Kriebel; Rev. G. K. Meschter, M. D.; B. S. Schultz; E. K. Schultz, treasurer; and Rev. A. S. Shelly.

MAHLON NUNNEMACHER KLINE, president and general manager of the Smith, Kline & French Company, who conduct the largest wholesale drug establishment in Philadelphia, and one of the largest in the United States, was born Feb. 6, 1848, near Hamburg, in Windsor township, Berks Co., Pa., son of John and Mary (Nunnemacher) Kline.

Hans (Johannes) Klein, the great-great-grandfather of Mahlon K., a farmer of near Centreport, died in 1795. He was twice married, and by his first union had four sons, John, Werner, Nicholas and Jacob; by his second marriage he had another son, Peter; Catherine, who married Henry Lutz; Barbara, who married John Koch; Elizabeth, who married John Tobias; Mary, who married Christian Haak or Haag, brother of Philip's wife; and Margaret Elizabeth, who married John Losz. These eight children are named in the last will of the second wife, which was probated in 1801. All twelve children are named in Hans Klein's will, probated in 1785.

Of the foregoing family, Philip Klein, who was also a farmer of the vicinity of Centreport, was the great-grandfather of Mahlon N., who died in 1837, aged sixty-five years. By his marriage with Magdalena Hang he had five children: John Joseph, who married a Stetzer; Jacob, who married a Roth; Charles; and Rebecca, who married Matthias Hettenger. The mother of these children died in 1856, at the age of eighty-two years.

The grandfather of Mahlon M. Kline, who like his father and grandfather was engaged in farming near Centreport, was M. J., who removed to Philadelphia, and there he married Catherine Faust, and by her had six children; John; William, who removed to Milton, Pa.; Benjamin, who removed to Pottsville, Pa.; Mary, who married Jacob Reminger; Esther, who married John G. Hollebach; and Catherine, who married Simon Hoffman.

John Kline, father of Mahlon M. Kline, was a farmer of Upper Beru (now Tilden) township, where he carried on agricultural pursuits until his decease, in 1889, at the age of sixty-nine years. He took an active interest in the United Brethren Church situated several miles west of town. He received his education in the public schools of that vicinity and for two years attended a private school at Reading. When fourteen years old he was sent to Philadelphia to attend public school there for a course of higher education, but he continued his studies there for only six months, when he returned home, and though but high school graduation, he made the profession of a public teacher. He passed an examination successfully, and was given a school several miles north of Reading, now Hyde Park, where he taught for one term. With this preparation he directed his attention to store-keeping, and, finding a place in a country store at Hamburg, a few miles from home, he applied himself assiduously to that work for two years. He then went to the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, and after graduating from this institution secured a position as bookkeeper with the wholesale drug firm of Smith & Shoemacher, at No. 243 North Third street, Philadelphia. This was in February, 1865, and in three years so won the confidence of business and devotion to business appreciated, he was admitted a member of the firm. Mr. Shoemaker retired from the firm in 1869, and the name was changed to Smith, Kline & Co. The business stand was at the same place until 1897, when larger and more convenient quarters became necessary, and it was removed to Nos. 429-431 Arch street. A year afterward the firm was incorporated. In 1891, the wholesale business of French, Richards & Co. being closed out, Harry B. French joined the corporation, the name of which was changed to the Smith, Kline & French Company, and as such it has continued to the present time. The plant has been much enlarged and the volume of business developed until it ranks third in its line of trade in the United States. They now occupy the premises at Nos. 429-435 Arch street, with laboratory and mill at Canal and Poplar streets. Mr. Kline has been the general manager of the corporation since its formation and its president since 1899, which event has brought him prominence in the successful management of the enterprise.

Mr. Kline has been publicly identified with the business, political, social and religious affairs of Philadelphia for many years. He took an active part in the establishment of the Bourse and was elected a director in 1880. The Bourse was organized in 1881, and he became a director in 1883, vice-president in 1883, and president in 1884. The National Wholesale Druggists' Association was organized in 1883, and Mr. Kline cooperated with other wholesale drug merchants in establishing it as a body to take the place of the Western Wholesale Druggists' Association; and since that time he has been attending all of its annual meetings, excepting in 1895, when he was traveling in Europe. Notwithstanding his busy life he took time to unite with other prominent citizens of Philadelphia in their efforts to reform local politics and improve the municipal government, and his activities in this behalf naturally led to his selection as a member of the executive committee of the Lincoln party, and as treasurer of the State committee in 1906. In the stirring campaign of 1906 he made numerous speeches in different sections of the State, advocating the election of the candidates on the Lincoln party ticket, and thereby demonstrating in a public manner the devotion to the principles of that great leader for which Mr. Kline has been a member of the Union League since 1896; he is also a member of the Manheim Cricket Club and of the Philadelphia Cricket Club. Following the religious inclinations of his parents, he has been a devoted member of the Church of the Saviour (Protestant Episcopal, at Thirty-eighth and Chestnut streets), and has served the Sunday-school as its superintendent since 1896. He has also officiated as a director of the Franklin Reformatory Home at No. 915 Locust street for upward of ten years. For three months in 1869 he traveled extensively on raiding missions in Europe, and in 1897 he visited all the important places of England, Scotland and Ireland.

In 1874, Mr. Kline was married to Isadore E. Unger, of Allentown, daughter of Leopold Paul and Hettie (Hart) Unger, and by this union he has three children: Isadore C., married Harry B. Valentine, Jr., a prominent manufacturer; Mahlon N., and Clarence Mahlon, who is one of the directors of the Smith, Kline & French Company.

GEORGE ALBRECHT, junior member of the well known firm of Northeimer & Albrecht, practical plasterers of Reading, Pa., was born in that city, Oct. 10, 1864, son of the late Isadore and Mary (Reichert) Albrecht. Isadore Albrecht was a native of Baden, Germany, and came to America in 1848, landing at New York City, then Albrecht went to Philadelphia, where he made the profession of tailor in his native country, and that occupation he followed in Philadelphia for about one year, at the end of which time he located in Reading, in which city he continued to follow his trade for a period of twenty-four years. He was also engaged in the hotel business at North and Walnut streets, and was highly successful. He died in April, 1904, aged seventy-nine years. His widow, who survives him, resides at No. 1041 Walnut street. They had these children: Louisa, of Reading; William, a cigar maker of Reading; John, a contractor and manufacturer of the city; George; Charles, proprietor of the 'Erie' in the Walnut street; Reading; and Matilda, m. to John Popp, of Reading.

George Albrecht attended the schools of Reading, his first employment being at Jackson's Rope Walk, whence he went to the Reading Hardware Company. He then became employed at the pipe mill, and for a time served on the police force of the city under Mayor Jacob Weidel. He learned the plastering trade, which he followed for one year in Philadelphia, then returning to Reading, where he engaged in business with J. E. Northeimer, the firm having since been known as Northeimer & Albrecht. Albrecht married (first) Miss Annie Boyer, who died, leaving one child, Annie, who died when thirteen months old. Mr. Albrecht's second marriage was to Jennie Williams, born in London, England, who came to this country when eight years old. Nine children, eight of whom are living, were born to this union: Annie, deceased; Catherine, of Reading; Emma; Josephine; Gertrude; George, and John. Mr. Albrecht is a Democrat in politics. He is a member of St. Paul's Church. He is connected fraternally with the Eagles Aerie No. 66, and the Rainbow Fire Company. Mr. Albrecht makes his home at No. 925 North Tenth street, Reading, and is very well known and highly esteemed in his community.

BEN. H. ZERR, a traveling salesman whose home is in Reading, was born in Lebanon, Pa., Oct. 22, 1860, and in paternal lines is of Holland ancestry.

(1) George Zerr, the pioneer ancestor of this family, was a native of Holland, and emigrated to America in 1750. The exact date of his settling in Hereford township, Berks county, is unknown, but in 1790 he was a taxable there, as was also his eldest son Jacob. He was a farmer by occupation, and owned a tract of 160 acres of good land. He died "old in years" in 1861, and was survived by his wife, Sophia. In his will, recorded in Book 4, page 37, he is called a yeoman. The executors of his will were his son Jacob and one Peter Fink. The children mentioned in the will were: Jacob; George—"my son shall take the name of George Zerr; Catherine m. Conrad Fink; Magdalena m. John Bickel; Mary m. Jacob Keifer.

(2) Jacob Zerr, eldest son of George, was born in Hereford township in 1760. He settled on a large farm in Amity township at an early date, and died there March 1, 1856, aged sixty-six. His wife Susanna, born in 1766, died Sept. 19, 1844, and both are buried in the graveyard.
at the Amityville church. His will, dated April 19, 1895, is on record in Will Book 5, page 487. He and his wife had the following children: Jacob; Elizabeth (Kerst); George; Peggy (Bickel); Henry; Lidda; and Samuel.

(III) Jacob Zerr, eldest son of Jacob, was born in Amityville, but in the first years of his life he settled in Spring township on a farm located near the Lancaster bridge. His last will, made on March 25th, and probated Dec. 6, 1865, soon after his death, is on record in Will Book 11, page 436. He was survived by his wife Mary, and the following children: William and Elizabeth. He left a large estate. At his death, William was bequeathed the tavern at the stand and tract of land in Amityville township consisting of forty-three acres, bounded by the Perkiomen turnpike, and the house in Spring township in which his father died, besides other land in Spring township.

(II) George Zerr, third child of Jacob, was a farmer at Geigertown, in Union township, where he died in 1872. In his will he valued his 130-acre farm at $6,000, and this he bequeathed to his son, Jacob G. By occupation George Zerr was a linen weaver. His will, made July 14, 1869, is recorded in Will Book 12, page 455. His children were: Jacob G.; Christina m. Elijah Geiger; Hannah m. James; and Mary m. Joseph Geiger.

(III) Henry Zerr, son of Jacob, was a farmer in Union township. He died in 1866, and is buried at Geigertown. He provided that his wife Elizabeth should remain on the farm as long as she lived. This farm was cultivated by his son Lafayette. To Henry and Elizabeth Zerr were born: Harriet; Elizabeth; Mary Ann; Georgine Lafayette (who had sons, Henry H. and George M.); Hannah; and Elizabeth.

(IV) Jacob G. Zerr, only son of George, was a prosperous farmer at Geigertown. His children were: Howard; Henry; Jacob L.; Elijah M., a prosperous farmer, prominent with the Berks County Industrial and Cultural Society and Farmers’ Union, whose three daughters, Sophie E., Eva A., and Sallie E., are all graduates of the Keystone State Normal School; Eliza; Mary Ann; Adaline H. and Susanna.

(III) Samuel Zerr, son of Jacob, is buried at Geigertown. He married Catharine Neida, born Sept. 10, 1805, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Neida, and she died Aug. 31, 1856, and is buried at Amityville. They had a son Samuel.

(IV) Samuel Zerr, son of Samuel and Catharine, was born in Amityville, where he lived until attaining his majority, a short time he lived in Pennsylvania. He then came to Reading, and was in the sand business for a number of years along the Schuylkill river, supplying the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company with sand. The sand bank eventually came into the hands of Augustus Hoff, of Reading. Mr. Zerr spent his later years at farming in Caernarvon township, and there died in the early part of 1860, and is buried at Geigertown. He was twice married. To his first marriage were born: Samuel; Augustus; Jacob; Caroline m. Augustus Mentz; and Catharine m. Jacob Armbrister. To his second wife was Catharine Krump, and to this union was born but one son, Samuel. Mrs. Catharine (Krum) Zerr died at the age of seventy-two years.

(V) Ben H. Zerr was less than a year old when his parents came to Reading, where the family has since lived. For a time the family home was where the Elks lodge is now, on Washington street. Mr. Zerr received his education in the public schools, and in 1879, when the Philomathean Society was organized he became one of the active members, and so continued as long as the society was in existence. This organization was a great factor in the city, and many of its members became noted in various walks of life. When but twelve years old, he occupied the position of bookkeeper in the Towing Eagle, selling the papers both in the city and on the different railroads through this section of the country. When he was twenty-one years of age he became a traveling salesman, and in 1882 he was one of the first to go out from Reading to sell hosiery and pants. His first experience, however, was in selling safes, afterward entering the employ of the J. G. Leinbach & Co., Woolen Mills, North Fourth street. In 1889 he conducted a cigar store in the “Hotel Penn” known as the “Art,” and noted in particular for its appointments in the selection of high grade spergues, and engravings. In 1907, with others, he engaged in the manufacture of hosiery, and in this he has continued to the present time.

Mr. Zerr is a thorough business man, and has a pleasing address. For several years he was active in the base ball world of Reading, and it was his idea to secure her’s Park and transform it into the present ideal ball park. In spite of his other interests Mr. Zerr returned to the road in 1895, and has since continued at that work, as a merchandise broker.

On Feb. 28, 1882, Mr. Zerr married Elenera Muthart, daughter of John and Leah (Hoyer) Muthart, of Reading, and their children were: Walter B., an electrician in New York City; Florence, who died in childhood; Ben. H., Jr., who died, Oct. 27, 1908, aged seventeen years and seven months; and Stewart R. The family have resided at No. 148 North Eleventh street, Reading, since 1888. Fraternally Mr. Zerr is a member of Chandlodge, No. 229, A. O. R.; N. P. O. Eliiow and several commercial societies. In his travels Mr. Zerr has seen many of the points of interest of the country.

(V) Samuel Zerr, son of Samuel and half-brother of Ben H., lived in Reading, where he was an upholsterer employed by the E. & R. Bank. He died in 1893, aged fifty-two years. By his wife, Susan Kissinger, he had two children: (1) Sallie died small. (2) Samuel, born June 27, 1869, was educated in the schools of Reading, graduated from the Pharmaceutical College, Philadelphia, in 1891, and has been a member of a number of pharmaceutical societies. He was the son of Jacob S. Peipher, his half-brother; he married (first) Katie Hoffman, who died leaving two children, Samuel E. and Nora E., and he m. (second) in 1901, Mary Helfrich, daughter of John Helfrich, a native of Germany, and they have three children, Georgine, Mary and Harold.

John M. GRILL, for a number of years a well known agriculturist of Cumru township, Berks county, now living retired at Shillington, Pa., was born Sept. 18, 1837, near Wernersville, Berks county, son of Joseph and Hannah (Kissinger) Grill.

Joseph Grill was born Aug. 7, 1806, in Cumru, near Spring township, and was a lifelong farmer. For seven years he lived on a sixteen-acre tract in Lower Heidelberg township, and later he removed to Spring township, where he owned a good farm on which he died in July, 1891. He also owned the old Grill homestead in Spring township, and was in comfortable circumstances. Mr. Grill married Hannah Matz, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Shoup) Matz, and to this union there were born children as follows: Joshua, m. to Mary Gring; Mary, living at Sinking Spring; John M.; Joseph, who died in childhood; Henry, m. to Sarah, 94 years of age, living in Sinking Spring; and Samuel, who died in childhood.

John M. Grill attended the pay schools and later the free schools of his day, and his entire life was spent in farming. He remained on the farm until 1890, in which year he removed to Shillington, and he has there resided to the present time. In 1856 he commenced farming for himself near the Green Tree in Cumru township, on his father-in-law’s farm, which he acquired after the latter’s death July 22, 1891, at the age of eighty-three years, eleven months, eleven days. In 1890 Mr. Grill built a large, two-story brick residence at the corner of Philadelphia and Lancaster avenues in Shillington, which the family occupied for many years. In 1899 Mr. and Mrs. Grill purchased the old Grill home farm near the Green Tree, and they continued to live there until her decease. Mr. and Mrs. Grill were able to see the sale of the old farm to a Mr. and Mrs. Henry own the old Grill homestead of 120 acres of land, which lies adjacent to the old Wheat Field mines in Spring township, and here blue iron ore is found in great quantity. At one time Mr. Grill was a prominent figure in local politics, and for a time was a Democratic auditor.
of Cumru township. He and his wife are members of Christ's Union Church, Cumru, of which he is a Reformed and she a Lutheran member. He has been a deacon and elder of the church for many years. In 1893 Mr. and Mrs. Grill attended the World's Fair at Chicago, and in 1901 the Exposition at Buffalo, and they have also traveled extensively in other parts of the country. They are well known in their vicinity, and have a large social circle.

On Nov. 21, 1867, Mr. Grill married Sarah Fritz, daughter of Martin, and Margaretta (Gring) Fritz, and granddaughter of Martin and Catherine (Rathke) Fritz. Mr. and Mrs. Grill have one daughter, whom they reared from her third year, Sallie A. Kohl, of Washington Leinbach, son of James and Catharine (Ahnrens), Reading, and they have one son, Leroy K. Mr. and Mrs. Leinbach reside with Mr. and Mrs. Grill.

HENRY HALLER was a tailor at Reading in 1765, and in 1775 was engaged as an innkeeper, by which time he had become a man of considerable social and political influence. In the formation of a regiment in Berks county, as its quota of the 4,500 men for the Flying Camp, he was chosen Colonel, but he did not accompany the regiment on its expedition to Long Island, and did not participate in that battle. Shortly afterward, however, he commanded another battalion which went into service in New Jersey. In the public actions for encouraging the Revolution, he took a prominent part, and next to Edward Biddle, George Nagel, Jacob Morgan, and Bodo O'Brien, was as prominent as any other of the Berks County leaders. He attended the Provincial Conference, in 1763, and served as a member of the Committee of Safety, the Committee on Attainder, and the Committee to Collect Arms, etc. He served as a member of the Assembly from 1766 to 1781. During the years 1776, 1779 and 1780, he was wagon-master of the Berks County, and during 1779 and 1780, wagon-master-general of the Continental Army. The first public office he held was that of coroner of the county in 1767.

After the Revolution, he moved up the Schuylkill Valley beyond the Blue Mountains, in Brunswick township, then still part of Berks county, and there he died in September, 1793, possessed of a very large estate. He had eight sons; Frederick, Jacob, Henry, John, William, Isaac, Benjamin and Lewis; and two daughters, Elizabeth (m. to William Mears), and Sarah (m. to Samuel Webb).

FRANK L. KREPS is a plumber at Reading, Pa., whose establishment is situated at No. 40 North Sixth Street. He was born April 30, 1865, at Salem, Ohio, son of Henry and Mary (O'Brien) Kreps.

Henry Kreps, father of Frank L., was also a native of Salem, Ohio, and there spent his entire life, and died in 1876, and about thirty-eight years. His trade was that of machinist, and he was for many years known as a skilled mechanic and successful business man. Henry Kreps was married to Mary O'Brien, who died at Norristown, Pa., in August, 1896, aged fifty-two years, and to them there were born children: William, engaged in the manufacture of silk at Paterson, N. J.; Frank L. Charles, in the plumbing business at Fort Washington, Pa.; Elwood, a carpenter of Chester, Pa.; Ida, wife of William Schoffer, of Norristown, Pa.; and Katie, m. to Frank Bechtel, of near Coatesville, Chester Co., Pennsylvania. Mrs. Mary (O'Brien) Kreps was a daughter of George O'Brien, elder of a number of Irish of New York City. He was a machinist and stationary engineer. His children were; Sallie, Elizabeth, Mary and John (who lived at Chester, Pa., and died in the early seventies). Frank L. Kreps attended the public schools of his native town, and when twelve years old went to Delaware, where he attended district schools, and afterwards to Philadelphia, where he learned the plumbing trade, following that occupation for about six years. At the expiration of this time he removed to Norristown, Pa., where for one year he was in the employ of the State Government, as a plumber, and the next year was spent at Phoenixville, where he was connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Mr. Kreps then spent six months at Pottstown, Pa., coming to Reading in 1892, where for thirteen years he was employed by the plumbing firm of Ed. Schull & Co. In 1907 Mr. Kreps engaged in business on his own account, opening an establishment at No. 108 North Eighth street, and later his present place, conveniently situated in the State-town district, No. 40 North Sixth street. He is a practical plumber, gas, hot water and steam-fitter.

Mr. Kreps was married to Maggie Garrison, of Reading, and their residence is situated at No. 108 North Eighth street. Fraternally Mr. Kreps is connected with Aerie No. 66, F. O. E., of Reading, and he is also a member of the Master Plumbers' Association.

WILLIAM W. SEITZINGER. In the early death of William W. Seitzinger, which occurred at his home Sept. 21, 1900, there was lost to the city of Reading one of its most enterprising young business men. Mr. Seitzinger was born in 1860, in Philadelphia, Pa., son of Jacob J. and Hannah (Collins) Seitzinger.

After leaving the common schools of his native city Mr. Seitzinger entered the University of Pennsylvania, from which he graduated, and in April, 1896, he took up civil engineering. Later he became associated with Mr. Bechtel and Seitzinger in charge of the management of Shale Brick Company, a prominent business concern, and in this capacity he was serving at the time of his death. He was an able business man, and was popular in business and fraternal circles. Mr. Seitzinger was a thirty-third degree Mason, a member of Philadelphia, A. A. O. N. M. S., and was also connected with the Temple and Berkshire Clubs. In religious belief he was a Lutheran, and attended Trinity Church of that faith, of which his widow is a member.

In 1889 Mr. Seitzinger married Miss Anna L. Barbey, the eldest daughter of John Barbey, a sketch of whose life will be found elsewhere.

CYRUS G. DERR, lawyer of Reading, was born July 18, 1848, at Lebanon, Lebanon Co., Pa., son of William M. Derr, a leading member until his death of the Lebanon Bar, at which he practised for forty years.

George Derr, his grandfather, was born in Berks county in 1800, moved to Reading when a young man, and there married. When his son William was three months old he removed with his family to Lebanon, Pa., where he became a prominent citizen. He became identified with the construction of the canal and the later parts of the middle division, extending from Myerstown to the Swatara. He served as chief burgess, was a trustee of Lebanon Seminary, and was active in church work, being one of the founders of Zion Lutheran Church, which he also served in an official capacity. He died in 1860.

The Derr family is of Irish extraction, and the immigrant ancestor spelled the name Derry, but the "y" was dropped in course of time. He settled near Monocacy, Berks Co., Pa., engaged in farming, and acquired considerable property.

William M. Derr was born in Reading, Pa., in 1837, and as above stated was three months old when the family moved to Lebanon. He received his early education in the public schools and in Lebanon Academy, and, choosing his life work, began the study of law. But in deference to his parents' wishes he took up medicine, at the Pennsylvania Medical College, Philadelphia, and before settling down to his first choice also studied theology and architecture. In the end he returned to law, and meantime he spent a couple of years in the Western States, being in fact first admitted to the Bar in Illinois. His experiences broadened him and quickened his perceptions. In 1858 he was admitted to the Lebanon county Bar, and there he practised law for thirty years until his death, May 31, 1897. He was foremost in many respects among the members of his profession, was long a member and for some time president of the Lebanon Bar Association, and at the time of his death was the oldest member of the Lebanon Bar. But his intellectual strength had never waned, and he was known to the last as a profound scholar. and learned legal adviser, a man of keen wit and eloquent speech, and he used his gifts for the benefit of his fellowmen as much as by own interest. He was solicited to become judges but declined. To an unusual degree he held the confidence of his clients and of the public, for he was known as a man who gave the best that was in him to his work and his patrons, and he was ever ready to espouse a cause for the right, his poorer clients receiving the same consideration that he gave to those of means. He was a member of St. John's Reformed Church and a liberal contributor to the Widows' Home and to other charitable institutions. In political sentiment he was a Republican and he wielded a strong influence in his party, though he had no political aspirations himself. During the Civil War he enlisted in the Union service, organizing and becoming the first Captain of Company A, 99th Regt. P. V. I., and served in the Virginia campaign.

On April 3, 1846, Mr. Derr married Caroline Hildebrand, born March 22, 1828, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Brubaker) Hildebrand, of Lancaster County, and two children were born of this union: Francis, who died young, and Cyrus G.

Cyrus G. Derr received his literary education in the public schools of Lebanon, and his legal preparation in the law department of the University of Pennsylvania. Though only a boy during the Civil War he enlisted, in 1861, in Company E, 26th Regiment, Emergency Troops, and was taken prisoner in a skirmish with Jenkins' Confederate Cavalry, near Gettysburg, a few days before the famous battle. He was later paroled. The next year, during the invasion in which Chambersburg was burned, he enlisted for one hundred days, serving in Company G of an independent organization, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Charles Stewart; this company was largely made up of students from the Pennsylvania Agricultural College in Centre county. As a precaution in case he was again captured, Mr. Derr's second enlistment was made under the name 'C. G. Hiester,' as he was then a Confederate court-martial would construe the parole of the preceding year as he did, limited to the period of his first term of service.

Mr. Derr was admitted to the Bar in August, 1869, and after practising a year with his father located in Lebanon. Though he married at an early age, he was so well impressed with the possibilities Reading offered him that he settled there permanently in 1872, since which time he has been in continuous practice. During his earlier years he gave much time to literary work, but of late, having legal responsibilities, he has devoted almost all other work, his large clientele including a number of important corporations, among them the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pennsylvania Trust Company. Like his father, he is a Republican in politics, but without official ambitions.

Mr. Derr was one of the founders and proprietors of the old Reading Review, an independent publication, which during the few years of its existence became noted for its fearless and aggressive policy. He was a regular contributor to its columns. He was a member and promoter of the Reading Lyceum and Reading Literary Society, and delivered lectures in Reading and other places upon Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel" and the "Oratory of St. Paul." His literary attainments are noteworthy.

On Nov. 30, 1870, Mr. Derr married Mary Virginia Weidman, daughter of Gen. John Weidman and sister of Maj. John Weidman, Lebanon. Mr. and Mrs. Derr have one child, Caroline Roberts, now the wife of John M. Archer, of Reading.

HIESTER H. MUHLENBERG, M. D., was born at Reading, Jan. 15, 1812, son of the distinguished Rev. Henry Muhlenberg, first President of the Lyceum and first Pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church of Reading, afterward member of Congress and Ambassador to Austria, and at the time of his death the candidate of the Democratic party for Governor of Pennsylvania. His mother was Rebecca Hiester, daughter of Gov. Joseph Hiester.

Mr. Muhlenberg gained his preliminary education under the instruction of Rev. John F. Grier, in the Reading Academy. In 1826 he entered the sophomore class of Dickinson College, Carlisle, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1829. Having chosen medicine as his profession, he began study in the office of Dr. Thomas Harris, a physician of excellent reputation in Philadelphia. For a year and a half he was a student at the University of Pennsylvania during the winter of 1831 and 1832, and was graduated from that institution with the class of 1832. Dr. Muhlenberg began practice in his native city and continued it for eight years. During this period and for some years following he took an active part in politics, and served in the state legislature. During the Civil war he remained a firm and consistent Democrat. During the Civil war he twice enlisted in the Pennsylvania State Volunteers—once before the battle at Antietam, and again after the battle of Gettysburg.

During the panic of 1837 the affairs of the Farmers Bank of Reading became involved, and the complete ruin of the bank seemed close at hand. The integrity, capacity and financial ability of Dr. Muhlenberg were so well known that he was placed temporarily in charge of the bank in order to restore its affairs to a sound and healthy condition. His management of its affairs was so successful that he was induced to give up his intention of resuming his practice of medicine and urged to accept the position of cashier of the Farmers Bank in March, 1842. From that time until his death he was annually re-elected, serving continuously in that position for a period of forty-four years. The high integrity and character of the bank preserved the bank from embarrassment during the panic of 1857, the financial troubles incident to the Civil war and the financial crisis of 1873. During all these periods of financial depression the Farmers Bank of Reading always maintained the highest reputation for great financial strength and for the soundest business management. The success and reputation of the bank in all these years was mainly due to the ability and high character of its cashier.

Dr. Muhlenberg was for ten years a member of council of the borough of Reading, and a member of the first council after the city incorporation in 1850. Prior to the Civil war he took great interest and active part in the volunteer military organizations of his own county. He entered a noted company, called the Washington Grays, as a private, and afterward became lieutenant. During the War of the Rebellion in the battle of Antietam he formed part of the force sent to that city to assist in quelling the riot.

Dr. Muhlenberg was one of the original trustees of the Charles Evans Cemetery Company, and for many years was the president of that corporation. He was a director and president of the Reading Water Company. He was always a public spirited and enterprising citizen, and his generosity was well-known. He favored and assisted the development of his native city by every proper means within his power.

Dr. Muhlenberg was twice married, first to Amelia Hendrich and second to Catherine S. Hunter, both of Reading, Pa. By the second marriage he had seven children. He became a member of the Lutheran Church in 1830, and was a member of the vestry of Trinity Church for many years. He died May 5, 1886, survived by seven children, six of whom are still living.

HENRY A. MUHLENBERG 2d was born at Reading, July 21, 1823, son of Henry Augustus and Rebecca (Hiester) Muhlenberg, the latter the daughter of Gov. Joseph Hiester. He gained his preliminary education under the direction of his father, and at the age of fourteen years entered Jefferson College, at Canonsburg, Pennsylvania. He remained there seven years, and which he became a member of the sophomore class at Dickinson College, at Carlisle, graduating from that institution in 1841. He was a close student, especially of the classics and history. From 1841 to 1844 he was engaged in the study of the law with Hon. J. Pringle. In 1844 he entered public life almost immediately. During his father's candidature for Governor, in 1844, he displayed marked ability as his private secretary, and conducted all his father's correspondence during the canvass. In 1846, when the Mexican war broke out, he raised a company of volunteers in Reading, and personally tendered their services to the Governor, but the complement of the Pennsylvania North Militia had already been filled the offer was declined. In the county convention of 1846, he and his brother Hiester, the president of that body, were mainly instrumental in causing the adoption of a resolution approving of the principles of the Constitution and demanding that, as it was passed by Democratic votes, it should receive a fair consideration from a Democratic Congress. He also delivered a speech in the same body on the Oregon question, in which he strongly favored the claims of the United States to all that district of country lying south of the parallel of 54 degrees 40 minutes. In 1847 and 1848 he was occupied in writing a "Life of General Peter Muhlenberg," of Revolutionary fame, which was published early in 1849, by Cary & Hart, Philadelphia, and was well received. It was dedicated to Jared Sparks, as a slight recognition of his services in elucidating our Revolutionary history.

In the fall of 1849 Mr. Muhlenberg was elected to the State Senate from Berks county, and served three years, 1850-52. He there acquired a reputation for integrity, eloquence and business ability. Shortly after taking his seat he delivered a speech on the subject of the act incorporating the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, which greatly influenced the Senate in its decision to pass the measure. During the second part of his senatorial career he was the Democratic candidate for Speaker, though the youngest member of that House, his competitor on the Whig side being Hon. John H. Walker, or "the young wolf," as he was called. Mr. Muhlenberg (of 1872-73). The Senate then contained sixteen Whigs, sixteen Democrats and one native American, and a majority of all who voted was required to elect. On the eighth ballot, and on the third day, when it was evident that no choice could be made, unless the Whig candidate should vote for himself, the Democratic candidate, together with Messrs. Packer and Guernsey, also Democrats, out of political courtesy, abstained from voting. Throughout the whole contest the two candidates respectively voted for Thomas Carson and William F. Pack er. As chairman of a select committee to which was referred the proposition of the Senate of November 23, 1851 treating of the care and preservation of the State archives, Mr. Muhlenberg reported a bill, which became a law, for the publication, at the expense of the State, of the records of the proprietary government and of all papers relating to the Revolutionary war down to 1783. He was greatly instrumental in securing the passage of an act making an appropriation to continue the geological survey of the State, conducted by Professor Rogers. He favored also the building of new railroads to develop the resources of the Commonwealth, though he was opposed to the State granting any direct aid to these objects. On the question of the Bank of Pennsylvania he was, in the words of Hon. C. R. Buckalew, "the bulwark of the treasury against the assaults of outside interested parties." He was outspoken in defense of a tariff of such amount and so levied as to protect the greatest interest of the nation, old and new. He was one of the earliest to see the necessity of the United States independent of any other country, a high, though not a prohibitory duty, should be imposed on that article.

In the county conventions, he, in connection with Judge Strong and other distinguished Democrats, demanded a modification of the tariff of 1846, in favor of the iron interest, in accordance with the views of Hon. Robert J. Walker, the author of that tariff—views expressed at the time of its passage. He was an earnest opponent of slavery, and considered it a "curse to that country in which its effects would not be an abomination to the most hardened man," and if his country should disagree with him in his opinion, he would not like it more that he did, nor did he ever wish to be thought the friend and advocate of the institution. In his devotion, however, to the Union, and in his desire to do away with all causes which might inflame one section of the country against the other, looking upon the compromise measures of 1850 as a solemn contract in his mouth also—"the Union the first and greatest of our national blessings, and to preserve it, nothing can or ought to be too precious. I go for the Union, the whole Union and nothing but the Union. It must be preserved, peaceably, if we can, forcibly if we must." No one who knew him intimately can doubt for a moment that had he lived until the crisis would have been foremost in the van of those Democrats who, in the hour of greatest danger, rushed to the rescue of their government and of their Union. At such a time he would not have been behind his brother Hiester, or his uncle, Dr. F. A. Muhlenberg, of Lancaster, in forming that party which, in their opinion, held the true Democratic doctrine, in that it advocated the greatest good to the greatest masses.

In July, 1852, Mr. Muhlenberg was nominated by acclamation the Democratic candidate for Congress in Berks county, and was elected the following October by a large majority. He left Reading late in November, 1853, for Washington, and was present at the opening of the XXXIVth Congress, but he appeared in that body only one day. He was stricken down by illness, and though everything was done for him that was possible, and it was believed at one time that he was materially improved, he died of a hemorrhage and congestion of the lungs. His remains were laid to rest in the Charles Evans cemetery at Reading.

He was a warm and true friend; no act of kindness was ever forgotten by him, and nothing within the limits of possibility he deemed too difficult when done in the cause of a friend. His fearlessness in all departments of life was one of the most marked traits of his character; he never shunned bearing the responsibility of any of his actions, he did what he considered his duty, no matter what the consequences might be. Above all, there was no thought of his own in all of his public life he was a man unswerving integrity and unblemished honor; he would do nothing, however great the inducements to the contrary, which could lower himself in his own esteem or in that of others. His standard was a very high one, and when he believed himself to be right no power on earth could divert him from the path which honor, good faith, good feeling and his own judgment pointed out. He possessed an ample fortune, from which he was ever ready to contribute to all objects, whether charitable, religious, political or literary, which deserved his support.

As a citizen of Reading, Mr. Muhlenberg was foremost in the advancement of the town. Of course, all projects which could benefit or increase the prosperity of his native place. Had he lived, he would have written his name on the historical records of his county, and would have impressed his character on her legislation; cut off untimely in the flower of his youth, and in the very maturity of his power, his loss was a great calamity to the Commonwealth.

Mr. Muhlenberg married, in November, 1847, his cousin, Annie H., daughter of the late Dr. F. A. Muhlenberg, of Lancaster, Pa. He had one child, Henry A. Muhlenberg 3d, who died in 1908.

FREDERICK W. NICOLLS, son of Gustavus A. Nicolls, was born in Reading, Feb. 7, 1870. He was educated by Edward Carroll, a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, who for many years conducted a successful preparatory school in Reading. He entered Harvard University in 1888, where he devoted himself principally to history and literature, and was also an editor of the “Harvard Advocate,” one of the oldest college publications in the country. He was also greatly interested in the game of chess and was a leader of the championship of the college for four years of his residence there. He graduated in 1892 with a magna cum laude degree. After graduation he returned to Reading, and began to study law in the office of his half-brother, Henry A. Muhlenberg, being admitted to the Bar of Berks county in November, 1893. While pursuing his legal studies he held for a number of years the chair of six lectures on ‘The Puritan Revolution in England,’ which lectures were delivered in Reading under the auspices of the “University Extension Society,” and were received with favor by the public and by the press. After his admission to the Bar, and while building up his practice, he continued to study the theory of the law with some assiduity, and though never attending a law school, he covered the greater part of the work taught in the three years course at Harvard, and also familiarized himself with other textbooks and authorities. In 1900 he was elected Solicitor of the Reading School District, held the office for a year, and was re-elected for two years. For a number of years he was the principal lawyer of the Taxpayers’ League, an organization formed for the protection of the public against municipal corruption and conducted a number of important public cases in this capacity. In March, 1908, he formed a law partnership with W. S. Fox & Sons, of Reading, and has since then been engaged in conducting the law practice of this firm, which is rapidly increasing in size and importance. Owing to the official duties of his partner, Mr. Nicolls handles almost all the court work of the firm, and is acquiring an experience which in addition to his thoroughness and fitness makes him a promising member of the most promising of the younger members of the Bar. In 1898 he was married to Minnie R. Taylor, by whom he has had four children, Gustavus A., Sarah T., Frederick W. and Anne H.

A. H. Nicolls is a woman who deserves mention, even in a work whose principal object is an account of the lives of men. She was the daughter of Dr. Frederick A. Muhlenberg, a well known physician of Lancaster, a granddaughter of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, founder of the Lutheran Church in America, and thus a member of that distinguished Muhlenberg family, prominently connected with the history of the nation, and active in the public life of the country. She was married in early life to her cousin Henry A. Muhlenberg 2d, who died while a member of the 54th Congress. Mrs. Muhlenberg was studious and cultivated, and as her second husband, G. A. Nicolls, was a man of thought, of information and of intellectual tastes, her associations, in connection with her natural quickness of perception and adaptability, made her a woman of understanding and liberal attainments.

Mrs. Nicolls was a woman of wide acquaintance and of strong character. In her youth she was remarkably beautiful, and even in later years retained a charm of manner and appearance which endeared her to a large circle of friends, and with her capacity and strength of character made her influence strongly felt in the community. She was a natural leader, not only on account of her birth and associations, but also by her abilities, her prepossessing address and her high character, and until the day of her death she kept up her social relations and delighted in the companionship of younger people. She was connected with the management of a number of charitable organizations during her life time and for some years was Regent of the Berks County Chapter of the American Red Cross. She was interested in the American Revolution, an organization which she aided not only with funds but also in supposing aristocratic tendencies, but because of the good it might accomplish in creating historical interest fostering national patriotism. She was the President of the Reading branch of the Needlework Guild of America, a charitable organization designed to assist the deserving poor with clothing, a directress of the “Home for Widows and Single Women,” and connected as a contributor with many other local charities. For almost thirty years she lived in a large brown-stone house at the northwest corner of Fourth and Walnut streets, and though for many years her health did not permit her to take active exercise, her face and figure were a familiar sight at the corner where she resided. She died January 14th, 1906, survived by two sons, Henry A. Muhlenberg 3d, and Frederick W. Nicolls.

GARRETT B. STEVENS, lawyer of Reading, is the head of a family of lawyers, as all his sons are practising attorneys. He was senior member of the former law firm of Stevens & Stevens, though not connected by the ties of consanguinity with his partner, W. Kerper Stevens, with whom he was associated from 1894, but who is now serving as Judge by appointment.

Benjamin Stevens, father of Garrett B. Stevens, was a farmer, and his father, Abraham Stevens, was a merchant. The first of the family in America came from Holland and held title to lands in Bucks county previous to the advent of the Penns in Pennsylvania. Benjamin Stevens married Elizabeth Barcalow, daughter of Garrett Barcalow, of Bucks county, and seven children were born of this union: Hogeland Stevens, at one time deputy sheriff of Bucks county, who died in 1898; Abraham, a farmer and store-keeper in Indiana; James Vansant, a merchant in Berks county; Melchior, a farmer and contractor of Ivyland, Bucks county; Dr. Elwood, of Fox Chase, Philadelphia; B. Frank, formerly of Hill & Stevens, contracting carpenters of Oak Lane, Philadelphia; and Garrett B. The father of this family died in 1895, aged eighty-seven years, and the mother in 1898.

Garrett B. Stevens is eminent among the members of his profession in Reading, both for his attainments and his success. He married, Nov. 9, 1876, Kate M. Zeller, daughter of John Zeller, deceased, of Reading, and five children were born to this union: Garrett, now of Cleveland, Ohio; Wallace, a graduate of Harvard and of the New York Law School, who after spending a year in the law office of Peckham, Warner & Strong was admitted in June, 1904, to practise law in the courts of New York; John B., a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, admitted to the Berks county Bar in 1902 and now associated with his father forming the firm of G. B. & J. B. Stevens; Elizabeth and Katharine.

Garrett Stevens was born in Reading, Dec. 19, 1877. He was graduated from the Reading high school in 1895, from Andover in 1896, from Yale in 1897, and from Dickinson law school in 1898. He then registered as a law student in the office of Stevens & Stevens, and was admitted to practice Dec. 20, 1899. On Sept. 4, 1901, Mr. Stevens m. Sarah S. Stayman, daughter of Joseph B. and Mary Stayman, of Carlisle, and the one son born to this union is Garrett Barcalow, named after his grandfather and mother-in-law. Mr. Stevens is a Mason. He is connected with the Presbyterian Church in Reading of which he is a Democrat. In 1902 he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Legislature from Reading and received a very handsome support.

John B. Stevens, son of Garrett B., was born Dec. 9, 1880, in the city of Reading, and there received his early training in the public schools of Reading, graduating from the high school in 1897. He then entered the University of Pennsylvania, and in 1901 received his diploma from that famous old school, immediately afterwards taking up the study of law in his father’s office. On Nov. 10, 1905, he was admitted to the Berks county Bar, and in 1908, was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar, and to the supreme court. Mr. Stevens is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity of the University. He is a Presbyterian in religion. He has taken considerable interest in politics as a member of the Democratic party, and has engaged in campaign work to some extent.
HENRY A. MULLENBERG 3d was born in Reading, Oct. 27, 1848. He was educated privately, and subsequently spent a year at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, which he left to enter Harvard University in 1868. At Harvard he was both popular and successful, and graduated with honors in history in the class of 1872. After a short European trip he began to study law in the office of George F. Baer, Esq., being admitted to the bar of Berks County in 1873. He then devoted himself to the practice of his profession, though he engaged more in office affairs and in the business side of law than in the active duties of court work. He was a director in the Farmers’ National Bank, the Reading Trust Company, the Mount Penn Gravity Railroad, and the Reading City Passenger Railroad Company, being for many years secretary and treasurer of the latter organization and one of its original members. His connection with these concerns brought him in touch with the important business interests of the community and naturally influenced him to allow law to yield to business.

He was at the time of his death a member of the city of Reading, a vestryman of Trinity Lutheran Church, a vestryman of the Valley Forge Park Commission, to which position he was appointed by two Governors of the State. He was a member of the Valley Forge Park Commission, a member of the Valley Forge Park Commission, to which position he was appointed by two Governors of the State. He was always a strong Republican, and spoke for and contributed to the party whenever such a course was necessary. In 1889 he was nominated for Congress on the Republican ticket, but, as the party was in a hopeless minority in the county, he failed of election. He was an omnivorous and indefatigable reader, being interested in everything from the lightest fiction to the longest history, and possessed a fine library which he used to its full extent. He was extremely generous, charitable both in action and in judgment, the soul of honor, and a Christian gentleman in the true sense of the word. He never married, but almost all his life lived with his mother, Annie H. Nicolls, to whom he was devotedly attached. In 1885 he and a youthful friend were saved only for forty months. On May 14, 1906, he was found dead in his library, sitting in his chair with an open book in his lap.

JOHN HENRY ZERR, former president of the Letter Carriers’ Association, and one of the best known mail carriers of the city of Reading, was born in this city May 11, 1870, son of Charles and Eliza (Bollman) Zerr. Charles Zerr was born in lower Berks county March 6, 1833, and died at Reading Feb. 4, 1907. He was reared by his grandfather Shirey. He was a blacksmith by trade, and for twenty-eight years worked for the Joint Rail & Reading & Reading Railway Company. For many years his place of residence had been at No. 1111 Spruce street. He married Eliza Bollman, daughter of John and Mary (Auman) Bollman, of Spring township, and she is now seventy-three years of age. Their children were: Charles, of Reading; Catherine, m. to John B. Gnaus, of Reading; Ida V.; Anna R., m. to W. W. Wetherhold; William R.; Howard G.; John H.; Margaret, m. to Grant Schultz; and Lillie M., m. to Jacob Schmehl.

John H. Zerr received his education in the public schools of Reading, and when eighteen years of age learned the upholsterer’s trade. He worked for several years as a teamster for the Reading & Reading Company. In 1893 he took a competitive examination for letter carrier, making a very high average, and in August of that same year was appointed to a position by Postmaster Capt. P. R. Stetson, a position he has since filled. He is a member of the Letter Carrier’s Association, of which he was president in 1904. He is a member of the Reading Chamber of Commerce, and of the Old men on the force and has a most creditable record, and is very popular among the government employees at the Reading postoffice.

He is a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection; members of court work and Knecht Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also a member of Reading Chamber, No. 26, Knights of Friendship.

On Oct. 6, 1901, Mr. Zerr married Clara E. Fair, daughter of George E. and Hannah E. (Bowman) Fair, of Reading, where Mr. Fair is identified with the Reading Railway, and has been for more than a quarter of a century. Her grandparents were Reuben D., and Mary (Schaffer) Fair, of Berks county. Mr. and Mrs. Zerr have no children.

FRANKLIN PIERCE LAUER, brewer at Reading since 1882, was born in Reading Nov. 2, 1853, the day on which Pierce was elected President of the United States. He received his preliminary education in the common schools, which he attended until 1866, when he and his brother were sent to Germany for their advanced education, and they have been there three years, spending two years in the institutions at Ludwigsburg and Stuttgart, Germany, and one year at Lausanne, Switzerland. He directed his studies more especially toward the scientific manufacture of beer, porter and ale for the purpose of qualifying himself to take charge of his father’s breweries upon his return home. While at Lausanne he showed great proficiency in music, and though still a boy the vestry of the French Lutheran Church elected him as the organist, which position he filled in a very satisfactory manner during his sojourn at that place.

Upon returning home his father placed him in charge of the two breweries as brewmaster and he displayed great skill in the production of malt liquors of a superior character. He discharged the duties of this responsible position with increasing success for twelve years, until 1883, when his father retired, and he organized the Lauer Brewing Company, of which he became the manager and principal shareholder. Since then, covering a period of twenty-six years, he has directed the affairs of the company in a most successful manner, bringing its productions to a high state of perfection and purity (as evidenced by the analysis of the State authorities), and giving them a popularity equal to that of any others in Pennsylvania. It has been his constant endeavor to extend the company’s operations to all the surrounding counties, and to numerous distant places, the large shipments being made on the railroad in improved refrigerating cars.

Mr. Lauer’s responsibilities at the head of his company have kept him so closely confined that he could not devote any time to political or social affairs. He, however, has been a liberal contributor to various public causes; and he has assisted in organizing several financial institutions at Reading, and participated in their management as a director; the Schuylkill Valley Bank since 1890; the Colonial Trust Company since 1890; and various other institutions. His only relaxation for some years has been an annual vacation of several weeks with his family to Pike county, where he enjoys the privileges of membership in the Porter’s Lake Hunting and Fishing Club, which owns several thousand acres of timber land on the top of the Allegheny Mountains, and at which a 200 feet above the level of the sea. In August, 1901, he made an extended tour of three months through the principal countries of Europe.

In 1874 Mr. Lauer married Amelia Dorah Heberle (daughter of William Heberle), by whom he had six children; Florence, who married W. Y. Lands; Carl Frederick; and Carl Franklin, who were all born in Reading. In 1901 he was elected to the board of directors of the Reading Company, and was re-elected in 1905. His only relaxation for some years has been an annual vacation of several weeks with his family to Pike county, where he enjoys the privileges of membership in the Porter’s Lake Hunting and Fishing Club, which owns several thousand acres of timber land on the top of the Allegheny Mountains, and at which a 200 feet above the level of the sea. In August, 1901, he made an extended tour of three months through the principal countries of Europe.

FREDERICK LAUER, father of Franklin Pierce Lauer, was the principal brewer at Reading for nearly fifty years from 1835 to 1885. He was born in the town of Gleiswiler, Rheinisch-Bavaria, Oct. 14, 1810, and whilst a boy accompanied his father to America in 1833. He was educated in pay schools at Womesdorf and Reading, and while growing to manhood learned the business of brewing under the tutelage of his father, who was an expert brewer; and he assisted his father until 1835, when he and his brother George became the owners of the plant. The brothers continued as partners for several years, when his brother George retired and removed to Pottsville, where he carried on the same business. The younger brother, as the sole owner, enlarged the brewery and extended the business gradually until he came to send his beer, porter and ale throughout the county and into the adjoining counties. The brewery was situated on the east side of North Street between Third and Fourth streets, and on North Third street, beyond Walnut, in 1866; also constructing a large vault in a solid bed of limestone, and sinking an artesian well to the depth of 2,000 feet, which for many years were considered great curiosities at Reading, and the well was then one of the few deep wells in the United States. He was engaged in the business until shortly before his decease. He died in 1853, at the age of seventy-three years. He was married to Mary Reiff Guldin, daughter of Peter Guldin, in 1838, and they had two sons, George Frederick and Franklin Pierce. The mother died in October, 1891.

Frederick Lauer was a public-spirited man and labored assiduously for the development and prosperity of Reading. He co-operated heartily in the advancement of the place from a borough into a city in 1847; and under the amended charter of 1864 he represented the Fifth ward in the select council from 1865 to 1871, serving as president of that body in 1867. He was a devoted adherent of the Democratic party, and active in behalf of its success for many years. He represented the Berks district as a delegate to the National Convention which met at Charleston, S. C., in 1860, and notwithstanding the platform and the defeat of the party nominee for President, when the Civil war broke out, in 1861, he espoused the cause of the Union in a most earnest and patriotic manner. He assisted materially in organizing the Berks County Agricultural Society in 1852, and officiated as president for a number of years; also in projecting the construction of the railroad from Reading to Lancaster and Columbia, serving as a director for twenty years until his decease; and by special appointment of the governor he served for several years as trustee of the Keystone State Normal School. He gave liberal support to local charities by aiding the Dispensary and the Relief Society.

LAUER MONUMENT.—Mr. Lauer's great experience and success in the brewing business brought him into national prominence before the brewers of the United States, and he was made president of the Blacksmiths' Temperance Society. He represented the Berks County Agricultural Society upon its organization in 1870, which evidences his great popularity and influence at that time; and in May, 1885, the association erected a fine bronze statue to his memory on Penn Common, near Perkiomen avenue, on a small plot of ground set apart and dedicated by the city councils, the first public honor of the kind in the community. The inscriptions on the four sides of the base are as follows:

(North Side)

"The city of Reading commemorates the public and private virtues of an honored citizen by the grant of this location. Erected in 1885, in the year of the Twentieth-anniversary Celebration of the United States Brewers' Association."

(South Side)

"To Frederick Lauer of Reading. The United States Brewers' Association of which he was the first president has erected this monument in grateful remembrance of his unselfish labor for the welfare of the brewing trade in this country."

(East Side)

"His zeal sprang from his firm conviction that in striving to advance the brewing trade he was working for the cause of national temperance."

(West Side)

"Let his example tell the brewers of this country to maintain good fellowship, to preserve their association, and to defend their rights."

GEORGE LAUER. The grandfather of Franklin P. Lauer was George Lauer, of Rhenish Bavaria, Germany, whose home (including large vineyards) was situated at Gleisweiler, three miles from Landau. His property was sacrificed during the Napoleonic invasions of the country anterior to 1814. He carried on the manufacture of wine and beer until 1823, when he emigrated to America. Upon landing at Baltimore, Md., he was poor, having just had enough money to pay the passage across the ocean for himself and family. The journey was made in a sailing vessel and acquired three months later accidentally a commission to Reading, Berks county, where a married daughter, Mrs. Sprenger, resided; and shortly afterward he settled at Womelsdorf and started the business of manufacturing beer in limited quantities. He carried on the business for three years and then located at Reading, where he established a small brewery on Chestnut street near Third, on a rented lot (which he afterward purchased from Marks John Biddle, the attorney for the Penns, in 1833), similar to the brewery at Womelsdorf, which had a capacity of five barrels, and was soon increased to ten barrels on account of the increasing demand for his product. There were other breweries at Reading at this time, but the product was of a different character. In 1831 he added the manufacture of porter and ale; and he carried on the enlarged plant until 1835, when his two sons, George and Frederick, became his successors. He married Maria Catharine Fox, of Boechingen, in Rhenish Bavaria, and by her he had nine children: Catharine, who married a Mr. Baker and remained in Germany; Amalia, who married John Abraham Sprenger, and had emigrated to Pennsylvania before her parents, settling at Reading; Christina, who married John Borrelli; Susanna and Barbara, who remained unmarried, and who joined the "Separatists," living with this religious society in New York for some years and then in Iowa, where they died; Mary, who married John Yost, of Womelsdorf; George, who married Anna Wilhelmina Ehlers; Frederick, who is mentioned above; and Eva, who married Michael Rudi- sill. The father of these children died in May, 1845, aged seventy-six years, and the mother in July following, aged seventy-three years.

GULDIN GENEALOGY. The grandfather of Franklin P. Lauer on his mother's side was Peter Guldin, a farmer of Oley township, near Friedensburg. He was born in 1782 and died in 1827. Peter Guldin was a son of Daniel, also a farmer of Oley; Daniel was a son of John John Guldin, who emigrated to America with his father while yet a boy, and settled in Oley in 1719; and Samuel was a son of Samuel K. Guldin, a highly educated and distinguished minister, who was born in Switzerland in 1664, emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1710, where he became the spiritual forerunner in the establishment of the Reformed Church, and served as a minister very successfully until his decease in 1745, at the age of eighty-one years. He is mentioned with distinction in Good's "History of the Reformed Church in the United States"; also in Miller's "Early History of the Reformed Church in Pennsylvania."
