This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Acknowledgment is due to the following persons who have given assistance in the preparation of this work, viz: Mr. S. W. Bradford, Mr. J. T. C. Hopkins, Mr. Charles W. Michael, Mr. P. H. Rutledge, Mr. J. M. Streett, Mr. F. E. Gorrell, Rev. Dr. Wm. F. Brand, Capt. C. A. Conner, the Bel Air Times, Mr. E. M. Allen, Mr. Thomas E. Bond, Rev. Father J. A. Frederick, Mr. Nathan Grafton, Mr. A. H. Hull, Mr. George Y. Maynadier, and others.

Numerous quotations are made from Scharff's and Bozman's histories of Maryland, and from Johnston's History of Cecil County. In many cases information could not be obtained for a proper narrative. For instance, the War Department at Washington will not permit copies of their records to be made, and for this reason, no full roster of Colonel Smith's regiment or Colonel John Streett's command in the war of 1812, could be given. The account of the old houses is very fragmentary and incomplete, as the records throw no light on them and tradition is meagre and always unreliable.

The sketch of Spesutie church is taken from the pamphlet history by Rev. S. W. Crampton; that of Bethel, from the historical paper by Rev. Andrew B.
Cross; that of Cokesbury, from the article of Dr. Bernard C. Steiner, and the Churchville Presbyterian church from the history of Rev. W. T. L. Keiffer Father Frederick, of St. Ignatious church, Hickory, kindly furnished the data for the chapter on the Catholics of Harford.

Mr. Nathan Grafton assisted in the sketch of the Harford Baptist church. For the chapter on The Friends in Harford, I am indebted to Mr. A. H. Hull.

Although this work was intended to be brought only through the war of 1812, some of the subjects are carried further. In the collection of the data, in many instances, the information came down to this period, and having the material on hand, the whole is published. This is the case with the lists of county officials, and in the sketches of some of the churches.

If this volume should be acceptable to the public, the author may at some future day publish a second volume, bringing the narrative down to the present time. The illustrations were furnished by Mr. Wm. G. Hooker, of Abingdon.
INTRODUCTION

There has never been published a history of Harford county. Short sketches of particular events have been occasionally printed, but for the most part they have been lost in obscurity, and thus far no one has found it convenient to put the available material into book form. My purpose is to gather some of the earlier records into collective shape so that they may be accessible without an examination into original materials. As this is the pioneer work in this direction, the usual errors of a first publication are to be expected. It is to be hoped that these errors are not too numerous; at all events, an honest and conscientious effort has been made, at the expense of considerable time and labor, to render an accurate account of the doings of our forefathers in the early days, so far as it has occurred to me they would prove interesting. Numerous references will be made to the histories of Maryland heretofore published, but the reader will not be burdened with much of the general history of the State, except so far as it may directly concern the people of Harford county. Although the chronicles of this county are modest and unassuming, there are many things in the lives of our ancestors of which their descendants may be justly proud.
While it does not seem to me that any county is sufficiently pretentious for a very elaborate work on its history, or much effort at literary effect, yet in this day of awakening historical interest, Harford is entitled to have drawn, if only in a slight degree, the veil which has enveloped the past, so that the example of her earlier sons may be a guide and inspiration for the present and the future.

THE FIRST VIEW.

SMITH COMES TO THE SUSQUEHANNA FROM VIRGINIA—MAPS THE SHORE AND GIVES ACCOUNT OF THE INDIANS—GIANT INDIAN SEEN NEAR STAFFORD—POOL'S ISLAND—SMITH'S FALLS—CLIMATE—WILLOWBY, OR BUSH RIVER—CLAYBORNE—PALMER'S ISLAND—COLONEL NATHANIEL UTIE—TREATY WITH INDIANS—HARFORD A DISTRICT OF BALTIMORE COUNTY.

Harford was not organized into a county until the year 1774, in accordance with the act of the Legislature which had been passed the year before. At that time the present territory of the county was fairly well settled; the population, including blacks, amounted to thirteen thousand people; roads had been laid out, bridges made, churches built and our progenitors lived in a peaceful and well-governed section as citizens of Baltimore county. There are a number of buildings now standing that were constructed long before the county was organized, and there were many occurrences of interest that happened prior to the time the territory had its present name. The county of Baltimore, comprising also the land contained within the present limits of Harford, was formed in 1659, and the proclamation of June 6, 1674, declared that its southern boundaries should be the "south side of the Patapscro river, and from the highest plantations on that side of the river due south two miles into the woods." This also included Cecil county, which was almost immediately (1674) separately organized and its boundaries given as extending "from the mouth of the Susquehanna river down the eastern side of the bay to Swan Point, thence to Hell Point, and so up Chester river to the head thereof," which latter bounds were somewhat changed by the act of 1706, which declared that Cecil county should contain all the lands on the north side of the Sassafras River and Kent county. So it will be seen that both Harford and Cecil counties were formerly a part of Baltimore.

The boundaries, organization and first establishment of the government for Harford as a county in 1773-4 will be given in detail in a later part of this work. But before coming to that point, a sketch of the doings of the people who lived in the present limits of Harford in colonial days, and brought the land from a wilderness to a prosperous community, during the one hundred and sixty-five years from its discovery in 1608 by Capt. John Smith, to 1774, the date of its formation, cannot fail to prove interesting to all who care for Harford history.

Discovery and First Description.

The first white man to visit the upper part of Chesaapeake bay and Harford county and make a map of the country, was Capt. John Smith, who made two voyages in an open boat from Jamestown in Virginia. This was the same Captain Smith who was rescued by Pocahontas in the romantic story related in all the histories of Virginia. Captain Smith had become dissatisfied with the dissensions in the Virginia colony and determined to make a voyage of discovery further up the bay. On his first expedition, which lasted nineteen days, he did not journey further than the Patapsco, which he called the river Bolus, but on the 24th of July, 1608, he set forth from Jamestown with twelve men to make additional discoveries. The following is from the account of Smith's expedition on which he came to the upper part of the bay and Harford county:

The twenty-fourth of July, Captaine Smith set forward to finish the discovery with twelve men; their names were Nathaniel Powell, Thomas Momford, Richard Featherstone, Michell Sicklemore, James Bourne, Anthony Bagnell, Chir. Gentle-men.

The wind being contrary caused our stay two or three days at Kecoughtan (now called Hampton, in Virginia); the king feasted us with much mirth, his people were persuaded we went purposely to be revenged of the Massawomeks. In the evening we fired a few rackets, which flying in the ayre so terrified the poor savages, they supposed nothing impossible we attempted; and desired to assist us. The first night we anchored at Stingray Isle. The next day we crossed Patawomeks river and hastened to the river Bolus. We went not much further before we might see the bay divide into two heads, and arriving there we found it divided into four, all of which we searched so far as we might sayle them. Two of them we found inhabited, but in crossing the bay we encountered seven or eight canowes full of Massawomeks, we seeing them prepare to assault us, left our oars and made way with our sayle to encounter them, yet we were but few with our captaine that could stand, for within two days after we left Kecoughtan, the rest (being all of the last supply) were sick almost to death, until they were seasoned to the country. Having shut them under our Tarpawling, we put their hats upon sticks by the barge's side, and betwixt two hats a man with two peeces, to make us seem many, and so we think the Indians supposed these hats to be men, for they fled with all possible speed to the shore, and there stayed, staring at the sayling of our barge until we anchored right against them. Long it was ere we could draw them to come unto us. At last they sent two of their company unarmed in a canow, the rest all followed to second them if need required. These two each being presented with a bell, brought aboard all their fellows; presenting our captain with venison, bear's flesh, fish, bowes, arows, clubs, targets and bear skins. We understood them nothing at all, but by signs, whereby they signified unto us they had been at war with the Tockwoghes, the which they confirmed by shewing us their green wounds, but the night parting us, we imagined they appointed the next morning to meet, but after that we never saw them.

Entering the river Tocwhogh (Sassafras river, in Cecil county) the salvages all armed, in a fleete of boats, after their barbarous manner, round environed us; so it chanced one of them could speake the language of Powhatan, who perswaded the rest to friendly parley. But when they saw us furnished with the Massawomeks' weapons, and we faining the invention of Kecoughtan, to have taken them per force; they conducted to us their pallizadoed towne, mantled with the barks of trees with scaffolds like mounts, brested about with brests very formally. Their men, women and children, with dances, songs, fruits, furres, and what they had, kindly welcomed us, spreading mats for us to sit on, stretching their best abilities to express their loves.

Many hatchets, knives, peeces of iron and brasse, we saw amongst them, which they reported to have from the Sasquesahanocks, a mightie people and mortall enemies with the Massawomeks. The Sasquesahanocks inhabit upon the chiefe spring of these four branches of the baye's head, two days journey higher than our barge could passe for rocks, yet we prevailed with the interpreter to take with him another interpreter, to persuad[e] the Sasquesahanocks to come visit us, for their language are different. Three or four dayes we expected their retur[n]e, then sixty of those gyant-like people came down with presents of venison, tobacco pipes three foot in length, baskets, targets, bowes and awroves. Five of their chiefe Werowances came aboard us boldly to cross the bay for Tockwghogh, leaving their men and canowes; the wind being so high they durst not passe.

Our order was daily to haue prayer, with a psalme, at which solemnitie the poore salvages much wondered, our prayers being done awhile they were busied with a consultation till they had contrived their business. Then they began in a most passionate manner to hold up their hands to the sunne, with a most fearful song, then embracing our captaine, they began to adore him in a like manner; though he rebuked them, yet they proceeded till their song was finished: which done with a most strange furious action and a hellish voyce; began an oration of their loues; that ended with a great painted beares skin they covered him: then one read with a great chayne of white beads, weighing six or seaven pounds hung it about his necke the others had 18 mantels made of diuers sorts of skinnes sowed together; all these with many other toyes they laid at his feete, stroking their ceremonious hands about his necke for his creation to be their governour and protector, promising their ayed, victualls, or what they had to be his if he would stay with them, to revenge and defend them of the Massawomeks. But we left them at Tockwghogh, sorrowing for our departure, yet we promised the next yeare againe to visit them. Many descriptions and discourses they made us of Atquanchack, Massawomek and other people, signifying they inhabit upon a great water beyond the mountains, which we understood to be some great lake, or the river of Canada: and from the French to have their hatchets and commodities by trade. These know no more of the territories of Powhatan than his name, and he as little of them, but the Aquanachucks are on the ocean's sea.

The highest mountain we saw northward we called Peregrines mount (Gray's Hill) and a rocky river, where the Massawomeks went up, Willowbyes river (Bush river) in honor of the town our captaine was born in; and that honorable house the Lord Willowby, his most honored good friend. The Sasquesahanocks was called Smith's falles; the next point to Tockwhogh, Pising's poynct; the next poyn Bourne. Powell's (Pool's) and Smal's poynct is by the river Bolus; and the little bay at the head—Profit's poole; Watkins, Reads and Mumfords poyncts are on each side Limbo; Ward, Cantrell and Sicklemore, betwixt Patawomek and Pamunkee, after the names of the discoverers. In all those places and the further we came up the rivers we cut in trees as many crosses as we could, and in many places crosses of brasse to signifie to any, Englishmen had been there.

Thus having sought all the rivers and inlets worth noting, we returned to discover the river of Pawtuxant, these people we found very tractable, and more civil than any, and we promised them, as also the Patawomeks, to revenge them of the Massawomeks, but our purposes were crossed.

The explorer speaks of going up the Susquehanna several miles and coming to a stream flowing from the northwest. It is possible that Smith referred to Deer Creek as the small stream, and that he went ashore where Stafford now is, and ascended Deer Creek several miles. In this section lived the Indians of such unusual size, the calf of the leg of one of them measuring twenty-seven inches. Bozman thinks the creek here referred to is Principio’s Creek in Cecil county, but from the direction indicated, it seems to me as likely to have been Deer Creek.

Thirtie leagues northward is a river not inhabited, yet navigable: for the red clay resembling bole armo niack we called it bolus. At the end of the bay where it is 6 or 7 myles in breadth, it divides itselfe into 4 branches, the best commeth northwest from among the mountains, but though canows may go a day's journey or two up it, we could not get two miles up with our boat for rockes. Upon it is seated the Sasquesahanocks, near it, north and by west runneth a creeke a myle and a halfe: at the head whereof the Ebbe left us on shore, where we found many trees cut with hatchets. The next tide keeping the shore to seek for some salvages; (for within thirtie leagues sayling we saw not any, being a barren country,) we went up another small river like a creeke, 6 or 7 myle. From thence returning we met 7 canows of the Massawomeks, with whom we had conference by signes, for we understood one another scarce a word; the next day we discovered the small river and people of Tockwhogh trending eastward.

Having lost our grapnell among the rocks of the Sasque-sahannocks, we were then near 200 myles from home and our barge about two tuns, and had in it but twelve men to performe this discovery, wherein we laid about 12 weeks upon those great waters in those unknowne countries, having nothing but a little meale, oatmeale, and water to feed us, and scarce halfe sufficient of that for halfe that time, but what provision we got among the salvages, and such roots and fish as we caught by accident, and God's direction; nor had we a mariner nor any hand skill to trim the sayles but two saylers and myselfe, the rest being gentlmen or them as were ignorant in such toil and labor. Yet necessitie in a shorte time by good words and examples, made them doe that which caused them ever after to fear no colours. What I did with this small meanes I leave to the reader to judge and the mappe I made of the country, which is but a small matter in regard of the magnitude thereof. But to proceed, 60 of these Sasquesahanocks came to us with skins, bowes, arrowes, targets, beads, swords and tobacco pipes for presents. Such great and well proportioned men are seldom seene, for they seemed like giants to the English, yea, and to the neighbors, yet seemed of an honest and simple disposition, with much adoe restrained from adoring us as Gods. These are the strangest people of all these countries, both in language and attire; for their language it may well become their proportions, sounding from them as a voyce in a vault. Their attire is the skinnes of beares, and wolves, some have cossacks made of beares heads and skinnes, that a man's head goes through the skinnes neck, and the eares of the bear fastened to his shoulders the nose and teeth hanging down his breast, another beares face split behind him, and at the end of the nose hung a pawe, the halfe sleeves coming to the elbowes were the necks of beares, and the armes through the mouth with pawes hanging at their noses. One had the head of a wolfe hanging in a chaine for a jewell, his tobacco pipe three quarter of a yard long, prettily carved with a bird, a deare, or some such devise at great the end, sufficient to beat out ones braines; with bowes, arows and clubs, suitable to their greatnesse. These are scarce known to Powhatan. They can make neare six hundred able men, and are pallisadoed in their townes to defend them from the Massawomeks, their mortall enemies. Five of their chiefes Werowances came aboard us and crossed the bay in their barge. The picture of the greatest of the them is signified in the mappe. The calfe of whose leg was three quarters of a yard about, and all the rest of his limbs so answerable to that proportion that he seemed the goodliest man we ever beheld. His hayre, the one side was long, the other shore close with a ridge over his crown like a cockes combe. His arrows were five quarters long, headed with the splinters of a white crystal like stone, in forme of a heart, an inch broad and an inch and a halfe long, or more. These he wore in a woolues skinne at his back for his quiver, his bow in the one hand and his clubbe in the other as is described.

On the east side of the bay is the river Tockwhogh, and upon it a people that can make 100 men, seated some seaven myles within the river: where they have a fort very well pallisadoed and mantelled with barkes of trees. Next them is Ozinies with sixty men. More to the south of that east side of the bay, the river Rapahanock, neere unto which is the river Kuscarawaokeck. Upon which is seated a people with 200 men. After that is the river Tanto Wighcomoco, and on it a people with 100 men. The people of these rivers are of little stature, of another language from the rest and very rude. But they are on the river Acohanoock with 40 men, and they of Accomac 80 men doth equalize any of the territories of Powhatan, and speake his language, who over all these doth rule as king.

Southward we went to some parts of Chowanock and the Mangoags to search for them left by Mr. White. Amongst those people are thus many severall nations of sundry languages, that environ Powhatans territories. The Chownanocks, the Mangoags, the Atquanachukes, the Tockwhogs, the Susquesanocks, the Powhatans, the Monacans, the Mannahokes, the Massawomeks, and the Kuvearawaoocks. All these not any one understandeth another but by interpreters.*

Smith made a fairly accurate map of the head waters of the bay, the islands and adjacent shores, and called the river now known as Bush river, which lies wholly in Harford county, "Willowby's river," in honor of the town in which he was born in England. The bay shore of Harford county, starting with Pool's Island, then coming to the mouth of Bush river, Abbey Island Point, along the shore to Taylor's Island at the mouth of Rumney Creek, then along by Spesutie Island past Oakington to Havre de Grace, is beautiful at all times and particularly so in summer, and no wonder Smith said that "heaven and earth seemed never to have agreed better to frame a place for man's commodious and delightful habitation."

The island now called "Pool's," belonging to Harford county and lying in the bay off the Harford shore, between the mouths of Bush and the Gunpowder rivers, was named by Captain Smith "Powell's Island," after Nathaniel Powell, one of his party on the voyage, and it is supposed the original name has been preserved, only that Powell's has in the three centuries since its discovery developed into "Pool's," by which latter name the island is now known. The name of "Smith's Falls" in the Susquehanna, is still preserved, this designation having been given them on the same expedition.

*Scharf's History of Maryland.
As to the climate of Maryland, Smith says:

The sommer is hot as in Spaine; the winter cold as in France or England. The heat of sommer is in June, July and August, but commonly the coole breeaes asswage the vehe-mency of the heat. The chiefe of winter is halfe December, January and halfe March. The cold is extreme sharpe, but here the proverb is true, that no extreme long continueth.*

Captain Smith, as above stated, found a race of Indians calling themselves the "Susquehannocks," inhab-itng the country now comprising Harford and Cecif counties, and on Willowby, or Bush, river, a tribe he called Massawomeks, who were at war with and in great fear of the Susquehannocks, and who appear later to have been subdued and absorbed by the latter, as at a later date, in a treaty between the settlers and the Susquehannocks, that tribe asserted title to the land from the mouth of the Susquehanna to the Patuxent.

The Susquehannocks belonged to the famous Iroquois, or Five Nations tribe of Indians, the seat of which tribe was further north in the States of Pennsylvania and New York. The Massawomeks, which was the name of the other tribe inhabiting Maryland at the time, probably belonged to the same general stock, though the two tribes were contending with each other at the time of the coming of Smith and his party. Massawomeks is said to be another name for the famous Mohawk tribe of Indians, whose seat was fur-ther to the north.

It is certain that Indians occupied and hunted over the entire territory of Harford, for there is scarcely a farmhouse in the county which has failed to preserve Indian arrow points and stone axes found on the place.

*Schart's History. Bozman.
and in some sections of the county these are to be found in great abundance.

The first settlement at the head of the bay is supposed to have been made by Edward Palmer, a cultivated Englishman, on Palmer's, or Watson's Island, at the mouth of the Susquehanna. Palmer's Island is in Cecil, but it lies between the two counties, and it may be assumed that the settlers there extended over into Harford, a few hundred yards away. The date of this settlement is uncertain, but Neal, the historian, states that the letters of John Pory, secretary of the Virginia Company, which bear date previous to Clayborne's settlement on Kent Island, say that he and others had made discovery in the great bay northward, "where we left very happily settled nearly a hundred Englishmen, with a hope of good trade in furs."

When Palmer's Island was taken possession of in 1637 by Lord Baltimore's agents, four servants were found and some books, indicating that Palmer himself had resided there. In a petition to the King of England by Capt. William Clayborne, protesting against interference by Lord Baltimore's people who came over in the "Ark" and the "Dove" in 1633, it is declared that the petitioner, previous to the coming of the Calverts, had discovered and settled a plantation and factory upon a small island in the mouth of the Susquehanna river. The petitioner refers to the years 1627-8-9, so it is certain white men were familiar with the shore of the Susquehanna at that time.*

Clayborne was for many years a thorn to the Maryland colonists, and the history of the colony contains many incidents of their clashing and contention. Lord

*Johnston's History of Cecil County.
Baltimore had great difficulty in maintaining his position, because the country contained within the limits of his grant was claimed by both Virginia and Pennsylvania, and Clayborne took advantage of Virginia's claim to make a great deal of trouble.

In 1652 a treaty was made where Annapolis now stands, between the Susquesahanocks and the English, and then and there the present territory of Harford was rightfully acquired from its lawful owners. This treaty was signed by Richard Bennet, Edward Lloyd, Thomas Marsh, William Fuller and Leonard Strong, commissioners on the part of the English. About five miles below the city of Havre de Grace, and belonging to Harford county, lies Spesutie Island, its name being derived from Col. Nathaniel Utie, its first owner.

The man for whom the Island of Spesutie and the church at Perryman's takes its name was one of the pioneers in the settlement at the head of the bay, and was a very prominent man in his day. It is probable that Colonel Utie made his settlement on Spesutie Island soon after the Indian treaty of 1652, although the exact date of his coming is unknown. The word Spesutie means Utie's Hope. It is also probable that Nathaniel Utie was a Virginian and a relative of John Utie, who was prominent in the affairs of that colony from 1623 until 1635.

In the year 1634, John Utie, with ten others, presented a petition to the King of England with reference to affairs in Virginia. Although at that time he was a member of the Council of Virginia, his property was afterwards confiscated on account of political troubles. The records state that on May 6th, 1658, he was councillor. Then he was licensed to carry on trade for beaver and other furs with the Indians in the province.

He was made a councilor on account of "the great ability and affectionate service done in the assembly by him." His license gave him authority to arrest all persons in his section trading with the Indians without license. On July 12, 1658, Nathaniel Utie was appointed captain of all the forces between the "coves of the Patuxent river and the Seven Mountains." His own company was to be made up of all the forces from the source of the Seven river to the mountains above named. These seven mountains are not known with certainty, but the designation was for some of the highlands at the head of the bay, of which Bull's mountain, in Cecil county, is the most prominent. Utie had been a member of an assembly which met at St. Clement's Manor in 1659, in the time of Fendall's rebellion, which assembly had been rebellious as to the authority of Lord Baltimore. He accordingly presented his petition to the council to "add a further act of grace that his former offences be not prejudiced to him hereafter." His petition was granted, and he was restored to favor. He was a member from Baltimore county in the Provincial Legislature of 1665, and in the following year was appointed on the commission to consider the question of increasing the price of tobacco in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina by not planting for one year.

Colonel Utie, besides Spesutie Island, owned a large area of land near the mouth of the Gunpowder river and land on the Sassafras river, in Cecil county.

George Utie and Richard Wells were ordered to be summoned before the provincial court in 1661, "for not sending letters down to the Governor according to the acts of Assembly, and for contemptuously nailing up a letter of the sheriff, directed to the Governor." They probably lived on Spesutie Island, and the former was no doubt a relative of Nathaniel Utie. It seems from his treatment of the sheriff that he was as stubborn and courageous as Nathaniel. He represented Baltimore county in the Legislature in 1661, and was also commissioned sheriff of Baltimore county in 1666."*

The residence of Colonel Utie, on Spesutie Island, was distinguished by a meeting of the Council of Maryland on May 13, 1661, for the purpose of investigating certain complaints made by and against the Indians, and making treaties with them. At that meeting Robert Gorsuch testified touching an engagement with the Indians on the Gunpowder river, in Harford county. He stated that the Indians came to his house on the 11th of April, 1661, some dressed in blue and some in red match coats, who killed his wife and plundered his house, and about four or five days after came to his house again and killed some five cows and a steer, and some hogs, "as he supposeth."†

John Taylor said that upon Easter eve, in the afternoon, there came two Indians to his house, but, he, not understanding their language, pointed at them to be gone; he not having heard before of a murder committed upon Robert Gorsuch's wife, and they accordingly departed. The next day these same Indians returned with seven more and one woman, who, coming near his landing, shot off a gun to give him notice, as he considered; whereupon he went to the landing to them, and they asked him for some tobacco, which he did give them, and upon sight of another canoe of Indians, bid them begone; one of them understanding and speaking a little English, upon which they went away and steered, as he thought, to a plantation hard by, where two bachelors lived, named Edward Foster and John Foster; that John Foster, coming in a canoe towards the Indians, shot at said Indians and came immediately away to this informant's house; whereupon said Indians shot three guns at said Foster, and immediately went and plundered his house and came around about two weeks afterward and plundered his tobacco house, where his goods then lay for want of room in his dwelling house, to the value of one thousand pounds of tobacco; that upon notice given of this plunder, William Wigwell, John Fouster and Edward Swanson went forth after the said Indians, to know why they plundered the said tobacco house, and coming up to them in the woods, where they were sitting around a fire. They immediately surrounded the said English and discharged a volley of ten shots, killing the said John Fouster, and at a second volley wounded William Wigwell, notwithstanding which shot, they fought them three hours and made their retreat good, since which time the said Indians have killed eleven head of cattle and twenty head of hogs. Demanding who they were, they answered that they were all Susquehannauchs, as all Indians used to do that come to his house."

As a result of the meeting of this council on Spesutie Island a treaty was made with the Indians in the following words:

Articles of peace and amity concluded between the Hon.

*Johnston's History of Cecil County.
Philip Calvert, Esq., Governor; Henry Coursey, secretary, and John Bateman, councilor, on behalf of the Lord Proprietary of this province of Maryland, and Pinna, king of Pitchenomicta, on behalf of the Passagonke Indians on the other part:

Imprimis: That there shall be a perpetual peace betwixt the people of Maryland and the Passagonke Indians.

Second: It is agreed between the above said parties that, in case any Englishman for the future shall happen to find any Passagonke Indian killing either cattle or hogs, then it shall be lawful for the English to kill the said Indian.

Third. It is agreed between the above said parties that, in case any Indian or Indians shall happen to kill any Englishman (which God forbid) then the said Indian, with all that company of Indians with him which consented to the said murder, shall be delivered to the English, there to be proceeded against according to the laws of this province.

Fourth. It is further agreed betwixt the above said parties that, in case any Englishman shall happen to run amongst the Passagonke Indians, the said Indians bring them to Peter Meyers; and then for every Englishman that they deliver, they shall receive one match coat.

_The Mark (M) of Pinna._

and this treaty vitally affected all the people at the head of the bay.
CHAPTER II.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS.

THOMAS THURSTON—OLD HOUSES—JACOB GILES’ LAND—SOME TRACTS BELONGING TO COLONEL WHITE—AQUILA PACA—DANIEL SCOTT—JAMES PRESTON—JOHN STUMP—DAVID BISSET—SAMUEL GOVER—JOHN HALL—WM. BRADFORD—WM. M’COMAS—JOHN M’COMAS.

From this time for a number of years, nothing of especial interest occurred to those who came to settle here, different from that concerning the people of the colony generally. We find from the records that the land was rapidly taken up and patents from the Lord Proprietor and his governor were numerous, indicating a large number of settlers. These first took up the land along the water courses, but gradually extended up into the forest, and at the time of the Revolution, which commenced three years after the formation of the county, the population of Harford, as above stated, was about thirteen thousand. The writer’s own people obtained a patent at the end of the seventeenth century for a tract of land at the head of “Bush River” (Bynum’s Run), which is still in the possession of a member of his family.

Thomas Thurston was one of the earliest settlers in this section. Although belonging to the Society of Friends, his career entitles him to be called a “fighting Quaker.” He came to Virginia from Massachusetts and afterwards took up his abode in Maryland, where he acquired large tracts of land, and in 1659 settled in Bush river neck, where he owned many acres and about one thousand acres near the present site of Bush. He also owned land near Stafford and in the vicinity of the present location of Bel Air. His homes is said to have been at old Baltimore, on Bush river, in the year 1686. He was a colonel and was appointed to command the military of the county. In 1692 he was superseded in the command by Captain Thomas Richardson, but the former declined to relinquish his authority, and Thurston was left in possession. For this he was brought to trial, but by reason of a general amnesty granted by the King on account of a great naval victory over the French, nothing further was done in the matter. His son sold a part of this land to John Mortimer, who was an ancestor of the present Archer family in Harford county.

At the date of the Revolution, while the most thickly settled portion of the country was in the necks along the water courses, nevertheless patents had been taken out, even to the Pennsylvania line, and the county was well settled throughout.

About that time were built some of the largest houses of the county that still remain. In 1768 Aquila Hall built the brick house on the Dairy farm. Colonel Thomas White married a daughter of Capt. John Hall, of Cranberry. John Hall left to his daughter Sophia, wife of Colonel White, a tract of land called "Sophia's Dairy." Their daughter, Sophia White, married her cousin, Aquila Hall, who built the "Dairy" house on the land derived from his wife's mother. The "Dairy" house was built, it is said, by the hands of five redemptionists, two of whom were masons, two carpenters and one a laborer, and bricks imported from England were used. The redemptionists received their freedom as their reward for the building.*

In 1774, the year of the formation of the county, William Smithson built the "Homestead," near Bel Air, which is even now one of the best in the county. In 1786 William Wilson, who had married Pallmela Bond, built, of bricks made on the place, the large house near Emmorton, now the residence of Mr. R. L. Wilson, his grandson. About this time was built also the old rectory of Spesutie church, which is the long frame building at Harford Furnace. A little later, Bernard Preston, who had married Sarah, daughter of Jacob Bond, built the large stone house, which is still in good repair, situate between Bel Air and Hickory, now owned by Mr. J. B. Wysong, a direct descendant of the first owner. Part of the residence of Mr. G. Smith Norris, near Bel Air, was built early in the eighteenth century by John Norris, one of the progenitors of Mr. Norris. In 1790 William Hall built the dwelling house on the "Constant Friendship Farm," in Abingdon district. Before this date the large house belonging to the heirs of Dr. Thomas E. Bond, on the Little Falls, near Falls- ton, was built.

The old church at Priestford, now the residence of Mr. R. Harris Archer, was built in 1747, as stated herein under the heading "The Catholics in Harford." The old Baptist church, between Jarrettsville and Upper X-Roads, was erected about 1760. The house at the corner of Main street and the Baltimore pike, in Bel Air, was built before 1780. Rock Spring church was erected in the year 1805. The stone and brick house at "Shandy Hall," in the second district, was built by John Hall, of Cranberry, in 1701.

The present dwelling of Mr. J. Lawrence McCormick, near Bel Air, was erected by Philip Henderson in the year 1787. Buckler Bond built the Fulford house, near the tollgate, one mile west of Bel Air, about 1732. Two other Bond houses were situated in the same neighborhood and built about the same time. One of them is the residence of the heirs of Mr. Henry Richardson, and the other was on the site of the present overseer's house of the almshouse. The new portion of the house on Ruff's Chance, the farm of Judge James D. Watters, near Thomas' Run, was built in 1760 by Henry and Martha Watters, the great grandfather and mother of Judge Watters. A portion of this house is even older, and is built of logs, which are yet in a fair state of preservation. Ruff's Chance was one-half a square mile in area and was patented in 1714 by Richard Ruff. Part of the house near Upper X-Roads, now occupied by Mr. John Randolph Rutledge, was erected before the time of the Revolution, when the property was purchased by Abraham Rutledge, the father of Ignatius Wheeler. The house was built by a man named Jacob Rutledge, who married Monica, daughter of Col. Chalk. The large stone residence of Mr. Frank H. Jacobs, on the Churchville road, was built in 1809, by Archer Hays, an ancestor of Mr. Jacobs.

Jacob Giles acquired the following named tracts in the following years, viz:

CHAPTER III.

OLD COURTHOUSES.

THE MARYLAND COLONY AND ENGLAND—REMOTE FROM THE TURBULENT EVENTS OF THE MOTHER COUNTRY—COUNTY SEAT ON BUSH RIVER—SOME OLD MINUTES—WM. OSBORNE—COUNTY SEAT REMOVED TO GUNPOWDER—NEXT TO JOPPA—GROWTH AND DECLINE OF JOPPA—BALTIMORE ON THE PATAPSCO.

The Indians gave occasional trouble; petty disputes and quarrels occurred between them and the whites; the English Revolution took place, and Charles, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and France—King, defender, etc.—lost his head; Naseby, Edgehill, Marston Moore and Worcester were fought; Cromwell became Lord Protector and assumed sovereignty over the American colonies. He died, and a Stuart again reigned in the person of Charles II. The politics of England reached even the settlers in this distant land, and at times it was difficult for the good people of Maryland to determine who was their rightful sovereign and ruler. But the province retained its autonomy and government; settlements continued to go on, and the beautiful river lying within the limits of our county pursued its tranquil course, and the great water dividing the State passed, unvexed, to the sea.

It is true that for many years there were contentions with the Dutch settlers of New Amstel, on the Delaware bay, and with the people of Virginia; Claiborne continued to harass the settlers on Kent Island and at the head waters of the bay, but the Maryland colony managed to maintain its integrity throughout, and our forefathers lived in amity and brotherly love, enjoying by the charter of the colony a greater degree of civil and religious liberty than could be found under any other government then existing.

In the present limits of Harford were located the first two county seats and courthouses of Baltimore county. The first was on the east side of Bush river, about two miles below the bridge of the Pennsylvania Railroad, on the farm now owned by Mr. James L. Richardson. Tradition had fairly accurately located the place, but until very recently there was no authentic proof of its situation. By a paper recently read by Senator Charles W. Michael before the Historical Society of Harford County, the location of the county land is clearly proven, and in the address delivered by Judge Albert Ritchie before the Maryland Historical Society, January 8, 1900, on the early county seats of Baltimore, much new light is thrown upon the old Baltimore of Bush river. By the act of 1674 a courthouse was authorized to be constructed, and by an ordinance of the Proprietary, dated June 10, 1676, appointing places where inns might be kept, it is provided that there should be one at the courthouse in Baltimore county. In 1679 a proclamation was issued from the courthouse of the county, prescribing the manner for giving and answering alarms upon the approach of the Indians. The alarm was to be given by the firing of a gun three times within the space of a quarter of an hour, and this was to be answered by firing from house to house throughout the hundred.
HISTORY OF HARFORD COUNTY.

In 1686 a tract of land conveyed by William Osborne to James Phillips is described in the land records as beginning on Bush river at a point a little beyond the courthouse, and running, etc. By this deed and by the will of James Osborne, dated April 6, 1779, and by other land and will records, Mr. Michael has located beyond question the position of the court land. William Osborne kept a ferry. As Baltimore county then included Harford and Cecil and much more, the ferry would probably cross to about the residence of the late William P. Taylor, and the road lead thence out towards Edgewood. At that date the roads were little more than paths, for in 1686 a petition was presented to the Council to move the courthouse to a point on the south side of Winter's Run, "near the path that goes from Potomac to the Susquehanna rivers." The proposed place must have been near the present location of Van Bibber, but the change was never made. In 1691 the meeting place of the court was moved to Gunpowder, and in 1712 to Joppa, in Harford county, where a courthouse was built.

William Osborne is said to have been the founder of Baltimore on Bush river, and to have built the first house there, and was the owner of the ferry across the river, by which the town was reached from the west and north. Philip Philips attended the ferry, which he afterwards purchased. Osborne's eldest son was stolen by the Susquehannock Indians. Pursuit was made, and the Indians were followed across the bay, but the child was never recovered. Osborne never saw his son again, but the captive was kindly treated. The father was informed by an old chief that the lost boy was living, and had become a chief among the red men, and he is said to have signed the treaty between Penn and the Indians in 1682.

James Philips, grandson of Philip Philips, married Martha, daughter of John and sister of William Paca, Governor of the State and signer of the Declaration of Independence. In the eastern part of a field, the site of Old Baltimore, there is a burial ground in a grove of large walnut trees. In the midst of the grove there is a marble slab, on which is the following inscription:

"Beneath this stone is reposed the body of James Philips, and also, in compliance with his dying request, the body of his wife, Martha Philips, daughter of John and Elizabeth Paca. Born February 3, 1744; married January 25, 1776; died March, 6, 1829, having survived her husband 26 years," etc.

In the month of June, 1687, the Nanticoke Indians complained that one of their members, whom they styled "the mad Indian," had been murdered at Bush river by three white men, one of whom was a servant of Mrs. Stansbury, who lived there. The parties charged were not properly punished according to the minds of the Indians, and this crime was made the excuse for counter-outrages by them on a family by the name of Enock, on Middle river, the head of which family was slain by the savages.

In 1692-3 there was a line of defense against the Indians, consisting of small forts made of wood, extending in a northeasterly direction from Garrison Forest, in the neighborhood of Pikesville, in Baltimore county, through the northern section of Harford to the Susquehanna. Captain Thomas Richardson commanded the fort on the Susquehanna. The forts were mere cabins, where sentinels could seek shelter, and were the advance guards of the settlements. One of these cabins or forts stood near the present site of Bethel church, but years before any church was there.

At the court held in March, 1683, at Baltimore on Bush river, the justices present were Col. George Wells, Edward Bedell, Major Thomas Long and John Boring. Thomas Hedge was clerk, Miles Gibson, high sheriff, and by order of Court the key of the courthouse was placed in the custody of "John Hathway, the cryer." The land appears to have belonged to William and Margaret Osborne, and seems to have been taken by proceedings for condemnation under the old English law of eminent domain, for we find a rule laid on Osborne and his wife, in 1683, to show cause why they did not make over the land, and on September 4th, of that year, they conveyed the title to the land to the Commissioners of Baltimore county and their successors in the manner of the livery of seizin law by delivery of turf and twig.

The records show that the courthouse, on Bush river, had been constructed long enough to need repairs in 1683, "as to its dormant windows coursing the same with good boards, with sap drawne out and for nailes." The building was probably made of wood. It was offered for sale about 1696. The Baltimore, on Bush river, was known only by tradition as early as 1773, the date of the act for the formation of Harford county; for in that year the testimony of Col. John Hall, taken in a law suit, states that he knew a place in Bush river neck called "The Old Plantation," and he had always understood that the town on Bush river was laid out there. Col. Hall had always lived in that section. The last trace of the meeting of the Court on Bush river is in a suit brought in 1692, by Thomas Heath, an innkeeper there, for tobacco due him for the expenses of the justices during 1687-88-89. It would seem from this that in the early days the justices expected the county to pay their tavern bills.

The county seat was then removed to Gunpowder, within the present limits of Baltimore county, but in 1712, in spite of considerable opposition, it was removed across the river to Joppa, which is within the present bounds of Harford.

"The courthouse there had been first built without legal authority, and when this difficulty was got over it was found that the Commissioners had built it on the land of a minor, who could convey no legal title. This stumbling-block hindered Joppa's progress for twelve years more. The courthouse and prison were built, but not a dwelling-house; but the Assembly, in 1724, legalized the conveyance by special act, but reduced the area of the town to twenty-one acres.

After so many false starts, Joppa was now fairly on her way. The "Act for erecting a town at Joppa, in Baltimore county, and for securing the land whereon the courthouse and prison are built," was passed by the General Assembly at the October session, in 1724. By this act Thomas Tolley, Capt. John Taylor, Daniel Scott, Lancelot Todd and John Stokes were appointed town commissioners. On the 20th of April, 1725, Messrs. Tolley, Taylor and Scott met at Joppa, and proceeded to lay off twenty-one acres of land—one acre for the use of St. John's Parish Church—for the use of the town. The town was laid out into forty lots, exclusive of the church lot, and divided by Court street and Church street, running east and west, and Low street and High street, running nearly north and south. The lots were offered for entry at one pound seven shillings each, to be paid to Col. James Maxwell, whose land had been taken by the Commissioners for the use of the town. Among those who took up lots were Col. James Maxwell, Asaell Maxwell, son of James Maxwell; Col. John Dorsey, for the use of his son, Greenbury Dorsey; John Crockett, John Stokes, David Hughes, Thomas White, clerk of the town, Roger Matthews, Capt. Thomas Sheredine, Aquila Paca, sheriff of the county, John Hall, Jr., John Roberts, Joseph Ward, inn-holder, Richard Hewitt, Nicholas Day, Thomas Tolley, Aquila Hall, William Hammond, Benjamin Jones, William Lowe, Joseph Calvert, late merchant of Kent county, James Isham, Catharine Hollingsworth, widow, Samuel Ward, carpenter, Benjamin Johns, Abraham Johns, Stephen Higgins, Samuel Maccubbin, Hannah Ward, John Higginson, inn-holder, and Benjamin Rumsey. Like all these towns of the Legislature's making, she was laid off into lots intersected by streets, lanes and alleys; but, as if the Assembly wished to punish the town for its own rashness and negligence, the lots were ordered to be of half the usual size, or half an acre each. Takers-up of lots were bound to build each a dwelling-house, covering not less than four hundred square feet, with a good brick or stone chimney. And so the new town flourished and became a great tobacco market, to which hogsheads were brought from all the upper parts of the country by a simple, but practical contrivance then generally in use, which made each hogshead its own vehicle. A gudgeon, or pin, was fastened in each end, on which hoop-pole shafts were attached and fastened to the horse's collar, who thus trundled the cask behind him; and the roads used for this transportation were called "rolling roads," by which name many of them are still known. To build up still further her commerce, all debtors paying their debts in tobacco at Joppa were allowed a reduction of ten per cent. She became a port of entry, and had a respectable trade with Europe and the West Indies. Tradition says that so late as the American revolution a vessel of war was built there."

In 1731 the Legislature suspended the sittings of the court at Joppa on account of the prevalence of smallpox there.

Baltimore, on the Patapsco, had meanwhile been growing, while Joppa stood still, and in 1768 was entitled to be called a city. In that year, on account of the inconvenience to the inhabitants in attending court at Joppa, a law was passed authorizing a commission to build a courthouse and prison on the "uppermost part of Calvert street, next Jones' Falls," and the same commission was directed to sell the courthouse and prison at Joppa, although the courthouse in the present city of Baltimore was not built by public expense, the cost of it having been raised by private subscription. There was great opposition to the change in the section which is now Harford, and the actual removal of the records by Mr. Alexander Lawson was attended by some violence and outrage.† Thus in 1768 the county seat of Baltimore county was permanently removed from our soil, but our ancestors grew restive under the inconvenience of the change, and began housekeeping for themselves five years later, when our own county was organized at Bush, as will be related a few pages further on.

"The grandeur of Joppa was not destined to endure, As old Baltimore on Bush river had faded before her, so she was to fade before Baltimore on the Patapsco. Her trade was drawn off, her population dwindled, her storehouses fell to ruin, her wharves rotted and her harbor filled up with mud. Yet the ancient town has not, like old Baltimore, utterly vanished. A solitary house, once a stately mansion, built of bricks imported from England, and a few mouldering grave stones, overgrown by weeds and grass, still mark the site of the once flourishing town of Joppa."

The location of Joppa, and of the town there, is still well known, but the Baltimore, on Bush river, has entirely disappeared, and is now a field on the farm of Mr. James Richardson, on the east side of the river, the shore being well known as "Old Baltimore," and is a favorite landing place for sailing parties on the Bush river.

CHAPTER IV.

CUSTOMS AND MANNERS PRIOR TO THE REVOLUTION.

SLAVERY—PRIMITIVE CONDITIONS—THE LAWYER—DOCTOR—SCHOOLMASTER—LIFE OF A PHYSICIAN BEFORE THE REVOLUTION—DOMESTIC CUSTOMS.

In the colony of Maryland there was much pretense to aristocracy and style. Annapolis and Baltimore contained a large population and people of considerable wealth resided there. Hospitality was freely dispensed, and, as in the South today, they gave a hearty welcome to all comers, even to the stranger within their gates. Slavery was an established institution, and the masters had that patriarchal manner that comes from the ownership of slaves. The proprietors in this section were, as a rule, kind to their servants, and it was considered bad form to sell a slave. But the institution existed with all its withering effect upon the master and the bondman, and while in the Maryland colony human servitude was found in its least objectionable form, even here its blight only differed in degree from the characteristics in the entire section in which it prevailed.

It was looked upon with ill-favor to maltreat a slave, but the general regard in which the blacks were held was expressed by a distinguished Maryland judge in delivering an opinion in the Supreme Court of the United States many years later, when he said that they had been considered so far inferior that they had no rights the white man was bound to respect. The negroes were, however, much better off here even in slavery than in their own country of Africa, where they were in servitude to members of their own race. The pleasant and happy condition of the blacks at the time of which we write gave no warning of the dreadful conflict which was to be waged an hundred years later over their emancipation. He was not then born who was to be at the head of the nation in that dreadful struggle, who was to sit beside the sick bed of his country in her agony, whose large hand was to be on her feeble pulse, and whose knowledge and skill was to perform the miracle of her healing. There were few libraries and a man with a dozen books was considered quite a scholar. A modest collection, such as may be found today in many private houses, would have been considered in those days a considerable library. Newspapers were few and not in general circulation, and the people depended on the gossip of the day for their news, and often on the political harangue for their politics.

The great powers in the body politic of that early day were the schoolmaster, the lawyer and the doctor. The public school system did not exist, and the only schools to be found were those in which a gentleman of means would employ a teacher for his children, and the boys and girls of the neighborhood would be invited to attend.

The old Maryland Bar was an active, learned and intelligent body, full of force and the greatest power, and contained in its membership Jennings, Holliday, Key, Martin, Sprigg, Rogers, Johnson and Chase. They were well trained in the English common law, in all the traditions of the English Bar and the usages of the best society, and kept our customs and manners on a high level.

Stocks and pillories were in constant use, and the criminal code was more severe than it is in our day. This section of the colony was almost entirely an agricultural community. The plow was little used, except for the purpose of breaking up of new ground in the spring and fallow in the fall, and the chief implement of husbandry was the hoe. This was not the light steel implement of the present day, but a great, clumsy lump of iron, often rudely made by the blacksmith on the plantation, not sharp, but so made that it could not be broken.

Corn and tobacco were the chief crops; these were frequently shipped to England, the money arising from their sale purchasing in London clothes, merchandise and whatever manufactured articles might be needed on the farm.

Commercial fertilizers were unknown, and a piece of bottom land, which could be enriched by the overflow of a stream, was particularly valuable. Fox hunting and cock fighting were the chief sports then in vogue.

The doctor stood especially high in influence and popular esteem. Often he had depended for his medical education upon his apprenticeship to some physician in active practice in a large city. His term of tuition being over, the young man returned to his early home and began the practice of medicine. As time went by he grew in influence, popularity and wealth. His knowledge of the world, good sense and engaging manners, his hearty laugh and the interest he manifested in the family of the poorest of his sick people, made him an universal favorite. When he rode out the occupants of every farmhouse he passed were as well known to him as his own household. The boys took off their caps to him as he passed, and the girls paid him the compliment of greeting by dropping a curtsy. He would take the longest rides on the darkest nights to administer a dose of calomel to an old woman or attend a child with a cold. He was present at every birth; he rode with the family at the funeral; he was to be found with the minister at every death-bed, and his name attested the signature to every will. In those days there were no drug stores. The country store kept a few of the simplest drugs stored away on the shelves among shoes, harness, twine and salt meat. The doctor had to be both physician and druggist, and his saddle bags protruded with their load of drugs. The old mortar and pestle was in daily use, and the physician put up his own prescriptions and pounded his own drugs. Great quantities of medicines were taken in those days—more even by the well than is given to the sick now. Large doses of calomel and rhubarb had to be taken each spring, and nauseating combinations of senna and molasses were taken daily. Simple remedies of the present day were then unknown. The patient in a raging fever was denied water. So much mercurial compounds were taken that the lips turned blue and the gums fell away from the teeth. It was quite common to cup and leech. As quinine was not known until 1820 the cure for fever and malaria was cinchona bark; but it was scarce and expensive. Vaccination had not been discovered, and small pox was frequent and fatal. The poorest man when injured has now better surgical attention than could be procured at that time at any price.

There was little to be seen in the household that was not the product of the soil. In every home could be found the spinning wheel, and the housewife, besides her other duties, did the weaving of the material used for clothing, with the aid of her daughters; and around the open fire in the long winter evenings their deft fingers plied the knitting needles. The furniture was of the simplest kind and stoves were unknown. Candles or the roaring fire served the purpose of lighting the room. Sewing machines, kerosene lamps and hundreds of modern conveniences had not come into use. Traveling was done on horseback or in lumbering vehicles, and visits along the water were made in boats.
CHAPTER V.

ORGANIZATION OF HARFORD COUNTY.

INCONVENIENCE ON ACCOUNT OF REMOVAL OF COUNTY SEAT TO BALTIMORE—PETITION FOR NEW COUNTY—HENRY HARFORD—LEGISLATIVE ACT FOR FORMATION OF NEW COUNTY.

After the county seat had been removed from Joppa to the present city of Baltimore in 1768, our people, for the first time in their history, had their court placed far from their habitations, and this produced constant inconvenience and vexations. To serve upon the jury or to have their disputes heard and determined necessitated long rides that required our fathers a day to go and another to return, when they had been accustomed to have their seat of justice within easy reach. On this account they could not take the same active part in public affairs as they had theretofore. So a petition was presented to the Legislature of 1773, which resulted in the passage of a law for a new county to be known by the name of Harford.

In the year 1771, Frederick, the sixth Lord Baltimore, died in Italy, aged forty-one years. He left no legitimate children, and the title became extinct; but by his will Henry Harford, a natural son, was made proprietary of Maryland, though a minor, and the county formed three years later was called Harford from the young head of the province. After the Revolution Henry Harford returned from England and urged in person before the Maryland Legislature a claim for six hundred and ninety-one thousand nine hundred and sixty-five dollars and sixty-seven cents for quit rents, and the further sum of eight hundred and seventy-three thousand one hundred and seventy-six dollars for lands. The Legislature rejected his claim, but he with other loyalists received a considerable indemnity from the British government, and about the sum of ten thousand pounds sterling was also obtained by him from the State's stock then in England.* The act of the Legislature authorizing the formation of the county is as follows:

AN ACT FOR THE DIVISION OF BALTIMORE COUNTY, AND FOR ERECTING A NEW ONE BY THE NAME OF HARFORD.—LIB. RG., FOL. 239.

WHEREAS, A considerable body of the inhabitants of Baltimore county, by their petition to this General Assembly have prayed, that an act may be passed for a division of the said county, and for erecting a new one out of part thereof: And whereas it appears to this General Assembly, that the erecting of a new county out of such part of Baltimore county will conduce greatly to the ease and convenience of the people thereof;

II. BE IT THEREFORE ENACTED, by the right honorable the Lord Proprietary, by and with the advice and consent of his Governor, and the Upper and Lower Houses of Assembly, and the authority of the same; That after the second day of March next, all that part of Baltimore county which is included within the bounds following, to wit: Beginning at the mouth of the little falls of Gunpowder river, and running with the said falls to the fountain head, and from thence:

north to the temporary line of this province, and thence with the temporary line to Susquehanna river, thence with Susquehanna to Chesapeake bay, and thence with the said bay, including Spesutia and Pool's Islands, to the mouth of Gunpowder river, and thence up the said river to the beginning aforesaid, shall be and is hereby erected into a new county, by the name of Harford county.

or the major part of them, shall be and they are hereby authorized and empowered to order the sheriff of Baltimore county to summon twelve freeholders upon the said land, who shall be impanelled and sworn as a jury, to inquire the value of the said land; and the said commissioners, or the major part of them, shall draw their order upon the sheriff of Harford county to pay the said valuation, and the said sheriff is hereby directed to pay the said order out of the money hereafter mentioned, to be by him collected for that purpose, and upon his payment of the said order, the fee-simple in the said land shall be invested as aforesaid in the justices of Harford county, and their successors, for the use of the said county for ever.

V. AND BE IT ENACTED, That the justices of Harford county, or the major part of them, are hereby authorized to contract and agree for a convenient place in Bushtown to hold the courts for the said county, and to contract and agree for a convenient place in the said town for their books, papers and other records, and also for a fit building for the custody of prisoners; and the said courts shall be held, and records kept, at such places, respectively, until the courthouse and prison for the said county shall be erected and built, and the charge and expense of such places shall be defrayed by the said county, and assessed with the public and county levy.

VI. persons as the commissioners aforesaid, or the major part of them, shall order and direct.

VII. AND Whereas the taxable inhabitants of that part of Baltimore county hereby erected into Harford county, have paid a proportionate quantity of tobacco towards the building the courthouse and prison in Baltimore-town, in Baltimore county: And whereas a considerable sum of money was raised by the sale of the old courthouse and prison at Joppa, and applied towards erecting the said courthouse and prison; and forasmuch as justice requires, that the said proportionable quantity of tobacco, and a proportionable part of the said money, should be refunded, and applied towards the building of the courthouse and prison now to be erected in Harford county; BE IT THEREFORE ENACTED, that the justices of Baltimore county shall be and they are hereby authorized and required to assess and levy, by two equal assesments, the next year and year afterwards, with their public and county levy, the quantity of one hundred and fifty-four thousand six hundred and sixty-six pounds of tobacco, in and upon the taxable inhabitants of Baltimore county, together with the sheriff's salary of five per centum for collection, which said quantity of tobacco, so to be assessed and levied, shall be collected by the sheriff of Baltimore county from the taxable inhabitants thereof, in the same manner as other public and county levies are by law collected, and the said tobacco, when collected, shall be paid by the said sheriff to the commissioners aforesaid, and shall be by them applied towards building the courthouse and prison in the said county of Harford.

VIII. AND BE IT ENACTED, That the justices of Harford county shall be and they are hereby authorized and required to assess and levy with the public and county levy, by two equal assessments, in the next year and the year afterwards, the quantity of two hundred thousand pounds of tobacco, together with the sheriff's salary of five per centum for collection, which said tobacco, so to be assessed and levied, shall be collected by the sheriff of Harford county from the taxable inhabitants of the said county, in the same manner as other public and county levies are by law collected; which said tobacco, when collected, shall be paid by the said sheriff to the commissioners aforesaid, and applied by them towards building the courthouse and prison aforesaid for the said county.

IX. AND BE IT ENACTED, That the commissioners aforesaid, or the major part of them, shall be and they are hereby authorized and required to contract and agree for the building of the said courthouse and prison, which said courthouse and prison shall be built and erected on the land to be purchased as aforesaid, in or adjoining to Bushtown, on the head of Bush river; and the said town, after the commencement of this act, shall be called Harford Town.

X. AND BE IT ENACTED, That all causes, pleas, process and pleadings, which now are or shall be depending in Baltimore county court before the second day of March next, shall and may be prosecuted as effectually as they might have been had this act never been made; and in case any deeds or conveyances of lands in Harford county have been made, or shall be before the division aforesaid, acknowledged according to law in Baltimore county, the enrolment or recording thereof within the time limited by law, either in the county court of Baltimore county, or in the county court of Harford county, shall be good and available, the division aforesaid notwithstanding.

XI. the person or persons, if taken, against whom such writ or writs shall issue for that purpose; and during the attendance of the sheriff of Harford county at Baltimore county court, he shall have a power to confine in Baltimore county gaol, if he should think it necessary, such persons as he shall have in execution; but after his attendance shall be dispensed with by the said court, he shall then, in a reasonable time, remove such persons as he shall have in execution to Harford county gaol, there to be kept till legally discharged.

XII. AND BE IT ENACTED, That the public and county levy now assessed or levied, or to be levied and assessed by the justices of Baltimore county court at their levy court for the present year, shall and may be collected and received by the sheriff of Baltimore county, as well of the taxable inhabitants of Harford as of Baltimore county, and collected, accounted for and applied, in such manner as the said public and county levy would have been collected, accounted for and applied, had this act never been made.

XIII. AND BE IT ENACTED, That the several delegates for Baltimore county shall retain their seats, and that such of them as are residents in Baltimore county, after the division aforesaid, shall be deemed and taken as delegates for that county, and such of them as are residents in Harford county, shall be deemed and taken delegates for that county, and writs of election shall issue to make up the number of delegates wanted in either county, to complete the usual and common county representation.

CHAPTER VI.

FIRST RECORDS—SWEARING IN LORDS JUSTICES—APPOINTMENT OF CLERK, SHERIFF AND STATE'S ATTORNEY—DIVISION OF COUNTY INTO HUNDREDS AND APPOINTMENT OF CONSTABLES—FIRST GRAND JURY—FIRST PETIT JURY—COUNTY SEAT AT HARFORD TOWN, OR BUSH.

In accordance with the direction of this Act of Assembly the first term of court for Harford county was held at Harford Town, or Bush, on the 22nd day of March, in the year 1774, and then and there was put into operation the machinery for the government of the county thus created, and a new child came into the household of the State. With the proceedings of the first court there comes to us the spirit of the times when great events were maturing, when the nation was about to come into being, and when the American Republic was about to be admitted into the family of nations.

Harford's part in the Revolution will be related later on, and as the order is most convenient, an account of the formation and the first proceedings of the county government will be more particularly given. Of that eventful 22nd day of March, 1774, the following is the proceeding as taken from the records of our court:
Maryland, Harford County, to wit:

Be it remembered that the Right Honourable Henry Harford, Esquire, absolute Lord and Proprietary of the Province of Maryland, sent his commission, closed under the seal of the said Province, in the usual Form, which Commission was distinctly read and published, and thereupon Aquila Hall, Gentleman by Virtue of the Dedimus indorsed on the said Commission administered the several oaths appointed by Act of Assembly to be taken to the government as also the Oath of Judge or Justice to Thomas Bond, Son of Thomas, Jeremiah Sheredine, Benedict Edward Hall, William Webb and Aquila Paca, Gentlemen, who did severally subscribe the Test and Oath of Abjuration, and being so qualified, did then also agreeable to the directions of the said Dedimus, administer the severall Oaths appointed by Act of Assembly to be taken to Government as also the Oath of Judge or Justice to Aquila Hall, Amos Garrett and John Beal Howard, Gentlemen who, also, severally subscribed the Test and Oath of Abjuration. Alexander Lawson of Baltimore County, Gentleman, produces to the said Justices to wit Aquila Hall, Amos Garrett, John Beal Howard, Thomas Bond, Jeremiah Sheredine, Benedict Edward Hall, William Webb and Aquila Paca, a Commission from the Honourable Daniel Dulany, Esquire, Secretary of the Province of Maryland, bearing date the tenth day of March, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-Four, whereby the said Alexander Lawson is ordained, constituted and appointed Clerk and Keeper of the Records of Harford County aforesaid in the usual Form. Whereupon the said Alexander Lawson qualifies himself as Clerk by taking the severall Oaths appointed by Act of Assembly to be taken to Government and repeating and subscribing the Test and Oath of Abjuration, And the said Alexander Lawson then before the said Justices entered into Bond with two sufficient securities for the due Execution his said office of Clerk and Keeper of the Records according to Law after having taken the Oath of Office as required by Law.

Thomas Miller, Gentleman, produces to the said Justices here a Commission from the Right Honourable Henry Harford, Esquire, absolute Lord and Proprietary of Maryland, to be Sheriff of Harford County, bearing date the second day of March, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-four. Whereupon the said Thomas Miller was qualified by taking the severall Oaths appointed by Act of Assembly to be taken to Government, repeating and subscribing the Test and Oath of Abjuration and also taking the Oath of Sheriff. And the said Thomas Miller then in the presence of the Justices aforesaid, gave Bond for the due performance of his said Office of Sheriff of Harford County according to Law.

John Long is appointed Crier of Harford County Court by the Justices aforesaid.

Afterwards, to wit, on this fourth Tuesday in March, being the twenty-second day of the same Month in the Third Year of the Dominion of the Right Honourable Henry Harford, Esquire, absolute Lord and Proprietary of the Province of Maryland, and in the year of our Lord One Thousand Seven hundred and Seventy-four, at the Court House in Harford Town in Harford County, the following Justices to wit, Aquila Hall, Amos Garrett, John Beal Howard, Thomas Bond, Jeremiah Sheredine, Benedict Edward Hall, William Webb and Aquila Paca, Gentlemen, so appointed and qualified commanded Proclamation to be made for opening the court for the said County of Harford, which was accordingly thereupon done in the usual Manner on the Day and at the Place last aforesaid.

Justices Present:
Aquila Hall, William Webb,
Amos Garrett, Jeremiah Sheredine,
J. Beal Howard,                      Aquila Paca,
Thomas Bond,                        Benedict Edward Hall, Gentlemen.

George Chalmers of Baltimore County produces a Commission from Thomas Jenings, Esquire, Attorney-Generall in and over the Province of Maryland, to be Clerk of Indictment and Prosecutor of the Lord Prop-rietaries Pleas civil and Criminall in the said County of Harford and qualified himself by taking the severall Oaths appointed by Act of Assembly to be taken to Government, repeating and subscribing the Test and Oath of Abjuration and taking Oath of Office according to Law.

On motion made to the Court here, Benjamin Rumbley, George Chalmers, Francis Curtis, Robert Alexander, Jeremiah Townly Chase, Robert Buchanan and Aquila Hall, Esquires, were admitted as Attornies at Law of this Court, after taking the Oaths appointed by Act of Assembly to be taken to Government, repeating and subscribing the Test and Oath of Abjuration and taking the Oath of an Attorney.

Thomas Chalmers taking the Oaths appointed by Act of Assembly, to be taken to Government, repeating and subscribing the Test and subscribing the Oath of Abjuration was appointed Deputy Clerk of said County.

The said Samuel Smith, Servant,

JOHN JOHNSON, against SAMBUEL SMITH, Servant.

is adjudged by the Court to serve John Johnson, his said Master, ten Days after the Expiration of his present Time of Servitude for Runaway Time and also to serve his said Master the further space of six months after the Expiration of the aforementioned Ten Days of Servitude or pay him the Sum of six Pounds eight Shillings and eleven Pence common Money.

The Court divides the County into the Hundreds of—Gunpowder Lower, Deer Creek Upper and Lower, Bush River Upper, Bush River Lower, Spesutia Upper, Spesutia Lower and Susquehannah, according to the Metes and Boundaries of the said Hundreds as recorded in Baltimore County Court except as to that part of Mine Run Hundred left in this County by the Division line of Baltimore and Harford Counties, which is added to Bush River Upper Hundred.

The Court appoints the following Constables, to wit:

Billingsly Roberts, Constable of Gunpowder Lower Hundred.

William Fisher, Junior, Constable of Deer Creek Upper Hundred.

Samuel Jenkins, Constable of Deer Creek Lower Hundred.

Samuel Day, Constable of Bush River Upper Hundred.

Joseph Morris, Constable of Bush River Lower Hundred.

Hugh Jefferys, Constable of Spesutia Upper Hundred.

James Taylor, Constable of Spesutia Lower Hundred.

James Horner, Constable of Susquehannah.

The Court adjourns till Tomorow Morning 10 o'clock.

Court met the next day, March 23, all the justices being present except William Webb.

It was that day ordered that a service be directed to the sheriff of this county for the purpose of summoning a grand and petit jury to serve at the next County Court.

There is an entry that "the Court has rented the house wherein Thomas Miller now keeps store from Mr. Aquila Hall at the rate of twelve pounds common money yearly, and allowed Mr. Thomas Miller ten pounds common money for repairing the said house so as to be fit for the reception of prisoners. Mr. Miller must not exceed ten pounds money aforesaid in the repair of said house.”

“The Court agrees with Daniel Pritchard to build a temporary goal twenty-four feet by twenty, two stories high, and appoints Mr. Amos Garrett and Mr. Jeremiah Sheredine to take bond from said Daniel Pritchard for the performance of his agreement and to superintend the building.”

The jail was never built, as the county seat was removed to Bel Air, which soon eclipsed its ancient rival on the old post road, and the latter is now not even a village, although there are said to have been fine hotels at Bush at the time Lafayette passed through with his army during the Revolution.

The first grand jury for Harford county met at Harford Town, or Bush, on August 23, 1774, and consisted of:

Levin Mathews, Foreman. Samuel Durham,
George Garrettson, Nathan Horner,
James Mathews, James More,
Edward Hall, Bennett Matthews,
William Hall, John Barclay,
Barnett Preston, John Hays,
Henry Watters, Mordicai Amos,
Thomas Smithson, Lemuel Howard,

George Bradford.

Asbery Cord was bailiff. There was a charge delivered to the grand jury as is now the custom in our court. The grand jury was discharged on Saturday, August 27. There are eighty-nine cases on the criminal docket for the August term, 1774. Most of them appear to be misdemeanors, but the docket entries are so meagre that it is impossible to know fully the nature or the disposition of the cases.

First petit jury for Harford county:
Freeborn Brown, Richard Ruff,
James Giles, Amos Hollis,
William Jones, Joseph Lewis,
Benj. Burgess Chesney, John Durham,
William Kitely, Thos. Johnson, of Joseph,
Edward Norris, James Little,
Richard Curzan, William De Brular,

BEL AIR CHOSEN THE COUNTY SEAT.

OTHER PLACES VOTED FOR—ANOTHER ELECTION CALLED—SCOTT’S OLD FIELDS, OR BEL AIR, WINS AGAIN—AQUILA SCOTT OF JAMES CONVEYS LAND IN BEL AIR TO COUNTY—COURT HOUSE AT BEL AIR—ORDERS FOR OPENING ROADS, ETC.—HARFORD IN THE EARLY DAYS THE CHIEF SECTION OF BALTIMORE COUNTY, WITH THE FIRST TWO COUNTY SEATS.

On January 22, 1782, an act was passed for an election to determine at what place the courthouse and prison of Harford county should be built, and the places named in the act to be voted for were Harford Town, (or Bush), Otter Point, Cross Roads (otherwise Gravelly Hill), Lower Cross Roads (Churchville), and Aquila Scott’s Old Field (now Bel Air). The act provided that if only two should be voted for the place receiving the highest number of votes to be the county seat, but if more than two should be voted for then another election was to be held between the two receiving the greatest number of votes at the first election.

The justices of Harford county were by this act authorized to purchase in fee four acres at the place to be selected as the county seat, and in the meantime to rent buildings for the court and the prison.

Scott’s Old Field, or Belle Air, as it was then called, won at this election, but this did not settle the matter, for we find by an act passed January 20, 1787, an election was authorized to determine "whether the courthouse and prison of Harford county shall be erected at Bel Air or at Havre de Grace," and John Archer, Benedict E. Hall, William Smith (Bayside), John Taylor and Jesse Jarrett, and any two or more of them were appointed commissioners for the purpose of holding the election."

The preamble of this act recites "whereas sundry inhabitants of Harford have petitioned this General Assembly for a law to remove the seat of justice in said county from Bel Air to Havre de Grace and sundry other inhabitants of said county have remonstrated against said petition and prayed that the seat of justice therein should continue at the place already established by law; whereas it appears to this General Assembly to be right and proper that the said dispute should be finally determined by an election of the people, to which said parties have consented," etc.

The act also prohibits the commissioners from receiving votes for any place except Bel Air and Havre de Grace, whereas in the former election to determine the place of the county seat, Otter Point, Cross Roads, &c., were authorized to be voted for. The election was held at Bel Air, which place was chosen as the county seat, and has since remained such, beginning at that time and continuing to this day to be the subject of the criticism which attaches to all county seats. But despite all this, the history of Bel Air and the lives and conduct of its people, their deportment, cultivation and refinement will compare favorably with any town in the State.

On April 27, 1782, Aquila Scott of James conveyed by deed recorded in Liber J. L. G. No. H, folio 103, two and five-eighths acres to Harford county for the purpose of a courthouse and prison. The consideration named was twenty-two pounds six shillings and three pence, or about one hundred and ten dollars. The lot is described by courses and distances in the survey and plat made by Daniel Scott, surveyor of Harford county, and was rectangular in form. This is the lot now occupied by the courthouse and jail, and extended also to the present Bond street, in Belair. The lots on which the Masonic Temple and the Harford National Bank of Belair now stand belonged to this lot. Recently a small parcel of ground of about thirty feet front, adjoining this, was sold for fifteen hundred dollars.

The courthouse at Bel Air was not built at the time of the passage of this act, although court had met there for several years, for the act last stated provides for temporarily renting buildings for the courthouse and jail at the place which might be selected, and authorized the justices of Harford county to contract "as soon as might be for the building of a courthouse and prison" at the place determined on by the election as above stated. The stone building at the junction of the Harford pike with Main street, in Bel Air, was used temporarily for this purpose.

By the act of 1787 (William Smallwood, Governor), John Eager Howard, James Calhoun, of Baltimore county, and William Smith (Bayside); Gabriel Christie and Samuel Griffith, of Harford, were appointed commissioners to "straighten and amend the post road from Havre de Grace to Baltimore Town." This road passes by Aberdeen, Bush, Abingdon and Van Bibber, and a hundred years before, in the petition to remove the courthouse from Bush river neck to Winter's Run, was alluded to as the "path that runs from the Potomack to the Susquehanna."

The first courthouse at Bel Air seems to have been in process of being built in 1788, for by the act of the General Assembly of that year, chapter 23, (John Eager Howard, Governor), the justices of Harford county were "empowered to assess on the assessable property of the county the sum of two shillings and six pence on every hundred pounds worth of property to complete the public buildings of said county and for other purposes." By the same act Baltimore county was required to make a contribution to the building of the Harford courthouse, etc., because the people of the new (Harford) county had helped to build the courthouse at Baltimore Town.

And by the act of 1790 a further tax of five hundred pounds current money was authorized to be levied for the completion of the public buildings.

By chapter 70, of the act of 1791, (George Plater, Governor), it was directed that the following roads should be laid out, surveyed, marked and bounded in the manner hereafter directed, viz: one road beginning at the Pennsylvania line where the road from Peach Bottom Ferry, on the river Susquehanna, intersects the said line, and from thence to Thomas Underhill's Mills, on Deer creek, (afterwards Preston's Mills), and from thence into the most convenient road leading to Baltimore Town; one other road leading from the Bald Friar Ferry, on said river, to Belle Air, and from thence in as straight a direction as the situation of the ground will admit towards Baltimore Town, as far as the line of Baltimore county, at the Little falls of the Gunpowder river; and one other road leading from Belle Air aforesaid to the Lower Cross Roads; from thence to the ferry known by the name of Smith’s Ferry, on Susquehanna river, and that all public roads within the said county may and shall be straightened and amended. The same act provides that Alexander Rigdon, John Stump, John Carlisle, John Weston, Samuel Raine, John Tredway and James Johnson be appointed commissioners for the purpose of laying out said roads.

By the act of 1795, chapter 63, (John H. Stone, Governor), upon the petition of James Wilson, Samuel Hughes, Gabriel Christie, Mark Pringle, Gibson Denison, John Hall and John Lee Gibson, an act was passed “for making an addition to the town of Havre de Grace and to improve the navigation of the river Susquehanna and for other purposes.”

The act of 1798, chapter 22, (John Henry, Governor), was entitled “an act to encourage the destruction of wolves and crows” in Harford county, the allowance to be thirty dollars for an old wolf’s head and four dollars for a young wolf’s head, and eight cents for a crow.

In January, 1798, an act was passed for the valuation of real and personal property within the State, and Thomas Johnson, William Wilson, Jesse Jarrett, John Western and Henry Richardson were appointed assessors for Harford county.

The act of Assembly, passed January, 1800, (Benjamin Ogle, Governor), was entitled an act to regulate elections, and Jesse Jarrett, Daniel Thompson, John Bartley, Dennis Bond and Henry Vansickle were appointed commissioners to lay off, designate and number the districts of Harford county and fix the places for holding elections in each district.

By an act of the same session, John Clendenning, Nathaniel West, Thomas Butler, William Whiteford and Thomas Montgomery were appointed commissioners to lay out a public road beginning at Thomas Underhill's Mills, on Deer Creek, and to run in a direction so as to intersect a public road leading from John Neal's to John Coxe's, between Henry Richardson's and Amos Jones'.

It will be observed from the foregoing pages that during the space of two hundred and twenty-five years, counting from the date of the erection of the first courthouse for Baltimore county, in Bush river neck, in 1675, to the present time, the people who have resided within the present limits of Harford have had the county seat within their boundaries for two hundred years of that time. Thus Harford may be considered as the parent county of the two except in name, and may claim as her beautiful offspring and daughter the present large and populous county which adjoins our own on the west side of the Little Falls of the Gunpowder.

As many of the proceedings of the Court are routine and there is so much of it, selections that may be thought interesting, will be made from the records of the next few years.

HISTORY OF HARFORD COUNTY.

There was an appropriation of ten thousand pounds of tobacco to defray in part the expense of building a bridge over the Little Falls, and John Beale Howard and Robert Bishop were appointed managers.

The Court appoints Jacob Bond, Sr., Henry Wilson, Sr., Wm. Amos, Sr., and William Bull to view the road from the Hickory Tavern to Winter's Run at Howard's Ford, where the old road did formerly run by Thomas Smithson's, Samuel Durham's and Daniel Preston's.

At the court which met at Bush March 23, 1779, the following justices were present:

The following are the names of the grand jurors for that term of court, viz:

Joseph Brownly, Foreman.

Aquila Scott, Richard Robinson, Hugh Bay, Richard Courson, Robt. Jeffrey, Asael Hitchcock, Joseph Ashton, Charles Taylor, Joseph Hartley,

At this term of court, Luther Martin, the distinguished Maryland lawyer, afterwards Attorney-General of the State, and one of the counsel for Aaron Burr at the impeachment trial at Richmond, appeared and was admitted to practice before the Harford County Court.

At a county court of the said State held for Harford county at the courthouse, in said county, at Harford town, on the twenty-eighth day of March, seventeen hundred and eighty, before the worshipful justices of the same court, of whom were present Messrs. James Giles, Jas. Philips, John Love, William Smithson, Samuel Groom Osborne, Robt. Amoss, John Archer.

Grand jury:
Joseph Stiles, Joseph Clark,
Joseph Brownley, Arch Beaty,
Fras. Billingsley, John McAdoo,

Jas. Moore, John Stenson,
Robt. Creswell, Michael Gilbert,
Daniel Bailess, John Hay,
John Chancey, Gilbert Jones,
John McComas, Joshua Brown,
Wm. Fisher, George Dew,
John Cooley,

The early minutes of the court are composed chiefly of records of the justices present, the grand and petit jurors, commissions to perpetuate boundaries and records of binding out minors and appointing guardians. The court in those early days seems to have exercised the functions of the judge, Orphans' Court, register of wills and county commissioners of the present day.

As these early juries furnish a number of names of the reputable people of the county of that day full lists of the panels at intervals of a few years are set out here, and in them the descendants of nearly every old family of the county of the present day will find an ancestor.

There seems to be no record of the proceedings of the court for 1782. It is probable that the removal of the county seat so upset the lords justices and their clerk that it was about a year before they got settled, but on March 25, 1783, we find them holding court at Scott's Old Fields (Bel Air), at which court there were present:

Thomas Johnson, Wm Smithson, Abrm. Whitacre, Wm. Bond.

Grand jury, March, 1783:
James Moore, Thos. Durbin,
Joseph Lewis, Michael Mather,
Samuel Webb, Wm. Colthough,
Ben. Silvers, Jas. Hanna,
Hollis Horner, Wm. Bosley,
Samuel Litton, Freeborn Brown,
Robt. B. Landon, Hugh Jeffrey,
Richard Robinson, John Fulton.
Fras. Billingsley, Stephen Hill, Bailiff.

The commission of the peace was produced and read in court March 27, 1783, and court adjourned for one hour.

The petit jurors for that term were:
A. Rigdon, Jas. Armstrong,
Samuel Durham, Wm. Coale,
Leas Billingsley, Aquila Scott of James,
Wm. Robinson, Wm. Jones,
Dennis Bond, Wm. Whiteford,
Jas. Sedgwick, John McComas,

John Barclay, Daniel Smithson,
Bernard Preston, Jas. Carroll.

At the term of court held at the same place, commencing August 26, 1783, on application of James Amos for persons to view a road leading from the Cross Roads to Cooptown, the Court appointed Andrew Tate and Lemuel Howard.

Benjamin Rumsey, from Joppa to Amoss' Mills.

The first record of the change of name from Scott's Fields to Bel Air we find in the minutes of March 22, 1785, where the expression is used "at a county court held for Harford county at the courthouse in the town of Bel Air," etc.; but at the August term of the same year it is again called Scott's Old Fields, and in the November term Bel Air is again mentioned as the name.

The following is a list of the Grand Jury for that term of Court, viz:

William Bradford, Thomas A. Thompson,
James Walker, Richard Robinson,
William Luckey, John Guyton,
Andrew Lindsay, Robert Glenn,
James Barnet, Thomas Hope,
Joseph Carroll, James Moore,
Buck Bond, Thomas Gast,
David Harry, John Fulton,
Robert Coon, Samuel Day, Bailiff.

At that term an application was made by John Cooley and Daniel Sheridine for a commission to view the road leading from Cox's Mill to Rock Run, and the Cumberland Forge from Nathaniel Baley's to the Elbow branch. The Court appointed Nathaniel Baley, John Rogers, Samuel Gover and Ambrose Gohaghan as the commission.

There are a great number of records of apprenticeship among these early minutes, the binding out being in the following form:

"Nathaniel Gordon, an orphan, aged thirteen years, is bound by the Court to Jacob Donavan until he arrives at the age of twenty-one years; said master is to teach said apprentice the art and mystery of a cordwainer; teach him to read, write and cypher as far as the rule of three, and give him the customary freedom dues."

These freedom dues seem to have caused much litigation, and there are records of many suits brought against masters on account of their non-payment.

A frequent ground of complaint was on account of the master not keeping the apprentice to his trade, and the Court would hear and determine by remanding the apprentice to the service of the master, or if the charge should prove well-founded by revoking the apprenticeship and discharging the complainant.

The courthouse at Bel Air seems to have been first occupied at the March term in 1791, at which time we find our modern custom of three regular judges. The names of the first three judges were Benjamin Nicholson, Samuel Hughes and Benedict Edward Hall.

The courthouse which was then first used was built of brick and occupied the same position as the present court building in Bel Air. It had wings to the north and south. The wing on the north was used for the clerk's office, and that on the south for the office of the register of wills. The courtroom was down stairs, and the floor was made of bricks. Within the rail where the lawyers and jury sat the floor was raised, and the bench, or judges' seat, was high above like a pulpit. There were two immense open fireplaces in the room, in which hickory of cordwood lengths was burned. The other county officers were on the second floor, the steps to which went up from the outside, starting at the front door and slanting towards the south. The steps had no covering, and as the grand jury room was upstairs that body in passing from their room to the court and back again had to go out of doors, as also with the petit jury. There was a landing at the head of the steps, and from this landing it was customary for political speakers to address their audiences.

This courthouse was burned on the night of February 19, 1858, the main building being entirely destroyed, but the offices of clerk and register of wills, which were situated in the wings, were preserved with all the valuable records. The only records of value that were destroyed by the fire were those of the county commissioners' office, which was situated upstairs. The Legislature was in session at the time, and the fire had not been entirely extinguished before a committee set forth for Annapolis on the following morning to secure the passage of an act authorizing the erection of a new courthouse. This act was passed on the 25th of February, 1858, and by it Stevenson Archer, Henry S. Harlan, A. Lingan Jarret, James McCormick and William H. Dallam were appointed commissioners to contract for and superintend the construction of the new building. There was authority to borrow money and issue bonds to the amount of twenty thousand dollars, and it is to the credit of the commission that the building was completed within the amount named and a surplus handed over to the county commissioners.

The courthouse built by the commission above named is the structure which is the present court building at Bel Air.

During the construction of the new courthouse in 1858-9 the building of the Masonic Order and Union Church, which stood on the lot now occupied by the Masonic Temple and the Harford National Bank, was used as a temporary court.

While on the subject of the construction of the courthouse it was thought better to get ahead of our narrative and thus finish up that subject, and we will now go back to the regular course in the old building.

The list of the local attorneys of the court in 1791 is as follows:

Francis Curtis, T. Hollingsworth,
Robert Smith, John Montgomery,
William Pinkney, Archibald Robison,
Aquila Hall,

The grand jurors for the August term, 1791, were

WILLIAM PINKNEY LOCATES AT BEL AIR—BASIS OF ASSESSMENT—TAX RATE—MEMBERS OF THE BAR IN 1796—JURIES—ROBERT AMOSS, JR., SHERIFF—JUDGES OF ELECTION—JOHN LEE GIBSON RESIGNS AS CLERK—HENRY DORSEY, OF EDWARD, APPOINTED CLERK.

On the 12th of April, 1790, the court, with the following justices present, viz: Thomas Bond, William Smithson, James McComas, John Barclay, Edward Prall and Ignatius Wheeler, authorized William Pinkney to act as attorney for the county in a dispute between Harford and Baltimore counties, which was to be heard at the courthouse at Baltimore town on the 2nd Monday in May, 1790. The arbitrators named in the act of Assembly were William Smithson for Harford county and John Smith for Baltimore county.

William Pinkney, afterwards Attorney-General of the United States and Senator from Maryland in the United States Senate, passed the bar at Bel Air, and for several years practiced at that court. He lived in the hip-roofed house on the pike in Bel Air, just opposite the end of Bond street, and his office was located on the southwest corner of Main street and the pike.

January 10, 1791, the Court agreed with James Johnson to finish the courthouse agreeably to the plan filed in the clerk's office; to satisfy him five hundred and fifty pounds as soon as collected for that service, he giving bond and sufficient sureties for his performance.

February 7, 1791, in accordance with the act of Assembly, the Court levied a tax of two shillings and six pence for the completion of the public buildings. The basis of assessment stated in the record is £478,752, which we may consider as the value of all the property in the county, or $2,393,760, from which basis the tax levied for the above purpose amounted to about $1,500.

It will be observed from the above figures that while the population of the county at that period was about one-half of that of the present day, the assessed value of all the property in the county was not more than one-sixth of the present basis.

Our local bar in the year 1796 consisted of the following lawyers, viz:

William Pinkney,  Harry Dorsey,
Aquila Hall,      Davidson David,
Archibald Robinson,  Francis Holland,
John Montgomery,  Z. Hollingsworth.

March 27, 1801.

CHAPTER X.

SIGNS OF THE REVOLUTION.

For years before the Revolution there was great unrest in the American colonies on account of the tax laws enacted by the British Parliament.

As early as 1733 the Importation Act was passed, by which large duties were laid on sugar, molasses and rum brought into the provinces. Then England forbade the manufacture of steel or the cutting of pine trees outside of inclosures. These laws could not be enforced and only served to deepen the resentment of the people. The ground of objection was the absence of colonial members in the British Parliament, and the claim was made that taxation without representation is tyranny.

On March 22, 1765, in spite of the remonstrance of Pitt, Parliament passed the celebrated Stamp Act, the provisions of which were that every bond, mortgage, note, deed, license or legal document should be executed on paper bearing an English stamp and furnished by that government. The price of these stamps ranged from a few pennies to several pounds.
Every newspaper, pamphlet or almanac was required to be printed on stamped paper, costing from a half penny to four pence. Every advertisement was taxed two shillings. Failure to comply with these requirements invalidated the document. The colonies were greatly exasperated on learning of the passage of this law. Public meetings were held in the large cities; in Boston the bells were tolled and in Philadelphia they were muffled. A great procession marched through the streets of New York, bearing a copy of the Stamp Act, with a death's head nailed to it, and with a large placard displaying the words, "The Folly of England and the Ruin of America."

At the invitation of Massachusetts, the colonies sent delegates to a "Stamp-Act Congress," which met in New York October 7, 1765, and protested against the act.

Public opinion in America was so outraged by this law that on March 18, 1766, it was repealed by the British Parliament and the wavering allegiance of the colonies was temporarily restored to the British Crown. But the trouble soon broke out again with the tax on imported tea, and riots occurred in Boston, Philadelphia, Annapolis, Charleston and elsewhere on its account. The owner of the ship Peggy Stewart was forced to burn his own vessel laden with tea in the harbor of Annapolis in October, 1774. A call was issued for a general convention on September 5, 1774. The first Continental Congress met in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia. The most distinguished men of the colonies were members, prominent among them being George Washington and Patrick Henry, of Virginia. On October 8 the following resolution was passed:
"That this Congress approve the opposition of the inhabitants of Massachusetts bay to the execution of the late acts of Parliament; and if the same shall be attempted to be carried into execution by force, in such case all America ought to support them in their opposition."

The attempt was made to carry them into execution and all America joined in the opposition, which brought on the Revolutionary War.

The Congress also adopted, on October 14, a "Declaration of Colonial Rights," and on the 20th of the same month the American Association was adopted, which was an agreement of non-importation, non-consumption and non-exportation applied to Great Britain, Ireland and the West Indies.

The mother country turned a deaf ear to these remonstrances, which may be regarded as preliminary declarations of independence. General Gage was instructed to enforce all these measures with his army, and at Concord and Lexington, on April 19, 1775, was shed the first blood of the Revolution.

The Maryland Convention, which sent delegates to the first Continental Congress, met at Annapolis on June 22, 1774. Matthew Tilghman, of Talbot county, presided. The delegates representing Harford county in this convention were Richard Dallam, John Love, Thomas Bond, Benedict Edward Hall and Jacob Bond. At this convention it was declared that the acts of Parliament were cruel and oppressive invasions of the people's rights, and that the cause of Boston was the cause of all the provinces; that the colonies should unite to stop all importation from and exportation to Great Britain until the acts should be repealed; that a subscription should be opened in the several counties for immediate collection for the relief of the distressed inhabitants of Boston, then cruelly deprived of the means of procuring subsistence for themselves and families by the operation of the act for blocking up their harbor, and that the same be collected by the committees of the respective counties, and shipped by them in such provisions as may be thought most useful; that there should be no dealings with any colony which should refuse to come into the general plan which might be adopted by the colonies; that the deputies from Maryland to the Continental Congress, upon their return, call together the committees of the several counties and lay before them the measures adopted by the general congress.

Matthew Tilghman, Thomas Johnson, Jr., Robert Goldsborough, William Paca and Samuel Chase were sent as delegates to Philadelphia.

The counties promptly responded to the recommendation of the provincial convention. Harford had anticipated the recommendation, for, on June 11, a large meeting of the inhabitants was held at Bush to take action in the matter. Aquila Hall presided over the meeting and the following resolutions were adopted:

"1. Resolved, It is the opinion of this meeting that the town of Boston is now suffering in the common cause of America, and that it is the duty of every colony to unite in the most effectual constitutional means to obtain a repeal of the late act of Parliament for blocking up the harbor and port of Boston.

"2. Resolved, That, therefore, we will join in an association with the other counties of this province, on oath, not to export to, or import from, Great Britain, any kind of produce or merchandise after such a day as the committee of the several counties at their general meeting shall fix, until the Repeal of the Boston port act.

"3. Resolved, That we will deal with none of the West India Islands, colony or colonies, person or persons whatsoever residing therein, who shall not enter in similar resolves with the majority of the colonies within such time as the general committees of this province shall agree, but hold him or them as an enemy or enemies to American liberty.

"4. Resolved, That we join in an association with the other colonies to send relief to the poor and distressed inhabitants of Boston, to enable them to persevere in defence of the common cause.

"5. Resolved, That the merchants ought not to advance the price of their goods, but sell them as they intended had not these resolves been entered into.

"6. Resolved, That the gentlemen of the law ought to bring no suit for recovery of any debt due from any inhabitant of Great Britain, or this or any other colony, until the said act be repealed; except in such cases where the debtor is guilty of a wilful delay in payment, having ability to pay, or is about to abscond or remove his effects, or is wasting his substance, or shall refuse to settle his account by giving his bond on interest (or security, if required), which fact or facts are to be made appear to some neighboring magistrate and certified under his hand.

"7. Resolved, That the following gentlemen, viz: Rev. William West, Messrs. Aquila Hall, Richard Dallam, Thomas Bond (son of Thomas), John Love, Capt.
John Paca, Benedict Edward Hall, Benjamin Rumsey, Nathaniel Giles and Jacob Bond be a committee to meet the committees of other counties in this province, to consult and agree on the most effectual means to preserve our constitutional rights and liberties, and promote that union and harmony between Great Britain and her colonies, on which their preservation depends; and that the same gentlemen, together with the following, Capt. John Matthews, Capt. William Smith, Dr. John Archer, William Younge, Abraham Whita-ker, William Webb, Amos Garret, George Bradford, John Rumsey, Jeremiah Sheredine, William Smithson, William Bond (son of Joshua), Isaac Webster and Alexander Cowan, be a committee of correspondence, and on any emergency to call a general meeting, and that any six of them have power to act.

"Signed per order,
"JOSEPH BUTLER, Cl. Com."*

At the meeting of the convention held December 8 of that year (1774), the sum of four hundred and sixty-six pounds was named as the amount to be subscribed in Harford county for the purchase of arms and ammunition.

Meanwhile, in Congress, the war spirit continued to grow. On June 26, 1775, the Maryland Convention again assembled at Annapolis, and its first movement was to throw off allegiance to the proprietary power and form a provisional government for the State. Then was organized what was known as the "Association of the Freemen of Maryland," which the members of the convention signed. To this association are found

CHAPTER XI.

HARFORD IN THE REVOLUTION.

THE PEOPLE OF THE NEW COUNTY ALIVE TO PUBLIC AFFAIRS—
FAVORABLE SITUATION OF COUNTY SEAT AT BUSH—GREAT MEN PASSING ALONG—HARFORD DECLARATION OF POPULAR RIGHTS.

Several things conspired to cause the people of Harford county to be especially active and interested in public affairs at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War. In the first place, the county had been formed but a year before Lexington and Concord were fought; our people had all the zest and interest in public matters which always characterize newly organized governmental agencies, and the same feeling which made them restless under the removal of their county seat and led to the formation of the new county, was manifest in the spirit that actuated them under the wrongs inflicted by the mother country. One of the first duties imposed upon the new county was to send delegates to the Provincial Convention at Annapolis, which protested against the Stamp Act. The situation of the county seat at Harford Town, or Bush, on the route to and from Philadelphia and New York, the early national capitals, was particularly favorable to our ancestors keeping thoroughly in touch with the spirit of the times. There were several hotels at Bush at the time of which we write, and when our people in those days would repair to the county seat on court business, or whatever might be their errand, it was an usual occurrence for them to meet with and enjoy the acquaintance of such men as Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Randolph, Patrick Henry, the Lees and other great men of those days who lived in the South and who would pass that way in their journeys to and from the large cities of the North.

It is not too much to assume that something of the same spirit and feeling that actuated Washington, who commanded our armies, and Jefferson, who wrote the Declaration of Independence, and Madison, the father of the Constitution, and the other prominent men who were in the habit of stopping at Bush, was infused into our own people, and to the extent of their association with these great men, which, as indicated, was considerable, to the same extent our ancestors had the advantage in public information, knowledge and public spirit over those sections not so favorably situated. As we look back to that distant day, we can see the village hostelry filled with jurors, witnesses, judges and others of our people who had repaired to the county seat on public business. The great open fireplace would be blazing with the cordwood logs; kindly feeling and good cheer would prevail; Mr. Jeremiah Sheredine, Mr. William Webb and Mr. Thomas Bond, of the lords justices, would discuss with Mr. William Smithson the opening of a new road from the Hickory Fork to Winter's Run and debate the probable cost; in another part of the room Mr. Alexander Lawson, the clerk of the court, would be engaged in conversation with Mr. Aquila Hall and Mr. Aquila Paca, who lived nearby and had dropped in for a social hour; a slight commotion would be heard outside and, as is the custom in the country, all would go to discover the cause. Just coming over the brow of the hill from Bynum's run two horsemen would appear, the dress, carriage, horses and tout ensemble of the riders would clearly indicate that they were gentlemen of distinction; following them would be two negro servants equally well mounted; the livery of the servants and their perfect manners indicating that they were of the quality as well as their masters; some one of the better acquainted would advance and address the elder traveler with "Colonel Washington, how do you do?" The gentleman accosted would reply, "Mr. Paca, I am glad to see you; allow me to present to you my friend, Mr. Jefferson, of Virginia," and then the entire assemblage would be presented to the great men and would for the rest of the evening enjoy the conversation of one or both of them. The politics of the day would be discussed and the latest views of the leading men of the times would be freely given to the guests thus gathered together. We can imagine Mr. Jefferson, with his tall, spare form, red face and hair, advising the fathers of our county met at the Bush tavern to organize and send delegates to the Annapolis Convention and the Continental Congress. We can see him standing in front of the open fire, exhorting his auditors to organize and pass resolutions expressing their views; and to scenes such as these were the representative people of the county so accustomed that when the hour arrived they were ready, active and courageous.

This association, with the leading men of the colonies, bore fruit in the passage of a resolution by the committee of Harford county on the 22nd day of March, 1775, which may properly be called the first Declaration of Independence made by any representative body in America. The committee of Harford county was not in any sense a mass-meeting. Its members were duly elected by the ten thousand white people of the county; the thirty-four names signed to the resolution were the leading men of the new county, and their descendants are justly proud of this signal evidence of the courage and patriotism of their ancestors. The terms of the resolution, even without the aid of the knowledge of the resolves and the association of the Continental Congress and the resolves of the Provincial Convention, indicate beyond a doubt that the signers realized that they were not dealing in mere glittering generalities, but that it was necessary for them to hang together, so that they might thereby avoid the unpleasant alternative of hanging separately.

When it was considered necessary to close the resolution with these words, "We do most solemnly pledge ourselves to each other, and to our country, and engage ourselves by every tie held sacred among mankind, to perform the same at the risque of our lives and fortunes," we may know that the signers had a full realization of the meaning of their famous declaration and of the work in which they were about to engage.

The following is the language of the declaration:

"We, the Committee of Harford County, having most seriously and maturely considered the Resolves and Association of the Continental Congress and the Resolves of the Provincial Convention, do most heartily approve of the same, and as we esteem ourselves in a more particular manner intrusted by our Constituents to see them carried into Execution, we do most solemnly pledge ourselves to each other, and to our country, and engage ourselves by every tie held sacred among mankind, to perform the same at the risque of our lives and fortunes.

In this declaration is foreshadowed Lexington and Concord, Bunker Hill and Long Island, Trenton, Monmouth and Princeton, and the final triumph at Yorktown.

When we consider that the Resolves of the Continental Congress were the Bill of Rights defining the privileges of English speaking people everywhere, and that the signers to the Bush declaration declared their intention to see them carried into execution at the risk of their lives and fortunes, we may consider that except in detail this declaration breathed the same spirit as Jefferson's instrument of more than a year later.

A revolution differs from a rebellion only in that the former is attended with success. And had the Revolution of 1776 failed, and had the army of Washington been overthrown, it is not too much to suppose that the good people of our county, who rejoice in their descent from these patriots whose names are signed to the Bush declaration, would have as part of their inheritance the bitter knowledge of the execution of an ancestor for treason.

The same quality of the Englishman that put Harrison to death and dug up the dead body of Cromwell and hung it in chains after it had been in the grave for years, would have made itself manifest at that later day had the British government triumphed in their effort to enslave the American colonies. The date of this declaration is but two days after the celebrated speech of Patrick Henry, in Virginia, when he exclaimed: "The war is inevitable. Gentlemen may cry peace, peace, but there is no peace. The next gale that sweeps from the north will bring to our ears the crash of resounding arms. What would you have? Is life so dear or peace so sweet to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery. I know not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty or give me death."

The fires were beginning to be kindled and liberty or death was the prevailing sentiment. And so the representatives of the county signing this declaration at Bush sixteen months before the declaration at Philadelphia on July 4, 1776, was a cry for liberty, from an obscure community, if you please, but it breathed the same patriotic spirit and bore the same central thought as the great instrument itself.

Let no one belittle this act of our forefathers, or take one laurel from the brow of those great and good men of our county, who at the risk of their lives and their fortunes were the first to give utterance to such sentiments, looking to national freedom and independence. They have all long ago passed over the dark river and joined the silent majority, and of them we can say in the ritual of the church, to the Author of every good and perfect gift, "we bless Thy holy name for all Thy servants departed this life in Thy faith and fear," and in particular "we give Thee hearty thanks for the good example of these, Thy servants, who having finished their course in faith do now rest from their labors."

The surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown was the final overthrow of English supremacy. With the success of the American arms came the necessity for a more perfect union. The first government was under the Articles of Confederation, which proved inadequate, and so the constitution was formed and adopted, and with the inauguration of Washington the new government went into operation in all its branches.

THE ENROLLMENT OF THE COUNTY MILITIA—THE FLYING CAMP—ALEXANDER LAWSON SMITH'S HARFORD COMPANY AT THE BATTLE OF FORT WASHINGTON.

In accordance with the recommendation of the Provincial Assembly, companies were enrolled in Harford county as follows:

"We whose names are subscribed do hereby enroll ourselves into a company of militia, agreeable to the resolutions of the Provincial Convention held at Annapolis the 26th day of July, 1775, and we do promise and engage that we will respectively march to such places within this province, and at such times, as we shall be commanded by the convention or council of safety, of this province, or by our officers, in pursuance of the orders of the said convention or council, and there, with our whole power, fight against whomsoever we shall be commanded by such authority as aforesaid."

At a meeting of the deputies appointed by the several counties of the province of Maryland at the city of Annapolis, by adjournment on the 8th day of December, 1774, and continuing till the 12th day of the same month, it was resolved that the freeholders and others and freemen from fifteen to sixty years of age should form themselves into companies of sixty-eight men, to choose a captain, two lieutenants, an ensign, four sergeants, four corporals and a drummer for each company. In compliance therewith and agreeable thereunto, a sufficient number being inhabitants of Maryland, in Harford county, adjacent to the Lower the most conspicuous part was that of Fort Washington, on the Hudson river, in the State of New York, on November 16, 1776. General Washington had intended this fort to be evacuated, but through a misunderstanding, General Greene, who was in immediate command in that section, sent reinforcements. Among these were Col. Moses Rawlings' regiment of Maryland riflemen, the garrison in the fort after being reinforced, amounting to two thousand men. The engagement was most sanguinary, but the Americans in the end were forced to retreat. The battle lasted several hours, the loss on both sides being heavy. The British lost nearly nine hundred men in killed and wounded, more than half of which was sustained in the attack upon Rawlings' riflemen. Gordon, in his History of the American Revolution, says: "It cost Knyphausen near upon eight hundred men to force the single regiment of Rawlings back."

G. W. Greene says: "Had Rawlings been supported, Knyphausen could not have gained the north lines; but the men refused to man them, and crowded into the redoubt, where they became a compact mark for the enemy's guns. The defence on the east was still more irresolute, and there are questions connected with that on the south which will, it is probable, never be solved. But had it been like that of Rawlings' riflemen it would well nigh crippled the enemy."*

General Washington said of this engagement: "The enemy have suffered greatly on the north side of Fort Washington. Colonel Rawlings' regiment (late Hugh Stephenson's) was posted there and behaved with great gallantry."

The following is the roster of the Harford Company taking part in this battle:

First Company of Maryland Rifles, under Lieutenant-Colonel Moses Rawlings—Alex. Lawson Smith, captain; William Bradford, lieutenant; John Tompson, sergeant; Matthew Alexander, sergeant; Joshua Saunders, sergeant; Isaac Rose, corporal; John Howe, corporal; Thomas Lively, fifer.

*Scharf's History of Maryland.
On October 28, 1776, was fought the battle of White Plains, in which engagement the second battalion of the flying camp took part. This battalion was commanded by Col. Josias Carvil Hall, and contained two companies from Harford.

One of these companies was commanded by Captain Bennet Bussey, the other commissioned officers of which were: Joshua Miles, first lieutenant; Azael Hitchcock, second lieutenant, and Aquila Amos, ensign. The other company had the following commissioned officers: Aquila Paca, captain; John Beadle Hall, first lieutenant; Michael Gilbert, second lieutenant; John Patterson, ensign.

On April 6, 1781, Washington wrote from New Windsor, in Connecticut, to Lafayette, then at Elkton, Md., directing him to move with a detachment of the American Army and reinforce General Greene in the South. In response to this order Lafayette departed from Elkton on April 11 and crossed the Susquehanna into Harford county at a point now known as Bald Friar.

La Fayette in his memoirs says the richest young men in Virginia and Maryland came to join him as volunteer dragoons, and from their intelligence, as well as the superiority of their horses, they were of essential service to him.

The General after leaving Elkton passed the first night at the house of Job Haines, near Rising Sun, in Cecil county, and the next day after crossing the river at Bald Friar, he became the guest of Colonel James Rigby, an ancestor of the Massey family in the Darlington section of the county.

The old house near the river is yet standing in which La Fayette wrote a letter to Col. Alexander Hamilton, who was temporarily absent from his command. Near the residence of Colonel Rigby there is an old log building which was used as a jail in the Colonel’s time. It is built of yellow poplar logs laid close together, and when in good order it was doubtless a secure place of confinement for ordinary offenders.

La Fayette held a council of his officers at Colonel Rigby’s house on the night of April 13, 1781. In imagination we can go back to that night in the old Rigby Mansion and to the capacious fireplace with the blazing logs. The fireplace was in one of those wonderful chimneys that were the pride of our forefathers and a marvel to persons now living. The present owner tore it down some years ago, and after building from it a modern chimney had bricks enough from it to build an outbuilding.

In the fields about the house the men and horses had such food and shelter as their scanty commissariat afforded. At the council besides La Fayette were General Hazen and Colonels Vose, Gimat, Barber, Huntingdon and the other field officers. The question of desertions was the matter under consideration. At this council in the old house of Colonel Rigby a proclamation was prepared and next day issued, in which the General stated that he was on his way to meet and fight a powerful foe. That for himself no diminution in numbers would deter him, but that firm in reliance on the God of battles and the justice of the American cause, he would continue his march to meet the enemy. He closed by offering a free pass to every soldier applying for it at headquarters by which he might have leave to go home. Not one man availed himself of the offer, and from that time desertion ceased.

In crossing the Susquehanna the boat in which was La Fayette ran aground before reaching the land, and Aquila Deaver, one of the soldiers, carried the General ashore on his back. Aquila Deaver lived in Harford county for nearly half a century after the Revolution, dying about 1835, and the writer has heard the account from an old gentleman now living who, when a boy, heard it from the old pensioner himself, who would relate his experience from his seat on the counter of the Hopewell store, seventy years ago.

Forty-three years after this incident, when, in 1824, La Fayette passed through Cecil and Harford counties on his tour as the guest of the nation, he held a reception at Port Deposit, and Aquila Deaver, then grown from a boy to an old man, paid his respects to his commander, who, too, had long passed the meridian of life and felt the weight of his many years and cares. The old soldier reminded the General of the incident at the ferry, and was greatly pleased to find that the distinguished visitor clearly remembered both the person and the service.

The troops marched by way of Trappe Church, Priestford, Churchville, Bush and Abingdon to Baltimore. La Fayette dined at Bush, which was then the county seat. Before reaching the Trappe church a trunk said to contain coin was lost from a baggage wagon. It was found and restored by Reuben Jones, who has numerous descendants now living in Dublin district of Harford county.

Mr. Angus Greme, who died in 1880, at the residence of Mr. Edward M. Allen, near Darlington, in Harford county, aged eighty years, was a son of Captain Greme, who served on La Fayette's staff on this expedition.

When the officers reached that part of the road which descends to Deer Creek, at Priestford, from the Trappe Church, opposite the beautiful Indian Spring farm, they were enchanted with the scene. Looking westward in descending Deer Creek they beheld the valley that stretches across the creek and up Thomas' Run. Capt. Greme agreed with his friend, Capt. Gimat, that when the war was over they would return to France, and after arranging their affairs, come back to America and buy the land which so enchanted their eyes. This plan they carried out, and after gentle peace had spread her wings over the land the two friends returned and bought the rich farm, lately the home of Dr. James M. Magraw, on Thomas’ Run. Gimat, who was wealthy, paid for the land and presented it to his friend Greme, and both returned to France, intending to come back to America. But they served in the French Army in the war then in progress on the continent, and Gimat went to Santo Domingo in the service of France and was killed there.

Greme, however, returned, bringing his wife and several children, and he lived and died on the estate he and his friend had chosen as the most beautiful spot they had seen in America. He died in the year 1800, and lies buried in the cemetery of the Trappe Church, in Harford county, where a stone marks his grave, bearing on it an inscription stating his connection with the Army of La Fayette.

Colonel Gimat was especially distinguished at Yorktown, whither La Fayette led his detachment which passed through Harford.*

CHAPTER XIV.

OLD CHURCHES.

SPESUTIA CHURCH IN ST. GEORGE'S PARISH, HARFORD COUNTY, MARYLAND—THE CATHOLIC CHURCH—BETHEL.

SPESUTIA.*

Although the existing records carry us back two centuries, it is more than probable that many years of the history of St. George's have been irrevocably lost. There is the records' internal evidence, which clearly shows that its existence as a parish reaches back to a period far beyond the time of their earliest date. Uniform tradition informs us that the first church erected in this parish stood near Michaelsville, at a place called "Gravelly." Here the spot is pointed out, and here are the almost obliterated remains of the building in which the first founders of the ancient parish worshiped, whilst the sunken graves on every side mark their last earthly resting place. These, together with the fact that the bridge near this locality is called "Church Bridge," and has been so called from time beyond the recollection of any one living, is, we think, very clear evidence of the fact that the spot which we have designated is that which was consecrated by being the site of the original "Spesutia Church," the first place of worship ever erected in St. George's Parish. From the circumstance that none of the materials of this primitive church edifice are now to be found, the presumption is that it was a wooden structure. Allowing thirty years as the time this first church stood, (and the probability is that it stood much longer), calculating from a date now upon record, we are induced to fix upon the year 1671 as the latest date from which to reckon the organization of St. George's Parish.

The first event which the church register records, which register is a book of parchment, is that of the birth of "John Cook, son of John Cook, born at Bush river, on the 25th of September, in the year of our Lord, 1681." The register in question, viz., the book of parchment, is the only record of these times now extant, and it contains a summary of the births, marriages and deaths of the early parishioners. The record of vestry acts, we regret to say, is lost. This, could it be recovered, would be an interesting document, as it would, no doubt, detail to us the advancing stages of growth and improvement of the parish from the time at which the humble wooden edifice arose in the heart of the forest to gladden the souls of the first worshipers, to the erection of the spacious brick structure, with its arched windows, its vaulted roof and imposing proportions, surrounded, too, not by the unreclaimed forest, but by fertile fields and active, thriving industry. But the record we say is irrevocably lost, and imagination of the reader must supply the gap. For some cause or other, the original wooden church, near Michaelsville, was permitted to go down. As the country became opened there seems to have been a tendency on the part of the people to move upward through the forest in quest of health or wealth, or probably both. This of course, removed the parishioners more remotely from their first selected spot, and inclined them to choose another location for a new church. With this state of things we approach the period at which our written authenticated record begins.

About the year A. D. 1718 we find that a piece of land, containing two acres, was given and deeded to the vestry of St. George’s Parish, by James Phillips, for the purpose of building a church upon it. This was a park of an ancient tract of land, known as “James’ Park,” and a more beautiful and appropriate spot could hardly have been found. The lot borders on a small meandering stream, and is distinguished by clusters of large primitive oaks, whose wide spreading branches seem to proclaim to the passer-by that the spot which he is approaching is holy ground; whilst to the eastward an extensive champaign country stretches out as far as the eye can reach, with its fertile fields and comfortable homesteads. By this consecrated, sacred spot many a traveler wends his way, as it borders immediately upon the great highway, along which most of the travel of this region must pass; whilst for more than a mile, as the stranger of every land and clime is whirled along upon the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad, the most prominent and attractive object that meets his gaze is “Spesutia church” and its embowering oaks. Indeed, no one can visit or look upon this spot without at once being impressed with its surpassing beauty. But to pass on to the second church edifice erected in St. George’s Parish. This church was built about the year of our Lord 1718, at which time we find that the Rev. Evan Evans, D. D., was the incumbent. The probability is that during the incumbency of this rector the second church building was erected. This, like the first, was a wooden building, though, perhaps, on a larger scale, and of much more substantial fabric, for at this time, as every family seems to have been a church family, the congregation must have been very large, and extensive accommodations were consequently required. But whatever might have been the capacity or expensiveness of this church building, it had quite gone into decay before it was again rebuilt. In its dilapidated condition the materials were finally sold at a public vendue, and were purchased by Dr. Alexander Stenhouse for the small sum of £5.8s. There was also at this time a vestry house on the same lot, which being in a better state of preservation than the church, seems to have remained for several years after the latter was removed.

The next rector was the Rev. Robert Weyman, who was inducted in the year 1722. Prior to this he had been supplying the parish temporarily. In 1724 Rev. John Humphreys produced letters of induction from his excellency, Charles Calvert, Governor of the Province of Maryland.

In the year 1725 Rev. John Holbrook was inducted. In 1726 Rev. Charles Smith produced letters of induction from his excellency, Charles Calvert, Governor of the Province. This reverend gentleman seems to have been somewhat refractory, as the following letter shows:

"Sir, I perceive, notwithstanding my letter to you, wherein I ordered you to conform to the government or else to return your induction, that you have done neither. I therefore positively require you to deliver your induction to the bearer, as you will answer to the contrary.

Charles Calvert.

"To the Rev. Charles Smith, in Baltimore County."

"1st May, 1726."

On the 4th of June, 1726, at a vestry meeting, the following letter was presented:

"Maryland, by the Hon. Charles Calvert, Esq.,

"Captain-General and Commander-in-Chief.

To the Vestry of St. George’s Parish in Baltimore Co.

"Greeting: Whereas, the Rev. Stephen Wilkinson hath been sent and recommended by the Rev. Father in God, Edmond, Lord Bishop of London, Diocesan of this Province, to officiate as minister of the Church of England, I do hereby appoint the said Stephen Wilkinson minister of your parish, willing, and requiring you to receive him as such, and strictly command you to be aiding and assisting him; to the intent, he may have the full benefit of the forty pounds of Tob. per poll, raised for the support of the ministers of your parish, and all other rights, dues and perquisites to the said office belonging.

"Given at Annapolis, this 25th day of May, 1726."

The gentleman just appointed by the governor seems to have been quite popular for a time. He continued as rector of the parish through a space of eighteen years. Towards the close of his incumbency he became very careless, permitting the parish library to be abused and the glebe to go into decay. It seems that this glebe, containing two hundred acres, was bought a few months after he became settled as rector of the parish; it was located on “Swan Creek,” and is now the most productive land in Harford county. It was subsequently sold and another bought in a more healthy part of the parish. This was again sold and is the location of Harford Furnace. The money arising from this sale is invested in bank stock, and yields more than one-half of the rector's salary. Thus, even now, do the present members of St. George's Parish enjoy the benefits of those two hundred acres of land bought one hundred and seventy-five years ago, having served annually for so many years to aid in the support of the ministration of the Gospel among the parishioners.

Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, whose end we have found to be so different from his first entry into the parish, died unwept, unhonored and unsung. At the time of his death, which was the 25th of March, 1744, the vestry appointed a committee, consisting of "Capt. James Phillips, Col. Thomas White, Capt. Peregrine Frisbee, and Mr. Richard Ruff, to acquaint the governor of the death of Mr. Wilkinson, and request him not to induct another minister disagreeable to the parishioners."

The next appointment was Rev. Hugh Carlisle, in the year 1744. During his rectorship the church had become so dilapidated that thoughts were entertained of rebuilding. In 1745 a petition was drawn up to the Assembly for a levy on the taxables for this purpose. This, however, was not carried into effect until several years subsequently. A new rector, the Rev. Andrew Lendrum, was inducted in the year 1749. The following year a new petition was sent to the Assembly for 75,000 pounds of tobacco, payable in November, 1754-55 and 56, for the purpose of rebuilding the church. Now the work was prosecuted with vigor and resulted in replacing the old dilapidated £5 8s. church with a fine brick one. It is probable that the parish at this time was at the height of its prosperity. It had grown strong and influential. They devised a house on a more extensive and grand scale—a house which, at that early day and in this then rude wilderness country, was a monument that reflected credit on their zeal and liberality. This was the second time Spesutia Church had been rebuilt, and probably improved in size and cost every time. It stood very near the old wooden one, which, as stated, was sold to Dr. Stenhouse. As we learn from a resolution of the vestry, the old one was sold on a credit of six months and was to be taken away within a given time. The purchaser, however, failing to do this, the vestry notified him that if it should fall against the new one after the time for its removal had elapsed, he should be required to pay all damage the new one might sustain in its fall. This statement is important, because some have said that this second building stood in one place, and some in another, and all that it was located in a different place to the true one. This seems to be rather an unimportant enquiry, but in giving a history of the church it is right to correct a common error, and thereby attach to this spot a sanctity which the hallowed purposes it has so long served must give it.

The church now built was of brick, fifty-seven feet long and thirty-five feet wide. The floor was laid with flagstone. The pulpit stood on the north side and was overhung by a canopy. The windows and doors were arched; there was also a fine arched chancel, and this church was furnished with an organ. It was a very substantial building. It stood for almost a hundred years. The foundation was deeply laid, being of hard brick, three feet thick. The timbers in the roof were very large and of the best sawed oak, well framed together, and in a fine state of preservation when taken down. It has been supposed that the brick were of English manufacture, but this is a mistake, for we find that in the month of June, 1756, Capt. John Hall took the contract for burning and delivering one hundred thousand for the sum of £185 1s. 8d. In the following year Mr. John Deaver engaged to put up the brick and furnish forty-seven thousand eight hundred and seventy-five more, which were required to complete the work, for £177 1os. currency; and Samuel Wallace con-£430. The house was finished in 1758. The whole cost, £430. The house was finished in 1758. The whole cost, including flagstone, velvet cushions, linen for surplices, was about $3,500. The church stood without any alteration up to June, 1832, when the interior underwent entire renovation and alteration. The flagstone floor was taken up; the high pulpit with its hanging canopy was removed; the large, square, high pews were taken out; the fine arched windows and doors were contracted into square ones. The cost of the whole was about $1,000, raised principally by means of a fair conducted by the ladies. So it stood until the year 1851, when it was found necessary to raze it to its foundations and rebuild it entirely.

Having gone thus far with the three several churches that have been built in St. George's Parish, it is necessary to go back to the year 1760, in order to take some note of the vestry acts. We find in this year a curious act: "The vestry proceeds to business and taxes the undermentioned persons as bachelors:"

The register was ordered to make a "fair copy of this list of bachelors, to affix it at the church door for the above persons to make their objections why they should not be taxed, if they have any." A very summary, and, one would think, convincing argument this in favor of matrimony, and no doubt told during the ensuing year in the number of devotees of hymen's altar.

About this time a chapel was built on Deer Creek, at a place called the "Trapp;" it was the same in every particular, as to size and fashion, as Spesutia Church. The rector of St. George's officiated in it at stated times. In the year 1851, some of the remaining churchmen applied to the vestry for a new parish, including that site, with a view of rebuilding, which was granted; they applied to the convention of the diocese and were received as an independent parish.

In the year 1769 the Rev. John Porter was inducted. It is stated by some that he used to walk by the river shore and practice his sermon for the next Sunday. He was a highly gifted speaker and attracted great crowds, and while preaching a pin might be heard in falling, so still and attentive were the listeners. He lived but a little time and died in the parish, deeply lamented by all. In 1770 the Rev. William Edmondson was inducted.

In the year 1772 the Rev. William West was inducted. He seems to have been a very popular and useful rector. He continued about eleven years and was the rector during the Revolutionary War and resigned with a view of accepting a call to St. Paul's, Baltimore. For several years before and after the famous year '76 there were no vestry meetings. The first meeting after the Declaration of Independence was June 7, 1779; the gentlemen elected were Edward Ward, Francis Holland, Greenberry Dorsey, Alexander Rigdon, John Rumsey, Aquila Paca, Jr., and Edward Hall; William Loney and John Farmer, church wardens. James Childs was chosen register. In 1783 Rev. James Wilmer was chosen rector; in 1787 Rev. John Ireland, and in 1792 Rev. John Allen was rector. The latter had considerable mathematical skill, and was of great eccentricity of character. Many innocent and amusing anecdotes are now related of him. He labored long and well and died lamented. Though not rector of the parish when he died, he was brought here and buried at the east end of the church by the side of his wife. Rev. Mr. Handy seems to have been an assistant to Mr. Allen. He labored in the town of Havre de Grace, where a church has since been built. This, at a latter period, became an independent parish.
In 1815, Rev. Daniel Stephens, D. D., was chosen rector, a gentleman greatly beloved. In 1820 Rev. William Jackson was elected rector. He remained but two years; but his mild and Christian deportment and zeal for his Master's cause left him a warm place in the affections of the parishioners. In 1823 Rev. J. Reynolds was chosen rector. In 1829 Rev. Edward Y. Higbee; he was a popular preacher and greatly revived the parish, both spiritually and temporally. It was under his rectorship that the church was repaired and changed in its interior arrangement. This change, though it destroyed the architectural proportions of the building, conduced very much to the comfort and convenience of minister and people. In 1833 Rev. Robert Loyd Goldsborough was elected rector; in 1841 Rev. Thomas F. Billopp, and in 1845 Rev. S. W. Crampton.

In 1851, as above noticed, the third Spesutia Church was removed to give place for the construction of the fourth, which is built upon the same hallowed site, and in part upon the same foundations on which its predecessor stood; and upon the 18th day of September, A. D. 1851, the interesting ceremony of laying the corner-stone of the new church took place, an account of which is herewith given:

"In the name of the Holy Trinity, this corner-stone is laid with appropriate rites and ceremonies by the Rev. Savington Warren Crampton, assisted by the Rev. Joseph Trapnell, Jr., rector of St. Andrew's Church, Baltimore; Rev. George A. Leakin, rector of Trinity Church, Baltimore, and the Rev. William F. Brand, rector of St. Mary's Church, Harford county, Md.

"This is the third time Spesutia Church has been rebuilt. The first house of worship erected in St.
George's Parish was located on a place called Gravelly, about half a mile southeast of Michaelsville. That is supposed to have been a wooden house, built about the year of our Lord 1671. About the year 1718 it was rebuilt on the Cranberry, near the spot which is at present occupied. The lot of ground containing about two acres, was given by Capt. James Phillips. In 1758 it was again rebuilt. This was a fine brick building, fifty-seven feet long and thirty-five feet wide, with fine arch windows, doors and ceiling and a flag-stone floor at a cost of £792 1s. 8d. Capt. John Hall contracted to burn and deliver the bricks. John Deaver was the mason and Samuel Wallace the carpenter. This church was repaired in the year 1832, the flag-stone floor was removed, the arched windows and doors were changed into the square form and the exterior rough cast and laid off into rectangles; the whole cost of the repairs was about $1,000.

"So it continued up to 1851, when the whole church is taken down and is being rebuilt with the same bricks, in the Norman style of architecture, and is to cost $3,465. A list of rectors from the organization of the parish, as far as can be ascertained, shows that they have been twenty-one in number, and are as follows: The first was Rev. Evan Evans, D. D., incumbent in 1718; Rev. Robert Weyman in 1722; Rev. John Humphreys in 1724; Rev. John Holbrook in 1725; Rev. Charles Smith in 1726; Rev. Stephen Wilkinson in 1726; Rev. Hugh Carlisle in 1744; Rev. Andrew Lendrum in 1749; Rev. John Porter in 1769; Rev. Wm. Edmundson in 1770; Rev. William West in 1772; Rev. James Wilmer in 1783; Rev. John Ireland in 1789; Rev. John Allen in 1792; Rev. Mr. Handy, his

"This now third rebuilding of Spesutia Church is on the same site as the former one. It is to be devoted to the service of Almighty God, in accordance with the principles of the Christian faith, as maintained by the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, established upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone.

"Frederick E. Patterson, John Paca Dallam, wardens.

"Dr. Jacob A. Preston, John Sidney Hall, William Fitzhugh Turner, John Jay, Aquila D. Keen, Andrew Hall, William Alfred Patterson and John Cowan, vestrymen.

"S. W. Crampton and George Wm. Hall, building committee.

"Aquila D. Keen, contractor.

"Robert R. Vandiver and John Waream, sub-contractors for mason work."
“T. W. & E. Moulton, sub-contractors for carpenters' work.

In the year 1718 the vestry were Roger Mathews, John Clark, Joseph Johnson and Gregory Farmer.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN HARFORD COUNTY.

Very early in the opening of the eighteenth century members of the Catholic Church began to take up lands and settle about Deer Creek and its tributaries, from the Susquehanna river in the east to the neighborhood of Cooptown in the west.

Of the first names that are in evidence of this immigration, these are some of the more prominent: Wheeler, Clarke, Shea, McElroy, Foy, and at a period somewhat later, Flanagan, Cretin, Doran, McBride, Quinlan, Mattingly, Jenkins, Green, Cooper, Coskery, Cain, Bussey, Boarman, Macatee, etc., etc.

There appear to have been a more or less compact settlement made in the vicinity of Priestford; for here, at least as far as is known, the first church land was purchased.

In the year 1747 Rev. Bennet Neale, S. J., came to reside at Deer Creek. He was the grandson of the noted Capt. James Neale, and the granduncle of Archbishop Leonard Neale. Whether there were other priests residing in this region before the coming of Father Neale is not certainly known, nor have been handed down the names of any of the fathers who, without doubt, attended the faithful living in this region at regular intervals prior to Father Neale's residence in the parish. The Jesuits had established an adjacent mission in Cecil county as early as 1704, and it is highly probable that Deer Creek was attended from this mission, which was known as Bohemia, being situated on Bohemia Creek. Certain it is that Father Neale was stationed at Bohemia, and thence came to make his home in this county. Some years after his arrival, that is, in 1750, he purchased of Mr. Henry Beach a narrow strip of land, "together with all the houses, gardens, fences and profits belonging or in any way appertaining thereto." This plot of ground contained but eighteen acres of land, which lay bordering the creek on the south side, and here one is naturally inclined to conjecture stood the missionary's home, which, in public document of the year 1756, was alluded to as "Priest Neale's Mass House," and which also gave occasion to the fording being called Priest's Ford.

In 1764 Mr. Thomas Shea, who had been a resident of Priest's Ford for fifty years, deeded to Father Neale one of his farms, which adjoined the small tract of eighteen acres just mentioned. This farm, which is still known by the name of Paradise, is now the home of Mr. R. Harris Archer, and his residence is the old chapel house which came into use for divine service some time about 1764. It is a singular structure, crowning a small mount on the borders of the creek, but one story high, with thick stone walls, and having almost the appearance of an old block house used for defence against the Indians. It has been generally sup- posed to have been erected by Mr. Shea prior to his donation, but this is by no means an assured fact, for an old document, quite respectable for its authority, mentions Father Neale as the builder. It is, perhaps, not unlikely that Mr. Shea had already erected a dwell- ing, and that Father Neale made some extensive alter- ations when he took possession of the same.

This chapel was under the title and patronage of St. Joseph, foster father of the World’s Redeemer. The central part of the building, running like a long and wide hallway through the house, was alone used for church purposes. The other rooms were the private apartments of the priest. This was conformable to the laws of the province, which prohibited Catholics from having public places of worship, but tolerated these domiciliary oratories or chapels.

Father Neale and his successors for many years after him were of very little, if, indeed, any charge to their flock, but drew their main support from the prod- uce of their farm. Besides the eighteen acres of land purchased in 1750 and the one hundred and fifteen acres given by Mr. Shea in 1764, there was added in 1786 another tract of land containing three hundred and sixty-nine acres. This purchase was made not by the congregation, but by the agent of a corporation of the Catholic clergymen, and the land, although lying on the other side of the creek, was in very close prox- imity to the other two smaller tracts.

The little mission of Deer Creek continued under the care of Reverend Bennet Neale until about 1770, when this devoted pastor was succeeded in his office by Rev. Ignatius Matthews, who was likewise a Jesuit. This reverend father resided at Priestford until the summer of 1779, but he was absent from the mission, apparently, during parts of the years 1775 and 1776, when his place was supplied by Rev. Bernard Didrick.

About the middle of the year 1779 Rev. Charles Sewall was appointed to replace Father Matthews. It was Father Sewall who, in September, 1779, bought of Mr. Martin Preston a plot of ground containing about two acres of land. The purchase was made at a nominal figure, and the land was practically a gift.

On these grounds was begun the building of a new chapel, which was not, however, completed for several years later. Not, indeed, until some time about September, 1792. This building was considerably enlarged in 1848, and is now the venerable structure standing at the junction of the Hickory and Forest Hill roads, and known as St. Ignatius Church.

Father Sewall's stay in Harford county was limited to perhaps a little more than a year and a half. Shortly after leaving St. Joseph's, Deer Creek, he took charge of the Catholics in Baltimore Town, and became their first resident pastor.

His successor here was Rev. Sylvester Boarman, during whose pastorate St. Ignatius was built. Tradition says it was five years building, and the time may have been considerably longer by reason of a lack of funds, for times were at their worst financially. Tradition also will have it, at least in some quarters, that most of the expense of construction was borne by one particular family; but this is now known to be an exaggeration, if not, indeed, an undoubted error.

St. Ignatius was at first nothing more than a mission chapel. Father Boarman and his quasi-assistant, Rev. Charles Leander Lusson, continued to make their home at Priestford, and so likewise did their successors for many years. The precise time of Father Boarman's departure from this mission is not known, but it was presumably in or close to the year 1799.

Rev. William Pasquet, who succeeded him, was in charge four years, and thereafter resided at Bohemia, in Cecil county, where he appears to have paid only occasional visits to his old parishioners in his official capacity.

Reverend Doctor Cornelius Mahoney, the next incumbent, died within a short time after his appointment, and Father Pasquet's services were again required for the adjoining county.

About the beginning of the year 1807 Rev. Joseph Eden came and took up his residence at Priestford, where he was in charge until his death, which occurred in December, 1813. The following year the piece of property donated by Mr. Thomas Shea, and on which the old chapel-house stood, was sold, and St. Ignatius became the sole place of worship.

In 1815 Rev. Roger Smith was appointed to St. Ignatius. There was at that time no parochial residence for the pastor, the former one having been sold the previous year, as just stated. This was a serious inconvenience for Father Smith, as he was obliged to reside at St. Mary's Seminary, in Baltimore, whence for nearly two years he attended his distant charge. In the spring, however, of 1817, he came to live near St. Ignatius, and made his home with his brother, Mr. Samuel Smith, a resident of the county, and who dwelt on his farm, located but a short distance from the chapel. Here Father Smith resided for the remainder of his term, which lasted until 1820, at which time he was called to Baltimore, and some years after was appointed rector of the Cathedral.

Rev. Timothy O’Brien, Father Smith’s successor, was pastor of St. Ignatius for twelve years. He built in 1822 the small pastoral residence which adjoins the church, and was thus the first priest to reside on the present premises.

The following is a list of the priests of St. Ignatius since Father O’Brien:

Rev. Francis T. Todrig, until 1832.
Rev. Dr. Henry B. Coskery, until 1834.
Rev. James Reid, until 1845.
Rev. Thomas O’Neil, until 1851, who enlarged St. Ignatius and built St. Patrick’s, Havre de Grace.
Rev. Jacob A. Walter, until 1858. During his pastorate St. Mary’s, Deer Creek, was built.
Rev. John Gloyd, until 1858.
Rev. James McDevitt, until 1863.
Rev. Henry Hoffman, until 1865.
Rev. D. DeWulf, until 1865.

Rev. Jos. A. Gallen, until 1878.
Rev. Francis M. Fowler, until 1898.
Rev. J. Alphonse Frederick.
BETHEL.

Rev. Andrew B. Cross, for many years pastor at Bethel, in his history of the church, refers to it in the early days as in the wilderness of Upper Node Forest, Baltimore county. This district has been called by him "the Cradle of Presbyterianism" in the United States. In the seventeenth century great numbers of Presbyterians began to settle in Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, New Castle, Del., being a favorite landing place. Rev. Francis Makennie, who has been called the pioneer and father of Presbyterianism in this country, was here in 1684. Among the other early preachers of this faith in the new land of the West were McNish and Hampton, in 1703; Davis and Wilson, in 1692; Jedediah Andrews and Hugh Conn, in 1698. In the year 1729 the tribe of Indians called the Susquehannocks occupied the country from the long crooked river bearing their name, out through Harford and York counties and along Deer Creek. It is said they had a fort on the river at Bald Friar, or Maiden's Mount, near Bald Friar Ferry. A tribe called the Mingoès also occupied the northern section of what is now Harford, and prior to 1763 this tribe had three settlements on Deer Creek. One of these settlements was on the west side of the stream about half a mile above the Rocks; another was a village almost exactly on the spot where Anderson's or Stansbury's mill now stands. The name of this village was Mingo Push, called after a chief of the tribe who lived there. On December 14, 1763, at Conestoga, Pennsylvania, occurred the dreadful massacre of the Mingoes, which caused the remainder of that tribe to leave this section of the country.

The Mason and Dixon line was commenced in 1764, and in its construction the surveyors were stopped December 26, 1767, by the order of the Six Nations, 244 miles west from Delaware, and within thirty-six miles of the western terminus.

In 1729, John and James Hendrics made the first authorized settlement in York county, in the neighborhood of New Freedom and Shrewsbury. "Bethel Church attendants then were over the line, out of whom was gathered the nucleus of Centre Church. Penn induced many to settle in Delaware, which was then included in his claim, who afterwards moved onward from Delaware, where they landed, into Kent and Cecil counties, coming down by Bohemia river, around by the head of the bay, by Charleston, over the Lower Ferry, now Havre de Grace. Others from Kent came across the bay to Swan Creek, which was then a very prominent landing, where tobacco was brought down the rolling road, past Hall's Cross Roads, now Aberdeen."

Tradition says that the line of travel was from Kent to Swan Creek, then up the country. Some took the road west, from where old Spesutia Church stood, which road led past Michaelsville, thence to Baltimore, on the east side of Bush river, to the ferry called Ferry Bar. From that point, when the settler continued his journey, his route was across the ferry, thence to Joppa and up and along what was called Long Cam, or Ridgely's Ford. Near that road is Franklinville Presbyterian Church. The Baltimore county records for the year 1740 state that three sons of Obadiah Pritchard divided their land, of which part was on the rolling road, from Swan Creek through Hall's Plains, near which is the Grove Presbyterian Church at Aberdeen. Richard Pritchard's name is found subscribed to the call at Bethel in 1769. William, son of Obadiah, was one of the elders at Churchville. There was a large Presbyterian settlement at Swan Creek connected with the Deer Creek Church (Churchville). Rev. William Finney, in his historical sermon on the Deer Creek Church, says of Michael Gilbert and wife: "They lived to be more than four score, one dying in 1823, the other in 1827. Among the many incidents was one about one hundred and ten years ago, when he and four or five young men purchased a boat and locked it to a tree opposite to what is now Port Deposit. On Sabbath morning they would walk four to five miles, from Swan Creek neighborhood, unfasten the boat, go over the river and walk five miles to West Nottingham Church, and return home in the evening." Churchville and Bethel are closely connected in their history, and we find the same pastor frequently attending to the spiritual needs of both congregations.

It was a custom of the Indians in the autumn to set fire to and burn the barrens of York and Baltimore counties, and tradition says this smoke was the origin of the name of Indian summer for that season. Besides this burning, the red men were in the habit of committing depredations of various kinds, and in the early days the settlers had to be on the constant watch. Tradition charges the Indians with the murder of a ten-year-old boy in the neighborhood of Bethel. The paths of the Indians in their travels were well defined, and these in time developed into the roads used by the settlers. First footpaths, then bridle-paths, and in time developing into rolling roads and the public highway. As early as 1706 the settlers brought tobacco from the upper sections of this county in hogsheads with false heads, shafts attached, rolling them from sections as far away as My Lady's Manor. From all that country they were in the habit of coming for fish to the Lower Ferry, Bush and Joppa, the two last named places being ports of entry.

The early religious meetings were held in private houses, and some hardy and adventurous spirit in his zeal for the cause of the Master, penetrating this wild country, would preach to the pioneers the Gospel of "peace on earth, good will towards men." The records of the early times are wanting. No one knows who was the first Presbyterian that came into the Upper Node Forest. The name Bethel means the House of God, and in the hundred and fifty years of this church it has been performing the service to which it was dedicated by its founders, and has without intermission been a house in which were taught the beauties of the Christian faith. Generations have come and gone; grandchildren of the first builders sleep in the beautiful cemetery there, and great-grandchildren lie beside them, while the bell in the lofty steeple on each Sunday morning calls their grandchildren's great-grandchildren to the service of their Maker. The church building has been changed from a plain square house into a structure of architectural beauty; but the church has remained from its first foundation ever faithful to its name as the House of God.

At its altar have been joined in marriage the progenitors of the present congregation; to the font their children during all that time have been brought to be baptized; and from the church door, after the last sad rites had been performed, the dead have been carried to "their narrow cell" to be forever laid.

Could the congregation of the early days come back, what a change they would see! The woods have given way to beautiful cultivated fields; comfortable homes are seen on every hand, where at first only a log house stood in the clearing; and at the Sunday morning service in the place of the hardy resident of the forest, who came, perhaps, with his rifle as a protection against the Indians, walking with his wife and daughters through the wet clearing, come now his prosperous and well-to-do descendants at the seventh or eighth generation, conveyed to the church door in comfortable carriages, their wives and daughters in tasteful attire, but there, as were their fathers of old, to join in the church service and say: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people."

When the first house was built no one can tell, but we know that the present building is the third church, and that the second was built in 1802, and was a log building standing in the centre of the graveyard, the door to which faced the tombstone of Mr. Thomas Hope, and the pulpit, where is now the tomb of Rev. George Lucky. This settlement was among remnants of the Indians, against whom the pioneers had erected a fort for defense and protection.

"That this must have been a large and most important settlement, will appear by a reference to the list of ninety-one subscribers to the call of Mr. Clark and a subscription of eighty-five pounds in 1769, when a united call of Slateridge and Chancelford, in 1781, twelve years later, was only sixty pounds in grain.

"In the center of the graveyard is a stone bearing the inscription: 'John Henry, died January, 1810, aged thirty-three years.' No one knows anything of him but this: he was a lonely stranger who died on the York turnpike, where he was engaged helping in its construction. His dying request was that 'he might be taken over and buried in a Presbyterian graveyard; that his bones might lie with the people of his faith, in hope to rise with them at the Resurrection.'" Thomas Hope, William Glenn, Sr., John Sterrett and George West were early elders. There are now four Presbyterian churches almost on the banks of Deer Creek. They are Centre, near Norrisville; Bethel, Churchville and Harmony.

In the year 1769, Rev. John Clark was called as pastor to Bethel. The language of the call shows that they were not in the habit of having a regular or settled pastor.

Before Rev. John Clark, who in 1769 became Pastor, there is no record of the names of supplies, there being only such as were sent out by the New Castle and Donegal Presbyteries among settlements, but they seldom mention the name of the supply.

CHAPTER XV.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AT CHURCHVILLE—COKESBURY METHODIST COLLEGE AND CHurch—HARFORD BAPTIST CHURCH—THE FRIENDS IN HARFORD.

CHURCHVILLE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Rev. William Finney, for many years pastor at Churchville, preached an historical sermon in 1854, in which he reviewed the history of this church. The knowledge of the time of its beginning is largely dependent upon tradition, and Mr. Finney gives as the authority for the date of its origin as fixed by him, Michael Gilbert, one of the oldest members of the congregation.

According to Mr. Gilbert, this church reached back to about the year 1738, and the establishment of the church is due to the labors of the great evangelist, Whitefield. Its first name was Whitefield's Meeting House, and afterwards as the Deer Creek Presbyterian Congregation. Whitefield came from England, and by his eloquence and zeal created a revival in religion along his entire route. The congregation was at first supplied with ministers from the Donegal Presbytery. Among the early supply preachers were Rev. John Craig and Revs. Thompson and Paul. At this early date conditions in this section were very primitive. The forest had not been cleared away, and dwellings, even the rude homes of the hardy pioneers, were few and far between. Where are now the beautiful pasture fields, extending from Churchville through the Darlington country to the Susquehanna, in 1738 were for the most part the original wilds, through which roamed the native Indian, but little advanced in civilization by his contact with the whites. Accordingly, religious services were infrequently held, and then for the most part by some young zealot who came here with the same feeling that the modern missionary carries with him to Tibet.

While there was religious toleration in the colony of the Lords Baltimore, yet the most popular faith was Catholic, the chief rival of which was the Church of England. Presbyterianism, therefore, at first had to contest with these two strongly entrenched denominations, and its first churches were not strong. Bethel and Churchville mustered in time large followings, but their beginnings are lost in obscurity. The following is from Whitefield's journal, which shows the great number of people that listened to his preachings:

"Leaving Philadelphia November 29, 1739, visited and preached at Chester that same day to five thousand people. Wilmington next day and Newcastle December 1 to two thousand people, and Christian Bridge at 4 P. M. to about the same number. Whitely Creek, December 2, to ten thousand people, and December 3 to North East. Little notice having been given, there were not above fifteen hundred people, but God was with me and I observed many deeply affected. Several repeated invitations were sent me to preach at other places. Immediately after the sermon we set forward and passed over Susquehannah ferry, about a mile broad. I was received at a gentleman's house that lay in the way. Though we were eight in company, yet all things were carried on with great freedom and generosity, and I hope we came providentially thither, for the gentleman told us that he had been a little melancholy and had therefore sent for some friends to drive it away. The bottle and the bowl, I found, were the means to be made use of, but blessed be God, the design was in good measure frustrated by our coming in and giving another turn to the conversation. All joined in family prayer. Afterward I went to bed, pitying the miserable condition of those who live a life of luxury and all self-indulgence. They are afraid to look into themselves, and if their consciences at any time awakened they might be lulled asleep again by drinking or evil company. None but a sincere Christian can with sincere pleasure practice the duty of self-examination."

Whitefield preached at Churchville and next at Joppa, where he made a short address in the Episcopal Church.

At the meeting at Churchville he spoke in a tent, and tradition preserves the name of Tent Field on the farm of Mr. W. Beatty Harlan.

We do not know the name of Whitefield's host, with whose plan for the evening's entertainment the great preacher interfered. The population in those days was widely scattered, so the fame of Whitefield must have been great and far reaching to have drawn such crowds —his journal in some places recording ten thousand people as present to hear him preach.

Conditions in those days were very primitive. Traveling was done on foot or horseback. It is said of Rev.
William Finney, who became pastor in 1813, that when he purchased his first carriage such a vehicle was so uncommon that the first day he drove to church he tied his horse far away "lest he might be thought proud by his parishioners who had come on foot or on horses, or perhaps in ox carts." The new idea was too conspicuous for his native modesty. The railroad was unknown and even the canal had not been born. Towns were few and far between. In 1760 Baltimore Town had only thirty or forty houses. The fireside was the communicating medium of all news. Houses were what we now call "old style," which in this case is generally the synonym of inconvenient arrangement and limited room. Indoors the greased rag was the common luminary auxiliary to the great cordwood fire on the hearth. The whale-oil lamp was the luxury of the rich. Tallow dip candles were esteemed a welcome invention. Doubtless these ancient people complied more readily than we with the sober maxim, "early to bed, early to rise."

The original church was located on the farm belonging now to the heirs of the late Wellmore Hopkins, where the old graveyard can still be seen. This church was in the usual style of the times. It was built of logs neither attractive in appearance nor comfortable. It was not heated; and indeed this absence of fire in churches was the custom of the times. Old people now living can remember when it was the habit to take warm bricks to church in winter to keep the feet warm during the sermon of two hours, which was a not uncommon catastrophe in those days. This log church gave way to a brick one, on or near the present site, about the year 1769. This building also was without stoves, but in 1814 chimneys were put in and the church warmed. In 1820 a building committee, consisting of Jeremiah Bayless, James Glasgow, Reuben H. Davis, Benj. Silver and James Pannel, were appointed, and a new church was constructed. This is the present church building, which, however, in the year 1870, underwent extensive repairs at a cost of nearly ten thousand dollars, the building being renovated throughout.

The following is a list of the regular pastors who have served this church: Andrew Bay, Caleb Johnson, William Finney, R. H. Williams, W. W. Ralston, John R. Paxton, W. T. L. Kieffer, Calvin D. Wilson, S. C. Wasson.

William Finney was elected pastor March 31, 1813. The call which was formally made out, and in behalf of the congregation signed by Richard Barns, James Fulton, Andrew McAdow and Zephaniah Bayless, was presented to the Presbytery of New Castle at New London, Pa., April 6, 1813. He held the call under advisement until the ensuing fall session (September 23) in order to see whether there was a sufficient fragment of this lacerated congregation to justify him in assuming the pastorate. He then accepted the call, and was ordained and installed November 17, 1813, preaching a sermon on that occasion from Acts 4: 12.

Rev. William Finney was a native of New London, Chester county, Pa., and was the second son of Judge Walter Finney, a major in the Revolutionary Army, whose commission, dated August 10, 1776, is now in the possession of his great-grandson, Walter Finney, of Churchville, Md. He graduated at Princeton College with distinction, in the class of 1809; studied theology under Rev. Samuel Martin, D. D., of Chanceford, Pa., joined New Castle Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry April 4, 1810, and was licensed to preach October 1, 1812, at the age of twenty-four.

His long pastorate of forty-one years closed October 4, 1854, when he resigned, much to the regret of his people. His farewell sermon was an historical discourse, which is of great value to this church. The people attested their affection for him by requesting him to supply their pulpit, which he did off and on for several years.

Following is a list of some of the elders who have been connected with this church:

COKESBURY.

The first Methodist college in the world for higher education was located at Abingdon, in the present First district of Harford county. The foundation of the college is due to Thomas Coke and Francis Asbury, two bishops of the Methodist church. The school was called from the names of the two founders—Coke-Asbury modified into Cokesbury.

The establishment of this institution of learning was at a time when the new government was trying its wings. The Revolution had just closed and all the unsettled conditions which accompany a change of government after a successful rebellion prevailed here. Money was scarce, but Asbury was equal to the emergency. Coke was the author of the idea, but to Asbury was largely due the successful establishment of the college. This school seems to have been in his thoughts always, and he devoted many of the best years of his life to this work. For its financial success he traveled many weary miles through the wilderness, preaching and soliciting subscriptions, and when the building was consumed to ashes and all his work proved in vain, the poor man was almost overwhelmed. He wrote in his journal "We have a second and confirmed report that Cokesbury College is consumed to ashes, a sacrifice of ten thousand pounds in about ten years. If any man should give me ten thousand pounds to do and suffer again what I have done for that house, I would not do it. The Lord called not Mr. Whitefield nor the Methodists to build colleges. I wished only for schools; Dr. Coke wanted a college."

There were only fifteen thousand Methodists in America at this time, and with this small number the building and opening of this school was remarkable. Dr. Thomas Coke was sent by John Wesley to America from England to superintend the churches. He and Asbury met at Barrett's Chapel, Dover, and the question of founding a school for higher learning under control of the Methodist Church was discussed. One thousand pounds sterling was subscribed before the conference met, enough to begin work, and then came the matter of the selection of a site. In those days the post road passing through Abingdon was the main highway between the North and the South, and as steam had not come into use, the traveling population were very familiar with that route. Harford Town, or Bush, was going down. Bel Air had been chosen the county seat. The Pacas had started a new town on the hill—Abingdon—and had laid it off into streets and lots, a plat of which can now be seen in the clerk's office at Bel Air. Richard Dallam, one of the leading men of the county, and quartermaster in the American Army, lived there with his family. William Paca, who was born there and who had signed the Declaration of Independence, was then governor of the State, and the new town laid out by his people may be reasonably supposed to have had the good will of the distinguished governor and his wealthy friends. Moreover, the location was high and healthy. From the high ground could be seen Bush river stretching its winding course, with "promontory, creek and bay." Old Baltimore, it is true, had been abandoned for nearly an hundred years, but the beautiful shore line was there, the view not obstructed as now by the railroad bridge, which was not built until fifty years later.
HISTORY OF HARFORD COUNTY. 185

Off in the distance, further down the river, lay Abbey Island Point and Legoes' Point in full view; and a little further away, glistening in the sun, lay the broad waters of the Chesapeake, across which could be seen the high banks of Kent county. Close by was Otter creek, like a silver thread just over the hill; and Otter Point, with deep water, where large vessels could come to load and discharge their cargos, was only a mile away. There was a new Methodist church which had been built in 1784. Truly, the outlook for Abingdon to become a large town was excellent, and here they decided to build the new college. Bishop Asbury was present on June 5, 1785, to lay the corner-stone and preach the foundation sermon. On May 30 of the same year, Dr. Coke purchased from Richard Dallam, for sixty pounds, four acres of land adjoining the new church, for the site of the college, and on this land was erected the college hall at a cost of more than four thousand pounds. This sum represented an average contribution of more than one dollar for every Methodist church member in the country.

Five trustees managed the business of the school. The college had a boarding department, but the plan was to have as many students as possible board in the village. The college dormitory, therefore, was constructed with especial reference to the number and size of the recitation rooms, and the quarters for the students were rather contracted.

The building, of which no representation is known to be extant, was of brick, one hundred and eight feet in length and forty feet in width, facing east and west. It is described as standing on the summit and centre of six acres of land, with equal descent and proportion of ground on each side. It was three stories in height and divided into two parts. The east and west ends had on each floor two rooms, in size twenty-five by twenty feet. On the first floor, in the centre of the building, was the college hall, forty feet square; over it, on the second floor, two school rooms, and on the third floor two bedrooms. Such was the arrangement of the building which was thought in "dimensions and style of architecture fully equal, if not superior, to anything of the kind in the country."

Before the building was entirely completed a preparatory school was opened by Mr. Freeman Marsh, a Quaker. Dr. Coke said that the college was intended primarily for the sons of preachers; next, for the sons of "our friends;" thirdly, for "our young men (preachers)," and, fourthly, "for orphans."

He felt that the name college might appear too pretentious at first, but took comfort from the fact that "we give high-sounding names in America."

John Wesley was applied to for a recommendation for a president of the college, and he named Rev. Mr. Meath, who was master of a grammar school at Kidderminster, in England; the recommendation of Wesley was favorably received by the trustees, who voted to call Mr. Meath, and Dr. Coke was requested to communicate the call to the proposed president. Mr. Meath was to receive sixty pounds annually, lodging in the college, board, washing, etc., for himself and family. The call was accepted and Mr. Meath, accompanied by Patrick McCloskey, who also was to teach in the new school, arrived in this country in the fall of 1787. In September of the same year Bishop Asbury was at Abingdon, superintending the opening of the college. Meath's inauguration occurred in December, lasting three days, on all three of which Bishop Asbury preached.

At the beginning there were twenty-five students. Letters of advice came from Wesley as to the method of conducting the institution, in one of which he said he wished the children to be made "critical scholars in Latin, Greek and Hebrew." Meath, the president, and McCloskey and Marsh, assistants, left in the first year. In 1788, Dr. Jacob Hall, of Abingdon, was elected president, the fact that he was a native of the State being a consideration in his election.

There were thirty students in the year 1788. Dr. Hall's assistants were Rev. John Hargrove, Rev. Joseph Toy and Charles Tait. Mr. McCloskey came back and resumed his position as teacher, dying in 1791.

There were seventy students in 1791. It is thought that no graduation or conferring of degrees was ever held by the college, as there is no mention of any. The curriculum included English, Latin, Greek, logic, rhetoric, history, geography, natural philosophy and astronomy, to which it was proposed later to add Hebrew, French and German.

In this day of reading-rooms, gymnasiums and carefully arranged hours of recreation, with a patronage of field sports by the faculty in all colleges, it is difficult to understand the rigid discipline at Cokesbury.

Here is one of the regulations: "Let this rule be observed with the greatest nicety, for those who play when they are young will play when they are old." No games or plays for the boys! Their employment was to be that of the "greatest public utility, agriculture and architecture." There was a carpenters' shop for recreation. Gardening was another, and they might bathe in a pool, one at a time, and under no consideration swim in Bush river.

The students were to study seven hours daily, rise at four o'clock in the morning and go to bed at nine o'clock.

The college ran into debt, which, in 1789, amounted to about eight thousand dollars.

In 1794 the Maryland Legislature granted a charter to Cokesbury, and authorized the conferring of the usual college degrees. In 1795 the authorities determined to abandon the collegiate department and maintain only an English free school, but before this plan was fairly tried the life of the school came to an end. On December 4, 1795, the building was burned to the ground, and everything connected with it destroyed. The fire was thought to be of incendiary origin. The fame of this school was great in its day, and even to this time bricks are sought and carried away as relics. The bell which called the students to their duties was preserved, and now hangs over Goucher Hall at the Woman's College, in Baltimore, chief relic of the once famous college of Cokesbury.*

HARFORD BAPTIST CHURCH.

This church is situated in the forks of Winter's Run, between Jarrettsville and Upper X-Roads, in the Fourth election district of Harford county.

During the space of one hundred and forty-seven years there have been only six elders, or pastors, of this church, and two of these elders served this congregation for nearly an hundred years. Elder John Davis was the minister in charge from the building of the church, in 1754, until the time of his death, in 1807, a period of fifty-three years. Rev. William Grafton, the present incumbent, began his labors there May 18, 1859, and thus up to this time his continuous service to the church has extended over a period of forty-two years, making, with the time of Elder John Davis, ninety-five years. The elders of this church since 1754, the date of its organization, have been as follows:

Elder John Davis, 1754 to 1807.
Elder William Wilson, 1807 to 1839.
Elder Eli Scott, Elder James Brown, Elder Francis Thorn, 1839 to 1859.
Elder William Grafton, 1859 to ——.

Some of the dates in the records of the church are missing and it is difficult to determine the time of the beginning of the service of several of the elders. Besides this, the early minutes are effaced and had to be supplied by a summary in October, 1803. In 1839, during the term of Rev. William Wilson, a dispute arose as to the attitude of the church toward temperance societies and benevolent institutions, and a division was made in the congregation. The elder, William Wilson, left his charge, with a number of his congregation, and thereafter officiated and had his church building at Rock Ridge, or Cherry Hill, which had been built a short time previously.

The following is a copy of the recital at the beginning of the records and a list of some of the early members:

"The church of Jesus Christ in Harford County, In the State of Maryland was Constituted on the First Day of November In the year of our Lord—One thousand seven hundred and fifty-four, then under the pastoral care of Elder John Davis, who Still continues to preside over her, But through some cause to us unknown the Church book has Become so defaced that the true state of the said church From time to time since her constitution up to this Date cannot be known;

“And as the God of Zion hath been Generously pleased of Late to Revive his work Within the bounds of this Church so that Considerable Numbers have been added to those that still Remain of her former Numbers; And We deeming it Necessary as well for our own comfort as for the Information of Others to revive the articles of her former Constitution . . . .

“Be it known therefore that we whose names are hereunto subscribed Do as in the presence of God Profess to believe the truths contained in the following Covenant and to submit to the Ordinances and modes of Government therein contained that is to say”

THE FRIENDS IN HARFORD.

The first settlement of “Friends” in Harford is veiled in much obscurity, but there are reasons for concluding that they found their way here shortly after their establishment in the adjacent colony of Pennsylvania, where Penn, in his holy experiment, “laid the foundation of a state with a government, deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed,” where not only the persecuted members of his own religious denomination should find a peaceful home, but the good and oppressed of all lands and every religious persuasion should find an asylum and the pure and peaceable principles of Christianity should be carried into practice. The enlightened understanding of Lord Baltimore had led him to adopt sentiments akin to those actuating Penn in his movements, and thus, no doubt, many of this faith gladly embraced the opportunity afforded to "worship according to the dictates of their own conscience with none to make them afraid."

Perhaps it may be permitted to draw the line of divergence between the reasons actuating the proprietaries of these neighboring colonies. With high appreciation of the noble minds and enlightened statesmanship of the Lords Baltimore, and aside from the spirit of criticism, simply state the fact of history that what was granted as a privilege by them was conceded as an "inalienable right" by Penn, which is the true ground and teaching of democracy in government, and always held and taught by Friends.

The inference of Friends' early settlement here may be drawn from the names and traditions of many of our oldest families, being those of the early migration to these Western shores, the public records showing them faithfully supporting in many instances the principles and testimonies against oaths, military service and pursuing other society characteristics.

The first religious meeting of this denomination in Harford county, so far as can be ascertained, was that of Bush river. The date of its establishment is not known. It continued in existence until about the year 1820. There is a spot near Bush river bridge, on the Philadelphia Railroad, which has been designated as the place where the meeting was held. Only a portion. of what was said to be the foundation of the meeting house could be seen many years ago. The first authentic record now fixes the date of the establishment of Deer Creek meeting in 1736, held then as now at Darlington. It was a branch of Bush river meeting. On September 29, 1737, Nathan Rigbie conveyed three and a half acres, part of "Philip's Purchase," to the trustees of the Quaker Meeting House at Deer Creek, and on May 25, 1789, James Rigbie executed a confirmatory deed of the same lot to Joseph Warner, Hugh Ely, Jacob Baldwin and Isaiah Baldwin, trustees, etc. (Liber J. L. G. No. K., folio 347. Land Records of Harford county. First deed, Liber H. W. S. I. A. I, folios 17 and 18, Land Records of Baltimore County.)

Next in order of establishment we find that of Little Falls, near Fallston, about the year 1738, (not on its present site, however), and Broad Creek, near Dublin, in 1828. A meeting was established at Fawn Grove, York county, Pa., near the Maryland line, many of its members living in Harford. It was held as early as 1780.

The settlement of the meeting at Little Falls calls for more than a passing notice.

William Amos, a resident, large land owner and officer in the militia of the county, was walking on his premises one Sabbath morning, when his meditations and their effect upon his mind were of that character that he called worship. Here he afterwards resorted from a sense of conviction and found satisfaction in continuing the practice. Finally, being joined by several of his neighbors, upon comparing notes and making inquiry, they found their views on religious matters coincided with Friends, and going twenty miles to the meeting of Gunpowder, in Baltimore county, and their case being favorably considered by that body, they were taken into membership.

William Amos, from being a soldier in the military in the service of his country for the support of national power, became a soldier of the cross, whose weapons are not carnal, but spiritual, and having a gift in the ministry of Christ, was a favored instrument in calling many from "darkness to light, from the power of Satan unto God." Living to an advanced age, he saw his "children’s children grow up to usefulness and call him blessed," and now rests in the yard of the home of Garret Amos, one of his descendants, near Winter’s Run, on the Bel Air pike.

This sketch does not admit of much in biography, but it may be said that Harford has been the home of many members of this faith whose upright lives and good works have established lasting memorials. Moses Shepherd, founder of the Philanthropic Institution, near Baltimore, bearing his name, was born on Winter’s Run, near Bel Air.

Nathan Tyson, first president of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, was at one time a member of Little Falls Meeting. Benj. P. More, a near relative, and at one time a business partner of Johns Hopkins, with his cultivated wife Mary, lived "and died the death of the righteous" near Fallston, where their home life of refinement, generous hospitality and piety have left a lasting impression. At Deer Creek lived John and Susanna Jewett, she a woman of strong mind and a powerful minister, mother of the late Hugh J. Jewett.

At Broad Creek was the home of David G. McCoy, a man of more than ordinary ability, and one of the earliest promoters of our present excellent school system. In the bridge that spans the Susquehanna at Conowingo is found a lasting monument to his energy and public spirit, for to his efforts was largely due its erection.

Among the ministers of the last century may be named Bartholomew Fussel, ever faithful to the cause he served; Samuel McConnell, of strong mind, judgment and expression; George Reese, whose eloquence in pleading the cause of the Master is well remembered by many; Abel A. Hull, whose dignity of bearing and clearness of thought always impressed his hearers, and Darlington Hoopes, whose plain, simple and earnest pleading of the cause of truth as he saw it, coupled with an unspotted life, still keeps his memory green among those who came within his influence.

From the beginning, Friends have advocated a broad and liberal education, and with their advent in any community the establishment of schools for the guarded education of youth has been a concern with them. Before the establishment of our public schools there were three flourishing schools under the care of Little Falls Meeting. And so they are here, small in numbers, but still an element in the make-up of the county, with no reason to ask the world's pardon for having been born, and no cause for abandoning any of their principles or abatement in their efforts to maintain them.

"There are those that take note that our numbers are small, New Gibbons who write our decline and our fall; But the Lord of the seed-field takes care of his own, And the world shall yet reap what our sowers have sown."

A. H. Hull.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

WILLIAM PACA—DR. JOHN ARCHER—COL. THOMAS WHITE—BENJ. BRADFORD NORRIS.

WILLIAM PACA.

William Paca, the second son of John Paca, was born near Abingdon, in what is now Harford county, October 31, 1740. He was educated at the College of Philadelphia, where he graduated June 8, 1759, and on January 14, 1762, he was admitted as a student of law at the Middle Temple, London. After completing his studies there he entered the office of Stephen Bordley, and on April 11, 1764, he commenced the practice of his profession at Annapolis. He, however, retained his connection with his native county, and represented Harford in the State Convention of 1788, which ratified the constitution of the United States. His colleagues from Harford in that convention were Luther Martin, William Pinkney and John Love. In 1771 he was elected a member of the provincial Legislature, and was elected to the first and second Continental Congresses. He was a signer of the Declaration of Independence July 4, 1776. On the adoption of the first State constitution he was made a Senator for two years. In 1778 he was appointed chief judge of the Superior Court of Maryland, which office he held until 1780, when he became chief judge of the Court of Appeals in prize and admiralty cases. In 1782 he was elected Governor of Maryland. In 1786 he sat in Congress for a short time, and in the same year was re-elected Governor. In 1789 he was appointed judge of the United States Court for Maryland, which position he held at the time of his death, in 1799. He married a daughter of Samuel Chew as his first wife. His second wife was Anna Harrison, of Philadelphia. His portrait hangs over the judge's seat in the courtroom at Bel Air, and he and Governor Augustus W. Bradford were, in point of public service, the most distinguished men ever born in Harford.

RICHARD DALLAM.

One of the most prominent men in Harford during the Revolution was Richard Dallam, who was the ancestor of the family of Dallams now residing in this county. The first Dallam also bore the name of Richard, and was a nephew of Sarah Jennings, first Duchess of Marlborough. He came from England about the beginning of the eighteenth century, and settled at Joppa, where he practiced law. The subject of this sketch was one of his four sons. The latter served in the Revolutionary War as paymaster, with the title of general of this district. In the Annapolis Convention of June 22, 1774, which protested against the tax on tea, Richard Dallam represented Harford county, his colleagues from this county being John Love, Thomas Bond, John Paca, Edward Hall and Jacob Bond. He also signed the Bush declaration of March, 1775.

He was one of the commissioners named in the dedimus for the formation of the new county in 1773-4. He lived in Abingdon in 1786. In a letter from Rev. Thomas Coke to Rev. Mr. Meath, written from Southampton, England, January 23, 1786, requesting the latter to accept the position of head master at Cokesbury College, we find this: "There are several of our principal friends live in the neighborhood (Abingdon). One family (Mr. Dallam's) you'll find very agreeable."

He died in March, 1805.

DR. JOHN ARCHER.

John Archer, M. B., son of Thomas Archer, was born near Churchville, in Harford county (then Baltimore county), May 5, 1741. His grandfather, John Archer, came to America from the vicinity of Londonderry, Ireland, in the early part of the eighteenth century. The family is said to have descended from John de Archer, who came to England with William the Conqueror in 1066, as it is said all the Archers in Great Britain were descended from him. Dr. John Archer was the sole survivor of five children, all the others having died of a malignant fever in infancy, he narrowly escaping death at the same time. He is the ancestor of all the Archers of that family now residing in Harford county. He attended school at Nottingham Academy, in Cecil county, where he was a classmate of Dr. Benjamin Rush. In 1760 he graduated at Princeton with the degree of A. B., and in 1763 received from the same college the degree of A. M.

He studied theology, but on account of a throat affection which impaired his speech, and for other reasons, he was not well qualified for the ministry, and he turned his attention to the study of medicine. He attended lectures at the College of Philadelphia, the forerunner of the present University of Pennsylvania. On October 18, 1766, he married Catherine, daughter of Thomas Harris, who lived nearby. In the recess of the college Dr. Archer practiced medicine in New Castle county, Del. On June 21, 1768, he graduated as a physician, and as his name came first on the list of the first graduating class, Dr. Archer received the first medical degree ever conferred in America.

In July, 1769, he commenced the practice of his profession in Harford county. He grew rapidly in professional reputation and in the esteem of his neighbors. He took a prominent part in public affairs at the time of the Revolution, organizing on September 16, 1775, a military company at Churchville, and his name is subscribed to the famous Bush declaration. On November 27, 1776, he was chosen an elector for the Senate of Maryland and a member of a committee of observation for Harford county. He was also a delegate to the first constitutional convention of the State, which met at Annapolis in 1776, and which was presided over by Matthew Tilghman. His Harford colleagues in that convention were Jacob Bond, Henry Wilson, Jr., and John Love. This convention also drew up and adopted the bill of rights. In 1776 Dr. John Archer and Gabriel Duval were chosen as presidential electors for the State of Maryland. In 1800 he was elected to Congress by the party of Jefferson, and was re-elected in 1802. His skill as a physician was frequently called into service during his term in Washington as a member of Congress. He died suddenly September 28, 1810, honored and respected by all who knew him. He was the author of many articles on medicine and surgery, and was an eminent authority in his day in his profession. He was the preceptor of a number of distinguished physicians who came after him, and his house, near Churchville, was at times like a medical college, so numerous were the young men who sought his tuition. He was the father of Jude Stevenson Archer, who was chief justice of the State. In addition to the public offices held by Dr. Archer, as stated above, he was one of the first of the Lords Justices of this county. His portrait may be seen in the courtroom at Bel Air.

COL. THOMAS WHITE.

Born in London in 1704, of good parentage, Thomas White lost his father at the age of four years. He attended a grammar school at St. Albans, near London, but in 1720, at the age of sixteen, he sailed for Maryland. It is said that he was of the retinue of Charles Calvert, who came out in that year to become governor of the province.

He was apprenticed to a Mr. Stokes to be taught for the profession of law, and the usual fee of one hundred guineas was paid for him. Young White accordingly became a lawyer, but was soon appointed deputy surveyor general for Baltimore county, then comprising also Harford. This was an office of great importance in those times, a position Washington held in his early days in Virginia.

Colonel White became the authority on titles in his county and his certificate was regarded as law. He married Sophia, daughter of Capt. John Hall, of Cranberry. The latter was born in 1658 and in the year 1694 purchased certain tracts of land from Michael Judd, Edward Boothby and others, making a tract of 1,539 acres, which he that year had laid out and surveyed and which he called "Cranberry," being mainly on Bush River.

Capt. John Hall’s wife was Martha Gouldsmith, née Beadle, whom he married July 18, 1693, and who died in 1720. They had seven children. Captain Hall died in August, 1737, and by his will he devised to his children large tracts of land, among which were six hundred acres on Deer Creek; Taylor’s Good Hope, four hundred acres; Timber Nest, four hundred and seventy acres; Cranberry, lying west of Mill run, and Jericho, one thousand acres; Harman’s Swantown, two hundred acres; The Enlargement and Old Quarter, seven hundred acres; New Quarter, six hundred acres.

To his daughter Sophia, wife of Col. Thomas White, he devised a tract of land called Sophia’s Dairy, which is what is now known as the Dairy Farm; part of Hall’s Plains and Simmon’s Neglect. Colonel White, therefore, through his wife, was the proprietor of large tracts of land, which he added to by the purchase and patent of others, among which were the following tracts: Ah Ah Indeed, Ah Ah the Cow Pasture, Edinburgh, Abbott’s Forest, Constantinople, Antrim, Kilkeny, Londonderry, Eaton’s Addition, Eaton’s Second Addition, Gay’s Favor, Hathaway’s Hazard, Chance, Rumney Royal, Hammond’s Hope, Paradise, Leigh of Leighton, Royal Exchange, Simmond’s Neglect, Neighbor’s Affinity, Attaway’s Trust, Constant Friendship, Harrison’s Resolution, etc., etc. These tracts were all large, Ah Ah Indeed, for instance, contained eight hundred and twenty-five acres. In 1777.
Colonel White's taxable real estate in Harford county alone, comprised seven thousand seven hundred and seventy-two and one-half acres. The tracts called Ah Ah, just west of Abingdon, have a ghost story connected with them, and children and the colored population to this day have a dread of Ha Ha branch, which crosses the Philadelphia road between Abingdon and Van Bibber. This neighborhood is said to be the haunt of a spectre which at times gives utterances to a blood-curdling "ha ha." The fear of this ghost is as great in this generation as it was two hundred years ago.

By order of the justices of Baltimore county, in 1728, Colonel White made a survey and plat of Bynum's run from its mouth to its spring head, in order to find the direct course, and from thence to run and blaze that direct course.

Patents to Colonel White:
1734, Sokmon's Song, fifty acres, on east side of Bush river.
1736, St. Martin's Ludgate, two hundred and eighty acres. His London birthplace is here evidenced as two of the most prominent points in London are Ludgate Hill and the Church of St. Martin's, in the Fields.
1738, The Royal Exchange, four hundred and eighty acres, on Swan creek.
1746, Montreal, two thousand seven hundred and twenty-five acres.
1747, Ah Ha at a Venture, or Hathaway's Hazard, one hundred and eighty-three acres.

Colonel White and Sophia, his wife, had three children. Sophia, born May 8, 1731, being the only one of the three who married and left descendants. She married her cousin, Aquila Hall, she and her husband each being grandchildren of Capt. John Hall, of Cranberry. Colonel White's residence was on the Dairy Farm, between the present large brick house and the river, and the remains of this house can yet be found. Aquila Hall built the present Dairy Farm house in 1768. This is one of the largest in the county, even now, and while without ornamentation, is a handsome and imposing structure with a very large hall.

Colonel White was a vestryman of Spesutia Church. He has a large number of descendants now living in Harford, many of them occupying land acquired by him.

In 1745 he removed to Philadelphia, and in May, 1747, married the second time, the name of this wife being Esther Newman. William White, Bishop of Pennsylvania and the first bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America, was the son of the second marriage. There was a daughter also of this marriage, Mary, who became the wife of Robert Morris, of Philadelphia, the great financier, signer of the Declaration of Independence and United States Senator from Pennsylvania.

Colonel White was a vestryman of Spesutia Church. Tained his interests in Harford and died at the Dairy, September 29, 1779, where he was buried. His remains, together with those of Sophia, his wife, were removed in 1877 to Spesutia Church, where they were reinterred in the presence of about sixty of Colonel White's descendants.*

JACOB BOND.

The first of this family to take up land within the limits of what is now known as Harford county, was Peter Bond, of Anne Arundel, who came into the colony in the year 1660. He acquired Pleasant Hills, on both sides of the Patapsco, about the mouth of Gwynn's Falls, now included in the city of Baltimore, and patented Harris' Trust, and in 1691 purchased the adjacent tract called Prosperity, lying on both sides of Bush river.

He was twice married, and died in 1705, leaving sons Peter, Thomas, William and John, the two last named being minor children of his second wife, who, after a brief period of mourning (1707), married Philip Washington.

Peter Bond, as heir, succeeded to all the estate of his father except Prosperity and Harris' Trust, which were divided between the three younger sons.

Thomas had already settled in Harford county, and in 1700 married Anne Robertson, of Anne Arundel. He patented, in 1703, Knaves Misfortune, adjacent to the tracts above mentioned, where he built a substantial house in which he lived until his death. This house was on the site of the residence of Mr. John R. Spencer, near Emmorton. The old Bond house is said to have been built of brick imported from England, and part of it was standing up to the time of the erection of the present dwelling by Mr. Lee Magness, about twenty years ago. Thomas Bond died in 1756. This old house is said to have been used as a smallpox hospital about the time of the Revolution. Thomas Bond lies buried near the house and the location of his grave is still known.

In 1714 he patented Bond's Forest, of three thousand one hundred acres, lying between Bynum's run and the Little Gunpowder Falls, and purchased Cheapside and Poplar Ridge, with other tracts, amounting to about three thousand acres. In 1705 he received five thousand acres, lying in Baltimore county, on the west side of the Susquehanna river, called Bond's Manor. In 1739 he sold a portion of this land to Capt. Thomas Cresap, who thus became involved in the boundary dispute, from which William Penn emerged crowned with success.

Thomas Bond, in 1749, conveyed to his sons Thomas and John, as trustees, part of Bond's Forest, to be laid out conveniently near the main road, including "a house now built intended for a meeting house for the people called Quakers to worship God in, and also a schoolhouse already built."

The records of Gunpowder Meeting show acceptance of this deed in 1753. This was the beginning of the Little Falls Meeting at Fallston.

He was a member of the celebrated grand jury which protested against the removal of the county seat from the Forks of Gunpowder to Joppa, denouncing it as "a palpable, notorious grievance to this county."

Thomas died in 1755, having previously settled each of his sons in comfortable houses on "plantations," and divided his lands among his eight children. His eldest son Thomas married Elizabeth Scott, and was the ancestor of large families of Jarrets, Amos, Bosleys, Howards and Munnikhuysens.
John married Alice Ann Webster, whose descendants are Fells, Lees, Wilsons and Bradfords.

Joshua married Anne Partridge, and was the ancestor of many Lees, Morris, Morisons and Howards.

Jacob married Fanny Partridge, and from him are descended Prestons, Wilmers, Abbotts, Gittings, Hollands and McCormicks. Sarah married William Fell, whose descendants are Fells, Fews, Dabs, Kennards, Dorseys and Johnsons.

Ann married Edward Fell, and afterwards Giles, and from her are descended Giles and Johnsons.

John, son of Thomas, who married Alice Ann Webster, joined his father-in-law in organizing the Bush River Company, which erected one of the first iron furnaces in the colonies.

Thomas, son of John, married Rebecca, daughter of Tobias Stansbury. He was justice of the peace and judge of the Orphans' Court, and a zealous adherent of the Methodist church.

His eldest son John was an itinerant preacher, and the friend and companion of Bishop Asbury.

His son was Dr. Thomas E. Bond, Sr., a very celebrated preacher and editor of the Christian Advocate, the latter being the father of Dr. Thomas E. Bond, the younger, and Judge Hugh Lennox Bond, recently deceased.

The most prominent of the Bonds from the standpoint of Harford history, was Jacob, who died in November, 1780. He was a prominent member of the Committee of Harford County in the Revolution, having been elected by the people, and was captain of Company Eleven, of Harford militia, in the Revolution, the other officers being Thomas Johnson, first lieutenant; James McComas, second lieutenant, and Martin Preston, ensign.

Jacob Bond represented Harford county in the convention which met at Annapolis in 1776 and formed the first constitution of the State, his colleagues there being Henry Wilson, Jr., John Love and John Archer.

He was also one of Harford's representatives in the Annapolis convention of June 22, 1774, which protested against the tax on tea, his Harford colleagues being Richard Dallam, John Love, Thomas Bond, John Paca and Benedict Edward Hall.

His children were:
Jacob Bond, Jr.,
Sarah, wife of Bernard Preston,
Martha,
Charlotte,
Ralph,
Dennis, the father of Dr. Elijah Bond,
Ann,
Priscilla.

His will, dated October 2, 1780, is recorded in the Orphans’ Court at Bel Air.

Bernard Preston, who married Sarah Bond, above named, was born in 1756. He built the large stone house between Bel Air and Hickory now owned by Mr. John B. Wysong, his great-grandson. Bernard's father was James Preston, born in 1713, and the latter's father was the first settler on that property, viz., James Preston, the son of James Preston, who was the son of Thomas, named in the will of Richard Preston of Patuxent as “Thomas Preston of the Cliffs.”
BENJAMIN BRADFORD NORRIS.

About the year 1690, Benjamin Norris, the elder, settled in Harford county, (then Baltimore county), and lived at a farm he named Everly Hills, now owned by the Hon. Herman Stump, and called by him Waverly. He became possessed of a tract of land extending from Bynum's Run, in a section back of what is now the Farnandis estate, to the Little Falls.

Benjamin Bradford Norris was the first of the name, being called after his grandfathers, Benjamin Norris and William Bradford, the Christian name of one and the family name of the other.

John Norris was the father of a large family, seven of whom were sons. His eldest son John married Susanna Bradford. They had the first house that was ever built at Mt. Pleasant, now the home of Mr. G. Smith Norris. Part of this house is still standing. It was built early in the eighteenth century. John's eldest son was Benjamin Bradford Norris, who was educated in Harford. Bradford Norris married Elizabeth Richardson. The two had quite a large family; only two sons, however. Bradford Norris was one of the signers of the Harford Declaration of Independence. He was also a soldier in the Revolutionary Army, and served in a company raised and commanded by his brother, Jacob Norris, who became a colonel. They were with Washington in his campaign in Delaware and Jersey. Jacob Norris was severely wounded, and received a pension for the balance of his life. He was buried in the Methodist graveyard in Bel Air. The headstone bears the following inscription:
Died
In March, 1807,
Jacob Norris,
An Officer of the 6th Maryland Regiment in the War of the Revolution.
To His Memory This Pillar Is Raised by His Daughter Sophia.

Benjamin Bradford Norris was very highly esteemed by the people of his community, and was appointed to represent them in the first Legislature that was convened after the State government was established. Of his sons, one died in infancy, and the other died of yellow fever in Norfolk at the age of twenty-one.

Benjamin Bradford Norris died in April, 1790, and his administrators were Eliabzeth Norris and Jacob Norris.

One of Jacob Norris' sons was a commander in the United States Navy, and was lost at sea on the Hornet.

John Norris, another of the brothers Norris, was one of the incorporators, and represented the Church of England when Union Chapel was built near Wilna.
CHAPTER XVII.

BIOGRAPHICAL—CONTINUED.

REV. JOHN COLEMAN.

An early settler in Harford county was Rev. John Coleman, a Protestant Episcopal clergyman and a soldier of the Revolutionary War. He was usually known as "Parson" Coleman, and many traditions of him still remain among descendants of his former parishioners in Baltimore and Harford counties. He was a native of Dinwiddie county, Va., and studied for the ministry under the supervision of Rev. Devereux Jarrett, of that county and State, whose autobiography, in the shape of letters addressed to Rev. Mr. Coleman, was published by the latter after the death of Mr. Jarrett. Mr. Coleman was ready for ordination into the ministry at the time, or shortly after the breaking out of the War of Independence. His clerical intentions, however, did not prevent his taking part with his fellow-countrymen in that struggle, and he and a brother accordingly joined the patriotic forces. They chanced to be serving under Gen. Anthony Wayne, in Chester county, Pa., when that terrible massacre was perpetrated near what was known as Paoli Tavern, on the Lancaster road. In giving an account of the affair, Lossing, in his book of the Revolution, says in substance:

"Gen. Wayne lay encamped with fifteen hundred men and two cannon in a secluded spot on the night of September 20, 1777. The British General Howe, at the time occupying Philadelphia, was informed by a Tory of the situation, and sent Gen. Grey with a large force to surprise the camp at midnight and slaughter the patriot forces. The night proved to be dark and stormy, and our forces were taken completely unawares and butchered by the bayonet, no quarter under orders of the Commander Grey being shown to those denominated rebels. A Hessian sergeant afterwards said: 'We killed three hundred of the rebels with the bayonet. I stuck them myself like so many pigs until the blood ran out of the touch hole of my musket.' 'Remember Paoli!' was after this adopted as a war cry by Wayne's forces on many a field, where the massacre was in part at least avenged."

The subject of this sketch fortuitously escaped death on the occasion referred to, but his brother was among the slain. Mr. Coleman, after the war, went to England, and was there ordained for the ministry. He came shortly afterwards to Maryland, and was pastor for a number of years at Trinity Church, near Long Green Valley, and the Manor Church (St. James), and also at St. Thomas' Church, Garrison Forest, all in Baltimore county. He afterwards removed to Harford, having in the meanwhile married Pleasance Goodwin, a niece of Gen. Charles Ridgely, of Hampton. This gentleman presented to the newly married couple a valuable farm of about three hundred acres, now divided into several properties, situated near Watervale, about three miles west of Bel Air, purchased from Lemuel Howard, whereon Parson Coleman lived with his family until his death, in the year 1816. It was during his ministry in this parish that Christ Church (Rock Spring) was built in the year 1805, and he became its first rector, and so remained during the balance of his life. Six children were born to him, but the only daughter, Rebecca Ridgely, was the only child that survived to years of maturity. She married Capt. John Yellott, of Dulaney’s Valley, Baltimore county, and was the mother of Mary Anderson, wife of Rev. John Anderson; Elizabeth Maynadier, wife of Henry G. Maynadier, Jeremiah, John, George, Coleman and Washington Yellott. Of these only Hon. Gorge Yellott, of Towson, lately chief judge of the Third Judicial Circuit, survives. The descendants of others, however, still remain in Baltimore and Harford counties, among whom are Hon. Geo. Y. Maynadier, of Harford; Major John I. Yellott, and Geo. W. Yellott, of Baltimore county, and Mrs. E. L. F. Hardcastle, of Talbot county."

WILLIAM BRADFORD.

William Bradford, Sr., was of English ancestry, his family having come originally from Yorkshire, where Bradfords bearing the same family arms were found upon the Manor of that name, in the reign of Henry III. He was the son of William Bradford and Elizabeth Lightbody, who came to Maryland early in the eighteenth century, and settled upon land at the head of Bush river. His father was one of the early schoolmasters of the colony. He was commissioned by the-Bishop of London to teach on the plantations and became later on a soldier in the Colonial Army with the rank of captain.

The subject of this sketch was born in 1739 at his father's home place, on Bynum's Run, just across which lived his near neighbor, Aquila Hall. He obtained a good education under his father's tuition, and he also received an early training in the doctrine of the Christian religion, in which his family had for generations been more or less conspicuous. His father had been registrar, clerk and vestryman in St. John's Parish, and he succeeded him as a member of the same vestry. His paternal grandfather was John Bradford, a merchant of London, whose brother, Samuel Bradford, was Bishop of Rochester and Dean of Westminster, and his paternal grandmother was Mary Skinner, daughter of Matthew Skinner, M. D., of London, and a granddaughter of Robert Skinner, Bishop of Bristol. Several of his ancestors had also been closely connected in an official way with St. Ann's Parish, London. His paternal great grandfather, William Bradford, was a parish officer therein during the great plague of 1665, and of whom it is recorded that "so conscientious was he in the performance of his duties that he remained in London, giving his personal attention to the sick and dying, though he removed his family to Islington."

The latter's only children were, as stated above, John and Samuel, and a daughter Hannah, who married Joseph Presbury, of London, and whose son, James Presbury, came to Maryland and settled near his cousin, William Bradford. He was the ancestor of the Presbury family of Maryland.
HISTORY OF HARFORD COUNTY.

William Bradford, Sr., became a pronounced patriot, as did also his only brother, George Bradford. Both he and his brother were elected members of the Harford Committee of 1775, the latter of whom would, no doubt, have been a signer, too, of Harford's "Declaration of Independence" had he been present at the time.

The "senior" which William Bradford suffixed to his name when he signed the declaration, and which was something unusual for him to do, was to designate him from his nephew of the same name, who was also an ardent patriot and a lieutenant in Capt. Alexander Lawson Smith's Company of Fort Washington fame. It was an earnest of the intense responsibility which he assumed, when he so solemnly pledged himself to the sacred cause of his country. In September, 1775, he organized Company No. 13 of Harford minute men, and was its captain. He was married in 1764 to Sarah McComas, to whom were born eleven children, one of whom, Samuel Bradford, married Jane Bond, and lived for many years in Bel Air. Samuel was the father of Augustus W. Bradford, Governor of Maryland during the Civil War.

William Bradford lived adjoining his brother upon a tract containing about three hundred acres, called "Littleton," where he died in 1794.

JOHN STUMP, OF STAFFORD.

John Stump and Mary, his wife, were Prussians of wealth and culture, who came to Maryland about the year 1700. The name of his European ancestors is said to have been spelled Stumpf. John Stump was a cousin of Baron Friederich von der Trenck, the younger of the two famous kinsman of that name, who figured conspicuously during the reign of Frederick the Great. John Stump purchased a large tract of land near the present town of Perryville, in Cecil county, where he died in 1747, having divided his property by will between his only surviving children, John and Henry. In that year, or in the next, Henry Stump removed to the valley of Deer Creek, in Harford county, then part of Baltimore county, where he had purchased a farm. He married Rachel Perkins, by whom he had several children, and many of his descendants are living in Harford and Cecil counties. He was the ancestor of the Honorable John H. Price, once judge of the judicial circuit composed of Baltimore, Cecil and Harford counties; of the Hon. Henry Stump, formerly judge of the Criminal Court of Baltimore city, and of the latter's nephew, the Hon. Frederick Stump, recently a judge of the Second Judicial Circuit. John Stump married Hannah, daughter of William Husbands, a descendant on the female side of Augustine Herman, (whence the name of Herman in the Stump family), of Bohemia Manor. In 1796 he, too, removed to Harford, having sold his own property, and that inherited by his wife, consisting of several farms. He died in 1797, leaving three children—Hannah, who married her cousin, John Stump, son of Henry, above mentioned; Herman, who married Elizabeth Dallam, and John. Elizabeth Dallam subsequently married Abraham Jarrett, and was the mother of Capt. A. Lirngan Jarrett, for many years clerk of the Circuit Court for Harford county. John was born April 19, 1753, and married October 3, 1779, Cassandra, daughter of Henry Wilson, a Quaker of much influence, who was noted for his patriotic zeal during the Revolution. Henry, the brother of Cassandra, was a member of the Committee of Observation of his native county, and was conspicuous in collecting and forwarding supplies for the relief of the people of Boston during its blockade by the British squadron. He and John Archer, M. B., several of whose descendants subsequently inter-married with the Stump family, were chosen in November, 1776, by popular vote, "electors of a Senate of Harford county," and were also members of the Provincial Convention. John Stump, after acquiring by his industry and enterprise, an estate which was at that time probably the largest in the State, died at his residence, "Stafford," near the mouth of Deer Creek, in 1816, leaving each of his eight children wealthy. He was in business, and had mills at Stafford, Rock Run and Bush, in Harford county, and at Alexandria, in Virginia. He was probably the leading merchant and manufacturer of his day in the State. He signed in 1776 the Association of the Freemen of Maryland. John Stump's partners in business were his brother Herman Stump, John Wilson, Samuel Carter and John Thomas Ricketts. John Stump built several vessels at Rock Run and Havre de Grace, and shipped flour and other things directly from the Susquehanna to England. His son, John Wilson, besides being engaged in agricultural pursuits, was at the head of an extensive commercial firm in Baltimore city, having as his partner Hon. James W. Williams, who married his sister, and who, in 1841, represented in Congress Harford and Cecil counties. Mr. John W. Stump, whilst returning on one of his vessels from France, in 1814, when the British fleet was in Chesapeake bay, barely escaped

-capture, and reached the city of Baltimore in time to participate in its defence as aide to Gen. Stricker. On January 13, 1814, he married Sarah, daughter of Col. James Biays, a large shipping merchant of Baltimore, who owned many vessels, and aided materially in building up the commerce of the city. John W. Stump was the father of Hon. Herman Stump, President of the Maryland Senate, member of Congress and Commissioner-General of Immigration. Colonel Biays commanded the cavalry at the battle of North Point, and in the official reports of that battle was highly commended for his efficiency. There now reside in Harford county many descendants of John Stump, of Stafford, among whom are Stumps, Lees, Archers, Constables, Smithsons. Ann, daughter of John Stump, of Stafford, was the mother of Hon. Henry W. Archer.

WILLIAM SMITHSON.

A large land owner and venerated judge and citizen was William Smithson, who was born in the year 1745. He built and for thirty-five years occupied his residence, which is now called the Farnandis Homestead, near Bel Air, and died there January 17, 1809. The house was built by him in 1774, the year of the formation of the county, and compares favorably now with the best of our modern dwellings. William Smithson, although a man of wealth, was an ardent friend of liberty, and advocated that cause in the Revolution. We find his name subscribed to the Bush declaration of March, 1775, and he was one of the first of the Lord's Justices of the county. On the adoption of the new judiciary system he became one of the three judges of the Circuit Court for Harford county, and occupied a seat in the old courthouse in Bel Air, his colleagues being Henry Ridgely and Benedict Edward Hall.

William Smithson owned the large tract of land near Bel Air, now designated as the "Homestead" farm. On his death in 1809, leaving no children, after making provision for his widow, he devised his land to his niece Elizabeth, wife of Col. Harry Dorsey, and to her brother William, both of whom were the children of the testator's brother Daniel, and both of whom had been reared in the home of their uncle William. Elizabeth's share of the land was entailed by the will to her daughter Mary, who became the wife of William Farnandis, and the mother of Hon. Henry D. Farnandis, recently deceased. Mrs. Mary Farnandis' death antedated that of her distinguished son Henry only about twelve years, and both of them are well remembered for their hospitality, courtesy and unswerving fidelity to their friends. This latter quality seems to have been a characteristic of the family, and was pre-eminent in Mr. Henry D. Farnandis, whose memory will ever be cherished by the bar of his county, of which he was its brightest ornament.

Elizabeth Dorsey had but one daughter, the Mary Farnandis above stated.

William Smithson, Jr., has a number of descendants at present residing in Harford county, among whom are the Smithsons, Forwoods, Websters, Governs, Bonds and Bulls. Mr. William S. Forwood, Jr., clerk of the Circuit Court for Harford County, is his great grandson. Besides the "Homestead," William Smithson, Sr., owned land between Bel Air and the Catholic Church at Hickory, which he had bought of Thomas Pycraft Presbury.
HISTORY OF HARFORD COUNTY.

His will, admitted to probate January 25, 1809, was witnessed by John Guyton, Joseph Robinson and John Reardon. The testator's wife Elizabeth, and his son-in-law, Henry Dorsey, were named as executors.

His long and honorable official career shows the estimation in which he was held by the public, and he died full of years and honors.

Just outside the southeasterly limits of Belair, and along the division line between the Fulford and Homestead farms, is the old graveyard of the Smithson and Farnandidis families. After diligent search the headstone over the grave of William Smithson was found, nearly sunk in the ground and quite hidden by the weeds and grass. On the tomb is this inscription:

IN MEMORY

OF

WILLIAM SMITHSON,

WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE JANUARY 17, 1809,

AGED 64 YEARS.

AQUILA HALL.

Aquila Hall was born in Harford, then Baltimore county, January 10, 1727. He was a son of Aquila, who was the youngest son of John Hall, of Cranberry, and was one of the most prominent of all the men of Harford in the early days. In 1763 he was elected to the House of Delegates to represent Baltimore county, his colleagues being Charles Ridgely, Thomas C. Deye and Walter Tolley. In 1762 he was sheriff of Baltimore county. Aquila Hall is the second in the list of commissioners named by the Act of Assembly for the formation of Harford county. By virtue of the Dedimus indorsed on the commission for forming the new county, he administered the oaths to his fellow-justices on the first day of the organization of the county government, March 22, 1774, his colleagues on the bench being Thomas Bond, Jeremiah Sheredine, Benedict Edward Hall, William Webb and Aquila Paca.

The first court for the county was held in a house at Harford Town, or Bush, owned by him and occupied by Thomas Miller, who was named as sheriff of the county.

In the famous Bush declaration of March, 1775, the name of Aquila Hall is the first on the list. He was zealous in the cause of his country in the Revolution, and on September 9, 1775, organized a military company, of which he was elected captain, with Samuel Griffith, first lieutenant; Jacob Forwood, second lieutenant, and John Chancey, ensign.

On June 11, 1774, he presided over a meeting at Bush, at which resolutions were passed expressing sympathy with Boston in her tax troubles, and at which a committee was appointed to meet the committees of other counties in this province to consult and agree on the most effectual means to preserve our constitutional rights and liberties, etc.

By the State Convention, which convened December 7, 1775, resolutions were passed January 1, 1776, looking to the formation of a proper military force for the State, and for the Upper Battalion of Harford, Aquila Hall was named as colonel, with John Love as lieutenant-colonel; Josias Carvil Hall, first major; Dr. John Archer, second major, and Richard Dallam, quartermaster.
The General Assembly on June 29, 1777, selected lieutenants for the various counties, and Aquila Hall was named for Harford.

The last record of Aquila Hall in public life is to be found in the meeting of the court at Bush, March 23, 1779, at which time he was present as one of the Lords Justices. He died in April, 1779, leaving the following children, viz: Thomas Hall, James White Hall, William Hall, John Hall, Edward Hall, Charlotte Hall, Mary Hall, Sophia Hall and Martha Hall.

His wife was his first cousin, Sophia, daughter of Col. Thomas White, whom he married February 14, 1750, and who died in 1785, aged fifty-four years.

Aquila Hall built the large brick house at “Sophia’s Dairy” in 1768.

WILLIAM MORGAN.

William Morgan was born in 1744 near the Trappe Church, in Harford county, and was the son of Edward Morgan, who had come to that section three years previously. Part of the house in which William was born is still standing. He married Cassandra Lee, a Quakeress, daughter of James Lee, and was the father of nine children, viz: Elizabeth, who married Thos. S. Chew; Sarah, who married Joseph Hopkins; Cassandra, wife of Zaccheus O. Bond; Edward Morgan; Elliner, who married John Hopkins; James L. Morgan; Mary, the wife of Ephraim Hopkins; Martha, who remained single, and Margaret, also unmarried. William Morgan owned large tracts of land on Deer Creek, among his lands being “Simmon’s Choice,” “Simmon’s Neglect,” “Freeland’s Mount,” “Planters' Paradise," part of "Arabia Petrea," "Miller's Attempt." He died in November, 1795, at the age of fifty-one years.

William Morgan was a man of great prominence in his day, and his career shows the public estimation in which he was held. The archives of Maryland show that he was commissioned a captain in the Revolution. He was also a signer of the Bush declaration of March, 1775. His will is recorded in the office of the Register of Wills at Bel Air, and his signature is as bold and clear as on the day it was signed—November 5, 1795. The executors named in his will were his brother, Robert Morgan, and Edward Prigg. The personal estate, as exhibited in the Orphans' Court, was about twenty thousand dollars, which, with his large landed interest, indicates that he was a rich man. A number of his descendants now reside in Harford, and are all people of influence and prominence.

COL. IGNATIUS WHEELER.

A very prominent man in Harford county in Revolutionary times was Col. Ignatius Wheeler, who lived on his estate called Deer Park, near the present Ady Postoffice, in the Fifth election district.

He was first lieutenant of Company No. 16 of Harford militia, the other officers of which were William Webb, captain; William Fisher, Jr., second lieutenant; John Webb, Jr., ensign.

Besides Deer Park, which is a large tract, Colonel Wheeler owned the fertile estate called Belle Farm, comprising a large part of the present Pylesville section, one of the finest portions of the county, now as well as in early days.
A large portion of Belle Farm is now owned by the Jenkins and McAtee families, who are direct descendants of Colonel Wheeler, and the estate has thus remained in the Wheeler heirs.

The farm called Garden Spot, belonging to the late Joshua Rutledge, near the Rocks of Deer Creek, belonged to Colonel Wheeler, who was an ancestor of Mr. Rutledge.

In the Maryland Legislature for the sessions 1786 and 1787, Colonel Wheeler was one of the delegates from Harford county.

He died on his estate of Deer Park in August, 1793, and his will, dated July 13 of that year, is recorded in the office of the Register of Wills of Harford County in Liber A. J. No. R., folio 217.

His children were: Monica, who married Jacob Rutledge, whose descendants now living in Harford county are Rutledges, Stephensons and Hollands. John W. Rutledge and Ignatius Rutledge were her sons.

Treacy (or Teresa), who married Capt. Henry McAtee, from whom are sprung the present McAtee, Richardson and Raphel families in Harford county, and also Streetts.

Henriette, who remained single.

Mary Ann (Polly), who married Samuel Brown, who, after the death of Mary, married her sister Elizabeth.

From Elizabeth are descended the present Jenkins family in Harford and Baltimore counties, Elizabeth's daughter Ann Maria having married Ignatius Jenkins, of Dulaney's Valley, Baltimore county.

Bennet was the progenitor of the present Wheeler family in Harford county.
Ignatius never married.

Frank Wheeler was the ancestor of the Wheeler family in Baltimore county, and of Adys and Burkes in Harford and Baltimore counties. By Colonel Wheeler's will his brother Joseph and John Lee Gibson, who had married Colonel Wheeler's sister, were left executors and trustees.

John Lee Gibson was the first clerk of the Circuit Court for Harford County (not counting Alex. Lawson).

COL. JOHN STREETT.

The Streett family is one of the oldest in Harford county. Three brothers—David, Thomas and John—came to America from London early in the eighteenth century. One, John, went to Philadelphia; David settled on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and Thomas in Harford (then Baltimore) county, Maryland.

Rev. Nicholas Streett, who was born in London in 1603, the year of the death of Queen Elizabeth, and who came to America in 1637-8 and settled at Taunton, Mass., and afterwards became a distinguished theologian, is said to have been of the same family as the Harford County Streetts.

Thomas Streett, before the Revolution, took out a patent for seven hundred acres of land above the Rocks of Deer Creek, called Streett's Hunting Ground, part of which is yet in the possession of his descendants.

Thomas Streett was residing on this property in 1774, at the time of the foundation of the county.

--*Mr. P. H. Rutledge, a descendant of Col. Wheeler, assisted in the preparation of the above.
Besides a large number of the name now in Harford many other prominent families here are descended from Thomas Streett. Among them are Williams, Fendal, Waters, Bell, Gladden, Baldwin, Glenn, Whiteford, Cairnes, Amos, Den Bow, Bevard, St. Clair, Holmes and many others.

Col. John Streett was born in the year 1762 in what is now Marshall's district of Harford county, where he died in the year 1837. His wife's name was Martha St. Clair. He was an extensive farmer, owning more than three thousand acres. He was also a successful business man and was prominent in the politics of the county, serving twelve times consecutively in the Maryland Legislature as a representative from Harford.

At the time of the British attack upon Baltimore, in September, 1814, a call was made for troops from the surrounding country. Colonel Streett marched with his cavalry command from Harford county to the defence of that city, and served with the brigade of cavalry at North Point. In his command as officers were Capt. Clem Butler and Capt. McAtee, and several of Colonel Streett's sons also served under him.

The children of Col. John Streett were:

James, born August 22, 1789.
Mary, who married Henry Amos.
John, born 1791.
William.
Shadrach.
Thomas, who married Catherine Merryman.
St. Clair, born 1798, who married Miss Jarrett.
Dr. Abraham J., born in 1800; married Elizabeth Streett.
Charlotte, who married Silas Baldwin.
DANIEL SCOTT.

Daniel Scott was a native of Harford, being one of the seven children of Aquila Scott, whose ancestors for generations had been planters and large landowners in Baltimore and Harford counties, one of them having given the land to Baltimore county on which the first courthouse at Joppa was built, and when Harford was established and the new county seat was chosen at Scott's Oldfields, now Bel Air, the subject of the present sketch conveyed to the county the ground upon which the courthouse and jail are still standing.

He was the surveyor of the county and was elected a member of the Committee of Harford from Bush River Lower Hundred, and was one of the signers of Harford's famous declaration.

Daniel Scott died about the year 1828, leaving an only child, Otho Scott, who became the leading member of the bar of Harford county and one of the most distinguished lawyers in Maryland.

The latter, in 1860, codified the Laws of Maryland, condensing into two volumes all the varied and unskillfully framed laws passed in the State since its foundation. The Code of 1860 stands as a monument to his memory, many leading lawyers pronouncing it the best code ever produced. It is peculiarly appropriate that his portrait now adorns the courtroom at Bel Air, which was the theatre of many of his achievements.

It is a singular fact that a majority of the descendants of the signers of the Harford declaration still live in their native county, many on the very farms worked for generations by their ancestors, and the late Daniel
Scott was a conspicuous example of this, he having resided on the same land which had been in his family for more than two centuries. This continued possession and occupancy of the land speaks volumes for the healthfulness and beauty of Harford and attests the love of the descendants for the land of their illustrious ancestors.

SAMUEL CALWELL.

Samuel Calwell was born in Harford (then Baltimore) county, of Irish and Scotch parentage, and was a resident of Bush River Lower Hundred, at that time one of the largest districts in the county. He married Ann Richardson, whose family was a prominent one locally, and lived for many years on a farm called the Grove, on Winter's run, near the present Almshouse, a part of this land being now in the possession of Mr. George Steigler. His life seems to have been a quiet and uneventful one, as few reminiscences have been handed down to his descendants.

In February, 1775, he was elected a member of the Committee of Harford County to represent, with nine other members, the Bush River Lower Hundred, and was present at Harford Town on March 22, 1775, when he signed the memorable declaration of that date. Samuel Calwell survived that interesting event about twenty-five years and died in the year 1800.

One of his sons, James Calwell, migrated to Virginia, and was the founder and owner of the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, which he conducted for many years, helping to make it one of the most celebrated summer resorts in the United States, and some of his descendants are still living there.
Another son, William, established himself as a merchant in Bel Air, and died in the early part of the last century.

A third son, Thomas, removed to Baltimore and established large and successful flour mills there. The last named was the father of sixteen children, some of whose descendants are still living in Baltimore and Harford counties and in other states. A grandson, Joseph Cushing Calwell, a retired merchant, is living in Brooklyn, N. Y.; another grandson, William G. Wetherall, whose father's family settled in Harford over a century ago, is a prominent iron merchant of Baltimore city, and James S. Calwell, a member of the bar of Baltimore, whose summer home is in Harford, is another grandson, whose children by his marriage with the daughter and only child of the late Daniel Scott and his wife, Cordelia Scott (nee Norris), are descendants of three signers of the Harford declaration, that noble band of patriots who risked their lives and fortunes that they and their posterity might enjoy constitutional government, viz: Samuel Calwell, Daniel Scott and Benjamin Bradford Norris.

ISAAC WEBSTER.

SAMUEL WEBSTER.

RICHARD WEBSTER.

The Webster family is one of the oldest in Harford, and has furnished of its members some of the most distinguished men in the county, among these being the Isaac, Samuel and Richard above named, Captain John A. Webster, of the war of 1812 fame, and the late Col. Edwin H. Webster, a distinguished lawyer, president of the Maryland Senate, colonel of the Seventh Maryland Regiment, which he organized, member of Congress and twice Collector of the Port of Baltimore. As the scope of this book does not reach past the war of 1812, it is with Isaac, Samuel and Richard that this sketch is especially to deal. The Webster family is of English and Scotch origin, the first to cross the ocean being John, who settled in Virginia, and was known as John of Roanoke; Isaac, who was the progenitor of the present Webster family here; Samuel and Michael. There are patents now in possession of the family for land in this county, bearing date in the seventeenth century. The original representatives of the Websters in this county were of diversified religious belief, some being Quakers and others Episcopalians, many of the present generation being Presbyterians and Methodists. The family coat of arms is a swan feeding its young. A very old seal showing this crest is now in possession of the family.

John Webster was born in 1670, and lived to be eighty-five years of age. His will, dated in 1751, is recorded in the old Will Records of Baltimore County. A son John had died before the testator, and in the latter's will he provides for his children as follows: Sarah, Michael, Samuel, Aliceanna and the Isaac above named.

Samuel, the son of John, was born in 1710, and married Elizabeth Dallam. He was a prominent man in his day and held the important and lucrative office of tobacco inspector at Joppa, then one of the principal ports of the State. Samuel's son, Richard, was born April 7th, 1741, on the family homestead near Calvary, in Harford County, and he died in the old stone family residence. He was twice married, his first wife being a daughter of William Lester. Of this union there were three children: John, Samuel and Richard, the latter being the father of Mr. James Webster, now living in the county. His second wife was Phoebe, daughter of George Smith, of Chester County, Pennsylvania, whose children were: George, Elizabeth, William W., Sarah, Isaac, Wesley, Henry and Phoebe. Henry was the father of Col. Edwin H. Webster and of Mr. William Webster, who now resides on the home place.

Isaac, the son of John, was a leading man in the county before and at the time of the Revolution. He was a member of the Bush River Company, and was a man of wealth and position. His daughter, Aliceanna, married John Bond, of Baltimore Town, who was also a member of the Bush River Company. Aliceanna Bond, daughter of John Bond and Aliceanna Webster, his wife, on May 30th, 1767, married Thomas Kell at Fell's Point, Baltimore. They moved shortly afterwards to Kellville, Harford County, which was their home for the remainder of their lives. The issue of this marriage were:

Alice Kell, June 2nd, 1768.
Elizabeth Kell, July 10th, 1769.
Pamelia Kell, August 5th, 1770.
John Bond Kell, July 16th, 1771.
Thomas Kell, September 22nd, 1772.
Isaac Kell, August 17th, 1774.
Wesley Kell,
Aliceanna Kell, Twins, June, 1776.
William Kell, April 20th, 1777.
Nathan Kell, December 28th, 1778.
Aliceanna Kell, August 15th, 1780.
Elizabeth Kell, October 26th, 1781.
Elizabeth Kell, May 26th, 1783.
Anne Kell, April 25th, 1785.
Harriet Ann Kell, May 23rd, 1786.

The Thomas Kell, born September 27th, 1772, was Judge, Clerk of the Court in Baltimore, and the only native of Harford who was ever Attorney General of the State of Maryland. The latter's daughter, Elizabeth, on November 10th, 1835, married Augustus W. Bradford, who was born in Bel Air, on January 9th, 1806, and was Governor of Maryland during the Civil War.

A portion of the house in which Governor Bradford was born is now standing and is part of the residence of his son, Mr. Samuel Webster Bradford, on Main street, Bel Air.
CHAPTER XVIII.

THE WAR OF 1812.

NATIONAL CONDITIONS—WEAK FEDERAL GOVERNMENT—VALUABLE ASSISTANCE BY THE FRENCH—FORT MCHENRY—NORTH POINT—CAPT. JOHN A. WEBSTER, COL. WILLIAM SMITH AND COL. JOHN STREETT, ALL OF HARFORD, ASSIST IN THE DEFENCE OF BALTIMORE—SKETCH OF CAPTAIN WEBSTER—BRITISH ATTACK UPON HAVRE DE GRACE—JOHN O'NEIL—COLONEL SMITH'S 42D REGIMENT.

There are old men yet with us who in their youth have seen soldiers of the Revolution, but even young men can remember soldiers of the war of 1812, and the meetings of veterans of that war held annually in Baltimore have only within the past decade ceased on account of the death of the last survivors. Many men of middle age now living in Harford had fathers who served in that war. Our distinguished fellow-citizen, Capt. John A. Webster, a participant in that conflict, reached his journey's end at his home, "The Mount," in the first district, on July 4, 1877, and so the events of that time in a certain sense may be considered modern. The causes of that war are well known, and the victories on the sea and disasters on land are too familiar to be recounted here. The successful financial system of Hamilton had not been kept up. Jefferson became President 1801, and with him came in the doctrines of individual liberty, States rights and poor finances. Under the administration of Jefferson and Madison the public taste for home government, State sovereignty and equal rights was freely indulged, but the arm of the federal power was allowed to become weak and feeble, so that when the time came for the nation to act as such and resist the encroachment of her most bitter enemy, the loose fabric of the Federal Government, as then administered, was entirely inadequate to the situation. Here again fortune came to our side in the assistance rendered by France. In the Revolution, when the English held our large cities, while the army of Washington was suffering from cold and hunger at Valley Forge, while the British lived in comfort and plenty in the cities of New York, Philadelphia and Boston, when the conservative element of the country, many of whom had come from Severn and from Clyde and from the banks of Shannon, were asking themselves whether the game was worth carrying on, the news, long delayed, which finally came, that the French government had decided to assist us, revived the drooping spirits of the patriots and inspired them to press on to victory. And at that final struggle at Yorktown, when the army of Cornwallis was surrounded by that of Washington, out in the bay was the fleet of De Grasse, and the forces of Rochambeau were assisting the American Army, the presence of the French contributing much to the final result.

And so in the war of 1812, while we were doing the best we could with our improvised army, we had a friend in France whose wooden walls on sea were sufficient to monopolize the attention of the British fleet. The traveler in London who passes along the Strand sees at Trafalgar Square, high over the beating hearts of that great city, the column erected to Nelson, and on it, leaning against a capstan, the one-armed sailor who gave his life for his country in the cockpit of the Victory; and when one remembers that Nelson’s triumphs were over the French alone, and what a relief passed through the hearts of the people of England at the victory of Trafalgar, we may know that the French were no mean rivals of the English, even on the seas. And thus in the war of 1812, when England had to contend with her ancient rival, as well as with her defiant daughter across the sea, the double burden was more than she could withstand.

The events of the war were startling and contradictory. While on the seas the natural quality of the American sailor asserted itself, and victories were often obtained over great odds; on the land for the most part the battles ended in disaster to the American side. There is one great exception—that of Jackson at New Orleans—who infused into his hastily recruited soldiers something of his indomitable spirit, and won out a victory with a loss of but thirteen men, while two thousand of the enemy went down before his guns. In the history of the world there is scarcely such a record for disparity of losses, except in the naval engagements at Manila and Santiago de Cuba, nearly a hundred years later, when the American fleets utterly destroyed the forces of Spain, hundreds of the enemy being killed or captured, with the loss of but one American life in both engagements.

At the commencement of hostilities a number of companies in the State offered their services to the Federal Government, but the national finances were in such a miserable condition that they could only be accepted at the charge of the State. In the city of Baltimore nearly a regiment was sent forward under the command of Col. Wm. H. Winder, the expense of the command being defrayed by private subscription, about fifteen thousand dollars being raised in this way. Indeed, the defence of Baltimore, a large city, within forty miles of the national capital, depended largely on State aid and private contributions.

In the attack by the British fleet on Fort McHenry, Captain John A. Webster, of Harford, rendered valuable service to his country and won well-merited fame. Captain Webster was born at "The Mount," about five miles from Bel Air, on September 19, 1789. He was the son of Samuel Webster and Margaret Adams, his wife, the latter, being a member of the distinguished Adams family of Massachusetts, which gave two Presidents to the country. The first Websters came to this country early in the eighteenth century from England, and settled, Isaac and Richard in Maryland, Michael in New England, and John in Virginia, where he was known as John of Roanoke. Daniel Webster, the great Senator, came from the New England branch. When fourteen years old Captain Webster began his life on the sea by sailing for South America in a merchant vessel, and afterwards made many voyages to foreign ports. At the beginning of the war of 1812 he was appointed a third lieutenant by Commodore Barney on the privateer Rossie, and served during the whole period of the war.

On the organization of the Flotilla at Baltimore he was made sailing master in the navy, and had charge of one of the barges. He was with Commodore Barney in all his engagements. At the request of General
Smith, he was detached from his appointment and ordered to command the six-gun battery between Forts McHenry and Covington, and was the first to discover and open fire on the British ships on the night of September 13, 1814, and remained on duty during the engagement, though he was twice wounded. In recognition of his services he was presented with two handsome gold-mounted swords—one by the State of Maryland and the other by the city of Baltimore. The National Government gave him a pension of twenty dollars per month and paid for property lost by him.

On March 1, 1816, President Madison appointed him a sailing master in the United States Navy, in which position he served for a considerable time, and on account of his experience and nautical skill he was frequently assigned to perform important duties outside the line of his official position.

On February 8, 1816, he was married to Miss Rachel Biays, daughter of Col. Joseph Biays, who, with his brother James, had served in the Revolution.

On November 22, 1819, President Madison issued Captain Webster a commission as captain in the revenue marine, which position he held at the time of his death—July 4, 1877.

While in the revenue marine, Captain Webster performed important services, among them being his command of eight revenue vessels to act with the army and navy against Vera Cruz and upon the Rio Grande in the Mexican war.

Captain and Mrs. Webster were the parents of eleven children, viz: Margaret, the widow of William R. Bissell, who was killed in command of a company in Pickett's charge in the battle of Gettysburg;
Dr. J. Biays Webster, Susan A. Webster, Laura A., wife of John C. Patterson; William S. Webster; Josephine, wife of Dr. William Dallam; John A. Webster, also of the revenue marine service; Mary A., wife of Algernon S. Dorsey; Benj. M. Webster; Rachel Cassandra, wife of Gen. Frank A. Bond, and Isaac P. Webster.

Captain Webster and his wife lie buried in the family burying ground at "The Mount." Harford may be justly proud of the career of this one of her most distinguished sons, who was ever ready to respond to the call of duty, and who spent his life in the service of his country.

For the defence of Baltimore, Generals Smith, Winder and Stricker had assembled of State militia, regular troops and detachments from Virginia and Pennsylvania about twelve thousand men. The battle of North Point came off on September 12; the enemy were checked, and General Ross, the commander, killed. The attack on Fort McHenry failed, and the British were forced to retreat.

At the battle of North Point, the Harford Regiment known as the Forty-second Maryland Militia, under the command of Col. William Smith, constituted part of the reserve, and Col. John Streett, with the Harford cavalry command, was present and participated in the battle.

As Great Britain was at war with France, then as now a great naval power, they did not at first prosecute vigorously the war in America.

But in December, 1812, the ports and harbors of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays were declared by the British Government in a state of blockade, and Admiral Cockburn, with a British fleet consisting of four ships of the line, six frigates and a number of smaller vessels, entered the Chesapeake and took possession of Hampton Roads. This force was speedily increased, and by March of the year 1813, the whole coast was in a state of blockade, except Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, which sections had opposed the war, and on that account were spared by the enemy. There was no force with which we could oppose this powerful fleet, as the navy and coast defences had been neglected by the young government.

Captain John Southcomb, in the schooner Lottery, with letters of marque, carrying six guns and twenty-eight men, on February 8, 1813, was attacked by nine boats of the enemy containing more than two hundred men. An engagement ensued, lasting two hours and a half, in which the British loss was more than the whole number of the crew of the American schooner. The captain of the Lottery was killed and the vessel was captured.

In April of the same year the American privateer schooner Dolphin engaged several vessels of the enemy at the mouth of the Rappahannock river, but was defeated and captured. The arrival of the British fleet spread consternation throughout the State. The State capital was in a defenseless condition, and the government at Washington was unable to furnish aid. The Governor of the State made repeated demands upon the Secretary of War for arms and men, but little assistance came from this source, and the defence of the State and city of Baltimore was left to themselves. In the spring of 1813, the British moved up the Chesapeake, landing at different points and plundering wherever they set foot. General Winder made the best defence of the city of Baltimore possible with his available means. The channel was obstructed, cannon mounted, and Colonel Wardsworth, of the United States engineers, laid off fortifications. The enemy's fleet moved off towards the head of the bay.

They plundered Sharp's, Poole's, Tilghman's and Poplar Islands, and then entered upon their design of pillaging and destroying the towns and villages at the head of the bay. On April 29, Lieutenant Westphal, of the British warship Marlborough, in command of thirteen barges, with four hundred men, made an attack on Frenchtown, at the mouth of the Susquehanna, in Cecil county. Here they destroyed a number of small vessels, and the wharves and warehouses. They next turned their attention to Havre de Grace, on the other side of the river, in Harford county. In anticipation of the arrival of the enemy, on a high bank just below the town, three cannon were mounted—one nine-pounder and two six-pounders—and a small battery was erected at Concord Point, where the lighthouse now stands. Early on the morning of May 2 the enemy began to bombard the city without a moment's warning. Nineteen barges from the enemy's squadron appeared before the town and sent a dreadful fire of shell, shot and rockets. After a short bombardment the enemy landed and proceeded to shell the town. Only one house—that of Mr. Pringle—was left uninjured.

There were a few militia on hand, but they speedily fled. The story of the sad fate of Havre de Grace is redeemed by the brave conduct of one of her citizens, John O'Neil, who remained firing the cannon after all others had fled, and was severely injured by the recoil of his gun.*

The following is from a contemporaneous account: "The place, though called a town, contained only a few warehouses, a tavern, two or three dwelling-houses, with a few stables and outhouses, deriving its whole importance from being the 'stopping place' of the 'land and water line of stages between Philadelphia and Baltimore.' On the report of guns we immediately jumped out of our beds, and from the top of the house could plainly see the balls and hear the cries of the inhabitants. We ran down the road, and soon began to meet the distressed people—women and children half naked; children inquiring for their parents, parents for their children and wives for their husbands. It appeared to us as if the whole town was on fire. I think this act, committed without any previous warning, has degraded the British flag.

"The enemy robbed every house of everything valuable that could be carried away, leaving not a change of raiment to one of ten persons, and whatever they could not take conveniently they destroyed by cutting in pieces or breaking to atoms. The Admiral himself was present at this work of destruction, and gave orders for it to his officers. Mrs. John Rogers, wife of the commodore, Mrs. William Pinkney and Mrs. Goldsborough took shelter at Mr. Mark Pringle's. When a detachment was sent up to burn that elegant building, Mrs. Goldsborough told the officer that she had an aged mother in it, and begged it might be spared. The officer replied that he acted under the admiral, and it would be necessary to obtain his consent. Mrs. Goldsborough returned with the officer and detachment and obtained the permission that the house might be spared; but when she reached it she found it on fire, and met two men, one with a sheet, the other with a pillow-case crammed full coming out, which she could not then notice, but ran upstairs and found a large wardrobe standing in the passage all aflame. William Pinkney, who was with her, and two of the marines by great exertion saved the house; but some of the wretches after that took the cover from the sofa in the front room and put coals in it, and it was in flames before it was discovered. An officer put his sword through a large elegant looking glass, attacked the windows and cut out several sashes. They cut hogs through the back, and some partly through, and then left them to run. Such wanton barbarity among civilized people I have never heard of.”

O’Neill himself has given a graphic account of his experience on that day: “No doubt before this you have heard of my defeat. On the third instant we were attacked by fifteen English barges at break of day. We had a small breastwork erected with two six and one nine-pounder in it, and I was stationed at one of the guns. When the alarm was given I ran to the battery and found but one man there, and two or three came afterwards. After firing a few shots they retreated and left me alone in the battery. The grape shot flew very thick about me. I loaded the gun myself without any one to serve the vent, which, you know, is very dangerous, and fired her, when she recoiled and ran over my thigh. I retreated down to town and joined Mr. Barnes, of the nail manufactory, with a musket, and fired on the barges while we had ammunition, and then retreated to the common, where I kept waving my hat to the militia, who had run away, to come to our assistance, but they proved cowardly and would not come back. At the same time an English officer on horseback, followed by the marines, rode up and took me with two muskets in my hand. I was carried on board the Maidstone frigate, where I remained until released, three days since."

"John O'Neill was born in Ireland on the 23d of November, 1788, and came to America at the age of eighteen years. He was in the military service under Gen. Henry Lee in quelling the whisky insurrection in 1794, and in 1798 entered the naval service against the French. He became a prosperous merchant at Havre de Grace, and the destruction of the place ruined his business. When the present lighthouse was built on Concord Point, in 1829, he became its keeper, and continued as such until his death, the 26th of January, 1838. For his gallantry at the "Potato Battery" the city of Philadelphia presented him with a beautiful sword."

In that war there was organized in the lower section of the county the Forty-second Regiment of militia, under the command of Col. William Smith.

There are very few old men yet living who remember Colonel Smith. The time of the organization of this regiment is not exactly known. From what little light we have it began in 1813. The last communication to Colonel Smith from Major Black, brigade inspector, was on August 24, 1825. Its existence then would be about twelve years. Patterson’s old fields, on the road from Havre de Grace to Bush, six or seven miles from the former place, was the parade ground of the regiment. July 14, 1814, Colonel Smith communicated to General Foreman that he had called out the Forty-second Regiment for duty, and had appointed Captains Ruff, Bradford, Courtney and Sheckles over four companies, consisting of sixty-four privates detached from the whole regiment. He also stationed a picket guard, with Major Burkhead, on Strong’s Hill, Gunpowder Neck, with a sergeant and six privates, having a full view of the Chesapeake bay from Spesutie Island to Kent Island, to watch the British. There is no record of the regiment being at the battle of Havre de Grace, but it is certain Colonel Smith, with his regiment, was behind the intrenchments on Loudenslager’s Hill when General Ross attacked Baltimore, but he was not in the battle of North Point.

Colonel Smith died from an apoplectic stroke, after three days illness, on Thursday morning, December 17, 1835, faithfully attended by Drs. Gillette and Robert Archer. He was buried on the farm he owned, in a private lot, about one hundred yards from the Churchville road. Smith’s Chapel, built on a part of this farm, was erected in his memory. He was a Mason, yet for some reason the Masonic ceremonies at his grave were delayed till the following April, when the “Craft assembled accordingly at the house of Mr. Carvil H. Prigg, in the vicinity of Brother Smith’s grave, where the lodge was opened in the first degree, formed in procession and marched to the grave, where the usual ceremonies were gone through with and an appropriate eulogy delivered by Brother Israel D. Maulsby, after which the lodge returned to Mr. C. H. Prigg's and was closed. Those present were I. D. Maulsby, John Wann, C. D. Bouldin, H. Richardson, W. I. McIlhenny, Wm. McC. Jeffery, Robert Miller, Jas. Miller, T. Welch, S. Welch, E. Morrison, B. M. Billingslea, M. G. McComas. The visitors were S. Boyd, T. Courtay, John Donohoo, Pritchard Loflin, E. Elliott and J. Ergood."

CHAPTER XIX.

HAVRE DE GRACE.

-Origin of the Name—Early Description—Organization as a Town—First Town Commissioners—Proceedings—Returns of Election.

The beautiful city at the mouth of the Susquehanna dates its origin about the time of our Revolutionary War, as the first mention of the name of which we have any record is in a letter from Lafayette to General Washington during the Revolution, and dated at Havre de Grace. It is almost certain that the first settlers at Havre de Grace were followers of the rebel Claiborne, who came here from the Eastern Shore of Maryland. He is said to have had a factory on Palmer's Island, at the mouth of the Susquehanna, where mink, otter, muskrat, beaver and other skins were purchased from the Indians and cured preparatory to their shipment to England.

The settlement continued to grow down to the time of the formation of the county in 1773-4, at which date there were nearly two hundred inhabitants. It had no distinguishing name save that of Susquehanna Lower Ferry. The origin of the name of Havre de Grace seems to be involved in considerable obscurity. One tradition ascribes it to Lafayette, and another to an old French fisherman, who thought it resembled the harbor of that name in France, a view which is said to have been subsequently confirmed by Lafayette. At all events, we know that the present name of the city was coincident with the visit of Lafayette. A pamphlet published in 1795 says: "Havre de Grace at present consists of about fifty good dwelling-houses; but the ground plot of the town comprehends eight hundred and fifty acres which have been laid out in squares in imitation of the plan of Philadelphia. These squares are now divided into lots, amounting in the whole to forty-five hundred. The principal street is one hundred and thirty-two feet wide, and the others seventy. This town is also situated on the post road leading through Philadelphia and Baltimore, sixty-five miles from the former and forty from the latter. The mail arrived six times a week in its passage to these cities, an advantage of no small importance."

The writer gets the distance about four miles too great to Baltimore, but it is fairly accurate for those days. Havre de Grace was first incorporated by the Act of 1785, chapter 55.

The preamble recites that whereas Robert Young Stokes, deceased, did in his lifetime survey and lay out into lots a town at the mouth of the Susquehanna, which he called Havre de Grace, and that it would be to the interest of the owners of the lots to have an organization as a town, with commissioners, etc. The act appoints Samuel Hughes, Benedict Edward Hall, William Smith (Bayside), Josias Carvil Hall and Gabriel Christie, commissioners, and confers the powers customary to that day upon the town government.

The first act for the town government named the commissioners as above stated, and provided for the annual election of their successors, but this provision was not observed until after the act of 1811, which directed an annual election, and provided that the commissioners should serve for one year and no longer. Since that time there have been annual elections in Havre de Grace. Some of the early commissioners did not reside in the town. Col. Samuel Hughes, for instance, lived at Mount Pleasant farm, on which Mr. William P. C. Whitaker lately resided, and at least one of the Halls named in the record was never a citizen of the town. The strife for office could not have been great in those days. There is no town record of those who composed the board prior to 1800, except that William Smith was a commissioner in 1799, and although the name of Smith is one of the most frequently met with, Havre de Grace has never had a commissioner of that name since 1799.

October 16th the board met.
Commissioners present: Samuel Hughes, Benedict E. Hall and Gabriel Christie.
Roger Boyce was appointed clerk.
The commissioners then elected by ballot James Hall as one of their number in place of William Smith, deceased. The clerk was directed to advertise Market Space for rent. On November 11th Market Space was set up at public auction and rented to Alexander Rogers for three years at two hundred dollars per annum.

1801.

April 7.—Commissioners met at Mrs. Hayward’s tavern. Present Samuel Hughes, Gabriel Christie and James W. Hall. Renting of streets was postponed. Mr. Christie resigned his seat as commissioner.

April 14.—Board met. Present Samuel Hughes, Josias C. Hall and James W. Hall. Abel Murphy was elected commissioner in place of Gabriel Christy, resigned.

The streets were rented as follows:
Lewis street to James W. Hall for $25.
Fayette street to Barney Boyce for $25.
Congress street to Barney Bartol for $25.
Bourbon street to Abel Warple and Barney Boyce for $25.

Thomas Cofield was to have the preference of the last two streets if he wanted them.

June 15.—John Dutton was appointed inspector of lumber, John Kindlemeyer was appointed inspector of lumber and Roger Boyce inspector of salted provisions.

March 6.—Board met. Same members, all being present. Roger Boyce resigned as clerk and William G. Hands was elected, swearing in before Alexander Rogers, justice of the peace. The clerk was directed to apportion, levy and collect the sum of ten pounds on the property of the citizens of the town agreeable to the assessment of the county commissioners, whose valuation shall be his guide and direction.

Samuel Jay was appointed "collector of rents for the streets," and Benedict Edward Hall was requested in his capacity of associate judge of the county to "qualify the officers appointed at last meeting."

April 6.—Mr. B. E. Hall was appointed to rent the streets, the renters' rights to extend only fifty feet back from high-water mark. The clerk was directed to collect rents due the town, as Mr. Jay had refused to accept the office.

1803.

Of five commissioners and clerk all were named Hall, except one, viz: Samuel Hughes.

February 8.—Jonathan Dorsey was appointed to "execute a supplement to the act entitled an act to prevent the going at large of geese and swine in the town of Havre de Grace."

John Dutton and William McCaskey were appointed assessors of the property of the inhabitants of the town.

April 22.—Present S. Hughes, B. E. Hall and J. W. Hall. These commissioners proceed to sign their bond to the State of Maryland for the performance of their duties as managers of the Havre de Grace lottery, "for the point of which the following arrangement was made at the joint risque of the commissioners: That the secretary be authorized to deliver any number of tickets under the direction in writing of any of the commissioners, taking down whatever number delivered and to whom."

William McCaskey was inspector of flour and qualified before B. E. Hall, judge.

August 5.—It was resolved "that each commissioner take three hundred lottery tickets, with fifty of them each are to be charged on their own account; the rest they are to sell, if possible; if not, to be returned." The clerk was directed to deliver Captain Boyce one book of tickets, and to advertise that the drawing of the Havre de Grace lottery will commence on the first of November next.

Here there seems to have been an interruption of the proceedings. The next record is dated April 2, 1806, and is a different hand writing. Barrick Williams was probably clerk from 1806 until 1809. The proceedings continue.

April 2.—Present Roger Boyce, Samuel Jay, Gabriel Christie, who qualified according to law.

Roger Boyce was appointed inspector of fish and salted provisions for this district.

June 11.—The board met and ordered the constable of the town to "summon a sufficient number of the male inhabitants of the town of Havre de Grace to remove a nuisance accompanied by the fish troughs of Christian Hoopman, on the morning of the 12th of June instant, agreeable to the form of the Act of Assembly made and provided."

1807.

April 15.—The clerk was ordered to advertise Market Space and the fisheries on adjoining streets for rent.

(This was the only meeting held this year, according to the record.)

(There is no record of any meeting this year.)

1809.

March 31.—Present B. E. Hall, Roger Boyce, Samuel Jay. It was resolved "that Gabriel Christie being dead and Able Marple having withdrawn from his residence to parts beyond the sea, the commissioners proceed to fill up the vacancies, and have appointed Aquila Hall and Capt. Bennet Barnes, agreeably to the powers in them vested."

April 1.—Present the full board. (We copy the following entry verbatim:)

"And in pursuance of Powers vested in them by Law, to raise the sum of 5000 dollars, clear of all expenses, by Lottery, and having by experience found the total impracticability of effecting it in this place, and conceiving that they are within the spirit and Letter of the Law, have and do now give full power and ample authority to Samuel Hughes and Mark Pringle, Esqrs., to negotiate with Lottery Brokers or others in the city of Baltimore, any plan or scheme which may be lawfully done, under the authority of the Commissioners to raise the above sum of 5000 drs. clear of all charges. Any person or persons with whom the said Samuel Hughes and Mark Pringle may contract with, shall give bond, with security, to be approved by the Commissioners, to pay the prizes to the fortunate Adventurers, and all the expenses of the Lottery, as well as the sum of 5000 drs., to the Commissioners, clear of all expenses."

(There are entries of meetings on April 4, April 8, April 15 and April 17, all at Mrs. Sears' tavern, but no business was transacted.)

July 8.—Present, "the whole body." The clerk was directed to notify Mr. Cornelius Chandlee, in writing, to remove "a nuisance" from his premises within one month. (This "nuisance" was occasioned by stagnant water in Mr. Chandlee's cellar.)
September 23.—Mr. George Poe, of Baltimore, was directed to be sued for amount of rent due the town.

September 27.—Present, Messrs. Barnes, A. Hall, Jay and Boyce. The following was adopted:

"Resolved, That whereas the said Commissioners did heretofore authorize and empower Samuel Hughes and Mark Pringle, Esqrs., to contract for the drawing of the Lottery for Havre de Grace, that the said Samuel Hughes and Mark Pringle be and are hereby authorized and empowered to pay as much of the proceeds of said lottery into the hands of Samuel Hughes, Mark Pringle, Paca Smith, William B. Stokes and Aquila Hall, as shall reimburse them for any sum or sums of Money, with interest, which they have or may hereafter advance for the purpose of Erecting a Church in the Parish of Havre de Grace, or so much thereof as they may not have been otherwise reimbursed by other ways and means."

The secretary was directed to advertise "that the law to prevent Hogs and Geese from going at large in the town will positively be put in force on the first day of December next."

December 28.—Present, Messrs. Boyce, A. Hall, Barnes and Jay.

Public property was rented, as follows: Market Space to Jacob Poe at $100 per annum; Bourbon street to Christian Hoopman at $25 per annum; Lafayette street to John K. Meyers at $20 per annum.

1810.

January 28.—The Board met. Present Roger Boyce, Samuel Jay and Bennet Barnes.
After paying Barrick Williams $80 for services rendered as a clerk it was found that there was cash on hand and held by private persons, available funds to the amount of $713. Samuel Jay was appointed to collect this money, and the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That the above sum of $713 be and is hereby appropriated for the purpose of erecting a market-house in Havre de Grace.

"Resolved, That Aquila Hall, Roger Boyce and Bennet Barnes be and they are hereby appointed and empowered to adopt a plan to fix upon a scite (the most eligible, in their judgment, on any of the public grounds or streets), for the erecting of said market-house, and to receive proposals, and to contract for building of the same.

"Resolved, That any surplus Monies remaining in the hands of the Treasurer after the Cost and Expense of Building the Market-house be deducted, be, and the same is, hereby appropriated as a Fund towards Erecting a Schoolhouse in Havre de Grace, and that the said Aquila Hall, Roger Boyce and Bennet Barnes be and are hereby appointed and empowered to adopt a plan, fix on a scite, Receive proposals and contract for the Building of the said Schoolhouse.

"Resolved, That a subscription be opened for the purpose of adding to the funds for Building a Market-house, and that the several sums so subscribed for the same be made payable to the Treasurer."

The clerk, Barrick Williams, then resigned his office, and the Board of 1810 adjourned sine die.
258    HISTORY OF HARFORD COUNTY.

1811.

There is no record of there having been a board of commissioners in this year. No meeting was held.

1812.

In pursuance of powers vested in them by an act of the Legislature, passed in 1811, the legal voters of the town met on the first Monday in January of this year, and, after choosing judges to conduct the same, held an election for town commissioners. We have not the returns of this election, but know that Messrs. William Coale, Joshua Green, John Milhoof, John Donn and William B. Stokes were the gentlemen chosen. It may be mentioned here also that for several years after this the voters assembled at the polls upon election day and chose their own judges, while the clerk to the commissioners acted as clerk of the election. Before the town schoolhouse was built, the elections were held at different places—sometimes at Mr. James O'Brien's schoolroom, sometimes at "Mr. Coale's preaching-room" and elsewhere.

The gentlemen named above met on April 11, and organized by electing James O'Brien clerk.

On April 14 St. Claire street was rented to Thomas Courtney at $5 per year.

September 15.—Board met and took measures to collect money due the town.

The clerk was directed to "furnish to the commissioners by the first day of November an accurate statement of the free males, residents of the town, alphabetically arranged."

An ordinance was passed forbidding all persons from enclosing any part of the streets, lanes or alleys of the town.

Also an ordinance forbidding all persons from digging or taking away any earth, sand or gravel stones from any of the streets, lanes or alleys, under a penalty of $5.

October 12.—An ordinance was passed forbidding the discharge of firearms within the limits of the town, under a penalty of 50 cents for each offence, the prohibition not to apply to the shooting of ducks or other wild fowl “sitting on or flying over the waters in front of the shores of the town.”

December 31.—After auditing the books it was ascertained that the whole amount in the treasurer’s hands, and due the town from other persons, was $570.75.

For the first time we are able to give the returns of a Havre de Grace election. William Coale received 49 votes; John Donn, 49; Joshua Green, 47; William B. Stokes, 39; Joshua Millhoof, 27; Thomas Courtney, 21; James Wood, 18; Charles Foreman, 1; John Dutton, 1; Platt Whitaker,—. The first five named were elected, who organized March 20 by electing James O’Brien clerk and Joshua Green treasurer. On April 1 the streets, etc., of the town were rented at public auction until the first of the following January, as follows:

All the land in the addition to Havre de Grace, south of Revolution street, to Mark Pringle, for $19; St. Claire street to Thomas Brown for $5; Fountain and Revolution streets and Market Space were rented together to Jacob Poe for $66.66 2-3; Lafayette street to William Coale for $14; Concord street to Thomas Courtney for $3.33 1-3; Bourbon street to Jacob Poe for $13.66 2-3.

No further business during the year, except paying the clerk $25 salary.

The election this year resulted as follows: William Coale, 32; James Wood, 31; John Donn, 29; William B. Stokes, 25; Henry Carver, 17; John Warehan, 3; John Donahue, 3; John McKinney, 1; John Crawford, 2; Nicholas Suter, 1; William Bell, 1; Ben Hobbs, 1; Andrew Rhoads, 1; Charles Johnson, 1; James Watkins, 1; Chris. Levy, 1; William McCaskey, 1; Joshua Green, 1; Thomas Chandlee, 1; George Bartol, 1.

Mr. O'Brien was continued as clerk, and on June 25 was directed to write to John Love, Esq., engaging him to "run out the town." John Donn and James Wood were appointed to "hire chain carriers, procure stones and to have the same set up at the four corners of each and every square as soon as the said corners are ascertained." The clerk was paid $25, as part of his year's salary, and all the money remaining in the treasurer's hands was pledged to pay for the survey and marking as above ordered.

At the election this year John Donn received 22 votes; William Coale, 20; William B. Stokes, 18; Henry Carver, 16; Thomas Courtney, 15; James Wood, 14; John Donahue, 1; Joshua Green, 1; Thomas Chandlee, 1; Ben. Ward, 1; Benjamin Chandlee, 1.
On January 7 James O'Brien was re-elected clerk. Joshua Green resigned as treasurer, and John Donn was elected to that office.

May 27.—Thomas Courtney offered to furnish the six hundred stones for the street corners at fifteen cents each, and his bid was accepted. On September 11 Mr. Courtney was authorized to "haul, set up the stones and dig the holes" for the corner-stones at eight cents each.

Market Space and all the streets and alleys intersecting it was rented to John Donn for seven years at $283 per annum.

Note—Capt. C. A. Conner furnished the data for the foregoing sketch o Havre de Grace.

At Stafford, at the mouth of Deer Creek, was located an iron forge before the Revolution. It was erected by George Rock in the year 1749, and the same year it passed into the ownership of Onion & Lawson. Stephen Onion was one of the pioneer ironmakers in this country, and was instrumental in the erection of the Principio Iron Works. He came from Staffordshire, in England, and as the name Stafford dates from this period it is supposed Onion applied it out of compliment to his native shire in England.

Col. Thomas White and Thomas Harrison purchased the forge in April, 1750, from Lawson & Onion, and two years later Harrison bought out his partner.

John Stump, of Stafford, purchased the forge August 19, 1782, and operated it a number of years.

There were iron works called the Lancaster Forge, on Deer Creek, near Priestford, a few years before the Revolution.

In the old days there were iron works all along Deer Creek. Redrum, Lancaster, Rock, Cumberland, Nottingham and Lebanon were the names of some of them.

William Bradford, the first of the family in Harford county, married Elizabeth Lightbody. These two and Aquila Paca and Martha, his wife, were near neighbors and intimate friends, the families living within a mile of each other, in the neighborhood of Bush. The will of Aquila Paca was witnessed by William Bradford, who appears to have been the adviser of the widow Martha after Aquila's death. In the will of Martha Paca she uses the expression, "my good friend William Bradford," and leaves mementoes to him, his wife and daughters, they being the only persons mentioned in the will outside of the Paca family. The above is only given to show a curious coincidence: The only two Governors of Maryland born on Harford soil were William Paca and Augustus W. Bradford, the one the grandson of Aquila and Martha Paca, and the other the great-grandson of William Bradford. These families are thus connected in an interesting way. In the first instance, by their close association before the Revolution, and secondly, by the same distinguished honor having been conferred on these two descendants.

Will of Joseph Butler, Clerk to the Revolutionary Committee of Harford County.

August 27, 1776, when Colonel Smallwood's Regiment was drawn up on Long Island in expectation to engage the enemy, Lieut. Joseph Butler called Ensign Praul and myself out of the ranks, and desired we would remember if he should be so unfortunate as to be killed that it was his desire that his brother or half brother should have his estate, after paying what debts might justly appear against him, should he ever come for it. He signified at the time that he did not know where his brother was, or whether he would ever apply, as he had not heard from him for some time, and if he should not apply that Miss Sarah Hall should be possessed of the whole estate, after paying any lawful claims, and that Mr. John Patterson should be his executor.

JOSEPH FORD.

Letters testamentary on this will were granted by the Orphans' Court of Harford county on April 3, 1778, to John Patterson, executor, on whose bond George Patterson and Gabriel Christie were securities.

MY LADY'S MANOR.

It was the intention of the Calverts to found in Maryland a landed aristocracy. Though the "Bill for Baronies" never passed the Assembly, yet manors were established and certain rights of jurisdiction over their tenants were given to the manorial lords.

The proprietary in 1636 issued instructions that every two thousand acres given to any one should be erected into a manor, and hence we frequently find a grant followed by the setting up of a "Court Baron and a Court Leet." The Manor of Evelin, in St. Mary's county; Great Oak Manor, in Kent; Susquehanna Manor, in Cecil county; these were well known in their day.
From this early desire to establish a manorial system sprang the custom of calling large estates manors. My Lady’s Manor, which is partly in Harford county, retains its name to the present time, though the original tract has been subdivided many times and parceled out into fertile farms, now cultivated by numerous owners.

My Lady’s Manor was at one time a vast tract, consisting of ten thousand acres. It was formerly known as Lord Baltimore’s Gift, and was owned by Margaret, Lady Baroness of Baltimore, wife of Charles, Lord Baltimore, having been given to her by patent, dated the tenth day of September, 1713. Lady Margaret died in 1731, and in her will left Lord Baltimore’s Gift to her granddaughter, Charlotte Brerewood, wife of Thomas Brerewood, Jr., of Horton, in the County of Bucks, England. Thomas Brerewood, the younger, was apparently heavily involved in his financial affairs, and in August of 1731 Lady Charlotte joined him in a deed of trust for the benefit of his creditors, in which Lord Baltimore’s Gift was conveyed to Thomas Brerewood, Sr., the father of her husband. Thus began the disintegration of Lord Baltimore’s Gift. From this time on small portions were conveyed by Thomas Brerewood, Sr., to creditors of his son in payment of his debts; and future conveyances, while still mentioning the fact that the land being conveyed was a part of the tract of ten thousand acres called Lord Baltimore’s Gift, yet now add: “More commonly, My Lady’s Manner.” Lord Baltimore’s Gift was located upon the “Main Falls” of Gunpowder river, adjoining “Clyumalyra,” a tract which was owned by Charles Carroll. It extended a considerable distance northwardly, a portion being in what is now the Fourth Election District of Harford county, in the section of Taylor, Hess, Sarah Furnace, &c.

Colonel Thomas White surveyed My Lady's Manor August 26, 1713, 10,000 acres.

Named in the plat, The Right Honorable Margaret Baroness of Baltimore, her manor in the Fork of the Gunpowder.

Bel Air Academy.

By an Act of the Legislature, passed January 7, 1812, there was authorized the erection of the Harford County Academy. Subscriptions were taken up and a building constructed. This is the building on Hickory avenue, in Bel Air, which until very recently has been used for school purposes.

The trustees named in the act were Thomas Hope, David Streett, Joshua Rutledge, John Moores, William Smith of Samuel, Henry Dorsey, Dr. Hugh Whiteford, John Streett, John Forwood, William Wilson, Matthew Hawkins, James Weatherall, Elijah Davis, John Jolly and Paca Smith.

It was first opened as a school in 1815, and in 1816 the Legislature voted for it the sum of five hundred dollars annually, which is still paid the trustees, the school being now connected with the public school of Bel Air, the title being the Bel Air Academy and Graded School. Recently the old academy building has been turned into a dwelling-house, but stands as strong and firm now as if only one year instead of nearly a hundred had passed along. Rev. Reuben H. Davis was the first principal of the academy, and many of the leading men of Harford were his pupils. On December 26, 1839, Mr. Thomas A. Hays conveyed to the trustees the lot on which the academy stands. Liber H. D. No. 23, folio 136.

Gentlemen:

Baltimore, March 15th, 1775.

Persuent to the trust reposed in us, we take the Liberty of Informing you that a brig called the Sally William Moat, master from Bristol having about 4000 bushels of Salt on Board, arrived lately at Annapolis on which Doct. John Stevenson to whom she was consigned applied.

Committee to know whither he might be permitted to land the Salt, alledging it ought only to be considered as Ballaste and not intended to be prohibited by the Association of the Continental Congress. The Committee being of a different opinion resolved unanimously that it should not be landed and not suspecting that after such a declaration of our Sentiments Doct. Stevenson would act contrary thereto more especially after having publicly declared that the Salt should every handful be thrown overboard in open daylight when the vessel should arrive at Baltimore, we judge it unnecessary to take any other steps in the matter. We are sorry to be under the necessity of informing you that notwithstanding our resolve and Dr. Stevenson's Declaration he caused the vessel to stop at the mouth of our River where three or four Craft took in part of the said salt as appears by an inquiry into the matter before our Committee last Monday; and as we suppose those Crafts are dispatched into different Rivers in the Bay to dispose of the Salt we recommend it to you to use your best endeavors to prevent such sale and Caution the Committees of your Vicinity on this subject; the proceedings of our Committee on this affair you will shortly see in print, in the meanwhile we would inform remainder of the Salt left on Bord the Brig, which he says is about half the Cargo, in to the River, and that the Captain has engaged on oath that no part thereof shall be landed any place on the Continent between Georgia and Nova Scotia. Mr. Woolsey of this place has had a vessel arrivo lately from Liverpool with a Cargo of Salt. He applied to us for our opinion whether he might have Liberty to put it on Bord another Vessel to carry it to Nova Scotia as the Vessel it came in could not proceed there without defeating the voyage. This we readily agreed to; and Mr. Woolsey has engaged to produce a Sufficient Proof of the Salt being landed at Halifax as soon as that event takes place, & the Capt. is on oath that he will not land it on any part of Contint. between Georgia and Nova Scotia we are with much respect Gentlemen,

At a meeting of the Committee of Harford County at Harford Town on Thursday the 8th of June Present Benjamin Rumsey Esqr in the Chair, John Beale Howard, William Smithson, William Webb, William Jones, Jas. McComas, Richd. Dallam, Samuel Creswell, Thos. Johnson, John Archer, Benj. Bradford Norris, James Little, Benjn. Bailey, James Horner, James Harris, George Bradford, Robert Lemmon, John Love, John Rumsey, Francis Holland, Edward Hall, Bennet Mathews, Mordecai Amoss, Aquila Hall, Senr., Daniel Scott son of Aquila, & Benedict Edwd. Hall, ordered that Doctr. Lemmons' letter directed to Aquila Hall respecting the proceedings of a former Committee be read which which was accordingly done and is as follows:

Sir

The proceedings at the last Committee meeting appers very singular and offensive, I find, to the publick who contributed to the Relief of Boston, in their passing an order to you to supply the value of the Collection in Middlings at 15 Pct. when fine Burr flower will not sell for so much in Baltimore. No person who knows the matter and the market prices, but will be led to reflect, perhaps, upon you as designing to make an advantage of the Poor of Boston, by taking more than the market affords, and thereby lessening the Quantity which otherwise might be transmitted. Perhaps it may be said the Donors are abused in the extravagant Application of the Donations, and may prove a bar to their contributing on a future Occasion if it should be necessary. This act may render the Committee contemptible by divesting it of publick confidence; and if the publick withdraw their Confidence we of course fail, as that is the only foundation of our usefulness. Upon the Whole if you could not afford your middlings at Market price I am of opinion the persons desiring you to furnish them above it were not your friends seeming as if they desired to hold one of our first Patriots and friends to Boston up to publick Infamy and Contempt. And if it should reach the Provincial Convention how despicable will it appear. In that case who will suffer ridicule, but those who are known to be of weight in the County, especially if such appear interested in the measure. If we act for publick good, if we mean to relieve our suffering Brethren; let it be done to as much advantage as the poor pittance will allow, I am clear in it as you will reflect the greatest honor upon yourself by furnishing the flower at the present current price, otherwise by relinquishing it, give me leave to tell you Sir, we are in this instance trustees for the poor we desire to Relieve. We accepted the trust—our honor is at stake—our Constituents look for faithfulness in us.—Our Constitutional rights demand it. We should therefore be scrupulously erect in the discharge of our duty. I remain
Your Hble Servt
Robert Lemmon.
