Mr. Grove was reared in the faith of the M. E. Church. Politically he has always been a stanch Republican, and since his majority has been actively connected with his party. He served as the first chief burgess of Felton borough, and has continuously held that office. He was a member of the school board for seven years, and has been its secretary. At the Republican convention held in York in 1904, Mr. Grove was nominated registrar of wills and at the fall election was chosen to the office by a majority of 3,126 votes. Fraternally he has associated himself with the Knights of Pythias, of Felton, in which he is past chancellor commander; while in the Masonic order he belongs to Shrewsbury Lodge F. & A. M., the Royal Arch Chapter of York, and Gethsemane Commandery, No. 76, of York. Mr. Grove is known to be a man of integrity and strict reliability and no one in Felton stands higher in public esteem.

LOUIS GOE PFAFF, a prominent cigar manufacturer of Hanover, and one of the business men whose success has been attained by his own efforts, is a native of Germany. He was born in the town of Grossenlinden, near the city of Gissen, July 11, 1850, one of the six children, four boys and two girls, of John and Katharine (Focht) Pfaf. The father was a miller by trade.

Louis G. Pfaff received an excellent education in the Fatherland, entering the public schools at the age of six years, and remaining until fifteen. He then assisted his father in the latter’s mill for a time, and in 1866 he left home for an extended trip through Europe, but in 1869 emigrated to the United States. Landing in Baltimore, Md., he went to Washington, D. C., where he remained several months. He then came to Hanover, Pa., where he learned the trade of cigar maker with Samuel Trone. At the completion of his apprenticeship he worked as a journeyman until 1872, and in the latter year engaged in business for himself. Renting a small farm one and one-half miles south of Hanover, he engaged in farming and cigar manufacturing for six years. He then removed to Hanover and began a cigar manufacturing business which has grown steadily, reaching large and profitable proportions. Mr. Pfaff erected a building especially for the business. It contains two rooms, 36x28, and 24x28, and is two stories in height. Here he employs quite a force of men and boys, and has an extensive and well-established trade. His business interests have grown beyond this one industry. He is a stockholder in the Hanover Shoe Factory, besides having various other business interests. In connection with this cigar manufactory business he is a large dealer in leaf tobacco.

In 1872 Mr. Pfaff married Miss Augusta Miller, a native of York county, daughter of Yost and Elizabeth Miller. She died Sept. 23, 1897, the mother of seven children, namely: Harry L.; Rena Louise, deceased; Katie, deceased; Louis W.; Gny, deceased; Arno Max; and Mary Elizabeth. The family are members of Trinity Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Pfaff is a Republican, and for six years he was a member of the city council. In 1900 he was elected chief burgess of Hanover. He is also prominent in the local fraternal orders, being affiliated with Patmos Lodge, No. 348, F. & A. M.; Gettysburg Chapter, R. A. M.; York Commandery, K. T.; the A. A. O. N. M. S.; Reading; the Red Men of America; the Mystic Chain; the Royal Arcanum; and the Elks.

A. M. ASHENFELTER, who resides on his ninety-seven-acre farm in Monaghan township, was born May 19, 1859, on Shelley's Island, across from Goldsboro, son of David and Rebecca (Murphy) Ashenfelter.

This branch of the Ashenfelter family in America descend from one of three brothers who came from Germany and settled in Pennsylvania in the early part of the nineteenth century. They were millers by trade, and Jacob Ashenfelter, the grandfather of A. M., followed that calling all of his life in York county. He owned and operated a mill at Goldsboro, and at one time was considered a very wealthy man. He and his good wife were the parents of the following named children: David, Jacob, Samuel, George Elijah, Daniel and Susan. The family were consistent members of the Church of God. Mr. Ashenfelter was a Republican. His death occurred in 1900, while his wife passed away in 1884.

David Ashenfelter lived in York and Dauphin counties all of his life. By trade he was a miller, but he spent a great deal of his time in tobacco growing and farming, renting all of his life. He was a man much thought of in his community, and his death in 1900 was a sad surprise to all who knew him, being entirely unexpected, as he was a very large and powerful man, weighing 275 pounds, and up to twenty minutes before his death was well and in apparently good health. He was eighty-four years old. Mr. Ashenfelter was a member of the Church of God. His wife died in 1884, at the age of sixty-four years. They were the parents of ten children, two of whom died in infancy, the survivors being: Lydia, Elizabeth, Jacob, Lurtensia, John, Jane, A. M. and Benjamin.

A. M. Ashenfelter remained at home until the age of twenty-five years, when he began studying for the ministry, but was called home to take care of his aged parents, and started farming, continuing same until after his mother's death. Then he went to Princeton, Ill., and there engaged in the manufacture of gas, which occupation he continued for three years. He then returned to Pennsylvania and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in whose service he remained fifteen years, being engaged in construction work and work in the shops. In 1901 Mr. Ashenfelter resigned his position with the railroad company and purchased the old Fortney farm of ninety-seven acres, and since then has devoted his time to farming and fruit growing.

In 1889 Mr. Ashenfelter married Miss Laura Forrey, daughter of Henry and Lydia Forrey, and three children have been born to them: Charles, who died at the age of four years, six months; Lydia, who died at the age of five years; and Raymond, who lives at home. The family are devout members of the Church of God. Mr. Ashenfelter is a Republican, but not active, and has never desired office. He is one of the enterprising and progressive farmers of his section of the county and in the successful operation of his farm uses modern methods and machinery, which he has found best calculated to bring satisfactory results. He has given time and means to the improvement of his land and owns one of the most attractive homes in the township.

LEANDER MILTON MINNICH, of Spring Garden township, was born in that immediate locality, July 30, 1863, son of Reuben F. and Elizabeth (Spangler) Minnich. The former died in the fall of 1894.

Leander M. Minnich attended the Spring Garden schools during his boyhood, and then completed his education by studying for two terms at the York Academy. He has devoted his time since reaching manhood to agricultural pursuits, and his farm is one of the best tilled and most productive in the township. Mr. Minnich was married in 1895 to Miss Clara Illyes, daughter of John and Mary (Hovis) Illyes, of York township, and one child, Clarence, has been born to them.

Mr. Minnich belongs to a family long and widely known throughout York county and other sections of the State, and by marriage they are connected with other equally prominent families. His mother, Elizabeth (Spangler) Minnich, was one of six children, namely: Elizabeth; Charles, deceased; Andrew, deceased; one who died in boyhood; Lydia, Mrs. George Hoke; and Leah, Mrs. Emanuel Rudisill. His father, Reuben F. Minnich, was also one of six children, all of whom married and had large families except Leah, Mrs. Benjamin Deitz. (1) Reuben Frederick Minnich married Miss Spangler, and their children were: Leander Milton; Edwin S.; Simon, deceased; Ezra; Emma, Mrs. Aaron Laucks; Agnes, widow of the late Abraham Kaufman; Priscilla, deceased; Flora, Mrs. Milton Gladfelter, and Rosa. (2) Simon, deceased, was the father of: Simon; Michael; William; Amanda; Susan; and Jane, Mrs. Swartz. (3) George, deceased, had nine children, viz.: George; Susan, Mrs. Doll; Rebecca, Mrs. Myers; Lizzie, Mrs. Shuttle; Maggie, Mrs. Rupp; Anna, Mrs. Robert; Sarah, Mrs. Hersey; Jane, Mrs. Swartz, and Salinda. (4) Leah married the late Benjamin Deitz. (5) Susan married William Deitz, and became the mother of: Edward; Purd; Albert; Harry; Georgianna, Mrs. Young; Pervilla, Mrs. Spangler; William; Emanuel; Samuel; Joseph and Milton. (6) Harriet married the late Mr. Landis and had seven children, namely: Alexander; Martin; Clinton; Wesley; Amanda, Mrs. Evans; Arabella, Mrs. Stave; and Anna, Mrs. Stauffer.

The paternal grandmother of Leander M. Minnich was a Miss Geiselman, and his connections through that branch are numerous. This grandmother had seven brothers and sisters, of whom (1) Lydia married a Hoke, and had six children: Michael, Henry, Lena, Mrs. Berkheimer, Mrs. Wolf, and Caroline, Mrs. Welty. (2) Mrs. Swartz was the mother of Deterick; Isaac; Jesse; and Harriet, who married Mr. Rife and had four children—Jesse, Morgan, Anna (Rife) Terry, and Katie. (3) Mrs. Snyder's two daughters married Mr. Bowman and Mr. Toman, respectively. (4) Frederick Geiselman's children were: Henry G., father of Frederick, Spangler, Charles, William and Lucy; Mrs. Ehrhart, who had a number of children; Mrs. Brenneman, who had a son Harry and other children; and Adeline, Mrs. Walter, who also had a large family. (5) Michael Geiselman had six children, all but one of whom married and had families, as follows: Daniel, father of Alexander, Ella and Clara; Samuel; Kate Eichelberger; Sarah Meyers; Lucy Rebert; and Ann Mary, unmarried. (6) George Geiselman had one son and five daughters: (a) Jesse was the father of three sons—Alexander, William and George. (b) Julia married Mr. Rohrbaugh and became the mother of: George; Frank; Elmer; Harry; Sarah, Mrs. Hoffman; Jeste, Mrs. Stacks; and Nettie, Mrs. Snyder. (c) Kate married Mr. Gladfelter, and their children were: Robert; Rosa, Mrs. Gross; Sarah, Mrs. Butt; Jeste, Mrs. Warner; Mrs. Dr. Holtzapple; Mrs. Gladfelter; Mary, Mrs. Decker; William; Edward; and Emma, Mrs. Martin. (d) Dena also married one of the Gladfelters and her children were: George; Wesley; Martin; Edward; Nathaniel; Anna Mary, Mrs. Hostler; Sarah, Mrs. Beck; and Emma, Mrs. Queen. (e) Mrs. Turtle's family consisted of Thomas, George, Mary, Nettie, and Margaret, Mrs. Smith. (f) Leah married Mr. Pissel and had eight children, viz.: William; George; Purd; Frank; Elmira, Mrs. Gladfelter; Mary, Mrs. Noss;
Christiana, Mrs. Diehl; and Sarah. (7) Jacob Geiselman had two sons and two daughters. (a) Jacob was the father of Ellen, Mrs. Smith; Anna; Lizzie, Mrs. Loucks. (b) George had five children: Frank; Albert; Edna, Mrs. Butcher; Sarah, Mrs. Smith; and Lucy, Mrs. Krout. (c) Rebecca, Mrs. Shaffer, and (d) Mrs. Sauble had children, but their names are not known.

FRED S. WINEKA, who lives on a farm about midway between the city of York and the village of Red Lion, near Ore Valley station, is a representative of the third generation of the Wineka family in York county. [For full family history, see sketch of Henry A. Wineka.]

Mr. Wineka was born on the old homestead farm, in York township, May 21, 1861, son of William and Mary (Flinchbaugh) Wineka, and he early became interested in the sturdy work of the farm, while he duly availed himself of the advantages afforded in the public schools of the township, where he continued his studies until he was about fifteen years of age. He remained at home until the time of his marriage, in 1888, when he took up his residence on the homestead farm of his wife's father, in Windsor township where he remained about five years, then locating on his present farm, which he had inherited from his father's estate. The place comprises sixty-eight acres of good land, and the improvements are first class, including an attractive residence. Mr. Wineka gives his attention to general farming, and also raises large quantities of vegetables and other farm produce, for which he finds a profitable market in York. While still residing with his parents he was engaged in the manufacturing of cigars for about twelve years, having a well equipped factory on the home place and employing from ten to fifteen skilled workmen, while his products were sold principally in the cities of Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Harrisburg and Baltimore. He is a believer in Democratic principles, and both he and his wife are members of the Mennonite church, in whose faith he was reared, his parents having been faithful members of the same denomination.

In February, 1888, Mr. Wineka wedded Miss Lydia Stauffer, who was born, reared and educated in Windsor township, being a daughter of Frederick and Mary (Forry) Stauffer. Her father was born in Lancaster county, and was a child at the time of his parents' removal to York county, where he was reared to manhood and where he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed about fifteen years. He became the owner of a farm in Windsor township, and there continued to make his home until his death, in 1884; his remains are interred in the Witmer cemetery, at Stony Brook. For the last forty years of his life he was a zealous member of the Mennonite Church, his wife having also been a member of the same. She was born in Manchester township and she was summoned into the "land of the leaf" in January, 1897, and was laid to rest by the side of the husband of her youth, in the Witmer cemetery. Of the children of this worthy couple, Susan and Jacob are deceased; Moses resides at Stony Brook, being a retired farmer; David is a cracker baker in York; Samuel died in Windsor township; Joseph is a farmer of Lancaster county; Maria is the wife of John Coneway, of York; Frederick is engaged in the feed business in the city of York; and Lydia is the wife of our subject. Mr. and Mrs. Wineka have had children as follows: Mary E. died at the age of six years, and is interred in the cemetery at Spry; Lillie May, Mabel Estella, William F. and Charles Stauffer are at the parental home; Ruth Ellen died at the age of two years; and Daisy Belle and Elsie Irene, twins, and Roy David, Melvin Edgar and Nettie Naomi are the younger members of the delightful family circle.

HERBERT FRANKLIN GROSS, M. D., was born Nov. 11, 1875, in Newberry township, York county, a son of Adam H. and Susan (Abel) Gross.

Philip Gross, his paternal grandfather, was born in Dover township, York county, and followed the trade of shoemaking. He married Rebecca Holtzapple, who was born July 13, 1821, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Holtzapple, and both grandparents died in Dover township, the grandfather aged eighty-four years and the grandmother aged seventy-four. Both are buried at Strayer's church. They were most worthy people, respected by the whole countryside. The children of Philip Gross and his wife were: Sarah, wife of David Miller, of York; Ambrose, deceased, who married Leah Quickel; Michael, deceased, who married Mary Ritchcreek; William, married to Calista Snellbaker, living in Dover township; Adam H., father of Dr. Gross; Amanda, wife of Augustus Hoover, of Conewago township; Jane, deceased, who married Augustus Hibner; Calista, who married William Sipe, of Strinestown; and one who died in infancy.

Adam H. Gross, father of Dr. Gross, was born Oct. 2, 1851, in Dover township, and there learned the trade of shoemaking. He became skilled in fine work and was employed thus in Dover for five years, then removing to Goldsboro, where he remained for seven years. In 1868 he located at Manchester, where he was first employed by Jacob Rudy, but later entered into business for himself. As he is a skilled mechanic he has always commanded a large trade. In 1868 he married Susan Abel, daughter of David and Catherine Abel, of Manchester township, Mr. Abel at one time being one of the directors of the poor for York county. Adam H. Gross and his wife had children as follows: Flora, who died young; Herbert Franklin; Horace and Minnie, both of whom died young; William, who married Fannie Melhorn and lives in Manchester; Annie, married to Arthur Gohn and living in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland Co., Pa., her husband being a York county boy who served in the Philippines during the Spanish-American war; Charles, living at home; and Grover C., who died young.

Dr. Gross was six years old when the family came to Manchester borough, and he attended the borough schools until the age of fifteen, then taking an academic course at York. When he was sixteen years old he began to teach school, continuing thus in 1891-93, two years at the Brillinger school in East Manchester township and one year at the Sipes school. During these years in the schoolroom he commenced his medical studies and after this preliminary work entered the office of Dr. J. C. May, at Manchester, with whom he read for one year. In 1895 he entered Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, where he took a four-year course, graduating in May, 1899, the last class that was graduated in the old building and the first four-years' class from Jefferson College. Dr. Gross then came to York to engage in the practice of his profession and established himself in North York, opening his office on Aug. 7, 1899. He is located at No. 1034 North George street. He is a member of the York County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. For three years he served as president of the board of health and in many ways has shown his professional ability. He enjoys his full share of practice at North York.

On Oct. 4, 1899, Dr. Gross was married to Susan Hocker, a daughter of Adam and Martha (Shope) Hocker, of Harrisburg, where the latter still resides. Adam Hocker was born in Lebanon county, but for many years was a farmer of Dauphin county. He died at Harrisburg at the age of fifty-nine years, and was buried at Oberlin cemetery. His children were: Katie, Ella, Mary, Elizabeth, Susan and Martha. Dr. and Mrs. Gross have one daughter, Mae Bee, born July 20, 1902.

Dr. Gross has accepted no public offices save those of health officer and school director. He is a Democrat and is a member of the United Evangelical Church at York. Professionally he stands well with the younger generation of medical men, who by their study and application are ever making for progress. In every way he is well equipped for his battle with disease and death, and his selection as health officer by the borough of North York demonstrated the value placed on his ideas regarding public sanitation. Thoroughly versed in his profession, and possessing strong and sterling characteristics, he has won his way into the confidence of his fellow-citizens, meeting with the professional success to which his abilities entitle him.

HENRY M. SCHMUCK. One of the most successful business careers to which it has been the good fortune for residents of York county to attain is presented in the life of Henry M. Schmuck, who is a native of Hanover, and who has already passed the 81st milestone of life, possessing in the mellowness of his ripened years that clearness of eye and glow of health which bespeak the man of superior force of character. He was born at Hanover Sept. 26, 1824, son of Joseph and Christiana (Felty) Schmuck, and is of German ancestry. His paternal grandfather was Michael Schmuck, of York, Pa., and his maternal grandfather, Henry Felty, of Hanover,
JACOB S. FETROW, who owns much land in Newberry township, is living retired in Lewisberry, where he has bought a fine home. He was born in November, 1867, in Fairview township, son of Franklin S. and Elizabeth (Sheely) Fetrow. Mr. Fetrow received a common-school education, attending school until his twenty-first year. He then assisted his father on the home farm for a short time, later being employed in the Steelton steel plant for about six months, after which he removed to Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county. He remained there one year and then located in Lewisberry, after which he was a farmer in Newberry township for three years. Returning to Lewisberry borough, he remained there but a short time, when he went to Newmarket for two years, part of which period was spent in working in the steel plant. He again turned his attention to farming for two years, after which he returned to Lewisberry, where he has since lived in retirement. Mr. Fetrow bought a residence there, which he rebuilt, and he has a farm of 118 acres, considered one of the best in Newberry township, upon which a tenant is farming. He is also the owner of a fine home in Newmarket.

In 1894 Mr. Fetrow married Ida Snyder, daughter of Peter and Mary Jane (Sultzberger) Snyder, of Lewisberry. In his political belief Mr. Fetrow is a Republican. Religiously he is connected with the Methodist Church, while socially he is affiliated with the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 1012, of Lewisberry.

Franklin S. Fetrow, the father of Jacob S., was born in Newberry township, and received his education in the common schools of that township. While a young man he learned the trade of pump making, which, in connection with farming, he followed for many years. He owned two farms in Fairview township and also two in Newberry township, besides other property in Steelton and New Cumberland. He died Nov. 17, 1892, aged fifty-seven years, eight months and twenty-two days. Six children were born of his marriage with Elizabeth Sheely: Samuel H., John R., Jacob S., William G., Clara B. and Jennie S.

Peter F. Snyder, father of Mrs. Fetrow, was born in 1843 in Manchester township, son of Henry Snyder. In 1864 he enlisted in Company D, 202nd P. V. I., and served for one year. He married Mary Jane Sultzberger, a daughter of Israel and Julia Ann (Brenneman) Sultzauberger, and the following children were born to them: Edward married Minnie Sutton, and lives in Fairview township; John married Clara Petrow, and farms in Fairview township; Ida is the wife of Jacob S. Petrow; Carrie, who married Charles Emey, lives at Lewisberry. In 1895 Mr. Snyder bought a home in Lewisberry, where he now lives a retired life, having formerly farmed in Fairview township.

HUGH ROSS, the only son of William Glenn Ross and Julia Ann (McConkey) Ross, was born on the old Ross homestead, in Lower Chanceford township, Dec. 13, 1873. His early life was spent on his father's farm, and in attendance at the public schools of his native place. At the age of thirteen, feeling the need of better educational facilities, he went to his uncle's home in Mexico, Mo., where he spent two years at school, and in the fall of 1888 he entered the Princeton Preparatory School at Lawrenceville, N. J., where he pursued his studies during the next six years. After this he completed a course of study at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Baltimore, Md. His father having left large landed interests, he then took up the management of his farms, which vocation he has since followed with marked success. Shortly after taking charge of the home farm, realizing that a technical education is as necessary in farming as in any other business or vocation, he took a course of study in dairying and agriculture at the Pennsylvania State College. But while devoting himself chiefly to his farming interests, he has found time to engage in public affairs and in various other business enterprises. An ardent Republican, he has never occupied any public office, but at all times exhibited a keen interest in township and county politics, and has earnestly striven for honest, economical government. In 1897 Mr. Ross built a private telephone line from his home to Woodbine and Bridgeton. Realizing the convenience of this utility to himself, and foreseeing the day when the rural communities would demand telephone service, he began the erection of a telephone system covering the territory from Red Lion to Delta and between the Maryland & Pennsylvania railroad and the Susquehanna river, subsequently incorporating his system under the title of the Chanceford Telephone Company, being at present its president and general manager. He is also extensively engaged in the canning business, being secretary of the High Rock Canning Company, large packers of fruits and vegetables at High Rock, Pa. He is also largely interested in the Delta Packing Company, located at Delta, Pa.; is also one of the incorporators and directors of the York Furnace Bridge Company, the Airville & Delta Electric Railway and other contemplated trolley roads, by which he hopes to give the lower end of York county much needed transportation facilities with York and other commercial centers.

On June 11, 1901, Mr. Ross married Miss Alice Reynolds Hoblitzzell, who was born Oct. 9, 1874, daughter of James J. Hoblitzzell, a prominent business man of Myersdale, Pa., who married Julia Kimmell Hortzell, now deceased.

CHARLES J. DELONE, one of the prominent attorneys of the York county Bar, is a native of Hanover, that county, where he was born Feb. 9, 1863, son of Joseph and Maria (Hilt) Delone. The Delones are of French origin, and migrated from Alsace to America about 1748. They settled first in Lancaster county, Pa., but subsequently Nicholas Delone removed to Paradise township, York county, where he entered a large tract of land. Here was born Peter Delone, the paternal grandfather of Charles J. Peter Delone received his education in the subscription schools of the neighborhood, and throughout life followed the occupation of a farmer and stone mason. In politics he was a Whig, and in religion a member of the Catholic Church. He married a Miss Leib, and to them were born seven children, namely: Henry, Joseph, Peter, Lewis, Elizabeth (who married Albert Storm), Matilda (who married Michael Strubinger), and Mary (who died single). Peter Delone died in 1856, his wife preceding him to the grave in 1855.

Joseph Delone, the father of Charles J., was born in Paradise township, York county, and educated in the common schools. In his youth he acquired the trade of milling, but early became identified with the live stock business, for which he professed a preference, and in which he won great success, devoting to it many years of his life. He was a man of liberal mind and superior intelligence, and from early life took an active interest in public affairs. Attached to the principles of the Democratic party he was in his early manhood elected a member of the State Legislature. He founded, and for many years published at Hanover, a weekly newspaper, known as the Hanover Citizen. The newspaper attained almost immediate success and became an influential factor in the politics and education of York county. Editorially it advocated the principles of the Democratic party. Mr. Delone remained in charge for many years, and was in active politics up to the time of his death in 1883. He held local office in the borough, and was one of the leading factors in the growth and upbuilding of Hanover. He was a devout member of the Catholic Church, worshipping at the Hanover congregation. Joseph Delone married Maria, daughter of Jacob Hilt, and to them were born twelve children, of whom eight are now living, namely: Alice, Martha, Leona, Harry O., Mary, Emma, Charles J. and Jacob P. Four died very young.

Charles J. Delone in his boyhood attended the parochial schools of his native village, and prepared for college under the tutelage of Prof. L. R. Bangher. In 1883 he entered the Freshman class at Harvard University and graduated therefrom in the Class of 1887. Entering the Law Department of the same university he completed the three years course, and graduated in 1890. Mr. Delone practiced his profession for a year in New York City, then opened an office in Hanover, his native city, where he has since been actively and successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. He formerly had an office at York, and his present thriving business extends well throughout the county. In politics Mr. Delone is a Democrat. He is devoted to the principles of the party to such extent as his increasing practice will permit, and he takes an active part in its affairs in York county. Like his father he is a member of the Catholic Church.

On April 26, 1904, Mr. Delone married Helen S. Winebrenner, daughter of D. E. Winebrenner.

THOMAS M. CURRAN, M. D., one of the oldest and most esteemed medical practitioners of Hopewell township, whose services have been given to the citizens of Cross Roads for many years, was born Jan. 19, 1838, in Windsor township, York county, a son of James and Sarah (Hetzer) Curran.

James Curran, the paternal grandfather of Dr. Curran, was a native of the North of Ireland, where prior to emigrating to the United States he was in business as a linen manufacturer. His first location in America was Charleston, S. C., but later he moved to Lancaster county, Pa., and embarked in the iron business at Strasburg, subsequently becoming the manager of various iron furnaces. His two children were James and Margaret, the latter of whom became the wife of Daniel McCurdy.

James Curran, father of Dr. Curran, was engaged in the manufacture of iron during his entire life, and was considered an expert in the management of the business. His period was before the discovery of new and better methods, and he used the old charcoal furnaces of his time. James Curran was a most estimable man, being for a number of years an accepted local preacher in the M. E. Church and one of the most active workers in that religious body. The early flourishing condition of the church in that locality, its large Sunday-school and its good effect on the community in general must be attributed, in great measure, to the Christian character and example of James Curran. He was twice married, the children by his first wife being: James; Margaret, who married Henry Poff, and Annie, who married Michael Loucks. Mr. Curran married for his second wife Sarah Hetzer, and they had children as follows: Dr. Thomas M.; Sarah E., who married Joshua Warfield; Hugh A.; and Matilda and Virginia, both deceased. The father died in 1877 and the mother in 1897. She also was a consistent member of the M. E. Church.

Thomas M. Curran was educated in the public schools of his native township and the Oxford (Pa.) school, where he was afforded both literary and medical instruction. After four years there he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1867. He first entered the university in 1860, but the outbreak of the Civil war, after one term there, changed the course of his life for some years. He entered the Union army as assistant surgeon of the 68th P. V. I., but the duties imposed on the young medico were too and his health broke under the strain. His resignation of the post was accepted, and after convalescence he settled at Cross Roads, York county, where he practiced until early in 1865, when he again entered the army. Dr. Curran was then assigned to Herward Hospital, near Washington, D. C., where he continued to care for the sick and wounded until the close of the war. After his second return he re-entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, where he took a post graduate course. He located permanently at Cross Roads, where he had made many friends and where he has since enjoyed all the practice to which he has been able to attend. Dr. Curran is known throughout the county, his advice is in constant demand, and he is invited to consult with the leading physicians over a wide extent of country. The Doctor is a valued member of Felton Post, G. A. R. He has long been united with the M. E. Church.

In 1866 Dr. Curran was married to Mary A. Blake, daughter of Nathan Blake, of Lancaster county, Pa., and children as follows were born to them: James M.; Carrie, who married Prof. D. K. Stamey; O. G.; Thomas H.; and several children who died in infancy. It has been gratifying to Dr. Curran to have two of his sons adopt the medical profession, and their success he has welcomed as his own. The three physicians are not partners, each controlling a large practice of his own.

James M. Curran is a graduate of Maryland Medical College and has been in active work for the past twenty years. His medical reading was conducted under his father's supervision and he spent 1880-81 in Bellevue Medical College and Hospital, New York, and the year 1882 at the University of Pennsylvania. He practiced with his father until 1900 and then re-entered the Maryland Medical College, from which he was graduated. Dr. James M. Curran is prominent in fraternal societies, being a 32d degree Mason and a member of the K. of P., I. O. O. F., Jr. O. U. A. M. and Elks. In Masonry he belongs to Gethsemane Commandery, No. 75, of York, Harrisburg Consistory, and Zembo Shrine, A. A. O. N. M. S.

Dr. O. G. Curran is also a prominent member of this medical family. He has been in active practice for ten years and is also a graduate of the Baltimore Medical College. The name of Curran is, in fact, synonymous in York county with eminent medical skill and a very high standard of citizenship.

Edward C. Peeling. The annals of York county will refer to many fearless men who have administered the office of sheriff of the county, but to none who have done so with greater fearlessness and efficiency than ex-Sheriff Edward C. Peeling, whose term of office expired in January, 1905.

Mr. Peeling was born at Dallastown, York Co., Pa., March 4, 1859. His education was received in the public schools of the county, which he attended until he had acquired a good common-school education. After leaving school he secured a position as clerk in a hotel, and later went into the hotel business on his own account, continuing in that line for twenty years. Thus it was that he developed that urban character which has made him so popular in public office. Two of the hotels in which Mr. Peeling acted in the capacity of proprietor were the "Reever House" and "Hotel Lafayette," both of York, he having been the owner of the latter for seven years and proprietor for four years. In November, 1901, he was elected sheriff of the county on the Democratic ticket, and two months later, at the beginning of the new year, he left the hotel business and assumed the duties of his office.

On March 11, 1879, Mr. Peeling was married to Miss Aggie Miller, daughter of Joseph Miller, of York. To this union have been born four children: Gertrude, a graduate of the York high school; Maud May, who died at the age of fourteen months; Henry Patterson; and Nettie F.

Though a Democrat in politics and elected to office by virtue of the suffrages of that party, Mr. Peeling is popular among all classes, as he administers his office for the good of the whole people. He was absolutely fearless in the discharge of his duties, and for that reason holds the respect of all. He is a liberal supporter of the Trinity Reformed Church, of which his family are worthy members.

Mr. Peeling is of Irish descent, his ancestors coming to America from Ireland generations ago. Robert Peeling, his great-grandfather, came to America and settled in Virginia, and his son, James Peeling, grandfather of Edward C., was the first member of the family to move to Pennsylvania. He first moved to Delaware and then to York county, where the family has since resided.

Josiah Peeling and his wife, parents of ex-Sheriff Peeling, are both living (1906). The mother was Miss Fanny Craley, daughter of Christian Craley, a farmer in Chancieford township, York county. Nine of their twelve children are now living: Edward C.; Harry A., a horse dealer of York; James B., proprietor of the "Hotel Lafayette"; Robert D., a clerk in York; Emma, wife of Charles Kinderfather, a baker of York; Dora, wife of Grant Owens, of York; Flora, wife of Thomas Gore, a sign painter, of Covington, Ky.; Fanny, also living in Covington, Ky.; and Harvey D., a hotel clerk.

HENRY McELROY, one of the organizers of the Wrightsville Hardware Manufacturing Company, of which he is manager, comes of a family of Scotch-Irish ancestry whose American progenitor was Edward McElroy, grandfather of Henry. He came to this country before the Revolutionary war, during which conflict he operated a ferry across the river at Harrisburg. He married in York county, and there resided the remainder of his life.

Edward McElroy, son of Edward, was a carpenter and cabinet maker, and settled in early manhood at Marietta, Lancaster county, where he died at the age of ninety-three. He was thrice married, having, by his first union, four children: Henry; Susan, Mrs. John Dickover, of Wrightsville; Catherine, Mrs. Eman el Longnecker, of Wichita, Kan., and Ermeline, Mrs. George Krump, of Marietta. Edward McElroy married for his second wife Anna Sands, of Lancaster county, and her children were as follows: Edward, of Marietta, Pa.; John, of Marietta; Samuel, of Tennessee; and two others, deceased. To his third marriage the following children were born: Elmer, of Lebanon, Pa.; Aaron, of Marietta; Annie, unmarried; and one that died in infancy.

Henry McElroy was born in Marietta, Lancaster county, on Christmas Day, 1837. His boyhood was spent at Marietta and Harrisburg, but he obtained little schooling, not more than three winters' terms of three months each. His first money was earned doing odd jobs, and at fifteen he entered the employ of E. Haldeman & Co. in their blast furnace at Chickies, Lancaster county. There he remained seven years, rising through the various grades of the business to the rank of master machinist. In 1859 he went as master machinist to the Donegal Furnaces in Lancaster county, where he remained until 1868, when he came to Wrightsville. The Rohrer Furnaces were just beginning operations and Mr. McElroy obtained a position there as mechanical engineer and assistant superintendent. He later became superintendent of the blast furnaces, and he retained that position until 1893, when he resigned to become manager of the Wrightsville Hardware Manufacturing Company, of which he was one of the promoters. In the establishment of this plant Mr. McElroy was associated with the late Colonel Magee, Henry Bernstock, Harry Kauffeit and the late George D. Ebett.

The Wrightsville Hardware Manufacturing Company was established in 1880, with Colonel Magee as president, and George K. Shenberger as secretary and treasurer. It was capitalized at $5,000, and conducted at first on the co-operative plan. The first foundry building was 50 x 60 feet in dimensions, and employment was given twelve moulders. The original building has given place to modern brick structures, and today about two hundred and twenty-five men are employed. During the first year the output was valued at $17,000; now it reaches $260,000. Although Mr. McElroy did not become manager until 1893, he had virtually been in control of the business since 1888, and at the same time was manager of the Wrightsville Iron Works.

Mr. McElroy was married in 1858, in Lancaster county, to Mary Lockhard, of that county, daughter of Charles and Mary (Esenber) Lockhard. The following children were born to this marriage: Annie E., who is deceased; Mary A., deceased; Harry, master machinist, secretary of the Wrightsville Hardware Manufacturing Company, married to Mahala Crumling; Catherine, married to Howard L. Keller, foreman of one of the foundries of the Hardware Manufacturing Company; Ella, married to Reuben Kline, of Wrightsville; Rutherford A., living at home, a brass pattern-maker, married to Minnie Hinkle; and Edith, married to Charles Bernstock, of Wrightsville.

Mr. McElroy is a Republican in politics. He is a charter member of Riverside Lodge, No. 503, F. & A. M., Wrightsville. He and his family are members of the Wrightsville Methodist Church.

ELIAS DIETZ is a prosperous farmer of Hellam township and a descendant of one of the old settled families of that part of the country.

George Dietz, great-grandfather of Elias, came to this country from Germany, and became the owner of over 300 acres of land in Hellam township, now the property of George Roff. This land was virgin forest when Mr. Dietz settled on it, and he cleared off the timber and built a log house for the family home. He and his wife are buried in the old graveyard on part of the old farm. It was still forest when they were laid there.

Grandfather George Dietz was born Nov. 6, 1737, on his father’s farm. He was one of the younger children, and was left an orphan, without brother or sister, at the age of nine. He became the owner of another tract of 300 acres near that which his father had owned; this property is now divided into two farms, and is owned by Michael Dietz. Georg Dietz married Magdalena Smith, who was born in 1743. They lived and died on their farm; Mrs. Dietz passed away Jan. 4, 1805, her husband March 10, 1823. They were members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Dietz was a Democrat in politics. All members of the Dietz family in Pennsylvania trace their descent to George and Magdalena (Smith) Dietz. Some of the name are settled in Cumberland county. The children born to this union were as follows: (1) George, born June 14, 1762, married Elizabeth Yeagle, born July 8, 1803. He died Aug. 19, 1822, and she died Nov. 23, 1843. They were the grandparents of William Dietz, of Hellam township, whose sketch appears elsewhere. (2) Henry, born in 1764, married Miss Grestwright, daughter of a Reformed Church minister. They moved to Springfield, Ohio, and later settled between Columbus and Lancaster, Ohio. (3) Conrad, died March 22, 1829, aged sixty-five years, eight months and two days. His wife, Anna M., died Sept. 24, 1851, at the age of eighty-seven years and four months. (4) John, born Nov. 5, 1766, died March 21, 1843, unmarried. (5) Jacob, born Sept. 28, 1768, died March 21, 1840. He married Magdalena Leipart, who was born Jan. 12, 1781, and died Nov. 8, 1846. (6) Peter is mentioned below. (7) Anna Maria, born May 2, 1772, died March 25, 1842, unmarried. (8) Michael, born Jan. 30, 1774, died March 31, 1843, unmarried. (9) Daniel, born June 3, 1776, died May 25, 1866, unmarried. (10) Elizabeth, born in 1779, married Michael Rudy, and died in Spring Garden township April 20, 1851. (11) Magdalena, born Oct. 29, 1780, married George Gohn, who was born April 15, 1780. He died Feb. 7, 1861.

Peter Dietz, father of Elias, was born on his father’s farm in Hellam township, Aug. 30, 1770. He grew up on the farm and most of his education was obtained in the subscription school of the neighborhood, where the language used was “Pennsylvania Dutch.” He remained at home, carrying on the farm, for seventeen years after his marriage, and in 1825 bought the farm on which his son Elias now lives. This originally consisted of 148 acres, of which sixty acres have been sold to Alfred Bixler. The substantial stone dwelling house was built in 1811, the contractor being David Landis of York, and the builder David Lepport. In addition to farming, Peter Dietz for seventeen years carried on a distillery on his land. The old still house is standing today, used for a wash house, and for storage purposes. Mr. Dietz was a life long Democrat, and held many township offices. He was a good farmer, and a highly esteemed citizen, a man of great influence in his community. He was a devout member of the Reformed Church. Peter Dietz married, May 8, 1808, Susanna Teison, who was born Sept. 1, 1787. Her father was Squire Teison, of Windsor township, where he lived and died. He was for many years a State Senator, a school teacher and justice of the peace. For his legislative services at Harrisburg, he received one dollar a day. His wife was a native of Lititz, Lancaster county. Peter Dietz died in April, 1859, and his wife died April 20, 1871. Their children were as follows: (1) Henry, born July 3, 1809, married Susanna Lehman; he farmed for Daniel Dietz the old farm that had been his grandfather’s, and there died Oct. 3, 1842. (2) Joseph, born Oct. 28, 1810, married Elizabeth Strickler, daughter of Benjamin Joseph Strickler. He settled on a farm owned by his father near the Spring Garden township line, and died there in 1894. (3) Peter, born July York, 1846 the the 1, grandfather's wife born 1812, a grandfather's grandfather, 1813. Grandfather's grandfather, 1814, married Adam Daron, and died in Hellam township at the age of twenty-one, leaving two children. (5) Daniel, born Oct. 29, 1816, married Lucinda Deihl, and died in 1846 on the old Hoover farm, adjoining that of Elias Dietz. (6) John, born Nov. 17, 1818, married Eliza Myers, moved to Elkhart county, Ind., and finally retired to Goshen, where he died in 1901. (7) Susanna, born March 1, 1821, married Frederick Sakemiller, and died in York, April 2, 1893. (8) Elias is mentioned below. (9) Jacob, born Oct. 3, 1826, who married Sarah Louch, died in Hellam township in February, 1893.

Elias Dietz was born March 8, 1823, on his grandfather's farm, and when he was two years old his father moved to the farm on which he has ever since lived. He began farming in 1851, taking entire charge on the death of his father in 1860, and was actively engaged in this work for fifty-two years, retiring in 1903. His education was obtained in the subscription schools at Kreutz Creek Church, and other places, his principal teacher being William Stough. Although he went to school until he was twenty years old, he often had but two months' schooling in a year. He and his brothers helped their father on the farm, and when they reached the age of twenty-one, wages were paid at the rate of seventy-five dollars a year. From his first year's earnings Elias saved fifty dollars, which he put out at interest, and in 1860 he was able to buy the home farm. His early wheat crops were all cut with scythe and cradle, a slow process compared with that of today. He sold his wheat in York, in the early days; later he took it to Wrightsville, and now he markets it in Hellam.

On Oct. 7, 1851, Mr. Dietz married Leah Rudy, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Reisinger) Rudy. She was born Oct. 31, 1831, on the farm adjoining that of her husband in Hellam township. Her grandfather, Michael Rudy, came to Hellam from Lancaster county. His wife was a Shreiner. Mr. and Mrs. Dietz are the parents of the following children: (1) Milton, born April 22, 1853, married Cassie Landis, and died at Columbia, Pa., May 10, 1895. (2) Annie, born July 18, 1854, died March 9, 1857. (3) Elias Rudy, born Jan. 10, 1856, married Amanda Shue, and died in York, Feb. 10, 1898. (4) Leah, born May 3, 1857, is at home. (5) Albert, born Sept. 11, 1859, is at home. (6) Reuben, born Aug. Aug. 10, 1861, is at home. (7) Melinda, born March 1, 1863, died Nov. 16, 1866. (8) Jacob, born July 13, 1864, died March 16, 1865. (9) Lavinia, born June 9, 1866, is deceased. (10) Ida, born April 12, 1871, is Mrs. Albert Sechrist of Hellam. (11) Carrie, born July 28, 1878, died July 17, 1895.

Mr. Dietz has never missed voting for a Democratic candidate since he cast his first presidential vote for Polk in 1844. He has served three years as school director, one year as township auditor, and has declined many other local offices. He is a devout member of Kreutz Creek Reformed Church, to the building of which he was a large contributor. His grandfather helped build the original log church, and his father assisted in the building of the second church, which was of stone. The present structure is of brick. Mrs. Dietz is a Lutheran, but attends the same church as her husband, as it is a union church. The Dietz home is a hospitable one, and its owner is a man of intelligence, widely known and honored in the community. Mr. Dietz keeps abreast of the times, and enjoys conversing on topics of current interest.

NATHAN STAMBAUGH. For the practice of his profession, veterinary surgery, Nathan Stambaugh, of Hanover, was well prepared both by careful study and by practical experience gained in years of observation under the direction of his uncle, who had a wide practice as a veterinary surgeon. Dr. Stambaugh is one of the leading practitioners of the profession in Hanover, where he has been located since 1872. He was born on the Gettysburg pike, in York county, in 1840, son of Henry and Leah (Myers) Stambaugh, and grandson of Jacob Stambaugh, who nearly a century ago was a leading farmer and distiller of Paradise township, York county.

Henry Stambaugh, the father of Nathan, was born in Paradise township, York county, in 1813. He married Leah, daughter of Henry Myers, who reared a family of fifteen children. of whom three survive, namely: Jacob M., a resident of York; Emanuel, a resident of Illinois; and Amanda, who married Samuel Neister, of York county. Henry Stambaugh died in 1876, at the comparatively early age of forty-three years; his wife Leah died in 1872.

Nathan Stambaugh spent his boyhood on the farm and at York Springs, Adams county, where he remained for fourteen years. Later he made his home with his uncle, George Stambaugh, a veterinary surgeon of Cumberland county, Pa., under whose direction he studied, assisting his uncle for three years. He then engaged in the practice for himself, locating first at East Berlin, York county, and removing thence to Hanover in 1872. Here he has since conducted a veterinary practice which extends over a considerable portion of York and Adams counties, a region in which the Doctor is well known.

In 1872 he married Miss Catherine Lichty, of New Oxford, Adams county, daughter of William Lichty, a well known and highly respected citizen of that town. Their commodious and attractive residence is at No. 30 Baltimore street. Dr. Stambaugh is a member of Hanover Lodge. No. 327. I. O. O. F.

During the Civil war Nathan Stambaugh enlisted in the 165th Regiment, P. V. I., and served for eighteen months. His regiment was commanded by Col. Albright, of Schuylkill county, and he participated in the battle of Gettysburg, besides several minor engagements, including one near Norfolk, Va., and fighting in the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia.

JOHN L. MYERS, of Monaghan township, York county, born Dec. 5, 1852, is a prosperous farmer and also carries on an extensive grocery business at Harrisburg.

William Myers, his father, was born in Warrington township, York county, and when a young man settled in Monaghan township, engaging in agricultural pursuits in the vicinity of Andrews town. He became one of the well-to-do farmers of that section, and followed farming all of his active life. He was known for his many good traits of character, having been honest and upright in all his dealings, and was regarded as one of the good practical farmers of the township. At the time of his death, which occurred when he was seventy-seven years old, he was living on the farm now owned by his son-in-law, Daniel Wood, and his wife, Margaret (Menges) Myers, died in 1902, aged eighty-two years. Mr. and Mrs. Myers were the parents of the following children: Levi, Mrs. Elizabeth Kline, Mrs. Caroline Stauffer, Emanuel, Mrs. Susan Stauffer, Mrs. Margaret Laird, William, Mrs. Amanda Wood, John L. and Samuel. The parents were members of the Church of God. Mr. Myers was a stanch Democrat.

John L. Myers received his education in the public schools of Monaghan township, and remained at home until he was twenty-one years of age. He chose farming as his life occupation, and has successfully followed agricultural pursuits, making a specialty of general farming and fruit growing; his farm of 160 acres includes a tract of timberland. In 1868 Mr. Myers embarked in the grocery business at Harrisburg, in which venture he has been eminently successful. He carries a full line of choice family groceries and farm produce and receives his full share of the public patronage.

In 1874 Mr. Myers married Miss Angeline Hyde, the estimable daughter of John Hyde, one of Monaghan township's prominent farmers, and to this union the following children have been born: Myrtle B., Charles E., Milton P., Rettie E., and Cleveland J. This family are members of the Church of God. Mr. Myers has been long identified with the Democratic party and has been called upon to fill various township offices, in every case serving the community satisfactorily and efficiently. Among the offices he has held may be mentioned that of supervisor of Monaghan township, which he held for three years to the benefit of the township; for six years he was school director, and during his terms many improvements have been made in the system; he also served one term as tax collector. Mr. Myers is a man who deserves the high esteem in which he is held by all who know him, and is generally considered one of the best farmers in his neighborhood.

GEORGE B. CASLOW, who resides at Seven Valley borough, was born in Springfield township, son of Henry Caslow. His grandfather, Jacob Caslow, was born in Ireland, and was a weaver by trade. He came to America about 1800, settling in Springfield township, and later removed to Codorus township, where he died at the age of seventy-eight. years. His wife, whose maiden name was Boyer, was of German descent, and both are buried in Springfield township. Their children were: Henry, Jacob, Daniel, John, Barbara, Magdalena and Samuel.

Henry Caslow was born in Springfield township March 6, 1811, and is one of the oldest living residents of York county, being ninety-five years old. He now makes his home with his son, George B. He assisted at home until the age of twenty-one years, when he learned the trade of weaving in his native township, and went to farming, at which he continued thirty-five years. He then located in York, where his wife died, after which he went to live with his son, with whom he has since remained. Henry Caslow married Catherine Boyer, who died at the age of eighty-six years, and they were the parents of children as follows: George B.; Elizabeth, deceased; Mary, who resides at Seven Valley; and Malinda, Mrs. Ensminger, of Baltimore.

George B. Caslow attended the schools of Springfield township until he was sixteen years old, assisting his father until he was twenty-one, and then went to farming on his own account for a short time. After that he kept hotel for two years at Seven Valley borough, and then engaged on the Northern Central railroad as brakeman, later being promoted to conductor. He subsequently engaged in carpentering, cabinetmaking and undertaking at Seven Valley borough, later in cigar box manufacturing, and then again took up farming. He continued this for seventeen years, in the year 1904 retiring from active life.

In 1859 Mr. Caslow married Catherine Krout, daughter of Michael and Mary (Miller) Krout, both of whom died in Springfield township, where they are buried. Mr. Caslow is a Democrat, served on the borough council for nine years, and was school director for two terms. He was one of the organizers of Seven Valley borough and is very highly respected in that part of York county. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he is deacon and elder. He was elected justice of the peace, but would not serve.

ALBERT ALTLAND, owner of a well-tilled farm of eighty acres, adjoining the borough of Manchester, has achieved success in all enterprises which he has undertaken, and has held several prominent positions, which he efficiently filled. He was born in Manchester township, Oct. 7, 1855, son of Peter M. and grandson of George Altland.

George Altland settled in Paradise township, where his whole life was spent in farming. He had twelve children, of whom may be noted Peter M., who is mentioned below; Samuel, who died in Paradise township; Martin; Benjamin; Moses; Philip; and Eliza.

Peter M. Altland was born in Paradise township and received a common school education. He learned the blacksmith’s trade in Manchester township, and continued in that work for fifty-three years. For seven years prior to his death, which occurred Feb. 28, 1902, he lived a retired life. He was buried at the Union cemetery. He married Rebecca Neiman, daughter of George and Mary (Ruppert) Neiman of York county. George Neiman was born in Conewago township and was a prosperous farmer. He was buried at Quickell’s cemetery in that township. His wife Mary died at the age of sixty-seven years. The children born to them were: Catherine; Sallie; Eliza; Elizabeth, who married Newton Shettle and resides in York; John; George; Mary; Rebecca, the mother of our subject; Lovina; Samuel; Adam; Susan, who married Jacob Rudy, and resides at Steelton, Dauphin county; and Leah, who married William Metzger and resides at Steelton. After his first wife’s death, Mr. Neiman married Kate Eisenhart, and they had no family. She died in Conewago township. The mother of our subject is still living and resides in Manchester borough. To Peter Altland and his wife the following children were born: Emma J. married William Blessing, and lives at York Haven, York county; William N. married Emma Finchbough, and he died in 1899, and was buried at the Union cemetery at Manchester; Albert; E. N. married Daisy ———, and resides in California, where he is extensively engaged in the fruit growing business.

Albert Altland attended school at Manchester borough until eighteen years of age, when he was taught the blacksmith’s trade by his father, which he followed for about fifteen years in connection with farming. In 1887 he gave up his trade to devote his whole time to agricultural pursuits, and besides his own fine eighty-acre farm in East Manchester township, he farms his mother’s farm in the limits of the borough.

In 1885 Mr. Altland married Emma J.
HISTORY OF YORK COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Strominger, daughter of Rankin and Rebecca (Wertz) Strominger, of Newberry township. After his marriage he located on his farm in East Manchester, where he remained until 1895, when he came to Manchester borough, where he is still engaged in farming. To him and his wife three children have been born: Gertie, a graduate of the Patricks Business College, class of 1902, is at home; Leon P. resides at home; and Rebecca May died at the age of four years, and was buried at the Union cemetery. Mr. Altland is a Republican in politics, and for three years was school director, and for six years councilman. In religion he is connected with the Lutheran Church. Albert Altland is favorably known and regarded with high esteem all through York county, as was also his father, Peter M. Altland.

JAMES M. GROVE, whose rise in the business world has been little short of phenomenal, is president of the Glen Rock Stamping Works, general manager of a large shirt factory, and is identified with other manufacturing interests of Shrewsbury township. His start in life was made with practical no means, and the success he has attained is due entirely and solely to his own energy and foresight. Mr. Grove was born Dec. 2, 1862, in Shrewsbury township, son of Samuel and Susan (McAbee) Grove.

The paternal grandfather of James M. Grove was John Grove, a farmer of Shrewsbury township. His children were: Samuel; Lewis; Leah; John; Charles; James; Margaret, who married Christopher Baker; Lydia, who married George Fisher; and Elizabeth. John Grove was a devout member of the Reformed Church. Both he and his wife were buried at Shrewsbury. The maternal grandfather, David McAbee was a railroad man. His children were as follows: William; Thomas; Jesse; James; John; Susan, the mother of our subject; and Elizabeth, who married William McCubbins. David McAbee was buried at Zion Church, Baltimore county, Maryland. The McAbee family were members of the M. E. Church, and most active workers of that denomination.

Samuel Grove, the father of James M., was reared on the farm, and spent his whole life in agricultural pursuits. In politics he was connected with the Democratic party, in which he was a hard worker. He was called upon to fill numerous township offices, and served capably and satisfactorily as school director, tax collector, supervisor of the township, and in other offices. *He was a member of the Reformed Church, and for several years served as a member of the official board. He married Susan McAbee, and their children were as follows: Albert, deceased; Eli, deceased; James M.; Saloma; Irvin; Elizabeth, wife of Charles K. Myers; Leonard C.; Lillie, deceased; Milton, deceased; and Irene. The wife and mother died July 22, 1905, aged seventy-seven years, but the father lives and resides in Shrewsbury township.

James M. Grove attended the public schools of Shrewsbury township, and supplemented this with a course at Shrewsbury Academy. After leaving there he worked on the farm and spent his leisure hours in fitting himself for teaching. At the age of twenty he began teaching in Hopewell township, where he remained for two years, going from there to Railroad borough, Shrewsbury township, where he remained seven years. He then entered the employ of D. Levy & Sons, where he remained for two years as manager of their shirt waist factory. He learned all the details of the business and came to Glen Rock, where in 1891, after consulting several business men, he started a shirt factory. When he embarked in the business, Mr. Grove employed twenty-five female hands; at the present time the company gives employment to from 125 to 150 skilled employees. The factory is 100x54 feet and is thoroughly equipped with modern machinery and good office fixtures. The product is men's shirts, and the average output one thousands dozens of shirts per week. The factory runs the year round, and all work is done by contract, the goods practically being sold before being manufactured. Mr. Grove is general manager of this concern, and owns a one-third interest.

Among Mr. Grove's other interests, he is a stockholder in the Glen Rock Stamping Works, and is president of the incorporated company, which was originally organized in 1898, as a partnership between I. F. Grove, L. C. Grove, Charles H. MacCally, G. W. Gible and George M. Gantz. In 1900 Mr. Grove bought Mr. Gible's interest, and the remaining partners bought out Mr. Gantz, and the company was incorporated with a capital of $25,000, at which time James M. Grove was elected president of the firm. This is now in a flourishing condition and the duties of president are ably filled by Mr. Grove.

Mr. Grove served as school director one term, councilman of Glen Rock one term, and was chairman of the ordinance committee, which committee was appointed to frame a new ordinance for the town. Mr. Grove became interested in the study of music when sixteen years of age, and was a member of the Reformed Church choir at Shrewsbury, as well as the Shrewsbury band. When he located in Glen Rock, he became an active member of the Glen Rock Musical Association, which membership he still maintains. Fraternally he affiliates with the Knights of Pythias, while his religious connection is with the Reformed Church and was superintendent of the Sunday school at Shrewsbury and has been a teacher for many years.

When twenty-eight years of age Mr. Grove married Miss Emma Diehl, daughter of Adam and Anna (Tyson) Diehl, of Shrewsbury township, and they have had two children, Austin L. and Myra A.

GEORGE SUNDAY, a retired farmer of Hanover, has won his present comparative leisure by the activity of his younger years, during which he was engaged both as a farmer and an artisan in the development of York county, continuing a habit of industry inherited from an honored and prosperous ancestry. Mr. Sunday was born in Jackson township, York county, near Paradise, Jan. 1, 1836, son of John and Esther (Stambaugh) Sunday, and grandson of Jacob Sunday, who was also a native of York county.

John Sunday, the father of George, was born in York county, in October, 1808, and throughout his useful life he followed the vocation of a farmer. A Democrat in political faith, he was elected to the office of supervisor, and held other local offices of responsibility. In religious faith he was a member of the Lutheran Church. Esther Stambaugh, his wife, was born in Paradise township in 1810, the daughter of John Stambaugh, a member of the Holz-Schwamn Lutheran Church, and buried in the graveyard of that Church. To John and Esther Sunday were born seven children, as follows: Elizabeth, now widow of William Stephen; Margaret, widow of George Straley; William F., of East Berlin; George; John, of East Berlin; Henry J., a resident of the same town; and Sarah J., who married Conrad Winters. The father died in 1864, and the mother passed away in January, 1891.

George Sunday was reared on the farm, where he remained until seventeen years of age, attending the district schools and assisting in the work on the farm. He then acquired the carpenter's trade, serving a three years' apprenticeship. Upon its completion he returned to his father's farm where he remained for three years. After his marriage in 1860 he followed his trade until 1863, when he removed to the old Sunday homestead where he remained three years. Then renting a farm in Adams county near Berlin, he remained five years. McSherrystown, to which he next moved, was the place of his longest residence, for he remained there nineteen years, after which he conducted the "Eagle Hotel" at New Oxford for six years. In 1895 Mr. Sunday removed to Hanover, where he erected a substantial and commodious brick dwelling on East Middle street, in which he and his family have since resided.

Mr. Sunday was married in August, 1860, to Anna Reeling, who was born in Germany, Nov. 15, 1834, the youngest daughter of Charles and Saphrona (Sonocolp) Reeling, and who when but six months old was brought by her parents to America. To Mr. and Mrs. Sunday have been born the following children: Jenny M., who married (first) C. S. Ruth (deceased), and (second) M. D. Feiser; Miss Ida L., at home; Anna Laura, wife of C. T. Hersh, proprietor of the "Eagle Hotel" at New Oxford; Charles A., of McSherrystown; George H., a cigar maker, of Midway, York county. Mr. and Mrs. Sunday have three grandchildren: Helen L. Ruth, Elton S. Ruth and Charles Brown Sunday. This estimable couple are consistent members of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, and are highly regarded throughout this and adjoining counties.

DETTRICH HILDEBRAND, a resident of Springfield township, was born there Nov. 10, 1831, son of Caspar Hildebrand.

Mr. Hildebrand's great-grandfather came from Germany to America and settled in York county. His son, Caspar Hildebrand, was a lifelong resident of York county, where he married a woman named Cramer, and both died near Loganville, being buried at Bupp's Union church. Their children were: Daniel, John, Frederick, Henry, Caspar, Joseph and Peter, all deceased.

Caspar Hildebrand the father of Detrich, was born in 1797 in Springfield township about two miles west of Loganville. He was educated in German. He learned the shoemaking trade, after working for his father, and followed the trade a number of years at Loganville. For ten years prior to his death he lived retired, and he died at the age of eighty-five years; he was buried at St. Peter's Reformed church, in Springfield township.

He married Susan Ness, a daughter of Jacob Ness, and a descendant of an old family of Pennsylvania, and she is buried in the cemetery with her husband. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrand were: Aaron, who died at the age of three years; Detrich; William, who died at the age of eight years; and Anna Maria, the wife of Adam Seitz, of York.

Detrich Hildebrand received his education in the common schools of York county, which he attended until the age of fifteen years. Under his father he learned the shoemaking trade, at which he is still engaged. In 1806 Mr. Hildebrand was elected justice of the peace, and he is still holding that office. He married Anna Maria Leader, daughter of Charles and Sallie (Hildebrand) Leader, and she died in 1893 at the age of fifty-nine years, being buried at Salem Church, Springfield township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hildebrand were: Dr. Charles G.; Dr. Robert A., a graduate of the Baltimore Medical College, and now successfully practicing at Glen Rock (he married Lucy Storman); and Annie A., married to M. M. Snyder, the bandmaster of Loganville.

Mr. Hildebrand is a Republican in politics and served the borough as school director, chief burgess and councilman. He is a member of the Reformed Church, in which he has been deacon and elder.

S. B. BRODBECK, of Brodbecks, York county, vice-president of the People's Bank of Hanover, Pa., and a well-known business man in Codorus township, located at the place which bears his name, was born in the borough of Jefferson, Codorus township, May 21, 1831, son of George S. and Leah (Bossert) Brodbeck.

George Brodbeck, grandfather of S. B., lived and died on his farm near Jefferson borough. He was also a distiller. George S. was his second child, the others being Daniel, Andrew, Jesse, Polly, Amanda and Elizabeth.

George S. Brodbeck was born on the old homestead and remained on the farm until 1852, when he engaged in the mercantile business at Brodbecks and followed it very successfully till his death, Oct. 17, 1874. He was also postmaster there, and in addition served as treasurer of Codorus township for a number of years. A member of the Reformed Church, he was for a long time leader of the choir at the "Stone Church." In every way he was a prominent man in the community, and his death was felt to be a great loss. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Leah (Bossert) Brodbeck, a daughter of Samuel Bossert. She still resides at Brodbecks. They had only two children, S. B. and Elizabeth, the latter the wife of Jacob F. Krebs.

S. B. Brodbeck received his education in the township school, and then in a graded school in Glen Rock, taught by Prof. Gray. When his studies were completed, he entered his father's store, of which he had entire control after the death of the latter. He was thus engaged till 1892, when he sold out to the present proprietor, Mr. Barbehem. From 1874 Mr. Brodbeck also was postmaster and still holds that position although through his vigorous efforts the office was transferred in 1881 to the Western Maryland Railroad station at Green Ridge, the railroad company since changing the name of the station to Brodbecks. His present interests are very extensive in other lines. He is a heavy dealer in grain, feed and fertilizer, besides running a large creamery at Green Ridge. His average weekly output of butter is 3,000 pounds, while during the summer season he disposes of 3,000 gallons of ice cream a week, his market being mainly in Philadelphia and Baltimore. The creamery is a building 24x124 feet, with an ice house adjoining that is 22x50 feet. In September, 1905, he installed a 50-horse power boiler in his plant. Mr. Brodbeck is also one of the promoters of the People's Bank of Hanover, and in 1903 he was chosen vice-president of the institution. The bank has a capital stock of $50,000 and the surplus and undivided profits are $43,000. Few men in the township are as active in business lines as Mr. Brodbeck, and he is one of the best citizens of the region.
S. B. Brodbeck was married, in 1875, to Eliza Jane, daughter of Jacob and Eliza (Gettier) Weaver, of Manchester, Carroll Co., Md. They have had a large family, viz.: Rosa, wife of J. R. Krebs; George W., station agent at Brodbecks; Lettie; Sadie; Annie, who died young; Lizzie; Samuel; Melvin; and Florence. Mr. Brodbeck possesses many admirable traits of character, and is of a genial and friendly temperament, ready with a kind word for every one. In politics he is a Republican, and he now holds the office of township treasurer. A member of the Reformed denomination, he served on the building committee, for the erection of the "Stone Church," and is active in its work. His home is a handsome structure erected in 1892, and Mr. Brodbeck also owns seventy-five acres of fine land in Codorus township.

TITUS S. SNYDER, extensively engaged in milling in York county, and also a prominent member and president of the R. F. D. Association of Pennsylvania, was born in the county in 1867, son of Jacob H. Snyder. Jacob H. Snyder was a miller by trade and in his earlier life was so engaged in Lancaster county. Later he moved to York county and operated successively Newman's, Allison's, and Menges's mills, in the last one being a partner of P. H. Menges. He was then for eight years in the flour and feed business in the city of York, and since giving that up has resided in Manheim township. He married Mary A. Bahn, daughter of Samuel T. Bahn, and they had children as follows: Titus S.; Jacob, a farmer in Manheim township, who married Miss Wentz; W. Harvey, who is employed at Baltimore as a carpenter for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and who married Miss Hetrick; Frances, wife of Albert Hamm, of York; and Samuel, of York, employed as a fireman on the Northern Central Railroad.

Titus S. Snyder received his education mainly in the township schools, but in the spring of 1888 he spent one term at the Millersville State Normal School. On his return home he was employed by S. B. Brodbeck, in charge of the produce department, but eight months later, in 1890, his father-in-law died and Mr. Snyder gave up his position to take control of the mill which the former had carried on during his lifetime. It was an old structure and much run down, but Mr. Snyder has improved and built it up till it is one of the finest mills in the county. He handles largely western grain, and both buys and sells. During 1904 he handled 1,564 tons of feed, 9,693 tons of corn, and 1,605 tons of oats, all western products. In 1896 he built an addition to the mill, two stories in height, 110 x 50 feet. His mill is located at the station of Greenridge, on the Western Maryland Railroad, and he has also a hydraulic cider press, a gasoline engine and a 20-horse power engine and boiler. At one time Mr. Snyder also owned and operated a mill at Glenville, but this he sold to W. Taylor. During the summer of 1898-99 he superintended the erection of hydraulic cider presses for an Ohio firm. Mr. Snyder also owns 225 acres of well-improved farm land.

On July 1, 1903, Mr. Snyder undertook the duties of a R. F. D. carrier from Brodbecks post office, and is still thus occupied. He has from the first taken an active part in the carriers' associations and for two years was president of the County Carriers' R. F. D. Association. In 1904 he was chosen vice-president of the State Association, and Aug. 3, 1905, at York, was elected president of the same, being the only officer of the preceding year who was retained on the official roll, and his election elicited great enthusiasm.

Mr. Snyder has found an admirable helpmate in his wife, whose maiden name was Elsie A. Heindle, daughter of Emanuel W. and Sarah A. (Dub) Heindle. Their children are: Annie, Emanuel, Erna, John, Earl, Margie, George and Paul. Mr. Snyder is a Republican in politics and a Lutheran in religion, belonging to the "Stone Church," where he is active in all departments, having served as deacon, president of the Christian Endeavor Society for seven years, and teacher in the Sunday-school. Fraternally he is a Mason, belonging to Patmos Lodge, No. 348, of Hanover.

LOUIS P. BROCKLEY. In few branches of commercial life does discriminating judgment count for so much as in the purchase of cattle and horses. The most indifferent success would crown the efforts of the cattle buyer devoid of that qualification. Few men, if any, it is said at Hanover, possess better judgment in the handling and buying of horses and cattle than Louis P. Brockley.

Mr. Brockley is a native of York county.
He was born on the Baltimore Pike, in West Manheim township, three and a half miles south of Hanover, April 1, 1843, son of Anthony and Elizabeth (Numemaker) Brockley. The boy was nurtured in the sterling virtues.

Anthony Brockley was a German emigrant, who was born in Baden, and in the Fatherland obtained a good common school education. In his eighteenth year he emigrated to the United States, and here pursued his trade of weaver. Industrious and frugal, he won for himself a position of solid worth. In the new country Anthony Brockley married Elizabeth Numemaker, born in York county near Hanover in 1822, daughter of John and Rebecca Numemaker, prosperous people of this county. To Anthony and Elizabeth N. Brockley were born nine children, six boys and three girls, namely: John; Louis P.; Samuel; Joseph; Urias; Savilla; Isadore, who married Henry Delone, of Hanover; Emma A., who married James Noel, a resident of Waynesboro, Pa.; and ——. Anthony Brockley was an old time Democrat, but never courted office. He was a devout Catholic. He died in 1874, and was buried in the Catholic cemetery at Hanover. His wife, who survives, is a member of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church.

Louis P. Brockley was reared on the farm. For a time he attended a pay school, and later the district school at Emmitsburg, Md., for two years. He then returned to the farm and assisted his father until the latter's death.

In 1870 Mr. Brockley married Mineta, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Lippy. The young couple settled in Hanover. Mr. Brockley began to deal in stock, in which he was quite successful. He purchased a farm of 136 acres in Conewago township, which he sold in 1903. During all this time he was actively engaged in dealing in cattle, which he shipped to various markets, and for a time was one of the principal feeders of the neighborhood. He also deals in sheep, his principal markets being Baltimore and New York. Mr. Brockley makes a specialty of buying export cattle, a branch of the business in which he has been eminently successful. He is a director in the Hanover Stock Drivers' Company, which was organized in 1882, and also a director of the Baltimore and Harrisburg Railroad; and a stockholder and director of the Hanover Savings Fund Company. In politics he is a Democrat in national questions, while in State affairs he votes independently. He and his wife are members of Emanuel Reformed Church. Mr. and Mrs. Brockley have one child, Carrie May, a graduate of Dickinson College, and also of the Women's College at Frederick, Md., and now the wife of William D. Carver, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Hanover.

WILLIAM F. UFFELMAN, of Chanceford township, York Co., Pa., is a practical as well as a professional farmer. All the years of his life have been devoted to agricultural pursuits, and he is proud to be recognized as a member of the great brotherhood of hard workers. His birth occurred in 1868, on the farm he now owns.

Frederick Uffelman, the father of our subject, was born in Bremen, Germany, and came to the United States about 1863, landing at New York City, from where he made his way to Chanceford township, York Co., Pa., taking up a tract of land, where he farmed until his death, in 1873.

William F. Uffelman received his education in the public school of his township, being reared a farmer boy. After leaving school he went West learning the butcher's trade with his brother in Iowa. After three years he returned home, and took up farming, later buying his present farm. Mr. Uffelman has always been known for his honesty and integrity. He is loyal to the country and his friends, hates treason or hypocrisy in either public or private life, and is prompt to speak for the truth and right as he sees them. He is an uncompromising Republican. Mr. Uffelman married Miss Workinger, a daughter of Samuel Workinger, of Chanceford township.

FREDERICK UFFELMAN, brother of William F., and a member of the well-known firm of Grove and Uffelman, of Parke Station, Chanceford township, was born on the home farm at Brogueville, Aug. 7, 1872, and from the age of six years to sixteen he received his education in the public schools of that section. He began clerking at the age of twelve years, in the store of his present partner, who then kept a general store at Brogueville. While clerking in the store during the summer months, he attended school in the winter. He was employed at the main store for two years at Muddy Creek Forks, and when the branch was opened at Parke, Mr. Uffelman was put in charge of it, and the present new store was built in 1890.

Frederick Uffelman was married, June 30, 1892, to Sadie B. Grove, a sister of his partner, and they are both members of the New Harmony Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Republican. Mr. and Mrs. Uffelman are the parents of the following children: Annie Olive, Harry T., Carl F., Gordon and Howard.

FRANK X. KUHN, contractor, builder and dealer in fine monuments, Italian and granite, Hanover, Pa., is more than a successful business man of that thriving city. The large force of men he has constantly kept employed under his direction, added to his own untiring energy, have made his contributions to the modern structures of the city particularly impressive.

Mr. Kuhn was born at Irishtown, near Conewago, York county, in October, 1851, the son of Henry and Mary (Weirick) Kuhn. The father was born in St. Mary county, Md., where for many years he engaged in the mercantile business, and afterwards in the manufacture of brick. He is still living, a resident of Irishtown, in the 87th year of his age. His wife, Mary, who was also a native of Maryland, died in 1896.

Frank X. Kuhn acquired a good knowledge of the common branches in the public schools of Irishtown, which he proceeded to turn to account as a teacher, beginning quite young and continuing for eight years, five of which were at Bush Run. But it soon became apparent to the young school teacher that for his active temperament a broader field of effort was desirable. In 1878 he came to Hanover and for a time engaged in stone cutting. It was not long before he was contracting and building in a small way, and by the interest and energy he placed in his work he rapidly established himself as a practical business man, and in his vocation he has steadily grown in prominence. For years he has been recognized as one of the leading contractors of Hanover, and he has erected many of the finest structures in the city. Among these may be mentioned the High Street School building, the Academy building, Trinity Reformed Church, the People's Bank of Hanover, and the Catholic Church at MeSherrystown. Among the private residences which have been constructed under his supervision are those of Messrs. John S. Young, E. Forney, and Temple J. Little, and among his monumental works Mr. Kuhn's line including the best grades of Barre, Quincy, Westerly and other granites and marbles—may be mentioned the Daniel Burnet and the Victor O. Bold monuments. Mr. Kuhn does an extensive business in preparing building stone and furnishing granite wherever desired. He is the contractor for the St. Vincent's Catholic Church, the cost of which is estimated at $40,000. Mr. Kuhn employs from thirty to fifty men, who are loyal to his best interests, which they find by experience are their own interests as well. Because of this enthusiastic harmony and co-operation between Mr. Kuhn and his men the most effective work results.

In 1878 Mr. Kuhn married Miss Annie Stock, of Gettysburg, a daughter of Andrew and Barbara Stock. A family of nine children have been born to them, five boys and four girls, the two eldest sons being Charles A., and Jasper A. Mr. Kuhn is a member of the Knights of Columbus, and also of the Heptasophs.

DAVID B. GOODLING, of Loganville borough, and engaged in the manufacture of high grade cigars, was born Feb. 29, 1860, son of Peter Goodling. Until he was nineteen years of age he attended a school under his brother, E. B. Goodling, and the school of his township. Later, for two terms, he was a teacher in Springfield township, and in 1882 engaged in his present occupation, the manufacture of cigars. His factory is No. 1367, Ninth District, and he gives employment to twenty-five skilled workmen, his goods being sold throughout the United States. The annual output of Mr. Goodling's factory is over 1,500,000 cigars, the buildings being 24x36 and 20x16 feet, well equipped, and under the personal management of their owner. Mr. Goodling gives his special personal attention to his manufactory, and perhaps it is this that has made him one of York county's successful business men.

In 1881 Mr. Goodling married Emeline Sprinkle, daughter of William and Lydia (Stine) Sprinkle, and they have these children: Cora Agnes, who married William H. Smith of Loganville, and Clytus L., who is attending the State College near Bellefonte, Center county. Mr. Goodling is a stanch Republican and has been very active in politics.
HON. CHARLES MATTHEW KERR, of Wrightsville, where he has passed the greater part of his life, is a son of Matthew (Jr.) and Julia (Thompson) Kerr, and was born at the homestead in Wrightsville Feb. 27, 1867. He attended the public schools in his native town and finished his schooling at the age of seventeen, under Prof. Gardner, who had been his first teacher. He then took a six-months course at the Eastman Business College, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on the completion of which he removed to Winona, Minn. There he obtained the position of shipping clerk in the lumber yard of Laird, Norton & Co., one of the largest lumber firms in the Northwest. After a year with this firm he and John L. Harris, also a Wrightsville boy, went into partnership on a sheep ranch in Deuel county, S. Dak., twenty-five miles south of the Sisseton Indian Reservation. There Mr. Kerr remained until 1890, when he sold his interest to Mr. Harris and returned to Wrightsville to enter the firm of Kerr Brothers, at this time composed of his father and one of his uncles. When they withdrew the firm was reorganized, the partners being Charles Matthew Kerr, H. B. Kerr and B. Frank Beard, and the name becoming Kerr Bros. Company. Mr. Kerr has ever since been identified with the firm, and is known as an energetic business man.

On Nov. 7, 1897, Mr. Kerr married at Wrightsville, Blanche McConkey, sister of Senator E. K. McConkey. One child has been born to this union, Charles M., Jr.

Mr. Kerr is a Democrat and an active politician. He took a great interest in party affairs before going West, and in 1891, the year after he returned, was sent as a delegate from Wrightsville to the county convention. In 1895 he was nominated for the State Legislature, and led his ticket in the fall election of that year. He was renominated and re-elected in 1897. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church of Wrightsville, where his father and grandfather before him were members and officers. He is well known in fraternal circles, being a member of Riverside Lodge, No. 503, F. & A. M., Wrightsville, the Chapter and Commandery at Columbia, and Chilnualna Lodge, I. O. O. F. Mr. Kerr has won his position and success by dint of steady perseverance and energy, by unfailing integrity and righteous dealing.

F. MERLE ALTLAND. This is distinctly the age of the young man. Never before was it possible for a man whose span of life was less than four decades to attain to position of influence and authority in the social, municipal or business life of a community. Among the young men of York county, who have won success early in the mercantile world, none has attained a higher place than F. Merle Altland, of Dillsburg, whose own intrinsic ability and unwavering integrity command for him the respect and admiration of all men.

Mr. Altland is a native of Cumberland county, Pa., born in Mechanicsburg May 18, 1874. He attended the public schools until he was fourteen years of age, and then entered the Business School of Commerce at Harrisburg, from which he was graduated. Well-equipped with a theoretical knowledge of business principles, he began his experiences in the commercial world as a salesman for Hench & Dromgold, manufacturers of agricultural implements at York. Though only a boy in years, he proved his worth and remained with that firm two years. In 1892 he came to Dillsburg, and became a salesman for his brother, A. D. Altland, in the sale of fly nets, horse collars, saddlery, harness, etc. Here, as before, his natural talent for business and his genial manners gained for him many friends. He husbanded his resources, and in five years (1897) purchased his brother’s stock, since then successfully conducting the establishment on the public square, corner Baltimore and Harrisburg streets. His stock is a good one, selected with care and discrimination, and his methods of doing business are above reproach.

Mr. Altland is by nature a social man, and in his fraternal connections is deservedly popular. He is a member of the B. P. O. E. Lodge, No. 578, Carlisle; Heptasophis Conclave, No. 306, Dillsburg; I. O. O. F. Lodge, No. 215, Mechanicsburg; O. U. A. M., No. 324, Dillsburg. In his religious belief he is a Presbyterian, and holds membership in the First Church.

On Oct. 16, 1894, Mr. Altland was married to Miss Alice Brumbaugh, of York, and they have three children, Catherine, Daniel and Frederick.

ROBERT SMITH MAGEE, of Wrightsville, who is largely identified with the business interests of his locality, was born on the homestead where he now resides, Aug. 29, 1869. Mr. Magee commenced his schooling at the age of six years, under Professor Gardner, formerly county superintendent of schools, attending school until seventeen years old. For the next few years he was associated with his father in the insurance and survey business, managing it much of the time, in the absence of his senior. He then started to attend the York Collegiate Institute, but was obliged to leave college to attend to business. In 1895 he was appointed postmaster by President Cleveland, in which capacity he served until July, 1899, carrying on his business at the same time. In 1896 the Columbia Embroidery Company was moved to Wrightsville, and Mr. Magee purchased stock in the establishment, serving in the capacity of secretary and treasurer until 1900. In association with Grant S. Tinsley he then purchased the entire stock of the company, and they have continued under the same name up to the present time. Mr. Magee is a stockholder in the Wrightsville Hardware Company, and in 1895 bought the largest hardware stock in town from J. S. Moul, selling it in 1901 to Shutter Brothers, and again securing it at a sheriff's sale in 1903. In addition to these enterprises Mr. Magee still carries on the insurance business.

In February, 1902, Mr. Magee was elected justice of the peace, to serve five years. Fraternally he is connected with the F. & A. M., Riverside Lodge, No. 503, being at the time of his initiation the youngest member of the lodge. He belongs to the Mystic Shrine and Consistory at Harrisburg, having attained the thirty-second degree, and is a member of Cyberne Commandery at Columbia. He is also a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery of the State of Pennsylvania, and is a valued member of the York County Historical Society. He has always been a Democrat in politics, and cast his first vote for President Cleveland at the time of his second election.

MOSES J. OLEWILER was born in Lower Windsor township, March 25, 1868, son of Leonard E. and Theresa Olewiler, the parents both residing in York retired from active life.

When Moses J. Olewiler was only two years old his father moved to East Prospect, and there the boy attended school until he was eighteen. The father was a store-keeper and a cigar manufacturer and the son began clerking for him, also working in the cigar factory. When he was twenty-one he went to Freeport, III., to visit an uncle and remained there a short time. Returning home, he was married in 1891, and for a year afterward was engaged in raising tobacco in East Prospect. The following year he commenced the cigar business there, later spending seven years at Red Lion in charge of a bakery. Since 1898 he has given his exclusive attention to making bricks and has been very successful. In that year he bought a brick-yard which Zarfoss & Mate had started four years previously. Mr. Olewiler has put in the best modern machinery, has enlarged the plant every year and is now erecting another kiln. The present plant has a daily capacity of 35,000 bricks, but owing to a scarcity of help, the output is only about 25,000. Essentially a self-made man, Mr. Olewiler's success has been due not alone to his untiring industry, but also to his honesty and invariably fair dealing.

Mrs. Olewiler was a Miss Mary Margaret Gehly, daughter of John C. Gehly, of Windsor township. She has borne her husband two children—Claude E. and Mary. Mr. Olewiler was brought up in the Evangelical belief, as was his wife, and still adheres to that faith. In politics he is a strong Republican, and active in local affairs and he has twice filled minor township offices most acceptably.

JAMES FULTON, who for half a century was one of the substantial merchants and leading citizens of Stewartstown, Pa., was born in Hopewell township, York county, Pa., Dec. 19, 1829, and passed quietly away at Avon Park, Fl., Dec. 29, 1894. The parents of the late James Fulton were Hugh and Jane (Creswell) Fulton. The father was a farmer during his active life, operating in Hopewell township and becoming quite successful. The following children were born to himself and wife: David; Robert; Alice, who married John Green; Sarah, who married Henry Kurtz; James; and Agnes, who married Giles Green.

When a boy James Fulton attended the township school, and as was the custom worked upon his father’s farm. So thoroughly did he prepare himself, taking advantage of every educational opportunity, that he was able to pass the examinations necessary before he could teach, and for several years was a popular teacher during the winter months. Later he clerked in the general store of Joel Metzler, and during the time he was in that gentleman’s employ mastered all the details of the business. As soon as he was able the enterprising and ambitious young man founded a store of his own at Stewartstown, at first on modest lines, but as his trade grew he made enlargements until he became one of the leading merchants of the place. As his sons advanced to maturity, he first received them as clerks in the business, and later took them into partnership, under the firm style of James Fulton & Sons.

Not only was Mr. Fulton a successful and progressive merchant, but he was prominent in other concerns of Stewartstown, having been one of the organizers and president of the Stewartstown Bank, holding the latter office at the time of his demise; he was a stockholder and director of the National Bank of York, Pa., and a charter member and president of the Stewartstown Railroad Company. In a word, few enterprises were projected and advanced with which he was not connected for many years prior to his death, his superior executive ability and sound business sense being fully recognized.

In church matters Mr. Fulton always took an active part, being connected with the Presbyterian denomination; for a long time he was a member of the official board and teacher in the Bible class of the Sunday-school. His contributions were liberal to the church and to all worthy movements, and his private charities were numerous, although unknown to the world at large.

On Oct. 6, 1853, Mr. Fulton was united in marriage to Margaret Griffith, daughter of William and Mary (Baird) Griffith, of Hopewell township. Ten children were born of this happy marriage: William H., Thomas B., Calvin C., Lovell R., Annie M., Mary J., Elizabeth (married to C. Leib), Nellie G., Isabella and Emma A. Mr. Fulton’s death was a distinct loss to Stewartstown, and his many friends still mourn him and remember his many excellent qualities. Public-spirited, generous, kind-hearted, he was a prominent and popular man, and bore more than his share of the commercial and municipal advancement of the borough, where for over fifty years he played so important a part.

The family of Mrs. Fulton is an old and honorable one, of Welsh extraction. Her father, William Griffith, was born and reared at Baltimore, Md. For many years he was a successful merchant of that city, but later removed to Hopewell township, York Co., Pa. His family by his first wife, Mary Baird, consisted of children as follows: Annie, wife of William Arthur; Margaret, Mrs. Fulton; Thomas B., and Matthew M. Mr. Griffith was twice married, the maiden name of his second wife being Elizabeth Hammond. By her Mr. Griffith had the following named children: Stewart; William; George K.; John L.; Mary, who died in infancy; James; and Sallie, who married James Hendricks.

The sons of the late James Fulton inherit many of the traits of their revered father, and are numbered among the enterprising business men of Stewartstown. Their business is in a flourishing condition, showing a steady and healthy annual increase. They take a practical interest in the growth of the town, and are worthy descendants of the man who was so honored by its citizens. Mrs. Fulton is a lady of sweet, Christian character, whose many excellent qualities endear her not only to her family, but to a large circle of admiring friends.

GEORGE N. LECKRONE was born in Dillsburg, York county, Nov. 22, 1839, son of Leonard and Hannah (Nesbit) Leckrone. George Leckrone, the grandfather, was also a native of York county and a prosperous farmer of Dover township, the owner of a farm of 150 acres. His wife’s maiden name was Wolf. Both died at the old home in Dover township, being buried in Loucks’ graveyard. The children born to them were: Jacob, Joseph, Leonard, Anthony, Eva, Lydia, Catherine, Mary and Adam.

Leonard Leckrone was born in 1812 in Dover township and received a common-school education. He learned the tanner's trade at East Berlin, Adams county, where he remained six years, also learning the coppersmith's trade. He then went to Dillsburg, where he engaged in business for five years, and then came to Dover township, where he engaged in the tinning business in conjunction with farming. Later Mr. Leckrone came to Dover borough, where he followed his trade until his death, which occurred in 1864, in his fifty-second year. He was buried in Loucks' graveyard. Mr. Leckrone married Hannah Nesbit, and she died at Dillsburg, her burial place.

George N. Leckrone was the only child born to Leonard and Hannah Leckrone. He spent his early life on the farm, and when sixteen years of age removed to Dover borough, where he was assistant postmaster for six years. Mr. Leckrone has a fine home and nineteen acres of land, which he now farms, situated within the borough named.

In 1885 Mr. Leckrone married Mary Neiman, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Ferrence) Neiman, of Coneyago township, and to them children as follows have been born: Claud M., Bertha A., Pansy and Samuel Eli, all of whom died young and are buried in the Dover cemetery; George Webster, a bright young boy of seven years (1905); and Horace W. Mr. Leckrone is a Democrat, has been councilman nine years, and served as treasurer six years. In his religious belief he is a consistent member of the Reformed Church, in which he has served as deacon and teacher of the German class in the Sunday-school. He is a representative farmer of Dover township, and is one of its most honest and upright citizens.

WILLIAM J. ARNOLD, of Peach Bottom township, was born in Fairfield, Lancaster county, Oct. 20, 1831, to William and Julia Ann (Barnett) Arnold. Little is known of Mr. Arnold's forefathers, but it is probable that his paternal grandfather was killed at Bush Furnace, in Maryland, by the explosion of a cannon which he was testing.

William Arnold, father of William J., was given a common-school education. In his mature years he was employed as manager of Brown's slate quarries and held that position until a few years before his death. In 1851 he moved to the farm on which his son, William J., now resides. He had purchased it in 1838, installing his family there during that year, and they remained upon the place until 1842. When, as stated, he again moved upon the farm, in 1851, it was his intention to operate it in connection with a mercantile business, but he died in the following spring—May 20, 1852—and the property fell to his son.

William Arnold was thrice married. By his first wife, formerly Sarah McFadden, to whom he was united July 3, 1821, he had one son, Thomas, who died in 1873. On May 13, 1823, he married Katherine Cassady, and they had one daughter, Margaret C., now Mrs. Jesse Poteet. He was united to his third wife, Julia Ann Barnett, Sept. 20, 1827. Mrs. Arnold survived her husband until April 6, 1864, and both are buried in Mt. Nebo cemetery. Peach Bottom township. Fourteen children were born to this union, as follows: Gilbert T., who died in Chicago, Feb. 3, 1858; Amanda M., born April 24, 1830, who married Samuel Kyle; William J.; James A., born March 24, 1833; Ephraim, born Nov. 3, 1834; Edwin P., born June 1, 1836; Oliver C., born Nov. 23, 1837; Samuel, born Sept. 9, 1839, who died in infancy, as did also David, born March 10, 1841, and Leander, born April 25, 1843; Charles E., born Oct. 8, 1845; Joseph, born Aug. 6, 1848; Nancy Jane, born Sept. 14, 1846, and Hugh A., born Feb. 26, 1852.

William J. Arnold was educated in the public schools of Lancaster and York counties, Pa., and of Cecil county, Md., and attended school until he was nineteen. For a few years following he worked on a farm, and then was employed at various capacities, as auctioneer, clerk in a mercantile establishment, in the quarries, and on the canal. After his father's death he returned home, took charge of the family and has ever since been engaged there in farming. A lifelong Republican, Mr. Arnold has been active in politics and has held a number of local offices of honor and trust, all of which he has filled most acceptably; a director on the school board for five years, he has also served as township auditor for nine years, justice of the peace for sixteen years (and still holding that office), has been inspector and clerk of elections several times, and in 1900 was employed as census enumerator for the southern part of Peach Bottom township and the borough of Delta. Mr. Arnold was a charter member of the local J. O. U. A. M. and has been an honored member ever since. He has also belonged for nineteen years to the I. O. O. F.

On Nov. 18, 1858, Mr. Arnold was married to Miss Amanda Priscilla Brosius, daughter of Abner and Letitia (Wilkinson) Brosius, of Lancaster county. To this union five children have been born, namely: Isaac Clinton, a practicing lawyer in Lancaster, who married Lucy Harris and has two children—Harris and William B.; Ephraim Willard, employed by the Northern Pacific Railway Company at Portland, Ore.; Alice R., who married William Henry Evans, a farmer of Peach Bottom, and has one daughter, Elizabeth; Clarence E., who married Louise V. (Thomas) Rugg, daughter of J. H. Thomas, a lawyer in San Francisco, Cal.; Mabel B., who is teaching near Philadelphia. Mrs. Arnold is a Quaker, but her husband has no pronounced religious views.

Beginning with April 12, 1857, Mr. Arnold began to record the minutest details of each day under the title of a “Land-Lubber’s Log Book,” and has kept it carefully from that time until now. He has been successful in his farm management, and his place of sixty-six acres, a portion of which is in timber, is in very good condition and reflects much credit upon the owner.

SAMUEL P. CASKEY was born in Drumore township, Lancaster Co., Pa., Feb. 18, 1824, son of John and Hannah (Hickey) Caskey.

John Caskey, his paternal grandfather, was a native of County Derry, Ireland, where he was engaged in farming. He was the father of nine children, seven sons and two daughters: William, who died in Baltimore; Samuel, who died in the West; Joseph, who died in Peach Bottom township, York Co., Pa.; Robert, who died in New Market, Baltimore Co., Md.; David, who died at the age of eighteen in Peach Bottom township; a son who died in infancy; John, father of Samuel P. Caskey; Mary, who married Richard Nelson, and died in Lancaster county; and Elizabeth, who married Edward Breece, of England, and lived in Baltimore, Md., but she died in Philadelphia, while on a visit.

John Caskey (2) was born in Hopewell township Jan. 10, 1795. He was given a common school education and then worked as a farm laborer. Later he bought the place where his son now lives, and was engaged there in farming until his death, Nov. 25, 1863. He was buried in Slateville cemetery, as was also his wife, who died March 2, 1871. Mrs. Caskey was Hannah Hickey, daughter of Timothy Hickey, of Wales, and their marriage occurred about 1818. They became the parents of four children: (1) Elizabeth J. died at the age of eighty-one years. (2) Robert married Miss Amelia Preece, and of their four children two are living: John Grant and Elizabeth P. The last named married William Chenoweth, and had nine children: Arthur; William; John; Amelia; Edgar; Floyd; Roberta, who died in 1884, aged seven months, twenty-five days; Harry Milton, who died in 1898, aged thirteen years, seven months; and Mary Mabel, who died in 1895, aged four months. (3) Samuel P. is mentioned below. (4) Joseph died Sept. 2, 1875, at the home of his brother Samuel P.

Samuel P. Caskey attended the public schools in Peach Bottom township until he was twenty-one, and then worked for his father until the latter’s death. The farm then became his property, and he has ever since been engaged in its cultivation. He was married, Jan. 3, 1878, to Mrs. Margaretta (McConkey) Wiley, daughter of Andrew and Letitia (Ramsay) McConkey, of Peach Bottom township. Their married life was not of long duration, as Mrs. Caskey died April 25, 1880, and was buried in the Slateville cemetery.

Mr. Caskey is a member of the Slateville Presbyterian Church, in which he was for thirty years a trustee and is now an elder; he hauled the first load of stone for the foundation of the church, in 1849. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., and has been noble grand, trustee and treasurer. A Democrat in politics, he served one term as judge of elections, but has never sought to hold office. Mr. Caskey is a man of good standing in the community, where he has held for many years the respect and confidence of his fellow-townsmen.

CORNELIUS STRAYER, a prosperous farmer of Windsor township, is a native of that vicinity, born Jan. 23, 1854, on what is now called the John Wise farm, near Red Lion.
He was the son of Joseph and Harriet Strayer and is descended from a family of agriculturists for several generations back.

Jacob Strayer, grandfather of Cornelius, passed his life on a farm near Loganville, and there died. He and his wife were the parents of the following named children: Harry; Kat; Mrs. Henry Howard; Elizabeth, Mrs. Brillhart; Sarah, Mrs. Henry Neff, of York township; John; Jacob; Joseph; Mrs. Henry Grove; Dinah, Mrs. Noah Seitz, and Daniel. Mrs. Neff only is alive.

Joseph Strayer was born on the Loganville farm, etc.

Joseph Strayer was born on the Loganville farm, in 1828, and, like his father, was a lifelong farmer. For some time he worked on the family homestead. He was then employed on the John Wise farm, which he bought, later moving to other property which he had acquired, and operating it until his death in June, 1899, at the age of seventy-two.

He married Miss Harriet Raymer, who was born and reared near his own birthplace, and they became the parents of four children: Cornelius; James Henry, of Windsor township, who married Miss Amanda Smeach; Melinda, Mrs. Titus Grove, of Chanceford township; and William A., of Windsor township, who married Miss Ellen Smeach. Mrs. Strayer died Feb. 21, 1905, aged seventy-five years, and twenty-six days. Joseph Strayer was all his life a strong supporter of the Republican party, while in his religious belief he was a member first of the Evangelical, and later of the United Evangelical Church.

Cornelius Strayer was six years old when he began his schooling, but while he attended from that age until he was eighteen, he was able to enjoy only three months each year, although the full terms were four months. He went to the Miller school and was first taught by Valentine Gable, his last instructor being Thomas Stewart. From early boyhood he had worked hard for his father on the farm and remained with him one year after his marriage. He was twelve years old when Joseph Strayer moved to his later home near Bethlehem Church, and had reached the age of twenty-six when he next located on the Samuel Sprengle farm, which he bought and which has been his home ever since. The place consists of sixty acres of fine land, with good buildings, and Mr. Strayer carries on general farming there with most successful results.

In 1879 occurred the marriage of Cornelius Strayer to Miss Julia Ann Miller, of Windsor township, the daughter of David and Rebecca (Gohn) Miller. Four sons have been born to this union: William A., Scott E., Irvin C. and Charles H., all at home. Mr. Strayer is a Republican in his politics, and has served three years as tax collector. Although not a member, he attends the United Evangelical Church. A self-made man, he has forged his way steadily ahead, until his thrifty management and industry have gained their just reward, not only in material success but in the respect of his fellow townsfolk. He was one of the organizers of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Red Lion, and was elected to the office of president, having filled that position since the bank was incorporated in 1903.

J. GRANT WALLACE, of High Rock, was born there March 28, 1865, son of John T. and Millie Ann (Gibson) Wallace. James Wallace, his grandfather, died in Hopewell township.

John T. Wallace, the father, was born in 1826 in Hopewell township, and during most of his life was a farmer, but for a time operated an oil-mill and owned a gristmill at High Rock, which he had formerly used as a sawmill. His death occurred Nov. 2, 1890, in his sixty-fourth year. His wife, Millie A. Gibson, who was born in Hopewell township, daughter of Robert and Millie (Durris) Gibson, died in 1901. They were the parents of the following children: Robert G., of Hopewell township; Katie, married to David Collins, of Hopewell township; Annie, married to R. E. Smith, of Chanceford township; Nettie, wife of Samuel Collins, of Stewartstown; J. Grant; Margaret and Emma (twins), the former married to H. C. Manifold, of High Rock, and the latter to William J. Reed, of Chanceford township; Andrew, of Collinsville, who married a Miss Tosh; William G., of High Rock; Thomas, married to a Miss McDonald; Samuel, of Allegheny, who married a Miss Barnett; Elizabeth, who married Harry Grove; and Florence, residing in High Rock.

J. Grant Wallace received his education in the public schools and the Pleasant Grove Academy, continuing his education until he was twenty-two years of age and working as a farmer until five years ago, when he began clerking for H. C. Manifold, becoming his partner in the spring of 1904. They started business under the firm name of Manifold & Wallace, and bought property upon which they erected their store, a creamery, a warehouse and two dwellings. Mr. Wallace is a stockholder with his partner in the new canning factory which was erected at High Rock in 1904.

In 1889 Mr. Wallace married Maggie McAlister, daughter of William N. McAlister, and two children have been born to them, Nellie May and Mattie Gibson. The family are connected with the Hopewell U. P. Church. Mr. Wallace is a stanch Republican, and has always taken an active interest in the success of his party. Further, he is a well known and very popular citizen of High Rock, his uprightness of character, his genial manner and his friendly spirit having attracted many sincere friends.

HARRY WEBSTER POSEY, M. D., who has built up a large practice in Sunnyburn and adjacent villages, was born Oct. 17, 1865, at Monmouth, Warren county, Ill., son of David and Mary (Groft) Posey. His father was born in Cecil county, Maryland, and received a common-school education there and in the schools of York county, Pa. For a time he clerked in the mercantile store of John Baer, at York Furnace, and then removed to Monmouth, Ill., where he engaged in mercantile business for himself, later returning to York Furnace, where he became associated with John Baer under the firm name of Baer & Posey. After Robert C. Baer was admitted the firm became John Baer & Co., and Mr. Posey continued with this company until his death, in 1882. Mr. Posey was a Republican in political sentiment. He married Mary Groft, of Lancaster county, who died about 1884.

Harry Webster Posey attended the country school at York Furnace until seventeen years of age and then entered Millersville State Normal School, at which he spent one year. He then commenced clerking in John Baer & Sons' store, at which he continued four years. Under his uncle, Dr. M. A. Posey, of Collinsville, Harry W. Posey read medicine, and he entered Jefferson Medical College in 1890, being graduated with the class of 1893. He immediately began practice at Sunnyburn, where he has since been very successful as a general practitioner of the regular school of medicine. Dr. Posey is not only held in the highest esteem by the profession, but by the public in general. His present fine property, bought in 1901, is known as the Elizabeth Ann Scott farm, and consists of 130 acres. Dr. Posey is a stanch Republican.

In 1888 the Doctor married Miss Maggie A. Riale, daughter of John and Ann (Bar- ricker) Riale, and one child has been born to the union, Chester R.

HENRY E. HILDEBRAND, of Glen Rock, Shrewsbury township, is one of the town's leading citizens and is a descendant of one of York county's old pioneer families.

The authentic record of the Hildebrand family reaches back as far as Felix Hildebrand, the great-great-grandfather, a farmer of Hope- well township, who was buried at Sadler's church. His son was Adam, who followed his father's occupation at the same place and who, with his wife, was also buried at Sadler's church.

Jesse Hildebrand, grandfather of Henry E., was a farmer of York county. He was married twice and reared a large family. His first marriage was to Leah Stermer, by whom he had the following children: Artemus; Amos; William; Jesse; Frank; Susanna; Rose, who married S. K. Diehl; Eliza, deceased; Mary, married to Henry Smith; Kate, who married John Althouse; and Maggie. By his second wife, Sarah Stermer, the sister of his first wife, he had one child, Belle, who is deceased.

William Hildebrand, the father of Henry E., was a farmer and died when the latter was three years old. In religion he was a member of the Reformed Church. His wife was Louisa Smith, who was a daughter of Henry Smith, a farmer of York county who emigrated from Germany. The children born to him were: Henry; Annie, who married George Diehl; Mary, wife of Henry Seaks; Louisa, the mother of Henry E.; Kate, who married Augustus Sonnenman, and Charlotte, Mrs. Henry Schaffler.

Henry E. Hildebrand attended the public schools and, until the age of twenty-three years, worked on the farm of Jacob Neuhaus. In February, 1891, he removed to Glen Rock, where he engaged in the manufacture of furniture, as a partner in the Enterprise Furniture Co., which business engaged about thirty-five hands. In 1895 Mr. Hildebrand entered into partnership with James M. Grove in the Industrial Sewing Machine Company, the former being the machinist of the firm. Mr. Hildebrand has other business interests, being a stockholder in the Glen Rock Stamping Company, and having mining interests in the Mexico Gold Mine Company.

Mr. Hildebrand married Lizzie Bowman, daughter of John Bowman, of Hopewell township, and five children have been born to them—Paul, Lloyd, Louise, Marie and Roy. Mr. Hildebrand has been a member of the council, being in that body when the water-works were built. His religious connection is with the Reformed Church. He is a progressive, public spirited man, and a most worthy representative of the old pioneer stock of which York county is justly proud.

ISAAC J. BRENDLE. Favorable environment is not essential to success in life. This truism has been demonstrated many times. An excellent example of the fact is furnished by the life of Isaac J. Brendle, one of the energetic and experienced business men of Hanover. Bereft of parents at a tender age and reared among strangers, Mr. Brendle thoroughly acquired the details of the business in which he is engaged, then started for himself a few years ago at Hanover, and he has since steadily risen in the ranks of the merchants of that city. For a number of years he was manager of the High Street Produce Company, which was established in 1897 by himself and C. S. Newman, and at present holds the same responsible position with the Pennsylvania Produce Company, which is owned by New York parties.

Mr. Brendle was born in Lancaster county, Pa., in 1867. After the death of his parents he went to Philadelphia, where for a time he attended school and later was employed by the Electric Lighting Company of that city. It was in Philadelphia that he learned the produce business. He was there employed for nine years by J. H. Kellar, who conducted a large produce business, and he acquired a complete knowledge of all departments. In 1897 Mr. Brendle came to Hanover and associated himself in business with C. S. Newman, as a partner in the High Street Produce Company. The building in which their business is conducted is 28x60 feet in size, with three separate warehouses equipped with improved storage facilities. Mr. Brendle acted as manager of the company from its formation until his appointment to superintend the even more important interests of the Pennsylvania Produce Company, and he is recognized as a keen and active business man, who, although a resident of the city for comparatively a few years has already won a prominent standing in the mercantile world. Mr. Brendle is married to Miss Anna Ebersole of Lancaster county. They have four children—Harry, Walter, Irene and Louisa. Mr. Brendle is a Republican in politics.

WILLIAM G. KRAFT, manufacturer of and dealer in flour, grain and feed, and proprietor of the Heidelberg Roller Mills, Porters Sideling, York Co., Pa., was born Feb. 3, 1804, in Jefferson borough, son of Jesse Kraft, a representative of one of the old families of York.

The great-great-grandfather of William G. Kraft, was born on the ocean, when his parents were emigrating to America. They settled in Baltimore, where they landed.

Frederick Kraft, great-grandfather of William G., was born in Baltimore Dec. 6, 1773, and was proprietor of a hotel there until 1810, when he came to York county, Pa., and founded the town of Kraftstown, which since the days of President Jefferson has been called Jefferson. He died July 20, 1836.

George Kraft, son of Frederick, was ten years of age when his parents removed to Jefferson. He was married in 1823 to Mary Loucks, and soon afterward commenced teaching. Subsequently he removed to Manheim township, and continued teaching, also engaging in mercantile business. He remained in Manheim some ten years, and then returned to Jefferson and opened up a general store, being associated in business with his son-in-law, Jacob Spangler. He later retired from active business, and was so living at the time of his death, in 1868, at the age of sixty-eight. He was a prominent Democrat, and at one time represented his district in the State Legislature. His wife died in 1872. They were the parents of the following named children: Jesse; Albert, deceased; Margaret, who married George Snodgrass, now deceased; Leranda, deceased, wife of Jacob Spangler, of Heidelberg township.

Jesse Kraft, son of George and father of William G., was third in the order of birth in the above family, and was born in Manheim township Aug. 5, 1828. His early life was passed in assisting his father, and he received his education in the schools of the neighborhood. He farmed for about ten years near Jefferson, and then exchanged his farm for the Mummett Hill property, lying in Heidelberg township, where he lived actively engaged in farming and milling until 1888, when he retired, and since then has made his home with his son, William G. He was a prominent member of the Lutheran Church at Jefferson, and has been deacon and elder at different times for the last forty odd years. In politics he is a Democrat, but not active in party work. In 1851 Mr. Kraft married Lucinda Baughman, of Manheim township, and they became the parents of the following children: Emma, wife of Levi Benge, of Glenville, Pa.; Alice, wife of George Wagner, of Spring Grove; George H., who married Clara Weind, and is in the hardware business at Spring Grove; Sarah, wife of Albert Moul, of West York borough; Mary M., wife of Daniel Klineinist, of West York borough; McClellan B., who married Lizzie Gladdinger, and is the telegraph operator and station agent at Spring Grove; William G.; Annie E., wife of Howard Jones, of Spring Grove; and Ella L., wife of John E. Senft, of Menges Mills.

William G. Kraft attended the township schools until nineteen years of age, and then, with his father, learned the milling business, beginning on his own account in 1886. He rented the mill from his father until 1892, in which year he purchased it, and established the roller process, his mill being equipped with all the latest machinery. He is the manufacturer of the well-known "Pride Brand," and has a large business, finding a market for most of his goods in Baltimore and New York City, the remainder being disposed of among the local trade.

Mr. Kraft married Miss Emma Garrett, and they have one son, Ira C., who is attending school. Mr. Kraft is a Democrat, and for a number of years served as township treasurer. He is a member of the Lutheran Church at Jefferson borough.

JOHN A. LEHR, formerly a prosperous farmer of Manchester township, was born there April 1, 1863, on the old family homestead, which had been in the family for many years. Through his father, Adam, he was descended from the grandfather, John, and the great-grandfather, Casper Lehr.

Adam Lehr was born in 1829 on the homestead, where he remained till he was sixty-seven years of age, engaged in farming. He then moved in the same township to where he is now living a retired life. Mr. Lehr was twice married, first to Miss Sarah Free, daughter of Adam Free, of York county. She died in 1865, and was buried in Prospect Hill cemetery. She was the mother of children as follows: One that died in infancy; Lucinda, Mrs. Adam Stare, who died at the age of twenty-two; Philip, a farmer in Conewago township, who married Miss Lydia Hoover; Adam, who married Miss Ellen Lehr; Barbara, who died July 1, 1905, the widow of John Croes, of South Dakota, who died Dec. 25, 1900; Albert, married (first) to Miss Mary Strickler and (second) to Miss Vinetta Metzel, by occupation a farmer near York ana, and a teacher in York county for twenty-one years, mainly in Manchester township; and John A. The second wife of Adam Lehr was Miss Sarah Leconoe, daughter of Leonard Leconoe, of Manchester township. The children born to this union were: Sarah, who married John A. Koller, a merchant in York; Daniel, a farmer in Manchester township, married to Miss Emma Bruaw; Flora, wife of Jacob Rentzel, a farmer in Manchester township; Frances Mrs. Henry March, of York; Harriet, Mrs. Frank Lehr, of Manchester township; George, a Manchester farmer, married to Miss Annie Quickel; Augustus, a carpenter in York, married to Miss Maria Strine; and Minnie, Mrs. Charles March, who died aged twenty-two.

John A. Lehr first attended school in Manchester township, then went to the Emigsville Academy. He afterward took a course of telegraphy in the Pennsylvania & New Jersey Telegraph College at Philadelphia, and has taught it, although never using it professionally. Much of his attention has been given to farming combined with cigar making, but a natural aptitude for mechanical devices has also led him into work of that nature, and one of his inventions has been patented. This is a block signaling apparatus for railroads, intended to avoid head-on or rear-end collisions, and to keep trains from running into open switches or drawbridges. The device is automatic, needing no operator to attend to it. Further, wherever trains get within the same block the engineers can telephone to each other while sitting in their cars and thus find out the trouble. Another important feature is the arrangement whereby operators, if they give wrong orders or get orders too late, may recall a train in an instant. The patent for this important invention was granted to Mr. Lehr April 26, 1904. He resided on his farm in Manchester township until ten years ago.

The union of John A. Lehr to Miss Sadie Bear, whom he chose for his life partner, occurred in 1884. Mrs. Lehr is a daughter of Henry and Henrietta (Shelley) Bear, of Mt. Wolf. They have a large family of children, namely: Laura; Harry; John; Chester, who died young; Myrtle; Alma; Carrie, who died at the age of three; Violet; Raymond; Robert; Pansy; Henrietta; and Nellie, all at home. The family attend the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Lehr is a Republican, and is prominent in the local councils. In 1899 he was elected justice of the peace, was reelected in 1901 and has filled that office with much ability and to the satisfaction of constituents. He is now clerk and acting deputy in the office of the register of wills of York county.

JACOB RHoads, an enterprising and prosperous merchant of East Manchester township, York county, was born May 5, 1853, in Manchester township, son of William and grandson of Christian Rhoads.

Christian Rhoads settled in Manchester township, where it is thought he was a stone cutter. He married and these children were born to them: Abraham, a carpenter, who died in Philadelphia; William, the father of our subject; and Leah, who married John Bear, and died in East Manchester township.

William Rhoads, the father of our subject, was born in 1825, in Manchester township, and in his youth learned the carpenter's trade, coming to New Holland in the Spring of 1877, where he followed his trade until his death, May 5, 1902. He married Fannie Bear, daughter of Jacob Bear, and one child was born to this union, which died young. Fannie Rhoads died and was buried in this township. Mr. Rhoads' second marriage was to Nancy Deisenberger, daughter of John Deisenberger, and their children were: Abraham, who married Katie Livingston, and resides at New Holland; Jacob, our subject; Charles B., who married Annie Rinehart, and resides at Quakertown, Bucks county; John W., who married Fannie Clemmin, and resides at Harrisburg; Sarah Ann, who died young; Leah, who married H. Wantz; Fannie E., who is married and lives in York; Amanda, who married John Leader, and lives in New Holland.

Jacob Rhoads attended the township schools until eighteen years of age, and then learned pump-making and carpentering, which trades he followed a number of years, later giving up carpentering, but continuing in the pump-making, in which he is an expert workman. In 1873 Mr. Rhoads married Anna Druck, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Druck, who was born in Hellam township. After marriage he located in Hellam township for one year, after which he removed to New Holland where he followed his trade. In 1892 he embarked in the mercantile business, in which he has been eminently successful, and in which he still continues. To Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads five children have been born: John W., a carpenter of York; Eliza Jane, who married John Norbeck and resides in York; Fannie May, at home; James A. G., who married Grace Lowery and resides in York; and Rosy Rebecca, residing at home.

In politics Mr. Rhoads is prominently identified with the Republican party, and has served as school director of East Manchester township and judge of election. He is connected in religion with the United Brethren Church. Mr. Rhoads' shrewd business methods have placed him among the foremost business men of his township, and he is highly respected by all who know him.

H. B. EBERSOLE, who is engaged in the coal business at York Haven, York county, was born June 18, 1862, in Dauphin county, Pa., son of Jacob and Maria (Bowman) Ebersole.

John Ebersole, grandfather of H. B. Ebersole, was a life-long farmer in Dauphin county, and he died at the age of fifty years. His children were: Abraham, John, Kate (Mrs. Hostler), Mary (Mrs. Foreman), Lizzie (Mrs. Hostler) and Jacob, the father of H. B.

Jacob Ebersole was born in Dauphin county where he learned the trades of cooper and miller, and followed them for a number of years in his native place, near Middletown and also at Hummelstown. He spent four years in Juniata county, near Liverpool, and three years near Mifflin. In 1875 he came to Fairview township where he was a farmer for seven years, at that time removing to Manchester township, near the borough, and remained three years. He then removed to Mt. Wolf where he worked as a cooper and a tobacco packer until his death, which occurred Feb. 29, 1884, and he was buried in Fairview township. He married Maria Bowman, daughter of George Bowman, of Hummelstown, Dauphin county, and she still resides at Manchester borough. The children born to them were: Annie married I. Deisinger, and died at the age of twenty-three years; Ephraim B. is engaged in the milk business in Cumberland county; Elizabeth married John McDaniel, and lives in Cumberland county; Ellen married Henry Snyder, a farmer of Fairview township; H. B.; Jacob is a cigar maker of York; Katie married Ambrose Melbourn, and lives at Manchester; John died at the age of five years; Charles, a cigar maker by trade, is employed at the York Haven paper mills.

H. B. Ebersole attended the schools of Fairview township, until sixteen years of age, and remained home until twenty-two, being employed with Henry Snyder, a brother-in-law, for two years, learning the trade of a cigar maker. He was then connected with the York Haven Paper mills for thirteen years, the last nine of which he was beater-room foreman. In 1898 Mr. Ebersole embarked in the coal business at York Haven, and his well-directed efforts have brought him success, he having one of the largest trades in his line in the section. He also deals extensively in farming implements, fertilizers and cream separators. His well appointed place of business is located along the tracks of the Northern Central Railroad.

In 1886 Mr. Ebersole married Lillie Duhring, the youngest daughter of Martin and Elizabeth A. (Bentz) Duhring. No children have been born to this union, but Mr. and Mrs. Ebersole have adopted Ethel May, who is now (1906) a bright girl of sixteen years. Martin Duhring, the father of Mrs. Ebersole died May 5, 1903. He served forty-two years as justice of the peace at Manchester borough. Mrs. Duhring died Dec. 29, 1903, and is buried at the Union cemetery at Manchester borough. The children born to this couple were: William H., a farmer and trucker of North Carolina, married Sarah Kauflman; Sarah Catherine married George Mathias of New Cumberland, Cumberland county; Maria married Henry Everhart, and died at the age of twenty-seven years; Emma, the wife of S. A. Copenhouser, lives in York; Lillie is the wife of Mr. Ebersole; Annie E. died at the age of two years; and John Clay died at the age of twelve.

Mr. Ebersole is a Republican in politics, and has been elected to positions of trust in his township. He has served as school director for seven years, treasurer of the school board for six years, and has been trustee of the borough since it was organized. His religious views connect him with the United Brethren Church, in the work of which he has been very active and to the support of which he has been very liberal. He has been trustee of the church and superintendent of the Sunday-school. The business interests of York Haven in the past decade have wonderfully increased, owing to the enterprise and ability of such public spirited citizens as H. B. Ebersole. In every relation of life, Mr. Ebersole stands as a representative citizen, honorable and upright in his dealings with his fellow-men, a promoter of educational progress and a valued member of his home community.

MARTIN LUTHER DULRING (deceased), justice of the peace, was born in Manchester township, April 9, 1820. His father was Martin Duhling, a native of England, and his mother, Barbara Quickel, was born in York county. Until his fifteenth year, the son remained on the farm, and then learned the potter's trade, which he followed twenty years. He was educated at the public schools, and at seventeen began teaching, thus being employed thirty-two winters in York county. At twenty-one years of age he married Elizabeth A. Bentz, daughter of John Bentz, of Manchester. They had seven children, four of whom are now living: William H., of North Carolina; Sarah Catherine, wife of George Mathias, of New Cumberland; Emma, wife of Stephen Copenhouser, of York; and Lillian Jane, wife of H. B. Ebersole. The three who died were John Clay, thirteen years; Annie, two years; Maria, wife of H. M. Everhart, twenty-six years. Mr. Duhling formerly belonged to the Lutheran Church, but left it in 1868 to connect himself with the United Brethren Church, in which he was assistant class leader. Since 1870 he had been secretary of the Quarterly Conference. In 1844 he was captain of the militia of Hellam district. He was a member of the Manchester borough council in 1880, in 1884 again elected for three years, and had been secretary of that body for ten years. Being elected justice of the peace of Manchester township in 1863, he had held that office, nearly forty-two years. Since 1857 he had also been engaged in butchering, and with the exception of ten years had continuously followed it. His time was also devoted to surveying and conveying. On Aug. 23, 1864, he enlisted in Co. D, 200th P. V., and served until the end of the war. When the regiment was properly organized, he was elected first lieutenant, while his son was chosen captain. His company served in the army of the Potomac, and participated in the battles in front of Petersburg. At Fort Steadman he was wounded in the left leg, by a piece of shell, lying in the hospital about eight days but being incapacitated for fifteen. The company was raised by him and his son, and it was his express desire that his son should be its captain. It left Harrisburg with 104 men, and returned with only seventy. In politics Mr. Duhling was a Republican: In 1870 he took the census for Manchester township and borough, and from 1880 to 1886 was postmaster at Manchester. His children, with the exception of the youngest, have all been teachers in the public schools.
BIOGRAPHICAL

LEWIS W. HERSHEY. Particularly gratifying are those biographical instances wherein men of moderate means and modest manners rise steadily to positions of influence and importance, for they illustrate the possibilities that lie in the pathway of every young man. Lewis W. Hershey, a well known baker at Hanover, has achieved for himself a name that is sterling in its character, a business that is safe and prosperous, and he thus epitomizes the best element of human society. He was born near Conewago Chapel, Adams county, on May 2, 1846, son of Daniel and Lydia (Waltman) Hershey. His father was born in Hanover in 1808, and in early life acquired the hatter's trade, which he followed for a few years, then abandoning it for farming, purchasing a tract of land near New Oxford, Adams county, where he passed his declining years. The grandfather of our subject was Christian von Hershey, who was twice married, who served as a soldier in the war of 1812, and who removed from Lancaster to York county, and was among the early settlers of the latter county. The ancestors of the Hersheys migrated from Holland, and there are today many branches in various portions of the country. The maternal grandfather of Lewis W. was John Waltman, who married Emma Hinkle, and removed from York to Adams county, settling near McSherrystown.

Lewis W. Hershey spent his youth on the farm near McSherrystown, and in that vicinity attended the public schools. Soon after he quit the schools he began an apprenticeship as a baker with F. W. Sleeder of Hanover, and after his trade was completed he continued in the service of Mr. Sleeder for twelve years. Then in 1882 Mr. Hershey opened a little bakery of his own. It was a modest mercantile establishment at the start, but under the care and nurture of the young business man it grew steadily, not only in size, but in the esteem of the trade. Many years have elapsed, and the products of the bakery have attained a high reputation. Mr. Hershey is an intelligent and practical baker, who by his energy and industry has built up an enviable trade, and holds the confidence and respect of his many patrons.

In 1871 Mr. Hershey married Louisa Creager, of Sugartown, Pa., daughter of Henry and Catherine (Will) Creager. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hershey, as follows: Estella, at home; Fannie B., wife of Harry B. Shultz; Henry Otto, a druggist of Baltimore; Arthur W., a student at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg; Herbert Creager, a resident of Washington, D. C., a student of the Bliss Electrical School; and Wallace Eugene, at home. Mr. and Mrs. Hershey are consistent members of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, of which he had been sexton for seven years. He owns besides his tasteful home and his bakery, valuable property at Hanover, and is esteemed as one of the progressive and public-spirited citizens of the city.

JACOB A. LANDIS, owner of a good farm in Springettsbury township, was born Aug. 31, 1856, in West Manchester township, son of Jacob B. and Susannah (Gross) Landis.

Christian Landis is supposed to have been born in Lancaster county. He came to York county where he followed farming, and he was one of the prominent and public-spirited men of his time. He took a great interest in military affairs, and belonged to the militia. Christian Landis was a great lover of sport, and kept a pack of hounds and a large stable of fine horses for fox hunting. He was very active in township affairs, and served for a time on the school board. Early in life he was a member of the Lutheran Church, but later returned to the faith of his fathers, that of the Mennonite Church. Both he and his second wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Bixler, lived to old age, his death occurring in his seventy-second year. They were the parents of the following children: William, deceased, was a mechanic of York; Jacob B.; Andrew is a retired mechanic of West York; George, deceased, was a mechanic of York, where he was yard boss of the Pennsylvania railroad yards; Reuben, deceased, was a mechanic of York; Rebecca, deceased, married Emanuel Beck, of West Manchester township; and Elizabeth, deceased, married Andrew Feidler, of York. Previous to his union with Elizabeth Bixler, Christian Landis had been married to a Miss Strickler, by whom he had two children: Michael, deceased, a mechanic of York; and Alexander, deceased, a farmer of West Manchester and Windsor townships.

Jacob B. Landis was born and reared in West Manchester township, receiving his education in the common schools. He followed agricultural pursuits all his life. He was a very well read man in both German and English, and had a very retentive memory, besides being a good conversationalist. He was a public-spirited man, and held the office of school director, and was supervisor for seven years in succession. In politics he was a stanch Democrat. Mr. Landis married Miss Susannah Gross, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Westafer) Gross, of Conewago township, and she met a tragic death while taking flowers to put on her husband’s grave. At the time of her death she was fifty-seven years of age. The children born to Jacob B. and Susannah Landis were: Christian and George, who both died in childhood; Sarah, deceased, who married Adam Spotts, of York; Leander, who died at the age of sixteen years; Emma, who married Jacob Miller, of Springettsbury township; Jacob A.; Aaron, who died in childhood; Susan, who married Cyrus Musser, both deceased; Oscar F., a farmer of Windsor township; Bird, a life insurance agent of West York; Luther, a farmer of West Manchester township; Edward, a farmer of Springfield township; Flora, married to Joseph Lancks, of York; Wilson, who died in childhood; and Clayton, a farmer of Springettsbury township.

Jacob A. Landis was reared on the farm and educated in the public schools of the township, subsequently attending one session of the Normal school. He remained at home until he was twenty-eight years of age, when he began farming for himself on a rented farm near Stony Brook. Here he remained for four years, and then farmed the old home farm for six years, finally purchasing it. Mr. Landis has been a resident of the old farm since 1806, and has one of the finest farms in the section. It contains 103 acres, and he has lately added thirty-three acres adjoining, all being finely tilled land, upon which he carries on general farming.

Jacob A. Landis is the representative of the Walter A. Wood Machine Co., for this section, and also the J. B. Reist Grain Separator or Cockle Killer. He was traveling agent for the Wood Company two years and local agent for eight years. Mr. Landis is a stanch Democrat, like his father, and has served on the school board for the last six years. He and his family are consistent members and liberal supporters of the Mennonite Church.

Mr. Landis married, Oct. 2, 1882, Miss Annie E. Forry, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Strickler) Forry, and they have a family of seven children: Chauncy, at home; George, at home; Arthur: William; Daisy; Laura; and Harry, deceased. Mr. Landis is very highly regarded throughout Springettsbury township, and his knowledge of agricultural matters is far beyond the average. His entire family enjoy the esteem of the community.

JOHN F. KISSINGER is a native son of York county who has attained prominence in the industrial circles of this section, and who is numbered among the reputable, progressive and highly esteemed citizens and business men of the city of York. He is senior member of the firm known as Benjamin Kissingers Sons, in which he has as his able associate and coadjutor his younger brother, Stuart H. The enterprise controlled by the firm is the manufacture of building brick, and the business was founded by Benjamin Kissinger, father of the present owners, in 1867. He carried forward the operation of the concern until 1887, when he associated with himself John F., this connection continuing until his death, which occurred in March, 1902, after which John F. gave his brother Stuart H. part interest in the business, the present firm title, as noted above, being taken. The plant is equipped with the most modern machinery and facilities for the handling of its extensive manufacturing, and the annual output reaches an aggregate of from ten to twelve millions of brick, while the working force averages from forty-five to sixty men. The products of this old and reliable concern find a ready local demand and are also shipped to Baltimore, Md., and other cities in the vicinity of York, and it is pleasing to record that the high prestige gained by the founder of the enterprise has been upheld and broadened by his sons, who are progressive and straightforward business men and loyal citizens of their native county.

John F. Kissinger was born in the borough of York Nov. 7, 1863, eldest son of Benjamin and Caroline (Adams) Kissinger, whose eight children are all living, namely: Lucinda, wife of Frank Emig, of York; Isabelle, wife of George Young, of York; Emma, wife of Eber Seyler, of York; John F.; Howard H.; Stuart H.; Savilla, wife of George Busch; and Caroline, wife of Elmer McSherry, of York.

Benjamin Kissinger was born in Spring Garden township, this county, Jan. 31, 1832, and his death occurred in the city of York March 8, 1902, when the county lost one of its useful and honored citizens and sterling business men. He was a blacksmith by trade, and followed same as a vocation for a number of years before directing his attention to the manufacture of brick, in which line of enterprise he became very successful. He was a son of William Kissinger, and the family was early founded in Pennsylvania, whither the original ancestors came from Germany in the Colonial era of our national history. Mrs. Caroline Kissinger was likewise born in Spring Garden township, in 1834, and she survives her honored husband, making her home in York.

John F. Kissinger completed the curricula of the public schools of York and early began to be actively concerned in his father's brick business, learning the same in all its details and thus being enabled to handle properly the flourishing enterprise when he assumed charge in 1887, as before noted. In addition to his identification with this business Mr. Kissinger is also vice-president of the Monarch Silk Company, in York, while he was also largely instrumental in the founding of the Littlestown Silk Mill, in the town of that name in Adams county. He is also one of the stockholders of the Carlisle Avenue Market Company, of York, and is otherwise prominent in local affairs. In a fraternal way Mr. Kissinger is affiliated with Zedetha Lodge, No. 451, F. & A. M.; Howell Chapter, No. 169, R. A. M.; Gethsemane Commandery, No. 75, Knights Templar, of which he is treasurer at the time of this writing; and has also attained the 32d degree, belonging to the Consistory at Harrisburg, while he has crossed the burning sands of the desert and thus gained the honor and distinction of being enrolled as one of the Nobles of Zembo Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Harrisburg. In politics he gives his support to the Republican party, and both he and his wife are members of Christ Church, of the Lutheran denomination.

On May 28, 1891, Mr. Kissinger was united in marriage with Miss Annie S. Vanersloot, daughter of Dr. Frederick W. Vanersloot, one of the distinguished medical practitioners of York, where Mrs. Kissinger was born and reared. Mr. and Mrs. Kissinger have seven children, namely: Myrtle S., Helen C., Mary A., Beniah H., Benjamin F., Louis J. and Frances Caroline.

WILLIAM P. SPAHR, who resides on his father's farm in Franklin township, comes from one of the oldest families of York county, and was born in Washington township in 1858.

George Spahr, great-grandfather of William P., was a native of Warrington township, and was a farmer. He married Elizabeth Shaeffer, and had these children: William, George, Henry, Peter, John, Catharine, Elizabeth, Lovie, Mary and Sarah. George married Rebecca Miles and had these children: Abraham, who married Catharine Grove; George, who married Eliza Geiselman; William, deceased; John, who married Catharine Brubaker; Henry, who married Amanda Melsheimer; Alfred, who married Mary Hull; Jeremiah and Lewis, of whom nothing definite is known. Henry, the third son of the original George Spahr, married Annie Diller, and had these children: Milton, Lizzie and Mary. Peter married Mary Cook and had these children: William, Lewis and Harry. Of John’s family nothing is known. Catharine married Christian Hursh; Elizabeth married William Lethery; Lovie married John Deter; Mary married John Brandt; and Sarah married John Paul.

William Spahr, the grandfather of William P., married Catharine Miley, and had Cornelius, who married Elizabeth Bowers, and had children, Jennie, Ella and Carrie: Henry, who married Rebecca Seidenstricker, and has children, Martin, Calvin, William and Kate, of Davidsburg; William, who married Eliza Gentzler, and had children: John C. (of Big Dam), George (of New Cumberland), Kate (wife of Xoah Bentz, of Lemoyne) and Harry (of Philadelphia); Martin, deceased; George, mentioned below; Caroline, who married Jacob Bentz, of Carroll township; Kate, who married John A. Smith, of Dillsburg; Elizabeth, who married Edward Hershey, of Bermudian.

William P. Spahr, son of George, received his education in Franklin township, and worked on the farm with his father until the age of thirty-one. He married Emma Lehmer, daughter of Christian Lehmer, of Carroll township, and two children have been born to this union, Otto Lehmer and Earl L.

William Spahr has held various township offices, having been assessor, school director and township clerk. He has been very active in church affairs, being superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Lutheran Church, in which he leads a class. Mr. Spahr is not only a representative of one of the county’s old pioneer families, but he is also a leading citizen of Franklin township, where through a life of industry, integrity and good citizenship, he has won the esteem of all who know him. No man in the county is better known for sterling qualities of character.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN CRUMLING, a representative business man and highly esteemed citizen of Hellam township, York county, was born on the old home at Crumling’s Mill, May 2, 1869. His education was received in the common school at Druch Valley, his first teacher being a Mr. Kissling, and later he attended under John Lehman, and then under James F. Kauffman, finishing his schooling at the age of seventeen years.

At an early age Mr. Crumling entered his father’s store, remaining there until his twenty-second year. In 1889 his father’s mill was destroyed by fire, and Mr. Crumling purchased the water-power from his father, and rebuilt the mill, which he started in July, 1891, and in which he has continued until the present time. A few years later he engaged in the manufacture of cigars, also dealing in leaf tobacco. Mr. Crumling’s brother, William P., now conducts his cigarmaking business, Mr. Crumling being kept busy with his other interests. He keeps a fine line of store goods and also deals in phosphates, grain, feed, flour, fertilizers, and cider presses. The old Crumling’s Mill has been wonderfully improved, the old dwelling-house having been remodeled in 1900, while a new double house has been erected.

Mr. Crumling has always been a Republican, casting his first vote for President Harrison. He has served as tax collector, holding that office under the first three-year term inaugurated in the township.

Mr. Crumling is a natural musician and since 1878 has been a member of the Hellam Cornet Band, playing the clarinet. In 1881 he was elected leader and has held that place ever since. Mr. Crumling has composed several popular marches, among them being “Our York City Post March,” which is exceedingly popular, and the “Rambler,” which was played at the Snyder Band Reunion at Highland Park, York, in August, 1904. Mr. Crumling’s accomplishments do not stop at the clarinet, he being the master of a number of instruments.

Benjamin F. Crumling was united in marriage, in Wrightsville, by Rev. L. K. Sechrist, pastor of the Lutheran Church, with Miss Anna M. Frey, of Hellam, the daughter of Capt. William Frey. To this union have been born the following children: Stewart Ross, now (1906) aged fourteen; Roland Frey, aged eleven; Morgan Ernest, aged eight; Niel Crescent, aged five; and May Elizabeth, aged two.

The ancestors of the Frey family came to this country from Germany, with a party of colonists and settled in Pennsylvania. The great-grandfather of Mrs. Crumling, George Frey, married Miss Mary Ann Sleeeyer, who was born in York. Her father was a soldier in the Hessian army, and at the close of the Revolutionary war settled in York, where he had the following children: John, who settled in East York and carried on brickmaking for many years, was the grandfather of Mrs. Dr.
Neffs (whose husband is a druggist of York), and Emanuel Lehr, of York, and died in East York; Henry, who settled in East York, was a distiller by trade, and the father of Henry Sleeeyer, the cabinetmaker of East York;
Mary Ann, the great-grandmother of Mrs.
Crumling, died at the age of ninety years; one dughter became Mrs. John Freed, of East
York and is deceased; one daughter was Mrs.
Thompson, who died in York, and there was another, whose name is not given.

George Frey was one of the following family of children: Jacob, who died in York, was a hatter by trade; John, a mason, died in East York; Daniel, a small dealer, died in York;
George was the great-grandfather of Mrs.
Crumling; Samuel, who died in East York, was the pioneer of Freystown, the town having been named after him (by trade he was a brickmaker).

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. George
Frey were as follows: Charles, who married Miss Bennett, settled in Neville, Cumberland county, was a mason by trade, and died in East York, while his wife died in Neville; George was the grandfather of Mrs. Crumling; Fredericker married a Miss Meyers, of Lancaster county, and he died in York, where he had been a horsedealer; Enos married his first cousin, Lydia Sleeeyer, the daughter of John Sleeeyer, and died in York, where he had been a ma-cchinist; Catherine, Mrs. Israel Fishel, died in York; Mary. Mrs. John Spangler, died in Spring Garden township; and Leah, who married Charles Spangler, brother of John Spangler, still survives in East York, at the age of eighty-five years.

George Frey, the grandfather of Mrs.
Crumling was born in Spring Garden township, in that part known as Freystown, which is now a part of York, in 1810. He was educated like the boys of his day, and grew up to be an honored and respected citizen. He mar-rried Mary Spangler, who died eleven years years after marriage, and Mr. Frey remained true to her memory, never marrying again.
He died at the age of seventy-five years. He was a Democrat, but was never an office-seeker.
In religion he was a Lutheran. George Frey was the father of the following children: William, the father of Mrs. Crumling; Eliza, Mrs.
Isaac Runk, who died in East York; John, who married Mary Monaghan, settled in Minneapolis, Minn., and is now a traveling salesman
(he was a member of the 87th Regiment Band, playing the alto horn); Charles, who married a Miss Meyers, of York, both being deceased; and Lewis, a stonemason, who lived and married in Philadelphia, where he died.
He was sergeant of a company in the 87th Regiment during the Civil war, and was captured and in prison nine months.

Capt. William Frey, the father of Mrs.
Crumling, was born Feb. 7, 1834, in Freytown, on the site of the "New Wilmer Hotel." He attended school at different places, and his mother dying when he was nine years old young Frey was put out among the farmers to work his own way in the world. Out of a year he received three months' schooling, while the other nine months he spent at hard farm labor, receiving but $4 per month. Mr.
Frey, then seventeen years of age, went to the trade of shoemaker, learning that trade with Daniel Stone, of York, with whom he remained three years. This trade he followed five years, but after his return from the war he engaged in butchering, at which he continued for ten years. Capt. Frey then bought a home and farm in Spring Garden township, which he operated for twenty-five years, in April, 1901, locating in Hellam, where he has since resided. The Captain is a stanch Democrat in politics, and cast his first vote for Buchanan. In 1876 he was elected treasurer of York county, and served three years in that position. He served as school director in Spring Garden township, and when the township was divided served as school director four years in Springetsbury township, and also served as tax collector there one year.

Children as follows were born to Capt.
Frey and his wife: William B., of York, mar-rried May Channell; Flora M. is the widow of John Rouse, of York; Ferdinand C. married Miss Lydia Ehrhart, of York county; Emma
E. is Mrs. William Christine, of York; George T., who married Bessie Leily, lives in this county; Katie died at the age of ten years;
Anna M. is the wife of our subject; Robert E., who married Miss Amanda Myers, lives in Hellam township; Mollie E. is Mrs. Franklin Fisher, of York; Hattie M. died at the age of eleven years; Harry S., of Hellam, married Elizabeth Fisher.

JACOB STONEBACK POSEY, who makes his home in Lower Chanceford township, York county, was born April 9, 1856, in the township named, on the farm now occupied by his brother, William J. Posey. He is a son of Micajah and Catherine (Stoneback) Posey.

Mr. Posey commenced to attend the public schools at the age of six years and had finished his schooling when he was sixteen years old. He began teaching at the age of seventeen, his first school being in Grahamville, Chanceford township, which he taught for one term. After this he continued in that profession for twenty-seven years, acquiring quite a reputation as an educator in York county, and teaching the following schools: River Hill, Shaub's, Center and Slab, all in Lower Chanceford township. Mr. Posey was married Aug. 1, 1875, in Lower Chanceford township by the Rev. John McKinley, pastor of the M. E. Church, to Mary E. McSherry, who was born in Lower Chanceford township, July 23, 1859. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Posey settled on the Isaac Boyd farm, which Mr. Posey purchased from Isaac N. Boyd. The farm consists of 114 acres, and was formerly a part of the old Kilgore farm, being situated one mile west of McCalls Ferry. There the couple have resided ever since. Mr. Posey is a member of the McKendree M. E. Church at Airville, having united with that body in 1886, has been one of its trustees for many years, and has been class leader and Sunday-school superintendent. He has been very active in church work and has assisted materially in the erection of the new church. In politics Mr. Posey is a stanch Republican, and his first presidential vote was cast for James A. Garfield. In 1894 Mr. Posey was elected justice of the peace, and was re-elected in 1904; in 1896 he was nominated on the Republican ticket for the Legislature, but after making a hard fight was defeated.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Posey are as follows: (1) Katie B., born March 5, 1876, married Jessie V. Trout, son of George V. Trout, of Chanceford township, where they reside. She was educated in the public schools and the York Normal School and taught two terms at Castle Fin, Lower Chanceford township, and one term at Jamison school. (2) Walter W., born Oct. 8, 1877, attended the public schools and the York Normal School, and taught two terms at Guinston, after which he took a course at Wades Business College, Lancaster city, from which he was graduated, and accepted a situation as stenographer in Thompson’s Iron Works, Philadelphia, later being promoted to the managership of the works; he married Miss Maggie Skelton, of Airville, daughter of Elwood S. Skelton, an undertaker, and they now live in York. (3) Amanda Mary, born Feb. 4, 1879, resides at home. (4) Lizzie B., born Nov. 28, 1886, married John Montgomery, of Lower Chanceford township, and they reside on the Grove farm. (5) Margaret Ann, born Feb. 8, 1883, married William Reheard, of Chanceford township. (6) Ada May, born Dec. 5, 1885, was educated in the public schools, the York Normal school and Millersville State Normal school, taught two terms in the public schools of Lower Chanceford township, then took a course in stenography at the Philadelphia Business college, from which she graduated; she then accepted a position as stenographer in Philadelphia. (7) Emma Laura, born Sept. 6, 1887, resides at home. (8) John B., born March 12, 1891, died at the age of five years. (9) David R. was born Sept. 21, 1892. (10) Jacob S., born May 18, 1894, died at the age of two and one-half years. (11) Mordecai A. was born Sept. 26, 1897. (12) Mary Elizabeth was born April 4, 1901.

Mrs. Posey’s ancestors came from Ireland, and settled in York and Adams counties. Her father was the first settler in Airville and the town was originally named after him, McSherrystown. Mr. McSherry there kept a hotel for about forty years. He was twice married. By his first wife, Elizabeth Burkholer, he had children: Mary, who married William Stokes; Barbara; Montia; Sally, who married Benjamin Fulks, deceased; Susan, now Mrs. Harrison; Jackson, living in Missouri; and Frederick, deceased. Mr. McSherry’s second marriage was to Catherine (Bair) Keeports, widow of David Keeports, and sister of John Bair. Mrs. Posey is the only child of Mr. McSherry’s second marriage. Mr. Posey is a citizen who has the best interests of the community at heart, and is a man who enjoys the esteem of all who know him.

GEORGE W. BOWMAN, of the firm of G. W. Bowman & Co., manufacturers of cigars, Hanover, conducts a large and prosperous business, which for many years his father carried on before him. The family is an old one, the grandfather of George W., having been Charles Bowman, who was born in Newark, N. J., and became one of the early settlers of York. George W. Bowman was born in Hanover, Pa., Feb. 8, 1859, the son of Charles and Dorothy (Grimm) Bowman. The father was a Philadelphian, born Feb. 20, 1831, and died in Hanover in 1898. His wife, Dorothy, was born in Germany about 1835, and died in 1902. They were the parents of five children, namely: George W., Charles E., Benjamin F., Sarah M. and Fannie C., all residents of Hanover.

George W. Bowman was educated in the public schools of Hanover. When his education was completed he learned from his father the cigar making trade and remained with him until the latter's death in 1898. George W. succeeded to the business, which has since been conducted under the firm name of G. W. Bowman & Co. He is a practical cigar-maker, and, combining his knowledge with his excellent business judgment, has built up a large and profitable trade, employing about twenty-five people at his factory, which is located at No. 12 Pleasant street, Hanover.

In 1891 Mr. Bowman married Annie E. Yantis of Hanover, daughter of William and Margaret Yantis, her mother still surviving. To George W. and Annie E. Bowman have been born two children, Helen D. and Robert Willet. Mr. and Mrs. Bowman are active members of Emanuel Reformed Church. He is a member of Patmos Lodge, No. 348, A. F. & A. M.; also a member of Gettysburg Chapter and Gettysburg Commandery, K. T.; Bomi Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Baltimore. He is also a member of the B. P. O. E. of Hanover.

JOHN F. ROHRBAUGH, contractor and builder and dealer in building supplies, has for more than a score of years been one of the active business men of Hanover, giving to construction work that energy and persistent application, without which notable success is impossible. He is a native of York county, and was born in Penn township, Feb. 28, 1858, son of Amos and Fanny (Forry) Rohrbaugh, and grandson of Henry Rohrbaugh, who married a Miss Runkel, of German descent. The maternal grandparents of John F. Rohrbaugh were John and Nancy Forry, who lived in York county and had a family of thirteen children. Amos Rohrbaugh, the father of John F., was born in York county about 1832. He owned a farm of 120 acres of thoroughly cultivated land, with good buildings, and there he lived, a life-long and prosperous farmer. He died in 1893. In politics he was a Whig and later a Republican. To Amos and Fanny (Forry) Rohrbaugh were born eight children, as follows: John F.; Mary, wife of William Flickinger; Henry F., a farmer; Fannie, wife of George Unger, a farmer; Amanda, wife of Henry Baker, a farmer; Catherine, wife of William Mummert; Sarah, wife of Pius Renoll; and Barbara, wife of Michael Musser, of Silver Spring, Lancaster county.

John F. Rohrbaugh was educated in the public schools of New Baltimore. At the age of sixteen years he left school, and until he attained his majority remained on his father's farm. At twenty-one he married Lucy Miller, daughter of John and Susanah (Mouse) Miller. He began housekeeping on a farm and a year later removed to the Miller homestead. Soon afterward he commenced the business of contracting and selling builders' supplies, in which line he has since been engaged most successfully. The business which he conducts is quite extensive and in its various departments he employs about forty men. Mr. Rohrbaugh is also one of the principal stockholders of the American Foundry and Machine Co. He is the owner of two farms, one of which is a part of his father's homestead and the other a farm of 120 acres in Adams county. Both farms are in a thorough state of cultivation and possess good buildings. In politics Mr. Rohrbaugh is a Republican. He is a member of Patmos Lodge, No. 348, A. F. & A. M. He has been thrice married, four children being born to his first union—William (deceased), Walter, Miriam and Fanny. His second wife was Alice Heistand, who died without issue. Mr. Rohrbaugh's third and present wife was Emma Wiley, of East Berlin, Pa. To them have been born Elizabeth, Catherine, and one that died in infancy. Mr. Rohrbaugh is a member of the German Baptist Church, of which he is a regular attendant.

ERVIN G. SHEDRICK, one of the younger business men of Newberry township, York county, now filling the position of superintendent of the York Haven Paper Bag Factory, was born April 22, 1871, at Middlebury, Vt., son of James and Mary Jane (Hicken) Shedrick.

Nothing is definitely known of Mr. Shedrick's grandparents, who were both deceased at the time of his birth. James Shedrick, his father, received a common school education, and he followed axe and scythe making at Ballston, N. Y., where he died. He married Mary Jane Hicken, and the following children were born to this union: Alice, who married William Cornell, superintendent of E. Douglas's axe plant in Massachusetts; Frank, a painter and paper-hanger at Ballston, N. Y.; Jessie, married to Alfred Young and living in Ballston, N. Y.; Frederick, a painter and paper-hanger with his brother Frank; Ervin G., our subject; Cora, married to R. B. James, a conductor on the New York Central railroad; and seven children who are deceased.

Ervin G. Shedrick attended the public schools of New York State until about seventeen years of age, when he learned the business of making paper bags of George West, of Ballston, remaining there ten years, the last six years of which he was foreman of the factory. He then went to New York City, where he was engaged as superintendent of the J. J. McClusty bag factory, which position he filled for five years, at that time removing to York Haven, where on April 21, 1901, his services were secured as superintendent of the paper bag factory. Mr. Shedrick has since held that position, and is a very skillful mechanic, and has charge of from forty to fifty hands.

Mr. Shedrick married Miss Annie Cobaugh, daughter of Jacob Cobaugh, and one child has been born to them, Helen, born Oct. 4, 1904. Both he and his wife are devout members of the Methodist Church. Mr. Shedrick is a Republican, but has never aspired to public office.

JAMES E. GREEN, Jr., cashier of the New Freedom National Bank, of New Freedom, Shrewsbury township, York county, was born Nov. 22, 1871, in Ireland, son of James E. and Margaret N. Green.

Roger Green, grandfather of our subject, was a physician.

James E. Green is a lawyer by profession, born and reared in Ireland. He came to the United States in 1873, and for many years he has been one of the leading citizens of Baltimore, Md., being auditor of the Roland Park Company of that city, and having served as chief clerk and cashier of the clerk's office of Baltimore county, and as clerk of the county commissioners. To himself and wife have been born the following children: James E.; May S., who married John H. Gill, an attorney of Baltimore; George L.; Jannett F.; and Stephen R.

James E. Green, Jr., received his early education in the public schools of Baltimore county, supplementing this with a term at the Baltimore and Ohio Technical school, of Baltimore, and one year in the Law Department of the University of Maryland. He then became clerk in the First National Bank of Towson, Md., where he remained twelve years, coming to New Freedom, York Co., Pa., in April, 1903. He assisted in organizing the New Freedom National Bank, becoming one of its stockholders. Mr. Green was chosen cashier and has since served very acceptably in that position. The bank is in a very prosperous condition, having a capital stock of $50,000, and the directors are: W. D. Bahn, G. F. Miller, Dr. W. C. Stick, George F. Gantz, J. F. Sechrist, George E. Ruhl, J. F. Zeller, J. A. Gillen, H. Krout, W. H. Whcrita, F. B. Dickmyer and M. Hoshall. In 1904 was built a handsome new brick and stone bank building, thirty by fifty feet, one-story high, which is an ornament to the city.

Mr. Green possesses many of the business attributes which have made his esteemed father so successful, and he has a pleasing manner, which wins both business and personal friends. In religious matters he is connected with the Episcopal Church.

J. NELSON DUNNICK, M. D., of Stewartstown, Pa., was born July 6, 1872, in Hopewell township, York county, a son of Charles M. and Elizabeth (Leib) Dunnick. The Dunnick family can be traced to George Dunnick, the paternal grandfather, who was a prominent farmer in York county, where he died leaving
Dr. Dunnick was married, in October, 1898, to Mattie C. Hoke, daughter of Samuel Hoke, of Frederick county, Md., and they have three children: Dana D., Estella C. and Inez E. Dr. Dunnick is a consistent member of the M. E. Church and, until so closely occupied with the demands of his profession, was very active in its work, serving as a teacher in the Sunday-school and for several years as president of the Zion Epworth League, being the first to hold that office after its organization. By his professional skill and his good citizenship, his frank and friendly personality, the Doctor has won and retained numerous admirers and friends.

CHARLES S. BAIR, a prominent and enterprising young merchant of Laurel, Chanceford township, who for the past few years has also been engaged in cigar manufacturing at Laurel and Felton, was born in Chanceford township, near Conrad's Cross Roads, Feb. 13, 1850, son of Peter and Salome (Shenberger) Bair.

Isaac Bair, the grandfather of Charles S., was a gunsmith of Lancaster city, and located in York county, being a lock-tender at Long Level for many years.

Peter Bair, son of Isaac, was born at that place, and is now living retired at Felton. He is a veteran of the Civil war, having served for nine months. He married Salome Shenberger, sister of John K. Shenberger (deceased), ex-treasurer of York county. Mr. and Mrs. Bair are members of the Evangelical Church. The following children were born to them: Charlotte married D. W. Detweiler, of Long Level; Francis, of York, married Ocky Moody; Isaac, of Center county, who received a common school education, and is now a minister in the U. E. Church, married Jane Campbell; Amanda married Thomas Harris of Wrightsville; Oscar, a farmer of Sunnyburn, married Lizzie Snyder; Ellmer, a farmer of Muddy Creek Forks, married Miss Rebecca Markel; Hallie married James Adair, of Red Lion; Charles S.; and Harris died young.

Charles S. Bair attended the public schools until nine years of age, when his father removed to Felton, where Mr. Bair was a student at the Science Hill school until the age of sixteen years. He worked on the farm until twenty-one, and then learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed three years. Later he was a clerk in the store of Grove & Uffelman at Brogueville Station, where he remained three years, and then was similarly employed in the store of J. D. Hake at Felton. After working one year Mr. Bair bought Mr. Hake out and continued the business at Felton for three years, at which time he removed to Laurel, where he has since remained as a successful and respected merchant. Mr. Bair is a self-made man, and has taken his place among the first business men of Laurel, winning his way entirely through his own efforts. He has the confidence of the community and has the reputation of being a man of honor and integrity.

On July 16, 1895, Mr. Bair married Minnie Glassic, of Hopewell township, daughter of John and Agnes (Snyder) Glassic, and one child, Charles Wilber, has been born to this union. Mr. Bair is an esteemed member of the U. Evangelical Church of Felton. In politics he is connected with the Republican party, but has never sought public preferment. Fraternally he has affiliated himself with Shrewsbury Lodge, No. 423, F. & A. M., of which he is a popular member.

J. ROY SHOWALTER, a director of the First National Bank of Delta, and secretary and treasurer and one of the organizers of the Chanceford Telephone Company, comes of an old Pennsylvania family, and was born Nov. 28, 1873, in Drumore township, Lancaster county. Mr. Showalter's paternal ancestors came from Germany, and his great-great-great-grandfather, in company with two brothers, William and Mark, settled in Lancaster county and about Drumore township. The family has since separated, some of its members going to Kentucky, and some to Indiana and to other States. Mr. Showalter's great-great-grandfather, his great-grandfather and his grandfather were all named Joseph, and the last named was a farmer of Drumore township. He retired to Oxford, Chester county, where he died in 1889. His wife, whose maiden name was Morgan, came of Revolutionary stock.

Joseph Showalter, the father of J. Roy, was born on the home place in Drumore township, Lancaster county, in 1841, and at the age of seventeen years (up to which time he had worked on the farm) he enlisted in Company I, 124th P. V. I., and later joined the cavalry service as a private, but was promoted to the rank of sergeant. He participated in the battles at Petersburg, Spottsylvania and Appomattox Court House, besides many minor engagements, and when honorably discharged had a war record of which any man might be proud. After the war he returned home and resumed farming, which he carried on for some years, but for the last thirty years he has been engaged in the grain and lumber business at Oxford, Chester county. He is a Republican in politics, while in his religious belief he is a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Showalter married Miss Evanna McDonald, whose ancestor, Major Benjamin McDonald, was an officer in Washington's army. Mrs. Showalter is still living. She is the mother of the following children: Charles, a graduate of the University of Michigan, who is a judge of the Criminal court at Parkersburg, W. Va.; Clarence, in business with his father; J. Roy; Mabel, married to T. Scott Woods, of Leaman Place, Lancaster county; and Helen G., living at home.

J. Roy Showalter was three years old when his parents located in Oxford, Chester county, and there he attended the public schools until fifteen years of age. He entered Lawrenceville (N. J.) Preparatory School, from which he was graduated with the class of 1894, and then attended Princeton University, after which he was a student at the University of Michigan. He studied law with his brother and then entered the law department of Columbia University, Washington, D. C., but failing health compelled him to abandon his studies; consequently, he settled on one of his father's farms in Oxford, where he remained for two years. In 1900 Mr. Showalter located in Lower Chanceford township, where he has remained ever since.

On Oct. 17, 1900, Mr. Showalter married Marian W. Ross, of Lower Chanceford township, daughter of William G. and Julia (McConkey) Ross, and one child has blessed this union, Anna McDonald. Mr. Showalter is highly esteemed in Lower Chanceford township, and has hosts of friends who are pleased with his social prominence and his business success. He is a member of the Chanceford Presbyterian Church, in whose work he is very active, and is treasurer of the Sunday-school. In politics he is a stanch Republican.
EDWARD D. JACOBS, of the firm of Jacobs Bros., of Manchester borough, was born April 3, 1871, son of Henry W. and Mary (Bentzel) Jacobs.

Henry Jacobs, the paternal grandfather, was born Sept. 28, 1820, a native of York county, where the family has long been resident. He followed farming all his active life, in Manchester township. He married a Miss Ervin, of York county, and they had children as follows : Henry W.; James, who died in Conewago township; William, residing near Bull's Church in that township; and Julian, who married Samuel Delph, and resides in the same locality. Henry Jacobs died in Manchester township Aug. 28, 1854, aged thirty-three years, ten months and twenty-nine days, and is buried in Union cemetery. His widow afterward married Hamilton , and her death occurred in Conewago township, her remains being interred at Quirkels Church.

Henry W. Jacobs, father of Edward D., was born in 1844, on the homestead, situated on the Susquehanna river, in Manchester township, and received a common school education. He married Mary Bentzel, daughter of David Bentzel, proprietor of the mill of that name. They settled on a farm in the southwestern part of the borough and there Mr. Jacobs gave his whole attention to the management of his place for thirty years, after which he retired from active life, and is now residing in Dover township, near Emig's Mill. His wife died in 1888, and is buried at Strayer's Church, Dover township. The children born to them were: Daniel H., who married a Miss Gordon, and lives in Manchester borough; Edward D.; Katie, Mrs. Abraham Loucks, of York; Ella, who married Elmer Bahn, a son of the undertaker of the same name at Zion's View; Laura and Alice, in York; Fannie, who died in 1880, at the age of fifteen, and is buried at Strayer's Church; Alvin, at York, unmarried; and Nan- nie and Carrie, at York.

Edward D. Jacobs was born near Bentzel's Mill, and until he was seventeen years old attended the Aughenbaugh school. He then took a position with a New York firm, selling harvesting machines; after three years with them he worked one year for an Ohio firm, and then three years for C. A. Deisinger, of Wrightsville. In 1903 he settled in Manchester, and with his brother went into his present business, under the firm name of Jacobs Bros. They built a fine mill and have a splendid trade. Mr. Jacobs also owns two handsome dwellings in the borough, and is counted one of the progressive and well-to-do business men in the town.

In 1901 Mr. Jacobs was married to Miss Emma Weidman, daughter of Jacob and Margaret Weidman, of Springetsbury township. A son, Roy W., was born to them in 1902. Mrs. Jacobs is a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Jacobs is a Democrat, but has never taken an active part in party work.

A. F. KOLLER is situated at Seven Valley Springfield township, where he is engaged in the furniture and undertaking business. Mr. Koller was born Dec. 20, 1874, in Springetsbury township, son of William Koller and grandson of John Koller.

A. F. Koller received his education in the township schools, which he attended until seventeen years of age, when he learned the cabinet-making trade with George W. Geiple, at Glen Rock. They then went to Seven Valley, and engaged in the furniture and undertaking business, the firm being known as Geiple & Koller, and as such it remained until 1899, when Mr. Koller bought his partner's interest, he has since continued the business alone. He has a large store on Church street, and does an extensive business in the surrounding country. On Oct. 1, 1905, he opened a large furniture, carpet and undertaking establishment at Jacobs, Pa., which is being successfully conducted by Joseph Kessler.

In 1895 Mr. Koller married Annie Bubb, daughter of William and Mary (Smith) Bubb, of Seven Valley borough, and two children have been born to this union: Elda and Claude. Mr. Koller is a Democrat, and was president of the borough council for six years. At present he is judge of election. He is a member of the Reformed Church. Fraternally he associates with Moss Rose Council, No. 202, Jr. O. U. A. M., and has filled all of the chairs; No. 447, K. of P.; Washington Camp, No. 349, P. O. S. of A.; and on Nov. 13, 1905, he became a charter member of Conclave No. 962, Improved Order of Heptasophs, and in all of these as in his business relations Mr. Koller is very popular.

DR. JAMES L. YAGLE, who is engaged in the practice of his profession at New Free-

Catherine, thoroughly Henry 490 order
dom, York county, was born April 3, 1870, son of George N. and Martha (Smith) Yagle. Both his paternal and maternal grandfathers were natives of Germany, and the latter was for many years a burgomaster there. George N. Yagle, the father, came to this country when eighteen years of age and settled in Baltimore, Md., and there met and married Martha Smith. He there engaged in shoe-making for ten years, removing to Shrewsbury and later to Winterstown, York county, where he settled permanently. The nine children born to George N. and Martha Yagle were: Jacob; John; Henry; Catherine, who married Charles Fishel; Mary, Mrs. John Kinkle; Dr. George, who is a practicing physician at Red Lion; Dr. James; Charles, and Franklin, a student at the Medical College of Baltimore.

Dr. Yagle was primarily educated in the public schools of Winterstown, and then entered York Academy and later Millerville State Normal school. He read medicine with his brother, Dr. George Yagle, and was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons April 29, 1902, establishing himself at New Freedom during the same year. His practice in that village has grown encouragingly, as his ability has become recognized, while his pleasing personal characteristics have won him numerous friends.

Dr. Yagle's professional membership is with the York County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. He has been appointed medical examiner for the Knights of Pythias, the Security Life and Annuity Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and the Prudential Insurance Co., being affiliated fraternally with the order first named. Dr. Yagle was married June 11, 1903, to Cora V. Bortner, daughter of Jacob F. Bortner, of Winterstown. Dr. Yagle has no specialties, although he took a special course in diseases of children. He is thoroughly posted in every line of his profession, a close student, a careful practitioner and a steady-handed surgeon.

WILLIAM H. GROTHE. The city of York has gained wide prestige and reputation as a manufacturing and commercial center, and here are found represented many industrial enterprises of scope and importance, and of so varied nature that both skilled and unskilled labor is in demand and the general prosperity of the community thus enhanced and solidified. Among the noteworthy industries of the county and city is that of which Mr. Grothe is at the head. He is engaged in the manufacture of building brick on a large scale, having a finely equipped plant at the corner of Pine and Liberty streets, known as the Steam Brick Manufactory. The products of the concern are of the pressed variety, and have gained emphatic approval on the score of superior excellence, so that the proprietor not only controls a large local trade, but also a business which extends to divers sections of the territory tributary to York. The works have an output capacity of 35,000 brick per day, and employment is given to an average corps of about fifty men. The plant is equipped with the latest improved machinery and accessories, including large kilns of the most scientific construction, with ample drying yards and sheds.

Mr. Grothe is a thoroughly practical man in his chosen field of endeavor, having learned the brickmaking business under the direction of his father, who was long identified with this line of industry in York county, and the upbuilding of the prosperous enterprise noted reflects credit upon William H. Grothe both as an executive and as a public-spirited citizen, while he is honored and esteemed as one of the representative business men of the younger generation in York. He was born in that city Oct. 14, 1867, son of Henry W. and Wilhelmina (Heitkamp) Grothe, and it may be said that the father, who died May 23, 1905, had long been numbered among the sterling business men of this county, where the greater portion of his life had been passed. William H. Grothe availed himself of the advantages afforded by the excellent public schools of his native city, and when fifteen years of age entered the Eaton & Burnett Business College, in Baltimore, where he took a thorough commercial course, being graduated as a member of the class of 1884. Thereafter he was an assistant to his father, who was engaged in the manufacture of brick, and thus continued until 1890, when he founded his present successful enterprise, to which he has since given his personal supervision and management. In politics he accords a stanch allegiance to the Democratic party, and while he takes a loyal interest in local affairs of a public nature he has never been ambitious for official preferment, though in 1893 he was elected to represent the Tenth ward on the city board of education. He and his wife are zealous members of St. John's German Lutheran Church.

On Nov. 5, 1889, Mr. Grothe was united in marriage with Miss Antonetta Sonneman, daughter of Augustus Sonneman, a well-known citizen and business man of York. The four children of this union are: Charlotte; Henry, Wilhelmina and Ruth.

ROBERT GRANT PINKERTON, known throughout York county for the good work he has accomplished as a minister of the Gospel, has been pastor of the Guinston U. P. Church since August, 1892.

The ancestors of Mr. Pinkerton removed from Scotland to Ireland, locating in County Antrim, in an old castle, which still stands on the coast of Ireland. This castle belonged to the Montgomery family, and one of the daughters of this house married one of the members of the Pinkerton family, the castle and estate passing into the possession of the latter family.

The great-great-grandfather of our subject came to America from Ireland in 1773, and settled near Philadelphia, Pa., where he engaged in farming. He participated in the Revolutionary war, and was also a defender of Baltimore in 1812-14. When Mr. Pinkerton's great-grandfather was but fourteen years of age he took clothes and food to his father, who was on the fighting line. Great-grandfather Pinkerton died in or near Philadelphia at an advanced age.

Joseph Pinkerton, the grandfather of our subject, was born in New London, Chester county, Jan. 9, 1798, and there grew to manhood. He then made a journey overland, with his widowed mother, by way of wagon to Warren, Trumbull Co., Ohio. Here he took up land and engaged in farming, in connection with which he followed the cooperator's trade. On March 28, 1827, he married Violet Scott, who was born Dec. 15, 1804, in that section, daughter of James Scott. Mr. Pinkerton remained in Ohio until in 1850, when he removed to Viola, Mercer Co., Ill. His eldest son had made the journey some time before, and in this year, with two four-horse wagons, one of which was driven by the father of our subject, then a lad of sixteen years, he made the journey through the swamps and over couleuoy roads, arriving in October, 1850, having been two months on the journey. There Joseph Pinkerton and his sons took up tracts of land, and there he died Feb. 17, 1885, his widow surviving until Oct. 1, 1896, when she passed away. When in Ohio, this couple were Presbyterians, but as no church of that denomination was then to be found in their section they became members of the M. E. Church. In politics Mr. Pinkerton was a Whig, later becoming a Republican, and he was greatly interested in political matters. The children of Joseph Pinkerton and his wife were: William Montgomery, who married in 1850, in Illinois, Eliza Carnahan, served three years in the Civil war, in which he was made a sergeant, and died in Illinois in 1904; James Scott, born May 28, 1830, married July 7, 1859, Catherine Swartz, and died in Illinois in 1903; Hannah L., born Sept. 26, 1831, married June 11, 1857, Joseph Carnahan, and removed in 1878 to Kansas with her husband, where she died; John Colby; Jane Gibson, born Oct. 12, 1835, married Dec. 29, 1853, Richard Cabeen, and both are living near Aledo, Ills.; Mary Elizabeth, born July 25, 1837, married, April 27, 1859, Robert Cabeen, who died, his widow residing at Seaton, Ill., until her death in 1905; George W., born Jan. 3, 1839, served in the Civil war with his brother, being a member of the 83d Ill. V. I., and participating in the battles of Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Pittsburg Landing, and the siege of Vicksburg; Robert Marion, born March 23, 1841, married, Dec. 24, 1863, Caroline Breckenridge, who died in Indiana, and he married again and now lives in Missouri: Alice L., born Sept. 3, 1843, married Jan. 1, 1861, Hiram Dunlap, emigrated to California, where she now resides a widow; Tizlah, born Feb. 23, 1845, married, Jan. 22, 1866, Newton Dunlap, a member of the 83d Ill. V. I., who lost a leg in battle, and he died after removing to Lyons, Ark., she then returning to her home in Viola, Ill.; Margaretta Rachel, born April 30, 1847, died July 6, 1860; Amanda Violet, born Sept. 16, 1849, married Feb. 26, 1868, Otis Morey, and they reside in Kansas.

John Colby Pinkerton, the father of our subject, was born Sept. 28, 1833, near Warren, Ohio. He received a scant education, attending school but two years. In 1850 he went with the family to Illinois, and broke prairie for his father with five yoke of oxen.
When he became of age he acquired eighty acres of land, which he cultivated. He remained at home looking after the farms of his father and brothers, while they were away in the war. On March 17, 1859, he was married to Miss Mary J. Jackson, of West Middlesex, Mercer Co., Pa. Mrs. Pinkerton's oldest sister, Sarah, married John Carnahan, and went to Mercer Co., Ill., in 1848. This couple lived near the Pinkertons, and when on the visit to her sister, the future Mrs. Pinkerton met Mr. Pinkerton.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Pinkerton settled on his eighty-acre tract, where they remained until 1878, in which year he sold his farm and purchased 120 acres near Viola, Ill., where he lived until his death, March 25, 1905. The mother died June 23, 1895. This good couple joined the Associate Reformed Congregation founded in 1855. In Pennsylvania Mrs. Pinkerton had been a Presbyterian, and, not caring to join the Methodists, persuaded Mr. Pinkerton to join the United Presbyterian Church. In politics Mr. Pinkerton was a Republican in his early manhood, later becoming a Prohibitionist. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Pinkerton were: Herbert W., born Feb. 24, 1860, died at the age of five years; Robert Grant; William J., born July 22, 1868, resides in Chicago; John S., born Jan. 18, 1874, married, Dec. 29, 1897, Laura B. Beard, and lives on a part of the home farm; and Thomas R., born March 22, 1878, married, June 15, 1904, Lillian Gilland, and resides on the home farm.

Robert Grank Pinkerton was born on the homestead near Viola, Ill., Nov. 27, 1863, and attended the district schools of his home locality until 1880. In the fall of that year he went to Aledo Academy, Aledo, Mercer Co., Ill., where for three years he studied under Professor J. R. Wylie, now of Denver, Colo. Mr. Pinkerton graduated from the latter institution in the class of 1883, and then taught school for one year. In the fall of 1884 he entered Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill., and took a classical course, graduating in June, 1889. He then entered Xenia Theological Seminary of the U. P. Church, Xenia, Ohio, and spent there three years, graduating in 1892. He had been licensed to preach the Gospel in 1891 by the Rock Island (Ill.) Presbyterian Church. He made his first sermon in the home church at Viola, Ill., from the text, John 3:3-5. His first charge was the Guiniston U. P. Church in Lower Chanceford township, York Co., Pa., he preaching there the first Sabbath in May, 1892. This congregation our subject took charge of in August, 1892, and he was ordained and installed as pastor, September 27th, of the same year. The congregation of which he is pastor was founded in the fall of 1754. Rev. James Clarkson was the first pastor. Mr. Pinkerton is the sixth pastor, his predecessor being Rev. Samuel Jamison, D. D.

On Oct. 12, 1892, Mr. Pinkerton was married, by the Rev. Shively, to Miss May Belle Pierson, of Israel township, Preble Co., Ohio, daughter of Stephen and Esther (Elliott) Pierson. Mr. Pinkerton first met his wife in the halls of Xenia Seminary, while she was there on a visit to a friend. Stephen Pierson was born March 12, 1823, at Cape May, N. J., and died in Preble Co., Ohio, June 4, 1892. He was a carriage builder by trade, and was a soldier in the Civil war, and a descendant of Erickson, the gun manufacturer. Mrs. Pierson died Dec. 23, 1881.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Pinkerton are as follows: Mary Esther, born Aug. 11, 1893; and John Cooper, born July 26, 1896. In his political faith Mr. Pinkerton is a staunch Prohibitionist.

HENRY M. STOKES. Teaching and public service have frequently been stepping stones to permanent and prosperous business careers, a fact made evident in the life of Henry M. Stokes, manager of the Hanover (Pa.) Creamery Company. Mr. Stokes was born near Millersville, Lancaster county, Pa., Sept. 16, 1862, the son of Jacob R. and Mary (Herman) Stokes. The father died in 1901 aged sixty-two years; the mother is still living, on the old homestead near Marticville, Lancaster county.

Henry M. received a liberal education. He at first attended the district schools in the vicinity of his home and later entered the Millersville State Normal school, where he prepared for teaching. During the nine years that followed the completion of his education Mr. Stokes was engaged in that profession. He then secured a position in the government mail service, and was employed on the route between New York and Pittsburg. Believing that business offered a more permanent and better future for the young man, Mr. Stokes resigned his government position to become confidential man for Reist, Xissley & Co., extensively engaged in the creamery business at Mt. Joy. Thence Mr. Stokes gained a complete knowledge of the creamery business and had supervision over an extensive plant. This position he resigned in 1899 to take charge of the Hanover Creamery Co.'s plant at Hanover, of which firm he later became head. The creamery is one of the largest and best equipped in that part of the State, having been established in 1890. It is operated by steam power and equipped with the latest and most modern machinery. Because of these improved appliances and the efficient management, the product of the company—butter—is of a superior quality, which finds a ready market. The plant is located near the Pennsylvania & Western Maryland railroad, and its milk supply is received from the farms in the vicinity of Hanover. Much other business is done by the company, which operates eight other creameries, located at Littlestown, Pa., Sells Station, Pa., Tavern (two), Taneytown, Md., Wentz, Md., New Oxford, Pa., and Bittinger, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stokes married April 15, 1884, Fannie A., daughter of William and Anna (Gish) Buller, of Florin, Pa. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Stokes, Leroy B. and Henry M., both being students at the Hanover public schools. Guy, the second child, died in infancy. Mr. Stokes is a member of Patmos Lodge, No. 348, A. F. & A. M.; Gettysburg Chapter, R. A. M.; Gettysburg Commandery, Knights Templar; and also of the order of Elks. In politics he is a Republican. In 1903 he was elected a member of the borough council for the First ward, and soon after he was elected president of the council, a position which he now holds. Mr. Stokes has made many friends and is held in the highest esteem. In his business in the community he has shown himself prudent, honest and energetic, and in social life an affable and intelligent gentleman.

REV. ALBERT M. HEILMAN, A. M., pastor of the Lutheran Church at Shrewsbury, York county, was born Feb. 27, 1867, in Paradise township, that county, a son of Peter W. and Deliah (Maul) Heilman. Peter Heilman, the paternal grandfather, was born in Lebanon county, Pa., where he followed the vocation of farming. He married a Miss Wolf and they had children: Peter W.; Elias; Daniel; Julia, who married Peter Grimm. The maternal grandfather was Solomon Maul, a farmer of York county, and he married a member of the Menges family. They had the following children: Deliah; Savilla, who married Joshua Reynolds; Sarah, wife of Andrew Rudisill; Sophia, Mrs. Valentine Haar; Susan, who married Theophilus Haar; and Rolandus. On the paternal side the family belonged to the Reformed Church, and on the maternal, to the Lutheran faith. Peter W. Heilman, the father, was a farmer and a carpenter and lived in York county, owning land in Paradise township. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He married Deliah Maul and they had these children: Rev. Howard M., D. D.; John M.; Emma, who married C. E. Little; Sarah, who married J. Q. A. Mummert; Charles; A. M. and Peter M.

Rev. Albert M. Heilman attended first the public schools of his native township and then pursued a special course at New Oxford and Gettysburg, following which, in 1883-85, he taught school. In 1885 he entered the Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, and in 1889 was graduated there with high honors, being the salutatorian of his class. He then entered the Gettysburg Theological Seminary and was graduated from that institution in 1892, although he had been licensed to preach in 1891.

Rev. Mr. Heilman was first installed at the Dallastown Church, in the spring of 1892, where he remained until the fall of 1894, when he assumed the Shrewsbury charge. This is a very important field and no indifferent preacher or pastor, if the synod contains such, would be acceptable there. The membership of his church includes educated, prominent and pious people to the number of 450, and his Sunday school has 300 members. Much of the prevailing interest is directly attributable to the personal work of Mr. Heilman, whose irreproachable character and Christian fellowship have brought him the confidence, esteem and affection of his people.

In 1892 Mr. Heilman was married to Anna C. Wecker, daughter of Frederick Wecker, of York, and they have two intelligent, manly boys—Albert H. M. and Paul M.

Mr. Heilman has been chairman of the York County Missionary Society for the past three years and in 1893 was selected as delegate to the general synod convention which met at Baltimore. Both as pastor and preacher Mr. Heilman is very popular. He has a fine delivery and earnest manner and his presentation of the truth is interesting as well as convincing. He has done a great work in this field, and it is the fervent hope of not only the members of his immediate pastorate, but of all who know him, that he may be permitted to labor many years and live to see even more abundant fruits.

ROBERT A. HILDEBRAND, M. D. It cannot be other than gratifying to note that in York county are to be found many citizens, representative in their respective fields of endeavor, who have been here resident from the time of their birth and who stand as scions of substantial pioneer stock. Of this worthy contingent is Dr. Hildebrand, who is one of the skilled physicians and surgeons of his native county, and one of its popular and public-spirited young men, being established in an excellent practice in the attractive village of Glen Rock.

Dr. Hildebrand was born in the town of Loganville, York county, March 19, 1872, a son of Deitrich and Maria (Leader) Hildebrand, both of whom were likewise born and reared in that county. For many years they have been numbered among the highly esteemed citizens of Loganville, where the father has been engaged at his trade, that of a shoemaker, during the major portion of his active business career. For the past thirty years he has also been an incumbent of the office of justice of the peace, in which he has served with signal ability and fidelity, commanding the respect and confidence of all with whom he has had dealings. He has ever been a stalwart Republican in his political proclivities and has been an active worker in its local ranks, while both he and his wife are prominent and valued members of the Reformed Church in their home town and for a number of years past he has been a member of the official board of the church. His children are three in number, namely: Dr. Charles G., who is a representative physician of the county, being engaged in practice in Loganville; Anna, who is the wife of Moses M. Snyder, a well-known musician of that place; and Dr. Robert A. Caspar Hildebrand, the grandfather of the Doctor, was the founder of the family in York county, where he located when a young man. He was of German lineage and by trade a shoemaker. Both he and his wife, whose maiden name was Nuss and who was born and reared in York county, died in Loganville, where they had maintained their home for many years.

Dr. Robert A. Hildebrand passed his boyhood days in his native town, in whose public schools he secured his preliminary educational discipline, making such an effective use of the opportunities there offered that, after graduating from the Loganville High school, he became eligible for pedagogic honors, and successfully engaged in teaching in the district schools of the county for a period of five years. In 1888 he entered the State Normal school at Millersville, where he remained as a student for two years. Having, in the meantime, determined to adopt the medical profession as his vocation in life, he began his course of technical reading under the preceptorship of his brother, at Loganville, continuing his studies under these conditions until the autumn of 1892, when he was matriculated at the College of Physicians & Surgeons, Baltimore, Md., where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated with his professional degree as a member of the class of 1895. Shortly after his graduation the Doctor located in Glen Rock, where he has since been established in practice and where he has made a distinctive success and a high reputation in his chosen sphere of endeavor. For six years he was associated in practice with Dr. George P. Yost, and since that partnership was dissolved he has conducted his practice individually, receiving a representative support and having made a record which fully establishes his prestige and success in his chosen profession. He is a member of the York County Medical Society, and also of the Knights of Pythias and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, while he gives his allegiance to the Republican party in matters political.

On the 23rd of June, 1896, Dr. Hildebrand was united in marriage to Lucy Stermer, who was born and reared in York county, being a daughter of John Stermer, who is a representative citizen of Hametown, York county, where he is engaged in agricultural pursuits. Dr. and Mrs. Hildebrand have one child—a son, Claire S., who was born on the 13th of June, 1898.
HON. JOHN F. EVANS, representative from the Upper district of York county, and a man of prominence and influence in Franklin township, was born Aug. 15, 1878, son of John W. and Elizabeth (Kinter) Evans.

Joseph Evans, grandfather of John F., was a wagonmaker and farmer. He had five children: John W., George, Joseph, Margaret and Mary. They were Lutherans in religious belief, and he was a Whig in politics.

John W. Evans was born in Franklin township, received a common school education, and learned the wagonmaker's trade with his father, following this occupation for several years. He then purchased a farm which he is now successfully operating. He married Elizabeth Kinter, daughter of Michael Kinter, and to this union five children have been born: Emma, who married George Berkleimeier; Amanda, who married George Bowman; Sadie, married to Monroe Wiley; John F., twin of Sadie; and Harry M., a teacher. Mr. Evans enlisted in June, 1862, for service in the Civil war. He is a member of the U. B. Church. In politics he votes the Republican ticket, and he has held the offices of assessor, school director, auditor and township treasurer. For twenty-two years he taught school, becoming very well known as an educator.

John F. Evans was educated in the district schools, and at the age of eighteen years commenced teaching school. He has followed that as a profession up to the present time, and is well and favorably known. In 1904 he was elected on the Republican ticket, by a large majority, representative of the northern part of York county, being the first Republican ever elected to that position. Mr. Evans is not married.

WALTER D. BAHN, ex-president of the First National Bank of New Freedom, has spent his entire life in York county. He was born Jan. 20, 1876, son of Milton W. and Ellen S. (Emig) Bahn. David Bahn, his grandfather, was a York county farmer and the father of four children: Milton W., father of Walter D.; Elnora, who married David Strickler; Caroline, wife of William Dietz, and one who died in infancy. Milton W. Bahn was a merchant and railroad agent (for many years stationed at New Freedom), and was also general manager of the Stewartstown branch of the Northern Central Railroad. He was also postmaster of New Freedom for several years and served as chief burgess. He now resides in York where he lives a retired life. The children born to him were: Lilly, deceased; Corrinne E., deceased; Arthur and Walter D.

Walter D. Bahn attended the public schools of New Freedom, after which he attended the academy at Shrewsbury, the high school at York and the business college at Baltimore, graduating from the last named on April 5, 1895. For one year he clerked at New Freedom in the Northern Central Railroad office, in April, 1896, embarking in the general merchandise business with a Mr. Gore, under the firm name of Gore & Bahn. This partnership was dissolved April 1, 1900, since which time Mr. Bahn has engaged in the milling, flour and feed business, in which he has been eminently successful.

The First National Bank of New Freedom was organized April 11, 1903, with a capital stock of $50,000, and Mr. Bahn was chosen its head, enjoying the distinction of being the youngest bank president in the State. Mr. Bahn also has other interests, being a stockholder and director of the White Hall Milling Company, of White Hall, Md. Fraternally he is connected with the Shrewsbury Lodge of A. F. & A. M., Knights of Pythias, Red Men and Junior Order of American Mechanics. Mr. Bahn attends the Reformed Church of York, of which he is a liberal supporter. He has been very successful and has gained a position of highest importance in his line. While never seeking office he has always taken a public spirited interest in the welfare of the town, and has generously supported every movement which his judgment has led him to regard as beneficial. He is universally esteemed and occupies a high social position.

Mr. Bahn has an interesting family record on his mother's side, his grandfather being John Emig, who was a merchant and farmer residing at Emigsville. His children were: William H.; Edward K.; J. Albert; Louisa, who married John Bollinger; Emma J., who married John Ruby; Ellen, the mother of Walter D. Bahn; Mary J.; Belle: Flora A., who married A. K. Dice; and Alice, the wife of Frank Shenberger.

RALPH A. HARDING, M. D., a leading physician of Lewisberry, Newberry township York county, was born in Washington, D. C. Sept. 12, 1872, son of Josiah F. and Annie (Watt) Harding. His grandfather was a native of the State of Maine and a farmer by occupation. He served in the Legislature with James G. Blaine.

Josiah F. Harding, born in 1843 in Maine, was a soldier in the Civil war. At the time of his death, which occurred in 1873, he was holding a government position at Washington, D. C., where his widow still resides. He married Annie Watt, daughter of James Watt, and the children born to them were: Frank E., who resides in Washington, D. C.; James, who died at the age of eleven months; and Ralph A., our subject.

Ralph A. Harding was born Sept. 12, 1872. He attended the public schools of his native place, then went to the high school, and graduated from Columbia University in 1895, with high honors. He commenced practice in Washington, D. C., locating later at Port Clinton, Schuylkill county, where he followed his profession until 1898, when he removed to York. Remaining there until September, 1903, he then removed to Lewisberry, succeeding J. C. Stern, whom he bought out. His practice is a large one, and is increasing steadily as his skill is being recognized.

In 1896 Dr. Harding married Jean B. Forster, daughter of Thomas W. Forster, of Clinton county. Dr. Harding, on leaving York, resigned the position of secretary of the York County Medical Society, which he had held for some time. In politics the Doctor is a Republican, but he has never aspired to public office. Both in the profession and in social life he stands very high.

WILLIAM N. MORNINGSTAR, a well known and highly respected citizen of North York borough, superintendent of the Prospect Hill cemetery, which position has descended to him from his grandfather and father, was born in 1867, at North York borough, son of Michael and Mary (Hess) Morningstar.

Peter Morningstar, the great-grandfather of William N., was a native of Germany, and coming to America with his family landed in New York City, where he remained a short time. He later removed to Longstown, York Co., Pa., and from there removed to Mifflin county, where he followed farming all his life.

Michael Morningstar, the grandfather of our subject, came to America with his father at the age of six years. He followed farming and day laboring until 1852, when he took charge of Prospect Hill cemetery as superintendent, holding that position for twenty-eight years, until he passed away, in 1881, at the age of sixty-six years. Michael Morningstar married Elizabeth Warner, who survived him until 1888, and they are both buried in the Prospect Hill cemetery. The following named children were born to this marriage: Louisa married Franklin Ettinger; Jeremiah is deceased; John died in infancy; Michael is the father of William N.; Sallie married the late David E. Horn, and resides in York.

Michael Morningstar, the father of William N., received his education in York, and worked for his father until, at the latter's death, he himself became superintendent. Mr. Morningstar held that position for eighteen years, and is still engaged at the cemetery. In 1866 Mr. Morningstar married Mary Hess, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Ermine) Hess, and children were born to them as follows: William N. is the subject of this sketch; Annie married Charles Zeigler, and resides in Baltimore; Bertha married Samuel Horn, and resides in North York; Sallie married William H. Baldwin, Jr., and resides in York; Elmer married Alma Omer, and they live in York; Edward married a Miss Quickell, and lives in York; Lucy, Harry and Robert are all residing at York. The family are members of the Duke Street M. E. Church.

Mr. Morningstar is a stanch Republican in political sympathy. In 1861 he enlisted, at York, for a term of three years, in Company K, 87th Reg., Pa. Vols., and served three years and twenty-one days, during which time he took part in many engagements, among the most important being the battle of the Wilderness and the operations at Petersburg. For bravery in battle he was made corporal, and as such was mustered out Sept. 13, 1864.

William N. Morningstar attended the schools of Manchester township until thirteen years of age and then worked two years at the carpenter's trade. Later engaging with his father at the cemetery, he was, on April 1, 1890, appointed superintendent to succeed his father. The first burial after William N. Morningstar's appointment occurred on April 3, 1890, when Peter Fisher was interred. The cemetery is a large one, there being 15,550 persons buried there (1905), but though the duties of superintendent are many Mr. Morningstar has attended to them with satisfaction to the people of the community and with credit to himself.

On April 12, 1864, Mr. Morningstar married Prudence E. Diehl, of North York. They are members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church of North York. Fraternally Mr. Morningstar is a popular member of York Castle, No. 34, A. O. K. of M. C. of York, and is also a member of the I. O. O. F. at York. In political sympathy he is a Republican, and he is a school director of North York borough. He is a man highly respected everywhere for his many sterling traits of character.

DAVID W. CRIDER is the veteran publisher of York, whose marriage certificates are used all over the country and even in foreign lands. He is also a Civil war veteran, and enjoys the unique distinction of being recorded in the War Department at Washington, D. C., as killed in the battle of Antietam; and at the same time drawing a pension as one of the disabled survivors of a regiment mustered out at the close of the war. Although left for dead on the field of Antietam and reported among the killed, he "lived to fight another day," and saw service in all the engagements of the Army of the Potomac.

Mr. Crider is of German descent, his early ancestors in this country being prominent in the section where they settled. His grandfather, Christian Crider, was a farmer of Franklin county, and his father, Jacob Crider, also a farmer, moved from that county to Cumberland county where he died in 1888, at the age of seventy-eight. Jacob Crider married Catherine Mower, daughter of John Mower, a farmer of Cumberland county. Their children were as follows: Henry M., who died in October, 1903, at the age of sixty-four; John M., a farmer and cattle raiser of Oregon, Mo., who died Feb. 16, 1906, at the age of seventy-one; Sarah Sabina, wife of Joseph McCune, a farmer of Longford, Kans.: and David W.

David W. Crider was born May 22, 1842, near Chambersburg, at the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains, a few miles south of the birthplace of James Buchanan, at one time President of the United States, while several miles northeast was the cottage in which Thomas Scott, the great railroad manager, first saw the light of day. He attended the Lebanon Valley College, but left school before graduation, and engaged in the publishing business with the firm of Kephart, Crider & Brother. For five years he traveled for this house, and in 1870, on the retirement of Mr. Kephart, the firm became Crider & Brother. In 1876 David W. Crider bought out the interest of his brother, Henry M., but continued the business under the same name, as he does at present. The main business of the concern is the publishing of lithographical marriage certificates, and the output carries the name of York from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and to more distant lands than are reached by any other industry of the place. One clergyman of San Francisco has used 1,000 of the Crider & Brother certificates since 1805.

The military career of Mr. Crider is one of the most remarkable in the annals of the Civil war. He enlisted as a private for nine months' service in Company E, 130th P. V. I. This regiment was engaged in the fiercest part of the fight at Antietam, and Mr. Crider, wounded in the neck and leg, was left for dead on the battle field. A friend dragged him off the field, and he recovered sufficiently to enlist again, although he was officially dead, according to the War Department records, which have never been corrected in this particular. Mr. Crider re-enlisted in Company F, 207th P. V. I., became quarter-master sergeant, and was honorably discharged at the close of the war, after having participated in all the engagements of the Army of the Potomac. He was present at Lee's surrender at Appomattox Court House. He secured a pension on account of disabilities received during these campaigns.

On Dec. 24, 1870, Mr. Crider married Sarah Catherine Spangler, daughter of Nathaniel Spangler, a farmer of Thomasville, York county. The children of this marriage are as follows: Horace W., a graduate of Lebanon Valley College, in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Co., at Homestadt, Pa.; Charles E., a graduate of the York high school, employed as a traveling salesman; Flora Irene, a graduate of the York high school, and wife of John S. Klein, an electrician, in St. Louis, Mo.; David X., a graduate of the York high school, and of the Scranton Correspondence School, and now secretary of the York School Board; Sadie C., at home; and Lillie M., a teacher in the public schools of York, both the latter being graduates of the York high school.

The publishing business of Mr. Crider, interfered with by the Civil war, was resumed at the close of that struggle, and has since been carried on with uninterrupted success. Just before the death of President McKinley, Mr. Crider was named for the position of postmaster at York, endorsed by all the banks of the city, but did not receive the appointment. He belongs to Gen. Seward Post, No. 37, G. A. R., of York, and has held every office in the gift of the Post, and since 1899 has been the inspector-at-large for York county, giving much time to the interest of this noble Order. He is a member of the Royal Arch, and of the Knights of Malta. For many years he was president of the board of trustees of Lebanon Valley College, where he was the first student to apply for admission from York. He is a member of the First United Brethren Church of York, where for years he has served as trustee. In politics he is a Republican, and zealous in his devotion to his party’s interests, as he is in whatever he undertakes.

WILLIAM H. WAGNER, M. D., who for many years has been a prominent physician of York, is a native of Pennsylvania, and is one of the well-known and highly respected members of the profession in York county, where he has lived most of his life. Dr. Wagner is descended from German ancestors, the family originally coming from Hessen-Cassel, Germany. George Wagner, the grandfather of our subject, was a gunsmith by trade and married Miss Berkheimer. His son Joseph was born near Abbottstown, in 1824, conducted a meat market for a number of years, and he died in 1884. Joseph Wagner married Levina Lauer, born in West Manchester township in 1828, daughter of Abraham Lauer, who followed farming all his life. Her death occurred in 1866.

Dr. William H. Wagner was born Dec. 26, 1853, near Dover, in Dover township, York county, and received his primary education in the district schools, supplementing this later with a course at the York County Academy. He then began teaching school, continuing in this occupation for seven years in Dover township. For some time he read medicine with Dr. Jacob R. Spangler of York and graduated from the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, with the class of 1881. In 1881 he commenced practicing in York, where he has since devoted his entire time to professional work, building up a large and lucrative practice. In 1904 Dr. Wagner built a substantial brick office building, which he has fitted out with all the modern improvements and appliances of the profession.

On Feb. 15, 1883, Dr. Wagner was married to Miss Martha J. Stewart, of Philadelphia, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Stuart) Stewart, both of whom are of Scotch-Irish extraction. One son has been born to this union.—Neven S., born May 10, 1884.

Dr. Wagner is a member of the York County Medical Society, Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. For two years he was a member of the city council. Fraternally he is connected with the B. P. O. Elks, Fraternal Order of Eagles, Knights of the Golden Eagle, Knights of Pythias, and with York Conclave, No. 124, Improved Order of Heptasophs. His fine residence is located at No. 306 North Newberry street.

JOSEPH MYERS, of Washington township, is active both as a successful business man and in the administration of the public affairs of his locality. He belongs to a family numerously and creditably represented in York county, and he has endeavored to worthy sustain a worthy name.

Christian Myers, his grandfather, was a native of York county, and was only a young man when he settled in Washington township, where he carried on farming and milling, building the well-known Iron Rock Mill, also known as Myers’ Mill. It was burned down Sept. 13, 1904. He lived to the advanced age of eighty. Christian Myers married Catherine Stauffer, and they became the parents of children as follows: Michael, Abraham, David, Christian, Rebecca (who first married Mr. Asper and second Joseph Gochenauer) and Lydia (wife of Daniel Brown). The parents were both members of the Mennonite Church, and they are buried at the Mennonite meeting-house in Dover township. David Myers, father of Joseph, was born July 30, 1817, in Washington township, and grew to manhood there, receiving his education in the local public schools. Like his father he followed farming and milling and was a prosperous business man, retiring fifteen years before his death, which occurred when he was eighty-two years old. He, too, was a Menonite in religious faith, and he assisted in the building of the meeting-house in Dover township, at which he is buried. He married Maria Gochenauer, who was born March 3, 1823, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Leathery) Gochenauer, who were born Aug. 2, 1799, and July 17, 1802, respectively. A family of twelve children blessed the union of David and Maria (Gochenauer) Myers, namely: Mary, born March 23, 1841, is deceased. Sarah, born March 25, 1843, is deceased. Susan, born March 6, 1845, was the wife of Jonas Asper, and is deceased. Rebecca, born July 3, 1847, was the wife of Peter J. Detter, and is deceased. Catherine, born Sept. 30, 1849, died unmarried. Eliza, born July 29, 1851, died young. Joseph, born Jan. 5, 1853, is mentioned farther on. Lavina, born March 7, 1855, is the deceased wife of Amos Chronister. Lydia, born Dec. 4, 1857, is the wife of John Renicker, and lives in Wellsville, Pa. Jonas, born April 26, 1860, died in 1901. Dala, born Jan. 26, 1862, is the wife of Lewis Weaver, and they reside at Weigelstown, in Dover township, York county. Maria, born Jan. 1, 1865, is the wife of George Wise, assessor of Washington township. Joseph Myers was born Jan. 5, 1853, in Washington township, and was brought up there, receiving his education in the schools of the locality, which he attended until he was nineteen years old. Meantime he became familiar with farm work while assisting his father, and spent one summer in Lancaster county, where he frequently visits even to this day. He was but twenty when he married and settled on his father's farm at Kralltown, where he remained for two years, thence going to Warrington township. After a five years' residence there he returned to the old home in Washington township, upon which he continued until he came to his present place in 1889. He bought it in 1902, having ninety-seven acres of land, which he cultivates practically and scientifically, the results demonstrating the wisdom of his methods. The place formerly belonged to his father, but to the present occupant must be given credit for the fine barn and other outbuildings which now adorn the property. Everything is kept up with an eye for thrift and neatness which attracts the attention of the most casual observer. Mr. Myers is energetic and fully alive to the needs of the community, and having a progressive spirit he is willing to do his share to bring about beneficial changes and needed reforms. His executive ability is as evident in public service as it has been in the management of his private affairs. He has been township supervisor, was school director four years, and has represented his township as delegate and committeeman. He is a prominent member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church at Red Run, served eight years as deacon, and is now a trustee, taking the same interest in church affairs that he displays in all his relations with his fellowmen. He is a staunch Democrat in political opinion. As an all-around good citizen, one who can be depended upon to support a good cause with words and work, Mr. Myers has few equals in his neighborhood. Mr. Myers was united in marriage with Emma E. Wise, daughter of Harry and Elizabeth (Thoman) Wise, and a member of an old York county family. They are the parents of fourteen children, of whom we have the following record: Charles F., born Jan. 17, 1874, died April 16, 1884, and is buried at Red Run Church. Mazzie M., born in March, 1875, died in March, 1875. David E., born March 15, 1876, died March 29, 1876. Harry J., born June 12, 1877, is a truck farmer in Washington township; he married Minnie Hoke. John C., born Aug. 14, 1878, died Aug. 30, 1878. Gertrude B., born Sept. 18, 1879, is the wife of Jacob F. Nickey, of West York, Pa., high constable of the borough and a mechanic in the Martin Carriage Works. Emma E., born Nov. 19, 1880, is the wife of Jacob H. Deardorff, and lives at No. 519 North Hartley street, in York. Joseph C., born May 14, 1882, died Dec. 22, 1882. Daisy A., born Jan. 9, 1884, is unmarried and at home. William C., born March 20, 1885, died Nov. 14, 1885. Chester A., born Aug. 16, 1886, died Dec. 7, 1891. Allen E., born Oct. 28, 1888, is at home. Bruce R., born April 19, 1891, is at home. Melvin Floy, born Dec. 9, 1893, was killed July 15, 1902, while riding a horse home from Kralltown, the horse falling on him.
great-great-grandfather, emigrated from Germany, landed in Baltimore in 1745, and soon afterward settled in Dover township, in York county. He died in the year 1783. John Michael Koch, his son, enlisted as a soldier during the early part of the Revolution and in 1777 entered the cavalry service with Gen. Armand, when that French patriot came to York to recruit his legion. He participated with this command in several hard fought battles, remaining in service until the end of the war. John Michael Koch became an influential citizen of York, and lived until 1849. The sword which he carried in the cavalry service during the Revolution was presented by his descendants to the Historical Society of York County.

Dr. Francis Koch, son of John Michael Koch, and grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was a leading physician in Hellam township and later in the borough of York for nearly half a century. He had his office for many years on the west side of North Beaver street, near Market. Later in life he moved to the southeast corner of Market and Beaver, where he died in the year 1861. In this building for nearly half a century his son, William Koch, carried on the jewelry business, and for a time had associated with him his brother Edwin Koch, who was major of the 5th Maryland Regiment in the Civil war. Dr. Koch was married to Nancy, the daughter of Abram Hiestand, of Hellam township, and had three sons and three daughters.

Dr. Francis A. H. Koch, the eldest son, and father of William Edward Koch, was born in York Aug. 31, 1830. Early in life he attended the York County Academy for several years, and he completed his medical education at the University of Maryland. His father practiced medicine in Hellam, North Codorus and York. During the last fifteen years of his life he was one of the leading physicians of Hanover, where he served several terms as chief burgess and school director, and died there in the year 1892.

Dr. Koch (our subject's father) married Anna Maria, daughter of Abraham Dehuff, founder of the jewelry establishment later owned by his grandson, William Edward Koch. They had seven children: Francis who died in infancy; Virginia, wife of Wilbur C. Lieb, of Hanover, Pa.; Annie Elizabeth, wife of John B. King, of York; Helen Grace, deceased wife of John W. Mullen, a paper manufacturer of St. Joseph, Mich.; Francis Henry, a hardware merchant of Minneapolis, Minn.; Sue, living with her brother; and William Edward.

The Dehuff family settled early in Lancaster county, where Abraham Dehuff, father of Abraham Dehuff the jeweler, had his home. The first Abraham Dehuff, who emigrated to this country from France, married Elizabeth Sitler, whose father, Matthias Sitler, was the owner of large tracts of land in Baltimore, Md. Some of this land was leased by Mr. Sitler for terms of ninety-nine years, and thus originated the system of "ground rents" still in vogue in Baltimore. Family tradition has it that Matthias Sitler presented to George Washington $75,000 in cash during the Revolutionary war, and, furthermore, that the Father of his Country held the child Elizabeth Sitler in his arms at York. Elizabeth Dehuff died at Harrisburg in 1834.

Abraham Dehuff (2) founded the jewelry store on West Market street in 1830, and lived in the old historic house until 1895, when he died at the age of ninety-eight. He was more than an ordinary jeweler or mechanic—his skill amounted to genius. At the State Exposition held at Harrisburg in 1855 he was awarded a bronze medal (now in the possession of the subject of this sketch) for a miniature watch, the case of which he had worked out of a three-cent piece, and the works of which were perfect and kept perfect time. Three of these tiny watches were completed by Mr. Dehuff and the incomplete portions of a fourth are among the most cherished possessions of his grandson. One of the completed watches was purchased by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, now King Edward VII, when on a visit to this country; another was presented to President Buchanan, and is now in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington; and the third was stolen from Mr. Dehuff.

His wife, Maria Lynch, of Winchester, Va., died in 1887, and is interred in the family burying lot, Prospect Hill cemetery.

William Edward Koch, born in Hanover, Pa., Jan. 29, 1876, was educated in the schools of that borough. He was apprenticed to the jewelry trade with William Bondenhamer, of Hanover, and remained there four years. Next coming to York, on March 27, 1895, he purchased from his uncle, Henry K. Dehuff, the jewelry business established by his grandfather, Abraham Dehuff, on West Market street, and in addition he started business, on Nov. 15, 1904, at the southeast corner of Market and Beaver streets, where at the present time he owns one of the finest and most centrally located stores in the city, as well as an old established stand formerly occupied by William Koch.

Mr. Koch is one of the best-known business men of York, where he is noted for his progressive ideas and his liberality. He is a prominent man in fraternal circles, and in 1900 was the youngest thirty-second degree Mason in Pennsylvania. He is a member of Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451, Howell Chapter, No. 199, York Commandery, K. T., No. 21, Harrisburg Consistory, thirty-second degree, and Zembo Temple, and also belongs to York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. E. He was one of the conspicuous figures in the great Masonic conclave held in York in May, 1904. In politics Mr. Koch is a Republican. He is a member of the Emanuel Reformed Church at Hanover. At present unmarried, with his business ability he has one of the brightest futures before him for a successful career a young man in the prime of life can wish.

J. D. HEIGES, D. D. S., was born in September, 1833, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Mumper) Heiges. Dr. Heiges assisted his father in cabinet making and chair manufacturing at Dillsburg until 1854, when he began the study of dentistry under Dr. Benny, of Mechanicsburg, Cumberland Co., Pa. He remained with Dr. Benny for several years, and then located in York with Dr. Thomas Tyrrell, with whom he remained until the fall of 1858, when he entered the Baltimore Dental College. After attending the first sessions he assumed the practice of dentistry, and subsequently returned to the college for the sessions of 1862-63, graduating in the fall of the last named year. He then returned to York, where he has since been engaged in practice with great success.

Dr. Heiges was married in September, 1867, to Annie C. Smith, daughter of William and Mary E. (Boyer) Smith, of York. The eight children born of this marriage were as follows: W. Smith, a druggist of York, and honored by his party with the Democratic nomination for mayor of York in the spring campaign of 1905; T. Tyrrell, civil engineer, and superintendent of sewer construction, York; J. Charles, a machinist of the York Manufacturing Company; Philip Boyer, who died of typhoid fever in 1868, aged twenty-two years; Horace M., engaged in line construction between Pleasantville and Atlantic City, N. J., for a time, and now in a similar business at Hollywood, Cal.; Jay Clifford, whose term in the U. S. Navy expired May 27, 1894; Aimee E., wife of William A. Sponsler, manager of a traction company at Middletown, N. Y.; and Robert Raymond, decorator at P. Wiest's Sons' department store.

Dr. Heiges is a member of St. John's Episcopal Church, in which he has been vestryman for many years. He is identified with the York County Historical Society, and is one of the most prominent members of the Masonic fraternity in York, enjoying the distinction of being the only charter member now connected with York Commandery, there being a period of thirteen years between him and the next oldest past commander. He also belongs to the Harris Dental Society. Enjoying a dental practice that keeps his hands and thoughts engaged almost all of his waking hours, Dr. Heiges is of such a genial nature that professional cares sit lightly upon him; and he is never so busy as not to have a pleasant smile and encouraging word for all who call upon him.

EDWARD E. JOHNSON is senior member of the firm of Edward E. Johnson & Co., engaged in the grain, flour, feed and straw business at Nos. 12 to 27 North Pennsylvania street, York, Pa. In this important enterprise he is associated with his cousin, David H., and they are successors of the firm of Bender & Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was born near Kabletown, Jefferson county, W. Va., Dec. 23, 1860, son of James M. and Catherine (Able) Johnson, both of whom were also natives of West Virginia, which had not been segregated from the Old Dominion until after the birth of Edward E., who was born in the period of political unrest leading up to the great Civil war.

James M. Johnson was a prominent and influential business man and highly honored citizen of Jefferson county, where he was interested in several industrial enterprises of importance, while he also owned a considerable amount of valuable property in Kabletown. He was a stalwart Democrat in his political proclivities and both he and his wife held membership in the M. E. Church South. The latter was born in Hampshire county, West Va., and she was summoned into eternal rest in 1898, while her husband passed away in 1902, honored as one of the sterling citizens of his State and county and standing high as a man of affairs.

Edward E. Johnson was educated in the public schools of his home county, and later continued his studies in Kable academy, in Charlestown, W. Va., where he completed a preparatory collegiate course. He determined, however, to identify himself with practical business affairs, and to complete his education under the direction of that wisest of all headmasters, experience. His father was a prominent manufacturer of woolen wear in Kabletown, and Edward entered the mills, finally taking charge of the weaving department and retaining this position about eighteen months. In 1880 he came to York and entered the employ of Michael B. Spahr, in the wholesale boot and shoe business, remaining thus engaged for four years, and having practically had charge of the establishment. He then engaged in the sale of agricultural implements, in which line he became associated with Jacob W. and John C. Spangler, under the firm name of Spangler Bros. & Johnson. This connection continued until 1886, when Mr. Johnson engaged in the dairy business, conducting it for the ensuing seven years. In 1893 he formed a partnership with Martin Bender, under the title of Martin Bender & Co., thus continuing for about nine years, when he purchased Mr. Bender’s interests and formed a partnership with his cousin, David H., under the title noted in the opening paragraph of this article, the nature of the business being also indicated in that connection. The partners are straightforward, reliable and progressive business men, and have founded a most prosperous enterprise, which is both wholesale and retail in character, an especially large business being controlled in the handling of flour and grain. In politics Mr. Johnson is an uncompromising Democrat, thus holding to the ancestral faith, and he takes a lively and intelligent interest in the party cause. In 1902 Mr. Johnson was one of those prominently concerned in the promoting and organizing of the Merchants’ Association of York, having been its treasurer since its inception. He has an attractive modern residence at No. 430 West Philadelphia street, and both he and his wife are held in high regard in social circles, while both are valued members of the Heidelberg Reformed Church.

In January, 1883, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Johnson to Miss Laura C. Hedges, who was born and reared in Frederick county, Md., and they have two daughters, Edith, who is a graduate of the York High School, and who is now the wife of Prof. A. Lee Shillenberger, a teacher in that institution; and Grace E., who is a student in the city schools.

FISCHER FAMILY. Gotlieb Fischer was born about the year 1740, of German parentage. At the present time the date of his advent in York county is not definitely known, nor is the exact time of the arrival of the family in America. Later researches, however, which are now in progress, afford promise of tracing his ancestry back several generations. The earliest record of him at this time is found in a deed bearing the date of May 23, 1767, conveying to him a tract of 142 3/4 acres of land in Newberry township, York county, purchased from John Herr, of Strasburg, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania Province. This land was situated along the Big Conewago creek. Here he resided until he secured from David Davis, Nov. 12, 1783, 242 acres of land bearing patent date Feb. 16, 1737, signed by John Penn. This second tract was located in Fishing Creek Valley (now Fairview township), three and one-half miles north of Goldsboro. By trade he was a miller, which occupation he pursued, in connection with that of farming, until his removal to Fishing Creek Valley, thereafter devoting his time wholly to cultivating his land.

Gotlieb Fischer married Ursula, daughter of Peter Hoffstot, a resident of the same valley. Seven children were the result of this union, as follows: David (I) married Barbara Roop; Catherine married Joseph Petrow; Barbara married Peter Roop; Hester married Christopher Kerr; Christina married John Roop; Samuel married Barbara Sutton; and Gotlieb, Jr., married Abigail Oren.

Gotlieb Fischer’s death occurred in 1792. It was customary in those days for landholders to have private burying-grounds on their farms, for themselves and for the relatives of the family. A small plot to be devoted to this purpose had been provided by him a short distance from his dwelling, at the crossroads. Here sleep three generations of the family, himself, his son David and David’s son Jacob. His wife survived him about forty years, when she met a violent death, being viciously gored by an animal.

At the death of Gotlieb Fischer, Joseph Fetrow and Conrad Gram were appointed administrators of his estate. His eldest son David took the farm at the appraisement, the transfer being confirmed by the court June 29, 1796.

In 1798 David Fischer (I) married Barbara, daughter of Jacob Roop, of Swatara township, Dauphin county, whose ancestry dates back prior to 1700. About 1800 he owned more than 800 acres of land in the locality where he lived. The house and barn which he built on the homestead farm in 1814-16 are still standing, and although nearly a century has elapsed since their construction they are in an excellent state of preservation and are monuments to his memory. From 1800 to 1825 much of his time was engaged in the business of “wagoning,” as it was termed in those days. It was prior to the era of railroads and canals, and as there was no means of transportation the farmer was compelled to haul his surplus grain and produce to the Philadelphia and Baltimore markets, the round trip usually occupying ten days. David Fischer’s team was reputed to have been the finest on the road.

David Fischer (I) was the father of eleven children, a number of whom lived to advanced life. They were estimable people, highly respected for their honesty, their keen sense of justice, and their industry, and they wielded a strong influence throughout the community. The names of his children and the names of those of whom they married were as follows.

(1) Jacob, born Nov. 24, 1799, married Mary Mathias, and they had children: Barbara, Susan, Sarah, Nancy, Mary, Lizzie, Melinda and Jeremiah, the last named to-day owning and living upon the homestead farm which has been handed down to successive generations and has been in the family name for 122 years.

(2) John, born Feb. 20, 1801, married Sarah Kirk, and had children: Samuel, Mary, Sarah, Clara, John K., William, Zacharias and Lucinda.

(3) David M. Fisher (II), son of David (I) and Barbara (Roop) Fischer (it was during this generation that the letter "c" was omitted), was born Jan. 23, 1803, in Fishing Creek Valley. During his youth he divided his time between the common schools and the farm. Later he learned the trade of shoemaking, with a firm in Harrisburg, Pa., returning to the valley at the expiration of his apprenticeship to begin business for himself. On Feb. 15, 1827, he married Mary Miller, daughter of Henry Miller, of the same county and township. After his marriage he bought the farm on which the Salem (Stone) Church was subsequently erected, and began farming in connection with his business of shoemaking. He was instrumental in the building of this church and contributed the land on which it stands. From its very inception to the close of his four score years he was one of its most active members and strongest supporters, holding official positions for many years. The children of David M. (II) and Mary (Miller) Fisher were:

(I) Martin M., born Feb. 18, 1829, married Leah Spangler, and had children: Wesley, David, Mary, Elmer, Morris, Charles, Curtin, Grant, Martin, Jr., and Daisy.

(II) Lydia, born June 17, 1830, married Napoleon Keister, and had children: Matilda, Julius, Mary, Margaret and Jacob.

(III) William Miller Fisher, son of David M. (II) and Mary (Miller) Fisher, was born Nov. 8, 1831, in Fishing Creek Valley, York Co., Pa. In 1854 he married Ann Maria, eldest daughter of Michael and Jane (Seward) Shuler, of the same place. Michael Shuler was a well-to-do farmer, highly esteemed for his integrity, whose ancestors came from Amsterdam, Holland, Sept. 5, 1730, and settled in the eastern part of Pennsylvania. Shortly after his marriage William M. Fisher removed to Yocumtown, York county, where he engaged in the business of cabinetmaking and building. As a cabinetmaker he attained a high degree of efficiency, and was known throughout the county for his skillful workmanship. During the Civil war, when patriotism ran high and the heart of every loyal citizen throbbed for his country’s safety, he enlisted March 8, 1865, in the 162d Regiment, P. V. I., Company K, and served until the close of the struggle, receiving his discharge Aug. 24, 1865. Returning home, he resumed his chosen occupation and continued therein until the time of his death, July 3, 1870. He was a member of the United Brethren Church, and was one of the class-leaders and superintendent of the Sunday-school. At the age of thirty-eight years death came to him most unexpectedly, while he was performing his duties as superintendent. He had announced the opening hymn, and had just finished the reading of the first two lines:

Amazing grace! how sweet the sound

when he sank to the floor, fatally stricken by apoplexy. He never spoke again, and at the end of fifteen minutes his spirit winged its flight to the realms of the Heavenly Father whom he had so faithfully served. He was survived by a wife and seven children. In 1876 the family removed to Harrisburg, Pa., which is still their place of residence. His widow survived him many years, and during all these years, in the spirit of motherhood, she cared for her own with tenderness and love, bringing up all of her children under the pious influence of a Christian home. She lived her life for God and her children. The union of William M. and Ann Maria (Shuler) Fisher was blessed with the following children: Albert S., a prominent tinner, connected with the firm of Fisher Bros., Harrisburg, Pa., died Feb. 4, 1899; on Aug. 4, 1886, he married Mary Callender, by whom he had the following children: Edwin L., Annie L., Albert E. and Norman C. Jennie S. married Landis Bratten, and had the following family of children: Helen, Robert, Ruth and Esther. Edward Dixon is living in Wooster, Ohio, where he is the leading saddler, also dealer in trunks, bags, etc.; on Jan. 9, 1883, he married Laura Miller, of Wooster, Ohio, and they have had two children, namely: Warren Donald and Florence May. Oscar S., born June 1, 1861, died July 5, 1863. William Seward, on the death of his father, William M., went to live with his grandfather, Michael Shuler, in Fishing Creek Valley, where he remained ten years; at the age of seventeen he left the farm and removed to Harrisburg, Pa., where he is engaged in the mercantile business; on Nov. 23, 1892, he was united in marriage with Fannie M., the only daughter of William H. and Amanda Wilhelm, most esteemed and highly respected residents of York, Pa., and to this marriage have been born: Seward Wilhelm, Ethel Fahn and Mary Emma. Mary E., a graduate of the public schools of Harrisburg, Pa., also of Bloomsburg State Normal School, is at present a teacher in the public schools of Harrisburg, Pa. Curtis W. is a prominent plumber in the city of Harrisburg, Pa., being the head of the well-known firm of Fisher Bros., who make steam and hot water heating specialties; having grown up with the plumbing business he is quite popular locally as well as with the Pennsylvania State Association of Master Plumbers; on April 26, 1893, he was united in marriage with Lillie Banks, and to this union have been born: William Curtis and Margaret May. Margaret S. married J. J. Lybarger; they have had two children, Donald F. and Mildred F.

(IV) Harriet, daughter of David M. (II) and Mary (Miller) Fisher, born Oct. 24, 1833, died Nov. 10, 1852.

(V) David, Jr. (II), born May 11, 1836, married Angeline Fox, and is living in Clearfield, Taylor Co., Iowa, with these children, Mary and Albert.

(VI) Anna, born Feb. 10, 1838, died Oct. 10, 1889.

(VII) Matilda, born Jan. 11, 1840.

(VIII) Barbara, born Oct. 3, 1841, married Joseph Willis, and had these children: Clayton, Emma and Edgar.

(IX) Susan, born July 26, 1844, married Milton Brubaker, and had children: Willie, Minnie and Emma.

(X) Emma, born Nov. 2, 1845, married Hon. Morris M. Hays.

(XI) Alexandra, born April 7, 1848, married Susan Neely, and has children: Emma, Ida, William, Clara, May, John, Harry and Gail.

David M. Fischer (II) was twice married. His first wife, Mary Miller, died Feb. 7, 1850, and in November, 1852, he married Mrs. Mary Neiman, a widow with one child. To the second union no children were born.

(4) Samuel (I), son of David (I), born Sept. 27, 1804, married Elizabeth Miller, and had these children: David M., Jacob, John M., Mahala, Samuel (II), Agnes, Elizabeth and Cornelius.

(5) Nancy, born May 3, 1805, married John Weitzel, and had these children: David, Henry, Mary, Samuel, Ellen, Nancy, Harriet, Susannah, Elizabeth and Rebecca.

(6) Christian died in 1808.

(8) Elizabeth, born March 14, 1811, married Frederick Koch, and had children. John, Mary and Frederick.

(10) Abraham, born Jan. 24, 1815, married Fanny Hawk, and the following children were born to this union: Henry W., David, W., Matrona, Barbara and Sarah.

(11) Daniel, born Jan. 10, 1817, married Catherine Waite, who is still living, and is the only surviving member of that generation, being past eighty-seven years of age. She and her husband had the following children: Henry, Mary, John, Caroline, Flora, Appelona, Sanford and Rebecca.

The above biographical sketch was prepared and written by William Seward Fisher, of Harrisburg, Pa., a lineal descendant of Gotlieb Fischer, and of the fifth generation.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN WEISER, cashier of the Drovers' and Mechanics' Bank, is a descendant of a family whose members have for some five or six generations been prominently identified with the history of the county. Mr. Weiser is a native of the Keystone State, born in York, Oct. 2, 1865, and is a direct descendant of Conrad Weiser, who emigrated to America from Germany, in 1709, and settled in the Mohawk Valley, and whose descendants, coming to York, five or six generations ago, became conspicuous figures among the early settlers of the county.

Jacob Weiser, grandfather of William F. Weiser, like his great-grandfather was born in York county, and for many years both were successful lumber merchants of the county.

Franklin S. Weiser, the father of William F., following the example set by older members of the family, also engaged in the lumber business in his earlier years, and for a long period was a director of the York County Bank, his father having been one of its promoters. As has already been intimated, the members of this family have always been prominent in all things tending toward the advancement of township, county, or State. Among these might be mentioned the Chanceford Turnpike Company, one of the principal promoters of which was none other than the grandfather of William F. Weiser. Franklin S. Weiser married Barbara Sophia Stahle, daughter of John Stahle, who was the first register of wills in the old war court-house, the second built in the county, the present magnificent structure being York county's third court house. A son of this gentleman, Col. James Alonzo Stahle (who is still living) was the first Republican elected to Congress from his district, another son having been a Democratic member of the State Legislature from Adams county. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Weiser have been born six children. Those living are Harry K., bookkeeper for Motter & Sons; William F., the cashier of the Drovers' and Mechanics' Bank; and Eugene F., in the insurance business in York.

William F. Weiser was educated in the public schools and the York Collegiate Institute, graduating from the latter in 1884. He afterward attended Lafayette College, class of 1887, after leaving which he became interested in the lumber business with his father, remaining with him until his father's death in 1887. In 1889 he entered the banking firm of Smyser, Bott & Company, where he remained two years, at the end of which time he became the teller of the Drovers' and Mechanics' National Bank, filling that position from 1891 to 1903, when by reason of duties faithfully performed he was promoted to the position of cashier, where his faithful and close attention, to the work of his office, made him a most valuable member of the official roster.

In June, 1889, Mr. Weiser was united in marriage to Miss Nettie Virginia Smyser, daughter of Martin Smyser, a retired business man of York. She comes of an old and honored family, several of whose members participated in the Revolutionary war. As a member of the Yorktown chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution she is a prominent and active worker. To the marriage four children were born, two of whom, William Donald and Jacob Spanger, died in infancy. Those living are Martin Smyser, and Mary Julia, both attending school, the son at the York Collegiate Institute (class '09).

In politics Mr. Weiser is a Republican, and fraternally he affiliates with the Masons, being a Past Master of Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451; Howell Chapter, No. 199; York Commandery, No. 21; Zembo Shrine of Harrisburg. He is also a prominent member of the York County Historical Society. Possessed of a mind of more than usual astuteness, and thoroughly trained in banking methods, Mr. Weiser is adding each year an experience which promises to make him one of the best authorities on financial matters in his city. These qualities, together with a natural urbanity of manner in his dealings with the public, combine to make him a most popular officer of the bank.

PROF. JACOB ADAM STEIN belongs to the family of that name so long identified with York county, and is himself one of the most prominent members.

The Steins are descended from Ludwig, who was born in Germany and settled in York county. His wife was Catherine Weigle, daughter of Martin Weigle. Their son Daniel was a farmer for the greater part of his life, and owned a tract of 120 acres in and near Freysville, now owned by his son Jacob. His last years were spent in retirement in Longstown, where he died in 1872. On political issues he was first a Democrat and afterward a Republican. He married Miss Mary Holtzapple, of Manchester township, daughter of Barnitz Holtzapple; she died at Longstown the same year as her husband. Their children were as follows: Barnitz, a farmer and tanner, who married Miss Cassandra Oberdoff, and died in Windsor township; Jacob; Daniel, a farmer and tanner at Red Lion, who married Miss Susanna Grove, now deceased; Henry, formerly a blacksmith in Spring Garden township, later a farmer in Windsor township, and now residing in Freysville, who married Miss Mary Knaub; Philip, formerly a tanner, now a farmer in Freysville, married to Miss Maria Leber; Sarah, Mrs. George W. Anstine, of York; Catherine, widow of Michael Miller, of York; and Mary M., unmarried.

Jacob Stein was born Jan. 8, 1824, and was brought up in Lower Windsor and Windsor townships, attending the subscription schools. He began shoemaking under Gottlieb Borley, of Windsor township, where he followed the trade himself until about 1858, employing others under him. After his first marriage he lived for a few years with his father-in-law near Maisch's mill, still carrying on his shoe business, but at the end of that period he bought a forty-acre tract near Freysville, which he operated in conjunction with his shoemaking. Later he bought the home farm at Freysville from his father, and a few years afterward sold his first farm. The barn on his place was built in 1852 by his father. The other buildings are more modern, and were erected by the present owner, who built his handsome brick residence in 1878. When he began farming Mr. Stein used the old-fashioned implements, but he has always been a progressive man, ready to adopt new ideas and methods, and he was the owner of the first reaper used in that section, a Seymour machine, which cost $200, and was heavier than the binders of to-day. Starting as a poor boy, Mr. Stein has achieved marked success and is now enjoying the fruits of his years of patient and wisely directed toil.

Jacob Stein was first married to Miss Elizabeth Heidelbaugh, who was born in 1823, and who died at the age of twenty-five, leaving one child, Andrew. This son went West in 1865, living for a time in Illinois, then removed to Missouri, where he married, and, later, after the death of his wife, took his family to Texas, and now resides there on a farm. There were two other children of this marriage both dying in infancy. Jacob Stein was married (second) to Mrs. Elizabeth (Crumbling) Shenberger, born in Hellam township, daughter of Adam and Mary (Sloat) Crumbling. By her Mr. Stein became the father of a large family, namely: Jacob Adam; Daniel W., who died in infancy; Anna Elizabeth, Mrs. John Dietz, of Yorkana; Jane, Mrs. J. F. Sechrist, of Freysville; Melinda, Mrs. John Peeling, of Freysville; Barbara Ellen and Matilda, unmarried; and Nancy E., Mrs. John Kauffman, of York.

Jacob Adam Stein was born on his father's first farm, May 8, 1860. Until he was sixteen he attended the public schools of Freysville, and then began teaching. In 1878 he entered York County Academy, and spent one term there under the instruction of Professors Kane, Gardiner and Ruby. His first experience as teacher was in the home school, which he taught for one term; he taught the Raab school in Windsor township, for two years; the east end school one term; the Canadocly, Lower Windsor, for two years; the Fairview for four terms; and the home school again for five years, proving himself throughout an able and successful teacher, whose services were always in great demand.

In 1891 Mr. Stein turned his attention to mercantile pursuits and opened a general store at Red Lion. At the end of five years his store was partly burned, and he sold out what was saved of the stock and returned to teaching. Six years were spent in the Red Lion schools, where he taught successively all grades from the primary to the grammar. In 1885 Mr. Stein had built a house in Freysville, and after several years in Red Lion he returned in 1899 to this home, although still teaching in the former place. In 1902 he took up the life insurance business, representing the Fidelity Mutual Life Company of Philadelphia, and he is still thus engaged.

Prof. Stein, as he is generally called, has long been prominent in local musical circles, is a member of the York Oratorio Society, and for the past twenty years has been a teacher of both vocal and instrumental music, besides leading the choir in church. With his family he belongs to the Freysville Evangelical Lutheran Church, where he has filled the office of deacon. He has always been an enthusiastic Sunday-school worker, and for a score of years has held the office of superintendent. He began with an attendance of forty, but so successful have been his methods that he has now an enrollment of 230. In politics he is a Republican, and cast his first vote for Garfield. Fraternally he belongs to Katahdin Lodge, No. 500, I. O. O. F., of Red Lion.

On April 9, 1882, in Windsor township, Prof. Stein was married to Miss Nancy Jane Wagner, who was born at Longstown, daughter of John and Sarah Ann (Frey) Wagner. Their union has been blessed with three children, born as follows: Curwin H., Nov. 6, 1884, a student in the York Collegiate Institute; Walter Scott, born May 15, 1887, who lived only four years; and Mabel Irene, born Sept. 8, 1895.

EDWARD CHAPIN, a leading member of the York county Bar, and for twenty-one years the efficient secretary of the York County Agricultural Society, is a son of Edward Chapin, who was for fifty-five years a leading practicing attorney in the courts of York county.

Edward Chapin, Sr., was born in Rocky Hill, Conn., Feb. 19, 1799, and came on both sides from a distinguished line of ancestry. His maternal great-grandfather was the celebrated Jonathan Edwards, for many years president of the College of New Jersey, and the ablest and most noted of American theologians, whose fame was world-wide. The maternal grandfather of Edward Chapin, Sr., was Jonathan Edwards, familiarly known as “the second President Edwards,” who was president of Union College. Mr. Chapin’s forefathers, like himself, were graduates of Yale College. His father, the Rev. Calvin Chapin, D. D., was a recognized leader in the Congregational Church of Connecticut. He was president of Union College, and was the originator of the movement to prohibit by law all traffic in intoxicating liquors, being an earnest advocate of such reform throughout his life.

The original ancestor of the Chapin family in America was Deacon Samuel Chapin, the first of the name to emigrate from England to this country, and who settled in New England. His descendants, numbering over four thousand, and including such representative Americans in professional, political and literary life as Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Dr. J. G. Holland, Hon. Solomon Foote (United States senator from Vermont), and others, held a reunion in Springfield, Mass., some years ago. Among the lineal descendants of Deacon Samuel Chapin is the Adams family of Massachusetts, which has furnished two Presidents of the United States.

Edward Chapin, Sr., was graduated at Yale College in 1819, and admitted to the York Bar in 1823. There he soon attained a reputation as an able lawyer and profound thinker, and was counsel in many of the most important cases tried in York and Adams counties, in which his legal arguments were acknowledged to be the ablest, most thorough and exhaustive of any lawyer at the Bar. Mr. Chapin was an intimate personal friend of Hon. Thaddeus Stevens, and was associated with him in many important cases. Mr. Chapin was a gentleman of general culture and great learning, having a knowledge of most branches of natural science, and delighting, as a recreation from heavier labors, in the cultivation of fruits, flowers and vegetables. That he was also fond of robust sports is evidenced by his prowess in gumming. He bore an irreproachable reputation, and as a lawyer stands unsurpassed in the history of York county. Mr. Chapin died March 17, 1869, leaving a widow, since deceased, a daughter, married to Edward Evans, and a son, Edward, the attorney of York.
ALLEN ISRAEL FREY, secretary of the Stewartstown Lumber Company, president of the Stewartstown Water Company, secretary of the Stewartstown Building & Loan Association, and identified also with the political affairs of York county, was born in September, 1859, in York township. He is a son of Reuben and Mary (Seider) Frey.

The Frey family is probably of German extraction. Samuel Frey, the paternal grandfather, was a limeburner and dealer living in Woodland, Pa. He settled in the eastern part of York county at a very early day and the village of Freystown was named in his honor. He was a man whose upright life and public services won him the confidence of his fellow-citizens, as was shown by his election to the responsible office of treasurer of York county. He reared a large family, his five sons being Reuben, Emanuel, Israel, Samuel and Levi.

The maternal grandfather of Allen I. Frey was George Seider, who throughout life was a shoemaker in the city of York. His only daughter, Mary, became the mother of Allen I., and of a large family which is well and favorably known all over York county.

Reuben Frey was a substantial farmer of Shrewsbury township for many years. His death took place in 1885, when he was fifty-nine years old. He was a quiet, home-loving man, interested in the schools of his district, serving as one of the directors and being also elected to the office of township assessor. His family consisted of eleven children, as follows: Levi; George P., deceased; Franklin, deceased; Ellen, deceased; Amanda, wife of Joseph Dise, of Glen Rock, York county; Reuben E.; Mary A., wife of B. S. Sterner; Allen I.; Sarah J., wife of Albert G. Strayer; William J., and George F. Both Levi and Franklin participated in the Civil war. The latter entered the army in 1864, when but a lad of fourteen years, and his young life was probably an early sacrifice, as his fate is unknown.

Allen J. Frey completed the common-school course at the age of fifteen years, but this education in no way satisfied him, and he commenced to teach school in order to provide himself with the means to further his studies. His teaching experience covered twelve terms and gave him the opportunity of enjoying three terms at the Normal School under Prof. A. W. Gray, of Glen Rock, and a full course at the Iron City Business College at Pittsburg, where he graduated in 1880.

For a considerable time Mr. Frey was manager of the Hoshour, Dise & Co. lumber yard at Stewartstown, and in 1897 became a stockholder, as well as secretary, of the Stewartstown Lumber Company; he has most capably filled the latter position ever since and has also been actively interested in the other enterprises mentioned in the opening of this sketch. These, however, do not cover all of Mr. Frey's activities. He has always been prominent in the councils of the Democratic party and on many occasions has been shown marks of public approval. In 1902 he was brought forward by his party as its candidate for the State Legislature. For a period of seven years he served in the borough council and for a similar time on the school board. For five years he was a justice of the peace, meeting with the approval of the public during that time and adding to his reputation as a man of high character and of unquestioned integrity. At present he is a notary public.

In 1880 Mr. Frey was married to Maggie A. Seitz, a daughter of Adam D. Seitz, a substantial farmer of York county. They had one daughter, Bertha, who is now the wife of George W. Sensbach, manager of a furniture factory at Ronceverte, W. Va. She is a graduate of the Millersville State Normal School and prior to her marriage, May 17, 1905, had for four years been one of the county's most successful teachers. She is a lady of many accomplishments and a favorite in social circles. Mr. Frey's wife and daughter belong to the Presbyterian Church in the borough, to which organization he is a generous contributor. He has long been considered one of the representative men of the borough and county, a type of good citizen which has made the name of York county respected all over the State. His determination to secure and utilize an advanced education but shows one of his characteristics. His patient persevering efforts, combined with an honest upright life and consideration for those with whom duty or pleasure has brought him into contact, have resulted in making him the esteemed and respected man he is.

WILLIAM AURELIUS MILLER, an ex-district attorney, of York city, is a son of the late lamented and revered Dr. J. O. Miller, who was for nearly fifty years the beloved pastor of Trinity Reformed Church at York, Pennsylvania.
Annie T. Miller was a lifelong and honored citizen of the county. Her name is associated with many local institutions.

LUTHER E. ZECH, M. D., was born at New Salem, York county, on Feb. 25, 1862, son of William Zech.

Mr. Miller is of a genial and companionable nature and has hosts of friends in and about York. He is a prominent Mason and has represented his lodge in the grand body of the State. An active member of the church which his sainted father built, he is officially connected with the board.

Michael Zech, his grandfather, was a farmer of York township, and died at the age of eighty years, and was buried at the Imers Church. He was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Hartman, and his second Mrs. Glattfelder, and he had a very large family.

William Zech, father of the Doctor, was born in York township, and received a common school education. He was a lifelong farmer, and died on his farm in North Codorus township at the age of fifty-seven years. He married Annie Rohrbaugh, daughter of George Rohrbaugh, and she still survives, making her home on the old homestead in North Codorus township, where her husband died. Their children were: Annie, wife of Franklin T. Bentz, lives in North Codorus township; Luther E.; and Agnes, wife of Henry Bear, also lives in North Codorus township.

Luther E. Zech attended the township schools until seventeen years of age, and then attended the York County Normal, and after leaving the latter institution, he taught school for nine terms. At the end of this time Dr. Zech started reading medicine with Dr. Snodgrass, with whom he continued two years at New Salem. This study was supplemented by a course at the University of Maryland, from which he was graduated with honors in 1892. Choosing for his location the pleasant village of New Salem, the Doctor settled there in the practice of his profession, and there he has remained to the present time, having a large and lucrative practice. Dr. Zech married Mary Kessler, daughter of George and Emma (Cramer) Kessler, and they have had children: Lloyd, a dental student with Dr. C. P. Rice (dentist) of York, as his preceptor, and taking a course of lectures at the Philadelphia (Pa.) Dental College (freshman year); and Harry, now in his sophomore year at Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia. Both of the Doctor's sons taught school in the township.

Dr. Zech is a Democrat, and has served on the school board for ten years. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, chorister, superintendent of the Sunday-school, and very active in the work of the church. He is a valued member of the York County Medical Society, and of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society.

ANDREW B. RUDISILL (deceased), one of the honored and well-known pioneers of York county, and at the time of his death a resident of Penn township, was born on the old Rudisill homestead in Heidelberg (now Penn) township, in October, 1820, son of Andrew and Mary (Bechtel) Rudisill. The father, a prosperous farmer, was born on the same farm in 1795, and his wife, Mary, was born in Hanover, Pa., in 1794. She died in 1850. She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother and a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. The paternal grandfather of Andrew B. Rudisill was also a farmer, and he and his wife, whose maiden name was Wilkinson, were the parents of four boys and five girls. Andrew Rudisill and wife, the parents of Andrew B., had seven children: Mary (deceased), Jake (deceased), George (deceased), Sally (deceased), Elizabeth (who resides in Adams county, Pa.), Mary Ann (deceased), and Andrew B.

Andrew B. Rudisill was reared a farmer boy and sent to the pay school at New Baltimore, where he pursued his studies for a time, later attending a private school at Hanover. After leaving school he engaged actively in work on the farm until he was twenty-one years old. He remained with his father until the latter's death, about 1864, when he took charge of the farm. Soon after his father's death he bought the interests of the other heirs and became sole owner of the homestead, a farm of 123 acres of choice limestone land in a good state of cultivation, and with fine buildings. The house, a large substantial brick structure, and the bank barn, 50 x 100 feet, in good state of preservation, are among the best in the township. Mr. Rudisill always kept his farm well stocked with high-grade horses and cattle, and raised a considerable number of mules, buying the latter when colts.

Mr. Rudisill owned another fine farm in Penn township, containing seventy acres of well cultivated land and provided with good buildings. This farm he rented. Though Mr. Rudisill was in his eighty-sixth year at the time of his decease, which occurred April 3, 1906, he managed the home farm with the aid of hired help. Besides carrying on the usual farm work, he also for many years was successfully engaged in feeding hogs and cattle. He was the owner of a grist and saw mill which he operated for many years, and which he recently rented. For twenty years he was a stockholder and director of the First National Bank of Hanover.

In 1893, the Rev. Dr. J. C. Koller officiating, Mr. Rudisill married Miss Margaret Forry, of York county, Pa., daughter of George and Nancy (Boyer) Forry. In politics Mr. Rudisill was a pronounced Democrat. He never sought office for himself, but ever took a lively interest in the success of his party and the election of such of his friends as were candidates. As a man Mr. Rudisill was honest in his dealings, firm in his convictions, and of unquestioned integrity.

Mr. Rudisill was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, of New Baltimore, to which Mrs. Rudisill also belongs.

FRIEZER ALTLAND, ex-county commissioner of York county, Pa., and a farmer of Paradise township, was born on his father's homestead in that township, Feb. 8, 1859.

Andrew Altland, grandfather of our subject, was reared in this section of York county, his father, Andrew, having come from Germany. Grandfather Altland followed farming and wagon making, and was a prominent and successful man of his day. He owned a fifty-acre farm near Haystown, and a wagon shop, and most of his life was spent in that section, and there, too, his death occurred. He was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Otterman, by whom he had these children: John, Jacob, Christina, Mrs. Stambaugh, and Mrs. Peterman. His second wife, who was the grandmother of our subject, bore the maiden name of Sunday, and she and her husband had two children: Michael and Elias. The land upon which the Altland Lutheran meeting-house was built, the first church being of logs, was given by Andrew Altland, but whether the grandfather or his father is not known. One of the Ottermans gave land to the Lutheran congregation, receiving in return one dollar to make the contract valid.

Elias Altland was born in Paradise township, and when a lad learned the carpenter's trade. This he followed for many years, building many barns and residences in this section. He finally turned his attention to farming, and owned a farm of forty-seven acres, which is now in the possession of his son-in-law, John C. Gruver. His next employment was at cigarmaking, and in this line he continued until his death, Aug. 4, 1899. He was a lifelong member of the Paradise Lutheran Church, was treasurer thereof for many years, and also held the office of deacon for a considerable time. In politics he was a stanch Democrat, and he filled many township offices. He was married to Miss Anna Mary Baker, daughter of Peter Baker, and his wife, whose maiden name was Moul. She still survives, being seventy years of age, and is still a devoted member of the Paradise Reformed Church. Mr. and Mrs. Altland had five children: Friezer; Matilda, who married Jacob Mummet, of Adams county; Levi, who died in infancy; Albert, who died at the age of twenty-one years; and Lizzie, Mrs. John C. Gruver, of this township.

Friezer Altland was educated in the township schools, principally at Paradise church, first teacher being Peter Strorbach, and some of the others being Absalom Baker, Henry Williams, Dr. Hollinger (now of Abbottstown), John and Adam Kimmerman, Peter Bargard and Jackson Foss. He left school at the age of eighteen years, and started life on his father's farm. At the age of twenty-seven years he received the wages that had accumulated since the time he was twenty-one years old, and this he spent with Mr. Swartz in erecting a barn near Richmond, Va. His father having been a carpenter our subject had learned much in that line, and was considerably skilled with the tools. He was married Aug. 23, 1885, to Miss Mary Jane Harbold, born in Dover township, daughter of Samuel Harbold (who is now living with our subject), a farmer and mason by trade. Her mother was Harriet March, who is also living. After marriage our subject located on his father's farm, upon which he now lives, and which he still owns. He rented this farm for half shares for seventeen years, and in 1903 purchased it. It is a fine piece of property of 112 acres, and he has cultivated it to a high state.

Mr. Altland has always taken an active interest in politics, and is a tower of strength in the Democratic party of the township. He has served many times as committeeman, and has missed no county convention for sixteen years. He served as school director for two terms, and although never asking or seeking for office has served in many capacities. He was elected county commissioner in the fall of 1899, and served a term of three years, in 1901 serving as president of the board of commissioners. He has always been religiously inclined, and at the age of sixteen years joined the Paradise Reformed Church, under Father Dininger. He has attended Sunday-school since he was seven years of age, when the services were held in schoolhouses. He has been very active in church service ever since joining, and for some time was a teacher in the Sunday-school, was deacon for four years, served as trustee, and is now an elder in the church. Fraternally Mr. Altland is connected with the P. O. S. of A. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Altland follow: Andrew P., born Nov. 4, 1888, attending school; Annie Estella, born Sept. 20, 1893; and Samuel Elias, born May 18, 1898.

ALLEN M. SEITZ, who is identified with various business and social organizations of Glen Rock, was born Dec. 9, 1863, in Shrewsbury township, son of George F. and Louisa M. (Myers) Seitz.

Nicholas Seitz, the paternal grandfather, was a miller and farmer of York county. He was twice married and by his first wife had children: Stephen, deceased; Rebecca, deceased, who married Isaac Dis; and George F. His second wife was a Miss Klinefelter, and they were the parents of these children: Catherine, deceased; Butler H., deceased; Cora, who married Rev. A. H. Irvin; Clarence; Flavel; Henry, deceased; and several who died in infancy.

The maternal grandfather of Allen M. Seitz was John Myers, a farmer and wheelwright, who married a Miss Diehl, and had these children: Louisa M., Henry D., Adam D., Lydia, who married Andrew Brashinger, and Catherine.

George F. Seitz was a miller and farmer, and served as burgess of Glen Rock for one term. In 1889 he met with an accident in a grist mill at Castle Fin, which resulted in his death on Dec. 26th, of that year. Mr. Seitz was a member of the Reformed Church. At his death he left the following children: Barbara E., who married John C. Stover; Robert M.; Allen M.; and Nettie V.

Allen M. Seitz attended public school in Shrewsbury township and Glen Rock borough, supplementing this with one term at the York Normal School. He taught school for one term, and was then employed by Frey, Herbst & Co., of Glen Rock, for about three years as bookkeeper. In 1886 he was elected a justice of the peace, and he is now serving his fourth term in that office. Mr. Seitz's decisions are so just that they are seldom reversed by the higher courts. In the fall of 1889 Mr. Seitz was elected on the Democratic ticket to the office of county prothonotary, receiving all but seventeen votes in Glen Rock, which is a Republican town, and he carried the county by 2382 majority, leading the ticket by 176 votes. This will give some idea of the popularity of Mr. Seitz and of the confidence placed in him by the citizens of his community. He has served six years as a member of the school board, and in 1902 was chairman of the York County Democratic Committee. Mr. Seitz has large interests in the Glen Rock Screen Works; is a stockholder in the American Wire Cloth Company; also in the Hellam Distilling Co., of which he is the secretary and treasurer and general manager, and other industries.

Fraternally Mr. Seitz is affiliated with Shrewsbury Lodge, No. 423, A. F. & A. M.; Friendly Lodge, No. 287, Knights of Pythias; Rock Council, No. 54, Junior Order of United American Mechanics; York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. Elks; and Gideon Grange, P. of H. In all of these societies Mr. Seitz is extremely popular. Since its organization Mr. Seitz has been president of the Glen Rock Hose and Ladder Company, and is vice president of the Pennsylvania Sportsmens Association.

At the age of thirteen Mr. Seitz joined the Glen Rock Musical Association, a well-known organization, which is in a most prosperous condition and in demand all over the country. Since joining the band Mr. Seitz has always played the bass, and takes great pride in his association with this organization.

CHRISTOPHER C. BURG, a successful farmer residing in Hellam township, York county, whose thorough knowledge of his calling has made him a recognized authority on matters agricultural, comes of good old Holland stock.

His grandfather, George, spelled the family name Borgholthons, but this spelling was changed by an act of the Legislature to Burg. George Borgholthons and his wife Wilhelmina emigrated with their family from the old home in Amsterdam, Holland, to Lower Windsor township, York Co., Pa., settling on 200 acres of land. His brother was a wealthy merchant in Amsterdam, and as he died leaving no family his large estate was inherited by his brother, George. To George and Wilhelmina Borgholthons were born the following family: Frederick married a Miss Will, and moved to Freeport, Ill., where he died; Hickie married George Thomas, moved to Freeport, Ill., and died there; Daniel died in Barbolomew county, Ind., where he owned a section of land; Henry, who died in Lower Windsor township, married (first) a Miss Dielinger and (second) a Mrs. Einstein; Catherine (Kitty) married John Jacobs, and died in Chambersburg, Pa.; Philip W. is mentioned below; Wilhelmina became the wife of Dr. Bittner, of Lancaster county.

Philip W. Burg was born in Amsterdam, Holland, and settled with his parents in Lower Windsor township, York county, he himself eventually becoming the owner of a fine farm in that township. His death occurred at his home April 8, 1856. In his religious faith he was a Lutheran, and in politics a Whig. Philip W. Burg was twice married. His first wife, Eliza Dosch, who was born in York county, daughter of Christopher Dosch, died Jan. 29, 1849. They were the parents of the following children: George, born Nov. 1, 1827, married Sarah Kauffman, of Manor township, Lancaster county, and died at Little Washington, Pa., June 4, 1863; Christopher C. is mentioned below; William H., born Dec. 18, 1831, married Miss Hinkle; Mary Jane, born Dec. 9, 1833, died aged eighteen; Caroline, born March 12, 1836, married Benjamin Herr, and resides in Columbia, Pa.; and Washington, born May 31, 1838, married Mary Hines, and lives in Erie, Pa. For his second wife Philip W. Burg married Mary Eckert, who bore him three sons: Horace, who died in infancy; Horace
(2), of Northumberland county; and Summers, who died young. Christopher Dosch, father of Mrs. Eliza (Dosch) Burg, was born in Germany, but after his marriage settled in Lower Windsor township, York county, on 250 acres of land. There his death occurred. His children were: Michael, who died in Lancaster county; George, who died in York in the summer of 1903; Eliza, Mrs. Burg, and Catherine, who married a Bahn, removed to Juniata county, Pa., and there died.

Christopher C. Burg was born in Lower Windsor township, March 15, 1829, and was brought up on the home farm, receiving a good practical training in agricultural work at the hands of his experienced father. His literary training was acquired in the public school. He was an alert pupil, and possessing an acquisitive mind stored up a good foundation for his later acquirements. He delighted in spelling matches, and was always able to hold his own. He taught school two years in Hellam township, and one in Lower Windsor. His father owned a mill, and there young Christopher was employed for five years. When he was twenty-four years old he began boating on the canal, and continued that line of work for ten years. In 1872 he began farming for himself, first locating in Spring Garden township, where he spent four years. He then located in Hellam township, on his fine farm of 106 acres.

Mr. Burg's success has attracted considerable attention, and he is thoroughly posted on the general farming conditions all over the State. He is reporter for the Agricultural Department, Washington, D. C., and of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Department, Harrisburg. He has been active politically in the Republican party since the days of Fremont, for whom he cast his first Presidential vote. From 1865 to 1872 he held the office of justice of the peace of Wrightsville, and for twelve years served as school director. He is not a member of any church, but attends different ones.

On March 2, 1854, Mr. Burg was married to Mary Hauser, daughter of the late John Hauser. Five children were born to them: (1) Philip W., born Sept. 26, 1856, is a farmer in Hellam township; he married Leah Rutger, and has four children, Daisy, Walter, Albert and Horace. (2) Sarah Eliza, born Jan. 4, 1859, married Augustus Bunn, and has one son, Wilbur; they reside with her father. (3) John Lincoln, born June 22, 1861, resides at Stony Brook; he married Catherine Hake, and has two children, Arthur and Grace. (4) Mary Elmira, born Sept. 27, 1863, married Luther Landis, has several children, and lives in Manchester township. (5) Alfred H., born July 29, 1866, married Emma Dare, and lives in Philadelphia. Mrs. Burg, who was born Dec. 5, 1828, died July 25, 1892, and was laid to rest in the Wrightsville cemetery. She was a member of the Lutheran Church.

John Hauser, Sr., grandfather of Mrs. Burg, owned 500 acres of land in Hellam and Spring Garden townships. His death occurred in Hellam township, and his estate was divided between his son John, Jr., and daughter, Mary. The latter, however, died single, and the former came into possession of the entire property. John Hauser, Jr., was well known and highly esteemed. He married Sarah Strickler, and became the father of eight children: John, Mary, Sarah, Henry, Martha, Eliza, Matilda and Winfield.

RAYMOND ELMER BUTZ, M. D. A successful and popular minister of the Reformed Church for a period of five years, Dr. Raymond E. Butz, of York, is now equally as popular and quite as successful in ministering to the physical ills. A Christian physician is a wonderful power in any community, and as such Dr. Butz stands as a foremost citizen of York today. Of German lineage, he inherits many of the good qualities of his ancestors, whose original home was not far from the banks of the picturesque Rhine, and who, seven generations ago, left home and friends and came to a far country across the seas, where, under a new government, and amid strange surroundings, they built for themselves homes at a place called Kutztown. The first of the family to emigrate to America, was John Butz, a farmer who located at "Butz gase" or "Butz place," a name that it bears to this day.

The father of Dr. R. E. Butz was John Butz, a bookkeeper who resided in Allentown, Pa., and who died in 1890 at the age of fifty-one years. He married Maria Ziegler, who died when the Doctor was only five years of age. The children of this union are: Ida, widow of Harry Cooper, of Allentown; Minnie, wife of Lewis A. Peters, an insurance agent of that place; and Raymond E.

Dr. Raymond Elmer Butz is a native of Pennsylvania, and was born in Allentown July 6. 1864. His pre-scholastic training was received in the Allentown high school, from which he was graduated in 1883. Later he attended Muhlenberg College, graduating in 1887, and the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster, Pa., graduating from the latter in 1890. After having charge of a church in Catawissa, Pa., where he was pastor for five years, he took up the study of medicine. After graduating from the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia in 1898, he located in York, where he at once began the practice of medicine. As a member of the York Medical Society, he has been sent as a delegate to the State and the American medical societies, to both of which he belongs. He has been honored by being elected to the vice-presidency of the York Medical Society, and also a member of the board of censors.

On Feb. 26, 1890, Dr. Butz was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Steinmetz, daughter of Lewis F. Steinmetz, who resided at Lancaster at the date of his decease, though for many years a resident of Middletown, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Butz has always been a deep student of the profession, is a voracious reader of medical literature, and at times has written from the depths of his knowledge for the benefit of his fellow practitioners. He makes a specialty of hospital practice, and is ever alert for the discovery of new methods. He is a gentleman of broad and liberal culture, taking advantage of every opportunity to cultivate his mind. Just prior to his marriage he spent some eight months most profitably on a trip to Europe, and has traveled quite extensively in the States. In political faith he favors the Republican party, and still keeps up his interest in the Reformed Church, in whose ministry he began his career. An earnest, conscientious physician, a broad-minded, liberal and scholarly gentleman, he is a valued adjunct of York's social circles.

WILLIAM F. BUSSER, a retired business man of York, was born on South Queen street, that city, April 14, 1844, son of John and Matilda (Reisinger) Busser.

Jacob Busser, his grandfather, came to the United States from Switzerland with his family early in the last century, and settled on South Queen street, York. He was a brushmaker by trade, and died there in 1850; his wife, who had been Barbara Swope before marriage, also died in that city.

John Busser, the father of William F., was born in York in 1819, and there he spent his entire life. He was a contractor and builder for many years, and in the fifties engaged in the manufacture of candles and soap, following that occupation until his death in 1878. He married Matilda Reisinger, daughter of Samuel Reisinger, a farmer, and later a contractor in excavating. Mrs. Busser died in 1877, aged fifty-six years. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Busser were: William F.; Jacob R., deceased; Barbara S., now Mrs. George Metzger, of Warren, Pa.; Samuel Ed.-win, of Berkeley, Cal.; superintendent of libraries of the Santa Fe Railroad; a graduate of Yale Theological department, and engaged in the Congregational, and later, the Episcopal ministry; Flora R.; Alma S., Mrs. Alfred Sulzbaugh, of York; John H., the well known cigar dealer of York; Oscar W., of Shadle & Busser, photographers of York; and Eliza Mary, Mrs. Richard Davis, of Philadelphia.

William F. Busser, the first born of the family, was educated in the public schools and spent two years at York County Academy. He then served as one of the first letter carriers under Alexander J. Fry, who was appointed by Lincoln. He received two cents for every letter delivered, and at the end of the nine months resigned his position in favor of his brother, Jacob R., taking a position at the general delivery window, which he held for two and one-half years. He next learned telegraphy at Goldsboro, which he followed for a short time, spending the succeeding eleven years as ticket agent at the Pennsylvania railroad station. In 1875 he became a traveling salesman for a candle manufactory. The railroad company did not wish to accept his resignation and raised his salary in an unavailing effort to keep him. He traveled for his father for five years, and at the latter's death reorganized the business in association with his brother. Later he sold his interest to David Rupp, and became superintendent of the York Match Factory, a position he held for one year. Mr. Busser then engaged with D. F. Stauffer, a cracker manufacturer, and Stallman & Shet-ter, wholesale tobacconists, maintaining these connections for twenty years. In 1900 he retired from active life, having accumulated such a competency that further work is unnecessary.
Mr. Busser attributes his success to close application to business, being known as one of the most strictly reliable salesmen on the Pennsylvania circuit. He is the owner of much real estate and a stockholder in a number of companies. He is a member of Zion Lutheran Church, and one of its most liberal supporters. In political matters he is a stanch Republican. In 1901 he was the candidate for mayor of York on the Republican ticket, but after a gallant fight was defeated by Mr. Gibson, by a total of 174 votes. Although he never sought the nomination—it having in fact been forced upon him—Mr. Busser unselfishly gave his services to his party. His own ward gave him a nice majority, although it had formerly been strongly Democratic.

In 1869 Mr. Busser was married in York to Mary C. Cox, of that city. His wife is the daughter of Selman Cox, of Baltimore county, Md., and before marriage was a telegraph operator on the Pennsylvania railroad. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Busser: Frank S., a patent attorney in Philadelphia; Ralph C., at attorney of that city; Harry C., with Company F, 3d Cavalry, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Yellowstone, Yellowstone Park; William C., a piano tuner for the Weaver Piano Company; and Mary F., deceased.

HARVEY W. HAINES, a well-known educator and former State Senator, is descended from an old Philadelphia family, who later became identified with York county.

Henry Haines, grandfather of Harvey W., born in Philadelphia in 1814, of Revolutionary ancestry, removed to York county and bought 300 acres of land in Windsor township, then valued at $30 an acre. The balance of his life was occupied in farming, and he died at the age of sixty-five. His political principles coincided with those of the Democracy. He was married in Philadelphia to Phoebe Troutman, who was a niece of Gen. Moselle, a soldier in the German army, who died in Germany, and who was of the Irish aristocracy. Their children, several of whom were born before they left Philadelphia, were: William, who died in York county; Maria, Mrs. Baltzar Guist, who died in York county; Louisa, wife of Rev. Louis May, deceased; Sarah, Mrs. Zachary Jacobs, who died in New Freedom; Matilda, wife of Rev. Emanuel Kohr; Eliza, Mrs. George Oberdorff, deceased; George, an Evangelical preacher, who died in Allentown; Charles; Harvey, who died in Red Lion; Julia Ann, Mrs. Fry, who died in Lower Windsor township. Henry Haines had a brother, John, who conducted the old and famous hotel at Frankfort, near Philadelphia, and also ran stages between different towns in the State. He was the father of George Haines, a large importer on Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Charles Haines was born on the Windsor farm in 1814, and died at the same old home, June 5, 1898, a lifelong farmer and carpenter. He was a member of the Evangelical Church; in politics a Democrat, he was active in local affairs and served one term as county commissioner. He married Miss Barbara Funk, who was born in Lancaster county in 1815, and died in Windsor township in 1890. The children born to this union were as follows: Mary Ann, who died unmarried; Harvey W.; Sarah, Mrs. John B. Baughman, of York; Matilda; Louisa, Mrs. William Smith, deceased; George W., a business man of Los Angeles, Cal., who married a Miss Maish; Charles F., of Philadelphia; and Agnes, wife of Dwight Lee, superintendent of a railroad in Colorado.

Harvey W. Haines was born on a farm near Columbiana, Ohio, Oct. 11, 1838, but was only a year old when his parents returned to Windsor township, York county, and settled on a farm a mile from Mr. Haines' present home. He grew up there, attending the township schools until he was eighteen, and then was sent to the Millersville Normal, from which he was graduated in the same class with Theodore B. Fox, now a prominent Baltimore teacher, and Prof. Byerly. The principal of the Normal at that time was Prof. James Wickersham. After completing his own education Mr. Haines taught for three terms in Lancaster county, three years in York county, and then was called to a position in Baltimore, where he remained sixteen years, preparing pupils in mathematics to enter Johns Hopkins University. At the end of that period he returned to York county and began farming on the property belonging to his father-in-law, David Leber, where he has since remained.

Always keenly alive to matters of public import, and a lifelong Democrat, and having cast his first vote for Buchanan, Mr. Haines has been from early manhood active in politics; he served one term as township auditor, was school director for nine years, was sent to the lower house of the State Legislature for two terms and for two more to the State Senate, his last term being in 1891. His school-directorship was resigned only when his election to the Senate made such action necessary. On Aug. 27, 1904, he was made chairman of the Democratic county committee, an office fairly thrust upon him. Fraternally Mr. Haines is an active lodge man and belongs to the F. & A. M., Maryland Lodge No. 41, of Baltimore, Md.; he has belonged to the Masonic order since the age of twenty-two, when he joined old York Lodge No. 166, of York county. In religion he was reared in the Methodist Episcopal faith, but although a great Bible student is not a member of any church. He owns a fine library, is an inveterate reader, and a man of broad general culture, although his favorite line of reading, after Shakespeare, which holds first place, is political economy.

In February, 1871, occurred the marriage of Mr. Haines to Mary E. Leber, a lady born in Windsor township, May 15, 1841, daughter of David and Anna Mary (Becker) Leber. To this union were born the following children: Edith Virginia, who died in infancy; Florence L., at home; and Horace B., of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Haines’ paternal grandparents were Conrad and Maria (Hammer) Leber, who lived on a farm in Lower Windsor township. Her father, David Leber, was educated in the common schools and became a farmer and tanner. In politics a Democrat, he was elected county commissioner for one term, during which period the old jail was built. He died in Windsor township, Dec. 22, 1878, aged seventy. He was a member of the Reformed Church. His wife was born in Lower Windsor township in 1806, daughter of Matthew and Esther (Holder) Becker, and her demise occurred Nov. 2, 1871. A great-uncle of Mrs. Haines, John Becker, was for years a well known surveyor in York county.

ELMER L. LEWIS, D. D. S., who controls a large and representative practice in York, while he is held in high esteem in both business and social life, claims the old Bay state as the place of his nativity, and he is a scion of stanch old Puritan stock in New England. He was born in Amesbury, Essex Co., Mass., Dec. 22, 1861, son of Rush W. and Georgiana (Morrill) Lewis.

Rush W. Lewis was born in Dover, York Co., Pa., and was for many years engaged in the manufacturing of shoes on a somewhat extensive scale at Lynn, Mass., while later he engaged in the same line of enterprise in York, Pa., where he continued to reside until his death, which occurred in 1874. He was a lineal descendant of Dr. Robert Lewis, who was an influential citizen of Dover, Pa. The mother of our subject was born in Lynn, Mass., and died in York, in 1873, preceding her husband into eternal rest by fourteen months. She was a daughter of Robert Morrill. Rush W. and Georgiana Lewis became the parents of six children, of whom two are living.

Dr. Elmer L. Lewis was a lad of but twelve years when he was doubly orphaned, and had received his rudimentary education in the public schools of York. After the death of his parents he continued his attendance in the city schools of York, and then he went to East Berlin, Adams county, where he was a student for a time, completing there his more purely academic studies. In 1881 he was matriculated in the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, where he completed the prescribed course, and was graduated as a member of the class of 1883, receiving his degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. He soon afterward located in the city of Philadelphia, where he was engaged in practice for a period of four years, at the expiration of which he removed to East Berlin, Adams county, where he built up an excellent practice, and remained until 1899, a period of twelve years. In March, 1899, the Doctor came to York, where he has since remained in practice, while he has gained unmistakable precedence by reason of the high order of work turned out in his modernly appointed offices. He is a member of the York County Dental Society, and fraternally is identified with the Royal Arcanum, while in politics he is staunchly aligned as a supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He is a member of the Reformed Church.

In 1895 was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Lewis to Miss Mary E. Wolf, daughter of Dr. Frederick C. Wolf, a prominent physician of East Berlin, Pa. She died in 1896.

GILBERT H. KYLE is one of the leading commercial printers of the city of York, where he has a finely equipped plant, and where he controls a large and representative business in his line. He is a native of York county, and has here worked his way to definite success, while he has also gained the confidence and high regard of those with whom he has come in contact, enjoying marked popularity in both business and social circles.

Mr. Kyle is descended from stanch Scotch-Irish stock, and the original American progenitors came hither from the North of Ireland. William Kyle, grandfather of our subject, settled in Maryland, where he passed the remainder of his life, a cabinetmaker by vocation. Samuel Kyle, father of the subject of this review, was born in Harford county, Md., and as a young man came to York county, locating in Peach Bottom township, where he learned the carpenter and boat building trades. Afterward he became identified with farming and mercantile pursuits there until 1862, when he moved his family to Chanceford township, same county. There he followed farming until 1864, when he removed with his family to York, the county seat, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. He continued there until his death, which occurred in 1891, at which time he was sixty-seven years of age. His wife, whose maiden name was Amanda Arnold, was born and reared in York county, and her death occurred in 1893, at the age of sixty-three years. She was a daughter of William Arnold, who was a well known and influential farmer of Peach Bottom township; her brother, John Arnold, was the pioneer sizer of Lancaster, Pa. Samuel and Amanda (Arnold) Kyle became the parents of six children, concerning whom we incorporate brief record at this juncture: Juliann died in infancy; William John died at the age of fifteen years; Clara died at the age of three years; Howard died in 1885, at the age of twenty-five years; Elmer is a successful practicing physician in Philadelphia; and Gilbert H. is the subject of this sketch.

Gilbert H. Kyle was born in Peach Bottom township, York county, April 21, 1856, and in that locality his early educational training was secured in the public schools, which he attended until he attained the age of fifteen years. Then he entered a printing office in York, Pa., and began his thorough and practical apprenticeship in the "art preservative of all arts." A few years later he became the assistant editor and manager of the Herald, a weekly paper published at Delta, York county, continuing to be identified with same until 1891, when he filled the same position with the Delta Times, a weekly paper of the same place. In 1893 he located in the city of York, and established a job and general commercial printing plant at No. 19 East Market street, where he has since continued operations in this line; his street number is now 41, under the new system adopted by the city. His business has grown steadily and substantially in scope and importance, and he has added to his facilities and accessories as occasion has demanded, keeping everything up to the highest standard, and thus being at all times prepared to turn out the best class of work with facility. His reliability and progressive methods have been the factors which have mainly enabled him to gain such noteworthy prestige and success, and he is held in high regard in the business circles of the city. In his political allegiance Mr. Kyle is stanchly arrayed as a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, and fraternally he has advanced to high position in the Masonic order, being affiliated with York Lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M.; Hollidell Chapter, No. 199, R. A. M.; York Commandery, No. 21, K. T.; Harrisburg Consistory, 32d degree, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Masons, Harrisburg; and Zembo Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Harrisburg. He is also identified with the Knights of Malta, the B. P. O. Elks, the Royal Arcanum, and the Artisans. Both he and his wife hold membership in the First Presbyterian Church of York.

On Oct. 27, 1888, Mr. Kyle was united in marriage to Miss Alice M. Bradley, daughter of Jason Bradley, a well known contracting painter and paper-hanger of Fawn Grove, this county. Mrs. Kyle is a lineal descendant of the great lexicographer, Noah Webster, and further than this the lineage is traced back to one of the royal families of Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Kyle have three children: Howard Bradley, Mildred Arnold and Donald, the former a student at the York County Academy, and the two latter attending the public schools.

JACOB H. SIELING, M. D. As a representative physician and surgeon of York county, and also a native son of this section of the Keystone Commonwealth, Dr. Sieling is well entitled to consideration in this
HISTORY OF YORK COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

The Doctor’s father was born in the town of Holtorf, Germany. When he was a lad of ten years his parents emigrated to America and came to York county, settling in 1836 in Hopewell township, where they passed the remainder of their lives. In that township he was reared to manhood, and he continued to reside on the old homestead farm there until his death, in 1873, in the forty-sixth year of his age. He was one of the leading farmers of that portion of the county and as a progressive and loyal citizen, and a man of sterling integrity of purpose, he ever commanded the high regard of those with whom he came in contact in the various relations of life. He was a stanch Democrat in politics and his religious faith was that of the Reformed Church. Mrs. Eliza Sieling, an estimable and much loved woman, was born and reared in York county, dying Jan. 18, 1903. Of her children five sons and two daughters are living.

Dr. Sieling was reared to the sturdy discipline of the home farm and secured his rudimentary education in the district school in the vicinity, and at Shrewsbury Academy. Later he continued his studies in the Normal School at Millersville, where he was a student for three years, and after leaving that institution he was successfully engaged in teaching for nine years. Then he learned the trade of carpenter, to which he devoted his attention for two years. His tastes and ambition, however, led him to seek a wider field of endeavor, and he accordingly took up the study of medicine, matriculating in a medical college in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he ably fortified himself for the practical work of his chosen profession. He was graduated as a member of the class of 1877, receiving his coveted degree of Doctor of Medicine. For the ensuing seven years he was successfully established in practice at Brickerville, Lancaster Co., Pa., and he then gave evidence of his professional enthusiasm by entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, Md., where he did very effective work in further preparing himself for the great responsibilities devolving upon him as a physician and surgeon, being a student in the institution about one year and being graduated therefrom as a member of the class of 1886. Locating in Manheim, Lancaster Co., Pa., he remained there until 1899, meantime building up a large practice. Then he removed to York, where he has gained unmistakable prestige in professional ranks, meeting with gratifying success and having a patronage of representative character. He is still interested in husbandry, being the possessor of the old home farm known as “Yonts’ Delight,” a tract of nearly three hundred acres of fine farming land in southern York county, near Shrewsbury, which has been in the family continuously for over 125 years, according to the old patent office indentures.

In matters political the Doctor, though a stanch Republican, has not been active, though he has ever been loyal to all the duties of citizenship, but never an aspirant for office of public nature. Fraternally he is identified with a number of societies, holding membership in Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451, F. & A. M., and in the gracious organization known as the “Feast of Roses,” in Manheim, Lancaster county, the object of the latter organization being to offer an annual tribute to the memory of Baron H. W. Steigel, of Germany, who in 1770 donated a tract of land to the Lutheran Church for the annual rental of one red rose.

Dr. Sieling’s wife, Catherine Hess Sieling, was born Sept. 7, 1859, daughter of Levi Wissler, of Lincoln, Lancaster Co., Pa., a prominent and unassuming farmer. Dr. and Mrs. Sieling are prominent and zealous members of the Lutheran Church. They have two daughters, the older one, Fanny W. Sieling, a graduate of Manheim high school, class of 1895, and the State Normal School at Millersville, from which she graduated in the class of 1897. She has been teaching for nine years. The second daughter, Mary C., graduated from Manheim high school in 1898, from Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pa., with the class of 1903, and took her A. B. degree from Cornell, class of 1904. She is now in her second year in the medical department at Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, Maryland.

SAMUEL WEISER ZIEGLER is a grandson of Charles Ziegler, who was a prominent wheelwright of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania.

David Ziegler, father of Samuel W., who was a contracting carpenter, was born in Gettysburg, but died in York, in 1899, aged seventy-two years. He married Anna Weiser, daughter of Samuel Weiser, a farmer and distiller of York. They became the parents of eight children, of whom two daughters died in early childhood. The survivors are: Lucy H.; R. William, a druggist of York; Edgar D., a carpenter of York; Albert L., a druggist of York; C. Walter, of the Flinchbaugh Manufacturing Co., and Samuel Weiser, a teacher in the High school of York.

Samuel Weiser Ziegler was born in Gettysburg, and removing to York in early boyhood, was educated in the schools of the latter city, graduating from the York High school in 1883, and afterward studying under private tutors. Mr. Ziegler began teaching in September, 1883, and has been a teacher in York from that time to this. He was elected an assistant in the York High school in 1893, and in 1894 was elected instructor in mathematics, of which department he continues to have charge, and he has also taught language and science.

Mr. Ziegler is a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and was for a time secretary of the Sunday-school. In politics he is a Democrat, and is justly esteemed one of the most progressive educators in the city of York.

EDWARD E. ALLEN, of Shrewsbury, an active member of the Bar of York county, was born Sept. 28, 1863, at Liberty, Md., son of Rev. Edward E., and Elizabeth (Wiley) Allen. Edward Allen, his paternal grandfather, was born and reared in Virginia, while his maternal grandfather, George Wiley, was a prominent farmer of York county, Pennsylvania.

Rev. Edward E. Allen, the father of Edward E., was born in 1804, died May 28, 1872, and was buried at Baltimore, Md. He was a prominent clergyman of the M. E. Church; was connected with the Baltimore conference for a number of years and then united with the Pennsylvania conference. Rev. Mr. Allen was first married to Sarah Wilson, and they had two children: Mary (who married James Campbell, of Baltimore), and Thomas. For his second wife he married Elizabeth Wiley, who died in 1870. Prior to her marriage to Rev. Edward Allen she had been a teacher in the Williamsport Seminary and was a woman of education, culture and personal attractiveness. The children of this marriage were: Elizabeth, who married Dr. Edwin Dodson; Sarah, Mrs. E. Beaumont; Edward E.; William; and Wesley and John, who died in infancy.

Edward E. Allen enjoyed the advantages of a cultured home, and his schooling was mainly obtained in the city of Baltimore. He settled at Shrewsbury in 1885, where he accepted the principalship of its academy, and the following year was admitted to the bar, having continued in active practice ever since and met with the success that attends upon ability and persevering effort.

In 1887 Mr. Allen was married to Beulah W. Koller, daughter of Hon. B. F. Koller, of Shrewsbury, Pa. One child has blessed this union, Edward E., Jr. In religious belief both Mr. and Mrs. Allen are members of the M. E. Church. Fraternally he is a member of Shrewsbury Lodge, No. 423, A. F. & A. M., and past master of that body; also a member of New Freedom Lodge, K. of P. (and of the Uniformed Rank), as well as of the Heptasoph, of New Freedom.

THADDEUS A. BLAKE, D. D. S., is numbered among the representative members of the dental profession in York county, controlling a large practice in the city of York, and having the distinctive priority of being the oldest member of his profession in said city, where he has maintained his home for the past quarter of a century, being held in high esteem as a citizen and being also one of the honored veterans of the war of the Rebellion.

Dr. Blake claims the old Keystone State as the place of his nativity, since he was born near the village of Little Britain, Lancaster county, Pa., April 30, 1846. His father, Nathan Blake, was born in Fulton township, that county, in 1817, and was identified with the great basic art of agriculture, being one of the honored and well known citizens of Lancaster county until April, 1851, when he moved to Winterstown, York county, and there engaged in farming until his death, in 1866. He bore the full patronymic of his father, Nathan Blake, Sr., who was one of the early settlers of Lancaster county, where he resided until the time of his death, having been a blacksmith by trade but having taken up land in that section and developed a valuable farm. The maiden name of Dr. Blake’s mother was Matilda McVitta, and she was born in Lancaster county, in 1823, being a daughter of another sterling pioneer, William McVitta, and her death occurred two years after that of her husband. Both were consistent members of the Methodist Church, and in politics the father was originally a Whig and later a Republican, ever taking a deep and intelligent interest in the questions and issues of the hour, and being a man of strong individuality, inflexible integrity and consistent loyalty in all the relations of life.

Dr. Blake passed his boyhood days under the uneventful but grateful influences of the old homestead farm, to whose work he early began to contribute his quota, while his educational advantages in a preliminary way were such as were afforded in the district schools, while later he continued his studies in Chanceford Academy, in York county.

When the somber pall of Civil war fell over a divided nation Dr. Blake’s youthful patriotism was roused to responsive protest and he watched the trend of events with absorbing interest as the great conflict proceeded, while in August, 1864, at the age of eighteen years, he tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting as a private in Company F, 3d Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, with which he proceeded to Virginia, participating in a number of spirited engagements and continuing in active service until victory crowned the Union arms, and the greatest civil war of history was ended. He received his honorable discharge in June, 1865, having been mustered out at Camp Hampton, Virginia.

After the close of his valiant and faithful military career our subject returned to Pennsylvania and located in the western part of York county, while some time elapsed ere he fully recovered his physical energies, his health having been materially impaired by his army service. He made a trip to western Ohio, where he remained for a time, after which he returned to Pennsylvania and finally, in 1869, located in the city of Baltimore, Md., where he began the study of dentistry in the office of Dr. W. W. Wilson, supplementing this discipline by a course of lectures in Baltimore Dental College, from which he came forth admirably equipped for the work of his chosen profession. He forthwith opened an office in Winterstown, York county, where he was engaged in practice until 1879, since which time he has made his home and professional headquarters in the city of York, where he controls a large and representative practice, based on popular appreciation and regard gained to him during the long years of his work here, while, as before intimated, he stands as the honored dean of his profession in his home city.

The Doctor is a valued member of Sedgwick Post, No. 37, Grand Army of the Republic, and in politics he accords an uncompromising allegiance to the Republican party, though never a seeker of public office. Both he and his wife belong to the Lutheran Church.

On Sept. 15, 1872, Dr. Blake was united in marriage to Miss Helen McGuigan, a daughter of Ambrose and Anna (Miller) McGuigan, of Hopewell township, this county, where she was born, in 1851. Of the three children of this union two died when young; and the only survivor is Abbie M., wife of Ernest Aller, of York.

HON. J. FRANK ZORMAN, one of the leading men of Newberry township, York county, was born in 1871, in Paradise township, a son of David Zorman. The latter was born in 1848, in York county, and was reared and educated there. He enlisted in April, 1864, for service in the Civil war, entering Company B, 209th Regiment, P. V. I., and was mustered out in May, 1865, probably the youngest soldier in the command. He followed farming and blacksmithing in Dover township for some time and now holds the position of letter carrier at Dover. He married Anna Mary Altland, of Dover township, and they have two children: Ada, wife of Alvin R. Gross, of Dover township; and J. Frank.

J. Frank Zorman was educated in the common schools and a select school at Dover and fitted himself for the profession of teaching under the well-known educator, Prof. R. H. Bowersox. From 1887 until 1904 he followed teaching when not otherwise engaged. He assisted his father with farming until he was twenty-one years of age and then engaged in farming, in Dover township and Newberry township, for some seven years. In 1899 he embarked in the agricultural implement business in Newberrytown, Pa., where, by honesty, strict attention to his duties and uniform courtesy, he has established a large business.

From manhood Mr. Zorman has been a Republican. Prior to his election to his present prominent position he had served three terms as justice of the peace, and is thoroughly acquainted with the needs and requirements of a public official.

On Nov. 3, 1904, Mr. Zortman was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature, being one of the quartet of the first Republicans to be elected to that body in forty years. He also served during the special session convened by the call of Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker on Jan. 15, 1906, and adjourned Feb. 15, 1906. He has given faithful service to his constituents, who have reposed the utmost trust in him and have confidence in his judgment regarding all measures pertaining to their welfare. His record for punctuality at all sessions seems to be complete, he having been present at every session of the House and always at his post of duty. Mr. Zortman is a man of ample means, and is interested in the York Haven Canning Factory and the Independent Telephone Company, of York.

In 1890 Mr. Zortman married Mary A. Kunkle, daughter of Abraham and Sarah Kunkle, of Dover township, and they have two children: Elsie, born in 1892, and Pansy, born in 1897, both bright students at school.

Mr. Zortman's reputation is that of a man of sterling integrity, intellectual superiority and business ability. Personally he has a very wide circle of friends and admirers.

JOHN E. SLYDER, proprietor of the Seitzville mills of Codorus township, merchant and custom miller, near Larue station, is one of York county's active business men. He was born in 1862 at Hoffmanville, Baltimore Co., Md., son of Frederick and Susan Slyder.

Frederick Slyder was a well known teacher in Baltimore county, where he lived to the age of thirty years. His wife survived until December, 1900. Their only child was John E.

John E. Slyder attended the public schools of Hoffmanville until the age of fifteen years, and then followed farm work until his majority, when he went into the milling business. He learned the trade with J. D. Shearer, an uncle, in Carroll county, Md., with whom he remained three years, and then rented a mill for several years. In 1890 he went to Glen Rock, where he bought a mill property on which he lived until 1900, when he purchased the Seitz mill at Seitzville. This mill was erected in 1866 by N. Seitz, and is one of the most substantial mills in the State. The output is an average of fifty barrels of flour a day, and a ready market is found in Baltimore and near by points. The mill is equipped with the best and most modern machinery, and its products and by-products include all kinds of grain and seed compounds.

Mr. Slyder was united in marriage with Ida Jane Hare, a daughter of Abraham Hare, of Baltimore county, Md., and their children are: Mary C., wife of John Rudisell, of Seven Valley, who is employed in the mill; Mae E. and C. F.

In politics Mr. Slyder is a Republican. He is a member of the Lutheran Church of St. Peter's, Baltimore Co., Md., but attends church at Seven Valley, and plays the cornet in the choir. In addition to operating his large business he has a financial interest, being one of the stockholders, in the White Hall Grain Milling and Supply Co., of Maryland.

In March, 1898, Mr. Slyder visited the Klondyke, and he has many interesting things to tell of his adventures in that far-away region. He crossed the North Pacific Ocean on a three-masted schooner, and after a voyage of twenty-nine days landed on Nunivak Island, in the Behring Sea, where the party built their own river steamer. They crossed the sea to the Yukon river, then up the river 800 miles, on up the Koyukuk river 800 more miles, where they began prospecting and mining. The company was known as the Alaska Union of Chicago, Ill. They were many miles north of the Arctic circle, where the thermometer often drops as low as 80 degrees below zero. With two companions, Mr. Slyder made a trip of over 800 miles in a row boat, taking eleven days and nights. He became a heavy stockholder in a number of promising mining properties in the northwest. Mr. Slyder has always enjoyed traveling and has been in thirty-two States and Territories, and in Canada and Mexico, besides many islands in the Pacific ocean. He has but recently returned from Florida, and is now contemplating a trip abroad.

AUGUSTUS C. HETRICK, M. D., of Wellsville, York county, has been in continuous practice at that place for over forty-seven years. His record would be hard to duplicate, either in years of active professional work or extent of usefulness.

Dr. Hetrick represents an old family which has been settled in Codorus township, this county, since the emigration of his great-grandfather from Switzerland. Jacob Hetrick was one of three brothers who came to the United States in the latter part of the eighteenth century, landing at New York, and he settled in Codorus township, York Co., Pa., where his descendants still flourish. There his son Christian Hetrick, the Doctor’s grandfather, was born, and there he passed his life, successfully engaged in farming, at one time owning 1,700 acres of fertile farming land. He was prominent in his locality in other respects, and took an active part in public affairs, serving four years as a member of the State Legislature. He had three sons, Jacob, Jefferson and Christian W., the last named being the Doctor’s father.

Christian W. Hetrick was born in Codorus township in 1779, and became a prominent farmer and drover, following that business all his life. He died in 1858, and is buried at St. Jacob’s Church, in Codorus township. He married Henrietta Woolfram, daughter of Augustus and Eva Woolfram, of Codorus township, and nine children were born to them: John, who was prothonotary and clerk of commissioners for a number of years, and died in York; Edmund, a farmer and drover of Codorus township; Augustus C.: Rev. A. J., a graduate of Princeton, who preached for a number of years to the emigrants, as they landed at Castle Garden, N. Y.; Hezekiah, deceased; Abraham, a policeman of Baltimore, Md.; Tillman, a well-known tinsmith of Manheim township; Octavius, a farmer of Codorus; and Elma, living in Codorus.

Augustus C. Hetrick was born Jan. 11, 1835, in Codorus township, and was reared there. He pursued his professional studies at the Ohio College of Medicine, graduating with honors in 1858, and at once settled in Wells-ville, where he has ever since remained in active practice. In addition to attending to the ordinary round of professional duties he was for five years examining surgeon for the United States government, and he has continued in spite of hard work to be an indefatigable reader and student, and has accumulated a large and comprehensive library. He has answered all the demands of an unusually extensive practice faithfully and skillfully, and the love and esteem which are his are the result of lifelong devotion to the calls of the most arduous of all the professions.

Dr. Hetrick was married Feb. 15, 1860, to Amanda N. Hayward, daughter of Dr. J. J. and Sally Hayward, and they have had five children, namely: Kermit H., of Mechanicsburg, York county; Russie M., deceased; Dr. H. B., who practices in Rossville; Annie L., who is a druggist at Wellsville; and Effie, Mrs. Hoff, of Lykens, Pa. The Doctor clings to the faith of his Quaker ancestors, and attends the old Friends meeting-house near Rossville. In politics he sympathizes with the Democratic party, but his large practice and his devotion to books have left him little time for public affairs, and he has never found it convenient to accept any of the many official honors which have been tendered him.

GEORGE F. SHIVE, president of the Codorus Canning Company, of Jefferson borough, York county, is one of the substantial and representative business men of this section. He was born in Dover township, in 1851, son of George F. Shive, Sr.

George F. Shive, Sr., was a tanner by trade, which he followed in Dover and North Codorus townships, until his death in his sixty-eighth year. He married Rebecca Sheaffer, who died aged sixty-four years, and they are both interred at Prospect Hill cemetery. They had children as follows: Albert, Samuel, John, Amos, Henry, Ellen (deceased), George F. and Daniel.

George F. Shive attended the schools of North Codorus township, and when a young man began his business career as a clerk in the store of Henry Bott, at Seven Valley. There he remained three years, after which he went to York New Salem with Schwartz & Sons, with whom he continued four years. His first business venture was at York New Salem, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits, continuing there three years, after which he located in Jefferson borough, and opened a general store, becoming one of the leading business men of the borough. He retired from this business April 1, 1902, turning the business over to his sons, who are operating it under the old name, George F. Shive & Sons. A full line of goods of all kinds is carried by these enterprising young men, and the trade extends for many miles around.

George F. Shive married Miss Maggie Snyder, daughter of John B. Snyder, and to this union these children have been born: Millard, the head of the firm, married Lizzie Myer, and has one child, George Niles; Elwood, also a member of the firm, is single; and Fred, the youngest, is with Fulton Mehring & Co., of New York. The postoffice was formerly situated in the Shive's store, and George F. was postmaster. Mr. Shive was one of the promoters of the Codorus Canning Co., and was elected its president, a position he has since held. This company cans corn, beans, tomatoes, apples, pumpkins, catsup, etc., and the plant is 40x212 feet, two stories high, and is fitted out with the latest and best improved machinery. It is situated along the Western Maryland railroad. From seventy-five to one hundred and fifty hands are employed, and the daily capacity of the factory is 4,000 cans. Mr. Shive is also on the board of directors of the Drovers' and Mechanics' Bank of York.

In politics Mr. Shive is a Republican, and he served his borough as chief burgess, councilman and school director. He is a Lutheran, in religion, and in the work of the church he takes an active part.

Daniel Immel (deceased). For many years very prominent in business and financial circles of York, Pa., was born in that city in 1810, and was a descendant of an old family of good old German stock.

John Leonard Immel was born Nov. 17, 1792, at Wernetz, Rothenburg-on-the-Tauber, and his wife Margaret was born July 5, 1714, at Watzendorf, Germany. He came to America in 1732, locating in York county, where she settled in 1733. On November 26th of the latter year they were married, and eight children were born to the union: George Michael, in 1735; Anna Margaret, 1736; Barbara, 1738; Christian, April 17, 1742; John, March 25, 1744; Syulla, March 25, 1748; Maria M., April 4, 1745; and Eva Maria, Dec. 4, 1756. Of the above family five children were members of the Moravian Church of York, with which the parents were also connected. John Leonard Immel died Dec. 29, 1777, and was buried on the 31st of the same month.

Daniel Immel, the father of the York contractor and builder, was a farmer in Spring Garden township, near York, and a highly esteemed citizen. He married Elizabeth Streber, daughter of Peter Streber. Mr. Immel died very young, his wife surviving until her seventieth year. They had a family of three children: John, Alexander and Daniel, all deceased.

Daniel Immel received a common school education, and learned the carpenter's trade. He engaged in the contracting and building business for many years in York, being employed in that line at the time of his death in 1884. He married (first) Susan Weiser, by whom he had two children, Albert W. and Catherine. His second marriage was to Anna Maria Peiffer, daughter of Christopher and Elizabeth (Hyde) Peiffer, and she died at the age of sixty-three years. Both were buried at the Prospect Hill cemetery. Of their children George, who married Ida Herman, is a printer of York; and Miss M. Florence resides at No. 538 West Market street, York.

Leonard Waller, a genial and well-known hotel-keeper of Hellam township, York county, has had an extensive and varied business experience, and is a large property owner, having many interests besides his hotel.

Mr. Waller was born Feb. 17, 1840, in Marietta, Lancaster Co., Pa. His father, John Waller, was born in Germany, and came to America as a boy, locating in Marietta, Pa., where he worked in a distillery and was variously employed for many years. He married, in Marietta, Sarah Shields, daughter of Leonard Shields, a native of that place, of Scotch-Irish descent. John Waller died at the age of fifty-four, and his widow survived six months. They had children as follows: Frederick, who is now a retired butcher of Marietta; Susan, who married Thomas Cummings, of Lancaster, Pa.; John, who was a soldier in the Civil war, was wounded in the hip at the battle of Chancellorsville, and died at Harrisburg, Pa.; Leonard, who is mentioned below; Sarah, who married George Rudesill, of Marietta; George, who served in the Civil war, in the 122d Pennsylvania Regiment, was wounded in the leg at Chancellorsville, and died at Lykens, Pa.; Catherine, who married John Deichler, and lives in Philadelphia, a widow; and Emma, widow of John Huberg, who lives in Lancaster.

Leonard Waller grew to manhood in his native place, and obtained his education in the common schools. His parents died when he was sixteen. After leaving school he began to learn the trade of butcher, but giving that up became a pilot on the Susquehanna river, between Lock Haven and Peach Bottom. He followed that calling for over thirty years, and then went into the liquor business in Marietta, where he continued five years. He then began his career as a hotel man, in which business he has since been successfully engaged. For four years he was proprietor of the "Indian Queen;" then he retired to private life for two years, and in 1895 moved to his present hotel. This delightful summer resort known as "Accomac," is situated on the York county side of the Susquehanna river, directly opposite Marietta, and has direct communication with Marietta by steam ferry. Mr. Waller bought this property in 1899, and has built up an enviable reputation as the genial landlord of a comfortable house. Fine bass and salmon fishing is to be had here, and Mr. Waller has a shad fishery on the place, one of the largest along the river.

Mr. Waller is a veteran of the Civil war, and saw service at Chancellorsville and Washington. He enlisted Aug. 12, 1862, at Harrisburg for nine months' service, becoming corporal in Company H, 135th P. V. I. His brothers, John and George, were also in the Union army, John in the same company with Mr. Waller.

When twenty-three years of age, Mr. Waller married Mary Jane Pearson, of Chestnut Hill, Lancaster county, daughter of William Pearson. They have two children: Emma Frances, Mrs. Robert Gitt, of Harrisburg; and John M., in business with his father, married to Tillie Hogendobler. Mr. and Mrs. Waller attend the Methodist Church. Mr. Waller is a Republican in political faith.

ANDREW J. HAACK (deceased). Few men of York were better known in business circles than the late Andrew J. Haack, a veteran of the Civil war, who for twenty-five years was engaged in the oil business. Mr. Haack's death occurred June 20, 1898, and he was buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. Of his brothers, Lieut. Charles Haack was killed in the Civil war; and William A., a carpenter of York, and Lewis R., a painter and paper hanger in the West, were also participants in the great conflict.

Andrew J. Haack received a common school education and learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed six years, and then engaged in the oil business, both wholesale and retail, his establishment being on South Duke street for a period of twenty-five years.

In 1863 Mr. Haack was united in marriage with Cassie Hartman, daughter of Jonathan and Cassie Ann (Innerst) Hartman, and to this union these children were born: Ida, the wife of Henry Schaale, a tailor of York; Charles F., who married Armida Hassler, and continued his father's business; Minnie, wife of Edward Spangler; Clara, wife of Charles Alexander; Sadie, wife of Jacob Reigart; Maggie, wife of Henry Drayer; Annie, married to Charles Levernite; and Grace B., living at home.

So closely has the Hartman family been identified with the business life of York county, that to write the history of one is practically to write the history of the other, and among the members of this family are to be found many of those energetic industrious men who have transformed the possibility of a busy, prosperous York county, into the reality.

The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Haack were Christian and Mary Innerst, and her paternal grandfather was Lewis Hartman. Jonathan Hartman, the father of Mrs. Haack, died Nov. 13, 1880, while his wife passed away Jan. 6, 1873. He had three brothers and one sister—George, Peter, Lewis and Leah. She also had three brothers and one sister—John, Jesse, Isaac and Mary, the latter of whom was the wife of ex-Sheriff James Peeling. Jonathan and Cassie Ann Hartman had a large family of children, namely: Hayman and Gideon, deceased; Enoch; Cain, deceased; Abel; Aquilla; Paris; Peter and Oreb, deceased; Julia Ann, the wife of Franklin Geesey; Sarah, the wife of William Grim, and Rebecca, the wife of William Blymire, both deceased; Lydia, the wife of Isaac Minnich, deceased; Cassie Ann, the widow of Andrew J. Haack; Lavina, the wife of Christian Eberly: Priscilla, the wife of Samuel Conaway; Barbara, who married Charles Fix, and Abel Van Buren. Jonathan Hartman was one of the best known citizens of York county, and at the time of his death was holding the position of justice of the peace for Dallastown, a position he had filled there and in York township for forty years.

Mr. Haack was a Republican in his political sympathies, but never entered the political field, and although very popular with his fellow townsmen would never accept public office. Mrs. Haack resides at No. 428 South Duke street, York.

MICHAEL SMYSER, deputy collector of internal revenue, was born in York, Aug.
7. 1840, son of Michael and Eliza (Lanius) Smyser.

Jacob Smyser, the grandfather of Michael, was born, in the city of York, and there lived and died. His tannery was a well-known land-mark.

Michael Smyser, son of Jacob and father of Michael, was a farmer of York county, where he died in 1874, aged seventy-five years. His wife was Eliza Lanius, an aunt of Capt. W. H. Lanius. To Michael Smyser and his wife nine children were born, of whom the following are deceased: Jacob, who died at the age of twenty-nine years; Dr. Henry L., who died in 1902, at the age of seventy-one years; Ellen, who married Rev. Hagen, a Moravian clergyman of New York; and Eliza, who married S. B. Barnitz and died in York. The survivors of this family are: Annie M., widow of D. F. Williams, of York; Albert, a retired lumber merchant and tanner of York; Thomas C., a retired tanner of York; Lewis E., a coal and lumber merchant of York; and Michael.

Michael Smyser was educated in York and at John Beck’s celebrated school at Lititz, Lancaster county. His first occupation was in the drug business at Pittsburg, and later five years at Baltimore. In August, 1861, he enlisted for a term of three years, as a member of Company F, 87th P. V. I., and was made commissary sergeant. Mr. Smyser’s record as a soldier was one to be eminently proud of. On June 24, 1863, he was made prisoner at Winchester and for two months was confined at Libby prison and at Belle Isle. At the close of the war, Mr. Smyser went West, but returned to York and engaged in the lumber and planing mill business. He then entered the hardware business, engaging in that occupation from 1870 until 1888, when he entered the internal revenue service as deputy collector, and has continued in that capacity to the present time, with the exception of the period covered by President Cleveland’s administrations.

Mr. Smyser was married Jan. 10, 1857, to Annie E. Straughn, daughter of James Straughn, of Cambridge, Md., and six children have been born to this union: James S., a salesman; Clara L., at home; Willis L., a druggist; Edmund P., shipping clerk at Black’s Hosiery Mills; Annie Grace, a school teacher at York; and Elisha May, a music teacher. Mr. Smyser is a member of the Union Veteran Legion, No. 65, of York, which he is now adjutant, and is a past colonel. He is an earnest member of the M. E. Church, and has been steward and superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Princess Street Church. In politics Mr. Smyser is a stanch and unflinching Republican, and he stands high in public esteem, his views being given consideration in all public matters.

JOHN H. COOVER (deceased), for many years one of the substantial farmers of Monaghan township, York county, was born on the old Coover farm, near Farley’s Church, in Monaghan township, Oct. 9, 1821, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Morett) Coover.

The Coover family are of German descent, the grandfather coming from Germany, and settling in York county at an early date. He reared a large family, among whom was Jacob, the father of John H.

Jacob Coover settled in Monaghan township when a young man, and purchased a tract of 300 acres or more, near Farley’s Church, where he had the following children: Levi; Susan, married to Christian Bowman; Michael; Mary, married to John Leidich; Jacob; Mrs. Eliza Number; John H.; Mrs. Sarah Harman; Samuel; Mrs. Catherine Hyde; and Daniel. In their religious views Jacob Coover and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church, while in politics Mr. Coover was a stanch Whig.

John H. Coover remained at home until he reached his majority. He chose farming as his life pursuit, working upon the home property until 1860, when he purchased the farm now owned by his widow. There he farmed with success until his death, Sept. 11, 1897, his burial being in Monaghan township. Mr. Coover was a man highly respected in his community, and in his death the township lost a useful citizen.

On June 30, 1859, Mr. Coover married Mary Ann Moser, daughter of Jacob Moser. Mrs. Coover was born in Amity township, Berks county, and as her father died when she was about ten years old she went to live with her brother, Judge Henry G. Moser. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Coover were as follows: Anna E., born July 18, 1861, married John Beisline, of Mechanicsburg, and they have one child, May; Elizabeth J., and Henry M. (twins) died when they were eight months. old: John M., born April 25, 1874, educated in the common schools of Monaghan township, remained at home until 1896, when he went to Illinois, and engaged in the warehouse business until 1903, in that year removing to Louisiana, where he continued that line, but is now at Morse, La., in the rice business (he married Cora Hutton who was born in Shepherdstown, Cumberland county). In religion Mrs. Cooper is a member of the Lutheran Church. She is a woman of marked personal charms, and enjoys the friendship of a large circle who love her many estimable traits of character.

DAVID MURRAY COLLINS, one of the well known citizens and prosperous farmers of East Hopewell township, York county, was born Nov. 12, 1848, on the farm he now owns, and on which he has passed the greater portion of his life. His parents were John and Margaret Jane (Wilson) Collins.

John Collins, the father, was born March 22, 1795, on the farm in East Hopewell township now known as the Robert Wilson place, and on which his father settled. He farmed all his life. After his marriage he located on the farm where David M. Collins was born, and there he died Dec. 12, 1885. He was an educated man for his day, and was prominent in township and church affairs. A Whig in early life, later he became a Republican. He took much interest in the U. P. Church in which he was an elder. He married Margaret Jane Wilson, born in Fawn township close to Gatchellville, and she died in 1891, aged eighty-five years. The children of John Collins and wife were: John H., deceased, who married Elizabeth Anderson; Elinor, wife of Archibald Hysom, of York township; Margaret Jane, unmarried; James W., of Fenmore, who married Anna S. Wilson; Elizabeth G., Mrs. Aquila Bartel, of Hopewell township; and David M.

The grandfather of Mr. Collins was also John Collins, and he was born in Fawn township and later came to Hopewell, now East Hopewell township, and settled upon a farm of about 300 acres, where he passed the balance of his life. A brother served in the Revolutionary war. John Collins, the grandfather, married Margaret Gemmill and they had children, as follows: James, and William, soldiers of the war of 1812; John, father of David M.; Samuel, who died in East Hopewell township; Margaret, Mrs. Gemmill, who died in York township; David, who lived and died in Indiana; Alexander, who died in Philadelphia; Grace, who married William Laggitt and died in York township; Jane Ann, who married Jackson W. Grove, and died in East Hopewell; Cornelius, who died near Shrewsbury, and who was the father of the present cashier of the Shrewsbury bank. The family was founded in America by William Collins, the great-grandfather of David M., who came from the North of Ireland.

David M. Collins was reared a farmer's boy, and attended the public schools until about seventeen years old. He was a very apt student and took advantage of every opportunity to increase his knowledge. He recalls as among his early teachers familiar names to many residents of East Hopewell township—David P. and W. X. McAlister, Mary Culmary, Eugene Eldredge (who later became a preacher), Matthew H. McCall (now president of the First National Bank of York), John L. Grove (now a U. P. minister), Sarah M. Smith, James and Andrew Ramsay and Andrew G. Collins. As stated Mr. Collins was reared on the farm, and under his father's capable training he learned the many secrets of agriculture. After the death of his father, in 1886, he bought the home farm, which embraces 123 acres of fertile land of a rolling character. He has it well-cultivated and well-stocked, and has erected sheds, barns and other buildings useful in the growing and curing of his various crops, including tobacco.

Mr. Collins was married March 13, 1890, by Rev. John Jamison, pastor of the Hopewell U. P. Church, in Lower Chanceford township, to Miss Catherine Mary Wallace, daughter of John T. and Millicent (Gibson) Wallace, the former of whom died in the fall of 1890, and the latter, in 1903. The children of this union are: Robert Murray, born July 14, 1893; John Thomas, Nov. 27, 1894; Margaret Jane, Jan. 9, 1896; Samuel Jamison, Dec. 1, 1900; Elinor Elizabeth Gibson, June 7, 1902, and Martia Grace, born July 6, 1904. Mr. Collins is a member of the Guinston U. P. Church of Chanceford township and has been one of its trustees for the past eighteen years.
He is a stanch Republican in politics and has served two terms as township auditor. He is a man of upright character and one of East Hopewell’s representative citizens.

WILLIAM H. PETERS, of Dallastown, is a member of one of the old and influential families of York county, where he is a representative of the third generation of the family. He was born on the old homestead in York township, York county, Pa., June 23, 1849, son of William and Mary (Wilhelm) Peters, both of whom were likewise born and reared in that county.

William Peters, the father, devoted the major portion of his active career to agricultural pursuits, having been one of the prominent and influential citizens of York-township, where he ever commanded the unqualified esteem of all his associates. He died in 1892, at the age of seventy-six years, and his widow has (1905) attained the venerable age of eighty-nine years, being a resident of the village of Spry, where she resides with her elder daughter. Her parents were Henry and Catharine (Schrock) Wilhelm, the former having been a captain in the war of 1812 and well known, under his military title, throughout that section of the State. He died in 1882, well advanced in years, and his wife was ninety-six years of age at the time of her demise. The paternal grandfather of William H. was David Peters. William and Mary (Wilhelm) Peters became the parents of seven children, as follows: Eliza J., single; Moses died in boyhood; Mary is the wife of William H. Conaway, of Spry, York county; William H., our subject, is a twin to Mary; Susan, the wife of Lewis Ahrens, of York; Elizabeth died aged six, and another child died in infancy unnamed.

William H. Peters was reared to the invigorating discipline of the farm, while his educational advantages were such as were afforded by the common schools of his native township. He continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until he had attained the age of twenty-three years, when he secured a clerical position in a general store in Dallastown, where he remained until 1874, and through this association gained valuable business experience. In the year mentioned he removed to Baltimore, Md., where he was employed until 1876, when he returned to Dallastown and accepted a clerkship in the mercantile establishment of Charles H. Keesey, with whom he remained for the ensuing six years. In 1886 Mr. Peters commenced his independent business career by engaging in the manufacture of cigars in Dallastown, where he also became a wholesale dealer in baskets of local manufacture. He built up an excellent trade in the cigar department of his manufacture, but so rapidly did the scope and importance of his basket industry increase that he found it expedient after a few years to dispose of his cigar business and devote his entire attention to the basket enterprise; this he still continues, making shipments to diverse sections of the Union and realizing excellent financial returns. In 1899 he again identified himself with the cigar business, which he handles on an extensive scale in a wholesale way, utilizing the local product but not maintaining a factory of his own. He is known as an energetic, far-sighted and progressive business man, while his personal integrity and his loyalty as a citizen have cemented the respect and good will of all with whom he has been variously associated. In political allegiance he is identified with the Democratic party, and has served in various local positions of trust, having for the past fifteen years held a school directorship in Dallastown, and previously for nine years, a similar position in another district of York township. In 1873 he was assessor of that township and in the following year served as tax collector, while for fifteen years he was justice of the peace in Dallastown, retiring from the office in 1901. Mr. Peters is identified with a number of local enterprises of importance, aside from that of which mention has already been made. He is a member of the directorate of the First National Bank of Red Lion, the Dallastown Water Company and the Merchants’ Cigar Box Manufacturing Company, and is a director and the treasurer of the Southern Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the Dallastown Musical Association, being also one of those associated in the ownership of the Dallastown market house. Mr. Peters is a charter member of Dallas Lodge, No. 1017, I. O. O. F., which was organized in 1894, and he served as its treasurer for a period of ten years. Both he and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church.

On June 1, 1884, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Peters to Miss Katie E. Martin, who was born and reared in York county, being a daughter and the third of seven children born to Hiram and Leah E. (Leber) Martin, who were well known and honored residents of Windsor township. Of the other children these facts are briefly recorded: Milton D. and David are residents of the city of York; Samuel is a prominent farmer of Lower Windsor township; Melinda (deceased) was the wife of David G. Miller, of York; Ida is the wife of Jacob Livingston, of York, and Miss Sarah resides in Lower Windsor township. To Mr. and Mrs. Peters have been born ten children, of whom eight are living, namely: Stacy E., who is a member of the class of 1908, at Gettysburg (Pa.) College; Martin L., who is a popular teacher in the public schools of York county, and Hiram M., Florence E., William H., Jr., Martha L., Grace V. and Mary V., who remain at home in attendance at the public schools.

ALBERT H. DIEHL, secretary and director of the Mt. Wolf Furniture Co., Ltd., a flourishing concern at Mt. Wolf, is descended from an old York county family, identified with its history for generations. He was born Jan. 15, 1871, in East Manchester township, son of Charles H. and Lydia (Bare) Diehl.

Charles Diehl, paternal grandfather of Albert H., was born Dec. 27, 1819, and for a number of years followed farming in Manchester township, where he owned a fine farm of seventy-five acres near Mt. Wolf, as well as a few smaller tracts in other parts of York county. His wife was Miss Sarah Gross, who was born March 26, 1824, in Manchester township, and who died Feb. 19, 1900, aged seventy-five years, ten months and twenty-three days. She had outlived her husband by many years, for his demise occurred Sept. 12, 1870, at the age of fifty years, eight months and fifteen days. Both are buried in Union cemetery. The children born to them numbered four, namely: Charles H.; John, a cigar manufacturer, who died in York; Mary, who married S. K. Bare, of Manchester township; and Daniel D., for sixteen years a cabinet maker at Mt. Wolf.

Charles H. Diehl was born Sept. 29, 1849, and on reaching manhood chose farming as his occupation. He bought the old homestead and farmed it for sixteen years, when he sold it to Mathias Baker, and moved to Dover township, settling on the Michael Gross farm. Later he moved to Mt. Wolf, and is engaged there at present in his son’s establishment. He was married Dec. 25, 1869, to Miss Lydia Bare, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Kohler) Bare, of Manchester township, and to their union five children have been born, namely: Albert H.; Sarah, at home; Edward, of Mt. Wolf, who married Miss Martha Feiser; Phebe, at home; and Samuel, at home, a wood carver by trade.

Albert H. Diehl was sent to the Manchester public schools until he was sixteen, and then he started to learn the trade of a cabinet maker with his uncle, Daniel D. Diehl. After three years with him he worked another three years for the Weaver Organ & Piano Company in York and then, buying out his uncle, settled in Mt. Wolf. He has built a substantial three-story structure, where he is engaged in the undertaking business, and he also manages a large furniture concern, carrying only the better line of furniture. For a period of three years he was also in business in York Haven, but his establishment in Mt. Wolf was so successful that it demanded his entire attention, and he sold the former business in 1898. In 1901 Mr. Diehl bought the place where he now resides, adjoining his store, and put up a fine double house. A self-made man, and one who has every qualification for success in his line, Mr. Diehl has never been selfishly absorbed in his own affairs, but has always been genuinely interested in the best welfare of the county, and is always ready with his services to further any good movement. He is a Republican in politics, and in religious affiliation a member of the United Brethren Church, where he has been assistant class leader for seven years.

On March 12, 1803, Mr. Diehl was united in marriage with Miss Suetta Krebs, daughter of Henry and Suetta (Schaeffer) Krebs, of York county. Five children have been born to them: Charles H., Roy S., Sarah, James A. and Esther.

LEVI A. RINELY is a native of York county, having been born on a small farm in Lower Windsor township, in what is now known as Yorkana village, on Aug. 2, 1841. His father died only three days after his birth. He is a son of Peter Rinely, who was a day laborer, and, owing to the latter’s untimely death, has practically no information concerning the family genealogy or the personal career.
of his father. His mother died in Lower Windsor township. Levi A. is the younger of the two children born of this marriage; his brother, Peter, died in York a number of years ago and was survived by his widow, whose maiden name was Frey.

Few pleasures and fewer advantages attended the youth of Mr. Rinely, his widowed mother being unable to provide for his maintenance, so that he was placed among strangers when a mere child, and reared by various persons in whose homes he lived, having no opportunities for securing even a rudimentary education and being obliged to work assiduously when a small boy. At the age of twelve years he entered upon an apprenticeship at the trade of shoemaking, receiving his instruction under the direction of Joshua Hendle, in what is now the village of Yorktown, and being thus bound out for a period of three years, within which period he became a skilled workman. After completing his apprenticeship he was employed at his trade until 1866, when he engaged in business on his own responsibility. In the meanwhile Mr. Rinely had given evidence of his patriotism and his loyalty to the Union, in 1862 enlisting in Company C, 130th P. V. I., under Captain Jenkins and Colonel Zinn. He enlisted for a term of nine months and continued in active service for seven days after the expiration thereof, when he received his honorable discharge, at Holmesburg, where he had enlisted. He took part in the battles of Antietam and Chancellorsville, besides numerous engagements of minor importance.

After the close of his military service Mr. Rinely returned to York county, and in 1866 engaged in the boot and shoe business at Long Level, manufacturing the major portion of the goods which he sold. He remained one year at that place and then came to East Prospect and opened a shoe shop. He established a good trade in the early years and his hold upon popular confidence and esteem was such that he was able to gradually increase the scope of his enterprise. He continued to be there actively engaged in the boot and shoe business until 1891, though he had long previously abandoned work at the bench to devote his attention to the management of a well equipped store. He retired from this business in the year named, since which time he has given his attention principally to dealing in farm lands and to the management of his real-estate and other interests. In politics he is a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and fraternity is affiliated with Riverside Lodge, No. 503. A. F. & A. M., at Wrightsville. He has ever been loyal to the duties and obligations of citizenship and has won success by worthy means, while he is deserving of the more honor on the score of being the architect of his own fortunes. At the time of his marriage his scholastic attainments were represented solely in an ability to designate the letters of the alphabet. After he engaged in business for himself he depended to a large extent upon his wife in the handling of his accounts, but he applied himself so diligently to study, in which his devoted wife aided him, that he soon learned to read and write and finally to figure, becoming able to rely entirely upon himself, while through reading and observation he has become well informed. When he located in East Prospect he did not have "two pennies to rub against each other," as he states it, while his clothes were barely sufficient to cover his nakedness. On Sundays he would steal away to the woods, in order that he might not be seen by those who had proper apparel for the day. He was sober, honest, industrious and provident, and thus gained a start in life, winning success in the face of obstacles that would baffle the average man.

On March 27, 1866, Mr. Rinely was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Smith, who was born in Lower Windsor township, York county, March 26, 1842, and was reared and educated in York county, having attended school in East Prospect. She is a daughter of Casper and Elizabeth (Gardner) Smith, who were born and reared in Germany, where their marriage was solemnized, and where three of their children were born. In 1849 the family came to America and took up their residence in York county, where Mr. Smith followed his trade, that of wagonmaking, for many years, while his death occurred in East Prospect, in 1861. His widow passed away in 1875, and of their five children it is recorded that the two younger were born in York county, and the others in Germany, as before stated: John is now a resident of Freeport, Ill.; Mary died, unmarried, when thirty years of age; Joseph is a resident of Gibson City, Ill.; Catherine is the wife of Mr. Rinely; Theresa is the wife of Leonard Olewiler, of York. Mr. and Mrs. Rinely have no children. The wife is a member of the United Evangelical Church, joining the denomination in 1866. Mr. Rinely has been identified with the Jr. O. U. A. M. since 1890.

DRENNING. The Drenning family of Wrightsville is of Irish descent and the American line goes back to the great-grandfather of Col. Richard W. Drenning, who was an early settler in Newcastle county, Del. He spelled his name Drennen, which some of his descendants changed to Drenan, and finally Drenning, the present form. The Drennens were linen weavers in Belfast and Donegal, Ireland. The great-grandfather came to this country about the time the Swedes were settling Delaware, and made his home near Newark, Newcastle county, that state, where his son James was born. The latter is believed to have been a soldier in the Revolutionary war. The children of James Drenning were as follows: (1) Ebenezer, who enlisted from Newark, Del., as a private in the war of 1812, was with Gen. Jackson, at the battle of New Orleans, after which he was sent with a troop of horse to a military post in one of the western territories. He was never heard from thereafter and was supposed to have been killed by Indians. (2) Samuel, who married Deborah Garrett, died near Newark, Del., leaving one child, Garrett. (3) William became the father of Col. Richard W. Drenning and William Cochran Drenning. (4) Joseph died, unmarried, near Oxford, Chester Co., Pa. (5) Ruth, who married Robert McIntyre, died in Oxford, Pa. (6) Margaret (known as Peggy) married James Barnes, and died on the farm in Fulton township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

William Drenning was a lifelong farmer. He was born in 1796 on the family homestead, which was on the line between Chester county, Pa., and the adjoining county in Delaware. During the war of 1812 he and his brother Samuel were members of a military company known as "The Wasps," and were on their way to Baltimore when peace was declared. William Drenning married Mary Boyd, of Chester county, whose father, of Scotch-Irish blood, was Col. John Boyd, of Revolutionary fame. They began their married life on a farm in Chester county, near Oxford, and there the family remained until 1846. In that year Mr. Drenning went to Fulton township, Lancaster county, where he took charge of the farm of Hon. Jeremiah Brown, which he managed for eleven or twelve years. He then settled on a farm of his own in Fulton township, which he bought of Elwood Stubbs. In 1839 Mrs. Drenning died on the farm where she began house-keeping. She and her husband were members of the Presbyterian Church. From early days the Drenning family have been of that denomination, but when the split in the church occurred many went with the newer faction. In politics the family were always Democrats until William Drenning joined the Know-Nothing party, and later came over to the Republicans. A family story tells how his son and some youthful companions followed him to a secret meeting of the Know-Nothings, the boys thinking they were going to surprise the sober-minded widow in a visit to some lady. They hid in a loft in the unfinished house to which they traced Mr. Drenning, next morning enjoying his perplexity when they alluded to matters discussed at the secret meeting.

William and Mary (Boyd) Drenning were the parents of the following ten children: Mary (deceased), who married Robert Barnes; Jackson, a farmer and dairymen, who married Martha Merchant, and died in Chester county; John, a farmer, who married Mary A. Heppe stall and died in Wrightsville; William Cochran, who is mentioned below; James K., who married Martha, daughter of John Reed, and is a farmer in Lancaster county; Helen, who married Henry N. Flora, of Wrightsville; Samuel, a farmer, who married Annie McCall, and died in Lancaster county; a child who died in infancy; Col. Richard W., who is mentioned below; and his twin sister Margaret, who married (first) a Mr. Pinkerton, and died in Chester county.

William Cochran Drenning, for nearly twenty years a resident of Wrightsville, was born Jan. 26, 1828, near Oxford, Chester Co., Pa., and received his education in the subscription schools of the neighborhood. He was brought up to farm work, and remained with his father until he was twenty-three years old. He was apprenticed to the tanner's trade with James Thomas, a Quaker, and for a time followed that calling. In 1847 he went to Baltimore to learn the trade of a furrier with John Jay. Even in that day secession was in the air, and, although the politics of young Drenning were satisfactory to his fellow-citizens, the fact that he was from the North was against him. He became involved in a brawl, and at the end of a year returned to Pennsylvania. He worked at his trade in Lancaster county until 1851, when he went to Cuba and became overseer of slave labor on a plantation. His first six months' work gave such satisfaction that he was made major domo of the plantation, with the entire management in his hands, and he remained in that position seven years. Returning to Pennsylvania he found employment with Mr. Thomas, of whom he had learned his trade. In the meantime his brother-in-law, Henry N. Flora, had died, and Mr. Drenning came to Wrightsville to straighten out the business affairs of his sister. He has ever since remained there, engaged in various occupations. When the new cemetery was opened, in 1871, he was made superintendent, and continued in that position until 1897, when he retired from active business life. In church matters he inclines to the Presbyterian faith. He has always been a Democrat in politics. His first Presidential vote was cast for Polk; before that he had voted at a township election, where, to please his father, he cast his ballot for Judge Brown, one of his father's friends.

Col. Richard W. Drenning is a wealthy hardware merchant of Wrightsville, where he has been a prominent citizen and business man since 1880. He was born in Oxford, Chester county, in October, 1838, and his mother died when he was three months old. Until he was ten or twelve years old he was cared for by two aunts. His father then took charge of the farm of Associate Judge Brown, in Lancaster county, near the Quaker settlement of Goshen, in the neighborhood of Penn Hill church, two miles and a half from the birthplace of Robert Fulton (now Fulton township), and there Richard grew to manhood. He attended school at Goshen in a little brick building, 10x16 feet in dimensions. His schooling was much interrupted, as he was obliged to remain at home nearly every other day to assist in threshing and other farm work, and he left school altogether when he was seventeen.

Col. Drenning worked for his father on the farm until the outbreak of the Civil war, and, after the crops had been harvested, went to Philadelphia to join the army. On Oct. 2, 1862, he enlisted for four years' service in the U. S. Marine Corps, and was ordered to Washington for instructions. He was assigned to a heavy ordnance testing battery at Geisborough Point, and, after four months there, was sent to the navy yard at Washington for eight months, during that period being promoted to the rank of corporal. During his assignment at Washington a battalion of 500 marines was detailed to co-operate with General Gilmore in his attack on Fort Sumter. The attempt failed with a loss of many marines and blue-jackets. At the end of twenty-eight months Mr. Drenning received his discharge through the Secretary of the Navy. He then went to Philadelphia to receive instruction from General Taggart in tactics and maneuvers, that he might take charge of a body of colored troops. However, he did not receive his commission. He remained in Washington a short time, and then returned home. In 1865 he married Sophia Wicks, whose home was in the neighborhood of Penn Hill, Lancaster county, and who was a daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Reynolds) Wicks.

After his marriage Col. Drenning engaged for a time in farming on shares in Lancaster county, and in 1869 located near Wrightsville, York county, upon the farm of his brother-in-law, Henry N. Flora, the husband of his twin sister Margaret. There he remained until the spring of 1880, when he came to Wrightsville and established a hardware business, handling also farm implements, fertilizers, etc. He has been very successful in this enterprise and has built up a large and flourishing trade. Four boys have been born to Col. and Mrs. Drenning, as follows: Silas Casey, chief train dispatcher on the Pennsylvania railway system, at Baltimore, who married a Miss Shenberger; Horatio Clifton, in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, at Baltimore, who married a Miss Eichelberger, of York; William Herbert, clerk in the office of the superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railway Company at Baltimore, unmarried; and Walter Lee, telegraph operator and collector for the Pennsylvania Railway Company at Wrightsville, who served as a private in Company I, 8th P. V. I., in the Spanish-American war.

Col. Drenning is prominent in fraternal circles, being a member of the F. & A. M., Riverside Lodge, No. 503, Wrightsville, of which he is past master; a member of the Golden Eagles, Wrightsville; a member and past commander of Lieut. R. W. Smith Post, No. 270, G. A. R., and now serving his second term as colonel on the staff of the department commander of the G. A. R. of the De-department of Pennsylvania. He was made notary public to serve from Feb. 27, 1900, for five years. Col. Drenning is not a church member, but was reared in the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Democrat, although he cast his first vote for Lincoln. His second Presidential ballot went for Gen. McClellan. Col. Drenning is active in town affairs; has served twice as chief burgess of the council, twice as constable and twice as member of the school board, having filled every office in the gift of his fellow-citizens. His fortune was once told by a gypsy, who warned him that as a seventh son he would never die in bed; otherwise, he appears to have been born under a lucky star.

Capt. John H. Drenning is a son of John and Mary A. (Heppenstall) Drenning, and was born in Wrightsville, Aug. 6, 1865; his widowed mother is still living there. When John H. Drenning was eight years of age his parents moved to Chanceford township, where he was brought up on the farm until he was fifteen years of age, when they returned to Wrightsville. His educational opportunities were few and his school days were much interrupted. His first teacher was Mr. Woods, well known in the country schools, who was then teaching in Chanceford township. Mr. Drenning never attended any but country schools, but supplemented their training by hard study at home, and he has never outgrown his studious habits. He acquired a thorough knowledge of farming, as he was obliged to work at that vocation early and late, from the time he was a boy. At sixteen he was apprenticed to the cigar trade with S. R. Kocher, and then worked as journeymen under Jacob Kline, D. S. Detwiler and Jacob Lessing in Hellam, having pursued that trade at intervals ever since. He also learned the business of house-painting and paper-hanging, and acquired considerable skill as a carpenter, doing inside finishing and being able to turn his hand to many kinds of work connected with house-building.

At the age of eighteen Mr. Drenning enlisted in Company I, 8th Pa. N. G., for five years. During that period he was promoted to the rank of corporal and re-enlisted for three years, rising to the rank of quarter-master sergeant. After serving his term he again re-enlisted for three years, was again promoted to the position of quarter-master sergeant, then to that of first lieutenant, and finally captain. He was captain of his company when, in April, 1898, the regiment was ordered to Mt. Gretna to be mustered into service for duty in the Spanish-American war. In that capacity he went with his company to Camp Alger, Va., where the troops remained from May 18th until the latter part of August, when they were ordered to Camp Mead, at Middletown, Pa. Thence they were ordered in November to Camp Augusta, Ga., where they remained until spring, being held as reserves in readiness to take the field. Peace being declared they were mustered out March 17, 1899. Mr. Drenning then returned home, and has not since resumed his connection with the militia, his health having been impaired by the exposure and hardship of camp life. He had seen active service before the war, having been on duty, at the head of his company, during the home- stead riots and the strike at Hazleton.

Previous to the war Capt. Drenning had been in business for himself as a cigar manufacturer, but left his private interests to answer his country's call. After his return he took the position of foreman in the cigar factory of B. F. Able, at Hellam, and remained there until 1902, when he again established himself in business. He manufactures a fine grade of five and ten cent cigars, and has established a good trade, now employing eight hands steadily throughout the year.

Capt. Drenning married, in Wrightsville, Elinora Ruby, daughter of George and Susan (Arnold) Ruby. They have three children, as follows: Stuart R.; John W., born Feb. 14, 1892; and Catherine R., born Dec. 17, 1903. Capt. Drenning votes the Democratic ticket, and does what he can for party interests, albeit he is no politician. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Chihuahua Lodge, No. 317, and the Encampment, at York, and in religion is affiliated with the Methodist Church. He began life as a poor boy and had no outside aid in his struggle for success but founded his own fortune by steady industry and by energetic application to whatever he undertook.

John C. Gehly. The Gehly family has been resident in Pennsylvania since at least the middle of the eighteenth century, but at that period was identified with Lancaster county, and it was not until after 1800 that it was first represented in York county by John Gehly, grandfather of John C. Gehly.
John Gehly was born in Lancaster county, near Ephrata, in 1777, but migrated to York county in early manhood. He located in Windsor township, married Annie Lehman, whose father, Frederick Lehman, also came originally from Lancaster county, and became a farmer of prominence, also following his trade as a cooper. He was a Whig in politics, and a Mennonite in religious belief. He died June 18, 1846, and was buried on his farm in the Gehly burying ground, which he had himself located there. The children born to him and his wife were: Lydia, Mrs. John Wallick, who died in East York; David, who lived only sixteen years; Daniel L.; Mary, Mrs. John E. Beard, who died in lower Windsor township, aged thirty-nine. Frederick Lehman, Mrs. Gehly's father, moved to York county when a young man, married there, and settled on the farm now occupied by John C. Gehly, where Mrs. Gehly was born.

Daniel Lehman Gehly was born in Windsor township, Oct. 15, 1807, and was brought up on his father's farm. He was sent to private schools and made the most of his opportunities, being naturally a student and deep thinker. He learned the process of making woolen goods which was then used, worked at mills in different places and became both well known and highly esteemed. He was active in public affairs, was a colonel of militia, and in 1846 was elected on the Whig ticket to the Assembly, where, however, nearly all his colleagues were Democrats. He was an ardent Whig until the Republican party was formed and then adopted its principles, having always been opposed to slavery. In religious belief he was a Mennonite. Daniel L. Gehly was married in 1834 to Margareta Ann Dosch, who was born in Lower Windsor township in 1834, her father being John C. Dosch, a prominent farmer there and a colonel in the militia. The children born to this union were: Benjamin D., deceased at sixteen years; Mary M., Mrs. John Forry, of Philadelphia; John C.; Jacob, who died in infancy; Sarah Ann, deceased; Daniel W., of Freysville; Amos L., deceased at the age of twenty-nine; and Theodore H., who operates a carpet establishment in York. The father of the family passed away at his home in 1890 and his wife died ten years later.

John C. Gehly was born on a farm adjoining his present home, Oct. 16, 1839. He was sent to the common schools at first, and was taught by Daniel G. Kaufman and by Rev. Benjamin Hengst, of York. Later he entered the Millersville Normal, then directed by Prof. James Wickersham, and was graduated at the age of twenty. One of his fellow students was an ex-Senator, Harvey Haines. Mr. Gehly began teaching while still a normal student, and was only eighteen years of age when he took charge of his first school in Hellam township. He taught the Hellam school for two terms, and then one each at Windsor and Levergoods, in Hellam township, and in his home district. Meantime, his vacations from the time he was ten years old, had been spent about his father's woolen mill and he had also helped on the farm during haying and harvesting seasons. In the mill he gained experience, later of much value to him. At that time the neighboring farmers all raised sheep, brought the rolls of wool to the mill where they were carded and woven into yarn, and then the yarn was made into dress goods by the farmers' wives.

At the age of twenty-one Mr. Gehly removed to Clark county, Ohio, and worked on a farm and in a flour mill from the spring of 1862 until the fall of 1864, during which period he married. Returning home, he went into his father's woolen factory at a time when the business was greatly enlarging, and has been connected with it ever since. After his father's death he took entire charge of the mills and farm for his mother, and since she too died, in 1900, they have been his own property and have absorbed his entire attention. At the time of his mother's death he was serving as deputy revenue collector, a position he held one year and three months. Mr. Gehly has always been an active Republican, and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. He filled the office of school director for one term, but has had little time for public service. Reared in the Mennonite Church, he is not a member of any denomination.

Mr. Gehly's first wife to whom he was united Nov. 24, 1863, was Mary C. Brewer, born and reared in Clark county, Ohio, daughter of Peter J. and Kesiah (Mowdy) Brewer. Her father was born in Clear Spring, Washington county, Md., in 1818, and in 1840, with his wife, who was a native of the same place, he started by wagon for Ohio, and there all their children were born. He was the son of Jacob Brewer, who married a Miss Herr and probably migrated originally from Lancaster county. Mrs. Mary (Brewer) Gehly died at the homestead in 1896, and is buried in the family graveyard on the farm. She was the mother of the following children: Mary M., Mrs. Morris T. Olewiler, of Red Lion; Nora B., unmarried; D. Brewer, secretary of the Cambria Iron Co. at their offices in Philadelphia; John L., proprietor of the Palace Horseshoeing Shop, of Fairmount avenue, Philadelphia; Elmer E., a carpenter in that city. On Aug. 28, 1898, Mr. Gehly again married, his second wife being Mrs. Savilla Stauffer, widow of David F. Stauffer; her maiden name was Wanbaugh. By her former husband she was the mother of sixteen children, of whom nine are living, as follows: William E., of Lower Windsor township; Anna, who married Leander Kissinger, of East York; John, of York county; Martha, Cora and Elizabeth, all unmarried; Nettie, who married William Ellicker, of Dillsburg, Pa.; Charles E., of Venango county; and Silas, at home.

CHARLES KOHLER is recognized as a representative business man of the county, with whose history the family has been prominently identified since the latter half of the eighteenth century, when its pioneer members located in the wilds of that section and identified themselves with the development and upbuilding of what is now one of the most attractive and favored divisions of the old Keystone State. Mr. Kohler stands at the head of the firm of Charles Kohler & Co., manufacturers of cigar boxes, Dallastown, and is one of those alert, progressive and public-spirited citizens who have made the borough one of the important commercial, industrial and civic centers of his native county, while his course has been such as to firmly retain the confidence and good will of all who know him, or have had dealings with his concern.

The Kohler family has been influential in York county for more than a century, and the name has ever stood for integrity of character and for marked business acumen and loyal citizenship. George and Catherine Kohler, grandparents of Charles, were born and reared in York township and there passed their entire lives, the former having been a farmer by vocation. Jacob and Mary (Seachrist) Kohler, parents of Charles, likewise passed their entire lives in York township, the father a farmer and miller and one of the influential citizens of the township. He died at the age of sixty-six years, and his wife passed away in May, 1861, aged fifty-three years. Both were devoted members of the Lutheran Church, and the father was a stanch Democrat in his political proclivities. They became the parents of eight children, of whom our subject was the youngest, while of the others it is recorded that Adam died Nov. 27, 1904, a well known cigar manufacturer of Dallastown; Jacob is engaged in the same line of enterprise in Nashville, York county; John is a prosperous farmer of Chanceford township; Eli and George are deceased; Leah became the wife of Henry Neff, and is deceased, as is also Cassandra, who was the wife of Henry Myers.

Charles Kohler was born on the home place, one and one-half miles south of the present borough of Dallastown, York township, Sept. 3, 1846, and there he was reared to maturity, having duly availed himself of the educational advantages afforded by the common schools of the locality, which he attended until he was eighteen years of age, when he secured a clerical position in the general store of Geesey & Barshinger, of Dallastown, an incumbency he retained for two years, and later for two years was with Barshinger & Kohler at Felton. In 1873 he located at Dallastown and engaged in the carriage business, establishing an excellent trade in the sale of vehicles and continuing the enterprise until 1880, when he sold out and engaged in the manufacture of cigar boxes at that place. He began operations upon a somewhat modest scale and gradually developed the splendid business which he today controls, the firm of Charles Kohler & Co. being known to every cigar manufacturer of this section as one of the most reliable in its line, so that the supporting patronage is large and appreciative. The firm has a well equipped plant, in which about thirty individuals are employed, while the output capacity is 3,000 boxes per day. Mr. Kohler takes a deep interest in the progress and material prosperity of his home borough and has served as a member of the Dallastown council, while he has ever stood ready to lend his aid and influence in support of enterprises and undertakings for the general good. In politics he gives a stanch allegiance to the Democratic party, and both he and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church.

On Aug. 18, 1872, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Kohler to Miss Emaline Geesey, who was born and reared in York township, being a daughter of Jonathan and Sarah (Flinchbaugh) Geesey. Mrs. Kohler is one of seven children, and it may be stated that her brother Adam F. is a resident of the city of York; Jonathan and Pius reside in Dallas-town; John F. died in 1902; Mary is the widow of Henry Barshinger and resides in York; and Sarah is the wife of David Peters, of York. Mr. and Mrs. Kohler have one child, Phineas Latimer, who was born Feb. 20, 1879, and who is now associated with his father's business, being one of the popular young men of the borough.

WILLIAM T. BAHN is a representative farmer of York township, where he has a well-improved place which bears the unmistakable evidences of thrift and prosperity, and being a scion of stanch old pioneer stock in York county, is also specially worthy of consideration in this historical compilation. Mr. Bahn was born on a farm in York township, York county, on June 17, 1850, early became inured to the invigorating work of the home farm and duly availed himself of the advantages offered in the common schools of his native township. When about sixteen years of age he began what was essentially an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, in due time becoming a skillful artisan. In the meanwhile he was able to further satisfy his ambitions in the matter of securing more extended educational discipline by becoming a student in the York County Academy, where he remained for a short term. Here he made himself specially eligible for pedagogic honors, putting his scholastic attainments to practical test by successfully teaching for nineteen terms in North Codorus, Springfield and York townships. In 1890 he purchased what was known as the Glidfelter property, comprising eighty-eight acres of fine land in York and Springfield townships, and there he was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits for the ensuing eleven years, when he disposed of that tract and purchased his present fine farm, known as the old Kohler homestead. This comprises 151 acres, the location in York township being most eligible and attractive and the soil of exceptional fertility. The residence on the place, constructed of wood and stone, has been greatly improved since he came into possession of the property. In its original form it was built in 1833 by Adam and Eva Leicht, who then owned the place. Mr. Bahn has brought distinctive energy and discrimination to bear in conducting the various departments of his farming industry, and has found the great basic art of agriculture well worthy of the attention which he has bestowed upon it, since through the goodly benefits thereof he has gained independence and prosperity of no equivocal order. He is a loyal and enterprising citizen, taking an intelligent interest in the affairs of the day and especially in local matters of a public nature; he has never abated his strong hold on the confidence and esteem of the people of his native county, being there considered an exemplar of honor and usefulness in all the relations of life. In politics he accords allegiance to the Democratic party, and has been called upon to serve in various positions of public trust, including those of township assessor and clerk, and inspector and judge of elections. Both he and his wife are valued and active members of the Lutheran Church.

On Nov. 25, 1875, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Bahn to Miss Sarah Ellen Ness, who was born in Springfield township, York county, on the 16th of April, 1851, she being a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Cox) Ness. Mr. and Mrs. Bahn have five children: Joseph E., who is associated with the Dallastown creamery; Ada V., the wife of Charles Scheaffer, who resides on the Fahs farm, in York township; Mary Ellen, the wife of Latimer Innerst, who resides on the Gladfelter farm in York county owned by William T. Bahn, and Sue Elizabeth and Mabel Grace, who remain at the parental home. The family are prominent in the social life of the community, while their attractive residence is a center of unreserved hospitality.

CHARLES R. KRUG, general manager of the Hanover Bending Company, Hanover, ranks as one of that borough's leading and influential business men. Mr. Krug is a native of Adams county, born near the York county line Sept. 22, 1865, son of Rufus and Ellen (Glass) Krug, and grandson of George Krug, who was born in Adams county, near Hanover.
Rufus Krug, the father, was a native of Adams county, born about the year 1830. For many years he was engaged in the milling business and later as a wholesale dealer in tobacco. In connection with those business engagements he also operated his farm of 65 acres. In politics Rufus Krug was an old-line Whig and later a Republican. He died in 1901. His wife was a native of Maryland and was born in Carroll county, near the Pennsylvania line, in 1825. She is still living and makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. David Trone. Charles R. Krug was one of eight children, five of whom lived to mature years, namely: George S., cashier of the People's Bank, Hanover; Milton G., unmarried; Charles R., and Catherine, who married David Trone and resides in Warren county, Pennsylvania.

Charles R. Krug was educated in the public schools of McSherrystown, which he attended until his sixteenth year. He then learned cigarmaking with his brother, George S., which trade he followed about three years, when he engaged in the lumber business. For a time he operated a sawmill, manufacturing hard lumber in Adams county. He also owned and operated a sawmill in Washington county, Md. In 1900 Mr. Krug bought a manufacturing property, forming an association with Louis Mizzell, under the firm name of the Hanover Bending Co. They occupy a building which is especially adapted to the business. The product of their factory consists of wheel rims and bows, and from fifteen to twenty men are employed. The lumber comes largely from the States of Maryland, Virginia, and Kentucky, and the completed product, securely packed, is shipped to various sections of the Union. Extensive improvements have recently been made at the bending works, and the entire plant has been remodeled and equipped with modern machinery, the growing trade demanding not only the latest and most improved machinery but a constantly increasing force of men.

Mr. Krug was married in his twenty-first year to Miss Addie M. Masemore, of Hanover, the daughter of John and Lucy (Shue) Masemore. To Mr. and Mrs. Krug have been born five children, as follows: Lillian A., Mildred R., Treva, Pauline and Vera. He and his family are members of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, and reside at No. 119 East Middle street. Mr. Krug is a member of Hanover Lodge, I. O. O. F., the Brotherhood of the Union, and the Woodmen of America.

GEORGE C. EMIGH, one of the prosperous business men and enterprising citizens of York Haven borough, who is superintendent of the York Haven Paper Co., was born in 1858, at Roaring Springs, Blair Co., Pa., son of Jacob C. Emigh.

Jacob C. Emigh in early life was a school teacher, but later took up the study of medicine at the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, from which he was duly graduated. He followed his profession at Roaring Springs until his death, which occurred in 1891. Jacob C. Emigh was twice married, both of his wives now being deceased. The children born to Mr. Emigh and his first wife were: Lloyd, deceased; George C.; E. E. Emigh, who was superintendent of the York Haven Paper Mills for eight years, and now resides in West Virginia; Ariminta; and Katie, deceased. By his second wife Jacob C. Emigh had these children: Edwin, employed at the York Haven Paper Mills; Myrtle; and three others who are deceased.

George C. Emigh spent his early life at Roaring Springs, Blair county, attending the public schools until he was thirteen years of age, when he began to learn the paper-making business, in which line he has since been very successful. In 1877 Mr. Emigh married Hannah Mosel, daughter of William and Angelina (Ott) Mosel, and went to Lock Haven, where he was employed for four years. Mr. Emigh then spent some time in New York and Pennsylvania in paper making, engaging with the York Haven Paper Co., in 1891, as machine foreman. He then went to the Cudorius Mills, where he was employed as superintendent of the mills, remaining there three years. In 1901 he was induced to return to the York Haven Paper Co., where he has since held the position of superintendent. The mills are among the largest in the State.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Emigh were: Oliver R., who is also a superintendent at the York Felt and Paper Co.'s Mills; and Fannie D., who married William J. Reichley, and resides in York. Mr. Emigh is a Democrat, but is not actively interested in politics. The family are devout members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church of York. Mr. Emigh is much esteemed in the community, and enjoys the confidence of his employers.
ADAM KOLLER FREY, who for years was engaged in business at Collinsville, was born Dec. 21, 1837, on the home farm in Shrewsbury township, son of Henry and Sarah (Koller) Frey.

Henry Frey was also a native of Shrewsbury township, York county, where he was engaged as a cooper for some years, and then turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, in which he became well known and prosperous. He died May 21, 1858. In politics he was a stanch Democrat. His religious views were in accordance with the teachings of the Reformed Church, in which he held office. He married Sarah Koller, born in Shrewsbury township, daughter of John Koller, a farmer there. She died on the family homestead, April 19, 1840. The children of this union were: Celinda, Mrs. Henry Seitz, of Glen Rock; and Adam K. The grandfather of Adam K. Frey was a cooper by trade and he also died in Shrewsbury township. The family itself is an old and honored one in York county.

Adam K. Frey was educated first in the township schools, then at an academy and still later at a special normal school at York, completing his course in 1858, at the age of twenty-one years. His first teacher was Martin Hethcote, and his last, Augustus Gring, who was then a theological student. Mr. Frey began to teach school at the age of twenty-two, being thus employed in the home school for three years and for a like period in the Hickory Grove school of Hopewell township. In 1862 he embarked in the mercantile business in Hopewell township, which he continued until 1865, and then sold it and moved to Shrewsbury township, where he taught school during the following winter and prior to his location at New Oxford, Adams county. There Mr. Frey was in business in partnership with H. K. Schnell for two years, removing then to Brogueville, Chanceford township. At that point Mr. Frey pursued his mercantile career for five years and then sold to James W. Kilgore and moved to Baltimore. There he was engaged in a produce commission business for one year, but in 1876 removed to Collinsville, where he was a merchant for a period of thirteen years. In 1889 he sold his business to Jacob Clayman, after which, until 1894, Mr. Frey retired, but in that year resumed business at the old stand in Collinsville. There he continued until 1901, when he disposed of his stock to Gemmill & Andrews, and has since been retired from active effort. In addition to his mercantile interests, Mr. Frey has carried on agricultural pursuits, owning three farms in Chanceford township—one of 150 acres, one of 100 acres and the third of seventy acres—and another good farm of 125 acres situated in Lower Chanceford township. All are valuable properties.

Mr. Frey has been identified with the leading business interests of this section of the county. He is a director in the First National Bank of Red Lion, and in the Southern Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and has served on many township boards. He is a strong Democrat and cast his first Presidential vote for John C. Breckenridge. He was reared in the Reformed Church, but later united with the New Harmony Presbyterian Church at Brogueville, soon after locating in Chanceford township, and he has been an elder in the latter for over fifteen years. His name represents in this section of York county, not only a man of large means, but one honored for uprightness of character and who has gained a high measure of public esteem.

Mr. Frey was married March 11, 1861, in Hopewell township, to Elizabeth Winemiller, daughter of Joseph and Mary Magdalena (Souder) Winemiller, of Hopewell township. They have no children.

JOHN WISE, a farmer living on the borough limits of Red Lion, was born in Chanceford township on a farm near Brogueville, Nov. 6, 1840, son of John and Elizabeth (Warner) Wise.

Henry Wise, grandfather of John, came to York county from Adams county and made his home near Airville, Lower Chanceford township, where he was both farmer and blacksmith. He married a Miss Ellis, and both lived and died on their home farm.

John Wise, son of Henry and father of our subject, was born on his father's farm, and, as he reached manhood, followed the trade of a blacksmith. Later he moved to Chanceford township, commenced farming near Brogueville, and in his declining years lived in retirement in Winterstown, spending his last days at the home of his son John at Red Lion. He was eighty-one years old when he died. His first wife died in 1844, leaving the following children: Christley, who lives near Freysville; Henry, residing on the farm in Chanceford; Mary, Mrs. Adam Kauffman, who died near Dallastown; Sarah, Mrs. Andrew J. Warner, a widow, living in Chanceford township, and John. Two other children lived only a short time. Mr. Wise's second marriage was to a Miss Dipple, of Dallastown, who died there also. By her he had one son, Albert, now living in that town.

John Wise, our subject, attended school until he was nineteen, first near Collinsville, then near Brogueville, and then at Thompson's, all township schools; his first teacher was Jane Campbell, while the last one bore the same family name. His first twenty-two years were spent at home where he helped his father on the farm, but at that age he married and started in life for himself. He bought 105 acres of land from his father, but at the end of a year sold the place to Jacob Shenberger, and bought instead a part of his present farm. Beginning there with sixty-five acres, Mr. Wise added to it until he owned 120 acres; twenty-five acres of this lay within the borough limits of Red Lion, and later he divided it into town lots and sold them. Mr. Wise has been very successful in his enterprises, possessing both good judgment and industry, and his present position is due entirely to his own efforts.

In 1862 Mr. Wise married Catherine A. Blouse, daughter of Jacob Blouse, a farmer near Brogueville, now deceased. Her mother was Mrs. Lizzie (Mitzel) Craley, the widow of Martin Craley. Mrs. Wise, after nearly forty years of married life, passed away in February, 1901, and was buried in the cemetery of the Lutheran church at Freysville, as she was a member of that congregation. She was the mother of seven children, viz.: John A., at home; Sarah E., Mrs. John Gebhard; Annie Amelia, Mrs. John Taylor; Edward Franklin; Ida Catherine, Mrs. Noah Stabley—all of Red Lion; Minnie May, at home, and William. The family is one well known in the township, where Mr. Wise is held in high regard for his many substantial and estimable qualities.

PETER H. MENGES (deceased). Among the old and venerable residents of Heidelberg township, York county, who in past years bore an important part in the development of that section of the State, was Peter H. Menges, who was born in North Codorus township, York county, Nov. 27, 1835, son of Peter and Nancy (Hershey) Menges, of German and Swiss descent, respectively. His great-grandfather came from Germany when quite young, and settled about five miles west of York, some time before the Revolutionary war. His burial place is at Wolf's church, in West Manchester township.

John Menges, the grandfather, was a farmer, who settled in that part of the home section now owned by Henry Menges, in Jackson township. His family consisted of thirteen children, and he died at the age of sixty-nine years, deeply esteemed by a wide circle of friends who recognized his sterling traits of character.

Peter Menges, father of Peter H. and the fifth child in the family, was born July 1, 1802, spending his early life on the farm and later learning the trade of a miller, being thus employed in Cumberland county, Pa. After his marriage, he moved to the farm of his father-in-law, in North Codorus township, operating it for eleven years and then coming to Heidelberg township, where he purchased a farm and the property known as the Menges mill. There he passed the remainder of his life; his death occurred Oct. 10, 1883, and he was buried at Lischy's church, of which he was elder for twenty years. During that period he devoted much time to church work, and was very devout, accomplishing much good: Throughout the entire community he was known as "Old Father Menges" and was generally beloved. Two children were born to his marriage, Peter H. and John. The latter, born in 1824, was a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church. He was educated at Mt. Joy, Lancaster county, and was received into the ministry by the "Old Pennsylvania Synod" in 1851, having filled after that time various charges in Lancaster and York counties. In 1880 he became pastor of Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church at West Philadelphia. With a few members, he built a mission church, and from that small beginning had developed his charge, until he had a large membership and a flourishing Sunday-school. His work was very successful, and he was a devout, good man, greatly beloved by his people.

Peter H. Menges worked upon the farm and in the mill, and at the same time attended the subscription and public schools of Columbia and Mt. Joy. After completing his education, for eleven years he was a teamster, hauling lumber and general merchandise between Littlestown and the Susquehanna river. After his marriage in 1860, he removed to the homestead farm (first renting it) and there remained ten years. He then embarked in the business of milling and the handling of produce, and, after the construction of the H. & Y. railroad, purchased and built the property known as the Menges mills, store and warehouse, creating thereby an excellent market for produce, and dealing largely in it. Mr. Menges was largely instrumental in securing the railroad through that section, and was actively engaged in its construction. In 1863 and 1864 he held the office of internal revenue collector of the Fifteenth division of Pennsylvania, and had also been upon the school board.

On Jan. 24, 1860, Mr. Menges was united in marriage to Kate Hinkle, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Hinkle, of Lancaster county, Pa., of Irish and German descent. Seven children have been born of this marriage—three sons and four daughters: John; Alvin; Willie; Annie, Mary and Pacie, deceased; and Minnie. He was a prominent member of the Lutheran Church at Lischys' and later of Spring Grove Church, in which he was deacon eight years and Sunday-school superintendent for nearly twenty. In fact, he became so prominent that in 1875 he was selected as a delegate to the Sunday-school convention at Philadelphia. He died Oct. 27, 1904.

John Menges, the eldest child of Peter H., was born Feb. 28, 1864. Educated in the common schools of Heidelberg township and at Baugher's Academy, Hanover, Pa., he worked around the mill and farm owned by his father for two years. In 1886 he established his present store at Menges Mills, where he installed a complete line of general merchandise and has successfully conducted it ever since. In 1888 he married Maggie Faust, daughter of William Faust, of Springfield township, York county, and the children born to them are: In 1888 he married Maggie Faust, daughter of Henrietta; Catherine and Margaret, both deceased, and Elizabeth, a bright little girl of five years. In politics he is a Republican; was a census enumerator in 1890, and has held the office of postmaster at Menges Mills since May, 1900. He is a member of the Lutheran Church at Spring Grove, Pennsylvania.

DAVID A. FREY (deceased), for many years the editor and proprietor of the York (Pa.) Weekly, was born in that city in 1826, son of Jacob and Catherine Frey.

Jacob Frey was a tailor by trade and had his place of business for a number of years at the corner of Market and Duke streets, York, where he enjoyed a good patronage. He lived to the age of seventy years, and was buried in the Prospect Hill cemetery, where his wife was also interred. Their children were as follows: John, a hatter by trade; David A.; Benjamin; Alexander, also a hatter; and Sarah, who married John Hunter and died in 1854, seven years before her husband's demise.

David A. Frey was educated in the York County Academy, and for several years after finishing his own studies taught in Hellam and Dover townships. On relinquishing the profession of a teacher Mr. Frey entered upon the field of journalism, and in 1851 established the York (Pa.) Weekly, with his office at the corner of Market and Duke streets. This was his vocation during the whole of his active life, but for his last ten years he lived retired. His death occurred July 11, 1900, and he was survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Jonston (King) Frey. Mrs. Frey was a daughter of Henry and Leah King, and she died July 16, 1905. She was buried beside her husband in Prospect Hill cemetery.

Six children were born to David A. and Mary Frey. David E., the eldest, a dealer in hides in York, married Miss Fannie J. Fisher. Mary Grace became the wife of Samuel H. Bechtel, who is in the implement business in Hanover. Victor K. married Miss Flora Baker, formerly of Uniontown, Md., and he is in the publishing business at his father's old stand on South George street. Edgar A., who married Miss Ella Thomas, is one of the firm of Frey & Thomas, wholesale dealers in grain and hardware, located on North George street, York. Horace King died when thirty-five years of age. Ralph W. is the youngest.

P. H. HERSHEY, chief burgess of the borough of Spring Grove, and one of the leading business men of that community, was born in York county, in the vicinity of Spring Grove, Oct. 31, 1865, a son of Andrew M. and Magdaline (Hoke) Hershey. Andrew M. Hershey was born in the same township and county as his son, in April, 1817, and died in March, 1904. He was one of the prosperous farmers of his neighborhood, having owned fine farms of 87, 117 and 125 acres respectively, which he had brought to an excellent state of cultivation. All of the improvements upon them consisting of a comfortable dwelling, bank barn, and necessary sheds, etc. were built by him, and he was throughout life, a hard working, thrifty man. In politics, he was a Democrat, and was honored by election to several township offices. In religious faith, he was a member of the old Mennonite Church, while his wife was a member of the Reformed Church. Mrs. Hershey was a daughter of Solomon Hoke, and she was born in York county, near Spring Grove, in 1821, dying in 1886. In disposition, she was a sweet, Christian woman, and held the warm affection of all who knew her.

P. H. Hershey passed his youth upon his father’s farm, and attended the district school. Later, he had the advantage of a course at a select school and a training at the Millersville State Normal school; the latter consisted of a three-years' course, after which he began teaching. His first school was in the country, but so efficient did he prove, that he was selected to teach in the Spring Grove Grammar school. There he continued for ten years, giving universal satisfaction and endearing himself to pupils and patrons alike. About this time, he decided to engage in farming, and turned his attention to that pursuit and the breeding of fine stock. For years he bred some of the finest short-horned cattle and Poland China and Berkshire hogs in the county, and also has taken a great interest in select horses, breeding from thoroughbred mares. Mr. Hershey owns a fine farm, near Spring Grove, which is well stocked and conducted under his supervision. In addition to his agricultural interests, Mr. Hershey is a stockholder of the People’s National Bank of Spring Grove, of which he was one of the organizers. It was through Mr. Hershey’s untiring efforts that the Spring Grove Canning factory was established in 1905, the new enterprise meeting with much opposition; notwithstanding which, he carried it to a successful conclusion—which was but characteristic of Mr. Hershey. He is also one of the organizers of the Spring Grove Box factory, which was chartered in 1905, and of which he has been chosen president. He has represented several of the leading insurance companies of the county for the past twelve years, among which is the Farmer’s Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Paradise, York county, Pa., for which he has done a large amount of business.

On Jan. 29, 1888, Mr. Hershey married Miss Lucy Hoffman, of Spring Grove, and they have one son, Chauncey A. In politics, Mr. Hershey is a Democrat, and takes a lively interest in local, county and State politics. For three years, he was a member of the school board, and owing to his long experience as an instructor, rendered very efficient service. In 1897, he was elected chief burgess of the borough of Spring Grove, and held the office continuously, with the exception of three years, until March 1, 1906, and he is justly regarded as an official who has the best interests of the borough at heart. In 1904 he was his party’s choice for the State legislature, but was defeated through the Republican landslide which occurred in that year. For the past eighteen years, Mr. Hershey has been a member of the Spring Grove Musical Association. Mr. and Mrs. Hershey are consistent members of the Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Hershey was choirmaster, and for fifteen years past has been principal cornet player. They are prominent in church and social circles, are hospitable people, and highly esteemed by all who have the honor of their acquaintance.

DANIEL D. EHRHART, senior member of the Ehrhart, Conrad Company, of Hanover, York county, was born in Shrewsbury township, York county, Feb. 13, 1849, the son of Henry and Julia (Diehl) Ehrhart. The Ehrharts, as the name (presumably “hearts of honor,”) indicates, are of German origin.

William Ehrhart, the paternal grandfather of Daniel D. Ehrhart, was born near the town of York, York township, and farmed during his entire life. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a member of the Lutheran Church, the nearest congregation of which was in the town of York, and it was to that place that William Ehrhart went, summer and winter, to attend worship. Soon after attaining his majority he married, taking as his wife Nellie Runk, a daughter of John Runk. By her he had six children: Emanuel, Henry, Marie, William, Louisa and Eliza.

Henry Ehrhart, the father of Daniel D., was born during the residence of the family in Shrewsbury township, and was reared upon his father's farm. After attending the rural schools and securing an education, which in those days required the perfecting influence of experience to render it useful, except in the most ordinary callings, he learned the trade of a carpenter, and, in connection with farming, engaged in that occupation throughout life. Although the Ehrharts were bred Democrats, Henry Ehrhart became a member of the Republican party, and the fact that he held local offices is evidence of his activity in political affairs. He grew up a member of the Lutheran Church and took an active part in its affairs, for many years holding the various church offices in the congregation of which he was a member. In 1848 he married Julia, a daughter of Adam and Catherine Diehl, who became the mother of Daniel D., and five other children: Charles; Samuel; Louise, wife of H. A. Young; Elsie, wife of W. D. Bortner, and William, wife of John Bommi. Mr. Ehrhart died in 1877; his wife still survives, aged eighty-one.

Daniel D. Ehrhart spent his earlier years on his father's farm in Shrewsbury township, and secured his education in the public schools and at the Shrewsbury Academy. He left school at an early age and worked for a few years on a farm. At the age of nineteen he entered upon his profession of teaching and for six years was connected with the schools of York county. He then located at Hanover as a retail grocer, his trade, in 1883, being enlarged into a wholesale business, now conducted by the firm of Ehrhart, Conrad Company. Since his location in Hanover Mr. Ehrhart has risen to prominence in that town, partly through his business relations and partly through his activity in politics and public affairs. He is a Republican and voted at every election. For eight years he was a member of the school board of Hanover. At present he is an active member and a trustee of St. Matthew's Church, and a teacher in its Sunday-school. He is a member of the Home Building & Loan Association, now holding the responsible position of treasurer of that organization, whose success is greatly due to his efforts. Mr. Ehrhart is connected with four of the secret societies of Hanover, being a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; of McAllister Council, No. 960, Royal Arcanum; of Washington Camp, Patriotic Sons of America, and of Minnewauki Tribe, No. 250, Improved Order of Red Men. Mr. Ehrhart is one of the most popular men of Hanover and has attained the esteem of his fellow townsmen not only through his business, fraternal, religious and civic associations, but through that display of enterprise and energy which has done so much to encourage the growth of the town and foster the splendid civic spirit for which Hanover people are noted. Once the able and experienced teacher, he is now the superior and trained man of business. In his personality he is agreeable, his integrity is conceded and his reputation and character are alike of a high order.

On Feb. 11, 1872, Mr. Ehrhart married Martha, a daughter of Samuel A. and Delia Frey, of York, by whom he had four children: Harry Samuel, and Robert Leroy, living; and Alma B. and Donald Frey, deceased. Mrs. Ehrhart died June 4, 1898, and for his second wife he married, Nov. 25, 1899, Jose phine Wolf, daughter of Prof. John M. Wolf, a prominent teacher at Hanover.

GEORGE W. BAHN, M. D., physician and surgeon of Spring Grove, and one of the leading men of that locality, was born in Codorus township, York county, Oct. 21, 1856, a son of Samuel L. and Susan (Ty son) Bahn. The Bahn family originated in Weimar, Germany, the American founder emigrating to this country at an early date, although his place of settlement is not known. The first member of the family of whom there is any definite record, is the grandfather of Dr. Bahn, Adam, who was a native of York county.

Samuel L. Bahn, father of George W., was born in Spring Garden township, York county, in 1817, and died in 1906. He was a farmer, and devoted the best years of his life to tilling the soil. As a citizen he was well known as a man of progressive ideas, and he left his mark upon his community, residing upon his farm in Manchester township, until his death. His wife, Susan, daughter of Daniel Tyson, an old resident of York county, was born in 1822, and is still living, in possession of all faculties, although now eighty-two years of age. She became the mother of ten children: Susan and Amanda, deceased; Mary A.; Daniel F.; John A.; Samuel F.; Franklin, deceased; George W.; William M., deceased, and Elmer E.
Dr. George W. Bahn received the rudiments of his education in the district school of his township, and then attended the Emigsville Academy, a private school, and the York County Academy at York, Pa., later teaching school for two winters. Dr. Bahn then read medicine with Dr. J. H. Kain, of Manchester, Pa., and when fully prepared entered the medical department of the Maryland University at Baltimore, from which he graduated on March 3, 1881. After graduation, he located at Spring Grove, where he has since practiced and is in the enjoyment of an excellent business. Dr. Bahn is a member of York County Medical Society, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, as well as of the International Association. Fraternally he is a member of Mt. Zion Lodge, No. 997, J. O. O. F., of Spring Grove. He takes a deep interest in educational matters, and for a number of years was a member of the school board, serving as its secretary. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Spring Grove, and is a man of substance, as well as one of the best physicians in York county, his services being widely sought.

In 1880, Dr. Bahn married Alice E. Sitler, of East Prospect, York Co., Pa., a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Burg) Sitler. After his marriage, he took up his residence in Spring Grove. Dr. and Mrs. Bahn are consistent members of Spring Grove St. Paul’s Lutheran Church, and take an active part in its good work.

EMANUEL EURICH, a prominent and highly respected citizen of York, who was for some years engaged in business in that city, is now living retired from active life. Mr. Eurich was born Sept. 14, 1844, near Berlin, in Adams county, son of Emanuel, Sr., and Catherine (Hoffman) Eurich.

John Eurich, grandfather of our subject, was a farmer of Washington township, along the Conewago Creek, and was the father of these children: Sallie, Polly, John, Uriah, David and Emanuel, Sr.

Emanuel Eurich, Sr., was born at Ross-town, York county, and was a lifelong farmer, following agricultural pursuits in both York and Adams counties. He died in the latter county at the age of fifty-one years, being buried at Berlin. His widow, who was Catherine Hoffman, died at the age of seventy-two years, and is buried at Strayers Church, Dover township. This couple were the parents of these children: Louisa, widow of George Harold, is living in York; Leah, widow of Levi Gross, resides at Dillsburg; Aaron, a farmer of Franklin township, married a Miss Smith; Emanuel; Catherine married Alfred Arnold, and they are both deceased; Matilda married Rev. Reuben Rawhouser, a Reformed clergyman, and they are both deceased; Cecelia married William Weigle, and lives in Dover township; and Mary Ann, Samuel and Matilda died young.

Emanuel Eurich attended the common school until he was twelve years of age, when he was put out among the neighboring farmers to make his own way in the world. In 1869 he married Anna Maria Brooks, daughter of Eli L. and Rebecca (Hengst) Brooks, of West Manchester township, both now deceased. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Eurich located on Jacob Louck’s farm in Manchester township, where they remained one year. They then removed to West Manchester township for two years, and then came to York city, where Mr. Eurich was employed with S. M. Smith in the machine business. He also spent one year in that line at Leesport, Pa., after which he returned to York, being first employed by John F. King, and later for eleven years by H. S. Myers. Subsequently he formed a partnership in the implement business with E. S. Brooks, the firm being known as Eurich & Brooks. This association continued for eleven years, Mr. Eurich’s business travels embracing York, Adams, Lancaster, Cumberland and all adjoining counties. He was then in business one year for himself, but in 1902 retired from active life. He is the owner of a great deal of property in York, and built his present fine home in 1897, being also proprietor of a farm of forty acres in Conewago township.

Mr. Eurich is a Democrat, and is a member of Christ Lutheran Church of York. He is a self-made man, and a widely known and highly respected citizen. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Eurich, Oliver B., who died at the age of eighteen years.

SAMUEL BURG is now living practically retired, in Lower Windsor township, where for the past score of years he has been an incumbent of the office of justice of the peace.
He has passed his entire life in York county and has been closely identified with its civic and material progress.

George Christian Burg (or Burgholthouse, as the name was originally spelled) was born in Osnabruck, kingdom of Hanover, Germany, Dec. 27, 1757. Coming to America the family lived for a time in New York city, then coming to York county and numbering themselves among the early settlers of Lower Windsor township. The mansion farm is that now owned and occupied by Samuel Burg, a representative of the third generation in York county, George Christian Burg, who was the grandfather of the latter, married Anna Maria Elizabeth Koenig, who was born in the same town of Osnabruck, Germany, July 17, 1765, and her grandmother was Anna Sophia Meyers, who later became the wife of A. D. Horn, in Osnabruck. Of the children of George C. and Anna M. Burg all but the two youngest (who were born in York county,) were born before the parents reached America. They were as follows: Anna Christina Elizabeth, born July 18, 1786; Johanna Margaretta, born Sept. 27, 1788; Anton Frederick, born Sept. 5, 1791; Anton Daniel, born Sept. 13, 1793; Susanna Wilhelmia Elizabeth, born July 20, 1796; Philip William, born April 27, 1798, was justice of the peace at Longlevel, York county, for twenty-seven years, was a miller by vocation and owned what is now known as the Fry mill; Bernhart Henry, father of Samuel, born March 6, 1801, in Dover, England, his parents being at the time enroute to America; Magdalena Fredericka, born Feb. 18, 1804; Catherine Elizabeth, born Sept. 24, 1807; and Helena Margaretta, born Oct. 17, 1809. Further and detailed data in regard to the family genealogy, and particularly as relates to Bernhart Henry, father of Samuel, are given in the sketch of Henry Burg, appearing elsewhere.

Samuel Burg was born in the home which he now occupies, Sept. 20, 1829, the place being the old mansion farm or homestead of his father, and one of the finest to be found in Lower Windsor township. He was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, and his early educational training was secured under the direction of a man named Ringgold, at Margaretra Furnace, and under Emmanuel Benson, a well known educator in this section in the early days. He left school when sixteen years of age, but had the good judgment to devote as much time as possible to reading useful books so that he laid an excellent foundation for the knowledge he was to gain in connection with the active duties and responsibilities of life. At the age of fifteen years Mr. Burg began driving mules on the canal tow-path, being thus employed one season by his brother-in-law, Jacob Sitter. At the age of seventeen he entered upon an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, under the direction of George Kise, with whom he remained one year, after which he passed one year in the same line of work under the instruction of Samuel Fox, who owned and lived upon the farm now occupied by Samuel Boll. Mr. Burg then gave up the work of his trade, and began farming the old homestead on shares. He continued to be thus identified with the cultivation of his father's farm for a period of eight years, at the expiration of which he purchased a tract in Chanceford township, where he resided one year. In 1860 he let a contract for the building of two canal boats, at Long Level, one being christened "Aloha" while the other bore the title of "Mary Jane & Rachel." After the completion of his boats he rented his farm and located at Margaretra Furnace, while he continued to operate on the canal until after the close of the Civil war. He sold the "Mary Jane & Rachel" in 1861, and continued to operate the other boat until 1866, in which year he gave it into the charge of others; he then entered into partnership with Daniel Leber and engaged in the burning of lime at Leber's mill, continuing to be thus engaged for one year, in the meanwhile selling his other boat. For one year he was engaged in the butchering business, and in 1868, he returned to the old homestead farm near East Prospect, where he continued to follow agricultural pursuits until 1873, when he purchased the old mansion farm of seventy-five acres upon which he now lives, and which has been the family home for many years. In 1866 he disposed of his farm in Chanceford township. The old homestead, which was secured from the government by his grandfather, is one of the attractive farms of York county, is under a high state of cultivation, and is improved with excellent buildings, these including a commodious and pleasant residence, the house in which the present owner was born.

Mr. Burg has been staunchly arrayed as a supporter of the principles of the Republican party from the time of its organization to the present, and he has been called upon to serve in various offices of public trust and responsibility. He was assessor of Lower Windsor township for three years, was judge of elections one year, and for the past twenty years has held the office of justice of the peace, in which he has made a most excellent record. He is one of the prominent and valued members of the United Evangelical Church at East Prospect, having been for many years a member of its board of trustees, as well as class leader and exhortor, and having taken an active interest in all departments of the church work.

On April 1, 1852, Mr. Burg was united in marriage to Rachel Fry, who was born in Windsor township, York county, Sept. 8, 1828, daughter of John and Julia Ann (Haines) Fry, and granddaughter of John Fry, Sr., one of the pioneers of the county. She was summoned into eternal rest Jan. 16, 1897, having been a true and devoted wife and helpmate, and a zealous member of the Evangelical Church. Of her eight children the following is a brief record: Sarah A., is the wife of Aaron Kise, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Henrietta is the wife of Henry Dietz, of Red Lion, York county; Henry W., who married Lydia Gilbert, is engaged in the manufacturing of cigars at East Prospect; Charles S., who married Lydia Norris, resides in Wrightsville; Amanda is the wife of Joseph Strickler, of that village; Minnie is the wife of Charles Detwiler, of Red Lion; Marcus H., who married Miss Ella Klein, has charge of Mr. Burg's farm; and Naomi is the wife of Moses Heindle, of Red Lion. Mr. Burg has twenty grandchildren.

On Dec. 17, 1901, Mr. Burg contracted a second marriage, being united to Mrs. Mary Elizabeth (Kocher) Shultz, widow of Isaac Shultz and daughter of Christian and Mary Magdalena (Auble) Kocher. By her union with Mr. Shultz she was the mother of three children—Garfield, Annie and Emma. Mr. and Mrs. Burg are genial and hospitable, and their pleasant home is one in which a cordial welcome is ever assured. Mr. Burg has retired from active labors in connection with the farm, but still gives much of his time to the supervision of his place, while he is also occasionally called upon to superintend the erection or repairing of mill dams, having had much experience in that line. He is one of the worthy and popular men of his native county.

HENRY BRUNHOUSE, a prosperous and enterprising hotel-keeper of York county, who is engaged in that business at Dover borough, was born in Prussia, Germany, Aug. 14, 1849, son of Charles and Catherine (Myers) Brunhouse.

Charles Brunhouse, the grandfather of Henry, was born in Germany, where he was a farmer and large land owner, farming some 300 acres, near Lubbecke, Province of Westphalia, and there he died. Three sons were born to him, Frederick, Charles (2) and Henry, all of whom died in Germany.

Charles Brunhouse (2), son of Charles and father of Henry, was born in Germany, where he followed farming and trucking. He married Catherine Myers, who was born in that country. Both died in Germany. The following children were born to them: Frederick W., of York, who first engaged in burning lime, and was later in the mercantile business in York, now being street commissioner there; Mary, who married Henry Klamma, and died in Germany at the age of forty-six years; Elizabeth, residing in Germany; Henry; and Henrietta, who married Herman Snyder, and lives in Germany.

Henry Brunhouse worked for his father in Germany until eighteen years of age, and then came to America, landing at New York June 27, 1867. He remained there three days, and then came to York, where he followed teaming for fifteen years. In 1882 he engaged in the restaurant and saloon business on South George street, and in 1897 removed to Dover, where he bought the hotel known as the "Whitehall Hotel," and there he has since conuded.

In 1876 Mr. Brunhouse married Louise Smith, daughter of Henry and Catherine Smith, who was born in Germany and came to America at the age of nine years. Children as follows were born to this union: Charles Henry, residing at home; Augustus, who died in York at the age of eight years and is buried there; and Henrietta, at home. In politics Mr. Brunhouse is a Democrat and greatly interested in the success of his party. He is a valued member of the German Lutheran Church of York, of which he is a liberal supporter. Mr. Brunhouse is a representative citizen of Dover borough, one of the solid, substantial and enterprising men whose good judgment and public spirit continually contribute to the advancement of the town.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN FRICK, ex-
city controller of York, was born June 9, 1841, in the county of that name. His term as city controller expired in April, 1893, and he left a record of which any man might well feel proud.

One of Mr. Frick’s ancestors, Henry Frick, who was an officer in one of the cantons of Switzerland, was born in 1621. He had three children: Barbara, born May 8, 1683; Jacob, Nov. 12, 1684, and John, March 20, 1688.

John Frick, the great-grandfather of Benjamin F., was a son of Jacob Frick, who mar-rried Anna Wittmer, Nov. 19, 1780.

Jacob Frick, son of John, was born Nov.
26, 1782, and Dec. 3, 1811, married Magdalena Pifer, who was born Nov. 12, 1793, and who died Oct. 8, 1822, in York county.

John Pifer Frick, the father of Benjamin F., was born Dec. 6, 1812, in Lancaster country, removing thence to York county, where he married Hannah Hershey, daughter of John Hershey, a farmer of York county. He, in turn, was descended from Andrew Hershey, a native of Switzerland, born in 1668, who came to America in 1719, being followed by his brothers in 1739. Andrew Hershey died in Lancaster county, Pa., Dec. 25, 1754. John P. Frick died in York, Dec. 7, 1891, aged seventy-nine years. He was connected with the Farmers’ Insurance Company, of York, and was a man of sterling integrity. His children were: William H., deceased; Benjamin F.; John J., cashier of the York National Bank;
Abraham, deceased, who was the father of C.
Frick; Mary E., widow of Martin Skinner, a banker of York; Daniel Brandt, who died in childhood, and Joseph Hershey, deceased.

Benjamin Franklin Frick was educated in the common schools of York county, and in the York County Academy. His first business was that of machinist, which he followed for three years. He served for four years and three months in the Civil war, in Company
A, 87th P. V. I., and was made sergeant Aug.
21, 1861, and was promoted from sergeant to second lieutenant in the 39th Colored Regt., U. S. A. He was captured by the Rebels at Carter’s Woods, and was taken as a prisoner of war to Richmond, Libby and Belle Isle.

Second Lieutenant Benjamin Franklin Frick was a prisoner for only one month, when, July 7, 1863, he was paroled, and rejoined his regiment, having been exchanged at City Point, Va. He was mustered into the 39th as second lieutenant in the spring of 1864 and became first lieutenant of Company H, Aug. 12, 1865; during the winter and fall of 1864 he was in command of Camp Birney, in Baltimore; was discharged at Willington, N. C., and mustered out of service with his regiment, at Baltimore, Md., Dec. 4, 1865.

After the war, Mr. Frick became connected with a commission house in Baltimore, Md., and thence removed to York, securing a position with Bilmyer & Small, car builders, where he remained ten years. He then became engaged in the coal trade and afterward in the insurance business. He was elected prothonotary of York county on the Republican ticket, having been the only candidate of that party elected against a united Democratic party.
After serving his term of three years as prothonotary with fidelity and intelligence, Mr.
Frick resumed the insurance business, which he has since conducted with great success.
His office is with Spangler & Woltman, on East Market street.

Mr. Frick was married, in 1871, to Emma Sechrist, daughter of the late Jacob A. Sechrist, who was a well known merchant of York. Seven children have been born to this union, of whom three are deceased; one died in infancy; Hattie, at the age of fourteen years; and an only son, John Jacob, in his twenty-first year. The survivors are: Clara E., Hannah Hershey, Frances Snyder and Susanna Wesley, the latter of whom graduated from the York High School in the class of 1904.

Mr. Frick is a Master Mason. He belongs to Sedgwick Post, No. 37, G. A. R., and to the Union Veteran Legion. He is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, the Heptasophs, the Royal Arcanum and the Knights of Malta. He belongs to the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he has been a trustee for many years, being as popular in the church as he is in the business and political circles of York.

CAPT. HUGH W. MCCALL. The Mccall family has had intimate and honorable connection with York county history for over one hundred and fifty years. Through one of the public institutions of the county, known as "McCall’s Ferry," the name has been kept familiar to each succeeding generation in the county, as well as by the prominent place in affairs always occupied by the members of the family. Intensely patriotic and loyal, there has never been a time when the flag needed defenders but that some members of the family have distinguished themselves by faithful service on the field. A word to note briefly the facts concerning the history of the “McCall Ferry” will serve to introduce the family sketch proper.

McCall’s Ferry was established under the name of White’s Ferry in 1748. The ferry derived its name later from the ancestors of Hugh W. McCall, who were of Irish origin, the earlier ones having migrated from the North of Ireland to America, some time between the years of 1730 and 1760, taking up their residence in York county near what was later called “McCall’s Ferry.” In 1757, Joshua Hedley secured control of the ferry, but was later succeeded by George Stevenson. In 1772, three years before the Revolution, John and Matthew McCall became its owners, and gave to it the name by which it has since been known. The ferry continued in the possession of the family until 1811, when it was purchased by the McCall Ferry Bridge Company. Then it passed through the hands of different parties, among them being Joseph Bailey, of Chester county, who was president of the Bridge Company; his son-in-law, Mr. Marshall, being the next owner, sold his interests to William Richardson, who retained possession until after the War of the Rebellion, when Elias Frey purchased it, and owned and operated it until recently when it was sold to the McCall Ferry Water Power Company.

The McCall family is one of the oldest in the county, the head of the original three families being the great-grandfather of Hugh W. McCall. The grandfather, Matthew McCall, was a farmer of Lower Chanceford township, as was also the father of our subject, James L. McCall, who was one of the promoters in the building of shad fisheries in the Susquehanna at Cully’s Falls. Among others the family owned “Jackson Battery,” named after “Old Hickory,” and where, in 1830, it is said that twenty thousand shad were caught in two days. This battery is still in the possession of the family.

James L. McCall married Miss Sarah Dean Whiteford, daughter of William Whiteford, of Harford county, Md. The latter was captain of a military company in the war of 1812, and distinguished himself at the battle of Havre-De-Grace, where he was captured by the British and taken aboard a British warship. Later he was paroled, and, tradition says, was liberated because he was a Mason.

Capt. Hugh W. McCall was one of nine children, and was born on the Hill Head farm, a part of the old McCall homestead in Lower Chanceford township, York county. He was educated at the Chestnut Level Academy, Lancaster county. Having chosen law as his profession, he studied under Judge Thomas W. Bartley, of Ohio, and later was fortunate enough to read law with Hon. Thomas E. Cochran, Auditor General of Pennsylvania.

At the opening of the Civil war, almost at the first call for defenders, Mr. McCall responded, and was made Captain of Company A, 21st Pennsylvania Cavalry, in which capacity he served two years, during that time participating in more than fifteen battles. After the war he resumed the study of the law; in 1867 was admitted to practice in the courts of his home county, and later to the Supreme, Superior and United States District courts.

Mr. McCall married Miss Rachel E. Kell, daughter of Samuel Kell, a school-teacher. To this union four sons were born: (1) James St. Clair is mentioned below. (2) Hugh Clark is a machinist and resides in York. (3) Samuel K. is a member of the York county Bar. (4) John is deceased. Hugh C. and Samuel K. both served in the Spanish-American war, the former as a member of Company M, 5th Infantry, and the latter in Warburton’s Battery of Philadelphia. These are sons to be proud of, and their success is very gratifying to the family and friends, none more appreciating their efforts, which so add honor to the old family name, than their father, Capt. Hugh W. McCall. A peculiar fact about the birth of these sons is that James St. Clair was born Aug. 15, 1872, on the same day of the month as Napoleon; Hugh Clark, on St. Patrick’s Day, March 17, 1874, while Samuel K.’s birthday occurred April 9, 1876, the date of Lee’s surrender.

The foregoing facts clearly set forth the important part which Capt. McCall’s family has played in the annals of the county. The record is one of service—honest, upright men, and brave, tender, noble women, all seeking the good of the State and the welfare of the nation. As to the generations now playing their parts on the stage of life, no word of commendation is too strong in speaking of their citizenship. Always alert to ally themselves with the forces of law and order, giving voice and material aid to every movement which has outlook for the uplifting of humanity, they deserve, as they receive, a large measure of respect and esteem.

James St. Clair McCall, a well-known lawyer of York, who was triumphantly elected mayor of York on the Republican ticket in February, 1903, for a period of three years, is the youngest incumbent of that position. He received his early education in the public schools of York; graduated from the York high school at the head of his class in 1889, and afterward attended Yale Law School, where he graduated in 1893, again as the leader of his class. At Yale he received the degree of Bachelor of Laws, Magna cum laude, and was also awarded the Frederick H. Betts prize of $50 for leading his class in his Junior year, and the Jewell prize of the same amount for being at the head of the Senior class. The class numbered seventy-eight, only four of whom were younger than Mr. McCall. In 1893 he was admitted to practice at the bar of his native State of Pennsylvania, and is now in active practice in the city of York, before the courts of York county, as well as the Appellate courts of Pennsylvania. James St. Clair McCall married Miss Anna Fluhrer, daughter of William Fluhrer, a merchant of York, Pa. Their only child died in infancy.

Adam Neiman (deceased) was born in 1831, in Conewago township, York Co., Pa., son of George, his grandfather and great-grandfather also bearing the name of George. George Neiman, the great-grandfather, was born in Germany, and his son George (2) settled in Conewago township, where he erected the buildings and made the improvements on the Neiman farm. At death he was buried at Quickel's church in that township.

George Neiman (3), son of George (2), and father of the late Adam Neiman, was, like his ancestors, an agriculturist. He married Mary Ruppert, and they both died in Conewago township and were buried in the old cemetery at Quickel's church. They had issue as follows: Catherine, wife of Jacob Hake, died in Manchester township; Eliza, wife of Jacob Shettel, died in Cumberland county, and is buried at Quickel's church; Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Shettel, lives at York; Sallie, wife of David Maish, and mother of Col. Maish, of York, died in Manchester township; John married Catherine Heilman, and died at York; George married Caroline Gross, and died in Manchester township; Mary married Solomon Shettel, and lives at Princeton, Ill.; Rebecca is the wife of Peter Altland of Manchester borough; Lovina married Henry Hoffman, died in Manchester township and was buried at Quickel's church; Samuel married Elizabeth Ferrence, and died in Dover; Adam; Susanna is the wife of Jacob Rudy, of Steelton; and Leah married William Metzger, of Steelton.

The late Adam Neiman received a common-school education and worked for his father like a good, industrious, dutiful son until his marriage, which took place in 1857, to Elizabeth Bear. Mrs. Neiman was born in 1830, in Conewago township, daughter of Jacob S. and Elizabeth (Stover) Bear, the former of whom was born in Manchester township, York county, where he followed farming and later distilling, in Conewago township. He married Elizabeth Stover, daughter of Henry and Susanna (Bott) Stover. Mr. Stover was also prominent. Mr. Bear owned about 600 acres of land, and later bought a mill at Strinestown. His last days were spent on his farm in Conewago township, where he died aged fifty-seven years, and both he and wife were buried at Quickel's church. At one time he was a colonel of the State militia.

After Mr. and Mrs. Neiman's marriage they settled in Conewago township, where he bought a farm of 140 acres, operating it until 1881, when he purchased a comfortable home with twelve acres of land, and resided on it until the close of his life, being retired for some years. He died April 5, 1899, aged sixty-seven years, eight months and three days, and was laid to rest with his ancestors in the old churchyard at Quickel's church. Of this church he was a faithful member, holding many official positions in it, and giving very generously to its support.

Mrs. Neiman still resides in Conewago township. The family consisted of these members: Martha, who resides with her mother; Alice, wife of George Bupp, of York; Alvin, who married Lillie Shettel, and is in business in Philadelphia; Elizabeth, wife of William Klinedinst, of York; and Annie, who married Albert...
Rawhonuser, died at the age of thirty-five years and is buried at Green Mount cemetery. The family is one of prominence in this township, and no man was held in higher esteem than Mr. Neiman. In politics he was a Republican. For a long time he served the people of the township on the school board, and was always ready to do everything in his power to improve his community and to make his family happy.

JOHN FERTNER, proprietor of the Hopewell Poultry and Fruit farm, was born in Baltimore, Md., July 10, 1863, son of John Sr., and Lizzie (Geisel) Fertner.

John Fertner, Sr., was born in Germany, in 1833, there obtaining an ordinary education and learning the tanner's trade. He married Miss Lizzie Geisel, and they came to America, landing at Baltimore, Md., in 1853. In Baltimore Mr. Fertner was engaged as a furnace hand, then kept store for a time, and about 1865 removed to East Hopewell township. There he rented a farm for several years, after which he purchased a homestead from Robert Wilson, on which he died in the fall of 1900. Mrs. Fertner still resides on the farm. Their children were: Katy, Mrs. George Bock, died in Baltimore; Gussie, Mrs. Phil Myers, lives in Harford county, Md.; John; George, on the home farm, married Maggie King; and Lizzie resides in Philadelphia.

When a small child John Fertner, our subject, was brought to East Hopewell township by his father, and there he received his education and was reared to manhood. His first teacher was Lizzie Hyson, and when he left school, at fourteen years of age, he had been under the tuition of Lydia Kurtz. He was reared to the life of an agriculturist, and at the age of fourteen years began work among the farmers of his section, receiving at first six dollars and a half per month. He received these wages for two years, and then went to work by the day, continuing thus until he was twenty-four years of age. He then farmed tobacco on shares until he was twenty-six years old. On April 30, 1890, he married Miss Gussie Pomeranning, daughter of Fred Pomeranning, of Chanceford township. To Mr. and Mrs. Fertner these children have been born: John (deceased), George, James, Carl and Harry. After his marriage Mr. Fertner purchased his present place of thirty acres and engaged in the poultry business, and for the last six years has made a specialty of White Wyandottes. About 1900 he added horticulture to his poultry business, and now raises fine crops of pears, apples, plums, etc. Mr. Fertner has made a success of his business and is counted among the substantial men of his township. He is a member of St. James Lutheran Church, and has been sexton in that church. In politics he is a Democrat.

JOHN REESER, for a number of years one of the prominent farmers of Conewago and Manchester townships, and for thirty years a justice of the peace, had lived retired from the spring of 1871 until his death in 1892.

Mr. Reeser was born in Manchester township, Jan. 8, 1812, son of William Reeser, and was reared in his native place, where he received his education in the public schools and academy. After his marriage Mr. Reeser purchased a farm of 160 acres in Conewago and Manchester townships, making his home on the Conewago side. He was a prominent man in his time, and took a deep interest in all that promised to benefit his community. For thirty years he was justice of the peace, and served one term as auditor of York, representing the Democratic party. In his later years he was a member of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Reeser married Miss Elizabeth Hake, who was born Feb. 16, 1816, and who died June 26, 1883, the mother of the following children: Mary Ann, born Dec. 29, 1835; died April 16, 1838; Louisa, born April 30, 1837; died June 29, 1837; Sarah Ann, born June 27, 1838; died Aug. 13, 1841; Eliza, born Sept. 12, 1840; died Sept. 28, 1840; one born Jan. 27, 1842, died on the same day; Emma, born July 12, 1843, married William H. Kochenour and died Dec. 19, 1904; Jacob, born June 25, 1844, is a resident of York; Elizabeth, born June 26, 1846, married George Dick, of York; Ann, born Dec. 24, 1848, married John Balm. of York; Franklin was born March 19, 1851; Susan, born Sept. 19, 1853, died at the age of six years, six months and twenty-six days; and John, born July 7, 1856, is a resident of Adams county.

FRANK REESER was born on the old homestead where he spent his boyhood days. He was educated in the public and private schools and the academy, and then taught two winters in the district schools. In 1871, he went West to Decatur, Ill., where he was employed in the boot and shoe business for two years, and then and there, for a period of eleven years, engaged in the line of leather and findings, saddlery and hardware. He then engaged in the tileing business at Litchfield, conducting a large and profitable trade. In 1888, he returned to Pennsylvania, and located at York, where he engaged in the shoe business for some eight years, and subsequently dealt in real estate. Mr. Reeser was a charter member of the York Silk Manufacturing Company, of which he and Mr. Musser were at one time sole owners. He sold out and became a charter member of the Monarch Silk Mills, of which interest he has also disposed. Mr. Reeser has always been identified with any enterprise that proves itself beneficial to the city.

Mr. Reeser was married Jan. 15, 1878, to Miss Louisa H. Hake, daughter of Henry and Emma E. (Vandersloot) Hake, born in Coneywago township. They are the parents of Arthur H., who, on Jan. 1, 1903, became a member of the wholesale grocery and drug firm of C. W. Brant & Co., having a full half interest in the business. He is a thorough young business man, having received his education in the public schools of York, and at Patrick's Business College. Mr. and Mrs. Reeser are members of the Union Lutheran Church of York and reside at No. 422 West Market street.

PHILIP HENISE, who was for twenty-three years engaged as a merchant in Zions View, Coneywago township, was born April 11, 1841, in Dover township, son of David and Lydia (Hilgenrift) Henise.

Barnett Henise, great-great-grandfather of Philip, came from Germany and settled in Dover township, and our subject still possesses the original deed of 1762 to the tract of land, then comprising 196 (now 113) acres. Barnett Henise died in Dover township, and at his death his son John inherited the farm, which he worked until his death in Dover township.

Philip Henise, son of John and grandson of the emigrant, came to the property through his father, and like his parents followed agricultural pursuits all of his life. Mr. Henise was the father of these children: Hannah, Louisa, David, Magdalena and Elizabeth. David Henise was born in Dover township, and purchased the old farm, upon which he worked until a few years before his death, when he went to the borough of Dover and spent the balance of his days in retirement. Mr. Henise married Lydia Igenfritz, who died in Dover borough; and both husband and wife were interred at Strayer's Church, Dover township. Their children were: Philip; Peter, living in York; Sarah, who married Edward Keesey; and Amanda (deceased), who married Martin Hamm.

Philip Henise attended the schools of Dover township until he was eighteen years of age, and then engaged in farming for ten years. In 1867 he removed to Zions View, Coneywago township, where he bought property and engaged in mercantile pursuits, in which he was eminently successful, carrying on the business for about twenty-three years. Mr. Henise resides at home, making improvements, and owns the old family tract, having two farms, of 100 and 113 acres, respectively, in Dover township; also a magnificent farm of 150 acres in Coneywago township, upon which he is superintending the work. Besides all these Mr. Henise is the fortunate owner of a fine piece of timber land.

Mr. Henise married Catherine Eisenhart, daughter of John Eisenhart, who died in 1895 and is buried at Strayer's Church. The children born to this union were: Elsie, who married John Shettle (deceased), of York; and Violetta, who married Frank Irvin (deceased). Mr. Henise's second marriage was to Leah Mary (Mechling) Boyer, daughter of Henry Mechling. Mr. Henise is a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he is an elder. In political matters he is a stanch Democrat, at present serving as auditor of the township. His standing in the community is that of an honest, upright and public-spirited citizen, ready to support and preserve good government.

FRANKLIN EVANS, of Lower Windsor township, who has passed practically his entire life in York county, was born on a farm in Hellam township, York county, Feb. 7, 1842, and is a son of Samuel and Sarah (Hetrick) Evans, the former of whom was born in this county in 1814, while the latter was born at Seven Valley, York county, in 1820. The father passed his early life in Hellam township, where he was reared to maturity on a farm, receiving limited educational advantages. He eventually engaged in farming on his own responsibility and continued to be identified with the agricultural affairs of Hellam township for many years, finally removing to a farm eight miles from Baltimore, Md., where he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1885, at the age of seventy-one years. His widow survived until January, 1904, and her death occurred in Red Lion, York county. Both were devout Christians and in every relation of life commanded general respect and esteem. In politics the father was an unswerving Democrat, being a man of strong mental traits and well fortified in his convictions and opinions. Of the three children Franklin was the first-born; William, who married Miss Amanda Landis, is engaged as tobacco stripper at Red Lion, York county; and Emanuel, the youngest child, died in early youth.

Franklin Evans was afforded the educational privileges of the common schools of Hellam township, which he continued to attend at intervals until he had reached the age of eighteen years, while on the farm he was early inured to the labors of the field. He remained at home until his marriage, June 29, 1865, at which time he was twenty-three years of age. After assuming the new responsibilities Mr. Evans and his father located on the Henry Flory farm, in Hellam township, where they were engaged in general farming for the ensuing two years, after which Franklin individually continued operations for an equal period. He then rented a house and for a number of years worked on various farms by the day. In 1872 he purchased his present farm from Moses Emenheiser, the tract comprising forty one acres of excellent land, all of which is available for cultivation. On the place he has made many improvements, especially in the erection of minor farm buildings for the storage and protection of produce and live stock. He erected his present commodious and attractive residence in 1899, the former dwelling on the place having been destroyed by fire in that year. His wife has proved an able coadjutor and has, by her counsel and her active co-operation, greatly contributed to the success which has so significantly crowned his efforts. The farm is devoted to general agriculture, special attention being given to the raising of tobacco.

In politics Mr. Evans is found staunchly arrayed as a supporter of Republican principles and policies, and though never ambitious for public office, he has never failed to do his part in upholding those enterprises and measures which tend to conserve the general welfare. Both he and his wife are valued and zealous members of the Canadochley Lutheran Church.

On June 29, 1865, Mr. Evans was united in marriage to Sarah Abel, who was born in Lower Windsor township Dec. 17, 1844, daughter of John and Mary (Keller) Abel. Her father was one of the honored and influential farmers of the township, where he died in 1865, at the age of sixty-four years. He held various township offices, and both he and his wife were devoted members of the Canadochley Church, in whose cemetery both were laid to rest. The devoted wife and mother having been summoned to the life eternal in 1894 at the age of eighty-five years. Of the children of this worthy couple it is recorded that John removed to Missouri, where he died a number of years ago; Hannah is the widow of a Mr. Hudson of Missouri; Sophia, also resides in that State, being the widow of Rudolph Flory, who died there; Mary is the wife of Samuel Winters, of Lower Windsor township; George likewise removed to Missouri, where he married and where he passed the remainder of his life; Samuel, a bachelor, is also a resident of Missouri; Henry, who married Miss Mary Fonth, resides on the old home farm, in Lower Windsor township; Peter, who married Elizabeth Fonth, is also a farmer of that township; and Moses, who married Celina Hengst, is a farmer of Hellam township. Mrs. Evans was reared in her native township, and her early educational training was secured in what is known as the Kline school. Concerning the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Evans the following brief record is given: Samuel, born Feb. 17, 1866, died Aug. 5, 1866; John Edward, born May 17, 1867, married Mary McCann and they reside in Baltimore, Md.; Mary Matilda, born Sept. 10, 1869, is the wife of Nelson Sheetz, a cigarmaker, and they reside in Martinsville; Sarah Ann, born Jan. 21, 1871, is the wife of Daniel Fry, of Chanceford township; and Emanuel, born March 19, 1875, died Sept. 20, 1875.

WILLIAM H. YOST, of North York borough, was born in Dover township, in 1847, son of Charles and Sarah (Lauer) Yost. The Yost family is of German origin, and Abraham Yost, the grandfather of William H., was born in York county, being a farmer of Dover township. He married a Miss Feiser, both he and his wife dying in Dover township, where they were also buried.

Charles Yost was born in Dover township, where he received a common-school education, and worked upon his father's farm until his marriage to Sarah Lauver, of Dover township. Mr. Yost first bought his father's five farm, and in the spring of 1849 purchased the old Andrews farm, which is now owned by his son, William H. Yost. Charles Yost built a fine residence here, but for some years prior to his death lived in York City, retired from active labor. His death occurred in 1887, and he is buried at Prospect Hill cemetery, where his wife is also interred. Mr. Yost was a Republican, and while in Manchester township served as school director; he was a consistent member of the Reformed Church, in which he held all of the offices. The children born to him and wife were: Eliza and Ellen reside in York; Sarah Ann, died young, and William H.

William H. Yost came with his parents from Dover township to Manchester township when he was two and one-half years old, and received his education in the public schools, the York County Academy and the Millersville Academy, subsequently teaching school for three years in Manchester township. In 1873 he married Amanda E. Sprenkle, born Oct. 17, 1854, in Manchester township, daughter of George and Sarah (Emig) Sprenkle, the parents of Mrs. Yost being residents of Manchester township, where Mr. Sprenkle died in 1905. After his marriage Mr. Yost located on the family farm, a tract of ninety acres to which he fell heir at the time of his father's death, and another fine property of 115 acres in the same township; he also owns a farm of 119 acres in Dover township. Mr. Yost remained on the family homestead about thirty years, building a fine residence in North York borough. He removed thither in 1901, and buying a small tract of land from Harry L. King built thirty-one houses, most of North York borough standing on his farm. Mr. Yost is prosperous and enterprising, and has hosts of friends in the community. To himself and wife these children have been born: Harvey L., born Dec. 7, 1874, died at the age of six years, Jan. 9, 1880, and is buried at Prospect Hill cemetery; Sadie, born July 10, 1877; Charles Edward, born in August, 1879, attended the York County Academy and the Millersville Normal School, graduated from the Shippensburg school in Cumberland county, attended schools in the West, taught school five years in North York borough, was principal of schools there for three years, was a councilman of North York and is at present teaching in Bradford, Pa.; William Albert, born Aug. 13, 1881, died Nov. 13, 1889; Clayton S. and Nettie S. were born Dec. 19, 1883, but the former died Feb. 13, 1885, while Nettie is a graduate of Patrick's Business College of York; Allen Winfield, born April 5, 1886, is attending the academy at York; Susie Ellen, born July 11, 1888, is attending school in York; Paul S., born Dec. 17, 1891, and Flossie Maria, born March 3, 1894, are both at home. In politics Mr. Yost is a firm supporter of Republican principles, and in religion is affiliated with the Moravian Church.

ANDREW SCHWENK. In the death of Andrew Schwenk, who passed away at 5:25 o'clock on the morning of March 20, 1903, the city of York lost an adopted son who had individually done much for it. At all times he was in the forefront in everything that tended to the general municipal welfare and improvement; in business he was characterized by strict integrity, and socially possessed an innumerable circle of friends drawn to him through his genial nature and warm-heartedness.

Mr. Schwenk was a native of Germany, born in September, 1848, at Burdenberg, where his trade of filemaker was learned under his father. When twenty-one years of age he came to the United States, and followed his vocation in the southern States, chiefly at New Orleans. After being thus employed for nine years he located in York, where he resided up to the time of his death, during which period he pursued his trade as a file manufacturer and file cutter, his skill as a workman being evidenced by his continuous and increasing success. His interest in municipal affairs was thoroughly recognized by the citizens of the Third ward, who for three consecutive terms returned him as one of their representatives to the common council. While a member of that body he served on the Water committee for two years, and at other periods of his aldermanic career was connected with several of the important committees, being ever on the alert to advance legislation that tended to the permanent betterment of the city and also to the wise expenditure of the municipal revenues. Mr. Schwenk has always been a steadfast Republican, ready to render his party a service, and at the same time mindful of the welfare of the city, regardless of politics. In line with his knowledge of city affairs the Republicans nominated him as one of their candidates for the short term of the city assessorship, to which office he was elected. In his official capacity Mr. Schwenk made a decidedly favorable impression with property owners, regardless of their political belief. His honest and fearless attitude in the work of assessing properties was characteristic of him as a holder of other positions of trust, and it was these sterling qualities that made him a good councilman, respected alike by Republicans and Democrats. In 1903 he was renominated to the office, for the long term of three years, and the best proof of his ability and the regard in which he was held by the people lies in the fact that he was the only man recorded in the history of York, who had ever been elected to succeed himself as city assessor; that too, by a good majority.

In 1882 Mr. Schwenk was married to Miss Mary Bergman, daughter of John and Anna Bergman, of York. To this union were born: Amelia, a stenographer for C. C. Spahr; Laura, a teacher in the Garfield school of York; and Annie. The widow and her three daughters reside at No. 324 North George street, where they have lived since Mr. Schwenk’s death. Fraternally Mr. Schwenk was connected with the Harmonia Lodge of Odd Fellows, Sandlands Commandery, Knights of Malta, and in his religious views was a member of Zion Reformed Church. Mr. Schwenk’s body was placed in its last resting place in Prospect Hill cemetery, surrounded by a host of sorrowing friends and relatives. The Rev. George Stibitz, pastor of Zion Reformed Church, conducted the services, paying a glowing tribute to the deceased and speaking comforting words to the family. At the conclusion of the religious rites, the Knights of Malta took charge and rendered a short service. Mayor Gibson and members of the common council attended in body and acted as an escort to the cemetery. During the day, the family residence was visited by numbers of friends and former associates of Mr. Schwenk to take a last look at their departed friend, and as they gazed at the lifeless form lying in the casket, with not a trace of the terrible suffering through which he had passed, many a tear was shed and great regret expressed for the untimely death of one of York’s most progressive citizens.

J. W. ANDERSON belongs to an old family of Hopewell township. He was born Feb. 5, 1837, in Fawn township, York county, a son of Joseph R. and Elizabeth (Wilson) Anderson.

John Anderson, the paternal grandfather, was a native of York county where his life was passed in agricultural pursuits. He married Agnes Duncan, and they had children as follows: David, John, Robert, Andrew, William, and Joseph R. John Anderson was an elder in the Center Presbyterian Church.

James Wilson, Mr. Anderson’s grandfather, resided at Mine Branch, and was known as “mine Branch James” to distinguish him from numerous others of the same name in that locality. He owned farms in Hopewell township, Pa., and in Harford county, Md., was an elder in the Presbyterian Church of the latter county, and was in all regards a highly respected man. He married Elnora Manifold, and they had these children: James and Benjamin, both of whom died in young manhood; Elizabeth, who married Joseph R. Anderson; Rachel A., who married Jacob Gladen; Elnora, who married Robert Kilgore; Sarah Ann, who married Samuel Wallace, and Martha, who married James Gilbreath.

Joseph R. Anderson was a farmer in Fawn township, where he was also an elder in the Presbyterian Church, and a highly respected citizen; he was buried in Center Church cemetery. He married Elizabeth Wilson, and their children were: James W.; John H.; Joseph W.; Reed W.; Agnes, who married John Gailey; Ellen, who married Alexander D. Wilson; Rachel, who married John Brown, and Martha (deceased).

J. W. Anderson, in all essentials, is a self-made man. His educational opportunities were only those afforded by the common schools, the greater part of his intellectual training being obtained at the Blue Ball log schoolhouse in Fawn township. He continued to work the home farm and carry on a fertilizing business until thirty-four years of age, when he settled on his own homestead in Hopewell township. Here he continued to farm and to conduct a fertilizing business in connection with it for several years. In 1872 he enlarged his interests, entering upon the manufacture of lumber, the bailing of hay and the threshing of grain, being for some years extensively engaged in all these enterprises. He is yet interested in the lumber business, being president of the Stewartstown Lumber Company, a position he has held since its organization. He is also a stockholder and one of the directors of the Stewartstown Furniture Co.; a charter member and one of the directors of the First National Bank of Stewartstown; one of the stockholders and managers of one of the best weekly papers in this part of the county, the Stewartstown News; one of the charter members of the Stewartstown Railway Company, of which he has been president (succeeding the late James Fulton, whose death occurred in 1895); and is also one of the charter members of the Stewartstown Water Company, and for the past ten years has been a member of the board of managers of the Agricultural Society of York county. It will thus be seen that Mr. Anderson is closely identified with the leading and successful business enterprises and public-spirited movements of his section. No man could have arisen to such prominence without possessing a high order of business ability and the standing and reliability inspired by sterling traits of character.

Mr. Anderson was married Feb. 28, 1871, to Louisa Gemmill, daughter of Benjamin Gemmill. Three children were born to this union, namely: Marian E., who married John Manifold; Howard W., who married Jennie Liggett; and Joseph R., who married Margaret Manifold. In addition to carefully managing his own affairs, which consequently have prospered to an unusual degree, Mr. Anderson has always found time to attend to matters pertaining to the welfare of the community. His interest has continued undiminished in the public schools and his children have been afforded advantages far in excess of his own. He is known as a strong supporter of temperance and was one of the organizers of the lodge of Good Templars, filling all the offices in that body during the life of the organization. He is also a liberal supporter of religious work, and has long been a member of the Presbyterian Church and a member of the board of trustees.

EMANUEL B. GOOD was born June 28, 1835, in Manchester township, son of Jacob Good.

Jacob Good was born Dec. 15, 1790, at the old home in Manchester township, and received a common-school education, working on various farms until he was able to buy a part of the homestead upon which he resided for several years. Later he removed to Lower Windsor township, near Prospect, where he engaged in farming for six years, at the end of that time returning to Manchester township and buying 100 acres of fine land, located about two miles south of Manchester borough on the old Board road. There he remained until his death, which occurred in 1863. Jacob Good was a type of the class of men who succeed in life, one who knew how to join a working arm to a thinking head, and one who also had the ability to make and keep warm friends. He was very warmly esteemed throughout Manchester township.

Mr. Good married Catherine Bear, whose father was Jacob Bear and whose mother was before marriage a Miss Shelley. The children born to this union were: Rudolph, born April 15, 1822, died in this township; Jacob, born Oct. 29, 1823, died in Manchester township; Daniel, born Sept. 27, 1825, died in Manchester township; Barbara, born Nov. 22, 1827, married John Shindel, and lives in Manchester township; Anna, born June 8, 1830, died at Mt. Wolf; Moses, born Oct. 29, 1832, died in Manchester township; Emanuel B.; John, born July 15, 1837, is a dentist at St. Joseph, Mo.; Elizabeth, born May 22, 1841, died in Lower Windsor township; Catherine, born May 26, 1844, married George Dubbs, and resides in Manchester township; and Eli, born Nov. 14, 1846, lives at St. Joseph, Mo., where he is engaged in dentistry and literary pursuits. In religion Jacob Good was formerly connected with the Mennonite faith, but before his death became a Dunkard. Mrs. Good died in Manchester township, and was buried there beside her husband.

Emanuel B. Good attended the township school, the teacher of which was Martin L. DuHling, who still resides in Manchester borough. Mr. Good remained with his father until his marriage in 1856 to Sarah Zorger, daughter of Martin and Eve (Lichtenberger) Zorger, of Newberry township, when he located on the old homestead for three years, later removing to his present homestead of 71 acres. Mr. Good has spared neither time nor money in the improvements he has made on the place, and he has every reason to feel some pride in the ownership of so fine a farm. He has about 1,500 peach trees, and for a number of years prior to 1899 was engaged in the nursery business, devoting about eight acres of his farm to this branch of agricultural industry.

To Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel B. Good the following children have been born: Alice Jane, born Oct. 23, 1857, married Frank P. Deisinger, and resides in York; Isabella, born Jan. 23, 1859, married Henry Kohr, deceased, and resides at Mt. Wolf, Manchester township; Edward, born Oct. 28, 1860, is very active in politics, having served as judge of elections and held other township offices; George, born Jan. 11, 1862, resides at home; Elizabeth, born Sept. 31, 1863, resides with her parents; Wesley, born Aug. 4, 1865, married Hattie Brown, and is a dentist at St. Joseph, Mo.; William Henry, born April 16, 1867, married Susan Crane and resides in Manchester township; Catherine, born May 3, 1871, died April 27, 1873; and Jacob Emanuel, born Sept. 18, 1873, resides at home.

Mr. Good is very prominent in politics, having been assessor, tax-collector, school director and a member of the election board. His support has always been given to the Republican party, and he is considered a very valuable man by that party. He is a thorough business man, honest and upright in all his dealings, public-spirited and of much executive ability.

BENJAMIN S. SENTZ, a cigar and cigar box manufacturer of Felton borough, was born July 16, 1866, in Hopewell township, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Mitzel) Sentz.

Henry Sentz, grandfather of Benjamin S., was a farmer of Hopewell township, where he died. He married Lydia Tyson, who died in July, 1866, and they had these children: Henry, father of our subject; Jacob; John; Benjamin; Lydia A.; who married Joseph Sechrist; Catherine, who married John Schaeffer; Elizabeth, who married John Flinchbaugh; Miss Amanda; and Sarah, who married William Stapley.

Henry Sentz, father of our subject, was born in 1844, in North Hopewell, where he received a common school education. He followed farming all of his life and now resides on his farm in Windsor township. In political faith he is a Republican. He is a Lutheran and has been very active in the work of the church. He married Elizabeth Mitzel, born in what is now known as Felton in 1843, daughter of Daniel and Susan (Raab) Mitzel, both now deceased. They had these children: Benjamin S.; Henry D., of Yoe; William F., of Windsor township; Jacob M., of Windsor township; John W. M., at home; James T., who lives on our subject's farm; and Lemuel E. at home.

Benjamin S. Sentz attended school in the winter terms until seventeen years of age, and worked in the summer on his father's farm. At the age of nineteen he started clerking in J. D. Hake's store, where he remained for one and one-half years. At the age of twenty-one he embarked in the mercantile business at Cross Roads, but after two years he removed to Felton and engaged in business, where C. T. Grove is now located. Here he ran a general store for three years, and then sold to Andreson & Grove, engaging in the manufacture of cigar boxes and building a factory. He is also engaged in the cigar manufacturing business, which he began on a small scale, and as the demand for his goods grew, enlarged accordingly. He has all of the latest machinery and improvements, putting in entire new equipment last fall, including boilers and engines. Mr. Sentz is certainly a self-made man. When he embarked in the mercantile business he was the possessor of a horse and buggy and eighteen dollars in money. He received some backing from his former employer, Mr. J. D. Hake, and in this way was enabled to start in business. He is now one of the prosperous men of Felton borough.

On Nov. 27, 1890, Mr. Sentz married Emma J. Stiles, born in 1868, at Adamsville, York county, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Neff) Stiles, and these children have been born to this union: Araminta E., Hobson Clare and Mary Elizabeth. In politics Mr. Sentz is a Republican, and has served as school director. He was appointed a justice of the peace by Governor Stone, and was again chosen in 1906. At the time of his first appointment Felton borough had just been formed, largely through the efforts of Mr. Sentz and Mr. C. T. Grove. Mr. Sentz has also been delegate to the State convention. His family are members of the Evangelical Church, although before coming to Felton, Mr. Sentz was connected with the United Brethren Church. In the Evangelical Church he is class leader and is very active in Sunday-school work, formerly having been superintendent. Fraternally Mr. Sentz is a member of Felton Lodge, No. 148, K. of P., in which he is past chancellor commander. He is serving his second year as district deputy of the K. P., and was representative to the Grand Lodge, at Carbondale, in 1903. He is a member of Cashmere Temple, Knights of Khorassan, Reading, Pa.; Shrewsbury Blue Lodge, No. 462, F. & A. M.; Katahdin Lodge, No. 560, I. O. O. F.; and Red Lion Encampment, No. 210.

On July 11, 1892, Mr. Sentz organized the Felton Cornet Band, of which for three years he was leader, and he had charge of the financial affairs of that organization. He is a very talented musician, performing ably on the trombone. Mr. Sentz spent one week in Chicago at the time of the World's Columbian Exposition, and spent some time at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. As an active supporter of educational and religious movements he is universally esteemed, and can with truth be named as one of Felton borough's representative men.

PHILETUS F. WILT, city treasurer of York, has for many years been a well known business man of that city and comes of an old York count family.

The American ancestor of the Wilt family came to this country early in the eighteenth century. The great-grandfather of Philetus F. Wilt was a farmer in York county, and his grandfather, Peter Wilt, was born on the old homestead, but died in York.

William Wilt, father of Philetus F., died in 1880, in his sixty-eighth year. His wife, who died in 1888 at the age of seventy-six, was Lydia Forry, daughter of Rudolph Forry, a tanner, of York. Of the seven children born to this union only two survive; Miss Lydia A., living in York; and Philetus F.

Philetus F. Wilt was born in York, May 26, 1838, and was educated in the York County Academy. In 1860 he associated himself with his father in the coal business, and continued in that line until 1900. In that year he and his son, William M., opened a fire insurance office at No. 13 South George street, removing on Feb. 1, 1905, to No. 33 West Market street, where they secured quarters that were more in keeping with their growing business. In 1902 Mr. Wilt was elected city treasurer for a term of three years, being the only successful Democratic candidate at that election, a great compliment to his personal popularity. Mr. Wilt married Mary J. Metzger, daughter of Elder F. Metzger, a hardware merchant and banker of Hanover, Pa. The children of this marriage are as follows: William M., in partnership with his father; E. Katherine, wife of Clarence W. Hyde, coal and wood dealer at South Bend, Ind.; Paul E., watchmaker and jeweler, at Phoenixville, Pa.; and Leila, a graduate of the Woman's College at Frederick, Md., and for several years a student in the Peabody Institute, now living at home.

In politics Mr. Wilt is a loyal Democrat. He is a director in the City Bank of York, and for twenty years has been a trustee and treasurer of the Prospect Hill Cemetery Co., and is president of the York County Mutual Fire Insurance Company, having been elected in 1900. He is a member of the First Reformed Church, of which he has been for twenty years a trustee, and no man in York stands higher in church, social, political and business circles.

GEORGE KISE is a native son of York county and a representative of one of its pioneer families. On the farm now occupied by Milton Burg, in Lower Windsor township, he was born Aug. 6, 1842.

George Kise, his father, was likewise born and reared in York county, and for a number of years was successfully engaged in contracting, after which he was identified with agricultural pursuits until his death. He had resided on the Wilton farm in Hellam township for fourteen years, and on the John Small farm in Lower Windsor township for sixteen years. He died at the home of his son George in Lower Windsor township, in April, 1904, at the patriarchal age of ninety-two years, two months and twelve days. He was a man of integrity and commanded esteem in his native county. He was originally a Whig, and later a Republican in politics, and in his earlier years was an incumbent of various local offices of public trust. His wife, whose maiden name was Christine Anstine, still survives him, being over ninety years of age. Of the children of this marriage Henry is deceased; John is a resident of Philadelphia; Jane is the wife of Nathaniel Snell, who resides near Yoe, York county; George; Susan is the wife of George Kline, of East Prospect; Aaron is a resident of Harrisburg, Pa., William resides in Lower Windsor township; Milton makes his home in the city of York; Kate is the widow of Oliver Dietz, of Goldsboro, York county; Avilla is the wife of Rev. Edward Crumling, of Lewisberry; Simon is deceased; Albert is a resident of Newberry township, and Elmer is a resident of York, Pennsylvania.

George Kise secured his early educational discipline in the township school at Craley'sville and the Benson school, in Lower Windsor township, being fourteen years of age at the time of his parents' removal to Hellam township, where he continued his studies in the Levergood school until he had attained to the age of eighteen years, in the meanwhile having rendered material aid in the work of the farm. At the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion his patriotic ardor led him to seek a place in the ranks of the brave boys in blue. In 1862, in company with Samuel Boll, Mr. Kise went to York for the purpose of enlisting, the company there having been raised by Captain Marsh. He duly enlisted and proceeded to Harrisburg for examination, but when the authorities learned his age (twenty years), they refused to accept him, as at that time no recruits were received under the age designated as the legal majority. Boll prevaricated to the extent of saying that he was twenty-one years of age, and thus was accepted. When the next call for troops was issued Mr. Kise accompanied a militia company from Wrightsville to a point below Chambersburg, where he enlisted and was mustered in as a member of Company G, 16th Pa. Cav., under Captain West, while later the regiment was commanded by Colonel Irving Gregg. After the battle of Antietam the regiment was ordered back to Harrisburg, where it was properly outfitted and equipped, and in the autumn of that year (1862) the command was sent to Washington, D. C., where it went into winter quarters. In the spring of 1863 Mr. Kise was detailed on special duty at the cavalry corps hospital at Brandywine Station, Va., where he remained for one year. At the expiration of that time he was sent to Alexandria, where the dismounted men were provided with horses and other equipments and organized into a command, which was sent forward to Frederick City, where they took part in the engagement. With this command Mr. Kise then went to Harper's Ferry and thence to Sheppardstown, ten miles distant, where an attack was made on the rear guard of the Confederate troops at that time retreat- ing from Gettysburg. Mr. Kise was on guard duty and captured and held three prisoners until relief came, showing much finesse in successfully concluding this adventure. He took part in seven spirited skirmishes on Winchester Pike, and shortly after this service was sent to join his regular command at Gettysburg, proceeding from that point to Petersburg. In the winter he participated in the Belfield raid, in which he aided in destroying railroad lines, being on picket duty during the balance of the time until spring, when he took part in the battle of Five Forks, his command being dismounted during that engagement. Mr. Kise captured two prisoners at this time, and the next morning the command pushed forward to Amelia Springs. There a skirmish took place, Mr. Kise having his horse shot from under him and receiving a bullet wound in his left side, his life being undoubtedly saved by the glancing of the ball from his belt plate, which had worked around to that portion of his body and which thus fortunately deflected the death-dealing missile. The next day he was enabled to secure another horse, and then proceeded with his regiment to Farmersville, incidentally making a raid on a wagon train; on this day Mr. Kise was captured by the enemy and taken toward Appomattox Court House. On the way he was informed by his captors that Sheridan's entire command were prisoners. About nine o'clock that night, in company with other Federal prisoners, Mr. Kise was marched up to the heights and there discerned the old flag proudly floating in the breeze, while at this dramatic moment there came to them the news of Lee's surrender. Thereafter our subject was with his command on picket duty at Lynchburg, where he received his honorable discharge as corporal, June 15, 1865.

After the close of his exemplary military career Mr. Kise returned home and became associated with his brother Henry in the operation of a canal boat, eventually securing his brother's interest in the enterprise and con-tinning operations for several years. Thereafter he was engaged in repair work on the tidewater, and for nearly six years following was employed in John Small’s sawmill at Wrightsville. The mill finally burned, and while a new one was being erected he assisted in the building of the railroad roundhouse at Columbia. Thereafter he was identified with the operation of the sawmill until 1884, when he removed to East Prospect, where he entered into partnership with W. E. Olewiler in the line of general merchandise, later becoming the sole proprietor of the business. This he continued successfully for the ensuing fifteen years, when he retired from active business and purchased his present attractive and finely improved farm. He had previously become associated with his brother Henry in the ownership of a farm in Newberry township, and later became the sole owner of the place, which he still holds. He continued to devote his attention to the cultivation of his farm near Margaretta Furnace until April, 1904, when he returned to his old home in East Prospect, where he has since resided, giving the major portion of his time to the supervision of his farms.

In politics Mr. Kise is a stanch Republican, and in a fraternal way is identified with Lieut. R. C. Smith Post, No. 270, G. A. R., at Wrightsville. He is a prominent and valued member and a trustee of the United Evangelical Church, at East Prospect. He has taken a specially deep interest in the promotion of the work of the Sunday school, of which he was superintendent for a period of ten years. In Lower Windsor township, Dec. 25, 1872, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Kise to Sarah A. Young, daughter of the late George Young, who was a prominent citizen of that section of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Kise have no children.

CAPT. ADAM HENRY CARMAN, justice of the peace since 1885, an honored veteran of the Civil war and an influential citizen of North Hopewell township, York county, was born in old Hopewell township, Sept. 30, 1839. His father, Andrew Carman, spent the greater part of his life in Hopewell township, working at brick making during his younger days, while in later years he engaged in farming. He married Christina Berger, and both died in what is now Hopewell township.

Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Carman—Adam H.; and Nathan, who was a second lieutenant in the 12th Penn. Reserves, and was wounded in battle, at, or about, Fredericksburg, and who after the war engaged in brick making at Stewartstown, married Henrietta Meads, and became the father of several children.

As a boy, Adam H. Carman, worked on the home farm. He learned the shoemaker’s trade at Stewartstown, at which he was employed for a time, and was engaged in this occupation at the outbreak of the Rebellion. He enlisted at York in Company C, 87th P. V. L., Captain A. J. Fulton, Colonel Hay, being mustered in Sept. 14, 1861, by Lieut. H. M. Baldwin, U. S. A., in the three-years’ service, being made corporal of his company. The regiment proceeded to Cockeysville, Md., and became a part of the Third Brigade, Third Division, Sixth Army Corps, the latter being first commanded by General Milroy. Mr. Carman’s regiment had a great record as a fighting command, participating in some of the hardest struggles of the war, among them being Winchester, South Mountain, Spottsylvania Court House, Antietam, the Wilderness, Chancellorsville and Weldon Railroad. Two months before his term expired, Captain Carman was placed on the sick list and sent to the hospital at Baltimore, Md., thence to Wilmington, Del., and to York, Pa., to be mustered out of service. This was during September, 1864, and Captain Carman returned to his home, where he followed the shoemaker’s trade for a period of fifteen years. He commenced his agricultural career on his father’s farm near Mount Pleasant, and later purchased a portion of his present place, to which he added from time to time, until at present he owns a fine farm of forty-five acres.

Captain Carman is a member of General Sherman Post, G. A. R., of Felton. His religious connection is with the Evangelical Church. In politics he has been a lifelong Republican, and takes a great interest in the success of his party. On Nov. 30, 1866, the Captain was united in marriage to Margaret Jane Tarbert, and to this union were born: Jane Ann, Mrs. James Ream, who resides near Loganville; William, of North Hopewell township, who married Ruth Snyder; Jeanette, Mrs. David Hess, of Hopewell township; Mary, Mrs. Murray Sampson, of Newmarket, Md.; John W., of North Hopewell township, who married Ida Brenneman, and Ivy, Mrs. Harry Fulcomer, of Red Lion.

CHARLES F. GREIMAN, for many years identified with the business interests of York, is now living retired in the enjoyment of the fruits of his early labors. Mr. Greiman was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1832, son of Barnhart Henry Greiman.

In 1837 Barnhart Henry Greiman came to America from Germany, and with his family landed at Baltimore, Md., where, however, he did not remain long, but located at York, sawed wood and did whatever honest work came to hand. He married Anna Mary Faitman, who died in 1847, and both are buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. They were the parents of Henry (deceased), who married Eliza Gotwalt; Anna Mary, a resident of York; Katie, who died in Harrisburg, the wife of John Feather; Augustus, who died at York, in August, 1901, and Charles F.

Charles F. Greiman received a common school education, and began to assist his father in wood sawing at the age of seven years. He later learned the brick-making business, and in 1860 purchased three acres of land in York, near Spring Garden township, where he operated a brick yard. After all the clay had been removed from his ground Mr. Greiman commenced operations as a builder, erecting about fifty dwellings. Mr. Greiman also manufactured whips in the winter months, a trade he had learned in early manhood. He retired from business in 1886, since which time he has lived a quiet life. In 1857 he was united in marriage with Caroline Brown, a daughter of Jacob and Sarah Brown, and to this union have been born these children: Emma is the wife of Jacob L. Wiest; Jacob, who died in 1892, married Sarah Brillhart, who after his death married Henry Flinchbaugh; Alexander died when seventeen months old; Alice Ann died in 1894, the wife of Henry Lucking; Mary S. is the wife of David Martin, of Philadelphia; Dora is the wife of Rev. Nelson B. Kline, a Presbyterian clergyman of Armagh, Pa.; Charles F., died at the age of seven years; Fannie E. died when only ten days old, and Ellen Eliza, lives at home. Mr. Greiman is a Democrat. He is a faithful member of Christ Lutheran Church of York, and one of its liberal supporters.

The grandfather of Mrs. Greiman, Jacob Brown, was a farmer of York county, and died in Manchester township, being buried in East Manchester township. He married Amelia Fisher, and to this union were born: Joseph, John, Henry, Jacob, Daniel, Lena, and Sarah (deceased). Of this family Jacob was the father of Mrs. Greiman. He was born in York county April 12, 1817, and in early manhood learned the tailor’s trade, which he followed for a number of years. For thirty-six years he was sexton of Christ Lutheran Church of York, and was a man well known and highly respected. He married Sarah Ziegler, who died Dec. 6, 1877, while he survived until June 5, 1891, both being interred at Prospect Hill cemetery. Their children were as follows: Caroline, Mrs. Greiman; Alexander; Annie E.; Fanny; Mary Jane, who died young; and twins, who died in infancy.

WILLIAM R. SNYDER, formerly a farmer of North Hopewell township, York county, and now a resident of Winterstown, was born Dec. 28, 1839, on his father’s farm below Stewartstown, Hopewell township, son of Jacob and Sarah (Hartman) Snyder.

The grandfather of Mr. Snyder had three sons (William, Jesse and Jacob) and two daughters. The ancestors came from Germany and in the old country spelled their name Schneider. The grandfather died when his son Jacob was only seven years old.

Jacob Snyder was born in Springfield township, York county, and learned the shoemaker’s trade which he followed until he bought the farm. After that he engaged in farming until his death March 4, 1866, aged fifty-four years. He was reared in the Lutheran faith, and was always liberal in his religious donations, contributing with others to the building of the Mt. Pleasant Lutheran church. In his early days he belonged to the Know Nothing party and then became a Republican. He married Sarah Hartman, born in Hopewell township, daughter of Henry and Mary Hartman. She survived her husband only two years, and they both were buried at the Mt. Pleasant cemetery. The children of Jacob and Sarah Snyder were: Henry H., of York; William R.; Jesse; Jacob H.; Mary, Mrs. Andrew Zeigler, of Hopewell township; Sarah Elizabeth, Mrs. A. F. Strayer, of York; Rebecca, Mrs. D. F. Hannigan, of East Prospect; Agnes I., Mrs. Lee Detweiler, deceased; Barbara E., Mrs. John W. Blake, of York; and Moses M., of Loganville, who married Annie Hilderbrand. Of the above family, Jesse, Jacob H. and William R. served in the Civil War. Jesse was a private in Company C, 87th P. V. I., for two years, re-enlisted in the same company and regiment, and was killed in the battle of Monocacy, Md., and was brought home for burial. Jacob H., deceased, served three years in Company C, 87th P. V. I., re-enlisted for one year in Cook’s Veteran Corps, and was captured by Mosby’s guerillas while on his way home, but escaped and made his way into the Union lines; he married Elizabeth Portner, migrated to Ohio and resided near Milfile.

William R. Snyder lived in his native locality until the age of seven years, when his father moved to the farm just south of Winterstown in what is now North Hopewell township, and there he remained until manhood. He was educated at the local schools, his first teacher being Anthony Bowman, and his last, his brother, Henry H. Snyder. His family was an intelligent one, all of them being fond of books, and it was often remarked that the Snyder children stood at the head of their classes. Although reared as a farmer he learned the carpenter’s trade and worked at it for a few seasons. He then taught school in the township for three winters, working as a carpenter in the summer seasons. Mr. Snyder was teaching school at the outbreak of the Civil war, and, as his brothers were in the army, he remained in that occupation and in charge of the family at home until his own enlistment for one year, Aug. 31, 1864. On that date he was enrolled in Company B, 209th P. V. I., under Capt. H. W. Spangler and Col. T. B. Kauffman, with First Brigade Col. Devens, Third Division. Gen. Hartranft, Ninth Corps, Maj. Gen. Parks. The regiment was sent directly to the front without previous drill, going by vessel from Harrisburg to Baltimore, and Mr. Snyder participated in the battles of Fort Steadman, the second day’s fight at Petersburg and Bermuda Hundred. He was honorably discharged May 31, 1865, at Alexandria, Va., and has a record to which he can refer with pardonable pride, as a brave and faithful soldier. After his return from the army, Mr. Snyder farmed for his father-in-law for a short time, and when his father became ill he took charge of the home farm. After the death of his mother he bought the homestead which he had been operating. He continued to work the place until the spring of 1893, when he sold the property and retired to spend the balance of his days in a pleasant home at Winterstown. He is a leading member in the Union Evangelical Church, and formerly was class leader and steward.

In politics Mr. Snyder is a very strong supporter of the Republican party. His first vote was cast for Abraham Lincoln while he was in a blue uniform at Bermuda Hundred, voting at a point from which the enemy’s forces could be plainly seen. Mr. Snyder was twice elected supervisor of his township and once inspector, and since coming to Winterstown he has served as judge of elections.

Mr. Snyder was married, Oct. 4, 1866, to Sarah A. Fulton, born in Hopewell township, daughter of the late James and Eliza (Meads) Fulton. Eleven children have been born to this union, namely: James F., of Hopewell township; William M., of Winterstown, who married Clara Grove; Ruth E., wife of W. N. Carman of Winterstown; Arthur F., of Winterstown, who married Claudia Strayer; Jacob N., of Hopewell township, who married Florence Althouse; Ivy Pearl, wife of Garfield Mundis, of Winterstown; Sanford Clyde, of Hopewell township, who married Susan Kibbler; Irving C., of that township, who married Daisy Waltemeyer; Miss Orpha J.; Wilfred Ray, at home; and Sarah E., who died aged twelve years. These children were all given careful rearing and excellent educational advantages, and have grown up to be respected members of society. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder have made many warm friends since coming to town and still retain the deep friendships formed in earlier years. They are hospitable, kind, friendly people, who are respected and beloved wherever known.

SAMUEL URICH, a retired farmer of Wellsville, Warrington township, York county, was born July 12, 1832, in Warrington township, son of John and Catherine Urich, and a grandson of John and Catherine (Lambert) Urich.

The grandparents were both born in Lebanon county, Pa., and the grandfather was a farmer all his life. He settled in Warrington township, where he purchased land, and became quite successful. He reared the following family of children: Jonas, David, Emanuel, John, Elizabeth, Polly and Sally. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Urich were Lutherans, while in politics he was a Democrat. His death occurred in 1842, while Mrs. Urich died in her eightieth year. John Urich was highly respected in Warrington township. His remains rest in the cemetery at St. John's Church in that township.

John Urich, the father of our subject, was born in Warrington township, and like his father followed farming all his life. He acquired a piece of property of 190 acres, and was one of the substantial men of his time. He and his wife, Catherine Benedick, were the parents of the following children: Harriet, Samuel, Lucinda, John, Matilda, Templeton M., Henry, Sarah, and Catherine. In religion the family were Lutherans, and like his father Mr. Urich was a Democrat. Mr. Urich died at the age of forty-six, April 17, 1848, while his wife survived until 1857, being fifty years old at the time of her death.

Samuel Urich received his education in the common schools of Warrington township. After completing his schooling he worked upon a farm for eight years, after which he purchased a farm of fifty-four acres. In 1861 he located upon this property, which he cultivated until 1879, and then sold it and purchased a farm of sixty acres on the State road, which he cultivated until 1902. This he sold to Richard Young, of New York City, together with a farm he had purchased in 1885, which was known as the Bushy farm, and consisted of eighty acres. Mr. Urich now owns a small home on the State road and the property in which he resides in Wellsville.

Samuel Urich married, in 1856, Miss Lydia Furrer, daughter of Henry and Harriet (Sprenkle) Furrer, who was born in Dover township. Mr. and Mrs. Urich have never had any children of their own, but they have reared the following children: Catherine Urich, a sister of Mr. Urich, was nine years old when taken in the family, remaining with them until she was eighteen years old; she is now the wife of E. L. Apple, a manufacturer of leather fly nets of Wellsville. Grant Sprenkle came to Mr. and Mrs. Urich when five years old, and remained with them until the age of fourteen. Anna Snellbaker was given a home at the age of five, and remained with them until she was twenty-seven years old, when she married Jacob Stough, and after marriage they remained on the farm until Mr. Urich disposed of it, when Mr. Stough was retained by Mr. Young as farm manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Urich are members of the Evangelical Church. Mr. Urich is a Democrat, but has never taken an active interest in politics. Mr. Urich is noted for his kindness of heart, and he is very highly respected in the community, in which he has made his home.

BENJAMIN F. STRICKLER stands at the head of one of the leading industrial enterprises of York county, Pa., being the manufacturer of the "Success" tobacco-scrap machines, cigar-mold presses and various cigar manufacturers' supplies and specialties, and having a well-equipped plant in the village of Benroy. He is one of the representative business men of his native county, controls a large and far-reaching trade, and is a citizen who is markedly public-spirited and progressive, well meriting the high esteem in which he is held in the community. He was born in Windsor township, York Co., Pa., Nov. 9, 1844, and is a scion of one of the sterling pioneer families of the county.

Christopher Strickler, grandson of Benjamin F., was likewise born in York county, where his parents settled in an early day, being of stanch German lineage, and he became one of the influential and successful farmers of Spring Garden township, where his death occurred, and his mortal remains rest in the old Strickler cemetery at Stony Brook, that township. Of his children, Daniel died in Wayne county, Ind.; Henry became the father of Benjamin F.; Magdalena and Susanna married and passed their entire lives in York and Cumberland counties; David, Lena and Mary were triplets, and all attained venerable age, the first named having died at the age of eighty years. Lena at the age of eighty-two, and Mary at the age of eighty-four. and all of them died in Manchester township, the daughters being buried in the old cemetery at Manchester, and David at the Bear school house in Manchester township.

Henry Strickler, son of Christopher, was born in Spring Garden township, Feb. 12, 1809, and was reared under the conditions and influences of the pioneer era, receiving a commonschool education, and early becoming inured to the strenuous work of the home farm. He became a successful farmer, having followed this vocation in Spring Garden, Windsor and York townships, and he finally removed to Wayne county, Ind., where he remained but a short time, and then, being dissatisfied with the outlook and conditions there, he returned to his native county and purchased a tract of more than two hundred acres in York township, where he continued to be engaged in general farming until his death, March 21, 1898, when he was aged eighty-nine years and twenty-seven days. He was one of the leading farmers and most honored citizens of this part of the county, and, having made his life count for good in all its relations, he commanded the unqualified esteem of all who knew him. The remains of this sterling citizen were laid to rest in the family cemetery. In the year 1837 was solemnized the marriage of Henry Strickler to Miss Catherine Bahn, who was born and reared in York county, daughter of Adam Bahn and sister of Rachel Bahn, of Hellam township, who is specially well-known throughout the county. Mrs. Strickler was summoned into eternal rest Feb. 18, 1894, and is interred by the side of her husband, at Stony Brook. Both were consistent members of the River Brethren church, and in politics Mr. Strickler was a staunch Democrat. The children of this honored couple were as follows: Aaron, who married Sarah Hartman, is a retired farmer, residing in the borough of Manchester, this county; Israel died Feb. 6, 1854, at the age of fourteen years, four months and eight days; Mary is the wife of John Sechrist, and they reside near Yoe, Windsor township; Henry, born in 1843, is a representative farmer of York township, and has been twice married, first to Emeline Reichart, who died March 24, 1871, and second to Elizabeth Everhart; Benjamin F. was the next in the order of birth; Rachel is the wife of Jacob H. Sechrist, of York township, who is individually mentioned elsewhere; Annie is the wife of Rev. Peter Williams, a Dunkard clergyman, and they reside in York township; Emma is the wife of Michael Hosan, of Dallastown, this county; Cassandra, the wife of Milton Arnold, died in York township, Aug. 7, 1900; Adam, who married Susanna Horn, resides in Windsor township, where he is engaged in farming and in the manufacturing of cigars; and Sarah is the wife of John Garner, of York township.

Benjamin F. Strickler received his early education in the common schools of York county, continuing his attendance until he had attained the age of eighteen years, and making good use of the advantages thus afforded him. He then entered upon an apprenticeship at the trade of millwright, becoming a thoroughly skilled artisan in the line, and continuing to follow his trade as a vocation for nearly a score of years, though during the major portion of this period he was engaged in business on his own responsibility. As a boy he established a machine shop in his father's wood house, and he here manifested such distinctive mechanical ability that his father showed his practical appreciation by erecting and equipping for him a good shop on the home farm, and there he turned out a great deal of excellent work. Later he erected for himself a larger shop, with better facilities, the same having been located a short distance west of his present plant, and there he carried on business for nine years, within which time the enterprise had grown to such scope and importance as to render it expedient for him again to increase his facilities. He accordingly sold the shop last mentioned, and purchased of Peter Williams a tract of fifteen acres of land, with a good water power, upon which he erected his line plant, the building being 56 x 45 feet in dimensions and three stories in height. In the manufacture of the various products of the factory he gives employment to a corps of ten skilled mechanics, and the superior excellence of the patent machines and devices turned out has gained to the concern a trade that extends into the most diverse sections of the Union.

It is consistent that special reference be made to the "Success" tobacco-scrap machine, which was invented and patented by Mr. Strickler, and which is a great improvement on all other devices utilized for the handling of scrap tobacco, being economical in operation, and turning out the best class of work with maximum facility and expedition. For a full decade Mr. Strickler worked to perfect this machine and secure his letters patent, and on March 5, 1901, he received his patent. The machine is manufactured in various sizes, for operation by steam or hand power, and it has met with the highest indorsement wherever it has been introduced among the manufacturers of cigars, being used in the largest and most important factories in the Union and in Canada. Mr. Strickler also manufactures cigar mold-presses and various other supplies and specialties demanded by the manufacturers of cigars and other tobacco products. The plant includes a well-equipped foundry, which has recently been enlarged, and general machine shop, and the equipment throughout is of the most modern and improved type. There is also a saw mill and a grist mill on the property which are being conducted in connection with the manufacture of the specialties already mentioned. Mr. Strickler has traveled extensively through many States in the interest of his machines, and has always been successful in introducing them—their general excellence being quickly seen—on the demonstration of their practicability.

Mr. Strickler is a man of marked business acumen and of progressive ideas, and he has not confined his ambition to the furtherance of mere personal ends, but has taken a marked interest in all that has tended to conserve the general welfare of the community, giving his aid and influence in support of all worthy measures and enterprises. In politics he accords an unqualified allegiance to the Democratic party, and while never a seeker of official preferment he has been called upon to serve in various township offices, including those of assessor and inspector of elections, while in 1886 he was appointed postmaster of Benroy (a town which he himself founded), an incumbency which he has ever since retained, under both Republican and Democratic administrations. In 1889 he was a candidate for the office of jury commissioner, and later was again urged to accept nomination for this office, but refused to consider the overtures. Since 1886 our subject has acted as station agent for the Maryland & Pennsylvania Railroad at Benroy. He is not identified with any religious denomination.

On Oct. 6, 1860, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Strickler to Miss Sarah Garner, who was born and reared in York township, daughter of Solomon and Catherine (Holtzinger) Garner, and of the children of this union we enter the following brief record: Dallas F. married Miss Fannie Forry, and he is employed in connection with his father's business; Mary and Rachel are twins, the former being the wife of Nathan Herbest, of Windsor township, and the latter the wife of John Hildebrand, of York township; Oscar Peter married Miss Lillie Heindle and resides in Windsor township; E. M. is deceased; and Ezra D., Charles E., John H. and Anna May remain at the parental home, the family being prominent in the social life of the community, and the pleasant home being a center of gracious hospitality.

WILLIAM HENRY RAAB, ex-postmaster of Dallastown and a prominent business man, is himself an American, but comes of German-French ancestry. He was born in York township, April 15, 1853, to Aaron and Mary (Blouse) Raab.

Mr. Raab worked on his father's farm until he was twenty-one, attending school during that time for two months out of each year. In 1874 he located at Dallastown and engaged in business for himself as a cigar manufacturer, in which line he has since remained. In these thirty years his trade has steadily increased until he now employs over 100 people and has a business that is highly remunerative. He was one of the incorporators of the First National Bank of Dallas, and is at present a director. In politics Mr. Raab is an active Republican and has filled a number of local offices, his service as postmaster covering four full terms. He has been for many years a trustee of Emanuel Church (United Brethren) and fraternally belongs to the Independent Sons of America and P. O. S. of A.

In 1873 Mr. Raab was married to Miss Mary Ann Olp, who is a member of one of the oldest families in York township. To them five children have been born, namely: Iva, wife of Charles F. Heizler, D. D. S., of Dallastown; Sterling F.; Harry M.; Wilmot and Spurgeon G.

JACOB A. SECHRIST (deceased). Among the well known and highly respected citizens of York borough, York county, was Jacob A. Sechrist, whose death occurred at his home No. 306 South Queen street, May 17, 1901. He was born Dec. 1, 1822, son of John and Elizabeth (Grove) Sechrist. John Sechrist was a tanner by trade, and died while living with his son, Jacob A., with whom he had been residing for eighteen years. The birthplace of Jacob A. Sechrist is not known, but it is recorded that during a portion of his boyhood he lived with a Mr. Hengst in Springfield township. He then married Mary Snyder, of that township, and the couple moved to Baltimore, Md., where the husband clerked in a store, afterward locating at his wife's home in Loganville, where he kept a general store. There Mrs. Sechrist died, leaving three children: Charles F.; Emma, Mrs. Ben Frick, of York city; and Mary (now deceased), Mrs. Justus Frisby, of Indianapolis, Indiana.

In 1858 Mr. Sechrist married Mrs. William Grove, who before her first marriage had been Elenora Caslow. About two years after his second marriage Mr. Sechrist removed to York, where he engaged in a general merchandise business at George and Princess streets, continuing at that locality for many years, and retiring from active business, in 1888, on account of the death of his wife's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Sechrist then cared for Mr. Caslow at his home, corner of Queen and College avenue, living there until the time of his death. After his demise Mr. Sechrist located in a residence on Main street, in July, 1896, moving to the home where Mrs. Sechrist now resides, at No. 306 South Queen street, where he died. Mr. and Mrs. Sechrist were members of the King Street Evangelical Church, in which he was a class leader for forty years. Originally Mr. Sechrist was a Republican, but in his latter days was a strong Prohibitionist. To him and his wife these children were born: Harry Caslow, of York, who married Mary Lentz; and Lena, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Sechrist is a daughter of Henry and Helen (Houseman) Caslow and was born in 1834, near Livingston, York county. She was reared at Springwood, coming with her father to York, where the latter kept the "Seven Star Hotel" on South George street. Later Mr. Caslow kept a grocery store on the corner of College avenue and South Queen street, where he died about 1890, aged eighty years. Mrs. Sechrist first attended subscription schools, and as a girl learned to spin and knit. Her first marriage was to William Grove, who was killed in a runaway accident, at a point just beyond the old reservoir, only a few months after marriage. Mrs. Sechrist's grandfather was John Caslow, who died near Dallastown, leaving a widow, Mary (Flinchbaugh). The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Sechrist, Christian Houseman, was born in Germany and came to America at the commencement of the Revolutionary war, enlisting in the patriot army and serving until its close, when he received an honorable discharge. He passed through many hardships, and, upon one occasion, as he could not eat the army bread which had been baked with lime water, he made a trap with which he caught mice and, wrenching off their heads, drank their blood. Mr. Houseman was the owner of a farm near Freysville, York county, and had come to America with a family, to one of the daughters of which, Barbara Harshimer, he had been engaged before the war, and whom he married after the close of hostilities.

Mr. Sechrist was a very prominent man in the affairs of York, being one of the original promoters of the Farmers National Bank and a charter stockholder, as well as one of the projectors of the old York city market: also a trustee of the orphans' home from its inception until his death, doing much to advance its interests. Mr. Sechrist was widely esteemed for his charitable traits, and was known as the father of the King Street Evangelical Church.

EMANUEL STONER (or as the name was formerly spelled, Steiner) belongs to a family whose members have resided for generations in Hellam township.

The Stoner family originated in Switzerland; they were of the Mennonite faith and fled from religious persecution. Christian Stoner, great-grandfather of Emanuel, born June 28, 1733, was brought to America by his parents when he was four years old, the family settling on what is now the pike in Hellam township; he died June 28, 1786, and is buried on the farm now owned by his great-grandson, Emanuel. He was a prominent citizen and held many township offices, including that of tax collector. His family comprised the following children: Catherine, born Jan. 20, 1759; Christian, grandfather of Emanuel, born Feb. 9, 1762; Elizabeth, born Nov. 6, 1764, who died in childhood; John, born Oct. 13, 1766, who died in childhood; Robert, born Jan. 6, 1769, who settled in Westmoreland county, Pa.; and Susan, born Jan. 15, 1771, who died in childhood.

Christian Stoner (2), grandfather of Emanuel, was born in the old stone house on the pike, on the land settled by his forefathers. He inherited the place, which was one mile square, the pike being cut through it in 1803. The old house has many historic associations. During the Revolutionary war a company of soldiers on their way to join Washington at Valley Forge stopped there and bought feed of Great-grandfather Christian. The receipt given is preserved in the Historical rooms at York. The old house was always hospitable, and once sheltered a number of congressmen on their way from Philadelphia to York. Mr. Stoner married a Miss Herr, daughter of John Herr, a large land-owner and farmer of Hellam township. He was the owner of the present Ebert farm, on the pike, one and a half miles west of Wrightsville. Christian Stoner (2) was a prominent man in his part of the country, and much in demand as administrator and executor in the settling of estates. He owned 225 acres of farm land, and a large tract of wood land on the mountain, and died on his homestead Sept. 16, 1833, firm in the faith and communion of the Mennonite Church. His children were as follows: (1) John, born July 23, 1790, married a Miss Strickler, daughter of John Strickler, and sister of the John Strickler who is still living at the age of ninety-two, near Spenkle's mill in Hellam township. John Stoner died on his farm adjoining the homestead in 1824. (2) Anna, born Jan. 5, 1792, married Samuel Newcomer, and lived in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, where she died. (3) Maria, born Oct. 9, 1793, married Daniel Dietz, and lived and died in Cumberland county. (4) Miss Elizabeth, born Jan. 23, 1796, died in her native township at the age of ninety-four. (5) Miss Lydia, born Jan. 9, 1798, died on the old homestead in York county. (6) Susan, born Oct. 8, 1799, married James Kerr, a school teacher of Hellam township. This was a runaway match, as the parents opposed the marriage. Mrs. Kerr died in Wrightsville. (7) Henry, born Dec. 18, 1800, became the father of Emanuel, of this sketch. (8) Joseph, born Sept. 5, 1802, married Barbara Spenkle, of West Manchester township; he was a farmer in Hellam township, and is buried in the family graveyard on the farm of Emanuel Stoner. (9) Christian, born June 16, 1804, married a lady from Lancaster county, and died a year after his marriage. (10) Jacob, born Jan. 23, 1806, died at home, unmarried. (11) Catherine, born Feb. 2, 1808, married Peter Spenkle, and lived and died in West Manchester township. (12) Sarah, born March 2, 1811, married Jacob Strickler, of Hellam township, where she died. (13) David, born Nov. 8, 1814, married Susan, daughter of John Strickler; he was a well-to-do farmer, and a Dunkard preacher, and died on his farm two miles west of the old home.

Henry Stoner, father of Emanuel, was educated partly in the neighborhood subscription school, and partly at home by a teacher employed by his father. He was reared to farm work, and was always industrious and ready to adopt new and improved methods. He inherited a portion of his father's land, and on the death of his brother Jacob bought the remaining interests of the heirs. He married Anna, daughter of Jacob Strickler, a blacksmith at Stony Brook—also a Dunkard preacher and in later life, a farmer. Mr. Stoner was brought up in the Mennonite faith, but some time after his marriage he and his wife joined the Dunkard Church, with which they were connected the balance of their lives. Mr. Stoner never took an active interest in politics. He died on his farm March 22, 1872, his wife having passed away Sept. 29, 1869. They had the following children: (1) Mary died unmarried Oct. 12, 1859, aged thirty-two years, seven months and sixteen days. (2) Sarah married David Detwiler, and died at Wrightsville, Dec. 13, 1901, aged seventy-two years, ten months and seven days; she was the mother of D. S. Detwiler, who is mentioned elsewhere. (3) Henry, born Nov. 28, 1830, a farmer, married Sarah Fahringer, and lives at the old homestead. (4) Samuel died Feb. 15, 1858, unmarried, aged twenty-five years, two months and four days. (5) Jacob, died Jan. 11, 1853, at the age of eighteen. (6) Anna, married John Strickler, and died March 27, 1883, aged forty-six years, six months and twenty days. (7) John, unmarried, died Dec. 21, 1884, aged forty-six years, four months and fourteen days. (8) Eliza, married George Dietz, and died in Hellam township, June 24, 1866, aged fifty-six years and seven months. (9) Rudolph, born May 10, 1841, married Fanny Forry, of Hellam township, and now lives in York. (10) Emanuel is mentioned below.

Emanuel Stoner was born June 23, 1843, on the family homestead, and as a boy attended the neighboring public schools during four months of each year. His first teacher was Alexander Blessing, and his last school days were passed with Senator Harvey Haines. He also attended the Millersville Normal school for a short time, and taught at intervals. His entire life has been spent in farming, with the exception of seven months when he was employed as a clerk in the store of Alexander Blessing. As a young man he was not strong, and was obliged to leave the normal school on account of his health. Thinking the heavy farm work would be too hard he entered a store, but his duties proved too confining, and he returned to an out-of-door life. He lived on in the old home where he was born, and, after his father’s death, received as his share of the estate, 114 acres which he has since successfully cultivated. The house in which Mr. Stoner resides and in which his father lived before him, was built in 1815 by his grandfather opposite the original mansion. In those days a distillery was an essential adjunct to every farm, and one was operated by his grandfather. When this home was being built the last bottle of whiskey from the still was handed out to the masons, which, after emptying, they imbedded in the masonry, neck out, where it may be seen today.

Mr. Stoner cast his first vote for Gen. McClellan in 1864, but later joined the Republicans and voted for Grant. On national issues he has ever since voted the Republican ticket, but in State and local affairs reserves the right to use his own judgment as to the best men for office. He has served a number of terms as township auditor. In the Republican convention held at York in the fall of 1904, Mr. Stoner was nominated for director of the poor, and at the election held in November he was elected to that office for a term of three years. Mr. Stoner was brought up in the Dunkard faith, but is not a member of any church. He has never married. He is a man of progressive ideas, who takes an intelligent interest in public affairs.

ADAM R. WITMYER, a prominent citizen of Fairview township, York county, who is serving his second term as assessor, has lived retired in Newmarket since 1897. Mr. Witmyer was born Nov. 9, 1835, in West Manchester township, son of John Witmyer. John Witmyer, his grandfather, died before the birth of Adam R., and little is known of him save that he was a farmer of West Manchester township and had the following children: Jacob, Simeon, Daniel. John, Mrs. Stouch and Mrs. Evans, all of whom are deceased.

John Witmyer, the father, was born July 20, 1803, in West Manchester township, where he was a farmer and day laborer. He died in York, April 5, 1876, and is buried in Prospect Hill cemetery. He married Barbara Rupert, born Oct. 7, 1804, who died Aug. 9, 1894, and is buried beside her husband. Mr. Witmyer was a Democrat, and a faithful and active member of the Lutheran Church of York. The children born to John and Barbara Witmyer were as follows: Annie, born July 26, 1826, died at Baltimore; Eliza, born Aug. 25, 1827, is living in Dover township, the wife of William Sweitzer. Elizabeth, born Nov. 17, 1828, married Jacob King, and died April 2, 1904; Israel, born June 7, 1830, died in Lancaster county, near Mount Joy, (he served in the 17th Ohio Battery); Caroline, born March 5, 1832, married David Hoke, now deceased, and lives in Baltimore; John, born Nov. 6, 1833, is living in Columbia, Lancaster county; Adam R., whose sketch follows; Frederick, born April 30, 1837, was a member of the 87th Reg. P. V. I., and is now deceased; Jacob A., born Feb. 3, 1839, lives in York; Barbara, born Oct. 14, 1840, died young; Daniel M., born March 21, 1842, was a soldier in the Civil war, and lives in York; Edward F., born Aug. 5, 1841; Samuel L., born in November, 1842, was burned to death in an accident; William H., born May 10, 1847; and Emanuel, who died young.

Adam R. Witmyer spent his school days in West Manchester township, and attended school in Lancaster county for one term, after which he learned the miller’s trade, which he followed near Mount Joy. He then located in Clark county, Ohio, where he remained from 1857 to 1862, and then enlisted in Company A, 94th Ohio V. I., for service in the Union army. He participated in the battles of Perryville (Ky.), Stone River (Tenn.), Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Resaca and Peach Tree Creek, and in the movements to Atlanta and Savannah, and thence to South Carolina. At Bentonville, N. C., he was wounded in the left shoulder, after which he was sent to New York and to Denison hospital in Ohio, where he was mustered out, May 24, 1865, by general orders.

After the war Mr. Witmyer settled in Springfield, O., and thence again located in Lancaster county, Pa., in 1866, during which year he married Annie Brenneman, a daughter of Henry and Mary (Miller) Brenneman. After his marriage he went to Indiana, where he remained one year, again returning to Lancaster county and locating in Conoy township, where for six years he followed farming and milling. In 1873 Mr. Witmyer located in York county and bought a farm in Fairview township, which was located near Marsh Run and consisted of forty-four acres. Part of this tract he sold to the Pennsylvania Railroad, and he is now the owner of thirty-eight acres of farm land and thirty-six acres of timber. Mr. Witmyer located in Newmarket in 1857, since which time he has lived retired. He is a stanch Republican, has served as school director, is now in his second term as assessor of Fairview township, and while a resident of New Cumberland was supervisor. In his younger days Mr. Witmyer was a Lutheran, but later joined the United Brethren Church, in whose work he is very active. He was superintendent of the Sunday school for four years. He is a member of B. F. Eisenberger Post No. 462, G. A. R., and of the Springfield (O.) Lodge No. 33, I. O. O. F. Mr. Witmyer is an honest, upright man, and is well liked and highly respected in the community.

To Adam R. Witmyer and his wife the following children have been born: John A., born Sept. 29, 1867, is ticket agent at New Cumberland, and married Margaret Diehl; William G., born March 1, 1869, married Annie Melcheor, and is a railroad man living at Harrisburg; Harry F., born April 21, 1871, married Caroline Hess, and is living at York, where he follows railroading, and Mary Ann Barbara, born Feb. 27, 1877, married Harry Bixler, and lives in New Cumberland.

Mrs. Witmyer's great-grandfather, John Miller, was a native of Germany, who settled early in Strasburg, where he was a carpenter, and was killed by Indians who had concealed themselves in his barn. His son, John Miller, died in September, 1874, aged ninety-eight years, and his wife Betsey (Cramer) Miller, passed away in 1876, at the age of ninety-seven years. The latter couple lived at Lancaster Junction, where he worked as a carpenter and builder until he had acquired sufficient means to purchase a farm. In farming he was very successful, and at the marriage of his children presented each $1,000. He and his worthy wife were devoted members of the Mennonite Church. They were the parents of these children: John, born April 27, 1805; Joseph, died in Manheim; Sallie, who married Ulrich Strickler, and died in Salunga; Mary, Mrs. Witmyer's mother, born April 16, 1817, who married on Sept. 28, 1858, Henry Wittmer, who was born Sept. 11, 1819 (Mrs. Wittmer is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Witmyer, at New Market); Hattie, the widow of Joseph Sowder; Jacob, a retired farmer of Manheim; Elizabeth, born May 27, 1825, the widow of Daniel M. Grove.

ALEXANDER DIEHL, proprietor of the Diehl Candy Company, of York, is a representative of the fifth generation of the family in York county, a fact which indicates that the name has been linked with the history of this section of the old Keystone State ever since the pioneer era.

Adam Diehl, his grandfather, was of German extraction, and was a successful and highly honored farmer of Shrewsbury township, where he passed his entire life. There his son Adam followed in his footsteps in a business way. Both were born in the old ancestral homestead. Adam Diehl, father of Alexander, was a man of marked energy and ability and of noble attributes of character, so that it was his fortune to hold the unqualified confidence and esteem of the people of the community in which his entire life was passed. He was an influential farmer of his native township, where he died in 1898, at the age of seventy-six years. In his early manhood he wedded Miss Annie Tyson, who was likewise born and reared in York county, daughter of Benjamin Tyson, a well known farmer of Springfield township. She resided in Shrewsbury township at the time of her death in 1885. The record of the eight children of this union is as follows: Emeline died in infancy; Isabelle is the wife of Noah Brillhart, a farmer of North Hopewell township; Agnes lives at Glen Rock, York county; Harrison has charge of the old home farm; Emma is the wife of James Grove, a prosperous manufacturer at Glen Rock; Adam is engaged in general merchandising at Hamatown, York county, and Ezra is in his brother's employ; Alexander is mentioned below.

Alexander Diehl was born on the old homestead in Shrewsbury township, Nov. 23, 1864, and his boyhood days were varied in the usual way, by work on the farm, a due quota of recreation and by attendance at the public schools of the locality. He continued his schooling until he was seventeen years of age, and thereafter was associated with the work and management of the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-four years. He then located in the village of Jacobus, York county, where for the ensuing three years he conducted a general store, and in 1891 removed to the city of York and established a flourishing enterprise in the manufacturing and jobbing of candy, the business being conducted under the title of the Acme Candy Company. In the spring of 1898 Mr. Diehl took possession of his present fine quarters, at No. 20 North George street, where he has continued to be successfully engaged in the wholesale and retail confectionery business, having abandoned the manufacturing department at the time of removal. He controls a large trade, and is known as a progressive and reliable business man and a loyal citizen. In politics he is a staunch Republican and both he and his wife are devoted members of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, in which he has served as deacon since 1896. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the local organization of the Improved Order of Heptasophs.

On Dec. 14, 1889, Mr. Diehl wedded Miss Emma Beck, daughter of John F. Beck, a well known farmer of Springfield township, and of this union have been born four children, namely: Grace E., a member of the class of 1906 in the York high school; Nona E., and Ruth M., who are pupils in the public schools; and Miriam.

LEVI BAKER, whose home has been in York county ever since his birth, resides in Windsor township on the farm where he was born, July 10, 1843.

Peter Baker, his father, was born in Germany, near Berlin, where he was reared and educated, receiving the ordinary education given to every German boy. After leaving school he learned distilling, and made that his occupation as long as he remained in Germany. He married Margaret Miller, a native of the same locality, and a young lady finely educated. One child born to them there died. In 1836 they embarked on the sailing vessel "Felix," from Bremen for Baltimore, but were ninety days on the voyage, as the ship was delayed by striking a rock soon after leaving Bremen. After landing, Mr. Baker and his wife came directly to York, and thence moved to Windsor township, where he rented a small home and began life in America as a day laborer. Before long he was able to buy a tract of five acres, which he cultivated in addition to continuing his work for other farmers. He was industrious and saving and later purchased twenty-five acres adjoining his first piece, where he farmed on his own account until 1870. In that year he sold the farm and moved to Lancaster city, where he passed the remainder of his life employed in gardening. He died in 1891, aged eighty-four, while his wife had passed away many years before, in 1873, at the age of fifty-nine. They were Lutherans in religious faith, and Mr. Baker was a Democrat in politics. The children born to them in America were as follows: David, a market master at York, married to Mary Reichley; Peter, a farmer in Windsor township, who married (first) Susanna Ehmheiser, and (second) Mrs. Amanda (Dillinger) Herr; Margaret, who married (first) Joshua Oberdorff, and (second) Benjamin Craley; Levi; Henry, of Lower Windsor township, who married Mary Ann Klinestiver; Angelina, Mrs. John Chillas, of the same township; Matilda, who died unmarried; and Renben, deceased in infancy.

Levi Baker attended the home schools until he was sixteen, but for two years before finally leaving he had been hired out most of the year to farmers. He worked first for John Irvin, who paid him from $4 to $4.50 a month, and by the time he was eighteen he was earning $15 monthly. At that age he began working for the Northern Central Railroad, as a brakeman, running between Holmesburg and Baltimore, and continued at that employment for two years, earning finally $45 per month. He gave up railroading, however, learned to mold bricks, and was so employed for two years in York and then in Chanceford townships; the bricks for St. Luke's Lutheran Church in Chanceford township were molded by him. At the end of that period Mr. Baker decided to return to farming, and buying his father's homestead, he has since been engaged in cultivating that and in milling. In 1900 he bought a small place of eight acres, which he rents. He is a wide awake practical farmer, and has been successful in all his undertakings.

In 1874, in Chanceford township, Mr. Baker was married to Annie Schoff, daughter of Frederick and Eva (Arnold) Schoff. Mrs. Baker died in 1875, leaving one daughter, Emma, now Mrs. William Emerheiser, of Windsor township. Mr. Baker's second wife was Ellen McKenzie, daughter of Thomas and Margaret (Butcher) McKenzie. The only child of this marriage was Bertie Clinton, born Feb. 9, 1887, who has been educated in the township schools and is living at home. Mr. Baker has always been an ardent Democrat, but has never held public office. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church.

D. FRANK KALTREIDER, a successful young business man of Red Lion, York county, who is extensively engaged in the manufacture of cigars, was born Oct. 19, 1878, in Red Lion.

Mr. Kaltreider received his education in the public schools of Freysville, finishing his school ing at the age of twelve years, one year after his father had returned to Red Lion. He made his first money by raising and selling pigeons in his boyhood, and later worked with his father in various capacities, packing cigars, driving a team and working in his father's livery stable. At the age of twenty years he started out in life for himself, packing cigars for Daniel Spangler, and by September, 1900, he had saved enough to start in the cigar manufacturing business for himself. He bought a factory from his brother Daniel C., by whom it was built in 1899, and there he remained from the time he began business, in 1900, until 1905, when he converted it into a dwelling house and moved it from Charles street to Broadway; it is one of the finest in Red Lion. He is now erecting a three-story brick building, with basement, 66 x 40 feet, and equipping it with all modern improvements, including electric light. Mr. Kaltreider employs thirty-four hands, and has, besides, the control of six other factories, doing a large business both as a manufacturer and as a dealer in leaf tobacco. He is an excellent example of the self-made man, having started at the bottom, with practically nothing, for he has earned all he now owns by his own exertions, and merely by the force of his own industry has advanced himself to his present sound condition. He is the owner of two fine driving horses which promise to be very fast, and was formerly the owner of "Joe K.," 2:21 3/4, which he sold in 1905. All his life he has been an enthusiastic lover of good horseflesh. He is considered one of the substantial business men of the township, thoroughly competent in his business. The estimated value of his real estate holdings in Red Lion, which include one of the finest homes in that place, is at present $19,500.

In his religious connection Mr. Kaltreider is a member of the United Evangelical Church. In politics he is a Democrat. He has served in the borough council, first filling out the unexpired term of J. T. Gemmill, and in the spring of 1900 he was elected to the council, of which body he has served as president. He has been a director of the Red Lion Band Association for the past five years, and is a trustee of the Red Lion Fire Company. Fraternally Mr. Kaltreider is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, the Odd Fellows and the Red Men, having been through all the chairs in the latter society.

Mr. Kaltreider was married in Red Lion, April 27, 1902, to Miss Vergie Idella Olewiler, daughter of Rudolph and Amanda (Smith) Olewiler, and two children have come to this union: Jane, Merriam, born June 26, 1903, and Nolan Levi, born March 7, 1905.

EPHRAIM R. MILLER, for many years a farmer at Smoketown, whose death occurred in his later home in Goldsboro, was born in Strinestown, Conewago township, in 1835.

Christian Miller, father of Ephraim R., was for the greater part of his life engaged in the hotel and mercantile business in Strinestown, although in his later years he removed to Smoketown, Newberry township; and devoted himself to farming. He was twice married, first to a Miss Rinehart, and second to a Miss Jacoby. The latter is also deceased, and both are buried in Smoketown, where the remains of Mr. Miller are likewise interred, his death having occurred in 1895. There were two sons: Eli, of Glen Rock, York county, who married Malinda Schriver; and Ephraim.

Ephraim R. Miller enjoyed a commonschool education and then assisted his father in carrying on the farm. In 1860 he married and began farming on his own account in Smoketown, but after four years volunteered for service in the army, and Feb. 17, 1865, enlisted in Company K, 192d P. V. I. His term of enlistment was one year but he did not complete it, being mustered out Aug. 24, 1865. During the five succeeding years he was an invalid, almost helpless, and his wife had not only the care of the husband, but the general responsibility. In 1890 Mr. Miller removed to Goldsboro, where he lived in retirement until his death, Feb. 28, 1904. His remains were interred in the old Fetrow cemetery. Mr. Miller was a well known citizen, one always interested in public matters and during his few years in Goldsboro, served on its council. He was a Democrat in political faith. Greatly respected by all who knew him, his death was felt to be not only an irreparable loss to his family, but one which affected the best interests of his community.

The domestic life of Mr. Miller was a happy one. His wife was Elizabeth Fetrow, daughter of John and Lydia (Brubaker) Fetrow. To their union the following children were born: Ella, Mrs. Milton Mickey, residing at Smoketown; Harry, of Newberry township, who married (first) Vera Prowell, and after her death, her sister, Sadie Prowell; Lydia, Mrs. Charles Fisher, of Goldsboro; Sadie, Mrs. John Shuller, of the same town; and Howard F., a dealer in confectionery and cigars in Goldsboro, married to Mary, daughter of Henry Writer. Mrs. Miller, who is still residing in Goldsboro, belongs to a family prominent in Fairview township.

SAMUEL LEHR, whose tragic death both shocked and grieved the whole community, was one of the best known citizens of Conewago township, York county. He was born in 1838, in Manchester township, York county, son of David and Elizabeth (Myers) Lehr.

David Lehr was also born in York county, and was chiefly engaged in teaming to Baltimore and Pittsburgh. After his marriage he located at Round Town, Manchester township, where both he and wife died; they were buried at QuickeIs church. They had eleven children, namely: George, who was a prominent citizen at Round Town, a merchant and justice of the peace, married Elizabeth Allison; Samuel; David married Susan Strickler, and died in Manchester township; Henry died young; William, a carpenter by trade, resides in the West; John, who married Lydia Strickler, was a cigarmaker and shoemaker, and lives in Manchester township; Susanna died young; Elizabeth married Adam Bowersox; Sarah married Ebner Bowersox; Catherine is deceased; and Mary Ann died aged twelve years.

The late Samuel Lehr received a good common school education in his native township and when his school days were over, learned the carpenter’s trade, becoming a very thorough workman. He continued at that employment, subsequently for about forty years becoming a contractor and builder, and erecting many of the substantial buildings in his own and other townships. About twelve years of his active life were spent in York, but in 1892 he bought the Henry Hake farm in Conewago township, his home being situated about two miles west of Stahleyes postoffice.

In 1863 Mr. Lehr married Taey Ann Millard, daughter of John and Sarah (Strominger) Millard, the former of whom died in 1875, and the latter, in 1903. Both were buried at St. John’s cemetery in Fairview township. In regard to the venerable lady just mentioned, the following is quoted from a local newspaper:

“Died on June 15, Sarah Millard, aged ninety-three years, nine months and twelve days. In addition to what has been previously said concerning this mother in Israel, we would yet say that she was the mother of ten children, six boys and four girls. One son was killed by the cars; one, Thomas, died just five weeks before his mother. She had thirty-seven grandchildren and fifty-two great-grandchildren. She was buried near Lewisberry, Rev. Emmenhiser officiating.” The children of John and Sarah Millard were: Henry, who was killed at York in the freight yards, married Ella Garretson; Robert, who married Mary Clarke, of Illinois, is a plasterer by trade, and lives in Kansas; Ann Jane died young; Thomas (deceased) married Ida Johnston, of Ohio; Rachel is the wife of William Robinson, of Fairview township; Taey Ann, who married (first) the late Samuel Lehr, and (second) J. L. Gladfelter on May 16, 1905; John, a resident of Tennessee, married Elizabeth Cockley, Ellen, wife of George Hart, lives in Hampton township, Cumberland county; Daniel died young; Jacob R., living in Iowa, married Alice Fisher, and has a family of eleven living children.

Mrs. Gladfelter resides on the home farm.
in Conewago township, a lady most highly esteemed by all who know her. In the great bereavement which befell her in the sad death of Mr. Lehr, she had the sympathy of the whole neighborhood. Perhaps an account of this calamity may best be given in the words of the local paper:

"While on their way to the Hartman sale, Samuel Lehr and Jacob Boring had driven to Mt. Wolf and then started to walk to their destination on the railroad track of the Northern Central Railroad. They were walking on the northbound track and a freight train was passing them on the southbound track, noise of which prevented them from hearing the approaching passenger train in their rear, and as the trains were going around a curve, the engineer was unable to see them in time to prevent the accident. When the train struck them they were thrown down the embankment on the country road. It is surmised that Mr. Lehr saw the death-dealing engine a second before his companion, and threw his arm around his friend in an attempt to drag him out of the way, both being hurled down the bank where they lay together in their last sleep. It is a great credit to a man that his last care should be for the safety of another."

SPahr Brothers. The well known contracting and building firm of Spahr Brothers—Charles C. and Amos Spahr—with offices at No. 611 Linden avenue, York, has had the contracts for the erection of a number of the city's largest buildings. The first of the Spahr family of whom we have any record is William Spahr, who was reared some three miles north of Dover by Jacob Sheaffer, a farmer. He followed agricultural pursuits and died in early manhood. He was survived by his widow, formerly Eliza White, daughter of Joseph White, a stone-mason, contractor and builder, and two children: Lewis, a stone-mason by trade, who died many years ago; and Jacob W.

Jacob W. Spahr was born Nov. 10, 1839, in Dover township, where he was reared. When but nine years of age he went to work on a farm, following that occupation until his sixteenth year, when he was apprenticed as a stone-mason to Isaac Fickes and Edward Gross. After three years of work as a journeyman he engaged again in agricultural pursuits, thus continuing for six years, at the end of which time he returned to stone-masonry, three years later locating in York. Here he has since followed his trade, being a first class mechanic as well as one of the good, honorable citizens of York. Mr. Spahr was married, in 1861, to Miss Emmeline March, daughter of Jacob G. and Harriet (Zinn) March. Mrs. Spahr was born in Washington township, York county, in 1843, and to her and her husband these children were born: Daniel, a painter of York; Sarah, the wife of William Gross, of York; Charles C.; Clarissa, at home; Amos; Aaron, a brick-mason of York; Elizabeth, the wife of Charles Sellers, of York; Arthur J., a brick-layer; Milo, deceased; Henry Elmer, brick-layer, of York. The family, with the exception of Daniel, are members of the Reformed Church, he being of the Lutheran faith.

Charles C. Spahr, the senior member of the firm, was born in this part of Pennsylvania, July 31, 1867. He was reared on his father's farm in Washington township, and until he was sixteen years old lived with his grandparents, and, while working on the farm, received a common school education. When he had reached the age named, he was apprenticed as a brick mason to Harrison Spangler, but before he had served his time he left his employer and started out in life for himself. He at first went to Harrisburg and then spent some years in different parts of Pennsylvania and Maryland, covering both States pretty thoroughly. Returning home in 1892, he associated himself with his brother, and the present well known firm of Spahr Brothers was established. The brothers do a general contracting and building business in brick, stone and concrete, operating on a large scale and giving employment to from thirty-five to fifty men. They erect all kinds of buildings, but lately have been especially active in the construction of factories. Among the large structures erected by the Spahr Brothers may be mentioned the West Nowell and the Central school buildings, the Pennsylvania hotel, the Western Maryland depot, the Diamond silk mill, the factories of the Jacoby Furniture Company, the Brownell, Schmitt & Stacy Company and the Cosmo Carriage Company, of Glen Rock, and the residences of John Frees, Edward McCall, Eli Groves, Edgar Fryes, two for J. A. Dempwolf, as well as Michael's store building, and many others.

Charles C. Spahr has been twice married, first in April, 1891, to Miss Jennie Maloney, who died Sept. 21, 1901. In September, 1903, Mr. Spahr married Mrs. Josephine Gardner, daughter of David H. Mellinger, of Marietta, Lancaster county. Mrs. Spahr had one child by her first marriage, Georgie Marie Gardner. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Spahr served as matron of the York City Hospital for three years. Mr. Spahr is a member of Zion's Reformed Church, while his wife is associated with the Methodist faith.

Amos Spahr, beside his connection with the firm of Spahr Brothers, is also a member of the stone dealing, quarrying and crushing firm of Gise, Spahr & Myers, which firm handles all kinds of building and crushed stone, and that used for paving, macadamizing and concrete work. Mr. Spahr was born in Washington township, March 18, 1871, and received his education in the public schools of that vicinity. While a boy he engaged in various vocations in York. For a time he was a teamster and when sixteen years of age he commenced to learn the trade of a brick-mason with Albert Spangler of York. After mastering his trade, he went to Sparrow's Point, and thence to Middletown, after which for four years he worked at various places in the county. At this time in company with his brother, Charles C., he embarked in the contracting and building business, and in 1901 formed his partnership with Messrs. Gise and Myers. This latter company gives employment to from twenty to thirty-five people, and is enjoying a steadily increasing business.

Amos Spahr was married April 9, 1896, to Miss Martha J. Spangler, born in Springs-gettsburg township and the daughter of Philip Spangler. They have one child, Philip Karl. In religion Mr. and Mrs. Spahr are members of the Reformed Church. They live at their comfortable home, No. 838 West Locust street, York, where their many friends are always welcome.

The firm of Spahr Brothers bears an enviable reputation in York, where the brothers are well known and highly esteemed, and where, besides their other business interests, they are prominently identified with real estate affairs.

Samuel Paules, who passed his entire life in York county, was born on a farm near Yorkana, Lower Windsor township, York county, Dec. 10, 1829, son of Adam and Elizabeth (Hartzler) Paules. His father was born Nov. 19, 1794, and died Aug. 26, 1867, while the mother was born Oct. 18, 1793, and died Oct. 29, 1858. As is evident from the date and place of Samuel's birth, the Paules family has long been identified with the history of York county.

Samuel Paules was reared under the conditions which marked pioneer life in this favored section of the Keystone State, and his educational advantages were such as were afforded by the common schools of the period, which were usually maintained on the subscription plan. That he made good use of his opportunities in this connection is evident from the fact that in his youth he was a popular and successful teacher in the schools of his native county, being engaged in pedagogic work for several years, in Lower Windsor township. As a young man he also learned the shoemaking trade, but owing to somewhat delicate health never followed that vocation for any considerable period. His marriage was solemnized in 1853, and he forthwith took up his abode on a farm in Lower Windsor township, afterward engaging in the work of his trade to a greater or less extent for two years, and also teaching school at intervals, while he continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until the close of his long and useful life, having become the owner of a small but valuable farm, which is still owned by his widow.

In his political proclivities Mr. Paules was a Democrat until the crucial era of the Civil war, when he espoused the cause of the newly organized Republican party, of whose principles he ever afterward continued a stalwart advocate, having been uncompromising in his antipathy to the institution of slavery and a loyal supporter of the Union during the dark days of the Rebellion. He was a lifelong and zealous member of the Evangelical Church, and his daily walk and conversation were in harmony with the faith to which he held. He took an active part in all departments of church work, especially that of the Sunday school, and for many years served as deacon and class-leader, besides holding other official positions. He attended the various Sunday school conventions and stood forth as a devoted follower of the Master whom he served with all zeal and self-abnegation. He was kindly in his judgment of his fellow-men, tolerant and charitable in his views, and ever held the high esteem and confidence of associates and friends, being signally true and faithful in all the relations of life and fully deserving, at the close of his labors, the strong words of Divine commendation: "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Mr. Paules was summoned into eternal rest Jan. 17, 1878, and in his death the community lost one of its most honored and loyal citizens.

In the city of York, on Nov. 24, 1853, Rev. Christian F. Deininger, a clergyman of the Evangelical Church, pronounced the words which united the life destinies of Mr. Paules and Henrietta Jacobs, who proved to him a devoted wife and helpmate during the long years of their wedded life, and who still survives him. She was born in Hellam township, York county, Aug. 17, 1833, and was there reared and educated. She is a daughter of Henry and Magdalena (Shenberger) Jacobs. Her father was a miller by trade and for many years engaged in farming on a small scale. Mrs. Paules has been likewise a devoted and consistent member of the Evangelical Church and has been active in its work. Until recently she has enjoyed vigorous health, and this is attested by the fact that in the autumn of 1903, at the age of seventy years, she walked the entire distance from her home to the city of York (seven miles), returning by stage, while previously she had frequently walked to Craleyville and return, a distance of ten miles. To Mr. and Mrs. Paules no children were born, but their home was ever one in which the children of the community found a warm welcome, and was consequently a favorite juvenile resort. Mrs. Paules is held in affectionate regard and is one of the sterling pioneer women of York county.

E. D. BENTZEL, one of the lights in the legal profession in York county, comes of sturdy German ancestry.

In 1745 there emigrated from Germany two brothers by the name of Bentzel—Philip and Baltzer—who landed at Baltimore, Md. Of these Baltzer, who was a shoemaker by trade, came to York county, and settled near the town of York. He served his adopted country in her War for Independence, attaining the rank of captain. He married and became the father of six children: Henry, David, Catharine Ellman, Anna Maria, Lizzie and Barbara Kump.

David Bentzel, son of Baltzer, was born in August, 1777, and he became a successful farmer and distiller. In 1811 he erected a large distillery, and manufactured a high grade of whiskey which he transported by teams to the market in Baltimore. The farm on which he located at the time of his marriage was on the Little Conewago Creek, near what is now known as Weigelstown. At the age of twenty-four years he married Miss Elizabeth Meisenheimer, and they became the parents of ten children: Henry, Felix (who died young), David, Samuel, Daniel M., Barbara, Mary, Elizabeth, Nancy and Sarah (who died young). All the children who reached mature years married.

David Bentzel (2), son of David, was born May 3, 1815. In his youth, at his father's mill, he learned the trade of milling under his uncle, George Meisenheimer, and at his father's death he bought this same mill on the Little Conewago, and there continued to make his home as long as he lived. He married Sarah Eisenhart, daughter of John Eisenhart, a carpenter and cabinet-maker; she died Dec. 25, 1880, the mother of six children, as follows: Henry M., born in 1844, located in California, and there died in 1877, leaving one son, Frederick; Edward D.; David E., born in 1857; Nancy married Henry W. Jacobs; Kate E., married Peter Binder; and Leah died in infancy.

Edward D. Bentzel was born Feb. 22, 1846, and his boyhood and youth were passed at the old homestead on the banks of the Little Conewago. He learned the milling trade of his father, but owing to a severe illness, which so crippled him in his lower limbs as to necessitate the use of crutches, he was forced to abandon it. His educational opportunities had been excellent, he having had the advantage of courses in both the York County Normal and the Academy. For some six terms he was successfully engaged in teaching in York borough and the County. Always interested in public affairs, he naturally turned to politics, and as a good stanch Democrat early became the leader in his chosen party. In 1872 he was elected clerk of the courts, a position which he ably filled for three years. While in that office he was inspired with an ambition to enter the legal profession, and he became a student in the office of James B. Ziegler, and in 1878 he was admitted to the Bar, continuing to the present time in the active and successful practice of his chosen calling. A man of broad and progressive ideas he is a natural leader, and his worth as a citizen has been demonstrated in every relation of life.

On Feb. 24, 1881, Mr. Bentzel was united in marriage to Miss Ida Kate Wehrly, daughter of George Wehrly, of the "Pennsylvania House," York. Three children have blessed this union namely: Edith May, Ernest and Edward Wehrly.

JOHN MINSKER was for a number of years master carpenter of the Baltimore division of the Northern Central railroad, and it was said by the late J. N. DuBarry, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, that Mr. Minsker built more bridges and trestles in his day than any other man in the service of the company.

Ludwick Minsker (I) was a Revolutionary soldier, hunter and trapper of Dauphin county. His son, Ludwig (II), was born and reared in Clark's Valley, Middle Paxton township, Dauphin county, where he married Mary Cairns, and together they reared the following family: Benjamin married Eliza Mooney; Moses married Mary Pilieger; Ludwig (III) was the father of John; Joshua died unmarried; Susannah married John Bohl; Rachel married Christian Fogle; and Catherine married a Mr. Weltmier. Ludwig (III) married Henrietta Kuehne, daughter of William Ludwig Kuehne, who came with his family from Saxony, Germany, to Pennsylvania, about the year 1821. Mr. Minsker died Jan. 1, 1867, at the age of sixty-eight years, having reared a family of four sons and three daughters.

John Minsker was born Dec. 11, 1833, in Clark's Valley, Dauphin county, about three miles from the town of Dauphin. He was reared on his father's farm, and served an apprenticeship at blacksmithing in Dauphin, during the construction of the present Schuykill & Susquehanna Railroad. All blacksmith work for the road was done at this shop. Mr. Minsker well remembers how he assisted in the welding of broken car axles by upsetting the broken ends and jumping them together when welding hot. Three sledges were used in the operation and the strikers would have their knuckles pretty well blistered by the time the weld was made. Car axles in that day were only about from two and one-half to three inches in diameter. Mr. Minsker also assisted to transfer the first ten coal hoppers from the canal to the railroad, horses hauling them on their wheels through the streets. These were the little four-wheeled coal hoppers built by George W. Ilgenfrith, at York, and were transported to Dauphin on saddles, by way of the canal. He also took his first car ride on this road, and the engine, being a wood-burner with a straight stack and a large knot at the top as a spark arrester, set his clothing on fire. The engine was called the "Isaac Lee" and it was said to be of English make. After being freed from the blacksmith apprenticeship, Mr. Minsker arranged at once to learn the carpenter's trade, which was more congenial to his taste. While a carpenter's apprentice, Mr. Minsker assisted to erect the first coal chute in Dauphin, which was then the terminus of the Dauphin & Susquehanna railroad (since called the Schuykill & Susquehanna), where he also assisted to frame a set of coal chutes to be erected at what is now the North and Madison streets coal-yard, Baltimore, on the Northern Central railroad. In the spring of 1852, having completed his apprenticeship, he joined a party from the neighborhood of Dauphin and went to West Virginia. The Winifreda Mining & Manufacturing Co. was then developing coal lands on the west bank of the Great Kanawha, on Field's Creek, about Malden. There Mr. Minsker assisted in constructing about seven miles of railroad, inclined planes, coal chutes and several small towns for the use of the miners. A portion of this railroad was what is known as "slab track"—notched ties, oak rails wedged fast to the ties, with a flat strip of iron nailed on the top of the stringer for the wheels to run on, being the method of construction. Mr. Minsker remained there until the suspension of the operations by the company. Returning home, in the fall of 1854, he attended school that winter, and in June, 1855, obtained employment at the Cumberland Valley railroad bridge, which crosses the Susquehanna at Harrisburg, assisting in replacing the old plank lattice bridge with a new Howe truss superstructure. The contractors for this work were Stone, Quigley & Burton. The idea of building a new bridge beneath the track, without suspending traffic, was almost entirely unheard of at that time. After a few months’ service in the framing gang, Mr. Minsker was promoted to its foremanship, in which position he framed about eighteen spans of the bridge. In 1855 he was detailed to frame the bridge over the Conodoguinet Creek, at West Fairview, on the Northern Central railroad. When that work was finished the gang was sent to the Pennsylvania railroad, between Rohrerstown and Lancaster, and assisted on the work on a high deck bridge there. From that point the gang was ordered to Georgetown, D. C., where a bridge was framed and gotten ready to cross the Potomac at Little Falls, a few miles above that city. Before the bridge was raised, however, the gang was dispatched to Cabin John, where the large arch now is, to erect shanties for the men to live in while building the big arch and aqueduct. This was in the spring of 1857. From Georgetown, Mr. Minsker, with a small gang, was detailed to go to Baltimore and erect two street bridges on Monument and O’Donnell streets, on what was called the Canton branch of the Northern Central railroad. When these bridges were completed, in the fall of 1857, Mr. Minsker resigned his position with Stone, Quigley & Burton. He then obtained employment on the Dauphin bridge, being built by McCallum & Co. Before this was completed, he bought out a carpenter and cabinet establishment at West Fairview, where he carried on housebuilding, undertaking and general work in wood.

In the meantime the Pennsylvanians secured the Northern Central railroad, which was formerly owned by Marylanders, and sought Mr. Minsker’s services, offering him the foremanship of a gang of carpenters to take charge of the Dauphin bridge. This offer he accepted and on May 16, 1859, went direct to work in the employ of the Northern Central railroad, the service being continuous from that date until Mr. Minsker was put on the retired list, Dec. 31, 1903. He was promoted to be master carpenter Dec. 1, 1862. When he first became connected with the road there was but one iron bridge on the division; now they are either stone or iron. The iron bridge referred to is thought to have been the first plate-girder built in the world. It was put together in the Bolton shop in 1846, and hauled suspended between two cars to the site of the bridge (now No. 25) over Carroll’s Run. The bridge was kept safe until 1882, when it was replaced and cut up. This division also claims to have had in their service at Jail bridge, one of the largest plate-girders ever built. Its length was 128 feet two and one-half inches, by ten feet deep at the ends, and thirty inches wide at the flanges.

Mr. Minsker has been on the road long enough to note many changes. He remembers the old track between York and Baltimore, when it was composed of two lines (and very crooked ones at that), of rusty old rails. The road was then single track, with a wrought iron clamp for a chair, laid on rotten ties, without any regard to getting a tie under the joint. No ballast was used. It was considered lucky to make a round trip without a run-off. No frogs were used at that time, but in lieu a pivot rail, operated with a lever and rail at one end. When the Baltimore & Potomac railroad was new, and was washed away by the heavy floods, Mr. Minsker was detailed with a gang of men to assist in opening the road, and again when the ice-flood moved away some of the spans of the Long Bridge at Washington, he assisted with his men to open the line. During the dreadful June flood of 1889, he, with a select gang of his men, joined forces with the men of the Pennsylvania railroad Viaduct, and assisted in raising that trestle, and also aided in placing the trestle in shape for service at Buttermilk Falls, near Conemaugh. After the great flood in the Codorus Creek at York, in 1884, the county commissioners asked him to prepare plans and specifications for iron street-bridges over the Codorus in York, and also to superintend the erection of the new structures. This he did to the satisfaction of all concerned. Mr. Minsker had charge of the building of block houses at the west end of the Dauphin and Rockville bridges during the raid into Pennsylvania, by the Confederates, of which W. H. Wilson speaks, in his “Reminiscences of a Railroad Engineer.” Prior to 1873 the master carpenter division extended from Baltimore to Mt. Carmel and from York to Wrightsville. During the war of the Rebellion, when the bridges were guarded by soldiers, Mr. Minsker was frequently halted and marched to headquarters, where he had to identify himself, before he was allowed to go on his way. During the war of the Rebellion, when the the bridges, which had to be trestled at once, the work requiring constant care and vigilance. Mr. Minsker also saw three spans of the original Dauphin bridge blown off the piers by a hurricane. He had crawled into the portion that fell, only a few moments before, and, seeing that nothing could be done to save the spans, hastily made his escape.

Mr. Minsker is a Republican, in politics, but takes only a good citizen's interest in public matters. He and his family are members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of York, of which he has served as steward. He is a Royal Arch Mason and a Knight Templar, and is very popular in fraternal circles.

On Feb. 9, 1857, Mr. Minsker was united in marriage with Miss Eliza Ann McClure, of West Fairview, Cumberland county, daughter of Thomas and Cassandra (Weiser) McClure. Mrs. McClure was a descendant of the Conrad Weiser family of Pennsylvania, who are among the pioneers of the State. Mrs. Minsker died Feb. 18, 1903, and is buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. The children born to John Minsker and his estimable wife were: Susan Alice, a graduate of the York High school, residing at home with her father; Anna McClure, wife of Robert O. Stallsmith, residing in York; and Theodore Kuehne, who attended the York High school, three terms at the York County Academy, and the Lehigh University, from 1899 to 1903. After completing his literary education he assumed the study of civil engineering, and is now holding a very responsible professional position with the Pennsylvania railroad, at Oil City.

Since his retirement from active life Mr. Minsker has resided in his beautiful residence at No. 246 North George street. A great hunter and fisher, much of his time is spent in these recreations, and he never returns from a trip without some spoil of the wood or the stream.

MATHEW KERR, JR., is a retired lime manufacturer of Wrightsville, where he was born and reared.

The Kerr family is of Scotch-Irish descent. James Kerr, grandfather of Mathew, Jr., was born in Scotland, where he married and where many of his children were born. In later life he moved to Derry, County Derry, in the North of Ireland, where the remainder of his life was passed.

Mathew Kerr, Sr., father of Mathew, Jr., was born in Derry, in 1786. He was well educated in Ireland, and when he was eighteen came to the United States, landing in New York City, and going at once to York, Pa. His brother George had come to America a few years before, and had a government position in the revenue service at Gettysburg, Pa. Mathew obtained a clerkship with this brother, where he remained for a time and then returned to York and worked at his trade of a carpenter, which he had learned in Ireland. His first work of that nature in this country was on the York Haven Mills, then owned by Jesse McConkey, uncle of Senator E. K. McConkey. After a time he left York, and came to Wrightsville, where for years he was a lumber inspector. He served two terms as justice of the peace, his first commission being obtained from Gov. Shunk. In 1848 he opened a lime quarry on his land, which he continued to work until 1857. This business reverted to his sons and grandsons. Mathew Kerr, Sr., was a man of great energy and persistence, a thorough business man, and successful in all his undertakings. In his earlier days he added to his other occupations that of teaching, being at one time employed at Stoner's school in Hellam township. He was an enthusiastic Democrat all his life. He was one of the founders of the Presbyterian Church in Wrightsville, and was a devout member and for many years an elder. His marriage to Jane Wilson took place in York. Mrs. Kerr was a daughter of Robert and Catherine (Fisher) Wilson, the latter of German descent, the former a Scotchman. Robert Wilson died in Loganville. He was at one time doorkeeper of the old jail at York, and is buried in the old Presbyterian graveyard in that city. He had the following six children: William, who died in Uniontown, Pa., was twice married, his second wife being a Ewing; Thomas died in the West; David, a tanner by trade, who died in Mifflintown, Pa., was a soldier in the war of 1812 and took part in the battle of North Point; Jane married Mathew Kerr, Sr.; Mary married William Morrow, her husband dying in York; and Margaret for many years kept the toll gate at Heistands, where she died unmarried.

Mrs. Jane (Wilson) Kerr was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and a most sincere and earnest Christian. She was noted for her acts of kindness, and helped many a fugitive slave escape across the river. She died in the family home in 1866, aged seventy-four years. Nine children were born to Mathew and Jane (Wilson) Kerr, as follows: (1) Thomas G., born May 10, 1817, a carpenter in Chambersburg; married Malinda Rentrew, and they have two sons, John R. and William, both engaged in the printing business in Chambersburg. (2) Robert, born Dec. 14, 1818, lives with his brother, Mathew, Jr.; he married Carrie Ward (deceased), by whom he had one child, Emma, who married a Mr. Brown, and lives in Dakota. (3) James L., born Jan. 18, 1821, a retired lime merchant, lives in Wrightsville; his wife was a Miss Tompsett. (4) John, born June 27, 1823, died in Wrightsville, April 7, 1850; he married Elizabeth Heppenstall. (5) George W., born July 4, 1826, married Jane Virginia Bahn, and lives in Wrightsville. (6) William H., born Oct. 19, 1828, married Elizabeth Beaverson, and lives in Wrightsville. (7) Mathew, Jr., is mentioned below. (8) David, born Aug. 1, 1833, married Aurelia Matson (deceased), and lives in Kansas. (9) Sarah Jane, born Feb. 25, 1836, married James B. McKillops, and died in Pittsburg.

Mathew Kerr, Jr., was born Feb. 16, 1831, at the family home now owned by his brother William. He was educated in the Wrightsville public schools; his first teacher was Miss Becky Fitz, and later he was taught by his father. As a young man he worked with his father at the lime quarry, and after the latter's death, Mathew, with his brothers, James, William and Robert carried on the business. The brothers retired from time to time, Mathew remaining until 1894. He has been very successful in his affairs, and in 1880 built the beautiful home in which he still lives. He has always adhered to the Democratic party since casting his first presidential vote for Pierce, and in local matters has served his town as a school director. He joined the Presbyterian Church when a young man, and succeeded his father as elder, an office he still retains. For seventeen years he has been a director of the Columbia (Pa.) National Bank.

In January, 1856, Mr. Kerr married Julia Thompson, who was born in Dauphin county, near Derry Church. Her father, Robert M. Thompson, was a school teacher in early life and a blacksmith by trade, becoming weighmaster at the York blast furnace, where he remained until his death. Mrs. Kerr was a devout Presbyterian. She died April 7, 1890, aged sixty-three. To Mr. and Mrs. Kerr were born seven children, as follows: John P., pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church of Elizabeth, N. J., who married Julia, sister of Senator E. K. McConkey; Annie M., who died in December, 1903, wife of A. J. Warfield, station agent at Wrightsville; Mary J., who married J. E. Roth, of Fairfield, Iowa; Miss Sally J., at home; Jennie M., who married J. S. Moul, of Hanover, Pa.; Miss Ella; and Charles M., who married Blanche McConkey.

JOHN FRANKLIN SECHRIST. The manufacture of cigars has gradually assumed large proportions throughout a great part of Pennsylvania, and has become one of the leading industries in York county. Starting, like many others, in a small way, the factory owned by John F. Sechrist has, from the first, steadily increased its output, until now Mr. Sechrist is at the head of a concern known in all parts of the United States. This successful business man is a native of the county, where he was born on his father's farm July 18, 1863, son of John and Susan (Fry) Sechrist.

His paternal grandfather was a farmer and distiller in Chanceford township, well known all through his section. He hauled his whiskey to Baltimore for sale, and did a considerable business in addition to running a large farm. He was twice married.

John Sechrist was born on his father's farm, and followed farming all his life. He was sent to the common schools, and when older was employed by his father to haul the whiskey to Baltimore. When he married he settled on the homestead, and lived there fifty-six years, at the end of that time, selling the place, 140 acres, and moving to Red Lion, where he died in 1901, aged eighty-eight. He was a lifelong Democrat, but would never accept office. He first joined the United Brethren Church, but afterward united with the Evangelical Church, in which he was a trustee for many years. He was a devout Christian, who carried his faith into all practical dealings. He married Miss Susan Fry, daughter of Jacob Fry. Mrs. Sechrist is still living, now aged eighty-three; she has been a life long and active member of the Evangelical Church. The children born to their union were: Henry F., farmer in Chanceford township, married to Miss Sarah Rechard; Jacob, a farmer and supervisor of Dallastown, who married Mrs. Mary Schall; Amos, formerly a farmer, now a cigar manufacturer at Red Lion, who married Miss Sarah Craley; Leah, Mrs. Emmanuel Staley, deceased in the summer of 1904; Lizzie, unmarried; James, who married Miss Della Rechard, and is an Evangelical preacher at Berwick, Pa.; Steven S., who married Miss Susan Stine, and is one of the proprietors of the Porto Rico Cigar Factory at Red Lion; William, who died at the age of eight; John F.

John F. Sechrist was educated in the township schools, where his first teacher was Jacob Crumbling, and his last his own brother, Steven S. He left school at the age of fifteen, but had made good use of all his time there. During vacations, and until he was twenty-one years old, he worked on the farm for his father, and for the following four years, after his marriage, he remained there, farming it on the shares. He then removed to Freysville, the former home of his wife, bought three and a half acres from his father-in-law, built a home and a cigar factory, with other buildings, and started out for himself. The original factory was 18 x 26 feet, two stories in height, but three years later an addition was put on, 18 x 24 feet, and in 1892 another, 18 x 24 feet. Employing at first six hands, Mr. Sechrist, in 1903, had fifty-two employees, and his output is 2,000,000 cigars annually, which are shipped to all parts of the country. He manufactures ten-cent brands, five-cent ones, and two for five. In addition to his own factory, he has controlled as many as seven others. Mr. Sechrist has made his own way entirely, for when he started he was obliged to borrow the money to put up his buildings. For three years he himself made cigars, but now he has simply the management of the establishment, which is a splendid witness to his industry, good management and fair dealing. So exactly does he live up to all his agreements, that when a customer is once made his permanent trade is assured.

Mr. Sechrist was married, Aug. 25, 1885, by the Rev. Lenhart, to Miss Emma Jane Stine, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Crumbling) Stine, and she a member of one of York county's oldest families. The children born to this union numbered four: Gertrude Irene; Carrie, who died aged thirteen; Maude; and Helen M. The family is connected with the Freysville Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Sechrist has been a deacon for six years, and where he continues the Sunday-school work which in one form or another has been uninterrupted since his childhood. As a boy of fifteen he united with the Evangelical Church at his native place, and on removing to Freysville, he transferred his membership to the Freysville Evangelical. After another year, however, he changed again from that to the Lutheran Church, which he now attends. In politics Mr. Sechrist is a Democrat, he casting his first vote for President Cleveland. He is a member of Katahdin Lodge, No. 560, I. O. O. F., and Red Lion Encampment.

JONATHAN B. HERRMAN, who has been a justice of the peace in Red Lion for the past twenty years, was born Feb. 15, 1857, in 1820 they sailed for the United States. near Anstine's mill, now owned by John Myer.

The Herrman family is of Swiss extraction. Peter Herrman, the grandfather of Jonathan B., was born in Switzerland, in the city of Berne, where he studied and later followed the practice of medicine, continuing that profession after coming to America. Peter Herrman married Sarah Elliker in Switzerland and in 1820 they sailed for the United States. One child was added to the family during the voyage, and was named Martha Magdalena, the latter in honor of the ship so named which brought them safely into the port of Baltimore after a stormy passage of six weeks. Peter Herrman later became a preacher, first in the U. B. Church and later in the Lutheran Church, in the latter connection preaching at Freysville, Kreutz Creek and other points. His death occurred after a life of good works, and he was interred in Staley's Church cemetery, in North Hopewell township. His children were: John M., deceased, who was a homeopathic physician at Windsor; Elizabeth, deceased, Mrs. Shade, of Baltimore, Md.; Martha M., Mrs. John Fry, of Windsor township; Frederic, who died in Peach Bottom township; Susan, widow of Jacob Jones, of Baltimore, Md.; Samuel E., father of Jonathan B.; Anna, Mrs. William Stewart, who died in Baltimore; Mrs. Joseph Jamison, of Baltimore; and William O., who died at Delta, York county, in 1904.

Samuel E. Herrman was born in 1831, at Baltimore, Md., and resided there during his early boyhood. During the time his father was connected with the U. B. Conference the family lived in Baltimore, but after he became associated with the Lutheran Church he was stationed at different points, and the children attended school wherever he was settled. Samuel learned the trade of a bricklayer, but he was early convinced of the truths of religion and became a preacher at Windsorville and in the surrounding neighborhood. Later he joined the religious body known as the Church of God and preached at Duncannon and in other sections of the State, always impressing those who heard him with his sincerity. Late in life he retired to Red Lion, where he died in 1902. He was a lifelong Democrat.

Samuel E. Herrman married Sarah Bull, who was born in 1832, in Lebanon county, Pa., and who still survives. She was brought to this county when young, her father, Jonathan Bull, being a son of English parents. When a young man he engaged in freighting from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, and at one time was the manager of Margaretta Furnace, in York county. For some years he engaged in charcoal burning in Lebanon and York counties. His death occurred on his farm in Lower Windsor township in the year 1878, at the age of seventy-seven years. His wife, who was of Scotch descent, was Elizabeth Douglas, born in Lancaster county, Pa., in 1809, and dying in 1885. The children of Samuel E. Herrman and his wife were: Jonathan B.; Lizzie, Mrs. R. T. Smith, of Red Lion; Sylvester J., of Red Lion, who married Ida Heindel, since deceased; Elmer E., of Steelton, who married Frances A. McAllister; Sarah, Mrs. M. F. Harlan, of Steelton; Maggie, deceased; Samuel H., of Red Lion, who married Susan Howard; and Walter J., of York, who married Bertha McGuigan.

Jonathan B. Herrman was educated mainly in the Windsorville school, where he continued until the age of twelve years, when his grandfather removed to Lower Windsor township and he was able to attend the Neiman school, taught by a brother of Dr. Gable of York. At the age of twenty years he finished his education, his last teacher being Greer Barnett. Mr. Herrman was reared from infancy to manhood by his grandfather Bull. The discussion over his name, when he was an infant, caused some friction between the two excellent men, his father and his maternal grandfather. The latter wished the child named for him, Jonathan Bull, but the former, who was a strong Democrat, wished the middle name to be Buchanan, in honor of James Buchanan. The two could not agree on this matter, but finally compromised on the initial B, without further ending. Jonathan B. Herrman remained at work on the farm until the age of twenty-one and then married and settled in Lower Windsor township, where he followed the trade of brick-laying which he had learned from his father. He resided there until 1883, when he removed to Red Lion, and was again employed at his trade until the duties of the various offices to which he was elected otherwise occupied his time. In 1884 he was elected a member of the town council, serving thus three years, and the following two as clerk of that body. In 1886 he was elected as a justice of the peace, and his re-election and continuous service demonstrate very clearly the value set upon his ability by his fellow-citizens. He has been a prominent citizen since locating at Red Lion, serving four years as a school director and three years as secretary of the school board, and taking an active part in all the important public matters arising to be decided by the suffrages of the people. He has always been identified with the Democratic party.

Judge Herrman was reared in the U. B. Church in boyhood, but later attended the services of the M. E. Church and for five years was secretary of the Sunday-school. He has always been a liberal donator to all religious enterprises and charitable objects. He was interested for a time in the newspaper business, on Sept. 23, 1892, issuing the first number of the Red Lion Press, in partnership with W. L. Lock, and being succeeded by his eldest son, in 1901.

On April 26, 1877, in Lower Windsor township, Jonathan B. Herrman married Miss Jennie Kinaid, daughter of the late Henry and Elizabeth (Kauffman) Kinaid, and they have children as follows: Claude, a successful young business man; Pearl, Mrs. Harry Neff, of Red Lion; Minerva, and Nellie.

In fraternal life Judge Herrman has ever been a very prominent factor in York county. He is a member of Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451, A. F. & A. M. At the age of twenty-one he joined Lodge No. 944, I. O. O. F., has been a member of York Encampment, No. 67, for some years, and is past chief patriarch in that body. In 1887 he organized Katahdin Lodge, No. 560, I. O. O. F., of Red Lion, in which he is past grand, has belonged to Red Lion Encampment for the past decade, now holding the position of past chief patriarch in the organization, and belongs to Salome Lodge, of the Daughters of Rebekah, of York. He is also a member of Red Lion Council, No. 125, of the O. U. A. M. In public, fraternal and social life he stands as one of the representative men of this section of York county, being widely known and held in universal esteem. He has administered impartial justice for many years, has set an example of good citizenship and public spirit, and has made a record for himself that reflects credit upon himself and upon his community.

CASPER HEINRICH OERMANN, senior member of Oermann & Blaebaum, of York, Pa., although comparatively a young man, has made his mark in the business world. He was born March 21, 1863, in the Prussian province of Westphalia, Germany, at the village of Buttendorf, near Lubecke, son of Heinrich and Anna Maria (Sieker) Oermann. The parents of Mr. Oermann were farming people in Germany. Two brothers of Heinrich Oermann came to York: William A., a shoemaker, in 1846, who died in 1875, leaving five sons and one daughter; and Charles, a farmer, who died in 1896, leaving a son and daughter. Casper H. Oermann is the second son of his parents, the other members of the family being Heinrich, a farmer of Westphalia; William H., a painter and contractor at York, and Carl, who died in 1886 and was buried in Prospect Hill cemetery.

While the Prussian provinces do not afford as good business opportunities to ambitious young men as does America, in many ways the public schools are better, and when Casper H. Oermann had completed his education in the local institutions, he had a thorough knowledge of the branches taught. In 1881 he decided to join his uncle at York, Pa., being then eighteen years of age. From the port of New York he came directly to that city and soon found work there as a carpenter, a trade he had learned in Germany. This he followed until 1894, when he embarked in his present business of contracting and building, entering into a partnership with another practical man in the business. In addition to a great deal of firm work, Mr. Oermann has done much individually in the way of erecting houses for sale, some twenty-five in number. These are all well constructed, modern in style and add to the attractiveness of the localities in which they are built. He is looked upon as one of the first-class men in his line in this part of York county. His own beautiful residence at No. 17 Carlisle avenue was built in 1898, and is a model of modern convenience.

Mr. Oermann was married April 16, 1884, to Wilhelmina Moellering, who was born in Westphalia and came to York in 1880. She is a daughter of Heinrich and Catherine (Brockman) Moellering, deceased. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Oermann are as follows: Anna, born May 13, 1886; Henry, born April 18, 1888, who is attending Concordia College at Hawthorne, Westchester Co., N. Y., in preparation for the ministry of the German Lutheran Church in the Missouri Synod; William, born Sept. 25, 1890, a student in the same college; Carl, born Aug. 23, 1892; Clara, born Aug. 27, 1894, and Edward, born March 24, 1899. Mr. Oermann has been one of the leading members and liberal supporters of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church of York for many years and has served on its official board.

The business house of Mr. Oermann is situated on the rear of No. 450 West Philadelphia street and from Nos. 446 to 472 Clark alley. The work of the firm covers all kinds of building and contracting, and a large force of men is constantly employed. Personally Mr. Oermann is an honorable, upright man, fair in all his dealings with others and well represents the best class of business men in York.

JACOB HETZEL LEBER was born on the paternal mansion farm in Lower Windsor township, just to the rear of the Canadochley church, April 29, 1839, and there he was reared to the age of eighteen, assisting in the work of the farm and availing himself of the educational opportunities offered in the locality. At the age of six years he became a pupil in the Canadochley school, over which Henry G. Kauffman presided over as instructor, and there he continued a pupil during the winter terms until he reached the age of eighteen years, his last teacher being David Keller, who is now engaged in the coal business in the city of York. At the age noted he entered upon an apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade, under the direction of Matthias Reigart, of Stony Brook, with whom he remained two years, after which he served an equal period with Michael Beckler, near Hellam. His father then erected for him a shop on the home farm and he there began business for himself in 1861, gaining a wide reputation as a skillful and reliable workman and securing a large and representative patronage. He continued operations there until 1884, and for the ensuing seventeen years was engaged in agricultural pursuits on the farm of his father-in-law, in Lower Windsor township. He then, in 1901, returned to the old home farm and resumed his trade, in which he was actively engaged up to a comparatively recent date, while, for the accommodation of his old customers, he still does considerable work in his shop. Mr. Leber has throughout life devoted much time to the reading of substantial literature, while also keeping in touch with the questions and issues of the hour, and he is a man of broad and exact information. He has been for many years a constant reader of the Bible, and its goodly precepts and lessons he has not failed to teach at the home fireside. When a youth of sixteen years Mr. Leber became a member of the Reformed Church, having been catechized by Rev. Daniel Ziegler, of Canadochley Church. In his boyhood he first attended Sunday-school at Margareta Furnace, one and one-half miles distant from his home, but when the Sunday-school was established at the Canadochley Church, in the immediate vicinity of the homestead, he joined that organization. He has ever since been identified with the latter church, and for several years has been a teacher in its Sunday-school. For six years he was a deacon in the church, and for the past ten years has served as elder, taking an active and zealous interest in all departments of the religious work, including its collateral benevolences.

Mr. Leber is well fortified in his political views and has been a stalwart supporter of the Republican party ever since attaining his legal majority, casting his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, in 1860. He has been prominent and influential in local public affairs and is recognized as a public-spirited and loyal citizen. He served two terms as county committeeman and twice as delegate, while he has also been an incumbent of the offices of election inspector and judge, assessor, township clerk and school director, having held the last mentioned position one term, and being at the time of this writing in the midst of his fourth term of service as township clerk. He was a charter member of the Lower Windsor Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of whose directorate he has been a member since its organization, while he has been president of this well-conducted institution since 1891. In a fraternal way Mr. Leber is affiliated with Winona Lodge, No. 944, I. O. O. F., at East Prospect, and is a past grand of that body.

In Lower Windsor township, on Nov. 27, 1862, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Leber to Welmina Leiphart, who was born and reared in that township, daughter of John and Catherine (Dellinger) Leiphart, the latter of whom is deceased, while the former, one of York county's oldest and most honored pioneers, celebrated his ninety-third birthday anniversary in October, 1905. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Leber we have the following record: Anna, who became the wife of James A. Fry, died in Lower Windsor township in 1897; Mary Jane is the wife of Clayton Thomas, of the same township; Leah is the wife of Jacob Forry, of Windsor township; Lydia A. is the wife of Howard F. Crumling, of Lower Windsor township; Katy May is the wife of Moses Dietz, of the same township; Maggie is the wife of John Hengst, of Hellam township; Samuel A. and John E. were twins, the latter dying in infancy, while the former, who married Laura Jacobs, is a successful farmer of Hellam township; Caroline and Emma Rebecca remain at the parental home.

Samuel Leber, father of Jacob H. Leber, was born in what is now Lower Windsor township, May 15, 1800, a son of Conrad and Maria Leber. Conrad Leber was likewise born in the present township of Lower Windsor, on Dec. 24, 1751, and this date would indicate that the family was among the early settlers in York county. This worthy pioneer, who was a man of influence and affairs, died Dec. 2, 1814. He was a farmer by vocation and owned what was known as Butcher's ore-bank farm, comprising at least 200 acres and located in Lower Windsor township as at present constituted. His first wife, Margaret, was born Aug. 13, 1758, and died Oct. 18, 1797. His second wife, whose maiden name was Maria Hammer, was born Dec. 4, 1773, and died Dec. 4, 1821. All were laid to rest in the cemetery of the Canadachy Church, to which they had been devotedly attached. Mr. Leber had been a member of its building committee when the original edifice was erected, in 1801. The children of his first marriage were as follows: John, who was a waggonmaker by vocation, died in York; Jacob died near the present town of Ephrata, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he was engaged in the hotel business for many years (his wife, Nancy, was a daughter of Colonel Wright, who rendered gallant service as a Colonial officer in the war of the Revolution); Elizabeth, the third child, married a Mr. Pauls and both died in Lancaster county; Peter, who was thrice married, died at East Prospect, and Conrad, who married twice, died in Lower Windsor township. The children of the second marriage were as follows: David, who died in Windsor township; and Samuel, father of Jacob H. Philip and Jacob Leber, brothers of Conrad, Sr., were soldiers in the Continental line during the Revolution, being captured by Hessian soldiers and held prisoners for some time.

Samuel Leber was a mere boy at the time of his father’s death, and inherited a considerable patrimony, but this was dissipated by his unfaithful guardian before he had attained years of maturity, so that he was practically compelled to become the architect of his own fortunes. He was reared on a farm and received such educational advantages as were afforded in the common schools of the place and period. He became the owner of a good farm of 120 acres, portions of which he sold at various times, however, until his homestead comprised only thirty-five acres. When he came into possession of the farm the dwelling on the place was a log house of the primitive type, and this he twice remodeled during his life. This ancient dwelling is still standing in an excellent state of preservation, being more than one hundred years old and now regarded as one of the landmarks of the county. In politics Mr. Leber was originally a Whig, but identified himself with the Republican party at the time of its organization, ever afterward remaining a stalwart advocate of its principles. He held various local offices, such as tax collector, township assessor and auditor and member of the election board. He was a devoted adherent to the German Reformed Church, and was a member of the committee which had charge of the building of the second edifice, in 1867, while for many years he was an elder and deacon in the church. He was a man of spotless integrity and universally commanded the highest respect. He died on his old homestead Nov. 30, 1880.

On Aug. 6, 1821, was solemnized the marriage of Samuel Leber to Lydia Hetzel, who was born in Lower Windsor township, Dec. 11, 1802. She was a Lutheran in her religious faith and was a woman of noble attributes of character, being held in affectionate regard by all who came within the sphere of her kindly influence. She was summoned into eternal rest May 15, 1869. Samuel and Lydia Leber became the parents of the following named children: Leah, who was born Jan. 7, 1823, died Oct. 6, 1840; Elizabeth, born Nov. 18, 1824, was married to John Keller May 9, 1844, and they reside in Holtz, York county; Henry, born June 27, 1827, married, Nov. 8, 1844. Catherine Beaverson, and he died Feb. 4, 1863; Rebecca, born March 2, 1830, died Jan. 3, 1905; Samuel, born Feb. 24, 1832, died Nov. 30, 1863; David, born July 10, 1834, was married, Oct. 1, 1857, to Magdalena Hengst, and he died on the old homestead, in Lower Windsor township, in November, 1868; Susanna, born Dec. 29, 1836, died Oct. 12, 1840; Jacob H. was the next in order of birth; Maria, born May 4, 1840, was married, Nov. 2, 1865, to Philip Stine, and they reside in Windsor township; George W., born July 4, 1843, married, Oct. 22, 1868, Henrietta Reisinger, and they reside in Windsor township; Sarah, born Nov. 8, 1846, died July 30, 1849.

GEORGE LIGHTNER, who is now spending his declining years in the peace and comfort of a retired life upon his fine farm of 102 acres, located along the Harrisburg turnpike, was formerly engaged in agricultural pursuits in Manchester township, where he spent nearly his entire life. He was born in Manchester township, on the old homestead, in 1823, son of Charles and Sarah (Myers) Lightner, and a grandson of George Lightner.

Nathaniel Lightner, the great-grandfather of George, was of German origin, and was born in York county. He took up a tract of 165 acres of fine land along the Harrisburg turnpike and Manchester road, up to the borough of North York. Mr. Lightner is a man of strict integrity and high sense of honor, and has gained the confidence and respect of all with whom he has had business dealings. He takes a great interest in the growth and improvement of the community of which he has so long been a resident, and during the time he served his community as school director, his public-spirited efforts were directed to the upbuilding of the common schools. In politics Mr. Lightner is a Republican and, although never consenting to accept public office except the school directorship, has always shown great interest in the success of the party.

In 1852 George Lightner married Anna Mary Ebert, the estimable daughter of Col. Michael Ebert, of Spring Garden township, York county. Her death occurred in 1857, and came as a severe blow to not only her family, but her numerous acquaintances, who knew her as an honest friend in time of need, and a kind, charitable neighbor. The children born to George Lightner and his most estimable wife were: Samuel, who married Sarah Kaufman, and died on the old homestead; and Albert, who married Isabella Sprenkle, and died in Manchester township. Both sons were interred at the Prospect Hill cemetery.

JACOB H. HUBER, a large land owner, who died in 1876, was born in Wrightsville, York county, in 1815, son of Jacob, a successful farmer and extensive land owner in Hellam township.

The common schools afforded Jacob H. Huber his literary education, supplemented by a course in the old York County Academy, and his father’s farm gave him practical training along agricultural lines. He devoted his time and attention to the careful superintendence of his farms in Hellam township, although his home was in a fine residence which he had erected at No. 200 East Market street. There his death occurred, and his remains rest in Prospect Hill cemetery.

Mr. Huber married Susan Lochman, daughter of the Rev. Augustus H. Lochman, D. D., a Lutheran clergyman, who preached in Christ church for forty-six years. One daughter, Annie L., lived to bless this union, and two children died in infancy. Mr. Huber was a member of the First Presbyterian Church at York, and actively participated in its work,

The youngest man who ever held the honored office of deacon in that parish. At the time of his death he was trustee of York Collegiate Institute. Mrs. Huber and Miss Anna L. reside in the family home and are highly respected by all.

REV. AUGUSTUS H. LOCHMAN, D. D., father of Mrs. Huber, was born Oct. 5, 1802, in the parsonage of Salem Church, Lebanon, Pa., being the son of Dr. George Lochman, its pastor, and Susanna (Hoffman) Lochman. In 1815 his father moved to Harrisburg, Pa., when the son entered the academy there. In 1822 he became a Junior at the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in July, 1823. He then studied theology with his father, and on June 16, 1824, was licensed to preach. In 1825 he became pastor of a church in Cumberland county. In July of that year he was married to Anna Maria Partenheimer, of Philadelphia, and they took up their residence in Mechanicsburg, then a village of a dozen houses. In 1826, upon the death of his father, he became his successor at Harrisburg. In April, 1836, he was called to York, where he remained as pastor until his resignation, June 12, 1880. During his entire ministry he was greatly beloved and eminently successful.

Dr. Lochman took an active part in all the general movements of the Lutheran Church in America; was a member of the first board of trustees of Pennsylvania College and a trustee of Franklin College; was for a long period one of the board of directors of the seminary, and for many years its president, and was president of the synod of Pennsylvania, as well as of the general synod. The honorary degree of D. D. was conferred upon him in 1856, by Pennsylvania College. He made a number of valuable translations from the German. He retired from the active pastorate, full of years and labors, after faithfully and ably serving this church for nearly half a century. It is recorded that during the first year of his service, the Second Lutheran Church of York (St. Paul's) was formed. In September, 1841, the old town clock was placed on the steeple by the county commissioners. In 1850 Zion Lutheran Congregation was formed. On Oct. 31, 1807, the jubilee of the Reformation was celebrated with much enthusiasm by the churches in York, in the afternoon all the Lutheran Sunday-school children of the city, 1,500 in number, assembling in this church. In 1874 the building was remodeled.

JAMES McClure, of Fawn township, residing near Muddy Creek Forks, is descended from the McClure family of County Armagh, Ireland, who were originally of Scotland, and were distinguished there among those who resisted religious and political persecution alike. Thereby they suffered much for conscience's sake and were compelled to flee to Ireland, where they took up a tract of 200 acres and, during the "piping times of peace," devoted themselves to farming.

The paternal grandparents of James McClure were William and Rachel McClure, and their children were: James, Sr.; John, of County Monaghan, Ireland; Jane, Mrs. Thomas Maffet; and Rebecca, Mrs. Robert Maffet.

James McClure, Sr., married Mary Jane McComb, who lived to be ninety years old. She was one of a large family, having eight sisters besides the following brothers: John and David, deceased; Thomas, who emigrated to the United States; William, who migrated to Canada; and James, who died in Ireland.

James McClure was born in County Armagh, Oct. 17, 1841, and at the age of sixteen left his Irish home and went to England, where he entered the employ of a Scotch farmer in Cheshire, within two miles of the city of Barton Head; there he worked for two years, and at the end of that time his employer gave him letters of recommendation to a Scottish gentleman of Oxen Hill with whom he engaged as under-steward for nine months filled that position at a salary of three shillings per day. He then took the position of head-steward at a daily remuneration of four shillings, which was subsequently increased to five, owing to his qualifications for the position. In March, 1869, James McClure sailed on the vessel "Henry Clay" to the land of the Setting Sun and after a voyage of five weeks landed in New York, where in a short time he secured employment with Mrs. Skomaker in Long Island. There he remained three months and then journeyed to the home of his brother Thomas, in Chanceford, who had emigrated to the United States seven years previously. He worked upon various farms near Muddy Creek Forks for about nine months, and bought a tract of thirty-nine acres one and a half miles west of that place. The tract was then a forest, but, with true Irish perseverance, young McClure erected a house and other buildings and in a few years acquired by purchase additional property, which increased his holdings to 130 acres, on which he now resides and which is one of the best tilled farms in a section noted for its prolific agricultural properties.

On Dec. 31, 1869, James McClure mar-rried Mary Jane, daughter of Robert and Jane (McKee) Taylor, of Chanceford. To them the following children were born: Cassie, wife of Charles Morrow, of Iowa; Elizabeth (deceased), who married John Adams; Rachel (deceased), who married Elsworth High, of Philadelphia; Sarah, wife of Thomas Mc-Comb, a native of Ireland, who now resides upon the State farm in Media, Delaware county, Pa.; Henry W., of Kansas; Andrew, at home; Margaret, wife of John Arnold, of Chanceford; and William J. McClure, who married and resides in Chanceford. Mrs.
Mary Jane (Taylor) McClure had the following brothers and sisters: James, of Maryland;
William, deceased; Robert, of Iowa; John, of Chanceford; Letitia, deceased; and Agnes, who married John McClure, brother of James. Davil McClure, a brother of James, served in the English army and is supposed to have died or been killed in the service of the Crown.

In 1900 James McClure bought the Grove property adjoining his farm and increased his holdings to 400 acres. For many years he has bought and sold stock, tobacco, phosphate and other agricultural commodities, and in all his dealings has been the soul of honor. He has also long had dealings in that well known financial institution the First National Bank of York, as well as in the Farmers' National Bank of the same city. Mr. McClure is highly esteemed by all who know his sterling worth, and inherits, in a marked degree, the strong characteristics of his Celtic ancestry.

HENRY A. WINEKA is another native of York county who has never abated his allegiance to the place of his birth or to the vocation to which he was reared, and he is now one of the leading farmers and representative citizens of York township, being the owner of the fine old homestead place of seventy-five acres.
He was born in York township, on the 14th of September, 1852, and is a representative of the third generation of the family in America and in York county.

Henry Wineka, his grandfather, was born in Germany, where he was reared and educated, there learning the trade of papermaking. He became a very skillful mechanic. On emigrating with his family to America he landed in the city of Baltimore, Md., where he made his headquarters for a time, and not being able to secure work at his trade he devoted his attention to peddling for a short interval, after which he came to York county and located in West York. Here he secured employment in the line of vocation to which he had been so thoroughly trained. He remained there about five years, and then took charge of the Ehnhart mills, in York township, where he remained for a long term of years, being prominently concerned in building up the business and continuing in supervision of the operation of the mills until his final retirement from active labor, a few years prior to his death. His remains rest in the cemetery at Spry, York township, as do also those of his devoted wife, whose maiden name was Caroline Voss. Of their children we record that Henry became a prosperous farmer of York township, near the village of Spry, where he died; one child died in Germany, at the age of two years; William was the father of Henry A. Wineka.

William Wineka was born in Germany,
April 25, 1825, and there received his early educational discipline in the excellent national schools. Being a lad of only ten years at the time of the family emigration to America he attended school for some time after coming to York county, and finally entered the employ of P. A. & S. Small, of York, as a teamster, re-maininlg with them until the time of his mar-rriage, at the age of nineteen years. Thereaf-er he located on the homestead now occupied by his son Henry A., having purchased the property of his father, who early made investment in lands in this county. The farm comprised 130 acres, and here William Wineka gave his attention to the improvement and cultivation of his land, developing one of the best farms in York township and erecting substantial buildings of the best type, while he so ordered his life in all its relations as to command himself to the confidence and high regard of his fellowmen, who had high appreciation of his worth as a man and a loyal citizen. He was a stanch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party and was a prominent and valued member of the United Brethren Church, in which he held the various official positions; his loved and devoted wife was likewise a sincere and earnest member of the same church. Mr.

Winca was summoned to his reward March 15, 1901, at the age of seventy-five years, ten months and twenty days, and the resting-place of himself and his wife is marked by two of the most beautiful monuments in the United Brethren churchyard at Spry. The maiden name of Mrs. Winca was Mary Flinchbaugh, and she was born and reared in this county, daughter of Frederick and Sarah (Kindig) Flinchbaugh. The date of her nativity was March 1, 1832, and she was summoned into eternal rest Feb. 28, 1891. Of the children of this union it is fitting that brief record be here entered: Amanda is the wife of Franklin Nevel, a farmer of York township; William died at the age of fourteen years; Benjamin died when eleven years of age; Eli passed away when ten years of age; Henry A. is the subject of this sketch; Sarah A. died at the age of one year and Mary Alice at the age of eight years; Frederick, who married Lillie Stauffer, is a prosperous farmer of York township; Milton, likewise a successful farmer of the same township, married Alice Lecrone.

Henry A. Winca secured his early educational discipline in the district schools of York township, where he continued his studies during a portion of each year until he had attained the age of seventeen. In the meanwhile he had assisted his father in the work of the farm, and after his marriage he assumed charge of the home place, which he operated for his father on shares, receiving half of the returns from the products of the place. Thus he continued until the death of his honored father, when he purchased the interests of the other heirs and became sole owner of the fine farm, which is one of the best in the county, not only in the matter of fertility but also in the superiority and attractiveness of the buildings and other permanent improvements. Mr. Winca is essentially enterprising and progressive, brings to bear scientific methods in carrying on his farm, utilizes improved machinery and other facilities, and thus gains the maximum returns from his labors, being one of those who significantly demonstrate that the great basic art of agriculture is worthy of the attention of able business men and that it offers an attractive field for action when correct methods and business principles are brought to bear. Mr. Winca is one of the loyal and public-spirited men of his township and is ever ready to lend his aid in the promotion of worthy enterprises for the general good, while his political support is given to the Democracy. He has never been ambitious for official preferment, but served one term as auditor of York township. Both he and his wife are valued members of the United Brethren Church at Spry.

On Feb. 8, 1885, Mr. Winca was united in marriage to Miss Ellen Flinchbaugh, who was born and reared in York township, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Grimm) Flinchbaugh, the former being one of the representative farmers of the county at the time of his death, while his wife likewise has passed away. Mr. and Mrs. Winca have four children, all of whom still remain beneath the home roof-tree, namely: Abbie May, Mary Iva, Harry William, and Paul Raymond.

JOSEPH MARKEY KESEY, an honored and well known farmer of East Hopewell township, York county, has followed the pursuits of an agriculturist since boyhood. He was born in Hopewell township, at the Jacob Grove mill (which his father was operating at the time), Oct. 10, 1849, son of Jacob and Catherine (Hyson) Keesey. Until 1865 he resided in Hopewell township, when his parents removed to Chanceford township, on the Shenks Ferry road, two miles from Brogueville. In 1872 he went to live with Dr. B. F. Porter at Brogueville, whose farm he worked for one year at $18 per month. At this time Joseph's father decided to purchase a farm in Hopewell township, provided that his son would assist him. This he did, although Dr. Porter offered him $300 per annum as an inducement for the young man to remain with him. Mr. Keesey continued to assist his father at home for seven years, and then married and located on a twenty-six acre farm at Mt. Pleasant, East Hopewell township, which he bought from John Rechard, of York. He remained on that place until 1894, when he sold to Frank Kurtz, purchasing his present farm of fifty-seven acres, upon which he has erected buildings of the most modern and substantial construction.

Mr. Keesey is a member of Hopewell U. P. Church, having joined that body in 1868, and he has always taken an active part in its work, serving as trustee and secretary of the Sabbath school. He is a stanch Democrat and well posted on political questions. Mr. Keesey was married, Nov. 26, 1879, to Sarah Jane.
Grove, born in Hopewell township, near the Hopewell U. P. Church, daughter of Jacob and Margaret (Collins) Grove. One child was born to this union—Roy W., Oct. 4, 1885, who, after attending the public schools, spent two terms at Millersville State Normal school.

The children born to Jacob and Catherine (Hyson) Keesey were as follows: Elizabeth, who married J. A. Bailey, of East Hopewell; John, who married Agnes Hyson, and lives in East Hopewell; Joseph M.; William, who married Sarah Bacon, and lives in Chanceford township; Catherine, who married S. C. Edgar, of Hopewell township; Jane, who married William Thompson, East Hopewell; J. R. W., who married Effie Hyson in East Hopewell township; and Miss Annie. All of these are living.

FREDERICK BLAEBAUM, the junior member of the firm of Oermann & Blaebaum, contractors and builders, has progressed to his present position from a humble beginning as an employee.

Frederick Blaebaum was born in Westphalia, Germany, Oct. 4, 1862, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Westerholt) Blaebaum. The parents are now both deceased, and of their family only the one son ever left Germany. He crossed the Atlantic when he was seventeen years old, having previously received a good education in the schools of his native land and a three years’ training as a carpenter. On landing in America Blaebaum went directly to York, and at once secured employment in the establishment of which he is now a part owner. He came with very little money, but by industry and good management has achieved a large measure of success. The business was established in 1880, by Menauch & Co., and the present firm succeeded to the management March 14, 1899. In 1903 they met with reverses, the plant being destroyed by fire, but the firm at once rebuilt on a more modern and extensive scale, and are again operating most successfully. The senior partner is Casper Oermann, and the firm’s location is from Nos. 446 to 472 West Clark Alley. They do a general contracting and building business, have large lumber yards and operate an extensive plant for the manufacture of all kinds of fittings, such as sash, doors, blinds and interior decorations. In all their operations they employ from fifty to sixty men, and their custom work is far-reaching, as they ship their mill products to Columbia, Lancaster and other outside points. Among the many important contracts taken by the firm may be mentioned the Rosenmiller building, on West Market street, and the residences of George E. Neff and John Eimerbrink, all proving that Oermann & Blaebaum stand in the very front rank of the city’s builders.

Mr. Blaebaum’s domestic life has been as fortunate as his business career. He was married, in 1884, to Miss Emma Honzmyer, daughter of Charles and Mary Honzmyer, of York county. Three children have been born to their union, as follows: Charles, who married Miss Mazie Julius, and is employed by his father; William, a student at Concord College, N. Y.; and Harvey, at home. Mr. Blaebaum and his wife are members of St. Matthew’s Lutheran Church. The family residence is at No. 472 West Philadelphia street.

BARNABAS B. RUBY maintains his residence in the attractive village of Delroy. The Ruby family is of stanch French origin, and the original representatives in the Keystone State located in Lancaster county, in the pioneer epoch, and from that section at an early day came members of the family to York county.

John Ruby, grandfather of Barnabas B., was a prominent and influential farmer of Lower Windsor township, where he owned more than 700 acres of land along the banks of the beautiful Susquehanna river. He erected a stone residence, which is still standing and which figures as one of the landmarks of that section, being in an excellent state of preservation. His mortal remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery on his farm. This sterling pioneer was a firm adherent of the Democratic party, and was prominent in local affairs of a public nature, while both he and his wife were consistent members of the German Reformed Church. His children were: (1) Henry was a prominent citizen and successful agriculturist of Lower Windsor township, and his death occurred on his farm, along the tidewater canal, a number of years ago. One of his sons, Prof. George Ruby, was at one time a member of the faculty of the York County Academy. (2) Michael, father of Barnabas, was the next in order of birth. (3) Joseph, (4) David, (5) Peter and (6)
John were successful farmers and honored citizens of Lower Windsor township, where they continued to reside until death.

Michael Ruby, the father of Barnabas B., was born April 30, 1802, and it is practically assured that the place of his birth was the old ancestral homestead, in Lower Windsor township. He was reared to the hardy discipline of the farm, and acquired what was considered a liberal education for his day. In his youth he learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed, in connection with farming, for many years. After his marriage he located on a part of his father's landed estate, in Lower Windsor township, eventually becoming the owner of a finely improved farm of fifty-five acres, and there continuing to reside until his death, March 15, 1848. He was an old-line Whig in his political adherency, and was an influential factor in local affairs, having served for a number of years as justice of the peace, and having also been an incumbent of other offices of local trust. Mr. Ruby was a zealous and active member of the German Reformed Church, while Mrs. Ruby was a Lutheran. He married Elizabeth Keller, who was born in Lower Windsor township, York county, Jan. 16, 1807, and there her death occurred Jan. 10, 1868. The Keller family early settled in that county, and is mentioned in the sketch of James Keller, nephew of Mrs. Elizabeth Ruby. To Michael and Elizabeth Ruby were born children as follows: John, born Feb. 25, 1827, married Nancy Flury, and both are now deceased, the former having died in Lower Windsor township, March 15, 1901; Henry, born Dec. 14, 1828, was a farmer of York county, and died Dec. 13, 1879; Julia Ann, born Dec. 22, 1830, is the wife of George Kinard, of Red Lion; Sarah, born May 9, 1833, became the wife of Michael Paules, and died Feb. 3, 1875; Rudolph Harrison, born Oct. 14, 1837, died April 2, 1869; Elizabeth, born Feb. 29, 1839, is the wife of Henry Fisher, of Marysville, Perry Co., Pa.; Barnabas B.; Agnes, born Oct. 12, 1845, is the widow of Hiram Bixler, and resides in Hel-lam township; and Elnora, born Oct. 12, 1847, resides in Yorkana, York county, being the widow of Henry Fry.

Barnabas B. Ruby was born on the little homestead farm of his father, in Lower Winds or township, July 8, 1843, and his early educational training was secured in the township schools, being supplemented by a course of study in the York County Academy, in the city of York, where he had as instructor his cousin, Prof. George W. Ruby. He made good use of the advantages thus afforded him, and when twenty-two years of age began teaching in the schools of his native township, proving successful in his efforts, and continuing to teach for three winter terms, at the same time assisting in the work of the farm. He was but five years of age when his father died, and from the age of seven until that of sixteen he lived with his brother John, who, with true fraternal solicitude, enabled him to secure a good education, while from this brother he received adequate pay for his services during the latter portion of the period when he was assisting in the work of the farm.

In 1867 Mr. Ruby married and shortly afterward purchased a small farm in his native township, the place comprising twenty-four acres and being located a short distance from Delroy. There he engaged in farming, market-gardening and tobacco-growing, meeting with marked success through his well directed efforts, and continuing to reside thereon for a quarter of a century, while for fifteen years of this period he also carried on a profitable enterprise in the manufacture of cigars, utilizing the product of his own farm and building up a profitable trade. He retired from business in 1902, when he took up his residence in Delroy, where he has since maintained his home, still retaining possession of his farm, which he rents.

Mr. Ruby has been firm in his support of the Republican party from the time of attaining his legal majority to the present, and he has been active as a worker in its local contingents, while he has been called upon to serve in various offices of public trust. In 1884 he was elected judge of the peace of Lower Windsor township, satisfactorily performing the duties of the office for a period of ten years. He also served as township assessor and clerk, as a member of the election board and as school director, proving faithful to the responsibilities devolving upon him. He is one of the influential members of the Canadochley Lutheran Church, in which he is serving as elder at the time of this writing, while he was formerly a deacon therein and has held other official positions. His wife likewise is a devoted member and active worker in the church.
On Dec. 19, 1867, Mr. Ruby was married to Malinda A. Stahley, who was born and reared in Lower Windsor township, daughter of Peter Stahley, who died about forty years ago. His widow, whose maiden name was Rebecca Sloat, subsequently became the wife of John Leiphart, who still resides in that township, at the patriarchal age of ninety-two years, his wife having passed away Aug. 6, 1904, at the age of seventy-seven years, two months and twenty-three days. The following record pertains to the children of Mr. and Mrs. Ruby: (1) Edward C., born Oct. 14, 1868, married Carrie Bailey, and they reside in New Freedom, York county. After completing the curriculum of the public schools, Edward C. continued his studies in the York County Academy and the normal school at Millersville, after which he took a course in the Northern Indiana Normal school, at Valparaiso, Ind., and then entered Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg, Pa., where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1902, being valedictorian of his class. He then entered the theological seminary of the same institution and after graduating with the class of 1903, accepted a charge at the Hanover Lutheran Church. For eleven years he was a popular and successful teacher in the public schools, having been engaged in various counties of his native State. (2) Elizabeth R., born Jan. 25, 1870, remains at the parental home. (3) Henry A., born March 18, 1871, married Cordelia Gehley, and they reside in Lower Windsor township. (4) Agnes, born Nov. 15, 1872, is the wife of John E. Spiker, of that township. (5) Malinda J., born March 6, 1874, remains with her parents, as does also (6) Sarah Ellen, who was born June 4, 1875. (7) Julia A., born Dec. 5, 1876, is the wife of Charles E. Kline, of Wrightsville, York county. (8) Mary May, born Feb. 14, 1878, is the wife of George E. Cooper, of East Prospect. (9) Laura Kate, born Dec. 28, 1881. (10) Peter Michael, May 17, 1885 and (11) Nettie Alberta, Feb. 3, 1890, are still members of the home circle.

DANIEL F. BRENNEMAN, deputy collector of the Fifth division of the Ninth district, was born in Hopewell township, in what is now Winterstown borough, May 8, 1860.

David Brenneman, grandfather of Daniel F., was a native of England, and came to the United States when he was a young man, settling in Lancaster county, Pa., and later removing to North Hopewell township, where he bought land. He was a wheelwright by trade, an occupation which he pursued in connection with his farming operations.

Joel Brenneman, father of Daniel F., and son of David, reached maturity on his father's farm, and spent his entire life there, with the exception of several years when he lived retired in Felton, prior to his death at that place. He was one of the organizers of the borough, and was chief burgess for a number of terms, besides holding other offices of importance, and was a stanch Republican. He was a member of the Reformed Church. Mr. Brenneman married Catherine Stabley, born in Hopewell township, daughter of George and Susan (Sechrist) Stabley, and to this union were born: Susanna, Mrs. John F. Tyson, of Windsor township; Catherine, Mrs. P. M. Mitzel, of Winterstown; Ellen, Mrs. George Sechrist, of Chanceford township; Daniel F. and Amanda, Mrs. John W. Sheffer, of North Hopewell township.

Daniel F. Brenneman received his education in the common schools of the township, his teachers being S. E. Miller and A. F. Strayer. He left school at the age of eighteen years, and was reared to the life of a farmer, remaining at home with his father until his marriage in 1882. He then assumed charge of the home farm, which he rented for two years, at the end of which time he purchased it from his father. Since he has operated the farm Mr. Brenneman has built two barns, the one belonging to his father having been burned Feb. 15, 1891. He built the first barn directly after, and this was struck by lightning June 17, 1897, after which he erected his present barn at a cost of $1,500, the other having cost $2,000. Mr. Brenneman's farm consists of 11½ acres. He is a stanch Republican in politics and was appointed revenue collector in 1897, serving four years and eight months under H. L. Hershey. He also served as street commissioner of the borough and school director, and has held minor offices. He is a member of the Lebanon Lutheran Church, and fraternally is connected with the I. O. O. F., of Dallastown.

Mr. Brenneman was married in 1882, to Maggie Herbst, of Springfield township, daughter of David (deceased) and Lena...
Herbst, and to this union have been born: Murray C., of Philadelphia, a teacher for four years in Hopewell township; Millie, a clerk in a store; Tilly, at home; Amanda, died in infancy, and Hathaway Shindle, living at home. Mr. Bremmerman was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Red Lion, and has served on its board of directors since its organization in 1899.

ASAHEL STEWARD, M. D., who enjoys the distinction of having practiced his profession longer than any other physician in southern York county, was born on his father's farm in Peach Bottom township, York county, March 10, 1841, son of Nehemiah and Amelia (Cooper) Steward.

To write the record of the Steward and Cooper families, the ancestors of Dr. Steward, is almost to narrate the history of southern York county, for from the Indian days their lives have been interwoven with the progress of that section. Thomas, Alexander and John Cooper located in what is now York county during the first half of the sixteenth century, and until they had built their log cabins lived for a time in a hollow tree. John Cooper was the great-great-great-grandfather of Dr. Asahel Steward. He had a number of descendants, among them being John, Dr. Steward's grandfather. The Steward family is of Irish origin, the first member to come to America being Asahel Steward, who spelled the name Stewart. He settled in York county, married, and his son Asahel (2) married Elizabeth Morris. Asahel and Elizabeth Steward were the parents of Nehemiah Steward, the father of Dr. Asahel, born April 22, 1810, in Chanceford township. Asahel Steward (2) was a miller by trade and operated the old John R. Donald mill at Woodbine, York county; at the time of his death, in 1823, he was proprietor of the Wiley mill in the same county. His widow died in Peach Bottom township in 1847.

The children born to Nehemiah and Amelia (Cooper) Steward were as follows: Dr. Asahel; John, a merchant of Red Lion; Stockton; Elizabeth, the wife of Robert M. Moore; Susan, the widow of Jefferson Stanley; Ellen, the wife of Charles E. Berk, of Delta; and Martha, the wife of William Tarbert.

In youth Dr. Steward attended the public schools of Slatedale, and later entered Stewartstown Academy. In 1866 he matriculated at Bellevue Hospital Medical College and graduated from that institution in 1869. His medical preceptor before entering college had been the late Dr. James Y. Bryan, Dr. Steward's uncle, who for over a half a century before his death, in 1873, was the best known medical practitioner of lower York county. After graduating Dr. Steward practiced his profession at Bellevue Hospital, New York, where he remained until 1870, and then removed to Pleasant Grove, Lancaster county, where he resided until 1875. In that year he located at Slate Hill, near Delta, remaining there until 1888, in which year he moved to Delta, where he has since practiced.

In 1875 Dr. Steward was united in marriage to Cassandra McCullough, daughter of Robert K. and Frances (Scott) McCullough, of Lancaster county, and these children have been born to this union: William J., M. D., who graduated from the University of Maryland in 1904; Amelia, the wife of William Bay; Montgomerie; Latimer; Jennette; Napoleon Bryan; Elizabeth, and Roswell. In political belief the Doctor is a Democrat, but not an aspirant to office. He is a member of the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities.

WALTER BLACK. One of the most substantial business houses of York, Pa., is that of the Joseph Black & Sons' Hosiery Mill, of which industry Joseph Black was the originator and head. His birth occurred in England, and he came to America in 1834. Returning to England in 1857, he remained until 1879 when he again located in America, settled in Philadelphia and established a hosiery mill there, which he conducted for nine years. Coming to York in 1860 Joseph Black established his hosiery plant, and how well the enterprise has prospered may be judged from the fact that the firm employs 400 people, and has a daily capacity of 1,500 dozen pair of hose. The mills manufacture hosiery for men, women and children, and find a ready market from Maine to California. The father, with his sons Walter and Joseph, Jr., after establishing the plant in York, had the company incorporated, and capitalized at $150,000. It was and is known as the Joseph Black & Sons Co. The father died, universally lamented, in September, 1904, aged seventy-three years.

Walter Black was born in Loughborough,
England, Jan. 9, 1860, and received his education in the schools of his birthplace. At an early age he entered his father's mill, mastering every department, and he now occupies the position of president of the company. He was married in November, 1878, to Emma A. Skeffington, of England, and eight children have been born to this union: Florence, a graduate of the Philadelphia High School; Mary; Clarence; Ralph; Walter, Jr.; Emma and Lillian (all students at York); and Myrtle. In religious belief Mr. Black is an Episcopalian. In politics he is a Republican, and in fraternal circles affiliates with the Masons and the Elks.

Joseph Black, Jr., who is also a member of the company, was born in England in 1866, and learned the hosiery business in his father's mill, of which he is now the secretary and general manager. He was married in 1894 to Lillie Gray, of Liverpool, England, and three children have been born to this union, one of whom died in early childhood, the survivors being Clara and Joseph, Jr., both at school. Mr. Black, like his brother Walter, is an Episcopalian. He is a Republican, and he also is identified with the Masons and the Elks.

The output of the Joseph Black & Sons Co. for 1905 was the largest in its history, every year showing phenomenally large increase, and the goods not only find a ready and extensive market throughout the United States, but through the Canadas as well. In fact the goods manufactured by this company are in a class of their own and the demand for them is limited only by the capacity to manufacture them.

Andrew Zellers was born April 14, 1841, on the homestead farm near Stewartstown, a son of Levi and Lavina (Lucky) Zellers. Bartholomew Zellers, the grandfather, was of German ancestry. For a number of years he was well known in the saddlery business at Stewartstown and later bought the homestead farm, but died before moving to it. He married Rose Ann Miller, who survived him and later became the wife of Jacob Daly.

Levi Zellers, father of Andrew, was born in 1817, in Stewartstown, being reared on the farm purchased by his father and now occupied by his son William. After the death of his wife he lived some years in Stewartstown and then returned to the homestead, where he died Dec. 25, 1888. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religious leanings, a Presbyterian. The children of Levi Zellers and his wife were: Lydia Ann, now deceased, formerly the wife of Amos Shaw, of Stewartstown; Andrew; William, now farming the homestead, who married Esther Jane Anderson; Sarah Jane, who died unmarried; Mary; Mrs. Jesse P. Leib, who died in Hopewell township; Samuel S., a farmer in Hopewell, married to Anna Mary Duncan; and Louisa, wife of William Carlisle Smith, of Oswego, New York.

Andrew Zellers was educated in the public schools of Hopewell township under excellent teachers, Henry and John Fulton, Perry Beard and others, and was about twenty-one when he enjoyed two terms at the Stewartstown Academy under Prof. James A. Murphy and Prof. Jones. He intended to prepare himself for teaching, but the outbreak of the Civil war caused such unsettled conditions that he relinquished this ambition. When he reached his majority he started out for himself, hiring out as a farm hand for several years, but at that time wages were low, good hands getting only $16 a month. He spent some seasons in Delaware assisting to harvest the peach crops.

In March, 1865, Mr. Zellers removed to Illinois and was engaged there as a farm laborer at $35 a month, remaining thus employed eighteen months, when he returned to work the home farm. Later he engaged at the carpenter's trade with his brother-in-law, Amos Shaw, and with John Richard, John Falkner, James Gemmill and John Fishel, completing his apprenticeship under the last named. Then he purchased a few acres of land at The Cross Roads, and there built a home and raised truck on his land for the next seven years. After selling this property he bought his present farm of 110 acres from the widow of George Hedrick, and there he has carried on a general line of farming ever since.

Mr. Zellers was married, March 14, 1878, to Jane Elizabeth Smith, who was born at Cross Roads, Aug. 10, 1850, and was reared there, attending school in the vicinity and later a private institution conducted by Rev. Mr. Watson. Her parents were Sampson and Ellen Anderson (McAlister) Smith, and her grandparents, Sampson and Elizabeth (Duncan) Smith. Mrs. Zellers is the second of five children, the others in order of birth being: William Carlisle, husband of Mr. Zellers' youngest sister; John Andrew Livings-ton, a graduate of the Princeton Theological School, who married Mary E. Johnson, and is a Presbyterian minister at York; Samuel Owen, on the home place, and John Thomas McAlister, married to Ellen Norris and residing at Stewartstown.

Mr. and Mrs. Zellers have the following children: William Homer, born April 15, 1880, living at home; Mary Eleanor, Dec. 1, 1882; Bessie Louise, April 22, 1886; and Earl Smith, Aug. 29, 1890. Mr. Zellers united with the Presbyterian Church when a young man and has continued his relations with it ever since. His wife joined the Round Hill Presbyterian Church when twelve years old, remaining with it until her marriage, when by her request she was transferred to Stewartstown, where she is a devoted and useful member. She has been a teacher in the Sunday school for the past three years and is the object of high regard.

Mr. Zellers has been a life-long Democrat. He has served as school director in his township for nine years and while living in Stewartstown was elected tax collector.

GEORGE W. FRID, engaged in the real estate and fire insurance business, in York, is the son of the late Charles H. Fry, who died Jan. 1, 1895, in his sixty-third year, one of the most prominent citizens of York county.

John Fry, grandfather of George W., was born in York county, where he was a well known farmer. His wife, whose maiden name was Julia Haines, was also a native of York county.

George W. Fry was born May 24, 1839, at East Prospect, York county, and was educated in the York County Academy and at Bryant and Stratton's Business College at Philadelphia. After finishing his studies he became deputy recorder of deeds for York county, and so continued for a period of ten years, leaving that office in 1861 to engage in business with his father, the firm being Charles H. Fry & Son, real estate and insurance. Among the fire insurance companies represented by them was the Spring Garden Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of which Charles H. Fry was one of the organizers, and for many years secretary, his son, George W., now holding that office. The last named is also prominently connected with the Spring Garden Building & Loan Association and the York County Agricultural Association, of which he is a life member; is a director of the First National Bank of York and the Eastern Market Company, and is a member of the York County Historical Society, the Good Will Fire Company No. 5, and the York Club. He affiliates with the Knights of Malta, the I. O. R. M., and the Spring Garden Relief Association. In religion he is a Methodist, and belongs to the Ridge Avenue Church. In politics he is a Democrat. Like his father, who was a director of the City Bank of York, and also a director and secretary of the Eastern Market Company, Mr. Fry is of a progressive and liberal spirit. The Spring Garden Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of which Mr. Fry is secretary, was organized in 1864, and from that date until his death, Mr. Fry's father held the position now occupied by the son. The Spring Garden Building and Loan Association was organized in 1868, and of that concern also the elder Mr. Fry was secretary.

George W. Fry was married Jan. 17, 1877, to Mary C. Abreight, daughter of William Abreight, of York, and two children were born to them: Arthur G., clerk in the employ of the Pennsylvania railroad service at York; and Charles W., a bookkeeper with the First National Bank. Mr. Fry's brothers and sisters are as follows: Horace H., a clerk; William F., a clerk and surveyor; John H.; Sophia; Elizabeth M., who married Prof. F. M. McClary, Hattie, wife of Lloyd Miller, a shoe clerk; and Emma, who married Claude C. Craver, of the firm of McClellan, Gotwalt & Co., of York.

George W. Fry has added to the material improvement of York by building the fine residence in which he lives (one of the handsomest in the East End), almost directly opposite the old home of his father. It was eminently fitting that Mr. Fry should have succeeded to the secretaryship that his father had filled, and it is conceded on all sides that the mantle of the father fell on worthy shoulders.

ALBERT GREIDER EMIG is the owner of beautiful Brookenleaf Farm, one of the finest and most beautiful homes in Hellam township, the homestead having been in the possession of the Emig family for a period of nearly one hundred years. Brookenleaf farm is historic property. It was originally purchased from William Penn by a Mr. Morgan, who settled it and built a stone house in the midst of its forest trees. Mr. Morgan was shot by Hessian soldiers, and his widow married a widower, Mr. Bahn. Mrs. Morgan's daughter finally married Mr. Bahn's son, and the farm descended to them and their heirs. It was purchased from the Bahn family in 1835, the present fine stone mansion having been built some time previous to that date, by Jacob Bahn. The house, surrounded by fine old trees, stands as it was built by Mr. Bahn, with the exception of a kitchen added by Mr. Emig in the summer of 1903. The old barn, built in 1805 or 1807, 100x140 feet in dimensions, was struck by lightning and burned in 1879, a few years after the death of Mr. Emig's father, who had re-roofed it. The present barn, 50x85 feet, was erected by the heirs. John Emig, grandfather of Alfred Greider, was a native of Manchester township, and a county commissioner.

Alfred Greider Emig was born on the farm in Hellam township, Jan. 8, 1857. He had good educational opportunities; his first schooling was under Messrs. Eliker, Peeling and Gable—at Musser's school, a mile away from his home, and he continued to attend that institution until he was twenty years old. He began work on the farm in early life, and as his father died in March, 1877, he remained at home to carry on the place for his mother. The latter died in 1896, and a sister, Mary A., bought the farm; but six months later Mr. Emig purchased of her a half interest in it, and at her death, in 1901, bought the other half. His whole life has thus been passed on the old place.

On April 22, 1890, Mr. Emig married Mary Jane, daughter of William, Sr., and Catherine (Bahn) Dietz, mention of whom appears elsewhere. The children born to this union are: Clarence D.; Raymond G., deceased; Howard M.; and Morgan Bahn. Mr. Emig is a prosperous and highly esteemed citizen, a man honored in his own community. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Emig is a member of the school board, and is a Republican in politics.

MILTON W. WINEKA is a worthy and popular representative of one of the old and honored families of York county, and is one of the successful exponents of the advanced agricultural activities of this section, his attractive farm property being located in York township. Inasmuch as on other pages of this work appear individual sketches of the careers of Mr. Wineka's brothers, Henry A. and Frederick S., with full and authentic data in regard to their parents and the ancestral history, it will not be necessary in the present connection to again enter into the details, since ready reference may be made to the two articles mentioned.

Milton W. Wineka was born on the old homestead farm, in York township, June 7, 1865, a son of William and Mary (Flinchbaugh) Wineka, both of whom, now deceased, were numbered among the most highly esteemed citizens of York township, while of them special memorial tribute is made in the sketch of Henry A. Wineka, above mentioned. The subject of this sketch passed his boyhood days on the home farm, and diversified his time between work and study and play, like the average farmer boy of the locality. He secured a good common-school education, having continued his studies in the public school at Ore Valley until he had attained the age of sixteen years, and thereafter he continued to assist in the work and management of the home farm until 1886, when he took up his residence on his present well-improved farm, which his honored father purchased for him, while in the meantime he had taken unto himself a wife and assumed the responsibilities of a man of family. Mr. Wineka's farm comprises fifty-seven acres of excellent land, the place being well improved with buildings and equipped with modern facilities for the proper carrying on of its cultivation. Our subject raises the various cereals best adapted to the soil and climate, also producing a considerable tobacco crop each year, while he makes somewhat of a specialty of market gardening, finding a ready demand for his vegetables and produce in the city of York. In 1901 he purchased a fine modern threshing outfit, and this he has since operated during the season, making the enterprise a profitable one and gaining a support throughout York and adjoining townships. He is a stalwart Democrat in his political proclivities, and both he and his wife are enrolled as members of the United Brethren church at Spry.

On June 10, 1886, Mr. Wineka led to the marriage altar Miss Mary Alice Lecrone, who was born and reared in York township, this county, a daughter of Barnhart and Nancy (Kauffman) Lecrone, the former of whom died Feb. 24, 1900, being interred in the cemetery at Dallastown, and his widow now makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Wineka. To Mr. and Mrs. Wineka have been born eight children, all of whom are living and remain at home except Mazie Leona, the seventh in order of birth, who died at the age of three years. The other children are here named in order of nativity: William Frederick, Eli F., Mary Ellen, Daniel Curwin, Alvin Eugene, Laura May and Esther Viola.

GRANT S. TINSLEY, druggist of Wrightsville, where his father was a well known contractor and mason, is a native of that town. The Tinsley family is of English origin, and the American branch goes back to four brothers, who left the ancestral home and settled near Hagerstown, Md. One of them came later to York, Pa., and became the progenitor of the Pennsylvania branch of the family. The other brothers and their descendants went South and West.

Absalom Tinsley, grandfather of Grant S., was born in Hellam township, and was by trade a stone-mason and brick-layer. He married, and spent his later years in Wrightsville, where he died. He had three children, as follows: John, father of Grant S.; and Sarah and Mary, who both died unmarried.

In January, 1817, John Tinsley was born in Wrightsville; there, also, he died. He learned his father’s trade of masonry and brick laying, and he and Jacob Flury went into partnership as stone contractors. He was elected chief burgess of the town council and was many times councilman. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. He married Elizabeth Matthews, also a native of Hellam township, who died in 1887, at the age of sixty-seven. Her father, Samuel Matthews, was a farmer. The Matthews family is of Irish descent, and the first corners to America settled in Chester county, Pa., whence they removed to Hellam township.

Mr. Tinsley and his wife were members of the Methodist Church. Their children were as follows: William G., of Wrightsville, who married (first) a Miss Albright, and (second) Mrs. Nace: Sarah Jane, who is unmarried; Grant S., mentioned below; Marcia C. and Phoebe (twins), the former of whom is unmarried and the latter, Mrs. R. A. Glatfelter; Mabel, who is Mrs. William Zorbaugh, of Wrightsville; and Blanche, who is unmarried.

The birth of Grant S. Tinsley occurred in Wrightsville, Sept. 4, 1863, and he received a common school education under the teaching of Prof. Gardner. At seventeen he left school to enter the drug store of C. W. Wilson, where he was a clerk for two years. He then went to Philadelphia, for a year was a clerk for the drug firm of H. C. Blair & Sons in that city, and spent another year in their store at Atlantic City. He took a great interest in the business, and on leaving the Atlantic City branch returned to Philadelphia, took a course in the College of Pharmacy, and later returned to Wrightsville to establish a business for himself. His only capital was twenty dollars, and he was not much over twenty years old, but he was able to buy a stock of goods on credit. He opened his first store under the town hall in Wrightsville. He remained there a year and a half, and then bought his present property at the corner of Hellam and Second streets. He has built up a large business, and is one of the popular merchants of the town, having a fine store, large, well stocked and attractive.

Mr. Tinsley is well known in fraternal circles; he is a member of Riverside Lodge No. 503, F. & A. M., Wrightsville, where he is past master; Chapter and Commandery at Columbia; the Mystic Shrine in Harrisburg; the Jr. O. U. A. M.; I. O. O. F. and the Royal Arcanum. In politics he is a Republican, and he has served his town as chief burgess and as school director.

SIMON LAUCKS is now living retired in the village of Bittersville. He was born on the farm now owned by Philip Laucks, in Lower Windsor township, Feb. 23, 1839, and is a son of Levi and Elizabeth (Myers) Laucks, both natives of York county.

Levi Laucks was born in Lower Windsor township in 1815, and during the greater portion of his active career was engaged in agricultural pursuits, finally taking up his residence in the city of York, where he resided for a quarter of a century. At the time of his death, in 1903, when he was eighty-eight years of age, he was residing with his son, Simon Laucks. The deceased was a stalwart Democrat in his political proclivities, but never a seeker of public office, though he was for a time school director of Windsor township. His wife, who was born in Lower Windsor township, and is now deceased, was a daughter of Benjamin Myers, who was a prominent farmer and honored pioneer citizen of Lower Windsor township, where he died at a venerable age. Both Levi Laucks and his wife early identified themselves with the Lutheran Church, in whose work they ever continued to manifest a deep interest. Of their children Simon was the first born; David M., who married Miss Emeline Peeling, is a resident of Paradise, Lancaster county, and is an ex-member of the State Legislature; Kate is the wife of Samuel Daron, of Columbia, Lancaster county, and is the youngest of the children.

Daniel Laucks, grandfather of Simon, was one of the worthy and influential farmers of Lower Windsor township, having, as a young man, settled upon the farm now owned by his grandson, Philip Laucks, which he reclaimed from the forest and upon which he resided until his death. Of his sons the following data are preserved: Henry, who married Kate Shenberger, died in Chanceford township; Samuel, who married Peggy McQuiggan, died in Lower Windsor township, as did also Daniel, who never married; Benjamin, who married a Miss Beaverson, lived in the vicinity of Freystown at the time of his death, and Levi, father of Simon, has already been mentioned. Of the daughters it is recorded that Kate became the wife of John Paules; Polly, the wife of Frederick Emeneiser, and Susan, the wife of Benjamin Woods. All three daughters died in Lower Windsor township.

Simon Laucks passed his boyhood days on the home farm and under the conditions common to the farmer's lad of the locality and period. In the little schoolhouse of his native township he secured his early educational discipline, his first teacher being an Irishman named Whittaker, who was employed for a number of years in the school, which was two miles distant from the Laucks homestead. As soon as he was old enough to assume the responsibility the boy began to aid in the work of the home farm, and his services were in such demand that his attendance at school became very irregular. He made good use of his opportunities, however, and continued his school work at intervals until he had attained the age of twenty-two years. He remained upon the family homestead until he had reached the age of twenty-four years, and then engaged in farming on his own responsibility, renting a place in Lower Windsor township and finally becoming the owner of a substantial property. To the supervision of this tract, which consisted of fifty acres, he gave his attention for a score of years, selling his farm in 1904, since which time he has lived retired in the attractive village of Bittersville, where he has a comfortable and pleasant home. At times he assists, in a clerical capacity, in the general store of his cousin, George W. Laucks, of that town. He is a charter member of the Lower Windsor Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of whose directorate he has been a member for the past decade. In his political allegiance he is identified with the Democracy, and, while he has never been an aspirant for office, has taken a lively interest in local affairs and given his aid and influence in support of all worthy enterprises for the general good. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which his wife is a member.

In Lower Windsor township, in June, 1861, was consummated the marriage of Mr. Laucks to Miss Rebetca Walk, who was born and reared in that township, daughter of John and Lydia (Zarfous) Walk. She has been all that a good wife and mother could be, and she is held in high regard by her wide circle of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Laucks have but one child, John F., who lives in the West.

DANIEL AND THOMAS STUBBS. The Stubbs family is presumably of English origin, although the records extend no further back than the grandfather of the present generation, Vincent Stubbs. Vincent Stubbs was born in Lancaster county, Pa., and was a farmer by occupation. He married Priscilla Cooper, daughter of John and Hannah (Wheeler) Cooper, and had seven children, as follows: John, of Lancaster county; Daniel, a farmer in that county; Isaac; Thomas and Vincent, farmers in Lancaster county; Hannah, who married Israel Reynolds, a farmer in Chester county; and Ruth, wife of William Bernard, also of Chester county.

Isaac Stubbs was born in Fulton township, Lancaster county, in 1799, was given a common-school education, and made farming his lifelong occupation. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Reuben Haines, of Cecil county, Md., and their family consisted of the following thirteen children: Reuben, who married Miss Hannah Swayne, and died in Peach Bottom township; Vincent G., a resident of Delta; Mary, who died at home, unmarried; Sarah, Mrs. Jacob Swayne; Emiline A., Mrs. Samuel Passmore; Albert, who married Phoebe Ann Hickman; Joseph H., who married Deborah Walton; Daniel, who died in childhood; Daniel (2); Thomas; Priscilla, who died aged sixteen; Henry, who married Helen Schaeffer, of Albany, N. Y., and Priscilla (2), who died young. The family were originally Quakers.

Daniel Stubbs was born in Chester county, near Oxford, Nov. 24, 1840. With his parents he removed to York county and there grew to manhood, attending the public school in Peach Bottom township until he was twenty-two. After leaving school he worked on the farm with his father, and after the latter's death, when Daniel was thirty-five, he and his brother Thomas took the management of the place, where they have remained ever since.

Thomas Stubbs, who was born at the homestead July 19, 1843, received the same educational advantages as did his brother, and has passed his life in the same employment. They are engaged in general farming and stockraising, and deal largely in Short Horn cattle. On Jan. 9, 1902, Thomas Stubbs was united in marriage to Viola Glackin, daughter of Jacob and Amanda (McCleary) Glackin, the former a farmer in Chanceford township. One child has been born to them, Elizabeth H. Daniel and Thomas Stubbs are both Republicans, but take no special interest in local politics.

WILLIAM T. COX, who died Feb. 10, 1905, aged fifty-four years, was one of the progressive business men of the city of York, and the high regard in which he was held in the community was indicated in no uncertain way in his having served for three terms as a member of the city council. As superintendent of the York Carriage Company he held prestige as a representative member of the business circles of the city, and in all of life's relations he ever merited the esteem which was accorded him.

Mr. Cox was a native of the old Keystone State, having been born in Lancaster county, Oct. 11, 1850, son of the late Major Benjamin F. and Amanda (Funk) Cox.

Major Cox was a valiant soldier in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, being major of the 47th P. V. I. and serving in the field during practically the entire perior of the great interneic conflict through which the integrity of the nation was perpetuated. For thirteen years he was steward of the Lancaster County Almshouse, and he died honored by all who knew him. Major Cox married Amanda Funk, sister of Amos Funk, a well known and popular farmer and hotelkeeper of Lancaster, being a member of a family which was founded in Lancaster county in the pioneer days. Major and Amanda (Funk) Cox became the parents of five children, of whom William T. was the last survivor, those who had previously died being Charles, Elizabeth, Ida and Benjamin.

The name of Cox has long been identified with the carriage-making industry in the city of Lancaster, the original firm having been Cox & Suydam, and the successor in the business, Samuel B. Cox, uncle of William T., who learned the trade in the former's establishment.

William T. Cox duly availed himself of the advantages, afforded in the public schools of his native city, and at the age of fifteen years entered his uncle's carriage works as an apprentice. He continued to be identified with this business for the long period of sixteen years, at the expiration of which he entered the service of Samuel E. Bailey, who conducts his flourishing enterprise under the title of the York Carriage Company. Mr. Cox became superintendent of the works in 1889, and for eight years had a monetary interest in the business. The concern sends its products into all sections of the Union, while a large export trade is controlled, goods being shipped to Europe and even to South Africa. The extent of the industry may be understood when it is stated that the capacity of the plant is fully 14,000 vehicles annually, while employment is afforded to 250 persons. The entire establishment was practically swept away by fire April 6, 1904, but by the 25th of the following August a new plant had been completed and equipped, but such had been the growth of the business that it was found practically imperative to further increase the output of the concern by the erection of a second plant, of larger capacity, in East York. Both are now in active and effective operation. In his capacity of superintendent Mr. Cox had up to the time of his death, the general supervision of the business.

In politics Mr. Cox was a stalwart Republican, being elected for three consecutive terms a member of the city council from the Third ward. He was a most progressive and valued member, serving as chairman of the Finance committee and secretary of the Light committee. In a fraternal way he was identified with both the lodge and encampment of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

On Nov. 24, 1880, Mr. Cox was united in marriage to Miss Mary L. Channel, a valued school teacher and daughter of the late Joseph C. Channel, who was a native of Lancaster county and who was killed by the explosion of a locomotive boiler, he had been for many years a trusted and faithful employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

WILLIAM ZELLERS, owner of what is known as the Maple Valley Farm, situated near Stewartstown, was born June 13, 1843, in the old log house which still stands near the present family mansion. His parents were Levi and Lavina (Lucky) Zellers, and his grandfather was Bartholomew Zellers, who was the original purchaser of the farm named.

William Zellers was reared on his father's farm and very early took an important part in its agricultural development. When he was six years old he attended his first school, his teacher being Henry Fulton, and he continued his education, during the winter seasons, until he was seventeen. Among his other instructors he recalls Henry Downs, Perry Baird, Andrew J. Fulton, James Fulton and Nicholas Amos. He was not of a particularly studious turn of mind, preferring to work on the farm; and in his lifetime he has done a very large share of agricultural labor. He remained with his father until the latter removed to Stewartstown and then took the farm which he has operated ever since. He has made many improvements upon it, building a beautiful residence in 1892 at a cost of about $3,000; the substantial barn his father had built in 1859. The farm contains 130 acres of choice land and it is considered one of the most productive of the township. Since 1901 he has had the farm under rental.

Mr. Zellers was married April 15, 1875, to Esther Anderson of East Hopewell township, a daughter of James and Mary (Miller) Anderson (both deceased) and a sister of James Anderson of East Hopewell township. Mrs. Zellers died in 1898, leaving one child, James L. of Stewartstown, an engineer employed in a furniture factory. He married Mary Patterson and they have one child, Hazel. Mr. Zellers is a member of the Stewartstown Presbyterian Church, as was his late wife, who was a noble, Christian woman. Her death was a great loss to her family, church and community. Mr. Zellers is a strong supporter of the Democratic party.

THE IRWIN FAMILY. One of the oldest names associated with Pennsylvania's history is that of Irwin, which was first identified with Lancaster county, but is now fully as well known in York county. The Irwins intermarried with the Murphys and a fairly complete genealogy of the two families is here presented.

The first of the Irwins to settle in America was (I) Samuel, who was born in County Cork, Ireland, and was there married, but emigrated to America and settled in Lancaster county. His children, the elder of whom were born in Ireland, were Samuel, James, John and Isabella. The daughter died May 7, 1837.

(II) Samuel (2) had a family of eight children. (1) Christopher was born Feb. 16, 1807, and was the father of Price, Clarence, Samuel, Frank and Virginia. He resided in Ohio. (2) Robert was born March 20, 1809, and died in October, 1882. His children were: Mrs. Mary Murphy and Mrs. Jane Manifold, deceased; Mrs. Bella Manifold, of Hopewell, and Samuel, deceased. (3) John James Duncan Irwin was born Oct. 30, 1811, and died Oct. 14, 1838. (4) Isabella Orr Duncan Irwin was born Sept. 14, 1814. She married Thomas Wiley and they had three children: Mrs. John H. Wilson; James B., of York, and Sallie, who died in childhood. (5) Joseph, born July 11, 1817, died April 13, 1864. He married (first) Nancy Galbraith, of Peach Bottom township, and they were the parents of two children—Samuel and Annie, of whom the latter died in infancy—and (second), Sept. 28, 1804, he married Mary Jane Murphy, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Smith) Murphy, they being the parents of Elizabeth S. and Mary Bella. The two daughters were educated at Wilson College, Chambersburg, which was founded by Sarah Wilson, a granddaughter of Joseph Irwin, and they reside upon the old Irwin homestead, which has been in the possession of the family since 1812. Many Indian relics have been discovered on their land, one portion of which contained burial mounds of a prehistoric race. (6) Esther Reed Irwin, born Aug. 11, 1819, died in infancy. (7) Jane Irwin, born Aug. 23, 1822, married William Galbraith, and had the following children: Samuel, Eliza, Nettie and Mary, all deceased; Alexander and Irwin, of Baltimore, Md. (8) James Duncan Irwin, born Aug. 25, 1825, died Sept. 7, 1834.

Mrs. Mary Jane (Murphy) Irwin, wife of Joseph, was the daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Smith) Murphy, and on both sides came from old Pennsylvania families. Her maternal grandfather was John Smith, of English ancestry, who was born Dec. 27, 1758, and died Feb. 11, 1826. By his wife Agnes, who was born March 2, 1757, and died Jan. 29, 1841, he had the following children: Mary, born Jan. 20, 1786, deceased Aug. 22, 1864; James Hume, born Oct. 23, 1789, deceased Feb. 2, 1858; Elizabeth, born April 8, 1794, died April 11, 1864; John Jr., born Feb. 27, 1796; William, a physician, born March 28, 1798, deceased March 24, 1847; and Charles, born May 18, 1800, deceased Oct. 12, 1825.

On the Murphy side Mrs. Joseph Irwin's grandfather was Joseph Murphy, a native of Scotland, who settled in Lancaster county. His son Thomas was born July 11, 1792, and died March 24, 1871. He and his wife Elizabeth had a large family. (1) Joseph, born May 26, 1820, was twice married. The children by his first wife were: Elizabeth S., Dec. 23, 1844; Thomas J., May 18, 1846, and Stephen C., May 9, 1848. Mr. Murphy married Alice Cunningham for his second wife, their union occurring Jan. 1, 1852. They had one daughter, Mary Alice, born June 11, 1882. (2) John Smith Murphy, born July 5, 1824, died Dec. 3, 1885. (3) James A., born March 22, 1826, died Aug. 3, 1895. He was one of the best known and most successful educators of his day. He was graduated from Jefferson College, Washington, Pa., in 1845, and for many years was principal of Shrewsbury Academy, in which many men who afterward became famous were his pupils, among them John Livingstone Smith. Prof. Murphy was a contributor to many newspapers and his serial article "Exhumed Memories" was widely copied by publications throughout Pennsylvania. He was also noted as a mineralogist and had a fine collection of minerals. (4) Charles Smith Murphy, of Peach Bottom township, was born Aug. 18, 1827. (5) George Murphy was born Feb. 10, 1829. (6) Mary Jane, Mrs. Joseph Irwin, was born Dec. 13, 1830. (7) William Hume Murphy, of California, was born Dec. 21, 1832. (8) Samuel M. Murphy, born Sept. 28, 1834, died Nov. 16, 1864. Several of these brothers went West to reside.

DANIEL SEITZ, who died in Springfield township, Jan. 16, 1853, was for a number of years a prominent farmer of that township, where he also conducted a mercantile business. He was born April 26, 1803, in Shrewsbury township, York county, son of Rev. John and Eva (Stabler) Seitz.

Rev. John Seitz was born March 22, 1778, and became a local minister in the Evangelical Church. He also followed farming in Shrewsbury township. On March 10, 1801, he married Eva Stabler (now Staley), who was born March 18, 1785, and who died Oct. 3, 1856, aged seventy-one years, six months and sixteen days. Her husband died July 4, 1836, aged seventy-eight years, three months and twelve days, and they were both buried at the Mount Zion cemetery, in Springfield township, near the Shrewsbury township line. They had children: Samuel, born Jan. 30, 1802; Daniel; Jacob, born Feb. 21, 1805; Catherine, born July 4, 1806; Elizabeth, born Sept. 14, 1808; George, born Oct. 20, 1810; Samuel (2), born Dec. 28, 1811; Christene, born July 4, 1813; John, born Sept. 24, 1814; Joseph, born March 16, 1816; Noah, born May 22, 1817; Magdalena, born June 16, 1819; Catherine, born Aug. 24, 1821; Adam S., born Feb. 5, 1826; and Benjamin, born May 15, 1827.

Daniel Seitz received a thorough common-school education, and first engaged in the cooper's trade. He later embarked in the mercantile business in Springfield township, an occupation he carried on for a number of years, in connection with farming. Mr. Seitz was buried at Mt. Zion cemetery. He married Annie Dice, daughter of John Dice, and after Mr. Seitz's death she married Henry Myer. They are buried at Mt. Zion cemetery. There was no issue by the last marriage, but to Mr. and Mrs. Seitz were born: Leah, widow of the late Daniel Ludwig, living in Baltimore; Annie, deceased, wife of Adam L. Reeser; Mary, who has the old homestead in Springfield township consisting of seventy acres, and makes her home near Potosi postoffice; and Christina, widow of Jacob Herbst, living in Baltimore. Mr. Seitz was a fine business man, and in every venture in which he engaged met with remarkable success. He was well known and highly respected in Springfield township.

AUGUST SONNEMAN. The record of the business and civil life of York has held many prominent names, and for more than a third of a century has appeared that of August Sonneman, packer and dealer in leaf tobacco, several times member of the city council, a loyal friend and useful citizen.

Mr. Sonneman was born near Einbeck, in the town of Sievershausen, Hanover, Germany, May 12, 1842, son of Carl and Antoinette (Wedekind) Sonneman. Carl Sonneman was sexton of the Lutheran Church, and besides his duties in that position, followed the trade of linen weaver. Mrs. Antoinette (Wedekind) Sonneman was a daughter of Carl Wedekind, of Sievershausen.

August Sonneman passed his boyhood and youth in the Fatherland, acquiring the excellent school training characteristic of German institutions, and learning habits of industry and economy. At the age of seventeen he came to America, landing at Baltimore, Md., in 1859, and there he soon found employment in the tobacco business. He held his first position two years, and at the end of that time came to York, here following his trade for four years. He was thrifty of his means, and had accumulated sufficient capital to enable him to go into business for himself, and accordingly began the manufacture of cigars. This he carried on successfully until 1867, when he enlarged the scope of his operations by adding the packing of leaf tobacco. The latter showed such excellent returns that little by little it advanced in importance until it far outclassed Mr. Sonneman's original venture, and today the packing of leaf tobacco is his chief industry.

Mr. Sonneman has had interests outside of the tobacco trade, and he was one of the original stockholders and builders of the City Market. He has been equally prominent in many other progressive movements of the town, and he has ever lent his aid to worthy causes. As a consistent Lutheran he has been active in St. John's parish, where he has served as a trustee for some years. He also represented his church on different occasions as lay delegate to the Synod. In municipal affairs he has played a prominent part, and was a member of the first city council of York. In 1893 he was elected assessor for the First ward, his term expiring in 1896. As a public official his services cannot be over-estimated. Gifted with wisdom and practical judgment, and having by his long experience a thorough knowledge of business affairs, he has been able to lend valuable assistance and to give sound advice to the local government. His ability is so well known, and his public spiritedness so open and free that men in all walks of life have sought his counsel. It is given to but few men to so merit the high esteem of their fellow men.

Mr. Sonneman has been twice married. On March 18, 1865, he wedded Charlotte Wauker, daughter of Francis and Julianna Wauker, of York. Eight years later the wife died leaving besides her husband, one son and three daughters: Antoinette Julianna, born Feb. 27, 1867, married, Nov. 5, 1890, William Grothe, of York; Wilhelmina Charlotte, born June 3, 1869, married Ferdinand Bloom, of York; Charlotte Augusta, born Dec. 7, 1870, married Gustav Mehl, of York; and Carl August Franz, born April 28, 1873, died in childhood. On Oct. 27, 1874, Mr. Sonneman was married to Catharine Smith, who was born in Lubbecke, Prussia, Germany. Two sons and two daughters have blessed this union, namely: Anna Katharine, born July 25, 1875, who was united in marriage, April 26, 1900, to Charles A. Givler, of York; August Carl Heinrich, born Nov. 5, 1878; Carl Wilhelm Franz, born March 10, 1880; and Louise Marie Katharine, born Jan. 21, 1892.

HENRY BURG, of East Prospect, bears a name which has been linked with the annals of York county from the early pioneer days. The name was originally spelled Burgholthouse, and the original progenitor in America was George Christian Burgholthouse, grandfather of Henry. This worthy ancestor emigrated from the German Fatherland to America in 1803, being accompanied by his wife and family of four sons and setting sail for the new world from Amsterdam. Of the four children Barnhart Henry, father of Henry, was the youngest, being two years of age at the time. The family landed in New York City, and soon afterward settled in the immediate vicinity of Canadochley church, in Lower Windsor township, York county, their abiding place being on the church property. The grandfather was a talented musician, and for many years he was organist in the church. In his youth his father had given him a certain amount of money, all of which he expended in securing a literary and musical education, being a man of fine intellectuality and a successful teacher in the schools of York county for many years. These schools were maintained on the subscription plan, German being the language used, as the greater portion of the early settlers in the locality were of German birth or lineage. He finally became heir to the property of his brother, who died in Germany, having had no children, while his wife preceded him into eternal rest. The estate was worth about $300,000, but owing to improper management on the part of its custodians, the grandfather of Mr. Burg realized from it only about $70,000. He finally purchased the farm now owned and occupied by Samuel Burg, who is mentioned elsewhere, and there he continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death. He devised his entire estate to his wife, who retained possession during her life, remaining on the old homestead, which was operated under the supervision of the father of Henry Burg.

Grandfather Burg was a Whig in politics, and both he and his wife were zealous members of the Lutheran Church. Of their children the following record is offered: Frederick, who married Elizabeth Will, removed to Adams county, Illinois, where he was engaged in farming until his death; Daniel removed to Indiana and there passed the residue of his life; William, who married a Miss Dosch, died in Lower Windsor township; Barnhart, father of Henry, was the next in order of birth; Catherine, who became the wife of John A. Jacobs, died in Chambersburg, Pa.; Rebecca became the wife of George Thomas and they located in Freeport, Ill., where she died; Helen, became the wife of Dr. Abraham Bittner, of Lancaster county, where both died; all of the daughters were born in York county.

Barnhart Burg was born March 12, 1801, in Dover, England, the supposition being that his father was there engaged in teaching at the time. He was reared to manhood in York county, receiving his early educational training in the German school taught by his father, in Lower Windsor township, and making good use of the somewhat limited opportunities thus afforded him. After the children had attained maturity his father engaged in the manufacturing of cigars, and Barnhart learned the trade. The products were all long-fillers and designated as "twist-heads," while a market for the cigars was found in Marietta, Lancaster county, whither they were taken in a market-basket. On one occasion the children in the family made a competitive test of skill in the manufacture of cigars, and in the one day William turned out 3,000, while the lowest record was over 2,000. After the purchase of the farm Barnhart continued to be identified with its work until the death of his father, when he assumed the management of the place, as has already been noted. He there continued to be successfully engaged in farming until about 1859, when he retired from active labors, passing the remainder of his days in the residence now owned by his son Henry in East Prospect. He was the owner of 500 acres of the best land in Lower Windsor township, the property being later divided among his children. In his early years he was a stalwart Whig, but later supported the Know-Nothing candidates, and finally gave his allegiance to the Republican party, in whose ranks he remained until his death, which occurred April 2, 1872. He was a devoted member of the United Evangelical Church and a veritable pillar of strength in the organization at East Prospect, being for many years a member of its board of trustees and also serving as class-leader and exhorter, having been consecutively in office for a long term of years and up to the time when he was summoned to his final reward. He was a close and appreciative Bible student and his conversation gave evidence of his marked familiarity with the Scriptures, from which he often quoted at length and with absolute accuracy. He was a man of large physique, weighing 240 pounds, and was genial kindly and tolerant, so that he enjoyed not only the unqualified confidence and esteem of all who knew him, but was also looked upon as a generous and true-hearted friend.

Barnhart Burg was twice married, having first wedded Helen Delliger, of Lower Windsor township, who died in the township named in 1831, leaving four children, namely: John, who was born Nov. 21, 1821, died in 1889, in York, where he was engaged in the insurance business; his first wife was Anna Hively, and his second Lydia Oleweiler. George, who was born Dec. 14, 1823, died in Lower Windsor township, in 1901; he had been thrice married, the maiden names of his wives being Leah Handley, Eliza Kinard and Mary Ann Gilbert, the last named still surviving. Elizabeth, born May 3, 1827, became the wife of Jacob Sitter and died in Lower Windsor township, in May, 1877. Samuel, who was born Sept. 20, 1829, resides on the old homestead and married successively Rachel Fry and Eliza Shultz, the latter still living. In 1833 Barnhart Burg was again married, his second wife being Catherine Anstine, who was born in Lower Windsor township July 3, 1808, a daughter of George Anstine, a prominent farmer and pioneer of that section of the country. Mrs. Catherine Burg was summoned to rest Jan. 30, 1890, and this brief record of her children is herewith given: Henry is mentioned more in detail below. William, born April 8, 1836, has been thrice married—to Della Ruby, Leah Gilbert and Mary Gilbert; he is now a resident of Lower Windsor township. Mary Jane, born Oct. 20, 1837, is the wife of Abraham Detwiler and they reside in Winter Park, Fla. Simon Wesley, born Feb. 12, 1841, died in May, 1886, being survived by his wife, whose maiden name was Della Shock; he was graduated at a leading medical college in Philadelphia and was engaged in the practice of his profession at New Berlin, Union Co., Pa., up to the time of his death. Moses, born Oct. 7, 1843, lived for a number of years in Kansas and thence removed to Oregon, where he died in 1897; he is survived by his wife, whose maiden name was Henrietta Woodmansy. Reuben, born Dec. 31, 1845, married Elizabeth Heim, and they reside in Columbia, Lancaster county. Milton, born Feb. 26, 1848, first married Della Fry, and after her death wedded Emma Fry; he is now a resident of Lower Windsor township. Walter, born Dec. 14, 1850, married Emma Bentz, and they reside in York.

Henry Burg was born on the old homestead farm, in Lower Windsor township, Aug. 11, 1834, and, owing to the exigencies of time and place, his early educational advantages were limited. He attended the township schools until he had reached the age of fourteen, but, although he was able to take advantage of but three of the winter terms, he laid a foundation on which to build from the lessons gained in the school of experience. At the age of fourteen years he became a clerical assistant in the general store of his brother John, in East Prospect, receiving no compensation but his board and clothing. When he had attained the age of eighteen he felt that he ought to receive pay for his services and thus resigned his position in order to find some remunerative employment. He was examined by Superintendent Kirk to determine his eligibility for the position of teacher in the common schools, and was successful, securing his certificate and teaching during three winter terms, in the meanwhile assisting his father on the farm during the summer seasons.

On Sept. 1, 1856, Mr. Burg was married to Rebecca Gilbert, daughter of Samuel Gilbert, who for many years was a justice of the peace in Lower Windsor township, as well as a major in the State militia. His wife, Rebecca, was a daughter of Peter Keller, one of the pioneers of the county. After his marriage Mr. Burg engaged in farming on one of the places owned by his father, thus continuing for four years and being similarly engaged for the succeeding two years on a farm owned by his father-in-law. He then engaged in general merchandising at the corner store in East Prospect, continuing there for six years and meeting with marked success. Later he purchased his present fine farm, locating on the property and there giving his undivided attention to its cultivation for a score of years. The farm originally comprised 363 acres, but he has sold a large portion, retaining 125 acres. In 1891 Mr. Burg left the farm and took up his residence in East Prospect, where he has a pleasant home. In the same year he was appointed justice of the peace, at the request of citizens of the borough, in place of George W. Ferree, who did not accept the commission, and thereafter he was thrice elected to the office, refusing to accept his commission on the third occasion. He made an excellent record as an official, having sent but one case to the higher court. In 1899, against his vigorous protest, Mr. Burg became postmaster at East Prospect, a petition having been sent in asking for his appointment and signed by numerous leading citizens of the section. He at first refused to permit the consideration of his candidacy, but the position was finally conferred upon him, this being one of the few cases where the office has assuredly sought the man. He has served many times as township assessor and for twenty-nine years was a school director of the township, his record in this connection having been exceeded by only one man in the county. Mr. Burg cast his first Presidential vote for the candidates of the Know-Nothing party, but has been a stalwart supporter of the Republican party since its organization. He is affiliated with Winona Lodge, No. 944, I. O. O. F., in which he has twice passed the various official chairs. When eighteen years of age Mr. Burg united with the United Evangelical Church, and he has ever since been a zealous and consistent member of that body, as is also his wife. He was for twenty years a trustee of his church and has also served as class leader and in other official positions. He is well known in this county and, because of his many attractive qualities, one has only to become an acquaintance in order to be a friend.

The following is a brief record of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Burg: Malinda, who was born Sept. 1, 1858, died Sept. 31, 1866; Harris Winfield, born Nov. 27, 1859, remains at home; Edwin McClelland, born Sept. 3, 1861, died April 9, 1862; Samuel Wesley, born Jan. 12, 1863, married Clara Heim, and his death occurred, in East Prospect, Sept. 16, 1903; Annie, born Aug. 4, 1865, is the wife of John F. Gilbert, of Lower Windsor township; Katy, born Jan. 12, 1868, is the wife of Samuel Martin, of the same township; Elizabeth, born Nov. 28, 1869, is the wife of Harvey Dietz, of Hellam; Helen, born Dec. 17, 1871, is the wife of Jesse Zearfoss, of Lower Windsor township; Oscar, born July 4, 1877, married Enea Thomas, and they live in East Prospect.

JOHN ANDERSON, one of the highly respected retired citizens of East Hopewell township, York county, was born May 20, 1829, in the vicinity of Mt. Pleasant, Hopewell township, son of Andrew and Eleanor (McAlister) Anderson.

John Anderson, the founder of the American branch of the family, was born either in Scotland or the north of Ireland, and his marriage to Agnes Duncan took place about 150 years ago. He emigrated to America and settled on the land upon which his descendants have since lived, and which has always been known as the Monmouth tract. His children were: James, who established a home and family at Covington, Ky.; Robert, who was a member of a volunteer company in the war of 1812-15, and who married Nancy Thompson and with four children went to Springfield, Ohio, where he followed the carpenter’s trade; John, who married Sarah Brooks and located at Greenfield, Ohio, where he died; David, also a soldier of the war of 1812-15, who settled in Illinois and married there; Joseph, who became a resident of Fawn township, York county, and who married Betsy Wilson; Andrew, who was the father of the present John Anderson; William, who lived and died in Fawn township; and Esther, who married Thomas McAlister, and settled in Hopewell township.

Andrew Anderson, father of John, was born on the Monmouth tract, March 20, 1800. Like other farmer boys belonging to pioneer families, his boyhood and youth were spent in hard work, with few amusements, such as children of the present day demand, and very limited educational opportunities. Yet he grew into a self-reliant, sensible man, one in whom public confidence was placed and to whom public trusts were given. For forty years he was an elder in the Hopewell Presbyterian Church. He faithfully served in township offices and left behind an honorable, unstained name. He died Dec. 15, 1805, the death of his wife having taken place on the 28th of the previous August. The season saw the passing of many venerable residents of the township, old friends not being long separated, viz.: Andrew McAlister and wife, Robert Bell and wife and Frederick Flinchbaugh and wife. Andrew Anderson married, Aug. 27, 1822, Eleanor McAlister, the ceremony being performed by Rev. S. Martin; she was a native of Hopewell township. They had three children, namely: Elinor Eliza, born Sept. 9, 1826, married Samuel P. Wiley (deceased), and lives in East Hopewell township; John; and the twin brother to John died in infancy.

John Anderson has lived on his present farm since April 1, 1830, the date of his father’s removal thither. He attended the old Cross Roads School, this being first a subscription school. He recalls Nellie Duncan, Elizabeth Ellison, Polly Branyan and a Mr. Tyson as early teachers, these instructors not venturing further than the rudiments. When the public school was established, Mr. Anderson attended three months each winter until he was about sixteen years of age. The next two years he assisted on the farm, and at the age of eighteen he began to drive team for his father, hauling wood and grain to York and Baltimore, and bringing back lime and other necessities. The clothes for the family were made from flax spun by the busy hands of the faithful and thrifty mother, wool from the home raised sheep in a like manner supplying warm clothing with which to face the rigors of a Pennsylvania winter. Mr. Anderson continued to make himself useful after the manner of the young men of his day in the vicinity, neither paying board nor receiving wages until within one year of his marriage. When the father died he took the farm of 120 acres (paying his sister her share), devoting it to general farming and sheep raising. The east end of the family residence was built in 1809 by Robert Anderson, an uncle; it was of hewn logs, and the two stories on the west end were added forty-nine years ago, the barn being built fifty years ago and the spring-house forty-eight years ago.

When Mr. Anderson joined the old Hopewell Presbyterian Church, sixty years ago, Rev. Samuel H. Smith was then pastor, who has long since passed to his reward. For nearly fifty years Mr. Anderson has been an elder. In all the church improvements he has taken a very active part, assisting to excavate for the foundation of the new church building and contributing to its erection. Mr. Anderson entered life a Whig, and when the Republican party was organized he adopted its principles and has since supported its candidates. He has never sought political office, but has served three terms as school director. He is a well informed man as to township affairs and turns his influence in the direction of law and order.

The settling of Robert Anderson (the uncle of John), at Springfield, Ohio, as early as 1818, procured John Anderson introduction to the lady who later became his wife. She was his cousin, Sarah Jane Anderson, whom he met on a visit to Springfield, and whom he married on Nov. 18, 1856. They have two children, viz.: Elinor E., who is Mrs. Thomas Ryder, of Prairie du Chien, Wis.; and Agnes Emma. The latter first married George Briggs and they had two daughters—Nellie and Carrie Irene; second, James E. Herr, and one daughter has been born to them—Hazel Jane Anderson.

Mr. Anderson is a man well preserved both in mind and body and he attributes the vigor which he enjoys, in great measure, to his abstinence from an intemperate use of tobacco. Until the weed was prescribed by a physician, he never smoked, and then only after he was fifty years of age; otherwise he has never used it.

VALENTINE J. TROUT is one of the prominent men of East Hopewell township, York county, being identified with its agricultural interests to a very large degree. He was born on the home place in Chanceford township, Aug. 30, 1850, son of Hon. Valentine Trout, whose sketch appears elsewhere.

Valentine J. Trout attended the home school at Guinston, until the age of eighteen years. He remained at home until his marriage, and after that event, for seven years, he farmed the home place for his father. In 1879 he purchased his present place, which consists of 118 acres, originally part of the Gennmill property. This was almost entirely in the woods at the time, but Mr. Trout has made it one of the fine farms in a township noted for its valuable property, and on it he carries on general farming. Mr. Trout joined the Guinston U. P. Church soon after marriage, and is a devout and faithful member there, now serving in his ninth year as trustee. Although his father is a Democrat, Mr. Trout is a dyed-in-the-wool Republican.

On Jan. 16, 1873, Mr. Valentine J. Trout was married to Miss Mattie Martin, of Lower Chanceford township, daughter of Samuel Martin, and to them have been born these children: Clarence was born April 21, 1876; Thomas M., of East Hopewell township, married Miss Flahart; Mary E., married Samuel D. Lutz, of East Hopewell township; W. Arthur, born Aug. 6, 1880, on the home place, attended the public schools until sixteen years of age, and is now a student of the business college at Springfield, Mass.; he is a member of the U. P. Church, and is a Republican; and Nellie Idal is at home.

EDWARD WITMER, in whose death, which occurred in 1904, the city of York lost one of its most progressive and public spirited citizens, was born at Stony Brook, York county, where he received a common school education. For short periods he was a farmer and a carpenter, learning the latter trade in Windsor township. In 1881 Mr. Witmer located in York and engaged in the hotel business at Centre Square. In 1894 he bought the George Sheaffer hotel, and in 1904 erected the “Spring Garden Hotel,” one of the most up-to-date host- tels in York, located at the corner of Frank- lin and East Market streets. It has forty rooms and is equipped with all modern improve- ments.

In 1888 Mr. Witmer was united in mar- riage with Miss Ellen J. Winemiller, daughter of Francis and Sarah (Waltimire) Winemiller, of Hopewell township, and to this union were born these children: Ferdinand, a machinist in the employ of the A. B. Farquhar Company, married Martha E. Bush; Agnes M. resides at home; Elwood B., who is managing the hotel for his mother, at the age of sixteen years joined Company A, 8th Regiment, National Guards, and served throughout the Spanish- American war, being promoted from the ranks to be successively corporal and first sergeant; and Mazie E., resides at home.

In politics Mr. Witmer was a Democrat, and always took an active interest in all mat- ters beneficial to his city. He was highly re- spected in the community, the entire family standing high in the esteem of the people of York. Mrs. Witmer is a member of the Trinity Reformed Church.

SAMUEL B. HOFF (deceased) became a resident of New Cumberland, Cumberland county, in 1900, where he lived retired in his fine home on Bridge street. It is supposed from surrounding circumstances that this venerable gentleman and highly esteemed citi- zen met his death by being injured by some of his cattle, as his body was found, Sept. 6, 1903, badly mutilated, in the field by the fence on one of his farms in Fairview township. His remains were laid in Mount Olivet ceme- tery in Fairview township.

Samuel B. Hoff had the following brothers and sisters: Jeremiah, who died in Missouri; Elizabeth, the widow of Jacob Barler (who for eight years was commissioner of Cumber- land county), residing at Lisburn, Cumber- land county; Magdalena, who also lives at Lisburn, and Henry, in Alaska. Mrs. Hoff, the widow of S. B. Hoff, resides in New Cumber- land, and she belonged to a family of chil- dren as follows: Sarah A., deceased, who was the wife of Daniel Stouffer; Caroline, the widow of Samuel Billette, living at Lewis- berry; Joseph who married Mary A. Boak, and lives on the old Anderson homestead in Mon- aghan township; George W., of Harrisburg; Mrs. Hoff; William, of Kansas, and Emma, the wife of Samuel Schaefer who lives also in that State.

Mrs. Hoff’s father died Dec. 25, 1883, her mother having passed away in March of the same year, and both are interred at Anderson- town, Monaghan township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoff were as follows: Charles A., who married Effie Hetrick, a daughter of Dr. Hetrick, of Warrington township, is in the hardware business at Lykens, Dauphin county, Pa.; Leroy married Mary Greenfield of Fairview township, where he is farming; and Morris A., at home, is learning the undertak- ing business at New Cumberland. Mr. Hoff was a prominent member of the Masonic fra- ternity and many attended his funeral, which was conducted by the Masons of York and Harrisburg.

DAVID F. HANIGAN was born in Hopewell township, York county, Feb. 17, 1851, and is a member of one of the pioneer families of that section of the Keystone State.

Ramsey Hanigan, his father, was likewise born in Hopewell township, and was there reared to maturity. He principally followed charcoal burning up to the time of the Civil war. In September, 1861, he enlisted in Company C, 87th P. V. I., with which as first ser- geant he proceeded to the front, continuing in service until the close of the war, and being second lieutenant of his company at the time of his discharge. He was wounded in the groin at the battle of Cold Harbor, and among the other important engagements in which he participated were the battles of the Wilderness, Cedar Creek, Chancellorsville and Petersburg, besides many others of minor importance. After the close of the war he returned to York county and engaged in farming in Hopewell township, where he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1870, when he was about fifty years of age. The wound which he received in battle, as noted above, never healed and finally caused a dropsical condition which resulted in his death.
He was a Republican in his political adherence, and during the administration of President Johnson served as mercantile appraiser and gauger. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, as was also his wife, whose maiden name was Susan Hildebrand; she was born in Springfield township, York county, in 1821, and her death occurred in 1892, in Hopewell township. She was a daughter of John and Catherine (Raymer) Hildebrand, who were sterling pioneers of that county. Ramsey and Susan Hanigan became the parents of six children, namely: John, who married Amanda Ream, and is a resident of Hopewell township; David F.; Jane, wife of Joseph Rickard, of Hopewell township; Elizabeth, wife of John Ream, of Upper Chanceford township; Agnes, wife of Christian Newkirk, of Philadelphia; and Ramsey O., residing in Upper Windsor township.

William Hanigan, the paternal grandfather of David F., was born and reared in Ireland, whence he emigrated to America when a young man, landing in Baltimore and finally taking up his residence in York county, Pa., where he followed various vocations as a day laborer. He married Miss Fisile, of Hopewell township, and there they continued to reside until death. The Hanigans have been men of fine physique and much strength, save when impaired by disease. Of the children of William Hanigan the following record is made: Jacob died at the same time as his father, both having been taken ill after returning from a fishing trip; John, who died in Stewartstown, was a soldier in the Civil war and severely wounded at Petersburg; Oliver, who was likewise a valiant Union soldier, died in Hopewell township; Jeremiah died soon after the close of the war, at Glen Rock, York county, as a result of disease contracted while serving as a Union soldier; William, who likewise was a soldier in a Pennsylvania regiment, died in Hopewell township; Barbara, who became the wife of Henry Mitzel, died in the same township; Malvina, the wife of John Standiford, died in Baltimore county, Md.; Ramsey, father of David F., was the second in order of birth.

David F. Hanigan obtained his early educational training in the common schools of York county, attending the Mt. Zion school, at Springfield, for several winters, and being engaged in school work at the time when his father went forth to do battle in defense of the Union. When the latter came home to recuperate from his wound David besought his permission to enlist, but owing to his immaturity the request was refused. The boy, however, was determined on his course, although he was at the time little more than fourteen years of age. He surreptitiously left home and went to York to see Capt. Murray Cross, who failed to have him passed by the examiners, though he was of fine physical development and looked older than his years. The zealous young patriot then pushed on to Harrisburg, where he was refused the privilege of enlisting; but he determined to try once more. He proceeded to the barracks at Carlisle, where he succeeded in passing, much to his joy and satisfaction, and he was duly enlisted March 4, 1865, when he became a member of Company C. 102d P. V. I., under Captain Matthews. He joined his regiment in front of Petersburg and thereafter proceeded with his command through North Carolina, where he was taken severely ill, being sent to the hospital at City Point. Three weeks later he was sent to McKinn's hospital, in the city of Baltimore, and thence to Pittsburg, where he received his honorable discharge on Aug. 18, 1865. He took part in the engagement before Petersburg, where he received his "baptism of fire," and was one of the youngest soldiers in the Civil war. After Lee's surrender his command lay at Berksville Station, and to his bunkmate he said, "My father is in this corps; let's hunt his regiment." This they did, and the meeting of the boy and his father may be imagined as a joyful one.

After his return home Mr. Hanigan was disqualified for active labor of any sort for a year, owing to the effects of his illness, which had been caused by drinking polluted water. After sufficiently recuperating his health, Mr. Hanigan removed to Missouri, and secured work in a steam sawmill, twenty miles from Hannibal. At the end of six months he was again taken ill, being incapacitated for the following half year, at the expiration of which he was able to return to his home. After his recovery he secured employment as a day laborer, and after his marriage turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, beginning operations in Hopewell township, where he remained until 1880, when he came to Lower Windsor township. There he had charge of the cultivation of the Detwiler farm, which he operated on shares during the ensuing thirteen years. He then purchased his present place, which comprises fifteen acres, while he also purchased sixty-two acres of woodland in Lower Windsor township, which he is reclaiming to cultivation. He remodeled the house and made other excellent improvements on his place.

Mr. Hanigan is a prominent and popular member and has been commander of Lieut. R. W. Smith Post, No. 270, G. A. R., at Wrightsville. In politics he accords a stanch allegiance to the Republican party and he was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, though not now formally identified with any religious body. He served one term as school director in the borough of Winterstown and also for one term as supervisor of Lower Windsor township.

On Sept. 15, 1869, Mr. Hanigan was united in marriage to Anna R. Snyder, who was born in Hopewell township, York county, daughter of Jacob and Sarah Snyder, both of whom are now deceased; her father was a farmer by vocation. Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hanigan: Barbara Alverda is the wife of John Kline, of Lower Windsor township; Odessa Blanche is the wife of Burman Fife, of East Prospect; Rutherford Burchard, who married Miss Elizabeth Dritt, is a resident of the city of Lancaster; Chester Garfield is in the first class in the United States navy, stationed at Norfolk, Va.; Carrie, Myrtle and Rosee S. are at home; Matthew Stanley Quay died in infancy.

WILLIAM CARNES CONWAY, the present proprietor of the Hermitage Cottage farm, in Hopewell township, York county, Nov. 25, 1844, son of Henry and Catherine (Hedrick) Conway. The Conways are of Irish descent, the first one to come to America being John, who emigrated from Ireland when a young man, sometime between 1812 and 1815. He located in Baltimore, Md., married a lady from Philadelphia, and finally died in the city in which he had made his home. He left three children, namely: John, a sea captain, who sailed to foreign ports and is supposed to have lost his life in a shipwreck; Louise, who married and removed to Boston, and Henry.

Henry Conway was born at Baltimore in the year 1809. Left an orphan at an early age, he was reared by the father of the late Major Ruhl, of York, and from him learned the blacksmith's trade. Mr. Ruhl's shop was on the old York Pike, in Shrewsbury township, and there Mr. Conway received a thorough training. In time he started for himself in the same township, after a while moved to Glen Rock, thence to Deer Creek, and eventually to Stewartstown, where he opened a shop, in the spring of 1845, on the spot where the academy now stands. Later his eyesight failed, and giving up his trade Mr. Conway bought a thirty-acre farm, now a portion of his son's property, built a house there and made it his home until his death, in July, 1865, at the age of fifty-six years. Mrs. Conway, whose maiden name was Catherine Hedrick, was born in Shrewsbury township; her father, Henry Hedrick, had married a Miss Kraut. Mrs. Conway passed away about 1885, when nearly seventy years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Conway were both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, in politics the former was first a Whig and then a Republican, holding the office of township supervisor.

Seven children were born to Henry and Catherine Conway, (1) John, the eldest, was a carpenter by trade. He married Miss Amanda Smith, of East Prospect, settled first at Stewartstown, then successively in East Prospect, Columbia, Pa., and other places in that State, and now resides in Michigan. In Stewartstown he enlisted in the 12th Pa. Reserves, under Capt. Diven, in the army of the Potomac, and during his term of service was wounded in the breast and hand. (2) Elizabeth is the widow of Col. Andrew Fulton, of Civil war fame, and is now living in Philadelphia. (3) Lucinda is Mrs. James Blosser, of York. (4) Eliza married George Whitcroft, of Baltimore county, Md. (5) Charles, a resident of Baltimore, has been twice married, his first wife being formerly Alice Jones. (6) William Carnes came next in order of birth. (7) George married Miss Jennie Whitcroft and died in Baltimore.

William C. Conway was only a few months old when, in the spring of 1845, his parents moved to Stewartstown, and there he reached maturity, receiving his education in the public schools. His energetic temperament displayed itself early in life, and almost from boyhood he began to make his way in the world. He at first hired out as a farm hand and later worked for his father. After his marriage, in 1873, Mr. Conway bought the home farm and lived there for some time, but later bought a tract of land on the opposite side of the road, built a beautiful home there in 1898 and has since resided on this property. His farm, which comprises 112 acres, lies on the Winemiller road, two miles from Stewartstown, and is devoted to general agriculture and to dairying.

In 1873, in Baltimore county, Md., Mr. Conway was united to Miss Laura Jane Leib. Her parents were Rev. William and Eliza (Allen) Leib, the former a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now living retired in Baltimore. Mrs. Leib is also still living. Mr. and Mrs. Conway are the parents of two children, viz.: W. Ashton, who married Miss Nettie Kearns and lives in Stewartstown; and Grace A., who was first sent to the public schools, then took a special course at York and for the past six years has been a successful teacher in the home schools. Mr. Conway joined the Hopewell Methodist Episcopal Church in 1868. Later the congregation moved to Stewartstown and built a new church there, where both Mr. and Mrs. Conway are among the most active members. Mr. Conway has always been a strong Republican and fraternally is a member of the Heptasophs.

Mr. Conway, as a veteran of the Civil war, was formerly a member of G. A. R. Post No. 365, in which he filled various offices. This post has been disbanded. His military service began in 1863, when he enlisted at Harrisburg, Pa., in Company A, 21st Pa. Cav., Capt. Hugh McCall, under Col. Boyd and later under Col. O. B. Knowles. The regiment formed part of the 2d Division, Army of the Potomac, under Gregg, and saw much hard service. Mr. Conway was in the battles of the Wilderness and Cold Harbor, in the Peninsular campaign and at Petersburg. He received his first wound at Cold Harbor, where a minie ball, which had already passed through one man, lodged in his hip. He was wounded again, in front of Petersburg, June 15th, when a piece of shell struck his right hand. He was in the field hospital for some time, was sent as a fever patient to Jarvis General Hospital, Baltimore, on the day after Lee surrendered, in the spring of 1865, and was finally discharged in June of that year, thus ending a service which included much of hardship, danger and honor.

CALVIN A. BOYER, councilman from the Twelfth ward of York, was born there, Aug. 9, 1854, son of Conrad and Margaret Ann (Adams) Boyer.

Daniel Boyer, grandfather of Calvin A., was a basket and fence-maker in Spring Garden township, and was well known in that community. He died aged sixty-five years, leaving these children: Conrad, Jacob, Daniel, Sampson, Henry, Mary, Rachel, Susan, Sarah and Christie.

In 1824, Conrad Boyer, son of Daniel, was born in Spring Garden township, and there received a common school education. He learned the tailor's trade, the vocation of his life, and died Oct. 22, 1904. His wife, known in maidenhood as Margaret Ann Adams, is now living with her daughter, Mrs. Clinton D. Frey, of York, Pa. To this union were born: W. P., Mary, Walter, Martha, Rufus, Marvin, Alpheus G., Calvin A. and Harry D.

Calvin A. Boyer attended the schools of Spring Garden township until seventeen years of age, when he learned the carpenter's trade with William Miller, with whom he remained eleven years. He was then employed by different builders until 1896, when he engaged in business on his own account, erecting some of the largest plants in York, among which may be mentioned the following: the Diamond Silk Mills; Evangelical church, on Wallace and Vine streets and the Reformed church on Market street. He is now constructing a large machine shop for the York Safe & Lock Works, where he has already erected three large buildings. At a meeting of the school directors of Red Lion, Mr. Boyer was awarded the contract for the new schoolhouse to be erected at a cost of $23,990. The structure will be more than fifty per cent, larger than any school building yet erected in the county outside of the city of York, but owing to the simplicity of planning and design, the cost is less, per pupil capacity, than that of any modern schoolhouse in the county.

In 1873 Mr. Boyer was united in marriage to Ella M. Blaser, daughter of Henry and Amanda (Campbell) Blaser, and to this union the following children have been born: Harry, Edgar, Annie and Cora. Mr. Boyer is a Democrat, and has served as justice of the peace in Spring Garden township; also for eight years as constable. In 1905 he was elected councilman from the Twelfth ward, a position for which he is excellently qualified. He is a member of St. Mark’s Lutheran Church of York, where he has held the office of deacon. He and his family are well known in York, where they reside in their fine residence at No. 958 East Market street.

SAMUEL A. McALISTER, one of the old and honored residents of East Hopewell township, York county, now retired from active life, was for many years engaged as a carpenter in that section, but in later years followed agricultural pursuits. He was born on his father’s farm in East Hopewell township, July 2, 1833.

James McAlister, grandfather of Samuel A., emigrated from Ireland to America when a young man. The trip to his new home was a stormy and perilous one, but, although the last of the provisions on board were consumed before the destination was reached, all landed in safety. James McAlister took up about 400 acres of land, becoming a very prosperous farmer. His wife, who had been Ellen Anderson, was also a native of Ireland.

John McAlister, son of James, was born on what is now the Lewis Miller farm in East Hopewell township, Jan. 29, 1780, and throughout life was a farmer. He acquired a farm close to his father’s, and there he died in 1846. He was a member of the Associate Reformed Church, and when it merged with the U. P. Church, joined the latter. A leader in religious work, Mr. McAlister was for many years an elder. In politics he was an active Whig, and very influential in such matters. Mr. McAlister was buried in the cemetery close to his farm, where his wife was also interred. John McAlister was married in 1809, to Miss Jane Proudftit, born Jan. 12, 1788, daughter of David and Agnes Proudftit, and she died Feb. 5, 1845, the mother of the following children: James, the father of W. N. McAlister of Laurel, a full sketch of whom will be found elsewhere; David, who died at the age of twenty-four years; Agnes P., Mrs. William Gemmell (deceased); Thomas, who married Miss Elizabeth Moore, of Washington county, Pa., and died in that county; Eleanor A., Mrs. Simpson Smith, who died at Cross Roads, York county; Martha, who died young; John, born in 1825 (educated in the public schools, the academy at York, Chanceford township, Athens College at Athens, O., and in the Allegheny Seminary and preached in the U. P. churches in Eastern Pennsylvania and New England and the Western States), who married Maggie McClain of Shippensburg, Pa., and they reside in Pittsburg; Elizabeth Mary, who died May 16, 1899; Euphemia C., residing with Samuel A., who was educated in the public schools and the Stewartstown academy, taught schools for three years, and is noted for her remarkable memory; and Samuel A.

Samuel A. McAlister attended the Wallace school, during winter terms, until his eighteenth year. He was reared on the home farm and at an early age commenced to learn the carpenter’s trade with Henry Hare and finished his apprenticeship with James Gemmell. This vocation he followed for thirty years in different parts of York county, and also worked for one year at Alliance, Stark Co., Ohio. He lived at the homestead until 1864, and then until 1871 resided in a rented house near the Round Hill U. P. church. In 1870 he purchased his present place of twenty-one acres, upon which he built his residence, but did not occupy it until the following year. In 1863, during the battle of Gettysburg, Mr. McAlister was a member of a Lancaster county company, with which he served three months, having enlisted in Lancaster City. He was stationed along the river, at Harrisburg, Pa., Hagerstown, Md., and Williamsport, Md., and at the end of his term of service was honorably discharged at Lancaster City.

For the past five years Mr. McAlister has been a member of the Hopewell Presbyterian Church, prior to this having been connected with the Round Hill U. P. Church for a period of thirty years. He has been a life-long Republican, and has served as a township official on many different occasions. Besides having been a farmer, during the active years of his life Mr. McAlister was a business man of the highest rank, and is looked upon by his friends and neighbors as an able and honest citizen. He has lived an industrious as well as a successful life, and is now living in comfort and plenty, enjoying the fruits of his early labors.

JACOB H. BRENNEMAN belongs to a family whose connection with the history of York county dates back at least to the Revolution and whose annals present pictures of succeeding generations of honorable, thrifty agriculturists. Samuel Brenneman, great-grandfather of Jacob H., owned a farm in Conewago township, near Strinestown, and there reached an extreme old age. His children were: Henry; John; Samuel; Peter; Elizabeth, Mrs. Neiman and Mary, Mrs. McFadden.

Peter Brenneman was born on the homestead in 1800. His occupation for the greater part of his life was milling, a trade which he learned at what is now Cline's mill. Thence he went to Bowman'sdale, working as a miller for five years, and then moved to Monaghan township, near Andersontown, where he bought a tract of about 100 acres, built a saw-mill and operated his mill and farm for many years. His last days were spent in Mt. Pleasant, where he passed away at the age of sixty-two years. His wife was a Mrs. Getner, who lived to be sixty-three and was buried, as was also Mr. Brenneman, in Andersontown. They were the parents of a large family, namely: John G.; Julia Ann, who died at the age of thirty-five, the wife of Israel Sulsenberg; Jacob G.; Peter, who died aged sixteen; Mary, Mrs. Joseph Elcock; Henry, who married Miss Annie Kann; Jacob, who died aged twenty-five; Elizabeth, Mrs. Emaline Myers; Samuel, deceased at the age of twenty-one; William, who died aged eleven, and Sarah, who married John Andrew Myers, of Mt. Pleasant.

John G. Brenneman was born in Conewago township, near Strinestown, Sept. 11, 1825, and until he was twenty attended the township schools. For the first year after leaving school he worked for his father and then was employed by other farmers until his marriage, six years later. He then commenced his career as an independent agriculturist on a farm on the line between Monaghan and Fairview townships, where he remained for seventeen years. At the end of that time he bought the Jacob Hart farm in Fairview township, consisting of 156 acres, and he operated that for eighteen years (or until 1894), when he retired from active life and is residing in Lisburn. He is a Republican and served seven years as school director in Fairview township. Mrs. Brenneman, who was Miss Eliza Jane Heckernell, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Moore) Heckernell, died Jan. 20, 1886, and is buried at Andersontown. She bore her husband the following children: Rosella, at home; Jacob H.; William P., who married Miss Mary Kimmel and bought his father's Fairview farm; Sallie, the widow of Elsworth Miller, residing in Mechanicsburg; Annis, Mrs. Harry Duff, of Lancaster; Minnie, the wife of Rev. John Manifold, a Lutheran minister located in Northumberland county; Henry, who died aged three months; Alberta, a graduate of the Millersville Normal, teaching at Lisburn; May at home, and Gale, who died when ten years old.

Jacob H. Brenneman was born in Fairview township, July 27, 1857. He received his education in the Morris and Navoo schools, attending until he was twenty years old. The following six years were spent on the homestead assisting his father and for still another year after his marriage, which occurred in 1883, he remained on his father's farm. The next year he operated the John M. Hart farm in Fairview township, and then returned to his father's homestead for four more years. In 1891 he bought the Samuel Sunday farm at Navoo, consisting of 102 acres, which he has since made his home, successfully engaged in agriculture. He has greatly improved the property and has built a handsome house. Besides being a well-known farmer, Mr. Brenneman is prominent in local business enterprises, and is stockholder and director and the president of the Fairview Mutual Fire Insurance Co. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the Bethel Church of Lisburn and has filled the office of elder.

Mr. Brenneman's marriage occurred Dec. 23, 1883, when he was united to Laura I. Coover, a daughter of Michael and Mary (Gardner) Coover, the former of whom, born in 1815, is still living and a resident of Cumberland county. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Brenneman are Gale, Pearl, Mary, Coover J. and Eva May.

Benjamin Franklin Ruff was born at Harford Furnace, Md., April 14, 1847. The Ruff family is of Irish and Scotch extraction, early members of the family emigrating to America from Ireland and Scotland. They were staunch adherents to Presbyterian doctrines and principles.

George Washington Ruff, father of Benjamin F., was born probably in Harford county, Md., where he received a common-school edu-cution, and followed the occupation of farming. He married Mary Jane Gilbert, who was born near Aberdeen, Md. Ten children blessed this union, viz.: Richard, who died in 1903; William J.; Ezekiel G., a farmer of Peach Bottom township; Eliza Jane, wife of George Naylor, of Red Lion; Benjamin F.; Mary Margaret, wife of Jacob T. Meyers, of Peach Bottom township; Nathaniel George and Jacob John, twins; one who died while young; and Moses Norris, deceased.

Benjamin F. Ruff obtained his education in Harford county, Md., and in Peach Bottom township, York county, completing it at the age of nineteen years. He was apprenticed to learn the blacksmith's trade in 1864, and served for a period of five years. In 1869, having mastered the trade, he located in Bryansville, where he has since resided. He owns an interest in a canning factory with his brother-in-law, Jacob T. Meyers, which they operate under the name of B. F. Ruff & Co. They make a specialty of corn.

On June 21, 1877, Mr. Ruff was united in marriage with Miss Marcelina Chalk, daughter of Harrison and Martha (Jones) Chalk, of Cambria, Md., and they are the parents of two living children, Carrie and Bessie, both at home. Mr. Ruff is a member of the Republican party, but has never sought office. While a member of no religious denomination he and his family attend the Methodist Church.

JONAS DEISINGER, M. D. (deceased), who for thirty years was engaged in the practice of medicine in the town of Hellam, was born April 18, 1833, in Paradise (now Jackson) township, York county, son of Jacob and Salome (Davis) Deisinger, natives of York county and of German descent.

Dr. Deisinger was one of a family of eleven children, and the first twenty years of his life were spent on his father's farm, where he received his education in the neighboring schools. For the next three years after finishing this portion of his education, he attended select schools at York, teaching during the winter months in the common schools of his county. At the age of twenty-three he began to read medicine with Dr. C. S. Picking, and in 1858 entered the medical department of the Pennsylvania College at Philadelphia. In 1862 Dr. Deisinger was united in marriage with Miss Maria Mann, born in Hellam township, York county, Nov. 9, 1833, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Blessing) Mann, the former of whom was a farmer and died in 1835, while the mother passed away in 1879, both being buried at Hellam, York county.

In 1866 Dr. Deisinger entered the University of Pennsylvania, graduating in the class of 1867, and, returning to Hellam, at once began the practice of his profession, in which he continued until 1896. In that year he removed to York, where he lived retired until his death Aug. 13, 1903. Dr. Deisinger was a member and an elder of the Reformed Church of the United States. He was greatly interested in educational matters, and for some time served as school director. His profession connected him with the York County Medical Association (of which he was president) and with the State Medical Association.

JOHN K. SEITZ, who now lives in retirement on his well-improved farm in Fairview township, was born Oct. 31, 1837, in Shrewsbury township, York county, a member of a fine old family of that locality. The great-grandfather of Mr. Seitz emigrated from Germany and was among the pioneer settlers of the township named. There his son John was born, and at the death of his father he purchased the homestead and continued to farm there through his active life, his death taking place at the age of eighty years; there, also, his wife passed away at the age of seventy-five years. Both were interred in Shrewsbury township. They were quiet, virtuous, home-loving people who capably cared for a large family and left records of Christian lives in their community. The children were: Jacob, Noah, John, Samuel and Daniel, all of whom died in Shrewsbury township; Adam, of York; George, father of John K.; Mrs. Myers, who died in Shrewsbury township; Mrs. Seicks, who died in a Western home; Mrs. Grove, whose death occurred in Chicago; Benjamin, who passed away at the age of twenty-one years, and the other six of the family of seventeen children died in infancy.

George Seitz, father of John K., was born Oct. 20, 1810, at the old home in Shrewsbury township. He enjoyed the advantages of a district-school education and then was apprenticed to the shoemaker's trade, which he continued to pursue for some twenty years. He then bought a farm of eighty-seven acres in Fairview township, which he cultivated until his retirement a few years before his death.
George Seitz married Anna Mary Knisely, daughter of Anthony and Susan (Snyder) Knisely. Mr. Seitz came to Fairview township in 1838 and both he and wife died in Fairview township and are buried in St. John's cemetery. They were active members of the Evangelical Church. In politics he was a Republican and at one time served the township as tax collector. He was an upright, honorable man in all his dealings with others, and exemplary in every relation of life. His four children were: Susan, wife of Abraham Reiff, died in Fairview township; John K.: William, married Susan Kilmore and lives at Lisburn, Cumberland county; and Daniel, deceased, married Maggie Shaw.

John K. Seitz, as an infant of one year, was brought by his parents to Fairview township. There he was educated and remained on his father’s farm, working occasionally as a carpenter, until he was twenty-two years old. In 1865 he married Annie E. Grissinger, daughter of the late Jacob S. and Annie (Snell) Grissinger, of Windsor township. After his marriage Mr. Seitz continued to farm the old place, which he bought of his father, for over thirty years. In 1895 he located on his present farm, which contains about fifteen acres, and built there a very fine residence. Mr. and Mrs. Seitz have one son, Jacob G., who was born in 1866, and is now one of the township’s leading men. In 1900 he was elected a justice of the peace in Fairview. He married Minnie E. Ort and they have one son, James G. Blaine.

Mr. Seitz is a Republican in his political views and has frequently been elected to township offices, serving at various times as auditor and assessor. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. For many years Mr. Seitz has suffered from the effects of an accident which happened to him about four months after his marriage. He was driving a spirited team of four horses when the accident occurred.

The death of the father of Mrs. Seitz called forth more than the usual comment in Fairview township, where this venerable citizen had been an honored resident so long, and there is here appended a comprehensive account of the leading events of his long and useful life, prepared by one who knew him well:

"On the 16th inst., 1883, Mr. Jacob S. Grissinger, one of Fairview township’s oldest farmers, departed this life, aged seventy-three years, five months and twelve days. The subject of this sketch was born in Fairview township, York Co., Pa., on the farm now owned by Andrew Strominger, and grew from childhood to boyhood and from boyhood to manhood there, and on the farm now owned by Jacob Sultzberger, and known as the old Henry Grissenger farm, located but a short distance from his birthplace. He remained at home a faithful young man to his parents, assisting them on the farm and in building the large stone dwelling that still stands on the old farm, and was at all times industrious. At the age of twenty-three years he married Anna Snell, one of Fairview’s fair maids (she was born in Windsor township and moved with her parents to this township when but six years old). On the first day of May, 1833, they began housekeeping on the farm now owned by Dr. LaFerty, and on the first of April, 1834, they moved to their present home, in which he died. For forty-nine years the happy couple walked hand in hand along life’s thorny pathway, sharing each other’s joys and sorrows, until death laid his icy hand upon a loving husband and a kind father. Financially the couple prospered with the success that only attends those who work harmoniously and for each other. There were ten children born unto them—eight girls and two boys—all of whom survive their father, except one son, Joseph, who died when quite young. Twenty-eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild are left to mourn their loss.

"When about eighteen years old he became a true Christian and connected himself with the Lutheran Church, which connection remained unbroken until his demise. He was a faithful and devoted attendant of his church and a generous contributor to the church fund. On the 18th inst. he was buried in the cemetery near Lewisberry, a short distance from where he was born, and a large concourse of people followed his body to its last resting place. An appropriate and interesting sermon was preached by Rev. Dasher, of Harrisburg, from First Samuel, 20th chapter and 18th verse: ‘And thou shalt be missed because thy seat will be empty.’

"We laid his body to rest in the silent grave to await the resurrection of the just. In his death the community loses a worthy citizen, the church a faithful adherent, the wife a devoted husband and the family a true and loving father. Being acquainted with the departed for many years we knew him to be an upright citizen, an honest man and a man of unquestionable integrity in all his business relations, thus winning the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens. He will be greatly missed in the little congregation at the New Market Church, but above all will he be missed in the home circle. Who can take the place of a beloved husband and affectionate father? He will be missed in the community, as a life of integrity and honor can be ill spared in the community; but he is gone. Our loss we trust is his eternal gain.

"Politically he was a firm and sterling Democrat, yet was never so blind to party lines as to forget the welfare of his country. We shall greatly miss him in the party's council."

JACOB LICHTY, a merchant of New Holland, York county, and assistant postmaster at Saginaw, East Manchester township, was born Dec. 4, 1828, son of Michael Lichty, and was one of a family of three children, the others being: Abraham, a farmer, who died in York county, and Henrietta, who married Mathias Coleman and resides in Illinois.

Mr. Lichty received his early education in the township schools and supplemented this with two terms at the York County Academy. Until 1863 he was employed in farming pursuits, at that time engaging in the mercantile business at New Holland, which he still continues. In 1857 Mr. Lichty married Mary Wolf, daughter of Adam and Anna Mary (Demuth) Wolf, who was born in 1833 in New Holland. After marriage he located on his farm in East Manchester township, in the house built (1807) by Frederick Day and his wife. The house was torn down in 1904 by the railroad company while the line was being built to York Haven, and Mr. Lichty and his family removed to his fine new residence in New Holland, which he had built in 1903.

The following children have been born to Mr. Lichty and his wife: Annie married Frank M. Kain, a veterinarian of York; Mary H. died at the age of twenty-one and was buried in New Holland; Susan married Anson C. Hartman, and died in Middletown, Dauphin county; Hannah died at the age of twelve, and was buried in New Holland; Sarah resides at home; Fannie married Dr. H. A. Free, and resides in York; Ada married Jacob Doll, postmaster at Saginaw, and resides at New Holland; James A. is connected with Fry & Thomas, in York; Jacob W., who married Carrie Copenhafer, assists his father in the mercantile business. Nellie Lichty Hartman, a granddaughter whose parents died when she was six years old, has since been a member of Mr. Lichty's family.

Besides being assistant postmaster at Saginaw, Mr. Lichty has been school director, auditor, assessor, county committeeman and an incumbent of numerous township offices. He is connected with the Lutheran Church, of which he is a liberal supporter. Mr. Lichty has hosts of friends in every section of the county who have been attracted to him by his strong, fearless and resolute character, and by the unswerving integrity of his conduct.

JOHN H. COPENHAFER, a retired farmer of East Manchester township, was born in 1835 in Conewago township and is a son of Martin Copenhafer. Little is known of Simon Copenhafer, his great-grandfather, except that he came from Germany and settled in York county, where he spent his life in farming.

Michael Copenhafer, son of Samuel, was born in 1761 in Newberrytown and combined tanning and farming as his life work. He died in 1836 and is buried with his wife at Quickell's church, Conewago township. His wife's maiden name was Gutwalt, and to them the following children were born: John and Jacob, who died in Lancaster county; Henry, who died in Newberry; Martin, the father of John H.; Katie, who married James Rankin and died in the West, and Elizabeth, Mrs. Hoffman, who died in the West.

Martin Copenhafer was born in Newberry township and learned the tanning and millwright trades, which he followed for a number of years in Conewago. Later he farmed there for about fifteen years, and subsequently removed to Manchester township, where he engaged in farming until his death, in August, 1864, at the age of seventy-two years. His wife was Anna Mary Wentz, a daughter of John and Catherina (Jacoby) Wentz; she was born in Manchester township, where she died in 1891, being buried in Paradise township. To them the following children were born: Anna Mary married John Spotts and died in Pennsylvania; Jacob was killed in York; Reuben lives in Springfield, Ohio; Elizabeth died unmarried in West Manchester township; Catherine married Henry Stover and lives in Paradise township; John H. is mentioned below; Malinda married Andrew Hake and died in Hagerstown, Md.; Ellen died young.

John H. Copenhafer attended the public schools of Manchester township until the age of twelve years, when he learned the carpenter's trade which he followed for seven years. In 1856 he married Mary Ann Shindel, daughter of George and Kate (Shriver) Shindel, who was born in Manchester township. After marriage they located in Manchester township, where he was engaged in agriculture for six years. Later Mr. and Mrs. Copenhafer removed to Alexander Hay's farm, in Conewago township, where they remained four years, then returning to Manchester, where he bought a fine farm of sixty-one acres, erected a substantial residence and other good buildings and lived for twenty-six years. In 1893 he bought a fine home in Manchester borough, where he now lives retired. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Copenhafer: Stephen Albert, who married Emma Duhling, is a millwright with the card and paper mills at York; Ellen Catherine married F. P. Lauer, and lives in York, and they have four children—Daisy E. and Lottie K. (twins), Anna M. and Steward; Anna Bell married Edward Bear, lives in York, and has three children living—Clark L., Paul E. and Robert; Carrie Jane married Jacob Lichty, lives at New Holland, York county, and has one boy, Jacob C.

Mr. Copenhafer is a Republican and has served as councilman of Manchester borough. In the Lutheran Church he is a deacon and elder.

SAMUEL E. BAILY, at the head of the York Carriage Company, was born on a farm in Susquehanna county, to which section his people had moved from Chester county, his grandparents having been natives of that section of the State.

Joseph B. Baily was a contracting carpenter, and died when his son, Samuel E., was but eleven years old. His wife was Diana Carlin, daughter of Peter Carlin, a farmer of Springville township. Susquehanna county, and the children born to this union were as follows: Emily C., who married John L. Ritter, of Philadelphia; Anna Mary, widow of E. O. Archer, of White Plains, N. Y., and Samuel E.

Samuel E. Baily has been twice married. His first wife was Agnes Dadow, of Pottsville, by whom he had the following children: Arthur W., connected with Strawbridge & Clothier, and Edith M., wife of George W. Ryan, of the York Carriage Company. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Baily married, Oct. 5, 1898, Clara Bolland, of Portland, Maine. Two children were born of this union, Clara Louisa and S. E. Baily, Jr.

After the terrible conflagration which reduced his magnificent York factory to ashes, in the spring of 1904, Samuel E. Baily not only rebuilt the works with an annual capacity of 8,000 vehicles and employing over 300 people, but erected another factory in East York, near the Diamond Silk Mill, which has a capacity of 10,000 vehicles a year. In addition to all this, Mr. Baily is at the head of the firm of S. E. Baily & Co.'s immense carriage works in Lancaster, Pa., where Mr. Baily spent the years of his younger manhood, and where he has hosts of friends, these works being efficiently managed by the resident partner, J. C. Schutte. The Lancaster factory employs 120 skilled workmen, with a capacity of 2,500 vehicles per annum, the markets for its products being in all sections of the world. The carriage concerns in which he is interested have an office and repository at Nos. 203 and 205 North Broad street, Philadelphia, a branch house at No. 36 Warren street, New York City, another at No. 7 Water street, Boston, and an agency in London. In fact they ship their goods to every civilized country on the face of the globe, and no industry in York carries the name of that great industrial center to more foreign countries than the York Carriage Company.

Mr. Baily maintains his residence in Philadelphia, but to York belongs the magnificent industrial plant which he has established, where is given employment to hundreds of skilled mechanics, and whence many thousands of dollars are annually sent through the avenues of trade. It would be impossible to write a complete industrial history of York and omit the name of Samuel E. Baily, or the story of the great industries he has controlled and does control.

The York Carriage Company, however, is not the only important industry in York which
Mr. Baily has established. In partnership with A. P. Broomell trading as the York Automobile Company, Mr. Baily has established one of the best equipped automobile plants in United States, with a capacity of 150 touring cars per annum. More orders were received than could be filled for the season of 1905, and this added industry to York is strictly in a class of its own, and will not only do much toward making the name of York still more familiar to the people of other and distant sections, but will be another substantial evidence of the enterprise and energy of S. E. Baily.

EMANUEL SNYDER is actively engaged in cultivating his 150-acre farm, in Fairview township. He was born Nov. 2, 1834, in Manchester township, son of Henry and Mary (Frey) Snyder.

Christian Snyder, the great-grandfather of Emanuel, came from Switzerland with two brothers, and located on the spot on the Susquehanna river where the capital of the State now stands, he being the owner and builder of the first house ever erected on the site of Harrisburg. In this house Christian Snyder, the grandfather of Emanuel, was born Oct. 27, 1768. Christian Snyder (II) followed agriculture in Manchester township, and owned a large tract of land near the well known Brillinger mill, dying here Sept. 20, 1839. His wife, Annie Lehman, was born Oct. 13, 1769, and died July 21, 1834, at the age of sixty-four years, and they both were buried on the old family burying place in Manchester township. Mr. and Mrs. Christian Snyder were the parents of these children: John, born Feb. 8, 1793, died April 10, 1863; Christian, Jr., born Sept. 15, 1795, died in April, 1877; Jacob, born Feb. 4, 1798, died July 20, 1882; Abraham, born July 22, 1799, died at the age of seventy-two years; Peter, born Jan. 5, 1801, died at the age of twenty-one years; Henry, the father of Emanuel; Daniel, born Sept. 10, 1805, died Jan. 20, 1873; Elizabeth, born May 18, 1808, died May 3, 1891, and Magdalena, born Aug. 1, 1814, died Jan. 19, 1900.

Henry Snyder was born Oct. 30, 1802, in Dauphin county, being two years of age when his father moved to Manchester township, where he was reared to manhood and followed farming. He bought a fine farm in Fishing Creek Valley, upon which he located, and here he died July 12, 1887. Mr. Snyder was a charter member of the Fairview Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and was prominent in business affairs. He married Mary Frey (born March 8, 1816, died Aug. 20, 1856), and both she and her husband are interred at the Salem Church, in Fairview township.

The children born to Henry Snyder and his worthy wife were: Emanuel; Eliza, born Dec. 8, 1835; Samuel, born Feb. 18, 1837, married Lydia Ginter, deceased, and they were residents of Ohio, living near Springfield; Maria A., born Dec. 4, 1838, died in childhood; John F., born Dec. 28, 1839, married Annie S. Free, and is living in Fairview township, where he is a farmer (he was a soldier in the Civil war); Susan, born Dec. 6, 1842, married John Sheely, deceased, and she is living in Cumberland county; Peter, born March 14, 1844, married Jane Sultzenberger, and they live at Lewisberry, Newberry township; Mattie, born Jan. 13, 1846, is the widow of John Rupp, who was a soldier in the Civil war; Elizabeth, born Feb. 13, 1848, died in infancy; Annie, born June 1, 1849, died at the age of twenty-four years; Henry, born Jan. 10, 1850, married Ellen Ebersole, and lives in Fairview township, and Amanda, born Nov. 10, 1850, wife of John Ryan, died at the age of twenty-four years.

Emanuel Snyder attended the pay and free schools until he was nineteen years of age and remained at home until his thirty-fifth year. In 1862 he married Barbara Keister, daughter of Michael and Margaret (Kreger) Keister, of Newberry township, and at the death of his father bought the old home in Fairview township, which consists of 150 acres of finely cultivated, productive farm land. The residence on the farm was built in 1810 and is still in good condition. Mr. Snyder's father bought the farm in 1831.

These children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Snyder: Mary, born March 25, 1865, married John Kautz, and they live in Newberry township; Jacob K., born Sept. 15, 1866, married Clara Struck, and they live in Fairview township; Henry K., born May 21, 1869, married Catherine Means, and they reside in Wilmington, Del., where she was born; Michael K., born Oct. 14, 1872, married Sarah Fisher, and they make their home in Fairview township; John K., born Sept. 14, 1876 married Miriam Prowell, and they are living at Emigsville; Franklin K., born Dec.
13, 1889, married Effie Kunkle, of Lewisberry, Pa., and resides at home, assisting his father; and Charlotte, Margaret and Edward, who all died young.

Mr. Snyder has been director of the Fairview Mutual Fire Insurance Company, for a period of twenty years. In politics he is a Republican and in the service of that party has always been active, and has served as inspector of elections. Honest and upright in all of his dealings, Mr. Snyder is highly esteemed in Fairview township.

GEORGE LICHENBERGER, one of the venerable, highly respected and retired farmers of East Manchester township, who belongs to one of York county’s old families, was born Sept. 8, 1829, in Manchester township, son of George and grandson of Caspar Lichtenberger.

Caspar Lichtenberger was born in York county on the old homestead, the deed for which bears the date of Sept. 12, 1743. was signed by Thomas and Richard Penn, and is now a precious relic in the possession of George Lichtenberger. It is a matter of history that Caspar Lichtenberger took the contract to construct the Harrisburg turnpike. He married Magdalena Neiman, and his death occurred in 1834; both he and his wife were buried at the cemetery adjoining Quickel’s Church, in Conewago township. To himself and his wife were born the following children: George, Sr., the father of our subject; Rudolph, who died in East Manchester township; Benjamin, who died in East Manchester township and was buried there; Henry, who died in East Manchester township; Samuel, who died young; and Eve, who died in Manchester township. Caspar Lichtenberger was a man of energy and courage, accomplished much good work and was able to leave a large estate to his family.

George Lichtenberger, Sr., was born in 1794 in Manchester township, and received a common-school education. He was a farmer all his life, buying the old homestead, adding another 145 acres of land to the original tract, and later buying of Jacob Strickler 224 acres of land known as the River Hill farm, which our subject improved and upon which he built fine, substantial buildings. During his life Mr. Lichtenberger was also a distiller. His death occurred July 15, 1854, and he was buried in Quickel’s cemetery at Conewago. In 1820 he married Mary Ann Loucks, a daughter of Jacob Loucks, and when she died in 1889 she was buried beside her husband. The children born to them were: Henry died in York; Sarah Ann died when nineteen years of age; Margaret died at the age of seventeen; George; Elizabeth, deceased, married Henry Bear; Samuel married Susan Rutter, who died in 1905, and was buried at Prospect Hill cemetery; Mary married George Wolf, died at Mt. Wolf and is buried at Manchester; Leah married Allen Litzenberger, and lives in Decatur, Ill.; and Jesse died young.

George Lichtenberger attended the township’s schools and the graded schools in York for three sessions, until the age of twenty-four. He taught school in this township, one term to the Sipe’s school, and one term at Brillinger’s. In 1858 he married Phoebe Prowell, daughter of Samuel and Ann (McGary) Prowell, born in Fairview, Manchester township, then called Liverpool. At the death of his father Mr. Lichtenberger fell heir to the River Hill farm, which for many years he continued to operate and improve, but latterly has relinquished it to other hands, considering that the weight of advanced years has earned him relief from such burdens.

To George Lichtenberger and his wife the following children have been born: Carrie, who died at the age of eleven years; Edward, who married Nellie Henry, and is a jeweler at Reading; William, who married Carrie Gardner, and is in the tinning business at Red Lion, York county; Margaret, who married E. S. Eyster, and lives in York; Annie, who married C. R. Koop, and died in Baltimore; and George, who died at the age of four years. Mr. Lichtenberger is a Dunkard in faith, while his wife is a member of the United Brethren Church. He is well and favorably known, and is regarded with high esteem throughout York county.

GEORGE MUNCHEL (deceased), who was well known in the business world of York county, was a native of Oberwaeting, Bavaria, Germany, born Dec. 12, 1823. His parents were poor, and he early commenced to learn a trade that he might become self-supporting. He completed his apprenticeship as a shoemaker, and on July 2, 1847, came to America. For some months after his arrival he was located in Baltimore. In that city, at St. Alphonsus Catholic church, Aug. 20, 1848, he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Elsesser, who was born in Bavaria, Germany, July 12, 1823, and whom he had met on his voyage to the United States.

In the fall after their marriage the young couple came to York, and their first home was on South Penn street, later at No. 244 West Market street, the latter place being now known as the “Alvern.” Mr. Munchel applied himself to his trade with great success until about 1876, when for some few years he engaged in the hotel business, conducting the “Ninth Ward House.” During the years he was engaged in the shoe business he had the largest establishment of its kind in the town, employing a number of hands in the manufacture of boots and shoes. He also carried a fine line of custom-made shoes. Although quiet and reserved in his manners, he was one of the best known men in the town, and he had warm friends all over the county. His business methods were above reproach, and it was his upright character and genial manners that earned for him the popularity and honest respect in which he was held. In 1890 he retired from active business, and his lamented death occurred Aug. 17, 1902. His good wife had preceded him some years before, passing away June 4, 1893. They were faithful members of the Catholic Church, and Mr. Munchel had assisted in the erection of the first Catholic church in York.

To George and Elizabeth Munchel was born a family of nine children. (1) John, born Sept. 20, 1849, died at the age of two and one-half years. (2) Mary, born July 23, 1851, died aged eight years and four months. (3) Margaret, born July 19, 1853, married Constantine Bittner, of Columbia, Pa., and died Feb. 12, 1876. (4) Anthony was born Sept. 1, 1855. (5) Agnes, born Jan. 20, 1858, died unmarried March 4, 1881. (6) John, born Jan. 8, 1860, was a cigar-maker and was foreman in the shop of his brother Anthony. He had also learned the barber’s trade. His death occurred July 3, 1900, his wife, formerly Mollie Miller, and six children surviving and residing in York. (7) Albert, born Feb. 27, 1862, resides in York, where he is employed in the postoffice. (8) Rosina E., born June 1, 1864, married George Mann, of York, senior member of the firm of Mann & Co., contractors and dealers in stone. (9) Francis Xavier, born April 19, 1867, died Sept. 22, 1875.

Anthony Munchel has spent his entire life in the city of York, and there where he is so well known, he stands high in the estimation of his friends and acquaintances as a man of sterling integrity and business sagacity. He learned the shoe trade with his father at an early age, but, finding that the work was not conducive to his health, abandoned it after some years and learned the cigar-maker’s trade. He began for himself in a small way, gradually increasing his business until his establishment and his goods were known all over this part of the country. He gave his attention to the manufacture of the best quality of cigars, and some twenty-three years ago opened a store in connection with his factory, there carrying a complete line of cigars, tobacco and smokers’ supplies and doing both a wholesale and a retail business. He has been identified with various enterprises in the city, and has always had the best interests of his town and county at heart, being ever ready to give of his time or means to further their interests. He was a member of the first city council of York, representing the Ninth ward, and has always been a stanch Democrat.

In May, 1881, Mr. Munchel was married to Miss Annie Louisa Palmtag, of York, and they have two children: Beata E. and Florence R. Mr. Munchel has been a lifelong member of St. Mary’s Catholic Church, which his family also attend. He has been connected with the choir for thirty-two years, and his daughter, Beata E., is the organist. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of St. Paul, Knights of Columbus and St. Patrick Association.

Andrew F. McClearie, the owner of a 106-acre farm in Lower Chanceford township, was born March 7, 1836, on the old McClearie homestead about one-half mile from his present farm.

Andrew McClearie, the great-grandfather of Andrew F., was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, and came to America prior to the Revolution. He first settled near Guinston church, and acquired 400 acres of land, some of which he took up as government land and some of which he bought outright. The land is now included in the Showalter, the Nelson
Mrs. Isabella Nathan Andrew, and one mentioned Isabella, hlished boards, there buried part One married his Clearie's Eighty-three agricultural married unmarried in his youth; William, the father of Andrew F.: Isabella, who died single; and Mary, who married Samuel Kirkwood.

William McCleary was born in a small log house, which stood on a hill on father's farm, in 1796. He was reared to a farmer's life, but learned the trade of cooper and millwright, the latter of which he followed most of his life. He married, Oct. 25, 1826, his wife being a daughter of John McCleary, who was a brother of Andrew, the grandfather of Andrew F. Mrs. McCleary's mother's name was Patterson. Mr. and Mrs. William McCleary were members of the Chanceford Presbyterian Church. Mr. McCleary was a Democrat in politics and served for a term as constable of the township. He died in 1873, while his wife survived until 1876. The children born to this couple were as follows: One died in infancy; Isabella born April 30, 1828, married, Sept. 4, 1856, William Reburn, and died in 1882; Margaret Mitchell, is deceased; Ann, born July 24, 1833, died unmarried; Andrew Fullerton is mentioned below; John Patterson, born Aug. 19, 1838, married Lydia Kempston, and located at Santa Rosa, Cal.; Nathan William, born March 25, 1841, died in boyhood; Agnes, born Dec. 12, 1846, died in childhood.

Andrew Fullerton McCleary was reared to agricultural life and attended the old log school known as the Chanceford school. The desks were built around the walls, of rough boards, and the seats were also made of unfinished pine boards. The studies were reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic, the reading being principally from the Bible. The teachers were sometimes efficient, but the majority were not, and Mr. McCleary recollects that they were the kind that did not spare the rod. At the age of twenty years he spent three months learning carpenter's trade with William Howett, of Fawn township, with whom he remained six years. The first wages Mr. McCleary received were $6 per month, from that sum being advanced successively to $11, $16 and $19, the last named being the top notch of wages paid at that time.

Mr. McCleary was drafted into service in the Civil war, and was mustered in Nov. 12, 1862, to serve a nine months' term in Company I, 166th P. V. I., served his full time, of which was spent stationed at Suffolk, Va., and was discharged at Harrisburg with an honorable record. After his term of service had expired, Mr. McCleary returned home, and resumed his trade of carpentering, in his spare time attending to his farm. In 1878 he abandoned his trade and devoted his whole time to farming, working but once at carpentering after that year, when he built a barn for John Kilgore.

In 1872 Mr. McCleary married Miss Ellen Grove, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Thompson) Grove. Mrs. McCleary was born in 1835, and died in 1901. She had been a devoted member of the U. P. Church at Airville from girlhood, and was a good Christian woman. Mr. McCleary joined the Chanceford Presbyterian Church before marriage, and later became a member of the Pine Grove Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a stanch Republican. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. McCleary, Mary J., who resides at home with her father.

EDWIN S. MINNICH. The enterprise, industry and determination essential to a successful career in any field of human endeavor, are possessed in a significant degree by Edwin S. Minnich, who conducts a large and prosperous business at Brillhart, where he is a dealer in agricultural implements and machinery, and also retains a general supervision of his fine York township farm. He was born on a farm in Spring Garden township, York county, Dec. 7, 1852, son of Reuben F. Minnich, who was one of the honored and influential citizens of that section of the county.

The first representative of the Minnich family in York county was Simon Minnich, the great-grandfather of Edwin S., and the name has been identified with the annals of the State from a very early period in its history, as is evident from the fact that this Simon Minnich was born in Berks county, Pa., about the year 1756. It is ascertained that he made his advent in York county on or about the 7th of April, 1786, and settled in Spring Garden township, where he took up a large tract of wild land and forthwith reclaimed it from the wilderness. A portion of this land is still in the possession of his descendants. He also became the owner of a large tract in Manchester township, where he passed the closing years of his life. Of the children of this worthy pioneer ancestor, his namesake, Simon, Jr., was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch.

Simon Minnich, Jr., was born in Spring Garden township, York county, in 1786, and was reared amid the environments and influences of the pioneer era, early beginning to lend his aid in the task of developing and cultivating the home farm, while his educational advantages were, of course, limited, owing to the exigencies of time and place. He became a successful farmer of Spring Garden township, continuing to reside on the old homestead until the close of his life and ever retaining the high regard of his fellow-men. His remains rest in the Prospect Hill cemetery, in his native township, as do also those of his beloved and devoted wife, whose maiden name was Lena Geiselman. They had three sons—George, Simon and Reuben F., all of whom are now deceased. The daughters were Harriet, Lena and Susan, all being deceased except Lena.

Reuben F. Minnich, father of Edwin S., was born on the ancestral homestead, in Spring Garden township, May 14, 1824, and there was reared to maturity, receiving a good common-school education and in due time making for himself a place among the prominent and successful farmers of the county, while he so ordered his life in all its relations as to gain and retain the confidence and esteem of all with whom he came in contact, being a man of sterling integrity and one who stood as an exponent of the highest type of citizenship.
He eventually purchased the old homestead upon which he was born, and there continued to reside until he was summoned to that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no driver returns," his death having occurred on Oct. 14, 1894, while interment was made in the Prospect Hill cemetery, where rest the bodies of his honored parents. In 1851 was solemnized the marriage of Reuben F.
Minnich to Miss Elizabeth Spangler, who was born in Jackson township, York county, in the year 1829, being a daughter of Zacharias Spangler, who was a member of one of the prominent pioneer families of the county. Mrs.
Minnich survived her husband and now resides in the city of York. She is a devoted member of the Lutheran church, while her husband belonged to the German Reformed church. In his political affiliations Mr. Minnich was a Democrat. Of their children Edwin S., of this sketch, was the first born; Emma is the wife of Aaron F. Loucks, of Spring Garden township; Agnes married Abraham Kauffman and is now deceased; Leander, who married Clara Illyes, resides on the old homestead in Spring Garden township, having inherited the property after his father's death; Ezra P. married Miss Mary Seigle and they reside in the city of York; Priscilla and Simon died in childhood; Flora B. and Rosa E. are twins, the former being the wife of Newton Glattfelter, of York, while the latter is unmarried and resides with her mother in York.

Edwin S. Minnich secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of his native township, while he continued to be as-associated with his father in the work and management of the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-seven years. Shortly after his marriage he located on his present place, which is one of the model farms of York township, comprising seventy-seven acres of most arable and productive land, while the improvements are of superior order, including a commodious and attractive residence and other substantial and well equipped buildings. Mr.
Minnich gave his undivided attention to the management of his farm until 1897, when he embarked in the implement business at Brill-hart, a station on the line of the Northern Central railway, and in the immediate vicinity of his homestead farm. There he erected a large warehouse, which affords accommodation for his extensive stock of farming implements and machinery of the best standard manufacture, while his business shows a satisfactory increase in scope and importance each successive year. The enterprise is one of the largest of its kind in this part of the county, and its proprietor is known as a progressive, reliable and enterprising business man. In addition to the farming implements of minor order he also handles all kinds of farm machinery, including grain drills, binders, mowers, rakes, tedders, horse powers, threshers, separators, grain fans, farm wagons and other vehicles, plows, spring harrows, spike harrows, rollers, corn planters and shellers, feed cutters, silos, etc. During a portion of each season also Mr. Minnich is on the road as traveling salesman for one of the leading silo manufactories of the Union. In politics he is a stanch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, while he has ever shown a loyal interest in public affairs of a local nature, having served as township auditor and county committeeman, of which latter office he was an incumbent for three terms. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, but is not formally identified with any religious body; his first wife was a consistent and active member of the Lutheran Church.

On Dec. 23, 1870, Mr. Minnich was united in marriage to Miss Ellen A. Henry, who was born in Springfield township, July 29, 1854, being a daughter of John R. and Lydia Henry. No children were born to this union. Mr. Henry was a member of one of the old and prominent families of the county and was an influential citizen and prosperous farmer of Springfield township. He was at one time county poor director, while he also served with marked acceptability in the various township offices. Mrs. Minnich was summoned to eternal rest Dec. 22, 1902, and her remains were interred in the Schusters Church cemetery, Springfield township. She was a woman of gracious personality and had a wide circle of friends in her native county. On May 14, 1905, Mr. Minnich was joined in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mrs. Ida C. (Smith) Gotwalt, widow of William Gotwalt, and a native of Washington township, York county.

JOHN HENRY ANDERSON, of Fawn township, was born on the old homestead near Fawn Grove, York county, at present the residence of Reed W. Anderson, Sept. 9, 1835, son of Joseph Reed and Elizabeth (Wilson) Anderson. The paternal grandparents were John and Agnes (Duncan) Anderson, both of whom were born near Felton, York county, and always lived in that section. Their children were: James and Robert, of Illinois; David, of Kentucky; William, who died in Fawn township, unmarried; Easter, who married Thomas McAllister; and Joseph Reed.

Joseph Reed Anderson, who died in 1873, chose for his wife Elizabeth Wilson, and to their union were born children as follows: John H.; Joseph W., of Stewartstown, a director of the York County Agricultural Society, president of the Stewartstown railway, and a director of the Stewartstown First National bank; Reed W., of Fawn township; Agnes M., wife of J. A. C. Gailey; Ellen, wife of D. A. Wilson, of Gatchelville; Sarah E., Mrs. Zenas Dougherty, and Rachel A., wife of John M. Brown. Mrs. Elizabeth (Wilson) Anderson, who died in 1882, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson, the latter of whom belonged to the well-known Manifold family. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were: four sons, who died in early manhood; Rachel, Mrs. John Wiley, of Fawn Grove; Jane, wife of Jacob Gladden, of Rocks, Md.; Mary, Mrs. Robert Kilgore; Sarah, wife of Samuel Wallace, of Pylesville, Md., and Martha, wife of James Galbreath, of Highland, Maryland.

John H. Anderson was educated in the public schools of Fawn township, and after finishing his education engaged in farming, which has since been his main occupation, although of late he has given over the management of his farms to one of his sons. He has since been a figure in the local business world, and was one of the founders of the First National Bank of Delta, of which he is still a director. He is also an active worker in the Center Presbyterian Church, in which his father was an elder for many years and where he serves as a trustee. In 1867 Mr. Anderson was married to Elizabeth, daughter of David and Jane (Manifold) Wilson, and to their union have been born: Joseph Clay, who married Emma Lanius, and is in business in Stewartstown; Harry M., who has entire charge of his father’s farming interests, and D. Ross, who holds a clerical position with his brother, Joseph Clay.

Both the Wilson and Manifold families, with which Mrs. Anderson is connected, have long been well-known in Pennsylvania. David Wilson, Mrs. Anderson’s father, was one of three sons—David, John and James. His wife, who was Jane Manifold, was one of a family of ten, as follows: Jane; Eliza, Mrs. Salem Manifold; Ellen, Mrs. John Manifold; Mary, wife of David Collins; Sarah, wife of Robert Smith; Amanda, Mrs. Matthew McCall; Alexander and Joseph Wilson (twins), Clarkson and Samuel, who are all deceased. David and Jane Wilson were themselves the parents of Elizabeth, Mrs. Anderson; James, of Minnesota; Henry, deceased; Alexander; John H.; Amanda J., wife of William N. McAlister, of Laurel, Pa., and Helena, who died in childhood. The Wilsons and Andersons alike are of Scotch-Irish ancestry and inherit in a marked degree the sterling qualities of that sturdy race. Many of them have been distinguished both in peace and war; James, Henry and Alexander Wilson all served in the Civil war, and the very names carry with them the assurance of genuine manliness, honor and ability.

For several years Mr. Anderson has been interested in the project of building a line of railroad between Stewartstown and Fawn Grove, and in February, 1905, the New Park & Fawn Grove Railroad Co. was organized and incorporated with the following officers: John H. Anderson, president; John C. Wiley, vice-president; J. A. Gailey, secretary; and A. M. Strawbridge, treasurer. The board of directors consists of Simon G. Low, H. C. McElwain, A. M. Strawbridge, B. F. Morris, Milton E. Smith, N. A. Manifold, J. A. Gailey, J. Wiley Norris, J. W. Anderson, R. W. Anderson, W. R. Welb, Maurice Davis, R. S. McDonald, H. S. Merryman, John C. Wiley, A. W. Webb and M. W. Bahn. The road was to be completed early in 1906.

DAVID H. STROMINGER, a retired farmer of Fairview township, was born there March 25, 1833, and is of German origin, being a son of John Strominger and a grandson of Michael Strominger. Jacob Strominger, the great-grandfather of David H., married Magdalena Haas in 1761, and was one of the early settlers of Hellam township, York county, where he followed farming all of his life. His son, Michael, was born in that township, and in 1802 located near Lewisberry borough, Fairview township, where he bought a tract of land, consisting of about 300 acres, upon which he followed farming and distilling. With Dr. Lewis, of Lewisberry, Mr. Strominger purchased a tract in Newberry township, for which they paid $10,000. After Mr. Strominger had bought the interest of Dr. Lewis he was offered $5,000 for the land, which offer he refused, and was later obliged to accept $2,500 for the property. Michael Strominger married Rachael Peterman, of York, and died at the age of seventy-seven years, his wife surviving him until her eighty-seventh year. She was buried at St. John’s Lutheran cemetery at Lewisberry; Fairview township, and he was interred in the old Lutheran cemetery opposite Lewisberry. The following children were born to them: Jacob, who died in 1849; Michael, who died in 1873; Daniel, who died at the age of seventeen years; John, who died young; John (II), the father of David H.; Henry, who lived to the age of sixty-eight years; Elizabeth, married Benjamin Millard and died in Fairview township; Mary, married Henry Grissinger, and died in Fairview township; Catherine, married George Traver and died in the same township; Rebecca, married Henry Drorbaugh, and died there, and Sarah, who married John Millard, died in Conewago township.

John Strominger, the father, was born in 1807, in Fairview township and received a common-school education. At the age of eighteen years he drove a team to Baltimore for his father, and followed this occupation for a few years. At the age of twenty-five Mr. Strominger married Rachel Kilmore, a daughter of David and Elizabeth (Malone) Kilmore, and for a time after that event he farmed on the homestead on shares. At the death of his father, Mr. Strominger bought the homestead, where he remained until his death, in 1876, in his sixty-ninth year. Mrs. Strominger was born in 1810, and lived to the ripe old age of eighty years. Both she and her husband are buried at the St. John’s Lutheran cemetery. In politics he was a Democrat. The children born to this worthy couple were: David H.; Harriet, who married J. F. Zinn, lives in Fairview township; Elizabeth, living in Upper Allen township, Cumberland county, is the widow of Samuel B. Timmer; Michael K., married Catherine Hobough, and died in York in 1886, being buried at St. John’s Lutheran cemetery; Catherine Ann, lives at Lisburn, Cumberland county; Jacob, died at the age of fourteen years; Rebecca, married William B. Laird and died in Fairview township; Rachel, married J. A. Kann and lives at Lisburn, Cumberland county, and John Andrew, who married Adeline Eichelberger, lives on the old homestead in Fairview township.

David H. Strominger received his education in the township schools, attending them until twenty-one years of age. He then assisted his father for five years; then farmed on shares for his father seven years, after which he bought the homestead of seventy-seven acres which he now owns. He rebuilt his barn in 1882, and his house, which is one of the finest stone residences in the county, he erected in 1884. In 1858 Mr. Strominger married Elizabeth V. Hart, a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Moore) Hart, and the following children have been born to this union: John C., who died at the age of twenty-five years; Elizabeth, who resides at home; Elmer E., who married Ellen Troup, lives at Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county; Jacob H., David H., Joseph H., and Clyde, all died young; and Mary H., who lives at Jamison City, Columbia county, married Gordon Gray, a Methodist minister of the Danville district. Mr. Strominger has always lived on his farm, with the exception of two winters, when he went to Mechanicsburg in order to secure for his daughter, Mary H., the best of educational advantages. He has been very successful, and in 1902 was able to retire from active labors, since which time he has lived a quiet, domestic life. He has, however, many financial interests, being a director of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which office he has held for six years. In politics Mr. Strominger is a Democrat, favoring Prohibition, and officially has served three years as school director. He is identified with the M. E. Church of Lewisberry, in which he is steward, trustee and class-leader.

JACOB KIRK SEACRIST, carpenter and builder, and chief of the fire department of York, Pa., is the junior member of the firm of Adam W. & Jacob K. Seacrist, contractors and builders, conveniently located at No. 238 South Duke street. In connection with their constructive operations, the firm operate a planing mill, engage in stair-building and manufacture all kinds of house furnishings, and interior decorations for dwellings and churches. Jacob K. Seacrist is a native of York, born Dec. 2, 1859, son of Jacob and Mary E. (Killer) Seacrist.

Jacob Seacrist, the father, was born in York county, Manchester township, in 1828, and died in 1892. He was a son of Henry Seacrist, a native of York county, who was one of the prosperous farmers of his day. Mrs. Seacrist was born in Baltimore, Md., but her parents were natives of Germany. About 1860, Jacob Seacrist embarked in the business of contracting and building, and continued in that line until within three years of his demise. He was a skilled workman and a man of prominence, popular and universally respected.

Jacob K. Seacrist finished his education in the public schools of York, and at the age of sixteen commenced to learn the trade of a carpenter under his father. He continued with him until he was twenty-one years of age, when he married, and began working as a journeyman. In 1890, Mr. Seacrist formed a co-partnership with his father, under the style of Jacob Seacrist & Sons, which continued until the death of the former in 1892, when the present name was adopted, his brother, Adam W., becoming the senior member. The planing mill, built in 1878, is 50 x 60 feet, two stories in height, and fully equipped with the latest and most improved machinery and appliances, a large force of men being employed in season. Both the partners are excellent mechanics and practical business men, and give their personal supervision to their work. The volume of their business shows a healthy and steady increase, and the firm is numbered among the leaders in the building trade of York.

Mr. Seacrist married Susan Spangler, who was born in York, daughter of Adam Spangler, and they are the parents of one son, George Kirk. Mr. Seacrist has been connected with the fire department since his seventeenth year, and has filled all its offices. For some years, prior to 1902, he was the assistant chief, and when he was chosen in that year to become its head, the people of York felt that great wisdom had been displayed; and he has proved a most efficient official. Fraternally Mr. Seacrist is a member of Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451, A. F. & A. M.; Howell Chapter No. 199, R. A. M.; Gethsemane Commandery, No. 75, K. T.; and Zembo Shrine A. A. O. N. M. S.; and the Council. Mr. Seacrist is also connected with York Lodge No. 213; B. P. O. E.; the Improved Order of Heptasophs; the Keystone Fire Chiefs Association; the York Guardian Trust Company, and the York City Market Company, as well as other organizations both fraternal and commercial, and in all of them he has made his influence felt. Mr. and Mrs. Seecrist are prominent members of Duke Street Methodist Church, and are very highly esteemed people. In his political affiliations Mr. Seecrist is a valued member of the Republican party, and in April, 1903, was elected city controller of York. He resides in the First ward.

JOHN F. SNYDER, of Fairview township, York county, was born Dec. 28, 1839, in Manchester township, son of Henry and Mary (Frey) Snyder. The great-grandfather of John F. Snyder was Christian Snyder, who came from Switzerland with two brothers, and, coming up the Susquehanna river, located at the place where the State capital now stands. Mr. Snyder erected and owned the first building built there and here it was that Christian Snyder, the grandfather of our subject, was born Oct. 27, 1768. He followed farming in Manchester township, where he owned a large tract of land near the well known Brillioner mill, and there he died Sept. 20, 1839. He married Annie Lehman, born Oct. 13, 1769, who died July 21, 1834, at the age of sixty-four years, and both she and her husband were buried in the family burial ground in Manchester township. The children born to this worthy couple were as follows: John, born Feb. 8, 1793, died April 10, 1863; Christian, Jr., born Sept. 15, 1795, died in April, 1877; Jacob, born Feb. 4, 1798, died July 20, 1882; Abraham, born July 22, 1799, died at the age of seventy-two years; Peter, born Jan. 5, 1801, died at the age of twenty-one years; Henry, the father of John F.; Daniel, born Sept. 10, 1805, died Jan. 20, 1873; Elizabeth, born May 18, 1808, died May 3, 1891; and Magdalena, born Aug. 1, 1814, died Jan. 19, 1900.

Henry Snyder was born in Dauphin county, Oct. 30, 1802, being two years of age when he was brought to Manchester township, where he reached manhood and engaged in farming. He later removed to Fishing Creek Valley, Fairview township, where he bought a fine farm, upon which he died July 12, 1887. Mr. Snyder was one of the charter members of the Fairview Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and was well known in business circles as a man of honesty and integrity. He married Mary Frey (born March 8, 1816), and died at midnight, July 12, 1887. His wife passed away Aug. 20, 1856; both are buried at Salem Church, in Fairview township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Snyder were as follows: Emanuel, born Nov. 2, 1834, lives on the old home in Fairview township; Eliza, born Dec. 8, 1835; Samuel, born Feb. 18, 1837, married Lydia Ginter (deceased), and they live near Springfield, O.; Maria A., born Dec. 4, 1838, died young; John F.; Susan, born Dec. 6, 1842, married John Sheelly (deceased), and lives at New Cumberland; Peter, born March 14, 1844, married Jane Sultzenberger, and they live at Lewisberry, Newberry township; Mattie, born Jan. 13, 1846, is the widow of John Rupp, who was a soldier in the Civil war; Elizabeth, born Feb. 13, 1848, died in infancy; Annie, born June 1, 1849, died at the age of twenty-four years; Henry, born Jan. 10, 1850, married Ellen Ebersole, and lives in Fairview township, and Amanda, born Nov. 10, 1850, wife of John Ryan, died at the age of twenty-four years.

John F. Snyder, the fifth child of the family, was eleven years old when he came with his father to Fairview township. He attended the township schools until he was eighteen years of age and then learned the blacksmith's trade at Lewisberry, which he followed for about two and one-half years. In the first call for men for the Civil war Mr. Snyder enlisted in Company H, 47th P. V. I., at Harrisburg. He participated in a number of engagements, being in the battle of Cedar Creek, where he was wounded in the ear and the back of the head, and taken prisoner. He was confined in the hospital one month, then confined for two months in Libby prison, and was released by exchange. For bravery on the field Mr. Snyder was promoted from the ranks to a sergeantship. He has an honorable war record, and is one of the few living soldiers who took part in Sheridan's memorable ride to Winchester. Sergeant Snyder was honorably discharged in January, 1866, at Philadelphia, after which he returned to York county.

For a time after the war Mr. Snyder worked as a day laborer. In December, 1868, he married Annie S. Freed, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Schroll) Freed, of Freystown, York county, the couple locating in Hampden township, Cumberland county, where for two years Mr. Snyder engaged in farming. They then removed to Lower Allen township, Cumberland county, where the husband continued to work by the day until March, 1803, when he removed to his present home, which he purchased from Michael Shuller, and which consists of fifty-two acres of fine land in Fairview township, near Yocumtown. Since acquiring the property Mr. Snyder has erected good buildings and has made many improvements thereon, being now the owner of a good, productive farm.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Snyder are as follows: S. Alda, who married William Clouser, is living at Shiremanstown, Cumberland county; Frank S., who married Ada Eichelberger, is living at the same place; Joseph H., who married Ida Slosser, resides at Penbrook, Dauphin county, where he is engaged in the bakery business; Howard W. is employed as an iron-worker in South Chicago, and is single; and Florence E., unmarried, is residing on the homestead.

Although never aspiring to political office Mr. Snyder is a staunch Republican and always takes a great interest in the success of his party. Mrs. Snyder is a consistent member of the United Brethren Church, to which Mr. Snyder is a liberal contributor. Mr. Snyder is regarded as a good farmer, is highly esteemed as a citizen, and has countless friends throughout Fairview township.

MICHAEL HEINDEL, a farmer in Windsor township, was born on the family homestead near Windsor, Dec. 24, 1831, son of Michael and Elizabeth (Oberdorff) Heindel, and is the third of his name to live in that section. The grandfather was perhaps born in Germany, but came to Windsor township from Maryland, where he had married a Miss Lutz, bought the homestead, and settled and died there.

Michael Heindel (2) was born in Maryland, but settled in Pennsylvania in early manhood. He was given a common-school education, principally in the German language. Brought up to farming he carried on the homestead after his father's death, and himself passed away there in March, 1861, aged sixty-two. His wife was Elizabeth Oberdorff, an aunt of John T. Oberdorff, of Windsor township, who survived her husband for a number of years and died at the age of eighty-four. Their children were: Charlotte, Mrs. Henry Shaffer, deceased; Joshua, who married (first) Nancy Tice and (second) Lizzie Fry, and died in Yorkana; Samuel, who married Henrietta Shenberger, and moved to Michigan, where he died; Elizabeth, Mrs. John R. Green, of Dallastown; Rudolph, deceased; Michael; and William, who married Catherine Walk, and died in York. The father of the family was a member of the United Brethren Church, and in politics was first a Whig, then a Democrat, and finally, before his death, was converted to Republican principles. He served in several township offices.

Michael Heindel (3) attended the village school at Windsor, located where the Finchbaugh store now stands, and his first teacher was John Anstine. Those were primitive days, and the seats in the old log building were made from logs cut in two, with holes bored for the legs. At first a subscription school, it later became a part of the public school system, and the term was lengthened from three months to four. Leaving school at the age of eighteen, Mr. Heindel worked the next year for his father, and then commenced the shoemaker's trade with his brother Joshua, at Yorkana. In those days all shoes were made by hand, and so constant was the demand for their work that the brothers labored day and night. At the end of two years Joshua Heindel sold his shop to Abraham Hartzler, under whom Michael continued at the trade two years longer. After another two years spent on the farm working for his father, he married and settled on the homestead, where he labored one year more before buying a farm for himself. He purchased his present place, a tract of eighty-five acres, and in 1885 erected the present family residence. When he began his married life, his only property was an old horse and wagon, but he worked hard, was economical, and in the end became a prosperous farmer. A Republican in his politics, he has taken an active part in local affairs, and has filled efficiently some of the minor township offices. He is a member of the United Brethren Church of Windsor.

The marriage of Mr. Heindel to Catherine Fry occurred Dec. 23, 1855. Mrs. Heindel was the daughter of Frederick K. and Elizabeth (Tyson) Fry, and was born at Springvale, but reached womanhood in what is now Yorkana, whither her father moved when she was a child. Frederick K. Fry was born at Springvale, was a miller by trade, and died at Yorkana aged sixty-three. His wife passed away in the same town at the age of seventy. Both belonged to the Evangelical faith. A large family was born to Michael and Catherine Heindel, as follows: Reuben F., Aug. 29, 1860, who married Susan Sites, and lives on his father's farm; Uriah Alvin, Jan. 18, 1857, who died aged six; Amanda Elizabeth, July 12, 1865, who married the late Ellsworth Heiner; Ida E., July 15, 1866, Mrs. Peter Schmuck, of Windsor; Michael E., March 26, 1874, who married Esther Waughtel, and lives at Red Lion; Joshua Harvey and Anna Rebecca (twins), June 21, 1877, the former deceased Nov. 24, 1884, and the latter living at home.

WILLIAM G. MCDOWELL. The McDowell family was established in America by four McDowell brothers, who came from the North of Ireland and settled in the lower end of York county. There two of the brothers remained, while the other two went South.

John McDowell, the grandfather of William G., was born in either Lower or Upper Chanceford townships, probably near Bethel church, in the latter township, where he was the owner of a farm and a substantial man of his time. His first wife's name was Patterson, and his second was Jane Reed, who was born on the Reed homestead, now occupied by William G. McDowell. Mrs. McDowell's grandfather, John Reed, came from Ireland, and with his son, also named John Reed, took up 320 acres in Lower Chanceford township, at two different times. One of these farms, called "Craigie Mount," was owned by the son, who afterward acquired the other farm, "Sliding Fountain." John Reed (1) was a congressman, and died in Philadelphia, just before the signing of the Declaration of Independence. He had sons in the Revolutionary war. His son, John (2), married a Susan Ramsey, and they had children: Jane, the grandmother of William G. McDowell; Thomas, who moved to Ohio, and James. John Reed (2) married for his second wife Agnes Modderwell, of Lancaster county, and she bore him several children: Nancy married a brother of James Buchanan, Mr. Buchanan, located in Ohio in 1825; Nancy accompanied her husband to the Buckeye State, where they reared a large family, one of the sons being a U. P. preacher. Thomas settled in Ohio with his wife and children prior to 1812, first locating in Union county and then removing to Logan county. Sarah married Samuel Moore, and after his death returned to the homestead, where she died. John died single. Martha also died unmarried.

In the spring of 1812 Grandfather McDowell loaded his property on a four-horse wagon and, with his family, set out for Union county, Ohio, and reaching his destination in safety he took up a tract of 100 acres of land. This he cleared, and fourteen years later died upon his farm. His wife died in the spring of 1861, in the faith of the Seceder Church, to which her husband had also belonged. Several children were born to Mr. McDowell and his first wife, one of the daughters marrying a Mr. Snodgrass and dying in Ohio. To the second union were born the following: John R., the father of William G.; William Glasgow, who married Rebecca Paris and lived on the homestead in Union county, Ohio; Hannah, Mrs. Paris, who died in Union county, and two children, who died when small.

John Reed McDowell was born in Upper Chanceford township in 1809, and was three years old when taken to Ohio. He was reared on the homestead near Milford Center, Union Co., Ohio, and received a common-school education. He married Mary Porter, who was born in Erie county, Pa., daughter of John Porter, who went to Erie county from York county. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. McDowell lived on a farm near the homestead, finally settling in 1850 on the farm on which he died in 1893. Mrs. Mary McDowell was killed by a fall from a wagon in 1877, and he married in 1881 a widow, Mrs. Caton, who survived him one year. Nine children were born to the first union: Robert Nelson, the first-born, enlisted in the 32d Regiment, Ohio V. I., was wounded while entering breastworks after a charge, and was captured by the Rebels; he was put in the prison at Winchester, where he was taken sick with pneumonia and died, and was buried at home. The biography of William G. follows. John Porter, the third child, enlisted as a first-call man and served three months; he then re-enlisted, in the 32d Regiment, O. V. I., and served until August, 1865, a term of four years and nine months; he was with Sherman on his march to the sea, was taken prisoner, and had a gallant record; his wife was Nettie Kise. Jesse Vincent was a private in the 40th Ohio V. I., and was drowned in the Big Sandy river, Ky., in the fall of 1862. Elizabeth Jane died at the age of nine years. Newton L. married Jennie Wright and resides in Union county, Ohio. Calvin Reed married Diadamia Dort, and resides in Topeka, Kans. Mary Ann, Mrs. Frank Gardner, died in Union county, Ohio, and Leander Carmine, of the same county, married (first) Lucinda McCampbell and (second) Orrie Reed.

William G. McDowell was born on the farm near Milford Center, Union Co., Ohio, Feb. 7, 1838, and received a common-school education, also attending Oberlin College. He was reared a farmer's boy and remained with his father until the spring of 1861, when he located in Lower Chanceford township to care for a granduncle and two grandaunts (Reeds), living with them until the close of the war. At their death he fell heir to their estate of 100 acres, and since that time had added twenty acres to the tract. When forty-five years of age Mr. McDowell contracted rheumatism from which he has been a constant sufferer for a great many years. Mr. McDowell was married in Lower Chanceford township, July 14, 1864, to Margaret Jane McCollam, who was born on the McCollam homestead near Airville, Pa., Feb. 5, 1830, daughter of Gilbert and Mary (Smith) McCollam. Mrs. McDowell became a member of the Airville U. P. Church when sixteen years old, while her husband joined the same organization in Ohio in 1838, it then being known as the Associate Church. He has been a member of the Airville United Presbyterian Church since locating in Lower Chanceford township, and has been an elder in that body for twenty-nine years. He has taught a Bible class, has been superintendent of the Sabbath-school, and has been very active in all church work, being a good Christian man. Mr. McDowell voted first for Lincoln on the Republican ticket, but for the last twenty years has been a Prohibitionist.

Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. McDowell: John Reed, the eldest, was born June 10, 1865, and educated in the common schools. He is a farmer and he has had charge of the homestead since the father's attack of sickness. He spent two years with relatives in Union county, Ohio. He is a member of the U. P. Church, was formerly secretary of the Sabbath-school, and is now trustee of the church. In politics he is a Republican. Mary, the second, resides at home. Robert Vincent, of Philadelphia, a conductor on a trolley line, married Anna White, in Chester county.

HENRY K. THOMAS, who is now living a retired life at Thomasville, Jackson township, was born April 8, 1841, in Cumberland county, son of George B. and Catherine (Ebert) Thomas and grandson of Jacob and Mary Thomas. The Thomas family are of Scotch-Irish extraction, the founders of this branch settling in Adams county, where most of them engaged in farming. They were a sober, industrious people and did much to advance the material welfare of their adopted country. Jacob Thomas owned a fine farm of 160 acres which he cultivated until his retirement, three or four years before his death. He and his wife were parents of the following children: Martin, deceased, George B., Catherine, Peggy and Polly. In religious belief they were Lutherans and Mr. Thomas was a Democrat in politics.

George B. Thomas, father of Henry K., was reared and educated in Adams county, and in 1857 removed to Heidelberg township, York county, where he engaged in farming, remaining there until 1860, when he located in Jackson township. Renting a farm, he operated it for about ten years, and then purchased a small piece of land, erected a building and established a small store, where, in 1870, the United States government installed a postoffice, giving it the name of Thomasville, after George B. Thomas, the first postmaster. The little settlement grew rapidly and the name has always stood as a monument to Mr. Thomas' memory. It is one of the flourishing little villages of York county and does quite an extensive mercantile business with the surrounding agricultural country. At the time of his death, in 1893, Mr. Thomas had reached the advanced age of eighty-three years. He was very highly respected for his honorable methods and many sterling traits of character. Very public-spirited, he was always ready to commend and assist any enterprise that his good judgment told him would benefit the community. Mr. Thomas will long be remembered as a kind and charitable man, one whose loss was keenly felt. His death removed from the township one who had always been one of its best citizens. To George B. Thomas and his wife these children were born: John, Jacob, Martin, Henry K., Mary C., Elizabeth, Maggie, Luther (deceased), and George (deceased). In religion Mr. Thomas was a devout member and liberal supporter of the Lutheran Church, in which service he was very active. Although no politician Mr. Thomas' sympathies were with the Democratic party and for twelve years was a justice of the peace. He was also a school director. Mrs. Thomas died in the year 1882, aged eighty-three years.

Henry K. Thomas received his education in the common schools of Adams and York counties and as soon as he was old enough learned the trade of blacksmith. After serving his apprenticeship he established a shop at Thomasville, and in 1867 built a dwelling which has been his permanent residence ever since. Mr. Thomas has been very successful in his chosen trade and after years of hard labor he decided, in 1895, that he would retire, having accumulated a handsome competency. Mr. Thomas' shop was one of the best stands between York and Abbottstown on the York pike.

In 1868 Henry K. Thomas married Leah latter of whom, with his brothers, settled in Spangler, daughter of George Spangler, the what is known as Spangler's Valley, Jackson township. No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas. In religion they were both active members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Thomas has long supported the principles of the Democratic party, as did his father before him, but has never aspired to public office. He has also ever striven to continue the honorable methods and name established by his father, and in this, as in his other efforts, has been signally successful. He has hosts of friends in every section of the county, who have been attracted to him by his strong, fearless and resolute character and by the unswerving integrity of his conduct.

Mrs. Thomas died Jan. 21, 1905, aged fifty-seven years, five months and twenty-one days, and was buried at Wolf's church, West Manchester township. She was generally known throughout the township, having countless friends who held her in the highest esteem as a true neighbor. Many were her benefactions of which the public knew nothing, and she was liberal in her support of worthy charitable organizations. She was a strong, good woman—a worthy companion of a substantial, true man—and her death was a permanent loss to the community.

SAMUEL F. GREGORY, one of the best known business men of York, Pa., who is engaged in the hat business on South George street, that city, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 13, 1874, son of the late William and Margaret C. (Smith) Gregory, of Philadelphia.

Mr. S. F. Gregory attended the public schools of Philadelphia, after which he was employed by John Wanamaker in the hat department of his Philadelphia store. There he remained about four years, at the end of which time he accepted a position as hat salesman in a wholesale manufacturing house for which he traveled through the eastern States. The next eight years were spent in charge of the hat department of Wanamaker & Brown. He then came to York, and on April 3, 1905, engaged in business on his own account. Through his conscientious business methods and his fair treatment of customers, Mr. Gregory has built up one of the best businesses in his line in the city, and his trade is increasing steadily.

Mr. Gregory married M. Isabella McCleery, of Philadelphia, and they, with their two children, reside at No. 425 Lincoln street. Mr. Gregory is a member of Covenant Lodge, No. 161, F. & A. M.; the York Lodge, No. 47, I. O. O. E.; Washington Camp, No. 655, P. O. S. of A.; St. John's Assembly, No. 28, A. O. M. P.; and the P. H. C., No. 570.

EDWIN T. BENTZ. The government of York county is in the hands of as efficient a body of men as have ever honored the different offices in the county courthouse. All had acquired a valuable experience in the private walks of life before assuming public office and were of high character and standing in their different communities. Edwin T. Bentz, assumed the office of Recorder of Deeds on the first Monday of 1903 at the behest of the Democratic voters expressed in the election of the previous fall.

Mr. Bentz is a native of York county, where the family have been worthy and leading farmers for the most part in North Codorus township for the past hundred years. His grandfather, Michael Bentz, was a hale and hearty man even up to his death at eighty-two years. This likewise was the advanced age reached by Peter, Mr. Bentz' father. Both passed their lives on farms in North Codorus township. Peter Bentz married Sarah Tyson, daughter of Henry Tyson, who passed away while on his North Codorus farm at the age of eighty-seven. They had three sons, Franklin T., a well known farmer of North Codorus township; Michael T., who likewise resides in that township, and Edwin T.

Born on the old homestead in North Codorus township, Nov. 26, 1856, Edwin T. Bentz grew up with the advantages of a good home, whose head believed that boys and work made a very proper mixture. Lessons of economy, industry and thrift taught in those early days yet cling to him, and are the index to the success which has followed him through life. He received an ordinary country school education and in his young manhood was apprenticed to the carpenter's trade, a vocation which he has followed at different times since. He worked at his trade during the first fifteen years of his career, and then returned to the occupation honored by his ancestry, purchasing a 40-acre farm in North Codorus township. After a decade there he entered the carriage factory of S. E. Baily & Co., at York, as a bodymaker, and it was while engaged there in November, 1902, that he was elected on the Democratic ticket to the office of recorder. There is a seeming inconsistency in this change of occupation from a mechanical to a clerical life, and yet Mr. Bentz early demonstrated the entire wisdom of the change.

The wife of Mr. Bentz' youth is now deceased. Her maiden name was Barbara Messersmith, and her father was a worthy farmer of North Codorus township. Eight children were born to her, five of whom survive, as follows: Chauncey F., farmer; Anna K., Mrs. Charles Harold, North Codorus; Bertha, wife of Andrew G. Myers, who is in the employ of the S. Morgan Smith Sons Co., at York; Claudie, wife of Daniel Krout, a farmer of Springfield township; and Lydia J., now Mrs. Allen N. Moss, of North Codorus. The mother of these children died in May of 1889, and on the last day of the following year he married her sister, Sarah Messersmith. Three children have been born of this union: Barbara, who died in infancy; and Ada and Peter Bryant.

The life of Edwin T. Bentz has not been a spectacular one. He has accepted opportunities and issues as they have been presented, failing in many, succeeding in some—the story of average humanity. But amid it all it can be truly said of him that he has kept his integrity intact and his honor unsullied. He has been a lifelong worker in the Reformed Church, with membership in St. Paul's of Stoverstown, acting at different periods as deacon and elder of that organization. His fraternal connection is with the P. O. S. A.

JOSEPH WILT, who owns and occupies a fertile, well-cultivated farm in Fairview township, is at the present time acting in the capacity of school director. He was born in Fishing Creek Valley, March 2, 1849, son of William Wilt.

Michael Wilt, the grandfather of Joseph, was a farmer of Manchester borough, Manchester township, where he died, the father of these children: Henry; William; John, of Perry county; Daniel, of Kansas; Catherine, the wife of John Prowell; Susan, the wife of James Prowell, and Lydia A., the wife of John Zeigler, of York. William Wilt received a common-school education, and on attaining maturity commenced farming in Fishing Creek Valley, later working on Dr. Young's farm in Cumberland county. He returned to York county, and farmed property then owned by Peter Bricker, now known as the Moser place. He then located at Slate Hill, returning to Fishing Creek Valley in 1861 and purchasing the Michael Smith farm of 133 acres in 1865. This he operated for a number of years, greatly improving it and building upon it a residence in which he lived until 1885. He then lived retired for a number of years in New Cumberland, prior to his death, April 2, 1903, at the age of seventy-nine. William Wilt married Sarah Smith, daughter of Michael and Catherine Smith, and she died in July, 1862, being interred, as was her husband, at Mt. Olivel cemetery, Fairview township. Mr. Wilt was a Republican in political faith. He was a faithful member of the Lutheran Church of Fairview township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilt were: John, who was killed by an elevator at Steelton, in April, 1884; Joseph; Harry, who is in the furniture and undertaking business at Steelton, Dauphin county, married a Miss Gross; Julia, the wife of Lewis Kilmore, lives in New Cumberland, and Ella, the wife of Jacob LeFevre, also lives in New Cumberland.

Joseph Wilt attended the township schools until seventeen years of age, and then commenced to work for his father on the homestead. In 1869 he married Sarah J. Beckley, daughter of Jesse and Susan (Hare) Beckley, of Fairview township. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Wilt located on his father's farm, and then removed to Mr. Beckley's farm, where he remained four years. In 1874 they returned to the paternal homestead, remaining there three years, after which he passed a short time in Kansas. He returned to Pennsylvania and located in New Cumberland, Cumberland county, where he remained three years. In 1884 he purchased his father's farm, where he has since been engaged in farming and butchering, attending the Harrisburg markets. Mr. Wilt is one of the substantial business men and good citizens of the township, and is held in the highest esteem by his neighbors and associates generally.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilt have had these children: Russel, who died when thirteen months old; Susan, died when seven weeks old; one infant, deceased; Adam, who died when nineteen days old, and Lloyd B., who attended Shippensburg Normal school, from which he was graduated in 1900, taught school at the Hickory Grove school, Fairview township, and is now assisting his father on the farm. In politics Mr. Wilt is a Republican, and is serving his township most acceptably as a school director.

Jesse Beckley, Mrs. Wilt's father, was born in Baltimore county, Md., as were her mother and herself. He came to Pennsylvania, in 1858, and settled in Fairview township, where he farmed upon property which he purchased. He was a prominent farmer and a very active man, living in retirement for several years previous to his death, which occurred in 1897, at the age of eighty-one years. His wife is still living, aged seventy-six. Eight children were born to this worthy couple, viz.: Sarah J., Mary E., Arietta, William H., John Q., David, Elmer and Susan.

Michael Hoke, grandfather of Dr. Hoke, was born in York county, and was a substantial farmer and hotel keeper. His hospitality was widely known and largely patronized by the old settlers, and is remembered by them to this day for its kindly hospitality. He lived to be eighty-four years of age. The maternal grandfather was Henry Hershey, his daughter, mother of Dr. Hoke, being born on his farm, one-half mile east of Spring Grove, Jackson township, in 1819; she died in 1884, and was buried in the old Pidgeon Hill churchyard.

Henry Hoke was born in Jackson township, in 1818, and died in 1892. The greater portion of his life was spent in farming, but in 1882 he purchased the store property in Nashville. In 1883 he moved to the Nashville property, where he and one of the younger sons (George) engaged in the general mercantile business, which was continued until his death. The old Hoke homestead, containing 118 acres, was located three miles northeast of Spring Grove, in the rich valley of Jackson township. This property was originally improved by Henry Hoke, and after his death was purchased by George E. Sprenkle. Twelve children were born to Henry Hoke and his wife, eight sons and four daughters, all of whom lived to maturity: Elizabeth N., married E. B. Sprenkle; William, a farmer; Emanuel H., a resident of Fulton county, Ill.; Henry, also of Fulton county; Sarah, who married Peter Bott, and resides in York county; Eliza, who married Wesley Little; Jacob, contractor and carpenter, residing at Thomasville, York county, Pa.; Joseph, deceased in 1882; Amanda, who married Felix Bentzle (died in 1903), and is a resident of York county; Martin; George, at present a prosperous merchant of Nashville, Pa.; Michael a resident of McSherrystown, and a farmer of Adams county.

Dr. Martin Hoke was reared upon the farm, attending the district schools in the winter, and there laying the foundations of an excellent education. Later, he was a student at the York Academy for two years, afterward taking up the study of medicine and reading with Dr. John Weist of Jackson township. When prepared, he attended Jefferson Medical College for three years, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1881. After his graduation, Dr. Hoke located at Spring Grove, where he has since continued in general and successful practice. In 1886, he opened a drug store, and conducts it in conjunction with his practice.

In November, 1884, Dr. Hoke married Harriet Swartz, of Spring Grove, daughter of Deterich Swartz, and Anna (Hoke) Swartz, of Adams county, Pa. They have had no children. Dr. Hoke is a member of York County Medical Society, the State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. In addition to his other interests, Dr. Hoke is a stockholder and director of the First National Bank, of Spring Grove, having been connected with it since its organization. He is an excellent, scholarly physician and thorough business man, whose friends are to be found throughout the entire county. Taking a deep interest in educational matters, Dr. Hoke has served upon the school board for three years, and was a member of the town council for the same length of time. He and his wife are prominent memers of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. They reside in a pleasant home, where the Doctor's office is also located, and there they dispense a warm and gracious hospitality to their many friends.

SAMUEL RIDER. The status of every city, town and community is determined almost entirely by the character of their business men, their reliability, enterprise, integrity and fidelity to contracts and agreements, and their loyalty and public spirit as citizens. York county is specially favored in the class of men who make up its quota of business factors, and of these men Samuel Rider holds high prestige as a successful and enterprising manufacturer and as a citizen of sterling character, so that he is emi-ently entitled to consideration in a publication of this character. Mr. Rider is a native of York county, born in the city of York, then a small village, May 17, 1836.

Christian Rider, his great-grandfather, passed his entire life in Germany, where he was a shingle manufacturer and a scion of one of the sterling old families of the great German empire. Three of his brothers emigrated from the Fatherland to America in the Colonial era and all served as soldiers in the Continental line during the war of the Revolution. After the close of the war they all settled near Hanover, York county, Pa., so that the family name has been linked with the annals of that section ever since the very early pioneer epoch, while not a few of the descendants of these brothers are to be found there at the present time.

Samuel Rider, son of Christian, likewise passed his entire life in Germany, but his son Christian came to America and joined his relatives in York county.

Christian Rider made the long and tedious voyage on a sailing vessel and landed in the city of Baltimore, being then twenty-five years of age. He had received good educational advantages in the Fatherland and had there learned the trade of shoemaker, so that he was well fortified to fight the battle of life on his arrival in the United States. Soon thereafter he wedded Miss Mary Summer, to whom he had become acquainted in his native land, and who had come to America on the same ship with him. After their marriage they located in Shrewsbury township, York county, where he was engaged at his trade for the ensuing two years, at the expiration of which he located in York, the county seat, where he followed the same vocation for five years. He then purchased land in York township, on the Baltimore pike, and turned his attention to its improvement and cultivation, developing a good farm and becoming one of the substantial citizens of the township. He located on this farm in 1836 and continued to reside there until 1868, when he retired from active labor and returned to the city of York, where he passed the remainder of his long and useful life, his death occurring in 1887, while his cherished and devoted wife passed away two years previously, both being laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery of the county seat. They were zealous and consistent communicants of the Catholic Church, in whose faith they reared their children, concerning whom is offered a brief record at this juncture: Ignatius and Henry both died in York township, being farmers by vocation; Samuel, of this review, was the next in order of birth; John died in the city of York, having been a tailor during the greater portion of his active career; Peter is a resident of York, where he is living retired; Mary is the wife of George Dumler, of Baltimore, Md.; Adam resides in York, where he is a grocer, and George, the youngest of the family, when last located, was a resident of Philadelphia.

Samuel Rider was reared on the old homestead, in York township, and there he continued to attend the common schools until he had attained the age of seventeen years, assisting for several years thereafter in the work of the home farm. He then learned the miller’s trade, and for five years was thus employed in the old Gotwalt mill, in York township. Thereafter he was engaged in farming until 1887, when he established his present flourishing enterprise—the manufacture of cigar boxes—which industry meets a large local demand, as York county is a prominent center for the growing and manufacture of tobacco. He purchased the old Gotwalt mill property, previously mentioned, and on the site of the mill erected his present factory which is 26x36 feet in dimensions and two and one-half stories in height. The plant is equipped with the latest improved machinery and accessories, while, in connection with the manufacture of the cigar boxes, is maintained an excellent plant in which is executed all the incidental printing on boxes, as well as the turning out of labels, stationery, etc. Employment is afforded to a corps of several skilled workmen and in the box factory about one thousand cases represent the average annual output, the product being utilized almost entirely by the cigar manufacturers in the county. Mr. Rider owns thirteen acres of land, and his commodious and attractive residence, as well as his factory, is located on this tract, the balance being devoted to general farming. He is a careful and conservative business man and one whose reputation is unassailable, and through his energy and good management has established a large and profitable trade. In politics he is found arrayed as a stanch supporter of the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and both he and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church at Paradise.

In 1862 Mr. Rider was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Decker, who was born and reared in York county, being a daughter of Elizabeth Decker; she died in 1866, leaving one son, William Henry, who is now a cigar-maker and barber in East York. On June 27, 1868, Mr. Rider consummated a second marriage, being then united to Miss Barbara Sheaffer, who was born and reared in York township, where her father, Jacob Sheaffer, was a representative farmer. In conclusion the following data are recorded concerning the children of the second marriage: Ida remains at the parental home; Alfred died at the age of twenty-two years; Mary is the wife of Charles Geinrich, of Green Hill, York county; Harry is a cigar-box manufacturer at Red Lion; and Bertha May remains a member of the home circle.

ROBERT BORTNER HYSON, owner of extensive canneries in Pennsylvania and Virginia, was born in Hopewell township, York county, Feb. 28, 1853, son of John and Margaret (Miller) Hyson. The paternal grandfather was Robert Hyson, who married a Miss Bortner, and they were the parents of three sons—Robert, Archibald and John. The maternal grandfather was John Miller, and his wife's name was Trout. To them were born the following: Samuel; David; V. Trout; Henry; John; Mary, Mrs. James Anderson; Eliza, Mrs. David Ma fret; Ann, Mrs. ambrose McGugin. John and Margaret (Miller) Hyson had a large family, viz.: Robert B.; John M., of Red Lion; Archibald, of Chicago; David F., of Hampstead, Md.; Pleasant C., of Omaha, Neb.; Jane Ann, wife of Harvey H. Anderson, of East Hopewell; Elizabeth M., Mrs. Clinton M. Johnson, of East Hopewell; Sarah M., wife of Daniel M. Brenneman, of Hopewell; Alice, for nearly twenty-five years a teacher in the Indian schools of New Mexico; Cordelia E., wife of Prof. Fairchilds, of Ohio, formerly principal of the Ada State Normal School and now a professor in Crawford College; Emma M., Mrs. John A. Wilson, of East Hopewell; Gertrude; Bertha, Mrs. Payne Manifold, of East Hopewell, and Clara, who died while a schoolgirl in 1888. John Hyson died in 1892, but his wife survives him at the age of eighty-two, and resides in East Hopewell.

Robert B. Hyson was educated in the public schools of East Hopewell township and at the Stewartstown Collegiate Institute. After he left school he taught for one session at Mt. Pleasant, Pa., where in 1876 he entered business, continuing thus until 1879. In that year he moved to Gatchellville and was a merchant there until 1887, when he disposed of his establishment, and bought a business at Bridge ton. In 1893 he added a canning to the original retail business, and in 1890 erected a creamery. These various branches have been very successfully operated, and Mr. Hyson is now managing the largest concern in Fawn township. He also operates a large canning at Hopeside, Va., where immense quantities of vegetables are put up, besides dealing in oysters and fish.

In politics a Republican, Mr. Hyson was in 1882 elected justice of the peace for Pawt township and has filled that office with the greatest credit for twenty-four consecutive years; he has also been postmaster at Bridge- ton for ten years. Moreover, he has outside business interests, being a director of the Hartley Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of York. He is a member of the Chanceford Presbyterian Church.

On April 15, 1880, Robert B. Hyson was united in marriage to Mary Elizabeth Markey, of Shrewsbury township. To them have been born the following children: Blanche, who married Harry B. Reese, of Northumberland county, Va., and is the mother of Mary E., Robert H., and John M.; Olive M., who holds an important position with her father; Mantz A. and Margie M., at school. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Hyson is a daughter of Jacob and Eliza (Trout) Markey, and the other children in the family were: Franklin, of South Carolina; Amos, of Wyoming; Elmer; Newton, of York; Riley, deceased; Annie, Mrs. John Thompson, of York; Ettie, Mrs. Wilson Rehmeyer, of Shrewsbury township; Rebecca Taylor; and Margaret Pyle, deceased.

NATHANIEL LEBER was born June 28, 1849, in Windsor township, on a farm near Canadochley church. His parents were Jacob and Eliza (Paules) Leber.

His paternal grandfather was Honeical Leber, who died in Lower Windsor township. He was a tailor by trade. His only son was Jacob, born at Yorkana in 1814, who was given a common-school education and reared as a farmer. During the last fourteen years of his life he was blind and made his home with his son Nathaniel. He was a devout member of the Reformed Church, and in politics a lifelong Democrat. He died in 1902. His wife, who was Eliza Paules, was born in Yorkana, the daughter of Michael and Rebecca (Heltzel) Paules, and died in her son's home at the age of eighty-five. She bore her husband the following children: Maria, Mrs. Reuben Neiman, deceased; Rebecca, Mrs. John Spyker, of Lower Windsor township; Jacob P., who enlisted in the Civil war in the 93rd P. V. I., and died in a Baltimore hospital of typhoid fever; Nathaniel; and Annie, Mrs. Moses Emenhei- ser, of York.

Nathaniel Leber was sent to the public schools in Lower Windsor, Hellam and York townships, in which section of the State his father lived during his boyhood. The boy was never able to attend more than three months in the year, and often less, as his help was needed at home. His first teacher was Jacob Wallace, and his last, Adam Geesey. He left school when he was eighteen, and until his marriage spent all his time working on the home farm. For twenty-two years he resided on a farm near Freysville, but in 1902 he bought his present homestead, and after renting it for a year, located upon it, and in 1904 erected thereon a handsome residence. He has been industrious, energetic and progressive, and has made a decided success of his operations. In politics Mr. Leber is a Democrat, but not an office seeker or an active politician. Eight years ago he united with the Freysville Reformed Church, and has served four years as deacon and two as elder.

On Sept. 14, 1889, Mr. Leber was married by Rev. Kehl to Irene Seaks, born in North Hopewell township, Jan. 22, 1871, daughter of John and Sarah (Ziegler) Seaks. To this union have been born three children, namely: Jacob, July 8, 1900; Sarah Jane, Aug. 10, 1902, and Milton S., Nov. 30, 1904.

John Seaks, father of Mrs. Leber, was born in Germany, and emigrated to America with his parents at the age of fourteen, landing at Baltimore. After living some years in Maryland, they removed to York county. John had attended school in both Germany and Maryland. He was married in North Hopewell township to Miss Ziegler, who was a native of York county, daughter of Michael and Henrietta (Newhouse) Ziegler. At first a miller, Mr. Seaks was afterward a farmer and lived a number of years in Springfield township, where he died in 1902. His wife is still living, aged fifty-two. She is the mother of nine children: Mrs. Leber; Henrietta, Mrs. Milton Streawig; Carrie, Mrs. Samuel Anstine, of Glen Rock; Laura, Mrs. Riley Smith, of Red Lion; Howard, at home; Cora; Louise; John; and Roy. Mrs. Leber's grandfather was Herman Seaks, who married Mary Millendore, and lived and died on his farm in Springfield township.

ADAM ELLIS, proprietor of the Cross Keys Hotel of Chanceford township, was born in that township, York county, Pa., on Jan. 1, 1868, son of Benjamin and Kate (Kopp) Ellis. The father was a farmer and died in the township about 1888, his wife surviving him until 1894. In politics he was a Democrat, while in religion he was a member of the United Brethren Church.

Adam Ellis attended the Gipe school until the age of fifteen years in the winter time, his first teacher being a Mr. Gemmell and his last Porter Wallace. During his youth he was a farm hand, at the age of twelve years being employed on the canal as a mule driver, for which he received $5 a month and board, his wages being increased to $27 and board when he was promoted to the position of bowman. He followed the canal for nine years, between Columbia and Nanticoke and other points to New York City. He then began farming and worked by the day for two years, being then engaged by John Emig for three years, after which he was employed for three years on the Gemmell place and one year on Squire Thompson's farm. In 1900 he bought a tract of 127 acres, on which he conducted general farming, tobacco raising and stock raising until April 1, 1905, when he sold and purchased his present property. Mr. Ellis has greatly increased the trade since taking hold of this property, having proved himself a first-class landlord and being the owner of one of the best rural stands in York county.

In 1892 Mr. Ellis married Miss Lizzie Arnold, of Chanceford township, daughter of Henry and Amanda (Hess) Arnold, and two children have been born to this union—George Henry and John Paul. In their family is also Elsie May, a little girl of three years whom Mr. Ellis and his wife adopted when she was an infant of six months. Mr. Ellis is a member of the United Brethren Church, while in politics he is a stanch Democrat, and takes a loyal interest in the success of his party.

WILBUR C. BRESSLER, D. D. S., who is engaged in the practice of his profession in York, is a son of Dr. Charles Huston Bressler, who was one of the most prominent physicians and dentists of York, where he was actively engaged in the practice of his dual profession for many years and where he died in February, 1894, at the venerable age of seventy-three years, after an illness of only two weeks' duration. He was assisting his son, Wilbur C., in operative work at the time when he received the stroke of paralysis which terminated in his death. He was specially active and influential in public affairs, and was one of the leaders of the Republican party in this section of the State. Upon several occasions he was made the party nominee for Congress, but was unable to overcome the large Democratic majority in his district. He served nine months as sheriff of York county, having been appointed by Governor Andrew G. Curtin. He was a man of high intellectual and professional attainments, while his genial nature and lofty integrity of character gained and retained for him the unqualified esteem of his fellow-men. His wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Ann Towner, was a daughter of Rev. John Towner, a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church and for many years secretary of the Buckeye Reaper Company, of Ohio; she died in 1809, aged thirty-nine years. Of the eight children born of this union the following brief record is made: Charles died in infancy; John Towner is engaged in the practice of dentistry in Shepherdstown, Cumberland county; George B. is a printer by profession residing in the city of Lancaster, Pa., where he is alderman of the Fifth ward; Emma B., Clara V., and Ella May remain at the family home; Andrew Curtin is a traveling salesman and is employed in his home city of York; and Wilbur C., immediate subject of this sketch, is sixth in the order of birth of the eight children.

Dr. Wilbur Clarke Bressler was born in York, April 30, 1858. After completing the public and high school courses he entered the dental department of the University of Maryland, Baltimore, where he remained during the years 1883-84. In the meanwhile he had given careful attention to the study and practice of laboratory and operative dentistry, under the direction of his father, so that he doubly fortified himself for successful work in his chosen profession. After leaving college he returned to York and here became associated with his father in active practice, this alliance continuing until the death of the latter, since which time the Doctor has continued in individual practice. He controls a large and representative clientage and his fine offices have the most modern equipment and accessories, while both in the laboratory and the operative departments none but the highest class of work is done. The Doctor is popular in both business and social circles, and is one of the rep-representative citizens of his native county, where he has well upheld the high standard of the honored name which he bears. He has his offices at his attractive residence, at No. 464 West King street, and they are acknowledged to be unsurpassed in complete appointments by any in the city. In politics the Doctor is a stalwart Republican, and both he and his wife are valued members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of York. Fraternally he is affiliated with York Lodge, No. 266, A. F. & A. M.; with York Lodge, No. 124, Improved Order of Heptasophs, and the Noble Commandery, Knights of Malta, No. 360.

On Dec. 26, 1889, Dr. Bressler was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. Smyser, who was born and reared in York, where her father, the late George E. Smyser, was for many years prominently engaged in the coal business. Of the four children of this union Juliette and one other died in infancy; William Huston and Clarke. Smyser are both pupils in the public schools.

WILLIAM H. STARE, of York Haven, a survivor of the Civil war, was born in Conewago township, York county, in 1845, son of John and Anna (Bull) Stare. Little is known of the great-grandfather of William H. Stare, except that he came from Germany and settled in Conewago township. His son, John, was born there, being a farmer all his life and the father of children: Jacob, Henry, John, Mrs. Westhafer, Mrs. Spahr, Mrs. Updegaff and Mrs. Andrew Free.

John Stare, the father of William H., was born in 1817 in Conewago township and received a common-school education. He learned the carpenter's trade and followed it for a number of years. His marriage was to Anna Bull, daughter of Elijah and Lydia (Conn) Bull. After his marriage Mr. Stare located in Conewago township, and was a farmer there for a few years prior to going to Dauphin county, near Hummelstown, where he died in 1900, and was buried at Chamber Hill, Dauphin county. His widow is now residing with her son, William H. The children born to John and Anna Stare were: Elias died in Cumberland county; William H.: John resides at Steelton, Dauphin county; Daniel resides in Dauphin county; Lydia Ann married John Eshenour, and lives in Dauphin county; and Emma married Adam Eshenour, and lives in Dauphin county.

William H. Stare attended the Sipe school in Conewago township, until the age of eighteen, when he engaged in farming and butchering in Lower Allen township, Cumberland county, and Warrington township, York county. In 1866 he located in York Haven, where he built a fine residence, and has since lived a retired life. In 1864 Mr. Stare enlisted in Company I, 200th Reg. P. V. I., and saw active service in the battle of Fort Steadman and several minor engagements. During that period Mr. Stare lost his hearing from exposure to the weather while at Petersburg, Va., his term of service lasting nine months.

In 1866 Mr. Stare married Anna Jane Hoopes, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Nicholas) Hoopes, and these children have been born to them: Harry, a carpenter, married Elizabeth Crone; William is single and resides in Dauphin county; Anna married Daniel Switzer, and resides at York Haven; Alda married Albert Laird and lives in Dover township; Albert is a miller by trade; Nora married Jacob Kunkle and lives at York Haven; and David married Nettie Clemmins, and resides at York Haven. The Stare family are connected with the Lutheran Church, of which they are active and liberal supporters. Mr. Stare is a Republican, and has held the offices of councilman and supervisor of the borough of York Haven. He is well known and popular throughout the county.

HENRY KURTZ belongs to one of the old and prominent families of York county, and is the owner of Spring Valley Farm in Hopewell township.

Martin Kurtz, his grandfather, left Germany at the age of seventeen years and emigrated to America, coming eventually to York county, Pa. It is supposed that he took up land in the vicinity of what is now Anstine's bone-mill (which, in his day, was a good grinding mill), and this he owned and operated for many years; but it finally went into other hands. There he died about 1836, aged probably seventy-eight years. He was not an enlisted soldier in 1776, but drove a team with supplies for the troops and looked after the wagon trains, this being a most necessary part of the military equipment. He was a staunch Democrat in his political sentiments, and equally as loyal a Lutheran in his religious views. He married Widow Shinleaver, who had one son, Charles, the latter migrating to the West and dying there. He assisted in the building of the Sadler’s church, and both he and wife were buried within its shadows. His children were: Joshua, who died in Ohio; Christopher, who married a Miss Lowe, and died in Western Ohio; Elizabeth, Mrs. George Ebaugh, who died in the West; and Michael, father of Henry.

Michael Kurtz was born in 1785, on his father’s farm in Shrewsbury township, and was employed from boyhood on the homestead and in the mill. He was educated in the best local schools of his day and mastered the rudiments in both English and German. In the course of time he acquired the home farm and continued to conduct it during his active life, when he and his wife went to reside with their son Levi on an adjoining farm, and there the father died in 1870, being survived by his widow until her age approached ninety years. They were both buried at the Shrewsbury cemetery. It is interesting to note that Michael Kurtz assisted to build the bricks used in the erection of Sadler’s church. Both parents were worthy members of the Lutheran Church, and the father was an elder in it for years. In politics a Democrat, he frequently was elected to township offices. The children of Michael Kurtz and wife, were: Christiana, who died at the age of thirteen years; Elizabeth, who married J. R. McDonald, of Maryland, and died aged twenty-eight years; Martin, who married (first) Catherine Reed, and (second) Ellen Meads, and died at his home in Jarrettsville, Md., where he was an undertaker; John, who married Leah Anstine, and died on his farm in Hopewell township; Levi, who married Mary Fulton, and died on his farm in Shrewsbury township; Lydia, widow of Samuel M. Fife, living in Shrewsbury borough; Joshua, who died young; one that died in infancy; Henry; and William, of Stewartstown, who married (first) Elnira Meads, (second) Sarah Hendricks and (third) Margaret Meads.

Henry Kurtz was born March 23, 1836, on the home farm in Shrewsbury township where he reached manhood. He attended the winter terms of the public schools irregularly until he was eighteen years old and then spent some time at Stewartstown Academy, making the most of his advantages. He remained with his parents until he was twenty-three years of age, when he married, and naturally commenced a more independent career. When twenty-one he had learned the carpenter’s trade, which he pursued for some years. He had a natural aptitude for using tools and he readily acquired a knowledge of making pumps, successfully carrying on the latter industry for thirty-five years. Although he had never systematically learned the business, he manufactured more pumps than any man in this section. The whole family was more or less gifted mechanically, and his father was always able to fashion anything in wood that he ever saw.

Henry Kurtz was married, April 23, 1859, to Sarah Jane Fulton, who was born in Hopewell township and partly reared in Stewartstown, daughter of Hugh and Jane (Criswell) Fulton, and a member of an old Scotch-Irish family. Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz commenced housekeeping at Stewartstown, where he followed the occupation of a carpenter. In 1865 he bought his present farm, removing to Hopewell township and commencing the manufacture of pumps; but for the past few years he has been devoting more of his time to his farm. Mrs. Kurtz died May 30, 1878. She was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church all her life, and was buried at Stewartstown in the cemetery of the house of worship where she was so well known. She was the mother of children, as follows: Lillie Jane is Mrs. A. J. Morrison of York; George H., in the commission business in Baltimore, married Emma Wheeler; Mary Agnes is Mrs. Gustave Kliner of York; Rose Ann Fulton and Emma are living at home; John Hugh Martin, of Stewartstown, married Jennie Free; and Ralph R., a merchant of Baltimore, married Annie Rundle.

Mr. Kurtz was reared in the Lutheran Church, but after marriage he united with the Stewartstown Presbyterian Church, of which for twelve years he has been a trustee. He is a staunch Democrat.

JOHN DENNIS TRUETT, born Nov. 4, 1802, in Smyrna, Del., died July 21, 1884, in York, Pa. His first wife, Miss Sarah Heckert, whom he married in York, was born July 4, 1808, and died Oct. 30, 1828, leaving one child, George W., now deceased. He married (second) Theresa Margaret Harry, daughter of James B. Harry, of York; she was born July 22, 1817, and died Sept. 15, 1881.
To this union were born ten children: Mary E., Annie L., Theresa M., Jimmie, Sarah E., M. Jane, Joseph P., Melinda, Oliver P. and Samuel.

Oliver P. Truett was born in York July 12, 1856, and died in his native city Feb. 16, 1888. He was a machinist by trade, but followed railroading, and at the time of his death was a fireman running from Harrisburg to Altoona. On Jan. 11, 1877, he married Sarah Evangeline Bowman, daughter of Emanuel Walter Bowman. She was born March 20, 1858, in Upper Allen township, Cumberland county, and died Dec. 1, 1889. To them were born: James Benton, Emma Aletia, Thrusa Margaret, Emanuel Walter and Bowman Harrison. Mr. Truett belonged to the Methodist Church.

Emanuel Walter Bowman, the son of George Bowman, was born Aug. 1, 1830, in Springfield township, and his death occurred May 26, 1904, in York. On April 30, 1854, he married Margaret Myers, daughter of Peter Myers, of Menallen township, Adams county. She was born June 9, 1836, and died Jan. 23, 1902, the mother of one child—Sarah Evangeline, who, as stated, married Oliver P. Truett. Mr. Bowman was a miller by trade, grinding at Seven Valley, York county. In 1856 he removed to Coover’s Mills, situated on the Yellow Breeches, near the line between Cumberland and York counties, and not far from Grantham Station on the Reading railroad. From Coover’s Mills he removed to Trout Run and began butchering, and at the end of two years thus employed located at Cameron’s Mill, near Harrisburg. Here he operated a mill until Aug. 25, 1864, when he enlisted as a private in Captain John Klugh’s Company “I,” 209th Reg., P. V. I., with which regiment he served until the close of the war, taking an active part in many of its most serious engagements, such as Petersburg, Gettysburg and Vicksburg. He was honorably discharged at Alexandria, Va., May 31, 1865. Soon afterward he located in York, and worked in the car shops, later driving a team for P. A. & S. Small. About 1870 he embarked in the coal business at the corner of Chestnut street and the Peach Bottom railroad, and from there he removed to Charles Lefean’s yard at the Princess street bridge. This business was originally established by John Myers, whom Charles Lefean and E. W. Bowman succeeded, the latter in 1886. On June 12, 1891, Mr. Bowman purchased a tract of land on East Walnut street, at the corner of the Maryland & Pennsylvania railroad. Here he erected the necessary buildings for the continuation of the business, which he conducted at that location with great success. Eighteen months before his death he sold the business to J. C. Grove. Mr. Bowman was a member of the Lutheran Church. He was survived by his daughter’s three children, whom he had adopted after their parents’ death. Bowman H. Truett is an apprentice in the United States Navy. Emma Aletia, now Mrs. P. C. Dix, is living in Baltimore, Maryland.

On April 14, 1900, James Benton Truett, son of Oliver P., married Miss Jennice Luella Gladfelter, born near Seven Valley, Nov. 16, 1878, daughter of Wesley Gladfelter, of York; they have two children: James Henry, born July 18, 1904; and Mary Viola, Sept. 29, 1905.

James B. Truett received a common school education, and at the age of fourteen commenced to learn the machinist’s trade, which he finished in four years with S. Morgan Smith & Co. On Sept. 17, 1896, he enlisted as a private in Troop E, 6th United States Cavalry, at Fort Meyer, Va. On April 19, 1898, the regiment was ordered to proceed by rail to Chickamanga Park, Ga., where it was placed in the First Brigade, First Cavalry Division, Fifth Army Corps, General Shafter commanding. On May 11, 1898, the brigade proceeded by rail to Tampa, Fla., thence to Port Tampa, June 8, 1898. Here the entire corps assembled and went aboard transports, his regiment being as signed to the “Rio Grande.” After loading provisions they were ordered to anchor in Tampa bay, and on June 14, 1898, the entire fleet set sail for Cuba, arriving at Santiago June 20, 1898, and landing under fire on the 22nd of June, at Daiquiri, a village about twenty-five miles east of Santiago. The principal battle of the expedition was San Juan, commonly known as the battle of Santiago, and it lasted from July 1, to July 3, at noon. Among the hard fights were El Caney, Kettle Hill and Hell’s Crossing, with the final taking of San Juan Hill, with its block houses. On July 10 and 11 the bombardment of the city of Santiago took place, and on the 14th the city was surrendered by General Linares. The official ceremonies were not performed until the 17th of July, however, so that is the date usually given as the date of surrender. On Aug. 6, 1898, Mr. Truett's regiment sailed on the transport "Gate City" for the "States," arriving at Montauk Point, L. I., Aug. 13, 1898, and was honorably discharged Sept. 14, 1898. From November, 1898, to December, 1900, Mr. Truett assisted his grandfather, E. W. Bowman, in the coal business, and then accepted an appointment in the civil service as a letter carrier, at which occupation he is now engaged in York. Mr. Truett is a member of the Lutheran Church.

PERCY L. LANIUS (deceased) was a son of Capt. William H. Lanius, one of York's most influential bankers and citizens, and was born in the family homestead, on East Market street, York, May 17, 1872. After completing the course of study in the public schools, he continued his studies in the York County Academy and later in the York Collegiate Institute, after which he was for three terms a student in the Selwyn Hall Military Academy, later pursuing a course in Prickett's Business College, Philadelphia. After pursuing these educational courses Mr. Lanius entered the offices of the York Street Railway Company, of which for a time he was assistant treasurer. In 1894 he became associated with his father in the coal and lumber business, under the firm name of H. Lanius & Son, the enterprise having been carried on under this style for many years previously. It had been established by Henry Lanius, grandfather of Percy L. Lanius, who retired in 1870, passing the remainder of his long and useful life in the city with whose civic and business interests he had been so long and prominently concerned. To the business thus founded Percy L. Lanius gave his able personal attention, and at the time of his death it was one of the most important enterprises of the kind in the city. Both as an executive and as a progressive young business man he was held in high regard in his native city, while his popularity in its social life was of the most unequivocal order. In politics he was an inflexible Republican, and both he and his wife were communicants of St. John's Episcopal Church. In a fraternal way he was affiliated with the Knights of Malta, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Sons of Veterans.

The marriage of Mr. Lanius was solemnized Sept. 2, 1896, when Miss Margaret E. Stuck became his wife. She was born and reared in York, daughter of Edward Stuck, a well known retired newspaper man of that city. Mr. Lanius died on Oct. 7, 1903, his death being occasioned by uremic poisoning. Thus passed away, at the height of his abilities, a young man who had already made a splendid record, which, in view of his years, can be considered only as an intimation of what might have been. He was survived by his widow and their two children—Margaret and William Henry Lanius.

SAMUEL CORNELIUS COLLINS was born Dec. 4, 1854, on the farm in Hopewell township, York county, which he now owns and upon which he has spent his life. He is a brother of Alexander Collins, a banker of Shrewsbury township, York county.

Mr. Collins was educated in the local schools and at the Stewartstown Academy, where his first teacher was Miss Anderson. His school days closed when he was twenty-two years old. His father was a practical man and put his boys to work as soon as they were old enough to do "chores" or handle a hoe, and thus Samuel became a thorough farmer while still a young man. After the death of his father, in 1895, he took charge of the home farm, which he has since continued to operate. The buildings on the farm were remodeled by Mr. Collins the elder, but the son has made continuous improvements, the result being that the tract constitutes one of the most substantial and attractive homesteads in the township. It contains 198 acres of fine land, from which, in 1903, were raised one thousand bushels of wheat, seven hundred bushels of oats, and other grains and crops in proportion.

Mr. Collins is a member of the Hopewell U. P. Church in East Hopewell township and has served as trustee. In politics he is a Republican. In March, 1891, Mr. Collins was married in Chanceford township to Amy Janet Wallace, of High Rock, daughter of John and Millie Ann (Gibson) Wallace, both of whom are deceased. Children as follows have been born to this union: Cornelius Wallace, born March 9, 1892; Florence Elizabeth, Nov. 15, 1895; and Mary Delmar and Ralph Gordon (twins), Jan. 4, 1900. Mrs. Collins is also a member of the U. P. Church.

ARTHUR E. ZIEGLER, for many years prominently identified with various business enterprises in York, passed away at his home in that city Dec. 15, 1898. He was born in York in 1848, son of Emanuel K. Ziegler. His grandfather was born in Hanover, Germany, April 8, 1765, and on his emigration to America settled in Hanover, Pa., where he died Feb. 12, 1860, aged ninety-four years, ten months and four days.

Emanuel K. Ziegler was born May 10, 1807, and was a coppersmith by trade, following that occupation in Hanover. He later went to Baltimore, returning, however, to York, where he engaged in the coal and lumber business, the firm being known as Weisler & Ziegler. For a number of years he was a director of the York National Bank and the York Water & Gas Co. He was a member of St. Paul’s Lutheran Church, in which he took an active part. He died in December, 1901, in his ninety-fifth year, and was buried in Prospect Hill cemetery.

Arthur E. Ziegler attended the common schools and the York County Academy, and learned the baker’s trade. He worked at this occupation in different parts of the State for a time, in 1884 returning to York, where he engaged in the Patent Roof Paint business. This he discontinued, however, to engage in baking, in which he continued until his death, Dec. 15, 1898. He was a member of St. Paul’s Lutheran Church, in which faith he died, and was interred at Prospect Hill cemetery.

Mr. Ziegler was united in marriage with Mary E. Rhodes, who survives him and now makes her home at No. 529 West Market street, York. To this marriage were born: E. C., born Jan. 31, 1872, married Mary Jane Hubert, daughter of Peter and Eliza Jane (Rhodes) Hubert, and they live with Mr. Ziegler’s mother in York; he is a baker and cigar maker. Harry C., born May 25, 1877, is in the drug business in Philadelphia; he married Sarah Louisa Knight. Martha, was born April 9, 18 —. Walter, born March 25, 1880, died Aug. 31, 1880. William Edward, born Aug. 16, 1874, died Nov. 3, 1880. Fred, born Jan. 25, 1884, died May 15, 1884.

JOHN F. BUPP (deceased) was for many years one of the good citizens and representative farmers of Springfield township, York county, where he was born Aug. 3, 1827, son of John Bupp.

John Bopp (as the name was formerly spelled) was the grandfather of our subject, and he was born Nov. 4, 1779, and died Aug. 22, 1862, aged eighty-two years. He was a large land owner in Springfield township, and gave the land for the well-known Bupp’s Church, which is located on the farm now owned and occupied by the widow of John F. Bupp. John Bopp’s wife, Elizabeth, was born Oct. 7, 1777, and died Oct. 24, 1862, aged eighty-five years. Both are buried at Bupp’s Union Church, in Springfield township.

John Bupp, father of our subject, was born on the old home in Springfield township, in 1807, and was a farmer all his life, following that occupation in Springfield township. He died Dec. 28, 1855, aged forty-eight years. His wife, Barbara Folkenstine, died July 14, 1875, aged seventy-two years, and they were also buried in the family burying ground at Bupp’s Church. Their children were: John F.; Leah, of Illinois; Sarah, of York; Caroline; Henry, deceased; Israel, deceased; Peter, deceased; and Jesse, a resident of Seven Valley.

John F. Bupp received a common-school education, and followed farming all his life, being one of the largest land owners of Springfield township, having 348 acres of property. He erected a fine barn in 1884, having completed his home in 1883. He was a member of the Reformed Church. For three terms he served his township efficiently as a careful, interested school director. Besides his large farming interests, Mr. Bupp was a director in the First National Bank of Glen Rock, Pa., a director in the Cadorus & Manheim Fire Insurance Company, of York county, and had other interests. Mr. Bupp passed away Aug. 26, 1903, aged seventy-six years, twenty-three days, and was buried at Bupp’s Church, where a beautiful monument marks his last resting place.

Mr. Bupp married (first) Maria Allison, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Reichard) Allison, and she died Sept. 28, 1863, aged thirty-four years, five months and twenty-two days, and was laid to rest at Bupp’s Church. The children of this marriage were: Uriah, of York; Jacob and George, both deceased; Emanuel, of Seven Valley; Amos; Malinda, deceased; Emma, wife of William Broadbeck of Jefferson borough; Jesse and William, in business at Seven Valley; Elizabeth and Barbara. On May 2, 1865, Mr. Bupp married (second) Priscilla Allison, a sister of his first wife, and she still survives, living in her beautiful home in Springfield township. The children born to Mr. Bupp and his second wife were: Peter, deceased; John, deceased; Ella M., deceased; Levina, wife of William Wolf, living at Glen Rock; Taby; and Eli A.

Eli A. Bupp was born Nov. 14, 1874, on the old home farm, and has always followed agricultural pursuits. He married Ida Sligel, daughter of Levi Sligel, and they have one son, W. John, who is attending school. Mr. Bupp is an industrious man, and is well esteemed in the community.

HEZEKIAH COOK, a retired farmer of Worthington township, York county, and a member of an old family, was born Sept. 1, 1837, son of Walker and Martha (Gates) Cook, a grandson of John and Hannah (Walker) Cook, and a great-grandson of Isaac Cook, who, it is believed, was born in Philadelphia.

Isaac Cook’s father, the great-great-grandfather of our subject, was born in Ireland, and came to America in 1681, settling in Philadelphia. He was of a family of linen makers and weavers, and they followed that calling in Ireland and America. In later years, however, they turned their attention to agriculture. Isaac Cook settled in Lancaster county, and later in Carroll township, York county. His wife’s name is not known, but his children were: John, Samuel and Mrs. Maria Reed. Isaac Cook died in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and he and his wife were Quakers.

John Cook, the grandfather, lived in Carroll township. When Isaac Cook died, the land he had taken up in Carroll township came into the hands of John, who in turn gave it to his son, and the latter his son, W. R. Cook, who now owns it. John Cook was a prominent man of his day and his death occurred in 1864, aged eighty-two years, while his wife, Hannah, died in 1860, aged seventy-eight. They were the parents of these children: Anna married Daniel Garrison; Walker, the father of our subject, married Martha Gates; John married Lydia Walker; Mary died at the age of nineteen years; Hezekiah died at the age of twenty-one years; Hannah married Joseph Deardoff; and Leah married Jacob Lehner. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Cook were Quakers.

Walker Cook was born in Carroll township in 1811, and died in 1856. He was educated in the rude log school house common in those days, and received a fairly good education. He devoted about twelve years of his life to blacksmithing, and then purchased a farm, devoting the balance of his life to agricultural pursuits. Mr. Cook became very prosperous, and the property which he owned is now owned by Henry Speck. Mrs. Martha (Gates) Cook died in 1892, aged eighty-three years. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Walker Cook were: Isaac met his death in a railroad accident; Anna married William Anderson; Mary married Godfrey Bishop; Hezekiah; John married Catherine Pence; Hannah married Samuel Arnold; Elizabeth married Daniel Pence; Sarah married Jacob Harkbold; Martha J. married John Aker; Walker married Mary Kleindienst; and Joseph married Elizabeth Evens.

Hezekiah Cook was born in Worthington township, two and one-half miles from his present home. He received his education in the common schools of his neighborhood, and for a time followed mason work, but at his father’s death he returned home and turned his attention to farming, which he continued all his active life, until in 1888 he retired. Mr. Cook joined the German Baptist Church at the age of thirty-five, and since 1886 he has been a minister of the Gospel in that denomination. Mr. Cook is a well-read man, and a true friend to the cause of Christianity.

In 1858 Mr. Cook married (first) Eve Wiley, daughter of George and Catherine (Burgward) Wiley. Mrs. Cook died in 1885, aged forty-six years, leaving the following named children: George W., cashier of the Dillsburg bank, married Nancy Beitzel, and has four children, May, Ralph, Scott and Ray. Mary C. married Andrew Berkheimer; Matilda J. married Albert Speck, and they have had one son, Ray; Oliver W., a minister of the German Baptist Church, married Catherine Wolf, and has had six children, Roy D., Walter, Freeman, Albert, Nettie and ———; John E. married Lula Spohr, and has six children, Carson, Ruth, Mervin, Wilbert, Paul and Elizabeth; Margaret A. married Edward Bittner, and four children have been born to them, Gretta, Edith, Roy and Lena; Emma D. married B. F. Hoffman, and they have three children, Norman, Martha and Cathrine; and Hannah E. married Salven Shaeffer, and they have one child, Ada Viola. Mr. Cook's second marriage was to Lena Burgard. In his political belief Mr. Cook was a staunch Whig and abolitionist, and when the Republican party was formed he joined its ranks, and has been an active worker, but never an office seeker. Mr. Cook is well and favorably known, and is highly respected throughout Warrington township.

THEODORE H. WALLICK (deceased), who was employed for sixteen years in the York Rolling Mills, and was in the employ of that company at the time of his death, was born in Peach Bottom township, York county, Pa., Nov. 13, 1851, son of Jacob and Annie (Steece) Wallick.

John Wallick lives in Pleasureville, York county. He followed carpentering for many years, but is now living practically retired. His wife died in 1903, in her seventieth year. She was a member of the United Brethren Church, as is Mr. Wallick. He is a Democrat in politics.

Theodore H. Wallick was educated in the common schools of York county. When a young man he was employed for several years in a flour and feed mill in Peach Bottom township, operated by his uncle, George Shaffer. He then turned his attention to iron ore mining, which he followed for some time, when he again changed his occupation, securing a position with the Northern Central railroad, first as brakeman, and later as a fireman, following this for some time. He was then promoted to be conductor, and he continued to follow railroad ing until 1886, when he left the road to accept a position in the York Rolling mill, where he was employed until his death in 1902.

In 1881, Mr. Wallick was married to Miss Clara J. Patterson, daughter of Andrew Patterson, a native of Whitehall, Cumberland county. To this union were born seven children: Jennie, deceased, who married Abner Wolfgang; Theodisa, who married George Shenberger; Roy; Mabel; Emory; Clara, deceased; and Myrtle. Mr. Wallick was a member of the Rolling Mill Beneficial Association, and in politics was a Republican. Mrs. Wallick resides at No. 257 Chestnut street, York.

JACOB TYSON owns and conducts a fine farm of sixty-five acres in Springfield township. He was born Feb. 2, 1832, in Windsor township, York county, son of John Tyson. Jacob Tyson, the grandfather of our subject, was a farmer of Windsor township, where he died, being buried at the Lebanon Church. He married Elizabeth Lehman, of Lancaster county, and they had children as follows: Jacob, Benjamin, Nancy, Sallie, Rebecca, Priscilla and John. John Tyson was born in Windsor township, and there received a good common school education. He followed farming in Windsor, York and Springfield townships, and died at the age of forty-seven years. He married Lyda Flinchbaugh, and she died aged sixty-seven years, and both were buried in the Goodling cemetery in Springfield township. They had these children: John; Jacob; Charles; Henry; Benjamin; Levi, killed in the battle of Winchester during the Civil war; Mary, the wife of Adam Diehl; Leah, the widow of John Stormer, living at Glen Rock; and Lydia, the widow of Henry Hildebrand, making her home in Ohio.

Jacob Tyson attended the schools of York and Springfield townships until eighteen years of age, at which time he started to learn the carpenter's trade with Henry Ehrhart, in Springfield township. He only followed that trade for six years, however, and then, in 1855, he engaged in the milling business, where he now resides. This mill was built by Jacob Rinehart in 1828, and is one of the oldest in the township. The house upon the farm was built in 1826, and is still in a good state of preservation, the shingles still remaining on the roof. Mr. Tyson did a large and lucrative business in milling, grinding in one year 5,000 bushels of corn, oats and rye for the William Forest Distilling house. In 1853 he married Leah Seitz, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Miller) Seitz. Mrs. Tyson is a very skilled weaver, and still follows that occupation occasionally. Mr. Tyson purchased his present farm of sixty-five acres, from his father-in-law. The old mill on the farm has a history connected with it, one of its sills having been removed from a building which stood in York Square, where the Spahr building now stands. Mr. Tyson has also engaged in the sawing and manufacture of cart saddles, having been engaged in that business for fifteen years, finding a ready market for his goods in Baltimore, York, and the surrounding country.

To Mr. and Mrs. Tyson have been born: Malinda, the widow of J. K. Tyson, lives in Ohio; and Sarah A. is the wife of Howard Ehrhart, a farmer of Springfield township. In politics Mr. Tyson is a Republican. He attends the Evangelical Church, in the work of which he takes a very active part. Mrs. Tyson's people are members of an old York county family.

HENRY HOFF, a retired farmer of York county, who resides in North Codorus township, was born in 1829, in Adams county, son of Henry Hoff, Sr., and grandson of Adam Hoff.

Adam Hoff was a farmer of North Codorus and attained a ripe old age. He and his wife were interred at Lesher Church in that township.

Henry Hoff, Sr., was born May 18, 1786, and his death occurred Jan. 13, 1859. His wife, Susan, was born Jan. 29, 1796, and survived her husband two years, dying March 3, 1852. Both were buried at the Ziegler Church in North Codorus township. After their marriage, they spent a few years in Adams county, and then removed to Codorus township, near Lesher Church, where he had a farm of 219 acres. Their children were as follows: John, Adam, Mary, Elizabeth, Henry, Lydia, Caroline and Louise, all deceased except Henry, Caroline (who resides at Hanover, Pa.) and Adam (who resides in North Codorus township).

Henry Hoff came to Codorus township from Adams county, with his father, when a boy, and received his education in the township schools. In 1850 he married Rosama Emig, daughter of John and Catherine (Carbaugh) Emig, of Chambersburg, Franklin Co., Pa. They located on the home farm and after his father's death, Mr. Hoff took charge of the home place, where he remained until 1903, in which year he purchased a small, two-acre place, upon which he erected a home, and here he has made his residence to the present time, retired from active life.

To Henry Hoff and wife were born children as follows: Henry, Jr., a contractor and builder of York; Isabella, wife of Henry Sheffer of York; and Susan, wife of Nathan Glafelter, the well known cigar manufacturer of Seven Valley. In politics Mr. Hoff is a Democrat, and for over forty years has been township treasurer. He is a member of Ziegler's Lutheran Church, in which he has served as deacon and elder, and he has been active in the work of the Sunday-school.

DAVID E. SMALL, one of York's most prominent business men, has been engaged in business in that city for a number of years, and holds various positions of trust with several large concerns. Mr. Small was born there Oct. 21, 1867, at at old homestead, No. 153 Market street, and received his education at the York Collegiate & Commercial Institute, and at New Haven, Connecticut.

Mr. Small's first business experience was gained as a clerk in McClellan & Gotvalt's hardware and grocery store, where he remained two years. He engaged in the manufacture of sandpaper for two years, and then, in company with W. F. Ramsay, engaged in the real estate and insurance business, trading as Ramsay & Small. He assumed charge of the business in 1893, continuing it under the same name, and was highly successful, representing the highest grade companies and many lines of insurance—fire, boiler, accident, health and liability. Mr. Small is a director of the Ruth Machine Company, for the manufacture of hosiery knitting machines, etc., the company, which is capitalized at $40,000, having an excellent export trade, and the capacity per annum being 1,000 knitting machines, and 2,000 automatic stop motions. Mr. Small is also secretary and treasurer of the York Automatic Scale Company, manufacturing automatic weighing devices for sugar, coffee, seeds, flour, grain, etc., which machines are greatly in demand among millers and packers.

Mr. Small was married Nov. 15, 1894, to Harriet M. Spahr, the youngest daughter of Mr. M. B. Spahr, whose sketch will be found elsewhere. Four children have been born to this union, one dying in infancy. Those living are: Henry Spahr Small, David E. Small (III) and Michael Spahr Small.

Mr. Small belongs to the Outdoor Club, of which he has been treasurer for ten years. He also is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, a teacher in the Sunday-school, and chairman of the executive committee.

WILLIAM HARRISON GABLE is another of York county's able young business men who is here upholding the prestige of a name which has long been honored in the history of the county, and he is at the present time incumbent of the position of cost clerk for the York Manufacturing Company. He is a son of Taylor S. and Julia Alice (Glafelter) Gable, both members of old and honored families of the county, and the father is one of the representative business men of York, where he is engaged in the wholesale and retail fruit trade. In his family are three children.—John Morris, who is clerking for his father; Harry Wayne, who is likewise associated with his father's business; and William Harrison.

William Harrison Gable was born in the family homestead, in the city of York, May 22, 1872, and his educational discipline was secured in the public schools, the York County Academy, in which he was a student about two years, and in a business college. After leaving school he became a clerk in his father's fruit establishment, where he was employed until May, 1900, when he secured the position of receiving clerk in the works of the York Manufacturing Company, being promoted to the office of time clerk six months later, while in 1902 he was promoted to his present responsible position, as cost clerk, in which he is rendering most effective and acceptable service.

Mr. Gable is a member of the Union Lutheran Church and takes a zealous interest in its work, being at the time of this writing secretary of its Sunday-school. In politics he is staunchly arrayed as a supporter of the principles and policies of the Republican party, in whose cause he is an enthusiastic worker, and during the national campaign of 1904, he was a member of the Eleventh Ward Republican Club of York.

JAMES KENNEDY, of Lower Chanceford township, York county, was born Aug. 1, 1831, in County Tyrone, Ireland, son of William and Mary Ann (Allen) Kennedy, the latter of whom died in 1838 in Ireland.

William Kennedy was also born in County Tyrone, and by occupation he was a linen weaver and farmer, following the former line during the winter months. His son James was about nine years old, when the family decided to remove to America, and on Christmas Day, 1840, they left Liverpool on a sailing vessel which completed the voyage to the United States in six weeks. The party landed at Philadelphia, and there the father encountered a Mr. Boyd whose business it was to look after emigrants, and he took the family to his home near Havre de Grace, Harford Co., Md., and Mr. Kennedy worked for him for two years.

William Kennedy bought a tract of fifty acres near Havre de Grace, which he improved with good buildings, and then sold for the purchase of a larger and better tract, this one having 140 acres, and he lived there until his death in January, 1884, at the age of eighty-six years. His first marriage was to Mary Ann Allen, who left this family of children at her death: Malcolm, who left Ireland before the family did, locating in Canada; James; William, deceased; Mary Ann, deceased; Joseph, who died aged nineteen years; and Margaret. He married for his second wife Betsy Scott, who lived to be about eighty years of age, and died near Havre de Grace in 1897. The children of this marriage were: Eliza Jane; William (2), of Maryland; Joseph (2); Mary Ann (2), deceased; David; Scott; and George, of Maryland. William Kennedy was a strict Presbyterian in his religious belief. In politics he was a Democrat.

James Kennedy remained with Mr. Boyd until the latter's death, and then for two years with his widow, working on the Boyd farm all that time, and having but few educational advantages, his schooling covering about one month. He bought a tract of forty acres in that vicinity which he later sold, and then purchased fifty-five acres, where he set out an orchard and made many improvements, subsequently selling this very advantageously and buying a farm of 147 acres in Peach Bottom township. In 1871 he moved to his present farm of seventy-five acres, and since then he has made many admirable improvements here, building a comfortable home and erecting other substantial buildings.

Mr. Kennedy was married (first), in Maryland, to Catherine (Latimore), who died in 1864, in Maryland. In 1865 he married (second) Mrs. Mary (McNeal) Darragh, who died on the present home farm in 1883. His third wife, whom he married June 15, 1884, was Mrs. Hannah (Wright) McKinley, widow of William McKinley. Mrs. Kennedy was born Feb. 13, 1844, in Chester county, Pa., daughter of Sylvanus Wright, who, in 1850, moved to the Coates farm near Getchville. By profession he was a surveyor and also a millwright. Next he moved to the Harris sawmill in Windsor township. After the death of his wife on the Coates farm he broke up housekeeping, and as his children were all grown, he made his home with them alternately, and died at the home of Mrs. Kennedy May 10, 1876, aged seventy-one years. Sylvanus Wright married Martha Atkins, born near Downingtown, Pa., daughter of Caleb and Mary (Bumbough) Atkins, and the children of this marriage were: William, of this township; Sarah, who died young; Hannah, now Mrs. Kennedy; John, Benjamin and Margaret, all deceased; John (2), a soldier in the Civil war, now deceased; and Mary, Mrs. Henry Hayes, near York. William McKinley, the first husband of Mrs. Kennedy, was born and reared on the old McKinley homestead in Chanceford township (where the ancestors of the late lamented President McKinley also lived), and there his death occurred. His parents were Stephen and Jane (Armstrong) McKinley. William McKinley and wife had children: Alice M., wife of Edward Fitter, of York; George A., a miller of this township; Anna C., wife of William Montorith, of Columbia, Pa.; and Sylvanus, of Peach Bottom township. The children of our subject by his first marriage were: Mary A., who died aged four years; William J., a farmer in Nebraska; Samuel, also a farmer in Nebraska; Joseph, who died aged twenty-five years; and John, a farmer in this township. The children of the second marriage were: Annie E., wife of Elva Hess, of this township; Mary E., wife of George McKinley of Lower Chanceford; Catherine L., wife of Henry Wise, of Harford county, Md.; and John Q. A., who died at seventeen years. There was no issue by this marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy are consistent members of the Salem M. E. Church. In politics he is a stanch Democrat. For several years he served as supervisor of Peach Bottom township, and he has always been a leading man in public matters wherever he has resided. He has many friends who regard him with high esteem.

DAVID KNISELY was born in Windsor township, Nov. 19, 1855, and was the son of Bornitz and Mary (Oberdorff) Knisely. The Knisely family is of German origin, but the grandfather, Anthony, was born in Cumberland county, Pa. For some time he lived in York county, and was there married to Miss Susan Snyder, but he returned to Cumberland county, and was a farmer there. He was killed by a fall in his barn, which he was clearing for a church meeting. Anthony Knisely had sixteen children, but the names of only eleven are recorded, namely: Bornitz, William, Peter, John, Henry, Susan (Mrs. Mountz), Mary (Mrs. Seitz), Betsey (Mrs. Sutton), Lydia (Mrs. Sutton), Katy (who died unmarried), and Sally (Mrs. Niekcy).

Bornitz Knisely was born Oct. 6, 1809, in Washington township. He was educated in the subscription schools, and afterward taught for several terms. He learned the carpenter's trade, and finally became a contractor, putting up many of the finest buildings in that section. Beginning life a poor boy, he did well and became one of the prominent men in his township. In politics he was a Whig and later a Republican. He was a member of the United Evangelical Church, in which he served as steward, class leader and trustee. Twice married, his first wife was Miss Sally Sechrist, who was born in Chanceford township, Jan. 7, 1811. Their union occurred Feb. 20, 1831, and they began life on a farm owned by Mr. Knisely in Windsor township. There his wife died Sept. 3, 1850, leaving him with the following children: John, born Jan. 5, 1832, who went West and married a Miss Whitmeyers; Henry, born Jan. 14, 1833, who married a Miss Mary Dehoff, and died in Windsor township; William, born June 15, 1834, who married Miss Sarah Spotts, and died at Yoe; Susanna, born May 27, 1836, deceased wife of John Stahley, of Windsor township; Mary Jane, born March 7, 1838, who died unmarried; Jacob, born June 18, 1840, for nine months a soldier in the Civil war, who married Miss Sarah Schmuck; Joseph, born Nov. 15, 1841, who lives on his father's old homestead, married (first) Miss Mary Stauffer, and (second) Miss Sarah Kohler, also deceased; Daniel, born Aug. 8, 1843, who died in infancy; Samuel, born Dec. 13, 1844, who married Miss Mary Neff, and lives at Red Lion; George, born Jan. 30, 1847, who married Miss Elizabeth Brillhart, and lives at York; and Bornitz, born Dec. 29, 1848, who died in infancy.

Mr. Knisely's second wife, to whom he was united Feb. 11, 1851, was Miss Mary Oberdorff. She was born on her father's farm at Springvale Station, Windsor township, Jan. 10, 1827, and was educated in the public schools. Her parents were Daniel and Lydia (Miller) Oberdorff, the former of whom was born in Lower Windsor township, was a miller by trade, and later a farmer, and died at his home in 1863, aged seventy-one years. Mrs. Mary O. Knisely bore her husband five children: Lydia, born April 23, 1852, is Mrs. Wesley Kaub, of Windsor township; David; Leah Ellen, born March 15, 1859, is Mrs. Jacob Flinchbaugh, of Red Lion; James F., born March 16, 1861, married Miss Agnes Flinchbaugh; and Alice Amanda, born Aug. 16, 1864, is Mrs. William C. Smith, of Windsorville.

David Knisely was sent to the Cross school in Windsor township, until he was eighteen, and after leaving continued to work on his father's farm, until he married. He then began farming on the place where he now lives, working it on shares with his father, who owned it. At the same time he entered upon the manufacture of cigars, and has kept up the business ever since. He has been successful in both lines, is a well known and prominent man in his section, and is very generally esteemed and honored. He and his family belong to the United Evangelical Church, in which he is a trustee, and has served one term as superintendent. In political faith he is a Republican.

Mrs. Knisely was a Miss Sophia Fitzkee, and was married to Mr. Knisely Feb. 3, 1887. She has borne her husband two children: Rosie Etta, born Aug. 2, 1888, and Anthony Bornitz, July 16, 1892.

Peter Wilhelm Fitzkee, father of Mrs. Knisely, was a native of Germany, where he was born Sept. 23, 1824, in Bauden Mine. He was given a good education there, and at the age of twenty-four came to America, accompanied by a Miss Rosie Baringer, who was also born near Bauden Mine, March 19, 1824. On landing at Philadelphia Mr. Fitzkee and Miss Baringer were married, and they settled first in the vicinity of Craelyville. There Mr. Fitzkee learned carpentering and long followed that trade. Later he bought a farm close to Craelyville, which his sons assisted in cultivating. He died Sept. 29, 1903, in the Lutheran faith. He was a Democrat in politics. Mr. Fitzkee was a man of unusually fine physique. His wife is still living on their old homestead. The children born to them, besides Sophia, who became Mrs. Knisely, were as follows: Edward, of York, who married Mrs. John Wilkinson; Augustus, of Marysville, who married Miss Amanda Hibner; Simon, unmarried, who lives with his mother; Henry, of Dallastown, married to Sarah Flory; Leonard, at home; and Frank, of Lancaster county, who married Miss Lizzie Riles. Peter Fitzkee had two brothers, one of whom died in Germany. The other started from home for the United States, but was never heard from again.

JAMES H. SMALL, secretary of the York Gas Company, belongs to one of the oldest and most prominent families of York county. His grandfather, David Small, was chief burgess of York at the time of the Rebel invasion under Gen. Jubal Early, and was at one time postmaster of York, having been appointed by President James Buchanan, who was his personal friend.

James B. Small, father of James H. Small, died at the age of fifty years. His wife was Harriet E. Landis, daughter of David Landis (deceased), a well known merchant. There were four children born to this couple, as follows: One who died in infancy; Charles E., a stationer; David J., an insurance agent; and James H.

James H. Small was born in York, Jan. 20, 1874, and was educated in private schools and the York Collegiate Institute. His first occupation was as a drug clerk, at which he remained two years, and then for a like period engaged in the fire insurance business. He became assistant secretary of the York Gas Company, Jan. 1, 1898, and was promoted to the position of secretary in June of the same year.

On June 15, 1898, Mr. Small was married to Adelaide Noss, daughter of Mr. Herman Noss, one of York's most prominent manufacturers, and two children were born to this union—Harriet Elizabeth and Sarah Jane. Mr. Small is prominent in Masonic circles, being a member of York Lodge, Howell Chapter, York Commandery, Harrisburg Consistory and Zembo Temple of the Mystic Shrine. Socially he belongs to the Bachelor's Club and the Country Club. In his religious views he is a Presbyterian, attending the First Presbyterian Church, in which for some time he was a Sunday-school teacher. As secretary of the Gas Company Mr. Small has made hosts of friends by his courtesy and fairness, and no man of his years in York is more popular in social, fraternal and business circles.

PHILIP LAUCKS, for many years a farmer of Windsor township, was born in Lower Windsor township, Sept. 9, 1842, son of Samuel and Margaret (McGuigan) Laucks.
Samuel Laucks was born in Lower Windsor township, and attended the public schools. He was a farmer's boy and followed the trade of a collier for several years, after which he returned to the farm, upon which he remained until his death, which occurred in 1882, when he had reached his seventy-second year. He had been reared in the faith of the Evangelical Church, while in politics he was a Democrat. Mr. Laucks' death caused much sorrow to a large circle of acquaintances and friends. Mr. Laucks married Margaret McGuigan, born in Hopewell township and reared to womanhood in Lower Windsor township, daughter of Ambrose and Elizabeth McGuigan. Ambrose McGuigan was a native of Ireland, while his wife, before her marriage to Mr. McGuigan, was the widow of Daniel Lefevre. Mrs. Laucks survived her husband about eighteen years. They had been the parents of these children: John, of Windsor township; Elizabeth, who married John K. Shenberger, deceased, the late county treasurer; Samuel D., deceased, who married Isabella Olewiler; Hettie, deceased in young womanhood; Philip; Susan, who died young; Margaret, who married Henry Gilbert, of Lower Windsor township; Mary, wife of John C. Broom, of Columbia, Pa.; and George W., of Lower Windsor township, who married Valeria Bull.

Philip Laucks was reared on his father's farm, and until the age of eighteen years, attended the public schools during the winter terms of three, four and five months. He learned the trade of a blacksmith with John Halleck, of Harrisburg, with whom he remained thirteen months, and then for five years worked at that vocation in the Harrisburg car shops. Returning to Lower Windsor township for three years he was employed on the family homestead, after his marriage removing to Chanceford, where he had purchased a farm of twenty-eight acres. This he worked for eight years, when he sold and moved to Windsor township, locating on a farm of ninety-seven acres, upon which he remained nineteen years. After settling there Mr. Laucks added an adjoining farm of twenty-eight acres, his own being on Burkholder road, three miles from Red Lion. Since taking possession Mr. Laucks has made many improvements to the farm, building large barns, a fine home and substantial outbuildings. Although a member of no religious denomination Mr. Laucks was reared in the faith of the Evangelical Church. In politics he is a Democrat, and has served for nine years as school director in Windsor township.

On Dec. 24, 1873, Philip Laucks, in Windsor township, married Susan Anstine, born at Anstine Mill, Windsor township, daughter of Simon and Mary Ann (Kohler) Anstine. To this union these children have been born: Harvey A., born in 1874, married Miss Margaret Slough, and is a farmer and cigar-maker in Windsor township; Mary, born in 1886, married Bert Rahn, and resides in Windsor township; and Samuel E., born Oct. 23, 1885, was educated in the Windsor public schools, graduated from the Red Lion High school, class of 1903, and then took one term at the York Collegiate Institute, afterward teaching the Fairview school in Windsor township, as well as Grims' school, and he now engaged as a cigarmaker.

Besides his large agricultural interests, Mr. Laucks is connected with the Farmers & Merchants Bank of Red Lion, of which he is a stockholder. His home is on Broadway, in Red Lion.

GEORGE E. STABLEY, manager of the exchange and testing station of the American Telegraph & Telephone Company, at Dallas-town, is one of York county's native sons, and one of its representative young business men, while he is also a member of one of the sterling pioneer families of the county, the name which he bears having been intimately linked with the history of this section ever since the days when here was initiated the march of civilization. The lineage traces back to sturdy Swiss origin, and the original representatives in the new world were two brothers who left the fair little mountain republic and came to America to establish homes, this being in the Colonial era of our national history. One of the brothers settled in Maryland, and the other, the great-great-grandfather of the subject of this review, took up his abode in York county, Pa., where he passed the remainder of his life and where he left a number of descendants to perpetuate a worthy name. It should be noted that members of the family were found rendering valiant service as soldiers in the Continental line during the war of the Revolution. The brother, who settled in Baltimore county, Md., likewise left descendants, and numerous representatives of the name are found in that State at the present day.
George Emanuel Stabley, to whom this sketch is dedicated, was born in Hopewell township, this county, Feb. 12, 1876, son of Emanuel and Leah (Seachrist) Stabley, the latter of whom was a daughter of John and Susan Seachrist, who were honored residents of Chanceford township and members of stel-ling pioneer families of the county. Emanuel Stabley was likewise born in York county, and here he has ever since continued to reside, while he has so ordered his life as to merit and receive the unqualified respect and regard of his fellow men. A cabinetmaker by trade, he devoted his attention to the same as a voca-tion for a time, but for many years he owned and operated the Stabley sawmill, one-half mile southwest of Felton, in Hopewell town-ship, the section now being embraced in what is known as North Hopewell township, organized within late years. He has now retired from active business and resides in the village of Red Lion, this county. He is a Democrat in his political adherency, and his religious faith is that of the Lutheran church, of which his wife likewise was a devoted member. She died June 4, 1904, and her memory rests as a benediction upon all who came within the sphere of her gracious influence. Of the children, Rev. John F. is a clergyman of the Lu-theran church, and at the time of this writing is incumbent of a pastorate at Jennerstown, Somerset county, this State; Annie E. is the wife of Elmer Livingston, of Red Lion, Pa.; Carrie B. is the wife of Herman L. Greason, of York, Pa.; and George E. is the immediate subject of this sketch.

George E. Stabley passed his boyhood days in his native township, in whose public schools he secured his early educational discipline, con-tinuing his studies until he had attained the age of sixteen years, when, in 1892, he entered upon an apprenticeship in the art of telegraphy, in Red Lion, soon becoming a capable operator, and within that same year securing a position in the employ of the Baltimore & Lehigh Railroad Co., now the Maryland & Pennsyl-vania Railroad Co., in Muddy Creek Forks, Pa., where he continued to serve as operator and station agent until March 10, 1903, when he resigned the position and came to Dallastown to accept his present responsible office, in which connection he is giving most discriminating and acceptable service in both the technical and executive departments of the work.

In politics he accords a stanch allegiance to the Democratic party, and the hold which he main-tains on popular esteem is indicated in the fact that he has been called upon to serve as auditor of the borough of Dallastown. In a fraternal way Mr. Stabley is affiliated with Zerelda Lodge, No. 451, Ancient Free & Accepted Masons, and Dallas Lodge, No. 1017, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which latter he has been an officer.

On Aug. 6, 1898, Mr. Stabley was united in marriage to Miss Alice B. Conaway, who was born and reared in this county, being a daughter of Samuel A. and Frances (Hart-man) Conaway, of Dallastown. Mr. and Mrs. Stabley have three children, namely: Paul C., Mildred F. and Ruth N.

CHARLES STEINER, general superinten-dent of the mills of the York Silk Manufac-turing Company, is one of the most progressive men connected with the silk industry of York. His father, who was a raw silk broker, died in Zurich, Switzerland, in 1884, aged forty years, and his mother, Emily Berts-chinger, was a daughter of John Bertschinger, of Zurich, who was connected with the raw silk industry there. There were five children born to the parents of Charles Steiner, one of whom, Herman, died in 1894, aged twenty-five years. The survivors are: Emily, the wife of Fritz Freudwiler, owner of a coffee plantation and grower of rubber plants in Sumatra; Emma, at home; Henry, a chemist in Zurich; and Charles, of this sketch.

Charles Steiner was born in Zurich, Switz-erland, March 22, 1873, and was educated in the high school of that city, from which he was graduated, as well as from the Textile and Weaving school of Zurich, in 1894. Before attending the latter, however, Mr. Steiner spent three years studying the silk industry in the office of Stehli & Co., at Zurich. After his graduation from the textile school, Mr. Steiner was employed two years as goods ex-aminer, and came to America in December, 1896. His first occupation in this country was with an extensive silk mill in West Hoboken, N. J., remaining there five months, and then removed to Philadelphia, where he was con-nected for fourteen months with the Sanquoit Silk Manufacturing Company. His next pos-i-tion was that of superintendent of the Penn-sylvania Silk Company, at Carlisle, Pa., where he remained nine months and then removed to Bloomsburg, where for three years he was superintendent of the silk mill at that place. On June 15, 1902, Mr. Steiner came to York to fill the position of general superintendent of the plants of the York Silk Manufacturing Company, with two mills in York, one in Carlisle and one at Fleetwood. The combined annual output is valued at $2,500,000, and the products find a ready market all over the United States. The company employ 550 people in the two York mills, and 400 in the other two. When Mr. Steiner became superintendent of this company they had 200 looms and the weekly output was 14,000 yards. Now they have 700 looms and an output of 45,000 yards per week.

Mr. Steiner was married Oct. 2, 1897, to Emma Kundig, daughter of Joseph M. Kundig, a harness manufacturer of Arth, Switzerland, and two children have been born to this union: Charles Herman and Paul Hugo. Mr. Steiner belongs to Zwingli Reformed Church. His political sympathies are with the Republican party. He is a traveled gentleman and a fine conversationalist. In addition to his travels in this country, he visited his old home in Zurich in April, 1902, and in April, 1905, his wife and two children returned to that city on a five months' trip.

P. ANSTADT & SONS, printers and publishers at No. 117 East Princess street, York, are among the best known printers and publishers of that city. The business was established by Rev. Peter Anstadt, deceased, who was a prominent clergyman of the Lutheran Church, and it is now being conducted by Rev. Henry Anstadt and Charles P. Anstadt, under the old title of P. Anstadt & Sons.

Rev. Henry Anstadt was born in Selins Grove, Snyder Co., Pa., June 18, 1869, and was educated in the public schools of York, the York Collegiate Institute, the Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg (class of 1890), and the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg (1894), receiving the degree of A.M. in 1893. Mr. Anstadt was assistant pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church in Allegheny City, and then, coming to York, became associated with his father in the printing and publishing business. He took the first honor at the York Collegiate Institute, that of valedictorian, and at the Pennsylvania College carried off fourth honors in a class of thirty-five. He belongs to the Thirteen Club, better known as the York Junta, a literary club composed of congenial spirits. In politics he is a Prohibitionist.

William D. Hoffman, Sr., grandfather of George A., was a paper maker by trade, and for a number of years was superintendent of the mills in Baltimore county, Md. He was a captain in the Revolutionary war, and had a family of nine children.

William D. Hoffman, the father, was born in Baltimore Co., Md., in 1826, and received a common school education. Learning the paper making business he was made superintendent of the W. H. Hoffman & Sons' mills, which position he held for a number of years. He spent a short time in York county along the plank road, and in 1888 retired from active business life. His death occurred in 1899, while his wife, Elizabeth Armacost, survived until 1901. The children born to this worthy couple were as follows: Lucinda, Annie, Emma, Joseph and George A.

George A. Hoffman attended the schools of Baltimore county, Md., and later a high school, then District No. 1, from which he was graduated when seventeen years of age. From his father he learned the paper making business remaining with the latter five years. For a number of years Mr. Hoffman was employed at various places, being boss of the machine room in the mill at Rockdale for five years, spent a short time in West Virginia, and finally, in 1892, came to York Haven. He was made foreman of the finishing room, and held that office until July, 1904, when he resigned. At present Mr. Hoffman is interested in the Consumers Box Board & Paper Co., of which he is president. The company has a capital of $15,000 and intends to build one of the finest plants in the State at Lititz, Lancaster county.

In March, 1892, Mr. Hoffman married Laura Hoover, of Baltimore county, Md., and she died in November, 1893, having had one child, Evna. Mr. Hoffman's second wife was Miss Jennie Abel, daughter of John Abel, of York the children of this union being: Hazel
M., Ina E., Miriam and George, Jr. In politics Mr. Hoffman is a Democrat, but has never accepted public office other than school director, a position he has held for three years.

THOMAS SHIPLEY, general manager of the York Manufacturing Co., is of Scotch-Irish descent.

Samuel Shipley, his father, who was a shipwright by occupation, came from England about 1840 and settled in Jersey City, where he died in 1872, aged sixty-two years. He married Elizabeth McFall, daughter of a farmer in the North of Ireland. Her death occurred in 1888. She had eight children, three of whom died in infancy. The survivors are: John H., a shipwright of Jersey City; Samuel J., and William, mechanical engineers of New York City, associated in their professional work, and trading as S. J. Shipley & Co., representing the York Manufacturing Co. in New York City; Elizabeth, who married Samuel P. Cottrell, a farmer of Monmouth county, N. J.; and Thomas.

Thomas Shipley was born in Jersey City, June 30, 1861, and was educated in its public schools and the Cooper Institute of New York, in the latter institution taking a course in mechanical engineering and graduating in 1881. His first regular employment was with the Morris & Cummings Dredging Co. of Jersey City, and after serving as an apprentice machinist and filling various positions there he was promoted to the position of draughtsman. During 1883-84 he was employed by them in the erection of a dredging plant, spending one year in the Government employ in Brazil. His next venture was in building ice machines, the firm trading as Wood & Shipley. This was in 1884, and in the fall of 1886 Mr. Shipley went to Waynesboro, Pa., where he became connected with the Frick Company, as mechanical engineer and expert in ice refrigerating machinery. In 1892 Mr. Shipley severed his connections with the Frick Company, and for three years was engaged in the operation of two ice plants, one at Steubenville, Ohio, and another at Pittsburg. In 1895 he returned to the service of the Frick Company, becoming manager of the ice making and refrigerating business. In 1897 Mr. Shipley came to York, and became general manager of the York Manufacturing Co., which was at that time employing only fifty people. How well Mr. Shipley has managed the business may be inferred from the fact that the works now employ 1,000 people, and cover five times as much ground as in 1897.

Mr. Shipley was married Dec. 28, 1887, to Sarah Hunt, daughter of Samuel Hunt, a contracting carpenter of Jersey City. Four children have been born to this union: Raymond T., Samuel Hunt, Howard Vernon and Dorothy Sybil.

Mr. Shipley belongs to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity (from the Blue Lodge to the Mystic Shrine), and of the Lafayette Club. In politics he is a Republican. His home on Linden avenue is one of the handsomest in West York. In fact, it is one of the finest in all York, and an interesting fact connected with it is that Mr. Shipley, in order practically to illustrate the scope of the vast industrial concern of which he is the manager, had all the work done on the building by the skilled mechanics of the York Manufacturing Co., even to the gas and electric fittings, and thus Mr. Shipley's home may be said to be an enduring monument to the skill and possibilities of the establishment with which he has become so prominently identified.

JOHN T. OBERDORFF comes of an old York county family, who for several generations were well known weavers and shoemakers in that part of the State.

John Oberdorff, grandfather of John T., was the original owner of the Oberdorff homestead, but late in life exchanged it for one belonging to his son Samuel in Upper Windsor township, where he died. He was a weaver by trade.

Samuel Oberdorff, born on the farm in 1800, was a farmer and weaver all his life and died on the old homestead in 1872. At first a member of the Lutheran Church, he later became a believer in the Evangelical teachings. He married Elizabeth Emenheiser, who was born at Craleyville, Lower Windsor township, daughter of Jacob Emenheiser; she died on the old farm in 1888. The children born of this marriage were: Reuben, who died young; Zachariah, who married Miss Mary Ann Budd, and died in Lower Windsor township; Samuel, deceased in boyhood; Joshua, who married Margaret, daughter of Peter Baker, and died in Windsor township; William, of Windsor township, married Susan Frey: John T., and Elizabeth, Mrs. Milton Smith, of Red Lion.

John T. Oberdorff was born on the family homestead, May 17, 1841. He was sent to a school situated on the present site of Windsorville, where John Flinchbaugh's house stands, and his first teacher was Michael Antine. Three terms were also spent in the Koons school, and at the age of nineteen he completed his education. Until he was twenty he worked on the farm of his father, but then he learned to make shoes with his brother at home, and was so engaged for two years, still being employed on the paternal farm during the summer. Since that period his whole attention has been given to agriculture, at which he has been very successful. After working with his father two years more, he married and farmed for himself five years, until in 1872 he bought a tract which is still in his possession. In 1894 he rented that place, consisting of ninety-nine acres, and moved to his present homestead of forty acres. The first farm was bought in partnership with his brother Zachariah, whose interests he purchased later. In the beginning he was obliged to go in debt for the property, but had paid it all off, and more, before leaving the place.

On Nov. 22, 1864, Mr. Oberdorff was married to Susanna Paules, daughter of John and Katie Paules. No children have been born to them. Mrs. Oberdorff is a member of the Canandohley Reformed Church, and her husband attends at the Church of God. He is liberal in his support of that society, as well as of his wife's church, and the Freysville Lutheran, and is in every respect a God-fearing man of truly Christian life. He supports the Democratic party, but never has taken an active interest in political affairs. 'He has made his way in life by honest industry and commands the respect of all who have become familiar with his actions and his personality.

FRANCIS J. SNYDER, M. D., has, in his successful career as a physician and surgeon, given effective rebuttal of the application of the Biblical statement that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country." He was born in Winterstown, York county, Pa., June 28, 1864, son of Lewis and Maria (Snyder) Snyder, the former of whom was born and reared in France, and came to this country at the age of sixteen years, living in Baltimore, Md., until 1861. For a number of years Lewis Snyder was engaged in mercantile pursuits in York county, Pa., and is now living retired in Winters-town, one of York county's old and honored citizen, being over eighty years of age. He has long been a stanch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and his religious faith is that of the Evangelical church, of which his wife likewise was a devoted member.

The latter was born in York county, this State, in 1827, a daughter of John Snyder, and she was summoned into eternal rest in 1889, being survived by two children.

John Snyder, grandfather of the Doctor, was the founder of the town of Jacobus, York county, and was widely and most favorably known among the early settlers of this section of the State. He continued to reside in York county until his death, at the patriarchal age of eighty-seven years. It may farther be recorded that the Doctor's maternal grandmother bore the maiden name of Sarah Miller and that the maiden name of her mother was Spangler, the Spangler family being one of the oldest and most honored in York county.

Dr. Francis J. Snyder passed his boyhood days in his native village, and there he duly completed the prescribed course of the public and high schools, after which he began his professional study under the preceptorship of Dr. Charles G. Hildebrand, then engaged in practice in Winterstown, but who is now a successful practitioner in the town of Loganville, Pa. In 1884 Dr. Snyder matriculated in the College of Physicians & Surgeons in Baltimore, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1887, with his well earned degree of Doctor of Medicine. The same year he passed a successful examination at the Western Pennsylvania Medical College, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Snyder initiated the active work of his profession by locating in Jacobus, York county, where he built up a most successful business, there continuing his earnest labors for the period of fifteen years, at the expiration of which he came to the city of York, where he has since continued in the active work of his profession, and where his success has been equally pronounced and gratifying, his practice being of a distinctively representative character. He is a progressive and public-spirited citizen, and is held in high esteem in both business and social circles.

Dr. Snyder is a stanch Republican in his political proclivities, but has never been a seeker of official preferment; in religion he is identified with the Evangelical church, of which Mrs. Snyder likewise is a devoted member. In a professional way the Doctor is enrolled as a member of York County Medical Society, of which he was first vice-president in 1905; the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. At one time he was assistant surgeon for the Mahoning Valley Railroad, the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad, the low grade Division of the Allegheny Valley Railroad, the Bell, Lewis & Yates Coal & Iron Co., and the Adiron Island Coal Co. He is medical examiner for the Equitable Life Assurance Society (New York), and the Northwestern of Milwaukee. He was a member of the board of Congressional Conferers of the 20th Pennsylvania Congressional District in 1896. Dr. Snyder is also affiliated with the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks, the Patriotic Sons of America, the Ancient and Illustrious Order of Knights of Malta, and the Knights of Mystic Chain. He is a member of Good Will Fire Co. of Jacobus; was president of the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, in 1903, and is a member of the American Motor League.

On June 27, 1895, at Elmira, N. Y., Dr. Snyder was united in marriage to Miss Ada E. Loucks, who was born and reared in this county, a daughter of David M. and Emeline (Peeling) Loucks, honored residents of Jacobus, Pa., the former an ex-member of the Pennsylvania Legislature. Dr. and Mrs. Snyder have no children.

JOHN H. FRITZ, who was well-known throughout the State of Pennsylvania for the great and good work he accomplished as a minister of the Gospel, was a resident of York at the time of his death.

Mr. Fritz was born in Germany in 1820 or 1821, and was brought to the United States at the age of eight years, the party consisting of the father, the stepmother and three children. Mr. Fritz had attended school in his native country for a short time, and on locating in York, attended the public schools. On completing his preliminary education he became engaged in the study of law, but, although being admitted to the Bar, he never followed that profession. At about this time Mr. Fritz was married, and his wife influenced him to study for the ministry. He was obliged to prepare himself as he had for the law, and he entered the Episcopal seminary, in or near Washington, D. C. After leaving this institution he completed his studies with Dr. Lochman, of York, and was ordained. His first pastorate was Butler, Pa., where he remained for eleven years. He then was called to Millville, N. J., where he remained for three years; to Water Gap, Del., for three years, and, after three years at Doylestown, Pa., his health failing, he was obliged to give up his ministerial work. He came back to York to rest, fully intending to resume the work, but instead of improving, his health grew worse, and he passed away in York in 1897. Mr. Fritz finished building a new church in Doylestown, his last parish, and also in Millville, N. J. He had no children of his own, but he and his estimable wife adopted two children, whom they educated and reared. Mr. Fritz was a member of the I. O. O. F. before entering the ministry, but afterwards withdrew his name.

In 1857 Mr. Fritz was married to Louisa F. Miller, born in Lancaster, Pa., in 1818, who has made her home in York since she was one year old. Her father, the Rev. John Constantine Miller, was born in the Kingdom of Saxony, Germany, and came to America in 1801, with three Moravian preachers. The vessel upon which they were making their journey was caught in a terrible storm, and when repaired made port at Philadelphia. From there the party went to the Moravian settlement in Bethlehem. Mr. Miller was soon after sent to Lancaster, and while there was married in Lititz, Pa., to Anna Sophia Crist, of Nazareth, Pa. He was next sent to York, where he died a few years later. His wife survived him many years. Of this union Mrs. Fritz is the only living child.

PROF. JAMES W. GOSNELL, one of the leading educators, substantial men and prominent citizens of East York, Pa., was born June 2, 1868, in Shrewsbury township, York county, a son of Francis and Emma (Clark) Gosnell. Richard Gosnell, the paternal grandfather, was born in Baltimore county, Md., in 1797, of English parentage, and resided in that county until his death, in 1877, his business being that of a saddler. His children were: Sarah, Charity, Ephraim, Francis, Dorcas and Ann.

Francis Gosnell, father of our subject, was born in 1827 in Baltimore county, Md., where he was reared and educated. In 1864 he removed to York county, Pa., and engaged in farming in Shrewsbury township, and in 1870 removed to Newberry township, buying a farm of 100 acres on which he erected buildings and made many improvements. He died in 1894 and was interred at Paddletown cemetery. Francis Gosnell married (first) Henrietta Sechrist, who died in 1853, and is buried in New Market cemetery, Baltimore county, Md. His second marriage was to Emma Clark, who died here in 1895 and is buried in Paddletown cemetery, in Newberry township. There was one child of the first marriage, John, who married Lucinda Linebaugh, and is a farmer in Baltimore county, Md.; and the children of the second marriage were: Henrietta, wife of Jacob L. Mickey, who lives near Yocountown, in Newberry township; Kate, wife of Christian J. Miller, of Newberry township; Alice, who died aged four years in Baltimore county, Md.; Noah, married to Elsie Brememan and living on the old home in Newberry township; Benjamin, now deceased, who married Bertha A. Kise; James Wright, of this sketch; and Mary, wife of Kirk Shelley, of Steelton, Pennsylvania.

James Wright Gosnell attended the Portenbaugh school in his neighborhood until he was sixteen years old, and then enjoyed one summer session at a graded school at Goldsboro, taught by Prof. J. P. Hayes. This was followed by one term under John M. Wolfe, of Hanover, one spring term at Manchester, Md., two spring terms at Shippensburg, and six weeks at Millersville. During these school sessions Prof. Gosnell not only secured a superior education, but gained a wide acquaintance and made innumerable friends. After completing his education he began to teach, his first attempt being one term at the Redland school, in Newberry township, followed by three terms at the Diehl's school, in the same township. He was then secured by the Goldsboro grammar school, where he taught for four terms. In 1893 he came to Lewisberry, where he has taught for thirteen terms as principal of the school. This is a rather remarkable record for so young an educator. During this period he has turned out sixty-three teachers. In a way, Prof. Gosnell has been handicapped, on account of a very serious accident from which he suffered on May 15, 1884. This was during the demolition of an old barn, when he was caught under some falling timber and suffered such injury to his good right arm as necessitated its amputation. In this affliction, Prof. Gosnell had the earnest and sincere sympathy of everyone in the community. In spite of this misfortune, he has accomplished a great deal both in his profession and in taking a citizen's place in public affairs. He served one year as auditor of Newberry township, and has been judge of elections, the youngest man who has ever here held that office. Ever since coming to the borough of Lewisberry he has been town clerk. His Republican friends nominated him for the office of county prothonotary, but his duties prevented his making a canvass and the election resulted in a defeat on this account.

In 1890 Prof. Gosnell was married to Mary Ellen Kise, a daughter of Henry and Sophia Kise, of East Prospect, Pa. Sophia Kise died July 26, 1891, and her husband in March, 1899. Mr. and Mrs. Kise had three children, namely: Flora, wife of William Brubaker, a barber, paperhanger and painter at East Prospect; Mary Ellen, wife of Prof. Gosnell; and Bertha, wife of Benjamin F. Gosnell. Prof. Gosnell and wife have these children: Noah R., born 1890; Walter Wright, born 1892; Russel Reid, born 1894; Frank Kise, born 1895; John Henry, born 1897; Mabel Elva, born 1899. Russel Reid died 1894. Prof. Gosnell bought his fine home in East York in December, 1904. It is a very attractive place and beautifully situated.

In politics our subject is prominently identified with the Republican party and he has served as a delegate to a number of county and State conventions. For a long time he has been an active member of the M. E. Church, a trustee, class-leader, superintendent, assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school and is president of the local Epworth League. His fraternal association is with the Jr. O. U. A. M., of which he is a charter member of Lodge No. 1012, of Lewisberry, in which he has held all the offices. He is a man who commands the respect of all who know him.
JOHN SHELLY, a lifelong resident of the beautiful Shelly Island in the Susquehanna river, was born there on his father's farm, March 16, 1831, son of John Moses and Lydia (Herman) Shelly. Shelly's Island, including about 210 acres, was deeded by the Penns to John Shelly's great-grandfather, and it was the family homestead from that time, although Mr. Shelly's grandfather died in Dauphin county. John Moses Shelly was born there March 21, 1799, passed his whole life there as a prosperous farmer and with his wife was buried on the island that he loved so well. His marriage occurred April 6, 1824, to Lydia Herman, who was born April 10, 1808, in Lewisberry, York county, and the following children were born to their union: Ann, born Aug. 7, 1825; Herman, born Sept. 13, 1827; Levi, born Sept. 21, 1829, was a Methodist minister; John, born March 16, 1831; Benjamin Franklin, born Jan. 18, 1833; Moses, born Oct. 20, 1835, a hotel keeper in Goldsboro, married (first) Matilda Hanelon, and (second) Mrs. Mary Huston; and Lydia became Mrs. Detwiler.

John Shelly grew up on Shelly's Island, receiving his education there, and after marriage settled there, eventually purchasing the land from the other heirs. Mr. and Mrs. Shelly were both exceedingly hospitable and fond of company, and the ideal situation of their home, with the warm welcome always waiting, drew their friends there frequently. Mrs. Shelly was formerly Agnes May, born in 1833. Her paternal grandfather came from Germany, settling in York county, where he died. Her father, Bernard May, was a butcher in Harrisburg, who died there from smallpox before Mrs. Shelly had reached four months of age. Her mother, Mrs. Jane (James) May, afterward married Amos Waidley, of Cumberland county, and she lived to be eighty-two years old. Mr. and Mrs. Shelly were married at Middlesex, Cumberland county, July 12, 1852, and their children, all born on Shelly's Island, were as follows: Ida S., born Aug. 25, 1854; married James Southern, a banker in Sidney, Neb.; Franklin, born July 21, 1856, died at the age of four months; Robert May, born July 12, 1857, died unmarried at the age of twenty-eight; Latimore S., born Dec. 28, 1859, a manufacturer of patent locks at Lancaster, married Miss Tripple, of Safe Harbor, and died at the age of twenty-nine; John S., born Sept. 2, 1861, married Miss Hummel, of Hummels-town, and resides in Harrisburg; Charles B., born Oct. 12, 1869, died at the age of twenty-eight; and Herman James, born Dec. 25, 1879, is at home. John Shelly's death occurred May 26, 1892, and he was laid to rest in Mt. Olivet cemetery, Fairview township, York county. He was widely known and had a high standing in the community. In politics he was a Republican. Mrs. Shelly continued to reside on the island for four years more, having lived there longer than any other woman. She now occupies a handsome home in Goldsboro, where she gathers around her a large circle of friends. She is remarkably well-informed, and is a woman fond of the best literature. During the flood of 1904 she experienced much trouble, but her life is now flowing again in its usual channels.

HUMPHREY R. LLOYD. The growth and prosperity of the borough of Delta have been very largely due to the development of the slate quarries in that vicinity, and its progress has now covered a period of half a century or more. Among those who have done the most for the town, and had the most faith in its future, has been Humphrey R. Lloyd, whose own success has been coincident with that of Delta. He was born in Festingford, in the north of Wales, in 1840, son of Robert and Jane Lloyd, and had six brothers, all now deceased except Edward, of Delta.

At the age of sixteen Mr. Lloyd emigrated to the United States and located first at Slatington, Lehig Co., Pa. Thence he migrated West, but soon returned to the East, spent a short time in Vermont, and in 1858 settled in Delta. For a number of years he worked in the slate quarry, in 1866 beginning operations on his own account in the Miles quarry, managing that and various others until 1889, and during these two decades doing much to develop the hidden wealth of the Peach Bottom district. Simultaneously with his opening of the Miles quarry, Mr. Lloyd embarked in the hotel business, and took charge of "Hotel Bangor," which he continued for three years; in 1869 he also conducted another hotel at the Mine Hill, which he managed for a year, in 1870 building the "Hotel Delta," now the "Auditorium," the first modern hotel in the village. This house he personally conducted until 1885, while the ownership remained in his hands until 1900, when he sold the property. On relinquishing the active management, in 1885, he erected his present residence, which is one of the handsomest homes in Delta and an ornament to the town.

Mr. Lloyd is also closely associated with the business and banking interests of Delta. When the Miles National Bank was projected in 1890, he gave ready and hearty support to the proposition, and in conjunction with S. B. Miles perfected the organization and incorporated the institution. In 1900 he was one of the organizers and incorporators of the People's National Bank, was its first vice-president, and has filled the office continuously since. He has been one of the largest builders in the town, and has erected many of the finest structures, which have added greatly to the importance of the place and increased its wealth. The first Masonic hall in Delta was built by Mr. Lloyd, for he is an enthusiastic Mason, being a member of the A. F. & A. M. Lodge, No. 176, Delta, and of Adoniram Chapter, No. 21, and Monumental Commandery, No. 3, K. T., of Baltimore.

In 1863 Humphrey R. Lloyd was united in marriage to Jane Williams, daughter of Hugh and Winifred (Jones) Williams, who were among the first Welsh settlers in Delta, where they arrived in 1843. They had two other daughters: Winifred, who married Elias Roland, and resides in the State of Washington, and Ellen, Mrs. John W. Jones, of West Bangor, Pa. Mr. Williams' death occurred in 1865, and that of his wife in 1884. Three children have been born to Humphrey R. and Jane Lloyd, of whom the youngest, Hugh, died at the age of four years. The oldest, Robert, born June 18, 1865, in Harford county, Md., married Ida May Smith, of Baltimore, daughter of John W. and Catherine Smith, and they are the parents of three children. They reside in Delta, where Robert is in business with his father. In 1891 he was appointed notary public by Gov. Robert E. Pattison, and has been re-appointed three consecutive times. He is a member of Esdranelon Lodge, No. 176, A. F. & A. M. of Delta; of Concordia Chapter, R. A. M., No. 1, of Baltimore; and of Monumental Commandery, No. 3, of the same city. Humphrey R. Lloyd's only daughter, Jane W., married Edward Hughes, a native of Delta. For a number of years he was employed as a slate dresser, but is now in the milk business at Delta and resides on the former homestead of Rev. Samuel Park, adjoining the farm. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes have two children.

Humphrey R. Lloyd began his career in the humble capacity of a quarryman, but by industry and wisely directed effort has advanced to the front rank among the citizens of his adopted town, and has made himself an important factor in the development of the place. He has fairly earned his position of influence and honor, and the town may well be proud to have his name identified with its interests. He is a Republican in his political belief and was on the first board of councilmen of Delta borough.

EDWIN S. ZIEGLER is secretary and treasurer of the Hoover Wagon Works Company, of York, where the works are located.

Mr. Ziegler's great-great-grandfather came from Germany, and his grandfather, John K. Ziegler, was a farmer of Codorus township, York Co., Pa. His father, Israel K. Ziegler, who was born on the old homestead, was also a farmer, and his mother, who was Anna M. Stick, was a daughter of Henry M. Stick, from Stick's Tavern, a noted hostelry thirty miles from Baltimore kept by E. S. Ziegler's grandfather. Three children were born to the parents of Edwin S. Ziegler: J. Clayton, of Indian Head, Md.; Jennie, the wife of J. K. Klinefelter, of York; and Edwin S., with whom this sketch chiefly deals.

Edwin S. Ziegler was born on the old homestead, May 17, 1878, and received his education in the York Collegiate Institute. He then entered the wire fence business with his father, becoming connected with the office of the Hoover Carriage Works in 1899, and in 1903 being elected secretary and treasurer. The entire plant of the company was destroyed by fire on March 9, 1904, but was completely rebuilt and ready for occupancy and operation by Sept. 1st of that year. The new works cover seventy thousand square feet of floor space. Over one hundred and fifty people are employed, and the express and delivery wagons of which the company makes a specialty find a market all over the world, including Africa, Australia and other distant sections. The officers of the company are: C. H. Dempwolf, president; Hon. D. F. Lafean, vice-president; Edwin S. Ziegler, secretary and treasurer, and I. K. Ziegler and C. C. Frick, directors.
Mr. Ziegler was married Feb. 22, 1900, to Miss Jennie Sultner, daughter of Charles Sultner, of York, and one child has come to this union. Charles Israel, born Nov. 25, 1902. Mr. Ziegler belongs to St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, where he is a teacher in the Sunday-school. He is a Democrat in political faith.

NOAH KOLLER. Among the representative farmers of York county, Noah Koller stands prominently as a good citizen, enterprising business man, and first-class farmer. He resides on his well-improved farm in Spring-field township. He was born in Shrewsbury township, March 4, 1849, son of John W. Koller.

Jacob Koller, the grandfather of our subject, was a farmer of Shrewsbury township, York county. He married Miss Eva Winters, and both died in Shrewsbury township, and were buried at Fissel's church. Their children were: Lydia, the wife of Emanuel Tyson, of Shrewsbury township; Elizabeth, who married Solomon Hengso, of Glen Rock; Sarah, widow of Charles Frey, now making her home with her children; Leah, living at Glen Rock; John W., father of Noah; Jacob, deceased; Daniel, living in Philadelphia with his daughter; and Henry and Samuel, deceased.

John W. Koller was born in Shrewsbury township, where he received a common-school education, also assisting his father at farming. He married Christene Sheaffer, a daughter of John and Grace (Overmiller) Sheaffer. Mrs. Koller was born in 1823, and is now making her home with her son, our subject. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Koller located in Shrewsbury township, where he followed farming, and later located in Springfield township, where he purchased one of William Foust's farms, known as the old Philip Hilderbrand farm, consisting of eighty-four acres. Mr. Koller owned two other farms in the same township, one of 103, and the other of thirty-five acres, having in all 222 acres. He died on his farm in 1872, and is buried at Glen Rock. In politics he was a Democrat. Mr. and Mrs. Koller had the following children: William, who married Lovinia Warner, is a retired farmer, living in Springfield township, near Lorne; Levi died shortly after his father; one died in infancy; Noah; Elizabeth, deceased, was the wife of George Lentz; and Henry lives in Glen Rock, Pennsylvania.

Noah Koller attended the Seitz school in Shrewsbury township until nineteen years of age, and remained with his father until the latter's death. He then took the farm upon which he now resides, at appraisement, and is engaged successfully in general farming, raising the usual crops of his section. He married Eliza Sterner, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Hilderbrand Sterner, and she died in 1903, being buried at Glen Rock. Their children were as follows: James, who is employed in the furniture factory at Glen Rock, married Jennie Hilderbrand; Elizabeth died when seven months old; Mollie is at home; Eli died at the age of twenty years, eleven months and one day; Maggie married Eli Henry, and they are operating the old farm; John, a farmer of Springfield township, married Lillie Dubbs; and Harry died in February, 1905.

Mr. Koller is a Democrat, and is among his township's leading and representative men, always supporting good movements in the community.

JOHN KENEDY, who carries on extensive farming and stock raising operations in Lower Chanceford township, is one of the representative agriculturists of York county. He was born one mile from Bell's Ferry, Md., June 14, 1863, son of James and Mary (Morris) Kenedy.

James Kenedy was born in Dublin, Ireland, and came to the United States when a boy. Most of his life was spent in Chanceford township, where he carried on farming, being thus engaged at the time of his death. He married Mary Morris, who died when our subject was eight weeks old. Mr. Kenedy's second wife was also named Mary. For his third wife he married Hannah (Wright) McKinley, who survives her husband.

When John Kenedy was four years old his father removed to Peach Bottom township, and there the youth attended the common schools, thereby acquiring his education. From the age of six until he was seventeen years old he attended the old Glenwood school, and at the latter age began farming the home place on shares. This he continued until 1886, when he removed to the farm adjoining his present one, consisting of 50 acres, which he had purchased from his father the year previous. There he remained two years, when he purchased his present place, a fine 100-acre tract, from R. B. Hyson, who had purchased it from Daniel and Henry Wise, the farm having been in the Wise family for many generations. Mr. Kenedy carries on general farming and does a great deal of stock raising, and has been very successful.

Mr. Kenedy was married Dec. 23, 1886, to Miss Bertha C. Walker, who was born on the Walker homestead Feb. 14, 1871, daughter of John and Sarah A. (Wise) Walker. These children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Kenedy: Samuel R., now aged sixteen years, who is now at school; Sarah A., aged six years; and John Dale, aged four years.

Mr. Kenedy, or “Jack,” as he is familiarly called, is a Democrat in politics, and served his township faithfully during 1899, 1900 and 1901 as assessor.

JESSE SHEWELL, one of the well-known, substantial and esteemed citizens of Glen Rock, York county, a survivor of the great Civil War and for the past forty years one of the county’s noted musicians, was born May 6, 1846, in Shrewsbury township, a son of Samuel and Mary (Sechrist) Shewell.

Jesse Shewell, his paternal grandfather, located at Shrewsbury, Pa., many years ago, and followed the trade of harnessmaking. His three children were: Zacharias; Mary, wife of John Erman; and Samuel. The grandfather on the maternal side, Jacob Sechrist, was a farmer of York county. His children by his first marriage were: Israel, William C., Mary, Catherine, Rebecca and Leah. By his second union he had three children: Daniel, Mary (wife of Benjamin Sides), and Salome.

Samuel Shewell, father of Jesse, was a cabinetmaker by trade. He held a number of township offices, and was a highly respected citizen. He married Mary Sechrist, and they had these children: Samuel; Jesse; William; George; Maria, wife of Isaac Prosser; Annie, wife of William Donley; and two children who died in infancy.

Jesse Shewell was educated in the common schools of Shrewsbury and worked on his father’s farm until twenty-one years of age. He then rented land which he worked for about ten years. Mr. Shewell also worked in a brickyard and at other employments for a few years, and then learned the carpenter trade. This knowledge made him acceptable as an employee of a large industrial company, the Glen Manufacturing Company, and he worked as a carpenter for twenty-one successive years. That he possessed the best kind of common sense and good judgment is very evident. During these years of work at his trade he providently saved his money and, as able, purchased lot after lot of land, one at a time, and each year built a comfortable house on these lots. He now owns twenty-one such houses and lots, which represent his savings and show a degree of thrift which is in every way commendable. These pleasant homes bring him in an excellent return.

In 1864 Mr. Shewell enlisted for service in the Civil War, entering Company A, 50th P. V. I., and served until the close of the war, participating in the battles of Fort Steadman and Fort McGillery and taking part in the capture of Petersburg, Va. His record is that of a faithful, loyal soldier.

Perhaps, however, Mr. Shewell is better known to York county as a musician than in any other light, however honorable. There are few musical organizations in this section, especially of a band character, in which he has not in some way been interested or with which he has not been connected. Almost all boys of the age of ten years are attracted by band music and many try to imitate the harmonious sounds of the different instruments, but there are few lads of that age who have sufficient natural ability and technical knowledge to be accepted as members of such an organization. Mr. Shewell was no older when he was made a member of a band and has been more or less connected with the work ever since. For forty years he has been a band leader and as such, and as a thorough musician, has a reputation second to none in the State. An organization which he formed some years since, composed entirely of boys of tender years, is easily recalled. So thoroughly did he drill them in the use of their various instruments that the boy band gained a wide reputation and was in great demand as a drawing card at entertainments of various kinds all over the State. With his boy band he frequently appeared at picnics and similar entertainments.

Mr. Shewell was married in 1877 to Elizabeth Snyder, and they had six children: Howard, Edward, Clarence, Alice, Stella, and one child that died in infancy. The mother died, and in 1894 Mr. Shewell was married (second) to Agnes Stanford. They had two children, viz.: Mabel, and one that died in in-
Mr. Strickler is a Republican in politics. Socially he belongs to the Country Club and to the Lafayette Club, and in these societies, and wherever he is known, is generally well liked.

EMANUEL SHEPP, a prominent railroad man of York Haven Borough, who has been identified with the Northern Central railroad system for a number of years, beginning with this company as a day laborer and advancing himself until he now holds the responsible position of foreman of Division 14½, which covers three miles of track, was born in 1863 in East Manchester township, son of Alexander and Catherine (Knaub) Shepp.

John Shepp, the grandfather of Emanuel, was born in East Manchester township, near Starview, where he followed farming and conducted a hotel for a number of years, later removing to Springettsbury township, near Stony Brook, where he followed farming until his death.

Alexander Shepp was born in 1831, in East Manchester township, where he received a common-school education and for a time was a day laborer. He then went to farming, and for thirteen years conducted a saw mill, also engaging in the quarrying of stone. In 1855 he married Catherine Knaub, who was born in Newberry township, daughter of Daniel Knaub; she died in 1897. His death occurred in 1902, and both are interred at Pleasureville, Springettsbury township. Their children were: George C., living at Baltimore; Amanda, who married John Cousler, and resides in North York borough; Sarah, who died Jan. 22, 1891, the wife of John W. Staley; John E., who died Jan. 20, 1864, aged six days; Emanuel; Catherine, who died March 10, 1880, and is buried at Pleasureville, Springettsbury township; Daniel, who lives at No. 641 Wallace street, York; Albert, living on Philadelphia street, York; Lillie, who died at the age of six years, March 10, 1880.

Emanuel Shepp attended the public schools of his native place until about eighteen years of age, and assisted his father until the age of twenty-two. On April 1, 1885, he engaged with the N. C. railroad as a day laborer on sub-division No. 13, and on Feb. 1, 1890, was advanced to assistant foreman, a position he held until February, 1893, when he was promoted to the position of foreman of Division
No. 14½. Mr. Shepp resides at York Haven, and has about three miles of track to take care of, which he does very efficiently.

In 1884 Mr. Shepp married Annie E. Hildebaugh, daughter of Zacharias and Louisa (Landis) Hildebaugh, and the children born to this union were: Oscar, born May 9, 1885, is freight clerk at York, and a stockholder in the York Haven Canning Factory; George A., born Jan. 14, 1891, a very bright young man, is attending school.

In politics Mr. Shepp is a Republican, and has been called upon by his fellow citizens to hold many positions of honor and trust, and in every case has served with honor to himself and to the satisfaction of the community of which he is so useful a citizen. He has held the offices of councilman, school director, borough clerk, chief burgess of York Haven borough, and lesser incumbencies. He has connected himself with the United Brethren Church, of which is a very valued member. He has been class leader for four years; Sunday-school superintendent for five years; trustee for ten years, and trustee of the parsonage eight years. Mr. Shepp possesses settled convictions concerning personal and political integrity, a manly dignity of character, an honesty of purpose and a feeling of public spirit which does credit to a representative of one of York county's old families.

ELIAS GOOD, one of the highly respected, retired farmers of Manchester township, was born on the old homestead in Manchester township, in 1828, son of Rudolph and Elizabeth (Engle) Good.

John Good, the great-grandfather of Elias, was born in Lancaster county, where he followed farming. On Aug. 9, 1750, he bought a large farm of 284 acres in Manchester township, York county, but did not move from the place of his nativity. He died inMartic township, Lancaster county, where he was buried.

Peter Good, grandfather of our subject, was born in Lancaster county, and also followed farming, removing to York county sometime between 1780 and 1785. Here he married Susan Stehman, of Lancaster county, and they had these children: John married a Miss Keller, and died in this township; Henry, married Elizabeth Strickler, and died in Manchester township; Peter married a Miss Leib, and died in Erie county, N. Y.; Jacob married Catherine Bear, and died in this township; Rudolph is mentioned below; Abraham married a Miss Snyder and died in Erie Co., N. Y. Peter Good took for his second wife Barbara Treigler, and two children were born to them, both of whom died in infancy. Mr. Good and his wives were buried in the private burying ground on the farm.

Rudolph Good was born on the old farm in Manchester township, and at his father's death became manager of the home farm, where he followed farming all of his life, his death occurring in 1869. Mr. Good married Elizabeth Engle, daughter of Jacob Engle, and a member of a very large family. She died in this township on the old farm, and is buried beside her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Good were Dunkards, he having been connected with the church since very young manhood. Mr. Good was much missed in the community, but the influence of his good and kindly life remains. The children born to Mr. Good and his wife were: Jacob died young; Mattie died single in this township; Elias; Susan married Elias Hake, who died in Fairview township, York county; and David married Susan Ginter, and is living at Manchester borough.

Elias Good attended the township schools until he was twenty years of age, assisting his father on the farm. In 1852 he married Louisa Bear, daughter of George and Sarah (Smyser) Bear of Spring Garden township, and they located at the home farm for four years. He then bought a part of the old home farm, consisting of fifty-five acres, and in 1857 built a fine house and good, substantial barn, and continued to work his farm until 1902, when he retired from active life. Mrs. Good died in April, 1865, and is buried at the home graveyard. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Good: Adeline married Albert Hake, a florist of Manchester borough; Amanda married Andrew Hake, and died in Fairview township; and Anna married Augustus Hake, and resides in York. Mr. Good's second marriage was to Susie Musser, daughter of Benjamin H. and Elizabeth (Rupley) Musser.

Mr. Good is a consistent member of the Brothers in Christ Church, of which he is an active worker. Mr. Good's place is one of the finest appearing farms in the township. of which its fortunate owner is credited with being one of the leading capitalists. He is a reliable man and upright citizen, and is held in very high esteem.

GEORGE F. TROUT, one of the prominent and leading citizens of Hopewell township, York county, influential alike in its political, business and social circles, is at present engaged in the general merchandise business at Stewartstown, conducting one of the largest patronized stores of the vicinity. He was born in Hopewell township Sept. 10, 1865, son of Adam H. and Agnes (Anderson) Trout.

Adam Trout, grandfather of George F., was a farmer of Hopewell township, and a member of the United Brethren Church. He had these children: William; Adam H.; John; Camill; David; Sarah, who married Jacob Fisher; Amanda, who married Wallie Mitchell; Mary, who married Bud Davis; Betsey A., who married Jacob Grove; and Emmaline, who married Emanuel Kooler.

John Anderson, maternal grandfather of George F. Trout, was also a farmer of Hopewell township, and a member of the United Brethren Church. In religion he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. These children were born to him: Dock; William; Agnes, Mrs. Trout; Gussie, who married Jacob Grove; Elizabeth, who married Dr. Grove; Margaret, who married Charles Seachrist; and Amanda, who married Adam E. Austin.

Adam H. Trout followed farming all his life in Hopewell township. To him and his wife the following children were born: Nelson; George F.; Ellie, who married Robert Roop, of Baltimore; A. W.; Les C.; William; Purl and Charles.

George F. Trout received his education in the public schools of Hopewell township, and worked on a farm until twenty-five years of age, when he established the general mercantile business in which he is now engaged in Stewartstown. His store is 30x60 feet, three stories high, and is well stocked with general merchandise, dry goods, groceries, hardware, notions, and a general line of all kinds of goods calculated to supply the trade. In conjunction with his general merchandise store, Mr. Trout owns and operates a bakery and ice cream factory, in which business he deals wholesale as well as retail. He has been engaged in his business since 1890, and has been successful in his efforts to build up a paying trade among the residents of his section.

In 1891 Mr. Trout married Annie Roop, daughter of Jacob Roop, of Maryland, and two children have been born to them, Allen and Hiida. Fraternally Mr. Trout is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias; is a charter member of Pen Mar Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Stewartstown; Shrewsbury Lodge, No. 423, A. F. & A. M., and Howell Chapter and Gettysburg Commandery of York; and Zembo Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Harrisburg, Pa. He also belongs to the I. O. H., and carries insurance in the Penn Mutual Life of Philadelphia, and the Northwestern of Milwaukee, Wis. In religion he is a devout member and liberal supporter of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he is a trustee. In politics Mr. Trout is a staunch Democrat, and has been a delegate to the Democratic County convention several times. He has been treasurer of the school board for a number of years, and is now serving his ninth year as school director. Mr. Trout is one of the enterprising citizens of Stewartstown, and is well known all over the county for his energy and ability, and he is justly considered one of the representative men of this section.

HARRY H. HAWKINS, postmaster of Spring Grove Postoffice, at Spring Grove, York county, is one of the representative men of his town, and a native of Spring Grove, where he was born June 15, 1870, son of Isaac J. Hawkins. The latter was born in Spring Grove, Lancaster county, Dec. 18, 1831, son of John Hawkins, a native of that county, who for many years lived at Spring Grove; there he married Elizabeth Campbell, a most estimable lady.

Isaac J. Hawkins was a papermaker and after some years' residence at Spring Grove, Lancaster county, removed to a place by the same name in York county, where he was employed in the paper mill owned by P. H. Glattfelder. The mother of our subject, who is still living, was Lucetta Fultz, daughter of John and Nancy (Myers) Fultz, and she was born at Spring Grove, York county. Six children, all still living, were born to the union of the parents of our subject: Ellen, wife of Henry Smith; James E., a machine tender at the paper mill; Charles, an electrician; George F., also an electrician; Harry H.; and Minnie K., at home.

Harry H. Hawkins first attended the public schools of Spring Grove, and then entered York County Academy, at York, where he enjoyed the privilege of several terms' tuition. Leaving school he learned the trade of cigar making with Sprenkel & Koutz, of Spring Grove, and remained with this house for a period of ten years. In January, 1902, he was honored by appointment to the office of postmaster for a term of four years. Since taking charge of the office, he has proved himself worthy of confidence, and is a painstaking, efficient and obliging official. Fraternally he is a member of the Mystic Chain, and of the Order of United American Mechanics, as well as of the Friendship Hose Co., No. 1. He is a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church at Spring Grove and an active worker in the Y. M. C. A., being on the Physical Committee of that organization. Enterprising, progressive, a good Republican, and honorable citizen, Mr. Hawkins both as a public official and as a private individual, has won and retains the respect and esteem of all with whom he is brought into contact.

JAMES H. SCHALL, treasurer of the Keystone Farm Machine Company, York, Pa., was born in that city, son of the late Michael Schall, a well known and influential citizen. After duly availing himself of the privileges of the York County Academy our subject continued his studies in the Cheltenham Military Academy, at Ogontz, Pa., and the Bryant & Stratton Business College, Philadelphia. After completing his school work he was for a time employed as bookkeeper in his native city, after which he assumed the position of secretary and treasurer of the People's Electric Light Company of York, this being the first company of the sort organized in the city. After retaining this position three or more years Mr. Schall became private secretary to his father, and later he engaged in the manufacturing of confectionery, to which line of enterprise he gave his attention for several years. In 1895 he engaged in the insurance-brokerage business in his home city, and in that line he continued operations for the ensuing three years. Being thus occupied at the time of the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, he forthwith manifested his intrinsic patriotism, being mustered in as a private in the 8th P. V. I., and proceeded with his command to the front. He was made a second lieutenant of Company A, in which capacity he served eleven months, or until the close of the war, when he received his honorable discharge.

Upon his return home Mr. Schall was appointed local representative in York for the Underwriters' Association of the Middle Department of Pennsylvania, embracing Adams and York counties, for which organization he has been the official stamp clerk, an office in which he has well maintained his popularity among the insurance agents within his jurisdiction, while gaining the unqualified commendation of the underwriters. In addition to performing the responsible duties of this position, Mr. Schall is treasurer and was for some months (after the death of the former manager) acting manager of the Keystone Farm Machine Company, representing one of the most important industrial enterprises of York. He is a wide-awake and progressive young business man and is held in high regard in both the business and social circles of his home city. In politics Mr. Schall gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and his religious faith is that of the Protestant Episcopal Church; he is a communicant of St. John's Church, and he has been a member of its vestry for several years past.

Mr. Schall belongs to the Masonic fraternity, is secretary of the Country and Lafayette clubs; and in all his relations—church, social, etc.—is greatly esteemed for his pleasant personality and his integrity in all the affairs of life.

CORNELIUS PRALL, for many years a prosperous farmer in Hopewell township, and one of the prominent citizens of that section, is a native of the region, born on a farm now owned by his brother David, the date of his birth being Jan. 24, 1838. He is a son of Asher G. and Mary (Trout) Prall, of Hopewell township.

Asher G. Prall died May 30, 1890, aged eighty-two years, and his wife died in 1889, aged eighty-nine years. They were faithful workers of the Zion Methodist U. P. Church. Their children were: John Wesley, who died at the age of seven years; one that died in infancy unnamed; Cornelius, mentioned below; David, who married Margaret Enfield, and has seven children, Mary, Elizabeth E., Carrie, Wesley, Elmer, Bertha and David; and Mary Jane, who is her brother, Cornelius' housekeeper, and who is an active member of the Zion Methodist U. P. Church, which she has attended from childhood.

When Cornelius Prall was eight or ten years old his father moved from the farm where the boy was born to the one which is now the property of the latter. There he grew to manhood, attending school until he was twenty years old. He was noted as one of the best scholars of that region, being naturally fond of study, and especially bright in mathematics, and he was fully qualified to teach. After leaving school Mr. Prall worked for his father until 1862, after which he spent seven years working for various farmers in the township. After his brother David married, Cornelius Prall returned home and took charge of the place until his father's death, working it on shares. When Asher G. Prall died, he bequeathed the farm to Cornelius, who has ever since resided there. In 1902, however, he gave up active participation in the farm work, and made arrangements to have the place operated for him.

Mr. Prall has never married. In politics he is a strong Democrat, while his religious views are those of the Presbyterian faith, in which he was reared.

HENRY F. KOHLER, manufacturer of cigars at Nashville, Pa., is one of the enterprising business men and public-spirited citizens of his locality. He was born July 17, 1863, in York county, near Kohler's Mill, an old buhr-mill, which is located on the Little Codorus, son of Jacob and Lydia (Husson) Kohler.

(I) Baltzer Kohler was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and a man of some prominence in his locality.

(II) Jacob Kohler was born in York county, and engaged in farming. In politics he was a Democrat, and he served as commissioner of York county. In religious faith he was a Lutheran. His wife's maiden name was Seachrist, and they had the following children: George; Catherine; Jacob, a farmer and miller; Mary, John; Adam; Eli; and Charles.

(III) Jacob Kohler (2), father of Henry F., was born in York county, near Windsor Station, in April, 1837. He was a farmer, miller and carpenter, and followed all these vocations until his retirement. His wife, Lydia, was born in 1840, daughter of Frank Husson. Five children were born to Jacob and Lydia Kohler: Ada; Wesley, of Dallas; Jacob, of Seven Valley; Seaton, at Jacobus, York county, a cigar manufacturer; and Henry F. The mother of these died in 1870, and Jacob Kohler married (second) Miss Ellen Hildebrand, of York county, daughter of Jeremiah and Friederica (Reincker) Hildebrand, and sister of Ida, Amy, Lizzie and Susan. By this second marriage children were born as follows: Wilbur J., who was educated at the York Academy and, later, at the Westchester State Normal School, and is now a minister of the Reformed Church; Gordon E.; Paul E.; Ella F., wife of Robert Beoekel; and Charles H., a cigarmaker.

(IV) Henry F. Kohler received a good common-school education at the Kohler schoolhouse, and later went to the Jacobus schoolhouse, in Springfield township, leaving school in his eighteenth year. At that time he began to learn the trade of cigarmaking with Miller & Williams, at Jacobus, and when he had completed his course traveled as salesman. In September, 1889, he embarked in his business at Jacobus, where he continued nine years, when he sold the factory to G. A. Kohler, who has continued it. He then superintended the cigar factory of Bear Sprinkle Co., at West Manchester, about four years. In March, 1901, Mr. Kohler located at Nashville, opening a factory, and he engaged extensively in manufacturing cigars, giving employment to from ninety to one hundred persons. The product of his factory is sold principally through the western states, and the cigars are noted for their superior quality. His special brands are 144. Happy Jim, William T. Hall, Spinoza, Andrew Johnson, Benjamin Chew, Judge Shepherd, Home Run, George Stevenson and Heroic.

On Oct. 30, 1888, Mr. Kohler married Miss Isabel Shaffer, of Glen Rock, York Co., Pa., daughter of Edward and Ellen (Epplcy) Shaffer. Four children were born to them: Clarence E.; Norman V.; Carl K.; and Horace Ellwood. In politics Mr. Kohler is a Democrat, and takes an active part in local, county and State politics. He, his wife and two sons are consistent members of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church at Spring Grove. Socially he belongs to the Knights of Malta. He is a thorough man of business, successful, enterprising, and one who commands the unqualified respect and esteem of all who know him.

JOHN H. DECHERT, general agent at York, Pa., for the Equitable Life Insurance Company, is one of the most prominent and successful men in his line in the city. He was born Dec. 31, 1863, at Chambersburg, Pa., son of J. L. and Helen (Seiders) Dechert. Daniel Dechert, the paternal grandfather, was a hat manufacturer in Franklin county, a man well known and held in high esteem.

J. L. Dechert, father of John H., is still a resident of Chambersburg, engaged in the fire insurance line. He married Helen Seiders, daughter of John Seiders, who was born in Germany, and died in 1886, at the age of ninety-five years. Mrs. Dechert, our subject's mother, died in 1900, aged sixty-two years. Her three children were Maud, wife of Morris E. Eyler, a druggist of Baltimore; Helen L., at home; and John H., of York.

John H. Dechert was educated in the public schools of Chambersburg. He made his entrance into business in the capacity of bookkeeper for a fancy grocery house of Philadelphia, where he remained three years, and then became owner of a men's outfiting house at Chambersburg. There he remained fifteen years. In 1901 he became agent for the Equitable Life Insurance Company at Chambersburg, and in 1902 he was made general agent, still remaining at Chambersburg. In March, 1904, he came to York, opening up an office in Room 12, in the West Market street. He occupies a very responsible position in the interests of the great corporation by which he is engaged, his territory, formerly known as the Southern Pennsylvania agency, embracing ten counties. The Southern Pennsylvania Agency has since been merged with the Pittsburg agency, and is now known as the Pittsburg Agency.

On Jan. 17, 1900, Mr. Dechert was married to Katherine Price, daughter of John E. Price, a large dealer in hardware and agricultural implements at Frederick, Md. One son was born to this union, Howard Price. The family belongs to the Episcopal Church.

In politics Mr. Dechert is a Republican and he is a strong upholder of party principles without being in any sense a politician. His fraternal relations are with the Masonic Blue Lodge, the B. P. O. E., the Royal Arcanum, the Mystic Circle and the Knights of Pythias.

MICHAEL S. SIPE, a prominent citizen of Springettsbury township, who follows the carpenter's trade in the village of Pleasureville, was born Sept. 8, 1849, in Pleasureville, son of George and Mary (Smeltzer) Sipe.

Jacob Sipe, grandfather of Michael S., was a laborer. He married Elizabeth Knaub, and had these children: George, Michael, Catherine, Matthew, Eliza, Sarah and Mary.

George Sipe was born in Spring Garden township, and early in life was a shoemaker, but later engaged in carpentry. He died in 1900 at the age of sixty-one years. He married Mary Smeltzer, who was born in Conestoga, and died about 1890. Mr. Sipe was a Republican in politics, and he and his family were members of the Mt. Zion Lutheran Church. The children born to George and Mary Sipe were: John, who resides in Windsor Park, York county, where he follows the trade of carpenter; Michael S.; Martin, a carpenter of Windsor Park; and Albert E., who died at the age of six years.

Michael S. Sipe was reared in Pleasureville, and under his father learned the carpenter's trade. Although Mr. Sipe has given most of his time to carpentry he is a natural mechanic, and can execute work at the tinner's of gunsmith's bench equally as well as at his chosen calling. He has also done considerable watch and clock repairing. In politics Mr. Sipe is a Republican, but has never aspired to public office. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Mystic Chain.

On June 21, 1871, Mr. Sipe married Miss Catherine Kauffman, born in Manchester township, York county, daughter of Daniel Kauffman. These children have been born to the union: Alvin Edwin, a cigarmaker by trade, and postmaster at Springet, married Miss Mary E. Peters, and they have had two children, Nettie and one deceased; Charles Aaron, a cigarmaker, married Miss Nannie Spangler, and they have had two children. Naveen (deceased) and Arthur; and William Martin, a cigarmaker, married Miss Annie Williams, and they have had two children, Eva and one deceased.
Mr. Sipe is the owner of a fine farm in Springettsbury township, and three good properties in the village of Pleasureville. He is progressive and public-spirited, and as a citizen and neighbor Mr. Sipe stands high in the estimation of the people of Springettsbury township. The family are members of the Lutheran Church.

JESSE STAMBAUGH, who with his brother, Jonas, takes rank among the prosperous farmers in Jackson township, was born on the old Stambaugh homestead in that township, son of Peter and Mary Stambaugh, who were both also natives of York county.

Peter Stambaugh, Sr., grandfather of Jesse, was a lifelong farmer in York county. He married Miss Elizabeth Joseph, and they had the following children besides Peter, father of Jesse: John, Jacob, Michael, Henry, Daniel, Fred, Kate, Elizabeth, Susan and Barbara. The parents were adherents of the Lutheran faith.

Peter Stambaugh, the younger, was educated in the subscription schools and was reared for a farmer’s life. He remained at home for some years, and then became a distiller of liquors, following that business for many years, becoming well-to-do. He bought the old Stambaugh homestead and spent the latter part of his life there, passing away in 1856, at the age of sixty-one. Mrs. Mary Stambaugh survived him till 1875, when she died at the age of seventy-nine. They were the parents of seven children: Abraham, Magdalina, Harry, Eliza, Sarah, Jesse and Jonas. In religion the parents were devout members of the Reformed Church, while in politics Mr. Stambaugh was a strong Democrat; he was active in local matters, being township supervisor for two years and holding a number of minor township offices. Highly respected in the community, his death was felt to be a distinct loss.

Jesse Stambaugh grew up on the old homestead, in what was then known as Paradise (now Jackson) township, and attended school there in the old log schoolhouse. He remained at home until 1887, when he and his brother Jonas purchased their present farm, situated a mile and a half east of the Stambaugh place, where they have worked in partnership ever since. This homestead is situated along the Western Maryland railroad, about one-eighth of a mile from Nashville Station, G. E. Sprengle’s warehouse, store, postoffice, and creamery. Jesse Stambaugh has never married, but Jonas was united to Miss Lydia Taylor, whose death occurred in 1902, and since then the two brothers have been even more dependent upon each other than before. They are both held in very high esteem and have a large number of very warm friends. They are members of the Reformed Church, and both are Democrats in political sentiment. Jesse Stambaugh has held the office of school director.

A. WALTER ORWIG, of York, where for more than twenty years he has been trainmaster of the Northern Central Railroad Co., is one of the best-known railroad men in this section of the State of Pennsylvania. He was born June 4, 1853, in Shrewsbury, York county, and is a brother of Mrs. Margaret A. Myers, of York, whose sketch will be found elsewhere.

Mr. Orwig was educated at the Shrewsbury Academy, and made especial preparation for business life by learning telegraphy in the offices of the Pennsylvania Railroad system at York, in 1871. After considerable experience in this line in various States, he was on March 1, 1879, promoted to the position of train dispatcher, and on June 12, 1886, he was still further promoted, being given the position of responsibility he now holds—trainmaster and division operator.

On Sept. 17, 1876, Mr. Orwig was married to Laura Hinkle, daughter of Daniel Hinkle, of York, who for many years was connected with the Northern Central railroad service at York, where he still resides, at the age of over eighty years. Mr. and Mrs. Orwig have two children, viz.: Robert H., assistant supervisor of the Pennsylvania railroad, born Aug. 10, 1877; and Grace Margaret, a member of the class of 1905, in the York high school. The family belongs to Trinity Reformed Church.

In politics Mr. Orwig is a Republican. His fraternal connections are with the I. O. O. F. (lodge and encampment), the B. P. O. E. and the Pennsylvania Relief Association.

Although Mr. Orwig is a man who leads a strenuous business life he has found time to become something more than an amateur photographer and also is not unknown in the literary world. His friends recognize his contributions in the various journals, under his cognomen of "Retlaw Wigro;" and they are read because they are interesting as well as for their literary excellence. Personally Mr. Orwig is a pleasant man to meet, and he enjoys the esteem of a very wide circle of friends.

LEVI PINKERTON was born in 1815 in Dauphin county, Pa. He was married in 1837 to Catherine Ollise, and to them eight children were born, four of whom were living when he moved to York, namely: Harriet (now married and living in Ohio), John W., William W. and George McC. After the death of his first wife Mr. Pinkerton was again married, this time to Augustine Harner, in 1860. To them four children were born, only one of whom is living, Charles M.

Levi Pinkerton's father was a miller by trade, and Levi worked with him till grown up, when he interested himself in the coal business and became a successful coal prospector, developing several coal mines and breakers for different companies. He was head boss of same, having at times three hundred men and boys under his employ, with under bosses to assist him. He left the coal regions about 1866, on account of the roughness of the miners, who belonged to the notorious Molly Maguires. Although not afraid of them he thought best to leave on account of his family, his first wife having been frightened to death by the "Mollies," who stoned his house. On several occasions his life was threatened, but on account of his fearlessness and square dealings with the men he escaped, while a number of the bosses were killed. He moved to Reading, Pa., intending to enter the coal business, and all plans were laid for a successful venture, but before he got started the larger dealers of the city cut the prices of coal to about cost and thereby drove the small dealers out of business. Accordingly he dropped that idea, and turned his attention to the drying business, in which he was successful until he contracted to dry iron ore for a company which failed. Mr. Pinkerton losing heavily. He was then engaged to take charge of an ore mine at Hiestand, about five miles from York, by the superintendent of the defunct company. This also failing, he again lost heavily. It being in the fall of the year 1868 he moved to York to remain until spring, when he would again move to Reading, and engage in draying. But he went out on one of the hills of York and viewed the surrounding country and decided that in so rich and fertile a land no man need starve if he had push and pluck. So he looked around for something to do, and having been crippled in one limb by falling from a high trestle some years before, at the mines, he turned his attention to business, and the following spring started to attend the market at Center Square. His sons John W. and William W. obtained employment, and Levi Pinkerton and his son George McC. started business. They turned their attention to selling things not generally handled by other people at that time. In the fall of 1869 they started selling hot coffee, a venture which seemed doomed to failure, for only about three cups were sold in the morning. So used were the market people to depending upon intoxicating liquors to keep them warm that it was considerable trouble to get them to change, but year after year they held on, the business increasing until in a few years they were overcrowded with trade. As they increased their accommodations the business also grew until they had all they could attend to, with the limited space allotted, carrying as side lines wrapping paper and bags, and smoked fish (of their own curing), which were their leaders in trade. A few years before the market sheds were destroyed they obtained permission to erect a booth under the sheds, in which they carried on business between market hours and had a thriving trade. They then started the manufacture of ice cream, which business is still carried on at the factory, located at the rear of No. 539 East King street, the ice cream now being sold in small blocks, wrapped in paper, and vended on the streets by boys at one cent a block. In engaging in that business George Pinkerton found the production would have to be cheapened and the labor lessened, and to that end he invented a machine to mold and cut the blocks cheaply and quickly. It is called the ice cream block molding and cutting machine, and is an entirely new device, turning out over two thousand per hour. It can be operated on the street with success as a money maker.

George McC. Pinkerton was born in Schuylkill county in 1856, and attended the public schools for some years after removing to York, when he left to help his father in business. They were in partnership until the death of the father, in 1892. In December, 1900, George McC. Pinkerton was married to Mrs. Harriet C. (Mason) King, who has a son, Edward M. King, now attending school.

HARRY E. KLINE, a successful practicing veterinary surgeon of York, was born Oct. 10, 1836, near Strasburg, Lancaster county, son of George and Mary (Shenk) Kline, the former of whom was a veterinary surgeon of Lancaster county, where he was born and where he died in 1850. The wife and mother died in Northumberland.

At the time of the death of his father, Harry E. Kline was a lad of fourteen years. He had attended the Strasburg public schools, but after losing his parents he was thrown upon his own resources, and forced to obtain his education as best he could. He secured a position as clerk in a store at Safe Harbor, Lancaster county, and, saving his money, was enabled to attend a school at York under Professor White, from which he was graduated in bookkeeping in 1858. He then took up the study of veterinary surgery, which he had studied for a time with his father before the latter's death, and he began the practice of this profession in 1862 in Northumberland.

Harry E. Kline married (first) in York county, Katie E. Kline, only daughter of Rev. Daniel Kline, and she died in 1861, the mother of two children, both deceased, Elgeworth E. and Edwin. Mr. Kline's second marriage was to Isabella J. Bacon, daughter of William R. Bacon, deceased, and to this union were born children as follows: Katie E., who married David Fans, of York; William, of York Haven; Mayme, who married Edward B. Snodgrass, of Sunbury; Sarah, the wife of Edward Hubly, of East York; Mildred, at home; Cora B., Mrs. George Miller, of Lancaster; and George W. Kline, deceased.

After his second marriage Mr. Kline located near York, where he practiced twelve years, and then to Sunbury, where he remained fifteen years. He then located in York, where he has since been engaged very successfully. Mr. Kline was reared in the faith of the M. E. Church, but later joined the United Brethren Church. In politics he has been a lifelong Republican. In fraternal circles he is connected with Council No. 945, Sunbury, Royal Arcanum.

FRANKLIN FLINCHBAUGH, who is one of the progressive and successful farmers and horticulturists of York township, is a scion of one of the honored pioneer families of York county, where he himself has resided from the time of his birth, so there are many points which make consistent a consideration of his career in this publication.

Mr. Flinchbaugh was born in Windsor township, this county, Nov. 10, 1854, and his genealogy is traced back to stanch German origin, though the family name has been identified with the annals of American history from the Colonial era to the present. John Flinchbaugh, grandfather of our subject, was likewise born in York county, being a son of Frederick Flinchbaugh, who was one of the early settlers of Windsor township, where he reclaimed a farm in the midst of the forest, there passing the residue of his life. His son John was born in Windsor township and there continued to follow farming until he was summoned from the scene of life's endeavors. He married Rebecca Tyson, who likewise died in Windsor township, both being laid to rest in Lebanon cemetery, Hopewell township. Of their children John and Jacob are deceased, while those living are Daniel, Sarah, Nancy, Elizabeth, Lydia Ann, Mary, Rebecca Hake and Frederick, the last named being the father of our subject.

Frederick Flinchbaugh was born in Windsor township, this county, Feb. 26, 1826, and he was afforded a common-school education, his final work as a student being done in a graded school in Windsor township, which he attended for three terms. He learned the carpenter's trade in his youth, becoming a skilled workman, and he was actively engaged in business as a contractor and builder for twoscore years, having to do with the erection of many important buildings in this section, numerous residences and business structures in York county remaining as monuments to his skill. He was also successfully engaged in farming, having owned and conducted the fine place now owned by his son Frederick, with whom he has made his home since his retirement from active business. He is a stanch Republican in politics and has held various local offices of trust and responsibility, while to him has ever been accorded the fullest measure of popular confidence and esteem.

In 1853 was solemnized the marriage of Frederick Flinchbaugh to Miss Lydia Gable, who was born and reared in Windsor township, daughter of Jacob and Lydia (Saylor) Gable. Her death occurred in York township in 1898, at which time she was sixty-two years of age; the interment was in Hopewell township cemetery. Of the children of this union we enter the following brief record: Franklin is the subject proper of this sketch: John J. married Susan Fitz, and they reside in York township, where he is a prosperous farmer; Benjamin, who married Ellen Haney, is a farmer of North Hopewell township; Levi, a farmer of Windsor township, married Susan Hake; Emanuel, a farmer of North Hopewell township, married Annie Sentz; Frederick, Jr., who resides on the old home farm in Windsor township, married Ida Smeltzer; Malinda is the wife of Titus Knisley, of Red Lion, this county; Ellen is the wife of Frank Runkel, of Windsor township; William and Lydia Ann are deceased.

Flinchbaugh, the oldest of the children enumerated above, passed his youthful days on the home farm in Windsor township, while he duly availed himself of the advantages of the public schools of the locality and period. At the age of twenty-three years he was married, and he soon afterward located in Hellam township, where he first devoted his attention principally to the raising of tobacco, but finally engaged in general farming, being associated with John Musser for a period of four years. He then came to York township and purchased a farm of ninety acres, securing the property from the York Trust Company, of York. He has since given his undivided attention to the supervision of this fine property, the place being under a high state of cultivation and devoted to general agriculture, while he has made many improvements, supplementing those which had been made prior to his purchase of the farm. In addition to the general agricultural products commonly grown in this locality Mr. Flinchbaugh makes a specialty of raising vegetables, for which he finds a ready demand in the markets at York, making this a profitable branch of his farming enterprise. He is a Democrat in his political faith and allegiance, and is ever ready to lend his aid in the furtherance of enterprises for the general welfare of his township and county. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, and his wife is a member of the River Brethren.

On March 18, 1876, Mr. Flinchbaugh was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Kohler, who was born and reared in York county, daughter of George and Sarah Kohler, both of whom are now deceased; her father was a farmer by vocation. Mr. and Mrs. Flinchbaugh have two children, Ellen and John Frederick, both of whom remain at the parental home.

JOHN J. FRANK, a lifelong resident of York, is the general agent for the Fairbanks Scales Company, representing the company direct in central Pennsylvania. He was born on North George street, in the house that stood next to Small's warehouse, July 4, 1840.

Nicholas Frank, the father of our subject, came from one of the old and wealthy families of Bavaria, Germany, owning lands on the Rhine. He served fourteen years in the German army, seven on his own account, and seven years for a brother. He was in the cavalry service, was a fine horseman and was noted for his skill with the sabre. He came to the United States with a large fortune, dying here at the age of seventy-six years. He married Maria Adelaide Bruggerman, born Aug. 23, 1813, and she died Sept. 25, 1868. They were members of the Lutheran Church. To them these children were born: Mary, who died in infancy; John J.; George Joseph, deceased; Mary Ann, deceased; and Adelaide Ellen, deceased.

John J. Frank attended the public schools in York, and learned the trade of building oscillating steam engines with Marion Gardner, with whom he remained three years. He then engaged with Inglefritz & White, car builders and builders of reaping and mowing machinery. After leaving this firm Mr. Frank learned the scale business with Root & Case, proprietors of the York Scale Works, established in 1838, located on West North street, near North George street, and was soon promoted to be foreman. On the death of Mr. Case, in 1882, Mr. Frank purchased a one-half interest in the business, which was then known as Root & Frank. A few years later, Mr. Frank purchased Mr. Root's interest, becoming sole owner, and he continued the business for about ten years, at the end of which time he sold the buildings to the York Carriage Manufacturing Company, and disposed of his machinery and appliances, selling his patterns and good will to the Fairbanks Scale Company. In 1892 he became general agent for the Fairbanks Scales Company, and has continued with this firm to the present time, covering their interests in the greater part of the State of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Frank was married in 1860, in York, to Miss Elizabeth Danner, who died Jan. 22, 1902, aged sixty-three years. In October, 1904, Mr. Frank married his first wife's sister, Mary A. Danner. By his first wife Mr. Frank had these children: Harry Emerson, who married Sue Hiestand Gable, of Hellam, Pa.; and Mazie Adeline, the wife of the Rev. Charles M. Barnitz, now stationed at Osceola Mills, Clearfield Co., Pa. Mr. Frank's first wife was actively interested in church work, attending Zion's Lutheran Church, and was prominent in the Ladies Aid and Missionary societies, and her sister, the present Mrs. Frank, has been similarly active. For eighteen years Mr. Frank has been an elder in this church, which he joined when a boy, has also been a teacher in the Sunday-school, and he is treasurer of the pew collections. Fraternally Mr. Frank is connected with Mt. Zion Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 74, and Mt. Vernon Encampment. He has been a Republican all his life. Mr. Frank is a self-made man, having amassed a fortune through honesty, thrift and industry. He is one of the largest property holders in the city of York, and a heavy stockholder in some of the leading banks, and other large corporations of York.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers, in religious belief, are connected with the Church of God. As a stanch Republican Mr. Myers has been quite prominent in politics, having been judge of elections and served as a jurymen. Whatever success he has gained has been honestly earned, and he is highly esteemed as a good farmer, a desirable neighbor and a first-class citizen.

JOHN HENRY SINNER, of Washington township, was born in Manheim township, York county, March 25, 1815, son of John H. and Barbara (Bear) Sinner.

The grandfather of John Henry Sinner, also named John H., was born in Hanover, Germany, and came to America in 1835, landing at Baltimore, Md. After a few years he removed to Pleasant Hill, in West Manheim township, York Co., Pa., where he bought a small farm of eight acres of land, and he continued to live there until his death, which occurred when he was aged eighty-seven years. Both he and his wife Catherine are buried at Sherman's Church in the same township. In his native land he was a tailor, but followed farming in America. His two children were John H. and Sophia.

John H. Sinner (2), son of John H., and father of our subject, was born in Germany, attended school there, and prior to coming to America with his parents served his allotted time in the German army. He crossed the ocean in another vessel, however, as his term had not quite expired when his father sailed, and he did not reach Baltimore until 1840. Like his father he was a tailor in Germany, but farming possessed more attractions for him after coming to the United States. He followed farming in Manheim township until his death at the age of forty years. He married Barbara Bear, a daughter of Michael Bear, who lived near Hanover, Pa. She and her husband were interred at the Sherman Church burying ground. He was a highly respected man, one who was honest and upright in all his dealings. The children of the above union were: Katie, wife of John Biddle, of near Hanover; John H.; Jeremiah, deceased, who married Susan Kehr, and resides in Spring Grove, Pa.; and Sophia, wife of Christian Hoke, of Weigelstown, Dover township.

John H. Sinner, the third to bear the name, attended the schools of Manheim township until thirteen years old, and then spent his summers working for neighboring farmers, and his winters in a machine shop in East Berlin, taking a great deal of interest in the blacksmith business. He also drove cattle to Baltimore in the fall and winter seasons on some occasions. In 1864 he enlisted in the United States service, entering Company I, 209th P. V. I., and served faithfully until he was mustered out at Alexandria, June 22, 1865. He took part in a number of battles, including Fort Steadman and Petersburg, in all of which he bore himself as a brave and loyal man and courageous soldier.

After the close of the war, Mr. Sinner returned to York county, working a part of the time as a day laborer, and for three years was in the employ of John Hoover, in Adams county, and was with George Heiks one year. In 1870 he opened a blacksmith shop at Porters Sidelings, where he lived for twenty-four years, working as a blacksmith for sixteen years, and during the remaining time was in the produce business. On Dec. 14, 1893, he came to his present home in Washington township, which consists of a tract of sixty-nine and three-tenth acres, which he bought of John Shell. When Mr. Sinner purchased this farm it was in a very neglected state, and it required much hard and persevering work to make it what it is to-day, one of the best farms in the township. He engaged first in a produce business, and had a marketing route in Baltimore, Md., but for the past few years he has given his attention entirely to general farming.

On Dec. 28, 1873, Mr. Sinner was married to Kate A. Hoffman, daughter of Michael Hoffman, of Codorus township. They have four children. J. Harry, Emma B., William Andrew and Emanuel J. The eldest son is a graduate of the York School of Business, and is a young man of talent, now engaged as bookkeeper and stenographer with a lumber company at Hanover. Emma B. married H. H. Wallace, of Washington township. William Andrew is at home assisting his father, and is the local correspondent of the East Berlin papers and the York Gazette. The youngest son is also at home. In politics Mr. Sinner is a Democrat. The entire family belong to the Reformed Church, in which Mr. Sinner has been a deacon for the past four years.

JAMES A. WALKER, in whose character is represented the qualities of upright manhood, loyalty in citizenship, reliability in business, conscientiousness in discharge of the duties of private life—and these are so combined as to make his a strong personality, commanding respect and confidence—is one of the popular business men of York, where he conducts a well-equipped establishment as a dealer in stoves and general house-furnishing goods. Mr. Walker comes of stanch Scotch-Irish stock, though the family was early founded in America and in the State of Pennsylvania.

Robert Walker, grandfather of James A., was a millwright by trade, and he died in 1837.

Robert Reel Walker, father of our subject, was eighty-two years of age at the time of his demise in 1809. He was a carpenter and millwright, and passed practically his entire life in Butler county, Pa. His wife, whose maiden name was Jane H. Wallace, was born in Butler county, and is still living, now at the advanced age of eighty-two years. Of the eleven children in the family one died in infancy, and the others were: Alpheus, a contractor and builder of Washington, Kans.; Asher B., engaged in the oil business in Bradford, Pa.; Horace, a driller of artesian wells at St. Augustine, Fla.; John H., engaged in the wholesale paper business in Erie, Pa.; Samuel R., a contracting carpenter of Harrisville, Pa.; William W., a banker and oil producer of Parkersburg, W. Va.; Innocenza, who married John S. Hodil, a wholesale grocer of Allegheny, Pa.; Jennie and Catherine, at the old homestead; and James A.

James A. Walker was born in Harrisville, Butler Co., Pa., June 11, 1854, and in that locality he secured his early educational training in the public schools, which he attended until he was fifteen years of age. He then entered a country store, and was employed there until he had attained his legal majority. Thereafter he was identified with the general hardware trade in the city of Bradford, Pa., until 1889, when he came to York, and here engaged in his present line of enterprise, in which he has since continued. His establishment has from the beginning been located at No. 48 North George street, and a select and comprehensive stock is carried, while by fair dealing and correct methods he has built up a most prosperous business, based upon the popular confidence and esteem which are so uniformly accorded him. The attractive family home is at No. 422 North Beaver street. In politics Mr. Walker maintains an independent attitude, and fraternally he is a Knight Templar Mason, and is also a member of York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. E.

On May 19, 1880, Mr. Walker was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie G. Elrick, daughter of Dr. John H. Elrick, a prominent practicing physician of Harrisville, Pa. Of the five children born to this union, the first born died in infancy, not named; Mary Jane and James A. died in infancy; Charles E., who is a graduate of the York Collegiate Institute, is bookkeeper for his father; and Elizabeth is a member of the class of 1906, York Collegiate Institute.

CHARLES A. SPANGLER was born in Newberry township, in 1867, son of Jacob and Mary (Krone) Spangler, and at Goldsboro in his native township is engaged in business.

Jacob Spangler, grandfather of Charles A., was born in Lancaster county, and died in York county.

His son, Jacob Spangler, Jr., was born in Lancaster county, where he was a laborer. Locating in 1860, in Newberry township, York county, he followed fence making and farming, and died in 1891. His wife was Mary Krone, daughter of George Krone, and she is now living at Goldsboro with our subject. The children born to Jacob and Mary Spangler were: Alfred, who married Ida Mansberger, and they live on the old homestead in Newberry township; Francis, who married Barbara Mann, and they live at West Fairview, Cumberland county, where he follows farming; Zacharias, who died young; George, who died at the age of eighteen years; Edward, who married Lydia Gensler, and lives in York; Harry, who married Annie Zinn, and follows farming in Cumberland county; Charles A.; and Dora, who married Louis Gross, an undertaker and furniture dealer of Goldsboro.

Charles A. Spangler attended the Mt. View school of Newberry township until eighteen years of age, and then went to Clay county, Iowa, where he followed farming five years, at the end of that time returning to Newberry township. In the years of 1901 and 1902 Mr. Spangler had charge of the flour mill of P. A. & S. Small. At this time he engaged in the wholesale and retail flour, feed, grain, and salt business, which he has continued up to the present time, and has been very successful in this undertaking. He has a large warehouse along the Northern Central railroad at Goldsboro, and finds ready sale for his products in the community.

Mr. Spangler has never been married, and lives at home with his mother. In politics he is a Republican, and has served very acceptably as councilman and borough treasurer. He is a member of the Church of God, in which he is deacon, and has been very active in Sunday-school work. He is very highly esteemed in the community, and counts his friends in hosts.

George Krone, Mr. Spangler’s maternal grandfather, was born in York county, near York, son of John Krone, who was a shoe-maker by trade, and died in York county. George Krone followed farming in Newberry township, and died near York, where he is buried. Mr. Krone married Dorothy Mickey, daughter of John Mickey, and she died in York, being interred at Quickel’s Church, Conewago township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Krone were as follows: Henry, who died in York in 1900; Sarah, who married William Bowers, and lives in York county; Mary, mother of our subject; Catherine, who married Zacharias Miller, and died at Spring Grove; Caroline, who married John Willis, and died at Goldsboro; John, living in Adams county, near Gettysburg; George, living in York city; Emanuel, who died at York Haven; Jacob, a resident of Baltimore; and William Fritz, a half-brother to Mrs. Spangler, who lives in Conewago township.

CHARLES C. KOTT Campbell. We have at this point the privilege of entering a brief review of the career of one of York county’s exemplary citizens and successful business men—one who has in a significant sense been the architect of his own fortunes, but who has not hedged himself in with selfish personal interests, but has ever proved loyal to the duties and responsibilities of citizenship in time of peace, while in the war of the Rebellion he went forth to do valiant service in defense of his country. Mr. Kottcamp is senior member of the well-known firm of C. C. Kottcamp & Son, which has a well-equipped establishment in the city of York, and which controls a large business in plumbing, gas-fitting, slate roofing, spouting, etc., while carrying also a full line of stoves, ranges and supplies.

Charles C. Kottcamp was born in Germany
May 13, 1846, and was there reared to the age of seven years, when his mother, Regina (Weiman) Kottcamp, emigrated to America, the father having died in Germany. They landed in the city of Baltimore, Md., and settled in York, Pa. The devoted mother passed away in 1887.

Charles C. Kottcamp early found it incumbent upon him to aid in the maintenance of the family, so that his educational advantages were limited to the district schools, which he attended until he had attained the age of twelve years. He then began the practical work of life, while he has never failed to profit from the valuable lessons to be gained in the school of experience. He entered the employ of Daniel D. Doudle, with whom he learned the tinner’s trade, serving a three years’ apprenticeship in York. In July, 1864, Mr. Kottcamp, who was then about eighteen years of age, enlisted as a private in Company H, 200th P. V. I., commanded by Col. Deven, and with his regiment he continued in active service until the close of the war, receiving his honorable discharge in May, 1865. He was assigned principally to garrison duty and was stationed at Fort Steadman, Va., taking part in several battles and skirmishes in that locality. On March 25, 1865, while with the reserves in the rear at Fort Steadman he was wounded and taken to City Point Hospital, later to Armory Square, Washington, whence he was ordered to Camp Curtin for his final discharge.

After the close of his military career Mr. Kottcamp returned to York and completed his apprenticeship at the tinning time. In 1867 he started in business on his own account, in the lines to which he is now devoting his attention. He has built up a fine industrial enterprise, one of the principal ones of its kind in this section. The headquarters of the firm are located in a substantial frame structure at No. 515 West Market street, the building being two stories in height, and 16x75 feet in dimensions, while it is well-stocked in all departments, and well-equipped for the easy handling of a large business. In 1901 Mr. Kottcamp admitted his son, Harry E., to partnership, and the present firm name was adopted at the time. The junior member of the firm is an energetic and capable young business man and proves a capable coadjuator to his father. Mr. Kottcamp’s course of action in all the relations of life has been such as to gain and retain the unqualified confidence and regard of his fellow-men. In politics Mr. Kottcamp is a stanch Republican, but he has never sought official preferment. Both he and his wife are prominent and valued members of the First United Brethren Church, with which he has been identified for more than two score of years.

In 1868 Mr. Kottcamp was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Rudisill, of York, daughter of Rev. Abraham Rudisill, who was a prominent member of the clergy of the United Brethren Church. Mrs. Kottcamp passed to the life eternal in 1890. Her children were: Myrtle C., bookkeeper and stenographer in her father’s establishment; A. Francis, a druggist in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. Edward C., a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, now engaged in practice in Philadelphia; Harry E., associated with his father in business; Herbert A., a skilled electrician employed at his profession in Baltimore, Md.; John P., a graduate of State College, near Bellefonte, Center Co., Pa., and now an instructor; and Horace A., a student. In 1892 Mr. Kottcamp was married to Miss Sallie Reisinger, of York, daughter of William Reisinger. Mr. and Mrs. Kottcamp have one daughter, Regina M., who is attending the city schools.

WILLIAM E. SPRENKLE, one of the substantial and representative farmers of Jackson township, was born in West Manchester, York county, Feb. 16, 1857, son of George W. and Sarah (Emig) Sprenkle.

David Sprenkle, grandfather of our subject, was born on a farm in York county, and followed agricultural pursuits all his life. As a man he was a model citizen, and owned one of the finest farms of West Manchester, which is now owned by the Sprenkle family. He married Lydia Witmer, daughter of early settlers, the family being well known in this county.

George W. Sprenkle, the father, was born in 1828, and still resides in West Manchester, living a retired life on his farm of 140 acres, which is in a high state of cultivation. His years of active life are now over, and he is now surrounded by all that makes life dear—the affectionate friends, devoted descendants, ample means and a wide circle of estimable fellow citizens who hold him in the highest regard. His wife, Sarah, was born on the old Emig homestead in Jackson township, in the vicinity of

Nashville, in 1830, daughter of Valentine and Rebecca (Loucks) Emig. William E. Sprenkle is one of a family of five children, the others being: Amanda, wife of William Yost, resides in North York; Franklin E. is a prosperous farmer; William E.; Isabella, is now Mrs. Lightner, and a widow; and George E. is a prosperous merchant and postmaster at Nashville.

William E. Sprenkle received his education in the district schools in West Manchester township, and at the age of seventeen started working on the home farm, assisting his father until he was twenty-three, at which time he commenced farming for himself, locating on the old homestead farm of Valentine Emig in Jackson township, which contained 190 acres.

In 1881 Mr. Sprenkle was married to Miss Mary Brillhard, of Springfield township, York county, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Yost) Brillhard. Mr. Sprenkle passed away in 1890, a devout member of the Reformed Church, and was buried at the Wolf's Church cemetery. On April 18, 1905, Mr. Sprenkle was married (second) to Miss Mary L. Stump, of Womelsdorf, Berks county, daughter of Wayne and Emma (Marshall) Stump. Mrs. Sprenkle is a member of the Reformed Church of Womelsdorf.

Mr. Sprenkle is the owner of two good farms aggregating some 400 acres, all in a high state of cultivation, upon which there are good, modern, substantial buildings. He also owns some ten houses in Nashville which he rents, and a cigar factory. In politics he is a Democrat, and a member of the school board. In religion he is a member of what is known as Wolf's Reformed Church, in which he has been both a deacon and elder. Mr. Sprenkle took to agricultural pursuits at an early age, and has followed that occupation throughout life, meeting with great success. He is a careful business man, manages his affairs judiciously, and is possessed of tireless energy. He has many friends throughout the community and is exceedingly popular.

WILLIAM A. BUBB, a prominent merchant in Codorus township, York county, was born in 1858, in that township, son of Lewis D. Bubb, and grandson of Lewis Bubb.

Lewis Bubb was reared in Seven Valley, and when a young man learned the shoemaking trade, later in life working in Codorus township, where he died in 1844, and was buried at the Stone Church. He married Polly Dugan, and they had these children: Amos; Henry; Lewis D.; Edward; Samuel; and Leah, who married Noah Gantz.

Lewis D. Bubb, father of William A., was born in Codorus township, July 1, 1833, and there learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for fifty years. He then retired from active work, and since July 10, 1902, has lived a quiet life at Bonair. Mr. Bubb married Sarah Ann Shearer, daughter of Daniel Shearer, of Maryland, and she died in September, 1902, being buried at Fiscel's Church, in Shrewsbury township. He is a Lutheran, and has served as deacon and as leader in the choir. For thirty years Mr. Bubb has been connected with bands, being first with the Codorus Union Band, and later organizing the well-known Bonair Band, of which he was leader for twenty-five years, and which started with sixteen members. Few men are better known in York county musical circles than he. Mr. Bubb's children are as follows: Lewis H., of Codorus township; William A.; Elmer B.; Daniel F.; Martha; Lydia A.; Alphus C.; Emanuel and Phoebe M.

William A. Bubb attended the township schools until sixteen years of age, and then worked for his father at farming until twenty-three years of age, when he purchased a fine farm of sixty acres near Bonair. He also built and operated a creamery, and has been in that business since 1808, sending his butter to Baltimore, where he finds a ready market. In February, 1903, he was appointed manager of a mercantile store at Bonair and has held that position, for which he is well qualified, ever since.

Mr. Bubb married Levisa Steffey, daughter of George and Lucy Ann Steffey, and their children are: Missouri, wife of Howard Sheaffer; George E., who assists his father in his various businesses; and Noble M., wife of Charles King, living in Shrewsbury township. Mr. Bubb also reared a nephew, Charles Stine, who came to him at the age of four years, and is now a bright young man of nineteen years. Mr. Bubb is a Republican in politics, and a Lutheran in religion. He has for twenty years played the cornet in the choir. He has been the leader of the Bonair band for a number of years. Music is one of his greatest pleasures, the entire family being musical. Socially he is a member of the P. O. S. of A., of Bonair, and assisted in its organization, it being greatly through his efforts that the property for the new hall, now in the course of erection, was secured. He has filled a number of positions of trust in this order. Mr. Bubb is a good citizen, an energetic business man, and a true Christian gentleman.

F. W. PORTER, one of the most efficient teachers in the York high school, was born in York March 20, 1866, son of John H. and Amelia (Neater) Porter. He is of Scotch-Irish ancestry, his forefathers having come from the North of Ireland in about 1830, and settled in the Juniata Valley, where his grandfather, George H. Porter, was a contractor.

John H. Porter, the father of F. W., died in York in 1884, aged fifty-one years, his death resulting from disabilities contracted in the war of the Rebellion, in which he participated as a member of the 82d Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving gallantly during the entire war. He was wounded in one of the battles of western Tennessee, and after taking part in the battles of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Antietam, Gettysburg, Lookout Mountain, Pittsburg Landing, and in Sherman's march to the sea, was discharged with the rank of first lieutenant. Lieut. Porter married Amelia Neater, whose ancestors came from Germany, and they became the parents of the following children: George H., who is deceased; Charles M., deceased; J. S., deceased; one who died in early infancy; John D., superintendent of the machine department of the Agricultural Works of York; and F. W.

F. W. Porter received his education in the public schools of York, and graduated from the State Normal School at Millersville with the class of 1885. Since that date he has been teaching in York, and in the fall of 1893 he became a teacher in the York high school. Prof. Porter's specialties are American history, government and mathematics, in all of which he is justly considered very proficient.

Mr. Porter was married March 21, 1887, to Rosa M. Meredith, daughter of Rev. J. R. Meredith, of the United Brethren Church, Reading; and three children have been born to this union: Mary A., who is a student at the high school, in the class of 1908; and Margaret and Fred M., also at school. Mr. Porter belongs to the Knights of Pythias and Knights of the Mystic Chain. He is connected with the First United Brethren Church of York, and has been a member of its official board for ten years, and has been further honored with election for three successive terms, of one year each, to the office of treasurer of the Pennsylvania conference branch of the Y. P. C. U.

EDWARD A. TOMES, the well-known and valued superintendent of the American Caramel Company, of York, is a representative of one of the pioneer families of the county, being a grandson of Peter Tomes, whose death occurred here many years ago.

William A. Tomes, father of our subject, died in the city of York, in 1808, at the age of sixty-eight years. He married Miss Mary Ann Cook, whose father, Frederick Cook, was for many years a leading jeweler of York. She was summoned into eternal rest in 1896. William A. and Mary A. (Cook) Tomes had children: Harry, who died at the age of forty-two years; Clara, who became the wife of John L. Welsh, and died in 1899, at the age of twenty-five years; two that died in infancy: Albert, who died at the age of thirty-two years; Frederick P., a member of the United States army, and stationed in the Philippine Islands at the time of this writing; Mary Emma, wife of J. Harry Halt, a prosperous jeweler of Mt. Holly, N. J.; and Edward A.

Edward A. Tomes was born in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 24, 1858, and his educational training was secured in the public schools of that city and those of York, to which latter place his parents returned in 1868, when he was about ten years of age. After leaving school Mr. Tomes secured a position in a local foundry, in which he worked three years, at the expiration of that time becoming an employee in the candy-making establishment of P. C. Wiest, of York. A few years later, when the firm of P. C. Wiest & Co. was organized, for the manufacture of confectionery, our subject was made superintendent of the concern. This responsible position he continued most ably and acceptably to fill for the long period of thirty years, and when Mr. Wiest retired, selling his interests to the American Caramel Company, Mr. Tomes was retained as superintendent of the vast manufactory by the new company. Employment is given to a corps of from four to five hundred persons, and the product of the establishment is shipped into all parts of the civilized world. Mr. Tomes discharges with marked discrimination and efficiency the manifold and important duties devolving upon him, and is accorded the confidence of the interested principals and the good will and esteem of the employees who work under his direction. In politics he is a stanch Democrat, and his religious faith is that of the Catholic Church, both he and his wife being communicants of St. Patrick's Church. In a fraternal way Mr. Tomes is identified with the Improved Order of Heptasophs and the Artisans.

On Dec. 25, 1885, Mr. Tomes married Miss Anna Altland, who was born and reared in York county, being a daughter of Henry and Sarah (Stover) Altland, the former a carpenter and builder. Mr. and Mrs. Tomes have children: Evelyn A., who is a graduate of the York High School and also of Patrick's Business College; William H., who is employed in the works of the American Caramel Co.; Marie B., a member of the class of 1907, in the York high school; and Edward A. and Gerald P., who are attending the city schools. Mr. and Mrs. Tomes reside at No. 259 East Philadelphia street, York.

JOHN W. STAHALE, who operates a large draying business in York, was born in that city, July 10, 1854, son of Col. James A. Stahle, late representative of the Nineteenth Congressional District in the House of Representautes.

John Stahle, his grandfather, served two terms as register of York county, and was for many years a justice of the peace. He married Sarah Small, daughter of Major Jacob Small, and they had twelve children: Jacob S., a lawyer, deceased; Hon. Edman W., an editor; Catherine, deceased; Sarah; James A.; Henry J.; William, a druggist, deceased; Isabella, deceased; Mrs. Ellen Crawford, deceased; Virginia, deceased; Mrs. Franklin T. Weiser, deceased, and Henry J., deceased.

Col. James A. Stahle was born in West Manchester township, Jan. 11, 1830, and he acquired his education in the common schools, and at the York County Academy under Rev. Stephen Boyer, a Presbyterian minister. In 1847 he became a tailor's apprentice, engaging with Joseph Hursh, in Rupp's building, with whom he later became a partner. In 1858 he became the agent of Adams Express Company, at York, a position he held until the outbreak of the war. During the summer of 1861 he joined the 87th P. V. I., under Thomas A. Scott, and with that body participated in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, Bermuda Hundred, Weldon Railroad, and many others. In the meantime he had become major, and then lieutenant colonel. He was honorably discharged, after an active service of three years and three months. Since the war the Colonel has been actively identified with the Grand Army of the Republic, and when the Grand Review took place at Washington in 1892, he led his post, General John Sedgwick, No. 37, in the parade, as its commander. He is also a prominent member of the Union Veteran Legion, and was colonel of the York Encampment for one year. His integrity as a man and his business ability were recognized by the administration of Lincoln, under whom he became deputy collector for the Ninth District, an office he held under Grant, Garfield, Hayes and Arthur. In 1894 he accepted the nomination for Congress on the Republican ticket, and although the district had often cast as high as 5,000 Democratic majority, his popularity was so effective as to turn this into a majority of 2,500 for the Republicans. Col. Stahle is and has been for the past twenty-five years an active member and earnest worker in the United Brethren Church. He was one of the originators of the Emig's Grove Camp Meeting Association, and of its successor, the Penn Grove Association. He was for several years a trustee of Lebanon Valley College at Annville, and is at present a trustee of the Aged People's Home of the United Brethren Church at Mechanicsburg. He is also president of the Sunday School Union of the townships of Conewago, Dover, Manchester, West and East Manchester, and of Manchester borough. In the past twenty years he has, in his Sunday-school work, traveled more miles than would be required to girdle the earth. Colonel Stahle has been interested in farming and horticulture, and is at present a member of the executive board of the Mount Gretna Agricultural and Mechanical Association. He is a life member of the York County Agricultural Society, of which he has twice been an officer for a term of several years. He was twice honored by Governor Pattison with appointments as delegate to the National Farmer’s Congress, which met at Savannah, Ga., and at Parkersburg, W. Va.

Colonel Stahle has been married three times. His first wife was Mary Spangler, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Spangler, and by this union he had five children. She died in July, 1863. His second wife was Catherine Beltz, daughter of Charles Beltz, and they had three children. Mrs. Stahle died in June, 1890. In December, 1894, the Colonel married Anna, daughter of the late Jacob Gartman, and to this union has been born one child, Cornelia Anne Stahle. Colonel Stahle still resides at his beautiful home in Manchester township.

John W. Stahle’s school days were spent in Manchester township, and he was one of the pupils who attended the York County Collegiate Institute when it was first opened. He remained with his father until twenty-eight years old, and then located in York, where he engaged with J. W. Buckingham, in the rag business, and he continued in that line until starting in business for himself, five years later. He continued in business for thirteen years, and in 1898 engaged in the draying business, with one wagon and one horse. His business has so increased that he now has thirty of the finest draft and dray horses in York, and twenty-eight modern wagons. He employs seventeen men, and is kept busy all of the time. In 1903 he erected one of the most up-to-date stables in York, a brick building, 90 x 48, and is at present handling the large contract of draying for the Smith Construction Company.

Mr. Stahle was united in marriage with Annie K. Stough, daughter of William Stough, and to this union have been born: James, a motorman; Katie, wife of James Sheafer; Edward and Harry, with their father; and Hattie and Irena, at home. Mr. Stahle is a Republican, but has taken no active part in political matters. He is a consistent member of the Heidelberg Reformed Church, of York. He belongs to the Sons of Veterans, the Knights of Malta and the Heptasophs.

DAVID HOKE, deceased. For many years the late David Hoke, was one of the substantial men, good farmers and much esteemed citizens of York county, Pa. He was born in Jackson township, on the old home farm of his father, son of George and Catherine (Stambaugh) Hoke.

George Hoke was also born in Jackson township, and for many years was one of the leading agriculturists. The family has been an agricultural one for several generations. He married Catherine Stambaugh, and they had these children: Solomon, who was a farmer in Cumberland county along the Yellow Breeches Creek, but who later moved to West Virginia where he died; David; Casper, who died in Spring Grove; Samuel, who died in Frederick, Md.; George, being the third George who had owned the old home, and who died in Jackson township; Magdalena, who married Andrew Hershey, and died at Spring Grove; Rebecca, who married Jonas Rebbert, and resides at the Penn Grove camp grounds in Heidelberg township; and Katie, widow of Edward Rebbert, and living in York.

David Hoke was born Dec. 24, 1805, and grew up a practical farmer, attending the district schools when opportunity afforded. He was still a young man when he left home and went to Adams county, where he invested in farming lands, and all his active life was passed there. When ready to retire he returned to York county and lived at Hanover until his death, which took place when he was seventy years of age. He was a man who lived an exemplary, upright life, and few men reared a more highly respected family or were held in higher regard.

On March 17, 1831, David Hoke married Barbara Bechtel, who was born May 24, 1807, and who died March 20, 1900, aged ninety-two years, nine months and twenty-six days. He died Aug. 17, 1873. The children of David and Barbara Hoke were: Susan, born Jan. 5, 1832, died aged sixteen years; Rebecca, born July 16, 1833, resides in a pleasant home on Abbottstown street, Hanover; Isaac, born April 28, 1835, died when thirteen years old; David Jr., born Nov. 13, 1836, married (first) Louisa Carl, and (second) Annie Slager, and is now living retired at Bunker Hill, Hanover; Samuel B. was born Jan. 28, 1839; George, born March 12, 1841, died aged seven years; Abraham, born Jan. 31, 1843, married Josephine King (deceased), and now resides on York street, Hanover; Barbara, born June 5, 1845, died when seven years old; Michael, born Feb. 11, 1847, died aged five years; Solomon, born March 21, 1849, married Amelia King, is in business at Hanover and has two children: Emma, wife of Howard Bair, of Hanover, and Reuel, who is associated with his father.

The Hoke family is a numerous one and its members include some of the best and most substantial people of this vicinity.

CHARLES L. MORTON, a farmer of Lower Chanceford township, who is also engaged in the livery business, was born at Woodbine, Feb. 19, 1837, son of Robert and Caroline (Bacon) Morton, and a grandson of Stephen Morton, the latter of whom died at Bridgeton at the age of eighty-five years.

Charles L. Morton was but an infant when his parents located in Bridgeton, and he received his education in the Chanceford township schools, his first teacher being a Miss Smith. He left the public schools at the age of fifteen and then spent three terms under Professor Parker at Pleasant Grove Academy. He was reared to agricultural pursuits, and assisted his father on the home farm until his marriage, twenty years ago, to Miss Cora V. Wicks, born near Stewartstown, daughter of Lewis Wicks, a woodworker and blacksmith. After his marriage Mr. Morton located at Bridgeton, where for nine years he was engaged in the store business, which he sold, and then for part of one year he was employed in York, returning home to the farm after the death of his mother. Since that time Mr. Morton has been engaged on the farm, which he owns, and has been very successful. He has also opened a livery, which promises to be very profitable.

In his religious views Mr. Morton is a Methodist. In politics he is a Republican. In fraternal circles Mr. Morton is popular as well as prominent, being a member of the I. O. O. F., at Stewartstown, and is now organizing a lodge at Airville. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Morton, as follows: Carrie Belle, Joseph D., Robert Lewis, Rosella and Helen G.

JAMES W. MILLARD. The Millard family are of old English stock, but at least the last three generations have been natives of Pennsylvania.

Jacob Millard, grandfather of James W., passed the entire span of his sixty-five years in York county, making farming his occupation. He married Anna Jones, whose family was well-known in the county. Their children numbered five, of whom Andrew B. was the oldest. (2) Elizabeth married I. B. Hillard, who lives near Goldsboro, and they have the following children: Rena, Mrs. Jacob Yonger, who lives near Lewisberry; Irma, wife of Edward Prowell, of Yocumtown; Garnett, Mrs. Samuel E. Andrews; and Dora, wife of Curtis Partimore, of Newmarket. (3) Sarah died unmarried at the age of thirty-six. (4) Webster married Miss Lydia Elecker, of York county, and became the father of Sylvan, at home; Tacie, who married Elmer Sutton, of Pinetown, and has three children, Frances, Ruth and Millard; Calvin and Ralph, at home. (5) Rachel married Harry Dietz, and has only one surviving child, Glenn, at home, in Myers-town, Pennsylvania.

Andrew B. Millard was born at the old Lewisberry homestead, and on reaching man's estate became a blacksmith and carpenter. He followed these trades for the greater part of his life, but during his later years ran an undertaking establishment in Lisburn, Cumberland county. He was a man well-known and highly esteemed in the community, especially active in church work. He was a member of the Bethel Church for forty-three years, and much of that time served as superintendent of the Sunday-school. He was called to his reward in 1903, at the age of sixty-five. His wife was Mary, daughter of James and Ellen Mechling, of York county, the former a noted local preacher. Mrs. Mechling was, before her marriage, a Miss Phillips, of Maryland. Andrew and Mary Millard were the parents of James W.; Anna E., wife of C. M. Forney, a druggist in Harrisburg, who has one child, Harry A.; J. Weir, an undertaker of Lisburn, who married Flora, daughter of John Rankin Moore, and who has two daughters, Anna Mary and Lena, all of York county. The mother of these three children, James W., J. Wier and Anna E., is at present residing at Lisburn.

James W. Millard was born in York county in 1862, and was educated in Fairview township. He began his active career in life in Steelton, where he was employed for four years by the Pennsylvania Steel Company. Returning to Lewisberry, he spent the next five years on the old Millard farm, where he was the manager. At the end of that time he left the farm again, and for three years was in the mercantile business in Harrisburg. His next enterprise was in western Missouri, where he moved in 1893, and engaged in farming and cattle raising. He remained there until 1900, when he returned to Carroll township, and settled down again to farming. He bought from W. B. Spahr, what is known as the old Pressel farm of 100 acres, which has been brought to a high state of cultivation under his direction. Mr. Millard is a supporter of the Republican party, and while not at all a politician takes an intelligent interest in public affairs; he has been school director in his township for several terms, and for twelve years or more has taken a prominent part in church work. His wife, Mrs. Annie E. Millard, to whom he was married in 1884, was a daughter of Harry W. Pressel, of York county. The two children born to this union, Earl and Mary, are both deceased.

GEORGE W. HIKEs, a farmer in North Codorus township, and a veteran of the Civil war, comes from a family early established in Adams county, Pa., and ever since closely identified with that part of the state.

The great-grandfather, George Hikes was a farmer at York Springs, Adams county, and there died.

Henry Hikes, son of George, had a large family: Frederick, Henry, Moses, John, Howard, Christina, Mary, Catherine and Eli.

Howard Hikes, son of Henry, was the owner of a farm of sixty-five acres in Latimore township and spent his life there, dying when eighty-one years old. He was well known throughout that region, and was highly respected. His wife, Matilda (Knoll) Hikes, was born in York county and died in Adams county. She and her husband are buried side by side. Their family consisted of George W.; Calvin, who married Miss Annie Benner, and lives in Latimore township; Joseph, a teacher for nineteen years, a farmer and merchant in Latimore township, who married Annie Myers; and Catherine, who died young.

George W. Hikes was born on his father's farm, Aug. 25, 1846, and until he was eighteen attended the public schools. As soon as he reached the required age he enlisted in Company L, 22d Pa. Cav., a part of the Eighth Corps, Army of West Virginia, and he shared the fortunes of his regiment, participating in the engagements at Leesburg, Maryland Heights, Snicker's Ferry, Shenandoah Valley, Kernstown, Winchester, Martinsburg, Berryville, Charleston, Newmarket, Bunker Hill, Harper's Ferry, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek. During the winter of 1864-65 the Twenty-second was engaged in pursuit of roving bands of the enemy in the mountains, suffering great hardships; and in June, 1865, it was consolidated with others, becoming the Third Provisional Cavalry, and finally honorably discharged at Harrisburg Oct. 31, 1865, by reason of the close of the war. On returning home Mr. Hikes learned the carpenter's trade, and for ten years followed it in the West, working in Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Ohio, as well as later in the East also. When he returned to Pennsylvania Mr. Hikes located on the well-known Reynolds farm in York county for three years, after which he spent four years in Latimore township, Adams county, on his farm, and then, in 1883, bought his father-in-law's farm in North Codorus township, York county, a place of seventy-six acres. There Mr. Hikes has ever since remained, has put up new buildings throughout, has made many improvements and has erected a comfortable dwelling for his family.

Mrs. Hikes bore the maiden name of Catherine Snyder. She was a daughter of George and Margaret (Barnhart) Snyder, belonging to one of the county's early families. To this union have come the following children: Tillie, Mrs. Bert Harbold, of York; George, unmarried; Minnie, Mrs. Daniel Bupp, of York; Joseph and Bessie, at home. Mr. Hikes is a Republican in his political affiliations, while in religious opinions he is a Lutheran and a member of that church.

JOHN B. MALEHORN, the trusted head of the oil house for the York Haven Paper Company, was born Jan. 22, 1848, in Manchester township, York county, son of Michael and Sarah (Bull) Malehorn.

Michael Malehorn, great-grandfather of John B., came from Germany and settled in Manchester township, on the farm now owned by Henry Hoffman. He was a tailor by trade, and both he and his wife died in Manchester township, and are buried at Quickel's Church in Conewago township.

John Malehorn, the grandfather, was born in Manchester township, and followed farming there and in Dover township. He married Margaret Neiman, daughter of Michael Neiman, and both he and his wife died in Dover township, and are buried at Strayer's Church. The children born to John and Margaret Malehorn were: Michael, father of our subject; Henry, who lives in Decatur, Ills.; Jacob, who died young; Jacob (2), who died in York county; Andrew, who resides in North York borough; William, living in Conewago township; George, living in Hellam township; Elizabeth, who married L. Pickeling, justice of the peace at Dover borough; Sarah, who married Adam Kohler, deceased, and lives in Ohio; Katie, deceased; a twin of George, who died young; one who died in infancy; and Leah, who died young.

Michael Malehorn, father of John B., was born Feb. 22, 1823, in Manchester township, where he received a common-school education. For a number of years he worked by the day among the farmers of his township. In March, 1847, he married Sarah Bull, daughter of John and Catherine (Brenner) Bull, and after marriage spent a few years in Conewago township. In 1848 Mr. Malehorn removed to Mt. Wolf, where he and his wife are living with their son Levi, retired from activity. The children born to Michael Malehorn and his worthy wife are as follows: John B.; Levi married Emma Rodes, and lives at Mt. Wolf; Eliza died in 1901; Catherine died young; William married Mary Metzger, and removed to Salunga, Lancaster county; Jacob married Amanda Nye, and resides at Mt. Wolf; Andrew married Caroline Hartman, deceased, and lives at York Haven; Elijah died at the age of seven years; Leah married William Richcreek, and lives at York; Annie married Benjamin Myers, and resides in North York borough; Emma died in infancy; Henry died at the age of seven years; and Samuel died at the age of four years.

John B. Malehorn received his education in the township schools of Manchester township. In September, 1864, he enlisted in Company D, 200th P. V. I., and served eleven months, engaging in the battles of Fort Steadman, Petersburg, Butler's Front and several smaller engagements, and while in battle received a wound in his left side. After the war Mr. Malehorn returned to Pennsylvania, and worked among the farmers until 1869, and was later employed by the Northern Central Railroad for six years. He then resigned his position and went to tobacco farming in Manchester township, and about that time was assessor and tax collector of Manchester township. He entered the employ of the York Haven Paper Company, in 1885, as a laborer, but in 1900 was made foreman of the oil house, which position he still holds.

In 1870 Mr. Malehorn married Anna Rodes, daughter of Daniel and Susan (Palmer) Rodes, of Manchester township. Mrs. Malehorn's parents are both deceased. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Malehorn are as follows: Albert Henry, who lives in Philadelphia; Edward Harvey, who lives at York Haven, and is employed by the Pennsylvania railroad; Ellen, who married Wilson Bailey, and lives at Mt. Wolf; John F., a paper maker, who resides in Philadelphia; Laura, who married Joseph Swiler, and lives at Harrisburg; Sadie, who married W. S. Shelley, and lives at York Haven; Clarence, a clerk at Philadelphia; Annie K., who married William Dietz, and lives at York, Pa.; Charles C., at home; and Cora E. and Emma E., who reside at home.

In politics a Republican, Mr. Malehorn has been very active in party affairs, and from 1897 to 1901 was postmaster at York Haven. He was the first chief burgess of York Haven borough, served three years, was constable three years in the township, and has collected State, county and school tax. He has been a member of the United Brethren Church for many years, and has been trustee and church treasurer. Mr. Malehorn has the reputation of being a man of integrity and honesty. He is very well known and highly respected throughout the community.

JOSEPH WILHELM STRASBAUGH is a grandson of John Strasbaugh, a farmer of Spring Grove, York county, and a son of Peter and Elizabeth (Wilhelm) Strasbaugh. The former, who was a farmer, died in 1902, in his eighty-first year, and the latter belonged to a prominent East Manchester township family. Three children were born to Peter and Elizabeth Strasbaugh: Albert, who is in the cigar business at Perkasie, Pa.; Emma E., who married Robert Yingling; and Joseph Wilhelm.

Joseph Wilhelm Strasbaugh was born on the old homestead, the old Smyser farm in Spring Grove, July 30, 1864, and was educated in the schools of Windsor township. He was reared to the life of an agriculturist, work-
JOHN KUNTZ, a preacher and revivalist of York county, and also a man of large and varied industrial interests, is of German descent, and of the second generation born in America.

Philip Kuntz, grandfather of John, was born in Germany, but came to this country and settled in York county, Pa., on land near the township line of Franklin and Carroll, a tract now owned by the Brenemans, Benders, and Bettingers. He was by trade a millwright, but also followed farming. He died in 1815, advanced in years. His wife’s maiden name was Shimp, and she bore her husband eight children: (1) Michael, a resident of Mt. Rock, Cumberland county, was a teamster and farmer, and died in 1880. He left an only son, William, who lived near New Kingston, married a Miss Brannon, and had three children, viz.: William; Annie, who became the wife of Mr. Fortenbaugh, now deceased, of Middlesex; and Mary, living in Middlesex. (2) Philip, a farmer and millwright in Franklin township, married Mrs. Andy Mumper, whose maiden name was Seidle. Philip died in 1862, aged seventy-nine, and his wife died in 1882, at York Springs. They had the following children: John, of Nebraska; Lizzie, wife of William Fiekel, of York Springs, both deceased; Henry, deceased, who married a Miss Shenk; Samuel, a well known professor in Washington, D. C., now deceased. (3) Jacob died when twenty-one years old. (4) Elizabeth became the wife of Peter Hoffman, of Perry county, near Bloomfield. Both are now dead, leaving children, George, and Mrs. Hughes. (5) Mary married Henry Graybill, of York Springs, and later of Hanover. Both are deceased. They were the parents of Henrietta, late wife of Mr. Keeny, of York; and Eliza, residing in Minnesota. (6) Rebecca married George Beltzhoover, whose home was near Kingston. Neither is now living. Their children were: Michael, who married Miss Mary Bricker, of Boiling Springs, and had three children, Jacob (now deceased, who left two sons, Frank, a lawyer of Carlisle, Cumberland Co., Pa., and Jacob), Michael and Alice; and George, of Franklinton, who married Miss Elizabeth Kunz, both deceased. (7) Susanna married Henry Sudle, a blacksmith by trade, who settled with his family in Minnesota. Their children were: Samuel, who married a Miss Camel, and died in Carroll township; Jacob, who married Miss Margaret Dehoff, and moved to Minnesota, and Henry, also a resident of Minnesota, and married to Miss Katie Katz. (8) John.

John Kunz was born in 1800, in what is now Franklin township. He learned the carpenters’ trade in his youth, and followed that calling until his marriage, after which he turned his attention to farming and carpentering. He was a Democrat in politics, held various township offices, and served as judge and clerk of elections, while in religion his affiliations were with the German Reformed Church, of which he was a member. His marriage occurred in 1822, to Susan, daughter of Michael Harbold, and they had a large family. Mr. Kunz died in 1879, aged seventy-nine years. Their children numbered ten: (1) Catherine and (2) Michael are both deceased. (3) Elizabeth, wife of George Beltzhoover, is now deceased. (4) Sarah married William Filer, and died leaving two children: Susanna, Mrs. Kapp; and Sarah, deceased. (5) Anglehard, deceased, married Miss Catherine Day. The widow now lives in Dillsburg, the mother of John, deceased; Susan, Mrs. Granville Nickey, of Hanover; Elizabeth, Mrs. David Evans, of Martinsburg, Va.; Philip, deceased; and Mary. (6) John is the subject of this sketch. (7) Philip married Miss May Stauffer, and has two children: John, who married a Miss Deardorff; and Annie, Mrs. William Fickel. (8) Susanna, now deceased, was twice married. After the death of her first husband, Franklin Wolf, she became the wife of William Altland, who is still living. She had one daughter by the second union, Cora, who married Clinton Myers, lives at Big Mount, and has one son, Lloyd. (9) Polly died unmarried. (10) Eliza Ann, now deceased, married Henry Klugh, of Franklin township, and had five children: Georgia, wife of John Heikes, of Mechanicsburg; Mary; John, now in the west; Harry, living in Mechanicsburg; and Clara, now deceased.

John Kuntz was born in Reading township, Adams county, Jan. 22, 1835, and attended the county schools until he was sixteen. He then went to Berlin to learn carpentering, and after mastering his trade followed it for about a year in the northern part of the State, and then settled in Carroll township, where he was occupied both in carpentering and in lime burning. In 1886 he bought 4,000 acres of land, 600 of which were in Perry county, and the rest in Cumberland, and this immense tract he sold again in 1893 to Philadelphia capitalists. Mr. Kuntz now resides on the old homestead, which is a piece of property rich in a variety of mineral deposits. Besides mining great quantities of copper ore, which he has shipped to Jersey City, he has also developed rich deposits of spruce and yellow ochre, umber, buff and white clay, and in the near future is planning to open up quarries of the fine marble which his place contains. In connection with all these other industries, Mr. Kuntz also runs a shingle mill with a capacity of 10,000 shingles a day, and a chop mill run by a thirty horse power engine. Another interesting feature of his property is the large caverns which extend under the mountainous portion of his place, one of which has been explored a distance of 600 feet.

On Oct. 3, 1858, Mr. Kuntz was married to Miss Anna Mary Myers, daughter of Barnett and Elizabeth (Elcker) Myers, and granddaughter of Ludwig Myers. To this union were born a son and daughter, as follows: Louis, who was his father's assistant until his death in March, 1901, married Miss Sadie Moyer, daughter of George Moyer, and had three children, Letitia, Mamie and William; and Elizabeth died at the age of six. Mr. Kuntz's granddaughter, Letitia, graduated from Shippensburg Normal School in June, 1902, and, Jan. 2, 1906, was married to Harry J. Strayer, of Latimore, Adams Co., Pennsylvania.

In addition to all the responsibilities and cares entailed by his forty-four years of active business life, Mr. Kuntz has always taken a deep interest in religious matters, and was a minister of the Evangelical Association. Until recently Mr. Kuntz was quite active, but on Oct. 16, 1905, he went to Philadelphia on business, and while there suffered a paralytic stroke. His good wife hastened to him, and brought him home and under her devoted care he is improving, although his left side is still paralyzed.

JACOB B. KUNKEL, of Warrington township, was born March 12, 1861, at the old mill property on Conewago Creek, in that township. His ancestors for many years have been prominent in the milling business.

Gottlieb Kunkel, great-great-grandfather of Jacob B., emigrated to America in 1763, and landed in Philadelphia, from which place he made his way to Yorktown, which is now known as the city of York. From there he proceeded to Warrington township, and settled on Conewago Creek, the beautiful little stream which the Indians named Canna Wago, the meaning of which was that it was too deep to wade. Being a miller and a millwright, Gottlieb Kunkel here built a mill, being assisted by the Indians of the region with whom he became friendly. This mill structure was of rough hewn logs, and the apparatus for grinding wheat and corn was of native sandstone. The power was derived from an undershot wheel and iron gudgeon, and ironstone was used for the bearings. In connection with the mill he took up 630 acres of land. He had three daughters and two sons, among whom he divided his property.

Belshur, one of the sons of Gottlieb, received the mill property, which, at his death, reverted to his son Peter, who was our subject's grandfather.

Peter Kunkel married at York, Sarah Sanders, a native of Ireland, and they had two daughters and four sons, the latter bearing the names of Peter, Samuel, Jacob and Elijah.

Elijah Kunkel, son of Peter, purchased the mill property in 1880, thoroughly remodeled it and added two additional stories to the whole structure. This mill was run steadily until 1884, when it was destroyed by fire. It was at once rebuilt and was equipped with all the latest improved milling machinery. Elijah Kunkel married Mary A. Benedict, daughter of Peter Benedict, of Warrington township, and they had four daughters and two sons born to them, the latter being George L., a successful farmer and Jacob B., of this sketch.

Jacob B. Kunkel may be said to have grown up in the milling business, and, in addition to owning and operating this fine mill, he owns a forty-barrel mill at Williams Grove, Pa., which is operated by J. A. Davis & Son. Mr. Kunkel is now practically retired, but the mill is kept running to its full capacity by his son Mearl, a competent miller, who is keeping up the high standard of quality for which this mill has always been noted. Its history is more than usually interesting. In addition to the details given above a few more words may be devoted to what is one of the landmarks of this section.

As it has been shown, the Kunkel family have been its proprietors from the beginning. The mill is situated in a picturesque spot on the banks of the Conewago Creek. It was the first mill built in York county, and its patrons came from miles away. During the time of the British occupation of Philadelphia, the Continental Congress held its first sessions at York, and the housewives drew their supplies from Kunkel's mill. During the time when Washington and his hungry troops were encamped in this neighborhood, from Kunkel's mill came the flour which furnished them with food.

Jacob B. Kunkel was married at Lewisberry, Pa., to Miss Mary E. Spangler, daughter of Jacob H. and Lavinia Spangler, and they have these children: Mearl E., previously mentioned; Lottie B.; and Mary J. In politics Mr. Kunkel is a Democrat, but has never sought or accepted public office. He is the third heaviest taxpayer in Warrington township. His home is a beautiful one on the banks of the Conewago.

SAMUEL F. GLATFELTER. In view of the nomadic spirit which is growing to animate all classes of American citizens, it cannot be other than gratifying to encounter localities in which are to be found citizens of worth and prominence who have there passed their entire lives. In York county are to be found to-day many representatives of families whose names have been linked with the history of this section from the early pioneer epoch, and among the prominent scions of such worthy pioneer stock is found Samuel F. Glatfelter, who is one of the successful business men and influential citizens of York, where he is engaged in contracting and building, and identified with other enterprises of importance, being vice-president of the Hollywood Brick Co., of York. Mr. Glatfelter has well appointed offices in the Guardian Trust Building, one of the fine modern business blocks of York.

Samuel F. Glatfelter comes of stanch German Swiss stock, being a direct descendant of Casper Glatfelter (originally spelled Glattfelden), who was born at Glattfelden, Canton Zurich, Switzerland, July 2, 1709, and who emigrated to America in 1743, at the age of thirty-three years on the good ship "Francis & Elizabeth," sailing from Rotterdam, and landing at Philadelphia shortly afterward settling as a pioneer in Springfield township, York Co., Pa., Casper Glatfelter was a son of Felix Glattfelden (who was born in 1674, and was married June 22, 1695, to Dorothea Gorias), and a grandson of Hans Glattfelden (whose wife was Verena Hauser), thus establishing a lineage to the middle of the seventeenth century. Samuel F. Glatfelter is a representative of the fifth generation from Casper Glatfelder, the original emigrant, the line being through Casper's son, who was also named Casper, and who served as a soldier in the Revolutionary war; his son John and the latter's son, Isaac K., the father of Samuel F. Certainly there were more children born in each generation, but only the direct line is here given.

Isaac K. Glatfelter, father of Samuel F., was born in York county, in 1825, son of John and Elizabeth (Keiser) Glatfelter, early settlers of Shrewsbury township; and he died in 1895. He was one of the highly honored citizens and representative farmers of the county and wielded no slight influence in local affairs of a public nature. He was a stanch Democrat in his political allegiance, and his religious faith was that of the Lutheran church. As a young man he married Miss Sarah Feiser, who was born at Feiser's Mills, Springfield township, this county, in 1828, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Bupp) Feiser, who likewise were sterling pioneers of the county. Mr. Feiser having been one of the most influential citizens of his section, and having long operated the mills which bore his name. Isaac K. and Sarah Glatfelter became the parents of five sons and four daughters, all of whom are living, as is also the revered and venerable mother, who now resides in the city of York. The names of the children are here entered in the order of birth: Anna M., Isaac J., Franklin P., John K., Samuel F., Sarah E., Emma C., Louisa F. and David L. The mother has been a lifelong member of the Lutheran church.

Samuel F. Glatfelter was born on the homestead farm in Springfield township, York county, April 7, 1858, was reared under the invigorating discipline of the home farm. He attended the public schools of the locality during a portion of each year until he had attained the age of seventeen years, when he left the farm and became a clerk in the general store of his brother Isaac, at Big Mount, Paradise township, York county, retaining this incumbency one year. He then became a student in the Normal Department at the old York Academy, afterward putting his scholastic attainments to practical test by engaging as a teacher in the district schools, while later he was a student for one college year in Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg. He thereafter continued to devote himself successfully to teaching for a time, but being mechanically inclined, he preferred the business to the professional life, and served as an apprentice to learn the carpenter's trade at intervals. In 1888 Mr. Glatfelter entered into partnership with G. W. Gilbert, H. George and George Reidel (Mr. Gilbert being his tutor when learning the trade), with whom he was associated in the planing mill business and contracting and building for the ensuing twelve years. The firm, whose headquarters were in York, did much important work in the city. At the expiration of the period noted the partnership was dissolved by mutual consent. In 1901 Mr. Glatfelter became associated with others in the organization of the Coalinga Oil Co., which is incorporated under the laws of the State of Arizona, and he was made treasurer of the company at the start, and has ever since served as such, the office of the concern being in York, while its properties are located in California. Mr. Glatfelter is individually engaged in the building and contracting business in York, doing some of the most important operations, and at the same time he has other capitalistic interests of importance, including the Hartley Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of which he is vice-president, Guardian Trust Co., and Mont Rose Cemetery Co., of whose directorate he is a member, while he is a charter member of all of these corporations. He is imbued with a deep public-spirit and is progressive in his attitude, so that he is relied upon to co-operate in all worthy enterprises advanced for the general welfare of his home city and county, while he has so ordered his course as to command the unqualified confidence and regard of his fellow men. In politics he is a Democrat, though never a seeker of office, and both he and his wife are valued members of Trinity Church, Evangelical.

On June 29, 1879, Mr. Glatfelter led to the marriage altar Miss Ida Gilbert, of East Prospect, this county, in which she was born and reared, being a daughter of Daniel Gilbert, a member of one of the honored pioneer families of the county, and a veteran of the Civil war, and who lost his life a prisoner in Andersonville prison. Mr. and Mrs. Glatfelter have no children.

JACOB L. MYERS, of Springfield township, was born on his present farm, July 30, 1864, son of Jacob Youndt Myers, and grandson of Jacob Myers.

Andrew Myers, the great-grandfather of our subject, was a very large land owner of Springfield and York townships, owning about 500 acres. He was a minister in the German Baptist Church, and was buried at the old Ness burying ground in Springfield township. His children were: Jacob, Christian, Henry and Mrs. Hoff.

Jacob Myers was born on his father's farm in York township, and, like his father, was a large land owner, following farming all his life. He married Sallie Youndt, who died in Loganville, being buried in the East Codorus cemetery, while he died in Springfield township, and was buried in the old Ness burying ground. He was also a minister in the German Baptist Church. To him and his wife were born: Isaac, who married Annie Miller, was a minister in the German Baptist Church; Elizabeth died single; Jacob Youndt; Daniel, married Elizabeth Brillhart; and Joseph married Katie Bowser, who, after his death, married Rev. Christian Ness, of Springfield township.
Jacob Younkl Myers was born in 1813, and received a common school education. On May 13, 1847, he was married, by the Rev. Samuel Miller, to Nancy Shamberger, born May 8, 1826, and after marriage located on the home farm for one year, at the end of which time he purchased the Painter farm of 119 acres, now owned by our subject. There he erected a fine set of buildings, and continued until his death in July, 1874. He was buried at the East Codorus Church. His children were as follows: (1) Joseph S., born Jan. 6, 1856, a motorman in York, married Priscilla Mathias, and had two children, Jacob (who died in infancy), and Nancy G. (2) Elizabeth, born July 18, 1857, married Henry Ehrhart, a carpenter, and they are living in York township, a sketch of Mr. Leader being elsewhere. (4) Jacob L. After the death of Mr. Myers, Mrs. Myers married Samuel Kreidler, and they reside at No. 603 West Philadelphia street, York.

Jacob L. Myers attended the township schools until nineteen years of age, and then assisted his step-father on the home farm for two years. In 1885 he married Sarah Jane Keeney, daughter of Samuel and Barbara (Bowman) Keeney, of Shrewsbury township, in which township Mr. and Mrs. Keeney still reside. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Myers resided on the home farm, and after four years Mr. Myers purchased it, and located about two miles south of Loganville, along the York and Baltimore pike. It is one of the finest farms in Spring field township, where Mr. Myers is very well known and highly respected. He has devoted all of his time to farming, in which occupation he has won success, and he is considered one of the substantial men of his township, and is sober, industrious and hard-working.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jacob L. Myers, the following children have been born: Bertha M., who died when seven months and twenty days old; Joseph H., at home, assisting his father in his agricultural operations; Samuel K., who died when two months, two days old; Jacob E., attending the Elizabethtown Business School; and Mabel J., at home. In his political views Mr. Myers is a Republican, and has served as judge of election, and as inspector. Both he and his estimable wife are members of the German Baptist Church, where he has served for some time as deacon, and he is considered one of the pillars of the Church. Both the Myers and Keeney families are considered among the pioneer families of this section.

WILLIAM LESTER AMMON, a worthy representative of one of the older families of York county, and one whose early ancestral line on the maternal side connects it directly with that of Augustine Washington, sire of the immortal “Father of his Country,” is a young and rising member of the York County Bar, born in Lancaster county, March 4, 1868. Briefly stating a few of the salient facts concerning the ancestral line of our subject, it is noted that William Ball, son of William of Lincoln’s Inn, England, was one of the four attorneys in the office of Pleas in the Department of the Exchequer. William Ball, of Alllenbeck plantation, came to America in 1657. He was the father of three children—William, Joseph and Hannah. Of these, William had a son Samuel, of Culpeper Courthouse, Virginia, whose daughter, Ann Ball, married John Campbell. One of the sons of this union, John by name, had a son John who became the father of Elizabeth Campbell, the grandmother of our subject. Elizabeth married John Hawkins and their daughter Mary married William Ammon, son of George, and father of our subject.

The connection with the Washington family comes through William Ball, brother of the Samuel heretofore mentioned. His son Joseph Ball was the father of Mary, who, in 1730, became the wife of Augustine Washington, and two years later the mother of our illustrious first president. Thus it may be seen that our worthy subject may well be proud of his ancestry.

William L. Ammon, who forms the subject of our review, was brought to York county by his parents when but three weeks old, and is therefore entitled to be looked upon “as native here.” The foundation of his education was laid in the public schools of the county, and was supplemented by courses in York County Academy and Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, from which institution he graduated in 1893. He then entered the law office of Geise, Zeigler & Strawbridge, and after a creditable examination was, Aug. 27, 1894, admitted to the Bar of York County. At a later date he was admitted to practice in the Supreme, Superior and United States Courts.

The success of Mr. Ammon in his chosen profession is based upon his penchant for close and hard work. He attacks his cases methodically and does not rest until he feels able to convince a jury of the justice of his client's claim. He has built up an extensive and lucrative practice and is looked upon as one of the best lawyers at the Bar of the county.

Mr. Ammon is a family man, having married Nov. 4, 1897, Miss Nettie M. Reichley, daughter of William G. Reichley, now deceased, formerly a merchant of York. To the union one child has been born, William Bronly; and as a member of the family there is also an adopted son, George Lester.

Our subject is a Democrat in politics, and is more or less active in the campaigns of that party. He served the city as solicitor during 1896-97, this being the only public office in which he has officiated. His name is found among the membership of the Lutheran Church, and in the fraternities he is a member of the Odd Fellows and the Heptasohs. The career of our subject in York has been entirely creditable, and his friends confidently predict a solid and substantial future.

EDWARD BLAUSER, contractor and builder at York, Pa., has well appointed offices at No. 657 East Market street, and is one of the city's leading business men.

Mr. Blauser was born Oct. 5, 1836, in Spring Garden township, son of Jacob and Annie (Myers) Blauser. The former was born in 1800, in Spring Garden township, and died at York, Dec. 19, 1862. Jacob Blauser was one of the leading farmers of Spring Garden township, was an active member of the Whig party in politics, and was one of the stable supporters of the German Reformed Church. His parents, Nicholas and Susan Blauser, were born and married in Germany, and they established the family in York county, where Nicholas Blauser owned a farm of 100 acres. They had eight children.

Jacob Blauser, father of Edward, married Annie Myers, born in Lancaster county, Jan. 25, 1802, who died Jan. 13, 1903, at the home of her son, Edward. The children of this union were: Henry, a retired farmer of York; Eliza, widow of Daniel Freed, of York; Edward, of this sketch; Samuel, a carpenter in York; Annie, deceased wife of Solomon Freed; Ellen, deceased wife of Henry Ilgen-York; and Emma, wife of Allen Shetter, of York.

Edward Blauser was reared on the paternal farm and was educated in the common schools until the age of thirteen years when he began to look out for himself, and worked on the farm until 1854, and then learned the carpenter's trade with Jacob Miller, of York. He continued to work for this employer for thirteen years, on and off, as during this period he also gave a year's time to the service of his country. On Sept. 13, 1861, he enlisted in the 87th P. V. I., under Capt. Frey, and became a member of the band, and was mustered out Sept. 22, 1862.

Upon his return to York Mr. Blauser resumed work with his old employer and later with a brother of the latter. It was about 1874 when he began contracting and building on his own account. His success is attested by the many substantial and imposing structures which he has erected, among these being: St. Mark's Lutheran Church; Second Presbyterian Church on Philadelphia street; Bethany Chapel; Cross Roads Presbyterian Church in Chanceford township; the Vinton Welsh residence on West Market street; the Reaser houses which are some of the best buildings in the city; and a large building on the corner of Franklin and Philadelphia streets. He rebuilt the "Merchant's Hotel" and the "Marshall House," and built the pumping station for the city water works and the great filter plant. This business gives constant employment to from thirty to thirty-five men.

Mr. Blauser is one of the notably progressive and public-spirited men of the city, and has numerous business connections. He is a director in the Ferrystown Mutual Fire Insurance Co., and is a member of the Spring Garden Relief Association. Of this he was one of the organizers, was its first vice president and remains a member.

It would be impossible to name the York fire department or the Spring Garden band, without recalling Mr. Blauser. For forty-six years he has been an active member of the former, his association with this brave body of men beginning with the old Good Will company, and he has filled every position in the department aside from chief, serving fourteen years as assistant chief, an office he has but recently resigned. He has been a delegate to the various conventions of this organization for the past ten years, and in October, 1904, he was elected vice-president of the Estate Fire Association.

Mr. Blauser was one of the charter members of the Spring Garden band, which was organized in 1855 and has never been disbanded.
The original membership was nineteen, and ten of its charter members still survive. The organization enlisted in the 87th regiment, in 1861, and enjoyed many marks of appreciation as a body. Upon the return of President Buchanan to his home in 1861, after President Lincoln assumed charge at Washington, this band formed an honorable escort to the ex-president from York to his country residence in Lancaster county. In September, 1892, when the Grand Army of the Republic convention met in the city of Washington, this band, then containing thirteen members, was given the post of honor, leading the procession, preceding sixty-seven other bands. When its now gray-haired members were in their prime,
it was considered a very talented musical body, and has always been considered an admirable addition to any occasion which it will consent to serve.

In politics Mr. Blauser is a staunch Democrat, and he has filled a number of local offices, including those of assessor and tax collector.
His fraternal connections are numerous. He is a member of the A. & I. O. Knights of Malta, Sandilands Commandery, No. 152, and is one of the first in this section to have traveled all the degrees, reaching the 77th, side degree; is a member of the Fireman's Relief Association; and of General Sedgwick Post, No. 37. G.
A. R.

On Jan. 25, 1859, Mr. Blauser married Mary Ann Runk, daughter of John Runk, and they have six children: Allen J., a carpenter; Lizzie, wife of Charles M. Landis, who is a machinist; Ida, wife of Jacob Deitch, also a machinist; Harry E., a carpenter, married to Jennie Hatter; Lilie Mary, wife of George Matter, foreman of the York Manufacturing Co.; Ferdinand A., an electrotyper, who mar-rried Bertha Hake. The family belong to the Reformed Church.

JOHN CASSL was born June 17,
1854, in Dauphin county, Pa., son of Rufus K. and Elizabeth (Miller) Cassel. The first anccestors of the Cassel family in America were three brothers, Heinrich, Johannes and Yillis (or Julius) Cassel, who came hither on the ship "Jefries," Nov. 20, 1686, from Kreishdym, in the Palatinate. They accompanied William Penn on his third trip from the old world. Penn having held religious meetings and preached to the citizens of their town. The Cassels, being of the Mennonite faith, were very much impressed by Penn, who told them he had secured a grant of land from King Charles II, and promised them religious freedom if they would accompany him. Upon their arrival they were granted land in the vicinity of Germantown, Pa., and there built a Mennonite meetinghouse.

John or Johannes Cassel, the great-great-great-grandfather of Jonathan Cassel, came to America from Rotterdam in the ship "Friendship," Oct. 16, 1727, and for a time lived at Skippack, Montgomery Co., Pa. Thence he moved to Lancaster county, settling in Hempfield township.

Abraham Cassel, the great-great-grandfather of Jonathan, was born about 1750 in Rapho township, Lancaster Co., Pa. He mar-rried Esther Weiss, and they had three children, Henry, Maria and Abraham.

Abraham Cassel, the great-grandfather of Jonathan, located at Marietta, Lancaster county, and was a prominent business man there, being president of the old Marietta Bank. He married Catherine Neff.

David Cassel, the next in the line of descend, was born May 8, 1800, and died Sept.
20, 1877. He was a resident of Marietta, where he was an inn-keeper for over fifty years. He married Catherine Myers, of Berks county, and after her death wedded Eliza Munna.
Seven children were born to each union, those by the first being Rufus K., Hiram, David, Margaret, Elizabeth, Abraham and Elmira, and those by the second being Catherine, Anna
M., Susan E., Delilah, Emily, Aldema and Joseph.

Rufus K. Cassel was born March 11, 1825, in Marietta, Lancaster Co., Pa. In his younger years he was extensively engaged in the cattle and horse business, and also operated farms in Dauphin and York counties, being considered very successful. He is now living retired, making his home on King street, in York, Pa., and though he and his wife have both attained advanced years they are in excellent health. Mr. Cassel was married Feb. 15, 1849, to Elizabeth Miller, of Dauphin county, Pa., and to them have been born the following children: Carrie, who is unmarried; David M., now a resident of Springfield, Ohio; Jonathan, of York county; Daniel, of Mt. Holly, Pa.; Levi A., of Dillsburg, York county; Emma, of York; Anna, of Lehigh county, Pa.; Harry C., deceased; Alice, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Hiram, deceased; and Mary J., of Reading, Pa. The family are all Lutherans in religious belief, and Mr. Cassel is a Republican.

Jonathan Cassel was a small boy when he moved with his parents to York county, and he remained at home, assisting his father in his farming pursuits, until he was twenty-six years old. He then purchased the farm known as the "Comfort Tavern" stand, on the State road, and there engaged in farming and stock dealing on his own account. Meeting with unusual success, he decided to branch out more extensively in both lines, and accordingly sold his first place and bought the property he now occupies, a farm of 295 acres of valuable land in Warrington township, situated near Round Top Mountain, about one and a half miles west of Rossville. This property was formerly a part of the McClellan estate, the original estate comprising at one time about eleven hundred acres. Rufus K. Cassel purchased this 295-acre tract, his son Jonathan buying same of him. Here he has carried on general farming very successfully, and has also dealt extensively in cattle and horses, in the latter line being one of the best known men in this section, where he is considered an expert buyer and excellent judge of horses and mules. He is strictly a business man, and though a staunch Republican takes no active part in the workings of the party and has no official aspirations.

Mr. Cassel married Miss Sarah E. Stambaugh, the only child of Peter Stambaugh, a highly respected farmer of Warrington township, and to this union have come the following named children: Carrie, now Mrs. Joseph Stoner; Ivy, who married John Zeigler and has two children, Ralph and Clara; Jennie, a type-setter, employed on a Dillsburg paper; Annie; Gretna, and Ruth. The family are all Lutherans.

JACOB P. LEVERGOOD, who lives in Wrightsville, comes of a family that has been settled in Hellam township for over a hundred years.

On Sept. 28, 1733, Hans Jacob Lebegood, great-grandfather of Jacob P. Levergood, came from Germany to Philadelphia as one of a company of fifty-three from the Palatinate, and their families, in all 173 persons. They sailed from Rotterdam, touching at Plymouth, England, in the brigantine "Richard and Elizabeth", of Philadelphia, Christopher Clyner, master.

Peter Lebegood, grandfather of Jacob P. Levergood, came to Hellam township, where he spent most of his life in farming. His last days were spent in retirement at Columbia, Pa., where he died May 15, 1825, at the age of sixty-nine. His first wife, whose maiden name was Yocum, was of Swedish descent. She died Dec. 19, 1819, aged fifty-eight years, ten months, and he married (second) Hannah (Gardner), widow of Adam Litzenberger. His children, all by his first wife, were as follows: Peter, who died in Johnstown, Pa.; John, who died in Iowa; Jacob, father of Jacob P.; and Henry, owner of Levergood's Mill in Lancaster county, where he died. Peter Levergood, son of grandfather Peter Lebegood, was one of the first settlers of Johnstown, Pa. He served as State commissioner, and a street in Johnstown is named for him. He gave the Lutheran congregation of the town its building site, and contributed all except $300 of the money used in building the church, which was of brick. When, seventy years later, a fine new church replaced this old one, the first child brought to the baptismal font was Edith Louise McKee, a descendant of Peter Levergood.

Jacob Levergood, father of Jacob P., was born in Hellam township in 1796. He was brought up to farming and followed that occupation all his life. In politics he was a Whig. He married Fanny Litzenberger, who was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, in 1803, daughter of Adam and Hannah (Gardner) Litzenberger. Mrs. Levergood was one of two children, the other being Mary, who married Ebenezer Richardson, a miller of York. Jacob

Levergood died in 1850, in Wrightsville, where he had lived in retirement for several years. When the Confederate troops raided this part of the country, in 1863, Mrs. Levergood's house was struck by a shell. She died at her home in Wrightsville, March 3, 1893, in her ninetieth year. She was a member of the Lutheran Church. The children of Jacob and Fanny (Litzenberger) Levergood were as follows: Maria, who died young; Hannah, who died in Wrightsville in 1900 (she was married first to Elias Raab and second to Prof. Horace Maxwell); Jacob, who died at the age of four; John, a physician, who died at Lancaster, Pa., in 1894, at the age of sixty-seven; Fanny, who married C. B. Wallace (deceased), a prominent attorney of York, where she still lives; Caroline, who is the widow of David Wilson and lives in Baltimore; Phoebe, who married Dr. C. G. Polk, of Philadelphia; William H., of Philadelphia; Jacob P., who is mentioned below; and Gardner, who died young.

Jacob P. Levergood was born March 13, 1846, in Wrightsville, in the house which has ever since been his home. He grew up in his native town, and attended school there, and also went to the York County Academy at York, and the Millersville Normal School. He began the study of medicine with his older brother, John, a practicing physician in Lancaster, but after a year and a half ran away to enlist in the United States navy. He entered the service March 30, 1864, at Philadelphia, and was on the United States steamers "Mingo," Capt. J. B. Creighton, and "Cumerone," Capt. Wilson, under Admiral Dahlgren of the South Atlantic squadron. He was in the battle of Honey Hill, and numerous minor engagements, and received his discharge at Washington, Sept. 21, 1865, returning to Wrightsville. The following year he entered the Eastman Business College in Poughkeepsie. On completing his course he came back to Wrightsville, where he was in the grocery business for a year. He then took the position of foreman in a cigar factory, which he held for several years, after which he spent some years in the cigar business on his own account. For a short time he was one of the engineer corps surveying a line for the projected Lancaster & Delaware River Railroad, which was never built. He is at present rural mail carrier, a position he has held for the past two years.

Mr. Levergood has always taken a keen interest in military affairs, and in 1872 he organized a militia company, Company I, 8th Pa. V. I., of which he became second lieutenant. He was afterward adjutant of this regiment, holding the latter position for eight years. He was with the regiment at the Homestead riots, at Pittsburg, and at Mahanoy City, though he severed his connection with the regiment in 1890.

The marriage of Mr. Levergood to Isabella Kreidler, of Wrightsville, took place March 13, 1867. Mrs. Levergood is a native of Wrightsville, daughter of Martin and Mary (Ryder) Kreidler. The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Levergood are: John L., a druggist of Wrightsville; and Phoebe, Mrs. Morris Schröst, of Philadelphia.

In politics Mr. Levergood is a Republican, and he takes an active interest in party matters. He has been secretary of the school board eighteen years. He was appointed justice of the peace to fill the remaining year of the unexpired term of Col. Frank Magee, and then continued in the office, having been elected to the position for five years; but at the end of the second year he resigned to accept his present position.

Fraternally Mr. Levergood is a member and secretary of the Riverside Lodge, No. 503, F. & A. M., Wrightsville, and of Chihuahua Lodge, No. 317, I. O. O. F. He is also a member of the Royal Arcanum, and a charter member of the Knights of Malta at Lancaster, Pa. He is past commander of Lieut. R. W. Smith Post, No. 270, G. A. R., of Wrightsville. He is a member and trustee of the Methodist Church, and a faithful teacher in the Sunday-school.

GEORGE F. W. MILLER, now residing in Glenville, was born in Manheim township, Aug. 7, 1856. His paternal grandfather, John Miller, was a farmer in Manheim township where he died, and he is buried at the "Stone Church" in Codorus township. His wife bore him seven children. John, Henry, Francis, Jacob, George N., Polly and Catherine.

George N. Miller was born on the farm in Manheim township, which his son now owns, and became a shoe maker and farmer. He married Sophia, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Smith) Werner, and they became the parents of Edward, of Codorus township; Caroline, who became Mrs. Gabel, of Glenville; Noah and Annie, twins; and George F. W. The father lived to be seventy-three years old, and the mother to be seventy-one, and both are buried in the graveyard at the “Stone Church.”

George F. W. Miller attended the schools of Manheim township till he was eighteen, and then went to New Freedom to learn cabinet and furniture making with David Hershey. After three years with him, he went for a year to Switzerland, and then in 1881 established himself in his present place in Glenville. He built a shop 40 x 60 feet with a back addition 18 feet in length. Mr. Miller has built up a large business, and is well-known through the surrounding country. He also owns a farm of 108 acres, lying partly in Manheim and partly in Codorus township, adjoining Glenville, where he has put up a fine set of buildings, and has his land in a high state of cultivation.

Mr. Miller has been twice married. His first wife, Sevilla Shue, died in 1895, and he afterward married Miss Minerva Tracy, daughter of John Tracy, of Maryland. One child has been born to them, Malden T. Mr. Miller is a Democrat in his political opinions, and has filled the office of inspector. In religion he belongs to the “Stone Church” (Reformed), and takes an active part in its work.

B. BRUCE BITTNER is one of the leading funeral directors of the city of York, his well-appointed establishment being located at Nos. 33-35 South Beaver street, while he is numbered among the representative businessmen and honored citizens of the county’s fair capital city. Mr. Bittner is a native of the old Keystone State, having been born at Fayetteville, Franklin Co., Pa., April 17, 1868.

William H. Bittner, his father, was born in the same county in 1841, and he died in Chambersburg, that county, in 1881, in the very prime of life. For a number of years he was engaged as bookkeeper in a mercantile establishment in that city, where he was well-known and held in high regard. He married Miss Elizabeth J. Kohler, who was born in Fayetteville, Franklin county, in 1838; she died Feb. 2, 1872, the mother of five children: John E., a machinist by trade, who resides in Wheeling, W. Va.; B. Bruce; Elizabeth M., wife of Newton Frayer, who is engaged in farming in Franklin county; Ella M., who died aged thirteen years; and one that died in infancy.

B. Bruce Bittner secured his preliminary educational discipline in the public schools of Chambersburg. At the age of thirteen years he engaged at farm work for George W. Grove, of Chambersburg, with whom he remained eight years, attending school during the winter months. He then entered upon an apprenticeship with J. T. Crall, in the furniture and undertaking business, in Waynesboro, serving three and a half years in that business. In 1892 he left Waynesboro, and went to the city of Baltimore, Md., where he entered the employ of the undertaking firm of Stuart & Mowen, with whom he remained five and one-half years, after which, in August, 1897, he came to York and accepted the position of manager for L. A. Shives’ Sons, undertakers and furniture dealers. Two and one-half years later he resigned his position and returned to Baltimore, where he again entered the employ of Stuart & Mowen, but one year later he returned to York and purchased the undertaking branch of L. A. Shives’ Sons and engaged in business on his own account. In this line he has been long identified, and when he opened his present undertaking establishment his wide acquaintance and correct business methods resulted in his securing a due portion of the local patronage. He has a fine office and large and well-equipped warerooms, and in all the departments of his business his facilities are of the best.

In politics Mr. Bittner gives his support to the Democratic party, and while he is essentially loyal and public-spirited he has never had aught of ambition for the honors or emoluments of public office. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with York Lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M.; York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. E.; Waynesboro Lodge, No. 219, I. O. O. F., and with the local Encampment, No. 71; and York Conclave, No. 124, Improved Order of Hespasophs. Both Mr. Bittner and his wife are active members of the First M. E. Church of York.

On Dec. 20, 1897, Mr. Bittner was united in marriage to Miss Florence T. Cook, a daughter of William A. and Mary P. (Tuttle) Cook, well-known residents of the city of Baltimore, Md., where she was reared and educated. Mr. and Mrs. Bittner have no children.

WILLIAM SMITH was born in Windsor township, Feb. 2, 1846, on the farm now owned by Andrew B. Hough, son of William, Sr., and Rebecca (Lebernicht) Smith.

William Smith, Sr., was born in Lancaster county, at or near Petersburg. He was reared as a farmer's boy, received a common-school education and at eighteen came to York county and was employed by various farmers of that section. He married Miss Lebernicht and finally located near Freysville. His last days however were spent with his son David, who was clerking in Red Lion, and he died in 1899, aged eighty-seven. His wife passed away in Red Lion, Aug. 28, 1897, at eighty-two years of age.

As a boy, William Smith had only limited opportunities for an education, for, while he was a pupil at the Freysville public school, he could never attend very regularly and even at best was obliged to work hard before and after school hours. From the age of thirteen he made cigars for his father, his quota being fifty every morning before school and one hundred every evening. From his sixteenth to his nineteenth year he worked out as a farm hand, his wages of seven dollars per month going to his father. He next learned to make shoes and worked for Peter All two years, but did not like the trade, as he was kept busy early and late, and could make a little extra money only when the others were asleep. So he returned to cigar making and was employed in various factories until 1868. In that year he decided to begin the manufacture of cigars for himself, and at first undertook it in addition to his duties as a clerk in Henry Sechrist's store at Holtz. He was thus engaged for two years, and meantime gradually obtained control of other factories, so that in 1870 he felt he was in a position to devote his entire attention to cigar making, and in that year he located with his father and employed a number of hands.

When Mr. Smith commenced his business career in 1868, he had only twenty-four dollars capital, and that was at interest where he could not get it for several months. At that time the manufacturers bought tobacco direct from the farmers, and as he found he could not obtain the necessary help, Mr. Smith decided to buy his tobacco on credit and begin operations. He succeeded in establishing himself on a firm basis, but it took ceaseless care and vigilance and proved from the first the mettle of the man. In 1873 he bought a home property near Freysville, on which was a factory, and he conducted both this and the one at his father's place until 1898, when he closed out the latter. Three years later he disposed of the other also, and has since been clerking in the store of his son-in-law, M. C. Holtzinger, at Holtz.

In 1873 Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Louisa F. Haines, sister of ex-Senator Harvey Haines, and by this union there were three children, viz.: Mary Ellen, Mrs. M. C. Holtzinger, of Holtz; Cora Irene, Mrs. Charles W. Tyson, of Red Lion; and Thomas H., conductor on a trolley line in Philadelphia, who married Jessie Mason. On March 4, 1897, Mr. Smith's home was left desolate by the death of his devoted wife, whose remains were interred in the Freysville cemetery. Since the age of forty-three Mr. Smith has been a member of the United Evangelical Church. In politics he is a Democrat and has served one term each as township auditor and school director. He is a man of much energy, industrious and honest, and a good citizen, and the struggle by which he has won his present place has given him an assured position in the respect and esteem of his fellows.

WILLIAM C. HIVELY, a lifelong resident of Springettsbury township, where he is a well-known and influential farmer, was born there on the family homestead, Aug. 17, 1841.

The Hively family were identified with York county a number of generations back, but Jacob Hively, great-grandfather of William C., in middle life left his Pennsylvania farm and with all his household removed to Ohio, making the journey in a wagon drawn by four horses. One of the grandsons, John, remembers seeing the stump of the tree under which the party camped the first night after starting.

John George Hively was the only one of the children taken to Ohio who returned to his native State. Returning to what is now Springettsbury township, then Spring Garden, he rented property for a while, afterward buying a small farm where he lived a short time. When he purchased the present homestead, a place containing 128 acres. His death occurred in 1833, at the age of forty-five, only two years after settling in his new home. He married Miss Mary Rath, of Lancaster county, and they had four children: Samuel; John, of Manchester township; Susan, who died many years ago, wife of Daniel Kendig; and one that died in infancy. Mr. Hively was a member of the Lutheran Church.

Samuel Hively was born in 1817, in the township where he still lives, and has passed there a long and useful life, engaged in farming, in which he has been very successful. When he was only sixteen, his father died, and the burden of managing the homestead fell upon him, but he proved fully equal to the responsibility and has added many valuable improvements to the place. He owns considerable real estate in addition, and has been a man of affairs generally, prominent in advancing anything that would benefit the community. He was the organizer of the Spring Garden Fire Insurance Company, in which he served as president until he was incapacitated by illness, and he was also a promoter of the Spring Garden Building and Loan Company, of York. In this company he was treasurer until his ill health compelled him to resign, his son, Enos F., succeeding him. He likewise assisted his sons in establishing their milling interests. All his life he has been a member of the York Lutheran Church, and has been not only a liberal contributor but active in an official capacity. Another field in which he has done service was as director of the poor. In all these lines Mr. Hively proved himself a capable and trustworthy man, and he has earned the deepest respect and confidence of his fellow citizens. Mr. Hively was married to Miss Sarah Miller, daughter of John Miller, of Springettsbury township. Four children were born to them, namely: George, a Manchester farmer, who died leaving a widow and three children: William C.; Enos F., a retired farmer of Springettsbury township; and Jane, deceased wife of George Miller, of Spring Grove.

William C. Hively was given a public school education and then went to work on the homestead, remaining there in charge of it until his retirement in 1903. About 1890 he and his brother Enos purchased the Diehl mill, located just outside the city limits of York, and have been operating it ever since, doing both custom and commercial work. Since they bought the property it has been remodelled, and a complete set of new roller process machinery put in. Mr. Hively is also prominent in financial affairs, and after his father's retirement from the presidency of the Insurance Company, was elected treasurer of it; he is a director in the Building and Loan Company, and in the Eastern Market House, and is likewise a stockholder in both the City National Bank, of York, and the Guardian Trust Company.

Mr. William C. Hively married Miss Mary Hoke, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Neiman) Hoke. She passed from this world Jan. 11, 1904, aged sixty-one years, nine months, ten days. She was the mother of two daughters: Flora, who married David Myers, a machinist of York, and who has four children, Albert, Annie, Mary and Raymond; and Katie, wife of Stewart Myers, a machinist of East York. Mr. Hively is a member of Mt. Zion Lutheran Church, and has served for a number of years in an official capacity, either as deacon, elder or trustee. Whatever the work in hand Mr. Hively's opinion carries great weight, and he occupies a position of influence and responsibility in the community.

GEORGE W. ROCKEY, who enjoys the distinction of being the local historian of Newberry township, was born Oct. 28, 1821, in Fairview township, son of Samuel and Leah (Kilmore) Rockey.

Frederick Rockey, his grandfather, came from Germany with his two brothers, Jacob and Leonard, and settled in York county, where Red Lion now stands. He followed brick laying and was a very successful and skillful mechanic. Although he lived to be an old man, twenty years prior to his death he had a very serious accident, falling from a scaffold and receiving injuries which nearly resulted fatally, but the noted Dr. Speck of Lancaster City, Penn., brought him back to health. Frederick Rockey is buried in the Lutheran cemetery on George street, in York, Pa. He married Elizabeth King, and the children born to them were: Sarah Ann, who married Samuel Downs, died near Newberry, and is buried at the Paddletown cemetery, Newberry township; Samuel; Jacob died at Red Lion; and John George died in Conewago township.

Samuel Rockey, the father of our subject, was born at Red Lion, in 1798. He received a common school education, and followed farming in Fairview township. He married Leah Kilmore, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Malone) Kilmore, of Washington township, and after his marriage removed to Newberry township and rented a farm of Mathias Boyer. Later he bought eighty acres in the same township, where he followed farming until his death which occurred in 1872. He is buried at the old Miller burying ground in Newberry township, where his wife is also buried, she having passed away in 1889. Samuel Rockey was a staunch Democrat in politics, while his religious connection was with the Lutheran Church of York. The children born to Samuel and Leah Rockey were: George W.; Maria Elizabeth married Joseph Myers and lives in Newberry township; Henry died in York, at the time of his death living a retired life; Angeline, who married Henry Stettler, died in Newberry township and is buried at Paddletown; Sarah Ann married Abraham Wolf, and resides at Lewisberry borough; Rachel married Joseph Strawbaugh, deceased, and resides at Philadelphia street, York; Lydia died at the age of fifteen years, and is buried at the Miller grave yard; Leah died young and is buried in Newberry township; and Jacob died in infancy.

George W. Rockey received but a limited education, attending school only a few weeks each year until he was fourteen years old. On March 16, 1845, he married Amy Fortenbaugh, born Aug. 22, 1819, daughter of Henry and Sophia (Burger) Fortenbaugh. Mrs. Rockey's grandfather, Andrew Fortenbaugh, was born Sept. 16, 1765, and died Dec. 12, 1822, while his wife, Annie, was born May 20, 1765, and died June 20, 1845.

George W. Rockey first went to housekeeping at Scholls Road in Newberry township, where he remained one year and then bought a small tract of very valuable land near a spring in Newberry township, and built a residence and barn. He owns one and three quarters acres where he resides, and fifteen acres in various parts of the township. Mr. Rockey engaged for a time in hauling stone to York, Harrisburg, Carlisle and Shippenburg. From 1847 to 1888 he engaged in the manufacture of cigars, and found ready customers for his product throughout the State, but especially in Adams county. From 1815 until 1900, Mr. Rockey engaged in butchering, and in this line was very well known.

Mrs. Rockey died Dec. 30, 1889, and was buried in Miller's grave yard in Newberry township. To her and Mr. Rockey the following children had been born: Samuel H., born Oct. 20, 1846, died May 4, 1848, and is buried at Miller's grave yard; Mary Ann, born Aug. 18, 1848, died Feb. 19, 1850; Adeline, born Oct. 21, 1850, died March 5, 1853; Sarah Ann, born Jan. 15, 1856, died aged eleven days; Angeline, born June 22, 1857, married (first) David Albright and (second) William F. Koons, and she and her son now live with her father; Leah, born April 29, 1860, died Dec. 20, 1861; and John, born in 1853, married Emma Catherine Weiser, and died March 7, 1898, at the time of his death being a clerk in the freight depot at York, and his widow still resides at York.

In political faith Mr. Rockey is a Democrat but has never sought office. An interesting fact about his life is that Frederick Boyer, who once owned our subject's father's farm, and who is buried thereon, held Mr. Rockey when he was christened. Mr. Boyer was a veteran of the Revolutionary war. Mr. Rockey has in his possession two very old and rare coins which he prizes highly, and which bear the dates of 1803 and 1798. He is a well known and very popular citizen of Newberry township; his uprightness of character, his genial manner and his friendly spirit, have attracted many sincere friends.

LEWIS Q. RADLE, a leading agriculturist of Conewago township, York county, who is farming his tract of twenty-eight acres, was born Oct. 9, 1837, son of John and Elizabeth (Quickel) Radle.

John Radle was born in Germany, and came to America when a young man. In 1830 he settled in York, later locating in Dover, whence he removed to Conewago township. He died in 1837, before the birth of our subject. Mr. Radle married Elizabeth Quickel, who died June 26, 1865, and was interred at Strayer's Church in Dover township. John Radle was a butcher by trade, and followed this calling until his death.

Lewis Q. Radle was the only child of his parents. He attended the township schools, receiving a good education. Mr. Radle learned the carpenter trade with Jesse Quickel and was engaged in this line for thirty years. He purchased the farm where he now lives in Conewago township, and has made great improvements, building a fine home, and good substantial buildings.

On Dec. 9, 1861, Mr. Radle married Elizabeth Ernst, daughter of Jacob Ernst, of Germany, and she died Dec. 9, 1899, being buried at Strayer's Church, Dover township. Mr. and Mrs. Radle were the parents of fifteen children, as follows: William Henry; Mary Ann; Ida, who died young; Amanda J., who died at the age of thirty years, the wife of Samuel H. Myers; Sarah, who died young; Alice; Tacey, who died young; Flora Eve, who married Jesse Snellbaker, and lives in Dover township; Elizabeth D. B., at home; Emma Jane, who married John A. Leckrone, and resides in West Manchester township; Lillie, at home; Margie Minnie, who died Oct. 3, 1888; Bertha and Martha, twins, who died when they were young; and Elsie.

Mr. Radle is a Democrat and has served as assessor. He is connected with the German Reformed Church, in which he has been elder. In historical matters Mr. Radle is conceded to be the best posted man in Cone-wago township. He has always been a man of industrious habits, and the result of the same is shown in his present sound financial condition. He is most highly respected in the township.

JOHN FLEMING, son of Abraham and Susanna Fleming, and father of Abram H., was born Jan. 12, 1835, and died April 26, 1901. He passed his boyhood on the farm and in attending school, and in 1864, he assumed charge of the homestead, comprising 123 acres, with a good house and barn, which eventually became the property of himself and sisters. He was prominent in local affairs, was a school director, and served several terms as township auditor. By his wife, Catherine Huntsberger, who died Jan. 30, 1901, aged fifty-six, he had four children, besides Abram H., namely: William and Ida, who died in infancy; Arthur Eugene, a car builder in Harrisburg, who married Miss Maud Robins; and John Newton, in the cream separator business at Harrisburg. An adopted daughter, Minnie D., died in 1901.

ABRAM H. FLEMING, born in 1876, was sent first to the district schools, and then to Dillsburg. On leaving school he took a position under J. L. McCreary of Dillsburg, to learn the bakery business, but proved to be physically unequal to the work, so gave it up and started on a trip through the West. He was gone nineteen months and traveled through thirteen states, going as far west as Nevada in order to view the gold and silver mining district. Mr. Fleming has subsequently taken three other western trips, and one through the South. Returning to York county, he went to school for one year, more, and then again entered business. He has held a number of positions, filling each creditably. In 1894 he ran a stationary engine at Fowler, Ind., clerked for five years in the mercantile establishment of Latimore Sidle at Steelton, was in the electrical department of the Pennsylvania Steel Company in that same town for six months, and ran a stationary engine for them for two years. To perfect himself further in this last branch, he took a full course in stationary engineering at Harrisburg, and is now an expert. In 1897 and 1898 he was an attendant at the State Lunatic Asylum in Harrisburg, and then from 1899 to the spring of 1904 he was employed as car builder and brakeman for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. At present Mr. Fleming is living on the old homestead, a place of 136 acres, and is giving his whole attention to farming. In politics he is a Republican.

In 1899, occurred the marriage of Abram H. Fleming to Miss Florence Brown, daughter of John Robert and Sarah (Adams) Brown. Her paternal grandparents were John Robert and Nancy Jane (Goudy) Brown, and those on the mother's side, John Quincy and Rebecca (Shear) Adams. Mrs. Fleming was the youngest of four children, the others being: Miles, who married Miss Nellie Kuhn, and has one daughter, Mildred; and Elizabeth and Clark E., both unmarried.

JACOB T. GOHN, of Chanceford township, York county, now living retired, is a survivor of the great Civil war. He was born in Chanceford township, on the farm now adjoining his own, then the old homestead, June 7, 1843, son of Henry and Mary (Tome) Gohn.

Daniel Gohn, the grandfather of Jacob T., came from Dover, York county, to Chanceford township, where he died. He married Elizabeth Tome, who also died in Chanceford township.

Henry Gohn, the father of our subject, was a well-known and highly esteemed farmer of Chanceford township, and at his death the township lost a useful citizen. He married Miss Mary Tome, a sister of Jacob Tome, a well known financier and philanthropist of Port Deposit. Mrs. Gohn died in 1874, aged fifty-six, the mother of the following children: Henry; Elizabeth, who married John Forry, of Red Lion; Mary, who married George Heffner, of Hopewell township; Jacob T.; Fannie, who married Andrew Craley, of Chanceford township; Catherine, who married Michael Arnold, of Chanceford township; and Andrew, who also resides in Chanceford township.

Jacob T. Gohn attended school in the winter terms until eighteen years of age, and followed farming on his father's farm. In 1864 he enlisted at Carlisle, in Company E, 15th Pennsylvania Cavalry, Colonel Palmer commanding, and after enlistment proceeded to Camp Who-hatchee, where they camped for that winter. On March 8, 1865, he engaged in his first battle, which was a lively skirmish just beyond Chattanooga, Tenn., and from that time to the close of the war the company was almost continually in active service. Mr. Gohn has an excellent war record, and participated in one of the most notable events of the war. While in pursuit of General Bragg, the 15th Regiment captured him in a farm house in Tennessee, and with him was captured one who was supposed to be his wife. General Bragg managed to get this party through the lines, and it was afterward found that it was Jefferson Davis, the president of the Confederacy, who had been fleeing from the Union troops. A short time afterward the 15th regiment ran Mr. Davis into the hands of the 4th Michigan regiment. Mr. Gohn was honorably discharged from the service at Nashville, Tenn., at the close of the war, and returned home to resume farming with his father.

In 1867 Mr. Gohn married Miss Mary Magdalena Sangrey, daughter of William and Susan Sangrey, and after marriage located on a farm at St. Luke's Church, which he had purchased from Peter Sangrey, and which he sold in 1869. He then removed to Manor township, Lancaster county, where he rented a farm and remained four years, and then returned home and bought his present home of seventy acres, then all brush land, the timber having been cut down, and nothing but the stumps remaining. Mr. Gohn improved this land, built a house and barn, and good substantial out-buildings, and here he farmed until 1889, when he retired from active life. Mr. Gohn built his present home in 1901.

Fraternally Mr. Gohn is a member of Post No. 260, G. A. R., Pleasant Grove, Lancaster county. His religious membership is with no church, but he is ever ready to assist any religious work, irrespective of creed. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Gohn's first wife died in 1887, leaving these children: Edward, of Chanceford township; Annie, who married John Blouse, of Windsor township; Ella, who married Henry Markle, of Red Lion; and Lizzie, who married Elwood Dettinger, and lives in Chanceford township. Mr. Gohn was married (second), in 1900, to Miss Lizzie Getchell.

GEORGE FREDERICK GABLE, youngest son of Jacob and Anna Maria (Jackson) Gable, was born in Windsor township, York county, March 9, 1859. He has taken an active part in politics from early manhood, always voting the Republican ticket, and has been successful in several lines of business. The family history will be found elsewhere.

The school days of George Frederick Gable began when he was six years old, and continued until he was fourteen. He had the unusual privilege of finding his first teacher, Amos Hengst, in the township schools where his later lessons were learned. His business life began at the age of fourteen, when he entered the store of his brother, John Wesley Gable, as clerk, remaining there for twenty years. On leaving the store Mr. Gable purchased and stocked the old home farm, and carried it on for a year. He then sold it, and in 1896 became traveling agent for a publishing firm of Philadelphia; among other publications which he handled was the "Royal Scroll," of which he made a great success. His next position was as department manager in C. H. Baer's department store in York. After a year there he became floor walker in the store of P. Wiest's Sons, then returning home to enter the postal service.

George Frederick Gable married Melinda Hively, June 11, 1878, and they began housekeeping in the building adjoining his brother's store. They have had the following children: (1) Harry Strickler, born Sept. 24, 1879, in Chanceford township, resides in Philadelphia. After graduating from the grammar and high schools of York he taught three years in Hel-
William, Cal Trout, successful clerk and lam and one year in Manchester. He became a clerk in Smith & Co.'s grocery store, in York, whence he went to Philadelphia, where he was employed in a chemical manufacturing plant. For three years he was a street car conductor in Philadelphia, and is at present in one of the offices of the Rapid Transit Traction Company's Frankford Division, Philadelphia, Pa. (2) Mervin Clayton, born Nov. 3, 1880, in Hellam township, lives in Philadelphia. He attended the public schools, worked on the farm three years, was employed by William Shaffer, of Windsorn township, and by Edward Hauser, a coal dealer of Spring Garden township, and then learned the milling business with John Mitzel, of Hellam township. He ran Mr. Helb's mill at Railroad, Pa., near Shrewsbury, for a year, then went to Philadelphia, and was employed in a chemical manufactory a year, since when he has been in Mr. Immel's commission house. (3) Carrie Elmira, born Dec. 19, 1882, in Hellam township, graduated from the township schools; and the Normal at York, and has taken a term in the Millersville State Normal School. She was always a good student and began teaching at seventeen, has taught five years in Hellam township, and is considered one of the best teachers in the township. (4) Walter Emanuel, born July 9, 1884, in Hellam township, is a clerk in C. H. Baer's department store in York. He graduated from the common schools, was a clerk two years in the store of his uncle, J. W. Gable, and for one year with Blessing & Gable. He then took a course in the Millersville Normal School, after which he obtained his present position. (5) George Washington, born Jan. 31, 1886, in Hellam township, attended the common schools, and learned the trade of miller. At present he has a position in Philadelphia with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. (6) Jacob Luther, born March 26, 1888, in Hellam township, is at present book clerk with the York Manufacturing Company of York. (7) Paul Hively, born July 13, 1890, is at school. (8) Helen Grace, born Nov. 7, 1892, is attending school.

Melinda (Hively) Gable, wife of George Frederick, was a daughter of Amos and Harriet (Strickler) Hively, the former a native of Windsor, the latter of Hellam township. Amos Hively was a Miller and worked nine years in Strickler's mill at Hellam. He was in business for himself at Detwilers for two years, and for one year was at Christ Mussemen's, at Chickies. Lancaster county. Twenty-five years ago he bought a farm in Chanceford township, which he carried on until 1902, when he retired from active life, and he now resides in Hellam aged seventy-one years. He has always been a Republican, and served as constable in Windsor township many years ago, as supervisor, tax collector and judge of elections. In religion Mr. Hively is a Lutheran; his wife subscribes to the Dunkard faith. She is now sixty-six years of age. Their children were as follows: Ellen, who died young; Calvin, who died young; Melinda, who married George Frederick Gable; Harvey and Emma, who died young; Amos, who married Nettie Tosh, and lives at Hellam; John, who married Edith Rohrer, from Strasburg, Lancaster county, and lives at Hellam; Annie and Maggie, who are at home unmarried; William, who is married to Iva Curran, and is at present engaged in farming.

Mr. Gable has been actively interested in politics since he cast his first vote for Garfield. He has voted for every Republican Presidential candidate since then, and has taken considerable part in local politics. For nearly twenty years he served as assistant postmaster at Hellam, and in December, 1902, was appointed rural free delivery carrier, a position he still holds. His religious faith is that of the Lutheran Church. The comfortable family home was built by Mr. Gable in 1884.

GEORGE B. TROUT, a successful farmer of York county, now living retired in Chanceford township, was born Nov. 13, 1842, on the homestead in Chanceford township, where he received a common-school education, attending school from the age of six years until twenty-one, and spending one year at the Murphy academy. He farmed with his father until his marriage, after which he lived at the Brogue for four or five years, following carpenter work, which trade he had learned with Jesse Warner of Collinsville. He became a carpenter contractor and erected many fine residences and barns in the township. Later Mr. Trout ceased carpentering and went to farming, cropping by the half share for six years, after which he bought 100 acres of the home farm, which he cultivated until 1890, and then built his present home on a part of the farm, on which he has since lived retired.
George B. Trout married (first) Sarah C. Workinger, who died on the farm Aug. 30, 1882, by whom he had the following children: Jesse V. is a farmer; William H., who farms for his father, married a Miss Andrews; Anna Bertha married Robert C. Andrews, of Chanceford township; Maggie E. married Jacob H. Lyons; and George. Mr. Trout's second marriage, which occurred Sept. 25, 1885, was to Mary A. Wise, who was born in Lower Chanceford township in 1845, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Urey) Wise, both of whom are deceased. The only child of this second marriage, Emma Rebecca, died in infancy. Mr. Trout is a stanch Democrat, and was appointed county tax collector in 1885, being elected to that office again in 1890. He is a devout member of the New Harmony Church, Presbyterian, of Brogueville, with which he united at the age of twenty-seven. Mr. Trout is unfortunately afflicted with bad hearing, which prevents him participating in church or public affairs, as his talents would have permitted.

George B. Trout is a survivor of the Civil war. He enlisted at Harrisburg, in March, 1865, in Company A, 103rd P. V. I., and served until the close of the war, being stationed at Harrisburg, Pa., and later at Norfolk, Va. He was mustered out of service at Harrisburg, Pa. Mr. Trout is noted for his industry and honesty, and is one who deserves the name of a first-class citizen. He has lived an upright, industrious life, and now can enjoy the fruits of his labor.

Jesse V. Trout was born at Brogueville, Feb. 14, 1869, and received his education in the public schools of the township. At the age of five years he was taught by Miss Sarah Anderson, and finished his education at the age of nineteen years with Abe Spidel and a Miss Fry. Mr. Trout has been a farmer all his life, working for his father until the age of twenty-nine, when he bought twenty-one acres of land close to Brogueville, where he has since been actively engaged.

THEODORE B. SEIP (deceased) was for many years one of the leading farmers and esteemed citizens of Conewago township, where he also followed cigar making. Mr. Seip was born Aug. 4, 1847, in Strines-town, Conewago township, son of George Seip.

George Seip was born in York county, where he was a school teacher. He was twice married, having by his first wife these children: Robert, Oliver, Jacob and Theodore. By his second wife he had these children: Peter, William, Augustus, Charlotte, Susan, Leah and Michael.

Theodore Seip was given the best education afforded in the district schools of the time and place, and learned the cigarmaking trade, which he followed in conjunction with farming in Conewago township. He married Magdaline Zorgar, daughter of Michael and Mary Ann Zorgar, the former of whom died in Newberry township, York county, while the latter died at the home of Mrs. Seip in Strines-town. Both were buried at Pleasant Grove, Newberry township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Zorgar were: Daniel, Martin, Lydia Ann, O. Anne, Lauretta, Eliza, Mary and Magdaline.

After his marriage Theodore Seip located in Newberry township, where he followed farming for about ten years. He then came to Strines-town and bought a fine home, and followed his trade in the township. Mr. Seip was an invalid for about three years before his death, which occurred in 1867, caused by cancer. He was buried at Pleasant Grove cemetery.

On Feb. 15, 1864, Mr. Seip enlisted in Company M, 7th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served until Aug. 23, 1865, when he received his honorable discharge. During service he was wounded, losing the middle finger of his left hand. Mr. Seip suffered greatly from some disease of the back, contracted, no doubt, from exposure while in the service. He had an honorable war record, and one which any man might have been proud of, and he possessed the respect of all who knew him. He was honest and upright as a citizen, and was devoted to his family. For many years he was a consistent member of the United Brethren Church, and was unusually liberal in his support of all moral and religious movements. He took great interest in public events and voted the Republican ticket, being quite active in his support of that party during his younger days.

Mr. Seip was the father of two sons—Alvin and Lake G., who are engaged in the cigar business at Strines-town. Mrs. Seip is well-known, and is noted for her many amiable characteristics and for her generous hospitality.
HENRY FORTENBAUGH (deceased), who served as justice of the peace of Newberry township, York county, followed farming for a number of years on the farm which formerly was owned by his grandfather, and later by his father. Mr. Fortenbaugh was born Nov. 7, 1839, in Newberry township, son of Peter and Elizabeth (Brubaker) Fortenbaugh.

The first of the Fortenbaugh family to come to America from Germany were two brothers, one of whom settled along the Susquehanna river, near Goldsboro, the other, of whom not much is known, settling in Dauphin county.

Andrew Fortenbaugh, the grandfather of Henry, was born in 1764, and was a local preacher of the Evangelical faith. On April 11, 1806, he took up a tract of land consisting of 149 acres in Newberry township, near Yocumtown, purchasing it from John Baxter and his wife. On June 2, 1810, Mr. Fortenbaugh traded one-half acre of his land, upon which was built, probably about this time, an old mill, which is still standing at this time. Andrew Fortenbaugh married a Miss Kauffman and they both died in the home in Newberry township. Their children, all now deceased, were: William; Andrew; Henry; Peter; and Nancy, who married Jacob Burger.

Peter Fortenbaugh was born June 7, 1796, in Newberry township, where he received a common-school education. He married Harriet Grimes, who died June 1, 1838, and is buried in Newberry township. The children born to Mr. Fortenbaugh and his first wife were: Lydia died young; Leah, deceased, married David Ort; Anna, deceased, married D. B. Kister; and John died in infancy. Mr. Fortenbaugh's second wife, the mother of our subject, was Elizabeth Brubaker, daughter of Conrad and Elizabeth (Zeigler) Brubaker, and she died about 1893, and is interred in Newberry township. The children born of this union were: Henry; Martin, deceased, who married Adeline Prowell, enlisted in Company C, 130th P. V. I., and was wounded in the wrist at the battle of Antietam; Harriet married Joseph Updegraff, and lives in Newberry township; John married Miss Wetzel, and lives in Randolph Co., Ind.; Mary married John W. Prowell, and lives in Newberry township; Susan married Hays Eppley, and both are deceased; Lydia died young; and Peter L., who married Henrietta Good, is a justice of the peace at Goldsboro.

At his death Henry Fortenbaugh owned the farm, which his grandfather purchased in 1800, and here he remained for thirty years, at that time removing to his late home, where he lived a retired life. In 1864 Mr. Fortenbaugh married Julia Prowell, daughter of James B. and Susan (Wilt) Prowell. Mrs. Prowell died in 1856, while her husband survived until 1896, and both are buried at the Salem Church, in Fairview township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Fortenbaugh were: Maggie, who married William Kohler, and lives in the old homestead in Newberry township; Susan, who married Dr. Robert Swiler, and lives in Harrisburg; Elizabeth, who married Benjamin Fisher, and lives in Fairview township; Abraham, a graduate of the Palms Business College, Philadelphia, and now bookkeeper for the United Ice & Coal Co., at Steelton; Annie, who died at the age of three years; and James P., who is a painter by trade, in New Cumberland.

In 1867 Mr. Fortenbaugh was elected justice of the peace for a term of five years, and in 1901 was appointed by the governor to fill out a term of one year. In the spring of 1902 Judge Fortenbaugh was again elected for a term of five years. In political matters Mr. Fortenbaugh was a Republican, and took a lively interest in his party's success. For seven years he was school director, and was also called upon to fill the office of auditor for two years; assessor for three years, and township treasurer for two years. Mr. Fortenbaugh's many local positions of trust, tended him without solicitation, were filled by him with care and honor. He was one of the most popular and public-spirited citizens of Newberry township, was identified with many local improvements, and all through his public career wielded a wide influence. The Fortenbaugh family is well known and very highly esteemed in the community.

EDWIN INNERS, owner of one of the fine farm properties of York township, where he is living practically retired, though still according a general supervision to the place, was born on the old home farm, in York township, Oct. 26, 1843, son of George and Leah (Evert) Innors, both of whom passed their entire lives in York county, being members of sterling pioneer families.
George Inners was born in York township, March 9, 1805, and was reared to manhood on the home farm, receiving a common-school education. In his youth he learned the blacksmith’s trade, which he followed as a vocation for a few years, after which he purchased the old Hartman farm, of about one hundred and in farming, while he also erected a grist mill, ten acres, in York township, and there engaged which he equipped with the best of machinery to be had in that period, and the Inners mill became and remains one of the landmarks of this section of the county, having been in operation during the greater portion of the time since its erection. The mill and the old homestead farm are now owned by Henry Inners, brother of the subject of this review. George Inners continued to devote his attention to his farming and milling enterprises until his death, which occurred Nov. 28, 1876, while his cherished and devoted wife was summoned into eternal rest March 19, 1883, both being laid to rest in the Blimyer churchyard, in York township. Mr. Inners was one of the substantial and influential men of the county, inflexible in his integrity of purpose, generous and kindly in his association with his fellowmen and loyal in all the duties of citizenship, so that he naturally commanded the esteem and respect of all who knew him. He was a Democrat in politics, and both he and his wife were members of the Blimyer church. Of their children, Henry is the eldest and is living on the old homestead, as has already been stated; Mary died Nov. 16, 1905; Edwin is the immediate subject of this sketch; George and Reuben are deceased; Caroline is living; Elizabeth is deceased; and William.

Edwin Inners grew up on the farm, as sisting to a due extent in its work and also in the operation of the mill, while he continued to attend the district schools of York township until he had attained the age of seventeen years. He was associated with his father in the work of the farm and mill until 1870. He then effected the purchase of his father-in-law’s farm of eighty-one acres, in York township, where he continued to give his active supervision to the cultivation of the place until 1902, when he practically retired from active labor, though he still resides in the attractive homestead. On Feb. 6, 1904, Mr. Inners met with an accident of most unfortunate order, having caught his right hand in the machinery while engaged in operating a fodder-cutter, and having so seriously mangled and crushed the member as to necessitate its amputation at the wrist.

At the time when the integrity of the Union was thrown into jeopardy through armed rebellion, Mr. Inners manifested his intrinsic loyalty and patriotism by enlisting as a private in Company G, 103d P. V. I., with which he served until the close of one year’s enlistment, when he received his honorable discharge, having been in Virginia during the greater portion of this interval and his command having there been assigned to guard duty. In politics Mr. Inners has ever accorded allegiance to the Democratic party, while he has taken a proper interest and part in local affairs of a public nature. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Lutheran church, being enrolled as valued members of what is known as the Blimyer church.

On May 16, 1869, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Inners to Miss Elizabeth Schlag, who was born and reared in York township, this county, daughter of Michael and Mary (Seiger) Schlag, the former of whom was born Aug. 9, 1809, and died Jan. 6, 1895, while the latter was born April 11, 1813, and died Aug. 1, 1880. They died on the farm now owned by Mr. Inners, Mr. Schlag having owned the property for many years prior to his demise, and having been one of the reputable and honored citizens of this section. To Mr. and Mrs. Inners have been born children as follows: Eleanor M. is the wife of Jeremiah Snyder, a successful farmer and cigar manufacturer of York township; Michael married Miss Flora M. Beeler, and they reside in Dallas-town, this county, where he is a contractor and builder by vocation; Thomas died at the age of nineteen years; and Uriah, who married Miss Jennie Jackson, remains at home and has the general charge of the old farm. Maggie Alvertia, daughter of Uriah and Jennie Inners, died Feb. 6, 1906, aged three years, two months and five days and was buried at Blimyer graveyard.

Edward S. Frey is a representative of one of the old and honored families of York county, and is at the present time incumbent of the position of city engineer in the city of York, being a popular and able official, while he has attained no little prestige in his chosen profession.
Samuel Frey, grandfather of Edward S., was for many years engaged in the retail grocery trade in York, being a prominent and influential citizen and business man.

Samuel C. Frey, father of our subject, is one of the representative members of the Bar of York county. Such is his standing in the community, both professionally and as a loyal and public-spirited citizen, that no words of praise need be incorporated in this sketch as concerning him, but it may be said that he wields marked influence in public and civic affairs and is a man of high professional attainments. He married Miss Lilie L. Schaffer, of York, and they became the parents of three children: Robert S., who is engaged in the practice of law in the city of York, having completed his technical reading under the direction of James G. Glessner, the present district attorney of York county, and having been admitted to the Bar of his native county in November, 1904, in which same month his preceptor was elected to his present office; Hazel B., a member of the class of 1905, in the York high school; and Edward S.

Edward S. Frey was born in the city of York, March 19, 1881, and after the public school, including a course in the local high school, he continued his studies in the York Collegiate Institute, after which he matriculated in the Pennsylvania State University, where he completed the prescribed technical course in civil engineering, being graduated as a member of the class of 1903, and receiving his degree of Bachelor of Science. After his graduation Mr. Frey engaged in the work of his profession under Robert B. McKinnon, city engineer of York, and in April, 1904, he was appointed official draughtsman for the city.

In politics Mr. Frey is known as a loyal and enthusiastic advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and both he and his wife are members of St. Paul's Lutheran church. While a student in the university our subject was prominently identified with the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, while he was for a time manager of the college baseball team and also held membership in the football team, being prominently concerned in the athletic and literary affairs of the institution. He was a member of the Thespians, a dramatic association, and enjoyed marked popularity among his fellow students, as he does also in the business and social circles of his native city.

On June 15, 1904, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Frey to Miss Roxie Irene Snively, daughter of the late Dr. Andrew J. Snively, of Hanover, this county, one of the prominent and honored members of the medical profession at the time of his death.

KLINEDIST. The Klinedinst family in America was founded at least two hundred years ago by David Klinedinst, who came to this country from Hanover, Germany, and settled in the neighborhood of Hanover, York county, Pa. The maternal great-grandfather of the Klinedinsts, now resident of York, was from Lieh, Hesse-Darmstadt, where he was burgomaster, an office that had been in the family for almost half a century. David Klinedinst, grandfather of David P., of York, was a lumber merchant in York.

John Klinedinst, son of David, was a merchant who spent his later years in retirement, and died in 1875, at the age of sixty-six. He married Margaret Wagner, daughter of Philip Wagner, a live stock dealer of York, and two sons were born of this union: John Ferdinand, the physician; and David P., the lawyer. Mrs. Klinedinst died in 1897, aged fifty-six years. One of her relatives is Supreme Bishop of the Lutheran Church of Hesse Darmstadt.

David P. Klinedinst, attorney-at-law, was born in York, Pa., July 31, 1870, and as a boy attended the public schools. He studied at York Collegiate Institute, and then became a student at Yale, graduating from the law school in 1897 and receiving the degree of LL. B., after which he read law with Stewart, Niles & Neff. He was admitted to practice in the Connecticut courts immediately after his graduation, and to the York County Bar the same year. From 1899 until May 1, 1903, he occupied the position of city solicitor for York.

Mr. Klinedinst finds time for much social and civic activity, in addition to his exclusive professional work. He is a member of the York County Bar Association, being an ex-member of the Board of Censors in the latter society, and he is also a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association. He is attorney for the American Surety Company, of New York, and for the local branch of the Children's Home Society of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the Bachelor's Club, and the Country Club of York; and belongs to the Yale Alumni Association of Philadelphia. He is one of the board
Mr. Glatfelter has an intense love for books and for nature. He is a member of the United Evangelical Church.

FRANKLIN HOVIS, of Pleasureville, York county, where he conducts an extensive butchering business, was born Jan. 29, 1863, in York township, son of Jesse and Matilda (Spry) Hovis.

The great-grandfather of Franklin Hovis came from Germany, and the grandfather, Jacob Hovis, son of the emigrant, was a basket maker and farmer of Springfield township, where he died in his forties, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. His wife, Barbara Glatfelter, like her husband a native of York county, was well-advanced in years at the time of her death, and she was also a member of the Lutheran Church. They had a family of nine children: Daniel, Isaac, Jacob, Jesse, Adam, Frank, Katie, Rachel and Elizabeth, all of whom are deceased.

Jesse Hovis, son of Jacob and Barbara, was born July 16, 1823, and was reared upon a farm, upon which he remained until he was seventeen years old. He then learned the cooper's trade, at which he worked until he bought a farm of sixty acres in York township, where he followed farming for twenty-five years, at the end of which time he virtually retired from active life, and in 1890 removed to Spry, where he passed the rest of his life. He consistently voted the Democratic ticket, and was always active in politics. He efficiently filled the positions of judge of election, tax collector and assessor, and was one of the good, upright men of the locality, taking a great interest in township affairs and being a stanch supporter of anything that was of benefit to the community. He and his family belonged to the United Brethren Church, and he was one of the official board.

Jesse Hovis was twice married. His first wife was Catherine Vost, who died eighteen months after marriage, leaving one child, Amanda, deceased, who married George Linebaugh. Mr. Hovis married (second) April 27, 1854, Matilda M. Sprenkle, who was born in York township, York county, daughter of Michael and Lydia (Barnhart) Sprenkle. To Mr. and Mrs. Hovis were born children as follows: Millie, deceased; Annie, deceased, married Albert Wineka; Franklin; Albert, a cigar-maker, of Spry; Lydia, wife of John Streavig.
a butcher of Red Lion; and Charles, a cigar maker, resides at Spry. Jesse Hovis, the father, entered into rest Jan. 18, 1906, at 12:50 a.m., aged eighty-two years, six months and two days. His funeral services were held in the Spry U. B. Church on Jan. 21, 1906, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Harry Boyer, from the text Ps. CXXVII-2: "It is vain for you to rise up early, or to sit up late to eat the bread of sorrow, for so He giveth His beloved sleep." The funeral was largely attended, and was a high testimonial of respect to one of the oldest citizens of York county.

Franklin Hovis was reared in York township, where he received his education in the public schools and the old Spenkle school house. He remained at home on the farm until sixteen, and then learned carpentering, later basket making, then cigar making and subsequently engaged in trucking. On March 27, 1889, Mr. Hovis removed to Springetsbury, and since that time has engaged in butchering. He sells his meats through the country by wagons, and attends the York city markets. Since his residence in Springetsbury, while Mr. Hovis has spent most of his time in butchering, for a time he was engaged in the cigar making business. On his arrival here Mr. Hovis was without funds, and his success is due entirely to his tireless energy, and his ability to see and accept good business opportunities. Mr. Hovis is certainly a self-made man. He now owns three good properties in the township, and two building lots in York. His slaughter houses are good substantial buildings, thoroughly equipped with all modern improvements, while his private residence is the finest in the village of Springet.

On Feb. 24, 1884, Mr. Hovis married Miss Elizabeth Wineka, born Sept. 13, 1865, in York township, daughter of Henry and Magdalena (Helder) Wineka, and to this union two children have been born: Curvin H., born June 9, 1886; and Laura B., born Nov. 9, 1887.

Mr. Hovis takes an intelligent citizen's interest in politics, casting his vote uniformly for Democratic candidates, but not seeking office himself. The family are members of the United Brethren Church, in which he is one of the trustees and treasurer. Mr. Hovis is one of the first class citizens of Springetsbury township, honest and upright, and always ready to do his part in promoting public improvements and in advancing the influence of the school and church. The family is held in much respect throughout the township.

WILLIAM BESHORE, who was for a number of years engaged in the hotel business in Lewisberry borough, is now engaged in working his farm of seventy acres in Newberry township. Mr. Beshore was born Oct. 18, 1849, son of Daniel and Mary (Fink) Beshore, and a grandson of Jacob Beshore. The great-grandfather of William Beshore was George Beshore, who came from Germany and settled in Manchester township, where he took up a tract of land near Manchester borough. Little is known of George Beshore, except that he was a farmer and spent his entire life in Manchester township, where his death occurred.

Jacob Beshore, the grandfather, was born on the farm in Manchester township, and bought the old home, where he followed farming until his death. He married Lydia Fritz, and they both rest in the Union cemetery, Manchester borough. The children born to this couple were as follows: Daniel; Jacob, living at Manchester borough; John, in Newberry township; Benjamin, in Newberry township; Leah, widow John Hoover, and living in Manchester borough; and Elizabeth, deceased.

Daniel Beshore, father of William, was born in 1823, on the old home in Manchester township, and received a common school education. Mr. Beshore followed farming in Manchester township, later removing to Newberry township, where he purchased the old Reesor farm, and worked it for about forty years. Mr. Beshore retired from active life about ten years prior to his death, which occurred in 1894, and he is interred at the Paddletown Church, Newberry township. He married Mary Fink, daughter of William Fink, of one of York county's old families. Mrs. Beshore is still living in Newberrytown. Daniel Beshore held the offices of school director and was tax collector for eight years. He was a Dunkard in religious faith, while his wife was a valued and consistent member of the Evangelical Church. Mr. Beshore was very highly respected, and was widely known for his honesty and industry, and in every phase of life was a good man and a first-class citizen. His estimable wife survives him, and is well known for her kindness of heart and her generous hospitality. The children born to Daniel Beshore and wife were as follows: Andrew, who married (first) Jane Gross, and (second) Ellen Jennings Bair; William; Emma, widow of William Strine, and living in Newberry-town; Ellen, who married Charles E. Bair, a cigar manufacturer of Goldsboro; Daniel, Jr., who married Ida Yinger, and lives in Newberry-town; Lydia, who married (first) Daniel Spahr, and (second) Andrew Sipe, and lives at Yocumtown; Mary, who married William Smith, and resides in Newberry township; Leah, wife of John Stettler; Jacob, who married Elizabeth Eppley, and they reside on the old home in Newberry township; and Charles, who married Bertha Brinton, and resides in Harrisburg.

William Beshore attended the township schools until eighteen years of age, and then learned the cigar making trade, at which he worked for six years. At this time he went into business for himself at Newberry-town, remaining there about fifteen years. He had a large business and employed about forty hands. In 1893 he went into farming, purchasing a tract of about seventy acres of land, where he built fine substantial buildings, and remained here until 1896, when he went to Lewisberry borough, and engaged in the hotel business, remaining there four years. He then sold out and bought the "Prima House," which he conducted until 1902, when he returned to Newberry-town and lived retired for one year, spent a short time with his son in York, and then, in 1903, returned to the farm, where he has since remained.

Mr. Beshore married Katie Bair, who died in 1876, and was buried at Paddletown, Newberry township. She left one daughter, Beckie, who married F. Updegraff, and lives at New Cumberland, Cumberland county. Mr. Beshore married (second) Susan Ruby, daughter of Tobias and Catherine Ruby. To this marriage came one son, William, Jr., born in 1879, who received a good education, and for a year was the proprietor of the well known "Central Hotel," on Market street, York, but who is now at Newberry-town, assisting his father; in 1902 he married Mary Drawbaugh, daughter of Edward and Eliza (Mocklin) Drawbaugh. Both father and son are members of the Democratic party. They are most highly respected and very well known.

GEORGE F. MOTTER, son of Joseph Motter and Eve Oberlin, was born Jan. 29, 1859, in the city of York. He has passed practically his entire life in York county. He was left double orphaned when a small child, and he has wrought out his own success through the application of his energies and abilities along a definite line of action, so ordering his course as to retain at all times the confidence and good-will of his fellowmen. As a worthy citizen and able and popular executive and business man, he is well entitled to representation in this work.

The Motters have been identified with the history of this locality from the early days of York and Adams counties. The first of the name to come to this country were Frederick, Henry, George and Louis Motter, who emigrated from Germany. They settled in Pennsylvania near the Maryland line, and their descendants have since maintained high standing among the substantial residents of that region. Henry Motter was the grandfather of George F. Motter, whose name opens this sketch. He lived in Adams county, and reared a large family, namely: Samuel, Henry, Joseph, Daniel, Jacob, Jesse, Lewis, Frederick, Catherine, Martha and Margaret.

Joseph Motter, father of George F., was born in York county. He early took up his residence in York, where he died in 1877, while his wife survived him about three months. He was a pumpmaker and broommaker by occupation. Joseph Motter was a valiant soldier in the Mexican war, in which he was wounded and left on the field to die, but a companion, Samuel Simons, carried him on his back a distance of twenty-two miles to the city of Mexico, where he received attention and eventually recovered. He was also a soldier in the Civil war, serving two enlistments, and being twice wounded. He married Miss Eve Oberlin, and they became the parents of three children, one of whom, William, died at the age of two years, while the two survivors are George F. and Ellen, the latter the wife of John T. Starke, a boilermaker and builder of stationary engines residing in York.

George F. Motter at the age of four years was placed in the Orphans' Home at York city, where he remained until he had attained the age of ten years. He was then bound out to a farmer of York county, and remained with him until eighteen years of age, in the meanwhile attending the public schools as opportunity afforded, while no slight amount of labor fell to his portion during this interval. On Jan. 15, 1877, Mr. Motter initiated his independent career by entering upon an apprenticeship to the machinist's trade, in the establishment of Frey & Motter, of York, with whom he remained three years. He then secured employment in the foundry and machine shop of George F. Bangler, in whose employ he remained two years and six months. He next passed about seventeen months as a journeyman in the works of the Harrisburg Foundry & Machine Company at the State capital, after which he returned to York and found employment as a journeyman machinist in the works of the York Manufacturing Company. Eighteen months later he was made foreman of the shops, in which capacity he served for the long period of thirteen years, at the expiration of which, in 1897, he was promoted to the responsible office of superintendent, which he held until Jan. 1, 1905. No better mark of confidence and commendation can be asked than that afforded in his long service in the employ of that important company, and in his being selected to fill that position. On Oct. 1, 1905, he resigned to become a partner in the Drury Brick & Construction Company, composed of George W. Drury, president; F. O. Metz, secretary and treasurer; and Charles I. Drury, superintendent of plant. This company was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania for the manufacture of shale pressed brick and iron structural work. His career affords a noteworthy illustration of what may be accomplished by the American boy of pluck, energy, determination and honesty of purpose. While serving his apprenticeship he devoted his evenings largely to study and as a result of his application and of his mastering of the details of his business he has advanced toward the goal of success, and attained definite independence and prosperity, while he has ever held the esteem and good-will of those with whom he has been associated, having served under five different managers in the employ of the York Manufacturing Company, and having been most popular with both employers and employees, until the day of his resignation to enter business for himself.

In politics Mr. Motter is stanchly arrayed as a supporter of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and for one term he represented the Ninth ward in the city council, declining to become a candidate for a second term. He and his wife are valued members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and fraternally he is identified with York Lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M.; Howell Chapter, No. 109, R. A. M.; York Commandery, No. 27, K. T.; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading, Pennsylvania.

On Jan. 29, 1890, Mr. Motter wedded Miss Lillie May Blauser, daughter of Edwin Blauser, a prominent contractor and builder of York. No children have been born to this union.

U. G. SEIFERT, a representative farmer of Warrington township, York county, and a member of a very old family, was born in that township Feb. 3, 1866, son of Peter M. and Sarah (Swean) Seifert.

The first member of the Seifert family of whom anything authentic is known, was one Johannes Seifert, who emigrated from Wurttemberg, Germany, coming to America in 1676, and settling in York county in the vicinity of Dover, where he took up land from the Government and was one of the largest land owners in the county in his time. This land was divided among his children. He had been married in Germany, and when he came to this country he was accompanied by his wife and one child, their passage costing thirty dollars apiece, in American money. As was the custom in those days they were bound by contract to a Colonist, with the understanding that they should work for him for one year, that their passage might be paid off. This they did. The name of Johannes Seifert's wife is not known, nor his children, but it is recorded that one of his sons married, and had a son, Michael, who was the great-grandfather of U. G. Seifert, the subject of this sketch.

To Michael Seifert and wife the following children were born: Michael, Henry, Andrew, Samuel, Mrs. Susan Kimmel, Mrs. Lydia Berkheimer, Mrs. Catherine Stray, Mrs. Garver, Mrs. Lucy Long and Mrs. Sarah Sidlitzer. Michael Seifert died in 1861, and was buried in the Dover cemetery. His wife was Dolly Leinbaugh, who died several years previous to her husband.

Samuel Seifert, the grandfather of U. G. Seifert, married Elizabeth Menges, in October, 1829. She was a native of York county and became the mother of these children: Benjamin; Emanuel; Samuel; Andrew; Peter; Leah, who married Frederick Myers; Henry, Elizabeth; Tempest; Rebecca, and Michael. In their religious belief these good people were all Lutherans. Mr. Seifert was an old line Whig and held many township offices, among them being those of supervisor and school director. He died in 1891, aged eighty-four years, while his wife died the same year, aged eighty-six.

Peter Seifert, son of Samuel, was born in Warrington township, and after receiving a good, common school education, learned the plasterer's trade, which he followed for many years, finally turning his attention to farming, and following that calling until death. Peter Seifert married, in 1863, Sarah Swean, daughter of Conrad Swean, and these children were born to this couple: Tempest, deceased; U. G.; John A.; Samuel; Elizabeth and Bertha, deceased. Mr. Seifert was a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, in the faith of which he died in 1894, at the age of fifty-four years. In his political views he was a supporter of the principles laid down by the Republican party.

U. G. Seifert was educated in the common schools of Warrington township, and has spent his life at agricultural pursuits. He purchased his present farm of ninety-three acres in 1891, and has been very successful in his agricultural operations. In 1890 he married Emma Ortmyer, a daughter of Henry Ortmyer, and three children have blessed this union: Bessie E., Charles T. and Sylvan G. In religion family are consistent members of the United Evangelical Church. In politics Mr. Seifert is connected with the Republican party, and has held the office of school trustee. His success shows very plainly what may be accomplished by energy, industry and thrift, and he is very highly regarded in Warrington township.

MILTON LEHMAN, one of the good, practical farmers of York county, actively engaged in the operation of his fine farm in Springfield township, was born in that township, May 25, 1859, son of Emanuel Lehman.

Henry Lehman, the great-grandfather of our subject, was a resident of York county, and his son, Daniel, was an agriculturist of Springfield township, where he married Catherine Wallace, a daughter of Adam Wallace. Both were members of the Dunkard Church.

Daniel Lehman died at the age of eighty-three years, and is buried at the Dunkard Church, and his first wife passed away at the age of forty-two, and was interred at the old Feigley burying ground. Their children were: Emanuel, mentioned above; Jacob, who married Lucy Ness; John, who married (first) Lucy Allison, and (second) Rebecca Jacobs; Henry, who married Lydia Ness; Daniel, who married Mary Wineholt, and lives in Lancaster, Pa.; William, who married Prudence Fraser; Noah, who married Cassandra Knaub; Leah, the wife of Henry Falkenstein; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Joseph Ness. After the death of his first wife Mr. Daniel Lehman married (second) Katie Sourbier, and had the following children: Lydia, the wife of Nathaniel Paulus; Charles, who married Ida Dietz; and Mary, the wife of William Hengst.

Emanuel Lehman was born June 13, 1829, in Springfield township, and attended the public schools. At the age of five years he was put out among strangers, working for his board and clothes until he was sixteen years old. He married Eliza Messersmith, born Sept. 20, 1832, daughter of Michael and Sarah (Hartman) Messersmith, and they located in York township, where he carried on farming for sixteen years. He then located in Springfield township, in 1852, making his home at Loganville, where he purchased eleven acres of land. Mr. and Mrs. Lehman had these children: Leah, born March 9, 1851, is the wife of Chester Bahn, of Springfield township; Mary, born June 3, 1852, is the wife of John Neff, of York; Sarah, born July 5, 1853, is the wife of Emanuel Winters, of York; Eliza, born Dec. 15, 1854, was twice married, her second husband being John Wolz, and they now reside in Shrewsbury township; Samuel, born Jan. 1, 1856, died single; Ellen, born March 15, 1858, died young; Milton; Katie, born Nov. 25, 1860, married Daniel Keeney, and lives in Shrewsbury township; Frederick, born June 4, 1863, married (first) Mary Tyson, and (second) Minnie Davis, and is now residing in York; Annie, born Sept. 2, 1864, died in young womanhood; Elizabeth, born April 17, 1867, resides at home; Lucy, born June 7, 1870, is the wife of John Grove, and lives in Springfield township; Lydia, born Oct. 23, 1873, died young; Olivia, born Oct. 23, 1873, twin sister of Lydia, married Edward Eberly, and is living in York; and Emanuel, Jr., born Oct. 11, 1877.
married Bessie Heathcote, and they are living with their parents in Loganville.

Milton Lehman attended the township schools of his native township, and remained at home, assisting his father in operating the farm until he was twenty-one years of age, at which time he married Mary Myers, daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Ness) Myers. After marriage they located in Springfield township, where he has since been a resident. He purchased his present farm of Peter H. Grove, in 1904, and it consists of 100 acres of land, situated close to the Dunkard Church. Mr. Lehman has an exceptionally fine orchard, and has among others 200 plum trees, 1,800 peach trees, 200 pear trees, 100 cherry trees and 200 apple trees, and he grows some of the finest fruit in the State, having a ready sale for his crops in the York markets. Mr. Lehman's buildings are well-located, and his farm one of the best kept up in the township. Mr. Lehman also saws shingles from the fine timber on his farm. Mr. and Mrs. Lehman have these children: Katie, Eliza, Emanuel H., Mamie, Milton Emore and Mary. Mr. Lehman is a member of the German Baptist Church, of which he has been a member since his twenty-fifth year, and of which he has been deacon since 1897. His wife and two eldest daughters are also members of this Church.

H. SAMUEL HAYS. On another page of this publication will be found a memorial tribute to George A. Barnitz, who was one of York county's honored and influential business men and the founder of the extensive coal and wood business which is still conducted under his name in the city of York. Of this extensive business enterprise Mr. Hays is now the manager.

Mr. Hays was born in Newberry township, this county, Aug. 3, 1868, son of Granville and Catherine (Rife) Hays, both of whom were likewise born in York county, being representatives of stanch pioneer stock. The father of our subject was born in Newberry township, in 1843, and his vocation in life has been that of farmer. He is now living in York. His wife, also born in the year 1843, was a daughter of Henry and Lucy Rife, and she was summoned into eternal rest Nov. 2, 1903. John Hays, grandfather of our subject, was a carpenter and millwright by trade, and was a man of prominence and influence in York county in his day and generation. He married Jane Morris and they reared a large family of children, having many descendants in York county at the present time.

H. Samuel Hays secured his preliminary education in the public schools of Newberry, this county, and after completing the curriculum of the same he entered York County Academy, and a normal school at Valparaiso, Ind., where he remained as a student until he had attained the age of nineteen years, when he put his scholastic attainments to practical use and test by engaging to teach in the district schools of his native county, being thus identified with the pedagogic profession for eight consecutive terms and meeting with gratifying success in his work. Upon abandoning his labors in this line Mr. Hays secured a clerkship in 1898 in the office of the late George A. Barnitz, one of the most extensive coal and wood dealers of York, and he has ever since remained with the concern, having been made manager of the enterprise in 1901. He has well upheld the prestige of the business and is known as one of the able and progressive young business men of the county. In politics Mr. Hays is a stanch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party; fraternally he is affiliated with the Patriotic Sons of America and the Knights of Malta, while he also holds membership in the York Democratic Club; and both he and his wife are valued members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

On Dec. 5, 1895, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Hays to Miss Carrie D. Patterson, who was born and reared in York county, being a daughter of William E. and Maria Patterson, well known citizens of York.

DAVID CUNNINGHAM, a lifelong resident of Springettsbury township, is the second of his family in the county, in line of descent, and was born there Oct. 12, 1839.

John Cunningham, father of David, was born in Maryland, Jan. 22, 1800, and died June 20, 1866. He came from his native State to York county in early manhood and settled just east of York city, in what was then Spring Garden township. At first he worked as a day laborer, then was employed in the construction of the Wrightsville railroad, and later turned to farming. His first purchase was a small property but he soon bought the place now owned by his son David, consisting of 104 acres two and a half miles northeast of York. This tract was entirely wild, but Mr. Cunningham with the help of his sons cleared the timber, put up buildings and generally improved it, making farming his permanent occupation. His property was all acquired through his own industry and he was liberal both of his means and time in furthering the progress of his community. He assisted largely in the erection of Mount Zion Lutheran Church and was in every way progressive and public-spirited. Gifted with the faculty of ingratiating himself with all, he had a large circle of friends and many warm admirers. He married Miss Elizabeth Spangler, daughter of John and Christine (Shultz) Spangler, who was born Oct. 17, 1812, and survived her husband till March 7, 1883. They had children as follows: William, deceased; Susan, deceased wife of William Nye; George and John, twins, both deceased; Lucinda, who died unmarried; Eli, of Springettsbury township; David; and Elizabeth, Mrs. Henry Shultz, of the same township.

David Cunningham was given a limited education in the public schools and began early to assist his father on the farm. On reaching manhood he decided to make farming his vocation and has always devoted himself to that calling. He owns sixty-seven acres of the old homestead and also two good residence properties. On his farm he has a fine peach orchard of 400 trees and is a wide-awake, energetic farmer and business man. He is a strong Democrat and always ready to do his utmost for the public welfare. He was married Feb. 26, 1869, to Miss Kate Kohler, daughter of Henry and Mary (Cramer) Kohler, and to this union eight children have been born, viz.: Elmira, Mrs. Samuel Hess, of York township; Charles, yard boss at the York freight depot of the Pennsylvania railroad, who married Miss Emma Stough, of Springettsbury township; James, a molder, who married Miss Lizzie Sheughberger, of Lancaster, Pa.; Nettie, Mrs. Henry Moul, of Eberton; Luther, who married Miss Emma Boyer, of Eberton; Susan, who taught school seven years prior to her marriage to Edward Heikes, of Manchester township; George and William, at home. The family are all connected with the Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Cunningham is an elder.

EDWARD ELLSWORTH ROUSE. The Rouse family is one of the oldest in York county, where the first one of the name in Pennsylvania settled in Spring Garden township, in 1747. For over a century and a half his descendants have been prominent in various walks of life, some in the Christian ministry, some in manufacturing, some in mercantile life and some in agriculture. Whatever their stage of action, they have acted well their parts. Edward Ellsworth Rouse, the well-known carriage manufacturer, was born in Spring Garden township, Feb. 6, 1866, son of John and Lydia (Tyson) Rouse.

John Rouse was one of three children; the brother who was named Jacob, died, and the sister, Magdalena, married John Becker and lives in California. John and Lydia (Tyson) Rouse were the parents of five children also: John C.; Charles H.; Edward E.; Rosa; and Maria J., deceased wife of Jacob Andrew. John Rouse died Oct. 26, 1865, and in 1886 his widow married Phineas Palmer. She was again left a widow in 1901, and has since then lived at Violet Hill, Spring Garden township. She is now seventy-nine years old.

Edward E. Rouse attended the public schools of his native township, and after completing his education he started to learn the blacksmith's trade with Alexander Markley, but finished his apprenticeship under Phineas Palmer. Later Mr. Rouse engaged somewhat extensively in the ice business, but in 1890 embarked in his present occupation at Violet Hill, South George street, and while the location is rather removed from the center of trade, he has by his thorough and practical knowledge built up a business of large proportions, equaling, if not excelling, any similar concern in rural York county. In the beginning he had but one anvil, but now he employs eight machines and turns out over 200 vehicles annually.

Mr. Rouse chose for his first wife Miss Eugenia Croll, daughter of William Croll, and to their union one child was born, Charles E. Left a widower, Mr. Rouse was married in February, 1896, to Miss Elizabeth Winder, daughter of John Wunder. Her one brother died in 1904, and her sister Mary, is Mrs. Henry Bier. By his second wife Mr. Rouse has had one daughter, Helen R. The family home is an old stone house, adjoining Mr. Rouse's shops and it is one of the oldest residences in the county. Mr. Rouse is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of the Foresters of America, and of the Improved Order of Heptasohps.
JOHN K. FISHER is one of the old residents and highly respected citizens of Newmarket, Fairview township, York county. He was born Feb. 14, 1834, in Newberry township, this county, son of John and Sarah (Kirk) Fisher.

David Fisher, his grandfather, was of German descent. He died in Newberry township, leaving children as follows: Jacob, David, Samuel, Daniel, Abraham, Nancy and John.

John Fisher, the father of John K. Fisher, was born in York county, and followed farming, first in Newberry township, later removing to Fairview township, where he continued farming until his death. He married Sarah Kirk, daughter of Solomon Kirk, and she died in Fairview township, both she and her husband being buried there, at Salem Church. They were the parents of the following named children: Samuel, who died in High Spire, Dauphin county; Mary, who died at the same place; John K.; William, who lives on the old homestead in Fairview township; Zacharias, who died in Fairview township; Sarah Ann, who died in Decatur, Ill., and is buried at Harrisburg; Barbara, living in Indiana; and Lucinda, who lives in High Spire, Dauphin county.

John K. Fisher attended the public schools of Fairview township until about twenty years of age, and was then employed in the steel works at Steelton for about twenty-five years. In 1850, he settled in Newmarket, where he followed farming and trucking, and he is one of the oldest residents of that place. On Feb. 15, 1857, Mr. Fisher married Elizabeth Wistler, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Musser) Wistler, of York county. Mr. Wistler was a miller by trade and ran the old Eyster mill for a number of years. To Mr. and Mrs. Wistler the following children were born: Harry, Jacob, Joseph, Samuel, Adeline, Martha, Mary, Elizabeth, Susan and Anna.

Mr. Fisher enlisted Feb. 25, 1865, in Company K, 192d Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, at Harrisburg, and was discharged Aug. 24, 1865, at Harper’s Ferry. He has an honorable war record. In politics a Republican, he has never aspired to public office. To him and his wife the following children were born: Edward, who married a Thorby, lives at New Cumberland, Cumberland county; Joseph, a machinist of Chicago, Ill.; Ida, living at New Cumberland, whose husband was drowned in the Susquehanna river; Mary, married to George Heffelberger and living in New Cumberland; Sadie, married to Samuel Snell and living at Newmarket; Russell, who married Mary Fisher and lives at New Cumberland; and Ellsworth, who married Bertha Mitchell and lives at New Cumberland. There are thirteen grandchildren.

GEORGE KABLE, a retired merchant tailor of York, who was for many years engaged in business in that city, was born April 17, 1841, in Germany, son of J. Leonard Kable.

J. Leonard Kabel (as the name was then spelled), was born in Germany, where he engaged in vineyard pole making. He married Eva Elizabeth Olt, born in Germany, daughter of George, a tailor by trade, and for many years burgomaster in Breitenbrunn, Grand Duchy of Hesse Darmstadt, Germany. Mr. Olt came to America and settled near Dallastown, where he lived retired until his death Feb. 24, 1870, at the age of eighty-four years, eleven months and five days; his remains were interred in the Union cemetery in Dallastown. J. Leonard Kable died in 1855, during a great small-pox epidemic in Germany, and on April 27th of the same year, his family landed in America, first at New York, having been on the water forty-seven days. From New York the family removed to York Co., Pa., settling near Dallastown. The widowed mother died at York, at the home of George Kable, Sept. 15, 1872, aged sixty years, four months and twenty-two days, and was buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. She was the mother of four children: George, our subject; Dorothy, who preceded the family to America, accompanying her grandmother from Germany, and who is now keeping house for her brother George; Philipp, who died at the age of seventeen years; and J. L., merchant tailor on West Philadelphia street.

George Kable attended the schools of Germany and was fourteen years of age when brought to America by his mother. On Oct. 15, 1855, he was bound out to Jacob Brown to learn the tailor’s trade, and at the time of the big fire in York, the latter’s place was destroyed. Mr. Brown removed his place of business to the county jail, northeast corner of George and King streets, until he rebuilt on South Queen street and in April, 1862, Mr. Kable engaged in business for himself on West Market street. Here he remained four years and then removed to the present site of the Western National Bank. In 1868 Mr. Kable bought his present property, No. 264 West Market street, of John Boreing. This he rebuilt and conducted a business therein until Jan. 16, 1903, when he retired from active life.

Mr. Kable married Barbara Breitling, who was born June 24, 1844, at Wurtemberg, Germany, daughter of Gottlieb Breitling. She died Sept. 17, 1876, and was laid to rest in Prospect Hill cemetery. The children born to this union were as follows: J. William, born July 1, 1862, married Lula Ross, who died April 5, 1904, and he is now engaged in the merchant tailor business at his father's old stand; Charles Philip, born March 20, 1864, married and is proprietor of the White Rose Laundry of York; George W., born Jan. 6, 1866, is married and resides on Beaver street, and has been a letter carrier of York for thirteen years; Leonard, born Sept. 6, 1868, died at the age of seventeen years; Paul Olt, born Sept. 26, 1870, is a merchant tailor of Massachusetts; and Cordelia is the wife of Frank Beck of York.

On November 21, 1905, Mr. Kable again married, the bride being Mary M. Fuhrman, representing an old and respected family of York.

Mr. Kable is a Republican in politics. He has been a member of the First Moravian Church of York for seventeen years, and is a good citizen and an upright man. He has never let anything in the way of discouragements interfere with his success, as during the flood in York, his loss was great, his place being situated then, as it is now, near Codorus Creek. This did not daunt Mr. Kable, however, and except for a slight pause, his trip to success was not interfered with in the least.

JOHN W. FLECKENSTINE, a popular and successful hotel-keeper in Wrightsville, was born in that town Oct. 22, 1862, while his parents were residing just opposite the present site of his hotel.

George Fleckenstine, father of John W., was a native of Saxony, born in February, 1832. He received his education there, and was twenty-six years old when he came to America. After a sixty days voyage on a sailing vessel he landed at Baltimore, and from there made his way to York county, Pa. At first he secured employment on Mr. Rouser's farm near York, but later, after his marriage, was engaged in the lumber yard of the Henry James Company, in Wrightsville. His wife was a native of Germany, born in Saxony in 1835, accompanied her parents to America in 1859, and settled in York. She died in 1899. She and her husband were both members of the German Catholic Church in Columbia. Mr. Fleckenstine is a Democrat in his political views.

John W. Fleckenstine attended the public schools until he was fifteen years of age, for the greater part of this time under Prof. Gardner. After leaving school he entered the employ of Loomis & Brillinger in their lumberyard, and for three years worked there for fifty cents a day, his wages going to his parents. He then became an apprentice with the Wrightsville Hardware Company, to learn the molding trade, and spent the next three years in their foundry, after which he spent four years in Waynesboro, Franklin county, working as a journeyman. Returning to Wrightsville at the expiration of that time, Mr. Fleckenstine was made foreman for his former employers of the Hardware Company, and remained there two years. He then spent eight years with the Keeley Stove Company, Columbia, Pa. Still pursuing his trade, he worked successfully in Dauphin, Limerick and Reading, but since 1892 he has been occupied with the hotel business instead of his former employment, taking charge of the hotel owned by his wife.

Mr. Fleckenstine was married in April, 1892, to Mrs. James McLaughlin (whose maiden name was Catherine Miner), of Columbia, Lancaster county. Mrs. McLaughlin had come into possession of the hotel property at the death of her first husband, and for the five years previous to her second union had been conducting the house herself. Mr. and Mrs. Fleckenstine have made extensive improvements in the hotel, in particular adding a forty-five foot brick addition to the rear of the structure, which affords nine more rooms. They well understand the art of making their guests comfortable and spare no pains to render their hostelry as satisfactory and com-complete as possible, an effort fully appreciated by their patrons.

To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Fleckenstine one son has come, Carol Stewart, born April 1, 1895, while Mrs. Fleckenstine has two daughters by her first marriage, namely: Emeline, aged twenty-three, and Pauline, aged eighteen. The mother is a member of the Lutheran Church, as are also her daughters, while her husband belongs to the German Catholic Church.

Mr. Fleckenstine has long taken an active part in local politics and wields considerable influence in the Democratic ranks. He has been on the county committee several times, and has been a delegate to six county conventions. He is now serving his third term as councilman from the First ward, and the handsome majorities by which he has overcome a nominal Republican majority of one hundred well attest his popularity and fitness for the office. Mr. Fleckenstine was one of those who started the agitation for dividing the borough into wards, which was accomplished during February, 1900, since which time he has served his ward continuously. He is also a charter member of the Wrightsville Fire Company, has been its chief for the past six years and has also taken an active interest in the State affairs of firemen, so that he is well known, and is as widely respected as he is known.

LEVI BANGE, one of the leading business men of Glenville, has been engaged for the past thirty years in selling sewing machines, but has also found time to pursue some other lines as well, and has by his energy and good business qualities become one of the substantial men of Codorus township.

Jacob Bange, grandfather of Levi, was the first of the family to leave Germany, and he settled in Manheim township among the early residents of York county, passing the rest of his life there. By his wife, Elizabeth (Newcomer) Bange, he had two sons: Jacob, who died at the age of seventeen, and John N.

John N. Bange was born on the home farm, and spent his whole life there, dying when seventy-three years old. His wife, Elizabeth (Umberger) Bange, lived to be seventy years of age, and the remains of both are buried at the “Stone Church” in Codorus township. They had a large family, as follows: Levi; John; Noah, deceased; Aaron, of Harrisburg; Levina, wife of Henry Sterner, of Codorus township; Lydia, Mrs. Emanuel Stremmel, of Penn township; Caroline, deceased wife of Charles Rinehart, of Manchester township; Elizabeth, Mrs. Valentine Wildasin, of Penn township; and Katie, Mrs. Ephraim Messinger, of Paradise township.

Levi Bange was born in Manheim township, Sept. 4, 1848, and attended the local schools till he was twenty. He remained at home a short time longer before entering upon his business career. He became a dealer in sewing machines and also in buggies, doing both a wholesale and retail business. The first machines which he handled were the White, but later he changed to the Singer, and is still selling that popular make. The firm is known as Bange & Son, and they are very well-known through the county, where they have placed several thousand machines. Mr. Bange has been located at Glenville since 1902. For ten years he was also engaged in farming on a tract of ninety-six acres which he owned in Manheim township, but in 1905 he sold the place to his son, George H.

Mr. Bange was married, in 1876, to Miss Emma Rosa Kraft, daughter of Jesse and Lucinda (Bargleman) Kraft, the former the present owner of the Heidelberg mill. They have two children, George H. and Annie. Mr. Bange is a member of the “Stone Church” (Lutheran) and is actively engaged in its work. He is a good citizen, always ready to promote the best interests of his county. In politics he is a Democrat.

WILLIAM H. KUHL, proprietor of a livery and boarding stable at No. 388 West Mason alley in York, is a native of that city, born Aug. 23, 1861, to Peter and Elizabeth (Weist) Kuhl, of German ancestry.

The great-grandfather of William Kuhl was the first of the family to leave Germany. His son Peter was born in America, and for the greater part of his life was a distiller in West Manchester township, York county.

Peter Kuhl (2) was born in that township in 1826, and lived till May 29, 1904. From the time he was seven till he was seventeen he lived with Adam Smyser, and being given then no opportunity to go to school, was obliged to get his education by himself later, as chance offered. Learning the black-smithing trade under John Winter, he worked with him for seventeen years in West Manchester township, and then after a couple of years at Kreutz Creek, Hellam township, returned to his old employer for another year. The ensuing five years were spent working on his own account in a shop he built on land bought from William Smyser, but at the end of that time the shop burned, and instead of rebuilding Mr. Kuhl purchased John Winter’s homestead and passed the remainder of his life there. For fifty-five years he followed his trade, but his last six years were free from such arduous labor. He was a man active in public affairs, supporting the Republican party, while in religious matters he was identified with the Wolf’s Reformed Church, and he filled the offices of elder, deacon and president of the board. Mr. Kuhl made his first aim in life to do what was right to his fellowman, and his kind, considerate disposition and conduct made him a host of warm friends, while not one was his enemy. Throughout his life he was never engaged in a law suit, neither suing nor being sued; he was temperate in all things, never used intoxicants, and he was an example in every way to his community. He began life a poor boy, but succeeded in amassing a handsome competence.

Peter Kuhl chose for his wife, Miss Elizabeth Weist, who still survives him. She bore him children as follows: Ella, Mrs. Frank Gross, of York; William H.; Alice, Mrs. John Fisher, of West Manchester township; Annie, Mrs. Israel Fishel, of Codorus township; George A., a finisher for the York Carriage Company; Lizzie, who married the late John Elliker, of York township; Katie, Mrs. Clarence Grass, of West Manchester township; and Sallie, who died in childhood.

William H. Kuhl was reared on his father’s homestead, where he remained till he was twenty-four years old, assisting his father in the smithy. He then bought a piece of property at Bear’s Station, in West Manchester township, and carried on the blacksmith’s business there for five years before selling the place. In 1891 he moved into York, worked a year for P. C. Wiest as candy-mixer, another as traveling salesman for the Acme Candy Company, and spent still another twelve months as agent for the Prudential Life Insurance Company. During the next six years he served as constable for the Eleventh ward, an elective office, and then in March, 1898, embarked in his present enterprise. As proprietor of a livery stable the same success attends Mr. Kuhl that has marked all his previous undertakings. He carries a full line of livery stock, comprising sixteen first-class horses, and he does a large business, receiving many orders for carriages for funerals and weddings.

Mr. Kuhl has rounded out the second decade of his married life. He was united, May 13, 1885, to Miss Lillie Eisenhart, daughter of Dr. Herman Eisenhart, of Manchester township. They reside at No. 452 Park street, and are both members of the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Kuhl is an ardent Republican and active in the affairs of his party. He belongs to the P. O. S. of A., Jr. O. U. A. M., and Brotherhood and Royal Fire Co., of York, and is a popular member of these organizations. In the business and social world alike he commands the respect of all who know him.

JOHN Gochenauer, of Washington township, York county, was born in that township, July 13, 1825, near the Red Run Church, three miles from East Berlin, Adams county, son of Joseph Gochenauer. His grandfather was born in Germany, and emigrated to America at an early day, settling in York county, where he reared his family.

Joseph Gochenauer first followed farming in Dover township, but later came to Washington township and bought a farm of 140 acres, where he farmed for a number of years and then settled in Reading township, Adams county. He spent his last years in retirement on a small farm there. He married (first) Sarah Leathery, who died shortly afterward, and he married (second) Peggy Myers, also deceased. Her children were: Maria, Susan, Elizabeth and John.

John Gochenauer attended school in his boyhood, during the winter seasons, his summers being spent in assisting his father on the farm. He farmed for some three years for his father, and then bought the home place, on which he lived for fifteen years when he bought a farm of 212 acres, from Almer Binder, in Washington township, which he continued to operate until 1904. He built there one of the largest and most substantial barns in the township, its dimensions being 123 by 55 feet. He also improved the residence and made everything surrounding tidy and attractive. The land is situated along Bermudian Creek and probably is one of the most fertile and productive farms of the township.

Mr. Gochenauer married Lavina Spangler, daughter of John Spangler. She was born in Warrington township, and died in 1897, and is buried at Red Mount church, in Washington township. The children of this marriage were: Daniel died aged forty-three years; Joseph, a farmer in Washington township, where our subject makes his home, married a Miss Strayer; Jesse went West and is located at St. Paul, Minn.; Charles is deceased; Susan D. is the wife of Lewis Bosserman; Elmira (deceased) was the wife of William Werley; and Sarah is the wife of David Craul, of York.

In his political views Mr. Gochenauer has always been a supporter of the Democratic party. He has shown his interest in educational matters by serving many times as school director in his township. He is a member of the Evangelical Church of which he has been treasurer. Mr. Gochenauer is one of the large land owners of this locality. He has two farms in Adams county, one of thirty-four and the other of ninety-six acres; two in Washington township, aggregating 353 acres, fifty acres of woodland and 483 acres of cleared land.

JACOB N. BENTZEL, one of the highly respected citizens of Dover, York county, and an honored survivor of the Civil war, was born in 1844 on Col. John Hoff's farm, in York county, on the Susquehanna river, a son of Daniel H. Bentzel, and a grandson of Henry Bentzel. Henry Bentzel, the great-grandfather, was born in York county, near the Bull road, where his father had located with his brother David. Henry Bentzel settled in Dover township, where he was a farmer and distiller, and also engaged in teaming to Baltimore. He was owner of the farm on Bull road, and died at an advanced age. He was interred in Dover township. His wife was born at sea, of German parents. The children of Henry were: David, Samuel, Phelix, Henry and Barbara.

Henry Bentzel (2), the grandfather, owned and conducted an excellent farm in Dover township, where he put up all the substantial buildings. Like his father he did a great deal of teaming to Baltimore, the railroads not having yet established their lines through this section. He married Catherine Naylor, who was born in Lancaster county. Both the grandparents of Jacob N. Bentzel died in old age and were buried at Weigelstown, Dover township. They had children as follows: John died in West Manchester and is buried at Weigelstown; Elizabeth died in Cumberland county and was buried there; David died from an accident, being burned to death while burning bush near the homestead; Daniel H. was the father of Jacob N.; Henry died in Dover township, and was buried at Neiman's Church; Rachel died in Dover township; ages died in West Manchester township, and is buried at Neiman's Church, Dover township.

Daniel H. Bentzel, the father of Jacob N., was born in Dover township, and assisted on the family farm until he learned the carpenter's trade and cabinetmaking, with John Frantz, in Manchester township. After mastering these vocations he went to Strinestown, where he followed them for about twenty years, removing then to the farm on which Jacob N. was born. This he operated for about ten years, and then returned to Dover township; went next to Manchester, and later again located in Dover township; subsequently took possession of John Thomas's farm, in Manchester township, and then operated Bentzel's Mill. Finally he settled in Dover borough, where he built a comfortable home and followed his trade as long as he was in active life. After the death of his wife, about twenty-two years prior to his own decease, he lived with Jacob N. Bentzel. His death took place in 1897, at the age of eighty-eight years and three months, and his burial was in the churchyard of the Reformed Church, of which he was a worthy member. In politics he was a Democrat.

Daniel H. Bentzel married Anna Mary Neff, daughter of Henry Neff, of York, York county. She died aged sixty-six years, and is buried at Strayers' Church. They had children as follows besides Jacob N.: Catherine, who was the wife of Rufus Rhoades, was killed by a stroke of lightning at the age of twenty-two years, and is buried in Manchester township; Anna Mary died young; Henry married (first) Rebecca Bremer and (second) Mary Sweitzer, the latter of whom lived in Baltimore, where he died aged sixty-two years; Daniel is a farmer in Dover township, and married Barbara Miller; Peter married Mary Richardson, of Indiana, and lives on the Pacific coast, an official on a vessel; Susan married Jacob Meisenhelder, and lives in York.

Jacob N. Bentzel was educated in the pay.

HISTORY OF YORK COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA
schools of Manchester township and Weigeltown, Dover township, attending until he was fourteen years of age, and then assisted his father on the farm for two and one-half years. In 1862, although only seventeen years old, he enlisted for service in the Civil war, entering Company G, 166th P. V. I., under Capt. D. L. Spangler, was mustered in at York, and was sent first with the command to Washington. Thence the regiment was ordered to Newport News, Whitehouse and Yorktown, returning to Washington and Harrisburg, where our subject was mustered out in July, 1863. In October, 1863, he re-enlisted, in the Carlisle garrison, and was appointed a sergeant of cavalry under Capt. Myers. Sergeant Bentzel was a very young officer, too young to undergo the hardships which came his way, and from which he suffers more or less to the present time. He participated in all the engagements of his regiment, and is one of the few men who can tell the true story of "Sheridan's Ride," for he was one of that dashng troop himself. Of all that gallant body of brave men few indeed are left. In telling of the way in which he was wounded so seriously he says it happened while he was delivering a dispatch from the gallant Gen. Kilpatrick. Although he had his horse shot from under him he delivered the message; when he returned he asked permission to take off his shirt, and the wound in his back was found to be bleeding profusely. Mr. Bentzel has a record of surviving seven horses which were shot beneath him, and he is confident of killing three of the enemy, on all these occasions being in such close quarters that he could do nothing else. He was finally mustered out of the service, Aug. 16, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn. The graphic story of the war told by Mr. Bentzel is very interesting, and only limited space prevents insertion of many facts never before published. It is a matter of regret that this brave soldier has been so crippled from the effects of his army service that for the past fifteen years he has been confined to a chair. A copy of the following order was presented to him, but as it came to Washington after Lee's surrender, he never received his commission:

May 22, 1865.

To all whom it may concern I this day of May 22, have promoted J. N. Bentzel as 1st lieutenant on my staff for bravery all through my campaign.

Yours,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

After his army service was completed Mr. Bentzel returned for a time to his home in Dover township, and then traveled all over the West, working at his trade, but later settled in Dover.

On Aug. 27, 1871, Mr. Bentzel was united in marriage with Sarah A. Lenhart, daughter of John and Margaret (Enig) Lenhart, who were early settlers in this portion of York county. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bentzel lived for one year in Dover, and then moved to Mr. Lenhart's farm, which he operated for thirteen years, then buying a home at Dover, where he was a carpenter and carriagemaker until he was obliged to retire from active work. He has a pleasant home and many friends. Among his treasures which he kindly displays to visitors is a sword which was brought to America by his great-grandfather.

Mr. and Mrs. Bentzel have had these children: A child born in December, 1875, died the same month; Anna Jane, born Jan. 14, 1877, married Harry Strickler, of York, and is the mother of two children, Morris (aged three years) and Margaret; Charles L., born July 22, 1878, married Annie Hobaugh, and is living at York, York county, and has one child, Marion H., aged two years; Harry L., born Oct. 29, 1880, who lives at Green Ridge, married Florence Bear, and they are the parents of two children, Evelyn and Hazel. Mr. Bentzel takes great comfort in his little grandchildren. In politics he is a Democrat. Mrs. Bentzel is a member of the Reformed Church.

JOHN ROBERT WELLER was a younger son of the well-known and highly respected Weller family of Wrightsville, and for several years prior to his decease was in partnership with D. S. Detwiler in the cigar manufacturing business.

Mr. Weller was born in Wrightsville Oct. 13, 1856, and attended school there until he was twelve years old. The early death of the father, which occurred when John Robert was only six years of age, made it necessary for the son to begin work early in life. He was only ten when he went into the saddlery shop of Daniel Rudy, as helper. There he worked several seasons, going to school in the winter. When he was fourteen he began doing piece work in the cigar box factory of Zorbaugh & Duden, his wages averaging four or five dollars a month and board. At sixteen he entered the cigar manufactory of Thompson Brothers, of Wrightsville, where he remained a year, and he next went into the establishment of Kocher & Weber (now S. R. Kocher), where he finished learning his trade, afterward remaining with the firm a number of years. Until he was twenty-one all of his earnings went to his mother. In January, 1886, he was sent to Florida, by the firm of Kocher & Beidler, as manager of an orange plantation. He cleared the new land, set out trees, and remained in charge six months, when he returned to Wrightsville and went into the cigar factory of S. R. Kocher, first as packer, and then as traveling salesman. About the year 1888 he left Mr. Kocher and entered the employ of Weller & Munich, the senior partner of this firm being his elder brother. When he had been with the firm a short time his brother bought out his partner's interest and took John Robert as partner. This arrangement continued until 1894, when Mr. Weller was offered the position of foreman in the tobacco factory of D. S. Detwiler. He accepted this offer and was with that house ever after, becoming a partner in the concern in January, 1900, and continuing as such until his death, which occurred Nov. 16, 1905.

On Jan. 9, 1878, Mr. Weller married Emma Wallick, of East Prospect, York county, daughter of Emanuel and Rebecca (Stair) Wallick. The former is yet living, the latter died a few years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Weller became the parents of the following named children: Helen H., a graduate of the Wrightsville high school, and a teacher in Springet, York county; William E., living at home, who was educated in the Wrightsville schools, and is now a clerk in the First National Bank; John Robert, at home, clerk in a drug store; Joseph W., Catherine, Marion and David, all attending school. The family are all interested members of the Methodist Church. Mr. Weller was a Democrat, and served one year as assessor. He was fraternally a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M.

JOHN O. STAMBAUGH, the well-known tailor of York, whose place of business is located at No. 7 West Market street, was born in Paradise township, York county, June 28, 1862, son of Jacob S. Stambaugh.

John Stambaugh, his grandfather, was a shoemaker by trade, following that occupation all of his life, being a skilled hand mechanic. He died at the age of sixty-eight years, the father of five children.

Jacob S. Stambaugh was born in York, and learned the shoemaking trade under his father. This he followed for a number of years. He married Susan Jacobs, who is living with Mrs. R. D. Aldinger, a daughter, while Mr. Stambaugh is living with another daughter, Mrs. John Yeager, near Lewisberry, Newberry township, being now seventy-three years old. Their children were: Joseph C., Henry A., Monroe J., John O., Ellen J., Sarah A., Emma E., Alice, Cora S. and Lizzie D.

John O. Stambaugh attended the public schools until fifteen years old, and then learned the blacksmith's trade which he followed until nineteen years of age. At the end of that time he went to learn the tailor's trade in York, and after serving his time, went to Davidsburg, Dover township, where he engaged in business. He also clerked in a general store there, and then went to the borough of Dover, where for seven years he engaged in business, the last four years operating a barber shop in connection. Mr. Stambaugh located in York in 1895, and is now located at No. 7 West Market street, making use of the second and third floors, where he employs fifteen skilled workmen. Mr. Stambaugh's idea in his business is to please his customers, and he enjoys an enviable reputation as a man of honesty and integrity.

Mr. Stambaugh has two daughters, Annie Elizabeth and Katie May. He is a Democrat, and a member of the York Democratic Club.

MOSES H. DEARDORFF, who is the owner of 450 acres of the best farming land in York county, is a native of Pennsylvania, born in Latimore township, Adams county, Nov. 22, 1829, son of Joseph and Lucy (Hoo- ver) Deardorff.

For several generations the Deardorffs have been farmers. Samuel Deardorff, grandfather of Moses H., carried on agricultural pursuits most successfully in Adams county, where he died at the age of sixty-five years. His remains rest in the cemetery at the Brethren Meeting House, near East Berlin, Adams county.

Joseph Deardorff, father of Moses H., was one of the wealthiest farmers in his neighborhood. He made his home in Washington township, York county, where he died in 1885, at the advanced age of eighty-one years. He and his wife, Lucy (Hoover), rest in Barren's Church cemetery in that township. They were the parents of eight children, five sons and three daughters, as follows: Joshua H., of Dillsburg; Samuel, deceased, who is buried at Barren's Church, Washington township; Jacob, a physician practicing at Mechanicsburg, York county; William, who enlisted for service in the Civil war, and died in the army; Moses H.; Elizabeth, deceased, also buried at Barren's Church; Sarah, who married Daniel Heiges, of Clearfield; and Catharine, who married Samuel Lease, and at her death was buried in Dover cemetery, at Strayers Church.

Moses H. Deardorff was reared to manhood on his father's farm, and from that practical teacher learned all the details necessary for the successful pursuit of agriculture. He has been engaged in that calling all his life, and with the aid of a good and faithful wife has become one of the wealthy men of his section of the State, now owning four fine farms, aggregating about 450 acres. He moved to his present home farm in 1885, and since then has practically rested from active participation in the work, although he has by no means given up the general oversight of his beautiful place.

On Sept. 20, 1855, Mr. Deardorff was united in marriage with Elizabeth Detter, of Franklintown, and on Sept. 20, 1905, this happy couple celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Mrs. Deardorff was a daughter of John and his wife Louisa Spahr, of Washington township. Two children came to brighten their home, Louis F. and Joseph G., both of whom own rich farms near Barren's Church, in Washington township. Mr. and Mrs. Deardorff are members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, in which he has served a number of years as trustee. Although he has never taken an active part in politics, he has always been a Democrat, and he has served his township as school director several terms, and has also been tax collector. He is a director of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Paradise, and for the past thirty years has been its agent in his locality. Mr. Deardorff has passed a busy and useful life, and he and his good wife are spending the evening of their days surrounded by the love and care and friendship of all who know them.

JOHN KRUG: This retired farmer is a self-made man, beginning life on small means and by his energy and industry not only acquiring a handsome competency but presenting in his career an example of many forceful and sterling qualities. He is the representative of an old and well-known family. He was born on a farm in Adams county, April 21, 1820, the son of George G. and Sarah (Lechty) Krug, and the grandson of Henry Krug.

George G. Krug was born in Lancaster county, Pa., in 1793. He was prominent in his day and widely respected for his splendid traits of character, but died in 1842, comparatively young in years. He was buried in the old Lutheran graveyard at Hanover. His wife, Sarah Lechty, was also a native of Lancaster county, born in 1794, the daughter of Christian Lechty, who married a Miss Fisher, and reared to manhood and womanhood a large family. To George G. Krug and his wife came nine children, as follows: Daniel; Sarah; Elizabeth; Marian; George; William V.; Catherine; John; and Rufus. All these children lived to maturity but all are now deceased, except John, the subject of this sketch. Sarah (Lechty) Krug died in August, 1850.

John Krug was reared as a farmer's boy and in early childhood was sent to the common subscription schools of that period, and later to the free schools, attending a series of terms until his eighteenth year. He remained on his father's farm until he reached the age of twenty-one years, when, in 1842, his father died. John then learned the trade of miller with his uncle, John Lechty, who at that time lived in Littlestown, Adams county. Upon the completion of his trade, John Krug went to Maryland, locating near Liberty on Beaver Dam creek, where for two years he was employed in a mill. Then returning to Adams county he engaged in farming and butchering for several years. In 1860 he moved to York county, purchasing a farm near Everett's Mill. Disposing of this he bought a farm in Conewago township, where for several years he continued farming. Later he bought a farm near Oxford, Adams county, where he resided for eighteen years. Finally disposing of this property he purchased a farm near the city limits of Hanover, consisting of thirty-eight acres of valuable land. This he continued to farm until 1889, when he rented the place and retired from active life. He has been eminently successful in his agricultural and other business transactions, and now owns an excellent farm of 182 acres in Adams county which is leased, also good buildings in Hanover and York, and he is interested in many of the prosperous industries which have grown up at Hanover—being a stockholder of the Hanover Machine Company, the Hanover Silk Company, and a stockholder and director of the National Bank of Hanover.

Mr. Krug has been twice married, first in October, 1852, to Miss Susan Willet, of Adams county, daughter of George and Elizabeth (McKinney) Willet. To this union were born five children, three of whom are now living, namely: George W., of Littlestown; Lucinda, who married John S. Hershey; and David D., of Hanover. For his second wife Mr. Krug married Melinda Feese, and to them have been born five children: Harriet; Virginia; Catherine; Calvin; and Paul. Mr. Krug is a member of the old Lutheran Church. In politics he votes with the Republican party, but has never held office. Though now in his eighty-seventh year he is remarkably well-preserved, and he still gives personal attention to many of the details of his various interests. He is recognized as a man of profound financial sagacity, but his views and sympathies are not narrowed by personal consideration. He is public-spirited, and in public affairs he brings to bear upon issues of prominence and moment opinions that are highly valued. He possesses many admirers for his intrinsic qualities and superior personal worth, and his counsel in various affairs of life has been frequently sought.

JOSEPH BAHN, who is now living retired in the attractive village of Dallastown, York township, is one of the venerable citizens of the county, and a representative of one of the old and prominent families of this section of the Keystone State. Mr. Bahn's life has been one of active endeavor, and he has gained a worthy success. He was born in Springfield township, York county, March 24, 1822, and is the son of Adam Bahn, who was born and reared in the adjoining county of Lancaster, whence he came to York county when a young man, locating in Springfield township and there turning his attention to agricultural pursuits, with which he continued to be actively identified during the greater portion of his business career, while in the early days he also operated a distillery. The maiden name of his wife was Maria Liphart, and both died in this county, when well advanced in years. They had one child, Joseph.

Joseph Bahn was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, which was of a farm more strenuous order in the pioneer days than at the present time, when machinery and improved facilities and accessories or all sorts conspire to lighten the labors of the successful husbandman. He assisted his father in various kinds of work, doing a large amount of teaming, especially in the way of hauling ore to the furnaces in Lancaster county, and finally becoming identified with this line of enterprise on his own responsibility, devoting more or less attention to the same for a quarter of a century and meeting with success in his efforts. His educational advantages in his youth were such as were offered in the common schools of his native county, while through personal application and well directed reading he broadened his mental outlook, with the passing of the years becoming a man of general information and good judgment. Mr. Bahn purchased a farm of seventy acres in York township, in the vicinity of York, and there he continued to reside for several years, devoting himself to the cultivation of his land. In the spring of 1901 he removed into Dallastown, having disposed of his farm, and in the village named purchased his present fine modern residence, on Main street, where he has since lived retired. He enjoyed comparatively excellent health until October, 1904, when he suffered a stroke of paralysis, which has left him partially helpless. Mr. Bahn is well known throughout York county and his name has ever stood synonymous with integrity and inflexible honesty of purpose, so that he has at all times commanded the confidence and high regard of his fellowmen. In politics he is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and his religious faith is that of the Lutheran Church, of which his wife likewise is a devoted member, both having been for many years prominent in the various departments of the church work.

On Feb. 12, 1863, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Bahn to Sarah Ann Sprenkle, who was born in Windsor township, Oct. 6, 1843, and was there reared to maturity. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Bahn was solemnized by Rev. J. Oswald. Mr. Bahn and his devoted wife have no children of their own, but they have adopted two children, to whom they have given good educational advantages and the kindly affection of true foster parents. Of these children we record that Hiram Grant Bahn, who married Emma Keller, is a resident of Dallastown; Sarah Ann Bahn, who became the wife of Jacob Slenker, is now deceased.

BENJAMIN FULTON PAYNE, one of the prominent citizens of Hopewell township, York county, is a direct and worthy descendant of a family which was established in Pennsylvania in the days of William Penn. Its record of family movements, attainments and numerous descendants is of a most interesting character. A few records may be included in the sketch of our highly esteemed subject.

The earliest settlers of the Payne family in Chester county were Josiah and Martha (Shepard) Payne, natives of England, and devoted adherents of George Fox and Elias Hicks. They came to the Penn settlement mainly to escape English persecution. It is presumed that they later moved to Harford county, Md.; probably some of their children settled near Darlington or Fawn Grove, York county, Pa. Their children were: Martha, George, Jesse, John, Eleazer, Alice, Hannah, Elizabeth and Ruth. John and Eleazer married Mary and Elizabeth Manifold. The parents of the Manifold sisters were old and respected residents. Quakers also, of New Garden township, Chester county, and Benjamin Manifold was one of the first settlers in Fawn township, York county.

George Payne had children: Henry; Jesse, Hannah, who married Robert Hartzel; Mary, who married Benjamin Manifold; Martha, who was a traveling preacher, married to Abraham Smith; Rachel, who married Abraham McClary; Sarah, who married John Squib; and Alice, who married Levi Smith. George Payne and his wife settled near Fawn Grove, York county, but subsequently moved to Berkeley county, Virginia.

The great-great-grandfather of our subject, John Payne, was of English parentage, being a son of George Payne, the first of this line to come from England, whose wife's name was Martha. They were Quakers and settled in Chester county, Pa. The son John subsequently came to York county and bought a farm in East Hopewell township. This property is now owned by our subject, and it has been in the Payne family since 1769.

John Payne had two children, of whom Benjamin, was our subject's great-grandfather. By his marriage to a woman of Scotch-Irish descent a Presbyterian element entered into this old Quaker family, which, up to this time had religiously followed the tenets of the latter faith. Benjamin Payne united with the Presbyterian Church, and it is recorded that he became prominent in this body. Always a man of Christian life and conduct, the change in his form of worship did not make any material change in his conduct. Benjamin Payne had four children, namely: Benjamin F.; Eliza Betsey, who married Robert Anderson; Mary A., who never married; and Lydia who never married. Benjamin Payne died in 1856 and his wife in 1845.

John Payne, father of our subject, taught school during his early manhood, prior to settling down to farming. He was reared in the Presbyterian Church, but after his marriage, he became identified with the M. E. Church and was very prominent in its work. He was always a man of high standing in his community and possessed many sturdy traits of character. After a long and useful life he died in 1890, at the age of eighty-one years. He married Mary Eshelman, born in Lancaster county, and they had three children: Benjamin Fulton; John W.; and Charlotte, who married Abraham Leister, of Maryland.

Benjamin Fulton Payne was born in December, 1845, in Delaware county, Ohio, within six miles of the city of Delaware. He was educated in the schools of Lancaster county, Pa., and Carroll county, Md., and he continued to work the home farm, at the age of forty years purchasing the property. He made farming his business until 1903, when he was appointed to the responsible office of deputy revenue collector of the Fifth Division of the Ninth District of Pennsylvania, and the duties pertaining to this office have since claimed his entire attention.

In 1880 Mr. Payne was married to Martha E. Roop, of Carroll county, Md., and they have had three children, viz.: Mary, who died in August, 1903; Annie E., who is the wife of Dr. D. C. Martin; and John Wilbur, of Hopewell township. The religious membership of the family is with the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Payne has always been closely identified with the Republican party. His ancestors were strong Whigs, but later became just as closely affiliated with the Republican party. He has held numerous offices, filling the various duties with the capacity only possible to a man of his high character and unquestioned integrity. His fraternal relations are with the Free Masons and the Knights of Pythias.

JOSEPH ANDERSON, whose success as a farmer is attested by his fine, well improved farm of 159 acres, in Monaghan township, York county, which he has been operating since 1882, was born Feb. 17, 1840, in that township, son of William N. and Mary (Wiley) Anderson.

The founder of the family in America was Rennix Anderson, an Irishman by birth, who farmed for many years in Cumberland county, and later in York county, where he founded Andersontown. His son, Alexander Anderson, the grandfather of our subject, was also a farmer, who, with his father, moved from Cumberland county to York county, and was a very prosperous man. He married and became the father of James, John, Samuel, Robert, Joseph and William. Alexander Anderson was a Whig in politics. He and his wife died when our subject was a child.

William Anderson, the father of our subject, was born in Cumberland county, but later moved to York county. He was educated in the schools of York county, and early in life engaged in farming. He came into possession of the farm now owned by his son, our subject, through his father-in-law, Michael Wiley, who had purchased it from a Mr. May. Here he and his wife lived until a few years before his death, when they moved to Lisburn, Cumberland county, and there he died. His children were: Sarah, Caroline, Joseph, George, Jane, William, Emma. In religion he was a member of the Church of God, having joined that faith in 1842. In politics he was an active member of the Republican party, and served as a school trustee. His death occurred in 1882, at the age of seventy-two years, and his wife died in 1883 in her seventy-third year.

Joseph Anderson has always lived on the old home farm, buying it after his father's death from the heirs of the estate. Mr. Anderson has been a very successful farmer, and under his management many improvements have been made. He has recently suffered from a paralytic stroke, and is enduring his affliction with Christian fortitude. Mr. Anderson is one of the leading and substantial citizens of his neighborhood, and is a worthy representative of a fine old family.

In 1866 Mr. Anderson married Mary Boak, daughter of Lewis Boak, a native of York county. Four children have been born to this union, namely, Ira, Harry, Jennie and Edith. Mr. Anderson's political sympathies are with the Republican party, but from preference he has kept out of politics, declining to serve in almost all of the local offices. In religion he is a consistent member of the Church of God in which he has been an official for about twenty-five years.

EDWIN F. HIVELY, one of the leading business men of York, Pa., who is very prominent in the building and contracting line, with which he has been identified here for the past twelve years, was born Nov. 30, 1862, in Spring Garden (now Springettsbury) township, York county, son of George S. and Lydia Ann (Strickler) Hively.

The father of our subject was a son of Samuel Hively. He was a farmer all his life, and died at the age of forty-three years, and was survived until four years later, by his widow. They had these children: Edwin F.; Bird W., a grocer in York; Albert, who died in infancy; and Annie J., wife of Joseph Almany, of Springettsbury township.

Edwin F. Hively was educated in the schools of his native township, and in 1882 started to learn a self-supporting trade, making choice of that of mason, and entering the employ of W. H. Sipe. After he finished his apprenticeship he worked as a journeyman until 1892, when he began contracting and building on his own account. That he was thoroughly competent is proved by his work, and by the position he fills at present, that of the leading man in his line in York county. Some of his completed jobs are: The Norway Steel plant; the York Haven Water and Power Company's plant; the Art Factory; the Morton Manufacturing Plant; the York Carriage Plant; the New Freedom Wire Cloth Works; the Mt. Wolf Furniture Factory; the York Cold Storage Plant; and the York Candy Company's Plant. In addition to these large enterprises, Mr. Hively builds from forty to fifty dwellings a year, and keeps a force of fifty workmen employed. The fine stone church at Spring Grove, in this county, is his work, as is also the beautiful gate lodge at Prospect Hill cemetery. Mr. Hively was also contractor of the lime kilns of the York Valley Lime Co., and also contractor of lime kilns for S. O. Miller, Thomasville, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hively is one of the substantial citizens of York. He owns his own comfortable home, and has a number of other dwellings in course of erection on his own property.

In 1883 Mr. Hively was married to Alice J. Ferree, daughter of Samuel C. Ferree, of Hellam township, and they have a family of nine children, namely: George S., who married Flora Wilt, is a silk weaver and resides at York; Erwin C., a silk weaver; Emma E., at home; William N., engineer for his father; and Edwin F., Florence C., Dora L., Charles A. and Katie M. Mr. Hively has done well by his children, giving them educational chances and setting an excellent example to them. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, while his wife belongs to the United Brethren. In politics he is a Democrat. He belongs to Zeredatha Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 451; A. O. O. of M. C.; Jr. O. U. A. M., Sikes Council, No. 182; and York Conclave, No. 124, I. O. H.

FREDRICK MILLER, a well-known resident of York, is one of the old and trusted employees of the building and contracting firm of Billmyer & Small. He was born in York Jan. 27, 1847, the son of George Miller.

George Miller was born in Bavaria, Germany, and came to America in his early manhood, settling first in Baltimore, whence he came to York, where he was employed as a day laborer. He died in York at the age of eighty-five years, in 1895. George Miller married Julia Koline, who died in 1895, at the age of seventy-seven years, and both she and her husband were buried at Prospect Hill cemetery, in York county. They had these children: Barbara, the wife of Albertus Craft, lives in York; John, who married a Miss Boxwell, lives in Virginia, where he carried on coachsmithing; Fredrick is our subject; Annie, deceased, was the wife of John Smith; Elizabeth became the second wife of John Smith (a molder by trade) and they live on East South street, York.

Fredrick Miller attended the common schools of York until thirteen years of age, when he learned the trade of carpenter with Charles Schatzberger, of Freystown, with whom he remained four years, the last year of that time working as a journeyman. In 1867 he engaged with Billmyer & Small, in the car shops, where for ten years he was foreman. He is still in the employ of that firm, being employed at the sash and door factory. Mr. Miller is a skilled mechanic, and being a man of good judgment is very valuable to his employers.

In 1893 Mr. Miller was united in marriage with Lizzie Loose, a daughter of Charles Albert and Caroline Loose, of Baltimore, Md., and to this union these children have been born: Marie C., who died at the age of seven months; George E.; Rieda V.; Albert Dewey, who died young; Barbara E.; Herbert Fredrick and Lester W.

Mr. Miller is a Republican in politics. He is a faithful member of the Reformed Church, to which his family also belong. The home in which Mr. Miller and his family reside was built by his father, and was one of the first to be put up in the community. Mr. Miller purchased the home, which is located at No. 42 East South street, in 1896.

JESSE SCHWARTZ (deceased) was one of the substantial farmers of Jackson township, where his whole life was spent. He was born March 17, 1842, a son of Henry and Catherine (Geiselman) Schwartz. Both parents were natives of York county, born in 1800, and were descended from good old German ancestry. Henry Schwartz was a farmer and carpenter and followed those occupations all his life. In religion he and his wife were of the Lutheran faith. In politics he was a lifelong Democrat, but never an officeholder or active along those lines. His death occurred May 14, 1872, while his wife reached the age of eighty-four years. Their children were Detrich, Henry, Harriet, Isaac and Jesse.

Jesse Schwartz was born on the homestead where his widow still resides and was educated in the township schools. He lived at home, working on shares with his father until the latter's death, and then purchased the homestead, a valuable property of 100 acres, which he improved and cultivated until the time of his own demise.

Mr. Schwartz was married in 1867 to Catherine, daughter of Andrew Hershey, and sister of Burgess Hershey, of Spring Grove. Ten children were born to this union, eight of whom are living, viz.: one that died in infancy unnamed; Janet; Andrew A.; Harry Hershey; Maggie H.; Alberta, who died when three years old; Jesse Franklin; Paul Alvin; Amy Kate, and Edwin Guy.

Mr. Schwartz's death occurred Oct. 27, 1897, and he was buried in Christ Lutheran cemetery, in Jackson township. His demise was deeply mourned by a large circle of acquaintances, who sincerely admired and respected his many good qualities. He and his wife belonged to the Lutheran Church, and he was a deacon for fifteen years, an elder for a number of years, and served on the building committee of that organization. In politics he was a Democrat, but never took any active part in such matters, as he found that the successful management of his farm absorbed his entire attention.

EDWARD L. GROVE, a highly respected citizen of East Hopewell township, was born in what is now Hopewell township, at the Samuel Liggett Mill, Jan. 31, 1863, son of Charles Grove, and grandson of John Grove.

John Grove was a farmer of Hopewell township, where he spent his active life, and where he died. He was twice married, and by his first wife had children as follows: Simon, who died in Fawn township, married a lady of Glen Rock; Henry went West and died there; married a Clemens of Fawn township, and is still a resident there. John Grove had two children by his second wife, a Miss Mary Shiery, the grandmother of our subject: Charles; and Susan, who married George McFetridge of York.

Charles Grove was born in East Hopewell township in 1834, and there received a common school education. He learned the carpenter's trade. Mr. Grove married Margaret Gemmill, daughter of James and Susannah Mary (Grimm) Gemmill, and after marriage they located on a farm near Gatchellville, Fawn township, where they resided for years, five years also being spent in Fulton county, Pa. After returning to York county Mr. Grove located on a farm near Stewartstown, and then rented several years, removing from town to town. He has lived retired in Stewartstown for twenty years. During the Civil war Mr. Grove served three years, and contracted dis-ease from which he suffered greatly in after life. His children were: Ellen, Mrs. William McGinniss of Baltimore county, Md.; Edward L.; James Calvin, of Hanover, who married Miss Maggie Becker; Ruth, who married Dr. Frank Norris, of Airville; Susanna, Mrs. Samuel Bose, of Stewartstown; George W., of the State of Washington; William, a resident of Illinois; and Estella May, who has charge of the Music Department of the Norristown Hospital, Norristown, Pennsylvania.

Edward L. Grove was educated in the public schools of East Hopewell township, and the Fulton county schools, later going to the schools of Baltimore county, Md. He left school at the age of nineteen years, and began work with the wrecking crew of the N. C. railroad, following this occupation for eleven months, at the end of which time he was employed in the ore mines at Hanover for one year. He then went to the blacksmith's trade with an uncle, Jacob Hild, with whom he remained three years, and then started in business on his own account in Hopewell township, near Zion Church, remaining there for over two years. At the end of that time he located at Dolf, where he purchased property and erected a home, shop, barn and other buildings.

Mr. Grove was married in Baltimore county, Md., Jan. 18, 1888, to Laura C. Tyson, daughter of Sampson and Sophronia (Scarborough) Tyson, and to this union have been born: Allen S., Edward Raymond and Benson Chester. Mr. Grove has been a member of the M. E. Church since his eighteenth year. He is a staunch Republican.

JAMES McCURDY, whose death occurred May 21, 1901, was one of the well-known and prosperous farmers and blacksmiths of York county, located on a fine farm of sixty acres in Monaghan township. He was born in Monaghan township, Feb. 11, 1830, son of Alexander and Nancy McCurdy, who were of Scotch-Irish parentage, but Pennsylvania born.

Alexander McCurdy settled in Monaghan township at an early day. He was considered a wealthy man, and at one time owned two fine farms, but he signed notes for unscrupulous persons who claimed to be his friends, and he lost practically everything he possessed. He died in Monaghan township, as did also his wife, and they were the parents of these children: John, Thomas, Alexander, Daniel, Jennie, Margaret, Martha and James. In religion he was a Presbyterian, while he was connected in politics with the Republican party.

James McCurdy was educated in the common schools of Monaghan township, and while a young man learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed his entire life with the exception of a short period spent in farming prior to his death. He owned a farm of sixty acres, which is now owned and occupied by his wife. Mr. McCurdy married in 1866, Miss Mary Hartman, born Nov. 11, 1844, in York county, the estimable daughter of Andrew Hartman, and these children were born to them: Abraham L., Anna M., James A., Margaret E., Bertha A. and Daniel H.

The late Mr. McCurdy was a member of the Presbyterian Church, in which Mrs. McCurdy still retains membership. He was a Republican, in politics, but never accepted public office. He was a survivor of the great Civil war, having enlisted in a Pennsylvania volunteer infantry company, and had received a pension from the government for his three years service. Mr. McCurdy was a man of the highest integrity, and held the esteem of all who knew him. He also possessed more than the average business ability, and in every relation of life, was a man whom it will be hard to replace.

WILLIAM H. YOUNG, a farmer of Windsor township, belongs to an old family of York county, where several generations before him have lived and died.

Jacob Young, grandfather of William H., passed his whole life in York township, and there died. He married Miss Catharine Krout, who also died there on their farm, and they had children: Henry; Jacob, who died in York township; Catherine, Mrs. Andrew Kern, living at Red Lion; and Granville, of York, who died in February, 1905.

Henry Young was born on his father's farm, Dec. 10, 1827, and was reared to farm life, as were his sons after him. He worked for his father until he became of age, after that farming for himself. He married Miss Eliza Marks, born near York in 1828, who is still living, at the age of seventy-six. Mr. Young died in 1897, at the age of sixty-nine. Both husband and wife belonged to the Reformed Church. In politics he was a Democrat. There were four children born to them: William H.; Aaron, of York; Charles C., of York township; and Adam, of East York. Mrs. Young, like most of the mothers of that day, not only made all the clothes worn by her children, but also spun and wove the very material herself. Many were the hours she spent spinning the flax, and her son, William, as a child, also learned to spin from watching her at the old spinning wheel.

William H. Young was born in York township, Aug. 6, 1856, and attended the schools of that township for his earlier education. When he was thirteen years old his father moved to North Hopewell township, where the boy continued his schooling until he reached the age of eighteen. Until he was twenty-one his father could claim his services, and he worked for him until that time, generally at home, though after he was fourteen he was hired out to neighbors. His first wages were six dollars a month and board, the money all going to his father. On reaching his majority he started out for himself, worked two years for Isaac Fitz and three for Henry Blosser, and then married and began farming on his own account in Windsor township, on the George Fox farm, where he remained for six years. In March, 1887, he moved to the M. B. Spahr farm of 124 acres, where he is still living, and he has since bought a place of thirty-one and a half acres adjoining.

On March 18, 1880, Mr. Young was united in marriage to Miss Sarah J. Weitcamp, daughter of Herman Weitcamp. To their union six children have been born, namely: Albert (married to Miss Martha Huist), Edwin, Annie, Carrie, Perry and Mayme, all at home. Mr. Young was at first a Republican, but has since changed his views and now supports the Democrats. He is keenly interested in public affairs, and has been on the school board for some years, having been elected in the spring of 1899 for a three years' term and again in 1902 for a like term. He is a member of the Freysville Reformed Church, and has been chosen elder. He is a man of great strength of character, who has won his own way in life, and is regarded with much respect by all who know him.

identified with the business and financial interests of Hellam for a number of years. Mr. Weitzel was born Feb. 24, 1828, in Hellam township.

The name of this family was originally spelled Wetzel, three Wetzel brothers—John, Mark and Harry—coming from Switzerland to the New World long before the Revolutionary war. They settled in what is now West Virginia, among the Indians, with whom there was constant warfare, in which one of the brothers was killed. The brothers were wood cutters, and followed the business of charcoal burning, a trade which their descendants also followed, around the Colebrook furnaces. John Weitzel, the father of our subject, was born at Colebrook, Pa., and learned woodcutting. He received but a meagre education, his time being engaged in hard work. He was married in Hellam township to Miss Elizabeth Poff, and after marriage they settled in Hellam or Lower Windsor township, where Mr. Weitzel continued his occupation.

The mother of our subject was born in Windsor township, in about 1808, the daughter of John Poff, a shoemaker of York county. The grandfather of John Poff settled at an early day at Green Brier, Va., but he and his family were compelled to remove from this place on account of the hostility of the Indians. Consequently they crossed the Susquehanna and located in Windsor township, York county, where they took up a tract of 200 acres of land, and engaged in agricultural pursuits. John Poff had a corner of his house for his workshop. To him and his wife the following children were born: Elizabeth, Harry, John, Samuel, Elijah, Sally, Polly. After the death of her first husband, Mrs. Weitzel married (second) William Anderson, by whom she had seven children—four boys, all of whom were in the Civil war, and three girls, namely: Samuel, George, Martha, William, Henry, Sarah and Lizzie, all of whom are deceased with the exception of George, who lives at Gallipolis, Ohio, and Henry, who lives in Dover county, Ohio. John E. Weitzel, our subject, is the only surviving child of her first marriage. In 1860, Mrs. Elizabeth (Poff) Anderson went with her husband and children to near Springfield, Ohio, making the journey by teams, and there she reared her family to maturity.

John E. Weitzel's father died when he was very young, and he was reared by his stepfather. The railroads were just being built through this section at that time, and they inspired young Weitzel to become a mechanic. There being no machinists in this section at that time, however, he turned to the blacksmith's trade, entering the shop of James F. Magee, at the corner of Third and Hellam streets, serving three years, and receiving three dollars per month. After Mr. Weitzel had been with Mr. Magee for two years, the latter's journeyman left him, and our subject was put at the head of the shop and the men. Although Mr. Magee was a Democrat, and young Weitzel a Whig, the best of feeling ever existed between them, and the employer gave his young assistant many ideas which in after life proved of much benefit to him. After leaving the blacksmith shop Mr. Weitzel went into a machine shop at Columbia, where he worked for a Mr. Smiley for three years, and then engaged in business for himself, in the manufacturing of brick. With William Kerr and D. S. Cook he engaged in lime burning, the firm then being known as Kerr, Cook & Co., and after Mr. Cook left the firm it was known as Kerr, Weitzel & Co. This partnership continued for twenty-four years, the product of the company being shipped over several States.

John E. Weitzel and Carrie Elwine, who was born Dec. 24, 1828, in New York City, were united in marriage in 1850 at York, Pa. Mrs. Weitzel was the daughter of John and Catherine (Bechtel) Elwine, natives of Wurttemberg, Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Weitzel now live in their beautiful home in Wrightsville, which our subject built in 1876. To them have been born the following children: Henry, who married (first) Etta Raymond, and (second) Ella Lehman; Luther, who married Miss Lizzie Lehman; George, who married Miss Upp; Carrie; Emma, Mrs. W. B. Reisinger.

Mr. Weitzel joined the Lutheran Church at the time of his marriage, his wife having been a member of that faith from girlhood. In politics he was a Whig, and served as school director for nine years, and also on the town council. He has been president of the Wrightsville Hall Association for twenty years, and a director in the Wrightsville Bank since 1876. For two years he has been the president of the Wrightsville and Chanceford Turnpike. John E. Weitzel is a self-made man in all that the term implies. Starting a poor boy, with no capital except a pair of willing and able hands and an undiminishable stock of energy, he worked his way up, step by step, to the top of the ladder of success, until he is now reckoned one of the wealthy men of York county. Every dollar of Mr. Weitzel's fortune has been honestly made, and he bears an enviable reputation in the community as a man of honor and integrity. He is certainly one of York county's representative men.

JACOB ZEIGLER, for many years connected with the general mercantile business, and at present engaged in the crushed stone and cement business in West York borough, was born Nov. 26, 1858, son of Jesse and Leah (Yost) Zeigler, both natives of York county. His paternal grandparents were Daniel and Anna Mary (Geisleman) Zeigler, and the two families represented old and honored Pennsylvania names. Daniel Zeigler was a miller by trade and devoted the earlier part of his life to that calling, but later was engaged in farming with his son, Jesse. He and his wife had three sons, Jesse, George and Daniel. The family were Lutherans in religion, and Democrats in politics.

Jesse Zeigler was born in York county and received his schooling in the public schools. He was employed by the month as a farm hand until he reached his majority, and at that time he purchased a farm, which he operated as long as he took an active part in life. He and his wife, whose maiden name was Leah Yost, had fourteen children. Reuben; George; Henry; Jesse; Sarah J. and Eliza, both deceased; Daniel; Leah; Jacob; Annie; Laura; Peter; Abraham; and one who is deceased. Mr. Zeigler died in August, 1901, but his wife is still living, aged seventy-seven. She was formerly a Moravian, but after her marriage adopted the same faith as her husband, the Lutheran.

Jacob Zeigler attended the public schools of Jackson township, and then completed his education in East Berlin. He then worked as a clerk in various mercantile establishments, first in John Geisleman's general store for three years; then went to George Snodgrass for three years; for two years was with Emanuel Myers; and after this length of time ventured out in business for himself. He carried on a general store at La Bott for twelve years with much success, and then in 1901 sold out the property and stock to G. D. Maul, while he himself took the position with Mr. G. E. Sprengle, which he held until the spring of 1905. There his abilities had full play, as manager of the general store, for in his long experience as clerk and proprietor he had become admirably fitted for the responsibilities of the position, proving himself emphatically the right man in the right place. In the spring of 1905 Mr. Zeigler moved to West York borough and engaged with the Hartley, Rieker Company, who manufactured artificial stone and did cement work, also running a stone crusher. Mr. Zeigler acted as foreman for them. In the fall of 1905 they dissolved partnership and Mr. Zeigler is now to take Mr. Rieker's place in the firm with J. W. Hartley. They sell crushed stone, do cement work, and make artificial building blocks, for which they have a great demand.

In 1889 Mr. Zeigler was married to Miss Emma Shaffer, a daughter of Michael and Catherine Shaffer, natives of York county. Their children are two: Edith M. and Jacob G. The family are connected with the Lutheran Church. A Democrat in politics, Mr. Zeigler has never held office except during his residence in La Bott, where he held the appointment of postmaster for thirteen years.

JAMES W. GEMMILL, superintendent of the Martin Carriage Works, was born and reared in Baltimore county, Md. His father, David Gemmill, is a prominent resident of Westminster, Md., and superintendent of the Westminster Water Company, and for twenty years was managing superintendent of the Ashland Iron Company. David Gemmill married Ruth Curry, daughter of Kean Curry, a farmer of Baltimore county, Md., and the following children were born to this union: Two that died in infancy; Annie, who died at the age of two years; Alfred, who died at the same age; Elizabeth, who died at the age of sixteen years; Fanny, married to Israel Reynolds, who is connected with Armour & Co., Chicago; Mary, who married Martin Moul, a lumber dealer and the owner of a wire cloth factory at Hanover, York county; William H., chief engineer of the Martin Carriage Works; Walter F., connected with the Hanover Water Wheel Co.; Irene, who married Joseph Corumans; and James W.

James W. Gemmill was born on the old homestead in Baltimore Co., Md., Dec. 11, 1867, and received his education in the schools. of the district. He worked on the farm until eighteen years of age, and then removed to Hanover, and, after working in a sash factory for three years, removed to York, where he worked for the York Carriage Company for two years. In 1890 Mr. Gemmill connected himself with the Martin Carriage Company, starting at body-making, and receiving his just promotions from time to time, until, in 1899, he became superintendent of the works, being in control of 275 to 300 men.

James W. Gemmill was married to Laura B. Grass, daughter of Adam Grass, deceased, of Hanover, and three children have been born to this union, as follows: Marie, Ruth and Gladys, all of whom are attending school. Mr. Gemmill belongs to the Knights of Malta, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Royal Fire Company, of the latter of which he was a charter member. In religion he is a member of the Methodist Church, and has been a steward in the same since 1902. In politics he is a Democrat. Although many other duties call for his time, the greater part of Mr. Gemmill's energies are spent in the advancement of the interests of the big industrial concern of which he is superintendent.

LEWIS J. MILLER, proprietor of the Locust Grove farm, is one of East Hopewell township's substantial and representative men, and is a native of that township, having been born at Muddy Creek Forks, May 6, 1857.

John Miller, father of Lewis J., was born in Germany, Dec. 13, 1828. After having completed his education, he learned the tailoring trade, and came to the United States when a young man, landing in Baltimore, where he remained but a short time. He then located in Hopewell township, where he followed tailoring, and after his boys had grown to manhood he purchased a farm, upon which he died July 13, 1885. In religion he was a Lutheran, and in politics a Democrat. Mr. Miller married in Baltimore, Md., Mary Barbara Giessler, who was also born in Germany, Sept. 3, 1828, and she died April 22, 1885, and was buried at Sadler's Lutheran Church. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller: John G., of East Hopewell township; Lizzie, Mrs. Jacob Levy, of Buckner, Mont.; Lewis J.; Mary, deceased; Andrew, of Chanceford township; George, of Hopewell township; Maggie, Mrs. William Karfold, of New Jersey; James, of Peach Bottom township; Susan, Mrs. Weber of Philadelphia; Harry E., of York, and William, who died in 1895, aged twenty-two years.

Lewis J. Miller was taken to the farm when three or four years old by his father. Here he was reared to manhood, attending the township (Manifold) school. His advantages for an education were limited, however, as he attended but three or four months each term, being kept at home a great deal of the time. At the age of twenty-one years he left home and hired out to A. C. Manifold, an East Hopewell township farmer, with whom he remained one year, and he then made a start for himself. He had saved a little money, and this he invested in farm implements and one horse, hiring another horse as needed. He first rented the William Liggett farm in East Hopewell township, and there he remained one and one-half years, after which he farmed on half shares for five years. With what he had saved Mr. Miller purchased his present place of 189 acres, from Nehemiah Stewart, and since that time he has made many improvements on the place. In 1898 he erected his present beautiful residence and a fine set of farm buildings, making one of the best farm homes in this locality.

On Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, 1883, at Dallastown, Mr. Miller married Margaret Schum, the ceremony being performed by the Reverend Lenhart, a Lutheran pastor. Mrs. Miller was born Nov. 22, 1861, at Hanover Junction, and received her education in the public schools. Her father, John Andrew Schum, was born in Bavaria, Germany, and his parents having died at that country, he came to the United States when about twenty-five years of age. He had a sister living in Baltimore, Md., and two sisters in Chanceford township, York Co., Pa. He engaged in farming, and married in Seven Valley, Miss Ursula Barbara Wilhelm, who was born in Germany, and came to the United States in young womanhood, also landing at Baltimore. Mr. Schum, after marriage, lived at Hanover Junction for a time, and then purchased a farm in Chanceford township, and one in East Hopewell. He died July 25, 1889; he was a member of the Lutheran Church at Conrad's Cross Roads, and was a deacon for several years. In politics he was a stanch Democrat. Mrs. Schum died Dec. 30, 1904.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are members of the
Mt. Pleasant Lutheran Church, in which he is now serving his first year as elder. He is a stanch Democrat but has never aspired to public office. They have had children: Celia Barbara (who died aged thirteen years), Carrie Elizabeth, Minerva Jane, Dora Leah and Harry Lewis.

ROBERT McCOLLOM (deceased), for many years a prominent and successful merchant and farmer of York county, was a native of the Emerald Isle. In 1818, in young manhood, he came to America, locating in Baltimore, Md., where he remained for a number of years, engaged in keeping a store. He acquired his education in Ireland and in Baltimore. In about 1833 he located in Airville, where he kept store at Gilbert McCollom's, who had arrived here some years previous. He continued business there, and afterward purchased the farm from his brother, upon which he located after his marriage. Here he died March 9, 1863, aged sixty-seven years. He was a member of the Airville U. P. Church. In political faith he was a Whig, but later changed to the Republican party.

Mr. McCollom was married, in 1843, to Miss Margaret Smith, born in Lower Chanceford township, daughter of Samuel Smith, who came from Ireland when a young man. Mrs. McCollom made a public profession of Christ at an early age, and was a lifelong member of the Airville U. P. Church. She died at the age of eighty years. Their children were: Margaret A., at home, received a public school education, and also attended York Academy and received educational advantages in Baltimore; Jennie E., at home, also received a fine education; William S. died at the age of eight years; Samuel Robert is deceased; and Daniel J. C. died at the age of two years.

Samuel Robert McCollom received his education in the public schools, and attended the York County Collegiate Institute, under Mr. McDougall. He taught school in Lower Chanceford township for three years, and spent one year in the local academy at Brogueville. He married Anna Griffith, who still survives. Mr. McCollom was a faithful member of the U. P. Church at Airville, attending that church from his childhood. He was trustee, for a number of years served as treasurer, was a class teacher in the Sabbath-school, and was one of the building committee for the new parsonage. Two years before his death, which occurred in his thirty-second year, he was appointed to the position of justice of the peace, to fill the unexpired term of Mr. S. M. Pedan, and he was again elected for another term. The death of so useful and beloved a churchman was deeply deplored. The impressive funeral services were conducted by his beloved friend and pastor, Rev. A. S. Aiken, whose admirable and appropriate sermon touched every heart. Many years will have passed before his influence has faded from this community.

HENRY A. SHOMAKER. Five miles from the beautiful city of York is located the attractive home of this prosperous business man of York county where he has passed his entire life. He is, in both the agnatic and maternal lines, a representative of pioneer stock in this section of the Keystone State. He is engaged in the blacksmithing and cigar business, and also carries on a profitable horticultural enterprise on his little farm during the recurring seasons.

Mr. Shomaker is a representative of the fourth generation of the Shomaker family in York county, and the lineage is traced back to stanch German derivation, the original American progenitor having come to the New World in the Colonial era.

John Shomaker, grandfather of Henry A., was born and reared in York county, where he became a prosperous farmer, here passing his entire life. Of his children, John likewise became a farmer of prominence, his death occurring in York township; Jacob, a farmer by vocation, died in Spring Garden township; Elizabeth became the wife of John Ortt, and died in this county; Sarah, who became the wife of George Dittenfeffer, died in York township; George, the father of Henry A., was the youngest of the children.

George Shomaker was reared to manhood on the old homestead farm, in York township, where he was born Feb. 25, 1816, and he received a fair common-school education in his youth. He remained with his parents until his marriage, and thereafter continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until his death, having become the owner of a well-improved farm in York township, where his death occurred in 1880, at which time he was in his sixty-fifth year. He was a man of sterling character, and he commanded the respect of all who knew him. In politics he gave his support to the Democratic party, and his religious faith was that of the Catholic church, of which his widow also is a communicant. Her maiden name was Dorothy Ritz, and she was born in this county, in 1823, daughter of John Ritz, likewise a representative of one of the old and honored families of this county. Mrs. Shomaker has attained to more than four-score years, and in the golden evening of her life is residing with her children, who accord to her the utmost filial solicitude, while she is exceptionally active both in mind and body for one of her advanced age. Of the children of George and Dorothy (Ritz) Shomaker, (1) John A., in the jewelry business in York, has been twice married, first to Barbara Sprenkle, who died at the age of forty-five years, and second to Rosa Newcomer. He has traveled very extensively, having, as he has expressed the condition in an interesting series of published verses, being "Once around, twice across and three times beyond the boundaries of the United States of America," and having traversed more than twenty-one thousand miles. (2) Noah who married Lena Behrens, is engaged in farming and trucking in York township. (3) Amanda became the wife of William Hardwick, who is engaged in clerical work in the city of Baltimore, Md., where her death occurred in the year 1882. (4) The next child died in infancy. (5) Henry A. is next in order of birth. (6) The sixth child died in infancy. (7) Daniel P., who married Annie Stumpf, is a farmer of York township. (8) Edward married Lydia Knisley, and is a farmer of Windsor township. (9) Ellen is the wife of Charles Koch, of York.

Henry A. Shomaker was born on the homestead farm, in York township, near the village of Spry, Nov. 30, 1837, and was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, while his educational training was secured in the Pine Grove school in York township. Here he continued in attendance during a portion of each year until he had attained the age of fifteen years, and he continued to be associated with his father in the work and management of the home farm until he was twenty-two years old, when he entered upon an apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade, in Windsor, where he remained two years, after which he was similarly under training for six months in Loganville, and for an equal period in the city of York. He then located in Lower Windsor township, where he was successfully engaged in the work of his trade for the ensuing three years, being there married in the year 1883, and shortly afterward locating at Stoners Station, Hellam township, where he was engaged in the same line of enterprise for two years. He then returned to Lower Windsor township, where he purchased land and erected a good residence and also a shop, remaining there established in the work of his trade for the ensuing six years, at the expiration of which, in 1893, he disposed of his property and took up his residence in his present location, in York township. He purchased fifteen acres of fine land on the Chanceford pike, about five miles distant from the county-seat, and here he has erected one of the most attractive modern residences in this section. He has also built and equipped an excellent blacksmith shop where he continues to work at his trade to a greater or less extent, his skill as an artisan bringing his services into much demand in this line. His land is under effective cultivation, being devoted principally to the raising of vegetables and fruits, for which he finds a ready market in the city of York. Since 1893 he has also conducted a cigar manufactory on his place turning out a high grade product and giving his attention to this enterprise more especially during the winter months. He is a progressive, energetic and reliable business man, and is held in unqualified esteem by all with whom he has come in contact in the various relations of life. Taking a loyal interest in local affairs of a public nature, he is found staunchly arrayed as an advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and both he and his wife are prominent and valued members of the Lutheran Church at Dallastown, in which he has held the office of deacon, while he was formerly a popular teacher in its Sunday-school.

On Oct. 14, 1883, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Shomaker to Miss Charlotte Miller, who was born and reared in Lower Windsor township, being a daughter of George and Susan (Poff) Miller.

OTTO GEUCKE, of York, was born Oct. 29, 1846, in Potsdam, Brandenburg, Germany, son of Louis and Elizabeth (Haupt) Geucke, the former of whom was a brick maker in Germany, where he died, while the latter is still living in Berlin, aged eighty-six years. The grandfather of our subject was in the secret service department of the treasury department of Frederick William IV., of Germany.

Otto Goecke attended school in his native country until fifteen years of age, after which he engaged as a merchant’s clerk until 1870, when he entered the German army as a private, and with his regiment was a participant in the war with Napoleon III. At the close of the war, through which Mr. Goecke served gallantly, he returned to his home and resumed his occupation as a clerk until 1872, when he came to the United States, landing at New York City, where he remained six months, at the end of which time he went to Saratoga, N. Y., and engaged in the hotel business, continuing there until 1886. He then located in York and bought the “Metzel Hotel,” now the “Hotel York,” which he conducted until 1896, in which year he built and located in the “Keystone Hotel.”

Mr. Goecke has taken a very prominent part in I. O. O. F. circles of York, and is a member of Harmony Lodge No. 853; past grand master of York Encampment No. 67, and while in Saratoga was the representative to the Grand Lodge. He is also a member of the Patriarchs Militant, and is considered one of the most prominent Odd Fellows in the city of York, if not in the State. He is colonel of the first regiment. In religion he is a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Goecke votes independently.

Mr. Goecke was married in New York State to Miss Theodora Plank.

W. H. ZEIGLER was born in Springfield township, York Co., Pa., in 1860, a son of John N., and a grandson of Michael Zeigler.

Michael Zeigler was a farmer in Hopewell township, where he died at the age of eighty-four years. He married Henrietta Newhouse, who died aged but thirty-six years. They both were buried at Winterstown. Their children were: John N., Michael F., Joseph M., Conrad, Andrew, Maria, Maggie, Laura and Sarah.

John N. Zeigler, the father of William H., was born in Hopewell township, where he attended the local schools and then learned the carpenter’s trade. He followed this trade for about six years, and then turned his attention to milling, following that for ten years, when his health failed, and he went to farming. After four years devoted to agricultural pursuits he resumed milling, buying a mill property in Hopewell township, where he also had a cider and hominy mill in operation. He was a man of business capacity and enterprise, and in connection with his other interests he was a successful merchant. He died in middle life, when fifty-six years of age, and he was laid to rest at Winterstown. He is recalled as a man of much ability and his loss was not only felt by his family but by the whole community. John N. Zeigler married Leah Strayer, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Grim) Strayer. Her father, known as “Lancaster County John Strayer,” was born in Hopewell township, but moved to Lancaster county and followed farming near Mt. Joy, for a number of years, finally returning, however, to the homestead in Hopewell township. They had issue as follows: Henry, Wesley, William, Benjamin, Mary, Leah, Elizabeth (deceased) and Susan (of Kansas). To Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler were born: William Henry; M. Frank, who operates the rural mail delivery out of New Freedom, and who married Mary Wilson; John M., clerking in New Freedom, and residing at home; Maggie, wife of Leo Miller, of Hopewell township; and Sadie, wife of Isaac Gill, of Shrewsbury.

William Henry Zeigler was educated in the schools of Hopewell township, and when his schooling was completed he went into the mill and worked at milling in the same township for about eight years. At the end of that time he turned his attention to agriculture and farmed the V. K. Keesey farm at New Freedom for about six years, and then accepted a position with the Standard Oil Company, at New Freedom. He remained in the employ of that great corporation for three and a half years, when he became interested in the New Freedom Sewing Company, becoming one of the stockholders, a member of the board of directors, and has been made manager and treasurer of the company. This company has one of the large industries of this section. It is capitalized at $10,000, and has a large plant here. The factory is 50 by 100 feet in dimensions, and is equipped with all the latest improved machinery and appliances. Employment is given to seventy-five hands and the daily output of completed garments is 100 dozen shirts. The sole line is the manufacture of men's and boy's shirts and the factory is taxed to its highest capacity all the time. The large brick building, one of the largest of its kind in the country, was equipped with electricity in 1892, since when that has supplied all the power.

Mr. Zeigler has a very pleasant home here and a happy domestic circle. He married Lydia M. Zellars, a daughter of Daniel Zellars, an old resident of Hopewell township, and they have three children: Erna, Irene, and Beatrice. In politics Mr. Zeigler is a Democrat, and for years has taken a very active part in public matters in this locality. For the past seven years he has served as a justice of the peace, for six years was in the council and secretary of the board, for six years served as secretary of the board of school directors and has served in other offices where a man of responsibility and integrity was needed. His services as conveyancer have been frequently called into requisition. On a number of occasions he has been sent as a delegate to political conventions. He is one of the active and liberal members of the United Evangelical Church. In all ways Mr. Zeigler may be considered a representative citizen of his community.

SIMON PETER KLINEYOUNG, a substantial and representative agriculturist of York county, operating a fine tract of 114 acres of land in East Hopewell township, was born in Chanceford township, at Shenk's Ferry, Aug. 20, 1844.

Gustavus Klineyoung was born in Germany, came to America, and settled at Shenk's Ferry, where he first engaged as a pilot on log rafts on the Susquehanna river. He followed this occupation for several years and then engaged in farming. He married Elizabeth Tome, a sister of Jacob Tome. Jacob Tome started life a poor boy. He tended bar at Marietta, and engaged in the lumber business there, later removing to Port Deposit, Cecil Co., Md., becoming that county's wealthiest man; he was greatly interested in banking, and was prominently identified with all the great business enterprises of the section. Mr. Klineyoung's mother died at Shenk's Ferry when he was a small boy. Gustavus Klineyoung married (second) Catherine Tome, a second sister of Jacob Tome. Mr. Klineyoung and his wife died at Shenk's Ferry, he being in his sixty-seventh year. They were Methodists in religious faith, and he was a Democrat in politics. The children of Gustavus Klineyoung and his first wife were: Ann Elizabeth, Mrs. Thomas Smith of Red Lion, Pa.; Simon Peter; and two or three who died in infancy. One child was born to the second union, Adeline, a resident of Red Lion.

Simon Peter Klineyoung attended school from the time he was six years old. He was reared a farmer boy and stayed with his father until the latter's death. After their father's death our subject and his sister kept house. Mr. Klineyoung in 1884 removing to his present place, of 114 acres, part of the John R. Pratt farm, which was purchased by Jacob Tome, and presented by him to our subject. Mr. Klineyoung carries on general farming and raises good crops. He was reared in the faith of the M. E. Church, which he attends at Shenk's Ferry. In politics he is a Democrat.

Mr. Klineyoung married, in Airville, in 1876, Miss Hettie Mehaffey, of York Furnace, and to this union have been born: Christi LeFevre, of Harrisburg, a fireman on the Pennsylvania R. R., married Emma Lutz; Gustavus, a fireman on the Pennsylvania R. R., resides at Harrisburg, and married Carrie Heffner; Maude M. is Mrs. Curney Gemmell of the township of East Hopewell; Adeline Ellen is at home; Howard Clayton; Walter Montreville; Harry Reisinger; Catherine Viola; Elsie Irene; and William Grier and Roy died in childhood.

EMANUEL FALKLER, a cigar manufacturer in Windsor township, was born July 5, 1860. John Falkler, his father, was born in Germany in 1824, and emigrated to America in early manhood. He was a day laborer all his life. He married Miss Elizabeth Heindle, who was born in York county in 1831, daughter of John Heindle. Mr. Falkler was killed in 1865 by a falling tree, and his widow afterward married Peter Kelley, who is also deceased. She is now living with a daughter in Dover, about seventy-five years of age. Emanuel Falkler was left an orphan at the age of five, and a year later he was taken into the family of Henry E. Sechrist, of Windsor township, where he remained twelve years. He attended the township school, his first teacher being David Maish, and his last Joel Kauffman. He learned to make cigars under Mr. Sechrist, and afterward was employed by him for two years. In 1880 Mr. Falkler was married to Mary Jane Olewiler, who was born at New Bridgeville, daughter of Henry G. and Leah (Waughtel) Olewiler. Her father was born in Lower Chanceford township, was a farmer all his life, and is now residing in Lower Windsor township, aged sixty-seven. After his marriage Mr. Falkler remained in Lower Windsor township for two years making cigars at Bittersville, and then purchased his present property of forty acres, which was then owned by different parties. There he has been engaged in the manufacture of cigars for the past twenty-three years. At first his home was the old stone house built on the site fifty years ago by the late William Heller, of Helm, but in 1891, Mr. Falkler built the residence in which he has since lived.

To Emanuel and Mary J. Falkler eight children have been born as follows: Bert A., born in 1881, who married Miss Jennie Abel, and lives at Mountville, Lancaster county; Harry C., born March 17, 1883, at home; Flora and Margie, who both died in infancy; Arthur, born Aug. 30, 1886; Clarence, April 21, 1889; Ivan, Sept. 27, 1891; and Edith May, May 13, 1893. Mr. and Mrs. Falkler are both workers in the Evangelical Church, but are not members. Mr. Falkler is a stanch Democrat, and he cast his first vote for Grover Cleveland. He is a public-spirited citizen, a successful business man, and one whom his friends and neighbors all esteem highly. He belongs to several fraternal orders, being a member of York Lodge, No. 47, I. O. O. F., also of the Encampment and of Washington Lodge, P. O. S. of A.

DAVID G. DEARDORFF, proprietor of a livery stable in York, owner of several farms, and with interests in both local business concerns and in Colorado mining properties, stands as a marked example of what may be achieved by intelligent and undeviating attention to one's work in life.

Mr. Deardorff was born in Washington township, York county, June 11, 1851, son of David and Margaret (Giese) Deardorff, and is of German ancestry. The early years of his life were spent on his father's farm and until he was seventeen he attended the public schools. At that age he began teaching, but followed that profession for only five terms, when he turned his attention to farming and stock-raising. He also served two terms of five years each as justice of the peace of Washington township. In 1881 he commenced the tanning business in his native township, but after a two years' trial removed to York and opened a livery stable on Mason alley near the courthouse. He made a very modest beginning, having only two horses, two buggies, a spring wagon and one sleigh. But he applied himself zealously to his business, did his own work at first, and took advantage of every device that would improve his stable, so that his patronage gradually but steadily increased. His stock now comprises five hearses (two white and three black), eighteen closed carriages, three large picninc wagons and a full line of top buggies. His teams are often in demand for weddings, while by far the most of the calls for funeral carriages come to him, his twenty years in the business, all in all, having been marked by a most remarkable advance.

The other business interests of Mr. Deardorff are both many and varied. He owns three farms, which he conducts personally, two located in Washington township and the other in Jackson. On the latter he has a custom chopping-mill, while much of the other farms consists of blue grass land, where annually graze large herds of cattle and horses. These horses he buys and fattens for the eastern market; he also fattens a large number of hogs; and in all these ventures he has been very successful financially. In addition to his farming properties, Mr. Deardorff owns seven residence lots in York, and is a stockholder in several of the leading business enterprises of the city, while he has always taken a leading part in the promotion of every project for the public advantage. He is also extensively interested in mining stocks in Colorado.

Not only in business affairs, but in social organizations as well, is Mr. Deardorff prominent. Lodge work has always appealed to him, and he is an active member of the B. P. O. E., York Lodge, No. 213; of the I. O. O. F., Harmonia Lodge, No. 187; of the K. of G. E., White Rose Castle, No. 182; and of the Heptasohs, Keystone Conclave, No. 12, while he is also an enthusiastic member and the treasurer of the York City Gunning Club. Mr. Deardorff is a great lover of sports, is a special enthusiast in the hunting of large game, and makes annual trips to favorite ground in Maine or the Rockies, besides going yearly to North and South Carolina for quail and duck.

In 1871 Mr. Deardorff was married to Miss Sarah E. Grove, a native of York county, and they have had five children. The only daughter, Bertha, died at the age of seven. Harvey G., the oldest son, is now in business in Vineland, N. J., but previous to the spring of 1903 was located in Philadelphia where he carried a cigar store and manufactory. He is now operating a lumber yard and planing mill and carries on an extensive business, since he purchases large tracts of timber both for cutting and marketing. His wife was formerly Miss Susanna Givens, of York. The second son, Kurvin C., was educated in York, and is still at home. Although a jeweler by trade, he is now engaged as bookkeeper in the offices of the York Gas Company. Arthur E. Deardorff, also educated in York, assists his father in his business; he was married, in 1901, to Miss Sadie Heckler, daughter of George Heckler, and they had two sons, George D. and Lloyd C. (deceased). The fourth and youngest son, George, formerly a bookkeeper in a dry-goods store, in Denver, Colo., and later employed in a similar capacity in the York County National Bank, at York, died March 3, 1905.

HENRY S. TYSON. The founder of the Tyson family in America was Benjamin Tyson, who emigrated from England and became a permanent settler of the Buckeye State. He was a man of mighty stature, towering six feet four inches, and was one of the courtly gentlemen of that day. He was the father of two daughters and one son.

Henry Tyson, son of Benjamin, was born and reared in Ohio. When a young man he moved to York county, Pa., where he bought a farm in North Codorus township, living thereon for the balance of his days. In connection with his farming he did some veterinary work. In politics he was an old-line Whig, devoting himself to the cause of the colored race and assisting many slaves to escape to Canada. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Tyson reached the advanced age of eighty-one years. His wife was a Miss Susanna Shultz, a native of York county, who lived to be eighty-six. She was a daughter of John Shultz, a farmer of York county who came from Germany. The children born to Henry and Susanna Tyson numbered ten, all reaching maturity, but only three are now living. Joseph was a farmer and hotel keeper in York county. Emanuel, a lifelong farmer, now aged eighty-six, resides at Glen Rock. Susanna married George Walter, a carpenter of York county. Sallie became the wife of Peter Bentz, a farmer of North Codorus township. Elizabeth married Abraham Green- walt, a butcher in York. Henry S. is the subject of this sketch. Lydia is the widow of John Rausch, a farmer of Spring Garden township. John and Benjamin were twins; the former enlisted in the 87th Pa. Vol. Inf., served three years as a dispatcher during the Civil war, later re-enlisted under Gen. Custer, and is supposed to have been massacred by the Indians with his ill-fated command. Benjamin also served three years in the 87th Pa. Vol. Inf., and after the expiration of his term, went to Gettysburg, Pa., married a Miss Reading, of that city, and settled there permanently as a butcher. Edwin, whose death occurred at Philipsburg in 1900, had learned the butcherer's trade in York under his brother-in-law, Mr. Greenwalt, and then settled at Bellefonte, where he followed that occupation for sixteen years. Moving to Philipsburg, he passed the remainder of his life there, the last seven years in retirement.

Henry S. Tyson was born Oct. 8, 1829, and was reared on his father's farm. Although he attended the district school, his education was limited, and, to quote his own words, he "graduated from the brier and stone field." At the age of nineteen he went to York, learned the carpenter's trade there under E. C. Lowman and then, returning to North Codorus township, built a sawmill which he operated for two years. The next two years were spent in the dry-goods business at Smyser's Station, when he married and located at Hanover Junction. After spending some years on a small farm there, he moved to his father-in-law's homestead and for two years took charge of the distillery which Mr. Hoke had conducted on the place. Mr. Tyson's next location was in Cumberland, where he superintended the Ege's Forge farm about two years. Returning to Mr. Hoke's farm in York, he burned lime there for a time, and then for three years managed the homestead of his widowed sister, Mrs.
Raush. The next seven years were spent as superintendent of Small's ore bank, after which he returned to York and kept a livery stable for a year. Two years were spent on Jacob Brillinger's farm in Spring Garden township; the next period he was in charge of the York City Hospital, was a short time manager of the waterworks, and then was located for six years on P. A. & S. Small's farm, operating 335 acres of land and feeding large herds of cattle. Afterward for three years he superintended George Small's farm, at Grantley Place, that tract consisting of 200 acres, and finally returned to York to take up his abode on property which he owns at No. 336 South Duke street.

Mr. Tyson's marriage took place May 28, 1857, and his bride was Miss Leah Elizabeth Hoke, who was born March 9, 1834. To this union only two children were born: Herman, who died when one year old; and Mary J., who married E. G. Quickle, employed at the Spangler Manufacturing Works in York. There are two granddaughters: Lillian, a student at the Lutherville Seminary or Maryland College; and Mary Louise, who is in the York public schools. Mr. Tyson is now a staunch, active Republican, in his earlier days being an old-line Whig.

Mrs. Tyson was a daughter of Herman and Elizabeth (Free) Hoke, both now deceased. Herman Hoke was born Oct. 9, 1811, the oldest of three sons, Herman, Emanuel and John. The parents were John and Catherine (Harmon) Hoke, natives, respectively, of Adams county and of West Manchester township, York county, and the paternal grandfather was Conrad Hoke, born in Germany. Herman Hoke was married Sept. 19, 1832, to Miss Elizabeth Free, of Hopewell township, and a family of seven children were born to them, as follows: Leah E., Mrs. Tyson; Adam H., who married Miss Sarah Smyser, and died March 17, 1901; Sarah A., Mrs. Noah Ness; Catherine and Rebecca L., residing at the old homestead; Emma J., who married Samuel Rutter, and died Oct. 28, 1901; and Mary A., deceased. Mr. Hoke passed away Dec. 20, 1891, while his wife ended her earthly pilgrimage July 1, 1888, aged eighty years and eleven months.

SAMUEL BARTON RUBY was born March 8, 1849, in Lower Windsor township, in the house in which he now resides, and is a son of Samuel and Catherine (Schenberger) Ruby. His father was likewise born in Lower Windsor township, the year of his nativity being 1815, and the place of his birth the farm now owned by Isaac Hinkle. He received a common-school education and passed his boyhood days on the farm, while in his youth he learned the blacksmith's trade, beginning his practical apprenticeship when a mere child. He followed his trade during the major portion of his long and worthy life and ever commanded the unqualified esteem of those who knew him and appreciated his sterling character. He died on his old homestead Dec. 15, 1865. In politics he was an old-line Whig, and later a staunch Republican, taking an intelligent and unvarying interest in the issues of the day and being prominent in public affairs in his locality. In the memorable campaign of 1844, when “Tippecanoe and Tyler too” was the slogan of his party, he enthusiastically participated in local politics, being a skillful flier and finding his services as such in demand in connection with the various demonstrations of the campaigns. His life is now in the possession of Samuel B. Ruby and is a highly prized heirloom. Samuel Ruby was also a captain in the militia of Lower Windsor township, having been appointed to this office by the Governor. He and his wife were devoted and prominent members of the Evangelical Church, in which he served as class-leader and exhorter, also being an active worker in the Sunday-school.

Catherine (Schenberger) Ruby, mother of Samuel B., was born in Lower Windsor township March 9, 1821, the farm on which she was born having been in the vicinity of Woodstock Forge and in the locality known as Forge Hill. She was a daughter of John Schenberger, who died just before her birth, a fact which later brought into evidence a peculiar custom of the early days: Persons came frequently to secure hairs from her head, the belief being that the use of a hair from the head of a child who never saw its father would prove efficacious in curing the whooping-cough. The maiden name of her mother was Ziegler. The death of Mrs. Catherine Ruby was a decided loss to her community, as she possessed many strong and tender traits of womanly character which earned for her general affection and esteem. Of her children we have the following brief record: William died in childhood; Margaret is the wife of Daniel Kline, of Adams county; Joseph A. married Sarah Geist and they reside in the city of York, this county; Samuel B. was the next in order of birth; John Wesley, who first married Anna Dietz and after her death wedded Emma Emig, is now a resident of California; Emma died in childhood; Catherine Delilah is the wife of Albert Bair of Adams county; George A. likewise resides in that county and has been twice married, the maiden name of his first wife being Sevilla Miller; Ida is the wife of John J. Fry, of York.

Daniel Ruby, grandfather of Samuel B., was one of the sterling and honored pioneers of Lower Windsor township; his farm was located near the present town of Wrightsville—the property now owned by Isaac Hinkle. He was the father of seven children, namely: Polly, John, George, Katy, Samuel, Daniel and Peter.

Samuel B. Ruby was reared to maturity in his native township, and his early educational discipline was secured in school district No. 1—in what was commonly known as the Kline school—where he continued his studies during a portion of each year until he had attained the age of sixteen. For the ensuing two years he was employed in operating a stationary engine at Ore Bank, York county. At the age of eighteen he entered into partnership with his brother Joseph A., running a blacksmith's shop in Lower Windsor township, both having learned the trade under the direction of their honored father. Thereafter Samuel continued to be actively engaged in his trade for nearly a quarter of a century, or until 1890, when he located on the Daniel Leber farm in Lower Windsor township, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits for the following three years. At the expiration of that period he resumed his trade, returning to his old home place, and having since conducted a general blacksmithing business, giving special attention to coach and carriage building, and being known as a very skillful and reliable workman in the line to which he has devoted so many years of his life.

Mr. Ruby is a loyal and public-spirited citizen and has ever evinced an abiding interest in all that has concerned the welfare of his township and county, while he has been an earnest champion of the principles of the Republican party since attaining his legal majority, having cast his first Presidential vote for Gen. U. S. Grant. He served one term as assessor of Lower Windsor township, and for nine consecutive years held the office of school director, being first appointed to this position to fill the unexpired term of John Bancroft, Sr., and having been retained in it by successive re-elections. He also served as judge of elections several years ago, and has since been again called to that office. He and his wife are prominent and valued members of the North Trinity United Evangelical Church, in Lower Windsor township, and in that body Mr. Ruby has served as trustee, steward, superintendent of the Sunday-school and as an exhorter. He is a member of the directorate of the Lower Windsor Fire Insurance Company, of which he is assistant secretary.

In the year 1872 Mr. Ruby was united in marriage to Susan Anstine, who was born and reared in Lower Windsor township, a daughter of John and Eliza (Kise) Anstine, and of this union have been born three children namely: Della, who is the wife of Charles Warner, of Hellam township; Charles, who married Matilda Kizer, and who resides in York; and Flora, who remains at home.

JESSE KNAUB, contractor and builder in stone and brick, at York, was born in Spring Garden township, York county, March 16, 1840, son of John Knaub.

Jacob Knaub, his grandfather, was a native of York county and was a school teacher by profession, but engaged also in farming in Spring Garden township. To him and his wife, who before marriage was Elizabeth Bashore, were born: Mrs. William Nisely, who died in Spring Garden township; Mrs. Elizabeth Bashore, who lives in York township at the age of eighty-four years; Leah (deceased) who was the wife of Christian Seiple; John, the father of Jesse, and Jacob, of Perry Co., Pennsylvania.

John Knaub was born in Spring Garden township, in 1813, where he received a common school education and was reared to be an agriculturist. He farmed in his native township during his entire life, owning about 300 acres of land near Brillioner's Mill. He married Sarah Zellers, both husband and wife dying in 1891, within a few days of each other, and being buried at Mount Zion cemetery in Spring Garden township. They were mem-
Frederick Gerkensmeyer was educated in the public schools of Germany, and after finishing the required courses, began learning the carpenter's trade. He was employed in one of the largest plants in the world, where thousands of skilled workmen are regularly engaged. In time the young man decided to try his fortunes in America, and so left Germany, stopping en route in London, England, where he remained for a short stay. On June 1, 1879, he landed in New York, remaining in the city only from morning to evening, and then proceeded to join a friend at Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa. After a week there he located permanently at York. He was employed at his trade by different contractors and builders for many years, but finally, in 1902, founded the Codorus Planing Mill Company, in which he is a stockholder and director. H. M. Williams is the president and Daniel Lauer, the secretary. The company is located on West College and Stone avenues, and does a thriving business as contractors, builders and dealers in lumber.

In 1881 Frederick Gerkensmeyer was united in marriage with Elizabeth Lipper, a daughter of Conrad and Catherine (Sultzer) Lipper. She was born in Germany in 1854, and came to America at the age of twenty, landing at Baltimore, Md. Mr. and Mrs. Gerkensmeyer are the parents of three children, Elizabeth, Philip and Adolphus, and the family reside in a handsome home, at No. 577 West College avenue, which was built in 1902. Mr. Gerkensmeyer has also erected a number of fine dwelling houses in the Ninth ward. In political matters he is not active, but is a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party. In religion he is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, and for three years served on the church council. Mr. Gerkensmeyer is a man whose opinions and influence command consideration, both in business and church circles, and he is among the most highly esteemed residents of the city.

SAMUEL S. SMITH, a farmer and business man of Windsor township, was born on his father's farm in that section, Feb. 10, 1859, son of Samuel and Maria (Tschopp) Smith. The Smith family originated in England and the first to come to America was the great-grandfather, who located temporarily in York county; but later, as the family annals relate, he moved westward, traveling on an old gray horse who carried both him and his younger son. The older son, Daniel, remained in Windsor township, where he spent most of his life farming, although he was a weaver by trade. He married a Miss Schmuck, and they had a large family, as follows: Polly, Mrs. Sampson Emeneisier, the only surviving child; John, who moved to Cumberland county in his youth; Jacob, who died in Hopewell township; Michael, who died in Paradise, York county; Catherine, Mrs. Benjamin Paules, of York township; Daniel of Windsor township; William, of Clearfield county, Pa.; and Samuel. Both parents died in Windsor township. Mr. Smith was a Democrat, as the word was applied in his day.

Samuel Smith was born in 1831, and was given a common-school education. He learned the carpenter's trade, but was occupied for the most of his life in farming. He was always interested in local politics; was elected township supervisor, and in both local and national affairs supported the Democratic party. He belonged to the United Brethren Church. His wife was Maria Tschopp, born in Windsor township in 1833, daughter of Peter and Catherine (Levernight) Tschopp. Her father was a farmer in that region, and there died. The children born to Samuel and Maria Smith were: Reuben, of Red Lion; Franklin, of Windsorville; Samuel S.; Rebecca Jane, who died unmarried; and Amanda. Mrs. Edwin Sprenkle, of Freysville. Samuel Smith passed from this world in 1893. The estate which he left was settled by his son Samuel S.

Samuel S. Smith was educated almost entirely in the Windsorville school, but spent one term in the Miller school in Windsor township. His first teacher was D. W. Maish, and his last one, J. A. Miller. He left school when he was nineteen, and for the next four years worked on the farm, after which he was employed for two years in similar work for John Gable. He had learned carpentry, and his next step was to establish himself in Windsorville in that trade. He built a residence there, but at the end of two years sold it and returned to farming. He bought his present place of seventeen acres, formerly owned by John Gable, and gave most of his attention to it, although he frequently did carpenter work and for a period of four years was engaged in packing cigars for his uncle, S. L. Tschopp. He has also carried on cigar making in a small way since 1881. In 1900 he decided to go into business and opened the store which he is still conducting. He commenced with a good stock and has been very successful in the enterprise. He has recently built a handsome brick house just west of his store, one of the finest homes in the town.

When twenty-four years old Mr. Smith chose for his wife, Jane Knisley, who like himself was born in Windsor township. Her father, William Knisley, who died in 1902, was a prominent farmer; her mother whose maiden name was Spatz, now makes her home in Yoe, with her son Reuben. Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who were married in September, 1882, became the parents of six children: namely: Perry Alvin, who was born Jan. 13, 1884, but did not live; Sainie I., born April 14, 1885; Mrs. Harry Creek, of Windsorville; Ernest C., born Oct. 26, 1887; Raymond H., born March 2, 1896; Preston Miles, born Jan. 13, 1901, who died in infancy; and Charles Clair, born Nov. 5, 1902.

Mr. Smith has always been an ardent Democrat, and a man keenly interested in public affairs. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Hancock, and has voted for every Democratic candidate for the office since. He has always done what he could for his party, but is not at all a professional politician. In 1890 he was elected township assessor for three years, and, in the spring of 1904, was chosen for a three years' term as school director. In religion he has been a member of the United Brethren Church since his twenty-fourth year; has served as Sunday-school superintendent for sixteen years, and as trustee for twelve. His life has been consistent with his professions, for his career has been one of invariable integrity, both in private and public life, and he has shown himself an official in whom the greatest confidence might be reposed. He had no capital to begin with, but has won his way to prominence by honest industry, and he is held in the highest respect and esteem by all.

HENRY BAKER was born in Windsor township, on his father's old mill property, May 2, 1849, son of Peter and Margaret (Miller) Baker.

Peter Baker was born near Berlin, Germany, and was reared and educated in his native place. After leaving school he followed distilling, which trade he had learned. He was united in marriage to Margaret Miller, also a native of the same locality as her husband. In 1836 Mr. and Mrs. Baker sailed from Bremen to Baltimore, on the vessel "Felix;" the voyage taking ninety days, as the ship was delayed by an accident. After landing in the United States, the parents came direct to York, whence they removed to Windsor township, where the husband engaged in day labor and rented a little home. By careful saving Mr. Baker was enabled to buy a tract of five acres of land; and by working for other farmers accumulated enough to make other purchases until his farm finally comprised twenty-five acres. He farmed his property until 1871, when he sold it and located at Lancaster, where he passed the remainder of his days, dying in 1891, aged eighty-four years, his wife having died in 1873, being then in her fifty-ninth year. In religion this good couple were Lutherans.

Mr. Baker was a Democrat. Of the children born to him and his wife the eldest died in Germany; David, a market master of York, who married Mary Reichley; Peter, an agriculturist of Windsor township, married (first) to Susanna Emenheiser, and (second) to Mrs. Amanda (Dillinger) Herr; Margaret, who married (first) Joshua Oberdorf, and (second) Benjamin Craley; Levi, a farmer of Windsor township, who married (first) Annie Schoff, and (second) Ellen McKenzie; Henry; Angeline, who married John Chillas, of Lower Windsor township; Matilda, who died unmarried; and Reuben, who died in infancy.

Henry Baker attended the common school which was located one and one-half miles from his old home, his first teacher being Reuben Hengst, and later he had William Keech. The latter was very strict a man of violent temper and his willingness to use the switch caused the boy to leave school at the age of fourteen years, thereby being deprived of a learning that he would have readily acquired under a kinder master. After leaving school Mr. Baker worked one year in an ore bank near Hellam station, receiving $1.35 per day, which wages were collected by his father. After leaving the ore bank Mr. Baker worked at different occupations, and at the age of sixteen years was employed by David Leber, a tanner, receiving for his labor $12.50 per month. Henry remained with Mr. Leber for three years, and while with him learned the tanner's trade, continuing thus employed until he was nineteen years of age. Mr. Baker was married at the age of twenty, removing then to Columbia, where for ten years he worked for Henry Hollinger. He owned a home in that place, which he sold for $1,000, this money constituting the first payment on his present farm, Mr. Baker going into debt for the greater portion of the property; but by hard work and perseverance, and with the aid of the money inherited from his father, he cleared his farm from all indebtedness. He has now eighty-six acres (having added to the original purchase), and his land is fertile and productive of good crops. About 1886 Mr. Baker erected a new residence, and since then has remodeled the barn, and built a summer house, a spring house, a bake oven and a smoke house. In 1901 he erected one of the most complete tobacco sheds in the county, it being furnished with a fine cellar and stripping room. The posts in the curing room are detachable and may be removed with the rails upon which the tobacco is hung, thereby converting the shed into a fine barn. It is certainly a very convenient device, the plans of which were executed by Mr. Baker himself.

In York, in 1869, Mr. Baker was married to Mary Klinesteiver, born in Germany, daughter of George and Katrina (Garrick) Klinesteiver, natives of Germany, now deceased. Mrs. Baker's parents came to America when she was but three years old, and settled at Chestnut Hill, Lancaster county, where the father worked in an ore bank, and later removed to York county. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Baker: Milton, a resident of Miller, above York, was married to Clara McCoy; Reuben died at the age of seventeen years; Harry, a farmer of Lower Windsor township, married Ida Kinard; and Minnie, who married Moses Olewiler, resides in Lower Windsor township, where her husband is a farmer.

While Mr. Baker is a member of no religious denomination, he subscribes liberally to all church movements in the locality. His wife is a valued member of the Lutheran Church, to which his family also belong. In politics Mr. Baker is a steadfast Democrat, but has never consented to hold public office, preferring to devote his time and abilities to the cultivation of his farm, and the raising of good crops. Mr. Baker has the reputation in the community of being a man of honesty and progress,

EMANUEL HERMAN comes of one of the good old families of this county. His great-grandfather, Emanuel Herman, born May 1, 1745, died May 25, 1796, and his wife Catherine, who was born March 2, 1754, passed away March 12, 1833. They were the parents of these children: Adam, born Nov. 18, 1775, died July 9, 1814; Mary, born Nov. 5, 1778, married Emanuel Smyser, and died March 16, 1814; Sallie, born Aug. 7, 1781; Christian, born June 7, 1783, died Aug. 15, 1843; Emanuel, born Nov. 18, 1785 (married March 11, 1816. Leah Laucks, who died Dec. 14, 1847), died July 2, 1851; Jacob, the grandfather of our subject, born Feb. 24, 1788, died March 13, 1872; Catherine, born Dec. 13, 1789 (married Herman Hoke), died March 12, 1853; and Sarah, born March 11, 1792 (married Daniel Smyser), died Dec. 26, 1868.

On April 13, 1815, Jacob Herman, the grandfather, was married to Sarah Laucks, who was born May 15, 1766, and died Dec. 26, 1868. Jacob Herman was reared in West Manchester township on the old homestead, learning the tanner’s trade, but early in life commenced farming there. This homestead contained several hundred acres, and here he followed agricultural pursuits until his retirement from active life, when he located in York, the place of his death. He was one of the public-spirited men of the country, and his advice was sought by many in the community, as he was a man of rare judgment and discernment. In York he was identified with many of the banking institutions of his day, being for many years a director in the York National Bank and generally very prominent in financial circles. He was originally a Whig and afterward active in the ranks of the Republican party, but he never sought public office. He and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church. They had a family, as follows: Adam, born Jan. 26, 1816, died March 30, 1888; Sarah, born June 19, 1821, married Daniel Smyser, Nov. 25, 1841, and Margaret Catherine, born Dec. 9, 1826, married Jacob H. Shetter, Oct. 18, 1849.

Adam Herman, the father of Emanuel, was born and reared on the Herman homestead, where he remained throughout life, operating the farm during his active years, and after his retirement superintended the farm, and burned lime. He was active in local politics, and a member of the school board, as well as a director in the York National Bank. He was a stanch Republican, and in religion he and his wife were connected with the Lutheran Church, in which he was a member of the official board. Adam Herman was married Nov. 25, 1841, to Miss Catherine Eyster, who was born March 6, 1822, a daughter of Michael and Catherine (Spangler) Eyster. Mrs. Herman died Feb. 18, 1878, being the mother of five children: Charles Andrew, born Sept. 16, 1843 (married Amanda Hake, still living), was a farmer and proprietor of a large livery in York, and died Dec. 30, 1903; Emanuel, born June 28, 1844; Sarah Ann, born Feb. 16, 1846, married Edward Gladielet, of Spring Grove, York county; Jacob, born June 22, 1849, is a farmer and stock-dealer of West Manchester; and William H., born June 28, 1859, resides on a part of the old homestead in West Manchester township.

Emanuel Herman was born on the old homestead, in West Manchester township, of which he is the owner of 125 acres, and there he has spent most of his life. He also carried on the lime-burning industry. After his retirement from active life, in 1880, he superintended the work on the farm for twelve years, also operating a sand bank. Mr. Herman is a Republican, but has never sought office. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and has served on its official board.

Mr. Herman married Miss Amanda Loucks who was born in Springettsbury township, in 1842, daughter of Daniel and Eliza (Diehl) Loucks. To this union were born the following children: William J., born May 8, 1871, a member of the firm which controls the York Shoe Manufacturing Company, of York; and Luther D.

Luther D. Herman, the senior member of Herman & Smith, operators of the Star laundry, was born in York county, Aug. 22, 1873. He was educated in York, and when eighteen years of age learned the trade of a machinist, which he followed for six years. He then entered the employ of the Standard Oil Company, as assistant manager of this section and held the position for two years. The partnership was then formed with Mr. Smith, and they established the Star laundry in which they have continued with success ever since. Luther D. Herman is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 505; the I. O. O. F., No. 47; the Royal Arcanum, No. 2091, Codorus Council; B. P. O. E., York Lodge, No. 213. He is a member of the Bachelor Club of York, and of the Royal Fire Company. His religious connection is with St. Paul’s Lutheran Church.

CLAYTON J. HEINDEL. It is fitting that in this compilation be incorporated a tribute to the memory of Mr. Heindel, who passed his entire life in York county and who was summoned into eternal rest in the very prime of his young manhood. He had proved himself a loyal and public-spirited citizen, being prominent and influential in local affairs; was successful as a farmer and stock-grower; and was signally true and faithful in all the relations of life, imbued with the spirit of unswerving integrity and tolerant and kindly in his attitude to his fellow-men.

Clayton J. Heindel was born on the old homestead in Hellam township, York county, June 15, 1861, son of Edward and Elizabeth (Sprenkle) Heindel. His father was a successful farmer and blacksmith in Hellam township, where he died a few years ago, having been one of the well known and honored citizens of the county. The mother is still living with her son in Hellam township. The family name has been linked with the annals of that section of the Keystone State ever since the early pioneer days, and Mr. Heindel was related, through intermarriages, to a number of the oldest and most prominent families of York county. He was the eldest of six children, the others being as follows: Ellen, who died at the age of twenty-one years; Milton, who is a successful farmer of Hellam township; Flora, who became the wife of Amos Grimm, and who died in that township; Bertha, who died at the age of fifteen years; and Elmer, who is likewise a prosperous farmer of Hellam township.

Clayton J. Heindel secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of his native township, and early manifested a distinctive predilection for study and the reading of good literature. It was his wish at one time to become a teacher but he followed the course of duty and gave his attention rather to assisting in the work and management of the several farm properties owned by his father, while in the meantime he continued his studies for one or more terms in the public schools in the city of York. At the age of seventeen years, in company with his sister Ellen, he came to Lower Windsor township and there took charge of a farm owned by his father. The property comprises 125 acres, a portion of which was then covered with the native timber, and he manifested much discrimination and ability in pushing forward the work of developing, improving and cultivating the farm, erecting a barn and other good buildings, and making the place a model in its evidences of thrift and prosperity. He inherited this farm from his father’s estate, and continued to make it his home until he was summoned from the scene of life’s endeavors. He was one of the most progressive, energetic and substantial farmers of that section and his well directed efforts were attended with a full measure of success. He was a radical and uncompromising Republican and an active worker in the local ranks of the party. He was for many years a school director, and was largely concerned in bringing about the rebuilding of the schoolhouse in Yorkana. He was a member of the directorate of the Home Fire Insurance Co., of Lower Windsor township, and genial and whole-souled, was a man who won friends wherever he went, while he never failed to retain the esteem and good will of those with whom he was associated in either a business or social way. He ever manifested a high appreciation of the spiritual verities and Aug. 25, 1898, just one month before his death, was baptized in the faith of the Reformed Church, of which his widow is a devoted member. His death occurred Sept. 25, 1898, and the community felt a sense of personal bereavement and loss, while the burden of grief rested heavily upon those to whom he had been nearest and dearest in the sacred precincts of the home, which was the center of his hopes and affections.

In the city of York, York county, March 23, 1884, Mr. Heindel was united in marriage to Mary E. Seachrist, the nuptial ceremony being performed by Rev. George W. Enders, pastor of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Heindel was born and reared in that county, having passed her childhood days in Spring Garden township and the city of York and being fifteen years of age at the time of her parents' removal to Windsor township. She is a daughter of Adam and Matilda (Dannheinthal) Seacroft, who still reside in Windsor township, her father being a farmer. Concerning the children of Mr. and Mrs. Heindel the following brief record is offered: Harry Jacob was born Oct. 11, 1884; Oscar Edward, born May 14, 1886, is learning the machinist's trade in the works of the Farquhar Manufacturing Company, at York; Norman Elmer was born June 15, 1888; Mamie E., born June 3, 1890, died March 10, 1892; Walter W. was born Sept. 2, 1892; Claude James, born July 22, 1894, died March 18, 1895; Warren Ellsworth and Robert Gideon were born Dec. 11, 1895; and Annie Kate, was born March 8, 1898.

WILLIAM EDWARD WISE was born on the farm adjoining the one he now owns in Chanceford township, July 25, 1848.

Jacob Wise, his grandfather, settled on a farm near the river in Chanceford township, and died on the place now owned by George Hough; it adjoins W. E. Wise's farm on the west, and was owned by Grandfather Jacob Wise at the time of his death. It is not known whether Jacob Wise was born in Germany, it Lancaster county, or near Philadelphia. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and to him and his wife these children were born: George died in Chanceford township; John was the father of William E.; Mary, who married David Workinger, died in Chanceford township; and Katie, died in her youth. After the death of his first wife, Jacob Wise married Mary Nicoll, by whom he had Jacob and Andrew, both sons dying in Chanceford township. Jacob Wise followed distilling in connection with farming, finding a market for his goods in Baltimore. In religion he was a Lutheran. In politics he was always connected with the Democratic party.

John Wise was born in York county, and, with his parents, lived about one mile from the Susquehanna river, receiving an ordinary education in German and English in the township schools. He married Margaret Workinger, a sister of the late Jesse Workinger (ex-sheriff of York county) and daughter of Peter Workinger, a farmer and miller of Hopewell township. Mrs. Wise died in 1874, at the age of sixty-five years. She had been a kind and devoted mother, and a good Christian woman, and her death was mourned not only by her family, but by the entire community. After his marriage John Wise settled on one of his father's farms, which he worked on shares for two years, and then purchased it. There he died in 1887, aged eighty-two years. He was a Lutheran as had been his wife. He was a Democrat in political faith, but never sought public office. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. John Wise were as follows: Jacob died in infancy; Margaret died young; Sarah Ann married John Curran, of Chanceford township; John A., deceased, married Mary Ann Erb; Mary Elizabeth resides with William E., and William Edward.

William Edward Wise developed into manhood on the home farm in Chanceford township, and attended school from the age of six years to sixteen. He spent most of this time in Fairview school, his principal teacher having been Sarah Bigler, sister of Dr. Bigler, and the wife of Dr. B. F. Porter, of Brogueville. Mr. Wise was reared a farmer's boy, and has ever followed agricultural pursuits. He bought his father's farm three years before the latter's death, and has added to it, until now he is the possessor of 165 acres of fine land, all in a good state of cultivation. Mr. Wise has never married. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, and was formerly a member of St. Luke's Lutheran Church. His vote supports the Democratic party. Mr. Wise has a number of financial interests, and since its organization April 3, 1903, has been a director in the Farmers & Merchants' Bank of Red Lion.

George Wise, a cousin of William Edward Wise, was born near Collinsville, Chanceford township, July 20, 1835, the only child of George and Elizabeth (Runkle) Wise, both of whom died in that township. George Wise, the father of George, was born on the Wrightsville road, back of Brogueville, where he was a farmer, and died a short time before our subject was born. He married Elizabeth Runkle, who became the wife of David Arnold after Mr. Wise's death. Mr. Wise attended the Murphy school until nineteen years of age, being reared a farmer's boy by his grandfather, John Runkle, a farmer of that section. There were no reapers or binders in those days, the first threshing machine being a four horse power, lever machine. Mr. Wise worked with a cradle and Dutch scythe and was considered a very good hand. He remained with his grandfather until he was twenty-three years of age, and then settled on a part of the old farm owned by his grandfather, Jacob Wise, located one mile from Brougeville near the Wrightsville road. There he remained for twelve years, and then sold the property and bought the tract of about 100 acres now owned by William Smeltser. This farm he worked until eleven years ago, when, considering that he deserved a rest from his labors, Mr. Wise retired from active life, selling his farm and buying his present place which consists of fifteen acres. There he established a store, which he has since continued. Mr. Wise has been a life-long Democrat and has served as judge of elections, as school director and as county commissioner. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. In his younger days he had been a member of the Evangelical association and was largely instrumental in the building of the church in the neighborhood. This edifice was abandoned and later occupied by the M. E. Church, of which Mr. Wise became a member.

Mr. Wise married (first) Miss Sarah Runkle, by whom he had these children: Lucinda, who married Samuel Miller, deceased; Mrs. Edward Crusen; John Westley, of Lancaster county, and a fourth that died in infancy. Mr. Wise’s second wife was Sabina McCleary, and his third, Susan E., widow of John Crusen.

WILLIAM JAMES DYER (deceased) was born in York city; June 8, 1862, son of Jesse C. and Louise (Young) Dyer.

Jesse C. Dyer died at his home on West King street, York, from disease contracted in military service, having been a member of Company H, 200th P. V. I. His funeral was a military one, as he had been a faithful and loyal soldier. His widow survived until Jan. 24, 1890, both now resting in the Prospect Hill cemetery. They had these children: George W., born July 16, 1853, died June 6, 1880; John, born Jan. 7, 1856, resides in Baltimore; Annie M., born April 14, 1860, was the wife of Dr. Samuel Wiltbank, and died Oct. 13, 1889; William James; and Mary L., born July 15, 1864, died June 6, 1868.

William James Dyer was educated in the common schools of York and in the Soldiers’ Orphans’ School at White Hall, Cumberland county, where he remained until the age of sixteen years. He then learned the bakery business, in which he was engaged for a number of years, and then removed to Hoboken, N. J. For two years he served as a clerk there, but returned to York, and in 1890 established a grocery on the corner of Penn street and College avenue. Here, by strict attention to business and upright and honorable dealing, he built up a large trade, and had a longer life been granted him, would doubtless have become one of the substantial men of the city. His death occurred Sept. 23, 1898, and his burial was in Prospect Hill cemetery. In every way he was a good and worthy man, and for years he was active in the M. E. Church, of which his father and his family are also members. Here Mr. Dyer was particularly missed, as he had been superintendent of the Sunday-school and was beloved by all who knew and appreciated his services.

On May 22, 1881, Mr. Dyer was married to Isabella A., daughter of Michael and Caroline (Golden) Spangler. The children were: Mabel A., born March 17, 1882, who is a very fine musician and a popular teacher of music in York; Wilson E., born March 9, 1884, who died July 4, 1887, aged three years, three months and twenty-five days; Ednah May, born Sept. 25, 1888, now at home with her mother; Pauline A., born in 1895, a school girl. Mrs. Dyer continues the operation of her late husband’s store at the same location, being a woman possessed of excellent business judgment.

Mr. Dyer was a member of the I. O. O. F., the Knights of the Mystic Chain and of the Sons of Veterans, of the last named having been captain and judge advocate. He was a kind, good, just man; one who will long be remembered by a devoted family and many warm friends.

JACOB F. BORTNER, while retired from active life, is serving the borough of Winterstown as tax collector. The Bortner family comes from Germany, three brothers landing in America and settling in Codorus township, York county, Pa., whence one went to Hope well township, same county, where he died aged ninety-six years, and another to Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

Jacob Bortner, the grandfather of Jacob F., was born in Hopewell township, where throughout life he was engaged in farming. He was married three times—first to Miss Snyder, who became the grandfather of Jacob F.; his third wife was a Miss Hess.

John Bortner, the father, was born in Hopewell township in 1822, where he reached maturity on a farm. He learned the shoemaker’s trade, but after marriage commenced farming, purchasing the place now known as the Engle farm in North Hopewell township, upon which he died in 1871. He married Margaret Fishel of Hopewell township, daughter of Michael and Lydia (Hershner) Fishel, his wife dying in 1903. Of the children of this union, Mary married S. V. Reddiford, and both died in Dallas, Texas; Jacob F.; William is deceased; Wiley, of Baltimore, Md., married a Miss Earhart; Belle died single; and Frank is a resident of Darlington, Wisconsin.

Jacob F. Bortner was born in Hopewell township, Nov. 24, 1849, and attended the common schools until he was sixteen years old. He was reared on the home farm, upon which he remained until his seventeenth year, and then for three years served an apprenticeship at the blacksmith’s trade under S. S. Sheffer, afterward engaging in business for himself, and operating a shop for twenty-five years in Winterstown borough. About 1897 he abandoned active work, since which time he has lived retired. Mr. Bortner was reared in the faith of the M. E. Church. In political principles he is a stanch Republican, has served as school director and on the town council, and at present is acceptably discharging the duties of a tax collector.

Mr. Bortner was married in North Hopewell township, in 1871, to Harriet Snyder, daughter of Joseph and Susan (Strayer) Snyder, and to this union have been born the following children: Cora, who was educated in the public schools, the York County Normal School and the Millersville State Normal school, and was a teacher for twelve years in Hopewell township and New Freedom, is now the wife of Dr. James L. Yeagle of New Freedom; and Minnie, who is at home, was educated in the public schools, the York County Academy and the Shippensburg Normal school, and is a graduate of Potts’ Shorthand College, of Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

HOWARD BOWER, who is engaged in cultivating his fine farm of 106 acres in Newberry township, was born in Conewago township, Dec. 26, 1853, son of Henry and Mary Jane (Keister) Bower. George Bower, his great-grandfather, came from Germany and settled in Newberry township when a young man, engaging in agricultural pursuits until his death. He was buried at the Cassel graveyard, near York Haven, in Newberry township.

George Bower, the grandfather of Howard, was born in Newberry township and was a farmer and miller in Manchester township. He married Eva Fink, and they both died in Conewago township and are buried in the Union cemetery at Manchester borough. The children born to this couple were: John, a farmer, died in 1847, in Conewago township; George died in Conewago township and was buried at Manchester; Mary married Peter Spahr, and died in Manchester, meeting her death by drowning in a swollen stream; Henry, was the father of Howard; William, a retired farmer, lives in Conewago township; Caroline married Abraham Reeser, and died in Manchester borough; Mary, living in Manchester, married John Metzger; Jacob, a retired wagon-maker, lives in Decatur, Illinois.

Henry Bower was born Oct. 14, 1820, in Manchester township, where he received a good education. He remained at home assisting his father, until his marriage in 1848 to Mary Jane Keister, daughter of Henry and Tacey (Hart) Keister. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bower located in Conewago township, where they remained for eight years, and then bought the Henry Keister estate, a farm of 106 acres of fine soil, upon which Mr. Bower built a large stone residence and a substantial barn. The house is one which does credit to the builder, the architect and the community in which it stands. Until 1879 Mr. Bower was engaged in farming; in 1893 he removed to Newberry, where he lived retired until his death, Aug. 2, 1897, at the age of seventy-six years, nine months, nineteen days. Mrs. Bower was born in 1827, and died May 7, 1900. They are interred in the Paddletown cemetery, Newberry township. As an earnest Democrat Henry Bower took a great interest in his party’s success. The children born to these good people were: George, a farmer, living in Fairview township, married a Miss Miller; Sarah Jane married George Spahr, a farmer of Newberry township; Howard is mentioned below: Maggie, married William Eppley, a merchant of Newberry; Ida married August Ruby of New Cumberland, Cumberland county: Katie married John Baker, died in Washington township, and is buried at Paddletown; Clara married Mills M. Hays, a cigarmaker and farmer of Newberry; Eva resides in Washington, D. C.; Mary married George W. Myers, of Newberry.

Howard Bower attended the public schools until about eighteen years of age, meantime assisting his father at farming. In 1878 he married Emma Gross, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Bruah) Gross, and they located on the old home, which he bought at the time of his father's death. Two bright boys—Roy and George—have been born to this union, and they are both attending school. Like his father, Mr. Bower is a Democrat, and he has been called upon to fill various offices, among them those of auditor and inspector. He spends most of his time on the farm and has cultivated and improved it year by year until now he has one of the fine properties of the township.

GEORGE M. RYNICK, of York, is the agent for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. His paternal ancestors came from Germany, his maternal from Scotland.

Jacob Rynick, his great-grandfather, emigrated from Saxony, Germany, and fought on the side of his adopted country in the war of the Revolution.

John Rynick, son of Jacob, was a soldier in the war of 1812-14. It is said that at one time he owned all the land now known as the Van Schriver estate at Philadelphia. He had two sons: John, who married Anna Shuster, daughter of Jacob Shuster, a soldier in the war of 1812; and Jacob S., father of George M.

Jacob S. Rynick was a coffee roaster and vinegar manufacturer at Norristown, Pa. and died in 1879. He married Catharine McCauley, who bore him fourteen children, of whom Harriet, Maggie and Mary (twins), Elwood and Clara are deceased. The living are: Anna, wife of Charles H. Bosset of Philadelphia; Belle, wife of O. K. Boyer, in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Lillian, wife of T. J. Sheppard Landis, lithographer, at Rossville, N. Y.; Alice, wife of Charles F. Alsop, artist, at Rossville, N. Y.; Harry W., in the street car service in Wilmington, Del.; George M.; and Ida, Ella and Flora, at home.

George M. Rynick was born in Norristown, Pa., Feb. 17, 1863, and received a good public school education. In boyhood he became a clerk in the Penckoyd Iron Works, at the end of five years being promoted to the position of order and receiving clerk. He remained with that company until he was made general secretary of the Norristown Y. M. C. A., a position held one and one-half years, when he was sent to fill a similar place at Mauch Chunk, serving five years there, and finally spending five and one-half years as general secretary at York. He enjoyed this work and was very popular with the Association but he felt he must establish himself in some line of business, and so tendered his resignation.

In June, 1901, Mr. Rynick became agent for the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company, and has done very effective work in the territory assigned to him.

On Feb. 27, 1888, Mr. Rynick was married to Saidee K. Lancaster, daughter of William H. Lancaster, of Norristown. Two children have been born to them: William J. and George M., Jr. Mr. Rynick is a member of the First Presbyterian Church at York, and is a teacher in the Sunday-school. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church at Norristown when only twenty-three years old. His fraternal relations are with York Lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M. He is a Democrat in politics.

WILLIAM ELLSWORTH EDIE, the proprietor of Springvale farm, has spent his whole life in Hopewell township, where he was born March 12, 1863, on a farm lying close to Stewartstown. His paternal grandfather, Hayes Edie, was a veteran of the Civil war, and a resident of Hopewell township, where he died on what is now called the Sykes farm. During his lifetime he was a farmer, and also followed the trade of a carpenter. Twice married, his children were all by his first wife, the second still surviving him.

John R. Edie, father of William E., was born in Hopewell township, and as a farmer's boy received the usual education offered in the public schools of that day. He married Miss Sarah Sutton, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Zeigler) Sutton, of Hopewell township, and after his marriage rented farms for a time. Then he and his brother, Arthur S., bought a tract together, situated close to Stewartstown.
Later Mr. Edie removed to the vicinity of Waltemyer's Mill, and thence to Fulton county, Pa., three miles from Hancock, Md. Buying a farm there he remained seven years and then returned to Stewartstown. Early in life he had learned carpentry and, after his last removal, he followed that trade in connection with his farming. Mr. Edie's next location was on the farm now known as the Samuel Waltemeyer place, which he rented for a short period and then moved to property which he owned on the plank road, now in the possession of Dr. Anderson. Mr. Edie built there and farmed for five years, after which he settled in Stewartstown, where he resided until his death.

Mrs. Sarah S. Edie died in 1876, while the family were living on the Waltemeyer farm, and her remains were laid to rest in the Stewartstown cemetery, the first to be interred there. Mrs. Edie and her husband were both members of the M. P. Church. They were the parents of the following children: Thomas G., who married Miss Nettie Winters and died in Stewartstown; William E.; Alberta B., Mrs. George W. Fulton, of East Hopewell township; Margaret. Mrs. Jacob W. Bowman, of Hopewell township; Grace, unmarried; and two who died in childhood. Mr. Edie was married a second time and his widow Mrs. Mary (Morris) Edie, still survives.

John R. Edie, as well as his brother, Arthur S., enlisted in the army during the Civil war. The former was in Company B, 200th P. V. I., 1st Brigade, 3d Division, 9th Army Corps. His company officers were Capt. H. W. Spangler and First Lieut. Hendrix. After completing his first term of service Mr. Edie again enlisted and was promoted to the rank of sergeant. He saw much active service and among other injuries was shot through the shoulder. Like so many old soldiers Mr. Edie was a strong Republican in his political views.

William E. Edie attended the common and Kurtz schools, in his native township, afterward studied in those of Fulton county, and still later was in the Stewartstown institutions, ending his student days when eighteen years old. He early began to work in the farming seasons and was only seven years old when he hired out in Fulton county for $4 a month. He next worked for Dr. Free in Stewartstown at $8 a month. Until he was twenty-one he assisted his father, but afterward passed eight years in the employ of Eli Zeigler. From Mr. Zeigler's place he removed after his marriage to Harford county, Md., where he rented a farm and operated it for five years, after which he bought the homestead upon which he has since resided. It was called the Luther Hitchcock farm and he purchased it at a sheriff's sale. It was then much neglected, but Mr. Edie has made improvements and transformed it into a productive and profitable place. Consisting originally of ninety-six acres, he has added an adjoining five acres in Baltimore county, Maryland.

On Jan. 15, 1891, Mr. Edie was united in marriage to Mary, daughter of William Thompson, ex-register of deeds for York county, now deceased. At the time of his daughter's marriage Mr. Thompson was conducting the "Lafayette Hotel" in York. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Edie are three in number: Russell J., Margaret M. and Harry A. The mother is a member of the M. P. Church of Stewartstown, which her husband also attends. Mr. Edie is an ardent Republican, and serves as inspector of elections. He has been successful in his farming operations, is one of the substantial men of the locality and stands high in the public esteem.

JAMES WISE was born in September, 1839, on the McCall farm in Lower Chanceford township, and attended the old Chanceford school. He lived with his father on the old Stokes farm until after his marriage, when he bought his present farm of 112 acres, which had formerly belonged to his wife's mother, and here he has carried on general farming ever since.

On March 27, 1867 Mr. Wise married Annie Eliza McElwaine, born in Colerain township, in September, 1847. Mrs. Wise received her education in the common schools, and was brought up on a farm, her father, John McElwaine, being a farmer and lime burner. He died on his farm in Colerain township, Lancaster county, in 1850, at the age of fifty-one. His wife was Elizabeth Kerr, a descendant of the Kerrs who were the first settlers in Colerain and Bart townships. Mrs. Wise is a descendant of Scotch-Irish ancestors, the Kerrs as well as the McElwaines being of that nationality. Mrs. Wise is also a descendant of the Ross family, her grandmother McElwaine having been a Miss Ross before marriage, while her great-grandmother was a Chambers. Grandfather William Kerr was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and served three terms of enlistment, being twice a volunteer and once drafted.

Mr. and Mrs. Wise are attendants of the U. P. Church. In his political sympathies Mr. Wise was formerly a Democrat, but is now connected with the Republican party. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. James Wise, all of whom are deceased, Samuel H., Lizzie and Ellen.

FRANK LEHMAN, of the firm of F. Lehman & Co., contractors in concrete and artificial stone, was the pioneer in that business in York, and during the twenty-eight years that he has been engaged in it has been steadily raising the grade of the work from the comparatively rough state of the first efforts to the present high standard of perfection.

The parents of Mr. Lehman, Francis and Cecilia (Dull) Lehman, were natives of Baden, Germany, where they grew to maturity and married. In 1850 they embarked on a sailing vessel for America and were fourteen weeks on the water. After the vessel was within sight of land, it encountered a severe storm which drove it again back to the Fatherland. When the newcomers finally set foot on American soil, they located in the city of York and took their first dinner in George street on a store box, for Mr. Lehman was penniless when he landed in this country. He soon moved into the country, and for several years was engaged as a laborer in the vicinity of Emigsville. Later he returned to York and secured employment in the carpenter department of the York Car Shops, where he continued to work for the remainder of his life, thereby accumulating considerable property. His death occurred in 1882 at the age of sixty-five years, but his widow is still living, and is eighty years of age. They were members of St. Mary's Catholic Church. The children born to this couple were: Julia, widow of the late Antonio Frank, a resident of York; Rachel, wife of Lewis Dull, of Bellefonte, Centre county; Basil, a mechanic in Philadelphia; Frank; and Mary, who married Harry W. Sprosen, of Philadelphia.

Frank Lehman was born near Emigsville, Aug. 10, 1857. During his boyhood and youth he attended school, while his summers from the time he was eight until he was twenty-two were spent working in a brickyard. He then went into his present business, and was the first contractor in York to lay concrete paving. Some of the contracts which he has handled are those for the court house, post office, the Penn Park school buildings, and for a number of other structures, both public and private. The present firm of F. Lehman & Co. was formed in 1890, and confines itself to work in York and the outlying districts, taking contracts for granolithic walks, concrete reservoirs, cisterns, etc. The firm employs from eighteen to twenty men, and has its offices at No. 616 South George street.

On April 18, 1885, occurred the union of Frank Lehman and Miss Jennie Horn, daughter of George Horn, of York. There is one child living, Cecilia, while a son, Edward, died in March, 1903, aged eight years, eight months and three days. The family are members of St. Mary's Catholic Church, and are active in the work of the parish. Their home is a handsome residence at No. 616 South George Street. Mr. Lehman is a staunch Democrat, and takes an active part in party work, having served as a delegate to three county conventions. In his chosen line of business he has met with much success, and he is highly respected by his many friends and associates.

AARON BOYER resides in Dover township, where he was born Sept. 15, 1839, son of Solomon Boyer. He attended the township schools of Dover until about nineteen years of age and then learned the wood-working trade in York, which he pursued for about four years. In 1874 he married Susan Smith, born in Codorus township in 1853, daughter of George and Mary (Noss) Smith. Mrs. Boyer's father was born in North Codorus township, and when a young man learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for a number of years, later engaging in farming. He and his wife died in North Codorus township and are buried at Wolf's church in West Manchester township.

After his marriage Mr. Boyer located in Dover township, along the Dover road, where he remained three years, moving in 1877 to his present home, where he is still engaged in farming. He is the owner of two fine farms in Dover township—one of 110 acres and the old Boyer homestead, on which he resides, which consists of 115 acres. The buildings are in fine condition and the soil is very productive, making Mr. Boyer’s farms two of the best in the community.

To Mr. and Mrs. Boyer children as follows have been born: Halleck E., who married Ellen Linebaugh and lives in Jackson township along the Berlin road; Annie E., married to Edward Lauer and living in Dover township; and Minnie L., and John S., at home. The family are consistent members of Strayers Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Boyer has been a deacon. Mr. Boyer is a Democrat, and has very acceptably filled the offices of auditor and township clerk. He is known to be a man of strict integrity and reliability, and no one in Dover township stands higher in the public esteem.

JOHN KINARD is now living practically retired, making his home in Lower Windsor township. He is a native of York county, a member of one of its pioneer families, and is one of the loyal sons of the old Keystone State who went to the front in defense of the Union during the war of the Rebellion.

Mr. Kinard was born on the farm now owned by Samuel Leiphart, in Lower Windsor township, Feb. 5, 1836. His father, Henry Kinard, was likewise born and reared in the township, and there passed his entire life, being a farmer during his active career. He attained the venerable age of eighty-four years, and died at his old homestead, in Lower Windsor township. He was first a Whig and later a Republican in his political affiliations, and both he and his wife held membership in the Evangelical Church, being earnest, industrious and God-fearing persons, altogether worthy of the esteem in which they were so uniformly held. Henry Kinard married Elizabeth Shue, who was born at Red Lion, York county, dying in Lower Windsor township at the age of seventy-six years. In their family were nine children, namely: Michael and Henry, both of whom are deceased; Catherine, who became the wife of Joseph Dellinger and who also is deceased, as are also George, Eliza (Mrs. George Burg), William, and Simon; Magdalena, the wife of David Shultz, of Wrightsville; and John, who is the youngest of the children.

John Kinard early learned the lessons of hard work and personal responsibility, since he began to depend largely upon his own resources when a mere boy. The family was a large one, and such were the exigencies that each had to contribute his quota toward maintaining himself and assisting in the farm work. When but twelve years of age John Kinard was hired out as a teamster, never attending school and being denied all regular educational advantages. He has, however, in the course of a long, worthy and useful life, mastered the practical lessons offered by experience. In 1868 he began farming on the place of Michael Shenberger, receiving half of the returns from the produce raised under his supervision, and later he conducted the farm of Daniel Leber about three years, on the same plan, in the meanwhile carefully husbanding his resources, in order that he might secure a homestead of his own. In 1869 Mr. Kinard purchased a tract of forty acres in Lower Windsor township, and thereafter was actively engaged in its operation and improvement until 1889, when he purchased his present comfortable and attractive residence and retired to enjoy the fruits of his former toil and endeavor.

When the dark cloud of Civil war cast its pall over the nation Mr. Kinard tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting in 1862, in Company B, (Capt. Glesner), 130th P. V. I, commanded by Col. Zinn. Mr. Kinard continued in active service until the expiration of his seven-months’ term of enlistment, when he received his honorable discharge, having participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Antietam and various minor engagements. At Antietam he received a minie-ball wound in his right arm, and he was for a time confined to the hospital at York in his native county, having made the trip there on foot, in company with Adam Fitzkey, who had received a bullet wound in the forehead. Mr. Kinard has shown a continued interest in his old comrades, and is an appreciative member of Lient. R. W. Smith Post, No. 270, Grand Army of the Republic, at Wrightsville. In politics he has ever given a staunch allegiance to the Republican party, in whose ranks he has been found from practically the time of its organization.

In Lower Windsor township, in the year 1863, Mr. Kinard was united in marriage to Susan Campbell, who was a native of that towship and a daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Craley) Campbell. She proved a devoted wife and mother until summoned to her reward on the 4th of April, 1880. Of the twelve children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kinard two died in infancy, and of the others the following brief record is offered: Eliza is the wife of Titus Snively, of Yorkana, York county; Franklin, who married Angeline Leiphart, is a successful farmer of Lower Windsor township; Emma died at the age of twelve years; Charles, who married a Miss Gohn, is a farmer of Hellam township; Fanny is the wife of Noah Hoffman, of Lower Windsor township; Daniel died while young; William, who married a Miss Stricker, is a farmer of Springettsbury township; Elmer died at the age of two years; John, who married a Miss Crumling, is likewise a farmer of Springettsbury township; Helen died at the age of six years.

CORNELIUS S. SNYDER, of the firm of Kohler-Snyder Cigar Company, manufacturers of high-grade cigars at Yoe and other points in York county, is recognized as one of the progressive young business men of his native county, while he has in all respects upheld the prestige of the name which he bears and which has been long and prominently identified with the history of this favored section of the Keystone State.

Mr. Snyder was born in the borough of Yoe, York county, Jan. 1, 1874, son of Aaron Snyder. He secured his education in the public schools and in a well-ordered summer school maintained at Dallastown, this county. When about eighteen years of age he entered upon an apprenticeship at the factory of the Kohler Cigar Company, at Yoe, where he became an expert workman and a competent judge of stock, also learning all details of the practical business, including the packing of cigars. In 1896 he became associated with Messrs. George A. and Adam W. Kohler in the same line, under the firm name of the Kohler-Snyder Cigar Company, with headquarters in the borough of Yoe. In 1898 A. W. Kohler retired from the concern, and in 1900 G. A. Kohler also withdrew, Mr. Snyder assuming entire control in the latter year, since which time he has individually carried forward the enterprise, which has grown to be one of wide scope, its trade extending into divers States of the Union. The business is still conducted under the title of the Kohler-Snyder Cigar Company, and aside from the large and well equipped plant at Yoe, about ten branch factories are maintained in York county, a large quantity of the best local product of tobacco being utilized in these establishments. An idea of the extensive scope of the business may be gained when it is stated that in the main factory, at Yoe, a corps of about forty-five employees is retained and kept busy in the manufacture of excellent grades of cigars, which are shipped throughout the Union. Mr. Snyder is an alert, reliable and discriminating young business man, as is clearly indicated by the character of the thriving enterprise with which he is thus prominently identified. He is also a public-spirited citizen, loyal to all civic duties and responsibilities. He is a stanch adherent of the Republican party, and has served as a member of the borough council of Yoe, and is a school director of this borough. He has also been a member of the election board of the township. Both he and his wife are devoted members of the United Brethren Church, in which he is a trustee, being active in all departments of the church work.

On June 1, 1892, Mr. Snyder was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Lehman, who was born and reared in Springfield township, York county, a daughter of Jacob Lehman, a prominent and influential resident of that section. To Mr. and Mrs. Snyder have been born five children, of whom Aaron Winfield and another died in infancy, being laid to rest in the cemetery at Yoe, as was also May, the fourth in order of birth, who died at the age of eight months. The two surviving children are: Curwin Arthur and Salada F.

Aaron Snyder, father of the immediate subject of this review, was born in Hopewell township, York county, in 1818, and was a son of Philip Snyder, who was likewise a native of the county and had two sisters and five brothers; the names of the brothers were: Jacob, Michael, John, George and Abraham. Philip Snyder was numbered among the very early settlers in Hopewell township, where he was a man of influence and prominence, having been a successful school-teacher in the pioneer days and having also served for a number of years as justice of the peace; in addition to farming, he did a considerable amount of excellent work as a surveyor. He married Eva Staley, a representative of another of the old families of York county, and both passed the remainder of their lives in Hopewell township, where they were laid to rest many years ago. Of their children is entered the following brief record: Elizabeth died in Yoe, York county; Aaron was the father of Cornelius S.; Susan, wife of a Mr. Sheaffer, died in Hopewell township; Mary, wife of a Mr. Reiker, died in Chanceford township; Joseph died in Hopewell township; Kate in Enon, Ohio; Philip in York township; William in Hopewell township; Lydia, wife of a Mr. Shenberger, died in Hopewell township; Annie, wife of a Mr. Gibson, died in Yoe; and Sallie, wife of a Mr. Reiker, resides near Stewartstown, York county.

After receiving a common school education Aaron Snyder learned the blacksmith's trade in Chanceford township, and after the completion of his apprenticeship removed to Florin, Lancaster county, where he was engaged in the work of his trade for a number of years. He then returned to York county and located near Springvale, Windsor township, where he was actively engaged in business for the long period of forty years, at the expiration of which, in 1875, he became a resident of the present borough of Yoe. Here he operated a sawmill for a few years and then retired from active labor, continuing to reside in Yoe until his death, in 1896, and being buried in the cemetery of that borough. He was a man of sterling character and ever commanded the esteem and confidence of all who knew him. In politics he was originally a Whig and later a Republican, and his religious faith was that of the Evangelical Church, of which he was a devoted member.

Aaron Snyder was twice married, his first union having been with Catherine Yoe, a member of the well-known family in whose honor the borough of Yoe was named. She was born and reared in Windsor township, and died when comparatively a young woman. Following is a brief record concerning her children: George married Rebecca Hartman and they reside in Yoe. Lydia died unmarried. Elias married Anna Mary Snyder and they reside in Yoe. Leah is the wife of Abraham S. Strayer, of Yoe. Moses first married Catherine Sechrist, daughter of Harry and Mary (Yoe) Sechrist, and the only child of this marriage is Mrs. Emma L. Slenker, of Yoe. After the death of his first wife Moses Snyder married Mary Ann, daughter of Harry and Elizabeth (Ebersole) Detrich, and they still reside in Yoe, having four children. It may further be said that Moses Snyder was practically the founder of the borough of Yoe, erecting the first house in the village and laboring with constant zeal for the development and upbuilding of the borough. He has ever been foremost in the promotion of all worthy enterprises and causes, and is a prominent and valued member of the United Brethren Church, in which he is a local preacher. In every respect he is one of Yoe's most honored and influential citizens, having a beautiful modern residence and being also engaged in the cigar business. Aaron Y., the next of the children of Aaron and Catherine (Yoe) Snyder, married Elizabeth Woods and they reside in Wrightsville, York county. William H., who married Catherine Woods, is likewise a resident of that town.

For his second wife Aaron Snyder chose Susan, the daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Spotts) Snyder. She was born in Windsor township and her death occurred in Yoe, in 1894. She is survived by four children, namely: John W., who married Sarah Grim, resides at Dallastown, York county; Alice is the wife of John Bortner, of that place; Frank P. married Leah Horn and they reside in Yoe; and Cornelius S.

GEORGE H. WHITELEY, vice-president and superintendent of the Dentists' Supply Company, is the head of the manufacturing department of one of the most prominent industries of York. His birth occurred at Camden, N. J., Oct. 23, 1857.

Mr. Whiteley's ancestors came from the North of Ireland about 1840, and settled in Philadelphia, where his father became a well-known business man. He married Jane Fox, also of Irish descent, who became the mother of twelve children, seven of whom are deceased. The survivors are: Jane, the wife of James D. Finley, a flour and feed dealer of Philadelphia; Minerva, the wife of Albert F. Clark, a book publisher of Philadelphia; Ellen; Frank, connected with the dental works in York; and George H.

George H. Whiteley was educated in the schools of Camden, N. J., and Philadelphia, and after leaving school went to Minnesota, where he kept a store for four years. Returning to the East, he became bookkeeper and salesman in a manufacturing concern in West Chester, Pa., where he remained five years, after which he removed to Denver, Colo. There he engaged in the stationery and printing business and remained two years. Again returning to the East, Mr. Whiteley located in Philadelphia, where for a time he was a manufacturer of dental supplies, later going to Wilmington, Del., and becoming a stockholder in and superintendent of the Wilmington Dental Manufacturing Company. In 1869 Mr. Whiteley located in New York and engaged with the Consolidated Dental Manufacturing Company, in which he was a stockholder, but shortly withdrew from that firm, and, with three friends, organized the Dentists' Supply Company, with the main office in New York City. They established their plant in York, where the business has grown so that the force has increased from twenty-five to three hundred employees, manufacturing among other articles about four thousand sets of porcelain teeth daily. The trade covers the civilized world, the firm shipping its goods to South America, Africa, China, Japan, Russia and other distant countries.

Mr. Whiteley was married April 29, 1884, to Ida V. Osborne, daughter of Joseph H. Osborne, a retired farmer of West Chester, Pa. Two sons were born to this union: George H., Jr., who is attending school at Lawrenceville, N. J., and J. Osborne, of the York Collegiate Institute (class of 1906). Mr. Whiteley is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of York. In politics he is a Republican, and, in all the affairs of life, is an affable, liberal-minded gentleman.

SAMUEL SMITH ZELLERS of Hopewell township, York county, was born Oct. 14, 1849, on the homestead in Hopewell township, son of Levi and Lavina (Lucky) Zellers. It was on his father's farm that he received his agricultural training, receiving his education until he was nineteen years of age in the local schools and at the Stewartstown Academy. Among his early teachers he recalls with kind recollections Abel Kirkwood, Morrison Fulton, Richard Patterson and Henry Gabel, and later, Asa Anderson and Ada Ebaugh, some of whom have happy homes of their own, some have passed out into the greater world of affairs and doubtless some have crossed the dark river.

The early work of Samuel S. Zellers was on the homestead farm, where industry was required of the sons and daughters. No modern machinery was then in use, and the grain was cut with a cradle and the grass with the old fashioned scythe; but the training strengthened the boy's muscles, so that by the age of fifteen he was able to perform the duties of a full hand in the harvest field. He remained with his father until his brother William assumed the management of the home farm and the father moved to Stewartstown, when he accompanied him there and spent a year as clerk in the store of William Hartman. After the death of the mother the father returned to the homestead and for the following five years Samuel worked as a farm hand by the month, when he married and located on the tract near Stewartstown which is owned by William Gembill. There he resided for eleven years and then bought his present excellent, well-located farm of 144 acres, where he has since conducted general farming.

In 1883 Mr. Zellers was married to Anna Mary Duncan, born in Hopewell township, whose father was William Duncan and whose mother before marriage was a Miss Wiley. Mr. and Mrs. Zellers have had these children: William Levi, and an unnamed babe, both of whom died in infancy; Myrtle Amanda and Samuel Carlisle, living at home; Mayfield: Everett Duncan; Wiley Free; Allan Smith; and John, who died in infancy.

SAMUEL H. SMITH, of Lower Chanceford township, has been identified with its agricultural interests, and with its business affairs to a very large extent. Old deeds held by Mr. Smith show that the original farm land, on part of which he now resides, was taken up by James Evans and transferred to his son and the widow Mary Smith, who it is supposed was the daughter of James Evans. The place consisted of about 430 acres, of which the widow received half which is the part now owned by Mr. Smith. The property is still known as Sweet Spring farm, and was entered in the name of James Evans March 3, 1767: by a later deed, dated Jan. 10, 1769, it is found that James Evans deeded the tract to Robert Smith, who, it is supposed, was a grandson of James Evans and a son of Mary Smith. Robert Smith deeded this tract of land to his sons, Robert and James Leper Smith, on Feb. 14, 1823. The first Robert Smith had married Mary Leper, and his son James had for his middle name Leper, his mother's maiden name. The two sons, Robert and James Leper Smith, were bachelors and divided the tract between themselves.

Robert Smith reared his nephew Robert Smith (the father of Samuel H.), the son of his sister Jennie, from the age of four years, and deeded his share of the property to him. Jennie Smith married James Hume Smith, and after their marriage they located in Upper Chanceford township, on the farm now owned by Jesse Runkle, where Mr. Smith died. Mrs. Smith died on the James Leper Smith part of the old Smith farm, in 1873, being over eighty years old at the time of her death. They were devout Presbyterians. Mr. Smith was a captain in the Revolutionary war. They had the following children: (1) Samuel Hume married Louisa Clarkson, a daughter of Rev. Andrew Clarkson (the first preacher at the Guinston Church), and died on his farm near Stewartstown, which is now owned by Henry Kerns; he was buried in Chanceford Church cemetery. He was a minister of the Presbyterian faith, having charges at Center, Stewartstown and Round Hill, and each church has a memorial window for him. (2) John married Tabitha Collins, and settled on the James Leper Smith half of the farm, on which he died. (3) Mary died in youth. (4) Ann Eliza married Benjamin Manifold, and died in Hopewell township. (5) Sarah Martha died unmarried. (6) Margaret lives in Philadelphia. (7) Robert was the father of Samuel H. Smith.

Robert Smith was born on the grandfather's farm in Upper Chanceford township, Dec. 25, 1820, and his early education was received in the subscription schools and in the public schools, this being supplemented by a course at the local academies. While still a young man he commenced teaching in the Manifold school, in what is now East Hopewell township. On Nov. 16, 1841, Mr. Smith married Sarah Ross Manifold, an aunt of Sheriff Samuel M. Manifold, and she was born in Hopewell (now East Hopewell) township July 1, 1821. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Smith located on the homestead now occupied by Samuel H. Smith, and there he continued farming operations until his death. He and his wife were members of the Chanceford Presbyterian Church from an early date, Mrs. Smith’s father being an elder many years in the Round Hill Presbyterian Church in Hopewell township. In politics Robert Smith was a Whig, and later a Republican, and he was a public-spirited and useful citizen. Benevolent to a great extent, he gave largely to the church, while the amount of his private charities will never be known. His home life was ideal, and much of his time was spent with his children or in reading. In his death Chanceford township lost a good man, and one whose place it will be hard to fill. His death occurred at his home, on Nov. 8, 1888, while his worthy wife passed away Feb. 14, 1882, and they were both interred in the Chanceford Church cemetery.

To Robert and Sarah R. Smith the following children were born: (1) Robert Henry, born Dec. 1, 1845, attended the public schools, graduated at Lafayette College with the class of 1867, read law in Baltimore under Sebastian Brown, was admitted to the Bar, and practiced in Baltimore. He married Helen Alfred. (2) James Hume, born April 3, 1847, received a public-school education, graduated from Lafayette College with the class of 1869, and taught school a few years. He was then the manager of a branch house in Chicago for Ziegler & McCarry (Philadelphia publishers), and was thus engaged during the great Chicago fire. While in Springfield, Ill., he married Miss Annie Milligan, of Philadelphia. He engaged in the grain business in Baltimore, Md., and for three years was president of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce. He died Sept. 5, 1904. (3) Lizzie T., born Jan. 27, 1850, resides with Samuel H. (4) Samuel H. is mentioned below. (5) J. Charles, born Feb. 23, 1860, was educated in the public schools and the York Collegiate Institute, was a graduate in pharmacy, and was in the drug business for many years in Baltimore, Md., where he died Feb. 9, 1895.

Samuel H. Smith was born on the homestead Feb. 25, 1857, attended the public schools of Lower Chanceford township until sixteen years of age and then spent two years at the York Collegiate Institute. At this time he took charge of the family homestead, which he inherited from his father and which he has since operated successfully in conjunction with other agricultural property which he owns, one other farm in particular consisting of 118 acres.

Mr. Smith's business interests are many and large, he being the owner of much bank stock and a director in the First National Bank of Stewartstown. He is also a stockholder in a lumber company, has large holdings in a furniture company, holds securities in a water company and owns stock in the Stewartstown railroad. In his political views Mr. Smith is a stanch Republican, and his first Presidential vote was cast for Garfield. In his religious views Mr. Smith is a Presbyterian, having united with the Chanceford Presbyterian Church in 1873, and since that year has been actively and continuously engaged in religious work, especially of the Sabbath-school and the Christian Endeavor Society.

Mr. Smith’s marriage, which occurred Dec. 16, 1891, was to Miss Rachel Jordan, of Trump, Baltimore Co., Md. Mrs. Smith’s father, Benjamin F. Jordan, was a farmer of that county, where he died in 1903 at the advanced age of eighty-three years. Mrs. Smith’s mother, whose maiden name was Julia Anderson, is also deceased, having passed away on Feb. 16, 1886, at the age of fifty-nine years. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Smith: Juliet Elizabeth, born Oct. 24, 1892; Sarah Ross, born Jan. 25, 1896; Robert, born Aug. 13, 1901, and Margaret J., born April 5, 1905. Mr. Smith may be justly regarded as an important citizen of his section of the county, being honorable and trustworthy, intelligent and public-spirited.

WILLIAM J. SMITH, a contracting plasterer by trade, was born in York, Pa., May 20, 1849, son of Joseph Smith, a native of Germany.

Joseph Smith was a silk weaver by trade, a craft which he learned in Germany. He came to America while still a young man, first locating at Baltimore, but shortly afterward removing to Spring Garden township in York county, and securing employment on the old Baumgardner farm, owned by D. K. Stauffer of the city of York. He married Annie Herb, who died at York aged forty years, and his own death occurred at Hancock, N. Y. (where he is buried), at the age of fifty-six years. The children born to this couple were: Mary, Mrs. Reppinger, of Hancock, N. Y.; William J.; Amanda, wife of Irvin Hugo, who lived at Decatur, Ill., and later in Denver, Colo.; and Annie, who is the wife of Frederick First of York.

William J. Smith received his schooling at the German Catholic parish school in York, after which he was bound to a farmer in Spring Garden township for about a year, afterward spending some six months with his sister at Hancock, N. Y. After his return to York county he was employed by J. & D. Rawhauser for one season on a Susquehanna river boat. In 1867 he began to learn the plasterer’s trade with Jacob Shrader, of York, with whom he remained for four years, but in 1871 he started into business for himself. Being a careful, skilled workman, Mr. Smith has always found plenty of work, and his services have been in demand for much of the important construction work done in the past twenty-five years in York and vicinity. Among the important buildings on which he has worked may be mentioned: the new High school, a small college on Duke street, the German Catholic church, the Rupp building, the new Elk and the Keesy buildings, and many more too numerous to mention. He has also been employed on some of the finest residences in the city.

In 1868 Mr. Smith was married (first) to Mary Jane Schroder, who died in 1886 and was interred at Prospect Hill. Their children were: Millie, wife of Clayton Hess; Luther A., who married Mary Kraft; Mary, wife of Harry Ruby; Charles E., who married Mary Foose; and Samuel E., husband of Alma Kline-dinst. In the spring of 1889 Mr. Smith was married (second) to Mrs. Louise (Spahn) Roder, who died Jan. 8, 1899, and is buried in the Catholic cemetery at York. Two sons were born to this union, Alfred and Harry, the latter being deceased. The third marriage of Mr. Smith was to Catherine J. Moran, daughter of William and Mary (Moore) Moran, the latter of whom is a trained nurse at Girard College, Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have no children.

Mr. Smith owns a handsome residence at No. 146 Freys avenue, which he erected in 1874, and, in addition has other valuable city property. His time is entirely taken up with his contract work, and he gives employment to from ten to forty skilled hands according to the season. Mr. Smith is a Republican, but he has never consented to accept public office. For the past twelve years he has been an elder in Christ Lutheran Church. Few men are held in higher esteem in either private or business life.
WILSON ZENAS MACOMBER was born in the village of Coulson, York county, Sept. 27, 1848, son of Jonathan and Rachel (Drake) Macomber, the latter of whom was a lineal descendant of Sir Francis Drake, the famous English navigator and sea fighter. The first of the Drake family to come to the United States settled in New Jersey. Some of them moved to Bucks county, Pa., where they played an important part in the early history of that section. Many of the family are interred in one of Bucks county's oldest cemeteries, that at Spring City. The Macomber family have made their impress upon the history of county and State.

Dr. Zenas Macomber, the grandfather of W. Z. Macomber, served seven years in the Colonial army during the war of the Revolution, first as adjutant of Colonel Carter's command, from May, 1775, to January, 1776; then he joined a regiment of the Massachusetts line, with which he served two months. He was then transferred to Washington's foot guards, with whom he served until January, 1777, when he became one of the bodyguard of Gen. George Washington. He was a valiant soldier and participated in many of the memorable struggles of the Revolution. At the massacre of Paoli he was in the thick of the battle and received seventeen bayonet wounds. Dr. Zenas Macomber married a Miss Huff.

Wilson Zenas Macomber received his education in the public schools and at a normal school located in West Bangor. After leaving school he worked on a farm until November, 1864, when he enlisted in the 1st Potomac Home Brigade, afterward the 13th Maryland, and was honorably discharged from Company C, of that regiment, June 27, 1865. During his enlistment he participated in a number of encounters with the famous Gen. John S. Mosby in the valley of Virginia, and was in the final engagement at Appomattox, when Lee surrendered. After leaving the army he worked on a farm in Lancaster county until March, 1866, when he shipped as a landsman on board the ship "Constellation," U. S. N. He was transferred to the frigate "Susquehanna," and served in the South Atlantic squadron under Lieut.-Commander R. L. Law. He was transferred from the "Susquehanna" to the "New Hampshire," and was promoted to be quartermaster in the naval service, serving in that capacity on the "New Hampshire" until his discharge in September, 1868. He then settled in York county, and in 1869 engaged in contracting and building, a business he followed with success for several years. At the same time he interested himself in other business matters. In 1881 he engaged in the canning industry, which he continued until 1884, when he took up contracting and building. He then formed a co-partnership with J. Howard Stubbs, and for several years conducted a lumber and coal business under the firm name of Stubbs & Macomber. In 1897, with others, he conceived the idea of establishing an electric power plant in Delta, and assisted in the organization of the Delta Electric Power Company, being a member of its first board of directors and its first treasurer, the latter office still being held by him, as well as that of secretary and manager. For the past four years he has been president of the Delta Board of Trade and was one of the organizers of that body. That solid financial institution known as the People's National Bank of Delta was organized in 1892. Wilson Z. Macomber was one of its founders and a member of its first board of directors, serving as teller of the institution for two years. He is manager of the Bel Air Flour Mills, conducted under the firm name of W. Z. Macomber & Co.

While industrial and commercial affairs have taken much of his time Mr. Macomber has not been unmindful of his duties as a citizen, has held numerous township offices, and has served as delegate to State and county conventions of his party. In 1898 he was elected a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, and served on several important committees during the sessions of 1899 and 1900, among them being those of Military, Railroads and Banks. He is a past officer of the G. A. R., F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F.

On May 22, 1869, Wilson Z. Macomber and Harriet Messersmith, daughter of Michael and Eliza (Hartman) Messersmith, were united in marriage. The following children have been born to their union: George, who married Mattie York of Indiana, graduated from Shippensburg College and now holds the important position of superintendent of the Missouri Training school at Boonville, in that State; Frank, who graduated from the Western Maryland College, married Denney Cole, of Delaware, and now holds an important position at the School for the Feeble Minded, at Vineland, N. J.; Howard died at the age of twenty years; Clarence, a graduate of an institution of learning at Valparaiso, Ind., married Mable Roscoe, and now follows contracting and building in Seattle, Wash.; Marion S., a graduate of the Delta high school, is now his father's assistant at Bel Air, Md.; Emma is the wife of William B. Williams, an employee of the Pennsylvania Railway Company at Broad Street station, Philadelphia; Bertha is the wife of Prof. Justin Nelson, of New York.

The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Macomber are as follows: Emanuel A., superintendent of a division of the Philadelphia Traction Company; Lewis, a wholesale merchant of Philadelphia; Reuben, a prominent agriculturist of Indiana; James, with the Pennsylvania Steel Company, of Steelton; and Leah, the wife of William Gemmill, also of Steelton, Pennsylvania.

Seven children were born to Mr. Macomber's parents: W. Zenas, the eldest; Laura A., who married William Slawter, lives at West Chester, Pa.; Effie N., married to Harvey Montgomery, resides on the old Macomber homestead in Peach Bottom township; Mary M., married to John Herman, lives in Delta; and three deceased—John A., who lived to be twenty-one years of age; A. Clifton, who died when twenty-three years old; and one who died in infancy.

JACOB A. MAUL was born in 1864, in Dover township, near Big Mount, son of Peter and Sarah (Ailland) Maul. Jacob Maul, his grandfather, settled in York county and followed farming in Paradise township (formerly a part of Jackson), where he died at the age of sixty-five years. He was buried at Holtzschwamm church. Jacob Maul married Susan Martin, who died Nov. 17, 1854, and is buried beside her husband. The children born to them were: Leah, who married Daniel Grove, and resides in Hanover; Peter, the father of Jacob A.; Jacob (deceased), who married Eliza Stover and lived in Paradise township, where he followed farming; Nathaniel (deceased), who lived in the West, where he married; John, who married Catherine Flinchbaugh, and died in York, his widow still residing on King street, in that city; Sarah, wife of John March (both are deceased); Moses, who married Fianna Gross, and resides at York; Chestina, married to M. Lewis and living on Market street, York; and Daniel, who was killed in the Civil War.

Peter Maul, the father of Jacob A., was born in 1825, in Paradise township, and attended the pay schools of his native place. He learned the carpenter's trade when young, and engaged in that calling for eleven years, at the end of which period he removed to Dover township, where he purchased a farm of fifty-eight acres of fine land, situated in the southwestern part of the township. There he followed farming up to the time of his death, which occurred Jan. 29, 1891. He was buried in Paradise township. Mr. Maul married Miss Sarah Ailland, daughter of Samuel and Susan (Jacobs) Ailland, of Paradise township, and her death occurred in 1903, when she was buried beside her husband in the township named. The children born to this worthy couple were as follows: Susanna married D. W. Gochnour, and lives in Paradise township, where he follows farming and trucking; Elmira married S. B. Mummaert, and lives on the old homestead in Dover township; Flora B. married J. A. Hykes, and lives in Adams county, where he is a farmer; Jacob A. is the subject of this sketch; Joanna married E. M. Berry, and is living at York Springs, Adams county; Nancy married Howard King and died at Big Mount, being buried at East Berlin, Adams county; Peter died at the age of ten months, and is interred in Paradise township.

Jacob A. Maul received an excellent education, attending the common schools of Dover township, York county, and those of East Berlin, Adams county, and later graded schools at Dover borough and at Manchester, Md. Mr. Maul taught school in Dover, Paradise and Washington townships and achieved quite an enviable reputation as an educator. He then removed to West Manchester township, where he farmed three years, in 1889 locating in Dover, where he has a tract of land, comprising seventeen acres. Mr. Maul is also the fortunate owner of an excellent farm in Dover township, which he purchased in 1900, consisting of 100 acres. He devotes his time to agricultural pursuits and has been very successful in this line, acquiring a handsome competency. He is also engaged in the manufacture of brooms, during the winter months. Mr. Maul has a good residence, which he built shortly after locating in Dover, and his land is well cultivated and fruitful.
In the year 1885 Jacob A. Maul married Miss Susan Bentzel, daughter of John J. and Sarah (Harbold) Bentzel, of Dover township. Mrs. Maul has a fine home in Dover borough. To Mr. and Mrs. Maul the following children have been born: Sarah Ann, who died at the age of five years; John A., living with his aunt on the old homestead; and Robert Jacob, Lucy Elmera and Daniel Webster, all at home. Mr. Maul is a Democrat, and has served on the council and school board of Dover borough, being held in the highest esteem by all who have had dealings with him, whether along business, social or political lines.

FREDERICK W. GROTHE, of Carroll township, York county, is at the present time a resident of York. He was born in that city Jan. 23, 1865, son of Frederick Grothe.

The grandmother of Frederick W. came to America when eighty years of age, and died in York, her husband having passed away in Germany. Their children were: Henry, Charles, Frederick, Mary and Annie.

Frederick Grothe, father of Frederick W., was born near Wurtemberg, and emigrated to America at the age of fourteen years, engaging in railroad work, around Pittsburg. He settled in Springetsbury township, at a place called Possumtown, where he engaged in the horse business, later locating in York in the cattle trade. By his business ability and good management he became very wealthy, the last ten years of his life being spent in retirement. He died at the age of seventy-four years. He owned vast tracts of land in York, and had several farms in different parts of the county. In religion he was a Lutheran. He was a director of the Drovers & Mechanics Bank, being one of its first directors, assisting to found the institution, which is now one of the largest banking houses of York. He was three times married. His first wife was Mary Stallman, and after her death he married the mother of our subject, Christiana Swartz. They were the parents of the following children: Eddie, Charles, Frederick W., Hattie and Daisy. Mr. Grothe's third wife was Lillie Fisher, who died in April, 1901.

Frederick W. Grothe is the only living child of his parents, and he inherited a portion of his father's property. He attended school until sixteen years of age, and then assisted his father in his business operations. On Feb. 23, 1882, he married Ida S. Gotwalt, daughter of Albert and Julia (Horn) Gotwalt. After marriage Mr. Grothe spent thirteen years on his beautiful 158-acre farm in Carroll township, and in 1904 located in York, at No. 146 North George street. Since coming to the city he has engaged in the horse business, superintending his farm in Carroll township. Mr. Grothe is a very active business man, inheriting his father's ability in that particular to a marked degree. In religion he is a Lutheran. He is a member of the Heptasophs, No. 306; the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 324; the Union Fire Company, of York, and the Relief Association.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Grothe have been as follows: Frederick C., who married Katie Hake, resides in York, and has one child, Frederick A.; William A. died at the age of one year, four months and twenty-four days; Goldie May is attending the Professor Prowell Business school of York; and Roy A., Grover F. and Hattie V. are at school. Mr. Grothe keeps well abreast of the times, and may be justly regarded as a very important citizen of York, being honorable and trustworthy, capable and public-spirited.

OLIVER HAKE, of Fairview township, is a descendant of the old Hake family of York county, and was born in Manchester township, Feb. 25, 1849. Jacob Hake, the grandfather of Oliver, was a farmer of Manchester township, where he died. His children were: Jacob, John, Henry, Frederick, Daniel, Elias and Andrew C. Andrew C. Hake was born in Manchester township, where he received a common-school education. He engaged in farming and distilling in his native township, later moving to Fairview township, where he followed agricultural pursuits. There he died aged seventy-six years. He married Rebecca Isaac, of Bainbridge, and she died at the age of forty-five, the mother of these children: Oliver, Henry, Milton, Webster, John, Emmeline, Jane, Leah and Louisa.

Oliver Hake attended the schools of Manchester township until seventeen years of age and remained at home with his father until his twenty-ninth year, at which time he was married to Annie Hart, daughter of Michael Hart. She died shortly after marriage, at the age of twenty-eight years, leaving one child, Merle B., who died aged sixteen. Mr. Hake married (second) Mrs. Anna Mary Grove, the widow of Henry C. Grove, who was drowned in the dam at Lewisberry, Aug. 5, 1882, at the age of twenty-five years. Mr. and Mrs. Grove had two children: Wagner H., who graduated at Baltimore, March 12, 1900, is in Columbus, Ohio, where he is assistant secretary of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and married Alta Ruth Robinson; Clyde, who married Jennie Anderson, is farming in Fairview township. Mr. Hake is the owner of two fine farms in Fairview township, which compare favorably with any others in the locality. In politics a Republican, he is influential in township political affairs, and may often be found serving on the election board. In his religious views he is a Lutheran, of which church he is at present a trustee.

Before her first marriage Mrs. Hake’s name was Sutton, and her father, Rankin Sutton, came from an old and respected family of Fairview township. He was born May 8, 1823, and is still surviving, making his home on the old Sutton homestead in Fairview township, called Pinetown. He married Lydia Kneisley, a daughter of Anthony Kneisley, and they had these children: Sarah, Matilda, Annie M., John R., Elwood, Hannah and Laura.

WILLARD B. JOHNSTON, dealer in hardware and contractor in excavating, sewer construction and gas and steamfitting, is not only one of the leading business men of Spring Grove, but is also a public-spirited citizen, and one of the efficient and influential Democrats of that locality. Mr. Johnston was born in Jefferson county, W. Va., Aug. 17, 1860, son of James M. and Catherine (Abel) Johnston. The accurate knowledge regarding the family history is somewhat meager, although it is known that the paternal grandfather was David Johnston, who was born in Virginia and who for a number of years engaged very successfully as a manufacturer of woolen goods. David Johnston was a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Methodist Church. He was three times married, and was a man of much influence in his community. The maternal grandfather was Henry Abel, who descended from an old and aristocratic Virginia family.

Willard B. Johnston received an excellent education, first at the district school, and later at private school. He then learned the trade of a plumber with Hantz & Kidd, of York, Pa. In 1888, Mr. Johnston located at Spring Grove, Pa., and embarked in a plumbing business carrying a large stock of plumbers’ supplies, tinware, stoves and hardware; he still conducts this store, although he has branched out in other directions. He has become a leader in the work of excavating for the construction of sewers, the laying of water mains and other similar lines. In fact, he holds nearly all the contracts in Spring Grove and neighboring towns, and during the season, gives employment to a large force of men. Mr. Johnston’s business is steadily growing, and he has established a very enviable reputation for honesty of dealing and thoroughness of work, being individually respected because of his energy, capability and reliability.

Mr. Johnston was married in 1888, to Miss Laura Loucks, of York, Pa., a daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Slagle) Loucks. In politics, Mr. Johnston is a Democrat, and has been honored with several important offices within the gift of the people. In 1899, he was elected chief burgess of the borough of Spring Grove for a term of three years, and was a member of the city council for a like period. In addition to his other interests, he is a stockholder in the First National Bank, and vice-president of the Friendship Hose Co. He has been identified with many of the changes which have taken place for the better in his vicinity, and certainly deserves honorable mention with other contemporaries.

GEORGE SPAHR, owner of the old Brinton farm of 126 acres, probably the oldest in Fishing Creek Valley, Newberry township, is a self-made man, and was born in 1850, in Fairview township, son of John and Elizabeth (Rudy) Spahr, and grandson of Adam Spahr. The first of this family to settle in America came from Germany in the early part of the seventeenth century. There were two brothers, one of whom had a family of nineteen children and the other, twenty-two children. John Spahr was born in Dover township, where he learned the blacksmith’s trade and engaged in it for about thirty years. He located in Fairview township and bought a small tract of twenty-five acres of land, where he farmed in conjunction with his trade. He then spent one year in Newberry township, after which he returned to Fairview township, and for four years worked the Shuler farm. He then settled on the Doll farm in Conewago township, remaining there one year, after which he returned to Newberry township and bought seventy-seven acres of land, upon which he remained for thirteen years. He then bought a small tract of twenty-two acres, upon which he erected all of the buildings, and there he died at the age of eighty-four years. Mr. Spahr married Elizabeth Rudy, a daughter of George W. and Mary (Miller) Rudy, and she died in 1898, she and her husband being buried at the Paddleton church in Newberry township. Mr. Spahr was a man of popularity and sterling worth of character. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Spahr are as follows: William died at the age of twenty-one years; Annie, living at York, married Milton Reigart, deceased; Lena married Josiah Taylor, and lives at Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county; Mary died unmarried at the age of forty-four years; Ellen, who died in May, 1902, married Benjamin Beach; George; and David, who is living in the old home in Newberry township, married Ella Woods.

George Spahr received his education in the public schools of Conewago and Newberry townships, attending school until about eighteen years of age, when he commenced work as a day laborer. For about ten years he continued in this line, with the cultivation of tobacco, and then bought a small tract of about twenty acres of land, erecting all of the buildings thereon. In the year 1877 Mr. Spahr married Jane Bower, the estimable daughter of Henry and Mary (Keister) Bower, and after marriage continued tobacco farming and trucking for a short time in Newberry township, then locating on John K. Willi's farm in Fairview township, where he remained for ten years. He then bought the old Brinton farm of 126 acres, the first in the Fishing Creek Valley, Newberry township. Mr. Spahr made many improvements on the farm, and the fruit of his labors is shown by his present substantial financial condition. Mr. Spahr is fond of good literature, spending much of his spare time in reading and finding much of his recreation and enjoyment in his library. Mr. Spahr is a self-made man. He is enterprising and full of energy, and his success in life has been brought about wholly through his own efforts. He is a member of the Democratic party and takes a lively interest in its success, although he has never sought public office, deciding that his farming interests demand the bulk of his time and attention. He is one of the leading citizens of Newberry township, honest and upright, and always ready to do his part in promoting public improvements and in advancing the interests of the school and church.

The children born to George Spahr and his wife were: Susie, who married John Stoner, is living in Newberry township; William, residing upon and assisting in the operation of his father's farm, married Carrie Shelley, daughter of Edward Shelley, and they have two children, Ruth and Leona; Harry died in Steelton in 1900, and is buried at Paddleton church; Lizzie married Sammel Hartman and lives at Yocumtown, York county; and Clara, Daisy, Nora, John and Howard, all reside at home unmarried. The Spahr family is well known throughout York county, and is very highly respected.

HENRY HOFF was born Oct. 19, 1857, in North Codorus township, York county, son of Henry and Rosanna (Emig) Hoff, and he is now engaged in contracting and building in York.

Henry Hoff, grandfather of our subject, was a farmer and distiller of North Codorus township, owning a large tract of land in that township, and farming it until his death. He was buried at Ziegler's church. The children born to him and his wife were: Adam, of Seven Valley; John, of North Codorus township; Lydia, the wife of Isaac Denns, of Penn township; Caroline, the wife of Jesse Pick, who resides near Hanover, York county; Mrs. Harry Raper; Mrs. B. Spangler, ofJefferson borough; and Henry (2).

Henry Hoff (2), son of Henry, was born Jan. 14, 1829, in North Codorus township, where he received a common school education and married Rosanna, daughter of John Emig; she was born Jan. 26, 1826. After his marriage Mr. Hoff commenced to farm on the old homestead, also carrying on distilling. He built a fine brick house and barn, where he lived until 1904, when he retired from active work, since which time he has resided in a small home adjoining his farm. He is a member of Ziegler's Lutheran Church, having served as a deacon, and in its work he has always been active and influential. In politics he is a Democrat and served his party as township treasurer for fifty years. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoff were as follows: Isabella, the wife of Henry Schaffer, of York; Susanna, who married Nathan Gladfelter, a cigar-maker of Seven Valley; Levi and Rosa, who died young; and Henry (3).

Henry Hoff (3) attended Ziegler's school in North Codorus township until he was nineteen years of age, and, after receiving his education, assisted his father for a short time on the farm. He then learned the cabinet-maker's trade, at which he worked for four years, and later, for a period of fourteen years, was employed as a house carpenter by Menough & Co., of York. He was engaged at pattern making for three and one-half years with E. G. Smyser, after which he clerked for one year, in 1899, engaging in the building and contracting business, since which year he has been very successful. Mr. Hoff employs thirty-two carpenters and a total force of about 100 men. Some of the finest buildings of York have been erected under Mr. Hoff's contracts, and he is considered a first-class business man in every respect.

On May 24, 1877, Mr. Hoff was united in marriage with Alphreatta Yingling, daughter of Frederick and Rebecca (Zinn) Yingling. Mr. Hoff is a prominent Democrat and was water assessor of the Ninth ward for six years. He also served on the select council for four years. In his religious views he is connected with Ziegler's Lutheran Church. Mr. and Mrs. Hoff reside in a fine residence at No. 119 South Penn street, York.

JOHN NEELY, who owns and conducts a fine fifty-acre farm, and engages extensively in stock raising in Lower Chanceford township, was born near Gordonville, Lancaster county, May 4, 1844, son of William and Jane (Frew) Neely.

William Neely, grandfather of John, died in County Derry, Ireland, where he had owned a farm and was largely engaged in raising flax. His son William was born in County Derry, where he received a common-school education and was reared to an agricultural life. He was of the Irish gentry, and much of their time was spent in hunting foxes behind the hounds. William Neely married Jane Frew, daughter of James Frew, who came to America at the time Mr. Neely sent for his family. James Frew died in Philadelphia, where some of his family settled, in 1848, well-advanced in years. His wife had died in Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Frew were the parents of the following children: Jane, mother of John Neely; Susan, who married John Burns, and died in Philadelphia; Mary, who married John Campbell, and located in Illinois, where she died; Matilda, who married Richard Whiteside and lived and died in Philadelphia; John, who married a lady of Baltimore, Md., and settled in Philadelphia, where he died; and Thomas, who also died in Philadelphia.

In 1838 William Neely emigrated to the United States and the following year brought his family and that of Mr. Frew to this country. The voyage was a long and dangerous one, the sailing vessel having sprung a leak in a storm, and all the male passengers had to take their turn at the pumps, while those not on duty were sent below and the hatches nailed down. The voyage was completed, however, and Mr. Neely bought land in Lancaster county, near Gordonville, where he engaged in stock dealing. Soon after he sold his property and bought a larger tract near Strasburg and many years before the railroad was built drove over the mountains the stock he had purchased in the West. Mr. Neely followed that occupation until old age incapacitated him, and was a thorough cattleman, his name being known throughout the county. After retiring from active life Mr. Neely sold his place and lived on a farm of 150 acres in Cole- rain township, which he sold eleven years later, and removed to a location near Oxford, Chester county, remaining there for three years. He sold the farm named, and, with his wife, went to live with his son, Dr. S. F. Neely, of Leavenworth, Kans., but returned to Pennsylvania after several years to reside with his son, Thomas, at Centerville, York county; at Thomas' death he returned to Dr. Neely and lived with him eleven years. He then again returned to Pennsylvania, and up to the time of his death lived with John Neely, paying several visits, however, to Dr. Neely, during his stay there. He died at the home of John Neely, Sept. 16, 1897, being one hundred years, six months and three days old. Mr. Neely was of fine physique and in full possession of all his faculties at the time of his death. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics he was a Democrat. Mrs. Neely died Feb. 19, 1893, aged eighty-six years, the mother of the following children, the first five of whom were born in Ireland: Mary, who married Samuel Lyons, living in Philadelphia at the age of seventy-four years; Samuel, who died unmarried; Margaret, who married John Gable of Philadelphia; Thomas, deceased, who married Hannah Colvin; Eliza, who died at the age of twelve years; Shaw Frew, a practicing physician of Leavenworth, Kans., who married Martha Murphy, daughter of Col. George Murphy, of Chanceford township; John; William, who died in Philadelphia at the age of twenty-one years; Ella, who married (first) George Neely, of Leavenworth, Kans., where he died, and (second) David Thomas, and now resides in Chicago.

John Neely was educated in different township schools, but his learning was principally obtained in the schools of Colerain township. Mr. Neely located in Centerville, Lower Chanceford township, where he learned butchering with his brother, Thomas, and this vocation he followed for twelve years, nine of which were spent in Airville, Pa. Mr. Neely was first married to Lizzie Johnson, June 15, 1870, and she died Sept. 19, 1888. Three sons were born to this union as follows: William N., born Sept. 30, 1871, died in infancy; Walter C., born April 12, 1873, married in 1899, in Philadelphia, Della B. Martin; and Robert E., born Aug. 4, 1875, married in 1903, Nellie Bunting, and they live in Lower Chanceford township. Mr. Neely's second marriage, Feb. 10, 1892, in Lower Chanceford township, was to Mary B. Snyder, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth (Taylor) Snyder, and she was reared on the Peach Bottom township farm. She became the mother of the following children: Harry Campbell, born April 10, 1893; Marion E., born July 6, 1896, and Pauline E., born Jan. 1, 1899, died Jan. 10, 1899.

After leaving the butchering business Mr. Neely embarked in stock-raising, in which he has since continued with eminent success. In the year 1888, he bought his present well-cultivated farm of fifty acres in Lower Chanceford township, and since he has become the owner has made many improvements. Mr. Neely is one of the grand old men of Lower Chanceford township. Of an excellent physique, and dignified manner, he would attract attention in any gathering, while his social qualities win friends for him wherever he goes. Mr. Neely is a self-made man and his success tells its own lesson of the value of perseverance and industry.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN ANSTINE, of Lower Windsor township, was born Oct. 15, 1855, on the farm now owned by Isaac Hinckle, on the Wrightsville pike, in Lower Windsor township.

John Anstine, his father, was likewise born and reared in that township, the year of his nativity being 1814. He learned the carpenter's trade in his youth, engaging in it for a number of years after leaving the farm and finally again turning his attention to agricultural pursuits, with which he continued to be identified during the remainder of his life, owning a well improved farm in Lower Windsor township, where he died April 5, 1877. He was a Whig in politics until the organization of the Republican party, after which he ever remained an unserving advocate of the principles of the latter. He also had a loyal concern in local affairs and held various minor offices, including that of township supervisor. He was a sincere, earnest and consistent member of the Evangelical Church, in which he was an active worker, having served as class-leader and in other church offices. His wife, who was a devoted companion and helpmate during the long years of their ideal wedded life, died in 1905, aged eighty-five. She was held in affectionate regard in the community in which so many years of her life had been passed, while she, likewise, was a lifelong and zealous member of the Evangelical Church. Her maiden name was Eliza Kise, and she also was born and reared in Lower Windsor township, being a representative of one of the old and honored pioneer families of the county.

Of the children of John and Eliza (Kise) Anstine we have the following record: Mary Ann is the wife of Emanuel Detwiler, of Red Lion, York county; Catherine is the wife of William Haines, a farmer of Lower Windsor township; Eliza is the wife of Philip Heim, of East Prospect; Henry, who is a resident of Yoe, York county, married Rebecca Haines; Leah is the wife of Barton Dellinger, of Lower Windsor township; Susan is the wife of Samuel B. Ruby, of the same township; Jane, who became the wife of Benjamin Ruby, is deceased; William F. was the eighth child; Wesley died at the age of twelve years; Henrietta died in childhood; Ida became the wife of George Heindle and is now deceased; and George, who married Elizabeth Helder, is a resident of East Prospect.

William F. Anstine was reared on the paternal farm and attended what was known as the Kline school, in Lower Windsor township, until he had attained the age of sixteen years, though he usually was in school only during the winter terms, as his services during the summer seasons were demanded in connection with the work of the homestead. He was twenty-two years of age at the time of his father’s death, and thereafter had charge of the homestead farm for one year. At various times, both before and after this period, he worked by the day on farms in the county, boarding one year with his brother-in-law, S. B. Ruby. Later he remained for a year in the home of another brother-in-law, Barton Dellinger. In the meanwhile he had become a capable carpenter and joiner, having had a practical apprenticeship under the direction of his father and others. He was married in 1879 and thereafter followed his trade for several years, after which he rented from Daniel Leber the sixty-three-acre farm which he now owns, working the same on shares for the ensuing eight years and then (after the death of Mr. Leber) purchasing the property. He has made many improvements on the place, which is one of the attractive and valuable properties of the township, while the owner has brought much of enterprise, energy and discrimination to bear on the various departments of the farm work; neither has he been denied a due reward of his efforts, being recognized as one of the reliable, thrifty and progressive farmers of York county. He gives considerable attention to the raising of tobacco, and has the best of facilities for maturing and otherwise caring for the crop, having erected a good tobacco cellar on his farm, while the large corn barn on the farm was also built by him. He is held in high regard in his community and takes a loyal interest in local affairs of a public nature, though he has never been an aspirant for office, the only incumbency of the sort which he has filled being that of tax collector of his township, in which capacity he served one term. In politics he is an uncompromising Republican, having followed in the footsteps of his honored father, who was a most loyal and enthusiastic advocate of the principles of the “grand old party.” Mr. Anstine was reared in the faith of the Evangelical Church, but is not formally identified with any religious body. He is affiliated with Winona Lodge, No. 944, I. O. O. F., at East Prospect.

In the city of York, on June 12, 1879, Rev. R. C. Philebar solemnized the marriage of Mr. Anstine to Laura Heindle, who was born and reared in Lower Windsor township, where her parents, John and Mary Ann (Fox) Heindle, still reside, her father being a representative farmer of that section. Mr. and Mrs. Anstine have eight children living, all of whom remain at the parental home except the eldest, their names being, in order of birth: Clayton, who resides in York, married to Mayme Mitzel; John, who remains on the home farm, married to Gertrude, daughter of Alexander Dietz, of Lower Windsor township; and Chester, Arrie, Charles, Mabel, Beulah and Ethner, who live at home and are numbered among the popular young people of the community. There was also an infant who died unnamed.

JOHN G. MILLER. Among the agriculturists of East Hopewell township is John G. Miller, whose farm of 119 acres is well situated and finely cultivated. He was born in the “City of Brotherly Love,” July 31, 1851, son of John and Barbara Miller, a full history of whom will be found elsewhere in the sketch of Lewis J. Miller.

Mr. Miller was reared in York county, his parents settling in the village of Gatchellville, Fawn township, after which they removed to East Hopewell township, on the old James Wallace place. Mr. Miller attended the township schools until twenty-one years of age, among his teachers being: John M. Gemmill, J. W. Wallace, W. N. McAlister and Andrew Collins. He was reared to farm pursuits, and remained at home until he was twenty-three years old, when he began on his own account, going to Lancaster county and working at twelve dollars per month. After two and one-half years he went to Minnesota to examine the country, but not finding conditions there to his liking returned to his home after a few months, working until his marriage as a day laborer. Mr. Miller’s marriage occurred Dec. 26, 1876, to Miss Dora Schumm, born in Maryland, daughter of John and Barbara (Wilhelm) Schumm. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Miller rented the property upon which they now reside for five years, and then Mr. Miller cropped for a time, in 1891 purchasing the farm from his father-in-law. Here he has since remained, successfully engaged in farming and stock-raising. He is a member of Mt. Pleasant Lutheran Church, where he has filled various offices. He is a Democrat in political faith.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller have had the following children: Mary B., Mrs. Lewis Mitzel, of Windsor township; Annie M., Mrs. William F. Logan, of Cross Roads borough; Aaron Franklin, Lizzie, John Andrew, Emma J., Rebecca S. and Celia, all at home.

WILLIAM J. POSEY is a member of one of York county’s old and respected families, which has many representatives scattered over the Union who are proud to bear its name. The record of this old family antedates the Revolutionary war, and Grandmother Posey, whose maiden name was Rachel Peek, and who lived until 1868, could recall many reminiscences of General Washington and the Continental army. She could recall that memorable winter in Valley Forge, and how she and her mother knit stockings for the soldiers; how her father gave them his horses and how the women worked all day preparing bread and butter for the army, while Grandmother Posey did the distributing. Her father was associated with General Washington and spent much time at his headquarters, while her husband, Micajah Posey, was a soldier in his army. The Brandywine battlefield was not far from the Posey home, and Grandfather Posey, fighting under Colonel Bull, was wounded and taken prisoner, and, after enduring many hardships (being confined in prisonships at Philadelphia), was exchanged. Micajah Posey died March 30, 1828, when nearly eighty-seven years of age. Grandmother Rachel Posey died at Valley Forge Aug. 14, 1868, at the remarkable age of 102 years. In many other ways she was a notable character. She was the mother of ten children and the grandmother of eighty-one; had 119 great-grandchildren; thirty-three great-great-grandchildren and five great-great-great-grandchildren. Gray-haired grandchildren and great-grandchildren attended her funeral, representatives of all generations in the family being at her grave. At the time of her death the New York Post gave a history of her life. Respected and loved by all, she was known as Grandmother Posey, and her children for six generations have risen to call her blessed.

To Micajah and Rachel Posey the following children were born: Jesse, who died at Reading, Pa.; Isaac, who went West when a young man, all trace of him being lost; Thomas; William, who died at Pine Hill, Lancaster county, at the age of seventy-nine years, the father of two sons and two daughters; Elizabeth, who married Edward Pierce, and died near Churchtown, Chester county; Micajah, the father of William J.; and four children whose names are not known.

Micajah Posey was born May 25, 1810, in Chester county, near Brandywine battlefield, and resided at that place until after his marriage. He learned the trade of a molder and furnaceman, and removed to Cecil county, Md., where he managed a furnace for George P. Whittaker for ten or twelve years; he then located in York county and blew the York Furnace, in Lower Chanceford township, for John Baer & Co., from 1846 until 1851. In the latter year, as the business had gradually died out, he bought a farm of thirty-one acres from a Mr. Turk, and from that time until his death, in 1882, he spent most of his time in farming. Originally Mr. Posey was a Whig, and later voted independently—favoring the man more than the party.

Micajah Posey married Catherine Stoneback, born in 1812 in Chester county, daughter of Jacob and Catherine Stoneback. His wife died in 1886 and was buried at Bethel M. E. church. Mr. and Mrs. Micajah Posey were the parents of the following children: David, who married Mary Groff, managed the York furnace for John Baer & Co, and for a while was a partner in the concern; he and his wife were the parents of B. F. Posey, who is mentioned elsewhere. Rebecca married Peter Ward, and emigrated to Biggsville, Ill., where her husband died, and where she still resides. George W., a mason by trade, enlisted in the 76th P. V. I., and served until the charge on Fort Wagner, S. C., where the Union forces captured the hill, which was recaptured by the re-enforced Confederates, when he dropped out of sight forever. Robert A. enlisted at the age of twenty years in the 130th P. V. I., under Captain Small of York, participated in the battles of Antietam and Fredericksburg, was wounded at the latter and was taken to the hospital at Washington, D. C., where he contracted typhoid fever; he was taken home by his father, and died after a convalescence and a relapse. William J. is mentioned below. John B. enlisted at the age of sixteen years in the 21st Pennsylvania Cavalry, being a runaway schoolboy, served through the battle of Cold Harbor, from consequent exposure was taken sick with brain fever, and died at the hospital in Washington, D. C., whence he was brought home and laid beside his brothers in the Bethel cemetery. Maria lived in Virginia. Mary Jane married Jacob Keepertos, of Lower Chanceford township. Jacob S., justice of the peace of Lower Chanceford township, married Mary M. McSherry.

William J. Posey was born Dec. 6, 1844, at Cecil Furnace, Cecil Co., Md., and when two years old was brought by his parents to Lower Chanceford township, where he attended the public schools until eighteen years of age and then pursued a two-years course at the Airville Academy, under Professor Pierce, and later under Professor McKelvey. He commenced to teach at the stone schoolhouse in Lower Chanceford township, where he remained for one year. He then located in Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., taught for one year, and then returned to York county. He taught in Chanceford and Lower Chanceford townships for the next twenty-five years, acquiring quite a reputation as an educator throughout the county. Mr. Posey was the local preacher in the Bethel M. E. Church from 1884 until 1892, and from the latter year until 1897 again taught school. In 1897 he commenced farming on the old family homestead, which he had purchased in 1882. Mr. Posey united with the Bethel M. E. church at the age of twenty-seven years and has been a devout and consistent member ever since. He has been superintendent of the Sunday-schools throughout the neighborhood for several years, and is a charitable, Christian man. In politics he has always been a Republican, and has served as township auditor.

On Oct. 7, 1865, William J. Posey married Miss Sarah E. Kerr, who was born at Pequea, Lancaster county, daughter of Joseph H. and Catherine (Mundoff) Kerr. Joseph Kerr had been a resident of York, Chanceford and Lower Chanceford townships, and died at Mr. Posey’s residence in 1892. By trade he had been a blacksmith. Mrs. Kerr was the daughter of Peter Mundoff, a fisherman-farmer who owned an island in the Susquehanna river, opposite Lockport. He later moved to Chanceford township, where he died. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Posey: Catherine Frances married William D. Jones, of Delta; John J., a farmer of Lower Chanceford township, married Gertrude Wright; George M., a farmer of Lancaster county, married Sarah Simmers; Elizabeth, a graduate of a Philadelphia school for nurses, is now located in that city; Mary Jane married William Patten, of Altoona; Anna M. married H. W. Crawford, of Lancaster; Albert is bookkeeper for William J. Fisher, a real-estate dealer of Wilmington, Del. Silas R. is teller in the Dillsburg National Bank; Olive M., who attended the public schools, and graduated from the York academy in 1903, began teaching in 1900 at Miller’s school in Chanceford township, and has since spent two years at the York Furnace school and one year at the Pleasure Hill school.

William J. Posey is a worthy representative of the old family of which he is a descendant. Many of its members have settled in different sections, but wherever found they are thrifty, intelligent and honorable.

LEWIS AHRENS, senior member of the firm of Lewis Ahrens & Co., of York, Pa., dealers in cattle, hogs and sheep, is one of the self-made men of that locality, and through energy, native ability and business foresight, has become a very prominent factor in the commercial life of the city. Mr. Ahrens was born in West Manchester township, June 17, 1849, son of Ernst and Louise (Hazelman) Ahrens, both natives of Maryland. For some years the parents were residents of Baltimore, but eventually removed to York county, Pa., locating on a farm, where the father passed away in 1894. The mother died in 1877.

Lewis Ahrens was reared upon a farm, and received but a limited education, making, however, the best of his opportunities, and when he left home at the age of twenty-five years, he embarked in the business of handling hogs, cattle and sheep. At first his operations were conducted upon a small scale, but later he dealt in car lots and shipped to Baltimore and Philadelphia. In 1888 he established himself in the stock business in York, where he has been very successfully engaged ever since.
and now has extensive yards for the accommodation of his horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, at the same time profitably operating an extensive farm. In 1902 Mr. Ahrens associated himself with W. A. Little, and the present firm style was adopted. The reputation of the house for fair and honorable dealings is unimpeached, and its volume of business shows a steady and healthy annual increase.

When twenty-one years of age Mr. Ahrens was married to Miss Susan Peters, of York township, a daughter of William and Mary (William) Peters. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ahrens: Edward E., a butcher; Samuel L.; Harry W., in business with his father; Jane, wife of Oscar Stoner; Sadie, wife of Bert Husson; and Alice May and Emma, at home. In addition to his other interests, Mr. Ahrens has valuable realty holdings in Buffalo and York. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Malta. His religious affiliations are with Christ Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Democrat, and gives unqualified support to the candidates of that party. In every respect Mr. Ahrens is a model citizen and an upright business man.

JACOB H. MYERS. Among the best known agriculturists of Monaghan township is Jacob H. Myers, who owns a fine farm of eighty-three acres. He was born Dec. 20, 1850, in Warrington township, York county, son of Jacob and Margaret J. (Gray) Myers.

Mr. Myers received his education in the common schools of Monaghan township. His mother having died when he was but three years of age, he lived with his grandfather, Jacob Myers, until he was eight years old, when his father remarried, and the boy went to live with him until the age of thirteen. He then made his home with his uncle, George Myers, remaining with him two years, when he returned to his grandfather, and at the age of twenty-two started out in an independent career. With nothing but a pair of willing hands and a good stock of ambition as capital, he embarked in an occupation that has proved to be his fortune. He commenced market gardening, which he followed for one year and then bought a farm of twenty acres, which he improved and added to from time to time, until when he sold the property, it consisted of fifty-six acres. He then (in 1891) purchased the farm which he now owns, the Jacob G. Myers property, which at that time consisted of about seventy-five acres. Mr. Myers has, at times, both increased and decreased his farm, and now it comprises about eighty-three acres, forty of which are of timber land.

Mr. Myers devotes his time to general farming and fruit-growing, and in 1897 raised 5,000 bushels of peaches of the choicest varieties, while his son raised 3,000 bushels on an adjoining farm. It would seem by the above figures that this land was especially adapted to horticulture. Mr. Myers' fruit and vegetables both find a ready market in Harrisburg, Philadelphia and New York City.

In 1872 Jacob H. Myers married Annie Grove, born May 31, 1854, daughter of John Grove, and the children born to this union are: John R.; Catherine E., who married Lloyd David of Mt. Pleasant; Thomas R., deceased; William E., deceased; M. Edith, a graduate of Shippensburg State Normal School, and now a teacher in the district schools of the county; Sarah Ida, at home; Elsie E., at home; Raymond A.; Virdie J.; Mabel E., and Warren E. In religion the family belong to the Church of God. Mr. Myers is a firm Democrat, and has held the office of supervisor for two years. He has also been school director for twelve years, for three years being treasurer and for seven years president of the board. Mr. Myers has taken an active part in educational matters and has given his children the advantages of a thorough mental discipline. In every sense of the word, Mr. Myers is a self-made man, having fought his way, almost unaided, to his present high station. He is a man who commands the respect of his neighbors, and has a wide circle of warm personal friends. He is one of the trustees of the cemetery and his son, John R., has been a deacon in the Church of God for the past three years.

JOHN A. WILSON, a practical farmer of East Hopewell township, York county, was born on his grandfather's farm at Dolf, East Hopewell township, Dec. 25, 1856, son of the late William S. Wilson.

William S. Wilson was also a native of that township, born on the old homestead, Jan. 29, 1825, where he grew to manhood. He was educated in its common schools, and was reared to the life of a farmer, which occupation he followed all of his life. He married Ellen Ann Anderson, born at Dolf, June 6, 1838, daughter of William and Ellen (Morrison) Anderson. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Wilson settled on a 100-acre tract, most of which was in the woods, and there, by the opening of spring, he cleared a place. In 1857 he erected a home thereon, in which he spent the remainder of his life, dying Oct. 2, 1903, Mrs. Wilson still surviving. He was a faithful member of the Hopewell Presbyterian Church, in which he was an elder for thirty years, and there he was buried. He was a lifelong Republican and served as school director for several terms. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were: Maggie, Mrs. A. G. J. Hyson, of East Hopewell township; Ella, Mrs. J. B. Grove, of York, twin sister of Nettie, the wife of Dr. Glessick, of New Freedom; Mary A., living at home; Lizzie, deceased wife of Porter Anderson, of East Hopewell township; Amanda, deceased, wife of F. O. Beard, of Hopewell township; William E., of East Hopewell township, who married Minerva Miller and resides in the same township; Olive C., at home; Emma L. and Edna L., twins, both at home; Anna, who died in infancy; and John A.

John A. Wilson attended the public schools during the winter terms until eighteen years of age, but did not have much opportunity to gain an education, being the eldest in the family and his services at home being most in demand. He worked on his father's farm until his marriage, when he lived for a time on his father-in-law's place, and then (about 1894) bought his present homestead. This consists of ninety-one acres of the finest land in East Hopewell township, comprises one of the most beautiful homes in the section, and has one of the finest, most up-to-date residences to be found in the township, erected by Mr. Wilson in 1896. It is equipped with all modern improvements and conveniences and is well situated and substantially and beautifully built. Mr. Wilson joined the Hopewell Presbyterian Church in 1883 and has been a devout member ever since. In politics a Republican, he was elected to serve as school director, and assumed the duties of that office the first Monday in June, 1905.

On Feb. 18, 1886, Mr. Wilson married Miss Emma H. Hyson, daughter of John and Margaret (Miller) Hyson, and to this union have been born: Charles Alexander, Harry C., and Marguerite Ellen, all residing at home.

CHARLES H. SULTNER, who has won for himself a substantial place in the business world of York, and a no less prominent place in musical circles, is one of the most popular men in the county. He is a son of Charles and a grandson of Christian Sultner, who died in Spring Garden township in 1860, aged sixty-five years. Mr. Sultner was born April 10, 1855, and was established himself in the meat business alone until April, 1902, when he admitted his son as his partner, the firm name being changed to C. H. Sultner & Son. He does all his own killing, selling no meat over his counter which he has not himself butchered. His trade is strictly retail, and his customers come from far and near because of the excellent quality of meat to be procured in his establishment. He is thoroughly up-to-date in all particulars, and has made a considerable success of his work. He has also become a property holder, being the owner of one of the best properties on the West side, which he purchased and then remodeled, and he has erected several buildings in the city, thus contributing his share to its growth and prosperity. His business affairs have always been conducted on a high plane, and this is a fact so well known that his representation of his goods is accepted as final.

In his religious belief Mr. Sultner is a Lutheran, and he is a member of Christ Lutheran Church of York, where he has served as a deacon and is now an elder. The Sabbath-school has found in him an efficient worker, he being the assistant secretary; but it is in the choir that he has found the widest scope for his talents, and the high class of music rendered is the best evidence of his marked ability. He has been one of the best workers in Christ Lutheran Quartette, and his willingness on all occasions to give his services has won him many friends.

In the spring of 1877 Mr. Sultner was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Eyster, daughter of John Eyster, and four children have come to brighten their home, namely: Harvey A., who is now associated with his father in business; Jennie E., wife of Edwin JAMES KELLER, of Lower Windsor township, is a representative of one of the pioneer families of this section of the old Keystone State. The original ancestors in America came hither from Germany and settled in what is now Lancaster county, Pa. They were Lutherans in their religious faith. In that county was born Peter Keller, grandfather of James Keller, and there he was reared to maturity. As a young man, in company with a relative of about the same age and name, he crossed the river and settled in what is now Lower Windsor township, York county, his place of location being about midway between Canadochley church and Wrightsville, while his original claim of land comprised 160 acres, which he reclaimed from the virgin forest. He was a man of strong mentality and indefatigable industry, and at the time of his death was one of the wealthiest men in his township, owning several valuable farms, and he was a man of wide influence in the community. He was a pillar in the Lutheran Church, and his days were prolonged to those of a patriarch, since he was aged ninety-nine years, two months and twenty-three days at the time of his demise, April 22, 1873. His first wife, whose maiden name was Julia Ann Winehold, died March 1, 1823, at the age of forty-five years and six months. He subsequently married a widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Leber, and she died Nov. 29, 1860, aged seventy-three years, eleven months and twenty-seven days. Of the children of the first marriage Peter, Jr., father of James, was the eldest.

Peter Keller, Jr., was born on the original homestead, in York county, Oct. 1, 1801. Such were the conditions and exigencies of time and locality that, like the average youth of a pioneer district, his educational advantages were very limited in scope; but this handicap he effectively overcame by the lessons gained in the practical school of experience and through personal reading and application. He married Saloma Will, and forthwith took up his abode on a farm in Lower Windsor township—the property now owned by John Strickler, of Wrightsville. The place was owned by his father, from whom he rented it upon thus initiating his independent career. About twelve years subsequent to his marriage he purchased the farm now owned by his son James, and here continued to be actively engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death. He was one of the solid and highly esteemed citizens of the township, took a loyal interest in local affairs of a public nature and was an active and consistent member of the Lutheran Church, while in his earlier years he was an officer in a company of local militia. He was called to his reward March 8, 1874, aged seventy-two years, five months and seven days, and his devoted wife passed away Jan. 4, 1879, in the seventy-sixth year of her life. She was a daughter of John and Catherine Will, well known pioneers of the county. Peter and Saloma Keller were the parents of eleven children, namely: James was the first born; Julia Ann, born May 6, 1827, married Jacob Paules, and after his death became the wife of Michael Shenberger, whom she still survives; Peter, founder of the wagon-gear works at York, was born Feb. 22, 1829, and died in York, being still survived by his wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Young; Simon, born April 23, 1831, married Martha Forry, who survives him, his death occurring in Chester, Pa.; Sarah, born July 8, 1833, became the wife of Henry Fauth, and her death occurred in Lower Windsor township; Anthony, born Nov. 23, 1835, died in Lower Windsor township, being survived by his wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Ann Keller, but who was not of the same family line; Elizabeth, born April 4, 1837, resides in York, being the widow of David E. Paules; George, born Aug. 14, 1839, married Charlotte Myers and they reside in Lower Windsor township; Mary Jane, born Nov. 24, 1841, is the wife of Milton Myers, of the same township; Maria, born May 19, 1844, married William Thomas, and her death occurred in Lower Windsor township, Oct. 7, 1874; and Cecilia, born April 12, 1846, died unmarried, May 15, 1865.

James Keller was born on his grandfather's farm, Lower Windsor township, York county, Sept. 22, 1825, and was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, while his educational advantages were such as were offered by the primitive subscription schools. As he was the eldest of the children he was called upon to assist in the work of the farm to a greater extent than the others, remaining at home during the winter terms of school in order to ride the horses about on the barn floor and thus trample and thresh out the wheat. His first teacher was Frederick Faringer, and his entire schooling was irregular and desultory. After the establishment of the free-school system a school house was built on the farm of his uncle, John Will, and he was able to there continue his studies for a few weeks. He early manifested an appreciation of good books, and throughout life has been fond of reading and study, so that he has in a large measure overcome the educational handicaps of his youth. Mr. Keller continued to assist in the work of the home farm until he had reached the age of twenty-six years, when he made a final settlement with his father. While he thereafter continued to remain at home for some time, he worked for various farmers and also derived considerable income from the judicious use of his trading propensities—buying and selling stock, produce, etc. In 1861 he was married, and forthwith began operations on the farm which he now owns and occupies, at first working on shares and, after the death of his father, purchasing the property from the other heirs. He continued to farm on shares for about a decade, carefully conserving his resources, and thus having a small capital on which to base further operations. He purchased a farm on the line between Lower Windsor and Hellam townships, locating there and continuing to farm on the place until 1884, when he returned to the old homestead, which he had purchased at the death of his father, as before stated. Here he has erected a fine modern residence, having one of the most attractive rural homes in the county, and being one of the successful farmers and influential citizens of his township. All the buildings on the home farm are of the best type and the place, which comprises 160 acres, is under a high state of cultivation. He also retains his other farm, which is eighty-five acres in extent.

In his boyhood Mr. Keller united with the Canadohley Lutheran Church, being confirmed by Rev. Jonathan Oswald, and he has since continued a zealous member of that religious body, taking an active interest in all departments of its work. Having served for more than a decade as chairman of its council, he finally asked to be relieved from further active service in that line, because of his advancing age, and his belief that younger men should begin to assume the responsibilities and active labors. In politics he is a stalwart Republican, and he has served most acceptably in the various township offices, though never a seeker of such preferment.

On Feb. 28, 1861, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Keller to Leah Dietz, who was born and reared in York county, daughter of George Dietz, a representative farmer of Hellam township. Mr. and Mrs. Keller have one son, Horace Dietz, who was born Aug. 5, 1865, and who is now one of the interested principals in the wagon-gear manufactory at York. In February, 1904, he was united in marriage to Catherine Wellenseck, of York.

Milton Montgomery is the owner of a fine tract of 121 acres in Chanceford township, and is a veteran of the Civil war.

William Montgomery, his father, was born in the North of Ireland, where he received a common-school education, and emigrated to America when a young man. He married in Delaware county, Pa., Jane Smith, born in Delaware county and daughter of a Revolutionary soldier. After their marriage they located in Peach Bottom township, where Mr. Montgomery bought land and followed farming until his death in 1864, aged about fifty-five years. His first wife had died when Milton was a child, and Mr. Montgomery's second wife was Sarah Shiry, who married again after Mr. Montgomery's death. William Montgomery was a Presbyterian in his religious views. Originally he was a Democrat, but during the war changed his views and became a supporter of the Republican party. Mr. Montgomery's children by his first wife were: Milton and Mary Jane, who married Luther C. Manley, of Philadelphia. To Mr. Montgomery and his second wife these children were born: John, of Fawn township; Fanny Ann, married and living in Baltimore; Julia Catherine, married: Henry Lincoln, of Lower Chanceford township, who married a Miss Howard; William, who lives on the home farm, and married a Miss Stevens; and one that died in infancy.

Milton Montgomery was born in Peach Bottom township, Sept. 5, 1846, and reached maturity on the home farm. He received a common-school education and at the age of seventeen years left his home to enter military service. He enlisted at Carlisle (Pa.) barracks, in the spring of 1865, joining Company F, 149th Regt., P. V. I., and served until the close of the war, when he was mustered out, receiving his discharge at Harrisburg, Pa. He returned to York county, and went to work as a farm hand, which occupation he followed for ten years.

On Dec. 27, 1871, Mr. Montgomery married Mary A. Taylor, daughter of Thomas R. and Mary (Pitts) Taylor, born in Lower Chanceford township, on the Taylor home farm, where she remained until marriage, attending the common school. Thomas R. Taylor was a well known farmer of his day, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. In politics he was a Democrat. He was the son of Ellexor Taylor, a farmer, whose father was a native of Ireland. Mrs. Montgomery’s mother was the daughter of Michael Pitts, a farmer of German descent, and Elizabeth (Swisher) Pitts, of Chanceford township. Thomas R. Taylor died Aug. 29, 1885, aged eighty years, while his wife passed away in July, 1874, sixty-six years of age.

After his marriage Mr. Montgomery farmed on shares for a few years, and then bought his present home of 121 acres. He erected a new home and substantial out-buildings, and has since successfully carried on general farming and tobacco raising. When Mr. Montgomery left home he was the possessor of $2.50, a strong will, tireless energy and a strong pair of hands. Whatever he has accomplished, whatever success he has attained, has been through the force of his own industry. He is a self-made man, one who has climbed the ladder of success, round by round, and reached the top unaided. He has an honorable war record, and is very highly esteemed in the community in which he resides. In politics he has always been a stanch Republican, but has invariably refused to accept public position. Mrs. Montgomery is connected with the New Harmony Presbyterian Church, and has been very active in its work, especially in its Sunday-school. She is also a member of the home and foreign missionary societies.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Milton Montgomery are as follows: William T., of Chanceford township, married Molly Warner; John A., of Lower Chanceford township, married Lizzie Posey; Marian E. married Porter Warner, of Chanceford township; and Clarence H. resides at home.

REUBEN T. SMITH, cigar manufacturer at Red Lion, was born May 10, 1853, in Windsor township, York county, son of Samuel and Maria (Shope) Smith.

Samuel Smith was born in Windsor township in 1832, and after completing his education in the common schools engaged in farming, which occupation he followed through life. His last years were spent in retirement at Windsorville, where he died in 1893, aged sixty-one years. In politics he was a Democrat, and served as township supervisor several times and as school director. He married Maria Shope, born in 1852 in Windsor township, daughter of Peter and Kate (Lebennight) Shope. Mrs. Smith still survives, having reached the age of seventy-four years. Their children were as follows: Reuben T.; Frank, of Windsorville; Rebecca Jane, who died aged twenty years; Samuel S., a merchant at Windsorville; and Amanda, Mrs. Edwin Sprinkle.

Reuben T. Smith was reared on the home farm and commenced his schooling at Windsorville, his first teacher being Jacob Flinchbaugh. He completed his education under Grier Barnett, at the age of fifteen years. When he was eighteen years old he began to learn the milling business under W. G. Meads, in Windsor township, following that vocation for four years and operating the Jacob Allison mill. He then made cigars for ten or twelve years and later worked at cigar packing for seventeen years. Thus Mr. Smith became thoroughly experienced in the business, and was well prepared for competition with other business men when he started in for himself in 1901, in the factory now utilized by F. B. Shindler, at Red Lion. In the fall of 1903 he moved into his present commodious, well-appointed factory, where he keeps twenty-five hands constantly employed, making a medium grade principally and shipping to all parts of the country. After leaving the mill he resided at Windsorville until 1889, when he settled at Red Lion.

At Windsorville, in 1875, Mr. Smith was married to Lizzie E. Herman, of Windsor township, daughter of Samuel E. and Sarah (Bull) Herman, and these children were born to this union: Burt C., of Red Lion, who married Sadie Grim; Irene, Mrs. C. E. Smith, of Red Lion; Thomas C., of Red Lion, who married Sadie Roser; Augustus; Daisy Belle; Edwin H.; Maggie G.; Harry C.; Reuben Roy; Earl, deceased; Verna Romaine; Leone; and Mina. Mr. Smith and his family belong to the U. B. Church. He believes in the principles of the Democratic party, and is serving his second term on the school board. For the past quarter of a century he has been a member of the L. O. O. F., and is past grand of his lodge.

DANIEL S. GROSS is a carpenter in York, and is employed at Herman Noss's planing mill. He was born in West Manchester township, June 4, 1843, son of Samuel M. Gross.

Daniel Gross, the grandfather of Daniel S. Gross, was a native of Manchester township, where he was a lifelong farmer. He married Miss Elizabeth Myers, and they had these children: Benjamin; Daniel; Eliza, who married Andrew Hake; Louisa, deceased, who lived in Manchester borough; Samuel M., the father of Daniel S., and Sarah, who married John Shettel.

Samuel M. Gross was, like his father, a native of Manchester township, where he was born in 1814. There he was a farmer and miller, and died at the age of thirty-three years, leaving his widow, who had been Elizabeth Shettel, with these children: Daniel S.; Amanda, wife of Peter Schindle, of Goldsboro; Caroline, wife of S. L. Glatfelter, of Conewago township; and William S., who is employed with Hench & Dromgold.

Daniel S. Gross attended Bear's school in Conewago, where he received a fair education. He followed farming until Aug. 24, 1864, when he enlisted in Company D, 20th P. V. I., in the nine months service. On his discharge he returned to Conewago township, where he learned the carpenter's trade. On Nov. 24, 1868, he married Salome C. E. Hake, daughter of Henry and Emma (Vandersloot) Hake, afterward locating in Harrisburg for a year and working at his trade. He then returned to Conewago township, where he was occupied in agricultural pursuits on the well known Hake farm, remaining there thirty years and coming to York in 1901. Since that year he has been engaged with Herman Noss, and makes his home at No. 219 Carlisle avenue, York. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Gross have been: Emma Isabella, the widow of Daniel G. Neiman; Laura H., wife of J. Allen Altland, who lives in West York borough, and Annie H., at home. In politics Mr. Gross is a Republican. He is a member of the Union Lutheran Church, of York. His fraternal connection is with York Post, No. 37, Grand Army of the Republic.

Frederick Hake, the grandfather of Mrs. Gross, was a resident of Conewago township, and kept a hotel there, and, although there is no hostelry there now, the place is still called "Hake's Hotel." Mr. Hake was also a farmer and a manufacturer of cigars. His children were Henry, John, Andrew, Elizabeth, Julian and Sallie. Henry Hake, the father of Mrs. Gross, also kept the hotel in Conewago township, and, like his father, also engaged in farming, being a very large land owner. Prior to his death he lived retired for a number of years. Both he and his wife are buried at Quicke's churchyard. They left these children: Salome C. E., who became Mrs. Gross; Emma Isabella, who died at the age of eighteen years; and Louise H., the wife of Franklin Reeser, of York.

JOHN W. MITZEL, proprietor of Mitzel's mills and a successful business man of East Hopewell township, was born one mile south of Hellam Station, on the Liephart farm, Sept. 24, 1803, son of Adam Mitzel.

Adam Mitzel was born in Hopewell township, York county, and grew up to farm labor. He went to Hellam township, there married Mary Ann Sprenkle, and afterward rented a farm for several years, finally abandoning agriculture and living in York, where he died in 1899. Mrs. Mitzel survived until 1902, when she passed away, and both were interred at Krentz Creek church. In religion the family were Lutherans. In his political sympathies Mr. Mitzel was a Republican. They were the parents of these children: Jacob F., James E., and William H., of York; Ellen, Mrs. J. W. Bremman, living near Yorkana; John W., of East Hopewell township, and George A., who located in California.

John W. Mitzel reached manhood in his native place and attended the township schools there until eighteen years of age. Although reared as a farmer's boy, at twenty years of age he commenced to learn the miller's trade with George W. Dietz and Henry Liephart.
He began milling at the Strickler mill in Chanceford township, and remained there for one year, at the end of which time he entered the George Liephart mill, where he spent four years, after which he remained for eight years at the Smyser mill near York. While there, in company with Henry Liephart, he engaged in the warehouse business, at the Bender warehouse, York. At the end of six months they dissolved partnership, Mr. Mitzel purchasing Mr. Liephart's interest and removing the business to the Joe Miller warehouse, corner of Philadelphia and Carlisle streets. He was there but two weeks, when the building was damaged by a cyclone. When Mr. Mitzel assumed the business at the warehouse, it had been greatly decreased, but the new manager put new life into it. To enlarge the business, Mr. Mitzel, William A. Smyser and William H. Butts founded the Smyser, Butts & Mitzel Co., and this association continued for two years, when Mr. Mitzel sold his interest to his partners and took charge of the Loucks mill at Hellam Station. There he remained eight years. In the fall of 1902 he purchased his present mill and farm, and since that time has been successfully engaged in their joint management. The mill was built over one hundred years ago. At the time of making the above purchase, Mr. Mitzel also bought the Rainbow mill and farm, one-quarter of a mile from his home. This latter mill was erected by William Mitzel, one of his relatives, about fifty-five years ago.

Mr. Mitzel is a self-made man. Leaving home at the age of nineteen, to work as a miller at seven dollars per month, he is now the owner of 268 acres of farm land, of two mills, and of a constantly increasing business. Every dollar of his present competency has been acquired honestly and laboriously. Fortune showered no special favors on him; he saw business possibilities and was quick to accept them. He is very well known in the community in which he resides, and is highly respected.

Mr. Mitzel was reared to the faith of the Lutheran Church, and is a member of the organization at Hellam. He is a stanch Republican, and is serving his first year as school director of his township, having served two years in that capacity while in Hellam township. He was formerly a member of the P. O. S. of A. Mr. Mitzel was married in York, Feb. 26, 1888, to Miss Alberta C. Beecher, born in Adams Co., Pa., daughter of Calvin Beecher, and to this union the following children were born: Daisy Maude; Nora Ann, who died at the age of six years; Mabel Beecher; and Paul Edgar. Mrs. Mitzel died May 27, 1901, and is buried at Kreutz Creek church, Hellam township.

JOHN ANDREW STROMINGER, of Fairview township, who devotes his entire time to agricultural pursuits, was born Oct. 6, 1846, on the old homestead in the township named and upon which he now resides, son of John and Rachel (Kilmore) Strominger. He attended the public schools of the township until about seventeen years of age and assisted his father on the home farm. In 1873 he married Adeline Eichelberger, daughter of John and Jane (Eckels) Eichelberger, both of whom died in Andersontown, where they are both buried. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Strominger located on the old homestead, which they bought in 1878. The farm consists of 102 acres of fine farm land, and the house (which was built in 1854) and the barn (built in 1850) are both good, substantial structures of stone. Mr. Strominger has prospered, having devoted all of his life to farming operations, and is considered one of the substantial men of his community.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. John A. Strominger were as follows: Sibbie Jane, who died at the age of twenty-five years, is buried at St. John's cemetery in Fairview township, and was the wife of Charles Bonner; and Carrie Elizabeth, who resides at home. In his political associations Mr. Strominger is a Democrat. Both he and his wife are very highly esteemed in the community, and he is justly regarded as a good, useful citizen.

JOHN MEISENHETLER, a retired farmer of Manchester township, who is now living in North York borough, has for a number of years been one of York county's successful men. He was born Jan. 8, 1853, son of David H. and Mary (Sipe) Meisenhelter.

Henry Meisenhelter, the grandfather, was born in York county, where he engaged in farming and distilling in Conewago township until his death, which occurred in his fifty-seventh year. He was buried in Conewago township. The children born to him and his wife were: George, Levy, Henry, Rebbecca, Mary, Leah, Lovina, Harriet and David H.

David H. Meisenhelter was born in 1815 in Conewago township, and received very little education. He followed farming in Conewago township and died in 1897, at York, Pa. He married Mary Sipe, who died in 1883, and is buried at Quickel's Church. The following children were born to them: one who died in infancy; Margareta died aged seven years; Henry died at the age of seventeen years; Mary married (first) J. M. Kilmore, (second) Eli F. Knaub, and lives in York; and John.

John Meisenhelter received his education in Conewago township, attending school until he was seventeen years of age and subsequently removing to Indiana and Illinois, where he followed farming for four years. He then returned to York county and engaged in farming, was in business from 1882 to 1884, and then moving to Lewisberry borough there continued his successful mercantile career from 1884 until 1897. He then commenced milling and farming in Manchester township, and in 1904 located in North York borough, where he has since lived retired from active labors.

In 1882 Mr. Meisenhelter married Celinda K. Stouch, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Yost) Stouch, of Dover borough, and these children have been born to them: F. P. married Flora Grim and lives in North York; Maggie married Tempest Baublitz and lives in North York; William H., who married Lizzie Jordan, is a graduate of the York County Academy and a teacher at Lightner's school; David S. is a stenographer; Lydia Mabel and Mary May (twins). Robert Guy, Edna M. and George Dewey all reside at home. In politics Mr. Meisenhelter is a Democrat, and while in Manchester township was school director. The family are members of the Lutheran Church, and are active in its support.

ALVIN L. MENGES, senior member of the firm of A. L. Menges & Brother, mill proprietors of Jackson township, is one of the leading business men and prominent citizens of Menges Mills. The mills have a history dating back to 1793, when they were built by a Mr. Hershey, on the waters of the Codorus creek. They have been in operation ever since, and for a number of years were owned by the late Peter H. Menges, father of the present partners and formerly a substantial retired business man of Menges Mills. In 1890 a complete roller system was inaugurated and other repairs made, until this plant is now one of the best equipped in the county. The firm does merchant and custom milling, by water and steam power, and the capacity is from thirty-five to forty barrels a day.

Alvin L. Menges is a native of York county, being born on the old Menges homestead in Heidelberg township, Dec. 13, 1870, and is the second son of Peter H. and Catherine (Hinkle) Menges. His mother was born in Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., April 23, 1837, eldest daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (McGile) Hinkle, natives of Lancaster county. Mr. and Mrs. Peter H. Menges settled at Menges Mills the same year that Alvin was born. The Menges originated in Germany, the Hinkles in Germany, and the McGiles in Scotland, and the brothers of the present firm appear to have inherited many of the virtues and excellent characteristics of these nations, although they are true Americans.

Alvin L. Menges was educated in the district schools and the Baugher Academy of Hanover, a private school, spending three years at the latter institution. He then took a commercial course at the Bachelors' Business College, York, and, thus equipped, assisted his father in the conduct of the mill. Later, Peter H. Menges turned the management over to his son, and in 1896 the present partnership, under the existing style, was formed, the junior member being William H. Menges. The senior partner is a thoroughly practical miller, is conversant with every detail of the business, and is well and favorably known to the trade. The mill is conveniently located in one of the best wheat belts of Pennsylvania, and commands a large business.

On Feb. 25, 1896, Mr. Menges was married to Eva L. Tanger, of Hanover, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Hersch) Tanger. Two children have been born of this union, David L. and Elizabeth, but the latter is now deceased. In politics Mr. Menges is a Republican, but has no time to aspire to public office. He and his wife are consistent members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, of Spring Grove. In addition to his milling business, Mr. Menges operated his father's farm of one hundred acres, while the elder Menges lived; it is now operated by his three sons. As always, he is a very busy, enterprising man.

WILLIAM H. MENGES, the junior member of the milling firm of A. L. Menges & Bro., was educated in the district school in Heidelberg township, and later attended the Baugher private academy, at Hanover, for one year. The following two years he passed at the York County Academy, York, where he prepared for the college at Gettysburg. Entering the classical course he was graduated therefrom in the class of 1896. Returning home, he entered into partnership with his brother, as before stated. For years, he was at Spring Grove, in charge of the warehouse there, and he has proved himself thoroughly conversant with business methods.

The business house of A. L. Menges & Brother enjoys an enviable reputation for straightforward dealings, and the product turned out by the mill is of such superior quality that a ready market is found at all times.

HENRY KNAUB, salesman of musical instruments, was born in Manchester township, York county, in 1848, son of George Knaub. His great-grandfather came from Germany and settled in Conewago township, York Co., Pa., being the founder of the Knaub family in this country. He was a farmer by occupation and died in Conewago township.

Daniel Knaub, his son, was a stone-mason by trade living in Newberry township, near Newberrytown, and many barns and houses still stand in that section as evidences of his good workmanship. He died in Conewago township, at the age of seventy-three years, and was buried at Quickel’s Church. Daniel Knaub married Eva Brunner, who died aged about seventy-nine years. They had these children: George, Elizabeth, Mary, Sarah, Katie, Lydia, Annie and Daniel, all of whom are deceased except Daniel, a resident of Manchester township.

George Knaub, the father of Henry, was born in 1820, in Conewago township, where he was a farmer, and for a number of years followed teaming to Baltimore. He married Elizabeth Ort, daughter of John and Sarah (Wilhelm) Ort. After marriage he worked the George Smyser farm in Manchester township; then spent two years on George Newman’s farm, located in Conewago township near Quickel’s church, and afterward moved to the Henry Smyser farm, about four miles from York, where he died in 1853, and was buried at Quickel’s church. His wife died Feb. 27, 1902, and is interred in the Prospect Hill cemetery. Their children were: William, a carpenter by trade, who married Rebecca Ruby, and resides in California; Henry; George, an engineer, who died in February, 1903, leaving a widow, formerly Amanda Gott.

Henry Knaub attended the schools of Manchester township, the Brillinger school and the York County Academy, and was then employed by P. A. & S. Small from 1869 to 1873. At that time he engaged in the mercantile business in York, at the corner of Penn and Market streets, where he remained three and one-half years, and later with E. C. Beck, at No. 19 West Market street, in wholesale and retail groceries and liquors. He was then with a Mr. Bender for over three years, and from 1879 to 1884 was employed by Mr. Hoffman at the One Price Clothing House of York. In 1884 he engaged with the Weaver Organ & Piano Company, with which firm he remained twenty years, selling organs and pianos throughout Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, and doing a large business in seventeen counties of those States. Mr. Knaub had a fine record, selling at retail $285,000 worth of goods, drove 100,000 miles and traveled by rail 120,000 miles. Mr. Knaub is well known throughout the surrounding country, and is very highly esteemed. In 1905 he severed his connection with the Weaver Organ & Piano Company, since which time he has been selling musical instruments around York. Mr. Knaub resides at No. 433 West Philadelphia street, in the house which he remodelled to suit his own taste.

In 1872 Mr. Knaub married Ameathia Martin, daughter of Abraham and Louisa (Menges) Martin, and to this union have been born: Charles H., who learned the machinist’s trade with A. B. Farquhar and the York Manufacturing Company, is now located in New York City, engaged in the automobile business; Luther M., a painter and paper hanger by trade, resides in Long Island, N. Y.; Saide E., the wife of Otto W. Gertz, lives at Williamsport, Pa.; and Warren G., died at the age of five years and seven days and was buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. In politics Mr. Knaub is a Republican, but has never sought office. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he has filled all of the offices. Mr. Knaub is strictly temperate in his habits, having never used tobacco in any form, nor indulged in strong drinks or intoxicating liquors. He is very highly respected wherever known for his many sterling traits of character, and he possesses a reputation for honesty and fair dealing that might be envied by any man. A good citizen, a practical business man, and a Christian gentleman, Henry Knaub is surely a representative of the best type of York county's citizens.

NOAH MARKEL, manufacturer and dealer in fertilizers at Seitzland, York county, was born Sept. 21, 1844, in Shrewsbury, that county, a son of Henry and Catherine (Kunkle) Markel. Peter Markel, the paternal grandfather, was an old resident of York county who was well and favorably known throughout Shrewsbury township, being the owner of considerable land and a farmer there for many years. Of his children, his sons (Henry, Peter and John) were all well known. One daughter married William Fair; another, Michael Bortner; a third, Samuel Fair, a brother of William, and a fourth, Mr. Shue. On the maternal side the grandfather was Henry Kunkle and he was also a farmer in Shrewsbury township. His three children were: Joseph Charles, Catherine, and Susan, who married a Mr. Hershner. Henry Markel, father of Noah, was born in Shrewsbury township, where he was a highly respected citizen, following agriculture all his life. He was prominently identified with the Lutheran Church. His children, ten in number, were: William; Emanuel; Henry; Levi; Charles; Elizabeth, wife of Emanuel Anstine; Sarah, Mrs. Daniel Ehrhart; Samuel; Catherine, wife of Jesse Lentz, and Noah. Henry Markel died in 1850 and his wife in 1896.

Noah Markel was educated in the common schools of Shrewsbury township and worked out on neighboring farms until he was eighteen years of age, when he became an apprentice to the carpenter's trade, which he pursued in conjunction with bridge building for twenty-one successive years. During one year of that period he was employed in the car shops of Billmyer & Small, of York, a firm that has been engaged in the manufacture of railroad cars for a great many years. Mr. Markel then devoted his attention to huckstering and for thirteen years was thus prosperously engaged. Then he became convinced that there was a promising field in this agricultural section in the manufacture of fertilizers, and on Dec. 1, 1896, he embarked in that line at Seitzland. His beginning was on a small scale but he has now the control of a large and constantly increasing trade. His plant, located at Seitzland, has been enlarged and his custom is drawn from all portions of York county. He understands all the details of the manufacture, has modern machinery and prepares his product in a scientific manner. In addition to farming a fertile tract of thirty-five acres in this vicinity, he keeps his plant in operation throughout the season.

In 1868 Mr. Markel was married to Julia Shuman, daughter of George Shuman, of Carroll county, Md., and they have these children: James E., Harry A., Edward L., Emmor L., Anena B. and Emma K., wife of Harry C. Neller. For several years Mr. Markel has been a member of the Reformed Church and during a part of this period he has been on its official board. He has taken part in the township's public affairs, has served as judge of elections and also as township collector. Mr. Markel has been connected with the Masonic fraternity for many years, and belongs also to the Patriotic Order of Sons of America. He is a man who stands high in the estimation of his fellow citizens.

HENRY K. BENTZ, of North Codorus township, who is engaged in the manufacture of carpets near Jefferson borough, was born in North Codorus township March 9, 1854, son of Michael Bentz.

Andrew Bentz, the great-grandfather of Henry K., is supposed to have come from Germany to the United States. He was a landowner in North Codorus township, where he died. He was the father of the following named children: Andrew, George, Michael, Susan, Barbara, Elizabeth, Grace, Bollie and Myrtle.

Michael Bentz, the grandfather of Henry K., was born in North Codorus township, where he owned a farm of ninety-five acres, which he cultivated until he was sixty-five years of age, when he became blind, but, after two years of treatment by Dr. Fisher, of York, he recovered his sight. He died aged eighty years, and his wife at the age of seventy-five, both being buried at the Ziegler church. They had these children: John, Michael, Jacob, Andrew, Elizabeth, Peter, Catherine, Becky and Susan.

Michael Bentz, the father of Henry K., was born in 1818, and was a farmer and distiller. He married Emanuel Klinedinst, a daughter of George Klinedinst, and died on his farm in 1879, being buried at Ziegler's church. His widow married (second) Henry Ramble, who died in 1884. She is now living in North Codorus township. To Mr. and Mrs. Bentz were born: George, who married Katie Lau, and lives in North Codorus township; Peter, who runs on a local freight train from York to Marysville, married to Alverta Marthenthal, and residing in York; Jacob, who died young; and Henry K.

Henry K. Bentz attended the common schools of North Codorus township until twenty years of age and then for a short time worked as a day laborer, later being employed at the carpet weaving trade with William Freysinger, of York, with whom he remained three years; he then located at his present place of business. He has twenty-six looms and employs from fifteen to twenty people in his factory, which is in dimensions 72x20 feet, with a 14x34 foot annex, two stories in height. He finds a ready sale for his goods throughout Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland. He is a director and stockholder of the Codorus Canning Company, and one of the promoters of that industry. He is a trustee of the cemetery association.

Mr. Bentz married Emma J. Kessler, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Brillhart) Kessler, and to this union have been born: Alverta, the wife of George Trump, an employee of Mr. Bentz; and Henry H., who died at the age of eighteen years. Mr. Bentz is a Republican, and served as a census taker in 1900. In religious matters he is a member of the Reformed Church, in which he has been a deacon and elder. He is connected with the P. O. S. of A.

JESSE LICHTENBERGER was born in Manchester township June 10, 1845, a son of John, a grandson of Rudolph, and a great-grandson of Casper Lichtenberger.

Rudolph Lichtenberger, the grandfather, was born May 8, 1797, in Manchester township, where he died Oct. 20, 1843, aged forty-six years, five months, twelve days. Like his father he was a farmer and tanner, owning a tract of fifty-four acres of the old homestead farm. There he lived an honest, industrious life, married and reared an estimable family, and was laid to rest in the Union cemetery at Manchester. His wife died April 2, 1836, aged thirty-seven years and twenty-four days. She had formerly been Elizabeth Bear, and was born March 8, 1790. Their children were: Rudolph, who lives at Sterrett's Gap, Cumberland county; Emanuel, who died in Ohio; Catherine, who died in Silver Spring township, Cumberland county; William, buried at Union cemetery, and John, whose sketch follows.

John Lichtenberger, the father of Jesse, was born May 27, 1821, in Manchester township. His education was the best afforded by the local schools of his day: his life was passed in the occupations of farmer and tanner, and he died April 25, 1848, when only twenty-six years, ten months, two days old. He married Louise Hoffman, daughter of Henry and Lovina (Kann) Hoffman, the latter of whom lived to the unusual age of ninety-five years. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Lichtenberger settled on the old Lichtenberger farm, upon which the widow continued to reside one year after the early death of her husband. She survived until the age of sixty-two years, and was buried in the Lutheran cemetery at Manchester, her husband's grave being in the Union cemetery amid the remains of his ancestors.

Jesse Lichtenberger was his parents' only child. His education was gained principally in the public schools, which he attended until he was seventeen years of age, after which he enjoyed one session at the Millersville Normal school. Prior to settling down to farming, he taught four terms of school in East Manchester township, one term in Conewago township and one term in Dover township, meeting with much success and making many friends. In 1868 he was united in marriage with Eliza Kohr, a daughter of Henry and Lydia (Stauffer) Kohr, natives of Manchester township. Mr. and Mrs. Lichtenberger have had four children, namely: Ellen J., who is the wife of Elmer Bahn, resides in North York borough; Clara J. is the wife of Harvey Gattlefer, who is in the marble business in Manchester borough; Annie died aged two months; John married Lottie Bear and lives at North York. For three years after his marriage Mr.
Lichtenberger was a farmer in Manchester township and then was a clerk for two years for G. H. Wolf. In 1899 he bought twenty-one acres of the old homestead, on which he has erected some of the finest buildings in the neighborhood and made excellent, substantial improvements of all kinds. In addition to his homestead just mentioned, he owns two other valuable farms, one of twenty-one acres and another of fifty-five acres.

In addition to his farming interests, Mr. Lichtenberger has been a tobacco buyer for M. H. Engle, of Lancaster, Pa., for the past fifteen years, and since February, 1904, has been in the tobacco business for himself. His office and warehouses are at Lancaster, and the business is conducted under the firm style of J. Lichtenberger & Co. Since 1903 he has resided in Manchester borough and is considered one of the leading business men of that locality.

Mr. Lichtenberger is a Republican, and for years has been very active in the party, by which he has been honored with office on many occasions. He has served five terms as school director, has been township assessor and township clerk, and for nine years was township auditor. The duties of these offices have all been discharged with an eye to the welfare of the public and with the same business success which has attended his personal enterprises. As a citizen no man stands higher in his section of the county than does Mr. Lichtenberger. For many years he has been one of the leading members and active workers, as well as liberal contributors, of the Lutheran Church, having served in that body both as deacon and elder for a long period. It is interesting to thus historically trace the old families of a section and to note how the estimable characteristics and godly virtues of the ancestors have an influence in shaping the characters of the descendants. The Lichtenbergers and Bears of York county are both well known and most honorable families of the old Keystone State.

AARON H. CRALEY. The post office of Craley, named in honor of the family of that name, was established about a score of years ago, and Aaron H. Craley has served as postmaster from the beginning to the present, while he is known as one of the worthy citizens of York county, with whose history the name which he bears has been continuously identified from the period of the early pioneers.

The original progenitor of the Craley family in the United States was George Craley, grandfather of Aaron H. This ancestor was one of the Hessian soldiers who came to America to assist the British troops in their attempt to suppress the Revolution. He was stationed in the State of New York, and it is practically authenticated that ere the close of the war his sympathies were so strongly enlisted in the cause of the struggling patriots that he arrayed himself in the Continental line, and thereafter aided in gaining the boon of independence to the American colonies. After the close of the war he came to York county, Pa., and settled in the primitive wilds of what is now Chanceford township, his location having been at the point which was later called New Bridgeville. He cleared a tract of land in the midst of the virgin forest, and was numbered among the representative farmers of the locality and period. In York county was solemnized his marriage, and there were born his three children, namely: George, father of Aaron H.; Martin, who married a Miss Mitzel, and who settled and died near New Bridgeville; and Elizabeth, who died unmarried when well advanced in years. The grandfather continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until his death, and his widow later contracted a second marriage, the name of her second husband being Baymiller. By this marriage she had two children: Andrew, who became a successful farmer in Morrow county, Ohio, where he died at the age of ninety-two years; and John, who is a resident of Lower Windsor township, being nearly four score years of age.

George Craley, the father of Aaron H., was born on the old homestead at New Bridgeville, in 1814, and his educational advantages were such as were afforded by the common schools of the locality. He early began to follow the vocation of fishing, drawing many a fine catch from the river, and when the tidewater canal was in process of construction he conducted a somewhat primitive hotel at Green Branch, to which place the name of New Bridgeville was applied at the time the postoffice was located there. While in the hotel business Mr. Craley had the somewhat responsible task of entertaining as guests about one hundred laborers on the canal, the force being composed principally of Irishmen and Germans. It may be said that the provender supplied consisted principally of potatoes and whiskey. The hotel shanty was one hundred feet in length, and the dining table ran practically the entire length of the room. At meal time Mr. Craley would have a bushel of potatoes cooked without removing the skins, and, standing at the end of the table, would throw the potatoes along the festal board, each of the guests seizing his portion. The guests would then respectively circle their potatoes with forefinger and thumb, and by pressing the tuber through the grasping digits were able to remove the peeling or skin. The accommodating landlord had no little difficulty in maintaining peaceful relations among his guests, the impetuous sons of the Emerald Isle being ready to fight a person one moment and die for him the next. Often when the men would engage in free-for-all fights Mr. Craley would be compelled to take his gun and line them up on a long bench, thereupon giving them the warning that if any one of them started further altercation he might expect to receive a ration of powder and shot. Having thus pacified the belligerents the landlord would then draw a large bucket of whiskey and serve the men. In that early day shad-fishing was unexcelled in this section, enormous quantities being taken from the river by the use of seines. Mr. Craley conducted this hotel for a period of ten years, continuing to live in the locality until he was about thirty years of age, when he located at what is now known as Craley, for the purpose of establishing a hotel at that point. There, however, he secured a large tract of land and turned his attention to farming, being the owner at one time of fully 300 acres of land, his possessions extending from Craley to the river. He purchased the property from the Reynolds family, of Lancaster, who had secured it from the heirs of William Penn. The tract was covered with a fine growth of hickory and oak timber, and this Mr. Craley cut and took to the river, where it was transported on boats to Columbia and there sold to the railroad, which was then owned by the State, the timber being saved the proper length to serve as engine fuel, etc. Mr. Craley improved a fine farm and continued to be here identified with agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred on the old homestead, in June, 1876, in his sixty-third year. He was a man of large physical proportions, strong and vigorous, and was endowed with those estimable and amiable attributes which ever gain to a person the confidence and good will of his fellowmen. He was well known throughout the county, and was a man of sterling character and fine mentality. When the Albrights began the erection of a small church building near his farm he assisted in the work and was finally converted, thereafter living in harmony with the faith which he professed. He had previously been associated with such companions as to cause him to become somewhat rough and heedless, but upon his conversion he determined to withdraw from the hotel business permanently and to cease selling whiskey. He identified himself with the Republican party at the time of its inception, and ever afterward remained a stalwart supporter of its cause. Mr. Craley was thrice married. His first wife was a Miss Gable. She died without issue. His second wife bore him one child, whose advent resulted in her death. This child, Ann, became the wife of Granville Leber. The third wife of Mr. Craley bore the maiden name of Julia Ann Peters. She was born in York township, and was there reared and educated, her father, Henry Peters, having been a prominent and influential farmer and a member of one of the old and honored families of that section. The maiden name of his wife was Miller. Julia Ann (Peters) Craley long survived her honored husband, her death occurring in 1898, at which time she was more than seventy years of age. Of her five children Aaron H. is mentioned below; Amos, who married Amelia Movry, is a shoemaker by vocation, and resides in Lancaster; Caroline, became the wife of John Liephart and her death occurred in Lower Windsor township; Jeremiah, who married Tracy Fry, is engaged in the ginseng business at Craley; and Julia Ann, who became the wife of William Ness, is deceased.

Aaron H. Craley was born on the old homestead, March 16, 1845, his birthplace having been the house first erected by his father after locating upon the place. He secured his early educational discipline in the old log school house, and recalls as one of his first instructors Joseph Butt; also an Irishman named Deminshire, who taught him several terms; but the first teacher who accomplished much in the instructing of Aaron H. was the late Charles Fry, of York, who was an able man and one of sterling character. Mr. Craley continued to attend the old home school until he had attained the age of eighteen years, his last teacher there being William Miller, who is now a resident of York. Thereafter he attended school in York during several winter terms, assisting in the work of the farm during the summer seasons.

When about nineteen years of age Mr. Craley went to Union county, Ohio, then considered in the far West. He arrived in the Buckeye State in December, and a farmer of the county mentioned offered him $25 a month to feed sheep, being the owner of 2,000 acres of land on the Darby plains. On the farm were kept about two thousand sheep, and by starting early in the morning Mr. Craley was able usually to complete the feeding before five o'clock in the afternoon. He remained thus engaged until April, when another farmer offered him $30 monthly, to be increased to $40 during the harvest season; and he considered himself fortunate in commanding such wages, as the average pay received by farm hands in Pennsylvania at the time was from $6 to $8 per month. In the autumn of the same year he made his initial business experiment in an independent way, going to Morrow county, Ohio, to visit his uncle, and there investing his savings, about $40, in apples, which he shipped to the city of Columbus, where he sold them at a profit of $30. He then invested his $70 in more apples, upon which he cleared $150. With his newly acquired fund Mr. Craley then returned to his home in York county, where he engaged in the cigar and tobacco business, opening a small shop at Martinsville and employing three cigarmakers. Six months later he removed to Craley, where he built the residence now occupied by John Reichard, establishing his shop in the house and employing eight hands. Here his first wife died in 1869, and he later married her sister, after which he went to the river and built a house-boat on the canal, fitting up a shop and increasing his force of workmen to forty-five. He had manufactured a special wagon, and, in company with his wife, started to visit the various towns along the canal, selling his cigars and tobaccos from his vehicle. The wagon was transported on his house-boat from one point to another on the canal, Harrisburg being his first stopping place. There he would usually tie up his boat for two days, starting out with his wagon in the morning and returning at night. In this way he made his way from town to town along the canal and river, penetrating the coal districts and usually being absent from four to six weeks, returning home after disposing of the stock of goods on the boat and then starting out again. This proved a rather idyllic method of living and the profits were of a satisfactory order in a financial way. Mr. Craley knew every grocer on each side of the river for a distance of ten miles inland and between his home and the city of Wilkes-Barre, and he was well known as the "Dutch Yankee," from the fact that he could usually make a dollar where most men would fail. The depredations of the "Molly Maguires" in the coal regions eventually became so flagrant that Mr. Craley did not consider it safe to longer visit that section, as he often found dead men along the river—victims of the members of the society mentioned; so he abandoned his house-boat and his wagon plan of operations after a period of six years, his wife having accompanied him on his various trips. He reverts to this period as one of the most pleasing in his experience. After thus abandoning his boat he returned to Craley and erected a building for a cigar factory, later adding a general store, and further showing his enterprising spirit by building dwellings for rent. At the present time he is the owner of seven residence properties there, besides his own attractive home. In connection with his cigar business he conducted a general merchandise enterprise for eighteen years, and at one time his cigar manufacturing made shipments into the most diverse sections of the Union. He has personally traveled through fifteen or more States in the interest of his business, and he is known and honored as a progressive, reliable and honorable business man and public-spirited citizen. He is now living in comparative retirement, having closed out his cigar manufacturing in 1904.

In politics Mr. Craley is a stanch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and is well fortified in matters of politics and religion. He has a deep reverence for the Christian verities and spiritual truths, but is not formally identified with any religious body. In 1866 Mr. Craley was married to Susan Poff, who died in August, 1869. In November of that year he married Rebecca Poff, a sister of his first wife, and their wedded life extended over a period of thirty-three years. She was summoned into eternal rest Sept. 10, 1903. Mr. Craley’s third marriage was to Miss Mary Frantz, of Mecca, Ind., a well educated and accomplished young lady. John C. H. Frantz, father of Mrs. Craley, was a valiant soldier in the Union army during the entire course of the Civil war, after which he was for five years engaged in Indian fighting in the West. He is now passing the closing years of his life in Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Craley have one child, Aaron J.

FRANK C. WERNER, a contractor and builder residing at No. 855 South Queen street, York, has won success in the fifteen years he has been in business for himself. A native of York, Mr. Werner was born Oct. 23, 1865, son of William and Louise (Schotte) Werner.

William Werner and his wife were natives of Hanover, Germany, and came to America at the ages of twenty and fourteen, respectively. Mr. Werner went directly to York after landing and has resided there ever since, engaged in shoemaking. Like his wife he became a member of St. John’s German Lutheran Church. He had reached the ripe age of seventy-seven, when his wife, twelve years his junior, was taken from him by death, the sad event occurring April 15, 1905. They had only two children—William, a machinist in York, and Frank.

Frank C. Werner was educated in the public schools of York and then learned his trade as a mechanic and carpenter under Nathaniel Weigel (deceased), one of the masters of his craft, and from whom Mr. Werner secured an unusually thorough training. He began with Mr. Weigel in 1882, and remained under him till the latter retired in 1890, and then engaged in contracting on his own account. Starting at the very bottom with no capital, he at first carted his lumber on a small “go-cart,” but his untiring efforts met with deserved reward, and he now does an extensive business. He employs twenty-five carpenters and does most satisfactory work, for his eye is constantly on the construction in hand to insure absolute thoroughness. Among his more important contracts are those for the Main buildings on George street, the Country Club, Claude Craver’s residence, a row of eighteen dwellings on Hayes street, and the Mayer building. He has also done much remodelling.

The family residence was built in 1900, and is a model modern house.

In 1886 occurred Mr. Werner’s marriage to Miss Augusta Weibel, daughter of August Weibel, and to this union ten children have been born, of whom three—Charlie, Louise and Florence—have died. The living are George, John, Frank, Julia, Walter, Clarence and Willie. Mr. and Mrs. Werner are members of the German Lutheran Church, and the former belongs to the Heptasophs.

JAMES EDWARD ILGENFRITZ, postmaster at Woodbine, and also agent for the Adams Express Company at that place, comes of good York county stock.

William Ilgenfritz, his father, was born in York in 1812, son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Deitch) Ilgenfritz. At the age of fifteen, having acquired a substantial training in the rudiments of an education, he became clerk for his uncle, Mr. Barber, who was then prothonotary. He afterward succeeded to that office, and for two terms filled it with great credit. In 1864 he removed to Lower Chanceford and purchased a 500-acre farm on the present site of Woodbine, on the Peach Bottom railroad. On Nov. 28, 1839, he married Elizabeth B. Donaldson, of Baltimore, and they had three children: Alice C., who married Cyrus Calvin, and is deceased; William J., who married, Jan. 11, 1883, Annie J. Boyd; and James Edward. William Ilgenfritz, the father, died in 1877. In politics he was a Democrat, and socially belonged to the L. O. O. F. Mrs. Elizabeth B. (Donaldson) Ilgenfritz died April 17, 1893, a faithful communicant of St. John’s Episcopal Church at York.

James Edward Ilgenfritz was born in York City March 4, 1852, and his native city was his home until he was nearly fourteen years old. Then he accompanied his parents to Woodbine, and on the farm there grew to manhood. His early teachers were James Kell and Mr. Austin, and his education was completed by four terms in Pleasant Grove Academy, in Lower Chanceford. After leaving school he spent four years in car building in the Empire Car Works and with Schall & King, his uncle, George W. Ilgenfritz, holding a large interest in the latter firm. Returning home, he was appointed postmaster, station agent and express agent. Seven years ago he resigned as station agent, but still holds the other two positions. Mr.
Ilgenfritz is industrious, and as he owns and manages a large amount of property inherited from his father, his industry is put to a thorough test.

In 1876, at Woodbine, Mr. Ilgenfritz was married to Julia C. Blaine, of Fawn township, daughter of Moses and Sarah (Bulette) Blaine, both now deceased. Two children were born of this union: Joy A., who married Ivan White, of Bel Air, Md., and has two children, Juliet A. and Janet M.; and Bayard List, living at home. Mr. Ilgenfritz was reared in the Episcopal faith in York, and although after the removal of the family to Woodbine they found no parish of that church there, he has joined no other denomination. Like his father, he is a Democrat, stanch and true, and always interested in his party’s success. He is honorable and upright in his methods, and merits the good will accorded him.

FRANK C. HIESTAND, proprietor of a livery and sales stable at Spring Grove, Jackson township, and one of the substantial business men of the community, was born on a farm in Heidelberg township, York county, Nov. 20, 1857, son of William and Rebecca (Doll) Hiestand.

William Hiestand was born in Spring Garden, York county, in 1814, and was a progressive and successful farmer, who died in 1892 and was buried in York cemetery. His farm, which contained 200 acres, was situated in Heidelberg township, and was justly recognized as one of the best in that portion of York county. He was a man who took a lively interest in the raising of high-grade stock; and he supplied his farm with the latest improved machinery, and conducted it upon modern methods. The excellent house, barns, outbuildings and fences, were all erected by him. His principal crop was wheat, of which he was an extensive grower. Throughout York county, Mr. Hiestand was widely known and universally esteemed for his many sterling traits of character. Mrs. Hiestand was also born in York county, in the vicinity of New Salem, in 1821, and she is still living, making her home in York with her daughter, Mrs. Dietz. She is a daughter of Henry and Barbara Doll. The following children were born to William and Rebecca Hiestand: Herbert, of Red Lion; Annie, wife of Alexander Dietz; Mary, wife of Jacob Liebenknight; Frank C.; Byrd J., of Foutstown; and Maggie, wife of George Kohler.

Abraham Hiestand, his grandfather, was also a native of York county, and a farmer, although in his earlier days he was a distiller. His farm was well-stocked, and one of the model ones of his day. His family was a large one and he was three times married.

Frank C. Hiestand was reared upon the farm, and attended the school of his district until he was eighteen, when he commenced assisting his father on the farm, thus continuing until he was twenty-five years of age. Then he married, and settled in Heidelberg township to engage in farming and stock-raising. At the time of the death of his father he purchased the old homestead of 200 acres, situated two miles west of Spring Grove in Heidelberg township. The farm is a magnificent one, supplied with good buildings, well stocked and furnished with excellent machinery. Mr. Hiestand devotes much of his time to buying and selling horses and mules, many of which he gets from Kentucky and sells to farmers and other horse dealers. In addition to his other interests, Mr. Hiestand is a stockholder and director of the First National Bank of Spring Grove. Taking a deep interest in educational matters, he has served on the school board, and is a man widely and favorably known, standing very high in the community.

In 1881 Mr. Hiestand married Miss Emma Yinger, of Manchester, Pa., a daughter of John and Nancy (Good) Yinger, and a native of York county. The Yinger family is a very old one in America, as is also the Hiestand family. The American founder of the latter was Abraham, who at an early date emigrated from his native land, Germany, to America and became one of the pioneer settlers of York county, Pa. Since that time the representatives of the family have been honorable, upright, Christian gentlemen, who have enjoyed widespread respect and esteem, and who have been successful in the several lines of business with which they have identified themselves. Mr. Hiestand is a stanch Democrat, as were his ancestors before him. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of the Mystic Chain and of the fraternal insurance order known as “True Blues.”

GEORGE C. GILLESPIE was born Aug. 29, 1862, in Rowlandville, Cecil Co., Md., son of Moses N. and Margaret (Moore) Gillespie. His boyhood was spent in Maryland, and he learned the laundry business at Baltimore, with C. A. Wysong, who operated the People's laundry in that city. Mr. Gillespie then decided to embark in business on his own account, and came to York in 1891, as a stranger, and on April 15th of that year, established the business at No. 242 West Market street. He remained there four years and then purchased the property on which he is now located at No. 270 West Market street, the building being reconstructed in 1904. It is known as the People's Laundry. Mr. Gillespie erected his first laundry in 1893, the building being 40 x 15 feet, two stories in height, the present structure being built in 1901; it is a three-story brick building, 110 x 15 feet, and is equipped with all modern machinery. Mr. Gillespie has a full corps of employees and operates a number of outside agencies, extending to some of the northern counties of Maryland. His business is a decided success, and he is a thoroughly competent man in his chosen line.

In 1903 Mr. Gillespie was married in York to Miss Sarah Isabelle Barrett, daughter of James and Sarah Barrett, and they have one child, Nellie C. Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie are members of Grace Reformed Church of York. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Royal Arcanum. Codorus Council, No. 2091.

MICHAEL G. WAMBAUGH, a cigar manufacturer of Lower Windsor township, York county, was born July 30, 1866, on a farm in York township, son of Jacob R. and Angelina (Peters) Wambaugh. He was educated in the township schools, his first teacher being George Dunlap, who is a Lutheran preacher; his education was concluded at the age of nineteen years under Arthur Sechrist. While a young man Mr. Wambaugh learned the cigar making trade with Henry Wise, and began business for himself in 1894, at what is now Golden, his force consisting of three employees. Mr. Wambaugh engaged in the mercantile business at Golden and Yorkana for about three years, and then, some two years ago, returned to the manufacture of cigars, which he has since continued. Since he was twenty-four years of age, Mr. Wambaugh has been active in politics, casting his first vote for President Cleveland. In religion he is connected with the Evangelical Church, of which he is a valued member. He is considered one of the well-to-do, up-to-date business men of the township in which he is generally known and most highly respected.

On Aug. 4, 1890, in Springetsbury township, Mr. Wambaugh was married to Miss A. Ream, who died Feb. 16, 1900, leaving one child, Helen Ruth. His second marriage was on May 25, 1902, to Virginia M. Thomas, daughter of Jacob Thomas, and they have had two children—Martha May and Mary Ellen. Jacob Thomas, the father of Mrs. Wambaugh, was born Dec. 20, 1824, in Hellam township, son of Jacob and Mary (Young) Thomas. Mr. Thomas attended school until the age of nineteen years, assisting on the farm during his spare time. He learned the carpenter's trade with P. W. Keller, of Lower Windsor township, and followed that vocation for thirty or forty years, for about twenty years of the period being a contractor and building some of the finest residences and barns in the township. Mr. Thomas lived in various places until 1882, when he located in Lower Windsor township, on the York road, near Delroy, and remained there until 1895 when he started to build the home which he now occupies. He has twenty acres of land, which he has under a fine state of cultivation, being a successful farmer and contractor of thirty years' experience. Mr. Thomas was reared in the faith of the United Evangelical Church. His political faith finds its best expression in the Republican party's platform.

On Dec. 18, 1856, Mr. Thomas married in Hellam township, Rebecca Crumling, daughter of Adam and Magdalena (Sloat) Crumling, of Hellam township, and these children have been born to the union: Clayton, of Lower Windsor township, married a Miss Leber, daughter of Jacob Leber; Weston Seth, of York, married a Miss Paules; Elmer E. married a Miss Biggins; Emma married Elmer Miller, of York; Virgie May is the wife of Mr. Wambaugh; Annie married Frank Reisinger, and resides at home; Abner resides in York; and two died in infancy.

ALEXANDER ERNEST McLAUCHLIN, although a resident of York county for less than a decade, has in that time proved himself an enterprising business man. A descendant of Scotch ancestry, his grandfather emigrated Alexander A. McLaughlin was a large land owner and real estate dealer, who also carried on an extensive tanning and shoe business and later in life was interested in lumber and milling. His death occurred in February, 1896, during a tour through Canada, at a town called Oakwood, Ontario. His wife, whose maiden name was Edna Pearson, followed him in May of the next year, and both are buried at Oakwood, in a cemetery that he gave to the town. The children born to them were: William E.; George, who died in infancy; Susan C.; Flora J.; Joseph H., who died at Brandon, Canada, in 1898; Alma E.; Bayard T., who was drowned at the age of seven; Alexander E.; Ida, who was killed in childhood by the fall of a shed; Cora B. and Alice C. (twins); Edgar E.; and Ada M.

Alexander E. McLaughlin was born at Oakwood, Ontario, Nov. 14, 1859. Until he was sixteen his education was carried on in the public schools, but after that time he attended the Albert College at Belleville, Ont., and was graduated with the class of 1880. Mr. McLaughlin's business life began as a clerk, but after six months in that capacity he went to Toledo, Ohio, as lumber inspector for G. W. Hubbard; after a year there, in the latter part of 1881 he removed to Victoria and Winnipeg in a similar position, but eventually returned home and bought a half interest in a large stone quarry owned by his father. For a year he gave his entire attention to this enterprise, then in turn was in Detroit, Mich., in Toronto, in Port Huron for a year with the Chicago & Grand Trunk Railway, in Canada again for three years in a government position, and then in New York City for eight months. On Feb. 10, 1896, Mr. McLaughlin came to York Haven as superintendent of the Conewago Manufacturing Co., remaining with that concern until it suspended business. His next engagement was with the York Haven Paper Mill, and then in the spring of 1901 he accepted his present position as secretary and treasurer of the Susquehanna Roofing Manufacturing Co. His interest in the plant has always been keen, as he was one of those who formed it, and he is a director and stockholder of the company. Mr. McLaughlin has been very successful in his enterprises, and is justly ranked among the substantial men of his community.

In 1887 Mr. McLaughlin was united in marriage to Cecelia M. Wellwood, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Finley) Wellwood. Their only child, Wellwood G., was born July 20, 1901. Mr. McLaughlin is a member of the United Brethren Church, and is prominent in its work, as he is secretary of the Sunday-school, and has been both president and recording secretary of the Y. P. C. U. He is a member of the K. of P., I. O. O. F., and Knights of Malta.

JAMES C. PEELING, proprietor and manager of a bakery at No. 113 North Queen street, York, is a native of the township of York, born near Dallastown, April 20, 1851, son of James and Sarah (Inners) Peeling.

James Peeling, the father, was born in 1823, and passed his whole life in York county. At first engaged in farming, he afterward followed the occupation of a well-digger and still later became a hotel keeper. He first conducted the “Farmers’ Hotel” in York, remaining there two years and a half before removing to the “Caslow House.” While thus engaged Mr. Peeling was elected sheriff on the county Democratic ticket and filled that responsible position for three years. The remainder of his life, which drew to its close in 1895, was passed on his farm in Conewago township, which consisted of 202 acres and to whose management he gave his entire attention. An active worker in the Democratic party, Mr. Peeling was also one of the well-known supporters of religious work, being a member of the Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Sarah (Inners) Peeling, who died in 1871, was the mother of eight children, viz.: Sarah (deceased), wife of Theodore Krebs; Eliza, who married Isaac McDowell, both now deceased; Isabelle, Mrs. George Egee, of York; Ellen, wife of the late John Cameron, of Baltimore; James C.; Isaac, deceased; Mary, Mrs. Samuel Gallatin, of York; and Rebecca, deceased wife of Frank Westerholts. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Peeling married Miss Dorcas Ann Leib, and by her became the father of seven children, namely: Lucinda, Mrs. Harry Wasbers, of York; Joshua, operator of a stone quarry at Round Town; Samuel, a farmer in Conewago township; Alfaretta, deceased: Martha, Mrs. Ort Falkenrode, of York; Harris, of the same city; and Ida, wife of Isaac Bupp.

James C. Peeling was sent to the public schools, and while still a boy, learned the trade of basket-weaving. Afterward he worked for a time on the farm, assisted his father as a well-digger and a hotel keeper, and, after the latter's election as sheriff, was appointed turnkey. When the term of office was completed, Mr. Peeling entered upon the business which has since occupied his entire attention, and in 1890 opened a bakery on South George street. There he succeeded so well that in 1897 he moved to his present location, where he built a brick structure, combining his residence and shop, with a bake house and stable in the rear. He does a general bakery business, and also fills orders for weddings and parties, while for the delivery of his bread-stuffs he keeps three wagons, so great is the demand upon his supplies. He has been very successful and is one of the leading bakers in York.

In 1876 Mr. Peeling was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Jane Dick, daughter of Jacob H. and Charlotte (Wilt) Dick. They have brought up an adopted child, a nephew, Charles, the son of William Dick, who, in 1903, was married to Miss Annie Cameron, by whom he has one child, James. Mr. and Mrs. Peeling are members of the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Peeling is a Democrat, and an active member of the party. He also belongs to the I. O. R. M., of York.

JESSE GILBERT comes of ancestors who settled in Lancaster county at an early day and were descended from John Gilbert, who lived in the west of Cornwall, England, whence, being a Quaker, he was banished in 1663 on account of his faith. For some time he was imprisoned in Lancaster jail, and then with others of his faith emigrated to America. Soon after the grant of Pennsylvania to William Penn the party of which John Gilbert was a member settled near what is now Perkasie, Bucks county. John Gilbert had brought his wife, Florence, and his two sons, John and Joseph, the latter being about seven or eight years old; and after landing in America another son, Joshua, was born. It is believed that John Gilbert did not leave the Society of Friends with the deluded followers of George Kent. In 1695 he purchased 600 acres of land from Nicholas Redrone, located in Byberry, Philadelphia county. Mr. Redrone having bought it from the original owner and surveyor, Thomas Holmes. Part of this land John Gilbert sold to John Carver, dividing the remainder between his sons, John and Joseph.

Joseph Gilbert married Rachel Loegy, of Abington or Lower Dublin, and settled on the tract of land left him by his father, where he died Aug. 8, 1765, aged ninety years. After bearing him several children his first wife died, and he married (second) Sarah James.

Benjamin Gilbert, the youngest son of Joseph, was born in 1711, and in June, 1731, married Sarah, daughter of Benjamin Mason. By this marriage he had eight children. He and his wife settled on a tract of land purchased by Mr. Gilbert's father in Richland, Bucks county, but in 1748 he removed to a mill in Wakefield, in 1755 removing to his father's homestead. His first wife died in 1759, and in 1761 he was again married, his second wife being Elizabeth Peart, widow of Benjamin Peart, and daughter of Benjamin Walters. Benjamin Gilbert, after settling the homestead on his sons John and Joshua, removed with the balance of his family to the wilderness west of the Blue mountains, on lands he had purchased on Mahoning creek, Northampton county, nine miles from the Lehigh river, this being Pennsylvania's frontier settlement. There he built a dwelling, barn and grist and sawmill. Benjamin Peart, the son of Mr. Gilbert's last wife, had also gone there to reside, as well as Mr. Gilbert's sons, Thomas and Jesse, the latter of whom had married a Bucks county girl. The settlement was suddenly surprised by a band of Indians, April 25, 1780. Benjamin was seized and bound with a strip of bark, which was wound around his neck and crossed behind his shoulders and around his arms to deprive him of the use of his hands. The balance of the men were captured, the houses and mills plundered, and the prisoners taken to Niagara, where their release was purchased by English officers, and they were sent to Montreal. Benjamin Gilbert died on the passage down the St. Lawrence, was taken ashore, and buried June 5, 1780. The remainder of the family made their way to Montreal in safety.

Jesse Gilbert, son of Benjamin, and the grandfather of the Jesse of today, married Sarah Harding and settled at Bird in Hand, Lancaster county, where he farmed and followed his trade of plow-making. There he died, as did also his wife, who had been bedridden for twelve years with rheumatism. This good couple were Quakers. Their children were; Amos (born among the Indians), married Sarah Kirk, and died in Lancaster county; Betsey died in infancy; Benjamin, who died in Colerain, Lancaster county, married Hannah Rakestraw; Sarah became Mrs. Henry Bushong, of Lancaster county; John died in Lancaster county; Joshua was the father of Jesse; and Caroline died aged sixty-four years, in Chester county.

Joshua Gilbert was born in 1801, at Bird in Hand, Lancaster county, and there grew to manhood, receiving a common-school education. He read medicine, but never engaged in the practice of the profession. He learned pump-making, which he followed extensively, also engaging occasionally in work on the farm which he had purchased in Bart township, Lancaster county. There he remained until 1804, when he sold the property and purchased a 200-acre farm (with his son, Jesse, as partner) in Upper Oxford township; after selling this he removed to West Grove, Chester county, where he died in 1876, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Sarah Hagie. In 1824 he married Elizabeth Valentine, daughter of John and Mary (Taylor) Valentine, the former of whom was a Whig and an anti-slavery man, being active in the management of "underground railway" committees. The mother of Mrs. Gilbert died in 1838. She and her husband were Quakers. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert were as follows: Lydia, Thomas and Anne, all of whom died in infancy; Mary, Mrs. John Owen, of Manayunk, Pa.; Jesse, whose biography is below; and Sarah, Mrs. Benjamin Hagie, deceased.

Jesse Gilbert was born on the homestead in Bart township, Lancaster county, Aug. 22, 1834, and received his education in the public schools of that township. He was also taught by private tutors at home, completing his training at the age of twenty-one years. He began work on the farm at home at the age of fourteen years, being sixteen when he engaged in pump-making with his father. At that industry he continued until 1868, when he located on his present farm in Lower Chanceford township, which he had purchased from Mary St. Clair Johnston. The property at that time was in very poor condition, but Mr. Gilbert has converted his 180 acres into one of the best farms in the country. Up to the last few years Mr. Gilbert operated a dairy in connection with his farm, but this he has discontinued. He raises fine cattle and stock, at the present time feeding many head.

Mr. Gilbert is a member of the Society of Friends, while his wife is a Presbyterian. While he is a Republican, Mr. Gilbert is not prejudiced and votes more for the person than the party. He is a man of strong convictions, and is highly esteemed in the community for his many sterling traits of character. He was married June 3, 1807, to Miss Anna Hunter, who was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, June 2, 1835. Mrs. Gilbert was educated in the common schools and the Millersville Normal, and taught school for five years in Lancaster county.

Mrs. Gilbert's parents were Alexander and Mary (Park) Hunter, the former of whom was a native of Ireland, and came to America when a boy. Mrs. Hunter was reared in Chester county, Pa., the place of her nativity. Mrs. Gilbert had four brothers in the Civil war, namely: (1) George Hunter served six months. (2) Joseph Hunter, sergeant of Company C, 5th Pa. Cav., was captured at the last siege of Richmond, and taken to Andersonville prison, where he was confined several months. Sick and emaciated—a mere skeleton of his former self—he was removed to the hospital at Florence, where he died Oct. 4, 1864. (3) John A. Hunter served four years as a private of the 7th Pa. Reserves, belonging to Company K. He was captured in the first fight before Richmond and taken to Belle Isle, where he was detained six months, until he was exchanged. At the second fight before Richmond he was again captured, being in Andersonville prison from July until December, at which time he was again exchanged. He reached home a total physical wreck. John A. Hunter still survives, in spite of his terrible experiences, and lives at Rising Sun, Md., where he is known as one of the best millwrights in the country. (4) James McCammon Hunter, of Clarion, Pa., was first a private of Company I, 107th P. V. I., and was wounded at the battle of Fair Oaks. He re-enlisted in the 5th Artillery, was again wounded and was sent to the hospital, from which he again joined his regiment, serving until the close of the war. He carries two bullets to this day, one in the right shoulder, and the under his left arm.

MICHAEL ENGLE, contractor and builder at York, began life a poor boy, with no capital save brains, energy and courage, and he has become one of the prosperous citizens of the county. He was born Oct. 16, 1849, within a short distance of the place where he is now residing in York, son of Joseph and Catherine (Bucher) Engle.

The Engle family is of French origin. Joseph Engle was born in York. He was the son of Joseph, Sr., and Barbara Engle, the former of whom died in middle life. Joseph Engle spent his entire life in York, and died in 1901, at the age of seventy-eight years. He made a business of lime burning, and he and his brother, Jacob, controlled the bulk of that business in this section of the State, operating extensively and shipping to various localities, their kilns being where Prospect Hill cemetery is now located. Joseph Engle was a public-spirited man, and was active in the ranks of the Republican party. In religion he was a member of the Moravian Church. He married Catherine Bucher, who was born in Germany, and came to America with her parents when eleven or twelve years old. She is still living in York, being now upwards of eighty years old. To Joseph Engle and wife were born the following children: Jacob, a resident of Grantley street, York, and in the employ of the city; Michael; Margareta; Joseph, a contractor-plasterer of Philadelphia; Thomas, a cement contractor; Barbara, the wife of Eli Byerts, of York; and three that died young.

Michael Engle attended the public schools until fourteen years old, when the necessity of self-support compelled him to exchange study for labor. Until he was nineteen years of age he worked with his father in the stone quarry, and then began to learn the trade of a plasterer with Weigel & Slonaker. At the expiration of his apprenticeship he associated himself with Mr. Slonaker, his former employer, under the firm name of Engle & Slonaker, which partnership continued for three years, after which Mr. Engle assumed the business himself. He conducted it successfully and extensively for twenty-seven years, during this period having some of the heaviest contracts in the city, among the buildings he has contracted to plaster and finish being the old High School; Judge Black’s residence; M. B. Spahr’s large store; the Huber corner; the E. G. Smyser residence; the Y. M. C. A. building; two fine residences for Ed. Chopin; and the Presbyterian, the First United Brethren, the Trinity Reformed, the German Lutheran, the Freystown, St. Paul’s and North York St. Peter’s churches. In addition to those mentioned, he has handled many others in and around York. Michael Engle has a business record of which he may well be proud. He has always met his obligations promptly, and never asked his creditors for an extension, nor compromised an obligation. About 1894 Mr. Engle retired from the plastering business and engaged in that of cement contracting, for the laying of granolithic paving, in which line he has extensively operated. Although Mr. Engle has employed a large force of men, he has always given the detail work his personal attention. He also engaged in new line, in connection with his other interests, having purchased the old York Manufacturing plant, where he commenced the manufacture of furniture under the firm name of the Engle Furniture Works, located at Pennsylvania and Clark Alley. This he sold and purchased a plant in Gettysburg, Pa., where he has been located since February, 1905. He employs about twenty-five hands.

Mr. Engle is a Republican and has been elected assessor from a ward heavily Democratic. Notwithstanding his active business life, Mr. Engle has never been too busy to serve his city. His predominant quality is to accomplish whatever he undertakes, and his success has been marked. In his private life he belongs to the best element in the community. He was married Dec. 23, 1879, to Miss Caroline W. Neff, daughter of Charles H., and Mary A. (Gist) Neff. Mrs. Engle’s father died May 31, 1903, at the age of sixty-nine years, ten months and seventeen days, while her mother passed away Dec. 29, 1884, at the age of forty-six years and seven months. Charles H. Neff was a carriage builder of York, where he spent his entire life except a short time before his death, which occurred in Florida where he had gone to recover his health. Mrs. Engle’s parents were blessed with three children: T. Harry, a resident of Columbus, Ohio, is a contractor for the Frick Manufacturing Company, of Waynesboro; H. Edith; and Caroline W. is the wife of Mr. Engle.

Mrs. Engle’s grandfather was Henry Neff, son of Henry Neff, the founder of the family in York. The elder Henry Neff established a carriage-making plant at York on Beaver street, where the Central market stands. After his death, his son Henry erected a second story to the shop and operated it until his son, Charles H., the father of Mrs. Engle, took the estate, this being about 1855. Here Charles H. Neff remained for a time and then built a carriage shop on Philadelphia street, the largest in York. After a time he sold both places, retired from active life and moved into the country. He was a Republican, although his father was a member of the Democratic party. Mr. Neff was one of the progressive men of the city, being a promoter of the first building and loan association of York, which was established in 1869. At one time Mr. Neff was the secretary of seven building and loan associations and for years was the main factor in the local organizations. He was a member of Mt. Zion Lodge, of the York I. O. O. F., and of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Mr. Neff married the daughter of Thomas W. and Harriet (Smith) Gist, of Baltimore Co., Md. The grandmother Neff was a Miss Henrietta M. Knoderer, born in France, where her father was a weaver. After leaving her home near Mont Blanc, France, she came to America and settled in York county.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Engle are the parents of four children: Charles J., a machinist, and Mary E., Paul E. and Henrietta Neff, all living at home. They are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and their youngest son, Paul E. Engle, has a record for attendance at the Sabbath school of which he may justly be proud, having never missed a service in a period of eleven years. Mr. Engle is a member of Mt. Zion's Lodge No. 474, I. O. O. F.; Mount Vernon Encampment, No. 14, I. O. O. F.; Livingston Council, No. 925. Junior Order United American Mechanics; the Chosen Knights Commandery, Knights of Malta, and Good Shepherd Lodge No. 4, Star of Bethlehem. He has been identified with these numerous fraternal organizations for many years, having especially filled the chairs of Odd Fellowship, and has always been noted for the zeal with which he has promoted their objects and lived up to their rules.

George Kraft, father of Jesse and grandfather of McClellan B., was also a native of York county, Pa., and a farmer and merchant widely known throughout Heidelberg township. Jesse Kraft was born in York county, Aug. 5, 1828, and became a farmer, miller and merchant, operating for many years what is known as Kraft's mill in Heidelberg township. Now he is living retired, highly respected by all. His wife, Lucinda Baughman, was born near Lineboro, York county, in 1832, a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Bricker) Baughman, and she died in 1875. They were the parents of nine children: Emma, Alice, George A., Sarah, Mary, McC. B., William G., Annie and Ellen, all living.

The education of McClellan B. Kraft was accomplished in the public schools of Heidelberg township, city of York, and at the Cumberland Valley Normal school, where he remained two years, after which he taught school in York county for three years. At that time, he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company as a clerk in the superintendent's office at York. This institution is quick to recognize true ability, and the ambitious young man was advanced step by step until he was given the responsible position of clerk to Superintendent J. B. Hutchinson, at York. In that capacity he discharged his duties in so acceptable a manner that he was promoted to the agency at Spring Grove, which position he has held for a number of years.

In 1892 Mr. Kraft married Lucy K. Glatfelter, a daughter of Edward Glatfelter, superintendent of one of the departments of the Glatfelter Paper mill. The mother of Mrs. Kraft bore the maiden name of Sarah A. Harman, and both she and Mr. Glatfelter are natives of York county, where Mr. Glatfelter was born May 31, 1839. Mr. and Mrs. Kraft settled in Spring Grove after their marriage, and have since resided there. They have one daughter, Helen Lucille. Fraternally, Mr. Kraft is a member of Hanover Lodge, A. F. & A. M. He and his wife are affiliated with St. Paul's Lutheran Church, in which they are highly valued members. Mr. Kraft is a stockholder in the People's National Bank of Hanover, Pa., and a stockholder in the First National Bank of Spring Grove, and owns considerable very valuable real estate in the city.

JOHN CASPAR HECKERT. That honest and well directed effort will overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles is aptly illustrated in the life of John C. Heckert, who was left an orphan at the age of nine years, and has ever since fought the battle of life unaided. He was born in Hochstadt, Germany, July 27, 1862, son of Philip and Ann Mary (Eibelshauser) Heckert.

Mr. Heckert received his earliest instruction at home and this beginning was supplemented by a term at the Hanau school, in Germany. When he was fourteen he left school and served for the following three years as an apprentice at the trade of shoemaking. On completing his term, in 1880, he crossed the ocean to seek his fortune in America, and went directly to Dallastown, York Co., Pa., where relatives of his mother lived. Of the family left in Germany, one brother, Peter, has for over forty years held a very important and responsible position with one of the great railroads of the empire.

After arriving at Dallastown, Mr. Heckert's keen discernment convinced him that the manufacture of cigars was destined to become the leading industry of the community, and therefore he learned the trade immediately, at the same time improving his knowledge of English under a private tutor. In 1884 he felt himself in a position to begin the business on his own account, and he started with a force of six employees. His success is attested by the fact that to-day he employs in his factories at Dallastown and Stewartstown about one hundred people.

A man who has shown such ability in the direction of his own affairs has naturally been connected with many of the enterprises of the town; he is vice-president of the First National Bank, which he helped to found; is treasurer and director of the Dallastown Cigar Box Company; president of the Water Company, and one of the owners of the Dallastown Market House, while his interest in other affairs is demonstrated by his position as trustee of Lebanon Valley College, at Annville, Pa., and also as trustee of the United Brethren Church. In every capacity he displays the same strength of character and executive ability and commands universal respect. He has never given much time to political matters, but casts his vote and lends his influence in favor of the Republican party.

Mr. Heckert was married April 22, 1884, to Miss Elizabeth Jane Kauffman, daughter of Solomon and Rachel (Dougherty) Kauffman, of York township. Nine children have been born to them, of whom the following seven are living: Benjamin H., Sadie V., Chauncey A., Nettie E., Rachel G., John C., and Florence.

ALBERT REHMeyer, who has advanced from a modest beginning until he is now one of the largest mill operators of York county, was born in Shrewsbury township, Oct. 17, 1871. The paternal grandparents were Christopher and Mary Rehmeyer, the former of whom died in 1900, and the latter, in 1905, her decease occurring in Shrewsbury township, at the age of eighty-seven years. Their children were as follows: Charles, father of Albert; Henry, of Shrewsbury township; William, of Baltimore; John, of Hopewell; Edward and Augustus, of Shrewsbury; Mary, Mrs. George McCann, of York; and Leah, Mrs. Amos Sweitzer, of Hopewell. Charles Rehmeyer married Mary Sweitzer, the first-born in a family consisting of the following other members: Amos, of Hopewell; Frank, of York; Wesley, of Hopewell; Catherine, Mrs. Henry Newhouse; Martha, Mrs. Frank Hildebrand; and Ellen, who married Joshua Gladfelter, and died several years ago. The family born to Charles and Mary S. Rehmeyer numbered five, namely: Albert; Saloma, Mrs. Curtis Krout, of Shrewsbury township; Clara; Edward; and Wilson.

Albert Rehmeyer attended the public schools at Mt. Airy and Darwen Hill, York county, and then worked for a time on his father's farm, and in 1889 entered upon his career in the milling business. He began in the employ of his uncle, Edward Rehmeyer, a miller of the old time, and remained with him until 1892, learning all the details of the industry. He then took the Shalls mill in Shrewsbury, and, after operating it for three years, bought the Allen Run mill in 1895. He remained there in the vicinity of Gatchellville, and was very successful in his operations, but in 1903 disposed of that property also and bought the Woodbine mill in Fawn township. It is one of the oldest and best known in the county, and has been extensively renovated and improved by Mr. Rehmeyer, who has installed complete modern machinery for flourmaking, including three double stands of rolls. The mill now has a daily capacity of fifty barrels and the "White Loaf" and other brands of flour are very popular. The farm connected with the establishment embraces a tract of 267 acres. In addition to his private operations, Mr. Rehmeyer has a stockholder's interest in the People's National Bank of Stewartstown.

In 1893, Mr. Rehmeyer and Annie Wolfe, of Shrewsbury, were united in marriage. Mrs. Rehmeyer was the daughter of Charles and Ellen (Thompson) Wolfe, and had one sister, Addie, who married Jesse Eaton, of Shrewsbury township. The children born to the union of Albert and Annie Rehmeyer are five in number—Cora, Reba, Clara, Melvin and John.

HENRY E. SMITH, a native son of York county who has achieved success in business, is engaged in plumbing, tinning and general contracting in York, where he controls a large and representative trade. He was born in York, York county, Feb. 23, 1861, son of William Wilson and Lydia (Hartman) Smith.

William Wilson Smith was born in York, in 1819, and was a member of one of the sterling pioneer families of the old Keystone commonwealth. He was a shoemaker by trade, following this vocation from 1844 until 1877, while he passed the closing years of his life in the city of York, where he died in 1894. His father, George Washington Smith, was a native of Chester county, Pa. Mrs. Lydia (Hartman) Smith was born in York county, in 1834, daughter of Adam Hartman, who was a well known farmer and highly respected citizen of Spring Garden township. She was summoned into eternal rest in 1898. Of the two children of William W. and Lydia Smith, Henry E. is the younger; his brother, Sheldon F., is also a resident of York. The parents were devoted members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, in York; and the father was originally a Whig and later a Republican in his political adherence. He had been twice married, his first wife having been Charlotte Stair. She died some years after their marriage, leaving five children. Of these but two survive, Malcolm O., of Hanover; and Carrie, who lives in York.

Henry E. Smith secured his early educational training in the public schools of the city of York, continuing his studies there until he had attained the age of sixteen years, and having completed a course in the Grammar school. Upon leaving school he entered the plumbing establishment of the firm of Getz & Horn, where he learned the trades of plumbing and tinning, becoming an expert workman, and continuing in the employ of this firm for a period of four years, at the expiration of which he went to the city of Philadelphia. There he followed his trade as a journeyman until September, 1884, when he returned to York and established himself in the plumbing and tinning business, beginning operations upon a somewhat modest scale, but putting forth such well directed efforts that his business soon began to extend rapidly in scope and importance, while he gained a high reputation for reliability and fidelity to contracts. The demands of his business led him to soon augment his stock and facilities, and he added mantels and tiles to his stock, and also began contracting in the line of heating apparatus, especially in the installing of hot-air furnaces, while his well-equipped headquarters are found at Nos. 203-205 West Market street. Mr. Smith carries a select and complete stock of plumbers' supplies and materials, as well as mantels and stoves, while he controls a large jobbing business, which extends into a wide radius of country. He has secured many contracts in neighboring towns and cities, and gives employment to three skilled mechanics.

Mr. Smith is a stanch Republican in his political proclivities. Both he and his wife are valued members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church; and fraternally he is affiliated with the Improved Order of Heptasophs, and B. P. O. Elks, No. 213.

On April 15, 1879, Mr. Smith wedded Miss Mary E. Lehman, daughter of John B. and Susan Lehman, well-known citizens of York, where she was born and reared, and of this union have been born two daughters, Caroline B. and Florence, both of whom are graduates of the York high school, while both have also availed themselves of the advantages of the Woman's College in Baltimore, Md. They are popular in the social life of York, and are among the city's prominent young folk.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN MORRIS, of Fawn Grove, was born Oct. 11, 1855, in Fawn township, York county, to Edward and Elizabeth (Taylor) Morris. His parents were both natives of that township, and their children were: Charles W., of Fawn; John R., of Harford county, Md.; Benjamin F.; E. N. of Fawn Grove; Nancy Jane, widow of Alexander Trout; Mary Catherine, widow of John Edie; Rachel, Mrs. William Wilson; and Lucy, Mrs. Daniel Wilhelm, of Baltimore county, Md. Edward Morris died in 1897, and his wife had passed away the previous year.

In boyhood Benjamin F. Morris attended the township schools of Fawn and, when he was old enough to do a man’s work, was employed for several years on his father’s farm. He then bought a farm of A. Van Zant, near Constitution, York county, which he tilled for a number of years. In 1893 he also purchased the property of Asa Jones, in Fawn Grove borough, and has since resided there. A Democrat in politics, he has been active in local affairs and has filled various offices. Besides serving as school director, Mr. Morris has for ten years filled the position of burgess in Fawn Grove; elected first in 1893, he has been twice re-elected and has discharged his duties most efficiently.

Mr. Morris was married in 1884, being united to Miss Mary M. Herbert, of Fawn township, daughter of Thomas H. and Melissa J. (Jones) Herbert. The children born to this union are: Arlington H., Milton T., Charles E., Carrie O., Marie and Anetta. On May 13, 1903, Mr. Morris met with a severe accident which nearly proved fatal. He sustained fractures of the leg, arm and head, with other grave injuries, but his hardy constitution and indomitable will enabled him to recover, although he still suffers from the effects of the shock. In religious belief he is a member of the Methodist Protestant Church of Fawn Grove. He is a trustee of that organization, has been class leader, and all the members of his family are identified with it.

CHARLES W. HEIM, of East Prospect, is a native of the old Keystone State, born in Columbia, Lancaster county, June 25, 1863, son of George and Christina Heim. His father was born in Germany in the year 1832, and in the Fatherland received good educational advantages, and there learned the shoemaker’s trade. He continued to devote his attention to his trade until he had attained the age of twenty years, when he severed home ties and departed for America, where he felt assured of better opportunities for gaining success through his own efforts. His financial resources were merely nominal at the time of his arrival in the port of New York City. From the national metropolis he came to York county, Pa., locating in the borough of East Prospect, where he was employed at his trade for the ensuing two years, at the expiration of which he removed to Columbia, Lancaster county. There was solemnized his marriage, his wife being a native of Germany who had come to the United States at the same time as he, though they did not become acquainted until his removal to Columbia. After his marriage Mr. Heim continued to follow his trade in Columbia until 1876, when he purchased a farm in Lower Windsor township, York county, and thereafter gave his undivided attention to its cultivation and improvement until 1886, when he returned to Columbia, where he has since been engaged in the shoe-making business, retaining possession of his farm, which he rents. He is a stanch Democrat in his political proclivities and his religious faith is that of the Lutheran Church, of which his wife also was a devoted member; her death occurred in 1894. Of the four children of this worthy couple the following brief data are offered: George, who is a conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad, maintains his home in Columbia; John is an engineer on the same railway line and likewise resides in Columbia; Charles W. is mentioned below; Lily is the wife of Edward Marley, of Columbia.

Charles W. Heim passed the first twelve years of his life in his native town of Columbia, Lancaster county, in whose public schools he secured his rudimentary education. At the age noted he accompanied his parents on their removal to the farm in Lower Windsor township, York county, where he reached manhood, assisting in the work of the farm during the summer seasons and attending the district school during the winter terms until he had attained to the age of eighteen years; his instructor during his final school work was Samuel A. Gilbert, one of the county’s representative citizens. Mr. Heim continued to assist his father in the work of the farm until he was twenty-two years old, when (in 1885) he was married and started his independent career. He devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits in Lower Windsor township for the ensuing five years, and then purchased the hotel at East Prospect, which he successfully conducted for four years, at the expiration of which he sold the property to J. F. Bossum. During the following year Mr. Heim was not actively engaged in business, but in 1896 became the proprietor of a bakery in East Prospect, succeeding to the business formerly conducted by H. E. Gresser. He built up the enterprise and made it one of the leading concerns of the sort in this section, continuing to conduct it for six years and then advantageously disposing of the business. He next established himself in the grocery business, purchasing the building which he now occupies, and with this enterprise he has since been successfully identified, having a large and well appointed store in which are handled staple and fancy groceries and table delicacies, ice cream and confectionery. the two lines last mentioned being made a prominent feature of the business. Mr. Heim has ever pursued a straightforward course, has shown marked discrimination and ability and has been at times a loyal and progressive citizen, so that it has been but a natural sequel that he has retained the good-will and high regard of those with whom he has been associated. In politics he is staunchly Democratic, but he has never been ambitious to hold office, and fraternally he is identified with Winona Lodge, No. 944, I. O. O. F., of which he is past grand and with Aurora Lodge, No. 304, Jr. O. U. A. M. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, and his wife is an active member of that denomination.

On Sept. 27, 1885, Mr. Heim was united in marriage to Emma S. Leber, of Windsor township, the ceremony being performed at Wrightsville, by Rev. Levi Seachrist, pastor of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Heim was born and reared in Windsor township, daughter of Nathaniel and Julia (Hengst) Leber, both of whom are now deceased. Her father was a tanner by trade and a man of prominence in his community, as is indicated by the fact that he served a term as a member of the board of commissioners of York county. Mr. and Mrs. Heim have no children.

JAMES H. BLASSER is a representative of one of the sterling pioneer families of York county. His great-great-grandfather, Peter Blasser, was a Mennonite clergyman who left Switzerland in 1754, on account of religious persecution, and emigrated to America, locating in York county, where he passed the remainder of his long and noble life and where many of his descendants are to be found today. John Blasser, grandfather of James H., passed his entire life in York county. He owned and operated a fulling mill and an oil mill, the latter being utilized for the manufacture of linseed oil. He was a prominent and influential citizen and commanded uniform esteem in the community where he lived and labored to such worthy ends.

George Blasser, father of James H., was a cabinetmaker by trade, and followed that occupation for many years in Shrewsbury in connection with the undertaking business. He finally became a farmer and the owner of the fine estate known as Woodlands, at Shrewsbury, where he died Dec. 24, 1875, at the age of sixty-six years. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Klinefelter, was born in Shrewsbury, daughter of Joseph Klinefelter, a well known tanner of that place. She is now deceased. In the family were eleven children, of whom five are living, namely: Mary, wife of Thomas Benton, who is engaged in the insurance business in York; Susan R.; Amelia, wife of John Singer, of York; Emma R., wife of Henry Gray, a farmer of near Lared, Kans.; and James H.

James H. Blasser was born in Shrewsbury township, York county, Aug. 9, 1831, and, after having passed through the common schools of the locality, enjoyed the further advantage of receiving instruction under the Rev. Andrew Berg, a clergyman of the Lutheran Church. Somewhat later he assumed the study of medicine, having as his preceptor Dr. James H. Sterner, of Baltimore, and he finally entered the Medical Department of the University of Maryland, from which he was graduated with the degree of M. D. The practice of medicine, however, proved distasteful to him, and he has given little attention to professional work. Upon his return to York county he engaged in teaching, continuing to follow the pedagogic profession most successfully from 1854 until 1861, when he responded to the higher demands of patriotism. On Aug. 19, 1861, Mr. Blasser enlisted as a private in Company D, 87th P. V. I., which was the first command to leave York county for the front. He was made first sergeant in his company, and served as such until May 9, 1862, when he was promoted to be second lieutenant, while Oct. 25th of the same year he was made first lieutenant. On May 10, 1863, Lieut. Blasser was promoted to the captaincy of his company, and he continued in that position until March 9, 1864, when he resigned from the service and received his honorable discharge. His regiment was assigned to the Army of the Potomac, and participated in a number of the important engagements of the great conflict, Capt. Blasser's military record being that of a valiant, loyal and faithful son of the republic.

After his return home Captain Blasser became a surveyor and civil engineer, following that profession until 1873, when he was made deputy prothonotary of York county, serving thus for five years, when he was made court crier and interpreter of German. After acceptably and ably serving in this dual office about six years he became bookkeeper in the local office of the Standard Oil Company, holding the position twelve years, after which he was a clerical assistant in the office of the A. B. Farquhar Company for three years. At the expiration of this interval, April 6, 1902, he was most consistently given appointment to the office of deputy city controller, and his services have been most faithfully performed. He is well known throughout the county and his coterie of friends is limited only by that of his acquaintances. In politics Capt. Blasser has ever accorded a stalwart allegiance to the Republican party, and both he and his wife are prominent and zealous members of the First M. E. Church, of York, in which he served as trustee and class-leader for many years. He is an honored and appreciative member of the time-honored order of Freemasonry, in which he has attained to the thirty-second degree of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite.

On March 5, 1857, was solemnized the marriage of Capt. Blasser to Miss Louise Conway, a daughter of Henry Conway, who was a representative farmer of Shrewsbury township, and three sons were born of this union: Guy, who died in infancy; Oscar L., who married Virginia Brocker, and died in Chambersburg, Pa., in February, 1903, as a result of a fracture of the skull, being survived by his wife and five children; and Walter K., the only surviving son, who is a printer by vocation and resides in York.

JOHN S. KEESEY, of East Hopewell township, York county, residing on his farm of sixty acres, is descended from one of three brothers who came to America from Switzerland, settling in a Swiss colony in Delaware. Grandfather Jacob Keeseey married and reared a family, among whose members was Jacob, who was born in Hopewell township. In early life he learned milling and followed this occupation most of his life. John S. Keeseey was born on a farm in Hopewell township, Aug. 27, 1848. He received a common-school education, finishing it when nineteen years of age. He spent seven years in Chanceford township, and learned the carpenter's trade with Jesse Warner, with whom he remained two years. It may be said that he never served an apprenticeship, learning so rapidly that he was a wage-earner almost from the first. His next employer, for nearly a year, was John M. Baughman, of Lancaster. He was with Archie Hyson nearly seven years, building the Stewartstown church, the Lutheran church in Shrewsbury, and the edifice at New Freedom, a fine church structure near Cockeysville, Md., and one at Bentley's Springs. He also assisted in the erection of several fine houses and barns. After leaving Mr. Hyson's employ he was an independent builder for a time, and then, about 1890, began operating a small farm of twenty-two acres in East Hopewell township. In 1893, after the death of his father, he purchased the homestead, which was sold at a public sale. The tract comprises sixty acres of good land, upon which Mr. Keeseey carries on general farming in a very successful manner.

In 1877 Mr. Keeseey was married to J. Agnes Hyson, daughter of Robert Hyson (deceased), and to this union have been born: Lawrence H., born Dec. 2, 1878, educated in the public schools, the Stewartstown academy and Millersville Normal, and for the past four years a teacher in the public schools; Foster W., born Sept. 3, 1881, preparing to be a teacher at Millersville Normal school; and Mabel L. C., who is at the same institution. The family are members of the Hopewell U. P. Church, in which Mr. Keeseey has been a trustee for thirteen years, the last eight of which have been consecutive. He is a staunch Democrat, served in old Hopewell as tax collector for two years, and has been assessor in East Hopewell township.

HENRY M. RAUHAUSER was born in 1852 in Dover township, son of Henry Rauhauser. Jacob Rauhauser, his great-grandfather, was born in Germany, and coming to America was among the early settlers of Dover township, York Co., Pa. There he took up a large tract of land which he farmed until his death, and his remains are buried at Strayer's church, in Dover township.

Peter Rauhauser, the grandfather of Henry M., was born in Dover township and engaged in farming upon his father's tract, erecting a fine set of buildings and living there all his life. He is buried in the U. B. churchyard near Dover. The children born to him and his wife were: Peter, who died in Ohio; Joshua, who died in Maryland; Henry, the father of Henry M.; and Joel, who died in Iowa.

Henry Rauhauser was born in Dover township, where he was reared and educated, working on the family farm. Later he removed to a small farm of thirty acres, and he spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits. Mr. Rauhauser died at the age of sixty-five years, four months, five days, and is buried at Neiman's church. He married Emeline Misenholder, daughter of Daniel Misenholder, whose wife's maiden name was Zinn. Mrs. Rauhauser is now residing with her son Henry M. at the age of eighty-three years. Two children were born to this worthy couple: Henry M. and Christiana, the latter dying at the age of four years and being buried at the United Brethren church in this township.

Henry M. Rauhauser attended the public schools of his township and worked for his father until his marriage, June 6, 1872, to Emma Jane Doll, daughter of Michael and Leah (Raffensberger) Doll, of Dover township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Doll are deceased and are buried at Strayer's church. After his marriage Mr. Rauhauser located on the old homestead, where he remained five years, and then upon his father's death removed to the small farm, where he lived two years, returning at the end of this time to the old home, and residing there for twelve years. He sold off all the stock and lived for four years with his son-in-law. Mr. Rauhauser has built substantial buildings on his farm and the place is noted for its beauty. In 1901 he bought a home in Dover borough, where he now resides, actively engaged in horse and cattle dealing. He owns two farms comprising 266 acres of fine land in Dover township, besides other properties.

To Mr. and Mrs. Rauhauser the following named children have been born: Martha Agnes married Henry D. Strayer and they live on the old homestead in Dover township, and have one daughter, Mabel Ellen; Cora Ellen, married to James J. Hamm, lives on her father's other farm in Dover township.

Mr. Rauhauser is a stanch Republican and deeply interested in his party's success. He has always been a man of industrious habits and the result is shown in his present sound financial condition. He is highly respected in Dover township. Mrs. Rauhauser is a member of the Reformed Church.

JACOB CONLEY, whose ninety-eight-acre farm in Newberry township, York county, is one of the finest in that section, was born Nov. 5, 1851, in Manchester township, on the old Loucks farm, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Plymire) Conley.

Joseph Conley, grandfather of Jacob, was a shoemaker residing near Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and he died when a young man, leaving these children: Samuel; William, living in Fairview township, at the age of eighty-seven years; and Elizabeth, who married Thomas Kohr and died in Dauphin county.

Samuel Conley was born in Lancaster county, near Elizabethtown, and was four years old when his father died. He came to York when a small boy and learned the weaver's trade, which he pursued for about twenty-eight years, near Emigsville. His wife was Elizabeth Plymire, daughter of John Plymire, who died in 1874 and is buried at Miller's cemetery in Newberry township. Mr. Conley commenced farming in Manchester township, where he remained two years, and spent the same length of time in Conewago township, after which he returned to Manchester township, where he remained ten years. He then located in Newberry township and bought the old David Bryan farm, which consists of about ninety acres, where he is still residing, aged eighty-four years. For several years Mr. Conley has lived in retirement, and is universally honored and respected. The children born to him and his worthy wife were: Mary lives at Goldsboro, the widow of David Prowell, who died in 1888; Sarah married Jacob Fink and they are both deceased; Jacob; Samuel, Jr., died in 1864; Elizabeth married Henry Rebman, deceased, and she now lives with her father; Annie lives in Fairview township, the widow of Alexander Stettler, who died in 1904; Alice married Clayton Groom, and lives at Goldsboro borough; Henry died at home; Eli married Sarah Strickland, and lives at New Cumberland, Cumberland county; and John, who married Clara Frey, resides at the same place.

Jacob Conley came to Newberry township
at the age of nine years, and with his father learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed about five years and then commenced farming. Mr. Conley bought his present homestead of ninety-eight acres in 1881, where he erected all of his buildings; he also owns a farm of 133 acres which his son Samuel is working. Further, Mr. Conley is the owner of a fine piece of woodland, which consists of sixteen acres. In every respect he is a very successful farmer; but the success he has attained only through years of hard work. His buildings are modern, well-built structures, his land is highly cultivated and very productive, and his farms well situated and capably managed.

On Nov. 19, 1874, Mr. Conley married Frances Detwiler, daughter of Elias and Frances (Gotwals) Detwiler, who are descendants of pioneer families of the county. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Conley have been: Samuel D., born in 1875, married Emma Fisher, and is working one of his father's farms; Howard, married Carrie Betz, and is farming in Newberry township; Elias resides in Dauphin county; Elizabeth, at home; Charles, in Illinois; James, at home; Jacob, resides with his brother Samuel; Susan, married Charles Cullinder, of New Cumberland; Mary, Joseph, Frances, Katie and Sarah, all at home.

Mr. Conley is a Democrat, and has been school director six years and has also held the office of supervisor. Mrs. Conley is a valued member of the Dunkard Church. The family is very highly esteemed in the community.

BENJAMIN MITTEL is the owner and operator of the Margareetta Furnace flouring mill, in Lower Windsor township, which is one of the most interesting and ancient landmarks of that section of the State, having been erected nearly a century ago, and having been in active service as a flouring mill during practically the entire intervening period. The original portion of the structure was erected by Henry Y. Slaymaker, who was a prominent and honored pioneer of the county, and since his time two additions have been made to the building, while as a matter of course, there have been numerous changes in the mechanical equipment and in the remodeling of the interior. The last addition was made in 1841. In the ownership of the property the firm of Kerns, Himes & Kerns succeeded the original proprietor in 1867, acquiring the mill at sheriff's sale, the incumbent of the shrievalty at the time being Jesse Engles. Later William D. Himes became the owner of the property, operating the mill for a number of years, and from the executors of his estate the present owner purchased the mill, in 1897, together with fifty-two acres of land surrounding it. He has since profitably operated the mill, securing an excellent custom trade and also shipping a considerable portion of the product of the mill (whose capacity is thirty barrels). It may be added that the machinery and operating accessories are of the best modern type. The little farm in connection is maintained under a high state of cultivation, while it has substantial improvements, including a commodious and attractive residence. Mr. Mittel gives practically his entire time and attention to the supervision of this property, and is recognized as a most progressive, reliable and straightforward business man and as a loyal and public-spirited citizen. He is possessed also of those personal attributes and social qualities which ever beget warm and lasting friendships.

Mr. Mittel is a native son of the old Keystone State, having been born in West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, Feb. 12, 1861, son of Michael and Catherine (Mowrer) Mittel, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter in Lancaster county, this State. Michael Mittel was reared and educated in the Fatherland, where he remained until he had attained the age of eighteen years, when he came to America. Having previously learned the trade of stonemason, he located in Lancaster county and there followed his trade for many years, becoming a successful contractor and identified with much important work in his line. He is now living retired, in Lancaster county, and is past eighty-five years of age. His devoted wife remains by his side, and they find the evening of their lives crowned with content, peace and happiness. They became the parents of seven children, namely: Elam, who died at the age of sixteen years; Amos, who died in 1902; Jacob, who is a resident of Coatesville, Chester county; Benjamin, the fourth child, whose biography follows; Annie, who is the wife of John Pleam, of Lancaster; William, who resides in Downingtown, Pa., and Michael, Jr., who resides in Lancaster.

Benjamin Mittel was reared to manhood in his native county, reaching maturity on the
BIOGRAPHICAL

GEORGE BOWER, of Fairview township, York county, was born May 12, 1859, in Conewango township. He was nine years of age when he went to Newberry township with his parents and until his majority attended the township schools. He assisted in building the house, where his brother Howard now lives. On Dec. 25, 1873, Mr. Bower married Lucinda Miller, born in 1854 in Fairview township, daughter of Jonas and Nancy (Berger) Miller. Mr. Miller was born at Shrewsbury, but was a farmer in Fairview township until his death on May 8, 1889. His wife survived him until 1896, and both are buried at the Mt. Zion Church, Fairview township.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bower located near Lewisberry, in Newberry township, on the Jacob Garretson farm, remaining there one year, after which Mr. Bower operated his father-in-law's farm for four years, and afterward, for three years, the tract owned by Isaac Rulifill in the same township. He then located at Steelton where he was engaged in the steel plant for one year, later returning to his father-in-law's farm, where he remained seven years. When the property was sold Mr. Bower went to Lewisberry, where he remained five years, in 1896 buying his father-in-law's farm. It consists of 143 acres of land situated near Lewisberry, and there he has since resided. He attends the Harrisburg market and is one of the most up-to-date farmers of the upper end of York county. Since taking possession of the farm he has greatly improved it, and it is now one of the most productive tracts in the community. In politics Mr. Bower is a Democrat, and, although always ready to do his duty as a citizen, has steadily refused to accept office. To Mr. and Mrs. Bower the following children have been born: Harry, died at the age of two years and is buried at Mt. Zion cemetery; Margaret, married Jacob Zimmerer of New Cumberland, Cumberland county; Charles, a bookkeeper of Lancaster City, married Mary Beelman, of Dillsburg, and they reside in Lancaster, at No. 420 Lancaster avenue.

GEORGE E. SPRENKLE, dealer in grain, coal, fertilizers, flour, feed, salt, seed and general merchandise, at Nashville, Jackson township, was born in York county, in West Manchester, March 13, 1869, son of George W. and Sarah Emig Sprenkle.

(i) George Sprenkle, his great-great-grandfather, emigrated from Germany at a very early day, and probably settled in York county.

(ii) George Sprenkle (2), son of George, was a Mennonite in religious faith. He was buried at the Codorus graveyard.

(iii) David Sprenkle, son of George (2), was a native of York county, born in West Manchester, in 1800, and died on his farm in 1884, being buried in the Codorus graveyard, at Baer's meeting-house. Both he and his wife were members of the old Mennonite faith. He married Lydia Witmer, and they had one son, George W., father of George E.
(IV) George W. Sprenkle, son of David, was born in West Manchester, York county, March 10, 1829, and became one of the prosperous farmers of his locality. His wife was born in West Manchester, Feb. 26, 1831, a daughter of Valentine and Rebecca (Loucks) Emig. Mrs. Sprenkle is still living. Valentine Emig was a son of John, and the family were among the first settlers of York county, the village of Emigsville being named in their honor. The family was founded in America by the great-great-grandfather, Valentine Emig, who emigrated from Germany about 1730. Five children were born to George W. Sprenkle and wife: Amanda E., wife of William H. Yost, of North York; Franklin E., of Nashville, Pa.; William, also of Nashville; Isabel, widow of Albert C. Lightner; and George E.

(V) George E. Sprenkle was educated in the district school, the Keystone State Normal school, at Kutztown, and the Prickett College of Commerce, corner of Broad and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia. Graduating from the last named, Dec. 15, 1891, he entered the employ of Thomas C. Else & Co., of Philadelphia, with whom he remained three years. In 1893, Mr. Sprenkle located at Nashville, Pa., where he opened a store and mill and became station agent of the Western Maryland Railway Company. He was also appointed postmaster, and is a director in the York County National Bank. He deals largely in grain, shipping principally to Baltimore; and in all of his various enterprises, Mr. Sprenkle has been remarkably successful, and this fact may be traced to his thoroughness, thrift and excellent management.

On Oct. 12, 1898, Mr. Sprenkle married Maggie Swartz, of Nashville, daughter of Jesse and Catherine (Hershey) Swartz. They have had no children. He and Mrs. Sprenkle are prominent members of the Reformed Church, St. Paul's, known as Wolf's church, and Mr. Sprenkle takes an especially active part in the Sabbath school, being one of its teachers. In 1902, he was instrumental in organizing the Sabbath school at Nashville and became superintendent. He also interested himself in raising funds to build the church at that point, and is ever busy in religious work. An extensive reader, well versed on general topics, and especially in Biblical subjects, Mr. Sprenkle is a pleasant conversationalist, and is a great favorite as a teacher in the Sunday-school.

ELI E. SNYDER, a well known box manufacturer, who has found in his own energy and business acumen a sure foundation for substantial success, comes of a representative family of York county.

Jacob Snyder, his grandfather, was born Oct. 30, 1794, in the State of Pennsylvania. After his marriage he settled on the old Snyder homestead, and engaged in farming pursuits in York township. Some twelve years later he became an earnest convert to the tenets of the United Brethren Church, and for about five years was a preacher in that sect. As the church was still in its youth, and practically without means, it could not afford to pay him for his services, and he was obliged to return to farming. About 1830 he was elected justice of the peace by the Democrats, and held that office until his death in December, 1867. For twenty-five years he taught school during the winter months. In 1813 he married Elizabeth Spatz, who was born Oct. 23, 1794. Their children were: Polly, who married (first) John Krone, who died in Gallion, Ohio, her second husband being John Dice, and her demise occurred in Gallion, Ohio; Elizabeth, wife of Daniel Smith; Simon (deceased), who married Rebecca Hartman, of York township; Sally, who became the wife of Michael Frey, and died in Iowa; Leah, who married Levi Hartman, and died in York township in 1880; Lydia, wife of Jonathan Keller, of York; John A., father of Eli E.; Juliana, wife of John Fail, of Gallion, Ohio; Rebecca, wife of Charles Reinhart, also of that place; and Susan, who married Aaron Snyder, and died in Yoe.

John A. Snyder was born in August, 1829, in York township, and there he received the benefits of a common-school education. He remained at home assisting in the work of the home farm until his marriage, when he commenced an independent agricultural career in the same township, but later settled at Yoe, where he engaged in the coal business. He was the first to engage in that line there, and by his work, his enterprise and his public spirit he did much to make that borough what it is today. After a fine business career, which brought success to himself and to all associated with him, he died April 8, 1890. His widow, who was Catherine Eberly, daughter of Mathias, still lives in Yoe. Their children were: Lavina, who died aged ten months; Anna Mary, wife of Elias Snyder, of Yoe; Simon J., a school teacher in York and Springfield townships, who went West in 1877, and upon his return was killed by a train on the Northern Central railroad in Maryland, his remains being brought back to Dallastown for burial; Catherine, wife of Hillary Plymire, of Dallastown; Elizabeth, wife of John J. Ness, of Yoe; Levi, who married Lydia Lenard, and died in 1902, his widow now residing in Yoe; Anna Barbara, wife of A. P. Neff, of Yoe; W. E., a cigar manufacturer of that place, who married Malinda Schrist, of Yoe; Rebecca, wife of G. A. Kohler, one of the largest cigar manufacturers in Yoe; Eli E.; Emma, wife of B. F. Mundis, also of Yoe; Miss Jennie, at home, and Alice, wife of J. R. Snyder, a mail clerk at York.

Mathias Eberly, father of Mrs. John A. Snyder, was born in Germany, as was also his wife, Catherine Haberly, whom he wedded about 1820. They came to America in 1846, and located in York township, where Mr. Eberly followed the carpenter's trade for a few years. He then moved upon a farm, and engaged in its cultivation until his death in 1870. His widow made her home with her son-in-law, John A. Snyder, until her death, in September, 1892. The children of Mathias and Catherine Eberly were: Mathias, who married Fredericka Weinsman, of Dallastown, and died Nov. 13, 1904; Catherine, wife of John A. Snyder; Tobias, who married Lydia Spotz, of Arbor; Christopher, who married Elizabeth Munnich, of Dallastown; Anna Barbara, who married Van Buren Daugherty, of Dallastown; Mary, wife of Joseph Keener, of that town; John, who married Charlotte Keener, also of Dallastown; Charles, who married Emma Hullinger, of Rye; Henry, who married Louisa Hose, of Dallastown; one who died aged nine months, and Jacob, who died at the age of twenty-one years.

Eli E. Snyder attended the schools of York township until he was seventeen years of age. He then learned the millwright's trade and pursued it for two years in Adams county, but abandoned it to take up the carpenter's trade; in 1888 he began contracting and building, in York county, so continuing for about three years. From that time until 1899 he was interested in the cigar business in Yoe, and in October of the latter year began the manufacture of cigar boxes. The firm was originally known as Snyder & Ness, but in 1904 it became E. E. Snyder & Co. They have a large plant at Yoe, and the yearly output is about 365,000 boxes, a ready sale for which is found in and around York county.

In 1890 Mr. Snyder was married to Anna Meads, a daughter of N. G. and Ellen (Herman) Meads, of whom the former is living at Red Lion, York county, and the latter is now deceased. To this union have been born the following children: Erwin C., Nora Ellen, Cora Ruth, J. Bryan, Paul E., and Herman B. The second daughter, Cora Ruth, born June 17, 1898, died Jan. 19, 1900, and is buried in Yoe.

Mr. Snyder is a Democrat in politics, having served as a school director and as councilman for Yoe borough. He has followed in the footsteps of his ancestors, and is an earnest worker in the United Brethren Church, at Yoe. He has prospered through honorable methods, and has earned, as he richly deserves, the high esteem of all.

SAMUEL WOLAVER was born in Bittersville, Lower Windsor township, June 18, 1856, and is a son of Sampson and Dorothy (Herman) Wolaver.

Sampson Wolaver was born on the farm now owned by Samuel Wolaver, whose grandfather became the owner of the property in the pioneer days, there passing the closing years of his life. Sampson Wolaver was born on this ancestral homestead April 19, 1818, and he lived to attain the venerable age of eighty-three years, passing the declining years of his life in the home of his son Samuel, who accorded him the utmost filial care and solicitude. This honored and worthy citizen passed his entire life in York county, where he was a farmer for many years, being later identified with the tobacco industry there. He was married to Dorothy Herman Dec. 29, 1846. She too was born and reared in York county, the date of her birth being Dec. 16, 1824, while she died in 1897, at Windsorville. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wolaver were lifelong and zealous members of the Evangelical Church. Of their children is given the following brief record: Sarah, born Nov. 12, 1847, is the wife of Jacob Smeltzer, of Craleyville, Lower Windsor township; Henry, born March 25, 1849, is deceased; Susanna, born Jan. 5, 1851, is also deceased;
Catherine, born Feb. 1, 1852, is likewise deceased; John, born June 28, 1854, is a resident of Brogueville, York county; Samuel is the next in order of birth; Lydia, born Dec. 20, 1861, is the wife of William Winters, of Adams, York county; Daniel, born Oct. 17, 1864, is a resident of Windsorville, the same county.

Samuel Wolaver was reared to the invigorating labors of the home farm and received his education in the public schools of the locality, having attended the Crosby school, at Bittersville, where his first instructor was George Anstine and his last teacher a man named Gemmel. He continued to attend school at intervals until he had reached the age of eighteen years, having in the meanwhile been his father’s constant assistant in the work of the home farm. At the age noted he removed to Adams county for the purpose of learning the carpenter’s trade, but, owing to a disagreement with his employer, remained but a short time, returning home and passing the next year in his native county, in the employ of his father and others. He then entered the employ of James Duffy, a farmer near Marietta, Lancaster county, with whom he remained two years, after which he was for one year in the employ of Martin Krieder, at Mt. Joy, also in that county. He then returned home and began working by the day, later being engaged for six months in repair work on the Peach Bottom road and for three months on the Pennsylvania road, at Wrightsville and Columbia, acting as assistant foreman during the major portion of that period. He then began learning the trade of cigarmaking, partly under the instruction of George McGuigan, and a few months later removed to Freeport, Ill., where he completed his apprenticeship to the carpenter’s trade under the direction of Zachariah Liebhart. He remained there a short time and then went to Clear Lake, Iowa, in search of work at his trade. Being unsuccessful in his quest he returned to Freeport, where he was employed by Martin Gaudy, with whom he remained several months. He then removed to Florence, Ill., where he worked for Henry Gochenauer for a short interval, after which he went to Cedarville, that State, and thence to Lincoln, Neb. Failing to secure the desired employment at his trade, he continued his travels to Creston and Bedford, Iowa, in which latter place he found work in the rebuilding of structures which had been destroyed by fire. Three months later he again made his way to Freeport, Ill., in which locality he was engaged in farm work for a short time, and thence to Florence and to Thomson, Carroll Co., Ill., where he assisted in the erection of a large grain elevator. His itinerancy thereafter included Rockford and Cedarville, Ill., and a return to his home in York county. He next turned his attention to cigarmaking, at Windsorville, where he remained a few months, after which he had charge of the shop of Melvin Gohn, near Red Lion, for an interval. Thereafter he was in the employ of various individuals, as a cigarmaker, for a time being placed in charge of the shop of James Smith, at Windsorville. He then devoted two years to the carpenter’s trade and at the expiration of that period located in Brogueville, where he engaged in the manufacture of cigars on his own responsibility, becoming the owner of real estate there. He finally removed his shop to Wrightsville, where he continued operations about eighteen months. He then exchanged his property in Brogueville for his present fine farm property, in Lower Windsor township, giving an extra consideration of $2,000. The farm at the time comprised 127 acres, but he has since disposed of twelve acres. In the summer of 1903 Mr. Wolaver began the erection of his present modern and attractive residence, together with his cigar factory, which is made a portion of the same building, and here he has one of the fine homes of the township, while his facilities for the carrying on of his two lines of manufacture will be unexcelled. In 1902, in connection with the manufacture of cigars, Mr. Wolaver began the manufacture of brooms, in which line he turns out a product of superior excellence, raising upon his farm a considerable proportion of the broomcorn utilized, as also of his tobacco stock. He was induced to add the broom industry by the fact that he had planted broomcorn, expecting to find a profitable market for the raw material. When he tried to sell the product of his first three acres he found that he was mistaken as to the demand, and he accordingly determined to manufacture his stock. He soon became familiar with the trade, personally made his own machine for manufacturing the brooms, and has since continued operations most successfully. His farm is under effective cultivation, has good improvements throughout and is one of the valuable properties of the township. Mr. Wolaver is a loyal and broadminded citizen, taking a proper interest in all that concerns the general prosperity of the community and being a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, though he was formerly associated with the Democracy. He was reared in the faith of the Evangelical Church, of which his wife is a member.

On July 3, 1884, Mr. Wolaver was united in marriage to Maria J. Hill, who was born at Wrightsville, York county, a daughter of Henry and Emma (McKenzie) Hill. In concluding this sketch the following is presented concerning the children of Mr. and Mrs. Wolaver: Mabel Brooks was born April 21, 1886; Lydia Ann, born June 5, 1887, died on the 9th of the same month, as did also her twin brother, John Oliver; Walter Winfield was born July 23, 1888; Chester Amelious was born Sept. 1, 1889, and his twin sister, Cora May, died March 24, 1891; Nora Ida was born June 4, 1892; Rarra, born Jan. 4, 1895, died on the 11th of the same month; Else Virginia was born March 24, 1896; Irene and Henry Ralph (twins) were born April 4, 1897, the latter dying April 4, 1898; Dora E. was born Nov. 14, 1898.

CHARLES LUDWIG. The agricultural industry in York county has an able and popular representative in the person of Charles Ludwig who has there passed his entire life. Mr. Ludwig was born in Springfield township, April 30, 1851, and bears the full patronymic of his honored father, Charles Ludwig, Sr. His grandfather is supposed to have been born in York county, of sterling German extraction and he was one of the prosperous farmers of Springfield township. The maiden name of his wife was Kohler, and both died in Springfield township, being interred in the cemetery of Mount Zion church. Of their children, Isaac lives in Springfield township; Daniel passed the closing years of his life in the city of Baltimore, Md.; Joseph, Joshua, John and William died in York county; and Charles is mentioned below. Charles Ludwig, Sr., was born in Springfield township, York county, Pa., June 3, 1814, and was there reared to manhood, receiving a common-school education. At the age of eighteen years he entered upon an apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade, in which line he became a skilled artisan, continuing to be actively identified with the sturdy work of his trade until his death, at the venerable age of eighty-seven years. He was a resident of Springfield township until fifteen years prior to his demise, when he removed to York township, where he passed the remainder of his long and signal honorably and useful life, secure in the esteem and confidence of all who knew him. The maiden name of his wife was Susan Howard, and she likewise was born in Springfield township, where she passed her entire life, being summoned into eternal rest in 1864, at the age of forty-eight years, her husband surviving her until 1902. Of their children Amanda and Henry died before attaining maturity; Emanuel, a railroad man, resides in Stanley, N. Y.; Albert, who married Miss Anne Seitz, is a prosperous farmer of York township; Peter married Selinda Martin, and is likewise a successful farmer of York township; Charles was the next in order of birth; Emeline is the wife of Frank Strausbaugh, of York; Mary is the wife of John Peregoy, of York; Josiah died at the age of six years; Jacob is a railway conductor and resides in El Paso, Texas.

Charles Ludwig, Jr., received his early educational training in the public schools of his native township, where he continued his studies until he was sixteen years of age, and he thereafter devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits in that township until his marriage, in 1876. Shortly afterward he located at Ore Valley, York township, where he was engaged in milling for the ensuing five years, at the expiration of which period he located on his present farm, where he has since been actively and successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits. His farm comprises fifty-nine acres, and is eligibly located in York township. He has made many improvements on the place and it is maintained under most effective cultivation, so that it may well be designated as one of the model farms of the township. In his political allegiance Mr. Ludwig is stanchly arrayed with the Democratic party, and he takes a proper interest in local affairs of a public nature, having served two terms as a director of his school district. Both he and his wife are members of the United Brethren Church.

On Dec. 17, 1876, Mr. Ludwig was united in marriage to Sarah Ann Bradley, who was born in 1853, in Lancaster county, being a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hugendubler) Bradley. Her father was born and reared in Lancaster county, Pa., where he was a farmer and also worked at the ore banks for a number of years after initiating his independent career. In his youth he had learned the carpenter's trade. Coming to York county he located in Hellam township, where he became superintendent of ore banks, and later was similarly employed in Spring Garden and York townships, holding a responsible position at the Pigeon Hill ore banks, as he was specially skilled in the vocation to which he devoted his attention for so many years. He is now retired and resides in the home of his only daughter, Mrs. Charles Ludwig, being seventy-seven years of age at the time of this writing, in 1905. His wife died in 1882, and was laid to rest in the Union Cemetery at Dallastown, York county. They had only two children, Mrs. Ludwig being the eldest. Her brother, Samuel, married Miss Isabella Keese, and when he died at the age of thirty-four years, was principal of the high school at Wrightsville, York county; he was interred in the beautiful Prospect Hill cemetery, at York. He was a young man of fine character and marked ability, having been graduated from the Dallastown high school and being a popular and successful teacher in the public schools of York county for several years prior to his untimely death. Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig have had eight children: Samuel Howard is a clerk in the office of the traction company in the city of York, marrying Elizabeth Ness, who died in 1903, in the borough of York, York county; John E., who married Miss Lena Kauffman, is a resident of Windsor township and is a painter and paper-hanger by vocation; Caroline E. is unmarried and remains at the parental home; Charles P., a graduate of the Dallastown high school, is a popular teacher in York township; and Mary Belle, Flora May, Sarah Alice and Daisy Ellen remain at home.

PIERCER STAMBAUGH, proprietor of a blacksmith shop near Big Mount, was born Oct. 4, 1859, on his father's farm in Paradise township. His grandfather, John Stambaugh, was a farmer. He died in Dover township, leaving these children: Polly, Mrs. Benjamin Altland; Levi; Peter, deceased; Jacob; and Michael, of Dover township.

Levi Stambaugh was born in Dover township, this county, and was there reared on his father's farm, receiving an ordinary education. After marriage he located on a place near Holtz-Schwamm church, and there he continued to farm for forty years, retiring a few years previous to his death to a home near the shop of his son, Pierce Stambaugh; there he died in 1901. In religious faith he was a Lutheran; in politics he was a Democrat, and he served as school director. He married Elizabeth Beck, of Dover township, daughter of Joseph and Lydia Beck, and they had these children: Amelia, Mrs. Henry Moul, of York; Ella, the widow of Emanuel Mummert, of Jackson township; Pierce; Emma, Mrs. Jonas Geese, of Jackson township; Monroe, of Paradise township; Ezra, also of Paradise township; and Ada, who married William Murphy, and died in 1905.

Pierce Stambaugh received a good education, attending the Holtz-Schwamm school, which he left at the age of seventeen years. Until that age he had been a farmer boy, but he then went to the trade of blacksmith with Henry Moul, whose shop stood on the present site of Mr. Stambaugh's shop. He served an apprenticeship of three years, and then spent seven years with Mr. Moul as journeyman, after which he bought out his employer, who removed to York. Mr. Stambaugh erected a new shop one year after purchasing the business. He does all of his own work, including the wood work on wagons and carriages, painting and general blacksmithing. He is a thorough mechanic, and his work is of the best quality.

About 1887 Mr. Stambaugh married Miss Lizzie Falkenstein, who, her father having died when she was three years old, was reared by her sister at Big Mount. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Stambaugh: Elma, Allen and Sherman. Mr. Stambaugh and his family are devoted members of the Lutheran Church, to which they contribute liberally. He is a stanch Democrat in politics, and has served three terms as school director.

JOSEPH H. MYERS, proprietor of the "Aldine Hotel" at Windsor, was born in York township, this county, Aug. 28, 1851, son of John C. and Catherine (Seeling) Myers, both natives of Germany.

John C. Myers and his wife came from Germany to America in 1843, and settled in York township, York county, Pa., where he purchased a small farm, and bent his energies to the making of a new home in a strange land.
Later he bought a farm of sixty acres in the same township, and about 1865 purchased a tract of eighty acres in Windsor township, where he still lives. From 1870 to 1873 he rented his farm, meantime living in Dallastown, where he kept a hotel for three years. Upon the expiration of his lease he returned to the country, and is now living practically retired, the actual work of the farm being delegated to others, although he superintends it. In religious belief both he and his wife are Roman Catholics, and in that faith have reared their children. In political principles Mr. Myers is a Democrat. To him and his wife were born the following children: Joseph H.; Mary, who married Frank Rittes; Edward, living in the West; Elizabeth, who married John Musser, and lives in Lancaster; Fred, deceased; Catherine, who married John Crabb; Charles F., unmarried and living in York; and Annie, deceased.

Joseph H. Myers received his education in the common schools of York county, and received practical training on the home farm, where he remained until he was seventeen years of age. He then accepted a position on the York & Peach Bottom Railroad, as foreman of a section, and later for ten years was engaged in the butchering business. The next seven years were spent in staging from York to Windsorville. In none of these callings was Mr. Myers quite contented, but he found more congenial work as proprietor of a hotel, first for seven years as “mine host” of the “Windsor Hotel,” which he afterward sold, and built his present modern structure of twenty-one rooms. It is a building 48x58, four stories and basement, and is thoroughly equipped. The popularity his hostelry has attained speaks well for his qualities as genial host, while Mrs. Myers, presiding over the culinary department, merits the highest praise. No one ever leaves the “Hotel Aldine” table feeling he did not get value received.

In 1878 Mr. Myers was married to Miss Mary Donavan, daughter of Michael Donavan, and to this union have been born two sons, Austin A. and Charles F. Like his father Mr. Myers is a stanch Democrat, and for ten years he held the office of constable.

Michael Donavan, father of Mrs. Myers, was born in Ireland and came to America, settling in Hopewell township, York county, in 1849. There he at once began farming, and this calling he followed until his death in 1902, at the age of seventy-eight years. He married Bridget Madigan, also a native of Ireland, but whose coming to America antedated Mr. Donavan’s. To this marriage were born the following children: Margaret, who married Adam Knoll; David, of Hopewell township; John, deceased; Mary, Mrs. Myers; Ella, deceased; Thomas, deceased; Catherine, who married Scott Douglass; Daniel, on the home place in Hopewell township. Mrs. Donavan died in 1904, aged seventy-six. Both she and her husband were members of the Roman Catholic Church, and active in its support. He was a Democrat in political matters, and was considered one of the honorable and substantial men of Hopewell township.

JOHN C. STOVER, who does business at Glen Rock as a wheelwright and carriage and wagonmaker, was born in North Codorus township, this county, April 6, 1854, and is of German extraction, the original American representatives having here established homes in the Colonial era.

Zacharias and Lydia (Tschop) Stover, his parents, were born and reared in York county. The father was a wheelwright by trade, following this line of work during practically his entire business career. He was one of the honored citizens of North Codorus township, and died in 1890. His wife passed away about thirty years ago. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, and she of the Reformed Church, while their lives exemplified the faith to which they thus held. The children of this worthy couple were five in number, namely: John C.; Amanda, wife of Richard Engove; George; Jacob; and Annie, wife of Gabriel Strausbauch.

The paternal grandfather of John C. Stover was John Stover, who was born in Lancaster county, this State, and who was a shoemaker by trade. He followed that vocation in York county for many years, settling early in Codorus township. The maiden name of his wife was Buckheimer, and they became the parents of five children, as follows: Lydia, who became the wife of John S. Henry (both died in this county); Susan, wife of John Neff; Michael; Zacharias; and Caesar, who died when a young man.

John Tschop, the maternal grandfather of John C. Stover, was a wheelwright by trade, and worked as such in York county for many years. His wife's maiden name was Rudisill. They had eleven children, namely: Albert, John, Henry, Adam, Daniel, Susanna (who became the wife of Michael Stover), Catherine (who became the wife of Michael Stover), Catherine (who became the wife of Martin Senft), Harriet (who married George Wolf), Amanda (who married Jacob Hartman), Mary Magdalene (who married David Beaver and died several years ago), and Lydia (Mrs. Zacharias Stover).

John C. Stover received his early educational training in the common schools of Codorus township and early entered upon a practical apprenticeship at the wheelwright's trade, in the shop of his father, who carefully instructed him in all details of the work, so that he had fully mastered the trade by the time he had attained the age of sixteen. For several years thereafter he was employed as a journeyman at his trade, and for about a decade was engaged in such work in the manufactory of the firm of Hartman & Hoshour, at Glen Rock. At the expiration of this period Mr. Stover engaged in business for himself, opening a shop at Seven Valley, this county, where he continued operations about ten years, building up a flourishing enterprise. He then returned to Glen Rock, where he again followed his trade as a journeyman for a few years, until 1895, when he again started business on his own responsibility, establishing his present enterprise. His reputation for superior workmanship and for reliability has gained him a large and representative patronage. He has a well equipped factory, manufacturing all kinds of carriages and buggies, in which line he turns out some specially fine work, while he also makes a specialty of manufacturing heavy wagons, trucks and delivery wagons and of general repair work, his repair department having the best of facilities for the prompt execution of all work turned in to the same. Mr. Stover stands high in the confidence and esteem of the community and is a loyal and progressive citizen. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Democracy, and he has been an active worker in its local ranks, having been several times a delegate to the county conventions, and served as district committeeman. He was for two terms, of three years each, incumbent of the office of councilman of Glen Rock, in which connection he steadfastly advocated the carrying forward of measures for the good of the municipality, having been one of the most zealous workers for the establishing of the new waterworks system and having aided materially in securing other needed improvements. He was also elected tax collector of Glen Rock, for a term of three years, and he served one term as school director while a resident of Seven Valley. Mr. Stover is a prominent and valued member of the United Evangelical Church, which he has served in different capacities for many years, being still a member of the official board of his own church, of which he has also been treasurer. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with Tribe No. 100, Improved Order of Red Men, in Glen Rock; the Knights of Pythias at Seven Valley; with the organizations of the Knights of Malta and the Chosen Knights in the city of York; and formerly he was affiliated with the Grange. He has much musical talent and is a charter member of the Glen Rock Band, while he was one of the organizers of the local literary and musical society. When a youth Mr. Stover was a member of the Cadets, a flourishing military organization under the command of Capt. T. R. Herbert. Mr. Stover has ever been ready to lend his aid and influence in support of measures and enterprises projected for the general good of his home town and county, and he is essentially progressive and public-spirited in his attitude, while to him is accorded uniform confidence and regard in the community in which he has so long made his home.

On Dec. 22, 1881, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Stover to Miss Barbara Elizabeth Seitz, of Glen Rock. She was born and reared in York county, a daughter of George F. and Louisa Seitz. To Mr. and Mrs. Stover have been born four children, Harry Walter, Millie Louisa, Robert S. (who died at the age of eighteen months), and Lydia Viola.

FRANKLIN P. REEVER, owner of the well known "Reever House," of York, and actively engaged in the hide and tallow business, was born in Loganville borough, York county, Dec. 31, 1853, son of George W. and Nancy (Goodling) Reever. George W. Reever was a cooper by trade and followed that occupation in Loganville, where he was well and favorably known. He came to York in 1864 and engaged in the hotel business at the corner of South George and King streets, buying the hotel now known as the "Reever House" from George Fissil. Mr. Reever remained in the hotel business for eight years, at the end of which time he engaged in the livery business, in which he continued until his death, which occurred in 1897. He married Nancy Goodling, of Loganville, and to this union the following children were born: Rebecca, deceased; Franklin P.; Maria, the wife of Henry Owen, of York; and Lucy.

Franklin P. Reever attended the school of Loganville, and after completing his education learned the machinist's trade with A. B. Farquhar, by whom he was employed for eight years. He then engaged in the hotel business, in which he continued until 1894, first renting the hotel from his father, and later purchasing it from him. He made varied and extensive improvements in the establishment, it being at the time of its sale one of the finest hotels in York. Mr. Reever disposed of the hotel business to E. C. Peeling to go into the hide and tallow business, locating in 1900 at No. 312 South Duke street, where he has a prosperous and ever increasing trade; he has one of the most up-to-date places of business in this line in the State.

In 1877 Mr. Reever married Ellen J. Neff, daughter of Jonathan Neff, of Dallastown, and to this union have been born children as follows: Nannie, who died at the age of eighteen years; James A., an electrician of York; Kirk, a patternmaker of York; and Edna, at home.

Mr. Reever has been prominent in local affairs, serving on the Democratic ticket as councilman for four terms from the First ward of York. Having done his duty to his city in this way he has constantly refused other offers of office, giving his time and attention to his business.

PETER STAMBAUGH, who is engaged in general farming on his sixty-acre farm in Warrington township, was born near Hogstown, Paradise township, Aug. 22, 1837, son of Jacob and Mary (Berkheimer) Stambaugh, and a grandson of Jacob Stambaugh.

Jacob Stambaugh, the grandfather, was born in York county, and was a farmer all of his life, owning a fine farm which engaged his attention all his active years. His death occurred about 1844, he being at an advanced age. His wife survived until 1850, and at the time of her death was about seventy-three years old. They were the parents of the following children: Jacob, Henry, Michael, George, Peter, John, Solomon, Lena, Christina, Betsey, Susan and Polly. Mr. and Mrs. Stambaugh were members of the German Reformed Church, while in politics he was a Democrat.

Jacob Stambaugh, our subject's father, was reared upon the farm, but after reaching his majority he followed broom making, and at his death in 1849 in his forty-fourth year he was the owner of a comfortable home. Mr. Stambaugh was never able to perform manual labor, being injured in his youth. He had been of a powerful build, and in shouldering 300 pounds of wheat, he strained himself, which caused white swelling, from which he never recovered. His wife survived until 1892, when she died in her eighty-third year. They had these children: Susan, Mary, Anna M., Leah, Sally, Samuel, Henry, Frank, Peter, John, Nathaniel and two that died in infancy. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stambaugh were members of the Reformed Church. In politics he was a Democrat.

Peter Stambaugh received his education in the township schools of Paradise township, and worked at farm work by the day until he reached his majority, when he started farming for himself and he has followed this occupation up to the present time. In 1894, Mr. Stambaugh purchased his present home of sixty-six acres of good farm and timber land, and here he has devoted his time to general farming. On March 3, 1859, Mr. Stambaugh married Jane Sower, born in Perry county, daughter of Paul Sower, and two children have been born to this union—Sarah E. and Andrew S. Sarah E. Stambaugh was born Dec. 23, 1859, and married Jonathan Cassel, and they have six children—Carrie; Iva, who married John Ziegler and has one child, Ralph; and Jennie, Annie, Gretta and Ruth. Andrew S. Stambaugh, born Sept. 15, 1861, died Dec. 28, 1863, Mr. and Mrs. Stambaugh are members of the Reformed Church. In political matters he is a Democrat, although he has never cared for public office.

JOHN W. STINE, a cigar manufacturer of Windsor township, was born there on the old Stine homestead, Dec. 3, 1853, son of John and Lucy Ann (Schmuck) Stine.

The first of the name in York county was Ludwig Stine, who bought the family estate, now owned by Benjamin F. Stine. He was the father of seven children, of whom one son, Henry, became in his turn the owner of the farm. He married Miss Julia Ann Slener, and had six children, of whom John, father of John W., was the third.

John Stine was born in 1833, and grew up on the farm. At first a carpenter, most of his life was spent in farming, and after his father's death in 1870, the homestead became his own. He married Lucinda, daughter of Peter and Magdalena (Smith) Schmuck, and they were the parents of seven children, viz.: John W.; Reuben D., deceased; William Henry, deceased; Benjamin F.; Moses; Julia Ann and Mary Jane, deceased in infancy. Mr. Stine sold the homestead some years ago to his son Benjamin F., but he and his wife still make their home there.

John W. Stine was born while his father was living on the farm now owned by C. W. Shenberger, but during his boyhood the family moved to the Stine homestead, and his education was secured chiefly in the schools of that vicinity, which he attended winters until he was twenty-one. He always worked for his father until he reached manhood, and continued to assist him for a year after marrying, and then began his present business. He built his house and a small factory, 14 x 26 feet, and began with a force of only six hands, manufacturing both fine and ordinary brands of cigars. His trade steadily increased, and in 1901 he built a structure 24 x 40 feet, and Mr. Stine now has twelve and sometimes fifteen employees. He learned the trade when he was twenty-one years old, and was taught it by his wife.

In 1875, at the age of twenty-two, Mr. Stine was married to Miss Emma Wallick, who was born in Windsor township in 1851, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Shaffer) Wallick. Both parents of Mrs. Stine are now deceased. To this union four children have been born as follows: one that died in infancy; Clarence, born May 7, 1882, and living at home, who attended the township schools and then studied bookkeeping and stenography at Patrick's Business College in York; Howard Mason, and one other, who both died in infancy. In politics Mr. Stine is a Republican, but not active in public life. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A., of Windsorville, and he belongs to the Freysville Lutheran Church. He is a successful business man, a good citizen, and one whom his neighbors all regard with respect and esteem.

FRANKLIN BOTT, a merchant of Dallastown, was born near Carlisle, Cumberland Co., Pa., Aug. 10, 1838, son of Joseph G. and Mary (Manning) Bott.

Joseph G. Bott, familiarly known among his friends as "Colonel," was one of the most proficient teachers of the subscription schools, and was known throughout middle Pennsylvania. He was especially accomplished as a penman. His death occurred in Long Level, York county, March 2, 1853. His children were: Franklin; Benjamin, of Sterling, Ill., who built a large part of that town; John, deceased; Barbara, who married Zachariah Fry, and died in Florida in 1901; Mary Ann, widow of L. Overdorff; Fannie; and Caroline.

Franklin Bott was brought up in York county, and was educated in the public schools of Lower Windsor township. After he left school he became a boatman on the Pennsylvania canal, and was thus engaged for sixteen years, but in 1873 he turned to farming and only gave up his occupation because of an accident which made it impossible for him to continue. He was injured in 1896 so seriously that it resulted in the loss of both feet, and so he then adopted business life. In 1897 he moved to Dallastown, and entered upon the general mercantile business which has since occupied his attention.

In March, 1861, Mr. Bott was married to Miss Catherine Silver, daughter of George Silver; to this union the following children were born: John, of York; George, of Baltimore; Rebecca, Mrs. Henry S. Stump, of Chicago; Mary and Joseph, both deceased.

ZACHARIAH S. SHEAFFER, proprietor of the Crystal Palace cigar store in York, is a lifelong resident of York county, where he was born in Springettsbury township, at the Glades, Jan. 26, 1850, son of John M. and Rebecca (Spangler) Sheaffer.

John M. Sheaffer was a native of Strasburg, Lancaster county, born in May, 1832. In earlier life he followed the trade of shoemaker for some years, but afterward went into the cattle business in Springettsbury township, at one time carrying on very extensive operations in that line. During his later years he has turned his attention to a variety of pursuits. He is still living, having his residence on Poplar street, and while advanced in years is unusually active and well preserved. His first wife was Miss Rebecca Spangler, a native of York county, daughter of Zachariah Spangler. She died when her son Zachariah was a small child. Her other four children, Charlie, Benjamin, Rebecca and Leah, all died, and are buried with their mother in the cemetery of the Mt. Zion Lutheran Church, in Springetsbury township. For his second wife Mr. Sheafer married Miss Sarah Neff, who is still living. Five children were born to this marriage also, namely: Daniel, of York, who is employed in the Weaver Organ Factory; Henry, employed by the York Machine Company; Amos, of York, in the employ of H. L. Neuman; Mary, who married Mr. Warner, of York; and Alice, at home.

Zachariah S. Sheafer was educated in the public schools of the county and when he first went to work was employed on a farm. At the age of twenty he began to learn the carpenter's trade with David Lebernecht and for nine years followed that occupation in various parts of the county. The succeeding nine years he spent in the carpenter department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, where, following Cleveland's second administration, he was appointed night inspector in the Philadelphia custom house, remaining there two years. He then resigned the position, and returning to York county engaged in the mercantile business in Yorkana for eighteen months, at the end of which time he sold out, came to York and, establishing his cigar store, also began the manufacture of his Crystal Palace cigars. He employs from six to eight men in his factory and makes the better grades of cigars, disposing of them largely in the local market, as they have proved popular goods in York's cigar trade. In connection with the Crystal Palace cigar store, which is located at the southeast corner of Center Square, Mr. Sheafer carries on a pool and billiard parlor. In politics he is a Democrat and always an active worker in the party ranks. He also belongs to Vynona Lodge, No. 999, I. O. F., which meets on East Prospect street.

Mr. Sheafer's marriage was celebrated in June, 1878, when he was united to Miss Leah Leiphart, daughter of Jacob Leiphart, of Lower Windsor township. They are the parents of four children, as follows: Harry E.; George M.; Flora E.; and Lillie M., who is deceased. The family resides at the "Hotel York."

Harry E. Sheafer, the oldest son of Zachariah S. Sheafer, who is in business with his father, was married March 19, 1898, to Miss Edna Shearer, daughter of William Shearer, of York, and they have two children, Ethel May and an infant daughter.

GEORGE M. HUNT is a native son of York county who has attained prosperity through his own efforts, and it stands to his credit that he has pressed forward along legitimate lines of endeavor, and has gained success, at the same time winning esteem and confidence of his fellow men. He was born on a farm in Windsor township, April 14, 1850, son of Joseph and Theresa (Ingrote) Hunt, both of whom are deceased.

The earlier representatives of the Hunt family lived and died in Germany. The maternal grandfather of our subject, Henry Ingrote, was born and reared in Germany, where he married and where one or more of his children were born. He finally emigrated with his family to America, and came to York county, Pa., where he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, having first located on a place along the Plank road, in York township, later removing to Windsor township, where he passed the remainder of his life. Both he and his wife were communicants of the Catholic church, and are buried in the Catholic cemetery in York.

Joseph Hunt, father of our subject, was born in Germany and was twenty-one years old at the time of his parents' emigration to the United States. His early education was procured in the excellent national schools of his fatherland. On his disembarkation in New York City, he found employment, remaining there for a number of years, and having at one time conducted a modest hotel there, while later he traveled about for some time, being variously employed. After his marriage to Theresa Ingrote, who was born and reared in York county, he located in Hellam township, where he entered the employ of the canal company, having charge of the packing house and the boats, and retaining this incumbency about five years. He thereafter was employed for a time at various vocations, in Windsor township, where he eventually purchased a farm of forty-eight acres, to whose cultivation he gave his attention until the time of his death, which occurred in 1886; his faithful wife was summoned into eternal rest in 1888, both having been communicants of the Catholic church and the remains of both being interred in the cemetery of St. Mary’s church, at York. Of the children of this worthy couple Henry is a resident of Steelton, Dauphin county; George M. is mentioned below; Jacob died in childhood; John is a prosperous farmer of Spring Garden township; Mary is the wife of William Stoutte, a prosperous greengrocer in Chicago, Ill.; Frederick is a representative farmer of Hellam township; Katie is the wife of John Snellinger, a farmer of York township; Albert is a clerk in a mercantile establishment in the city of York; and Edward is in the confectionery business in Chicago.

George M. Hunt passed his boyhood days principally in York township, in whose schools he secured his early educational training, continuing to attend school, in a somewhat irregu- lar way, until he had reached the age of fifteen years. When but twelve years of age he practically began the battle of life upon his own responsibility, since he was then placed among strangers, and assumed the duty of providing for his own maintenance by the work which he could accomplish in an incidental way, his board and clothing being his sole recompense for several years. He was first placed in the home of Isaac Fitz, in York township, and he was living with this man at the time of the memorable battle of Gettysburg, which he recalls as an event which made a most permanent and distinctive impress upon his memory, the scene of the struggle being not many miles distant and the citizens in general wrought up to a high pitch of excitement. He remained with Mr. Fitz about nine months, after which he passed the winter in the parental home. In the spring he hired out to Benjamin Heindel, a farmer of Windsor township, with whom he remained three years, after which he was with Joseph Kaufman for two years, and with Benjamin Deitz for three years. He then was for a brief interval in the employ of John Stoner, of Hellam township, and thereafter was employed for ten months by Eli Kindig, of Windsor township, thus early learning the lessons of consecutive industry. After he began to earn wages, even though small, he had the good sense to save his earnings, finally ac-cumulating sufficient money to enable him to engage in the butchering business, in Windsor township, but he soon withdrew from this field of enterprise and began farming and gardening in York township, on the Wambaugh and Myers farms, later working on other farms in the same line, either by renting land or by dividing the products of his labor with the owner of the property. Finally he purchased the old Wambaugh farm, of ninety-five acres, in York township, and there continued to be actively engaged in general farming for seven years, at the expiration of which he sold the property, soon after the death of his devoted wife, in 1888, who had been a true helpmate and co-adjutor. Thereafter he lived for one year in the home of his father-in-law, in 1889 renting a farm where he continued for nine years. He spent three years with the York Water Company, and in 1899 he purchased his present fine farm of fifty-four acres, finding a good market for his garden products in the York markets. In politics Mr. Hunt in a stanch supporter of the policies of the Democratic party, and he served most acceptably as supervisor of York township, for one term, having been elected in 1891. He is a communicant of St. Mary’s Roman Catholic Church, in York, and takes much interest in the parish work, his wife likewise having been numbered among the communicants of this parish.

On Oct. 24, 1876, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Hunt to Miss Mary Koch, who was born in Manchester township, April 8, 1848, daughter of John and Kate (Harkley) Koch. She died Dec. 18, 1888, the mother of the following children: George A., unmarried, is a blacksmith by trade and resides in York; Minnie resides in the city of Harrisburg; John Curtis is a motorman on the street-car lines of the city of Philadelphia; Sadie is the wife of Samuel Barnhart, a farmer of York township; and Francis, Mary, Roman, Edward and Albert all remain with their father on the home farm.

SAMUEL HALL, a venerable citizen of East Hopewell township, York Co., Pa., comes of an old English Quaker family, of Chester county. On his paternal side he is of English descent, while on the maternal side he is Welsh. Both sides of the family came to this country before the Revolution.

The Hall and Davis families joined the Quaker colony, and because of their faith did not take part in the Revolution. Isaac Hall, the father of our subject, was born in Chester county, in 1803, and died there in 1844. He was a carpenter by trade, and became well known as a contractor and builder. He married Rachel Davis, of Chester county, who died at the age of eighty-five years, having borne her husband these children: Thomas and Mary died in Chester county; William married Mary Ann Rambo, and died in Chester county; Davis, died at the age of fourteen years; Lewis, who married Margaret Ellen White, farmed the place our subject now owns, and died in Hopewell township; Isaac, lived and died in Chester county, and there married Miss Cox; Hannah married Webster Miller and died in Chester county; Sarah, married Henry Null; and Samuel.

Samuel Hall was born near Waynesburg, Chester county, June 12, 1831. He was educated in the public schools, and ever since boyhood has evinced a great fondness for good literature, having, however, in his early life, poor chances to appease his literary appetite. He learned the carpenter's trade with his father, and followed that occupation until 1856, in Chester county, when he removed from that county and came to York county, renting for one year the farm at what is now Mitzel's Mill, and the next eight years farmed as a tenant near Stewartstown. At the end of that time he returned to his old home in Chester county, where he resided for twenty-one years. At the end of this time he again located in East Hopewell township, purchasing his present farm, where he has since resided. This farm, which consists of forty acres, was purchased from his brother, and he has made wonderful improvements in the way of new buildings, etc.

Mr. Hall was reared to the Quaker faith, but is a member of no church. He has been a lifelong Republican.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN KOHR, who resides on his well improved farm of 108 acres in Manchester township, York county, is one of the leading farmers of the section. Mr. Kohr was born in 1861, in Manchester township, son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Roth) Kohr.

Peter Kohr, the great-grandfather of William F., was born in Lancaster county and, coming to York county, located in West Manchester township, where he bought about 200 acres of fine land, later removing to East Manchester township, and he died at Emigsville at a ripe old age. To Peter Kohr and his wife the following children were born: Thomas, Michael, Lewis, and two daughters.

Lewis Kohr was born in 1801, in Lancaster county, and came to York county with his father, when about twenty years of age. Here he learned the milling business, and followed this line in East Manchester township, at Myers' Mills, later buying a mill along the Harrisburg turnpike, near Emigsville. The mill, which is known as the old Schultz Mill, is over 100 years old and is still standing in a reasonably good condition. Mr. Kohr devoted about thirty years to milling and farming, and was the owner of five farms of 156, 151, 121, 60 and 2 acres, respectively. He married a Miss Westheffer, daughter of Conrad Westheffer, and they both died in Manchester township, where they are buried. The children born to this couple were as follows: Henry; Daniel; Leah, who died in Decatur, Ill.; Reuben, living in York. Mr. Kohr's second wife was Rebecca Westheffer, a sister of his first wife, and to them these children were born: Adam, who married May Fiuk, and died in Manchester township; Louisa, who married William Neiman and lives in York; Lewis, who married, and is a United Brethren preacher, living in Hanover; Louise, who married George Sheaffer; Mary, who married Fred Neiman, and lives in Manchester township; Jacob, who married Ellen B. Brown, of Macon Co., Ill.; and Zacharias.

Daniel Kohr was born Feb. 27, 1827, in Manchester township, and received a common school education. He married Elizabeth Roth, daughter of Christian Roth, and then located in Manchester township, where he followed farming. Mr. Kohr bought over 300 acres of land in Springetsbury township which he divided into three farms, also owning two fine farms in Manchester township of 108 and 155 acres, respectively. He was a very prosperous farmer, and his whole life was devoted to agricultural pursuits. His death occurred in Springetsbury township, where his wife also died, and where they are both buried. Mr. and Mrs. Kohr were the parents of the following children: Annie Julia married Franklin Keller, and resides in Springetsbury township; John married Sallie Myers, and lives in Springettsbury township; Lewis lives in the same township; Ellen married Zacharias Horn, and lives in Yoe; William Franklin; Emma, married a Kauffman, and lives in York city; Sylvester, single, lives in Manchester township; Daniel married Leah Herbst, and resides in Manchester township; Alice married E. Spangle, and now resides in Hellam township; and Alfred and Jane died in infancy.

William Franklin Kohr received his education in the schools of Springetsbury township, supplementing this with a course in the graded schools of York, and taught school for eleven years in York county, achieving quite a reputation as an educator.

Mr. Kohr married Lillie Sipe, born in York county, daughter of John Sipe. After marriage they located in Springetsbury township, and in 1899 removed to Manchester township, where Mr. Kohr had fallen heir to one of his father’s farms. The farm consists of 108 acres of fine land, which Mr. Kohr has cultivated to a high degree. He makes improvements every year, and devotes his entire time to farming.

To Mr. and Mrs. Kohr these children have been born: Roger; Grace; and Annie, who died at the age of two years. Mr. Kohr is a stanch Democrat, and has held the offices of township clerk and inspector of Springetsbury township.

Mr. Kohr is a member of the Reformed Church, while his wife is a member of the United Brethren Church.

DANIEL SPANGLE, of Red Lion, was born Oct. 24, 1861, in Springetsbury township, York county.

William Spangler, his grandfather, was born and reared in Springetsbury township, York Co., Pa., and died there. He married Catherine Eckert, and they had a family of twelve children.

John E. Spangler, father of Daniel, was born in Springetsbury township, where he followed farming all his active life, and now lives retired. He married Sarah Doran, a native of Hellam township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Spangler have reached the age of sixty-eight. They reared a family of twelve children. John E. Spangler is identified with the Republican party. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and his wife belongs to the U. B. Church.

Daniel Spangler was reared on his father’s farm, and attended school in Windsor township until the age of seventeen years. He was nineteen years old when he went to learn the carpenter’s trade with William Stabler, of Yoe, and this trade he followed for nine years, for eighteen months engaging in contracting. About 1885 he embarked in the cigar business, beginning with one assistant, but his business has grown until he now employs as many as one hundred hands. In 1892 he removed his business to Red Lion and built a factory on High street, which he later converted into a dwelling when he built his present large factory. He manufactures a medium brand of cigars, a demand for which has been created, and in one year he has shipped seven hundred cases. His business has prospered through his own intelligent efforts.

Mr. Spangler has also been energetic in promoting the affairs of the borough. His influence has been felt in almost all of the public spirited movements of the town. He assisted in the organization of the electric light company and was one of its directors for several years; he helped to organize the water company, and was one of its directors for years; was also one of the founders of the First National Bank of Red Lion, of which he was a director for years, and was one of the main promoters of the Red Lion Fire Company.

Mr. Spangler has been a lifelong Republican, casting his first vote for Harrison. He was one of those who helped to organize the village into a borough, and the first office to which he was elected after the change was that of judge of elections. He has done much for educational advancement here, serving as school director since 1902, and throughout that time has been secretary of the school board.

In 1881 Mr. Spangler was married, in Red Lion, to Fanny Reisinger, of Wrightsville, daughter of Frank and Barbara (Walleck) Reisinger. They have two children: Gertrude, who attended Patrick’s Business College at York; and Florence, a student in high school. Both young ladies are well educated.

Mr. Spangler is one of the leading members of the Lutheran Church at Red Lion, secretary of the council and joint council of the church, one of the deacons and a valued teacher in the Sunday-school. Fraternally he is connected with the I. O. O. F. and the Encampment at Red Lion; and is also a member of the Knights of Pythias.

SAM E. S. STONEBRAKER, for several years the manager of the “Colonial Hotel,” at JOHN J. FULTON, a highly respected citizen and retired farmer living at Shrewsbury borough, was born in Peach Bottom township, York Co., Pa., in 1832, a son of John Fulton.

John Fulton, father of John J., was a prominent teacher in York county, following the profession for some twenty-five years. He also owned a farm of 300 acres of fine land. He married Elizabeth Cursell, who died in 1865. He survived until the age of seventy-three, and both were buried in their native township at Slate Ridge. They had these children: David, Robert, John J., A. J., Elsie J. (who married a McCurdy), and Mary A. (who married William Evans). All have passed away except John J.

John J. Fulton spent his school days in his native township, close to Delta, and continued a student until he was about eighteen years old, when he became his father’s main help on the farm. After the death of his father, he fell heir to 108 acres of the homestead, and he lived there, farming with much success, until 1888. He then moved to Stewartstown and ran a temperance hotel for three years, during the period of the construction of the Stewartstown railroad. Then he returned to his farm which he sold two and a half years later. For two years he resided with his father-in-law, but in 1890 he bought his present property, consisting of ten acres all within the borough of Shrewsbury, where he has made many improvements.

Mr. Fulton was married (first), in 1861, to Sarah A. Heapes, daughter of John Heapes, of Harford county, Md. She died in 1876, and is buried at Slate Ridge. Three children were born of this union: William John, Hugh M. and Charles C., both of the latter being deceased. The eldest son attended the York Collegiate Institute and an educational institution at Easton, for three years, and after graduating read law with Judge Fisher of York, and was admitted to the Bar at York in 1883. Mr. Fulton was married (second) to Hannah A. H. Johnson, daughter of John Johnson, of York county.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fulton are Lutherans. Mr. Fulton is a Democrat, but takes no very active part in political contests. He is passing the evening of life in his beautiful home which has one of the finest locations in this town, standing on an eminence overlooking the surrounding country.

THOMAS PROWELL SWENEY is a native of Fairview township, where he was born Aug. 2, 1841, son of Charles Sweney.

Patrick Sweney, grandfather of Thomas P., was a farmer of York county, where he died, leaving children: John, Francis, Daniel, Gracie, Charles, Margaret and Susan.

Charles Sweney was born Jan. 27, 1801, and received a common school education. He followed farming in Fairview township, where, Feb. 27, 1834, he was united in marriage with Catherine Smith, who was born Nov. 27, 1809, daughter of John Smith, the well-known cabinet maker of Lewisberry borough. Mrs. Sweney died Jan. 23, 1889, while her husband died Aug. 14, 1879, and the remains of both rest in Mt. Olivet cemetery in Fairview township. A man of sterling worth of character. Mr. Sweney was very highly respected in the community in which he made his home for so many years. Mr. and Mrs. Sweney were the parents of children as follows: Anna May, born May 6, 1835, died young; John Henry, born March 18, 1838, died July 18, 1899; Thomas Prowell; and William A., born April 4, 1846, married Rosa Graft, and lives in Clearfield county. Their son, Charles F., is a bright young civil engineer, located in Belmont, New York.
Thomas P. Sweeny attended the schools of Fairview township until eighteen years of age, and from that age to the present time he has followed farming. From 1885 to 1889 he served in the revenue service, fulfilling his duties faithfully. In 1883 he purchased the Henry Mosey farm, which is situated on the road leading from New Cumberland to Lisburn, where he is now located, carrying on general farming and dairying. Mr. Sweeny’s farm consists of forty-five acres of good land, and his dairy business is quite extensive, he selling his milk at wholesale. His vote is cast in favor of the Democratic party, and he has served on the election board, and has been tax collector of his township.

WILLIAM N. AUGENBAUGH, a retired farmer of North Codorus township, is an honored veteran of the great Civil war. He was born in Newberry township, Sept. 16, 1838, son of Simon, and grandson of George Augenbaugh.

George Augenbaugh was a farmer of Conewago township, where he died, being buried at a place called Augenbaugh School House. He had children: George, David, John and Simon.

Simon Augenbaugh was a farmer of Newberry township, and married (first) Miss Nailor, by whom he had the following children: Henry, John N., William N., Catherine, George, Levina and Levi. After the death of his first wife he married Elizabeth Nye, and they removed to Cumberland county, near Carlisle, where he purchased the Noble farm of 142 acres of land, and where he died a short time after, at the age of forty-two years. Ten months later the family returned to York county, locating in Manchester township.

William N. Augenbaugh received most of his education in Newberry township, although he also received some schooling in Manchester township. As his father had died when he was still a very small boy he was sent out among strangers to make his own way, being hired out in Spring Garden township for one and one half years. In 1861 he enlisted in gallant Company E, 87th P. V. I., taking part in all of the engagements of that regiment except one. He served until Dec. 10, 1863, when he was discharged with the rank of corporal. Although never receiving any dangerous wounds, Mr. Augenbaugh was taken prisoner and held as such for ninety-one days, and his experiences, as often related by him, were thrilling in the extreme.

In 1865 Mr. Augenbaugh married Mary Gentler, daughter of Peter Gentler, of West Manchester township. For one year after marriage Mr. Augenbaugh hired out in that township, whence he went to Jackson township, being employed there in a stone quarry for three and one-half years. At the end of this time he returned to West Manchester township, and purchased the farm of Jacob Baer, where he remained twenty-eight years. In 1897 he located on his present home of four acres, which he purchased of George W. Benneman, near York New Salem, and here he has resided to the present time. To him and his wife were born the following children: Catherine, the wife of A. M. Glatfelter, who is farming in North Codorus township; Lydia Jane, married to M. G. Emig, of the same township; and Allen Monroe, now located in Allentown, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Augenbaugh is a stanch Republican, and when in West Manchester township served as assessor, tax collector and supervisor. He is a member of Wolf’s Lutheran Church.

JOHN AMBROSE TROSTLE is engaged in cultivating his farm in Paradise township. He was born in Adams county, near Abbottstown, May 10, 1846.

John Trostle, the grandfather of our subject, came from Germany, and settled on a farm near Holtz-Schwanm Church, where he died. He married, and had a large family of children, among whom was John (2), the father of our subject.

John Trostle (2) was born in Adams county, where he spent most of his life. He followed farming from early manhood until his death near Berlin. In politics he was a stanch Democrat. He married Miss Eve Shetler, and she also died in Berlin.

John Ambrose Trostle grew to manhood in the neighborhood of East Berlin, and attended the township schools, his first teacher being Professor Brown. He left school at the age of eighteen years, and remained with his father until of age, when, at twenty-one years of age, he commenced to work out among the farmers, and also at times worked at painting. He was married in Paradise township, in 1874, to Miss Maria Ferrer, daughter of John and Leah Ferrer, both deceased, who owned the farm which now belongs to our subject. After marriage Mr. Trostle rented this farm, which became his on the death of his father-in-law. This was in 1886, and since that time Mr. Trostle has made many improvements, including the erection of a new barn, 75x46 feet, and other buildings. Mr. Trostle is a member of the Upper Conewago German Baptist Church, in which he is very active. He is a Democrat in politics, and has served as school director. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Trostle are as follows: Minerva; Jennie, who married Bert Stambaugh, of Adams county, and Edith.

SAMUEL F. ROCKEY, of York, was born Nov. 29, 1860, in Newberry township, York county, at the Ball Hills, son of Henry and Louise (Fols) Rockey.

Frederick Rockey, the great-grandfather, came from Germany with his two brothers—Jacob and Leonard—and settled in York county, where Red Lion now stands. He followed brick laying, and was a very successful and skillful mechanic. Although he lived to old age, twenty years prior to his death he had a very serious accident, falling from a scaffold and receiving injuries which nearly resulted fatally; but the noted Dr. Speck, of Lancaster City, Pa., by his skill brought him back to health. Frederick Rockey is buried in the Lutheran cemetery on George street, in York, Pa. He married Elizabeth King, and the children born to them were: Sarah A., who married Samuel Downs, died near Newberry, and is buried in the Paddletown cemetery, Newberry township; Samuel; Jacob, who died at Red Lion; and John and George, who died in Conewago township.

Samuel Rockey was born at Red Lion in 1798, received a common school education, and followed farming in Fairview township. He married Leah Kilmore, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Malone) Kilmore, of Washington township, and after his marriage removed to Newberry township, renting a farm of Mathias Boyer. Later he bought eighty acres in the same township, where he followed farming until his death, which occurred in 1872. He is buried at the old Miller burying-ground in Newberry township, where his wife, who passed away in 1889, is also buried. Samuel Rockey was a stanch Democrat in politics, while his religious connections were with the Lutheran Church of York. The children born to Samuel and Leah Rockey were: George W., of Newberry township; Maria Elizabeth, who married Joseph Myers, and lives in Newberry township; Henry, who is mentioned below; Angeline, who married Henry Stettler, died in Newberry township and is buried at Paddle-town; Sarah Ann, married to Abraham Wolf, and residing at Lewisberry borough; Rachel, widow of Joseph Strawbaugh, residing on Philadelphia street, York; Lydia, who died at the age of fifteen years, and is buried in the Miller graveyard; Leah, who died young, and is buried in Newberry township; and Jacob.

Henry Rockey was born in Newberry township and his education was received in the public schools. He was married while young and began at once as a farmer in the same vicinity, becoming well known and honored there. Later in life he moved to York, was appointed tip-staff by Judge Bay Stewart, and was so engaged for the rest of his days. His death occurred at the age of sixty-nine, while his wife died when only forty-two years old. Both are buried in Green Mount cemetery, York. The following children were born to Henry and Louise (Fols) Rockey: William, a molder for the York Manufacturing Company; Francis M., foreman in the molding department of that same company, in which he is also a stockholder; Samuel F.; John; Louis; and Elmer, deceased.

Samuel F. Rockey was sent to school in York until he was seventeen, and after that was engaged in a variety of occupations. For fourteen years he was in the transfer business with John Gross, and then went to John F. Thomas & Sons, by whom he was employed eight years. In 1900 he was appointed to be the janitor of the Burrowses school building on West King street, and has ever since been in that position, the duties of which Mr. Rockey performs most faithfully and satisfactorily. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., Codorus Council, No. 115, and is a member of the Reformed Church. In political sentiment he is a Democrat.

On May 14, 1883, Mr. Rockey married Miss Sarah Alice Huss, daughter of John Huss, and children as follows have been born to their union: Francis W., a molder for the York

Manufacturing Company; Harry, who died June 7, 1904, aged nineteen, and is buried in Green Mount cemetery; and Edna Maria, who is attending school. The family home is at No. 561 West Prince street, where Mr. Rockey bought the property in 1890.

ELIAS GLATFELTER, one of the highly esteemed residents of Conewago township, York Co., Pa., was born Aug. 30, 1842, in that part of the county known as the Fishing Creek Valley, son of Elijah and a grandson of Daniel Glatfelter.

Daniel Glatfelter was born in York county, this family being an old established one here, and he owned property which was improved with good buildings, in Conewago township, where he was actively engaged in farming until within a few years of his death. His wife was a Miss Currens, also of York county, and both lie buried at Rolese Church in Conewago township. Their children were: Elizabeth, the wife of John Leach, died in the West where they had located; Jacob died unmarried; Samuel married Rebecca Crissenger and died in Huntington county, Pa.; Daniel married Leah Byers, and died in Conewago township; Elijah; and Susanna married Samuel Sipe, and died in Fairview township.

Elijah Glatfelter was born in 1817, in Conewago township, and obtained the best educational advantages afforded by the country schools at that time, these being, as we know, very meager when contrasted with those of the present day. He grew into strong manhood and carried on farming many years after his marriage on the home place, and then located in Dover township, where he bought a small farm and operated for a few years. Subsequently he bought a comfortable home in Dover borough, where he lived in comparative retirement. He died June 10, 1891. He married Mary Lefever, who died Nov. 14, 1894, and both are buried at Strayer's Church in Dover township. The children of Elijah Glatfelter and wife were: Matilda, a resident of Dover; Elias, of this sketch; John; Daniel, of York, who married Annie Pfoltzgraf; Eva Ann, wife of Levi Snellbecker, of Dover; Peter, of Dover, who married Sarah Bermheimer; George, who died young; Samuel L., who married Caroline Gross, and is a farmer in Conewago township; Mary Ann, wife of Edward Crane, of York; Leah, residing with her sister Matilda; and Sarah Jane, widow of the late Jacob C. Boring.

Elias Glatfelter attended school in Conewago township until he was seventeen years of age and then learned the milling business with John Sprengle, who owned a mill along the Yellow creek in Cumberland county, Pa. This business Mr. Glatfelter followed for eight years, and then engaged in farming in Conewago and Dover townships, owning a very good farm in the former township, consisting of fifty-five acres, near Zion View. After acquiring that property he made numerous improvements, built an addition to the house and followed farming there until 1900. Since then he has enjoyed the ease of retired life, and since his sister, Mrs. Boring, has become a widow, he resides with her.

In 1865 Mr. Glatfelter was married to Sarah Jane Stoninger, a daughter of Henry and Margaret (Stetler) Stoninger. Mrs. Glatfelter died Feb. 10, 1900, and is survived by no children. She was laid to rest in the Strayer churchyard in Dover township. Mr. Glatfelter has always been identified with the Republican party, and for years was very active in politics. He was a man in whom his fellow citizens could always place reliance and on different occasions was elected to the offices of township auditor and supervisor, and in 1906 was elected road supervisor for three years.

JACOB C. BORING, whose tragic death grieved and shocked the whole community on March 15, 1904, was one of the most highly respected citizens and farmers of Conewago township. He was educated in the Ball Hills school in Newberry township, and after his marriage, resided for thirteen years on the old Boring farm there. In 1901 he came to Conewago township where he had a fine farm of fifty-five acres known as the old Hake Hotel place. He was a man who was popular with every one, making his death a calamity of more than usual seriousness. On Dec. 25, 1887, he married Sarah Jane Glatfelter, the ceremony being performed at Rossville, by Rev. Dick. They had these children: Laura, Jane, Lillie May and Walter Harrison, all going to school.

The accident which caused the death of Mr. Boring and his neighbor and companion, Samuel Lehr, was one of those unfortunate calam-
Lewis Raffensberger obtained his education in the schools of Dover township, attending until sixteen years of age. Then he hired out to neighboring farmers for two years, after which he went to learn the trade of blacksmith with John Myers, at Weigelstown, in Dover township, remaining with him one year and nine months. He then went to Washington, D. C., later coming back to Dover township, but returning to Washington and entering the pioneer corps which worked for four months through Georgia and Alabama. Then he came back home and worked in a machine shop at Dover. On enlisting for service in the Civil war Mr. Raffensberger entered Company F, 28th Regiment, Illinois Infantry, and during his term of service participated in many minor engagements and in the battle of Mobile, where the fighting continued for eleven days. Mr. Raffensberger relates one especially thrilling adventure. While his command was on the transport in the Gulf of Mexico, one of the terrible equatorial storms came up, and it was of such intensity that in order to save themselves the soldiers had to throw 480 horses overboard. It was a very exciting time, as the vessel was some one hundred miles from shore. Of all dangerous situations in which he was placed our subject thinks he was the nearest to death at that time. The exposure and hardship brought on typhoid fever, from which he suffered for seven days on the road, too ill to be moved to Mobile. He was later taken to the hospital there, where he spent six weeks, and was finally mustered out at Clarksville, Texas, receiving his discharge at New Orleans.

Returning to Illinois for a short time, Mr. Raffensberger came back to Dover, where he engaged in blacksmithing, and has always been considered an expert mechanic. He purchased his fine home on Main street, built a good barn, and made many other improvements. He owns seventeen acres of very valuable land, much of it in building lots, all of it continually gaining in value.

Mr. Raffensberger has been twice married. His first wife, Malinda Cling, daughter of George Cling, of Dover township, died while but a bride, thirty days after marriage, and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Strayers Church, in Dover township. Mr. Raffensberger's second marriage was to Amanda Bambart, daughter of John Bambart, of Dover township, and they have had children as follows: Ida Kate is the widow of James Bear, who was a tinner by trade and died in Cadorus township, where Mrs. Bear still lives with her three children, Clayton, Charles and Ella, Margaret having died young; Clayton, who is employed in the office of a large iron manufacturing plant at Johnstown, married Emma Bowman; Ella is the wife of Alfred Kaufman, a cigarmaker at York; Emma died aged three months.

Mr. Raffensberger does not belong to any religious body, but he is a moral man and contributes liberally to the support of the Lutheran Church at Dover, of which his estimable wife is a member. In politics he has always been identified with the Democratic party, which has honored him on numerous occasions by election to office. He has served as a member of the council for Dover borough and is still a member of that body, having two more years to serve. He has always worked for the best interests of the community while in office, and has helped materially in the erection of the water plant in the borough, begun in 1905 and just completed, 1906. For eight terms he has served as school director, and has given his children educational advantages which he never enjoyed himself. He is an honest, upright man, one who is thoroughly respected by all who know him, and in every way worthily represents the good citizenship of York county, and Dover borough.

SAMUEL H. KLUGH. The Klugh family of York county, Pa., is descended from one of two brothers who came to the States from Germany in the latter part of the eighteenth century. This ancestor was the father of six children: Henry, who settled near Maytown, Lancaster county, where many of his descendants are living today; George; Frederick; Susanna, who married Peter Arnold, and has descendants living in Clarion and Clearfield counties; Catherine; and Jane. Of Henry, Catherine and Jane nothing is known.

George Klugh, the second son, and grandfather of Samuel H., was born Nov. 1, 1790, and died Dec. 20, 1879, aged eighty-nine. In addition to being a carpenter or builder he was an old time German cabinet maker. During the fifties and sixties of the nineteenth century building was only conducted in the summer season, and during the winter season the time was employed in making up home-made, or hand-made furniture, this consisting of all kinds of household furniture then in use, including the old time veneer work. Of the six sons of George Klugh, five followed their father's vocation, that of carpentering and cabinet making. George Klugh was for many years a member of the Franklin Lutheran Church (which he built) and was for a number of years a justice of the peace in Franklin township. He married Hannah Arnold, who was born April 5, 1796, and who died Aug. 22, 1873. Nine children were born to them: (1) John, born May 11, 1816, served as captain in the 209th P. V. L., during the Rebellion, and is today a prominent citizen of Franklin town. He married, in 1848, Henrietta, daughter of Henry Ritter, of York county, and has five children, Mary, Alice, Harvey, John and Milton B. (2) George, deceased, born March 25, 1818, married Harriet Frederick, and had a son, Henry, who married Eliza Kuntz, and had four children, John, Georgiana, Mary and Harvey. (3) Philip, born Oct. 31, 1820, died May 11, 1834. (4) Frederick, born March 20, 1823, was an undertaker and cabinet maker, and died in Dillsburg, Nov. 1, 1904. (5) Henry was the father of Samuel H. (6) Peter, born Dec. 4, 1829, lived in Harrisburg, until his death in November, 1904. By his wife, who was Miss Soranda Ritter, he had two children, Charles and John, the latter deceased. (7) The next child was a daughter, born May 28, 1833, who died the same day. (8) Clarissa, born May 23, 1834, married Leonard Heikes, who lives in Dillsburg. There were born to them: Emma, Mrs. Thomas Hooper, of Wellsville; Benjamin F., who married and has two children, and is principal of the public school at Manheim, Lancaster county; Schuyler, a former of banking at the Industrial School at Scotland, Franklin county, who married and has children; George, a mercantile clerk at Harrisburg; and Walter C., a teacher in the public schools of Harrisburg. (9) Joseph R., born July 5, 1836, married Miss Fannie Breeckell, and their children are John, Howard, Catherine and Jennie. The family lives at Orleans, Nebraska. Henry Klugh was born April 29, 1826, and made his first profession that of teaching. For twelve years he was thus engaged through the school year, while he employed the summer months in carpenter work and contracting. He then abandoned teaching and devoted his attention wholly to contracting for the rest of his life. He was a man of high standing in the community and influential in public affairs, acting as justice of the peace, and inspector of elections. He was a Republican most of his life, but later in life joined the ranks of the Prohibition party. A devout Lutheran, he was for many years an elder in the church and superintendent of the Sunday-school. His marriage occurred Nov. 11, 1856, to Eliza, daughter of Samuel and Katie (Heikes) Knisey, and their married life continued until May 22, 1895, when the husband was called from this world. His wife is now living in Dillsburg. The following children were born of this union: (1) Mary Katherine, born July 17, 1857, married Ephraim Brame, a farmer in Adams county. (2) Samuel H. (3) George F., principal of schools at New Cumberland, Cumberland county, married Miss Julia Spangler, and has three children, Claude, Beatrice and Ada. (4) Jerre J., for the past seventeen years a teacher, is at present in Dillsburg; he is a Republican in politics and takes a deep interest in church matters, being trustee of the church and parsonage, as well as steward in the U. B. Church, and teacher and superintendent in the Sunday school. (5) Hannah J., born July 14, 1871, died June 21, 1878. (6) William K., born March 20, 1875, a teacher by profession but now acting as station agent at Shiremans-town, Cumberland county, for the Cumberland Valley Railroad, married Lillie, daughter of Daniel Leathery of Franklintown.

Samuel H. Klugh was born June 28, 1863, in Franklintown borough. He was given a good education, and then taught for five years in Franklin and Carroll townships. It was at this period, during the summers, that he learned the carpenter's trade under his father. At the end of that time he engaged with his uncle Frederick in the furniture and undertaking business in Dillsburg; and he has now become the sole proprietor. Like his father he takes an active part in municipal affairs, is a strong Republican in his views, and has held the offices of school director and auditor of the township, while since 1895 he has served continuously as justice of the peace.

Mr. Klugh was married, in 1886, to Elizabeth J., daughter of John and Elizabeth (Bosser) Sollenberger, and they have become the parents of five children, Bruce S., H. Scott, Lynn S., Ray A. and Maude E. Mr. Klugh is a prominent and public-spirited citizen, and his long continuance in office attests the confidence in him felt by his fellow townspeople. He is a member of the Improved Order of Heptasops, and also of the Modern Woodmen of America; in both fraternities he has held offices both of local and supreme appointments.

AQUILLA FAUTH has passed his entire life in York county, and is a representative citizen of Delroy, where he is established in a successful general merchandise business. He is a representative of the third generation of his family in this county, and the name is one which has here stood for loyal and progressive citizenship and sterling character, so that a full measure of popular confidence and esteem has not been denied its various individuals.

Christopher Fauth, grandfather of our subject, was born in Gross Glattbach, Oberamt Maulbrom, Kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, May 10, 1810, son of David and Maria Fauth, who were born Feb. 20, 1784, and Sept. 30, 1790, respectively. He was reared to the age of sixteen in his native land, in whose excellent schools he secured a good education, and came to America with his parents. Depending upon his own stout heart and willing hands to work out his fortune and help him to attain to a position of independence, he located in Lower Windsor township, York county, where he was for a number of years employed at farm work. Finally he was enabled to purchase a small farm in that township, the property being now owned and occupied by Daniel Delinger. He continued to devote his attention to the cultivation of this farm for a number of years, and then, disposing of the property, located in a residence which he purchased in the same township, finally disposing of the latter property and passing the closing years of his life in the homes of his children. He died at the home of his daughter Mary, wife of Henry Abel, April 4, 1900, at the venerable age of eighty-nine years, ten months, twenty-five days, honored by all who knew him. His loved and devoted wife, whose maiden name was Cath-erine Miller, died just three hours prior to his demise, aged eighty-nine years, three months, twelve days, so in death they were not divided. the remains of both being laid to rest in one coffin in the Canadochley cemetery; both were faithful members of the church there. They had four sons and five daughters: Henry was the father of our subject; David resides in Lower Windsor township; George is a farmer of Windsor township; Jacob is deceased; Sarah deceased, was the wife of Reuben Abel; Mary is the wife of Henry Abel; Amanda is the wife of Jacob Loucks; Anna is the wife of Nathaniel Keller; and Magdalena is the wife of Daniel Hilt.

Henry Fauth, father of Aquilla Fauth, was born in Lower Windsor township, this county, and there passed his entire life. He had limited educational advantages, and early became dependent upon his own resources. He learned the shoemaker's trade, to which he gave his attention during the greater part of several years, but he finally engaged in farming in his native township, and continued to be identified with this line of industry until his death, which occurred in 1894. He was a man of sterling character and commandd unqualified esteem in the county which was his home throughout life.
He was a stanch Republican in his political proclivities, and both he and his wife were consistent members of the Lutheran Church of Canadochley. He married Sarah Keller, who was born and reared in this county, and whose death occurred in 1892; she was a sister of James Keller. Of the children of Henry and Sarah (Keller) Fauth, Aquilla is the eldest;
Harrison, a resident of Delroy, is mentioned elsewhere; and Saloma is the wife of Charles E. Leber, of Delroy.

Aquilla Fauth was born Oct. 9, 1867, on the farm owned by his grandfather, in Lower Windsor township, this county. He attended the public schools of his native township until he had attained the age of sixteen years, m-wiring good use of the opportunities thus afforded him. At the age of sixteen he began serving an apprenticeship at the trade of cigarmaking, in the factory of R. A. Paules, of Delroy, becoming a skilled workman, and continuing in the employ of Mr. Paules about nine years. He then engaged in the manufacture of cigars upon his own responsibility, in the village of Delroy, continuing the enterprise only a short time,
however, and then turning his attention to agicultural pursuits, becoming the owner of a well-improved farm in his home township which he successfully conducted for six years, giving special attention to dairying. In the spring of 1901 Mr. Fauth located in Delroy and pur-cbased the general merchandise business of W.
S. Flory, together with the store building and dwelling, which was erected in 1890, by David Gilbert. He carries an excellent stock of goods and controls a large and representative trade, extending throughout the territory normally tributary to the village of Delroy, while he is known as a progressive and reliable business man and loyal and public-spirited citizen. In politics Mr. Fauth is a stanch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and while never ambitious for official preferment he served three years as tax collector of Lower Windsor township. He and his wife are prominent and valued members of the Lutheran Church.

In the city of York, June 3, 1890, was sotennized the marriage of Mr. Fauth to Miss Elmira Deitz, who was born and reared in Hellam township, daughter of Jacob Deitz, a representative of one of the old and honored families of York county. Mr. and Mrs. Fauth have one child, Ora Edith, who was born Nov.
22, 1892.

CHARLES E. BAIR, one of the prominent citizens and universally esteemed men of Newberry township, York county, was born in 1852, in that township, a son of Benjamin and Annie (Rudy) Bair.

Jacob Bair, his paternal grandfather, followed the trade of hatter, in Lehigh county, Pa., where he married, and died at the age of eighty-two years. His children besides Benjamin were: Samuel, who died at Mt. Wolf;
George and Melchoer, who died in Lehigh county; Ephraim, who died at Reading; Man-assa, who died in Newberry township; Rachel Mrs. Koons, who died in Lehigh county, at the age of ninety-four years; Mrs. Daniel Hoover, who died near Mt. Wolf; and one child that died in Cumberland county.

Benjamin Bair, father of Charles E., was His education was acquired in Lehigh county, and he was eighteen years of age when he came to York county and settled in Newberry township. Although he learned the trade of cigar-making he did not follow it continuously, soon taking up peddling, a business that was very lucrative in those days before transportation was made easy, so that the country people could reach business centers. Mr. Bair followed peddling through Dauphin and Perry counties for thirty-five years, having his regular customers, but kept his home in Newberry township. After he retired from traveling he was elected justice of the peace in Newberry township and served most capably in that office for a period of fifteen years, or until his death, in 1896, at the age of seventy-five years. In 1842 he married Annie Rudy, daughter of George Rudy, whose wife was a Miller. Mrs. Bair also died in Newberry township, where she and her husband are buried. In politics Mr. Bair was a strong Democrat, and he served as school director for a long time.

The following children were born to Benjamin Bair and his wife: David, who died aged four years; George, who died young; Mary, who died aged seventeen years; Jacob, deceased who served in the army during the Civil war; William, a farmer in Newberry township, who married Kate Burns; Elizabeth, who died aged twenty-one years; Kate, deceased, wife of William Basehore; Charles E., of this sketch; George, foreman in a cigar factory, who married Henriette Groom and lives at New Cumberland; Sallie, deceased, who was the wife of Isaiah Dugan; Benjamin, deceased, who married Ellen Jennings; Leah, who died aged fifteen years; Annie, who died aged seven years; Harry, deceased, who married Emma Cook; and Rachel, wife of Jacob Sutton, who lives at New Cumberland.

Charles E. Bair attended the public schools of Newberry township until he was thirteen years of age and then was placed with a cigarmaker to learn the trade. He worked at that business in Newberry for five years and then removed to a point near Newberry and conducted a business there for nine years, subsequently engaging in business in Newberry, where he carried on large operations, having a factory where he employed fifty skilled workmen. Finding a better field at New Cumberland, he moved his factory there, taking with him a force of ninety people, and for two years he operated one of the largest industries of the kind in that place. Then he sold the business to John C. Herman and returned to Newberry township, but a year later removed to Goldsboro, where, in 1899, he bought a site and erected a fine cigar factory and handsome residence.

Mr. Bair has been a very successful manufacturer. He has a large established trade and deals both wholesale and retail. In addition to his great factory at Goldsboro, where he keeps some fifty skilled workmen employed at all times, he has a wholesale and retail store at No. 24 North 4th street, Harrisburg. He makes a specialty of the Gen. Hartranft brand, and through the excellence of his product is ready to meet all competition.

In 1871 Mr. Bair married Ellen Basehore, daughter of Daniel and Mary (Fink) Basehore, both members of old and honorable families of York county. These children were born to the union: William, who married Elizabeth Herman, and resides at Mechanicsburg; Fillmore, who married May Adlanger; Annie; Harvey, who married Nettie Rider, and lives at Harrisburg; Daniel, at home; Vernon, who died aged seven months; Ross, who married Elhora Pfister and lives at Goldsboro; Mary, Charles, Orville, Benjamin and Ella, at home; and Edwin, who died aged one year and three months.

In politics Mr. Bair is a Democrat. He is serving as one of the borough’s worthy counsellors, is also a school director, and is prominent in everything that concerns the well-being of his community. He has been very prominent for years in religious work, being a valued member of the Church of God, in which he is an elder, and while he resided at Newberry was Sunday-school superintendent for nine years. It was mainly through his efforts and financial help that a new church was built at New Cumberland.

FRANCIS LITTLETON BAIR, of Spring Garden township, formerly of York, belongs to a family of German descent which has been prominent in Lancaster county for almost two centuries.

His paternal grandparents, Isaac and Jennie (Sangry) Bair, had a family as follows: Benjamin, deceased; James; Peter; and Elizabeth, wife of Leander Vaughn.

Peter Bair married Sarah, daughter of Frederick and Lydia (Whitman) Schenberger, and to their union were born: Rev. Isaac, pastor of an Evangelical Church in Northumberland county, Pa.; Benjamin Oscar, of Delta; Elmer, of Delta; Charles, a grocer at Laurel; Horace R., a divinity student, who died in 1895: Lottie, wife of D. W. Detwiler, of York county; Amanda, Mrs. Thomas Harris, of Wrightsville; Susan, who married (first) Arthur P. Smith, and (second) James Adair, of Red Lion; and Francis Littleton. Mrs. Sarah S. Bair had one brother, Adam Schenberger, of Kansas, and a sister, Isabella, who married (first) a Mr. Schenberger, (second) a Mr. Wilkinson, and (third) Henry Lephart.

Francis L. Bair was born in Lower Windsor township, York county, June 30, 1853. He was educated in the public schools of South Chanceford township and after finishing his education learned the carpenter’s trade under William Helder, of East Prospect. He was thus engaged until 1884, when he gave up carpentry and went into the grocery business in York, on East Market street. Later he removed to a location on Pirie street, in the same city, and finally in 1900 moved beyond the city limits entirely, and opened a business to the southward, on Springdale avenue, in Spring Garden township. Until September, 1904, he conducted his establishment there and met with the greatest success, but at that time he disposed of the business, and has not been actively engaged in any other since. Mr. Bair owns considerable property suitable for building sites, in the vicinity of his last location, and has also put up a number of substantial dwellings there.

In 1874 Mr. Bair was united in matrimonial to Miss Octavia Moody, the daughter of William P. and Matilda (Young) Moody. To their union have been born the following children: Elsie M., the wife of H. C. Kellar; Edward E., a druggist in York, who married Miss Emma May Fleming; Harry D., who married Miss Minnie V. Henry, of York, and Robert M., at home. Mrs. Bair was one of a family of eight and had four brothers and three sisters. viz.: Lyman B.; John Milton; Edward E.; Young. Ella, the wife of J. B. Bentz; and Amanda, the wife of John Rittenhouse. Francis L. Bair, belongs to the I. O. H., and in religious belief is connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, on South Duke street, York, in which he is a trustee and an influential member. He is an honorable, upright man and good citizen and is greatly respected.

HENRY F. MARSHALL, of Paradise township, York county, who has lived retired for the last four years, was born in Adams county, Feb. 1, 1821.

John Marshall, his grandfather, died in Adams county, aged ninety-nine years.

Samuel Marshall, father of Henry F., was a native of Adams county, and was a saddle and farmer by occupation. He died when twenty-seven years of age. He married Sarah Fuller, and their children were: Martha, deceased, married a Berkheimer; Samuel, who resides in the West; Miss Susanna; Russ, who resides in the West; Herman, who died in York in 1901; Henry F.; and two that died in infancy. After the father’s death, the mother was married in that township to Henry Graff, then removing to the farm now occupied by our subject. She died at Abbottstown.

Henry F. Marshall was one year old when his father removed to Abbottstown, where a short time later he died. Young Marshall grew to manhood, attending the subscription schools in Abbottstown and Paradise township, and left school at an early age to learn the blacksmith’s trade with Frederick Wolf, of Abbottstown. This trade he followed in Abbottstown, Hampton and Oxford, and then worked at it for himself at the first named town, after which he engaged in farming for his step-father.

Mr. Marshall was married to Miss Mary McFarland, who died in 1888, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, to which our subject also belongs. He is a Republican and has served as school director for three years. Four years ago Mr. Marshall retired from farming, and since that time his finely cultivated tract of 100 acres has been cared for by others.

GEORGE INNERS (deceased), who for thirty-five years was employed by the well known firm of E. G. Smyser’s Sons & Co., of York, as a patternmaker, was born in York township, son of George and Lena (Evert) Innerr.

Mr. Innerr attended the common schools of York township, and learned the carpenter’s trade, and later the millwright’s trade, at the latter of which he worked for several years. He then engaged with E. G. Smyser’s Sons & Co., where he was employed until his death, in July 1904. He was one of the firm’s oldest employees, and one of the most skilled patternmakers in the business, having the advantage over others of having first learned the carpenter’s
Mr. Inners was united in marriage with Annie Elizabeth Mitzel, daughter of Henry and Barbara (Hamihgan) Mitzel, and to this union were born: Nettie D. (a stenographer), Jennie B., Bessie C., James C., and Annie M. Mrs. Inners resides at No. 544 West King street, York.

Among other specimens of Mr. Inners' work may be mentioned the pattern made by him for the famous Brooklyn bridge, which testifies to his skill as a patternmaker.

ISAAC HARRINGTON, the efficient and highly esteemed passenger agent of the Northern Central Railroad in the city of York, is a native of Delaware, having been born in the old homestead, near Harrington Station, on the Delaware Railroad, in Kent county, Jan. 16, 1849. The family was early established in that locality, and the station mentioned was named in honor of the ancestors of our subject. He is a son of Peter D. and Elizabeth (Hamilton) Harrington, both of whom are deceased, the father having been a prosperous farmer of Kent county, Del., while his also was the distinction of having served as a valiant Union soldier during the war of the Rebellion. He enlisted as a private in the 6th Del. V. I., taking part in the various engagements in which his command was involved, and receiving his honorable discharge at the expiration of his term of enlistment. He was a Republican in politics, and both he and his wife were devoted members of the Methodist Protestant Church. Their children were as follows: David is a farmer of Kent county, Del.; Mary A. is the wife of Samuel Graham, a retired farmer, and they reside in Greenwood, Del.; Maria is the wife of Charles H. Jones, a farmer of Sussex county; Rebecca B. is the wife of George Outten, a farmer of Kent county, Del.; Bessie E. is the wife of John H. Jones, who is likewise a successful farmer of Kent; and Isaac.

Isaac Harrington passed his boyhood days on the home farm, and his early educational training was secured in the public schools of his native county, after which he continued to assist in the work of the home farm until he had attained his legal majority. Thereafter he was for twelve years employed as clerk in a store and railroad office in Freedland, Md., and in 1882 he came to York and became a clerk in the freight office of the Northern Central Railroad, retaining this position until 1890, when he was transferred to the Northern Central and Pennsylvania railroad ticket office, where he served as ticket clerk for a number of years, while in January, 1897, he was given full charge of the office, and has since served in this capacity, his course having been such as to indicate the wisdom shown in promoting him to the responsible office. He is popular in the railroad circles, and also with the general public, and is one of York's well-known and honored citizens. In politics Mr. Harrington is a stanch Republican in so far as national issues are involved, but in local affairs he maintains an independent attitude and is liberal in his views, as is he in all other relations of life. He is affiliated with the local organization of the Sons of Veterans, and both he and his wife are valued members of the Union Lutheran Church, in which he has served as elder since 1898.

On April 8, 1879, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Harrington to Miss Sarah M. Cochran, daughter of John W. Cochran, a prominent farmer of Carroll county, Md., while her mother, whose maiden name was Urith Brown, was a lineal descendant from Lord Cornwallis. Mr. and Mrs. Harrington have two children, Alma Urith, wife of Andrew J. McLaren, who is engaged in the insurance business in York, Pa.; and Delmar Clyde, who is assistant ticket clerk in the office of the Northern Central Railway in York.

HARRY H. JONES, M. D. In no other land on the face of the globe is there accorded so perfect and consistent a recognition of individuality as in America. Here only has it been possible to overcome the prejudicial animus against admitting the ability and capacity of youth, and to afford to the individual a full province in which to exercise the most potent functions of which he is capable, regardless of the fact that over his head may not have passed as many years as represent the respective ages.
of those with whom he comes in competition in any of the fields of human endeavor. An example of the potentialities of comparative youth in connection with one of the highest and noblest of professions is afforded in no uncertain way in the career of Dr. Jones, who is a representative member of the medical profession in his native county, being one of the popular and successful physicians and surgeons of the city of York. Dr. Jones was born in the borough of Jefferson, York Co., Pa., July 12, 1872, son of Dr. Henry Z. Jones.

Dr. David Jones, the Doctor's great-grandfather, was a native of Wales, and on his emigration to America located in Maryland, where he attained to distinction in his profession.

Henry Z. Jones, Sr., grandfather of Dr. Harry H., was born in Carroll county, Md., whence he came in an early day to York county, Pa. Here he passed the remainder of his life. He was a farmer by occupation.

Dr. Henry Z. Jones, father of Dr. Harry H., was born in Manchester, Md., in 1845. He was a representative of one of the honored pioneer families of this section of the old Keystone State, and became one of the leading members of the medical profession in York county. He was a graduate of the Medical Department of the University of Maryland, and was for many years engaged in practice in Jefferson borough. This county, where his death occurred in 1892, his memory being held in lasting reverence by those to whom he so ably ministered during the long years of a peculiarly successful professional career. He was a Democrat in politics, and his religious faith was that of the Reformed Church. He married Miss Sarah F. Hershey, who was born and reared in this county, and they became the parents of six children, of whom four are living; Dr. Harry H.; Nora A., a graduate of the State Normal School at Millersville, now a teacher in the York city schools; Amy H., the wife of William F. West; and Dr. Pius H., who resides in Sunbury, Pa. Mrs. Jones survived until 1900.

Dr. Harry H. Jones obtained his rudimentary education in the public schools and later attended a private school. Continuing his studies in Leigh Daughier's Academy, Hanover, Pa., Dr. Jones there prepared himself for college, duly matriculating in Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, where he completed the classical and scientific courses and was graduated in the class of 1892, receiving the degrees of A. B. and B. S. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega Greek letter fraternity. He then took up the study of medicine under a private preceptor in Jefferson, and finally took one course of lectures in the University of Maryland, after which he completed the full four years' course in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, where he was graduated in 1895, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Soon afterward he entered vigorously upon clinical and general professional work in one of the leading hospitals of the city of Philadelphia, where he remained one year, gaining valuable experience and thus further fortifying himself for the practical and successful work of his chosen profession.

After his hospital service Dr. Jones returned to his home in Jefferson borough, and took up the practice which had been built up and controlled by his honored father. There he remained successfully established in practice for a period of four years, at the expiration of which he came to the city of York, in order to secure a more comprehensive field of labor, and one which would enable him to control a larger office practice. His success in his work has been most noteworthy, giving him status as a physician of high attainments and distinctive discrimination, while he has the high esteem of his professional confreres, and the confidence and regard of those to whom he has ministered.

Dr. Jones is one of the active and valued members of the York County Medical Society, of which he served as president in 1903, and he also holds membership in the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Medicine and the International Medical Congress. In 1902 he rendered efficient service in the office of county physician. Dr. Jones is a Democrat in his political allegiance. Fraternally he is identified with the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a member of the Reformed Church. He has an attractive home on East Market street, and is also the owner of other valuable realty in the county.

HENRY R. KRABER. The old city of York has long been justly celebrated for its substantial business concerns, and among the many lines which have particularly prospered is that of insurance, on account of the class of men who handle it here. A case in point is Henry R. Kraber, who has been in the field in York for a number of years. Mr. Kraber is descended from one of the oldest families in Pennsylvania, his ancestors having been very fully referred to in earlier histories of Pennsylvania.

Henry Kraber, the father of our subject, died Feb. 19, 1887, aged sixty-four years, five months, and twenty-eight days, while his wife, who was Catherine E. Reichenbach, died in May, 1881, her remains being interred in Lancaster cemetery, at Lancaster, Pa. Mrs. Kraber was the sister of George W. Reichenbach, who during his life, was one of the most prominent citizens of Lancaster, and was the founder and up to the day of his death, the secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Our subject's only sister died in infancy, while his only brother, George B., is connected with the Farmers' Insurance Company, of York.

Henry R. Kraber was born in York, Nov. 6, 1854, was educated in the schools of York, and at Lafayette College, at Easton, in the latter institution being a member of the class of 1876. In 1877 he went to Lancaster, and for several years was in charge of a new and second-hand book store. Returning to York, Mr. Kraber read law with the late W. C. Chapman, and then entered the insurance business. In addition to the insurance business, Mr. Kraber has been for many years a notary public, having held commissions for that office from Governors Pattison, Hastings, Beaver, Stone and Pennypacker.

Mr. Kraber has been an active member of the First Presbyterian Church of York, since 1872, and has been a teacher in the Sunday-school from that time to the present, as well as serving as deacon many years. He also takes an active part in the Y. M. C. A., of York, and has been a member of the York Oratorio Society since its organization. In politics he is an earnest Republican.

Daniel K. Taylor, editor of the Dallastown Advocate, was born in Shrewsbury, York county, Aug. 8, 1864, to Henry F. and Annie Y. (Keeney) Taylor. His paternal grandparents were John and Sarah Taylor, while his mother was the daughter of Henry Keeney.

During boyhood Mr. Taylor attended the public schools of Shrewsbury and York townships, and then continued his education at the Normal schools. During his last two years at the Normal he also worked in several printing offices, acquiring the rudiments of the printer's trade. After he left school in 1884 he secured employment with the Herald Printing Company, in Dallastown, learned his trade thoroughly, and remained there until 1891. In that year he established a job printing office in town, and succeeded so well that in 1894 he enlarged his field greatly and established the Dallastown Advocate. The paper was a success from the beginning and has steadily extended its sphere of usefulness and grown in public favor until it now has an assured place among the very best weekly newspapers of the county. Independent in its politics, it stands for the industrial and moral progress of one of the most prosperous and cultured communities in that part of the State. Mr. Taylor is an able and progressive journalist and sets a high standard in his publication. Mr. Taylor also carries a large line of up-to-date calendars, fans, blotter, novelties, and a variety of imported goods, which he sells at the most reasonable prices, and he is in a position to compete with any house in the country. Mr. Taylor takes an active part in municipal affairs and is now serving his fifth term (fifteenth year) as a member of the Dallastown council, and for seven years has been treasurer. Fraternally he belongs to the I. O. O. F., Dallas Lodge, No. 1017, and to the Encampment branch of the same order; to the Independent Order of Americans, Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., and the Independent Order of Heptasophs.

Mr. Taylor was united in marriage May 26, 1889, to Miss Lovina E. Hildebrand, of York, daughter of John H. and Leah Hildebrand. They have a family of four children, Archibald E., Clinton M., Beatrice E. and Gertrude L.

Washington Laird bears a name long known and honored in Pennsylvania, where the family has been established for a century or more. The Lairds were originally of German stock, and the first to come to America was John, great-grandfather of Washing-tion, and on arriving in the New World he settled in Lancaster county, Pa. He had a large family, born as follows: John, Aug. 7, 1772; William, Feb. 7, 1774; James, May 12, 1776; Mary, May 26, 1778; William (2), Aug. 6, 1781; John (2), Feb. 27, 1785; and Jane, July 22, 1792.

John Laird, son of the emigrant, moved from Lancaster county to York, and settled in Warrington township, where he became the owner of about 200 acres of land. He married Miss Barbara Ashenfelter, born June 10, 1784, and their children were as follows: John, who died at Pinetown; Polly, Mrs. John Sutton, who died at Pinetown; Elizabeth, Mrs. Daniel Sutton, who died in Monaghan township; William; Katie, Mrs. Daniel Hart, who died at Mechanicsburg; and Jacob, born in 1811, who was in the army for seventeen years, serving in both the Mexican and Civil wars, a blacksmith by trade, who died in Fairview township. The father of this family lost his life by falling from a load of hay, the fall breaking his neck. He was buried at Emanuel Church.

William Laird, born March 12, 1803, was a carpenter by trade and followed it for a number of years, after which he went into business in Pinetown making grain cradles, and passed the rest of his life there. He married Miss Catherine Burns, born in 1805, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Fisher) Burns, and their married life stretched out happily till April 5, 1889, when Mr. Laird passed away to be followed by his wife, Sept. 15, 1890. Both are buried in the graveyard of Moore's Church in Fairview township. Mr. Laird was for much of his life a member of the Church of God and assisted in building the church near which he now rests, but later in life he joined the Methodist Church, in which he was very active. The children of this union were: Washington; Mary, who died unmarried and is buried at Moore's Church; Elizabeth, the wife of Daniel Good, both now deceased; Thomas, born April 5, 1834, who died in 1838 and was the second person to be interred in the graveyard of Emanuel Church; William B., born May 11, 1839, who married Miss Beckie Strominger, and died in Fairview township; and John B., a farmer at Pinetown, who married (first) Miss Elton Beck, and (second) Miss Malinda Richard.

Washington Laird was born in Pinetown, Fairview township, March 4, 1827, and until he was sixteen attended school at Pinetown and at the Moore school. After reaching that age, he worked for various farmers until Oct. 16, 1856, when he married and settled at Pinetown, where he bought the Samuel Laird property and has made it his home ever since. Mr. Laird's principal occupation, however, has been putting up post fences, a business he has carried on for about thirty-two years in Cumberland, Dauphin and York counties, and in which he has been very successful. During the last six years, however, his active life has been greatly curtailed by attacks of rheumatism, and he lives in retirement. Since 1865 Mr. Laird has been a member of the Evangelical Church and has been very prominent in its work, serving as class leader and chorister. He is a fine violinist, and is also endowed with a wonderful memory. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Laird chose for his wife Miss Christiana Oberholtzer, of Harrisburg, who was the daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Kann) Oberholtzer, and the others in the family were Elizabeth, Christian, Thomas, George, William, Sarah and Mary. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Laird was blessed with four children, namely: Cecilia, born Aug. 22, 1857, who died early in life; Mary, Aug. 2, 1861, who attended the Wellsville and Rossville graded schools, and is now teaching in Fairview township, having had fourteen terms experience; Elizabeth, March 26, 1866, who married John A. Hoffman and lives in Fairview township; and Edward, born Dec. 13, 1868, who died in 1873 and is buried in the Moore's Church graveyard. The mother of this family was taken away Sept. 27, 1904, and her remains rest at Emanuel Church.

WILLIAM BLYMIRE, a lifelong resident of York county and a representative of one of the sterling pioneer families of this section of Pennsylvania, has attained to a position of prominence in connection with industrial activities, and is honored as one of the genial and whole-souled citizens of his native county, having an attractive home in Dallastown, York township, where he is now living practically retired, enjoying the rewards of his many years of earnest toil and endeavor.

Mr. Blymire was born in York township, June 27, 1831, and is a grandson of Martin Blymire, who was of stanch German lineage and who came to York county, settling in the vicinity of Innes mill, in York township, where he took up a large tract of land, becoming one of the prosperous farmers and influential citizens of this section, and operating a flaxseed oil mill on his farm for many years. He died on the home place at the age of fifty-one years, and his remains were laid to rest in the cemetery of the Blymire Church, in York township. This church was named in his honor, and to secure its erection he donated forty acres of land, while he otherwise rendered material aid in the temporal and spiritual affairs of the church, of which both he and his wife were zealous and devoted members. His wife rests by his side in the cemetery mentioned. Of their children John died in this county; Simon, father of our subject, is further mentioned in another paragraph; one daughter became the wife of Mr. Smuck and died in this county; another became the wife of John Inness, and both died in York township; and a third, who was the wife of George Ruker, died in the same township, and is buried in the Blymire church cemetery.

Simon Blymire, the honored father of the subject of this review, was born on the old homestead farm, in York township, June 7, 1805, and was here reared to manhood, receiving a common-school education. In his youth he learned the trade of wagonmaking, which he followed for some time on the old home farm. Finally he came to what is now the village of Dallastown, purchasing thirty-seven acres of land, for a consideration of three hundred dollars, and upon the same erecting the first house of the embryonic village. He platted eighteen lots on his land and disposed of the same for prices ranging from five to eleven dollars. One lot was sold for six dollars, and many years later the same was sold for fourteen hundred dollars. Mr. Blymire continued to be actively engaged in the work of his trade as long as his health permitted, and he died at the age of fifty-two years, interment being made in the Blymire cemetery. He was a prominent and valued member of the Blymire church, taking an active part in the various branches of its work and holding various official positions, while he also served as leader of the congregational singing for a number of years. The maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Swartz, and she likewise was born in York township, being a daughter of one of the honored pioneers of this county. She died June 21, 1852, and was laid to rest in the Blymire church cemetery. Of the children of this worthy couple, Emanuel died unmarried as a result of sunstroke received while in the hayfield; William was next in the order of birth; Sarah, who became the wife of Jacob Wolf, died in March, 1904, and is buried at Green Hill church, in York township; Caroline, wife of Jacob Summers, died young and is buried at Winterstown, this county; Charles met his death by drowning, in New Jersey, when eighteen years of age; Elizabeth, wife of George Wolf, died young, and is interred in Hellam township; Josiah, a bachelor, resides with his nephew, Hillary Blymire, in York township.

William Blymire, to whom this sketch is dedicated, secured his early educational training in the somewhat primitive schools of York township in the days long past, said schools having mostly been maintained on the subscription plan. He continued his studies under these conditions until he was about fifteen years old, when he entered upon a definite apprenticeship at the trade of wagonmaking, under the effective direction of his father, who was at that time still living on the old home farm. He continued to work at his trade after the family removed to Dallastown, where he became the owner of one of the village lots platted by his father. He finally sold this lot for sixteen dollars, which sum he forthwith applied on the purchase price of seventy-two acres of land in York township, where he devoted his attention to farming up to the time of the Civil war. He was drafted for service in the Union army, but family affairs were in such condition that it was practically impossible for him to go to the front, so that he employed a substitute to take his place, though this action compelled him to sacrifice his farm, which he was compelled to sell in order to raise the necessary funds. He then purchased a small piece of land at Dallastown, erected a shop on the same, and there continued to be engaged in the work of his trade until the close of the war. He then purchased a farm of seventy-nine acres from Jacob Mitzler in the borough of Dallastown, and he forthwith instituted the improvement of the property—remodeling the dwelling and erecting a fine barn. There he continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits until the death of his first wife, in 1883.
when he disposed of his property and went to New Jersey, where he remained about two years, devoting his attention principally to work at the millwright's trade. Returning to Dallastown, he purchased a considerable tract of land whereon he erected ten of the earliest houses built there, including his present attractive residence. He later disposed of eight of these residence properties, but continued to be prominently identified with the material upbuilding and civic affairs of the borough. He erected a fine laundry, which he later converted into a desirable residence, which he sold. In politics Mr. Blymire has ever accorded a stanch support to the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and while he has never been a seeker of public office, he has been called upon to serve in such local positions of trust as tax collector and member of the school board of his borough. He and his wife are prominent and zealous members of the United Brethren Church in Dallastown. Of the brothers and sisters of our subject (supplementing that entered in a preceding paragraph): Emanuel was born Nov. 20, 1829; Sarah, Oct. 24, 1833; Charles, Jan. 22, 1836; Caroline, Oct. 12, 1837; Elizabeth, July 3, 1840; Josiah, July 9, 1843.

Mr. Blymire was married to Miss Rebecca Hartman, born in York township, Feb. 10, 1834, and died Sept. 29, 1883. Her father, Jonathan Hartman, was a sterling pioneer farmer of York township. The death of Mrs. Blymire was the result of organic disease of the heart, and her remains were laid to rest in the Union cemetery in York township. Of the children of this union we enter the following brief record of those still living: Hillary J., who married Catherine Synder, and had eleven children, purchased his father’s farm and is devoting himself to the management of the property; Larena became the wife of John W. Druck, who died in 1901, and she is now living in Dallastown (she had five children); William, who married Anna Grothe, and had six children, is a resident of York, and is engaged in dealing in horses; Elizabeth likewise resides in the city of York; Ida is the wife of William McDowell, of Dallastown, and the mother of seven children; Lawrence, who married Annie Sechrist, and has four children, resides in Dallastown; and Rebecca is the wife of Oran Reachard, of York, and has had two children. Following is a record concerning the deceased children: Cyrus: born Feb. 15, 1870, died June 17, 1882; Henrietta J. died April 23, 1865, at the age of eleven years, five months and twenty-six days; Barbara Ellen died Oct. 28, 1856, aged one year and twenty days; Isabella died Dec. 15, 1859, aged two years; Minnie M., born May 15, 1874, died April 3, 1876; and Cassy Ann, died Sept. 25, 1863, aged one year and twenty-nine days. There are eight great-grandchildren.

On Sept. 27, 1885, Rev. J. P. Smith, pastor of the United Brethren Church at Dallastown, solemnized the marriage of Mr. Blymire to Mrs. Amelia Spotz, the widow of Benjamin Spotz, who died in Dallastown, in 1885, interment being made in the cemetery of the United Brethren church. Of his children Laura is the wife of Jacob Miller, of York; Emma is the wife of P. Hildebrand, of Dallastown; Fred, a graduate of the Dallastown high school. married Miss May Dougherty, and his death occurred in January, 1902, his remains being laid to rest in the United Brethren cemetery. No children have been born of our subject's second marriage.

WILLIAM N. KLINE, senior member of the well-known contracting and building firm of Kline & Flohr, of York, Pa., and a very highly esteemed citizen of that city, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., Dec. 11, 1836, son of Michael Kline.

Michael Kline in his early manhood followed farming. He later took up teaming as an occupation, and then found employment tending the locks near Middletown, on the Susquehanna river. He died aged eighty years, and was buried at Highspire, Dauphin county. He was three times married, but his first wife's name is not known. His second wife was Mary Nauman, who became the mother of our subject, and of Frederick. Mr. Kline's third wife was a Mrs. Simmons, and they had a family of nine children, all now deceased as far as known.

William N. Kline is a self-made man. He was bound out at the age of seven years to Samuel Nisley, and he remained with him until fourteen years of age, receiving but a few weeks schooling each year. When a lad of sixteen years, he had a fall, in a stubble field, injuring his hearing. When nineteen years old he went to the wagon making trade in Lancaster county, with John Moyer, and at that he continued for three years, after which he was employed at the Mount Joy car shops, at carpentering, and there remained seven years. At the outbreak of the Civil war, Mr. Kline wished to enlist, but his defective hearing prevented this, although he served in the quartermaster's department at Washington, and was at one time called on to select a gang of fifty men to take to Tennessee to construct bridges. He was employed at this for two years, often being between the fighting lines of the two armies. After the war Mr. Kline located at Harrisburg, and was employed at the car shops, holding the office of assistant foreman, later becoming foreman. One year later he resigned this position to go to Erie with the Pennsylvania & Erie railroad as a mechanic, and while in their employ built the fine office at Erie. He then returned to Harrisburg and engaged in carpentering and contracting, later removing to New Cumberland, Cumberland county, where he resided twenty years. It has often been said that while in Cumberland county, Mr. Kline built every other house erected there. In 1897 he came to York, where he is now engaged in business with J. W. Flohr, the firm being known as Kline & Flohr. They are doing a very large and profitable business, and at present are engaged in erecting an annex to the First Evangelical Church, and in the spring erected a new Evangelical Church at the east end of York.

Mr. Kline married Miss Catherine Kauffman, daughter of Christian Kauffman, a United Brethren clergyman for thirty years near Annville, Lebanon county, and to this union have been born two children: Annie Mary, who married John Seider, and lives with her parents; and Horace C., who is in the real estate business at Altoona.

Mr. Kline is a Republican in politics, and in New Cumberland, Cumberland county, served as notary public eight years, as justice of the peace five years, and as chief burgess two years. He is a stanch Union man, and is greatly interested in the rights of all Union men, running for mayor on the Union ticket of 1905. While in New Cumberland he erected the United Brethren Church, and was very active in the church and Sunday-school.

John Ruby, his grandfather, known throughout the county as "Major," owned 1,100 acres of land in Lower Windsor township.

David Ruby, father of George, was born in Lower Windsor township, where he spent his life, engaged in farming and blacksmithing. He married Rebecca Kaufelt, and their children were as follows: David, who met his death by accident at a camp meeting; George, who is mentioned below; and Tobias, who served a year in the Civil war, and lives near Yorkana.

George Ruby was born July 3, 1838, in Lower Windsor township, and there grew up. He attended the subscription school, and then the public school, and studied in Wrightsville under Capt. Kerr. When he was seventeen he was apprenticed to the tanner's trade with John Kaufelt. He served a two-years apprenticeship, and worked for a time as a journeyman tanner, but preferred a boatman's life, and has since been chiefly occupied in rafting and as a steersman between Marietta and Peach Bottom. He has also had considerable experience in canal-boating in the employ of his uncle, Henry Ruby.

Mr. Ruby enlisted in the Union army, Aug. 21, 1861, as a private in Company B, 55th P. V. I., under Capt. John C. Shearer, Col. Richard White, commanding. He saw three years' service, and was in many engagements. His first battle was that of Pocataligo, S. C., and the other principal engagements in which he took part were Cold Harbor, the Wilderness, Bermuda and Petersburg. He was wounded by a piece of shell, which struck him below the right knee. He received his discharge at Bermuda Hundred in September, 1864.

On May 14, 1865, Mr. Ruby married Susan Arnold, who was born in Hellam township, May 19, 1844. Her father, John Arnold, was born in Hellam township in 1805, and her mother, Catherine (Jacobs) Arnold, was born in 1810. Both lived to be eighty-two years of age, and died in their native place. Mr. Arnold was a farmer, and was also employed at fence-making, and the latter years of his life in basket-making. He had the following children: (1) John, who was a soldier in the Civil war, disappeared after the close of the war, and was never heard of until his death in 1902. (2) Catherine, who married Benjamin Druch, died in Hellam township. (3) Henry, who was a school teacher in Hellam township, now lives in Indiana. (4) Susan married George Ruby.

GEORGE RUBY, a well known river man and a Civil war veteran, is a native of York county, and has been many years in Wrightsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruby are members of the German Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Ruby is a Republican. He is a member of Lieut. R. W. Smith Post, G. A. R., at Wrightsville. He is the father of the following children: Gustavus, a cigar maker of New Cumberland, who married Ida Bowers, and died Jan. 20, 1906; Elmira, who married Capt. John H. Drenning, of Wrightsville; Thoinas, a policeman in York, who married Virgie Pennell; Sophia, who married F. G. Wise, of Wrightsville; Richard, who died young; Catherine, who died young; and Rebecca, who married Charles Shultz, of Wrightsville.

PHILIP KERCHNER, of Springfield township, was born on the farm upon which he now resides, April 20, 1859, son of Henry Kerchner, a native of Germany.

Henry Kerchner came to America when a young man, landing at Baltimore. He was a carpenter by trade and followed that occupation in Shrewsbury township, whether he had removed, for a short time. He then located in Springfield township, and purchased the farm now owned by his son, Philip. This farm, finely located, is supplied with running water, and Mr. Kerchner erected a fine set of new buildings. Here he spent the remainder of his life, dying at the age of seventy-eight years, and being interred at Hametown, Shrewsbury township. He married Catherine Leicht, also of Germany; she died at the age of eighty years. They had these children: Elizabeth, widow of John P. Wernig; Annie, deceased wife of Charles Wolf; Henry, who died in the West; Christian, living at Loganville, who married Nancy Shessler, now deceased; George, of Baltimore, who married Minnie Harbold; John, of Baltimore Co., Md.; William, of York; Catherine, the wife of Charles Wolf, living at Glen Rock; Philip; and Maggie, who died at the age of twelve years.

Philip Kerchner attended the Seitz school in Springfield township until seventeen years old, after which he remained with his father for seven years. At the end of this time he went to Hopewell township, where he spent three years at farming, and in 1888 purchased the old homestead of eighty-three acres. Mr. Kerchner is one of Springfield’s best farmers. He married Eleanor Geesey, daughter of Michael and Maria (Hildebrand) Geesey, and to this union have been born: Maria C., the wife of Jesse Hess, is living on the home farm; Michael, at home; Catherine, who died aged seven weeks; Mary E., a bright young lady attending school. In his political affiliations Mr. Kerchner is connected with the Republican party. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, and is very active in the work of that religious body.

Michael Geesey, grandfather of Mrs. Kerchner, was a resident of Dallastown, York county. In early life he was an agriculturist, but later engaged in the butchering business in which he was very successful, and which he carried on until his death, at a ripe old age. He married Catherine Minnich, and both are buried at Blimyer’s Church in York township, York county. They had the following children: Michael, John, Harrison, Frank, Oliver, Jefferson, Warrington and Abington, all deceased except Frank, who resides in Dallastown, and all were veterans of the Civil war except Michael. The girls of this family, Lydia, Catherine and Lucy, are all deceased.

Michael Geesey, the father of Mrs. Kerchner, was an agriculturist of York township, and was very successful in his operations. He died at the age of seventy years, and his wife at sixty-four, and both were buried at the Dunkard Church in Springfield township, of which they were faithful members. Michael Geesey married Maria Hildebrand, daughter of Frederick and Catherine (Wallace) Hildebrand, and the children born to this union were as follows: John, who married Catherine Hollinger, is living in Hopewell township; Jacob, who married Sarah Becher, lives in Carroll Co., Md.; Mary, wife of A. C. Wernig, of Springfield township; Amanda, who married David Keller, and is living in Dallastown; Catherine, wife of Jacob Diehl, making her home in Red Lion; Michael, who married (first) Alice Strayer, (second) Elizabeth Feigley, (third) Ida Strayer, and he died at the age of forty-six years, being buried at Winterstown; Henry, a resident of Ohio; Emanuel, who married Lotisa Diehl, and is living in Shrewsbury township; Elizabeth, wife of William Burns, of Springfield township; and Mrs. Kerchner. The Geesey family is one of York county's old and honored families, and its members are very highly respected in Springfield township, where they have for so long been prominently identified with the agricultural development of the community.

JACOB H. MELLINGER is the able superintendent of the York County Traction Company, and he has shown himself to be amply fortified for the upbearing of the exacting and responsible duties that rest upon him as an executive. He is a representative of one of the oldest and most honored families of the adjoining county of Lancaster, his father, Abraham Mellinger, being a prominent and influential farmer and dairyman of that county, and his mother, whose maiden name was Martha Hoover, being a daughter of Jacob Hoover, a representative farmer of Lampeter township, Lancaster county, where he continued to reside until his death. Abraham and Martha Mellinger became the parents of nine children, of whom only three are living, viz.: Ada, who is the wife of Adam Lefever, a farmer of Lampeter township, Lancaster county; Willis, who is a conductor for the Conestoga Traction Company, of Lancaster; and Jacob H.

Jacob H. Mellinger was born near the village of Rocky Springs, in West Lampeter township, Lancaster county, Pa., June 30, 1862, and his boyhood days were passed under the beneficent influences of the old homestead farm, while his educational training was secured in the public schools of the locality. After leaving school he continued to assist in the work and management of the home farm and carried on a milk route in the city of Lancaster supplied from his father's dairy. At the age of twenty-six years he entered the street-car service in Lancaster, working on horse and electric cars for a period of five years. In August, 1892, Mr. Mellinger came to York and secured the position of night foreman in the car barns of the York County Traction Company. He remained incumbent of this position until April, 1895, when there came a gratifying official recognition of his ability and fidelity, in his being made superintendent of the entire system, in which capacity he has since continued to render most effective service, gaining the unqualified approval of the public and of the company by which he is employed. He is also distinctively popular with the employees of the company, having supervision of the work of more than one hundred persons. He was reared in the Mennonite faith but both he and his wife are now members of the Lutheran Church. In politics he accords a stalwart allegiance to the Republican party, though he has never been an active worker in the party ranks nor has sought official preferment of any description.

On May 8, 1899, Mr. Mellinger was united in marriage to Miss Elmira Eyster, who was born and reared in Lancaster county, a daughter of the late Elias Eyster, who was for many years engaged in the hotel business in York. Mr. and Mrs. Mellinger have no children.

WILLIAM GREEN, one of the enterprising business men of Railroad borough, York county, was born in Shrewsbury township in 1864, son of Christian Green. The latter came from Germany and settled in Shrewsbury township, where he bought a farm of seventy-five acres, on which he lived until his death, at the age of seventy-three years. He married Christine Brown, who died in 1889, and they were both interred at Shrewsbury. Their children were: Elizabeth, Louise, Mary, Barbara and William.

William Green received a good common-school education, and then learned the tinning business at Shrewsbury, with J. H. Maskel. This business he followed for some six years, after which he went to farming. He followed agricultural pursuits for ten years, and also ran the cars of produce for Edward Helb, at Railroad borough, from that point to Baltimore, and was so engaged for four years. In 1895 he married Mary Helb, daughter of the late Frederick Helb, of whom extended mention will be found elsewhere. She was reared in Shrewsbury township, and attended the local school, also the seminary at Lutherville, Maryland.

Since his marriage Mr. Green has resided at Railroad borough, and has been one of its leading business factors. He is engaged in building a new tannery there, on the site of the one formerly owned by his father-in-law. This will be a modern, well-equipped establishment and will add to the business of the place.

Mr. and Mrs. Green have one daughter, Rhoda. The family belong to the Lutheran Church at Shrewsbury.
GEORGE F. SAUBEL, whose official positions have enabled him to come in close touch with a large number of the citizens, has been associated chiefly with Codorus township, but his acquaintance is by no means limited to that section.

George Saubel, his paternal grandfather, was of German parentage. He was a landowner and farmer in Manheim township, and died there when eighty-three years of age. He married Lydia Geiselman, and their children were: Mary A., and Lucy, both of whom were married to Adam Kaltreider; and Michael.

Michael Saubel was a lifelong farmer in Manheim township. A Democrat in his politics, he was very active in township affairs, and was chosen by his fellow citizens to fill various offices connected with the administration of the township. In religious belief he was a Lutheran. Mr. Saubel was twice married, but his children were both by his first wife, Eleanor, daughter of Joseph Leader. She died in 1885, and afterward Mr. Saubel married Matilda Rohrbaugh, daughter of Henry Z. Rohrbaugh, of Manheim township. Michael Saubel died in 1900, and was buried in the graveyard of the Stone Church in Codorus township, where his first wife is also interred. He is survived by his two sons, George F. and Joseph M., the latter of whom married Maria Bortner, and lives in Shrewsbury township.

George F. Saubel was born in Manheim township, Jan. 18, 1859. He first attended the district schools and then a graded school at Glen Rock. Always a good student, when he was sixteen he began teaching in his home section, and was so occupied for six terms. A period of three years was then spent in the mercantile business, but at the end of that time he returned to his former vocation and taught in Codorus township for sixteen years. In 1900 he became clerk of the courts for York county, beginning his duties the first Monday in January, and until January, 1903, filled that office to the greatest satisfaction of his constituents, for he observed the greatest accuracy in every detail, becoming very popular, not only in the city of York but throughout the county. For some seventeen years he had also filled the office of justice of the peace, and March 24, 1903, was appointed notary public, and is still discharging the duties of that position, in connection with his work in surveying.

Mr. Saubel is also interested in farming, as he bought a fine place of seventy-five acres in Codorus township, owning in addition another tract of twenty acres, on which in 1903 he built his home. The buildings on the place are all new and modern in style, and his view is one of the finest in the county.

Mr. Saubel married Miss Lavina Bricker, daughter of George and Catherine (Shue) Bricker. The three children born to them were: Rosa E., who died in infancy; Annie C., wife of Robert E. Hamm, of Codorus township; and Lettie May. In his political affiliations Mr. Saubel is a Democrat, and in religion is a Lutheran, a member of the Stone Church. He is active in all the church work, but particularly in the Sunday-school.

WILLIAM J. SCHALL was born on North George street, York, Pa., July 5, 1857, son of Joseph E. and Maria (Gardner) Schall.

Joseph E. Schall, Sr., grandfather of our subject, for many years kept the hotel known as the “Black Horse Tavern,” which was located between the Pennsylvania and Western Maryland railroads on North George street, but retired from his business some years before his death, which occurred when he was eighty-seven years old. He married Mary Emmet, born in York, and these children were born to them: William; Joseph E. (2); Annie, who became Mrs. Duncan, died in Baltimore; Jane, who married Henry Eichelberger, also died in Baltimore; Sophia married Alexander Fry, and died in York.

Joseph E. Schall (2) was born at the corner of Philadelphia and George streets, and spent his entire life in York City. By trade he was a carpenter, and helped to build many buildings in this city. He died at his home on North George street, June 26, 1894. Mr. Schall married Maria Gardner, daughter of Jacob Gardner, and she is still living, aged seventy-nine years. The children of this union were: Mary, who married Charles Ebaugh, of York; William J.; and Charles, of York.

William J. Schall received his education between the ages of six and seventeen years, and then started to learn the plumbing trade, with D. D. Doudel, which apprenticeship lasted three years. He then followed this trade as a journeyman for four years, when he opened a shop for himself at the corner of North and George streets, where he remained three years. At this time he removed to the lower end of South Queen street, also operating his shop on South George street, where he remained nine years, and then located at his present place of business, No. 336 South Queen street, turning the stable that stood on the rear part of the lot, into a shop. Here he has become very successful and he enjoys a large business and the confidence of the people. He is painstaking in his work, as the excellence of the latter testifies, and never fails to give satisfaction.

Mr. Schall was married in York, in 1880, to Miss Rebecca Landis, daughter of Reuben and Lydia Landis, both of whom are deceased. One child was born to this union, Daisy May, who died at the age of fifteen years. Mr. Schall is a member of the First Reformed Church. In politics he is a stanch Democrat, and has been active in the ranks of that party since he attained his majority, casting his first vote for Governor Andrew H. Dill, while his first presidential vote was cast for Hancock. In fraternal circles, Mr. Schall is well known, being a popular member of Keystone Conclave, No. 12, of the Heptasops.

SOLOMON F. ROSER, a merchant located at Green Ridge Station, on the Western Maryland railroad, is a worthy descendant of one of York county's oldest families. He was born June 24, 1870, in Codorus township, son of Levi E. and Lucy Ann (Rohrbaugh) Roser.

Lawrence Roser, the first of the family in America, came from Germany and settled in York county, and then moved to Adams county, Pa., but in a few years returned to York county where he died. His children were: George, John, Philip, Elizabeth, Barbara, Christina, Rebecca and Lawrence.

Philip Roser, great-grandfather of Solomon F., was born in Codorus township. In early life he followed the trade of a weaver, but later engaged in farming in Codorus township, where he died at the age of seventy-five years. He married Christine Brennaman, who died at the age of forty-five years, and both are buried in Codorus township. Their children were: John, David, Jesse and Mary (who married George Markel).

John Roser was born in Codorus township, where he followed farming. He married (first) Julia Eppley, daughter of John and Mary (Breeker) Eppley. She died aged sixty-two years, and was buried at the well-known Stone Church in Codorus township. He married (second) Barbara Fishel, who still resides at York. The children of the first marriage were: Levi E.; Mary, wife of Jacob Miller; and Ephraim, Julian, Lydia and Sarah, all deceased. The children of the second marriage were: John, Paul and Bert. John Roser was a very prominent farmer in his locality for many years, living retired the latter part of his life. His death took place at the age of sixty-nine years, and he was laid to rest in the Stone Church cemetery.

Levi E. Roser, father of Solomon F., was born March 4, 1840, in Codorus township. The earlier part of his life was spent at home and he first engaged in farming, but later was employed in a mill as chopper for three years. In 1895 he bought the old Klinedinst property with twenty-five acres of land in Codorus township, and he is still engaged in the milling business at that point. He is a Democrat in his political views. He is one of the oldest members of Shrewsbury Lodge No. 143, I. O. O. F., having joined in 1865. Levi E. Roser married Lucy Ann Rohrbaugh, daughter of Solomon and Catherine (Brenneman) Rohrbaugh. Their children are: John, E., living near Larue, engaged in farming, married Julia Diehl, now deceased; Israel, at home; Heister, who married Savilla Rohrbaugh, and is foreman of S. B. Brodbeck's creamery at Green Ridge, Pa.; Solomon F.; William H., who married Ellen Utz, and resides at home assisting his father in the mill; Sarah, wife of George Messersmith, of Codorus township; and Amanda, wife of Chester G. Rohrbaugh, of New Freedom, York county.

Solomon F. Roser obtained his education in the township schools, which he attended until he was fourteen years of age, when he was employed with S. B. Brodbeck, being general utility man for two years on the farm and in the store, but at the age of sixteen he began to be a regular clerk in the store, and remained there for two years, and then came to Green Ridge, taking charge of both store and warehouse. On March 15, 1892, Mr. Roser bought out Mr. Brodbeck, and since that period has been operating the business on his own account. Being the only merchant at Green Ridge he has a wide field and does an immense business, carrying a well selected stock of all kinds of merchandise. He has added a department for the repairing of clocks and jewelry, and as he makes it apparent that he desires to please, his trade is constantly on the increase.

Mr. Roser married Lucinda Caslow, daughter of Jacob and Luery (Gentz) Caslow, and a member of a prominent family of York county. The great-grandfather of Mrs. Roser took part in the Revolutionary war. Mr. and Mrs. Roser have two children, Melvin G. and Florence.

In politics Mr. Roser is a Democrat. For a number of years he has been very active in the various fraternities, being a member of Rock Council, No. 34. Jr. O. U. A. M., of Glen Rock; No. 318, K. of P., of Hanover; No. 908, I. O. O. F., of Jefferson, No. 152, K. of M., of York; and the Royal Arcanum, of Hanover. He is a member of the Lutheran Church.

ISRAEL FREY is a representative business man of the city of York, and is also a member of an old and prominent family of York county, which has been his home from the time of his birth. He is president and treasurer of the Spring Garden Brick Company, which was incorporated in 1903, his associate in the enterprise being his brother, Clinton D., who is secretary and general manager of the company. The plant of the concern is operated by steam power, and the equipment throughout is of approved modern type, insuring facility in manufacture and maximum evenness and perfection in the output. The office of the company is located on East King street, near the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the extensive brick yards are on the Maryland & Pennsylvania Railroad, in the same section of the city. An average force of about twenty-five men is employed, while a large local trade is controlled and large shipments made to the city of Baltimore, Md., and other points in this section.

Israel Frey was born on the old homestead farm, in Spring Garden township, this county, Aug. 25, 1848, being sixth in the order of birth of the eight children born to Israel, Sr., and Sarah (Reamer) Frey, both natives of York county and members of sterling pioneer families of German extraction, and grandson of Samuel Frey.

Samuel Frey was one of the early settlers of Spring Garden township, where he developed a farm, and continued to reside until his death.

Israel Frey, Sr., was born about 1814, and his death occurred in 1885. He was one of the substantial farmers and highly honored citizens of Spring Garden township, where he continued to reside until he was summoned from the field of life's endeavors. He was a stalwart Democrat in his political allegiance, and was a man of strong individuality and alert mentality, while both he and his wife were devoted and consistent members of the Lutheran Church. His wife, Sarah (Reamer), was a daughter of William Reamer, another pioneer of the county, and her death occurred in 1856.

Israel Frey, our subject, was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, while his educational opportunities in his youth were those afforded in the district schools of his native township. He attended school during the winter months, and assisted in the work of the farm during the summer seasons until he had attained the age of sixteen years, after which he learned the carpenter's trade, under the direction of Henry Sleeper, of Freystown, now of the city of York. After completing his apprenticeship Mr. Frey followed his trade until 1879, when he became interested in the manufacture of brick, as a member of the firm of Israel Frey & Company, which was succeeded by the present company, incorporation having been made to facilitate and expand the business. The plant of the company is located on the Maryland & Pennsylvania railroad in Spring Garden township. Mr. Frey is a reliable, energetic and progressive business man, and is known as one of the loyal citizens of his native county. In politics he is aligned as a stalwart supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, and both he and his wife are members of Trinity United Evangelical Church, while their pleasant residence property is located at No. 145 South Duke street, in one of the most attractive sections of York.

On June 29, 1873, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Frey to Miss Louisa Kalb, daughter of John and Catherine (Schment) Kalb, of Baltimore, Md., and they have had two sons, Percy Kalb, born Jan. 27, 1876, and Clarence Lee, born June 28, 1874, died Dec. 16, 1897.

E. L. APPLE, founder of the E. L. Apple Company, manufacturers of leather flynets at Wellsville, York county, one of Pennsylvania's large industries, which finds a market for its goods all over the United States, was born March 30, 1848, in Carlisle, Pa. He is a son of Benjamin F. and Lydia (Heiges) Apple, and a grandson of Philip and Susanna (House) Apple.

The Apple family is of German origin, and the great-grandfather of Mr. Apple came to America from Germany, settling in Pennsylvania. Philip Apple first located in Hanover, York county, and still later removed to Carlisle, Pa., where he followed his trade of butcher and saddle-tree maker all of his active life. He died in Hanover. He and his wife were the parents of five children: Charles, Alexander, Benjamin F., Emanuel, Elizabeth, Emmeline and Henrietta. In religious belief Mr. Apple and his wife were Lutherans. It is thought that he was a Whig in political sentiment.

Benjamin F. Apple was born in Carlisle Oct. 30, 1822, and his wife Lydia was born Jan. 20, 1816. He received his education in Cumberland and York counties. His father had returned to Hanover, when the son was fifteen years old, and there Benjamin learned the cooper's trade, as well as that of brickmaking, which vocation he followed until 1861, when he commenced farming in Washington township. From that occupation he retired about seven years prior to his decease, on Sept. 15, 1890, when he was aged sixty-seven years, ten months, fifteen days.

On Aug. 26, 1864, Mr. Apple enlisted in Washington township, York county, for one year or during the war, in Co. I, 200th Reg., P. V. I., 9th Army Corps (Capt. John Kughl, of Franklintown, commanding), and was wounded while in front of Petersburg, the injury incapacitating him for the rest of his life. Mr. Apple served about nine months, and became a corporal, and his record is one of which any man might well be proud. He was honorably discharged at the close of the war by general orders.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Apple were the parents of the following children: Henrietta, who married Michael Brown and was the mother of Emma, Ella and Lucy; E. L. Apple, of this sketch; Sarah, who married Calvin Hinkle, and had these children—Alvin, Clayton, Minnie, Ella, James, Maggie and John; John A. Apple, of York, who married Catherine Shaeffer; and George W. Apple, who married Alice Crawford, of Indiana, and has three children—Marie, Jesse and Mamie. Mrs. Lydia Apple died in September, 1876, at the age of sixty years, seven months and twenty-one days. Like her husband she was a member of the Reformed Church. Mr. Apple's second marriage, which took place in 1880, was to Mrs. Maria (Bupp) Hullinger, widow of Levi Hullinger, and she is still living in Harrisburg. In political matters Mr. Apple was a Republican, but he never aspired to public office.

E. L. Apple received his education in the common schools of York county, and was reared on the farm, upon which he remained until twenty years old. At that age he was apprenticed to Daniel Munster to learn the harnessmaker's trade, and after two years, having completed his apprenticeship, he worked for Lewis Worley, at Petersburg, Adams county. In 1870 Mr. Apple opened a shop at his father's home, where he remained about one year. He then removed to Rossville, York county, and opened an establishment which he conducted until 1880, in which year he started his present business, the manufacturing of fly-nets, carrying it on at that place until 1892. He then removed his plant to Wellsville, and united with the Wells Whip Company, with whom he remained one year. When the United States Whip Company absorbed both the whip and net manufactories, a new independent net industry was formed under the name of the Wellsville Manufacturing Company, remaining as such until 1902. In that year, on Nov. 15th, the plant was destroyed by fire. Mr. Apple had withdrawn in September, 1902, and in January, 1903, broke ground for his present manufactory. The building is 126x28, two stories, attic and basement, and employment is given to an average of sixty hands. The trade of the firm is constantly increasing, three traveling salesmen being steadily employed. Mr. Apple's management is of the best, and he is ably seconded by his partner, Mr. W. D. Brougher.

E. L. Apple was married Feb. 15, 1872, to Miss Katie Urich, daughter of John Urich, of Dover township, and these children have been born to the union: Gertrude married Russell R. Reiff, D. D. S., of New Cumberland, and they have one child, Lloyd E.; Grace E. is a bookkeeper and stenographer for her father; John F. is deceased; Harvey B. works in the manufactory of his father's plant; Lloyd is also engaged in the factory; Raymond Dale is deceased.

In religious belief the family are members of the M. E. Church. In his political views Mr. Apple is a Republican, has held the office of township treasurer of Warrington township, and has been a school director of Wellsville borough for six years. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Heptasophs.

Mr. Apple is a well qualified, practical mechanic, and much of the success of the industry of which he is the head is owing to his careful supervision, by which the high standard of the goods is maintained. Besides his connection with E. L. Apple & Co. he is the heaviest stockholder in the Wellsville Manufacturing Company's plant.

WILLIAM S. EISENHART, D. D. S., is following in the professional footsteps of his father, who was one of the distinguished and prominent members of the dental profession in Pennsylvania at the time of his death, as well as one of York county's influential and highly esteemed citizens.

Charles A. Eisenhart, D. D. S., father of William S., was born in York county, Feb. 22, 1844, son of Dr. Jacob Eisenhart. His lineage is traced back to staunch German origin in both the agnatic and maternal branches. His paternal ancestors settled in Pennsylvania in the Colonial era of our national history. Dr. Eisenhart was reared in his native county. He was a man of high attainments, especially in the line of his profession, to which he devoted the best years of his life, having been one of the leading dental practitioners of York county and well known to his confreres throughout the State. As a young man he was a successful teacher in the schools of Manchester township, and, after preparing himself for his profession, he removed to Michigan, and located in Marshall, Calhoun county, where, in 1860, he entered into a professional partnership with Dr. Eggleston; this mutually helpful alliance continuing for a considerable length of time. Upon its dissolution Dr. Eisenhart returned to York, where he continued in the active practice of his profession until the time of his death, which occurred April 23, 1901. He made a special study of electricity, particularly in connection with operative dentistry as a substitute for the dangerous anesthetics, making application for a patent upon a method for thus applying electricity in extracting and filling teeth. The invention is wonderfully successful and has met with a large sale among leading members of the profession, while the device has brought the name of its honored inventor into wide repute. Dr. Charles A. Eisenhart was one of York's most progressive and public-spirited citizens, and commanded the high regard of all who knew him. He was for seven years a member of the board of education, was a stockholder in the York Safe & Lock Company, and at the time of his demise was president of the City Building & Loan Association and of the York Telephone Company. In politics he was an uncompromising Republican, and both he and his wife were zealous and valued members of the Lutheran Church, of which their five children likewise are members.

On Dec. 5, 1872, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Charles A. Eisenhart to Miss Emma C. Pfahler, who was born and reared in York county, daughter of Charles and Catherine (Weiser) Pfahler. Mrs. Eisenhart died Sept. 2, 1898, at the age of fifty-two years, and she is survived by her five children, all of whom still reside in York, namely: William S., Luther P., Jacob C., Harry W. and M. Herbert.

Dr. William S. Eisenhart was born in the family residence, on West Philadelphia street, in the borough of York, April 27, 1874, and he had the advantages of a cultured and refined home, as well as those afforded in the public schools of his native city. He completed a course in the high school, in which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1892. He then passed one year in the study of dentistry in the office and under the direction of Dr. Herbert Smith, one of Massachusetts' leading practitioners, afterward matriculating in the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, where he completed the prescribed curriculum in both operative and laboratory departments, and graduated a member of the class of 1896, receiving his degree of D. D. S. He forthwith opened his present attractive and handsomely appointed offices on West Market street, in the city of York, where he has built up a representative practice, having the best of mechanical and other facilities and being recognized as an able and progressive member of his profession. He is a member of the Alumni Association of Pennsylvania University, and is identified with the State and district dental associations, while in a social way he holds membership in the Bachelor's Club and the York Country Club, being especially popular in the social life of his native city, where his circle of friends is equal to that of his acquaintances. He is a member of the directorate of the York Telephone Company and the City Building & Loan Association. In politics the Doctor gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and his religious faith is indicated by his membership in St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, and in the council of that organization.

ROLAND F. SEITZ, who has been known to the citizens of Glen Rock, Shrewsbury township, as a composer and teacher of music, was born June 14, 1867, in Shrewsbury township, son of William and Magdalene (Zeigler) Seitz, the former of whom died when our subject was three years old.

Roland F. Seitz attended the public schools of Shrewsbury township, and later learned the printer's trade, which he followed for about five years in the Item office at Glen Rock. From boyhood his musical talent has been marked, and he has given much attention to the study of music and the development of his talent. When quite a young man he began to write and teach music, and in 1894 he entered Dana's Musical College at Warren, Ohio, from which he graduated in 1898, having taken a regular course of study. After receiving his musical education he returned to Glen Rock, where he has since been engaged in teaching, composing and publishing music.

Some of Mr. Seitz's compositions have met with great success, having a large sale in nearly every State in the union as well as in Canada. Two compositions which have been particularly successful are those entitled "Institute" and "Brooks' Marine Band," having had a large sale since their publication. Mr. Seitz does quite a large business in the sheet music line, his name as composer being known in all parts of the country. For four years he was leader of the Glen Rock Band, an organization of high musical ability.

On Jan. 23, 1902, Mr. Seitz married Miss Mattie Heathcote, daughter of Charles Heathcote, and one child has been born to this union. Mrs. Seitz is a member of the Lutheran Church.

EDWARD B. NEWMAN, justice of the peace and high school teacher in Glenville, Codorus township, is a self-made man, who secured his education and fitted himself for his present position in the face of obstacles that might well have discouraged him. He was born in North Codorus township, March 16, 1868.

The Newman family is of Scotch origin, and the great-grandfather came from Scotland to Maryland and settled on a farm in Washington county, where he died. His five children were John, Daniel, Jacob, Michael and Catherine.

John Newman was a farmer like his father, and lived on a tract of 100 acres in Heidelberg (now Penn) township, near the borough of Hanover. He operated his farm till he was about sixty years old, and then moved into the town, where he died eleven years later. He married Elizabeth Bortner, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth Markel, who died when only thirty-seven years old, leaving one child, John B.

John B. Newman is buried in Hanover, while his wife is buried at Fiscel's church, in Shrewsbury township.

John B. Newman was born in Shrewsbury township, Oct. 26, 1836, but was reared in Codorus township and North Codorus township, where he attended the public schools till he was sixteen. He then learned the blacksmith's trade under George Markel, and after working with him three years and a half, went to Seven Valley. There he followed various occupations, working as a farmer, a miner and an employee of the Northern Central Railroad. His residence in Seven Valley covered the period of the Civil war, and Mr. Newman witnessed Stewart's charge there. The war has always been a topic of much interest to Mr. Newman, and he is remarkably well informed on it, especially on the events occurring in and around Seven Valley. In 1869 he opened a blacksmith shop near Glenville, on the road leading to Glen Rock, and conducted it for thirty-five years and eight months, but Nov. 22, 1904, he moved into Glenville, making his home with his son. He still has a shop, however, and in spite of his age can shoe a horse as well as any one in the county.

The wife chosen by John B. Newman bore the maiden name of Lemanda Brennenman, and was born in old Codorus township, April 13, 1837, daughter of Christian and Christine (Markel) Brennenman. She was married to Mr. Newman Feb. 1, 1855, by Rev. Jacob Sechler, and they have passed more than half a century of wedded life together. Their children were born as follows: Sarah, born Feb.
17, 1856, died Feb. 18, 1859; Lucy Ann, born April 13, 1837, died Aug. 14, 1857; John F., born March 31, 1858, died Sept. 9, 1858; Belinda, born Feb. 22, 1860, died Aug. 7, 1860; Emma J., born May 27, 1861, married John D. Bortner and lives near Bortner’s mill, Codorus township; Julian E., born June 8, 1864, is the wife of William Bahn, of West Philadelphia; Mary Catherine, born Aug. 21, 1865, married John B. Beek, of Spring Grove; William Henry, born Jan. 4, 1867, died Aug. 16, 1867; and Edward B.

Edward B. Newman first attended the Bortner school in Codorus township, then went to Glen Rock Academy for three terms, when it was taught by Prof. R. R. Rodes, and also spent three spring terms at the Glenville Academy under Prof. John E. Bahn. His education, however, was secured by his own hard toil, as his lack of means necessitated his working in any way available to earn the money for his schooling, which generally was enjoyed one term at a time. He learned his father’s trade, and worked with him for over five years. His experience as a teacher has been quite extensive, and it began in Manheim township, where he taught two years; he then taught four years in Codorus township, one in Glenville Academy, six in Codorus again, and since 1902 has been at Glenville, which has the only township high school in the county. Mr. Newman is principal of the Normal Department, and is well qualified for the position, meeting its demands most satisfactorily. In 1900 he was elected justice of the peace, and re-elected in 1905.

On Aug. 23, 1891, Mr. Newman was married to Miss Elizabeth Cornelia Rinierhart, daughter of Henry and Mandilla (Herbst) Rinierhart, who was born Feb. 1, 1874. The wedding ceremony was performed at the home of the bride’s parents Aug. 23, 1891. Two daughters have been born to them, viz.: Annie, March 26, 1893; and Dora, Nov. 4, 1894. The family reside on a small farm which Mr. Newman bought March 31, 1903. It contains twenty acres, and ninety-six perches of land, and during the summers he takes a part in the farm work, in addition to the other demands upon his time.

Mr. Newman is a Democrat in politics, and a Lutheran in religious belief. He is active in the work of the Stone Church, has been deacon, both teacher and assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school, and for the past eight years has been the superintendent. Before coming to Glenville, he had for five years been superintendent of the Fair’s Union Sunday-school in Codorus township.

BRANTLY F. PARKER, M. D., who is engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of York, is one of the representative young physicians and surgeons of the county, and, within the comparatively brief period of his professional endeavors in this field, he has gained a prestige which bespeaks his ability and also his personal facility in winning confidence and esteem of a popular order. He is an exemplar of the Homoeopathic school of medicine, whose beneficent principles and system have won the highest recognition and are gaining new endorsement, scientifically and popularly, each succeeding year.

Brantly Fuller Parker is a native of Maryland, born in Baltimore, Sept. 10, 1877, son of Rev. Charles D. and Alverda (Shaw) Parker, the former of whom was born in Virginia and the latter in Ohio, while they now reside in York, Pa., where the father, a clergyman of the Baptist Church, has a pastoral charge. Dr. Parker attended the public schools and also a private school in his native State and later became a student in South Jersey Institute, at Brighton, N. J., where he remained until he had attained the age of twenty-one years. He then took up the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. A. G. Stevens, of Cape May, N. J., and in 1890 he was matriculated in Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, where he completed the prescribed curriculum, and was graduated as a member of the class of 1903, duly receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. Shortly after his graduation he located in York, and here he is meeting with gratifying success, and is building up a representative practice. He is a member of the Goodno Medical Society, and the Homoeopathic State Medical Society of Pennsylvania. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Improved Order of Heptasophs, while in his political allegiance he is stanchly arrayed as a supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He is a member of the Baptist Church, in which faith he was reared.

FREDERICK W. KOTTCAMP, deputy sheriff of York county, is justly considered one of the most popular young men of York. Mr. Kottcamp’s birth occurred Sept. 28, 1870, in York, and he is a son of Henry Y. and Sophia C. (Neater) Kottcamp.

Henry Y. Kottcamp, who is a retired lime burner, residing at No. 331 West Philadelphia street, York, came to America from Germany, and settled in York. He married Sophia C. Neater, daughter of Frederick Neater, who came to York when young. They had children as follows: Carolina, Mary, George and Wilhelmina, all died in early childhood; Charles E., a lime burner of York; William H., a Slater of York; Jerry F., a machinist at the A. B. Farquhar works; and Frederick W.

Frederick W. Kottcamp was educated in the public schools, but was compelled to give up his studies on account of failing health. His first occupation was at lime burning, working for his father for five years, and he was then appointed constable of the Fifth ward to fill an unexpired term. He became his own successor and was twice elected constable of that ward for terms of three years each, and at the last election to that position, in 1902, received a majority of 136, the greatest majority ever given in that ward up to that time. After serving intelligently and faithfully as constable of the Fifth ward for seven years and three months, Mr. Kottcamp was appointed deputy sheriff by Sheriff Manifold, assuming the duties of that office on the first Monday in January, 1905.

Mr. Kottcamp has been a member of The Vigilant Steam and Chemical Fire Engine Company No. 1, of York, since Dec. 4, 1891, and also belongs to the Firemen's Relief Association. As a fireman, he has for years been prominent, representing his company at conventions, and now being a member of the State Firemen's Association. He was also a member of the detective bureau of the police department of York from the date of its organization until he became a deputy sheriff. He has for many years taken an active interest in athletic sports, and for a long time was umpire for the Y. M. C. A., and later for the Penn Park Athletic Association. In politics he is a Republican, but he has almost as many supporters and friends in the ranks of the Democrats, as he has among the Republicans.

WILLIAM M. ELICKER, editor and manager of the Dillsburg Bulletin, one of the leading newspapers of York county, was born July 27, 1877, son of Aaron B. and Susan E. (Miller) Ellicker, the former of Warrington and the latter of Carroll township.

Valentine Ellicker, grandfather of our subject, was a prosperous farmer of Warrington township for many years. He was a member of the United Brethren Church, while in politics he was a Republican.

Aaron Ellicker, son of Valentine and father of William M., was born in Warrington township, and received his education in the common schools and in a local academy. He taught school for two terms, and then turned his attention to farming, which occupation he has followed all of his life, owning and operating an 100-acre farm in Monaghan township. The children born to him and his wife were: Mabel, who married Harry Fabs, of Harrisburg, now deceased, survived by two children, Russell W. and Vance M.; and William M., who is the only living child of his parents. Aaron Ellicker is a member of the United Brethren church, while his wife adheres to the Presbyterian faith. In politics he is a Republican, and has held many local offices.

William M. Ellicker was educated in the common schools of York county. He is what is commonly termed a "self-made man," having made his own way in the world, and much of his success may be attributed to the fact of his being able to see opportunities and grasp them. At the age of thirteen years he engaged with the York Daily, with which paper he remained for about five years. He went to Carlisle in 1896, and engaged on a daily sheet there, but in 1897 came to Dillsburg, purchasing an interest in the Dillsburg Bulletin. In 1900 the remaining interest was purchased by his mother, Mrs. S. E. Ellicker. This paper was founded in 1876 by G. W. Nichols, was successfully operated by him for several years, and has been a very popular paper up to the present time. Since our subject has taken sole charge of the paper it has lost none of its savor—in fact in no part of its history has it thrived as it has under Mr. Ellicker's management. It deals in current and local topics in a just and able manner, and has an average circulation of 1,200 copies weekly. Besides the management of the paper, Mr. Ellicker has charge of the job printing department, from which nothing but first class work is turned out, this work having been more than doubled under Mr. Ellicker's management.

Mr. Ellicker was married June 7, 1900, to Miss Nettie S. Stauffer, daughter of D. Frank and Cevilla Stauffer, of York. One daughter has blessed this union, Margaret C. In religion Mr. Elicker adheres to the Presbyterian doctrines, while Mrs. Elicker belongs to the German Reformed Church. He is associated with the Heptasophs and Woodmen, in which orders he is extremely popular.

CHRISTIAN WILLIAM ALBERT ROCHOW. For many years the courts of York county have been the arena for beginners many of whom have become gifted attorneys at law. It has only been a few years since the gentleman whose name appears above was heard in debate for the first time before the courts of the county, and there are many who remember his first effective efforts, and have followed with interest his continued successful career.

Mr. Rochow is of German descent, his father, William Rochow, a former resident of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, having been born in that country in 1829. Migrating to America from Germany, he settled in Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he became a well-known dealer in hides. Here, in his adopted country, he passed the rest of his life, winning the respect and esteem of neighbors and friends, and his death, which occurred in 1901, at the advanced age of seventy-two, brought sorrow to all who knew him. The mother of Christian W. A. Rochow was also of German birth, her maiden name being Miss Rosa Knob. Her father, Christian Knob, was also a native of Germany.

Christian W. A. Rochow was born in Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., Feb. 3, 1876. His earlier education was received in the public schools of his native county, and later he attended the Dickinson Law School, from which he graduated, afterward, in 1897, taking a post-graduate course at the same institution, having been admitted to practice in the same year in the courts of Cumberland county. Two years later found him an attorney in York county, where he was admitted to practice in the courts of the county in 1898, and soon after to the Superior court.

Mr. Rochow was married, in 1902, to Miss Maude A. Hackman, daughter of Morris Hackman, the well-known wagonmaker of Carlisle, Pa. To this union one child has come, a son, William Morris Harry Rochow, whose birth occurred Jan. 9, 1903.

Socially Mr. Rochow is a member of the Old York Club, among whose members he is a favorite, and he attends St. Paul's Lutheran Church, in which he holds membership. In politics he is an unflinching Democrat, standing firm for the principles of his party at all times, and working for its best interests, and in the spring of 1904 he was strongly urged as a candidate for the office of district attorney of York county.

Gifted with a genial disposition, and having many qualities which conduce to popularity, the future of Mr. Rochow is not hard to prognosticate. In the line of his profession he has shown marked ability.

BERNARD W. SHIREY, M. D., a successful physician and surgeon located at York, and a leading citizen of that place, is a member of one of York county's old families, the Shirey ancestors having made that county their home for generations.

The grandfather of Doctor Shirey was a farmer of Shrewsbury township, where he passed all of his life. His son, Ephraim Shirey, the Doctor's father, was but six years old when his father died, and he was reared to manhood by a family of the name of Sites, who gave him the advantages of a good common school education. Later he attended New Berlin College. For some time he clerked in a store in Hopewell township, and while there married Miss Louisa McGuigan, whose grandfather came from the North of Ireland; her parents were Ambrose and Anna (Miller) McGuigan. After his marriage Mr. Shirey removed to Cornwall, Lebanon Co., Pa., where he clerked in the iron works for three years, and then went to Felton, where he conducted a general store for four years. He then bought a store at Hame-town, which he carried on for eight years, but because of failing health he was obliged to sell, and since that time he has been successfully engaged in the commission business. Mr. Shirey also owns a farm.

Mr. Shirey was reared in the faith of the Evangelical Church, of which he is a valued member. In politics he is a Democrat, and he has held the office of school director for a number of years. To Mr. and Mrs. Shirey the following children have been born: Bernard W.; Oscar, of Glen Rock, the bookkeeper for the Glen Manufacturing Company; Anna,
Mrs. Emery Diehl, of Baltimore, Md.; Mabel: Helen; Ambrose; Edna; Floe, and Paul.

Bernard W. Shirey was born near Winterstown, York county, Jan. 23, 1872, and his education was obtained in the common schools, which he attended until fifteen years of age. Later he went to the academy at Shrewsbury, then spent a term each at Stewartstown and York Academy, and taught school for two years. Dr. Shirey took up the study of medicine with Dr. James Geary, of Shrewsbury, after which he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, graduating with the class of 1895, and he began the practice of his profession at East Prospect, where he remained several years. He then took a post-graduate course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and private instruction of Dr. Simon and at Johns Hopkins University. For two months he was physician at the Baltimore Hospital, and for four months was surgeon there. Selecting York as his chosen field of practice Dr. Shirey opened an office at No. 303 East King street in 1903, in 1905 removing to 136 East Market street. He is a general practitioner, with surgery as a specialty; however, and has been very successful in his treatment of many complicated cases. He gives most careful attention to his patients, sparing himself in no way when life or health are in the balance, and thus he has won the confidence and affection of the community and enjoys as much practice as he is able to handle. He is a close student, and associated with various medical associations of the county and State, among which may be mentioned the York County Medical Society and the Pennsylvania State Medical Society. He belongs to the Knights of Malta, in which he is a valued commander, is a stanch Democrat in political sentiment, and served in East Prospect as school director for a three years' term. In religion he is a consistent member of the Zion Lutheran Church of York. Dr. Shirey's skill was recognized by his appointment as physician of the York County jail, in July, 1904. Ever since locating in York he has been the chosen examiner for a number of insurance companies, including the Fidelity Life Insurance Company, of Philadelphia, the Security Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Binghamton, and the Protected Home Circle, of Sharon, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Shirey was married in Chester county, in 1896, to Miss Minerva Diehl, of Shrewsbury township, the estimable daughter of Isaac and Rosa (Klinefelter) Diehl, and to this union has come one child, Jeannette, born March 4, 1905.

WILLIAM J. REICHLEY. One of the leading commercial enterprises represented in the city of York is that at whose head stands William J. Reichley, and it is pleasing to note that he is ably upholding the high prestige gained by his honored father, who was one of the city's prominent and influential business men and public-spirited citizens, having built up the important mercantile enterprise now controlled by his only son, while the business, that of wholesale and retail dealing in hardware, is still conducted under his name.

This representative enterprise dates its inception back to the year 1868, when William G. Reichley, father of our subject, inaugurated operations in a store building located on the lot now occupied by the "City Hotel," in West Market street, the original establishment controlling a retail business only, in the same lines later handled on so extensive a scale.

William G. Reichley was born in the city of York, in the year 1842, and was a representative of one of the old and influential families of this section of the Keystone State, with whose annals the name has been identified from an early epoch in its history. Mr. Reichley was reared and educated in York county and became one of the leading merchants of his native city, while he maintained the highest reputation as a reliable and progressive business man and as a loyal and public-spirited citizen. He continued to be actively identified with the business which he founded until within a very short time prior to his death, which occurred June 5, 1900. He was a man of the highest integrity in all the relations of life, was well and favorably known throughout the county, while he ever manifested a zealous and intimate interest in all that touched the welfare of his home city, to whose commercial and civic precedence he contributed in no small measure. He was a stanch Democrat in all his political proclivities, and his religious faith was that of the Lutheran Church. His wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Heindle, was born and reared in York, being a daughter of Jacob Heindle, a member of one of the prominent pioneer families of York county, and she still retains her residence in York, where she has long been prominent in social affairs and where she is surrounded by a wide circle of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Reichley became the parents of two children, the subject of this sketch being the younger, while his sister, Nettie M., is now Mrs. William L. Aumon.

William J. Reichley was born in the city of York, on the 15th of October, 1878, and after completing the curriculum of the public schools he entered his father's mercantile establishment and learned the business in all its details, so that he became amply qualified to assume the responsibilities which devolved upon him when his father was summoned from the scene of life's endeavors. He continued to be actively identified with the carrying on of the business until the death of his father, in 1900, since which time he has had entire charge of the business, managing same with distinctive discrimination and ability, so that in a personal way he has proved himself well fitted to take up the work so long and ably carried forward by his honored father. On April 1, 1906, the entire stock of groceries was closed out, and the hardware and edge tool business has been continued in the adjoining room. His present business establishment is located at No. 379 West Market street, the building having been erected in 1894, and being a substantial brick and stone structure of three stories, with lateral dimensions twenty by seventy-two feet. In addition to the accommodations afforded in this large building, two large and well equipped warehouses have been utilized for the storing of stock, the business being one of the most important of the sort in the county and its ramifications being so wide as to offer decisive proof that the city of York is a most eligible distributing and wholesale center. In politics Mr. Reichley gives his allegiance to the Democratic party, and both he and his wife are enrolled as members of Mount Zion Lutheran Church, in their home city.

On Aug. 29, 1900, William J. Reichley was united in marriage to Miss Fannie (Frances) Emigh, a daughter of George C. and Hannah (Mosel) Emigh, of Roaring Springs, Blair Co., Pa. Of this union two sons have been born: William G., born May 5, 1901, who died Feb. 17, 1902; and Robert Garrett, born April 3, 1903.

OLIVER L. STUCK is one of the representative contracting electricians of the city of York, having a well equipped establishment on South George street. He has gained a reputation for marked ability in his chosen field of endeavor and as a careful and reliable business man, so that his enterprise has shown a constantly expanding tendency from the time of its inception.

Oliver Stuck, his grandfather, was one of York county's prominent and influential citizens and wielded much power for good in connection with public affairs, having been the editor and publisher of the York Press, at the county seat, with which he continued to be identified until the time of his death. Oliver L. Stuck was born in the city of York, Nov. 22, 1876, and is a son of William L. and Olivia M. (Rudy) Stuck, the former of whom was a printer by vocation, having been for a number of years engaged in the printing business at York, Pa. His wife was a daughter of Daniel Rudy, who was a well known carpenter of York. They became the parents of two children, of whom Oliver L. is the elder. His brother, Frederick Rudy Stuck, is likewise an electrician by vocation, and resides in York.

Oliver L. Stuck, whose name introduces this sketch, secured his early educational training in the public schools of York and supplemented the same by a commercial course in Patrick's Business College, in his home city. His practical experience in electrical work was secured in establishments in York and Harrisburg, and he is a thorough workman in his line and well informed in regard to the scientific principles involved and applied, so that he is admirably equipped for the management of his present business in all its details. On the 26th of August, 1903, he engaged in business on his own responsibility, establishing his headquarters in the Hartley building, on East Market street. Pronounced success has attended his venture and he has filled important contracts. Among the more notable buildings in York for which he has done the electrical work may be mentioned St. Mary's Catholic Church, Jacoby & Brother's furniture factory, and the fine residences of S. Morgan Smith, George Small and Elmer Smith, but his work has not been confined to York county, since he has secured and executed desirable contracts in Carlisle, Middletown, Harrisburg and other towns and cities, invariably gaining high commendation for reliable and high class work, while he is looked upon as one of the rising young business men of his native city.

On Jan. 6, 1902, Mr. Stuck was united in marriage to Miss Mary R. Westick, of York.

REV. ISRAEL S. LEIBY, pastor of the Glen Rock Reformed Church, was born July 10, 1869, in Schuylkill county, son of Daniel and Mary (Steigerwelt) Leiby, who were natives of the above county and of German ancestry.

Daniel Leiby, the grandfather, was a Pennsylvania farmer, and married a Miss Lichty, by whom he had the following children: Daniel; Jacob; Nathan; Reuben; Annie, who married Daniel Gerber; Sarah, who married a Mr. Riegel; Daniel; and one daughter who married a Mr. Daubenspeck. The family were members of the Reformed Church. The maternal grandfather was Daniel Steigerwelt, a farmer, who married a Miss Huffman, and had these children: Daniel; Peter; Hannah, married to a Mr. Whetstone; Matilda, married to a Mr. Troxel; Mrs. Hess; Flora; Catherine, and Mary.

Daniel Leiby, the father of Israel, followed farming during his life, and passed away in 1901. His children were: Emma, who married Adolph Berner; Sarah, who married C. John Schaller; Dennis; Daniel; Jonathan; Amanda; Mary, married to Thomas Schock; Israel S.; Alwena; Elias; and Susan, who died young. The mother of our subject died in 1877. She was a member of the Lutheran Church, while her husband was connected with the Reformed Church.

Israel S. Leiby attended the schools of his native county and worked on his father's farm until he was eighteen years old, when he entered the Keystone Normal School where he remained for one term. He then learned the trade of house painting and paper hanging, at which he was apprenticed three years, and then he began study for the ministry. Mr. Leiby went to Catawba College, at Newton, N. C., from which he graduated in 1897. In the meantime he had spent one year at Calvin College, Cleveland, Ohio, his ministerial studies having covered five years. He passed three years in the seminary of the Reformed Church at Lancaster, Pa., when he received the call to Glen Rock Reformed Church, and was ordained at the time he took charge in 1900. In his congregation Mr. Leiby has about 400 members.

In 1900 Mr. Leiby married Miss Anna E. Rieman, and one child—Grace E., has been born to this union. Full of charity and thought for others, Mr. Leiby has hosts of friends, while his sound judgment and sterling character have won him a place in the front rank of men of refinement and education.

GEORGE W. STEWART, a native son of York county and representing, in both the agronomic and maternal lines, sterling pioneer families of the county, Mr. Stewart is well-entitled to consideration in this compilation, while personally he is one of the popular and capable young business men of York, being the efficient superintendent of freight for the York County Traction Company. His father, John Stewart, now lives retired in West Manchester township, where he was long and prominently identified with agricultural pursuits; and the mother's family have long been identified with the civic and industrial life of North Codorus township. Of the nine children born to John and Isabelle Stewart three are deceased: William Henry, who died at the age of twenty-two years; John, at the age of nineteen; and Katie, aged fifteen. The survivors are: Amanda, wife of Elmer Clinedinst, of West Manchester township; Sarah, wife of Charles Stover, of Spring Grove, this county; Elizabeth, wife of Albert Harold, of North Codorus township; Emma, wife of John Strasbaugh, of Jefferson township; Clementine, wife of Edward Huett, of Seven Valley, this county; and George W.

George W. Stewart was born in North Codorus township, Dec. 14, 1867; and in the public schools of the locality he secured his early educational discipline, while he continued to be associated with the work and management of his father's farm until he had attained the age of twenty-six years. He then entered the service of the Western Maryland Railroad Co., with which he remained about two years, after which he erected a building in the city of York and there opened a grocery. One year later he sold out, and thereafter he was stockkeeper in the York Card & Paper Co., until May, 1903, when he accepted his present position as superintendent of freight for the York County Traction Company, in which office he has proved himself admirably placed, having done much to facilitate the work of his department of the service, and standing high in the esteem of the company and the general public. In politics he accords a stanch support to the Republican party.

On May 15, 1894, Mr. Stewart was united in marriage to Miss Katie J. Kumerant, daughter of Lewis Kumerant, of Gettysburg, this state, where she was reared and educated.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN POSEY, M. D., physician and surgeon of Chanceford, was born Feb. 22, 1872, at York Furnace, Lower Chanceford township, York county, son of David C. and Mary (Groff) Posey.

David C. Posey was also a native of York Furnace, and died when his son Benjamin was but nine years of age. He was connected for seventeen years with the mercantile concern of John Baer & Co. He supported the principles of the Republican party and in religious faith was a member of the M. E. Church. He married Mary Groff, who was born in Lancaster county, but reared in York county, and the children born to this union were: Emma, married H. M. Stauffer of Safe Harbor, Lancaster county; Robert A., died at the age of twenty years; Harry W., educated in the public schools, Millersville Normal School, graduated from the Maryland Medical College of Baltimore, Md., married Maggie Riale, and is now a practicing physician at Slab, York county; Fannie D. married A. C. Murphy, and died in Chanceford township; Benjamin F.; and Sue married R. J. Remley, of Lancaster City.

Benjamin F. Posey remained on the old homestead until he was twenty years of age. At the age of five years he commenced to attend the public schools of his township, being first taught by Mrs. Agnes Campbell, and continued his general education until the age of twenty, when he was taught by an uncle, William Posey. He began clerking at the age of fifteen years in the store of his uncle, John Baer, with whom he remained until twenty years of age, when he removed to McCall’s Ferry and followed that occupation in the summer for Samuel D. Fry, entering the University of Maryland in the year 1893. After pursuing one course in that institution, in the fall of 1894 he entered the Baltimore Medical College, from which he was graduated in April, 1897. While at the latter school he took a course in philosophy and attended the Loyola College at Baltimore, where, in 1896, the degree of M. S. was conferred upon him, being honored in the same year with the degree of A. B. Dr. Posey also took a course in clinical instruction in diseases of women, under Prof. T. A. Ashby of the University of Maryland, and a similar course under Dr. Howard A. Kelley of Johns Hopkins University, of Baltimore. Dr. Posey passed the Pennsylvania State examination at Philadelphia, in June, 1897. He had previously located at No. 841 North Howard street, Baltimore, where he began the general practice of medicine while pursuing his studies in his specialty, the diseases of women.

In May, 1897, Dr. Posey removed from Baltimore to his present location, which was formerly the homestead of Dr. B. F. Porter, first renting the property and in 1900 purchasing it from the heirs of Dr. Porter’s estate. Dr. Posey’s farm consists of 100 acres of fine land. The Doctor enjoys a large practice, which has grown encouragingly, as his ability has become widely recognized, while his pleasing personal characteristics have won him numerous friends. He has gained the confidence and good will of all citizens and is a close student, a careful practitioner, a clear-headed, and steady-handed surgeon, and in frequent demand as a consulting physician. He is a member of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society.

On Sept. 18, 1901, in Pine Grove Church, McCalls Ferry, Lower Chanceford township, Dr. Posey was married by Rev. J. L. Hynson to Miss Lydia A. Fry, born at McCall’s Ferry, the estimable daughter of Samuel D. and Emma E. (Bennington) Fry, the former of whom is a merchant there, and one child, Charles Fry, has been born to the Doctor and his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Posey are members of the Chanceford Presbyterian Church. The Doctor is a stanch Republican, and cast his first vote for President McKinley in 1896.

REV. JESSE C. KOLLER, D. D., was born Oct. 24, 1839, in Springfield township, on the farm which was the birthplace of his father, Henry Koller, who was born in 1811. He married Miss Annie M. Cramer, who was born in Codorus township, York county, in May, 1817, daughter of Henry Cramer, an old resident and highly respected citizen of that township. To Henry and Annie M. (Cramer) Koller were born seven children, namely: Jesse C.; Henry, who resides in Ohio; Catherine, wife of David Cunningham, of York county; Eli, a resident of Glen Rock; Ellen, wife of Alexander Gotwalt, of York, Pa.; Rebecca, wife of H. S. Steck; of York County; and William, deceased. The father died in 1852.

Jesse C. Koller spent the first fourteen years of his life on the old homestead, after which he devoted himself to the acquisition of a higher education. For a time he attended the Shrewsbury Academy, then taught by Dr. Dinsmore, and later became a student at Cumberland Valley Institute. Here he completed the preparatory course essential for his admission to college. Matriculating at Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, he graduated from that institution in 1865. Having decided upon the ministry as his life work, the young man then entered the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, from which he graduated in 1867. It is noteworthy that in his long career in the ministry, Rev. Koller labored in but two pastorates. In the fall of 1867, shortly after his graduation, he accepted a call from the congregation at Gle Rock, where he remained for nine and a half years. Then in the spring of 1877 he was called to the pastorate of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church at Hanover, where his labors were long uninterrupted. In 1882 the degree of D. D. was conferred upon him by his Alma Mater. For years he held a trusteeship in the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg. He has held some important appointments on the Boards of the Lutheran Synod, as well as among the various other Synods. At present he is a member of the Lutheran Publication Board.

In 1870 Dr. Koller married Alice G. Heathcote, daughter of William and Catherine (Allison) Heathcote of Glen Rock. To Rev. and Mrs. Koller have been born four children, namely: Rev. Paul W., pastor of the Lutheran Church at Hudson, N. Y., who, in 1902, married Miss Mary Bollinger, daughter of Jesse Bollinger, a prominent citizen of Hanover; J. Morris, at home; Leonard, a graduate of Gettysburg College and now superintendent of the Arts and Crafts Department of the I. C. S., of Scranton, Pa.; and Elsie E., at home, an accomplished musician of more than local renown.

JOHN W. SHENBERGER, of New Bridgeville, York county, Pa., was born May 12, 1858, on the home farm, son of the late John K. Shenberger, ex-treasurer of York county. He grew to manhood in Chanceford township, attending school at Conrad's Cross Roads, finishing his education at the age of twenty years under J. R. W. Wallace. His early days were spent on his father's farm, where he worked hard during vacations and any time that could be spared from his studies.

On Oct. 13, 1893, Mr. Shenberger married Miss Ida Moore, of Chanceford township, daughter of William and Mary (Shaw) Moore. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Shenberger settled on the home farm for five years, by which time he had accumulated sufficient to buy from the Tome estate his present home, comprising a farm of 165 acres of fine farm land. In 1902 he actively engaged in selling fine horses and mules (in which line he had been irregularly employed since his marriage), and in the spring of 1904 built a fine sales stable. He does a large and profitable business and is acquiring a handsome competence.

Mr. Shenberger was reared in the faith of the Evangelical Church. In politics he is a stanch Democrat and takes great interest in the success of his party. He is a director in the Red Lion First National Bank, having held that office for two years. Fraternally he is associated with the Jr. O. U. A. M., of East Prospect; the P. O. S. of A. of Craleysville, and I. O. R. M. of Red Lion. To Mr. and Mrs. Shenberger have been born: Maggie Verna and Oliver Moore. Owing to his business acumen and untiring efforts, together with his adaptability and quick recognition and acceptance of opportunities, Mr. Shenberger is recognized as rapidly approaching the front rank among the financiers of York County.

LATTIMER S. SHENBERGER, brother of John W. Shenberger, was born May 25, 1878, on the old homestead in Chanceford township, which he bought in 1902 and upon which he is now engaged in farming. He was educated in the home schools, his first teacher being Lillie Pope, and at the time of leaving school, at the age of seventeen years, was being taught by H. Shelley. After completing this epoch in his education he spent about five months at the Wade Business College, Lancaster City. He was reared a farmer, but learned the painter's trade, which he followed for about eight years.
In August, 1903, Mr. Shenberger married Miss Cora Keeports, daughter of Jacob Keeports, of Chanceford township, and one child, Mary Elizabeth, has been born to this union. Mr. Shenberger is a Democrat in politics, while in religious views he was reared in the faith of the Evangelical church. As a good farmer, a business man and as a citizen he is held in high esteem in the entire community.

FREDERICK H. SHENBERGER, postmaster at New Bridgeville, York county, Pa., succeeding his father in this office, was born July 21, 1871, son of John K. and Elizabeth (Loucks) Shenberger, who were among the honored and esteemed residents of that section of York county. The family of Shenberger is an old established one, the grandfather of Frederick H. having lived and died at the point known as Conrad’s Cross Roads.

John K. Shenberger, father of Frederick H., was born March 19, 1833, in the old stone house standing at Conrad’s Cross Roads and his educational opportunities, which were somewhat better than ordinary, fitted him for school teaching. This profession he followed for some years in Chanceford township, also mastering the carpenter’s trade, in which he engaged for some years. During the latter period of his life he married, then bought the farm which is now owned by Levi C. Frey, and still later the farm owned by his son Lattimer. Mr. Shenberger engaged in farming and general merchandising, establishing a store on his place which was a great convenience to the neighborhood. He was made postmaster at New Bridgeville, succeeding Michael Bowers, and held the office for many years. Mr. Shenberger occupied a prominent place in township affairs and neighborhood matters, and in the quiet pursuits of farming and merchandising, amassed an ample fortune. In October, 1902, his death occurred at his home, and he was buried at the Evangelical Chapel cemetery. Although not a member of any church he was a moral man and a very liberal contributor to religious bodies, especially to the Evangelical denomination. All his life a strong supporter of the Democratic party, he was honored on numerous occasions by election to office. For a great many years his influence was exerted as one of the township school directors, and some twelve years prior to his decease, he was elected treasurer of York county, an office of great responsibility, and for three years he faithfully performed the duties incumbent upon him. Esteemed and honored he passed away, one of the worthy men of his day and generation. His wife, Elizabeth Loucks, was a daughter of the late Samuel Loucks, a prominent man in Lower Windsor township. Mrs. Shenberger still survives. The children of John Shenberger and wife were: Ida, Mrs. James W. Thompson, of Chanceford township; Charles, who died young; John W., extended mention of whom immediately precedes; Frederick H.; Minerva and Alice, who died young; William J.; and Lattimer S.

Frederick H. Shenberger was born on the farm now owned by Levi C. Frey, and his education was secured in the local schools which he attended until the age of twenty years, some of his teachers being John Lyon, Mr. Buckingham, Mr. Wallace, Miss Ida Douglas and John Robinson. His vacations were usually spent in farm work and in learning the carpenter’s trade. At this latter vocation he worked for five years and at odd times clerked in his father’s store. During the first year of his father’s duties as county treasurer he assumed the entire management of the business and in 1895 full charge of the home place which he managed for eight years.

In the fall of 1902 he began the erection of the present commodious store, which was completed Nov. 17, 1903. It is an attractive and substantial frame structure, two and one-half stories high, 70x24 feet. Here he carries a complete line of general merchandise, having one of the best equipped stores in rural York county. As mentioned he is also postmaster. In addition to all kinds of merchandise, selected to satisfy the needs of his country patrons, Mr. Shenberger was urged to add farm implements and fertilizers to his stock, and some five years ago he opened this department.

In 1900 Mr. Shenberger was married in Chanceford township, to Maud M. Saylor, a daughter of John R. and Sally Saylor, prominent residents of this township. They have one son, Walter S.

Mr. Shenberger is a Democrat and is now serving his second term as township auditor. He is a member of the Reformed Church.

WILLIAM JACOB SHENBERGER, M. D., of Chanceford township, York county, Pa., was born Feb. 14, 1876, at the homestead in the township named, son of the late J. K. Shenberger. He attended the public schools of the district, and later took a course at the Lock Haven Normal School, from which he was graduated with the class of 1898. He then taught at the Gipe school in Chanceford township for one year, and two terms at the Bethel school. In 1900 he entered Jefferson Medical College, from which he was graduated in 1904. Dr. Shenberger immediately commenced practice, and has been quite successful in his professional work, now residing at Conrad's Cross Roads, where he has built a comfortable home.

On Sept. 21, 1904, Dr. Shenberger married Miss Anna Julia Hessert, the estimable daughter of John and Mary (Almann) Hessert, the former of whom, now deceased, was a merchant in Philadelphia. Mrs. Shenberger is a graduate of Darlington Seminary, West Chester, class of 1901. Dr. Shenberger is an attendant of the Evangelical Church. In politics he is a Democrat, but has never aspired to hold public office, preferring to devote his attention to his chosen profession. He is a man who enjoys the esteem of all with whom he has business or personal relations.

STUART EMERSON Gipe is entitled to much commendation and unreserved popular endorsement by reason of the enterprise which he has manifested in connection with offering in his native city of York privileges for the developing of elegant and artistic accomplishments under most favorable circumstances. The Gipe Academy of Music and Languages, at No. 301 South George street, of which he is personally the founder, is one of the popular and valued institutions of the city. The family history is recorded in the sketch of the life of his brother, Morgan E. Gipe, appearing elsewhere.

Stuart Emerson Gipe was born in the city of York, and in the public schools he secured his preliminary educational discipline, while he early manifested a noteworthy predilection and taste for music. After leaving the public schools he was enabled to carry forward his study of the piano for three years at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore, Md., under the direction of Richard Burmeister, a musician of international reputation, who was a favorite pupil of the immortal Liszt, and now director of the Royal Conservatory of Music in Dresden, Germany. He studied Theory and Composition with Asger Hamerik, then director of the Peabody Conservatory of Music, and now of Copenhagen, Denmark. At the expiration of the period noted Mr. Gipe went to Berlin, Germany, where he also studied Theory and Composition under the tutorage of Ludwig Bussler and piano with Professor Alfred Sormann, eminent musicians, the latter being court pianist to the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. Later he studied coaching and oratorio work with Wilhelm Heinefetter, formerly cappelmeister in the Royal Opera, in Munich. During his years in Germany Mr. Gipe also made a special study of the German language, under the able direction of Frau von Sanden, remaining in the city of Berlin for three years. Prior to his European sojourn, it may be said, Mr. Gipe studied voice culture in New York City, with Herbert Tabbs, director of the New York Vocal Institute, and also with Tali Esen Morgan, director of the Ocean Grove festival chorus. Mr. Gipe is in possession of personal recommendations from Richard Burmeister and others of his distinguished teachers. Burmeister says of him: "Mr. Gipe studied with me for three years, and was also for a time my assistant in teaching, in which branch he had considerable success. I recommend him as a conscientious and careful musician and teacher, and am convinced that those who secure his services will be greatly satisfied with his work." In his letter of commendation Alfred Sormann lays particular emphasis on Mr. Gipe's interpretation of the classical scores.

Mr. Gipe returned to York in 1895, and soon afterward opened an academy of music and languages at No. 19 South George street, where he remained until April 1, 1900, when he removed the institution to its present commodious and attractive quarters, at No. 301 South George street, where he gives his undivided attention to the teaching of pianoforte, voice and theory, as well as the languages, with special reference to the German. His studio is a most artistic and attractive one, offering its quota of enthusiasm to the ambitious student, since its walls are covered with portraits of distinguished musicians and composers, and the entire appearance of the studio breathes of refinement and artistic taste, the floors being covered with costly rugs, while tropical foliage and other decorative elements.
lend to the beauty of the place. The studio, however, is one in which its director insists upon earnest and conscientious work both on his own part and on that of his pupils, and he is thus adding greatly to his prestige and success from year to year, and secures a representative support. His academy is a valuable acquisition in connection with the artistic and social life of the community. Mr. Gipe is director of music in the Union Lutheran church of York, where he conducts a chorus choir of twenty-five voices, said choir being justly considered one of the best in the State. On Jan. 1, 1905, Mr. Gipe organized and became conductor of the Mendelssohn Choral Society of York, with 250 voices, including the best talent of the city, the most conspicuous organization for concerted vocal music ever known in the history of York; and, it is only fair to say that the citizens of York are to be congratulated on having laid at their very doors the opportunity to study musical language, in a way that could only otherwise be done by going abroad, involving the expenditure of thousands of dollars.

Mr. Gipe is a member of the Bachelor Club of York, but his devotion to his art is such that in his work centers his ambition and enthusiasm, so that he has little time to accord to extraneous affairs. He enjoys marked popularity in his native city and is accomplishing here a work of notable value and significance, for the solid foundations are not alone demanded in the scheme of life, but also the embellished superstructures, represented in the refined arts.

JOHN E. INNERS, M. D., established in practice in Yorkana, was born in York township, this county, April 18, 1875, and his boyhood days were spent on the farm, where he waxed strong in mind and body under the grateful and invigorating discipline of agricultural labors.

Daniel Inners, his father, was born in the same township, July 31, 1848, and was there reared and educated, his scholastic opportunities being such as were offered in the common schools of the period and locality. At the age of fifteen he entered upon an apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade, becoming a skilled artisan and continuing to follow same for the long period of thirty years. About 1900 he withdrew from the sturdy trade which had so long engrossed his attention and he has since been engaged in farming in York township, being one of the highly esteemed and substantial citizens of his native county. In politics he is a stanch Democrat, and both he and his wife are members of the United Evangelical Church. Daniel Inners married Catherine Sipe, who was born in Springettsbury township, York county, daughter of John and Rebecca (Lehman) Sipe, both of whom are deceased; the father was a farmer in the township mentioned. Daniel and Catherine Inners have had ten children, all of whom are living except two: Emma died at the age of three years; John E. was the next in order of birth; Minnie is the wife of Dr. Emanuel H. Bupp, of York; Sally is the wife of Edward Gruver, of that city; Margaret died in childhood; and Sadie M., Ada, Charles, Claude and Verna still remain at home.

Daniel Inners, Sr., grandfather of the Doctor, died in York township, at the age of eighty-five years. He followed the blacksmith's trade during the major portion of his active business career. He and his wife had eight children. Noah is a representative farmer of York township, and a veteran of the Civil war; he married Agnes Livingston. Amos, now a blacksmith in Springettsbury township, served during the entire period of the Rebellion, as a member of the 87th P. V. I., and during his military career participated in a number of the most important battles of the great conflict, including the Wilderness and Appomattox, was imprisoned for a time in Andersonville, and was wounded several times; he married Lucy Sipe, a sister of his brother Daniel's wife. Solomon, a farmer of York township, was likewise a loyal soldier in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion; he married Catherine Rapp, who is now deceased. Daniel, father of the Doctor, was the next in order of birth. Sarah is the widow of Alexander Sipe and resides in York. Mary, unmarried, resides in York township. Samuel removed to Illinois in the eighties and later migrated further West, nothing having been heard from him by the other members of the family for the past several years. Amanda is the wife of Henry Honsemeyer, of York county. The great-grandfather of the Doctor came to this country at a very early day, passing the remainder of his life in York township, where he died at a patriarchal age.
John E. Inners secured his preliminary education in the district schools and later continued his studies in the Dallastown high school and the York County Academy. His father had a small farm, and when Dr. Inners was seventeen years of age he assumed practical charge of it, receiving half of the proceeds derived from its cultivation. He thus continued for several years, in the meanwhile carefully husbanding his resources, as he had determined to prepare himself for the medical profession and depended upon his efforts to defray the expenses of his technical training. After leaving the York County Academy he again became a student in the public schools, in the meanwhile devoting as much time as possible to the study of the various branches of medical science. In 1898 he was matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the city of Baltimore, Md., where he completed the prescribed course, being graduated, with the degree of M. D., April 29, 1902. The Doctor at once opened an office in Yorkana, and his success has been pronounced, as he has established a large and representative practice, while he is held in high regard in the community, both professionally and socially. He is a member of the York County Medical Society. In his political proclivities he is a stanch Democrat, and he was reared in the faith of the United Evangelical Church.

In Yorkana, Feb. 20, 1903, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Inners to Miss Maggie M. Dietz, a daughter of Alexander Dietz, and of this union has been born one son, Lamar D.

JOHN R. HEINDEL, a successful teacher of Codorus township, York county, was born Jan. 30, 1879, in Manheim township, near Green Ridge, this county, son of Aaron H. and Mary (Rohrbaugh) Heindel. John Heindel, grandfather of John R., was a well-known farmer and good citizen of Manheim township where he passed a long life, dying at the age of eighty-one years. He married Rebecca Heise, who lived to the age of eighty years, and both were buried in the graveyard at Stone Church in Codorus township, where they were members. Their children were: William, a newspaper man, who has been employed with the Baltimore Sun for forty-two years; Jacob, who lives in Buffalo, N. Y.; Elizabeth, of Jefferson; Susan, wife of Alexander Cramer, of Alesia, Md.; and Aaron H.

Aaron H. Heindel was born in Shrewsbury township, York county, Pa., where he received a district school education and then engaged in farming, which occupation he followed until 1896. He has retired from business activity, and resides with a son at New Sinsheim, Codorus township. He married Mary Rohrbaugh, daughter of John Z. and Eva (Hoover) Rohrbaugh. She died July 14, 1905, and is buried at the Stone Church in Codorus township. The issue of this marriage was as follows: Eliza, the wife of Valentine Miller, living at Spring Grove; John R.; Eva, wife of Harry Bricker, of Codorus township; Charles, who married Celestie Krebs, and lives at Seven Valley; and Conelius, who married Amanda Shue.

John R. Heindel enjoyed excellent educational advantages, attending the township schools, and also one session at the State Normal School at Millersville. Later he took an academic course at Glenville Academy. In 1887 he began to teach, spending his first year in Manheim township, and the following year at New Sinsheim. In the spring of 1905 he came to his present field of work, this being known as the Sheaffer School.

Prior to becoming a teacher Mr. Heindel was connected for a number of years with mercantile interests, clerking first for S. B. Bruback and later for his successor, Lewis Barbenn, with whom he continued for fourteen years. There are few men better known or more highly esteemed through this locality than Mr. Heindel.

Mr. Heindel married (first) Henrietta Fishel, daughter of John L. and Maria (Taylor) Fishel. She died in 1891, after having been married a little less than one year, leaving one child, Annie. He married (second) Maggie Rohrbaugh, daughter of Amos X. and Sarah (Markel) Rohrbaugh, of Manheim township. They have three children: Lettie, Paul and Claire.

In political sentiment Mr. Heindel is a stanch Democrat, and he has frequently been elected to responsible offices. At present he is township clerk, has been township auditor and has many times served as a delegate to important conventions. Although he is a member of the Stone Church congregation, he attends the Shaeffer Lutheran Church while his duties are in this locality, and wherever he may be he is one of the leaders in Church and Sunday-school work, and also in all educational matters.

JOHN H. BENNETT, M. D., is one of the latest additions to the medical fraternity of York, though he has practiced for some years in York county, and has passed his entire life within its confines. Dr. Bennett was born in the rural village of Seven Valley, Feb. 22, 1873.

John Bennett, a mining engineer from Cornwall, England, and the father of John H., settled in Berks county, Pa., in 1878, and continued to reside there until his death in 1897, aged fifty-four years. Dr. Bennett's mother was Sarah Buehler, a daughter of Michael, a merchant of Seven Valley, and her death there, at the age of twenty, was coincident with the Doctor's birth.

Dr. John H. Bennett was reared in Seven Valley and laid the foundation of his literary education in the common schools of that village. This was supplemented at Kutztown Normal College, Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, and by private instruction under the tutelage of Sylvanus Cobb Kline, A. M. A formal course at Maryland University followed, from which institution he graduated in 1892. Our subject then took up work at Bay View Hospital, in Baltimore, for a period, after which he matriculated at Jefferson Medical College. He took his degree of M. D. there, in 1893, and immediately began practice at Jefferson, in York county. His coming to York in March of 1903 was preceded by a period of study at Johns Hopkins Hospital, where he took a course in clinical diagnosis. Thoroughly equipped for the practice of his profession and a deep student, whose greatest delight is in the mastery of its varied problems, Dr. Bennett is rapidly securing the confidence of the people of York and building a practice which bids fair to equal his physical ability to meet its demands.

The home of our subject is made happy by the presence within it of a wife and son, the son bearing the name of John, and being the fifth generation to receive such christening. Mrs. Bennett was Miss Alice C. Crist, daughter of Michael, now deceased, but for many years in the life and fire insurance business in York, the date of her marriage to the Doctor being Feb. 23, 1893.

Doctor Bennett is alive to the interests of the community in which he has come to reside, and is active in its business and social life. He holds membership in the Masonic fraternity, is a Knight Templar and Shriner, and on election days supports Republican men and measures. In 1905 Dr. Bennett was elected a member of the common council, and was chosen the first chairman of the Sanitary committee. He is also a member of York County Medical Society, of which he is corresponding secretary, and is a member of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, as well as of the American Medical Association. His church membership still remains at the old Ziegler Lutheran church, near Seven Valley, a church for which he has particular regard on account of the fact that his great-grandfather, John Buehler, was one of the men who caused its erection.

VICTOR K. JORDAN. Men of energy and force of character do not usually settle down in early life to a business of narrow limits. There is that in human nature which demands an insight into industrial life from several view points, and the experience thus acquired widens and enriches the business acumen of the recipient in after life. Victor K. Jordan, president of the Hanover Steam Bottling Works, comes to that executive position with a fruitful and valuable experience, which, in the few years since he has acquired the business interests named, have conduced to the progress and prosperity of the company.

He was born near Allentown, Lehigh Co., Pa., son of Milton and Deborah (Kline) Jordan. The parents were both natives of Lehigh county, and by trade the father was a carriage manufacturer. Victor K. received his education in the common schools of Coopersburg, and in the same town acquired the mastery of telegraphy, after which he obtained a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, which he held for five years. He then went to Philadelphia and entered the employ of Strawbridge & Clothier, dry goods merchants, with whom he remained fourteen months. Returning to Coopersburg he learned the trade of painting and carriage trimming and thus equipped he went to Lansdale, Pa., and for a year was with L. M. Lan-
Mr. Jordan then accepted a position with the Baltimore & Ohio road, after which he was for a short time interested in the feather renovation business at Quakertown, Pa. Returning to telegraphy, Mr. Jordan was again for two years in the service of the Philadelphia & Reading road, followed by running the “Slate Valley Hotel,” Bangor, Pa. It was in 1899 that Mr. Jordan came to Hanover and purchased the bottling works from John Schmidt. This business he has since successfully conducted, and is in the enjoyment of an excellent trade. In 1891 Mr. Jordan married Lennie C. Weaver, of Center Valley, Pa., the daughter of V. B. Weaver, a noted veterinary surgeon. To Mr. and Mrs. Jordan have been born two children, Herbert Victor and Wilson Clifford. Mrs. Jordan is a member of the Reformed Church.

JOHN J. BOLLINGER, one of the younger members of the York county Bar, is a scion of one of the oldest and most honored families of the county, with whose annals the name has been identified for more than a century and three-quarters. The original American progenitor of the Bollinger family was born and bred in Switzerland, whence he emigrated to America and settled in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, prior to the year 1716. This information is authenticated by a birth certificate of that date from Lancaster county, the interesting and valuable old document being in the possession of the family at the present time. In 1728 the family removed from Lancaster county into York county, and from that day to this the family name has been intimately linked with the civic and industrial affairs of the latter county.

Jacob M. Bollinger, grandfather of John J., was born and reared in York county, and became a prominent and influential farmer of Carroll county, Md., where he resided during the major portion of his long and useful life, though in his later years he resided in Adams county, in which latter both he and his wife died.

Jesse Bollinger, son of Jacob M., is one of the well-known and highly honored citizens of York county, and was for many years engaged in the mercantile business in Hanover, where he is now living retired, having been a resident of the county during practically his entire life. His wife, whose maiden name was Ella E. Bucher, is a daughter of the late Michael Bucher, a prominent citizen of Hanover borough, where he served many years as justice of the peace and conveyancer, while in this connection it should also be recorded that his family was founded in this county more than a century ago. Jesse and Ella E. Bollinger became the parents of four children, namely: Preston M., who is a salesman in the city of Philadelphia; Mary E., wife of Rev. Paul W. Koller, a clergyman of the Lutheran church and resident of Hudson, N. Y., at the time of this writing; Anna B., at home; and John J. The father is a Republican in his political proclivities, and both he and his wife are members of the Reformed Church.

John J. Bollinger was born in the borough of Hanover, this county, Jan. 13, 1878, and after completing the curriculum of the public schools of his native town he was matriculated in famous old Franklin and Marshall College, in the city of Lancaster, where he completed the classical course, and was graduated as a member of the class of 1898, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. While in college he was a popular and appreciative member of the Chi Pi fraternity, and also the Diagnostian Literary Society. After his graduation Mr. Bollinger began the work of technical preparation for his chosen profession, entering the law office of Ross & Brenneman, of York, under whose effective preceptorship he continued his studies until eligible for admission to the Bar. He was admitted to practice in the courts of York county July 23, 1901, and later was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the State. He is meeting with success in his professional endeavors, and is rapidly gaining enviable prestige at the Bar and as a counselor. In politics he is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and his religious faith is indicated in his holding membership in Emanuel Reformed church, at Hanover. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks and the Knights of Pythias.

CHARLES W. VOGEL, general superintendent of the York Manufacturing Company, of York, Pa., and a man known throughout York county, comes of an old and honored family, his ancestors being among the pioneer settlers of Pennsylvania. His birth took place in Bedford county, Pa., June 16, 1875, and he is a son of F. H. and Elizabeth (Shreve) Vogel.

On the maternal side of the house, the founders of the family of Shreve settled in Bedford county, and the maternal great-grandfather drove the stage from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh in Colonial days.

F. H. Vogel, the father, was born in Germany, but came to America when fifteen years of age. At present he is a resident of Philadelphia, and owner of a furniture factory. He and his wife have had seven children: Robert and Julia, who died in early childhood; one that died in infancy unnamed; Daniel, in charge of the complaint department in Wannaker's at Philadelphia; Harry L., a member of the official staff at Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia, for a number of years, and at present with a pipe-organ concern, also in Philadelphia; Francis Gilbert, with the Gas Meter Company, of Philadelphia; and Charles W., of York.

After finishing his public school course, Charles W. Vogel was thoroughly educated in draughting and business and electrical methods, studying to be a practical machinist for four years at Philadelphia. He then took a private course in business, and then became connected with a bicycle concern, of which he was manager of the manufacturing department for a year. In 1898, Mr. Vogel became connected with the York Manufacturing Company, but after a short period left that company, and returned to Philadelphia, there entering the employ of the Pennsylvania Iron Works, where he continued for six months.

During the Spanish-American war Mr. Vogel was employed in the ordnance department of the Midvale Steel Works, and later returned to York, again entering the York Manufacturing Company. He occupied various positions with this concern until April 1, 1904, when he was made assistant superintendent. After one year's service in the capacity of assistant superintendent he was made superintendent of the entire works, which responsible position he now holds. He is well-fitted for the duties, and is a favorite with his men, as well as with his employers.

On Oct. 19, 1899, Mr. Vogel was united in marriage with Ida Holman, of England, daughter of Charles and Mary Holman, formerly of England, but now of Philadelphia. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Vogel: James Holman, and Carl Stephens. In religious matters Mr. Vogel is a Methodist. In politics he is a Republican, although as yet he has taken no active part in public affairs. He is enterprising, reliable and thoroughly competent, possessing a pleasant, courteous manner, which wins him friends on every side.

EDWARD THOMAS KEYWORTH, second son of Charles A. Keyworth (son of Thomas Keyworth of York) and Mary Jane Castor (daughter of Peter Castor of Franklin, Philadelphia), was born in the City of York Feb. 23, 1870. After attending the public school and the York Collegiate Institute Mr. Keyworth took a course in architecture in the University of Pennsylvania. He began his office practice under Arthur P. Rosser and later went in the office of J. A. Dempwolf. In 1903 he entered the office of Hamme & Leber.

At the beginning of the Spanish-American war Mr. Keyworth helped to organize, became a member and was appointed second sergeant of, a volunteer company for active service in the United States Army. Later this became Company F of the 11th Regiment of the National Guards of Pennsylvania, being thoroughly equipped for State and national service. Mr. Keyworth was elected second lieutenant of said company, and later was appointed adjutant, of the Second Battalion, 11th Regiment, to Major A. H. Raber, by Colonel Louis A. Wateres, of Scranton. Mr. Keyworth participated in the military part of the inauguration of Governor W. A. Stone, and the unveiling of ex-Governor Hartranft's statue, and the funeral obsequies of Brigadier-General Magee, of Whittsville.

Mr. Keyworth married, Sept. 19, 1900, Irene Louise Rapalee, twin daughter of Miners Rapalee and Rowena Spooner of Penn Yan, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Keyworth have one child, Donald Rapalee, born April 25, 1902. During Mr. Keyworth's childhood he was associated with Zion Lutheran Sunday-school, but later, in 1884, joined Calvary Presbyterian Church. On attaining his majority he associated himself with the Republican party, and he takes an active interest in its politics.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS KEYWORTH, youngest son of Charles Augustus Keyworth and Mary Jane Castor, was born in the city of York Oct. 2, 1874. When a boy he attended the public schools and later the York College. Institute. After leaving school he studied architecture in the office of Arthur P. Rosser, and remained with him until Mr. Rosser's death, and several years with his successor. In the year 1895 he opened an office of his own in his native town, and is practicing his profession with success. When he became of age he affiliated himself with the Republican party, and takes some active interest in furthering its' principles.

Charles A. Keyworth, his father, was born in York Feb. 24, 1837, and died in the same town Feb. 24, 1876. He was educated in the public schools of his native town and at the York County Academy, but the more important part of his education was obtained through self tuition and attrition with people and places. He was a wide and diverse reader of literature, refined tastes and safe business instincts. He succeeded his father in the jewelry business at No. 8 East Market street, York, which he conducted successfully until the time of his death. In addition to his duties in connection with his main occupation, he invested largely and judiciously in real estate, which in after years yielded a comfortable legacy in itself. He was a director in the York County National Bank, in whose affairs he always manifested an active and intelligent interest. He was also president of several building and loan associations, was one of the first promoters of the Peach Bottom railroad and the York and Chanceford turnpike, and sustained important relations to a number of other industries in York and environs. In politics he was a Republican, and served for some time as a member of the school board, and took a very general interest in educational affairs and the moral improvement of the community. He was a member and officially connected with Zion Lutheran Church throughout the greater portion of his life.

Mr. Keyworth was united in marriage with Mary J. Castor, a daughter of Peter Castor, of Philadelphia, and by her had six children, namely: Mary Leah, wife of Dr. Niles H. Shearer, wholesale druggist of York; Besie Anna, who died in 1884, at the age of eighteen years; William A.; Edward Thomas, draughtsman with Hamme & Leber; S. Louise and Charles Augustus.

HARVEY A. GROSS, a representative of the younger contingent of the members of the Bar of York county, is engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of York, and through his ability and close application to business is gaining unmistakable prestige. He is a native son of York county and a scion of one of its sterling pioneer families, the lineage tracing back to stanch German origin, while representatives of the name which he bears were numbered among the first settlers in the old Keystone State.

Joel Gross, his grandfather, passed his entire life in Washington township, this county, having been a wagonmaker by trade and vocation.

Joseph Gross, father of Harvey A., was born and reared in Washington township, and there learned the wagonmaker's trade under the direction of his honored sire, while he secured a liberal education and was for twenty-eight years a successful and popular teacher in the schools of Washington township, where he also was incumbent of the office of justice of the peace for a period of twenty-seven years. He was private in Company E, 200th P. V. I., and lost his left leg at Fort Steadman March 25, 1865. He is now living retired in York, Pa., having attained the age of sixty-two years (1905). His wife, whose maiden name was Maria Walker, was likewise born and reared in York county, being a daughter of John Walker, who was a prominent and influential farmer of Warrington township. Joseph and Maria (Walker) Gross became the parents of seven children, all of whom are living, namely: Olive, wife of David M. Everhart, of York; Anna, who is a graduate nurse; Lewis, baggagemaster of the Dallastown street railway, of Dallastown, this county; Charles W., a clerk in the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. at Altoona; Kate, a teacher in the schools of North York borough; Daisy, a teacher in the York city schools; and Harvey A.

Harvey A. Gross was born on the old homestead farm in Washington township, this county, Jan. 21, 1880, and after completing the curriculum of the public schools he continued his studies in the State Normal School at Kutztown, Berks county, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1898. Thereafter he devoted two years to successful teaching in the public schools of Washington township, and in 1900, he was matriculated in the law department of Dickinson College, at Carlisle, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1903, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and being admitted to the Bar of his native State Jan. 19, 1904. He at once opened an office in the Security Title & Trust Co.'s building, in York, and is meeting with gratifying success in the early period of his professional work. In politics he is an uncompromising advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and his religious views are in harmony with the noble tenets of the Society of Friends, with which the family has been identified for several generations. Fraternally he is identified with the Patriotic Order of Sons of America.

EVANS M. FREE, M. D., of Stewartstown, was born there Jan. 30, 1877, son of Dr. John L. and Annie (Wiley) Free. His paternal grandfather, Peter Free, was a farmer of York county, while his maternal grandfather was David W. Wiley, a native of Harford county, Md., who was of French and English ancestry.

Dr. John L. Free, the father of Evans M., was a prominent figure in southern York county, having been actively engaged in the practice of medicine for about fifty-eight years. He graduated from Washington University in 1847, and, selecting Dillsburg as the field of his professional labor, remained in practice there for five years, at the end of that period locating in Stewartstown, where he remained until his death, which occurred in September, 1904. Dr. Free took an active part in religious work and was one of the most prominent members of the Stewartstown M. E. Church for more than fifty years, becoming well and favorably known throughout the southern part of York county and the border counties of Maryland not only as a skillful physician, but as a man of high Christian character. He was a general practitioner, and was very successful in many complicated cases. The Doctor won the confidence and affection of the community and enjoyed as much practice as he was able to handle. His children were: Howard, who is deceased; Jennie, who married John H. Kurtz; Dr. Evans M.; Nora E., who married James Gerry; and Elizabeth E., who married Prof. Arthur Carver.

Evans M. Free attended the public schools of his native place, and later the Stewartstown Collegiate Institute. His medical studies were prosecuted under his father, who prepared him for entrance to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Baltimore, from which he was graduated in 1899, in the same year beginning practice at Stewartstown. At the death of his father Dr. Free assumed his large practice, and he is regarded as one of the most promising and skillful young physicians in the county. He gives most careful attention to his patients, sparing himself in no way when life or health are in the balance. He is a close student, and has associated himself with the best medical organizations, among them being the York County Medical Society. He takes advantage of every opportunity to learn new methods in the controlling and conquering of disease.

Dr. Evans M. Free married Miss Almeda Edie, of Harford county, Md., in the year 1902. He is an official member of the M. E. Church, and, like his father, takes an active part in the work of that denomination. If Dr. Free has a hobby it is a love of good horses, an appreciation which no modern mode of quick transportation can overcome.

CORNELIUS H. SEITZ, of Glen Rock, was born in September, 1877, in Shrewsbury township, son of Henry and Celinda (Frey) Seitz, and is a descendant of one of the old families of York county. Samuel Seitz, the grandfather, was a farmer of the county, and had the following children: Henry, Edward K., James, Francis, Samuel, George, and two daughters. Henry Seitz, the father of Cornelius, was a butcher of Glen Rock, and is deceased. He had five children: Two daughters who died in infancy, Oscar, Herbert and Cornelius H.

Cornelius H. Seitz attended the public school at Glen Rock, and later took a course of study at the business college of York, graduating in 1894. He then engaged in the carriage business with W. C. Koller, at Glen Rock, being clerk and salesman for six years, when he bought the Glen Rock Novelty Works and began the manufacture of magnifying photograph frames, paper weights and novelties of a similar nature. Mr. Seitz is thoroughly practical and has advanced to the front by his natural adaptability and strict attention to business.

Mr. Seitz has been called upon by his party to fill the offices of town inspector and committee-man, and in these capacities he has served in a most satisfactory manner. Fraternally he is affiliated with Shrewsbury Lodge, No. 423, A.
F. & A. M., the Red Men and the Heptasophs.
He is highly regarded as an enterprising and public-spirited business man.

WILLIAM ISAAC KOLLER, secretary and treasurer of the Rockdale Powder Company, and treasurer and general manager of the Rockdale Railroad Co., was born in the borough of Shrewsbury, York Co., Pa., April 29, 1871, son of John William Koller, farmer, and Isabell Loucks Koller, daughter of Z. K.
Loucks, Sr., of Spring Garden township, York
Co., Pennsylvania.

Mr. Koller’s mother died when he was but two years old, when his grandparents on his mother’s side concluded to have him come and live with them at their country residence in the vicinity of York, known as Loucks’ Mill. From their home he attended the country schools in Manchester and Spring Garden townships until he attained the age of fourteen years, and then took a two years’ academic course at the York County Academy, which was then in charge of Professor Stauffer. This constituted the extent of his education, with the exception of a brief business course at the York Commercial College, where he graduated in 1888.

Being anxious to earn his own livelihood,
he, through the influence of his grandfather,
Mr. Loucks, secured a position as billing clerk in the freight department of the Northern Central Railroad Co. On July 2, 1888, he was tendered the position of messenger at the First National Bank of York, which position he also secured through his grandfather, Mr. Z. K.
Loucks, Sr., who was at the time, and up until his death, president of the bank. He gradually rose from messenger until he was appointed assistant cashier on June 1, 1900, which position he resigned May 2, 1904, to assume active duties as secretary and treasurer of the Rock-dale Powder and Rockdale Railroad companies, which positions he holds at the present time.
He is also a member of the firm of Myers,
Thompson & Koller, general insurance agents.

Mr. Koller is a member of the Royal Fire Company, the York County Historical Society, the Lafayette Club, the Out Door Club, the Country Club, Chosen Knights Commandery,
Knights of Malta, No. 174, and also York
Lodge, No. 213, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is a Lutheran in religious faith, and is a deacon in the Zion Lutheran Church of this city. He is in politics a stanch Republican.

On March 16, 1889, Mr. Koller married Miss Alice Dean Patterson, daughter of the late Mayor John Dean Patterson and Clara (Morris) Patterson, of Harrisburg, Pa., and three children have been born to them: Dorothy Patterson, Alice Patterson and Isabelle Loucks Koller.

Mr. Koller’s antecedents are all of German extraction, both on his father’s and mother’s side, and he is numbered among York’s promising young men.

ANDREW J. HERSHEY, a rising young member of the York county Bar, was born near Menges’ Mill, in Jackson township, Oct. 30, 1877. He is a son of Andrew H. and Mary S.
(Wiest) Hershey.

Andrew M. Hershey, his grandfather, was a prosperous farmer of Jackson township, who married Magdalena Hoke, a member of a leading family of York county. He lived to the advanced age of eighty-seven years.

Andrew H. Hershey, his father, born Nov.
7, 1853, married Mary S. Wiest, a daughter of John Wiest, a prominent citizen of Jackson township, who was married to Elizabeth Maus, of Carroll county, Md., and who lived to the age of eighty-two years. They had seven children, Wilson C., Howard Clinton (deceased), Andrew J., Jacob Paul (deceased), Fostic Charles (deceased), Lloyd Merlin (deceased), and Elizabeth C.

Andrew J. Hershey grew to manhood on his father’s farm, attended the public schools until he was fourteen years of age, and after receiving private instructions from his uncle, Phares H. Hershey, for two years, entered the York County Academy, where he remained two years under the principalship of Prof. George W. Gross. Having acquired a good preliminary education he taught school in his native township for two years, and then began the study of law under the instruction of Latimer &
Schmidt, one of the leading law firms at York.
After two years of diligent study he was admitted to the Bar on Nov. 25, 1901. After his admission to the Bar Mr. Hershey remained in the office of George S. Schmidt, Esq., a prominent corporation lawyer with an extensive practice, and assisted the latter in the prosecution of his business. With these associations he had excellent opportunities of thoroughly fitting himself for his chosen profession. Being a young man of good intellectual endowments he soon acquired a good standing at the York County Bar. He resides in the borough of Spring Grove, but has his law office in York.

Mr. Hershey was married Dec. 26, 1897, to Katie E., daughter of George H. and Elizabeth (Spangler) Myers, a descendant of one of the earliest families of York county. They have one child, Andrew Myers Hershey, born July 18, 1904.

Mr. and Mrs. Hershey are members of Mt. Zion Reformed Congregation of Spring Grove. He is a member of the Ancient Order Knights of the Mystic Chain and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He has been active and prominent in the affairs of Spring Grove, serving for three years as solicitor for the borough, and was one of the organizers of the People’s National Bank, founded in that borough in the year 1906. Being courteous and pleasant in his manner, Mr. Hershey has many friends and has an encouraging patronage in his profession.

LEVI M. BAILEY, M. D. This promising young specialist among the medical fraternity of Hanover is the representative of one of the old families of York county. He was born near Hanover Junction, Aug. 20, 1868, the son of Samuel and Christiana (Markel) Bailey. His paternal grandfather was Henry Bailey, who was also a native of York county, married a Miss Rohrbaugh, by trade was a stone-cutter and mason, and for many years was engaged in the service of the railroad company at Hanover Junction and Glen Rock. The great-grandfather of Levi M. was Henry Bailey. Samuel Bailey, the father, was born in York county in 1836. He married Christiana Markel, of Neiman, York county, who was born in 1838, the daughter of George B. and Susan (Breneman) Markel. During the Civil war Mr. Bailey enlisted in the 101st P. V. I., and served his country faithfully. He was a prominent merchant of York county, conducting a general store at Neiman for forty years, and with his faithful wife is still living on the old homestead, retired from the active duties of his business. To Samuel and Christiana Bailey were born the following children: Emanuel; Amanda J., wife of Frank Lucenbaugh; Levi M.; Rosa, who married Addie Stabler; and Allen G., at home.

The youth of Levi M. Bailey was spent in the village of Neiman, where he attended the public schools, continuing his studies at Glen Rock. At the completion of his period there he began teaching in the country. Acquiring the art of telegraphy at Hanover Junction, he entered the service of the Western Maryland Railway Company as operator, station agent and express agent, continuing for two years. Dr. Bailey then began the preparation for his profession, that of medicine, reading with Dr. John Broadback at Jefferson, Pa. Matriculating at Jefferson Medical College, he graduated from that eminent institution in the class of 1897.

Dr. Bailey began his professional career at Bandanna, York county, where he continued in practice for five years, at the expiration of which period he returned to Philadelphia and took a post-graduate course in the Polyclinic Institute. Dr. Bailey then located at York, where he remained for a time. In the spring of 1902 he settled at Hanover, where in connection with his general practice he has given special attention to the diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. For this special work he received private instruction from Dr. C. A. Veasey, of Philadelphia, especially in connection with the treatment of the eye.

In 1887 Dr. Bailey married Lucy A. Glatsfelder, of Neiman, daughter of Louis K. and Isabel (Kechner) Glatsfelder. Two children have been born to this union, Jennie M. and Harry A. Dr. and Mrs. Bailey are members of Trinity Reformed Church. He is an active member of the York County Medical Society and of the Pennsylvania Medical Association. Among the local fraternal organizations he is a member of Humane Lodge of York, No. 384, I. O. O. F., of the K. of P., the B. P. O. E., and the Patriotic Sons of America. In addition to his skill as a practitician he is popular among the people of Hanover and vicinity, and is winning his way to an extensive and lucrative practice.

HORACE L. CRUMLING, the genial proprietor of the "Hotel Wilson," the leading hostelry at Wrightsville, York county, was born in Hellam township, this county, Sept.
George Crumling, father of Horace L., was a very prominent man in Hellam township. A millwright by trade, he carried on milling there for a number of years and was also one of the leading merchants. He was a man of usefulness in his community, and one whose judgment was frequently asked and his advice taken on matters pertaining to the welfare of the neighborhood. He lived to the age of seventy-one years, sinking into an honored grave, and was interred in the old Kreutz Creek cemetery, in Hellam township. His venerable widow still survives, and resides on the home farm. They had these children: L. R., who is engaged in a mercantile business at Hellam; Horace L., of Wrightsville; George; Benjamin F.; William P.; and five daughters. The oldest son, Emanuel, and two daughters died in infancy. The Crumling family is quite musical.

Horace L. Crumling attended school in his native township until he was about thirteen years old, and then began to assist his father as a clerk in the store, remaining in that capacity for thirteen years. He then began the manufacture of cigars and successfully conducted this industry for twenty-one years. In the meantime, with his brother, L. R. Crumling, he bought the store from his father, and the brothers continued the business for four years. He was also interested in other concerns, and for three years was the general agent of the Great Eastern Map Co., of Elizabeth, N. J. Subsequently he invested in property and built the well-known "Hellam Hotel," which he operated until 1903, when he took charge of the "Hotel Wilson."

Mr. Crumling was married to Charlotte Myers, daughter of George Myers, of Hellam township, and they have one daughter, Miss Carrie May, who is a graduate of the Business College of York. In politics Mr. Crumling is a Republican. He still retains possession of the Hellam property and owns other valuable real estate located at Wrightsville. He is a director of the Wrightsville and Hellam Fire Insurance Co. He is a man who counts his friends by the score, and is one of Wrightsville's leading citizens.

C. J. ECKERT, who is actively engaged in the mercantile business at Pleasant Grove, York county, was born Sept. 27, 1873, in Monroe township, Cumberland county, Pa., son of John and Sarah A. (Tripner) Eckert.

Samuel Eckert, the grandfather of C. J., was a waggonmaker of Silver Spring, Cumberland county, Pa. The children born to him were: Henry, George, William, Andrew, John and five daughters.

John Eckert was born Feb. 13, 1839, in Cumberland county. Shortly after attaining his majority he migrated to Illinois, returning to his native county shortly after the Civil war, where he followed farming. In 1885 he removed to Warrington township, near Wellsville, in York county, where he died May 3, 1899, a well known and respected citizen, and was interred at the Quaker meeting house at Rossville. On Dec. 5, 1867, he was married to Sarah A. Tripner, who was born March 7, 1842, and died Dec. 7, 1892. John Eckert, the father, was a veteran of the Civil war. He enlisted with Company E, 8th Ills. Cav., remaining in the service nine months, when he was honorably discharged.

C. J. Eckert was the only child of his parents. He attended the public schools of Cumberland county until eleven years of age, when his parents removed to York county. He there attended Benedick's school in Warrington township until seventeen years of age. Later attending two terms of summer school at Rossville. When only eighteen years of age, he taught school in Dover township, during the winter of 1891-92. One year was then spent near Chicago, Ill., where he followed carpentering. Returning home in the fall of 1893, he again engaged in teaching in Warrington and Newberry townships, where he gained a reputation as a successful teacher.

On Dec. 31, 1895, Mr. Eckert married Lucy A. Heiges, daughter of Solomon and Salome (Seifert) Heiges, of near Wellsville. Mrs. Eckert's parents still reside in Warrington township.

In July, 1896, Mr. Eckert embarked in the mercantile business on a small scale at his present location. He now has one of the finest stores in the section, handling all lines of general merchandise, usually demanded by the trade, with the exception of groceries. It is interesting to note how this business has grown since being founded. Mr. Eckert deserves considerable credit for the success he has achieved, having fought his way up with little assistance, and he may be considered a self-made man.

Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Eckert: E. Miller, born Sept. 23, 1896; and Wilma Blanche, born Aug. 18, 1902, both of whom are at home. Mr. Eckert is a Republican, but has never taken a very active part in politics.

ARTHUR G. ZIEGLER, principal of the Central school of York, is descended from German ancestors, who were among the early settlers of this country. Mr. Ziegler's grandfather, Samuel, lived in York at the time of the Rebel invasion, and was employed by the Confederates, being paid for his work in Confederate money, and Mr. Ziegler is in possession of a Confederate dollar passed down in this way. Mr. Ziegler's mother was Catharine Getz, a daughter of George Getz, and she was the mother of three children, Herbert S., a printer of York; George P., a florist; and Arthur G.

Arthur Getz Ziegler was born in York, Sept. 11, 1865, and was educated in the public schools, and in the York County Normal school. He began teaching in 1882. One of his earliest experiences in York county was having charge of the Springetsbury Manor school, which is under the patronage of the Grubbs and Coleman. He taught there one year, and another year at Pine Swamp, in 1884 becoming a teacher in the Central school. For four years Mr. Ziegler taught in the Cherry street school building.

Mr. Ziegler belongs to the Brotherhood of America, and to Trinity Reformed Church, in which he was deacon for ten years and assistant superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday-school. He is one of the foremost educators in York, and has taken an active interest in the York County Teachers' Institute.

JAMES EDWARD NICKEL, M. D., a successful young physician and surgeon of York county residing at Wrightsville, was born near York Springs, Adams county, Nov. 7, 1878, son of James and Barbara (Gardner) Nickel. But little of his life was passed in his native locality, as he was but two and a half years of age when his parents removed to York City, where his father is now a prosperous merchant. In the schools of that place he received his preliminary education, graduating in 1897, with second honors. He then, in the fall of 1899, entered Jefferson Medical College, graduating from that famous institution in 1903. His first location for general practice was at Wrightsville, York county. The young physician has won many friends in the quiet, careful attention he gives to his work, and his skill and efficiency are evidenced by the remarkable success that has attended his efforts in difficult cases. Among the older professional men he has many friends, who recognize in him one of the coming physicians, who will shed lustre on their honored and beloved profession. Before entering college he passed a year under the guidance of Dr. D. Benjamin, of Camden, N. J., and by his devotion to the calling he had determined upon, gained the lasting friendship of the able practitioner. Dr. Nickel has the courage of his convictions, and already his success presages a brilliant future.

[Since the above was written Dr. Nickel has gone to the pretty village of Glen Moore, in Chester county, thirty-five miles from Philadelphia, where he has taken up the extensive practice of Dr. A. F. Wagner, who was obliged to go to California for his health.]

CALVIN S. NEWMAN. In the olden days when travel was mainly by stage, the relation between good horses and good hostries was close. The transition from an interest in the one to an interest in the other was easy, and to this day lingers the same association. Calvin S. Newman, concerning whom this brief sketch appears, was for years a successful dealer in horses. He is now the owner and proprietor of the "Mansion House" of Hanover, a well known hotel of that city. And in this latter business, which time-honored custom has associated with the former, he has been equally happy in financial results. Mr. Newman represents one of the old families of York county. He was born in the borough of Hanover on Christmas Day, 1863, son of Jesse D. and Charlotte (Stair) Newman. His grandfather, David Newman, was one of the early settlers of Hanover and married a Miss Forney. Jesse D. Newman, the father of Calvin S., was born in the year 1800 in Hanover and was a farmer for many years. He purchased the well known Barnettz estate. He was a man of unusual force of character, and died in 1880. His wife, who was born in 1825, the daughter of Daniel and Ann (Felty) Stair, survived him until 1894. Two children were born to them, Calvin S., and Charlotte E., the wife of Clyde Payne, of San Francisco, California.
Calvin S. Newman was educated in the public schools of Hanover. In the early years that succeeded his school days he was variously employed, but determining to engage in business for himself and possessing an excellent judgment in respect to horses and mules, he began to trade in them, buying the stock in Illinois, Kentucky and West Virginia, and selling to the farmers and York and Adams counties and in Maryland. This trading he continued actively until 1900, when he has been the owner of the "Mansion House," a valuable property which is located on the Public Square at Hanover, and is conducted on the European plan, a high-class restaurant being connected with the hotel.

Mr. Newman is a member of Patmos Lodge, No. 348, F. & A. M., and of the Knights of the Mystic Chain. In 1900 he married Myrtle Crouse, of Littlestown, Adams county, daughter of the late W. F. Crouse, who was a highly respected citizen of that city.

JOHN A. BAHN, merchant, undertaker and cabinetmaker, a substantial man of Zions View, Conewago township, was born in Hellam township, Jan. 12, 1849, son of Samuel L. and Susan (Tyson) Bahn.

John Bahn, the great-grandfather of our subject, was a distiller of York county, and his son Adam, the grandfather of John A., was born in Hellam township, where he followed farming. He married Catherine Lepart, and they both died in Hellam township, where they were buried. They were the parents of: Samuel L., the father of our subject; Jacob, who died in Hellam township; Adam, who died in the West; Henry, who died in Hellam township; Joseph, living in Dallastown, York township; Cassie, who married Henry Strickler; Polly, who married John Glissinger; and Rachel, who died unmarried.

Samuel L. Bahn, the father of our subject, was born in Hellam township and followed auctioneering and farming in York, Windsor and Manchester townships. Mr. Bahn was the owner of several fine farms one of which he purchased from George Bahn, which consisted of ninety acres, and one in Conewago township, a fine 200-acre tract of land, which he purchased from a Mr. Rupp. This last farm he traded for property in York, and bought a small tract in Manchester township, where he died at the age of seventy-six years, six months, twenty days. He was a consistent member of the Evangelical Church of York, it being largely due to Mr. Bahn's financial support that the church was built. In politics Mr. Bahn was a Republican. He married Susan Tyson, daughter of Daniel and Susan (Forry) Tyson, and she is now residing with our subject. The children born to Samuel L. and Susan (Tyson) Bahn, were as follows: Amanda, who died young; Mary, who married Jacob Snyder, and resides in York; Daniel, who married Eliza Fetrow, and lives at Dallastown; John A.; Samuel; Fredrich, deceased; George, a physician at Spring Grove, married to Miss Zeigler; William, deceased; Elmer, of North York borough, who married Miss Lichtenberger.

John A. Bahn attended the public schools of the township until about the age of fifteen years, and then learned the cabinet making trade with Jacob Buser, in Longstown. He remained there two years, and then went to Manchester, where he followed carpentering for about two years. He found employment with different firms in York county, and spent a short time in Columbia, Lancaster county, then returning home and spending one year at farming. Mr. Bahn married Annie Reeser, daughter of John Reeser, and located at Zions View, where he started his business in a wood shed. After a few years hard work he was able to build a fine place of business, where he has since continued. He also built a fine residence.

The children born to Mr. Bahn and his first wife were: Elmer, who married Emma Jacobs, and follows farming in Manchester township; Alvin, who married Ida Reeser, and lives at home; and George, who died at the age of six months. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Bahn married (second) Elizabeth Wagner Weaver, by whom he had a daughter, Cora, who married John Fetrow, and lives in North York borough.

Mr. Bahn is a Republican, but has never sought office. In the matter of religion he is connected with the Lutheran Church. He is very highly respected throughout the community.

JOSEPH ARNOLD is an active citizen of Hellam township, where his forefathers also were prosperous farmers.

Mr. Arnold is of German ancestry, the first of the family to come to this country being his great-grandfather, who settled in Hellam township, where he spent his life as a farmer. Grandfather Arnold was born and grew up on the farm in Hellam township, now owned by D. S. Detwiler, of Wrightsville. His children were: George, a farmer, who died in Youngstown; John, father of Joseph of this sketch; Peter, a farmer of Hellam township, where he died; Joseph, a farmer, who died in West Manheim township, York county; and Susan, who married Henry Lehman, and both died on the farm now owned by Joseph Arnold.

John Arnold, father of Joseph, was born and brought up on the home farm in Hellam township. He attended the subscription school of the neighborhood, and learned the trade of fence maker, following that calling and farming all his life. Soon after his marriage, he rented a farm in Hellam township, which he worked for a while, and then bought a farm of thirty or forty acres in the neighborhood of Kreutz Creek Church. Later he sold this farm, and lived for a time in West Manheim township, and then returned to Hellam township. His last days were spent in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Kate Druch, near Mill Stone Hill, where he died at the age of eighty. He married Catherine Jacobs, a native of Lower Windsor township, and they had the following children: Leah, who married Jacob Burghart (deceased), of York county; Kate, who married Benjamin Druch (both deceased); Zachariah, who died at the age of twenty-two; John, a raftsman, who married Leah Welty, and who has never been heard from since he left home thirty-two years ago; Susan, who married George Ruby, of Wrightsville; Joseph; Ellen, who married Henry Haas, of Hanover; Henry, who married Mary Unger, and lives in Illinois; and two children who died in infancy. Mr. Arnold was a man well-known and highly esteemed in his community. He was a stanch Republican in politics. He and his wife were members of Kreutz Creek Church, where for many years he was an officer. Mrs. Arnold died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Druch.

Joseph Arnold was born on his father’s farm in Hellam township Nov. 23, 1846. He went to school at Kreutz Creek, Pine Swamp, and in Druch Valley. At the age of seventeen he left school, and learned fence making of his father. He followed that occupation for a year with his father and his brother-in-law, Benjamin Druch, and then began on his own account. For six or seven years he worked the old Lehman farm, and in 1876 bought the land which he still owns in Hellam township. This is in two tracts, one of twenty and one-half acres, the other of twelve acres. He still continues the business of farming and fence making.

Mr. Arnold married, in 1868, Sarah Myers, daughter of George and Lydia (Vocht) Myers, of Hellam township. They have the following children: Frank P., of Hellam township, who married Sally Fahringer; William, of Hellam township, who married Lillie Blessing; Ida, who married Philip Lauer, of Codorus township; Annie, who married John Lehman, of Hellam township; Kerwin, of Hellam township, who married Maud Tracy; Emma, unmarried; and Elmer.

Mr. Arnold has always been a Democrat in politics since casting his first presidential vote for Grant’s opponent. He has served as tax collector, and is now serving his third year as school director. He is a member of the High Mount Evangelical Church.

CHARLES F. BECK, who owns and operates a good tract of land in Springfield township, is a native of that township, born July 2, 1854, son of John F. and Matilda (Leader) Beck.

Mr. Beck attended the schools of Springfield township and the York County Academy. He taught school for fifteen years, first at Falkenstine, next in Dover township, for one term, five terms at Bupp’s school in Springfield township, and last at Paradise, where he remained for eight terms. In 1890 he engaged in farming, purchasing one of his father’s farms in Springfield township, which consists of 118 acres of finely cultivated land, situated about the center of the township, one mile north of Loganville. The house was built in 1884, and the barn, which is one of the most modern in the State, in 1903.

In 1883 Mr. Beck was united in marriage with Olivia C. Howard, daughter of Catherine and Edward Howard, the latter of whom died in 1882, and the former in 1892, both being buried at Loganville. Mr. and Mrs. Beck have had these children: Dora E., now eighteen years of age, is teaching her second term of school; and Edna I., Edgar R., Ralph G., Naomi E. and Catherine M. are all at home. When Catherine M. was a little light-haired, blue-eyed and delicately formed child of one year and eleven months, she was kidnapped from Oct. 17 to 19, 1902. No sooner was the alarm given than kind and sympathetic hearts, and busy minds, hands and feet were at work to find her. Woods, fields and lanes were combed by hundreds of men, women and children; the city police vainly sought a clue. After two long nights and nearly two full days she was found by the Hartman boys in a fence corner by the woodsides, about a mile from home, in an unconscious condition—a place that had been searched again and again, making her return as mysterious as her disappearance. The kidnapping greatly excited the people of Springfield township, and it probably would have fared badly with the guilty party or parties, had they been caught.

In politics Mr. Beck is a Republican, being of the minority party; he has served on the election board, and on the school board for two terms, and lacked but one vote of being re-elected for a third term. He is a member of the Lutheran Church of Paradise, in which he has held at different times the offices of elder and deacon. He is trustee of the parsonage fund, and church treasurer of both Lutheran and Reformed Congregations, and has been for a number of years president of the Sunday school. Mr. Beck keeps well abreast of the times. He wrote different articles on agricultural topics for Farmers' Institutes. One of these, entitled "The Dairy Farm," was published by the State Department of Agriculture. He is justly regarded as a very important citizen of his part of the county, being honorable and trustworthy, intelligent and public-spirited.

CHARLES H. STARK, a prominent and enterprising business man of York, is the proprietor of the well-known "Stark Hotel" of that city. His birth occurred in Manchester borough, York county, June 1, 1856, and he is a son of John Stark.

John Stark was born in Germany, but came to America when a young man. The original way of spelling was Stork, but when he enlisted in the army an "a" was made in the name in place of the "o," by the enlistment officers, and the family have spelled the name Stark ever since. John Stark enlisted in Company B, 4th Maryland V. I., and served over three years, participating in all the important battles, among which may be mentioned the engagement at Gettysburg. Mr. Stark's death, which occurred in 1870, in Baltimore county, Md., was caused by the falling of an ore bank. He married Rachel Lefevre, a descendant of a very old and prominent family, and the daughter of John Lefevre. She died in 1903, the mother of the following children: John T., who married Ella Motter, of York; Barbara Catherine, born April 15, 1848, who died June 11, 1852; Daniel, born Aug. 18, 1851, who died Aug. 25, 1851; Mary Jane, born Aug. 6, 1852; Killian, born Nov. 22, 1854, who died Aug. 5, 1855; Charles Henry, born June 1, 1856; Florence, born June 7, 1858; and Emma, born Sept. 27, 1860.

Charles Henry Stark attended the common schools of York until sixteen years of age, when he became employed in a sash factory. Later he was engaged in the wire cloth factory at York, being a skilled mechanic, and in 1895 embarked in the hotel business in York. In 1900 he purchased his present place, at Nos. 517-519 South George street, the well-known "Stark Hotel," which he has successfully conducted ever since. Mr. Stark is very popular in York.

Mr. Stark married Julia Hirt, who died aged forty years, leaving children as follows: Mary, Annie, Walter, Virginia and Catherine. In 1900 Mr. Stark was united in marriage with Miss Emma Martin, daughter of Charles Martin, deceased.

ISAAC R. McCLEARY, who resides on a well-located tract of land in Lower Chanceford township, York county, was born on the old Hugh Ross farm near Chanceford Church, Aug. 17, 1851, son of Isaac and Susan (Pitts) McCleary.

Isaac McCleary, father of Isaac R., was born in York county, in 1813, and received a common school education. He was reared to the life of an agriculturist, and after marriage located on the Gregg farm near Bridgeton. He rented a farm of the Rosses, which he occupied for several years and then bought 113 acres in the same locality, upon which he passed the remainder of his life. Although a member of no religious denomination, he attended the M. E. Church. Before the war he was a Democrat, but after that great struggle became a Republican. He married Susan Pitts, who died in 1884, the mother of the following children: (1) William, deceased, was a soldier of the 87th P. V. I., in which regiment he enlisted for three years service, his time expiring before his term of service had closed. He married Elizabeth Crowell. (2) Elizabeth married Elwood Skelton, of York. (3) Sally married Henry Snyder, of York. (4) Lydia is deceased. (5) Wesley is deceased. (6) Jennie, who married John Sheets, died in Dallastown. (7) Martha is deceased. (8) Harriet married Uriah Lyman, of Lancaster, Pa. (9) Isaac R.

Isaac R. McCleary has lived on his present farm since boyhood. He was educated in the Spunk Hill school, by James Fulton, Robert Milner and others, and after completing his education worked with his father on the home farm until after marriage. He was married in Lower Chanceford township, March 25, 1873, to Miss Susan J. Shaub, daughter of John and Eliza (Bair) Shaub. Mrs. Shaub was an aunt of the vice-president of the Historical Society, Robert Bair. After marriage Mr. McCleary removed to Airville and worked for Joseph Pierce for four years, and then went to Centerville, where he farmed tobacco for William Colvin one year. He then rented the farm belonging to Samuel Manifold, who is now sheriff, and there he continued for five years, at the end of this time purchasing the home farm, where he has been situated ever since, from his father. The success which has attended Mr. McCleary's agricultural operations has made him an authority in the neighborhood, and the methods he pursues are considered the very best. He is very enterprising and progressive, and he wields a wide influence all through the vicinity.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. McCleary have been as follows: John, of Paulsboro, N. J., who married Margaret McPherson; Oliver, of York, who married Elizabeth McPherson; Chester, of York, who married Miss Carrie Trout; Anne, at home; Robert B., of Indiana Harbor, near Chicago, Ills.; Cora, Mrs. Howard Stifler, of York; Finn, of York; Harry, of York, who married Elsie Haar; Wallace, at home; Mary, at home; Margaret, also at home; Sarah; and one child that died in infancy.

Nelson A. Krout, a prosperous and substantial farmer of Springfield township, York county, engaged in operating his fine 135-acre farm, was born in that township, Jan. 19, 1853, son of John M. Krout and grandson of John Krout, who was a farmer of Springfield township, where he married a Mrs. Goodling. Both died in Springfield township, and are buried at Shuster's Church. Their children were: William; Ephraim; Daniel; Zacharias; John M.; Caroline, who married Samuel Hollinger, and Lydia, who married William Sneigh.

John M. Krout, father of our subject, was born in the same township, and assisted his father until the latter's death, when he took the homestead. He married (first) Sarah Fluhelbaugh, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Strayer) Fluhelbaugh, and she died in 1857, and was buried at Shuster's Church. Mr. Krout married (second) Lydia Myers, daughter of John Myers, of Codorus township. Mr. Krout died at the age of fifty-four years, and is buried at Shuster's Church. By his first marriage his children were: Nelson A., our subject; and Albert, who died aged two years. To Mr. Krout and his second wife were born: Julia, a resident of Springfield township; Frances, who married J. L. Glatfelter, and is also living in Springfield township; Jacob, who married Minnie Bortner, and lives in Springfield township; and Elizabeth, who died aged twenty years.

Nelson A. Krout attended the Goodling school until nineteen years old, and remained at home with his father until marriage. He married Mary A. Strayer, daughter of Henry and Louise (Gotwalt) Strayer, of Springfield township, and after marriage they located on the homestead until 1890, when Mr. Krout came to his present farm. This farm, before Mr. Krout's purchase, belonged to his father-in-law, and consists of 135 acres of well cultivated, fertile land, conveniently located and highly improved with an excellent set of buildings. To Mr. and Mrs. Krout the following children have been born: Gertrude, wife of George H. Keeley, lives in Springfield township; Amanda, the wife of Michael Henry, lives in North Hopewell township; John is assisting his father on the farm; Curvin is learning the carpenter's trade; Robert Howe; and Annie and Edna, are at home.

In politics Mr. Krout is a Democrat, and is a member of the school board, and has served two terms as township assessor and as judge of election and inspector. He is a director in the Southern Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of York, which is one of the strongest in the State, and is a director of the Horse Thief Detection Co.
Mr. Krout has for the past several years engaged in the sale of cream separators, being the agent for his district of several large manufacturing companies.

WILLIAM S. BROSE, a prominent farmer and large landowner of Railroad borough, Shrewsbury township, York Co., Pa., was born in Hopewell township, York county, in 1860, a son of Adam Brose and a grandson of Philip Brose, formerly a substantial farmer in Hopewell township. The children of Philip Brose, besides Adam, were: Joseph, Henry,
David, Katie, Elizabeth and Susan.

Adam Brose, father of William S., was born in Hopewell township, where he was educated in the common schools. He owned a farm of eighty-seven acres in Hopewell township, where he engaged in farming until his untimely death. In May, 1858, he mar-rried Catherine Wilmiller, who was a daughter of John Wilmiller. He died, aged sixty-six years, 1890. Both she and her husband were buried at the Sadler Church, in their native township. They were good Christian people, who lived quiet, sober, virtuous lives. They were members of the Reformed Church. Their children were: John and William S. John married Annie M. Keeney and owns the old homestead.

William S. Brose was educated in the township schools, attending until twenty-one.
His father died when he was two years old, so he was obliged to make his own way in the world with little assistance. He worked for his mother until he was twenty-four years old, and then for neighboring farmers, being employed by the day for about five years. Having saved his money, he invested it in 1889 in a fine farm of seventy-four acres, which he bought of James Markel, in Railroad borough. Later he purchased thirty-seven acres of the estate of Dr. Gery, in Shrewsbury township, adjoining his other property, and afterward added another tract, which he bought of Ferdinand Helb. Mr. Brose now owns 120 acres of very valuable land, on which he has erected fine buildings. He has much interest in his home and devotes all his attention to farming.

In 1890 Mr. Brose was married to Emma J. Miller, a daughter of Edwell and Mary B.
(Folkomer) Miller. They have had children as follows: Minnie J., Gerry, Myrtle, Zerva, Rhoda, Annetia, and Spurgeon and Alvin,
both of the latter being deceased.

In politics Mr. Brose is a Democrat, and has served his borough in the office of councilman and as judge of election. He is one of the stockholders in the Shrewsbury Furniture Factory. In religion he is a member of the Reformed Church, and he is one of its deacons.

JOHN HAMM, one of York county’s representative citizens, engaged in agricultural pursuits on his fine farm in North Codorus township, was born in Adams county, Pa., July 5, 1845, son of George Hamm. His grandfather was a farmer of York county, where he died, being buried at Strayer’s Church, in Dover township. He married Miss Magdalena Spahr, and they had children,
Daniel and George.

George Hamm was born in York county, but removed to Adams county, where he engaged in farming. Later in life he returned to York county, and, locating in North Codorus township, spent the remainder of his life there.
He died in that township Dec. 7, 1877, aged sixty-six years, and was buried at Strayer’s Church, in Dover township. George Hamm married Sarah Strayer, a member of one of York county’s oldest families, who died Feb.
9, 1882, aged sixty-eight years, and they had these children: Jacob, of Seven Valley: Eliza, the wife of Jacob Klinedinst, living near York
New Salem; Catherine, the wife of Granville Glatfelter; John, our subject; Henry: Daniel, who married Mary Henry; and William, of York.

John Hamm received a common-school education in North Codorus township, having come from Adams county with his father when he was six years old. He married Annie Mary Hess, daughter of Samuel Hess, deceased, who was a prominent farmer in Springfield township. Mr. Hamm purchased his father’s farm of 161 acres and also bought fourteen acres adjoining, made extensive improvements, erected modern, substantial buildings, and now has one of the finest farms of his township. Beside his fine property in North Codorus township Mr. Hamm is the owner of a fine piece of land consisting of 120 acres, in Springfield township.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamm have these children;
Clayton, who attends a school in Brooklyn, N.
Y., studying to become an electrical engineer;
Harry, at home; Spencer, a stenographer in Philadelphia; and Robert, Charles and Ellen, all at home. In politics Mr. Hamm is a Republican. He is a member of the Reformed Church.

ANDREW STROHLE, who is well known to the residents of York as the proprietor of the "Grape Hotel," was born in Kleinerslingen, Göppingen, Wurtemberg, Germany, July 20, 1851, son of Andrew and Rosie (Gemmenheim) Strohle, both natives of Germany, where the former was employed in a paper mill. They had two children, our subject and a daughter who resides in Germany. Mr. Strohle's father and mother both died in their native country.

Mr. Strohle attended the public schools of the Fatherland until fourteen years of age, and then learned the locksmith's trade at which he served three years, later learning the machinist's trade which he followed until 1881, when he came to the United States. He sailed from Antwerp to New York, on the SS. "Switzerland," and after landing in this country came straight to Lancaster, where he remained a short time and then located in York, and secured work in the E. G. Smyser Co. plant, where he remained until 1891. He then engaged in the hotel business at the old Peach Bottom station, remaining until 1894, when he bought the hotel he conducts at present, the "Grape," from George Heckler. Mr. Strohle proves to be a genial host, and his hotel is one of the finest in the city.

Andrew Strohle was married in Germany to Lovina Schuler, born Sept. 1, 1852, daughter of Jacob and Maria Schuler, who died in their native country, Mrs.. Strohle being the only member of the family to come to the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Strohle are members of the Christ Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Democrat. Fraternally he belongs to the Heptasophis. He also belongs to the Laurel Fire Department of which he has been a member for seven years, and is also connected with the Firemen's Relief Association.

One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Strohle, Minnie, now the wife of William Kuhlkopf.

LEVI W. HENRY is successfully engaged in farming in Chanceford township, cultivating a fine sixty-eight-acre farm located about three miles south of Brogueville. He was born June 18, 1861, on an island in the Susquehanna river which is part of Lancaster county, son of Frederick Henry.

Mr. Henry obtained a country school education, and spent the greater part of his boyhood and young manhood at Shenks, where he attended school in the winter, assisting his father, and in the summer months hired out among the farmers. Mr. Henry was very industrious, and success crowned his efforts. After his marriage he and his wife located in Chanceford township, and for two years Mr. Henry worked out by the day. He then rented a small twenty-one-acre farm in Chanceford township on which he remained for two years. They then removed to Lower Chanceford, where he was employed on the Michener farm until it was sold, when he removed to Peach Bottom townships and located on one of the Sample Fulton farms, for five years. He then spent five years farming one of the James C. Fulton farms, in Chanceford township, and then bought the farm upon which he now resides. It is situated about three miles south of Brogueville, and is devoted to farming and tobacco raising.

Mr. Henry's home, a very interesting old mansion known as the old Wilson homestead, was built upward of eighty years ago. It was first built of unburnt brick, of various sizes, some being as heavy as ten pounds, while others only weighed about six pounds, and the clay for which was secured from the farm by the builder, one of the Wilsons. It was a two-story house, built on sound rock, the kitchen being built on at the rear, and a large chimney, measuring over four feet across, graced the rear. Inside there is an old fireplace in the kitchen, and the only way to reach the upstairs rooms is through the kitchen, the stairs being built there. The outside was weatherboarded, and the house as it stands to-day is one of the most substantial in the township; Mr. Henry remodeled it in the summer of 1903.

Mr. Henry's religious connection is with the Methodist Church. He joined Bethel M. E. Church in 1890, later becoming a member of the M. P. Church at Peach Bottom, and since locating in Chanceford township he has been attending the Chanceford Presbyterian Church, in Lower Chanceford. In politics he is a Republican, but he has never accepted office.

On Jan. 26, 1888, Mr. Henry married
Maggie Smith Wallace, who was born in Hopewell township, daughter of William and Mary (Heaps) Wallace. Mr. Wallace has been a merchant, farmer and Sawyer, and still resides in Hopewell township. To Mr. and Mrs. Henry have been born children as follows: Ellwood, Ralph, Walter and Ethel Mary. Both as a farmer and a citizen Mr. Henry is held in high esteem, and he is considered one of the substantial, representative men of Chanceford township.

JACOB S. RUPERT was born near Marietta, Lancaster county, in 1864. The family formerly lived in York county, and its members have for the most part been identified with that section. The paternal grandfather, Jacob Rupert, was a native of York county, and was a lifelong farmer there, near Strines-town, where he died and where his remains are buried. He and his wife had the following children: Andrew, who is living in Illinois; Lewis, who died in North York borough; George, who died in Kansas; Mrs. Amanda Bond, living in Indiana; Jacob, of York City; and William.

William Rupert, father of Jacob S., was likewise born in York county, and there received his education. On reaching manhood he went to Lancaster county, and for a number of years followed farming there, being also engaged for some time in the ore mines near Silver Springs, although this line of work he discontinued after his marriage. He died near Silver Springs, and is buried there. His wife, to whom he was united in 1856, was formerly Elizabeth Sanders, daughter of Ezra and Elizabeth Sanders, of Lancaster county, and she is buried at Graybill’s Church. In their religious faith both were Dunkards. Their children were: Ezra, a resident of Hummelstown, Dauphin county; Amos, living in Iowa; Mrs. Rupp, of Lancaster, Pa.; Jacob S.: and William, who went to Kentucky, and has not been heard from since.

Jacob S. Rupert was educated first in the schools of Lancaster county, and then in Sprin-getsbury township, York county, attending until he was fourteen. He was then put out to work for different farmers, and as he grew older he continued at similar employment until he had accumulated enough to start for himself. In 1886 he was married to Miss Annie Hake, daughter of Harry and Catherine Hake, of York county, and member of an old family of Manchester township. After marriage the young couple settled down on a farm at Stony Brook. About 1891 Mr. Rupert moved to Manchester township and took a position with the Manchester Shale Brick Company, as chief brick burner, and there he has been engaged ever since, being one of that company’s most trusted and reliable employees. In politics he is a Republican, and has done considerable party service; he has been both township assessor and election board inspector. The married life of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert has been blessed by the birth of three daughters, Mabel, Carrie and Nora.

CHESTER K. WENTZ, a retired farmer living at Glenville, was born in Manheim township, Jan. 8, 1858, and is descended from one of the oldest families of that vicinity, the first settler of the name emigrating to Pennsylvania from Germany.

John B. Wentz, great-grandfather of Chester K., built the well-known tannery, in Manheim township, which still bears his name. He took up about 500 acres of land along the line of the Western Maryland Railroad, where it was all woodland and lived there until his death.

Jesse Wentz learned the tanning business from his father and after the latter’s death carried on the tannery alone very successfully. He traveled a great deal for that day, usually on horseback, crossing the Alleghany mountains in that way. He was a shrewd businessman and prospered greatly, and was very popular through the county. He married a Miss Hinkel, by whom he had four children, John, Sarah, Margaret and Lemanda. Jesse Wentz and his wife are both buried in Manheim township.

John Wentz was born in Manheim township, and on reaching manhood continued for a time the tanning business so well established by his father and grandfather. He bought the tannery from his father, and ran it for five years, after which he bought his grandfather’s farm and worked it until his death, at the age of sixty-one years. His wife was Lydia H. Kline, daughter of John and Mary (Haines) Kline, of Frederick county, Md. They had issue as follows: Chester K.; Laura, Mrs. G. E. M. Whesheim, of Maple Grove, Md.; El- mira J., wife of J. E. Shearer, of Manheim.
township: Lettie V., who married J. A. Snyder, owner of the farm in Manheim township, formerly the property of his wife’s great-grandfather, on which they reside; Amos A., deceased, who married Alice E. Armstrong; and Charles A., who died when eight years old.

Chester K. Wentz received his education in the public schools. At eighteen he completed his studies, and from that time till he was twenty-five he worked with his father. At that age he married but continued to work at home for five years, after which he began farming on his own account. He bought one of his father’s farms in Manheim township, and operated it eleven years. In 1902 he bought his present home at Glenville, and began working with the Hanover Produce Company, of that place, having full charge of the office and the business in general, until his health failed and since then he has lived in retirement.

Mr. Wentz married, in 1883, Miss Albright, daughter of John R. and Julia (Dubs) Albright, and three daughters have been born to them, Bertha, Jennie and Elvia. Mr. Wentz is a member of the “Stone Church” of the Reformed Lutheran denomination, and is an active worker in it. In politics he is a Democrat and while living in Manheim township served as director of the school board for five years.

H. C. SPAHR, a farmer of York county, who is actively engaged in the cultivation of his ninety-acre tract in Dover township, near Davidsburg, was born in 1852, in Washington township, son of H. M. and Rebecca (Silkniter) Spahr.

William Spahr, grandfather of H. C., settled in Washington township, where he bought a tract of land and engaged in farming until a few years prior to his death, when he retired from active life. He died in 1882, and was interred in Washington township. The children born to him and his wife were: William, Cornelius, H. M., George, Caroline Bentz, Mrs. Kate Smith and Mrs. Elizabeth Hershey.

H. M. Spahr, father of our subject, was born in 1828 in Washington township, and received a common school education, working on his father’s farm until after his marriage. He went to farming in Dover township, where he bought a farm near Davidsburg; the house which stands upon the farm was built by John and Mary Knisley July 28, 1776. There he followed farming for a number of years, and then moved to Davidsburg, where he lived a retired life and died at the age of seventy-five years. In 1848 Mr. Spahr married Rebecca Silkniter, daughter of Jacob and Catherine Silkniter, of Dover township. Mrs. Spahr died at the age of seventy-three, and she and her husband are buried at Strayer’s Church in Dover township. Their children were as follows: M. L., a prosperous farmer living near Davidsburg, Dover township, married Sarah Conn; H. C.; Catherine married George Rudisill and lives in Dover township; and William W., born in 1860, in Dover township, resides on the old homestead in Dover township, and is married to Elvina Keller, daughter of Christian and Maria (Jacobs) Keller, of Dover township.

H. C. Spahr was brought to Dover township when two years of age. He attended the township schools until twenty-one years old, assisting his father on the farm. In 1884 he married Emma Keller, a sister of Mr. Spahr’s brother’s wife, whose parents were prosperous farmers of Dover township. After marriage Mr. Spahr located on the farm which he now occupies, which consists of ninety acres of fine farm land near Davidsburg, the land formerly belonging to Mr. Spahr’s father, of whom he purchased it. The children born to H. C. and Emma Spahr are as follows: Annie B., Rosa A., Henry C., Earl William, John C. and Otto E., all at home; and C. Ervin, a very bright young man, who is teaching school in Dover township, having attended the Y. C. N. of the York County Academy.

In politics Mr. Spahr is a Democrat, and is now efficiently filling the position of township clerk. In the Lutheran Church, of which he is a consistent and valued member, he has served as deacon. Mr. Spahr is a man who commands the respect of his neighbors, and has a large circle of warm personal friends. The family is one of high standing in the community.

WILLIAM SHAFFER, a farmer of Windsor township, York county, was born in York township, July 8, 1852, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Hovis) Shaffer.

Jacob Shaffer, the paternal grandfather, owned a small farm in Codorus township. He died quite early in life, and his widow married Jacob Miller, while her children were still young.
Jacob Shaffer, Jr., was born on the Codorus farm in 1820; as he grew older he worked as a day laborer, and then acquired a farm in York township where he passed his life. He married Miss Elizabeth Hovis, born in Springfield township. His death occurred in 1866, and hers in 1894. They were the parents of ten children, two of whom died young, namely: Jacob, deceased; Josiah; Barbara, Mrs. Samuel Ryder; Sarah; Malvina; Lucy, Mrs. Henry Grothe; Elizabeth, Mrs. Albert Geisleman; William; Caroline, Mrs. Jeremiah Lentz; and Emanuel, of York county, who married Miss Ida Stine.

William Shaffer was sent to the township schools until he was sixteen years of age, although for the last two years of that time he was really the head of the family, as his father had died. He never enjoyed school and would always rather work on the farm than go. So he stayed on with his widowed mother and managed the farm. In 1882 he bought his present farm, originally a tract of fifty-one acres, to which he has added until he now possesses ninety-six acres. He has made many improvements on the place, and is a progressive and up-to-date farmer, with a most beautiful home.

Mr. Shaffer was married, in 1881, to Miss Rachel Dietz, daughter of Jacob Dietz, of Springettsbury township, and they are the parents of two children, Mazie D., and Chauncey W. In politics Mr. Shaffer is a Democrat, and in religion he has been, since the age of nineteen, a member of the Lutheran Church. He has made his own way in the world by honest toil and perseverance, and has gained the respect of the entire community.

MYRON S. SULLIVAN, of York, is a descendant of Cornelius Sullivan, who was born in 1749, and emigrated from Ireland to the Province of Maryland. He enlisted in the Maryland Line, from Frederick county, Md., Dec. 25, 1776, and served gallantly throughout the Revolutionary war. After the war he located near Manchester, Carroll Co., Md., where he died, being buried in Kreider's churchyard. He was married, but the number of children born to him and his wife is not known to a certainty, though it is thought that there were three, Jacob, Daniel and Cornelius by name.

Jacob Sullivan married a Miss Hoffman, and they had ten children, one of whom, Jacob (2), married Margaret Ann King, whose grandmother was a sister of Capt. John Bear, a commander in the Pennsylvania Line during the Revolutionary war, and whose other sister married the father of Daniel Boone, the celebrated Kentucky pioneer. Jacob Sullivan (2), was the father of: Nicholas King; Jesse Clay; Theodore Jacob; Amos G.; Albert C.; two daughters who died in infancy; and Mary E., who married James St. Clair, a Kentuckian, who died in Carson City, Nev., his wife dying a few years later at her father's home in Peru, Indiana.

Jacob Sullivan (2) had learned the carriage-making business in Maryland with A. Caylor, and had conducted a business there, and upon removing to Peru, Ind., went into business at that place with his son, Theodore Jacob, until his death, which occurred in 1887, when he was aged seventy-eight years, six days. The business was merged into what is now known as the Sullivan & Eagle Carriage Co., Peru.

Nicholas King Sullivan was born at Wakefield, Md., Jan. 28, 1834, and learned carriage-building with his father, succeeding to the business at Wakefield. Here he remained until 1865, when he removed to Peru, Ind. After a stay of only two years there, however, he removed to Baltimore, Md., and in 1879 came to York, Pa., where he made his home and engaged in the blacksmith's trade, retiring some years ago. The family affiliated with the Presbyterian Church. In 1862 Mr. Sullivan married Miss Mary Elizabeth Lambert, daughter of Jesse and Julia (Mitten) Lambert, of New Windsor, Carroll Co., Md., and they became the parents of the following children: Jessie Correna, who married S. J. Greenwalt, of York; Myron Seward; Elsie Alma, at home; Julia E., the widow of William J. Nes, of North Beaver street; Sterling St. Clair; Homer DeWitt; and one child who died in infancy.

Myron Seward Sullivan, of the baking firm of Sullivan Bros., was born in Wakefield, Md., Nov. 20, 1865, and received his education in the public schools. At the age of thirteen years he started to learn the baking business with Herman Sauppe, of York. He worked at the trade as journeyman until 1899, when the present firm of Sullivan Bros. was formed, and the business established on South George street, where they remained six months. They then removed to Penn street, for one year, and thence to Philadelphia street, where they re-Mained two years. Their next removal was to South Water street, their present location being at Nos. 222-226, which place they purchased of Amos E. Reiker, with whom they were formerly employed. Here they have built up a flourishing trade and represent the best in their line of business. They are among the most active young business men of York.

In 1885 Myron S. Sullivan married Sallie C. Angell, of Taneytown, Md., and they have four children: Mearl Irwin died in childhood; James Walter died in childhood; William Ellsworth and Margaret Irene are at home.

Sterling St. Clair Sullivan is engaged with his brother Myron Seward in the baking business of Sullivan Bros. He was born in Priceville, Baltimore Co., Md., July 20, 1876, and received his education in the public schools of York. At the age of twelve years he became a carrier for the York Gazette, being one of that paper’s first carriers. When fourteen years old he secured a position at Penn’ Photograpn Gallery as general utility boy, and soon after worked as office boy. He was then employed by the York Daily, as carrier, and then went to learn the baking business with his brother. He was employed by Fox & Bro. prior to the establishment of the present firm of Sullivan Brothers.

In religion Mr. Sullivan is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is a member of York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. E.

JOHN NESS, who is actively engaged in working his farm in Manchester township, located along the Board road, about one and one-half miles north of York, was born June 7, 1803, in West Manchester township, son of Noah and Sarah (Hoke) Ness.

Jacob Ness, great-grandfather of John, was born in Germany, and came to America, settling in Shrewsbury township, York county, Pa., where he learned the wagonmaking trade and later went to farming. To himself and wife these children were born: Jacob, Jr., was a farmer of Ohio, where he died; Daniel died in Springfield township; Hannah died in York township; Elizabeth married Philip Hilderbrand and died in Springfield township; Susan married Caspar Hilderbrand, and died in the same township; Christian died in York; Polly died in Springfield township; John died in Springfield township; Mathias; and Joseph followed a coopering business.

Mathias Ness was born Feb. 24, 1801, in Shrewsbury township, and learned the carpenter’s trade with a Mr. Swartz, following that occupation for about fifteen years. He married Elizabeth Myers, who was born Aug. 27, 1804, and died April 23, 1873, daughter of Christian and Annie (Eby) Myers, of Lancaster. After his marriage Mr. Ness located in Springfield township, and later went to West Manchester township, where he bought a tract of 200 acres of land, located about three miles southwest of York, where he died Aug. 23, 1879, and both he and his wife are buried at Bear’s Meeting House in West Manchester township.

Noah Ness, son of Mathias, was born in West Manchester township, and received a common school education. He worked at farming for his father, and later took his father's farm. In 1900 he went to York, where he engaged in the ice business from 1900 to 1903, and then engaged in the feed business, on Belvidere street. In 1858 Mr. Ness married Sarah Hoke, who was born in West Manchester township, daughter of Herman and Elizabeth (Free) Hoke. Her death occurred in 1895 and she was buried at Green Mount cemetery. The children born to this couple were: Adam, who married Millie Shaeffer, is engaged in the ice business and lives on King street, York; Annie married William Kauffman, a farmer of Springetsbury township; John; Lucy married Joseph Sprenkle, and lives in York; Sallie died in infancy, and was buried at Bear’s Meeting House in West Manchester township; Amanda died in infancy, and was buried in West Manchester township; Noah, Jr., married Annie Altland, and is engaged in the milk business in York; Matilda married L. Lewis, an employee of the York Manufacturing Co.; Emma married Henry W. Christ, and she died in York, and was buried at the Green Mount cemetery; Thomas married Sadie Landers, and lives in York; and Rebecca married Clayton Miller, who is in the lime and stone business in Jackson township.

John Ness attended the public schools of West Manchester township, and remained at home with his father on the farm until his marriage which occurred in the year of 1887. He married Sarah A. Brillhart, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Yost) Brillhart, and after his marriage located where he now resides. He has built a fine home about one and one-half miles north of York along the Board road, and is considered one of Manchester township's most prosperous farmer citizens. These children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ness: Herman B., who attends school in York; and Charles B., at home. Mr. Ness is a devout member of the German Baptist Church, having been connected with that religious organization since 1892.

PETER A. NAGLE, of Washington township, York county, was born in 1851, in Baltimore, Md., son of Conrad and Maria (Hoefling) Nagle.

Conrad Nagle was born in Germany where he attended school and learned the shoemaking trade. When he emigrated to America he landed in Baltimore, Md., in 1848, and lived in that city until 1859, when he removed to New Oxford, Adams Co., Pa., and there followed his trade until his death. He was a good mechanic, and was a man who commanded the respect of all who knew him. He died in 1889, at the age of sixty-four years. He married Maria Hoefling, who died aged seventy-three years, and both are buried at the New Oxford cemetery, in Adams county. They had these children: Conrad H., J. B., Elizabeth, Margaret and Peter A.

Peter A. Nagle was educated in the schools of Baltimore and New Oxford until he was fifteen years old, and then he learned the shoemaking trade under his father, which he followed off and on until 1892. In 1871 he enlisted in the United States army, and became a member of Company K, 1st United States Artillery, and remained in the service three months and seventeen days. His abbreviated time was on account of an accident which happened to him at Fort Riley, Kans., he being thrown from a horse he was riding to water. His accident was a very serious one, his skull being fractured, and he was confined in a hospital for four weeks, and still feels some effects of it. The government gives him a liberal pension. After he recovered enough to engage in any travel he made a visit to Ohio, where he remained a year, and then returned to Adams county. From late in 1872 until 1884 he continued to work at his trade, and then bought a tract of six acres of land from Jacob Smith, in Washington township, and settled on it. To that he later added twenty-three acres which he bought of M. L. Strayer. This land he has improved and built upon, and he is very much interested in his farming operations. He has made a scientific study of agriculture and frequently lectures at the Farmers' Institutes held in York. He has a well-cultivated little farm and makes a specialty of fruit.

Mr. Nagle married Mary Howell, a daughter of Benjamin and Amanda (Lockman) Howell. The Howells were residents of New Oxford, and were members of the Society of Friends. Mrs. Nagle died in 1891, and was buried at the Red Run Church in Washington township. They had these children: Clayton, who is employed in York; Isaac Newton, who is employed in the same works as his brother; Bessie, the wife of Calvin Pentz, of York; Helen, wife of William Rauhouser, of York; and James M., at home. Mr. Nagle was married (second) to Maria Bair. In politics Mr. Nagle is a stanch Republican. He is a very intelligent man, one who keeps thoroughly informed concerning all matters of public interest and holds very decided opinions on political and social economy, and religion. His especial comfort and consolation in his later years, and enfeebled health, are his wife and step-daughter, Elsie Bair, who bestow upon him more than ordinary kindness and care.

DANIEL J. DEHOFF, a prosperous cigar manufacturer, is one of the self-made citizens of Hellam township. From small beginnings, with few advantages, and in the face of many discouragements, he has made his way to a position of comfort and influence.

The Dehoff family came originally from France, but little is known of their history before coming to this country. Grandfather John Dehoff was a farmer all his life, and is known to have died in Windsor township, near the Hellam township line. He had a family of sixteen children. His brother, Jacob, was also a farmer, and settled in the Peach Bottom district.

George Dehoff, father of Daniel J., was born in York county, and spent much of his life, early and late, in Hellam township. After his marriage, to Catherine Dietz, he lived part of the time in York county, and part of the time in Adams county, engaged in farming. His last years were spent in Hellam township, where he died in October, 1897. His wife died in 1894. They were both members of the Reformed Church. They had the following children: Anna, who is Mrs. Morris McQuirk, of York; Lizzie, who is Mrs. Frederick Highland, of Hellam township; George, who lives in York; Daniel J., who is mentioned below; William, who lives in Hellam township; Samuel, who lives in Lancaster county; Emery, who lives in Hellam township; Clifton, who lives in York; Oliver and Charles, deceased; and Catherine, who is Mrs. Wesley Buley, of Hellam township.

Daniel J. Dehoff was born April 15, 1866, in Adams county, Pa., but grew up in Hellam, where he attended the public schools. He was the oldest boy, and his father was poor, so that he was obliged to go to work very early in life. As a boy he did farm work, and when he was twenty-one he went to work for J. W. Gable, where he was variously employed. While with Mr. Gable he learned cigarmaking, and in 1892 started in the cigar business for himself. He took his parents to live with him, and worked hard to make a home, and to save so that he might increase his business. When he had saved $4,600 he built a home. He started his cigar factory in a small house back of his home, and in 1892 put up his present place of business, the buildings costing $4,000. He began with one or two helpers, which he soon increased to six, then to eight, and now he employs steadily ten and twelve. Me manufactures many grades of cigars and does a large and thriving business.

In September, 1895, Mr. Dehoff married Melinda Myers, of Yorkana, daughter of Milton and Mary (Keller) Myers, both of whom are living. One child, Milton Myers, has been born to this union. The family are members of the Reformed Church, in which communion Mr. Dehoff was brought up. In political faith he is a Democrat. He has had many discouragements in life, but has never allowed himself to succumb to them. Hard work and perseverance have been his watchwords, and through them he has won.

ADAM DORBAUGH. With the transition from Germany to America many a name alters its form and adopts the American pronunciation that brings with it a change in spelling. Thus the name Drorbaugh, long a familiar one in York county, was originally Tordable.

Adam Drorbaugh, the paternal grandfather of his namesake, was one of the early residents of Fairview township, where he owned a farm of 140 acres upon which he passed his whole life. He and his wife, Sarah (Malone) Drorbaugh, both died at the old home, and were buried in a cemetery near Lewisberry. Their children were: Catherine, Sarah, Mary and William.

William Drorbaugh was born March 8, 1804, in Fairview township, and, like his father, was a lifelong farmer. He married Miss Maria Boyer, daughter of a Revolutionary patriot whose burial place is near his old home on Ball's Hills. After their marriage Mr. Drorbaugh and his wife located on a farm in his native township, and there passed their lives. For the three years before his death, which occurred in 1873, he led a retired life. His wife survived him till Jan. 2, 1892, and the remains of both are interred in the cemetery of the Brick Church, in Fairview township. Mr. Drorbaugh was a prominent Democrat in his political views, and at one time served as township supervisor. The children were as follows: Emeline, who died in April, 1903, the wife of George F. Shaffer; Adam; David, who married Minora Witmore, of Indiana; Christiana, who died young; Sarah, who died aged twenty-five; Eliza, Mrs. Jeremiah Grisinger, of Fairview township; and Annie, Mrs. James Starr, of Lisbon, Cumberland county.

Adam Drorbaugh was born on his father's farm Aug. 3, 1832, and until he was twenty years of age attended the Navoo school, also assisting his father in the work on the homestead. In August, 1857, he married and started farming on his own account, an occupation which has absorbed most of his attention since. His first wife was Miss Barbara Ann Fisher, daughter of Love Fisher. Mrs. Drorbaugh died two years after their marriage, and was buried in Emanuel cemetery. The only child of the union was Justinana, who is now the wife of Henry L. Holtman and lives near Lewisberry. In 1862 Mr. Drorbaugh was again united in marriage, to Miss Anna Maria Hoover, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Shoff) Hoover, of York county. She bore her husband the following children: David H., a carpenter in Harrisburg; who married Miss Lillie Hoover; Elmer E., a plasterer; Charles F., who married Miss Jennie Cole and lives on his father's Fairview farm; Elijah H., who married Miss Angelina Pathmore, and is a Fairview farmer; Lee, at home; and Mary Elsie, Mrs. Harry L. Fisher, of Fairview township.

Adam Drorbaugh supports the Democratic party, and has served efficiently as tax collector. He attends the Lutheran Church. He is an honest, upright and hard-working man, and is much respected throughout the township.

MARTIN L. VAN BAMAN, the well-known representative of Bradstreet in York, is descended from a very old and distinguished family of Germany, his father’s brother having been a judge of the courts of Hildesheim, Province of Hanover, Germany. Another relative, Col. Carl von Boehmen, commanded the First Cavalry Regiment in the German army that entered Paris after its evacuation in the Franco-Prussian war. Ludwig von Boehmen, his grandfather, was burgemeister of Hildesheim.

Charles Augustus von Boehmen, the father of our subject, was banished from Germany for participation in the political revolution which terminated in the banishment of Carl Shurz and others. Coming to America, he settled in Pennsylvania, near East Prospect, where he practiced medicine until his death. He married Amelia Floeckher, of Hanover, Germany, also of a very old and distinguished family, and there were five children born to this union: Amelia, who died in St. Louis, in 1890; Theresa, who died in Columbia, in the spring of 1894; Charlotte, who married William Oliver, of Harrisburg; Frances, a widow; and Martin L.

Martin L. Van Baman was born in East Prospect Dec. 23, 1843, and received his education in the public schools of York. For many years past he has been the careful, intelligent and efficient representative of Bradstreet for York, Adams, Cumberland, Lancaster and Franklin counties. In politics Mr. Van Baman is a Democrat, and was a member of the select council of York, from the Eighth ward, for four terms, aggregating sixteen years, during which time he served on the committees of Finance, Public Building and Grounds and Fire.

In 1872 Mr. Van Baman was one of the organizers of the Rescue Fire Co., of York, of which he is now, and has been for many years, president. In 1896 he was the organizer of the Firemen’s Relief Association, which started with sixteen members and $60 in money. It now has over 800 members and more than $9,000 in the treasury. In 1898 Mr. Van Baman organized the board of Park Commissioners, of which he was made secretary. The board is now constituted as follows: A. B. Farquhar, president; George P. Smyser; Henry Small; Benjamin Allison; and our subject, and their labors have resulted in the development of York’s city parks, to an extent that they are today a credit to the City and the State.

Mr. Van Baman married Mary Catherine Frank, daughter of Lieut. W. F. Frank, of York, who served in the war of the Rebellion, and nine children have been born to this union: Two who died in childhood; Margaret H., who married Charles W. Floeckher, a flour and feed dealer of Washington, D. C.; Mary Louise, who married W. C. Foley, one of the superintendents of the Newport News Ship Building and Dry Dock Company; W. Walter, an attorney-at-law; Ernest G., a stenographer of New York City; Carl F., superintendent of the construction of submarine boats of the Lake Submarine Boat Co., in St. Petersburg, Russia; and Meta F. and S. Catherine, at home. The mother of these children died in May, 1902.

Mr. Van Baman belongs to the Royal Arcanum and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a consistent member of the Trinity Reformed Church. Possessed of a high order of intelligence and untiring in anything that he undertakes to accomplish, Mr. Van Baman’s labors for the betterment of the people of York have naturally met with signal success.

JOSIAH BESHORE, the experienced telegrapher operating the M. R. tower with the Northern Central Railroad at the Falls Station, Newberry township, York county, was born in 1860, in East Manchester township, and belongs to an old family of this county, extended mention of which will be found elsewhere.

Mr. Beshore attended the township schools until fourteen years of age, and remained assisting his father on the home farm until 1879, when he learned the business of telegraph operator with the N. C. R. R. In 1891 he was stationed in the tower as operator, at Falls Station, and this responsible position he has held ever since. He bought the old John M. Hess farm at the Falls, and operates this in connection with his telegraphic duties.

In 1883 Mr. Beshore married Susan Whistler, daughter of John and Nancy B. Whistler, both of whom died in Dauphin county. Their children were: Mrs. Beshore; John L., chief burgess of Middletown; Solomon: Elias B., living on Whistler Island at York Haven; and Josiah. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Beshore are: Bertha, Edith, Elsie, Clarence, Russell and Florence, all at home. While a resident of East Manchester township, Mr. Beshore served as school director in his community, and was a leading citizen. In politics he is a Republican. He belongs to the U. B. Church.

KELLER HISTORY. The Keller family is of German extraction and the founder of this honorable old family came to America and settled in Manchester township, York Co., Pa. Here he died and was buried in the old Mennonite cemetery in that township.

Christian Keller, the grandfather of Mrs. Jacob Beshore, was born in 1752, and died in August, 1826. He married Elizabeth Grove and they had children: John, who died in Canada; Christian; Maria; Elizabeth; Susan; Mattie; and Annie.

Christian Keller (2), the father of Mrs. Jacob Beshore, was born June 3, 1799, in Manchester township, where he followed farming. He married Elizabeth Bear, daughter of Michael and Catherine (Witmer) Bear, and he died in this township, aged forty-four years, Sept. 29, 1843. She was born Feb. 18, 1793, and died Aug. 18, 1872, aged seventy-nine years and six months, and both were buried in the old Mennonite cemetery mentioned. Their children were: Michael, born Dec. 22, 1820, who died July 12, 1868, and is buried in Manchester township; Daniel, who died in the West, aged eighty-two years; Christian, who lives in Dover township, aged eighty years; Jacob, born in Manchester township in 1827; Elizabeth, who married Peter Royer, of Maryland, and both died in the West; and Catherine, the wife of Jacob Beshore and mother of Josiah Beshore.

Rev. Jacob Keller became connected with the Dunkard Church at the age of twenty years, and in that denomination he has been a preacher for over fifty years. He married Mary Wombaugh, who died in Manchester township, and is buried in the old Mennonite cemetery. Mr. Keller now lives in retirement near Manchester.

Catherine, wife of Jacob Beshore, was born Sept. 6, 1825, and died April 26, 1903, and was laid to rest in the same old Mennonite cemetery where have been buried so many members of this old family.

JOHN W. HOFFMAN, a prominent citizen of Wellsville, York county, who conducts a blacksmith shop, was born July 18, 1867, in Adams county, son of Michael and Sarah (Brougher) Hoffman.

Michael Hoffman is a native of Pennsylvania, being born on the line between York and Adams counties, and was educated in the public schools. He engaged in agricultural pursuits early in life and followed this occupation until his retirement from active life several years ago, and he now lives in Warrington township. He was the owner of a fine farm, which he sold in 1884. He and his wife Sarah were the parents of the following children: Sarah A., John W., Michael L. and Willis F. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman were members of the United Brethren Church, in which faith she died in 1897, aged fifty-seven years. In politics Mr. Hoffman is a Republican. He had been previously married to Sarah Gardner, by whom he had two children, Isaac and Mary. Mrs. Hoffman had also been previously married to Henry Rensill, by whom she became the mother of one child, Henrietta.

John W. Hoffman received his education in the common schools of York county, and after completing his schooling, being sixteen years of age, learned the blacksmith's trade under F. F. Weigert, with whom he remained two years and seven months. He then opened a shop in Perry county, where he remained five years, selling out at the end of that time and removing to Rockville, where he engaged in iron bridge work for Drake & Stratton, remaining with that concern for two years. He then opened a shop at Emig's Mill, and in 1902 located in Wellsville, and built his present residence and shop, where he has been successfully engaged ever since. Mr. Hoffman has been very successful in a business way and has worked his way to the front among the business men, solely through his own untiring efforts.

Mr. Hoffman was united in marriage with Miss Arra M. Speck, daughter of Henry Speck. In religion this couple are liberal. In politics Mr. Hoffman is a Republican, and has always taken an active interest in the success of his party. He is well regarded in Wellsville.

ADAM R. WARNER, the well-known miller and rake-maker of Manheim township, York county, was born in Codorus township, in 1850, son of John Warner, a prominent farmer of that township, who died aged forty-five years. John Warner married Elizabeth Rohrbaugh, daughter of Henry Rohrbaugh, and these children were born to the union: Henry, Mary and Jacob, all of Illinois; John, of Codorus township; and Adam R., of Manheim township. Mrs. Warner, after the death of her first husband, married Samuel Baylor, and they had two children, Samuel and Lizzie.

Adam R. Warner spent his school days in Manheim township, and there learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for about seven years, and then went to farming in West Manheim township, remaining there until 1901. He then bought the old Stine mill property in Manheim township, with seven acres of land, and has one of the most up-to-date mills in the county. He has also built several outbuildings. He makes flour, feed and bran, and is also a skilled raker-maker, his yearly output being from 600 to 800 rakes. He has followed the latter for thirty-three years, and finds a ready market at Hanover. He also has a sawmill and cider press in connection with his mill.

Mr. Warner was married, in 1873, to Matilda Hoffacker, daughter of John W. Hoffacker, and these children have been born to the union: Harvey M. and Minerva C. (twins); Albert T.; John G. W.; Adam L.; Celesta C.; Claude J.; Jacob E.; Bertha M.; Ezra M.; and William H. and Emery B., deceased. In politics Mr. Warner is a Democrat.

MILTON RUBY KAUFFMAN, a prominent and successful farmer and highly esteemed citizen of Dover township, where he owns 106 acres of good land, situated about two miles west of Dover borough, near Strayer's Church, was born Feb. 9, 1855, in Windsor township, York county, son of Henry and Charlotte (Ruby) Kauffman.

The great-grandfather of our subject came from Lancaster county, and settled in Spring Garden township, York county, where he followed farming until his death.

Joseph Kauffman, the grandfather, was born in Spring Garden township, where he followed farming all of his life. He married Susan Sprenkle, and she died in the same township, where they are both buried in the Mennonite graveyard. The children born to this worthy couple were: Henry, father of our subject; Joseph, a retired farmer, living in Windsor township; Isaac, a retired farmer, living in Spring Garden township; Emanuel, who died at his home in West Philadelphia street, York, and is buried in the Mennonite graveyard, Spring Garden township; Israel and Mary, retired farmers, living in Spring Garden township; John, a retired farmer, who lives in York; Sarah, who married Michael Smyser and resides in York; Susan, who married Eli Kieidig, and lived in Philadelphia until her death in 1905, and was buried in the Mennonite graveyard; and Martin, who lives in Philadelphia.

Henry Kauffman was born in 1824, in Spring Garden township, and remained at home until after his marriage to Charlotte Ruby, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Becker) Ruby, of York county. He then started farming in Windsor township, on a 120-acre farm, which his father bought for him, and remained there about twenty-four years. He then went to West Manchester township, where he bought a limestone farm of 112 acres, which he farmed until 1886, and lived there retired until his death in August, 1896. Mrs. Kauffman died there also in February, 1886; and they are both buried in Spring Garden township, in the Mennonite graveyard. Mr. Kauffman was a Mennonite, while his wife was a Dunkard. Their children were as follows: Ephraim, who married Isabella Smyser, and died in April, 1898, being buried at Prospect Hill cemetery, York; Anna Mary, who died when eight years of age; Milton Ruby, our subject; Cassandra, who married Michael Miller, and lives in Windsor township; Henry, who married Sarah Hoke, and died June 21, 1893, in West Manchester township, and was buried at Green Mount cemetery; Elizabeth, who married Samuel Baker, of Adams county, and lives on the old homestead; Samuel, married to Lizzie Kohr, and living in York; Harriet, living with Susan Ruby in Hellam township; Sarah, married to Charles H. Stoner, and living in Hellam township; and Emma, who married Abraham Hersh, and lives in Windsor township.

Milton Ruby Kauffman attended the schools of Windsor and West Manchester townships, and on Feb. 6, 1881, he married Anna Maria Fahs, daughter of William Henry and Anna M. E. (Fisbe) Fahs, of Manchester township. She was born Feb. 19, 1858. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman located in York, where they remained twelve years, and where Mr. Kauffman engaged in the machine business, being a skilled mechanic. In 1893 they came to their present home, Mrs. Kauffman having fallen heir to the property. Later Mr. Kauffman purchased a small tract adjoining the 106 acres, which was the original farm. A great many improvements have been made since they took charge of the place, and the property is now one of the best cultivated in the township. It is located about two miles west of Dover borough, near Strayer's Church.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman are as follows: (1) Charles F., born Nov. 7, 1884, attended York Academy, and Millersville State Normal school. He began teaching school in 1904. His specialty is history. He has a fine collection of historical relics, which he has gathered from various places. (2) Susan Ellen, born Oct. 18, 1886, attended Linden Hall seminary at Lititz, and the State Normal school at Millersville, Lancaster county. (3) Elmer Frederick, born Sept. 11, 1893, is developing a taste for history and is also making a collection of relics. (4) Clara Elizabeth was born March 25, 1897.

Mr. Kauffman is a staunch Republican, in the service of this party being an active worker. Mrs. Kauffman is a valued member of the Moravian Church of York. Mr. Kauffman is a thorough business man, honest and upright in all his dealings and of much executive ability. He supports all good movements in the community, and is regarded as one of the leading and representative citizens of Dover township.

FAHS. The Fahs family, to which Mrs. Kauffman belongs, is of Swiss origin. John Fahs, her grandfather, settled in West Manchester township, where he owned a tract of 150 acres, and there farmed for a number of years, removing to York to live a retired life. He died at the age of eighty-one years and is buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. He married Susan Elizabeth Higenfritz, and she died in York, and was interred with her husband. Their children were as follows: William Henry; Sarah lives in York, with her brother. Capt. John Fahs; Charles, a prominent physician, who married Elizabeth Dean, of Virginia, died in Selma, Ala., of yellow fever; Susan E. married Gibson Smith, and resides at No. 419 West Market street, York; Mary married Martin Wiegel, and died in March, 1903, being buried at Prospect Hill cemetery; Captain John lives in York; and Emma Rebecca, who married Stephen Morgan Smith, lives in West York.

William Henry Fahs, father of Mrs. Kauffman, received a common school education in the schools of the township, and remained at home until his marriage to Anna Maria Fishel, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Brillhart) Fishel, of Paradise township, York county. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Fahs located on the homestead, and followed farming until Mr. Fahs' death, which occurred in his forty-ninth year. Mrs. Fahs died at the age of forty-one and they are both interred at the Prospect Hill cemetery. The children born to William Henry Fahs and his wife were: Charles F., who married Katie E. Bender, and is in the land speculating business at Omaha, Neb.; John Augustus, who died in infancy; Ellen Elizabeth, who lives in York; and Mrs. Kauffman, the youngest of the family.

HENRY EPPLEY, a prominent, self-made farmer of York county, who is working his fine 133-acre farm in Newberry township, was born in 1848 in York township, York county, son of George and Mary (Piffer) Eppley.

George Eppley came from England and settled in Codorus township, where he followed farming near Seven Valley, later removing to Stewartstown, where he died. He married Mary Piffer, who died in Newberry township, where she was buried, and they were the parents of the following children: George; Edward; Henry; Jacob; William, a farmer in Conewago township, York county; Levi; Columbus; Sarah; Louisa; John and Annie.

Henry Eppley attended the schools of Codorus township until he was eleven years of age, and then started working on farms in the vicinity. This work he followed until he was twenty-three years old, when he married Lydia Miller, daughter of George and Elizabeth Miller, and they located in Manchester township. There Mr. Eppley engaged in farming, remaining there until 1884, in which year he came to Newberry township. By this time he had accumulated enough to buy a fine farm of 133 acres, which he has since very successfully farmed. Mr. Eppley has good substantial buildings on his place and each year is making improvements that are raising in value an already valuable piece of property. He owes his success to his tireless energy, his excellent management and the thrift he has always displayed. He is a self-made man, and as such is highly esteemed by all who know him.

To Mr. and Mrs. Eppley the following named children have been born: Charles, who is deceased; Minnie, living in Harrisburg; George, living at Washington, D. C.; Burt, deceased; Harry, who is now at Bon View, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he is engaged at work on the railroad, running a hoisting engine; Howard; Cora; Elmer; Paris; Mabel, at home; Annie, deceased; and Millard, deceased.

In politics Mr. Eppley is a Democrat. In religious connection he is a consistent member of the Quickel Church of Conewago township.

WILLIAM A. MYERS was the son of David M. and Mary (Slagle) Myers. He was married, Oct. 13, 1869, to Miss Ellen L. Smyser, daughter of E. G. Smyser. Of the children born to their union there are living three sons and three daughters, David M., Edward G. Smyser, William H., Mary J., Sarah E. and Susan Smyser.

LEANDER K. BORTNER, of Manheim township, was born in Codorus township, May 4, 1865, son of Lewis G. Bortner, and grandson of Jacob Bortner, a prominent farmer and distiller of Codorus township, where he died. Jacob Bortner married Catherine Gerberick, who also died in Codorus township, where both are buried in the Stone Church. Their children were: Catherine, the wife of Peter Rohrbaugh; Lewis G.; Jacob; Daniel; Amos; Emanuel; Charles; Levi; Lucy Ann; Julia; and Mantilla, who married Jesse Deveney.

Lewis G. Bortner was born in Codorus township, where he followed farming. He was a large land owner there, and died aged seventy-seven years. He married Elizabeth Krebs, daughter of John Krebs, and she died in 1905, both she and her husband being buried at the Stone Church, Codorus township. They had these children: Levi K., who married Rebecca Emig; Julia, the widow of Henry Werner; Saranda, wife of Edward Rohrbaugh; Leander K., our subject; George W., who married Tursie Rohrbaugh; and Jacob, Lewis and Catherine, deceased.

Leander K. Bortner attended the township schools until twenty years of age, and remained at home with his father until his twenty-first year. He then hired out for three years, at the end of which time he began farming on E. M. Bailey's farm in Codorus township, remaining there three years. In 1893 he bought the A. D. Manchley farm of thirty-three acres, upon which he has made many improvements. This is located in Manheim township, and Mr. Bortner is also in charge of the creamery at Marburg, for S. B. Brodbeck, taking charge of that business in 1904.

Mr. Bortner married Miss Ellen Sue Garrett, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Rohrbaugh) Garrett, and to this union two children have been born: John L., who attended the academy at Glenville, is now teaching in Manheim township, at the Summit school; and Wilson G. is attending school. Mr. Bortner is a Democrat, and is now serving the township as school director. For two years he was president of the board, of which he is now treasurer. In religion he is a Lutheran, and has served as deacon in the church.

Henry Garrett, the father of Mrs. Bortner, was for many years a farmer in Heidelberg township, and is now living a retired life at York Road Station. His children were: Agnes, wife of Martin Kaltreider; Amanda, wife of Jacob Markel; John; Ellen; Mrs. Daniel Renoll; Ada, wife of Irvin Thomason; Laura, wife of Daniel Snyder; Horatio; Chester, and Harry.

S. L. SEIFERT, a prosperous merchant of Rossville, Warrington township, York county, was born near Mechanicsburg, Oct. 31, 1869, son of Peter and Sarah A. (Swean) Seifert, and grandson of Samuel Seifert.

Samuel Seifert was a native of York county, where he followed farming, and in early life drove a team to Baltimore. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: Emanuel, Levi, Samuel, Henry, Tempest, Leah, Peter, Andrew and Michael and Rebecca and Elizabeth, the two last named being deceased. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Seifert were Lutherans. In the matter of politics he was a Republican. His death occurred in 1892 at the age of eighty-three years, while his wife died in the same year. Samuel Seifert was a brother of the late Rev. Henry Seifert, a Lutheran minister, who died Aug. 26, 1905.

Peter Seifert, father of our subject, was a plasterer by trade, and also followed farming. He bought the old Sechrist home in Warrington township, where he died in 1894 at the age of fifty-four years. Mrs. Seifer is still living on the old homestead. They were the parents of these children: Tempest (deceased), U. Grant, John A., Samuel L., Elizabeth and Bertha, deceased. In their religious views these people were Lutherans, while, like his father, Mr. Seifer always voted the Republican ticket.

Samuel L. Seifer received his education in Mt. Airy, York county, and after his school days were over went to work on the farm, following agricultural pursuits until twenty-eight years of age, when he went into business at Mt. Airy postoffice, Fortney, and was appointed postmaster in President McKinley's administration. Here he remained four years and then sold out and located in Rossville, in 1902, and built his place of business in 1903. Mr. Seifer has a full line of general merchandise. On Oct. 3, 1905, he was appointed postmaster by President Roosevelt. His close and careful methods and careful management have made the business with which he is connected very prosperous, and he has gained the confidence of the community.

On May 12, 1898, Mr. Seifer married Miss Ida Sanders, and three children have been born to them, Bertha, Leah M. and Lawrence, the last named being deceased. They are members of the Evangelical Church. In political matters Mr. Seifer has always been identified with the Republican party, while fraternally he is connected with the P. O. S. of A.

REUBEN F. BARLEY, a retired farmer and highly respected citizen of Codorus township, York county, was born in 1851 in Lower Windsor township, this county, a son of William Barley and a grandson of Mathias F. Barley.

Mathias F. Barley was born in Germany, and came to America in 1819. He had been employed in vineyards in his native land and was a competent gardener. The voyage across the ocean consumed twenty-one weeks, during which time the old sailing vessel encountered many storms and an accident happened to the ship, which was fast on a sand bar for seven weeks before being floated; there was great rejoicing at their release, after much fasting and praying, as their provisions had become exhausted, and the passengers were finally landed safely in the port of Baltimore. There he remained but a short time, coming on to York county, Pa., where he passed the remainder of his life. His children were: Gottlieb, Frederick, Jacob, John, Christian, a daughter and William. Jacob was born in mid-ocean.

William Barley, father of our subject, spent his early life in York and Windsor townships, and was a post-fence maker by trade. In 1856 he moved to Carroll county, Md., where he lived twenty-two years. After locating permanently in Codorus township he followed farming until five years before his death, which occurred Feb. 10, 1899, when he was aged seventy-six years, four months and fourteen days. He lies buried in Baltimore county, Md. He was a worthy member of the U. B. Church and always took an active part in the work, being a leading official and a preacher of the Gospel. Mr. Barley was drafted twice during the Civil war. He married Eliza Sechrist, born July 4, 1824, daughter of Michael Sechrist and Elizabeth (Heindel) Sechrist, and Mrs. Barley still makes her home with her son. The subject of this review. Though eighty-one years old and quite heavy, weighing two hundred and sixty-five pounds, she is active, and does her own housework. Mr. and Mrs. Barley had children as follows: William H., of York township, near Ore Valley Station, on the Maryland & Pennsylvania railroad; John J., of Minnesota; Reuben F., of Codorus township; Susan, who died aged twenty-four years; Benjamin, a contractor in Kansas; Joshua, of Codorus township; Eliza, wife of G. W. Border, of Codorus township; Elizabeth, who married (first) David Killen, and (second) Samuel Deitz, both deceased; Angeline S., wife of J. F. Gerver; and Leah, wife of William Heindel.

Reuben F. Barley attended the schools of Carroll county, Md., until eighteen years of age, and remained subject to his father until reaching maturity, after which he worked with an iron company for several years. Later he spent several years farming in the West, but coming home on a visit he stayed until the death of his father. Since then he has resided with his venerable mother on a fine farm of forty-five acres close to Stick's store in Codorus township. They also own an excellent property at Jefferson borough.
Formerly Mr. Barley was active in politics, and he was elected on the Democratic ticket a committee man and school director. He is a member of St. John’s Evangelical Church of Manheim township, and has been a Sunday-school teacher for a number of years; he is now a German teacher.

SIMON M. SHOFF was born Nov. 29, 1854, son of Jacob S. and Annie (Kopp) Shoff, and is a member of a family which has lived at Conrad’s Cross Roads for many years.

David Shoff, his grandfather, was a teacher, and lived at Conrad’s Cross Roads on a farm. He and his brother, Fred, accumulated quite a competency, and their families comprised twenty-two children. David Shoff died in 1880, in his eighty-second year. In religion he was a Lutheran, while in political matters he was a Democrat. His wife’s maiden name was Smeltzer.

Jacob S. Shoff was educated in the common schools. He followed blacksmithing all of his life, having a shop at Conrad’s Cross Roads. He died there in 1896, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. He married Annie Kopp, daughter of Adam and Lizzie (Arnold) Kopp, and she is still living, at the age of seventy-four years. Children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob S. Shoff as follows: Savilla married William Haugh, of Chanceford township; Simon M. is our subject; twins died in infancy; Adam married Miss Tome, of Chanceford township; Susan married Al Reider, of York; David is at home; Annie died young.

Simon M. Shoff was born at Conrad’s Cross Roads, in the cellar of the home which his father was building, but which had not yet been completed. Although as a lad he displayed the qualities which would have made a bright scholar his educational advantages were few, as he was kept at home a great deal of the time to assist his father in his blacksmith shop. He attended Thompson’s school off and on and then the public school, from the time he was six until he reached the age of fifteen years. He learned the blacksmith’s trade in his father’s shop, and learned butchering with his grandfather. Mr. Shoff worked with his father at blacksmithing until twenty-one years old, and then for a while farmed tobacco for Jacob Kohler, Bert Thompson and Ben Hake, accumulating some money thereby, and working as a farm hand when not employed in the tobacco patch. Thus by 1880 he had enough money saved to start buying his present farm, a fine place of seventy-seven acres, in Chanceford township, which was bought one-third at a time. In 1901 Mr. Shoff built a new house, and all the buildings now on his farm are new with the exception of the old house which has stood on the place many years, having been built by Jacob T. Gohn. Mr. Shoff is a practical, successful farmer and stock raiser, one who thoroughly understands his business, as is evidenced by his years of prosperity, and he has always taken his place among the leading men of his township, being considered one of the substantial and representative farmers of York county. Of an honest and upright character, temperate and business-like, Mr. Shoff commands the respect of all who know him. For the past twenty years he has been a member of St. Luke’s Lutheran Church, in which for a number of years he was deacon and sexton, and which he helped to build. In politics he is a Democrat.

On Dec. 8, 1881, Mr. Shoff married Sally Workinger, daughter of William and Barbara (Shaull) Workinger, and a niece of ex-Sheriff Jesse Workinger. One child has been born to this union, William Henry, who received his education in the public schools and the business college at York.

FREDERICK HOUCK, of Fairview township, who is actively engaged in cultivating his farm, was born Aug. 4, 1838, in Bavaria, Germany, son of Frederick and Charlotte (Mangold) Houck.

Frederick Houck, father of our subject, was born in Germany and was a weaver by trade. He married Charlotte Mangold, who was also born in Germany, and after marriage came to America. In 1844 they landed at New Orleans, La., after having a stormy voyage of fourteen weeks on the ocean, on the sailing ship “Swanton,” coming by the way of Liverpool. They spent two years in Louisiana, while Mr. Houck was engaged in firing on a steamboat, and then journeyed to Wheeling, W. Va., where they remained six months, and from there went to Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa. Remaining there only a short time, they removed to Hallden’s Furnace, where Mr. Houck was employed until 1860, when he removed to York county, and bought a small farm in Fairview township, upon which he died in 1865, at the age of sixty-five years. His wife died at the age of eighty-one years, and they are both buried at Harrisburg. The children born to them were as follows: Frederick; Charles, who died at the age of two years; Elizabeth, wife of Adam Kreig, a butcher of Harrisburg; Sarah Catherine, who married Charles Houseman, who is employed at Steelton; and Harriet, who married Frederick Wagonbaugh, an engineer of Steelton.

Frederick Houck was but six years old when his parents brought him to America. He attended the schools until fourteen years of age, and was then put at driving a cart at Haldeman's Furnace. This he followed until 1860, at which time he removed with his father to York county, and assisted him on his farm. In 1863 Mr. Houck married Julia Druck, born May 6, 1839, in Germany, daughter of George and Elizabeth Druck. After his marriage he located in Harrisburg where he was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, as helper in the blacksmith shop, and later he became a skilled mechanic. He followed that occupation for ten years, and then bought the old home in Fairview township, to which he removed at the death of his father. In 1873 he built a barn and good out-buildings and made many improvements. Mr. Houck was also employed in the Pennsylvania Steel Works at Steelton for eight years, but is at present looking after his farm.

To Mr. and Mrs. Houck the following children have been born: Elizabeth, who died at the age of two years; Adam G. and Frederick, Jr., who live at Newmarket; Catherine, who died at the age of fifteen months; Charles, who lives at New Cumberland; Harriet E., who married John Killinger, of Fairview township; and George, who resides at home.

Mr. Houck tried to enlist during the Civil war, but was rejected. In politics he is a Republican, and was supervisor for three years and inspector one year, proving to be a very efficient public officer. Mr. Houck is a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, in which he holds the offices of elder, deacon and superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. Houck is very well-known throughout York county, and is very highly esteemed for his many sterling traits of character. He has an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity.

DAVID DIEHL HERBST, at present engaged in agricultural pursuits in Winters-town, where he has one of the fine farms of that section, was born on the home farm in North Hopewell township, Nov. 19, 1849.

The Herbst family is an old one, the name formerly being spelled Von Herbst, and David D. is a descendant of one John Herbst, who brought his family from Holland to America in 1798. When they left Holland the family consisted of the parents, five boys and three girls, and a son, David, the grandfather of David D. Herbst, was born on the journey across the Atlantic. The family settled in North Hopewell township, where they took up land and were among the earliest settlers of that section. Of the children, besides David, the youngest, Jacob returned to Holland, thence went to South Africa, and all trace of him was lost; another son settled in Adams county, Pa.; two others settled in Reading; John became a Lutheran minister and was located at Hanover; one of the daughters married Elias Eby, and went to Idaho fifty years ago; another daughter married a Mr. Wertz; and the third died unmarried.

David Herbst grew to manhood in North Hopewell township. He married Polly Miller, settling on the home place, where he died. He was a faithful member of the Evangelical Church. Besides carrying on farming operations he was an old time physician, with a good country practice, and he also engaged in the mercantile business. His children were: William, a merchant, who died in Glen Rock; David, who died in Springfield township; Eliza, who married Henry Howard, and died in Loganville; Mary, who died out West; and Jacob, mentioned below.

Jacob Herbst was born on the family homestead, and he received a common-school education. He was reared to a farmer's life, and also worked in his father's store, which he later purchased. He married Julia Ann Diehl, daughter of Charles and Catherine (Kohler) Diehl. Mr. Herbst carried on mercantile pursuits for many years, finally farming on the place now owned by his son, John. There he died in December, 1900, aged seventy-seven years, nine months. He was reared in the Evangelical Church, and remained an adherent to that faith until a few years before he died when he joined the Dunkard Church. Mrs. Herbst survives him, making her home with her son, John. Although eighty-four years old, she is still very active, and walks almost daily to and from York, a distance of twenty miles. She is a member of the Dunkard Church. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Herbst were as follows: Charles; David Diehl; Jacob, of North Hopewell township, who married Miss Strayer; Julia Ann, deceased; Mary Alice, Mrs. David Brilliart, of Springfield township; Luther Lincoln, deceased; William, living in Oklahoma; John, on the home farm, and married to a Miss Staley; Sarah J., Mrs. Harry Diehl, of Loganville; and Nathan G., of Windsor township, York county.

David Diehl Herbst was educated in the public schools, from which he was graduated when nineteen years old. He began his business career as a clerk in his uncle William’s store at Glen Rock, where he remained but a short time, however, returning to the home farm. Mr. Herbst was there married, and in 1877 began keeping store at the corner of Hopewell, Windsor and York townships, and continued at that location until 1894. He then purchased his present place, a tract of 114 acres, upon which he built, in the same year, one of the finest residences in the township. Mr. Herbst also owns a farm of ninety-seven acres in the same borough. He was married in 1877 to Rebecca J. Bremmeman, and to this union have been born the following children: Rose Ann, who died at the age of six years; Luther, at home; Matilda, who died at the age of four years; David, at home; Ima and Julia Ann, deceased; Irene, at home; Daniel, deceased; two that died in infancy; and Helen R. Mr. Herbst is a member of the Evangelical Church. In his political sympathies he is a Republican, and earnestly supports the principles of that party. A good farmer, a substantial business man, and a Christian gentleman, Mr. Herbst is honored and respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

JACOB H. SECHRIST, one of the prominent and popular citizens of York township, where he is engaged in general farming and in the breeding and handling of horses and mules, is a representative of the third generation of the Sechrist family in York county.

Henry Sechrist, his paternal grandfather, was born and bred in Germany, whence he came to America in young manhood. Soon after his arrival he located in Chanceford township, York Co., Pa., where he became a prosperous farmer and distiller, and where he passed the remainder of his life, which reached the venerable age of eighty-five years. His mortal remains were interred in the cemetery in Chanceford township, as were also those of his two wives. His first wife was a Flinkbaugh, and after her death he married a Sechrist, a representative of another branch of the family. Of the children of the first union, John died in Chanceford township; Henry is mentioned below; Jonathan, Charles and Elizabeth died in Chanceford township; and Mary, who became the wife of Jacob Kohler, died in York township. Of the second marriage three daughters were born, namely: Leah, who is the wife of Charles Grove, of York county; Nancy, who became the wife of Emanuel Grove, and died in Chanceford township; and Susan, wife of Charles Diehl, also deceased.

Henry Sechrist, father of Jacob H., was born and reared in Chanceford township, where he received a common-school education, and where he became identified with the same lines of enterprise that his father so successfully followed—farming and distilling. Finally he removed to York township, where he became the owner of a fine farm, and where he continued to reside until the close of his life in 1885. He was a man of marked individuality and sterling character, and was held in high esteem. He was a Democrat in politics, and both he and his wife were members of the Reformed Church. His wife, Mary, likewise born in York county, a member of an old and honored family, was summoned into eternal rest in 1870. Of the children of Henry and Mary Sechrist is the following record: Caroline became the wife of Joseph Sniker, and died in Spring Garden township; Henry, Jr., who married Rebecca Sniker, died in this county; Adam, a prosperous farmer in Windsor township, has been thrice married, his present wife having been Elizabeth Strickler; Charles, who married Nancy Seitz, is a resident of York township; Jacob H. was next in the order of birth; John, who married Mary Strickler, lives in Windsor township; William, who married Mary Stillinger, resides in Windsor township; Peter, also of that township, married Mary Snell; Frank remained unmarried, and died in Windsor township at the age of fifty-three years; Mary died at the age of sixteen; Emanuel, who married Louise Roser, lives in Windsor township; and Catherine, deceased, was the first wife of Moses Snyder, of Yoe, a local preacher of the United Brethren Church.

Jacob H. Sechrist was born on the homestead in York township Sept. 15, 1839, and he early aided in the operation of the home farm. He acquired his education in the district schools of the township, which he attended during the winter terms for the greater portion of the time until he had attained the age of eighteen years. For twelve years after his marriage in 1864 he continued to be associated in the management of the home farm. At the expiration of the period noted Mr. Sechrist purchased what was known as the Henry Miller farm, adjoining the village of Dallastown and comprising seventy acres of the most fertile land. On this homestead he has erected excellent buildings and made other improvements so that the place stands as a model of thrift and prosperity. He has platted about seventeen acres of his land into village lots, placing them on the market as an addition to Dallastown, while the balance of his farm he maintains under effective cultivation or devotes to the raising of horses and mules. He has gained a wide reputation as a trainer of these animals, having devoted about thirty-five years to the business. He has often shown his exceptional ability in breaking mules and horses in short order, and his claim to be able to break even a green mule and make a good leader of him in twenty-four hours' time has been justified in innumerable instances. At the York county fair of 1903 Mr. Sechrist had on exhibition a six-mule team, the animals then being eighteen months old and among the finest ever shown in this section of the State. He finds much demand for his horses and mules after they have been broken under his effective direction, and this branch of his farming enterprise has been made a very profitable one.

Mr. Sechrist is a liberal and public-spirited citizen, a stanch supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, frank and straightforward in all the relations of life, and well deserving of the confidence and esteem in which he is held. Both he and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church at Dallastown.

On Aug. 6, 1864, Mr. Sechrist was united in marriage with Rachel Strickler, who was born and reared in York township, a daughter of Harry and Catherine (Bahn) Strickler, and a representative of one of the oldest and most honored families of York county. Mr. and Mrs. Sechrist have the following children: Emma is the wife of Frank Flory, of Dallastown; Emanuel S. married Mary Ellen Shatto, and lives at Dallastown; Sallie is the wife of Michael Seidenstricker, of York township; Ezra is associated with his father in the management of the home place; Millie married Elmer Peters of Dallastown; Annie is the wife of George Shenberger, of York township; Agnes remains at home, as does also Harry, who married Lydia Druck; Elmer married Carrie Illus, and lives in York City; Cassandra married Charles Gladfelter; and Norman is at home.

Emanuel S. Sechrist, son of Jacob H., a prominent cigar manufacturer of Dallastown, was born in York township Oct. 5, 1868. Until he was twenty years of age he busied himself in obtaining an education at the public schools and in assisting his father in his farming operations. At that time he married Mary Ellen Shatto, daughter of Rev. Martin V. Shatto, of Center county, Pa. After his marriage he began the manufacture of cigars, and this enterprise has proved eminently successful, increasing from a business in which he himself was engaged to an industry which now employs thirty skilled workmen within his factory and seventy hands outside. In the trade his establishment is known as No. 3608, of the Ninth District, the present building, which he erected, being two and a half stories in height, and 50 x 20 feet in dimensions. The high-grade goods of his factory are sold chiefly in Philadelphia, Pa., and Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. Sechrist's standing as a promoter of the best interests of Dallastown is assured. He is not only prominent industrially, but is an influential Democrat, being at present a counsellor. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. His family consists of the wife already mentioned, and three children, Blanchie Helen, Emery and Clara.

AVIS ANN CLINE, a highly respected resident of Lewisberry, York county, comes of honorable ancestry, numbering some of the best families of the country among her relatives.

In the maternal line her lineage is traced to Philip Frankeberger, who was born Feb. 28, 1752, and died Sept. 4, 1821. On May 24, 1774, he married Hannah Paup, who was born May 31, 1756, and who died Sept. 28, Avis Frankeberger, daughter of Philip and Hannah, was born near Winchester, Va., Dec. 22, 1776, and died March 27, 1867. She married March 24, 1801, Hugh Foster, who was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, June 20, 1766, and who died Nov. 15, 1827. Nine children were born of this union: Jane, born Dec. 20, 1801, married Samuel Kirk, who was born March 7, 1799, and who died Jan. 9, 1835, and she died April 26, 1871; Hannah, born July 24, 1803, died Oct. 28, 1805; Margaret was born Jan. 23, 1806; Robert Burch, born June 20, 1808, married Lydia Ann Kirk, who died Feb. 18, 1891, and he died Nov. 7, 1894; John, born Nov. 2, 1809, married Eliza Spahr, and died July 5, 1869; William, born April 1, 1812, married (first) Ellen Doyle, (second) Sarah Ann Clark, (third) Wealthy Ann Powell, and died April 29, 1883; Joseph, born Dec. 4, 1813, died unmarried July 21, 1880; Ann, born Nov. 1, 1815, died Oct. 1, 1819; and Jacob, born May 20, 1817, married (first) Louisa Amanda Folkrod, (second) Mrs. Priscilla Heppard (Smith) Field, and died Sept. 24, 1893.

Margaret Foster, daughter of Hugh and Avis (Frankeberger) Foster, was born Jan. 23, 1806, and died March 27, 1886. On April 22, 1830, she married Andrew Cline, who was born Nov. 3, 1805, son of John and Elizabeth (Ensminger) Cline. To this union came ten children, as follows: Eliza Jane, born Sept. 2, 1831, married Stephen C. Pipher, and died Aug. 31, 1897; Henrietta, born Jan. 29, 1833, died Sept. 25, 1836; Margaret, born Sept. 26, 1834, died April 17, 1835; Lewis, born March 10, 1836, married Elmira Mordorf; Avis Ann was born Jan. 3, 1838; William Henry Harrison was born Oct. 24, 1839; Clarissa, born Nov. 18, 1841, married Brice I. Sterrett, and died Feb. 24, 1901; Lucinda, born May 15, 1844, died July 27, 1845; Caroline was born April 27, 1846; James, born Nov. 26, 1847, married Sept. 17, 1878, Sallie Heck.

Andrew Cline received a good common school education for the times, and then learned the hatter's trade, an occupation he followed until 1836. During this time he made a trip on foot to the State of Ohio, spending some time there. Returning to Lewisberry, he invested his savings in a farm of 120 acres in Newberry township, and built thereon the necessary buildings, including a good barn. This farm remained in his possession until 1856, when he sold it. In 1852 he purchased the Lewisberry mill from John Kauffman. He met with considerable success in his milling operations, in which he continued until his death, Nov. 18, 1882.

John Cline, father of Andrew, was a farmer in Newberry township, his farm being located near Lewisberry borough. At his death his remains were buried in a private cemetery on his farm. There, too, rests his wife, Elizabeth Ensminger. Their children were: Henry, a farmer, who died in Ohio; John, a farmer of Fairview township, now deceased; George, a tanner, who died in Dauphin county; Philip; Frank and Joseph, plasterers, who both passed away in Lewisberry borough; Andrew, mentioned above; Lewis, who died in Illinois; Mary; and Elizabeth, who married Jacob Kirk.

J. L. GERBER, secretary of the Home Furniture Co., of York, Pa., was born May 16, 1872, in Dover township, near Davidsburg, York county, son of William Gerber.

Christopher Gerber, the grandfather, came from Switzerland to Pennsylvania and settled in Dover township, York county. He was a skilled carpenter, and was the first to introduce Swiss barns in this part of the country, many of these being now erected in preference to any other. His original farm is still in the Gerber family. He died at Davidsburg, and was buried in the old Strayer cemetery in Dover township. He married Elizabeth Speck, and she was laid to rest in the same old burying ground. They were honest, virtuous, industrious people. Their family of fourteen children was evenly divided, seven sons and seven daughters.

William Gerber, father of our subject, was born in his father's home in Dover township. He obtained his education in the district schools, and grew up an excellent farmer, retiring from active life in 1901. Since that time he has lived at ease, enjoying the friendship of many acquaintances and the affectionate regard of his children. He was married (first) to a Miss Kochenour, and they had these children: Catherine, wife of E. P. Zeigler, a son of Adam Zeigler, a carpenter, in Dover township; Mary A., wife of John Keller, a son of Christopher Keller, a farmer of Dover township; and Ellen, who died in infancy. William Gerber married (second) Barbara Bubb, daughter of Nicholas Bubb, of York county, near the Adams county line. During the Civil War Mr. and Mrs. Bubb were much inconvenienced by the frequent calls of the Confederate troops who demanded food and attention. The children of this marriage were: Emma is the wife of Henry C. Zinn, son of Jonas Zinn, a farmer in Dover township. D. W., who learned the cabinetmaking trade at Dover, and who is now treasurer of the Home Furniture Company, married Lydia Lenhart. A. J., who is now engaged in farming in Dover township, was educated in the York Academy and the Millersville Normal School and was a teacher for some ten years; he married Carrie Laner, a daughter of Henry Laner. J. L., is mentioned below. William Henry, the farmer on the old homestead on which his grandfather settled when he first came to America, married a Miss Leib. All this family are respected men and very substantial citizens.

J. L. Gerber attended school at Davidstown until he was nineteen years of age, and then he followed plastering for a year and a half, after which he entered the employ of the Weaver Organ & Piano Co., where he learned the cabinetmaking trade and where he remained six years. On May 16, 1898, Mr. Gerber organized the important business enterprise known as the Home Furniture Co., of York, Limited. Mr. Gerber was the secretary of this company, and had entire charge of the shipping department at the factory. On Aug. 14, 1905, Mr. Gerber and D. W. Gerber bought the entire interest in the Home Furniture Co., Ltd., and entered into a co-partnership agreement under the laws of Pennsylvania under the name of Home Furniture Co., of York, Pa., J. L. Gerber being chosen as president and manager, and D. W. Gerber continuing as treasurer.

Mr. Gerber was married Dec. 31, 1904, to Katherine Stough, daughter of Zacharias and Sarah (Swartz) Stough, and a member of an old York family. Mr. and Mrs. Gerber have a pleasant home at No. 624 East Market street, York. He is one of the rising young business men of the city.

EMANUEL K. JACOBS, of North Codorus township, at the present time engaged in trucking on his cozy little five-acre farm, located nine miles southwest of the city of York, was born Dec. 2, 1854, son of Israel, grandson of Samuel, and great-grandson of Samuel Jacobs, Sr.

The great-great-grandfather of our subject came from Germany to America, and settled in Adams Co., Pa., near East Berlin, where he followed farming.

Samuel Jacobs, the grandfather, was born in Adams county, and later came to York county, settling in North Codorus township, where he purchased a farm of 100 acres, and carried on agricultural pursuits. He also owned a farm of 112 acres in Paradise township. He was a very skillful weaver, and followed that occupation to a certain extent. He died at the age of seventy-nine years, and he and his wife, Mary Jacobs, were both buried at the Altland cemetery. Three children were born to Samuel and Mary Jacobs, namely: Jeremiah, Susan and Israel.

Israel Jacobs was born on the old home farm in North Codorus township. He received a common-school education, and followed farming. He was by trade a cooper, and worked at this occupation for a number of years. He spent the last five years retired, with his son, Emanuel K. He assisted in building the North Codorus meeting house, which land was donated by his wife to the church, which was built in 1897, and Mr. Jacobs died the following year, May 18th. He is buried at the meeting house, across from his son's home. Mr. Jacobs married Louisa Klinedinst, daughter of Daniel and Eliza.
(Lau) Klinedinst, and she is making her home with her son Andrew, near York New Salem. They had children: Emanuel K.; Samuel, who married Annie Bowser, and lives in North Codorus township; Daniel, who married Flora Snyder, and also resides in North Codorus township; and Andrew, who married Emma Miller, also a resident of that township.

Emanuel K. Jacobs attended the township schools until twenty years of age, and remained at home, assisting his father until twenty-five years old, at which time he married Elizabeth Hoff, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Miller) Hoff, the former a minister in the German Baptist Church in Manheim township, where he died; he is buried at Black Rock meeting house. After his marriage Mr. Jacobs located on the old Michael Bentz farm, which he purchased, and remained on this thirty-eight acres, engaged in farming, for twenty years. In 1901 he came to his present small home, a tract of five acres adjoining his large place, having purchased this place from William Hummer. Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs' only child, a daughter, is now the wife of Jacob Keeny, a son of George Keeny, of Loganville, and they have children, Ervin, Carrie, Paul and Mabel. Mr. and Mrs. Keeny are working the home farm.

Mr. Jacobs is a member of the German Baptist Church, having connected himself with that body when twenty years of age, at Black Rock, Manheim township. He is very active in church work, and assisted in erecting the church which is located just across the road from his house.

JAMES HEIKES, a leading farmer and business man of Warrington township, York county, where he owns and operates a farm, was born Aug. 12, 1851, in Franklin township, son of Jonas and Eliza (Gates) Heikes, and grandson of Lawrence Heikes, whose father was a native of Germany.

Lawrence Heikes was one of the first settlers of Franklin township, where he took up a vast tract of land and was one of the well-to-do farmers of his day. He married Catherine Myers, by whom he had the following children: David, Andrew, Jonas, Noah and Lewis W. After his first wife's death Mr. Heikes married Elizabeth Smith, by whom he had two children: Elizabeth and George. In his religious belief he was a member of the Reformed Church, and he died in its faith in 1866, at the age of seventy-five years.

Jonas Heikes was born in Franklin township, and grew to manhood on his father's farm. He followed farming all of his life, and engaged in manufacturing molasses from sugar cane. He purchased the farm formerly owned by his brother Andrew, and in 1867 located in Warrington township, residing upon the farm now owned by his son James, which consists of 116 acres, all well-watered and in an excellent state of cultivation. Here he died in 1896, at the age of seventy-four years. His first wife died in 1858, and by her had the following children: James; Lawrence; Fannie, who married Noah Arnold; Mary, who married William R. Cooke; and Abigail, who married Moses Bentz. In 1866 Jonas Heikes married Fannie Gates, a sister of his first wife. Mr. Heikes was a member of the United Brethren Church.

James Heikes received his education in Franklin township, and has always been engaged in agricultural pursuits. He purchased his present home about four years previous to his father's death, and he has been a very successful farmer and dairyman.

In 1877 Mr. Heikes married Louisa Coulson, daughter of William Coulson, and three children have been born to this union: Minnie Smiley, who was married Dec. 5, 1905, to L. A. Burkholder, and lives in Philadelphia; Ira Lawrence; and Martha Gertrude. In religion the family are members of the United Brethren Church, of which Mr. Heikes is a liberal supporter. In politics he is a Prohibitionist, and is highly respected by his neighbors for his good citizenship, and for the efforts he has put forth in assisting to build up and improve the community.

HARRY A. MILLER, one of the well-known residents of North Hopewell township, York county, who resides on the old family homestead which he purchased from his father's estate, was born Oct. 26, 1857, on what is now the Freaston farm, a property adjoining his own. His grandfather, Henry Miller, married a Beck.

Henry B. Miller, the father of Harry A., was born in 1826, on the farm on which his father had settled in North Hopewell township, and spent his whole life there as a farmer. There he died aged sixty-five years. He married Rickie Summers, daughter of Lewis Summ§ers, and she was reared in Windsor township. She died at the age of fifty-one years.
Henry B. Miller and his wife had children as follows: Caroline, Mrs. J. H. Myers, of York; Catherine, Mrs. Charles Stark, of York; Thomas, who died on the homestead, and who married Margaret Stark; Ellen, Mrs. Hiram Fultz, who died in Wisconsin; Harry A.; Benjamin F., who died young; Lewis, of Lower Windsor township, married to Nettie Arnold; McClelland, of Felton, married to Jane Shall; Levi, of York, who married Jennie Freaston; Sarah Ann, Mrs. Frank Winemiller, of Glen Rock; William and Wesley, twins, the former of whom married Geneva Patterson and resides at Red Lion, and the latter married (first) Ida Strayer and (second) Annie Gambler; and Leo F., of North Hopewell township.

Harry A. Miller attended school from the age of seven years in his native locality, and when Winterstown became a borough he became a student at the Miller school, which stood on a part of the homestead. He lived at home on the farm until he was nineteen years old, and then went to Middletown, Pa., where he hired out for one year for $12.50 a month. He drove a team and worked in a gristmill one mile out of Lancaster City, there making fourteen dollars. After his return to York county he farmed tobacco for two years for Andrew Duncan and J. H. Myers. Mr. Miller then took a trip to the West and worked for a time in Muscatine, Iowa, driving and teaming, and from there went to New Mexico, where he worked in a brickyard at Albuquerque for a time. After all this wandering and many adventures he reached home safely, and for the following year farmed tobacco, later renting a small farm which he operated for four years. He then farmed land owned by P. A. and S. Small for five years. In 1893 he moved onto the old homestead, which he bought as stated, and where he has made many excellent improvements of a substantial character.

Mr. Miller was married June 1, 1883, to Miss Agnes Mellinger, born in Windsor township, daughter of Milton and Martha Ann (Hollenburg) Mellinger. Jacob Mellinger, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Miller, lived first in Windsor township, and then moved to the city of York, where he died. Mrs. Miller's parents were born in Windsor township, the father in 1840 and the mother in 1842. Afterward they settled in Harford county, Md., and after marriage they moved to Winterstown, York county, and then to Windsor township.

Mr. Mellinger farmed William Anstine's farm for four years and then the King farm in Hopewell township from 1871 until 1903. They now reside in Shrewsbury township. They have had children as follows: Agnes, Mrs. Miller, the eldest; Wiley, of near York, married to Lizzie Stark; James, on the Dr. King farm in Hopewell township, married Louisa Wolf; Landis, of Adamsville, married to Clara Faulkner; Arabella, Mrs. William Stark, of Glen Rock; Jacob, deceased; Alice; and Maggie, wife of James Attick. Mr. Mellinger is a strong Democrat.

Mr. Miller was reared in the Union Evangelical Church. He has served as school director for the past five years and is a man well and favorably known all over the township. His family consists of three children: Florence M., Milton H. and Latimer.

MARTIN LUTHER HONSERMYER was born in Berlin, York county, Oct. 31, 1864, of German ancestry, his parents, Charles and Mary Honsermyer, having been born and married in Germany, near the city of Bremen.

Charles Honsermyer had two sisters, Mary, the wife of Henry Baughman, and Charlotte, wife of Christian Strater, both now deceased. He and his wife came to America in 1855, settled at York, Pa., and there passed the remainder of their lives on a small farm. They died within a year of each other, Mr. Honsermyer in 1887 and his wife in 1888. Their children were: Martin L.; Mary, the wife of Albert Swantzzer; Sarah, Mrs. William Ottmeyer; Emma Jane, who married Frederick Blaembum; Kate, wife of Christian Hentze; Charles H., who resides in York township, married to Amanda Inners; and Louisa, married to Henry Hurst, of York.

Martin L. Honsermyer was sent to the public schools of York township for about four months each year during his boyhood, but at an early age he was compelled to go to work and first learned cigarmaking. After working at that for several years he took up the butcher's trade, which he followed for some time. He next tried carpentry for a while and then in 1889 settled down to farming on property which he purchased in York township. He tiled that place successfully for ten years and then in April, 1903, bought his present farm, formerly known as the Hartman property, situated close to the southern limits of York, on the old Powder Mill road. He has greatly improved the place, while its fine location renders it still more valuable.

In 1869 Mr. Honsermyer married Amanda, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shleeter, and their union has been blessed with seven children, namely: Charles L., Ada M., Paul H., Ruth M., William Earl, Clarence A. and Emma Grace. Mr. Honsermyer has been a member of the Salem Lutheran Church of Paradise, Springfield township, since he was seventeen years of age, and is a man held in high esteem in the community in which he lives.

ALBERT C. BOLL, proprietor of the Ebner Cafe, and a well known citizen of York, York county, was born April 29, 1863, son of Jacob W. and Mary (Brasch) Boll, and grandson of Jacob Boll.

Jacob Boll, the grandfather, came to York from Germany, settling at Penn Park, where he carried on a shoemaking business all of his life, dying about 1870, aged seventy-three years. Unto him and his wife were born four children: William, Jacob W., Henry and Catherine. In religious belief he and his wife were German Catholics. In politics he was a Democrat.

Jacob W. Boll was born in York county, and was educated in the old common schools. When a young man he engaged in the grocery and liquor business at No. 232 South George street, continuing therein for many years. He finally sold out this business, and for some years previous to his death engaged in the sale of musical instruments on West Market street, where McFall's haberdashery is now located. Mr. Boll died in 1881, aged forty-four years. To him and his wife nine children were born, as follows: Elizabeth, John, Albert, Mary, Victoria, Clara, Edward, Cecelia and Lewis. In religion he was a Catholic. After the death of her husband Mrs. Boll married Mr. Edward Ebner, who at that time owned Ebner's Cafe, which had been doing business for twenty-seven years. No children were born of this union. Mrs. Ebner died in 1891, aged fifty-six years.

Albert C. Boll was educated in the common schools of York, and St. Mary's Parochial school. When still a lad he entered Ebner's Cafe as a waiter, was later employed as a salesman for this institution, and at Mr. Ebner's death he purchased the cafe, which he has operated to the present time. He has one of the best operated cafes in Pennsylvania, all kinds of game being served at all times, and his wine-list is as complete as is to be found anywhere in the State. Under Mr. Boll's able management the cafe has done a flourishing business, and it may be truly said that Ebner's Cafe is a place "where every bite's a relish."

Mr. Boll was married in 1884 to Miss Carrie Shillow, of Columbia, Pa., daughter of Charles Shillow, a prominent business man of that city. One child has been born to this union, Charles E. In his political views Mr. Boll is a Democrat. He has been vice-president of the Vigilant Fire Co., and also served out the unexpired term of L. T. Deminger, deceased, as president. Mr. Boll belongs to the Knights of St. Paul, being one of the ten original members; the York Volunteer Fireman's Relief Association; the Washington Fraternal and Beneficial Society No. 1; and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which he was one of the five men who founded the Order in York. He represented the latter society in four states, viz.: Minneapolis, Minn., New York, Baltimore, Md., and Denver, Colo. He is a past worthy president and district deputy grand president of York Aerie, No. 183, and belongs to the Grand Aerie. Mr. Boll also belongs to the Merry Band Camping Club, which was organized in 1876; the Homeless 26, of Pittsburgh; and the Oriental Club, of York. In all of these associations Mr. Boll has taken an active part, and he is very popular in all organizations. He is a member of St. Mary's Church in which he is an active worker. He was chairman of the committee in charge of a picnic held in July, 1905, which netted the church over $1,000, something never known before in any church in the county. Mr. Boll has traveled a great deal, and is but lately returned from a trip to Los Angeles, Cal., and as far north as Seattle, Washington.

FRANK L. MILLER, a resident of Fairview township, represents a substantial type of citizen, such as constitutes the real strength of the nation. Although still young he has established a good trade as a butcher, is known for the honesty and fairness of his dealings, and manifests the active and intelligent interest in public affairs which the country may justly look for in its sons, but does not always find.
Mr. Miller belongs to a family long resident in Fairview township, where his grandfather, Jonas Miller, was one of the early settlers. He owned the farm which is now the property of George Bower, and was engaged in its cultivation till his death. His wife, whose maiden name was Nancy Berger, was buried beside him at Mt. Zion cemetery. The children born to them were: Andrew S.; Henry and John, both living in Fairview township; Jane, Mrs. Frank Miller, of Harrisburg; Mary, Mrs. Peter Hoover, of Lisbon, Cumberland county; Lucinda, the wife of George Bower, who lives in the old Miller home in Fairview township; and Annie and Susan, unmarried, who live in Lewisberry.

Andrew S. Miller was born Oct. 26, 1836. He was given a common school education, and on reaching an age to choose his occupation, decided to become a butcher. He learned the business at Lisbon under Peter Seidle, and followed it about five years. He then moved to Fairview township, bought a place of seventy-eight acres situated near the Navoo school and there followed farming till his death, which took place in 1894. He married Miss Sarah Ann Sheaffer, who was born Oct. 16, 1839, and died Feb. 24, 1903. Both are buried in Mt. Zion cemetery. Mr. Miller was a Democrat in politics, and in religious matters a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he took a very active part. Andrew and Sarah Miller were the parents of ten children, namely: Alice, born Dec. 11, 1858, who married John Leach and died; Ida, May 8, 1860, and Flora, Oct. 18, 1862, who both died young; Rebecca, Oct. 27, 1864, who died aged twenty-three; Nancy, Aug. 8, 1866, living at New Cumberland; John L., Jan. 15, 1868, who married Miss Jeannette Kreutzer, and lives in Fairview township; Jacob S., Oct. 31, 1869, who married Miss Rosa Smith, and lives in the same locality; Katie, Oct. 9, 1870, who married (first) Mr. Fencil, and (second) James Wise, of Harrisburg; Frank L.; and Charles, July 5, 1879, who married Miss Rebecca Sherman, and lives in Lisbon.

Frank L. Miller was born in Lower Allen township, Cumberland county, Sept. 30, 1872. His education was received in Fairview township, where he attended the Navoo school till he was about nineteen. From his father he learned to be a butcher, and worked at that trade at home for five years, after which he spent five more in the employ of John K. Taylor on Slate Hill. In 1898 he moved to his present location, and went into business for himself, putting up new buildings and making a thoroughly up-to-date establishment, one of the best in the county. He kills hogs and calves and attends the Broad street market in Harrisburg.

Mr. Miller was united in marriage Oct. 11, 1896, to Miss Myrtle Drawbaugh, daughter of Henry and Naomi (Yencel) Drawbaugh, of Fairview township, the former now deceased. To this marriage no children have been born. Mr. Miller is a Democrat in politics, and has served efficiently as inspector of the election board.

AMOS ALBERT LEBER. The Leber family was settled in York county in the latter portion of the Eighteenth century, and the name has been conspicuously identified with the civic and industrial affairs of the county from that early pioneer epoch to the present time. In the sketch of Jacob H. Leber, appearing elsewhere are given detailed genealogical data. Amos A. Leber is a representative of the fourth generation of the family in York county, while it has been his able to uphold the prestige of the honored name which he bears, since he is one of the reputable and popular citizens of his native township of Lower Windsor, where he has passed his entire life.

Peter Leber, son of Conrad and Maria Leber, was born on the paternal homestead farm, at Butcher's Ore Bank, Lower Windsor township, Oct. 12, 1798, and his education was secured entirely in the German schools maintained in the locality in that early era of the county's history. In his youth he learned the milling trade, which he continued to follow as a vocation for twenty-seven years, in Oberdorff's mill, now known as Anstine's mill. He was three times married. The name of his first wife is not recorded. His second was Mrs. Elizabeth Blymyer, widow of Grimm Blymyer; and his third marriage was to Miss Eugenia Miller. The children of the first marriage were as follows: Israel, who died in youth; Mary Ann, wife of Hon. George Howenstine, died in Lancaster county; Catherine, wife of Elias Rice, died in Mount Joy, that county, leaving one son, Eli; Miss Susan resides in the city of Philadelphia; and Miss Leah resides in York.
The following brief record is given of the children of the second marriage: Peter, who served three years as a member of a Pennsylvania regiment during the Rebellion, having participated in the battles of Gettysburg and other prominent engagements, later removed to Fremont, Ohio, where he married and where he still resides; Elizabeth became the wife of Henry Beck, and was a resident of Wrightsville, this county, at the time of her death; Amos Albert, subject of this sketch, was next in the order of birth; and Granville, who resides in Fremont, Ohio, married (first) Miss Mary Ann Craley, of Lower Windsor township, a sister of Aaron Craley.

After retiring from the milling business Peter Leber purchased about one hundred acres of land at East Prospect, this county, and there engaged in agricultural pursuits. While he also assisted in the laying out of the town of East Prospect, a portion of which is located on his farm. He platted this addition and sold the lots, while he also sold from his farm the land now comprised in the cemetery of the village mentioned. He died on this homestead in 1870, and his third wife survived him by about a decade. He was a prominent and valued member of the Evangelical church, in which he served as classleader, exhorter, etc. He was originally an old-line Whig in politics, later espousing the cause of the Know Nothing party and finally identifying himself with the Republican party at the time of its organization, ever afterward supporting its principles. His second wife, mother of our subject, died in 1840.

Amos Albert Leber was born in the family home near Oberdorf's mill, Lower Windsor township, this county, April 24, 1841, his father being in charge of the mill at the time. His early educational discipline was secured principally in the common schools at East Prospect, the family having removed to the farm there when he was about six years old, and he early began to lend his aid in the prosecution of the work of the farm, attending school during the winter terms only. In 1862, a few months after attaining his legal majority, he was married, and for the four ensuing years he lived in the home of his father-in-law, in Lower Windsor township, his wife having been housekeeper for her widowed father for about eleven years. During the time of his residence on this farm, Mr. Leber had charge of its cultivation and management to a large extent. In the spring of 1869 he located on his present fine farm of forty-five acres, in Lower Windsor township, where he has ever since maintained his home. He purchased the property from George Paules, who had secured the same from David Hengst. The latter erected the present dwelling on the place in 1847, and also a store and other farm buildings, having here conducted a general merchandise business for a number of years, after which he removed to the West. Mr. Leber has improved and remodeled the residence, and in 1892 he built his present large and well-equipped barn, the former one having been destroyed by fire, enkindled by lightning, in the same year. He is one of the progressive and successful farmers of the county, and everything about his place bespeaks thrift and prosperity. In politics Mr. Leber has ever given an unqualified allegiance to the Republican party, having cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, in 1864, and having ever since done his part in supporting the party cause. He was reared in the faith of the Evangelical church, of which his wife is a member, and which he regularly attends. In a fraternal way he is identified with Winona Lodge, No. 944, I. O. O. F., at East Prospect; and with Aurora Council, No. 304, Jr. O. U. A. M., in the same town.

On Christmas day, 1862, Mr. Leber was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Kline, who was born in Lower Windsor township, July 8, 1842, daughter of Peter and Mary Ann (Flory) Kline, the former of whom died in 1867, the latter having passed away in 1852, after which Mrs. Leber kept house for her father, as before stated. In conclusion of this resume we enter brief record concerning the children of Mr. and Mrs. Leber: Mary Ann, born in 1863, became the wife of Daniel S. Baer, and her death occurred at their home, in Chace- ford, this county, in 1891, her husband and three children surviving her. Arvallia, born Oct. 8, 1864, is the widow of Simon W. Kise and resides in East Prospect, having four children. Peter Harrison, born April 1, 1866, died in infancy. George Henry, born Oct. 4, 1867, married Fanny Kraft, and they have three children. He is employed as clerk in a general store at East Prospect. The fifth child died in infancy, unnamed. Edwin C., born Feb. 16, 1872, has attained marked success as an educator. He secured his rudimentary education in the district schools, which he attended until he had attained the age of sixteen years, after which he spent two years in the York County Academy and the next two years in the Northern Indiana Normal School, at Valparaiso, Ind., being there graduated as a member of the class of 1894. Soon afterward he entered the normal school at Millersville, Pa., where he was graduated in 1896. He began teaching in the district schools of his home county before entering the York County Academy, later taught for three years in the Will school, in Lower Windsor township, and an equal period in the village schools at Yorkana. While holding the position last noted he taught one term also in the York County Academy. Later he held the principalship of the schools at York Haven for two years, and then, in the autumn of 1902, assumed his present incumbency as superintendent of the public schools at Dauphin, Dauphin county, Pa. He remains a bachelor at the time of this writing. Arthur, born July 31, 1873, is a manufacturer of cigars at Red Lion, this county, married Savilla Smith and they have two children. James Irving, born Jan. 3, 1875, is engaged in the bakery business at Red Lion. He married Octavia Detwiler and they have four children. Matilda Angeline, born Nov. 23, 1876, remains at the parental home. John, born Sept. 29, 1877, is a baker by trade and resides in Red Lion. Clara, born April 20, 1879, is the wife of Edward Garner, of East Prospect, and they have no children. Bertha, born April 28, 1883, and Virginia, born April 19, 1887, are still beneath the parental roof-tree.

FREDERICK BENTZ, a well-to-do agriculturist of Warrington township, York county, was born Aug. 15, 1851, son of Jacob L. and Elizabeth (Sloothour) Bentz.

Jacob L. Bentz was born in Dover township, this county, and was educated in the common schools. He took up farming when young and followed that occupation all of his life, owning a farm of 155 acres in Warrington township, and was considered a prosperous farmer of his day. His first wife, Elizabeth Sloothour, bore him eleven children, as follows: John; Michael; Susan, deceased, who married Henry Arnold; Mary, deceased, who married John T. Wireman; Jacob; Lewis; Rebecca, married to Samuel Deardorff; David; Leah, married to Rudolph Saunders; Adam; and Frederick. In religious belief Mrs. Bentz was a Lutheran, and she died in that faith in 1851, at the age of forty years. Mr. Bentz afterward married Susan Hartman. His death occurred in 1873, when he was aged seventy years.

Frederick Bentz was educated in the common schools of Warrington township, and has devoted all his life to farming. In 1879 Mr. Bentz purchased his present home, which consists of 115 acres, and he has cultivated it until it is at the present time one of the finest in the township.

Mr. Bentz married, in 1875, Miss Laura E. Frick, daughter of Christian P. and Matilda J. (Speck) Frick, and four children have been born to this union: George E., Harry F., Orie B. and one that died in infancy.

In their religious belief Frederick Bentz and his wife are devoted members of the German Reformed Church. In politics, while never seeking public office, Mr. Bentz has always voted the Democratic ticket, and watches with interest the success of his party. He is considered one of the substantial men of his township, and his knowledge of things agricultural is conceded to be far above the average.

CHARLES G. MYERS, who is a prominent and industrious farmer of Codorus township, was born in that township, son of Elias H. and Amanda Glatfelter (Stover) Myers.

John Myers, his grandfather, was born in North Codorus township, York Co., Pa., and had a large tract of land which he farmed in North Codorus and Codorus townships. He married Estra Henry and they had children as follows: Elias H.; Jesse, deceased; Lydia, living in Springfield township; Levi, living in Codorus township; Harriet, deceased; Naomi; Edward; and Mary. The mother of these children died at the age of seventy-five years, and the father at the age of sixty-seven years. Both are buried at Shuster's church in Springfield township.

Elias H. Myers, father of Charles G., attended the schools of Codorus township, and assisted his father at farming: In 1859 he married Amanda Glatfelter, a daughter of Jacob and Nancy Stover, and located where they now reside, on his father's farm. They have a fine farm of 130 acres of good land in the northern part of the township, which he has built up and farmed well. For the last four teen years, however, he has lived a retired life, which he has justly earned. To Mr. and Mrs.
Myers came children as follows: John H., who married Neely Weaver, is the well known merchant tailor, of York. Edward G., a graduate of the University of Maryland, and admitted to the bar Jan. 8, 1900, now practicing in York, married Emma Glatfelter. Agness, who is the wife of William Stover, is living in North Codorus township. Charles G. is the subject of this sketch. Annie, the wife of Charles Diehl, a Lutheran minister, is living Charles G. Myers attended the township schools and assisted his father at farming. For thirteen years he farmed his father's farm, and in 1903 bought the Levi brothers' farm of forty-five acres, upon which are many fine buildings. This farm is situated a short distance from his father's, and is well kept.

Mr. Myers married Clara Holtzapple, a daughter of Israel and Annie Lecrone. Their children are: Lloyd, Paul, George and Naomi. Mr. Myers is now serving as school director of his township, in which he is a well known and respected citizen. In politics he is a Democrat.

LEVI GERBRICK, proprietor of the hotel at Railroad borough, York county, was born in Shrewsbury township, in 1867, son of Noah Gerbrick, and grandson of John Gerbrick.

John Gerbrick was a carpenter by trade and this he followed for a number of years, and then engaged in farming. His children were:
William, Jacob, Noah, Levi and Lydia.

Noah Gerbrick, father of Levi, was born in Shrewsbury township, where he received a common school education and grew up on his father's farm. He followed farming until 1895, when he moved to Glen Rock, where he now resides. He married Servilla Warner, and their children were: Levi; Mary, wife of J.
F. Lentz, a passenger fireman on the Northern Central Railroad; and Henry A., a carpenter at Glen Rock.

Levi Gerbrick attended school in Codorus township, and was a pupil of the Rohrbaugh school until he was nineteen years of age. He then entered upon railroad work, becoming a brakeman for the Northern Central Railroad, and followed that for several years. He then accepted the position of fireman for the Glen Rock Wire Cloth Company, at Glen Rock, and continued there about ten years. He was one of the original stockholders of that company.

In August, 1905, Mr. Gerbrick bought the "Jackson House," at Railroad. Under his management this is becoming one of the best hostelries along the line. Mr. Gerbrick has modern ideas and he has just completed the installation of steam heat and has equipped the whole house with a system of baths, with hot and cold water. He has thirteen desirable rooms, and he makes it his pleasure to have his guests comfortable.

Mr. Gerbrick was married (first) to May Greemplate, who died in 1894. His second marriage was to Rebecca Trout. He is a memner of the Red Men and of the Heptasops.

SAMUEL I. HOFF, for many years prominent in real estate and insurance circles in York, is one of the most unique figures in York county. He was born in York, May 11, 1861, son of Isaiah Hoff, a wagon builder of that place, who was killed June 23, 1864, in front of Peters burg, Va., while gallantly battling for his country as a member of Company
C, 87th Regiment, P. V. I. Mr. Hoff's mother was Katherine Kreider, daughter of Jacob Kreider, a farmer of York county, and descedended from the Weigels, an old family of York county, the settlement of Weigelstown, in Dover township, having been founded by them.
Mr. Hoff's paternal line is as old in Pennsylvania as the maternal, an island in the Susquehanna, still known as Hoff's Island, having been owned and named by his great-grandfather.

Mr. Hoff was an only son, and having been bereft of his parents at a tender age he ran away to Kentucky, where for a time he carried water to workingmen for twenty-five cents a day. He next became assistant in a store in Illinois, and then found employment on a farm at Wolf Creek, Tenn., at three dollars a month.
After that, while still a mere lad, young Hoff made his way to New Orleans, and found employment as cabin boy on the sailing ship
"Hagerstown," at five dollars a month. On this stanch old vessel he made an extended voyage, touching at Callao, Peru. Liverpool, England, and Shanghai, China, and came back to the Peruvian coast; from there went to Dover, England, and London, Calcutta, and finally San Francisco, Cal. He has sailed over the North Atlantic, South Atlantic, North Pacific, South Pacific, Mediterranean, Red Sea—in fact has made ports in every country that flies a flag. Having been honorably discharged after a term of years, Mr. Hoff returned to York, his birthplace, on a visit, but remained only a few days, his roving disposition taking him once more from the place of his nativity. He found his way to Galveston, Texas, and became employed herding cattle on the Brazos river, being a cowboy for several years, at the end of which time he returned to York. Remaining but a very brief time, however, he went to Philadelphia and joined the sailing vessel “Jennie V. Strickler,” as seaman. Leaving the sailing vessel after a time, Mr. Hoff joined the crew of forty-five men on the American ship “Star,” which foundered off the River Plate, in the Pacific ocean, and for eleven days the survivors were without food or drink. Of the crew of forty-five men Mr. Hoff and a companion were the only two saved. They were picked up by a Norwegian bark and carried back to the English coast. Finding his way to Liverpool, Mr. Hoff joined the White Star Line of passenger steamers, and successfully took the post commander’s examination when only nineteen years of age; he served for one year as second officer on the “Germania,” one of the White Star Line ocean passenger steamers. At the expiration of this service Mr. Hoff again returned to York, but still possessed of the roving spirit, he went to Washington, D. C., and enlisted on a United States monitor, serving under First Lieutenant York Nole. Finally he became a railroader on the Illinois Central, subsequently entering the service of the Northern Central, and later the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He continued in the railroad service until Dec. 5, 1883, when he lost his right leg in a wreck.

After his recovery Mr. Hoff occupied himself as a clerk, and later was the proprietor of a livery and exchange stable. Retiring from the latter business he opened a real estate and insurance business, in which venture he has been eminently successful. Mr. Hoff has, in his office, a frame containing four discharges from the ocean service, and in the center of these discharges a picture of the first vessel on which he sailed as a boy. He rejoices in the possession of twelve honorable discharges, for in addition to thirteen years at sea and two years in the United States Navy, he served as a member of Company A, 8th Regiment, P. N. G.

Mr. Hoff was married to Miss Virginia Hildebrand, daughter of Reuben Hildebrand, a car builder of York.

In fraternal circles Mr. Hoff is very well known, belonging to several very prominent orders. He is also a member of several foreign orders into which he was admitted in his traveling days. Mr. Hoff, owing to his business acumen and his untiring efforts, together with his adaptability and quick recognition and acceptance of business opportunities, is recognized as rapidly approaching the front rank among the financiers of York county. He has won an enviable reputation as a business man of integrity and as one who is always ready to endorse measures that promise to be of permanent benefit to the community.

JACOB WILLIAM TROUT, of Chanceford township, is a son of Judge Valentine Trout, and was born on the home farm in Chanceford township, May 10, 1847.

Mr. Trout attended the public schools of his day, but as the war came on at the time his education was in progress his advantages in that line were rather limited. He remained at home on the farm until twenty-one years of age, and then left home and worked for Dr. B. F. Porter, with whom he remained one year. His next employer was A. K. Fry, for whom he worked in his store at Brogueville, being the latter’s first clerk. He then engaged in carpentering for part of a year. After his marriage he settled on his father’s place where he remained twenty years, in 1892 locating on his present farm of 131 acres, which he has taken “right out of the woods.” His present residence was built in 1896, his barn ten years previous to that time, the timber being taken off the farm. Mr. Trout furnished the timber for the present New Harmony Presbyterian Church, with which he united when a young man, and in which he has been an elder for many years. In politics he is a Democrat.

On Jan. 4, 1872, Mr. Trout married Miss Susan Miller, and they became the parents of the following children: J. Thomas, a farmer of Lower Chanceford township, who married Miss Annie Atkins; Valentine C., of Philadelphia, who married Miss Jane Long; Lizzie J., at home; Ada M., a school teacher; and James Kerwin, at home.

Phillip Miller, Mrs. Trout's grandfather, was a native of Maryland, whence the family removed to near York, and after his marriage came to Chanceford township, where he died. His wife, who had been Elizabeth Young, died at the age of eighty-two years in the same township. John Miller, son of Phillip, and father of Mrs. Trout, was born near Brogueville Station, Chanceford township, and lived within two miles of his native place all of his life. He had received but a limited education, being eight or nine miles from a school house when young; and all of the geography he knew was studied after his sixtieth year. In spite of handicaps Mr. Miller became a well informed man, having a most retentive memory. He was a close Bible student. He had learned the cooper's trade at Cross Roads, Hopewell township, and followed same many years. His first religious affiliations were with St. Luke's German Reformed Church, which he attended when a boy. After his marriage he united with the Round Hill Presbyterian Church, and later was one of the organizers of the New Harmony Presbyterian Church, at the Brogue, and helped to build the first church there. He was a devout God-fearing man. In politics he was a Democrat. Mr. Miller's death occurred in his eighty-eighth year. He married Catherine Shaull, and they were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, who married Charles Wolf, of Hopewell township; Catherine, who married John Patterson, of Chanceford township; Agnes, who married Thomas J. Douglas, of Chanceford township; Sarah, who married John R. Saylor, of the same township, and Susan, Mrs. Trout.

Catherine (Shaull) Miller was born in Chanceford township, where her father, George Shaull, owned the farm which is now divided into three farms, owned by Harry L. Grove, Samuel Ansparer and Mr. McClure. George Shaull married Barbara Swisher, and they had the following children: John, who married Catherine Heffner; Elizabeth, who married George Hubbard, and died in Hopewell township; Sarah, who married George Spear, (they migrated to Cadiz, Ohio, where Mr. Spear followed his trade of blacksmith, later removed to Crawfordsville, Ind., and thence to Washington, Iowa, where he kept store, and to Berlin, Iowa, where he was also a merchant, and where he and his wife died, leaving two children—(1) Amelia, Mrs. William Bowers, who has three children, Fleta, Mrs. Samuel Rathbone, of Red Oak, Iowa, Mildred, a teacher at Eldora, Iowa, and Ella, Mrs. Roland Heard, of Granville, Iowa; and (2) Helen, Mrs. Luther Allen, of Ames, Iowa); Henry, who married twice, his second wife being Mary McCoe (he died at their home in Cumberland county, Pa.); Catherine, the mother of Mrs. Trout; Barbara, who married William Workinger, and died at her home in Hopewell township; and George, who died in 1903 in Hopewell township, (he married Rebecca Wolf).

DAVID H. STRAYER is the owner of an excellent sixty-four-acre farm in North Hopewell township, York county, upon which he was born Nov. 20, 1857, son of David W. and Lydia (Strayer) Strayer, and brother of A. F. Strayer, deputy revenue collector of York.

Mr. Strayer attended the Duncan public school near his home, under H. H. Snyder, until he was thirteen years old. At the age of fourteen he left home to find work, having fourteen cents in his pocket—a cent for each year of his life. He found employment with Benjamin Strickler, two miles from Columbia, and worked through harvesting, the following year attending school. From Mr. Strickler, Mr. Strayer had received the high wages of two dollars for harvesting, and one dollar for general work. When school closed the following spring the boy was employed by Ben Mussmer to drive a milk wagon in Columbia, and for this work he received fifteen dollars per month. After one and one-half years of that employment he went to Chicago to see the city. There he remained but a short time, returning to Columbia, and being employed for a time as a bowsman on a canal boat. He then returned home and for one year worked for his father, at the end of which time he went above York to help take out timber for Edward Smyser, continuing at that occupation for a short time, and then re-locating on the family homestead. Mr. Strayer remained at home until his marriage.

On May 29, 1881, Mr. Strayer married Ellen E. Grim, of North Hopewell township, daughter of Daniel F. and Rebecca (Phillips) Grim. After his marriage Mr. Strayer removed to a small twelve-acre tract close to the home farm, which he worked for one and one-half years, and then operated the home place on shares for several years. In 1899 he purchased the homestead, consisting of sixty-four acres, remodeled the residence, built additions and made general improvements, and transformed the place into an attractive and valuable property.

Mr. and Mrs. Strayer are members of the Evangelical Church, and he is a teacher in the Sabbath school. In politics he is a consistent Republican, and has served in a number of township offices. To Mr. and Mrs. Strayer have been born: Claudia A., Mrs. A. F. Snyder, of Winterstown; Naomi R., a student of the Millersville Normal school, and a teacher in the public schools of North Hopewell township; Marvin E., who lives at home; and Lydia Lovella, deceased.

In 1878 Mr. Strayer joined the Felton band and continued to be a member of that organization four years, three years of which time he was its leader. In 1883 he joined the Loganville band, remaining with them until 1898 and playing several of the instruments at different periods. He is a first-class musician and has an excellent reputation as a band leader.

JOHN WESLEY HORN, of Yorkana, who is engaged in the manufacture of cigars upon an extensive scale, was born near Yorkana Jan. 29, 1854, a son of John and Eliza (Shapp) Horn.

John Horn, his father, likewise was born and reared in York county, where he learned the blacksmith's trade in his youth, continuing to follow it for many years. After the close of the Civil War he purchased fifteen acres of land near Yorkana and there took up his residence. He erected a small shop on the place in which he continued to follow the work of his trade until he had attained the age of threescore years and ten, when he received a paralytic stroke which caused him to be practically an invalid until his death, in 1897, at the age of seventy-four years. He was a man of impregnable integrity, loyal and earnest in every relation, and ever commanded the regard and confidence of all those whose life lines crossed his own. He was a stalwart Republican in politics and his religious connection was with the United Evangelical Church, of which his venerable widow also has long been a devoted member. Mrs. Eliza (Shapp) Horn was born in what is now the village of Yorkana, Lower Windsor township, being a daughter of Jacob Shapp, a blacksmith by trade and long identified with the agricultural interests of that township. The maiden name of his wife was Slenker. Mrs. Horn makes her home in Yorkana, where she is held in affectionate regard by her wide circle of friends. She is past seventy-six years of age at the time of this writing. Of her children is presented the following brief record: Alexander married Elizabeth Leiphart and is a representative farmer of Lower Windsor township; Lavina and Amanda died in early childhood; John W. was the fourth in order of birth; Albert and Arthur are deceased; Eliza remains with her mother; Ida is the wife of Frederick Snyder, of Yorkana; and Morris, who married Alice Keller, is a resident of Yorkana.

John W. Horn obtained his early education in the common schools, yet such were the exigencies and conditions that his attendance was desultory and of brief duration; but his alert mentality has enabled him to make good progress despite the handicap of his youth, for he has learned valuable lessons under that wisest of all head-masters—experience. From boyhood up he assisted his father on the farm, and when his services were not thus required worked for other farmers. He received thirty cents a day when a boy and was permitted, as were his brothers, to keep all that he was able to earn when not needed at home. He continued to be thus engaged during his early youth, while for three years prior to his marriage he worked at the carpenter's trade, and learned the manufacture of cigars under the direction of Samuel Shearer. When twenty-one years of age Mr. Horn married, having saved $600 as a basis for his domestic career. The second year after his marriage he purchased a house and ten acres of land in Yorkana, and early in the eighties engaged in the manufacturing of cigars on his own responsibility, utilizing the basement of his house for a shop and employing only one assistant for somewhat more than a year; thereafter he gradually increased his facilities and corps of workmen, in proportion to the gratifying expansion of his business. For some time he sold his entire product in the local market, but he now ships goods (principally five-cent) to the most diverse sections of the Union, having gained a high reputation for the various brands of cigars which he manufactures. In the third year after starting his enterprise Mr. Horn erected a little shop, 16 feet square and one and one-half stories in height, which stood on the site of his present office. About five years later he found his quarters so inadequate that he built a two-story addition to his factory, the new building being 32 feet in length. Two years later he was again compelled to enlarge his establishment; so he tore down the old building and erected his present finely equipped factory, the structure being \( 35 \times 24 \) feet in dimensions and three stories in height. Mr. Horn's force of operatives varies from twenty to forty hands, according to the demands of the trade, and his factory represents one of the important industrial enterprises of his section of York county.

As a public-spirited and progressive citizen Mr. Horn has ever manifested a deep interest in local affairs, and his political allegiance is given to the Republican party. He and his wife are zealous and valued members of the United Evangelical Church at Yorkana, in which he has held various official positions, including those of trustee and treasurer.

On Dec. 23, 1875, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Horn to Mary Ferree, who was born and reared in York county, daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth (Fauth) Ferree, the former of whom, now deceased, was a representative farmer of Lower Windsor township; the latter now resides at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Horn. Children as follows have been born to Mr. and Mrs. John W. Horn: Dora May is the wife of William Seachrist, of Yorkana; Howard Grant remains at the parental home and is employed in his father's factory; Lillian is the wife of Charles Heindel, of Lower Windsor township; Arthur is a resident of Shrewsbury, York county; Mary, Elmira, Daisy, John, Kerwin, Stella and Paul still reside with their parents.

HENRY C. MILLER was born Oct. 2, 1849, in Newberry township, where he now resides, son of Henry Shetter and Mary Ann (Groom) Miller.

John Miller, his great-grandfather, came from Wales and settled along the Yellow Breeches Creek, in Cumberland county, where he was in the milling business, making cloth. His son, Abraham, was born Feb. 13, 1792, in Cumberland county, received a common-school education, and learned the milling business from his father. He located at Roxboro, Newberry township, and built a mill along Bennett's Run, where he manufactured cloth, flour andfeed. He also engaged in distilling and was the owner of about 400 acres of land. At the time of his death he was a merchant there. He died March 10, 1873, aged eighty-one years, one month and two days, and was buried at the old Miller burying ground which was then on his farm. He was married (first), Aug. 19, 1814, by the Rev. J. G. Shoemaker, to Mary Shetter, born Sept. 7, 1793, daughter of John and Esther Shetter. She died Feb. 15, 1861, having had these children: John S., born July 15, 1815; Henry S. was the father of Henry C.; Solomon, born Jan. 22, 1819, died when one year, two months old; Lydia, born March 10, 1821; Daniel, Jan. 7, 1823; Philip, Feb. 15, 1825; Louis, Feb. 5, 1827; Eliza, June 17, 1829; Mary, Nov. 21, 1834; and Abraham S., March 11, 1838.

Henry S. Miller was born April 16, 1817, at the old home in Newberry township, and received a common-school education. For a number of years he engaged in teaming for his father, and then located on one of his father's farms in Newberry township where he was a farmer. There he remained twenty-one years, and bought the old Thomas Garrison farm of eighty acres, later adding twenty-one acres to it, and then bought the old Benjamin Garrison farm of 140 acres, which was adjoining the others. Mr. Miller was a man of energy and a tireless worker, being very successful and making many friends. His death occurred Dec. 27, 1891, and he is buried at the Friends Meeting House in Newberry township. On Jan. 9, 1840, he married Mary Ann Groom, daughter of William and Margaret (Reeser) Groom. She was born Oct. 11, 1818, died Jan. 9, 1887, and is buried beside her husband. The children born to this worthy couple were: (1) Lieut. William R., born Feb. 26, 1841, married Rebecca Nebinger, deceased, daughter of Dr. Robert Nebinger, of Lewisberry. He enlisted Feb. 19, 1862, in Company F, 56th P. V. I., served three years, lost his left arm at Spottsylvania, and returned home with the rank of lieutenant. (2) Eliza Jane, born Feb. 7, 1843, married A. S. Hutton, of Lewisberry borough. (3) Margaret, born Aug. 26,

Henry C. Miller received his education in the public schools of Newberry township, and resided at home until he was nineteen years of age. In 1869 he migrated to the West, stopping first in Ohio, where he remained four months; thence removing to Illinois, he resided there until the following spring, and then, in 1874, he located in California where he engaged in railroad carpentering and bridge building. Later he located temporarily in Oregon, Washington Territory, Idaho and again in Washington, returning to his home in 1885. In that year he bought the old homestead of 100 acres of land, where he and his sister Malinda have since resided. Mr. Miller is unmarried.

Like his father Henry C. Miller is a Republican. Mr. Miller's father served as school director and at one time was supervisor of Newberry township. Malinda, Mr. Miller's sister, has been active in religious work, being through her influence that the old Friends meeting house was rebuilt. Mr. Miller is very highly regarded throughout Newberry township, both as a man and a scientific and successful farmer.

GEORGE WASHINGTON FULTON, who owns a productive farm of sixty acres in East Hopewell township, which is known as the "Maple Lawn Farm," was born in March, 1859, near Stewartstown, in what is now known as Hopewell township. His parents were David and Jennie (Edie) Fulton.

David Fulton, the father, a son of Hugh Fulton, was a native of Hopewell township, and there spent his boyhood and youth. When the Civil War commenced he was one of the first to offer his services to his country, but he broke down under the hardships and privations, was taken sick at the front and died in the hospital. His remains were brought home and laid to rest in the cemetery at Stewartstown. He married Jennie Edie, of Hopewell township, a daughter of Hays Edie; she died at Stewartstown in 1872, a consistent member of the M. E. Church. The children of David Fulton and wife were: James William, now of Stewartstown, married Savilla Glessick; Mary, is the widow of Bates Hendricks; George W.; and Ella is Mrs. George Carman, of Stewartstown.

In his youth George W. Fulton had many hardships with which to contend, losing first his father and, in 1872, his mother. He attended school and worked on the farm until thirteen years of age, but his mother's death caused the family to be entirely broken up and he sought farm work in the neighborhood. This he easily obtained, as he was honest and industrious, and one of the farms on which he labored as a boy, tired and weary at times, is the very one of which he is now the owner. For fifteen years he worked by the month for neighboring farmers, and as necessity taught him frugality, he saved his money, so that when he was ready to purchase a farm for himself he had the means with which to do it. In the meantime he had become attached to the estimable young lady whom he married on Feb. 28, 1889, Miss Alverda Blanche Edie, who was reared and educated in Hopewell township, a daughter of John and Sarah (Sutton) Edie (both deceased). Her father was a well-known carpenter at Stewartstown. Mrs. Fulton was the third in a family of five children, the others being: Thomas, deceased; William, of Hopewell township; Margaret, Mrs. Jack Bowman, of Hopewell township; and Miss Grace.

Following his marriage, Mr. Fulton farmed for six years for his uncle, James Fulton, and then bought a tract of sixty-eight acres, known as the "Pleasant Grove Farm." On this he remained for two years, and then sold it and purchased his present farm, which he has converted into one of the most comfortable homes in the township. He carries on a general line of farming, raises stock and does some dairying—living in fact as a well-to-do typical independent American agriculturist.

Mr. and Mrs. Fulton have two children, namely: Maynard M., who was born July 4, 1890; and Helen Lora, born April 1, 1892. Mr. Fulton and family attend the Hopewell Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Repub-

GEORGE M. PARR, of York, whose place of business is conveniently located at No. 606 South Queen street, was born Sept. 17, 1853, in Penn township, Lancaster county, son of George Michael and Jane (Reber) Parr.

John Parr, the grandfather of our subject, died in Penn township, where he had been a farmer, and kept a tavern on his farm. This tavern was well known for many years, and was located on the Baltimore pike, about one mile from Hanover, at the forks of the old Black Rock road. John Parr married a Miss Brouthers, of Irish extraction.

George Michael Parr, the father of George M., was born at Littlestown, and followed farming all of his life. He married Jane Reber, and located on a farm in Penn township, where he died Aug. 16, 1886, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. In politics he was a Democrat. The children born to George Michael and Jane (Reber) Parr, besides George M., the subject of our sketch, were as follows: Louisa, who married Daniel Swartzback, of Hanover; Angeline, deceased; Valentine D., of York; and John R., of Reading, Pennsylvania.

George M. Parr grew to manhood on the home farm, and attended the township schools until seventeen years of age. He remained with his father until nineteen, and then learned the cigarmaking business in Hanover, which he followed until 1875. He then located in York, where he followed his business for sixteen years, being with Albert Gallatin, a cigar manufacturer. Mr. Parr learned the barber business with Ebeck & Remdel, and at times worked as a helper at odd jobs. In 1887 he started in business for himself on South Queen street, locating at his present place in October, 1904. Mr. Parr is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, No. 182. In political faith he is a stanch Democrat, but has never sought public office. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church.

On April 26, 1877, Mr. Parr was united in marriage with Miss Lydia Ann Walter, born in Neffstown, daughter of John J. and Barbara Elizabeth (Baughman) Walter, both of whom are deceased. Mrs. Parr's parents were natives of Germany, who located in York, where they were married. Mr. Walter learned his trade with a Mr. Ball, and worked at shoe-making for several years in Philadelphia, and then returned to York, after which he located in Neftstown. They died at their home on Queen street, in York, where they had located in 1869. John Baughman, an uncle of Mrs. Parr, was a soldier in the Civil war, and was captured by the Confederates, dying in Libby prison.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Parr are as follows: George Henry, the eldest, married Miss Margaret Frey; Mabel married William Wells, of York; Charles A., a barber, is at home; Ivan W. lives at Baltimore; Royal M., Chester M. and Helen C., are at home; and Florence L. is deceased.

J. HARVEY ANDERSON, of East Hopewell township, York Co., Pa., is a descendant of James Anderson who emigrated from the Emerald Isle to the United States and settled at an early day in what is now East Hopewell township.

Andrew Anderson, the grandfather of J. Harvey, son of the emigrant, was born on the Keesev farm, and married a Miss Wallace, a descendant of the old Wallace family of this section. Andrew Anderson located on what is now the Wilson Keesev farm in East Hopewell township, and there spent his life, engaged in farming; there also he and his wife died, firm in the faith of the Presbyterian Church. In political faith Mr. Anderson was a Whig. His children were: James, who died in Peach Bottom township, married (first) Sabilla Morrison, and (second) Mary Wallace; Robert, who died in Peach Bottom township, was a miller and farmer, and married Miss Adeline McQuigley, who died aged eighty-seven years; Margaret married James Maffatt, and died at Muddy Creek Forks; William is mentioned below; Jennie is deceased; Andrew, who died in the grandfather's homestead, married (first) Isabella McAlister, and (second) Eliza Beard.

William Anderson was born on the home farm in 1805, received a fair education, and was reared to the life of an agriculturist. He married Miss Eleanor L. Morrison, and afterward located on the farm now owned by J. Harvey Anderson. There he died in September, 1862, aged fifty-seven years, his wife surviving him until Jan. 5, 1879. Mr. Anderson was ruling elder in the Center Presbyterian Church for over thirty years. In politics he was first a Whig and then a Republican, and held several township offices. His children were Ellen Ann, widow of William S. Wilson, of East Hopewell township; Mary Jane, who married Joseph Liggett, of Fawn township; Andrew Wallace, deceased; Margaret W., Mrs. William C. Collins, who removed to Logan, Ohio, thence to Iowa and finally to Kansas, their present home; J. Harvey; and Esther E. and Sabilla A., both unmarried and residing in Des Moines, Iowa.

J. Harvey Anderson was born on the farm which he now owns, May 28, 1844, and was educated in the township schools, his first teachers being Lucretia Prall and John Fulton. The boy left school at the age of sixteen years, his last teacher being J. T. Wilson. Mr. Anderson enlisted at the outbreak of the war in Company K, 50th Pa. Militia, as an emergency man during the campaign of Gettysburg, and after serving three months was discharged. He re-enlisted in July, 1864, in Company E, 194th P. V. I., Capt. G. F. Ross, for 100 days. He served sixty days, and then enlisted in Company L, 9th Cav., Capt. George F. Smith, under Col. Thomas Jorden, Kilpatrick's division, and saw service at South River, March 14, 1865, his regiment also losing heavily at Bentonville and a number of smaller engagements. For a time Mr. Anderson was employed as a scout, and, on one occasion while foraging for horses, with twenty-three others, was nearly cut off. Mr. Anderson was discharged at Lexington, N. C., at the close of the war. On the day of Johnston's surrender, Mr. Anderson was detailed one of Sherman's escort to receive the surrender.

At the close of the war Mr. Anderson returned to the homestead and there engaged in farming. He was married Feb. 24, 1866, to Miss Jane Anne Hyson, daughter of John (deceased) and Margaret (Miller) Hyson. After the death of his mother, Mr. Anderson purchased the home place, consisting of ninety-four acres in two tracts, and here he has since remained engaged in general farming, his crops being among the finest in the township. He and his family are members of the Round Hill Presbyterian Church, which he joined over thirty years ago. He has been elder for the past twelve years, was superintendent of the Sabbath-school for two years, assistant for two years, and a teacher for eight years. He was formerly a member of the Center Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a stanch Republican. He was a charter member of Private E. Morrison G. A. R. Post, Stewartstown; is also a member of the Society of the Ninth Cavalry. Mr. Anderson's children are as follows: William C., of Norristown, married Ida Klinger; John E., of Hopewell township, married Irena Payne; and Clayton J. H., Margaret E. and Robert M. are at home.

HENRY HURST operates a successful draying and general transfer line in the city of York, and has developed a most flourishing enterprise through his energy, courtesy and able management, being prompt and reliable in his business transactions. He now utilizes twelve teams, with the requisite complement of drays and trucks, and he gives employment to about fifteen men the greater portion of the time. Mr. Hurst is a native of York county, having been born on the homestead farm, in Spring Garden township, Dec. 22, 1862, son of Henry and Louisa (Knollman) Hurst, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter in York county, where their marriage was solemnized, the father having left the Fatherland when a young man and located in York county soon after his emigration to America. After his marriage he settled on a farm in Spring Garden township, becoming one of the prosperous and highly esteemed agriculturists of that part of the county. Both parents are living retired in the city of York. The father is a Democrat in political belief, and he and his wife are members of the United Brethren Church. Besides the immediate subject of this sketch, the following children were born to Henry and Louisa (Knollman) Hurst: Sarah (single); Samuel; Levi; Clara, married to George Jones, who lives in York; Charles and Elizabeth, who are residents of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Henry Hurst, Jr., the immediate subject of this review, passed his boyhood days in the homestead farm, in whose work he early began to lend his aid, while his educational advantages were such as were offered by the public schools of the locality. After leaving school he continued to assist his father in the work and management of the home farm until he had attained the age of eighteen years, and thereafter he was engaged in the Billmyer & Small car shops, then with the York Transfer Company, and still later with the P. A. & S. Small Hardware Company. He was thus employed until 1885, when he came to York and established his present business, which had a modest inception, as his financial resources were very limited and his winning of independent success rested solely upon his individual exertions. He devoted himself assiduously to the work in hand, giving the best possible service and thus retaining such patronage as he secured, while his reputation for reliability grew apace and resulted in his being able to build up his present flourishing enterprise. He has been located in his present quarters, on North George street, since 1889. In politics Mr. Hurst is a stanch Democrat, and while he has never sought office, has served for three years as a member of the school board of his district while residing in Spring Garden township. He is affiliated with the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and the Improved Order of Heptasophs.

On Oct. 30, 1884, Mr. Hurst was united in marriage to Miss Louise Honsermeyer, of York, and they have had the following children: Sarah E., Isabelle, Mary (deceased), William E. and Katie May. Mrs. Hurst is a member of the Lutheran Church.

PETER F. RAAB, a farmer of York township, of stanch old pioneer stock, was born on the old homestead farm in that township, Dec. 6, 1854, son of Aaron, and grandson of Peter Raab. His paternal great-grandfather was numbered among the early settlers of York county, of German lineage. Unfortunately there is available nothing definite in regard to his career or his genealogy, though it is known that he became one of the influential men in the pioneer community. His descendants in York county have well upheld the standard of the honored name, aiding in the material and civic progress and upbuilding of this section.

Peter Raab, grandfather of our subject, was born in York county, Aug. 24, 1805, and he became one of the representative farmers of York township, where he purchased a considerable tract of land, upon which he continued to reside until his death. While working in the woods he cut his foot severely and death resulted Sept. 14, 1863, when he was aged fifty-eight years and twenty-one days. His wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Frey, was born in York township, July 25, 1804, and died Sept. 15, 1882, at the age of seventy-eight years, one month and twenty days. Both were earnest and faithful members of the Reformed Church at Dallastown, and he assisted materially in the erection of the church building. Two fine memorial stones mark the last resting place of these worthy pioneers, in the cemetery at Dallastown. Of their children Aaron is mentioned in full below; Henry died in York township, in 1904, and is buried in the cemetery at Freysville; Benjamin died in Dallastown, and his remains rest in the United Brethren church cemetery, in that place; Leah became the wife of Joseph Fix, and both died in Iowa; Sarah is the wife of Ephraim Hartman, of Springfield township; Lydia, the wife of Joseph Sechrist, died in York township; Catherine is the wife of Elias Gable, of Red Lion; and Amanda is the wife of William Taylor, of Dallastown.

Aaron Raab, son of Peter, was born in York township, March 17, 1827, and was there reared to manhood, receiving a good common-school education, and being conversant with both the English and German languages, the latter of which had been commonly spoken by his parents. He assisted in the work of the home farm until his marriage to Miss Rebecca Blouse, daughter of Michael Blouse, of Windsor township, where she was born and reared. After his marriage Mr. Raab located near Dallastown, York township, where he became the owner of forty acres of land, and there he followed farming and trucking. To his first marriage were born two children: William H., a cigar manufacturer of Dallastown, who married Mary Olp; and Peter F. Aaron Raab married (second) Miss Leah Hartman, daughter of George Hartman, of York township, and a representative of one of the oldest families in the county. She was born April 11, 1827, and died Oct. 20, 1903, at the age of seventy-six years, six months and nine days. Of the children of the second union, George W., who married Miss Emma Jane Geesey, is a carpenter and builder by vocation and resides in Dallastown; and Ulysses is a cigarmaker in York, and is unmarried. Aaron Raab, the honored father, was summoned into eternal rest Feb. 21, 1902, at the age of seventy-four years, eleven months and four days, and both he and his second wife are interred in the Union cemetery in Dallastown.
Peter F. Raab was reared to the discipline of the home farm, and continued to attend the common schools of York township until he had attained the age of sixteen years, while he remained with his father, associated in the work and management of the farm, until his marriage, in 1882, after which he engaged in the same line of enterprise on his own account. Upon the death of his honored father he fell heir to a portion of the old homestead, and by purchasing the interests of the other heirs he came into sole possession of the property upon which he has since continued to reside, the place being one of the most valuable and attractive in this section of the county. It is located about one mile from Dallastown, and is improved with a good residence and other substantial buildings. Mr. Raab is a public spirited citizen and enterprising business man. In politics he gives support to the Republican party, and his religious connection is with the Dallastown Reformed Church, and he has held in the same the office of deacon. His wife also belongs to this Church.

Mr. Raab was united in marriage to Miss Emma Jane McDowell, who was born in Springfield township, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Markey) McDowell. James McDowell was born in Springfield township, Oct. 23, 1834, son of Samuel, the latter born in Chanceford township. Samuel McDowell became a farmer of Springfield township, and later removed to York township, where he purchased a fine tract of 145 acres, and where he continued to reside until his death. He married Anna Mary, daughter of John Zinn, and both died in York township, and are interred in the Union cemetery at Dallastown. Their children were: John, William, James, Margaret, Susan, Isaac and Mary. James McDowell is one of the representative farmers of York township, owning and operating a fine farm, on the Chanceford pike, and being one of the influential men of the locality. The names of his children are as follows: Emma Jane (deceased wife of our subject), Anna, Mary, David (deceased), Sarah, James, Jr., and Lorinda. When Mrs. Raab died, her remains were interred in the Union cemetery at Dallastown. Of the children, (1) James W., born July 23, 1884, secured his rudimentary education in the public schools of York township, and at the age of fourteen entered the Dallastown high school, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1900. He then took a course in the State Normal School at Millersville, and thereafter was a successful teacher in the public schools of his native county for three terms. On April 7, 1904, he accepted his present clerical position in the First National Bank of Dallastown. (2) Mazzie May, born in October, 1886, remains with her father. (3) Emma Jane died at the age of three months, and was buried in York township.

WILLIAM HILT, a farmer and dairyman in Hellam township, was born on the Silas Detwiler farm Feb. 10, 1865. During his boyhood his father lived in Wrightsville, and he attended school there until he was about fifteen years of age, but after that time he was put out to work among neighboring farmers and has been constantly at work since.

The first summer Mr. Hilt worked away from home his wages consisted of a pair of two dollar boots which he earned from George Gohn, and of which he was very proud. While working at berry picking for Mr. Kauffelt he received five cents an hour, quite an increase over his beginning. During the time he was employed there, Mr. Kauffelt was terribly burned by a premature blast of powder, and the boy took care of him for twenty-one consecutive nights. Always industrious, Mr. Hilt at various times was employed in the planing mill of Sourlach & Dunden; as the driver of a market wagon to Columbia, when he would often start at midnight, sell out and return by noon and work till evening; at the furnace of Shaw, Steary & Denny; at ice cutting during the winters; and in the quarries, which last became his settled occupation for many years. When he was working at the furnace, it was common for him to go to work Sunday noon and not return home until the following Saturday night. When engaged in ice cutting, he did that work at nights and did quarrying by day, once working for 100 hours in a week. In everything he was faithful to an extreme, and an untiring worker, and his services were always in demand.

In March, 1893, Mr. Hilt moved from Wrightsville, where he had been for five years engaged in the quarries, and settled on his present farm home, where for the first four years he worked on wages, then for a half interest for nearly two years, and then rented it until in the spring of 1902 he was able to purchase the place. It consists of fifty-six acres, formerly part of the McConkey estate. The house was built by the McConkeys, but the barn was put up by Mr. Hilt himself, not long after he bought the farm. Though largely covered with timber when he took it, he soon cleared the place. He is engaged in general farming, and since the fall of 1904 has been carrying on a dairy in York.

On Oct. 9, 1887, Mr. Hilt was married to Miss Annie Fry, born in Lower Windsor township, Aug. 9, 1865, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Cupp) Fry. Mr. Cupp and his wife are both living and are farming people. The children born to William and Annie Hilt were five in number, namely: Maggie May, Virgie, Flora, Mary and Joseph. Mr. Hilt is a member of the Wrightsville Evangelical Church, while in political matters he is a Republican.

While Mr. Hilt’s life might seem a prosaic record of ceaseless toil, it has been marked by a number of hairbreadth escapes from death or injury, which are almost sensational. On one occasion while driving a cinder cart at the furnace, his horse backed over a bank with him into the Susquehanna river thirty feet below. He stuck to his wagon and came out uninjured, while if he had tried to jump it would have meant certain injury on the red hot cinder beds. At another time he fell from the top of the Kauffelt quarry to the bottom, narrowly escaping being crushed by a stone that weighed a ton falling on top of him. The fall, however, injured him severely, and he was obliged to use crutches for some time. Yet another accident at the furnaces was the falling of some red hot cinders into Mr. Hilt’s shoe and as he could not immediately get the shoe off he jumped twelve feet down into a pool of water. This filled the shoe with steam and caused his foot to swell until the shoe had to be cut off, but Mr. Hilt did not leave work because of his injury, being of a truly spartan mold. His faithfulness, industry and endurance are well known, and he has the name of being the most energetic worker in that section.

REUBEN H. WELLER, a well-known contractor and builder of Wrightsville, has spent the greater part of his life there.

The Weller family has been settled in this country for two hundred years, and boasts ancestors who served in the Revolution and the War of 1812. It is believed that the Wellers settled originally along the Delaware river, and the maternal ancestors made a home in Berks county, near Reading. John Weller, grandfather of Reuben H., was a farmer of Frederick county, Md., and died when his son Reuben was an infant.

Reuben Weller was born in Frederick county, Md., and lived many years in Baltimore. He moved to Wrightsville in 1855, and there his death occurred in 1863. His wife, Anna Reifsnider, was also a native of Frederick county, Md., daughter of John Reifsnider, who married a Smith; both her parents died when she was an infant. Mrs. Weller is still living, aged eighty-six years. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Weller were as follows: Reuben H., mentioned above; John Robert, of Wrightsville, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere; Emma Matilda, wife of Charles D. Marquette, of Carlisle; Anna, wife of Ellis Carlton Schindel, of York; and others, deceased.

Reuben H. Weller was born in Baltimore, Md., April 2, 1846, and his home was in that city until he was nine years old. He attended school in Baltimore, and after the family removed to Wrightsville went to school there for a time. His father’s death obliged him to leave school when he was only thirteen, but he studied at home, and learned much by observation and thought even when he was hard at work all day. His first position was as clerk in a store in Wrightsville, but this proved distasteful to a mind with a strong bent for constructive work. He enlisted, Sept. 3, 1864, in the 20th New York Independent Battery, and served one year. He received his discharge in New York City in August, 1865. He was stationed at different points during the war, detailed much of the time for provost duty.

After the war Mr. Weller returned home for a time, and then went to Williamsport, where he worked for seven or eight years in a planing-mill. His health failing, he came back home again, married, and engaged in planing-mill work and house building on his own account, building and selling many houses. He has also put up many houses for other people, and does a large and increasing business. His interests have been in Wrightsville since the early seventies.

Mr. Weller married, in 1876, Elmira Zor-
William Charles John was born and brought up in Wrightsville. Her father, Solomon Zorbaugh, was a well-known builder of York county, and married Matilda Wertz. Neither is now living. Mr. and Mrs. Weller went to housekeeping at once in Wrightsville, where their home has been ever since. Their children are as follows: Herbert and Marshall, at home; Tillie, Mrs. Morris Poet, of York; and Jennie and Sidney, at home. The family attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Weller is a Democrat in politics, and has served as school director for three years. He is a member of Lieut. R. W. Smith Post, No. 270, G. A. R., Wrightsville, and of Riverside Lodge, No. 503, F. & A. M., Wrightsville, joining the latter order at Williamport in 1870. Mr. Weller is a man of ability, and is esteemed in the community, where he has a wide acquaintance.

CHARLES WAGNER, M. D., a practicing physician of the Homeopathic school, at Hanover, Pa., is a native of Middletown, Dauphin Co., Pa., born Sept. 1, 1807, son of Frederick and Leah (Peters) Wagner. His paternal lineage is German; on his mother's side he is of English descent.

John Wagner, the Doctor's great-grandfather, was a native of Maryland, but in later life came to Pennsylvania. Upon his removal to the Keystone State he located in the county of Dauphin. In politics he was a Whig; by occupation a farmer. His son, also named John, was born during his parents' residence in their native State of Maryland, where he acquired his education in the common schools and at one of the Maryland academies. Meanwhile he worked on his father's farm and acquired an intimate knowledge of agriculture. Thus equipped he took to the soil at the conclusion of his school life and for many years followed farming, retiring in his later years. His death occurred in 1876. Mr. Wagner was a Republican in politics, and in religion an active and faithful member of the United Brethren Church. He and his wife had eight children: Frederick, father of Dr. Charles Wagner; Anna, wife of Solomon Swartz; John; Sarah, wife of David Koop; Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Gingerich; Mary, wife of David Eshenour; Catherine, living; and Caroline, deceased.

Frederick Wagner was born in Dauphin county in 1830. He obtained a good common school education and entered the profession of teaching, with which he retained his connection for twelve years. Following this he farmed for a number of years, and then moved to Middletown to become superintendent of the American Tube & Iron Works. He held this position for ten years and then became proprietor of a coal yard, jointly conducting it and a wholesale and retail bakery for eight years, when he retired. Mr. Wagner is an active local Republican politician and has held some municipal offices. His family numbered eight children: Abraham L.; John; William; Charles; Simon; Elizabeth, wife of John Klinger; Emma, wife of Edward Bierly; and Anna, wife of Frank Douglas.

Charles Wagner acquired the rudiments of his education in the public schools and then entered Lebanon Valley College, where he completed the four years' course of study and entered the profession of teaching. He followed this calling for one year at Middletown and then entered upon a course of reading medicine. After three years of study he graduated from Hahnemann Medical College, at Philadelphia. Before entering upon the practice of his chosen profession, however, the Doctor took three special additional courses, and then located at Middletown, where he remained for a year. Then he came to Hanover and located, and he has since built up a good and substantial practice and has made himself a popular and respected citizen of his adopted town. He is a member of the Golden Eagles, Knights of Pythias, Mystic Chain, and Junior Order United American Mechanics, at Middletown. In politics he is a stanch Republican.

On June 4, 1895, Dr. Wagner married Beulah, daughter of Napoleon B. Carver. They have had three children: Dorothy (deceased), Frederick C. and Charles Christopher.

HENRY BRUBAKER, one of the enterprise business men of York, Pa., who, since 1900, has been engaged in the manufacture of sash, doors and blinds, was born Nov. 26, 1866, son of Samuel and Rebecca (Frey) Brubaker.

Samuel Brubaker was born in Windsor, but now carries on farming in Chanceford township. He married Rebecca Frey, and they have had these children: Milton, of York; George; Mary, the wife of George Elmer, of Chanceford township; William; Henry, the subject of this sketch; Matilda, the wife of Edward Olewiler; and Eleanor.

Henry Brubaker spent his school days in Chanceford township, attending school until seventeen years of age. He learned the carpenter's trade in his native township, where he spent three years, after which he located in York working for different firms until 1900, when he embarked in business for himself, starting with a hand lathe, and a 3-horse power engine. Strict attention to business and Mr. Brubaker's fine personal management, enabled him to build a three-story shop, where he is now doing a large business. He has a 40-horse power boiler and a 25-horse power engine, and his shop is fitted with all the latest improvements in machinery. Mr. Brubaker is also a skilled pattern maker, and employs fifteen skilled workmen in his planing mill. He is now working in Codorus township, where he employs a gang of six men.

In 1894 Mr. Brubaker married Mina Mary Ziegler, daughter of George Ziegler, and these children have been born to this union: Elthanna May, Lester K., Walter Raymond, Bernard and Dorothy. In politics Mr. Brubaker is a Republican. In religious faith he is a Lutheran. He and his family reside in their pleasant home at No. 926 West King street, York.

JOHN F. SHERMAN, who resides on his farm of seventy-eight acres in Monaghan township, was born Feb. 19, 1852, in Berks county, Pa., son of Isaac and Sarah Sherman, and is of German descent.

Isaac Sherman was a farmer at Sinking Spring, Berks county. He died in 1882, aged seventy-two years, his wife surviving until about 1892, when she passed away aged eighty-two years. Nine children were born to this worthy couple, namely: Aaron, Catherine, Hettie, Henry (deceased), Mary, John F., James, Isaac and Elizabeth. Mr. Sherman belonged to the Reformed Church, while his wife was a member of the Lutheran Church. In political affairs he was identified with the Democratic party.

J. F. Sherman was educated in the schools of Berks county, attending up to the age of eighteen years. Locating in Cumberland county, he worked by the month on a farm and later learned the trade of blacksmith, for ten years working at his trade in Shepherdstown, that county. He then bought, in 1884, his present farm of seventy-eight acres, which formerly belonged to Judge Mosher.

In 1876 Mr. Sherman married Miss Elizabelll Mosher, daughter of Jeremiah Mosher, who was a brother of Judge Mosher, and nine children have been born to the union: Rachel, who married Ira Hart, and lives in Cumberland county; Mabel, married to Ira Anderson, and living in York county; Rebecca, who married Charles Miller, and lives in Cumberland county; Russel; Pearl; John F., Jr.; Mary, who died when two months old; and two who died in infancy, unnamed.

Mr. Sherman is a stanch Democrat and has held the office of school director. He is a member of the Church of God, in which he is a deacon and has been an elder. The members of this family are very well known and are held in high esteem in Monaghan township.

JAMES McCALL, foreman in the Wrightsville limekilns, has been a resident of that place since he was twenty years old. He was born Jan. 1, 1831, in Ballymacool, County Donegal, Ireland.

His grandfather, James McCall, was a farmer and lived near the seashore in County Donegal. His father, John, was a cooper by trade, a well-to-do man, having his own horses, cows, etc. He married Catherine Harvey and lived all his life in County Donegal. James was the oldest boy and went to school off and on, in the intervals working in his father's cooper shop and learning considerable of the trade. James had the following brothers and sisters: Catherine, two years his elder, who married (first) a Mr. Hamilton, and (second) John Snyder, and died in Allentown, Pa.; John, who was a cooper, and died in Philadelphia; Daniel, who died in Conshohocken, Pa.; Ellen, who married Edward Gettigan, and died in Allentown; Unity, who married a Mr. Galagher, and died in Philadelphia; and Ann, who married C. McCall, of Allentown. After her husband's death Mrs. McCall, the mother of this family, sold her home in Ireland, and came to the United States to live with her children. She soon became homesick, however, and returned to Ireland hoping to buy back her property. This she was unable to do, and so came once more to this country, and spent her last days at the home of her daughter in Allentown.

Catherine, elder sister of James McCall, came to the United States in 1842, and two years later, James, then a lad of thirteen, followed her example. He went to Liverpool, where he expected to take passage on the "Ellen McGoy." This proved to be a small vessel, and was so overcrowded that he sailed instead in the "Ivanhoe," a much larger vessel. His change was fortunate in many ways, as the "Ivanhoe" made port in New York sooner than the "Ellen McGoy," which had sailed earlier. He went at first to a cousin of his mother's, James McCoy, in Philadelphia; and then to the home of an acquaintance, James Brogan, in Chester county, Pa. He found employment driving oxen, and later in the lime kilns of Mr. Phillips, and remained in Chester county seven years. He then came to Wrightsville, where he was employed in the lime kilns in various capacities until he became foreman, a position he has ever since held. Mr. McCall enlisted in 1862 in the Home Guards, and was on duty near Hagerstown, Md., for a few months, and then received his discharge.

In 1849 Mr. McCall married Catherine Fitzpatrick, a native of County Galway, Ireland, who came to the United States as a young girl and lived in Chester county until her marriage. Her father was John Fitzpatrick, a shoemaker, who lived and died in County Galway. Mrs. McCall died July 10, 1894. She was a member of the Roman Catholic Church, as is her husband. Mr. McCall is a Democrat in politics. He first built his home, and has since built two other houses, and is the owner of still another house, in town. Mr. McCall is the father of the following children: (1) John was born in Wrightsville, and went to school there to Col. Magee; he began railroading when a young man, and is an engineer on the Northern Central railroad; he married Mary Anthony, and lives near Hanover. (2) Catherine died young. (3) Daniel is a conductor on the Pennsylvania railroad; he married Sue Koch, and lives in Columbus. (4) Sarah married Barney Keys, of Camden, N. J. (5) Margaret married (first) Alexander McManus, and (second) Harry Luger; she lives in Philadelphia. (6) Mary is at home.

FRANK J. BECK, who is successfully conducting the stage line between Loganville and York, was born in Springfield township, this county, July 28, 1858, son of John F. Beck.

Mr. Beck attended Bubb's school in Springfield township until he was sixteen years old, and then learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed four years. At the age of twenty-one he went to Lancaster county, and was employed for three years at farming in Manor township, at the end of that time returning to his native home. On Oct. 1, 1888, Mr. Beck bought the stage line from Loganville to York, from Daniel Raffensberger. Mr. Raffensberger started this line with a small blind horse and a small wagon. Today Mr. Beck drives a four-horse team, and his large coach is always well filled with passengers on both trips. Since he has been at this business he has missed but few days, when the snow was drifted so high that it was impossible for him to make his way through.

On Dec. 16, 1888, Frank J. Beck married Rosa E. Beck, daughter of Andrew and Catherine (Bentz) Beck. Mrs. Beck was born in Codorus township, where her parents, who are farming people, still reside. She was one of five children, her brother and sisters being: Jacob H., Elizabeth, Ida and Amanda. Mr. Beck bought his present home on Main street, in Loganville, in February, 1889, and he has since made many improvements. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Beck, Mary C. and Carrie E., both of whom are attending school. In politics Mr. Beck is a Republican, and he served the borough as school director for nine years, and as councilman three years. He is actively connected with the Lutheran Church, at present serving as a member of the council.

WATSON A. McLAUGHLIN, who has done much to further the development of Delta, was born in Mifflin county, Pa., Feb. 14, 1842, son of John and Mary (Miller) McLaughlin. While he was still a boy his parents moved to Dayton, Ohio, and there both died, leaving six children—of whom Watson A. was the eldest—to make their way in the world. Thus Watson McLaughlin was hardly more than a lad when he was thrown on his own resources, but he started out bravely. He went back to Pennsylvania, secured employment as a clerk with his uncle, Watson H. Miller, in Lancaster, and for several years followed that line of work, meantime improving every opportunity offered him for continuing his education. In 1860 he learned the milling trade, which he followed for about ten years in Conestoga township, Lancaster county, at the same time giving considerable attention to the culture of tobacco. In 1862, however, occurred a break of one year, when he was in the government service, but at the end of that time he took up once more his accustomed occupations.

In 1874 Mr. McLaughlin ventured out in a new line, undertaking the management of a hotel in Gatchellville, York county, and for several years continuing that business in Peach Bottom and Lower Chanceford. In 1876 began his connection with the “Railroad House” at Delta, now known as the “Hotel Delta,” while still later he became the proprietor of the “Delta House,” the present Auditorium. The “Hotel Delta,” of which he is now proprietor, is one of the best known and most popular hotels in the county, and Mr. McLaughlin possesses an unusually happy faculty of making every guest feel at home.

While Mr. McLaughlin has been gaining his enviable reputation as a host he has also found time to do much in furthering the development of the rich mineral deposits of lower York county and the adjoining section of Harford county, Md. The opening up of the slate and other mineral lands there has added greatly to the wealth of the section, and much of this progress has been due to Mr. McLaughlin’s energy. He first engaged in slate quarrying in 1879, in Delta, and later opened a mine in Harford county, thereby giving much impetus to the industry, although not reaping as much profit himself as he had hoped. He has not confined his attention to slate, however, but for many years has carried on general explorations which have resulted for one thing in the discovery in the Peach Bottom district of a deposit of variegated green stone, which is not surpassed anywhere in the country for beauty of formation and strength.

The marriage of Watson A. McLaughlin took place in 1864, when he was united with Miss Elizabeth Moore. Seven children have been born to them, but only two are living, viz.: Daniel A., a merchant of Delta; and Nora O., who married Harry Garell and resides in York.

GEORGE F. KRANTZ. Among the self-made men of York, Pa., who have won their way to success through their own industry and strict attention to business, is George F. Krantz, a native of Germany, born March 3, 1862, son of George F. Krantz, a laborer of that country, and Maggie (Evert) Krantz. Our subject has one sister, Margaret, who resides in Germany.

George F. Krantz learned the weaving trade in his native country. He was early left an orphan, and worked at different farms until entering the German army, from which he was discharged one year afterward, on account of his eyes. He came to America at the age of twenty-one years, staying in New York for one day, when he went to Baltimore, where he remained six years. Most of this time was spent in railroading and at the carpenter trade. In 1888 he came to York, and engaged in the draying business, in which he has since continued very successfully. He erected a fine house at No. 608 West College avenue in 1898, where he and his family now reside. Mr. Krantz married Miss Minnie Huber, born in Germany in 1861, daughter of Ernest Huber, who came to this country in 1865. To Mr. and Mrs. Krantz have been born: John F., who is learning the printing trade with the York Daily; Charles H., a messenger of the same paper; George F., Ernest F. and Magdalena Catherine. In politics Mr. Krantz is a Democrat. The family attend St. John’s Lutheran Church.

JOSHUA E. FOUST, who was engaged in agricultural operations for twenty-five years in Springfield township, was born Aug. 16, 1841. Mr. Foust attended the schools of Springfield township, being reared to manhood on the home farm, which he left at the time of his marriage, at the age of twenty-five years. He married Mary Goodling, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Overmiller) Goodling, and until 1904 resided on the farm in Springfield township, in that year removing to his present home in the village of New Paradise, where he has since resided. For some time he has engaged in horse dealing in Paradise.

Mr. and Mrs. Foust have had children as follows: Virgie is the wife of Frank Lehman, of York. William Tell, proprietor of the “Loganville Hotel,” is one of the capable young business men of this section and one of the most popular hotel keepers in York county; he married Ida Sprenkle, daughter of William and Lydia (Strine) Sprenkle. Howard married Elmira Bupp, and resides in York. Eli, who married Mabel Lillie, is a dentist at Spring Grove, being a graduate of the Baltimore Dental College, class of 1901.

In politics Mr. Foust is a Republican. was township supervisor for two terms and has also served on the election board.

JEFFERSON MARTIN, of Monaghan township, York county, was born July 29, 1840, near Dillsburg, York county, son of Alexander C. and Sarah (Lightfoot) Martin, the former a native of Belfast, Ireland, and the latter of York county.

Alexander C. Martin was born July 4, 1777, and came to America in 1797. Prior to this he had clerked on a sailing vessel, making seven trips across the Atlantic. He first settled in the vicinity of Lake Erie, in Pennsylvania, near Erie, and there married and reared a family of children, of whom our subject knows nothing. After the death of his first wife Mr. Martin came to York county, where he married Sarah Lightfoot, who was born in 1798, and their children were born as follows: Leslie J., May 14, 1817; John H., Dec. 2, 1818 (died Aug. 18, 1825); William C., Feb. 14, 1820; a son, Sept. 9, 1821 (died June 18, 1822); Lucinda, Dec. 9, 1822 (died Oct. 23, 1823); Cyrus, July 29, 1825; Cynthia A., Aug. 6, 1827; Harriet, Sept. 13, 1829 (died April 7, 1890); Catherine, Sept. 27, 1831; Alexander L., March 11, 1834; Henry L., Oct. 14, 1835 (died Dec. 26, 1888); Rebecca J., June 29, 1837; Jefferson, July 29, 1840; Jackson, twin brother of Jefferson, July 29, 1840; and Eleanor, March 8, 1844.

Alexander C. Martin died Oct. 17, 1865, aged eighty-eight years, three months, thirteen days, while his wife survived until Sept. 20, 1882, dying aged eighty-four years, one month, twenty-seven days. Mr. Martin was a school teacher, and followed that profession all his life.

Jefferson Martin was educated in the common schools of York county. He has devoted his active life to agricultural pursuits, having resided since 1867, on his present farm, which was formerly the property of John Bosch and originally contained thirty-one acres; but Mr. Martin has added to it, and it now covers thirty-five acres. He also owns the farm of twenty-two acres occupied by his twin brother, Jackson, and a seventy-eight acre place (adjoining his home farm) which was formerly owned by William Porter. Mr. Martin makes a specialty of general stock raising and fruit growing.

In 1867 Mr. Martin married Elmira J. Fortney, daughter of David and Mary A. (Leckrone) Fortney, and four children were born to this union, three of whom still survive: Mary A. married John H. Martin, who is, however, no relation to Jefferson Martin; Sarah A. married Jacob E. Cook; Lillian F. married Jacob R. Weaver. Mr. Martin is liberal in his religious views. In politics he is active in the work of the Democratic party, having served as judge of election and constable for several years.

Mr. Martin was one of the veterans of the Civil War, having enlisted in 1861 in Company H, 87th P. V. I., in which he served three years; at the end of this term of service he re-enlisted and served until the war was over. He was wounded at the battle of Cedar Creek.

GEORGE WASHINGTON SHULTZ, one of Wrightsville's progressive citizens, is a well known liveryman of that place. He was born on a farm in Lower Windsor township, York county, July 30, 1867, was brought up there, and educated in the district schools. Among his teachers were Mr. Gilbert, Harry Kellar, James Abel, Harry Stewart, James Sitler, and Edward Strickler. When he was fourteen his father died, and his mother moving to Wrightsville two years later he left school to help her. He had previously worked on the farm for his parents. After coming to town his first employment was on the turnpike; he then went to work at packing tobacco for Jacob Zuch, and later worked at the quarries, driving a cart. In April, 1895, he set up for himself in the draying business, with money saved from his earnings. By Dec. 21, 1900, he was able to open a livery stable in connection with his draying, and has prospered steadily ever since.

On March 13, 1889, Mr. Shultz married Lizzie Roth, of Wrightsville, daughter of Adam and Mary (Rankin) Roth, who are deceased. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Shultz are as follows: Jennie J., Mary, Amy and Rena May. Mr. Shultz is a Republican in politics, and the family are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Shultz's success is due entirely to his own energy and steady application to business.

The grandfather of Mr. Shultz was a school teacher. His son, David I. Shultz, was born in Lower Windsor, and died in 1882. He was a Republican in politics, and a member of the Evangelical Church. He was brought up to farm work, but after his marriage worked for a time in the ore banks in Murphy's Hollow. After a time he bought farming land in Lower Windsor, eighty acres in one tract, and twenty-eight acres in another, which he cultivated. Shortly after his death his widow moved to town and bought a home on Chestnut street where she still lives. Her maiden name was Magdalena Kinard, and she was a native of Lower Windsor, where her father, Henry Kinard, was a well known farmer. David I. and Magdalena (Kinard) Shultz had the following children: William, a farmer of Lower Windsor, married to Annie Stauffer; Mary, married to John Ran, of Columbia, Pa.; John Andrew, a cigarmaker, living in Lower Windsor, who married (first) Sarah Hill, and (second) Mary Greenawalt; David I., a farmer of Lower Windsor, married to Mary Paxton; George Washington; Lizzie, married to Seymour Filby, of Wrightsville; and Charles Wesley, of Wrightsville, married to Becky Ruby.

WILLIAM W. SMEACH, formerly high constable of Hanover, and now engaged in butchering at No. 112 Baltimore street, Hanover, was born in Carroll county, Md., in 1859, son of Andrew Smeach.

Andrew Smeach was a miller in early life, and later engaged in farming in Carroll county, Md., following the latter occupation until his death, at the age of fifty-five years. He first married Miss Eliza Wine, who died young, leaving one child, Mandilla. Mr. Smeach's second wife was Maria Myers, who died aged fifty-two years, and was buried in Carroll county. She bore her husband these children: Andrew S., David R., Philip A. and William W.

William W. Smeach received his education in the public schools of Carroll county, Md., after leaving which, at the age of fourteen years, he assisted his father in farming until twenty-one years old. He then went to learn the carpenter's trade in his native county, in 1803 coming to Hanover, where he followed his trade until 1896, when he was elected high constable of the borough of Hanover. Although elected on the Republican ticket in a Democratic district, his faithful services were appreciated to the extent that he was kept in office for nine years. At the time of Mr. Smeach's election to this office George W. King was chief burgess, and at this writing (1905) is again serving in the same office. Mr. Smeach engaged in the butchering business May 5, 1905, and his patronage since the start has been constantly growing.

Mr. Smeach married first Mary Baughman, who died leaving two sons: Herbert Clinton is a barber near Pittsburg, Pa.; William H., who married Emma Shilt, is a timer and plumber by trade, and resides in Indiana. Mr. Smeach's second marriage was to Miss Amelia S. Sterner, daughter of David H. Sterner. Mr. and Mrs. Smeach are members of the Trinity Reformed Church of Hanover, in which he has served as elder for nine years.

WILLIAM H. EISENHART, M. D., a well known practitioner of York, who resides at No. 37 North Hartley street, was born in Upper Windsor township, York county, in 1858.

John Eisenhart, the grandfather of William H., had one son, Levi, who was born June 30, 1831, in Dover township, this county. He attended the district school three miles from his home, his education being limited, and learned the blacksmith's trade in York with George Barnhart, later engaging in business at Windsorville, where he remained seven years. He then went to Weigelstown, Dover township, where he was engaged in business for twenty years, and locating in York in 1885 he engaged in the chainmaking business, following that until his health failed, in 1903, since which time he has lived retired. On March 15, 1855, he was united in marriage with Catherine Saylor, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Ramsey) Saylor, and to this union were born: Jacob S., who married Ella Gross, living in York; William H.; Harvey A., who married Sarah Mayer, of York; Franklin E., married to Alice Shaffer, of York; and Charles W., who died when ten months and eleven days old. Mr. Eisenhart was for twenty years superintendent of the Evangelical Sunday-school, and was also a trustee of the church. In politics he is a Democrat.

William H. Eisenhart attended the public schools at Weigelstown, Dover township, and then learned the blacksmith's trade, later coming to York, where he was employed nine years at the Standard Chain Works as chain inspector. During the time he was employed at the latter place Mr. Eisenhart prepared himself for entrance to the Academy of Medical Sciences at New York City, from which he was graduated in 1901, and in 1902 he graduated from the Wettmer Mental School of Healing, of Nevada, Mo. He is now engaged in the practice of his profession in York, his office being at No. 324 West York avenue.

Mr. Eisenhart married Sarah Heilman, daughter of Israel Heilman. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the U. B. Church of York.

WILLIAM H. MASAMORE was one of the highly esteemed retired farmers of Manheim township, York county, at the time of his sudden death, which was a shock to the entire community. He had passed all his life there, having been born April 1, 1842, on the farm where he always resided, a son of Daniel Masamore.

The latter was born Jan. 1, 1800, near Hanover, York county, and died June 2, 1893, at the advanced age of ninety-three years, five months, one day. He was one of the best known and most respected men of his time in this locality. He bought the old Roleman farm in Manheim township, then containing 150 acres, on which he built a fine two-story brick home, and lived there all his days. He is one of the oldest people buried in the old Stone Church cemetery of Codorus township. Both he and his wife were devoted members of the Lutheran Church, and good Christian people.

Daniel Masamore married Cassandra Writz, of York county, who was born April 26, 1799, and died Dec. 3, 1865, at the age of sixty-six years, seven months, and seven days. Their children were as follows: Eleanor, widow of Emanuel Wentz, resides in Manheim township; Mantilla is the wife of John Linch, of near Glen Rock, Pa.; Matilda is the wife of Jacob Bortner, of near Glen Rock; Daniel is a farmer in Ohio; Edward is a well-known miller in Adams county; William H. is the subject of this sketch; Elizabeth, Leah, Sarah and Susan are all deceased.

William H. Masamore attended what was known as the Duck Hill school in his native township until about eighteen years of age, and he assisted his father on the farm, remaining at home. At the death of his father Mr. Masamore bought the farm on which he erected a fine new barn, 72x42 feet, and also good, substantial outbuildings, making it one of the finest places in the county. There is a fine orchard, the fruit comparing favorably with any in the State. Aaron Wattersdorff operated the land for Mr. Masamore, residing with him. The farm now consists of 103 acres at the Summit Station on the Western Maryland railroad. He lived retired from 1900 until his death, which occurred Dec. 2, 1905. While engaged in threshing, the day before, he was working on top of the straw. A helper noticed that the straw was no longer being taken away and one of the men immediately looked for Mr. Masamore. He had fallen head first down the hay hole in the barn, and though given medical aid without delay died from his injuries the next day.

Mr. Masamore was a member of the Stone Lutheran Church of Codorus township. In politics he was a Democrat, but never sought office. He was very well known throughout Manheim township, and his many sterling traits of character made him respected and esteemed by all.

JOHN WILLIAM HARTLEY, junior member of the firm of Ebert & Hartley, contractors for cement pavements, was born in East Berlin, Adams Co., Pa. He received a common-school education, and then learned the milling trade in his native town, which occupation he followed seven years. At the end of that time he engaged in the lumber and coal business at East Berlin, which he followed until the spring of 1887, when he located in York and was employed with A. B. Farquhar, later going into the candy business. In 1900 he engaged in the cement business, contracting for cement pavements, and he has continued in that line ever since, having become one of the leading business men in that line in York. The firm is known as Ebert & Hartley. The partners have one of the largest contracts ever given in York on their hands at the present time, the contract calling for the paving of East York, formerly the Kelsey farm, which is now one of the finest suburban parts of the city.

Mr. Hartley was married, in 1887, to Susan R. Hellerman, a daughter of John Henry and Julia Hellerman, and to this union have been born: Edna, Annie, John, Helen and Edward. In politics Mr. Hartley is a Democrat. He and his family reside in their pleasant home at No. 137 South Water street, York.

John Henry Hellerman, the father of Mrs. Hartley, was born in Germany and was a shoemaker by trade. He married in the old country, and he and his wife emigrated to America, landing at New York City. They came directly to York, Pa., however, where Mr. Hellerman engaged in shoemaking, continuing in that business until his death in his eighty-third year. He is interred at Prospect Hill cemetery.
He is survived by his widow and his two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Hartley, of York, and Mrs.
John Hollinger, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Hellerman makes her home with Mrs. Hartley.

JOHN McCLEARY. Among the old and highly respected farmer citizens of York county perhaps none is better known than John McCleary, of North Hopewell township. He was born in Fawn township, between Woodbine and Bald Eagle, June 15, 1826, son of William and Martha (Ewing) McCleary.

William McCleary was born in York country, where he farmed all of his life, settling in Fawn township, where he died in 1838, aged about fifty years. He was a member of the
M. E. Church, and in politics was a Democrat.
He married Miss Martha Ewing, daughter of
Rev. Mr. Ewing, of the M. E. Church. Mrs.
McCleary died in Fawn township. She was the mother of children as follows: Abraham; Jane, Mrs. Edward Boyd, deceased; Isaac, the father of Isaac R. McCleary, of Lower Chance-ford township; Henry, who died in Airville, York county; Sarah, Mrs. John Scott, who died in Fawn township; James, who died in Iowa; Martha, Mrs. Henry Stilts, who died in Fawn township; Mary Ann, Mrs. William
Thompson, who died in Hopewell township;
William, who died in Iowa, and John.

When John McCleary was eighteen years of age his mother removed from the home farm to Gatchellville. His father died six years prior to this time. Mr. McCleary received his education in the subscription schools and later in the public schools and left school on removing from the farm. He was reared to the life of a farmer, an occupation he has followed his total life. He remained at home until 1852 when he married Julia F. Laird, who was born in Fawn township, daughter of John Laird and Lydia (Musser) Laird. Children have been born to him and his wife as follows: Winfield Scott; Samuel Huston, of York; Hugh D., of Hopewell township; Ellen A., Mrs. Dallas Shaw, deceased; and several children who died in infancy.

After his marriage Mr. McCleary farmed for two years on shares in Fawn township, at the end of that time purchasing his present place of thirty-six acres, where he has made his home for almost half a century. Mr. Mc-Cleary has erected good new buildings on his farm, which he has improved to a high degree, and he can truly say that farming pays if properly managed. He is a member of the Evangelical Church. His political faith is that of the Democratic party, and he has served as judge of elections and assessor.

SAMUEL WAMBAUGH, of Airville, Lower Chanceford township, York county, where he carries on shoemaking and farming, was born Nov. 6, 1835, near old Blue Ball, in Fawn township, son of Daniel and Catherine (Hise) Wambaugh. He comes of an old family of Fawn township, his grandfather. Peter Wambaugh, having resided there. Daniel Wambaugh, his father, was a farmer, following that occupation first in Fawn township and later in Chanceford township, where he died in 1876; his wife, who was formerly Catherine Hise, of Shrewsbury township, also died there.

Samuel Wambaugh attended the public schools until about fourteen years of age and then learned shoemaking with William Thompson, of Hopewell. After having served an apprenticeship of two years he worked as a journeyman for two years, and in 1856 went into business in Fawn township for two years, removed to Hopewell township, and in 1860 moved to near Airville. In 1862 Mr. Wambaugh enlisted in Company I, 130th P. V. I., with which he served nine months, participating in the battles of Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg and Antietam. He was discharged at Harrisburg in May, 1863, returned home for one month, and then re-enlisted, in an independent company, under Capt. E. O. Stevens.
He was discharged at the end of one month,
again returned home, and on Feb. 29, 1864,

enlisted at Harrisburg in the regular army,
being first stationed at Governor's Island.
From there he went as general service reserve that spring and as general reserve recruit, and was then ordered to Buffalo, to join the 10th Regulars. From there he was sent to the front, under Grant, with whom he served until the close of the war, being in the battle of the Wilderness and at Spotsylvania, in which latter engagement he was wounded in the right shoulder. He was sent to a hospital at Washington, D. C., and from there to one in Baltimore, and then to York, where he remained five months, at the end of that time going to Governor’s Island and rejoining his regiment, with which he remained until the surrender of Lee. In the October following he went to Washington, D. C., and was ordered to St. Louis, and from there to St. Paul, Minn., where the regiment divided, the company to which Mr. Wambaugh belonged being stationed at Fort Ripley, Minn., where it was kept two years. There he was discharged March 4, 1867.

After his discharge Mr. Wambaugh returned home, making the first 125 miles of his journey on the Northern Pacific railroad. Arriving in York county he resumed his trade at Airville, and has worked at that trade off and on ever since. About fifteen years ago he bought seventeen acres of land and has done considerable farming, devoting most of his time to tobacco.

Mr. Wambaugh is a member of the G. A. R., belonging to Gatchellville Post, No. 605. He was reared in the faith of the M. E. Church. He was formerly a Democrat, but is now a believer in the principles laid down by the Republican party. He was married in 1869 to Miss Hannah McCue, of Maryland, and they have become the parents of the following named children: Ida, now Mrs. Heffner; Jesse, a telegraph operator; George, who is at home; and Louis Cleveland, a stenographer and bookkeeper at Camden, N. J. Mr. Wambaugh is well known in his community.

WILLIAM E. WALKER (deceased), who for many years carried on agricultural pursuits successfully in Lower Chanceford township, was born in Cecil county, Md., Feb. 3, 1835.

Mr. Walker passed part of his boyhood days in Fulton township, Lancaster Co., Pa., in the old Cross Keys Tavern, which his father conducted about 1835. His father removed to Lower Chanceford township, York county, and here William E. grew to manhood. Although the school was two miles from his home young Walker rarely missed going, and being fond of his books studied hard, receiving more than the ordinary common-school education. Among his teachers he could always remember a certain Mr. Courtney, who was very strict. Another remembrance of Mr. Walker’s was that as a boy he had a very good appetite, and often when carrying his lunch to school would eat it in the morning, thus having to go without his mid-day meal. He was reared to farming, and continued at same all his life. He was married in Lower Chanceford township to Miss Je-mima Arbuckle, daughter of William Ar-buckle, of Lancaster and York counties, and after his marriage located in the log house on one end of the farm, later building a frame house. In 1862 he enlisted in Company H, 166th P. V. L., and served gallantly for three years, during which time he was slightly wounded by a bullet in the right ankle.

After leaving the army Mr. Walker returned home, and in 1882 he and his wife removed to York Furnace, where he did general work for two years. He was married (sec-ond) March 11, 1884, to Mrs. Sarah Jane Murphy, widow of Charles W. Murphy, and daughter of Nehemiah and Maria (Pennington) Robinson. After his second marriage Mr. Walker lived at York Furnace for two years longer, and then removed to Havre de Grace, Md., where he kept a hotel nine years, at the end of that time returning to Lower Chanceford township and locating in his present home, which he had built while in the hotel business. He farmed the balance of his life, dying on his farm Aug. 18, 1904. Mr. Walker was a staunch Democrat.

Mr. Walker’s children by his first wife were as follows: Elizabeth, Mrs. Edward Saunders; Mary, Mrs. Robert O. Mitchell; John, who married Cora Murphy; Jennie, Mrs. Lindsey Forsythe; Emma, Mrs. Albert Hall; and Wilhelmina, Mrs. George McMasters. All are residents of Havre de Grace, Md., except Mrs. Hall, who lives in Baltimore. To Mr. Walker and his second wife were born children as follows: Pearl, Mrs. Harvey A. Runkle of Chanceford township; Florence Rose, who is at home; and Vandiver, born Dec. 23, 1891. Mrs. Walker had the following children by her first marriage: Cora, who married John Walker, son of our subject; Nettie May, who died at the age of ten years; Irene, Mrs. Fred Olds, of Reading, Pa.; and Lillie Belle.

PHILIP WILLIAM BURG, of Hellam township, is a son of C. C. Burg, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere, and was born in Lower Windsor, York county, on the old mill property on the Susquehanna. The place has been known as Burg's Mill for nearly one hundred years.

Born Sept. 22, 1856, Philip William Burg began attending school at the age of six, and went to school at intervals until he was eighteen. His father was a canal-boat owner, and much of the boyhood of Philip William was spent as a driver on the tow path. When he was twelve years old he began driving, and had many interesting and curious experiences while thus engaged. The drivers worked six hours, then were off duty six hours, and so on, and, for a growing boy, the work was very exhausting. Sometimes he would sleep with his feet caught in the harness, his head on the mule's rump, and his arms around the animal. He drove through heat and cold, thunder and lightning, daylight and dark, and at night the lonely stillness, broken only by the barking of a dog, or the croaking of a frog, was weird and awe-inspiring, and made a lasting impression on his mind. Impressions of a different character were made by the language, more forcible than elegant, used by some of the boatmen. During a cold storm one fall Mr. Burg's boat had to break the ice to Clark's Ferry. A large flock of turkeys flew over the island, and some went into the lock. Mr. Burg and his friends went in after them, but a rough lot of boat repair men who were there at work threatened them so violently that they were obliged to let the turkeys go.

When he was eighteen years old Mr. Burg began teaching, and taught a term in Spring Garden, and another in Hellam township. He attended the Millersville Normal School at different times, and spent almost two years at the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, graduating in 1887. After that he was at home for a few years, and added to his stock of knowledge by careful study of things and people about him. His father had given up his canal-boat business in 1872, and for the following four years lived at Stony Brook. From there he moved, in 1876, to the home farm in Hellam township. After his marriage Mr. Burg continued at home for two years, engaged in farming, raising tobacco and making cigars. In the spring of 1884 he bought the farm of thirteen acres on which he now resides, where he raises general produce and tobacco, marketing his crops in Columbia. He also devotes some attention to the dairy business.

Mr. Burg was married Sept. 21, 1881, to Leah Rutter, who was born on the Rutter farm in Manchester township, a mile north of York. Mrs. Burg's father, George Rutter, is still living; her mother's maiden name was Annie Diehl. Mr. and Mrs. Burg have had children as follows: (1) Daisy Ella has had exceptional educational advantages, having graduated from the Wrightsville high school in the class of 1898; spent two terms at the York County Normal School, a summer school for teachers; a year at York Collegiate Institute; and a year at Westchester State Normal School. She has taught for four years with success. (2) Walter Rutter, a sixteen-year old boy, attends high school in Wrightsville. (3) Albert Philip is seven years old; and (4) Horace Edward is aged three.

Mr. Burg cast his first Presidential vote for Hayes, and during Blaine's campaign made political speeches through the county. He was elected justice of the peace on first attaining his majority, but never lifted his commission. He joined the Lutheran Church at Wrightsville, where his parents went to live when he was three years old. He has always taken a keen interest in the schools and in general educational matters, is a great reader, and has lectured at the teachers' institutes. He has also been active in arranging for debates and lyceum courses. He is a man of unimpeachable honesty, and highly esteemed by his friends and fellow-townsmen.

ABRAHAM FLORY, who died April 13, 1904, was a substantial farmer of Jackson township, and came on both sides of families long identified with York county. He was born there in 1846, son of Jacob and Leah (Deal) Flory, the former of whom is still living, now aged ninety years.

Abraham Flory was reared upon a farm, and continued to follow that honorable calling until his death. His life record presents no thrilling incidents, but represents long years of honorable toil and of faithful performance of duty, both in his home and in the community, and high integrity of conduct. He married Miss Amanda Smyser, daughter of Henry and Mary (Emig) Smyser, and four children were born to their union, Harry, Ella, Edward and Lillian. Mr. Flory was a member of the Lutheran Church, and in political sentiment a Republican. His death occurred at his home April 13, 1904, when he had reached only his fiftieth year, and his passing away was a source of deep regret to all who knew him.

After the death of Abraham Flory his son Edward took charge of the homestead. He was born Oct. 5, 1876, in West Manchester township, has been educated in the public schools of Lancaster and York counties, has been reared to farm work, and brings to his present responsibilities thorough familiarity with its demands and great capacity. He is also a Lutheran in religion and a Republican in politics. He is unmarried.

Mrs. Amanda Flory was born in Springettsbury township, then Spring Garden, in 1857, the only daughter of Henry and Mary (Emig) Smyser. Her maternal grandfather was Valentine Emig, a native of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Flory had three brothers, Michael, Alexander and Horace. Her mother is still living, and is now seventy-seven years old, but Henry Smyser was called from this world in January, 1900, aged eighty-eight. He was a Lutheran in his religious belief, while his wife is a member of the Reformed Church.

NOAH J. INNERS. Few names still marked as representative of York county's best citizenship have been longer or more prominently identified with the annals of this section of the Keystone State than that of Inners. The original progenitor of the family in America, as well as in Pennsylvania, was Jacob Inners, great-grandfather of Noah J. This sturdy ancestor was born and reared in the fair little republic of Switzerland, whence he emigrated to America early in the eighteenth century, soon coming into the practical wilderness of the great domain in whose colonization the name of William Penn stood high above all others. This Jacob Inners settled in Bucks county, Pa., and as nearly as can be determined from data extant, it is probable that he there passed the remainder of his life.

He was a gunsmith by trade, and, it is fair to presume, found his services in that line much in requisition by the pioneers, who depended largely upon their firearms to secure proven- der for their tables as well as protection from the Indians. Among the children of this progenitor was his namesake, Jacob, who figures as the grandfather of him whose name initiates this paragraph.

Jacob Inners (2) was born and reared in Bucks county, whence as a young man he removed to Lancaster county, where he became a farmer. At the age of twenty-five years he became a soldier in the Continental Line, and did his part in gaining the boon of independence for the struggling colonies. After the close of the Revolution he returned to Lancaster county, where he married, and somewhat later removed with this, his first wife, into Hellam township, York county. Mr. Inners removed from Hellam to York township, where he became the owner of a tract of more than three hundred acres of heavily timbered land, a considerable portion of which he reclaimed and put under cultivation. As the years passed he became one of the prominent and influential farmers of the county, and he resided in York township until his death, at the advanced age of ninety-one years. Both he and his wife were interred in the cemetery at Blineyer's Church, York township. Of the children of this worthy couple is entered the following brief record: Henry and Jacob died in York township; John died in Springfield township; Conrad died in York township; Eva and Catherine died when young. After the death of his first wife Jacob Inners married Sarah Geesey, who died in York township. Of the children of this union it is recorded that Peter, Michael, Sallie and Polly died in York township; Abraham and George were next in order; Daniel was the father of Noah J.; and Susan was the last born.

Daniel Inners was born in York township, in the year 1807, and there received such educational advantages as were afforded in the common schools of the locality and period, while in his youth he learned the blacksmith's trade with his brother George, becoming a skilled and reliable artisan, and continuing to be engaged in the active work of his stalwart trade for a number of years in York township. Finally he purchased two acres of the George Keener homestead, and there he continued to live retired from active labors. He died on the old homestead, April 1, 1890, at the age of eighty-three years, three months and twenty-eight days, while his remains and those of his wife repose in the cemetery at Blimyer's Church. In 1838 Daniel Inners was united in marriage to Miss Mary Neff, who was born in Springfield township, York county, a daughter of Samuel Neff; she was summoned into eternal rest Feb. 22, 1879, at the age of sixty-one years, two months and twenty-two days. Two large stones of chaste design mark the last resting-place of these honored and worthy citizens, whose lives were true in all relations, offering much of lesson and inspiration. Both were consistent members of the Reformed Church, and Mr. Inners was known as a stanch advocate of the Democratic party, while he ever showed a loyal interest in public affairs of a local nature. Of the children of this union we have the following record: Noah J., subject of this review, was the first born; Amos married Louisa Sipe, and they reside in Pleasureville, York county; Solomon married Catherine Rupp, who is now deceased; Daniel, who married Catherine Sipe, is a representative farmer of York township; Samuel died in the State of Oregon, unmarried; Mary has never married and resides in the city of York; Sarah, widow of Alexander Sipe, maintains her home in York; and Amanda is the wife of Henry Honsermyer, of York township.

Noah Jacob Inners, to whom this sketch is dedicated, was born on the homestead farm in York township, Aug. 22, 1840, and his boyhood days were passed in essentially the same way as were those of the average farmer boy of the locality and period. He soon began to assist in the work of the farm, and in the meantime did not neglect to enliven and expand his mental faculties by due attendance in the common schools of his home township, where, until he was nineteen years of age, he continued to pursue his studies during the winter terms. He then learned the blacksmith's trade under the able direction of his father, and followed that vocation for a short time, after which he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits on the old homestead, which he eventually purchased. There he continued to be actively engaged in general farming for sixteen years, in the meantime making many excellent improvements, including the erection of substantial and well-equipped buildings, his present fine and thoroughly modern residence having been completed in 1903, and being one of the most attractive farm homes in this section. His farm comprises 105 acres and constitutes one of the model places of the county. Mr. Inners still maintains a general supervision of the homestead, though he is living practically retired from active labor and enjoying the rewards of his past years of toil and endeavor.

Mr. Inners signalized his intrinsic patriotism at the time of the war of the Rebellion, in 1862 enlisting in Company G, 160th P. V. I., was mustered in at Harrisburg, and continued in active service until the expiration of his nine months' term of service, when he received his honorable discharge, after having participated in various engagements, including the battle of Black river. In politics he gives a stanch allegiance to the Democratic party, and his religious faith is that of the Reformed Church, with which he has been identified from his youth, while he has held various official positions, including that of deacon. He was one of those prominently concerned in making needed repairs upon the old Blimyer Church, in York township, which was the pioneer religious edifice of this part of the county.

On Oct. 9, 1864, Mr. Inners was united in marriage to Miss Agnes Liebenstine, who was born in York township, June 28, 1841, a daughter of Jacob and Charlotte (Ebert) Liebenstine. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Inners is incorporated the following record: Jacob, who married Emma Bupp, conducts a well appointed meat market in the village of Paradise, York county, and is a popular and enterprising young business man; Aaron is a resident of Los Angeles, Cal., where he is engaged in gardening; Amos, who married Annie Hess, resides on the old homestead, and is associated in its management; Noah married Elizabeth Leader and is a farmer in York county; Howard is in the employ of his brother Jacob, in the meat market; Latimer married Mary Bahn, and is likewise associated in the work and management of his father's farm; Alice married Albert Deitz, a farmer of Springfield township; and Annie is the wife of Charles Stump, of York township.

GEORGE D. JULIUS, residing retired on his fine farm in Jackson township, belongs to one of the very old families of Pennsylvania. His birth took place June 6, 1850, and he is a son of George and Hannah (Lanheardt) Julius.

Philip Jacob Julius, the great-grandfather of George D., was a native of Germany, who came to America and settled in Pennsylvania in the early part of the eighteenth century. By a deed which is in the possession of George D. Julius, it appears that Philip Jacob Julius purchased a farm of 147 acres of land in 1770. This deed has passed down from great-grandfather to grandfather, from grandfather to father, and from father to son. On this farm Philip Jacob Julius spent his entire life in farming. His son was born upon the place, as was George Julius, George D. Julius and our subject's son, who now occupies the farm.

The children born to John and Sarah Julius, the grandparents of George D., were: George, Peter, Frank, Charles, Sarah, Louisa, Thomas, and Elizabeth. In religion the family were members of the Reformed Church and in politics Mr. Julius was a Democrat.

George Julius, the father of our subject, was the father of these children: Louis, George D., William, James, John, Emma and Annie. George Julius was a stanch Democrat, and held the office of school director. His death occurred in 1884, when he was aged sixty-four years, and Mrs. Julius passed away in 1903, in her seventy-ninth year.

George D. Julius was educated in the schools of Dover township, and resided on the farm until 1898, when he retired. On June 1, 1874, Mr. Julius married Alice A. Bott, daughter of Peter Bott, of West Manchester township, and the children born to this union were: Bertius, Harvey, Minnie, George, Jr., Curtis, Annie and Mazine. In religion the family are members of the German Reformed Church, with the exception of Mrs. Julius, who is a member of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Julius is an active church worker and has been a deacon. Like his father he is a stanch Democrat, and has been active in the work of that party, although never aspiring to public office, having preferred to devote his attention to his large agricultural interests. A man of sterling character, progressive and public-spirited, Mr. Julius is much esteemed by his fellow citizens.

CONLEY. The Conley family of York county is descended from the branch that early settled in Lancaster county, Pa. Its representatives have been honorable and industrious citizens, whose upright lives have gained for them the esteem of their fellowmen.

Joseph Conley was a shoemaker near Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and there he died while still a young man. His children were: Samuel, of Newberry township; William, of Fairview township, York county; and Elizaabeth, who married Thomas Kohr, and died in Dauphin county.

Samuel Conley, son of Joseph, was born near Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and was but four years of age when his father died. He came to York county at the age of fifteen years, and learned the weaving trade, which he followed about thirteen years near Emigsville. He married -Elizabeth Plymire, daughter of John and Elizabeth Plymire; she died in 1874 and is buried at Miller's Cemetery in Newberry township. Mr. Conley started farming in Manchester township, where he remained two years, and spent the same length of time in Conewago township, after which he returned to Manchester township, this time remaining ten years. He then located in Newberry township, and bought the old David Bryan farm, which consists of about ninety acres, where he is still residing, now aged eighty-four years. For several years Mr. Conley has lived a retired life, and he is honored and respected by all who know him. The children born to him and his worthy wife were; Mary lives at Goldsboro, the widow of David Prowell, who died in 1888; Sarah, now deceased, married Jacob Fink, deceased; Jacob; Samuel, Jr., died in 1864; Elizabeth married Henry Rebman, deceased, and she now lives with her father; Annie, who lives in Fairview township, is the widow of Alexander Stittler, who died in 1904; Alice married Clayton Groom and lives at Goldsboro borough; Henry died at home;
Eli married Sarah Strickland, daughter of Joseph Strickland, of Chester county, and lives at New Cumberland, Cumberland county; and John, who married Clara Frey, daughter of John and Amanda Frey, resides at New Cumberland.

Jacob Conley came to Newberry township
at the age of nine years, and with his father learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed about three years, and then went to farming. In 1880 Mr. Conley bought his present home of ninety-eight acres, and also owns a farm of 133 acres which his son Samuel is working. Mr. Conley is also the owner of a fine piece of woodland, which consists of sixteen acres. Mr. Conley has proved to be a very successful farmer, but the success he has attained has been through years of hard work. His buildings are modern, well-built structures, his land is highly cultivated and very productive, and his farms well-situated and capably managed.

In politics Mr. Conley is a Democrat, has been school director six years and has also held the office of supervisor. Mrs. Conley is a valued member of the Dunkard Church. The family is very highly esteemed in the community.

In 1874 Jacob Conley married Frances Detwiler, daughter of Elias and Frances (Gottwals) Detwiler, descendants of Montgomery county pioneers. The children born of this union were: Samuel D.; Howard D.; Elias, of Cumberland county, Pa.; Elizabeth and Charles, living in Newberry township; James, at home; Jacob, married and residing in the same township; Samuel D.; Susan, married and living at New Cumberland; and Mary, Joseph, Frances, Katie and Sarah, all at home.

Samuel D. Conley was born in Newberry township, in 1877, and until he was eighteen years of age, enjoyed the privileges of the public schools. He then began farming on the homestead, remaining with his father until his marriage. At the present time he is farming a fine place of more than 133 acres, belonging to his father, and is prospering in his undertaking. He is a great reader of good books, and is keeping himself thoroughly posted on current events. In politics he is a Democrat.

In 1900 Samuel D. Conley was married to Emma Fisher, daughter of Jeremiah and Sarah Fisher, and they have three children, Jeremiah, Harry and Sarah.

Howard Detwiler Conley was born in Newberry township May 16, 1878. When he left school at the age of twenty years, he began work on the home farm under his father's guidance. After his marriage he located on the S. H. Creeps farm near Yocumtown, but is now on his own farm in Newberry township, where he is finding success as the reward of his industry.

In 1902 Howard D. Conley married Carrie Betz, daughter of Reuben and Elizabeth (Hykes) Betz, and they have two children: Minnie and Annie. In his political faith Mr. Conley is a stanch Democrat.

WORLEY F. RUDISILL. The Rudisill family in America was planted here by Wyerley Rudisill, who came from Germany in the early days of Pennsylvania, and followed his trade of tailor. He had three children: Andrew, Eve and Elizabeth.

Andrew Rudisill, born May 17, 1756, married Elizabeth, daughter of Jacob Wildasin. They had these children: Polly, John, Andrew, Eve, Elizabeth, Jacob and Henry. Andrew Rudisill died Jan. 22, 1821, aged sixty-four years.

Henry Rudisill, the youngest son of Andrew, was born Nov. 12, 1797, in Heidelberg township, York county. On March 25, 1823, he married Susanna, daughter of Samuel Eichelberger, by whom he had these children: Andrew, Henry, Adam, Samuel, Edward, Sarah, Catherine, Amanda, Susanna, Louisa Elizabeth, Henrietta Matilda, Maria, Reuben and Aaron. Henry Rudisill was a farmer in Heidelberg township, where he died at the age of ninety-four years, being buried at Bear's Meeting House, near Hanover. Mrs. Susanna (Eichelberger) Rudisill was born Oct. 9, 1803, and died Aug. 23, 1851, aged forty-seven years, ten months and fourteen days. Catherine Eichelberger, the mother of Susanna (Eichelberger) Rudisill, was a granddaughter of the great-grandfather of the elder Mathias Smyser, whose sketch will be found elsewhere in these annals. She was also a granddaughter of Philip Frederick Eichelberger, who came to America from Germany April 17, 1693. To Henry and Susanna Rudisill were born the following children: Andrew E., born Aug. 10, 1823, died in Hanover; Henry E., born Oct. 27, 1824, died in Greene Co., Ohio; Adam E., born March 23, 1826, died in Iowa; Samuel E., born Jan. 25, 1828, died in Penn township, York county; Edward E., born Dec. 5, 1829, died in Dayton, Ohio; Sarah C., born Dec. 30, 1831, is the wife of C. H. Sultner, of York; Amanda S., born Feb. 16, 1834, died young; Louisa E. E., born Sept. 7, 1836, died in York; Henrietta M. E., born Aug. 9, 1839, lives in Hanover; Maria E., born Jan. 2, 1841, died in Hanover; Reuben, born March 1, 1843, lives in Hanover; and Aaron E.

Aaron E. Rudisill, the father of our subject, was born Dec. 22, 1844, in Heidelberg township, York county, where he received a common school education. He married Amanda Forry, daughter of John and Nancy, (Myers) Forry, the former of whom was a farmer near Hanover, who died at the age of seventy-three years, while his wife passed away when eighty years of age. After marriage Mr. Rudisill located at Hanover, where he engaged in the feed business, continuing in that line eight years, and then went to farming in Adams county, near Gettysburg. He remained there three years, and then located in Eberton, now West York borough, where he engaged in farming. He retired from active work in 1895. His children are: Annie S., the wife of Joseph Graybill, living in North York borough; Sadie M., the wife of W. Heindel, a farmer of West Manchester township; Amelia B., the wife of William Seager, living in Spring Garden township; Worley F.; Harry J., who married Ella Dittinger, and lives in West York borough; Percy M., who married Dora Plagman, and resides in South Dakota; Amanda J., the wife of Harry Deveny, living in West York borough; and Minerva F., at home.

Worley F. Rudisill was born in Heidelberg township, York county, Sept. 20, 1874. He attended the schools of Adams and York counties, and worked at home on the farm until twenty-one years of age, when he went to learn the brick laying trade with David Shrum of West Manchester township, continuing there for two years. He then engaged with Horace Epply, with whom he remained three years, at the end of which time he engaged with George K. Spangler. After leaving Mr. Spangler, Mr. Rudisill engaged in business for himself, and built his present home in 1903, at No. 820 West Princess street, York.

On May 1, 1898, Mr. Rudisill was united in marriage with Miss Eliza A. Spahr, a daughter of Samuel and Emeline (Altland) Spahr, and to this union came the following children, all born at York: Aaron S., Raymond E., Alda R., and Worden W. In politics Mr. Rudisill is a Democrat. He is connected fraternally with Lodge No. 141, A. O. K. of M. C.

SAMUEL A. SHROFF, active in insurance work in York, was born March 20, 1834, in Rapto township, Lancaster county.

Samuel A. Shroff's grandfather, who lived near Colebrook Furnace, was drowned, in early manhood, while crossing a stream, and John Shroff, his son, the father of our subject, who was a native of Mount Joy, Lancaster county, died in 1894, aged eighty-six years. John Shroff married Mary Miller, daughter of a prominent farmer, who resided near Ephrata, Lancaster county, and three sons were born to her and her husband, as follows: Peter, who was a supervisor for the Pennsylvania Canal, was accidentally killed in an attempt to board a moving train of cars; John is deceased; and Samuel A. Mr. Shroff's paternal grandmother lived to be eighty-seven years old, while her mother lived to the remarkable age of one hundred and two years.

Samuel A. Shroff received his education in the schools of Mt. Joy borough, where he was employed in the store of J. E. Cassel, remaining there thirteen and one-half years. Mr. Shroff then removed to Bainbridge, Lancaster county, and embarked in storekeeping, trading under the name of John S. Groff & Co., in which business he continued three years. His next business enterprise was in forming a partnership with M. W. Smith, in the Canal Grocery business, continuing at that for twenty-three years, and he then conducted the store alone for a period of four or five years. In 1883 Mr. Shroff located in York and embarked in the life insurance business, with an office on the second floor of the Western Bank building, on West Market street, where the business has grown to be one of the largest in that line in the city of York.

Mr. Shroff married Sarah Reiff, daughter of Joseph Reiff, a coach builder and farmer of Manheim, Lancaster county, and of the children born to this union Mary A. is the widow of B. F. Mullen, assistant postmaster of Columbia, Lancaster county; and Gertrude, deceased, was the wife of William C. Hay, of Washington, D. C., superintendent in the drilling of guns in the navy department. They had one son, Samuel S., who died in 1902, aged thirty-four years.

Mr. Shroff is an attendant of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. In politics he is a stalwart Republican, his fidelity to the principles of that party having been recognized in an appointment to a government position at Harrisburg, and he has been frequently a delegate to Republican county conventions.

DR. EDWARD D. STERNER, a representative physician and surgeon of York, Pa., where he has been engaged in the practice of his chosen profession for the past decade and a half, has his office and residence at No. 527 West Market street.

Nicholas Sterner, the founder of this branch of the family in America, came from Germany, and in 1790 located in York county, becoming one of the early settlers of Manheim township, where he developed a farm, and where he passed the remainder of his life.

John Sterner, son of Nicholas, was born in January, 1800, in Manheim township, this county, and died in 1897. He married Elizabeth Kessler.

Jesse Sterner, son of John, was born in York county in 1837, and has passed his entire life here, still making his home in Codorus township, one of the honored citizens of the county. He devoted his active years to farming. He married Leah Deagan, who was born in 1837, in York county, daughter of George and Annie (Brenneman) Deagan; she died Dec. 7, 1889, aged fifty-two years, two months and nineteen days. To Jesse and Leah (Deagan) Sterner were born children as follows: Dr. Edward D.; Nathan D. is a telegraph operator and resides in York; Jacob D. is a successful contractor and builder in York; Priscilla (deceased) was the wife of Martin S. Kase, of Jefferson borough; Estella is the wife of John Miller, and they reside with her father on the old farm in Codorus; C. D. was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1868, served two terms and is now farming in Codorus township (he married Elizabeth Myers); Wesley, of York, married Elizabeth Stansbauch; and William D., a farmer of Codorus township, married Lydia Cornbower.

Edward D. Sterner passed his youth on the homestead farm, while he secured his rudimentary training in the village schools of Jefferson. In 1879 he matriculated at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, Md., where he remained a student for three years, at the end of that time beginning his preparation for the medical profession, receiving his degree of M. D. in 1882. He first engaged in practice in Jefferson borough near his old home, and there continued most successfully until 1889, when in order to open a wider field of professional work, he came to York, and has built up a large and representative practice, standing in high esteem as a physician and public-spirited citizen. Fraternally he belongs to the Knights of the Golden Eagle. He and his wife are members of the United Brethren Church. In politics he is a Democrat, but has never been an aspirant for political preferment.

On March 3, 1874, Dr. Sterner was married to Miss Lydia Spangler, daughter of Barnhart and Susan (Asper) Spangler, honored residents of Codorus township. She was born in Spangler's Valley, on the Gettysburg pike, Jan. 21, 1857. Their children were: Larrie E., who died in 1875; Margaret G. and Florence S., twins, the former dying in 1878, and the latter in 1875; Joseph Franklin, born Jan. 27, 1878; Edward Ammon, born Dec. 20, 1879; Charles Austin, born Feb. 5, 1882; and Mabel Irene, born Dec. 9, 1884.

BENJAMIN F. ALLISON, contractor and builder, is a native of York, born May 30, 1861, son of John and Eliza (Musser) Allison.

John Allison was born in York county in 1820. He was a miller by trade, and, in partnership with Eli Kendig, built and operated the Kendig mill. Later he had charge of Hoke's mill and then purchased John Sprenkle's mill property and conducted it till he was disabled by paralysis. Mr. Allison was a leading member of the first United Brethren Church of York, served on its official board and in 1869 was one of the most active agents in the rebuilding of the church edifice. His life was most consistent with his profession, and he commanded the deepest respect from all who knew of his blameless conduct. He died Nov. 22, 1885, and his widow still survives him, making her home with her son Benjamin. She was a Miss Eliza Musser, a native of York county, like her husband. They were the parents of four children, viz.: Emma, Mrs. Abraham Mundis, residing at 252 South Penn street; Amanda, deceased wife of John Arnold, of York; Lydia, Mrs. Alexander Newman, of York; and Benjamin F.

Benjamin F. Allison attended the York schools till he was eighteen and then began to learn the carpentry business in the planing mill and carpenter shop of Mr. Wantz. When this plant was destroyed by fire he took a position in the Shalls Car Shop but afterward joined his uncle A. K. Allison and was engaged with him in the management of a bakery for eight or nine years. He then returned to carpentry work and has since been engaged in that line. For some years he followed contracting and building on his own account but in March, 1905, entered the employ of A. M. Hake and Company and has since that date been the erecting superintendent for the firm. A Republican in his political views, Mr. Allison has always been active in public affairs and for the past nine years has been assessor of the Ninth ward. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 505, and is corresponding secretary of the Carpenters and Joiners Union, No. 1236.

Mr. Allison was married Feb. 29, 1884, to Miss Annie L. Small, and they have two children, namely: Minnie, employed in McClellan Brothers' store and living at home; and Elmer F., at school. The family belong to the Allison Memorial United Brethren Church and Mr. Allison has served on the official board.

Mrs. Allison was the daughter of John Frederick and Louisa Small, both born in Germany. The father was a native of Prussia, and the date of his birth was Sept. 29, 1816. He was the son of Frederick and Annie (Druman) Small, farming people who both died in Germany. The son came to America in 1838 and located in York, where he spent the greater part of his life. He worked at various employments till he had accumulated enough to purchase a farm of twelve acres at Grantley, York county, where he lived from 1859 till 1871. He then moved to the present family residence at 37 North Penn street, where he built a good modern house. While engaged in farming, Mr. Small also carried on quarrying, and the latter interest he retained throughout his active life, laying up thereby a comfortable property. He was one of the active members of the first United Brethren Church and several times held positions on its official board. His death occurred Jan. 29, 1901, and was deeply regretted. His wife, Mrs. Louisa (Hoffmeyer) Small, who is still living in the old home, was born in Hanover, Germany, May 19, 1829, and came with her parents to America in her seventeenth year, settling in York. She was married to Mr. Small Dec. 7, 1845, and became the mother of eight children, three of whom died in infancy. The others were: Mary, deceased wife of Henry Ortmyer, of Adams county; Henry W., who resides on North Newberry street, and is a manufacturer of suspenders; Annie L., Mrs. Allison; Charles E., a cigar maker, living on North Newberry street; and Lucy, living with her mother, and married to George W. Fielder, a barber on West Market street, by whom she has one child. Mrs. Small is also a member of the first United Brethren Church and is a most estimable woman.

The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Allison were Dietrich and Sophia (Yost) Hoffmeyer, who came to America in 1845, locating in York, where the rest of their active lives were spent. Mr. Hoffmeyer was a tailor in Germany and after coming to America continued to follow that trade till he was over eighty years old, maintaining his business ability to the last. He and his wife were among the earliest members of the first United Brethren Church. Dietrich Hoffmeyer passed away in 1879, aged eighty-three, surviving his wife eight years, as her death occurred in 1871 at the age of seventy-three. Their family included three children, namely: Frederick, for many years the head of a tailoring establishment in Baltimore; Sophia, wife of H. A. Kattcamp, of York, both now deceased; and Louisa, Mrs. Small.

JOHN H. STambaugh, general agent for the Baltimore Life Insurance Company, for York and Adams counties, with headquarters in the city of York, in both paternal and maternal lines is a representative of honored pioneer families.

Henry Stambaugh, his grandfather, was a prominent farmer of York county, and was held in high regard by all who knew him.

Jacob M. Stambaugh, father of John H., was born on his father's farm, and there reared to manhood, receiving a liberal common-school education. He is now living retired in York and is well-known throughout the county. When the war of the Rebellion was inaugurated he tendered his services in defense of the Union, serving as a non-commissioned officer in Company I, 127th P. V. I., and continuing with his regiment at the front for more than three years. He was wounded by a piece of cannon ball, by which his knapsack was torn to pieces, so that his escape from death was almost miraculous, while previously three other cannon balls had passed close to his head. In this engagement his regiment lost four hundred men, while a large number in addition were seriously wounded. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He married Catharine Lease, daughter of John Lease, who owned six or more farms in East Berlin, portions of these tracts being still in the possession of members of the family. The four children of Jacob M. Stambaugh and wife were: Joseph A. in the service of the York Street Car Company; Rev. Nathan L. is a clergyman of the United Brethren Church, and is stationed in Ohio; Catharine is married and lives in York; and John H.

John H. Stambaugh was born on the old homestead Nov. 4, 1870, and was educated in the public schools. He served an apprenticeship at the trade of carriage painting, devoting his attention to that line for a period of six years, at the expiration of which, in 1892, he became, as before stated, the general agent of the Baltimore Life Insurance Company for York and Adams counties. He is energetic, progressive and discriminating in his business methods, and is worthy of the high regard in which he is held in his home county and in insurance circles. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and his religious views are in harmony with the Moravian faith, in which he was reared. In a fraternal way he is identified with the B. P. O. Elks, the Sons of Veterans and the Knights of Malta, and he enjoys marked popularity in both business and social circles.

On April 10, 1902, Mr. Stambaugh married Miss Catherine E. Jacobs, daughter of W. H. Jacobs, of York, who for thirty years was in the service of the Northern Central Railroad Company. Mr. and Mrs. Stambaugh have one child, John Henry William.

JOSEPH ZULLINGER BENTZ is a descendant of German agriculturists who settled in the Cumberland Valley.

William Bentz, his father, was for many years the proprietor of the leading department store of Carlisle, where he was born and reared, and he died there in 1879, aged fifty-five years. His widow, Jane Mell, is still living and active at the age of eighty-five years. David Mell, father of Mrs. Bentz, was the most extensive brick manufacturer in the Cumberland Valley, and died at the age of ninety-five years. There were eight children born to the parents, William Bentz and wife, namely: Abner, in the Government printing office at Washington, D. C.; Dr. John, a practicing dentist of Carlisle; William, a merchant of Carlisle; Samuel, recorder of deeds of Cumberland county, who was, although a Republican, elected to that office in a Democratic county, and enjoys the distinction of being the only Republican elected; George, of Riverside, Cal.; Elizabeth, widow of Robert Bloomall, who was in the United States mint for twenty years; Mary, at home; and Joseph Z., of York.

Joseph Zullinger Bentz was born in Carlisle, April 17, 1857, and received his education in the public schools. His first occupation was as business manager for the Western Union & Cumberland Valley railroad, and he was transferred from there to Shippensburg, where he became ticket agent and manager for the same corporation. In 1884 Mr. Bentz embarked as a broker, a business that he has since pursued in Carlisle, Lebanon, Hagerstown and York for more than twenty years. Mr. Bentz came to York in 1896, and became a broker in stocks and grain, the business now amounting to almost a million dollars a year.

Mr. Bentz belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Brotherhood of the Western Union, and is a past officer of the Knights of the Golden Eagle. He is a member of the Allison Memorial Church. In politics he is a Republican. Mr. Bentz is a great lover of horses, and a bay gelding, Flo, which belongs to his string, is known as a dancer, and can do the cake-walk most admirably. Mr. Bentz has refused many offers for this valuable animal, one of $1,000.

DAVID W. HURSH, now a resident of York City living at No. 172 East Cottage place, is passing his declining days there retired from all active life, after many years of the arduous toil that makes up a farmer's existence. He was born in Allen township, Cumberland county, Pa., in 1837, son of Christian and Susan (Witmer) Hursh.

The family name was originally spelt Horst, but has worn its present form for several generations at least. Abraham Hursh, the grandfather of David W., was a native of Lancaster county, born near Lititz. In early life a carpenter by trade, he afterward moved to Allen township, bought a mill property there and followed the occupation of a miller for the remainder of his life. His wife was Miss Elizabeth Gensinger, and both were buried in Carroll township, York county. Their children were: Fannie, Christian, Abrah- am, Henry, Mrs. John Mohler, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. Greiger, and two who died unmarried.

Christian Hursh was born in Allen township in 1808, and learned the milling trade from his father. After about eleven years in that occupation he decided to turn his attention to farming, and settled in another part of Cumberland county, along the Yellow Breeches creek. From there he moved to Windsor township, York county, in 1845, bought at first a tract of farming land of seventy acres, and to this later added an adjoining thirty. All the buildings on the place were put up by him and he passed the rest of his life there. His death occurred in 1890, and his remains were laid to rest in the graveyard of the Witmer Mennonite Church at Stony Brook. His wife, Susan (Witmer) Hursh, who died in 1899, is buried in the same place. She was born in 1816, daughter of David and Magdalena (Kauffman) Witmer, of York county.

David Witmer, the maternal grandfather of David W. Hursh, was born in Lancaster county in 1787, later went to York county, and took up land at Stony Brook, and followed his trade as a carpenter there for many years. He was a preacher in the Mennonite Church for a long time, and the Witmer Meeting House was built on his property. He died at the age of seventy. He married Miss Magdalena Kauffman, and children were born to them as follows: John; David, a Mennonite preacher; Lydia, Mrs. David Sprenkle, of York county; Catherine, Mrs. David Forry; Nancy, Mrs. Samuel Proth; and Susan, Mrs. Hursh.

David W. Hursh was eight years old when his father moved to York county, grew up on the farm there, and in his turn made farming his life pursuit. When nearly thirty-three years of age he married and located on his father’s farm in Windsor township, where he remained twelve years. He then bought 137 acres in the same township and passed another twelve years on that farm, after which he bought the old Forry homestead in York township, near Longstown, a place comprising forty acres, and lived there until 1901, when he gave up all active participation in farming to his sons. Mr. Hursh himself moved into York, and has since kept only a general oversight of his farm properties. Mr. Hursh’s first wife, whom he married in 1870, was Miss Mary Jane Forry, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Strickler) Forry. She shared his joys and sorrows for nearly thirty years, but in 1899 was called from this world, and her burial place is the cemetery at the Witmer Meeting House. In 1901 Mr. Hursh was married (second) to Miss Eliza Hammer. His children, all born to the first marriage, were: Joseph, who married Miss Margaret Seachrist, and lives on his father’s farm in Windsor township; David, who married Miss Jemima Keasey, and manages his father’s York township farm; Theodore, of Hellam township, who married Miss Mary Kochenour; John, who married Miss Iva Ferrence, and lives at Stony Brook; Annie, wife of Harry Irwin, of Conewago township; Martha, Mrs. Albert Young, of Windsor township; and Paul, attending school.

David W. Hursh has been throughout his life a faithful member of the Mennonite Church, and for the past fifteen years has served as one of the trustees. He belongs to the Republican party. He is one of the prominent and substantial citizens of the county and has always been held in much respect.

WILLIAM CLARKSON SMITH, M. D., has chosen the city of York for his field of professional endeavor. He was born March 2, 1874, in Lower Chanceford township.

William Smith, grandfather of the Doctor, was a country physician. He married Maria Clarkson.

William Ferris Smith, son of William and Maria (Clarkson) Smith, was also a physician, and practiced his profession in Lower Chanceford township for forty years. In 1863 he entered the army, as surgeon of the 105th P. V. I., and served until the close of the war. He began practice immediately after the war in Airville, Lower Chanceford township, and continued until March, 1900, when he died. He was a member of the Pleasant Grove Presbyterian Church, in which he was elder for many years. He married Miss Hannah Mary Murphy, daughter of Col. George S. Murphy, and she still survives. She and her husband were the parents of children as follows: Rebecca M., who married Alexander Galbraith, of Baltimore, Md.; Maria Laird, who married R. H. Pollock, of Baltimore, Md.; and William Clarkson.

William Clarkson Smith attended the public schools of his native township until he was fifteen years of age, and then entered the York Collegiate Institute, which he attended two years, preparing himself for the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1807. He at once began practice at home with his father, with whom he continued for two years, and in 1809 he located in York, where he has since continued. In December, 1904, Dr. Smith was appointed health officer of York to fill the unexpired term of Dr. J. Frank Small. He is a member of the York County Medical Society; the Pennsylvania State Medical Society; and the American Medical Association. In politics Dr. Smith is a Republican. In his religious views he is connected with the First Presbyterian Church of York.

Dr. Smith was married in Chambersburg, Oct. 26, 1904, to Miss Alice Chambers Ross, daughter of Benjamin and Anne V. Ross.

COL. GEORGE S. MURPHY (deceased), for many years a prominent and successful merchant in Upper Chanceford township, and at one time an honored member of the Legislature, was born in Upper Chanceford township, on the farm upon which Clarkson Murphy, a nephew, now lives, Dec. 4, 1807, son of Joseph Murphy, who came from Ireland to the United States, settling in Upper Chanceford township. Joseph Murphy was a farmer in that township, where both he and his wife died.

Colonel Murphy received the common school education of his day, and grew up a farmer boy. He engaged in the store business in Upper Chanceford township before marriage and remained there until he retired from active life. While there he organized a company of home guards, and was given the title of colonel by the Legislature at Harrisburg. In his early days Colonel Murphy was a member of the Chanceford Presbyterian Church, but later transferred his membership to the New Harmony Presbyterian Church at Brogueville, and was always an active church worker. He was a firm believer in the principles of the Democratic party and worked hard for that organization’s success. He was elected to the Legislature in 1836, and served one or more terms with great credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituents.

Colonel Murphy was married in Harford Co., Md., Sept. 19, 1838, to Miss Rebecca Hughes, born June 12, 1818, daughter of J. S. and Hannah (Wiley) Hughes. Colonel Murphy’s death occurred Dec. 22, 1886, while his wife survived until June 21, 1901. when she passed away, and both are interred at the New Harmony cemetery. Their children were: Thomas Zenas, born Feb. 9, 1840, married Miss Margery McVey, and now resides in Philadelphia; Hannah Mary, born Dec. 1, 1841, married Dr. William F. Smith, who died in Lower Chanceford township, March 3, 1900; Martha Ann, born Nov. 12, 1844, married Dr. S. F. Neeley, and they now live in Leavenworth, Kans.; Joseph W., born May 5, 1847, married Miss Mary Griffith, and they also reside in Leavenworth, Kans.; John S., born June 6, 1851, married Miss Elizabeth Griffith, and resides in York; Rebecca E. S., born Sept. 7, 1853, is now Mrs. James Wallace of York; Ida May, born Oct. 25, 1859, married Clarkson Manifold.

FREDERICK MARKLEY CRAWFORD, who since 1903 has made his home in York, comes of a family early settled in the Cumberland Valley.

(I) The first of the family of whom there is definite record was Edward Crawford, a native of County Donegal, Ireland, who immigrated to America about 1740, settling in Pennsylvania, on the land now included in Guilford township, Franklin county, and there he died in 1792. This tract of 640 acres was a part of a Proprietary Manor that the Penns determined not to reserve, and the Manor is now in the possession of the subject of this sketch. He married Elizabeth Sterritt, and they became the parents of nine children: James, who married and died near Mercersburg in 1798, leaving no children; John Edward, born Jan. 10, 1757, died March 6, 1833; Joseph, who was killed by the Indians; Martha, born in 1743, married to Edward Cook, and died in 1837; Elizabeth, who married John Fulton; Sarah, born in 1753, married to Henry Work, and died March 6, 1819; Ruth, who married an Elliott; and Mary, who married a Dunlevy.

(II) John Crawford, son of Edward, born in 1746, and died Feb. 13, 1827, was first lieutenant of Capt. Conrad Snider’s Company of Col. Frederick Watt’s battalion of the “Flying Camp” in 1776. He was captured with Colonel Magaw’s command at Fort Washington, Nov. 16, 1776, and was held as a prisoner of war in New York and Long Island until 1778, when he was exchanged. Early in his captivity he wrote the following letter to his parents, which is still preserved by his descendants:

New York, Nov. 21, 1776.

Honored Father and Mother:

I am a prisoner here, and without clothes or hard money, only what was on me when I was taken. I left clothes with Eddy on the other side of the river; expect to get them again. I would be glad if you could send me some hard money, as no other will pass here. I have the liberty of walking the streets. You need not be uneasy about me. I am well at present and live in hopes to see you. I am your dutiful son and humble servant.

P. S. I was taken November 16, at Fort Washington with 2,300 more.

After his discharge Lieut. Crawford returned to the homestead where he spent his life as a farmer. On his monument in Falling Spring cemetery is this simple memorial: "A soldier of the Revolution rests here."

Mr. Crawford married Anne Holmes, born in 1765, died Dec. 10, 1810, a native of Ireland, and their children were: Holmes, born in 1791, for many years cashier of the Chambersburg Savings Fund, died Feb. 15, 1874; James; John, a farmer on the old homestead, who married Margaret Black; Joseph, born in 1806, who married Mary Kirkpatrick, and died Aug. 23, 1888; Edward, who died young; Sarah, born June 17, 1795, who married John S. Brown, and died Dec. 28, 1849; Martha, born May 8, 1788, who married Josiah Duffield; Elizabeth, who married Hugh Crawford; Rebecca, who married Matthew McKee; and Nancy, who died unmarried.

(III) James Crawford, son of Lieut. John, was born in Guilford township, Franklin Co., in 1800, and after a life engaged in farming on the old homestead there died Jan. 18, 1872. In politics he was a Whig and Republican. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church. His wife, Catharine Byers, was born Oct. 15, 1805, daughter of Frederick and Anna (Eby) Byers, and died Dec. 11, 1892. They had three children: John E., born Feb. 22, 1827, married Ellen Stahlle, of York, and died April 2, 1896; Frederick B.; and Milton, born Sept. 1, 1844, married Rebecca Harmony (he was a soldier in the Civil War).

(IV) Frederick B. Crawford, son of James, lived on the old Crawford homestead until 1865, when he removed to Reading, where he became superintendent of the Bushong farms of 600 acres, remaining twenty years, when he returned to the old home in Franklin county. He was a stanch Republican, and was a member of Falling Spring Presbyterian Church, Chambersburg. He married Maria Markley, a descendant of Commodore Markley, a distinguished officer of the Dutch Navy, and also of the Bushong family, an early settled family of French descent in Lancaster county (her mother was Rebecca Bushong of Ephrata, Lancaster county). Three children blessed this union: (1) Katharine M., born Aug. 28, 1856, studied medicine with Dr. B. Bowman in Chambersburg, and was graduated at the Hahnemann College, Chicago. She practiced her profession in Chambersburg, 1882-94, fifteen years in partnership with Dr. Julia T. Hill-Crawford. In 1901 she went to York, and there practiced until her death, which occurred Dec. 2, 1903. (2) Holmes E., born in 1859, died May 15, 1877. (3) Frederick Markley.

(V) Frederick Markley Crawford, son of Frederick B., was born June 3, 1861. He was but two years of age when his parents removed to Reading, and attended public school in that city and the Brünner Academy. When his grandfather died the family returned to the old homestead, and there Mr. Crawford spent the greater part of his vacations. His sympathies and tastes led him to the agricultural life of his ancestors, and he has made farming his chief occupation. A man who believes no one should shirk his duty as a citizen, he nevertheless has no official aspirations, and his work in politics is largely confined to the casting of his ballot, being as was his father before him a stanch Republican. In 1893 he married Dr. Julia T. Hill.

ALFRED BIXLER, farmer, and one of the leading citizens of Hellam township, York county; has resided there for over thirty years.

The Bixler family in America is traced back to a Swiss ancestor who came over at an early day and settled in Maryland, where he and his wife, who was of Scotch-Irish blood, both died. John Bixler, grandfather of Alfred, was born in Maryland, where he married, and had a large family of children, of whom record has been preserved as follows: Esther, born April 30, 1814, died unmarried; Martha, born Jan. 1, 1815, is deceased; Nancy, married John Overholt, a Mennonite preacher, and moved to Westmoreland county, Pa., where she died at the advanced age of ninety-four, after several years' blindness; Jesse moved to Westmoreland county, where he lived to a good old age; and David became the father of Alfred Bixler. Grandfather John Bixler passed the last years of his life with his daughter Nancy in Westmoreland county.
BIOGRAPHICAL

David Bixler, father of Alfred, was born Jan. 12, 1820, in Manor township, Lancaster county, where he attended school and learned the trade of shoemaker. He married in Manor township, Lancaster county, Susan Eshelman, of that place, daughter of John Eshelman. About the year 1846 David Bixler moved his family to Wayne county, Ind., the journey being accomplished by canal-boat from Columbia to Harrisburg, thence to Pittsburg, and down the Ohio river to Cincinnati, from which place the party went by wagon to its destination in Wayne county. The Bixlers were accompanied on this journey by the Brennerman family of Cumberland county. For several years David Bixler and his family resided in Germantown, a village of Wayne county, where he plied his trade of shoemaker. But times were hard, money was very scarce, and payment for the mere necessities of life was made by barter, so the family decided to return to Pennsylvania. The return trip was made in a two-horse wagon, other families joining the party. On reaching Westmoreland county the Bixler family stopped for a time with David's sister Nancy, at Mt. Pleasant, and Mr. Bixler purchased a farm near by, through which ran a valuable coal vein. There the family lived for six or eight years, Mr. Bixler cultivating the farm and doing a profitable business in buying and selling horses. He then sold the farm, which has since changed hands again at over $300 an acre, to Abraham Overholt, and moved back to Lancaster county. He located in Mountville, buying a property on which he lived for five years, carrying on his business in horse dealing. After this he bought property in Hellam township, whereon he lived for some time, until he went to pass the remainder of his life with his son Alfred. His death occurred in 1885. His wife survived him a few years, passing away in the home of her son Hiram.

Alfred Bixler was born in Manor township, Lancaster county, Jan. 18, 1843, and his early school days were spent in the district schools of Westmoreland county. He had more than ordinary difficulties to overcome, as he did not know a word of English when he entered school. Later he attended school in Mountville, Lancaster county, and in Hellam township, York county, but his school days were short at best, for he began work at the age of thirteen. His first position was that of clerk in the liquor store of Abraham Hiestand at York, where he remained several years. His next venture was as a huckster in Baltimore. Soon after his marriage he began farming on the Daniel Loucks farm, in Hellam township, remaining there four years. He then went onto the David Strickler farm in the same township, where he lived for eight years. In 1883 he bought his present farm of forty acres, formerly the Reisinger farm, from David Stoner, The barn on this place was built by Mr. Bixler in 1892, and the other buildings were erected over thirty years ago by Samuel Lehmknecht. The farm known as the Jacob L. Dietz place was purchased by Mr. Bixler in 1903, and is occupied by his son-in-law, Harry Dietz.

Alfred Bixler married, at York, Pa., Nov. 24, 1870, Amanda Lehman, of Hellam township, where she was born Nov. 5, 1842. Her father was George Lehman, also a native of Hellam, where he spent most of his life as a farmer. He was born April 21, 1818, and died in Druck Valley, Hellam township, in 1884. He married, Feb. 18, 1841, Susan Druck, who was born in Hellam March 6, 1819, daughter of Gottlieb Druck. The children of George and Susan (Druck) Lehman were as follows: Amanda, who married Alfred Bixler; Henry, born April 8, 1845, who married Sarah Druck; Samuel, born Oct. 6, 1847, who married Feb. 24, 1870, Lena Druck; John, born June 27, 1850, who married (first) Nov. 9, 1876, a Miss Kauffman and (second) a Miss Crumling; Mary Ann, born Nov. 21, 1852, who married, Nov. 9, 1876, John Druck; Franklin, born Dec. 1, 1853, who married Alice Sechrist; Leah, born Aug. 9, 1855, who married Michael Strickler; and Frederick, born Nov. 14, 1863, who married Mary Major.

To Alfred and Amanda (Lehman) Bixler have been born the following children: Annie Lehman, born July 24, 1871, who married Harry Dietz, a farmer of Hellam township, and is the mother of two children, Esther and Vera; Ellen Lehman, born Feb. 9, 1874, who married William Dietz, Jr., a farmer of Hellam township, and has one child, Harold; Susie, born July 12, 1877, who lives at home; Harriet Lehman, born Jan. 30, 1880, who died Sept. 2, 1901; and Latimer, born Jan. 13, 1885, who is at home.

Alfred Bixler has earned his success by dint of hard work. From his boyhood he has had to make his own way, and what he has acquired has been by long, hard, honest toil. His early earnings went to help his parents, and he cared for them in their old age, buying for them a comfortable home and letting them want for nothing that kindness could suggest. Mr. Bixler has been a lifelong Democrat, and cast his first vote for Gen. McClellan. He was brought up in the Lutheran Church, and has been active in the township for the past twelve years as one of the relief directors.

JOSEPH B. DILLER, one of the prominent and influential farmers of Heidelberg township, York county, is engaged in the cultivation of his fine tract of land near Bear Meeting House, along the York Road. He was born in 1864, near Newville, Cumberland Co., Pa., son of Francis and Mary (Burkholder) Diller.

The founder of the above named Diller family was Francis Diller, the great-great-grandfather of Joseph B. Diller, who came with his wife Anna and family from Switzerland in 1754, and settled in Lancaster Co., Pa., where he died in 1783. His wife Anna went with her son Abraham to Cumberland Co., Pa., and about 1790 settled on the “First farm,” about two and one-half miles northeast of Newville, on which part of said tract (if not misinform-ed) now stands the Diller Church (Mennonite) and the burying ground is located where Anna Diller was buried. She attained the age of one hundred and two years.

Francis Diller, son of Abraham Diller, was married to Mary Detwiler, and following are the names of the children born to that union: Abraham, Susannah, Martin, Francis, Elizabeth, John and Jacob. Francis Diller was a prominent farmer, yet gave a liberal portion of his time to winning souls to Christ, being a preacher in the Mennonite Church, and for many years preaching in the Diller Church. He made his home in Cumberland county, Pa., all his life, and he died in 1857.

Francis Diller, the father of Joseph B., received a common school education, and when young learned the cooper’s trade, which he followed for fourteen years in Cumberland Co., Pa. He then went to farming in Greene township, Franklin county, where he owned a tract of land, and there he died in 1886, aged sixty years. His wife passed away in 1895, in the faith of the Mennonite Church, to which her husband also adhered. Both were buried in the graveyard near Chambersburg, at the Mennonite Church. Their children were: Elizabeth, deceased; Mary, deceased; Joseph B.; Samuel married Lucy Strike and lives in Franklin county; Jacob married Nancy Detrich, and lives in the same county; Noah died young; John married Maggie Strike, and lives in Washington county, Maryland.

Joseph B. Diller was but eight years old when he left Cumberland county and went with his father to Franklin county. He attended the Smoketown school until seventeen years of age, and then worked at farming in Franklin Co., Pa., until twenty-two years old. He married Elizabeth Shank, of Adams Co., Pa., and they began housekeeping and farming in Franklin county, later moving to Adams county, Pa., where Mr. Diller followed trucking, and attended the Gettysburg markets. He remained in Adams county nine years, after which he moved to York county, locating in his present home in 1904; in 1903 he erected a fine house and barn along the York road, at Bear Meeting House. Mr. Diller has been very successful in his undertakings, and is rated one of the substantial men of the community. Mrs. Elizabeth (Shank) Diller died in 1899.

In 1901, Mr. Diller was married to Annie S. Bair, daughter of Daniel and Maria (Shenk) Bair, and granddaughter of John Bair, a very prominent farmer of West Manchester township. John Bair died in North Codorus township. Daniel Bair, Mrs. Diller’s father, was born in West Manchester township, and after marriage located in North Codorus township, where he became well known as a prosperous farmer, and died aged fifty-nine years, the father of the following children: Reuben, John, Daniel, Henry, Annie S., Jacob, Maria. After his first wife’s death Mr. Bair married Mattie Stauffer, and had three children: Mattie, Amanda and Lydia.

The children born to Mr. Diller and his first wife were: Annie M., Jacob A., John D.
Samuel J., Levi J., and Martha E. To the second marriage were born: Lydia M., Emma M., and Reuben H. Mr. and Mrs. Diller are members of the Mennonite Church.

CHARLES HOLTEN BYERS, traveling salesman for L. M. Hartman, dry goods and notions, was born on his father’s farm, which his grandfather had entered in 1836, situated close to Burbank, Wayne Co., Ohio.

Carley Byers and his wife, the great-grandparents of our subject, came from Germany to the United States before the Revolutionary war, in which struggle he served as an officer in Washington’s army, being wounded in battle. John Byers, his son, was born in Warrington township, York county, in 1800, died at Burbank, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1879. His wife was Elizabeth Umbarger, of Lisburn, Pennsylvania.

David Byers, father of our subject, was born in Warrington township, Aug. 28, 1827, and lived there until 1836, when he was taken by his parents to Burbank, Ohio. The family made the trip across country in a wagon, walking the greater part of the way, while the mother carried a sick infant for most of the journey. Mr. Byers was a farmer all of his life, and was very successful in his operations. He died Aug. 12, 1905. He married Miss Ann Rebecca Rieff, an aunt of the famous jockeys, Lester and Johnnie Rieff. Charles Holten is the only living child of his parents’ union, his brother Abraham R., having died at the age of twenty-three years, and a sister, Ora, having died in infancy.

Charles Holten Byers’s education was begun in the public schools of his native place, and continued at Burbank Academy and Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio. He left school at the age of twenty-one years, having had as classmates some of the most prominent men of the State, many of whom are now well-known men in manufacturing and political circles. As a boy and young man he worked on his father’s farm. He came of a prominent Republican family, and during many of the late President McKinley’s campaigns was in close touch with the future president and accompanied him on many of his stumpin tours through that section of Ohio. Prior to 1891 he travelled for the Western Publishing House of Chicago, selling school books and supplies. In this year he accepted a position with the Almer Royce Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, selling wholesale perfumery, extracts and soaps, and remained with this firm until 1900. After his second marriage Mr. Byers left the road, and for a period resided in Burbank, Ohio, looking after his farming interests. In 1904 Mr. Byers took his present position, removing from Ohio, to different points in Virginia, and in November of that year settled in the city of York.

Mr. Byers has been twice married, first at Louisville, Ky., Nov. 29, 1883, to Miss Emma Jahrreis, then residing in Louisville, daughter of Frederick Jahrreis, a marble dealer of Madison, Ind., and she died in Louisville, Nov. 19, 1898, leaving these children: Lee D., born at Wichita, Kans., June 3, 1883, taught school at Northwood, N. Dak., and is now teaching at Portland, Ore.; and Ralph Eckman, born at West Salem, Ohio, June 22, 1892, is now at school. Mr. Byers married (second) at Scranton, Pa., Sept. 5, 1900, Miss Alice Lenore Harvey, born at Mansfield Centre, Conn., daughter of Joseph and Emily (Phillips) Harvey. Her father died in 1901, while her mother still survives. One child has been born to this union, Charles Harvey, born May 1, 1903, at Burbank, Ohio. Mr. Byers was reared in the faith of the Evangelical Church, but is liberal in his religious views. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., West Salem (Ohio) Council, No. 168.

HENRY F. ROHRBAUGH, of Penn township, was born in that locality Feb. 24, 1854, on the old Rohrbaugh homestead, son of Amos and Fanny (Forry) Rohrbaugh.

The maternal grandfather was John Forry, who married a Miss Myers; the paternal grandfather was Henry Rohrbaugh, a native of York county, whose wife was a Miss Runkel. Amos Rohrbaugh was born in Manheim township, in 1827, and died in 1896, aged sixty-eight years; he was widely known as a successful farmer, and was a man very highly respected for his many sterling qualities. His wife was a native of Penn township, born in 1825, and is still living, residing in Hanover, near the toll gate. To their union were born two sons,—Henry F. and John F., the latter a prominent contractor in Hanover,—and six daughters, Mary, Fannie, Katharine, Amanda, Sarah and Barbara, all married.

Henry F. Rohrbaugh attended the village school in New Baltimore until he was nearly eighteen, and then continued at home, helping his father on the farm for the next six years. He then married and settled on his father's property, where he has ever since been engaged in general farming and stock raising, and he has become an extensive feeder of cattle for export. He has also branched out into a dairy business, milks ten or twelve cows, and sells to the creameries in Hanover. The farm, known originally as the Jacob Bucher farm, contains 108 acres of choice land in a high state of cultivation, and with a goodly number of substantial buildings. It is supplied with the best of machinery for all the various activities carried on, and the place is altogether one of the best equipped properties in the vicinity. In politics Mr. Rohrbaugh affiliates with the Republicans.

At the age of twenty-four Mr. Rohrbaugh married Miss Catherine Bare, daughter of Daniel and Susan (Bechtel) Bare, of Penn township. Six children have been born to them, namely: Emma J., wife of George Bargelt, a tinner of Hanover; Catherine, Amos, William, Edward, and Daniel, at home. Mrs. Rohrbaugh is a member of the German Baptist Church.

CHARLES NELSON WOLF, M. D., of Hellam, York county, is very popular in the town where he has lived since he was a small boy.

The great-grandfather of Dr. Wolf was a native of Germany, where he lived and died. His son came to America and settled in Lancaster county, Pa., moving from there to Adams county. He was the father of Susan, Mrs. Zouck, the mother of Jacob Zouck, a wealthy man of Hanover, Pa.; Mrs. Jacob Stock; Samuel, father of Dr. Wolf; Mrs. Meakley; and Jacob and Reuben, deceased.

Samuel Wolf, father of Dr. Wolf, was born in Hamilton township, Adams county, where he spent his life as a farmer. He married Gertrude West, and they had the following children: Mary, wife of Dr. J. A. Armstrong, of Hellam; Aaron, a stock farmer of Adams county, married to Emma Hare; William, a farmer of Adams county, married to Rachel Wolf; Sarah, wife of Jacob Hoover, of Adams county; Lewis, a farmer of Adams county, married to Lydia Reynolds; and Charles Nelson. Samuel Wolf was a Democrat in politics, and he and his family were members of the Lutheran Church. He died in 1889, at the age of seventy-four; his wife is still living, in her eighty-fourth year.

Charles Nelson Wolf was born Oct. 9, 1863, in Hamilton township, Adams county, and his first school days were spent at Pine Run in that county. When he was eleven years old, he left school there, and came to Hellam to live with his sister, wife of Dr. J. A. Armstrong, and there he attended the public schools, making rapid progress. One of his teachers was Mr. Gardiner, present county superintendent of schools. In due time he received a teacher's certificate, and taught in Druch Valley for one term. Not taking kindly to the profession of teaching, he returned to his sister's, where he steadily added to his knowledge of medicine under Dr. Armstrong's tutelage. He spent a year at York Academy under Prof. Stauffer, and then decided to enter Gettysburg College to study for the ministry. He mastered the two years preparatory work in twelve weeks, but when ready to enter college found that the field of medicine was more attractive than the ministry. Once more, therefore, he returned to his sister's, determined on the study of medicine for his life work. He passed a preparatory examination at York under Dr. Kerr and Dr. Blair, and in 1886 entered the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia. He was graduated with the class of 1889, Dr. Frank Small, of York, being one of his classmates. He began practice in Hellam, where he remained two years. He then went to Yorkana, where he soon built up a large practice, equal to that of any country doctor in the county. The work presently becoming too heavy, Dr. Wolf went to East Berlin, Adams county, hoping for a less arduous life, but there also he had more to do than his strength would permit. Then the health of his brother-in-law, Dr. Armstrong, failed about this time, and Dr. Wolf returned to Hellam to assist him, and he is at present in charge of the greater part of his practice. Dr. Wolf is an able physician, he is greatly liked and his services are much in demand.

Dr. Wolf married in Hellam, Dec. 25, 1888, Alice Abel, daughter of Benjamin and Maria (Ness) Abel, the latter of whom is living. The children of this marriage are: Stella, Vera, Erma, Ruth, Nelson, Carrie and Lorene. Dr. Wolf was brought up in the Lutheran faith, but is not connected with any church. In politics he is a Democrat.
HENRY F. WALKER (deceased) was for a number of years engaged in a coal and wood business in York, Pa., where he died in 1902. He was born in Cleveland, O., in 1865, son of Girard Walker.

Henry F. Walker received a good education, and for a number of years was employed by the Adams Express Company, of Cleveland. He spent two years in Virginia in the mercantile business, and came to York in 1892, engaging in the coal and lumber business with his brothers-in-law, later embarking in the coal business on his own account. He was a good business man, and his business was prospering greatly, when he died in York, Sept. 19, 1902, and was buried at the Prospect Hill cemetery.

In 1886 Mr. Walker married Louise W. Grothe, daughter of Henry and Wilhelmina (Brinkman) Grothe, and to this union were born: Emma, William, Martin and Gerhard. In politics Mr. Walker was a Democrat. The family were members of St. John’s Lutheran Church. Mrs. Walker resides at her home, No. 407 East Prospect street, York, superintending the coal business, which her brother is carrying on for her.

HENRY W. EMIG, a prominent farmer citizen of Hellam township, is an elder brother of Albert G. Emig.

Mr. Emig was born in Hellam township, on the beautiful family farm, Jan. 20, 1846. He attended school from the time he was six years old until he was twenty, but although he was fond of study, he was more fond of work. He began his chosen work of farming when only a boy, and remained with his father until he was twenty-six years old. He then bought his present fine farm of 118 acres. The house in which he lives was built by the man who bought the property from William Penn. Mr. Emig has made many improvements on the farm; the present barn, one of the best in the county, 80x60 feet in dimensions, was erected by him in 1889. In 1878, he built the tobacco shed, 80x64 feet.

For ten years Mr. Emig lived on his farm in bachelor solitude, and then married Susan Smuck, daughter of Henry and Mary Ann (Keener) Smuck. They have two children, Guy and Clare. Mr. Emig is a loyal Republican in politics. He has no church connection. He is a man much looked up to in the community where he lives, and he has earned his position by hard, honest work. He began with almost no capital, and has accumulated a competence through untiring energy and industry.

JOHN FORSYTH MAUGHLIN, justice of the peace and school director of East Hopewell township, York county, Pa., was born on the home farm near Airville, York county, Sept. 17, 1805, son of John James Maughlin.

William Maughlin, the great-grandfather of John F., came from the North of Ireland to America, and is supposed to have settled in the lower end of York county, where he died. His son, John, was born in the neighborhood of Airville, and was a cooper by trade, although farming was his chief occupation throughout life. He married Miss Mary Smith, also of that section. He was a soldier in the War of 1812-14 and was stationed at Baltimore, Md. He died near Airville in 1881, aged ninety-three years, his wife preceding him to the grave. These children were born to him: Joseph Smith, who died in Washington State; Martha, Mrs. William Wilson, of Airville; John James, the father of John F.; Margaret, Mrs. John McKinley, who died in College Springs, Page Co., Iowa; Jane, Mrs. Murray Wilson, who died in Chanceford township; Mary Ann, Mrs. David Forsyth, of College Springs, Page county, Iowa; Lizzie and Ezmiah, residents of Airville; and William, who married Rachel McKinley, and died in Airville.

John James Maughlin was born in 1828 near Airville, and followed the occupation of farming all of his life. He married Mary Jane Grove, born at Muddy Creek Forks, in 1837, daughter of Thomas W. and Susan (Lemon) Grove. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Maughlin settled on a portion of the old homestead, and there the former died in 1890. Mrs. Maughlin surviving and making her home near Airville. During the Civil War, the father of John F. Maughlin was a member of the Home Guards. He was connected with the Guinston U. P. Church for the greater part of his life, but in his later years joined the Airville U. P. Church. He and his wife had children as follows: Ida, who died young; John F., a detailed record of whose life is found below; Mary E., Mrs. William McBurney Grove, residing near Airville; Thomas Grove, who married Jennie Skelton, and lives on a part of the home farm.

John Forsyth Maughlin attended the common schools of his township, and the Normal school of York, later taking a course at a Philadelphia business college. His first local teacher was Frances Cameron, his last being Agnes Campbell, and while in York he was under the tuition of Prof. D. H. Gardner. He was reared to farm pursuits, and taught school for three years in Chanceford and Lower Chanceford townships. On Oct. 1, 1896, he married Miss Ella E. J. Hyson, of East Hopewell township, daughter of Archibald Hyson, a full sketch of whom will be found elsewhere. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Maughlin lived at McCall's Ferry for six years, and Mr. Maughlin was in the general store of Samuel D. Fry. At the end of that period Mr. Maughlin purchased his present farm of sixty-two acres from the estate of John C. Liggett, upon which he has since resided and which has proved to be a very productive, fertile piece of farm property. Mr. Maughlin has been very successful in his agricultural operations, and can speak from experience and say that farming, when properly managed, is a profitable business.

Mr. Maughlin is now serving his third year as school director, and was elected a justice of the peace in 1905. He takes a great interest in all educational matters. He is a member of the Guinston U. P. Church, in which he is an elder (ordained May 3, 1895), and was a trustee of the church for six years. At present he is superintendent of the Sunday school.

John Forsyth Maughlin and his wife have been the parents of two children, Mary Emma and Clara Gennill.

ANDREW E. KLINE, who resides on a neat little farm in Monaghan township, is one of the most popular auctioneers in York county. He was born June 28, 1846, in Monaghan township, son of John D. and Mary (Myers) Kline, and a grandson of David Kline. On the paternal side he is of English descent, while on the maternal side he comes from Pennsylvania-Dutch stock.

John D. Kline, the father of A. E., was a farmer of Monaghan township, where he spent his whole life, engaged in agricultural pursuits. He and his wife were the parents of thirteen children, as follows: Julia A., Mary, Sarah, Jane, Margaret, Elizabeth, Elmina, Catherine, William, Daniel, David, John and Andrew E. This family were consistent members of the Church of God, while Mr. Kline was a Republican in politics. His death occurred in 1855, when he was aged fifty-eight years, while his wife passed away in 1892, at the age of seventy-five.

Andrew E. Kline received his education in the common schools of his native township, and then engaged in farming, to which he devoted all his attention until 1884, when he turned his attention to auctioneering. In this line he has been eminently successful, and is very well known throughout the counties of Adams, Cumberland, York and Perry. He understands his business thoroughly, and his genial, pleasing manner has won for him a host of friends. Mr. Kline also carries on farming in a small way, his neat little farm being kept in a good state of cultivation.

In 1866 Mr. Kline married Sarah J. McClure, daughter of William McClure, of York county, and one child was born to the union, U. S. Grant. Mrs. Kline died in 1892. Mr. Kline is a stanch Democrat, has served as judge of elections, and is now serving as county committeeman.

S. OSCAR MILLER, of Jackson township, is a prominent farmer and business man who has attained his present position of prosperity and influence by his own untiring efforts, and is in the best sense of the word a self-made man, although he started with the advantages accruing from a good education and the influences of an intellectual atmosphere in the home. He was born in Adams county, Feb. 24, 1853, a son of Samuel B. and Eliza M. (Malaun) Miller.

Isaac Miller, paternal grandfather of S. Oscar, was a native of Maryland and throughout his life was occupied in tanning. During his youth and early manhood he worked in Maryland, but later moved to Pennsylvania and located two miles east of Gettysburg, where he became one of the prosperous men of the region, and where he remained until his death. He married Miss Elizabeth Steigel, and six children were born to them, as follows: Samuel B.; John; Susan, Mrs. Osburn; Elizabeth, Mrs. Sourbeer; Maggie, Mrs. Mertz; and Mary A., Mrs. Clink. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were German Baptists in their religious belief, and he was an ardent Democrat in politics.

Samuel B. Miller was born in Mount Joy township, Adams county, and was sent to the primitive schools of that district. Later he attended Oxford College, and received a good education, preparing himself for teaching. For twenty-two years he followed that profession with great success, but he also found time to carry on both tanning and farming and during the latter part of his life confined himself to such business. He accumulated a comfortable property, gave all his children good educations, and took a very high place in the community. In politics he was a strong Democrat, and prominent in local affairs, served as school director and in several township offices, and was elected justice of the peace. The children born to Samuel B. and Eliza M. Miller were: Isaac A. (deceased), John F. (deceased), S. Oscar, Benjamin M., Lemuel F., Ephraim, William H., Levi A. (of Baltimore), Eliza A., and Ella I. (deceased). Mr. and Mrs. Miller were devout followers of the German Baptist faith.

S. Oscar Miller was born in Mount Joy township, Adams county, and attended the public schools there. As he grew older he was put at farm work, but later learned the miller's trade. This, however, he did not follow long, soon giving his attention once more to farming, which has been his occupation for twenty-seven years. In 1889 he moved to York county and rented a farm until 1901, when he bought his present property of 115 acres in Jackson township, and moved thither. He also owns a large farm in Adams county. Besides his farming Mr. Miller is largely engaged in the manufacture of lime and allied interests, owning one of the largest lime kilns in the State, with an output of from three to five carloads a day, and he turns out about the same quantity of crushed stone. He also handles lime fertilizers and coal and has an extensive trade all over Pennsylvania, built up solely by his own enterprise and business ability. He is one of the successful and progressive men of the county.

Mr. Miller was married in 1876 to Miss Mary A. Jacobs, a daughter of Solomon Jacobs, a native of York county. The children born to this union are: Clayton, John F., Samuel B., Luther E., Viola D., N. Bernice, Mary E., Harvey O., Charles W. and Arthur R. Mr. Miller is identified with the Democratic party, although he believes in voting for the man best qualified for the office.

DR. VALLANDIGHAM HAWKINS, the proprietor of a blooded stock-farm of 135 acres in East Hopewell township, York county, was born on the homestead farm in Fawn township, Feb. 21, 1864. He attended the public schools until twelve years of age and then spent four years at Fawn Grove Academy. His first teacher was Miss Hannah Gailey, and at the academy he was under the tutelage of Samuel Beard and Professor Green. His father being a physician, it was very natural that young Hawkins should favor the study of medicine from boyhood. He entered the Freshman class at Swarthmore College, Philadelphia, where he spent three years, and then accepted a position with his uncle, J. T. Jones, as clerk in his Cincinnati publishing house. There he spent one year, after which he taught in the public schools of Fawn Grove for one year, and for a period of six years conducted a mercantile business at that place. He then entered the Baltimore Medical School, class of 1892, and was graduated in 1894, beginning the practice of his profession in Fawn Grove. He remained there for seven years, removing to his present farm in 1901, and establishing a blooded stock-farm for the raising of thoroughbred Jersey cattle and fancy poultry. He owns 135 acres, and the log house which stands upon the farm was built in 1784, the stone addition being erected in 1806. This farm was known as Walnut Ridge and was granted to one William Liggett.

Dr. Hawkins is a member of the Methodist Protestant Church of Fawn Grove, in which he has served as trustee. In political matters he is a Democrat and has served in a number of minor offices. On May 17, 1893, at Fawn Grove, the Doctor and Miss Ella C. M. Wright were united in marriage. His wife is the daughter of Rev. T. H. Wright, a prominent M. P. preacher of York county, and Maggie (Jones) Wright, also of that county.

ROMANUS T. PAULES, of Lower Windsor township, is a grandson of Adam Paules, who was born and reared in Lower Windsor township, and there continued to follow agricultural pursuits during the greater portion of his life. The original progenitors in America came from Germany and settled in York county in the early period, when that section was practically a sylvan wilderness. Adam Paules died in his native township, a prominent and influential citizen. He was an active worker in the ranks of the Democratic party, and held offices of local trust, including that of county commissioner, while for many years he was an elder in the Reformed Church, being one of its most zealous supporters. He was twice married, his first union having been with Elizabeth Hartzler, who died in Lower Windsor township. She was an aunt of Rev. Jacob Hartzler, who was at one time a bishop of the Evangelical Church, which he represented as a missionary in Japan for eight years. Adam Paules chose for his second wife Harriet Kanffelt, who survived him a number of years. The children of the first union were as follows: Sarah (familiarly known as Sally) became the wife of Joseph Dietz and died at Wrightsville, York county; John, who married Lydia Paules, died in Lower Windsor township; Jacob, who married Julia Ann Keller, a maternal aunt of Romanus T., likewise died in that township; Leah, the wife of William Blessing, died in the city of York, in 1902; Samuel, who married Henrietta Jacobs, died also in Lower Windsor township; Maria is the widow of George Rathfon and resides in Wrightsville; David E., deceased, was the father of Romanus T. Paules.

David E. Paules was born in Lower Windsor township, and was there reared and educated, dying at the untimely age of thirty-two years. He was a man of high principles, industrious and energetic and endowed with strong intellectuality, being held in high esteem in his native county. He was a Democrat in politics and his religious faith was that of the Reformed Church. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Keller, still survives him, and resides in York; she is now almost seventy years of age. She is a member of the well-known Keller family, of whom mention is made in various sketches in this work. David E. and Elizabeth Paules became the parents of five children, namely: Otis Sylvester married Ellen Leber, a sister-in-law of Romanus T. Paules, who is now deceased; the husband is a resident of Delroy, York county. Romanus T. was the next in order of birth. Cecelia Viola is the wife of Henry Blessing, of Lower Windsor township. Caroline Elizabeth is the wife of N. S. Thomas, of York. Priscilla Jane is the wife of Irwin Seachrist, also of that city.

Romanus Theophilus Paules was born in the immediate vicinity of Yorkana, York county, Dec. 21, 1861, his birthplace being the old ancestral farm of his grandfather. He attended the public schools of Lower Windsor township until he had attained the age of nineteen years, one of his first teachers having been his uncle, Samuel Paules, while he finished his school work under the instruction of Alice Dietz, who is now the wife of Henry Beard, of York. He was a child at the time of his father's death, but his mother kept the family together and properly reared her children. After the death of her father she purchased a portion of the land in his estate, the place being located in Lower Windsor township, and she there engaged in farming, with the aid of her sons, devoting special attention to the raising of tobacco; at intervals her boys also worked by the day for others. Romanus T. Paules remained on this farm from his fifteenth year until he had attained the age of twenty, when he began an apprenticeship at the trade of cigarmaking, entering the factory of Reuben A. Paules, his cousin. He finally became foreman of this large establishment in Delroy. The cousin mentioned was the founder of the factory, his having been the first business place in the now thriving town, while Romanus T. Paules there erected for his own use one of the first houses, retaining the position of foreman of the cigar manufactory for a period of twelve years. He then became associated with Harrison Fauth in purchasing the plant, which was thereafter conducted under the firm name of Paules & Fauth until the autumn of 1901, when Mr. Paules sold his interest to his partner and located at Yorkana. He there purchased the general store of Edward J. Libhart, which he still conducts, controlling a large and representative trade. In the same autumn Mr. Paules also associated himself with Alexander Dietz in purchasing the cigar factory and box factory of Harry Delone, at Hanover, York county, and they have since carried on the enterprise successfully, conducting operations under the title of the Yorkana Cigar Company, and devoting their attention to the manufacture of cigars and wholesale dealing in leaf tobacco.

Romanus T. Paules has been the architect of his own fortunes, having inherited but little from his father's estate, but having from the start been careful in conserving his resources, through close application to business and by means of proper economy. He expended $1,500 in erecting his residence in Delroy shortly after his marriage, and still had a reserve of $400. Though reared in the Democratic faith, Mr. Paules has shown the courage of his convictions by arraying himself as a stanch supporter of the Republican party, being prominent in its local councils. He has been a frequent delegate to county conventions of his party and has served as a member of the township election board, while he has served over six consecutive years as school director. He and his family are prominent members of the Reformed Church, in which he is an elder.

On July 28, 1890, Mr. Paules was united in marriage to Emma C. Leber, who was born and reared in Lower Windsor township, daughter of David and Magdalena (Hengst) Leber. Mr. and Mrs. Paules have seven children, namely: George Eugene, John Harrison, Eva Pauline, David Haertzler, Esther Luella, Marguerite Elizabeth and Charles Edgar.

GEORGE B. MENGES (deceased), who for many years was a prosperous farmer of Jackson township, York county, was born July 18, 1818, in Codorus township, son of Jacob and Sabina (Ziegler) Menges, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. Jacob Menges followed farming and distilling for many years. To himself and wife the following children were born: Daniel, Jacob, John, Samuel, Sarah, George B. and Elizabeth. The family were consistent members of the Lutheran Church, while in politics Mr. Menges was a Democrat.

George B. Menges attended the common and subscription schools of his township and worked upon his father's farm until he reached his majority. At that time he learned the blacksmith trade, which he carried on in Nashville and the vicinity of Spring Grove for many years. In 1837 he moved to the home now occupied by his son, where he built a blacksmith shop and followed his trade in connection with farming until 1891, when he practically retired from active life. In 1854 Mr. Menges married Mary Copp, by whom he had three children, Maggie, George and Jacob H., the last named being the only survivor. In his religious belief Mr. Menges was a Lutheran. Mrs. Menges died in 1883, at the age of fifty-five years, and Mr. Menges died Feb. 8, 1904. He was a man universally respected, honest in word and deed, one who filled honorably every demand in life made upon him.

JACOB H. MENGES, the only surviving child of George B. Menges, is now manager and owner of the old farm, which consists of twenty-eight acres. He was born March 18, 1856, was educated in the schools of Jackson township, and has never left the parental roof. In 1878 he married Emma Livingstone, who was born in Paradise township, York county, daughter of George and Sophia (Bougher) Livingstone, and one child has been born to this union, Lottie R., who married Bert Haas and has two children, George B. and Howard T. Mr. Menges is a Lutheran and active in church work, being secretary and treasurer of the Sunday-school and deacon. In politics he is a Democrat, but he has never aspired to public office. He is a respected citizen of Jackson township, honest and upright, and always ready to do his part in promoting public improvements and in advancing the influence of the school and church.

GEORGE HOFFMAN, a survivor of the Civil war living retired in Washington township, York county, was born in Tyrone township, Perry Co., Pa., Feb. 15, 1836, son of Jacob and Mary A. (Namamaker) Hoffman.

Jacob Hoffman was born in Germany, and came to America in young manhood, crossing the ocean when it required eight weeks to make the voyage. He settled first in Maryland, remaining there a short time, and then going to Tyrone township, Perry county, where he lived sixteen years. In 1848 he came to York county, and through the rest of his active life followed farming in Washington township. He married Mary A. Namamaker, whose parents were Germans. She died at the age of fifty-six years, and he when eighty-seven years, seven months, twenty days old. Both are buried at the Red Run Church in Washington township. Their children were: John; Jacob; Lydia and Susan, deceased; Mary and Eliza.

George Hoffman attended school at Krall-town and Landisburg until he was twenty-two years old. He enlisted in the service of his country, entering Company H, 166th P. V. I., being mustered in at York. After a service of nine months, his first term of enlistment, he became a veteran, re-enlisting in Company J, 200th P. V. I., remaining in the service until the close of the war, and participating in all the battles of the company and regiment. On one occasion he was taken prisoner, and was held by the enemy for nine days, when he was exchanged, rejoining his regiment and sharing their fate. He was in the service for twenty-two months, and during all this time bore himself as became a good soldier and loyal man. After the war he returned to Washington township, and resumed work at the wheelwright trade, in which he had had some training prior to enlisting, and this he followed for ten years. Then he bought a farm of Henry Asper, consisting of eighty-two acres, located in Washington township, and here he followed farming for fifteen years. In 1890 he came to his present place, retiring at the same time from business activity.

Mr. Hoffman married Mrs. Elizabeth Hinkel, widow of George Hinkel and daughter of Andrew Stothauer, and they have one son, Isaac, who married Elizabeth Kraft, and is farming his father’s land. Mr. Hoffman is a Republican, and is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Hoffman had one son by her former marriage, D. Frank Hinkel. Mr. George Hinkel was a machinist; he enlisted in the army in the early days of the Rebellion, was taken prisoner and died at Andersonville.

WILLIAM SMITH GOTWALD, one of the well-known business men of York, Pa., district agent for the Sun Life Assurance Company, was born May 14, 1865, in this city, son of Andrew J. and Eliza Ann (Smith) Gotwald.

John Gotwald, the paternal grandfather, was a well-known man on the canal, in York county, operating boats.

Andrew J. Gotwald, the father, died Oct. 4, 1903. For thirty years he was superintendent of Billmyer & Small’s car works. He served in the Civil war with distinguished gallantry as a member of one of the first enlisted companies of York county, and belonged to the 200th P. V. I. On the maternal side, our subject’s uncle was the late W. W. Smith, for many years a prominent shoe dealer at York. Mrs. Eliza Ann (Smith) Gotwald died Aug. 23, 1903, aged seventy-three years, the mother of four children: William Smith; Elmer M., a chainmaker at York; Bertha K., who died May 5, 1903, aged thirty-four years; and Nettie C., who died Sept. 19, 1904, aged thirty-three years.

William Smith Gotwald was educated in the city schools of York, and his entrance into business was as a clerk in a wholesale shoe house. Subsequently he became a salesman for this house and traveled for four years. He then became connected in a like capacity with a large wholesale house in the same line, of Philadelphia, traveling for that firm for seven years, and still later, for five years, in the interests of a firm at Worcester, Mass., dealing in men’s specialties and foot-wear.

In 1901 Mr. Gotwald became the district agent for York county of the Sun Life Assurance Company, an old line Canadian company which has been established since 1865. He is advantageously located for business at No. 33 East Market street, where he handles a large amount of insurance business.

Mr. Gotwald was married Dec. 11, 1899, to Mabel F. Kapp, a daughter of the late Lewis Kapp, who was a merchant of Goschen, Ind. They have one son, Paul K., now at school. The family belongs to the M. E. Church, in which Mr. Gotwald takes a deep interest. He is a teacher in the Sunday-school and is superintendent of the Junior League. In politics Mr. Gotwald is a Republican. His fraternal relations are with the Knights of Malta and the Knights of the Mystic Chain.

P. M. CARMAN, a prominent dog fancier and breeder, is a well-known citizen of Wrightsville, York county, where he has lived nearly thirty years.

The Carman family is of German extraction. Grandfather Andrew Carman being the first to settle in this country. He was a farmer near Stewartstown, York county. In politics he supported the Democratic party. His children were as follows: Nathan; Rebecca, wife of Adam Ziegler, deceased; Julia, wife of John Knive, deceased; Betsey, wife of Jerry Ziegler, of Stewartstown; Hannah, wife of Eli Waltmeyer, deceased; George Wesley, of Yoe, York county; and Henry A., of Mt. Pleasant, Westmoreland county.

Lieut. Nathan Carman, father of P. M. Carman, was born in Hopewell township, York county, in 1822. His calling was that of a brick maker. From the spring of 1861 to the spring of 1864 he served in the Union army as second lieutenant of Company G. 12th P. V. I. He was twice wounded, being struck in the left thigh by a piece of shell at the battle of the Wilderness, and in the left arm by a minie ball at White Oak. He was honorably discharged at Harrisburg. Lieut. Nathan married Henrietta Mead, and they lived at Stewartstown, where he died in 1892. His widow is still living, at the age of seventy-seven. She married (second) John Homigian and (third) Henry Kunkle. The children of Lieut. Nathan and Henrietta (Mead) Carman were as follows: Arthur S., of Harford, Md.; Sarah Jane, who died young; William, of Stewartstown, who married Becky Cooper; George W., of Stewartstown, who married Ella Petters; P. M., who is mentioned below; and Nathan McClellan, deceased. Lieut. Carman was a lifelong Republican, a member and past commander of the G. A. R. Post in his home town. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Church.

P. M. Carman is a native of Stewartstown, where he was born Feb. 9, 1854. He learned the trade of cigar maker with Giles J. Green of Stewartstown, and when he was eighteen went to Alliance, Stark Co., Ohio, and began to work at his trade. In 1876 he returned home, and after four months went to Wrightsville, where he was employed at cigar making by S. R. Kocher for nearly twenty years.

Mr. Carman married, Jan. 1, 1878, Annie Newcomer, who was born in Wrightsville, Oct. 23, 1859. Her father was Henry Newcomer, who was born in Hellam township in 1826, and followed the trade of shoemaker. He came to Wrightsville as a young man, and there married Sarah Collinwood, who was of English parentage. Mr. Newcomer carried on his trade in Wrightsville successfully until his death. He was a Republican, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Church. Their children were: Oliver, John and Milton, deceased; Isabella, Mrs. Jacob Ballou, of Perry Co., Pa.; Annie, Mrs. P. M. Carman; and one that died in infancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman settled down to housekeeping at once, and began saving to make a pleasant home. In addition to his work at cigar making Mr. Carman, in 1887, established his now famous kennels. Until 1902 he carried on both occupations, but since then he has devoted himself exclusively to his kennels. These are known as the Royal Forest Beagle Kennels, and their specialty is blooded Beagle hounds.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Carman are as follows: Milton, born Nov. 6, 1878, an art student in Philadelphia; Minnie, born Feb. 8, 1880, at home; Lura V., born Dec. 13, 1882, wife of John Corman, of Wrightsville, and mother of George Raymond; Carrie Belle, born Dec. 9, 1884, at home; Arthur, born March 2, 1896; and Grace Margaret, born Nov. 13, 1898. The family are members of the Methodist Church. In politics Mr. Carman is a Republican; he was once elected tax collector, but never qualified for office. He is a charter member of the Jr. O. U. A. M. and of the K. of G. E., in which he is past chief; and a member of Chilahua Lodge, No. 317, I. O. O. F., Wrightsville, of which he is past grand master.

IRA FREYSINGER, who is cultivating his farm of thirty-eight acres in Monaghan township, was born there, son of Henry and Rebecca (Kohler) Freysinger, and a grandson of Jacob Freysinger.

Henry Freysinger was born in 1830 in Monaghan township, and was educated in the common schools. He learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for several years, but he spent most of his life as a laborer. He died at Siddonsburg, May 12, 1904, his wife passing away May 12, 1893. They were the parents of children as follows: William; Jacob; Daniel; Ira; Sarah, who married John Crumlich; and Rose, who married Charles Eichelberger and has one daughter, Mary. The family belonged to no especial church, but attended the various churches in the vicinity. In politics Mr. Freysinger was a Democrat.

Ira Freysinger remained at home until the age of twenty-three years, when he started out in life for himself, working by the day as a farm hand until 1892, when he purchased his present home, which consists of thirty-eight acres and upon which he does general farming. In 1891 he married Clara Fortney, the estimable daughter of Zachariah T. and Sarah (Wilson) Fortney. Mrs. Freysinger is a devout member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Freysinger is a staunch Democrat in politics. He is a representative farmer of Monaghan township, and is also one of its most honest and upright citizens.

DANIEL B. BAER, a retired farmer now living in Washington township, near Hall postoffice, was born in that township, in 1848, a son of Isaac Baer, who was a son of David Baer. The latter was a farmer in Manchester township, York county, and was a worthy Christian man, a member of the Meponite Church. His remains lie in the cemetery attached to Baer's meeting house, in Manchester township. The children of David Baer were: John, Gabriel, Joseph and Isaac.

Isaac Baer, father of Daniel B., was born in Manchester township, York county, and he remained at home assisting his father until the age of twenty years, when he came to Washington township and here bought a farm of 145 acres, from his father-in-law, Daniel Brubaker. He continued to farm very successfully for a number of years, retiring some years prior to his death, which occurred when he was seventy-five years of age. He married Annie Brubaker, who lived to the age of eighty-four years. Both parents of our subject were members of the Mennonite Church, and they were interred in the cemetery at the old Hershey meeting house in Dover township. They had five children: Maria, wife of John Harbolt; Annie, deceased; David, who died aged six years; Isaac, who died aged nineteen years; and Daniel Brubaker.

Daniel B. Baer was named for his grandfather. He was educated in the township schools, and attended a summer school at Knowlton through two sessions, after which he taught school for six months at that place. He then settled down to farming in his native township, purchasing his father's farm, on which he made many improvements, and on which he lived until 1900. Then he removed to a small farm of fifty-six acres, on which he constructed a very comfortable dwelling, and where he is spending the evening of life surrounded with many comforts.

Mr. Baer married Sarah Jane Hershey, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Hershey. Mrs. Baer died March 19, 1905, and was buried at the Hershey meeting house in Dover township. Their children were: Mary E. is the wife of Jonas Smith; Isaac married Cora Bailey; Joseph married Bessie Hill; Annie married Walton Baugher; Lillie; Ella married George Zeigler; and Jacob married Laura Zimmerman. Mr. Baer has ten grandchildren, and is the center of much loving and dutiful attention. He has been a member of the Mennonite Church since he was twenty years old. He bears the weight of his years well, and enjoys good literature and the visits of his many friends.

LEWIS BARBEHENN. One of the most successful country stores to be found within the limits of York county, is that now owned by Lewis Barbehenn, successor to S. B. Brodbeck. He does a thriving business both wholesale and retail, and his store is more modern in its appointments and his stock of goods more complete than one might expect outside of the large cities of the State.

Lewis Barbehenn came of German parentage. His grandfather, Henry, lived and died in Germany. A son, Henry (2), came to America in 1855, landing at Baltimore, and proceeded to Gettysburg, where for forty years he was superintendent of the city gas works. He is still living, but for the past few years he has been retired from all active work. He married Mary, daughter of Jacob Bortner, of York county (her mother was a Strickhouser), and the children born to their union were named George, Nathaniel, Henry, Lewis, Edward, Katie, Mary and Annie.

Lewis Barbehenn was born in Gettysburg, Pa., in 1862, and was educated in the common schools of that city. He began his business life as a clerk in a confectionery store in his native town, and worked there for four years, but in 1881 he entered the employ of Mr. S. B. Brodbeck, of Brodbecks P. O., and was associated with him twelve years. At the end of that time he bought out his employer and has since been conducting the store for himself. It had a good start under Mr. Brodbeck and Mr. Barbehenn has carried it on to a more pronounced success.

Mr. Barbehenn married Miss Mary E. Hoff, daughter of Adam Hoff, of Seven Valley, York county. Five children have been born to them, Wilford, Beulah, Goldie, Mary and Katie. Mr. Barbehenn is a member of the Lutheran Church, and is very active in the work of the Sunday-school. His political faith is embodied in the platform of the Republican party. He has proved himself a good business man, and has won a high place in the esteem of the community.

PHILIP WEBER, a highly esteemed, retired citizen of York, and an honored veteran of the great Civil war, was born in Germany, Dec. 24, 1843, son of Oswalt and Christina (Offman) Weber, both natives of Hesse-Cassel, Germany.

Oswalt Weber, the father, was a cooper and brewer, which occupations he followed until his death in 1874, being aged fifty-eight years. His wife died in 1883, and both are buried in their native land.

Philip Weber received his education in Germany, attending school until fourteen years of age, when he learned coopering and brewing—lines he followed until May 28, 1861, when he came to America, landing at Baltimore, Md. He later moved to Frostburg,
BIOGRAPHICAL

Md., where he remained until Sept. 1, 1862, when he enlisted in Company A, 3rd Md. V. I., and participated in the following battles: Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; Winchester, Va., June 13-15, 1863; Mine Run, Nov. 26-28, 1863; Monocacy, Md., July 9, 1864; Fort Steadman, March 25, 1865; Bunker Hill, Frederick City, Fort Hudson, Fort Hell and Leesport. On July 29, 1864, he received a sun stroke at Harper's Ferry, was sent to Frederick Hospital and later to Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa. On May 25, 1865, Mr. Weber was honorably discharged at Baltimore, Md., after having served two years and eleven months, and having participated in some of the most important battles of that great struggle.

Three days after his discharge from the army Mr. Weber was united in marriage with Catherine Fike, daughter of John and Barbara Fike, of Lower Windsor township, and after marriage went to Frostburg, Md., where he was employed in a coal mine until 1867. He then went to Lower Windsor township, where he was engaged in cigar making, and remained one year, at the end of this time removing to Cumberland, Md., where he also engaged in cigar making. Here he continued until 1873, when he removed to York, and manufactured cigars until 1902, since which time he has lived retired.

Mr. Weber is a member of General Sedgewick Post, No. 37, G. A. R., and of Workingmen's Beneficial Association No. 1, of York. His religious connection is with the German Reformed Church. In politics he is a Republican. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Weber are as follows: John died in infancy; Dora Annie, who lives in York, married Lewis Berkheimer; Henry, who lives in York, married Hattie Rensel; Christina, deceased, is interred at Prospect Hill cemetery; John died in Frostburg, Md., where he is buried; Augustus lives in York; Frederick married Margaret Shenberger, and lives in York; Catherine, deceased, is buried at Prospect Hill cemetery; Lillie, deceased, is also buried there; Malvina, is buried at the same place; Mary is the wife of Raymond Manley, and resides in York; and Clara resides in York.

ALEXANDER DIETZ was born Jan. 14, 1854, on the farm in Hellam township, York county, now occupied by his cousin (Michael Dietz).

Mr. Dietz passed his boyhood days under the invigorating discipline of the farm and duly availed himself of the advantages offered in the excellent public schools of the township, Samuel Paules being named as one of his most able and honored instructors. He continued to attend school until he had attained the age of twenty years and secured a teacher's certificate, but never devoted himself to practical teaching. In his boyhood days his parents removed to a farm in close proximity to the village of Yorkana, and there he developed into manhood. At an early age he learned the trade of cigar making, becoming a skilled artisan in that line, and in 1875 he engaged in manufacturing on his father's farm, eventually founding a business which demanded the employment of a force of several skilled workmen. He there continued operations for a period of sixteen years, at the expiration of which, in 1892, he was appointed deputy collector of internal revenue for the Ninth district of Pennsylvania, under the administration of President Cleveland, retaining the position four years and three months, and having his official headquarters at Yorkana. Upon his retirement from office Mr. Dietz effected the organization of the Yorkana Cigar Company, in which he owns one-half of the stock, and thereupon purchased the finely equipped plant of H. L. Dellone, in Yorkana, where he has since continued in active supervision of the enterprise, which has grown to be one of extensive scope and marked commercial importance. A force of forty operatives is now employed in the factory, while the trade of the concern extends into the most diverse sections of the Union. A fine line of cigars is manufactured, among the leading brands turned out by the company being the “George B. McClellan,” “No Discount,” “Twin Sisters” and “La Flor De Humbert.” Mr. Dietz is recognized as a progressive, alert and reliable business man, and through his discrimination and able management has established the thriving local industry at whose head he now stands. He is essentially public-spirited in his attitude and has taken an active interest in political affairs ever since gaining his elective franchise, having been a zealous worker in the ranks of the Democratic party and prominent in its local councils and work. He is a member of the German Reformed Church, and his wife is an attendant of the same religious body.

In Spring Garden township, York county, Oct. 20, 1879, Mr. Dietz was united in marriage to Annie Hiestand, who was born and reared in that county, daughter of William and Rebecca (Dull) Hiestand, and of this union have been born three children, namely: Harry James, who married Anna Budding and who is employed in the office of the York Gazette; Maggie, who is the wife of Dr. John E. Inners, of Yorkana; and Gertrude, who is the wife of John Anstine, also of that place.

Henry Dietz, father of Alexander, was born on the same homestead farm, in Hellam township, York county, Aug. 24, 1833. His initial scholastic training was secured in the Garber school, under the instruction of Peter Ruby, of Long-Level, and upon the founding of the free-school system he continued his studies in what was known as the Ruby school, his teachers there having been the late David Strickles and Christopher Stoner; later he attended five sessions of the Pine Swamp school, in Hellam township, where he secured instruction in both English and German, under a Mr. Musselman, from New Holland. All those mentioned were considered able instructors in their day and all were strict disciplinarians, so that their pupils usually made good progress. Henry Dietz, father of Henry, died when the latter was a lad of nine years, and thereafter the boy was reared principally in the homes of those not his kindred. He attended school but little after reaching the age of fourteen years. The first money which he earned was that secured for working on the farm of John Hershey, in Hellam township, his compensation being $5 per month and board. He had previously received his board and clothes only. At the age of sixteen he entered upon an apprenticeship at the blacksmith’s trade under the direction of Henry Neff, of Hellam township, and he continued to follow that vocation for four and one-half years, meantime marrying soon after reaching his legal majority. In 1855, at the age of twenty-two, he purchased twenty acres of land in Lower Windsor township, located on the Delroy road, one-half mile distant from Yorkana, and there he continued to be engaged in farming and gardening until 1862, when he rented his farm to his son-in-law, John Lefever, and took up his residence in the village of Yorkana, where he has since lived retired. Later he sold his farm to his son David S., and in 1864 erected his attractive modern residence in Yorkana. In politics Mr. Dietz has ever accorded an unwavering allegiance to the Democratic party, and he has been prominent and influential in local affairs, though never ambitious for office. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church at Canadochley, in which he has been an elder for a score of years past, a member of its board of trustees for many years, and president thereof at the present time. About three decades ago he served one term as township supervisor. For twenty years he was a member of the directorate of the Western Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of York county, and its president for eight years of that period.

In Hellam township was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Dietz to Elizabeth Leiphart, who was born in Lower Windsor township, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Sloat) Leiphart, the former a weaver by trade and also a farmer on a modest scale. The following is a brief record concerning the children of Henry and Elizabeth Dietz: Alexander has been fully mentioned; Annie, born Sept. 13, 1857, is the wife of William Leonard, of York; Amanda, born Aug. 28, 1861, is the wife of John Lefever, of Lower Windsor township; Susanna, born Dec. 3, 1862, is the wife of Mark Landis, of Hellam township; Amos W., born Feb. 1, 1866, married Emma Poff, and they reside in Yorkana; Henry H., born Sept. 5, 1868, married Gertrude Leiphart, and they also make their home in Yorkana; Elizabeth, born Aug. 1, 1871, remains at the parental home; David S., born Aug. 19, 1873, married Lydia Sentz, and they reside in Lower Windsor township.

Henry Dietz, Sr., grandfather of Alexander, was born on the present farm of Eli Dietz, in Hellam township, July 3, 1809. He passed his entire life there, following the noble vocation of farming, and he died Oct. 17, 1842. He married Susanna Lehman, who likewise was born in Hellam township, Jan. 27, 1812, and who died Dec. 22, 1892. She was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Fisher) Lehman, worthy pioneers of Hellam township. After his marriage Henry Dietz settled on the farm of his uncle, Daniel Dietz, in Hellam township, and there engaged in farming on the crop-sharing system, so continuing until his death at the comparatively early age of thirty-three years. His children were six in number, namely: Henry, Jr., father of Alexander; David, who was born Dec. 24, 1834, married Rebecca Pauls (now deceased), and is a representative farmer of Lower Windsor township; Joseph, born Oct. 23, 1836, likewise a successful farmer of that township (his first wife was Lydia Ferree and his second, who is still living, was Kate Poff); Leah, born Aug. 27, 1838, the widow of Michael Crumling, residing in Lower Windsor township; Susanna, born July 31, 1840, residing in Center Square, York county, the widow of Frederick Stauffer; and Alexander, born Jan. 27, 1842, who died on the 8th of the following November. Further interesting data in regard to this old and honored family, which has many representatives in the county, may be found on other pages of this work.

LEMUEL S. HAKE, proprietor of "Loest Dale" farm, has been a resident of North Hopewell township all of his life, having been born on his present farm Sept. 20, 1865.

Simon Hake, his father, was born in North Hopewell township, in a large brick house on the farm, near Lebanon church, then owned by the grandfather of our subject. He there grew up a farmer boy, and received a good education, and after marriage purchased his home farm of 150 acres, part of which he bought from a Mr. Phillips and part from a Mr. Stabley. Simon Hake died on this farm in 1891 and was buried at Lebanon church. He was an active member of the Lutheran Church, having been deacon for several years. In politics he was first a Whig, later joining the Republican party. He married Miss Elizabeth Diehl, who is still living, at the age of seventy-two years, and children were born to this union as follows: Cornelius, of Winterstown; Annie, Mrs. Joseph Shaull, of Cross Roads, York county; Jacob D., a real estate man of Reading, Pa.; Ellen, Mrs. Harry Venus, of Baltimore, Md.; Susan, Mrs. Harry Myers, of York; Lillie, Mrs. Dave Morrison, of Rinely, North Hopewell township; and Lemmie S.

Lemmie S. Hake attended the public schools of the township until eighteen years of age, going first to Samuel Miller, an old and well known teacher in this section, and later to Lillie Kurtz, who was his last teacher. Mr. Hake remained with his father until the latter's death, when he purchased the home from his mother. The farm consists of 100 acres, conveniently and beautifully situated one and one-half miles west of Felton. Mr. Hake joined the Lebanon Lutheran Church and took an active part in the work of that organization until failing health made him give it up. For many years he was a teacher in the Sabbath school. Although a stanch Republican Mr. Hake would not run for office, preferring rather to give his entire time and attention to his farm and home.

Mr. Hake married Mollie E. Baughman, sister of William F. Baughman, and to this union were born the following children: Horace Eugene, Ethel V., Ruth E. and Virginia.

ROBERT SCOTT, who is engaged in farming his tract of seventy-four acres in Lower Chanceford township, was born in the house he now occupies Sept. 25, 1863, son of Robert S. Scott. His grandfather, John Scott, was born in Ireland, and emigrating to America followed farming on the tract now owned by our subject. He died before our subject's birth. He and his wife had the following children: Elizabeth, Gavin, John, Robert S., Mary and Alexander.

Robert S. Scott was born on the farm, in the old house which has since been torn away, in 1824. He received a common school education, and when he became of age inherited part of his father's farm, upon which he remained all of his life. He died in 1885. Originally he was a Presbyterian in religious faith, but later joined the Evangelical church. In politics he was a Republican, and served his township for several years as a member of the school board. He married Elizabeth Norris, who was born in Lower Chanceford township, in 1831, daughter of John and Sally (McGuirk) Norris, and she still survives. Their children were as follows: Sarah, Mrs. James E. Anderson, of Lower Chanceford township; Mary E., Mrs. Ambrose H. Barnet, of Lower Chanceford township; Caroline, Mrs. Samuel C. Morton, of Chanceford township; Catherine, Mrs. S. S. Morton, of York; Robert; and John L., of Lower Chanceford township, who married Margaret Taylor.

Robert Scott received his education in the public schools, which he left when eighteen to go to farming. On the death of his father he bought the home place, which he has since operated, owning seventy-four acres. His farming operations have been more than successful, and he is rated one of the substantial, representative men of the township. He is a member of the Pine Grove Presbyterian Church and takes a great interest in all church work, holding the position of trustee. A stanch Republican, he has served his township for one term as assessor.

Mr. Scott was married Jan. 24, 1888, to Georgianna Swagert, of Peach Bottom township, daughter of John A. and Sarah C. (Wise) Swagert, the former of whom is deceased, while the latter still survives. Children as follows have been born to this union: Lula, who attends school in York; Raymond, at school; Mary E.; Harry; Linnie, and Lyacinth.

GEORGE DALLAS MOUL, a general merchant of Thomasville, Jackson township, is descended from old Pennsylvania families and was born Oct. 24, 1834, to Peter and Polly (Lichte) Moul.

George Moul, his grandfather, was a native of Pennsylvania, owned a good farm in Jackson township, and was a prominent man in his day. A Democrat, he was active in politics, but could never be induced to accept any but township offices; he served as supervisor. Mr. Moul accumulated considerable property, and at his death, in 1894, his children were left in good circumstances. He married Polly Stambaugh, and they had eight children, John, George, Peter, Susan, Betsey, Harriet, Catherine, and one deceased, whose name is not known. The family were members of the Lutheran Church.

Peter Moul was born and reared in York county, and was educated in the public schools. He worked on his father's farm until he was able to buy one of his own, and he also kept a hotel prior to the Civil war, his house being located on the Berlin road, between York and Berlin. He was hard-working, known for his honesty and integrity, and succeeded in all his undertakings, becoming quite wealthy. He married Polly Lichty, and had two children, namely: Alice, who married Emanuel Stambaugh; and George Dallas.

George Dallas Moul received what education the schools of Jackson township afforded and helped his father on the farm up to the age of fifteen, when he went to learn the trade of a painter, following same off and on for twenty-six years. In 1895 he went into business as a merchant, carrying full lines of dry goods, boots, shoes and shelf hardware, and has met with unusual success, his being one of the best country stores in the county, and reflecting great credit upon Mr. Moul's business acumen. Mr. Moul is a Democrat and active in the support of that party, but he has never been an office seeker. In religion he is a Lutheran.

Mr. Moul has been twice married, his first union being to Miss Jennie Myers, by whom he had one daughter, Lucy. Mrs. Jennie Moul died, and Mr. Moul married Miss Sallie Myers, but no children have been born to this union.

DAVID R. BEAR, who, with his brother, Henry Bear, operates the farm of twenty-two acres formerly owned by George Kunkel, located on the Harrisburg pike, near Manchester, York county, was born in 1850, in Manchester township, son of John and grandson of Jacob Bear.

Jacob Bear was born in Lancaster county, but spent his life in York county, where he took up a tract of 160 acres of land in Manchester township, and followed farming until his death, at the age of ninety-seven years. His first marriage was to a Miss Shelley, by whom he had four children, Nancy, Sarah, Daniel and Moses. Mr. Bear married second a Miss Good, and they had children, John, Elizabeth, Susan, Fannie, Reuben and Mary.

John Bear, the father of our subject, was born March 14, 1817, in Manchester township, and remained home until his marriage to Leah Rhoad, daughter of Abraham Rhoad, and his wife whose maiden name was Moore. He located on the home farm, which he bought at his father's death, and here he engaged in raising tobacco, building a large tobacco shed and making great improvements. Mr. Bear died Oct. 9, 1880, aged sixty-three years, his wife surviving until Sept. 28, 1891, and they were both buried in Aughenbaugh's cemetery at Manchester. Mr. Bear was a Republican in politics, but never sought office. In religion he was a Dunkard. To John and Leah Bear the following children were born: William married Amanda Wilhelm, who died Jan. 2, 1899, and he follows farming in East Manchester township; David R.; Henry bought his farm of twenty-two acres of George Kunkel, upon which he and David now reside; Fannie married M. Deitz, and resides in Helmam township, York county; Jacob R. married Ida Eisenhower, and owns the old homestead where he resides; Elizabeth resides with her brother Henry; Sarah A. married Benjamin Stoner and resides in Hellam township; Leah resides with her brother, Henry.

David R. Bear attended the township schools, residing at home with his father, whom he assisted until his death. When Henry bought the Kunkel farm, David removed to that place where he now resides. He and his brother have built a beautiful home and fine barn, and are successfully engaged in agriculture. In every relation of life Mr. Bear is a most worthy citizen and honest man.

JOHN KOHR. The farming interests of York county, Pa., are in the hands of intelligent, enterprising and public-spirited men, among whom may be numbered John Kohr, of Springetsbury township, who was born in that township, Feb. 16, 1854, son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Roth) Kohr, and grandson of Louis Kohr.

Daniel Kohr was born in Manchester township, York county, where his life was spent. When twenty-one years of age, he came to Springetsbury township, and became the owner and operator of a fine farm of 200 acres, which he made his homestead, and he also owned two additional farms, lying in Manchester township, the greater portion of which he acquired through his industry, thrift and good management. He was interested in other lines, for some time being engaged quite extensively in ore mining, and he was a stockholder in the Farmers National Bank, of York; and was one of the original stockholders of the Westinghouse Electric Lighting Company, of York. In politics he was a Democrat, and was a very public-spirited man. His death occurred July 31, 1902, when he was seventy-four years of age. His wife passed away in 1881, at the age of fifty-four years. Both were members of the Reformed Church. Their children were: Annie, wife of Franklin Keller, of York; John; Lewis, a farmer of Springetsbury; Ellen, wife of Zacharias Horn, of Yoe; Emma, wife of Samuel Kauffman, of York; Franklin, a farmer of Manchester; Sylvester, of Manchester; Daniel E., a farmer of Manchester; Alice, wife of Elwood Sprengle, of Hellam township.

John Kohr was reared on the farm, and educated in the public schools of his neighborhood, and after he attained to his majority, he began farming the home farm, where he continued to reside until 1898, at which time he removed to his present farm, just east of York city. This property consists of 100 acres, well improved, which he devotes to general farming and dairying, he having a herd of twenty cattle. About six acres are devoted to tobacco, and so well does he manage his crops that he enjoys an excellent income from his land. In his political principles Mr. Kohr is a Democrat, and he has served as a member of the school board, and he has always taken an interest in public affairs.

On Nov. 20, 1880, Mr. Kohr was united in marriage with Miss Sallie Myers, daughter of Samuel and Anna Mary (Loucks) Myers, of Springetsbury township. Two children have been born to them: Irvin H., a farmer of Stony Brook, who married Mary Heistand; and Carrie Bell, at home. The family belong to the Reformed Church, in which they take an active part.

ALEXANDER KLINEDINST, roadmaster of the York County Traction Company, was born in Codorus township, York county, May 15, 1843, son of Benjamin and Susan (Renoll) Klinedinst.

Benjamin Klinedinst was a cooper of Codorus township, and to him and his worthy wife the following children were born: Emma, who died in 1886, aged twenty-five years; Catherine, who married John Bubb, in the service of the N. C. Railroad Co.; Isabel, who married John Stewart, a farmer of Stafford, York county; Ellen, who married H. B. Gladfelter; Sarah, who married William Gladfelter, who is not, however, a blood relation of H. B. Gladfelter; Lydia, at home; B. F., an ice cream manufacturer of Seven Valley, York county; Lewis, a cigar maker of York; and Alexander.

Alexander Klinedinst, after being educated in the public school entered the Pennsylvania railroad service, and then, entering the construction department of the Western Maryland Railway, remained fourteen years. After spending four years in the Internal Revenue service, Mr. Klinedinst located in York, and in 1902 was appointed roadmaster of the York County Traction Company, a position he has since held.

Mr. Klinedinst served gallantly in the army during the War of the Rebellion, and was taken prisoner of war at Weldon Railroad.
He was confined in Andersonville prison for nine months, during which time he suffered many hardships. He served three years and eight months with his regiment, the 87th P. V. I., and saw a great deal of fighting, taking part in the battles of Spottsylvania Court House, of the Wilderness, Cold Harbor (where he was wounded in the knee) and Petersburg, besides many minor engagements.

Mr. Klinedinst was married, Nov. 27, 1866, to Miss Mary J. Fissell, daughter of George Fissell, a retired hotelkeeper of Codorus township, and of the children born to this union, Rosa died at the age of eighteen months; Emma died at ten months; Adam passed away, aged one year and two months; and Alexander died at the age of six months.

Alexander Klinedinst belongs to the Blue Lodge and Chapter of the Masonic fraternity. He is a devoted member of the Union Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Republican.

TOBIAS RUBY, deceased. Among the old and honored families of York county is that of which the subject of this review was a worthy representative. He was one of the well known and highly esteemed citizens of Lower Windsor township, where the major portion of his life was passed, and within the pages of this work will be found frequent mention of the Ruby family. For systematic genealogical data we refer the reader in particular to the sketch of Barnabas B. Ruby, a cousin of our subject.

Tobias Ruby was born Dec. 30, 1832, in Lower Windsor township, the place of his nativity having been the farm now owned and occupied by James Able. He duly availed himself of the advantages of the common schools of his native county, and among his instructors were John and Peter Ruby, well-known members of the same family line. He secured a good education for the day, continuing to attend school until he had reached the age of eighteen years, and having in the meanwhile learned also the valuable lessons of industry, through assisting in the farm work and other labors which incidentally devolved upon him. After leaving school he began an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, under the direction of George Kise, with whom he served two and one-half years, after which he followed his trade as a journeyman, for nine years in the employ of Peter Keller, of York. He followed his trade thereafter in Lancaster county and in the State of Maryland for a short interval, after which he worked for Harry Kauffelt for a few years. On severing this association he engaged in contracting and building on his own responsibility, and continued to follow his trade as a vocation during his entire active business career. Though he passed the psalmist's span of threescore years and ten, he did occasional odd jobs at his trade, finding satisfaction in such application, up to the time of his death.

Mr. Ruby was one of the loyal sons of the old Keystone State who went forth in defense of the Union when its integrity was menaced by armed rebellion. In August, 1864, he enlisted, becoming a private in Company E, 207th P. V. I., with which he served until practically the close of the war, receiving his honorable discharge May 30, 1865. With his command he participated in the siege of Petersburg, the engagements at Fort Steadman, and other minor conflicts, making an excellent record as a loyal and loyal soldier of the republic.

In politics Mr. Ruby was a stalwart Republican, having been identified with that party from the time of its inception, and having ever taken a lively and intelligent interest in the questions and issues of the hour. He was called upon to serve in various local positions of public trust and responsibility, having served one term as township assessor and having been a member of the school board for three years. Mr. Ruby signalized his abiding interest in his old comrades in arms by retaining membership in Post No. 118, Grand Army of the Republic, at Columbia, Lancaster county, and he was formerly affiliated in an active way with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His religious views were in harmony with the tenets of the Lutheran Church, in whose faith he was reared and of which his widow is a devoted member. He passed away Dec. 5, 1904.

In Lower Windsor township, in February, 1856, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Ruby to Miss Catherine Flory, who was born and reared in that township, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Kline) Flory. Of this union were born seven children, namely: Susan, who is the wife of William Bashore, of Newberry; Delia, who is the wife of Adam Malewiska, of York; Mary Catherine, who is the wife of Edward Hickey, of Columbia, Lancaster county; Annie, who is the wife of Calvin Crumling, of Yorkana; Barton, who is a successful farmer of Chanceford township; Grant, who is engaged in carpentering in York; and Harry, a resident of New Cumberland, Cumberland county, where he is engaged in cigar making.

We conclude this sketch with brief mention of the parents of our subject. His father, David Ruby, was born in Lower Windsor township and was there reared on a farm, securing a common-school education and learning the blacksmith's trade in his youth. He was actively engaged in work at his trade during the greater portion of his long and useful life, was a man of probity and other sterling attributes, and was ever held in high regard in the community which was his home throughout life. He died about 1847, and his wife, whose maiden name was Rebecca Kauffelt, is also deceased. Both were zealous and consistent members of the Lutheran Church and in politics Mr. Ruby was a Whig. David and Rebecca Ruby became the parents of five children, namely: Rebecca, deceased; David, deceased; Sophia, who became the wife of Jacob Wagner and who died in this county; George, who served three years during the war of the Rebellion, having been a member of the 55th P. V. I., and who is now a resident of Wrightsville, this county; and Tobias, the immediate subject of this sketch.

ABRAHAM MYERS, of Jackson township, belongs to one of York county's old families, and he was born Feb. 8, 1846, son of George and Elizabeth (Hoke) Myers. He is of German ancestry, his forefathers coming from Germany and settling in Pennsylvania at an early date.

Jacob Myers, the grandfather of Abraham, was a very prosperous farmer, and owned a farm near Spring Grove. His wife's maiden name was Bentz, and these children were born to them: John, George, Abraham, Jacob, Michael, Catherine (married to John Fultz), and Mary. These good people were devout members of the Reformed Church and Mr. Myers was a Democrat in his political belief. He died in 1864, aged about sixty years, and his wife survived until 1870.

George Myers, the father of Abraham, remained at home until he was twenty-one years old, and then commenced farming, purchasing a piece of land in Jackson township, in the Pigeon Hill section, where he remained all his life. He was successful in farming; and at the time of his death had accumulated considerable property. To himself and wife the following children were born: Michael, Jacob, George, Abraham, John, Eliza, Rebecca, Catherine and Sarah. The family were members of the Reformed Church. George Myers died aged sixty-five years, in 1879, while his wife passed away in 1887, aged seventy-five.

Abraham Myers was educated in the common schools of Jackson township and remained on the home farm until he was twenty-one years old. At this time he removed to Spangler's Valley, near Labott, where for eleven years he carried on farming on shares, and in 1888 he purchased his present farm, which consists of 115 acres of finely tilled land. He carries on general farming very successfully, and continues to improve a property which is now quite valuable. His standing in the community is that of an honest, upright and public-spirited citizen, always ready to support good government. In 1872 Mr. Myers married Miss Elizabeth Menges, daughter of Samuel Menges, of New Oxford, and to this union children as follows have been born: Annie, Harry, Mary, Esther, George, Paul, Bert and Lydia. Mr. Myers is a Democrat in politics. He and his wife are members of the Reformed Church.

WILLIAM I. HOFFMAN, farmer and fruit grower of Monaghan township, York county, was born in that township March 22, 1865, son of Enos and Mary (Myers) Hoffman.

Enos Hoffman was born in Dover township, and spent his whole life in farming and fruit raising. He purchased the farm in Monaghan township on which he made his home for more than fifty years, dying there. He and his wife had the following named children: Melinda J., who married Simon Shaffer; Jacob, who married Emma Hinkle; Enos, deceased; John, who married Lizzie Laird; Emma, married to John Sutton; William I.: Catherine, deceased; Mary, deceased; and Lewis A., deceased. The family were members of the Lutheran Church, while in politics Mr. Hoffman was a Democrat, although he never took an active part in such matters.

William I. Hoffman remained with his parents until twenty-six years of age, when he purchased his present home, which was the old Hoffman homestead and consists of 133 acres of fine land. Mr. Hoffman does general farming and considerable fruit growing, being very successful in both lines. The farm has good buildings and is well cultivated and up-to-date.

On Jan. 25, 1891, Mr. Hoffman married Miss Maggie Wood, daughter of Stephen Wood, and six children have been born to this union: Roy, Jerry, Earl, Levi, Vernie and Alda. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman are consistent and valued members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Hoffman, like his father, is a Democrat.

AUGUSTUS SHINDLE, of East Manchester township, a representative of an old family of York county, was born in Manchester township in 1855, son of Frederick and grandson of George Shindle.

Frederick Shindle was born on the old home, and learned the carpenter's trade, following that occupation in connection with farming in Manchester, now East Manchester, township, for about forty years. For about fourteen years prior to his death, in 1903, he lived a retired life. Mr. Shindle married Susan Cochley, who died in 1903, and was buried in the Union cemetery, where her husband was also buried. In politics he was a Republican. To this couple the following children were born: Amanda married William S. Gross, and resides in West Manchester township, near York City; George married Emma Good, and resides in Manchester township; Augustus; Sarah lives in Manchester borough; J. W., born in 1860, in Manchester township, and residing on the old homestead where he follows farming; married Malinda Heckert, daughter of Emanuel and Leah (Lehr) Heckert, and they have the following children, Stewart W., Virga May and Edith, all of whom reside at home (J. W. Shindle is a Republican and has held the office of assessor, school director and auditor for eight years, at present being tax-collector); Louisa married Jacob Breneman, and resides in Dover township; and Annie married Jerome Schriever, and lives in Manchester borough.

Augustus Shindle attended the township schools until nineteen years of age, when he learned the carpenter's trade from his father, and followed this occupation for ten years, part of which time was spent in Adams county. In 1884 he located on his father's farm where he now resides with his brother, J. W. Shindle. In politics Mr. Shindle has always been identified with the Republican party, and in 1901 was elected constable, which office he has efficiently filled to the present date. He has also served as township clerk for two terms. In religion he is connected with the United Brethren Church of Manchester. Mr. Shindle is one of the substantial and representative citizens of East Manchester.

MAJOR JOHN KIRK, who took part in the great Civil war, was born Nov. 20, 1846, in Newberry township, York county, son of James Kirk. He attended the township school until fifteen years of age, and then entered the service of his country.

Solomon Kirk, the grandfather of John, came from Lancaster county and settled in York county, where he died. He had these children: Solomon, who died in Newberry township; John, who was killed while serving in the Western army; James; and Mrs. John Fisher.

James Kirk received a common school education, and learned the carpenter's trade. He located in Newmarket and was employed with Musser & James, at New Cumberland, with whom he remained about thirty years. For some time prior to his death, he lived a retired life, his death occurring Dec. 24, 1892, and he was buried at Mount Olivet cemetery, Fairview township. He married Eliza Snell, daughter of John Snell, and she died in 1892, being buried beside her husband. They were the parents of these children: Samuel, living in Clinton county, is a retired lumberman; Lucinda, married Benjamin Ripley, deceased, and she lives at Newmarket; and John.

ISRAEL STAMBAUGH, owning and operating a farm of seventy-five acres in North Codorus township, was born in that township, Oct. 1, 1853, son of Jacob Stambaugh.

Jacob Stambaugh, grandfather of Israel, was of German origin, and followed farming in North Codorus township, where he died, being buried at Lischy's Church. He had children: Daniel, James, Henry, Elizabeth, Katie and Jacob.

Jacob Stambaugh, the father of our sub-Jacob, was born in North Codorus township, and there received a common school education. He spent his active years as a farmer in his native place, retiring from activity a few years prior to his death, which occurred at the age of seventy-five. He married Isabella Sheaffer, daughter of John Sheaffer; she died at the age of sixty-five, and they both were buried at Lischy's Church in North Codorus township. They were faithful members of the Reformed Church, in the work of which organization they always took a prominent part. Their children were as follows: John, who married Ellen Spangler; Mary, the wife of John Luck-enbaugh; Caroline, wife of Michael Stambaugh; and Israel.

Israel Stambaugh attended the township schools until fifteen years of age, assisting his father on the farm until his marriage to Lucretia Lutherbaugh, daughter of John and Katie (Myers) Lutherbaugh.

After his marriage Mr. Stambaugh located on a farm in North Codorus township, where he followed day laboring for fifteen years, and later purchased from his mother the home where he now resides, a seventy-five-acre tract. He erected new buildings and made many improvements, having one of the township's desirable properties.

Mr. and Mrs. Stambaugh have children:
George, a cigar maker, is employed at Spring Grove, and plays the cornet in the Spring Grove band; Ellen, the wife of M. Miller, lives in North Codorus township; Jacob, who is assisting his father in farming, plays the clarinet in the Spring Grove band; and Alberta is at home. Mr. Stambaugh is a Democrat, and served on the school board for three years, being treasurer of that body. He is connected with the Reformed Church, in which he has served as deacon.

JAMES MASON, who conducts a flourishing business at No. 549 East King street, York, is a self-made man, having worked his way up from the bottom of the ladder. He is a native of England, born in South Staffordshire, July 22, 1840, son of James and Mary (Baum) Mason.

James Mason, the father, was a skilled blacksmith of England, where he died in 1853. His wife died aged eighty-five years, leaving these children: Elizabeth, who married William Mason, and is the only one of the family, with the exception of our subject, who came to America; Sarah; Ann; Mary Ann; Eliza; John; James, our subject; and four that died in infancy.

Our subject received his education in the schools of England, and at the age of thirteen years, his father having died, was forced to make his own way in the world. He went to work in a rolling mill, where he learned the puddling business, and first came to America in December, 1872, landing in New York. Having a nephew and niece in Buffalo, Mr. Mason went to that city with the expectation of finding employment at his trade, but it being the time of the panic in iron he could find no work, and was compelled to return to his native country. This he did on May 12, 1873, landing in Liverpool, and going to his old home, where he was employed at his old work until June 7, 1879, when he with his family again set sail for America, landing this time at Philadelphia, whence they removed to Chester. After one year in the latter place they went to Columbia, remaining one and one-half years, and then locating in York, where he was engaged for ten years at his trade of puddling, with John W. Stacey. Mr. Mason was then employed at lighter work for one year, and for two years was inspector of chains in the chain shop. In 1892 Mr. Mason engaged in the grocery business at No. 549 East King street, where he has since remained, and in which he has been very successful. Mr. Mason's home was one of the first in its locality to receive the city water. His stock is complete in all of its details, and by honest dealing and good value Mr. Mason has gained the confidence of the public.

In 1862, Mr. Mason was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Court, born in 1842, in South Staffordshire, England, daughter of Edwin Court, a boilermaker of England. Mr. Mason is a devoted member of the Ridge Avenue Methodist Church in which he has been steward for a number of years. He is well known in York, where he is highly esteemed as a man of honesty and integrity.

WILLIAM H. TROUT, one of York county's substantial citizens, is engaged in blacksmithing and in agricultural operations in North Codorus township, where he was born June 16, 1848, son of Emanuel Trout.

George Trout, grandfather of William H., was a schoolmaster at Jefferson borough, where he died. He had two sons, Ephraim, who died at Manchester; and Emanuel.

Emanuel Trout was a distiller by trade, having learned that business in Maryland. Owing to the bad condition of his health he was compelled to give up distilling, and went to work at day laboring. He located in Manchester, where he died aged thirty-nine years, being buried at Sherman's Reformed Church. He married Susan Trinkle, who is also deceased, buried at Emmitsburg. They had children: George; Lucinda, the wife of Edward Bloom, of near Gettysburg, Adams county; William H.; and Sarah, Amanda and Mary, all deceased.

William H. Trout attended the township schools of Manheim township until sixteen years of age, and a year and one-half later learned his trade with Lant & Sheaffer, of North Codorus township, with whom he remained three years. After spending one year at farming he returned to his trade at Thomasville, and the next several years were spent at Kuhl. Emigsville, Cold Spring, Bollinger, Ore Bank, Porter's Landing, and East Angley, and in 1883 came to his present location, where he has since remained. He purchased from his father-in-law twenty acres of land, upon which he erected new buildings, including a blacksmith shop. His home is located along the road from Spring Grove to Jefferson borough, and he enjoys a fine trade.

Mr. Trout married Caroline Stambaugh, daughter of Peter and Catherine (Runk) Stambaugh, and to this union have been born: Rosa, Franklin, and Claude, unmarried; and Fannie, Charles and Nellie, all deceased. Mr. Trout is a member of the Reformed Church. He is an active member of that denomination, and assisted in erecting the church in Codorus township. He is a Democrat in politics.

JOHN S. HERSHEY, a farmer of Penn township, is a descendant on both sides from old Pennsylvania families and himself worthily supports a name long identified with the history of York county. He was born Dec. 20, 1847, on what is known as the "John Mumma farm," to John M. and Nancy (Sprenkle) Hershey. The paternal grandfather was Jacob Hershey, a native of York county, and a prosperous farmer there, who married Miss Mumma and reared a large family. The maternal grandfather was Jacob Sprenkle, formerly of Lancaster county; his wife belonged to the Shirk family.

John M. Hershey was born in York county near York, in 1811, and his wife, Miss Nancy Sprenkle, was born two years later. Her death occurred in 1870, while her husband survived until Sept. 1, 1888, after an honorable and successful career as a farmer and general business man. Seven children were born to them as follows: John S.; Elizabeth, Mrs. Christian Miller; Maria, Mrs. Jacob Rudisill; Anna, Mrs. George Forry, of York county; Barbara, Mrs. Samuel Hoke; Sarah, Mrs. Benjamin Forry, residing in Hanover; and George, who died at the age of twenty-seven.

John S. Hershey spent the first twenty-one years of his life on his father's farm, attending the district school, and later assisting his father. He then married and settled on a farm of his own in Penn township, where he engaged in stock raising and general farming. His property includes 100 acres of good land under good cultivation, and with everything indicating a state of prosperity; there are a number of farm buildings and a good residence, and all are kept in splendid condition, while the same can be said regarding his farm machinery, which is all of the latest improved designs.

Mr. Hershey was united in marriage to Miss Lucinda Krug, daughter of John and Susanna (Willet) Krug, and to their union children as follows were born: Freeing, a farmer residing near York; Sarah, Mrs. L. M. Bechtel; Minnie, Mrs. Henry Utz; Arlington D., a clerk in the dry goods establishment of Elmer E. Wentz; Calvin A., employed in the Hanover Shoe Factory; Cetus Garfield; and Nancy Ann, at home. Mr. Hershey is not only a successful man, but is one of pleasing personality, whose genial manners have made him many warm friends, by whom he is highly esteemed.

JACOB KESSLER BAKER was born on his father's homestead farm, in Paradise township, May 31, 1805, and is descended of German ancestors who spelled the name Becker.

Jacob Baker, his grandfather, spent nearly all of his life in North Codorus township, where both he and his wife died in the faith of the Reformed Church. Their children were: Abraham, a merchant who lived and died in Hanover; Jacob; Henry, who married Christiana Altland, and resides in Maryland; John, of Spring Forge, York county, a shoemaker by trade, who married Amanda Stambaugh; Catherine, Mrs. Daniel Stauffers, of Porters; and Amanda, of York, who married first a Mr. Fuhrman, and second, Mr. Conly, both now deceased.

Jacob Baker, father of our subject, was born in North Codorus township, and grew to manhood there, acquiring a common-school education. He learned tailoring in Jefferson borough, and followed that as a journeyman there and throughout North Codorus and Paradise townships. In February, 1863, he moved to Newtown and established himself as a tailor in connection with a mercantile business, continuing until 1895, when he retired. He now lives below the homestead. He married Miss Eliza Kessler, born in North Codorus township, daughter of George Kessler. The following children were born to them: Mary Ann, Mrs. L. H. Miller, of Jackson township; Lydia Ann, widow of John G. Wantz, of York; Maquilla, at home; Savilla and Mantilla, died young; Jacob Kessler, our subject; Amanda, deceased wife of Eli Mumford; Lillie; and George, of Paradise township.

Jacob Kessler Baker began to attend school at the age of six years, under Dr. Hollinger, now of Abbottstown. He continued in the township schools until seventeen years of age, some of his other teachers being: Isaac Miller, now a banker at East Berlin; E. A. Rice, a banker of York; and Absalom Baker. He also attended the East Berlin Normal School for three terms under J. C. Hilderman, and two terms at Millersville Normal. He then purchased instruments, books, etc., and engaged for a time in the study of surveying, following this occupation for several years. He began teaching at the age of seventeen years, at the Anstine school, Windsor township, remaining for one term, and since then has spent his time in his native township, where he has taught for twenty-four years. For ten years he conducted a select school in Paradise township, called the Paradise Normal School. In 1886 Mr. Baker married Miss Emma Jane Becker, of North Codorus township, daughter of Emanuel and Eliza (Myers) Becker. They began married life on a small home in Paradise township, one mile west of Newtown, and here he resided for eight years. They then purchased the farm immediately above this, now owned and occupied by George Hamme, and there spent nine years, after which the present farm was purchased, known as the "old tavern farm," consisting of 112 acres.

Mr. Baker is a stanch Democrat, and has served as township clerk, on the election board, as judge of election, and two terms as justice of the peace, refusing to serve his third term in the latter office, although elected. He is a devoted member of Holtz-Schwamm Reformed Church, was formerly a deacon, and is now superintendent of the Sunday-school. Mr. Baker's children are as follows: D. Webster, educated in the public schools, and the York and Millersville Normal schools, has taught for one year; Minerva Eliza; Ira J., died small; and Stella J.

Mr. Baker started in life a poor boy, and whatever success has attended his efforts is due to his frugality, thrift, energy and determination. He is very highly esteemed in Paradise township, where his many sterling traits of character are appreciated.

CLAYTON B. KING, of Washington township, was born in that township, Nov. 24, 1862, son of Christian and Elizabeth King, and is of Scotch-Irish descent.

Jacob King, his grandfather, was a shoemaker by trade, and followed his business first in East Berlin, Adams county, and then came to York county, here engaging in farming. He owned a fine property in the neighborhood of Hall, where he died at the age of eighty-four years, and he was buried at the Bethlehem Meeting House in Washington township. He had two sons, Samuel and Christian, the former of whom died in Adams county.

Christian King, father of Clayton B., was born in Washington township, York county, receiving a common school education. He bought his father's farm of 117 acres and devoted his whole life to farming, remaining there until his death at the age of seventy-seven years. He married Elizabeth Ketterman, daughter of George Ketterman, of North Codorus township. She died at the age of seventy-three years, and is buried at Strayers

Church in Dover township. He was buried at the Bethlehem Meeting House in Washington township. Christian King was a stanch Democrat, and he served his township as tax collector during the Civil War, and also was elected assessor. His children were: Jane, wife of Lewis Kidd; Mary A., wife of George H. Foust, a teacher in York; Lizzie Ellen, wife of John E. Knaub, of York; and Clayton B.

Clayton B. King was educated in the public schools of his native township, and at the age of sixteen years became a teacher, teaching sixteen consecutive terms in York county—the Weaver school in Washington township, a summer school at Rothville, two summers at Wellsville, the Fairs school in Codorus township for four years, was one year at Bortner's, one year at Strick's, four years at the Harmony Grove school, Dover township, and after coming back to Washington township he taught the Asper school for one year, and then for four years at Danniers, going from there to Reading township in Adams county where he taught the Baker school. In 1866 he gave up teaching. He served as assessor of his township for three years. In recent years he has been engaged in farming, and has made a success, owning fifty-five acres of the old homestead which he has divided into three tracts. He has made many excellent improvements and erected commodious and comfortable buildings. He is a strong Democrat, and his party has recognized his ability and fidelity.

Mr. King married Alice Ditter, daughter of John Ditter, of York county. He is one of the leading members of the St. Paul Lutheran Church, and is now serving on its official board as secretary.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN HORN, residing on a farm in Springetsbury township, was born Nov. 15, 1853, son of George and Mary Ann (Wagner) Horn.

The paternal grandfather, John Horn, came from Germany when he was a boy and settled in Windsor township, York county, where he became one of the well-known farmers. He owned a good sized farm there and operated it till a short time before his death, when he moved to the upper part of the township, near Longstown. There he died well-advanced in years. He was a member of the United Brethren Church. He married Miss Elizabeth Deckman, and they became the parents of the following children: Michael; George; John; Henry; Daniel and Peter, twins; Philip; Elizabeth; Mattie, Mrs. Emanuel Stiles; and Catherine, Mrs. John Blymyer. These children all settled down in York county, adopting various occupations as farmers, blacksmiths, wagonmakers or shoemakers.

George Horn was reared on the farm in Windsor township, and though he had few opportunities for attending school, was a great reader and became very well educated. He was an expert in figures. Especially conversant with the Bible, he could quote passage after passage verbatim. He was an active member of the United Brethren Church, and was for many years class leader. Mr. Horn started in life as a blacksmith, but after a few years he gave up that calling; and about 1857 bought a farm of 119 1/2 acres in the southwestern part of Springetsbury township. The line between that and York township passed directly through the place and the oven was so situated that the bread was baked in York and eaten in Springetsbury. Mr. Horn's active life was spent there in farming, but a few years before his death, which occurred in February, 1894, he retired and passed his last days free from care. In politics he was a Republican. Mr. Horn was married three times. By his first wife, a daughter of Jacob Gable, he had two children, who died young. By his second wife, Miss Mary Ann Wagner, he had four: Emeline, Mrs. John Stump, of Windsor township; Andrew W., who lives with his brother, Benjamin F.; Benjamin F.; and Caleb, a blacksmith by trade, but now employed as night-watchman in the Dallas-town bank. Mrs. Horn died in 1857, and Mr. Horn married (third) Miss Susan Arnold, daughter of George Arnold, of Spring Garden township, who survives. Three children were born to this union: David, a farmer in Springetsbury; Catherine, Mrs. Samuel Adair, of York township; and one that died in infancy.

Benjamin Franklin Horn was reared on the farm and given a common-school education. In his nineteenth year he took up the trade of a carpenter, but after five months trial returned home and worked for his father until 1876. In that year, having previously married, he rented one of his father's farms.
and started out for himself. After nine years in this place, he bought a tract of forty-five acres, also belonging to his father, and ever since has been engaged there in farming. He has one of the attractive homesteads of that section, and in 1898 built his residence, designed by himself, a modest home but pleasant and thoroughly modern in its appointments. Besides his farming interests he is a stockholder in the Farmers' Fertilizer Company. In politics he is a Republican.

In 1874 Mr. Horn was united in marriage to Sarah J., daughter of Henry Knaub, of Springfield township. They have two children: Amelia, who married George Emenheiser, a machinist in East York, and has had four children: Stewart, Albert, Elizabeth Jane and one that died in infancy; and Melvin B. F., who lives at home, attending school. The family are highly esteemed and respected throughout the community.

JACOB H. HANTZ (deceased), for many years engaged in painting in York, Pa., was born in that city Feb. 21, 1832, son of Henry and Anna Mary (Strine) Hantz, the former well known in the early days in both York city and county as the proprietor of the old hotel that stood where "City Hotel" now stands, at York, and the owner of what is now the "Wilson Hotel" at Wrightsville—his death occurring in the latter town.

Jacob H. Hantz followed the occupation of house painting until about five years before his death, which occurred in January, 1887. He was also known as a landscape painter.

Mr. Hantz married Elizabeth H. Russell, only daughter of Joseph and Leah (Kauffelt) Russell. Four children of this union survive: James H.; Annie C.; and Lena H., both decorators of china; and Mrs. J. R. Hueter, of York.

Joseph Russell, father of Mrs. Hantz, was born in Manheim, Lancaster Co., Pa. He was employed on the old Grubb furnace in York county and on different public works, especially on various railroads in this county. He died in 1882, aged seventy-four, and was buried in Prospect Hill cemetery in York.

GILBERT C. LANDIS. In no province of human activity has greater progress been made within the past quarter of a century than in the application of science to the manufactures and arts. It is the very foundation of modern development along the practical lines of the day, and those who recognize the fact are strictly in the march of events. Those who superintend the details of great industries in order that continuous expansion will ensue must be scientists as well as mechanics. Applying these general remarks to the operations of the American Phosphorus Company, whose extensive works are at Cly, York Co., Pa., it may be inferred that their substantial future is assured from the fact that besides being officered by moneyed and practical business men, the manufacturing processes are superintended by a trained and broad-minded scientist, who is the chemist of the establishment, Gilbert C. Landis. He resides at No. 729 West King street, York, Pennsylvania.

The building of the plant of the American Phosphorus Company was commenced in April, 1905, and the manufactory was in operation by the first of September, of that year. It consists of two fire-proof brick buildings, with cement roofs and floors, each 200 x 35 feet in dimensions, and all the rooms separated by 13-inch brick walls. The different quarters comprise office, laboratory, repair shops, ore-mixing and calcine room, transforming room, four furnace rooms, boiler room for steam heating, and refining and storage rooms. The entire plant, which covers two acres of ground, is operated by electricity, which is furnished by the York Haven Water Power Co. The buildings are so designed that the plant can be increased to four times its present capacity, without interfering with the manufacturing operations.

The raw material is mined from the company's land in Cumberland county, Pa., and transported to Falls, York county, which is the main shipping point of the establishment, the facilities being furnished by the Northern Central railroad. Phosphorus is used in the manufacture of matches and bronze, and in medicinal chemistry. It is transformed into a commercial product by subjecting the phosphorus ores, mixed with suitable fluxes and chemicals, to the heat of the electric arc. Superintendent Landis has designed a furnace especially adapted to that work, patents for which are now pending.

The present plant of the American Phosphorus Company employs about twenty men, and is in operation every day and hour of the year except Christmas. The company is capitalized at $500,000 and was incorporated in New Jersey. Its officers are: T. Henry Asbury, president; Charles W. Asbury, vice-president; Clinton Gage, secretary; and Harry E. Asbury, treasurer. The Messrs. Asbury are also owners of the Enterprise Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

EUGENE R. ALBAUGH, M. D., a prominent physician of Codorus township, was born there Aug. 17, 1854, a son of Dr. William Albaugh.

Abraham Albaugh, grandfather of Eugene R., was a farmer in Carroll county, Md., remaining in that State till his death, which occurred at the age of seventy. His wife, Christina (Bahn) Albaugh, died when fifty years old, leaving eight children, Amos, Peter, Abraham, William, Henry, David, Diana and Angeline.

Dr. William Albaugh was born in Carroll county in 1829, was sent to the common schools, and graduated at New Windsor (Md.) College. After deciding on his profession he went to the Washington University, at Baltimore, and when his course was completed began practicing in his native county, but soon removed to Codorus township, York Co., Pa., where he spent the rest of his life in his chosen work. He was very intellectual, was finely trained, and was an exceedingly popular physician. He died when only fifty-four years old, and was buried at the “Stone Church.” Dr. Albaugh married Miss Harriet Cramer, of Codorus township, and the following children were born to them: Mary, wife of Jacob Bair, of Glenville; Josephine, who died when thirty-nine years of age; Eugene R.; George E., Henry M. and Howard, the three last named deceased; Capitola B., wife of John Hoffman; Maurice C., married to G. McAbee, and living in Railroad Bow, York county; and Gertrude May, wife of Henry Shearer, of Maryland. Mrs. Harriet (Cramer) Albaugh was the only daughter of Henry and Eva (Lehman) Cramer, both now deceased, and buried at the “Stone Church.” The father, a carpenter by trade, died when seventy-two years old and his wife at the age of thirty-four. They had four sons, Solomon, Eli and Israel, all deceased, and Henry, living in Baltimore. Mrs. Albaugh now makes her home with her son, the Doctor.

Eugene R. Albaugh was sent to the township schools and later to the Glen Rock Academy. He decided to adopt his father’s profession, and after reading medicine under his direction for a time entered the Baltimore College of Physicians and Surgeons, in 1873, and in 1875 was graduated. He finally returned to Codorus township, and as his father had by that time passed away he took his place and has ever since been practicing in that locality, a physician both skillful and popular. He is enthusiastic in his profession, and is a well-known member of the York County Medical Society.

Dr. Albaugh was married in 1893 to Miss Catherine R. Henry, of East Berlin, Adams county, daughter of Rev. S. S. Henry. They have two children, Ruth and Russell, both attending school. In the spring of 1905 Dr. Albaugh began building a handsome residence, which he calls Farm Cottage, located on his farm two miles south of Glenville, on the road from York to Baltimore. Dr. Albaugh is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is much interested in local affairs, is a Democrat in his political views and has served the community as school director. He belongs to the Bonnair Band, and is the only charter member still in the organization. Fraternally he is a member of the P. O. S. of A., and a charter member of Excelsior Grange, of Glen Rock.

JOSEPH KAUFFMAN (deceased) was a most highly esteemed resident of Spring Garden township, York county, where he was born, and where he died at the age of sixty-six years. His whole life was spent in agricultural pursuits.

Mr. Kauffman was a son of Joseph and Catherine (Huber) Kauffman, the former of whom was probably born in Lancaster county, Pa., where many families of the name reside. After his marriage he settled on a farm of seventy-seven acres, just east of Stonybrook, where he died in middle life, survived by his wife, who reached the age of sixty-two years. They had four children, as follows: Mary, who married Deitrich Steiner, of this county; Catherine, who married Daniel Witmer; Lydia, who married George Bohn; and Joseph. An aunt of these children married into the Kendig family.

Joseph Kauffman, whose name introduces this sketch, married Susanna Sprenkle, who was born in West Manchester township. Mr.
Kauffman owned a farm of 200 acres east of Stonybrook, and there he reared his most excellent family, numbering eleven children, namely: Henry, who is deceased; Joseph, a resident of Windsor township; Emanuel, now deceased; Isaac, of Springettsbury township; Abraham, deceased; Israel, of Springettsbury township; John, of York; Mary, residing on the old farm; Sarah, wife of Michael Smyser, of York; Susan, wife of Eli Kendig, of Philadelphia; and Martin, of Philadelphia. The beloved mother of this family lived to the age of eighty-three years. Both Joseph Kauffman and his wife were consistent members of the Mennonite Church. They were well known, and were respected by everyone.

Israel and Mary Kauffman, brother and sister, reside on a well cultivated part of the old homestead, consisting of twenty-seven acres, and they have one of the most comfortable homes in the township. Miss Kauffman is a member of the Mennonite Church, and a lady beloved for her many excellent traits of character.

The maternal grandparents of Miss Kauffman were Daniel and Annie (Mumma) Sprenkle, who lived in West Manchester township. Their children were: Daniel, a farmer of Manchester township; Henry, who died young; John, a farmer of West Manchester township, who died at the age of seventy years; Mary, who married Daniel Graybill, of West Manchester township; Susanna, who became the wife of Joseph Kauffman; and Nancy, wife of Jacob Balinger, of West Manchester township. Daniel Sprenkle died aged seventy-seven years, and his wife aged fifty-five years. They were worthy members of the Mennonite Church, good, pious people.

GEORGE E. MYERS, who is extensively engaged in farming in York county, is the owner of a fine tract of 142 acres of wood and farming land, in Monaghan township. He was born on his present home, Oct. 22, 1856, son of Samuel and Leah (Kimmel) Myers.

Mr. Myers was educated in the common schools of Monaghan township, and has remained on the old home farm all his life, with the exception of one year when he rented a piece of property in Mt. Pleasant. All of his life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, he coming into possession of the home farm by purchase in 1887, and he has ninety acres of the 142 under cultivation. His present handsome residence was built in 1900, and it is considered one of the finest farm homes in the township. Mr. Myers has built fine outbuildings, the water supply is excellent, and his farm is well situated, being about one and one-quarter miles south of Mt. Pleasant, six miles from Dillsburg and thirteen miles from Harrisburg. The schools in the locality are excellent, and the churches conveniently near.

In 1883 Mr. Myers married Miss Clara Brandt, and these children have been born to them: Mamie B., C. Guy, Fannie B., Boyd S., Greta E. and Clara Ada. Mr. and Mrs. Myers and their daughter Mamie B. attend the Church of God, being devout members of the Bethel Church at Mt. Pleasant. In politics Mr. Myers is a Republican, but he has never taken an active part in party affairs. He is held in high esteem by his neighbors and all with whom he is brought in contact.

EDWARD LEBER, junior member of the architectural firm of Hamme & Leber, bears a name that has been an honored one in the county for generations, the maternal side of his family also having been connected with the history of the county for over a century. The history of Mr. Leber's maternal ancestor, Col. John Hay of Revolutionary fame, and another of the same name, who won distinction in the war of 1812, is fully set forth elsewhere.

Edward Leber was born in the Borough, now City, of York, in the year 1871, and passed his boyhood days in pursuit of an education, attending the public schools and the York County Academy. He early developed a talent for drawing, and at an early age entered the office of Architect J. A. Dempwolf, in pursuit of his chosen profession. He continued his study at The Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston, and in the year 1901 became associated with his present partner.

Mr. Leber is active in York society, being a Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery Mason, as well as a member in several of the city's leading social and business organizations. He is a member of the Greek letter college fraternity of Phi Gamma Delta. In religious circles he is likewise active, holding membership in Zion Lutheran Church, of which congregation he is a member of the governing body. He is also conspicuous in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association, having been a member of the board of directors for upwards of ten years.

DAVID PRALL, proprietor of Deer Park Farm, is a highly esteemed, prosperous farmer of East Hopewell township, York county. He was born on his father’s farm, near Draco, Hopewell township, Aug. 16, 1841, son of Asher G. and Mary (Trout) Prall.

Asher G. Prall was born in the eastern part of New Jersey. On reaching manhood he came to York county, and, in East Hopewell township, married Miss Mary Trout. At one time Mr. Prall and his brother, Squire Prall, owned the farm now owned by David Prall, and this they sold, Mr. Prall purchasing a farm of 100 acres near Draco, on which he died in 1889, aged eighty-one years, his wife having passed away the previous year, aged eighty-eight years. They were members of the M. E. Church. In politics Mr. Prall was a Democrat. The children of Asher G. Prall and his wife who grew to maturity were as follows: Cornelius, who is on the home farm; Mary Jane, also at the old home; and David, our subject. Several children died in infancy.

David Prall grew to manhood on his father’s farm and attended the Zion public school during the winter terms. He was reared to the life of a farmer, and has followed that occupation all of his life. In 1872 he married Miss Maggie Enfield, who was born in Fawn township, daughter of Andrew and Mary Ann (Blain) Enfield, and to this union have been born the following children: Mary, Mrs. William B. Hersher, of East Hopewell township; Sadie, Mrs. David Wallace, of East Hopewell township; Carrie, Mrs. Joseph M. Trout, also of this township; Elmer, Bertha and David, at home, and William S., the eldest, who died in York City in the spring of 1904. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Prall settled on the farm which they now occupy, Mr. Prall having purchased it from Squire Prall. The farm consists of eighty-five acres of good farm land, and Mr. Prall carries on general farming.

Mr. Prall is connected with the M. E. Church, attending at Zion. He is a stanch Democrat, and served his township as tax collector for one term.

JOHN T. SMITH, of Windsor township, is engaged as a farmer and mason. He is of German descent on his father’s side, and several generations of the family have lived in York county, Henry Smith, his grandfather, having been a farmer who lived and died in Windsor township.

Simon Smith, son of Henry, was also a farmer, but followed the carpenter’s trade during his latter years. During the Civil war he served three years in the Union army. He married Miss Anna Tome, and first located in Windsorville. Afterward they lived for a time in Adamsville, where Mrs. Smith died. Mr. Smith thereupon returned to Windsor township and made his home with the Anstines, where he died in 1864. He and his wife had a family of ten children, viz.: Samuel, who died in York; Reuben, of Stonybrook; Henry, deceased; Simon and Moses, twins, the former deceased; Emeline, Mrs. William Dietz, of Dallastown; Elizabeth, Mrs. Edward Kraft, who died in Windsor township; Frank, of Mountville; Daniel, of Cumberland county; and John T.

John T. Smith was born Dec. 25, 1834, and his mother’s death occurred at that time, so that the child was brought up by strangers, mainly in the family of Simon Antine. He attended the Koons school, the last of his teachers being Miss Bigler, sister of Dr. Bigler. He was afforded opportunities for a good education, but would not improve them and left school permanently at the age of twelve. From the time he was ten he was the seventh hand with a cradle in the rye field. He received no wages for the work done through his youth, and on reaching the age of eighteen he left Mr. Antine and started out for himself. He continued farming, and for four years received wages of $150 a year. In 1879 he married and settled on his present farm, which he bought at that time. He put up buildings and began cigarmaking in addition to carrying on his farm. For the past fifteen years he has been largely occupied with masonry work, a trade which he had previously learned from Amos Heindel.

Mr. Smith chose for his wife Miss Annie Koons, daughter of Emanuel and Elizabeth (Snyder) Koons, and to their union five children have been born: Mary, who died at the age of two; Bert C.; Nettie, Mrs. George Filmore, of Lower Windsor township; Virgie and Flossie, at home. Mr. Smith is connected with the Salem United Evangelical Church, of which he is one of the trustees. In politics a Democrat, he has been twice elected supervisor, an indication of the position he holds in the esteem of his fellow citizens. He is also a member of the P. O. S. of A., Windsor Lodge.

Bert C. Smith, son of John T. Smith, was born Feb. 9, 1880. He was sent to Small’s school, attending until he was eighteen, learned the process of cigarmaking from his father, and worked with him until he was twenty-one, after which he began his present occupation, that of mason, a trade he learned from Wesley Raub. He was married in 1902 to Miss Nettie Snell, and they have one child, Alvera. Mr. Smith is a member of Salem Church, and in politics is a Democrat.

CHRISTOPHER GARY NOLLER was born in Shrewsbury township, York county, June 17, 1860. He was educated in the township schools, and in the Stewartstown Academy, where he ended his studies at the age of nineteen. The following year he began teaching, and was so engaged for twenty terms, first in Hopewell township, then in Stewartstown, Winterstown, Felton, and the townsships of East and North Hopewell and Windsor, in each case achieving great success as a teacher. During vacations he worked at farming; and finally, in the spring of 1895, began on his present farm in Windsor township, purchased from Jacob Runkle. Mr. Noller has been successful in his operations and has a well-developed farm. He is at present serving as a director in the Farmers’ Canning Company of Red Lion. In politics he has always been a Democrat and was one of Cleveland’s most devoted supporters in 1892. He served as assessor in the borough of Stewartstown, in minor offices in Winterstown, and in the spring of 1904 was chosen a school director of Windsor township. He is a member of the Church of God, and the past five years has been an elder in same. Mr. Noller is intensely interested in the advancement of education, is active in local affairs, and being a man of much strength of character is highly esteemed and has a wide influence in his community.

Mr. Noller has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Elmira Elizabeth Bush, to whom he was united in 1885, by Rev. Dr. Niles. She was born in Hopewell township in 1865, daughter of the late Rudolph Homer and Elizabeth (Morrison) Bush, the latter of whom is still living, a resident of Baltimore county, Md. Mrs. Elmira E. Noller died in 1891, and was buried in Mt. Pleasant cemetery, North Hopewell. Two children were born to this union, namely: Belva Olivia, now married to Burtis Clinton Baker; and Annie Elmira, who died in infancy. In May, 1894, Mr. Noller was united in marriage to Miss Ella M. Runkle, by Rev. Peter Livingston. Ella M. Runkle was born in 1866, in North Hopewell township, daughter of the late John and Mary (Myers) Runkle. Her father, John Runkle, a prosperous farmer of North Hopewell township, died in 1905, and was buried in Lebanon cemetery. Her mother, Mary (Myers) Runkle, was the daughter of Charles Myers, deceased. She died in 1899, and her remains were laid to rest in Lebanon cemetery, near Felton.

Mr. Noller is of German descent, and his father, John George Noller, was born near Heilbronn, Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1819, and lived there until 1854, when he came to America and settled in Shrewsbury township. He was a stanch Democrat, and a Lutheran in religious faith. He died in 1896, and was buried in Mt. Pleasant cemetery, North Hopewell. John George Noller married Olivia Wasserman, who was born in Murrhardt, Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1825, daughter of Gottlieb Wasserman, a tinner by trade. She died in 1899, at the home of her daughter, Mary Waltemyer, in East Hopewell township, and her remains were laid to rest in Mt. Pleasant cemetery. John George and Olivia (Wasserman) Noller had five children: Mary, widow of the late Benjamin Waltemyer; Susan, Mrs. Thomas Hannigan, deceased; Christopher Gary; Levi, of Hopewell, who married Miss Ella Barclay, of Lancaster county, and Tillie, widow of George Hannigan, of Felton.

The grandfather, George Noller, was a wealthy farmer and had extensive vineyards, but from 1845 to 1850 he lost much through the failure of other parties, and his son, John George, started again on his own resources in the New World. In Germany he had been given a good education and there had learned the tanner’s trade. The passage from his home at Heilbronn to America was by way of Heidelberg and Mannheim, in Baden; Rotterdam, Holland; Havre, France, thence to New York. The voyage from Havre to New York was made in a sailing vessel and it took sixty days to complete it. On the vessel there was also a Miss Olivia Wasserman, his future wife, and a brother, Christian Noller, who enlisted in the regular army of the United States soon after his arrival in America and later sacrificed his life on the altar of his new country in the Civil war. He was also accompanied by other relatives, the Strobeck family. Mrs. Strobeck is still living and resides near New Freedom, Shrewsbury township. John Strobeck, then a lad of seven years, is now a resident of Red Lion.

JAMES EDGAR WAMBAUGH, owner of the "Over-view Farm," which is situated one-quarter of a mile southeast of the Fawn township line, and consists of seventy-five acres of excellent land, belongs to one of the old county families.

Samuel Wambaugh, father of James Edgar, was born in Fawn township on what is now the Jacob Grove farm, in December, 1812. There he grew to manhood, working hard for his living and having but the meager educational chances of his day. He remained in that township until after his marriage and then bought the farm which is owned by his son James Edgar. As he had but small capital to start with, he purchased this land at various times just as he was able to pay, improving each tract from its wild state to one of productiveness. His death took place Aug. 18, 1881. He was a member of Zion M. E. Church. In politics he was a strong Democrat, and he was twice elected supervisor of his township.

Samuel Wambaugh was married Feb. 14, 1839, to Deborah Badders, born March 28, 1809, in Fawn township, daughter of Levi Badders. Mrs. Wambaugh died in July, 1896. The children of the above marriage were: Levi, born Feb. 22, 1842, went to Iowa, married there and is now a farmer in Black Hawk county; John W., born Feb. 28, 1844, married Elizabeth Workinger, settled in Fawn township and died there; and James Edgar.

James Edgar Wambaugh was born on this farm, Dec. 24, 1847, and grew to manhood here. He attended the Zion school until twelve years old during the winter terms, and one of his well remembered teachers was Fred Hoke. He began to work hard when he was but a child, and when his father died he took the place, although he had cropped for his father for three years previously. The name of the farm gives a pleasant idea of its situation, and it is, indeed, a most desirable place, and Mr. Wambaugh and pleasant family make it a most hospitable home.

On March 13, 1873, Mr. Wambaugh was married, by Rev. J. Y. Cowhisk, the Presbyterian pastor at Stewartstown, to Margaret A. McConnell, born in June, 1850, in Peach Bottom township, daughter of John and Alice Jane (Winter) McConnell. The father of Mr. McConnell was a wealthy man in Ireland, and he did not approve of his son marrying the girl he loved because she was poor, so they eloped to New York and, although young, were married and came to Peach Bottom township, York county. He first was a contractor on a canal, and then became a farmer on land close to Lower Chanceford township. He was a man of generous impulses, and two of his neighbors had him sign their bail bonds which proved worthless. This ruined him financially, broke his spirit, and he died just nine days before Mrs. Wambaugh, the youngest of his children, was born; the other children were: Hugh went to California with his sister Mary and an aunt; Mary; Elizabeth married (first) James Burk, and (second) Lorenzo Hutton; Jane, Mrs. Bernard Doyle, died in Bainbridge, N. Y.; Alice died unmarried; and John, who volunteered in the Civil war, was lost sight of.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Wambaugh were: Mary S. C., born Feb. 1, 1874, was a dressmaker in Baltimore, and from there went to the Norristown State Hospital, where she was graduated a nurse, and subsequently married the well known Philadelphia artist, John E. Newberry, and they have one child, Helen Minnie; Annie Virginia died March 21, 1881; Margie M., born May 27, 1878, died June 18, 1878; Ella E. P., born Oct. 2, 1880, married George Ford, of Fawn township, but removed to Norristown, after marriage, thence to Philadelphia, where they now reside, and they have two children: Gladys Naomi and Bernice Mildred, the latter of whom died Oct. 14, 1903; Robert E. P., born Oct. 8, 1882, works for the Prudential Life Insurance Co., with headquarters at Philadelphia; Ida M. E., born Oct. 6, 1884, is at home; Edith R. J., born July 17, 1886, is also at home.

In his political views Mr. Wambaugh has always been a stanch Republican, but he is one from principle and not on account of possible political honors. He was reared in the M. E. Church, and has always been a liberal supporter of that religious body.

JOHN G. MARTIN, a farmer of Jackson township, was born in 1850, son of Joseph and Nancy (Graybill) Martin.

John Martin, the great-grandfather of John G., emigrated from Germany to the United States early in the eighteenth century and located in Lancaster county, Pa. Later he came to York county, settling first near York and afterward removing to Codorus township, where he died at an advanced age. He was a gunsmith by trade, and followed this occupation in connection with farming, building a factory for the manufacture of gun barrels, which he supplied to the soldiers during the Revolutionary war. Among his children were: Samuel, David, Catherine and John. In religious belief he and his wife were Dunkards.

John Martin, the grandfather of John G., was born in Pennsylvania and educated in the primitive schools of his day. He engaged in farming, and accumulated considerable property, being considered one of the prosperous farmers of the time. He married Nancy Grove, by whom he had the following children: Catherine, Joseph, Lydia, Abraham, Elizabeth, Fanny and Solomon. In religious belief he was a Mennonite, as was also his wife. He died aged sixty-two years.

Joseph Martin, the father of John G., was born in Jackson township, where he was engaged in farming all his life. His death occurred in 1874, when he was sixty-two years of age. To himself and wife nine children were born, namely: William, Emanuel, Joseph, Nathaniel, John, Amanda, Melinda, Annie and one that died in infancy. In political belief Joseph Martin was a Republican, but would never accept public office, being a consistent member of the Mennonite Church.

John G. Martin remained at home until the age of twenty-three, when he went to Kansas. After remaining there about nine months he returned home. He then learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed until his marriage, after which he engaged in farming on rented property for four years, when he purchased his present farm of ninety-four and one-half acres in Jackson township. Since that time he has devoted all his energy to agricultural pursuits.

In 1882 Mr. Martin married Lucy Stambaugh, daughter of Abraham Stambaugh, and one child, Harry S., has been born to this union. The family are connected with the Reformed Church, while in politics Mr. Martin like his father, is a Republican.

MICHAEL MEYERS, a cigar manufacturer and dealer in cigars and tobacco, located at No. 45 East Philadelphia street, York, Pa., is a native of the city where he conducts his business, born March 12, 1864, son of Joseph and Margaret (Fuller) Myers.

Mr. Meyers's parents came from Bavaria, settling in America prior to their marriage. Joseph Meyers was a tanner, having learned the trade in his native country, and followed this business all of his life. He died in 1897, at the age of seventy-nine years, and his wife died in the spring of 1896, at the age of seventy-two years. They had two children, Joseph, who resides in York, and Michael.

Michael Meyers was reared in York, and attended the public schools. When a lad of eleven years he learned the trade of cigar-making, which he has followed continuously ever since, in 1895 beginning business on his own account at No. 459 West Philadelphia street, and in 1899 removing to his present location. He manufactures the highest grade of cigars and supplies local trade, as well as wholesaling outside of York.

Mr. Meyers is a member of the K. of G. E., in which he has passed the chairs; the Junior O. U. A. M., and the I. O. O. F. He has represented the Eagles for six terms consecutively. Mr. Meyers was married June 3, 1894, to Miss Ella M. Allison, and they have their home at the same location as his place of business. They attend the United Brethren Church.

ZACHARIAS T. SPANGLER, merchant at the Glades, Detrop, Springetsbury township, York county, where he is successfully conducting a general merchandise store, was born Nov. 23, 1848, son of William and Elizabeth (Heckert) Spangler.

The grandparents of Z. T. Spangler were John and Christina Spangler, the latter of whom is supposed to have come from Germany. John Spangler was born in York county, where he spent his entire life engaged in agricultural pursuits. He lived to the age of eighty-eight years, and his wife also lived to an advanced age. To them were born a family of eight children, Samuel, William, John, Charles, Elizabeth, Catherine, Leah and Polly.

William Spangler, although he followed farming, was a mason by trade. He was a prominent figure in church work, being very active in securing funds for the erection of the Mt. Zion Church of Springetsbury, and was a very liberal supporter of the church, for years being one of its officers. He was of the Reformed faith, while his wife connected herself with the Lutheran Church. His death occurred in 1891, when he was aged eighty-two, while his wife died at the age of sixty-six. A family of twelve children was born to this couple, of whom ten are living, as follows: John, who is retired and resides at Red Lion; William, a laborer of Springetsbury township; Emanuel, a trucker of the same township; Zacharias T., our subject; Philip H., a prosperous merchant of East York; Alexander, a farmer of this township; Jacob H., who is also a farmer; Albert, a trackman for the Pennsylvania railroad, who resides in East York; Lucy, who married Alexander Heidebaugh, of this township; and Amanda, who married Ulrich Shellerbarger, of Spring Garden township, where they now reside.

Zacharias T. Spangler was educated in the common schools of his native place and remained at home until he was in his twenty-fourth year, when he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania railroad as trackman at York, and between York and Wrightsville, and remained here for seven years. He was then made foreman of a division stationed at Littlestown, and remained there a few months, when, on account of bad health, he was forced to resign from his position. He then located in Springetsbury township, establishing his mercantile business, and has been successfully engaged in that line ever since. Mr. Spangler was made postmaster of the postoffice which he had induced the department to establish here, and named it Detrop. Mr. Spangler also follows farming in a small way.

Mr. Spangler has twice been called upon to fill the office of tax collector, and was clerk for three years. His wife and daughter are consistent members of the Lutheran Church. In 1871, he married Miss Amanda Welty, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Smeltzer) Welty. Mrs. Spangler was born in Springetsbury township, but was reared in Manchester township. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Z. T. Spangler, two of whom are deceased. Those living are: Annie Kate, who married Albert Lehman, of Helm, and has one child, Arthur E.; and Allen Clay, who lives at home. Without doubt Mr. Spangler is one of the most popular citizens of Springetsbury township, in which he has been, and still is, a useful public-spirited man of affairs.

STEPHEN BOYER MANIFOLD is the fortunate owner of the "Green Valley Farm," a fine place of 120 acres in East Hopewell township which includes some six or eight acres in timber. He was born there Oct. 20, 1846, and has always made his home on the place. This fine old homestead, which is well calculated to excite the envy of those who, from necessity, change dwelling-places every year, was settled by Mr. Manifold's grandfather in his young manhood.

Here John Manifold, father of Stephen B., was born in 1804. He grew up a farmer boy, and among his responsibilities was that of driving to York and Baltimore with farm produce and bringing back machinery and home supplies. Much of the country was as yet sparsely settled. He married Merenda Meads, who was born in Hopewell township but spent many years in Stewartstown, a daughter of Benedict Meads, whose wife was a Miles. After his marriage John Manifold acceded to the wish of his father to remain and take the homestead, the greater number of his brothers and sisters choosing to go West, and here he died in 1872. His wife died at the home of her son Miles, close to the old home, where she lived after the death of her husband. Both parents were strict Presbyterians, the father being an elder in the church for a number of years. In politics he was a Democrat, and he was a leader in public matters in his county, serving two terms in the State House of Representatives. When he was only twenty-one years of age he was first elected a justice of the peace, and he was always designated "Squire Manifold."

died in Hopewell township; John D., who died on his farm in East Hopewell township, married Margaret Gemmill; Archie T., a farmer of East Hopewell township, married Jennina Meads; Mary H. remained unmarried; Millie Ann married James G. Thompson, of York; Stephen B. is the subject proper of this sketch; Washington M., of York, married Jennie Irwin, deceased; and Susan B. became Mrs. Andrew Wallace, of Logan county, Ohio.

Stephen B. Manifold was educated in the township schools, which he continued to attend until eighteen years old, his principal teachers being Porter Gemmill and his brother W. H. Manifold, and a Mr. Bliss. He was reared to practical farming and as he grew up had excellent training in that direction. At the age of twenty-one he took charge of the home farm, and after the death of his father bought the place. It has been his aim to improve the old farm constantly, and he has added many substantial buildings which are utilized in the various industries carried on there—farming, dairying and tobacco raising. The first family home was built by the grandfather from the logs he chopped in the forest, and this part of the residence is still stanch and strong. The father built on the frame additions, and it now stands a comfortable, commodious residence.

Mr. Manifold was married Jan. 24, 1878, by Rev. J. M. McGaughey, the Presbyterian pastor, to Miss Sarah E. Wiley, who was born in Fawn township, on the Wiley farm, Sept. 29, 1850. The parents of Mrs. Manifold were Samuel P. and Elinor (Anderson) Wiley, the former of whom was born on the old Wiley homestead in Fawn township and passed all his life there as a farmer. Mr. Wiley was a well known and highly esteemed man, one of the pillars in the Center Presbyterian Church, in which he was elected an elder, May 14, 1859, and was ordained June 11, 1859. He did not enjoy this prominence long, as he died Oct. 14, 1859. For years he was treasurer of the church. The mother of Mrs. Manifold is seventy-eight years of age, but time has touched her so lightly that she might easily be taken for a woman scarcely in middle life. Her two children are: Sarah E., Mrs. Manifold, and John C., who is a farmer in Fawn township, and who married Louisa Ann Strawbridge.

James Wiley, the grandfather of Mrs. Manifold, lived and died on his farm in Fawn township. He married Sarah Duncan and they had these children: John L., who died in Fawn township, married Mary Kilgore; James, who married Sarah Ann Wiley, of Chester county, later started to move to Peoria, Ill., but when on the boat on the Mississippi river he was attacked with cholera and died just before a landing was made (his youngest brother, Samuel P., went to Peoria, and brought his body and family back to the old home); Mary Ann, who married Mathew Kilgore, died in Fawn township; Thomas married Isabella O. Irwin, a farmer and miller in Fawn township, where he lived and died; Sarah Jane, who was the wife of Samuel Reed, died in Chanceford township; Samuel P. was the father of Mrs. Manifold.

The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Manifold: Ella May, born Dec. 20, 1878, married W. H. Gemmill on April 15, 1897, and they have two children, Wilma and Robert; Clarence Wiley, was born April 16, 1881; Nora Belle, born March 26, 1883, died May 25, 1885; Anna Mary was born Oct. 15, 1886; Stephen Chester, born Oct. 20, 1889, died March 18, 1891; Helen Olevia was born Sept. 14, 1893.

Mr. Manifold has always been a stanch Democrat. He has frequently been called upon to serve in official positions, and for a number of years has been school director, his advice being generally asked before any important move is made in the township school management. He is one of the leading members of the Hopewell Presbyterian Church, of which he has been a trustee for six years.

CHARLES L. EYSTER, who is engaged in farming in Jackson township, York county, was born July 6, 1866, son of George A. and Sarah (Harbold) Eyster.

Adam Eyster, his great-grandfather, was a life-long resident of York county, and followed farming in West Manchester township. To him and his wife were born children: Jacob, Peter, Adam, Michael, and Eve, who is the mother of Dr. Zeigler, of York. The family were Lutherans.

Jacob Eyster, the grandfather of Charles L., married Rebecca Sellers, and they were both natives of York county. They had these children: John, Israel, Henry, Peter, George, Anna, Caroline and Adam. Jacob Eyster died when a comparatively young man, but his wife lived to 1885, reaching the age of eighty-three years.

George A. Eyster, in 1865, married Sarah Harbold, daughter of John Harbold, a native of York county, and he now resides in Jackson township, where he owns and successfully cultivates a small farm. In religious belief he is a Lutheran. Mr. Eyster is a stanch Democrat, and he held the office of supervisor one term, also serving in minor township offices.

Charles L. Eyster is the only child of his parents. He remained home until twenty-two years of age, working on the home farm and receiving his education in the common schools of the township. Mr. Eyster has always rented farm property and he is now capably operating his father-in-law's farm. On Dec. 2, 1888, he married Emma J. Whitman, daughter of Daniel Whitman, and two children have been born to this union, Harry E. and George D. The family are consistent members of the Lutheran Church, of which they are liberal supporters. In politics Mr. Eyster is a Democrat, and he is serving as a member of the school board. He and his wife are among the highly respected residents of their locality, and representatives of substantial York county families.

FRANK G. YINGER, who is living retired on his farm in the borough of Manchester, was born in 1849, son of John and grandson of Paul Yinger.

The great-grandfather of Frank G. Yinger came to York county and settled in Newberrytown, where his son Paul was born. Paul learned the blacksmith's trade and went to Manchester, now Manchester borough, where he followed his trade for about twenty years, living retired for about fifteen years prior to his death, at the age of eighty-two years. He married Christiana Snyder, of Lancaster county, and the children born to them were: Elizabeth, who died in Ohio; Anna Maria, who died in Iowa; Paul, who died at Columbia, Lancaster county; George, who died in York; Jacob, living in York; John, the father of our subject; Samuel, living in Manchester borough and Daniel, who resides in Lancaster county.

John Yinger learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for about thirty-five years. He located at Manchester borough, where he built a fine brick house, which our subject now owns and occupies. Ten years prior to his death, John Yinger lived a retired life, and he died in 1894, his wife passing away in 1893. Both were buried in the Lutheran cemetery at Manchester borough. In politics Mr. Yinger was a Republican. He married Annie Good, who was the daughter of Henry Good, of Lancaster county, and the children born to them were: Frank G.; Emma married Frank Heistand and lives at Spring Grove; Charles married Tillie Eyster, and lives at Mt. Wolf; Henry married Eliza Fell, and resides in York; Benjamin married a Bremann, and is an engineer at Emigsville; Amanda Diehl lives at Mt. Wolf.

Mr. Yinger attended the schools of Manchester borough until eighteen years of age when, under his father, he learned the blacksmith's trade and opened a shop at Mt. Wolf. Later he sold this shop to his brother Charles, and bought the old home in Manchester borough. For a short time Mr. Yinger carried on cider making, but the building which he used for that purpose burned down in 1904, and has not since been rebuilt. Mr. Yinger retired from active life in 1904.

Mr. Yinger married Catherine Shriver, who died in 1887. One child was born to this union, Laura, who married Jacob Everhart, and lives at home. Mr. Yinger is prominently identified with the Republican party, having served as councilman of the borough nine times. He is a man of the highest type, and has many stanch friends throughout York county.

GEORGE S. ANDERSON. Among the prominent citizens of Rossville, Warrington township, York county, may be mentioned George S. Anderson, a retired farmer, who was formerly a dealer in leather and hides, and who is a survivor of the great Civil War. Mr. Anderson was born March 20, 1837, in Middletown, Dauphin county, son of James N. and Rebecca (Schull) Anderson.

James N. Anderson was born in York county in 1808, about one mile from Andersontown. Monaghan township, and after his education was completed he learned the tanner's and currier's trade, which calling he followed all of his life. He died Dec. 9, 1893, and Rebecca Schull, his first wife, died in 1837, the mother of: George S., William S., and America S. Mr. Anderson's second marriage was to Mary Sanderson. He was a member of the Church of God. In politics he was first a Whig, later joining the ranks of the Republican party.

George S. Anderson received his education in the schools of Monaghan and Warrington townships, and worked in the tannery with his father until the Civil War broke out. He enlisted Aug. 27, 1861, in Company H, 87th P. V. I., Sixth Army Corps, First Brigade, Third Division, Army of the Potomac, under Col. Hay, and later under Col. Shaw, and Captains Harmon and Gensler. Mr. Anderson was captured and made a prisoner June 15, 1863, at Winchester, Va., and was paroled after being confined eight weeks at Belle Island, Richmond, Va. Mr. Anderson was a participant in all the battles in which his company and regiment engaged, and has an honorable army record, being honorably discharged October 13, 1864, at York.

After the war Mr. Anderson returned to his home and engaged in tanning leather in company with his brother, William S., but was compelled to abandon this calling on account of his ill health, brought on by injuries received during his army service. He then engaged in farming, but was compelled to abandon this also, his state of health not allowing him to do any hard labor. He moved to Rosstown in 1874, since then making that place his home.

George S. Anderson married in 1869, Miss Elizabeth B. Donges, and one child blessed this union, Mary D., who, in 1902, married Lewis Speck, and died the same year. In religion Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are members of the Lutheran Church of Rossville. In his political sympathies Mr. Anderson is a Republican, and has served as township auditor and assessor.

WILLIAM HAGARMAN. A prominent contractor and plasterer, now devoting the major portion of his time to the latter business, lives on the Berlin road, in Jackson township. He was born Feb. 22, 1840, in Adams county, son of George and Catherine (Sauerbeer) Hagarman. Nothing is known of the grandparents except that they had children as follows: Thomas; George; Cecelia, who married the hero of Gettysburg, John L. Burns; and Andrew.

George Hagarman was born in Adams county and there grew to manhood. As a boy he was bound out, and though during this time he received only limited educational advantages he showed himself a man of more than ordinary ability, through perseverance acquiring a good education and becoming an instructor of much note in those days, teaching school for forty-five consecutive winter terms. He owned a farm of about forty acres which he operated during the summer months. Mr. Hagarman was a Republican, and was appointed justice of the peace. During the Civil war he was commissioned enrolling officer. He and his wife were the parents of fourteen children, ten of whom grew to maturity: Nathaniel, George W., Franklin, Hezekiah, William, Thomas, Mary, John, Joseph, and Catherine. The others were John and Daniel, and two who died in infancy. The family were all Catholics.

William Hagarman was born in Mt. Pleasant township, Adams county, where he received his education and grew to manhood. At the age of nineteen he commenced to learn the plastering trade, and after serving his apprenticeship went to Virginia in the spring of 1861, and was caught there at the opening of the Civil war. Though a Northern sympathizer he could not escape, being pressed into service in the Southern army as a teamster. After serving five days he was arrested as a Northern spy and court-martialed, and, after being confined thirty-four days was given a pass through the lines and took a friendly leave across the Potomac. He served the United States government as a teamster in the Union army for nine months, at that time returning to York, and engaging at his trade at which he has since continued. Mr. Hagarman has been employed by some of the best contractors in the State, such as Nathaniel Weigh, Gilbert & Co., Eli Hellinger, Jacob Crist, Jacob Sechrist & Sons, and others. He owns a pleasant home and about ten acres of land about five miles west of York, on the Berlin road.

Mr. Hagarman has been thrice married, his first wife being Margaretta Miller, daughter of Henry Miller. Nine children were born to them: William, Ambrose, Joseph, Charles, Mary, and four who died in infancy. Mrs. Margaretta (Miller) Hagarman died aged thirty-six years, and Mr. Hagarman married Mary Gallagher, daughter of William Gallagher. Five children were born to them, namely: Jennie, Rosie, Margaret, George and Cecelia. Mrs. Mary (Gallagher) Hagarman died in 1889, aged thirty-two years. Mr. Hagarman’s third wife was Mrs. Priscilla Crist, widow of Henry Crist.

Mr. Hagarman is a Democrat, was a justice of the peace for one term, and was also township auditor. In religion he is a Catholic. He is a reliable man and upright citizen, and is held in very high esteem.

JEREMIAH D. HESS, a worthy representative of the agricultural interests of York county, is the owner of a fine farm of 202 acres, located on the road between Dallastown and Paradise, in York township. He was born in Springfield township, Nov. 14, 1842, son of Peter and grandson of Henry Hess.

Henry Hess was born in Springfield township, and there was reared to manhood, his entire life being passed in that vicinity engaged in farming. He married Barbara Goodling, of York county, and both rest in the cemetery, the churchyard of Salem church, at Paradise. Their children were: Peter is mentioned further on; Samuel and Henry died in Springfield township; John died in York township; Elizabeth became the wife of Joseph Hildebrand, and her death occurred on the old homestead of her parents, in Springfield township; Christiana became the wife of Abraham Snyder, and died at Loganville; Marian, the widow of George Messersmith, died in Codorus township, in March, 1904; Lydia, the wife of Daniel Hess, died in York township; and Sarah is the wife of Jeremiah Bupp, of Springfield township.

Peter Hess, son of Henry and father of Jeremiah D., was born on the old homestead farm in Springfield township, and there he was reared to manhood, receiving such educational advantages as were afforded in the common schools. He was associated in the work of the home farm until the time of his marriage, after which he was engaged in farming on his own responsibility in Springfield township, whence he finally removed to York township, purchasing what was known as the Leber farm, of two hundred and four acres—the place now owned and occupied by our subject—and here he continued to be successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits until he was summoned from the scene of life’s endeavors, his death occurring in 1874. He was a Republican in politics, and both he and his wife were faithful and valued members of Salem Church, at Paradise, in whose cemetery the remains of both now rest. Peter Hess was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Day, who was born and reared in York township, daughter of Philip Day, a representative of one of the sterling pioneer families of York county. Their children were: Jeremiah D.; Amanda, widow of Joshua Leber, resides in Dallastown; Oliver married Abbie Hartman, and they reside in Paradise township; Sarah is the wife of Peter Shearer; and Ellen is the wife of Adam Shearer, of York.

Jeremiah D. Hess passed his youthful years on the homestead farm in Springfield township, and his educational discipline was secured in the township schools, which he continued to attend until he was nineteen years of age. Thereafter he continued to be associated with his father in the work and management of the farm until his marriage, in 1869, shortly after which important event in his career he began farming on his own account in the same township, where he remained two years. At the expiration of that time he came to his present farm, which his father had purchased several years before. Upon the death of his father he bought the interests of the other heirs, and has since given his attention to the supervision of his fine landed estate, which now comprises two hundred and two acres, as he sold off two acres to be used for residence purposes. The soil is fertile, and has been wisely cared for, while the permanent improvements consist of new and modern buildings. Mr. Hess is recognized as a progressive and up-to-date farmer. He is an advocate of Republican principles, and both he and his wife are valued members of the Lutheran Church at Paradise.

In 1869 Mr. Hess was married to Miss Emeline Shearer, who was born and reared in Springfield township, a daughter of Solomon and Rebecca (Goodling) Shearer, the former of whom died in York township, and is buried in the cemetery at Paradise, while his wife still survives him, maintaining her home in Springfield township. Mr. and Mrs. Hess have six children, namely: Eli, who married Miss Annie Inners, is a cigarmaker by trade and resides in Rye. York township; Pious, remaining at the parental home and associated in the work of the farm, is also a merchant at Rye; Adam, who likewise remains at home, married Miss Hattie Hess; Oliver Allen, who married Miss Agnes Reichard, resides in York.
twpshire, a cigarmaker by vocation; Rebecca is the wife of Tempest Ness, of York township; and Solomon Peter is identified with the work of the homestead farm.

GEORGE MANN. Among the strong business firms of York, Pa., may be numbered that composed of George Mann, Youra H. Fleck and Seth D. Jones, and carrying on an extensive business in cut stone contracting, they handling large blocks of granite suitable for the base of monuments, curbing; etc. They are the leading contractors of York, and their field of operations extends throughout this city and neighboring towns and cities. The yards are conveniently situated in West York, adjacent to the N. C. railroad, with siding connection, and are well-equipped with all machinery and appliances necessary for the proper conduct of their line of work, including a fine steam plant, with a series of gang saws, where stone is sawed out and prepared for trimming all kinds of buildings, and a series of derricks for handling, loading and unloading on cars, constructed on the latest and most approved plans, capable of hoisting and lowering blocks weighing fifteen tons.

George Mann, senior member of the firm, was born in the city of York, April 14, 1864, son of Anthony and Dorothy (Baine) Mann. When only thirteen years of age, Mr. Mann left the public schools, and for one and one-half years worked on a farm, and for three years more was engaged in truck farming. This long period at farming was broken by one season's work, when he was eighteen, as mason and brick layer. In February, 1883, he began stone cutting with John Roder, remaining with him until the latter's death—a period of about one year and seven months. Mr. Mann followed this trade ten years. In January, 1893, he associated himself with his present partners, under the firm style of Mann & Co., meeting with marked success from the start.

In 1888 Mr. Mann married Miss Rosine Munchel, of York, born June 1, 1864, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Elsesser) Munchel, and the following children have been born to them: Agnes E., born March 3, 1890; George A., born Dec. 4, 1891; Lawrence A., born Nov. 9, 1893; John H., born Sept. 8, 1895; Mary B., born Oct. 28, 1900; Rosalie C., born July 27, 1902, died Jan. 16, 1905; Elizabeth B., born June 26, 1904; and Anna M., born Sept. 27, 1905.

Fraternally Mr. Mann is a member of the Knights of Columbus. Both he and his wife are consistent members of St. Mary's Catholic Church. As a business man Mr. Mann has gained and retains an enviable reputation for probity and uprightness, and has many warm personal friends not only in York, but throughout the county.

Anthony Mann, father of George, emigrated from Germany in 1846, landing in Baltimore, Md., after a long voyage in a sailing vessel. He was a carpenter by trade, and came to York in 1853, purchasing a small piece of ground on South George street, in the Eighth ward. Mr. Mann found employment in the car shops. He died at the age of sixty-seven. In 1853, in Baltimore, he married Dorothy Baine, who came to America from Germany in 1851. She still makes her home in York, now being past seventy-two years of age. Their children were: Anthony, Margaret, Frank, Anna, John, George, Joseph, John (2), Mary, Barbara and Katie.

JOHN A. BISKER, farmer, residing in East Hopewell township, was born at the Grove Mill place, Jan. 13, 1857, and has passed all of his life in that township.

Henry Bisker, grandfather of John A., was born in Prussia, Germany, and lived in Codorus township, York county, where he engaged in farming and died at the home of his son, Andrew, in East Hopewell township.

John H. Bisker, our subject's father, was also born in Prussia, Germany, and came to the United States when a boy, with his parents, who landed at Baltimore, whence they came to Codorus township, locating on a farm. He learned the blacksmith's trade, and removed to East Hopewell township, where he rented a shop at Grove's Mill. There he married Elizabeth Bowman, of East Hopewell township. He followed his trade until his removal to Baltimore, where he worked on public works at Sparrow's Point, and later returned to East Hopewell township, living with our subject for some time, Mrs. Bisker having died some time before. Mr. Bisker married (second) Lizzie Kauffman, of Yoe, and for the last three years has been making his home in Dallastown. He was a soldier in Company B, 130th P. V. I., and participated in many of the largest battles of the war, among which may be mentioned the battle of Antietam. He is a member of the Methodist Church. Up to a few years ago he was a Democrat, but since that time has been in sympathy with the Republican party. He had these children: John A.; Maggie, Mrs. Strong Hollingshed, of Baltimore Co., Md.; James, of East Hopewell township, who married Miss Agnes Honigau; Henry, of Yoe, who married Miss Annie A. Slenker; and Martin F. L., of Red Lion, who married Annie Ichard.

John A. Bisker was educated in the public schools, but had poor chances for a good education, having to work upon the farm when he grew old enough. He also helped his father at blacksmithing when he was sixteen years old, and learned the trade, which he followed several years, until his health failed, since which time he has not followed that occupation so steadily. He worked for his father until his marriage and then purchased a piece of land and a shop from his father at Delf, East Hopewell township, where he built up a fine trade. Here he also erected a fine home. When his health failed, he decided to sell, and disposing of his property to E. L. Grove, he located on his present 'ace, which he rented for three years, at the end of which time he purchased it. He carries on general farming, also raises tobacco, his ninety-two acres being in a fine state of cultivation. Mr. Bisker was reared in the faith of the M. E. Church, and attends at Prospect. He has always been a Democrat.

Mr. Bisker married, June 5, 1884, Miss Mary M. Runkle, a native of Chanceford township, and a daughter of Charles and Sarah Runkle, both deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Bisker have been born: Harry L., Lizzie, John, Martha, Robert, Joseph, Mabel and Clarence, all at home.

LUTHER E. LANDIS, an enterprising farmer of Manchester township, York county, is the inventor of the Farmer's Friend Plow, a device rightly named, which has brought him not only money but fame. Mr. Landis was born Oct. 6, 1865, in West Manchester township, son of Jacob B. and Susanna (Gross) Landis.

Christian Landis, grandfather of our subject, was born in York county, along Codorus Creek, and followed farming in West Manchester township, where he died, and his remains are buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. He married a Miss Bixler, and their children were: Alexander, who died in Windsor township; Michael, who died in York township; Jacob B.; William, who died in York; Andrew, who lives in York; and George and Reuben, who both died in York.

Jacob B. Landis was born in West Manchester township, and remained at home until his marriage to Susanna Gross. After that event he located in West Manchester township, at his father's old home. Here he remained for eight years, afterward going to Hellam township, but after two years returned to the old home. He spent fourteen years there, and then settled on Michael Gross' farm, in Manchester township, near Manchester borough, remaining there four years, at the end of that time removing to Springettsbury township, where he died in 1888. He is buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. His wife died in York in 1908, and is buried beside her husband. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Landis were: Christian; George; Sarah, who married Adam Spotts, and they are both deceased, being interred at Green Mount cemetery; Lucinda; Emma, who married Jacob Miller and lives in Conewago township; Jacob A., who married Anna Forry, and lives in Springettsbury township; Aaron; Susan, who married Cyrus Musser, and died at Stony Brook, being buried there; Oscar F., who married Lizzie Fays, and lives in Windsor township; Bernard, who married Lizzie Reeser, and lives in West York borough, where he is chief burgess; Luther E.; Flora R., who married Joseph Loucks, and lives in York; Edward, who married Rebecca Ness, and lives in Springfield township; Wilson H.; and Clayton M., who married Lillie Frey, and lives in Springfield township.

Luther E. Landis received his preliminary education in the township schools and supplemented this with a course at the York County Normal school. He worked with his father at farming, remaining at home until, in the year of 1886, he married Mary E. Burg, born in Hellam township, daughter of C. C. and Mary (Houser) Burg. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Landis located in Springettsbury township, where they remained two years, and after spending a year in Hellam township, they settled in Springfield township, where they spent eight years. They finally located in Manchester township, where Mr. Landis purchased the George H. Buck farm of 75 acres and 118 perches. He is also interested in the culture of plants and flowers.

Mr. Landis is the inventor of the Farmer's Friend Plow, receiving his patent in November, 1903. It is attached to the plow beam in front and can be operated without touching the handles. It is a very ingenious device which will, no doubt, become something that the up-to-date, well-informed farmer cannot afford to be without. His brother, E. M. Landis, is greatly interested in the device.

Mr. and Mrs. Landis are the parents of the following children: Blanche M.; Martha M.; Alfred H., who died at the age of twelve years and six months; Elmer Luther; Mary Ann; Sarah Rebecca; Florence May; Nettie I.; Christopher C.; Esther M.; Matilda E., and Philip William, at home.

Mr. Landis casts his ballot in support of the Democratic party, but has never been active in party work. Mr. Landis has been connected with the Mennonite Church since 1892, and is one of its valued members.

WILLIAM W. GINGRICH, who conducts a general merchandise store at the Glades, Springetsbury township, York county, is a native of that township, born Aug. 23, 1862, son of Jacob and Catharine (Kauffman) Gingrich.

Jacob Gingrich, grandfather of William W., married Betsey Holder, and they lived to a ripe old age. They were members of the Lutheran Church.

Jacob Gingrich, father of William W., was born in Springetsbury township, then Spring Garden, Aug. 18, 1815, and died March 31, 1886. He was a carpenter by trade, but followed farming nearly all of his life. He married Catharine Kauffman, born June 27, 1825, daughter of Jacob and Polly (Brillinger) Kauffman. Jacob Kauffman came from Lancaster county and married, afterward engaging in farming. He was the possessor of a fine farm and lived to be nearly seventy years old. His wife was sixty-three years of age at the time of her death. They were the parents of fourteen children: John, Solomon, Jacob, Daniel, Henry, Samuel, Peter, Zachariah, George, Adam, Catherine, Eliza and two that died in infancy unmamed.

To Jacob and Catherine Gingrich these children were born: Susan married Samuel Seiple, of Springetsbury township; Mary married Henry Dellinger, of York; Sarah married Charles Eisenhart, of York; Elizabeth married Milton Shamberger, of York; Daniel is a carpenter at Indianapolis, Ind.; Jacob resides in McDonough Co., Ills.; Michael is a laborer in York; Eliza married Miles Garbrick of Springetsbury township; Catharine married Daniel Kennedy, of Springet; Amanda, married H. Cann, of Springetsbury township; William W.: Ellen married Robert Morrow, deceased; Franklin is a cigar maker of York; and Malinda died in infancy.

William W. Gingrich was reared on the home farm and attended the schools of the township. At the age of sixteen he started out in life for himself, working for a while at various occupations. He then learned the cigar making trade, at which he was employed for some eight years, two years of this time being spent in Indiana and Illinois. After his return to Pennsylvania, he learned the carpenter's trade and followed this for three years, when he again engaged in cigar making. This he followed until 1893 when he embarked in the mercantile business, which he has since continued with remarkable success. He carries a full line of general merchandise, and is considered one of the substantial business men of the township.

On April 8, 1888, Mr. Gingrich married Miss Annie E. Jacoby, daughter of Daniel and Susan Jacoby. They have an adopted daughter, Alverta. In religion they are members of the Lutheran Church, and are among the liberal supporters of that religious organization. Mr. Gingrich is a Republican in politics, but has always refused to hold public office. During his many years of business life in this locality, Mr. Gingrich has attracted to him the esteem of his fellow citizens, partly on account of his honest business dealing, and partly because of his pleasant, genial personality.

JOHN THOMAS GEMMILL, residing on his fine farm farm of 115 acres in East Hopewell township, was born Jan. 13, 1846, on the farm upon which he now resides. His home was erected by his grandfather, Major Robert Gemmill, and the farm has been in the possession of the family ever since, with the exception of a few years, when it was owned by Trout & Coulter, to whom it had been sold by the heirs of our subject's father. Mr. Gemmill purchased it from these gentlemen in 1875, and has resided on it ever since.

Thomas Gemmill, father of John Thomas, was born on this farm July 26, 1869, and his death occurred Dec. 3, 1848, when our subject was two years old. On Nov. 30, 1837, he married Miss Mary A. Caldwell, born April 8, 1816, in Chanceford township, and they had these children: Sarah, born Sept. 24, 1838, married John C. Liggett, and died in this township; Robert, born Feb. 28, 1840, died in infancy; William C., born April 9, 1842, died in the West; Margaret J., born March 21, 1844, married John D. Manifold, and died in York; John Thomas, our subject; and Alexander R., deceased.

On the death of his father, our subject being but two years old, was taken to the home of his aunt, Mrs. Margaret Wallace, who lived in East Hopewell township. This good woman also adopted our subject’s two sisters, Sarah and Margaret. Mr. Gemmill was given the usual winter term education at the township schools, which he attended until eighteen years old. His mother had gone West, on the death of his father, taking the infant son, Alexander R. Mrs. Gemmill died in Ohio, where her youngest son grew to manhood and married Miss Ann Duncan, daughter of Andrew Duncan, of Cross Roads. He returned to East Hopewell township, after having grown to manhood, and lived for a time at Mark Saylor’s hotel, and he died at Winterstown.

John T. Gemmill remained with his aunt until grown to manhood. He was married Dec. 6, 1877, to Miss Martha Ellen Gemmill, born in East Hopewell township, July 30, 1857, daughter of Thomas and Maria Ann (Bell) Gemmill, both of whom are deceased. After marriage Mr. Gemmill settled on his present place, which he had purchased two years before, and where he has successfully been engaged ever since in general farming and tobacco raising. To Mr. and Mrs. Gemmill have been born: Andrew Thomas, at home; and James Monteville, who died in infancy.

JACOB DIEHL. One of the landmarks of Springettsbury township was the Diehl mill, which was the first one built on the Codorus and which until 1900 stood on the site of the present Hively mill. It was built by John Adam Diehl, the first of the family to come to America, and descended from father to son for a number of generations. So closely was it associated with the family name that even the new mill is often called by the old appellation.

(I) John Adam Diehl came from Germany in an early day and purchased 360 acres of land on the Little Codorus Creek, previously owned by the government. There he built the mill and made his home for the rest of his life.

(II) Peter Diehl, son of John A., inherited the mill, and it was rebuilt by him.

(III) Jacob Diehl, one of the several sons of Peter, was the next owner. He and his brother Nicholas bought the estate left by their father from the other heirs. Jacob’s part included the mill, and he also owned four still houses and several good farms. The land for the county almshouse was a part of his property, and was purchased from him. He was one of the progressive men of the county, and one who was thoroughly alive to its interests. In his family of six there were two sons, and the mill descended to the younger, Daniel.

(IV) Charles Diehl, elder son of Jacob, gave his entire attention to farming and owned over 200 acres. In political bias he was a lifelong Democrat. He married Miss Leah Lutman, daughter of John Lutman, and they had a family of eleven children, as follows: Lucinda, Mrs. John Rutter; John, deceased; Susan, who married the late Henry Miller; Anna Mary, Mrs. George Rutter; Jacob; Amanda, wife of the late Emanuel Bear; Alfred, of Decatur, III.; Charles, of Illinois; Samuel, deceased; Edmund, a resident of Oklahoma; and Rachel, deceased wife of George Matthews. Charles Diehl and his wife were both members of the Lutheran Church of York.

(V) Jacob Diehl was born March 13, 1832, and was reared on the farm, attending the public schools. He remained at home till he was twenty-five years of age, and then began farming on his own account on one of his father’s farms. This occupied his whole attention till 1897, when he retired from active work. A strong Democrat, Mr. Diehl has always been one of the best workers for his party, and has served as a delegate to various conventions, and been a member of the county committee on several occasions. He has filled a number of township offices including those of director of the poor and treasurer, and is recognized as one of the most reliable, efficient and influential men of his party. Twice married, Mr. Diehl was first united to Miss Magdaline Dietz, daughter of Jacob Dietz, of Springettsbury township. They were the parents of five children: (1) Jacob L. was employed in the mill for eight years, but is now engaged in farming at Pleasantville, where he owns some good land. He married Miss Mary Ellen Inners, and has two children, Jacob M. and Wilbert A. (2) Ada Agnes married Albert Cunningham. (3) Alfred N. is a cigar manufacturer at Pleasantville. (4) Edmund D. is a decorator, with the firm of Watt & Bro. of York. (5) Martha Ann married Henry Billett, of Hanover. Jacob Diehl married (second) Miss Sarah C. Runkle, also deceased. Mr. Diehl is a member of the Lutheran Church.

(VI) Alfred N. Diehl, born Oct. 24, 1862, was educated in the public schools and remained with his father till he was twenty-one. He then began in his present occupation of cigar making at Springet. He employs from five to seven people, puts out annually fifty cases of cigars, of medium grade, and gives his entire attention to this business. He was married to Miss Annie Shepp, daughter of William Shepp, of Springetebury township, and they have had fourteen children: Elmer, Minnie, Charles, William, Francis, Daisy, Stewart, Sallie, Lester, Mary, Viola and three who died in childhood.

GEORGE A. FARCHT, a prominent business man of York, who is at present yardmaster at York for the Northern Central railroad, was born in Manchester borough, Manchester township, York county, Jan. 4. 1803, son of John and Leah (Ramsey) Farcht, and grandson of Christian and Polly (Schwartz) Farcht.

Christian Farcht was born in York township, where he received his schooling, later learning the carpenter's trade, which he followed until his death in 1857, at the age of sixty-six years, being buried at Roller's school house, Conewago township. He married Polly Schwartz, and their children were: John; Lydia, born in York township, died in 1840, and was buried at Quickel's Church; Catherine, born in Dover township, died in 1891, and was buried at Roller's school house; and Henry, born in Dover township, died in 1900, and was buried in Manchester borough.

John Farcht was born in York township, Dec. 22, 1827, and when six years old was brought by his parents to Dover township, where he attended the common schools until eighteen years of age. He then went to Conewago township, and later to Manchester township, where he worked on different farms until twenty-eight years old. On Aug. 5, 1855, he married Leah Ramsey, born March 6, 1832, daughter of John and Sarah (Haines) Ramsey, the former of whom was a miller in Newberry township. After his marriage John Farcht went to work for the Northern Central railroad, remaining with that company until 1862, when he enlisted in Company A, 166th P. V. I., to serve nine months, and then returned home, re-enlisting in 1864. He was captured by the Confederates and taken to Libby Prison for sixteen days, and to High Point for two days, later to Salisbury, where he remained until March 1, 1865. Mr. Farcht, although never engaging in any serious conflict, had a great deal of skirmish work to do, and was also ordered to do a great deal of picket duty. After his discharge from the army he returned to Manchester borough, and again worked for the Northern Central Railroad, continuing in their service thirty-one years. He was pensioned by that company in 1901, since which time he has lived retired in Manchester borough. The children born to John and Leah Farcht were as follows: William Henry, born April 4, 1856, married Tilda Brosch, and lives in Columbia, Pa.; John Wesley, born May 28, 1858, married Hattie Heimle, and lives in York; Leah, born June 28, 1860, married Edward Doll, and lives in York; Joseph, born May 13, 1865, married Anna Kunkle, lives in Manchester borough; Mary Alice, born March 29, 1871, married Edward Brown, and lives in Manchester borough; Edward, born Oct. 19, 1873, lives in Baltimore; Susan Charlotte, born Dec. 13, 1876, died Dec. 20, 1876; and George A.

George A. Farcht received a common school education in Manchester township, where he remained until sixteen years old, at that time finding employment on a farm in the same county for one year. At the age of seventeen years he went to Lancaster county, and worked as a farm hand, then returning to Manchester township, and working on a farm until twenty years old. At that age he began railroading for the Northern Central Railroad, in which company's service he has since remained. He started as a brakeman, a position he held for eight years; was then made a conductor, occupying this position for twelve years; and in 1903 was made yardmaster of the Northern Central Railroad, at York.
In 1881 Mr. Facht and Miss Mary L. Hinkle were united in marriage. Mrs. Facht is a daughter of Asher and Angeline (Koughenour) Hinkle, and to this union has been born one child, William H., born Sept. 21, 1882, living at home. George A. Facht is a member of the Mystic Chain, York Castle No. 34; the Emigsville Mutual Relief Association and the Order of Railway Conductors. He and his estimable wife are consistent and devoted members of the Reformed Church of York, in the work of which both are very active. The family is a well known and highly respected one in York, and Mr. Facht is to be envied for his reputation as a man of honor and integrity.

EDWIN C. EICHELBERGER, who has been a resident of York city for twenty-five years, is well known as a skilled mechanic, and has been in the service of his present employers, the widely known building and contracting firm of Oermann & Blaebaum, since 1884. He was born Jan. 22, 1852, in Heidelberg township, York county, son of Michael D. and Elizabeth (Hershey) Eichelberger. George Eichelberger, his grandfather, was an infant when his father died, and he grew up on the home owned by his great-grandfather, purchasing this farm when he became of age. In 1822 he married Sarah Diehl, and they reared a family of eight children. Mrs. Eichelberger died in 1863 in Hanover, while Mr. Eichelberger survived until 1869, when he passed away, aged sixty-nine years. Four of his children died before him, namely: Anna Maria, who died aged seventeen years; Sarah, who died at the age of fourteen years; George, deceased when nine years of age, and Michael D., the father of Edwin C., who passed away aged thirty-five years, in 1863, and was buried at Bears cemetery. The children of George Eichelberger who survived him were: Martin, born in 1823, married in 1844 Catherine Geiselman; Franklin, who married Louise Hershey, died in the upper part of Adams county, where he had reared a large family; Charles F., who married Susan Menges, died near Hanover, Pa.; Louise Catherine married William J. Young, a well-known grain elevator man of Hanover, where they reside.

Michael D. Eichelberger was born in Heidelberg township, and was a lifelong farmer. He married Elizabeth Hershey, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Strickhouse) Hershey, of Codorus township, and she died in 1897, leaving two boys: Henry G., a carpenter with Hench & Dromgold, who married Amanda Strickhouse; and Edwin C., our subject.

Edwin C. Eichelberger attended the common schools until he was nineteen years of age, and then learned the carpenter's trade with George Sheaffer, of North Codorus township, with whom he remained three years. He then located in York (1880), and was employed by Weiser Brothers for four years, at the end of that time engaging with his present employers, for whom he does most of the skilled work, turning, scroll work, etc. On April 2, 1906, he was promoted to foreman of the planing mill.

In 1872 Mr. Eichelberger married Susan Strickhouse, daughter of Henry and Isabella (Zellers) Strickhouse, and to this union have been born: Grace, now the wife of Clifford Drenning, of Baltimore; Harry L., who is deceased; Percy, who died in infancy; and Willard M., a clerk.

In politics Mr. Eichelberger is a Democrat, and he served the terms of 1890-1900-1901 under Mayors Gise and Gibson as city assessor. He is a member of Grace Reformed Church. Mr. and Mrs. Eichelberger reside at their pleasant home, No. 316 North Newberry street, York, where their many friends are always sure of a hearty welcome.

JOHN C. TORBERT, who is residing on his well cultivated farm in East Hopewell township, was born in Fawn township, Dec. 6, 1854.

John Torbert, the father of our subject, was born in the West, and came to York county, where he engaged at his trade until the opening of the war, when he joined the 166th P. V. I., as a private, serving out his time. After the war he engaged in farming, and at this he continued until his death in Fawn township. He married Emma Miller, a native of New York State, and she died in Lower Chanceford township, having borne her husband ten children. After her death Mr. Torbert married (second) Mary Ann Burkholder, by whom he had nine children. Mr. Torbert married (third) Mary Martha Wayne, by whom he had two children. Eighteen of his twenty-one children attended Mr. Torbert's funeral.

John C. Torbert, our subject, had little chance for an education, attending in all only four months. His father being in the army during the Civil war, young Torbert was compelled to work on the farm, and at the age of sixteen years he left home and went to Williamsport, Pa., and worked in a sawmill for six months, at $2.50 per day. He then went to Baltimore, Md., and drove his team at the penitentiary for one year. Mr. Torbert next went to Woodbine, where he farmed William Inglefritz's farm for three years. There he married, and settled on a small farm, near Laurel, East Hopewell township. He built a home, and learned the mason's trade with James Stewart, of Chanceford township. This he followed until 1895, when he located on his present farm of eighty-four acres, which was formerly known as the old Henry Mitchell farm.

Mr. Torbert and his family are members of the Cross Roads M. E. Church. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and he served thirteen years as constable, was then out of office two years, at the end of which time he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Franklin Tyson, and in the spring of 1905 was again elected to serve three years.

Mr. Torbert married, in Hopewell township, in 1876, Miss Ellen E. Snyder, daughter of John and Agnes (Sentz) Snyder. Their surviving children are: Agnes, Mrs. Jacob Gardner; John H., at home; Lottie and Maggie.

TITUS S. WELSH, a blacksmith and mechanic of North Codorus township, was born in the house where he now resides, Oct. 26, 1862, son of William Welsh.

Abraham Welsh, his grandfather, married Mary McDate. He was a resident of Spring Grove, and was a shoemaker by trade, which he followed all of his life. Both he and his widow were buried at Lischy's Church in North Codorus township. They had these children: Maggie, George, Jane and William.

William Welsh was born in Spring Grove and received a common school education. He was at one time an engineer for the Northern Central Railroad, but was better known as a dealer in horses, engaging as such very extensively in Chester and Lancaster counties, and he is now living a retired life in the latter county. During the Civil war he served his country as a soldier and had a good record.

Titus S. Welsh's school days were spent in North Codorus township. At the age of seventeen years he began to learn the carpenter's trade, serving an apprenticeship of five years. He then served the township as constable for seven years, and also as assessor and township auditor. Mr. Welsh has followed the blacksmith's trade for sixteen years, and has a repair shop in connection, carrying on a very successful business. He also sells oils, cigars and tobacco. His place of business was at one time the location of a distillery, and is a very old and historic spot. He owns a farm of fifty-four acres, upon which he has made many improvements, making it one of the fine ones of the township. In June, 1905, he erected a fine new barn.

Mr. Welsh was married to Maggie Stambaugh, daughter of Ephraim and Catherine (Kessler) Stambaugh, of Spring Grove, and to this union one child has been born: Robert Emig P., who is attending school. Mr. Welsh is a stanch Republican. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he has served four years on the council. Fraternally he is a member of Mt. Olivet Lodge, No. 997, I. O. O. F., of Spring Grove, in which he has passed all of the chairs and is a trustee, and of the Grange, No. 810, of Hanover, and he has been a delegate to different conventions.

CONRAD BRODBECK, engaged in farming and milling in North Codorus township, was born in that township, in November, 1859, son of Daniel Brodbeck and grandson of George Brodbeck, the family being among the earliest of the township.

George Brodbeck was born in North Codorus township and there engaged in farming until his death. He had these children: George, Jacob, Andrew, Jesse, Elizabeth, Mary and Daniel.

Daniel Brodbeck was born in North Codorus township, where he received a common-school education. He owned two farms in the township, one of 175 acres, and one of sixty acres. His death occurred at Jefferson borough, when he was aged forty-eight years. He married Malinda Myers, who still survives, living in Hanover, and they had these children: Ellen, the widow of John Baker; Conrad; and Maggie, the widow of George W. Miller, of Abbottstown, Adams Co., Pennsylvania.

Conrad Brodbeck attended the schools of Jefferson borough. He married Jane Strickhouser, who was the daughter of Henry Strickhouser, of North Codorus township, and after marriage located at Jefferson borough for one year. In 1883 Mr. Brodbeck purchased his father-in-law's farm of 100 acres, upon which he erected new buildings and made many improvements. In 1897, Mr. Brodbeck erected a modern mill, and since that time has been engaged in the milling business, owning a fine gasoline engine, which he uses when the water is low. He also engages in threshing.

Mr. and Mrs. Brodbeck have two children: Paul, who married Miss Werner, and farms in North Codorus township; and Williard, who resides at home. In politics Mr. Brodbeck is a Democrat. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he has been deacon and elder.

CHARLES H. DIETZ belongs to one of the old and honored families of York county, where his grandfather, Peter Dietz, lived and died.

Charles H. Dietz was the son of Jacob, and was born on his father's farm in Hellam township, April 24, 1874. He was educated in the public schools and reared to farm life, but when he was fifteen he left home and began clerking in Crumling's store in Hellam, where he worked about two years. He then spent two years in business for himself at cigar making, in Delroy, York county, next spent a year raising tobacco and after that returned to cigar making, this time in Windsor township. From there he removed to York, and soon after, in 1898, came to Pleasantville, where he has since remained. While continuing the manufacture of cigars, he is mainly interested in his barber shop, which he opened on his arrival in Pleasantville. He is a competent workman, owns a good property and is succeeding well. In his political views Mr. Dietz is a strong Democrat, and always has been active in politics, serving often as a member of the county committee. In the fall of 1903 he was elected justice of the peace for five years, and he is discharging the duties of that office with great efficiency.

On May 9, 1895, Mr. Dietz was married to Miss Annie Paules, daughter of Reuben Paules, and four children have been born to them, one of whom, Evelyn, is deceased. The others are: Penrose C., Myrtle M. and Viola. Mr. and Mrs. Dietz are members of the Reformed Church, and the former belongs to the Pleasantville Relief Association.

ALBERT F. BRILLHART. Among the important industrial enterprises of York county is that conducted under the name of the Dallas Cigar Co., and of the same Mr. Brillhart is an interested principal. The company operate two well-equipped cigar factories, one in Dallastown and the other in Windsorville, and the annual output reaches a large aggregate. The subject of this review is a progressive and able business man, and is known and honored as one of the representative citizens of Dallastown.

Mr. Brillhart is a native son of York county, where he has maintained his home from the time of his birth, which occurred April 24, 1867, in Loganville. He is a son of Joseph and Sarah (Rechart) Brillhart, both of whom were likewise born in this county, being representatives of old and well known families of this section of the State, and here the father followed the vocation of mason for many years, having been held in high esteem by all who knew him. His death occurred in 1881, and his widow now maintains her home in Dallastown. Of their children we record that Albert F., our subject, was second in the order of birth; Peter met his death at the age of twelve, as the result of a hunting accident; Annie died in infancy; and Lucy is the wife of Henry Spaltz, of Dallastown. Joseph Brillhart had five brothers, Daniel, Jacob, John, Michael and Samuel, all of whom are deceased, and of the brothers and sisters of Mrs. Sarah (Rechart) Brillhart we note that Gordon is deceased; Lizzie is the wife of John Sellers, of York City; Annie is the wife of John Graybill, of York City; and Miss Rebecca resides in Hanover, Pa.

Albert F. Brillhart was reared to the life of the farm, and was afforded the advantages of the public schools of his native township, where he continued his studies until he had attained the age of eighteen years. He then served a two years' apprenticeship at the miller's trade, in the mill of Jacob Neff, in Relay, this county. He abandoned the work of his trade in 1889, when twenty-two years of age, and for the ensuing seven years he was engaged in work at the cigar maker's trade, in the factory of Adam Rohler, of Dallastown. At the expiration of this period, in 1896, he entered the employ of John W. Minnich, who was engaged in the same line of enterprise in Dallastown, being made foreman of the factory with-in a short time and thus continuing until July.
1900, after which he had charge of the cigar factory of Charles Solomon, in the city of York, his employer being a resident of the city of New York. In December of the same year he resigned this incumbency, and entered into a copartnership with Michael Hose, under the name of the Dallas Cigar Co., and they have since been most pleasantly and profitably associated in the manufacturing of high-grade cigars, having two large and well equipped factories, as before noted, and manufacturing about 15,000,000 cigars annually, our subject having the general supervision of the Dallastown plant, in which seventy-five persons are employed, while in the Windorsville factory employment is given to a corps of fifty individuals.

In politics Mr. Brillhart is a stalwart supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and his religious views are in harmony with the tenets of the U. B. Church, in which faith he was reared. In a fraternal way he is identified with Crystal Lodge, No. 248, Knights of Pythias, and Jr. O. U. A. M. Lodge No. 640, in Dallastown, being a past officer in the latter organization. He has marked musical talent, and is a member of the Dallastown cornet band, in which he plays the trombone.

On Christmas day, 1887, Mr. Brillhart led to the marriage altar Miss Rebecca Eberlin, who was born and reared in this county, being a daughter of Mathias and Regina (Heinsman) Eberlin, honored residents of Dallastown. She has two brothers, Jacob and Henry, and three sisters, of whom Mary is the wife of Henry Seachrist; Sarah is the wife of Benjamin Wallack; and Margaret is the wife of Cane Smith.

CHARLES ARTHUR LUTZ. The thriving city of York, occupying a position of no mean importance as an industrial and commercial center, is fortunate in the character of the citizens who make up its quota of business men, and among the honored and progressive representatives of this class is Charles Arthur Lutz, who is the head of The C. Arthur Lutz Co., Inc., printers, publishers, engravers and stationers, which controls a large and important business.

John Lutz, grandfather of Charles Arthur Lutz, was a native of Holland, and emigrated to America in 1803, locating in Maryland, where he passed the rest of his life. He was a tailor and farmer by vocation. The lineage can be traced back to stanch German origin, the first progenitors of the family in America having come hither from the Teutonic Fatherland in the Colonial era of our history.

William R. Lutz, father of Charles Arthur, was born and reared in Baltimore county, Md., in which State he continued to reside until he had attained the age of thirty-three years, when he came to York county. Here he has ever since maintained his home. He was engaged most of his active career as a laborer, and is now living retired in the city of York, where he is held in the highest confidence and esteem. He is sixty-eight years of age at the time of this writing. His first wife, Christiana Wilkerson, was of Scotch-Irish descent, and she was born and reared in York county, where her death occurred in April, 1879. In 1885 Mr. Lutz married his second wife, whose maiden name was Rebecca Stouch, and who likewise was born and reared in this county. She died Dec. 31, 1899. Of the children of the first marriage Ella, Mary A., Agnes L. and Paul E. remain at the parental home; Alexander T. is a potter by vocation; and Charles Arthur is the subject of this sketch. Concerning the children of the second marriage we note that Maria J. remains with her parents, and William Elmer and Harry E. are employees of the York Card & Paper Company.

Charles Arthur Lutz was born in Glen Rock, this county, Feb. 23, 1870, and his education was acquired in the public schools of the city of York, to which his father removed when Charles was about two years old. He left school at the age of twelve years and worked in a foundry, and at the age of sixteen entered upon an apprenticeship at the printer's trade in the establishment of P. Anstadt & Sons, of York. He completed his apprenticeship in the office of the York Daily, later he became an employee of the Hubley Printing Company, of this city, and in 1890 was appointed mail clerk in the York postoffice, retaining this position until 1892. He then accepted a position as traveling salesman for a few months. Some months later he established in York a job, book and general commercial printing plant of his own, on Feb. 23, 1893. His first place of business was his father's barn, and to quote his own words, he began "without a dollar in his pocket, but with an honest purpose in his heart." His entire equipment was bought on credit from a friend, H. A. Free, D. D. S. Mr. Lutz possessed an unusual amount of the German and Scotch-Irish pluck, and determined to succeed, and he has built up a solid and representative business during the intervening period of more than a decade, having one of the most completely equipped printing plants in this section of the State. He has facilities for the prompt and proper handling of all work entrusted to him, while his establishment has gained the enviable reputation of turning out only work of the highest excellence. The business is conducted under the title designated in the opening paragraph of this work.

Mr. Lutz has published two magazines, "Self Help," and "Concordia," and still retains the last named, having sold "Self Help" to Mrs. J. F. Mittel. On Dec. 13, 1895, appeared the following sketch of Mr. Lutz, written by the editor of the Duncannon Record:

"York, a city of over twenty thousand inhabitants, claims one of the youngest editors in the State, and possibly the United States. We refer to C. Arthur Lutz, living at 610 Company street. He was only eighteen years old when he wrote the first article for publication. At the age of twenty-five his name first appeared as editor on his journals, "The Council Work," and "The Illustrious Knights of Malta." This young man had very limited education, the highest grade of schooling he received was in the A Primary department, when he was compelled to quit school and go to work, in order to help his father to keep the family. But with all this drawback he burnt the midnight oil and put his spare time into study. He has been entirely the architect of his own career."

[Note: "The Council Work" is out of print, and the title, "The Illustrious Knights of Malta," was changed to "Concordia Magazine."]

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war Mr. Lutz signalized his ardent patriotism by enlisting as a member of Company A, 8th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and on the 12th of May, 1898, he was made corporal of his company. His command was sent to Camp Alger, Va., and later to Augusta, Ga., and was in active service until the close of the war, Mr. Lutz receiving his honorable discharge on March 7, 1899. His discharge bears the following significant endorsement: "Service, honest and faithful: character, excellent." After the completion of his military career Mr. Lutz wrote and published an attractive little brochure descriptive of the war and of the part taken therein by his regiment. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been sold in York county and other sections of the State. Prior to the war Mr. Lutz served as corporal of Company A, 8th Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard, while for two and one-half years he also held the office of assistant steward in the hospital corps. In a fraternal way he is identified with the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, Patriotic Order of Sons of America, Daughters of Liberty, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Malta, and Spanish War Veterans' Association. In politics he is a stalwart Republican, and he is a member of the Union Lutheran Church, and an active worker and member of the Young Men's Christian Association, to which he has belonged ever since he was fourteen years old. Mr. Lutz has not as yet joined the ranks of the Benebits.

WILLIAM EYSTER, of Jackson township, York county, who owns fifty acres in what is known as Spangler's Valley, was born Feb. 11, 1868, son of Peter and Sarah (Spangler) Eyster.

Mr. Eyster received his education in the schools of Jackson and Paradise townships, and remained at home until he reached his majority, after which he engaged in farming on rented land, continuing thus for some years. He then sold his personal property and removed to Spring Grove, entering the employ of P. H. Glatfelter, in the paper mill, and remaining with him for some years. In 1902 he purchased his present home of fifty acres, which was formerly owned by his maternal grandfather, George Spangler, and is located in what is known as the Spangler Valley. Here Mr. Eyster has since devoted his time to agriculture and stock raising.

In 1888 Mr. Eyster married Miss Susan Roth, daughter of John and Susan (Schwartz) Roth, and two children have been born to the union, namely: Lloyd (deceased) and Beulah. Mr. Eyster is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, while his wife is connected with the Reformed Church, and interested in its work. Mr. Eyster is Democratic in politics. The Eysters are representative people of Jackson township and Mr. Eyster is held in high esteem.
JACOB BENJAMIN BESHAKE, superintendent of the Manchester Shale Brick Co., of East Manchester township, was born in 1868 in that township, son of Jacob F. Beshore, and a grandson of Jacob Beshore.

Jacob Beshore, the great-grandfather of our subject, was probably of German birth. He settled in Manchester township, where he established the family, and followed farming and distilling. He belonged to the family of the name in Berks county.

Jacob Beshore (2), grandfather of Jacob B., was born in Manchester township, where he followed farming on the homestead, which he had bought at his father's death. He married Lydia Fritz, and they both died on the old farm and are buried in the Manchester cemetery. Their children were: Daniel, who married Mary Fink, and died in Newberry township; Jacob F. and Lydia, twins, of whom Lydia, who married Jacob Good, lives at Emigsville; John, who married Anna Fedrow, and lives in Newberry township; Benjamin, who married a Low, and lives in Newberry township; Leah, who married John Hoover, and lives in Manchester township; Lizzie, who married Samuel Kauffman, and died in Spring Garden township.

Jacob F. Beshore, father of Jacob B., was born April 29, 1830, in Manchester township, where he followed the business of tilling the soil until he retired from active life. He purchased the old homestead and resided there until he retired to Manchester when he sold the property to the Manchester Shale Brick Co., in September, 1902. He married Catherine Keller, a daughter of Christian; she was reared in Manchester township, where she died in 1892, and was laid to rest in the old Manchester cemetery. The children of this union were: David, who married Mary Keller, lives in Kansas; Josiah, who married Susan Whistler, lives in Newberry township; Augustus, who married Ellen Wambaugh, resides in Manchester township; Elizabeth remains at home taking care of her father; Catherine, who married Jacob Musser, lives in Lancaster county; Jacob Benjamin; Sarah, who married Harry Kauffman, lives in Manchester township; and Salome married William Sloat.

Jacob Benjamin Beshore obtained his education in the township schools, and learned to be a practical farmer under his father. He also worked with his father in the tile business until his marriage. When about twenty-three years of age, Mr. Beshore embarked in a tile and brick business of his own and operated it for eight years. In 1902 he bought five acres of the old homestead along the turnpike road to Manchester, and there built a brick-yard, and in 1903 the Manchester Shale Brick Co. was organized, of which he is a stockholder and the superintendent. This is a well ordered plant operated with modern machinery, employs twenty-five hands, and turns out twenty thousand bricks a day. This great output is not enough to fill the demands of the trade.

The dry house of the plant is 35 x 90 feet, and in it they have a 115-horse-power engine and a 150-horse-power boiler. Brick is shipped all over the State and business is constantly on the increase. In Mr. Beshore the company has an intelligent, experienced man and much of its prosperity is directly due to this fact.

In 1897 Mr. Beshore married Dillie Gross, a daughter of John and Annie (Sprenkle) Gross. They located near the brick plant, where he built a handsome residence. They have three bright, interesting children: Kate, Cecil and Park. Mr. Beshore is identified with the Republican party.

WILLIAM LATIMER MILLER, a prominent contractor and builder in Newberry township, where many evidences of his taste and skill are to be found, was born Dec. 25, 1869, son of Abraham S. Miller, one of Newberry's most respected citizens. [For the Miller family history, see sketch of H. C. Miller, elsewhere.]

Abraham S. Miller was born at the old Miller Mill, and while he did not enjoy very good school advantages, his own observation and study have made him a well informed man. At the age of fourteen he entered the mill, and learned the trade under his father. Locating in Newberry township, at Shindel's Mill, he remained eight years, and then bought the old Fink mill in the same township, now known as Keiser's, and there he erected a fine sawmill. He was an expert carpenter, and even yet, when any specially fine work is called for, he is asked as a favor to take the contract. The greater part of his time was spent in farming in Newberry and Fairview townships, and he bought a small home of ten acres on which he erected fine buildings, and there he removed in 1893, now living retired. On June 30, 1863, he enlisted in Company D, 47th P. V. L., and was in service doing guard duty until Aug. 13, 1863. At the age of twenty-two he married Cordelia Parthemore, daughter of Frederick and Eliza (Keister) Parthemore, of Newberry township.

William L. Miller attended the public schools until he was fifteen years of age, when he began to learn the carpenter's trade under his father. He continued working with the latter until 1896, when he engaged in the contracting and building business on his own account, proving himself most capable and trustworthy. He has erected many of the good homes in his vicinity, and superintended the building of the Chase Felt & Paper Company plant, and also that of the Susquehanna Roofing Manufacturing Company. He has put up a number of buildings at Cly. Besides his building operations, he has engaged to some extent in farming. In politics he is a stanch Republican.

In 1885 Mr. Miller married Lucinda Sipe, daughter of Christian and Elizabeth (Ashenfelter) Sipe, and their children are: Lillie, Bruce, James, Catherine and Celia.

SAMUEL W. LEHR, a well-to-do and influential farmer of Conewago township, York county, was born Nov. 8, 1863, in Manchester township, son of George and Elizabeth (Allison) Lehr.

David Lehr, the grandfather of Samuel W., was born in Manchester township and followed wagoning to Baltimore and Pittsburgh. He married Elizabeth Myers, and located at Round Town, Manchester township, where they both died, being buried at Quickel's Church. They were the parents of the following children: George, the father of our subject; Samuel, deceased; David, who married Susan Strickler, and died in Manchester township; Henry, who died young; William, a carpenter; John, who married Lydia Strickler; Susannah, who died young; Elizabeth, who married Adam Bowersox; Sarah, who married Abner Bowersox; Catherine, deceased; and Mary Ann, who died at the age of twelve years.

George Lehr, the father of Samuel W., was born in 1836 in Manchester township, and received a fine education, attending the York County Academy. He taught school for sixteen years, and became well-known as an educator, teaching at Eisenhart's and Hake's schools. He was a very prominent business man, engaging in the mercantile business, and he was secretary of the Mutual Fire Insurance Co., in Dover, Conewago, Manchester, East Manchester and West Manchester townships. Mr. Lehr was a Republican, and for a number of years was justice of the peace, also holding all of the township offices. He was very active in politics, and a valuable man to his party. Mr. Lehr married Elizabeth Allison, daughter of Samuel Allison. Mr. Lehr died at his home in Round Town, Manchester township, in 1877, being interred at Quickel's Church. Mrs. Lehr is living in Conewago township, with her daughter, Mrs. Wintermyer. Mr. and Mrs. Lehr were the parents of these children: William H., a butcher at Round Town, married Emma Wintermyer; Samuel W.; Emma Jane married Latimore Wintermyer, and they live in Conewago township; George W. married Martha Crone, and they live in Dover township; and Eli W. married Lillie Quickel, and lives in Conewago township.

Samuel W. Lehr attended the schools of Manchester township, until about sixteen years of age. In 1886 he married Lydia A. Smith, daughter of John and Sallie (Fake) Smith. After their marriage they located at Round Town for a time, and then spent four years farming in Conewago and Manchester townships. In 1890 he bought the old James Ensninger farm of sixty-three and one-half acres, the ground from which Quickel's Church property was taken. Mr. Lehr owns a fine farm, with good substantial buildings, and engages quite successfully in general farming.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Lehr were as follows: Harry W., Bertha M., Lydia Cora, all at home; and two, who died in infancy. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Lehr is a stanch Republican, and has been township auditor and inspector. His main interests have been centered in farming, and he has developed his estate into one of the valuable properties of the township. He is a man of enterprise and public-spirit, and has many warm friends.

ROBERT L. NESBIT. The Nesbit family are descended from Scotch-Irish ancestry, but for three generations at least have been natives of York county. John Creighton Nesbit, the grandfather of Robert L., was one of seven children, all deceased, namely: James, who died in early life; John C.; Hannah, wife of George Lecrone, deceased, and mother of George, a resident of Dover; Eliza, wife of William Fulton, and mother of Alice and William, both deceased; Mary, deceased, wife of the late John Weimer, and mother of John, Lewis, Andrew, Henry (deceased), and Alice (Mrs. George Butcher); Letitia, who married the late Joshua Taylor, and had three children, John (deceased), Eliza Jane (of Rochester, Pa.) and Thomas (deceased); and Jane, who married the late James Compert, and had one daughter, Mary, deceased wife of Harrison Spangler.

John Creighton Nesbit was born in York county in 1809. A potter by trade, he was also a teacher, a noted mathematician, and followed both callings during his life time. He died in 1884, two years after his wife, who was Miss Julia Klinedinst, daughter of John Klinedinst, of York county, and was born in 1810. Their family consisted of ten children. (1) Elizabeth married Isaiah Walker, and lives near Rossville. (2) George and (3) Mary, both died in infancy. (4) John C., by profession a teacher, lives in Upper Allen township, and holds the office of justice of the peace. He married Sallie, daughter of John Sprengle, and has two sons: Arthur, in the drug business at Philadelphia; and Russell, a telegraph operator. (5) Harrison, now deceased, married Miss Mary Sutton. His widow lives on the old homestead in Warrington township, and is the mother of Florence; Adeline, Mrs. Samuel Deardorff, of York county; and John Rankin, who married Miss Dollie Bushey, and lives near Mt. Airy. He has one son, Charles, married to Miss Kate Walker. (6) Joseph was married three times, first to a Miss Nester, second to a Miss Hartman, and third to Miss Mary Brinton. By his first wife he had children: Elmer, who married Miss Clara Ferrence; Ann, Mrs. Wesley Bierbower; and Sallie, Mrs. Frank Jennings. To the third union was born a son, Lester Creighton. (7) William married first Mrs. McClellan, and second Miss Matilda Wallet, of Perry county. He is the father of Ward, Pearl, Stiles, Grant, Nettie, Frank and Rush. (8) Maria died at the age of seventeen. (9) James married Miss Bessie Shaw, of New York. He is principal of the schools in Durand, Wis. (10) Louis N. was the father of Robert L.

Louis N. Nesbit was born near Round Top in 1836. He was a carpenter by trade, but spent much the greater part of his life teaching. For thirty-seven consecutive terms he taught in Warrington and Fairview townships, but finally retired from the profession in 1892, and turned his attention to farming. He is at present living in retirement in Dillsburg. A Republican in politics, he has been active in local affairs and has held various offices, as township clerk, assessor, etc. In religion he is a Presbyterian. His wife, to whom he was united in 1851, was Miss Catherine Bushey, daughter of John Bushey, of York county, and Mr. Nesbit met with a great bereavement in her death, Feb. 7, 1903, at the age of sixty-six. The children born to them were as follows: Robert L.; Annie, who married Elwood Myers, a farmer of Warrington township, and has three children, Carrie, Elmer and Aaron; Mary, who married John R. Laird, a farmer in Fairview township, and has an only daughter, Blanch; Susan, who married H. M. Straley, a farmer and teacher in Warrington township, and has one son, Ralph.

Robert L. Nesbit was born at Fortney, Mt. Airy, Oct. 29, 1864. He attended school in Fortney, and after completing his education, clerked for a number of years in a dry goods and grocery concern, and having thus gotten a good start, he began in business for himself, March 23, 1887. He bought out the hardware business of John A. Arnold, and from the first did a flourishing business. By 1891, his patronage had so increased that he was obliged to enlarge his main building, but this relief was only temporary, and in 1896 he put up an addition, 125 feet long and three stories in height. Again his business outgrew its quarters, and in 1901, a second three story addition was built, 50x30 feet. His establishment now covers 25,000 square feet of store room, and easily outstrips any other in the valley in size and in the amount of stock covered. The main lines are hardware, house furnishings and stoves, but there are a number of smaller lines carried also.

Mr. Nesbit was married Oct. 25, 1884, to Cora L., daughter of Quincy Swartz, of Adams county. Two children have been born to them, Quay S. and Dewey H. In his political principles Mr. Nesbit is a Republican. He is a public spirited citizen, who does his part in municipal life, at present holding the office of councilman for the borough of Dillsburg. He has been remarkably successful in a business way and stands high in the esteem of the community, where he is a man of both prominence and influence.

ALBERT OLPHIN, of Chanceford township, York county, was born March 9, 1857, son of Peter and Henrietta (Greder) Olphin.

Peter Olphin was born in Germany, and came to the United States in boyhood. For eleven years he followed the sea, sailing out of Baltimore, Md. Later he located at Marietta, and his after life was more or less successful, and he was alternately a boatman, a farmer and a contractor. After the death of his wife, mother of our subject, he left the farm and settled permanently at Marietta, marrying a Mrs. Shone, and dying there aged seventy-seven years. His children were: Albert; Barry, of Kansas; Anna, Mrs. William Keifer, deceased; Henry; Lizzie, Mrs. Reuben Howsickle; Sena, Mrs. Henry Runkle; Bertha, Mrs. George Graham, of Longievel; and Bert, a farmer and cigar maker of this township.

When Albert Olphin was a babe of three months, his father moved to Yorkana, and there the family lived nine years, then moving to the farm now owned by our subject. Here the father engaged in contracting, near Stone Station, for four years but later returned to the farm. When Albert was sixteen years of age he boated for his father on the canal, and succeeded so well that his father put him in full charge, and during two seasons he was captain of the boat. When this boat was sold, Albert became bowman for Reuben Howsickle, and later for Mr. Crowshied, of Columbia, and worked thus until he was twenty-one years old. Although he had commenced his business life with absolutely no capital, he had saved his money, and now bought a pair of boats and boated for himself for three years, during this time, on different occasions, owning two sets of boats.

Subsequently Mr. Olphin engaged in the tobacco farming industry for a Mr. Murphy, following the same in Chanceford township for one year, and then bought the home farm from his father. After operating it a couple of years, he rented it out, bought a pair of canal boats and boated through several seasons, finding the business very lucrative. He then rented them, and has farmed ever since.

Mr. Olphin was united in marriage with Emma E. Runkle, born in 1863, daughter of Jesse Runkle, a farmer of Chanceford township. They have reared a large and interesting family, viz.: Lillie, Mrs. David Olewiler; Lottie, Mrs. Charles Frey, of Hellam; Yetta, Mrs. Charles Leiphart; Bessie; Nelson; Frank; Edna; Charles; Raymond; Ralph; and—. In his political principles Mr. Olphin is a Democrat. He is a member of the Evangelical Church, and one of the township’s most respected men.

WILLIAM S. HENRY, the well-known ice cream manufacturer of Hanover Junction, North Codorus township, York county, was born in that township Dec. 31, 1864, son of Jonathan Henry.

Daniel Henry, his grandfather, was a farmer of York county. He was the father of the following children: Jacob, Samuel, Rebecca M., Miller, Elizabeth, Katie, Dorothy and Jonathan.

Jonathan Henry was a resident of North Codorus township, and followed day laboring. He married Sarah Stover, daughter of Michael Stover. Both died in North Codorus township, and were buried at Sheafer’s Church. They had these children: Lucy, the wife of D. S. Cupper, of York; Mantilla, the widow of Josiah Sheafer; Frank, who married Lydia Messersmith, and is farming in Springfield township; Aggie, the widow of R. C. McClellan; and William S.

William S. Henry attended the schools of his township until seventeen years of age, and at the age of eighteen found employment on the Northern Central railroad, with the repair gang, remaining seven years. He then went to York for a short time, but soon returned to Hanover Junction, where he worked on the coal chutes for about eight years. In 1897 he began the manufacture of ice cream, and in 1901 he engaged in the mercantile business. He sells his ice cream, wholesale and retail, throughout the surrounding country, and ships to Hanover, Baltimore, York and Woodbine, his product being in great demand. Besides these business interests he is agent for the Adams Express Company, and is also assistant postmaster.

Mr. Henry married Ida B. Freeman, daughter of John Freeman, of Martinsburg, who was killed on a railroad in Virginia. Mrs. Freeman married for her second husband John H. Huett. Mrs. Henry died in February, 1901, and is buried at Martinsburg, Va. To Mr. and Mrs. Henry came two children, Edward C. and Leonard E., both bright lads attending school. Mr. Henry is a Democrat in politics, and a Lutheran in religious faith. He is very popular in Hanover Junction, and is a good business man and public spirited citizen.

A. B. KRAFT, concrete contractor, is located at No. 221 South Beaver street, York, Pennsylvania. He makes a specialty of foundations for buildings and heavy machinery, bridges, culverts, etc.; granolithic and marbelithic pavements and floors for houses, mills, factories, stables and warehouses.

JOHN BRILLHART, who is now engaged in the tinning business at Jefferson borough, is one of the highly esteemed citizens and business men of Codorus township. He was born in North Codorus township, June 17, 1840, son of Samuel Brillhart.

Christian Brillhart, the grandfather of John, was a farmer of North Codorus township, where he died, leaving children as follows: Peter, Christian, John and Samuel. Of these, Samuel learned the blacksmith's trade in young manhood, but never followed that occupation. He engaged in farming in North Codorus township, where he owned a tract of 208 acres of land, continuing to cultivate this until 1863, when he located in Jefferson borough. There he led a retired life until his death, April 27, 1876, at the age of seventy-three years, five months and six days. He is buried there in the old cemetery. His wife, Elizabeth Behler, died May 22, 1872, aged eighty years. They had children as follows: Isaac, a farmer, who died in Illinois; Samuel, a retired farmer of the same State; Annie, who never married; Julian, the wife of Isaac Stambough, living in North Codorus township; Lucinda, deceased wife of Amos Rebert; Elizabeth, deceased, who was the wife of Jacob Kessler; Mary, deceased, who was the wife of Henry Kessler, and John, our subject.

John Brillhart attended the schools of North Codorus township until he was eighteen years of age, and then learned the tinning trade in York with Daniel Heckert, with whom he served five years. He then went West, and during the Civil war was employed at his trade by the government for one year. In 1865 he returned to Jefferson borough, engaging in business, and building a fine home, and there he still resides. Mr. Brillhart for thirty years engaged in dealing in stoves, but now gives all his time and attention to the tinning business, having a large and profitable trade in the surrounding country.

Mr. Brillhart was married to Miss Mary Jane Shreiner, of York, and to this union were born: Lucy, Mrs. Hoff, who resides in North Codorus township; and Bertha, the wife of Lewis Krebs, of Hanover. Mr. Brillhart's first wife died, and he married (second) Elizabeth Smith, of Manheim township, by whom he has had children as follows: Charles E. (a teacher of music), Mollie, Harry, Gertrude and John.

Mr. Brillhart is a Republican, and has held the offices of chief burgess of Jefferson borough, school director and councilman. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, in the work of which he takes an active part. He is very well known and highly respected throughout Codorus township.

EDWARD MAHR was born Jan. 24, 1867, at New Holland, York county, a son of William Mahr and a grandson of Christian Mahr, and belongs to one of the fine old German families of this section of Pennsylvania.

Christian Mahr was probably born in Germany and settled very many years ago in East Manchester township, York Co., Pa., where he followed boating on the canal along the Susquehanna river. He died at the age of eighty-four years. He married Mary Coleman, who was born in York county, and died at New Holland, where both are buried. They had children as follows: William, born Feb. 5, 1845; Flora, born Oct. 4, 1849, who married Emanuel Baer and resides at Mt. Wolf, in East Manchester township; Sarah, born May 5, 1852, who married Henry Strayer and lives at New Holland; Charles, born March 15, 1855, who married Ella Peters and lives at New Holland; Emma, born July 2, 1858, who died in 1885, and is buried at New Holland; John, born July 28, 1861, married to Sarah Bruah.

William Mahr, father of Edward Mahr, was born Feb. 5, 1845, at New Holland.
After obtaining his education, in the local schools, he followed railroad work for a few years, and then became interested in tobacco farming, an industry which he followed almost all his life. At the opening of the Civil war he was only a lad of sixteen years, but this did not prevent his offering his services to his country, and he enlisted Sept. 4, 1861, in Company C, 195th P. V. I., and served until June 21, 1865, being mustered out and discharged at Harrisburg. William Mahr was a very successful business man, and his operations in tobacco brought him large returns. His death took place Jan. 9, 1894, and he was interred at New Holland. Mr. Mahr married Melissa Blaney, daughter of Thomas and Frances (Keener) Blaney. She still survives, residing at Harrisburg.

Edward Mahr was the only child born to William and Melissa Mahr. His education was acquired in the schools at New Holland, which he attended until he was nineteen years old, when he started to learn the trade of cigar-making. After working at this business for about eighteen months, and learning all its details, he went to farming tobacco on John H. Wagner’s farm, near New Holland. For a short time he was employed on the railroad, but he has given his main attention to the raising of tobacco, at which he has been exceedingly successful. Since 1902 he has not been employed at any special work, having invested his money satisfactorily. However, he is not inactive, serving East Manchester township as tax collector, inspector and school director.

In 1887 Mr. Mahr was united in marriage with Savilla R. Holler, a daughter of Manassas and Rebecca Holler, of Lancaster county. They have a family of four children, Minnie May, Wilbert, Ruth and Floyd. The beautiful family home is one of the handsomest residences at New Holland. In politics Mr. Mahr has always been identified with the Republican party, and he has been active in its work in this locality. The family is held in the highest esteem.

Blaney. Josiah Blaney, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. William Mahr and great-grandfather of Edward Mahr, was born in Ireland, July 22, 1776, and when he emigrated to America settled in Maryland and took up a very large tract of land in Harford county. On April 10, 1801, he married Mary Street, who was born Aug. 5, 1776, and died May 4, 1844. Josiah Blaney died Nov. 26, 1823, his death occurring suddenly while he was on his way home from Baltimore. The old tombs of both himself and wife may be found in the cemetery near the old farm in Harford county. Their children were: Melissa, who was born Feb. 15, 1802, died May 9, 1868; Thomas, born March 11, 1804, died Jan. 14, 1881, and is buried in York; William, born May 7, 1806, died Dec. 14, 1866; James Washington, born Dec. 2, 1807, died Sept. 8, 1887; William Jefferson, born Aug. 28, 1810, died Aug. 5, 1871; Sarah Stokes, born Sept. 6, 1813, died Sept. 5, 1874; and Ann, Mrs. McGuigan, born Nov. 2, 1816, died July 1, 1889.

Thomas Blaney came to York county in young manhood and settled in Chanceford township, near York Furnace, where he followed the carpenter’s trade. He married Frances Keener, and they had children as follows: Sarah Ann, who died in York county; Mary Elizabeth, who married James Hanley, who died in Lancaster county, where his widow still resides; Melissa, Mrs. William Mahr; John Thomas, who served in the Civil war, and now resides at Quincy, Ill.; William Martin, who served as sergeant for two years during the Civil war; James Rogers, another loyal soldier, who died in Kansas; Edward, who enlisted in the Civil war, answering the first call, was taken prisoner, and was not returned to his home until peace was declared (he now lives at White City, Kansas); and George J., the youngest of a very patriotic family, who gave one year of his life to the service of his country, now residing at Manhattan, Kansas.

CHARLES A. SCHAEFER, a successful florist of West Manchester township, was born in Hanover, Germany, Jan. 4, 1872, and remained in that country until he reached manhood.

The Schaefers for several generations have been farmers and shepherds in Germany, and such was the occupation of Henry Schaefer, the grandfather of Charles. He died near Hanover, at the age of seventy-one. He was the father of the following children: Carl; Frederick, a farmer, who with his wife and family lives in York county; Minnie, who died in Germany; Henry, a shoemaker in York; and William, a farmer in Germany.

Carl Schaefer, father of Charles, was also born in the vicinity of Hanover, and for thirty-five years followed his father’s occupation as a shepherd, after which he devoted his attention to farming. He is still living in Germany, and had children as follows: Leah, Mrs. Augustus Myers, residing in Germany; Charles A.; Dorothy, who is married and lives in Hanover; William, of Berlin, unmarried; Anna, living at home; O——, a waiter in Germany; Frederick, in the German army; Jane and Aldorf, at home.

Charles A. Schaefer attended the public schools of Hanover, till he was fourteen, and then followed in his father’s footsteps and became a shepherd. After a year and a half, however, he gave this up, helped his father at farming until he was eighteen years of age, and after one year of intervening work for other farmers, was so engaged again until he was twenty-two. At that time, in 1894, he sailed from Germany for Baltimore, on a vessel going via New York, and then joined his uncle Frederick at the city of York. Two weeks after his arrival he decided to learn the business of a florist, and for three years was so employed under Mr. Smith. In 1897 he went into business for himself as a florist in Manchester township, at the very edge of the city, on the corner of West and Pennsylvania avenues, where he bought a tract 160 feet square. Here Mr. Schaefer has 12,000 feet under glass, and his greenhouses attract much attention, for they are the finest in the county, fully equipped with all the latest modern improvements. He has displayed a special aptitude for the management of such an establishment, and has been very successful, building up a good trade, mainly in Baltimore, York and Philadelphia. So well has his business prospered that he is now building a handsome three-story residence in York.

In 1898, Mr. Schaefer was married to Miss Sophia Kiehlkopf, daughter of Jacob Kiehlkopf, and a native of Germany. The union has been blessed with two daughters, Minnie S. and Dorothy May, both very bright little girls. Mrs. Schaefer’s father came from Germany in 1902, to visit her, and returned very much pleased with the western world and the new ways of life therein. Mr. Schaefer and his wife belong to the Christ Lutheran Church of York. In politics he is a Democrat.

JACOB S. FREED, proprietor of the Freed Livery Stables, of York City, was but a boy of nine when he first began working in a livery stable, and he has ever since been connected with that business.

Jacob Freed, father of Jacob S., was born in York county, about 1824, and made farming his life occupation. He married Miss Sarah Yenser, a native of Lancaster county, and to their union were born seven children, viz.: Mary Ann, deceased; Rebecca; Sarah; Malinda; John Y., deceased; Jacob S.; and Ella. Mrs. Freed is still living, but her husband passed away on Christmas Day, 1898.

Jacob S. Freed was born in Hellam township, Feb. 3, 1861. At the early age of nine years he was obliged to go to work, and entering the livery stable of M. H. Wyse, he remained there till he was eighteen. The next four years were spent with Alexander Fry, and then when he was twenty-two, Mr. Freed entered business for himself. From the one stable which he began, his patronage has increased till he is now operating four, the largest concern of its kind in the city. His barns, which adjoin one another, are on Cherry Alley, in the rear of No. 20 George street, and all his business life has been passed within one block of that location. Mr. Freed makes a specialty of boarding horses and with those and what he himself owns, has ninety-two in his stables. He takes special pride in the fact that he has more good horses in his charge than any other man in Pennsylvania. They are kept in the best condition and a veterinary surgeon is always at hand, as one has been engaged permanently. Mr. Freed deals quite extensively in horses, and also handles a good number of saddle horses. The bus line to the “National Hotel” is run by him, and also a line of hacks. He is a thoroughly experienced liveryman and has made a reputation for himself that ensures him the best trade in the city.

Mr. Freed has been twice married. His first wife, to whom he was united in 1889, was Miss Amanda Myers, by whom he had three children, Ella, Kathleen and Theodore F. After her death, he was united to Miss Mary E. Harmon, the nuptials occurring Dec. 25, 1898. To them one child was born, Mabel Dora, now deceased. The family reside at No. 312 West North street. Mr. Freed is one of the broad gauged live business men of the city and has earned an assured place for himself.

JOHN KEASEY was born in what is now Springettsbury township, Dec. 18, 1852, and until he was eighteen he attended the Miller school in that district, and one of his teachers was Squire Edward Dietz. He grew to manhood, and until he was married worked for his stepfather. After that event he rented a farm in the same township for three years, and another in York township for six years, after which, in 1887, he bought his present home from Sebastian Stevens, a tract of twenty-six acres of fine land, upon which he has made many improvements. He has lately bought the ware house and feed store of H. S. Myers in York, and will conduct that business in addition to managing his farm.

In Springettsbury township, Mr. Keasey was married to Miss Mattie Forry, born in York township, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Strickler) Forry, both of whom are now deceased. Three sons and two daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Keasey, namely: Jemima, Mrs. David Hursh, of Windsor township; Howard W., of York, who married Miss Florence Hughes; John Franklin, of York; Flora May; and Millard Edward. Mrs. Keasey is a member of the Mennonite Church, and her husband attends with her. In politics Mr. Keasey is a Republican, but not active in party affairs. He is a progressive and successful farmer, a good business man, and he commands the respect and confidence of his fellow townsmen.

E. SHERMAN MILLER, a clerk in the freight department of the Northern Central Railway Company, is a grandson of Robert Miller. Robert Miller was a son of Henry Miller, who came from Ireland when quite young, and whose wife was also a native of the "Emerald Isle," which she left at fourteen years of age to come to America with her parents.

Robert Miller was born in Milton, Union Co., Pa., April 10, 1807. He became active in railway contracting, which he followed for over forty years, and died at York, Pa., May 11, 1889, aged eighty-two years, one month and one day. He married Magdalena Young, a daughter of Peter Young, of Middletown, this State, and left a family of three sons and two daughters. The late Col. James Young, one of Pennsylvania's most prominent farmers, was a grand-uncle of our subject.

James D. Miller, father of E. Sherman Miller, was a son of Robert and Magdalena (Young) Miller, and was born near Wooster, Wayne Co., Ohio, Dec. 8, 1840. He was reared in Dauphin county, Pa., and received a common-school education, finishing a good business education, in March, 1859, at Eman's Institute, Middletown, Dauphin Co., Pa. He then engaged in railway work, which was his life's pursuit. He entered the telegraph office of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in that town, where he learned telegraphy with H. H. Neiman, operator, whose office was located in the hotel kept by Raymond & Ken-dig. On leaving there he entered the service of the Northern Central Railway Company, at Goldsboro, Pa., as telegraph operator, Aug. 9, 1859.

The Northern Central Railway Company had no line of its own at that time, but used the National Line. In 1860 the Northern Central Railway Company erected its line. Each operator at that time was furnished with a coil of wire, spurs and pliers, and whenever the line was down or in trouble the operator was required to start out, and walk half the distance north and south, between his office and the next office, and repair the line, having the privilege of using the road repairmen to assist, and of stopping the first train which came along, after he had repaired the break, to take him back to his office. Mr. Miller remained in that service until Nov. 1, 1861, when he left the Northern Central Railway Company and entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, as night operator at Branch Intersection, near Middletown, Pa., there remaining until July, 1862, when he left the service. He then went to Washington City, where he was foreman in the construction of the first street railway of the National Capital, and on Aug. 16, 1862, enlisted in Company H, 127th Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry Volunteers; he participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Va., and Chancel-lorsville, Va. Returning home he was mustered out, and honorably discharged on May 29, 1863, and went to work that night for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Branch Intersection, remaining there until December, 1863, when he left the railroad service, and remained out until Feb. 22, 1864, when he re-entered the service of the Northern Central Railway Company as day operator at Marysville, Pa. He held this position until Aug. 15, 1864, when he re-enlisted in Company K, 9th Pennsylvania Veteran Cavalry, at Nashville, Tenn., and Kilpatrick's Division of Cavalry, in November, 1864, at Marietta, Ga. He was with Sherman in the celebrated march to the sea and up through the Carolinas. Being honorably discharged at Lexington, N. C., May 29, 1865, he returned home on June 15, 1865, and on the 28th of June again entered the service of the Northern Central Railway Company as a brakeman on the Susquehanna division, running between Marysville and Sumbury. In 1868 he was made freight conductor and ran a freight train until July, 1870, when he was made assistant yardmaster at Marysville. He was made general yardmaster in June, 1872, and when the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Northern Central Railway Company consolidated their yards at Marysville, in August, 1874, he was made general yardmaster for both companies. On Jan. 1, 1881, he was transferred to York, Pa., as assistant trainmaster of the Baltimore division of the Northern Central Railway Company, which position he held until the time of his death. Mr. Miller enjoyed the record of being "one of the most earnest, careful and successful officials in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company," in whose employ he had been for over forty years.

On Oct. 12, 1865, at Marysville, Pa., James D. Miller married Sarah Jane Stahler, a daughter of David H. and Mary Ann (Jackson) Stahler, of Marysville, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Miller had these children: Edgar Sherman, railroad clerk; William M., painter in the marine department of the Maryland Steel Company, Sparrows Point, Md.; Harrie N., yard clerk at Marysville, for the Northern Central Railway Company; Mary A., wife of Thomas Hollahan, superintendent of the York Cab Company; Bessie E., wife of A. W. Andrews, a boilermaker; James Y., foreman in the Northern Central Railway freight warehouse; Bayard B. and Clayton T., clerks for the York Card & Paper Company.

James D. Miller was a Republican in politics, and while at Marysville served acceptably as councilman of that borough. He and his wife were both members of the "Church of God." Mr. Miller was prominent in fraternal societies, being a past post commander of Gen. John Sedgwick Post, No. 37, Grand Army of the Republic; a past master of Perry Lodge, No. 458, Free and Accepted Masons; a past chancellor of Behler Lodge, No. 269, Knights of Pythias; a past noble grand of Marysville Lodge, No. 590, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and a member of Sandilands Commandery, No. 152, Knights of Malta. He had been a delegate from his post to eight State encampments; was a member of the State Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, and was a district deputy grand master in the last named organization. Mr. Miller died at York, Pa., June 12, 1903.

E. Sherman Miller, was one of nine children born to his parents and was born Sept. 30, 1867, in Marysville, Perry Co., Pa. He was educated in the public schools of Marysville, and York, Pa. His rise in the employ of the Northern Central has been rapid, for he started as a messenger boy, which position he filled from Dec. 24, 1883, to Jan. 25, 1884. Then he became a clerk. On Feb. 8, 1889, he was appointed agent at Freeland, Md., and remained in that position until Jan. 25, 1892, when he was made assistant baggage agent at York. On Jan. 1, 1895, Mr. Miller became a night clerk in the freight office, and April 1, 1899, was promoted to the position of day clerk.

On Nov. 2, 1894, Mr. Miller married Sarah A. Bailey, daughter of Dr. N. A. Bailey, a veterinary surgeon of New Freedom, York Co., Pa., and Anna C. (Orwig) Bailey, daughter of John Orwig, a wealthy retired farmer of Shrewsbury, York Co., Pa. Six children have been born to this union: Edna Earlue, who died at the age of three months; Agnes Leona, who died at the age of six months; Edgar Bailey, who died when two years of age; Anna L.; Sarah Aldis; and Ralph Kirkwood. Mr. Miller belongs to York Lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M.; Chosen Knights Commandery, No. 174, Knights of Malta; Capt. E. M. Ruhl Camp, No. 33, Sons of Veterans; and Codorus Council, No. 87, Woodmen of the World. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Railroad Voluntary Relief Department. In politics he is a Democrat.

C. ALEXANDER BORTNER, a tax collector of Codorus township, York county, was born April 6, 1870, in that township, son of Michael and Elizabeth (Gantz) Bortner.

John Bortner, grandfather of C. Alexander, was a well-known farmer of York county, who was accidentally killed on the Northern Central Railroad, and is buried in Fiscel's cemetery. His children were: Michael, of Shrewsbury township; John and Adam, deceased; Isaac, of York; and Mrs. Allison, deceased.

Michael Bortner, father of C. Alexander, learned the milling business with H. M. Bortner, in Codorus township, which he followed about twenty years in that and in Shrewsbury townships, and he now resides on a small farm in the latter township, near New Freedom. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Gantz. Their children were: C. Alexander; Jennie M., wife of Emanuel Luckabaugh, of Codorus township; Rosa, deceased; Killian C., at home; Lettie May, wife of William Black, of Codorus township; Edward L., of Illinois; Harvey W., also of Illinois; Blanche, at home; John; Sadie, deceased; and one that died in infancy.

C. Alexander Bortner was educated in the schools of Codorus and Shrewsbury townships, completing his education at the age of nineteen years. Since the age of twelve years Mr. Bortner has made his own way in the world, and for his success deserves a great amount of credit. From that time until his twenty-first year he had two different homes with farmers, and then went to Illinois, where he spent five years engaged in farming, returning to his native place in December, 1895.

In February, 1896, Mr. Bortner was married to Joanna Leese, daughter of Benjamin Leese, of Jefferson borough, who died March 24, 1897, and is buried at Fiscel's Church in Shrewsbury township. Mr. Bortner married (second) Alice Gantz, daughter of Adam H. and Caroline Gantz. His two promising young sons, Ralph Adam and Perry Clifford, were born to his second union. Ralph Adam is in school.

After this marriage Mr. Bortner bought the old Dellone farm of 106 acres, but he has sold a part of this, retaining only ninety-one acres. It is located on the old Baltimore Road, near Stiltz post office. Both he and wife are member of Fiscel's Lutheran Church, he being a deacon and very active in the Sunday-school. In politics he is a Democrat. He owns some of the finest land in this section, and has the reputation of being one of the best farmers.

JOHN L. McCREARY. The McCreary family of York county are of Scotch-Irish descent, and trace their ancestry from three brothers, Thomas, John and Samuel, who came from the north of Ireland to York county, Pa., early in the eighteenth century. John settled in the western part, Samuel in the lower and Thomas in the vicinity of what is now known as Hanover. This Thomas, founder of the Hanover branch of the family, was the great-great-grandfather of John L., and the next in direct line was his son, also named Thomas.

John L. McCreary, grandfather of our subject, was born in Hanover in 1793. A farmer by occupation, he died in 1824, at the early age of thirty-one, leaving a wife, Juliana (Lease) McCreary, and two children, Juliana, and Samuel. Mrs. McCreary lived to the ripe old age of eighty-four, and passed away in 1882. The daughter died in 1894, aged seventy-four.

Samuel McCreary was born in 1818, at Dover, York county. He was well-educated, and in early life taught school. Of versatile ability, he was for a number of years a brick maker, and also a tailor, while the latter part of his life was spent in farming. He was well known in the community and highly esteemed; he served for several terms as school director in Washington township. His death occurred in 1897, when he was aged seventy-nine. He married Harriet, daughter of Aaron Blackford, also of York county, who is still living, a resident of Franklin town. There were five children born to this union: (1) Aaron, died at the age of twenty-one. (2) Juliana married Jesse Ruhl, a farmer of Cumberland county, and was the mother of Samuel, who married Miss Annie Beitzel, of Cumberland county, has three children, and lives on the McCreary farm in Washington township; (3) John L. was the third. (4) Elizabeth became the wife of Daniel Baker, a teacher formerly of Warrington township, now of Dillsburg. They have a daughter, Virginia. (5) Samuel married Carrie, daughter of Daniel Brougher, of York county, and has one child, Roy. He combines the occupations of farming and teaching. (6) Catherine is the wife of Joseph Hershey, a farmer living in Franklin town.

On the maternal side John L. McCreary is connected with the Blackfords and the Yoners, old original families of the county. Samuel Yoner, his great-great-grandfather, was one of the earliest settlers of Dover, but this was then called Yonerstettle, in honor of resided, April 9, 1871, son of Henry and is still in a good state of preservation. Joseph Blackford, great-grandfather of John L. McCreary, died in 1834, aged eighty-four. His wife was a Miss Garretson, who was born and reared in Washington township. The grandfather, Aaron Blackford, who reached the advanced age of ninety, married a Miss Miller, of Perry county, who also lived to an extremely old age, passing away in 1885. They had five children: (1) Miller, who was all his life in the mercantile business, was for two terms a member of the Legislature, and a director of the Dillsburg Bank. He died in 1895, aged sixty-five years. (2) Catherine Jane, married a Mr. Bushey. (3) John lives in Iowa. (4) Alfred died at the age of eighteen. (5) Harriet became Mrs. McCreary.

John L. McCreary was born in Washington township in 1854, was educated there, and afterward remained at home working on the farm until he was twenty-eight years old. One year he spent working on the Welty farm near Dillsburg, but at the end of that time permanently abandoned agriculture and entered upon a grocery and general merchandise business at Dillsburg. Since 1891 he has been carrying on a bakery, and began with a small establishment which he bought from John Arnold. Mr. McCreary has steadily built up the business until it has reached large proportions, and has a capacity of fifty-five barrels of flour a week, while the output of bread alone is 18,000 loaves. In handling the delivery trade, which covers an area of twelve miles, a force of sixteen men is employed, with four large wagons and twenty horses. Mr. McCreary shows himself possessed of qualities marking the successful business man, is ranked as a good citizen and stands well in the esteem of the community.

In 1883 occurred the marriage of Mr. McCreary to Miss Rebecca Wireman, daughter of John Wireman, of York county. Their only child, Samuel, is at present a boy in school. In religion Mr. and Mrs. McCreary are members of the Lutheran and United Brethren churches, respectively. He is a Democrat in political belief.

JOHN E. WEISER, proprietor of the "Bellview Farm," in Chanceford township, York county, was born on the farm which he now occupies, and upon which he has always its founder. The property where he resided Sarah (Snodgrass) Weiser.

The paternal grandfather spent all of his life in York, where he died, when his son Henry was a boy. Henry Weiser received a common school education, and when eighteen years of age went West, working all over the western States. For a time he was a boatman on the Mississippi river, and on his return home became captain and owner of canal boats on the Tidewater Canal, and followed this occupation for a number of years. He then bought the home farm and spent the rest of his life in farming, dying in 1886, at the age of sixty-three years. Although a member of no religious organization, Mr. Weiser attended St. Luke's Lutheran Church. In politics he was a prominent member of the Democratic party, being school director for several terms, and auditor. He was connected with the Wrightsville Bank. Mr. Weiser married Miss Sarah Snodgrass, a resident of Lower Chanceford township and the following children were born to them: Cassandra, Mrs. Henry Sneltzer, of Brogueville; Mary, married to Hiram Crone, of Wrightsville; Josephine, Mrs. George Sanger, of Chanceford township; Elmira, Mrs. Jacob Tome, of York: Henrietta, who married Isaac Sample, of Chanceford township; Isabella, Mrs. James Scott, of Chanceford township; Ida, Mrs. Thomas Grove, of Dallastown; William, who married Maria Kohler, and died in March, 1902; and John E.

John E. Weiser attended the public schools from the age of six to nineteen years. His father died and he was compelled to stay at home to work the farm, which he bought in 1898. Mr. Weiser has been very prominent in politics, being a delegate of the Democratic party to the county convention at the age of twenty-two years, and since then has served in that capacity three times. He has been county committeeman twice, and has always taken the deepest interest in the success of his party, since his first presidential vote, which was cast for Grover Cleveland.

At the age of sixteen years Mr. Weiser took up music and became very proficient in playing the organ. Since the age of eighteen years he has been teaching music, and at the age of twenty joined the Rockville Band, which organization was later named the Exselsior Band, in which Mr. Weiser played the first cornet, B flat. In the Bethel M. E. Church Mr. Weiser plays the organ, and is steward and a Sunday-school teacher.

On Oct. 26, 1895, Mr. Weiser married Miss Annie Reichard, born in Chanceford township, daughter of John and Mary (Morrison) Reichard, and two children have been born to this union, Ethel and Wilbur. Mr. Weiser has been very successful in his agricultural ventures, and he is highly respected by all who know him.

GEORGE E. ENDERS, manager of the Commonwealth Beneficial Association, is descended from a family who were among the early settlers of Pennsylvania, and was born May 11, 1872, in Franklintown, York county.

Three Enders brothers crossed the Atlantic together, one of whom stayed in the East, another went West and the third went South, the last named being the one from whom our subject is descended.

George M. Enders, the grandfather of George E., was for many years an undertaker in York county, but in his latter years became a grocer.

H. M. Enders, son of George M., who has been a traveling salesman for Jacob Stair, of York, for the past twenty-two years, married Lydia Ann Hershey, daughter of Michael Hershey, a York county farmer, and there were five children born to this union: Olie M., wife of Harry E. Shane, a cigar maker of York; John C., a carriage trimmer of York; Charles E., employed by the York Manufacturing Company; C. Grove, connected with the freight department of the Northern Central Railroad Company; and George E.

George E. Enders was educated in the public schools of York. His first occupation was as a clerk, and he was so engaged for fourteen years, after which he spent two years in the employ of the Northern Central Railroad, and the following three years were devoted to the grocery business.

In 1901 Mr. Enders became manager of the Commonwealth Beneficial Association, establishing an office in Room 8, in the Mercantile and Law building, on East Market street. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and also belongs to the Modern Woodmen.

PETER H. GROVE, who is engaged in the manufacturing of cigars and in handling leaf tobacco of local production, has his residence and business headquarters in the village of Rye. He is a scion of one of the old families of this section of the State, whether the original representative of the name came from Germany.

Peter Henry Grove was born in Springfield township, March 29, 1869, son of John Henry and grandson of Henry Grove.

John Grove, his great-grandfather, may have been born in Pennsylvania, the available and authentic data not being such as to determine whether this John or his father represented the first generation of the family in America. Certain it is, however, that John Grove was early settled in Hopewell township, York county, where he became a prominent and influential farmer, living to a venerable age. He was the father of a large family of children, as follows: John, Jr., born March 15, 1795, died April 21, 1871; Elizabeth, born Jan. 31, 1796, married John Sechrist, and died Jan. 13, 1861; Justina, born Oct. 29, 1797, married Rev. James Ewing, and died at Johnstown, Pa.; Jacob, born April 12, 1799, died Feb. 20, 1882; Henry, born Feb. 23, 1801, died Nov. 16, 1885; Susan, born Nov. 28, 1802, married Jacob Bixler, and died in Jones county, Ia., Feb. 4, 1888; Catharine, born Aug. 15, 1804, married Jeremiah Hess, and died, in York, Pa., Dec. 19, 1880; Samuel born Jan. 22 1806, died in York county, Feb. 25, 1891; Charles, born Oct. 14, 1808, died Aug. 19, 1897, in York county; Michael, born March 25, 1810, died at Bamock City, Montana, Dec. 20, 1895; Frederick, born March 30, 1812, died in Jones county, Ia., Nov. 25, 1882; Lydia, born Aug. 10, 1814, married James Lutz, and died, at Castle Fin, Pa., Jan. 20, 1892; and Francis, born Sept. 22, 1817, died at Leadville, Colo., March 18, 1891. All of these children were born in York county, and it will be noted that nearly all lived to the age of more than three score years and ten. Many representatives of the family still remain in York county, as the pages of this work will indicate in a direct and incidental way.

Henry Grove, grandfather of our subject, was born on the ancestral homestead, in Hopewell township, Feb. 23, 1801, and there was reared to maturity. As a young man he learned the milling trade, which he followed for a few years, after which he was engaged in farming during the greater portion of the remainder of his active career. He became blind about four years prior to his death, at the age of nearly eighty-five years. His wife was a daughter of John Sheaffer, of Hopewell township, where she was born, being likewise a member of one of the old and well known families of the county. She, too, lived to a venerable age. Their children were as follows: John Henry, father of our subject; Jacob, born Sept. 4, 1833, died in York township; Elizabeth, born Jan. 31, 1835, died in youth; Alexander F., born July 12, 1836, resides in Stewartstown, this county; Catherine, born Jan. 31, 1838, resides in Stewartstown; Lydia, born July 14, 1839, resides in Hopewell township; James, born April 4, 1841, died in Philadelphia; Benjamin, born Feb. 12, 1843, died in the West; Cornelius, born April 16, 1845, lives at Dallastown, York county; Margaretta, born April 7, 1847, is a resident of Pittsburg, Pa.; Joseph, born July 14, 1849, is a resident of York; Eli Free, born Feb. 13, 1852, resides in York.

John Henry Grove was born in Hopewell township, this county, April 16, 1832, and received a common-school education in the county schools, while in his youth he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed as a vocation for a number of years. He was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Williams, who was likewise born and reared in this county, being a daughter of Peter Williams. After his marriage Mr. Grove engaged in farming in Springfield township, and there continued to be identified with that vocation until his death at the age of forty years, his mortal remains being laid to rest in the cemetery in that township. His widow still survives, and now makes her home with our subject, who is next to the youngest of the children, the others being Amanda, deceased, who married a Howard; Mary, deceased wife of John Hindel; Sarah, who married a Mr. Kutz, deceased; Henrietta, deceased wife of Joseph Loucks; Eliza, who died unmarried; Katie, who married (first) a Strickler, and (second) an Ernst, and they now resides in York county; and John, residing on the old homestead farm in Springfield township.

Peter Henry Grove passed his early boyhood days in his native township, his father having died when he was but three years of age, and when he was nine years old he came to York township, where he continued to attend the public schools as opportunity offered, the financial status of his widowed mother being such that he was early thrown to a great extent upon his own resources, so that it may be consistently said that he deserves the honored American title of self-made man. After having been variously employed in York township, he returned to Springfield township, where he engaged in farming and also in the cigar and leaf-tobacco business, prospering in his efforts, which were indefatigable and well directed. He became the owner of a valuable farm of one hundred acres, and the headquarters of his cigar and tobacco business were maintained at Loganville, where he was established for thirteen years. At the expiration of this period, in the spring of the year 1904, he disposed of his farm and removed his other business enterprise to Rye, York township, where he has since continued to do an extensive business in the manufacture of cigars and dealing in leaf tobacco, having a well equipped factory, in which employment is given to a corps of from thirty-five to fifty skilled workmen. While in Loganville Mr. Grove also manufactured cigar boxes, but this phase of his enterprise he found it expedient to abandon upon his removal to Rye, in order that he might give his undivided attention to his large and constantly expanding cigar business. In the midst of the exactions of business Mr. Grove has ever found time to keep in touch with the questions and issues of the day, while he has ever been found ready to do his part in aiding all worthy enterprises and causes tending to conserve local progress and prosperity, though never a seeker of office. His political proclivities are indicated in the staunch support which he accords to the principles and policies of the Republican party.

Mr. Grove married Miss Ella Myers, who was born in Hopewell township, daughter of Emanuel and Sevilla (Livingston) Myers. She was called to the life eternal June 8, 1902, and interment was made in the cemetery of the East Codorus Church, of the German Baptist denomination, in Springfield township, she having been a zealous and consistent member of that church. She is survived by two children, Media S. and Allen M., both of whom are attending the public schools in Rye.

HOWARD N. SMITH, contractor in Windsor township, was born Oct. 13, 1875, at Freysville, on the old homestead farm, son of David Smith. He attended the public schools of his township from six years of age until he was eighteen, his first instructor being John Dunklap, and his last teacher, Prof. J. A. Stine.
He worked on his father's farm, and then learned the carpenter's trade with Horace Weltz, of Red Lion, with whom he remained about ten years. In 1902 Mr. Smith engaged in contracting and building on his own account, in which line he has since continued quite successfully. Mr. Smith is a self-made man, and owes his success to his energy and strict attention to business. His methods are up-to-date, honorable and upright, and his contracts are promptly completed.

Mr. Smith is unmarried. He was reared in the faith of the United Brethren Church, but favors no particular religious denomination. In politics he is a Democrat, but has never sought official recognition. His fraternal associations connect him with the Knights of Pythias and the I. O. O. F., in both of which he is a popular and valued member. He is well known and universally esteemed in the com-

JOHN MYERS, of Jackson township, York county, was born Nov. 21, 1876, son of Michael and Maria (Kehr) Myers, and a grandson of George Myers. George Myers was a prominent and successful man of Jackson township, and followed agricultural pursuits all of his life. He married Elizabeth Hoke, and they were the parents of nine children.

Michael Myers was born in Jackson township and received his education in the common and subscription schools of his time. When a young man he engaged in farming, and also interested himself in the production of iron ore, for which York county is noted. In this line he was very successful, and acquired a handsome competency before his death, which occurred in January, 1899, when he was aged about fifty-six years. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He most ably served the people as supervisor and school director, being elected on the Democratic ticket. He was a stockholder in the Farmers' Fire Insurance Company. To Michael Myers and his wife the following children were born: Martin; Ellen, who married Abraham Ream, and has four children, Anna, Melvin, Nora and John; Elizabeth; George; Jonas; John;
Michael; and one that died in infancy.

John Myers remained at home until he was twenty-four years of age, and received his education in the common schools. In 1899 he married Clara A. Brown, and in April, 1904, purchased the fine thirty-acre farm, known as the "Old Picking Farm," situated between York pike and Berlin road, and upon which he now resides. To Mr. and Mrs. Myers two children have been born, Russell and Stella.
Mr. Myers is identified with the Reformed Church, and Mrs. Myers is a Lutheran. In politics he is a Democrat. He is held in high regard in Jackson township.

GEORGE M. SNYDER, foreman of the blacksmithing department of the Martin Car-rriage Works, York, Pa., was born Dec. 11, 1858, in Codorus township, York county, son of John and Mary (Hoffnagle) Snyder.

John Snyder was born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, where he learned the stone and brick mason's trade. He came to America, landing at Baltimore in 1856, where, however, he did not remain long, starting for Codorus township, York Co., Pa., where he had friends.
Mr. Snyder often told of his trip to Codorus township and would relate how, night coming on before he found his friends, he and his wife and daughter slept under a cherry tree, being but three-fourths of a mile from the people he had gone to seek. After locating in Codorus township Mr. Snyder followed stone mason work. He died there in his early manhood, aged twenty-eight years. His wife, Mary Hoffnagle, who had come to America with him, married (second) Julius Kraber, who also died in Codorus township, Mrs.
Kraber still surviving, and residing at Glenville, Codorus township, at the ripe old age of seventy-three years. Children as follows were born to Mrs. Kraber's first marriage: Elizabeth, the wife of John Smith, of Glenville, Codorus township; and George M., subject of this work. To Mrs. Kraber and her second husband were born: Albert, a farmer;
Henry, a stone and brick mason by trade; Catherine, the wife of George Rudisill, living near Hanover, York county; Emma, the wife of Henry Shultheis, living in Baltimore, Md., where he follows tailoring; Deliah, the wife of Daniel Mummert, a farmer near Westminster, Md.; Jennetta, the wife of Clinton Stiffle, living at Glenville, Codorus township; Cora, the wife of Edward Yost, living in Manheim township, York county; and two other children, deceased.

George M. Snyder attended the schools in Manheim township and Jefferson borough until he reached the age of fifteen years. Having been sent out at the age of eight years to make his own way in the world, he worked among the farmers until nineteen years of age, and then went to learn the blacksmith's trade with Samuel Hoffman, at Jefferson borough, where he served his time. He then went to Powder Falls, Md., where he remained eight months, at the end of which time he returned to Jefferson borough and took charge of the large shops of George W. Newman, with whom he remained nine years. In 1890 he came to York, and for three years had full charge of the Martin Spring Wagon Works, but the business grew to such an extent that he now finds his time and attention required exclusively by the blacksmith department, of which he has charge, being foreman of forty mechanics, and a valuable man to his employers.

In 1882 Mr. Snyder was married to Emma Jane Auche, daughter of John and Eva (Rudisill) Auche, and to this union have been born the following named children: William Edward, a graduate of the York high school, class of 1899, is now located in Detroit, where he is engaged in the making of carriage bodies; Annie May is at home; John Urban is attending school; Frederick Walter is attending the York high school; Georgie Eva is attending school. The family reside at No. 721 West Philadelphia street, York. In politics Mr. Snyder is a Democrat, and while in Jefferson borough served as councilman two terms and as chief burgess one year. He is a member of the Heidelberg Reformed Church.

John Auche, the father of Mrs. Snyder, was born July 5, 1802, and his death occurred Feb. 12, 1868. He followed farming much of his life, having purchased a farm in Codorus township, York county, which consisted of 200 acres, but was living retired at the time of his death. He was interred in the family burying ground on the farm near Jefferson borough, York county. The farm, which is finely situated and well cultivated, is now operated by Samuel Auche, son of John, who purchased it from his father's estate.

William H. Luckenbaugh, station agent on the Western Maryland Railroad, at Glenville, in Codorus township, York county, comes from one of the oldest families of this section of Pennsylvania.

Henry Luckenbaugh, the great-great-grandfather, came of German parentage but was born in Heidelberg township, York county, where he died aged eighty-eight years and was buried there. He was a rake maker and also made shingles. His children were: Peter, Henry, Elizabeth.

Peter Luckenbaugh, the great-grandfather, was also born in Heidelberg township, but later removed to North Codorus township. By trade he was a weaver, and he lived to the age of seventy-three years, ten months, fourteen days. He married Anna Mary Moyer, who died at the age of sixty-four years, and three months. Both are buried in North Codorus township. Their children were: Susanna, deceased; Lydia, deceased; John and Henry.

Henry Luckenbaugh, the grandfather, was born July 12, 1833, in North Codorus township, and he learned the shoemaking trade which he followed for fifty-two years. He also carried on farming for a period of twenty-six years, but in 1889 he came to the city of York, and although well advanced in years, continued to work at his trade, being a most excellent workman. He married Lydia Ernst, daughter of Samuel and Beckie (Hamm) Ernst. She died Feb. 12, 1903, aged sixty-five years, eleven months, twenty-two days, and is buried at Green Mount cemetery, York. Their children were: Sarah; Peter; Adam, who married Catherine Senft; Samuel, who married a Miss Rudisill; Rebecca, wife of Eli Senft; Amanda, wife of David Clebber; John, who died young; Minnie, wife of Albert Graybill; and Julian, deceased.

Peter Luckenbaugh, father of William H., was born in Manheim township, York county, and he remained assisting his father, learning the coopering and carpenter trades also. These occupations he followed in North Codorus township. In December, 1902, he removed to York where he is employed as foreman in the Black paper mill. He married Leah Swartz, and they have had children as follows: William H., Edward, Sadie, Howard, Irvine, Minnie, Robert, Jennie and Fannie (twins), and Charles.

William H. Luckenbaugh attended the public schools until he was seventeen years old, and then went to Hanover Junction to learn telegraphing with H. J. Glatfelter. There he remained four years and one month, and then lived a short time in York, when on March 6, 1903, he was appointed to the Glenville station, No. H 43. He is the operator for the Western Maryland Railroad, has charge of the freight and ticket selling, is Adams express agent, and is also the Western Union operator at that point. He is capable, careful and thorough, and his pleasant, obliging manner has gained him a wide circle of friends. It would not be giving Mr. Luckenbaugh sufficient credit did not the biographer mention an accident which cost him the greater part of his good left arm. In spite of this he has become an expert in his profession. In 1892, his horse becoming frightened, he fell from a self-binding machine, and was thrown upon the cutting board. This terrible accident happened on the farm of William Sprengler, near Nashville, in Jackson township. Notwithstanding being thus hampered, he has progressed steadily in his work and has gone far ahead of many of his early competitors. Both in business and in social life Mr. Luckenbaugh enjoys the respect and esteem of the community.

For a number of years Mr. Luckenbaugh has been a valued member of the Lutheran Church, belonging to the Stone Church congregation, and he is now serving as secretary of the Christian Endeavor Society. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A., of Jefferson borough; and of the Jr. O. U. A. M., of Glen Rock.

JOHN JOSEPH MILLER, of North Hopewell township, York county, is successfully engaged in a wheelwright business. He was born in Marietta, Lancaster Co., Pa., March 1, 1871.

John Christian Miller, the father of John Joseph, was born in Germany and attended school there until fourteen years of age. He then learned the wheelwright business, and at the age of eighteen years came to the United States, settling finally at Marietta, Pa., where he worked at his trade, first in the employ of others and later starting out for himself. He was married in Marietta to Miss Mary R. Miller (no relation), who was born and reared at Turkey Hill, Lancaster county. Mr. Miller went into business at various places, finally settling in Winterstown, York county, where he died in 1892, aged about fifty-four years. His wife survived until Jan. 23, 1905, when she passed away aged sixty-one years. They were members of the U. B. Church. In politics Mr. Miller was a Democrat. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. John C. Miller: Charles C., of near York; John Joseph; and Alfred E., who married Miss Dora Harwood, and who owns and operates a blacksmith shop in connection with his brother John's wheelwright business.

John Joseph Miller attended the schools of his native township until thirteen years of age, at that time removing with his father to Spring Garden township, where he lived for four years, meantime finishing his education at the age of fifteen years. He then removed to what is now North Hopewell township, and, having learned the wheelwright business with his father, with whom he had remained ten years, he struck out for himself at his present shop. Starting with little or no capital, Mr. Miller has himself built his business up to its present size, his strict attention to business, his fair and honest dealing, and his good management, having reaped their just reward. He is also the owner of a cozy little sixteen-acre farm, which he operates. Mr. Miller was reared in the U. B. faith. In politics he is a liberal Republican, and has served on the election board.

Mr. Miller was married July 21, 1892, in North Hopewell township, to Miss Rosie E. Miller, daughter of Samuel and Ellen (Brenneman) Miller, both of whom are deceased. Mrs. Miller died in 1908, the mother of the following named children: Ralph C., Charles Arthur, Ellen E. and Herman Stewart.

FRANKLIN W. NEUMAN, president of the Rex Polish Company, of York, and one of that city's successful business men, was born in Dover borough, York county, March 9, 1871, son of Reuben L. Neuman.

Reuben L. Neuman was born in Conewago township, Aug. 12, 1843. He received his education in Dover, Conewago and Warrington townships. He was seven years old when thrown upon his own resources in life, and learned the shoemaking trade in the borough of Dover, which he followed for seventeen years. He married Eliza M. Kling, daughter of George Kling, and after marriage kept a hotel in Dover borough for a while, later going to Hanover. He remained there but a short William L. Frailey, the father of William P., was born and reared in Lancaster county, and resided there until his death. He followed the business of manufacturing combs, and for many years the factory with which he was connected was the only one in the State. He married Miss Leah Greenawalt, daughter of Michael Greenawalt, a farmer of Manor township, Lancaster county, and to this marriage eight children were born, the five living being: William P., a resident of York; Edward F., superintendent of the city water works at Lancaster, Pa.; Harry L., connected with Farmer’s Mills, Lancaster, Pa.; Emma, wife of Frederick Fisher, formerly in the Pennsylvania Railroad service, at Lancaster, now retired; and Peter Lincoln, superintendent of the Hubley Novelty Works, of Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

William P. Frailey was born in Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 5, 1848. Not unlike many other boys of his day, his education was received in private schools. After leaving school he was for some time clerk for Judge Sheaffer, after which he became an apprentice to a marble cutter, none other than the late Major Charles M. Howell, of Lancaster. After serving an apprenticeship which lasted five years he started into business for himself, and for another five years conducted an establishment in Lancaster. In 1880, selling out his business interests in Lancaster, he removed to York, where he became associated with his father-in-law, Mr. Wehrly, in the hotel business.

Mr. Frailey entered the state of matrimony Oct. 23, 1873, his wife being Miss Mary Emma, daughter of George Wehrly, a former hotel-keeper of York, who died in 1898. Four children were born to this union, two of whom died in infancy. Those living are: Lizzie L., wife of Elbert Whitman, of Syracuse, N. Y., connected with the York Manufacturing Company, and Paul W., a machinist.

Three years after becoming a resident of York Mr. Frailey was appointed by Edward Stock, register of wills, to the office of deputy register of wills, in which he served a three years’ term under Mr. Stock and one year under his successor, David Whitman. His next appointment was to the office of inside deputy collector of internal revenue, in which he served four years under Collector R. E. Sheavor, and a little more than one year under Collector Hershey. After leaving the Internal Revenue office Mr. Frailey assisted Louis Helb, the son of Theodore Helb, to manage the brewery while his father was absent on an extended visit in Europe, remaining with them for three years, after which he became connected with C. F. Welsh & Company, wholesale liquor dealers.

Mr. Frailey's first wife died Nov. 20, 1887, and on Jan. 14, 1891, he married Miss Jeanette Hildebrand, a daughter of Henry N. Hildebrand, owner of a meat market in York. In religion Mr. Frailey is a Lutheran, and fraternally he affiliates with the Heptasophs, being a member of Keystone Conclave, No. 12, and active secretary of his lodge for the past fifteen years. In politics a Democrat, he has always voted the ticket as set forth by that party.

The semi-public life which Mr. Frailey has lived in York county, and the different prominent business enterprises with which he has had connection, has caused him for years to be one of York's most widely known citizens. His genial disposition and readiness to enter into the social life of the community have won him hosts of friends throughout the county.

JACOB C. SMYSER, the proprietor of the well known Smyser Carriage Works, located at No. 558 South Queen street, York, was born in Warrington township, this county, Nov. 19, 1873, son of Daniel Smyser.

Daniel Smyser was a native of Warrington township, and was a shoemaker by trade. He married Lydia Rohler, daughter of George Rohler, and to this union the following children were born besides our subject: Lila, Mrs. Samuel Kuntz, of York; Emma, who married William Roth, of York; Charles R., of York; Alberta; and Daniel, of York. Daniel Smyser died in York, where he had followed his trade, March 17, 1892, while his widow still survives, in her fifty-eighth year.

Jacob C. Smyser came to York with his father when he was twelve years old, and here he received his education in the public schools. He learned the trade of carriagemaking with G. W. Hoover, with whom he remained three years, and then worked as a journeyman until 1901, when he embarked in business for himself at his present location, beginning with but a small capital. Mr. Smyser has increased his business facilities as the demand increased, and he has been very successful in his line.

Mr. Smyser was married in 1903 to Stella Lentz, of Red Lion, daughter of John and Susan Leader Lentz, both of whom still survive. Mr. Smyser is a member of the Independent Beneficial Society, of York. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and takes a great interest in the success of his party. He was reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM H. SLOAT, one of the progressive young farmers of Fairview township, was born July 8, 1870, in East Manchester township, where his father and grandfather before him had lived and died. The latter, who was a farmer by occupation, had four children: Henry, who was a carpenter by trade; Eliza, who lives in Lancaster county; a son, who enlisted in the army during the Civil war and was killed; and Samuel, father of William H.

Samuel Sloat, was born in East Manchester township, and as he grew older was given a common school education. He learned the trade of a bridge builder, and for about thirty years followed that occupation with the N. C. Railroad, but during the last years of his life he was engaged in farming in his native township. There his death occurred in 1902, and his remains were laid to rest in the Union cemetery. Samuel Sloat married Emma, daughter of Andrew C. Hake. The widow is now living at the old home in East Manchester township. Children were born to them as follows: Elmer E., who lives at Coal Brook, Lebanon county, engaged in trucking and who formerly was principal of the Millersburg schools; H. H., a graduate of the Lebanon Valley College at Annville, now a merchant and postmaster at Rockport, Carbon county; William H.; Annie, Mrs. Milton Steffy, of Marietta, Lancaster county; Oscar H., who lives with his mother; Ray J., now Mrs. Edward Brent, of Lewistown; and Martha, a teacher living at home.

William H. Sloat received a good education, as after finishing the public schools of East Manchester and Fairview townships, he was sent to the York County Academy and then to the Lebanon Valley College, at Annville. After completing his own training, he at first turned it to account as a teacher and for two terms taught at the Brillingers school in East Manchester township, but he soon decided to make farming his life employment and removed to a farm in Fairview township.
In 1898 he bought his present residence, the old Michael Hart place, of seventy-five acres, and since that time he has added many noticeable improvements and has built a fine house. He is engaged in trucking, poultry raising, and butchering, besides general farming, and regularly attends the Harrisburg markets.

In 1891 Mr. Sloat was married to Salome Beshore, a daughter of Jacob F. and Catherine (Keller) Beshore, and the children who have come to this union are: Carrie, Harry, Lizzie and Martha, and two other children who have died. Mr. Sloat, who is a Republican in his politics, is a member of the school board, and for six years has served as secretary. In religious belief he is a Lutheran, and prominent in church work, having been secretary of the council and elder for eight years, and is now also superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Mr. Sloat is one of the men in whom the whole township has confidence, and represents the best type of citizenship, being always ready to advance to the utmost of his power any movement for the public welfare.

BENJAMIN F. MOORE, of York, Pa., is now employed as night engineer with the Reich Construction Co. Mr. Moore's birth occurred May 29, 1851, in Chanceford township, York Co., Pa., and he is a son of Archibald H. and Annie (Campbell) Moore.

The grandfather of our subject was a resident of Chanceford township, where he followed lime burning for many years. He was a cooper by trade, and also followed that occupation. He and his wife both died in Chanceford township, where they are buried. They had these children: William, John, Samuel, Archibald H., Elizabeth, Katie Cross, Jane McAllister and Margaret Rukert.

Archibald H. Moore, father of Benjamin F., received a common-school education, and for many years followed lime burning. He bought a small farm of sixty-two acres at Felton Station, in Chanceford township, and there followed farming until his death at the age of sixty-one years, eleven months and one day. He married Annie Campbell, and she now resides on the old home with her youngest son, being eighty-five years old. She and her husband had these children: Charles W., who married Cassie Lutz, lives at Felton; Margaret, the widow of John Glassick, who was killed in York, at the Philadelphia street crossing of the N. C. R. R., in 1903, lives with her son in York; Benjamin F.; Amos married Mary Finchbaugh, and lives with his mother; Annie, the wife of Reuben Eckert, lives in Chanceford township; Catherine, the wife of Henry Reever, lives in Springfield township; Ellen, who married Emanuel Heaney, lives at Cross Roads, Hopewell township; and Mollie A., who taught school at Felton, is now superintendent of a colored institution at Millville, Baltimore Co., Md., a position she has held for the past ten years.

Benjamin F. Moore received his education in Chanceford township, attending school until sixteen years of age, and then started out to make his own way in the world. His first employment was with Henry Blouser in Spring Garden township, York county, where he remained three years, and then went with Mr. N. C. Diehl for three years. He married Amanda Smith, daughter of Charles and Harriet (Hoover) Smith, and after marriage located at Emigsville, for one year, after which they located at Spring Garden township, where Mr. Moore was employed by Eli Ebert for five years. He built his present home, No. 956 East Market street, in 1877. He then went to Spring Garden township, where he was employed at various occupations for a time, burning brick for nine years with I. Fry & Co. In 1902 he went on the York police force under Mayor M. B. Gibson, and remained on the force for three years. Mr. Moore is now employed by the Reich Construction Co., as night engineer.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore have no children, but they reared Edward Bender, now a promising young business man, and a chain maker by trade, who married Bertha Sipe. Mr. and Mrs. Moore are members of Christ Lutheran Church.

CLAYTON D. SMITH, a prominent and enterprising young business man of York, who has won his way to success through his own efforts, starting in life as a poor boy, is the junior member of the firm which operates the Star Laundry, the second largest in its line of business in York. Mr. Smith was born Sept. 23, 1874, in Mechanesburg, Cumberland county, son of Adam H. and Mary J. (Kunkle) Smith.

The Smith family originated in Germany, and the York county branch was planted in America about the year 1700 by two brothers, John and Peter Smith, who settled in Lancaster county, Pa., in the valley of the Conestoga Creek. There they lived until 1720, when, with their families, they came to York county, Pa., purchasing about 500 acres of land along the Bermudian Creek, in what was then Warrington township, but now is Washington township (which was erected from the western part of Warrington). The two brothers were farmers, and lived simple, pleasant lives. John became the father of Jacob, Emanuel, Gabriel and Salome. Peter's children were: Samuel, Henry, Abraham, Peter, George, Mary, Hannah, Elizabeth and Catharine. These children grew to maturity, intermarried with some of the foremost families in York, Adams, Cumberland and Lancaster counties, and their descendants today, under such names as Nathier, Zimmerman, Myers, Newcomer, Chronister, Brown, Ernst, Fickel, Butt, McReary, Bower, Wheler and Smith, are scattered all over the Union.

(II) Jacob Smith, son of John, married Elizabeth Smith, third daughter of Peter, and to this union were born six sons and three daughters, namely: (1) Joel married Widow Polly Bower, and died at a ripe old age without issue. (2) John married Nancy Roller, and their children were: William, of Lewisberry, York county; Levi, of Reading township, who died leaving a family of eight boys; Anna, who married Peter Coble, of York; Elizabeth, who married Joseph Kunke, of Cashtown, Adams Co., Pa.; John, now living at Alpine, Warrington township, this county; Ephraim, residing at Hall, Pa.; Rebecca, who married Edward Brillhart, of Bignum, York county; Moses, of Highspire, Lancaster county; and Josiah, who died at the age of twenty years. (3) Mary married George Myers, and became the mother of one son and four daughters: George who became one of Ohio's foremost men, and died at the advanced age of eighty-three; Polly, who married a Dull; Margaret, who married a Bream; Harriet, who also married a Bream; and Mary, who married a Myers, and moved to St. Joseph, Mich., while her sisters Polly, Margaret and Harriet remained in Pennsylvania, finding homes in the vicinity of Biglerville, Adams county. (4) Anna died unmarried. (5) Gabriel was twice married, and by his first wife had born to him: Joseph, Jacob, Louis, Sarah, Susan, Barbara, Lydia and Louisa. This family all live in the neighborhood of Bendersville, Arendtsville and Gettysburg, Adams county, except Lydia, who moved to Winchester, Va. (6) Peter J. is mentioned below. (7) Jacob. (8) Rebecca married a Newcomer. (9) Darius never married.

(III) Peter J. Smith, son of Jacob, married Eva Bentz, and they began their wedded life on a farm near Davidsburg, York county. After the second year they bought a small farm in Washington township, this county, near the town hall, and there they lived for thirty-three years. They were the parents of seven boys and one girl, as follows: (1) Andrew B., born in 1839, learned the saddler's trade, which he followed until the outbreak of the Civil war in 1861. He enlisted in Company H, 87th P. V. I., and served three years, and when he was honorably discharged held the rank of captain. He was taken prisoner at Winchester, and suffered six weeks confinement in Libby prison. He died at the age of thirty-four, the father of three children: Arthur C., the capable assistant manager of one of the largest flouring mills in the world, at Minneapolis, Minn.; Grace, who married Irvin C. Hummel, of Mechanicsburg, Pa.; and Bertha, who died aged nine years. (2) Leah married John Hoffman, a soldier and comrade of his brother Andrew B. They moved to Parsons, Kans., in 1877, and afterward went to Nebraska, but because of the severe winters returned to Kansas, their present home. Their eldest son, Jacob S., remained on the farm in Nebraska, and of their other children, Mary Emma married and lives in Nebraska; Peter is at home; John is an electrician and lives in Florida; and Eva is at home. (3) Adam H. is mentioned farther on. (4) Hiram B. left home in 1870 for the West, and has never been back. He has met with all the disasters of wind, drought and fire, but with the steady persistence and energy of his race he has forged ahead, and after being engaged in farming and in the hardware business, he is now postmaster at Portis, Kans. He had three daughters and one son, the latter dying at the age of five years. (5) Peter B. went to Nebraska in 1879 with his brother Aaron G. He has been teaching school, building warehouses, traveling, etc., ever since, and at present is president of the largest grain and milling company in the world, located at Minneapolis, Minn. He has been twice married, but has no children. (6) Aaron G. is a successful farmer in Washington township, York county, owning two farms, and also a lot in Hall. He has been married twice, by his first wife having four children, Lloyd, Portis, Anna D. and Susie Eva. (7) David F. has always lived in the vicinity of the old home. For twenty-nine years he taught school, and for almost twenty years has been a justice of the peace. He married Mary C. Hartman, and they have had children as follows: Bessie M.; Maud H.; Esther Helen; Mary Ada, who died aged eight years; and Luke Russel. (8) Jacob L. died in boyhood.

(IV) Adam H. Smith, second son of Peter J., was born in Washington township, York county, and was a millwright by trade. For four or five years he was a very successful school teacher, and afterward engaged in farming, which he continued until the death of his wife, Mary J. Kunkle. He then sold out and moved to the city. His health failed, and he died in 1892. During the Civil war he served nine months as a private in Company E, 200th P. V. I. His children, who for a time all remained in York, were: Dora B., who married Samuel Smith; Clayton D.; Hattie M., who married Charles Brant, of York; Mary A., a successful teacher for several years at Spring Grove, Pa.; Harry W., an electrician in York; and Myrtle B., now deceased.

(V) Clayton D. Smith was brought to York at the age of twelve years by his father, where he was educated in the public schools. His first employment was as bookkeeper for the York Ice and Refrigerating Co., with which company he remained eighteen months, when he engaged with the City Laundry, where he filled various positions until 1899. In this year, in company with his present partner, L. D. Herman, Mr. Smith started in business in a small way, employing but three people, and having just such machinery as was absolutely necessary, and they have since increased their capacity and machinery until they now have a fully equipped, modern plant, and give employment to nineteen people. The business of the Star Laundry is not confined to York alone. In fact, about one-half of their business is from outside agencies in the State and in Maryland, and the firm stands high in the estimation of the people.

On March 17, 1898, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Minnie Eichelberger, born in Monaghan township, daughter of Alfred and Mary (Mellinger) Eichelberger, of that township. Mrs. Smith's grandparents were worshippers in the River Brethren Church, and her parents worshipped in the Church of God. All were farming people. Mrs. Smith's grandfather, Squire Eichelberger, was well-known in Monaghan township for many years. To Mr. and Mrs. Clayton D. Smith have been born three children: Edna Grace, Mary Pauline and Clayton Dale, Jr.

Mr. Smith and his wife are members of the St. Paul's United Evangelical Church, in which he takes an active part, being a member of the building committee on the erection of the new edifice. He is superintendent of the Sunday-school, in which he has been active for some time past. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 505, in which he has passed all the chairs, and is now one of the trustees; and the I. O. O. F., No. 47; the K. of M., No. 174; and the S. of V., No. 33. Mr. Smith and his family reside at No. 452 West King street, York.

FRANCIS S. ZINN, the popular alderman of the Sixth ward of York, is one of the most conspicuous figures in the political life of the city. He is a lineal descendant of Count Wallenstein, whose very name was a synonym for victory in the armies of Ferdinand II, of Germany, during the Thirty Years' War, and who, according to his biographer, "was blunt, short and proud, and something mysterious about him that, with his magnificent gifts, bound men's hearts to him." Francis L. Zinn was born Oct. 26, 1847, in Hirschberg, Province of Silesia, Austria, son of George J. and Theresa (Herhesal) Zinn. The name was originally spelled Zurn.

Major George J. Zinn came of a military people and a proud race. He served with valor in the Austrian army, but when ill-timed counsels brought obscurity to the Austrians he departed for the United States. Soon after landing he settled in Hanover, York county, where he made a home for himself and family. His brother served in the Union army, commanding a brigade of New York troops and leading them at the battle of the Wilderness. When the smoke of that terrible conflict had cleared away General Zinn was numbered among the missing, and was never afterward heard of.

Major Zinn was born in Wittenberg, Germany, March 18, 1810, and in 1857 came to Hanover, York county. He was made superintendent of Mount Olivet cemetery, holding that position until his death, in 1879, when he was laid to rest with the honors accorded Odd Fellows and members of the Grand Army of the Republic in the cemetery which he had so long cared for. Like all his family he was large of stature and noted for his strength. During the Civil war he served nine months in Company F, 166th P. V. I. His wife, Theresa Herhesal, was a daughter of Henry Herhesal, of Austria. Five children blessed this home, all of them born at Hirschberg, Austria, namely: Mary K., wife of Henry Fleeschauer, of New York City; Fanny, wife of Ludwig Marerott, of Hanover, York county; Rosa Theresa, wife of Joseph Every, of New York City; John L., who succeeded his father as superintendent of Mount Olivet cemetery; and Francis S., the alderman of the Sixth ward.

Francis S. Zinn grew to manhood in Hanover, York county, and was educated at the Hanover Collegiate Institute. Becoming proficient in the German language, he taught it for some time in New York City. Returning to Hanover, he remained there until 1888, when he was made steward of the York County Alms-house, where he served three years with distinguished ability. His first recognition of a political character was his election as assessor of Heidelberg township in 1866. Next he served as school director for nine years. After his term as steward at the Alms-house expired, he superintended the construction of the “Hobleston Hotel,” at Turnpike Station, on the Stewartstown railroad, and in 1894 was appointed alderman of the Sixth ward of York, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John Bentz. In 1895 he was elected to the office for a term of five years, again in 1900, and honored with a third election in February, 1905, enjoying the distinction of being the only Democrat elected in the city at that time. He received a majority of seventeen, in a ward so strongly Republican that it gave Roosevelt a majority of 358 in November, 1904.

Mr. Zinn is an Odd Fellow, being a member of Hanover Encampment No. 327, also of the State and National Encampments. He is quite a musician, having been for years the director of the Silver Band, of Hanover, and being in charge of the Bee Hive Orchestra of Christ Lutheran Church, in which he has also been elder for eight or more years, and is at present the secretary of the vestry.

Mr. Zinn has been twice married. His first wife, whom he married in March, 1868, was Belinda Parr, daughter of Jacob Parr. She died Feb. 5, 1882, in her thirty-third year, the mother of four children: Ida M. (wife of Edward Jacobs), Otto J., George W. and R. T. On Aug. 22, 1883, Mr. Zinn married Anne Mary Gebensleben, of Hanover, and to this union has come one daughter, Alberta Georgianna, who is living at home.

FRANCIS A. BARRETT, well-known in his section of York county as a good citizen, has been successfully engaged in farming for many years. He was born in Wooster, Ohio, Oct. 7, 1841.

Mr. Barrett’s grandfather was born in Yorkshire, England, and came to this country in 1821, following the hotel business until his death. His son, our subject’s father, was also born in Yorkshire, England, in 1809. Coming to America with his father in 1821, he settled at Wooster, Ohio, and took up the trade of carpenter, later becoming a merchant. In 1830 he married Maria, daughter of David and Mary Morris, of Pennsylvania, and he died at Wooster, Ohio, aged eighty-two years; his wife passed away at the age of sixty-eight years.

Francis A. Barrett worked on the home farm and assisted his father until old enough to commence for himself, when he engaged in the shoe business. In 1881 he gave it up and purchased a farm at Wellsville, Warrington township, and has continued agricultural pursuits up to the present time. Mr. Barrett was twice married, his first wife being Emma H. Wells, of Wellsville, who died in 1898, leaving her husband three children: William Hunter, who is in the leather business in New York City; Ruth Dinsmore, a graduate of Dickinson College, class of 1902, who is at present teaching in the high school at Hazleton, Pa.; and Margaret Wells, who is attending the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn. Mr. Barrett’s second marriage was to Clara A., daughter of William B. and Phoebe (Frankelberger) Ross, a descendant of the old Ross family of York county, founders of Rossville, Warrington township.

Mrs. Barrett was born on the old homestead near Rossville on a tract of land comprising between 300 and 400 acres, given to Alexander Ross by the Penns, and at the present time has in her possession the original deed or land warrant, which is written on parchment and bears Thomas Penn's signature, also King George's seal attached. The first Ross (of this branch) who came to America was William, who married Jean Nisbit. Ten children blessed their union. Alexander, the eldest, married Margaret Ewing, and they also had a family of ten children. William, the eldest, married Margaret Bigham, and they had five children, one of which was named William Bigham Ross, and became the father of Mrs. Barrett. William B. Ross was born in 1827. In 1851 he married Phoebe Frankelberger, of Lewisberry, York Co., Pa., and to them seven children were born, viz.: James Alexander, who is deceased; Charles Frankelberger, a justice of the peace of Warrington township; Margaret Ann; Mary Elizabeth; Florence J., deceased; Clara A., married to Francis A. Barrett; and Alice Eliza, deceased.

The Ross family is one of the oldest and most respected families in Warrington township and York county. William, son of Alexander, was twice a member of the Legislature and up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1861, he was a justice of the peace, really serving as counselor and court in many cases. The Rosses have always been noted for their honesty and integrity, always holding offices of trust in the township, and have been in truth among the makers of history. Four generations of them now lie buried in the Warrington Friends graveyard, it being the most desirable resting-place in the township. The first four generations held to the good old Scotch-Irish Presbyterian faith; the present generation are Methodists, there being no Presbyterian church nearer than ten miles, and they decided they could worship with the Methodists better than to go that distance to the Presbyterian church. The older generations went regularly to Dillsburg to worship in the old Monaghan Church; they usually rode horseback, leaving the Ross homestead early in the morning and taking lunch with them that they might remain for the afternoon service.

WINFIELD SCOTT HAMMOND, of Lewisberry, owner and controller of the Hammond Window Sash Spring, to the manufacture of which the principal part of his business career has been devoted, was born in Lewisberry Sept. 11, 1847. He comes of a family which has long been honored in that vicinity, its members ranking among the most progressive and intelligent people of the community.

The Hammonds are of Colonial stock, the first of this line to come to America having been William Hammond, son of Admiral Hammond, of the English navy. He sailed from Ipswich, England, in the ship "Francis," about 1634, and arriving in America joined the Boston Colony, settling at Watertown, Mass. The family was prominent in the mother country, and its members have sustained the prestige of the name on this side of the Atlantic. From William and his brother Thomas, who also emigrated to Massachusetts, most of the Hammonds in this country are descended, and many have become prominent in the industrial and political history of the United States. They intermarried with the ancestors of President Garfield and General Sherman, who also settled in Watertown.

Jabez Hammond, the great-grandfather of Winfield Scott Hammond, settled in the town of Canterbury, Windham Co., Conn., about 1760. When the Revolution broke out he entered the Colonial service and participated in several of the decisive battles of that struggle.

Elisha Hammond, son of Jabez, was born in Connecticut Feb. 7, 1769. He received an excellent education in the schools of his native State, understood the higher mathematics and theoretical surveying and for a number of years was a successful teacher. In early manhood he went to Marbletown, N. Y., where he taught school in 1791, and later he followed the profession at Owego, N. Y. Thence he went to the Wyoming settlement in Luzerne county, Pa., and from there came down the Susquehanna river on an "ark," about 1797 locating in Fairview township, York county, near Lewisberry. He brought with him many books on scientific and literary subjects, and before long was engaged to teach the youths of the intelligent Quaker settlement, where education was always encouraged. He was a man of high character and enjoyed good standing wherever he went, and his endorsements of qualifications and success in his profession have come down to his descendants, who cherish them highly. Mr. Hammond was acquainted with I. M. Singer before he invented his famous sewing machine, having met him in Pittsburgh, and he examined the rough model and suggested some improvements, loaning Mr. Singer ten dollars to go ahead with the invention.

Elisha Hammond married Rebecca Frankelberger, of a family prominent in the Redland Valley, and they became the parents of ten children, namely: Hervey, Maria, Mary, David, William, Hannah, John, Thomas, Philip and Sarah. The father of this family died March 28, 1824, the mother surviving until Jan. 31, 1863; she reached the advanced age of eighty-two years.

Hervey Hammond was born Dec., 23, 1800, and grew to manhood in his native town, meanwhile receiving his education in the school of his father and that of Isaac Kirk, the distinguished surveyor. He inherited the love of learning from many generations of scholarly ancestors, and proved a ready pupil, attaining proficiency in the ordinary branches at an unusually early age, and with his father's advice and assistance delving into the higher studies. He soon determined to follow his father's profession. As early as 1825 he introduced the scientific study of English grammar in his neighborhood, and he was also of a distinctly mathematical turn of mind. This endowment he in time put to practical use in the invention of the now famous Hammond Window Sash Spring, which has continued to grow steadily in popularity up to the present. It was patented in 1837, and the year following Mr. Hammond placed the springs in the windows of the White House, at Washington, receiving a recommendation for them from Henry Clay and other noted people. From that time his principal attention was devoted to their manufacture and sale, and although he had no easy task he made a complete success of the business. While engaged as a traveling salesman, wholesaling goods and merchandise, he began to introduce his springs, and thus built up the business which increased to such large proportions from very small beginnings. He had to create a market for his goods as well as to produce them, and as few such appliances were then in general use he had to educate his patrons first to a sense of their need for them. By 1840 the number of annual sales had reached 35,000, and Mr. Hammond lived to see his invention reach the profitable stage. He was a progressive man in every way, and being deeply interested in the cause of education was one of the early supporters of free schools, and became one of the first school directors under the new law. He took an active part always in the work of the school board, and was present at the election of his friend and neighbor, Hon. Jacob Kirk, as first district superintendent of the schools of York county. He introduced many other improvements into the village of Lewisberry, and was ever known as one of its most intelligent citizens.

On Sept. 15, 1825, at Carlisle, Pa., Mr. Hammond married Katherine Ann Harman, who was born Aug. 31, 1807, in Warrington township, York county, daughter of Adam and Rachel (Diceman) Harman, members of the Methodist Church and intelligent, respected people. Mrs. Hammond, like her husband, was possessed of fine traits of mind and character. She survived her husband, dying July 31, 1863, while he passed away Aug. 27, 1855. They were the parents of nine children, namely: Andrew, who is deceased; Benjamin, who died of cholera at Aurora, Ind., in 1849; Caroline E., deceased; Delilah A., who lives in Missouri; Edward W., a botanist, and vice-president of the American Forestry Association for Oregon; Rebecca R., of Cantrall, Ill.; Mary, who is deceased; Winfield Scott; and Ida C., of Waynesburg, Greene Co., Pennsylvania.

Winfield Scott Hammond was born Sept. 11, 1847, in Lewisberry. He followed the bent of the family generally in his taste for study and reading, improving the excellent opportunities afforded at home and taking advantage of the encouragement he received from his parents in that line. He acquired his early education in the public schools and pursued the higher branches at home, making good use of the home library and other books to which he had access. He was only a boy when the Civil war broke out, but in the winter, early in 1865, he enlisted in Company I, 192d Pennsylvania Volunteers, continuing in the service until the fall of the year. Soon after leaving the army he went to Missouri, spending about eighteen months in the southeastern section of that State, during which time he was engaged as compositor and local editor in a printing office, and was also employed in the United States land office, which was in charge of one of the proprietors of the paper. This was under what was known as the “carpet bag” regime, and Mr. Hammond became acquainted with many of the most important figures in the political life of that part of the country, and had an opportunity to enter same himself. He was offered the clerkship of one of the southeastern counties of the State, but he was anxious to return home and get into business, and he refused.

Coming back to Pennsylvania, Mr. Hammond engaged in the manufacture and sale of the window springs, and has ever since continued in that line. Mr. Hammond has made a number of improvements on the original spring, has invented several new styles of springs, and has changed completely the process of manufacture, bringing his establishment up to date in every particular. The springs are sold in large quantities to wholesale dealers. He is a progressive man in every way, and has never lost his fondness for reading and observation of matters of general interest, so that he is not only known as one of the successful residents of Lewisberry, but also as one of that important class which supports intellectual and educational movements which promise to benefit the community in general and those who take enjoyment in such matters in particular. He early developed a taste for painting, and he has made many interesting sketches of local places of interest, especially in the upper end of York county. He has served in local positions, having been a member of the school board, of which he was secretary, and he has twice been a delegate to the State Republican convention.

Mr. Hammond was united in marriage, in 1873, to Miss Jeannette Starr, daughter of Reuben T. and Elizabeth (Lloyd) Starr, of Lewisberry, and three children were born to them: (1) Edward, a clerk, holds a responsible position in the postoffice department at Washington, D. C. (2) Grace K. is an artist, and has been engaged to make drawings (of flowers, plants and vegetables) for D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, Mich., and the Johnson Seed House, of Philadelphia, and also for such high-class magazines as the Ladies' Home Journal and other publications; the art editor of Harper's Magazine wrote her a request for drawings. On Aug. 23, 1902, she became the wife of William S. Nortenheim, a Philadelphia artist, who makes all kinds of drawings for books and magazines. He has recently produced cover designs for the Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies' Home Journal. (3) Bennett, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Hammond, born April 3, 1889, is now messenger in the office of the commissioner of pensions at Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Hammond is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but she is of Quaker ancestry, her forefathers having been Friends in Chester county, Pa., where the Taylor, Sharpless, Lloyd and Starr families are well known.

GEORGE ROBERT SEIFFERT, residing at No. 923 South St. Bernard street, Philadelphia, was born at Dover, York Co., Pa., Dec. 15, 1867. His father was Ambrose H. Seiffert, who was married to Mary Ann Daron, and both were also natives of York county. Mr. Seiffert was educated in the York public schools, graduating in 1886, and afterward went to Philadelphia to complete a course in stenography. He was subsequently employed as stenographer for some years with the Second Geological Survey of Pennsylvania and the Pullman Palace Car Company. In 1892 he decided to engage in a mercantile career, and established offices in Baltimore and Washington for the sale of typewriters, etc. Some years later he returned to Philadelphia, where he continued in the same line of business. In 1902 he became associated with the Acme Tea Company, Inc., of Philadelphia, in the capacity of office manager, and is still identified with that corporation.

Mr. Seiffert is a member of the Pennsylvania Historical, Pennsylvania-German, Pennsylvania Genealogical, York County Historical and other societies of a kindred character, and is deeply interested in their work. He is at present compiling an extensive history and genealogy of the "Seiffert-Henise and Daron-Kern" families, representing the families of the parents of Mr. Seiffert's parents.

Mr. Seiffert was married, on March 29, 1893, by Rev. A. S. Mowbray, to Miss Laura Burkley Everson, of Newport, Del., daughter of Alexander W. and Anna Belle (Flinn) Everson. They have two children: Mervin Francis, born June 7, 1894, and George Robert, Jr., born August 12, 1906.

It is claimed that the first emigrant ancestor of the Seiffert family was Johann Seifert, of Wittenberg, Germany, who sailing from Bremen landed in this country in 1676. He eloped with a Miss Schwatzvalder, whose parents were very wealthy, and who were opposed to the match by reason of the financial condition of her ardent young admirer. Determined to husband what little money they were able to get together in their hasty flight, they decided to work out their passage. Consequently on arrival at New Amsterdam they were both sold by the captain of the vessel to a farmer in the northern part of New Jersey for £30 each. In return for this amount the farmer received their services for one year, and upon the expiration of their bondage the couple, being free, were duly married. Having decided to locate in Pennsylvania, they crossed above Easton, and amid many hardships traveled over the northern section of the State, finally selecting a home site in Perry county, near the junction of the Juniata and Susquehanna rivers.

Information, at this writing, as to the names and number of their children, is too meager to be recorded here. It is known definitely, however, that a grandson of this couple, Adam Seyfert, was born in Perry county, June 13, 1722. During the Revolution, owing to the Indians becoming very troublesome, Adam and his family were obliged to desert their home and temporarily moved eastward. Later they returned and located in York county, near Dover. Here Adam died Dec. 28, 1787, and was buried in the old graveyard at Strayer's church. His widow Anna Mary survived him, and according to his will they had but one child, Michael.

This son Michael (Dover township) and his wife Matelena had ten children, as follows: Michael (married Polly Leimbaugh), John (married a Lauer), Catharine (married Joseph Bower), George (married Mary —_), John Adam, Philip, Barbara, Elizabeth, Mary and Susanna. Michael afterward separated from his wife. He married again and removed to Ohio, establishing a large mill near Marietta. Some years later he was accidentally killed in his mill.

Michael (York county), who was married to Polly Leimbaugh, died April 29, 1863, at the age of eighty-eight years, and his wife on Sept. 21, 1850, aged sixty-seven years; both were buried in the old graveyard at Strayer's church. The nine children of this couple were: Lydia (married George Burkheimer), Samuel (married Elizabeth Menges), Susanna (married George Kimmel), Catharine (married Joseph Straley and afterward John Gerber), Andrew (married Annie —_), Rev. Henry (married Harriet Meisenhelter), Sarah (married Philip Seidenstricker), Lucy (married Abraham Lonkerd), and Michael.

John (Dover township), the second named son of Michael and Matelena, was first married to a Lauer, and after her death he married a widow named Brown. They removed to Ohio about 1830, settling near Fairfield, where both died. John's children, seven in number, were all by his first wife, namely: John (married Elizabeth Henise), Jesse (married Lucy Ann Zinn), Lena (married Abraham Gordon), Sarah (married John Brown), Michael, Abraham and Jacob.

John Seifert (Dover), who married Elizabeth Henise, the daughter of George and Barbara (Meisenhelter) Henise, died March 29, 1888, at the age of seventy-four, and his widow died Dec. 12, 1889, aged seventy-seven years; both are buried in the cemetery at Strayer's church. This couple had seven children also: Ambrose H. (married Mary Ann Daron) Franklin L. (married Elizabeth Jacoby), Sarah Catharine (married John Strine), Rebecca E. (married Rolandus H. Stouch), Barbara Ann, Emeline Sophia, and John Henry died single.

Ambrose H. Seiffert (York, Pa.), who married Mary Ann Daron, the daughter of George and Lydia (Kern) Daron, died Sept. 2, 1904, aged sixty-six years, and was buried at Greenmount cemetery. His widow is still living. They had five children, all living: John Henry, George Robert (the subject of our sketch), Franklin Morris, Maggie Musette, and Ralph Stuart.

AUGUSTUS M. HAKE, contractor and builder, is one of the most promising young business men of York. He has been established in the contracting line for only three years, but has, nevertheless, in that short time, made his way to the very front rank of the city's builders. He was born in Manchester, York county, July 18, 1873, son of Frederick G. and Sallie (Moore) Hake, at that time residents of Manchester.

The Hake family is of German descent. The grandparents of Augustus M. Hake were Andrew F. and Eliza (Gross) Hake, who reared a family of four sons and three daughters. Frederick G. Hake was the eldest son, and was born in Conewago township, York county, May 29, 1837. He remained on the home farm until he was grown, receiving his education in the public schools, and at the age of twenty-one he started in life for himself. He remained in Manchester borough until 1874, in that year moving to a fine farm of 160 acres which he owned, four miles west of York. His parents had left Manchester two years earlier and moved to Harrisburg, where they passed the rest of their lives in retirement. Mr. Hake was married at the age of twenty-three to Miss Sarah Moore, daughter of Jacob Moore, of Manchester borough, and a family of ten children was born to them, namely: Edward M., who is a railway official at St. Louis; Mary Ellen, Mrs. Joseph Eisenhart; William Albert, a grocer; Jennie, Mrs. Luther Glatfelter; Elizabeth; Annie; Augustus M.; Maggie; Carrie; and Hattie. Mr. and Mrs. Hake were brought up in the Lutheran Church, but as the United Brethren Church was nearer they united with that in 1874. Mr. Hake owns considerable valuable property, in different places, and is a prominent and highly respected citizen.

Augustus M. Hake attended the public schools of his native town and at the age of fifteen began to learn the carpenter's trade. Later appreciating the opportunities before him in his chosen line of work he began a five years' course at the International Correspondence School of Scranton, and in 1902 was graduated in architecture. Meantime, after completing his apprenticeship in carpentry under Henry Draer, of Mt. Wolf, Mr. Hake worked at his trade for a year in St. Louis, and then returned to York to take employment under such contractors as George Yenger, J. C. Fallon and Jacob Beitzel. On March 1, 1903, he severed his connection with the last named and in company with Harry Ebert engaged in contracting and building under the firm name of A. M. Hake & Co. Their office is at No. 10 West Market street, and they have from the very beginning done an extensive business, employing sixty-five men an average. During the year 1903 they erected fifty-four buildings, and sixty-six in the succeeding year, the largest amount of business done by any similar firm in the city, while for 1905 they held contracts for ninety-nine houses, new structures. Among their principal contracts were seven on South Pine street, fifteen on Locust, nine on Reinecker place, eight on Hamilton avenue, thirteen on Penn and Codorus, two on West Market, six on West Princess street, and sixteen in Eberton, all residence properties. Mr. Hake is admirably equipped for his work, as he is a thorough mechanic and carpenter as well as architect, and he gives his entire attention to his building operations.

On Oct. 27, 1896, Mr. Hake was united in matrimony to Miss Carrie Welsh, daughter of Albert Welsh, and their union has been blessed with one daughter, Emma. The family home is at No. 427 South George street.

JOHN R. LAFEAN, of the well known firm of Lafean Bros., manufacturing confectioners, is a brother of Hon. D. F. Lafean, of Charles F. Lafean, president of the Lafean Paper Company, and also of A. H. Lafean & Brother, the West Market street druggists, all of whose sketches will be found elsewhere. Mr. Lafean was born in York July 29, 1873, and received his education in the public schools. Immediately thereafter he entered into the wholesale candy business, the other members of the firm being Charles F. and George Jacob. Their manufactures include staple penny goods and mixtures, and their business, which was established in 1886, has grown to large proportions, as their goods find a constant market throughout the State.

John R. Lafean was married July 3, 1900, to Georgetta L. Moore, daughter of the late George Moore, of Shrewsbury. To Mr. and Mrs. Lafean one child has been born, Henry Moore. John R. Lafean is a member of the Blue Lodge of Masons; Junior Order of American Mechanics; the Knights of Malta; the York Club, and York Lodge of Elks. He is a consistent member of Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church. In politics, like all of the Lafean family, he is an earnest Republican; was honored with the position of chairman of the highway commission for two years, and was also president of the Select branch of the Councils, to which latter office he was elected from the Fourth ward of York. In February, 1905, he was elected city treasurer of York by a handsome majority. Mr. Lafean has made a very popular official and counts his friends by the score, not only in the Republican party, in the ranks of which he is an energetic worker, but among the Democrats as well; for, while one of the staunchest of Republicans, he is never offensive. As president of the Select council he was impartial in his rulings and commanded the respect of men of all parties, as was evident by his triumphant election to the responsible office of city treasurer.
HENRY S. LANDIS, residing on his fine farm of twenty-eight acres situated one mile south of Stony Brook, was born July 12, 1840, in that neighborhood, son of Emanuel and Catherine (Sheaffer) Landis.

John Landis, the paternal grandfather of Henry S. Landis, married a Miss Kaltreider.

Emanuel Landis in early life was a laborer but later bought a farm, which he worked until his death at the age of fifty-eight years. Politically he was a Democrat. The children born to him and his wife were as follows: Henry S.; Abraham, deceased; Levi, deceased; Sarah, who married Samuel Hovis, of York township; John, who resides in Dover; David, who resides in Ohio; Adam, who lives in York; and one daughter that died in infancy.

Henry S. Landis was reared in York county and received his education in the common schools, remaining at home until twenty years of age when he engaged as a day laborer for a time. He then rented a farm, which he worked until about 1882 or 1883, when he purchased the farm which he now owns, and on which he has since remained.

In 1864 Mr. Landis married Miss Lydia B. Lehman, daughter of Bishop Jacob Lehman; she died March 1, 1904, at the age of sixty-five years and eight months. Eight children were born to this union, four of whom died in infancy. Those still living are: Fannie, who married Aaron Kise, a cigar maker; Mary, who married Franklin Leader, of York; William, a cigar maker of North York; and Clayton, a former school teacher, now a clerk for the York Safe Works. Mr. Landis has been supervisor of the township, and for six years a member of the school board. In religion he is connected with the Mennonite Church. He is a leading citizen of Springettsbury township, where through a long life of industry and good citizenship, he has won the esteem of all.

GEORGE A. LONG is prominently associated with one of the successful industries of Hanover—the Long Furniture Company. This business, which was afterward incorporated, was established as a limited partnership by A. C. Long, A. R. Crandall, J. B. Weeks, F. J. Busom, John L. Long and John W. Mumper. They manufacture tables of a wide variety, which have won quick appreciation in the furniture trade, and now command a ready sale throughout the United States. A considerable export trade has also been established, especially in England, Australia and Mexico. The large plant of the company is substantially built of brick, and is equipped with the latest and most highly improved machinery, and employs regularly from eighty to one hundred men.

George A. Long, secretary of this prosperous corporation, was born in Hanover, Pa., in 1867, son of Henry and Sarah (Funk) Long, of York county, and grandson of John Long, who was born near York in 1785, and throughout life followed the trade of tailor. Henry Long, father of George A., was born in Marietta, Lancaster county, Oct. 16, 1819, and has spent his long life largely in York county. He was twice married, first to a Miss Libhart, and second to Sarah Funk. His children were: Adaline; Mary E., who married M. H. Naill, of Hanover; Hon. W. H., ex-member of the State Legislature; John Luther, a prominent attorney and dramatist of Philadelphia; Sarah J., who married Rev. J. H. Correll, now stationed as missionary in Japan; George A.; and Albert C., superintendent of The Long Furniture Company. The father, Henry Long, is a prominent member of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, and in politics is a stanch Democrat. Though now in his eighty-seventh year he is hale and hearty.

In the public schools of Hanover George A. Long received his education. In his earlier business life he was prominently identified with the boot and shoe business, and was at one time a member of the shoe manufacturing concern of Bacon, Long & Bean. Among his other business interests Mr. Long is a stockholder and director of the Hanover Improvement Company, of which he was one of the leading organizers.

Mr. Long is a prominent member of Hanover Lodge, No. 327, I. O. O. F., and also of Hanover Lodge, No. 763, B. P. O. Elks. As a factor in the religious and social life of Hanover and vicinity, he is endowed with a strong and musical bass voice, and as a vocalist he has ably conducted several choirs in the churches of Hanover.

Mr. Long married Sarah J. Bingley, daughter of John J. and Sarah Bingley, of Hanover. Both Mr. and Mrs. Long are active and in-fluent in the work of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church.

WALTER FRANKLIN OWEN, deputy sheriff of York county, is a son of Thomas F. and Mary (White) Owen, the former the well-known South Beaver street clothier.

Thomas F. Owen married Mary White, daughter of T. Kirk White, and she died Feb. 2, 1892, aged forty years. Six children were born to this marriage, of whom Blanche died at the age of fifteen years; Kirk is connected with the York Daily; Ashmer is a clerk in the York Dental Supplies Manufacturing Company; Edith married George C. Potts, a prominent druggist of Harrisburg; Grace makes her home with her sister Mrs. Potts; and Walter Franklin is mentioned below.

Walter Franklin Owen was born at No. 42 East College avenue, York, May 20, 1876, and was educated in the York public schools. At an early age he became an apprentice printing in the York Dispatch office where he remained four years, and at this time he became president of the Penn Park Athletic Association, holding that office for two years. He was then appointed deputy sheriff under Sheriff Peeling, filling the position so efficiently for three years that, when Sheriff Manifold went into office in January, 1905, Mr. Owen was retained for three more years. Considering that Mr. Owen is a Democrat, while Sheriff Manifold is a Republican, this appointment is surely a tribute to his efficiency and integrity.

Mr. Owen is a member of the Rescue Fire Company, and the foreman of the company, to which he has belonged ten years. He is also assistant chief of the York Fire Department. Next to his record as a fireman Mr. Owen is best known, perhaps, for his zealous interest in athletic sports. In his religious connection he is a member of Trinity Reformed Church.

REV. GEORGE P. SEUBERT, formerly the honored pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, in the city of York, did much to vitalize and forward the interests of his parish, while his generous and genial nature and his high scholarship gained for him the unequivocal confidence and regard of his people.

Father Seubert comes of stanch German ancestry, and is a native son of the old Keystone State, having been born in Lebanon, Pa. He was eventually to be called upon to "minister in holy places." He obtained his early educational training in the parochial schools of his native town, and then became a student of Mount Union College, in Westmoreland county, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1896. In the meantime he had determined to prepare himself for the priesthood, and thus to consecrate his life to the service of the Divine Master. With this noble object in view Father Seubert went to Austria and entered the famous old University of Innsbruck, in Tyrol, this great Catholic institution dating its foundation back to 1572. In this university Father Seubert completed his theological course. He was appointed rector of St. Lawrence Church, in Harrisburg, Pa., later was assigned to the parish at Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and thereafter was in charge of St. Anthony's Parish in Lancaster until November, 1900, when he was appointed priest in charge of St. Patrick's Church at Trevorton, Northumberland county, retaining this incumbency until June 13, 1902, when he received his appointment as rector of St. Mary's Church, in York city, where he continued until his removal to California.

(III) Samuel W. Harlacher, born Feb. 5, 1856, son of Samuel and Eva, married Anna M. Kershner, born June 3, 1860. They have three children: Bessie May, born Oct. 12, 1881; Mary E., born Feb. 12, 1885; and George Franklin, born March 7, 1887.

(III) Charles E. Harlacher, born March 10, 1846, son of Peter and Elizabeth, married Emma Giltner, born March 29, 1850, and became the father of four children: Annie G., born Nov. 27, 1869; Frank G., born June 4, 1875; Mary, born June 27, 1878 (married Charles A. Tevis); and Elizabeth, born July 27, 1881.

(III) Joseph B. Harlacher, born Sept. 14, 1847, son of William and Eve, married Lucretia C. (or Kate) Westfall, born Jan. 25, 1854, and they have three children: John W., born March 16, 1878; Carrie E., born April 21, 1880 (married Clayton E. Sultzbaugh); and Harry E., born April 28, 1882.

(III) William M. Harlacher, born Jan. 10, 1850, son of William and Eve, was married Nov. 11, 1875, to Susan Carson, born Nov. 11, 1856. To this union came six children: Gertie, born June 28, 1877, died Aug. 13, 1877; Pius Edvin, born Dec. 22, 1879, married Mollie C. Henry, born March 6, 1877; John Alvin was born Aug. 30, 1883; Birdie O., born Sept. 4, 1887, died Sept. 28, 1887; William Franklin Earl was born Jan. 24, 1891; and Sherman A., born April 2, 1893, died June 14, 1903.

(III) John A. Harlacher, born in Adams county, Feb. 5, 1852, a son of William and Eve, began farming in East Berlin, along the State road between East Berlin and Dillsburg. His farm consisted of 133 acres of rich land, and was known as the Highland Fruit Farm. He was a German Baptist in religious belief, and in 1893 was ordained a minister of the Upper Conewago congregation. He died in 1903, and was laid to rest in the cemetery at East Berlin. He married Delilah Baugher, who was born Sept. 3, 1849, daughter of George and Elizabeth Baugher. She still resides on the old farm in Adams county. Their children were: Katie E., born March 10, 1874, married G. Curtis Spangler, and lives at Eberly's Mills, Cumberland Co., Pa. George William was born Oct. 21, 1875. Mamie E., born Feb. 23, 1878, is at home. D. Beecher, born March 29, 1880, married Josie Myers, and lives at the old home in Adams county. S. Elsie, born July 25, 1882, lives with her sister Mrs. Spangler. John E., born Aug. 10, 1884, is attending school at Shippensburg. Joe B., born July 17, 1893, is at home.
(IV) George William Harlacher, born Oct. 21, 1875, son of John A. and Delilah, attended the township school in East Berlin, and completed his education in one term's attendance at the East Berlin Normal School. After leaving school he remained at home assisting his father on the farm for some time. He then purchased the old Gross farm of 109 acres, known as the Shady Nook farm, beautifully located along the Conewago. This has since been his home, and he has prospered in all his undertakings. His methods are thoroughly up-to-date, and he has all the latest improved machinery. In politics Mr. Harlacher is a Republican, but is not active in party work. He is a member of the German Baptist Church, in the Lower Conewago District. In 1895 he married Emma Bosserman, who was born in Reading township, Adams county, daughter of Lewis and Emma Bosserman.

ROBERT H. C. NEBINGER, one of the substantial and useful citizens of Newberry township, now living retired from active work, was born at Lewisberry May 13, 1840, and is the only living son of Robert Nebinger.

Mr. Nebinger attended public school at his native place until he was nineteen years of age, at which time he began farming in Newberry township, continuing that occupation for about eight years. On Aug. 6, 1862, inspired by the patriotic ardor that filled the country, he enlisted in the Union army, becoming a member of Company F, 56th P. V. I., under Captain Runkel. He was mustered in at Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, and was mustered out there June 6, 1865, in the meantime seeing much hard service and participating in many of the hardest fought battles of the great civil conflict—South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Mine Run, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor and Petersburg. At Gettysburg, in which battle his company was the first to open fire, he was twice wounded, once in the ear and once in the foot. Mr. Nebinger has a splendid record.

Returning to Lewisberry, he spent five years in the mercantile business, and then engaged in farming until his retirement. He has ever been active in public affairs, and has held a number of local offices, having been school director, borough councilman, etc. As an ardent Republican he has taken a deep interest in the success of that party. In their religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Nebinger are Methodists, both being members of the M. E. Church and taking an active part in the work of same.

In 1866 Mr. Nebinger married Margaret Miller, who was born in Newberry township in 1844, daughter of Henry S. and Mary Ann (Groom) Miller. The following children have blessed their union: Laura, wife of Lewis Anderson, of Shiremanstown, Cumberland Co., Pa.; John B., who married Lizzie Sutton, and lives in Newberry township; Harry S., a painter at Lewisberry, who married Annie Brown (he served one year and nine months in the Spanish-American war, and was in the Philippine Islands); Reed, who attended the public schools, Millersville State Normal School, Wyoming Seminary, and Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1905; and Evan G., Nellie and Robert, at home.

BENJAMIN MYLIN ROOT, general manager of the firm of B. M. Root Company, York, Pa., of which he is senior partner, was born in Lancaster county, July 10, 1840. In early youth he was associated with his father in the manufacture of plows at Bird-in-Hand, Lancaster county. Later he moved to Mt. Joy, Pa., where he was in charge of the mechanical department of the D. Root Son & Company plant. At this place the Root plow was made; this plow has yet an enviable reputation. In 1886 B. M. Root moved to York, where he served in various positions in different manufacturing industries, designing the Root corn-sheller, which came into general use. In 1892 he became foreman of the woodworking department of the Hench & Dromgold Company, which position he held for thirteen years. During this time he designed a set of machines to be used in the manufacture of plow handles. To manufacture and market these machines the B. M. Root Company was formed in 1900, by B. M. Root and John F. Rudisill. The merit of the plow handle machinery was recognized and the business grew, so that in 1905 Mr. Root resigned his position at the Hench & Dromgold Company to devote all his time to the interests of the B. M. Root Company. New machines were designed and marketed, agents were located in various cities in the United States, and the demand for the woodworking machinery made by this company became such that it was necessary to erect a large factory on Jefferson avenue. Frank T. Root and Benjamin T. Root, sons of B. M. Root, also became members of the firm.

Early in the eighteenth century, driven from Switzerland by reason of the religious persecutions of the Mennonites, Hans Mylin, Martin Mylin and Martin Mylin, Jr., emigrated to America, taking up their residence in Lancaster county, Pa. The land upon which they settled is yet the property of their descendants. Following the Mylins a few years later, another family, named Root, came also from Switzerland, and settled in Lancaster county. A son of this family was Jacob Root, and in 1794 Daniel Root, son of Jacob, was born. Daniel Root, the father of Benjamin Mylin Root, subject of this sketch, was married to Magdalene Mylin in 1834. From this union, representing, as it did, these two families so associated with the early settlement of Lancaster county, were born Elizabeth Root and Benjamin Mylin Root. Elizabeth Root was married to Elam Rudy, and after his death to John Hossler, now deceased. She has one son living, B. M. Rudy, of San Francisco. Mrs. Hossler at present is living with her brother, B. M. Root.

Benjamin Mylin Root was married in May, 1868, to Martha Elizabeth Trexler, whose father, Anthony Trexler, came to this country from Switzerland. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Root was John Marshall, a commissioned officer in the Revolution. She was a graduate of Millersville Normal School, and was a school teacher at the time of her marriage. To this marriage nine children were born, as follows: Frank T., who married Lillie Grove, and has one son, Herbert Dean Root; Emma T., who married James A. Constantine and has had two children, Stuart and Elizabeth; Elizabeth T., a graduate of Dickinson College, and married to John F. Rudisill, by whom she has had two children, John F., Jr. (deceased) and Harriet Root Rudisill; Minnie, deceased; Mable, deceased; Winfred T., with the degree of A. B. from Princeton and Ph. D. from University of Pennsylvania; Benjamin T., with the degree of M. E. from Lehigh; Lena T., and Harriet T.

Charles F. Zullinger, proprietor of the "Hotel Penn," at York, and one of the leading business men of the city, was born Aug. 10, 1874, in Franklin county, Pa., son of David and Maria (Farney) Zullinger.

David Zullinger was well known in business circles in Cumberland and Franklin counties, having been engaged in the mercantile business in Waynesboro for fifteen years. He served his county as commissioner in 1903-04-05, and died shortly after his term expired. His widow resides at Waynesboro.

Minnie, of Waynesboro; Mrs. W. H. Smith, of Waynesboro; Clara, deceased; and Charles F.

Charles F. Zullinger attended the public schools, and after completing his education clerked and was timekeeper for the Frick Company, of Waynesboro, continuing in that position for two years. He then entered the machine department, learning the trade, which he followed for ten years, most of which time he spent as an erecting engineer. In 1903 Mr. Zullinger came to York, and at once engaged in the hotel business, purchasing the "City Hotel," one of York's leading hostels, located at Nos. 335-337-339 West Market street. The building was erected by Kendig Hurs. Mr. Zullinger finally sold the good-will and fixtures of the "City Hotel" to the owner of the building and bought the "Hotel Penn," the finest two-dollar a day commercial house in southern Pennsylvania. It contains 152 bedrooms, and has all the conveniences of a modern hotel. Mr. Zullinger is a genial host, and employs only skilled help. His rooms are comfortable, and he is enjoying a large and profitable patronage.

Mr. Zullinger married Miss O. V. Keller, daughter of Sosser Keller, and one child has been born to the union, Charlotte Fredericka. In politics Mr. Zullinger is a Democrat. He is a stanch member of the York Base Ball Club, is on the committee, and is a stockholder and director. He is greatly interested in athletics and shows his interest in the national game by his holdings in the York Base Ball Club, this organization being one of the strongest and fastest in the State.
JOHN R. KOCHENOUR, a well known citizen and successful farmer of Conewago township, York county, who owns a twenty-acre farm opposite Quickel's Church, was born Aug. 12, 1869, in Conewago township, son of William and Emma (Reeser) Kochenour.

Henry Kochenour, the grandfather, was born in York county, and followed milling in Manchester township, in the mill now owned by John Meisenheilter. Later he went to farming in Conewago township, where he bought a tract of 129 acres, which he farmed until a few years previous to his death when he retired. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Kauffman, and is buried at Quickel's Church, Conewago township. Mr. Kochenour married Catherine Hoffman, and she is buried beside her husband. The children born to them were: Henry, Andrew, William H., Samuel, Daniel, Eliza, Lena, Leah, Elizabeth and Mary.

William H. Kochenour was born in 1836 in Manchester township, where he received a common school education. He followed farming in Conewago township for twenty-four years, where he bought a fine farm of 140 acres. Mr. Kochenour married Emma Reeser, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hakes) Reeser. Mr. Kochenour was a very successful farmer, and retired about three years prior to his death, which occurred in September, 1899, being interred at Quickel's Church. Mrs. Kochenour died Dec. 19, 1904, and is buried beside her husband in the new cemetery. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kochenour were: Eli, a miller at Mt. Wolf; William F., a merchant and postmaster at Brillhart's Station; and John R.

John R. Kochenour attended the schools of Conewago and Manchester townships until twenty years of age. In 1897 he married Mary Hoffman, daughter of George and Sarah (Eicholtz) Hoffman, of Manchester borough, where they still reside. After marriage Mr. Kochenour located on the farm in Conewago township for two years, and then located on his farm of twenty acres, opposite Quickel's Church, formerly the George Dick farm, which his father had purchased. Mr. Kochenour is now engaged in general farming, and attends the York markets regularly. In politics he is a Democrat, but has never aspired to public office. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he has been deacon two years.

To Mr. and Mrs. Kochenour have been born these children: Paul Edwin and twins, Anna Mabel and John Benjamin Franklin. Mr. Kochenour is a man of unimpeachable integrity, and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

HARRISON FAUTH, at the present time engaged in the manufacture of cigars in the village of Delroy, controls a large and profitable business in that line, making shipments of his goods into divers States of the Union and also having a good home trade.

Mr. Fauth was born in Lower Windsor township, York county, June 3, 1869, being the second of the three children of Henry and Sarah (Keller) Fauth, both of whom are now deceased. Harrison Fauth passed his boyhood days on the homestead farm, attending the public schools of Lower Windsor township until he had attained the age of fifteen years. He continued to remain at the parental home and assist in the work of the farm until he was eighteen years of age, when he entered upon an apprenticeship at the cigarmaker's trade, becoming in due time a skilled workman. In 1892 he left his native county as a journeyman, finding employment in various towns in Ohio, Illinois and Iowa, and returning home in the spring of 1894. In the following year he associated himself with Romanus T. Paules in purchasing the cigar manufacturing business of Reuben A. Paules, at Delroy. There they successfully continued the enterprise, under the firm name of Paules & Fauth, until October, 1900, when Mr. Fauth purchased his partner's interest and assumed full control of the business, which he has since individually conducted, while he has greatly increased the scope and importance of the enterprise. He gives employment to an average force of twenty skilled workmen, and his factory has the best of facilities, utilizing select grades of tobacco and turning out a product of superior excellence, so that a custom once gained is invariably retained. Mr. Fauth is aggressive and progressive in his methods and his policy is ever straightforward, so that he holds the unqualified confidence of those with whom he has dealings, while the success which he has attained is the more gratifying to contemplate because it stands as the result of his own efforts. In his political allegiance Mr. Fauth is staunchly arrayed with the Republican party, and, though he takes a lively interest in public affairs of a local nature, has never been a seeker of office. He and his wife are prominent members of the Canadochley Lutheran Church, in which he is a deacon and a valued teacher in the Sunday-school.

On Dec. 24, 1895, in Lower Windsor township, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Fauth to Minnie Keller, who was born and reared in that township, daughter of John and Angeline (Kline) Keller. Her father, who is deceased, was a successful farmer and influential citizen of that section of the county and a representative of a prominent pioneer family. Mr. and Mrs. Fauth have one daughter, Hettie, who was born on the 4th of January, 1897.

FRANKLIN O. METZ, manager of the time department of the York Manufacturing Company, and also of the cost and shipping department, and secretary and treasurer of the Drury Brick & Construction Co., in which he is also a large stockholder, was born Oct. 29, 1870, in Franklin county, Pa., son of John F. and Margaret L. (McCann) Metz.

The Metz family is of German ancestry, and the family was founded in Lancaster county, Pa., by John W. Metz, who came to America from Germany in 1730. His son, John W. Metz, Jr., was a farmer in Franklin county and was considered a prosperous man until, during the Civil war, a raid was made by the Confederate troops over his farm, and what they did not destroy they appropriated to their own uses.

John F. Metz, father of Franklin O., was a lime burner and lumber dealer. His death occurred in 1903, at the age of sixty-seven years. He married Margaret L. McCann, daughter of Henry McCann, a farmer of Adams county, and they had these children: Annie, who died in infancy; Victor, who died aged four years; Harry, who died on his fifth birthday; Lulu V., wife of William Petre, who is connected with the Lindner shoe factory, Carlisle; Leslie J. and Franklin O.

Franklin O. Metz was educated at Chambersburg, where he was graduated at the high school in 1888, and he also attended the Northern Illinois College at Fulton, Ill., where he was graduated in 1892. Prior to entering college he had taught school for one year, and he continued to teach for two years after completing his collegiate course. He then accepted the position of assistant time keeper for the great Frick Manufacturing Company, at Waynesboro, Pa., and remained in that position from 1892 to 1897. In the latter year he removed to York and soon became the head of the time department for the York Manufacturing Company. This position is one of responsibility, and Mr. Metz employs twenty-one assistants.

Mr. Metz was married, Aug. 14, 1901, to Annie M. Buck, a native of England, and they have two interesting children: Elsie May, born Aug. 20, 1902; and Frank Leslie, born Oct. 15, 1903. Mr. Metz is prominent and popular in various circles in York. He is a member of the Heidelberg Reformed Church. In politics he is a Democrat. Socially he is a member of the pleasant organization known as the Merry Band Camping Club.

HARRY EMERSON FRANK, who is identified with the local office service of the freight department of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Northern Central Railway Companies, in York, Pa., as cashier, is also secretary of the Keystone Building & Loan Association, of York, as well as treasurer of the Progressive Building & Loan Association, of the same city, and is one of the rising, popular, successful and highly esteemed young business men of York county.

In the agnostic line, Mr. Frank comes of sturdy German ancestry, his grandfather, Nicholas Frank, coming from a wealthy and influential family in Bavaria, Germany, owning lands on the Rhine. He served for fifteen years in the Prussian cavalry with great honor and distinction, and thereafter came to America, where he passed the remainder of his life, being seventy-six years of age at the time of his death, in 1872.

Mr. Frank's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Danner, was likewise born in Germany, and came with her family to America, landing in Baltimore, Md. After living there a few years, she moved to York, Pa., of which place she was a resident for over a half century, a most devout old Christian lady. She died there in July, 1904, at the extremely venerable age of ninety-six years, and retained her mental faculties unimpaired until the time of her demise.

John Joseph Frank, father of Harry E., born in York, Pa., July 4, 1840, was a scale-maker by trade, and for many years was engaged in the manufacture of scales in York, having succeeded to the business of Root & Case, commonly called the York Scale Works, which was established in 1838. In 1882 he assumed full proprietorship of the York Scale Works and operated it most successfully until 1892, when he sold his patterns and good-will to the Fairbanks Scale Company, and the plant itself to the York Carriage Company, having been located on North street, near the corner of West North street and North George street. Immediately upon the York Scale Works ceasing operations he was appointed general agent for the celebrated Fairbanks Scales, and is still representing The Fairbanks Scale Company direct, taking care of the interests in central Pennsylvania.

John J. Frank is a self-made man, having amassed a fortune through his honesty, thrift and industry, from comparatively nothing at the beginning of life. He is one of the largest property holders in the city of York and has heavy investments in some of the leading banks and other large corporations in the city.

Mr. Frank married, in 1860, Miss Elizabeth Danner (born in Germany in 1839), daughter of Adam Danner, of York, Pa., a most estimable Christian lady, who passed into light Jan. 22, 1902, through a stroke of apoplexy, when aged sixty-three years. She was actively interested in church work, being a faithful member of Zion Lutheran Church, and was prominent in the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies. In October, 1904, Mr. Frank married his first wife's sister, Miss Mary A. Danner, who is keeping up the Christian work in which her lamented sister took such a delight. Of the two children of the first union, Harry Emerson is the elder, and his sister, Mazie Adaline (born in York, Pa., Jan. 25, 1868), a graduate of the York high school and of the Peabody Conservatory of Music of Baltimore, Md., is now the wife of Rev. Charles M. Barnitz, a descendant of one of the oldest and best known families of York and a talented and a rising young minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has held pastorates at Audenried, Pa., Riverside or South Danville, Pa., Waverly, Pa., Curtin Heights, Harrisburg, Pa., and Osceola Mills, Pennsylvania.

For nearly a score of years Mr. Frank has been an elder in Zion Lutheran Church and has also been a teacher in the Sunday-school. He is the treasurer of the pew fund or collections. Fraternally Mr. Frank has been an Odd Fellow for nearly a half century, being connected with Mt. Zion Lodge, No. 74, I. O. O. F., and Mt. Vernon Encampment. In politics he has been a Republican all his life, having cast his first vote for our first martyred President, Abraham Lincoln.

Harry E. Frank was born in the city of York, York Co., Pa., on the 6th day (Sunday) of May, 1866, and here secured his early educational discipline in the public schools, graduating from the local high school in May, 1885, as valedictorian of his class. While in the York high school he was prominently identified with the Alpha Debating Society, being a forceful and eloquent young orator, having the record of never having lost a debate, while he was recognized as a leading, faithful and ambitious student. Before the close of the year, 1885, he was also graduated at the head of his class in the well known and historical Eastman National Business College, on the Hudson, in the city of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., with an average of 97 per cent., and his record of being thus twice matriculated and graduated within one year speaks for itself. After his return to York, Mr. Frank secured a position as stenographer and bookkeeper in the office of the firm of Burr & Dodge, manufacturers of link-beltaing and machinery, located at that time on North Fifth street, Philadelphia, Pa., within a stone's throw of the grave of the great philosopher and statesman, Benjamin Franklin. He retained this position one year, after which he was for about an equal period private stenographer and typewriter to the superintendent (Mr. Maximilian F. Bonzano) of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, corner Ninth and Green streets, Philadelphia, Pa. He then, on June 6, 1887, came to York as private secretary and special clerk in the office of Mr. J. K. Gross, freight agent in York of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Northern Central Railway Companies, working not only in the freight but also in the passenger branch of the service. This situation he has since retained, with promotions from time to time, until now he is the cashier of the office.

In 1887 Mr. Frank was elected treasurer of the Progressive Building & Loan Association of this city. In 1889 he was also elected secretary of the Keystone Building & Loan Association, of York, being one of its incorporators and charter members, and he has since remained continuously in tenure of this office and has done much to further the interests of the association in the various departments of its work. The "Keystone" enjoys the fine distinction of being the strongest association, financially, in this section of the country.

In politics our subject gives a stanch adherence to the Republican party, being at one time his party's unanimous choice as a candidate for select council in the Seventh ward, York. At that time the Seventh ward was preponderatingly Democratic, and although defeated, he ran away ahead of his ticket. He now lives in the Sixth ward, which is largely Republican, but has refused tenders of office time and again. He prefers to live as a strictly private citizen, having no "political bee" in his headgear. He is one of the valued and zealous members of Zion Lutheran Church, having joined when quite young, and in which he has served for a number of years in various official duties; his wife also holds membership in the same church and is quite active in religious affairs.

On Sept. 26, 1899, Mr. Frank was united in marriage to Miss Sue Hiestand Gable (born in Hellam, Pa., June 25, 1877), a graduate of the Young Ladies' Seminary, Lutherville, Md., and the estimable and accomplished daughter of Mr. John W. Gable, an honored, wealthy and influential citizen of Hellam, this county, where he was a prominent merchant and cigar manufacturer. Mr. Gable is now retired from active business, devoting his attention to the supervision of his three fine farms and other capitalistic interests. He was for the past quarter of a century postmaster at Hellam, and still continues in that office. On one of his farms (which is by far one of the most desirable in the State of Pennsylvania, located on the Wrightsville turnpike, about two miles from York) is a commodious and well-preserved stone house, generally known as the "Valley House," in which, tradition says, Generals Washington and LaFayette at one time tarried for a while.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank have two sons: John Gable Frank, born Feb. 14 (Valentine's Day), 1902; and Henry Hiestand Frank, born Feb. 24, 1904. Mr. Frank and his family reside in a spacious and handsome brick house, noted for its architectural beauty, with all the modern conveniences and appointments, situated at No. 400 East Market street, commonly known as "the Hill," one of the most desirable residential situations in York, it being on the southeast corner of East Market street and Columbia avenue. This house is virtually built upon a rock, and that rock has been analyzed and found to be equal to the best Italian white marble, of a bluish tint.

Mr. Frank has often thought and wondered, whether he was too fast or too slow in making changes in his positions, especially in the early part of his business career. He held his first position with Burr & Dodge, of Philadelphia. Mr. James M. Dodge, of that firm, was a son of the late well-known Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, who edited the "St. Nicholas Magazine," of New York City, and Mr. Frank often recalls the kindness and courtesies shown to him by Mr. Dodge, who although an entire stranger to him, repeatedly entertained him at his (Dodge's) home, at Logan Square, Philadelphia. Upon the first interview with Mr. Dodge, when Mr. Frank secured a position with his firm, he invited him to go with him in his buggy to Cramp's ship yards, to see the steamer "Cherokee" launched. Mr. Dodge seemed to have carte blanche when they got to the shipyards, and without further ceremony they went aboard the "Cherokee," and were on board when the vessel, which was destined afterward to have so momentous a history, slipped down the ways and took her initial dip or maiden plunge into the Delaware river and ploughed through the water, shooting like an arrow almost to the opposite shore, being christened at the same time, by a young lady, "Cherokee." This steamship was used as a transport for our troops by the United States Government in the late Spanish-American war, and is the same vessel that struck the shoals off Atlantic City, N. J., in January, 1906, in one of the most terrific storms ever known to seamen, when the waves rolled mountain high and lashed the vessel with the greatest fury, straining her from stem to stern, and all on board gave up all chance of ever reaching terra firma again alive. Then it was that the daring captain, Mark Casto, and his gallant crew set out from Atlantic City in the schooner "Alberta" to save the lives of the passengers and crew of the "Cherokee," or lose their own, in one of the most perilous and hazardous undertakings ever known in the annals of the sea. The feat was accomplished, and Capt. Mark Casto placed his name high on the roll of heroes for all time. He was feted by the Clover Club of Philadelphia, as well as by other organized bodies of men, a golden stream of money flowed into his coffers from all parts of the country, and the Carnegie Hero Commission voted him money and medals without ceremony. The "Cherokee," strange to relate, survived this wild maritime assault and was eventually saved to its owners, the Clyde Line.

This same Mr. Dodge who treated Mr. Frank so courteously and generously is now a multi-millionaire, living in regal and palatial style in the "City of Brotherly Love," possessing and using for his own benefit and enjoyment a half dozen of the finest automobiles. In the interim, since the subject of this sketch left his employ, he has patented one article after another, until now he has more patents in the Patent Office at Washington, D. C., than any other man in the world. He is the inventor of the movable stairways so often seen in large department stores. The question is, was the subject of our sketch too fast in leaving his employ?

To offset this remorse Mr. Frank and his bride took a generous wedding tour in 1899, which covered over ten thousand miles of journeying over land and inland seas. The itinerary follows: Hellam, Pa., to York, Pa., by hack; York, Pa., via Northern Central railway, to Elmira, N. Y.; Elmira, N. Y., via the Erie railroad, to Buffalo, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y., via trolley line to Niagara Falls, N. Y. (short sojourn in Canada, including a fine drive), and return to Buffalo, N. Y., via trolley line; Buffalo, N. Y., via Anchor Line, Steamship "Japan," over the Great Lakes, Lake Erie, Lake St. Clair, Lake Huron, Lake Superior, etc. (consuming a week's time with stops at Erie, Pa., Cleveland, O., Detroit, Mich., Port Huron, Mich., Mackinac Island, Mich., Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Marquette, Mich., Houghton and Hancock, Mich., Portage Lake), to Duluth, Minn.; Duluth, Minn., via trolley line, to West Superior, Wis., and return to Duluth, Minn.; Duluth, Minn., via Northern Pacific railroad, to Livingston, Mont.; Livingston, Mont., over a branch of the Northern Pacific railroad, to Cinnabar, Mont., (Northern Entrance to Yellowstone National Park); Cinnabar, Mont., by stage into the Yellowstone National Park (spending three full days and two nights in the Park; having camp equipage and utensils and eating provisions packed in the stage for their use; but fortunately they were given shelter and a soldier's cot each night in the Soldiers' Quarters at Fort Norris and were thus not compelled to use a tent, to be disturbed by bears and howling coyotes at most any hour of the night; they saw the principal features in the Park and would recommend all readers to see these greatest natural wonders of the world in preference to a trip to Europe); Cinnabar, Mont., back to Livingston, Mont.; Livingston, Mont., via Northern Pacific railroad, to Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Oregon; Portland, via Southern Pacific railroad to Oakland, Cal., and San Francisco, Cal. (sail on the Pacific ocean at the Golden Gate, visited Sutro Park and the Presidio, where thousands of our Spanish-American soldiers were encamped on the shore of the Pacific; saw the United States man-of-war "Oregon" in the harbor); San Francisco, Cal., via Southern Pacific railroad, to Los Angeles, Cal.; Los Angeles, Cal., via Southern Pacific railroad, to El Paso, Texas (a peep into Mexico); El Paso, Texas, via Southern Pacific railroad, to Algiers, La.; Algiers, La., via ferry boat on Mississippi river and Gulf of Mexico, to New Orleans, La. (over 300 cases of yellow fever in the city and came within an ace of being quarantined for ten days in that hot, sultry city, although it was the latter part of October); New Orleans, La., via Louisville & Nashville railroad, to Montgomery, Ala.; Montgomery, Ala., via Atlanta & West Point railroad, to Atlanta, Ga.; Atlanta, Ga., via Southern Railway, to Washington, D. C.; Washington, D. C., via Baltimore & Potomac railroad, to Baltimore, Md.; Baltimore, Md., via Northern Central railway, to York, Pennsylvania.

At the conclusion of this most memorable and magnificent trip, which embraced twenty-five States of our Union, the great inland seas, and two foreign countries, the bride and bridegroom were unanimous in agreeing that, after all, there was "No place like home."

CHARLES REA, M. D. No other profession presents such grave responsibilities as those attaching to the followers of materia medica.

Dr. Charles Rea, of York, has been in successful practice some eleven years. His prescholastic training was received in the common schools of Harford county, Md., after which he passed successive periods at the West Nottingham Academy (graduating in 1880), the West Chester Normal School, and the Lehigh University. Under the tutelage of that distinguished physician, Dr. William H. Pancoast, of Philadelphia, he had begun the study of medicine prior to finishing his literary education, and in 1891 he formally matriculated with the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia. Here he passed the ensuing three years, and in May of 1894 was presented his degree. He has since been in active practice in York, his success being measured only by his physical ability to attend to the calls upon his services.

Dr. Rea was born in Little Britain township, Lancaster county, Pa., July 20, 1872, and comes from Scotch-Irish parentage, his ancestors having been for generations leading agriculturists in Lancaster and Chester counties. His grandfather, Samuel L. Rea, lived in Little Britain township, in Lancaster county, and there his father, Chandlee II., was also born and reared. Margaret (Biles) Rea, our subject’s mother, was the daughter of Charles Biles, a farmer and hydraulic engineer of Chester county. There were but two children in the family, Charles; and a son that died in infancy. The father died at the comparatively early age of twenty-six years in 1875, while the mother still survives him, a resident of Baltimore.

In August, 1894, Dr. Rea married Miss Adaline V. Martin, M. D., daughter of John W. Martin, a retired merchant of Chester, Pennsylvania; she died in November, 1899, leaving a little daughter, Alice Martin, to the care of her sorrowing husband. Dr. Rea is one of the most companionable of men, and keeps in close touch with affairs, professionally and socially. He is a familiar figure at the gatherings of the profession at the different associations, county, State and national, and has served his county association as its president and as delegate to the American Medical Association. He holds the responsible position of physician to the Children’s Home, one of the charitable institutions of the city. He finds social enjoyment in two of the select clubs of the city, the Lafayette and Country clubs, and is a prominent worker in the Episcopal church, taking especial delight as a teacher in the Sunday-school. He is not active in politics, but is earnest in his support of Republican men and measures.

GEORGE HAY KAIN was born in York, Pa., April 13, 1877, and is the only child of William Henry Kain and his wife, Clara Maria Hay. He received his preparatory education in the public schools, the York County Academy and the York Collegiate Institute, from which latter institution he was graduated in 1893, being the valedictorian of his class. He then entered Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg, and was graduated therefrom in June, 1897, with the degree of B. S., being a member of the Second Honor Group and a Commencement Orator. During his course he received honorable mention for the Baum Sophomore Mathematical Prize, and in 1900 the institution conferred upon him the degree of M. S.

Immediately upon graduation Mr. Kain was elected Tutor of Mathematics in the Preparatory Department of Pennsylvania College, which position he held for one year. In September, 1898, he entered the Law School of Harvard University, and, after being compelled to remain at home for a year, by reason of illness, was graduated with honor in June, 1902, receiving the degree of LL. B. cum laude. He also read law for some time in the office of Cochran and Williams. He was admitted to the Bar of York county on Dec. 22, 1902, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of law in the city of York.

He was married Jan. 1, 1901, to Cara Bahn Watt, a daughter of Andrew Watt, a native of Scotland but for many years a prominent merchant of York, and his wife, Susan A. Bahn, whose ancestors were among the earliest settlers in the Kreutz Creek Valley.

While at college Mr. Kain became a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is a Mason, being a member of York Lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M., Howell Royal Arch Chapter, No. 190, and York Commandery, No. 21, Knights Templar. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is a Republican, and a member of the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Kain’s father, immediately upon his graduation from Pennsylvania College, in 1871, was appointed County Superintendent of Schools of York county for the unexpired term of S. G. Boyd. He was elected to the same position for a term of three years in 1872, and again in 1875. In the latter year he became a member of the Bar of York county, and continued in the active practice of the law until his death, in 1883. He was married March 6, 1876, to Clara Maria Hay, who survived him less than ten months. She was a daughter of George Hay, who for almost fifty years was a cabinetmaker and undertaker in York, and who was a prominent figure in the military life of the county. Upon the organization of the "York Rifles," in 1835, he became their captain, holding that office during the entire existence of the company, and responding with them, on April 19, 1861, to President Lincoln's first call for troops. He served as Brigade Inspector, Brigadier General and Major General of the State militia, and, having been instrumental in its organization, was commissioned Colonel of the 87th Regiment, P. V. I., on Sept. 25, 1861. In 1863 he succeeded Gen. Cluseret in the command of the 1st Brigade, 2d Division, 8th Army Corps, serving in this capacity for two months, when he was honorably discharged from the service by reason of disability. He was of military ancestry, being a son of John Hay, who was a non-commissioned officer in the war of 1812, and a grandson of Lieut.-Col. John Hay and of Col. Michael Schmeiser, both of whom were prominent in the Revolutionary struggle.

WILLIAM H. GABLE. Life insurance represents one of the valuable and important lines of enterprise in every community, and prominently associated with the same is the subject of this sketch, who is district agent for the John Hancock Insurance Company, of Boston, Mass., with headquarters in the city of York. He has been most successful in advancing the interests of the company in his jurisdiction, and is one of the leading insurance men of this section of the state, while he is held in the highest esteem as a citizen and business man. In the latter connection the greater interest attaches to his career from the fact that he is a native son of York county and has here set at naught the application of the Biblical aphorism that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country."

William H. Gable was born in the city of York, Pa., Dec. 24, 1838, and is a scion of one of the old and honored families of this section of the Keystone State. He is a son of Conrad and Eliza (Keller) Gable, the former of whom was long engaged in the milling business in York, where he died when the subject of this review was about six months old. His widow survived many years, being summoned into eternal rest in 1886, at the venerable age of seventy-eight years. William H. Gable secured his early educational discipline in the common schools of York, and thereafter completed a course of study in the York County Academy, one of the old and popular educational institutions of this section of the State. Mr. Gable's initial endeavors in a business way were made in the position of clerk in a local dry-goods store, and he continued to be thereafter engaged in clerical work for the long period of twenty years, becoming well known to the people of the county and gaining a high reputation as a capable and courteous salesman. In 1883 he removed to Emigsville, this county, where, during the ensuing three years, he had sole charge of the extensive mercantile business of the firm of Emig & Co. He then accepted a position as salesman in a large carpet house in York, remaining with this concern for sixteen years, during fourteen years of which time he was his bookkeeper. In 1900 he turned his attention to the insurance business, and that his rise has been rapid and creditable in the most marked degree is evident from the responsible position which he now holds, having been appointed district agent for the John Hancock Life Insurance Company for York county in January, 1906, said company having long been known as one of the strongest and most popular life indemnity companies of the world.

Mr. Gable is a member of the Relief Association of Emigsville and is an active and valued member of the Zion Lutheran Church in York, having been a member of the church council for more than forty years. In matters political he has even been found staunchly arrayed as a supporter of the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and while he has never been an office seeker he has at all times shown a lively interest in public affairs, particularly those of a local nature, while he is known as a reliable, progressive and public-spirited citizen and as one whose career has been marked by utmost fidelity and loyalty in all the relations of life. At one time he was secretary of the York board of school control, in which capacity he rendered most effective service.

On Jan. 7, 1862, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Gable to Miss Susan Filmore, who was born and reared in York county, being a daughter of the late Frederick Filmore, and of this union have been born two children, Margaret Catherine, who is the wife of Horace Brillinger, of Emigsville; and Horace E., a resident of the city of Philadelphia, who is a printer by vocation.
BENJAMIN F. HOFFMAN, a progressive business man and prominent resident of Dillsburg township, is descended from a family long settled in York county, but originally of German ancestry. The great-grandfather, David Hoffman, was born near Latimore, on the family homestead. He married Miss Catherine Hollinger, and their children were Solomon, David, William, Lydia and Peter.

Peter Hoffman, who became a well-known resident of the county, married Judy, daughter of Solomon Kerchner. Mr. Hoffman died at the age of fifty-two, but his wife survived him many years and lived to be eighty-six. They were the parents of: Jacob, deceased; Tempes, born in 1828, near Latimore; George and Elizabeth, both deceased; Henry, who married Susan Burtner; Catherine, Mrs. August Fisher; Mary Ann and Sophie, deceased; Solomon, who married Susan Kunkle; and Andrew, who married Jennie Bare.

Tempes Hoffman married Mrs. Catherine (Berkheimer) Hoffman, who was born in 1823, and died in 1894. Their children were as follows: Annie, who married John Myers, a resident of Dover township, York county, and has had eight children, John (deceased), Ivy, Goldie, Raymond, Norman, Catherine, Joseph and Carrie; William, who married Miss Cora Thomas, lives in Franklin township, and has three daughters, Esther, Mary Ann and Rachel; and Benjamin F.

Benjamin F. Hoffman was born on the old homestead near Latimore in 1872. After finishing his education he engaged in farming for a short time, and then went to Harrisburg, where for two years he worked in the ice business, and also worked in a plumbing establishment. The next two years were passed in farming again, and Mr. Hoffman then entered upon the occupation which has engaged his attention ever since, the managing of a livery stable. He is wide awake and progressive, and has been very successful. He is the owner of a good piece of property on which he has recently built a handsome residence, and on which also stands his fine new stable with space for thirty-four horses. Mr. Hoffman has been active in public affairs, belonging to the Republican party, and has held various offices, at present being councilman.

Mr. Hoffman's marriage occurred in 1893, to Miss Emma D. Cook, daughter of Hezekiah Cook, and the following children have been born to them: Roy William, deceased; Norman Ray; Martha May, and Catherine. In religious belief both Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman are members of the German Baptist Church.

PETER E. STOUGH. The city of York has a number of well-conducted livery stables, but none is better managed than that owned and operated by Peter E. Stough, and only one in the city is larger. He is located near the “City Hotel” and has been in the business for many years, having thus acquired a wide experience in its details.

Mr. Stough was born in York, Oct. 11, 1864, son of Peter E. and Agnes (Glatfetter) Stough. The latter is still living, but the father died the year his namesake was born. He was a molder by trade, and came to York from the vicinity of Dillsburg. His death left his widow with three children to provide for, viz.: Charles J., Annie K. (Mrs. Edward Harris), and Peter E.

Peter E. Stough grew up in York and attended the public schools. Even in childhood he began to help his mother, from the time he was ten years old, doing many odd jobs to earn a little money. For a time he worked in a carpenter shop, and then in livery stables, finally taking up his father's trade of molder, when he was fifteen. This he followed for four years, but at the end of that time decided to return to the livery business. For a while he worked with Mr. Fleming and then started for himself, at the location where he is found today. He began with four horses, gradually increased his stock, and also conducted a boarding stable, but after five or six years he sold out his establishment. In 1894 he bought back his former business, and with Mr. Wellensiek as a partner conducted it again for two years. Since 1896, however, Mr. Stough has been the only proprietor. He owns two barns, has sixteen head of the best livery stock, and has a large number in his boarding stables, keeping from forty-five to fifty horses altogether. His success is an evidence of what can be accomplished by a man of energy and determination, for Mr. Stough began with nothing.

Mr. Stough remained at home with his mother until his marriage, an event which occurred July 18, 1889. Mrs. Stough was Miss Laura Beck, daughter of James B. Beck, a cigar manufacturer of North Newberry street. She is a member of the United Brethren Church. To the union of Peter E. and Laura ADAM A. EHRHART is one of the representative citizens of York township, and a member of one of the pioneer families of this section. He is at the present time devoting his attention to agricultural pursuits, but formerly was a successful and popular teacher in the schools of his native county.

Mr. Ehrhart was born in Shrewsbury township, York county, on Aug. 4, 1866, son of William and Eliza (Stump) Ehrhart. His father was born in Shrewsbury township, this county, Oct. 18, 1830, son of William and Ablena (Runk) Ehrhart, and grandson of William and Susanna Ehrhart. The father of our subject was reared to manhood in his native county, and his early educational training was secured in the subscription schools maintained in Shrewsbury township in the pioneer era. He became one of the prominent influential farmers of Shrewsbury township, whence he later removed to York township, where he continued in the same vocation until April, 1903, when he took up his residence in the village of Dallastown, where he has since lived retired, being held in the highest regard in the county which has been his home throughout his honorable and active life. He had two brothers and four sisters, all of whom are now deceased. The brothers, Emanuel and Henry, both died in this county, and of the sisters we record that Mary died unmarried; Maria became the wife of Peter Fulcomer; Eliza was the wife of Harry Zeck; Lucinda was the wife of Harry Gladfelter. In February, 1854, was solemnized the marriage of William Ehrhart to Eliza Stump, who was likewise born and reared in this county, being a daughter of John and Margaret (Hall) Stump. The loved and devoted wife and mother was summoned into eternal rest April 22, 1902, at the age of sixty-seven years, and her memory rests as a benediction on all those who came within the sphere of her gentle influence. Of the children of William and Eliza Ehrhart we record that Rev. William H. is a clergyman of the Lutheran Church and at the time of this writing is residing in Jefferson; Benjamin is engaged in farming near Dallastown; Adam A. is the immediate subject of this sketch; Jesse is a clerk in a store; John, Lucy and Elizabeth are deceased; Mary and Catherine are deceased; Mary and Catherine Elizabeth and Harry are deceased; Mary and Catherine Elizabeth and Harry are deceased.

Adam A. Ehrhart, whose name initiates this review, was a child of about three and one-half years at the time of his parents' removal from his native township of Shrewsbury to that of York, and in the public schools of the latter he secured his preliminary educational discipline, which he later supplemented by well-directed and appreciative study in the York County Normal School and also the York County Academy, where he ably equipped himself for active work as a teacher. He initiated his pedagogic career at the age of eighteen years, and for seventeen terms continued as a specially capable and successful teacher in the schools of York township, taking great interest in his work and continuing to follow the same until his health became so impaired as to render it imperative for him to seek a less sedentary vocation. He accordingly withdrew from the educational field in 1902, and he is now devoting his attention successfully to general agriculture and horticulture, having two small but exceptionally well-improved farms, which are situated on the Chanceford pike, about five miles distant from the city of York—the one comprising six acres and the other eighteen. Mr. Ehrhart is a man of independent views and alert mentality and is at all times loyal to the duties of citizenship, his political allegiance being given to the Republican party, in whose cause he takes a deep interest, though he has never been afflicted with aspiration for public office of any description. His religious faith is indicated in his membership in the Lutheran Church, in which he has served as deacon and assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school. His wife was reared in the faith of the Reformed Church, to which she still holds, taking an active part in the various departments of the church work.

On Jan. 5, 1889, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Ehrhart to Miss Mary Jane McDowell, who was born and reared in this county, being a daughter of Isaac and Eliza (Peeling) McDowell, the former of whom is deceased; he was a successful farmer of York township. Concerning the children of our subject we incorporate the following brief record in conclusion of this sketch: Katie Belle was born July 25, 1890; Laura Mabel, Sept. 19, 1892; William Isaac, Dec. 13, 1894; Lester C., Aug. 22, 1897; Curvin Adam, March 28, 1900; and Grace Irene, Aug. 29, 1903.

JOSEPH NEWBOULD, a respected resident of York, where he has been located for twenty-five years, was born April 30, 1832, in Ridgeway, England, son of George and Margaret (Leak) Newbould.

George Newbould was a mechanic in his native country, making reaper knives when they were first introduced into England, and also manufacturing scythes. He died aged sixty years, while his wife still survives, aged eighty-five years. Their children were: Ellis, who is now deceased; Mary, deceased; Sarah, residing in England, six miles from Manchester; Joseph; Ellen, living at Southport, England; Annie, a resident of England; James, of England; and Margaret, deceased.

Joseph Newbould attended the common schools of his native country until fifteen years of age, and then learned the confectionery business and the baking of fancy cakes. After finishing his trade he was engaged for six months as a journeyman, and in 1873 came to America, landing at New York, where he remained a short time. He then went to Sunbury, Pa., where he had an aunt whom he had never seen, and he lived with this aunt four years in Sunbury, following his trade. He then located in Bradford, Pa., and from there went to Lock Haven and then to Harrisburg, finally arriving in York May 1, 1880. Here he was at one time employed by Benjamin Allison, one of the largest bakers of York, in whose employ he still remains.

On Dec. 11, 1880, Mr. Newbould married Clara Allison, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Fulkemeyer) Allison. Mr. Allison’s first wife died in 1864, and he subsequently married Miss Raffensberger. Mr. Newbould’s children are as follows: Charles E. first attended the public school, later the York Academy, and was then employed by the York Manufacturing Company in the draughting department, where he is still engaged; he married Flora Patrick. Mabel May is the wife of Harry Malsberger, a pattern maker for a malleable iron foundry of Wilmington, Del. George Benjamin is an electrician employed with Mr. Graybill, of York. In his political sympathies Mr. Newbould is associated with the Republican party.

LEWIS S. KERR was born in Codorus township in 1869, and comes of an old Delaware family, of Revolutionary stock.

(I) James Kerr was of Scotch-Irish descent and was a farmer in Delaware, doing his part bravely during the Revolution. His children were James, John, Alexander, Samuel and Susan.

(II) Alexander Kerr was born in Newcastle, Del. While a farmer by occupation, he also followed teaming, covering the route to Baltimore and Pittsburg. He and his brother James both took part in the war of 1812, the latter holding the rank of captain. Alexander Kerr married Julian Dailey, and husband and wife passed away at the ages of seventy-six and eighty-six, respectively. They were buried in Prospect Hill cemetery at York. Their children were Martin, Susan, Mary, Maria, Matilda, Jane and James.

(III) Martin Kerr was born in October, 1837, on the homestead in Hopewell township, and received as good education as the common schools then afforded. At Mount Zion, York county, he learned the shoemaker’s trade, and was occupied at that for twenty years. He then went to farming, at the same time doing harness-making, and was also at one period employed by the Western Maryland Railroad. In 1893 he bought his present home, a place of twelve acres in Codorus township. During the Civil war Martin Kerr enlisted, serving first in Company B, 166th P. V. I., for ten months. He was wounded along Black Water Creek, near the Weldon Railroad, Va., by a ball which passed through the ankle, cutting off one of the tendons, and was taken to the hospital May 14, 1863. He also received another wound, in the left side, but that was not a serious one. For the last four months of the war Mr. Kerr was again with the troops, having re-enlisted in Company C, 101st P. V. I. He married Mary Ellen Smith, who was born in Newberry township, York county, daughter of Jesse and Leah (Ziegler) Smith. The children born to this union were: Lewis S.; Sarah, Mrs. Adam Kerchner, of North Codorus township; George, who married Miss Laura Baily, and lives at New Freedom; Charles, at home, unmarried, who does threshing through the county; Julian, the wife of Levi Rennell, of Codorus township; Ella, Mrs. Elmer Gladielte, of Baltimore, Md.; and Annie, at home.
(IV) Lewis S. Kerr was brought up by his great-aunt, and attended the schools of Codorus township till he was twenty-one years old. Then for three years he dealt in thoroughbred horses, but after that turned his attention to farming. He owns a farm of thirty-five acres on the York road near Brodbecks, and gave his whole time to operating it until Nov. 1, 1902, when he took his present position of Rural Free Delivery carrier from Brodbecks postoffice. At the meeting of the State Carriers’ Association at Newcastle, Pa., he was elected sergeant-at-arms for that body. In politics he is a Republican, and in 1900 he took the census for Codorus township.

Mr. Kerr married, in 1893, Miss Alice Jane Krebs, daughter of Lewis F. and Leah (Caslow) Krebs, and by her he has had two children, Jesse and Ina. In religion Mr. Kerr belongs to the Stone Church (Reformed), and fraternally he is a member of Council No. 154, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Glen Rock. He has always been of a studious temperament, fond of good books, and he is bringing up his children to share in this taste. Mr. Kerr is a valuable type of citizen, and he and his wife are highly esteemed in the community.

OLIVER ALLEN HESS is one of the representative young business men of York township, being engaged in the manufacture of cigars in the little village of Rye, where he has a pleasant home. He is a member of one of the honored old families of York county, and full record concerning his parents and the ancestral history may be found in the sketch of the life of his father, Jeremiah D. Hess, appearing elsewhere, so that a recapitulation of the data is not demanded in the article at hand.

Oliver Allen Hess was born on the homestead farm, in York township, York county, Jan. 26, 1878, and his boyhood days were not marked by any extraordinary experiences. He began to aid in the work of the farm as soon as age and physical prowess justified, and his educational advantages were those afforded in the excellent public schools of his native township, where he continued his studies until he had attained the age of eighteen years. As is well-known, the tobacco industry is one of no slight importance in York county, where an excellent grade is grown in large quantities, and the county has incidentally come to the front commerically through the wide scope of enterprise here carried on in the manufacturing of cigars. The subject of this sketch found it expedient to identify himself with this important line of industry, and he thus served an apprenticeship at the trade of cigarmaking, becoming an expert workman, while he continued also to assist in the work and management of the home farm until the time of his marriage, in 1902. Shortly after this noteworthy event in his career Mr. Hess established a home in his native township, and engaged in the manufacture of cigars, turning out a high-grade product and selling the same principally to G. A. Kohle and Peter H. Grove, who placed the cigars on the retail market. In the spring of 1904 Mr. Hess purchased a fine residence in the village of Rye, where he has since made his home and where he continues in the same line of business, in which he is meeting with marked and well merited success. He and his wife are most popular in the social circles of the community and their home is a center of genial hospitality. In politics Mr. Hess is a stanch supporter of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and both he and his wife are enrolled on the membership list of the Lutheran Church at Paradise.

On Feb. 26, 1902, Mr. Hess was united in marriage to Miss Agnes Reachard, who was born and reared in York county, being a daughter of Joseph and Jane (Hannigan) Reachard, well known residents of East Hope well township, Mr. Reachard being a retired farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Hess have two children, Owen Jeremiah and Anna Rebecca Jane.

HORACE F. GREENAWALT, chief clerk for the York County Traction Co., was born May 11, 1876, in York, son of Henry C. and Eleanor C. (Fishel) Greenawalt.

Abraham Greenawalt, grandfather of Horace F., was a well-known butcher of York county.

Henry C. Greenawalt died suddenly in June, 1904, from a stroke of apoplexy, aged fifty-nine years. He kept a popular meat market at the corner of Duke and Princess streets, in York. Mr. Greenawalt’s wife was Eleanor Catherine Fishel, daughter of Charles Fishel, at one time a farmer of York county, who prior to his death, led a retired life for a number of years in York. The children born to Henry C. and Eleanor Greenawalt were as follows:
HISTORY OF YORK COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Juliet E., residing at home; Charles A., who is connected with the York National Bank; and Horace F.

Horace F. Greenawalt, after graduating from the York Collegiate Institute, and taking a course at Patrick's Business College in bookkeeping and stenography, secured employment in 1895 in the office of the York Card & Paper Co. From there he went to the York Hat Company, where he remained for one and one-half years, and then spent seven years as a clerk with the American Caramel Company, where he was stenographer and office assistant. In 1901 Mr. Greenawalt became connected with the York Traction Company, as bookkeeper and chief clerk, a position which he still retains.

Mr. Greenawalt married Minnie Dietz, daughter of Edmund Dietz, who for thirty years was justice of the peace in Spring Garden township, to which office he was elected by the Democrats, but such was his popularity in the township, that many Republicans gave him their votes as well.

One child has been born to Mr. Greenawalt and his wife, Eleanor Catherine, who is now attending school. Mr. Greenawalt belongs to the First Moravian Church, in which he is assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school, and is the basso of a quartette in the Moravian choir. In politics he is an ardent Republican, but has always refused public office. He is a man of honesty and integrity, and is regarded with the greatest measure of respect and esteem.

BYRD W. HIVELY, who is successfully conducting a grocery at No. 126 South Beaver street, York, succeeded to the business in which he is now engaged in the fall of 1899. The former owner was Mr. C. A. Yost.

B. W. Hively was born March 19, 1869, in Manchester township, York county, one of the two sons of George and Lydia A. (Strickler) Hively, both of whom are deceased. After the death of his parents he knew very little of luxury. He had to deal with the real problems of life. He had received a thorough district school education, and having determined to give himself a college education, he paid his expenses through the York County Academy, by any sort of honorable work his hands could find to do, and later, by the same methods, went through the Williamsport Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1896 with the degree of B. S. Mr. Hively then went to Brooklyn, N. Y., and took a course in Spanish under Professor Cartine. In 1899 he entered his present business, in which he has since been very profitably engaged. The indomitable will and energy inherited from his German ancestors have served him in good stead, and he is steadily ascending the ladder of success.

Mr. Hively married, Nov. 1, 1904, Miss Lulu G. Bosley, daughter of Samuel and Harriet Bosley, and they reside at No. 268 West Jackson street. Mr. and Mrs. Hively are members of the Duke Street M. E. Church, and he is a member of the official board and also teaches in the Sunday-school. He is a member of the Merchants' Association of York; of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, Aerie No. 414; the A. O. K. of M. C., Star Castle, P. C.; is a past officer of the A. I. O. K. of M., No. 174, and of York Lodge, No. 47, I. O. O. F.

CLAYTON S. REASER, secretary of the Jacoby Furniture Company, of the city of York, Pa., was born April 27, 1877, in Washington township, York Co., Pa., a son of Lewis Reaser and a grandson of Joseph Reaser.

Joseph Reaser was born in Newberry township, York county, and learned the weaving business. Later he removed to Washington township, where he followed his trade during the summers and assisted the farmers during the winter seasons, in their butchering. He lived to the age of seventy-five years. He married Nancy Miley, who lived to the age of eighty-one years, and both are buried in the cemetery at Red Run church, in Washington township. Their children were: Abraham, Catherine Gross, George, Katie Baker, David, Joseph, Polly Asper, and Lewis and one that died in infancy.

Lewis Reaser, father of Clayton S., was born June 3, 1834, in Washington township, and attended the township schools until fourteen years of age, when he went to learn the carpenter's trade, first under Henry Nell and then with George Kapp. Still later he was associated with Andrew Bentz. He then engaged in the contracting business for himself, and for fifty years he worked as a contractor all through Adams, Cumberland and York counties, his work being in great demand, as he was... a skilled mechanic. He continued in business until 1903, when he retired to his farm in Washington township.

Lewis Reaser married Leah Jane Schultz, daughter of George Schultz, of Pinetown, Adams county. She died in July, 1881, and is buried at Red Run church, in Washington township. They had two children: Delilah and Clayton S. The former married John Shaeffer, who lives on the home farm, and they have these children: Mamie (a student in the York School of Business), Howard, Gertrude, Grace and Esther.

Clayton S. Reaser attended district school in his boyhood, and after completing his apprenticeship to the carpenter’s trade he attended the Wellsville Normal School, and in 1896 took a commercial course at the Patrick Business College. He then engaged in clerking, bookkeeping and assisting in the post office at Big Mount, York county, for two years. Mr. Reaser then came to York, where he took a course in stenography at the York School of Business. He was then employed by Simon Feder, of South George street, York, Pa., in the shoe business, and from there he went to the Martin Carriage Works, where he served in the capacity of clerk in the stock room. In 1899 he entered the employ of Adam Jacoby & Bro., furniture manufacturers, as bookkeeper and correspondent. On July 9, 1903, this business was incorporated, the company being now known as the Jacoby Furniture Company, whose plant is located at Eberton, West York borough, and is one of the largest in the State. At the time of its incorporation Mr. Reaser became a partner and was elected to the responsible position of secretary and office manager of the company. He possesses excellent business qualifications and is a pleasant, genial gentleman.

Mr. Reaser married Annie E. Klepper, daughter of John Klepper, formerly of Adams county, now of West York, and they have two children: Catharine and Helen. In politics Mr. Reaser is a Republican. Fraternally he belongs to the Knights of Pythias.

DR. P. CARLTON SUNDAY has been engaged in the drug business on his own account in York since 1903, and has a well-established patronage both at his store in that city and in the surrounding counties. He is located at the corner of Market and Hartley streets, and conducts an up-to-date place in every respect.

Dr. Sunday was born Jan. 4, 1878, is a native of York county, and is a son of John C. and Alice E. Sunday, residents of Manchester, this county. Dr. Sunday has passed all his life here with the exception of necessary absences for study elsewhere. He received his early education in the common schools of Manchester, and in the York County Academy. His special preparation for his life work was gained in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1900. Thereafter he was employed for two years by Dale & Co., wholesale druggists of York, and in 1903 embarked in business on his own account. Though he has not been established long he has already succeeded in acquiring a large trade, which shows a healthy and steady increase. He also has several wagons which sell his drugs over ten counties in Pennsylvania and three in Maryland, and this branch of his business is quite extensive. Dr. Sunday was one of the organizers of the Dr. Thompson Remedy Company.

The Doctor was married, Jan. 1, 1903, to Miss Ellen Catheryn Rieff. They are members of St. John’s Episcopal Church.

EDISON B. WILLIAMSON, one of the youngest members of the York County Bar, comes of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and he was born at Oxford, Chester Co., Pa., May 6, 1882, son of William T. and Amanda E. (Harris) Williamson.

(1) John T. Williamson, grandfather of E. B., was a prominent farmer of Maryland.

(II) William T. Williamson is a letter carrier in York. He married Amanda E. Harris, daughter of John Harris, a farmer of Maryland, and they had children as follows: Melvin H., deceased; Charles E., connected with the Monarch Silk Company; Lillian, wife of Charles C. Towson, of Hanover, assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; Elizabeth, at home; and Edison B.

(III) Edison B. Williamson was educated in the public schools of York, being graduated from the high school of that city in the class of 1900. He then entered the Dickinson Law School at Carlisle, and was graduated therefrom in 1903, and that same year was admitted to practice in Cumberland county, as well as in York county, and in December, 1903, he passed successfully the examinations which admitted him to practice in the Supreme Courts of the State.

While attending high school, Mr. Williamson was one of the athletes who helped win the banner in 1900, and was one of four who won silver cups. He was captain of the football team of the York high school in 1899, and a member of the baseball club of Dickinson college in 1901. Having always taken an active part in athletics, he is much interested in all kinds of sports, and is an excellent all round athlete. His religious affiliations are with the Methodist Church. In politics he is a Republican.

HARVEY G. A. OBERDICK, D. D. S., is one of York county’s native sons, having been born in the city of York Feb. 26, 1880, and having here been reared to maturity. His father, Casper Oberdick, was born and reared in Germany, where he worked on the farm. At the age of twenty-six years he bade adieu to the loved Fatherland and emigrated to America, locating in York county soon after his arrival. Here he learned the trade of carpet weaving, at which he has been engaged in business for a number of years past. He married Miss Louisa Carls, who was born in Hanover, Germany, and they have seven children, four sons and three daughters. The parents of the Doctor are devout members of the First U. B. Church, and the father is a stanch Republican in his political proclivities. He served three years as drum major in the German army, and fought in the war between Germany and Denmark.

Dr. Oberdick passed his boyhood days in York and in due time completed the curriculum of the public schools, making good use of the advantages thus afforded him. At the age of sixteen years he entered the dental office of Dr. H. E. Bashore, of York, under whose able preceptorship he gained an excellent practical knowledge in the details of operative and laboratory dentistry, while to further perfect himself in his chosen profession he entered the dental department of the University of Maryland, in the city of Baltimore, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1900, receiving his well-earned degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. He served his professional novitiate in York, opening an office on Philadelphia street, whence he later removed to his present finely appointed quarters at No. 246 West Market street, where he is building up a practice of representative character and one which is constantly expanding in scope, since, observant of the ethics of his profession, he finds his best advertising in the reputation gained for the superiority of his work. Though one of the youngest representatives of his profession in the city of York the prestige which he has attained and the success gained in the work of his exacting vocation might well be envied by many whose years of practice reach far greater numbers than do his. He is a member of the York County Dental Association, and is held in high esteem in both professional and social circles. Fraternally he is identified with the Sandilands Commandery, No. 152, Ancient & Illustrious Order Knights of Malta, while he is also a member of the alumni association of the University of Maryland. He is a consistent member of the First United Brethren Church, in whose work he takes an active part, being a popular teacher in its Sunday-school. His parents are also zealous workers in the church and are held in high regard by all who know them.

JOSEPH F. SUTTON, of Lewisberry borough, York county, was born July 11, 1882, in Newberry township, same county, son of Robert and Margaret (Frankeberger) Sutton.

John Sutton, the great-grandfather of Joseph F., was born in 1754, in England, and came to America, settling in Chester Co., Pa. He removed to Pinetown, Fairview township, some time before 1800, where he followed farming and died in 1849, at the age of ninety-four years, nine months and five days, and was buried at Emanuel Church, Fairview township. His wife was a Miss Hoffstot, of Germany, and the children born to them were: Hannah, who married John Moore; Peter, a farmer; John, the great-grandfather of our subject; Mrs. Barbara Fisher; Mrs. Catherine Atticks; and Mrs. Sarah Jones.

John Sutton, the great-grandfather, was born Aug. 12, 1786, in Chester county, where he learned the weaving trade, following this for a number of years in Fairview township, York county, in conjunction with farming, and died there Aug. 15, 1879. Mr. Sutton was twice married, first to Catherine Ashenfelter, and then to Mary Snellberger. Both are now deceased. The children born to these unions were: Barbara, who died young; John L.,
Daniel, Washington and Elizabeth (twins), and Hananiah, the grandfather of our subject.

Hananiah Sutton was born March 8, 1823, in Fairview township, and learned the blacksmith's trade at Lewisberry borough. He followed this line all his life, operating most of the time at Pinetown, Fairview township. He married Elizabeth Knisley, daughter of Anthony and Susan (Snyder) Knisley, and she died in 1875, and was buried at Emanuel cemetery, Fairview township. The children born to Hananiah and Elizabeth Sutton were; Robert, father of our subject; Susannah, who died in 1880, the wife of L. C. Bushey; Luther, who married Isabella Myers, and lives in Fairview township; and Emma, who died at the age of four years.

Robert Sutton attended the township schools until twenty-one years of age, and then learned the blacksmith trade with his father. At the age of twenty-six he married Ella Margaret Frankeberger, a daughter of Joseph and Rebecca (Author) Frankeberger. After marriage he removed to Newberry township, where he followed farming. In 1878 Mr. Sutton bought the home which he now occupies, which consists of ninety-three acres of fine land. Mr. Sutton spent one year in Lewisberry borough, but returned to his home in 1904. Mr. Sutton is an energetic, industrious man, and if he admits a hobby, it is a love of good literature. To himself and wife the following children were born: F. B., who married Bertha Hick, and lives at Boiling Springs, Cumberland county; Effie, who married Harvey Zorger, and lives in New Cumberland, Cumberland county; Joseph F.; Julia, at home. Mr. Robert Sutton is a Republican, taking an active interest in the success of his party. He has been called upon to serve as school director and assessor, both of which offices he has filled very efficiently. Mr. Sutton is the proud possessor of a deed from the Penns, dated 1764, which he prizes highly.

Joseph F. Sutton received his preliminary education in the public schools, supplementing this with a course at the Academies at Rosstown, and Lewisberry, and he began teaching in 1899, at Pleasant View, Newberry township. He has taught at Hay-run, Redland and Cedar Grove, he now being occupied at Nauvoo, Fairview township.

In 1901 Mr. Sutton married Tillie A. Miller, daughter of Lewis B. and Annie G. (Wood) Miller, and located at Lewisberry, where he now resides. Two children have been born to this union, Robert Lewis, born June 28, 1902, and Anna Virginia, born March 20, 1904. In politics Mr. Sutton is a Republican. Fraternally he is a popular member of the Lewisberry branch of the Jr. O. U. A. M. His religious views connect him with the Methodist Church, of which he is a valued member and a teacher of the Sunday-school.

Lewis B. Miller, Mrs. Sutton's father, is a prosperous farmer of Fairview township. His wife Anne G. (Wood) Miller, died Oct. 20, 1903, and is buried at St. John's Church in Fairview township. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller are as follows: Tillie A., Mrs. Sutton; and Levi, Vera and Ora, who reside at home. Personally, Mr. Sutton is very popular in Newberry township, and he enjoys the universal esteem of those with whom he comes in contact. It is unusual to find anyone of his years occupying so prominent a position in the educational field, and his many friends see many honors in store for him in the future.

CHARLES REIDER is engaged in the practice of the legal profession in Glen Rock, where he was born, Feb. 19, 1880, son of William and Mary (Herbst) Reider, both of whom were likewise born in York county, being representatives of old and honored families of this section of the Keystone State.

William Reider was born in Shrewsbury township and has here passed his entire life, having for many years followed the blacksmith's trade and also having been identified with agricultural pursuits and with the Wire Cloth Company, but being now retired from active business and maintaining his home in Glen Rock. He served as a member of the borough council and for several years was incumbent of the office of school director. Of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. William Reider, one died in infancy; the others are: Albert, Anna L. and Charles.

Charles Reider received his early educational training in the public schools of his native town, and then entered York College, at the county-seat, where he graduated in June, 1896, in the classical course. He then matriculated in the Law Department of famous old Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1903, having previously read law under the able preceptorship of Hon. R. J. Lewis, of York, ex-member of Congress. In January, 1904, he was duly admitted to the Bar of his native county, and in his professional work is meeting with pronounced success, having an office in the city of York and also in his home town of Glen Rock.

JOHN DENUES, organist and instructor in music, of York, Pa., was born at Millersville, Lancaster Co., Pa., March 18, 1875. He is a son of Capt. Charles and Fannie (Haines) Denues.

During the early part of last century his grandparents emigrated from Prussia, along the Rhine, to Shrewsbury, York Co., Pa. Here his grandfather followed the occupation of a practical gunsmith. His grandmother was the daughter of a prominent organist and teacher in music in her native country. His father was born at Shrewsbury in 1823, there grew to manhood, and followed the occupation of a teacher. He then studied law, and was admitted to the Bar at Lancaster in 1845, entering upon the practice in Lancaster, and continuing his profession for a period of thirty years. During the Civil war he was chosen as captain of Company E, 135th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. He commanded his company at the great battle of Chancellorsville, Va., in May, 1863, and in many minor engagements. After his term had expired Capt. Denues returned to Lancaster to continue the practice of law. In 1864 and 1865 he represented Lancaster in the Lower House of the State Legislature, of which body he was a conspicuous member. Capt. Denues always took an active interest in the cause of education, and for many years was a trustee of the State Normal School at Millersville, in which town he resided for a long time.

John Denues obtained his education in the public schools of Lancaster, and at the age of twelve displayed marked talent for the art of music. This talent was first developed by his receiving instruction on the violin from Carl Thorbahn, a noted teacher of orchestra music in Lancaster. Later he began the study of piano music. At the age of sixteen he removed to York, and secured employment in the factory of the J. A. Smith Organ Company. Here he continued his musical instructions under local teachers, and he soon excelled in the playing of the piano and pipe-organ. In order to become more proficient in the use of the pipe-organ he placed himself under the instruction of Frederick W. Wolf, a noted organist of Baltimore. His success in the study of pipe-organ music soon won him promotion, and in 1895 he was elected by the vestry of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church of York, Pa., choirmaster and organist, with fine opportunities for advancement. He developed his musical talent in this position, and not only excelled in playing the pipe-organ, but in training his choristers. In 1900 Mr. Denues became a pupil of Minton Pyne, the eminent organist of St. Mark's Episcopal Church of Philadelphia, Pa., continuing his lessons until the latter's death, in 1905. In 1903 he was chosen instructor of vocal music in the York high school, and in 1905 was elected Supervisor of Music of all the schools in the city. 'Mr. Denues' talent and accomplishments have won him a high position in the musical circles of York.

LEE F. ATTICKS, of York, Pa., manager of the sales department of the York Gas Company, was born Nov. 4, 1870, on the Atticks' homestead in Fairview township, York county, son of George W. and Lucinda (Fluke) Atticks.

Mr. Atticks has the distinction of belonging to one of the oldest families of York county, and one which has also been one of the most respected. The records reach as far back as his great-grandfather, who appears to have been a man of considerable local prominence. Henry Atticks, the grandfather, was a farmer, and with his agricultural pursuits combined the trade of cabinetmaker, and also followed undertaking on the old home in Fairview township.

George W. Atticks, the father, is a retired farmer, living now at New Cumberland, Cumberland county. He married Lucinda Fluke, daughter of David Fluke, a farmer of Ashland county, Ohio, and the two children of this union were: Kelsy C., who is a teacher of penmanship in a business college in Baltimore; and Lee F.

Lee F. Atticks was educated in the district schools, and was graduated from the State Normal School at Millersville, Lancaster county, in the class of 1894. He spent eight years in school teaching, three years of which were spent after graduation as principal of a grammar school in York. Mr. Atticks was connected for five years with the York Evening Press in the capacities of assistant editor and manager of the advertising department, meeting with such success in this line that a journalistic future may open up any time if he ever returns to newspaper work. Since April, 1902, he has had charge of the sales and advertising department of the York Gas Company, and has proved his capacity as a first-class business man.

Mr. Atticks was married, June 26, 1895, to Laura Viola Gardner, daughter of Henry J. Gardner, a retired farmer, formerly of Rossville, but now of York. Mrs. Atticks is a niece of D. H. Gardner, who was superintendent of the schools of York county for four terms—twelve years. Mr. and Mrs. Atticks have two children: Dorothy Louise and Bessie Lee. Mr. Atticks is a stanch Democrat, a follower in the footsteps of his father, who served as one of the commissioners of York county. The family belongs to the Reformed Church, and Mr. Atticks is much interested in its work, and is a teacher in the Sunday-school. He belongs to the Knights of Malta.

GUSTAV BROSTROM, the mechanical engineer of the York Manufacturing Company, was born in Sweden Aug. 2, 1855, and was educated in the technical school at Eskilstuna, from which he was graduated in 1873. He came to the United States in 1881. After spending two years in Chicago Mr. Brostrom became connected with the Reading (Pa.) Iron Works, and later with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, remaining with each three years. Mr. Brostrom's next position was with the Frick Company, at Waynesboro, Pa., with which concern he was associated for nine years. Coming to York in 1898, Mr. Brostrom became mechanical engineer for the York Manufacturing Company.

Gustav Brostrom was married in October, 1881, to Miss Emma Erickson. Four children have been born to this union, as follows: Eva, of the York high school, class of 1905; and Elizabeth, Esther and Franklin, bright, intelligent children, all of whom are at home.

In fraternal circles Mr. Brostrom belongs to the Masons, being a Knight Templar. In his religious connections he is a member of the M. E. Church. In politics he is an ardent Republican.

ADAM H. KROUT, assistant foreman in the factory of Herman Noss & Sons, at York, Pa., and superintendent of the stair building department, was born July 26, 1854, in Springfield township, York county, son of David and a grandson of Michael Krout.

The great-grandfather of Mr. Krout came to America from Germany and took up a large tract of land in Springfield township, York county, where he engaged in farming until his death.

Michael Krout was also a farmer there, and also followed distilling. He married a member of the Miller family of that neighborhood, and his wife lived to the age of seventy-five. He died at the age of eighty-five years, and both are buried at Shuster's Lutheran Church in Springfield township.

David Krout, father of our subject, was born in 1827, in Springfield township. He learned the cooper's trade and the distilling business, and also farmed the home place. He married Susan Hamm, daughter of Conrad Hamm. His death occurred in 1891, in North Codorus township, and he was buried at Ziegler Church. His widow still survives, residing with her daughter, Mrs. Christian Baylor. The children of David Krout and wife were: Lucinda, wife of Christian Baylor; Matilda, wife of William Rambler, of North Codorus township; Winnie, who married Lydia Ronald, and after her death he married Ella Blocker, of Illinois; Adam H.; Adeline, who died unmarried aged twenty-one years; Jesse, who married Celestie Deveney, living in North Codorus township; Agnes, who died aged seventeen years; Cassie M., wife of Harry Lockman, of York; and Ellen, wife of Jacob Kessler, of North Codorus township.

Adam H. Krout attended the district schools of his native township until he was fourteen years of age, and then began to assist his father who had much business on his hands and needed the help of his son, and he remained at home until his marriage. Then he settled in the borough of Jefferson, where he engaged in contracting and building, a business he followed for seven years. Removing to York, he located first on King street, but in 1892 he built his present attractive and comfortable home at No. 546 West Market street. For the past eighteen years he has been connected with the firm of Herman Noss & Sons, where he has charge of the stair building department, and, as assistant foreman of the factory, is responsible for much of the work.

Mr. Krout was married in 1874 to Lucinda Bair, daughter of Joseph and Susan (Shearer) Bair, the former of whom died at Jefferson borough in 1877, and she in 1902. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Krout were: (1) Puria Hope married Rev. Charles F. Jacobs, a Luth-eral clergyman of West York borough, and they have two children, Dorothy and Margaret.

(2) Palled Bertram, who learned the wood turning trade with his father, attended the York Academy in 1895-6, and was graduated at Gettysburg College in 1901, taking the first prize as a civil engineer, and he has an excellent position with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Wilmington, Del.; he married Sarah Raffensberger. (3) Joseph David, who is a Lutheran minister located at the Stone Church in Northampton county, Pa., attended the York County Academy, and during his vacations learned the turning trade with his father, then spent a year at the York County Collegiate Institute, at York, and was graduated at Gettysburg College in the same class with his brother, in 1901, and from the Gettysburg Theological Seminary in 1904; he married Blanche Spangler, of Harrisburg.

Mr. Krout is a Democrat in politics. He is elder in the Union Lutheran Church of York, and Mrs. Krout is president of the Aid Society and a valued teacher in the Sunday-school. They all are very highly respected people.

JAMES W. ZONE was born in Dillsburg, York county, son of Scott Zone, and is now located in Newberry township, this county.

Scott Zone was born in York county, the other children in his father’s family being: John, living in York; Abraham, a farmer of Kansas; and Katie, a resident of some western state. Scott Zone was well educated at the common schools, after which he learned the boiler making trade with the York Manufacturing Company, of York, with which concern he remained a number of years. He then went to Stulton, Dauphin county, and worked at his trade until 1900, when he removed to York city, and has since been living a retired life at No. 129 South Pine street. He married Barbara Ziegler, daughter of Edward Ziegler, and their children were: Berda, wife of Albert Wonplin, of York; Florence, married and living in Mechanicsburg; and James W.

James W. Zone attended the common and graded schools of Dillsburg, after which he went to Huntingdon, Pa., and entered into an electrical business with D. C. Carpenter, there remaining for three years, doing all kinds of electrical work, while the following two years he was with a large electrical house in Reading. His next change brought him to York, and he was here engaged with the Edison Company two years and three months. At that time he found it to his advantage to enter the employ of the York Manufacturing Company and he continued with that concern for two years and seven months, leaving it in August, 1901, to go to York Haven to take charge of the electrical work at that place, having four assistants under him. Mr. Zone has been very successful in his work, and he has given universal satisfaction.

In 1902, Mr. Zone married Nettie Rodenhouser, daughter of George and Annie F. Rodenhouser, who was born at Littlestown, Adams Co., Pa. Their only child, Grace, is now deceased.

In addition to other interests, Mr. Zone is one of the largest stockholders in the York Haven Canning Company, and he owns his pleasant home. He is a member of the M. C. Lodge of York, and takes an active interest in that organization. In politics he is a Republican. Both Mr. and Mrs. Zone have many friends.

W. SMITH HEIGES, an enterprising business man of York, Pa., connected with the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company, was born in that city Aug. 8, 1869, a son of Dr. Heiges, the leading dental surgeon of York, a sketch of whom will be found elsewhere.

Mr. Heiges was educated in the York schools, completing the high school course, and subsequently entered the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, from which he was graduated in 1889. He spent eighteen years altogether in the drug house of Smith & Co., Market street, being there three years before he entered the College of Pharmacy. In 1903 he became associated with George M. Rynick, the district agent of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company, and he has been more than usually successful in this line. He is well known to all the citizens of York, and enjoys public confidence and esteem.

Mr. Heiges has been very prominently identified with several fraternal societies, particularly the Elks, of which he is past exalted ruler of York Lodge, No. 213; he is the only honorary life member of this lodge, the distinction having been conferred for services rendered. In 1904 he served as district deputy grand exalted ruler of the Elks for Central Pennsylvania, and declined a second term when this mark of esteem was tendered him. He is also past master artisan, A. O. M. Protection, and is vice-president of the Rex Hook and Ladder Company of York.

In politics Mr. Heiges votes with the Democratic party. He is an active member of St. John's Episcopal Church, and belongs to its vestry.

JAMES P. WEISER, one of York's enterprising young business men, at the present time employed with the well known Reuben Ness Spoke Works, is a native of that city, born there in 1871. He is a son of Augustus Weiser, who followed farming, but was a carpenter by trade.

Mr. Weiser was educated in the common schools of his native city, and at an early age learned the electrotyping trade with the Hubley Printing Co., of York, where he remained nine years. Since leaving that concern he has been employed at the Reuben Ness Spoke Works, and is one of that company's most skilled mechanics.

Mr. Weiser was united in marriage with Miss Emma Heindel, daughter of William and Catherine (Wallick) Heindel. Mrs. Weiser's parents were very prominent in agricultural circles in York county, and the father died Nov. 19, 1889, since which time the mother has been making her home with Mrs. Weiser. Mr. and Mrs. Weiser have one son, Chester Augustus, a bright little fellow now attending school. They make their home at No. 874 East Market street, York.

JOHN THOMAS STARK, who since 1902 has held the position of night engineer at the York Manufacturing Company's plant in York, was born in that city April 2, 1847, son of John and Rachel (LeFevre) Stark.

John T. Stark attended the schools of York until the call for volunteers for the army in the Civil war, when he enlisted as a drummer boy, being but fourteen years old at the time. He served throughout the war, receiving his honorable discharge July 31, 1865. He then reenlisted in the regular army, and served until 1871, when he was discharged with the rank of sergeant. In that year he returned to York, engaging at different positions, seven years being spent on the York police force. In 1900 he engaged with the York Manufacturing Company as watchman, in 1902 being promoted to the position of night engineer, an office he has since held.

In 1881 Mr. Stark married Ellen Motter, daughter of Joseph and Eva (Oberlin) Motter, and to this union these children have been born: Anna J., a graduate of the York High school, who also attended the Millersville Normal School in Lancaster county, is now teaching school in York; and George L., also a graduate of the York High school, is a draftsman for the York Manufacturing Company. In politics Mr. Stark is a Democrat, and is greatly interested in the success of his party in this section. He is a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. He is popular in fraternal circles and is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., Codorus Council No. 115; I. O. F., No. 853; the A. O. K. of M. C., No. 34; and the Grand Army of the Republic, Post No. 37.

JOHN WILLIAM ROYER, of York, Pa., engaged in the grain, feed, flour, hay and straw business, was born March 12, 1865, at Westminster, Md., son of Amos Royer.

Amos Royer was a farmer of Westminster, Md., and he and his wife were the parents of the following children: Ida, who married Nathan E. Franklin, died at the age of thirty-three years; Mattie R., wife of George W. Hull, lives at Roland Park, Baltimore; David E. married Effie G. Shreiner, and lives in North Dakota; and John William.

John William Royer attended the Meadow Branch school of his native State, and after graduating taught school for four years. In 1889 he was united in marriage with Lydia A. Aldinger, a daughter of Jacob and Eliza (Sprenkle) Aldinger. After his marriage he located on his father-in-law's farm, at the western part of York city, which is now known as Eberton, or West York. Here he remained eight years, following agricultural pursuits, the last two years being spent in trucking. He then came to York, where he purchased a fine residence on West King street. Mr. Royer built a fine factory, 36x25, three stories high, and engaged in the hay, grain, feed, flour and straw business in which he has continued very successfully ever since.

Mr. Royer's first wife died Oct. 29, 1902, and is buried at the Green Mount cemetery, York. They had the following children: Walter, who was drowned in the reservoir at York, Oct. 9, 1903; Anna; James; David; John E.; Jacob N. and George A. On April 2, 1904, Mr. Royer was married (second) to Mary E. Graham, daughter of Amos Graham, of Fred-ISAAC HARBOLD, the popular blacksmith located at Hall, Washington township, York county, was born in 1865, in that township, son of John and grandson of George Harbold.

George Harbold, the grandfather, was born in York county, Pa., where he operated a mill and also farmed at Big Dam. His children were: Samuel, Daniel, Peter, John, Catherine and Susan.

John Harbold, father of Isaac, was born in Washington township, York county, and in manhood he bought a farm of 126 acres in his native township, on which he lived the rest of his life, dying at the age of fifty-eight years. His death took place at New Oxford, Adams county. He married Maria Baeer, who resides at Hall. Their children, besides Isaac, the subject proper of this sketch, were: Emory, a blacksmith at Middletown; Jesse, a blacksmith at Milton Grove, Lancaster county; Wilson, a farmer in Washington township; John T., a druggist at Philadelphia; Joseph, a farmer at Tabor, Ia.; Annie, married and living at New Oxford; Ida, wife of John Bower, of Middletown, Dauphin county; Gertrude, wife of Emanuel Z. Huntzer, of Hall; Mattie, wife of Noah Grove, of Reading township, Adams county; Barbara, unmarried; and Fibbie, who died aged seventeen months.

Until he was seventeen years of age, Isaac Harbold attended school pretty regularly, and then assisted his father in cultivating the home farm until he was twenty-one years old, when he went into threshing and followed this business very successfully all through York county, for some nine years. Then he engaged in the implement business at Wellsville for a year, but in 1897 he came to his present stand at Hall. He has a convenient and well-fitted shop, 45 x 38 feet in dimensions, where he does general blacksmithing, repairing and painting of buggies. He also builds machinery for sawing. Being a careful and skilled mechanic, he has a large trade and through industry is accumulating a competency.

Mr. Harbold married Ellen E. Renicker, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth F. Renicker, of Carroll county, Md. They have these children: Benjamin F., Annie E., Granville Eugene, Russell T. and Melvin. In politics Mr. Harbold is a Democrat. He is a member of the Mennonite Church at Hall. He is a progressive, wide-awake young business man who possesses the respect and esteem of his whole community.

EARLE W. GARDNER. The city of York has attained distinctive precedence as a manufacturing and commercial center, and one of its most magnificent and important industrial concerns is the York Manufacturing Company, for which the subject of this review is the purchasing agent, while there can be naught of inconsistency in stating that he is one of the representative young business men of his native State, even as he is a member of one of the old and honored families of the Keystone Commonwealth. He is a grandson of Benjamin and Sabina E. Gardner, natives of Adams county.

Eugene C. Gardner, father of our subject, is the local editor of the Mechanicsburg Journal, published in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county. When a young man he was united in marriage to Miss Susan Wilson, daughter of Robert Wilson, of Mechanicsburg, where the latter was postmaster for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner became the parents of four children, as follows: Pauline died in 1896 at the age of twenty-two years; Bertha is the wife of Alfred J. Snyder, of Carlisle, this State, where he is engaged in the wholesale leather business; Grace remains at the parental home; and Earle W. is the immediate subject of this review.

Earle W. Gardner was born in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, Feb. 7, 1873, and after completing the work of the public schools of his native town he studied in the Chaffee Business College, in Oswego, N. Y., where he secured a very thorough training, ably fortifying himself for the practical duties of business, being graduated from that institution in the class of 1893. After leaving school he secured a position as stenographer in Philadelphia, where he remained for several months, and then he secured a position in the office of the Frick Company at Waynesboro, Pa., where he remained four years. At the expiration of that time, in 1897, he came to York and assumed the duties of his present position, for which he has proved eminently qualified, handling the important details intrusted to his care with consummate discrimination and facility. In a fraternal way Mr. Gardner is identified with the P. O. S. of A., the Junior Order of American Mechanics and the Bachelor's Club. While residing in Waynesboro he was secretary of the Centennial Association and of the general committee which inaugurated and carried to a successful outcome the centennial celebration which was given in 1897. Both he and his wife are zealous and valued members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. In politics our subject is a Republican.

On Feb. 12, 1895, Mr. Gardner was united in marriage with Miss Florence M. Eberly, daughter of Benjamin F. Eberly, a lumber merchant of Adams county, and a veteran of the Civil war, in which he served as a member of Company I, 200th P. V. I., and was a member of the signal corps of that regiment. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner became the parents of three children, namely: Earle W., Jr., who died June 3, 1903, at the age of three years; and Jeane F. and Grace E., who are attending the public schools.

HARRY H. SWARTZ, a prosperous and enterprising young farmer of Jackson township, York county, was born July 24, 1873, son of Jesse and Catherine (Hershey) Swartz. He received his education in the common schools of Jackson township. At the age of twenty-one Mr. Swartz removed to Illinois, where he remained for some time, and on his return to the place of his nativity he engaged with P. H. Glattfelder, at the paper-mill at Spring Grove. Finding that he preferred an agricultural life, Mr. Swartz rented a farm near Roth's church, where he remained about one year, in 1901 purchasing his present home of 105 acres in Jackson township, which was formerly owned by his father, Jesse Swartz. Mr. Swartz has been very successful in his agricultural operations and is justly considered one of the first-class farmers of the township.

In 1899 Mr. Swartz married Miss Sarah Sprenkle, daughter of Emanuel Sprenkle, and this union has been blessed with two children, K. Elizabeth and Ellen P. In religion the family are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Swartz favors the Democratic party in politics, and always works for the interest of that party. He has been elected to some of the township offices, and he is most highly respected and very well known.

GEORGE MALDEN BEARD, proprietor of the Beard Foundry Co., at Glenville, Pa., and one of the enterprising and successful men of this section of York county, was born Dec. 18, 1880, at Hanover, son of Henry H. and Sarah V. (Kruntz) Beard.

The Beard family is an old established one in the vicinity of Hanover, where William Beard, the grandfather, carried on a large carriage business for a number of years. He married a Miss Bart, and they had issue as follows: Walter; William; Henry H.; George; Mazzie, wife of John Sprenkle, resides in the city of York; and Sallie, wife of Elic Rhodes, lives at York.

Henry H. Beard, father of George M., was reared at Hanover and attended the local schools, learning the carriage painting business with his father, which he followed until his death in 1882, at the age of forty-five years. His burial was at Hanover. He married Sarah V. Kruntz, who still survives and lives at Hanover. Their children were: William H., who married Abice Altof, is foreman of a chair factory at Hanover; Minnie is the wife of Cirtus Trone, of Hanover; Edward B., associated with the Prudential Insurance Company, married Carrie Horner; Bertha K. is at home; and George Malden.

George Malden Beard attended the schools at Hanover until he was eighteen years of age, and then went to learn the trade of molding, first with the old Hanover Machine Co., completing his apprenticeship in one of the large foundry shops of Baltimore, where he spent fourteen months. After he returned to Hanover he was employed by John Fritz, and later in the American Foundry Machine shops at Hanover, where he continued until this plant was destroyed by fire in 1903.

Mr. Beard then came to Glenville and came into possession of his present large plant, formerly the property of Jacob Klinefelter. Mr. Beard's foundry is 50x100 feet in dimensions, while the machine shop is 40x70 feet. Employment is given twenty-five skilled workmen, and the output is all kinds of casting and general repair work. He has a large jobbing trade and makes a specialty of soil pipe. He has the large sewer contract with the city of Gettysburg. Mr. Beard is a veritable business man, and has made his motto "promptness"—one which he lives up to. The Beard Foundry Company plant is the largest industry in this part of the county.

Mr. Beard resides with his mother at Hanover, making daily trips to his foundry at Glenville. He is a member of St. Matthew's Church at Hanover, and one of the deacons. In politics he is a Republican.

CHARLES A. KNAUFF, a prominent young business man of York, Pa., engaged in the news dealing and stationery business, at No. 18 South George street, that city, was born in Heidelberg, Germany, Jan. 5, 1871.

Charles T. Knauff, father of our subject, was a native of Germany, where he followed cabinet making. He brought his family to America in 1877, locating first in Philadelphia, where he followed his trade until his death, which occurred while he was on a visit to his native country in 1888. His widow still resides in Philadelphia. They had these children: Paul W.; Adolph, who is employed with our subject; Emma, wife of Frank S. Law; Emetlie; Cora; and Charles A.

Charles A. Knauff attended the public schools of Philadelphia, and learned the hat business. He also traveled for three years for a hat firm, and then engaged in the retail hat business in Philadelphia for two years, later being employed by the Philadelphia Ledger and the Record for three years. He engaged in business in York in April, 1904, buying out the business of Mr. C. E. Starr. He located at his present stand April 15, 1905, and here he has successfully continued to the present time.

Mr. Knauff is a member of the Red Men, Conewago Tribe, No. 37, of York. Mr. Knauff has built up a fine business, and his stock is always complete and up-to-date. He is very popular and his many friends are delighted with his business success.

WILLIAM ALBERT LYNCH, of East Hopewell township, York Co., Pa., who is engaged in the cultivation of his farm, was born in Stewartstown, Feb. 9, 1871. His great-grandfather was a native of Lancaster Co., Pa., and his great-grandmother of France.

The grandparents both died in Lancaster county. They had these children: Joseph, who went to Nebraska, where he married, and still resides; Henry, who went first to Oklahoma, and is now living at League City, Texas; George, a resident of Canton, Ohio; Lizzie, who married John Ziegler, and died in Lancaster county; and Ephraim S.

Ephraim S. Lynch was born in Lancaster Co., Pa., June 5, 1840. He received but a meager education in the public schools, and, his parents having died when he was young, he was forced to work out at day's labor for his board and clothes. He learned the trade of wheelwright, and for some time teamed about the ore furnaces, finally getting to run an ore train. During the Civil war, Mr. Lynch enlisted, Aug. 26, 1864, as a private of Company K, 203rd P. V. I., and was honorably discharged June 22, 1865, at Raleigh, N. C. Mr. Lynch was a great sufferer from typhoid fever while in the army, and would have undoubtedly died except for succor given him by a comrade. Mr. Lynch lived for a time in Hopewell township, and after his marriage removed to below Stewartstown, where he followed his trade for a time, later located in the borough of the same name, and purchased property, upon which he died May 20, 1904. He married Miss Sarah J. Hammer, born near Stewartstown, March 17, 1843, daughter of George W. and Grace Ann Hammer. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch were Methodists, and he was sexton of the church at Stewartstown for many years. In political principle he was a Republican, and held a number of minor offices in his borough. Mrs. Lynch still survives, and makes her home at Newark, N. J. These children were born to the parents of our subject: Anne, who died in infancy; William Albert; and George E., born Nov. 15, 1879, who married Meta Roudenbush, a native of Bremen, Germany, who came to the United States when ten years old.

William Albert Lynch attended the public schools of his native borough, and followed day's labor for his father until his marriage, June 16, 1897, to Miss Ida F. Manifold, born near Hopewell Centre, May 27, 1874, daughter of Archibald and Jenina H. (Meads) Manifold, the former of whom was born near Hopewell Centre, March 13, 1839. She was educated in the public schools of East Hopewell township, principally under Miss Maggie Wallace and Miss Annie Liggett. Mrs. Lynch grew to womanhood in the neighborhood of her native place. Archibald Manifold worked as a tenant for several years and spent his married life at Hopewell Centre, for the past four years he and his wife having been living with our subject. Mr. Manifold enlisted as a private in 1863, at Washington, D. C., and was with Sherman as a teamster, and was discharged near Richmond at the end of nine months. Mrs. Manifold, who is the daughter of Elisha Meads, was born in Harford Co., Md., Sept. 17, 1832, and lived there until marriage.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. William Albert Lynch lived in Stewartstown, where he worked on a farm. His present place he purchased in 1901, and located on it in the spring of 1902. Mr. Lynch joined the M. E. Church at Stewartstown, but after settling in his present location he joined the Hopewell Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Lynch joined this church at the age of thirteen years, and has been a member ever since. She has been a member of the Sunday-school also, and from time to time has taken classes. In politics Mr. Lynch is a Republican, and while in Stewartstown served in many minor offices. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lynch: Dorris De Moss, born Jan. 23, 1899, died Sept. 11, 1899; Ethel Irene, born April 9, 1900; Floyd Manifold, born May 8, 1901; and Ruth Ozella, born Oct. 28, 1905.

HENRY RIEGART SPRENKLE is a native of York county, born in Hellam township, Jan. 23, 1876, to Albert and Frances (Riegart) Sprenkle.

His paternal grandparents were John and Elizabeth (Inners) Sprenkle, who had a family of seven children, viz.: Albert; Hiram H., deceased; Charles; Eli; Henry; Edward, deceased; and Elizabeth, who married the late Edward Heindle, Mrs. Sprenkle’s parents were Henry and Susan (Darone) Riegart, and they had only the two children, Frances and Milton, the latter deceased.

Albert and Frances (Riegart) Sprenkle had seven children, those besides Henry Riegart being: Walter A.; John N., Chauncey E., and James, all three deceased; Allen; and Susan.

In his earlier years Henry R. Sprenkle attended the Kreutz Creek school in Hellam township, and then continued his studies at the York County Academy, under Prof. David Gardner, now county superintendent of schools. After leaving the academy Mr. Sprenkle taught a couple of years, spent a short time at the State Normal at Millersville, and in 1894 entered the State Normal at Westchester. In 1896 he took a position in the public schools of Hellam township, and until the fall of 1900 pursued the teacher’s profession with eminent success, interrupting his work only for a short period in 1898-99, when he attended the well-known Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he took a complete course in bookkeeping and stenography, and was graduated with honors in 1899. His last year as a teacher was spent in Springettsbury township, and in the following October he commenced his business career.

Mr. Sprenkle was first employed by the Merchants’ Cigar Box Company, of Dallas-town, as bookkeeper, and he filled that position for two years, but in the fall of 1902 he was promoted to the place of manager of the entire plant. This responsibility he has carried with a marked executive ability, which has been plainly demonstrated by the great increase in the business, much of it being directly attributable to Mr. Sprenkle. The company now has over fifty employees, is one of the largest factories in its line in York county, and sells not only there but also in a number of adjacent counties.

Mr. Sprenkle is active in social life also, and is prominently identified with Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., of Dallas.

FRANK H. REIFF, a progressive and enterprising young business man of York, Pa., engaged in the sporting goods business, was born April 14, 1872, in Manheim, Lancaster Co., Pa., son of Abraham R. Reiff.

Abraham Reiff, the great-great-grandfather of Frank H., was born in Holland. Coming to America, he located in Philadelphia, and taking up a large tract of land from the Penns, near Manheim, Lancaster county, settled down to farming, which occupation he followed until his death. He married a daughter of Hantz Graff, and she also died on the farm, both being buried in the family burying-ground on the farm.

Abraham Reiff (2), son of Abraham, was born in Manheim, where he also followed farming, and where he died and was buried. He had married a Miss Herr, by whom he had children: Joseph, the grandfather of Frank H.; Christian, twin of Joseph; John; Abraham; Jacob; Samuel; Mrs. Burkholder, whose husband was a bishop in the Mennonite Church in Lancaster county; and Fannie, Mrs. Porter, the only one of this generation living.

Joseph Reiff received a common-school education, and learned the coachmaking business, which he followed for many years at Manheim. For some time prior to his death, at the age of eighty-seven years, he lived a retired life. He married Sarah Rice, daughter of John Rice, and she died in her sixty-third year, both being buried at Manheim, Lancaster county. Their children were: Mary Ann, the wife of John H. Reist; Adeline, who married John Richards; Sallie, who married Samuel A. Shroff; Emma, the wife of Joseph R. Metzler; and Abraham R., the father of Frank H.

Abraham R. Reiff was born June 1, 1847, at Manheim, Lancaster county, where he received a common school education. From 1869 until 1882 he was engaged in the packing of tobacco, in which he was a very large dealer, and he also dealt extensively in cigars, which he manufactured at Manheim. Mr. Reiff also engaged in the manufacture of shirt-waists and hosiery, following that business two years and spending one year in Philadelphia. Finding York a good business center, he located here with his family in 1893, and is now in business as a member of the firm of Adair & Reiff, on West Gas avenue. In 1867 Mr. Reiff married Mary F. Fetter, daughter of Jacob G. and Catherine (Neavling) Fetter, and to this union were born six children, namely: Minnie F., the wife of Walter Fuerneisen, who is in the jewelry business at Middletown, Dauphin county; Wilson F., who married Cora Burns and lives in Manheim; Frank H., our subject; Ella, married to Carlton P. Sunday, the druggist, whose place of business is at the corner of Market and Hartley streets, York; Katie May, who resides at home; and Emma, the wife of Ralph Hilliker, of York. In politics Mr. Reiff is a Republican. He is a charter member of Masonic Lodge No. 587, of Manheim, having been made a Mason in 1881 at the Mt. Joy Lodge, of which he remained a member until the organization of the one at Manheim.

Frank H. Reiff attended the common schools of his township and took a business course. With his father he learned the machinist trade, serving also some time in Philadelphia under instructors. He was with his father at Manheim, Lancaster county, and in Philadelphia, both as a machinist and in the office, and came to York with his father in 1893. He was first employed in York by P. B. Sprenkle, in the bicycle business, in which he continued one year, and then for the next two years managed Mr. Henry Licking's business. The next five years he spent with the Holtzman people, manufacturers of waists, and in April, 1905, he bought out J. W. Richley's business, which well known stand is situated at Nos. 16-18 North Beaver street, York. Here may be found anything in the sporting goods line, Mr. Reiff's stock of sporting and athletic goods being well kept-up and up-to-date.

Mr. Reiff was married in 1904 to Miss Carrie J. Spotz, the daughter of William H. Spotz, and they reside at No. 204 South George street, York. In his political sympathies Mr. Reiff is a Republican. He is a member of Manheim Lodge, No. 587, Blue Lodge of Masons.

GEORGE W. BRODBECK was born in Codorus township, March 6, 1878, son of S. B. Brodbeck. He attended first at Brodbeck's school, in that township, then attended the high school at Hanover and the academy at Glenville, Pa., finishing with a course in the Goldey Commercial College at Wilmington, Delaware. When ready to begin his business life, Mr. Brodbeck, on April 1, 1897, took charge of his father's office, acting as assistant postmaster, does general office work and is assistant station freight agent for the Adams Express Company. He is also telegraph operator at the Western Maryland Railroad station of Green Ridge, or Brodbeck's P. O., as it was long known.

On April 2, 1899, Mr. Brodbeck was joined in matrimony to Agnes Kate Raffensberger, of Mummasburg, Adams Co., Pa., who was born April 1, 1881. They have two daughters: Ruth, born Oct. 29, 1900; and Leah, Aug. 18, 1903.

EZRA P. MINNICH, proprietor of the Quaker Bakery of York, was born Dec. 10, 1867, in Spring Garden township, York county. His education was received in the public schools of his native township, two terms at the York County Academy, and a course at a business school in Philadelphia. He was employed six years by Strawbridge & Clothier, of Philadelphia, and then came to York, where, in the fall of 1898, he engaged in the bakery business, in which he has made a great success. His bakery is known as the "Quaker Bakery," an 18x45, two-story brick structure, and he has a weekly output of 6,900 loaves of JOHN WILLIAM RICHLEY was born in a log house situated on the road leading from Dillsburg to Franklintown, July 30, 1874.

His paternal great-grandfather was the survivor of an entire regiment which was forced to fight under Napoleon Bonaparte at Moscow, Russia. He was the only one of the regiment to get back alive, and was afterward known as Old Greyhound.

George Adam Richley, grandfather of John W., served in the German army, and later in the United States regulars as a cavalryman. He was stationed at Fortress Monroe, Virginia.

John G. F. Richley, son of George Adam, was filled with the martial spirit that had characterized his father and grandfather. He served through four years of the Civil war, and was wounded four times, attesting his remarkable power of endurance by never entering a hospital. At the battle of Cold Harbor he was shot and lay unconscious from early morning until evening. On regaining consciousness he found himself covered from head to foot with blood from a shattered shoulder, but he arose and at once rejoined his company, making a charge with them yet that evening. At the battle of the Wilderness he marched twelve prisoners back to the rear, a distance of several miles, with his left arm hanging absolutely useless at his side. At Petersburg, July 30, 1864, he was struck by a ten-pound shell, which was about spent, and he picked it up and quickly hurled it over the breast works. After the war he married Elizabeth Menear, of Dillsburg. To them was born a son, John William, July 30, 1874, just ten years to the day and hour from the miraculous escape of Mr. Richley from death at Petersburg.

John William Richley lived in the little log house in which he was born until he was about four years old, his father then moving to Charlestown, W. Va., where they remained one year, then moved to Front Royal, Va., where they lived five years, and there our subject at the age of six years started to school. The teacher had over 100 pupils in the one room, and found time about once a week to hear the smaller pupils recite, consequently advancement was slow. From Virginia, the family removed to York, Pa., and there John W. Richley attended the public schools for but a short time, at the age of eleven years commencing to learn the painter's trade, which he finished at the age of fourteen years. At that age he had charge of the shop. Painting not being very agreeable to him he gave it up and started an apprenticeship at the machinist's trade in the Penn Agricultural Works in York. There he served four years, finishing at the age of eighteen. Finding himself at this age with little or no education he started to school, attending the York County Academy. He was so rusty that he could not add one-half and one-third, and disgusted and heart-broken he was ready to give it up as a bad job, when he realized that this was his only and last chance to obtain an education. He went to work with a determination to win. At the end of seven months he had caught up to his old associates, and was in the same classes in all branches, in spite of a seven years' handicap. At the end of two years at the York County Academy he passed an examination and received a certificate to teach school in the county; he was one of the few who passed out of a total number of 170.

Mr. Richley taught two years in the primary department at Violet Hill, South York, and was then promoted to A and B grammar grade, where he taught three years. From there he was promoted to the high school building in East Market street, where he taught two years more.

In the spring of 1898 Mr. Richley started in the bicycle business with a capital of $7, with which he bought a vise and blow torch. Making a few other handy tools, he carried on this small business during vacation and in the evenings after school. In the four years after this start in business he had built and paid for his present home at the corner of Chestnut and Ridge avenue. In 1905 he started in the laundry business, at the corner of East Philadelphia street and Broad, but not liking it he went into the automobile business at Nos. 25-29 South Beaver street, where his business is located at the time of this writing.

EDWARD J. LIBHART, proprietor of the “Yorkana Hotel,” was born at his father’s mill property in Hellam township, Feb. 12, 1873.

Henry Libhart, grandfather of Edward J., was a farmer and miller, and operated the mill in which our subject was born, he having received it from his father, Jacob, who had come from Germany at an early date.

George Libhart, father of our subject, was born in 1807, and followed farming and milling all of his life. Although beginning a poor boy, he made his mark in the world, and at his death was a well-to-do man. He was a member of the Reformed Church, and in politics was a Republican, serving in a number of township offices. He married Cassandra Sprinkel, daughter of Jacob Sprinkel, and she still survives. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Libhart: Annie, the widow of Charles Leber, of York; Henry S., who died when thirty years of age; Sallie, Mrs. Faust; George, mentioned below; and Edward J.

Edward J. Libhart received his education in the Musser public school, and at Patrick’s Business College, York, his first teacher being Clayton Graybill and his last Benjamin Deitz, both well known educators. He remained at home after leaving school, and in 1896, he married Miss Laura Lieber Knecht, daughter of Amos and Rosie (Creswell) Knecht. Mr. Libhart then engaged in a mercantile business for four years, at Yorkana, where R. T. Paule’s place is now situated, and then purchased the “Yorkana Hotel,” which he conducted for one year. At the end of this time he sold the place to A. C. Haines, from whom he repurchased it, and since that time has been operating it very successfully. He is an active Republican, while in religion he is a member of the Reformed Church. He and his wife have had the following named children: Morgan; Robert; Clare, deceased; Willbur, deceased; and Merle. Mr. Libhart is a kind, genial man, is very liberal, and as a landlord is exceedingly popular. He is straightforward and honest in all business dealings and he bears an enviable reputation for integrity. Both he and his estimable wife, who is of German and Scotch-Irish descent, are popular in the social circles of their locality.

George Libhart, the brother of Edward J., was born at the mill in Hellam township. He attended the Musser school until about sixteen years of age, and when still a boy commenced to help his father at the mill and farm. He is now engaged in tobacco raising, an occupation which he started when still in his teens, and he has been very successful. Mr. Libhart was married Dec. 15, 1895, to Miss Mamie Lieber Knecht, born at Yorkana, July 16, 1880, sister of Mrs. Edward J. Libhart. Two children have been born to this union: Annie Catherine, born June 23, 1896; and Grace Pauline, April 1, 1898. Mr. Libhart is a Republican. He was reared in the faith of the Reformed Church. Like his brother, Mr. Libhart is very well liked in the community, as is also his wife, and his reputation in business affairs is above reproach.

CHAUNCEY C. KOHLER is one of York’s own sons, born there May 30, 1874, son of Elias and Harriet (Peeling) Kohler.

The Kohler family is of German descent. Elias Kohler was the son of Jacob, who married Miss Anna Seachrist, and was born April 15, 1845, the eighth child in a family of nine. He worked on his father’s farm till he reached his majority and then started out for himself in Dallastown, where he was engaged in the butchering business for two years. He followed the same calling in York for the next three years, and another three years were spent in the livery business. From that time till 1887 he was the proprietor of the “Central Hotel,” then conducted a restaurant at No. 12 South George street for a year, and in January, 1888, took a position as salesman with the York Furniture Company. Five years later he returned to the hotel business and for five years operated the “Aldine Hotel” at Spring Grove. In April, 1898, he returned to York, and after an interval of two years resumed charge of the “Aldine Hotel” April 1, 1902. Only a month later, however, May 2d, Mr. Kohler died suddenly, leaving his widow to carry on the charge he had undertaken. Mr. Kohler was a man of an inventive turn of mind, and in 1887 he devised what is known as the Kohler Improved Cattle Car, one of the best ever invented. In politics he was a Democrat, was a member of the town council and always deeply interested in public affairs. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., and popular not only in that organization, but very generally, being well-known and liked by a large circle of friends. He was married in 1868 to Miss Harriet Peeling, daughter of John Peeling, and they had five children, Minnie A., Chauncey C., Anna Gertrude, Earl C., and Harper L.

Chauncey C. Kohler was brought up and educated in York, leaving school at the age of thirteen to enter the employ of the Mutual Union Telegraph Company in York, where he spent two years learning telegraphy. He next spent one year in Baltimore as inventory clerk for the Union News Company, and then became an apprentice with the York Daily Publishing Company to learn the printing business. Two years later, when he was eighteen, he was associated with the Daily and Gazette for a year, and at the end of that time went to Philadelphia, to learn the lithographing business with Alfred M. Slocum, where he remained three years, mastering the business. He stayed in Philadelphia till 1898, and held the position of foreman in the Spencer B. Cruothamal printing and engraving establishment. Returning in that year to York, he accepted a place as traveling salesman for George A. Kohler & Company, cigar manufacturers with whom he worked till March, 1901, when he went into business for himself. For the first two years he was located at No. 21 West Market street, then removed to No. 17 East Market street and in April, 1903, took up his more commodious quarters at Nos. 26 to 30 North George street, where he has the entire building. He was the foremost to establish a first rate cigar store in the city, an example followed by several since, and was also the one to introduce bowling into the city. He now has by far the finest alley in York, and also has opened attractive billiard rooms. Mr. Kohler is, alive and energetic, with modern methods and is steadily prospering. His cigar and tobacco business is a retail and jobbing one, and is increasing in scope constantly.

Mr. Kohler was married June 23, 1898, to Miss Florence Metzgar, daughter of Andrew J. Metzgar, of Philadelphia. The young people are popular socially and have a large number of warm friends.

WILLIAM H. MILLER, a cigar manufacturer in Windsor township, was born in that township, June 7, 1868, son of Theodore and Ellen (Snyder) Miller, natives of Germany who came to this country in 1861.

Theodore Miller, at the time of his emigration, was twenty-eight years old, and a shoemaker by trade. Landing at Baltimore, he located first in Lower Windsor, and then in Windsor township, removing still later to Martinsville, where he died Feb. 16, 1885, and his wife, Nov. 3, 1888. He was a soldier in the Civil war in 1862, enlisting in Company G, 18th Reg. P. V. I., and serving three years. He was seriously disabled in the battle of Petersburg, June 22, 1864, when his right hip was shot away. Eight children were born to him and his wife, the oldest before the family left Germany, viz.: Oscar, of Windsor township; Emma, Mrs. Daniel Dillinger, of Red Lion; Mary, Mrs. Calvin Dietz, of Yorkana; William H.; David, of Red Lion; Samuel A., of Windsorville; Amanda E., Mrs. Wesley Schmuck, of Windsorville; and one that died unnamed.

William H. Miller was still a child when his parents moved to Martinsville, and received all his education in that town. His first teacher was James Sitler, and he completed his schooling under J. P. Wallace, at the age of sixteen. Until he was thirteen the boy had always written with his left hand, but Mr. Wallace compelled him to use his right, an act which Mr. Miller has since greatly appreciated. On leaving school he began cigarmaking for George W. McGuigan, continuing that occupation in different places until he entered the business for himself. In 1888, having saved enough from his earnings to make the essay, he and his wife began manufacturing cigars on their own account, using the basement of their dwelling for a factory. Mr. Miller was successful in his venture, and in 1899 erected a building for his growing business, and he now employs eight hands and manufactures cigars ranging in price from $10.50 to $18 and $35 per thousand.

Mr. Miller was married, in Dallastown, in 1889, to Sophia J. Schmuck, daughter of Reuben and Eliza (Neff) Schmuck, both of whom are still living. Mrs. Miller has borne her husband three children: Paul E., Ernest M. and Orestus K. In religious faith Mr. Miller is identified with the United Brethren, and has served as assistant class leader in that church. Believing in the principles upheld by the Prohibition party, he has always supported the candidates on that ticket. He is emphatically a self-made man, who commenced life with nothing, but who has by his own industry and perseverance made an assured place for himself. He is upright and honest, and commands the unqualified respect of all who have been associated with him.

GEORGE W. GIVENS, of William Givens & Son, of York, fish and produce dealers, was born in York, in 1869, son of William and Mary Ann (Miller) Givens. Dietrich Givens, the grandfather of George W., was a farmer of Manchester township, who later came to York. Here he died in 1877, and was buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. He married Miss Elizabeth Leibenhuet, and they had these children: Dietrich, a resident of York; William; Angelina, wife of Albert Frey, living in Baltimore; Mary, wife of George Neff, the well known druggist of York; Elizabeth, wife of Granville Weiser, of York; Jane, wife of Peter Lantz, of York; and Lydia, wife of Milton Brubaker, of York.

William Givens was born in York county, and received his education in the common schools. He assisted his father in farming, and at the age of twenty-two years engaged in business for himself, on East Market street, York, selling oysters. By strict attention to business, and good management of his affairs Mr. Givens has built up the finest trade in his line in the county. For some time the business was situated at Center Square, where business was done day and night. Mr. Givens located at his present place, at the corner of Court and Newton avenues, in 1883, building and furnishing to suit his business. The firm is now doing a general commission business, dealing in fruit, produce, fish and oysters, wholesale and retail, buying the goods from Baltimore and Philadelphia, and the finest of goods are on sale in season. Mr. Givens was married in York to Miss Mary Ann Miller, daughter of John Miller, and to this union these children were born: Charles E. G., who died in 1882, at the age of fifteen years; George W.; and Ida May, wife of A. L. Habold, of York.

George W. Givens attended the schools of York, and after completing his education assisted his father in the business. In 1903 he was admitted to the firm, and has proved to be a good, practical man of business. In 1897 he was united in marriage with Miss Ida L. Spangler, the daughter of John Spangler, and to this union two children have been born: Paul M. and Margaret Louise. In politics Mr. Givens is a Republican. He and his estimable wife reside in their fine residence at No. 232 South Pine street, York, where their many friends are always welcome.

JOHN JOSEPH BOWSER, head bookkeeper for the Edison Electric Light Co., of York, was born Sept. 29, 1877, in East Berlin, son of Joseph E. and Lydia (Miller) Bowser.

John J. Bowser is descended from ancestors who came from Germany early in the seventeenth century. There were three brothers, of whom Benjamin, from whom John J. Bowser was descended, settled at New Freedom, York county. Benjamin, the grandfather of John J., was a farmer of New Freedom, where he was born, and where he lived and died. Joseph E. Bowser is a retired farmer of East Berlin, Adams county. His wife was Lydia Miller, daughter of Andrew Miller, a German Baptist clergyman, living near Spring Grove, York county. Ten children were born to Joseph E. and Lydia Bowser: Rebecca, whose twin sister died in infancy; Andrew, a farmer near East Berlin; Moses E., who has conducted a blacksmith shop for many years at Spring Grove; Daniel, a farmer of Hampton, Adams county; Elizabeth, who married W. A. Walter, a contractor and architect of Wyomissing, Berks county; Katie, who married Wilson L. Burgard, a saddler of Manchester, York county; Lillie May, who married Robert Kauffman, a carpenter of East Berlin; Lydia A., at home in East Berlin, a graduate of the high school; and John J.

John Joseph Bowser was educated in the East Berlin High school and at Juniata College from which he was graduated in 1898. Before graduating he taught school one year. After teaching school for one year at New Freedom, York county, and for a time at Hollinger's school near East Berlin, Mr. Bowser became bookkeeper for the Martin Carriage Works of York, this being in the spring of 1899. He remained here three and one-half years, and in July, 1902, became bookkeeper for the Edison Electric Light Co., of York, a position which he has since retained.

Mr. Bowser was married June 3, 1900, to Ida Wiley, daughter of Michael Wiley, a farmer of East Berlin, and two children have been born to this union: Wiley Michael, who died in 1901, aged nine months; and Edward Joseph, born Oct. 19, 1802. Mr. Bowser is a member and liberal supporter of the German Baptist Brethren Church of York, of which he has been treasurer since 1900, and at times teacher of a Bible class and assistant superintendent and secretary of the Sunday-school. He is also chairman of the Young People's Meeting. In politics he votes the Republican ticket, but has never aspired to office. Mr. Bowser is considered one of the leading business men of the younger generation in York, and is a worthy representative of the old pioneer family whose name he bears.

ISAAC CLEMENS FINK, of York Haven, Newberry township, York county, was born in New Holland, Manchester township, Oct. 22, 1872, son of Eli-L. and Salina (Clemens) Fink.

John Fink, the grandfather of Isaac C., was a farmer and large landowner of Newberry township, where he had two fine farms of eighty and sixty acres, respectively, also owning two tracts of woodland in Conewago township, of forty and twenty-five acres. He was a very prosperous man, and upright in all his dealings. He lived to the ripe old age of eighty-four years, and was buried at Zion's View, Conewago township. He was twice married, and by his first wife had children as follows: Charles, who is deceased; Henry, a farmer of Newberry township; Mary, married to Adam Kohr, a farmer of Manchester township; and Caroline, who married Henry Gilmer, a farmer and coach builder of Lisbon, Cumberland county. His second wife was Elizabeth Linn, who died at the age of seventy-nine years, and was buried beside her husband. The following named children were born to Mr. Fink's second marriage: Leah married Peter Brunner, who died in 1904, and she resides near Strinestown, Newberry township; Amanda married Alexander Clemens, and lives at York Haven; Emma married James Sleets, night watchman at the York Haven Paper Mills, and they live at York Haven; Lucy is living at Pleasant Grove; Eli L. is the father of our subject.

Eli L. Fink was born in 1842 and received a common school education. He married Salina Clemens, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Fullerton) Clemens, and after marriage located on his father's farm, remaining until about five years after his father's death, when he removed to Codorus Furnace. There he staid seven years. He bought property in York Haven, which he later sold, and built a fine house. Later he bought a farm in Newberry township, of sixty-five acres, which he now has rented, at present residing with his son Isaac C. in York Haven. In 1903 he engaged in well drilling, which business he carries on quite extensively. While in Newberry township Mr. Fink was supervisor. Mrs. Fink died at York Haven July 16, 1902, and is buried at Pleasant Grove. Children as follows were born to this union: Isaac C.; Elizabeth, who died when two years old; Edward, who died in infancy; and Howard, who is employed as an electrician in York.

Isaac C. Fink attended the public schools of Hayrun, Codorus Furnace and York Haven until the age of seventeen years, and then engaged in the York Haven Paper Mill. He was employed in different departments, running a machine four years, and his ability and enterprise, received substantial recognition in 1902, when he was appointed foreman of the machine room.

On Sept. 16, 1897, Mr. Fink married Catherine Sheaffer, of Cumberland, Md., and the following children have come to them: Maryland, born Dec. 4, 1898; Blanche, born Dec. 25, 1899, and Esther, born April 21, 1901. Mr. Fink's niece, Henrietta, also resides with him. He has a fine residence in York Haven, which he built shortly after his marriage.

In politics Mr. Fink affiliates with the Democratic party. He is a member of the council of York Haven, and is a public-spirited citizen. He is a man of pleasing personality, and has a host of friends, being one of the intelligent and representative, as well as progressive, men of his township.

WILLIAM T. HESS, who is engaged extensively in the manufacture of mattresses, was born in 1873, in York, son of George W. Hess.

William Hess, grandfather of William T., died when about twenty-eight years old, and was buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. He had married Sarah Welsh, by whom he had these children: George W., Frank W., and Mary J.

George W. Hess was born in York in 1849, son of William and Sarah (Hess) Hess. At the age of eight years, his father having died, he was forced to go out among strangers to make his way in the world. He was employed at the Codorus Paper Mills, but his employers, finding out the boy’s extreme youth, discharged him. He then went to Inglefritz & White’s car shops, and from there as clerk to P. A. & S. Small, where he remained fourteen years. In 1881 he engaged in the manufacture of mattresses, in which business he became very successful, and he was the founder of the Wire Hair & Husk Mattress, of York. He also engaged in the furniture business on North George street, York, and the manufacture of paper boxes, employing on an average fifty-five hands. In 1905 he sold the furniture business to the York Supply Company, and is now engaged in business with his son, William T.

Mr. Hess was united in marriage with Emma V. Schall, daughter of Thomas B. and Eliza Schall, and to this union have been born: William T.; and George L., of Philadelphia. In politics Mr. Hess is a Republican, while fraternally he affiliates with the Knights of Pythias, of York.

William T. Hess attended the schools of York until he was eighteen years old, and then learned the electrical business, which he followed five years, becoming skilled in that line of business, but left it to assist his father in his furniture business. In 1900 he engaged in the mattress business, having 5,000 feet of floor space in his factory, which is still not enough, the factory having to work nights to fill orders. His place of business is on Gas avenue, near West George street, and he manufactures principally for the home trade.

Mr. Hess was married to Dessie Doffler, a daughter of Clarence and Alice Doffler, of York, the former of whom is deceased. To this union one child has been born, Virginia D. In politics, like his father, Mr. Hess is an ardent Republican. In religious connection he is a member of the Lutheran Church, of York.

WILLIAM C. LAU, a prosperous wholesale and retail baker of Glen Rock, was born April 12, 1868, in Codorus township, son of Rudolph and Maria (Breneman) Lau. His paternal grandfather was Jacob Lau, a stonemason and farmer of York county, who had the following children: John; Christian; Jacob; Abraham; Amanda, who married John Newman; Sarah, who married (first) Chester Bailey, and (second) Levi Anstine; and Maria, the mother of William C.

Rudolph Lau, the father, was a stone and brick mason and worked at his trade thirty-six years on the Northern Central railroad, and when, after his eyes failed him he was unable to work, the railroad pensioned him. These children were born to him: Nathaniel; Sarah Jane, who married Eli Lentz; Lucy, deceased, married to James A. Shaffer; William C.; and Levi. The father and mother of William C. Lau were for many years members of the Evangelical Church, and he was a member of the official board.

William C. Lau attended the public schools of Codorus township, subsequently being a student at Glen Rock, and at the age of fifteen began work, carrying water for the railroad hands. This he continued for about two years, working in summer and attending school in winter. He then served one year’s apprenticeship at the baker’s trade. At this time he fell dangerously ill with the typhoid fever, and when he had recovered resumed work on the railroad, at which he remained two years. He then spent two years at the stone and brick mason trade with his father, being thus employed on the railroad for about ten years. Next he entered the employ of the York Haven Paper mill, about eleven miles above York, furnishing the material from which the paper was manufactured and at the same time working at his trade. In these lines he continued for about two years, locating at Glen Rock in 1894 and buying out William O. Young’s bakery, which had a capacity of about fifteen hundred loaves of bread per week. Mr. Lau, on taking possession, enlarged the bakery, and as his business increased, enlarged the capacity until it is now 8,500 loaves per week. Mr. Lau has three wagons and eight horses in use, and his bakery is a fine brick structure, 30 x 70 feet, three stories in height, and is located on Hanover street, Glen Rock. His is the largest bakery business between York and Baltimore. Mr. Lau usually employing about seven hands. In 1898 he established a bakery at New Freedom and continued there for three years, but, finding that his business in Glen Rock claimed his entire time, sold out to Joseph Freeland, who now conducts the store at that place.
In politics Mr. Lau is a Democrat and was judge of elections in 1904. In 1889 he married Miss Flora T. Dunkle, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Dunkle of Glen Rock, and they have had two children, Grace, who died in infancy, and Benjamin R. Fraternally Mr. Lau affiliates with the Junior Order of American Mechanics of Glen Rock, the I. O. O. F. of Goldsboro, and the Improved Order of Red Men. He is a devout member of the Evangelical Church, in which he has been a trustee for the last eight years and a teacher in the Sunday-school. Mr. Lau is a man of enterprise and public spirit, and has many warm friends. He is highly respected by his neighbors for his good citizenship and for the efforts he has put forth in assisting to build up and improve the community.

MORGAN E. GIPE, one of the substantial business men of York, Pa., was born in that city, April 17, 1867, a son of Hollingsworth and Amanda (Free) Gipe.

Hollingsworth Gipe, a retired musician, began his musical career in 1861, when he entered the army as a musician, being stationed at the York barracks for three years. He then became an instructor of music, making a specialty of teaching band music, and the violin and piano. Mr. Gipe became one of the best known professors of music in the county, and is now regarded as an authority in all matters pertaining to this art. His wife, Amanda Free, was the daughter of Adam Free, a well known farmer and highly respected citizen of Manchester township. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. H. Gipe: Clara May, wife of E. T. Moul; Lillie Virginia, wife of A. S. Keller, who died in 1902; Walter Scott, who died at the age of three years; Annetta Bernice, at home; Morgan E.; Stuart Emerson, a musician; Maude Estelle, wife of Augustus Beck; Edna Ardella, married to C. Harry Kain; and Blanch Lucille, wife of Louis S. Morse.

Morgan E. Gipe was educated in the public schools of this city and at the age of fifteen years, in September, 1882, entered the dry-goods store of J. T. Kopp, then located in the McGrath property, Nos. 6 and 8 South George street. Promotions followed as the business grew, and in the year 1889 he was admitted to the partnership of the firm of J. T. Kopp & Co., taking charge of the then rapidly growing upholstering department. This partnership continued until 1895, when Mr. Kopp, its senior member, withdrew from the business, and the firm of Strawinski & Gipe was formed, remaining at Nos. 6-8-10-12 South George street until the year 1904. In April of that year, after twenty-two years of continuous activity in the same location, Mr. Gipe withdrew from the firm of Strawinski & Gipe, and in the following October opened his present magnificent establishment at Nos. 34 and 36 South George street, a few doors from the old location. The new business comprises a complete stock of wall papers, carpetings and rugs; hardwood floors and grilles; lace curtains and draperies, and art needle work. The establishment is well equipped to handle the extensive business which followed the opening of the new store, which is considered one of the handsomest establishments in the State, and reflects great credit on the city of York and vicinity.

On June 30, 1896, Mr. Gipe married Susan Irene Strickler, daughter of Alfred D. Strickler, of Hellam township. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Gipe—Elizabeth and Harriet Louisa, both of whom are very bright little girls. Fraternally Mr. Gipe is affiliated with the York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. Elks, and Codorus Council, No. 2091, R. A. Mr. Gipe's religious connections are with St. John's Episcopal Church. He has long been active in the Merchants' Association—one of the strong factors in the city's progress and welfare—and on Feb. 12, 1906, was elected its president for the ensuing year, an honor that attests well to his high standing in the business world and to his worth as a citizen. He has earned the reputation of being a man of upright methods and honorable dealings, and in private life his character is above reproach.

EDWARD H. NEIMAN, engaged in the manufacture of cigars at Thomasville, was born Sept. 25, 1869, son of William and Susan (Hake) Neiman, who are both natives of Pennsylvania.

William Neiman was born in York county and received his education in the common schools. While still a young man he engaged in farming and followed this profession all of his life, owning a valuable homestead in Manchester township, which is now the property of his son, Eli. William Neiman died in 1891, aged seventy-one years, while his wife survived him until 1895, when she passed away in her seventy-second year. In religion the family were Lutherans, while in politics Mr. Neiman upheld the principles of the Republican party, and served as school director. To him and his wife these children were born: Eli, John, Mary, Sarah, Amanda, Elizabeth, William, Augustus, Susan (deceased) and Edward.

Edward H. Neiman was educated in the common schools of Manchester township and remained at home until he was eighteen years of age, when he entered the employ of Jacob Becker, who was one of the leading manufacturers of cigars in Manchester township. Mr. Neiman remained with Mr. Becker but a short time and then himself engaged in the manufacture of cigars, in which occupation he has been engaged to the present time. In 1895 he removed to Thomasville, where he built a small factory, which he occupied until 1900 and then erected his present brick establishment, which is 28 x 70 feet, three stories and basement. Mr. Neiman employs on an average forty-five people in the several departments, and he makes an excellent class of goods, his trade being principally in the Western States. He has an undoubted reputation for honest and conscientious methods of business. He supplies local dealers with special brands, and his annual output is now about 2,250,000 cigars. His trade, as the excellence of his goods is recognized, is constantly increasing and he employs two traveling salesmen, his product also being handled by Western jobbers. Mr. Neiman is a Republican in politics, but has always refused to accept office. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Malta, York Lodge No. 174, of York. Mr. Neiman is thrifty, industrious and self-reliant—one who thoroughly understands the cigar manufacturing business. A valued evidence of his proficiency in this line is a silver medal which he received from the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, in 1904, in recognition both of the good workmanship and the quality of his cigars. The memento adorns his office walls. Aside from his thoroughly substantial business qualities, Mr. Neiman is a highly respected and popular citizen.

CHARLES C. BOLLINGER, who conducts a general merchandise store in the thriving village of Seitzland, York county, was born in that place, son of Abtil and Sarah (King) Bollinger, on March 23, 1871. Emanuel K. Bollinger, his paternal grandfather, married Barbara Klinefelter and they had these children: Abil; Stephen; Aaron; Uriah; Amanda, who married (first) Edward E. Dixon, and (second) Benjamin Sheffer; and Jennie, who married T. B. Seitz. Emanuel Bollinger was for many years engaged in the manufacture of fertilizers, was one of the pioneers of that business in this section, and is now living retired at Seitzland. The maternal grandfather of Charles C. Bollinger was Charles King, a farmer of Shrewsbury township, who had the following children: George D.; Lucinda, who married Amos Krout, and Sarah, mother of Charles C.

Charles C. Bollinger was reared by his grandfather, Charles King, his father having died when he was three years old. He was educated in the public schools of Shrewsbury township and at the age of nineteen, having learned telegraphy, was employed by the Northern Central Railroad as assistant agent, continuing as such for about four years. For the next five years he followed the flour milling business, discontinuing this in 1897 to engage in the grocery business. In 1902 Mr. Bollinger engaged in his present lines, general merchandise and produce. The business in which Mr. Bollinger has established himself is one of the oldest in the county and prior to his taking possession of the store, had become somewhat run down, but by strict application and honest, open handed dealing, Mr. Bollinger has expanded the trade, until now he has one of the best and most lucrative enterprises in his section of the State. Weekly he ships a carload to Baltimore, and jobs produce to the store trade at Glen Rock.

In his political convictions Mr. Bollinger is firmly Republican. He was first appointed postmaster by President McKinley in December, 1901, has been continued in that office since, and is one of the most trusted officials in the service. His fellow citizens have also more than once recognized his worth by electing him to responsible positions. Ever since he has come of age he has been a committee-man of the Republican party, and in 1900 served as census enumerator. He is connected with the Lutheran Church, and is one of its most liberal supporters. Fraternally he belongs to Shrewsbury Lodge No. 423, F.

In 1891 Mr. Bollinger married Minerva Seitz, daughter of Eli Z. Seitz, and four children have been born to them: Guy, Mary May, Vernon and Raymond R.

WILMER C. THRONE. Prominent among the representative members of the active mercantile circles in the thriving city of York stands the subject of this review, who is the senior member of the firm of W. C. Throne & Co., dealers in hardware, paints, groceries, etc. The inception of the enterprise dates back to 1882, when the business was founded by J. F. Rohrbaugh, Jr. W. C. Throne entered upon his business career in 1886 as a salesman for Mr. Rohrbaugh, and has been connected with the same to the present time. In 1895 the business was transferred to himself and Eli Deardorff, and they were together under the firm name of Throne & Deardorff, which continued until 1899, when Mr. Deardorff retired and the firm name was changed to W. C. Throne & Co., the father of the subject of this sketch becoming a partner. The building occupied is located at No. 246 West Market street, in the center of the retail district, and is three stories in height, with a storeroom of 24 x 100 feet, while the basement and second floors, with a warehouse in the rear, are utilized for the accommodation of the stock of W. C. Throne & Co.

Wilmer C. Throne was born and reared in York county, the date of his nativity having been Feb. 6, 1860. He received his early education at the public schools and later attended the York County Academy. He is the only son of Amos Green and Amanda M. (Smyser) Throne, his honored father, who was a son of Samuel and Harriet (Green) Throne, having been born in York county May 16, 1814. He was one of the county's sterling citizens, and held many positions of prominence and trust during life and up to the time of his decease, which occurred May 28, 1900. The mother, a daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Herman) Smyser, was born in York county July 26, 1842, and is now residing in York, where the greater portion of her life has been passed. She is a devoted member of the Lutheran Church, as was her husband.

The subject of this review is a stanch Republican in his political allegiance and temporarily he is affiliated with Harmonia Lodge, No. 853, I. O. O. F.; Sandilands Command-ery, No. 152, A. & I. O. K. of M.; York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. E.; Codorus Council, No. 2091, Royal Arcanum, the Volunteer Firemen's Relief Association, and the Vigilant Steam & Chemical Fire Engine Company, No. 1, of which he is treasurer.

Mr. Throne was united in marriage to Fannie M. Deardorff, a daughter of Oliver and Sarah Deardorff, prominent residents of York, Pa., and they have two children, Philip and Sarah.

LEWIS H. ALWINE, manufacturer of building brick at Spring Forge, Pa., Spring Grove P. O., is one of the progressive business men of that place, and widely and favorably known. His birth occurred near Abbottstown, in York county, Pa., Jan. 12, 1874, and he is a son of Peter Alwine, who was also born in York county, in 1830. He, too, was engaged in the manufacture of brick, although early in life he was a teacher, and always a scholar. His wife was Catherine Dahlhammer, who was born in 1843, in York county, and is still living, making her home at Abbottstown. She is the daughter of William Dahlhammer, who, in his day, was a man of substance. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Peter Alwine settled near Abbottstown, where Mr. Alwine embarked in the manufacture of brick, and continued this enterprise until a short time prior to his death, which occurred in 1895. He and his wife had thirteen children, all of whom reached maturity, twelve being still alive: Emma, a daughter of Theodore Altland; Sallie, wife of Charles Heilman; Ida, wife of Edward Hoffmies; Harvey; Samuel; William; Lewis H.; Edward; Percy; Emory; Paul and Laura.

Lewis H. Alwine was well educated in the country schools, finishing his scholastic course at the age of seventeen, at which time he began working with his father in the brickyard. At the age of nineteen, he commenced teaching in the country schools, and thus continued during the winter months, while in the summer he still gave his services to his father. During that period he thoroughly learned the brick business, so that in 1896, when he and his brother William formed a partnership, under the style of Alwine Brothers at Berlin Junction, where the father had had a branch factory for a number of years, he was thoroughly competent. Later Mr. Alwine moved to Spring Grove, purchased a plant and installed new machinery to accommodate the present annual output of 2,000,000 brick. The brother William is interested in this plant, but devotes most of his time to the Berlin establishment. A large local trade has been built up, and the remainder of the product is shipped to York and Baltimore. The brick of this factory is of a superior quality, and finds a ready sale. The machinery is of latest pattern, and the kilns are square in construction, both coal and wood being used for burning. The firm controls a very large business, which shows a steady and healthy increase.

In 1899, Mr. Alwine married Miss Minnie Spangler, a native of York county, a daughter of Jonas and Jane (Renoll) Spangler. Mr. and Mrs. Alwine have a beautiful brick residence, where they dispense a generous and gracious hospitality. In politics Mr. Alwine is independent, casting his vote for the man he believes best fitted for the office. His efforts have met with unqualified success, and he is justly placed with the solid, substantial men of Spring Grove. In addition to holding a large interest in the brick manufactories mentioned, he is a stockholder in the People's National Bank of Spring Grove.

GEORGE E. SMITH, who is engaged in a shoe business in York, was born there in 1876, son of John Smith, and grandson of George Smith. The grandfather was a native of Germany, and served in the German army, our subject now having his discharge from same, which bears the date of 1831. George Smith came to America with his wife and family and settled in York, where his wife died shortly afterward. He entered the Union army in the Civil war, and was wounded at the battle of Antietam, dying from his injuries at Alexandria, when aged fifty-six years. He was united in marriage to Mary Agnes Klas, and their children were: George, who was killed by Italians at Shenandoah, Pa.; Mrs. Mary Mentz; Mrs. Clark, of Baltimore; Mrs. Schaele, of York; John, the father of George E. Smith; and Miss Jennie, of Springfield, Ohio.

John Smith was born in Germany in 1838 and was brought to America by his parents at the age of four years. He learned the molding trade, which he still follows in York. He was married to Annie Miller, a daughter of George and Julia (Miller) Miller, and she died in 1883, being buried at Prospect Hill cemetery. Two children were born to this union: George E. and John, the latter a tailor of York.

George E. Smith attended the public schools of York. His first work was with a notion house, and he then learned the shoe business with Edw. Reineberg, in 1904 opening up his fine up-to-date shoe store at No. 640 East Market street, where he carries on a flourishing business, having in stock the best goods on the market. He has gained the confidence of the people of York, where he has the reputation of a man of honesty and fair dealing.

Mr. Smith was married in 1900 to Miss Jennie Manges, daughter of Rev. Edmund Manges, of York, and to this union one child has been born, Richard M. Mr. Smith is a Republican, is a member of the Knights of Malta, and is connected with the Lutheran Church.

SAMUEL H. BARND, merchant, at Glen Rock, is an influential citizen of Shrewsbury township. He is at present engaged in the general mercantile business at Glen Rock, and conducts one of the largest patronized stores of the vicinity. He was born in Springfield township, Oct. 21, 1874, and is a son of John and Mary (Hildebrand) Barnd. The parents of Mrs. Barnd had the following children: Rebecca, who married Valentine Anstine; Jonathan; Leah; Mary (deceased), and Emanuel (deceased).

John Barnd, the father of Samuel H., was the only son of his parents, and a stonemason by trade. For many years he was in the employ of the Northern Central Railroad, having charge of the stone cutting and mason work done for the company. He is the father of ten children, six of whom died in infancy. Those surviving are: William; Samuel H.; Matilda, who married Charles Meyers, and Rosa, wife of Reuben Neiman.

Samuel H. Barnd attended the public school of Springfield township, later taking a course at the York County Academy and subsequently at Patrick's Business College of York and the West Chester State Normal school. During this period he taught school in the winter, pursuing his own studies in the summer. After completing his education he taught three terms at Glen Rock, when he formed a partnership with F. W. Brown in the dry goods, grocery and general merchandise business at Glen Rock. In this line he has since continued, doing a large business and being counted one of the most successful merchants of the township. Mr. Barned is connected with the Junior Order of American Mechanics, in which he is very popular; also with the Knights of Pythias.

ROBERT WILLIAM SOUTER is superintendent of the Littlestown silk mills at Littlestown, Pennsylvania.

JOSEPH S. MYERS, of York, Pa., is a native of this county, born in Springfield township, Jan. 6, 1854. He received his education in Goodling & Krout's schools of that township, and attended one summer session taught by Dr. Selling, at Chestnut Grove, Lancaster Co., Pennsylvania.

After leaving school Mr. Myers assisted his mother at operating the old home farm for one year, and then went to Chestnut Grove, Manheim township, Lancaster county, where he remained about four years farming, returned home for one year, and then managed a farm for Jacob Aldinger in West Manchester township, along the Gettysburg Pike, for one year. He purchased a farm in Hopewell township, but after four years sold out and returned to the home farm for two years, the next three years being spent on Capt. Shroeder's farm in Manchester township. He then went to Paradise and engaged in butchering, in which he also engaged in York for nine years. In 1894 he engaged with the York Street Railroad Co., and has since been one of that company's trusted employees. He operated the first car to the borough of Wrightsville, and has been motorman on that line ever since.

Mr. Myers was married in 1875 in Lancaster Co., Pa., to Priscilla Mathias, daughter of John and Henrietta (Repman) Mathias. To this union has come one daughter, Nancy Grace, who is the wife of Edward E. Workinger, of York, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Myers reside at their fine residence, No. 205 North Belvidere street, York. In politics Mr. Myers is a Republican, and has been judge of elections a number of times. Mrs. Myers is a member of the German Baptist Church.

The Mathias family, to which Mrs. Myers belongs, came from Germany, John Mathias, great-grandfather of Mrs. Myers, emigrating to this country and becoming an early settler in York county, Pa. He had eight children: Peter, Henry, George, John, Jacob, Lena, Catherine and Elizabeth, all now deceased.

Peter Mathias, son of John the emigrant, was born in York county in 1800, and was a miller by trade. His literary education was limited to that common to the time and place. He married Henrietta Strine, of York county, and they had six children: John; Ellen, born Jan. 24, 1834, deceased; Charles, born Nov. 24, 1836, deceased; Susan, born Dec. 26, 1837, deceased; Mary, born Feb. 2, 1843, deceased; Sarah, born Dec. 10, 1845, deceased.

John Mathias, father of Mrs. Myers, was born Dec. 18, 1831, and remained at home with his parents until the age of eighteen, when, in 1849, the death of his father occurring, he was obliged to seek work. He had had the usual advantages of the public schools, and he found his first work in a sawmill, and afterward for a number of years was in the mercantile business, but he is now living retired at Middletown, Dauphin county. In 1862 he enlisted in Company A, 166th P. V. I., in which he served nine months. In August, 1864, he became a member of Company E, 9th Pennsylvania Cavalry, and served until the close of the war. He has always taken an active interest in politics and religion. For many years he was connected with the United Brethren Church, and gave the lot upon which the first chapel was built, at what is now known as Royalton, in 1875, and on the same lot in 1893 the Liberal Church was built. On Sept. 8, 1849, Mr. Mathias married Henrietta Repman, daughter of Peter Repman, of York county. Seven children were born to them: Elmira, born Nov. 29, 1850, married Samuel Harvey, deceased, and had six children; Cyrus, born Feb. 28, 1852, married Emma Franse, and had seven children; Morris, born April 5, 1854, married Clara Sides, has three children, and lives in Canton, Ohio; Priscilla, born Nov. 7, 1857, married Joseph S. Myers, and has one child; Mahala, born Nov. 29, 1859, is deceased; Minerva, born Jan. 31, 1862; married Kirk Snyder, of Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., and has four children; and Sarah Ellen, born Aug. 26, 1864, is the wife of Gammill Grove, of York county, and has six children.

JOSEPH E. PATTERSON was born near the borough of Winterstown Nov. 9, 1868. The Patterson family is an old one in that section, Clinton Patterson, the great-grandfather of Joseph E., having helped to haul material for the old court house that stood on the square. Clinton Patterson had come to the United States from England with his brothers, about 1760, and with one of them settled in Maryland, the remainder of the family going further West. Clinton Patterson took up a section of land in Hopewell township, near Stewartstown, where he died, leaving his property to his only son, Edie. Although a very rich man when he attained his father’s property, Edie Patterson lost much money by becoming security for other people; in one case the dishonesty of one man cost him the sum of $22,000. He died on his farm in 1879. His wife, who had been Miss Meads, bore him these children: Benedict, a surgeon in the army during the Civil war, died in action; Archibald, who died in York, was a prominent attorney of that city, and, at the time of his death, was a candidate for the district attorneyship; Hannah is Mrs. Adie Hammers, of Stewartstown; James G., of Hopewell township, is a farmer and nurseryman; Sarah Ann married Andrew Hetrick, of Stewartstown; Adam E. was the father of Joseph E.; and William E., who died in York, was a butcher, a real estate dealer, and, at the time of his death, a court detective.

Adam E. Patterson was born in Hopewell township, near Stewartstown, June 5, 1844, and was reared on the farm of his father. His father had built the hotel now owned by J. Mart Saylor, and there Adam Patterson spent part of his boyhood days. Grandfather Patterson was also a distiller, and his son drove a team between the hotel and Baltimore. After his marriage Mr. Patterson resided for a time on his father’s farm, but in 1872 removed to North Hopewell, where he purchased a farm and lived until 1889. He then removed to the farm now owned by Joseph E., and spent seven years on the place, at the end of which time he went to Stewartstown, where he died, March 29, 1900. Mr. Patterson was of the Evangelical faith. In politics he was a lifelong Democrat, and served in township and borough offices for many years, becoming well known and very highly esteemed. Adam Patterson married Miss Sarah A. Smith, born in Hopewell township, daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Dailey) Smith. Mrs. Patterson still survives, at the age of sixty years. She is the mother of children as follows: Joseph E.; Catherine, Mrs. William Miller, of Red Lion; Mary J., Mrs. James Zellers, of Stewartstown; and Adam E., also of Stewartstown.

Joseph E. Patterson attended the public schools of his native township, his teachers being Miss Fulton, S. E. Miller, Robert Heathcote, John Sitz, Loretta Waltermeyer, Annie Hess, Moses Snyder and Lucy Stormer. At the age of eighteen years he left school, and commenced to work for his father on the home farm. He was married in 1894 to Katie J. Althouse, of Hopewell township, daughter of the late Jacob and Margaret (Reichard) Althouse. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Patterson farmed on the home place, which Mr. Patterson purchased in 1899. The farm consists of 110 acres of good land, all of which is under cultivation, and supplied with convenient, modern buildings. Mr. Patterson is a member of the Evangelical Church. He is a firm Democrat, ardently supporting the principles of the party, also serving his township in a number of the offices. He has a number of business interests beside that of his farm, among them being stock in a railroad and a canning factory. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Patterson have been: Goldie, Preston, Palmer, George, Ruth and Ethel.

JOSEPH TYZON HENRY was born at Bellefonte, Centre county, Oct. 5, 1872, son of Jacob and Rebecca (Tyson) Henry, and is now the proprietor of a cigar store at 13 and 15 South George street, York.

Jacob Henry was born in York county, March 9, 1838, and his father was a miller by trade. His early life was spent in York, where he learned the trade of a machinist, and he made that his regular occupation. He followed his trade at various points in Pennsylvania, Dover, Lewistown, Lockhaven and Bellefonte, and finally in 1882 returned to York, after an absence of about twenty-five years. He was an all-round mechanic and a master in his line of work. Fraternally he was active in both the I. O. O. F. and the I. O. R. M. Mr. Henry married Miss Rebecca Tyson, also a native of York county, and by her had three children, namely: Charles T., residing at 803 West Princess street, a machinist by trade, and foreman for the S. Morgan Smith Manufacturing Company; Robert T., a molder by trade, employed by the Variety Iron Works; and Joseph T. Mrs.
Henry is still living, but her husband was laid to rest March 27, 1904, when he was aged sixty-six years and eighteen days.

Joseph T. Henry was educated mainly in the public schools of York, as he was only nine years old when his father moved thither from Bellefonte. At seventeen he left school and entered upon an apprenticeship to the machinist's trade with the York Manufacturing Company, where he was employed for some time. Later he was successively engaged in Milwaukee, Wis., Altoona, Pa., Johnstown, Pa., Alliance, Ohio, and Philadelphia, following his trade in these various localities till Sept. 1, 1903, when he opened his present cigar store and billiard parlors on South George street. His establishment is one of the best in the city, and he carries a full line of cigars and tobaccos, beside a variety of smokers' supplies. He is full of energy, and has displayed admirable business qualities which insure him continued success.

On Aug. 23, 1896, occurred the marriage of Mr. Henry with Miss Gertrude Callahan, of Baltimore, a union that has been blessed with three children, only one of whom, however, has survived; Charles G. and Nelson Jacob are both deceased; while the youngest, the only one living, bears his father's name, Joseph Tyson. Mr. and Mrs. Henry are both members of the Reformed Church. The former is an active member of Harmonica Lodge, No. 853, I. O. O. F. The family reside at 119 South Newberry street, and are people held in high esteem.

WILLIAM EDWARD WALTON was born in York Haven Aug. 24, 1871, son of Amos and Sarah Ann (Cassel) Walton. The Walton family is of Scottish descent, and while the time of their emigration to America is not accurately known they have lived for considerably over one hundred years in York county, where the great-grandfather of William E. Walton settled, at York Haven. His son Elijah removed from that point to Pleasant Grove and was a farmer there till his death. He and his wife are both buried in the old Cassel graveyard in Newberry township. Their children were: Kilgore, Emma, Mary and Amos.

Amos Walton was born at York Haven in 1849. In early life he was employed by the day in the quarries, at the same time engaging to some extent in tobacco culture. After his marriage to Sarah Ann Cassel, daughter of John Cassel, he located in York Haven, and later opened a boarding-house there, and subsequently did regular hotel business, following the latter for about five years. Although he died at the comparatively early age of fifty-three years he had accumulated a large property, and did much building at York Haven. His last years were spent in retirement. He and his wife, who died at the age of forty-seven, are both interred in the Cassel family burying-ground. Their children were as follows: Sherman F., who is in the restaurant business at York Haven, and who married Sarah Baker, now deceased; William E., John H., the leading merchant of York Haven, who married Beckie Miller; Charles C., employed by the paper company, and married to Carrie Myers; and Eliza D., who resides in Philadelphia, unmarried.

William E. Walton received most of his education in the Cassel school in Newberry township, attending one term in York Haven. He began his business life by securing employment with the paper company, but after a short time there, in 1896, he and his brother John H. engaged in the mercantile business at York Haven, under the firm name of Walton Bros. This partnership continued two years, and then Mr. Walton returned to the paper works for a short time before going to Middletown, Ohio, where he was employed for a year in papermaking. His next venture was to embark in a mercantile enterprise in York, Pa., for a year; he disposed of the business and ran a restaurant and bakery for two and a half years. After a period spent in the paper business in Wisconsin he returned, in November, 1902, to York Haven and accepted the position with the York Haven Paper Company which he is at present filling—that of foreman of the machine room, with fifteen men under him. Mr. Walton is a pushing, energetic worker, and has made himself a valuable man to his employers.

On March 17, 1897, Mr. Walton was married to Gertrude Rebman, daughter of George H. and Rebecca (Haines) Rebman, of Newberry township, and one son has been born to them, Herman Edward, now nearly five years old. Mr. Walton is a Republican in politics. He is a member of the A. O. K. of M. C.

MICHAEL S. MORRISON, proprietor of the York Fruit Company, of York, is one of that city's progressive and enterprising business men. Mr. Morrison's birth occurred in Hopewell township, York county, in 1832, and he is a son of William E. and Eliza (Beaty) Morrison.

William E. Morrison was a lifelong farmer in Hopewell township, where he died in 1895. Both he and his wife were buried in that township. They had these children: Elizabeth, Agnes, John A., William B., A. T., Michael S., Rosa, Ella and Maggie.

Michael S. Morrison attended the common schools of Hopewell township, and then assisted his father at farming. In 1877 he located in York and was employed with his brother, John A., in the draying business. Later they embarked in the fruit and produce business, trading as John A. Morrison & Brothers, and this partnership lasted for nine years. Mr. Morrison then formed a partnership with his brother, A. T., the firm being known as A. T. & M. S. Morrison, and they were together two years, our subject engaging in 1890 in business on his own account, now having one of the finest trades in the city. His warehouse is situated in the rear of the First National Bank building, with office and salesroom at No. 44 East Philadelphia street, and he has always a large and attractive stock, buying his goods by the car lots.

Mr. Morrison married, in 1881, Sarah Ness, daughter of Henry and Sarah Ness, and to this union have been born: Harry, who is a farmer in Maryland; and Clara and Bessie, at home. In politics Mr. Morrison votes the Democratic ticket. He is a member of Lodge No. 505, Jr. O. U. A. M., of York. He is very well known in the business circles of York, and his standing is that of a solid, substantial business man.

BARNET G. FICKES, of York, Pa., where he is engaged in contracting and building, was born in Dover township, York county, in 1870, son of Isaac and Maria (Knudler) Fickes.

Isaac Fickes was born in Adams Co., Pa., and when a young man located in Dover township, York county. He learned the stone mason's trade, which he followed in connection with farming until his death at the age of sixty-one years. He is buried at Strayer's Church, Dover township. His widow makes her home with her son, Barnet G. Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Fickes had children: Mary Jane, who died young; Emma, the widow of Noah Lichty, residing at East Mount, Dover township; Amanda, the wife of Michael Bonner, of Lewisberry borough; John and Monroe, deceased; Annie, wife of Andrew Strayer, resides at Dillsburg; Isaac, a resident of York; Henry W., of Wellsville borough; Mary, deceased wife of Abraham Seifert; and Barnet G.

Barnet G. Fickes attended the township schools of Dover until the age of eighteen years, when he learned the carpenter's trade with John Seifert of Dover borough, with whom he remained three years. He was then engaged with William Reiver and Lewis Reesor, of Warrington township, and located at York in 1895, residing at the "Matte House" until his marriage, which occurred Dec. 25, 1897, to Annie M. Dull, daughter of Solomon Dull, of West Manchester township. Mr. Fickes became proprietor of a business in 1901, his first work being the erection of six fine dwellings for Mr. Rupp on King street, since which time he has built structures all over the city. He built for S. L. Etter, at No. 129 North George street, and the Jacob Snyder building, on West Market street, known as the Automobile building. He resides at No. 718 West Philadelphia street. In politics he is a Republican, but he has never taken more than a good citizen's interest in public affairs, giving his time and attention solely to his business concerns. He holds membership in York Aerie, No. 183, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

FRANK H. GROTHE is a representative young business man of the city of York, where he conducts a prosperous enterprise as a dealer in coal and wood. He is a native son of York county and a member of one of its honored families of German lineage, having been born in the borough of York Aug. 17, 1870, son of Henry W. and Wilhelmina (Heitkamp) Grothe. The former, born in Germany in 1829, emigrated thence to America in 1851. The latter was born in Germany in 1832. A further account of the Grothe family appears in the history of William H. Grothe.

The boy duly availed himself of the advantages afforded by the public schools and supplemented this discipline most effectively by a course of study in the York County Academy. Upon leaving school, in 1886, he entered the employ of J. H. Millander & Co., manufacturers of cigar box lumber in Ceredo, W. Va. In 1892 he established himself as a coal and wood dealer in York, where he has founded a most successful business, running four wagons, and handling both hard and soft coal as well as wood. He has proved himself a reliable and progressive business man, and the steady patronage accorded him is the best testimony of public confidence and appreciation. For a period of three years Mr. Grothe was the able and popular supervisor of the city of York. In politics he is a stanch Democrat. Both he and his wife are zealous members of St. John's German Lutheran Church, in which he served as deacon for three years, while he has taken an active interest in all departments of the church work.

On Dec. 29, 1892, was solemnized the marriage of Frank H. Grothe and Miss Elizabeth Horstman, daughter of Henry and Eleanor Horstman, of Cleveland, Ohio, and of this union have been born three children, Eleanor, Emma and Ernest.

MARTIN S. TAYLOR, of Newberry township, manager of the E. B. Shelley Cigar Manufacturing Company, the only cigar manufacturers in Newberrytown, was born there July 24, 1874, son of William H. and Mary (Sipe) Taylor.

Jeremiah Taylor, the great-grandfather of Martin S., was born in England, and coming to America, settled in York county, Pa. He died in Warrington township, and was buried at Princeton. Isaac Taylor, the grandfather, was born in Franklin township, and married a Miss Hoopes, and they both died in York county, and are buried in the home burying ground. Five children were born to this union: Sarah, William H., Isaac, Wesley and Lydia.

William H. Taylor, father of our subject, was born in Newberry township, where he received a common school education, and learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for about twenty-six years in Newberrytown and Newberry township. Mr. Taylor came to live with his son, our subject, in 1900, and is employed in making cigars. Mr. Taylor married Mary Sipe. The children born to William H. and Mary Taylor were: Lillie, who died at the age of eleven years; Martin S.; Clara, who married L. E. Hartman, and lives in Newberry township.

Martin S. Taylor attended the township schools and spent nine years in the West. From his father he learned the blacksmith's trade, and followed that line for a few years, and then engaged in the hotel business for a short time. He was then secured by the E. B. Shelley Cigar Manufacturing Company, as manager. The factory is at the old C. E. Bair stand, and employs about twenty-five skilled workmen. Incidentally it is the only cigar manufacturing company in Newberrytown, and the company are the makers of the well-known "Senate" brand.

In October, 1893, Mr. Taylor married Minnie J. Free, daughter of Peter and Leah Ripman, of York county, and one child, Lillie May, has been born to them. In politics Mr. Taylor has been very active in the ranks of the Republican party, and has efficiently discharged the duties attendant upon the offices of inspector and township clerk. Mr. Taylor gives his business his personal attention and watches the output, so that the standard is kept up to the point which first attracted attention and caused continued growth. He is progressive, wide-awake and thoroughly modern in his ideas.

WALN E. LEREW, one of York's enterprising and successful business men, a manufacturer and jobber of confections located at No. 35 West Philadelphia street, has been a resident of the city since 1894. Mr. Lerew was born Aug. 6, 1871, in Bermudian, Adams Co., Pa., and is a son of Jesse and Hannah (Hoops) Lerew. The father died Nov. 27, 1903, at the home of his son in York, aged seventy-two years, seven months and twenty-one days. The mother still survives, and resides in Adams county.

The Lerew family is of French extraction, and by authentic records it is traced back to the time, when, as Huguenots certain of its members fled from France and found a retreat in Holland. The family was established in America by two brothers who settled in Maryland, one of whom subsequently migrated to Lancaster county, Pa. The name, in its original orthography, was Lareu, and it is spelled in several ways at present by different branches, Mr. Lerew himself preferring the form here adopted. The two emigrants, George and Jacob, married in Maryland, and Jacob presumably settled in Baltimore, and was the great-grandfather of W. E. Lerew.

Jacob Lerew, son of Jacob, the grandfather of W. E., came to Adams county and became there an extensive farmer. He was a man of religious life and a strict adherent of the Dunkard Church. He married a Miss Kimmel, of German ancestry, who was born near Dillsburg, York county.

Jesse Lerew, father of W. E., was a man of more diversified interests than his father, and followed various avocations, including farming, horse dealing, hotel keeping and merchandising. In his early life he devoted the bulk of his time to the hotel business. He became associated with the Society of Friends later in life, his wife, Hannah Hoops, being a life-long member of that religious body. Hannah (Hoops) Lerew was born near Lewisburg, Pa., daughter of Waln and Lydia (Leach) Hoops, of old Quaker families of English descent, and of high standing. Eight children were born to Jesse and Hannah Lerew: Clayton and Elmer both died in infancy; Emma is the wife of Luther M. Powers, of Bermudian, Adams county; Curtin A., a resident of York, is a salesman in the employ of his brother Waln; Clinton T. is proprietor of the "Hotel Lerew," of York Springs; Waln E.; Sarah A. is deceased; and Mary E. is the wife of Harry Mengers, a merchant on the old homestead where he operates Mrs. Lerew's store.

Waln E. Lerew was educated in the public schools of his native place and remained at home until he was twenty-two years of age, assisting his father in the store. Then he came to York and entered the employ of P. A. & S. Small as a clerk, with whom he remained one year and five months. His next business connection was in partnership with William Harlacker, under the firm name of Harlacker & Lerew, in a wholesale confectionery business which continued until March 22, 1891. After this business experience of five years duration, Mr. Lerew deemed himself equipped to embark independently, and he established the Lerew Candy Company, which he conducted as such for nine months, then securing articles of incorporation, with a capital stock of $10,000. The business was conducted thus for one year and eight months when the company was dissolved. Mr. Lerew becoming sole owner and operator of the business. He has met with extraordinary success, keeps three men on the road, and ships his products as far west as Chicago. His business includes all kinds of confections, but he makes a specialty of hard goods and brittles. In the jobbing department is handled a general line of candies, fruits, nuts and cakes. Mr. Lerew gives his personal attention to the business, watching every detail of manufacture so that his goods are always of the standard quality and never disappoint. It is a just boast that a customer once secured is a continuous customer. His success shows the rewards of industry and energy.

Mr. Lerew was married Dec. 27, 1894, to Miss Luella M. LaRue, of York, and they have two interesting children: Helen K. and Edward N. Their pleasant home is located at No. 345 West King street, York.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lerew are members of the German Reformed Church. He belongs in a fraternal way, to the Sons of Veterans and the order of Heptasaphe. In politics he is a stanch Republican, but has never been an aspirant for office.

JOSEPH WILFRID DUKE, the courteous and popular assistant freight agent of the Northern Central Railway Company in the city of York, is well entitled to representation in this historical compilation, the biographical department of which is intended not only to pay a due tribute to the memories of those who have wrought worthily in the past but also to make mention of the citizens of to-day whose records are such as render them worthy of perpetuation as a legacy to the future.

The Duke family is of stanch English ancestry, and the original American representatives of the branch to which our subject belongs came to this country about the year 1812, while the maternal ancestors of Mr. Duke were of the French-Huguenot stock, having been driven from France to Belgium at the time of the French revolution and having finally found refuge in America. James B. Duke, grandfather of Joseph W., passed his entire life in the city of Baltimore, Md., where he was born and reared his son Augustin W., the honored father of him whose name initiates this sketch. Augustin W. Duke was for many years engaged in the drug business in Maryland's "Monument City," and was a man of high integrity and honor, being well known and highly esteemed in his native city, where he died June 8, 1904, at the venerable age of seventy-six years. In early manhood he was united in marriage to Miss Josephine V. Rosen-theel, who was likewise born and reared in Baltimore, being a daughter of Joseph Rosen-theel. She passed away Feb. 4, 1896. Of the thirteen children in the family Joseph W. was the eldest, while four of the number are living at the time of this writing.

Joseph W. Duke was born Oct. 12, 1853, in the city of Baltimore, Md., and there received his early educational training, in the public schools, while as a youth he began to learn the drug business in his father's store, where he remained four years. He then entered the railway service, in the capacity of manifest clerk, assuming this position Sept. 24, 1874, and thereafter he was transferred or promoted from one position to another until he finally reached the car-record office at Baltimore, from which he was assigned to the position of manifest clerk at the elevators of the Northern Central Railway. In August, 1880, he was made chief clerk in the car-record office, where he remained until June 1st of the following year, when he was transferred to Philadelphia and there made foreman of the car-record room of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, but on the 7th of the following month he was transferred back to the elevators in Baltimore, where he continued as chief manifest clerk until November, 1888. He was next stationed at Lutherville, Md., on the Baltimore division of the Northern Central Railway, where he served as agent until July 1, 1890, when he was transferred to York, Pa., there becoming assistant to J. K. Gross, the freight agent of the same railroad, in which capacity he has since continued to serve.

In politics Mr. Duke is an uncompromising advocate of the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and he served two terms as a member of the Democratic city committee of York. He is a communicant of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, as is also his wife, and is a member of the church committee of the parish. In a fraternal way he is identified with the Royal Arcanum and the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks.

On June 18, 1879, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Duke to Miss Ida J. Blessing, daughter of John Blessing, a well-known tobacco manufacturer of Baltimore, Md., where she was reared and educated. To Mr. and Mrs. Duke have been born eight children, of whom three are deceased, Mable L., Mary Josephine and Milton W. Elma G. and Myrtle B. remain at the parental home, as does also Raymond A., who is a clerk, while Ethel C. and Helen L. are students in the parochial schools of St. Patrick's Church, of which they are members.

OLIVER C. DECKMAN, proprietor of the Imperial Livery and Boarding Stable, in the rear of the "Penn Hotel," has been a resident of York since 1889. He is a native of Newton, Lancaster county, born Aug. 29, 1872, son of Sampson Deckman.

Sampson Deckman was born and reared in York county, near Craleysville. In his earlier life he made teaching his profession, following that occupation for thirteen or fourteen years in York and Lancaster counties, but later he turned his attention to farming and settled in York township, York Co., Pa. Mr. Deckman was always keenly interested in politics and while living in Lower Windsor township served as tax collector and later as assessor. His election was due solely to his personal standing, as the township was strongly Republican, while he was a Democrat. A man of domestic tastes, his home life has been a happy one. He married Miss Emma Kelly, who was born in Havre de Grace, Md., and fourteen children were born to them: Oliver C., the eldest; Matilda, deceased Charles, a butcher in Warren, Pa.; Elizabeth, married to Oliver Vanis, of No. 112 East King street, York; Minnie, deceased; Warren, a core maker by trade, who is residing at the corner of Franklin and Jefferson streets, in York; Mary, residing in York; and Paul. Grace, Cleveland, Lucy, Letha, Ethan and Farie, all at home. The parents are members of the Evangelical Church.

Oliver C. Deckman was educated in the public schools and thereafter remained at home on the farm till after attaining his majority. He started farming on his own account and was so engaged for three years, the last year not only managing his farm but also taking charge of the Eichelberger stable, at the corner of Mason and Cherry avenues, in York. Deciding to make the livery business his calling rather than farming, Mr. Deckman gave his entire attention to the stable for the next four years and then, on Sept. 6, 1903, he became the proprietor of the Imperial Boarding and Livery Stable, which he still conducts. He has handled many horses since going into the livery business and keeps about six of his own. He boards about fifty horses, owning the largest single boarding stable in the city. Mr. Deckman also owns a good farm of ninety acres, situated in York township, which he keeps well stocked and which is under his personal supervision. He is a wide-awake, progressive young business man, and has already become well known among York's citizens.

On Oct. 6, 1895, Mr. Deckman was united in marriage to Miss Mary L. Forry, daughter of Ulrich S. Forry, formerly of York township, but now living retired in Lebanon county. To this union have come three children, Austin C., Mabel B. and Edna.

J. LEWIS KING, a machinist of York, belongs to one of the old county families, and was born in York Nov. 23, 1869, son of John T. and Mary A. (Motter) King.

Samuel King; his paternal grandfather, was born in Paradise township, where he passed his whole life engaged in farming. He died in 1864 and was buried at Pigeon Hill Church, in the same township. His children were: John T.; Henry, who moved to Jackson township, where he died, and was buried at Holtz-Schwamm Church; Joseph, who died in Paradise township and is buried at Paradise Church; Daniel, who died in York, and is buried in the Prospect Hill cemetery; Eliza, who died in Paradise township, and is buried at Paradise Church; William, of York; Thomas T., of York; Margarette, widow of Abraham Straley, living in Paradise township; and Lydia, who died in infancy.

John T. King was educated in the public schools of his native township, and later learned the carpenter's trade there, but he moved to York as a more promising field for a permanent location. For over thirty years he was a prominent contractor engaged in erecting houses, at the end of that time turning to contracts for excavating and being thus employed for twenty years longer. His death occurred May 10, 1899, and he was buried in Prospect Hill cemetery. He chose for his wife Miss Mary A. Motter, their union taking place April 14, 1853. Mrs. King was the daughter of Daniel and Nancy Motter, of York county; she died ten years before her husband, Nov. 30, 1889, and is buried in the same cemetery. The children born to this couple were as follows: Charles M., of York; Lucy C. Mrs. William Younke, of York; Annie M., living in York; Mary C., Mrs. Jacob S. Kindig; Sally E., Mrs. Charles Lyon; Elmira J., living in York; George S., who died Oct. 8, 1896, and is buried in Prospect Hill; and J. Lewis.

J. Lewis King attended the public schools of York for nine years, and then spent three years at Prof. Grenver's school, completing his education at the age of seventeen. He then went into the establishment of Fry & Motter, where he learned the machinist's trade. His first regular position was with his present employers, the S. Morgan Smith Company, for whom he has worked fifteen years. He has now reached the responsible position of foreman, where he gives entire satisfaction.

On Aug. 29, 1900, occurred Mr. King's marriage with Miss Elizabeth Myers, who was born in Carlisle, Cumberland county, March 18, 1879, daughter of Jonas and Catherine (Hollinger) Myers. Mr. and Mrs. King have two sons and one daughter: George Motter, born in York in 1901; John Lewis, born there in 1904; and Mary Elizabeth, born in 1905.

Mr. King is a man of fine character and reputation, and has many friends. He is widely known fraternally, being a member of the S. M. Smith Company Beneficial Association; a past councelor of Codorus Council, No. 115, Jr. O. U. A. M.; a member of Crystal Lodge, No. 342. K. of P.; a past master of Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451, F. & A. M.; a member of Howell Chapter, No. 199, R. A. M.; a past eminent commander of Gethsemane Commandery, No. 75, Knights Templar; and a member of the Vigilant S. F. E. Company, No. 1, all of York. His religious connection is with Trinity Reformed Church.

E. H. KOTTFCAMP, who is the proprietor of an oyster restaurant at York, Pa., and a manufacturer of and dealer in ice cream, is a progressive business man. He was born Feb. 12, 1874, in the house in which he now resides, at No. 228 South Penn street, son of Caspar H. and Lucy J. (Koonsman) Kottcamp. The father of Mr. Kottcamp met his death at the York Manufacturing Company's plant, where he was employed. The mother is still living with her son, our subject. They had three children, namely: E. H.; Mary J., who is at home; and George W., a machinist, married to Rose Shingberger.

E. H. Kottcamp was reared in York, being educated in the schools of that city. He was but fourteen years of age when he entered the employ of Alexander Newman, the ice cream manufacturer, with whom he remained about nine years, at the end of which time he entered the business on his own account. He has a large wholesale and retail trade in ice cream, and also carries on a restaurant, in which are served oysters in season. In the summer of 1904, his business having increased to large proportions, Mr. Kottcamp enlarged and improved his ice cream factory.

Mr. Kottcamp is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., Sandilands Commandery, K. of M., the Vigilant Fire Company, No. 1, and the American Relief Association.

On Dec. 11, 1902, Mr. Kottcamp was married to Miss Sadie V. Newman, daughter of Alexander Newman, his former employer. Besides his residence Mr. Kottcamp is the owner of some good property, consisting of two lots and two dwellings on West College avenue.

CHARLES A. GIVLER, one of York's successful merchants, senior member of the firm of Givler & Sonneman, successor to the business formerly conducted under the firm name of Macmullen & Givler, was born in Washington township, York county, Jan. 18, 1872, son of Theodore F. and Lucinda (Hoops) Givler, both of whom reside at No. 233 West York avenue.

Mr. Givler was reared in the vicinity of Hall post office, and was early introduced to a mercantile life, as his father kept a store at that place. He received his education in the public schools, the York County Academy and the Lock Haven Normal school, and at the age of seventeen years began teaching in Washington township, at which he continued for two terms, and then after clerking for a period in his father's store at Hall postoffice, came to York and entered the mercantile establishment of P. Wiest's Sons, where he was employed for five years and eight months, resigning from that position to go into business on his own account.

On Dec. 1, 1900, the firm of Macmullen & Givler was established opening their place of business at No. 236 Market street, the old Peter Wiest stand, and introducing a line of dry goods, notions and ladies' ready made garments. On Aug. 18, 1902, Mr. Givler bought out his partner, and on April 15, 1904, he removed the stock to his present place of business, at Nos. 105 to 109 South George street, where he has the advantage of more space, allowing to increase his stock to a considerable extent. On Jan. 1, 1906, in order to meet growing patronage he found it necessary greatly to increase his space and capital, and therefore formed a partnership with August Sonneman, Jr., the firm now being known as Givler & Sonneman. They occupy a floor space of 10,000 square feet. Mr. Givler's success may be attributed to the careful personal attention he gives to the business in hand, and the close study of every detail entered in the same. Fortune has wrought no miracles for his exclusive benefit, but he has been quick to recognize and grasp the opportunities offered to him as to others. He is conversant with every branch of the mercantile trade.

Mr. Givler was married April 26, 1900, to Miss Anna K. Sonneman, daughter of August and Catherine (Smith) Sonneman, and they have one child, Catherine L. Mr. and Mrs. Givler are members of St. John's German Lutheran Church, and they reside at No. 105 South George street.

CHARLES E. GELBACH was born Feb. 11, 1872, in Adams county, son of Joseph and Eliza (Kapensberger) Gelbach.

His paternal grandfather was born in Germany, and came to the United States when a young man, and followed farming all his life in Adams county. He had two children: Joseph, the father of Charles E.; and Elizabeth, who married Peter Shively.

Joseph Gelbach followed farming in Adams county, and served one term as director of the poorhouse there. These children were born to him: John; Mary, who married Frank Hartman; Jennie, who married William Ogden; Alice, who married Edward Wickerd; George W.; Fannie, who married James Galwell; Laura, who married E. Swope; Minnie, married to Elmer Stover; Clara, who married Henry Wortz; Charles E.; and Grace, who married Clarence King.

Charles E. Gelbach attended the public schools at Fairfield, Adams county, and worked on his father's farm until the age of nineteen, when he went to Kansas and clerked in his brother's general merchandise store for two years, at the end of that time returning home and again working on the farm for about one year. In 1893 he located at Glen Rock and engaged in the butchering business, and built up a large and profitable trade. His distributing branch was located at Glen Rock, but his slaughtering house was in Seitzland, about one mile from Glen Rock. He did a wholesale and retail business, and during the winter shipped as high as fifty head of hogs per week to Baltimore.

Mr. Gelbach is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, while in religion he is connected with the Reformed Church. On Oct. 21, 1896, he was married to Miss Dora Yost, daughter of Dr. George P. Yost, of Glen Rock, and one child has been born to them, Ruth L.

CHARLES F. WATROUS, Jr., is one of the well-known insurance agents of York, and he is of Scotch-English descent, his paternal ancestors coming from England, while those on the maternal side were natives of Scotland.

Joseph Watrous, grandfather of Charles F., Jr., lived in Susquehanna county, to which section he had removed from Connecticut.

Charles F. Watrous, son of Joseph, was a farmer of Susquehanna county, but is now living retired. He married Margaret E. McDougal, of Tioga county, and she became the mother of these children: William, who died in infancy; William (2), who died in early childhood; Nina, who died at the age of twenty-eight years, wife of J. C. Harrington, of Montrose; Joseph, deceased; McDougal, deceased; Richard A., a traveling salesman of Montrose; Stuart, a clerk; and Charles F., Jr.

Charles F. Watrous, Jr., was born Nov. 10, 1862, in Montrose, Pa., and was educated in the Montrose High school. He first took up clerking, which he followed for three years, and then conducted a boot and shoe store for five years. Removing to West Pittston, he there, for five years, did bookkeeping; and then engaged in the insurance business. Mr. Watrous located in York in 1901, and became district agent for York county for the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of Newark, N. J., which position he has held up to the present time.

Mr. Watrous was married Sept. 13, 1894, to Jessie L. Downing, daughter of Bradley and Jane M. Downing, of West Pittston, and four children have been born to this union, as follows: Helen Stuart, aged nine years, at school; Margaret Cary, aged six years, at school; Elizabeth, aged three and one-half years, and Richard Edwin, aged two years. Mr. Watrous belongs to the First Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican in political principle.

JOHN A. BEAR, a member of the cigar manufacturing firm of Bear Brothers, and a prominent and successful business man of Conewago township, York county, was born Oct. 15, 1872, son of William S. and Leah (Kochenouer) Bear.

The great-grandfather of John A. Bear was Jacob Bear, who came from Lancaster county and settled in Manchester township. Here he followed farming, and was also a fisherman on the Susquehanna river, a haul of 8,000 shad made by him being the largest ever made in this locality. Jacob Bear's death occurred in his ninety-seventh year, and he was buried at Augenbaugh's school house, Manchester township. He was twice married, his first wife being a Shelley and his second being named Good. Mr. Bear was the father of the following children: Daniel; Jacob S.; John; Reuben, who lives in Manchester township; Mary, who was the wife of David Strickler, deceased; and Barbara, who married Daniel Hykes, living in Manchester township.

Jacob S. Bear, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Manchester township, and was a farmer and distiller of Conewago township. He was a large landowner, having 600 acres in Conewago township, and owned a mill at Strinestown now operated by J. F. Cline, but spent the later years of his life on the farm. His wife was Elizabeth Stover, daughter of Henry and Susan Stover. He died at the age of fifty-seven years, and both he and his wife were buried at Quickel's cemetery, in Conewago township. Mr. Bear was a colonel of the militia. The children born to Jacob S. and Elizabeth Bear were: Henry S., who died in Manchester borough; Jacob B., who died in 1902; William S., the father of our subject; Sarah, the wife of Henry Hoff, of Mt. Wolf; Elizabeth, living in Conewago township, who became the wife of Adam Neiman; Mary Ann, residing in York, widow of Eli Quickle.

William S. Bear was born Feb. 22, 1834, and received his education in the common schools of Conewago township, attending school until the age of twenty-one years. He followed farming in Conewago township for about thirty years, and is now engaged in the fire insurance business, being a stockholder in the Western Mutual Fire Insurance Company, with the main office at Holtz, Pa. He has SAMUEL H. LUDWIG was born on the old homestead in Ore Valley, Oct. 29, 1877, son of Charles and Sarah A. (Bradley) Ludwig.

The Ludwig family is an old and honored one in York county, the grandfather of the present Mr. Ludwig having been Charles Ludwig, a farmer and successful business man of Loganville. The maternal grandfather was John Bradley, and he is now living retired, although for many years he was manager of the Cordelia Ore Bank. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ludwig, Jr.: John E., a contracting painter of York township; Charles P., a teacher in Ore Valley; Carrie E., at home; Mary Isabella; Flora May; Alice S., at school; Daisy Ellen, at home; and Samuel H.

The boyhood of Mr. Samuel H. Ludwig was passed upon the farm, and he attended the neighborhood schools, but as he evinced such a love for his studies, his father resolved to give him better educational advantages. He consequently sent him to the York County Academy, and he spent two years at the State Normal School at Millersville, Lancaster county. There he remained until qualified to become a teacher, and for five years he followed that honorable calling in York county, until in 1900, he became associated with the York Traction Company, as assistant bookkeeper and ticket agent.

On Jan. 13, 1901, Mr. Ludwig was united in marriage with Annie E. Ness, a daughter of Edward Ness, a prominent farmer, but she passed away in 1903, on the second anniversary of her wedding day. Mr. Ludwig is a member of the Knights of Malta, the A. O. K. of M. C., and the Royal Arcanum, and is very popular in these organizations. He resides at Yoe, York county, where he is a member of the Salem U. M. Church, and takes a very active part in church affairs. In politics he is a Democrat, although very liberal, believing that every man has the right to think as his conscience dictates upon all questions, including the two great disputed ones—politics and religion.

HOWARD N. WOLF. The steady growth of the city of York and its quiet but steady prosperity, have attracted thither many contractors and builders, who find it a promising field for their efforts. One of the prominent men in this class is Howard N. Wolf, who has been a resident of the city since 1878, with the exception of a single year spent in Philadelphia.

Howard N. Wolf was born in Adams county, Pa., Sept. 20, 1855, son of George and Eleanor (Bittinger) Wolf. He was reared on a farm and sent to the public schools till he was nineteen, when he went to Gettysburg to learn the carpenter's trade, under Mr. Stallsmith. When his apprenticeship was over he worked for a while in different places, as Lancaster, Shamokin and Philadelphia, and then in 1878 located in York. He continued to work at his trade there till 1882, when he spent a year in Philadelphia, and then returned to his former location in York. In 1891 he determined to enter upon the contracting business for himself, and in the years since has built up a good patronage, employing now from twenty to twenty-five men. He has confined his operations practically to York, and among his structures may be enumerated St. Peter's Lutheran Church in North York, with its parsonage, a row of buildings put up for C. Barton, James R. Strawbridge's residence, a block of twelve houses on West Princess street, a block on West Lafayette street, fronting on Penn Park, and a stable for the Atlantic Refining Company, while he has now some thirty houses and one stable in the course of construction. He is one of the leading builders of the city and does most satisfactory work.

On Jan. 2, 1883, occurred the union of Mr. Wolf and Miss Agnes S. Stump, daughter of Jesse Stump, of York township. Of their family six children are living: George Irwin, a carpenter by trade, who married Miss Alice Hess, has one daughter, and resides at Chester Place; Caroline A. and Emily E., twins; Beulah; Luther Bittinger; and Charles Edwin. The family are members of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Wolf is a deacon. They are all held in high esteem.

SAMUEL T. PEELING, a prominent young business man of Conewago township, York county, was born Dec. 24, 1875, in York, son of James Peeling, who died in 1891, and is buried in Dallas town.

James Peeling was twice married, and to his second marriage the following children were born: Lucinda, born Dec. 18, 1864, married Harry Wasbers, proprietor of the York City Laundry; Joshua, born Jan. 15, 1866, lives in Manchester township; Alfretta, born March 25, 1868, died in 1904; Henry, born Aug. 16, 1870, died in January, 1871; Ida, born Nov. 18, 1871, married Isaac Bupp, of York; William F., born June 27, 1874, died July 5, 1874; Samuel T. was born Dec. 24, 1875; Martha, born Feb. 6, 1879, married a Mr. Falkenroth, and lives in York; and Horace K., born Dec. 27, 1882, is in the mercantile business in York.

Samuel T. Peeling received his early education in the schools of York City and Conewago township, and also attended York County Academy. He then taught school for four years in Conewago township. After his marriage he located in that township, where he continues to make his home. In politics he is connected with the Democratic party, and in religion he is a member of the Lutheran Church.

In 1896 Mr. Peeling was united in marriage with Miss Lizzie Ellen Bear, daughter of Jacob and Mary A. (Shindle) Bear.

PETER FREDERICK REBMAN, a prosperous and enterprising young business man of York, engaged in the wholesale butchering business, was born in West Manchester township, York county, Sept. 26, 1876, son of Jacob Rebman.

George Rebman, the grandfather of Peter F., and the founder of the Rebman family in this country, came from Germany in 1821, and settled in York. He was a farmer by occupation. His death occurred in Manchester township, at the age of eighty-six years, and he was buried at Strayer's Church, in Dover township. His wife, whose maiden name was Houseman, died at the age of seventy-five years, and was interred beside her husband. Their children were as follows: George, who died young; John, who died in Ohio; Christina, who married Adam P. Leckrone, died in West Manchester township, and is buried at Neiman's Church; Louisa, who lives in Illinois; Gottlieb, who died in Boiling Springs, Cumberland county; Jacob, the father of Peter F.; and Michael, who married Sarah Kemp, died aged sixty-two years, in York, and is buried at Strayer's Church in Dover borough.

Jacob Rebman was born in Manchester township, York county, in 1825, and there always followed farming. He married a Miss Heindel, who died in 1862, leaving children as follows: Clara A., Mrs. Gruver; George A.,
EDWIN S. RESSER, a rising young man of York, a machinist by trade, has been a resident of that city for the past ten years. He was born in East Berlin, Adams county, May 26, 1871, son of Jacob and Lydia (Wolf) Resser.

Jacob Resser was a native of the same place, born Sept. 10, 1820. There were three other children, all now deceased, namely: Rebecca and Samuel, who are buried in East Berlin; and Andrew, who is buried in Lancaster county. Jacob Resser for forty years followed the trade of a tinner, but is now living in retirement in East Berlin. He was married in 1856 to Miss Lydia Wolf, who was a native of the same place, born in 1832, the daughter of William and Elizabeth Wolf. The children born to Jacob and Lydia Resser were as follows: William, a resident of East Berlin, married to Miss Annie Picking; Catherine, at home; Elizabeth, who married Martin D. Diehl, of York; George M., of East Berlin, who married Miss Sallie Jacobs; Walter F., of York, who married Miss Mabel Cronian; Harry W., of East Berlin, married to Miss Daisy Kuhn; Edwin S.; and Annie M., Mrs. Charles H. Baker, of York. Jacob Resser, the father, was a veteran of the Civil war. He responded to Governor Curtin's call, and became a member of Company K, First Pennsylvania Reserves, and was promoted to quartermaster sergeant, serving in all three years. He died May 12, 1905.

Edwin S. Resser attended the public schools of East Berlin till he was eighteen years old, and then in 1889 went to Reading to learn the machinist's trade. When his three years of apprenticeship were over he returned home for a year, and then spent the following eight months in Hanover, working at his trade. In 1895 he moved to York and accepted a machinist's position with Broome, Schmidt & Company which he held for five years, and since then has been with The York Manufacturing Company. He is remarkably capable in his line, and has the entire confidence of his employers.

In 1894 Mr. Resser entered the matrimonial estate, his bride being Miss Clara M. Spangler, of East Berlin, daughter of Andrew and Alice (Bupp) Spangler. Two children have been born to them, viz.: Harry A., born in East Berlin, July 26, 1895; and Luther S., born in York, May 18, 1897.
GEORGE A. HAIN, proprietor of the Diamond Cigar Store from March 22, 1900, to Aug. 1, 1905, was born in York, Pa., July 7, 1874, son of George and Cassandra E. (Huss) Hain. Both parents are living and residing at No. 611 Edison street, York.

During the early boyhood of Mr. Hain his parents lived at Freystown, in Spring Garden township, and until he was ten years old he attended school there. At the expiration of that time the family removed to a farm in Shrewsbury township, and the boy was sent to the district schools there for the next seven years. He attended York County Academy in the year 1891, under Professors D. H. Gardiner and S. B. Heiges. After leaving the Academy, he was employed at the Pennsylvania Agricultural Works for about five years, and then spent two years in a brokerage business in cigars. At the expiration of that period, Mr. Hain took an eight months course in Patrick's Business College, as a more complete equipment for an active business career, and then he opened the above establishment, March 22, 1900. He was located at No. 11 West Market street, and carried a full line of choice cigars, tobaccos and smokers' supplies generally, doing a local jobbing business. In connection with the cigar store he also conducted a pool and billiard parlor, with the finest appointments in the city.

Mr. Hain has always taken an unusually active interest in lodge organizations, and has become a member of many of those represented in York. When he was only twenty he joined York City Castle No. 414, K. of G. E., and is a past officer of that body. He was made a member of Capt. E. M. Ruhl Camp, No. 33, S. of V., Jan. 7, 1899; of Sandilands Commandery, No. 152, A. O. K. of M., Sept. 24, 1897; of Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451, F. & A. M., Feb. 9, 1904; of York Commandery, No. 21, K. T., Sept. 21, 1905; of A. A. O. N. of M. S., Zembo Temple, at Harrisburg; and of Harrisburg Consistory (32d degree, Scottish Rite); and he is also a member of York Lodge, No. 213, B. P. O. E., which he joined Sept. 28, 1904.

ROBERT E. HAMM, of Codorus township, York county, was born in that township Dec. 8, 1881, a son of Adam S. and Julia T. (Krebs) Hamm. Mr. Hamm's original ancestors came from the old country in the early part of the settlement of York county. There were three of the name who came over that settled in York county, Michael, Peter and John, Germans, who located in three different localities, one near Dover, York county, the other near Seven Valley, York county, and the third near Jefferson, York county. Peter Hamm, a son of the one who settled near Jefferson, was the great-great-grandfather of Robert E. Hamm.

Adam S. Hamm, Sr., grandfather, was a son of Samuel Hamm, who was a farmer in North Codorus township, where he died at the age of sixty years. Adam S. Hamm was born in North Codorus township, and followed farming on land located two miles west of Jefferson, owning three farms, one of 110 acres, another of 100, and a small farm of about twelve acres in the same township. He was looked upon as one of the township's most substantial and reliable men. He died at the age of seventy-four years. He married Barbara Stambaugh, who lived to the age of seventy-nine years, and their children were: Saranda, wife of George Fishel; Matilda, wife of Ephraim Senft; Samuel S.; Albert S.; Catharina, married to Daniel Wherly; Martin S.; Washington S.; and Adam S.

Adam S. Hamm, father of Robert E. Hamm, was born in North Codorus township and was educated in the district schools. He learned the trade of cooper, but did not follow it long, as he soon became interested in farming in North Codorus township, removing in 1894 to his present place in Codorus township. He bought the old Aaron Heindel farm of seventy-four acres of land, and has made many improvements, erecting all the substantial buildings and introducing good stock and modern machinery.

Adam S. Hamm married Julia T. Krebs, a daughter of George and Alice Ann (Tuffey) Krebs, of Codorus township, and they have one son, Robert E.

In politics Adam S. Hamm is a Democrat, and he has served as judge of elections and as school director in Codorus township for three years, having filled the former office also in North Codorus township. The fact that this office is usually delegated to a man of sterling character in the community speaks well for his standing in his locality. He is a member of the Reformed Church and was formerly one of thedeacons.

Robert E. Hamm was educated in the township schools of North Codorus and Co-dorus townships and the grammar school of Jefferson, spent three terms in the York County Normal School, and two terms at Glenville Academy. Being thus well qualified, he began teaching in 1898, making his entrance into the profession at the Krebs school in Codorus township. After one term he went to York and entered the employ of his father-in-law, George F. Saubel, who was then clerk of York county, and remained there three years as deputy clerk. In 1903 he resumed teaching at the Sterners school in Codorus township and is a very popular and successful educator.

Mr. Hamm was married to Anna C. Saubel, a daughter of the former Clerk of the Courts of York county, George F. Saubel, and Lavina (Bricker) Saubel, of Codorus township, and they have one son, Melvin D., born in 1900. They are members of the Reformed Church, belonging to the old Stone Church of Codorus township, and Mr. Hamm is very active both in church and Sunday-school work. Mr. and Mrs. Hamm reside with his father, Adam S. Hamm, one of the prominent men of this locality.

J. EDWARD RAMER, proprietor of the torsorial parlor at No. 352 West Market street, York, Pa., was born Dec. 10, 1877, in York, son of Charles E. Ramer, and is descended from good old York county stock.

Martin Ramer, the grandfather of J. Edward Ramer, died in York. His children were: Ida, Emma, Belle, and Charles E. Charles E. Ramer was born in York, where he followed moulding, but at the time of his death was employed at Philadelphia. He married Mary Amanda Heltzel, who still survives, living at No. 360 West Philadelphia street. The following children were born to them: Henry M., who is superintendent of the York Carriage Works; Sadie, the wife of William Berkeimer, of York; Nettie M., the wife of James Fredrick, of York; and J. Edward.

J. Edward Ramer attended the public schools of York until twelve years of age, at which time he started out in life for himself. His first employment was in the rug carpet factory, where he remained until fifteen years of age. He then started learning the barber business, with Howard Bahn, of York, and in 1900 engaged in business on his own account. He is enterprising and progressive, and his patronage is increasing daily.

Mr. Ramer was married in 1903 to Mary S. Frey, daughter of Harry and Catherine Frey, and one son, Richard, was born to this union, but died at the age of five months. Mr. and Mrs. Ramer reside at No. 358 West Philadelphia street. In politics Mr. Ramer is a Democrat and fraternally he is connected with the K. of P., the Jr. O. U. A. M., the Masons (Zeredatha Lodge, No. 451, of York), and the B. P. O. Elks (York Lodge, No. 213).

MILTON S. STERNER, a member of the firm of Sterner Bros., manufacturers of high-grade cigars, was born in West Manheim township in 1880, son of Andrew Sterner.

Samuel Sterner, grandfather of Milton S., was born in York county, and was a lifelong farmer, owning a tract of 130 acres in West Manheim township, at Bandanna. He died at the age of eighty years. He married Elizabeth Wanemaker, daughter of a well known blacksmith at Bandanna, and she also attained an advanced age. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sterner are buried in West Manheim township. Their children were: Emanuel, of Illinois; Andrew, the father of Milton S.; Henry, of Carroll county, Md.; Jeremiah, who lives in West Manheim township; and one daughter who died young.

Andrew Sterner received a common school education in his native township, West Manheim, and there assisted his father at farming, later purchasing the old home farm, upon which he continued farming for about thirty-seven years. In 1894 he retired from active life. He married Eleanor Houch, daughter of Jesse Houch, and a member of a very old family, and these children were born to the union: Josiah, a farmer of West Manheim township; Nelson, who died when eleven years old; John, a farmer of West Manheim township; Theodore, who died when seven years old; Elias J., a farmer of West Manheim township; Alberta, the wife of John Waltersdorff, of West Manheim township; Amelia, Mrs. Kling, deceased; Sylvania, the wife of S. G. Garrett; Mary, Mrs. Baublitz; Minerva, Mrs. Mum­mert; Milton S.; Curvin, a graduate of Bloomsburg Academy, who is his brother Milton's partner and is also engaged in teaching; and Addie, unmarried, who resides at home. Andrew Sterner is a Democrat, and has served his township as school director, tax collector and assessor.

Milton S. Sterner spent his school days in his native township, and at the age of four-
HISTORY OF YORK COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

Teen years commenced to learn the cigar-maker’s trade with Mr. Garrett, of Pleasant Hill. He spent five years at Manchester, Md., engaged at his trade, and located at his present place, Summer Hill, West Manheim township, in 1900, building a two-story shop, 50x14. Employment was given at first to two hands, but as the business increased more have been engaged, and Sterner Brothers are now barely able to furnish their trade, employing fifteen to twenty-five hands. They have several special brands, including the well known Baron Larrey, and find a market for most of the product in Philadelphia and Baltimore, also having a good patronage in the West. Milton S. Sterner admitted his brother to the firm in September, 1904, taking the trade name of Sterner Bros., and as such they have since continued. They are in the Ninth district.

Mr. Sterner married Bessie Houck, daughter of George M. Houck, of West Manheim township, and they have one son, Harold A., who is attending school. In political sentiment Mr. Sterner is a Democrat. He is a member of the Lutheran Church.

FREDERICK TYSON, employed as a carpenter with the A. B. Farquhar Company, at York, was born in Shrewsbury township, York county, Dec. 29, 1858, son of Henry Tyson.

John Tyson, grandfather of Frederick, was a farmer of York county, who had these children: John, of Indiana; Jacob, of Springfield township; Benjamin; Charles; Levi; Henry; Mrs. Adam Diehl; Mrs. John Storner; and Mrs. Jesse Hildebrand.

Henry Tyson was born in Shrewsbury township, where he received a common-school education. He followed farming in Hopewell and Windsor townships for a great many years, and is now living retired with his son Samuel, in York township. He married Eliza Myer, daughter of John Myer, and she died in July, 1902, being buried at the Dunkard Church in Springfield township, of which she was a member. She had these children: Frederick; Noah, of York; William, who resides in York; Clayton and Isaac, of near Manheim, Lancaster county; Samuel, of York township; Mary A., who died in York, wife of Frederick Lehman; Emma, the wife of Samuel Shaw, of Hellam township; and Mamie, of York.

Frederick Tyson attended the common schools of York and Windsor townships, and when a lad hired out with Henry Heins, in Spring Garden township for three years, after which he was with Jacob Trout, of Springfield township. His next employer was Harris Lentz, who is now his father-in-law, under whom he learned the carpenter’s trade. He remained with Mr. Lentz six years, and then engaged in farming in Springfield township, at which he remained sixteen years, operating successfully a seventy-five-acre farm. In 1902 he located in York, making his home at No. 622 West York avenue, and being employed by the A. B. Farquhar Company.

In 1882 Mr. Tyson married Sarah A. Lentz, born May 23, 1861, daughter of Harris and Malinda (Beek) Lentz, and to this union these children have been born: Sadie, the wife of P. Lentz, of Dallastown; Harry, who married Lottie Bortner; Claude J.; Chauncey; Maggie; and Gertrude. Mr. Tyson served as tax collector, township supervisor and county committee man for two terms in Springfield township. He is a member of the Paradise Lutheran Church. Mr. Tyson is one of the good citizens and reliable men of York, belonging to that class which gives a city its honorable standing before the world.

HOWARD GISE, the well-known contractor, builder and real estate dealer of York, who resides at No. 903 West Princess street, was born in Paradise township, York county, June 16, 1873, son of William and Caroline (Strasbaugh) Gise.

Howard Gise was reared on his father’s farm in Paradise township, and his education was received in the public schools. At the age of seventeen years he began the trade of carpenter with his brother Charles, following this line in York, as a journeyman, until 1902, when he began business on his own account, erecting buildings on his own property of which he afterward disposed. Mr. Gise puts up an average of twenty buildings each year, in the west end of York, all of which are of brick and of modern construction. Mr. Gise is his own architect. He handles a considerable amount of real estate, and prepares empty lots for building. He is also of an inventive turn of mind, and in company with Charles E. Mickley invented an automatic railway gate.

Mr. Gise was married in November, 1895, to Miss Frances J. Lewis, daughter of John L. and Elizabeth J. Lewis, and five children have been born to this union: Bessie Marie, Myrtle Elizabeth, Charles William, Edwin Leroy and Lillian May. Mr. Gise is a member of the Eagles, and of Vigilant Fire Company, No. 1.

JOHN W. SPAHR, an enterprising young farmer of York county, who is actively engaged in working his farm of 123 acres in Dover township, was born March 27, 1870, in Dover township, son of David and Catherine (Zinn) Spahr, and grandson of Jesse Spahr.

Jesse Spahr was a son of John and Polly (Fox) Spahr, prominent people who lived and died in Washington township. He married Elizabeth Baker.

David Spahr was born in Paradise township, York county, Sept. 23, 1855, and was educated there in the subscription schools. He followed an agricultural life, and after his marriage located on a farm in Paradise township, some eleven years ago removing to Big Mountain, where he now lives retired. In 1860 Mr. Spahr married Catherine Zinn, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Emig) Zinn, and she died in 1885, being buried at Holtz-Schwamm Church, Paradise township. The children born to David and Catherine Spahr were as follows: Annie is keeping house for her father; Jacob married Lucy Bowersox, and lives in Dover township; Jane died the day after her mother was buried, aged twenty years, and was buried at the Holtz-Schwamm Church in Paradise township; Emma married Peter Hobaugh, and lives near Brookside Park, in Dover township; Aaron, a carpenter of York, married Alice Smith, and lives in Dover borough; William married Emma Spangler and lives in Dover township; Alice married Albert Weir, and lives in West Manchester township; and John W.

John W. Spahr attended the township schools, and in 1892 married Sallie Jacobs, daughter of Edward and Sarah (Baker) Jacobs, of Dover township. Mr. Jacobs died at the age of seventy years, and his wife resides with Mr. Spahr. After his marriage Mr. Spahr located on his father's farm for five years, and then removed to Paradise township, where he remained one year, from there removing to Washington township. Here he remained for five years, and then returned to Dover township, and, in 1902, bought his father-in-law's farm of 123 acres, settling on this farm in 1904.

To Mr. and Mrs. Spahr five children have been born, all of whom are at home: Romaine, Katie, Emma, Raymond, and Sarah. The family all belong to the Reformed Church at Strayer's. Mr. Spahr is a Democrat, but has never been actively interested in politics. Mr. Spahr is a very enterprising and energetic young man, and possesses most excellent business judgment. He has a standing in the community as a man of honor and integrity, and as one of the first-class agriculturists of the township.

JOHN K. GROSS, freight agent of the Northern Central Railway Company in the city of York, is a representative of one of the old and honored families of the Keystone Commonwealth, with whose annals the name has been identified from the Colonial epoch to the present.

Capt. John Gross, grandfather of our subject, served under Gen. Washington in the war of the Revolution, and after the Colonies had gained their independence he returned to Pennsylvania, where he passed the remainder of his long and useful life.

Daniel W. Gross, father of John K. Gross, was one of the prominent and influential citizens of the capital city of Pennsylvania and was well known throughout the State. He was for many years a member of the board of trustees of Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, and was a trustee and treasurer of the State Lunatic asylum, at Harrisburg, in which city he was one of the oldest and most prominent druggists up to a short time before his death. He was a brother-in-law of Hon. John C. Kunkel, who represented Pennsylvania in Congress, and for whom the subject of this review was named. Daniel W. Gross died at the age of eighty-six years, honored by all who knew him. His wife, whose name was Elizabeth Kunkel, was a daughter of George Kunkel, a prominent dry-goods merchant of Harrisburg and a sister of John C. Kunkel, previously mentioned. George Kunkel was one of the Associates under Washington. Mrs. Elizabeth (Kunkel) Gross was summoned into eternal rest at the age of sixty years. In the family were eight children, of whom three died in early childhood, Robert, Daniel and Mary. George A., who was a

As a druggist in Harrisburg, died at the age of fifty years, and of those surviving we record that Joshua W. is living retired in Harrisburg; Edward Z. is engaged in the drug business in Harrisburg and is now mayor of that city; Henry S. is a civil and mining engineer, in the employ of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, and resides in Steelton; and John K. is the immediate subject of this sketch.

John Kunkel Gross was born in the city of Harrisburg, Pa., June 15, 1845, and in the schools of his native city secured his early educational discipline, which was supplemented by a course in Franklin and Marshall College, from which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1867, of which he was valedictorian. He received the degree of A.B., and A.M. three years after graduation. After leaving college Mr. Gross took up the study of law under the preceptorship of his uncles, Hon. John C. Kunkel and Judge John W. Simon- ton, of Harrisburg, but owing to impaired health he was obliged to abandon his technical reading, and, after a needed rest, he came to York, in 1870, to clerk in the railway service for a period of sixty or ninety days. His identification with the business, however, passed the maximum interval set, extending into months and years, and we find him still in the harness and now the incumbent of an important and responsible office, which he has won through able and faithful service. From 1871 to 1890 he served as passenger and freight agent for the Northern Central and the Pennsylvania railroads in York, and in 1890, on account of the growth of the business, he became exclusively freight agent. He is held in the highest esteem as an official and business man and also as a loyal and public-spirited citizen. He is an appreciative member of the Masonic fraternity. In politics Mr. Gross is a stalwart Republican, and he represented the Sixth ward in the municipal council for a total of twelve years of consecutive service. In the council he was chairman of the highway commission, and for two terms was president of the select council. He is a member of the Pennsylvania German Society, in whose affairs he takes a deep interest. In fact, he makes himself felt wherever he may be, gaining firm and loyal friends on every side. While a student in Franklin and Marshall College, so many years ago, he led the college choir of twenty-eight voices, and his interest in music has never abated.

Reverting to Mr. Gross' genealogy, we may say that the original American ancestor was Jean de Gros, a native of France, who, to escape religious persecution incident to the revoca- tion of the famous edict of Nantes, fled to French Flanders and thence to America, where the present form of the name was in the course of time evolved. The authentic family history is traced back to 1610, when occurred the destruction of Lisle, France, during a religious war, and one of the name likewise fled to Flanders, and there married a daughter of William Von Heppenheim Von Dem Sahe.

On April 25, 1874, Mr. Gross was united in marriage to Miss Anna M. Messick, daughter of Rev. John Fryer Messick, D.D., who is a clergyman of the Dutch Reformed Church and who is now living retired in York, Pa., at the patriarchal age of ninety-three years, while he is in full possession of all his faculties at the time of this writing, in January, 1906. His father died in Catskill, N.Y., at the age of ninety-six. Mr. and Mrs. Gross have five children, namely: Elizabeth Kunkel, John Messick, Janet LaRue Perrine, Margar- retta Allison, and Edward Louis Durkee. All of the children are graduates of the York Col- legiate Institute except Edward L. D., who is a member of the class of 1905 in the York County Academy. John M. is now in the em- ploy of the Pennsylvania railroad at Altoona.

WARREN E. FASTNACHT merits representa- tion in this compilation as being one of the representative young business men of York, where he has built up a prosperous enter- prise as an electrical contractor and dealer in electrical supplies. Mr. Fastnacht is a native of Adams county, having been born in the city of Gettysburg Nov. 26, 1876, son of Rev. Abraham G. Fastnacht, the honored and beloved pastor emeritus of the Union Lutheran Church in York.

Rev. Abraham G. Fastnacht was born in the vicinity of Ephrata, Lancaster Co., Pa., June 30, 1845, and after completing the curri- culum of the common schools of the locality he entered Pennsylvania College, in the city of Gettysburg, where he remained as a student for several years. He engaged in teaching during the intervals of his personal educational work, meeting with marked success in his pedagogic endeavors, which he initiated when but seventeen years of age. He was graduated from the theological department of Pennsylvania College as a member of the class of 1865, and was forthwith ordained to the ministry of the Lutheran Church. His first pastoral charge was that of Mt. Holly Church, at Boiling Springs, Cumberland Co., Pa., where he remained until October, 1875. While in 1877 he accepted the call to the Union Lutheran Church in York, where he labored with all of consecrated zeal and devotion for more than a quarter of a century and up to the time when failing health compelled him to resign his pastoral office, in 1903, since when he has lived retired in York, where his friends are in number equal to the number of his acquaintances. On June 10, 1873, Rev. Abraham G. Fastnacht was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Warren, of Gettysburg, where she was born and reared, she being a daughter of Henry and Susan (Flemming) Warren. In the family are three children, of whom the subject of this sketch is the second in order of birth.

Warren E. Fastnacht was an infant at the time of his parents' removal to York, and thus he has ever claimed that city as his home. In its public schools he received his early educational training, completing the curriculum of the York County Academy and then entering the York Collegiate Institute, from which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1896. He the entered the employ of the firm of J. F. Graybill & Co., of York, with whom he remained three and one-half years, during the greater portion of which period he was devoting his attention to apprentice work in the electrical department of the firm's business. Later he was employed for one year by the York Telephone Company, and in 1900 he engaged in business on his own account as an electrical contractor, also putting in an excellent stock of electrical supplies, at 276 West Market street. In the comparatively short intervening period he has built up a prosperous enterprise, having secured good contracts in York and in neighboring towns, while he is recognized as a skilled and reliable workman and executive in his line. Recognition of his technical ability has been given in a significant way, since he is serving as superintendent of the municipal fire alarm and police telegraph system of York. Mr. Fastnacht also conducts a confectionery store at No. 274 West Market street. He is a stanch Republican in politics, and both he and his wife are valued members of Union Lutheran Church, of which his father was pastor for so many years. Mr. Fastnacht has, in addition to his pleasant home in York, an attractive summer cottage on the old Indian camping grounds at Long Level, near the town of Wrightsville, this county, and at the head of Cabin Branch creek, and there he and his family spend their vacation.

On Aug. 5, 1902, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Fastnacht to Miss Elsie E. Staberry, a daughter of Franklin Staberry, a prominent citizen of York, and of this union has been born one son, Luther Kuhlman.

JOHN WESLEY MILLER, who is well known to the citizens of York as a milk dealer, having been engaged in business as such since May 15, 1900, was born in 1869, in Windsor township, York county, son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Lutz) Miller.

Mr. Miller attended the public schools until he was eighteen years old, and remained at home with his father until twenty-one. He then spent about one year at the cigarmaking trade, and then came to York and learned the baking trade with James Peeling, with whom he remained six years, engaged in baking. Meantime, in 1894, he was united in marriage, with Emma E. Stoner, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Fahringa) Stoner, of Hellam township. The young couple soon went into the bakery business on their own account, first locating on South George street, and later on Newberry street. Mr. Miller sold both to engage in his present line, which he started May 15, 1900, locating at his present place of business, No. 713 West Philadelphia street, where he also resides. He has been very successful.

In politics Mr. Miller is an ardent Republican. He and his wife are active members of the Heidelberg Reformed Church of York, taking a prominent part in its work.

HOWARD SMYSER MUSser occupies the responsible position of receiving and paying teller of the Drovers' and Mechanics' National Bank of York. On his mother's side Mr. Musser is related to one of the largest and most influential families of York county, and his father's family is equally well known although not so numerous.

John Musser, his grandfather, was a farmer of Hellam township, and his father, Henry Musser, is president of the Littlestown Silk Company, of Littlestown, Pa. Henry Musser married Emma Jane Smyser, daughter of Daniel Smyser, a prominent farmer of Spring Garden township, who fell dead at his plough, dying literally "in harness." The children born to this union were as follows: Walter E., teller in the Farmers' National Bank of York; Mabel Jane, a student in the York high school, class of 1906; and Howard Smyser.

The birth of Howard Smyser Musser occurred in York, March 16, 1879, and he was educated in the public schools and in York County Academy. He began business life as a clerk in the freight office of the Northern Central Railway Company, at York, where he remained five years. He then became bookkeeper in the Drover's and Mechanics' National Bank of York, assuming the position in February, 1901. Such was his ability and interest in the business that in December, 1903, he was promoted to the position of receiving and paying teller. This rapid promotion is felt by his business associates to be as deserved as it was rapid.

WARREN J. RAFFENSBERGER, insurance agent and real estate dealer located in the Guardian Trust Company Building, York, was born Feb. 9, 1885, and is descended from ancestors who came from Germany and settled in Adams and York counties, in about 1778. His grandfather, John Raffensberger, was a contracting carpenter.

Jacob D. Raffensberger, father of Warren J., is located at No. 248 East Poplar street, York, and is superintendent of Billmyer & Small's works. Mr. Raffensberger married Sallie A. Ilgenfritz, daughter of Joseph W. Ilgenfritz, a scale maker of York, who pursued his occupation up to the age of seventy-eight years, but is now retired. Four children were born to the parents of our subject: Hattie M., wife of Charles Fox, foreman of Fox & Ottmyer, of York; Raymond J., employed at Billmyer & Small's; Clarence L., at school; and Warren J.

Mr. Raffensberger belongs to Sandilands Commandery, No. 152, A. & I. O. K. of Malta; to York Conclave No. 124, Improved Order of Heptasops; and Manitou Tribe, No. 93, I. O. R. M.; and in all of these, as also in St. Paul's Lutheran Church, of which he is a member, he takes an active interest.

Mr. Raffensberger very lately has been elected as an honorary member, one of the board of governors and assistant secretary of the York Oratorio Society, one of the best musical organizations of its kind in the country. He is very active in the work as are the rest of the officers of the society.

WILBER HORACE MYERS, a young business man of York who is well known as the cost clerk of the York Manufacturing Company, was born Dec. 17, 1881, in Springettsbury township, York county, son of Horace D. and Ellen (Cunningham) Myers.

Mr. Myers belongs to very old American families on both sides, his paternal ancestors coming from Germany and the maternal ancestors from England. His great-great-grandfather Cunningham was a contractor on the railroad that ran from Columbia to Frederick.
His paternal grandfather, Samuel Myers, was a farmer, who located on the old homestead two miles north of York, where his widow, who was the daughter of Daniel Louck, of Freystown (now East York), is still living.

Horace D. Myers, the father of Wilber H., died in 1884, aged thirty-one years. He married Ellen Cunningham, who died in 1892, and who was a daughter of William Cunningham, ex-county commissioner of York county; Mrs. William Cunningham, who died aged sixty-eight, was the daughter of Mr. Beaverson, of Spring Garden township, York Co., Pa. Five children were born to the parents of Wilber H. Myers: Charles, who lives in Pleasureville, York county; Stewart E., who is connected with the A. B. Farquhar Works at York; Zachariah, a chainmaker of York; Anna Minerva, who resides with her adopted parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kunkle; and Wilber H.

After receiving his education in the public schools and at Patrick's Business College, of York, Mr. Myers became a clerk for the Adams Express Company, at Hellam, York county, under his uncle, George E. Loucks, with whom he lived for twenty years, having been a member of his uncle's family since he was four years old. On Jan. 19, 1903, Mr. Myers became connected with the York Manufacturing Company, and since that time has served in the capacity of cost clerk. He is an active member of the Royal Fire Company, of York. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and has been very prominent in campaign work, especially in the Presidential campaign of 1904, as a member of the West End Republican Club of York. Mr. Myers attends St. James Lutheran Church, of Hellam, and is violinst in the choir. He has many warm friends who enjoy his business success and his social and political prominence.

HARRY L. STROBECK, a successful young cigar manufacturer of Red Lion, Windsor township, was born March 13, 1880, on the home farm in Springfield township, York county, son of John and Catherine (Ferree) Strobeck.

John Strobeck was born in Stuttgart, Germany, and came to the United States with his parents when he was but seven years old. He was reared in York county, where he received a common school education, and learned the trade of wheelwright. This he followed until 1900, when he retired from active life, and he now lives in Red Lion. He married Miss Catherine Ferree, born in York county, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Syler) Ferree, and these children have been born to this union: Ellen; Annie, who married J. W. Smith, of Red Lion; Harry L.; Minnie; John; Andrew, who married Almeda Shue, and resides in Red Lion; Robert and Mary. John Strobeck was a Democrat in political belief.

Harry L. Strobeck was brought to Red Lion at the age of twelve years. He obtained his education in the schools of Springfield township, and the borough of Red Lion, and spent one term at Strayer's Business College in Baltimore, completing his education at the age of seventeen. When eighteen years old he started cigar making with Millard Smith, which he followed until twenty years of age. In 1902 he embarked in the cigar making business at Emigsville, but at the end of one and one-half years removed his business to Red Lion, where he purchased the factory of David Flinchbaugh, and here he has since remained. Mr. Strobeck employs from twelve to twenty hands, and his goods are in demand all over the country, his principal trade coming, however, from the State of Illinois.

Mr. Strobeck, like his father, is a stanch Democrat, and has served as election inspector. Fraternally he is connected with the O. U. A. M., in which organization he is a most popular member, and he also belongs to Peosta Tribe, I. O. R. M. Mr. Strobeck is also connected with the Red Lion Cornet Band, a popular musical company, playing the bassoon. Altogether he is a young man of remarkably high standing in his locality.

OSCAR H. SHEPPA, who was formerly in York, employed by the Northern Central Railroad Company in their freight department, is a son of E. E. Sheppa, of York.

Oscar H. Sheppa was born in York, May 9, 1883, and he received an excellent education in the public schools. Soon after leaving school, Mr. Sheppa entered the employ of the Northern Central railroad, as chief clerk of the ticket office at York Haven, Pa. For two years, Mr. Sheppa held this responsible position, proving himself capable and trustworthy, so that June 15, 1904, he was promoted to the position of freight clerk at York, with eight men under him. He proved himself without doubt just the right man in the right place, and not only were those in authority pleased, but the patrons of the road as well. On Feb. 15, 1905, he left the employ of the railroad company; and after two months spent in travel in the United States and Canada, he went to Philadelphia April 28, 1905, accepting a position with the World’s Restaurant Company, and on Dec. 21st following was sent to Copenhagen, Denmark, to look after the interests of that company there. On Feb. 9, 1906, he returned to Philadelphia where he holds the position of assistant manager.

Mr. Sheppa is very active in various religious, social and political circles. He is a member of the Y. M. C. A., and while at York Haven belonged to the Union Baptist Church, serving that body as librarian of the Sunday-school. In York he was a member of the Nemo Club; the Plumed Knights of York; the Seventh Ward Republican Club and the West End Republican Club. Being an enthusiastic Republican, Mr. Sheppa took a very active part in the Presidential campaign of 1904, and is regarded as one of the enterprising, far-sighted and rising young men of York, for whom the future holds many bright promises.

HORACE J. SITLER is a member of one of the old and honored families of the Keystone State, with whose history the name has been intimately, and in many individual cases most prominently, identified since the pioneer epoch, when the original progenitors came hither from Germany. The family has been established in York county for several generations, and its representatives have been honored in the various walks of life.

W. H. Sitler, father of Horace J., is a well known and influential member of the York county Bar, and a valued citizen of York where he is actively engaged in the practice of his profession. He married Miss Cecilia T. Erney, who was born and reared in this county, and to them have been born three children: Mabel O., a successful teacher in the public schools of York; Florence, member of the class of 1908, in the York high school; and Horace J., mentioned below.

Horace J. Sitler was born in the family homestead in the city of York, Nov. 9, 1883, and duly availed himself of the advantages of the excellent public schools, graduating from high school in the class of 1901, and thereafter having taken a special post-graduate course. In January, 1902, he entered the service of the York County Traction Co., as bookkeeper for its electric light department, and in June, 1904, he was advanced to his present responsible position as cashier, an office for which he is proving himself most admirably qualified, bringing to bear method and discrimination, as well as reliability, in the discharge of his duties. He is one of the popular young men of his native city and prominent in its social life. He belongs to the Royal Fire Company, and is active in its work.

In politics Mr. Sitler is a staunch advocate of Democratic principles, and fraternally he is identified with the Royal Arcanum, Heptasolhs, Firemen’s Relief Association, and is secretary of the York County Street Railway’s Beneficial Association, while he is a zealous member of Trinity Reformed Church, in whose Sunday-school he is secretary.

FRANKLIN H. MILLER, a promising young merchant of Glenville, comes of one of the old York county families, but was himself born in Adams county, Pa., March 21, 1878.

(I) Philip Miller, his great-great-grandfather, was a resident of Manheim township, and was engaged in farming, though he also made shoes and baskets. He lived to be eighty-eight years old, but his wife, whose maiden name was Noss, died young, leaving him with eight children to bring up, namely: George, Philip, David, John, Stephen, Mary, Catherine and Elizabeth.

(II) John Miller was born on the home farm and became a prominent man in that region, owning a place of about 200 acres. He was drafted for the war of 1812, but paid for a substitute. He married Elizabeth Bricker, who reached the age of seventy-six years, while he lived to be eighty-seven. They are buried in Manheim township. The issue of their marriage was as follows: Sarah, Mrs. Henry Miller; Catherine, Mrs. Adam Rohrbaugh; Jacob B.; John, who married Elizabeth Baughman; and two who died in early childhood.

(III) Jacob B. Miller was born in Manheim township, Feb. 7, 1827, and was educated in the schools of that township and Codorus, attending till he was nineteen. Until he was twenty-five he remained at home, working for his father, and at that time, after his marriage, he went to farming on his own account, buying 104 acres in his native township. After seven years there he bought a mill in Carroll county, Md., where he followed milling eight years and then traded the property for a general store in North Codorus township, near Hanover Junction. After remaining there two years he returned to Manheim township and resumed farming for the next seventeen years. He then moved to Glenville, but at the end of seven years his wife died, aged sixty-three years, and he has since lived with his son Edward, in Codorus township. Considering his age, Mr. Miller is remarkably active, while his memory is as keen as ever. In 1852 Jacob B. Miller married Sarah Ann, daughter of Henry and Christine (Miller) Rohrbaugh, and they had children as follows: Albert; Amanda, Mrs. Albert Trimmer; Sarah A., Mrs. Jonas Wolfgang; Jacob, who married Elizabeth Price; John, who married Luvilla Sheafer; Seamore, of Glenville, who married Ella Mersender; Elizabeth, who died at the age of fifteen; and Edward, supervisor of Codorus township, who married Ella Shearer.

(IV) Albert Miller was born in Manheim township, received a common-school education, and went into the wool business in Adams county, Pa. He only lived to the age of twenty-three years, and was interred at the "Stone Church" in Codorus township. He married Lena Bankert, and left three children: William, who lives in Codorus township, married to Elizabeth Castlow; Lillie May, who died when three years old; and Franklin H. The mother of these children afterward married Adam Werner, and resides in Codorus township.

(V) Franklin H. Miller was brought to Codorus township when only two years old and grew up there, attending Brodock's school till he was nineteen, after which he went to the academy at Glenville. After he left school he went to Lancaster, Pa., and was employed by the Fulmer-Clogg Company, while by night he attended Wade’s Business College. Later, for about eight months, he clerked for C. L. Grable, and in 1898 took a similar position at Brodock's in the store of Lewis Barhehenn, with whom he remained seven years, his business experience covering a period of about twelve years. He is now in business for himself at Glenville. He began Jan. 12, 1905, in a fine three-story building, 30 x 80 feet, which was put up in exact accordance with his own ideas. He carries an unusually good stock, including almost everything required in domestic life, such as shoes, hardware, clothing, dry goods and groceries, and he is rapidly building up a splendid class of trade.

Mr. Miller was married March 24, 1904, to Miss Elizabeth Werner, daughter of Henry and Lydia (Miller) Werner, of Maryland, and a son, LeRoy Franklin, was born to them Oct. 13, 1905. Mr. Miller is a member of the Reformed Church, in which he is a deacon and Sunday-school teacher. In politics he is a Republican, and fraternally belongs to Royal Council, No. 54, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Glen Rock. He also carries $1,000 life insurance with the Northwestern Life Insurance Company.

C. ROBERT KOPP, manufacturing chemist and proprietor of the famous Kopp’s Baby’s Friend, Kopp’s Cur-a-Cough, Kopp’s Liver Pellets, Kopp’s Electric Worm Syrup and Kopp’s Atlas Liniment, medicinal compounds which have become known all over the world on account of their superior excellence, is one of the successful business men of York, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Kopp is descended from Revolutionary stock through Yost Harbaugh, a soldier in the French-Indian war with Braddock, as a teamster and a colonel in the Revolution. Grandfather Kopp was a native of Maryland, where he lived and died. He married in York county Miss Mary Minnich.

Simon Kopp, the father of C. Robert, was born Feb. 11, 1818, at Emmitsburg, Md., where he grew to manhood. He then removed to York and learned the hatter’s trade with the well known hatter, Daniel Hartman, but for a short time previous to this had been engaged in brickmaking. After learning the hatter’s trade, Mr. Kopp engaged independently in that business, thus continuing until the outbreak of the Civil War. He carried on lime burning for many years at a point where Fairmount now stands, and he died Feb. 11, 1872, thus closing an honest, useful life. Originally a Whig, he later joined the ranks of the Republican party. He married Julia A. Leber, born Sept. 19, 1820, on East Market street, York, daughter of John Leber. It is supposed that John Leber was born in Lower Windsor township, near Canadachley church. He came to York and engaged in the manufacture of those large wagons then so extensively used for hauling between Baltimore, Philadelphia and Pittsburg. His shop stood on the present site of the R. H. Shindle home on South Queen street, and at one time he was the owner of much valuable property on East Market street. His wife was a Miss Margaret Knaub, born in York county in 1799. The first plot of land that was the beginning of Prospect Hill cemetery was purchased from Mr. Leber, and he surveyed and laid it out. He died about 1860, his wife surviving him until 1872. They were the parents of these children: Julia, the mother of C. Robert; Henry, who married (first) Miss Lightner, (second) Miss Glatfelter, and (third) Miss Krebs, and died in Columbia, Pa.; Mary, Mrs. Daniel Vogelsang, who lives in Ironton, Ohio, aged eighty-one years; John, who died in York in 1871; Sarah, who married Henry Haines and removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where they were very prosperous at the time of their deaths; Rebecca, Mrs. Jacob A. Erney of York; James Harbaugh, of Baltimore, who married a Miss Tillyard; and W. Frank, a prosperous merchant of Baltimore, Md., who married Miss Octavia Fuller. The parents of our subject had these children: Frances M., who married George W. Kerr, and settled on Kaskaskia island, in the Mississippi river, just south of St. Louis; James Leber, of York, who married Winnie Ernst; and C. Robert.

C. Robert Kopp was born on Market street, near Codorus creek, April 23, 1863. He was educated in the public schools and entered the Philadelphia (Pa.) School of Pharmacy in 1882, where he remained but one year, being compelled to give up his studies on account of ill health. He returned to York and was later granted a certificate from the Philadelphia Pharmaceutical examining board. For six years he carried on a drug business at the corner of Market and Penn streets, and during this time began experimenting in the manufacture of medicines, in 1885 selling over his own counter the first bottle of Baby's Friend. He disposed of his drug business in 1889, and located at Asheville, N. C., where for two years he carried on a retail grocery and confectionery business. He then went to Baltimore and spent one year in preparing himself for his present business, after which he returned to York. He there began the manufacture of his medicines on a large scale, and since that time has devoted his entire attention to his constantly increasing industry, erecting his large three-story Mount Holly brick factory in 1899. Mr. Kopp is erecting one of the finest residences in York county, on his estate in Hellam township.

In 1884 Mr. Kopp was married in Manchester borough to Miss Annie Lichtenberger, daughter of George Lichtenberger. Mrs. Kopp died in 1891, the mother of one child, Charles R. Mr. Kopp was married (second), in 1893, to Miss Rebecca Erney, of York, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Leber) Erney, her father, for many years a prominent merchant of York, now retired from business. Two children have been born to this union: Raymond M. and Frank G. Mr. Kopp is a stanch Republican. He and his family are members of the Heidelberg German Reformed Church, of which his father was one of the founders, and in which he himself is secretary and treasurer of the board of trustees, and a teacher in the Sunday-school. Fraternally, he is associated with the Royal Arcanum.

THOMAS IRA STRAWBRIDGE, the popular and accommodating shipping clerk of the Northern Central Railroad Company, in York, has passed his entire life thus and on the farm in York county and is a worthy young representative of one of the well-known and honored families of this region. He is a son of Joseph G. Strawbridge, a successful and influential farmer of Fawn township, and grandson of Thomas Strawbridge, who was likewise a prominent farmer of that township, having been the owner of the fine old homestead place now owned by his son Joseph G., who was there born and reared. Joseph G. Strawbridge chose as his companion and helpmate on the journey of life Miss Hannah A. Allen, who was likewise born and reared in Fawn township, where her father, Edmund K. Allen, was a prosperous farmer. Of the five children of this union Thomas L., subject of this sketch, was the first in order of birth; Amy L. died at the age of eleven years, and Grace A. at the age of seven years; J. Harry and Newton G. are both associated with their father in the work and management of the home farm.

Thomas Ira Strawbridge was born on the old homestead farm, Nov. 8, 1880, and duly availed himself of the advantages of the public schools of the locality. He continued to assist in the work of the home farm until he had attained his legal majority, when he came to the city of York and entered upon the discharge of the duties of the position which he
ROY ANDERSON SMITH was born in York City April 19, 1882, son of Elijah H. and Mary J. (Simpson) Smith. His grandfather, Samuel Smith, was born and reared in York county, and was well known in his day as proprietor of the “Grape Hotel” for many years. He was also a contracting carpenter.

Elijah H. Smith was a cigar manufacturer in York. He married Mary J. Simpson, whose father, Dr. R. A. Simpson, first practiced his profession in Perry county and later in York, becoming well known throughout the State for his skill and success. In this line Mr. Smith’s earliest ancestor in America was Luke Simpson, who emigrated from Ireland with his twelve sons during the persecutions of 1778. Four of our subject’s ancestors, a father and three sons, were all killed during the war of the Revolution, at the battle of Bunker Hill; his great-grandmother’s uncle, Dr. Anderson, served as a surgeon in the army with Washington. Four children were born to Elijah H. and Mary J. (Simpson) Smith, viz.: Alma and Earle, who died in infancy; Claude L., who is now engaged as supervisory principal of Plank Road schools in York City; and Roy Anderson.

Roy Anderson Smith received his education in the public schools of his native city, finishing the commercial course at the York high school in 1898. On completing same he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at York, as clerk in the local freight office, continuing in that capacity for three years. At the end of this time, in August, 1901, he accepted the position of shipping and pay clerk with the American Caramel Company which he has since continued to fill. Fraternally he belongs to Codorus Council, Royal Arcanum, and Colonial Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. He is a member of Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church. In political sentiment he is a Republican.

JOHN EDWARD HAY, one of the enterprising young men of York, was born in York, Aug. 31, 1881, son of Jacob Hay, who died Oct. 27, 1903.

Mr. Hay is descended from one of the oldest and most prominent families of York, his grandfather, John Hay, and his grandfather’s brother, Jacob Hay, having been among the most distinguished surgeons of York. The mother of John Edward Hay was Flora Gehring, daughter of John Gehring, a well-known citizen of York. Two children were born to Jacob and Flora Hay, namely: Elizabeth, who died at the age of three months; and John Edward of this sketch.

John Edward Hay received his education in the public schools of York and took a course at Eastman’s Business College of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which he was graduated in 1898. Mr. Hay entered the service of the York Traction Company in August, 1903, as assistant railway clerk, remaining until Nov. 27, 1905, and from that time on has connected himself with the Norway Iron & Steel Company.

Fraternally Mr. Hay is a member of the Junior O. U. A. M., the B. P. O. E., and the York Wheeling Club. In religion he affiliates with St. Paul’s Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Hay is a stanch Republican. Mr. Hay is a careful business man and is possessed of tireless energy. He has many friends throughout the community.

B. FRANK GRISSINGER was born Jan. 29, 1869, in Carroll county, Ill., son of Rev. William John and Catherine (Chitty) Grissinger.

John Grissinger, his great-great-grandfather, was born in Germany. His son Adam was a farmer of Lewisberry, York Co., Pa. He married Eve Fetrow, and they had children: Barbara, Catherine, Rebecca, Martha, John F., Samuel F., Martin F., Andrew and Daniel Levi. Of this family Samuel F. Grissinger, the grandfather of our subject, was a farmer. He married Mary McNeal, and they had the following children: William John, Martin A., James Levi, Margaretta Jane, Mary Ellen, Rebecca E., Julia Belle, Rachel Alice and Frances E. Etta.
Rev. William John Grissinger was a minister of the Church of God, serving in that capacity for twenty-eight years. On Feb. 1, 1905, he engaged in the mercantile business at York. He married, at Mt. Carroll, Ill., in 1865, Catherine Chitty, a daughter of Benjamin and Eliza (Templeman) Chitty, and they became the parents of the following named children: Samuel C., who married Emma Cannon, of Highspire, Dauphin county; B. Frank; Clarence Rudolph; Carrie Alice Juanita, living at home; and Oliver L., who married Mabel A. Swartz, and is with his brother, our subject.

B. Frank Grissinger first attended the public schools, and then spent three years at the Millersville State Normal. He learned the telegraph business at Landisville, Lancaster Co., Pa., and followed same eight years with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, after which he engaged in the milling business at Bainbridge, Lancaster county, for one year. He then located in Chicago and learned the barber's trade, thence removing to Philadelphia, where he was employed with John William Fisher, at No. 7124 Tacomy street. In 1900 Mr. Grissinger came to York and engaged in business in a small shop at No. 653 West Market street, but his business grew to such an extent that in 1904 he built a fine three-story home at No. 650 West Market street, where his tonsorial parlors are also located. He is a prosperous and energetic young business man and is respected by a large circle of acquaintances in York.

Mr. Grissinger married H. Minnie Fisher, daughter of his former employer, John William Fisher, and to this union the following named children have been born: James Leroy, B. Frank, Jr., John Raymond and Paul L. In politics Mr. Grissinger is a Republican.

H. A. Bortner, manufacturer of ginger ale, seltzer, root beer and pop of all flavors, at Glen Rock, Pa., is one of the successful business men of this section. He was born Sept. 26, 1874, in Codorus township, York county, son of Eli S. and Rebecca (Abmyer) Bortner.

George Bortner, the paternal grandfather, was a farmer in Codorus township and also engaged extensively in the sawmill business. He erected all the excellent buildings on his farm, burning the brick in a large yard established on his own property. He married Mary Snyder, and they both died on the old farm and are buried at Fiscel's Church. They had the following children: Eli S.; George; Jacob, deceased; and Mary, wife of George Wherley, living in Codorus township.

Eli S. Bortner, father of H. A., was born in Codorus township and grew up at home, assisting his father, and also engaged in boiling sugar cane molasses on his own account for a period of five years. At his father's death he took over the old homestead of sixty-four acres on the Glen Rock road in Codorus township, and there he still resides. He married Rebecca, daughter of Jacob Abmyer, of York county.

H. A. Bortner attended the township schools until nineteen years of age, and then went to learn the carpenter's trade with D. S. Hoover in his native township, and followed this occupation for two years. He then was employed by E. D. Bortner, at Glenville, with whom he learned the bottling business, remaining with him for four years. After operating an establishment at Glenville for nine months for a Mr. Katz, he started into business for himself, April 30, 1900.

Mr. Bortner has fine quarters for his manufacturing business on his father's farm at Glen Rock, his buildings consisting of a bottling room 18 x 18 feet in dimensions, an engine room 18 x 12, and a store room and warehouse 30 x 30, all fitted up with modern improved machinery of all kinds, with a capacity of 100 cases daily. In addition he keeps two wagons on the road continually, and during the busy season has six engaged. He utilizes a gasoline engine for motive power. The excellence of his beverages causes a wide and increasing demand. His postoffice is at Glen Rock, on the R. F. D. Route No. 1.

Mr. Bortner married Estella, daughter of George and Mary (Haines) Lucabaugh, of Codorus township, and they have one son, Dewey Edgar. In politics Mr. Bortner is a Democrat. Both he and wife are members of Fiscel's Lutheran Church. He is known as a man of high business principles.

MENGES. In the Pennsylvania Archives [2d Series, Vol. XVII] there are five records of emigrations of persons of the name of Menges, viz.: (1) Conrad and John George Menges, the first of the name to arrive in this country, came from Rotterdam in the ship "Albany," Robert Brown, master; he qualified Sept. 2, 1749. (2) Wilhelm Menges (so spelled) came in the "Dragon." Daniel Nicholas, master; he qualified Oct. 17, 1749. (3) Peter, J. Conrad, Hans Peter, Adam and John George Menges came in the brigantine "Sarah and Mary," Thomas Broderick, master, from Amsterdam. They qualified Oct. 26, 1754. These five were probably brothers or near relatives, and are likely the ancestors of the Menges in York county, as indicated in the similarity of the names prevailing in the family until the last generation, when the old family names were dropped. (4) Heinrich Menges came in the ship "Chance," Charles Smith, captain, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, and qualified Nov. 1, 1763. (5) John George Menges came in the "Brittania," Thomas Arnot, captain, from Rotterdam, and qualified Sept. 26, 1764.

In the office of the register of wills of York county is recorded the will of Charles Menges, dated March 29, 1786. His children were: Michael (probably the eldest), Mary, Elizabeth, Peter, Anna Mary, John, Adam and Jacob. In the same office is recorded the will of Michael Menges (likely the eldest son of Charles), probated March 15, 1802, who willed all his property to his wife, no children being mentioned in the document. He lived in Manchester township, York county.

On June 7, 1806, the will of Peter Menges, of Manchester township, was probated, his son John and son-in-law Kilian Ziegler being named as executors. The heirs were: Jacob, Peter, John, sons, Margaret (Mrs. Sheaffer), Elizabeth (Mrs. Fickes), Eve (Mrs. Elk) and Catherine (Mrs. Ziegler). He willed his farm in Manchester township, about a mile west of where the Hanover road joins the York and Gettysburg pike, to his son Peter, who paid the estate £1350 for 131 acres. In the same office is recorded a deed, dated May 3, 1794, given by Peter Menges, of Manchester township, to John Kline, who paid him £370 for a farm of 187 acres in Codorus township adjoining the Simons and Folkneroth farms. In the same deed it is shown that Peter Menges bought this farm from Martin Forst in 1783. At the time he sold it he lived in Manchester township, on a farm bought from Charles Barnitz and wife before 1794. At this time it comprised 117 acres. Here Peter Menges died. He and his wife are buried in the old cemetery at Wolf's church, and the following appears on their tombstones: "John Peter Menges, born June 10th, 1731, died May 30th, 1806, aged 74 years, 11 months and 20 days. Maria Catherine, wife of Peter Menges, born September, 1740, died Oct. 30th, 1804, aged 66 years and one month." This Peter Menges is probably the Hans Peter who came in the "Sarah and Mary" Oct. 26, 1754. He is the ancestor of the Menges family in York county. Where he lived between 1754 and 1785 is not ascertained.

Peter Menges (son of John Peter) sold the Manchester township farm he inherited from his father to David Sprekel March 8, 1829, for $9,449.00. He had three sons and two daughters: Jacob, who married Elizabeth Emig and had one daughter, Mrs. Jacob Meyers; George, who married Mary Kopp and had one son, Jacob, now of Jackson township, York county; Daniel, who died in 1860, at Hanover; Mrs. Samuel Oberlander; and Elizabeth, who died unmarried.

Jacob Menges (son of John Peter) bought the farm in North Codorus township now owned by William Menges (great-great-grandson of John Peter) from Christian Hershey, April 2, 1808; it is about half a mile southeast of Menges Mill. Jacob sold it to his brother John in 1823, and went West, since when nothing has been heard about the family.

John Menges (son of John Peter), born March 16, 1766, died Dec. 12, 1839. His wife Magdalena Lau, born Oct. 16, 1773, died Aug. 24, 1858. They had thirteen children: Jacob, Anna Maria, John, Daniel, Peter, George, Rebecca, Solomon, Sarah, Elizabeth, Leah, Andrew and Samuel.

The governing principle of this entire family was that of doing right. Neither money, honors nor preference could swerve them from a course of righteous Christian action. Their religion was of the Frankien Lutheran Pietistic type, and they carried it into their every-day life and intercourse with their fellowmen. Though of strong Democratic convictions all but two of the brothers became Republicans at the outbreak of the Civil war in 1861 and remained staunch supporters of Lincoln’s administration. All lived to be old, the last to die being Samuel, the youngest, who passed away in 1900, at Oxford, Adams Co., Pa. A record of this family is as follows:

(1) Jacob Menges, born in 1795, in early life learned the milling business, and later bought a farm near East Berlin, Adams Co., Pa. At the appraisement of his father's estate he took the farm now owned by his grandson, William Menges, at Menges' station on the Western Maryland road. He was a strong advocate of the early temperance movement, usually so opposed in this section. He carried his strong religious convictions into all his dealings with his fellowmen. He married Cathrene Zinn, and they had six children: (1) Jonas, born in 1825, learned the smithing business with his uncle, John Menges, in early life, but later turned his attention to farming. He was a strong advocate of the anti-slavery movement. He married Sarah Kehr and lived on his farm in Jackson township, where he died in 1886. They had no children. (2) Jesse, born May 10, 1827, was a farmer, inheriting his father's farm already referred to. He was considered the best farmer in his community. He was a Republican, and took an active part in politics during the war, in a community where the policies of Lincoln were most strenuously opposed and where a defense of those policies was unpleasant and sometimes even dangerous. Jesse Menges married Louisa Senft, and they had nine children, Anna, Franklin, Ellen, William, Charles, Peter, Kate, Elizabeth and Ida. The father died April 11, 1903, but the mother still survives. Of this family (a) Anna married John A. Spangler, a member of the Spangler family of York county, and lives about three miles south of Spring Grove, Pa. (b) Franklin Menges spent his boyhood on his father's farm. During this time he began a course of preparation for college at the Baugher Academy, Hanover, Pa., entered Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, and graduated with the class of 1886. He was tendered and accepted the assistant professorship of chemistry in his alma mater immediately after graduation, and held this position until 1896. From Gettysburg he went to York and took charge of the scientific department of the York High school, holding this position until December, 1903, when he resigned to take the management of a section of farmers' institute lectures of the State of Pennsylvania and at the same time collect farm products for the Agricultural Exhibit of the State of Pennsylvania at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1904, of which he had charge during the entire exposition. He was honored by his alma mater with the degree of Phi. D. for special work in chemistry, mineralogy and geology. He is still engaged by the State in doing farmers' institute lecturing, and also writes for the daily press on agricultural topics. He married Mary McIlhenny and they are living at York. (c) Ellen married Jacob T. Crist and they are living at Spring Grove. (d) William owns the farm bought by Jacob Menges (son of John Peter) from Christian Hershey in 1808 and which has been owned by his great-grandfather, his grandfather and his father, and has been in the name for nearly a century. He is active in Republican politics in a hopelessly Democratic district. (e) Charles married Ameda Lau, and they live at Spring Grove, where he is in the produce business. He was postmaster of his town during President McKinley's first administration and has been a member of the town council for a number of years. (f) Peter married Lucy Rohrbaugh. He is a farmer, owning the farm formerly the property of his great-uncle, John Menges, on the Hanover road near Iron Ore station, on the Pennsylvania road. He was school director in his township, being elected in a strong Democratic district although he was an active Republican. (g) Kate married Charles Reachard, and they live on the old home farm with her brother William. (h) Elizabeth married Peter Bott, and lives on the York and Gettysburg pike, near Labott post office. (i) Ida married Charles Baker, who died in 1900. She now lives with her mother on the old home farm. (j) Levi Menges, the third son of Jacob, died in boyhood. (4) William is living on the borough limits of McSherrystown, Adams Co., Pa. He is a farmer, and the largest land owner of the name, owning six adjoining farms, comprising between eight and nine hundred acres of the richest and most valuable land in the Conewago valley. He applies strict business methods to his farming operations and has succeeded. He is a Republican in politics. He married Kate Hoke, daughter of Casper Hoke, and they have the following children: Henry, who is married and living on one of his father's farms; Mary, at home with her parents; Sarah, Mrs. Henry Hartman; Ellen, Mrs. David Little; Charles, at home farming; Agnes, Mrs. Charles Bowman; John, living on his farm near his father; and Lucy and Jesse, both living at home. (5) Leah, the only daughter of Jacob Menges, married Henry Reynolds, and she lives with her niece, Mrs. John Spangler. They had no children.
(6) Absalom, the youngest son of Jacob, lives in Paradise township, York county, on the Paradise creek, where he owns a small mill and two farms and combines milling and farming. He married Nancy Hoke, daughter of Michael Hoke, and their children are: Sarah, Mrs. Martin Berkheimer, living at Spring Grove; Ellen, Mrs. George Heneise, living in Paradise township; Jacob, farming his father's farm; Annie, Mrs. George Bollinger, living close by her father's mill; Susan, Mrs. Allen Jacobs, living in Spring Grove; Jonas, living at Spring Grove; Paul, a graduate of the Dickinson Law School and recently admitted to the York Bar; and Luther, one of the office men with the York Manufacturing Company.

(II) Anna Maria Menges, second child of John, was born Sept. 9, 1797, and on May 24, 1818, married Zachriah Spangler, a member of the York county Spangler family. They had twelve children: Kathrine, Michael, Charles, Peter, Andrew, Solomon, Sarah, Rebecca, Elizabeth, Leah, Levi and Lidia.

(III) John Menges, son of John, was said to have been the image of his father. He was more than six feet tall and possessed enormous strength. He owned the farm now in the possession of his grand nephew, Peter Menges, near Iron Ridge station on the Pennsylvania road, and there during the early years of his life ran quite an extensive smithing establishment and also kept a tavern. He married Elizabeth Rudisill, and they had seven children: Anna Maria, Magdalena, Sarah, Mary, Nancy, Eliza and Jacob.

(IV) Daniel Menges, son of John, in early manhood managed his father's farm, lying about two miles northwest of Spring Grove. Upon his father's death he took this farm at the appraisement and later sold it to Henry Schwartz, whose heirs still own it. On June 18, 1828, he married Elizabeth Bollinger, and they had four children, Joseph, Henry, Suzannah and Emanuel. After selling the farm inherited from his father he bought a farm near York Springs, then known as Petersburg, where he remained until his death, and where in later life he bought several other farms. Of his children, Joseph married Elizabeth Coulson and had five daughters, Sadie (Mrs. Clayton Myers), Mary (unmarried), Alice (Mrs. Alfred Harboldt), Marshy (unmarried) and Josie (Mrs. Willis Worley). Henry married Mary Strayer, and they had three children, Jacob (who married Annie Bream), Alice (married to Stephen Frazer) and John (who married Carrie Culp). Suzannah married Charles Eichelberger, and they had eight children, Emma, Martin, Ira, Clara, George, Etta, Jennie and William. Emanuel married a Miss Stauffer, and they had three children, Charles (who married Bertie Trostle), Harry (who married Mary Larew) and Frank (married to Minnie Thomas).

(V) Peter Menges, son of John, born in 1802, learned milling at Hershey's mill, in Heidelberg township, in early life. He married Anna, daughter of Christian Hershey, proprietor of Hershey's mill, and then took up farming on the place his father bought from his uncle, Jacob Menges, in 1823. In connection with farming he ran a distillery until the great temperance movement, with which he became identified and of which he was a strong advocate, swept over this section. He abandoned distilling and ever afterward was one of the strongest opponents of the whiskey business. In 1835 he bought his father-in-law's farm and milling property, which has since been known as Menges' Mill, one of the oldest milling properties west of York. Peter Menges died in 1883. He had two sons, John H. and Peter H.

John H. Menges, born Jan. 3, 1825, was during his boyhood and early manhood in the midst of great religious revivals which moved men's hearts. He came into the movement with his father and many others, and animated with a love for religious work he determined to enter the ministry. He received his academic and theological training under Rev. William H. Heilig, at Abbottstown, Adams Co., Pa., and at Middletown, Lancaster Co., Pa. He entered the ministry in 1849 and was called to the Peters burg (Lancaster county) charge, comprising three congregations—Mt. Joy, Manheim and Petersburg. Thence he accepted a call to the German Lutheran congregation at Columbia, Pa., and while there organized the English Lutheran Church of that town. Thence he went to York and organized the Union Lutheran Church on West Market street, which he served fourteen years. From there he went to the Shrewsbury charge, comprising three congregations—New Freedom, Fishel's and Shrewsbury. After leaving this charge he organized Grace Lutheran congregation, Spring Garden street, Philadelphia, from which charge he returned to the Manheim (Lancaster county) charge where he began his labors in 1849. He was instrumental in organizing the Loysville Orphans' Home, and during his ministry was a member of the boards of education, church extension, publication, the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, etc. He was an unswerving patriot and loyalist during thesixties and from pulpit and with pen helped to fight the battles for the Union. He was a friend of the soldier and did not regard his church too sacred a place for his shelter, for when a furious storm overtook the soldiers of Camp Scott of York and drove them from camp he threw open the doors of his church to them. In 1864 he helped organize a company for the defense of the State and became its quartermaster, the boys naming the company the Menges Guard in his honor.

Rev. John H. Menges married Cathrine Sheller, daughter of Dr. Sheller, of Mt. Joy, Pa., and they had six children, all now living in Philadelphia, viz.: Margaret, Mrs. A. L. Jamison; Paul; Charles, who is in the auditing department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at the Broad street station, Philadelphia; Mary, Mrs. William F. Earle; Sarah J., Mrs. N. B. Jeffries, and Allen. Rev. John H. Menges died in 1898 and is buried in Prospect Hill cemetery, York, Pennsylvania.

Peter H. Menges was born at Menges' Mill and lived there during his entire life. He attended an academy at Mt. Joy, Lancaster county, in boyhood, and in early manhood took the management of his father's teams. He was appointed one of the first internal revenue collectors under Lincoln's administration, when the enforcement of the payment of the revenues required the presence of an officer of the law and when it was necessary to be armed to collect the revenues. He was superintendent of a number of the iron mines along the Pigeon Hills until they were closed, when iron ore was put on the free list in 1878. After this he devoted his time to the management of his farm and mill, both of which he brought to a high state of development and efficiency. He married Kate Hinkle, of Columbia, Pa., and they had seven children: (1) Annie married Z. L. Bowman and lives at Spring Grove, Pa. (2) John G. married Maggie Faust and lives at Menges' Mill station, on the Pennsylvania road. He has been for a number of years postmaster at Menges' Mills post office and the proprietor of a successful mercantile and grain business. (3) Minnie married Charles Stauffer and lives at Spring Grove. (4) Alvin L. is the owner and manager of Menges Mill, where he is conducting one of the most successful milling enterprises in the county. He married Eva Tanger. (5) William H. is associated with his brother Alvin in the milling and grain business. He is a graduate of Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg (1896), and after his graduation returned to his father's home, taking an active part in the business, in which he became a partner a few years ago. He married Charlotte Gertrude Bowers and they live at the old homestead with his mother. He is active in Republican politics. (6) Patience and (7) Mamie died in childhood. Peter H. Menges, the father of this family, died in 1904, and is buried in the cemetery at Spring Grove, York county.

(VI) George Menges, son of John, was a blacksmith by trade, but early in life turned to farming and became a wealthy man for his day. He married Margaret Enig, and they had seven daughters: Sarah, Mrs. Samuel Rudisill; Sevilla; Louisa, Mrs. Abraham Martin; Margaret, Mrs. Abraham Hoke; Salinda; Magdalena, and Eliza. George Menges and his wife are buried in the Union cemetery of the Pigeon Hill church.

(VII) Rebecca Menges, daughter of John, married Solomon Moul and had six children: Teliah, Mrs. Peter Heilman; Sevilla, Mrs. Joshua Reynolds; Sarah, Mrs. Andrew Rudisill; Sophia, Mrs. Valentine Hoar; Susan, Mrs. Theophilus Hoar; and Rolandus, now living on the farm inherited from his father at Moulstown, Heidelberg township, York county.

(VIII) Solomon Menges, son of John, was a miller by trade, and for a number of years head miller in the mill of his brother Peter. After leaving there he went to Maryland, where he engaged in the business more extensively, and where he married Julian Hess. Some years after his marriage he stopped milling and bought a farm about two miles northwest of Littlestown, Pa. They had four children: (1) Israel after growing up on his father's farm and teaching school during several winters went West, where he engaged in teaching and where he married a Western woman. There he died several years ago. (2) Daniel learned milling at his Uncle Peter's mill, and afterward went West, where he married. He has two children. Charles and Julian. (3) Samuel spent his boyhood on his father's farm, married and continued farming on the old place until after his father's death, when he sold it and removed to Spring Grove. There he is now engaged in the paper mills of P. H. Glatfelter. He has one son, Charles. (4) Sarah married A. M. Frick and lives near Littlestown, Pennsylvania.

(IX) Sarah Menges, daughter of John, married Samuel Boyer, and they lived on the old Boyer homestead about two miles southwest of Menges' Mill, on the farm still owned by her son, Andrew Boyer. They had five children: Sarah, Mrs. Edward Stambaugh; Magdalena, Mrs. Henry Rohrbaugh; Leah, Mrs. John Bable; Andrew, who is married to a Miss Sheaffer and lives on the old homestead; and Maria, Mrs. Jacob Bechtel.

(X) Elizabeth Menges, daughter of John, married Abraham Triber. They had four children, Henry, Peter, Elizabeth, and Mrs. Martin Myers.

(XI) Leah Menges, daughter of John, married Michael Livingston, and they lived west of New Oxford, Adams Co., Pa. They had four children: Edward Adams, Mrs. Michael Triber; Peter, a Lutheran minister located at St. Mark's Church, York, Pa.; Mrs. David Taughenbaugh, and Amanda.

(XII) Andrew Menges, son of John, passed all his life at the old home about a mile and a half northwest of Spring Grove. This farm was bought by John Peter Menges (father of John) and given to his son John some time between 1790 and 1800. Andrew Menges took this farm at the appraisement of his father's estate in 1840 and lived there until his death, in 1890. He is buried in the cemetery of Christ Lutheran Church, Pigeon Hill. He was a universally beloved man, always respected and highly esteemed. He married Carolina Shenebrook, and they had four children: (1) Henry, who now owns and lives on the old homestead, which has been in the name over a century, has acquired much wealth by shrewd business management and safe investments; he married Anna Gross, and they have one daughter, Anna, married to Allen Smyser. (2) Agnes married Rev. Aaron Spangler, a member of the Spangler family of York county. (3) George in early manhood conducted his father's farm, and during this time a deposit of iron ore was discovered there, a mine was opened and he became the manager; when the mine was closed he moved to Spring Grove, where he engaged in the lumber and coal business; he married Amanda Martin, and they have one daughter, Lillian, married to John Stambaugh. George Menges died at Spring Grove in 1904 and is buried in the cemetery of Christ Lutheran Church, Pigeon Hill. (4) Lena married Michael Smyser, and they lived at Spring Grove, where he was in the mercantile business.

(XIII) Samuel Menges, son of John, learned the smithing business with his brothers John and George and carried on the business on the old homestead with his brother John. After that he went to farming, buying a farm about two miles northwest of New Oxford, Adams Co., Pa. He married Lidia Hershey and they had seven children: Jacob, who now lives in the home of his father in New Oxford; Susana, married to Milton Stambaugh and living on the York and Gettysburg pike near New-town; Elizabeth, married to Abraham Myers and living on the farm formerly owned by Jonas Menges, about a mile northwest of Menges' Mill; Henry, living in Germany township, Adams county; Daniel and Peter, who live near New Oxford; and Lidia, married to a Mr. Hetrich and living on the home farm of Samuel Menges. Samuel Menges died at his home in Oxford in 1900 and is buried in the cemetery of the town.
