The Historical Records Survey was established in West Virginia in 1936 as a part of the Federal Historical Records Survey, a unit of Federal Project No. 1. Federal Sponsorship was terminated August 31, 1939, and since then the West Virginia Historical Records Survey has been sponsored by the West Virginia Department of Education until September 1, 1940, by the Department of Archives and History until December 5, 1941, and after that date by the Office of the Attorney General of West Virginia.

The object of the Survey in West Virginia is to prepare complete inventories of the records of State, county, city, or other governmental units and of church records, newspapers, manuscript collections, and American imprints.

The very nature of the Survey's work in archival materials and its demonstrated adaptability in handling the most varied research problems as these occur in the daily routine or as they are assigned to it, have qualified the Survey for the task of preparing a guide to vital statistic records in West Virginia. The broad implications of the grave crisis confronting our country have brought the problems of citizenship into sharp focus. For every individual, vital statistics and naturalization records have become a paramount importance. Heretofore, only vital statisticians, insurance researchers, and lawyers have felt the need for a comprehensive guide to such records. Now a guide to vital statistic records can well be of inestimable value to any member of the community.

The Guide to Vital Statistic Records in West Virginia is being prepared in two independent, though complementary volumes, relating to the different sources of archival material, namely: public archives (Inventory: Public Vital Statistics in West Virginia March 1941) and church archives, Protestant and Catholic Churches (the current volume). This volume, the second of the series, is arranged alphabetically by county, and by towns, listing records of baptisms (births), marriages, and deaths that are to be found in each church community in the state. The vital statistic records of as many Jewish Congregations as have been surveyed have been added. Span of years covered, number of volumes, and custodians have been carefully checked and listed (see Explanatory Notes p. xvii).

The volume here presented is a preliminary publication and does not pretend to be complete in its coverage. Records of approximately 45% of the Churches in West Virginia have been listed. A description of the records kept by each denomination is shown in the section titled Methods of Record-keeping (pp. ix-xiv) to simplify the entries themselves. The entries show the location of churches, name of the church, denomination, and the vital statistics with the title of the Preface

The records surveyed form a part of the Written Archives of the State of West Virginia, the records of many groups in the state being found in the hands of individuals who are not clergy. The significance of the records varies from the day to day social life of the people, to religious and political matters. Information about the records is given in the volume or volumes in which they are found, covering dates, number of volumes and if the records are kept by others than the clergy, the name and address of the custodian.

The assemblage of basic material for this volume has been done over a period of 5 years by nearly 300 field workers who have been employed at various times by the Historical Records Survey in West Virginia. The compilation of the volume is the work of the state supervisor and the assistant state supervisor.

Appreciation is expressed to the various sponsors and co-sponsors, and to the members of the clergy throughout the state for their splendid cooperation in the preparation of this volume. Particular appreciation for their assistance in the administration of the project and its work is expressed to the officials of the Work Projects Administration namely: Mr. Carl Riggs, State Administrator; Mrs. Irene Gillock, State Director of Professional and Service Projects, and others in the organization who have helped to make our task easier.

The various units of the publications of the Historical Records Survey in West Virginia will be issued in mimeograph form for free distribution to State and local public libraries and governmental agencies outside of the State. A complete list of the publications will be found in the back of this volume. Inquiries regarding particular units of the publications should be addressed to the State Supervisor of the West Virginia Historical Records Survey, Iacoc Building, 724 4th Avenue, Huntington, West Virginia.

I. General Introduction

As in all the older States of the Nation, the close association of church and local government in the history of western Virginia (later West Virginia) provides a wealth of information in church archives that is not to be found in any other source. This is especially true in the field of vital statistics. Often the church "Record Book," or "Register" contains the only record of baptisms (including birth date), marriages, and deaths over the long period during which no public records of this data were kept.¹

These vital statistics records preserved in church records are of basic importance to many agencies of government, including the Bureau of Census, and the State and Federal agencies responsible for the administration of the Social Security program. The Bureau of Census has asked the Historical Records Survey to supply it with this information concerning depositories of vital statistics records.

The keeping of vital statistic records began as the duty of the church. The colony of Virginia followed this system and in 1759-60 the assembly delegated the duty to the various vestries of the Episcopal Church. This enactment authorized each parish vestry to appoint officers who were to record the births, marriages, and burials in their parish.² The church had complete charge of recordkeeping until 1780 when the assembly designated the clerk of the county court as custodian of the marriage records³ and with various changes throughout the years he has remained as such.

However, as the act designating the appointment by the Episcopal Church vestry of a custodian of births and deaths was never rescinded, it can be said that this organization remained the official registrar until the enactment of the Vital Statistics Law as a part of the Virginia Constitution in 1851 which placed this duty in the hands of the clerk of the county court.⁴ Unfortunately the Protestant Episcopal Church suffered heavily in Virginia after the American Revolution and the records that should be extant too often were destroyed by fire, or lost through carelessness of individual custodians. That it remained one of the smallest denominations meant that even had the church remained as custodian of the birth and death records, many counties and communities would have been omitted due to the fact that no church or vestry was ever established there. This is especially true of the church west of the mountains.

Other denominations active in mission work in the western Virginia (now West Virginia) counties have maintained better records than those of the Episcopal Church. However, many of the early organizations established as a result of these mission efforts failed to keep formal records of their activities. This was because the church groups which were most active in mission activities west of the mountains did not require an educated clergy, and too often the class leaders failed to realize the value of preserving written records. Further, because of the vast areas covered by workers of the mission churches, they had no time for recording complete records for their charges. Such records as do exist for the mission churches are usually lists of memberships and baptisms of individual churches. Many of these maintain their marriage, burial, and baptismal records as private records of the minister and thus records of a church may be moved as the pastor moves and, upon his death, these records fall to the hands of private individuals and are too often lost. The Presbyterian, Baptist, and Methodist denominations, who lead in the missionary work within the State, have adequate membership and business records, but few of those kept as vital statistic records.

Since many of the Civil War battles were fought on West Virginia soil, it is obvious that church communities would be affected. In many West Virginia churches the pastors and officers were active in promoting the cause of the Federal or Confederate groups. There were quick repercussions. Churches were burned, and while these could be replaced later, the valuable old church record books were often destroyed in the fires. Nearly every church in the State was used as a place for supplies, hospital barracks, or field headquarters for Union or Confederate troops. The period of strife and the division in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches in the State, with division of membership to northern or southern assemblies, further depleted the church archives so that the number of churches in the State having records for the period prior to the Civil War are comparatively few.

Many of the records of baptisms, marriages, and deaths found in our church records consist of brief notations in the membership lists and without sustaining proof are of little value. The Vital Statistics division of the West Virginia Department of Health does not accept church records in proof of births, deaths or marriages, unless the record has been entered at least 5 years prior to the date of presentation.
II. Methods of Recordkeeping

Adventist Bodies: Adventist Christian Church, Church of God Adventist, Church of God (Oregon, Ill.), Seventh-day Adventist Denomination.

No formal provision is made in the rules of Adventist groups for recordkeeping. Most churches affiliated with the group keep records of members, baptisms, and deaths. Such records show date of entrance into church; baptisms, (usually date of baptism and age of person baptized); death records show date of death and age of deceased. Records that exist are in possession of pastor or church clerk and are available for examination on request.

Most churches of this group are members of State or local organizations and make annual statistical reports to this group. The statistical reports of the Seventh-day Adventist Churches kept at Takoma Park, D. C., give vital statistic records regarding each Seventh-day Adventist members throughout the world.

Baptist Bodies: Missionary Baptist, Primitive Baptist, Free Will Baptist.

May keep register of members, baptisms, and deaths. Records are usually kept in the same volume, most often in the Church Minute Books, and show lists of members and when they were received in the church; baptisms usually show date of baptism and name of person baptized (baptismal records in view of the practice of adult baptism, would be of use to vital statisticians only when age of person at time of baptism was noted); death records give date of death and age of deceased. Some few churches keep marriage records; however, such records are usually kept as private records of the pastor, and as such usually give names of persons married, date, age, and pastor performing the service. Records are in possession of pastor or clerk appointed by the local Association. Such records are available for examination on request.1

Baptist churches are required to make statistical reports to District Associations, who in turn make reports to State Convention.

Roman Catholic Church

This church has perhaps the most complete vital statistic records of any church. The pastor or priest in charge is required to keep records of baptisms (infant baptisms customary), confirmations, marriages, and deaths. Records are usually kept in separate volumes, although they may be combined into one parish register, and show the following information.

Births: place and date of birth, name of parents and name of child; baptisms: name of person being baptized, date of baptism, names of parents, names of sponsors, date and place of birth, and name of church official performing the sacrament; confirmation: name of person, age, confirming Bishop, name of Priest; marriages: names of couple being married, ages of couple, date and place of marriage, signatures of bride, groom and witnesses, names and places of birth of (both parents of bride and groom), and name of person performing the ceremony; death records: date of death, cause of death, age and name of officiating priest, date and place of burial. Such information is available on request to the local priest. The Catholic church has especially prepared forms for such information and church officials are very helpful in answering all requests for vital statistic material.

Christian Churches: Church of Christ and Disciples of Christ. No formal provisions are made in the constitution of the Christian Churches for the keeping of records. However, most member churches of the Christian group of churches, both Church of Christ (conservative) and Disciples of Christ (progressive), keep a Church Membership Register. Records contain listing of members, when and how received; baptisms, date of baptism, age of person baptized and person performing the ceremony; death records are part of the membership records and show date of death and age of deceased. Marriage records are usually kept as private records of the pastor. Such records as exist are in the possession of the pastor, church elder, or a record clerk elected by the church. Records are available for inspection on request to custodian.

The Christian churches maintain only local independent organizations and are not required to make annual reports to a National organization.

Congregational

Churches of this group keep a Church Register of members, baptisms, and deaths. Records are usually kept in separate volumes and give the following information: Membership list showing names of members of the church and how and when received into the church; baptisms (infant baptism customary), showing name, date, and name of person performing the ceremony; deaths, showing name of deceased and date of death. Such records as exist are usually in the custody of local pastor or church clerk, and are available for inspection on request.

All churches of this group are members of State and National organizations and make annual reports to these groups.

Evangelical and Reformed

Keep a Register of members, baptisms, and deaths. Records are usually contained in one volume, and show the following information. Members, listing of members, showing when and how received in the church; baptisms, (infant baptisms customary), showing name of person baptized, date of baptism, and name of person performing the baptism; deaths, showing name of deceased and date of death. Records are usually in possession of pastor or clerk appointed by the organization.
Churches of this group are members of State, district, or National organization, and make annual statistical reports to these groups.

Jewish
Keep a record of confirmations and complete burial records. Records of confirmation show list of persons confirmed, date of confirmation, and name of person performing the confirmation ritual. Burial records show name of deceased, cause of death, date of death, age of deceased, and date and place of burial. The Hebrew groups keep perhaps the most complete death records of any group. Such records are on file at synagogue.

Latter-day Saints: Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.
Member churches branches of this group keep a Church Register of all members, baptisms, marriages, and deaths. Membership records show when and how received into the church; baptisms show name of person baptized, date of baptism, name of parents and name of person performing the ceremony; marriage records show name of bride and groom, parents' names, date of marriage and person performing the ceremony; death records show name of deceased, place and cause of death, and age of person at death. Such records are kept on file at the local church, and are in possession of the class leader. Duplicate copies of all records are sent to national headquarters where they are kept on file.

Member churches of this group all maintain close affiliation with the national Organization and make annual statistical reports to this group. Information concerning church members can be secured from the local organization on request.

Lutheran Bodies:
Member churches of this group organization keep rather complete records. Records titled Parish Register contain record of members, baptisms, confirmation, marriages, and deaths. The church records show the following information: members, when and how received in the churches; baptisms (infant baptisms customary) show name of person baptized, date of baptism, date and place of birth, names of God parents, and name of person performing the ceremony; confirmation records show name of person confirmed, age and date of confirmation, and pastor administering confirmation; marriage records show name and age of bride and groom, date of marriage, name of parents and name of pastor performing the ceremony; death records show name and age of deceased and date of death. Such records are in possession of the local pastor and records are available for inspection on request.

The Lutheran churches maintain close affiliation between local, State, and National organization. The member churches make annual reports to the district organization. The only difficulty in using the records for vital statistic information is the language problem, as the earlier records of some of the churches were kept in German. However, the local pastors are willing to give assistance in the use of church records in such cases, and records are available for use on request to custodian.

Methodist Bodies: Methodist (Episcopal), Methodist (Protestant), Free Methodist Church of North America.

Keep a register of members, baptisms, deaths, and some marriages. Records are usually kept in volume titled "Church Register" and all information is contained in the same volume. Records of members show name of person, when and how received in the church, conversion or transfer; baptisms show name of person baptized, age, date of baptism, and pastor; death records show only notation of death, date and age of deceased. Some churches keep complete marriage records; however, such records are usually kept as private records of the pastor and are not always available for use. Such marriage records as exist for the church show names of persons married, date of marriage, and name of pastor performing the ceremony. Records are in possession of pastor or duly elected church clerk and are available for use on request to the custodian.

Member churches of the Methodist Church are required to make annual statistical reports to the Methodist Conference, showing all changes in the church personnel and membership. For this reason a great many of the Methodist churches keep only current records, destroying their old records at the end of each year, after making their annual report.

In the listings here given all combined Methodist bodies are listed under the heading, Methodist (Episcopal). The reorganization of the Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal South, and Methodist Protestant bodies is still under way and many churches are being joined together, especially in rural communities and smaller towns. Both Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Episcopal South are shown without distinction in the listing as their recordkeeping system has, in the past, been very similar. Methodist Protestant churches, however, are listed as such with the word Protestant in parentheses, because of the variation in their records.

Annual statistical reports of members, baptisms, and deaths are made to the Annual Conference and are published in the Annual Conference Report for West Virginia.

Pentecostal Assemblies: Pentecostal Holiness Church; Pentecostal Assembly of Jesus Christ; The Pentecostal Church, Incorporated; International Pentecostal Assembly; Pentecostal Assembly of the World; and Pentecostal Church of God of America, Incorporated.

Member churches of these groups keep record books usually titled "Church Register" or "Membership Roll." Records are a listing of church members, with scattered notations of baptisms and deaths throughout. Records are not complete and are of little value for vital statistics material. Records are usually in charge of local class leaders or a duly appointed clerk and are available for inspection on request to the custodian.

Member churches of these organizations are usually members of State or National organizations. However, each church is considered as an independent unit and looks to the National organization for advice. No regular reports are required by the central authority except statistical reports on church membership and growth.

Presbyterian Bodies: Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church; Presbyterian Church, U. S.; and Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. Member churches of the Presbyterian bodies are required to keep complete records of members, baptisms, marriages, and deaths. Records are kept in volumes titled "Church Register." In the older churches the custom was to keep all records in the same volume, or in the Session Record. In more recent years the tendency has been to keep each record as a separate unit, one volume for members, another for baptisms, and so on.

Church records show the following information: members, date member was received in church and whether by baptism, conversion, or transfer from other church; baptisms (infant baptism customary) show name of person baptized, date of baptism, and person performing the ceremony; (in some instances name of parents are shown); marriages show names and ages of bride and groom, date of marriage, name of person performing the ceremony; (in some instances, names of parents of bride and groom); death records show name and age of deceased and place and date of burial.

The Presbyterian churches are required by their national organization to keep complete records and to make annual reports as to the condition of their records and changes that have occurred in the church during the year. Such records are in possession of the stated clerk or pastor for each church and are available for use on request to the custodian.

Many of the older Presbyterian records are lodged in the Spence Library at Richmond, Virginia, and at the Historical Foundation at Montreat, North Carolina, and records from these are available upon application to the custodian.

Annual statistical reports of members, baptisms, marriages and deaths are made in the Minutes of Presbytery for each Presbytery.

Local churches are required to make annual statistical reports to the Church Council.

Protestant Episcopal Church

For a recordkeeping denomination, the records of this church in West Virginia are peculiarly incomplete. This is due to the fact that many churches existed as missions for years before becoming independent parishes and thus the records were nearly always incorporated into those of the mother church.

Definite recordkeeping requirements are established, and have, within the past 50 years, been followed carefully.

1. See Inventory of Church Archives in West Virginia: Presbyterian Bodies (Historical Records Survey, Charleston, West Virginia: 1941).

2. See Inventory of Church Archives in West Virginia: Protestant Episcopal Church (Historical Records Survey, Charleston, West Virginia: 1938).
Prior to that time, however, records are often incomplete. Each parish keeps a Parish Register. This may consist of one volume in which all records are grouped, or an individual volume for each grouping. Required records include lists of communicants, record of families, baptisms, confirmations, marriages, and burials. List of communicants includes only names of persons affiliated by regular communion within the parish; family records list the name of each member of each family in the parish, together with address, whether baptized and confirmed, and age of each member of family; confirmation records show name of person confirmed, denomination in which baptized, date of confirmation, age of person confirmed, name of presenting priest, name of confirming bishop, and date of confirmation; baptismal records (infant baptisms customary) show baptismal name, date and place of birth, date and place of baptism, names of parents and sponsors, address of parents, name of priest; marriage records show names of parties, date and place of birth of each, names of parents of each of contracting parties with date and place of birth, date and place of marriage, signatures of bride, groom, two witnesses, and clergyman; burial records show name of decedent, date and cause of death, place of death, date and place of burial, name of officiating priest.

Annual statistical reports of members, baptisms, confirmations, and burials are made to the Diocesan Council and are published in the Council Journal of the Diocese of West Virginia.

Parish registers are kept by a parish Registrar, elected by the Vestry of the parish and are usually available at the Parish House.

United Brethren Bodies: Church of the United Brethren in Christ; Church of the United Brethren in Christ (Old Constitution).

Keep record book entitled "Church Register" which contains a record of church members, how and when received, and scattered notations of baptisms and deaths. Such records are in possession of pastor or duly appointed church clerk.

Member churches of the United Brethren Church are members of State, district, or National organizations and maintain close contact with such groups. Annual reports of church growth throughout the year are made to these organizations.

Annual statistical reports of members, baptisms, marriages, and deaths are made to Annual Conference and are published in West Virginia Conference Journal.

IV. Suggestions to Users

Many volumes of church records which contain vital statistics records are listed in this inventory. Some are complete, some are incomplete, some custodians are interested in their records, others are not. Some custodians will make a real effort to answer inquiries, others will ignore them.

In writing for information regarding church records it will be well to give as much information as possible about the record which you desire. The approximate date of entry will assist the custodian in finding your material, names should be written clearly or should be printed and full names should always be given.

Every request for records should be accompanied by a self-addressed and stamped envelope. Not many churches are financially able to meet a heavy load of requests for records if postage is not provided.

In many cases, especially in that of rural communities, photostatic copies of church records are an impossibility, but a certified copy will nearly always be available if the person making the inquiry will bear the expense.

Clerks of county courts have requested that inquiries relating to vital statistics be limited to those actually in need of them at this time; likewise, requests for church records should be made only when other means of locating vital statistics records have been exhausted. Ministers are busy people, the church registrar is usually a business man, and church records are seldom indexed, so that an overload of requests for records may result in a casual or hasty search of the records rather than a thorough one.

V. Explanatory Notes and Abbreviations

General Arrangement

The records of churches in West Virginia containing vital statistics have been arranged alphabetically by county, municipality, denominations, and finally by church name. Even without an index, it will be comparatively easy to locate any church in any municipality or post office in the State.

The index is arranged alphabetically by community, and thereunder by church name.

Church Records

Nearly all religious societies in West Virginia, as elsewhere, keep a Church Book or Register for their own convenience and for that of any non-members who may be rightly interested. This Register contains a record of members, baptisms (not always infant baptisms), marriages, and deaths. It opens with a roll of the charter members of the congregation at the time of formal organization. Except in cases as noted, baptisms, marriages, and deaths are recorded in the same volume, and cover similar spans of years.

In case of churches not of recent organization, the Register may be a multiple volume series. It is usually to be found in the custody of the pastor of the church, who is regarded as the recording officer of the organization, ex officio. The Historical Records Survey has found West Virginia pastors most cooperative in providing access to church records at reasonable hours.
The loss of old church Registers and the recovery of others is discussed in the general introduction.
