MRS. ELLEN M. COLTON, Vice-President General.
PREFACE.

At the close of twelve years' work on these volumes, the promise of their usefulness has been made good. They have builded a monument which will point future generations to a greater veneration for their country's history; to a deeper concern for its welfare and to a better understanding of the meaning of citizenship. They have placed where all may see the heritage which belongs to every city, to every village and to every township in this broad land.

So widely diffused and so intimate and personal has become the knowledge of the Revolutionary period that even little children know the origin and meaning of the flag. So in very truth out of the Colonial struggle is growing up an "American manhood that will build a structure of liberty to endure forever."
