PENNSYLVANIA

GENEALOGIES;

CHIEFLY

SCOTCH-IRISH AND GERMAN.

By
WILLIAM HENRY EGLE, M. D., M. A.

HARRISBURG, PA.: HARRISBURG PUBLISHING COMPANY.
1896.
In the prefatory note to the first edition, published in 1886, the author said:

"This volume is the author's contribution to the Genealogy of his native State. It is the result of years of conscientious labor in this neglected field of our State History, and comprises only a portion of the material which he has gathered. On the reception of this volume, with its limited edition, will depend, in a measure, whether another volume shall follow."

Owing to the demand for this initial volume while in the course of preparation for a second series of "Pennsylvania Genealogies," it has been deemed proper to re-print the same. Corrections and additions have been made, which will add greatly to the permanency of the volume. In due time another series relating to representative Pennsylvania families will appear. Grateful acknowledgements are due to a number of kind friends for their hearty co-operation in this revision.
To
HON. JOHN BLAIR LINN,
of Bellefonte,
In Remembrance of Fraternal Labor
in the
Harvest Fields of History,
These Pennsylvania Family Records
are Sincerely Inscribed.

On the 19th of December, 1656, JACOB ALRICS, whose father is supposed to have been Claes Alricks, born circa 1603, at Groeningen, Holland, was appointed by the Burgomasters and Council of the city of Amsterdam, Governor of that city's colony on the Delaware. He sailed from the Texel on the 25th of the same month, in the ship Printz Maurits, and reached the American coast on the 8th of March following. The vessel was wrecked on Long Island, but, fortunately, every man was saved, as well as their baggage, the vessel being merely stranded. He, subsequently, through the kindness of some natives, reached Manhattan Island (New York). On the 16th of April, he sailed in the ship Bever from the harbor of New Amsterdam, and arrived at Fort New Amstel, on the Delaware, five days after. He at once assumed command, and sent forward, by the first opportunity, a full report of the condition of the Dutch Colony on the Delaware. His position was far from an easy one. Not only the Swedes, who had been the first settlers, and whose conquest had been made by the Dutch under Stuveysant, Governor of all the New Netherlands, but the English, as also the Maryland colonists, gave him considerable concern. Besides, the Dutch themselves were more or less dissatisfied on account of the failure of the crops for several years in succession, and this operated in retarding emigration. By direction of the commissioners, he made treaties with the Indians for lands, prepared a map of the country, and employed his utmost exertions to promote trade on the Delaware. On the 30th of December, 1659, aged fifty-six years, Governor Jacob Alricks died at New Amstel. His papers and property were sequestrated by his successor, Governor D’Hinayossa, but Governor-General Stuveysant ordered their release "on pain of disgrace;" bearing testimony that he was "a man of discreet character." Mr. Alricks' wife died January 6, 1658; and both were buried in old Drawyer's church-yard, near Odessa, New Castle county, Delaware. There was no issue.

I. PiETER ALRICKS, a nephew of Jacob Alricks, and whose father is supposed to have been also named Pieter, was sent, in 1658, by the Dutch Government, with instructions for New Netherlands, and, more than probable, with the intention of remaining in the new country. In March, 1659, we find him carrying on trade in the "Hore-Kihl." In January, 1660, D'Hinayossa appointed him commander there. On the 6th of September, 1664, New Amsterdam was captured by the English, and Governor-General Stuyvesant expelled. Thirteen days after, Sir Robert Carr appeared on the Delaware, and in a fortnight thereafter took the Dutch forts. The estate of Pieter Alricks was confiscated; but some years afterward the Dutch again obtained possession not only of the banks of the Delaware, but also of Fort Amsterdam, now New York city, and held possession until the English Governor, Andross, arrived, and then the annals inform us: "Nov. 10, 1674, Fort Amsterdam, New York, was this day surrendered to Governor Andross, and all the magistrates in office at the time of the Dutch coming here to be reinstated for the Delaware river, except Pieter Alricks, he having proffered himself to the Dutch at their first coming of his own motion, and acted very violent as their chief officer ever since." Commissary Alricks subsequently swore fidelity to the English, and continued his trade on the South river. In August, 1672, he was appointed bailiff for New Castle, on the Delaware; in October, 1677, commissioned one of its justices, and re-commissioned June 7, 1680, being one of the justices in commission when the Proprietary Government was formed. He was a member of the first Assembly of the Province, 1682 and 1683, and from 1685 to 1689 served as one of the Provincial Councillors. In 1685, William Penn bought out the title of the Indians in a large body of land lying between Philadelphia and Wilmington, extending back from the Delaware river as far as a man "can ride in two days with a horse." The first witness to this Indian deed is Pieter Alricks. He was commissioned one of the justices of the peace for the Lower Counties, April 13, 1690, and again May 2, 1693. On the 2d of September, 1690, he was also appointed a judge of the Provincial Court, serving until 1693. Pieter Alricks died in 1697, aged about sixty-five years. His children according to his will were:

i. Sigfridus; nothing known.
ii. Hermanus; d. in 1707, leaving a wife Mary.
iii. Jacobus; m. and among other children, had Peter-Sigfridus, who m. Susanna Stidham and left a large family.

2. iv. Wessels, (or Weselius;) m. and left issue.

II. Wessels, or Weselius Alricks,3 (Pieter,2 Pieter,1) b. circa 1670, in New Castle county, Delaware; d. there circa 1730. He was very prominent in the affairs of New Castle county, and was sheriff in 1700; he subsequently removed to Philadelphia, and held several important offices under the Proprietary. He m. and left at least four children.

i. Peter.
ii. Sigfridus.
iii. Martha.

3. iv. Hermanus, b. circ 1715; m. Ann West.

III. Hermanus Alricks,4 (Wessels,3 Pieter,2 Pieter,1) b. about 1715 in Philadelphia; d. December 14, 1772, in Carlisle, Cumberland county. He resided some years in his native city, but afterwards settled in Cumberland county. He was chosen the first member of the General Assembly from that county, and was commissioned prothonotary, etc., of Cumberland, and also a justice of the peace. Until his death he was a man of mark and influence in the valley west of the Susquehanna. Hermanus Alricks was twice married, for we find by the Administration book F, p. 322, Philadelphia, that letters of administration were granted to Hermanus Alricks, of Cumberland county, on the estate of Sarah Alricks, June 19, 1750, he being designated as her husband. There was probably no issue. He m. secondly, Ann West, b. 1733, at Clover Hill, near Sligo, Ireland; d. November 21, 1791, in Donegal township, Lancaster county, and is buried in the old church graveyard there. She was the daughter of Francis West, Sen. They had issue:
Mrs. Alricks subsequently married Col. Alexander Lowrey* of Donegal, and by him there was issue (surname Lowrey):

i. Fannie, b. Feb. 1, 1775; m. Samuel Evans.

*ALEXANDER LOWREY, the son of Lazarus Lowrey, was born in the north of Ireland, in December, 1725. His parents, with several elder children, came to America in 1729, and settled in Donegal township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. His father became an Indian trader, which occupation Alexander entered about 1748, in partnership with Joseph Simon of the town of Lancaster, the fur trade with the Indians being at that period quite lucrative. The connection with Mr. Simon, continuing for forty years, was finally closed and settled without a word of difference between them, with large gains resulting, over many and severe losses from Indian depredations on their trains and trading posts. Mr. Lowrey was, from the first, outspoken and ardent for separation from the mother-country. In July, 1774, he was placed on the Committee of Correspondence for Lancaster, and was a member of the Provincial Conference held in Philadelphia on the 15th of that month; and of that convened in Carpenters’ Hall, 18th of June, 1776; and of the Convention of the 15th of July following. He was chosen to the Assembly in 1775, and, with the exception of two or three years, served as a member of that body almost uninterruptly until 1789. In May, 1777, he was appointed one of the commissioners to procure blankets for the army. In 1776 he commanded the Third Battalion of the Lancaster County Associates, and was in active service in the Jerseys during that year. As senior colonel, he commanded the Lancaster county militia at the battle of the Brandywine. At the close of the Revolution, Colonel Lowrey retired to his fine farm adjoining Marietta. Under the Constitution of 1789-90, he was commissioned by Governor Mifflin justice of the peace, an office he held until his death, which occurred on the 31st of January, 1806. His remains lie interred in Donegal church graveyard. Colonel Lowrey was a remarkable man in many respects, and his life an eventful one, whether considered in his long career in the Indian trade, a patriot of the Revolution, or the many years in which he gave his time and means to the service of his country. He

V. James Alricks, (Hermanus, Wessels, Pieter, Pieter,') b. December 2, 1769, at Carlisle, Penn’a; d. October 28, 1833, at Harrisburg, Pa. He received a good education in the schools of the day, and was brought up to a mercantile life. In 1791-92, he was engaged in business in May Town, Lancaster county, and in 1814 he removed with his family from Lost Creek Valley to Harrisburg. He was a man of extensive reading, passionately fond of books, and he regarded an honest man, of fine education and refined manners, as the most remarkable object on the face of the earth. After his father's death, he was raised on a farm in Donegal, Lancaster county, and used to say that at that period no one could get an education for want of teachers. While lamenting his own lack of education, he was remarkably well acquainted with history, ancient and modern, and with geography. He was likewise quite familiar with the writings of Shakespeare, Goldsmith, Burns, Campbell, etc. While living in the prime of life on the Juniata, he was delighted to meet and converse with such men as the Rev. Matthew Brown, the first Dr. Watson, of Bedford, Judge Jonathan Walker, (the father of Robert J. Walker,) William R. Smith, etc. On March 10, 1821, he was appointed clerk of the orphans' court and quarter sessions, serving until January 17, 1824. He subsequently served as one of the magistrates of the borough. Mr. Alricks,
m. July 21, 1796, at Harrisburg, by Rev. N. R. Snowden, Martha Hamilton, b. August 5, 1776; d. March 16, 1830; daughter of John Hamilton and Margaret Alexander. They had issue:

i. Ann-West, b. 1799; d. August, 1828; m. Samuel Thompson, of Juniata county, Penn’a; no issue.

ii. Margaret, d. September 19, 1856.

6. iii. Hermanus, b. August 22, 1803; m. Mary Elder Kerr.

VI. HERMANUS ALRICKS, (James, Hermanus, Wessels, Pieter, Pieter,) b. August 22, 1803, at Oakland Mills, Lost Creek Valley, now Juniata county, Penn’a; d. January 28, 1874, at Harrisburg, Penn’a. His father removed to Harrisburg in 1814, and there the son grew to man’s estate, thereafter one of the most respected citizens, receiving his education in the Harrisburg Academy. He read law in the office of Thomas Elder, Esq., and was admitted to the Dauphin county bar. He quickly obtained a lucrative business before the courts, became one of the prominent men at the bar, and at his death the oldest practitioner in Dauphin county. He was averse to holding office. The only one of prominence held by him was that of deputy attorney-general in 1829. He frequently served his fellow-citizens in municipal office, was a popular man with them, and his counsel sought upon all questions of importance. In addressing a jury, his manner was quiet, his statement clearly presented, and argument logical. His rule was to undertake no cause unless his client was able to demonstrate the justness of his case. His early training in the practice of the orphans’ and register’s courts soon gave him a lucrative business in that branch of his profession, where clear, concise expositions are of far more weight than the stirring eloquence of the quarter sessions. He was an excellent, precise, real-estate lawyer. No one was a better reference upon questions of town or county history. His personal acquaintance was extensive, and his taste ran in acquiring the family traditions of the earliest settlers. His fund of information was at the service of his friends, always pleasantly and accurately retold, with the authority for each fact or anecdote, and he abounded with many curious and fascinating ones. His presence was imposing, quite six feet in stature, large frame, erect, and neatly clad, quite "like a lawyer of the olden time." Mr. Alricks m., in 1831, MARY ELDEN KERR, b. May 5, 1809; d. March 30, 1857, at Harrisburg; daughter of Rev. William Kerr,* of Donegal, and his wife, Mary Wilson. They had issue:

i. James, d. s. p.
ii. Mary-Wilson, m. James McCormick, jr. (See McCormick record.)
iii. Jane, d. s. p.
v. Hamilton; a civil engineer; m. Mary Barr.
vi. Herman, d. s. p.

*The Rev. William Kerr was born in Bart township, Lancaster county, Penn'a, October 18, 1776. His father dying early, he was left to the tender care of a pious mother. After some years spent in the schools of the neighborhood, he was sent to Jefferson College, Cannonsburg, where he was graduated. For some years thereafter, he was principal of an academy at Wilmington, Delaware. He subsequently placed himself under the care of the Presbytery of New Castle, and was shortly after ordained by that body. He preached in Harrisburg about the years 1805-6, and upon the resignation of the Rev. Mr. McFarquhar was sent to supply the pulpit of the Old Donegal church. In the fall of 1808, the congregation at Columbia made application to Mr. Kerr for part of his time. It was not, however, until the year following that he assented to give them a portion of his ministerial labors. He continued to be the stated supply there until the first Sunday in January, 1814, when he preached his farewell sermon. Mr. Kerr also preached at Marietta in addition to his charge at Donegal. He died at that town on the 22d of September, 1821, aged forty-five years, and is interred in Old Donegal church graveyard. The Rev. Mr. Kerr married Mary Elder, daughter of James Wilson and Mary Elder, of Derry. b. 1788; d. February 22, 1850, at Harrisburg, and their children were Mary-E., m. Hermanus Alricks, of Harrisburg; William M., J.-Wallace, James-Wilson and Martha, m. Dr. Edward L. Orth, of Harrisburg. As a minister, there were few who stood higher in the estimation of his brethren in the Presbytery than the Rev. William Kerr.
VII. HAMiLTON ALRICKS, b. June 1, 1806, at Oakland Mills, in Lost Creek valley, now Juniata county, Pa.; d. July 16, 1893, at Harrisburg, Pa. He was educated at the Harrisburg Academy at such a period as those who passed through it, from 1816 until 1826, know that the whole land was stricken with poverty, and collegiate education out of the question. Indeed, out of the thirty students of the classics at the academy, and among them the son of Governor Findlay, but one is remembered who went, or could afford to go, to college. With such an education as the school could afford, and the study of history on top of it, Hamilton Alricks commenced reading law with Samuel Douglas, Esq., afterward Attorney-General, and was admitted to practice in 1828. During his professional career of half a century, Mr. Alricks has been engaged, at every term of the court, in the trial of many of the most important civil and criminal cases, and in numerous cases in the Supreme Court, as the reports will show from 2d Watts to the last volume of Outerbridge. In the outset of his practice, he was engaged as counsel by Mr. Gest, in the case of Gest vs. Espy, 2d Watts, 266, after Thomas Elder, Esq., a senior member of the bar, had abandoned the case, upon a verdict being found for defendant. Mr. Alricks removed the case to the Supreme Court, where he succeeded in reversing the judgment. On one occasion, in arguing a case in the Supreme Court, and while reading an authority, he was abruptly interrupted by Judge Huston, saying, "That is not the law." "But," said Mr. Alricks, "I am citing from the opinion of the court." Judge Huston sharply responded: "I don't care; no judge ever declared such to be the law." To which Mr. Alricks further replied: "I have been reading the opinion of the court delivered by your Honor." "Then, said the judge, "the reporter took me down wrong; let me see the book." After examining it for some time, the judge closed it with the remark, "After all, I don't think this authority has any application to the case in hearing."

Proceedings were commenced before the Legislature of Pennsylvania, about the year 1845, and testimony taken for the purpose of framing
articles of impeachment against the Hon. William N. Irvine, judge of the York and Adams judicial district, and the only counsel of the respondent was Mr. Alricks, who conducted the defense with such skill and ability that the committee refused to report articles. The then State Treasurer and Auditor General on several occasions selected Mr. Alricks to argue cases on the part of the Commonwealth involving questions of Constitutional law. His argument before the Supreme Court of the United States, in Butler et al., late Canal Commissioners of Pennsylvania, vs. the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 10th Howard, United States Supreme Court Reports, 402, was not only well received by the profession as a sound exposition of the law as to what constitutes a contract within the meaning of the Tenth Section of the First Article of the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting a State from passing any law impairing the obligation of contracts, but also an able definition of the power of the Legislature to create and abolish offices, to impose taxes, etc.; and will remain a lasting memorial of his research, industry, and ability as a lawyer. He was one year a member of the Legislature; was a member of the Chicago Convention in 1864, which nominated General McClellan for President, and the series of resolutions drawn up and offered in the convention by him abounded in patriotic sentiments, evincing marked ability. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention for the revision of the Constitution of the State, in 1872–3, that held its sessions first in Harrisburg and subsequently in Philadelphia, and acted on the committees on Cities and Charters, and on Religious and Charitable Corporations and Societies. Mr. Alricks married, December 28, 1837, Caroline Bull, daughter of Rev. Levi Bull, D. D., of Chester county, Pa., a son of Colonel Thomas Bull, of Revolutionary fame. She was born August 3, 1811; d. February 28, 1885, at Harrisburg, Pa. They had issue:

VIII. Jane Alricks,6 (James,5 Hermanus,4 Wessels,3 Pieter,2 Pieter,1) b. 1808 at Oakland Mills, in Lost Creek Valley, now Juniata county, Pa.; d. December 21, 1891, at Harrisburg; m. Ovid Frazer Johnson, b. in the year 1807, in the Valley of Wyoming, near the town of Wilkes-Barre; d. February, 1854, in Washington, D. C. He was descended from some of the early settlers of that historic locality. His paternal grandfather, the Rev. Jacob Johnson, was a superior linguist and man of rich education and culture; a graduate of Yale College, he took his degree as early as 1740, with distinguished honor. In 1778, he was called from his home in Connecticut to reside in Wilkes-Barre. After that terrible event, the massacre of Wyoming, he assisted Col. Dennison with his advice and influence, in protecting the inhabitants that remained, and the original articles of capitulation were in the proper handwriting of Mr. Johnson. In quite a lengthy biography written of him in the year 1836, by the historian of Wyoming, Charles Miner, appears this: "When the Revolutionary war broke out, Mr. Johnson took his stand early and firmly in behalf of freedom. And through the whole contest he rendered the utmost service in his power, which, from his learning, talents, and the respect he commanded, was very considerable. A son born while the animated discussions preceding the Revolution were going on, and the elder Pitt was thundering his anathemas against ministers for their tyrannous conduct to the Colonies, Mr. Johnson named Jehoiada Pitt. . . Jehoiada is sometime since deceased, but a son of his with hereditary genius is winning his way to enviable distinction." The latter is the subject of this sketch. At the close of his early education, in which he had as school and class-mates many who afterwards rose to positions of eminence and distinction, he commenced the study of the law with John N. Conyngham, of Wilkes-Barre, afterwards Judge Conyngham. He was duly admitted to the bar and entered into the practice of the law at that place. In 1833, he removed to Harrisburg, and there married. In 1839, at the early age of thirty-two years, his talent secured for him the appointment as attorney general of Pennsylvania. In 1842, his term of office having expired, he was re-appointed and served through a second term until 1845. As an orator, Mr. Johnson was brilliant; as a lawyer, he had superior abilities, and somewhat of a wide-known reputation, being frequently employed to try cases in different States of the Union. It may be here remarked that, in addition to Mr. Johnson's legal ability, he had a high reputation as a political writer. He was the author of the celebrated "Governor's Letters," published during the administration of Governor Ritner, and which purported to give the ludicrous side to the political characters then figuring in the politics of the State. Jane Alricks and Ovid Frazer Johnson had issue (surname Johnson):

iii. Martha-Alricks.
iv. Ovid-Frazer, b. February 10, 1842; a lawyer, now practicing his profession in Philadelphia.
I. James Anderson, b. November 17, 1678, in Scotland; was educated at Edinburgh, under the care of Principal Stirling. He was ordained by Irvine Presbytery, November 17, 1708, with a view to his settlement in Virginia. He sailed March 6, 1709, and arrived in the Rappahannock on the 22d of April following; but the condition of affairs not being favorable for introducing any other religion than that of the established Church of England in that Colony, he came northward, and was received by the Presbytery September 20 following. He settled at New Castle, where he was installed pastor in 1713. In 1714, out of regard for the desolate condition of the people in Kent county, he was directed to supply them monthly on a Sabbath, and also to spend a Sabbath at Cedar Creek, in Sussex. In 1716, receiving a call from the first church organization of New York city, he went there and labored with his accustomed zeal and energy; but his strict Presbyterianism and rigid Scottish habits and doctrines were distasteful to the people, and his charge, consequently, did not prove to be happy or comfortable, and he desired a removal. He was called, September 24, 1726, to Donegal, on the Susquehanna, and accepted. He was installed the last Wednesday in August, 1727. In September, 1729, he gave every fifth Sabbath to the people on Swatara, and joined the congregation of Derry, thus becoming the first settled pastor over that church, until the call to Rev. William Bertram, in 1732. He died July 16, 1740. In the language of Presbytery, "he was high in esteem for circumspection, diligence, and faithfulness as a Christian minister." His name and fame are associated with the early history of the Presbyterian church in America. He was a man of talent, learning, and piety, a graceful and popular preacher—a leader among men. Mr. Anderson was twice married; m., first, February, 1713, Mistress Suit Gar-LAND, dau. of Sylvester Garland, of the head of Apoquinimy, Delaware, who d. December 24, 1736, and lies buried in Donegal churchyard, where a large flat stone marks the resting-place of herself and her distinguished husband. From a mutilated leaf in the Rev. James Anderson's Bible, (Imprint "Edinburgh, A.D. 1676,"") on which was recorded the family registry, is copied the following imperfect list of births and deaths. In his will he names only James, Susannah and Thomas, but refers to all his children. He left a large estate, including most of the land upon which Marietta now stands, a valuable ferry-right called "Anderson's Ferry," land on the opposite side of the river, together with several slaves:

AWL OF PAXTANG.

I. Jacob Awl, b. August 6, 1727, in the north of Ireland; d. September 26, 1793, in Paxtang township, Dauphin county, Pa. The name should properly be spelled Auld, and the first settler wrote it Aul, which the descendants have changed into Awl. He learned the trade of a tanner. Was a man of means when he came to America, and settled, at an early date, in Paxtang, near his relative, John Harris, of Harris' Ferry, where he took up a large tract of land, which he improved, erected a tannery, and on which he lived to the time of his death. He became a prominent personage in Paxtang, was an ensign and lieutenant in Colonel John Elder's battalion of rangers in the frontier wars from 1756 to 1764, and at the outset of the war for independence, aided, by his counsel and his purse, in organizing the associated battalions of Lancaster county, which did such effective service in the Revolution. When the new county of Dauphin was erected, Mr. Awl was appointed one of the commissioners in the act relating thereto, and John Harris afterwards appointed him one of the trustees or commissioners for the public grounds ceded by him, at the laying out of the town of Harrisburg, for public uses. He was a representative man, influential and potential in the county, yet preferred domestic retirement to the struggle for office, and when he was offered the nomination for representative in the General Assembly, he positively declined. Over his grave, in the burial ground of old Paxtang church, is a stone with this inscription:

Sacred to the memory

of

JACOB AWL

Who departed this life Sept. 26th, 1793
Aged 66 years 1 month and 20 Days
This stone is placed over his remains by his relict and children as a testimony of their Regard for his many virtues.

So shall you join him on that happy shore
Where death or grief will visit you no more.

*Timothy Green, son of Robert Green, was born about 1733, on the "Monaday," Hanover township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; d. February 27, 1812, at Dauphin Pa., and is buried in the old graveyard there. His father, of Scotch ancestry, came from the north of Ireland about 1725, locating near the Kitticottinny mountains on Manada creek. The first record we have of the son is subsequent to Braddock's defeat, when the frontier settlers were threatened with extermination by the marauding savages. Timothy Green assisted in organizing a company, and for at least seven years was chiefly in active service in protecting the settlers from the fury of the blood-thirsty Indians. In the Bouquet expedition he commanded a company of Provincial troops. For his service at this time, the over township, now Dauphin county, Pa.; d. in 1820, at Chillicothe, O., where he was among the earliest settlers. We have the following account of that wedding:

"On the morning of the wedding, the party accompanying Mr. Green came riding 'down the lane' to Mr. Awl's house, all in the style of the day. The groom wore his hat with three black plumes, long stockings, knee-breeches, buckles, &c. It was a gay affair for those days. On the Sunday following, all went to the Rev. Mr. Elder's church. Jenny Awl, sister of Proprietaries granted him large tracts of land in Buffalo valley and on Bald Eagle creek. At the outset of the Revolution, Captain Green became an earnest advocate for independence, and the Hanover resolutions of June 4, 1774, passed unanimously by the meeting of which he was chairman, show that he was intensely patriotic. He was one of the Committee of Safety of the Province, which met November 22, 1774, in Lancaster, and issued hand-bills to the import that "agreeable to the resolves and recommendations of the American Continental Congress, that the freeholders and others qualified to vote for representatives in Assembly choose, by ballot, sixty persons for a Committee of Observation, to observe the conduct of all persons towards the actions of the General Congress; the committee, when elected, to divide the country into districts and appoint members of the committee to superintend each district, and any six so appointed to be a quorum, etc." Election was held on Thursday, 16th December, 1774, and, among others, Timothy Green was elected from Hanover. This body of men were in correspondence with Joseph Reed, Charles Thompson, George Clymer, John Benezet, Samuel Meredith, Thomas Mifflin, etc., of Philadelphia, and others. They met at Lancaster again, April 27, 1775, when notice was taken of General Gage's attack upon the inhabitants of Massachusetts Bay, and a general meeting called for the 1st of May, at Lancaster. Upon the erection of the county of Dauphin, Colonel Green was the oldest justice of the peace in commission, and, under the Constitution of 1776, he was presiding justice of the courts. He continued therein until, under the Constitution of 1790, which required the presiding judge "to be learned in the law," Judge Atlee was appointed. After his retirement, Judge Green returned to his quiet farm at the mouth of Stony creek, where he had erected a mill and other improvements. He was thrice married: m. first, in 1760, Effy Finney Robinson, daughter of James and Jean Finney, and widow of Thomas Robinson. She d. December 28, 1765, and is buried in old Hanover church graveyard. They had issue:

The father of Robert Sterret settled in Hanover about 1741, but subsequently removed to the old homestead in Donegal. The Sterrets however, became allied to many of the Hanover families, and the history of this family would elucidate much of the history of the others. Robert Sterret and Rosanna Green removed to the Kishacoquillas valley, where some of their descendants yet reside. They had a large family, seven sons and six daughters.

In 1841, he was elected a director of the United States Bank, at Philadelphia. In 1850, he organized the Harrisburg gas company, and, as first president, constructed the works, which have been a success from the beginning. In 1853, on the solicitation of citizens of Huntingdon, he became the president of the Huntingdon and Broad Top railroad; put the road under contract, and in course of construction, which insured its early completion. In 1854, he projected and organized the Harrisburg and Hamburg railroad company, and was engaged in this improvement, as president, with engineers in the field, at the time of his death. Possessing public confidence, he was the recipient of many honorable and responsible trusts. He was a man of large physique—impressive and handsome appearance—popular manners, with untiring energy and ambition, and unselfish to a fault. His life was a useful one, and his works live after him. William

VI. Joseph Barnett,3 (John,2 John,1) b. 1726, in County
    Derry, Ireland. He married in 1749, Elizabeth Graham.
    Concerning him and his family, we have these incidents of pioneer life in 1757, communicated in a letter by the late Samuel Barnett, of Springfield, O. "Mr. Barnett's son William, with a son of Mr. Mackey, a neighbor, of Hanover, were taken prisoners by a band of prowling Indians. The parents of the boys tried in vain to raise a party to pursue the savages, and rescue the captives, but could obtain no assistance. Mr. Barnett and Mr. Mackey, however, armed with rifles, mounted their horses and went in pursuit. They came up to the Indians, several in number, between Hugh Grimes' (Graham's) farm and Beaver creek, likely, not more than three-fourths of a mile from Hugh Grimes, immediately in the neighborhood of where Thomas Bell, Squire Wilson, and grandfather Allen lived. They fired on the Indians, who returned it briskly. Mr. Barnett and Mr. Mackey were near together. Mackey in putting down the bullet in his rifle observed that he run down the bullet hard to kill dead. By this time the savages were close on them,
and just as Mackey presented his gun a bullet passed through his arm, and his rifle fell to the ground. At this moment an Indian near by picked up his gun and shot Mackey dead.
By this time Mr. Barnett had received a shot in his arm and one in the shoulder. This bullet he carried with him to the grave.
So Mr. Barnett retreated. By this time he reached a little east of where Mr. Grimes lived, and between his house and Robert Elder's, he got faint from loss of blood, when he dismounted and hid himself in a field of buckwheat. I give the names of Grimes and Elder, as they occupied these farms in my day.
Grandfather Barnett resided east of these farms. His horse ran home, and the neighborhood turned out. As they passed along the road Mr. Barnett got out of his hiding and resting place. He had but little use of his arm the rest of his days.
I will continue the history of the captive boys. The Indians had left their encampment before they were sighted by the party who went in pursuit. They passed up Beaver creek toward the mountain, then through an orchard once owned by Andrew Kerr, afterwards Samuel Finney. The Indians told the boys to take plenty of apples as they were the last they would get for a length of time. They then took to the mountain, and this was the last of the boys. Tedious days, nights, and years passed away. For nearly seven years a kind Providence, who hears and answers the prayers of his children, watched over the boys. It appears the Indians had their cabins on or near the head waters of the Allegheny river, on a branch called something like Miskelitas. At length an Indian trader discovered the party who held William Barnett and Mackey.
They, with the boys, had been several timesacross what is now the State of Ohio to Detroit. This Indian trader was employed by Grandfather Barnett to procure William, for which he was to give the trader an elegant horse. * * * * It was with some difficulty the traders got him away, William not being very willing to leave at first, and the squaw who had him to part with him. At last he succeeded, and was returning with him. Mr. Barnett went to Carlisle, on his way to meet them, and stopped at the same tavern which his son had reached the early part of the evening. The boy was tired traveling, and had retired. When this became known Mr. Barnett desired to see him, but the landlord at first objected; but a fond father, who had not beheld his son for seven years, who had been the subject of anxious thoughts and prayers, now answered, could not be put off until the morrow. The son awakened from his sleep knew his father and embraced him. As may be readily supposed there was great rejoicing in Hanover, not only in the houses of the Barnetts, but all through the country, at the return of the captive. Young Mackey was sold to a Frenchman at Detroit, afterwards taken to England, and at the outset of the war of the Revolution came over with the British troops, and subsequently reached his home in old Hanover. His mother was yet living; but she insisted that her son was killed by the Indians, and would not own him. He assured her that he was her boy; when, at length, she told him that if he was her son he had a scar on his leg from a cut, that she would know. This was shown her, when she acknowledged that he was her long-lost child." There is extant an extended account of this thrilling episode in frontier life; but Mr. Barnett's simple story differs little in detail thereof. Joseph Barnett, d. *Among the earliest of the Scotch-Irish emigrants was Samuel Sherer. He came from near Londonderry, Ireland, to the Province of Pennsylvania in the autumn of 1734, and located in Paxtang township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county. He was a man of means, was well educated, and became quite prominent in the Scotch-Irish settlement. His son, Joseph Sherer, was about four years old when his parents came to America. He secured a fair English education and was brought up to the life of a frontiersman, that of a farmer. During the French and Indian war, he served as a non-commissioned

When the thunders of the Revolution reverberated along the valley of the Susquehanna, with all his Scotch-Irish and German neighbors, he entered into the contest for liberty. In 1775 and 1776, he was in command of one of the companies of Colonel James Burd's battalion of Associators, a roll of which is to be found in the recent history of Dauphin county. Colonel Burd's farm at Tinian joined the Sherer homestead, and the two patriots were intimate friends. Captain Sherer was a member of the Committee of Observation for the county of Lancaster, and was chosen by the vote of the people a member of the first Constitutional Convention of the State of Pennsylvania, which met at Philadelphia, on the 15th of July, 1776. While in attendance on this representative body of the Revolutionary era, he took ill, returned home, and died on the 1st or 2d of December following. XXI. Samuel Barnett, (James, Joseph, John, John,) b. September 30, 1790, in Hanover; d. June 10, 1869, in Clark county, Ohio. Mr. Barnett was, in many respects, a remarkable man. At the age of seventy-seven, near the close of a long life of industry, his memory was most excellent, and to him are we indebted for what is here given relative to the Barnettts—as also what is in our possession concerning the Allens, Sawyers, and other Hanover families. It is to be regretted that the information that he could have given as to the olden time was not taken down by some faithful chronicler, and thus preserved unto us. He removed to Ohio in 1817, locating in Warren county. He subsequently removed to Butler county, and, in 1841, to Springfield, Ohio, where he spent the remainder of his days. In 1844 he was sent as a missionary, in company with his brother-in-law Dr. Paulding, to Asia Minor. In 1854 he was transferred to Cairo, Egypt, to begin a mission, which proved to be one of the most prosperous in the world. After an absence of seventeen years, he returned to America, married Margaret Lees Duff, daughter of Rev. Jackson Duff, of Wood county, Ohio. In the fall of 1865 he returned to his work in Egypt, where he labored for eight years more when he returned to the United States for the benefit of his shattered health-

i. Isaac, b., January 28, 1828, at Erie, Pa.; d. June 4, 1881, at Eaton Rapids, Mich. Mr. Moorhead received a good academic education. Entered mercantile pursuits for a few years, but relinquished the same owing to his delicate constitution, and accepted the appointment of conductor on the Lake Shore railway, a position he filled acceptably almost twenty-eight years, with the exception of several winters, when, obtaining leave of absence, he served as transcribing clerk of the House of Representatives at Harrisburg. In the early part of the year 1880 he was appointed postmaster at Erie. Accommodating, attentive and polite, the appointment was an exceedingly popular one. The relinquishment of an active railroad life for the humdrum cares of official position, no doubt, was the primary cause of the disease of which Mr. Moorhead died, at Eaton Rapids, Mich., whither he had gone for the restoration of his health. In historic research he was deeply interested, and the citizens of Erie are indebted to him for many pleasant reminiscences of their city, over the signature of "John Ashbough." He wrote for the Centennial year a historical review of Erie county, and was the au-

Author of the Erie county sketch in Egle's History of Pennsylvania, which contains the best and most lucid account of Perry's battle on Lake Erie extant. In the performance of a great duty, he prepared a genealogy of his own and allied families, and few, in our State, possessed as full knowledge as he of the French occupation in western Pennsylvania. He had made this subject one of study and research, and it was confidently expected that, in due time, the results of his investigation would have been given to us. May 7, 1839, at Steubenville, O.; m., at Harrisburg, Pa., February 5, 1790, by Rev. John Elder, Samuel Hill, b. about 1765, in England, son of Arundel and Charlotte Hill. His ancestors belonged to one of the representative families of that country. He received a good English and classical education, and learned the trade of clock and watchmaker in London. He came to Pennsylvania about 1785, and shortly afterward established himself in business at Harrisburg, Pa. He was a skilled and ingenious workman. He was quite prominent in the early affairs of the new town, and was among the first to jump into the water to tear down the obnoxious mill-dam in the Paxtang creek, in 1795. He was a volunteer in Captain Reitzell’s company on the expedition westward in 1794; and twice visited England on matters connected with his father’s estate, then considered quite an undertaking; and what particular distinguished his last visit was his reception by his fellow-citizens of Harrisburg on his return, which was an ovation, showing what a strong hold he had upon his friends in America. He died very suddenly, while sitting in his chair on Monday evening, November 6, 1809, aged forty-four years, and the Oracle of Dauphin speaks of his loss to the community as “irreparable.” They had issue (surname Hill):

Down, Ireland; d. May 14, 1841, in Orange township, Ashland county, O.; m., June 5, 1798, by Reverend N. Snowden, JOHN DOWNEY, b., in 1765, at Germantown, Pa. He was a son of Captain John Downey and Sarah, his wife. The elder Downey was an officer of the Revolution, under General Lacey, and was inhumanly massacred at the battle of the Crooked Billet.
The son received a classical education in the old academy at Germantown, and, in 1793, located at Harrisburg, where he opened a Latin and grammar school. At this period, in a letter to Governor Thomas Mifflin, he proposed a "Plan of Education," remarkably foreshadowing the present common-school system, and which has placed him in the front rank of early American educators. He was for many years a justice of the peace, and served as town-clerk for a long time. He was the first cashier of the Harrisburg bank, largely instrumental in securing the erection of the bridge over the Susquehanna, and one of the corporators of the Harrisburg and Middletown Beatty Family.

Turnpike company; was a member of the Legislature in 1817-18, and filled other positions of honor and profit. He died at Harrisburg, on the 21st of July, 1827, and the Oracle speaks of him as "a useful magistrate and a pious man." He wrote much for the press, and a series of articles published in the Dauphin Guardian, entitled "Simon Easy Papers," were from his pen, sparkling with wit. They are worth a permanent setting, as a valuable contribution to literature. Their daughter, Ellen Downey, b. 1811, at Harrisburg; d. 1869, at Springfield, O.; m. April 5, 1831, Hon. Daniel Kilgore, of Steubenville, O., and had issue.

XVIII. George Beatty,⁵ (James,⁴ William,⁵ James,⁶ John,¹) b. January 4, 1781, at Ballykeel-Ednagonnel, county Down, Ireland. He received a good early education in the Latin-school of John Downey, and learned the watch and clock-making with his brother-in-law, Samuel Hill, whose clocks are more or less celebrated to this day. In 1808, Mr. Beatty established himself in business, which he continued uninterruptedly for upwards of forty years. He was an ingenious mechanician, and constructed several clocks of peculiar and rare invention. In 1814 he was orderly-sergeant of Captain Thomas Walker's company, the Harrisburg Volunteers, which marched to the defense of the city of Baltimore. Mr. Beatty in early life took a prominent part in local affairs, and, as a consequence, was frequently solicited to become a candidate for office, but he almost invariably declined. He, nevertheless, served a term as director of the poor, and also as county auditor. He was elected a burgess of the borough, and was a member of the town-council several years, and, while serving in the latter capacity, was one of the prime movers in the efforts to supply the borough with water. Had his suggestions, however, been carried out, the water-works and reservoir would have been located above the present city limits. Mr. Beatty retired from a successful business life about 1850. He died at Harrisburg, on the 10th of March, 1862, aged eighty-one years, and is interred in the Harrisburg cemetery. He was an active, enterprising, and upright Christian gentleman. His alma mater subsequently conferred upon him the degree of A. M. Mr. Waugh was licensed to preach by the Baltimore Conference; but accepted the position of Professor of Mathematics and English Literature in the Baltimore Female College, an institution then in the full tide of success. In 1853, the trustees of the Pennsylvania Female College at Harrisburg secured him as principal of that institution, in which position he labored faithfully and successfully to the day of his death. It was not alone in the capacity of teacher that Mr. Waugh devoted his energies and talents; but his labors were varied, incessant, faithful, in season and out of season,

BEVERLY WAUGH, b. October 25, 1789, in Fairfax county, Va.; d. February 9, 1858, in the city of Baltimore, Md. He was the son of James Waugh and Henrietta Turley, and received a good classical education. In his twentieth year he was admitted to trial as a traveling minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and, in 1810, had charge of the Greenbrier circuit, Virginia. In 1811, he was ordained a deacon, and in 1813, an elder, and stationed in Baltimore. From that period until 1828, he was in active pastoral life. That year he was elected assistant book-agent, head-quarters in New York city, and in 1822, the principal in that work. In 1826, he was chosen a bishop of the church, and in 1852, became the senior officer of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1857, he presided over six conferences scattered from the Atlantic seaboard to Michigan and Indiana, besides aiding his colleagues in three or four others. During his term of episcopal service, his toil and peril, fatigue and suffering, were very great; but always without complaint. He was a faithful Soldier of the Cross, and universally loved and respected. He was a man of God—a consistent Christian, a devoted minister and scrupulous in the performance of every known duty. I. William Boas, son of Frederick Boas, 1 was born in 1739, in the Canton of Zurich, not far from the city of Berne, Switzerland. He was of the Reformed faith, as "all his fathers were," some of his ancestors being distinguished ministers in the church of Zwingli. William passed through a regular course of scientific and theological training at the University of Halle, after which he, in 1770, came to America under the auspices of the congregations at Berne, but not with the necessary credentials from the Fathers of the Reformed church in Holland, from whom that denomination in this country received its authority. In the Cotal minutes of the Reformed church for the year 1771, mention is made of the fact that he "had been joyfully expected from Europe for several years; that he had now arrived, but that Côtus felt disappointed because he brought no testimonials with him; that they declined, on that account, receiving him." However, the congregation at Reading, Pa., earnestly petitioned Côtus that he might be given them as their pastor, because they had been so long destitute. The Fathers in Holland were very tenacious of their rights, and warned Côtus against acknowledging the Reverend Boas a member, but had the consideration, in 1773, to say: "As Pennsylvania is a free country, we cannot drive him away from his congregation," by whom he was dearly loved. He labored faithfully in the Master's vineyard, and Côtus, in a letter to the Fathers, under date of May, 1777, bestowed the highest praise upon Rev. Mr. Boas, stating "that his congregation in Reading is in a most flourishing condition, through his industry and zeal; that he is at this time a learned and expert laborer in the kingdom of Christ; that he is beloved, not only in Reading, but by all the members of Côtus." About the year 1781, he resigned the charge of the Reading church, to which he had been a faithful pastor for ten years. He afterward appears to have had charge of the same congregation at Reading, for in the record-books of the church in Cocalico, Lancaster county, Pa., we find that "the Rev. Mr. Boas, of the Reading congregation, on the 15th of September, 1786, preached the funeral sermon of Reverend John Waldschmid, from Psalm lxxiii. 23, 24." During the Revolution, when every able-bodied man (save those having conscientious scruples) was enlisted in the patriotic cause, the Rev. Mr. Boas served a tour as chaplain to one of the associated battalions of Berks county, namely, that in and around Philadelphia in the summer of 1777. He did not cease his pastoral work until late in life, but was the same devout and earnest minister of the New Testament. He was a good, earnest preacher, had a remarkably strong voice, and nothing could move him from the path of duty. Full of years he d. November 28, 1814, at Reading, Pa., and is there buried. burg, Pa., about the year 1823, to learn blacksmithing, subsequently establishing a foundry, which he successfully carried on until near the close of his life. He was an enterprising citizen, active and influential in the public affairs of the municipinent and zealous. They had issue (surname Jennings):

Krause & Cameron to learn that art, where he continued three years. In 1829 and 1830 he was a mercantile clerk, and afterward went one year to school. The latter part of 1831 he was again in mercantile life, in which he remained until August, 1832, when he entered the post-office at Harrisburg, under James Peacock. In the meantime he studied law under his uncle, David Krause, and was admitted to the Dauphin county bar, August 22, 1837. He opened his law office in 1838, but remained connected with the post-office department until 1843, assisting in the accounts, etc. In that year he entered into law partnership with David Krause, under the firm name of Krause & Boas. In 1845 Mr. Krause was appointed presiding judge of the Montgomery county district, from which time Mr. Boas continued the practice of his profession; he was appointed by Governor Porter aid on his staff, with the rank of colonel, which he held from 1839 to 1845; was school director from 1839 to 1848, being treasurer of the board from 1840 to 1842, and also served in the borough council six years, from 1847 to 1853. Colonel Boas m., February 6, 1871, Sarah Catharine Nolen, dau. of William and Maria H. Nolen, of Harrisburg, Pa.; no issue.

X. WILLIAM WESLEY JENNINGS,⁵ (Elmina-Elizabeth,¹ Frederick,² William,¹ Frederick,¹) b. July 22, 1838, in Harrisburg, Pa.; d. February 28, 1894. He attended the public schools of Harrisburg until his fifteenth year, when he commenced to learn the trade of iron-molder in his father's foundry. From 1860 to 1875 he was engaged in the iron business. During the war of the Rebellion he raised the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, a nine months' regiment, and was in the battles of Fredericksburg and Chancellorville. (For a history of the regiment, see History of Dauphin county, Pa., p. 202.) Shortly after being mustered out of service, the Gettysburg campaign opened, and Colonel Jennings was placed in command of the Twenty-sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia. The following account concerning it we have from Jacobs' "Battle of Gettysburg:" "The Twenty-sixth regiment arrived at Gettysburg on Friday the 26th of June, and by order of Major Haller, although contrary to the earnest remonstrances of Jennings, colonel of the regiment, was sent forward at 10.30 a. m., on the Chambersburg turnpike.
This was a suicidal movement of a handful chiefly of inexperienced men, in the face of a large body of experienced troops. The rebels afterwards laughed at the folly of the order. But, advancing to the distance of about three miles westward, our little band encamped and threw out their pickets. At about 3 p. m., the rebels in force made their appearance, and captured nearly all their pickets, forty in number. Colonel Jennings, who had on several occasions shown himself to be an officer as skillful as he is cool and brave, seeing the trap into which he had been led, immediately, upon sight of the enemy, divided the regiment into three squads, in order to deceive them with the appearance of a large body of infantry. The deception proved so far successful that the rebels did not press them, fearing that a direct attack might prove more serious than a mere skirmish. Jennings' command, however, hastily retreated eastward over the fields and by country roads, occasionally skirmishing with the enemy's cavalry, which was sent in pursuit of them; and after losing one hundred and twenty men of their number near Hunterstown, and zigzagging very frequently, being often within hearing distance of their pursuers, they reached Harrisburg on Sunday the 27th of June, much fatigued, having marched fifty-four out of sixty continuous hours. Too much praise cannot be awarded Colonel Jennings for the skillful manner in which he conducted this retreat and saved the regiment from capture." From 1863 to 1866, Colonel Jennings served as sheriff of the county of Dauphin, and again from 1876 to 1879. At the breaking out of the railroad riots in July, 1877, Colonel Jennings was absent from home, but, hastening to the State capital, he at once assumed control, organized the citizens, and restored peace to the city, seriously threatened with mob violence. His example was favorably commented upon at the time, not only by the newspaper press in general, but by the Governor of the State in his annual message, and was deserving of all praise. Upon the death of Mr. Calder, president of the First National Bank of Harrisburg, in 1880, he was elected to that position, in which he continued until his decease, and also president of the Commonwealth Guarantee Trust and Safe Deposit Company. In 1884, he was chosen a director of the Cumberland Valley Railroad Company.

I. Christian Bomberger,¹ and Maria, his wife, emigrated from Eshelbrun, Baden, Germany, and arrived in Pennsylvania on the 12th day of May, 1722. He took up and settled upon a tract of land in Warwick township, Lancaster county, a portion of which remains in the possession of his descendants to this day. The original patent bears date May 22, 1734, and included 548 acres in the survey. This patent is now in the hands of reverend Christian Bomberger, a preacher of the Mennonite church. The first Christian died prior to 1750, and left, among other children:

2. i. John, b. 1703; m. Mary Bausman.

During the Provincial era, he served as an officer in the Second battalion of the Pennsylvania troops, under General Forbes and Colonel Bouquet. During the Revolution, he was some time in service, but turning his attention to religion, he began to study such theological works as were within his reach. After the peace of 1783, he went into the Western country, and for many years missionated among the Indians in the Northwest. During the war of 1812–14, well advanced in life, he returned to Pennsylvania, and remained with his friends. He died near Harrisburg, Pa., on the 4th of August, 1829, at the age of eighty-five, and was buried in Shearer's burying-ground. The labors of Mr. Bomberger, for many years, were of that self-sacrificing spirit and devotedness which proved that others there were beside the zealous Jesuit and the faithful Moravian whose religious fervor and Christ-like example stand out as shining lights in the galaxy of the followers of the doctrines and teachings of Jesus of Nazareth.

After the death of John Boyd, his widow m. STACY POTTS, concerning whom, as he was a man of mark, we have this information: Thomas Potts, the ancestor of Stacy Potts, was a Quaker, who emigrated from England with his wife and children, in company with Mahlon Stacy and his family, in the ship "Shield," and landed at Burlington, N. J., in the winter of 1678, she being the first ship that went so far up the Delaware. Stacy was a leading man in the Society of Friends and in the government of West Jersey. At Trenton, 1731, Stacy Potts was born. He received a good education, and learned the trade of a tanner, a business which he successfully carried on at least up to the time of the Revolution. Mr. Potts seems to have been a very enterprising and public-spirited citizen. In 1776, besides owning a tannery, he built the steel-works on Front street, Trenton, and after the close of the Revolution was largely interested in the erection of a paper-mill in the same locality. This was prior to the publication of Collins' Bible. In December, 1788, it was advertised by its proprietors, Stacy Potts and John Reynolds, as "now nearly completed." About this period Stacy Potts removed to Harrisburg, Pa. It is difficult to divine what were his motives in leaving his native town, where he was very popular, and with his ample competency, to settle in the then new town on the Susquehanna. His second marriage may, perchance, have had somewhat to do with his removal from Trenton. Going to Harrisburg, he made large purchases of land, and whether it was due to this fact, or his agreeable manner, Stacy Potts became quite prominent; was chosen to the Legislature in 1791 and in 1792. During the mill-dam troubles of 1794–95, Mr. Potts was quite active, and was one of the committee of citizens who were willing to take upon themselves all responsibility accruing by the destruction of the obnoxious dam. He served as burgess of the borough, and was a member of the Town Council. From 1799 to 1803 he again represented Dauphin county in the State Legislature. About the year 1805, he returned to Trenton; subsequently became mayor of that city, an office he held for several years. He died in that city April 28, 1816, in his eighty-fifth year. Mr. Potts was thrice married. We have no knowledge as to his first wife. He married, secondly, Miss Gardiner, of Philadelphia, a Presbyterian lady of superior intelligence. She died at Harrisburg in 1799. His third wife was Mrs. Mary Boyd. Upon the death of Mr. Potts, his widow removed to Harrisburg, where she resided with her son, George W. Boyd, until her death in 1844.

IV. James Cowden,² (Matthew,¹ William,¹) b. June 16, 1737, in Paxtang township, Lancaster, now Dauphin, county, Pa.; d. October 10, 1810, in Paxtang. He was brought up on his father’s farm, enjoying, however, the advantages of that early education of those pioneer times, which, among the Scotch-Irish settlers, was remarkably comprehensive and ample. Apart from this, he was well-grounded in the tenets of the Westminster Confession, which among our pious ancestry formed a part of the instruction given to all. Until the thunders of the Revolution rolled toward the Susquehanna, Mr. Cowden remained on the paternal acres, busily engaged in farming. At the outset, he was a strong advocate for active defensive measures, and in favor of independence. He was one of the leading spirits at the meeting at Middletown, June 9, 1774, of which Colonel James Burd was chairman, and whose action, in conjunction with those of Hanover, nerved the people of Lancaster in their patriotic resolves. Suiting the action to the word, Mr. Cowden and the young men of his neighborhood took measures toward raising a battalion of associators, of which Colonel James Burd was in command, and a company of which was intrusted to Captain Cowden. His company, although not belonging to the Pennsylvania Line, was, nevertheless, in several campaigns, and did faithful service at Fort Washington, in the Jerseys, at Brandywine and Germantown, and in the war on the Northern and Western frontiers, defending them from the attack of the savage Indian and treacherous Tory. At the close of the war, Captain Cowden returned to his farm. Under the Constitution of 1790, he was appointed the justice of the peace for the district of Lower Paxtang, April 10, 1793, which he held up to the time he was commissioned by Governor Thomas Mifflin one of the associate judges of the county of Dauphin, on the 2d of October, 1795,

I. James Dixon, a native of the north of Ireland, of Scotch descent, emigrated to America about 1735. In 1738 he took up a tract of four hundred acres of land on the Swatara in the county of Lancaster, Province of Pennsylvania, at what was named and known for a century as Dixon’s ford. This ford is directly back of the town of Palmyra, in Lebanon county, leading into Hanover township, and upon Smith’s map of the county of Dauphin, in Pennsylvania, published in 1816, it is so marked. “A few years ago,” wrote the late Hermann Alricks, Esq., in 1873, “bridge viewers located a bridge a short distance above the fording where the banks of the creek were high, on land of Mr. Loudermilch, and now it is called Loudermilch’s bridge or ford.” In 1765 James Dixon obtained possession of the Graham tract on Bow creek. We have no record of his death, but presume it was prior to the Revolution. Of his family, we have the record of one—John Dixon, b. about 1724, in Ireland; d. in December, 1780, in Hanover. It is stated that the loss of his eldest son, Robert, who had been killed at Quebec, and the non-return of another favored child, who had “gone to the war,” hastened his death, through grief. The father had been an officer during the Indian wars, and served in several civil positions of honor. His wife, Arabella, died in the autumn of 1775. They had quite a large family, and the authority just quoted states that he had heard his old Scotch-Irish friends say that the Dixons belonged to the best blood of the Revolution. John Dixon and wife, Arabella, had issue:

i. Robert, b. 1749; was sergeant in Captain Matthew Smith’s company of Paxtang, Colonel William Thompson’s battalion of riflemen, in June, 1776; and fell at Quebec, December 31, 1775, “the first martyr of the Revolution,” wrote William Darby.

ii. Isabella, b. 1751; d. May 10, 1824, at Harrisburg; m. James McCormick, who removed to the White Deer valley Dixon of Dixon's Ford.

about 1774. Mr. McCormick enlisting in the patriot army, his wife and children fled from the valley in 1778, owing to the incursions of the Indians on the West Branch. Mr. McCormick never returned from the war, and she remained among her friends at Dixon's ford. They had Hugh, m. Esther Barbara Kumbel, of New York city, (see McCormick record,) and Sarah, m. Robert Sloan, of Hanover.

iii. Richard, b. 1753; d. February, 1848; served as a private in Captain Matthew Smith's company in 1775; but subsequently enlisted for the war, serving until its close; was promoted to quartermaster-sergeant in the Continental Line;* m. Elizabeth ———, and had Anna, and Maria, who m. and went West.

iv. James, b. 1756; d. September 19, 1782; m. Sarah Allen, of Hanover, daughter of William and Elizabeth Allen, and had Allen. James Dixon and his wife are buried in old Hanover churchyard.

2. v. Sankey, b. 1759; m. Anna Cochran.

vi. Mary, b. 1761; m. James Breden, and had Anabella; they removed, in 1786, to Western Pennsylvania, and it is thought died there.

vii. Anna, b. 1763; m. first, Samuel Carson, and had Samuel and Robert; secondly, Duncan Campbell. Mrs. Carson, with her husband, removed in 1786, to Washington county, Pa., where Mrs. Carson shortly after died. Nothing is known of their descendants.

*Robert Strain, a native of Hanover, and until his removal to Ohio, about the commencement of the present century, a member of Rev. Snodgrass' church, under date of "Dayton, Ohio, November 24, 1885," gives this record of Richard Dixon:

"A statement of facts with regard to the services of Richard Dixon in the War of the Revolution.

"Richard Dixon, of Lancaster county, Pa., enlisted in Lancaster, Pa., in the early part of the year 1775, under Matthew Smith, a captain, and remained under Captain Smith until his term of enlistment was ended. He then enlisted for and during the war, and said Dixon was promoted to the rank of quartermaster-sergeant or sergeant-major. I am very distinct in my recollection of Richard Dixon. When he first enlisted I made a shot-pouch for him, and stamped on the cover the motto of 'Liberty or death.' The whole of the four brothers of the Dixon family were in the service until the war was ended, and were of the truest kind of Whigs and Patriots.

ROBERT STRAIN."
viii. John; nothing is known of him; he went into the Revolution, and his father, at the date of writing his will, (1780,) in making a bequest to him, provided for him "if he ever returns." He probably died in battle.

ix. Anabella, m. James Gibson.

II. Sankey Dixon, (John, James,) b. 1759, in Londonderry township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; d. November 11, 1814, at Knoxville, Tenn. He entered the army of the Revolution in June, 1775, and served until the close of the war for Independence, holding the rank of ensign and lieutenant in the Pennsylvania Line; was wounded at Brandywine and Yorktown; settled, in 1786, in the Buffalo valley, where he married; the following year removed to Rockbridge county, Virginia; in the spring of 1800 emigrated to East Tennessee, near Knoxville; m. in 1787, Anna Cochran, b. August 16, 1763, in Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; d. April 12, 1857, at Winchester, Tenn., daughter of George Cochran and Anna Henry. They had issue:

i. John, b. August 14, 1789; d. April 1, 1791, in Rockbridge county, Va.

ii. Matthew-Lyle, b. January 24, 1792, in Rockbridge county, Va.; d. September 30, 1836, at Talladega, Ala.; received a good education and studied medicine; served as surgeon's mate during the war of 1812-14, and afterwards located at Talladega, where he practiced his profession, lived and died, honored and respected.

iii. Robert, b. April 18, 1794; d. October 28, 1834, near Selma, Ala.; became a minister in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

v. Isabella, b. October 19, 1801; d. December 4, 1801.

vi. Mary-Boan, b. December 3, 1804; d. in 1837, at Shelbyville, Tenn.; m. James H. Martin, and had issue, surname Martin,) William-H., Jane, and John.

THE FAMILY OF EGLÉ.

[The family of EGLE, or EGLI, belonged to the ancient German tribe of Langobards (Longbeards), which settled in the northern part of Italy in the fourth or fifth century. The ancestor of the Swiss Egli's emigrated from the Canton Tessino to St. Gall, about the twelfth century. This ancestor had five sons, three of whom settled in the department of the Loire, in France, subsequently, upon the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, removing to the Canton of Zurich, where they became followers of the Swiss reformer, Zwingli, whilst the other two remained in the Canton of St. Gall. A branch of the latter, somewhat later, emigrated to the Canton of Lucerne. The St. Gall and Lucerne families adhered to the Roman Catholic faith, but a friendly relation with the Zurich branch was constantly maintained. It is more than probable that some one of the same family reached England at an early period, for we find that in the seventh year of the reign of Edward I. (A. D. 1278), "Wilhelmus Egle et Custancia uxor," had holdings in the Hundred of Northstowe, county of Cambridge. The English family of Eagle is different in its origin. The orthography of the name is somewhat perplexing, from the fact that Egle is that adopted by the Zurich branch, while that of Egly by those of St. Gall. Although the first settlers in America wrote their name Egle, there are changes in different sections of the Union, chiefly due to ignorance or carelessness. The New York and Central Pennsylvania families write it correctly, Eagle; those in Ohio, Illinois and Arkansas, Eagle; while in the Southern States it is Egley or Eagley, and in California, Ekle, all having the same origin—descendants of Marcus Egle. In the genealogy which is herewith presented, we have given the uniform spelling EGLE. Arms—1 & 2, de sable un leon d'or; 2 & 3, d'argent a l'emauche de trois pisces de gules. Crest—Le leon entre un vel coupe a dexter l'argent sur gules a sinister d'or sur sable. Motto—"Tien la Foy."]

I. Marcus Egle, the first of the name in Pennsylvania, was born about the year 1690, in the Canton of Zurich, Switzerland, not far from the city of Berne, from whence he and his family emigrated to America prior to 1740. He took up a tract of land in Cocalico township, Lancaster county, Pa., where he died in September, 1767, leaving a wife, Elizabeth, and five children. We have the names of only four:

He was quite prominent during the early part of the war for independence, but in the "Great Runaway," left the valley, and was residing after the war at York, Penn'a; subsequently it is thought removing to Baltimore, Md. Nothing further is known.

He seems to have been a person of means; was a storekeeper at New Providence, Philadelphia (subsequently Montgomery) county, Pa., from 1750 to 1763, afterwards, in 1772, residing in Alsace township, Berks county, and, at the time of his death, at Reading.         Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1823: "Poems on several Occasions; To which are annexed Extracts from a journal
        kept by the author during a journey from New Brunswick, N. J., to Montreal and Quebec." They left descendants.

*Elizabeth Mentges, was the daughter of Francis Mentges, sen., a Huguenot, b. in Switzerland, city of Berne. There were two other children, both younger, who came to Pennsylvania; Katharine, d. unm.; and Francis, b. 1740; d. circa, 1800. The latter married but left no issue. Francis Mentges was appointed from Lancaster county a lieutenant in Col. Atlee's Musketry Battalion, March 20, 1776, and on the 22d, adjutant. He was promoted to major of Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Line, October 25, 1776, to rank from October 7, 1776; promoted lieutenant-colonel Fifth Pennsylvania October 9, 1778; and retired January 1, 1783. V. VALENTINE EGLE,³ (Caspar,² Marcus,¹) b. October 27, 1756, in Bern township, Berks county, Pa.; d. November 23, 1820, at Harrisburg, Pa. At the age of nineteen, he enlisted in the war for independence, and served for a time in the First Regiment of the Pennsylvania Line of the Revolution; and subsequently was lieutenant in Eighth Battalion Lancaster county militia. He learned the trade of a hatter, and settled in Harrisburg, Pa., where he established himself in business and was a gentleman universally respected and esteemed. He died suddenly from nervous shock and over-exertion, caused by the complete destruction of his property by fire a few months prior. He m., in 1796, by Rev. Anthony Hautz, pastor of Frieden’s Kirche, in Cumberland county, Pa., ELIZABETH THOMAS, b. May 2, 1772, in Londonderry township, Lancaster, now Lebanon county, Pa.; d. August 5, 1867, at Harrisburg, Pa. She was the daughter of Martin Thomas and Ursula Müller. Said a contemporary, at the time of her decease: “During her long and eventful life she was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She was an eye-witness of many interesting scenes, not only in frontier times, at a period when the red man was occasionally to be seen revisiting his old hunting grounds, but during the struggle for liberty—the war of the Revolution.” She was indeed a remarkable woman, and the incidents of her life were such as few persons have experienced. To her the writer of this record is indebted much, for she was to him more than a mother. She was faithful and loving to him in his orphanage, and her memory is respected and honored as few mothers could be. She was a devoted Christian, and her good deeds are the heritage of her descendants. Valentine Egle and his wife, Elizabeth Thomas, had issue, all born at Harrisburg, Pa.:

XXI. William Henry Egle,5 (John,4 Valentine,3 Caspar,2 Marcus,1) b. September 17, 1830, in Harrisburg, Pa., where he now resides. His father dying when he was four years of age, he went to his paternal grandmother’s, to whom he was indebted for his careful training during childhood and youth. He was educated in the public and private schools of Harrisburg, and at the Harrisburg Military Institute. In 1848 he was tendered the appointment of midshipman in the United States Navy, but declined the honor. At the close of his school life he spent three years in the office of the Pennsylvania Telegraph, during most of which time he was foreman of the establishment. Subsequently he had charge of the State Printing Office. In 1853, having been a frequent correspondent to the monthly magazines, he undertook the editorship of the Literary Companion (which was discontinued at the end of six months), editing at the same time the Daily Times, afterwards merged into one of the other newspaper ventures of Harrisburg. In 1854 he began the study of medicine with Charles C. Bombaugh, M. D., of Harrisburg. During this period he was also assistant teacher in the Boys' school, of the then North ward, afterward becoming mailing clerk in the postoffice. In the fall of 1857 he resigned this position and entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in March, 1859. The same year established himself at Harrisburg, and was in the practice of his profession there, when in 1862, after the battles of Chantilly and the second Bull Run he went to Washington in response to a telegram from General Russell, of Pennsylvania, to assist in the care of the wounded. In September of that year he was commissioned assistant surgeon of the Ninety-sixth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and in the summer of 1863, surgeon in the Forty-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia. At the close of service with the latter command, he resumed his profession, but afterwards accepted the appointment of surgeon of Volunteers by President Lincoln, and was ordered to Camp Nelson, Kentucky, to examine the colored regiments then being raised in that State. He was subsequently detailed with the cavalry battalions under Cols. James Brisbin and James F. Wade, thence ordered to the Department of the James under General Butler, as surgeon of the 116th U. S. C. I., subsequently assigned to the Twenty-fourth Army Corps as executive medical officer during the Appomattox campaign. Upon the return from that duty he was ordered to Texas with General Jackson's Division, Twenty-fifth Army Corps, as chief medical officer. In December, 1865, he resigned the service and returned home, partly resuming the practice of his profession. For a period of four years he served, by appointment of the President, on the board of medical examiners for pensions; and for twenty years was annually appointed physician to the Dauphin county prison, which position he resigned in March, 1887, when Governor Beaver appointed him State Librarian, the Senate promptly confirming the nomination. So well has he administered this office that Governor Pattison re-commissioned him in 1891, and again in March, 1894. The present effectiveness of the Pennsylvania State Library, now in the front rank of the large libraries of America, largely due to Dr. Egle's management, has been greatly appreciated by students at large. Upon the organization of the National Guard in 1870, Dr. Egle was appointed Surgeon-in-Chief of the Fifth Division with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and subsequently in the consolidation of the commands, transferred to Surgeon of the Eighth Regiment. In 1885 he was commissioned Surgeon-in-Chief of the Third Brigade, which military position he now holds, being the senior medical officer of the National Guard of Pennsylvania. Acquiring an early taste for historical research, during relaxation from professional duties, when he returned from the army, in 1866, he commenced the preparation of his "History of Pennsylvania," published in 1876, of which twelve thousand copies were sold, when a second edition was issued in 1883. Principally among his other historical publications are: Historical Register, 2 vols., (1883–4); History of the County of Dauphin, (1883); History of the County of Lebanon, (1883); Centennial—County of Dauphin and City of Harrisburg, (1886); Pennsylvania Genealogies—Scotch-Irish and German, (1886); Harrisburg-on-the Susquehanna, (1892); Historical Register, 2 vols., (1883–4); Notes and Queries, Historical, Biographical and Genealogical, first and second series, 2 vols., (1878–82); Reprint, 2 vols., (1894–95); third series, 2 vols., (1887–91); fourth series, 2 vols., (1891–95). He was co-editor of the "Pennsylvania Archives," second series, vols. I to XII; editor of the same series, vols. XIII to XIX; and also of the third series now passing through the press. Lafayette College in 1878, conferred upon Dr. Egle the honorary degree of M. A., appreciative of his services in American history. He is a member of the American Historical Association, and has been honored by election as corresponding member of the principal historical societies of the United States, as well as of several learned societies in France and England. He was one of the founders and the first presiding officer of the Pennsylvania-German Society, and by virtue of service as an officer in the War of the Union, a member of the "Military Order of the Loyal Legion," and also a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is likewise a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, of the Sons of the Revolution, and of that of the War of 1812-14. In addition he preserves his membership in the Dauphin County Medical Society, and is an active member of the "Association of Military Surgeons of the United States." He resides at Harrisburg, Pa. Doctor Egle, m. July 24, 1860, at Harrisburg, Pa., by the Reverend Daniel Gans, D. D., of the Reformed church, ELIZA WHITE BEATTY, b. January 5, 1833, at Harrisburg, Pa., daughter of George Beatty and his wife Catharine Shrom. (see Beatty record.) They had issue, all born at Harrisburg, Pa.:

Monday, June 26, 1882, at Harrisburg, Pa. Beverly, at the age of six years, was sent to the school of Miss Sabina Kelker, subsequently the select school of Professor L. H. Gause, and finally to the Harrisburg Academy under the care of Professor Jacob F. Seiler, A. M., continuing there until his eighteenth year. Expressing a wish to study medicine, special courses were given him in chemistry and materia medica, and in the early part of September, 1880, he was sent to Chicago to the care of his relative, Professor S. J. Jones, M. D., of the Chicago Medical College, an advanced medical institution in the West, where the advantages afforded him for pursuing his studies were unsurpassed. Remaining there, with the exception of a few weeks' visit to his home in the spring of 1881, he realized the necessity of the highest education in the profession he had selected for his life-work.
and became a devoted student. His hospital and clinical experience lifted him, as it were, into the front rank of his class, while fellow-students and professors alike admired his mental achievements and his courteous manners. He was the acknowledged leader of the senior class, and a bright future was seemingly before him of position, and honor, and usefulness in the profession. Although completely absorbed in his studies, he was not unmindful of other duties devolving upon him, and his rare social qualities gained him many friends in the city of Chicago. He never swerved in the performance of his mission, and a few weeks before his death he remained by the bedside of a young man near his own age, dying of diphtheria, when others had fled the room. About the 1st of June he complained of a small boil on his left upper lip. Little attention, however, was paid to it, save to lessen the swelling of the face, yet alarming cerebral symptoms soon set in, and, notwithstanding the best medical skill in the country, he breathed his last at 11.30, p. m., on Wednesday, June 21—St. Aloysius’ day—1882. And thus, in the opening years of manhood, with prospects as brilliant as any could possibly desire, he passed from out the circle of loving hearts to the blessed realizations of the life eternal. He was a noble boy, intelligent, manly, upright, loving and dutiful, and it need not be wondered at that his sudden departure from this earthly life caused wounds which time can never fully heal.

March 28, 1772, in Donegal, Ireland; d. September 22, 1840, in Bainbridge, Pa.; came to America, landing at Philadelphia on the 12th of June, 1806, and was in active mercantile life for a period of twenty-five years. He m. April 20, 1792, Margaret Williamson, b. June 5, 1772, in county Monaghan, Ireland; d. March 30, 1844, in Bainbridge, Pa. Their son Robert Henry Jones, received a good education, studied medicine with Doctor David Watson, of Donegal, and graduated from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1830. He commenced the practice of his profession at Bainbridge, in which he continued, very successfully, up to the time of his death. For many years there was no physician in the neighborhood, and his labors were very arduous. Apart from his professional duties, he became interested in various business operations; was a contractor on the old Philadelphia and Columbia railroad, and assisted in laying out the village of Bainbridge. Doctor Jones was highly respected and honored in the community in which he resided, and his memory remains green with many who honored him with the title of "the good doctor." Doctor Jones and his wife, Sarah Morrett Egle, had issue, all b. in Bainbridge, Pa., (surname Jones):

i. Amanda-Egle, b. August 29, 1834; d. January 8, 1899.

ii. Samuel-Jeremiah, b. March 22, 1836. He received a good preliminary education, and, in 1855, entered Dickinson College, from which institution he graduated with distinguished honors in 1857. After his graduation, he commenced the study of medicine under his father, and, in 1858, matriculated in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, taking his degree as M. D. from that institution in 1860. In the same year, he entered the United States Navy as assistant surgeon, was attached to the United States steamer Minnesota—the flag-ship of the Atlantic squadron—which participated in the battle with the Merrimac, upon which steamer he remained for two years, except when absent as Admiral Goldsborough's staff surgeon at the battle of Roanoke Island, and Admiral Rowan's staff surgeon at the battle of Newbern, when he was promoted to the grade of surgeon. Doctor Jones was United States examining surgeon for the appointment of volunteer medical officers during 1863 and 1864, with his head-quarters at Chicago. He was one of the youngest surgeons ever appointed in the United States Navy, being not yet twenty-eight years of age when he received his promotion. When relieved from duty in Chicago, in 1864, he was ordered to New Orleans as surgeon-in-chief of the United States naval hospital at that place, during an epidemic of yellow fever, and as medical purveyor of Admiral Farragut's (blockading) squadron. After the close of the war, he was transferred to the naval hospital at Pensacola, Florida, as surgeon of that hospital, and surgeon of the navy yard at Pensacola. He was also the surgeon of the sloop-of-war Portsmouth, at New Orleans, and of the frigate Sabine, the practice ship for naval apprentices on the Atlantic coast. He continued in the naval service until 1868, when he resigned. In that year he was chosen as a delegate from the American Medical Association to the European Medical Associations, which held meetings at Oxford, Heidelberg, and Dresden. The late Professor Samuel D. Gross, with Dr. Goodman, of Philadelphia, and Doctor Baker, of New York, were his associates. He was also, at the same time, commissioned by Governor Geary, of Pennsylvania, to investigate and report upon sanitary matters abroad, in the interest of that State. Upon his return from Europe, he located at Chicago, and commenced a general practice, and was appointed president of the Chicago board of examining surgeons for United States pensions. In 1870, he was appointed professor of ophthalmology and otology in the Chicago Medical College, a chair which had just been established. His studies had been, partly by the natural trend of his mind and partly by circumstances, directed to diseases of the eye and ear, and the call to this chair in the Chicago Medical College determined his life-work. He has held this chair ever since, and after establishing the eye and ear department of St. Luke's Hospital, was appointed attending surgeon of that department, and has held the post for sixteen years. He also established the eye and ear department of Mercy Hospital and of the South Side Dispensary, and was their attending surgeon for ten years. He was also connected, as attending surgeon, with the Illinois Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary, a State institution, located in Chicago. In 1880, Doctor Jones was elected permanent secretary of the Illinois State Medical Society, to succeed Doctor N. S. Davis, who had held the position for twenty years. He is an active member of that society, of the American Medical Association, American Academy of Medicine, the American Ophthalmological and Otological societies, and has been thrice a member of the International Medical Congress; and to these bodies, and to the American Journal of Medical Sciences, and other medical journals, his contributions to the literature of his profession have been chiefly made. A partial list of some of his valuable monographs, in which are condensed the knowledge and discoveries of centuries, and his own addition to that knowledge and those discoveries in his favorite branch of study, are herewith given: "The Present State of Ophthalmology," was delivered before the Illinois Medical Association, in May, 1879. "The Present State of Otology," "A Report on Otology," "Iritis: some of Its Dangers," and "Affections of the Lachrymal Apparatus," were also delivered before the Illinois Medical Society. "Strabismus: Its Nature and Effect," was contributed to the Chicago Medical Gazette, of January 5, 1880. "On the Introduction of Liquids into the Eustachian Tube and Middle Ear," was delivered before the American Medical Association, at New York, in June, 1880, and "Modifications of the Methods of Treating Chronic non-Suppurative Inflammation of the Eustachian Tube and Middle Ear," was delivered before the International Medical Congress, in 1876. In 1884, his alma mater, Dickinson College, at its one hundred and first annual commencement, conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws, in recognition of his valuable services in medical and surgical science.

In the autumn following he was elected second lieutenant and in the spring of 1862 captain of his company. In 1863 he was promoted to major of the regiment. By direction of the Confederate Congress, early in 1865, Reynolds' brigade of Arkansas troops to which his command was attached, was consolidated into one regiment, the First regiment of Arkansas mounted riflemen, dismounted, of which he was commissioned lieutenant colonel. including Peach Tree Creek in front of Atlanta, where he was wounded. He was also in the battles of Franklin, Nashville and Bentonville, N. C., and many others of less importance. He was made a prisoner at the battle of Murfreesboro', and for several months was in Camp Chase and Fort Delaware prisons. On his return to Arkansas in 1865 he found his home had been broken up by the ravages of war: but with his indomitable energy built himself a cabin, and in a few years found himself comfortably fixed, and prominent among the successful farmers of Arkansas. In 1870 he was ordained to the ministry by the Missionary Baptist church, and for fourteen years was president of the Arkansas Baptist State convention and chairman of its Executive Board. In 1872 Col. Eagle was elected to the State Legislature, and in the called session of 1874 was chosen by that body a member of the board to adjust the claims growing out of the Brooks-Baxter war. He was a member of the convention which framed the present constitution of Arkansas, and represented his county in the Legislature in 1877 and 1885, in the last session being chosen speaker. In 1888 he was nominated for Governor and elected by a good majority; and in 1890 renominated and elected for the second term. Governor Eagle resides at Little Rock. He m. subsequently studied divinity, and in 1732, was licensed to preach the gospel. Four or five years later, the son followed the footsteps of his parents and friends, and came to America. Coming as a regularly licensed minister, he was received by New Castle Presbytery, having brought credentials to that body, afterward to Donegal Presbytery, on the 5th of October, 1737. Paxtang congregation having separated from that of Derry in 1735, and Rev. Mr. Bertram adhering to the latter, left that of Paxtang vacant, and they were unanimous in giving Rev. John Elder a call. This he accepted on the 12th of April, 1738, and on the 22d of November following he was ordained and installed, the Rev. Samuel Black presiding. The early years of Mr. Elder's ministry were not those of ease; for in the second year the Whitfield excitement took a wide spread over the Presbyterian Church. He preached against this religious furore, or the "great revival," as it was termed, and for this he was accused to the Presbytery of propagating "false doctrine." That body cleared him, however, in December, 1740; "but a separation was made," says Webster, "and the conjunct Presbyters answered the supplications sent to them the next summer, by sending Campbell and Rowland to those who forsook him. He signed the protest. His support being reduced, he took charge of the 'Old Side' portion of the Derry congregation." Following closely upon these ecclesiastical troubles came the French and Indian war. Associations were formed throughout the Province of Pennsylvania for the defense of the frontiers, and the congregations of Mr. Elder were prompt to embody themselves. Their minister became their leader—their captain—and they were trained as scouts. He superintended the discipline of his men, and his mounted rangers became widely known as the "Paxtang Boys." During two summers, at least, every man who attended Paxtang church carried his rifle with him, and their minister took his. Subsequently, he was advanced to the dignity of colonel by the Provincial authorities, the date of his commission being July 11, 1763. He had command of the block-houses and stockades from Easton to the Susquehanna. The Governor, in tendering this appointment, expressly stated that nothing more would be expected of him than the general oversight. "His justification," says Webster, "lies in the crisis of affairs . . . Bay at York, Steele at Conecocheague, and Griffith at New Castle, with Burton and Thompson, the church missionaries, at Carlisle, headed companies, and were actively engaged." During the latter part of the summer of 1763, many murders were committed in Paxtang, culminating in the destruction of the Indians on Conestoga Manor and at Lancaster. Although the men composing the company of Paxtang men who exterminated the murderous savages referred to belonged to his obedient and faithful rangers, it has never been proved that the Rev. Mr. Elder had previous knowledge of the plot formed, although the Quaker pamphleteers of the day charged him with aiding and abetting the destruction of the Indians. When the deed was done, and the Quaker authorities were determined to proceed to extreme lengths with the participants, and denounced the frontiersmen

as "riotous and murderous Irish Presbyterians," he took sides with the border inhabitants, and sought to condone the deed.
His letters published in connection with the history of that transaction prove him to have been a man judicious, firm and decided. During the controversy which ensued, he was the author of one of the pamphlets: "Letter from a Gentleman in one of the Black Counties to a Friend in Philadelphia." He was relieved from his command by the Governor of the Province, who directed that Major Asher Clayton take charge of the military establishment. Peace, however, was restored —not only in civil affairs, but in the church. The union of the synods brought the Rev. John Elder into the same Presbytery with Messrs. John Roan, Robert Smith, and George Duffield, they being at first in a minority, but rapidly settling the vacancies with New Side men. By the leave of synod,
the Rev. Mr. Elder joined the Second Philadelphia Presbytery
May 19, 1768, and on the formation of the General Assembly, became a member of Carlisle Presbytery. At the time the British army overran New Jersey, driving before them the fragments of our discouraged, naked, and half-starved troops,
and without any previous arrangement, the Rev. Mr. Elder went on Sunday, as usual, to Paxtang church. The hour arrived for church-service, when, instead of a sermon, he began a short and hasty prayer to the Throne of Grace; then called upon the patriotism of all effective men present, and exhorted them to aid in support of liberty’s cause and the defense of the country. In less than thirty minutes a company of volunteers was formed. Colonel Robert Elder, the parson’s eldest son, was chosen captain. They marched next day, though in winter.

His son John, at sixteen years, was among the first. His son Joshua, sub-lieutenant of Lancaster county, could not quit the service he was employed in, but sent a substitute. Until his death, for a period of fifty-six years, he continued the faithful minister of the congregations over which he had been placed in the prime of his youthful vigor, passing the age not generally allotted to man—that of fourscore and six years. His death was deeply lamented far and wide. Not one of all those who had welcomed him to his early field of labor survived him.

Charles Miner, the historian of Wyoming, gives this opinion of Rev. John Elder: “I am greatly struck with the evidences of learning, talent, and spirit displayed by him. He was, beyond doubt, the most extraordinary man of Eastern Pennsylvania. I hope some one may draw up a full memoir of his life, and a narrative, well digested, of his times. . . . He was a very extraordinary man, of most extensive influence, full of activity and enterprise, learned, pious, and a ready writer. I take him to have been of the old Cameronian blood. Had his lot been cast in New England, he would have been a leader of the Puritans.” He had, with one who well remembered the old minister, “a good and very handsome face. His features were regular—no one prominent—good complexion, with blue eyes . . . He was a portly, long, straight man, over six feet in height, large frame and body, with rather heavy legs . . . He did not talk broad Scotch, but spoke much as we do now, yet grammatically.” His remains quietly repose amid the scenes of his earthly labors, in the burying-ground of old Paxtang church, by the side of those who loved and revered him. Over his dust a marble slab bears the inscription dictated by his friend and neighbor, William Maclay, first

With his Scotch-Irish neighbors, he entered heartily into the contest for independence, and throughout the war of the Revolution was in the field or engaged in organizing the associates, of which he was colonel, succeeding Colonel Burd in the command of the companies raised in Paxtang. At the close of the conflict, he continued his occupation of farming, avoiding public office, preferring the quiet of domestic life. Colonel Elder m. MARY J. THOMPSON, of Derry; b. At the commencement of the Revolution, although a youth of eighteen, he was enrolled among the associators, and was an ensign in Colonel Burd’s battalion. On the 18th of April, 1780, he was appointed deputy surveyor, and for several years filled that position. He was elected sheriff of the county of Dauphin in 1794, serving from the 19th of November, that year, until October 17, 1787. Like the majority of persons who have filled that responsible office in this locality, he came out of it the poorer. Captain Elder m. December 16, 1778, Elizabeth Awl, b. XIII. Thomas Elder. (John, Robert, i) b. January 30, 1767; d. April 29, 1853, in Harrisburg, Pa. He received a good English and classical education, especially under Joseph Hutchinson, a celebrated teacher in his day. He subsequently attended the academy at Philadelphia, where he graduated. Studied law with General John A. Hanna, and was admitted to the Dauphin county bar at the August term, 1791. He at once began the practice of a profession in which he became distinguished, and which he followed with great success for upward of forty years, and "was eminent as a safe and sagacious counselor, a laborious and indefatigable lawyer."

During the Whiskey Insurrection, he volunteered as a private in Captain Dentzel's company, which marched westward, preferring the ranks to that of a commissioned office, which his company offered him. He subsequently held the office of lieutenant colonel of the militia, and was frequently designated by the title of colonel. As a citizen in the early years of the borough of Harrisburg, Mr. Elder possessed public spirit and enterprise in advance of his contemporaries generally. He was the prominent and leading spirit in organizing a company to erect the Harrisburg bridge, the first constructed over the Susquehanna, and for many years the longest in the Union. Upon the permanent organization, he was unanimously elected the president, which office he held by annual re-election of the directors, until his resignation in June, 1846. He was chosen president of the Harrisburg Bank in June, 1816, which office he held until his death. Governor Hiester appointed him Attorney General of the Commonwealth, a position he filled with marked ability from December 20, 1820, to December 18, 1823, but he ever after positively refused to accept office, although he took deep and active interest for many years in the political affairs of the State and Nation. He was blessed with a physical constitution which enabled him to accomplish an extraordinary amount of labor without diminishing the elasticity of his spirits.
or the vigor of his mind. He lived to the advanced age of over eighty-six years. Mr. Elder was twice married; m., first, March 23, 1799, Catharine Cox, d. June 12, 1810; dau. of Colonel Cornelius Cox, of Estherton, Pa. They had issue:

He graduated at Yale College, and after completing his law studies at the celebrated law school under Judge Reeves, at Litchfield, Conn., he came to Harrisburg, and continued his studies under Thomas Elder, and was subsequently admitted to the bar at the December term, 1808. He was commissioned deputy attorney general for the county of Dauphin, January 13, 1809, serving until 1812, and represented Dauphin county in the Legislature from 1812 to 1814. He was appointed, by Governor Snyder, president judge of that judicial district, July 3, 1815. In 1814, he accompanied the volunteers to Baltimore, as an aid to General Forster. On the 30th of December, 1816, he resigned to accept the position of Attorney General of the State, serving to 1819. In June, 1821, he removed to Lancaster, resuming the practice of his profession. He was the anti-Masonic candidate for Vice-President of the United States in 1832. "Mr. Ellmaker," says Mr. Harris, in his "Reminiscences," "was reported to be a good lawyer, and his addresses to the jury, when at the bar, were clear, distinct, and argumentative." ix. James, b. May 9, 1786, in Westmoreland county, Pa. His father removed to the State of Kentucky when James was in his fourth year. His thirst for knowledge was from his childhood insatiable, and his means being limited, he began, while yet in his teens, teaching during a portion of each year, to pay for the instruction received in the Transylvania University, Lexington, where he graduated at the age of twenty-one. The following year he was invited to Cumberland, Md., to take charge of a classical academy at that place, then newly endowed by the Legislature. His zeal for instructing the young was such that he soon made it a well-known institution, to which students came from every part of the country. In the meantime he studied law, went to Bedford, Pa., and was admitted to the bar there, subsequently going to Xenia, Ohio, whither his father had previously removed, where he practiced law four years. His profession did not seem to accord with the literary and scientific tendencies of his mind, and he accepted, in 1817, a call to the classical department of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, and that city became his home for twenty years. During this period he published several pamphlets reviewing and rejecting the theories of storms and currents which prevailed, and these attracted the attention of the scientists of America. Professor Espy, having formed his own theory, brought it practically to the test of many storms. In 1841 he published his great work, "The Philosophy of Storms." Prior to its publication in this form, the new theory had caused a sensation in the principal cities of England and France, and Professor Espy was invited to visit Europe and compare his results with those which had been reached by Redfield, Forbes, Pouillet, Fournet, and others. He accordingly visited Europe, and in September, 1840, the British Association appointed a day to entertain the professor's statement which was made in the presence of Professor Forbes, Mr. Redfield, Sir John Herschel, Sir David Brewster, and other eminent naturalists. The discussion which followed was one of the most interesting ever reported in the journals of the association. In the Academy of Sciences at Paris, the interest was equally great, and a committee, consisting of Arago and Pouillet, was appointed to report upon Espy's observations and theory. They were satisfied of the importance of the theory at once, and so reported. It was in the debate which took place in the Academy at this time that Arago said, "France has its Cuvier, England its Newton, America its Espy." On his return from this satisfactory visit, Professor Espy was appointed corresponding member of the Smithsonian Institution. In 1843 he was employed by the War Department, in the Washington Observatory, to prosecute his investigations and collate the reports from the different observers throughout the country. Several quarto volumes of this matter were published by the department. The remainder of his life was spent at the National capital, although his vacation days were enjoyed at Harrisburg, amid the society of endeared friends. On the 17th of January, 1860, while on a visit to Cincinnati, Professor Espy was stricken with paralysis, from which he died on the 24th of the same month. His remains rest in the Espy burial lot in the Harrisburg cemetery. He married, at the age of thirty-seven, MARGARET POLLARD, of Cumberland, Maryland, born September 28, 1795, whose maiden name, for some fancied reason, he assumed, and was ever afterward known as James Pollard Espy. She died May 30, 1850, and is buried by the side of her husband at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. They left no issue.

In 1834 he established the coach-making business on an extensive scale at Harrisburg, Pa., and continued it with success until his entire establishment was destroyed by fire June 15, 1865. He did not resume it. He built at his shop the first eight-wheel passenger car which ran on the Pennsylvania railroad between Columbia and Philadelphia, also the first on the Williamsport and Elmira railroad, taking it up the canal on a flat boat. He was appointed notary public in 1861, and held the office until his death, for years doing the business of the Harrisburg National Bank in this official capacity. He was deservedly honored in his adopted city as an upright and enterprising citizen, a man of intelligence and high moral character, and in the Presbyterian Church, of which he was a life-long member, he was one of its elders for twenty years. XX. JAMES FLEMING,3 (Samuel,2 Robert,1) b. June 25, 1810, in Hanover township, Washington county, Pa.; d. January 30, 1875, in Harrisburg, Pa. In 1812 his parents removed to Hanover township, Dauphin county, Pa., where his early years were passed. His boyhood was marked by a laudable ambition to excel in his studies, and the influence of his mother in this direction had its good effect, not only during his youth, but throughout his life. Thrown upon his own resources, at the age of eighteen, he resolved to educate himself by alternately acting as teacher and pupil, and pursued this course for seven years, thereby becoming conversant with the higher mathematics, the ancient languages, and French. Much of his time was passed in the States of Kentucky and Ohio. About 1835 he commenced the study of medicine, and graduated at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in March, 1838. For four years he practiced his profession, but finding the duties too arduous for his slender constitution, his attention was drawn to the science of dental surgery, then comparatively in its infancy. Observing the necessity for good operators in this field, he went to Philadelphia and acquired a thorough knowledge of that specialty. Returning to Harrisburg, he met with deserved and well-marked success. During the remainder of his life he was a frequent contributor to both medical and dental journals, and occasionally to the newspaper press. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Association of Dental Surgeons and of the American Society, and one of the original advocates of the establishment of a dental college at Philadelphia, in which he was subsequently tendered a professorship, but declined. He was twice the recipient of the honorary degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. He was a director of the Harrisburg National Bank, president of the board of school-directors, and an elder of the First Presbyterian church there. Dr. Fleming married, June, 1852, Jennette Street, daughter of Col. Thaddeus Street and Martha Davenport Reynolds, of Cheshire, Conn., a lineal descendant of Rev. John Davenport, the founder of New Haven. Her maternal grandmother, Martha Davenport, was a descendant of Oliver Wolcott, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. She resides in Germantown, Pa. mathematics. In 1838 he began the editing of a newspaper at Harrisburg, at the same time reporting the proceedings of the Legislature for several of the Philadelphia journals. In 1839 he commenced the study of the law with William McClure, admitted to the Dauphin county bar at the November term, 1841, and was in active practice at the courts until his decease. From 1843 he practiced in the Supreme Court of the State. In 1847 he was elected chief clerk of the House of Representatives, and served during the session. In 1854 he was elected district attorney. In 1863 elected to the State Senate, and was Speaker of that body at the closing session of the term. In the various business enterprises of the city of Harrisburg he took a prominent part, and was largely interested in a number of them. Mr. Fleming married, January 1, 1852, SUSAN MOWRY, daughter of Charles Mowry* and Mary Richmond. They had issue:

GALBRAITH OF DONEGAL.

I. The family of Galbraith is of the remotest antiquity—the name being derived from the Celtic. It was in the parish of Baldunoch, county Stirling, that the Galbraiths of Baldunoch, chiefs of the name, had their residence. In Frazer's statistical account of the inhabitants of the Isle of Gigha, the following occurs: "The majority of them are of the names of Galbraith and McNeill, the former reckoned the more ancient. The Galbraiths in the Gaelic language are called Breatannieh, that is Britons, or the children of the Briton, and were once reckoned a great name in Scotland according to the following lines translated from the Gaelic:

"Galbraiths from the Red Tower, Noblest of Scottish surnames."

The first of the name of whom we have any mention is JOHN GALBRAITH, who was the father of the following. He probably died before the emigration of his sons from Ireland to America:

2. i. James, b. 1666; m. Rebecca Chambers.
   ii. John, m. and left issue, but further than this fact we have no knowledge. After his arrival in America he remained several years in Philadelphia. Some of his children settled west of the Susquehanna, in now York or Adams county, and their descendants emigrated to Kentucky.

II. JAMES GALBRAITH, son of John Galbraith, of Scotch parentage, was born, in 1666, in the north of Ireland, from whence he emigrated about the year 1718, settling in Conestoga, afterwards Donegal township, then Chester county, Province of Penna. He was one of the founders of old Derry church, a man of prominence, and the head of a remarkable family. He died August 23, 1744, and is buried in the old graveyard at Derry. His wife was REBECCA CHAMBERS, daughter of Arthur Chambers. Of his children, we have the following:

IV. Andrew Galbraith, (James, John,) b. about 1692, in the North of Ireland; came to America with his father, and settled along the run which has its source at Donegal meeting house, now Lancaster county, Pa., in the year 1718. Upon the organization of the county of Lancaster, he was appointed the first coroner, afterwards, in 1730, one of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas and Quarter Sessions, a position he held six years. In 1732 he and his neighbor, John Wright, were candidates for the General Assembly. At that time none but freeholders were allowed to vote, and the only polling place was the town of Lancaster, where all voters were obliged to go. Mr. Galbraith took no active part in the canvass himself, but his wife mounted her favorite mare, Nelly, and rode out through the Scotch-Irish settlement, and persuaded them to go with her to the county town. She appeared at the court-house leading a procession of mounted men, whom she halted and addressed. The effect was that her husband was triumphantly elected. After his first election he seems to have had no opposition. He took out a patent for two hundred and twelve and one half acres, May 2, 1737; and was one of the first ruling elders of old Donegal church; appointed a justice of the peace in 1730, a position he held until 1747, when he removed west of the Susquehanna; he served several years in the Provincial Assembly, and was one of the most prominent of the pioneer settlers—a safe and trustworthy officer. After the year 1746, when he disposed of his farm, very little is recorded concerning him. Of his children we have only the following:

7. i. John, b. 1717; m. Jennett McCullough.
   ii. Arthur, on the 22d of September, 1766, took up two hundred and fifty acres of land on Shaver's creek.

He took up a tract in now Derry township, Dauphin county, on Spring creek not far from the church glebe, the warrant therefor being granted him the 13th of March, 1737. He became a man of note on the frontiers, and the early provincial records of Pennsylvania contain frequent reference to him; was elected sheriff of the county in October, 1742; for many years was one of the justices for the county of Lancaster, and served as an officer during the Indian wars of 1755-1763. Towards the Revolutionary period he removed to Cumberland county. He married, April 6, 1734, in Christ church, Phila-
Pennsylvania Genealogies.

*WILLIAM BERTRAM was born, February 2, 1674, in the city of Edinburg, Scotland. He received his education in the university of his native place, studied for the ministry, and was licensed by the Presbytery of Bangor, Ireland, who gave him "ample testimonials of his ordination, ministerial qualifications, and regular Christian conversation." He married about 1706, Jane Gillespie, the widow of Angus McClain, and their children were, John, first, second and third, who d. in infancy; Phebe, d. at age of seventeen, and Elizabeth, m. James Galbraith. During one of those periodical political excitements in the British Isles, the son disappeared, and his parents, under the impression he had come to America, determined, if possible, to ascertain his whereabouts, and came to Pennsylvania about the year 1730. Failing in their search, they decided to remain in this
Galbraith of Donegal.

VIII. Bertram Galbraith,* (James,* James,* John,) b. September 24, 1738, in Derry township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; d. March 9, 1804, in Cumberland county, Pa., while on a visit to his brother, Andrew; buried in Donegal church graveyard. He received the best education the schools of that day afforded, and studied surveying, a profession he followed many years. During the French and Indian wars, Colonel Galbraith served as an officer in a company of rangers formed for the protection of the frontiers. From 1760 to 1775, acting in his professional capacity, he surveyed the greater portion of the lands located in the present counties country, and the following year we find the Rev. Mr. Bertram unanimously received by Donegal Presbytery, which he joined. At the same time George Renick presented him an invitation to settle at Paxtang and Derry, which he accepted. He was installed November 17, 1782, at the meeting-house on Swatara. The congregations then appointed representatives, who executed to Bertram the right and title to the "Indian town tract," situated in Hanover township, on the north side of the Swatara, containing three hundred and fifty acres. On the settlement of Rev. Bertram the congregation in Swatara took the name of Derry, and the upper congregation, on Spring creek, was styled Paxtang. In 1785, Mr. Bertram complained of the "intolerable burden" he was under with the two congregations, and September 13, 1786, he was released from the care of Paxtang. The Rev. William Bertram died on the 2d of May, 1746, aged seventy-two, and his remains are interred in Derry church graveyard, his wife dying prior thereto. He was a faithful minister of the gospel. It may be stated that, through his marriage with Miss Gillespie, his descendants became heirs to a handsome estate in Edinburg. Efforts were made to secure this, but the difficulties inherent upon proving descent, we presume, have been the means of keeping the rightful parties from enjoying this patrimony.

of Dauphin, Perry, and Juniata. He was a member of the provincial convention of January 23, 1775; delegate to the provincial conference of June 18, 1776, and member of the Constitutional convention of July 15, 1776. During that year was elected colonel of one of the Lancaster battalions of associates, and on duty in the Jerseys during the greater portion of that year, serving also as a member of the Assembly 1776–1777. On June 3, 1777, he was appointed county lieutenant; November 8, one of the commissioners to collect clothing for the army; and December 16, appointed by the Assembly to take subscriptions for the Continental loan. He acted as one of the commissioners which met at New Haven, Conn., November 22, 1777, to regulate the prices of commodities in the States. After four years of excessive and exhaustive labor, Colonel Galbraith was compelled to resign the office of county lieutenant, but remained in service as an officer of the militia until the restoration of peace. In 1789, he was appointed one of the commissioners to view the Juniata and Susquehanna, and mark the places where locks or canals were necessary to render these streams navigable. He was appointed deputy surveyor November 4, 1791, and, while acting as such, took up large tracts in Lykens Valley, but, dying before patents were issued to him, his heirs lost them all in the numberless litigations which ensued. XIII. Rebecca Galbraith, (Robert, John, James, John,1) b. 1747, in Donegal township, Lancaster county, Pa.; d. about 1780, in Middleton township, Cumberland county, Pa.; m., June 26, 1765, Ephraim Blaine, b. May 26, 1741, in the north of Ireland; d. February 16, 1804, in Middleton township, Cumberland county, Pa.; son of James and Elizabeth Blaine. The elder Blaine, born of Scotch ancestry, came with his family from the north of Ireland, in the vicinity of Londonderry, to America prior to 1745, and settled in Toboyne township, Cumberland county, Pa. He took up a large tract of land on the south side of the Juniata river, as did each of his children a few years later. He became an influential man on the then frontiers of the Province, and was quite prominent in affairs during the French and Indian wars, as well towards the close of his life in the struggle for independence. He died at his residence in Toboyne township, in July, 1792, well advanced in years, leaving a wife, Elizabeth, and nine children. The eldest of these was Ephraim, who received a classical education at the school of the Rev. Dr. Alison, in Chester county, and was recommended by him for an ensigncy in the provincial service as being "a gentleman of good family." He was appointed commissary sergeant, and, during the Bouquet expedition to the westward in 1763, was connected with the Second Provincial Regiment. From 1771 to 1773 he served as sheriff of Cumberland county. At the outset of the Revolutionary struggle he entered heartily into the contest and assisted in raising a battalion of associators, of which he was commissioned lieutenant colonel, holding the position until his appointment, by the Supreme Executive Council, as county lieutenant of Cumberland, April 5, 1777. This office he resigned in August following, when he entered the commissary department in the Continental establishment. He was commissioned commissary general of purchases, February 19, 1778, a position he held over three years, including one of the most trying periods of the war—the cantonment at Valley Forge. He was a man of large fortune, and the record shows that, during that long and severe winter, with the aid of personal friends, he made an advance of $600,000 for the use of the patriot army. Millions of dollars passed through his hands without a suspicion of his purity and disinterestedness. Owing to his personal sacrifices, however, Col. Blaine's estate became impaired, although his fortune remained ample. While in the service he enjoyed the confidence of Washington and his fellow officers. It was at his home that the first president remained during his week's stay at Carlisle when on the so-called Whiskey Insurrection of 1794. Subsequently Col. Blaine retired to his farm in Middleton township, Cumberland county, where he closed his eminently patriotic and honorable career in his sixty-third year. He was twice married—his second wife being Sarah E. Duncan, widow of John Duncan, of Carlisle, and daughter of Col. Samuel Postlethwaite, and they had one son, Ephraim, who d. s. p. John Bell was the only child of William Bell and his wife, Catharine Park, of Scotch-Irish birth, and who came to America on the same vessel which conveyed John and Charles Wesley, the founders of Methodism. Mrs. Galbraith, for a period of twenty years, was postmistress at Bainbridge, resigning only by reason of her advanced years; being left a widow with a large family, she felt the necessity of bringing into action all her

XVIII. John Galbraith,\(^5\) (John,\(^4\) James,\(^3\) James,\(^2\) John,\(^1\)) b. 1794, in Huntingdon county, Pa.; d. June 15, 1860, in Erie, Pa. His father removing to Butler county, Pa., towards the close of the century, he was brought up on the farm. When a young man he commenced teaching school, and later on began the study of law in the office of Gen. William Ayres, of Butler, and was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-three. He shortly after removed to Franklin, Venango county, Pa., where he rose rapidly both in his profession and in popular esteem. His first official position was as a member of Assembly, to which he was elected three times. He was elected to Congress as a Democrat in 1832, 1834, and 1838. In 1837 he removed to Erie, where he resided until his death. On retiring from Congress in 1840, he practiced law until the fall of 1851, when he was elected president judge for Erie, Crawford, and Warren counties. His death occurred before the expiration of his term of office. Judge Galbraith was one of the foremost men in promoting the various public enterprises that gave the first strong impulse to Erie county. He was the pioneer in projecting the railroad from Erie to the Ohio State line, and aided greatly in reviving the long dormant proposed railroad from Erie to Sunbury, now the Philadelphia and Erie railroad. One of his favorite ideas, the establishment of a prison for youthful offenders exclusively, has been adopted by the State in the institution at Huntingdon and elsewhere. Judge Galbraith married in May, 1822, Amy Ayres, daughter of Rev. Robert Ayres, an Episcopalian minister, long a resident of Brownsville, Fayette county, Pa., and a brother of Gen. William Ayres. Mrs. Galbraith died March 2, 1868, in the city of Philadelphia. They had issue:

22. i. William-Ayres, b. May 9, 1823; m. Fanny Davenport.
   ii. Elizabeth-Ann, m. William S. Lane, of Erie, now a practicing lawyer of Philadelphia.

XIX. Julianna Galbraith, 6 (Andrew, 4 James, 3 James, 2 John, 1) b. about 1786, in Cumberland county, Pa.; d. January 13, 1862, in Philadelphia, at the residence of her son, William Callender Irvine; buried in Laurel Hill cemetery; m. July 26, 1808, William McNeill Irvine, b. about 1778, in Carlisle, Pa.; d. September 25, 1854, in Harrisburg, Pa., and there buried. He was the second son of Gen. William Irvine, of the Revolution, and Anne Callender, daughter of Capt. Robert Callender, of Middlesex, Cumberland county, Pa. He was educated at Dickinson College, where he graduated; subsequently studied law with Judge Thomas Duncan, and was admitted to the Cumberland county bar in 1802. He afterwards located at Harrisburg, and was admitted to the Dauphin county bar at an adjourned court March, 1807. He entered the United States army as captain May 3, 1808, in the regiment of light artillery, and was stationed several years at New Orleans. He left the army, by resignation, about 1811 or 1812, and resumed the practice of law at Sunbury. In July, 1813, he was acting Adjutant General of Pennsylvania, which duties he performed until his appointment by the President of the United States as colonel of the Forty-second regiment, United States infantry, August 4, 1813. At the close of the war he resigned, and located at Harrisburg, and was appointed deputy attorney general for the counties of Dauphin and Northumberland; subsequently commissioned by Gov. Snyder, September 14, 1814, escheator general of the State, which position he filled until the abolition of the office. From 1819 to 1821 he was Adjutant General of Pennsylvania, and had previously, 1818–19, represented the county of Dauphin in the State Legislature, and to him is due the credit of originating the bill authorizing and directing the erection of the capitol building at Harrisburg. From about the year 1826 to 1850, he resided at Gettysburg. In 1847, Gov. Shunk appointed him law judge for the York and Adams district on the expiration of Judge Durkee's term, but he resigned shortly after, owing to some difficulty with the members of the bar and efforts made to impeach him. Col. Irvine was a brilliant pleader, but not a lawyer, and hence his failure in the judicial station to which he had been elevated. He returned to Harrisburg, where he resumed the practice of the law for awhile, and subsequently died there. He was an excellent military officer, a gentleman of fine personal appearance, tall and commanding, of good conversational powers, a delightful companion, and for a period of thirty years was quite prominent and influential in public affairs. They left issue (surname Irvine):

i. Andrew-Galbraith, a physician of prominence in Warren county, Pa., and died a few years since.

ii. William-Callender, formerly in the quartermaster's department, United States army; now resides in Philadelphia.

XX. SARAH W. GALBRAITH, 6 (Andrew, 4 James, 3 James, 2 Robert, 1) b. January 25, 1791; d. May 2, 1853, in Carlisle, Pa.; m. in 1810, JOHN BANNISTER GIBSON, b. November 8, 1780, in Shearman's Valley, now Perry county, Pa.; d. May 2, 1853, in the city of Philadelphia; buried in Carlisle, Pa. He was of Scotch-Irish descent, and the son of Colonel George Gibson, who fell in the defeat of St. Clair, on the 4th of November, 1791. He entered Dickinson College, graduated therefrom, and entered the law office of his kinsman, Thomas Duncan. He was admitted to the Cumberland county bar at the March term, 1803. In 1810 he was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature, and in 1812, appointed president judge for the Eleventh judicial district, composed of the counties of Tioga, Bradford, Susquehanna, and Luzerne. Upon the death of Judge Brackenridge, in 1816, Governor Snyder appointed Judge Gibson associate judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Under the act of Assembly of April 8, 1826, the number of Supreme Court judges was increased from three to five. The year following, Chief Justice Tilghman died, when Judge Gibson succeeded him. In 1838, at the date of the adoption of the then new Constitution of the State, he resigned his office, but was immediately re-appointed by Governor Ritner. In 1851, when the judiciary became elective, his seat became vacant. He, however, was re-elected an associate justice, and discharged the high functions of that office until his death. No greater encomium can be passed upon him than is inscribed upon the marble shaft which marks the place of his repose—from the pen of that late eminent jurist, Jeremiah S. Black.

Returning to Erie, he began the practice of law. He was a delegate to the National Convention at Charleston in 1860, and at Chicago in 1864. GREGG AND CURTIN.

Hon. Andrew Gregg, who served as member and Senator in the councils of the nation from 1791 to 1813, left unfinished a sketch of family history which he commenced preparing in his old age, for "my own satisfaction," as he expresses it, "than for any other reason," which is interesting enough to excite a general regret that he did not complete it. He says:

My parents were both natives of Ireland. My father, whose name was Andrew, was born within the liberties of Londonderry, where the family resided. His father's name was John, and there my knowledge of ancestry in that line stops. I never heard him say from whom his father had descended, but believe, from information derived through other channels, that they were a Scotch family, which migrated to Ireland soon after the accession of William and Mary to the British throne.

My grandfather had three sons, John, David, and Andrew, and one daughter named Rachel. John remained in Ireland engaged in the business of trading, and became wealthy. He had a son called Andrew, who came to this country on business of his father's while I was at the academy in Newark (Delaware), where he called to see me, but I unfortunately happened to be away, and we never met. He returned to Ireland, and on his father's death succeeded him in the management of his business.

David and my father and their sister Rachel all married in Ireland, and all came to this country in the same vessel. They landed at Boston, and traveled into New Hampshire, where David settled and raised a large family, some of whose descendants occupy the very spot where he made his first establishment. I have received letters from three young men, who trace their origin back to that root, and who, I would presume, judging from their letters, are men of considerable promise. One of them, a full namesake of mine, is living as a trader in the northern part of the State of New York or at Montreal. Another, I think, is a clergyman, settled near Salem, Mass., where his father resides, pursuing the business of a chemist. The third became a lawyer, and is now settled at Indianapolis.

I will here just mention two anecdotes calculated to show that family relationship is often discovered by family likeness in branches far removed from the original stock. While in Congress, in 1793 or '94, Mr. Forster, a member of that body from the State of New Hampshire, asked me if I had any relations in that State. On answering in the affirmative, he said he had been led to make the inquiry struck with the imposing likeness betwixt me and Colonel Gregg, who had been the opposing candidate to him at the late election.

On my first introduction to Governor Clinton, when he became Vice President, he asked me whether I was a native of Pennsylvania. I told him I was. He then said there is so striking a resemblance betwixt you and a young man named James Gregg, who was a lieutenant in my brigade during the Revolution, that when I saw you my first impression was that you must be his brother. He was of a New England family then settled in the State of New York. He then related the story, often published in the newspapers, of that officer having been shot, scalped, and left for dead by the Indians, and rescued by a detachment sent by the commanding officer of the garrison,* where he had been stationed, and directed to the place where he lay, by his dog.

My father and Solomon Walker, the husband of their sister, Rachel, not pleased with the prospect of a settlement in New Hampshire, returned to Boston, and shipped for Philadelphia, but landed at Newcastle. I do not recollect the particular year of their arrival, but it was during the administration of Sir William Keith, and most probably in the autumn of 1732.† The winter immediately succeeding their landing they spent at a furnace, belonging to Keith, on Christiana creek, near the town of Newark in the State of Delaware. In the following spring they moved up the country and commenced their settlement at a place called Chestnut Level, near the southern bounds of Lancaster county. In making their location they were both unfortunate, my father doubly so. Not being qualified to judge of land by superficial appearance, their attention was arrested by the flourishing growth of young chestnut timber with which that district was covered, and they concluded that land which produced such thrifty timber was just what they were in pursuit of. In proceeding onwards, the fine fertile valleys of Pequea and Conestoga lay before them, and a five pound warrant, followed up by settlement, would have insured them four hundred acres of land, which, at the present time, would sell from $50 to $100 per acre. In addition to the injudicious selection made by my father, a warrant had issued for it to William Meteer, of a date anterior to his settlement. He continued to reside on it until 1748, when, to avoid a law suit, he sold his claim to his adversary.

During the residence of my father at Chestnut Level, his wife died, leaving him with six children. He became the husband of my mother in somewhat less than two years after the death of his first wife. My mother's maiden name was Jane Scott. Her father, William Scott, lived in the county of Armagh, Ireland, whence he emigrated and settled at Chestnut Level. His family, at the time of his arrival, consisted of himself, wife, two sons, Moses and Thomas, and four daughters, Elizabeth, Margery, Jane, my mother, and Fanny. Moses settled and lived until his death near Newark, Delaware. He was a respectable man, and possessed good standing both in church and State. He raised a large family, the majority of them sons.

Thomas, with his family, migrated to the western part of Virginia. I never heard anything further of them. Elizabeth married David Montgomery; they settled and died near the Rock-fish gap in Virginia. I remember having seen them once on a visit at my father's, and some time after, two of their sons and a daughter paid us a visit. The young men, I well recollect, had a genteel appearance, and the daughter was accounted a beauty, and was nick-named the "Morning Star," on account of the effulgence of her complexion.
Margery was married to Hugh Caldwell. They lived and died in Lancaster county, near McCall's ferry. They had three sons and two daughters. The eldest son, Matthew, was killed at the battle of Long Island; their second son, Samuel, was drowned in the Susquehanna, at McCall's ferry, in a manly attempt to save some of the passengers of a sinking boat. He was in the store when the flat went down, and being a good swimmer, he plunged in and brought one person to the shore, but in the second attempt he failed, some of the drowning persons got hold of him, and all sank together.

Fanny, the youngest sister, was married to Andrew Baxter, who owned a valuable property in Lancaster county, which he imprudently sold, and moved to North Carolina, and there was inhumanly murdered by the Tories during the Revolutionary War. The family, I believe, is extinct, except one son, who lives in Georgia.

My father having sold his claim in Chestnut Level, set out some time in the year 1748 in quest of another residence. He traveled up the Susquehanna river to Swatara creek, and was nearly purchasing two plantations on the south side of the creek where the turnpike road now crosses it. Eighty pounds Pennsylvania currency was the price. He crossed the river where Harrisburg now stands, and traveled up Cumberland Valley. He met a certain Robert Amon, of Chester county, from whom he purchased a warrant for three hundred acres of land, including an improvement on the north side of the Conedoguinet. Here terminated his expeditionary survey. He returned home and made the necessary arrangements for the removal of his family to his new purchase.

On the settlement in Chestnut Level becoming sufficiently numerous, they formed a Presbyterian congregation, built a meeting-house, and invited Rev. Mr. Thom to become their pastor. He accepted their call, and on organizing a session, my father was elected a member of it, and continued so until his removal. Mr. Thom's certificate of this circumstance is somewhere among my papers.

When very young, I have noticed an old-fashioned sword and espontoon laying up stairs among other lumber. I recollect my mother saying that her grandfather had worn the sword in King William's army, at the battle of Boyne, and my father saying he carried the espontoon.

Mr. Gregg's manuscript ends abruptly, but from it, and other data in our possession, we have the following record of the family:

I. John Gregg, of Bally-arnat, near Londonderry, Ireland, was the son of David Gregg, a native of Ayreshire, Scotland. The son was possibly born in Caledonia, and with his father's family migrated to Ireland during the great influx. David Gregg was within the walls of Londonderry during the great siege, 1688-89; and was a captain in Cromwell's army. The children of John Gregg were:

1. John, probably lived and died at Bally-arnat, Ireland. His son, William, emigrated to America, and settled in Paxtang township, Lancaster county, Pa., where he died in July, 1744; by his will he left his estate to his uncle, Andrew Gregg, then in America, to his father, and to his sister, Elizabeth Lang, of Bally-negallah, near Londonderry, Ireland.
2. David, came to America in 1722, and settled in Londonderry, New Hampshire; he married, in 1713, Mary Evans, of Londonderry, Ireland, and their descendants have not only been numerous, but many of them quite prominent in public affairs.
3. Rachel, m. Solomon Walker; they settled in the Cumberland valley.

II. Andrew Gregg, (John, David) b. about 1710; d. November 18, 1789; removed, in 1750, to a farm two miles north-westwardly of Carlisle, Pa., adjoining the glebe farm of Meeting-House Spring, which was within sight of his dwelling; was twice married; name of first wife unknown; by her there was issue:

1. John, m. and left issue.
2. James, served in the army of the Revolution.
3. Rachel.
4. Margaret.
5. Jean.
6. Elizabeth.

III. John Gregg, (Andrew, John, David,) served in the army of the Revolution; m., and had, among other children:

i. Elizabeth; d. October 11, 1801, in Bellefonte, Pa.; m. George McKee.

5. ii. Margery, b. 1776; m. Roland Curtin.

IV. Andrew Gregg, (Andrew, John, David,) b. June 10, 1755, near Carlisle, Pa.; d. May 30, 1835, at Bellefonte, Pa. Andrew Gregg received his early education at Rev. John Steel's Latin School in Carlisle, and completed his education at Newark, Del.; while at the latter place he served several tours in the militia of the Revolution. In 1799 he accepted the tutorship in the college (now university) at Philadelphia, under Drs. Smith and Ewing, where he remained until his removal to Middletown, Pa., where he was engaged for four years in the mercantile business. On his marriage he removed to Lewistown, which was then, 1787, being laid out by General Potter and Major Montgomery, and in 1789 he removed to Penn's Valley, Centre county, two miles east of the "Old Fort." His public services commenced November 8, 1791, as a member of the House of Representatives of the United States, where he remained sixteen years, and in 1807 was chosen United States Senator, which exalted station he occupied until the 3d day of March, 1813. In 1814, he removed to Bellefonte, in order the better to educate his family, and was elected first president of the "Centre Bank." On the 19th of December, 1820, Mr. Gregg was appointed Secretary of the Commonwealth, by Governor Hiest, and on the 15th of May, 1823, nominated for Governor, in opposition to Mr. Shulze. Mr. Gregg had strong party predelictions, but was remarkable for independence, always acting according to the convictions of his conscience, though they differed sometimes... from the views of his party associates. He was, while in office, the representative of the interests of his constituents, not of their limited views of subjects of moment. He was an elegant classical scholar, and had acquired extensive general information which large experience and deep reflection had molded to practical purposes. He was a man of vigorous constitution, preserved intact by a life of temperate habits and industry until he reached the age of four score years. Andrew Gregg m., January 29, 1787, Martha Potter, b. In 1847, General Irvin was nominated by the Whig party for Governor, but was defeated by Francis R. Shunk, and after the campaign resumed business with his accustomed energy. He was one of the best business men of Centre county; kind hearted and benevolent, he saved many a fireside from sheriff’s sale. Educated under Dr. Kirkpatrick, at Milton; he studied law at Carlisle and Bellefonte, and was admitted to the bar in April, 1837. In 1840, took an active part in politics in the Harrison campaign, and in 1844 canvassed the State for Henry Clay. On the 17th of January, 1855, he was appointed Secretary of the Commonwealth by Governor Pollock, and in virtue of his office became Superintendent of the Public Schools. His superintendence has one great landmark, the institution of normal schools. In 1860, he was elected Governor of Pennsylvania. His administration of that office during the war gave him renown throughout the country, and added historic grandeur to the annals of his native Commonwealth. His foresight caused the organization of the Pennsylvania Reserves, and contributed largely to save our National Government, imperilled by the disaster of Bull Run. His ever enduring record, however, in connection with the war, was the establishment of orphans' schools for the children of those who fell in the service of their country. In 1869 he was appointed by President Grant Minister to Russia, and served creditably in that position until August, 1872, when he returned home. He was chosen a delegate-at-large to the State Constitutional Convention of 1873, and represented the Twentieth Pennsylvania district in the Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, and Forty-ninth Congresses. In that body he was chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee. His last term in Congress expired in 1887, when he retired from public life. He was a man of broad culture, extensive reading and thorough familiarity with affairs. Next to Lincoln, Governor Curtin was emphatically the greatest representative man in the nation during the war for the Union, and at his death, the sensation produced was cosmopolitan. He served in the campaign on the Peninsula and covered the movement from Harrison’s Landing to Yorktown in August, 1862. He was promoted brigadier general, U. S. Volunteers, November 29, 1862, continuing with the Army of the Potomac and participating in the actions and battles in which it was engaged, frequently having command of all the cavalry of that department. At Gettysburg his command won a decisive victory known as the “Battle of Rummel’s Farm.” His important services in this decisive battle of the war are recognized by the principal authorities relating to that struggle. From March 26 to April 6, 1864, General Gregg commanded the cavalry corps of the Army of the Potomac, and the second cavalry division from April 6, 1864, to February, 1865, on the Richmond campaign. In several of the long lists of cavalry fights in which he was engaged, General Gregg was in chief command. August 1, 1864, he was made brevet major general, U. S. Volunteers, "for meritorious and distinguished conduct throughout the campaign, especially for reconnaissance on the Charlestown road." He resigned the service February 3, 1865, and General Sheridan, who succeeded him, speaks in his book in the highest terms of General Gregg and of his regret that he should have left the service. In 1874 President Grant appointed him U. S. Consul to Prague. He subsequently resigned and returned to Pennsylvania. In November, 1891, he was elected Auditor General of Pennsylvania for the period of three years. He is commander of the Pennsylvania Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. General Gregg married, October 6, 1862, Ellen F. GREENAWALT OF LEBANON.

I. Philip Lorentz Greenawalt, b. June 10, 1725, in Hasslock, in Boehl, Germany; baptized June 22, 1725, the sponsors being Philip Lorentz Reehm and his wife; d. February 28, 1802, in Lebanon, Pa. His ancestors were of the best known families of his native place. He received a good German and classical education, and came to America in 1749, on the ship "Phœnix," John Mason, master, from Rotterdam, arriving in Philadelphia on the 15th of September. He at first located in Cocalico township, Lancaster county, where he took up one hundred acres of land, February 28, 1754, subsequently removing to Lebanon township. At the outset of the Revolution, he entered heartily into the struggle, and during the entire war was more or less in active service. Upon the organization of the associated battalions, he was commissioned colonel of the first battalion of Lancaster county. He was with Washington, during the Jersey campaign of 1776, at Trenton and Princeton. His battalion was at Brandywine and Germantown, and the conduct of Colonel Greenawalt during the former engagement received the commendation of the commander-in-chief for efficiency and gallantry, especially in the protection of the Continental supplies. He was appointed, May 6, 1778, one of the agents for forfeited estates. At the close of the war he retired to his farm, and, like many more of the brave officers of that struggle for independence, poorer in purse, but conscious of having done his duty to his country. The Assembly of the State appointed him one of the commissioners to take subscriptions for the Continental loan, December 16, 1777, and, during the darkest hour of the struggle, he did effective service in collecting blankets, food, and forage for the half-starved and half-clad army at Valley Forge, and for most of which he was never recompensed. But such was the fate of many who sacrificed their fortunes on the altar of liberty. Colonel Greenawalt reached a good old age, honored, loved and respected by his neighbors and fellow-citizens. He was twice married; first, to the widow Uhland, of Muddy Creek, who died the same year; secondly, in 1755, Maria Margaret Foesser, b. May 10, 1735; d. May 10, 1806, at Lebanon, and with her husband there buried. They had issue:

seven thousand mules, establishing the price ($125 and $117.50) so low as to effect a very great saving to the Government in this department. THE FAMILY OF HAMILTON.

[The original record of John Hamilton (1702-1755) commences with the words, "Colerain, 1612." About this time, county Colerain became "Derry," and the city of "London-derry," in what is known in the State papers as "the settlement of Ulster," in Ireland. Thus the ancestry of this family obtained a portion of the 150,000 acres granted, in 1609, to the English and Scots of Colerain, when England determined to reclaim the north of Ireland by allotting forfeited lands to "servitors." Prior to 1617 these, generally Scots gentry became owners of the soil. Mrs. Judge McLean, born Sarah Bella Chambers Ludlow, of Cincinnati, who married, first, Hon. Jeptha D. Garrard, of Kentucky; secondly, Hon. John McLean, of Ohio, Postmaster General and Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, thus writes of her maternal ancestry: "The maiden name of my grandmother Chambers was Catharine Hamilton. She was the daughter of John Hamilton and Isabella Potter. The coat-of-arms and records of John Hamilton's descent were carefully preserved by the family of my grandfather, General Chambers, for many years after his marriage to Catharine Hamilton, as a cherished relic; but in the infancy of the American Republic, and the essential and consistent training of the distinguished patriot and his accomplished wife, the children were taught to abhor aristocracy or anything like it, the proofs of these honors became playthings, and eventually disappeared." The American history of this family will be learned in what follows. It is not necessary to repeat details of the connection with its Scotch and Irish ancestry.]

I. James Hamilton,¹ b. 1670; d. 1716; and Katharine, his wife, emigrated from Lanarkshire, Scotland, to the "free lands of Ulster," in Ireland, where he became "a considerable land-holder." An only child was born to them on the banks of the Foyle.
II. John Hamilton, (James,') b. January, 1702, ‘‘in Colerain,” Ireland; d. June 5, 1755, and is buried at New London Cross-roads, Chester county, Pa. By will, he left a farm to his daughter, Katharine, and a farm and mill to his son, John, in then Cumberland, now Perry and Juniata counties, Pa. He was a respectable and intelligent man, of means and standing. He resided on a farm in Chester county, Pa., which he purchased in 1742, a short time after his arrival in this country. At the period of his second marriage he was a well-established farmer and miller. The family have preserved no account of the personal appearance of John Hamilton, as he died when his only son John was a lad of six years of age, and his daughter Katharine a young girl of fifteen; but it has been told by her to her children, that he “was stoutly built, of handsome stature, florid complexion, and a Presbyterian.”

His will is dated May 31, 1755, and is recorded in Chester county. He m., first, January 6, 1735, by the Rev. Baptist Boyd, of Aghalow, Isabella Potter, b. 1710; d. Friday, September 25, 1741, on shipboard, and buried at New Castle, September 26, 1741. She was sister of John Potter, who emigrated with John Hamilton to America “on the ship Donegal, arriving at New Castle, on the Delaware, Friday, September 25, 1741.” Mr. Potter was the first sheriff of Cumberland county, and the ancestor of Major General James Potter of the Revolution. They had issue:

i. James, b. Friday, November 27, 1736, d. s. p.

iii. John, b. Tuesday, September 30, 1740; d. Sunday, October 17, 1741, and is buried “at Archibald Beard’s, in Mill Creek Hundred, New Castle county, Del.”

John Hamilton m., secondly, in January, 1748, by Rev. Francis Alison, D.D., of New London, Chester county, Pa., Jane Allen,* b. 1715; d. February 4, 1791, and is buried at Harrisburg. She was the daughter of Robert and Mary

*The looking-glass, a wedding present from Captain Thomas Allen, R. N., to his sister Jane, is in the possession of her descendant, A. Boyd Hamilton, at Harrisburg; as also a silhouette taken in old age.
Allen, granddaughter of Captain Thomas Allen, of "His Majesty's ship Quaker, on the Chesapeake bay in 1684, and commander in the Virginia waters." She was a woman of unusual force of character, and educated with great care. They had issue:

3. 4. John, b. June 17, 1749; m. Margaret Alexander.

Mrs. Hamilton married, a second time, John Mitchell, an Irish gentleman, who died many years before her. By this marriage there was no issue.

III. John Hamilton, (John, James,) b. June 17, 1749, in New London, Chester county, Pa; d. August 28, 1793, at Harrisburg, Pa. Under the will of his father he inherited a "plantation and fulling-mill, bought of James Long, on Shearman creek, in Cumberland county," (Perry county). He was educated principally in the celebrated academy of Rev. Mr. Alison, Chester county. When upon a visit to his patrimony in the Juniata region, he was attracted to the superior excellence of a tract of land called "Fermanagh," now in Juniata county. He purchased it. On the Shearman's creek farm Hugh Alexander was his adjoining neighbor; he became attached to his daughter, and at twenty-three years of age he married her; established himself at "Fermanagh," and erected a large stone mansion. This house is standing. It has been occupied by himself, his son John, and a grandson, Hugh Hamilton. He became, by successful industry, and in right of his mother, Jane Allen Hamilton, of great fortune for his day. The inventory of personal property at his death, in 1793, makes his effects in money, £7,500. At that moment he had active enterprisés of various kinds in full operation—at Lost creek, at Fermanagh, in Shearman's valley, and at Harrisburg. He was one of the original lot-holders at Harrisburg. One of his largest houses was that at the south-east corner of the Market square; another on his lot, Front street and Raspberry alley. In 1792 he employed at his warehouse and stores, on what is now Mulberry street, between Second and Third streets, "as many as fifteen mules, and a far greater number of horses, upon which he sent nails and salt and other merchandise to Pittsburgh." Sending nails to Pittsburgh at this date would be reversing the usual course of trade. He was one of the last of those in the interior who held slaves, a half dozen in all. All but one continued in the family until the death of his widow, not as slaves, but as free laborers on the farms. Mr. Hamilton was a sergeant in Captain Gibson's company, Col. Wilson's battalion of Cumberland county associators in 1776; captain of a company in Colonel Samuel Lyon's battalion in August, 1777; and also captain in Colonel Buchanan's battalion in 1778, and was out in two campaigns, 1776 and 1781. In the family records of the McAlisters, of Lost Creek, Juniata, one of whom married a granddaughter of Captain Hamilton, we have the following narrative: "The American army, December, 1776, shattered, disheartened and decreasing daily, were making precipitate retreat across Jersey into Pennsylvania, before the victorious army of Howe and Cornwallis. In this gloomy hour a meeting of the people was called at the farm of Mr. William Sharon within a couple of miles of Mr. Hugh McAlister's, near the present town of Mexico, to consult and devise measures to reinforce Washington and the army. All the neighbors below the Narrows met. John Hamilton, of Fermanagh, was made chairman. It was unanimously agreed to raise a company of mounted men. All were young men, with younger families, but they did not hesitate. They agreed to march. Hamilton pledged himself to start immediately, then McAlister and Sharon. The former was chosen captain, the latter lieutenants, and in two days they were off, more than eighty strong, riding the first day to the mouth of the Swatara, over snow many inches in depth. They reached camp, on the Pennsylvania side, below Trenton, the day after the Hessians were captured." None but men with their whole hearts in the cause would have made such a dreary march in a most inclement winter, unless thoroughly in earnest. This was the sentiment that actuated all the frontier settlers. In 1793 Harrisburg was scourged by a pestilence resembling yellow fever, an epidemic that then prevailed at Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York. One of its victims was Mr. Hamilton. He m., in December, 1772, MARGARET ALEXANDER, b. March 17, 1754, in Shearman's Valley, Cumberland, now Perry county,

Accordingly the descendants of the young lawyer have his commission "on parchment," issued 21st of June, 1805, signed by "Joshua Elder, Pro'thy, by order of the Court," with the seal of the county attached. In 1808, Mr. Hamilton edited and published The Times, at Lancaster, and upon the removal of the seat of government to Harrisburg, with William Gillmor, The Harrisburg Chronicle, the leading and influential newspaper at the State capital for twenty years. The Chronicle was the first paper in Pennsylvania which gave full and systematic legislative reports. Mr. Hamilton was a vigorous and polished writer, and his editorials and letters models of elegant composition, and much of it has been preserved. For a quarter of a century he wielded considerable political influence through his newspaper. He was an active and enterprising citizen, twice chief burgess of Harrisburg, frequently a member of its council, and highly esteemed in social intercourse. Mr. Hamilton m., January 6, 1807, by Rev. James Snodgrass, of Hanover church, ROSANNA BOYD, b. December 1, 1786, at Harrisburg, Pa.; d. April 17, 1872, at Harrisburg, and there buried; daughter of Adam Boyd and Jeanette MacFarlane.* They had issue:

*Adam Boyd, son of John Boyd and Elizabeth Young, was a native of Northampton county, Pa., born in 1746. His ancestors were of that sturdy and fearless race, who, after winning religious liberty at home, braved the perils of the ocean and a life in the wilds of America, that they might establish civil and religious freedom in the New World. The ancestor of this family was Adam Boyd, an officer of the rank of captain in the army sent by Charles I. to Ireland, on the roll of Scottish division June 5, 1649. As was usual in Scotland, one of the sons, Adam (2) went into the Church; his son Adam (3) was also a Presbyterian clergyman. Early in 1714, his son John (4) and a younger brother, Rev. Adam Boyd, left their native land, Scotland, arriving at Philadelphia in the summer of that year. John m., the year following, Jane Craig, daughter of Thomas Craig, and subsequently became (1728) one of the first emigrants to the “Irish Settlement,” now in Northampton county. His son John, born in Philadelphia in 1716, m., in 1744, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Young, “an Ulster baronet. Their eldest son was Adam Boyd, the subject of this sketch. He learned the trade of a carpenter, and was following that avocation when the War of the Revolution called to arms. When the State of Pennsylvania had formed its little navy for the protection of the ports of Delaware, in 1776, Adam Boyd received his first commission. In 1777 he was honorably discharged. He at once entered the army proper, holding the same rank therein. He was at the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, with two of his brothers, one of whom, John, was killed in the latter engagement. Subsequently, Lieut. Boyd acted as “master of wagons,” with the rank of captain, and as such remained with the army until the surrender of Yorktown. Passing Harris Ferry, in the spring of 1782, to the home of his mother, near Newvillo, Mr. Boyd was struck with the immense advantages offered by the location of the proposed town. He subsequently purchased of the proprietor a lot on the corner of Second and Mulberry streets. In 1784 he became a permanent resident. Under the first charter of Harrisburg in 1791 he was chosen a burgess. In 1792 he was elected treasurer of the county, and held the office until 1806, when he declined a re-election. In 1809 Mr. Boyd was elected a director of the poor, and during his term of office the county poorhouse and mill were erected under his direction. He d. on the 14th of May, 1814; was interred in the Presbyterian graveyard, of which he was an elder. In private truste Mr. Boyd was frequently employed. His correspondence and accounts are precise and methodical, particularly the care with which he managed the estate of the younger William Maclay.
10. i. Adam-Boyd, b. September 17, 1808; m., first, Catharine Louisa Naudain; secondly, Isabella Moore Hays.
   ii. Alexander, b. October 4, 1810; d. June 5, 1873, unm.
11. iii. John, b. October 21, 1815; m. Amanda Jane Thomason.
   He received a good education, and learned the trade of a printer in his father's office, at which he worked until he received the appointment of an assistant engineer on the State Canals, under Col. James Worrall, but soon abandoned both avocations, in order to join a brother in a business, which they successfully prosecuted until his death. He served as a member of the city councils of Harrisburg a longer continuous period than any other citizen has ever done, being elected for about twenty years in succession, generally without serious opposition, although many epochs of great public excitement intervened to produce fierce and close political contests. His neighbors never failed to ascertain his political opinions, yet, whether voting for or against him, they rejoiced to know that he was their representative and the leader of the municipal legislature. In the language of a contemporary, "Mr. Hamilton, in his intercourse with his fellow citizens, was courteous to all, liberal to the poor, positive in opinion, methodical in business, reticent, deliberate, but prompt in judgment." His integrity was never impeached in public or private transactions. He died, unmarried, at Harrisburg, in the same house in which he was born.

His grandfather, Archibald Maclean, born on the west coast of Scotland, in 1716, came to America, and had sons, Moses, William, Samuel, John, James, and Alexander. The father, Moses Maclean, was an active and prominent official in that part of then York county, both before, during, and after the Revolution. The son, Moses, chose the legal profession. After completing his studies, in 1807, he removed to Harrisburg, where he could have risen to a commanding position, if his diversified and unusual ability had been directed to a close attention to his profession. He represented Dauphin county in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. He was well educated, possessed of pure literary taste; was a wit and a poet. In person heavily built, of good stature, and captivating address. In one of the best known of his poetical effusions, the standard hymn commencing, "Come, mourning souls, rejoice, be glad," the closing verse is an appeal so prophetic as to appear exactly fitted to his future—long after it was penned:

"Should persecution's eager shaft,
  Pursue us while we live,
  JESUS, Benevolent, Divine,
  Oh, teach us to 'Forgive.'"

X. Adam Boyd Hamilton, 5 (Hugh, 4 John, 3 John, 2 James, 1) b. September 18, 1808, in Harrisburg, Pa., where he now resides. His school training was under private tutors, and at the Harrisburg Academy. He learned the trade of printer in his father's establishment, the Harrisburg Chronicle. During this training he remembers two of the journeymen of the office, who, afterwards were Chief Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, Messrs. Lewis and Thompson, as well as many others who became men of political and social eminence. As he rose to manhood, he was appointed in the engineer corps of the Juniata division of the State works, under DeWitt Clinton, Jr., as chief. The partner of his father having died, he returned to Harrisburg, and became part owner of the Chronicle. He was chosen when scarcely of voting age, one of the printers to the Legislature. After spending a couple of years in the South, he returned to Harrisburg, and was appointed to a position at Washington city; resigned, taking control of the Pennsylvania Reporter at Harrisburg; subsequently unanimously chosen assistant clerk of the Senate, resigning that, and becoming joint partner in the Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, with Mifflin Parry, Joseph Neal, J. W. Forney, and S. D. Patterson. At the termination of this partnership, he became printer to both houses of Congress, and at the repeal of the contract law, returned to Harrisburg, and for the following nine years was State printer. He has held a number of public positions: that of school director for twelve years; president of the select council; one of the commissioners of 1860, and of a subsequent one in 1870, to make a plot of the city of Harrisburg; president of the State Agricultural Society, and of the Dauphin County Society; a trustee of the Harrisburg Academy; secretary of the board of managers of the Harrisburg Hospital from the first meeting on the subject, in 1872; president of the board of trustees of Derry Presbyterian church, and president of the Dauphin County Historical Society since its formation. September 11, 1883, in Harrisburg, Pa., and there buried; daughter of Dr. Arnold Naudain* and Mary Schee. On the death

* The family record of Hon. Arnold Naudain is interesting. Briefly stated, it is as follows:

Elias Naudain, b. 1657; d. 1694; m. Gahel Arnaud, 1676. Had Elias Naudain, b. 1686; d. 1752; m., in Philadelphia, Lydia Le Roux, 1715, daughter of Pierre Le Roux. Both Naudain and Le Roux were natives of La Tremblade, Saintonge, France. The former received his "denization" in England, November 17, 1681. Both were "naturalized" in London, March 8, 1682.

of Mrs. Hamilton, one who knew her well, writes: "It is no eulogy, but the testimony of all who knew her, that few ex-

Dr. Naudain's first public service was in the war of 1812, when he was surgeon of the Delaware regiment. In 1822 he was nominated for Congress; his opponent was Louis McLane, who was elected. In 1824
and 1828, the political race between these distinguished gentlemen was run again, and with the same result. At each contest the vote was nearly equal. In 1825, Dr. Naudain was elected to the Legislature, a member from New Castle county, sitting with his brother, Elias, who represented Kent county. The former was chosen Speaker, serveing with great acceptability. In 1828, he was commissioned a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, by Governor Charles Polk, the bench consisting of Thomas Clayton, Arnold Naudain, and Jacob Stout.
In 1829, Louis McLane resigned his seat as United States Senator, and in January, 1830, Dr. Naudain was appointed; taking his seat the day he entered the forty-first year of his age. In 1832, while occupying this eminent position, he was nominated for Governor, although earnestly protesting "against a step so impolitic." In 1833, he was again chosen United States Senator. He fully appreciated this mark of high confidence, but his private business was suffering. After deliberate consideration he decided to resign his public position, and resume his professional avocation. He resigned June 17, 1836. In 1841, he again entered public life as a collector of the Port of Wilmington, and superintendent of the Light-houses on the Delaware. He resided in Philadelphia for some years, but in 1857 returned to his native State.

HAY OR HAYS FAMILY.

I. William Hays,¹ a native of Scotland, left that country during the religious persecutions, and settled in the county Tyrone, north of Ireland. He was at the siege of Derry, and endured its trials until relief came, being absent from his family twenty-two months. His wife and two small children were of the number of those who had been "driven to the wall," having been forced to walk with her little ones twenty English miles—the only food, a little oatmeal secreted about her person. A piece of horse hide, purchased during the siege just before relief came for a guinea, was preserved. Of two of their children we have record:

He received the education so freely given by the Scotch-Irish to their children. He came to Harrisburg in 1821, where he resided until 1825, when he went to Philadelphia, returning to the former place in 1828, which from that period became his permanent home. Mr. Hays then began business, which he successfully carried on until a few years prior to his death. He was an earnest, laborious worker in his church (Presbyterian), of which he was one of the ruling elders from 1840 to his decease. For a period of twenty-seven years he was superintendent of the first infant Sunday-school, which he organized in 1828, in Harrisburg, and only relinquished its care when failing health compelled him to give up his charge. The Rev. Dr. Robinson bears this testimony of him: "I remember him as a quiet, modest man and patient sufferer. The little I knew of him endeared him to me. . . . He was a warm friend and lover of the young, kind and genial in his intercourse with them, and an admirable teacher.'" He was a descendant of John Jacob Eyster, a native of the kingdom of Württemberg, Germany, who emigrated to America between 1717 and 1727. Christian Eyster, the great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born in Germany in 1710. The family settled first at Oley, in Berks county; from thence Christian removed, in 1736, to York county. The eldest son of Christian was Elias, born in 1734, who lived until almost a centenarian. His eldest son, George, born June 6, 1757, was a farmer and tanner; a soldier of the Revolution, captured at Fort Washington, and confined for some time on board the British prison-ships. He married, in 1780, Margaret,

iv. George-W., b. December 17, 1807, at Middletown, Pa.; d. October 17, 1878, at Harrisburg, Pa. After passing through the usual course of education, at the age of seventeen he entered the printing office of Simon Cameron, at Harrisburg, where he acquired the knowledge of the art preservative. In 1885 he started the Demo-daughter of Jacob Slagle, and sister of Colonel Henry Slagle, of the Revolution. About 1788, they removed to near Hunterstown, within five miles of Gettysburg, where their son Jacob passed his youth and early manhood. When first enrolled among the militia of Adams county, he was appointed first sergeant, rose to captain, and then major, and, in 1814, appointed by Governor Snyder brigadier general Second brigade, Fifth division, Pennsylvania militia. During the invasion of Maryland by the British that year, he was employed by the Secretary of War (Armstrong) and the Governor of Pennsylvania in distributing and forwarding arms and supplies to the militia who were called into service. In 1811 he removed to Gettysburg and engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1818 he was a candidate for the House of Representatives; defeated by sixty-two votes, while the remainder of the Democratic ticket fell from three hundred to fourteen hundred behind. The year following (1819), he was nominated State Senator for an unexpired term, elected, and subsequently for a full term. Previous to the nomination of Governor Shulze, General Eyster was spoken of as a gubernatorial candidate. In 1822 he removed to Harrisburg, and, in 1824, he resigned his seat in the Senate, and was appointed Deputy Surveyor General, an office he retained for fifteen years. He afterwards became cashier of a bank at Hagerstown, Md., but after a year's absence, returned to Harrisburg, where he passed the remainder of his life. He died there on the 24th of March, 1858. July 14, 1798, at Elizabethtown, Pa.; d. January 26, 1863, at Middletown, Pa. At a proper age he went to Harrisburg, Pa., to learn the mercantile business. Afterwards he engaged in said occupation in that place, and then moved to Middletown, where he continued keeping store till near the close of his life. In the year 1824 he became acquainted with Rev. John Winebrenner, who visited Middletown to preach the Gospel, and under him became converted. At the first opportunity he identified himself with the Church of God, being one of the original members of that denomination in Middletown, where he continued to be among its most active workers until his death. His name appears as a ruling elder in the journal of the Fourth Annual Eldership, held at Middletown, December 25, 1833. He was licensed to preach at the Seventh Annual Eldership which convened at Churchtown, Cumberland county, November 5, 1836. At the time of his death he was a member of the board of publication, and treasurer of the General Eldership as well as treasurer of the East Pennsylvania Eldership. He traveled and labored in the ministry, at protracted and other meetings, "without money and without price," and was an eminently successful revival preacher. His liberality and benevolence were all well known at home, and in all the churches. His warmth of heart and affection made him beloved by all his acquaintances. He was a strict disciplinarian, and a great lover of order. Besides, he carried his religion into his business, being scrupulously truthful and honest in all his dealings, loving justice and hating sin in every form. XI. John Christian Kunkel, (George, Christian, John-Christian,) b. September 18, 1816, in Harrisburg, Pa.; d. October 14, 1870, in Harrisburg, Pa.; he received a liberal scientific and classical education in the schools at Gettysburg and at Jefferson College, Canonsburg, at which latter institution he graduated. After leaving college he entered Carlisle law school under Judge Read, subsequently reading law with James McCormick, and admitted to the Dauphin county bar. After his admission to the bar, he remained several years in the office with Mr. McCormick. He rapidly gained a large practice and a reputation which few members of the bar enjoy. He also became active in politics, and, in the earnest and exciting campaign of 1844, when the young men of the nation had made Henry Clay, then in the zenith of his career, their standard-bearer, the best talent and the most brilliant eloquence that ever graced the American rostrum was called into requisition. Amid all the magnificent display and power of logic, that of the young orator of Pennsylvania, as Mr. Kunkel was recognized, was conspicuous as well for force of argument as for grace of delivery. The same year he was elected to the Legislature, re-elected in 1845, and again in 1850. In 1851 he was elected to the State Senate, and was chosen speaker of that body at the close of the first session of his term. As a legislator Mr. Kunkel was prominent for the wisdom of his counsel as well as for the power of his eloquence. His services at the capital added greatly to his already wide reputation as a pure statesman and accomplished scholar. In 1854 and again in 1856 he was elected to the United States Congress. During the four years he spent in Washington city, he was regarded throughout the country as one of the ablest statesmen at the National capital. In 1858 he retired from public life, and gave his exclusive attention to the practice of his profession, varying the course of his life by occasionally helping a friend in a political canvass, and, wherever he went he was always the favorite of the people. In 1868 he was stricken down with paralysis, and never fully regained his health, dying as previously stated. Perchance, the loss of no member of the Dauphin county bar was so severely felt as that of Mr. Kunkel, if we are to judge of the glowing, sincere, and fraternal tributes paid to his memory by his brethren in the profession at the time of his death. Mr. Kunkel m., October 20, 1857, Elizabeth Crain Rutherford, daughter of Dr. William Wilson Rutherford and Eleanor Crain; she resides at Harrisburg, Pa. They had issue:

LINN OF LURGAN.

I. William Linn, the ancestor, emigrated from the north of Ireland, in 1732, and settled in Chester county. According to family tradition, his wife died in Ireland, and he brought with him an only son, William. They remained in Chester county but a few years, when, following the tide of emigration, they settled upon the frontiers of the Purchase of October, 1736, near what is now known as Roxbury, in Franklin county. The names of William Linn, senior, and William Linn, junior, appear on the assessment list of Lurgan township, Cumberland county, for the year 1751, one year after the erection of Cumberland county (1750). Here the ancestor died, having nearly reached the one hundredth year of his age. His father fought on the side of "The Orange" at Boyne, July 1, 1690, and was said to have been in Captain Hugh Wilson's company, the first Irish officer who crossed the river. Hugh Wilson's son went to the "Irish Settlement;" the Greggs came to Chester county the same year the Linns came—the descendants of these three soldiers of Boyne-water became kindred in 1869, when William H. Sage, of Ithaca, N. Y., was married to Jennie, daughter of Hon. Andrew Gregg Curtin, (see Gregg and Curtin record).

She m., November, 1804, Charles Brockden Brown, b. January 17, 1771; d. February 19, 1810. He was of Quaker lineage. His middle name was derived from his uncle, the skillful conveyancer and great scrivener of provincial days. He received a liberal education under Robert Proud, the historian, and at the age of sixteen already formed plans of extensive literary work. He was apprenticed to Alexander Wilcox, an eminent lawyer, but occupied himself with literary instead of legal studies. In 1796, he removed to the city of New York, where he devoted himself to letters with great eagerness to become conspicuous as a writer. In 1798, appeared his first novel, "Wieland," a powerful and original romance, and in 1799, "Osmond, or The Second Witness." At this time he had begun no less than five novels, two of which, "Arthur Merwyn" and "Edgar Huntley," were soon published. In "Arthur Merwyn" the ravages of the yellow fever, which the author had witnessed in New York in 1798, and Philadelphia in 1793, are painted with terrific truth. These were followed by others of more or less note. He published a number of political pamphlets, and edited with ability the American Register. He was a man of romantic temper, extensive attainments, and great industry. He was the first in America who ventured to pursue literature as a profession. To him his country is indebted for the high literary standard he gave it. His life and correspondence, edited by William Dunlap, in two volumes, was published in 1815. They had issue (surname Brown):

*The family arms were confirmed in 1858, as follows:

MACLAY OF LURGAN.

I. Charles Maclay\(^1\) by his first marriage had three sons. The name of his wife has not come down to us. By a second wife, Jean Hamilton, he had one son, who was the ancestor of the name in America. By the first wife there was issue:

1. Owen, was an officer in the army of James II.; followed the fortunes of that royal personage; remained a bachelor, and died in France.

2. Charles, an officer in the same army; was killed in a duel with a French officer in Dublin.

3. Henry, also an officer in the royal army; and fell in the battle of the Boyne, 1690.

By the marriage with Jean Hamilton there was issue:

2. John, who married and had issue:

It is stated that Owen Maclay, returning from France, desired to take his nephew, Charles, to that country and educate him. His father, however, would not consent without a guarantee that the boy would be brought up in the Protestant faith. This the uncle refused, returned to France, and dying left his estate to strangers, probably to the Roman Church.

II. John Maclay,\(^2\) (Charles,\(^1\)) b. circa, 1680; m., and had issue:

3. Charles, b. 1710; m. Eleanor Query.

4. Eleanor, b. 1719; m. Mr. Johnson, and remained in Ireland.

5. John, b. 1721; m. Elizabeth McDonald.

III. Charles Maclay,\(^3\) (John,\(^2\) Charles,\(^1\)) b. 1710, in county Antrim, Ireland; "sailed for America on the 30th day of May, 1734;” located in New Garden township, Chester county; but in 1742 settled in Hopwell township, Lancaster county, now Lurgan township, Franklin county, Pa. He died in September, 1753. Charles Maclay married, in 1733, Eleanor Query, daughter of William Query, of county Antrim, Ireland. The latter came to America about 1740, settled in Path Valley, but subsequently removed to North Carolina. Eleanor Query Maclay was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1714, and died in Lurgan township, Franklin county, Pa., July 27, 1789. Charles Maclay and his wife are both interred at Middle Spring church graveyard. They had issue:

6. i. John, b. May 10, 1734; m. Jean Dickson.
6. ii. William, b. July 20, 1737; m. Mary Harris.
7. iii. Charles, b. August 8, 1739; m. Mary Templeton.
  v. Eleanor, b. September 20, 1750; m. John Maclay.

IV. John Maclay,3 (John,2 Charles,1) b. circa 1721, in county Antrim, Ireland; came with his brother Charles to America in 1734; located in Chester county, and subsequently removed to Lurgan township, Franklin county, where he died in April, 1779; buried in Middle Spring graveyard; he m. Elizabeth McDonald, who is buried by the side of her husband. They had issue:

9. i. John, b. 1746; m. Eleanor Maclay.
  ii. Charles, b. 1748; recruited a company of militia, in the winter of 1777-8, of one hundred men, all six feet in height. At the battle of Crooked Billet, on the 4th of May, 1778, he was killed with most of his company, who refused to surrender. The killed and wounded were gathered by the enemy, thrown into a heap, covered with straw and fired. Thus perished some of the bravest spirits of the Cumberland Valley.
  iii. Elizabeth, b. 1750; m. Col. Samuel Culbertson, "of the Row." Their descendants include Rev. James Culbertson, of Zanesville, Ohio; Mrs. John Rea, the widow of General Rea, who was a member of Congress from Pennsylvania for several sessions, and Rev. S. C. McCune, of Iowa; John Culbertson m. Margaret Greer; whose son, Thomas Greer Culbertson, resides at Wheeling, W. Va.
  iv. Samuel, b. 1752; d. unm.
  v. Eleanor, b. 1755; d. young.
  vi. Martha, m. John Irwin.

V. John Maclay,4 (Charles,3 John,2 Charles,1) was b. May 10, 1734, in Ireland, just twenty days prior to the sailing of his parents for America; d. October 17, 1804, in Lurgan township, Franklin county, Pa. He built the first mill on the Conedoguinet creek, and put up a substantial log house of hewn timber, strongly dove-tailed together, fortifying the doors and windows by heavy bolts for the repulsion of Indian aggressions. This house is yet standing, and is now occupied by the fourth John Maclay, a lineal descendant of the builder. He was appointed a Provincial magistrate in 1760, and was a member of the Provincial Conference, held at Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, June 18, 1776, and afterward served as a member of the Pennsylvania Assembly for several terms. His ability is attested to us by the fact that he, one of the settlers in the far western part, was chosen by the people of Cumberland county to represent both his immediate neighbors and the people of the vastly more thickly populated eastern portion of the county in that conference which declared that they, on behalf of the people of Pennsylvania, were "willing to concur in a vote of Congress declaring the United Colonies free and independent States." His bearing on this occasion probably had much to do with his election afterward to the Assembly. As were all the Scotch-Irish settlers, Mr. Maclay was deeply religious and manifested his great interest in the affairs of the church by officiating for a long time as a ruling elder in Dr. Cooper's church, at Middle Spring. Mr. Maclay married, December 17, 1755, Jean Dickson, daughter of David Dickson* and Catharine Greenlee; she was b. in Ireland, December 20, 1734, and was brought to America by her parents in 1741; she d. April 3, 1812, in Lurgan township, Franklin county, Pa. They had issue, all born in Lurgan township:

1. Nancy, b. 1754; d. 1761.
10. ii. Charles, b. May 28, 1757; m. Susanna Linn.
15. vii. Eleanor, b. February 5, 1769; m. David McKnight.

*David Dickson was a native of Ireland, b. December 15, 1705; d. in Lurgan township, Franklin county, Pa., October 18, 1784. His wife, Ketrain [Catharine] Greenlee, was born in Ireland, January 1, 1711; d. December 28, 1798.
VI. William Maclay, (Charles, John, Charles,) b. July 20, 1737, in New Garden township, Chester county, Pa.; d. Monday, April 16, 1804, at Harrisburg, Pa.; buried in Paxtang church graveyard. In 1742 his father removed to now Lurgan township, Franklin county, where his boyhood days were spent upon the paternal farm. When the French and Indian war broke out, he was at Rev. John Blair's classical school, in Chester county, and, desiring to enter the service of the Province, his tutor gave him a recommendation "as a judicious young man and a scholar," which secured him the appointment of ensign in the Pennsylvania battalion; he was promoted lieutenant in the Third battalion, Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Mercer, May 7, 1758. Accompanied General Forbes' expedition that year, and especially distinguished himself at the battle of Loyalhanna. In Bouquet's expedition of 1763, he was in the fight of Bushy Run; while in the subsequent campaign of that gallant officer, he was stationed, with the great portion of the Second Pennsylvania, on the line of the stockade forts on the route to Fort Pitt as lieutenant commanding the company. For these services he participated in the Provincial grant of land to the officers connected therewith, located on the West Branch of the Susquehanna, and most of which he assisted in surveying. He studied law, and was admitted to the York county bar, April 28, 1760, but it is doubtful if he ever practiced his profession at that court, the continued Indian war, and his subsequent duties as surveyor, engrossing his entire time, although, from a letter of John Penn's, it would seem that he was afterwards admitted to the Cumberland county bar, and had acted for the prothonotary of that county. At the close of the French and Indian war, he visited England, and had an interview with Thomas Penn, one of the Proprietaries, relative to the surveys in the middle and northern parts of the Province, and was the assistant of Surveyor Lukens on the frontiers. In 1772 he laid out the town of Sunbury, and erected for himself a stone house, which was standing a few years since. Upon the organization of the county of Northumberland, he was appointed prothonotary and clerk of the courts. He also acted as the representative of the Penn family, and took a prominent part in the so-called Pennamite war. In writing to the secretary of the Province, in April, 1773, he says, "If hell is justly considered as the rendezvous of rascals, we cannot entertain a doubt of Wioming being the place;" but, much as he was prejudiced against the Connecticut settlers, he foresaw the future value of the land in that valley, and advised Penn not to sell his reservation there. At the outset of the Revolution, although an officer of the Proprietary government, William Maclay took a prominent and active part in favor of independence, not only assisting in equipping and forwarding troops to the Continental army, but marched with the associators, participating in the battles of Trenton and Princeton. During the Revolution he held the position of assistant commissary of purchases. In 1781 he was elected to the Assembly, and from that time forward he filled the various offices of member of the Supreme Executive Council, judge of the Courts of Common Pleas, deputy surveyor, and one of the commissioners for carrying into effect the act respecting the navigation of the Susquehanna river. About this period he visited England in the interest of the Penn family. In January, 1789, he was elected to the United States Senate, taking his seat there as the first Senator from Pennsylvania. He drew the short term, and his position terminated March 3, 1791, his colleague, Robert Morris, securing the long term. His election to this body raised him upon a higher plane of political activity, but contact with the Federal chiefs of the Senate only strengthened his political convictions, which, formed by long intercourse with the people of Middle Pennsylvania, were intensely democratic. He began to differ with the opinions of President Washington very early in the session; he did not approve of the state and ceremony attendant upon the intercourse of the President with Congress,—he flatly objected to the presence of the President in the Senate while business was being transacted, and in the Senate boldly spoke against his policy in the immediate presence of President Washington. The New England historians, Hildreth and Goodrich, repute Thomas Jefferson as the "efficient promoter at the beginning and father and founder of the Democratic party." Contemporary records, however, show beyond the shadow of a doubt that this responsibility or honor, in whatever light it may be regarded, cannot be shifted from the shoulders or taken from the laurels of Pennsylvania statesmanship. Before Mr. Jefferson’s return from Europe, William Maclay assumed an independent position, and in his short career of two years in the Senate propounded ideas and gathered about him elements to form the opposition which developed with the meeting of Congress at Philadelphia, on the 24th of October, 1791, in a division of the people into two great parties, the Federalists and Democrats, when, for the first time, appeared an open and organized opposition to the administration. The funding of the public debt, chartering the United States Bank, and other measures championed necessarily by the administration, whose duty it was to put the wheels of government in motion, engendered opposition. Mr. Maclay, to use his own language, “no one else presenting himself,” fearlessly took the initiative, and with his blunt common sense (for he was not much of a speaker) and Democratic ideas, took issue with the ablest advocate of the administration. Notwithstanding the prestige of General Washington, and the ability of the defenders of the administration on the floor of the Senate, such was the tact and resolution of Mr. Maclay, that when, after his short service, he was retired from the Senate and succeeded by James Ross, a pronounced Federalist, their impress was left in the distinctive lines of an opposition party, a party which, taking advantage of the warm feeling of our people towards the French upon the occasion of Jay’s treaty with Great Britain, in 1794, and of the unpopularity of the alien and sedition laws, passed under the administration of President John Adams, in 1798, compassed the final overthrow of the Federal party in 1800. While in the Senate, Mr. Maclay preserved notes of its discussions, both in open and secret sessions, with observations upon the social customs of the first statesmen of the Republic, which have been published and edited by George Washington Harris. Upon his retirement, he resided permanently on his farm adjoining Harrisburg, where he erected the stone mansion for many years occupied by the Harrisburg Academy. In the year 1795 he was elected a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, and again elected in 1803. He was a presidential elector in 1796, and, from 1801 to 1803, one of the associate judges of the county of Dauphin. Mr. Harris, who edited his journal, gives us this summary of Mr. Maclay's character: "He was a man of strict integrity, of positive opinions, having implicit confidence in his own honesty and judgment; he was inclined to be suspicious of the integrity of others whose sentiments or action in matters of importance differed from his own, and the journal, to which reference has been made, is evidence of the strength of his intellect." "In personal appearance Mr. Maclay is said to have been six feet three inches in height, and stout and muscular; his complexion was light, and his hair, in middle age, appears to have been brown, and was worn tied behind or clubbed." Mr. Maclay m., April 11, 1769, MARY McCCLURE HARRIS, daughter of John Harris, the founder of Harrisburg, and Elizabeth McClure, his wife, b. April 13, 1750, at Harris' Ferry; d. April 20, 1809, at Harrisburg, and buried in Paxtang church graveyard. They had issue:*

Owing to ill-health, he resigned his seat in the United States Senate on the 4th of January, 1809. Mr. Maclay was very popular in his manners, a good scholar, an efficient writer, and was one of Pennsylvania's ablest statesmen. He died at his residence in Buffalo Valley October 15, 1811, and is buried on the farm. He married, in 1773, Elizabeth Plunket, b. 1755; d. 1823; daughter of Dr. William Plunket, the first presiding justice of Northumberland county (1772), and noted in the annals of the State for the part he took in the Pennamite war. In 1833, he was elected to the Legislature from Union county, and served one term; and January 6, 1836, he was appointed by Governor Ritner prothonotary of Union county, serving until 1839, when he entered the Senate of Pennsylvania, serving until 1843. His last visit of any consequence from home was on the occasion of the reunion of the surviving members of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1875, when he and his old friend, John Williamson, of Huntingdon, emerged from their retirement to delight their admiring juniors for a while with their old-time tales, repartee, and humor. Judge Maclay was a firm believer in revelation, and had great veneration, as he himself said, "For the plan of salvation as given in the four Gospels; magnificently beautiful in its simplicity." Y., and entered Washington Academy. The war of 1812 interrupting his studies, he volunteered in the regiment of Colonel Rice, and was in service at Lake Champlain at the time of McDonough's victory, September 11, 1814. After the close of the war, in 1815, he entered Nassau Hall, Princeton, as a sophomore, but subsequently entered the senior class of Union College, Schenectady, where he graduated with distinction, completing his theological studies under Rev. Dr. John M. Mason, of New York. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of New York April 23, 1818. In the fall of that year he went to Harrisburg by invitation, and was called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church, October 5, 1818. He was received by the Presbytery of Carlisle April 13, 1819, but not ordained until the 26th of October, of that year. Dr. DeWitt received the degree of A. M. in course from Union College, and in 1838 the University of Pennsylvania conferred on him the title of Doctor of Divinity. From 1854 to 1860 he held the office of State Librarian, appointed by Governors Bigler and Pollock. In 1854 he felt the necessity of taking a colleague—Rev. T. H. Robinson, D. D., the recent minister. Dr. DeWitt was twice married, his first wife being Julia A. Woodhull, daughter of Rev. Nathan Woodhull, of Newton, L. I. During a ministry of nearly fifty years in Harrisburg, Dr. DeWitt enjoyed the confidence of all his ministerial brethren. In the community he was greatly appreciated and respected by all classes. As a theologian he had few equals in the ministry, and, although firm and decided in his views, he was liberal and catholic in spirit. His published writings were limited to twelve or thirteen pamphlets, the most popular of which was a small volume entitled "Her Price above Rubies." He preached many powerful discourses, a volume of which should certainly be preserved in permanent form. They had issue (surname DeWitt):

XXVII. Benjamin John Wallace,6 (Eleanor,6 William, Charles,5 John,2 Charles,1) b. August 10, 1810, at Harrisburg, Pa.; d. July 25, 1862, at Philadelphia. His father dying when he was only six years of age, he was left to the care of an amiable and excellent mother, whose early training fitted him for the position he occupied with so much success in his maturity. When of suitable age he became a pupil of the Harrisburg Academy, that institution being in charge of the ablest instructors. The culture he received at the school fitted him for admission to the United States Military Academy at West Point, to which he was appointed, where he was rapidly gaining a foremost place, when his heart convinced him that a higher vocation was to be his calling. He left West Point, was prepared for Princeton College and the ministry of the Presbyterian Church, under the care of Rev. John Hutchinson, of Mifflintown, a former tutor in the Harrisburg Academy. After graduating with high honor he was licensed to preach, and was called at once to a western charge. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by his alma mater. His elegance as a writer and eloquence as a speaker soon brought him into great prominence in his denomination and in all religious circles, so that when the Presbyterian Quarterly, the organ of the "New School," was projected, he was at once selected as its editor. His brilliance of style gave character to this publication, and as long as he lived it was a prosperous and popular publication. Mr. Wallace was pastor of churches in Pittsburgh, York, and at other points; president and professor of Delaware College, at Newark, in that State. Unfortunately for his fame as an author, his literary productions are scattered throughout the ephemeral publications of his time. It need not be repeated that both as speaker and writer he was captivating and graceful, of fine stature and polished address, in society one of the most entertaining of a long roll of able men, whose cultivated minds directed the thoughts of the generation of which he was so distinguished an ornament.

He was stationed at Milroy, Mifflin county, Pa., but, owing to partial failure of health, was appointed agent of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions at Philadelphia. At this period he was connected with the New School Assembly, but afterwards transferred his relations to the Old School, and joined the Presbytery of Carlisle. After acting some years as agent of the General Assembly Board of Foreign Missions, he accepted a call to the Presbyterian church at Bedford, Pa., where he labored until declining health compelled him to relinquish his charge. He read law with William Lyon, of Bedford, and was admitted to the bar in August, 1849. Began practice at Bedford, and soon achieved honorable distinction in his profession. In January, 1865, he was appointed by President Lincoln judge advocate with the rank of major, and served one year. In 1868 he served on a commission to revise the statutes of the State of Pennsylvania, with Judge Derrickson and Wayne MacVeagh. Upon the death of Judge King in January, 1871, Gov. Geary appointed him president judge of the Sixteenth Judicial District, then comprising the counties of Bedford, Somerset, Franklin, and Fulton, and at the October election elected to the same position for the term of ten years. After declining a re-nomination, Judge Hall quitted the bench on the 1st of January, 1882, the judicial term having been extended one month by the Constitution of 1874. Throughout the entire term of Judge Hall, the business of the district was great, and an unusually large number of cases of importance was adjudicated. During his administration very few reversals of his decisions were made by the Supreme Court. Since leaving the bench he has not been actively engaged in his profession. He graduated in 1849 from Marshall College, Mercersburg, Pa. Began the study of law, but afterwards entered the banking house of William Russell, at Lewistown. In 1852 went to Pittsburgh as a clerk in the firm of Lyon, Shorb & Co., iron manufacturers; from thence, in 1854, to St. Louis, where he took charge of the branch store of the Sligo Iron Company, which he managed with great energy and success. About 1860 he became part owner, and afterwards sole owner. He was very hospitable and generous, of fine belles-lettres attainments, and of great conversational powers; an active member of the Presbyterian Church, with high character and standing in the community for integrity and honor. He left twenty-five thousand dollars to the different boards and benevolent enterprises of the Presbyterian Church, and about the same sum in legacies to his aunts and sisters, with an estate of about half a million dollars to his children. Mr. Hall was twice married; m., first, Louisa Miller; no issue; m., secondly, Lucretia Allen. They had issue (surname Hall):

XXXIV. Louis Williams Hall,1 (William-Maclay6 [Hall], Esther,6 William,6 Charles,6 John,6 Charles,7) b. July 4, 1833, at Allegheny, Pa. He received a good education; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1854. He was soon after appointed solicitor for the Pennsylvania Railroad company at Altoona. That road was just opened over the Allegheny mountains, and Altoona was the location of the chief offices of the transportation of the company. Herman J. Lombaert was general superintendent with all the powers of the now general manager. The office of the chief engineer was also at that point, and the location was being made there for the principal shops of the company. It being the headquarters of these officers, the position of solicitor there was an important and delicate one, and the attorney had many questions before him of immense importance to the company and its interests. Mr. Hall's practice soon became large and lucrative, not only in Blair, but the contiguous counties. In 1859, when little more than eligible, he was elected to the State Senate as the Republican candidate from the strong Democratic district of Cambria, Blair, and Clearfield counties. He was appointed chairman of the Judiciary Committee on his first advent in the Senate, of a body composed of such legal minds as Penny, of Allegheny; Clymer, of Berks; Ketchum, of Luzerne; Welsh, of York; Palmer, of Schuylkill; Finney, of Crawford; McClure, of Franklin, and others prominent in the profession of the State. The war of the Rebellion breaking out, Gov. Curtin called an extra session of the Assembly in April, 1861, when Mr. Hall was chosen Speaker of the Senate. It was at that extra session that the famous Three-million-dollar-loan bill to arm the State, and other important war measures were passed. Mr. Hall was again chosen Speaker at the beginning of the regular session in January, 1862. He was elected for a new term, and for another district, in which Blair county was placed in October, 1864, running largely ahead of his ticket. He was again chosen Speaker of the Senate at the end of the session of 1866, and also at the commencement of the regular session in 1867, having been chosen three times presiding officer of that body, an honor never before accorded to any one. At the close of his term he declined a re-nomination, and since then has devoted himself exclusively to the practice of his profession. Having been appointed solicitor and counsel of the Pennsylvania railroad, at Harrisburg, on the 1st of October, 1868, he took up his residence in that city. To-day he occupies the same position, being connected with them for over thirty years. He is yet in the mental vigor and prime of life, although sixty years of age, and has probably been connected with as many matters of importance in his profession as any man of his age. Among the numerous leading cases in the courts he has argued within the last few years may be mentioned those of the "Commonwealth vs. Credit Mobilier of America," twice tried before Judge Pearson and twice in the Supreme Court; "Commonwealth vs. George O. Evans," the claim of the State for a very large amount; Mr. Evans being defended by Mr. Hall and the late Judge Black; "The Commonwealth vs. Pennsylvania Canal company," being an attempt of the State by statute to compel the canal company to alter their dams, feeders, and works, without compensation, so as to allow the passage of fish, the case involved probably half a million of dollars, and was decided by the Supreme Court in favor of the canal company; "James Freeland vs. Pennsylvania Railroad company," an attempt to hold the company responsible for consequential damages caused by the raising of the great Clark's Ferry dam; decided by the Supreme Court in favor of the railroad company. Mr. Hall m., November 26, 1867, Eliza Warford. They had issue (surname Hall):

X. Hugh McCormick,3 (Thomas,2 James,1) b. about the year 1735; d. in September, 1799, in Stott county, Kentucky. William, Hugh, and Robert McCormick were among the first settlers and land-owners within the present limits of Juniata county, Pa. They, and their brother Thomas, took out warrants in 1755 for a tract of land located two miles north of Mifflintown, along the Juniata river, in Fermanagh township, and the three first-named settled thereon about that time. On several occasions they were driven out by the Indians, the last being in 1786, when they fled for refuge to Huntingdon county. They returned home in 1787, and immediately thereafter Hugh McCormick erected a large stone house on his property, which it is said was built partly with the view of using it as a fort in case of another Indian raid, the windows being made high and narrow. This house is yet standing, apparently, without a flaw or seam in its walls. The brothers are described as being very large and robust men, fond of frontier life, and in every way suited to its dangers and excitements. Hugh served in the war for Independence, and Mrs. Catharine Laird, a granddaughter, says of him: "Grandfather Hugh McCormick lived at the beginning of the Revolutionary war on the Juniata river. Grandmother said that when he came home from the war he was covered with rags. In his knapsack he had only a conch shell, which she kept until her death, and gave to our mother to be handed down as a memento of his service." That shell is now in possession of his grandson, Col. George M. Chambers, of Jacksonville, Ill. By deed dated October 19, 1798, Hugh McCormick and Catharine, his wife, disposed of the farm in Fermanagh township, and soon thereafter removed with

In 1777 he represented White Deer township in the committee of Northumberland county, and his name appears among a list of the inhabitants of White Deer, with that of his brother Thomas, in 1778. He is believed to have gone to the Revolutionary war, but this is not certain, and nothing more is definitely known about him except that, in 1782, he was a resident of Augusta county, Va., as shown by a deed bearing date May 25, of that year. His wife, Isabella, was a woman of strong character, and, during the "Great Runaway" of 1778, escaped from the valley by fleeing on horseback with her eldest child in her arms. She lived until May 10, 1824, spending the latter years of her life with her daughter, Mrs. Robert Sloan, in Harrisburg. *Mrs. Helen Curtis was a Scotch lady of rare excellence of character, and was widowed before the birth of her daughter, at Alexandria, Va., and took refuge during the Revolutionary war, in Leesburg, purchasing there a home, where she spent the remainder of her life in great comfort, dying at the age of seventy-three, having lived to see her two daughters arrive at maturity, and both filling important positions at the head of a large and flourishing female seminary.

XVIII. James McCormick,\(^4\) (James,\(^3\) Thomas,\(^2\) James,\(^1\)) b. in 1761, in East Pennsboro' township, Cumberland county, Pa.; d. April 17, 1814, at Carlisle, Pa. At the time of his decease the Carlisle Herald gave these facts relating to him, which we herewith incorporate: "He studied mathematics with Mr. Oliver, and was, afterwards, two years teacher in the academy at York. In 1787 he was elected a teacher in Dickinson College. In 1792 he was made a professor, and continued, for twenty-seven years, to instruct with ability. During this period he was associated with the Reverend Doctors Nisbet and Davidson, and has been instrumental in imbuing with mathematical and philosophical science many who have sustained respectable characters in church and in state. In 1792 he received the honorable degree of A. B., and, in 1810, that of A. M. For some years he acted as a magistrate, and, for many years, sustained the office of ruling elder in the Presbyterian church. In all relations he supported an unblemished character—highly respected by his fellow-citizens—by the trustees of the college, and has ever had the warm attachment of his pupils. It may be said that he was a laborious instructor and an upright magistrate. In his integrity, all men had confidence. His heart was open to the distresses of the unfortunate, and his hand was ever ready to afford relief. As a man, he was peculiarly inoffensive, and had scarcely a personal enemy in the world. In the endearments of domestic life he sustained the relations of son, husband, parent, and friend much beloved. He was a believer in Jesus Christ and in the doctrines of the reformation. Having dismissed all concern for the world, he felt interested only for the concerns of religion, and manifested a deep concern for the congregation with which he was connected. He delighted to speak of his own hopes and prospects, manifesting an experimental acquaintance with religion, and giving to those around him ample testimony of his unshaken trust in the Redeemer. He met death without fear, calmly and cheerfully resigning up his soul into the hands of his Creator. By his lamented death Dickinson College has lost one of its earliest and ablest instructors; learning and religion, a friend; and society, an upright citizen. He has left behind him a bereaved widow and fatherless children, whose loss is very great, but his friends may confidently trust that his soul has ascended to the regions of eternal day, 'to the joys of his Lord.'" "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace!"

"The sweet remembrance of the just Shall flourish when they sleep in dust."

In addition to the foregoing, it may be stated that his relative, Isabella Oliver, published a monody on his death. Besides his position as professor of mathematics in Dickinson College, he held, as alluded to in the obituary quoted, the office of justice of the peace of Carlisle several years, to which he was appointed by Governor Mifflin, April 16, 1795. XXVI. ROBERT McCORMICK, 4 (Robert, 3 Thomas, 3 James, 3)
b. June 8, 1780, on Walnut Grove farm, Rockbridge county, Va.; d. July 4, 1846, on the paternal homestead, and buried in the old Providence graveyard. He received an ordinary education acquired at a private school of his neighborhood, and was instructed in the strictest tenets of the Seceder branch of the Presbyterian Church. Throughout his life he took great pleasure in the acquirement of historical and scientific knowldge, and was very fond of astronomy. He was a man of remarkable mechanical genius, and seldom failed to accomplish what he undertook. Having blacksmith and carpenter shops, and being himself naturally a good workman, with almost any kind of tools, it was no difficulty for him to make whatever he desired of either wood or iron. The first record we have of his endeavors in the line of invention was in the construction of a reaping machine, on which he worked and experimented from and after 1809. From the nature of the testimony concerning his early inventions in this line, it would appear that he constructed more than one device between the years 1809 and 1825.
At all events there is evidence to show that he was engaged at various times, during those years, experimenting on his reaper,
and that he used various devices for cutting, and in all probability he made several attempts at making a machine during all those sixteen or seventeen years. This would seem to be corroborated by the statements, first, of his two nephews (Robert, son of William, and Robert, son of James McCormick), who stated that their fathers told them that Robert McCormick had invented a reaper in 1809; second, of his son Cyrus, who stated that his father had invented a reaper in 1816; thirdly, by Robert McCormick, above referred to, who stated that his uncle Robert showed him in the year 1825 or 1826 a machine he had just invented. One of the cutting devices he used on one of his machines was a system of rotary saws about eight or ten inches in diameter, which revolved, shear fashion, past the edge of a stationary knife. The saws were driven by bands from a cylinder which was turned by the revolution of the main wheel of the machine. This machine had vertical reels to sweep the grain across the cutters, and when cut delivered it on a platform in the rear of the cutters, while an endless apron carried it across the platform and delivered it on one side of the machine. Another cutting device which he used consisted of stationary curved sickles against which the grain was forced and cut by vertical reels with pins in their peripheries. Parts of this early machine were, for many years, stored away in the loft of the old malt-house, on the home farm, and were familiar objects to those about the farm. The reaping machine was not the only mechanical problem that commanded the thought and inventive genius of Robert McCormick. He found time to exercise his ingenuity in other directions as well, and reaped harvests of success in several mechanical inventions, briefly described as follows: In the winter of 1830-31 there was a great deal of talk, and much in the newspapers on the subject of raising hemp. Only one thing seemed to be in the way of its becoming a very profitable product, and that was the difficulty of cheaply and profitably reducing the fibre to its required marketable shape. Acting on this seeming demand Robert McCormick invented a very ingenious and perfect working hemp-brake, and in connection with it a horse power by which it was driven, and in the fall of 1831 he operated it successfully. He also invented a machine for cleaning the hemp when broken. The excitement over hemp raising, however, dying out, the demand for the machines never amounted to much, although a number of them were built and sold. At another time he invented and manufactured a very ingenious threshing machine, in connection with which he made a horse power of peculiar construction. He also built a clover sheller of stone, resembling an ordinary mill somewhat, but never did anything with it, except for his own use. He also invented and made a blacksmith's bellows, which was of a tub form, and of which he built and sold a large number. He invented a water power that worked by confined pressure, somewhat on the principle of the steam engine; and also a hillside plow. As it was Mr. McCormick's ambition that his sons should follow husbandry as a profession, he purchased a farm of three hundred acres, situated a mile and a half from his own homestead, and another of seven hundred acres on the South river, nine miles west of his home. On each of these places he had a saw mill, and on the South river farm and his home place he had flour mills, which he operated successfully. Prior to 1837 Mr. McCormick gave the South river farm to his son, Cyrus H., who, on account of the losses sustained in the furnace business, deeded back that property to his father, in part payment of his share of said losses. Mr. McCormick afterwards gave the same property to his son, Leander J. He gave the home farm, at his death, to his son, William S. When we consider the extensive operations he constantly had on hand, it will be seen that Robert McCormick was a man of great business and executive ability, as well as inventive genius. For many years he carried on farming on four farms, aggregating in all 1,800 acres, and at the same time operated two flour mills and two saw mills, besides which he kept carpenter and blacksmith shops busy, manufacturing various kinds of machinery of his own invention. In 1834, in connection with his son Cyrus, he built what is known as "Cotopaxi furnace," but through the mismanagement of their partner, followed by the financial panic of 1837, he was compelled to sell the Old Providence farm, which belonged to his wife, as well as the furnace property. Cyrus soon after left home with the intention of seeing what he could do towards establishing and introducing a reaper of his own invention into the vast wheat fields of the west. Leander J. left school and went into the shop, William S. took entire management of the farming operations and finance, while Mr. McCormick and Leander manufactured the reapers, horse powers, blacksmith's bellows, other machinery and tools. Thus, through the combined efforts of all, in due time the family were extricated from their financial embarrassments. Just as he was beginning to feel the freedom of being out of debt Mr. McCormick was overtaken by a heavy snow storm in returning home from his South river farm, where he had been attending the shipment of reaping machines to Lynchburg. He became chilled, took a severe cold, from the effects of which he never recovered. Robert McCormick m., February 11, 1808, MARY ANNA HALL, b. June 24, 1780; d. XXXIII. James McCormick, (William, James, Thomas, James,) b. February 24, 1801, near Silverspring, Cumberland county, Pa.; d. January 19, 1870, at Harrisburg, Pa. When less than five years of age, he lost his father by a fatal accident. Paternal care thus devolved upon his mother, a bright, determined woman, and by her his preparatory studies were carefully made, fitting him at an early age for Princeton College, where he graduated with reputation, and began the study of law with Andrew Carothers, Esq., of Carlisle. He was admitted to the bar of Cumberland county in 1823, and to that of Dauphin county at the August term, 1825. His most successful career never faltered as long as he was able to give his professional duties any attention, and, indeed, followed him after his retirement from all active pursuits. He served in the borough council a long time, and was president of that body, also of the Dauphin Deposit bank, of the Harrisburg cemetery, of the Harrisburg Bridge company, and one of the trustees of the Pine Street Presbyterian church. In all these positions he was a cautious and able adviser. He uniformly declined candidature for office, as also offers of the highest honors of his profession. Upon his retirement he gave the powers of his active mind to the management of a large estate, consisting of furnaces, rolling-mills, grist-mills and farms. All these interests were successful, and, notwithstanding his physical disability, conducted in a masterly and systematic manner. Mr. McCormick m., in 1830, Eliza Buehler, b. November 11, 1806, at Erie, Pa.; d. December 25, 1877, at Harrisburg, Pa.; only daughter of George Buehler and Maria Nagle. She was, indeed, a most estimable woman. To each noble charity, benevolent enterprise, philanthropic movement, Christian endeavor, hospital or home in the city of Harrisburg she was a friend, promoter and benefactor. From no good cause or charitable work or needy poor did she withhold her hand or deny her bounty. They had issue:

XXXVI. Cyrus Hall McCormick, 5 (Robert, 4 Robert, 3 Thomas, 2 James, 1) b. February 15, 1809, on the old homestead, Walnut Grove Farm, Rockbridge county, Va.; d. Tuesday,
May 13, 1884, at his residence on Rush street, Chicago, Ill.
The minute story of his life is a story of inspiration and encouragement to the American youth of to-day. This is a story of humble beginnings, high aims, earnestness of purpose, and integrity of character. And it is the story of a life crowned with fruition. In addition to his extensive farming interests Robert McCormick, the father of Cyrus, operated saw and grist mills of considerable proportions for those early days, and to facilitate the work of keeping his agricultural implements
in repair, a blacksmith and carpenter shop were accessories of the farm. Much of the work done in these shops by Robert McCormick was in connection with his experiments in the construction of a reaping machine. Tests in the field to determine the merits of this machine were held in the early part of the summer of 1831, but the results were not dissimilar to those of preceding years. Repeated experiments had ended only in disappointment, and Robert McCormick’s machine was laid aside, his ideas abandoned and his hopes destroyed. But while these field tests of 1831 failed to justify the expectations of the father, they were sufficient to arouse the native ingenuity of the son, Cyrus, and start him on that career of success which made him famous and placed his name among those of the foremost inventors of the age. Cyrus Hall McCormick was the eldest of a family of eight children; the son of a farmer, his educational advantages were not superior to those of the average farmer boy of the day. For him the “college year” began and ended with the winter months, and the “Old Field School” was his Alma Mater. There he learned the rudiments of a common school education, and upon that foundation built a superstructure of knowledge gleaned from the maps and charts that hang upon the walls of the universe.
With keen observation and retentive memory, and with a judgment that most unerringly separated the wheat from the chaff,
he may be rightly classed with that nobility of self-made men whose names have added luster to their times, and to whose benefactions mankind will ever be indebted. Cyrus, while still a boy, spent much time in the farm shops, and early evinced the inheritance of his father’s inventive traits, by fashioning from wood or iron such tools or small implements as he needed in his work. At the age of fifteen he swung the scythe in line with his father’s workmen in the harvest field, making for this purpose a grain cradle which lightened his toil and made it possible for him to keep his work abreast of the older and more sinewy laborers. In the same year he constructed a hillside plow, which threw alternate furrows on the lower side, being thus either a right hand or a left hand plow. It was patented in 1831, but a few months later the young inventor supplanted it with something better, called the self-sharpening, horizontal plow, the first perfect self-sharpening plow ever invented. After the signal failure of his father’s grain cutting machine in the early summer of 1831, Cyrus, then twenty-two years old, gave serious thought to the subject which had so long engrossed the parent’s attention, and, as thought and action went hand in hand with him, he promptly began the construction of his reaper upon new and widely different principles from those employed in the abandoned machine of his father, which he had carefully studied. This machine consisted of a great framework, having a number of fixed sickle hooks on the front, with perpendicular cylinders to press the stems of the grain against and across the edges of the hooks, and then carry it to the stubble side and cast it out to the binders in swaths. His father’s crude mechanism possessed no ideas that he could utilize, and he was left to the resources of his own intellect for ways and means. As a prime essential he felt that the grain should be operated upon in a mass by a horizontal reciprocating blade. Without being more specific, it is sufficient to say that with his own hands the young man toiled on during the summer until he had constructed and combined the four cardinal principles found to-day in every successful harvesting machine, principles which “if dispensed with,” says so eminent an authority as Edward H. Knight, A. M., LL. D. (in his New Mechanical Dictionary), would wipe every reaper out of existence.” These underlying requisites of the reaper, invented, combined, and constructed by Cyrus Hall McCormick in 1831, are the reciprocating blade in projecting fingers; the platform for receiving the falling grain; the revolving reel for drawing the grain back to the knife and laying it upon the platform; and the divider, to separate the grain to be cut from that left standing. This machine, drawn by one horse, was put to a practical test late in the harvest of 1831, in a six acre field of oats grown by John Steele, near Walnut Grove. Here it was that the reaper achieved its first success; here it was that Robert McCormick, whose repeated failures had prompted him to discourage his son's ambition, acknowledged the superior genius of that son;
here was ushered in an era marked by the elevation of one great branch of farm labor from out of its slavery, an epoch in which the material prosperity of the world has been augmented many hundred fold, the lines of civilization widened, and the progress of humanity significantly advanced. Not at once were the great possibilities of the reaper appreciated by the inventor, but gradually its value became known to an ever widening circle, and its distinguishing features were the subject of many a discussion. This description of Mr. McCormick's first reaper is found in the second volume of the Mechanics' Magazine of 1833:

"We have omitted until now to furnish our agricultural friends with an account of a machine for cutting grain, invented by one of our ingenious and respectable countrymen, Mr. Cyrus H. McCormick, and which we witnessed in operation in a field of grain during the late harvest in the neighborhood of this place. A large crowd of citizens were present at the trial of it, and although the machine was not as perfectly made as the plan is susceptible of, yet we believe it gave general satisfaction. We have been furnished with some certificates from several of our intelligent farmers, one of which we have appended to the following description of the invention:

"This machine is so constructed as to leave a long or a short stubble, to operate alike well on tall or short grain. It is drawn by one horse walking by the side of the grain in shafts; just behind is a wheel about two feet three inches in diameter, which runs on the ground, by which the machinery is operated, having a cog-wheel with forty cogs screwed to it. There is a small wheel (with nine cogs) working in that, having another one on the same shaft with twenty-eight, which works another small one, turning a small crank, behind the wheel, and from this crank the knife receives a vibratory motion. It is about four and a half feet long, with an edge somewhat like that of a sickle (having teeth) straight and projecting into the grain at right angles to the horse. Behind the knife is an apron five or six feet long of thin plank; and this frame connects with and is made fast to the frame which supports the main wheel, having a slide or small wheel under it, to support it, say about five feet from the main wheel. Alongside the apron, by the point of the knife, and extending some distance before the knife, is raised a partition of cloth, for the purpose of dividing and keeping separate the cut grain from that which is left standing. There is a reel, as it is termed, which is about six or seven feet in diameter, and the same length of the knife. This is made by framing arms in each end of a shaft, say eight, the points of which are joined together by pieces, called ribs, parallel to the shafts. The reel is revolved as the machine advances by a band from the main wheel to one on its shaft, the object of which is to draw the grain back to the knife, which will be done whether straight or tangled, upright or leaning, unless below an angle of forty-five degrees, and to throw it on the apron. When a sufficient quantity shall have been collected for a sheaf, the hand who attends it draws it off the apron with a rake. The grain is prevented from slipping with the edge of the knife by pieces of wire projecting before it within one or two inches of each other.

"June 18, 1833.

"I certify that Mr. C. H. McCormick's reaping machine, with a horse, was employed by me in the late harvest, and though I did not work it much, I was satisfied with its work. I tried it for an hour, and calculated what it would do for a day, and found that it would cut in a day about twelve acres. I done so more than once. The present year was unfavorable for the trial, as the wheat was lodged in the field. I was so satisfied that I bought one. This preparation was necessary—the ground must be clean, free from stumps and large stones.

JAMES MCDOWELL."

On the 31st day of December, 1833, Obed Hussey obtained letters patent on a grain cutting machine possessing two of the features found in the McCormick. To guard against further attempts at piracy, on the 20th of May, 1834, Mr. McCormick wrote the following letter to the editor of the Mechanics' Magazine and Register of Inventions and Improvements, and applied for his patent, which he shortly obtained. The letter is as follows:

"To the Editor of the Mechanics' Magazine:

"Dear Sir:—Having seen in the April number of your magazine a cut and description of the reaping machine said to have been invented by Obed Hussey, of Ohio, last summer, I would ask a favor of you to inform Mr. Hussey and the public, through your columns, that the principle, namely, cutting grain by means of a toothed instrument, receiving the rotary motion from a crank, with the iron teeth projecting above the edge of the cutter, for the purpose of preventing the grain from partaking of its motion, is a part of the principle of my machine, and was invented by me, and operated on wheat and oats in July, 1831. This can be attested to the entire satisfaction of the public and Mr. Hussey, as it was witnessed by many persons. Consequently, I would warn all persons against the use of the aforesaid principle, as I regard and treat the use of it, in any way, as an infringement of my rights.

"Since the first experiment was made of the performance of my machine, I have, for the mutual interests of the public and myself, been laboring to bring it to as much perfection as the principle admitted of before offering it to the public. I now expect to be able in a very short time to give such an account of its simplicity, utility, and durability as will give general, if not universal, satisfaction.

"The revolving reel, as I conceive, constitutes a very important, in fact, indispensable part of my machine, which has the effect, in all cases, whether the grain be tangled or leaning, unless below an angle of forty-five degrees to the ground, to bring it back to the cutter and deliver it on the apron when cut.

"Very respectfully yours, etc.,

"CYRUS H. MCCORMICK."

In 1834 he purchased an interest in a smelter and devoted his energies to the management of the iron works until the panic tidal wave of 1837 swept over the country, when the growing young industry was stranded and its promoters all but hopelessly involved in the general wreck. In a ruin in which hundreds of men lost everything Cyrus H. McCormick, saved his honor. He took the stand that every dollar of the firm's obligations should be met, and to this end he sacrificed all his possessions including the farm which his father had given him. Starting again with no capital but energy and determination, and an inborn sense of integrity, his efforts were thenceforth devoted to the improvement and introduction of the reaper. Its manufacture began in a small way in the shops on the old Virginia farm. The swath cut by the McCormick in those first years was small indeed, but it was wide enough to warrant a branching out. The fame of the reaper and the demand for it far outran the facilities for its manufacture, and in 1845 larger shops were established at Cincinnati, O., while arrangements were also made for the building of the machine by a firm at Brockport, N. Y., in order that the east and west could be thus supplied from these respective centers. But even these plans soon proved inadequate for the best service to the trans-Mississippi regions, and Mr. McCormick believing Chicago to be the predestined center of the country's agricultural interests, decided to make that city the permanent home of his industry, and thither the reaper plant was removed in 1847. The next year marked the decided impetus in the manufacture of reapers and that seven hundred machines should have been turned out seemed almost incredible—as wondrous even as to-day seems the magic city herself, still the home of the McCormick grain and grass cutting machines, of which more than one hundred thousand are now annually built and sold. To incur the jealousy of contemporaries is one of the penalties which genius must ever pay for the promotion of her subjects, and, as may be fancied, the case of Cyrus Hall McCormick affords no exception to the rule. In 1848 a most unjust decision emanated from the United States Patent Department, the true construction of which decision is, that because the reaper was so valuable an implement and so desirable to all the world the inventor's patent should not be renewed, but that all should have an opportunity to engage in its manufacture. By reason of this unprecedented edict the bars were let down that those who chose to follow might enter in and appropriate the fruits of the pioneer's work. As a result, reaper manufactories sprung up in various parts of the country, and in due time many of these users of appropriated ideas, noting with deep solicitation the still further advancement and continued success of Mr. McCormick's machines, either openly proclaimed themselves the original inventors, or sought to give the credit to some other individual who might possibly have experimented in this branch of invention; and whose very obscurity made the advocacy of his cause easy for them. For Cyrus Hall McCormick, it is sufficient to say that his claim has been upheld by the highest judicial tribunals, and that International Juries of Award in invariably bestowing the grand prizes upon the McCormick machine have deemed it simple justice to assert, as a personal tribute to the sagacity and perseverance of Mr. McCormick that such honors as they did thus bestow were not more for the practical utility of the machine itself than for their recognition of the originality and genius of the inventor. In proof of this it should be remembered that in 1849 the United States Commissioner of Patents said of the McCormick reaper: "It is one of those great and valuable inventions which will commence a new era in the progress of improvement and whose beneficial influence is felt in all coming time." In 1851, in London, was held the first World's Fair, and from the records of that Exposition we quote: "The McCormick reaper is the most valuable article contributed to this exhibition, and for its originality and value, and its perfect work in the field it is awarded the Council Medal." Another international exhibit was held in Paris in 1855. The McCormick reaper was there and was awarded the grand gold medal, and in the jury's report may be found these significant statements: "The McCormick reaper is the type after which all others are made, the details of which are, it may be said, the type after which all others have been constructed." A report was also made upon the same occasion by M. Aureliano, who said: "It is Mr. McCormick who invented the first reaper; the details of which are, it may be said, the type after which all others have been constructed." In 1859 his patent of 1845 was also refused extension. The Commissioner at this time was the Hon. D. P. Holloway, than whom no man more fully recognized the fact that Mr. McCormick was alone entitled to the credit of having invented the reaper, as witness these words:

"Cyrus Hall McCormick is an inventor whose fame, while he is yet living, has spread throughout the world. His genius has done honor to his own country, and has been the admiration of foreign nations, and he will live in the grateful recollections of mankind as long as the reaping machine is employed in gathering the harvest."

In addition to the long list of trophies won by Mr. McCormick's machine, the inventor himself was the recipient of many enviable marks of personal recognition. Among these may be mentioned the degree of the Cross of the Legion of Honor, conferred upon him by Emperor Napoleon III., in 1868, a distinction then bestowed upon but few, and reserved in recognition of great services to the world. Again in 1878, while at Paris, Mr. McCormick was elected corresponding member of the French Academy of Sciences, on the ground of his "having done more for the cause of agriculture than any other living man." As may be presumed, the inventor of the reaper was liberally rewarded for his work, but this reward was not poured into his lap while he waited in idleness. He never waited. His entire life was one continuous workday. In him were combined to a rare degree the qualities of the genius, and the man of business. He was sagacious, far-seeing, energetic. "In Chicago's memorable baptism of fire, in 1871, the great McCormick Reaper Works went down in the general destruction. Promptly the work of rebuilding was commenced on a scale more elaborate, resulting in a plant which far outranked the old in equipment, facility and capacity, the immense business of which was conducted under the personal supervision of its originator until his death in 1884.

An outline of the life of Cyrus Hall McCormick which should consider only his career as a great inventor and successful manufacturer would lack much completeness. His home, social and religious ties were of the strongest nature. That such a man should be deeply religious is the natural corollary, and his religion manifested itself in a thousand ways remembered by men, while perpetual monuments to his generosity and philanthropy will tell the story to generations yet to come.
The McCormick Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church is one of these. In 1859 Mr. McCormick laid a proposition before the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, then convened at Indianapolis, offering to endow the professorships of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest on condition that it be located in Chicago. The Assembly readily acquiesced, and from Mr. McCormick this great and influential religious school has received magnificent donations and benefactions. Of a similar nature was his purchase of the Interior, a newspaper established in Chicago to represent the Presbyterian Church. The waves of financial disaster were beating about it, when, at the solicitation of the friends of the cause it represented, he purchased it and placed it upon a sound basis. In 1858, Mr. McCormick m. Nettie Fowler, daughter of Melzar Fowler, of Jefferson county, New York. They had issue:

XXXVII. WILLIAM SANDERSON McCORMICK, 6 (Robert, 4 Robert, 3 Thomas, 2 James, 1) b. November 2, 1815, in Rockbridge county, Va.; d. September 27, 1865, at Jacksonville, Ill.; buried in Graceland cemetery, near Chicago. He acquired a good education in the ordinary branches through private teachers and at a neighboring school. He was a bright scholar, and, at an early age, became an important and valuable assistant to his father, taking charge of the farming operations and accounts, thus relieving him from much care and enabling him to devote most of his time to mechanical and manufacturing pursuits. To him the renewed prosperity of the family was largely due after the financial reverses of his father in 1837. He was a progressive man in whatever he did, and in his early farming operations he adopted the best and latest improvements. Upon the death of his father in 1846, he inherited the home farm. However, in 1850, at the solicitation of his brother, Cyrus, he removed to Chicago, where he assumed the management of the reaper business already established. In 1859, he acquired one fourth interest, and much of its great and continued success is owing to his untiring skill, energy, and executive ability. Soon after the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion, he anticipated a great rise in property and values, and taking advantage of the situation, he bought for the firm a large amount of Chicago real estate in what is now the heart of the city. The wisdom of this action was soon apparent, and the firm realized a very large profit from this investment. From the effects of close and unremitting application to business and great nervous strain, Mr. McCormick finally broke down, and, in the spring of 1865 was compelled to give up all business, but to no purpose. Personally, he was of a cheerful disposition, quick spoken, and, although diffident, was among his friends a most interesting and agreeable man. Mr. McCormick m., in June, 1846, MARY ANN GRIGSBY, daughter of Reuben Grigsby, a prominent farmer who resided on his handsome estate called Hickory Hill, between Lexington and the Natural Bridge, in Rockbridge county, Va., where Mrs. McCormick was born. She received a good early education through private teachers, and completed her course of studies at Staunton. She m., May 11, 1847, Rev. James Shields, b. December 11, 1812, in Pittsburgh, Pa.; d. August 19, 1862, in Prairie du Chien, Wis.; son of James Shields and Frances Perry. His parents came to America from County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1811. His father was a contractor and builder by occupation, and, in religion, a strict Presbyterian. Mr. Shields received a collegiate education at Western University, Pittsburgh, where he graduated in 1830. After completing a full term at the Theological Seminary of the United Presbyterian Church, he was licensed to preach April 2, 1834. In the spring of 1835 he was ordained pastor of the congregations of Fermanagh and Tuscarora, in Juniata county, Pa., and continued to preach to the first-named church until his death. He never enjoyed robust health, and, in July, 1862, at the solicitation of his brother-in-law, William S. McCormick, he left home for a season of recreation among the streams and lakes of Minnesota, but, on reaching Prairie du Chien, he was taken seriously ill, and died there. Mr. Shields had been previously married; first, January 30, 1839, Hannah McKinstry, who died a year after; he m., secondly, Mary R. Gracy, who left one child, Mary-Gracy, now married to William J. Wallace, of Newville, Pa. James Shields and Mary Caroline McCormick had issue (surname Shields):

XXXIX. LEANDER JAMES MCCORmICK,* (Robert,* Robert,* Thomas, James,') b. February 8, 1819, at the family homestead, Walnut Grove, Rockbridge county, Va. He received an education in the ordinary branches of study through private teachers. As a young man his time was mostly employed in his father’s shop, where he developed considerable mechanical talent. A number of valuable improvements were made by him to the McCormick reaper at an early day. In 1847 he went to Cincinnati, O., where, in partnership with his brother, Cyrus, he built one hundred reapers for the harvest of that year. In the spring of 1849 he removed with his family to Chicago, where he took charge of the manufacturing department of the reaper business, acquiring one sixth interest in the same. From 1850 to 1859 he held the same position on a salary. In 1859 he and his brother, William S., became interested in the business to the extent of one fourth each, the firm becoming C. H. McCormick & Bros. After William S. McCormick’s death he acquired a full one third interest. In 1879 the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company was organized, of which he became vice-president and held one-quarter of the capital stock. In 1889 he sold out this interest and retired from the business. By the Chicago fire of 1871 he lost his home and other valuable property, but, by energy and activity, soon rebuilt nearly all his buildings, personally planning and superintending the construction of the new McCormick reaper works. A few years since he decided to make a contribution to the cause of science in his native State. The result was the donation by him of a magnificent refractor telescope, the second largest of its kind in the world, to the University of Virginia, at Charlottesville. He resides in the city of Chicago. Mr. McCormick m., October 22, 1845, Henrietta Hamilton, b. May 25, 1822, daughter of John Hamilton, of Rockbridge county, Va. They had issue:

She was a woman remarkable for her beautiful Christian character and unselfish devotion to her family, whose example and influence were felt by all who surrounded her, and her rare qualities acknowledged by a large circle of warm friends and relatives. She m., May 8, 1845, Hugh Adams, b. February 10, 1820, in Rockbridge county, Va.; d. March 10, 1880, in Chicago, Ill., son of James Adams. His father was a man of fine mind, intelligent and highly respected, a brother of Senator Robert Adams from Tennessee. His mother was a most industrious, practical woman, and a devoted Christian. While a resident of Virginia Hugh Adams was a successful merchant, and one of the most popular business men of that State. Soon after his marriage he removed to Keer’s Creek, Rockbridge county, where he engaged in merchandising. In 1857 he went to Chicago, where he became interested in the grain commission business, and known as the principal of the firm McCormick, Adams & Co. For twenty-three years he was prominently identified with the commercial prosperity of Chicago. His reputation in commercial circles was of the very best, and his name was looked upon as the synonym of all that was honorable and upright in business transactions. He was a consistent member of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Chicago, and a regular attendant upon its meetings, entering heartily into all its work for the Master—a man of simple, unostentatious tastes and habits, and of tender sympathy for the poor. XLIII. Henry McCormick, (James, William, James, Thomas, James,) b. March 10, 1831, in Harrisburg, Pa. He received his education at the Harrisburg Academy, Partridge's Military Institute, and graduated from Yale College in 1852. He commenced the study of the law with his father, but his taste being for a more stirring pursuit, he gave it up and learned the iron business at Reading furnace, now Robesonia, at the first opportunity purchasing an interest in the Henry Clay and Eagle furnaces, near Marietta, Lancaster county. In 1857 Paxtang furnace came under his management, and, in 1866, the nail-works at Fairview, Cumberland county, at the mouth of the Conedoguinet creek, which he conducted for twenty-five years. In 1865, before a railway spanned the continent, he crossed the great plain and mountain range to the Pacific coast, returning by the Isthmus of Panama. In 1877 he visited Europe. Long before these journeys he had shown his devotion to his country. At the opening of the Rebellion, he offered his life and services to the cause of patriotism, gathering a company of volunteers, company F, Lochiel Grays, of the Twenty-fifth regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers, in the three months' service. In 1862 he was chosen colonel of the First regiment, Pennsylvania militia, under Major Gen. John F. Reynolds and assigned to the command of the First brigade. The object of forming this division being accomplished by the contest at Antietam, it was mustered out of service. Under the act relative to a new geological survey of Pennsylvania, he was appointed by Governor Hartranft a commissioner, and by his colleagues its treasurer, filling these positions until the work was done. As a co-trustee of his father's estate, he has shown tact and judgment, and, in the pursuit of all the business in which he is engaged, great energy and success. To all benevolent objects he is a most generous giver, without ostentation or publicity. As an evidence of the esteem in which he is held, it may be stated that when a candidate for Congress in 1882, his majority in his native county was one hundred and fifty-nine, while his party was in a minority of nearly fifteen hundred on the vote for other offices. Col. McCormick m. June 29, 1867, Annie Criswell, daughter of John Vance Criswell and Hannah Dull. They had issue:

Partridge's Military Institute, the Harrisburg Academy, graduating from Yale College in 1853; studied law under his father; was admitted to the bars of Dauphin and Cumberland counties, and practiced for several years. Upon the death of his father, he became one of the trustees of his estate, a charge that absorbed his time and attention to such a degree that he abandoned his profession. The magnitude of this estate and the enterprises conducted under it require caution, prudence and judgment in its management. Mr. McCormick has shown all these qualities in the successful performance of his duties. He has never held political office, but, in the religious and charitable work of the day, occupies a conspicuous position. He had been an elder in the Pine Street Presbyterian church from 1858 to 1894, a successful Sunday-school tutor, president and trustee of the Young Men's Christian Association; in all the active work of his denomination, a most efficient and liberal agent; a large contributor to the Home for the Friendless, Harrisburg; to all charitable objects, and, from its opening, president of the Harrisburg hospital—one of its most active, attentive and competent advisers. He m., May 26, 1859, at Harrisburg, Pa., MARY WILSON ALRICKS, b. November 24, 1833; d. August 5, 1891, at Harrisburg, Pa.; daughter of Herman Alricks and Mary Wilson Kerr (see Alricks record). General Grant appointed him Secretary of War, May 22, 1876, which office he held until the close of that administration. In 1876 he was a delegate to the National Republican Convention at Cincinnati, and, upon the resignation of his father, General Cameron, as United States Senator, was elected by the Legislature to fill the vacancy, subsequently re-elected for the full term ending March 3, 1885, and again for the terms ending March 3, 1891, and March 3, 1897. On his return he published two volumes of travels, "A Visit to the Camp before Sebastopol" and "St. Paul's to St. Sophia." In 1858 and 1859 he edited the Young Men's Magazine, and was instrumental in founding the Young Men's Christian Association in this country, being for some time corresponding secretary of the New York organization. During the early months of the war of the Rebellion he was with the Federal army in the field as correspondent for the New York Evening Post. In 1861 President Lincoln appointed him chief clerk of the Department of Agriculture, and, in 1863, secretary of the Territory of Arizona. In 1866 he became Governor of the same Territory, from which he was elected, in the year 1869, delegate to Congress. In this capacity he served the Territory six years, while he also represented the Territory in the Republican National Convention of 1876, and in the Centennial Exhibition of the same year. During the presidential campaign which immediately followed, he acted as secretary of the Republican National Committee, and, on the election of Rutherford B. Hayes, was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, which ill health subsequently obliged him to resign. In 1878 he became American Commissioner to the Paris Exposition, and on the successful completion of that service retired from public life. He m., first, MARGARET G. HUNT, who d. III. ALEXANDER McNAIR,² (Alexander,³ Robert,² Alexander,¹) b. in 1774, in Derry township, Lancaster county, Pa. He received a fair English and classical education under Joseph Hutchinson, whose remains are interred in old Derry graveyard, and who was a superior teacher. He subsequently attended a term at the Philadelphia College, now University of Pennsylvania, but his father dying, he was called home to the paternal farm in Derry. The mother shortly after deceased, and the sons, Dunning and Alexander, agreed to settle their parent's estate in a novel manner—that whosoever would be the victor in a fair encounter should be the owner of the homestead. Alexander received a severe whipping at the hands of his brother, to which he afterwards acknowledged he owed the honor of being Governor of Missouri. In 1799, through the influence of Senator William Maclay, of Harrisburg, he received the appointment of lieutenant of infantry in the U. S. army, having formerly served as lieutenant in command of a company from Dauphin county in the Whiskey Insurrection of 1794. In 1804 he went to the Missouri Territory, then recently acquired, where he served a number of years as U. S. Commissary, stationed at St. Louis. In a St. Louis tax list for 1811 he appears taxed for one of the nineteen "carriages of pleasure" then held in that city.* In 1812 he was appointed adjutant and inspector general, and during the war with England was a colonel of Missouri militia in the United States service. The name of Alexander McNair appears among a list of merchants and traders in 1817, doing business in St. Louis. He was the first Governor of Missouri, holding office from 1820, when the State government was formed, to 1824. At the expiration of his term of office he filled an important position in the Indian department. He died in St. Louis, March 18, 1826, aged fifty-two years, and his remains rest in Calvary cemetery, that city. He was a man of great popularity, and strict integrity, and left to his family an honored name. Governor McNair married, in 1805, SUSANNE MARGUERITE DE REILHE, a native of St. Louis. She was the daughter of Antoine and Stella (Camp) de Reilhe,

* We learn that Gov. McNair resided at one time on the corner of Main and Spruce streets, St. Louis, in a double house, two rooms deep, with servants' quarters outside. This house was built of logs set upright, as the French custom was. It was surrounded by a wide veranda, supported by cedar posts, with a neat railing around it. This house was daguerrotyped by Easterly when in a state of extreme dilapidation, and about to be pulled down, and often appears in the public prints as "the residence of Gov. McNair, the first Governor of Missouri." At the time he held office, and prior, he lived in a house west of Broadway, in what was then the northern suburbs: with improved grounds and an avenue bordered with roses, leading to the front entrance. It was at a later date locally known as the "Biddle Mansion."
and granddaughter of the Rev. Dr. Camp, formerly of Amherst county and parish, Virginia, and the first Episcopalian minister to move as far west as the Mississippi of whom there is any record. Dr. Camp went with George Rogers Clarke’s expedition in 1778, as far as Louisville, where Clarke abandoned his boats and crossed the country to Kaskaskia. Dr. Camp descended the river to Natchez, and the next year returned and settled at Kaskaskia, where he died April 20, 1786. The same year his widow, Mrs. Ann (Olivier) Camp and her four daughters, one of whom had just married Antoine de Reilhe, moved to St. Louis, where the future Mrs. McNair was born January, 1787. The father of Mrs. McNair was a French gentleman of position, with very polished manners, and his wife dying early, he devoted himself to the education of his three children. Mrs. McNair, the eldest, was highly educated for that time, and possessed manners of extreme elegance. She married Mr. McNair when eighteen years of age, and her bridal trip was to accompany her husband on horseback to Pittsburgh, where he went on business and to visit some relatives. After some months they returned in boats, which were taking government supplies to western posts. She survived her husband thirty-seven years, and left but four of her large family living. She died in St. Louis, June 17, 1863, and rests in Calvary cemetery by the side of her husband. They had issue:

to the study of theology under the direction of his patron. In the year 1774 he was licensed to preach by the Lutheran Synod of Pennsylvania. Mr. Müller’s first regular pastoral charge was at Reading, where he remained from August, 1775, to August, 1777, when he removed to Philadelphia. Having consecrated himself to the work of the ministry, he evinced much of a self-denying spirit in preaching the gospel to the poor, and laboring to collect and build up congregations in the most obscure places, and under the most unfavorable circumstances. He served for some time as chaplain to an associated battalion in the war of the Revolution. Mr. Müller, about 1783, became the settled pastor of the church at Albany, N. Y., and it was under his ministry that the first Lutheran church edifice in that city was built. In 1789 he received and accepted a call to New Holland, Lancaster county, Pa., where he continued very laboriously engaged until 1795, when he took charge of the Lutheran interests in Harrisburg and in the neighborhood. He was the first pastor after the separation of the Lutheran from the Reformed congregation. Here he remained seven years, and although his duties were laborious, his ministry was a successful one. In the year 1802, much to the regret of the congregation, he relinquished this charge, returned to his former field of work in the State of New York, where he continued about six years (the period he usually allowed himself for continuance in one place), when he accepted a call to the united churches of Sharon and New Rhinebeck, Schodarie county, N. Y., where he officiated until physical infirmity rendered him incapable of attending to his pastoral duties. He died at Sharon, on the 16th of September, 1829, in the eighth year of his age. Mr. Müller in person was rather thick set, somewhat below the medium height, and very agreeable in manners and appearance. As a preacher he was not brilliant, but instructive and practical, while in the more private duties of the pastoral office was eminently felicitous and faithful. He was a bright example of the Christian spirit, and an eminently devoted minister. The Rev. Mr. Müller was twice married. He married, first, on September 19, 1775, Esther Ott, sister of John Nicholas Ott. She probably died at Harrisburg, Pa. He married, secondly, the widow of Baron Zedwick, who lost his life in the French war. This latter connection proved every way a happy one, for his wife was a woman of sweet manners and amiable disposition. She died in 1827. We have no knowledge if they left any descendants.

IX. JOHN LOBINGIER,1 John,2 Elizabeth,3 John-George,4 Rudolph,1) b. August 21, 1799, at Laurelville, Westmoreland county, Pa.; d. May 16, 1885, at Mount Pleasant, that county. After his farm life, his business was teaming, and many years were spent in transportation service, the turnpike filling the place for commercial purposes then, which is now occupied by the railroad. After his marriage, he became the owner of a large farm east of Mount Pleasant, which he operated in conjunction with his other enterprises. He continued to reside on his farm until the increasing infirmities of an honorable old age admonished him that the heat and burden of the day should be borne by younger shoulders. He accordingly built a handsome residence in the town and in 1882 removed into it. From that time he spent the evening of his life in well-earned leisure. In 1840 he became a member of the Middle Presbyterian church, and continued an active supporter there until the Memorial Presbyterian church was formed, when he, with his family, transferred their membership to the new congregation. He had a large circle of acquaintances by whom he was highly respected for his sterling qualities of mind and heart. MURRAY OF HARRIS' FERRY.

I. Patrick Murray, b. March 17, 1755, in county Donegal, Ireland; d. July 23, 1854, in Orange township, Ashland county, O. He came to America at the outset of the struggle for Independence, and we find that on the 3d of June, 1776, he enlisted in Captain James Parr's company, of the First regiment, of the Pennsylvania Line, for three years or during the war. He was discharged in 1782, and shortly after settled at Harris' Ferry, on the Susquehanna, and when, two years after, the town of Harrisburg was laid out, established himself in business as a "clothier and fashioner." In the year 1800 he removed with his family to Greensburg, Westmoreland county, Pa., remaining there until 1809, when he located in Stark county, O. In 1812 he and his son James volunteered in the brigade of Gen. Reasin Beall, organized for the defence of the border settlers in the Northwest. While quartered at Fort Meigs the army became much distressed for want of provisions; the roads to the settlements were long, rough, and in poor condition, passing mostly through dense forests, and across marshes and bogs. The quantity of forage consumed by the cavalry as well as the supply of the quartermaster's department for the troops made it difficult to furnish the necessary rations at the proper time. On more than one occasion the troops were on the point of starvation, and this, with the inclemency of the weather, made their sufferings almost unbearable. Several reminiscences of this period, in Mr. Murray's history, have been preserved to us which show that under the most adverse circumstances his mother wit and his indomitable energy never forsook him, while his patriotism was none the less enthusiastic by his many deprivations. After General Beall returned, the father and son served a second enlistment, and were at the battle of Fort Meigs. In that contest the elder Murray was separated from his company, and the grass being very tall it was presumed by his comrades that he had been killed and scalped by the Indians. After a few hours he appeared in the camp amid the cheers of his companions at his safe return. Upon the expiration of his term of service he returned to his home in Stark county, where he remained until 1812, when he removed to what is now Orange township, then Richland county, O. It is said of him that, although his education was defective, he had a very retentive memory, and enjoyed at the close of his long life the relation of the exploits and border achievements of himself and other early pioneers in that section of Ohio. In many respects he was a remarkable man, and was all his life-time active, energetic, and industrious. On the 4th of July the year he was ninety-nine years of age he rode to Ashland in a buggy, walked about one mile during the day and returned home, some three miles, in the evening. He voted for ten different Presidents of the United States. Mr. Murray m., September 2, 1786, at Harrisburg, Pa., by Rev. I. John Murray, a native of Scotland, came to America late in life with his two sons and their families. He probably died a few years afterwards. The only members of his family of whom we have record are the following:

2. i. William, b. February 24, 1690; m. [Isabella] Lindley.
3. ii. John, b. 1691; m., and had issue.

They settled on the Swatara, in the Province of Pennsylvania. He m. [Isabella] Lindley, sister of Thomas Lindley, of Scotland, who also emigrated to Pennsylvania about the same time, and located in the neighborhood of the Murrays. It is not definitely known whether either the Murrays or Lindleys came direct from Scotland or had sojourned in Ireland for some time. William Murray d. on his farm July 24, 1773, his wife probably preceding him. They had issue, among others, five sons:

III. John Murray, (John,) b. about 1691, in Scotland; emigrated to the Province of Pennsylvania in 1732 in company with his brother and other friends. On the 10th of January, 1737, he obtained a land warrant from the Proprietaries of Pennsylvania, and on the "14th of ye 9th month," 1739, had the same located upon two hundred acres and twelve perches of land adjoining the northwest side of "Swahatawro" (Swatara) creek, then in Hanover township, Lancaster county, Pa. Adam Read, an early settler and prominent in frontier times, held an adjoining tract on the north by improvement. On the first of March, 1744, John Murray obtained another warrant, which was located, about a year afterward, east of the other tract, and between it and land of James Stewart. This latter tract is now within the limits of Lebanon county, the former, the homestead, being within the present bounds of Dauphin county, a short distance from Dixon’s Ford on the Swatara. The date of death or name of John Murray’s wife we have been unable to gather. Of their children, however, we have the following:

i. William, b. 1714; m., and had issue, among others:
   1. John, b. 1787; known as “Presbyterian John” to distinguish him from his cousin, John Murray, son of Robert (see vi). Dr. John Rodgers’ church; in politics, a Federalist, enjoying the intimate acquaintance of such men as Rufus King and Alexander Hamilton. He was greatly esteemed in the mercantile community, and presided over the New York Chamber of Commerce from 1798 to 1806; died at his country seat, on Murray Hill, October 17, 1808; his children were John-R., Hamilton, Hannah, and Mary.

For this farm he entered an application in the Land Office in 1768. In 1775 he was chosen to represent Upper Paxtang township in the Committee of Safety for Lancaster county and attended the meetings of the Committee in Lancaster on the 8th, 9th and 10th of November. At this time he was a captain of “a company of foot in the Fourth battalion of Associates in the county of Lancasser." On the fourth of July, 1776, at a military convention representing the fifty-three battalions of Associators of Pennsylvania, he was present as a captain. With John Rogers and John Harris, on the 8th of July, 1776, by appointment of the Provincial Conference, he superintended the election at Garber's Mill for the Sixth district of Lancaster county, to choose delegates to the convention that assembled on the 15th of the month, and which framed the first Constitution of the Commonwealth. During the remainder of that and the following year he was almost in constant active military service with his company. His company, a roll of which appears in Dr. Egle's Notes and Queries, First Series, p. 7, and in Pennsylvania Archives, Second Series, vol. xiii., p. 310, went into the Continental service in July or early in August, 1776. In a return of the troops quartered in and near Philadelphia, made August 27th, of that year, it is reported sixty strong. It participated in the battles of Trenton and Princeton. He commanded one of the companies of the Tenth battalion, Lancaster county militia, and was with the expedition up the West Branch in 1779. The exposures to which Captain Murray was subjected during the Revolutionary struggle brought on an attack of rheumatism, from which for many years prior to his death he was a constant sufferer. Samuel Miles' battalion, and participated in the battles of Long Island, White Plains, Trenton, and Princeton. He was promoted to major April 18, 1777, and lieutenant colonel of the Second Pennsylvania regiment in 1780, serving until the disbanding of the army in 1783. He then returned to his family and farm. Governor Mifflin appointed him a justice of the peace August 29, 1791, the only political office he ever held. He was an ardent Whig of the Revolution, and a brave officer. VII. ROBERT MURRAY, (John, John,) b. about 1721, in Scotland; d. July 22, 1786, in the city of New York. He came to America with his parents and remained on the Swatara until about the year 1750, when he removed to North Carolina when the immigration thither was in full tide. Two or three years sufficed, however, when he turned his face northward and settled in the city of New York, where he entered into mercantile pursuits; subsequently purchasing the tract of land known as "Murray Hill," now in the heart of the metropolis. This became historical as the spot where Mrs. Murray, during the Revolution, entertained Lord Howe and his officers long enough to enable the American troops under Putnam to escape. Although brought up in the Westminster Confession, and members of Old Derry church, whatever may have been the cause we know not, Robert Murray and his wife joined the Society of Friends in New York, and it was therefore in the tenets of this persuasion that his large family of children were instructed. Of his parents, the son, in his autobiography, thus writes: "My parents were of respectable character, and in the middle station of life. My father possessed a good flour mill at Swatara, but being of an enterprising spirit and anxious to provide handsomely for his family, he made several voyages to the West Indies, in the way of trade, by which he considerably augmented his property. Pursuing his inclinations, he in time acquired large possessions, and became one of the most respectable merchants in America. . . . . . . My mother was a woman of an amiable disposition, and remarkable for mildness, humanity, and liberality of sentiment. She was, indeed, a faithful and affectionate wife, a tender mother, and a kind mistress." Robert Murray m., in 1744, MARY LINDLEY, daughter of Thomas Lindley. They had issue, twelve children, of whom we have the names of only four:

9. i. Lindley, b. 1745; m. Hannah Dobson.
11. iii. Beulah, m. Martin Hoffman.
   iv. Susan, d. 1808; m. Gilbert Colden Willett.

VIII. MARGARET MURRAY,4 (James,3 William,2 John,1) b. 1756, in Paxtang township, Lancaster county, Pa.; d. April 27, 1826, at Huntingdon, Pa.; m., May 7, 1776, by Rev. John Elder, JOHN SIMPSON, b. about 1744, in Buckingham township, Bucks county, Pa.; d. February 3, 1807, in Huntingdon, Pa. His parents, John and Mary Simpson, went south and were residing in North Carolina in 1783 and in Georgia in 1791. The son learned blacksmithing, and, in 1763, settled on the Susquehanna, in what was then Upper Paxtang township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county. On the 15th of August, 1775, he was commissioned second lieutenant of Capt. James Murray’s company in the Fourth battalion of Associators, of Lancaster county. On the 28th of January, 1777, Lieut. Col. Cornelius Cox, of the battalion, ordered him to remain in the “Continental smith-shop” at Bristol. He served during the greater part of the Revolution, towards its close in command of a company of militia, when he returned to his farm. In the spring of 1793 he removed to Huntingdon, where he passed the remainder of his days. They had issue, save the last two, all born in Paxtang (surname Simpson):

   iv. Martha, b. February 15, 1786; m., May 6, 1805, George Anshutz, Jr., who removed to Pittsburgh, where they both died; and had issue (surname Anshutz): George S., Margaretha S., m. Thomas Linford, Oliver R., Edmund Murray, and Theodore.
   v. Anna, b. July 9, 1788; d. May 26, 1856, in Franklin township, Huntingdon county, Pa.; m. William Curry.

IX. LINDLEY MURRAY,* (Robert,* John,* John,) b. in 1745 on the banks of the Swatara, in Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; d. February 16, 1826, at his residence near York, England. He received a good education, but having a dislike to mercantile pursuits, studied law, and was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-one. The year after he married. His limited practice was temporarily interrupted by a visit to England, whither his father had preceded him in hope of benefitting his health. He returned to New York in 1771, and renewed the practice of law with marked success; tiring of it, however, when the Revolution broke out and New York was occupied by the British army, or having no sympathy with the cause of Independence, he removed to Islip, on Long Island, and entered a mercantile life. We have always given Lindley Murray credit for his religious principles as having precluded him from taking part in the struggle between the Colonies and the mother country, but in a letter in our possession, written by William Darby to his friend, Mrs. Anna Dixon, the true incentive is, perhaps, given. Mr. Darby was well acquainted with the men of his time—he was intimate with the patriots of the Revolution, and learned much of the inward history of the people, concerning whom, it is to be regretted, he did not give his reminiscences. William Darby was born in the same neighborhood, and was intimate with the Dixons and Roans, to the former of whom Murray was related, and through them learned more of him than biographers choose to tell. In the success and greatness of a man, we too often lose sight of the grave errors into which he may have fallen. But we are loath to dispel the bright halo which glimmers around the life of the celebrated grammarian. Sabine classes him among the Loyalists of the Revolution, and Darby, in contrasting him with his cousin, Robert Dixon, whose blood was the first Pennsylvania offering to the cause of Independence, speaks of Murray’s taking sides with the enemies of his country. This we can easily understand. Surrounded by his religious friends whose peace principles would not allow them to take up arms—although many hundreds did, who were subsequently disowned for it—and in a city occupied by the king’s troops, he himself says he had little faith in the successful resistance of the Colonies. It was thus he became a loyalist. His father’s business and his own thrived, and the rule of England was sufficient for him. We venture the opinion that there were really few instances where religious principles made men Tories. Mercenary motives were generally at the bottom of it. It is to be regretted that Lindley Murray’s silent influence should have been on the side of British oppression and tyranny. At the close of the war he had amassed a fortune, and, when peace had dawned, he sailed away from the land of his nativity and the home of liberty. His attachment to the home of his fathers, he said, "was founded on many pleasing associations. In particular, I had strong prepossessions in favor of a residence in England, because I was ever partial to its political constitution and the mildness and wisdom of its general laws. . . . Only leaving my native country, there was not, therefore, any land in which I could cast my eyes with so much pleasure, nor is there any which could have afforded me so much real satisfaction as I have found in Great Britain. May its political fabric, which has stood the test of ages and long attracted the admiration of the world, be supported and perpetuated by Divine Providence." In 1784 he went to England, and, after visiting several localities, purchased a small estate at Holdgate, about a mile from York, upon which he resided until his death. Living in ease and retirement, he entered upon a literary life which proved a successful one, and has inscribed his name high upon fame's portals. In 1787 he published a small work entitled "The Power of Religion on the Mind," which passed through seventeen editions. His next work, and that by which he is principally known, was his "English Grammar," first published in 1795, and such was the unexpected demand for it that several editions were published during the same year. Following this, appeared "English Exercises," and a "Key," an abridgment of which treatises were published in one volume in 1797. His other writings are "The English Reader," with an "Introduction and Sequel," "The English Spelling Book," a new edition of his Grammar, "Exercises and Key," in two octavo volumes, a selection from Horne's "Commentary on the Psalms," and "The Duty and Benefit of Reading the Scriptures." Lindley Murray's educational publications were not alone confined to his mother tongue. He prepared two French works, "Introduction au Lecteur Francois" and "Lecteur Francois," which soon came into general use, were highly commended, and passed through a large number of editions. His life in England was a busy one, as it was an eventful one. No American who made a European tour failed to visit Holdgate. His personal appearance, his unassuming demeanor and his conversational powers excited in the minds of all visitors great admiration. Lindley Murray m., June 22, 1767, HANNAH DOBSON, d. in England and buried by the side of her husband at Holdgate. They had no children.

During the sessions of 1858 and 1859 he was one of the clerks of the State Senate, and in 1859 elected to the Legislature. In 1854 and 1855 he served as burgess of the borough, and in 1871

elected to the same office for three years. Under the Constitution of 1873, the department of Internal Affairs was organized, and Mr. Africa was appointed deputy secretary under Gen. William McCandless. "His knowledge and experience peculiarly qualified him for putting the new department into successful operation. The entire labor and responsibility of doing so devolved upon him, and it is well known to the people of the State how faithfully the duty was performed, and how creditably and honorably he acquitted himself in the important trust." In 1878 he was nominated by the Democratic State Convention for the head of that department, and although his vote was highly flattering, he failed of an election. Four years afterwards, in 1882, however, he was again nominated for the same position, and was elected for the term of four years. In 1880 President Hayes appointed him supervisor of the census for the Seventh district of Pennsylvania, comprising fourteen counties in the central part of the State. He was elected cashier of the First National Bank, of Huntingdon, in 1881, and served until he was sworn in as Secretary of Internal Affairs in 1883. In addition to these public and official duties, he has been identified with the leading business enterprises of his native town. Soon after the expiration of his term as Secretary of Internal Affairs in 1886, he was chosen president of the Union Trust Company, of Philadelphia, which position he still occupies. He is also a director in the First National Bank, of Huntingdon, Pa. From 1885 to 1890 he served as an officer in the Grand Lodge of Masons, of Pennsylvania, and in 1891 and 1892 was Grand Master. I. John Neville, 3 son of George Neville, 1 and Ann Burroughs, who was a cousin of Lord Fairfax, was b. July 26, 1731, on the head waters of Occoquan river, Virginia. His father’s residence is laid down on Governor Pownall’s, and Fry and Jefferson’s maps, also on map in Spark’s “Life and Writings of Washington.” On the map in Jefferson’s Notes on Virginia,” edition of 1787, it is laid down near the head of Bull Run, a branch of the Occoquan. He was an early acquaintance of Washington, and served with him in Braddock’s expedition. He subsequently settled near Winchester, Frederick county, where he held the office of sheriff. He was in Dunmore’s expedition of 1774. Prior to this he had made large entries and purchases of land on Chartier’s creek, and built a house, now owned and occupied by Mrs. Mary Wrenshall, and was about to remove there when the Revolutionary troubles began. He was elected a delegate from Augusta county to the Provincial Convention of Virginia, which appointed George Washington, Peyton Randolph, and others to the first Continental Congress, but was prevented by sickness from attending. On the 7th of August 1775, the Provincial Convention of Virginia ordered him to march with his company and take possession of Fort Pitt. December 23, 1776, he was appointed a justice of Yohogania county court, but considering the distracted state of the country, occasioned by the boundary dispute, and his position as commandant at Fort Pitt, he prudently declined the appointment. He was colonel of the Fourth Virginia regiment in the Revolutionary war. Subsequent to the Revolution he was a member of the Board of Property, and of the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania, and of the Pennsylvania Convention which ratified the Federal Constitution; he was also a member of the Convention which formed the Constitution of Pennsylvania in 1789–90. In 1791, at the urgent solicitation of the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, he accepted the appointment of Inspector of the Revenue in the Fourth Survey of the District of Pennsylvania, which he held until after the suppression of the Whiskey Insurrection and establishment of the supremacy of the laws of the United States. He was appointed agent, at Pittsburgh, for the sale of lands, under the act of Congress, passed May 18, 1796, entitled "an act for the sale of the lands of the United States in the Territory northwest of the Ohio, &c." He died on Montour's Island, now Neville township, Allegheny county, Pa., July 29, 1803, and was buried in the First Presbyterian churchyard, Pittsburgh. The inscription on his tombstone, now almost illegible, is as follows:

In memory of | General John Neville, | who departed this life | July 29, 1803; | Aged 72 years and 3 days. | During his long life | he filled many important offices, | both | Civil and Military; | in the former, he was virtuous and disinterested; | in the latter, he was patriotic and brave. | He enjoyed | the friendship and confidence of the | illustrious Washington. | The day of his death witnessed the | most pleasing Tribute | that can be paid to the | memory | of a mortal, | The sincere regrets of his | friends | and the | tears | of the neighboring poor.

General Neville was a consistent member of the Protestant Episcopal Church; and the first Episcopal church west of the Allegheny mountains was built at his expense, on the site of the present stone church at Woodville, Allegheny county, Pa. He m., August 24, 1754, Winifred Oldham, b. 1736, in Virginia; d. 1797, in Pittsburgh, Pa. She was descended from John Oldham, who emigrated to Virginia from England, in March, 1635. His son, Thomas Oldham, was the father of Col. Samuel Oldham, of Westmoreland county, Va., b. 1680; d. 1762; m. Elizabeth Newton, b. 1687; d. 1759. Their son, John Oldham, b. 1705, m. Anne Conway, and had Winifred, m. John Neville; Mary-Ann, m. Maj. Abraham Kirkpatrick, and Col. William, m. Penelope Pope. Maj. Abraham Kirkpatrick had three daughters; one of whom Mary-Ann, m. Judge Shaler, and was the mother of Conway, Clarence, Louisa-Amelia, and Augusta. Louisa A. Shaler was killed by a fall from a horse. Col. William Oldham, killed at St. Clair's defeat in 1791, m., in 1783, Penelope Pope, had Abby, who m. Samuel Churchill, and had Samuel B. Churchill, of Louisville, Ken. The children of General Neville were:

2. i. Presley, b. September 6, 1755; m. Nancy Morgan,
3. ii. Amelia, b. 1768; m. Major Isaac Craig.

II. Presley Neville, (John, George) b. September 6, 1755, at Winchester, Va.; d. December 1, 1818, at his residence near Neville, Clermont county, Ohio, thirty miles above Cincinnati. After graduating at the University of Philadelphia, with distinguished reputation for classical attainments, he entered the army in 1775, in the twentieth year of his age, as a lieutenant in the company commanded by his father, Gen. John Neville. He quickly rose to the rank of major, and, as such, became aid-de-camp to the Marquis de Lafayette. Similarity of feeling and manners created an ardent friendship between these accomplished, and, at that time, young officers, which continued uninterrupted, and retained Major Neville in the family of the Marquis two years. In January, 1780, the Fourth Virginia regiment, commanded by his father, Gen. John Neville, was ordered to Charleston, S. C., with Presley Neville as lieutenant-colonel. He was made prisoner at the surrender of Charleston, and returned thence to Virginia on parole, but was exchanged before the close of the war. Presley Neville took part in the battles of Trenton, Princeton, Brandywine, Germantown, and Monmouth. At Monmouth he had a horse killed under him. After his marriage, he moved to a property he owned on Chartier's creek, called Woodville. In 1792 he removed to Pittsburgh, where he resided until 1816. Presley Neville was always honored with the friendship of General Washington, and held many of the most confidential offices under the general and State governments. An obituary notice of him by Mr. Ornsby in the Pittsburgh Gazette, of December 18, 1818, says: "It falls to the lot of but few men to enjoy so great a degree of personal popularity, as has attended the subject of this notice through life. He was favored by Providence with the possession of an ample fortune, which enabled him to indulge to excess a benevolence as warm and as expansive as ever glowed in a mortal breast. It had a fault; it was too lavish for prudential maxims to mingle in its council, and too honorable to doubt the rectitude of its ardent impulses. Like most generous men, he suffered dearly for his liberality; but he repined not at this dispensation of Providence, nor repented of those acts which he performed with pleasure and reflected on with pride. He was admired by his equals, respected by his inferiors, and loved by all who knew him; the oppressed clung to him for support, and the prayers of the needy ascended to heaven in his favor. . . . . . . . . . . He breathed his last on the banks of the Ohio, not surrounded by all the comforts of life, for this would have been too great a happiness for an old soldier, but he drew his last sigh surrounded by his children, on the soil granted to him for his Revolutionary services. At the present day the remembrance of those services are of little value, except as a theme of pride to his descendants; but the future historian will rank him among those heroes to whom his country owes her independence." There are some incidents in the life of Louis Phillipe, connected with the Nevilles, so creditable to him, that they are here introduced: "About the year 1796 the Duke of Orleans, afterwards Louis Phillipe, King of France, accompanied by his two brothers, Montpensier and Beaujolais, came to the western country. On arriving at Pittsburgh, then a small village, they found one or two emigres, who had formerly filled prominent stations under the ancienne regime, but who were now earning a scanty subsistence in carrying on some little business of merchandise. One of them, the Chevalier Du Bac, proposed to General Neville, whose house was always the temple of hospitality, where he was in the habit of dining every Sunday, and at whose table and fireside the unfortunate emigre was sure to find a hearty welcome, to introduce the travelers. The general at first received the proposition with coldness. He said he had been a soldier of the Revolution, the intimate of Rochambeau and Lafayette, and, of course, entertained a feeling of the deepest respect for the memory of the unfortunate Louis, not as a monarch, but as a most amiable and virtuous man. He insisted that no good could spring from the infamous exciter of the Jacobins, the profligate Egalité. But, "mon Général," (said the chevalier, with a shrug of the shoulders, and most melancholy contortion of his wrinkled features,) "ils sont dans les grande misère, et 'ils out été chassé, comme nous autres, par ces vilains sans culottes." The chevalier knew his man, and the bon hommie of the general prevailed. "Eh, bien! chevalier, alez, rendre nos devoirs aux voyageurs, et qu'ils dinent chez nous demain." The strangers accepted his courtesy, and became intimate with and attached to the family of the kind-hearted American; the charms of the conversation of the Duke of Orleans, and his various literary attainments, soon obliterated for the moment the horrible career of his father from the minds of the hearers. The brothers, on quitting Pittsburgh, left a most favorable impression on the minds of the little circle in which they were received so kindly. The recollection of the amiable Beaujolais was particularly cherished; and when the news of his death in Sicily, a few years after, reached the West, the family of General Neville expressed the sincerest sorrow." Many years later the Cincinnati Republican says: "Immediately upon the landing of the Prince De Joinville in this city he inquired for Morgan Neville, expressed a desire to see him, and regretted to hear of his death. Louis Phillipe, the father of the young Prince, when an exile in this country, became acquainted with Morgan Neville, then a lad residing at Pittsburgh, and with the late General Neville, his father, into whose house the exile was hospitably received. Louis Phillipe had remembered this little kindness amid the varied and embarrassing scenes of his life, and gave in charge of his son, when coming to this country, to find out Morgan Neville and renew his acquaintance." A few years later, another son of the general, "Captain Frederick Neville, of the United States navy, happened to enter the port of Marseilles; Louis Phillipe hearing of it, sent for him and received him, with utmost kindness and attention, into his family." General Neville m., October 15, 1782, Nancy Morgan, of whom Breckinridge, in his Recollections of Persons and Places of the West, writing of Presley Neville, says: "He married the daughter of the celebrated General Morgan, an elegant and accomplished lady, who blessed him with an offspring as numerous and beautiful as the children of Niobe." They had issue (surname Neville):

III. Amelia Neville,3 (John,2 George,1) b. April 4, 1763, at Winchester, Va.; d. February, 1849, on Montour's Island, near Pittsburgh, Pa.; m., February 1, 1785, Isaac Craig,1 b. 1741, near Hillsborough, county Down, Ireland; d. May 14, 1826, on Montour's Island, and is buried in the graveyard of the First Presbyterian church, Pittsburgh. He emigrated to America in 1765, and settled in Philadelphia, where he became a master-builder. In November, 1775, he received an appointment as ranking lieutenant of marines in the navy then being fitted out, and in that capacity served ten months on board the Andrew Doria, commanded by the gallant and unfortunate Nicholas Biddle. While on the Doria, that vessel formed one of the squadron of Commodore Hopkins, which captured the two forts, Nassau and Montague, upon the island of New Providence, in the West Indies, capturing the governor and a large number of cannon and military stores, then much needed by the Americans, and subsequently used in the forts in Rhode Island and on the Delaware. On his return he received a captain's commission dated October 22, 1776. In the latter part of November the marines were ordered to join the army and do duty as infantry, and in that capacity, Captain Craig was present at the crossing of the Delaware, the capture of the Hessians at Trenton, and at the battle of Princeton. On the 3d of March, 1777, he was appointed a captain in a regiment of artillery then formed, under the command of Col. Thomas Proctor, in which he continued to serve until it was disbanded at the close of the Revolution. On the 11th of September, 1777, he was engaged in the battle of Brandywine, where he was severely wounded. The ensuing month he was at the battle of Germantown, and his company was one of those which cannonaded Chew's house, which was so gallantly defended by Major Musgrave. Having passed the ordeal of Valley Forge, early in the spring of 1778 Captain Craig and several other officers were ordered to Carlisle to learn the laboratory art, under the instruction of Capt. Isaac Coren, an officer of skill and experience. On the 29th of March, 1779, he was ordered to the command of the fort at Billingsport, on the Delaware, below Philadelphia. May 20th the regiment was ordered to Easton, and joined Sullivan in his expedition against the Six Nations, returning to Easton on the 18th of October following. The severe winter of 1779-80 he was with the army at Morristown, N. J. On the 20th of April, 1780, Captain Craig was ordered to Fort Pitt with a detachment of artillery and military stores, where he arrived on the 25th of June. Here he continued in command of the artillery until the 29th of July, 1781, when he left his detachment for the Falls of Ohio (Louisville) to join General Clark in his intended expedition against Detroit. He returned to Fort Pitt the 26th of November. During his absence down the river, he had been promoted to the rank of major, from the 7th of October, 1781. In November, 1782, General Irvine received intelligence that the British had established a military post at Sandusky, and were about to establish one either at Cuyahoga or Grand river. He, therefore, ordered Major Craig to take with him the General's aid, Lieutenant Rose, and six active men, and proceed to Cuyahoga and Grand river, to ascertain whether the enemy were making such attempts. This order was eloquent in urging Major Craig to be cautious, and not be stimulated by his zeal for the service to venture too far, and concludes by saying: "One man falling into the hands of the enemy may not only ruin your whole present business, but also prevent future discovery." The major and his party started on their expedition on the 13th of November, taking with them one horse, with a supply of provisions. They crossed the Big Beaver river at its mouth. Thence they proceeded in a direction south of west, as if bound to the Indian town at the forks of Muskingum, pursuing that course until night, and then turned directly north, and traveled all night in that direction. This was done to mislead and elude the pursuit of Indians who may have followed them. When they arrived, as they supposed, within a day's march of the mouth of the Cuyahoga, they left one man with the extra provisions. It was the intention, upon rejoining this man, to have taken a fresh supply of provisions, and then proceed to examine the mouth of Grand river. General Irvine had in his instructions treated this as a point of less importance than the Cuyahoga, but yet worthy of attention. The weather proved very unfavorable after the separation, and the Major, with his party, was detained beyond the appointed time, and the soldier, with the horse, had disappeared; so that when they reached the designated place, weary and half-famished, they found no relief, and had before them a journey of more than one hundred miles through a hostile wilderness. The examination of Grand river had to be abandoned, and the party was compelled to hasten back to Fort Pitt. Variable and tempestuous weather made the return journey laborious and painful. Pursuing the most direct course homeward, before they reached the Conoquenessing, the weather became extremely cold, and they found the stream frozen over, but the ice not firm enough to bear the weight of a man. They resorted to the following expedient as the best the circumstances allowed: A large fire was kindled on the northern bank, and when it was burning freely, the party stripped off their clothes; one man took a heavy bludgeon to break the ice, while each of the others followed with portions of the clothes and arms in one hand and a fire-brand in the other. Upon reaching the southern bank of the stream, these brands were placed together and a brisk fire soon raised, by which the party dressed themselves. Upon reaching the Cranberry plains, they were delighted to find there a hunting party, consisting of Capt. Uriah Springer and other officers, and some soldiers from Fort Pitt. Here, of course, they were welcomed and kindly treated. They reached the fort on the 2d of December, and Major Craig reported that there was no sign of occupancy at the mouth of the Cuyahoga. At the very time the party were crossing the Conoquenessing, November the 30th, 1782, the Treaty of Peace between the United States and Great Britain was signed at Paris. The treaty was ratified by Congress on the 19th of April, 1783, and the disbandment of the army soon followed. Major Craig and Col. Stephen Bayard formed a partnership to carry on the mercantile business in Pittsburgh, and to deal in lands. On the 22d of January, 1784, by articles of agreement, they purchased from the Penns the first ground that was sold within the limits of Pittsburgh. In September, 1787, an act was passed by the Legislature incorporating the Presbyterian congregation of the town of Pittsburgh; eleven trustees were named, of whom six were officers of the Revolutionary army, Major Craig being one. In the spring of 1788, Major Craig retired from business to Farm Hill, adjoining the farms of his father-in-law, and brother-in-law Col. Presley Neville. He remained there but a short time. When the National Government was organized, his old commander and true friend, Gen. Henry Knox, was appointed the first Secretary of War, and in February, 1791, offered him the situation of quartermaster and military storekeeper at Pittsburgh, then a frontier town; this he accepted and held until after the election of Jefferson. Major Craig, like the great majority of the officers of the Revolution, belonged to the party of which Washington and Hamilton were the leaders, and not very long after Jefferson came into power he was removed from office. After the declaration of war in 1812, his services were again sought for, when the knowledge acquired from Captain Coren at Carlisle was found valuable in preparing munitions of war for the northwestern army. After this war he removed to Montour's Island, where he died. Major Isaac Craig had two brothers, James Craig, who resided in Philadelphia, and died there of yellow fever, August 20, 1798; had a daughter Eliza, who m. Edward Gray; their daughter, Elizabeth Gray, m. Hon. John P. Kennedy, Secretary of the Navy, under Fillmore; John Craig, the other brother, was a

About this time he was elected to the Legislature; subsequently, an investigation was made in regard to members supplying themselves with merchandise at the expense of the State, showing that "every member, except Mr. Craig, of Allegheny, had received a share." "The Centennial volume of the First Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh" styles him "the historian par excellence of the city he adorned." His publications are authorities; they are "The Olden Time," two volumes, 1846-7; "History of Pittsburgh," 1851; "Memoir of Major Robert Stobo," 1854; "Life and Services of Major Isaac Craig," 1854, and "An Exposure of a few of the many Misstatements in H. Here he continued twenty-five years. In 1855 his health being seriously impaired, he went abroad for nearly a year. On the 17th of November, 1861, he preached a sermon on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his coming to the church; preached again the next Sabbath, and the next, the 1st of December, died. ORTH OF LEBANON.

I. Balzer or Balthasuer Orth, 1 b. May 5, 1703; emigrated from the Palatinate, Germany, to Lebanon township, Lancaster, now Lebanon county, Pa., about the year 1725. On the right bank of the Danube, about fifteen miles east of Vienna, is the village of Orth, containing about three thousand inhabitants. In the year 1770 Hartneid von Orthe purchased the village and estate surrounding it, founded a church, and erected a castle. It remained in the family for several successive generations, when the proprietor, about the close of the seventeenth century, sold out and removed to Moravia, one of the northern provinces of Austria. The family cannot be traced from Moravia to the Rhine. Balzer Orth had warranted to him, on the 25th of November, 1735, three hundred acres of land in Lebanon township, "whereon he has been long settled." He d. October 20, 1788, at the extreme age of eighty-five years. He m., in 1729, Anna Catharina Rohmer, who d. October 19, 1789, in Lebanon county, Pa. They had issue, all born in now Lebanon county:

November 15, 1794, in Lebanon township; buried in Hebron Moravian graveyard, near Lebanon, Pa. He was brought up amid the dangers and struggles of Pennsylvania pioneer life; received the limited education of the "back settlements," and yet, by self-culture and reading, became a man well-informed and of more than ordinary intelligence. During the French and Indian war he commanded the Lebanon township company in Rev. John Elder's ranging battalion. In 1769 he was one of the commissioners of the county of Lancaster. During the Revolution he was early identified with the movement, and, although well advanced in years, assisted in the organization of the associated battalions, and was appointed sub-lieutenant of the county March 12, 1777. Upon the formation of the county of Dauphin he served as a representative in the General Assembly in 1789 and 1790. He was opposed to the adoption of the Federal Constitution, and took an active part in the Harrisburg Conference of 1788. For a long period he operated and owned New Market forge, which, at his death, he bequeathed to his son, Henry. One of the pioneers in the manufacture of iron in Lebanon county, a man of energy and indomitable perseverance, we are glad to preserve this record of him and his services. She m., November 19, 1766, Andrew Albright (Albrecht), b. April 2, 1718, at Zella, near Sahl, in Thuringia, Germany. He was a gunmaker by trade, and after practicing his business in Halberstadt, Prussia, in 1741, became armorer to a regiment from that town, which served in Silesia and Bohemia during the war of the Austrian succession. In 1750, after hearing Count Zinzendorf preach at Halle, he came to America with a band of young Moravians, and commenced his trade at Christian's Spring in Northampton county. Here his guns became famous, and they were among the first manufactured in the Province. Later, in the service of the Moravian Church he became instructor of music at Nazareth Hall, and in 1766, presided over the Sun Inn at Bethlehem. In 1771 he removed to Lititz, where he resumed the making of guns. During the war of the Revolution, Lancaster county became the center of a brisk production of arms; and it is a fact that more guns were manufactured there than in all the Colonies together. Others engaged in the business were Judge William Henry, the Lefevres, Vondersmiths, etc., of Lancaster town. Mr. Albright d. April 19, 1802, at Lititz, Pa. He left issue (surname Albright):

V. Catharine Orth, (Adam, Balzer,) b. October 31, 1767, in Lebanon township, Lancaster, now Lebanon county, Pa.; d. June 17, 1848, in Lebanon, Pa.; m. John Gloninger, b. September 19, 1758, in Lebanon township, then Lancaster county, Pa.; d. January 22, 1836, in Lebanon, Pa.; with his wife buried in the Reformed church graveyard; son of Philip and Anna Barbara Gloninger. His ancestors were among the earliest settlers in that locality. His father, born in 1719, died December 11, 1796; his mother, born March 12, 1831, died September 23, 1810, and are both buried in the old Reformed church cemetery at Lebanon. John Gloninger received most of his instruction from the pastor of the Reformed church, who was also teacher of the school. When the Revolution broke out he served as a subaltern officer in the Associators. Towards the close of the war he was in command of a battalion of militia. Upon the organization of the county of Dauphin he was appointed by the Supreme Executive Council, county lieutenant, May 6, 1785. He was delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1790, a representative to the General Assembly in 1790, resigning to accept the position of State Senator, which office he also in time resigned, preferring the quiet of home life to the vexations of legislative experience. He was appointed by Governor Mifflin—a warm personal friend—one of the associate judges of the county of Dauphin, August 17, 1791. This position, owing to the distance and the inconvenience of travel, he afterwards resigned. However, upon the erection of the new county of Lebanon, in 1813, he was commissioned one of the associate judges, an office he filled many years. Few men had more extended influence, and were more highly respected and beloved than Judge Gloninger. They had issue (surname Gloninger):

1. Philip, b. February 17, 1788, in Lebanon, Pa; d. there September 10, 1816. Having acquired the necessary preparatory education in the schools of his native town, he entered Dickinson College, where he early completed his literary course. Subsequently he studied divinity under the Rev. C. L. Becker, D. D., of Baltimore, one of the most distinguished theologians and pulpit orators of the age. At a meeting of the Reformed Synod, held at Germantown, in the autumn of 1808, Mr. Gloninger was present, and presented a call from the Reformed church at Harrisburg, with the request that he be "placed over them as their pastor." At the same synod he was ordained. Beside the congregation at Harrisburg there were four others in his charge—Shoop's, Wenrick's, Middletown, and Hummelstown. He soon became prominent in his church, and was appointed by the Synod one of the first two delegates sent by that body to the Synod of the Dutch Reformed church. Owing to "bodily infirmities," he resigned his charge in June, 1814. He returned to Lebanon, where he died. He was a man of superior pulpit talents, naturally gifted, and reared under circumstances highly favorable to the development of his moral and intellectual endowments, became distinguished as a preacher, and early attained a prominent position among his ministerial brethren. He was a faithful pastor, and our paternal grandmother, who was one of his parishioners, in her four score years, spoke very tenderly of the youthful preacher, Gloninger, so dearly beloved and highly esteemed. He m., in 1810, Eliza Clark. The widow afterwards married Lieut. Robert H. Hammond.

He was elected a member of the Assembly from Dauphin county in 1785, and under the Constitution of 1790 served in the House of Representatives from 1797 to 1799. He received a good English education, and was brought up in the iron business. Upon the death of his father he became the owner of New Market forge, but, being elected sheriff of the county of Dauphin, commissioned October 17, 1797, like the vast majority who have followed him in that office, he became financially shipwrecked. In 1801 he was elected State Senator, serving until 1804, when he positively declined further continuance in office. Governor Snyder appointed him flour inspector of the port of Philadelphia in January, 1809, but he resigned this office in April following, when he entered mercantile pursuits in Philadelphia. He remained in that city until about the commencement of the late war with England, when he removed to Baltimore, and had there established a successful business as a merchant, when he suddenly died, at the age of forty-three. X. John W. Gloningier, (Catharine, Adam, Balzer,) b. September 23, 1798, at Lebanon, Pa.; d. March 10, 1874, in his native town. He received his education at the principal schools of Lebanon and Harrisburg, completing it in the city of Baltimore. In 1815 he returned home, and commenced the study of medicine with Dr. King. Early in 1816 he went to Philadelphia, and became a private pupil of Professor Dorsey, then in the height of his fame, at the same time attending lectures in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania and at Blockley Hospital. In 1817 he was elected a member of the Philadelphia Medical Society. He continued his studies in Philadelphia until the death of Professor Dorsey, which occurred in 1818, when he went with the majority of Doctor Dorsey's private pupils to New York. Here he entered the office of the distinguished Professor Hosack, at the same time attending lectures in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he graduated April 1, 1819. He continued his studies in the hospitals of New York and Philadelphia, and early in 1820 returned to Lebanon, where he commenced the practice of medicine. There he soon took a leading position as a physician and surgeon, and maintained it for thirty years. As a general practitioner he was careful, attentive, and distinguished for his accuracy of diagnosis; as a surgeon he was eminent, but his specialty was diseases of the eye, and as an oculist he ranked among the best in the country, being particularly successful in operations for cataract. For the first twenty years of his professional career he was a frequent contributor to the medical journals. Many of the articles show that he was not only a careful observer but a close student, and that he was keeping pace with the progress of medical science. In 1823 he was elected a member of the Pittsburgh Medical Society; in 1826 made a Fellow of the University of New York, and Jefferson Medical College, the same year, conferred upon him the honorary degree of M. D. In 1838 he was elected an honorary member of the New York State Medical Society, and in 1841 the University of Maryland conferred the honorary degree of M. D. upon him, the University of Pennsylvania doing the same in 1848. In March, 1841, he was elected president of the Lebanon bank, a position which he held until January 14, 1867, when he declined a re-election. He always took a deep interest in the church of his fathers, and was mainly instrumental in remodeling the First Reformed church, at Lebanon, about 1844, and later in the founding and building of St. John's church. He freely contributed of his means to all church enterprises, and for many years was a trustee of Marshall College, and also one of the founders and trustees of the Lebanon Academy. Dr. Gloninger was twice married; m., first, December 25, 1820, MARY ANN HASSINGER, of Philadelphia, who died in February, 1846. She was a woman of much culture and refinement, and the mother of all his children. They had issue (surname Gloninger):

June 29, 1861, at Lebanon, Pa., son of Dr. John Marshall and Elizabeth Behm. He received an excellent education at Mount Airy Academy, and in early manhood entered the office of his father as a student of medicine, attended lectures in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he graduated in the spring of 1844. After graduation he began the practice of his profession in connection with his father at Annville, where he remained three years, subsequently practicing at Reading one year, when he permanently located at Lebanon. He soon acquired an extensive and lucrative practice, and took high rank in the profession. Endowed with strong natural talent, good judgment, and strong powers of observation and application, he needed only the opportunities which a large practice gave him to enable him to prove his ability as a practitioner, and to maintain a firm hold upon the affections of the people with whom he came in contact, and among whom he labored. He died in the prime of life. Possessed of a generous nature, he was greatly esteemed and respected by all, and his loss deeply lamented in the community as that of a valuable and upright citizen. He received the education of the borough schools and entered the Harrisburg Academy where he pursued the higher branches. He subsequently began the study of medicine with his brother-in-law, Dr. Luther Reily, afterwards attending the lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which institution he graduated March 12, 1834. Locating at Harrisburg, he began the practice of his profession in partnership with Doctor Reily, which continued until the death of the latter. Few practitioners became as successful as these noted physicians were, and none at the Capital were ever so deservedly popular. For seven years after the death of his life-long friend, Doctor Orth continued his professional life, enjoying not only a large practice, but the confidence and love of his numerous patients. As a physician, he was learned, skillful, self-sacrificing, sympathetic, and faithful. In the community he was greatly beloved for his unassuming, gentle, and gentlemanly demeanor. In the language of a contemporary, "he was a man of fine culture, a careful, attentive, and conscientious physician, quiet and unobtrusive in manner." For many years he was one of the the trustees of the Presbyterian church; was a director of the Harrisburg bank, and served in the borough council. Doctor Orth m. December 16, 1882, in Lafayette, Ind. He was educated at Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg; studied law, and upon his admission to the bar in 1839, removed to Lafayette, Ind. From 1843 to 1850, continuously, he served as a member of the State Senate of Indiana; elected president of that body in 1845, and thus became acting lieutenant governor of the State. He was presidential elector on the Taylor and Fillmore ticket, 1848, and a member of the Peace Conference in 1861. In 1862 he entered the service as captain in the Seventy-sixth regiment, Indiana volunteers, being placed in charge of the United States ram "Horner," and assigned to duty on the Ohio river. He was elected to the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, and Forty-first Congresses from his district, and to the Forty-third Congress from the State at large. Upon the adjournment of the latter Congress, he was appointed and accepted the position of United States Minister to Vienna, having previously declined the mission to Brazil, tendered him by President Grant, filling the duties of that position with remarkable ability. It is stated that upon his first presentation to the emperor, the conversation, agreeably to Mr. Orth, was conducted in German. After a short conversation, the emperor asked, "Tell me, in what part of Germany were you born?" Mr. Orth replied, "Not in Germany, but in Pennsylvania, in the United States." "But," said the emperor, "you speak the pleasing accent of the Rhine." This shows that the so-called Pennsylvania German is a dialect of the great German language of Europe, from whence it was brought, and where, to this day, it is living in all its freshness and vigor as it did centuries ago. On his return from Vienna, Mr. Orth was elected to the Forty-sixth Congress, and in 1879 received the complimentary vote of his party for United States Senator against Hon. Daniel W. Voorhees, and was re-elected to the Forty-seventh Congress as a Republican. In August, 1882, he was unanimously nominated by his party for representative in the Forty-eighth Congress. He was a man of warm and sincere friendship, of sturdy honor, and of clear and vigorous intellect. Few men had a wider and more steadfast acquaintance and friendships, none more honest in his duties to man and to his country. He was devotedly and tenderly attached to his family and fireside, caring more for those than the honors of success and the applause of the world. He left a name honorable to his memory, dear to his family, and a part of the history of his State and Nation. Upon the death of Matthew Carpenter, he used language in his eulogy fitly applicable to his own life, career, and character: “Strong in the conviction of a well-matured and equally well-balanced mind, he stood firm in the conscious rectitude of his position, and hence he was a safe legislator, a wise counsellor, and a true friend. He stood erect as God created him, and dared to do right for the sake of the right.” Mr. Orth was twice married; m., first, in 1840, Sarah Elizabeth Miller, of Gettysburg, Pa., who d. in 1849. They had issue:

XVIII. Cyrus Dorsey Gloninger,5 (John W.4 [Gloninger], Catharine,3 Adam,2 Balzer,1) b. March 13, 1824; d. August 23, 1872, at Lebanon, Pa. His preliminary studies were pursued at the Lebanon Academy, after which he entered Marshall College, then at Mercersburg, graduating in 1843. He began the study of medicine with his father; attended lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, graduating in 1846. The two following years were spent in the medical universities and hospitals of Europe, his accurate and familiar acquaintance with the French and German languages greatly facilitating his studies in the scientific centers of the Old World. Returning home, he commenced the practice of medicine, and shortly acquired a marked reputation for ability and skill in every department of his profession. Like his father, he devoted much of his attention to diseases of the eye, and, in the course of twenty-six years, attained a high rank in this important specialty. He was strictly scientific and regular, faithful to his patients, and honorable to his professional brethren. Aside from the science of medicine, Dr. Gloninger's literary studies were extensive. He was especially well informed in all that relates to the collateral sciences, and his knowledge of sacred and profane history, strengthened by travel and observation, made him an agreeable and entertaining companion. His contributions to various journals and periodicals showed a highly-cultivated mind. As a public man he was greatly esteemed; was twice nominated by the Democratic party, of which he was an adherent, a candidate for Congress, in 1866 and in 1870, but defeated, owing to the strength of the opposition in his district. In the industrial enterprises of his native town he took a warm interest. He was one of the founders of the Lebanon Manufacturing Company, of which he was president; he was president of the Lebanon National Bank, and in his church, St. John's Reformed, was an active and zealous member. His private charities were numerous, and he gave a willing support to the various evangelical and christianizing enterprises of the day. The poor found in him a friend, and his professional life was a philanthropic mission. Dr. Cyrus D. Gloninger m., December, 1851, Julia A. Beaumont, b. at Wilks-Barré, Pa., daughter of Hon. XXV. Joseph Alexander Murray,* (Mary* [Denny], Agnes,* John,* Richard,*) b. October 2, 1815, at Carlisle, Pa., where he d. November 27, 1889. His preparatory education had been acquired in his native place and elsewhere, and in August, of 1837, he graduated from the Western University of Pennsylvania, at Pittsburgh. In the autumn of the same year he entered the Western Theological Seminary, in Allegheny, Pa., and from it he graduated in the autumn of 1840. In October, of the same year, he was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Ohio, which then embraced the churches in and about Pittsburgh. Soon afterwards, he received invitations to visit vacant churches, and accepted one to preach at Marion, Ohio. This church he supplied for six months, from December, of 1840, to May, of 1841, inclusive, but finally declined a unanimous call to become its pastor. He then visited his native place, and in October, of 1841, he received and accepted a call to the united congregations of Monaghan (Dillsburg) and Petersburg, and was ordained and installed pastor of the same by the Carlisle Presbytery in April, of 1842. This relation happily and usefully subsisted for about eighteen years. During his pastorate the present church edifice was erected at Dillsburg. For years he served there also as school director, and president of the board. During the same period several invitations had been received to churches in other places, but declined. Finally, however, in consequence of impaired health, he resigned the charge; the pastoral relation was dissolved in October, of 1858, and he then retired to Carlisle. His health never afterwards permitted him to undertake the active work and assume the responsibilities of a settled pastor, but he supplied several churches, often filled vacant pulpits, and assisted his clerical friends. On four different occasions he was sent by his Presbytery as a commission to the General Assembly—in 1844, 1861, 1865, and 1875. On the last occasion he was also chosen by his Synod, with Hon. H. W. Williams, to defend, if necessary, a decision of said body before the General Assembly, and in this highest church court he was appointed one of the Judicial Committee. In 1876 he was chosen, by acclamation, moderator of the Synod of Harrisburg. In 1869 his alma mater conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. In 1870 he was elected a corresponding member of the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Philadelphia. In 1873 he was elected a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. In 1880 he was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society at Philadelphia. He was president of the Cumberland County Bible Society, secretary of the Historical Association of Carlisle, &c. Several of his discourses and addresses have been published. He frequently contributed to some of the periodicals of our country—literary, historical and religious. But, in no instance, would he ever consent to accept of any work or position that would interfere with his high calling and character as a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Rev. Dr. Murray was twice married; m., first, April 25, 1843, ANN HAYS BLAIR, daughter of Andrew Blair, b. May 6, 1819; d. September 14, 1875, at Carlisle, Pa. They had issue (surname Murray):

As a scientist he deservedly holds a front and honorable rank, and has made frequent contributions of a scientific and educational character, among them, "Leaf Prints," "The Stereoscope," "Wills' Table for Qualitative Chemical Analysis, Translated and Enlarged," "Bunsen's Flame Reactions," "Methods and Results of the Observation of the Total Solar Eclipse of 1869," "Photographic Investigations, including Improved Photographic Toning Process," "Preparation of Photographic Plates by Daylight," "Actinism," and articles in the Annual Record of Science and Industry, from 1873 to 1877, &c.; in 1879 published "Historical Sketch of Dickinson College;" and had issue, besides two children died in infancy, (surname Himes):

Shortly after he located at Landisburg, Perry county, Pa. He continued in the law several years, but subsequently entered the iron business, and for a long time managed Stewart's and Dunbar's furnaces in Fayette county, and Caroline Furnace in Perry county. However, he returned to the bar and practiced in St. Louis and Pittsburgh, eventually locating in San Francisco. He had the honor of filling the office of judge of the different courts in that city, but at the end of his term declined a re-election, preferring to return to his profession, in which he continued until his death—one of the most brilliant minds at the California bar. Judge Creigh was twice married; m., first, September 5, 1826, Caroline Ramsey Williamson; d. May 9, 1856. They had issue (surname Creigh):

After passing through the grammar school connected with Dickinson College, he entered that institution, from which he graduated in 1828. Studied theology under the Rev. George Duffield, D. D., of Carlisle, and completed his theological course at the seminary at Princeton. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Carlisle, April 12, 1831. On the 27th of September following he was installed pastor of the Presbyterian church at Mercersburg, Franklin county, Pa., and, for almost half a century, that was the field of his ministerial labors. He filled that office acceptably to the people of his charge, and was beloved by the citizens of every denomination. He was a faithful messenger of the gospel of Christ. Rev. Dr. Creigh was twice married; m., first, February 14, 1833, Ann Hunter Jacobs, b. July 3, 1809; d. October 16, 1836. They had issue (surname Creigh):

He began the study of medicine with his father, and assisted him for several years in his profession. Turning his attention to literary pursuits, he published several historical works of value, "Masonry and Anti-Masonry," "History of Knights Templar in Pennsylvania," two volumes, "History of Washington county, Pa.," and, also, a "History of Greene county, Pa." In 1850 the University of Kentucky, at La Grange, conferred upon him the degree of LL. D. For almost fifty years he had been prominently identified with the masonic fraternity. Alfred Creigh was twice married; m., first, August 5, 1841, SARAH JANE COOKE, b. September 11, 1814; d. ROAN OF DERRY.

I. ARCHIBALD ROAN, a native of Scotland, settled in Grenshaw, Ireland, about the year 1690. He was a weaver by trade, of good education, and a Covenant. Of his children, two came to America, of whom we have record:

2. i. Andrew, b. 1713; m. Margaret Walker.
3. ii. John, b. April 30, 1717; m. Anne (Cochran) Leckey.

II. ANDREW ROAN, (Archibald,) b. 1713, in Grenshaw, Ireland; d. 1768, in Derry township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; emigrated to America in the year 1739, in company with his brother, Rev. John Roan. He was a weaver by trade, and it is probable from this fact that Webster and Sprague in their Annals of the Presbyterian Church in America state that the Rev. John Roan was a weaver, when such was not the case. It is a well-known fact, however, that among the Scotch-Irish settlers, every man had some trade or occupation. Andrew Roan, at his death, left a wife MARGARET WALKER, who did not survive him long, and children as follows:

i. Margaret, b. 1737; m., 1756, James Barnett, (see Barnett record).
ii. William, b. 1740; removed to Tennessee, there married and died.
iii. Sally, b. 1743.
iv. Hugh, b. 1747.
v. Jennett, b. 1753; m. Thomas Foot.
4. vi. Archibald, b. 1755.

III. Rev. JOHN ROAN, (Archibald,) b. April 30, 1717, (O. S.,) in Grenshaw, Ireland; d. October 3, 1775, in Derry township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa. He received a good education, and emigrated to Pennsylvania about 1740. He entered the "Log College," and taught school on the Neshaminy and in Chester county while pursuing his theological studies. He was licensed by the "Newside" Presbytery of New Castle, and, in the winter of 1744, sent to Hanover, Va.
Pennsylvania Genealogies.

The following year (1745), he was settled over the united congregations of Derry, Paxtang, and Conewago, the latter having one-fifth of his time. The minutes of the Synod placed Roan in Donegal Presbytery, and "points of difficulty," says Webster, "continually arose." Towards the latter days of his ministry, Mr. Roan missionated frequently on the south branch of the Potomac. He lies interred in Derry church graveyard. On his tombstone is this inscription:

_Beneath this stone are deposited the Remains of an able, faithful & courageous minister of Jesus Christ. The Rev'd John Roan, Pastor of Paxton, Derry & Mount Joy Congregations from the year 1745 till Oct. 3, 1775 when he exchanged a Militant for a triumphant Life in the 59 year of his Age._

The Rev. John Roan m., August 21, 1750, Mrs. Anne (Cochran) Leckey, b. March 25, 1724; d. April 22, 1788, in Chester county, Pa.; daughter of James Cochran and Anne Rowan. They had issue:

1. Isabella, b. July 8, 1751; d. November 27, 1758.
2. Jane, b. May 8, 1755; m. William Clingan.
3. Anne, b. May 13, 1755; d. September 1, 1768.
5. Elizabeth, b. August 14, 1758; m. William Clark.
7. Mary, b. March 24, 1764; m. Nathan Stockman.

IV. Archibald Roan, b. 1755, in Derry township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa. Upon the death of his father, in 1768, he was placed in the care of his uncle, the Rev. John Roan. In the will of the latter this mention is made of him: "I also allow to my nephew, Archibald Roan (in case the above persons, the Rev. George Duffield and my executors, apprehend him religiously disposed), twenty pounds towards his college expenses." He studied law, and removed to Tennessee, where he obtained a license to practice that profession. He was shortly afterwards appointed district attorney general, and, in 1795, honored with the position of judge of the Supreme Court of Tennessee. From 1801 to 1804 he was Governor of that State, and held a number of important offices. He was a gentleman of education, a leading jurist, and an honorable citizen of the State of his adoption. He d. at his residence, near Jonesboro', but we have not the date. In honor of him Tennessee named one of its counties. Dr. Ramsey, the venerable historian of Tennessee, and president of the State Historical Society, gives us the following: "In person he was about six feet high, tall and erect, slender, graceful and dignified, exceedingly modest, rather taciturn, always retiring and unpertaining—a well-bred, old-fashioned Virginia gentleman of the last century. The color of his eyes is not now recollected. A little scholarly in his conversation, his voice, and his mien and general manner—unostentatious in his charities and his benefactions. He belonged to the Presbyterian Church, and, if the writer mistakes not, was an elder in Pleasant Forest church, near Campbell's Station, in Knox county. Like Cincinnatus, he went from his farm to his seat on the bench; from the plow to the executive office at Knoxville, Tenn., where the scepter of Judah then was. He was the second Governor of the State of Tennessee, and the immediate successor of Governor Sevier, who was the first. But, unlike Sevier, Governor Roan was without ambition. He had no aspirations to office or political preferment; he preferred the quiet of home and of domestic life. He m. a Miss Campbell, of the Virginia Campbells. He had three sons. James became a physician and was a successful practitioner in Nashville, Tenn. Andrew, it is supposed, settled there too; while the third son, the writer believes, went west and died. A daughter became the first wife of Col. Reynolds A. Ramsey. * * * Much more might be said for Governor Roan. He left no stain upon his high and honorable character. The King's English is too feeble, not sufficiently expressive, to describe it or portray his genuine worth. Another has used another language to describe him truthfully—Integer vitae e scelerisque purus.''

V. Jane Roan,* (John, Archibald,') b. May 3, 1753, in Derry township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; m., June 11, 1778, William Clingan, of Chester county, b. in 1756, son of Thomas Clingan [1722-1788], and Margaret, his wife. In Dunlap's Pennsylvania Packet for June 17, 1778, then published at Lancaster, during the occupation of Philadelphia by the British, we find the following reference to the marriage of Jane Roan, daughter of the Rev. John Roan and William Clingan: "Was married last Thursday (June 11, 1778), Mr. William Clingan, Jr., of Donegal, to Miss Jenny Roan, of Londonderry, both of this county of Lancaster—a sober, sensible, agreeable, young couple, and very sincere Whigs. This marriage promises as much happiness as the state of things in this, our sinful world, will admit. This was truly a Whig wedding, as there were present many young gentlemen and ladies, and not one of the gentlemen but had been out when called on in the service of his country, and it was well-known that the groom in particular had proved his heroism, as well as Whigism, in several battles and skirmishes. After the marriage was ended, a motion was made, and heartily agreed to by all present, that the young unmarried ladies should form themselves into an association by the name of the Whig Association of the Unmarried Young Ladies of America, in which they should pledge their honor that they would never give their hand in marriage to any gentleman until he had first proved himself a patriot, in readily turning out when called to defend his country from slavery, by a spirited and brave conduct, as they would not wish to be the mothers of a race of slaves and cowards." They removed to Buffalo Valley, where they resided until their death. Mr. Clingan was a prominent and influential personage on the frontiers, during and subsequent to the war of the Revolution. He d. May 24, 1822, his wife surviving until May 7, 1838. They had issue (surname Clingan):

i. Margaret, b. October 18, 1779; m., November 15, 1798, John Scott.

iv. Thomas, b. May 19, 1785; d. April 24, 1859; m., in 1813, Margaret Lewis.

He was a man of education, but quite erratic, and never married. As he says in a letter to his cousin, Sankey Dixon, he ‘‘served three years as sheriff of Northumberland county, two years a member of the Assembly, three years a county commissioner, and, for a considerable time, captain of a rifle company.’’ He further says, ‘‘the sheriff business embarrassed me considerably,’’ as was really the case. He subsequently taught school and died in 1817, at the age of fifty-seven. A diary or journal kept by him, and freely quoted from by Hon. John Blair Linn in his admirable History of the Buffalo Valley, is entertaining reading.

VIII. MARY ROAN, b. March 26, 1764, in Derry township, Lancaster, now Dauphin county, Pa.; d. December 24, 1847, at the residence of her son-in-law, James Sharpe, at Sharpsburg, Allegheny county, Pa. She m., Clarke; the latter alone survives.

v. Joseph, b. July 2, 1800; d. unm. at New Orleans, in March, 1885.

FAMILY OF ROBINSON.

I. Among the earliest Scotch-Irish settlers in Pennsylvania was the family of Thomas Robinson, who came to America prior to the year 1730. iv. Richard, b. about 1710; d. in February, 1768, leaving a wife Isabel, and children Richard, James, John, Thomas, and Eleanor: the latter probably followed the tide of emigration into Virginia and the Carolinas.

vi. Thomas, b. about 1720; m., and had a son John, to whom he deeded, in 1767, his plantation called Newry, in Hanover township, which he had warranted to him in 1752. Nothing further is known of either.

II. Philip Robinson, (Thomas,') b. about the year 1698, in the north of Ireland, came to the Province of Pennsylvania with his father's family, prior to 1730. His name appears on the first tax list of Hanover township, Lancaster county. He settled with his family on Manada creek, near the Gap. During the Indian war, 1755-1763, there was a fort on his farm for defence against the Indians and the safety of the settlers. His sons were already grown men, for in 1755, Governor Morris addressed a letter to Samuel Robinson, sending with it one hundred pounds of gunpowder to be used by the inhabitants of Hanover in "defence of themselves and their country." Beside their farm, the Robinsons were millers, owning a mill on the Manada at the Gap, and furnishing supplies to the government during that war. XXVIII. Martha Jean Robinson, (William-Crain, Andrew, Robert, Andrew, Thomas,) b. May 24, 1830; m., March 16, 1852, by Rev. John Winebrenner, V. D. M., George Ross, b. November 22, 1821; d. November 30, 1880, in Lebanon, Pa. His grandfather, Dr. Joseph Ross, was a native of Montgomery county, Pa., and married Mary Maria McClintock, of Pottstown. After his marriage he removed to Hummelstown, Dauphin county, where, on November 8, 1792, his son, Robert May Ross, was born. Shortly after the birth of Robert May, his mother died, when Dr. Joseph Ross removed to Elizabethtown. His son, Robert, was sent to Montgomery county among his mother's relatives, where he was raised and educated. When grown to manhood he returned to Elizabethtown, and about the year 1815 married Barbara Redsecker, a daughter of George Redsecker. They had six children, of whom George was the third, and the eldest son. His ancestors on his father's side were of Quaker origin, his mother's of Swiss descent, and were known as Pennsylvanina-German. His father engaged in mercantile pursuits, and at an early age, between school-hours, young George assisted him. At the age of ten he was sent to a select school at Reading, from thence to Lititz, where he remained two years. In May, 1838, he commenced to learn the drug business at Lancaster, afterwards continuing in the same occupation at Harrisburg. When quite a small boy he took great interest in the study of botany, a science which he pursued with great delight throughout life, and this fact becoming known to Col. John Roberts, a botanist of some reputation, a warm friendship sprang up between them, and young Ross was encouraged and assisted in his studies. At the same time he began the study of Latin at a select school in Harrisburg. At the close of his apprenticeship, he was offered special inducements by his uncle, Abraham Redsecker, who had purchased a drug store in Elizabethtown, which he accepted, and returned to his native place in December, 1842. After several years he purchased the store from his uncle and engaged in business for himself. He shortly after began the study of medicine with Dr. Nathaniel Watson, of Donegal, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1849. He immediately began the practice of his profession in Elizabethtown, continuing at the same time the drug business, and soon acquired a large practice. In the spring of 1852 he purchased a property in Lebanon, to which place he removed in October following. He however quit the practice of medicine and devoted his entire time to the drug trade, and soon succeeded in building up a large and successful business. Dr. Ross took an active interest in the development of Lebanon, and was associated in various enterprises which tended to promote its prosperity. Having, in the year 1842, united with the Church of God, a body of Christians organized under the labors of Rev. John Winebrenner, he became conspicuous for his disinterested labors and great liberality. In 1857 the General Eldership elected him a member of the Board of Publication, and he was re-elected at each subsequent meeting; was a member of the committee which published the "Church Hymn Book," and subsequently elected general book agent, in which capacity he issued a number of books and pamphlets, conducting the publishing interests with such judgment and business tact that what was a cumbersome debt when he assumed its management soon became a source of revenue, a large fund having been accumulated during the almost twenty years of his management. In addition to these general church interests, he was, in 1868, elected treasurer of the East Pennsylvania Eldership, in which position he was continued eleven years, when increasing business cares demanding his attention obliged him to resign. They had issue (surname Ross):

[In the year 1689, several brothers, of the Scotch family of Rutherford, joined the army of William III when he invaded Ireland—were present and fought at the battle of the Boyne. Two of them were company officers, and the third was a Presbyterian clergyman. They all remained on the island, one settling in the county Tyrone, another in the county Down, and the minister in the county Monaghan. Several of the sons of these men emigrated to America during the decade between 1720 and 1730; among them was Thomas Rutherford, the progenitor of the family in Paxtang. As an instance of how family likeness is preserved through ages, it may be here stated that the portrait of David Rutherford, grandfather of Sir Walter Scott, which hangs in the dining-hall facing the Tweed at Abbotsford, would answer equally well as a portrait of the late Dr. Rutherford, of Harrisburg, although the Doctor’s ancestor left Scotland two centuries ago. No likeness of Thomas Rutherford is in existence, and the only description of him is a traditionary one, which represents him as a dark-haired, well-built man, about five feet ten inches in height, full of energy and of such business habits as led to financial success. There is a spice of romance connected with his early manhood which may not be uninteresting to the reader. His attachment to Jean Mordah, whom he afterwards married, was reciprocated. The Mordahs were about to sail for America, and Thomas, fearing he might lose his Jean, proposed and was accepted, but poor Jean was scarcely sixteen and her parents said "no," and took her with them across the sea. On the cover of his memorandum book, preserved in the family, Thomas inscribed the legend, "Enquire for Dennygall." This was the location of the Mordahs in Pennsylvania, and, in the following year, 1729, he appeared in person at their door and claimed his Jean. Mr. Mordah, doubtless, still thought the pair too young, and, in order that more time might be gained, required his prospective son-in-law to be the possessor of a certain sum of money, with which to begin the world, before he would entrust the young lady to his keeping. Thomas, like Jacob of old, was obliged to acquiesce, and took his departure for Philadelphia. When he returned he was mounted on a good horse and had with him the documents which satisfied the old gentleman's requirements. They were married in 1730, and lived in Donegal until after the death of John Mordah, in 1744, when they removed to Derry, and, in 1755, to Paxtang, where they spent the remainder of their days. Their house, a two-story log, stood on the site of the present residence of Silas B. Rutherford, at Paxtang station, and was burned down in 1840. The old house standing directly opposite the station was built after Thomas Rutherford's death, about 1783, and the old stone house over the spring was, probably, built before Mr. Rutherford bought the property.]

After the death of his uncle, James Rutherford, in 1809, he purchased the moiety of his grandfather's farm, which had fallen to James upon the death of Thomas, in 1777, and now (1885) owned by John A. Rutherford. There he spent the remainder of his life. He caster county. He early espoused the cause of the Colonies, and, receiving a commission as captain in the Second (Colonel St. Clair's) Pennsylvania battalion, January 6, 1776, raised a company mostly in the upper part of then Lancaster county, now Dauphin and Lebanon, which was in active service in Canada. At the close of that arduous campaign he was transferred to the Third regiment of the Pennsylvania Line, resigning in July, 1777. He subsequently returned to the service, and at the close of the war to his farm near "Bird-in-Hand," Lancaster county, when he was appointed collector of military fines. He was, however, too kind-hearted to oppress the delinquents, consequently he became responsible to the government for the amount, which resulted in Captain Brisban becoming poor and penniless. All the papers pertaining to his military services were sent to Washington for the purpose of securing a pension, but, unfortunately, lost. Captain Brisban was married twice, and left issue by both. He died at the residence of his son-in-law, Samuel Rutherford, near Harrisburg, Pa., March 13, 1822, aged ninety-one years. He lies buried in Paxtang church graveyard.

He at once began the practice of medicine at New Cumberland, which promised bright, but, his health failing, he was compelled to relinquish the duties of his profession. He returned home, and undertook the superintendence of the farm, hoping thereby to reestablish his health. This proved futile, for he gradually failed. Intelligent, amiable, and upright, Dr. Levi Rutherford's young life left a rose-tinted memory in many households.

XVI. John Parke Rutherford, (William, John, Thomas,) b. February 14, 1802, in Swatara township, Dauphin county, Pa.; d. May 12, 1871. He was a farmer, and brought up in that pursuit. He held many places of public trust in his life; was superintendent of the Wiconisco canal as early as 1837, an auditor of the county, a jury commissioner, and was vice-president and treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society. He was a strong anti-slavery advocate, as all his family were, and many a weary pilgrim, in the days of the fugitive slave act, sore of foot and heart, found in Captain Rutherford hospitable assistance, material aid, and manly encouragement. He hated slavery because he considered it a moral sin and a political blight upon the free institutions of America. During the late Rebellion he served as quartermaster in the United States army, ranking fourth on the list. While stationed at Harper’s Ferry he was captured in one of the raids on that stronghold, but released on parole. He was then ordered to Camp Douglas, and subsequently to Charleston, S. C. In the latter city, about the close of the war, he contracted a disease from the effects of which he never fully recovered. Captain Rutherford m. Eliza Rutherford, b. October 30, 1801; d. XVII. WILLIAM WILSON RUTHERFORD, (William, John, Thomas,) b. November 23, 1805, in Paxtang, now Swatara township, Dauphin county, Pa.; d. March 13, 1873, at Harrisburg, Pa. He commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Whiteside, of Harrisburg, then a prominent physician, in 1830; and after the removal of Dr. Whiteside, continued under the instruction of Dr. Dean. He attended the lectures of Jefferson Medical College, 1830–32, graduating from that institution on the 7th of March the latter year. He located first at Mechanicsburg, where he remained nearly a year, when, entering into partnership with his preceptor, Dr. Dean, he removed to Harrisburg, where, for forty years, he practiced his profession, winning for himself an honorable name not only at home but abroad. Dr. Rutherford had what few physicians possessed—a most perfect knowledge of diseases in general; and it mattered little what the case, his diagnosis, when called in consultation, was final as it was accurate. An extensive practice of over forty years in every department of medicine and surgery gave him such a perfect knowledge of his profession that the loss of his advice and assistance in difficult cases was severely felt by his surviving brethren. For eight years prior to his death he had been the regularly appointed surgeon to the Pennsylvania Railroad company, although he served it some ten years previously when called upon. From the organization of the old Harrisburg Gas company he was one of its directors, and, at his death, president of the company. In numerous other enterprises he took an active part, and was always one of Harrisburg's public-spirited citizens. His life was an eventful one, and one fraught with many incidents of interest. In season and out of season, in life and in death, his good-natured face appeared upon the stage, gladly, even tearfully, welcome. Dr. Rutherford married Eleazar Crain, daughter of Col. Richard M. Crain, (see Crain record). They had issue:

The last fifteen years of his life he was president of the first National Bank of Hummelstown; was identified with other corporations, and active in various local enterprises of his day. He was one of the early members of the Pennsylvania Anti-Slavery Society, and in 1835 was captain of the tenth company, Ninety-eighth regiment, Pennsylvania militia. For many years he was one of the vice-presidents of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society, in the founding of which he took a prominent part. XX. HIRAM RUTHERFORD,4 (William,3 John,2 Thomas,1) was the eighth member of his father’s family, and was born at the old Rutherford homestead, in Swatara township, Dauphin county, Pa., on the 27th of December, 1815. He was raised, as were all his brothers, to a thorough practical acquaintance with the labors of the farm, and received such education as the schools of Paxtang afforded. At the age of eighteen, he commenced the study of medicine with his brother, Dr. W. W. Rutherford, of Harrisburg, and graduated from Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, in the spring of 1838. With ten dollars in his pocket and a few drugs in his saddle-bags, he set out on horse-back to seek his fortune. He located at Millersburg, on the Susquehanna, at that time a village of five hundred inhabitants. After a sojourn of two and a half years, the Doctor concluded that the road to fortune did not lie, for him, in Lykens Valley, and, in the latter days of the year 1840, he again packed his saddle-bags, and, with three hundred dollars in his pocket, mounted his horse and set his face towards Illinois— the "E-le-nov" of the emigrants of those days— "the home of the wild deer, the gopher and the prairie-wolf." At the end of an eighteen days' journey, he halted at a little hamlet in Coles county, now the flourishing town of Oakland, where he has ever since resided. The practice of medicine in the Western States, is, even now, very laborious, but when Dr. Rutherford began, it was much more so; the roads were mostly deer-paths, and the deep, sluggish streems flowed on to the sea unvexed by either bridges or ferries. His practice was large, extending over half a degree of latitude and longitude. But increasing years and failing strength warned him, at length, that it was time to retire from the active duties of a profession so exacting, and, for the last decade, he has devoted his time and energies principally to the management of his large agricultural interests. As a physician, a business man, and a trusted citizen, his life has been a success. The people of his adopted county have shown their confidence in his integrity and business qualifications by repeatedly calling him to serve on the county board (similar to that of county commissioners in Pennsylvania), and to various other public trusts in the town and township of Oakland; likewise their appreciation of his intelligence by keeping him in the school board continuously since 1843. And, although he has almost filled out the measure of four score years, he is still marching in the front rank with the active men of Coles county. The Doctor has been

I. John Stewart, a Scotch covenanter of the seventeenth century, fled from Scotland to the county Down, in the north of Ireland. It is traditional that he had incurred penalties for non-compliance with royal edicts respecting religious worship and enforcing attendance at the Parish church. It was at the period when the government of Charles II, (1660–1685), the most disreputable of the English kings, was engaged in its fruitless attempts to force Episcopacy upon the Scottish nation. The north of Ireland had become a refuge for proscribed Presbyterians and condemned covenanters, and thither he went, preferring to abandon his native hills rather than go back on the solemn league and covenant entered into by the Scottish people in 1643, who recognized as their only standard the Westminster confession of faith as ratified by the General Assembly of the church of Scotland, in 1647. The persecution of the covenanters and harassment of the adherents to Presbyterianism, which King Charles pronounced “a religion not fit for a gentleman,” continued until the establishment of freedom of conscience by the revolution of 1688. John Stewart d. in 1720, and of his family, we have record of one son only:

2. i. Robert, b. 1665.

II. Robert Stewart, (John, b. near Glasgow, Scotland, A. D. 1665, in the reign of Charles II; d. 1730. Upon the death of his father, he also moved into Ireland, locating in Drumore township, county Down, twelve miles from Belfast. The people of this county, as a whole, are of Scottish origin. The Ayrshire dialect was commonly spoken till towards the end of the eighteenth century. This county is remarkable for its inequality of surface and number of hills, from which its name originated. The lives of father and son, John and Robert Stewart, therefore, embraced that most remarkable period in the history of England commencing in the reign of Charles I, through the Commonwealth under Cromwell, Charles II, James II, William and Mary, Queen Anne, George I, and into the reign of George II. Robert Stewart had a large family, of whom we have record only of John Thompson, of Donegal Presbytery. In person, Samuel Stewart was large and well proportioned, six feet in height, Roman nose, bluish-grey eyes, brown hair, and ruddy complexion. He landed with a capital in coin equivalent to one dollar and twenty-five cents, and having learned the trade of weaving, followed it for many years; settled finally in Paxtang township, about six miles from Harris' Ferry, where he acquired a large estate, for the times. His name first appears on the tax list of 1750. In 1780 he was assessed for four hundred and five acres. He was considered a very handsome man, of more than ordinary height, and retained through life his Scotch accent. Hugh Stewart was twice married; m., first, in 1750-1, Hannah Dallas, b. 1727, in Ireland; d. 1760, and buried with her husband. They had issue, all born in Paxtang:

V. Samuel Stewart, (Samuel, Robert, John) b. in the county Down, Ireland; was brought to Pennsylvania in the emigration of his father's family, in 1735, and, on coming of age settled as a farmer in Hanover township, Lancaster county, now West Hanover, Dauphin county, Pa., about 1750. His warrant for one hundred acres of land was dated May 17, 1754, and, in an “assessment for the King's use, 1759, Samuel Stuart” is taxed five shillings. This township, established in 1737, and named in honor of the reigning family of Great Britain, almost exclusively settled by Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, was on the then frontier and contiguous to the Kittatinny mountains. From the date of his settlement therein, in 1750, until 1764, on account of its proximity to the wilderness, it was subject to Indian raids and depredations from which the inhabitants suffered fearfully in their persons and property, often being compelled to abandon their homes and fly for safety. This state of affairs continued until the massacre in Lancaster of the Conestoga Indians, who were the aiders and abettors of these outrages. A public meeting of the citizens of Hanover township, June 4, 1774, has gone into history, showing the earliest recorded movement towards independence, and, when the Revolutionary war began, the liberty loving and patriotic Scotch-Irish of Hanover were found faithful and active participants. Samuel Stewart entered as a private, serving in Col. Timothy Green's battalion for the defence of the frontier, and, in June 6, 1776, in Capt. James Rodgers' company of Lancaster county associators, "destined for the camp in the Jerseys." On the erection and organization of the county of Dauphin, in 1785, we find him upon the first grand jury, composed of prominent citizens. A Presbyterian by birth and a supporter of the old Hanover church, founded in 1735, and situated eleven miles east of Harrisburg, the records show that on “November 2, 1788, Samuel Stewart and Nancy Stewart, his wife, were admitted to the Lord’s table.” Samuel Stewart d. September 16, 1803, and was buried in Hanover church graveyard. He was a large man, weighing two hundred and thirty pounds, six feet in height, eyes blue and complexion fair. SWAN FAMILY.

I. The family of Swan is of English origin, but the ancestors of the Swans who settled in Hanover and Paxtang townships, Lancaster county, Pa., belonged to one of the one hundred English families whom King James of England placed in possession of an equal number of Irish confiscated estates. At what time Richard Swan, emigrated with his family to America we have no account, nor of all his children, save the names of six sons. Upon an examination of the records of the Land Department of the State, we have the following data, relating to early surveys in Lancaster county: "Alexander Swan had surveyed to him on the 23d of January, 1743, one hundred and fifty acres in Hanover township, adjoining land of Andrew Lachin and others." * * * "On the 25th of August, 1767, there was surveyed to Hugh Swan two hundred and eighty-three acres of land, adjoining land of James Wallace, John Carson and the Blue Mountain, in Paxtang township." * * * "To Moses Swan there was surveyed, on the 8th of November, 1774, one hundred and fifty acres, adjoining William McRoberts on the north, Andrew Carson on the east, John Jameson on the south and Alexander Johnson on the west, in Paxtang township." until 1880. While performing these duties he was treasurer of the State Lunatic Hospital, at Harrisburg, from its first establishment in 1850 to 1880. For nearly fifty years he was an elder in the first Presbyterian church of Harrisburg, and took a warm interest in the promotion of the Sunday-school system. He was one of the first, firmest, and influential friends of the anti-slavery cause in Dauphin county. Mr. Weir m. twice; first, Catharine E. Wiestling, b. February 21, 1810; d. IX. James Wallace Weir,4 (Mary, Samuel, John,) b. August 9, 1805, at Harrisburg, Pa.; d. March 14, 1878. He received a good education, excelled as a scholar, and his taste for study and reading drew him towards the printing office. He learned the art with John S. Wiestling, and, after his apprenticeship, spent some time in the printing house of the Messrs. Johnson, of Philadelphia. On the 26th of November, 1833, having been chosen teller of the Harrisburg Bank, he accepted that position, holding it until October 30, 1844, when he was chosen cashier of the bank. When the institution became a national bank in 1874, he was unanimously elected its cashier, which office he held until his death, a period of over forty-four years. As a bank officer and a financier he gained an enviable distinction for his uniform courtesy, for unimpeachable integrity, and for ability of the highest order. Few bankers in the Commonwealth can present a record equal to his in years of service, in successful administration of affairs through financial trouble, and for such rigid honesty. But not alone as a banker was he distinguished. He was gifted with rare social qualities and a graceful wit, which made him one of the most companionable of men. In movements for the reformation of society, he was always foremost not only giving his time and labor, but contributing freely of his means to the accomplishment of what he thought a philanthropic purpose. To the poor and lowly he was always a kind and true friend, and his charities, though not ostentatious, were made with a free and open hand. His literary taste and ability were of high order, and he frequently wrote for the press; was the author of several religious tracts, published by the American Sunday-school Union. In 1838 appeared a small volume, "Manual of Prayer," which was published with an introduction by Rev. Albert Barnes, of Philadelphia. In 1854 "The Closet Companion" appeared, and passed through several editions. After his death "Home Worship," a book of prayer for the family circle was published. In the Presbyterian church, of which he was nearly forty-four years an elder,—as superintendent of the Sabbath-school for a similar period,—and in every walk and pursuit in life he was active, energetic, consistent, pure in character, and lofty in purpose. Mr. Weir m. Mrs. Hanna A. (Fahnestock) Mahany; d. February, 1872. No issue.

Wiestling Family.

WIESTLING FAMILY.

I. Samuel Christopher Wiestling, b. June 4, 1760, at Oschatz, in the Canton or district of Meisischen, Germany, during a visit of his mother to her parents. The home of his parents was Colba, on the river Saale, in Lower Saxony. Inasmuch as the military law of Prussia required all Prussian officers and citizens to have the name of every child recorded in the church book of the town wherein it was born, this was done in his case. The record was also made in the military canton book or soldiers' roll of Oschatz. He was baptized shortly after, his sponsors being Samuel Ludwig Goldman, Christopher Henry Ahren, and Mrs. Catharine Elizabeth Wiestling, all residents of Colba. His parents were Christopher Martin Wiestling and Dorothea Elizabeth Goldman. His father, who held the office of secretary of Colba, and was widely known, died in 1769. The widow afterwards married Michael Horst, a justice of the peace of Acken, on the river Elbe, in whom Samuel found a kind parent; was sent to school, and carefully educated. Subsequently, being influenced and guided by the counsel of his preceptors, Herr Ruprecht and his brother-in-law, the Honorable Inspector Gehring, his step-father persuaded him to study theology, and through the recommendation of those mentioned, he was received into the Hallische Weisenhaus. But this life was irksome to him, and unsuited to the natural bent of his mind, and, becoming discontented, he returned to his home at Colba. In April, 1774, he was placed under the instruction of the State Surgeon and "Land Physician," Dr. Unger, but the doctor having died on the 1st of May, 1776, he, with a good recommendation, went to Halle, and put himself under the care and tuition of Field-Surgeon Ollenroth, with whom he remained until 1778. This gentleman very kindly secured for him regular college privileges, under Professors Mäkel, Nestsky, Dr. Younghaus, and others. As war broke out about this time between the Emperor Joseph and King Frederick II.—the bone of contention being Bayern, and a part of the Prussian army being stationed in Alsace, under Prince Henry—he was recommended by his principal for the position of Lazar-Surgeon, and was accordingly examined and appointed on June 3, 1778. On July the 1st the army marched to Dresden, and the field hospital was removed to Thorgan. In the beginning of October he was taken sick, in consequence of which he obtained leave to return home. On recovering his health, in November, he went to Halle and resumed his studies under the professors already named, until the year 1779, when he went to Dresden for the purpose of continuing his studies in anatomy in the then existing preparatory institute, under the care of the Elector's counselor, Pietrochen. Here the branches of anatomy, physiology, physics, materia medica, chemistry, pathology, and therapeutics were as thoroughly taught by Dr. Hoffrath and Professors Meiden and Thomrianie as they were in Halle. But botany was neglected, though chirurgery was also thoroughly taught by the general surgeon, Wilde. In the spring of 1780 he went to Berlin to prosecute, under the Berlin State Accouchour, Dr. Hagan, his studies in obstetrics, which he had already commenced at Halle, under Catenius, Loesicke, Schmucker and Thehus. He remained during the summer in a private college of medicine, chirurgery and anatomy. In October of the same year he returned to Dresden, to visit the preparatory school of anatomy. In April of the following year he went to Amsterdam to visit John Herman Osterdyke, who had been his intimate friend in Halle, and who was now a doctor of medicine in Amsterdam. This afforded him an opportunity to visit the Land and Sea Hospital located there, and also the Amsterdam College of Medicine and Surgery, of which Dr. Herman Gerhard Osterdyke, the father of his friend, was the president. Through the kindness of the general surgeon of the hospital, the Hon. B. Hasson, he had free access to the Gast-Huys. His friend going to Halle to hold his "Inaugural Disputations," in order to the promoting, under the supervision of Dr. Leopold Osterdyke, and at his earnest persuasion he gladly accompanied him. He remained in Halle, until April, 1782, when he returned to Amsterdam, where he attended the Hospital and College of Medicine and Surgery until June of 1782, when he was appointed to a position as navy doctor and surgeon, he having passed a creditable examination before the Committee of the Honorable Board of Admiralty. At this time an expedition started out from the Netherlands to America, under the ambassador from Holland, with two ships laden with linen, a frigate, and a cutter. He was ordered to duty on this expedition as navy surgeon. He set sail on June 4, 1783, with a favoring wind. His record says, "We left Texel, and on October 4, 1783, we reached the port of Chester on the Delaware, in Delaware county, and State of Pennsylvania. The voyage was not all smooth sailing, as we encountered winds and rough seas. Indeed, on one occasion one of the vessels came very near swamping and emptying us all out into the sea. However, with hard work, good management, and the interposition of a kind Providence we kept above water and arrived safely on terra firma." As it was obligatory upon all students and artisans in Germany to travel and see the world before they could pursue the practice of their chosen profession or trade, our young doctor concluded to see something of the New World before returning. He accordingly left the vessel in company with a friend named Godfrey Fritchey, and started on foot on a tour of observation. They traversed middle Pennsylvania which was not then as now, "the garden spot of the world," but was sparsely settled, and the whole country deeply impressed with the desolation and devastation consequent upon the Revolutionary war. Visions of the "home beyond the sea," however, beckoned them to return, and they turned their footsteps towards Philadelphia with a view of finding a vessel to carry them home. At the Trappe, in Montgomery county, in Pennsylvania, they fell in with a gentleman by the name of Messemer or Minsker, who was proprietor of an inn at that place, who, learning that the subject of this sketch was a thoroughly-educated German physician, succeeded in persuading him to tarry with him, as he had a sick wife, who had been bedridden for a long time, and upon whom he had expended quite a sum of money to physicians, to little or no purpose.
This was an episode in his life that shaped his destiny for the future. This man offered to pay him twenty dollars in hand, with his boarding for self and friend, and find the medicine. He regarded this as a good and advantageous offer, under the peculiar circumstances, and accepted it. The case was a serious and obstinate one, and although it baffled others, he was entirely successful, and this fortunate turn of affairs afterwards proved to be the foundation of a large and paying practice at the Trappe. About the year 1792 or 1793 he, with his family and that of his father-in-law, removed to Dauphin county, locating on farms along the Blue mountain, on the road leading from the Susquehanna river to Linglestown. His new home was about two miles from the river and five miles from the city of Harrisburg, in now Susquehanna township. Here he continued in pursuit of his profession until the spring of 1811, when they removed to the town of Harrisburg, where his practice greatly increased, until the year 1817, when he was stricken with paralysis, which terminated his medical career. He died April 28, 1823, in the sixty-third year of his age, thus ending a life of active usefulness, respected by all who knew him. Dr. Wiestling m., May 10, 1785, ANNA MARIA BUCHER, b. theology under the Rev. Philip Gloninger there, and was licensed by the Reformed Synod to preach the gospel in 1812, and about the same time received and accepted a call to Hanover, York county, Pa., which included three congregations in his charge. Owing to some difficulty with reference to the Manchester congregation, he stood disconnected from the Synod for some years. In 1821 application to that body was made in his behalf, and in the following year he was received. Several other congregations were added to his charge, and his field of labor consisted of five congregations, in which he continued to preach to the end of his life. He died at the age of thirty-three years, and is buried in the graveyard connected with the Reformed church at that place. Mr. Wiestling was a man of talent, and more than ordinary pulpit abilities. He was conscientious and faithful in the discharge of all his public and private duties, and his piety and moral deportment were of an undoubted and unexceptionable character. On the eve of the Revolution John Gross removed to now Montgomery county, Pa. He entered into the spirit of that contest at the outset, and was commissioned first lieutenant January 5, 1776, in Col. Arthur St. Clair's (Second Pennsylvania) battalion; subsequently promoted a captain in the Third Pennsylvania at its organization, which was formed on the basis of the former, but with several of his colleagues in St. Clair's battalion, seem never to have accepted the position, or, if they did, declined it shortly after, especially upon the resignation of Col. Joseph Wood in July, 1777. After the close of the war he removed with his family to now Middle Paxtang township, Dauphin county, Pa., where he lived the remainder of his days, dying January 2, 1823. V. Joshua Martin Wiestling, (Samuel-Christopher, Christopher-Martin,') b. February 28, 1797, in now Susquehanna township, Dauphin county, Pa.; baptized at Shoop's church by Rev. Christian H. Kurtz; d. January 15, 1854, at Harrisburg, Pa. In the year 1811, being then of the age of fourteen years, he moved with his parents into the town of Harrisburg, where he continued to reside until his death. Although afforded but limited facilities of acquiring an education by attending the schools of that period, yet, having the advantage of the instructions of his father, who was a man of thorough education and culture, and being himself an indefatigable student, reading and studying whenever and however the opportunity presented, he grew to manhood with his naturally fine mental endowments admirably cultivated and liberally developed. Of studious habits and love of knowledge, these characteristics adhered to him throughout his life. A man of original thinking powers, and possessed of mental capacity of a high order, he gave, notwithstanding an extensive and laborious medical practice, diligent investigation to all the leading questions of the day, and careful study in the wide and diversified field of general knowledge. He was, consequently, upon all the leading subjects of information, a natural scholar, and, throughout his whole life, was recognized by his fellow-townspeople as in the front rank of generous knowledge, and a man of very general powers. His special field of usefulness, however, was that of medicine. In his preparation for his profession, his preceptors were his father, Dr. Samuel C. Wiestling, Sr., and an elder brother, Dr. Samuel C. Wiestling, Jr., both thoroughly educated physicians of skill and wide experience. He attended the course of medical lectures of the University of Pennsylvania. His father becoming disabled to continue in active practice by reason of a paralytic stroke in the year 1817, he succeeded him in his profession, first in partnership with his brother, Dr. Samuel C. Wiestling, Jr., which continued for a few years, and subsequently alone. This was about the year 1821 or 1822. Acquiring a large and extensive practice, both in town and country, he prosecuted the duties of his profession with a degree of faithful devotion and judicious skill which won for him the admiration and high regard of the medical fraternity and the unlimited confidence of the whole community until his death. In stature, he was about six feet in height, broad shouldered, of large head, erect in carriage, full chested, rather stout in figure and person, and dignified in appearance. He was of a cheerful disposition, affable in his manners, generous in his impulses, of sympathetic and benevolent habits, unselfish and forbearing, and, as a consequence, he was popular throughout his life. Dr. Wiestling m., January 22, 1824, Catharine Youse, b. March 24, 1800; d. March 4, 1854, at Harrisburg, Pa.; daughter of George and Mary Youse. They had issue:

During the Rebellion he served as second lieutenant, company D, One Hundred and Twenty-seventh regiment, Pa. Volunteers, and was promoted, September 1, 1862, to first lieutenant. On the 19th of March, 1868, he was appointed by Surgeon General King, of Pennsylvania, one of the commissioners to visit the general hospitals in the West, to look after and care for the sick and wounded Pennsylvania soldiers. He was the first register in bankruptcy under the National bankrupt act of 1867 for the Fourteenth Pennsylvania Congressional district, on the nomination of Chief Justice S. P. Chase, United States Supreme Court, May 29, 1867. He discharged the duties of that office until early in the fall of 1868, when, being nominated for district attorney for the county of Dauphin, he resigned. He was elected district attorney, October 13, 1868, and re-elected October 10, 1871, serving two full terms. In 1890 removed to Seattle, State of Washington, where he is in the practice of his profession. He was educated in the public schools of Harrisburg, whither his father removed in 1811, and also at the Harrisburg Academy. He began the study of medicine with his father, and subsequently continued under the instructions of his elder brothers, Drs. Samuel C. and Joshua M. He attended lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from the medical department of that institution in 1827. He located at Middletown, Pa., where, for over a period of fifty years, he was in the active practice of his profession; and down almost to the last hour of his life, his superior medical knowledge was brought into requisition. i. Mary Fisher, d. June 9, 1883; m. Rev. Andrew D. Mitchell, b. February 2, 1824, in York county, Pa.; d. March 20, 1882, at Fort Grant, Arizona. He graduated at Jefferson College in 1841, and afterwards spent some time in teaching. In 1844 he matriculated at Princeton Theological Seminary, where he prepared for the ministry. He came under the care of the Carlisle Presbytery, in 1849, as a licentiate from the Donegal Presbytery, and at the same time calls were placed in his hands from the united charge of Paxtang and Derry. These he accepted, and in 1858 was ordained and installed pastor of that people, whom he acceptably served until 1874, when, at his own request, the pastoral relation was dissolved. Subsequently he declined certain positions that were in his offer, but in 1876 he accepted the appointment of post chaplain in the United States army by his friend, the Hon. J. D. Cameron, then Secretary of War. He spent five years at the military prison of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and was transferred, in the fall of 1881, to Fort Grant, Arizona, where he died. Mr. Mitchell has also been the very acceptable stated clerk of the Carlisle Presbytery from 1857 to the year of his appointment as chaplain, 1876, when he resigned, and received the special commendation of the Presbytery for his very faithful services. For a period of fifty years he was leader of the Reformed church choir. Having a love for music, and being endowed with fine talents in that direction, he took special delight in their cultivation. He was an active member of the church with which he so long identified himself as its musical leader, and for forty-four years an elder. WIGGINS AND SIMONTON.

I. JOHN WIGGINS,1 son of James Wiggins1 and Jean, his wife, was b. about 1680, in the north of Ireland. He came to America and settled on Beaver Creek, in Paxtang township, Lancaster county, Province of Pennsylvania, prior to August, 1732. His name appears on the first assessment list of the north end of Paxtang for 1749. He d. in February, 1762, his will being probated the month following. He left a wife Mary [Barnett], and children as follows:

2. i. John, b. 1712; m. Elizabeth ——.
   ii. James, b. 1714.
   iii. Jean, b. 1716.
   iv. Martha, b. 1718.
   v. Margaret, b. 1720.
   vi. Agnes, b. 1723; m. Thomas Maguire, and had a daughter Sarah.

At this time it seems as if his youngest children, John and Agnes, with his wife, were the only members of his family in America, for, in the disposition of his estate, he directs that the other children were to have their share, "if they came to this country." It is probable they came, and afterwards went with the tide of Scotch-Irish immigration southward, as the name appears in Virginia and the Carolinas.

II. John Wiggins,2 (John,3 James,1) b. 1712, in Ireland; came to America with his parents, and remained on the paternal farm; he d. June 12, 1794. He was one of the early pioneers in Paxtang, and, during the Indian forays of 1755-1763, was more or less prominent as an officer in the ranging companies. He m. Elizabeth ——, b. 1716; d. June 5, 1784. They are both interred in Paxtang graveyard. They had issue:

i. Thomas, b. 1746; d. August, 1798. He studied medicine, and served in the war of the Revolution; was surgeon of the New Eleventh Pennsylvania Line, Col. Thomas Hartley, commissioned July 1, 1778. Owing to ill health, due to the previous exposures in the service, he resigned January 23, 1780.

ii. John, b. 1748; d. October 21, 1830, in Northumberland county, although his will is probated as of Lower Paxtang; left a wife, but no issue. It is said that, when a young man, he was attacked by a panther on his way home from Paxtang church, and killed the animal with his fists, although he bore the marks of its claws all his life.

iii. Elizabeth, b. 1751; d. October, 1830.

April 24, 1800, in Hanover township, Dauphin county, Pa. He was brought to this country at the age of ten by his uncle, the Rev. John Simonton, pastor of the Great Valley Presbyterian church, in Chester county, Pa. Under the direction of this uncle he received his academic and professional education. Soon after completing his medical course he entered upon the practice of his profession, but at what place is unknown. In 1784 he purchased a tract of land called "Antigua," containing one hundred and eighty-two acres, situated in West Hanover township, from Joseph Hutchison. Upon this farm he resided all his life. All the traditions which have reached us concerning his standard as a physician, a man, and a Christian, are highly favorable. A fitting testimonial to his life, labors, and character was prepared by the Rev. James Snodgrass, pastor of Hanover church, and delivered on the occasion of his funeral. His remains, with those of his wife, are interred in old Hanover graveyard. They had issue (surname Simonton):

VII. WILLIAM SIMONTON, (Jean, John, John, James,) b. in 1788, in Hanover township, Dauphin county, Pa.; d. May 17, 1846, in Hanover. At the death of his father he was only twelve years of age. His early education was received under the direction of his mother, and consisted of the branches usually taught in the country schools of that period. As he was inclined to the medical profession, he studied Latin under the tuition of the Rev. James R. Sharon, pastor of Derry and Paxtang churches. After the usual preliminary instruction under a private preceptor, he studied medicine with Dr. Samuel Meyrick, of Middletown, afterwards attending lectures of the Medical Department, University of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia, from which he received the degree of M. D. In the distribution of property resulting from his father's death, the farm "Antigua" was equally divided between him and his brother, John W. Simonton. The latter occupied the homestead until his death in 1824, which occurred a few days previous to the death of his mother. After the erection of the necessary buildings in 1818, he took possession of his new home, where the remainder of his life was spent. While his time was devoted to the practice of medicine, the farming operations were carried on under his superintendence. He always took an interest in political affairs, and was accustomed to act with the Whigs in opposition to the Democrats, who had retained possession of the National Government from the election of Andrew Jackson in 1824. He was elected county auditor in 1823, serving three years, and in 1838 he was nominated as a candidate for Congress from the district then composed of the counties of Dauphin and Lebanon, and was elected by a large majority. He was re-elected in 1840. During the extra session of Congress, held in the summer of 1841, Dr. Simonton's health gave way. Having been accustomed to an active life and to exercise on horseback, strict attention to public business, with confinement to the atmosphere of Washington during the heated term, so prostrated him physically that he was unable to attend regularly upon the sessions of 1842 and 1843. He never fully recovered his health, though he resumed his medical practice, which was continued nearly three years after the close of his congressional career. In person Dr. Simonton was five feet eleven inches in height, of good presence and proportions, with regular features and very black hair, which retained its color to the last. He was a modest, diffident man, but of a genial and friendly disposition. For some years previous to his death he was an elder of old Derry church, and while in Washington a member of the Congressional prayer-meeting. He was a decided Presbyterian in his faith, and ever took a deep interest in the affairs of the denomination to which he belonged. He was a strict observer of the Sabbath, and of the services of the sanctuary. He maintained family worship, and was careful to give his children a religious training. He acquired a good reputation as a physician, and for many years had an extensive country practice. Dr. Simonton m. Martha Davis Snodgrass, b. 1790; d. April, 1862, daughter of Rev. James Snodgrass,* of Hanover. They had issue (surname Simonton):

iv. Elizabeth, m., in 1860, Rev. A. L. Blackford, went with him as missionary to Rio Janeiro, Brazil, where she died, and where he remained as a missionary of the Board of Missions of Presbyterian Church, until his death in 1890.

*James Snodgrass, the son of Benjamin Snodgrass, was born near Doylestown, Bucks county, Pa., July 23, 1763. His grandfather came from the north of Ireland about the year 1700, locating in Bucks county, Pa. He graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1783, and was for a brief time a tutor therein. He studied theology under direction of the Rev. Nathaniel Irwin, then pastor of the church at Neshaminy, and was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Philadelphia in December, 1785. After preaching about a year and a half in destitute places in the central and northern part of New York, on the 16th of October, 1787, he accepted the call of the Hanover congregation of May previous, and until his ordination on the 13th of May, 1788, he gave his attention to that church. At his installation there were present of the Presbytery of Carlisle the revered and honored ministers Revs. John Elder, John Hoge, John Linn, John Craighead, Robert Cooper, and Samuel Waugh. His pastorate extended over a period of fifty-eight years, and he was the last who ministered at Hanover. His death occurred July 2, 1846, and he lies interred in old Hanover church graveyard. The Rev. Snodgrass was twice married. His first wife, Martha, b. November 12, 1760; d. December 20, 1828; his second wife, Nancy, b. in 1770; d. the Strasburg Academy, Lancaster county, Pa., then
at Lafayette Collège, Easton, graduating at the College of New Jersey in 1850; studied law with Hamilton Alricks, and admitted to the Dauphin county bar at the April term, 1853; in 1866 he was elected district attorney; and, in 1881, president judge of the Twelfth Judicial district of Pennsylvania. It may be here recorded of him that every opinion handed down since he has held this important position has shown an intimate knowledge of the laws of his native State, much literary ability, and acute perception of such facts as are necessary in considering cases, and in nearly every instance have been sustained by the higher court. In 1895
the honorary degree of L. L. D. was conferred upon him by the trustees of Franklin and Marshall College.

ix. Ashbel-Green, d. December 9, 1867, at São Paulo, Brazil South America. His classical education began in the Harrisburg Academy, under the tuition of the Rev.
Mahlon Long. After two years preparatory study, he entered the College of New Jersey, from which he graduated in 1862, his scholarship and acquirements being of the first rank. In the autumn of the same year he went to the South, with his brother James, and took charge of an academy for boys in Starkville, Miss., where he taught with much success for eighteen months. In July, 1864, he returned to Harrisburg and entered upon the study of the law. In the spring of 1865 he decided upon a theological course, and for this purpose prepared himself for entering the theological seminary at Princeton, which he did in September of that year. He was licensed to preach by Carlisle Presbytery, which met at Greencastle on the 14th of April, 1858. He had decided upon a missionary life, and after consultation and appli cation to the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, was ordered to Brazil. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Carlisle, at Harrisburg, April 14, 1859, and, on the 19th of June following, sailed from Baltimore in the merchant ship “Banshee” for Rio Janeiro. He arrived at the latter place on the 12th of August, and at once entered upon his field of labor. In the spring of 1862 he returned to the United States, married Helen Murdock, daughter of William Murdock, of Baltimore, Md., on the 19th of March, 1863, and sailed for Brazil, May 23, 1863, reaching the harbor of Rio on the 16th of July. His wife died, after a short illness, on the 28th of July, 1864, which, to a missionary in a foreign land, was an incalculable loss. Towards the close of March, 1865, he made a missionary tour into the province of São Paulo, returning to his post in Rio early in May. Near the close of 1865, the Presbytery of Rio de Janeiro was organized at São Paulo, that being the mission station of his brother-in-law, Rev. A. L. Blackford. It was soon perceived that his overtaxed energies began to give way under the gradual approaches of the disease which forever ended his earthly activities. Unable to continue his labors, he left Rio for the home of his sister, at São Paulo, the last week in November, 1867. No relief came, and, after a brief illness, he died the month following. He was buried on the same day from the little church of São Paulo, two Englishmen and two Americans officiating as pall-bearers, addresses being made in Portuguese by Rev. Mr. Blackford and Rev. Emanuel Pires.
WILSON, IRISH SETTLEMENT.

I. Thomas Wilson,\(^1\) ancestor of Hugh, was an officer in King William's army, among the first to cross the river Boyne, on horseback, on the morning of the 1st of July, 1690. He was specially rewarded for this bravery, with a grant of land. He resided in county Cavan, Ireland, having an extensive bleach-green within a mile of Coote Hill, not far from the county town. His ancestors had emigrated from Scotland to Ireland. Thomas had but one son:

2. i. Hugh, b. 1689; m. Sarah Craig.

II. Hugh Wilson,\(^2\) (Thomas,\(^1\)) b. 1689, in county Cavan, Ireland; m. Sarah Craig, in Ireland; emigrated to America, and settled in "the Irish Settlement" as early as 1736. His home lay northwest of what is now known as Howertown, in Allen township, Northampton county, Pa. His land comprised seven hundred and thirty acres, to which he obtained title March 7, 1737, and June 29, 1738. He erected a flouring mill which was only torn down in the spring of 1857. Upon the erection of Northampton county, March 11, 1752, he was one of the commissioners named in the act to purchase land at Easton for the court house and prison, and was commissioned one of the justices of the peace for the county, June 9, 1752, and as such assisted in holding the first courts in Northampton county. His last commission as justice was issued March 15, 1766. He died in the autumn of 1773, and is buried in the old graveyard at the Settlement. He was a brother-in-law of Thomas Craig, the elder, who went to the Irish Settlement as early as 1728. They had issue:

i. William, b. in Ireland; removed from the Settlement to Philadelphia, where he followed merchandizing for some time; thence he removed to the West Indies, where he died.

tx. Francis, was the youngest son of the emigrant; he returned to Ireland, studied divinity, and was admitted to orders in the Episcopal Church; he settled in Virginia, was a tutor in the family of General Lee, and died about the year 1812.

III. Mary Ann Wilson,3 (Hugh,4 Thomas,1) b. May 21, 1719, in county Cavan, Ireland; d. October 19, 1793. Webster, in his "History of the Presbyterian Church," says, "Rev. Francis McHenry married, before leaving Ireland, Mary, eldest daughter of Hugh Wilson, of Coote Hill, in county Cavan."

Rev. Francis McHenry, b. October 18, 1710; d. January 23, 1757. According to Alexander R. Henry's statement, "the McHenrys lived on a small island between Scotland and Ireland, called Rothlin, whence they were driven to the glens of Antrim, in the north of Ireland, near Bally Castle, by the Clan McDonald, of Scotland. Rev. Francis came to America with his two brothers, who were Roman Catholics. One settled in Baltimore. Fort McHenry, named for a member of this family. (Quaere, Hon. James McHenry, Secretary of War under President Washington, January 27, 1796.) The other settled at or near Pittsburgh. Mr. McHenry was licensed November 10, 1738; ordained at Neshaminy, July 12, 1739. In 1743 he was installed pastor over the Presbyterian church at Deep Run, seven and one-half miles northwest of Doylestown, Bucks county, where he was pastor for fourteen years. The late Dr. Andrews, one of Mr. McHenry's successors at Deep Run, speaks of him (Centennial History, 1876,) thus: "He was a pure scholar, able preacher, and a man whose godly life gave influence where he was known. His learning and natural gifts were adapted to make him a shining light in the history of Presbyterianism,” etc. They had issue:

Archives, 2d ser., Vol. ii., p. 505.) He was a son of Thomas Craig, the elder, and died before 1772, as the former in his will of date November 25, 1772, proved June 6, 1779, bequeatheth his estate to his daughter-in-law, Elizabeth, and his son William’s children by name, except a special legacy of £17 10s. to Thomas Craig, “son of my brother, Daniel Craig.” A pretty clear indication that Thomas Craig, the elder, had no living children, and no other descendants than William’s children. He appoints “his brother-in-law, Richard Walker, Esq.,” in connection with Arthur Lattimore and John Ralston, his executors. They had issue (surname Craig):

i. General Thomas; he was a captain in Col. Arthur St. Clair’s battalion in the campaign in Canada, 1776; promoted lieutenant colonel Sept. 7, 1776, and colonel of Third Pennsylvania, Continental Line, August 1, 1777; serving all through the Revolutionary war. He was selected as one of the major generals of the Provisional army in 1788, and was still major general of the militia for Northampton county in 1812–1814. He died at Allentown, January 20, 1882, aged ninety-two years (see Biddle’s Autobiography, p. 353, for an account of an interview with him in 1818, and anecdote—and note to page 354, ibid).

V. Thomas Wilson,' (Hugh,' Thomas,) b. in 1724. According to the tradition among his descendants, he was about twelve years old when his father, Hugh, emigrated from Ireland. He married, in 1760, Elizabeth Hays, daughter of John Hays and Jane (Love), his wife, who emigrated from Londonderry, Ireland, and after a short stay in Chester county removed to the "Irish Settlement." Thomas Wilson was, during the Revolution, largely engaged in supplying the Continental army with flour. He was paid in Continental currency, and suffered heavily by its depreciation. In consequence he sold his land in Allen township, and removed to Buffalo Valley, now Union county in 1792. He purchased the farm on which the Union county, fair buildings are located, about one mile west of Lewisburg on the turnpike, where he died, February 25, 1799, according to the inscription on his tombstone in the Lewisburg cemetery, aged seventy-four years.
His widow removed, in 1803, with her sons, William and Thomas, to Beaver county, Pa., where she died in December, 1812. They had issue:

XIII. Jacob Wyeth, b. April 29, 1764; d. January 23, 1858, at Philadelphia, Pa. He was, at an early age, apprenticed to the printing business, and, on reaching his majority, was induced to go to San Domingo, to superintend a large printing establishment. While there, the insurrection of the blacks occurred, and all that he had acquired was lost. It was with great difficulty that he even succeeded in escaping from the island, and then only by the connivance of a friend, one of the officers who assisted in searching the vessels about leaving the port. Dressed as a common sailor and working among them, he eluded their vigilance, and subsequently reached Philadelphia. Arriving at Philadelphia, he worked some time in the different printing establishments there, and, in 1792, went to Harrisburg, Pa., where, in connection with John Allen, he purchased the paper started the previous year by Major Eli Lewis, and commenced the publication of the Oracle of Dauphin, a newspaper he successfully carried on until November, 1827. Mr. Wyeth's paper supported the Federal views of that great party during the whole course of its existence. Its columns were open, nevertheless, to the communications of all. In those days, before the principles of Republican rule were fully digested, many a nervous essay was put forth on either side of the question by able men of both parties. He was appointed postmaster of Harrisburg in October, 1793, under the administration of President Washington, of which he was a strenuous advocate, and admirer. He was removed in July, 1798, by Mr. Adams' Postmaster General, on account of 'the incompatibility of the office of postmaster and the editor of a newspaper.' In connection with his newspaper, Mr. Wyeth established a bookstore and a publishing house, from which he issued a large number of books, the most notable of which were: Judge Henry's 'Narrative of the Quebec Expedition,' Graydon's 'Memoirs,' and a music book compiled by himself. The circulation of the latter, for that early day, was wonderful, its several editions aggregating one hundred and twenty thousand copies. To this he supplemented a second part, intended especially for the Methodist church, of which there were published about twenty-five thousand. He was one of Harrisburg's most energetic citizens, and was deeply interested in its prosperity and welfare. He caused the construction of several valuable improvements, which remain as evidence of his enterprising spirit and good judgment. He was one of the earliest friends of the Harrisburg Academy, and served as a trustee, of which body he was also president. Upon his retirement from publisher, he removed to Philadelphia, where he died at the advanced age of eighty-eight years. His life, thus prolonged, was marked by affability and cheerfulness, and his philosophy was of practical character. He was exceedingly industrious, and, whilst in business, could always find something for his hands to do, and in later life, when the concerns of his printing office were transferred to younger hands, he knew how to divide his time between his reading and his social pleasures. Mr. Wyeth was twice married; m., first June 6, 1793, LOUISA WEISS, b. April 29, 1775; d. June 1, 1822, at Harrisburg, Pa.; daughter of Lewis and Mary Weiss, of Philadelphia.* They had issue, all born in Harrisburg, Pa.:

July 8, 1833, at Harrisburg, Pa.; son of Henry Douglas and Jane Blair. He received a classical education in Scotland, but came to America about the age of seventeen, and located at Pittsburgh with a brother, the Rev. Joseph Douglas, who had preceded him. Here he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1804, and began his profession there. In 1812 he volunteered as aid to General Adamson Tannehill, and was with him in the expedition to Black Rock. In 1817 Mr. Douglas was nominated for Congress against Judge Henry Baldwin, but was defeated by a small majority. The same year he went to Harrisburg in the interests of securing December 28, 1717, in Berlin, Prussia; studied conveyancing, and emigrated to America, landing at Philadelphia on the 18th of December, 1755, where he opened an office on Arch street, between Fourth and Fifth. He was one of the founders of the German Society of Philadelphia, of which he was president. He was a Moravian, and acted as an attorney for that denomination prior to 1782, and was a judge of the Court of Common Pleas in 1786. He d. October 22, 1786, at Philadelphia. One of his daughters m. He was appointed Deputy Attorney General for Dauphin county, July 17, 1819, under Governor Findlay. Governor Wolf commissioned him February 10, 1830, Attorney General of the State, a position he held three years. He was a gentleman of fine classical attainments, of refined tastes, a good criminal lawyer, and highly esteemed by the members of his profession. They had issue.

iv. Francis, b. April 6, 1806; d. July 2, 1893. He was educated at the Harrisburg Academy, and learned the art of printing in his father's office, subsequently entering Jefferson College, Canonsburg, from which institution he graduated in November, 1827. On his return home his father, who had conducted the Oracle of Dauphin thirty-five years, transferred that paper to his son, which he edited and published several years. He also entered into the business of bookseller and publisher. At the time Mr. Wyeth took charge of the Oracle the Whig party had just come into existence, of whose principles and policy he was an enthusiastic supporter. Becoming, however, tired of an editor's life, he sold out the newspaper establishment about 1831, continuing his other business until 1859, when he disposed of that. In April, 1861, at the outbreak of the Rebellion, he was placed in charge of the quartermaster's department at Camp Curtin, where he continued until the general government assumed control over all the military organizations of the State. On the 20th of July, 1862, Governor Curtin appointed him one of the commissioners from Pennsylvania to visit all the hospitals in the Army of the Potomac, in the interest of the volunteer soldiers of the State who were sick or wounded, and, as his commission reads, "to supply the wants of the suffering and needy as far as lies in your power, without infringing on any of the regulations or rights of the army, and assure each and all that their condition awakens the liveliest interest and sympathy of the people and Governor of Pennsylvania." Returning home, he reported the condition of the wounded soldiers, with this recommendation, that where it is possible "those from Pennsylvania be transferred to hospitals in their own State, that they might be near to their friends and acquaintances." This was, subsequently, carried out during the continuance of the war. On November 28, 1863, he was again directed to visit the various hospitals. For a long term of years he was one of the trustees of the Harrisburg Academy, and president of the same. Mr. Wyeth was twice married; m., first, May 29, 1829, Susan Huston Maxwell, d. December 24, 1841, daughter of William and Ann Maxwell, of Franklin county, Pa.; and had issue:

C.; learned the trade of printing and established a stereotype foundry in Philadelphia, subsequently entered journalism and went to Washington City, where he published a book, "Ins and Outs of Washington." He wrote a pamphlet on the bronze doors of the National Capitol, and was, in many respects, "a human directory and encyclopedia," At the time of his death he had in press a book entitled, "The Federal City," but it has remained unissued.
