The Tinkling Spring Meeting House was founded in 1738 and officially organized in its specific location in 1740. Its old burying ground was begun near the Church on or before this date. Seventy-seven heads of families subscribed to the first building, constructed of logs, and were scattered over an area which now has the following villages and cities: Fishersville, Greenville, Hermitage, Staunton, Stuarts Draft and Waynesboro. Most of those who died in the early years of the settlement have no grave markers. The tabulation was made by the Church about 1950. An addenda will add the present cemetery.

Every available space is said to be filled in the old Tinkling Spring cemetery. If so there are as many unmarked as marked graves. The oldest markers of early settlers have disintegrated long since. However, the meager list that follows, each confirmed from some authentic source, supplies a few names from the missing markers.
