Iron the records embraced in the following pages are far from being a full genealogy of the Rollins Families of New England. They are, however, the result of twenty years' labor and inquiry, and, if not complete, the fault must be partially, at least, laid at the door of those who have taken but little, if any interest in furnishing records which would help to make the work more nearly what it should be.

The traditional story of two or three brothers, from whom are descended all of a given name in the country, will hardly apply in the case of the family under consideration. No less than ten persons of the name of Rawlins arrived here between the years 1630 and 1680, and nearly as many more arrived between the latter date and 1750. Some settled in Maryland and Virginia, and their descendants remained there, or removed to Alabama, Tennessee, and the West, while many remained in New England. The families in the Southern States continued to write the name, with some exceptions, as it was originally spelled—Rawlins. The New England families, very generally, changed it a short time before the American Revolution to Rollins, while some, descendants from the same ancestors, have gone a step further, and, dropping the final s, write it Rollin.

The present volume is devoted mainly to the descendants of James Rawlins, of Dover, N. H., who arrived in 1632 with the Ipswich settlers, from England. Some efforts have been made to trace his origin and pedigree on the other side of the Atlantic, and quite a mass of material has been furnished, first by the late H. G. Somerby, Esq., and more recently by Mr. Charles Bridger, of London, a member of the Society of Antiquaries at Newcastle-upon-Tyne; but the connecting link which binds the old world to the new in this family, has hitherto escaped search.

The family Rawlins is very numerous in England and very ancient; the name has been a fixed surname for more than five hundred years. It is an old family in Cornwall, and more ancient still in Hertfordshire, where persons of the name were for many generations officially connected with the principal city of that County; and they have spread into almost every county in England, as well as to Ireland, Scotland and America.

The earliest mention of the name which I have found, is A. D., 1363, when Gilbert Rawlin or Rawlyn was Vicar of Marsworth, in Buckinghamshire; he exchanged this for the vicarage of Kensington, where he remained till 1370.

A key to the origin of the name may perhaps be found in the arms granted at various times. The arms of the Cornwall family, from which county James Rawlins, of Dover, probably came, are those given below, viz.:

Shield Sable: three swords paleways, points in chief, argent (silver); hilts and pommels, gold. Crest, an arm embowed in armor, the elbow resting on the wreath, holding in the gauntlet a falchion, argent; hilt and pommel, gold.

The arms of Rawle, of Cornwall, granted in the time of Edward IV, 1461–1483, are similar, except that the middle sword points up, the other two down. Crest the same.
The arms of Rawlinson as given by Burke in his latest edition of the Landed Gentry, are also similar to the above; the middle sword, however, points down, the others up; with the addition of a chief, indented, gold. Crest the same as the Hertford Crest of Rawlins.

The arms of the Hertfordshire family of Rawlins are, shield sable; three swords paleways, argent, two pointing down, the middle one upward; crest, a sword erect. These arms are cut upon a monument in the North wall of the church of Lilley Parish, with the following inscription: "Here lieth the body of Benjamin Rawlins, Knt., Lord of the manors of Lilley and Hexton, who died the 2d of Decr. 1775, aet. 98 years." He was Sheriff of London in 1737; was never married.

The arms of Rawlins of Ireland (and the families bearing the name no doubt went thither from England) are, a shield sable; three swords, one in pale, two in saltire; or, in plain English, one upright, the other two crossing this and each other diagonally; blades argent; hilt and pommel gold. In the base or lower section of the shield, a golden crescent. Crest, a lion's head erased (torn off), gules (red).

The arms of Rawlins of Scotland are, shield sable, as in all the others: one sword in pale, argent, hilt and pommel, gold, between three pierced golden mullets.

Other arms have been granted at different times, differing from the foregoing, being, most of them, special grants of later date; as in the case of Sir John Rawlins and Sir Giles Rawlins, Courtiers at the Court of James I., and others, which it is needless to enumerate.

Whether the arms engraved here are legitimately to be borne by the descendants of James Rawlins, the early settler at Dover, or not, may be problematical. If entitled to, they certainly have not dishonored them, and at any rate they are very appropriate, as the military service recorded in the following pages will fully show.

As similarity of arms usually denotes consanguinity, the inference to be drawn from the foregoing remarks is, that Rawlins is derived from Rawle. This inference is further strengthened by the considerations which follow:—
The termination \textit{ing}, signifying meadow, has sometimes given rise to new names—and as in many instances while these names were forming and becoming established, individuals have derived their cognomens from the place of residence or situation, it is possible that Rawling may have been formed in this way;—more probably, however, it is derived from adding the termination \textit{ling}, signifying offspring; and from this again Rawlings, an abbreviation perhaps of Rawlingson (the son of Rawling) from which, dropping the g we have Rawlins and Rawlinson.

But the question next arises, "what is the origin of Rawle"? Mr. Lower in his treatise on names and their origin, gives Ralph as the primitive of Rawes, Rawson, Rawlins and Rawlinson. This name Ralph, which became itself a surname, is contracted from Radolph or Rudolph, and Rudolph is the same as the French Raoul.

Camden and Lower consider Raoul and Rolle synonymous, as does Mr. Lyson, in his History of Cumberland, the names Rawle and Rolle.

In France we find a similar gradation of names, viz.:—Raoul, Raoulyn, Raoullin, Raulin and Rollin, the termination \textit{lin} (contraction of ligne), signifying, as in England, descent.

The French name Raoul is derived from, or rather is the same as Rollo, originating probably with Rollo the Scandinavian, the conqueror of the North of France, about A.D. 911, who became Duke of Normandy.

The conclusion which is drawn from the foregoing remarks is, that Rawlins is originally Scandinavian, then Norman, and then English. The history of families, so far as examined, is confirmatory of this belief, for, in the settlement of America, their restless spirit has been evinced by their readiness to explore new regions, being always among the pioneers among new settlements, while large numbers, true to the spirit of ancestry, have, as mariners and shipmasters, unfurled the canvas of American commerce in almost every sea.
INTRODUCTION.

This theory may, however, and probably will never be verified; for, in the language of Hood,

"To trace the Killmansegg pedigree
To the very roots of the family tree,
Were a task as rash, as ridiculous;
Through Antediluvian mists, as thick
As a London fog, such a line to pick,
Were enough, in truth, to puzzle Old Nick,
Not to name Sir Harris Nicholas."

It may not be amiss however to mention, and possibly it may possess something of interest to recapitulate some brief notices of persons bearing the name in England, that have fallen under observation while pursuing these investigations.

OF THE CLERGY.

A. D. 1395. Roger Rawlyn was Lord of the manor of Testerton, in Norfolk. Testerton, called in Dooms-Day Book, Estretuna, was the lordship of Peter de Valoines, at the Survey; out of which Toka, a freeman, was expelled at the conquest. This Roger, or one of the same name, was Rector of Hilburgh, 1404–1413, and in the former year chaplain of the free chapel of St. Margaret.†

1406. John Rawlin was rector of the parish of St. John, Hertfordshire, 1406–1415.‡

1442. Thomas Rawlyns was sub-dean of Boughton, in Northamptonshire.§

1444. In this year we find a notice of one John Rawlyns, at Bridgtown, in Warwickshire. This town is chiefly memorable for a hermitage, to which the chapel of St. Mary Magdalen belongs. It was anciently endowed with some lands, by the Powers, of Rien Clifford, for the reparation of the bridge; which lands, Thomas Power, Esq. confirmed, (22 Hen. VI) and at the same time constituted John Rawlyns to be hermite during life; appointing him to celebrate an obit in the parish church of Stratford, for the souls of the parents and ancestors of him, the

At 'Nether Pillerton parish, in the church, not far from the font, on a flat stone, there is cut a cross, with two labels, coming from each side of it, with these words on one side: Miserere * * Deus * * and on the other, Mar * * Dei, miserere mei. Round the edges: "Hic jacet Thomas Rawlinus, qui obiit ultimo die mensis Maii Anno Dni MCCCCXXI; Et Margareta, uxor ejus, cujus anim propitietur Deus. Amen."†

A. D., 1455. John Rawlyn was vicar of Ormsby, in Norfolk.

A. D. 1462. John Rawlins, rector at Shawley, Worcestershire, from 1462 to 1471. left it for the arch-deaconry of Cleveland, 1507; was appointed by writ of privy seal, canon of Windsor, 1508; installed arch-deacon of Huntington, Nov. 18, 1514; in 1523 he was appointed Bishop of St. David's, by bull of Adrian VI., Mar. 11, 1522-3, taking the place of Bishop Edward Vaughn, deceased; he was consecrated the 26th of the same month; died Feb. 18, 1535, and was buried in the Cathedral.

A. D. 1522. Bromehall Priory. Inquisition taken at Windsor, Mar. 3 (13 Hen. VIII.), before William Moleyn, escheator. Found that a priory of nuns of St. Benedict's order, dedicated to St. Margaret, at Bromehall, was founded by the king's progenitors and under the authority of the Bishop of Salisbury; that Joan Rawlyns, prioress, resigned on the 12th Sept. last; that two nuns were there, who, on the 5th of Dec., with Rawlyns, left the priory as a profane place, which is consequently dissolved; that the convent was seized of the church of St. Margaret, the churchyard, and the site and grange of the monastery, which latter includes a mansion, manor, windmill, gatehouse, gardens, etc. The church and churchyard are of no value, because set apart for divine service; the rest are worth four shillings a year. The convent was also seized of the manors of Bromehall and Chaurig, alias Wingfield. It held all its possessions in frank almoigne of the king, to whom they revert.*

At a later period we might suppose they made a virtue of necessity, but as Henry VIII. did not commence on a general suppression of the monasteries until fourteen years later, it is perhaps fair to presume that Joan and her nuns had become disgusted with that mode of life.

A. D. 1549. Hugo Rawlins, S. T. P., rector of St. Swithin, appointed Aug. 1; died 1554.†

A. D. 1529. William Rawlins, appointed vicar of Willingdon, Mar. 5; resigned 1539.†

INTRODUCTION.

A. D. 1522. The king assents to the election of Thomas Rawlyn, as prior of the monastery of Bromehall, vice William Camebridge. Patent issued Mar. 22. He was confirmed by the Bishop of Ely, May 19, 1522 (14th Henry VIII.).

A. D. 1516. Henry Rawlins, installed rector in the hundred of Broughay, in Hertfordshire, Apr. 28.

A. D. 1547. Rev. John Rawlins 30 years rector at Attlebury, in Norfolk, died May 11, 1614, æt. 67. He was a graduate of Cambridge, and appointed rector of Attlebury, Mar. 8, 1581. He bore for his arms, as appears from a mural monument against the east wall in Mortimer's chapel, the following, embracing his own, as well as his wife's arms: "Argent,—three leopard's faces, sable—impaling three greyhounds, current, regardant, sable."

A. D. 1555. Christopher Rawlins, S. T. P., installed prebendary of Brampton, in the County of Lincoln, 1555; held it in 1562.

A. D. 1583. Alexander Rawlins presented to the rectory of Bircham Magna by the Queen in 1583. In 1603 he certified that there were 190 communicants.

A. D. 1559. Erkinwalde Rawlins was one of the early followers of Luther in the Reformation, and was one of those who, on the accession of Queen Mary and the revival of Popery in England, fled to Geneva. He died at Geneva, Apr. 29, 1559. He seems to have been one of the personal friends of Bradford, the martyr, who thus writes to him and his wife, before leaving England: "Go to, therefore, dispose your goods, prepare yourselves to trial, that either ye may stand to it like God's champions, or else if ye feel such infirmity in yourselves that ye be not able, give place to violence,—go where you may, with free and safe conscience, serve the Lord."

MUSICIANS.

[From Moore's Encyclopaedia of Music.]

Rawlings, Thomas, an English musician, was born about the year 1703. He performed at almost all Handel's oratorios, operas, etc., and was a scholar of the celebrated Dr. Pepusch.

Rawlings, Robert, son of the preceding, was born in 1742; at the age of 17 appointed musical page to the Duke of York, and organist of Chelsea College. He received his first musical tuition under his father, and subsequently studied under an old Italian named Barsanti, at that time in England, and who was considered a very celebrated theorist. He traveled on the continent nine years with his master, and until his death, on which event taking place abroad, Rawlings returned and resumed his musical career, entering the King's band, which appointment was given him personally by his Majesty, George III. He was also elected one of the Queen's private band; died 1814.

Rawlings, Thomas A., son of the preceding, was born 1775. He received his earliest instruction in music under his father, who, on his son's attaining the age of about seven years, began teaching him music, without having any idea in the first instance of making it the boy's profession. When young Rawlings, however, was in his thirteenth year, his father expressed a wish that he should study music with a view to the profession, and this arose from his perceiving in the lad about that time, no common genius for the art. His next anxiety was to select one of the first masters in theory for him, and he was doubtful whether to fix on Baumgarten, a man of known celebrity, or Dittenhofer, also a very eminent theorist, but finally determined on the latter. Young Rawlings then continued to prosecute his studies with attention for seven years, during which period he composed some music for the Professional Concerts that was received with distinguished applause; so much so that he was even engaged by the committee for the concert, to compose a quartette expressly for their performances in the following season. Instrumental music not being at that time much patronized, Rawlings discontinued writing, and performed on the violin and violincello at the opera, ancient, vocal, and all the first concerts, including the City and Philharmonic; also giving instruction on the piano and violin, and in thorough bass. We should mention that during the period he was under Dittenhofer, the celebrated Haydn visited England for Salomon's Concerts, when Rawlings had the honor of being introduced to him by his master, who was on terms of great intimacy with Haydn. Rawlings had now several opportunities of witnessing the scoring by Haydn of some of his celebrated symphonies. The first pianoforte piece composed by Rawlings was, we believe, "No. 10 of the National Melodies" (published by Chappell) which met with very great success—so much so as to induce him to continue writing for the piano. Among the best of his productions are the following: "The Bugle" (flute ad lib.), "Spring," "May Day," "Les Plaisirs de la Chase," "Le Retour" (flute, ad lib.), "The Wreath" a duett, "The Bouquet" a duett, "Kelvin Grove" (flute ad lib.), "Aurora al Sorgerai," "Concerto di Camera, with acc. for flute, two violins, tenor and violincello," and several others.

The American families of Rawlins, while contributing a fair proportion to marine, mercantile, mechanical and professional pursuits, have been mainly engaged in agriculture. They may be fittingly described in the following lines:

"Heart of the people—working men,
Marrow and nerve of human powers,
Who on their sturdy backs sustain,
Through streaming time, this world of ours."

So far as the writer has been capable of observing, they have, as a body, been men of quick perception, good judgment and strict integrity. If noted for any peculiarities worthy of mention they are, reticence, which has caused the compiler some difficulty in arriving at the needed data for this memorial, and for a commendable habit of not neglecting their own affairs for the purpose of investigating those of their neighbors.

In physical development and personal appearance the families differ. The descendants of most of those who settled in the Southern States are said to be of medium size, having regular features, black hair and eyes; while a large proportion of the New England men were above the ordinary stature, many of them possessing unusual strength, and in the earlier generations somewhat remarkable for longevity.

One branch of the family were distinguished for a prominent facial feature, which furnished the subject for the following very good story:

HOW THE ROLLINS FAMILY UNINTENTIONALLY DISTURBED THE PROCEEDINGS OF A CRIMINAL COURT, AND AIDED MR. WEBSTER IN HIS DEFENCE OF THE CRIMINAL.

[COPied FROM CHARLES LANMAN'S SOCIAL HOURS OF DANIEL WEBSTER.]
INTRODUCTION.

easily recognizable by them, as Jews by theirs. There were some five or six brothers, with noses describing almost the same curve, and rejoicing in the same altitude.

Mr. Atkinson was addressing the jury and insisting with great earnestness of manner and eloquent periods, upon the guilt of the accused, when one of the R's entered the Court and stood by the railing which separated the profession from the outsiders.

"Gentlemen of the Jury," said Atkinson, I repeat it, has never before been my disagreeable duty to appear against so desperate a criminal; I know the danger of confounding physical and moral deformity, and I will not ask you to condemn this man because of his countenance; still you cannot look at him gentlemen, without an impression of his guilt. His whole aspect bears the consciousness of crime."

Here another Rollins entered the Court and laid his nose alongside of his brother's, with the profiles towards us.

"Gentlemen of the Jury," continued the Attorney General, I believe this man is not only an offender, but a hardened offender. I believe he is steeped in guilt. Nor can one well suppose that a person so callous to all feelings of pity, as he has been proved to be,—so utterly insensible to every feeling of humanity,—so wholly lost even to the recollection of virtue, ever could have been an innocent man. He is a leprous spot upon society, Gentlemen of the Jury, which your sentence must forever remove, or society itself will become tainted and sicken."

A third Rollins now came in and made another layer or stratum of noses. This was too much for my self-command, or M——n's, who sat next me, and whose attention, indeed, I had attracted to this nasal exhibition, and we indulged in audible laughter, or we should have died from spontaneous suffocation. Atkinson turned to us in angry surprise: "The counsel for the defendant may laugh at my language. I am no orator, as Brutus is; but he can't controvert my facts?" After one or two desperate efforts we finally gained control over our countenances, and looked as solemn as the occasion demanded. For a time everything went well; we resolutely turned our backs upon the noses, and Atkinson was getting finely on with his peroration, when, hearing Mr. M——n exclaim, in a mock-tragic tone,

"What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?"

I looked round, and behold a fourth nose had laid itself alongside the others! and to cap the climax of our misery, a sternutation took place, as if concerted among these proboscises, which you could see, under the effects of the motion, bobbing up and down like the corks of the angler's line. This was past human endurance. In vain M——n and myself stuffed our handkerchiefs in our mouths; in vain bit our lips till the blood flowed freely; the very efforts we made to repress our desire to laugh, excited it, and, carried away in spite of ourselves, we fairly gave way to an unseasonable mirth. This was too much for the Attorney-General. He stopped short in the very torrent and tempest of his eloquence, and sat down; but immediately rose to his feet, and in a tone of undisguised anger addressed the Court: "May it please your Honors," said he, "It is impossible for me to proceed further. Too long have I borne the premeditated and continued insults of the counsel for the defense; insults as gross as they are unprovoked. I claim the protection of the Court." Atkinson's serious manner and address acted upon us like a counter irritant, and immediately restored our self control. I got on my feet and begged pardon of the Court for my unintentional violation of decorum—assuring the Attorney-General that nothing was farther from my mind, than any purpose of wounding his feelings: that so far from wishing to turn into ridicule any thing he had said, I had listened with the greatest gratification to his remarks, till an unfortunate incident had occurred, which I could not explain, but which, in spite of all efforts to the contrary, had made me seemingly forgetful of the place, and the grave occasion. The Attorney-General took my apologetic explanation in good part, and finished his speech without further interruption.

But I laugh to this day, when I recall that scene; those four noses, overlapping each other like horses on a stretch, one just advanced ahead of another, and so different from the noses we meet in our usual experience; the perplexed countenance of Atkinson, the grave surprise of the Court, and the wondering stare of the crowd. On the gravest occasions, an incident most trivial, if unexpected, will sometimes give rise to irrepressible laughter. One such nose might have been tolerated, but when they come in battalions they carry every thing before them.

My client was fortunately acquitted,—partly, perhaps, owing to the sympathetic inclination of juries toward the predominant feeling of the crowd, who, on this occasion, suspected something ludicrous had occurred, and though ignorant what it was, laughed on trust."—Harper's Monthly, Sept., 1856.

Before concluding these introductory remarks, we will give a brief explanation of the plates. The frontispiece represents the house now standing on the old farm of the early settler, James Rawlins. As is evident from its appearance, it has been enlarged and improved by the successive generations who have occupied it. The oldest portion of the building was originally of two stories, each story containing two rooms, and this part of the house is known to be one hundred and fifty years old,—it may be older. Probably James occupied at first a smaller building, and either he or one of his sons erected the present structure at a later date. The writer had thought it probable that the original house was a garrison house, but he has learned that there were but two garrisons in that immediate vicinity during the Indian troubles: one, a short distance below, within the bounds of Portsmouth; the other (Downing's?) on the opposite side of the river. How, then, was it, that exposed as they were, in the midst of what may appropriately be called "the dark and bloody ground" of New Hampshire, the family residing at this point, so accessible to Indian foes, escaped massacre? A solution of this problem was given me by Miss Lydia Rollins, the present occupant and owner of the premises. Her great grandmother, Alice (Dame) (20), once saved a little papoose from drowning in the river near by, and the grateful squaw, the mother of the child, possessing a characteristic memory, which remembers benefits as well as injuries, whenever the Indians were on the war path never failed to warn the family to flee to garrison for safety.

The farm is pleasantly situated on the Piscataqua River, opposite the town of Elliot, Me., and just below Dover Point, well known in the vicinity of Portsmouth as one of the best farms in that region. The present owner, Miss Lydia Rollins, is of the sixth generation, in lineal descent from James, and the farm has remained in possession of this family for two hundred and thirty years: a circumstance common among the landed estates of the old world, but rather unusual in New England. It originally embraced one hundred and fifty acres—fifty acres passed some years since into the hands of Mr. William Rollins, who now resides upon that portion.

Not far from the end of the old house nearest the river, stands, fresh and vigorous, the old Rollins Elm, a fine tree, whose age dates far beyond the memory or the traditions of those now living, and which is probably coeval with the early settlement. The trunk of this tree, of which a photograph is here inserted, measures, in its smallest circumference, twenty-one feet eight inches, and the diameter of the circle covered by its branches is more than one hundred feet.

One pleasant duty only remains—the grateful acknowledgment of valuable hints and facts received at various times from Hon. John Wentworth, of Chicago; Rev. A. H. Quint, D.D., of New Bedford; A. M. Haines, Esq., of Galena; Hon. Samuel Titcomb, of Augusta, Me.; Samuel G. Drake, Esq., of Boston; and from the members of the several families who have in many ways assisted in this effort to rescue from oblivion the fading records of the past.

The compiler respectfully requests that he may be informed of any errors which may be noticed in these records, and solicits notice of any additional facts relating to the various families named. Any information relating to persons of the name of Rawlins or Rollins will be carefully preserved and arranged, with a view to the preparation, at a future date, of a more nearly complete record than is here presented.

JOHN R. ROLLINS.

Lawrence, August, 1874.
Explanations.

The consecutive numbers, 1, 2, 3, etc., refer only to male members of families, and only to heads of families.

A single illustration to those not familiar with genealogical works, will be sufficient. For example:—Page 28; the numbers, 92, 93, 94, at the left of the names, Eliphalet, Joseph, John, indicate that they became heads of families; their brother, William M., having no number prefixed, died unmarried, and does not again appear in the records. These, as will be seen by referring to the top of the same page, were children of (38) Eliphalet, whose serial number, 38, as head of a family, is placed in parenthesis at the left of the name. Now, going forward, follow the consecutive numbers in parentheses, till you reach pages 52 and 53, and you will find the numbers first mentioned: (92) Eliphalet, (93) Joseph, (94) John, with an account of their families; their children being carried forward in a similar manner, by the numbers 232, 233, 234, 235, 236.

Reversing this process, you will readily trace back the pedigree of any one named, to the original ancestor.

The small figures to the right of, and a little above the name, indicate the generation; as on page 53:—Joseph⁵ (Eliphalet⁴, John³, Thomas², James¹), signifies that Joseph (fifth generation) was son of Eliphalet (fourth generation), who was son of John (third generation), who was son of Thomas (second generation), who was son of James (first generation), the early settler.
PART FIRST.

FAMILY RECORDS

AND HIS DESCENDANTS.
FIRST GENERATION.

JAMES RAWLINS. (N. E. Hist. Gen. Register. Vol. 8: p. 257.) Emigrated to America in 1632, with the settlers of Ipswich, Mass. He did not, however, remain long at Ipswich, for he is mentioned by Farmer as being at Newbury in 1634; being, probably, one of a small party who went there for the purpose of looking out a favorable spot for settlement. We next hear of him at Dover, where he was located as early as 1644, as he received a grant of land from the town, July 10th of that year. Another grant of one hundred acres “was layed out for him,” Nov. 26, 1656. This last named lot is so accurately described, and the position and boundaries are so clearly defined, that the description is copied here for the benefit of descendants who may, in future, desire to visit the old place, and explore the paternal acres:

“The grant and granted unto James Rawlins, his heirs and assigns, one hundred acres of upland anext to his one lot, as so layed out and bounded, by Capt. Hall and Sergeant Hanson, who have bounded it as followeth: that is to say, by the water sied 109 rodde; upon the S. E. sied, 80 rodde; upon the N. W. sied, 240 rodde, upon a S. W. and by W. line; and the S. E. sied is upon a S. W. and by W. line. Layed 26th of 11th mo., 1656.”

Mr. Rollins resided in that part of ancient Dover called Bloody Point* (now Newington), till his death, receiving grants of land at various times. His will, dated Dover, Dec. 16, 1685, gave property to his wife, Hannah, to his son, Ichabod (the oldest), to Benjamin, and to his “other children,” not named in the will. The will was proved July 25, 1691. Obadiah Mors, of Strawberry Bank, was executor.

*The origin of this name is somewhat amusing. According to Mr. Hubbard, the historian, it grew out of a quarrel between Walter Neal, the agent of Gorges & Mason, at Pascataqua, and Capt. Wiggans, agent of another company, who proposed forming a settlement higher up the river. Neal had forbidden Wiggans to come upon a certain piece of land, about half way between Dover and Exeter, over which Neal claimed jurisdiction. Capt. Wiggans intended to have defended his right by the sword, but it seems both Wiggans had so much wit in their anger as to waive the battle, each accounting himself to have done very manfully in what was threatened, so that from not what did, but from what might have happened, the place, to this day, retains the formidable name of Bloody Point.
OF the previous history of James Rawlins, or his personal character, we know nothing, except by inferences to be drawn from the following fragmentary notices.

He was not, probably, one of that class who came hither solely for the high purpose of seeking a "faith's pure shrine," but was rather an adventurer, prompted either by a spirit of enterprise, or a desire for gain, or both. He evidently belonged to a class of men of whom some writer has said:

"The early settlers of New Hampshire were distinguished neither for literature nor religion: they were patient, hardy, enterprising men:—and an unvarnished account of their sufferings, dangers and exploits, would appear to us like the tales of romance.

Such an account is not preserved. They had not leisure, if they had ability, to write history: they were much more conversant with the axe, the firelock, and the sword, than with books and the pen. It was often their business to fight, and conquer a savage enemy, but very seldom to give any other or more durable account of their engagements than what they gave to their children and neighbors around those firesides, to defend which they had fearlessly exposed their lives."

1634, Aug. 5. "It was witnessed upon oath that James Rawlins took 8 pence per day, and meate and drinke for ten days worke, for one of his servants, for weeding corn, contrary to an order of Courte" (an act regulating the price of commodities and labor). "And therefore he is to pay 5 shillings for every daye he hath soe transgressed."*

1656, Jan. 27. "James Rawlins was presented for neglect of coming unto the publicke meeting, and admonished therefor, and sentenced to pay the fees of the Courte, two shillings and six pence."†

A few years later, we find him again in trouble. At the second session of the General Court held at Boston, 18th Oct., 1659,

"The Court hauing considered of the seuerall offences of those persons yt entertained ye Quakers, with ye answers giuen in by them respectively, doe order that James Rawlins, being more innocent and ingenious than the rest, be only admonished by ye honnored Gouvernor, wch was done."‡

We shall, probably, judge him more leniently for failing to attend public worship, when we remember that the people of Bloody Point, at that period, were compelled to attend church either at "Cochecae" (Dover), or "Pascataqua" (Portsmouth), a distance of several miles, by Indian trails, and exposed to the attacks of Indian foes: and they so continued to do until about 1713, when the good people of Bloody Point erected a meeting house of their own, and petitioned the Governor and Council for an Act of incorporation as a distinct parish. Their petition was granted; and the parish of Newington incorporated 1713.

*Felts' Massachusetts Currency. †Massachusetts Colony Records.
Among the petitioners were four of the descendants of James Rawlins, viz.: Joseph, Samuel, John and James.

In regard to the violation of the law respecting the price of labor, he was not alone. The regulation was arbitrary, and being found of very difficult application, was repealed the next month. In modern times, nearly two hundred and fifty years later, certain politicians seem to be befogged with the crude ideas of the legislators of that elder day.

His third offence, for which he received a reprimand from the Governor—the crime of hospitality—is now a crime of so comparatively rare occurrence, that no laws against it are considered necessary; and, without attempting to extenuate his fault, we must leave him on this point, as guilty of a flagrant violation of the eminently wise, liberal, wholesome, Christian regulations of the times in which he lived.

The fact that he held slaves (servants), at all, was not then considered at all prejudicial, for this was common. As has been well said by Mr. Edmund Quincy:—

"The blessings of the patriarchal system were not always monopolized by our Southern brethren. New England, also, once rejoiced in its benign influences. Although the fathers of New England did not exactly make slavery the corner stone of their republican institutions, (for the science of political ethics was then in its infancy), still they were not so fanatical as wholly to reject it from the fabric of their new State. The scarcity of laborers in those early days reconciled some of them to a system, which, when first proposed, they rejected with abhorrence, and the obvious convenience of having their work done, without having to pay for it, might well help to silence any fantastic scruples as to the justice of the arrangement."

From the foregoing remarks, it would seem that their subject, Mr. Rawlins, was one of the hardy pioneers in the settlement of the Western wilderness; a plain, sturdy farmer, possessed of good common sense, and practical ideas; capable of thinking and acting for himself, sometimes independently of the arbitrary enactments of the law of his time, and hospitable to the stranger tho’ proscribed. Thus, probably, he spent his life, as contentedly as the savage foes around him would permit—cultivating his broad acres, and rearing a family, who were subsequently to do their part in carrying out the undertaking of founding, and establishing the new State; and, at a good old age, his spirit was gathered to his fathers, while his ashes, the first of his tribe in the new world, were mingled with the virgin soil, which he aided in clearing from the "forest primeval."

Whether James had any other daughters or not, tradition does not say, and, so far as has been ascertained, the records are silent. No mention is made of any in his will.

Belknap's History of New Hampshire, however, has the following item:

"April 22, 1677. A company of fifty men, and ten Natick Indians, marched under Capt. Swaine to Piscataqua, to succor the inhabitants, who were alarmed by scattered parties of the enemy, who were killing and taking people, and burning houses in Wells, Kittery, and within the bounds of Portsmouth. A young woman who was taken from Rawlins' house, made her escape, and came into Cocheco, informing where the enemy lay; three parties were immediately despatched to ambush three places, by one of which the enemy must pass; appearing at one of these places, they were seasonably discovered, but by the too great eagerness of the party to fire upon them, they avoided the ambush, and escaped."

SECOND GENERATION.

(2.) Ichabod⁵, (James¹) res. Bloody Point, was taxed there in 1665. Being the oldest son, he probably remained on the farm occupied by his father. This farm (now, 1873, in possession of a lineal descendant), extended along the river, and was favorably situated for water communication with Kittery and Portsmouth; a rude clearing, no doubt, as contrasted with the pleasant farms of modern Newington.

On the opposite side of the river, at Dover Neck, dwelt at the same time, Jeremiah or Jeremy Tibbetts,* whose daughter, Mary, seems to have possessed special attractions for young Ichabod Rawlins; and though a rapid stream intervened between them, it seems to have been no barrier, or to have been powerless to dampen their affection for each other. There may not have been so much of romance in their intercourse as attached to the story of Hero and Leander, and we are not informed whether he ever attempted the feat of swimming his little Hellespont for moonlight meetings, when the toil of the day was o'er; but it is pretty certain that he must have "paddled his own canoe," as most of his successors have done; and it is still more certain that he did not share Leander's fate, because in the present case the lovers' hopes were crowned with fruition, and they were married. Their happiness, however, was of short duration, for Mary Rawlins died before the age of 30, leaving one son.

7. i. Jeremiah.

Mr. Rawlins married again Elizabeth ———, by whom he had one daughter.

ii. Hannah, b. July 16, 1706, who is, perhaps, the Hannah who married Job Hardy, of Bradford, Mass., Sept. 24, 1744.*

In the following year after Hannah's birth, May 22, 1707, Mr.
Rawlins was killed by the Indians, being attacked by a party of twenty or thirty while driving a team, in company with John Bunker, from Lieut. Field's garrison to James Bunker's, for a loom. This was between Oyster River (now Durham), and dover.†

(3.) Thomas² (James¹) lived, also, at Bloody Point; was taxed there in 1662 and 1668, and removed to Exeter, N. H., where he remained till his death. His farm appears to have been located on the old road leading from Exeter to Hampton. We know but little of him; but one passage in his life has been preserved, which tends to show that he possessed something of his father's independence, and that his ideas of justice were something in advance of those of his neighbors. He was one of the Company of Edward Gove, a member of the dissolved Assembly of N. H., 1683, who were found in arms, and endeavoring to excite an insurrection for the overthrow of the arbitrary government of the Royal Governor—Edward Cranfield.

In order to gain a correct understanding of this effort at rebellion or revolution, it will be necessary to state that after the death of Capt. John Mason, one of the original proprietors of New Hampshire, which occurred in 1635, his widow, weary of the great expense and inadequate returns of the Portsmouth plantation, informed her servants that they must provide for themselves. Some removed with their goods and cattle; others remained, keeping possession of the buildings and improvements which they henceforward claimed as their own. The houses at Newichwannoch were consumed by fire, and nothing was left of Mason's estate but a doubtful interest in the soil. The people, left without a government, formed themselves, after the example of the people of Exeter, into a body politic; and those of Dover did the same. By a written instrument, 1640, signed by forty-one persons, they agreed to submit to the laws of England, and such other laws as should be enacted by a majority of their number, until the royal pleasure should be known.*

Matters continued thus until Apr. 14, 1641, when New Hampshire came under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, and the history of the two plantations, for a period of thirty years, became blended together. In 1680 a royal commission was brought to Portsmouth, declaring New Hampshire a royal Province. This was brought about through the influence of Robert Tufton Mason, with the design of recovering the possessions of his ancestor. The first President under the new Commission (John Cutts), and a majority of the council, were in the interest of the people, and opposed to Mason's designs. The appointment of these men would do very well to disguise, for a time, the real object of the new government; but as their continuance in office would not further Mason's views, he obtained, in 1682, the appointment of Edward Cranfield. Arbitrary, needy, and rapacious, Cranfield made no secret of his object, in accepting the office, and openly sought to reciprocate the liberality of Mason, by a devotion to his claim.

By his commission he was vested with extraordinary powers; he could adjourn, prorogue and dissolve General Courts; had a negative voice on all acts of government; could suspend any of the Council; appoint Judges, and all subordinate officers; and, in short, exercise the powers of Vice-Admiral.

Within six days after the publication of his Commission, he suspended the popular leaders—Waldron and Martyn. This was one step towards rendering him odious to the people. Either from shame or more probably to quiet the popular clamor, he restored them to their places, Nov. 14th.

The Assembly met the same day, and hoping to detach the Governor from the interests of Mason, they voted him £250. This put him in good humor for a time; but the opposition of the Assembly to his measures, was so irritating that he adjourned it. At the next session, the Assembly refused to pass a bill raising money for the support of the government, and he dissolved it.

The dissolution of the Assembly, a thing before unknown, aggravated the popular discontent, and kindled the resentment of some, in Hampton and Exeter, who, headed by Edward Gove, a member of the dissolved Assembly, declared by sound of trumpet for liberty and reformation.

Gove went from town to town, declaring that the Governor was a traitor, and had exceeded his Commission, and that he would not lay down his arms until matters were set right; and endeavoring to incite the principal men of the Province to join in a confederacy to overthrow the government.

His project, however, appeared so wild and dangerous, that they not only disapproved it, but informed against him, and assisted in apprehending him. Hearing of their design, he collected his Company and appeared in arms, but on the persuasion of some of his friends, surrendered. A special Court was immediately commissioned for his trial, of which Major Waldron sat as Judge, with William Vaughn and Thomas Daniel as Assistants. The grand jury presented a bill, in which Edward Gove, his son John Gove, and William Healy, of Hampton; Joseph, John and Robert Wadleigh (three brothers), Thomas Rawlins, Mark Baker and John Sleeper, of Exeter, were charged with high treason.

Gove, who behaved with great insolence before the Court, and pretended to justify his conduct, was convicted, and received sentence of death in the usual hideous form.*

*The sentence was as follows:—"That the prisoner be carried back to the place whence he came, and from thence be drawn to the place of execution, to be there hanged by the neck: be cut down alive: that his entrails be taken out, and burned before his face: that his head be cut off, and his body be divided into four quarters, and that his head and quarters be disposed of, at the King's pleasure."—N. H. Historical Collections. Vol. ii. p. 44.
SECOND GENERATION.

The Judge, who loved Cranfield no better than did the prisoner, is said to have wept while pronouncing the sentence.

Gove's estate was also seized and forfeited to the Crown. His companions were convicted of being accomplices. They were all pardoned except Gove, who was sent to the Tower of London, and imprisoned about three years—his sentence having been commuted.

On his repeated petitions to the King, and by the interest of Randolph with the Earl of Clarendon, then Lord Chamberlain, he obtained his pardon, and returned home in 1686, with an order to the President and Council to restore his estate.

Mason, for some time after, endeavored to enforce his claim, and wearied the patience of the colonists by vexatious lawsuits, but with very indifferent success, until such representations were made to the home government, as to draw down the royal censure, and secure the removal of Cranfield.

To one of the petitions for his removal we find attached the name of Thomas Rawlins; and his rebellious blood continued to flow in the veins of his descendants, for we find twenty or more of them, at a subsequent period, engaged in rebellion against the arbitrary government of George III, with better success. He was unsuccessful—therefore a rebel; they successful—therefore patriots. In the former case, the parties were to be dispossessed of lands and buildings, voluntarily relinquished to them by the representative of the original proprietor, and which for years they had cultivated and improved as their own; this was the grievance which they sought to redress; in the latter case, they resisted the principle of taxation without representation. Rawlins was a Justice of the Peace in 1682. He married, about 1670, Rachel, daughter of Moses and Alice Cox, of Hampton.* The precise date of his death is not known; his inventory was returned to the Probate office, Nov. 7, 1706.

The number of children, grandchildren and great grandchildren at the time of her death was 239, of whom 182 were living. After Mr. Sanborn's decease, which occurred in his 46th year, she removed to Exeter, being dismissed from the church at Hampton and recommended to the church at Exeter, in 1731. She married Thomas Rawlins 1731, and died at North Hampton, May 30, 1761. He had the misfortune to lose his dwelling house by fire in 1752, and in it he had also the misfortune to lose some money, which was replaced by the Government. The circumstance is mentioned here merely as illustrative of the different state of things between that period and the present.

"Thursday, Nov. 2, 1752.—Thomas Rawlins of Stratham in the Province of New Hampshire, came into the house and declared upon oath that he had lately had his dwelling-house destroyed by fire; that in it he had burnt, to the best of his judgment, eight pounds, eight shillings old tenor bills of Public Credit of this Province, and prayed that he might be allowed that sum by the Government. Therefore, Voted that he be paid the sum of eight pounds, eight shillings old tenor bills of Public Credit of this Province, out of the bills now to be burnt to ashes, and that the said sum be accounted part of what shall now be burnt, and the Speaker of this House be empowered and desired to take said bills and pay the same to said Rawlins, taking his receipt therefor."—Journal of the H. of R.

His will dated Sept. 7, 1736, was proved Apr. 30, 1740. All his children are named in the will, and by it he bequeathed to Elizabeth, his wife, his “home place” in Exeter, at a place called the brook on the south side of the way leading to Hampton; and to his son Josiah, land adjoining the same, and land in Gilmanton.‡

He was one of the original proprietors of the town of Gilmanton, granted in 1727; was the first constable chosen by the proprietors, and a member of several committees for surveying and laying out the township. He did not live long enough to see the new town occupied, as the two Indian wars prevented the settlement of Gilmanton till 1761 or later.

‡Exeter Probate Record.
In 1710, Benjamin was "Corporal" in a company of 91 men, who were sent out under Captain John Gilman to punish the Indians for their depredations among the settlements, but more particularly to avenge the death of Col. Edward Hilton, who had been slain by them July 22 of that year. Hilton had for a long time been a terror to the savages, and for a long time they had sought an opportunity to destroy him. At this time he was engaged in getting masts, and having a supply cut, about fourteen miles distant from home, left over from the preceding winter, he with a small party were engaged in peeling them to prevent injury from worms. While thus engaged they were ambushed by the Indians, who killed Hilton and two others at the first fire; two were taken prisoners; the others escaped. They could make no resistance, as their guns were wet and useless from a storm. A company of 100 men went in pursuit the next day, but found nothing but the mangled bodies of their neighbors. On the 16th of August another company of 91 went out, but the Indians, finding the people were thoroughly aroused, had withdrawn to a very respectful distance.

(12.) Aaron3, (Thomas2, James1) married a daughter of Edward Taylor, who was killed by the Indians Apr. 26, 1704, and whose wife Rebecca, enduring severe hardships, was carried captive to Canada. Penhallow, in his history of the Indian wars, gives the following statement in regard to some of the captives:

Several of our captives still remaining among the French and Indians, occasioned the sending of a messenger (Mr. Sheldon) a second time to Canada, with a flag of truce, who on his return brought 45 and had a prospect of many more, but was prevented by the Jesuits. As to the treatment of our captives with the French, it was as different and as various as their constitutions. Some were mild and pleasant, while others were morose and sordid; but the Indians might as well try to alter their complexions as their constitutions. Scarce a day passed without some act of cruelty, insomuch that all were under a constant martyrdom, between fear of life and terror of death. It would be an endless task to enumerate the various sufferings that many groaned under, by long marching with heavy burdens, through heat and cold; and when ready to faint for want of food, they were frequently knocked on the head, or fastened to stakes and burned alive. And yet the finger of God did eminently appear in several instances, of which I shall mention a few: As, first, of Rebecca Taylor, who after her return from captivity gave me the following account, viz.: that when she was going to Canada on the back of Montreal river, she was grossly insulted by Sampson, her bloody master, who without any provocation resolved to hang her. For want of a rope he made use of his girdle, which when he had fastened about her neck, he attempted to hoist her up to the limb of a tree, but in hoisting her the weight of the body broke it asunder, which so exasperated the cruel tyrant that he made a second attempt, resolving if he failed in that to knock her on the head; but before he had time to effect his purpose, Bomazeen (a chief) came along, who seeing the tragedy on foot, prevented the fatal stroke."

Rawlins lived on the plantation left by his father-in-law, Taylor, about half a mile west from Lamprey River landing, the lower falls of the Piscasick river (now Newmarket.) He was killed by the Indians and his family broken up on the night of August 29, 1723. The people there at that time commonly retired at night to the garrison houses, and returned home in the day time. Aaron and his family on this night had neglected the usual precaution, and the opportunity was improved by the Indians for an attack. It seems that the Indian scouts consisted of eighteen, who had probably been reconnoitering for some time, and intended to have destroyed both families, Aaron's and his brother Samuel's, who lived about a mile and a half distant. For this purpose they divided, and nine went to each house. The party that went to Samuel's, after beating in the windows and finding the family gone, immediately joined their companions who were at work at Aaron's. Mrs. Rawlins, who attempted to escape from the house, was immediately seized, with two of her children who followed her. Her husband secured the door before the savages could enter, and with his eldest daughter, about twelve years of age, stood upon his defence, repeatedly firing whenever they attempted to enter, and at the same time calling earnestly to his neighbors for help; but the people in the several garrison houses near, apprehending from the noise and incessant firing, the number of the enemy to be greater than it was, did not venture to his assistance.

Having for some time bravely withstood such unequal force, he was at last killed by their random shots through the house. They then broke open the house and killed the daughter. They scalped Mr. Rawlins, but cut off the daughter's head, either through haste, or from rage, on account of the assistance she had rendered her father in the defence, which evidently appeared from her hands being soiled with powder.

Mrs. Rawlins and the other two children, a son and a daughter, were carried captive to Canada. The mother was redeemed in a few years. The son was adopted by the Indians, and lived with them all his days. He came into Pennacook (Concord) with the Indians after the war was ended, and expressed to some people with whom he conversed, much resentment toward his uncle Samuel, supposing that he had detained from his mother, some property left by his father; but manifested no desire to return to Newmarket again.

The daughter married a Frenchman, and when she was near sixty years of age, returned with her husband to her native place, in expectation of recovering the patrimony which she conceived was left at the death of her father; but the estate having been sold by her grandfather, Taylors' administrator, they were disappointed, and after a year or two went back to Canada. This account was collected from some of the surviving sufferers and other aged persons, who were witnesses of the scene, by Wentworth Cheswell, Esq., of Newmarket, who was for many years Town Clerk of that town.*

On the 31st Oct., 1723, Thomas, Benjamin, John and Joseph Rawlins, approved of their brother Samuel as administrator of the estate of their brother Aaron, and he was appointed Dec. 4th, 1723. Samuel conveyed, subsequently, all his right in his brother Aaron's property to his brother Joseph of Stratham.†

(14.) John² (Thomas², James¹) res. Exeter; removed thence to East Bradford, (now Groveland). He lived on the river road leading from Groveland to Haverhill, near the old chain ferry, the house in which he resided being yet in a good state of preservation [1873]. He removed with most of his family in 1736 to Damariscotta, Me., where he died, 1776. He married first, Mary, daughter of Thomas Savary, July 31, 1722. His second wife was Mary Glidden; third, Patience Knox; fourth, Anne Hiscock. The children, fourteen in number, all by his first two wives, were:

38. i. Eliphalet, b. ——, 1726.
39. ii. Deborah, b. ——, 1728; md. —— Chase.
40. iii. Benjamin, b. ——, 1734.

50. xiii. Lydia, b. ——, 1750; md. Elnathan Palmer of Bradford, 1769, who removed to Nobleboro.

(15.) Joseph³ (Samuel², James¹) res. Newington and Portsmouth; md. Susanna “Fouett” (Foot?), May 10, 1739. June 3, 1746, he was sergeant of a company of mounted men, sent from Portsmouth to carry provisions to Sergeant Beck, who was then scouting with thirty men at Canterbury and vicinity; they furnished their own equipments and provisions, and paid their own expenses. In 1748 he was in service 4 months in the company of Capt. Job Clements. In 1748 he was in the 4th Co. of Col. John Hart’s regiment, Capt. Summersbee Gilman, in the expedition against Crown Point, serving from April till the discharge of the regiment, Oct. 30.

(16.) Edward 3, (James 2, James 1) res. Newington; rem. to Rochester, N. H., where he died May 25, 1756. He was one of the Selectmen of Rochester for several years. He built and occupied a large garrison house near the lower end of the main street in Rochester, which has long since been pulled down to make way for a modern structure. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Hate-evil and Leah (Furber) Nutter, of Newington, Nov. 21, 1742. She was born Sept. 19, 1723; was a granddaughter of Anthony, and a great-granddaughter of Elder Hate-evil Nutter. Her grandfather Anthony lived at Bloody Point; was freeman in 1662; in 1667 was "Corporal"; in 1683, "Leftenant"; was also one of the Selectmen, a Representative in the Legislature, and "the tall, big man, named Anthony Nutter, who, with Wiggin in Gov. Cranfield's time, visited Mason (the claimant of the New Hampshire plantation) when the latter had his wig burned, his teeth knocked out, and met with other similar accidents."*

Edward Rawlins died intestate, according to the Probate Records, and his widow Elizabeth was administratrix on his estate. Among other property, he was possessed of 60 acres of land in Rochester, a negro valued at £450, etc., the whole estate amounting to £3777-16-6.

(22.) Hon. Ichabod Rollins⁴ (Jeremiah³, Ichabod², James¹) resided in that part of Somersworth which was subsequently incorporated and named in honor of him, Rollinsford. He was a member of the Revolutionary conventions at Exeter, April, May and Dec. 1775; one of the committee to prepare and bring into the convention a plan of ways and means for furnishing troops; was also one of the committee of supplies. On the 20th June, 1775, he was sent in company with Hon. Timothy Walker of Concord, a member of the committee of supplies, to ascertain the losses sustained at the battle of Bunker Hill, by each of the officers and soldiers of the New Hampshire forces, and in behalf of the Colony to make them compensation; also to secure to them supplies, and advance a month's pay to such as had enlisted, or might enlist in the Continental service. The action of the Provincial Congress upon the report subsequently made of their doings, affords evidence that their duties were performed to their acceptance.*

Mr. Rollins was a member of the Convention when it resolved itself, Jan. 5, 1776, into an independent State Government; a delegate to the Legislature, Oct., 1776; and the first Judge of Probate under the new government, which office he held from 1776 to 1784. He was also a member of the Executive Council of New Hampshire, 1789. The Register of Deeds at this time was Hon. John Wentworth Jr., of Dover, nephew of Mr. Rollins' first wife, and son-in-law of his second.†

Judge Rollins, as well as his great grandfather, was a slave holder. Mr. Edmund Quincy gives an interesting sketch of one the servants (Dinah), in a little publication called “The Liberty Bell.” Among other things he says: “It was in that world before wages, but toward the close of those happy days of primitive simplicity, that Dinah made her appearance upon this disjointed scene of things. She was born in the house of Judge Rollins, a circumstance, which we learn from high authority, brought her as effectually within the scriptural sanction of slavery as if she had been bought with his money. If her master happened to be troubled with any silly scruples about his relations to poor Dinah and his other slaves, it is a thousand pities that he lived too soon to enjoy the ghostly consolation just quoted, and others equally cogent and to the point: as for example, the position recently maintained by a Reverend Divine (Rev. R. Fuller, of Beaufort, S. C.) that 'the domestic relations here existing are authorized by God, not condemned by

* Bouton's History of Concord. † Wentworth Genealogy.
Jesus Christ, and expressly authorized by the Holy Ghost; and that consequently their condemnation by abolitionists is a direct insult to the Unchangeable and Holy one of Heaven!' In default of such comforters, however, Judge Rollins and his family appear to have quieted their conscientious scruples, if they had any, by treating their slaves in the kindest manner."

In continuing his narrative, Mr. Quincy falls into quite an error by stating that the Rollins family became extinct, since more than one hundred and fifty of the descendants of old James Rawlins were found in 1861–5 defending the old flag which Judge Rollins aided in throwing to the breeze in 1775, and their lives were freely offered on a vast number of the battle fields of the Great Rebellion.

His first wife was Abigail, daughter of Capt. Benjamin and Elizabeth Wentworth, of Dover. After her decease, which occurred Oct. 17, 1790, in her 68th year, he married in the summer of 1792, Margaret (Colton) Frost, widow of Joseph Frost, of Newcastle, N. H., a brother of Hon. George Frost, of Durham (Judge and Representative in U. S. Congress), and a descendant of Major Charles Frost, of Kittery.*

Judge Rollins died Jan. 31, 1800. His widow dec'd at Rollinsford, July 5, 1813, æt. 89.

Children.

57. ii. Ichabod, b. — 1747.
58. iii. James, b. ——.
59. iv. Daniel, b. ——; married Jonathan Chesley Chadbourne, of Berwick. They had four children. (1) Abigail, who married Geo. W. Wallingford, of Kenebunk, grad. Harvard College, 1795, lawyer, who died Jan. 20, 1824. He was only son of Captain Samuel Wallingford, who served with great distinction as Lieut. of Marines under John Paul Jones, aided in the capture of the British brig George, and was killed on board the Ranger in her successful engagement with the Drake off the British coast in 1778. They left one child, wife of Dr. Samuel Dow, of Dover. (2.) Benjamin.

*Maj. Charles Frost, of Sturgeon Creek (Kittery), 1693, was a member of the Council of Massachusetts Bay, elected by the people under the provisions of the new charter. He had been an active officer in King Phillip’s war, and was much feared by the savages. He was son of Nicholas, one of the first settlers of Kittery, 1663; was killed by the Indians, Sunday, July 4, 1697, while returning from church at Berwick.

(36.) Samuel⁴, (Samuel³, Thomas², James¹) res. Newmarket, N. H.; rem. to Portland, Me. He was in the service of his country during the latter part of the French and Indian war, serving in Capt. James Sayward's company, from April 10 to November 23, 1762. He was a mariner; resided at the corner of Brown and Main streets; was killed, April 4, 1783, by the bursting of a cannon, with which the people were celebrating the event of the treaty of peace with Great Britain. Rev. Mr. Smith, in his journal, says: “On the 31st March, 1783, news was brought to this town, from Boston, of the conclusion of peace; and on the 4th of April, a handbill, containing a confirmation of the happy event, having been received, the people gave loose to their joy. They had a mad day of rejoicing, firing cannon incessantly, from morning till night, and ending by killing Mr. Rollins.”

Samuel married Bethia Robbins, formerly of Ipswich, Mass., but resident in Portland at the time of marriage.

Children.

i. James, b. ———; married Mary Ingersoll, of Portland, Aug. 1, 1801.

ii. Hannah, b. 1772; married Aug. 26, 1789, Capt. Thomas Roach (name formerly written La Roche), one of whose sons, Lieut. James H. Roach, was a Lieutenant in the U. S. revenue service, 1834-41; rem. to Boston, 1853; died about 1860. Mrs. Hannah Roach died at Portland, a widow, Oct. 27, 1851.

iii. Margaret, b. ———; md. Ebenezer Cobb, of Gorham, Me., Jan. 9, 1800. They resided at Portland, on the northeast side of Love Lane (now Centre St.), near a place now called Cobb's Court. They had one son, Thomas La Roche Cobb, b. Oct. 24, 1800.

iv. Jeremiah, b. ———; died unmarried, in the West Indies.

(37.) John4, (Samuel3, Thomas2, James1) res. Newmarket; md. Sarah, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Hunt) Bodge, of Lee. He was a Revolutionary soldier; was at the battle of Bunker Hill, and was in service most of the time throughout the war. (49.) Edward⁴ (Edward³, James², James¹), res. Rochester; md. Dec. 17, 1778, Anna Wentworth, of Rochester. He died June 10, 1816. Edward was a soldier of the Revolution. He enlisted Sept. 17, 1776; was a Corporal in Captain William McDuffie's Co., 2d N. H. Reg't. Two Regiments were raised in N. H., 1776, in September, to reinforce the Continental army in New York. The first of these was under command of Colonel Nahum Baldwin; the second, under Colonel Thomas Tash, of Durham. McDuffie's company was the 5th in Tash's regiment. These regiments, with a third, raised in December, joined Washington in Pennsylvania, and did good service for their country. They participated in the battles of Trenton and Princeton, and, though suffering from the cold weather of December and January, for want of suitable clothing, they continued in the army six weeks beyond their term of enlistment. The two last, Tash's and Gilman's, continued with the army till March, 1777, thus contribution largely to the success of the patriot cause, and setting an example for the less patriotic soldiers of some of the other States, who, notwithstanding the urgent need of troops, insisted upon returning as soon as their terms of enlistment had expired.*

Edward was a town officer in Rochester, being annually elected one of the Selectmen of the town for a number of years. His widow was resident in Charleston, Me., 1850, at Corinth, 1853, where she died, Sept. 6, 1855, æt. 93. She drew a pension while she lived.

(50.) Col. John ⁴ (Ichabod ³, James ², James ¹), res. Rochester, and removed thence to Alton; md., Aug. 26, 1779, Elizabeth Leighton, of Rochester. In 1776 Congress had discovered the error of short enlistments and temporary levies, and determined upon a permanent war establishment; and in the latter part of that year, the regiments were recruited for service during the war. John Rollins enlisted in 1777, in the company of Capt. James Carr, of Somersworth, 2d N. H. regiment, Col. Nathan Hale, of Rindge. These troops were under Gen. Sullivan’s command, and had their rendezvous at Ticonderoga; were there when that post was evacuated on the approach of Burgoyne from the North. On the retreat from Ticonderoga in July, Col. Hale’s regiment was ordered to cover the rear of the invalids, and fell some 6 or 7 miles in the rear of the army. On the morning of July 7 it was attacked by an advanced party of the enemy at Hubbardton, and suffered great loss, the Colonel, three Captains, the Adjutant and 100 men being taken prisoners,

*State Reports, N. H.
and the Major, the gallant Benjamin Titcomb, wounded severely. Rollins escaped with the rest, and continued in the service, and was discharged Oct. 11, 1782, having served 5 years, 8 months. (94.) John\(^5\) (Eliphalet\(^4\), John\(^3\), Thomas\(^2\), James\(^1\)), res. Groveland till he was apprenticed, at an early age, to a carpenter and builder, at Gloucester, Mass., who was a tyrannical, penurious old fellow, but a good mechanic. Among other reminiscences of his boyhood, my grandfather, when far advanced in life, related to me, that the first year of his apprenticeship, he desired to rejoin the family on the recurrence of the annual Thanksgiving—a season when, if possible, all stray members of families returned to the paternal roof. He asked permission to leave the noon preceding; this was refused. He then tried to borrow or hire the old man's horse for the next day, as the distance was too great to traverse on foot, and return the same day; this also was refused. In the night, a hail storm occurred; and very early in the morning, determined not to be balked in his purpose, he started for home. Walking, however, was out of the question, the particles of hail yielding under the feet like deep, coarse sand; so, taking up what is commonly known as a dog-trot, he made his way thirty miles, and arrived in season for dinner. He did not hurry back the same day, and his father had a few comments to offer upon the subject, when he drove back with him, on the day following.

Mr. Rollins was a skillful mechanic, and, while following his trade, his services were often called in requisition, not only in the direct line of his business, but as a boat builder and cabinet maker.

He subsequently removed to Newburyport, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits for several years, and was one of the first selling agents in that region for the Amesbury nail factory, which had just been established for the manufacture of cut nails. During the whole period of his employment at his trade, the nails used were all wrought by hand, hammered out one by one at the smith's forge.

About the time of the last war with England, Mr. Rollins removed to a farm which he had purchased in Litchfield, N. H., where he resided seven years, and at the end of this time returned to Newburyport, retiring from active business, and there spent the remainder of his days. He amused himself in his leisure hours in bee culture, and was among the first, if not the first, to introduce in that neighborhood the then new method of obtaining honey without destroying the bees. Mr. Rollins was a vigorous, athletic man, six feet in height and correspondingly stout; and, in his earlier years, possessed of unusual physical strength, being able, at the age of 19, to lift more than any man in his native town. Until his last illness, he had never summoned a physician on his own account. He dec'd at Newburyport, July 5, 1845, æt. 82. Coolidge and Mansfield, in their History of New England, relate the following anecdote of Col. Foote: "During the last war with England, a battery was erected on the mountain back of the village, consisting of one twelve and one eighteen pounder. This appearance of the ability of the town to defend itself, held the British in check, though they might have taken it at any time had they made the attempt, there being but a handful of soldiers and no gunners that could manage the battery. The command at the time devolved upon Col. Foote, whose courage (although no opportunity was ever afforded the Colonel to set his valor beyond a doubt) some wicked skeptics have even dared to question. It is reported that when he was expecting an attack by the British, he drew up his force to meet them, and, with all the majesty of Napoleon at the Pyramids, delivered them a speech. Drawing his sword from its scabbard, he pointed back to Megunticook mountain, on which the battery was erected, and exclaimed: 'Soldiers! forty years behind you! You are now going into battle, but, if you find yourselves under the necessity of retreating, you will find me up in Simon Barrett's barn.'"

(156.) Capt. George6 (John5, Ichabod4, Jeremiah3, Ichabod2, James1), res. S. Berwick, Me., till 1810; rem. to New York. He commenced his business career as an associate with his father, in commerce with various European ports, Liverpool, Bordeaux, etc. Their business was greatly interrupted, and much loss ensued in consequence of the war of 1812, and the unlawful interference of British cruisers with American vessels, which preceded the actual hostilities. On one occasion, Capt. Rollins, with his brother-in-law, Delano, of New Bedford, took refuge in the harbor of Galway; another brother-in-law, closely pursued by a cruiser, pressed sail until he ran his vessel under, and all were lost. In 1812, to avoid pursuit, he sought shelter in the harbor of Norfolk, Va., and in the night a British barge came up and burned his vessel and cargo. In the fall of 1813, under Swedish papers, he sailed for Barbadoes with a full cargo, of a large portion of which the British again despoiled him, regardless of his papers. In 1815, after the close of the war, he again sailed under American papers, and continued in mercantile pursuits until his death. He died at New Orleans, May 28, 1834, a victim to that terrible scourge, the Asiatic cholera, which swept over the country, during that year.

(163.) Ichabod (Daniel, Ichabod, Jeremiah, Ichabod, James), res. Portsmouth; md. Martha A. Hooker, of Portsmouth, Nov. 2, 1818. He was a merchant in Portsmouth, and for a long series of years was connected with the Portsmouth Savings Bank, as one of its trustees, and was employed in other corporate and municipal trusts. Near the close of a long and useful life, on retiring from the Board of Trustees of the Savings Bank, very complimentary resolutions were adopted by the Board, thanking him for his long and faithful services, and after his death, which occurred a few months later, May 9, 1873, at the age of 83, the following obituary notice appeared in the Portsmouth Journal, probably from the pen of his friend and associate, Hon. W. H. Y. Hackett:

"Mr. Rollins descended from the ancient and highly respectable family of his name in Rollinsford. He came to this city early in life and was for many years a prominent and successful merchant. Having acquired an estate commensurate with his wants and wishes, he many years ago retired from business, and spent his declining years in retirement, and in that ease and well-deserved honor which crown a well spent life.

Mr. Rollins preferred retirement, but he was sought by the public for several trusts. He was called to fill several positions —municipal, corporate—in the town, banks, insurance companies, factories, and other organizations. At the time of his death he was the only surviving Director of the Old Piscataqua Bank, to which trust he was elected in 1825. He was for several years the President of the Portsmouth Mutual Insurance Co. He was the oldest Trustee of the Portsmouth Savings Bank, and for many years a member of the Investment Committee of the Bank. It will be remembered that less than a year ago he retired from this position, and that the Trustees upon that occasion paid an appropriate tribute to his long and valuable service. No inconsiderable part of the great success and blessings of that institution, was due to the ability, great sagacity and diligence of Mr. Rollins’ life. In all positions and relations of life he was more anxious to be right than to be thought so. In our community he has long been regarded as the impersonation of fidelity and integrity, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of the whole people.

In the benevolent organizations of the South Parish, of which he was a member from his youth, he was an efficient and liberal member, and at the time of his death he was a Director of the Sunday School. His funeral was largely attended, and among those present we noticed several of his associates in early life and in the various trusts in which he had served. The services conducted by the pastor were especially appropriate,—in harmony with the occasion, the character of the deceased, his life of purity, and his quiet and peaceful death, and the affectionate regard and reverence of those who had gathered to pay the last token of respect.

*Mrs. Rollins’ uncle, Maj. Reuben Colburn, built some of the first vessels on the Kennebeck River. He was a man of great energy and earnestness of purpose, in illustration of which it is related by Hansen in his history of Gardiner and Pittston, that it was the major’s custom, throughout the Summer months, to take his family in a canoe every Saturday, and paddle down to Georgetown, thirty-five miles, to attend church, returning on Monday. Hansen also relates that on the breaking out of the Revolution, the few surviving warriors of the Kennebeck Indians were persuaded by Paul Higgins, who had lived among them from childhood, to join the Americans. Headed and guided by Maj. Colburn, they went, to the number of twenty or thirty, in their canoes to Merry Meeting Bay, whence they proceeded on foot to Cambridge, arriving Aug. 13, 1775, and tendered their services to Gen. Washington. Washington, however, did not fancy the introduction of their style of warfare into the contest, gave them but little encouragement, and they returned.
Maj. Colburn built the batteaux for transporting Arnold’s troops above tide water, in his expedition to Quebec, and accompanied the expedition; but as late as 1852 neither he nor his heirs had ever been paid for these boats, though they had repeatedly asked Congress to reimburse.

Of these, William Isaac, now resident at Lawrence, Kansas, was, in politics, early a member of the Anti-Slavery party, and his first vote was cast for the Anti-Slavery candidate for President; but notwithstanding his views in this direction, when the Mexican war was commenced he sustained the government by enlisting in the army and participating in the battle of Buena Vista. Early in the Spring of 1855 he went to Lawrence and resided there through all the troubled times of the State of Kansas. He raised the first company of Sharp's Rifles in Lawrence, which, during that Fall and the next Summer, gave the slavery party so much trouble; and used every effort in his power to prevent the establishment of slavery, and to make Kansas a free State. In 1856 he went to Ohio on a visit, and after the Presidential election attempted to return to his home, but he found the Missouri River guarded by the Border Ruffians, and was obliged to go round through Iowa. He had his revenge, however. On the 15th of November he left Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and traversed the entire distance to Lawrence, 400 miles, on foot, establishing, at convenient intervals, depots for the Western Underground Railroad; and, keeping his headquarters at Lawrence, he forwarded by this route hundreds of runaway slaves to Canada and freedom. Many times his house was surrounded by negro-hunters, and more than once searched by United States troops, but no slave once in his possession, was ever recovered. In the late Rebellion, he raised a company for the Union army, but, through the influence of politicians, the command was given to another, and he remained at home.

(232.) EBENEZER 6 (Eliphaz 5, Eliphaz 4, John 3, Thomas 2, James 1), res. Groveland, Mass.; rem. to Boston. He was one of the founders, and a member of the first Board of Trustees of Groveland or E. Bradford Academy, at one time, and for many years, quite a flourishing school. In this enterprise he was associated with the late Rev. Gardiner B. Perry, and Dr. Jeremiah Spofford. Mr. Rollins was for many years a prominent merchant in Boston, a bank and insurance director, etc. He married widow Frances (Hicks) Morse, daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Gore) Torrey, and niece of Hon. Christopher Gore, Governor of Massachusetts. He died at Havana, Cuba, Mar. 2, 1832, whither he had gone for the benefit of his health. An obituary notice of him appeared in the Boston Courier, Mar. 27, 1832, from which the following is extracted:

"Mr. Rollins was, indeed, remarkable for those qualities which conciliate esteem and secure love. They were not such as would carry his name beyond the circle of those to whom he was personally known, but, within that circle, their benign influence was prized as few things else are prized, and the eyes which saw him blessed him. He was full of kindness—it beamed from his countenance—it was conveyed by the pressure of his hand—it spoke in friendly words, though not so much in them as in more friendly actions and services. It was manifested in his treatment of children, to whom he was invariably gentle and attentive, entering into their dispositions, consulting their innocent pleasures, delighted with their ingenuity, and, which is not so often the case with grown persons as it ought to be, duly considerate toward their occasional waywardness.
He was a man of integrity as well as of kindness. His sense of true honor was uniformly high—not suspicious, inflammable and boasting, but marked in his whole deportment. Those who knew him in social life or the concerns of business, felt a perfect confidence in him; they did not need even his promise that he would do the thing which was right. His taste was good, his judgment clear, his feelings generous, and his principles sound. He loved the house of God, and was not only a hearer but a doer of the Word. He has not lived in vain, for he has contributed to the happiness of many; he has not died in vain, for he has left a good example.”

Mr. Rollins’ widow survived him many years, and died in Boston, 1865. Her children were Benjamin, John T., and Samuel Morse, all active merchants in Boston; and by Mr. Rollins.

*William Rollins Tappan graduated at Harvard College, 1867, studied law in Boston for a short period, and then went to Europe for completing his studies. After a residence of about two years abroad he entered the School of Mines at Freiburg, Saxony, in 1873. He had been there but a short time, ardently devoting himself to study, when he was suddenly stricken down by paralysis, and died Oct. 25, 1873, at 27. His stay at Freiburg had been very brief, and he had made but few intimate acquaintances; but by those who knew him he was much beloved, and he had raised high hopes of usefulness as a man of science. The friendly attention paid to him by his fellow-students during his illness, and at his decease, will long be remembered by his immediate family friends. Kind, though not kindred hands decked his casket with flowers; a guard of honor from the University watched by it night and day; and, on the evening of the Reformation Festival, an imposing cortege, comprising the professors, the students in costume bearing torches, and the citizens, amid the tolling of all the bells of Freiburg, and to the solemn music of a funeral march, escorted his remains to the railway, whence they were borne to their distant resting place at Mt. Auburn.

Children.

i. JULIA E., b. Feb. 24, 1829; md. at Molineś, Illinois, where she was engaged in teaching, Apr. 1, 1853, Joseph B. Holt, a son of Rev. Fifield Holt, formerly pastor of the Congregational Church of Bloomfield, Me., who married a daughter of Judge Burt, of Vermont. Joseph B. and his wife rem. with their brother, George W. Rollins, the same Spring, to Minnesota, and located on the West bank of the Mississippi, opposite the town of Anoka—a township which at that time boasted of one log house and an old French fort, which stood on a slight eminence at the mouth of Rum River. With the exception of Indians, their nearest neighbors on the West side lived twelve miles below (a French settlement), and one hundred miles above, at Sauk Rapids. Their other neighbors were an encampment of about 2000 Winnebago Indians; these, however, were removed the next year to a new reservation. Small bands of Sioux and Chippewas still traversed the country in search of game or each other; and were frequent callers, either to obtain food or to purchase something at the store which Mr. Holt had established. Here, for a time, they were subject to all the discomforts of pioneer life; but in a short time other settlers began to arrive, and the land for miles around them was soon taken up. Among the earliest were a Mr. Colburn and wife from Newburyport, and Mr. Messer and his son, Alfred, from Illinois. During the first Summer, Mrs. Holt, who had been expert in the management of a boat while living on the Sandy River in Maine, was the principal ferry-woman, taking people across the Mississippi in a birch “dug-out.” In 1860, for the sake of a more favorable climate, Mr. H. having been an invalid for some years, they removed to the table lands of Middle Tennessee. They had hardly established themselves on their new farm at Pomona, when the Rebellion commenced, and they were presented with the disagreeable alternative—to take the oath of allegiance to the Southern Confederacy, leave, or hang. Leaving the remains of their second child, Eddie, who died soon after their arrival, and all their household furniture and library in the hands of Morgan’s rebels, they returned to Minnesota, arriving in Minneapolis about the 1st of August, 1861. Here Mrs. Holt, who had been a teacher from the time she was sixteen years of age, found immediate employment in one of the Public Schools, while her husband enlisted, Nov. 11, 1861, in the 1st Minnesota Reg’t of Infantry then forming. He followed the fortunes of that Regiment till the Autumn of 1862, being in the engagements at Bolivar Heights, at the siege of Yorktown, and in the seven days before Richmond. Here he was disabled by sunstroke and other illness, and was discharged at the Hospital at Washington, 1862. He then returned to Maine, where, after a short time, Mrs. Holt, relinquishing her school, rejoined him. They remained at the old home till a few weeks after the battle of Gettysburg, when they went to Washington to assist in taking care of and teaching the “contrabands” who were then pouring into the capital, and to “Massa Linkum,” for protection. Mr. Holt was employed at Camp Barker, under the direction of the Sanitary Commission, as Hospital Visitor at the Hospitals in and about Washington, Alexandria, Fairfax and Baltimore, remaining till the work was over, nearly three years, Mrs. Holt meanwhile teaching in the colored schools. Jan. 28, 1868, he was appointed agent of the Freedmen’s Bureau at Jackson, Mississippi, remaining till the Bureau closed its work in that section, and Mrs. Holt accompanied him as a teacher there. In 1873 he was appointed Government Farmer for the Lac Court d'Oreilles' band of Lake Superior Indians in Minnesota, where Mrs. Holt is employed as teacher. The duties of Mr. Holt's position are somewhat multifarious, as may be supposed,—the charge of the blacksmithing, carpentering, furnishing supplies and keeping the accounts of each and all, and instructing in farming; but he has the satisfaction of seeing the Indians improving in the modes of civilized life, and the school flourishing,—the red men not being, however, as docile and teachable as the black race, and their habits widely different. Mr. and Mrs. Holt had three children: (1) Emily Burt, b. Nov. 26, 1854. (2) Edmund Augustus, b. Aug. 6, 1856; died in Tennessee, 1860. (3) Alice Jose- phine, b. Nov. 29, 1857; d. at Minneapolis, Oct. 26, 1860.

ii. Cyril A., b. June 11, 1831; went to Wisconsin, 1853; res. at St. Anthony and in Northern Wisconsin two years, and at Little Falls one year; md. Mar., 1857, Mary L. Clark, and res. at St. Anthony's till her death, Sept., 1869; md. Sept., 1870, Mary E. McKinstry, of New York; rem. to Oak Lake, Becker Co., on the line of the Northern Pacific R. R., May, 1871, where he now resides. He spent one season in Tennessee and Mississippi, and was in the South at the time of Pres. Lincoln's first election; but finding that section rather hostile to Northern men, he sought again the colder but more genial North; spent two seasons in the pursuit of his business (builder), in the employ of the U. S. Government on the Indian Reservation at White Earth, and one season on the Reservation at Red Lake. They have two children: (1) Sarah Emma, b. Mar. 7, 1858. (2) Willard A., b. Dec. 8, 1859.

iii. Annette F., b. Mar. 10, 1833; md. J. Warren Chapman, Nov. 3, 1852; res. at New Sharon. Mr. Chapman was a Union volunteer in Co. H, 20th Maine Reg't. They were at this time at Fort Fairfield, Aroostook Co., Me. Mrs. Chapman volunteered her services in the hospitals at Washington, but they were declined, greatly to her regret. They have two children: (1) Victor E., born on the day of Pres. Lincoln's first election. (2) Frances Alberta, b. Apr. 8, 1866. It is to Mrs. Chapman that the compiler of this volume is indebted for unwearying and patient labor in tracing out the history of the New Sharon families.

iv. George Winfield, b. Nov. 29, 1835; went to Minnesota, 1853, and thence, with his sister Julia and Mr. Holt, to Tennessee. Here he had charge of an estate belonging to an eastern gentleman. When the Rebellion commenced he did not like to desert his post, and remained some weeks after his brother-in-law left; but he was finally obliged to flee, and, in company with two other loyalists of his acquaintance, escaped on horseback, and, after some detentions and narrow escapes, succeeded in reaching the free soil of Cincinnati. Here he immediately enlisted in the 4th Ohio Cavalry, and with the exception of time spent as an Orderly at Gen. Mitchell’s headquarters, was in the skirmishes and scouting of that regiment till he fell at Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863.

v. SUSAN E., b. Feb. 5, 1840; md. Richard S. Caswell, of Parkman, Me., Sept. 18, 1859. Mr. Caswell was also a Union soldier, serving in several hard fought battles, in the 6th Me. Battery of Light Artillery. Susan died at Fort Fairfield, Me., and Mr. Caswell md. Sophia Ellis. Susan had two children: (1) Frank, who died in childhood. (2) Emery. Mr. and Mrs. Caswell res. Ft. Fairfield.

vi. ALBERT G., b. Aug. 26, 1843; was a Union volunteer in Co. G, 17th Me. Infantry, and was killed at the battle of Gettysburg, July 2, 1863.

vii. LOUIS P., b. Sept. 2, 1846; was res. 1872 in Wakefield, Mass.; employed in the iron foundry at that place.

ix. FRANK H., b. May 22, 1852; res. Parkman, Me.

(249.) SETH⁶ (James⁵, Benjamin⁴, John³, Thomas², James¹), res. New Sharon; md. Hannah Yeaton, of New Sharon, sister of Emily, who married his brother Joshua. They removed to Parkman, Me. Seth was a mariner in his early days. In the spring of 1864 he went to the gold fields of Australia, and was absent about three years. On his passage to Australia, his early training, as well as that of some of his fellow-passengers, was of much use. The crew of the ship mutinied, and were placed in irons, while the passengers navigated the ship precisely as well without them, and, no doubt, to the astonishment of the mutineers. This is only one of many illustrations of the capacity of the genuine Yankee for meeting emergencies, a capacity well exemplified in many instances in our recent war.

(272.)  Daniel B. 6 (John 5, Samuel 4, John 3, Thomas 2, James 1), res. China, Me., afterwards at Lynn, Mass.; married Atalanta Augusta Berry, of Salem, Mass., Apr. 11, 1840; rem. to Marion Co., Iowa, thence to Indianola, 1859, where he remained till the summer of 1862; from 1862 to 1866, res. Des Moines, whence, after the return of his sons from the war, he removed to Onawa, on the Missouri River, where he engaged in the lumber business. Mr. Rollins died Apr. 27, 1867. The immediate cause of his death, together with his eldest son, is veiled in uncertainty. He, with his two oldest sons, had taken a contract to clear off 80 acres of timber land on the river. The logs were converted into lumber at a mill erected by them for the purpose, and the cordwood hauled to the bank, to be sold to steamboats. About the 20th of April, the ice commenced breaking up, and for three days and nights following the river overflowed its banks, causing one of those terrible floods so common to the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, and sweeping through the bottoms with irresistible fury. During this time the family and eight hands were confined to the house, the river having risen so suddenly as to cut off their retreat. Three floors were successively built to keep them above water, but as the river still continued to rise, a canoe was made from a log, in which they were all removed to a small strip of dry land, the only piece for miles around them. As the flood subsided, the boats commenced coming up the river from St. Louis. All wanted wood, but as Mr. Rollins was not acquainted with the river at this point, he could not advise them to come in. He resolved at last to make an examination along the banks of the stream to find safe landing places for the boats. For this purpose he started, with his eldest son, on the 27th of April, along the shore of the turbulent stream, in a small canoe. About three o'clock, a.m., they started, and the rest of the party went back, after assisting in launching the canoe, to their work of cleaning the house, preparatory to re-occupying it.

When the family assembled for supper, Mr. Rollins did not appear, and much anxiety was felt on their account. Search commenced at once up and down the river, but nothing could be seen or heard of the missing ones. The night was quite dark, and the search along the river bank where the trees were still falling was very dangerous. Fires were kept up all night, and guns fired at intervals, but no response was made. The next morning a party of five, headed by the oldest remaining son, went down the river for ten miles, but no trace could be found. About six weeks later the canoe was found half buried in mud and sand, about two miles below the spot from which they started on that fatal morning.

Children.

i. Daniel Allen, b. Sept. 27, 1842; enlisted in Co. K, 17th Iowa Volunteers, Apr. 1, 1862, and with his brother, Rhenault, who enlisted at the same time in the same Co., participated in the following battles, viz.: Corinth, May 29; Iuka, Miss., Sept. 9; Corinth, Miss., Oct. 3 and 4; Thompson’s Hill, Miss., May 11, 1863; Raymond, May 13; Jackson, May 14; Tilton, Ga., Oct. 13, 1865. They served for more than three years, being in Andersonville three months after their term of service had expired. They were twice made prisoners—once at Jackson, Miss., May 14, 1863, and again at Tilton, Ga., Oct. 13, 1865, by Hood, on his raid into Tennessee. During their captivity they were in several rebel prisons in the South including the Andersonville hell, where they endured great privations and hardships until near the close of the war in 1865, when they made their escape from Augusta, Ga., and after two weeks of almost incredible hardships in the swamps, beset by rebel scouts and bushwhackers, they arrived at Charleston, S. C. Here they were obliged to remain two weeks to recruit before joining their regiment, then on its way to Washington to join in the Grand Review at the close of the war.

(329.) George B. (George, John, Ichabod, Jeremiah, Ichabod, James), res. New York City, and was for a long period engaged in commercial pursuits, being an associate in the mercantile house of "Krinitz, Rollins & Alborn," importers of French and German goods. He retired from active business about 1858, spent some time in the West, but returned to New York in 1871. He belongs to a family which has furnished many members to the mercantile marine, several of whom were successful shipmasters.

While residing in New York, his own predilection for nautical affairs was manifested by voyaging with his father for two years, and in 1823 by the organization of an amateur rowing club called the "Wave," his two brothers being associated with him. This club, which was never beaten, became so popular that in a short time twenty other clubs were formed, and organized an Association, of which Mr. Rollins was President for many years. The success of this club was owing largely to the peculiar model of their boat, which Mr R. originated and improved from time to time till it culminated in the model of the “Betty Bliss.”

This model was so peculiar that when the original was taken to some of the most experienced builders, they declined constructing, saying that they had spent too many years in gaining their reputation to injure it by building such a boat. It was accordingly built by another firm, the Brothers Crolius. While upon the stocks she was not free from the criticisms of nautical men, and was the theme for friendly banter. Commodore J. C. Stevens frequently amused himself with jocose remarks about her, and declared that “On going round the Horn, she would, like a whale, go under, and come up once in three days to blow.” Com. C. Vanderbilt, a neighbor of Mr. Rollins, observed one day, “Why, Rollins, I will put two masts into this steamer (the Sylph), and, sailing her stern foremost, can beat you. The result however, was satisfactory, for it was no unusual thing for the Betty to make better time than had ever been recorded of a sailing vessel. Com. Stevens became thoroughly satisfied that the new bow was an improvement, and it is understood that it has since been largely adopted by steamers and sailing vessels.

The model was subsequently solicited by the New York Yacht Club. This Association originated in 1843, was organized in 1844, and incorporated 1865. Mr. Rollins was its first Corresponding Secretary, and for several years an active member. His membership ceased on his removal to the West, but on his return he was elected an honorary member, being the only civilian on their roll.

He married Ann Maria, daughter of Marmaduke and Elizabeth Moore, of Philadelphia. His family consists of three daughters and three sons. The eldest son, George M., is connected with the banking house of Henry L. Clews & Co.; Frank Hale is manager of the bullion department of Messrs. Kountz Bros.; Wentworth is in the office of the bullion smelting, refining and assay department of the Montgomery Works.

Mr. Rollins has been a very active politician, and was for a long time Chairman of the Republican State Committee of N. H.; and the growth and success of the Republican party in that State are unquestionably owing, in no inconsiderable degree, to his indefatigable zeal and unflagging energy. So completely had he canvassed the State prior to the crowning effort of the Republicans (the election of Gen. Grant to the Presidency), that his estimate of the vote, a month before election, varied but a trifle from the final actual count. He married Ellen E. West, of Concord, Feb. 13, 1849, and has (344.) John F.² (Daniel⁶, James⁵, Ichabod⁴, Jeremiah³, Ichabod², James¹), res. Concord; was in business with his brother Edward; now res. Fort George Island, Florida. The following, of his island home, is from the Belfast, Me., Journal, presumed to be from the pen of ex-Gov. Crosby, of Maine:

Jacksonville, Jan. 31.

Fort George Island lies near the mouth of the St. John, the southeasterly portion constituting a part of its northerly bank. It contains about eleven hundred acres of arable land. The title to it is traced back to a grant made by the Spanish Crown. After the union of Florida to the United States that grant was confirmed by Congress; a former substratum of title cannot well be found.
The present proprietor of the Island, John F. Rollins, Esq., is a native of New Hampshire. About four years ago he came south in search of health, and deriving essential benefit from the change of climate, he decided to establish his residence in this state. A fortunate combination of circumstances attracted his attention to this island, and he became its owner. He was not, like Ponce de Leon, seeking the fabled Fountain of Youth, but he has found on his beautiful island what is practically far better, the source of health. That it may prove a never failing one to him, his charming lady and interesting children, is the ardent wish of all who have the good fortune to be the recipients of their generous hospitality.

The dwelling house occupied by him is located about ten rods from Fort George Inlet, a broad sheet of water, navigable by steamers of light draught. Steamers on the inside passage, as it is called, to Savannah, formerly went by this route. A bathing house on the bank furnishes all facilities for salt water bathing. The forest in which the dwelling house is embosomed shields it from the heat of summer and the cold of winter; there is a winter in Florida as elsewhere, be it remembered. The mouth of the Inlet is about two miles northerly from that of the St. John, and like that river it furnishes a highway for the salt breezes from the Atlantic, which come, in the intense heat of summer, with refreshment if not healing on their wings. I have seen no place yet in Florida which is so well adapted for a through-the-year residence. No one has a right to find fault with Mr. R. for appropriating to his own exclusive use this very desirable spot, but he would justly be entitled to the appellation of a public benefactor, would he convert it into a place of resort for invalids. A plunge into the salt water bath—a sail or row on the river—a ride or stroll through the avenues which intersect each other in every direction—what a blessing would each and all be to the poor invalid, panting even while inhaling this deliciously soft and balmy air!

In the enumeration of the privileges attached to the island I must not omit the extensive oyster beds near at hand, the fish that swim in its waters, nor the birds, squirrels of various kinds, coons and possums that swarm in its groves. The kindly disposition of the proprietor prohibits the destruction of the birds and squirrels; the coons and possums are turned over to the tender mercies of dogs, darkeys and sportsmen.

The aggregate length of the drives on the island is fifteen miles. The approach to the house in one direction is through Palmetto avenue, bordered by palmettos planted twenty feet apart. There is a story of this avenue to the effect that some forty years ago the overseer of the plantation, in the absence of the proprietor, finding that the slaves were out of work, found employment for them in planting these palmettos. The proprietor, who was a devotee of mammon rather than of nature, finding on his return what had been done in his absence, discharged his overseer forthwith. Poor planter! all the works of his hands have long since passed from the face of the earth, but this work of his humble subordinate still lives to adorn and beautify it.

Another approach, in another direction, is through Cedar avenue, lined on both sides by stately red cedars, the Spanish moss drooping like gray locks from their long, gnarled branches. Then there is Magnolia avenue, with its long stretches of those beautiful trees, some of them two feet in diameter; Holley avenue, with its clusters of blood-red berries; Moss avenue, with its lichens fine in texture as the finest lace-work; Briar-wood avenue, redolent of pipes. But I have not time or space to go through on paper the avenues through which I strolled or drove. I must not forget "Gerty’s Glen"—sweet little Gerty—with its tangled, luxuriant masses of semi-tropical vegetation—nor "the Jungle," out of which the tiger did not leap, although it seemed as if he might at any moment.

Under a former proprietor cotton was extensively cultivated on the Island, said to have been of the same character and quality as the famed Sea-Island cotton. He was the owner of a hundred and fifty slaves—the greater portion imported by himself, one of whom was an African princess, and who became the sharer of his bed and board. She is reputed to have been a woman of remarkable energy of character. In the absence of her husband she reigned supreme. It was her daily custom to have the slaves marshaled before her, and their daily tasks assigned to them. Tradition goes so far as to report that she knew well how to punish as well as to reward, and that she never failed to make a forcibly practical use of that knowledge. I saw the old stocks which were occasionally called into requisition by her Imperial African Highness.
The houses, or quarters as they are called, occupied by the slaves, still remain; some of them now occupied by the employees of the present proprietor—others dilapidated more or less. There are thirty-six of them, built of concrete—manufactured coquina—sand, lime and oyster shells; the walls are thick, stand the weather, and are in every particular comfortable; full as much so as many a house I have seen at the North in which white men wintered. I went into one of them, was introduced in due form to Dinah, and failed to discover any reason why the little Cezars and Catos might not live and thrive therein; everything about the premises was nice and clean. The quarters are built in a semi-circular form; the dimensions of each house about twenty-four by sixteen feet.

All of the employees of the present proprietor are colored; he tried the experiment of Swedes, but it was a failure. The same experiment is in progress up the river; I do not think it will be a success. I believe that the only farm labor that can be successfully employed here is that of the colored race. Each one of the employees of Mr. R. is furnished with a house, free of rent, as much ground as he chooses to cultivate for a garden, four pounds of pork, twelve of hominy, and a pint of salt, per week; or their equivalent in value in any other food they may prefer; “hog and hominy,” however, has the preference, generally. They pay but little attention to their garden spots. I do not know what wages Mr. R. pays, but I learn that twelve dollars per month is the usual rate.

The island was once the property of the McIntosh family; a name identified with the earliest Indian warfare in this region. There are two tombs, deep in the forest, reputed to be those of a McIntosh and his wife, covered with a dense, green mantle of lichens. A report, circulated many years ago, that gems and jewels were buried with the bodies, tempted some sacrilegious hand to violate the places of their last rest; but they are guarded, in their dilapidated condition, with a religious care by the present proprietor. To men, who, like myself, have in them the element of old mortality, “such graves are pilgrim shrines.”

Mount Cornelia, on this island, is the highest point of land on the coast south of Staten Island. There is an old fortification, or earthwork, not far from the dwelling house, origin unknown; very probably the one which gave to the island its name. Some of those shell mounds that are found in other parts of the State are found here; some of them fifty feet in height. There are various theories as to their origin. The better opinion is that they are the work of the aborigines. I will not enter on the discussion of a question that has puzzled the antiquarians and more geologically learned heads than mine for many years. One fact at least is universally conceded, and that is, that whatever the origin, it must be found far back in the annals of the past.

Vegetation on the island is luxuriant; garden vegetables sowed in December are now (Jan. 31) some three inches high. Peach and plum-trees in blossom. Mr. R. is entering largely into the cultivation of grapes; he already grows oranges and lemons. He proposes to make the cultivation of the sugar cane a specialty, for which the soil is peculiarly adapted.

(359.) Rev. David Bean7 (Richard6, David5, David4, Moses3, Thomas2, James1), res. Ogden, N. Y.; was for several years a missionary at Tonawanda, N. Y., among the Seneca Indians. He left there in Oct., 1834, and returned to Ogden, where he was licensed to preach, and supplied the pulpit of the Baptist Church there part of the time till May following, when he went to Michigan. In Oct., 1835, he was appointed by the Baptist Board of Missions a missionary to the Creek Indians in Arkansas, near Fort Gibson, having been previously ordained at Cincinnati. He labored earnestly and faithfully among the Creeks till Oct., 1838, when his health became so shattered from the unhealthiness of the climate, that he was compelled to resign, and left Shawanoe, on the opening of Spring, for the North. It was too late, however, to recover his natural vigor, and he died at Commerce, Michigan, May 12, 1839. From correspondence with Miss Teressa Johnson, of Homer, N. Y., who was associated with Mr. Rollin in the Tonawanda Mission, and from her papers, the use of which she kindly placed at my disposal, I make the following extracts:

"This mission was commenced in 1821 or 1822. Mr. Rollin taught a school of Indian children there, one year before his marriage. The first mission-house was in an unhealthy location, and, during their first Summer, both Mr. and Mrs. R. suffered severely for several months from fever and ague; the more, as he had no salary, and the mission was poorly supported. Afterward the N. Y. Baptist Convention purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty acres, a few miles distant, had suitable buildings erected, and there, for five years, Mr. Rollin labored to clear and cultivate it, without promise of fee or reward." In 1841, Miss Johnson, who was again engaged there, thus describes the place: "The farm is the N. E. corner lot of Erie Co., one mile West of Tonawanda Creek. It contains one hundred and twenty acres, of which sixty or seventy are improved. The house is large and pleasantly situated, close to the Eastern line of the farm, surrounded on all sides by giant oaks, intermingled with trees of smaller growth and many beautiful flowering shrubs, such as the box and honeysuckle, and a great variety of plants both useful and ornamental."

In the Winter of 1840, the school numbered sixty-seven native children. There were then twelve whites in the mission family, and much interest was manifested by the Chiefs Poodry, James Williams, and Jesse Spring, in favor of religion, education and temperance. Miss Johnson, in speaking of the scholars, remarks: "There are some very good scholars in the school. Ely Stone (now so well known to the public as Lieut.-Col. Ely Parker, a member of Gen. Grant's staff during the Rebellion, and one of his most trusted advisers), is the best. He is now about fifteen; has attended school here ever since he was old enough. He is now quite useful as an interpreter, when there is any business to be done between the whites and the Indians. All who are acquainted with him place the most implicit confidence in Ely's word, and the faithfulness of his interpretations, as far as he is capable, and he is the most capable of any of the tribe who now reside on this reservation. He has never interpreted preaching until two Sabbaths since. He is quite diffident, and considerable persuasion was needed to induce him to interpret. It is much more difficult to interpret preaching than any thing else, on account of the barrenness of the Indian language in regard to religious expressions. Spencer Cone (the brother of Ely), who received the rudiments of his education here, now (1841) fills the important situation of United States interpreter at Washington."

The following notice of Mr. Rollin appeared in the N. Y. Baptist Register, Utica, N. Y., May, 27, 1840, written also by Miss Johnson: "My acquaintance with Mr. Rollin commenced in the Autumn of 1832. He was then about twenty-eight years old, but his mind and judgment seemed mature beyond his years. His natural abilities were good, and he had obtained a respectable English education. He was naturally of a cheerful and social disposition, but his cheerfulness seldom, if ever, approached to levity. He was gentlemanly in his deportment, exhibiting that genuine Christian politeness which springs from love and good-will to all. His conversation was ever interesting and instructive, and I think he possessed a happier faculty than any person I ever knew of adapting his communications to the capacity of those he was instructing, either in the pulpit, the Sabbath school, or in his daily intercourse with the Indian children.

His religion was not periodical—it was a fixed, unwavering principle, which governed him in his intercourse with all, teaching him to do to others as he wished them to do to him; and he was no doubt deeply imbued with a large portion of the same spirit which guided and cheered the pious Brainerd in his arduous and self-denying labors.

Attending to the various wants of the family (which usually numbered between thirty and forty), clearing and cultivating a new farm, and teaching the Indian boys to work, consumed so great a share of Br. Rollin’s time that I used to wonder how he could preach at all; and often thought, while hearing him, that nothing short of the direct influence and assistance of the Holy Spirit could enable him to preach as he did.

The strange appearance of the congregation, consisting almost entirely of natives, dressed in the native costume, together with the interpretation of the sermon, sentence by sentence, for two or three sabbaths prevented me from deriving much benefit from the preaching; but after becoming a little familiarized with the strange sights, and the sounds of an unknown language, I was enabled to hear to advantage and treasure up in my memory a larger portion of his sermons than of any others which I ever heard. Mr. Rollin’s manner in the pulpit and his voice were very good; he spoke loud enough to be easily heard, but not so loud as to injure his lungs or deafen his hearers; he could combine and arrange his ideas with sufficiently systematic order to make them profitable to his hearers, and his learning was good enough to enable him to express them with ease and propriety, in strong and forcible, yet very simple language.

He was ‘Grave, sincere,

In doctrine, uncorrupt; in language plain;
And plain in manner; decent, solemn, chaste;
And natural in gesture; much impressed
Himself, as conscious of his awful charge,
And anxious, mainly that the flock he fed
Might feel it, too. Affectionate in look,
And tender in address, as well became
A messenger of grace to guilty man.
His heart was warm;
His hands were pure; his doctrine and his life
Coincident.’

—Cowper.

Through life he was a warm friend of the Indians, and a zealous supporter of their rights. For them he wept and prayed, and labored eleven or twelve years, with untiring patience and assiduity, to instruct them in the great and all important truths of Christianity, and to impart the various kinds of knowledge necessary to their becoming a civilized people.”

Mr. Pratt, who was associated with him in the Shawanoe Mission, in Arkansas, says: “He was a very pious, godly man; a fearless and faithful minister of Jesus Christ; strong in faith, and in seasons of darkness and discouragement, of which every missionary knows more or less, he was often as a special messenger to strengthen and encourage our drooping spirits. In his intercourse with the Indians he was apt to teach, and his labors were blessed in the improvement of Indian character, and the conversion of many.”

He married Sarepta Reed, of Ogden, N. Y., who was a devoted and efficient helper in his Indian missions, and who, after his death, married Rev. Samuel Morse, of Michigan.

Stone, of Boston, thus speaks of him in describing the manner of his death: "The battle in which Charles fell occurred at Little Creek, some 75 miles from Newbern. The enemy were posted across the road of advance in a wood and on a bluff. Below the bluff, and crossing the road, ran sluggishly the creek that was to be forded before the column of our forces could move on. Our artillery shelled the woods, and under cover of this fire, companies C and E were ordered to advance across the creek and "feel" the Rebels. They went gallantly forward, and, when in the water up to their middle, received the enemy's fire from the bluff above them. Three of our men fell: Charles, of Co. C, one of Co. E, and one of the marines. Two other companies advanced on the right and left, and entered the ford; the bluff was carried and the Rebels taken prisoners. Charles was shot through the head, and died instantly. The boys all loved him and speak of him tenderly and affectionately." His captain, J. H. Lombard, says: "He was a quiet, steady lad, always ready and willing to do anything required of him. He was remarked by my Lieutenants, and myself, and the Sergeants of the company, as very prompt and apt at drill, and his whole course of conduct was satisfactory and gratifying.

(382.) Rev. John A. (Eliphalet, Eliphalet, Joseph, Joseph, Thomas, James), was, in the early part of his life, an instructor, and was for many years afterwards known quite extensively in New Hampshire and elsewhere as an independent preacher. When the last war with England occurred, he shipped in the privateer, "Portsmouth," of Portsmouth, under Capt. Thomas Shaw, for three months, and served during two cruises off the Grand Banks and the coast of Newfoundland. Subsequently he gave up his school to another teacher, and responded to the

(443.) John Rodman (John⁶, John⁶, Eliphalet⁴, John⁴, Thomas⁴, James⁴), pursued his academical studies at Groveland Academy, under Rev. Alonzo Chapin; at the Newburyport and Woburn Academies, under Alfred W. Pike; and three years under the late Simeon Putnam, at North Andover; graduated at Dartmouth College, 1836, and received the degree of M. A. at the same institution, 1839; was employed as assistant to Nehemiah Cleaveland, Esq., at Dummer Academy, Byfield, Mass., for more than a year, at the end of which time the trustees, entertaining certain Utopian notions, and endeavoring to carry them into effect, transcended their powers, by imposing upon the scholars from that town, a rate of tuition not contemplated in Gov. Dummer's will. To this the citizens of Byfield would not submit, and engaged Mr. Rollins to open an opposition school. This was continued successfully for six months, materially reducing the numbers at the academy, and drawing down the censure of the press and the public upon the trustees, until the rights of the Byfield people were restored. They proposed, nevertheless, to sustain the new school, but as their objects had been accomplished, Mr. R. preferred not to remain, and went to Newburyport, where he opened a private school, and remained three years as successor to his former instructor, the late Alfred W. Pike. In 1841 he removed to Lunenburg, Worcester Co., and opened a boarding school, which continued in successful operation for eight years, when, on account of health, by the advice of physicians, he was compelled to relinquish altogether the business of teaching; his chosen profession, and seek more active employment. While at Lunenburg he was (1845) unanimously elected Town Clerk, and was re-elected each successive year until he left, and served a part of this period on the School Committee.

While in charge of the Town Records, finding the earlier volumes in very bad condition, and by constant use rapidly being worn and becoming obliterated, he was authorized by the Town to make a re-script of the same. This was done, the work being comprised in two large folios, and the volume containing the births, marriages and deaths was arranged alphabetically, so that any records of this kind may now be found in a few moments, which formerly required hours of search. This renewal of records was followed by one or two other towns in the vicinity, and soon after by the law of 1851, providing for the preservation and transcription of other records, when necessary, throughout the State.

From 1849 to 1853 Mr. R. was in the employ of the Fitchburg R. R. Co., at Boston, and in January, 1853, removed to Lawrence and was eleven years book keeper and paymaster of the Essex Company.
In the fall of 1856 he was elected Mayor of the City, and re-elected in the fall of 1857. He served also on the School Committee of Lawrence, 1854, '61, '64, and in January, 1864, was elected Superintendent of Schools; he served also in the Board of Aldermen, in 1869.

In the spring of 1862 he opened a recruiting office for the purpose of raising troops, and had enlisted about fifty men for three years' service, when unforeseen circumstances prevented his further efforts in this direction, and these men joined the 40th and 41st regiments. Later, on the call for more men, for nine months' service, he raised a company for the new Essex County regiment then forming, and went into camp at Wenham. This regiment was known as the 48th; it was nearly full, when the demand for troops being urgent, two companies, Capt. Colby's and Capt. Rollins', were taken from this regiment and ordered to report at Lakeville, to complete the old 4th regiment, Rollins' Co. being Co. H; the remaining companies were ordered to Readville, united with part of another regiment there and sent to the front, retaining their old designation, the 48th.

The Fourth Reg't joined Gen. Banks' army in Louisiana, and was at first assigned to Gen. Emory's Division, Ingraham's Brigade, and rendered important service in the feint upon Port Hudson, in March, 1863, when Farragut passed the batteries; then retired to Baton Rouge and proceeded to New Orleans and to Brashear City, the depot of supplies for the army of the South-west, where it was stationed, in company with the 16th N. H., to guard that post, and support the batteries there; was ordered thence to join the army at the battle of Bisland, remaining till the enemy had been routed from that point, and then returned to Brashear. About the last of May they were again ordered to New Orleans, and thence to Port Hudson, to participate in the final investment of that stronghold. Here they took part during the remainder of the siege, in the trenches and rifle pits, in building and supporting batteries, and were engaged in the assault on the 14th of June, attached to Ferris' brigade, Paine's division. In this assault the division suffered a loss of 800 men; the regiment, which at this time could muster but 403 men fit for duty, lost nine killed and fifty-nine wounded; Co. H, mustering fifty men, had eight wounded but none killed. Their brigade, which was in the reserve line, was not as much exposed, but they were under fire all day.

Prior to leaving for Port Hudson the last time, Co. H had been detached and ordered to Fort Chéne. This was a small fortification at the junction of two bayous, and commanded one of the approaches to New Orleans from Atchafalaya Bay. At the time that Forts Philip and Jackson were taken, the rebels had abandoned this smaller work, burned the stockade fence on the land side, destroyed their heavy guns and carried away the lighter ones, leaving nothing but the magazine, which was found in good condition. Fearing that boats might pass up that way from Texas to interfere with the New Orleans and Opelousas R. R., Capt. Rollins was ordered, with his own company, and a company of Indiana Artillery, to transport some heavy guns to this point, mount them and hold the place. This work was just completed when Co. H was relieved, and ordered back to join the regiment, then under orders for Port Hudson.

After this post surrendered, on the 8th July, the regiment constituted part of the garrison, until all the prisoners were paroled and sent off, and then proceeded up the now freed river to Cairo and home. Mr. Rollins was mustered out of the U. S. service, Aug. 28, 1863, having served one year, and his resignation as a member of the State Militia was accepted July, 1864. The service of the Fourth regiment was short but arduous, and it suffered considerably from sickness peculiar to the lowlands of that section, but it received repeated compliments for the cleanliness of its encampments; and for steadiness under fire was commended by the Colonel, and by the Adj.-Gen. of the State in his official report. Their first division commander, Gen. Emory, a West Point officer, testified before a Court of Inquiry at New Orleans,* to their discipline and order, and said that with one exception, it was the best regiment of nine months men in his whole division.

*This Court of Inquiry was upon a matter between Col. Walker, Commander of Post at Brashear City, and Gen. Ulmann, in regard to the employment of negroes, in which Col. Walker was fully sustained.
Mr. Rollins was in all the movements of his regiment, except at Bisland, at which time he was in the hospital with malarial fever.

In July, 1864, he resigned his place in the Essex Company, and started for Colorado as agent of a mining company. While waiting at Chicago for the construction of wagons, and in the preparation of the necessary outfit, an unexpected obstacle presented itself: a general Indian out-break on the Great Plains. This stopped the overland coaches for a short time, and drove all the ranchmen on the route from their stations. Other parties bound to Colorado found themselves in the same dilemma. Having collected his small party at Omaha, Rollins proceeded to the Loup Fork, where he had learned that another company was awaiting his arrival. They united and proceeded westward to Fort Kearney, where they met a third party of traders and emigrants bound in the same direction, but waiting there, as they did not deem it prudent to advance alone. Having now what was considered a sufficiently strong force, all thoroughly armed, they agreed to unite and travel together, Capt. Rollins having the general direction of the expedition.

Mr. Dunstan, of Canada, who had crossed the Plains several times, was appointed wagon master, to select and arrange the camp grounds—a regular detail was made every night for guard, the wagons drawn into corral, and at the more exposed points, the stock all enclosed in the corral thus formed, and all lights and fires avoided after dark. From bad weather and occasional accidents to wagons, there were some detentions, but after forty days on the Plains, the whole company arrived safely in the mountains without molestation.

Among those whom circumstances had thus brought together were Col. Eayr (of Boston parentage), born in the City of Mexico, educated in her military school, and who commanded the Mexican Lancers at the battle of Buena Vista; Maj. J. H. Cannon, of Missouri (one of the staff of the Confederate General Gardiner, the Commandant of Port Hudson), who would not violate his parole—had dismissed his slaves, sold his furniture, and with his wife (a very estimable lady), was proceeding to the mountains; Mr. Smarr, of Missouri, also a paroled prisoner, taken at Pea Ridge, who was also accompanied by his lady, and Mr. Marmaduke, of Missouri, a lawyer and member of the Missouri bar. The other members of the company were from Canada and various parts of the frontier. The union of these parties serves as a happy illustration of the readiness with which persons of conflicting views may cordially unite in presence of a common danger.

The Rebellion had not closed, yet now, on the Plains, Rollins and his late opponent in arms, Cannon, were frequently on guard together, protecting each other’s lives and property. Many a pleasant hour was spent in recounting the incidents of the siege, both within and without the works at Port Hudson. It is, however, but just to the Major to add that he still remained firm in the faith of the justice of his cause, and, no doubt, still adheres to this belief.

Just beyond Fort Kearney the expedition united, and travelled for a short distance, with an unexpected reinforcement—a body of several hundred Pawnee warriors, armed and in their paint, who were bound to the Republican River on their annual hunt, and prepared, if need be, to meet their enemies as well as ours, the Sioux. This to our party was a novel and interesting interview.

After remaining in Colorado a year, Mr. R. returned to Massachusetts, Sept., 1865. The enterprise was unsuccessful, like many other of the swindling operations which about that time drew away from the East many millions of capital.

In the summer of 1866, Mr. R. was temporarily employed during the absence and illness of Mr. Snelling, as assistant in the Clearing House of the Boston Banks, and in Dec. of the same year was appointed Cashier of the Pacific Mills, at Lawrence, where he still remains.

He has been one of the trustees of the Essex Savings Bank since 1855, with the exception of the two years during which he was absent in the army and in Colorado. He was elected a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in 1851, and an Honorary Member of the Wisconsin Historical Society in 1870.
He married Nov. 20, 1844, Sarah Stearns Patterson, daughter of Dea. James and Sarah (Stearns) Patterson, of Lunenburg, formerly of Nashua, N. H. * Mrs. R. is a granddaughter of Hon. Josiah Stearns, of Lunenburg, who was a great grandson of Isaac Sterne, who came to this country with Winthrop in 1630; and on the Patterson side is descended from James Patterson, one of the prisoners taken by Oliver Cromwell at the battle of Dunbar, 1650, and transported to America.

He never recovered from the effects of his wounds, but continued in the service of the government, in various capacities, till near the end of the war. He received an honorable discharge from the army, Oct. 14, 1862. He was made Major by brevet, Dec. 24, 1863; later in the war was placed in command of Camp Berry, at Portland, receiving the honors of Colonel and Brigadier-General. He died of apoplexy at Washington, D. C., Aug. 19, 1868. From 1853 to 1859 he was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Boston; was a man of genial temperament and generous impulses. He married Dec. 13, 1853, Miss M. Caroline Bigelow, of Boston.

H. Legislature, 1860, ’61, ’62, being Speaker of the House the last two years; was appointed Cashier of the Internal Revenue Department at Washington, 1863; promoted to Deputy Commissioner, Feb. 1864, and subsequently Commissioner. The EIGHTH GENERATION.

Duties of these offices were very onerous and responsible, and were performed, it is believed, to the entire acceptance of the government and the people. The collections during his years of service amounted to $1,200,000,000, in one year alone the receipts being $312,000,000. The labors of his last year of service had become so arduous as to render it desirable, on account of health, that he should resign; but it was very evident that an absolute resignation at this time would be surely followed by an unsuitable appointment by his Accidency, Andrew Johnson, and at the earnest solicitation of members of both Houses of Congress, and personal and other friends, he retained the place till Gen. Grant could make an appointment of a gentleman in sympathy with the party in power; when he resigned, 1869.

Mr. Rollins then removed to Philadelphia, having accepted the Vice-Presidency of the National Life Insurance Company, of which he soon became President, remaining connected with this company till 1874, when he resigned.

Assistant-Attorney for the Southern District of N. Y.

(479.) Joseph D.² (John⁶, John⁵, John⁴, Ichabod³, Jeremiah², Ichabod¹, James⁰), married Mary E. Shapleigh, Nov. 24, 1851; settled in Kansas, Mar., 1857; is a builder and contractor. He built the Eldridge House in Lawrence, on the same site where stood the old "Free State Hotel," which was destroyed by the "Border Ruffians;" the same year he went to Lecompton, and while there was appointed one of the Committee to wait upon the bogus legislature and notify them to disperse. He was in Lawrence at the time of the Quantrrell raid, Aug. 27, 1863. His house was entered by the raiders, who, with pistols pointed at his head, demanded his money, watches, etc., fired his house, and left him in the street, minus hat, coat and boots. This was not all; they destroyed besides his dwelling house, his three stores, two other dwelling houses, and his shop, all for the crime of being an industrious Northern man, who dared to be a man, and to utter his honest sentiments on the free soil of a free State.

In the Fall of 1864 he was called out to assist in defending the State against the invasion of Gen. Price, and was appointed Regimental Commissary. In 1867 he was candidate of the Republican party for Representative for his District; 1869, Township Trustee; 1870, County Commissioner of Jefferson County, and Superintendent of Public Buildings, and also superintended the construction of seventeen iron bridges which were built in the county during his term of office.

(480.) Elisha Bacon⁸ (John⁵, John⁶, John⁷, Ichabod⁴, Jeremiah³, Ichabod², James¹), res. Wakefield, N. H., till 1848, when he removed, with parents, to Lebanon, Me. Here he completed his academical education, and at the age of 19 left home for Biddeford, his financial capital at this start in life being two dollars and sixty cents. At Biddeford he engaged to work in a house furnishing and tin ware establishment, at the princely salary of fifty dollars per annum; out of which sum, by a prudence and economy rare then, and unknown now, he paid up all indebtedness incurred while at school. In the Fall of 1853 he went to Boston and engaged in the same business, and while there had the companionship of his brother, George, who had established himself there a few years before. Here he labored patiently for seven years, serving for his future, as faithfully and as long as Jacob served for Rachel. In 1860, the death of his brother and boon companion, George, who fell a victim to smallpox, severed all the ties that bound him to the place, and rendered Boston to him only a place of bitter and regretful memories. He was alone—his mother deceased and his father and only surviving brother in Lawrence, Kansas. He next went to New York and took a place as clerk in the then noted Manhattan Hotel, and remained there nearly a year, during which time he became a member of the celebrated 7th Regiment N. G. S. N. Y., and accompanied them in their campaign to Baltimore and Washington, in 1861. On their return he was tendered a Captain's commission in the 9th Regiment (Hawkins' Zouaves), but fate was kind to him, for while this matter was under consideration he became acquainted with Miss Addie D. Roffee, of Auburn, N. Y., who, in the Fall of 1861, became his wife. About this time he was appointed Agent of the Liverpool and London Insurance Company, 168 Broadway, in which agency he continued with marked success until the Spring of 1871. During this time he was instrumental in organizing several oil and gold and silver mining companies, holding in them the position of President or Secretary and Treasurer. But unlike many to whom such trusts were confided, in that period of illimitable speculation, he refused to betray his friends, and surrendered his trusts without losing their confidence.

In the Spring of 1867 he was made U. S. Revenue Inspector for New York and Brooklyn, which office he held till the Spring of 1869, when in consequence of the ability and fidelity he had exhibited in the discharge of his duties and his knowledge of the Revenue Laws, to which he had devoted much attention, he received the appointment of Assessor of Incomes for the County of New York; and during his incumbency of this position he was several times the recipient of complimentary acknowledgement from the Department for valuable services to the Government.

In January, 1872, he was appointed manager of the N. Y. Department of the National Life Insurance Company of U. S., where he remained till January, 1874, receiving on his departure, flattering testimonials from the Officers of the Company, and accepted a more responsible position in the Knickerbocker Insurance Company of New York, of which Company he is now a Director and Vice-President. Mr. Rollins and his wife have been residents of Brooklyn since 1862, where, among the charitable societies and institutions, their names are as familiar as household words. They have one daughter:

A WONDERFUL BILLIARD MATCH.

The Ashes of Thirty-Two Hours in Colorado Territory—How Mr. John Quincy Adams Rollins made $11,000, and how Mr. Charles A. Cook lost the money.

BOULDER City, Colorado, June 10, 1873.—To-day I met Mr. John Quincy Adams Rollins. He was trotting past Mitchell’s coal mine on his way to Denver. Mr. Rollins is a tall, broad gentleman, with pleasing face and manners, and iron-gray hair. He looks like a son of toil. He was dressed in ministerial black, and wore a white shirt, with common china buttons in the place of studs. Mr. Rollins is pretty well off. He sold a gold mine once for $250,000, and has succeeded in keeping the money. He is celebrated throughout the Territory as the man who made $11,000 at a game of billiards.

HOW HE MADE IT.

In 1866 Mr. Rollins turned up in Denver. That city was filled with men who won fortunes at various pursuits one day and lost them the next. About two o’clock in the afternoon Mr. Rollins dropped into a billiard room over Brandlinger’s cigar store, at the intersection of Blake and F streets. The room was filled with amateurs and professionals. Among the former was Mr. Charles A. Cook, at that time a banker, and since then, strange to say, one of the wealthiest men in the Territory. Cook and Rollins entered into conversation. After exhausting the subjects of real estate and mining, the talk ran upon billiards. Cook appeared to have considerable confidence in his own skill, and laughed at Rollins when the latter said that he could beat him. This excited Rollins’s indignation, and he finally asserted that he could give Cook twenty points in a hundred, and lay him out. Cook said that he couldn’t do it for $400 a game, and Rollins thought that he could. So a match was then and there arranged, playing to begin immediately. Rollins was to give Cook twenty points in a game of a hundred. The stakes were to be $400 a side, and the games were to follow each other until one of the parties was exhausted. The man who squealed first, was to forfeit $1000. The men agreed to settle all disputes among themselves, and thus avoid the necessity for a referee or umpire. They kept the run of the games by chalking them upon the floor. The match was played on a carom table.

THE FIRST NINE HOURS.

All the preliminaries having been arranged, both gentlemen drew off their coats and selected their cues. They began playing at 3 p. m. Rollins took the lead from the start. Cook seemed to be having unusually bad luck. The balls broke horribly, and unfortunate kisses robbed him of many a carom. But he showed remarkable coolness. His misfortunes did not hale him for an instant. Every shot was made with a firmness and deliberation that deserved success. Darkness came on. Lamps and cigars were lighted, and the game continued. A rumor of what was going on spread over the city, and the saloon was crowded with spectators. Everybody examined the marks on the floor. There was a perfect nest of tallies for Rollins, and but few chalks for his antagonist. Nine and ten o'clock passed, and still they were at it. The money was steadily oozing from Cook's pocket into that of Rollins. The lookers-on watched the game with interest, and the lights danced within their figured shades, bringing into clear view the eager countenances of the players.

THE STRUGGLE IN THE MORNING.

At midnight the spell was broken. Rollins showed signs of fatigue, and Cook began to win. So elated was the latter that he proposed to raise the stakes from $400 to $800 a side. Rollins assented. The interest in the game was redoubled. The room was packed, and scores of persons were glued together about the doors. Cook continued to win until an hour before daylight, when Rollins got his second wind. The wheel of fortune began to run the other way. Cook's bad luck returned. He struggled like a man in the slough of despond, but it was of no use. The chalk marks ran up against him despite every effort.

DENVER EXCITED.

All day long the game continued. The city became excited. Some men closed their places of business for the purpose of watching the playing. Occasionally the banker made a brilliant spurt, and seemed to surprise even himself, but the steady run of luck was dead against him. The players were the centre of all eyes. Intense personal interest had eaten up their desire for sleep, but their haggard countenances bore witness to the fearful strain upon their nerves. At noon Rollins was several thousand dollars ahead. But he 'did not relax his cautiousness. Every thrust was based upon a deliberate reckoning. He would calculate upon the positions of the balls while glancing his cue, and all his energies were bent upon leaving them in a bad place for his adversary. Cook played more like a Frenchman. He aimed at direct results, and made some surprising runs. During the afternoon he pulled up considerably, and his tally began to make a respectable appearance, but after the lamps were lighted in the evening fortune again deserted him, and he began to go to the bottom.

THE ASHES OF THIRTY-TWO HOURS.

Thirty-two hours had gone by. The players looked like ghosts. They were as white as the points of their cues. Cook had lost $12,000, but he was pluck to the last. At the end of each game he had spotted the balls as if he were sure of winning in the end, but fate and the terms of the match were against him. Rollins had dragged his weary feet about the table until nature was exhausted. An hour before midnight he threw up his cue, forfeiting $1,000, but winning $11,000. The worn out players shook hands and went to bed. Neither of them ever made any effort to renew the match, and it is reasonable to suppose that both were satisfied.

Yours Truly
J. A. Rollins
He enlisted as a private in the 45th Illinois Infantry, Sept., 1861; was detailed as Clerk at Gen. Grant's head-quarters, Jan., 1862; promoted to the 2d Lieutenancy of Co. F, 45th Ill., June, 1862, and became 1st Lieutenant, the following October; was in the battles of Shiloh, Port Gibson, Bayou Pierre, Jackson, Champion Hills, and engaged in the sieges of Corinth and Vicksburg.

From a volume entitled Soldiers' Letters, published by Bunce & Huntington, and edited by Lydia Minturn Post in aid of the Sanitary Commission, the following letter from his pen is copied, as illustrating not only an interesting portion of his personal history, but as showing the character and services of his regiment in the Vicksburg campaign.

Vicksburg, Miss., July 20, 1863.

Dear Parents:— Now, that Vicksburg is ours, and the din of battle has ceased, I will try to collect my thoughts to give you a short account of our part in the late Vicksburg campaign. I need not give you a general account of the battles in which we have been engaged, as you have doubtless read all about them in the papers; but a somewhat particular account of what I have seen, and the part taken by our regiment and brigade, may not be entirely uninteresting. By referring to my pocket diary, I see that we crossed the Mississippi river, at Bruinsburg Landing, on the 30th of April. In the evening, our regiment was addressed by Hon. E. B. Washburn, and Gov. Yates, who flattered us not a little, and, among other things, told us to sustain our past good reputation in the battle, on the coming morrow. The next morning, we started early for the battle-field, and after marching ten miles in the burning sun, encountered the enemy, in force, at Thompson's Hills, near Port Gibson. We immediately formed in line of battle, and sent forward skirmishers. After engaging the enemy for some time in front, to drive him from the cane brakes and rifle pits, we made a rapid movement to the left, and charged his right flank on double quick, shouting as we went, which put the rebels utterly to rout, and decided the fate of the day. It was a pleasing and exciting sight to us, to see the terrific "Secesh" leave their well-chosen position, and run for dear life before the charging columns of our enthusiastic brigade. After the charge, Generals Grant, McPherson, and Logan, came riding by our regiment, with Governor Yates and Mr. Washburn, the latter of whom cried out, "I told you, boys, what you would do to-day, and you have done it." We pursued the retreating enemy about two miles, and bivouacked, using captured blankets in lieu of those we threw aside, on coming into the fight. The next morning, we marched into Port Gibson, singing "We'll rally round the flag, boys." The fair maidens of the city looked quite sober as we passed, yet a few of the little rebels deigned to smile on the Yankee invaders, as they passed quietly through the streets. Finding that the enemy had burned the bridge over Bayou Pierre, to prevent pursuit, we made a detour to the right; and marching nine miles through woods, and over fields, and crossing fords, we came again into the main road, and took up our line of march for Big Bayou Pierre, where we arrived at 11 o'clock at night, completely worn out with hard marching through the dust and hot sun.
On the 30th of May we crossed the bayou on a suspension bridge. On ascending the hill, after crossing, the enemy gave us a morning salute by firing two shells at us, which exploded directly overhead, as we were marching up a narrow ravine. We again formed in line of battle, expecting the enemy would dispute our progress. We advanced in line, about a mile through almost impenetrable woods, and brier patches, over deep gullies, and up steep hills. Our company was detached as skirmishers, and deployed in front of the regiment, and engaged the skirmishers of the enemy for some time, driving them from the woods, and putting them to flight. We then marched by a circuitous route to Black River, where we arrived about 12 o'clock at night, thoroughly exhausted. Here we remained three days, to give the men rest, which was much needed, as we had been on forced marches for several days, on short rations, and many were shoeless, and very footsore. My own feet were very badly galled, besides having four large blisters on the soles. On the 7th of May, we removed to Rocky Springs, and halted another day. On the 9th, we drew about half rations, and marched through dust, and under a hot sun, to Pine Hills, and bivouacked. The next day we marched on towards Jackson, passing through Utica, and camping at Utica cross roads. On the 11th I was detailed to take charge of teams, and guard, going back to Rocky Springs after provisions and regimental property. Gen. Logan would only send old, worthless "confiscated teams," as he thought we might be captured by guerillas, who were constantly hovering in our rear. I went back in the night, over the roughest and darkest road I ever travelled.

The next morning we loaded the teams and started back to overtake the army, and made twenty miles before we halted for the night; we saw no guerillas. On the 13th we came up with our troops and found that they had been engaged in the battle of Raymond, an account of which you have doubtless seen in the papers, also the part taken by Logan's Division, to which I have the honor to belong.

The right started soon after we came up, and marched to Clinton and bivouacked in mud and rain. May 14th we drew very short rations, and Gen. Logan said "it was Jackson or starvation for us that night." The rain poured down in torrents, yet we moved forward at a brisk pace, expecting the enemy would give us a hard battle before giving up the capital of Jeff. Davis' native state. We advanced to within about two miles of the city and formed in line of battle, as a reserve to Quimby's Division, which was then fighting the enemy just ahead. After a short and desperate resistance, the rebels fell back before the successive charges of Quimby's gallant men. We then made a detour to the left to cut off the enemy's retreat toward Vicksburg. They did not come that way, but fled across Pearl river, burning the bridge to prevent pursuit. That night we bivouacked in mud and rain and foraged enough to eat from the terrified citizens. I went into the city and visited the State House and other public buildings. May 15th our army changed front and marched back through Clinton, towards Vicksburg, and bivouacked near Bear Creek. The next day marched four miles and encountered the enemy in force at Champion Hills. Our regiment ran about a mile under a burning sun to get into position and threw out skirmishers to protect the right flank of the army. We immediately advanced with the division to the support of Gen. Hovey, who was being very hard pressed by the overwhelming force of the enemy. We were quickly in the thickest of the fight and opened fire. The battle soon raged with terrific fury. As reinforcements came up on both sides the rapid volleys of musketry soon blended into one continual roar, only interrupted by the bursting of shells and the constant discharge of artillery from both armies. The enemy had concentrated his forces on our right, and was making desperate efforts to drive us back; but Logan's Division was not to be moved. The rebels moved up under the brow of a hill, evidently intending to make an effort to take one of our batteries. I could not but admire the fine style in which they moved up and the splendid colors they carried. There was a short pause, and then came the order to charge. The brigade immediately moved forward under a deadly shower of grape and musketry, and opened a terrific fire upon the stubborn foe. At first he stood his ground manfully, but finally wavered and broke. Our brigade here captured about a thousand prisoners and several pieces of artillery. The battlefield presented a horrid spectacle after the fight was over, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies. How little the folks at home, seated by their comfortable hearth stones, realize of the heart sickening horrors of this unnatural war!

We pursued the enemy about two miles, and bivouacked, almost worn out by the heat and fatigues of the day. The next day we marched to Big Black River, and halted a short time to rest. On the morning of the 18th we crossed the river on a floating bridge, which the pioneer corps had thrown across in the night, and marched on towards Vicksburg, until 12 o'clock at night. The next day we started early, without rations, and soon came up to where the balls were whistling, and formed in line of battle for the final struggle of the Vicksburg campaign. Here we had crackers dealt out to us, and cooked something to eat, while the other divisions were getting into position. We then threw out skirmishers, and advanced under fire of musketry and artillery, and after some sharp skirmishing drove the enemy within his breastworks. Sharpshooters were sent forward, who crept up within a short distance of the enemy's works and picked off his cannoniers whenever they attempted to load a piece.

Our artillery was rapidly getting into position, and kept up a sharp fire wherever the enemy showed himself. One who has never seen them, can form no correct idea of the strength of the enemy's works. Besides having the strongest of natural positions, he had been constructing breastworks for nearly a year, outside of which was an almost impenetrable abatis. The fight was constantly kept up by our sharpshooters and artillery, until on the 22d of May early in the morning, word was sent round that we would charge the breastworks at 10 o'clock A.M. You may imagine each man's feelings about that time. We all felt that we could take the works, yet we knew that "many brave boys would fall" before we could drive the enemy from his fortifications; but each felt that it would be some one besides himself who would fall.

The order of attack being arranged, we moved by the right flank, up a road towards the enemy's works, exposed to his grape and musketry, most of which we avoided by walking as low as possible. We approached as near as practicable, and formed in line, and sent forward skirmishers to feel the enemy. Our company was detailed for this duty, and we advanced over a ridge, exposed to the enemy's fire, on quadruple quick, and got up behind logs and brush on the next ridge. After firing away all our cartridges, we returned to the regiment, which was soon ordered forward to the works. Just before we started, our brigade adjutant said to our regiment, "now boys you must do your duty, just as you always"—just then a ball struck him in the thigh and cut short his speech. Our major then said, "Let every man stand to his post, forward forty-fifth."
The regiment started forward, as usual, with a yell, under the hottest fire I had ever been under (and I was at Shiloh). The air seemed filled with bullets which whistled with spiteful fury, like the winds around our Northern homes in Winter. The "hail of death" fell so fast that only a part of two companies, besides ours, ventured to run the fiery gauntlet. Our beloved Major fell, mortally wounded, while gallantly leading the charge. After we had got under the shelter of the enemy's breastworks, our men in the rear kept the rebels from shooting over at us, and we were so protected that we could keep them from firing much at the rest of our men, who came up, a few at a time. We planted our flag, with that of the 20th Illinois, on the outer slope of the enemy's main fort, and remained there to defend them fourteen long hours. We were so near the Rebels that we could pelt them with clods of dirt on the other side of the works. They threw over an empty whisky bottle to show us what they had to drink, and we threw back crackers to let them know what we had to eat.

The next day we were ordered to fall back, which we did, one at a time without loss. After that, the fight settled down into a regular siege. Our sharpshooters and artillery kept up a brisk fire to protect our men while working in the approaches. Sometimes all our artillery opened fire at once. You may imagine, but I cannot describe the scene, when one hundred and eighty pieces of cannon are firing together. In the night the scene is terribly grand. The balls crossing and recrossing each other in their fiery circles as they go shrieking through the air, seem like so many fiery serpents, and then the bombardment from gun and mortar boats, together with the bursting of shells and the deafening roar of cannon, make it a scene of imposing grandeur. By tireless vigilance and unceasing labor and fighting, we had run a sap up to the enemy's main fort, and had dug a mine under it, in which were deposited eighteen hundred pounds of powder.

At four o'clock, p. m., on the 25th of June, everything was ready for the grand explosion. Our division was ordered out in line of battle, with our regiment in the advance, in the saps, within a few yards of the fort. It was soon announced that the fuse had been lighted, and we all stood in breathless suspense, awaiting the explosion, which we expected would throw us all to the ground. It soon came with a dull thundering sound that fairly made the earth tremble, and sent a large body of earth and several rebels heavenward.

Both sides immediately opened all the artillery and musketry they could bring to bear upon the contested point. Then amid clouds of smoke and showers of dirt, and falling timbers and more terrible fire of musketry, our regiment rushed to the breach, and planted its colors over the breastworks. Our Lieutenant Colonel and Major both fell at the head of their men, where brave men always fall; and our Colonel and Adjutant were both severely wounded. The explosion had forced out the earth so as to form a sort of breastwork, over which both parties fought with a desperation amounting almost to madness.

The rebels had planted a cannon within 20 feet of us that poured a deadly fire into our ranks; and both sides threw hand grenades, which made murderous havoc. Of all the fights I have ever been in, this was the most desperate. The dead and wounded lying all around us, the men covered with blood and blackened with powder, fighting like madmen, amid the smoke of battle, the bursting of shells, and the roar of artillery and musketry, made it a scene to be remembered a man's lifetime.
After we had fought until our guns were so hot and foult that we could not use them, we were relieved by the 20th Illinois. We returned soon after, and took our turn with the other regiments of our brigade. After we had held this "slaughter pen" for 36 hours, and lost 300 men in killed and wounded, from the brigade, we were ordered to fall back a few yards out of reach of the enemy's infernal hand grenades. We only failed in our attempt to take the place by storm because it was not possible for mortal men to do it.

On the 4th of July, the enemy, unable longer to oppose our progress, surrendered this "American Sebastopol" to the unconquerable army of Gen. Grant, after a siege of 48 days. Early in the morning of that memorable day, we received orders to go in and take possession of Vicksburg. You may guess this was the most welcome order we ever obeyed. Our bullet torn flag was sent for and placed on the court house, and our regiment had the honor of taking the lead of the army on its triumphant entry, as it had before taken the lead in storming the breast-works. This was the most glorious Fourth of July we ever spent, and the proudest day of our lives, yet we could not restrain a tear of sorrow for the many brave comrades we left sleeping on the battlefield, beneath the little mounds that mark their honored graves.

On arriving at the court house, our regiment, or, rather, the fragment of a regiment that is now left of us, was detailed as a provost guard, on which duty we expect to remain for some time.

Notwithstanding the exposure and hardships of the campaign, I have enjoyed the best of health, and by the protecting care of a kind Providence have thus far been impervious to rebel steel and bullets,—I trust for some good purpose.

With love to all the family, I remain your affectionate son,

John A. Rollins.

(549.) Stephen Albert⁶ (John Q. A.⁸, John A.⁷, Eliphalet⁶, Eliphalet⁶, Joseph¹, Joseph³, Thomas², James¹), only brother of the preceding, res. Belvidere, Illinois. He also embraced an early opportunity to do what he might for the preservation of the Union; enlisted in the 95th Illinois Infantry, and was Color Sergeant of the regiment. He served through the Vicksburg campaign and in the Red River expedition, and was mortally wounded at Guntown, Miss., June 10, 1864.

Many of his letters, while in service, were published in the volume previously alluded to ("Soldiers' Letters"), from which a few extracts are here given, as they well exhibit the modesty of his character, as well as his true bravery and earnest patriotism.

CHARGE OF THE NINETY-FIFTH ILLINOIS ON THE FORTIFICATIONS OF VICKSBURG.

May 22, 1863.

Once more, my dear mother, I have passed through one of those times and places that "try men's souls."
Yesterday we made a charge, and were repulsed with heavy loss. Our brigade suffered more than any other, but the loss was fearful to us all, especially our regiment. The Major was wounded, two captains killed, one mortally wounded, five lieutenants wounded; in all, eighteen killed, seventy-three wounded, and seven missing. We had to advance over a hill; on the opposite side were posted the rebels in great strength of position and numbers.

The Colonel led the regiment (though badly wounded in the first fight) over the hill, and was seen to fall. The balls were flying as though all the Rebels this side Hades were pouring their murderous fire upon us. We all saw our Colonel fall and supposed him dead: it cast a heavy gloom over our spirits and checked our ardor. You can better imagine than I can describe our joy when after dark we saw him coming over the hill to us. Nothing but the Providence of God could save men from death in such a position as was his. The regiment shouted for joy at seeing him once more; it was as unexpected as though he had risen from the grave. Our company lost one killed and ten wounded, and how I escaped is a wonder to me. Men were falling on every side, and the carnage was becoming too terrible for mortal to withstand, and we were ordered to “fall back,” which we did in good order. The groans of the dying, the shrieks of the wounded, and the almost unearthly screaming of shells and cannon balls, mingled with the rattle of musketry, made up a scene that men see but few times in a lifetime, and the fewer the better.

The officers were brave and daring to a fault; our General, Ransom, is bolder than a lion. Capt. Cornwall fell while cheering on and trying to rally his men; but all was of no avail. The Rebel fire was too destructive for any troops to stand. We fell back; but this temporary check will not avail them anything. We are just as sure to take Vicksburg with all her traitorous inmates, as the sun is to make its daily revolutions on its axis.

in Vicksburg, (not in rear of it):
July 5, 1863.

Dear Mother.—The great work has at last been accomplished! The fight is fought, and the victory won! The great rebel stronghold has at last fallen. Thanks be to God first, who has ruled our affairs to the dismay of our enemies. Thanks next to the patriotism, valour, ability and energy of Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant! Thanks to the soldiers who have nobly and patriotically performed so many deeds of valor, endured so many hardships, and bravely won so many victories! Thanks, also to the hearty sympathy of friends at home! The cause is worthy of their most cordial co-operation and earnest support.

Our only regret and sorrow is over the death of our comrades in arms. But they have not died in vain; their deeds will live in history and their virtues be remembered until the day star of time shall have launched into an endless eternity.

Yesterday was a glorious 4th. It was one that will live. Hereafter, the day on which our fathers declared their independence and threw off the oppressive yoke of England will be doubly dear to the American heart. The enemy feel as much chagrined as we do joyful over the fact of the city’s being surrendered on the 4th of July. Our brigade was one of the three that went into the city to take possession—a mark of honor, in appreciation of meritorious conduct in the siege of the last 46 days. Such honors are highly valued by the soldiers.
This is the severest blow the Rebels have received since the commencement of this unholy rebellion. Thank God for it.

Vicksburg, Nov. 18, 1863.

---. You ask me to "tell some of my own deeds of martial prowess." Now, my dear friend, that is a delicate question. Suppose I have never performed any! I am the color sergeant of the 95th Illinois Volunteers. You have read all about the 47 days' siege of Vicksburg. I was there. And during the bloody battles that preceded the fall of that rebel stronghold—I was there. Our regiment lost one hundred and seventy-eight men during those terrible conflicts, but God be thanked,—the victory was ours. And, on that memorable 4th of July, 1863, never to be forgotten, I had the joyful pleasure and honor, of planting with my own hands, the stars and stripes of my country's flag on the strongest fortress of my country's foes.

Vicksburg, Jan. 2, 1864.

Our division is now stationed at this place, but we soon expect to join the grand army that is gathering as the thunder gathereth, under our loved and triumphant General Grant.

The great rebellion seems to be fast approaching a grave of infamy and dishonor, and the only wish of our army here, is to be there to help in giving it the death stroke. Oh, how I long for that day to come when we shall stand forth once more a free and united nation. I am fully determined to do my own full share of this "awful work" until victory shall crown our arms. But my heart sickness at the thought of our once happy country, now wracked by civil feuds, and weltering in the blood of brothers. But I would not give up one single principle of our free institutions to stay this carnage of human life; but would rather carry on the war a hundred years, than sacrifice principle for the sake of peace.

I think, and hope, and pray, that the day is not far distant when the nation will be everywhere rejoicing in thanksgiving and praise for the triumph of liberty, a re-united territory, and the more enduring bonds of national affection.

The work is not yet done. Many a hard fought battle must be added to the historic battle-grounds of the '61 war, ere the bloody strife shall cease. I have yet eighteen months to serve, unless sooner shot.

AFTER THE RED RIVER EXPEDITION.

My health has not been good in this expedition. We have marched double distance, on half rations, besides fighting the enemy nearly every day; but the love of country, duty, and the outlay of our little family pluck, has kept me at my post every hour, and in every emergency. We have had more hardships in this expedition than we have ever experienced before since we came into the service, but our regiment has been very fortunate. We have never sought in a single instance, what is termed by the soldier a soft place. We have even courted dangers by volunteering in one or two instances to go in advance. Our loss in this expedition in killed, wounded and died, is about twenty. Company B, ever fortunate, and in two more hot skirmishes than the rest of the regiment, has not lost a single man. But we have had a great many sick. We have marched in the retreat a distance of one hundred and twenty miles, fighting the enemy in many instances in the daytime, and marching most of the night. One day we forced the enemy, and four hours in the forenoon fought a right smart skirmish, and marched thirty miles before we halted for the night. This was the first day we started from Natchitoches. You must remember that the part of the army from Vicksburg covered the retreat of Banks' army with his paraphernalia. We have been in five or six fights, and have faced the enemy almost every day for the last month in some shape or other; but, thank God, we are now out of the Department of the Gulf. We have been out-generated, but not whipped. I can say in all truthfulness, that the expedition from Vicksburg have whipped the enemy every time we have faced them. We have whipped them at Pleasant Hill and Cane River, and covered the retreat of Banks and his army all the way from Pleasant Hill to the Mississippi River. But as I intend to write a long account of the whole expedition from beginning to end, I will not write more at this time.

S. A. ROLLINS, 95th Ill. Vols.

"But the poor boy," touchingly writes his mother on the same sheet, fell a victim to the Guntown disaster in a few days, and never had the opportunity to write the "long account."

May, 1864.

While at Baton Rouge, I made the acquaintance of Capt. Lathrop, of the 38th Massachusetts. I often met with him; he was one of the best of fellows, and a true friend; he was very fond of telling long stories, and many are the jokes we had about the Captain's proclivity. At Caen River he was wounded, and has since died. I was more than sorry. I wish to tell some one that I knew him, honorable, brave, good. I wish to put in writing the fact (which my conscience never reproves me for doing,) that he fell while nobly rallying a party of soldiers; brave fellow; a hero to be envied; he has told his last story with his lips; but the record of his life, and the last act of his manhood, will be a cherished legacy in the home made lonely by his death, and in the memory of his friends who knew him as I did.

S. A. R.

The following Memorial was written by Will. Mosby McLain, of Richmond, Va., a slaveholder before the war, but a loyalist who espoused the cause of the Union and was Lieutenant in the 32d Ohio Volunteers:

MEMORIAL OF STEPHEN ALBERT ROLLINS.

When the final reveille shall arouse the sleepers bivouacking in the tombs of the earth, and the last roll call shall be read in the light of the Great White Throne; when the scars that disfigure and the dross that defiles shall all be washed away, and man stands erect in the image of God, who shall appear lovelier, fairer or freer from stain than those who have suffered and died for conscience' sake? All theories, creeds and systems of religion award a crown of unfading glory to the martyr.
Not only

"To the hero when his sword
Has won the battle for the free," and who then falls with his "back to the field, and his feet to the foe"; not only to him who plans campaigns, and, at the head of glittering squadrons, charges to the battle shock; not only to these does the crown belong: nor to these only does Columbia owe what she is to-day, but equally with them, to all those

"Unremembered, unrecorded,
Who are sleeping side by side,
While to others is awarded
That for which they nameless died."

And although the silver trump of fame sounds not their name or lineage, nor monumental marble marks the spot which their ashes have hallowed, yet their companions know well where they sleep—on the rugged mountain side, in the dark morass, or in the deep cane brake. In their comrades' memories their deeds are ever green, and in those comrades' hearts is erected to them monumentum perennius are.

In the church yard at Briers Cross Roads, on Tishomingo Creek, near the boundary line of Tennessee and Mississippi, was buried one of these heroes, the subject of this sketch.

Stephen Albert Rollins, Color Sergeant of the 95th Regiment of Illinois Infantry, was mortally wounded in what is known as the Guntown fight, on the 10th of June, 1864, and died on the 16th, aged twenty-two years, nine months and eleven days. It is as nothing to say how loved and valued he was by his comrades, and how lamented in his going down to the grave, for these are stereotyped expressions, and have ceased to mean much, but we who held him close and warm in our heart of hearts, can do no less than commune together over this precious dust, and mourn together over our own, and (as we believe) our nation's loss.

He had not entered on life's most serious duties before he entered his country's service, but the vast fund of energy he possessed, no less than the high grade of intellect vouchsafed to him, gave promise of a position in the very front ranks of men, when he should engage in the battle of life. The writer was only fortunate enough to meet him during the lull of arms in the winter of '63-64, when both their regiments, belonging to McPherson's 17th corps, were stationed at Vicksburg.

Of course the routine duties of camp life prevented uninterrupted intercourse, but my association with him and other kindred spirits during that winter make me revert to it as a social oasis in the monotony of soldier life. Of a fine presence and handsome face, with a firm lip, and an eye mild, but glittering like a diamond when discussion aroused his energies, he could look the whole world in the face, unabasheded.

With a good judgment and keen perception, a fine debater and a charming raconteur he was the life of all the society he went into. Where all were brave, he was a marked man. The secret of his dauntless courage I think will be best explained by an extract from his pastor's (Mr. Eddie's) funeral sermon over his remains, when they were borne to their last resting place, preached at Belvidere, his home. He said: "He was a representative of that noble class of soldiers who offer themselves as intelligent, voluntary, living sacrifices for the good of their country. Comprehending the tremendous interests at stake, and burning with a worthy passion for their preservation, he was willing to endure the hardships of a soldier's life, and risk the chances of battles and of campaigns." And this displayed itself through all his life—a firm belief in the justice of his cause, and in the God who speeds the right: and it nerv'd his arm to strike home, and his tongue to cry aloud for freedom. When he enlisted he wrote to his father, then absent in the West, thus: "I have obeyed the call of my country, and on that point I am sure I have done rightly. The cause of the Union is sacred and calls loudly for defenders. The sacrifice is a great one to me, [he was in the midst of his studies] but if I can strike one blow towards putting down this unholy rebellion, I shall feel satisfied with the course I have pursued. My heart and hands are in the work, and I expect they ever will be, until victory shall have crowned our efforts, or my body lies in the grave."

To his mother he wrote shortly afterwards, "Dear mother, I want to say right here, that I do most deeply feel and appreciate that lofty and holy patriotism that has made you give up your two sons, most deeply loved, to go forth and fight the awful and bloody battles that are taking place. I glory in your patriotism, mother; and I tell you that your words of comfort and loyal cheer have done me much good, for, in spite of my will, sometimes my spirit will sink."

Nowhere, nor at any time, was his self-sacrificing courage displayed to more advantage than when he lay twice wounded on the battle-field, when his loving comrades flew to aid him. Soon the retreat was sounded, and our broken and bleeding ranks were falling back, leaving him to that terrible fate, "wounded, in the hands of the enemy." The foe, Forests', worse than Tarltonian troopers, their hands yet reeking with the blood of the butchered defenders of Fort Pillow, and their passions inflamed at the stubborn resistance of smaller numbers than their own, were closing in clouds upon the Federal ranks. Now, if ever, selfishness would have been excusable. But, though his comrades desire to risk all, to serve him, and stay with him, he will not have it so, and exhausted and worn out, he yet bids them seek safety with their friends. Even then, when to return to him was certain captivity, and possible death, one, with a devotion worthy of any heroic age, James G. Goodman, of Company B, 95th Ill., returned to nurse and comfort him. He was taken prisoner, and to him we are indebted for all we know of the last hours of our dying hero. In a letter written from the rebel prison in Cahawba, Alabama, Goodman writes, "He had the full use of his faculties till the last, and expressed his conviction, two days before his death, that he would reach that better land above,—beyond this world." The few days mercifully spared to him, proved the harvest time of his life, during which were garnered up all the increase derived from the hallowed influences of home, and the grateful memories of Christian teaching. And our hope is strong that he found that balm for the wounded spirit that shall avail him in the land of the hereafter. And where shall a fitter place be found for the mortal to put on immortality, than on the battle-field, where he gives his life to that, to which, next to his God, it belongs,—his country? The last words his passing spirit breathed, were "My faith in my country has ever been firm!" Noble heart! though dead, shall he not still live in those words? Shall they not be our watchword in every dark day of the republic? I would I might have stood by him then, when the death damp was on his brow, and his eyes were dimmed with the clouds of approaching dissolution, when his frame was racked with the torture of his wounds, his feet just "brushing the dew on Jordan's banks," and his voice that was wont to entrance his audience, almost hushed in everlasting silence. I would I might have heard those words, "My faith in my country has ever been firm!" sounding almost from that undiscovered country whither he was speeding. I think it would have nerved me to shout them clarion voiced in the ears of all who waver or hold back in giving their full confidence to that land for which he fell. And thus he went before his God. Alas! he is not a solitary case. He was a representative of thousands, for whom our Northland weeps to-day, who have fallen in martyrdom to principle. May they all Sleep deep! Sleep in peace! Sleep in memory ever!

Wrapt, each soul in the deeds of its deathless endeavor,
'Till that great final peace shall be struck through the world,
'Till the stars be recalled, and the firmament furled
In the dawn of a daylight undying; until
The signal of Zion be seen on the hill
Of the Lord; when the day of the battle is done,
And the conflict with time, by Eternity won.

WILL MOSBY MCCLAIN.

Jan. 12, 1865.

(550.) IRVIN W.9 (Laban C.8, David7, Stephen6, John5, John4, Benjamin3, Thomas2, James1), spent his early days upon the farm and in teaching in the winter months for several years; in the fall of 1855 went to Minnesota and took up a quarter section of land, under the pre-emption laws of the United States. The first two years in Minnesota were spent in true pioneer style, in a log cabin—he and his brother Orvis keeping house, doing their own house work and hunting their own provisions,—fish and game being abundant, such as deer, partridge, prairie chickens, ducks, etc. They built the first stone chimney, the first brick chimney, and the first cellar wall on the prairie where they located, and where the present town of Elgin stands. Seventeen years later, 1872, the real estate of their town was assessed at $180,000, and the personal property, $50,500, about one-third its real value. Mr. R. is a magistrate in this new town, has been its Treasurer, and for the last ten years its Town Clerk. He has been very active in tree and fruit raising in the County and State, and received the first premiums ever paid in Minnesota, both at County and State fairs. He was also active in providing means to equip soldiers for the war; that town, at the commencement of the Rebellion only six years old, furnishing 40 soldiers to the Union army.

Mr. R. married at Montpelier, Vt., Apr. 4, 1859, Ellen Keith, (b. Barre, Vt., June 19, 1833) daughter of Francis Keith, of B.

George W.\(^9\) (Ebenezer D.\(^8\), David\(^7\), Stephen\(^6\), John\(^5\), John\(^4\), Benjamin\(^3\), Thomas\(^2\), James\(^1\)), received a common school education in the public schools of Vermont and New York state; at the age of 14 was engaged in the cotton mills at Suncook, N. H., in the dressing and warp room; at 15 was in the employ of Gilman B. Fogg (gunsmith), Manchester, N. H.; at 18 went to Wisconsin, res. Milwaukee, Janesville and Monroe. Enlisted on the breaking out of the Rebellion, from Monroe, Wis., April 19, 1861, as a private soldier, having taken an active part in forming a company, then called the Green County Volunteers, the first enlisted for the war in that part of the State. On the organization of the company he was chosen 2d Lieutenant, Moses O'Brien 1st Lieutenant, and Martin Flood Captain; went into regimental camp at Fond du Lac, and organized as the 3d Regiment, Rollins' Company being the Color Company of the Regiment. The field officers were Col. C. H. Hamilton, Lieut. Col. Thomas H. Ruger (now Superintendent West Point Military Academy). The Regiment was assigned to duty under Gen. Patterson in the Shenandoah Valley, Va. Here Rollins was promoted and assigned as 1st Lieut. to Co. B, and again promoted to the command of his old company. It was this Regiment, then commanded by Col. Ruger, that was detailed by McClellan to arrest the Maryland Legislature convened at Frederick for the purpose of legislating the state out of the Union, and Co. C (Capt. Rollins') was selected to escort them all to the U. S. gunboat at Annapolis. Capt. Rollins commanded his company in all the military operations in the Shenandoah Valley under Banks, Shields and Fremont in 1862; was with Gen. McClellan's army in 1863; under Generals Hooker and Meade in the occupancy of Maryland, 1863; in winter quarters at Falmouth, on the Rappahannock, 1864, 3d Brigade, 1st Division, 12th Corps. In the winter of 1864 he was assigned to duty by order of the Secretary of War, as Post Quarter Master at Elmira, N. Y., where he built barracks Nos. 1, 2 and 3 for prisoners of war; these barracks had capacity for and actually contained 23,000 prisoners. He was relieved in the Spring of 1865 by Col. J. J. Elwell; soon after this, was disabled on account of sickness and transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps (Commander of 16th Reg't, Veteran Reserve Corps). In the summer of 1865 the Regiment was mustered out, and he was ordered to report in the winter of 1865 to the Commanding General of Louisiana at New Orleans; was assigned to the command of the 6th District of Louisiana, comprising all of Louisiana on the Mississippi from the mouth of Red River to the Arkansas line. Hd. Qrs. at Vidalia; Gen. Martin Flood, his former Captain, commanding the 7th District, Hd. Qrs. at Shreveport. Rollins was mustered out of service, Dec. 31, 1868.

In 1869 he was appointed a member of the Board of Public Works for the State of La. The Board expended for the State, under appropriations, over $8,000,000, and put all the important levees in good repair. In the summer of 1871 Col. Rollins removed to Keokuk, Iowa, where he now resides; was associated with his old commander, Gen. Flood, in the business of manufacturing and putting up portable gas generators. (Gen. Flood died at Warsaw, Illinois, July 27, 1873.) He married Lou A. Leilick, of Frederick, Md., Apr. 9, 1863. She was born at Frederick, Apr. 9, 1843.

Children.

ii. Thomas H. Ruger, b. Nov. 12, 1867.
iii. George Leilick, b. July 17, 1870.

(555.) Horace K.9 (Ebenezer D.8, David7, Stephen6, John5, John4, Benjamin3, Thomas2, James1), res. Lowell, Mass.; served also in the war as principal musician in Co. K, 6th Mass. Reg't, in both their 3 months and nine months campaigns, in Virginia and North Carolina. He married April 28, 1869, Hattie A. Wilkins, of Norway, Me.; dec'd July 17, 1863, from disease contracted while in the service. Mrs. Rollins died at Lowell, Feb. 21, 1872. Mr. R. was a member of the M. E. church. They had but one son.

i. Elmer E., b. May 9, 1870; the adopted son of B. Frank and Sarah Barnard, of Lowell, and he now bears the name of George E. Barnard; res. Lowell.

(556.) Richard M. G.9 (Ebenezer D.8, David7, Stephen6, John5, John4, Benjamin3, Thomas2, James1), res. at Lowell. He served also in the Rebellion from the commencement of the war to its close, 7th Mass. Light Battery (the Richardson Light Infantry), Commander P. A. Davis; they were at first stationed at Fort Monroe; afterward went South; were in Gen. Banks' expedition up the Red River, La.; at that time Rollins was 2d Serg't of the Battery, and at the time they were mustered out he was 1st Serg't. He was also a member of the M. E. church. He died unmd. Mar. 17, 1867, in the full faith of a blissful immortality.

CHARLES RAWLINS, OF DELAWARE,

AND NOTICES OF OTHER FAMILIES

WHO SETTLED IN VIRGINIA AND MARYLAND, AND IN OTHER PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.
NOTE.

The Records here included were not embraced in the original plan of the compiler, but have accidentally been gathered while pursuing investigations relative to the descendants of James Rawlins, of Dover. Feeling that they may serve as a nucleus for a more complete history, and in the hope that some descendant of the families herein named may, at a future time, carry them out to completion, they are inserted here for preservation.

NICHOLAS RAWLINS, OF NEWBURY.

(I.) Nicholas Rawlins took the oath of allegiance in 1678. He was at that time 32 years of age.* There is a tradition in the family that he came from Ireland; this, however, has not been determined. He settled in that part of the town now West Newbury, above Artichoke River, on the Bradford road, and married October 31, 1679, Rebecca, daughter of Dea. Robert Long, of Newbury.

Soon after his settlement in the Massachusetts Colony, the Indian war, known as King Philip's war, broke out, distinguished by the destruction of Brookfield and other towns in the valley of the Connecticut, as well as by the massacre of Captain Beers' and Captain Lothrop's companies at Bloody Brook. After these events, it was determined to undertake a winter expedition against the Narragansetts, who, although a treaty had been made with them in July, 1675, were found secretly aiding Philip's designs for the destruction of the New England colonists. For this purpose the Colony of Massachusetts furnished 527 men, Plymouth 159, and Connecticut 300, to whom were added 150 Mohegan Indians, all under the command of Josiah Winslow, governor of Plymouth Colony. The expedition which ended in the celebrated "Swamp Fight," and the destruction of the Narragansett Fort, was a perfect success, the Indians losing 700 fighting men on that day, besides about 300 who subsequently died of their wounds, exclusive of those who perished in the flames of the Fort; the English losing about 80 men.

The war, which ended by the death of King Philip, was short, but very destructive; for, during its continuance, 600 of the flower of the New England settlers fell in battle or were murdered by the enemy; twelve or thirteen towns were entirely destroyed, and 600 buildings, chiefly dwelling houses, were consumed. About every eleventh family had been burned out, and every eleventh soldier had perished.*

Rawlins served under Colonel Samuel Appleton, who commanded the Massachusetts force.†

He died at Newbury, June, 1693, and his widow, Rebecca, was appointed administratrix on his estate, September 26, 1693.‡ His widow married Richard Ormes, "citizen and freeman of Armorer's Hall, London," then resident in Newbury. Ormes died between 1712 and 1715. He is called, in old deeds, a brazier.

He enlisted early in the Rebellion, in Cook's Boston Battery, and was subsequently commissioned 1st Lieut. of the 3d Lt. Battery (Footer's), on the organization of the battery, Sept. 5, 1861. This battery left the State, Oct. 7, arriving in Washington, Oct. 11, 1861, where it was assigned to Gen. Fitz John Porter's Division; was in the army of the Potomac during its entire term of service, and took part in all the engagements of that army. Lieut. Martin was commissioned Captain of the Battery, Nov. 28, 1861. May 16, 1863, he was ordered on detached service, commanding the Artillery Brigade of the 5th Army Corps. May 18, 1864, at the battle of Laurel Hill, he was wounded through the neck, which disabled him for a short time; on the 8th of June he returned, but was unable to resume command on account of his wound. On the 18th of August, however, he reported for service, and was assigned to duty as Chief of Artillery, 2d Division, 5th Corps. During the three years the third battery was in service, it won for itself an imperishable name, and a reputation second to none in the army. The question was once asked by a gentleman, of a distinguished general in the army, "What kind of a battery is Martin's?" The reply was, "Regular or irregular, there is no better battery in the service."—Mass. Adjt.-Gen. Reports.

WILLIAM RAWLINS, OF GLOUCESTER.

(1.) William Rawlins, called sometimes fisherman, and in later deeds, yeoman, was married in Gloucester, by Hon. John Newman, Jan. 22, 1719, to Hannah, daughter of John, and granddaughter of Thomas Millet. He may have been the only son of Edward, of Boston, who arrived at Boston from Barbadoes about 1715. Edward's will, dated Jan. 1, 1715, proved Jan. 20, 1715, conveyed property to his wife, Margaret, and his three children, William, Sarah, and Margaret. William bought ten acres of land in Gloucester, of Nathaniel Stone and John Coy, Feb. 28, 1722, and resided in Gloucester till 1740, when he sold his property in that town and rem. to Amherst, N. H. His deed is a model of comprehensiveness, and I have thought proper to transcribe the principal portion of it. By this deed, dated May 7, 1740, he and his wife, Hannah, convey unto Epes Sargent, of Gloucester, "house, barn and six acres, which lot was laid out by the committee, Dec. 24, 1707, to Nathaniel Millet and Nathaniel Millet, Jr., etc." "All which lands are situate, lying and being within ye township of Gloucester, aforesaid, together with all the rocks, water courses of water, houses, fences, mines, minerals, trees, woods and underwoods, standing, lying, or being thereon, and all the privileges

Note.—Thomas Millet, the emigrant ancestor of the Millet family, came from Southwark, Eng., in the ship Elizabeth, with his wife, Mary (Greenoway), her sister, Ursula, and his son, Thomas, in 1635, and settled in Dorchester, Mass., being then 30 years of age. His children all settled in Gloucester, except one, Bethia, who md. Moses Ayers, of Dorchester.—Wentworth.
and appurtenances and commodities, to the said parcels of land or any of them appertaining, or any way belonging, together with all other right, title or interest which the said William Rawlins, and Hannah, his wife, have or ought to have, to, and in, any real estate lying within the township of Gloucester."

Children.

iii. William, b. June 24, 1725; is said to have been killed in the French and Indian war.

v. Elizabeth, b. Mar. 15, 1729; md. Joseph Prince, of Amherst, N. H. Their children were: Elizabeth, Joseph, Hannah, Sarah, Abel, Susanna, Mary, Anna, John and Solomon, the last named of whom, Solomon, res. Amherst, md. Mary, sister of R. D. Muzzyey, M.D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Surgery, Dartmouth College, afterwards of Cincinnati and Boston.

vi. John, b. Aug. 6, 1731; reported killed by the Indians. He was a member of an Indian scouting party, under Capt. John Goffe, of Amherst, Apr. 24, 1746.

(2.) Joseph² (William¹), cooper; res. in Salem, Mass.; md. Sarah, daughter of —— and Elizabeth Butman, of Salem. He rem. to New Boston, N. H., where he was living in 1799.

(3.) James² (William¹), removed from Amherst to Dublin, N. H., between 1772 and 1776. He was a soldier of the Revolution; was one of the company raised from Meredith and adjoining towns for Ticonderoga, July 7, 1777, and was in the army at Rhode Island, 1779–80.*

He was on the town committee “for building school housen,” 1784.†

The following anecdote is related of him in the History of Dublin: “Two members of the Baptist Church, a Mr. Rollins and Mr. Riggs had a misunderstanding with regard to some dealings between them, and Mr. Riggs took occasion to call his brother Rollins an old skinflint. Mr. Rollins considered it scandalous and reported his brother Riggs to the church for discipline. A meeting was called, and presided over by Elder Willard. Mr. Rollins stated his grievance, and the brethren discussed the matter, and gave their opinions. The elder cautioned them about being hasty, and suggested the propriety of ascertaining the definition of the opprobrious epithet, by consulting a dictionary. A messenger was sent for a dictionary, and one was procured; but they were doomed to be disappointed, for the word could not be found. In this dilemma they felt somewhat perplexed, but the elder proposed that brother Riggs should state to the church what he meant when he called brother Rollins an old skinflint. Mr. Riggs, who had been sitting in silence during the whole proceedings, rose up and said in a sonorous and lisping manner, that was natural to him, "I meant that brother Rollins was a downright, honest, clever man." This must, of course, in the absence of other testimony, have been deemed satisfactory.

Mr. R. was five times married. His first wife was Abigail Downe, who died May 7, 1790, æt. 58. He married second, Mary Whitney, Oct. 11, 1791, who died April 3, 1799, æt. 50. He next married Hannah Ross, of Jaffrey, who deceased August 10, 1803. Nov. 17, 1803, he married Martha Muzzey, who died Dec. 16, 1813, æt. 66. His last wife was widow Rebecca Phelps, of Roxbury, N. H., who deceased November 3, 1844, æt. 78. His children, all by his first wife, were:

i. Molly, b. Jan. 30, 1758; Jan. 25, 1774, to John Adams; they res. in Nelson N. H., many years; removed when quite advanced in life, to Watertown, N. Y., where they died. Mr. Adams was a native of Sherburne, Mass; son of Moses Adams, who removed to Dublin, N. H., 1773. Their children were Hepsibeth, John, Abigail, Henry, Moses, Polly, James, Joseph, Jesse, and Seth.

5. iii. John, b. May 21, 1762.

Y., where he died Dec. 18, 1856, æt. 77. His widow died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wheeler, Nov. 24, 1872, æt. 91. From an obituary notice written by Rev. T. R. Dunn, of North Creek, N. Y., who also preached a funeral sermon on the occasion of his death, I extract the following: "About 1809 Mr. Rollins united with the Baptist church in Rutland, and on his removal to Johnsburg, united with the church there, which relation was worthy sustained till his release from the church militant to join the church triumphant. For many years he performed the functions of the deacon's office with distinguished ability. Very few, of his sphere of labor, have contributed more to the general development of Christian graces in a community. The first Sabbath School started in this town he assisted in organizing, and was for several years its Superintendent. He also taught the first singing school in town. His life has been signalized in promoting the interests of the church, and the general welfare of the rising generation. His dignity of mien, decision of character, rigid observance of the Sabbath, combined with remarkable benevolence and Christian sympathy, secured for him a position in the estimation of the community, which few enjoy.

OF

of Scituate (i.)

Thomas Rawlins came from England in 1630 in the same company with Governor Winthrop, the first company of that year; settled in Roxbury; was admitted freeman May 18, 1631*; removed to Scituate, according to Roxbury records, about 1639†. He must have been in Scituate before 1639, because the Colony records say that Thomas Rawlins and others, of Scituate, were presented by the jury Dec., 1638, for receiving foreigners and strangers into their houses and lands without license of the Governor and Assistants, or acquainting the town of Scituate therewith. They were all discharged by the Court, 1639. Mr. Rollins purchased Anthony Annable's North River lot, in 1642. His house, situated where Dea. Thomas and Dea. George King afterward resided, was built in 1637. In 1646 he was one of the Connihasset partners‡.

During his residence in Scituate he was a man of note and usefulness, having been appointed by the General Court a member of the Grand Jury of the Colony in 1641, 1642, and 1646; he was also a surveyor of Scituate, 1642, 1644, and one of the Town Committee in 1643; he was also one of the Deputies from Scituate at the special session of the General Court held at Plymouth, Sept. 27, 1642, for the purpose of providing forces against the Indians, for an offensive and defensive war, at which session "Miles Standish was appointed Captain of the forces to be raised; Mr. Thomas Prenc to be his counsel, and to advise in the wars; William Palmer, leftenant, and Peregrine White, auncient bearer."

Oct. 10, 1643, he was again a delegate to the General Court, convened on the occasion of the insurrection of the Indians against the Dutch and English.

His first wife, Mary, died just prior to his removal, having, according to Roxbury Church Records, "lived a godly life." His second wife, Emma, died Dec. 27, 1655, and he married May 2, 1656, Sarah, widow of David Mattocks, of Roxbury.†

Mr. Rawlins died in Boston, Mar. 15, 1660. His will, dated Mar. 12, 1660, conveyed property to his wife Sarah; and to his son Thomas, a house in Boston, provided he live there with his mother as heretofore: to his son Nathaniel, a farm in Scituate, etc. It is added in the record of probate that "Thomas Rawlins, ye sonne, declared that knowing his father to have left his mother-in-law, Sarah, too little, he was free and willing, and did give her nine pounds more," etc.

Rawlins brought with him from England five children, viz.:

iii. Joan, b. ——; md. Jan. 28, 1645, Ephraim Kempton, of Scituate. He was son of Ephraim, of Plymouth, and came probably with his father in the ship Ann, 1623. Their children were: (1) Joanna, b. Sept. 29, 1647; md. Dec. 22, 1664, George Morton, of Plymouth. (2) Patience, b. Oct. 2, 1648; died young. (3) Ephraim, b. Oct. 1, 1649; rem. to Salem. He was a gunsmith in Boston; md. Nov. 7, 1673. Patience, daughter of Elder

Thomas Faunce; had rem. to Salem, 1677, but perhaps went to Plymouth late in life. "His widow is one of the instances well authenticated (as very few are) of much exceeding 100 years of age. Her memory was accurate if not happy, for she saw the head of King Philip, the great Indian Chief, upon a pole at Plymouth, where it remained over twenty years after his fall, and said that a wren used to make her nest in the skull, where she hatched her young every year."* (4)

(2.) Thomas² (Thomas¹), res. Boston; wife Sarah. Was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., 1642.† His will, dated Dec. 12, 1681, conveyed his property to his nephew, Ephraim Kempton, of Salem; to his niece, Ruth Marshall, wife of Samuel Marshall, of Boston; to four daughters of his brother Nathaniel, deceased; to the wife of John Randall, of Scituate; to nephew, Manasseh Kempton, and to his sister Joanna, wife of George Morton, of Plymouth; to Stephen Totman; to four children of Edward Wright, etc. Administrators of his estate were: Ephraim Kempton and Samuel Marshall. One child.

i. Thomas, b. Jan. 20, 1667; probably died early. Not mentioned in father's will.

(3.) Nathaniel² (Thomas¹), succeeded to his father's residence 1660; married Lydia, daughter of Richard Sylvester, Sept. 4, 1652; who after Nathaniel's death, which occurred Dec. 23, 1662, married May 25, 1664, Edward Wright.

Children of Nathaniel.

i. Elizabeth, b. Mar. 1, 1653; d. Feb., 1659.
iii. Patience, b. 1658.

(4.) John² (Thomas¹), probably deceased before 1681, unmarried, since his brother Thomas, who seems to have been mindful of all his relatives, makes no mention of John or his children, in his will. If this be correct, the male line of this family terminates with Nathaniel (5), of whom nothing further has been learned.

THOMAS RAWLINS, OF BOSTON.

(1.) THOMAS RAWLINS (carpenter), (whose mother was a sister of William Fry, who died at Weymouth, October 26, 1642,)* was residing at Dorchester, 1634, and removed to Weymouth. He was admitted freeman March 3, 1635–6; removed to Boston, where he died about 1670. His widow, Anna, brought into court the inventory of his estate, 28th 3d month, 1670, and was appointed administratrix, the three oldest sons consenting thereto.* July 25, 1677, in consideration of a certain sum to be paid to her annually during her natural life, she conveyed to her son, Joshua, land near the North End Meeting House (Mather's 2d Congregational). She died in Boston, about 1691; will proved April 29, 1692.

HENRY ROLLINS, OF PENNSYLVANIA.

(i.) Henry Rollins, a native of Antrim County, in the north of Ireland (of English descent), married Mary Carson, an orphan girl who was born in Stewartstown, on Lough Neagh, County of Tyrone. He emigrated to America, 1768; settled in Eastern Pennsylvania, not far from the battle ground of Brandywine, and served in the American ranks at the battle of Brandywine. He removed in 1777 or 1778 to Westmoreland County, near the present town of Greensburg. He was drowned in the Youhiogeny river, near Elizabethtown, 1812. His brother John and a sister remained in Ireland; his brothers Benjamin, Anthony, George and James emigrated with him to Pennsylvania. Benjamin's subsequent history is unknown; George settled in Canada; Anthony died, 1827, in Westmoreland Co., without family, at the age of 92 to 100 years; James was killed by the falling of a tree in Westmoreland County, leaving no family.

Children of Henry and Mary (Carson) Rollins.

HON. JAMES S. ROLLINS³ (Anthony W.², Henry¹), res. Boone Co., Mo., which county he represented in the Missouri Senate, 1846. He was a candidate of the Whig party for the gubernatorial chair, 1848; a member of the visiting committee of West Point Military Academy, 1850; candidate of the Free State party for Governor of Mo., 1857; member of the U. S. House of Representatives, 1860, and in 1867 one of the Directors, on the part of the United States, of the Pacific R. R.

He graduated from the State University of Bloomington, Indiana, about 1832, and has always taken a deep interest in the cause of education. While a member of the State Senate of Missouri he was the author and earnest advocate of a bill to establish a State University in Missouri, and was among the largest contributors towards its establishment, and has been for a long time one of the Curators and President of that body. His views in regard to education of the people will be best shown in his own words, copied from a speech delivered before the Congressional Convention held in St. Louis, 1873:

"There is another kind of internal improvement—better, indeed, than all these—higher, nobler, and following which, everything else will come, and without which, other improvements will not exist; or, if it be possible that they should, will be of little value, or even prove a curse. I mean the culture and improvement of the people themselves. The people are more than all their works and all their possessions. If we look merely at production and exchange, there is not a political economist who does not make intelligence among the people a prime element of both. The great movement of the present day is for higher instruction, for the application of science to the arts of life, as well as for a more complete system of public education. It is science in the various arts of life which has done so much for our age, which has wrought these miracles of progress, and advanced our American civilization itself, and carried it over the continent. But we may look for yet higher and more splendid achievements. Harvard is worth more to Massachusetts than Hoosac; her University is more to Michigan than her Central Railroad. Our schools of engineering, of mining, of agriculture, of mechanics,—a recent product of our country, we must sustain and build up, and enlarge and perfect. This is the true "civil reform" for our industries of every kind. And we must also have a school system which should reach every neighborhood, and embrace the whole people, free to all,—free as the air we breathe, and as the sunlight of heaven.

Here in this presence, and with all deference, I wish to say, and I hope it will not be regarded out of place to say—and rather indeed, as pertinent to the very objects of the occasion to say—that I would devote every acre of our unsold public domain (saving the rights of the pre-emptioner and of the homestead) to the education of the people, who are to be its future inhabitants. Every dollar from the public lands, were my voice sufficiently potential (with the reservations above made) should go in the most direct manner to the education of the present and future generations of men and women who are to inhabit these lands. There can be, in my judgement, no true statesmanship which ignores and passes by the education of the people. We must in our own land build up those schools which so many American youth go to other lands to find. Two townships of land to a State for higher education, and a thirty-sixth part of it for common schools, is not up to the standard of present times. Nothing short of the whole of it, to constitute a perpetual trust fund, to be held by the United States Government, and for the benefit of education in the States, will meet the expectation of this enlightened day. The form in which a bill to this effect by so large a majority passed in its essential features both Houses of Congress, and only failed to become a law by one of those parliamentary accidents which sometimes occur, will wisely meet the great educational demand of our enlightened people. But on this topic I have dwelt too long, because I regard the people themselves as the State, the nation, and embracing all other possibilities and developments; and because I regard a single scientific man, such as Lesseps, who carried forward to completion the Suez Canal, a man who possessed both science and practice, as worth more to society than any material constructions whatever. The man who, by his genius and his energy, spans by a splendid bridge this great river, is worth far more to the State and to society, than his superstructure, however useful, or elegant or magnificent, or costly it may be."

But it is not in educational affairs alone that Mr. Rollins has taken interest. All matters pertaining to the advancement and improvement of his adopted State, have ever received his cordial support. It is for this reason that his fellow-citizens of his county and district have many times called him from ease and grateful retirement to represent them in places of honor and trust, and for which twice they endeavored to elect him to the office of Governor. A slaveholder, he readily saw the superior condition and prosperity attendant upon free labor, and earnestly desired that steps might be taken in Missouri towards the gradu-ral extinction of the system of slavery in that State. In the canvas of 1857 he was warmly supported by Col. Benton, who wrote as follows to a friend after giving an account of a railroad accident by which he was injured:

"I have still time to think of Missouri, and of the Governor's election, and to wish success to Rollins. The welfare of the State requires it. We want a real Missouri-hearted man at the head of the State—one who will make her interests a paramount consideration, and especially what concerns the great Pacific Railroad. That object is now sacrificed to the Southern route, and none but true hearted Missourians can redeem it. No nullifier can be trusted in that business. It is a shame to see how Missouri has been sacrificed in this, and how apathetic the people have become in what concerns them so nearly; a nullifier need not call himself a Democrat to me.
I go by Jackson's proclamation, and consider the nullifiers as the authors of all the mischief which now afflict the country, and the end of which is not yet. The present dangerous condition of the Union finds its origin in those nullification and fire brand resolutions, which, originating in the U. S. Senate, and driven out of that place, found refuge in some State Legislatures—among others, in ours. Rollins was against those treacherous resolutions, and being a gentleman in his deportment, a patriot in his principles, and a Missourian in his heart, I wish him success."

But he was too far in advance of his times, and his opponent, Stewart, the representative of the extreme pro-slavery party, was declared elected, though there is but little doubt his success was due in part, to fraudulent voting in some of the counties.

The contest was a close one, however, so close as to lead to the report of Rollins' election, and to draw out the real sentiments of the slavery propagandists in various quarters.

The Richmond South, under the caption of the "Beginning of the End," expressed itself as follows:

"We regard the election of Rollins to be the most serious blow which has been given to the Southern cause since the formation of the Federal Union. The question of the perpetuity of African slavery in the State of Missouri has been thereby determined. It is now no longer debatable. A considerable majority of the people are violently opposed to the system, and it cannot long survive the terrible shock of an adverse public sentiment. There is no danger of immediate and unconditional abolition. That is decided to be impracticable. But that a plan of gradual eman-pication will be proposed and adopted by the next legislature, there is little room to doubt. To the other States of the South the effect in either case is the same."

The South then goes on to say that in the present condition of things in the slaveholding States, "not to advance is to recede." They have already lost their equality of political power, and their influence in the Senate is fast diminishing—a state of things against which they have for some time been consciously struggling.

"Now, however," says the writer, "an entirely new phase is given to the future of Southern development. Missouri surrendered to the anti-slavery power, the question of the further extension of our system in the present limits of the Union, is absorbed in anxiety for the safety of the institution in many of the States where it now holds a precarious existence. The tide of Southern advancement will have commenced to ebb; Kentucky will most probably soon follow in the wake of Missouri, and Maryland and Delaware will not be far behind. The anticipated revolution does not end here. Virginia, too, is claimed as an easy prey by the leaders of this abolition movement, under the guise of free labor coloniza-

Far better would it have been for Missouri had she listened to the conservative sentiments of her own best friends, and far better for the South as well as the Union, had not the counsels been followed, of the ambitious leaders and politicians of the South, who had determined to "rule or ruin."

Mr. Rollins res. Columbia, Boone Co., Mo.; married Mary E. Hickman, of Kentucky, and has three children, one of whom, James H., is Captain in the U. S. Army, now in command of the U. S. Arsenal at Augusta, Ga.; Mary and Flora.

Lot served for a short time in the Delaware Militia in the war of 1812. He was a merchant during the greater part of his life. Commencing business on the very limited capital of fifty dollars, he was successful in amassing quite a fortune, owning at the time of his death more than 2000 acres of land, nearly the whole of the town of Middleford, Delaware, and the Merchant Mills, situated at the head of tide water on the Nanticoke River. He was an eccentric, but a very kind man, and was noted for a singular impediment of speech. From this reason, and from his peculiar eccentricity, many amusing anecdotes are related of him. He died at Middleford, Feb. 7, 1861, æt. 74. Mr. R. was a strictly moral man, was never known to utter an oath, drank no spirituous liquors, and never used tobacco in any form. Though his father was a good musician, Lot could neither sing nor whistle, nor distinguish one tune from another. He never wore a pair of boots, and never visited as a visitor, but he always enjoyed company at his own house. He was a slaveholder, owning several slaves, but made them all free at his death.

(1.) Robert Rawlings seems to have been interested in some way in the early settlement of Maryland. In 1649, he and a Capt. Ingle had filed information or charges against Lord Baltimore, and was ordered to appear before the Committee of the Admiralty, to be heard Dec. 28, 1649.*

(2.) Col. Moses Rawlins, commander of a regiment of Maryland riflemen during a part of the Revolutionary war, distinguished himself at the defense of Fort Washington, Nov. 16, 1776, and was mentioned in terms of special commendation by General Washington on that unfortunate occasion.† At the commencement of the attack, Rawlins was stationed with his regiment at Fort Tryon, on the high ground at the north of Fort Washington, and defended it gallantly against great odds, keeping the left column of the Hessians and Waldekers, under Gen. Kniphausen, completely at bay, until their rifles had become so foul from incessant firing, that they were compelled to give way, retiring in safety to Fort Washington, under cover of its guns. This latter post was surrendered after an obstinate resistance by its commander, Col. Magaw, and about 2800 Americans were taken prisoners of war.‡ Rawlins remained a prisoner for some time, but after he was exchanged he was attempting (1779) to raise another regiment, and was subsequently detailed on various duties by General Washington.†

The fourth son, Gen. John A. Rawlins, late Secretary of War, married at Galena, Illinois, Miss Emily Smith, of Goshen, N. Y., June 5, 1856, who dec'd Aug. 30, 1861, leaving one son and two daughters. In 1863 he married Miss Mary E. Hurlburt, daughter of S. A. Hurlburt, Esq., of Danbury, Ct. Two children were the fruit of this marriage, both of whom died young. The subjoined tribute to her, as well as to Gen. Rawlins, is extracted from a Southern paper:

"During the war she resided at Vicksburg, in the family of Mr. Lum, a prominent citizen of that place. She was greatly admired and respected by all the Confederate officers, who were visitors at the house. Pleasant and winning in manner, the charms of her society and her manifold courtesies and kindness to all of them, will be remembered by those who were cheered by her kindness and elegant hospitality. Among the throng of her admirers was a brave young officer belonging to Withers' battalion of Artillery, Confederate States Army, who awakened a deeper feeling than friendship in her who was doomed to hear of his death out on the lines shortly afterward, during the last memorable siege. When Gen. Grant, with the late Gen. Rawlins as Chief of Staff, entered Vicksburg, Mr. Lum's house was occupied. Here it was she met her late husband, who, touched by her great worth and charming qualities, subsequently offered himself and was accepted. All the Southern officers who were at Vicksburg will bear testimony to the undeviating courtesy of Gen. Rawlins in his intercourse with them, and his afflicted widow will now have their heartiest sympathy in her great bereavement."

Gen. Rawlins died at Washington, Sept. 6, 1869. The following sketch of his life is derived from the pens of those who knew him most intimately, published soon after his decease in the Galena papers, and from the funeral discourse of Rev. Mr. Jewett, preached at Galena, Sept. 19; brief, and more condensed than it would otherwise be, were it not that a more elaborate memoir of his life and services is said to be in course of preparation:

When General Rawlins was but a boy, his father removed from East Galena to Guilford, six or seven miles from Galena, where he engaged in farming and burning charcoal. In his younger days, the son had but limited opportunities for obtaining an education, attending school but a few weeks during each winter. His father sold his charcoal in Galena, which the boy took to market with an ox-team. It was while following this occupation that he became known as the "Charcoal Boy," a name by which his Democratic friends often called him, when alluding to his eloquent speeches in the campaign for Douglas against Lincoln, in 1860. At the age of twenty years, he began to bend his energies to the one object of obtaining an education. For three years thereafter he attended school, a part of the time at the district school house, and the remainder at Mt. Morris Seminary. In November, 1854, when twenty-three years of age, he entered the law office of J. P. Stevens, Esq., of Galena, and was admitted to the bar in 1855. He at once commenced the practice of his profession in partnership with Mr. Stevens. In 1856, the partnership was dissolved, and the business conducted by Rawlins till 1858, when David Sheean, Esq., became his partner. This firm continued till Rawlins entered the service. He won a high standing in his profession, and, being a leading Democrat of the Douglas school, he was nominated by his party as a candidate for elector on the Douglas ticket in 1860. Judge Allen C. Fuller, of eminent ability, and much superior in years to Rawlins, was his successful opponent, and the two held joint discussions in every county in the district. It was soon conceded by both parties that Judge Fuller had found a foeman "worthy of his steel."

Having exerted his best efforts, as he viewed it, to avert the war, when it came, he knew no party but his country. On receipt of the news of the first Bull Run disaster, a public meeting was held in the Court House, to devise means to raise a regiment of volunteers. He addressed this meeting in an earnest and eloquent speech, favoring the raising of volunteers, and putting down the rebellion. Richardson, in his biography of Grant, thus describes the speech: "Amid loud cheering, Washburn took his seat. Then on every side arose the cry, 'Rawlins,' 'Rawlins!' The slender, erect young lawyer elbowed his way through the dense throng, up to the little open space on the platform, where his pale face, coal black hair, and flashing eyes could be seen by the entire audience. He spoke in a deep, rich voice, which would have filled a hall ten times as large. For three-quarters of an hour, amid the profoundest silence, he reviewed the past; the real or fancied wrong of the slaveholders; the good faith in which the Northern Democracy had fought their battles under the Constitution; the blood and toil expended in the founding and defending of the Republic; the cheerfulness with which minorities, heretofore out-voted, had submitted to the will of the majority—as on the Missouri Compromise, the Mexican war, and the Kansas-Nebraska bill. That was the American way—to trust the future—the good sense, justice, and sober second thought of the people. Warming with his subject, he made a most cogent and stirring argument. Finally, his voice filling every corner of the old Court House, and ringing out like a trumpet over the narrow and winding streets, and sharp hills, he rose to his climax: 'I have been a Democrat all my life, but this is no longer a question of politics. The question is simply country or no country. I have favored every honorable compromise, but the day of compromise is past. Only one course is left for us. We will stand by the flag of our country, and appeal to the God of Battles!'

The effect was electric; the audience sprang to their feet, and gave cheer after cheer for the old flag, for Maj. Anderson, and for the maintenance of the Union at whatever cost. Captain Grant was present. Though he had known Rawlins as the attorney for the leather house, he had no intimate acquaintance with him; but this speech so thoroughly expressed his own feelings, that from that hour his heart went out to the young orator."
Rawlins immediately entered energetically, with John E. Smith and J. A. Maltby, (now Generals Smith and Maltby) upon the work of raising the "Lead Mine Regiment," or 45th Illinois volunteers. While engaged in this work of patriotism, he received, unsolicited, the offer of a position on the staff of General Grant, then Brigadier General, commanding a small army at Cairo. The position was at once accepted. Just then, the dangerous illness of his wife, who had suffered some time from consumption, summoned him to her bed-side, at the home of her father, Mr. Hiram Smith, of Goshen, N. Y. Here he remained until death released her from her sufferings, on the 30th of August. With this cloud of sorrow resting upon him, he made arrangements for the care of his three motherless children, the eldest of which was in his fifth year, and joined General Grant at Cairo, on the 15th September, 1861. With characteristic energy he entered upon the duties of his position as Adjutant General, having the rank of captain, and, with the exception of two months in the summer of 1864, during which, ill health compelled his absence, he was with General Grant in all his battles and campaigns until the close of the war. He developed rare executive ability, and fulfilled the duties of his position with conscientious fidelity. He won the warmest regard and fullest confidence of his chief, and commanded the respect of all who came in contact with him. He was advanced in rank, from time to time, until he was appointed chief of staff to the Lieutenant General commanding, with the rank of Brigadier General in the United States army; and later was brevetted Major General. The esteem in which he was held by General Grant is indicated by his language when writing to Senator Wilson, to secure the confirmation of Rawlins as a Brigadier General. "General Rawlins has served with me from the beginning of this rebellion. I know he has most richly earned his present position. He comes the nearest being indispensable to me, of any officer in the service. But if his confirmation is dependent on his commanding troops, he shall command troops at once. There is no department commander near where he has served, who would not most gladly give him the largest and most responsible command to which his rank would entitle him. * * * If he fails to be confirmed; beside the loss it will be to the service, and to me personally, I shall feel that by keeping with me a valuable officer, because he made himself valuable, I have done him an injury."

When the war had closed, General Rawlins returned to Galena, and, at the request of a large number of citizens, he addressed the people on the political questions of the day in an able speech, which showed him to be possessed of those qualities of mind and heart which make the enlightened statesman. When General Grant was elected President, he once more summoned to his counsels his tried and trusted friend, and appointed him to a place in his Cabinet, as Secretary of War. He brought to the discharge of his duties in that high position the singular fidelity and executive power which had hitherto marked his career, and the few brief months of his administration in the office, fully justified the wisdom of his appointment. He won the highest respect of all with whom he became acquainted in his official position.

In the character of General Rawlins, we find much that is worthy of imitation. "He was a dutiful son, a faithful and generous friend, a true hearted patriot, an upright statesman, a brave soldier. Methodical and systematic in the arrangement of all the details of his office," he knew at all times where everything and everybody should be, and no proper question could be asked him that he could not answer in the fewest and clearest words possible. Nor did his knowledge of details, at all disturb his judgment as to great operations. The success with which he attended to all things, was somewhat remarkable. He was never fussy, never quarrelsome, rarely out of humor, and never so when on the post of duty. Hence the attachment of the numerous officers with whom he came in contact, who loved him as a brother. His energy and earnestness are well exhibited in the pursuit of knowledge amid the discouragements and disadvantages of early poverty, and his unyielding firmness is also seen in his holding on to a patriotic purpose, when great family affliction might have seemed to many an excuse for its surrender; and in constant fidelity amid the exposure of camp and battlefield, when declining health would have driven many to the rest and quiet of home. Possessed of the strictest integrity, he was never known to use for his personal advantage any position of influence which he held; and seems to have been actuated by the one determination to perform his duty to his country, and to do it well. He was, moreover, a modest man. In his visits to Galena, after the close of the war, his pleasure was derived from passing his time quietly with his old associates, and his parents at Guilford. He refused public receptions and avoided display; choosing rather to sit quietly down with a circle of old friends; and in his last illness, when asked by General Smith, whether he had any wish to express in regard to the disposition of his remains, in case he should die, he said he should leave that with his friends, but that he did not desire an ostentatious or expensive funeral.

The country felt otherwise on this point. The Capital of the nation, in whose service he died, was shrouded in mourning; imposing funeral ceremonies were held, and a vast procession, including many of the most eminent citizens of the land, followed his remains to their resting place in the Congressional Cemetery at Washington. Military honors closed the ceremonies. The members of the press throughout the country, of both political parties, vie with each other in eulogy of his strict integrity of purpose, his honest patriotism and true valor, and a fine equestrian statue has been erected to his memory, located in Rawlins Square, Washington, D. C.

A just and beautiful appreciation of the key note of Gen. Rawlins' military life was given by an unknown party of three ladies and a gentleman, who visited the War Department while his remains were lying there in state. They placed beside him a large and beautiful bouquet of evergreens and flowers arranged in the form of a star, and with it a card, upon which was written in a lady's handwriting, this inscription: "On this altar of greatest sacrifice for our country's good, the Lone Star State offers her emblem, as incense to renewed fraternal love."

His life was honorable, and (in the language of his pastor, from whom I have quoted so freely,) he died as a brave man should—not thoughtlessly—not reckless of the dread solemnities that were breaking upon him, but calmly, hopefully, triumphantly—because sheltered from the battle storm by the "Rock of Ages."

JOHN RAWLINS dec'd June 5, 1719, in the 84th year of his age; buried in the Cambridge burial ground. He is presumed to be the Huguenot. Of the French Protestants who fled from persecution at home, after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and sought refuge in the Western world, some went to Virginia, some to Carolina, others settled at New Rochelle, N. Y.; and a colony of about thirty families assisted in their escape by Gov. Dudley, settled at Oxford, Worcester Co., Mass. Their settlement at Oxford was broken up by an inroad of the Indians, in 1696, and they removed to Boston. During their residence at Oxford, Jean Railling, sometimes written Rawling, was one of the elders of the church; and, after their removal to Boston, appears to have been a teacher, as the Rev. P. Daille, their first clergyman in Boston, calls him, in his will, John Rawlins, the French schoolmaster.

RICHARD RAWLINS, a plasterer, resided in Boston; was admitted freeman Mar. 10, 1643. His property consisted of a house and garden, about one and three-quarter acres on "North Square, extending into the Cove," and bounded on the S. W. by Isaac Collamore; on the N. E. by Thomas Joy; on the S. E. by Mr. Clark, and on the N. W. by Christopher Stanley; purchased by him in 1638, of Peter Johnson, the Dutchman.§

He was admitted to the church 18th of 1st month, 1642; his wife, Mary, was admitted to church 8th of 8th month, 1641.§

ROBERT RAWLINS, of “Eamsbery” (Amesbury), took ye oath of allegiance and fidelity before Maj. Robert Pike, ye 20th day of Dec., 1677. In 1680 he was “one of ye soildierye of ye training band,” and one of the petitioners to the General Court for the appointment of Samuel Foot as their lieutenant.|| Gerard Hadden, of Amesbury, was one of these petitioners, and in his will, Jan. 29, 1686–7, mentions his granddaughter, Mary Rawlins. I have been unable to trace any descendants of this Robert, and have learned nothing further of him except that his name served probably as the subject of Whittier’s beautiful poem, The Ranger, which illustrates so admirably the perils of those early days in the New England settlements, and the joy felt by families on the return of relatives from the dangerous expeditions in which for a long series of years they were continually engaged.

1669. Sarah Rawlins and Joshua Holsworth, of Lynn, married May 10.
1689. Nicholas, Mercy, Hannah and Elizabeth Rawlins, baptized at the Old

LAND-POOR.

I've had another offer wife—a twenty acres more,
Of high and dry prairie land, as level as a floor.
I thought I'd wait and see you first, as Lawyer Brady said,
To tell how things will turn out best, a woman is ahead.
And when this lot is paid for, and we have got the deed,
I'll say that I am satisfied—it's all the land we need;
And next we'll see about the yard, and fix the house up some,
And manage in the course of time to have a better home.

REPLY.

There is no use of talking, Charles—you buy that twenty more,
And we'll go scrimping all our lives, and always be Land-poor.
For thirty years we've tugged and saved, denying half our needs,
While all we have to show for it is tax receipts and deeds!
I'd sell the land if it were mine, and have a better home,
With broad, light rooms to front the street, and take life as it comes.
If we could live as others live, and have what others do,
We'd live enough sight pleasanter, and have a plenty, too.

While others have amusements, and luxury and books,
Just think how stingy we have lived, and how this old place looks!
That other farm you bought of Wells, that took so many years
Of clearing up and fencing in, has cost me many tears.
Yes, Charles, I've thought of it a hundred times or more,
And wondered if it really paid, to always be Land-poor;
That had we built a cosy house, took pleasure as it come,
Our children, once so dear to us, had never left our home.

I grieve to think of wasted weeks and years, and months and days,
While for it all, we never yet have had one word of praise.
Men call us rich, but we are poor—would we not freely give
The land with all its fixtures, for a better way to live?
Don't think I'm blaming you, Charles—you're not a whit to blame;
I've pitied you these many years, to see you tired and lame.
It's just the way we started out, and planned too far ahead;
We've worn the cream of life away, to leave too much when dead.

This life is short and full of care, the end is always nigh,
We seldom half begin to live before we're doom'd to die,
Were I to start my life again, I'd mark each separate day,
And never let a single one pass unenjoyed away.
If there were things to envy, I'd have them now and then,
And have a home that was a home, and not a cage or pen.
I'd sell some land if it were mine, and fit up well the rest;
I've always thought, and think so yet—small farms well worked are best!

RUFUS RAWLIN'S RIDE.

BY EUGENE J. HALL.

Thru Goshen Holler, whare hemlock grow,
Whare the ripplin rills with a rush an' flow
Are over the rude rocks fallin';
Whare fox an' bear an' catamount hide
In their holes an' caves in the mountain side,
A circuit preacher once used to ride,
An' his name was Rufus Rawlin.

He was set in his ways, an' what was strange,
If you argued with him he wouldn't change;
You could'nt git nothin thru him.
Solemn an' slow in style was he;
Slender and slim as a tamarack tree,
An' allus ready to disagree
With everybody that knew him.

One night, he saddled his sorrel mare,
An' started over to Ripton, whare
He'd promis'd to du some preachin;
Away he cantered over the hill,
Past the school-house at Capen's Mill;
The moon was down, an' the evenin' still,
Save the sound o' a night hawk screechin'.

At last he cum to a dark ravine—
A feelin' kind o' queer, and mean
Sensation stealin' o'er him,
Old sorrel began to travel slow,
Then gin a snort an' refused to go;
The parson clucked, an' he hollered "Whoa!"
An' wondered what was afore him.

Then, all o' a sudden, he seemed to hear
A gurglin' groan, so very near
That it scattered his senses, nearly;
"Go'ome! Go'ome!"—it loudly cried;
"Go'ome!" re-echoed the mountain side;
"Go'ome." away in the distance died,
'An he wished he was home, sincerely.

An' then, afore his terrified sight,
A light gleamed out in starless night,
That seemed to beat all creation.
Then thru the bushes a figger stole,
With eyes o' fire, an' lips o' coal,
That tingled the parson's righteous soul,
An' filled him with consternation.
Into the streets o' Goshen town
The terrified parson cum ridin' down,
   In a fearful sort o' a flutter;
Swift as a strong September gale,
With his cloak a-streamin' like Sorrel's tail;
With his eyes wide open, an' features pale
An' whiter than winter butter.

He told the neighbors that he had seen
A fiend o' fire in Huff's Ravine,
   That had driven him back to Goshen;
He told of its deep and dreadful groans,
Of its doleful cries an' dismal moans,
Of its flamin' eyes an' rattlin' bones;
   An' it got up a great commotion.

An' stranger, it is many a day
Since Rufus Rawlin was laid away
   In the grave yard over yonder.
I was a boy in those glad hours,
As full o' my fun as the spring with showers;
'Twas me an' a son o' Jacob Powers
   That got up all the wonder.

We took a punkin o' common size,
An' cuttin' some holes for the mouth an' eyes,
   We gin it the right expression;
Then hollered it out till its shell was thin,
An' puttin' a tallow dip within,
It looked as ugly an' mean as sin—
   'Twould a scared a hull procession.

The night was dark as ever was seen,
An' nothin' was heard in Huff's Ravine
   But the sound o' the water flowin';
The parson come, in a quiet way,
A-smokin' his old brown pipe o' clay,
A-thinkin' o' what he was goin' to say
   When he got to whare he was goin'.

An' the fiend he saw, an' the rattling bones,
Were a punkin', a gourd, an' some gravel stones
   That gin him all o' the glory.
Yet, never again up the mountain side,
In the night, would Rufus Rawlin ride;
An' many a time I've laughed till I cried
   To hear him tell the story.

The scene of the above adventure is laid in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Rev. Rufus Rawlins may be a myth, but, as he was "set in his ways," we will consider him a member of the family.
