PREFACE

The writing of a family genealogy, regardless of the dedication of the compiler, is ever a precarious task since there is the ever-present possibility of error. The spelling of names and the citing of dates are fertile fields for mistakes. This work has been in process over a number of years and it has been worked and reworked with the fervent hope of exactness. It is a record of a typical American family, a theme worthy of one's best efforts.

The gratitude of the members of the Deacon Family Association, founded August 20, 1955, is given to all who have participated in furnishing the data here presented. Friends and kinsmen, far and near, have had a share in making the project highly successful. It would have been impossible without their assistance. The compiler would express his appreciation of the co-operation he has received and the patience shown by his insistence upon exactness as far as possible.

To accomplish the task, an extensive correspondence has been conducted without secretarial help, research has been done in the Library of Congress, other libraries, and among the records in the Rockbridge County Court House, and hours have been spent in checking and rechecking the material. Conferences were held with any who could give data and many, many volumes were mined for just a small bit of precious ore.

It was the co-operation of Mr. Frank M. Deacon, of Huntington, West Va., in making possible the issuance of the forty-two paged mimeographed brochure on the family genealogy, as we then had it, that this volume was able to become a reality. It was Mrs. Diehl, daughter of Mary Deacon Shafer, who provided much family information, gave directives when the lines became confused, and inspired the continuation of the effort when the way became most discouraging. It was the fine stenographic service of two members of the family, Miss Mary Frances Hall and her sister Mrs. Eugene W. Paxton, Jr., (nee Ida Marie Hall) that brought the work to its completion. This phase of the production of the book was most exacting, nerve-racking, and consumed many hours of 'after-work' time. To all these, I extend my deep personal appreciation and gratitude.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT

Certainly everyone at some period in his life has wondered about those who preceded him, and, with some, what the name of their grandfather could be. This interest in our ancestors certainly is a healthy matter and pride in one’s lineage encourages a finer life on our part.

With me this interest prompted the asking of many questions. Many of the answers were hazy and led to additional questions. In asking my uncle about my great-great grandfather he thought his name was “Billy”, but he couldn’t tell anything else.

In telling cousin Palmer Deacon about this he said the name was correct and he had been told by his cousin John Deacon that William Deacon was buried in a certain spot on a hillside on North Buffalo. He also advised that Dr. George West Diehl would be able to give added information to my inquiry.

This initiated correspondence with Dr. Diehl, who replied indicating great interest and invited my father and me to visit with him. The visit resulted in plans to inaugurate a family reunion in the following summer. The plans were those of Dr. Diehl as well as the valuable suggestions.

The first reunion was held in Lexington at the Virginia Cafe on August 20, 1955, with fifty in attendance. Officers were elected and the Deacon Family Association was formed.

This meeting, and each subsequent meeting, through the interest and untiring efforts on the part of Dr. and Mrs. Diehl, has increased the knowledge of the family and its many branches. The awareness of the annual meeting has served to bring members of the family from distant parts of the nation. It has become the focal point of the Association and has afforded the only opportunity in most cases to visit with each other from one year to the next.

The publication of The Deacons of Virginia is a high point in the life of the Association. It has been helped through the efforts of many, but could have come into existence only with the devoted service of Dr. George West Diehl.

Dr. Diehl, a native of Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, the compiler of the data presented in this work, received his education in Hampden-Sydney College, Washington and Lee University, University of Richmond, Columbia University, and the University of Chicago; his divinity work was done in Union Theological Seminary in Virginia. He did graduate work in American University's Thirteenth Institute on Genealogical Research.

Upon graduation from the Seminary, Dr. Diehl was engaged in educational work—Principal, Grundy (Va.) Presbyterian School; Superintendent of Schools, Carter Coal Co., Coalwood, W. Va.; President, Concord State College, Athens, W. Va.; President, Morris Harvey College, Barboursville, W. Va. In 1932, he became pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Corpus Christi, Texas, which he served for nearly eighteen years and from the pastorate of which he resigned in 1949.

Returning that year to Rockbridge County, Virginia, he accepted the pastorate of Oxford Presbyterian Church, founded in 1758, which he held until December 7, 1962, when the age limit for Presbyterian pastors automatically declared the pulpit vacant. Since then he has continued to serve the church as the immediate past-pastor.

While a student at Washington & Lee University, he met Iva Carruth Shafer, daughter of John Alexander Shafer and his wife, Mary Elizabeth Deacon, and they were married in the bride's home, September 3, 1917, by the Rev. Emmett W. McCorkle, D. D. This home, now "Dundee Plantation", is the home of the Diehls.

Dr. Diehl is a member of all branches of Masonry and is an Elk. Besides holding membership in numerous honorary societies, he is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Society of American Archivists, the National Genealogical Society, and the Virginia Genealogical Society. He is an active member of Lexington Presbytery, Presbyterian Church, U. S.

We take great pride in the honors given to Dr. Diehl by the Society of American Archivists, the National Genealogical Society, and the Virginia Genealogical Society. These attest to the worth of the genealogical detail and facts of this book.

It is our hope that the membership of the Deacon Family Association may be expanded. Also, that the many descendants of William Deacon and the members of the collateral lines will join with us in the annual reunion at Mount Horeb Methodist Church on North Buffalo, Lexington, Virginia.

William Deacon Descendants Enjoy Meeting and Dinner Sat.

August 20, 1955

At a meeting of the descendants of William Deacon (1781-1854) held last Saturday in the dining room of the Virginia Cafe, Frank M. Deacon, of Huntington, W. Va., was elected president of the newly formed Deacon Family Association. The new secretary-treasurer is Mrs. Iva Shafer Diehl and the family historian is Mrs. Rose Deacon Goodbar.

After luncheon with Frank M. Deacon serving as the chairman, the presentation of the purposes for the gathering of the group was given and about fifty were present. Descendants and their wives or husbands. Mr. Deacon then presented Dr. George West Dahl, pastor of Oxford Presbyterian Church, who gave an address on "The Deacons of Virginia." In the course of his talk, Dr. Dahl gave the marriage connections of the founder through his three marriages, the Leech, the Crawford, and the Peet, following it with the founder's will and its provisions. He closed his talk with a statement of the widespread family lines reaching into the Ohio valley, into Texas, and to the far West.

After adjourning the luncheon meeting, the group, joined by many of the local family connections who had been unable to attend the noon meeting, met in the old Deacon cemetery at the foot of Camp Mountain on North Buffalo. Rev. R. O. Hipes, pastor of Mr. Horeb Methodist Church, in the community, gave the invocation. A beautiful granite marker, suitably engraved, was placed on the unmarked grave of William Deacon, the founder, and the donor, Frank M. Deacon, made a presentation of it to the group. Harry L. Deacon, owner of the old homestead of which the cemetery was a part, received it in custody for the association. Dr. Dahl offered the concluding prayer.
INTRODUCTION

European Background of the Deacon Clan

When William of Normandy, soon to be known as William the Conqueror, rallied his nobles and assembled his army for the invasion of England, he had the flower of chivalry. Among his nobles was one named Sieur Baldwin who came from the ancient town of Acquigny, in Normandy. He was known as Sieur Baldwin de Acquigny. The word 'sieur' was a French term of respect, a contraction of 'monsieur', a stronger salutation than the modern English 'mister.' This indicates that he had already achieved a ranking among his peers, perhaps a position won by valor as a soldier under his beloved William or Normandy.

In the battle of Senlac, also known as Hastings, fought October 14, 1066, Harold, King of England, was mortally wounded and William won the English crown for which he held himself a lawful aspirant. The conquest of the domain was accomplished and the Norman leaders were rewarded with land. Sieur Baldwin de Acquigny received estates in Bedford and Buckingham and the village that grew up on his property was given his name. Here a church, dedicated to St. Martin, the patron saint of soldiers, was built, as a penance or an act of devotion, by him or by one of his sons. The connection of the family with the church was so close that they had the right of presentation, the privilege of naming the minister through the bishop.

From this place the Deacon family spread. The assumption that the family name was derived from the sacerdotal office, or church-order, is an error. In different localities, where the name was written according to the pronunciation, it underwent many changes—thirty-one variations have been noted. De Akeny, Dakeney, Dyckon, Deacon, Dakyns, Dicons, Dawkins, and Deacon are a few. But, even Shakespeare spelled his name in sixteen different ways. The name of Sieur Baldwin de Acquigny is inscribed in the Roll of the Normans, in Battle Abbey at Hastings, where the battle was fought, and in La Crispin's Norman Rolls.

There was no really settled spelling of proper names until the middle of the Eighteenth Century and, even then, the variation in spelling persisted upon the frontier. The names were spelled phonetically—just as they sounded to the human ear. Due to traits of pronunciation, such as the gutteral German and the labial French, the habits of talking, and the localisms, the same name might have many different spellings. Such conditions made for great diversity in spelling family names.

The coat-of-arms, bestowed by William the Conqueror upon Sieur Baldwin de Acquigny, in 1066, is described in heraldic terms as —AZ, a cross argent, between four lions—or. There was neither crest nor motto given at that time. Later the shield was—argent (silver) a cross between four lions. In heraldry, silver on the shield symbolized purity, eloquence, and innocence; red symbolized danger, war, courage, love of combat and adventure. There were two shades of red on the Deakins coat-of-arms—the regular heraldic red used for the lions and the mantling and the deep, dark red used for the cross of the Crusaders later on.

It may be added further that the helmet, when it was added, was in profile and of steel color. Such an addition to the coat-of-arms was given only to those who actually bore titles. The mantling, already mentioned, was a mantle, or a cloak, worn by a mounted knight; it was suspended from his helmet. As the wearing of iron armour was hot in summer and cold in winter, the mantle was worn for the comfort of the wearer. In combat, the cloth would be slashed and torn by the enemy and thus it became a token of great valor to the bearer. The helmet and mantling on the Deakins coat-of-arms were added during and after the Crusades.

The motto of the clan had a most interesting birth. In days of old when the Norse vikings or sea pirates raided the English coast, it was a practice of these marauders to approach at night in a stealthy manner some farm-home. The hemp-house, located at some distance from the home due to the process of retting the flax, would be set afire and the farm folks would be drawn to the scene of the conflagration, leaving the home unguarded. This made it easy for the raiders to pilfer the house and make their escape. So it was that the cry, "The devil's in the hemp!," became the expression for a dangerous situation.

During the Third Crusade, the crusaders were divided into three armies—the German element was led by Frederick Barbarossa and marched overland to the East; the French, under Phillip II, and the English, under Richard the Lion-Hearted, went to Palestine by sea. For more than two years, the French and English laid siege to the city of Acre—it finally fell in 1191. Once, while engaged in battle with the Saracen defenders, the fight became furious. There were four Deakin brothers, evidently sons of Sieur Baldwin de Acquigny, who fought as a quartet. In this fight, they became separated and hard pressed. One of them, seeing the situation, cried with a loud voice, "Strike, Dakyns, the devil's in the hemp!" The four were rallied by the cry and saved their lives. The call became the motto of the family.

The family, with the passing generations, scattered over England. A Thomas Dyckons, or Decons, for instance, who was a soldier in the wars on the continent, married Alice, daughter of Robert Spencer, of Southmyles and Cople. To them was born a son to whom was given the name of Thomas. The young man won his baccalaureate degree from Oxford University in 1515 and settled at St. Albans, Hertfordshire. His family carried the coat-of-arms of the Deacons of Bedfordshire, showing family connection.

Too, it is interesting to note that, in Hertfordshire and also connected with Bedfordshire, James Deacon died in 1750. He was a talented musician and a miniature painter, producing some works that are now in the British Museum. This gentleman is mentioned to show that the Deacon love for music and ability in the art is evidently bred in the blood.

The first of the name to settle in America was one John Deakins; he died March 9, 1743, at his home which was about twenty miles North of Marlboro, Maryland. His father was an Admiral in the British Navy and a member of the Bedfordshire family. For the purpose of record here, it is well to give this family data. John Deakins was twice married—by his first wife he was the father of five children, namely: Leonard, William, Elizabeth, who married a Hooker, Ann who married a Tanehill, and Mary, who married a Lucas; by his second wife, Priscilla Erickson, he was the father of John, Richard and Joseph.

William Deakins married Tabitha Marbury and settled in Prince George County, Maryland, where their three sons were born—William, Jr., Francis, and Leonard. The last named recruited and equipped, at his own expense, a company of sixty-nine young men from Georgetown and the neighborhood for service in the American Revolution; he was chosen captain. By the time the war ended, he had attained the rank of colonel. The story of this family of Deakins may be found in the history of Georgetown.

When the American Revolution had ended, many of those who had relatives in the colonies decided to migrate to America. Among these was James Deakins, a nephew of John Deakins and a cousin of William, who had married Miss Elizabeth Muse, a member of an illustrious French Huguenot family. Accompanied by their son William, then a lad of about nine years, they landed at Baltimore and were soon received into the homes of their relatives near the growing capital city, Washington.

The Natural Bridge
THE LAND AND THE PEOPLE

The valley of the North Fork of Buffalo Creek is in the south-western section of Rockbridge County, Virginia; the headwaters of the stream are on the slopes of a trinity of mountains—Camp, Panther, and Brushy. The waters flow in a general north direction to join with the South Fork and then with Collier's Creek to form the main Buffalo Creek, which empties into the North Fork of James River, known now as Maury River, at Buffalo Forge. In some of the early documents, the North Fork is called the "Middle Fork of Buffalo," for that is just what it is.

Owing to the fact that the land is rather hilly and quite rough in some areas, it was not taken up by patent by the pioneers as early as were the lush meadows of the valley farther on. The rolling fields at the confluence of the two forks of Buffalo were very choice—they were patented in 1746 by Joseph and Samuel Long, while John Harrison, in the same year, patented only 241 acres on "west end of Short Hill." Too, James Moore came to the valley at this time and patented 400 acres, adding a like acreage to his patent ten years later; the stream on which his land was located, a fork of the North Fork of Buffalo, bears the name of Moore's Creek to this day. Also, Paul Whitley came and took up 400 acres adjacent to Moore, adding 100 more acres in 1763.

So, the valley of the Buffalo began filling up. The wheels of Long's mill were soon turning corn into meal to feed the people and trails were developing into well defined roads. In March, 1753, Joseph Long and James Young were appointed to oversee the construction of a road from the mill of the former to the mill of the latter which was on lower Whistle Creek and then on to the "Great Road" on James Thompson's plantation. As the settlers claimed in their petition for the road, "It is our course to meeting, mill and market." From Joseph Long's mill, too, the road ran southward up the South Fork of Buffalo valley, down Purgatory Creek to join the "Great Road" in the vicinity of Prestonburg, later Buchanan, on the James River.

This road followed an old well-established Indian trail which was undoubtedly a well-marked buffalo-path before the red-men used it. Over it, the early settlers of the upper reaches of the Buffalo and of Collier's Creek maintained contact with adjacent communities. The "Fork of James" Presbyterian Church on Whistle Creek, which served this area spiritually, was later known as Hall's Meeting House. Until the development of Oxford Presbyterian Church, it was the only place for community gatherings that the pioneers knew. Social fellowship, spiritual guidance, intellectual inspiration, and civic consciousness, for these Scotch-Irish pioneers centered around their church.

To maintain the road from Long's mill to the mouth of Whistle Creek, twenty-two tithables were assigned the task by the Court. Some of them had land on Collier's Creek, some had land on the two forks of Buffalo, and some were without property. They were: Robert Young, Samuel Gibson, Solomon Whitley, John Collier, William Hall, Gilbert Crawford, George Gibson, John Ruckman, Thomas Burton, William Waddington, William Brown, James Moore, John Hanna, James Huston, William Todd, James Bats, James Todd, Patrick Young, John Carr, James Campbell, and the two overseers, Joseph Long and James Young.

Some of the original patentees of the land were speculators, such as James Patton and Benjamin Borden, both of whom being landowners in the area. Of course, they held choice lands and were happy to sell it at a profit. Some divided their land among their children in their wills and last testaments and many of the children sold their shares to move to the West. Consequently, there were a number of real-estate transactions in the community during the 1700's and the early years of the next century.

With the close of the American Revolution, there was a great movement of people to new lands. The bounty-lands, acres given to men for their services in the lines of military duty, drew them to settle the North-west Territory, the rolling hills of Kentucky, and the loamy meadows of Tennessee, and the South. Some of these men, passing through the Valley of Virginia, as well as some who were not soldiers, found desirable land along the way. On June 8, 1784, Joseph Kirkham, of Richmond Co., Georgia, sold the 263 acres he and his brother Henry had received from their father by his will, made March 6, 1765; the purchaser was James Crawford. Another heir, Robert Kirkham, had already sold his portion of the estate to Samuel McNabb who was living on the tract at the time he bought it. The date of the deed was Sept. 19, 1779. Both tracts were on North Buffalo.

When James Crawford died, his will was probated on June 7, 1803. He left his property to his two sons, Michael and Thomas. The latter disposed of his half, married Jennie Todd in 1797, and moved on to Kentucky where his wife won fame for the great surgical operation of Dr. Ephraim McDowell. Michael passed his portion of the estate to his three sons and Thomas sold it, Sept. 3, 1805, to James Leech and moved on to Green County, Ohio.

Meanwhile John Crawford had settled on his estate several miles farther on up the valley of North Buffalo. He and his wife Ann had patented it recently—on April 12, 1787. The kinsmanship of John and James Crawford has not been ascertained. Undoubtedly, John Crawford was a son of William Crawford, who appears in Rockbridge County in 1761 when he buys 370 acres “between the first and second runs in the Forks” from Thomas Lewis, the patentee of 1753. This William Crawford made his will on April 10, 1783, and it was probated on the third of the following June. In his will, he makes mention of his wife Mary, his four daughters—Elinor, Isabelle, Mary, and Elizabeth, and his three sons—William, George, and John.

Another name appears about this same time in this section of North Buffalo—a certain John Leech. He had been born in Ireland and came to America in 1748. In Cumberland County, Pa., he met, wooed, and won Martha McComb and, after their marriage on April 18, 1761, they came to Virginia with his sister Agnes and her husband Thomas Lackey. While the Lackeys settled several miles west of the Natural Bridge where Thomas worked at his trade as a wheelwright, the Leeches came west of the Short Hill, to the upper reaches of the Buffalo.

On Sept. 20, 1778, Leech bought 200 acres of land on Buffalo Creek from John Summers and his wife Agnes. Summers had received a grant for 145 acres of land, Aug. 27, 1770, and a year later he secured 98 acres more adjacent to his tract. Then, too, he added further to his holdings by buying land from John Hannah on Oct. 3, 1779, and again on Oct. 3, 1780. In 1756, Hannah had received a grant for 230 acres on Buffalo Creek to add to the 100 acres James Trimble had surveyed for him the year before.

One of the dozen children of John and Martha Leech was an unnamed daughter. When William Deacon, a young man in his teens, came into the frontier community, he met Miss Leech and they were soon married. Their happiness was of brief duration for she died, July 1, 1810, at the time of her son’s birth. For some reason, the child was given to the custody of an individual who was leaving for the West where he was reared, lived and died. Early in 1812, the young widower made Elizabeth Crawford, then only sixteen years of age, his second wife.

Gradually the headwaters of North Buffalo were being occupied by industrious and devout men. After the close of the American Revolution, David McWilliams appeared in Rockbridge and was granted 665 acres “on the waters of Buffalo Creek.” On August 7, 1787, he sold 150 acres of his land to Joseph Pullen and 100 acres to Israel Cowan. Then, on May 28, 1790, he sold James Peel 124 acres “situated on the head springs of Buffalo Creek, a branch of the James River, in Rockbridge County;” in the deed, mention is made of Jameson’s Survey and Jameson’s Corner. With John Houston acting as his attorney, McWilliams sold William Reed the 122 acre tract upon which Reed was already living; it adjoined the lands of Hugh Allen, John Hamilton, Israel Cowan, and James Peel.

Pullen increased his holding on October 1, 1799, by buying eight acres, part of Solomon Whitley’s patent, from Thomas Wilson who had moved to Lincoln County, Kentucky; it cornered on John Wilson’s line. Then, on May 4, 1804, Pullen bought the 176 acre tract of David Kingen and his wife Jane. It lay on the east side of Camp Mountain. Kingen had patented it on November 19, 1798.

About this time William Murphy arrived from Ireland and was soon seated upon the 50 acres he bought from Joseph Pullen and his wife Agnes; it was adjacent on the east to Hugh Allen’s land. Thirteen years later, he bought two more tracts from Pullen—one was the 83 acres on Spring Branch of North Buffalo adjacent to his property and that of James Hall; the other was the eight acres plot which had formerly been a part of the Whitley patent.

To his purchased holdings Murphy added several hundred acres more by patent. Meanwhile he had been joined by his son John and, because of the extensive holdings by the Murphys, the area became known among the local gentry as “Ireland.” This place-name was carried on when James Sandford and his wife Elizabeth Henderson arrived from Londonderry, Ireland, with their little family, about 1832, joining their kinsmen, the Hendersons and the Murphys. On August 18, 1834, Murphy sold Sandford six tracts of land with a total acreage of 418 acres; the price was $1,400. Three of these parcels of land were “The Grants,” tracts which Murphy had patented. One was the 93 acres which formed the Murphy home-place and the other two were Pullen tracts. Neighbors named in the deeds were John Crawford, John Wilson, John Murphy, and the heirs of James Leech.

On May 28, 1790, James Peel and his wife Elizabeth bought 124 acres of land, “situate on the head springs of Buffalo Creek, a branch of James River,” paying thirty pounds for their investment. There was some vacant land adjacent to the purchase and Peel hastened to secure the patent to it. Then, on Oct. 2, 1798, the Peels sold 102 acres of their property to Mary Beers, widow of William Beers, for
The name "Beers" has a few variants in spelling, "Biars" and "Byers" being the others.

For some years, William Deacon (the name is given as "Dickins" and "Dekon" in some of the earlier documents) had been in the community, but it was not until Nov. 23, 1818, that he became a member of the landed gentry of the valley. He was now about thirty-seven years of age and had married "Betsy" Crawford by whom he now was the father of four sons. On the given date he purchased 169-3/4 acres of the Peel land, paying two hundred pounds for it. The deed, made to William Dickins, was for the residue of the Peel land and described it as being bounded by the land bought by Mary Beers on one side and by the "Mountain Survey" on all the other sides. The sale was witnessed by James Gold, John Sloan, William Gold, and James McFarland.

John Hill was granted a patent, April 15, 1791, to 123 acres of land which he sold, Feb. 10, 1794, to Andrew Bowers (Byers). The land was described as being "on the waters of Buffalo Creek adjoining the lands of James Hamilton, James Davies, and Gore." Some time within the next five years Andrew Bowers (Byers) and his wife Catherine moved on into Grayson County, Va., and, on Oct. 1, 1799, they sold their land to Matthias Firestone, who, with his wife Mary, sold eighty-eight acres of it to Robert Hamilton for ninety-five pounds Virginia currency. After holding the land for several years and adding thirty acres of his own land to it, he sold 118 acres to William Deacon on March 26, 1825. In the deed the property is described as "lying on the waters of Buffalo between the Camp Mountain and the Brushy Hill." Six years later, on August 14, 1831, Deacon added one hundred acres to his increasing estate by purchase from the Dillman heirs—Jacob and Elizabeth Dillman, Adam and Julia Dillman, Daniel and May Dillman, and James and Elizabeth Hipes. He was now possessor of more than 382 acres of land. It should be added that this Dillman property lay adjacent to John Crawford, John Wilson, and Joseph Wilson. The survey of it and the making of the plat was the work of one Alexander Jack.

Into the log cabin under the towering pinnacle of Camp Mountain, close by the purling waters of North Buffalo Creek, William Deacon moved his growing family. Not very far away, on the rolling upland at the foot of Camp Mountain was a burial-ground which had been used for more than forty years as a burial ground of the pioneers of the community. Without the least doubt, it is the earliest known cemetery in the upper valley and tradition has it that more than seventy people lie buried there. It is a beautiful spot and, as one stands in the plot and looks away to the northward down the North Buffalo valley, there comes the feeling of the thrill of hope and strength that must have graced the hours of sorrow and bereavement of others across the years.

Here undoubtedly William Deacon buried his first wife—the Leech home was not more than a mile away. Here beyond all question, he laid his second wife to rest for Betsy Crawford died within a very few years after coming to the home in the mountain glen. In 1854, when William Deacon passed away, his coffin was carried gently up the winding trail through the upland meadows and here he rests among his beloved kith and kin. Then, when his third wife, Nancy Peel, who survived her husband a number of years, rested from her earthly labors, she was laid here beside her husband.

Just down the valley from the old Deacon homestead, where the little brook from the slopes of the Brushy Hill joins the North Buffalo Creek after flowing through the fields of the Pullens, a log cabin had been built by the pioneers. In 1794, Elijah Vansandt, of Botetourt County, Va., came to the community and purchased the land from Thomas Wilson and others. Being a local Methodist Minister, Vansandt began holding religious services in the log cabin which became known as the "Log Cabin Meeting House." This point, together with the log cabin on upper South Buffalo which had been erected previously, knew the service of the Rev. Mr. Vansandt for many years before his removal to the West. It was the beginning of Methodism in southern Rockbridge, contemporary with the penetration being made in the northwestern section.

William Pullen bought the Vansandt land and, because the log cabin was used for the purposes of a community school, it became known as "Pullen's School" even though it was a regular Methodist meeting house. It was listed on the Lexington Circuit after 1840 and until 1845, when the division of Methodism over the slavery question took place, it was carried on the records. Then, through the antebellum years, the Civil War, the reconstruction years, and until the merger of Methodism, it was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the northern branch of the Church.

The early members of the Deacon clan were educated in "Pullen's School" under schoolmasters secured by the patrons and the commissioners of the county. In 1838, John Steele Leech was the commissioner for District No. 4, in which "Pullen's School" was located. As his teachers for that year, he reported John A. Wilson, James Johnston, Ben. G. McNutt, and William B. Wilson; either of the two Williams was the teacher in the school on North Buffalo.
Beside the pupils for whom the patrons of the school paid a tuition rate to the teacher, there were 'poor children' — those whose parents or guardians could not afford to pay. For these the teacher was allowed five cents per capita when the child was present at school. This pay came from the Literary Fund, established for this purpose by the State and handled by the commissioners. For instance, in 1853, Seaton B. Rowsey was the teacher at "Pullen's School" and, for that year, Polly McNabb, Sally McDaniel, Sally Montgomery, and Harriet Miller, all of them widows, are listed as being patrons of the school with their children's schooling paid for out of the Literary Fund.

In 1854, "Pullen's Church," which had been held in the old log building since it was begun under Vansandt about sixty years before, moved into the new structure which had been erected on the less than one-half acre deeded by John and William Pullen to the trustees, Capt. Jefferson C. Deacon, Stephan F. Wilkinson, and Louis D. Hall. This was the genesis of the present day Mount Horeb Methodist Church.

William Deacon made his will, March 27, 1847, adding a codicil on Sept. 25, 1854, a short time before his death; his will was probated on Nov. 6, 1854. This places his death on one of the 42 days between these dates.

After assigning his body to the ground and his spirit to God who gave it, Deacon ordered a speedy payment of all his debts and funeral expenses. He bequeathed the home-place and a part of the McWilliams tract, with the exception of the "Sugar-tree Hollow," which he had sold to his son Jefferson, and the 77 acre tract upon which his son Gwynn lived, to his widow Nancy; she was to have "peaceable possession during her life" of it, of all the stock, and of all the household furnishings. Upon her death, the real estate was to be divided equally among his eight sons. To each of his four daughters, Ann, Martha, Jane, and Sarah, he gave $100 in the will, with the provision that it had not been paid before his death. Another daughter, Elizabeth, who had married Nathaniel Chittum, is cited as having already received her portion—perhaps it was a wedding gift; the Chittums were married on June 15, 1826, when Elizabeth was seventeen years of age. His sons—Thomas, John, William, Washington, Franklin, Jackson, Joseph, and Henry—were named as those who were to receive the farm after the widow's death. To Douglas, another son, he bequeathed the tenth interest in the farm which Douglas had purchased from his father.

In the codicil, he gave his son Gwynn outright possession of the place on which he lived and, to his son Jefferson, he bequeathed an entry to his land near the western end of Camp Mountain. It seems that Henry had left home and his father wished him to return. So, if the lad came back and took over the running of the farm for the widow, he would receive $100 annually until he reached his majority, or as long as he remained on the farm.

Also, in his codicil, Deacon made note of the fact that his daughter Martha, who had married William J. Pursley and was evidently deceased, had received seventy dollars of the one hundred dollars—the remaining thirty dollars of the inheritance was to be paid to her children. Too, at this time, he designated his son Douglas Crawford Deacon to be the executor of the will and the codicil.

The will was probated in the Rockbridge County Court on Nov. 6, 1854, and, at the same time, William P. Rogers and Charles H. Stanwood were made joint sureties with Douglas C. Deacon in a bond for $4,000 for the last named’s service as executor. A personal inventory of William Deacon’s personal property was made on the 18th of the same month; it was all sold to the widow for $564.80, the appraised value, on January 1, 1855.

The days of the Civil War came and passed with the reconstruction problems and distress in their wake. Nancy Peel Deacon, the widow of William Deacon, died before February, 1871, when the effort to settle the estate was undertaken by the heirs. There developed some distinctive trouble, as was often the case in those days. Mrs. Deacon had been living on the 134 acres of the old homestead and had enjoyed the full benefits of her husband’s will. Now the question arose about the division of the entire property, including the 118 acres claimed by David Falby, listed as ‘an unlettered citizen of Irish birth’.

The chancery case that ensued is the source of much valuable data on the Deacon family since it was necessary for every heir to be named in the papers of the suit. For record purposes, they are cited here: Jefferson Deacon, Sarah Deacon, Henrietta—widow of Gwynn Deacon—and her infant children, James and America; William Deacon, John Henry Deacon, Ellen Orelia Deacon, Judith and James Fainter, Nancy and John Byers, John P. Chittum, Eliza and John Nicely, George Cheatam, Daniel Falby, Amanda and Henry Rowsey, Nathaniel Chittum, the unknown widow and children of William Cheatam, dec’d., William Pursley and his infant son John, Eglantine Deacon, Nannie and George Nicely, Thomas Deacon, John and William Deacon, Joseph and Jackson Deacon, Nancy and  Parrish, John and Ellen Black and their children; Martha, Mary and two unknown infants, the unknown widow and children of Henry Deacon, dec’d., and the unknown widow and children of Washington Deacon, dec'd. The citation of these names will reveal the complicated task of working out the family genealogy.

One item of interest to the descendants of John Crawford is that of the sale of his personal property on May 24, 1839. Many of his old friends and neighbors were present and among the purchasers of various items were Capt. John F. Wilson, Vincent Turpin, William Pullen, Joseph Wilson, William Manspile, James Johnston, John Gold, W. A. Wilkinson, Robert Hamilton, John Daniel, Matty Reid, and William Deacon. Some of the articles purchased by Deacon and the prices he paid were a feather-bed and bedding, $7.87½, 2 pairs of sheep shears, 50¢, Gutherie's Geography, 25¢, 1 lot of old books, $1.40, 1 lot of old books, 12½¢, 1 heckle, 12½¢, 1 tea board, 50¢, 2 candlesticks, 55¢, and 1 lot of spools, 75¢.

In conclusion, the old home-place of John Crawford has never been out of the hands of the family for more than one hundred and sixty years—it is now the home of Waitman S. Deacon. Too, since William Deacon bought his homestead in 1818, it has been in possession of a member of the family ever since, for one hundred and forty years; it is now the home of Harry Lee Deacon. However, the heritage of high idealism and integrity of character, transmitted through the years by the hundreds of descendants of William Deacon, the emigrant lad of 1790, far exceeds in value all other considerations.

Addendum

There are some places and incidents which so impressed us, in our earlier lives, that the associations cling to us and are a source of pleasure to us in after life such as no words can portray. Just such a place exists in that quiet unpretentious section of Rockbridge County, where the North Branch of Buffalo Creek has its source. This branch has its head near the dividing line of this and Botetourt Counties and, as it takes its course eastward, it is fed by other branches of clear mountain water.

No bold, dashing cataracts enliven the scenery. Smoothly and quietly this little stream creeps along over “stony ways” through the laurel, fern, and ivy until its course is checked by a mill-dam. It is at the base of Camp Mountain, near the residence of our life-long friend, the Captain, who, by his sincerity has endeared himself to his neighbors, and who was never known to turn a deaf ear to the wants of a friend. Half a century or more he has applied this little brook to old-fashioned water-wheel, with its leaky buckets and creaking shaft, which, however imperfect in mechanical construction, has turned those old mill-stones slowly, but surely, for lo, these many years! Time has left its mark, if not on the mill-stones, on every thing else around. How many, alas, have come and gone who have been fed from this old mill! But the old wheel still revolves on its axis, but, like the old man, it totters and seems palsied in its movements. Its strength has been spent in feeding generations. The old “oaken buckets” are showing signs of decay. The stones, which ran so smoothly when I was a boy, now jerk and wind in and out. The superstructure, too, has the impress of time clearly marked on its timbers. Numerous stays and props hold it in an inclined position. And yet under such diverse circumstances, it grinds away daily. Men, boys, and women may be seen every day of the week going to and coming from the old mill with their “grists”—some on foot, others on horseback.

Our old friend, the Captain, the miller, who by the way is a sort of “Jack-of-all-trades” and has never been content with any one vocation, but makes wagons, and irons them sometimes, makes coffins, buries the dead, practices horticulture and farming and has so familiarized himself with herbs that he can indicate a specific for almost any kind of malady; he is as generous, kind-hearted soul as ever lived. If he has his faults, they lean to the side of virtue and kindness. So much has this been the case that others have profited from his own personal discomfort and personal denial to accommodate them.

I revert with pleasure to those days, when I was accustomed to go to his mill, and while the old mill was clattering and grinding away on my corn, the good old miller would instruct me on the character and utterances of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Monroe, and others—Napoleon no less conspicuously in the military line. The Captain himself in those days commanded the militia company of this particular district. I was not subject to military duty, owing to my youthfulness, but the Captain had so impressed me with military zeal and the spirit of honorable warfare that I always took part in the parades and attended all the general musters. Oh, the gingerbread we had in those good old times! And the martial music of Reuben Howard, the drummer, and the old fifer, Reuben Johnston.

The Captain was always present on these occasions and shared in all the pomp and glory of the occasion. Time goes on, things have changed, and we with them. The old Camp Mountain stands as a sentinel around the campfire of pleasing recollection of men and events, and will long be associated with the name and character of our honored friend—the Captain—owner of the little mill. (This tribute
Captain Jefferson Crawford Deacon
appeared in the Rockbridge County News, August 27, 1891, and is signed by the lone initial “L.” This was evidently W. B. F. Leech, a native of North Buffalo and a most outstanding citizen. “The Captain,” of course, was Capt. Jefferson Crawford Deacon. (G.W.D.)

SOME EARLY COLLATERAL LINES

The family-tree has many branches, all of which are vital to the understanding and appreciation of family-connections. It is impossible to present all these branches within the limited and special field. Those whose family lines take other trails than these that are given here ought to seek them out and add them to their own individual family-history.

The collateral lines presented here are as follows:

1. Crawford
2. Saville
3. Daniel
4. Peel
5. Chittum
6. Reynolds
7. Paul - Taylor - Thomas - Ruley

These lines, as presented, are not to be considered as the presentation of all the material available. No. 6, the Reynolds clan, has a wonderful story, told in a volume of four hundred and sixty-four pages. No. 3, the Daniel line, is one of the best told families in Virginia.

1. Crawford

John Crawford and his wife Ann patented a tract of land on North Buffalo Creek, Rockbridge Co., Va., April 12, 1797, which may have been an extension of former holdings they possessed at the time. It is claimed that he was a direct descendant of Ronald Crawford, of Scotland, grandfather of the famous William Wallace. That he was one of the John Crawfords who served in the American Revolution there can not be any doubt. One genealogist claims he was a Captain. He made his will, June 6, 1838, and it was probated, May 6, 1839; it is most certain that he died the previous month. As his wife is not mentioned in the will, it may be presumed that she was dead before the will was made.
Issue:
1. John Crawford, married Elizabeth Borden, Sept. 23, 1824, the Rev. A. B. Davidson, officiating. As Mr. Davidson was pastor of Oxford Presbyterian Church, a few miles down the valley, it may be accepted that they were members of that church. He became the owner of extensive properties throughout the area.

   a. Mary Ann Crawford
      (The will of their grandfather states — "my two grandchildren Mary Ann Crawford and Jefferson Crawford, Jr., daughter and son of my eldest son John Crawford.")

2. Douglas Crawford, married Sophia Harrison, June 13, 1823, the Rev. John D. Ewing, pastor of Falling Spring Presbyterian Church, officiating. They moved to Liberty, Ind., where he died in 1848. Mrs. Crawford died in 1839.

   a. John Crawford—went to California with some kinsfolk.
   b. James Crawford—remained in Indiana.
   c. Mary Crawford—died in girlhood.
   d. William Harrison Crawford returned to Lexington, Va., shortly after his father's death. During the Civil War, he served as a Captain of Engineers. While in the service, he was in Monroe County (now West Va.) where he met Sarah Catherine Nickell whom he married in 1863. He made his home at Quinnimont and later Fayette Station, both in West Virginia.

   i.  mar. J. D. Boone, coal operator, of Fayetteville, W. Va.
   ii. Julia A., a school teacher in West Virginia schools.

3. William Crawford—died Oct. 20, 1842; mar. ******.

   a. Hannah—the only child.

Presbyterian Church, officiating; they removed to Mount Prairie, Mo. On Aug. 31, 1849, they sold their one-eighth undivided interest in her father's plantation "on the waters of Buffalo Creek" to her mother, Mary Douglas, who, in turn, sold it to her son John H. Douglas. In a letter which Thomas Jefferson Crawford wrote to Capt. J. F. Wilson, June 18, 1848, he gives the information here presented.

Issue:

a. Nancy Jane, born about 1835.

b. Charles

c. Andrew Jackson, born Jan. 8, 1844

d. William, born in either March or April, 1848

5. Elizabeth ("Betsy") Crawford was born, 1796; died before 1838; at the age of sixteen years, she married William Deacon, becoming his second wife.

2. Saville

Samuel Saville, a member of an old Norman family, migrated from England prior to the American Revolution and settled in Pennsylvania. He and his wife Ann Boothe were members of the Quaker denomination. They were the parents of six sons all of whom served as soldiers in the Revolution and, for their military careers, they were "read out of meeting." The status of religious ostracism became irksome and two of them, at least, migrated to Virginia.

Issue:

1. Robert—came to Virginia with his brother.

2. Abram (Abraham)—the date he arrived in Virginia is not of record, but here in Rockbridge County, on Nov. 10, 1795, he bought 179 acres of land, bordering on the plantations of James Hamilton and James McNabb, paying one hundred pounds in Virginia currency for them. James David and his wife Rebecca had patented the tract, July 29, 1793, erected a cabin upon it and lived here almost two years and a half. He married Martha Keeble. Both of them are buried without a doubt in one of the unmarked graves in the old cemetery on the place, not far from the cabin.

Issue:

a. George, mar., 1808, Betsy Bogan

b. Robert, mar., Dec. 13, 1810, Martha Skeen, dau. of Robert and Barbara Skeen. Both died, Jan. 30, 1863, victims of diptheria; both buried in unmarked graves in Rapp’s Church cemetery.
c. Abraham, Jr., mar. 1817, Elizabeth T. Whiteman; they migrated West shortly after marriage.
d. Joseph, mar., 1822, Polly, dau. of Henry Skeen; they migrated West shortly after marriage.
e. William, married 1816, Jane Skeen; migrated West.
f. Samuel, mar., 1816, his cousin Ann Saville, dau. of his uncle Robert Saville; they went West.
g. Jacob, mar. (1) Phoebe Skeen, (2) Susannah Leech, (3) Nancy Shafer, a sister of Philip Shafer. All his children were by the third marriage.
Issue:
i. Margaret, mar., Oct. 15, 1846, Douglas Crawford Deacon, the Rev. A. B. Davidson, pastor of Oxford Presbyterian Church, officiating. (For Deacon connection, see Deacon D)
ii. Sarah Elizabeth, mar., Mar. 7, 1850, John Pleasant Chittum. (See Chittum line)
iii. John
iv. William
v. Joseph
vii. Martha Jane, mar. John A. T. Reid. (See “Paul-Taylor”—No. 6 in collateral section, for Reid connection).
viii. Catherine—never wed.
ix. Emily
x. Drusilla
xi. Matilda
xii. Diana, mar., Oct. 18, 1856, Wm. A. L. McCorkle; after living for a time at Colliers-town, where he worked as a tanner, they migrated to the Cowltiz River valley in Oregon.

3. Daniel

William Daniel, 1625 (?)-1698, a native of Wiggam, Lancashire, England, was a son of Peter Daniel, of Tabley, England; he was a colonel of an infantry regiment and Governor of the garrison and citadel of Ayre, Scotland; took part in the battle of Evora, in Portugal, against Don Juan of Austria; came to Virginia about 1665 and settled on a large grant of land in Middlesex County where he died; he married (1) Dorothy Forth, daughter and heiress of Hugh Forth of Wiggam, (2) Jocebed *; the second marriage was without issue.

4. Peel

James Peel and his wife Nancy came to Rockbridge Co., Va., before 1782, as they are listed as being taxpayers in that year. He became the owner of about 272 acres of land on “the middle fork of Buffalo Creek,” now known as North Buffalo Creek, about 102 acres bought from David McWilliams and 170 adjacent acres which he acquired by patent. On Oct. 2, 1798, they sold the 102 acres to Mary Beers, the widow of William Beers, and, on Nov. 23, 1818, they sold the residue of their property to William Dickens, or William Deacon, as we know him. They were the parents of three children at least.

Issue:
1. James Peel, married, July 31, 1800, Elizabeth Gill, the Rev. Elijah Vansandt, officiating.
3. Nancy Peel, who became the third wife of William Deacon; she survived her husband, dying in late 1870 or early 1871.

5. Chittum

John Chittum and his wife, the former Nancy Sly, migrated to America from England shortly after the close of the American Revolution and settled in Rockbridge Co., Va. On June 30, 1834, his will, made on Feb. 25, 1827, was probated by the County Court. At this time, the widow was still living. William Deacon was a witness to the signing of the will. The Chittum and Deacon families had known each other for years.

6. Reynolds

This family is of great antiquity. About 944, Grethferth, King of Northumberland, of an ancient Viking line, was forced to seek security by flight to France; he was accompanied by his two sons, one of whom was named Reynolds. When William of Normandy invaded England and fought the battle of Hastings, in 1066, Reynolds was one of his men of Normandy.

The family line with which the Deacon family is connected seems to begin with
1. Christopher Reynolds, b. about 1530, in County Kent, England; name of his wife is unknown; settled in London in business. Among his issue:—

2. George Reynolds

3. Christopher Reynolds

3. Christopher Reynolds, b. 1611, Gravesend, England; d. 1654, Isle of Wight Co., Va.; mar. Elizabeth *; arrived in Warwick Co., Virginia, on the "Francis and John"; settled on patented grant of 450 acres, Sept. 15, 1636; among his issue was:—

4. Thomas Reynolds.

4. Thomas Reynolds, b. 1655 (after his father's death, but mentioned in the will as an 'unborn child'); mar. Mary Elizabeth Ashall. Among their issue:—

5. John Reynolds.

5. John Reynolds, b. 1690; d. Mar. 21, 1760; mar. Dec. 30, 1708, Mary Wood. Among their issue:—

6. Obediah Reynolds.

6. Obediah Reynolds, dates unknown; wife not given; veteran of the Virginia State Line in the American Revolution. Among his issue:—

7. Michael Reynolds.

7. Michael Reynolds, mar. Nancy Todd, in 1798; settled in Rockbridge County, Va. Among their issue:—

8. William Reynolds.

8. William Reynolds, b. 1806; mar. Sally , b. 1812; settled in Rockbridge Co., Va. Issue:

9. James, b. 1834
10. John, b. 1837.

The monument above was placed in the old Deacon Cemetery by the Deacon Family Association August 8, 1959. The previously unmarked cemetery contains the graves of William Deacon and his wives, ——— Leech, Betsy Crawford Deacon and Nancy Peel Deacon.
Homeplace of William Deacon now owned by his great-grandson, Harry Deacon.
PART III

THE DEACONS OF VIRGINIA

William Deacon (1781-1854) was married three times — first, to Miss Leech, who died in childbirth or shortly after the birth of her son, second, to Miss Elizabeth Crawford, and third, to Nancy Peel. He and his three wives are buried in the old cemetery under the peak of Camp Mountain. It is difficult to indicate the mothers of his sixteen children, with the exception of the first child. That those in whose given names the family name of Crawford appears were of the second marriage there can be no doubt. Unquestionably, those children bearing the names of American heroes were children of the Peel marriage. The mother, or mothers, of the five daughters can be known with difficulty, if at all. The following is the list of the children but the order given is not assured:

A. Thomas Deacon
B. John Crawford Deacon
C. William Crawford Deacon
D. Douglas Crawford Deacon
E. Jefferson Crawford Deacon
F. Gwynn Crawford Deacon
G. Henry Crawford Deacon
H. Elizabeth Deacon
I. Ann Deacon
J. Sarah Deacon
K. Jane Deacon
L. Joseph Crawford Deacon
M. Martha Deacon
N. George Washington Deacon
O. Andrew Jackson Deacon
P. Benjamin Franklin Deacon

A. Thomas Deacon, b. July 1, 1810; d. Oct. 22, 1879; mar. Rachel Daley, b. Nov. 2, 1810; d. July 4, 1884; he was born in Rockbridge Co., Va., and his mother died at the time of his birth. For some reason, although he was but an infant, he was given to a man said to have been named Montjoy and was taken West. He lived and died in Pike Co., Ohio. His contact with his father’s people was lost, but it was restored by the work of his grandchildren. He was the father of seven children who are given herewith, but there is no effort to place them in the order of their births.

Addendum

Reverend Jacob Emmett Deacon's early boyhood coincided with the duration of the Civil War. He remembered well the advent of a detachment of Confederate Cavalry to his father's farm, the plundering of the sorghum cane, and the threat to conscript his father for service in the Confederate Army. But Douglas Deacon believed in the preservation of the Union: and he foiled the probability of conscription by constructing a hide-away in the side of a mountain, near his home, to which food was periodically conveyed to him. There he remained whenever and as long as hostile troops were in that vicinity.

As he grew older and approached young manhood, Mr. Deacon worked on the farm and was a frequent companion of his father who was a skilled journeyman millwright. In the latter occupation, he was an apt apprentice and learned the various skills of mill construction, which began with the felling of the forest trees and ended with their incorporation in the completed structure.

Upon reaching the age of 21, he went to Roanoke, Va., at that time a booming town, where he secured employment as an accountant with the Norfolk and Western Railroad. It was during his two-year sojourn there that two incidents occurred which determined his future life's work. One was the death from typhoid fever of his younger brother, Joe, of whom he was quite fond, who had come to Roanoke at his suggestion to accept a position, also, with the Norfolk and Western. In later years, he occasionally mentioned that the saddest experience of his life was the failure of all efforts to save him and then having to take him home to be buried in the family plot.

The second incident was an impelling call to enter the Christian ministry. If this may be interpreted as a deeply conscious awareness of the love and sacrifice his Savior made for him, as a consuming desire to follow in His footsteps in ministering to the spiritual needs of others, then his subsequent life of devoted service in his chosen profession leaves no doubt that the call was genuine and his response sincere.

After spending a few months at the old home, following the return with his deceased brother, Mr. Deacon, now a young man of 23 years, began the arduous journey to Athens, Tenn., where he intended to pursue his studies at Grant Memorial University. The 16 miles to the nearest railroad was traversed on foot over primitive roads and by horseback across swollen streams. His labor of love during his brother’s illness and later for funeral expenses left him devoid of financial resources. He carried his personal belongings and food in a bundle; in his pocket were $20.00, $5.00 of which his mother placed in his hand as he bade her farewell. He was not to see her again for ten years. During the two days and nights required for the trip to Athens, he rode free part of the distance in a baggage car and paid for the remainder of the trip when riding in a coach.

Ten years were required for the completion of his three degrees. He met the expenses of his education and music lessons by ringing the chapel bell at intervals through the day, beginning at five o’clock in the morning, by performing various janitorial tasks, and by teaching school. To keep costs at a minimum, he prepared his meager meals in his room. Small wonder that he was troubled with dyspepsia much of his life. Nevertheless, he was a diligent student, became proficient in mathematics, Latin, English, Greek, Hebrew, and Sanskrit, acquired the theological views of the time, and developed a good singing voice. The last-named proved to be an excellent adjunct in his ministerial work. A prized possession of his family is a copy of a recital he gave in Athens.

Upon the completion of his education, he returned home for a short visit prior to assuming his ministerial duties. In company with a friend, the long trek from the railroad was again covered on foot. Darkness and rain overtaking them en route, they sought shelter for the night in a deserted cabin. Awaking the next morning, they discovered that they had been bed-fellows with several copper-head snakes. The latter, in utter disregard for the social amenities, had not become familiar; the former, thankful for the latters’ snobbishness, beat a hasty retreat.

It was while serving his first pastorate at Radford and East Radford, Va., that Mr. Deacon met his future wife. A bachelor member of his congregation, approaching him at the end of a Sunday morning service, invited him to have dinner at his country home several miles distant and suggested that they call upon the Whitman sisters in the afternoon at their home on a near-by farm. Attired in his Prince Albert coat and a high silk hat, the young minister and his friend mounted their steeds and proceeded toward the Whitman residence. When rounding a curve in a lane leading to the house, a hog jumped out of the bushes beside the road. With coat-tails flying in the breeze and high silk hat sailing down a steep bank, the bareheaded young parson's horse took off on a dead run toward the Whitman house. Such was his introduction to the young ladies of the Whitman family. Friendships sprang up and grew. The soft brown eyes, rosy cheeks, lovely features, and gracious manner of the sister named Virginia Lee warmed his heart. She, in turn, was captivated by his singing and playing, his entertaining conversation, and courteous demeanor. Cupid made his play. In due time they were engaged and married in the Methodist Church in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

A minister's wife can be a detriment or a blessing to a successful career. In the latter group are often the unsung heroines,—those "who also stand and wait." They share his joys and sorrows, his disappointments and frustrations, encourage when discouraged, guard his health, raise his children, and grieve with him about the broken promises of his superiors in the administrative circles of the church. Virginia Lee Whitman was no exception. Of genteel origin, educated at Martha Washington Seminary, she possessed the natural charm and grace so essential to a happy family life and a haven to those in physical or emotional distress. Their home was open to all, regardless of race, color, or social status; to the privileged and underprivileged alike; to the backslider in morals or in the practice of religion; to the vagrant traveller in search of a meal; even to the alcoholic raised from the gutter and brought home by her husband. There they found the comfort and solace required for their respective needs.

A number of impressions are indelibly fixed in memory when looking back over the years of Mr. Deacon's ministry. Warm-hearted and imbued with a sympathetic understanding, he was primarily a pastor and minister, regularly visiting his flock and always solicitous of its welfare. His sermons were good, sometimes thought-provoking, and he frequently preached as if inspired from on High. He was a builder, whether churches, church property, or young people were involved. Outstanding in these respects was the last charge he served—Grove Methodist Church, oldest one in Chester Co., at which he was pastor for nine years. They were the happiest years and perhaps the most rewarding of his ministry.

At age 70, he was retired after some 40 years of active service. His eyes had begun to fail, and at age 72 he suffered a prolonged and serious illness which left his heart in a weakened condition. In February, 1931, while retiring for the night, he was stricken suddenly and passed away in the arms of his younger son. The heart which had always been so full of love for others and had beat so valiantly in their interests had failed him. A wide circle of friends from his former churches paid their last tribute as he was quietly laid to rest.

To his sons, he was one of "the two most unforgettable characters they had ever met". The other was his beloved companion.

M. Martha Deacon, married William J. Pursley, Nov. 25, 1846, the Rev. W. W. Trimble, pastor of Oxford Presbyterian Church, officiating.

N. George Washington Deacon—all that is known at present is that he married, had a daughter Elizabeth ("Lizzie"), and was dead by Dec. 9, 1870.

O. Andrew Jackson Deacon, b. March 10, 1832; date of death unknown; mar. June 15, 1856, Nancy Elizabeth Ayres, b. in Rockbridge Co., Va., Nov. 25, 1837; her parents were Thomas Ayres, d. Feb. 16, 1882, and Nancy (Pullen) Ayres, d. 1838. He moved West and, after 1859, he and his family lived in Cabell Co., West Va., where he was a farmer and a well-known wheelwright. He owned a farm of 115 acres, thirty of which were in high state of cultivation and the rest in excellent building-stone and timber. When the Civil War broke out, he volunteered in the Confederate service and was a member of Co. G., State Line Troops, serving under Gen. John B. Floyd whose command was a part of the army commanded by Gen. Robert E. Lee. He saw action at Cross Lanes, Carnifex Ferry, and Big Sewell Mountain. His company disbanded after six months of service; his future military service is unrecorded.

P. Benjamin Franklin Deacon, d. 1861; mar. Dec. 29, 1852, Ellen Chittum, b. 1833, dau. of Zachariah Chittum and his wife Sabra Green, the Rev. John M. Green officiating. Deacon died intestate. Zachariah Chittum died in 1846 and left a tract of about 600 acres of land which was to be sold upon his widow’s death and the proceeds to be divided among his children. The widow Chittum died in August, 1863, and a suit in chancery was instituted the following September. In the chancery papers (File 61, Bundle 239), in the records of the Rockbridge County Court, the Deacon children were listed. On Oct. 10, 1866, Ellen Chittum Deacon married John M. Black, the 25 year-old son of Madison and Mary E. Black. The family moved West and settled in Texas. (For Chittum connection, see Chittum 3.1. in “Some Collateral Lines, No. 5”)
