PREFACE

A greater number of years than the compiler cares to acknowledge has been spent in collecting the data contained in the pages of this book. When first interested in the Colony at Germanna there was no assurance that there were any records in existence concerning its origin in Europe, the cause and manner of emigration; its establishment upon the frontier of Virginia, or its early history there; and the prospect of preparing a true chronicle did not seem promising. However, actuated and encouraged by the discovery of a few reliable records, it was felt that by diligent effort it would be possible to assemble sufficient material for an authentic history. The undertaking has been tedious and the search a long one, but it is hoped that the facts here presented will prove of interest and value to every descendant of a member of the Germanna Colony, as well as to students of Colonial Virginia.

Exact references to only the more important sources of information consulted have been given, but great care has been exercised to avoid inaccuracies of statement. In places when it seemed essential to discuss records not indubitably established, pains have been taken to indicate clearly that there is some uncertainty. At least one personal journey to the district of Germany from whence the immigrants came, and various visits to the several homes of the colonists in Virginia were made, before this historical sketch could be concluded.

A few portraits and several views of Siegen and its vicinity have been introduced with the hope of adding interest to the pages. A convenient index containing both given and family names completes the volume.

Compiling the genealogical records of a family for over two hundred years and assembling the names of 2300 members thereof in their order with correct dates and proper spelling is no small task. Much indifference was encountered among those from whom data were expected and when requested to prepare biographic sketches of the more distinguished members of their families their inertia was remarkable indeed. On the other hand the loyal and energetic cooperation of a large number of contributors who pursued the lines into almost every State and Territory of our Country has made this work possible. To them is largely due the successful accomplishment of our undertaking.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE FISHBACK FAMILY.

It will, perhaps, be a surprise to many to know, that in Virginia, the land of the Cavaliers, the first settled, and in many respects the most English of England's colonies in America, there was seated as early as 1714 an organized German colony. Nevertheless it is true. It was born of religious and economical troubles in Germany, brought to Virginia to exploit her iron mines for the benefit of her rulers, and was the forerunner of a numerous and virile element of her population. It is time that the fame of this colony, and the German element in Virginia's population, should be trumpeted abroad.

Great events in the world's history have usually had their chroniclers, in some form or other. What a volume of history is to be found in The Catalogue of the Ships or on the Bayeux Tapestry! Comparing small things with large, one would expect to find that the first organized German colony to come to the territory, later to be known as the United States of America, should have had its contemporary historian. If such it had, the story he wrote has not survived these two hundred years, and until quite recently, this colony with its twelve sturdy German families was almost entirely forgotten.

However, within this century the diligent and persistent efforts of a few interested persons, have brought to light, from many widely scattered sources in both America and Europe, a surprising number of documents and historical items, relating to this colony, from which its story can be largely reconstructed. It is the writer's purpose to gather all these documents and shreds of history, together, into this sketch, hoping again to bring to life this German colony, with which our ancestor John Fishback came to America; for its history is his history.

It will also be seen as we progress, that much has been learned about the emigrant himself and his immediate family; but the writer must caution his readers that not too much must be expected in this direction, and for reasons easily seen. No connections of the family can now be found in Germany; and but little can be learned from the records or other public sources, there. Even in this country, excepting the wills of the emigrant and some of his sons, and a deed or two, fortunately preserved upon the records of Prince William, Fauquier and Culpeper counties, no writings of the first two generations of the family in this country are now known to be extant. Doubtless there were such, but owing to the destruction of the early family homes, the scattering of the people, and the ravages of the civil war, they cannot now be found.

There is no family record of the first two generations known. We can be sure that there was once such a record in this country. A large Bible in which its record was kept was ever present in every Protestant German family of that time. Other families in the colony in which our ancestor came are known to have had such a Bible, why not John Fishback? We read that the Kemper German Bible weighed fifty-three pounds. Its record began with a short verse calling down the blessings of the Almighty upon the newly wedded pair. John Hoffman, another member of this colony, had such a Bible. So much store was set by it that he provided in his will that it should remain with the eldest of his fourteen children the first year; pass to the second child for the next year, and so on forever.

If John Hoffman had such a Bible, doubtless his co-trustee and brother-in-law John Fishback had one. What would we not give to find it? The emigrant's home was broken up at an early date by the death of his first wife, and although he soon remarried, he did not live long thereafter. It seems almost certain that after his death there was soon a separation of the two sets of children, for there is still a tradition that the first wife's children were reared by their Hager and Rector relatives. In all this confusion, in those primitive years, the great Bible was forever lost.
Historical documents even down to the fourth generation are scarce, and while they are full of information as to that generation, they tell little of the early history of the family, simply saying that it came from Germany. Like so many documents of the kind, the writers take it for granted that every one knows about the family at that time. So if this historical essay is not as full and interesting as some of Macaulay's, the writer begs the indulgence of his readers, for he thinks he has done as well as could be done with the materials at hand.

The earliest data known with reference to the family of John Fishback are to be found in the records of the Reformed Church of Siegen, in the present Prussian province of Westphalia, Germany. In those records the name is always spelled "Fischbach." The names of the two little German villages just west of Siegen are also spelled Fischbach. This is good German.

The English equivalent of the word is "fish-brook." The original possessor of the name plainly lived upon a little stream, in which fish could be caught. To distinguish it from other streams, in which there were no fish, it was called "the fishbrook," and there was a man named Johannes living upon its banks, who, to distinguish him from some other Johannes, was called Johannes of the Fishbrook. When surnames came into fashion, and so many surnames were taken from the place where the party lived, this man came to be called Johannes Fischbach. This would indicate a rural origin for the family.

Our ancestor must have anglicized his name very shortly after his coming to Virginia; because in all the grants from the Crown hereinafter mentioned the name is spelled Fishback, and his will, probated in 1733, is signed "John Fishback," and ever afterwards the name has so appeared in America. It is rather an unusual name. The writer could not find it about Siegen in 1900, and in this country has only found two families by the name, which do not trace back to Virginia.
One of these came to America shortly after the Napoleonic wars, from Alsace or Lorain (not far from Siegen); the other came to Alabama recently, from Westphalia, Germany, the province in which Siegen is located. Neither of these families could connect themselves in any way with our Fishback family. All of them, apparently running back to about the same locality in Germany, would seem to point to a common origin.

We have positive evidence that our emigrant ancestor, the John Fishback found with the Germanna colony, came from the vicinity of the city of Siegen in the Prussian Province of Westphalia in Germany. Here it is: Charles Kemper (1756-1841), the youngest son of John Peter Kemper (1717-1778), eldest son of the Kemper emigrant and of Elizabeth Fishback (1723-1768), daughter by his first wife of the emigrant John Fishback, begins the record in his family Bible as follows:

"John Peter Kemper son of John Kemper of the town of Müsen near the city of Siegen in the State or County of Nassau, in Germany, was born in Germanna in Virginia December 25th, 1717. Elizabeth Kemper the daughter of John Fishback of the town of Truback near the city of Siegen, in the State of Nassau in Germany was born at Germantown Virginia February 13th, 1723."

Charles Kemper was twelve years old when his mother died, and surely would know from her who her father and mother were. Further, Charles Kemper lived among his mother's people, and was on terms of the closest intimacy with them all his life, and his own father, who was old enough to remember John Fishback and Pastor Hager, lived with Charles Kemper until the father's death in 1788, and he and they would surely all know from whence the family came and who they were. This record, which was most likely commenced about the time of the marriage of Charles Kemper (1786), for the next item after the above gives the date of his marriage, is a record from sources as nearly contemporaneous with the events as can now be found, and is undoubtedly correct. We must start with it as true.
THE FAMOUS CITY SIEGEN IN THE PRINCIPALITY OF NASSAU. A. D. 1500.

Siegen is an old city in the same county and derives its name from the river Sieg flowing by it. At this place the banks of the river are joined by a stone bridge. Although the existence of this river is not mentioned by the older historians, Philipp Clavertius and Peter Bertius, most learned German antiquarians, maintain that the town that is there to-day was described by Ptolemy under the name Segedunus. Certainly it is not very large and lies on a gently rising hill near the river bank. It is entirely enclosed by a wall and fortification which, however, is not secure against a great force, but with outposts there is protection against sudden attacks. It is well adorned with churches and public buildings. On the hilltop eastward toward the castle are the residences of the retainers of the Prince. The situation is so favorable that the famous school and the printing-house were able to stamp out the raging pest imported from Herborn. To be sure it returned afterwards. The neighboring hills are rich in iron ore and the inhabitants derive a large revenue from it. There are also delightful products of which the fields afford sufficient to support life. In the year 1626 John, Prince of Nassau, opened a military school here, so that the noble youths might be instructed in infantry, cavalry and other necessary drills. From this city came the renowned astronomer and mathematician, Tillmann Stella, who was always mentioned with pride. He died in Wittenburg on February 13th, 1529, in the 64th year of his age. In the Senate-house there stands a right good picture portraying the Passion of Our Lord, which has been taken from the larger scene. A pious monarch had it painted in 1515, that all who love and appreciate art may be filled with admiration.

Note.—This legend is a liberal translation of the one that appeared in both Latin and German beneath the picture of Siegen reproduced above.
It will be noticed that in the above record the name of the village in Germany from whence it is stated the Fishback family came is spelled Truback and not Truppbach, as the record from the Siegen church and the map shows it should be spelled. The German language was spoken in the household of John Peter Kemper until Rev. James Kemper, the elder brother of Charles, was about twelve years old, that is until about 1766, but James Kemper states he had almost entirely forgotten it by 1815. The early English writings of Charles Kemper show the German idioms cropping out, but no doubt by 1786 his German had largely disappeared and Truback is a very fair attempt at anglicizing Truppbach. There is no reason to cast any reflections on the statements in the foregoing entry in the Bible, because of the difference in the spelling of the name of this village.

Now let us turn to Germany, and see if we can identify our family on that side of the ocean. The writer has in his possession a letter from the Treasurer of the German Reformed Church at Siegen over his signature, and attested by the seal of the church, which contains extracts from the records of the church certified to be as follows:

"John Fischbach, b. 12 July, 1691.
Father—Philip Fischbach.
Mother—Elizabeth, born Heimbach.
Philip Fischbach born in March, 1661.
Father of Philip Fischbach was Johannes Fischbach.
Johannes Fischbach born 23rd November, 1631."

The records show that this family was "of the Village of Truppbach." The letter states that there is no record of the marriage or death of John Fischbach in the church records. The letter of the treasurer is entirely in German, but it has been thought best to translate the extracts given above. It will be noticed in the genealogy that one of the sons of the emigrant by his second marriage was named Philip. In the absence of a positive statement, the writer thinks that the identification of the John Fishback of Germanna and Germantown, Virginia, with the John Fischbach of Truppbach is as complete as it can possibly be made. It will later be seen that we have positive contemporaneous statements that this Germantown colony came from Siegen, or its vicinity.

The foregoing information from the records of the Siegen church was sent the writer in the fall of the year 1900, and was obtained by the treasurer of the church after a long and very laborious search of its early records. These records are not indexed, and although the text is German, the wording is half German and half church Latin, and after two hundred years and more is impossible to be read by one not familiar with it, as the writer can attest, and only decipherable by one long accustomed to its form.

Now where are Siegen and Truppbach, and what do we know about them?

The county of Nassau-Siegen, which dates back to the thirteenth century, was southeast of Cologne. It belonged to the family of Nassau-Dillenberg—one of whose members about the middle of the sixteenth century by intermarriage with the heiress of Orange in France became entitled to be called Prince of Orange. The name of "William (of Nassau) the Silent, Prince of Orange" born April 16, 1533, will be remembered and honored as long as we have civil and religious liberty. The rulers of Nassau-Siegen were among the first fruits of the Reformation; but the country was on the border line between Protestantism and Catholicism, always remained partly Catholic, and occasionally a ruler was a Catholic—and then cruel persecutions were inflicted upon their Protestant subjects, which did not cease even with the treaty of Westphalia in 1649. This kept the people divided and unsettled, and the condition continued long after John Fishback and the other members of the colony started for America, and as late as 1742, when the county passed into the hands of William IV of Orange.

Siegen was the chief town in the county. It was formerly a walled town, and grew up around an old castle, one of the principal residences of the counts of Nassau. The old building still exists, and stands on a hill, high above the modern town, and with its solid walls must have been almost impregnable before heavy artillery was invented. The modern city has spread in all directions from the base of the hill. It contains at the present time about 25,000 people and is a busy thriving place. It is situated on the river Sieg about sixty miles southeast of Cologne, a little east of the direct line between Cologne and Frankfort and not quite half way to Frankfort. It is a little off the main railroad route from Cologne to Frankfort, but through trains run from Cologne to Siegen, making the distance in about an hour and a half.

When William the Silent during the revolt of the Netherlands from Philip II of Spain was compelled by the Spanish Governor to leave his home at Breda in Holland with his second wife Anne of Saxony and their young children and flee into Germany, his family placed the castle of Siegen at his disposal and here he lived while he was organizing and drilling the forces with which he intended to attack the Spaniards in Holland. When he started on his expedition, his wife and children were left in the castle.

At this same time there was living in the little village which had grown up about the old castle, another refugee from the religious and political troubles in Holland, one John Rubens with his wife. Here on June 29, 1577, their child Peter Paul Rubens, destined to be one of the world's greatest painters, was born.

The castle remained for many years after this a residence of the Nassau family, and the modern city has gradually grown up around it, largely engaged in iron manufactures from the ores mined in all the hills round about it.

The older part of the town has many ancient buildings and with the castle presents quite a picturesque appearance. The present entrance into the courtyard of the castle is through a great archway ascending under the walls. This courtyard had anything but a warlike appearance the sunny afternoon in mid-July when the writer saw it. It was nicely sodded and seemed to be the rendezvous for all the nursemaids with their little charges, in the city. A magnificent view of the city and surrounding country is to be had from the castle walls.

The streets of Siegen run up and down the hill, and are mostly narrow, paved with granite or cobblestones. In the old part of the town the houses are high, with peaked gables overhanging the street. The public square is on the side of the hill as you go from the railway station to the castle; it is planted with shrubbery and covered with grass, and is a pretty place with benches all about it, and contains a life-size equestrian statue of the old Emperor William. To the right side of the square as you go up the hill stands the church, quite an old building, Gothic in its general outlines, and in good preservation. It has a very heavy tower, which seems far too large for the church. This church is German Reformed, as all the Protestant churches in the neighborhood are, not Lutheran. It is quite an important part of the life of the town, and in vigorous existence, with pastor and assistants, secretaries and treasurers, and a board of governors. It maintains an office in a building apart from the church, and the documents over the treasurer's signature come authenticated with the seal of the church. The only information we have of the family of our Fishback ancestor, before his coming to this country, is contained in the records of this church.

The writer visited Siegen and the surrounding country in July, 1900. His Kemper ancestors came from Müsen, a village now containing about 2,000 people, about nine miles northeast of Siegen, and you must first go to Siegen to reach Müsen. We (the writer and an interpreter, for the writer must needs admit that although so many of his ancestors spoke German the language was as hard for him to learn as Greek, and that he left college with so little of it that it was necessary to take an interpreter with him into the back counties in Germany) left Cologne about 7:30 one evening. As an experiment, we travelled third class (don't do it if you should ever make the trip). The interpreter made a mistake or pretended he did and got into a compartment marked "Raucher" (smoker) and there were four drummers in it going down to Siegen, and what a hot evening it was, and how those fellows did smoke. The interpreter did. The writer does not, and long before we reached Siegen he felt much like a Westphalian ham, for which the country is renowned. The train had one merit at least: it was fast, and we made the sixty miles in less than two hours. We soon came to the narrow, rocky valley of the river Sieg, and turned eastward up it. The railway continually crossed this crooked stream on heavy stone arches, or shot through tunnels under the shoulders of the hills. As long as we could see, the people were working in the little cultivated patches along the railway, the women with the men. We saw many women mowing with the men all round Siegen. Give thanks, ye gentle readers, descendants of John Fishback, that he came to America, and did not leave you to be brought up around Truppbach. The houses were nearly all of timber construction, filled in with brick, plastered and whitewashed. However the country looked well cultivated and prosperous. The Westphalian peasantry are known all over Germany for their thrift and sterling qualities. Our train drew up to the station at Siegen in the valley to the north of the Sieg, and we climbed into an old-fashioned omnibus, and went rumbling over the bridge with the Sieg foaming below it, and clattered up the steep granite-paved streets to the right of the public square, where we found under the shadow of the great tower of the church, "The Golden Lion," reported the best hotel in the town. Our supper consisted of black bread and coffee, and then we were shown to our room, with no carpet on the floor, only a home-made rug near the bed. There, quietly reposing on top of the bed, with the thermometer at 90°, was a feather bed, a foot thick. It reposed on the floor for the remainder of the night. Everything was clean and neat and comfortable, but we were way off the beaten lines of travel, and the comforts of even the Dom Hotel in Cologne were not to be found. If this was Siegen and its neighborhood in 1900 what was it in 1700? We were up early the next morning and after running the gauntlet of eight servants, none of whom had we seen before, but who held out their hands and clamored for tips, started out to Müsen. Along the highways the villages were almost continuous and every place was humming with activity. Factories in newly constructed buildings were to be seen on every hand, the hay harvest was in full blast in the meadows along the Sieg and every one was in the fields, men, women and children. When we went further up the valley towards Müsen, it was the women that were doing the work in the fields; the men were all in the factories. The women would gather the hay into large square pieces of muslin, like sheets, draw the ends over and tie them, put the bundle on their heads, and go clattering up the granite-paved highway toward the village in their wooden shoes. We did see one cart, with broad tires, drawn by an ox near Müsen. The people are primitive in their ways of living, and the country is poor compared with the United States, and far behind it, although they were continually telling us how many changes there had been in the ways of living and doing business in the previous few years, since the industrial revolution in Germany had begun.

The names of practically all the twelve families of the colony were found in the immediate vicinity of Siegen. The map shows villages of Ober (upper) and Nader (lower) Holtzclaw, and Ober and Nader Fischbach. The Brumback family was not found, but they were not hunted for, as they were not known at the time to be members of the colony. For some time the Hitt family could not be found, but the Pastor of the little Protestant church, dating back to 1585, at Ferndorf, a village on the highway from Siegen to Müsen, finally solved the difficulty. When he was asked if there was a family by the name of Hitt in his parish he shook his head, then said: there can be no Geman family by that name, for all German family names mean something, and Hitt means nothing in German. Finally he said: Oh! it is Heide. He pronounced the "ei" like long "i," the "d" very nearly like our "t," and the final "e" so short that you could hardly hear it. And this is exactly the way Congressman Hitt pronounced his name. Heide means "a meadow man" and the pastor told us there were many people by that name in the meadows over between Ferndorf and Antzhausen, but there were none in the Ferndorf parish. This is given, as a sample of the way in which foreign names have been anglicized, and to show how careful one must be in searching for his name, on the other side.

Truppbach is a little village in a narrow valley running to the left, as you look north from Siegen; it is about a mile and a half from Siegen and is just out of sight from the castle walls, behind the rugged "Fischbacher Berg" (Hill), which juts out into the valley of the Sieg. Truppbach is rather a suburb of Siegen. It has no church, the people all attend the church in Siegen. No one by the name of Fishbach could be found in the village, nor heard of anywhere in the vicinity. No search was made for the name Heimbach, for at that time it was not known that it had any connection with the Fishback family, the record heretofore given having been sent to America by the church treasurer after the writer's return. The name Fishback does not now appear at the Fischbach villages nor does it appear in the records of the church at Ober Fischbach, according to a letter from its pastor, and how these villages obtained their name can only be conjectured, apparently not from the family. They may be on the banks of a "fish-brook." The writer is inclined to think that all that can be learned of the family is in the records of the Siegen church, and, according to the church treasurer, what is given above is all these records contain.

The writer believes he is the only descendant of our emigrant ancestor, who, in all these two hundred years, since he left Truppbach, has stood in the Siegen church, where John Fishback once worshipped. It were well worth the time and money of other members of the family to go a little out of their way when they are "globe-trotting" and see this little old church. It is the one place that is surely about the same as it was when our ancestor was baptized in it. The descendants of this man have numbered fully 3,500 and more than 1,000 of them are living today. If this family wants to perpetuate the name of a worthy man, and herald its fame all over Europe, there is no surer way to do it than to place a stained-glass window to the memory of John Fischbach and his wife Agnes Hager in this Siegen church. It would only require a small contribution from each one, and would be something unique. Think of it.

Just here the writer wishes to contradict a statement often seen or heard, that the members of the Germanna colony were refugees from their own country. It has been called a Palatinate colony in some quarters. But this is not true. Siegen is not in the Palatinate. "Our Colony" as we shall see was not forced to leave home, as many of the people of that unfortunate country were, some of whom came to America. The members of "Our Colony" left their homes of their own accord. Doubtless they came to America to improve their condition, politically and economically, but they were sent for, came voluntarily, and came at the request of the rulers of Virginia. They came from one of the most prosperous provinces in Germany. No one can go through the villages around Siegen and not note the intelligence and thrift of the people. This was just as marked two hundred years ago as it is today. The members of this colony could all read and write, and the rapidity with which they acquired property, both real and personal, in Virginia bespeaks their thrift, intelligence and prosperity.

But it is time "Our Colony" was on its way to the New World. In the year 1710 Alexander Spottswood was appointed Governor of Virginia by Queen Anne. A new era was beginning for the colony. The governor was young, ambitious, anxious that the colony should prosper, and not averse to making a fortune for himself. Iron in workable quantities was soon discovered upon land which Spottswood and his associates owned. In a letter to the Council of Trade, in England, dated October 24, 1710, he outlines a project, which he says he intends to submit to the next Virginia General Assembly for working and improving the iron mines lately discovered, towards the Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia. This is the very first pointer towards "Our Colony." Subsequent letters of Spottswood tell how the Assembly refused at public expense to take up his project; and how he was continually urging the council to persuade Queen Anne to take it up, and spend public money on it, down to July, 1712. Just at this time the colony founded by Christopher Baron de Graffenried, at Newberne, North Carolina, was destroyed by the Indians. De Graffenried was taken prisoner by the Indians and carried into captivity. He finally persuaded them to release him, abandoned his colony, and made his way to Virginia, where Spottswood befriended him. At Spottswood's request de Graffenried examined Virginia with a view to locating iron mines, and in a letter to the Council of July 26, 1712, Spottswood says de Graffenried feels sure there are iron mines in the colony, that he was familiar with mines in his native country Switzerland, and still has relations there interested in mining, "and by their interest he can procure skilled workmen out of Germany for carrying on this work." Here is the second pointer towards "Our Colony." All this time Spottswood was trying to get the Queen to take up the project but he failed, and we will later see he took it up himself. Spottswood is the man who was responsible for bringing "Our Colony" to America.

Spottswood's letters do not say so, but after the Queen refused to entertain the iron project it is apparent that he entered into some negotiations with de Graffenried, and authorized him to procure and send to Virginia "skilled workmen out of Germany to open mines in Virginia," for when the colony came, Spottswood in his letters to the Commissioners of Trade says: "These Germans were invited over some years ago by the Baron de Graffenried," and de Graffenried's own account tells of writing to the miners from America. De Graffenried tried to return to England from Virginia, but as he was in debt to inhabitants of that colony, and as the Colonial laws forbade any ship captain, under heavy penalties, taking from the colony any one in debt, the Baron left Williamsburg, Easter, 1713, went all the way to New York on horseback, and after remaining a fortnight in that city sailed for Bristol; from there went to London, where he arrived some time in the early fall of the year 1713.*

When de Graffenried reached London he unexpectedly found the colony there, stranded and almost starving. He was out of money and the colonists did not have enough to pay their passage to Virginia, but were depending on him. Before Spottswood, the chief one to benefit by the colony, could be communicated with, the season had grown so late that no ships were starting for Virginia before spring, so the colony was compelled to stay in London all winter. But it will be better to permit de Graffenried to tell of their stay in London and of their start for the New World, in his own language. This account is taken from his autobiography, which is in manuscript, in the French language, preserved in the public library of Berne, Switzerland. An accurate translation follows:

From the Autobiography of Christopher de Graffenried.

"On my arrival in London I was extremely surprised to learn that the master miner had arrived with 40 other miners. This caused me much trouble, care, concern and expense, since these people came so inconsiderately, without orders, with the expectation of finding everything necessary for their maintenance, as well as work in the mines, but there was nothing for them to do, and my purse was so empty that it was with difficulty that I could supply my most urgent necessities, having used all my money in America, and being as yet without a bill of exchange from Berne. Thus it was impossible to assist so large a number, and the reader can easily conjecture what care and embarrassment all this caused me, since these people were persuaded that according to the agreement, I was compelled to assist them. This would have been so had they come at my order. I therefore wrote them several letters from America in German, of which they received some, in which I had advised that the master miner should not come until new orders were received, and saying that there was nothing for them to do as yet by reason of the unexpected Indian war in Carolina, and that he (Michael) had not yet indicated the place, but that if the master miner nevertheless wished to come alone or in company with one or two, he could do so, but merely to see the place. But without paying attention to what I had just written him he made preparations, and came to London with his company and all their baggage.

"But what was there to do here? I could not give them better advice than to return home. This displeased them very much, so much so that they preferred to serve for four years as servants in America. However there was no vessel ready to sail for America, and it was therefore necessary for them to remain in London all winter, but where to obtain sustenance? This gave me an inconceivable amount of trouble, so that finally I was moved to apply to several Lords for work and bread for these people. They were then employed to make or repair a large dyke (or dam) but a heavy rain set in and all was overturned. This made it necessary to devise new expedients for their subsistence. I found a place for one party but not for all. In the meantime I was anxious to hurry home, fearing to travel in winter, and already feeling an attack of the gout, which could ill accommodate itself to the cold.

"Finally I found two wealthy merchants doing business in Virginia to whom I stated and recommended this affair as best I could. With that I also consulted a noble Lord to whom I was honestly (well) recommended by the Governor of Virginia, concerning the miners, to the end that he was able to serve me, and render for me his good offices at Court. We concluded that these people should put their money together, taking account of the same proportionally and that one of the above mentioned merchants should procure the remainder necessary for the transportation and maintenance for the miners, and that the Governor of Virginia should receive, and care for them on their arrival at Williamsburg and pay the captain of the vessel, who in turn should return to the merchants of London the money advanced by them. On this subject I wrote a long letter to Gov. Spottswood, to whom I represented as best I could both affairs, saying that if the miners did not turn out as desired, these good people should be sent as a colony to the land which we conjointly own in Virginia, situated not far from the place where we found raw materials (by which we presumed we had silver mines there) where they would be able to locate through the good offices and care of the Governor, but in case there was not sufficient indications to show silver mines, to look elsewhere. And since there are no iron or copper forges in Virginia, although there are quantities of such minerals, one will be able to trade in these, for which no royal patents are needed, as in the case of those of silver.

"In the hope that this will succeed I recommended these people to the Almighty, wishing them also a happy voyage. Thus they departed in the beginning of the year 1714."

It seems there is a manuscript almost identical with the above in the public library of Yverdon, Switzerland. It has been translated and is to be found in the Colonial Records of North Carolina.*

There are several differences in the two manuscripts. Just before the last sentence, the North Carolina manuscript has "Note by the author. They are actually settled on the Governor's land where they have started a small colony." After the last sentence this appears: "A whole year has elapsed, without my receiving any news from the Governor or from them and I feel very anxious." In the first sentence of the North Carolina translation after the word "miner," the name "T. Tusties Albrecht" appears, and it reads 70 not "40 other miners." The writer has the original French of the first sentence of this Yverdon manuscript. It was carelessly copied for the North Carolina Records. The name is J. Justus Albrecht, and it is 40 not 70. This is important, as will later be seen.

It is not easy to account for the name of the head miner being given in the Yverdon manuscript and not in the one at Berne. And what became of him? A man with the name J. Justus Albrecht could not hide himself under a bushel, especially as he is referred to as the head man in the colony. Had he reached America we surely would have heard of him. After diligent search the writer could not hear of such a family in Virginia. It will later be seen he was not among those to whom land was assigned at Germantown, nor was he one of those who made affidavits to obtain land warrants. It is practically certain that he did not come to America. Perhaps he became discouraged over the hard times the colonists had in London and the prospect before him; perhaps he found good employment in London, and remained there; or had good prospects in Germany and returned to Siegen; or possibly he may have died on the long and perilous journey to the New World, as thousands of emigrants did in those days.

Diligent but unsuccessful effort has been made to find just where the colony spent the winter in England, for if this could be determined it is likely that records could there be discovered of the eight marriages which the writer thinks took place in England, among the members of this colony. This would give the family names of the wives of these men, and would perhaps solve the mystery of the number of persons of which this colony was composed. A possible clue has quite recently come to light. When John Rector, the eldest son of one of the emigrants, moved to Upper Fauquier, he laid out a town which was incorporated by an act of the Legislature, under the name of "Maidstone." This would be a very unusual name to be given a town in Virginia by a German, for Maidstone is the County Town of Kent, England. There was until lately in existence among the descendants of John Rector a letter which stated that John Rector so named this town, because he was born at Maidstone in England. It is quite possibly that "Our Colony" was building the dyke which failed, down in the low country about Canterbury, Rochester or Maidstone, and that these marriages took place in the vicinity. But somewhere in England, and in some way, the Colony did exist during that winter, and some time in the early spring it started to America. We have proof of the starting of the Colony from the Journal of the English Board of Trade.

On March 12, 1714, the Journal contains a reference to a colony of miners that must be the above colony. It says that Col. Blakiston (the agent of Virginia in London) attended to give some information in answer to a memorial of the Earl of Orkney relating to some miners who had gone to Virginia. "He represented that several miners had already been sent from home at a great charge and that the undertakers must be at considerable expense before they could hope for any return or advantage from this project." This certainly fits "Our Colony," and it will be noticed that they were on their way by March 12, 1714.

Now let us turn to Virginia and watch its arrival. On March 15, 1713 (1714), Spottswood writes:* "To Col. Blakiston: S'R: About the beginning of January I received y'rs of 3rd July, 20th September and 10th October, w'ch gave me an account of y'r proceedings in relation to the mines, as well as y'r sentiments of w'ch ye Baron had propos'd, about transporting his miners, and by y'r letter of ye 9th December which I received the other day, I perceive you have altered y'r opinion by sending over these people partly at my charge.”

He writes again:

“To the Lords Commissioners of Trade, July 21st 1714*”

“My Lords. . . . I continue, all resolved to settle out our tributary Indians, as a guard to ye frontiers, and in order to supply that part which was to have been covered by the Tuscaruros, I have placed here a number of Protestant Germans, built them a fort and furnished it with two pieces of cannon, and some ammunition which will awe the stragling parties of Northern Indians, and be a good barrier for all that part of the country. These Germans were invited over some years ago by the Baron de Graffenried who has Majesty’s letters to ye Governor of Virginia to furnish them with land upon their arrival. They are generally such as have been employed in their own country as miners . . . .”

So that according to de Graffenried’s account the colony left London in the early part of the year 1714; it had not reached Virginia on March 15, when the first of the above letters was written, but by July 21 it had arrived, and been placed in a fort on the frontier. It would hardly seem the proper thing to place a band of helpless German emigrants at a dangerous place on the frontier, but by doing so a fort and habitations were built for them at public expense, and their location was near where his iron works were later to be erected.

The mining scheme crops out in full force in the next letter, and it further appears that these people brought over for his benefit were relieved from the payment of taxes.

To Col. Blakiston, December ye 1st 1714.† He returns

thanks for "his endeavors in relation to the affairs of the mines." Hopes B. will renew his endeavors to his present Majesty (George I) "to obtain as moderate terms as ye adventurers in his own territories of Germany had," says it may be some consideration to the King that the mines are to be worked by persons of the same nation and religion, "that they will be a vast charge without any prospect of benefit till they can be set to work. I have obtained for them from the Assembly an exemption from all taxes for seven years, which may be an encouragement to others of the same country to come over, but I hope their passage will be at their own charge."

One more letter refers to our colony.*

To ye Lords Commissioners of Trade, Janry 27, 1714 (1715)

My Lords . . . (Sends copies of the Assembly Journals) "The act for exempting certain German Protestants from ye payment of levys, and is made in favor of several families of that nation, who upon the encouragement of the Baron de Graffenried came over hither in hopes to find out mines, but the Baron’s misfortunes obliged him to leave the country before their arrival. They have been settled in ye frontiers of Rappa, and subsisted since chiefly at my charge and the contributions of some gentlemen that have a prospect of being reimbursed by their labor, whenever his Majesty shall be pleased, by ascertaining his share, to give encouragement for working these mines and I hope the kind reception they have found here will invite more of the same nation to transport themselves to this colony."

It is clear from these letters that so far but one German colony had come to Virginia, although others came soon after. It is also clear from de Graffenried’s manuscript, and from the letters, that this colony came direct from London to Virginia. Dr. Philip Slaughter in his valuable "History of St. Mark’s Parish," in which parish Germanna was later located, conjectures that the Germanna Colony was a remnant of the Newberne, N. C., colony, escaped from the Indian massacre; and following him, this has since been positively asserted. This is clearly a mistake, for de Graffenried had engaged this colony, he had written for them from America, he met them in London in the fall of 1713. Spottswood was written to about them from London in the fall of that year and was expecting them, and expected to pay their passage and had done so, as he says, and the colony reached Virginia direct from London some time between March 15 and July 21, 1714. As the Newberne massacre took place in September, 1711, it was impossible for "Our Colony" to have been there at the time of the massacre. These letters also disprove Dr. Slaughter's story that this Germanna colony became involved in a dispute with the captain of the ship on their arrival in Virginia about their passage money, and the Governor happening along, agreed to pay their passage, if they would work for him. This may have happened with some of the later-coming German colonies, but the Governor was expecting the Germanna colony, and to pay its passage, and he did pay it.

So the colony reached Virginia, and Spottswood at once took charge of it. In some way it must go to his iron properties. It was determined at once that in that quarter a defence was needed against the Indians. The reason for bringing over these Germans was carefully concealed, the blame of it is thrown on de Graffenried, and not a word is said about iron. The Governor appealed at once to his council, and on April 28, 1714, the following order of the Virginia Executive Council was made:*

"The Governor acquainting the Council that Sundry Germans to the number of forty two men women & children who were invited hither by the Baron de Graffenried, are new arrived, but that the said Baron not being here to take care of this settlement, The Governor therefore proposed to settle them above the falls of the Rappahannock River to serve as a Barrier to the Inhabitants of that part of the country against the Incursions of the Indians and desiring the opinion of the council whether in consideration of their usefulness for that purpose, the charge of building them a fort, clearing a road to their settlement & carrying thither two pieces of cannon & some ammunition may not properly be defrayed by the publick.

"It is the unanimous opinion of the Board that the Sd Settlement, tending so much to the Security of that part of the Frontiers It is reasonable that the expense proposed by the Governor in making thereof, should be defrayed at the publick charge of the Government, and that a quantity of powder & ball be delivered for their use out of her Majesties Magazine. And because the s'd Germans arriving so late cannot possibly this year cultivate any ground for their Subsistance, much less be able to pay the publick Levies of the Government, It is the opinion of this Board that they be put under the denomination of Rangers to exempt them from that charge, and for the better enabling the Sd Germans to supply by hunting the want of other provisions, It is also ordered that all other persons be restrained from hunting on any unpatented lands near the settlement."

This order shows that the colony had reached Virginia before April 28, 1714.

But some Virginia watch-dog of the treasury had seen through Spottswood's scheme of building habitations for his miners at public expense and filed written charges against him with the Board of Trade in London. The Board ordered the Governor to answer the charges. He did so under date of February 7, 1715 (1716). These answers tell so much about the Germanna colony that they are quoted from liberally.*

"Query 3. Whether ye Governor under pretense of guarding the frontiers by building two forts, one at the head of James River (the French colony at Mainkintown) the other of Rappahanock River, at the great charge and expense of the country, and only to support two private interests in both of which he is principally concerned, is not guilty of a high misdemeanor and breach of his oath, and of his Majestys royal instructions, against his being concerned in trade”

The Governor says* “... As to the other settlement named Germanna there are about forty Germans men women and children, who having quitted their country upon the invitation of the Herr Graffenried, and being grievously disappointed by his failure to perform his engagements to them, and they arriving also here just at a time when the Tuscaruro Indians departed from the treaty, they had made with this goverment to settle in its Northern frontiers, I did both in compassion to these poor strangers and in regard to the safety of the country place them together upon a piece of land several miles without the inhabitans, where I have built them habitations and subsisted them until they were able by their own labor to provide for themselves, and I presume I may without a crime or misdemeanor endeavor to put them in an honest way of paying their just debts.”

Querry 15† “Whether the Gov’r denying to his Majesty’s subjects to take up land, and at the same time gave leave or order to another person to take up 12000 acres to be patented in the name of Wm Robinson, to his own private use, and leasing the same to ye Germans (not permitting them to take ye same up to their own use) at such rents as shall be agreed on between the said Governor and ye Germans is not arbitrary illegal and oppressing his Majestys subjects, and a breach of his Majesty’s royal instructions.”

The Governor answers‡ “I have frequently mentioned how the Germans came to be settled on this land, and ’tis well known that when they arrived in this country, they were so far from being able to undergo the charge of taking the land for themselves that they had not wherewithal to subsist, so that besides the expense of £150 for their transportation, they are still indebted for near two years charge of subsisting them. I cannot therefore imagine myself guilty of any oppression by placing them as tenants on my own land, when if I had pursued the common methods of the country, instead of being my tenants, they might have been my servants for five years. Nor are the Germans insensible of the favor I have done them. The terms upon which the Germans are settled will not appear very like oppression seeing they have lived for two years upon this land, without paying any rent at all and that all which is demanded of them for the future, is no more than twelve days work a year for each household, which is not so much as rent for their houses, without any land, would have cost in any other part of the country . . . . There are not 12000 acres but 1200.”

This is a fine case of special pleading on the part of the Governor, to cover up the public money spent on the Germans, to hide the iron scheme, and to throw the blame of the coming of the Germans on de Graffenried, but we will forgive him because he tells us so much about “Our Colony.” It consisted of “forty persons men women and children,” and it will be remembered that de Graffenried’s colony consisted of “40 miners.” They are the people de Graffenried had invited over, and whose passage Spottswood had agreed to pay and he had paid it to the extent of £150. They had been at Germanna nearly two years when this answer was written in February, 1716, and we know that “Our Colony” reached Virginia between March 15 and April 28, 1714, and we will shortly see this date confirmed from another source. The identity seems complete.

We see further that these people had not been sold as servants, as has so often been stated, they were tenants on the Governor’s lands at Germanna, rendering a rent. It is undoubtedly true that some of the later-coming German colonists to Virginia were sold as servants to pay their passage money, but “Our Colony”—the first German colony to come to Virginia, the Germanna colony—was always free and always had the care and assistance of the Governor.

But where is Germanna? Or rather where was it? For this famous town of Governor Spottswood; the first German settlement in Virginia; the first county town of Spottsylvania County; where St. George’s Parish was organized and its first church built; where the first iron furnace in America was built and the first pig iron made, as Spottswood claimed; the place from which the famous expedition of “the Knights of the Golden Horseshoe” started; where the first German Reformed congregation in the United States was organized, its first pastor settled, and its first services held—is no more. In Civil War times it was only a ford in the river; it is now forgotten. Take your map of Virginia, and in the extreme northeastern corner of Orange County on a horseshoe peninsula of about four hundred acres, with the Rapidan to the north, west and east of it, was the site of this famous town. Here “Our Colony” was located in the summer of 1714 ostensibly to protect the frontiers from the Indians, in reality to work iron mines for the Governor on his lands, near at hand, and to make iron for him.

Col. Wm. Byrd locates Germanna, in his “History of the Dividing Line,” in 1732, Vol. II, page 64. “The river winds in the form of a horseshoe about Germanna, making it a peninsula containing about 400 acres. Rappahanak forks about fourteen miles below this place.” Both branches of the river were formerly called Rappahannock, the southern branch is now called Rapidan.

The earliest description of Germanna that has been found is in the diary of John Fountaine.* He with his friend, John Clayton, and perhaps several other persons, visited the settlement on November 20 and 21, 1715. He tells about it as follows: “About 5 P. M. we crossed a bridge, that was made by the Germans and about 6 we arrived at the German settlement. We went immediately to the ministers house; we found nothing to eat, but lived upon our small provisions, and lay upon good straw. Our beds not being very easy as soon as it was day we got up. It rained hard, notwithstanding we walked about the town, which is palisaded with stakes stuck in the ground, and laid close the one to the other, and of substance to bear out a musket shot. There are but nine families, and they have nine houses built all in a line, and before every house, about twenty feet distant from it, they have small sheds built for their hogs and hens; so that hog styes and houses make a street. The place that is paled in, is a pentagon very regularly laid out, and in the very centre is a block house made with five sides which answer to the five sides of the great inclosure; there are loop holes through it, from which you may see all the inside of the inclosure. This was intended for a retreat for the people, in case they were not able to defend the palisades if attacked by the Indians. They make use of this block house for divine service. They go to prayers constantly once a day, and have two sermons on Sunday. We went to hear them perform their service, which was done in their own language, which we did not understand, but they seemed very devout, and sang the Psalms very well. This town or settlement lies upon the Rappahanaock, thirty miles above the falls, and thirty miles from any inhabitants. The Germans live very miserably. We would tarry here some time, but for want of provisions we were obliged to go. We got from the minister a bit of smoked beef and cabbage, which was very ordinary. We made a collection between us three, of about thirty shillings, for the minister, and about twelve of the clock we took our leave, and set out to return."

This description fits almost exactly what has heretofore been said. Why there were only nine houses, when there were thirteen families (including the pastor's) cannot now be explained. Perhaps some lived in the block house, or some of the houses sheltered more than one family; or perhaps Clayton’s count was in error, for Col. Byrd of Westover, visiting Germanna in 1732, describes it thus: “The famous town of Germanna consists of Col. Spottswood’s enchanted castle on one side and a bakers dozen (13) of ruinous tenements on the other, where so many German families had dwelt some years ago, but are now removed ten miles higher in the Forks of the Rappahanock to lands of their own.” Thirteen houses would exactly shelter the twelve families of the colony, with the pastor’s family added.

Clayton’s description is the earliest recorded description of a German Reformed congregation, and its services carried on in the United States; at Germanna was preached the first sermon to a German Reformed congregation in the United States; and it was preached by the ancestor of the Fishback family, Henry Hager, who was certainly the first German Reformed pastor in the United States.

But Spottswood did not content himself with building habitations for his colonists. There was an established church in Virginia, and its ministers were entitled to tithes and could inflict all manner of exactions and annoyances upon these poor Germans who were not of their faith. And taxes had to be paid; and Spottswood did not want his protegees driven away before his iron project was developed. So he did the fair thing by the Germans, and a good thing for himself, and procured the passage of the following act by the first General Assembly, after the arrival of the colony. So far as now known this is the first reference to Germanna and “Our Colony” in any public document.

At a General Assembly begun at the capitol, the 22nd day of October, in the eleventh year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne and in the year of Our Lord 1712; and thrice continued by several prorogations to the 16th day of November in the 1st year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George. Anno Domini 1714.

No 2. Act to exempt certain German protestants from the payment of levies for seven years and for erecting the parish of St. George. A. D. 1714.

"Whereas certain German protestants to the number of forty two persons or thereabouts, have been settled above the falls of the River Rappahannock, on the Southern branch of said river, called Rapidan, at a place named Germanna, in the County of Essex, and have there begun to build and make improvements for their cohabitation, to the great advantage of this colony and the security of the frontiers in those parts from the intrusions of the Indians: for the encouragement therefore of the said Germans in their infant settlement, be it enacted by the Lieutenant Governor council and burgesses of this present General Assembly, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that all and every of the Germans now seated at Germanna, shall be and are hereby declared to be free and discharged from the payment of all and all manner of public or county levies or assessments whatsoever, for and during the term of seven years from and after the end of this session of assembly; and if any other German or other foreign protestants, shall within said term of seven years settle themselves at Germanna aforesaid such German or Germans or other foreign protestants shall be free and discharged from the payment of all such levies for the term of seven years from the time of their settling at Germanna respectively, provided such Germans or foreigners who now are or who within the said term of seven years shall be and continue for so long time to cohabit at Germanna. And if any of the said Germans or others shall depart from the said settlement at Germanna and inhabit any other part of this colony, such German and Germans and other foreign protestants leaving the said settlement, shall be assessed and pay all such levies and taxes as his Majesty's subjects of this dominion shall and do pay.
“And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid that the place called Germanna, together with a precinct of land thereunto next adjoining, extending five miles on each side of the said town or settlement of Germanna, is and shall be from henceforth a distinct parish of itself, and shall be called by the name of the Parish of St. George, and is and shall be divided and exempt from the Parish of St. Mary in said County of Essex and from all dependencies, offices, charges and contributions, for and in respect thereof, and from the cure of the minister of said Parish of St. Mary, and his successors, and also is and shall be discharged of all levies, oblations, obventions and all other parochial duties whatsoever, relating to the said parish of St. Mary.

“Provided always that the parisioners of St. George shall not be obliged to pay any minister or ministers of their said parish, the salary allowed by law to the ministers of other parishes of this colony, until such time as there shall be the number of 400 tithable persons in the said Parish of St. George; but the said parishioners are and shall be at liberty in the meantime to agree with their minister and ministers to serve the cure of their said Parish upon such terms as by the Lieutenant Governor, or the Governor or commander in chief of this Dominion, for the time being with the advice of Council shall be thought reasonable, any law, statute or custom to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.”*

This was the German parish of St. George, not the English one. It was ignored and quietly wiped out of existence in the act of Nov. 20, 1720, organizing Spottsylvania county, and creating the English parish of St. George coterminous with the county.†

The next reference to “Our Colony” comes from England. In the year 1701 there had been founded in London a missionary society whose name was "The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts." It is still in vigorous existence, and from its letter book it appears, that on October 2, 1719, a petition sent by some one in Virginia was laid before the society asking it to assist these Germans; and it is clear that whoever penned the petition was hoping to turn these people to the Church of England. The letter from the Secretary of the Society to the writer says: "The letter book containing this petition is still in existence, although the original petition has been lost; no signatures appear to the petition in the letter book." The Secretary also says that the petition was referred to a committee, which reported March 20, 1720, "that they had read the case of the German families in Virginia and agreed as their opinion, that Virginia not being under the immediate care of the society, they cannot properly send a missionary thither, but are of opinion that twenty-five copies of the common prayer in the German language be given them by the Society." Which report was agreed to. Can anyone guess what these members of the Reformed church did with these books of common prayer? The petition in full follows:

"The case of thirty-two Protestant German families settled in Virginia, humbly sheweth: that twelve protestant German families, consisting of about fifty persons, arrived April 1714 in Virginia, and were therein settled near the Rappahanck River. That in 1717, seventeen protestant German families, consisting of about four-score persons came and set down near their countrymen, and many more both German and Swiss families, are likely to come there and settle likewise. That for the enjoyment of the ministries of religion there will be the necessity of building a small church in the place of their settlement, and of maintaining a minister who shall catechise, read and perform divine offices among them in the German tongue, which is the only language they do yet understand. That there went indeed with the first twelve German families, one minister named Henry Haeger, a very sober, honest man, of about 75 years of age, but he being likely to be past service in a short time, they have empowered Mr. Jacob Christopher Zollicoffer of St. Gall Switzerland, to go into Europe, and there obtain, if possible, some contributions from pious and charitable Christians, towards the building of their church, and bringing over with him a young German minister, to assist the said Mr. Haeger in the ministry of religion, and to succeed him when he shall die; to get him ordained in England by the Rt. Rev. Lord Bishop of London; and to bring over with him the liturgy of the church of England, translated into High Dutch, which they are desirous to use in their public worship. But the new settlement consisting of but mean persons, being utterly unable of themselves to build a church and to make up a salary sufficient to maintain such assisting minister, they humbly implore the countenance and encouragement of the Lord Bishop of London, and others the Lords and Bishops, and also the venerable society for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts; that they would take their case under their pious consideration, and grant their usual allowance, for the support of a minister, and if it may be, to contribute something towards the building of their church. And they shall ever pray that God may reward their beneficence both here and hereafter.”*

By far the most important man in this colony was its pastor, John Henry Haeger. As so many people in the record are descended from him he is entitled to considerable notice. The Protestant church in Siegen, and all the Protestant churches in the neighborhood are German Reformed, not

*This petition may be found in Bishop Parry’s Historical Collections, Vol. I, page 247. Bishop Mead also gives it in his “Old Churches and Families of Virginia,” Article 34, with a curious omission which has propagated a singular mistake. He makes the petition read “arrived April 17 in Virginia,” no year being given. This has since been quoted as stating that the colony arrived in Virginia on the 17th day of April. To make sure of this matter, the writer wrote again to the society, and the Secretary answered that the letter book reads: “Arrived April 1714 in Virginia.” The day of arrival is not known.
Lutheran churches. Connected with the Siegen church, in the latter part of the seventeenth century, was a Latin school; and connected with this school, first as teacher and then as assistant principal from 1678 or earlier to 1703, was a man who was long the leader and teacher in this colony. This man was Rev. John Henry Haeger, born at Antzhausen, September 25, 1644. He was the son of Henry Haeger, the school master at Antzhausen, a village about 5 miles due east of Siegen and one of the 27 villages of the parish of Netphen. Antzhausen was in the Catholic part of the county, and during some of the troubles between the two faiths, about 1652-4, Henry Haeger moved with his family to the northwest of Siegen into the Protestant part of the county. John Henry Haeger studied theology and on September 25, 1678, his thirty-fourth birthday, was appointed the third teacher in the Latin school at Siegen. Under date of December 3, 1678, the following appears on the record of the Siegen School: "The worthy and learned Mr. Henry Haeger preceptor of the Latin school at this place, son of Henry Haeger of Antzhausen was married to Anna Catharine, daughter of Jacob Friesenhagen, late Mayor of Freudenburg." Freudenberg is about six miles a little northwest of Siegen. This union lasted more than fifty-four years, for the wife was living when Mr. Haeger made his will in April, 1733. He seems to have dropped the John from his name in later years, and was known as Henry; and we will Anglicize his name to Hager.

Twelve children were born of this marriage; we are interested in the third, John Frederick, born 1684, baptized the 18th Sunday after Trinity (September 28), 1684.

Hager, whom the most noble prince wished to transfer and promote to the pastorate of Oberfischbach." The map will show this village about three miles west of Siegen.

Hager did not spend all his time in teaching: for in 1690 he translated from French into German, at the request of Count William Morrice of Nassau-Siegen, a cousin of King William III of England, and published at Herborn, the "Story of Rev. Jacque Pineton de Chambrun," court preacher at Orange in France, of William III. Because of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, and the consequent persecutions of the Protestants, de Chambrun was arrested and imprisoned, and with many other of his co-religionists suffered great hardships. He finally escaped and made his way to Holland, where he was protected by William of Orange, later King of England. He there wrote in French an account of the sufferings of himself and his fellow-Protestants, and it was this work that Henry Hager translated into German in 1690. A copy of it is still one of the cherished relics of the Latin school, now the Gymnasium at Siegen. The writer has a photograph of the title page. A reproduction of it appears on an adjoining page. Hager seems to have pleased the prince by his work, and was later rewarded by a promotion to the pastorate at Oberfischbach.

Here he remained for some time, but was ill for a while, and in consequence obtained permission for his son John Frederick, who had been licensed to preach in 1708, to assist him. In 1711 he was suffering from a rupture, and on February 16, 1711, he handed in his resignation, and on April 13 received an honorable dismissal. He lived in retirement at Oberfischbach until July, 1713."

Hager's fourth child, Elizabeth, married either in Germany or in England, it is as yet uncertain which, John Jacob Rector. He was an important man in the colony, and was one of the elders of the congregation while the colony was at Germanna. He went to Germantown, but seems to have died soon after the colony went there, before 1729, for the Germantown land was set off to Elizabeth Rector, illegally of course. She had one son born at Maidstone in England and another born in this country. She seems to have soon married again, a man named Marr. Here was exactly the same situation as happened in the Spilman-Gent family later referred to. But there was a tragedy in the Gent marriage, for the pleadings recite that "Gent has been runaway from this colony for many years," leaving poor Mrs. Spilman with the entire care of her Spilman and Gent children. Mrs. Marr made some kind of a compromise with her Rector children, for she transferred one hundred acres of the Germantown tract to her eldest Rector child, to whom it belonged under the law. Apparently Marr died comparatively soon, for the tradition is that in her later years Mrs. Marr married a prominent and wealthy citizen of Culpeper, Col. John Finlason, and that after the first Mrs. John Fishback died, she took her niece Elizabeth Fishback, then a baby (perhaps also the other daughter, Anna Catharine), and raised her. Quite possibly this had something to do with the early marriage of Elizabeth Fishback to John Peter Kemper, for the marriage took place when Elizabeth was 15 years 6 months and 24 days old; and also with the marriage of Anna Catharine Fishback to her cousin Mrs. Marr's son, John Rector.

John Frederick Hager the third son of Henry Hager had applied to the English government to be sent to the New World, as pastor of some of the Palitinate colonies, which the English government was planting in America. England was attempting to make of these Germans, communicants in the church of England, and refused to send Hager as a Reformed minister, so he was ordained in the Church of England December 20, 1709, and in 1710 went to New York as a Church of England minister. The colony and the proselyting were failures. The colonists left their lands and their new religion, after several years, and after many thrilling and unfortunate experiences finally drifted over into Pennsylvania, and Hager was later known as a Reformed minister.

We do not know, but it is more than likely that the adventures of the son in America prompted the father, although then sixty-nine years of age, to think of America, and his neighbors, de Graffenried's Virginia colony of iron-workers, just at that time starting for America, gave him the opportunity of going; at any rate he made application to "The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts" in London to be sent to America as a missionary. Whether he made this application from Oberfischbach, or whether he was with the colony in London at the time, is uncertain, but on October 2, 1713, the following appears upon the minutes of the Society: "Reported from the committee that they had taken into consideration the petition of Mr. Hager father of the Societies missionary among the Palatines in the Province of New York, to them referred, and they agreed in their opinion that the case of said Mr. Hager does not properly lie before the Society."

No doubt because the man was a German Reformed minister, and refused to be ordained in the church of England, and the colonists were members of the German Reformed church. So the old minister was compelled to go with his family to Virginia at his own expense. And so he did, with his wife, and in the colony went also his daughters Elizabeth, and Agnes and Anna Catharine; and in April, 1714, this little flock, with its minister, already old, numbering about thirty persons, was set down in the Virginia wilderness.

Until lately there has been considerable uncertainty about the names of the families composing this colony, but a few years ago there was discovered in the back of a will book, among the records of Spottsylvania County, Virginia, a number of affidavits and court orders, which have set the matter at rest.* In Virginia at this time, the law was that

*When the Kemper genealogy was published in the fall of 1899 it was stated that the Utterback, Wayman and Handback families were three of any person who brought an immigrant into the colony was entitled to fifty acres of land. This law was liberally interpreted, for land was plenty and colonists were wanted, and the fifty acres were allowed for infants and for the party himself. The record is as follows:

Spotsylvania County, Will Book A, page 69.

"At a Court held for Spotsylvania County on Tuesday the 7th day of April 1724, John Fishback in order to prove his right to take up land according to the royal charter, made oath that he came into this colony to dwell in the year 1714 and that he brought with him Agnes his wife, and this is the first time of proving their said importation, whereupon certificate is ordered to be granted him of right to take up one hundred acres of land."

There are similar affidavits for
- Harman Fishback and Kathrina his wife.
- Jacob Holtzelaw and Margaret his wife and John and Henry his two sons.
- John Camper (Kemper) and Alice Kathrina his wife.
- John Joseph Martin and Maria Katrina his wife.
- John Spilman and Mary his wife.
- John Hoffman and Kathrina his wife.
- Joseph Cuntz (Coons) and Katherina his wife and his son John Annalis (sic) and Kathrina his daughter.
- Jacob Rector and Elizabeth his wife, and John his son.
- Melcherd Brumback and Elizabeth his wife.
- Dillman Weaver and Anna Weaver his mother.
- Peter Hitt and Elizabeth his wife.*

the twelve families of the Germanna colony. The statement was made upon the authority of Rev. James Kemper, who wrote from recollection, and a hundred and twenty-five years after the event. The Utterback family was at Germantown in later years and the Handback and Wayman families were in Culpeper, but they were not members of the Germanna colony; as the affidavits and court orders clearly show. These documents were discovered long after the Kemper genealogy was published.

Singularly enough the orders to the surveyor to lay off these lands were not issued until May 30, 1729. Some of these orders, at least, were not issued in the name of the colonists; possibly they were assigned, and quite likely to Spottswood, for he really brought in these emigrants, and the patents will some day be found with the head rights all recited in them. Why these colonists who wanted land made no application for it, until ten years after they came to Virginia, is as yet unexplained. The writer thinks, the applications were made at the instigation of Spottswood, who really paid the passage of these emigrants, and that the orders were assigned to him.

In this connection it will be noticed that no affidavit was made by Mr. Hager, although he and his wife were still living, and were just as much entitled to land as anyone else. Can it be that Spottswood did not dare ask the old minister for his affidavit?

There are other affidavits, similar to the above in the Spottsylvania Will Book, but those here given are the only ones which say the signers came in April, 1714, so “Our Colony” was the first German colony to come to America.

These affidavits mention twenty-nine persons as being in the colony, and Mr. Hager and his wife make thirty-one. De Graffenried says he found in London the “master miner and forty other miners.” Spottswood’s answers to his detractors say “at Germanna, there are about forty Germans, men women and children”; the act of 1715 says: “certain German protestants to the number of forty-two persons or thereabouts”; while the petition to the London Missionary Society says the colony of twelve families “consisted of about fifty persons”; yet here the names of every man, woman and child in the community is given and including Mr. Hager and his wife there are only thirty-one persons. There seems to be a mystery here, which has not yet been explained. The writer thinks that the colony was larger when it left Germany than when it reached Virginia, and that there was a considerable defection of its members in England. The disappearance of the chief miner Albrecht has already been noticed. Holtzelaw and Coons each had two children, Weaver was unmarried, and Rector had one child, who was born at Maidstone; the other eight, all "brought their wives with them" according to the affidavits, but they had no children. They were evidently young married couples. Where did they get their wives? John Fishback and John Kemper were not married about Siegen. It is sure that eight unmarried young women did not start alone with this colony from Germany. Of course it is possible that these eight young men found wives among the Palatinate population then in England. But the writer is of the opinion that when the colony left Germany there were several families with it, with marriageable daughters, and perhaps other children, that the older people preferred, like Albrecht to remain in England rather than brave the dangers of the wilderness, but the daughters were persuaded to go with a wedding ring. No doubt de Graffenried stated in his letters to Spottswood, as he did in his autobiography, that there were forty people in the colony, and Spottswood in his documents without counting noses, referred to the colony as containing about forty persons, which was quite likely the number when they left Siegen. True de Graffenried says there were "forty miners," and strictly this would mean forty men, but Spottswood always says "men, women and children," and it seems this was what de Graffenried intended. Until a better explanation is given the writer thinks this is the true explanation of this discrepancy. It only requires five other marriageable young women, for Fishback, Hoffman and Rector married daughters of Pastor Hager. It is now apparent how important it is to ascertain where these marriages took place, for the record would contain the maiden names of these women. Until these affidavits were found much time and money was spent in hunting the marriage records in Virginia, so loosely kept, and so many of them partially destroyed, but in vain. It was even thought that the brides might be found among the colonists of 1717 or later ones, but taking the affidavits as true the marriages must be sought on the other side.

The iron furnace built by "Our Colony" for Spottswood, according to Col. Byrd, as described in his "A progress to the mines" in 1732 was "twelve measured miles east of Germanna." It was then being worked, not by "Our Colony," but by the later-coming Germans. The crumbling ruins of this furnace, built of rough stones, are still standing, and the dam, race way, tail race, the slag pile, etc., can still be traced.

Many of the later-coming Germans were not so fortunate as "Our Colony," for in accordance with the laws of Virginia they were compelled to work for the person bringing them over for five years, to pay for their passage. This was not the case with "Our Colony" which always enjoyed the favor of Spottswood and the Colonial officials. When they first came they were relieved from all taxes for seven years. When the act was passed Nov. 20th, 1720, to take effect May 1, 1721,* organizing Spotsylvania County they were relieved from taxes for ten years, "provided they shall entertain a minister of their own"; and in 1730, an act was passed to "relieve certain German Protestants living in Stafford County from the payment of Parish levies." "Our Colony" was living in that part of Stafford County in May, 1730, which was made Prince William County by an act to take effect March 25, 1731,† so that "Our Colony" seems to have paid no taxes from their coming in April 1714 to beyond 1730.

The later-coming German emigrants to Germanna were largely if not entirely Lutherans. They brought no minister with them. All the Germans tried to obtain contributions from Europe to build a church and school and they sent an agent to Europe in 1720, who put advertisements in the German papers, locating and describing Germanna, saying there were seventy-two German families there, of which twelve were Reformed, the others Lutheran, and that there was then with them an old minister 76 years of age (Hager was 76 in 1720) named Henry Hager, and asked for contributions to build a church and school for the colony, "which is served by the above named minister in common," and was located in the said Virginia, at a place called German-town, on the "Rapenhenek" (Rappahannock).* The Lutherans later about 1724 went to Madison County and built Hebron church, which is still standing.

* 4 Hen. 77.

It would therefore seem that "Our Colony" with Hager was still at Germanna in 1720; but they were growing restless. They wanted to own their own land and the Governor would not sell to them; perhaps the antagonism then existing between the Reformed and the Lutherans broke out, and "Our Colony" comprising only twelve of the seventy-two families, although the first to come, and the most important, was outvoted; at any rate it appears from the papers in the case of Spilman vs. Gent brought in 1759 and still on file in Fauquier County, that "Our Colony" had entered land, in what was then Stafford, later Prince William, now Fauquier County, in 1718. Perhaps some of them moved to it at that time, but Pastor Hager and surely some of the colony was still living at Germanna when the agent went to Europe, for he as pastor and John Jost. Merdten (Martin) and John Jacob Rechtor (Rector), "elders of the congregation," signed the agent's commission. But not later than the year 1721 the Germanna Colony moved to Germantown.

John Fishback went with the colony from Germanna to Germantown. Every family mentioned in the court affidavits as coming to Virginia in 1714 went also, as did Henry Hager. It would appear as if John Fishback was one of the prominent men in the colony, or that he was one of the most successful. The laws of Virginia at that time were such that no alien could hold land. It cost some money to be naturalized, and apparently the colonists did not want to spend the money to have all the men naturalized, so John Fishback, John Hoffman and Jacob Holtzclaw were naturalized, and the grant from the Fairfax family, proprietors of the Northern Neck, that is, all the land between the Potomac and the Rappahannock, was made to these three, and they were to make leases to each of the other members of the colony, for such a lease was only considered a chattel interest, and there was no prohibition as to aliens holding chattels. These leases were all made. Later under more liberal naturalization laws, practically all the men in the colony became naturalized, for the poll book of an election for delegates to the house of burgesses, in Fauquier County in 1741, is still in existence, and the names of nearly all of them then living, appear on the poll book.

The Germantown patent is an interesting document, and it is given in full.

The Germantown Patent.

The Right Hon. Thomas Lord Fairfax, of Leeds Castle in the county of Kent, and Baron of Cameron in Scotland; and Wm. Cage of Millgate, in the parish of Bearstead, in said county of Kent, Esq. JACOB HOLTZCLAW*

The manner in which this land was entered, paid for and divided is described in the papers in the case of Spilman vs. Gent in Fauquier Co. This suit was filed October 27, 1759, and was one of the early suits in the new county of Fauquier. John Spilman had died before the Trustees had made the leases. He left young children, but the Trustees made the lease to the widow. She afterwards married a man named Gent, who at the time the suit was filed, "had been runaway from this colony for many years." Mary Gent was about to convey this land to her Gent children, and her eldest Spilman son brought a suit to restrain her from doing so, he claiming to be the owner of the land. The bill recites that "in 1718 Jacob Holtzclaw, John Hoffman, John Fishback, Peter Hitt, Harman Fishback, Tillman Weaver, John Spilman and several other Germans made an entry of a large tract of land known as Germantown in Fauquier county, that said Germans entered into an agreement with each other that they would be at equal expense in perfecting the title to the land and that said lands should be divided equally by lot among us, who were Germans born beyond sea out of the allegiance of our sovereign Lord the King, that only Hoffman Fishback and Holtzclaw were naturalized, and it was agreed that the patent should be issued in the name of these three and that they should make leases for 99 years to each partner.” This agreement was on record up to about 30 years ago, but it cannot now be found. It would show the signatures of all the members of the colony. The lease was also with the papers. It provided that Mary Gent should pay yearly at the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel one ear of Indian corn if demanded and pay yearly to the Lord of the fee, such rent and services as might become due. The other leases were no doubt in the same form. Not one of these leases can now be found on record. Mrs. Gent’s answer said the several Germans “had agreed to appropriate a certain quantity of land for the use of a minister, in doing which they took ten acres of John Spilman’s 150 acre tract.” While this case was pending the following deposition was taken:

By virtue of a commission issuing out of the worshipful court of Fauquier dated the 29th day of October 1759, to us directed to take the depositions of Tillman Weaver, Harman Fishback and Peter Hitt:

We have proceeded to take the depositions of Tillman Weaver, Harman Fishback and Peter Hitt, who being all of full age sworn on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God deposeth and saith, That the land now in dispute between Jacob Spillman Pltff., and Mary Gent, deft. is part of a tract of land taken up by a percell of Germans, about 31 years since, of which percell of Germans, Jacob Spillman father of the said plaintiff, was a party: and the said Germans not being all naturalized, it was agreed on by the general consent of the parties that the patent for the said tract of land should be granted by the proprietors agent to John Hoffman, John Fishback and Jacob Holtzclaw, who by agreement was to divide the said tract equally by lot among all the parties, concerned in taking up the same, and that the said trustee was by agreement to acknowledge to each man his part of the said tract, as fell to him by lot to his satisfaction; and these deponents further saith that John Spillman father to the said plaintiff, paid his full proportion, in taking up and dividing the said tract, and the land now in dispute between the said plaintiff and defendant fell to the lot of the said John Spillman, father to the said plaintiff in the partition of the above said tract; and that John Spillman lived on and held the said lot as his property during his life; but dying before the said lot of land was acknowledged, the right of the same was passed to Mary Gent deift., who was then widow of the said John Spillman and mother to the plaintiff. And these deponents further saith, that there is one other lot of land of fifty acres or thereabouts now in dispute between the said plaintiff and defendant sold her rights of to Jacob Rector, and further these deponents saith not.

Taken the 19th day of October before us.

These documents say that the Germans entered the Germantown land in 1718. It does not say they removed thither in 1718. Some of them at least, together with Pastor Hager were still at Germanna in the spring or summer of 1720, for as has been mentioned advertisements asking aid for these people were inserted in the German papers in the summer of

*This man was the father of John Marshall, the great Chief Justice of the United States. The Marshall family resided in Germantown at this time. There is an error in the deposition. It says the land “was taken up about 31 years since”; it should be 41. If the land was taken up in 1718, it was just 41 years before the deposition was taken. The bill states that the land “was taken up in 1718.”
that year, which described the colonies of 1714 and 1717 as still at Germanna, and Pastor Hager was ministering to them. The only house now standing on the Germantown tract, and which is undoubtedly the original Weaver house, had carved on a board, until lately over the door, the date 1721. The writer is of the opinion that the removal took place in the fall of 1720 or early spring of 1721. They were to be farmers at Germantown, and they would wish to be on their new farms in time to put in their crops in the spring of 1721.

The removal did not involve a change in location of more than twenty miles. The new village was called Germantown. It was at the time of the removal in Stafford county; after 1730 in Prince William County; after 1759, and now, in Fauquier County. It was about nine miles southeast of Warrenton. It was in the tract known as the "Northern Neck," which included all the land lying between the Rappahannock and the Potomac, and had been granted by the crown, to the Fairfax family; it paid a rental to that family until the Revolution.

The tract ran from northwest to southeast, was about one and a quarter miles wide from east to west, and two and a half miles long from north to south. Licking Run ran through it from northwest to southeast. It is just east of and about parallel with the branch railroad from Calverton to Warrenton, and extended somewhat farther south than the present line of the Southern Railroad. This was the earliest settlement in all that region, and became a well-known place, and was celebrated for the thrift and good farming of its inhabitants. Chief Justice John Marshall was born at Germantown.

We have seen that the colonists contributed equally to the cost of surveying and entering this land; it was divided into twelve equal tracts and the tracts were assigned by lot; each tract running entirely across the patent, with Licking Run running through each man's land. This gave each man a tract of land 63.5 poles or 1,047.75 feet from north to south, and running entirely across the patent, 378 poles, or 6,237 feet from east to west, and made a farm of just about 150 acres; for which each man would pay an annual rental of three shillings to the proprietors.

Owing to the destruction of the early records of Prince William County, during the civil war, it is not possible to fix the location of each of these tracts with certainty, but after a careful examination and comparison of deeds and wills relating to the tract, still remaining on record, mostly in Fauquier county, the recital of which would take far too much space; the writer is quite certain that the ownership of this tract was as appears on the diagram below. There is no doubt about the location of the shares of Hoffman, Spilman, John Fishback, Brumback, Rector and Coons; there is little doubt about the Weaver, Harman Fishback and Hitt tracts; there is much doubt about the order of the Kemper, Martin and Holtzclaw tracts. The Kemper tract is placed next below Hoffman, because the extant deeds, for this tract, giving the distances, from the west line to the Run, accord better with that location than lower down. Whether Martin or Holtzclaw had the southernmost tract, is at this time wholly uncertain.

The writer thinks there can be no doubt that when the colony came to Germantown, John Fishback’s house was built on the tract marked with his name on the diagram. Just how long he lived there, cannot now be told. It will later be seen that he was not living there, at the time of his death. He apparently gave his home place on this tract to his daughter Elizabeth, who afterward married John Peter Kemper.

It would be interesting to locate Hager’s house on this tract, and the church in which the colonists worshiped; for they did have a church in which they carried on their services, as long as Hager lived and even afterwards. The writer is of opinion that it was on the west end of the Spilman tract. The following are the reasons for this statement. Spilman died before his land was leased to him by the Trustees, and his widow married a man named Gent. In the suit of Spilman vs. Gent, above referred to, the pleadings and depositions of which are still preserved, it appears that after Spilman's death, the trustees took (by what right cannot be guessed) ten acres of his land for the support of the minister. The ten acres were in the middle of the tract east and west, for the taking made forty acres (to the west) so badly located that the widow sold her rights in it, for a beef, to Jacob Rector. Now Jacob Rector married, in Europe, Hager's daughter Elizabeth. John Fishback, whose first wife was Agnes Hager by his will, gave to his daughter, Catharine Rector (who married John, the eldest son of the emigrant Jacob Rector) "50 acres where Henry Hager doth now live" and the will recites that this land ran along John Hoffman's land. John Hoffman married Hager's daughter Anna Catharine. We know from other sources that John Fishback's land adjoined the Gent-Spilman tract. So we see this little family party located together on the Germantown tract. John Fishback and John Hoffman were two of the trustees, and (shrewdly) on Spilman's death, with his tract unleased to him, put Henry Hager on ten acres of this tract, and then as they could not buy from themselves sent the other son-in-law Jacob Rector to the widow Spilman, to buy the forty acres west of the ten acres, which he did for a beef and then deeded it to John Fishback, for John Fishback owned it at his death and gave it by his will to his daughter Catharine Rector. No doubt the church was close to Hager's house, for they would not ask the old man to go any farther than necessary to his church. Is it possible he could have been buried in the yard of this church?

This man Henry Hager who was too ill to preach longer at Oberfischbach in 1711, because he was suffering from a rupture; who had left a comfortable home in Germany to come to the wilds of America in 1713 when he was in his sixty-ninth year; who was considered old in 1720, seems to have lived until the spring of 1737; he made his will in 1733, and it was probated in 1737. He was the ancestor of many people in the colony, and his will is given in full.

Henry Hager’s Will.

In the name of God, Amen, I Henry Haeger minister of the Word of God, among the Germans at Licking Run in Prince William County, being very sick and weak, but of perfect and sound memory, praised be God for the same, do nominate constitute and appoint this my last will and testament in manner and form following:

Imprimis: I give unto my loving wife Anna Catharina all my estate, goods and chattels whatsoever, to her during her natural life.

Item: After the decease of my wife Anna Catharina I will and ordain that all my estate, goods and chattels whatever, be then divided amongst my seven grandchildren, Anna Catharina Fishback, John Frederick Fishback, Elizabeth Fishback, Henry Fishback; Agnes Hoffman, Anna Catharina Hoffman, and John Hoffman.

Item: I hereby revoke and make void all other and all former wills and testaments by me heretofore made. In testimony that this is my last will and testament I hereunto set my hand and affix my seal this die 10 Aprilis Anno Domini 1733.

H. Haeger Verbi Dei Minister [Seal]

Signed sealed and acknowledged, by the testator in the presence of

Jacob Holzclaw

Johann Jost. Martin

Johannes Camper.

At a court held for Prince William County, March 28, 1737, this will was proved by the oaths of Jacob Holzclaw and John Joseph Martin, two of the witnesses thereto, and it was admitted to record, and there being no executors therein named, on the motion of John Hoffman and his giving security, certificate was granted him for obtaining letters of administration with the will annexed in due form.

Will Book C, p. 108. Teste. Catesby Cocke Clerk
Prince William Co.

It will be noticed that he says his wife's name was Anna Catharina. This confirms the entry of the Siegen School record of December 3, 1678, where it is said Hager married Anna Catharine Friesenhagen. She was living at the time the will was made, so the marriage surely lasted more than 55 years: we do not know when she died, but if she lived as long as her husband, the marriage lasted more than 58 years.

Mr. Hager lived to be 93 years and six months old. Singularly none of his family is mentioned in his will except his wife and his Fishback and Hoffman grandchildren. His daughters Mrs. Fishback and Mrs. Hoffman were dead by this time.

It might be that he thought there was no use mentioning the children or their descendants who were living in far distant Europe or New York, but Mrs. Rector was living in the colony and had at least two Rector children. Rector was dead but she had married a man named Marr and was still living at or near Germantown.

The inventory of Mr. Hager's estate has been preserved, and as it may be of interest to know of what the furniture of a minister's house in Virginia consisted in those days, and what its value was, it is given in full, as nearly verbatim et literatim as can now be made out from the record book.

Inventory Henry Hager's Estate.

John Joseph Carter
John Kemper
Peter Hitt

At a court held for Prince William County May 23, 1737, John Rector presented this inventory and appraisement which were ordered to be recorded.

Teste Catesby Cocke Clerk.

There is an error in addition. The total should be 51 £ 16s. 6\(\frac{1}{2}\) d. This is a very fair amount of household property for those times, in a frontier county of Virginia, and the nearly twelve pounds in cash shows the family was by no means in want. What would some lover of the antique of the present day, think of "3 ould spinnen wheels at 10 shillings," about eighty cents each: and what descendant of Henry Hager would not love to have that old family Bible, which in its then condition was worth a pound and five shillings. Where today is this relic of the past?

John Fishback was plainly a man of energy and thrift. He soon began to acquire lands outside of the patent. Before his death he had obtained a grant of 1,028 acres of land in one tract in Upper Fauquier near where "The Plains" is now located. On September 28, 1730 he received a grant for 400 acres in Culpeper County, near where the village of Jeffersonton now stands. He also received a grant for a tract of 280 acres in the western part of the present Fauquier County on the north side of the Rappahannock, about four miles above Great Run, on 27 February, 1728/9, Book B, page 189; it looks as if he did not own this tract at his death for it is not mentioned in his will. He was not living on the patent land at his death. His brother-in-law, John Hoffman, had also left the patent and had gone over into Culpeper to live. It will be noticed that by his will John Fishback gave his plantation, "lying on the south side of Licking Run running towards the mapp" to his wife for life, and after her death to his son John Frederick. Every effort has been made to locate this tract, but without success. John Fishback's widow must have died before 1759, and John Frederick must have sold it before that date, for Fauquier was set off from Prince William in that year, and there is no deed in Fauquier for such a tract; the conveyance must have been recorded in Prince William and has been destroyed. The writer thinks the grant on the Rappahannock could not be the place, for the home plantation is described by a reference to Licking Run; and "running towards the mapp" certainly means the Germantown tract, for a tract away over on the Rappahannock would surely not be described as "running towards the mapp."

The writer thinks if this "plantation" could be identified, the grave of our immigrant ancestor might be found upon it; perhaps also the grave of his first wife Agnes Hager, and almost certainly the grave of his second wife. In those days when public cemeteries were not in use, nearly every family had a grave-yard on their own farm, where all the members of the family were buried, and more than likely it was true in this instance. This was the case on John Frederick Fishback's farm near Jeffersonton. Marble grave-stones could only be had by the wealthy, in Virginia at the time John Fishback died, and quite likely the graves of himself and wives were only marked by rough pieces of granite or sandstone, with no names upon them, as happened at Jeffersonton for fifty years after; but with the location of the plantation unknown, it is impossible to find the graves, in whatever way they were marked.

John Fishback's first wife, Agnes Hager, died soon after the colony came to Virginia. The exact date is unknown. The date of birth of only one of John Fishback's children is positively known; Elizabeth who married John Peter Kemper. She was born at Germantown, February 13, 1723. As this couple were married in Europe, had no children when they came, but had four born to them after they came to America, the writer thinks that Agnes Hager died at or shortly after the birth of her daughter Elizabeth. She left her husband with four small children to care for, the oldest of whom could not have been over ten years of age, and the youngest a baby. Under these conditions he would not remain longer unmarried than he could help, and he did not, for he died in 1733, and had four children by this second marriage. It must be stated however, that apparently he was not remarried in August, 1729. On that date, the Trustees under the patent made the lease to Mrs. Spilman, and while dower is released in the Spilman tract by Mrs. Holtzclaw, no dower is released by a wife of John Fishback or John Hoffman. If they took the trouble to have Mrs. Holtzclaw release her dower, they surely would have Mrs. Fishback release her dower had there been such a person. This would argue a set of twins in the second set of children, or that one child was born a good while after the father's death. His second wife survived him; her full name is given in the will but it is impossible to make out the name, no two persons reading it alike; the writer thinks it is Mary Daugherty. No such family is now known in the neighborhood. If Agnes Hager died while John Fishback was still living in Germantown, perhaps she was buried near the church. Her sister, Mrs. Hoffman, died about the same time, and perhaps when old Mr. Hager and his wife died they also were interred near the church. But no one knows, to this day, the sepulcher of this leader of his people.

John Fishback made his will March 11, 1733, and it was probated March 19, 1733. His children were all young, so he made his friend John Kemper and his brother Harman Fishback his executors. The will follows in full, and the spelling is given as nearly as it can be made out from the Will Book in Prince William County. The reader is reminded that the record is very badly faded, after more than 175 years, and it is almost impossible to decipher it.

John Fishback's Will.

In the name of God, Amen. I John Fishback att Licking Run in Prince William County being very seck and weak, but of perfect and sound memory, praised be to God for the same, do nominate, ordain constitute and appoint this my last will and testament, in manner and form following & none other, that is to say—I give and bequeath my soule to Almighty God my heavenly father trusting in the mercy and intercession of my Blessed Savior and Redeemer Jesus Christ, itt will be saved in the day of our Lord, and inheritt eternal Glory for ever more; and I bequeath my body to the earth to be buried in decent manner.

Item. I give unto my loving wife Mary (Daugherty?) the third of all my moveables & for to have house and land during her life, and after her decease it shall fall to my son to John Frederick Fishback lying on the South side of Licking Run running towards the Mapp. Item. And I lave to my son Henry Fishback, on the north side of the said Licking Run, fifty eakers more or less. Item. At a Court held for Prince William County the nineteenth day of March 1733 this will was presented into Court by John Kamper & Harman Fishback Executors therein named, who made oath thereto according to law and being proved by the oaths of George Gent Jacob Holtzclaw and Joseph Martin, three of the witnesses thereto, it is admitted to record, & on the motion of John Kamper & Harmon Fishback & on their performing what is usual in such cases certificate is granted them for obtaining a probate thereof in due form.

Teste—Catesby Cocke C. C.
There is a deed in the Fauquier records, Book 5, page 240, dated November 23, 1772, from Jacob Rector and Mary his wife to Henry Utterback in consideration of 52 pounds, for one hundred acres in Fauquier County on Licking Run, being part of the land taken up by John Fishback, John Hoffman and Jacob Holtzclaw, for the Germans “this piece was devised by John Fishback unto his daughter Elizabeth which intermarried with Peter Kemper, who conveyed the said land to Jacob Rector.” This deed to Jacob Rector, from Peter Kemper and Elizabeth Fishback his wife is not on record in Fauquier, it must have been made prior to 1759, and was on record in Prince William Co. The large consideration of 52 pounds, so much larger than any other 100 acres in the tract that the writer has been able to find, about that time, confirms him in the opinion that the consideration was so large because John Fishback’s original home was on this tract.

Henry Fishback must have died young. We never hear of him after the probate of the will. Under the English law of primogeniture and exclusion of the half blood the land left to him in his father’s will went to his full brother John Frederick, to the exclusion of his half brothers, and to the exclusion of the sisters. In consequence John Frederick became the owner of Henry’s land in Culpeper, as well as his Germantown tract. The latter as well as the home plantation John Frederick must have sold before 1759 for there is no deed for it in Fauquier; and he then moved to the Culpeper plantation, buying other land near it, and obtaining a new grant for it from the crown on June 4, 1748, for 790 acres, which grant recites that the land was formerly granted on Sept. 28, 1730, to his father John Fishback and that Frederick Fishback was at the date of the grant of Orange County. Culpeper was then part of Orange County. Until recently much of this land was owned by his descendants. The house in which John Frederick was living at his death in 1785 still stands now part of a larger house; and near it in the little family graveyard sleep John Frederick, his wives and many of their descendants. The chances are this house was built as early as 1748. A picture of it appears on a neighboring page.

Harmon Fishback, one of the children by the second wife, must also have died young, for he is never heard of after the will, and under the English laws above referred to, the 1,028 acres in Upper Fauquier given in the will of John Fishback to his four children by the second marriage, came into the joint ownership of John Jacob, John Philip, and Josiah, and they divided it among themselves, by a partition agreement, still on record; and a large part of this tract is still owned by a descendant of Josiah today.

Germantown in later years became a large and prosperous settlement, and was known far and wide. After Hager's death, they seem to have always been without a pastor, although they were always trying to obtain one; yet they kept up their services in their church, and set apart one hundred acres of land for a Glebe. The proof of this statement is to be found in a deed in Fauquier in Book 4, page 175, wherein Peter Hitt, Jacob Weaver and Peter Kemper on April 22, 1771, convey to Harmon Fishback "all their right title and interest to one lot of land containing by estimation one hundred acres whereon Thomas Marshall now lives, in said county of Fauquier and binding on the lands of Charles Carter of Lancaster and Jeremiah Darnall of Fauquier, being one of the lots of land in the German Town, formerly set apart for a German Glebe." Peter Hitt is the emigrant; whether Harmon Fishback is the emigrant or his son cannot be told. Peter Kemper is the John Peter Kemper who married Elizabeth Fishback; she had been dead since 1768. It is impossible from the description in this deed to locate the Glebe. According to the stone placed to mark the birthplace of John Marshall, it was far towards the south end of the Germantown tract. It will be remembered that Carter bounded the Germantown tract on the east. The writer thinks that Jeremiah Darnall owned land just to the south of the Germantown tract. If this is correct, the Glebe was in the southeast corner of the tract. The puzzling thing is, why did these three men deed this Glebe land? Had the church organization been kept up till 1771 and were these three men its trustees? Or had this land been set apart by the entire colony as a Glebe, and these three men by this deed were selling their three twelfths interest in it. The writer thinks the former, because no other deed of a similar character can be found from the other members of the colony.

Holtzclaw read the service during these later years; he lived to be a very old man. His will is probated in 1760. The settlement was visited a number of times between 1741 and 1748 by the Moravian ministers, from Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, who made missionary journeys all over that part of the country. These missionaries always preached in the church. Their diaries, recently discovered, tell of their visits. They mention Hoffman and Holtzclaw by name. The colony is referred to as a colony of “Reformed miners from Nassau-Siegen,” “Twelve Reformed Families from Nassau-Siegen,” “Twelve families from the Siegen district,” and is always called Germantown on Licking Run.

The diaries contain the statement that the colony had a church and a glebe of one hundred acres; and this glebe was offered at once to one missionary after another, if he would remain as pastor. On one rainy day one hundred persons attended a service in the church. For a while a missionary came from Bethlehem to Germantown twice a year to administer communion, but he returned to Europe and for many years they had no one to preach for them.*

It is a curious and interesting study, to show the gradual loss of its German language and feeling by the members of

* These Moravian Diaries were discovered a few years ago, in the Moravian Monastery at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, by Rev. W. H. Hinke. They are in German. Mr. Hinke translated them and published them, in his article above referred to in “The Journal of the Presbyterian Historical Society,” Vol. II, Nos. 1, 2 and 3. Philadelphia.
this colony. The family record of John Peter Kemper, commenced in 1738, starts out, as his father's did, with a verse of poetry, written in German, calling down the blessings of the Almighty on the married life just beginning. This is an old German custom. The entries of the births of all the children follow, and they and the death of his wife Elizabeth Fishback are all written in German but after that time the entries are in English, but the turn of the phrases betrays the German origin of the writer. The writer of this sketch has seen the German Bible of another member of this colony, where the early entries are in German.

But the new county of Fauquier was set off from Prince William in 1759, showing that the lands about Germantown were fast filling up with settlers, which of course were English, and Germantown was soon swallowed up in this flood of English immigration. The business and court transactions of the colony were all transacted in English. By the time the third generation was ready to come on the stage they did not want to be known as Germans, they did not want their settlement called Germantown (or "Dutehtown" in derision, as "we English" are still prone to do) and they got away from their German language and customs as fast as they could, just as the little children of German families on our streets today cannot be forced to speak German. All this appears in many ways, and in none more surprising than in the many marriages contracted by the members of the third generation of all of these families with their English neighbors. Mark them: Amiss, Armitage, Ball, Beverly, Hathaway, Morgan, Rogers and many others. This is in notable contrast to the second generation, where the marriages were almost entirely within the colony. This very fact shows the estimation in which these sturdy, thrifty Germans were held by their English neighbors. John Marshall's company in the Revolutionary War, which later became part of one of the Virginia regiments was largely recruited from members of the Germantown colony, and a large number of the young men of the third generation, were in every campaign till the end of the war. If they could stand shoulder to shoulder with their English neighbors on the battlefield in defense of their homes, there was no reason why they should not marry their sisters and daughters.

We hear little of Germantown or its German settlers after the close of the Revolution. The sons of the colony went forth to people the great west, along with their English friends, and we have long ceased to expect to find a Kuntz or a Weber, in a Coons or a Weaver, or to dream that they came to Virginia, in the first organized German colony that came to America. The descendants of these colonists are to be found all over the west and south, and with the death of the older people, Germantown was at an end. During the Civil War it was close to the Bull Run battlefields, and was always in the track of the armies. Now, there is no village of Germantown to be found. You can only hear the hills to the north called, "the Germantown Hills," and there is an occasional reference to, "the Germantown neighborhood." Midland, a station on the southern railroad is thought to be located upon the Germantown tract. There is now only one house standing on the entire tract, it belongs to the Weaver family, and most of the land belongs to them. They tell of foundations of old houses being still occasionally plowed up in the fields.

Mr. Hager was the link which tied nearly all the families of this colony together in the bonds of relationship. Hager's daughter Elizabeth had married in Europe John Jacob Rector; and their eldest son John married his cousin Anna Catharine Fishback, the older daughter of John Fishback. Agnes Hager married John Fishback, and Anna Catharine Hager married John Hoffman; John Frederick Fishback married first a Holtzclaw and then a Martin, and Elizabeth Fishback married John Peter Kemper. Descendants of some of these persons repeatedly intermarried with every family of the colony except the Brumback family. This man must have died early and seems to have left no male descendants. The name never appears among any of the records, and does not now appear anywhere in the neighborhood. The second Mrs. John Hoffman lived until 1820 or later; she related to Rev. James Kemper many incidents about the early years of the colony, and the relationships of the various families, which he incorporated in his memoirs, called by him "Life's Review," written in Cincinnati towards the close of his life, about 1830.

To show how the story of "Our Colony" had been kept alive for three generations, his description of the coming to America, and the settlement at Germanna and later at Germantown is given in full.

"My grandfather John Kemper was born in the county of Nassau Siegen (Germany) on the river Sieg, but how near the town of Siegen I have no documents to show. He owned a small landed property there, was a man of some learning, serious piety, and a penetrating mind, with a most amiable disposition and temper. In his reflections on the severity of the Government of his country, and the vast difference between that, and the liberties enjoyed in America, he finally resolved to embark for the New World, and did so with a company of about twelve families, who were perhaps all related by consanguinity or affinity. They touched on England, and made a short stay there, just at the time when Queen Anne died and George the First ascended the throne of England, and about 107 years after the first settlement of Virginia, about the year 1714. From thence they sailed to Virginia, I think at the time Governor Spottswood administered the government of the State.

"By the Governor's advice or recommendation they made a temporary settlement, in what is now I think Orange County, and named the place Germanna. But they were on lands belonging to the Governor, or under his control, and within about two years they saw or believed that the Governor was disposed to impose on them, and they determined on removing to Prince William County out of which Fauquier County was afterwards taken. They did so and purchased or perhaps entered, vacant land, each 200 acres on a small stream called Licking Run, and called the place Germantown; and so it is called to this day. I have seen in Orange County, the remains of hewn stone, which some of them had cut for the Governor. They were mostly mechanics and master workmen in their several trades. Germantown lies about 8 miles below Warrenton the present county town of Fauquier County. Each man’s land was surveyed in an oblong square, the run or creek passing through the middle of each tract. They had now obtained the height of their ambition or they might nearly as well have owned 2000 acres each as 200. . . . The first year at Germantown they packed all their provisions from Fredericksburg on their heads, and raised their first crop with their hoes, in both which their women bore a part.

My grandfather invented the first shovel plow, and in a few years they had large stocks of tame and very large cattle. I recollect well when my father had many horses nearly or quite wild in the woods about the year 1760.

“Holtzclaw was their schoolmaster and a good scholar. Their minister in Germany, who though he did not come with them soon followed; his name was Haeger, and he was my great grandfather by my mother, and a man of profound learning, but he was old, and died soon. They were Presbyterians and soon raised a house for public worship in which after the death of their minister, they constantly held worship, by reading the scriptures, singing psalms, prayer, and reading sermons. They were well provided with books. . . . They kept up their worship both public and private, in the German language, and their schools also, till being as it were, lost in the crowd, the first generation removed by death, and all their public political matters transacted in English, their language was gradually lost in the second generation. I spoke a dialect of the German language, as used in my father’s house, fluently, till I was ten or twelve years old but have now almost entirely lost it.”
It will possibly be interesting to give the personal appearance of the Fishback family. It seems to have been typically German. Here is the pen portrait Rev. James Kemper in "Life's Review" gives of his mother Elizabeth Fishback, the younger daughter of the emigrant.

"My mother was Elizabeth Fishback the daughter of John Fishback, who was one of the original emigrants from Nassau Siegen. She was born on the 13th day of February 1723 at Germantown and was married to my father the 7th day of September 1738 under 16 years of age. She was rather below the middle stature, and of a fair complection. The features of her face were good, an innocent eye, fair or light yellow hair, a fine suit of it, and the law of kindness was on her tongue. I recollect her well. The wife the mother friend and neighbor, shown to the best advantage in her, while she lived. She was remote from whatever was or had the appearance of parade or affectation, and equally remote from neglect or inattention where the contrary was required or necessary. To sum up her character in a word, she was the accomplished wife, not indeed in the eyes of the World, but in the view of all genuine goodness and worth . . . . She died the 21st day of February, 1768."

John Fishback's family ought to be called the Governor's family. As has been told, Jacob Rector's son, John, married his cousin, Anna Catharine Fishback, and to them were born seven sons and two daughters. Two of the descendants of one of these daughters, James S. Conway, and Elias N. Conway became respectively the first and fifth governors of Arkansas; Henry M. Rector, a descendant of one of these sons, was governor of Arkansas in 1860. Wm. M. Fishback, a descendant of John Frederick Fishback, was governor of Arkansas, 1893-5. Besides this, James L. Kemper, a descendant of Elizabeth Fishback, was from 1874 to 1878 governor of the Old Dominion; making five governors of their States descended from this sturdy German emigrant of 1714, John Fishback. The portraits of these five Governors appear on an adjoining page.

TILDE tot.
It has been seen that there was also a Harman Fishback in the Germanna Colony, and that he also owned one of the tracts at Germantown. It has always been supposed that John and Harman were brothers, but there is no positive testimony on the subject. Quite likely Harman Fishback's record could be obtained from the records of the Siegen church. Very carelessly the writer neglected to get it while he was in Siegen. The marriage contract mentioned hereafter, is on record in Prince William in 1745 between a Harman Fishback and Mary Neas. The chances are this is our man; and it looks as if his first wife had died by that time and he was marrying a second time. The Harman Fishback, Sr., of Culpeper and Harman Fishback his son who were making deeds for part of the Germantown Tract as late as 1775, are supposed to be the emigrant Harman and his son, but there is nothing to identify them. The writer has about two hundred and fifty names all descended from a Harman Fishback, who went from Culpeper to Madison County about 1800. These were largely gathered together through the diligence of one of them, Mr. Reuben D. Fishback, of Cincinnati; but they have not been published herein, because of the uncertainty of the line of descent, and because it has so far been impossible to certainly run them back to Harman the emigrant. The trouble is that there was a Jacob Fishback in the colony in 1733 when John Fishback's will was made, who was a cousin of John, whose subsequent history, and what became of his descendants if any he had, is wholly unknown. About 1800 there was a prominent and numerous Fishback family living in Wythe Co., Virginia. They have now all disappeared from there, but one family descended from them is living in Illinois. They can tell nothing about their family prior to 1800. The writer feels confident that the Wythe County and the Madison County families are related to us, in some way; but it is wholly uncertain how.

The members of this colony soon felt the effects of the hardships incurred by all settlers in a new country. John Spilman seems to have been the first to depart this life. He died "before the land (at Germantown) was parted to him" says the record in Spilman vs. Gent, that is, before they actually settled upon the land. His widow was left with a number of very small children, and she soon sought the support and protection of another husband, and found one in the person of George Gent, the first instance apparently of any member of the colony marrying outside of it, but George soon ran away from the colony (there may be an unwritten romance here), leaving her with several more children. And she had a hard struggle with them all. There is a curious thing. The oldest stone in the Fishback graveyard at Jeffersonton (a marble stone by the way) is that of a John Spilman who died February 25, 1815, aged 75 years. And a more curious thing is that the stone does not tell and no one now living knows, who this man was, or why he was buried in a Fishback graveyard. As Jeffersonton is only about 12 miles from Germantown and as Elizabeth, the daughter of John Frederick Fishback, had married Charles Spilman of Germantown, it would seem that the man under this sod was a descendant of the German emigrant above mentioned, but there was a Spilman family at Jamestown in the very early days of the colony who were almost certainly English people, and we can't be sure.

John Jacob Rector died between 1724 and 1729. The Germantown lease was made to his widow in the latter year. It will be remembered that she was a daughter of Parson Hager. Apparently she only had two sons; the elder married his cousin, Anna Catharine Fishback. The seven sons of this marriage seem to have all emigrated to Kaskaskia in very early days. Mrs. Rector was married often enough to have had several romances in her history. It is almost certain that after the death of her sister Agnes Hager Fishback, she cared for her little children at least until John Fishback could take unto himself another wife. It did not take him long; he must have had fetching ways about him, for he had four little children, but he was only about 34 years of age, and no doubt had a good farm and a comfortable home, and if the writer is right in deciphering the name of the woman in the will mentioned as his wife, she belonged in an English family. The writer thinks it clear that Agnes Hager Fishback died at the birth of her younger daughter Elizabeth in February, 1723. The sister of Agnes, Anna Catharine, who married John Hoffman, died about this same time.

Jacob Holtzelaw's will is probated in Fauquier February 29, 1760. He was a good scholar, the schoolmaster of the little flock and the reader in the little church and their spiritual leader after Mr. Hager's death. The Moravian missionaries always stayed at his house, or went first to see him as they passed through. He left ten children and has had a great many descendants. His children married into the Hitt and Fishback family. In the next generation, four Holtzelaws married four Kempers.

John Kemper died before 1759, for no will or administrator of his can be found in Fauquier, set off from Prince William in that year. He left ten children all of whom grew up. His eldest son married John Fishback's youngest daughter. John Kemper has had nearly 6,000 descendants to this date.

It is impossible to tell how much labor and research has been spent on looking up the history of the members of this colony. The records of Fauquier County at Warrenton and of Culpeper County at Culpeper are all preserved, finely indexed and came through the war safely, those at Warrenton having been hidden away during the struggle. But the records of Prince William County, which went back to 1730 and are now at Manassas, with the exception of some half dozen books containing wills and deeds and not in succession, as well as most of the records of Stafford County, are entirely destroyed or were carried off. Germantown was in Prince William from 1730 to 1759, and many of the records relating to the colony are gone forever. This is what has made it so difficult to write the history of the colony. We were indeed fortunate in having preserved for us the wills of John Fishback and Pastor Hager.
As a sample of the way some things were preserved during the Civil War perhaps the following incident will be interesting. Mr. Theo. Kemper, of Cincinnati, attended the University of Virginia, from which institution he was graduated in 1859. The journey between Charlottesville and Cincinnati was long, difficult and expensive at that time, and he did not return to Cincinnati during his four years' course, but spent his vacations with his many relatives about Warrenton, generally with his great-uncle Charles Kemper, who lived at "Cedar Grove," about two and a half miles southwest of Warrenton, in which village he made many acquaintances. Mr. Theo. Kemper returned to Cincinnati and was admitted to the bar in that city. There now hangs over the judge's seat in the handsome court room at Warrenton, a splendid life-size painting considered one of the best in existence, of John Marshall, the great chief justice of the United States. It is in a very heavy gilt frame. It was painted, framed and hung in the court-house many years before the war at the expense of the county and was regarded with the greatest veneration. When the war began and the armies began to go back and forth and battles were fought all round, and violence was rampant, the prominent people of Warrenton became fearful that the painting would be destroyed or stolen. The county was not deemed a safe place for it so it was cut from its frame, rolled and enclosed in a tin case, and at the instigation of Mr. Charles Kemper sent to Mr. Theo. Kemper in Cincinnati, and stood in a fireproof vault in his office during all the long years of the war. At its close Mr. Theo. Kemper returned the painting to its friends in Warrenton, and it now hangs again in its frame and place in the court room, the pride of the county. Blood is thicker than water, and friendship and honor will often outlast the bloodiest war.

But we have kept the Germantown colonists "a long time a dying." Tillman Weaver's will was probated in Fauquier March 27, 1760. He left nine children. They married Hitts and Kempers. He has left many descendants, in Kentucky and elsewhere.
Peter Hitt's will was probated in Fauquier in 1771. He left five children. They married Rectors, Coons and Kempers. Their name is legion in Virginia and all over the south and west. The late Hon. R. R. Hitt, an able and accomplished member of congress from Illinois and for many years the efficient chairman of the foreign relations committee of the house, was a descendant of this man.

John Hoffman seceded from the Germantown colony at an early date; the reason cannot now be told, but he had a brother in the Moravian monastery at Bethlehem, Pa. Perhaps there were religious troubles of some kind. But he with other Germans started another Reformed Church, just over the river in Culpeper County, and it was quite a rival of the Germantown church. It has wholly disappeared, and its location cannot now be determined. Hoffman had three children by Anna Catharine Hager, and after her death he married again, and by this second wife had twelve children. The first wife's descendants are all related to the Fishbacks. Hoffman's will was probated in Culpeper, August 17, 1772. He owned very large tracts of land in that county. His second wife must have been a young woman when he married her, for she lived well into the nineteenth century, and was in possession of much information about the early history of the colony and the men and women of it. Why did she not write it out for us? Whether or not she belonged in the colony, cannot now be told. John Hoffman left many descendants; they are scattered through Virginia and the west. One daughter married a Spilman. At least one of his sons by his second wife returned to Germany on a visit, before the end of the eighteenth century. So far as known this is the only case of the kind in the colony on record.

It was for a long time supposed that Hoffman was the patriarch of the colony, but it now seems as if Harman Fishback was living as late as July, 1775. He was certainly living in 1759 for his deposition in the case of Spilman vs. Gent is still on file. A man by the name, who must have been the emigrant, entered into a written marriage contract with a woman whose name appears to be Mary Neas (this is the best reading that can be made of it) in 1745. It is preserved in the Prince William records. A Harman Fishback, a resident of Culpeper, with Harman, his son a resident of Fauquier, were making deeds of lands in the Germantown tract in 1775, but no positive connection can be made between this man and the emigrant. No will of his appears in either Culpeper or Fauquier, and the date of his death is unknown. The elder Harman, above mentioned, had a daughter who married a Taylor.

This leaves Martin, Coons and Broomback undisposed of. The latter apparently died early and without male issue. No trace of him can be found in any of the records after 1741. At that date three married women, with their husbands, make a deed for part of the Germantown tract, and the deed recites that it is part of the land set off to Milchard Broomback. Coons seems to have been making deeds until 1760. The date of his death is unknown. One of his daughters married a son of the Kemper emigrant. The date of Martin's death is also at present unknown. Many descendants of Martin and Coons are still living in Virginia, Kentucky and the west.

Two comments at least can be made on the members of this colony. By intermarriages they were all related, and if the Fishbacks who peruse this record think they have not relatives enough therein set forth, they can easily claim kinship with the descendants of all the other emigrants. Further, they were numerous. It would indeed be an interesting study to ascertain how many citizens of these United States are or have been descended from these twelve sturdy Germans. It would run into the tens of thousands all in two hundred years. The writer knows of one family of sixteen children, three of fifteen, and of many of twelve. No wonder they were forced to leave Germantown, and no wonder the Great West was soon peopled, when the hive began to swarm.
As has been told Pastor Hager lived until 1737, at least his will was then probated. Apparently he left no descendants by the name of Hager in Virginia. This would argue that none of his sons came to Virginia. We have seen one went to New York, and the tradition is he left children. There is at the present time a prominent family in Kentucky by the name of Hager. It may have come from Hagerstown, Maryland, which was settled about 1750 by a Doctor Hager, who was no relation to Parson Hager; at least if they were related the relationship long antedates the coming of either man to America.

Many descendants of this colony have been and are now prominent in their adopted country's history. The five governors have been mentioned. There have been numerous congressmen, judges, members of legislatures, mayors, and other municipal and county officers among them, but to tell about them would take us too far afield. Many from these families were in the Revolutionary army. The writer did not begin making a record of them, and so did not take it up later. Of course John Fishback was not in the army, and it is not very likely any of his sons were, for they were all pretty well along in years, even by 1775. But scores of the third generation of all the families were undoubtedly in the army. The United States government pensioned all Revolutionary soldiers living in 1832, and if any soldier was living in 1832 who drew a pension (and no doubt they all did), his name and service can be obtained from the pension office. It now maintains a bureau which does nothing but hunt up such records, without charge to the applicant.

The burial place of not a single member of this colony, or of any of their wives is certainly known at this date. Even the burial place of that leader of his flock, Pastor Hager, is unknown. In those days the only tombstones in Virginia were of marble. They were brought from England at large expense. The writer and those who have assisted him in Virginia have spent a large amount of time hunting for the grave of John Fishback, but all in vain. No doubt there were rude stones of granite or sandstone at the grave of each of these men, but no inscriptions could be carved on them. The writer has seen many such stones in the early family graveyards in Virginia, but not one could be identified. In the Fishback graveyard at Jeffersonton there are about twenty such and no doubt (John) Frederick Fishback, and his two wives are under some of them, but no one knows. In the Kemper graveyard at Cedar Grove there were several such, fifty years ago, and one or two have survived to this day. Undoubtedly John Peter Kemper and his wife, Elizabeth Fishback, are buried there, and it has always been the tradition that the Kemper emigrant lies there also, but this is as near as we can come to it. The writer thinks it very doubtful if the grave of a single one of these emigrants will ever be discovered.

As has been said John Frederick Fishback, so called in his father's will, but later always calling himself Frederick, was living in that part of Orange County which is now Culpeper by February 12, 1747. On that date (Book G, 39, Northern Neck Land Grants) he received a grant of 185 acres in the Little Fork of the Rappahannock, on Hegeman River. On June 4, 1748 (Book G, 61) he received a grant for 990 acres in Orange Co., 400 acres of which was granted to his father, John Fishback, on September 28, 1730. This is also a part of the Jeffersonton tract, and is clearly the land given to Henry Fishback by John Fishback's will. The grant is to Frederick Fishback, of Orange County. All these grants were at a rental of one shilling for each 50 acres, payable annually at the feast of St. Michael the Archangel. It is likely that about this time he sold the plantation left him by his father in his will, and his brother Henry having died, and the Jeffersonton tract descending to him, moved over into Culpeper; it is also likely that the old part of the Jeffersonton house dates back at least this far. Frederick Fishback was twice married, but the dates of the marriages are not known.
"FLEETWOOD," the Home of John Frederick and Martin Fishback. Culpeper County, Virginia.
The dates of the births of only two of his children are certainly known, Jacob and Martin. The writer thinks Martin was the only child, at least the only son from the second marriage. John was the oldest son; he is always called "Squire John"; he was a Justice of the Peace for more than forty years. Martin received the old homestead by his father's will; he was born, married and died in the same room in it, and John lived north of Jeffersonton about one mile, and is buried there. Jacob Fishback in the spring of 1783 removed to what is now the extreme eastern part of Tennessee, but only remained there a few months, going on to Kentucky in the fall of that year and settling in the forks of Dicks River. The names of more than 800 of his descendants appear in the record. They were gathered together largely by Dr. T. M. Taylor, of New York. Frederick's son Frederick died unmarried. Upon the death of Martin Fishback in 1842, his then only living son Frederick went to Illinois. At this date, while there are hundreds of descendants of Frederick Fishback (the son of the emigrant) living in Culpeper County, there is not one named Fishback. The records of the Culpeper branches of this family have been largely gathered together by Miss Lucy Burnley Stark, of Ryland, Va.

The son called John Jacob in the emigrant's will dropped the name Jacob, and was known as John. He was dead by February 7, 1789, leaving a widow Sarah whose dower was set off to her in 1797 in part of the 1,028 acre tract. Of his sons given in the record, the writer can learn nothing positive. There are Fishbacks, apparently descendants of this man, living today in Upper Fauquier, about The Plains, but they will not answer letters. There is a family living about Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, who are descended from a Jesse Fishback (who was killed at the battle of Fort Meigs in 1812) and a woman named Turley, who belong to this family, because deeds for some of the 1,028 acre tract are signed and acknowledged in Kentucky, and a man named Turley in Virginia is given power of attorney to sell it because Jesse and his wife are going to Kentucky. The Mt. Stirling family can not give their descent.

John Philip's family, or Philip as he called himself in his will, is given pretty fully in the record. The sons all came west, and are to be found in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, descendants of the daughters are to be found in Virginia. The record of this family has largely been gathered together by Miss Sallie Vowles, of Mallow, Va.

The emigrant's son Josiah, his son Nelson, and Nelson's son Josiah T. have lived to this day on the 1,028-acre tract. A large part of this tract is still owned by Mr. Josiah T. Fishback, of Farmington, near The Plains, Fauquier Co., Va. He is now in his ninety-fourth year. The third generation from the emigrant is still in possession of this land.

Jacob Fishback was the first of the family to go west, about 1783. Many other members of the family left Virginia about the close of the Revolution, generally going first to Kentucky, from which state they have scattered all over the west and south. Many states of the Union today shelter more Fishbacks than Virginia; but the writer thinks they all look fondly back to "Home—way down in Old Virginia."

In closing, the writer would like to call attention to the fact that April, 1914, was the two hundredth anniversary of the settlement of "Our Colony" at Germanna.

Why would it not be the proper thing for all the descendants of these twelve families to join together and erect a suitable monument at Germanna, to commemorate the settlement of the first organized German colony to come to Virginia? The names of these twelve sturdy Germans, with Pastor Hager's name also, should be carved upon it, with a suitable inscription telling why it was erected. Germanna at present may seem a little difficult to reach, because there is no railroad near it; but it will not always be so. It is in the midst of the Virginia battlefields, and the day is not far off when they will be marked with suitable monuments, as Gettysburg and other battlefields have been; and then there will be some method of reaching Germanna. It should not be difficult, among the many thousands of descendants of these twelve German families, to raise enough money to erect a suitable monument.

In conclusion the writer desires to say that the career of the Fishback family (as well as the careers of the other families of this colony) in this country is deserving of the highest consideration. It was comparatively easy for an English family, descended from an ancestor of high degree, with wealth, prestige, education to back it, to settle down in Virginia, and achieve distinction and success, or preserve them. But for a family of foreign birth and lineage, without the glamor of high descent, without wealth, with little education, of an alien language and religion, to come to Virginia, and settle down among a haughty people, if not hostile at least unfriendly, with only its piety and the strong arms and stout hearts of its men and women to aid it, and achieve the measure of success that this family has done, is worthy of the highest praise. Surely America is the land of opportunity.

Willis M. Kemper.

GENEALOGY OF THE FISHBACK FAMILY
DIRECTIONS FOR CONSULTING THE GENEALOGY.

The arrangement of the genealogical matter is simple. It is by generations, every member of the prior generation being given before the next is started.

It will be noticed that there are three rows of numbers at the left side of the pages. The roman numbers, standing next before the names, simply show the number of children in a family and of course vary in every family. The middle row of numbers is continued from the first page of the genealogy to the last, so that every person recorded has his own number and retains it always. The third row of numbers, in black-faced type, refers back to the previous generation, and corresponds with the personal number in the second row, opposite the name of an individual belonging to the said previous generation.

To avoid the necessity of looking forward into the next generation to see if anything further is recorded concerning a person, the name of each individual who will reappear in a subsequent generation, is followed by the character ‡. By this method, a name can be traced from the beginning of the record through it to its end, or from the rear backward to the emigrant, by simply following the number. For example, if you wish to follow the family of John Frederick Fishback—On page 81 his number is 2. Now turn to the next generation, to where 2 appears in the outside column. It will be found on page 84. If you wish to follow John Frederick’s son Jacob, it will be seen on this page that his number is 20. Turn to the next generation where 20 appears in the outside row of numbers. It will be found on page 90. His daughter Anne, No. 82, will be found in the next generation where 82 is seen in the outside column on page 118. The record of Anne’s son, Jacob Fishback Price, No. 222, is found in the next generation where 222 appears in black-faced type on page 155. And the record of his daughter, Maria Louise, No. 593, will be found in the next generation where 593 is in black-faced type on page 236. It is obvious that if you commenced with 593 and wished to trace her ancestors back to the emigrant, all you need to do is to look in the prior generation where 593 appears in the middle row of numbers, and so on.

FIRST GENERATION.

JOHN FISHBACK.

B. 12 July, 1691, in the Village of Truppbach, about one mile north of the city of Siegen, Westphalia, Germany; came to Virginia in April, 1714, with Gov. Spottswood's colony of Germans; settled first with them at Germanna in what was then Spottsylvania (now Orange) County; moved with them later (about 1721) to Germantown in Fauquier.

D. 1734 (will probated Prince William Co., March 19, 1734) at or near Germantown.

M. (1) abt. 1713 (he brought his wife with him to Va. in April, 1714).

AGNES HAGER,

dau. of Parson Henry Hager (d. 1737), pastor of the Germantown colony.

B. Siegen, Germany, 26 Nov., 1697.

D. Germantown, abt. 1725.

Issue:

1 I. Anna Catharina.‡
2 II. John Frederick.§
3 III. Elizabeth, b. 13 Feby., 1723, d. 21 Feby., 1768, m. 7 Sept., 1738, o. s. John Peter Kemper. Her great grandson, James L. Kemper, was Governor of Virginia, 1874 to 1878.

4 IV. Henry, d. yg.

M. (2)
Mary Daugherty, mentioned in his will; survived him.

5 V. Harman, d. yg.
6 VI. John Jacob.‡
7 VII. John Philip.‡
8 VIII. Josiah.‡

The order in which they are given above is that of their father's will. There is no authority for any other. There is doubt as to whether Anna Catharine or John Frederick comes first; she is first mentioned in Henry Hager's will, dated 10 Apl., 1733.
SECOND GENERATION.

ANNA CATHARINA FISHBACK.

B. Germanna, Va., 1714?
D. Rectortown, Va., 1775, and buried there by the side of her husband.
M. Before March, 1733.

JOHN RECTOR,

son of John Jacob Rector, d. bet. 1724 and 1729 (one of the Germantown colonists) and Elizabeth, dau. Parson Henry Hager (b. 1687). John Rector was born at Maidstone, Kent, England, 1713(?), d. Rectortown, Va., Mch., 1773. His will is in B. I, 205-7, Fauquier Co., Records, dated 5 Nov., 1772, probated 22 Mch., 1773.

Issue:

9 I. John, d. before 1773.
10 II. Henry.
11 III. Daniel.
12 IV. Charles.
13 V. Jacob.
14 VI. Benjamin.
15 VII. Frederick.‡
16 VIII. Catharine.
17 IX. Elizabeth.

More or less information can be found relating to all these children in "Pioneers and Makers of Arkansas," by Josiah H. Shinn.
JOHN FREDERICK FISHBACK.

He lived the latter part of his life and died at his home "Fleetwood," about a quarter of a mile west of the present village of Jeffersonton, about 16 miles north of Culpeper C. H., in Culpeper Co., Va., as did his son Martin and Martin's son Frederick. All are supposed to be buried in the family graveyard, adjoining the house, still standing (1914). Martin and Frederick certainly are.

B. abt. 1716, at Germanna.
D. between 20 Sept., 1782, the date of his will, and 21 Oct., 1782, its probate in Culpeper Co., Va. Will signed "f."

M. (1)

ANN ELIZABETH HOLTZCLAW,
daú. Jacob Holtzclaw, of the German-town colony, who d. bet. 16 May, 1751, and 19 May, 1763.

Issue:

18  I. Ann Elizabeth, m. ——— Smith and was apparently dead at the date of her father's will, leaving children, names unknown.

19  II.  John.‡

20  III.  Jacob.‡

21  IV.  Elizabeth, m. Charles Spilman.‡

22  V.  Catharine, m. James Atwood.‡

23  VI.  Sarah, m. Harman Button.‡

24  VII.  Mary, d. n. m., 1813-17.

25  VIII. Frederick, d. n. m. bet. 20 Sept., 1782, and 10 Sept., 1785. Served in the Revolution with Benjamin Morgan in 1781; see Morgan's affidavit in pension office.

M. (2)
Eve or Eva Martin,
mentioned in his will, who survived him.

26 IX. Martin.‡

At this date (1914) it cannot be positively stated that Martin was the only child of the second marriage; some of the others may have been. The order is that in which they are given in their father's will; only Jacob's and Martin's births are at this date positively known.

6 JOHN JACOB FISHBACK.

The 1,028 acres given the four children of John Fishback by his will, were divided between Jacob, Philip and Josiah, as the Fauquier records show. It lay in Upper Fauquier near "The Plains." This man seems to have dropped the Jacob and was known as John. He was dead prior to 7 Feb'y., 1789, for at that date his wife Sarah was acting as his administratrix; her dower was set off in his share of the 1,028 acres, by commissioners in Fauquier 3 Nov., 1797, and confirmed by the court 22 Jan'y., 1798. From deeds in B. 10, 142, and 13, 524, Fauquier, on Dec. 11, 1797, he had the following heirs, then all of age.

27 I. William, n. f. r.
28 II. John, n. f. r.
29 III. Josiah, n. f. r.
30 IV. Elizabeth C., m. Timothy Cunningham, 25 Aug., 1789.
31 V. Frances, m. Charles Martin, 9 Aug., 1790.
32 VI. Mary, m. William Jones.
33 VII. Lucy.

JACOB FISHBACK.

Jacob Fishback was born April 14, 1749, in Culpeper County, Virginia. He grew up until he was eighteen years old without feeling any concern about religion, as was the habit with his companions and neighbors. When he was about that age he went with his cousin James Kemper,* who was more than three years his junior, sixteen or eighteen miles to a meeting, on the Sabbath, to see some young men and girls who were expected to be there. On the way he spoke freely his views and feelings about religion. When they arrived they found Mr. Waddel preaching. His solemn personal appearance and the impressive manner and matter of his discourse at once arrested Jacob's attention and engaged his whole soul.

The minister was discoursing upon the subject of human depravity and the deceitfulness and corruption of the human heart. Mr. Waddel was later the blind preacher whose eloquence was described by William Wirt in the British Spy. The appeal of the speaker went so directly to the heart of the young man, he afterward said, that it appeared to him as if the preacher had a perfect acquaintance with his own thoughts and feelings, and the deceitfulness and deep, innate wickedness of his own heart was so clearly seen and described, that he believed it had been made known to the preacher by some person who had been intimately acquainted with him, and he suspected James Kemper of telling Mr. Waddel all about it. This he charged him with. However, Kemper had not spoken a word to the preacher, with whom he had not been personally acquainted.

From this period Jacob Fishback was brought under deep concern about his own soul, and continued serious, read his bible and prayed until he found relief by faith in Jesus Christ. However, he did not join any church for many years after, for there was none that professed to have practical piety in it, in the neighborhood in which he lived.

Jacob Fishback married Phebe Morgan, of Fauquier County, Virginia, February 19, 1771.

*James Kemper followed Jacob Fishback to Kentucky in 1785 at the earnest solicitation of Rev. David Rice and taught the first grammar school opened in that territory the same year. This was close to Harmony Church near Buena Vista in the forks of Dick's River.
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 25, 1912.

The "consent" and "marriage bond" given below were found by me in the Circuit Clerk's Office at Warrenton, Fauquier County, Virginia, on the 22d day of November, 1911. The "consent" was on a small slip of paper folded up in the "marriage bond." Both were well preserved and perfectly legible, in fact the ink was as strong as ever. The documents are certainly of interest to all of the descendants of Jacob Fishback and Phebe Morgan, who are legion.

"Sir: Please to let Jacob Fishback and Pheby Morgan have lyens [license] and you shall be safe in so doing. All from your humble servant,

Copy of "Marriage Bond."

"Know all men by these presents that we Jacob Fishback and John McCormick are held and firmly bound unto our Sovereign Lord King George the third in the sum of fifty pounds current money of Virginia, to which payment well and truly to be made to our said Lord the King his heirs and successors we bind ourselves our heirs executors and administrators firmly by these presents sealed with our seals and dated this 18th day of February, 1771. The condition of the above obligation is such that whereas there is a marriage shortly intended to be solemnized between the above bound Jacob Fishback and Phebe Morgan for which a license has issued now if there be no lawful cause to obstruct the said intended marriage then the above obligation to be void otherwise to remain in force.

I, John R. Turner, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Fauquier County in the State of Virginia, do certify that the foregoing are true copies of the consent, and marriage bond of Jacob Fishback, as the same now appear on file in said office.

Hezekiah Balch, a Presbyterian minister, preached frequently in the neighborhood of the Fishbacks in Virginia; and he and Jacob afterwards settled together in what is now Green County, East Tennessee.

In the fall of the year 1783 Jacob Fishback moved with his family to the district of Kentucky, and settled at the forks of Dick's River about five miles from the mouth of Hickman (Garrard County). He soon became acquainted with Rev. David Rice, of Harrodsburgh, who preached at Cane Run and at Danville. Jacob Fishback frequently attended his preaching and joined in the formation of his church near Cane Run. This was his first formal connection with the church and his wife joined with him.

In 1787 Jacob Fishback moved to the north side of the Kentucky river and located in Fayette—later Clark—County, twelve miles east of Lexington, where he resided until his death. Here he united with a few individuals who lived at a distance from one another, in forming the Presbyterian church called Salem, which continues to the present day, and whose members, for the most part, are his descendants.

An illustration of Jacob Fishback's regard and veneration for the Sabbath occurred soon after he moved to Kentucky. He had a brother-in-law (Charles Spilman) who had settled in that vicinity several years before Jacob's arrival. Spilman proposed that they with their children should visit one another in turn on alternate Sabbaths and dine together that they might become better acquainted and more intimate. This proposition was made after his brother-in-law had visited him several times on the Sabbath without any return. Jacob solemnly replied, "Charles, I shall be glad to see you at my home and visit you at any other time except on the Sabbath, that day I consider to be the Lord's day and feel it to be a religious duty to employ it in His service."

Jacob Fishback was a man of great benevolence and most expansive charity, not merely in profession but in conduct. No man it is believed lived who had deeper views of human depravity and more humbling views of himself than he had, or more exalted ones of God's grace in the gift of his Son, and salvation by Him. These thoughts imbued every sentiment that he entertained on the subject of Christianity and his life was a perpetual proof of the sincerity of his faith. His unselfish interest in all about him gave him a unique influence in his community and among a wide circle of friends. In a brief autobiographic sketch written in 1837 at the request of his own children, Mr. Hubbard Taylor, who was perhaps his nearest neighbor, bears witness: "Here I must mention the friendship and kindness I received from Mr. Jacob Fishback and his Lady; it has lasted uninterruptedly during their lives, and I with gratitude preserve their memory."

In the years 1791-2-3 a number of young Presbyterian preachers from Virginia and Carolina visited Kentucky, among whom were C. Allen, Robert Marshall, James Blythe and William Callhoon. They were greatly aided by Jacob Fishback in more ways than one, in successfully prosecuting their ministerial labors. He also was in the habit of reproving them for their occasional levity and indiscretion. They named him "Old Israel," an appellation intended to express the profound veneration in which he was held.

As has been indicated already, piety and a love for the Christian religion were the ruling elements in Jacob Fishback's life and character. He had a peculiar talent and turn of mind for engaging the attention of his acquaintances on the subject of religion, both in conversation and by letter writing. Perhaps no man in the Western country did more good by these means and particularly among young people.
JACOB FISHBACK.
(1749-1821.)
While in Detroit, Michigan, a few years ago, by the courtesy of the late Mr. W. K. Anderson, the compiler of this biography was handed a well-preserved collection of about two dozen letters written almost a century before by Jacob Fishback to Mrs. Matilda Robertson, Mr. A.’s grandmother. In 1811 the recipient had suffered the loss of her husband by a tragic death in Frankfort, and the sympathy for his young friend was poured out in these letters during the remaining ten years of his life. The value she placed upon his friendship is shown by the manner in which they were treasured. Besides the expressions of close friendship—for Mrs. Robertson was the girlhood companion of several of his daughters—the prevailing and dominant sentiment of these long communications was deeply religious. She was addressed as "My dear Friend and Sister in the Truth." After a brief paragraph or two giving items of friendly interest and solicitous inquiries regarding the health of herself and children (each mentioned by name) and conveying his affectionate respects to her "Honored Father" (Commodore Richard Taylor), the body of every letter was devoted to presenting the importance of Bible study, faith in God and personal piety. The themes were exhaustless and every inch of space upon large sheets of paper was filled in a fine, but legible hand which few of his many descendants could imitate and none of them excel.

The broad Christian charity of the author of these letters was strikingly set forth in not infrequent references to the colored servants which each owned. Often his letter was concluded thus: "My wife joins me in sincere love to you, your dear Father, and sweet, little children, and to your black people too." On one occasion he speaks with enthusiasm of the sermon of a white minister at the funeral service of a venerable negro—his son-in-law’s "Old Harry." Another of his letters contains the following paragraph:

"My wife is becoming, as I am, more and more the prey of age. I am distressed for my Black family, they are mine, my charge. God has put them under me and I have greatly neglected the instruction of them. Should their souls be lost, should they perish for lack of knowledge, as thousands do, how shall I appear to have the blood of lost souls hanging on my skirts, or lost by my neglect? Can I be saved having had their sweat and hard labor and never teach them the things that belong to their eternal peace?"

His death occurred at nine o'clock A. M. on September 15, 1821, at his residence in Clark County, Kentucky, after an illness of about two weeks. He was survived by his wife and eleven children, as his was the first death that occurred in his family.

The following Dedication in his own handwriting was found in a bundle of religious papers. It was endorsed—"First signed about thirty years ago." It will be noted that he signed it several times at subsequent periods.

Dedication.

"Having had it in my heart to make this solemn surrender of myself to God which I have done several times before, and to write and sign this covenant on the first day of the year seventeen days ago, but being so much hindered, I take part of this 17th day of January, 1819, and hope by the grace of God, to be enabled to do it acceptably; O Lord God Almighty, the God of nature and of all grace, I do humbly acknowledge myself thine though a sinner, my guilt is great and my fallen nature unspeakably vile and my state and condition in myself hopeless, I have forfeited thy favor, provoked thy wrath, and exposed myself to eternal misery, to the just condemnation of thy holy law. But, O Lord, I have heard from thy holy word that there is forgiveness with thee; Thou hast revealed thyself as the Lord, the Lord God, gracious and merciful, slow to anger and abundant in goodness, and in truth, Thou hast provided an all sufficient, suitable and most compassionate Saviour; thou hast in him offered mercy, thou hast called sinners to return and live, I take the encouragement thou hast been graciously pleased to give and come unto thee O
God, renouncing my numerous aggravated sins of the heart and of the lips, I renounce my own righteousness and strength and accept of thy gracious offer and humbly take thee O Lord, to be my God; I take thee Lord Jesus Christ to be my Saviour, my all-wise prophet, my great atoning high priest and my all powerful king; I take thee Great God and Father of all to be my Father, reconciled through the merits of thine incarnate love; I take thee Holy Spirit to be my sanctifier, my guide to understand and apply thy blessed word of promise aright, so that I may receive the comforts it may afford to my soul; I rely upon thy holy word and plead thy faithful promises, O Lord, I give myself up to thee to be thine to be disposed of to thy honor and glory, to be devoted to thy service and show forth thy praise forever and ever, especially thy praises and glory manifested in the great work of redemption.

"To thee I solemnly and deliberately dedicate myself, my soul and my body, my soul with all its powers of understanding, will and affections; my body with all its members and senses, my time and talents, my whole family, children and servants, all that I am and all that I have or possess. Amen and Amen! Let the angels of heaven say amen, A-m-e-n. O, my soul! Adoration, praise and thanksgiving be unto thee Father, Son and Holy Ghost, the one true and living God, for all his kindness showed unto me from my infancy to the present hour of giving me his poor sinful rebellious creature so many and such high privileges more in numbers and greater in importance than my tongue or feeble pen can express all flowing though the gift and merits of the great Saviour of sinners to sinners of whom I am chief! Adored be God Almighty for the opportunity, capacity and will to make, write and subscribe this covenant this 17th day of January, 1819. O, Lord God Almighty accept this transaction, sanctify, strengthen and uphold me through life, and at death by that faith which overcometh the world and all sin and fear at death, and accept all that thy unworthy servant has done here to strengthen his faith, confirm his hope and O, grant that faith and love that cast out all fear through life, and at death which makes happy the soul through or in eternity, for Jesus Christ sake! Amen and amen. In thy name I hope for acceptance while I subscribe myself."

Jacob Fishback.

"Friday 17th of March, 1820. This day O Lord, I have set apart to prepare my heart by fasting and praying to thee, the Almighty to enable me by thy special grace to make a full hearty and sincere surrender of myself according to the words and expressions of the above written covenant. And I Lord my most sincere petition is what I daily beg for in the name and for the sake of the Lord Jesus Christ, to be pardoned and sanctified and delivered from the power and the dominion of sin, and every error, from every evil and false way and that I may be established in the favor of God and be enabled to overcome the world, the flesh and Satan and enjoy the liberty of God's children here and obtain an entrance at last among the sanctified in glory; O that I may be kept from the defilements of sin and from dishonoring the true and living God here by temptation and transgression and be enabled to honor him and the Lord Jesus and his cause by a life of loving and true faith, hope and charity while the short remains of my declining life shall be by his kind hand spread.

'Here Lord, I give myself away,
'Tis all that I can do.'

"O heavenly Father may all be granted through the obedience, blood, groans, agony, death and intercession of my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in whose presence I sign my worthless name, O Lord thou knowest that none of all my doings are relied on by me to move thee towards me for thou art unchangeable and I am ashamed of my best works and renounce them all and rely alone for acceptance in thy sight upon the righteousness and atonement of the Great Redeemer of my person and duties and desires to praise thee forever, Amen."

Jacob Fishback.
"Sabbath 18th of February, 1821. I am this day left alone; all are gone to Salem. I am afflicted with rheumatic pains. O Lord enable me this day once more with my whole heart to subscribe this dedication and be pleased to accept of thy unworthy unprofitable servant and his dedication Amen, amen! Lord Jesus accept of me for thy own name's sake Amen!"

"JACOB FISHBACK."

He also signed it 17th March, 1821, and the following was his last signature and probably the last time he wrote anything before he died:

"Sabbath 2nd, of September 1821. (He died 13 days afterwards.) I am this day left alone, all are gone to Salem to meeting, and being afflicted and in the 73rd year of my age am desirous to subscribe afresh this dedication, relying alone upon the Lord Jesus for acceptance with God."

JACOB FISHBACK.*

PHEBE FISHBACK.

(1751–1837.)

Phebe, the daughter of William Morgan, was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, on September 13, 1751. She married Jacob Fishback February 19, 1771, and with him removed to Kentucky. She bore eleven children, all of whom survived her. The seven older children, namely William, John, James, Anna, Betsey, Jesse and Charles, were born in Culpeper County, Virginia. Hannah, Sallie and Lucy were born in what is now Garrard County, Kentucky; and Samuel Davies in Clark County, Kentucky.

When she married, Phebe was not religious, but she respected true piety in others whenever she saw it and in none more than in her husband, whom she never failed to honor. She lost her mother at an early period of her life and she had the opportunity of only an ordinary education. However, she possessed a strong, well-regulated, practical mind remarkable for its equanimity, consistency, decision and perseverance. Soon after her arrival in Kentucky she was brought under the ministration of Rev. David Rice and through faith she found peace with God. In company with her husband she joined the Harmony Presbyterian Church near Cane Run in Garrard County.

Phebe in her religious life as in every other phase of her character manifested consistency and uniformity of mind. Her chief concern was to know her duty under every condition in life and then to do it. There was nothing weak, ostentatious or frivolous about her. She was never depressed or discouraged by adversity, or improperly elevated by prosperity. Very different was the disposition of Jacob Fishback. He was liable to discouragement and gloom, being himself of a nervous temperament. He often said that had it not been for the support and encouragement which his wife afforded him in the numerous trials and difficulties of raising a large family with scanty means in a wilderness he did not see how he could have accomplished it. She managed her domestic concerns all in methodical order. Her constitution of body was uncommonly good, as was her mind its equal. She did not remember ever to have suffered with a headache. It was her invariable habit to retire and rise early and she never ate supper.

Phebe Fishback survived her husband nearly sixteen years. When the hour for his departure arrived, with great gravity and religious solemnity she took his hand in both of hers and with deep feeling commended him to that God and Savior who had preserved and blessed them through all the trials and vicissitudes they had passed. The husband though appearing to sleep the sleep of death was roused from his slumbers and opening wide his eyes grasped her hands in his, and with a countenance deeply affected commended her to the grace and protection of the Lord Jesus Christ. Both were passed seventy years of age at this time and had lived in uninterrupted confidence and affection more than fifty years of wedded life. All of their eleven children outlived their parents, some of them only a few years, however.

A short time before Phebe’s death an irritation affected a small mole on one of her cheeks. As a result of rubbing this became an open sore and later a phagedenic ulcer that ended fatally, August 16, 1837, within a month of her eighty-sixth birthday. A day or two before her death she requested one of her daughters to look in a certain trunk where she would find a sheet which she desired to be used as her winding sheet. Her husband, she said, had been buried in its fellow; both of them she had spun with her own hands sixty-six years before.

Jacob and Phebe Fishback were buried in a spot chosen by him, about three hundred yards in a northerly direction from their dwelling in which both lived and died. The house has disappeared, but the graves are securely protected by a stone wall. The words of Solomon surely apply to this good woman—“The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her. She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life. She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children rise up, and call her blessed, her husband also, and he praiseth her.”

In the sketch of his own life he states that he married Miss Christian 12 May 1802, whereas the date used here occurs in his own handwriting in his biography of his wife.

REVEREND JAMES FISHBACK.

The autobiography left by Rev. James Fishback has never been published in full. The original work, in his own handwriting, is now in the possession of his grandnephew, Mr. Frederick L. Fishback, of Washington, D. C. The latter's father was named James in honor of his uncle, and Frederick L. Fishback, in naming one of his sons for his father, is also keeping alive the name of the member of the family who, in his day and generation, achieved eminence as a physician, a lawyer and a divine.

Dr. Fishback was born in Culpeper County, Virginia, February 4, 1776, the year that the independence of the United States was declared. His parents migrated to Kentucky in 1783 and arrived in October at their temporary home near the confluence of the Kentucky and Dick's rivers in what is now Garrard County. In 1787 they removed to Fayette County, Kentucky, and made their permanent home about 12 miles east of Lexington.

For more than a year, during 1793–4, young James attended the Transylvania Seminary in Lexington and during 1795–6 his education was continued at a Presbyterian School at Pisgah in Woodford County, which was conducted by Rev. Andrew Steel. Thereafter he chose the profession of medicine as his calling and entered ardently into the study of the different branches of science appertaining to it. During 1799 and 1800 he attended a course of lectures upon medicine in Reverend James Fishback, M.D.
(1776-1845).
Philadelphia. Then he returned as far as Virginia, where he practised his profession in Culpeper and Prince William Counties until October 10, 1801, when he returned to Kentucky.

On May 12, 1802, Dr. Fishback was married to Miss Dorothea Dandridge Christian, the youngest daughter of Colonel William and Anne Christian. She was born in Virginia June 5th, 1785, and her mother was a sister of Patrick Henry. On June 8, 1841, he married secondly Mrs. Susan H. Shelby McKinney, the daughter of Gov. Isaac Shelby, of Kentucky.

Soon after his return to Kentucky, Dr. Fishback established himself in the practice of medicine in Lexington. In 1805 he was professor of the theory and practice of medicine in the Transylvania University, but for some reason resigned the position the following year. In 1808 he was a member of the State Legislature and by 1810 he says: "The practice of medicine which I had followed with great assiduity had become disagreeable to me, and I had for some short time engaged in the study of law. This I did as much for the knowledge of the principles of law as for anything else, and I engaged in the practice of it up to the end of the year 1816."

We have thus far considered Dr. Fishback as an exponent of two of the learned professions. In each of these he attained more than ordinary success and honor. But his career, to this period of his life, must be regarded as, in a degree, only preliminary to his major activities in theology. These brought him even greater distinction. On several occasions in early life, the pious examples of his parents caused him to consider seriously the subject of religion, but during his experiences as a medical student the effects of these influences were apparently lost. However, he could not have been long established in Lexington before problems in theology lay firm and permanent hold upon his mind, for in 1809 we find that he published an extensive pamphlet by which he "exploded Natural Religion and the existence of religion in the world of Revelation."
In 1810 Dr. Fishback united with the Presbyterian church in Lexington under the pastoral care of Rev. R. H. Cunningham; and very soon organized a Wednesday evening prayer meeting in that church.

As it refers to the most vital part of his career it seems best to quote his own account of the controversies that attended Dr. Fishback's entrance upon religious affairs.

"In 1813 I published my book entitled 'The philosophy of the human mind in regard to religion, or a demonstration that Religion entered the world by Revelation.' "The book consisted of 306 pages Octavo.

"This volume contained much original matter in defense of the Bible. It excited much attention and great opposition but was never refuted. It caused me to be summoned before the Session of the Presbyterian Church in Lexington and after a long trial I was condemned by the Session for heresy, from which I took an appeal to the Presbytery and was there condemned. From that decision I appealed to the Synod and had the judgment of the lower courts set aside.

"Alexander Campbell, who then lived in Brooke County, Virginia, got one of the books and read it in 1814 or 1815, and he informed me afterwards that it was the first view he had ever had of the origin, nature, design and use of the word of God. He at once exploded Natural Religion and adopted the principles fully contained in the Philosophy. It was these principles that he brought to bear so forcefully and triumphantly in his debate with R. Owens at Cincinnati against Atheism. His arguments contain much that is in my book and in some parts is literally extracted from it. All that he had said and written that is true in building up his new Sect he has obtained from the above book. And had he not have wholly corrupted and perverted the doctrine of Justification or remission of sin by regarding immersion as essential to remission he would have done much for the interest of religion. So true is it that a person or church that is wrong on the subject of Justification cannot be right on any other in religion."
“Mr. Campbell has raised up a new Sect by dividing the Baptist Churches and uniting with B. W. Stone who denies the atonement altogether as consisting in the vicarious sufferings and death of Jesus Christ. The point of their agreement is in the remission of sin in Baptism.

“When I joined the Presbyterian Church in 1810 I had not investigated the subject of Baptism either as to the proper subjects of it or as to the mode, meaning, or origin of it. At a subsequent period I attended to it and found that the Scriptural views of the ordinance had been wholly mistaken by Pedobaptists, and after examining the Baptist views of it and the order of the church was convinced that in these respects the Baptists were right and was baptised at Bryants the 4th Saturday in November 1816, and on the 4th Saturday in the next month, December 1816, was licensed to preach the Gospel as a member of the Baptist Church. The month after I joined the first Baptist Church in Lexington, then just constituted.

“I now abandoned all other pursuits and gave myself wholly to the ministry of the word and August 22, 1817, was ordained in the first Presbyterian Meeting House in Lexington, in which I had seven years before made a profession of religion. I was ordained* by the laying on of hands of a Presbytery composed of Elder Jac. Breath, J. Vardeman and Jas. Welch.”

The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Dr. Fishback by Transylvania University, July 9, 1823.

From early in May, 1826, until September 27, Dr. Fishback was absent from Lexington on a tour devoted to the investigations into the methods of religious teachings. He visited Wheeling, Pittsburg, Erie, Buffalo, Schenectady, Albany, Boston, Salem, Andover, Providence, Hartford, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Beside giving freely of his time, energy and means to the upbuilding of the Baptist Church in Lexington, which under his hand rose in ten years from a membership of 8 or 10 to 175, Dr. Fishback was for 17 years, prior to 1841, pastor of the Mount Vernon Baptist Church in Woodford County, Kentucky.

Not a little difference of opinion has been expressed as to which of the denominations Dr. Fishback was in doctrinal accord with at the time of his death. It is safe to say that the creed or confession of faith of neither the Baptist nor the Christian (Campbellite) church wholly satisfied one entertaining such positive personal views; however, it is certain that he held essential articles with each. Nevertheless there is no evidence to show that his union with the Baptist church was ever broken.

He died, after a lingering illness, June 26, 1845.

OWEN T. FISHBACK.

(John, John Philip, John.)

The subject of this sketch was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, August 29, 1791. His father was a soldier of the Revolution. His mother was a member of the celebrated Pickett family of Virginia. To his sturdy German blood was added some of the best English strains, for he was descended from the Metcalf and Mildmay families, prominent in English history for hundreds of years. With thousands of Virginians, after the close of the Revolutionary War, his father emigrated to Kentucky, and settled in Mason County in 1796. A few years later, in 1805, he moved to Augusta in Braekken County, then one of the largest towns in eastern Kentucky. He obtained the best education the schools of that day could afford, but was compelled to supplement this by his own efforts, and was largely self educated, as were so many of the prominent men of those days. He determined to study law, and did so under all the difficulties of the times, doing his reading in the law office of Martin Marshall, then one of the leading lawyers of the day, and a member of the celebrated Marshall family, which produced the great Chief Justice of the United States. He was admitted to the bar in 1814.

In 1815 he determined to cast his lot with the new free State of Ohio, and moved across the Ohio River, to Williamsburg, then the county seat of Clermont County, Ohio. He plunged into the midst of the bitter politics of the time—was known by everyone, and from his upright character, his positive manner, and his love of free institutions, counted his friends, as well as his enemies, by the hundreds. His ability as a man and a lawyer soon gave him an extended and lucrative practice. On April 12, 1817, he was married to Miss Caroline Huber, of Williamsburg, a member of a prominent family of the county. The county seat of Clermont County was moved to Batavia, Ohio, in 1825, and on March 18 of that year he cast in his lot with that new town, where he lived for the remainder of his life.

His political life covered nearly half a century. He was several times elected prosecuting attorney of his county. He was elected a member of the House of the Twenty-fifth General Assembly of Ohio, which convened December 4, 1826. He was a member of the Senate of the Twenty-second and Twenty-third General Assemblies of Ohio, which convened December 1, 1822, and December 6, 1823. He was prominently mentioned for the Senate of the United States; but Clermont County, Ohio, at the time was a hive of prominent men, and another resident of the county was elected.

Under the old constitution of Ohio, he held by appointment of the Governor the office of Presiding Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the Tenth Circuit in which Clermont County was situated, from 1841 to 1848. Here his judicial career was marked by conspicuous ability, in a circuit where there were at the time many strong men and able lawyers. He continued to practice law in Batavia until his death, which occurred there on March 23, 1865. His wife had died in October, 1854; and in May, 1855, he married Mrs. Lucinda Evans, who survived until 1911.

Five daughters and four sons by his first marriage survived him. The sons were all prominent men in their day and generation. George was the owner of the St. Louis Democrat, a prominent Republican newspaper of St. Louis, during the Civil War. William P. was a well-known lawyer of Indianapolis and a partner of President Benjamin Harrison. Owen T., Jr., was a war correspondent on his brother's paper, and at the time of his death was clerk of the Supreme Court of Missouri.

To paraphrase slightly Napier's celebrated eulogium on Ridge, no man lived in southwestern Ohio, in those days, with more honor and ability than he; yet many able men lived there, and there was much honor and ability.

GOVERNOR WILLIAM MEADE FISHBACK OF ARKANSAS.

At Jeffersonton in Culpeper County, Va., William M. Fishback was born November 5th, 1831. He grew to manhood about the old Fishback home at Jeffersonton but after his father's death in 1848, the mother with her children emigrated to the rising young State of Illinois in 1852. He graduated at the University of Virginia with the class of 1855 and immediately began the study of law with Mr. Luther R. Spilman of Richmond. The year 1857 he spent in Illinois where he met Mr. Lincoln who entrusted him with the transaction of important business. The following year he was admitted to the bar and located in Arkansas where he received fees from Mr. Lincoln for services rendered, together with the advice to return to Illinois as a much better field in which to practice his profession. Mr. Fishback did not act upon this friendly suggestion, but soon formed a partnership in Fort Smith instead.

Only a few years passed before the integrity, public spirit and legal ability of Mr. Fishback were recognized in the state of his adoption. He was chosen a member of the Constitutional Convention which met in Little Rock in 1861. When disruption of the Union came up for consideration the same year, he voted for the secession of Arkansas, thereby hoping to compel the North to adopt a compromise. But when this was rejected by Congress, he joined the Union cause and raised the 4th Arkansas Cavalry—a regiment about 900 strong. In 1863 we find him also editing in Little Rock a paper called the "Unconditional Union."
During 1864 Mr. Fishback was duly elected to the United States Senate; but in the meanwhile, as a member of the convention, he had written the greater part of a new State Constitution for Arkansas. This is generally known as the "Fishback Constitution." In it only white suffrage was provided for, while Congress under the recently adopted amendments to the National Constitution refused to admit his State to the Union, or seat Mr. Fishback in the Senate unless the word "white" was stricken out of his constitution. This he refused to do and hence never entered the Senate. But the next year he was appointed United States Treasury Agent for Arkansas.

In 1867 Colonel Fishback, as he was then called, married Miss Adelaide Miller, a daughter of Joseph Miller of Fort Smith. Before her death in 1882 she bore him 3 sons and 2 daughters (see genealogy).

As a member of the State Legislature, Colonel Fishback served in 1877, 1879 and 1885. During his term in 1879 he introduced a joint resolution, proposing an Amendment to the Constitution to prohibit the payment of principal or interest of a large number of "Funding Bonds," created by acts passed during a period of irresponsibility. This amendment was rejected by a popular vote in 1880 but, when resubmitted in 1884, it was adopted.

During 1888 Colonel Fishback was a prominent candidate for Governor, but was defeated in the Convention; in 1892 he refused to exert himself to secure the nomination. However, the people demanded it and he received more than five-sixths of the votes at the nominating convention and was later elected by a majority greater than any candidate had received since Reconstruction. He served as Governor from 1893 to 1895. At an important convention of the Governors of the Southern States, held at Richmond, Va., in 1893, he was made its presiding officer. He was president also of the Trans Mississippi Commercial Congress.

As a lawyer, Governor Fishback ranked high in his State and country. As a debater and public speaker, he had few equals. He died February 9, 1903, at Fort Smith, Ark.
