PREFACE.

The only opportunity allowed the Author for explanation and apology is under this heading. It was far from my thoughts when first searching for a family line, to have so extended my work, and it did not occur to me that the family was so large and could come into the class with the old American families. In introducing this work one can but believe that each member represented will receive with favor, and fully appreciate, the humble effort to redeem from oblivion something of the history and fortunes of his race.

While the book is far from the point of my ambition in completeness, I feel that in justice to friends and kindred who have so kindly aided my researches and supplied a large portion of the material, I should submit the work and not keep them longer waiting.

The arrangement of the family records is not original, but one that in my daily search of facts proved the simplest and one the genealogist will appreciate. In explanation, to those unfamiliar, it will be found that each child has a number of its own; its paternal number, in larger type, is placed above each separate family. To trace your ancestry, turn toward the front of the book until your parent's number is found in regular order on the margin of the page; continue with each paternal number until you come to the first ancestor.

Every name of Butters that has been found in America will be found in its proper classification in this work. Those lines not traced may meet the eye of some reader who can give the missing data. To answer many inquiries and frequent reference to the family of Butter, of Faskally, Scotland, the record of that branch of the old Gormack family is given in this work; also the record of the family of Butters, in Cornwall, England.
To

The continuing remembrance of
My Parents,
John A. C. Butters and Caroline E. Sampson and preceding generations, this book is
Affectionately dedicated.
There are many with whom I have corresponded who have been very kind, and it would be a pleasure to mention the name of each. You will kindly accept this recognition of my full appreciation of your favors.

I must especially thank Mr. John W. Butters, of Exeter, Me.; Mrs. Hattie L. Howe, Lowell, Mass.; Mr. Lemuel Pope, of Arlington Heights, Mass., and Mrs. S. N. Newcomb, of Stoneham, Mass., for their untiring efforts in procuring copies of documents and records for this work.

It is hoped this work will prove not only a useful book of reference but a means whereby those relatives, now strangers and unknown, may be recognized and brought together as of one household, and may that sentiment of cordiality and fraternal respect so desirable, be revived, cherished and perpetuated among the descendants of a common ancestor.

Humbly craving your indulgence, this work is respectfully submitted by

THE AUTHOR.

ORIGIN OF NAME.
ORIGIN OF NAME.

To trace a name to its origin would require years of time and study. The customs of people in those early days were such that, to succeed in a search, one is often more than disappointed.

I give the result and opinion formed from the study made, and whatever may in the future prove errors, the statements were framed from the accessible authorities on the subject, and will prove a stepping stone to more light in the early history of this family.

Names in the early times were to individual persons but expressions of popular feeling; from appearance he might be called Long or Short, and for some achievement the Butter or the Buck, names which passed away with the owners, until the age when custom made them one of descent, prefixing for each descendant a given name.

We find from reference to the name Butter in different nationalities the following: The old Norse, Buttr, Danish, Butho; Dutch, Boot, Butor, Butti; French, Buteau; German, Buthy, Butte; English, Butter; to the last named, custom has, in many cases, added the letters—Butters.

One author gives the explanation of the origin of Butter, namely: In the middle ages, the Plaice (the French name for a fish like the flounder) was a very favorite dish; the term it usually went by was that of But. Thus it is, I doubt not, we meet with such entries as “William La Butor, or Hugh Butmonger or Walter La But, from some fancied resemblance of this fish.”

Following the invasion of England by William the Conqueror, and the forfeiture of all lands and estates to him, was the parceling out of the land to his noble Norman followers. A record of all the land holders was prepared and completed in 1086, and called the "Dome’s Day Book." Among the tenants in chief there are none of Butter. In the list of undertenants are the names Buter and Butor, probably descendants of the early Danes under the reign of King Canut, who, being loyal to William, were unmolested. Many Butters of German birth claim the name of Anglo-Saxon origin, which may be true; for, guided by the coat of arms and the name of the seat of Butter, of Scotland, we reach Gorm—born 860, died 936—the First-king of Denmark, whose descendants have ruled England, parts of Scotland, Germany and adjoining countries, and whose followers have intermarried with these different nations, and descendants still remain.

One of the followers of William the Conqueror who was rewarded by the gift of many manors, was Robert de Bruce, whose seventh descendant was Robert the Bruce, King of Scotland, among whose followers we so frequently find the name of Butter.

Two hundred and forty-five years passed from the invasion by William the Conqueror to the time of the rival claims for Scotland by Robert the Bruce and John Baliol. Success attended Bruce, and he defeated Baliol, the decisive battle being at Bannockburn in 1314. Bruce reigned fifteen years, and, upon his death, was succeeded by his son David II. Edward, son of John Baliol, now made contest for the throne, assisted by the King, Edward II. of England. David II. and his Queen fled to France. Galloway was under the lordship of Edward Bruce. Adam Butter held lands in the stewardry of Kirkcudbright (Galloway), which at this time—1331—were escheat to the King, and Baliol ceded the south part of Scotland to England for their assistance in securing his success.
In the year 1342, David II. returned to Scotland, and later invaded England, and was defeated in 1346, at Neville's Cross, taken and held captive eleven years, during which time Robert the Steward, elected Regent in the name of David, governed.

At length, by treaty, David's ransom was agreed upon in 1354, and William Butter and Patrick Butter were collectors of contributions for the King's ransom in Gowrie. David II. married for his second wife Margaret Drummond. He died childless, and was succeeded by Robert II., of the house of Stuart, a son of Bruce's daughter Margery. He having been Regent during the reign of David II., succeeded at his death, in 1390, by his son John, Earl of Carrick, who took the title of Robert III. He had previously married Anabella Drummond. He granted to William Butter a charter of Gormack, one of the detached portions of Caputh, a parish called Stormant, and West and Middle Gormack are in Kinlock, county Perth. These lands were erected into a barony prior to 1636.

These people, although in the Highlands, were not of any noted clan, but were distinct both from the more remote Highlands and from the natives of the low country. It is said their character, gentle and courteous, yet mingles with a kind of subdued thoughtfulness, and, together with their candor and local superstitions, sufficiently discriminated them from their low country neighbors.

The prelates of Dunkeld and others in the parish of Caputh were much exposed to the aggressions of the heads of the Highland clans in the vicinity of the diocese, with whom a constant state of warfare was maintained. On November 24, 1598, Patrick Butter, friar of Gormack, and thirty other persons were indicted and put to the horn for besieging the place of Assintullie and taking prisoner Andrew Spalding, of Assintullie, a mansion in the parish of Kirkmichael. In 1587 the Spaldings, of Ashintully, figure in an Act of Parliament among the "unruly clans," and in 1594 are characterized as "wicked thieves." The families of Blair, Butter and Drummond were closely connected by intermarriage. Sir Thomas Blair, of Balthyock, married second a widow Butter, of Gormack. His daughter by his first wife married a Butter, of Gormack. And a grandson, John, son of Sir Alexander Blair, married Margaret, daughter of Patrick Butter, of Gormack, and had a daughter Margaret, who, in 1723, married David, son of David Drummond. Elizabeth Butter, daughter of Mr. Butter, of Gormack, married Patrick, son of Sir John Stuart, he a son of James II., King of Scotland. She married a second time Sir Patrick Ogilvie, of Inchmartin.

In the year 1652 Andrew Butter, Bailee, of Perth, sat in Parliament for the burgh in the time of Cromwell.

In 1660 James Butter, Sheriff Clerk of Perthshire, bequeathed two-fifths part of the lands of Sones Lethondy (in the same parish as Gormack) to maintain four poor persons of the burgh of Perth.
COAT OF ARMS.
COAT OF ARMS.

The coat of arms of Butter, we find classed under Gentleman's Arms, belonging to those who descended from citizens, merchants, artisans and others who were considered to occupy inferior rank.

Camden informs us that of old there was a distinction between Gentlemen of Blood and Gentlemen of Coat Armor, the third from him who first bore coat armor was to all effects and purposes a Gentleman of Blood. Act of 1592 makes special mention of Gentlemen of Blood and those descended from noble stock and lineage to be entitled to armoral bearings.

Several coats of arms of Butter are described, varying as incidents of note or marriage occur. A. D. 1672-78, James Butter, of Gormack, county Perth, registered arms: Argent, a cross sable, between four men's hearts proper.

Two other coats are given by Butter's, of Gormack—one without the hearts, the other has the cross azure and a crest gules in dexter chief.

The first arms bore the cross, and, in plain terms, its color was blue upon a silver shield. The design was similar in shape to the arms of Edmund Ironsides, the grandson of St. Margaret, of Scotland, lineage ancestor of Bruce.

The cross may have signified the successful pilgrimage to Jerusalem or Bethlehem, the cradle of Christianity, as was the custom in very early times to journey to some place esteemed sacred, for the purpose of discharging a religious obligation or to obtain supernatural assistance or benefit. These bands or families of pilgrims were known by a peculiar garb and various badges. The cross was recognized as a universal symbol of the highest dignity and honor.
During the reign of Charles I. —1600–1649—he ordered a registry of all the coats of arms used by the nobility of Scotland. The illustration given in frontispiece is that of the arms of Butter, of Gormack, appearing in that registry.

The heart was first used in coats of arms by Sir William on the death of his father, Sir James Douglas, whose death occurred in Spain 20th August, 1330. Among all the associates of Robert the Bruce, the first place was conceded to Sir James Douglas. The dying injunction of Bruce was that his heart should be placed in the Holy Sepulchre, and when the good Sir James Douglas journeyed to Jerusalem with the heart of his beloved master he was attended by a numerous company. The gallant knight turned aside to render assistance to Alfonso, King of Castile, who was engaged in hostilities with the Saracens. Sir Douglas fell in the battle of Tera, in Andalusia. After the battle the followers recovered the heart of Bruce and the body of Douglas, and returned to Scotland. The heart was deposited in Melrose Abbey.

In consequence of this event the heart was adopted as an addition to the old arms of Douglas. Other followers and participants in this remarkable battle added the heart to their arms.

The coat of arms of Denmark also bear the human heart. Gorm was its first King. Cnut, his grandson, was in early times the King of England, and married second Emma, the mother of Edmund Ironsides; their son Hart, ha Cnut, also ruled Denmark. The interpretation of the coat of arms of Butter leads one to these families. Mac is the gaelic for son; Gormack may signify the sons or descendants of Gorm.

A. D. 1770, Henry Butter, son of Archibald Butter, of Gormack, and Jean, daughter of Henry Balneaves, purchased Faskally, a mansion near the junction of the Tummel and the Tay, twenty-eight and three-quarter miles north of Perth, a place still occupied by his descendants, and one of the estates of note to the tourist, being but a short distance from the Killcrankie Pass. The coat of arms are described: "Ar. a cross sa. between four hearts, ppr.; crest, on a wreath; two arms issuant from clouds drawing a bow, with an arrow paleway, all ppr."

William Butter, physician in London, descended from the Gormack family, registered arms in 1767, on his marriage to Catherine, daughter of Sir John Douglas, of Kelhead, baronet. In consequence of this alliance an imperial crown was placed above the heart in the first quarter.

John Butter, of Gormack, died before 1786, leaving a daughter and only heir, Agnes Butter.

The books on crests, revised and edited by Mr. Lawrence Butters, seal engraver in ordinary to the Queen of Scotland, gives illustrations of the crest of Butter, of Faskally, as previously described; also "Butter, of England," a camel's head, couped, ppr.

"Simms' Herald's Visitations" gives the index to papers in the British Museum of Buttes, of Chetsey, county Surrey, and of Dorking, county Norfolk. Sir William Buttes, knight, married Margaret Bacon, of Cambridgeshire, and died 17th November, 1545. He was "physition" to King Henry VIII., who reigned from 1509 to 1547. It is possible these descendants, some of them may to-day be called Butters. The coats of arms of Butts and Buttis are described: "Sa a cross or, between four plates," similar to that of Butter. Substituting plates for hearts, and the cross that of Edmund Ironsides, would indicate that these families of Butts, Buttis, Buttes and Butter were all from the same ancestor.

To Butter is credited the first authentic English periodical newspaper known to exist, now on exhibition in the British Museum, issued May, 1622, by Nathaniel Butter, stationer and journalist, of London. The first English journalist, was admitted to freedom of the Stationers' Company February 20, 1604. He died 1664, one of the most eminent purveyors of reading published in newspapers and periodicals. The most popular English spelling book ever published is that of Butter's etymological spelling book and expositor.

The name of the ship which brought the first Butters to America has not been learned. When the name first appears in America was following the arrival of Scotch prisoners, those "romantic young followers of Charles II.," who were captured at Dunbar and Worcester by Cromwell, and transported to the Colonies and sold into servitude. In the early colony records, May 26, 1652, it was "ordered that all Scotchmen inhabiting with or servants to the English, from the ages 16 to 60, shall be listed, and are hereby enjoyned to attend traynings as well as English."

The old family of Butler in America was not without its tradition, which has been carefully imparted to each coming generation with that solemnity so impressive the child could do aught but remember. "It was said that in the early days of the Massachusetts Colony there came from Scotland three brothers by name Butter. One of these brothers went away and was never heard from. Another was captured by the Indians, and finally escaped and went back to Scotland. The third brother remained, and we are all descended from him." The very early records in Massachusetts give the names of three Butter's, namely, John, Isaac and William Butter. John Butter we find mentioned only once. In the abstract of the earliest wills of Suffolk county, "5-3, 1655. Will of Edmund Grosse (born Eng., a mariner); inventory of his goods, prized by John Butter, James Everill (Secretary of Winthrop)."
This John Butter does not appear on any list of freemen, and may have left the country.

Isaac Butter appears on the list of freemen in 1666, resident of Medfield. The records of that town do not mention him, and it is possible he moved away.

William Butter settled in Woburn, Mass., in that part set off to Wilmington, known in late years as Butter's Row District.
PLAN OF BUTTERS ROW IN THE SOUTH PART OF WILMINGTON, MASS. SHOWING LOCATION OF OLD LANDMARKS AND SITE OF ORIGINAL BUTTER APPLE TREE PARENT OF THE BALDWIN APPLE

1665-1885
BUTTER’S ROW.

The small map will here aid the reader in comprehending the explanation of a spot in the great State of Massachusetts most dear to all descendants which the name implies.

Here has dwelt in this isolated district continually for over two hundred and twenty-five years prior to 1895 some lineal descendant bearing the name of Butter.

In the year 1640, when the town of Woburn, Mass., was created, its lands were a wilderness, distant from the settled portion of its mother settlement of Charlestown. The Indian trails were the only evidence of its having been traversed by man. The extreme north portion of this old town of Woburn, within the boundaries of its four-mile grant, having for part of its northern boundary the south line of the 3,000 acres, called the "Land of Nod." Here, among its forests and meadows, lay the district set apart as "Common" property, and, from the joint undivided interests of the "Proprietors," was called "Friendly Field." In the division of a part of these lands a portion north of "Maple Meadow River" is referred to in the "Town Records" as "Boggy" Meadow Field, and the inhabitants at its annual town election chose its "Tithing Man" for the "Boggy Meadow End."

Maple Meadow Brook, shown on the plan, often called river, is important as one of the early boundaries. "It is the main branch of the Ipswich river, which takes its rise in Burlington, and after entering Wilmington takes a northeasterly course for about five miles, where it enters North Reading."
The pioneers in this district numbered few, but they must needs be the most courageous and ambitious, and to encourage these people did the “Town” give grants of land to the twenty young men on the other side of “Maple Meadow River” if they would remain among them seven years. (Town Records, vol. 1, p. 60.) Here did they set about to build their future homes, outlining their little land-holdings stone by stone with the quaint old walls which remain to this day.

Many were the trials and experiences of these brave people, such as has been oft repeated in history during the dark days of 1675, the three years of “King Philip’s War,” when the Indian was continually lurking about, watching the opportunity for committing some depredation. To the north did the Indians cause a stir in April, 1676, by attempting an attack on the inhabitants of Billerica, and the massacre of the Richardson family was but a short distance, in the southern part of Woburn. Fathers and brothers were absent in the army, and the defenseless mothers and wives left to the mercy of these savages or abandoning their homes for the period, to remain with some kind neighbor. So it was with the first settler Butter, who left his wife and babe in their home within the desolate country and went out with his flint-lock at his country’s call. At this time Myles Standish, long since passed to the other shore, was succeeded by those who, having the benefit of his teaching and the experience of daily contact with the Indian, were able to successfully outwit the enemy, and all under the able guidance of Josiah Winslow, the then Governor of Plymouth Colony. The inhabitants of this part of Woburn were a long distance from church, not, however, so far as to interfere with their regular attendance. Mounted on horseback, with the wife sitting behind, or plodding on foot, did the family wend its way over the hills by the bridle path leading to the sanctuary in the south part of the town. For over sixty years these good people submitted to this inconvenience of worship on the Sabbath.

In the year 1730 a new town was formed, comprising part of the Boggy Meadow End of Woburn and the Land of Nod, into a separate town, to be called Wilmington, said to be named for Spencer Compton, the third son of the Earl of Northampton, who, in 1730, was made Earl of Wilmington. (Mass. His. Soc., vol. II. p. 42.) The Boggy Meadow territory, a portion of which was now in the south part of Wilmington, had, owing to the descendants Butters acquiring the greater part of the land and built several houses, became known as Butter's Row district. It is stated by some writers that the first town meeting was held October 20, 1730, in the school house next beyond Lorenzo Butters. At that time the school house was on the north side of the road; later the new school house was built as shown on plan. This was destroyed by fire during the spring of 1894.

The houses standing in the fall of 1895 on the old sites have undergone many changes, and in some instances lost their original lines. No. 1, where lived James Butter, and where his children were born, the house is, in outward appearance, little changed, says Mr. Sidney Butters, he having lived with his grandfather in that house when a boy. The well by the road side, opposite the house, with its long sweep and oaken bucket, is furnishing its fresh spring water as of old. The place passed to the ownership of Mr. Buckley, then Mr. Addison, and is now occupied by Mr. Albert J. Miller (No. 989), a grandson of Sewell Butters.

The next house on the road, at its intersection with the main road to Woburn, is the site of possibly the first house of William Butter. Here was known to have stood a large gamble-roofed house, long since replaced by a small modern house, occupied by Mr. Johnson. In the old house lived at one time Ebenezer Carter, with his wife Lydia, daughter of James Butter. The next house, No. 2 on the plan, is more nearly in its original condition than all others, that of William Butter 2d, and occupied successively by William Butters 3d and 4th. Its present owner is Mr. George L. Taylor.

On this place there once stood a large barn, which was later moved across the street and converted into a house by Mr. Abiel Butters. The next house, numbered three, has been practically rebuilt in late years. It was in design originally a "Garrison House," with the second story extending sufficiently to permit openings for the discharge of guns in times of an attack from the Indians. The first house was built by Samuel Butter. Upon his decease it fell to his son Reuben, and from him to his son Jesse, who died, leaving a widow, who married James Butters, Jr. The place is called after its last owner, but has passed to the possession of other families.

The next house, long since destroyed, was occupied by John Butters, and passed to his son Jedidiah, and his sons sold to Joseph Butters, who sold it and moved to Burlington. Sewell Butters is said to have once occupied it, prior to his removal to Medford. Next beyond is the pond mentioned in the will of Samuel Butters in his bequest of lands to his son John, and is in use to day for watering stock, though dry at times in Summer.

The next house is numbered four on the plan, and occupies the foundation of the old house built by Samuel Butters, Jr., who bequeathed it to his son Loammi, and he to his son Lorenzo Butters. About the year 1846 the old house had become so decayed that it was taken down and parts of it used in the construction of the house standing to-day, occupied last by Mrs. Angeline, widow of Lorenzo Butters, upon whose decease, in 1894, it came into possession of her only child and daughter, Lucelia, wife of Mr. Lemuel Pope.

To the north of house number two were located the Hop Kilns, long since destroyed. So great was the industry of growing hops, carried on in this little settlement, that many called the place Hoptown. Following along the road, now so little used that it is grass-grown, and the trees so arch the road that it is almost impassable, we come to the house built by Reuben Butters for his son Reuben, Jr., upon whose decease it came into the possession of his son, Walter Butters, and is now occupied by Mr. Miller. Walter Butters had a cider mill and blacksmith shop, and what is now the meadow was a large mill-pond.

Within a stone's throw is the house (No. 6) once owned and occupied by Oliver, son of Walter Butters. Continuing along the road we come to the house (No. 7), formerly that of Simeon, son of James Butters. The house is almost obstructed from view by the trees and shrubbery. On the opposite side of the road is an old well. This place is now owned by Mr. Andrew Lawson. On the main road south from William Butters is shown on the map a cabbage yard, outlined by a stone wall. Within this enclosure some early apple trees grew, of the Butters stock, now called Baldwin apples. Following south on this road is the old Freeman Bell place. The old house on the east side of the road was destroyed by fire some years ago and never rebuilt. The old place of Deacon Foster is where Esther Foster, the wife of James Butters 3d was born. Near the pond is the old place once the home of Joseph Tyler and his wife Betsey, daughter of William Butters 4th. From this little hamlet of Butters' Row, fourteen fathers and sons, "Butters," shouldered their muskets to serve their country in the War of the Revolution. Few families can claim a larger representation in this service. The industry, aside from farming, of cutting timber, and hauling by ox teams to the ship-yards on the Mystic, was changed by the opening of the Middlesex Canal, the plan of which canal originated with the Hon. James Sullivan, who consulted with his friend Col. Loammi Baldwin, widely and favorably known as a projector and engineer. After careful investigation they concluded the plan feasible, and secured a charter June 22, 1793. Mr. Sullivan was made President of the company, and Colonel Baldwin one of its first Vice Presidents. They engaged a local surveyor to make a preliminary examination of the route they had selected. He made a report unfavorable to the project, and were it not for the indomitable pluck and engineering experience of Colonel Baldwin the scheme would have been abandoned.

They secured the services of the eminent engineer, Mr. Samuel Weston, from Penn. He prepared plans, specifications and located the lines upon which the Middlesex Canal was constructed. The first ground was removed in September, 1794, and the canal opened in 1803, connecting with the Merrimac river at Lowell. Its sluggish water wended its way through the district of "Butters' Row," bringing a new impetus to the place. The Boston and Lowell Railroad in a few years paralleled the line of the canal, and when in operation, the canal, an unprofitable adventure, was abandoned in 1846, and now what remains of that once famous waterway is in a measure filled in and grass-grown, although visible.

The plan shows where stood the Butter apple tree, planted by William Butter, and brought to fame by producing the first scions from which grew the Baldwin apple.

Apple trees had been under cultivation in and about Woburn, Mass., prior to 1680. It was the ambition of those early settlers to try their lands for fruits and seeds of all kinds, and the first settler, Butter, could not have been an exception. The particular tree and parent of the Baldwin apple was first noticed growing upon the land of James Butter, bearing such fine fruit that his father, William Butter, transplanted it (some time prior to his death in 1784) to a place near his own house, where it stood until destroyed by the great gale of September, 1815. While some writers refer to the tree as a wild, uncultivated one, of spontaneous growth, it would seem, however, otherwise. That it was a cultivated one, as the fruit bore evidence by its exceptional quality, for had it been a wild tree its fruit would be of the small crab order. There were others who claimed to be growing the same identical fruit. Such was the case of the tree upon the farm bought by Mr. Ebenezer Brooks in 1715, and the History of Medford gives an account of the Brooks tree, claiming it to be the original of the Baldwin apple, and others have made the same claim. The interest to learn which of the several trees was the true one so increased that it brought out the testimony of those familiar with the subject. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society appointed a committee to investigate, and they reported that the Butter's tree was the original one from which Colonel Baldwin got his first cutting.

A letter published in the New England Farmer in 1826 says: "When this apple was first discovered, an old gentleman of Wilmington, by the name of Butters, discovered on his farm an apple tree of spontaneous origin which bore a fine red apple. The tree was very productive and the apple very much admired, and it was designated in the neighborhood the Butter's apple. Afterwards it was called the 'Woodpecker,' because the bird of this name frequented this tree in preference to others, probably on account of the richness of the flavor of its sap. It has by some been called by abbreviation the 'Pecker Apple.'" In the New England Farmer of March 10, 1852, J. W. Proctor writes: "I have ascertained from an-intelligent observer of facts in Wilmington that he knows the position in which the tree that bore the original of this apple formerly stood. It was on a farm owned by James Butter, of Wilmington. About twenty-five years since Mr. Butter himself showed him the place in which it stood, and the hollow from which the stump was removed is distinctly to be seen."

In the life of Asa G. Shelden, the famous Wilmington farmer, and a member of the committee appointed to investigate the whole business, he says (pages 347-348): "The origin of the Baldwin apple has been disputed. Many are willing to claim it, but from authentic sources I have gained the information that it was a wild tree taken from the woods in the south part of Wilmington, on what is called Wood Hill, by William Butters, and transplanted and set about fourteen rods from his back door.

"From that tree Colonel Loammi Baldwin cut scions for his own orchard, from which originated the name. On that point there was so much dispute I felt an interest in knowing, if possible, where it was first produced. The first evidence was gained from James Butters, who lived on Wood Hill.

"He informed me that the tree was taken from land of his, and frequently urged me to go and see the hole where it was taken out of, and the last time I well remember his words, 'You will be sorry if you don't.' His words proved true. I once heard that the tree was claimed in North Tewksbury, and made a journey up there to see what proof could be afforded of it. I was showed a tree they called the Baldwin, but it bore little resemblance to the Baldwin trees of Wilmington.

"I know of no better way to describe it than by calling it a two story tree.

"I did not see any of the fruit, nor could I find a man in the neighborhood that was able to give any information as to where the tree came from.
"Simeon Butters, son of James, before mentioned, showed me, as near as he could recollect, where the tree stood when it bore fruit; and at another time Walter Butters showed me the same, and they did not vary four feet. Likewise the widow of Loammi Butters identified the same spot.

"I asked all three of the last mentioned persons what became of that tree. The first said. 'The tree was thrifty when I went to live in Lynn eight years ago, but when I came back, I never noticed it afterward.' The second could tell nothing about it.

"I then repaired to the woman and asked her, 'Can you tell what became of that tree?' 'I guess I can,' she replied. 'The day that I was married there came up a shower just before 12 o'clock, and lightning tore that tree all to pieces.'" (June 5, 1800.)

The following letter mentions the location of the tree and the age at which it was transplanted:

"RUMFORD HOUSE, MOUNT PLEASANT, QUEBEC,
JANUARY 12.
Rev. Leander Thompson, North Woburn, Mass.
MY DEAR SIR:

"I always took it for granted that the Wilmington site was the true one. That such was my belief I will mention, that on one occasion on passing Butter's house, I think within fifteen years after the gale of 1815, I called at the house and asked a woman to show me where the apple tree that bore the Pecker or Baldwin apples grew. She pointed to a large stump a short distance from the house, to the north some four or five rods, the stump being in line with the road leading up to the house from the south, and where the road changes its course toward the north or northeast. This position of the tree does not correspond to that fixed by the Legislative committee, which made a thorough investigation of the subject. It showed the site of the tree a few rods westerly of Butters' house. The site of the tree thus obtained was ordered by the Legislature, as I suppose, to be marked on the State map, where it will be found on the recent editions.

"I cannot fix approximately when the Butters' tree was set out. The story I used to hear when young was that the tree, when small, was brought home by the owner of the house from the woods and set out near his house, and that it was blown down in the great gale of 1815.

"I remain most respectfully yours,

"George R. Baldwin."

The time when Colonel Baldwin first secured the scions and became interested in the propagation of this kind of apple is indefinite. It was probably prior to or about the year 1780.

The History of Woburn, by Sewell, on page 389, is the following: "As Colonel Baldwin was one day surveying land at a place called Butters' Row, in Wilmington, near the bounds of that town, Woburn and Burlington, he observed one or more woodpeckers continually flying to a certain tree growing on the land of James Butters hard by." From this statement it would seem that Baldwin first saw the tree before it was moved by William Butters, the father of James. At first apples of this description were called by many Butters' apples, from the name of the person upon whose land the original tree was found, and later by others "Woodpecker apples," "by reason of its being visited by birds of that species." Colonel Baldwin fortunately became interested in the propagation of this variety of fruit, for which purpose he frequently cut scions from the tree with such success as to prefix his name to the Baldwin apple.

William Butter was born about 1630 in Scotland, from which country he came to America, settling in Woburn, Mass., prior to 1666, being taxed in the County rate August 26 of that year. His name appears regularly on the Woburn, town records for each succeeding tax rate, including that for the New Meeting-house in 1672, and December 2, 1679, for the building and finishing Mr. Julius Fox’s house (the minister); also at different times for the maintenance of the minister.

He was one of the twenty men who were granted by the Town of Woburn, February 23, 1675, one hundred acres of land on the other side of Maple Meadow river, which was to remain to them and their heirs, provided they staid in the town seven years. He was also one of the forty-four men to whom the town granted, February, 1678, seven acres each in a tract of land on the north side of Maple Meadow river.

The records of lands belonging to William Butter in the town of Woburn, entered in the year 1674 (19 acres imprimis), one dwelling house, barn and outhouses, with nineteen acres of land thereunto belonging, situated or lying at a place commonly called Boggy Meadow Field, seven of it being formerly the land of Isaac Brooks, bounded east and west by the land of Joseph Carter, south by Will Butter and north by the land of Robert Eames. The other twelve acres purchased of Joseph Carter, seven acres Summers’ lot, seven acres Joseph Pierce’s lot, seven acres Aaron Cleveland’s lot; one parcel of land more lying southward of Settle Meadow being a lot purchased of Henry Summers, by estimation seven acres, and seven acres adjoining to it being given by the town; also one lot adjoining to that of seven acres given by the town, all these three lots being purchased by the said William Butter, of Henry Summers, making a total of sixty-one acres in his homestead in the year 1674. So well had his residence become known, and being one of the first settlers in the north limits of Woburn, that his home and the road leading to it were used often in describing boundaries of adjacent land.

We find in the records under date "6th November, 1682, the description of land laid out to Israel Walker, on his father's wood lot near the highway that goeth over Wood Hill to William Butter's house." Also, on April 26, 1688, in land laid out to Francis Kindall, which lands lie adjoining to Clear Meadow Brook on Wood Hill, on the east side of the way going to William Butter's. In 1669 Samuel Converse, son of Deacon Edward Converse, was killed while cutting ice off the water-wheel to his corn mill. In the settlement shown of his estate he was owing William Butter 000-2-3, for what purpose is not known. (Converse Family, page 121.) William Butter's name does not appear upon any list of freemen. He may have been one of those who, because of their religious opinions, would not allow them to join any of the New England churches, which was the case of many of the inhabitants of Massachusetts who stood high in position and character. During King Philip's war he saw three months' service, enlisting August, 1676, in Captain Joseph Syll's company, and took part in one of the most important engagements of that war. The records of service of Captain Syll's company were for many years mislaid, but came to light, and were published in volume 41 of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society. Captain Joseph Syll was of Cambridge, born 1639; called into military life early in the war, and served continuously in important times and places till its close. William Butter enlisted in his company in August, 1676, and continued in service until the middle of the following November, during which time Captain Syll joined his forces with Captain Hathorn, with orders to follow the Indians who escaped at the Narragansett fight. A large band were overtaken at Cochecho (now Dover) on September 4, 1676. Some 400 Indians were gathered at this point, and at the same time there marched into town the two companies of troops from Massachusetts, under orders to seize all Indians concerned in Philip's war. Major Richard Waldron, a resident of this town rendered the Massachusetts men assistance by planning with the Indians a sham battle. The Indians, by agreement, fired off their guns first. Before they could reload, Captain Syll and his men surrounded them and took them prisoners. Three hundred were taken to Boston; six, who were identified as having slain Englishmen, were hung on Boston Common; the rest were sent to the Bermudas and sold as slaves. This capture of so many prisoners was recorded as the stunningest blow of all given the Indians. The Indians never forgot this act of treachery on the part of Major Waldron, for after a lapse of thirteen years, they came in force, and, by the treachery of an Indian who pretended to be his friend, he was captured and cruelly tortured to death. William Butter again accompanied Captain Syll who, equipped for a Winter's march, was ordered to Ossipe and Pequaquet, leaving November 1. When, after four days' march of very difficult way, over many rivers not easy to pass at that time of the year, they arrived, but found no Indians. On account of snow and severity of an early Winter, further search was abandoned, returning home November 9. While this brave soldier was absent fighting the Indians his little family was left at home under the watchful eye of the "tithing man" for the Boggy Meadow district, who, from time to time, advanced money for the town to the wife as necessities required. The Woburn Town Records, vol. I., page 69, recite as follows:

"The town debtor in 1676 deducted off William Butters' account, being overrated 000-8s-0 more in silver, to relieve William Butters' wife, 2s advanced." "To Francis Kindall, for William Butters' wife, silver 000-4s-0o." "To the Captain, in silver, for Butters' wife, 1s."

Of William Butter's marriage, no record of the event could be found other than his wife was Mary. He died in Woburn November 13, 1692.

It is inferred that the marriage of William and Mary was dissolved some time prior to his death, as she contracted a second marriage February 13, 1691, and died January 5, 1701, in Watertown under the name of Stratton.

One child was born to William and Mary Butter, a son.

William, son of William and Mary Butter, born in that part of North Woburn called Boggy Meadow End. The increase in his father’s tax to two persons in the rate for 1687 would indicate that William, Jr., paid his first tax in that year. The Woburn records show that he was regularly taxed in the county and town rates; also the rates for maintenance of the minister, Mr. Fox, and for His Majesty’s (the King’s) service. In the Province tax of 1703–5, he is charged with 20 polls, and in 1708 30 polls, which possibly referred to or included the men in his employ. The industry of cutting timber for the ship yards on the Mystic seemed to be the principal occupation of farmers in this locality at the time. He was one of the early officers in the new town of Wilmington, having been chosen Selectman at the annual election of the town, March 2, 1731, and on July 6, 1732, he was chosen one of the committee to secure the settlement of the Rev. Mr. Ward Cotten for the new church. June 9, 1716 he added to his estate by purchase of H. Sommers, land adjoining his own. He married about 1687 Rebecca ——. She was admitted by letter into the church of Wilmington, March 16, 1734, five months after organization of church, and he was baptized and admitted to the same church October 1, 1738. He died “February 9, 1746, aged about 80 years” (from gravestone in the old cemetery near the Church of Christ, in Wilmington). Probate records recite the date of his death, “April 28, 1745.” She died after him. Owing to loss of early town records the date could not be learned.

resident of Goshen, now Wilmington, and took an early interest in the welfare of that part of Woburn, being one of the petitioners for the adjustment of church matters in 1725, and July 18, 1728, he was one of the petitioners for a division of the town of Woburn. He carried on the business of a saw-mill in connection with farming, and acquired during his life a large part of timbered lands, especially the cedar swamps, Lebanon and Ladder Pole. In 1742 he purchased the interest of Mr. James Baldwin in lands and saw-mill. He lived in the house shown upon the plat (No. 3), and was known as the Garrison House. Samuel, with his brother William, were executors of his father's estate. He married January 20, 1726, Sarah, born March 8, 1703, daughter of Abraham and Sarah (Jones) Jaquith, early settlers of Wilmington, Mass. Sarah (Jaquith) Butters was baptized and admitted to the Church of Christ February 2, 1754.

He left Union, Me., and went West, taking his wife and remaining child Alfred, locating in Bennington township (then Delaware county), Ohio, about 1812. The History of Morrow county, Ohio, refers to him as follows: "Where he built his log cabin, in one corner of which was a small office, he was an apothecary ‘doctor.’ His practice became quite extensive, and his face was familiar for miles around. He usually went dressed in a complete suit of deerskin, and was intelligent, a good talker, and was in the habit of supplying the Elder’s place when that dignitary was absent. He preached in his deerskin suit at one end of the room, while his rifle, brought with him to church, remained at the other. One Sunday in 1819 he started to church with his rifle on his shoulder, and, having proceeded about half way, saw a large bear in front of him, traveling along at a rapid rate. He raised his gun and fired, and the bear, with a howl of anguish, fell dead upon the earth. The animal was conveyed to his cabin, and the doctor reached the meeting-house in time to conduct the service.’”

He attended the Second Congregational Church, where he was owner of pew No. 16. Failing in health he sold out his business, and moved his family to South Boston, Mass., taking up residence in brick dwelling on Eighth street, near K. The next year, 1850, he moved to Third street, near Dorchester avenue. He entered the book store of Phillips & Sampson, and in 1851 he moved his family to West Roxbury, the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. Charles Sampson, and, asso-associated with him, went into the business of poultry, swine and dogs, going south to New Orleans in Winters with a large stock. John and Priscilla (Bramhall) Sampson, of Plymouth, Mass, lineal descendant of Henry Sampson, Myles Standish and John Alden, all fathers of Plymouth, who came in the Mayflower and signed the noted compact; also great granddaughter of Zabdiel Sampson, a Revolutionary soldier, killed in service at Harlem Heights Sept. 6, 1776; also descendant of George Bramhall, killed at the battle of Falmouth, Me., 1676, during King Phillip's War. The widow, whose future death had so early clouded, was but entering upon those trials which proves one's strength and Christian fortitude, and her burden was a heavy and exceptionable one. Death called in succession her husband's sisters, Jane and Frances, her own sister, brother, mother and only daughter. Each must needs have her gentle hand to smooth their pillow, for her patience, tenderness and hopeful smile made her presence a blessing to the afflicted. To her fell the care of the five orphaned children of her brother, whom she mothered as her own, and guided until they left for homes of their own. The last part of her life was spent in the city of Chicago, with all the comforts of a well-appointed home.

Caroline E. (Sampson) Butters died at the residence of her son in Oak Park, Ill., at 2 p. m. March 17, 1893, of apoplexy; burial at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy, Mass. She was a member of the People's Church, Chicago, Dr. H. W. Thomas, pastor; active in all matters of interest to the Church Society, a true Christian, beloved by all who knew her.

In the spring of 1867, being somewhat improved in health, he went into the lumber

Joseph, son of Joseph and Aseneth (Carter) Butters, was born in Wilmington, Mass., and moved with his parents to Burlington. He remained on the farm of his father, purchasing later a farm about one mile from the homestead, on Wood Hill. After a time he sold the buildings and a portion of the land to Mr. Lewis Taylor for a farm. Later his brother Charles shared with him what remained of the Wood Hill farm. In those days there was a ready sale for wood, and for many years he carried wood to market. When he first began to team he used oxen, starting at two o'clock in the morning. His judgment upon cattle was good, and many a pair of oxen were driven by him to and from Brighton Market, but later in his life the horse was substituted for the ox, and the hour of starting not as early as formerly. He was a man industrious and frugal, a bountiful provider, and no one was ever stinted who dwelt beneath his roof. He married May 29, 1844, Mary E., born Oct. 12, 1819, daughter of Reuben and Rebecca (Clarke) Monroe, of Carlisle, Mass. He died of apoplexy after an illness of four hours, Nov. 9, 1869, in Burlington, Mass. His widow, after remaining forty years in Burlington, moved to Carlisle, her native place. The funeral services were held in the Congregational Church in Burlington at 2 p. m., Nov. 22, attended by the Rev. Edwin Smith, of Bedford. Simeon, son of Alfred and Margaret (Ware) Butters, was a man of the strictest integrity, a farmer of moderate means and temperate habits. He was a Republican in politics; an energetic worker for the cause of religion, uniting with the Methodist Church in 1875. Being reared on a farm, and used to the hardships of the early settlement of the country, he naturally loved the woods; was proficient with his rifle, and took pleasure in a day's shooting up to the time of his last sickness. He married Aug. 29, 1854, Mary, daughter of William and Mildred Cooley, of Marengo, Ohio.

Almon, son of Simeon and Sarah V. (Shaw) Butters, was born in Exeter, Me., with only the advantages of a district school, which he made the most of, and secured a fair education. When a boy he cut his knee with a knife—an accident that came near costing his life—from which he was always lame. While confined to the house his mother hired him to read, and he acquired a love for books, and few busy men of his age had a wider acquaintance with good books. Having a retentive memory, he could recall and talk intelligently on history and a wide range of subjects. When twenty years of age he had served his apprenticeship to the trade of carpenter, and became a fine workman. He was a prominent contractor. In politics he was first a Whig, then one of the earliest Abolitionists, at a time when the espousal of this name brought great persecution. He was a Republican from the organization of the party to the close of his life. He early became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and served the church in official relations and as a teacher in the Sabbath School. He was a man modest and unassuming, creditably performing the duties of any position to which he was assigned. He was one of the most conscientious of men, and gave full value for every dollar that came to his hands. Dying, he left a record all should covet—that of being an honest man—the noblest work of God. He married Jan. 1, 1842, Elizabeth, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth (Ames) Powers, of Bangor, Me. Almon Butters died in Bangor, Me., April 10, 1879. (Shaw) Butters, was a man of firm mind, a carpenter by trade, having served his apprenticeship with his brother in Exeter, Me., and when his trade was learned he went to Oldtown, Me., for work. He proved a master mechanic, planning and building some of the finest and best structures.

He enlisted Aug. 21, 1862, Artificer in Company I, First Maine Regiment Heavy Artillery, for three years. His health failing, he returned home, to die in the triumphs of Christian faith, from exposure in the country's service; a man held in high esteem by his townsmen, having held responsible positions as officer in many organizations in the town.

He married Dec. 23, 1848, Sarah F., daughter of Alvin B. and Phoebe Gillman, of Oldtown, Me. He died May 10, 1884, in Oldtown.

Reuben, son of Flavel and Mercy Snow Butters was born in Appleton, Me., May 26, 1816, and passed his school days in Exeter. When a young man he went to Ohio, where he married Miss Lizzie Hill, of Cleveland. Here they resided several years, keeping a general merchandise store. About 1850 he went to St. Paul, and later took up a homestead at Traverse Des Sious. He resided here some years and cultivated his land. About the time of the Sioux massacre he moved to Kasota, where his wife passed away.

On May 26, 1864, he again married Mary E. (Butters, 711) Rogers, widow of Moses Rogers of Exeter, Me. He made his future home in Kasota, with the exception of a short time spent in Denver and the Rocky Mountains. From the Le Sueur Sentinel we find the following published after his death in 1888: "Mr. Butters was an untiring worker for Kasota, and was among the first to bring into prominence the unrivalled building stone of that place. He had a general merchandise store in the village for many years, and he never turned away an applicant for credit. His benevolence was proverbial, and his genial presence always cast a glow of sunshine around him. He was a typical ‘early settler,’ with a warm heart and open hand, and no man was more widely known and more generally esteemed between Mankato and St. Paul.

“He was a Representative from Le Sueur county in the first State Legislature, and served five consecutive terms. He was afterward a State Senator two terms. He was prominent in locating the first hospital for insane at St. Peters, and served as a trustee for that institution for many years. He was always a broad minded and public spirited citizen.

His widow alone survives him, a resident of St. Peters, Minn., in 1896.

Lorenzo Dow, son of Flavel and Mercy (Snow) Butters, was born in Union, Me., and with his father's family moved to Exeter, of that State, in the spring of 1820. His education was such as could be obtained at the public schools of the town, with a couple of terms in the high school. Being the oldest of the family at home, at the time of his father's death, it devolved upon him to provide for his mother and the younger members till they could provide for themselves. He taught school in some district of the town for twenty winters. Served as School Committee several years, Town Treasurer seventeen years, Town Clerk five years, Chairman of the Board of Selectman five years, Postmaster twenty-five years, and Justice of the Peace from 1845 to 1888.

He took an active part in the Aroostook war. This outbreak was the result of long contention with Great Britain, who was continually encroaching on the territory within the boundary line claimed by the United States. The question finally assumed national and international importance. The Government of the United States was disposed to gratify Great Britain, and offered Main land in Michigan to yield its claim. This aroused the indignant protest of the State. Volunteers were called for, the news reaching Exeter one Saturday noon in February, 1839, and a Mr. Butters with others started the next day (Sunday), and traveled to Bangor, twenty miles, there enlisted and started with teams for the seat of war. They made a forced march to the Aroostook River, about 120 miles, halted for a day and organized a company of about 100 men, which took the name of Exeter Volunteers. L. D. Butters was chosen Captain of the company, which he commanded until they were discharged. They then marched down the Aroostook River to near the line of New Brunswick, where a halt was made, a site selected and commenced building what is called to this day Fort Fairfield, named in honor of John Fairfield, then Governor of the State. Trees were felled and a clearing was made for a wide parade ground and room for the camp on each side, and the Exeter Volunteers built the first camp and were the sole occupants of the fort for the first night, while the main force traveled back some four miles, where they found shelter. After thirty days service the Exeter Volunteers were honorably discharged, being relieved by the drafted militia. Maine was finally induced to acquiesce in a treaty which was signed in Washington in 1842.

Fort Fairfield is now quite a large town, whose inhabitants are indebted to Captain Butters and his Exeter comrades for its location and name.

He kept a store of general merchandise from Nov., 1859, to 1881. He married April 1, 1841, Sarah S., daughter of Clark and Mehitabel (Brown) Pease. Her father was but ten years old when her grandfather, Mr. Joseph Pease, came to Exeter, Me., as one of the first settlers. Her mother was the daughter of Theophulus

Brown, who served in the navy during the Revolutionary War, and at one time his vessel was boarded by the British, and, rather than surrender as a prisoner, he jumped overboard and swam for an American vessel that lay three miles away. Several shots were fired at him, but he heeded them not, and made his escape safely. He was one of the early settlers of Exeter, and took a large tract of land in the locality, now known as Brown's Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Butters moved to Denver, Colo., where, on April 1, 1891, they celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. They have no children.

POEM BY L. D. BUTTERS ON THE OCCASION OF HIS GOLDEN WEDDING.

To our friends and kindred gathered here,
To celebrate our fiftieth year
   Of married life,
When we look back o'er all those years
Of joys and sorrows, hopes and fears,
There's much of pleasure and many tears
   For me and wife.

We had many friends that we held dear
That started out in life's career
   With prospects bright;
But one by one they've passed away;
They've paid the debt we all must pay—
And nearly all we loved that day
   Have passed from sight.

But they've only stepped behind the screen,
And in the future they'll be seen
   In garments white.
And when our pilgrimage is o'er,
And time with us shall be no more,
We'll meet them on the other shore
   All fair and bright.

Let all our hearts and voices swell
To Him who doeth all things well,
   In chorus grand.
With our souls all filled with love profound,
When we shall leave this unhallowed ground,
With saints and seraphs may we all be found
   At His right hand.
IMPROPTU LINES BY L. D. BUTTERS ON FINDING AMONG THE PRESENTS A BEAUTIFUL CHAIR.

In it we'll rest our weary limbs,
And chant and sing our morning hymns;
By it we'll kneel at our evening prayer,
Ever remembering these dear friends there,
And We'll christen it always the Golden Chair.

DENVER, Colo., April 1, 1891.

MY TALKING CANE.

A beautiful present to L. D. Butters by his friends on his fiftieth wedding anniversary, at Denver, Colo., April 1, 1891.

I took my cane one day to walk,
And as we journeyed the cane did talk.
As we pursued our winding way,
This is what my cane did say:

"For fifty years of married life,
You and your devoted wife,
Through joys and sorrows have traveled on
Without a staff to lean upon.

No child of yours your home has blest,
That home where strangers found sweet rest;
No fortune came by wills or deeds
To ease life's cares or supply life's needs.

But now in your declining years,
Ere your sun goes down behind the spheres,
I've come to be your staff and guide,
Henceforth I'll travel by your side.

I was sent to you by your kind friends,
When they are all counted my story ends;
Then I'll retire from public strife,
And you may lean on me for life.

Nellie Clay and Lizzie Barkley, a beautiful span,
Edith Foster, Mary Sprague and Mrs. Flanagan,
All put in their money, some more and some less,
And with them is counted young Mamie Van Ness.

George Martin, John Wiley, and Mr. Leith, C. V.,
And Crawford and Osgood and William M. B.;
Smith, Hutton and Ripley all put in their gold,
With Pierce, Manning and Hitchcock my story is told."

William Morell, son of Flavel and Mercy (Snow) Butters, was born in Exeter, Me., where he attended the public schools until he was about 15 years of age, when he went to Exeter, N. H., and served an apprenticeship to C. C. Smith, carriage painter. He then went to Bellefonte, Pa., and worked a year and half house painting, when he moved to Lock Haven, Pa., and started in business for himself, with success. Finding that painting was injuring his health, he changed his business to that of grocery, which he continued until the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion. He enlisted April 19, 1861, as private in company D, Seventh Pennsylvania Reserves, a division organized by Gov. Curtin, by act of a special Legislature convened for that purpose. He remained in camp with his regiment until July 21, 1861, at the occurrence of the battle of Bull Run, when his regiment was called to the defense of the City of Washington, and was mustered into the United States service for three years, and was a part of the Army of the Potomac. In the Summer of 1862, before Richmond, his division was the right of the army at Mechanicsville, and received the first onslaught of Jackson's army, resulting in a seven days' fight, and change of base to Harrison's Landing, on the James River. On the sixth day of the fight, at Charles City Cross Roads, he was wounded and taken prisoner June 30, 1862, and was taken to Libby Prison, thence to Belle Isle, where he remained until exchanged. He joined his regiment early in the following December, and participated in the battle of Fredericks under Gen. Burnside, Dec. 13, 1862. Here he was again wounded, this time in the right hand, disqualifying him from further field service. He was mustered out with his regiment June 16, 1864, at Philadelphia, Pa. He re-enlisted Oct. 14, 1864, in the Tenth Pennsylvania Veteran Reserve Corps, served in and around Washington, D. C., until regularly discharged, Nov. 13, 1865, making in all more than four years' service. He now returned to Maine, and engaged in farming until May, 1869, when he engaged as traveling salesman for S. & I. Adams, of Bangor, Me., last for H. A. Osgood & Son, wholesale jewelers, of Lewiston, Me. In 1888 he established for himself a wholesale and retail jewelry business at Presque Isle, Me., which he continued until Jan., 1891, when he removed to Framingham, Mass., where he now resides.

Nelson W. was born in Exeter, Me., son of Pinckney and Caroline (Pitman) Butters. He moved to Wayne, Ohio, in 1858, returning to Exeter, Me., in 1871; he then went with his family to Colorado, settling on a ranch about ten miles from Denver, and engaged in the cattle business. Being of delicate constitution his health failed him, and in 1880 he sold out and went to Denver. He was a man of strong, upright character and generous disposition. He married June 2, 1854, Julia M., born July 11, 1832, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Seavey) Atkins, of Exeter, Me. He died in Denver, Col., Dec. 26, 1884.

Children:

848. Clarence Nelson, born Jan. 6, 1865; d. April 13, 1869.
Alfred, son of Pinckney and Catherine (Pitman) Butters, was born in Exeter, Me. He availed himself of the limited advantages for obtaining an education, in the district school, in those early pioneer days. In 1858, just after reaching his majority, he started out alone to make his way in the world, going first to Kansas at a time when that State was feeling greatly the financial depression of 1857. Here he was overcome by ague; at the termination of six months he had so recovered that he went over into Andrew county, one of the western border counties of Missouri. Here he opened a district school in a rough log cabin, with thirteen scholars, which, with his earnest efforts, increased in six months to fifty-five scholars, all that the little building would hold. At close of the third term he resigned; although the citizens offered every inducement, he would not remain, not caring to make teaching a permanent occupation. Entering the stream of emigration which was at this time pouring into the West, he reached Colorado and engaged in farming, but was washed out by the floods and met with poor success. He then engaged in a small way in freighting, and crossed the plains—650 miles—eight times before the first railroad was completed to Denver, despite the frequent raids by the Indians upon those early settlers. From freighting he went into the business of raising cattle upon the public range, which occupation he followed for fifteen years with good success.

At 13 he was sent to Wisconsin to work on a farm, but finding the life unsuitable, he moved to Hebron, Ill., a few months later, and engaged as store boy to a live stock broker. While employed in this capacity he picked up telegraphy at the railroad station. He soon after secured a position on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, and after having worked at several different towns on this road, went to Chicago, and obtained a position with the Western Union Telegraph Company. After the telegraph strike of 1883 he entered the employ of Rand, McNally & Co., where he remained about one year. Early in 1885 he went West and secured employment as a telegrapher on several railroads. In the Summer of 1885 he joined, at El Paso, Tex., a Mexican Central Railroad surveying expedition, and, with seventeen others, was lost on the Sierra Madre Desert while attempting to reach Quaymar from Chihuahua. He was one of the four survivors of this expedition. Returning to the United States, he secured employment with the Texas and Pacific Railroad as a train dispatcher. The responsibilities of this position, together with the effects of the Mexican expedition, completely broke down his health, and he was forced to give up his position and go to Judsonia, Ark., where he remained an invalid for over six months. In the Fall of 1886 he returned to Chicago and entered the service of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company, soon afterwards being transferred to Cincinnati, Memphis, Chattanooga, Atlanta and other Southern cities. Later on he was promoted to the emergency corps of operators, and was sent to nearly all the larger cities as a relief man. He was finally sent to the New York office, and remained there until the Baltimore and Ohio was absorbed by the Western Union. Early in 1888 he accepted a position with an electric company, and was sent to Europe. While abroad the company failed, and he returned to America by way of Panama. Arriving at New Orleans, he secured a position with the Associated Press, and was subsequently transferred to Philadelphia, Washington, Boston and Montreal. He left the Associated Press in 1889 to enter the employ of the Forum, a monthly magazine published in New York City. As circulation manager of the Forum he made a special trip and visited nearly every place in the United States containing a population of 10,000 and over. In 1893 he was appointed business manager of the Forum, and a year later resigned his position and entered the service of the North American Review, and was sent to Florida to write up that country. In the Fall of 1895 he accepted a position as subscription manager of the American Medical Review in New York City. Mr. A. C. Butters married at St. Catherine's, Ontario, July 2, 1894, by the Rev. Horace Butters, lumberman of Ludington, Mason County, Mich., was born Aug. 16, 1833, at Exeter, Me., son of Sewell and Rhoda (Robbins) Butters.

He attended the common schools near his father’s home up to eleven years of age, when he left home to make his own way in the world. He was employed for about four years on a farm, and subsequently engaged in logging on the Penobscot River.

In 1851 he came West, and on going to Manistee entered the employ of J. & A. Stronach, lumber manufacturers. Two years later he had charge of one of their camps, and in the following spring engaged in logging on his own account, there gradually working his way along and extending his operations as his capital increased. In 1874 he leased a sawmill at Freesoil, Mason County, Mich., which he operated three years. The firm of H. Butters & Co. was organized in 1877, and a shingle mill was built at Ludington, Mich., and operated by them. This mill was subsequently sold to Smith & Foley.

In the fall of 1878 the firm name was changed to Butters, Peters & Co., and composed of the subject of this sketch, Mr. R. G. Peters of Manistee, who comprised the old firm, and Walter S. Goff (now deceased), of Manistee, Mich. A large tract of pine lands in Sherman and Branch Townships, Mason County, Mich., was purchased; the town of Tallman was laid out, and a large saw and shingle mill built there, and the firm commenced the manufacture of lumber and shingles. Four years later the firm purchased the Cartier & Filer plant, situated on the south side of the Pere Marquette Lake, and in 1884, when the mill at Tillman was destroyed by fire, they enlarged and improved the former mill, and have since manufactured their lumber there exclusively.

In this work the firm invested $150,000, increasing the capacity of the saw mill and putting in an extensive vacuum salt works with capacity for 1,200 barrels a day, this firm being the first one that made salt successfully with the Vacuum Pan, being a great improvement over the Grainer system. It takes three salt wells to supply brine for their block. These wells are bored to a depth of 2,240 feet, where they strike rock which is dissolved and pumped up. The timber of this firm is brought to their mill over the Mason and Oceana Railroad, being a narrow gauge road twenty-seven miles in length and owned by the firm, who also own large supply stores which sell $100,000.00 worth of goods annually. On Feb. 21, 1887, the business was organized into a joint stock company under the title of the Butters & Peters Salt & Lumber Company, of which Mr. Butters is President. They also own a steam barge having a carrying capacity of four hundred and fifty thousand feet of lumber.

Mr. Butters in 1888 made large purchases of cypress lands in North and South Carolina, owning one hundred thousand acres of land. He organized the Butters Lumber Company, he being President, and all of the stock of this firm being owned by Mr. Butters and his sons. They have built a large mill plant and now have constructed a canal thirty feet wide and thirty miles in length through their cypress swamps where the logs are floated to their mill, which is located at Hub, Columbus County, North Carolina.

While manufacturing lumber at Freesoil Mr. Butters' attention was directed to the laborious and costly methods in use up to that time for log skidding and loading, and bringing his inventive faculties to his aid he finally invented and patented a machine to do this work at a much less cost than by the old methods. It is known as the "H. Butters' Patent Steam Skidding and Loading Machine." The machine is a most complete one for the purpose, and is being extensively used by large lumbermen throughout the country, especially in the Southern swamps. The machine has met Mr. Butters' highest expectations and gives satisfaction to all who are using it. A large manufacturer of machinery in New York is licensed by Mr. Butters to manufacture and sell the skidder.

Mr. Butters, although a firm and earnest member of the Republican party, has found no time to take an active part in politics.

He is universally respected for his honorable and fair dealings, and has many friends and few, if any, enemies.

Henry A. Butters, born at Haverhill, Mass., son of Henry A. and Lucinda L. (Finney) Butters. In 1863 the family moved to California, where, after a good high school education, he started in life for himself at the age of 18, by pre-empting Government land on that part of Santa Barbara county now forming Ventura county, Southern California, and for three years was engaged in farming and stock-raising. In 1871 went to San Francisco, and remained there for two years in the employment of A. L. Bancroft & Co., where he made a great success selling school books. This being too slow, he started, in 1873, traveling through the State as a life insurance agent. This was during the boom days of life insurance on the Pacific coast, and he did a large business, until broken down in health from the malaria of the San Joaquin valley, where he was then working; he was forced, in 1875, to go to a cold climate, and went back to the Eastern States, where he traveled about for a year, then took a position as traveling salesman in the New England territory for the Howe Scale Company, with headquarters at Boston, where he married for the first time in 1878.

He was very successful in his work in New England, but finding the country too conservative and his opportunities limited, he resigned his position and went to Leadville, Col., in 1879. He was connected with several of the most extensive irrigation enterprises in Colorado, organized the largest grain farm (about 18,000 acres) in the State, at Alamosa, in the San Luis valley, and he had the reputation of being the best land salesman in the State.
In 1890 he lost his first wife, who was his devoted helpmate and friend; in July, 1891, he became a fervent convert to the Roman Catholic Church, and married an accomplished and beautiful woman from San Francisco, the widow of Captain L. B. Sengteller, United States Coast Survey, who was also a Roman Catholic. Shortly after this his health broke down completely, as the combined result of his year of sorrow and a great financial strain, and he was obliged once more to abandon business and travel for his health, going to Johannesburg, South Africa, to visit his brother Charles. Here he recuperated very rapidly, and with the restlessness characteristic of him, he was soon engaged in several minor operations, which proved successful.

In June, 1894, having recovered his health, he went to Capetown, and buying up the existing horse-car lines, obtained a concession from the authorities for an extensive rapid transit system for the town, in which his purchased lines were to be combined, and all to be worked by electricity. This scheme he floated in London in the Winter of 1895, and, having made a large fortune out of it, has since become concerned in several very large and successful South African enterprises.

He is a man who has always left the mark of his enterprise on every country in which he has lived.

He is at the head of the concern, which is one of the largest metallurgical works in existence. At the time of the Dr. Jamieson raid on the Transvaal in Jan., 1896, he was one of the Emergency Committee formed by the citizens for the protection of Johannesburg against the invasion of freebooters. THE BUTTERS FAMILY.

MISCELLANEOUS.
Benjamin Butters was born about 1754. When a young man he resided in Wilmington, Mass. As many of the records of that town were destroyed by fire no document has been found giving the names of his parents or date of his birth. Mr. Lorenzo Clisby, grandson of Benjamin Butters, says: "I knew in Medford several of the Butters family, probably second or third cousins of mine." Mrs. Martha (Clisby) McAlpine says: "I remember there was a William Butters in Medford in my childhood, and of hearing mother say she had no doubt he was a descendant of the same ancestor, yet no kinship was ever claimed." If it were true that the Medford families, descendants of William and Benjamin Butters, were related it would make Benjamin, probably, the son of William and Abigail Butters, (12.) He married Nov. 19, 1771, Elizabeth, daughter of Timothy and Mehitabel (Parker) Stimpson, of Reading, Mass. After his marriage he resided in Reading. He marched on the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775, as private in Captain John Walton's company, Col. David Green's regiment. He enlisted Nov. 4, 1777, as private in Capt. Cadwallader Ford's company, Col. Brooks' Regiment of Guards, at Cambridge, No. 2 guarding the troops of the convention. He again enlisted Feb. 21, 1778, for two months' service in Capt. Jesse Wyman's company, in the regiment of guards doing duty on Bunker Hill, commanded by Col. Jacob Gerrish. After the war he moved with his family to Andover, Mass., and went to farming.
He commenced to receive a pension for his service in the War of the Revolution in Feb., 1819, which was suspended May 1, 1820. On the Salem registry of deeds is the following: Dec. 10, 1810, Benjamin Butters, of Andover, yeoman, to Joshua Ballard, of Andover, a certain piece of land, with a dwelling-house standing thereon, together with a barn standing on the opposite side of the road, on land belonging to Samuel Abbott Goldsmith, and contains two acres, for $250.00; Aug. 14, 1820, in consideration of $250.00 paid by Benjamin Butters to Joshua Ballard for a certain real estate, being the same on which the said Benjamin Butters then lived, reference being had to a conveyance by deed from said Butters to said Ballard, and which said Ballard then released and quit claimed; Aug. 16, 1820, Benjamin Butters, of Andover, to Stephen Abbott, of Andover, a certain piece of land, with dwelling-house thereon, situate in said Andover, for $250.00, Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Butters, relinquished right of dower.

Jan., 1829, John P. Clisby, of Medford, to Elizabeth Butters, of Andover, widow, leased the dwelling-house and land where said Elizabeth then lived, together with a barn, to have and to hold the same to the said Elizabeth for and during the term of her natural life.

Mr. Lorenzo Clisby, son of John P. Clisby, says: "I recollect my grandmother (Butters) quite distinctly. She lived to be 87 years old. My father made an effort to get her a pension on account of her husband's service in the army, but failed."

Aug. 8, 1807, Hannah Chandler, of Andover, sold to Benjamin Butters, of same town, yeoman, a certain piece of woodland, with dwelling-house thereon, for $100.00.

Jacob Butters, of New York,

And His Descendants.

There appeared in New York State after the Revolution John and Jacob Butters. Many incidents related by their descendants connect them as brothers, who came from England.

Jacob Butters followed the trade of a journeyman shoemaker and cobbler, working from family to family, cobbling, or, in the parlance of those days, "whipping the cat." He lived in Albany County, and married Rachel, daughter of James and Mary (Tice) Smith. Of her family little has been learned. She had a sister Mary, the wife of Harvey C. Cook, of Reading, N. Y.; a brother James Smith; also, a sister Anna, born March, 1792, who married in March, 1810, Benjamin, son of Benjamin Hoag, and had Humphrey Howland, born Dec. 22, 1810; Hiram Cook, Mary Ann, Sarah and James Smith Hoag. Of these Hiram Cook Hoag is living in Walworth, Wayne County, N. Y., and has a son, Capt. J. Murray Hoag, living in Maquoketa, Iowa. He says his mother, Ann (Smith) Hoag, at times visited relatives at Scipio, Reading, Watkins and Olean, N. Y.

Jacob Butters died near Ithaca, N. Y., in 1819. His widow, Rachel Smith, soon married again a Mr. Hannamore, placing her children among friends.
Children:

1489. John Smith Butters, born March 26, 1813.
1490. George " " 1815.
1491. Harriet " " 1817; she went to live with a family by the name of Green, in New Baltimore, Green County, N. Y., and she afterward married one of Mr. Green's sons. Her husband was a tanner and currier and dealer in leather.

John Smith, son of Jacob and Rachel (Smith) Butters, was born in Albany County, N. Y. When his father died he was but 6 years old. He went to live with his uncle, James Smith, and later he made his home with his uncle, Harvey C. Cook, who kept a tavern at Reading, N. Y. Here he remained until he was 20 years old, assisting his uncle, and occasionally driving down to the boat landing for passengers. He has referred in life to Ithaca, Watkins and Horseheads as places visited before leaving the State, and these were towns where lived the families of John Butters, supposed to be his father's brother. He left Reading after teaching two terms of school, and went to New Haven, Huron County, Ohio, where he became a farmer, and met Miss Eunice Grace, whom he married Nov. 27, 1836. She was born July 1, 1814, in Snyderville, Pa., the daughter of Michael and Sarah (Snyder) Grace. She moved with her parents to Genoa Hollow, Cayuga County, N. Y., and to New Haven, Ohio. While in New Haven Mr. Butters was a member of the militia. For some defect in his eyes he was given a certificate of exemption, dated Sept. 20, 1841, signed by G. R. West, Colonel First Regiment, Second Brigade, Eleventh Division Ohio Militia. Following the tide of emigration he left New Haven in the Fall of 1841, for Iowa, with his wife and two little children, in a wagon drawn by a mare and 2-year-old colt. They reached Scott County, where they spent the Winter, and in the Spring settled at Andrew, Jackson County, Iowa, taking up a claim and engaging in farming. They were among the first settlers, and they used to go to Dubuque to buy provisions and to Galena to sell the farm products. They lived there until 1865, when they moved to Maquoketa. An incident here occurred which may at some time aid in identifying his relatives. Mrs. Hiram C. Hoag, of West Walworth, relates in a letter dated Jan. 29, 1894: "When visiting at our son's (Capt. J. M. Hoag, Maquoketa, Iowa,) some years before Mr. Butters' death, my husband saw him, and in some way found out they were cousins, and the result was that our son and wife invited him to come there to visit his aunt, who was also my husband's mother. Her maiden name was Ann Smith, and, as we understood it, said Butters' mother was sister of Ann Smith." Mr. Albert H. Cook wrote Mr. Butters from Manchester, Iowa, Jan. 1, 1860, wishing him a happy New Year, also stating that his father, Harvey C. Cook, now 64 years old, had sold out his place in New York, and settled in Delaware, Delaware County, Ohio, accompanied by his son, Fernando; also refers to the marriage of his sister Mary. These children of Harvey C. Cook were Mr. Butters' cousins.

Mr. John S. Butters was a thorough Christian and noted for his honesty and fair dealing. His farm of 200 acres developed into one of the finest in the State. Mr. Butters held many offices of trust both in the county and in the School Board. He died in Maquoketa, Iowa, May 8, 1879, age 66 years. His widow, Eunice (Grace) Butters, died Feb. 6, 1892, age 77 years.

George, born in New York State, son of Jacob and Rachel (Smith) Butters. He married Mary Patten. He moved to Ohio. Mr. John S. Butters, learning that one of his name was living in Ohio, wrote George to visit him at Maquoketa, which he did. Separated in their infancy, they only identified each other by what they had learned of their parents through others. Assured of their relation, George returned to Ohio in 1858, and soon brought his family to Iowa, and made his residence with his brother, John S., who took them in, although not wholly satisfied as to the truth of the new relationship.
The two men were almost opposite in character. George finally left his family and went to Minnesota, where, at Stillwater, in a fit of passion, he struck a man with a hammer, and was shot in return, and died instantly.
This was in the year 1873. His wife had previously taken her children and returned to New York State.

John F., son of John S. and Eunice (Grace) Butters, was born near Andrew, Jackson County, Iowa. He lived with his parents, working on the farm during the summer months and attending the district school in the winter. In 1860 he attended the Academy at Andrew, Iowa. Enlisted March 26, 1864, in company I, Twelfth Iowa Infantry Volunteers, and went into camp on the old Schowalla Road, near Memphis, Tenn.; was in the Tupelo raid, under Major Gen. A. J. Smith, participating in the battles on the 13th and 14th of July, 1864, near Tupelo, Miss.; was wounded three times; first, by a piece of shell which killed his brother, Philetus S. Butters, and was lying beside him when he died. In the evening was taken by ambulance to La Grange, Tenn., and by cars to Memphis, Tenn. Rejoined his regiment in October, and was in the fight at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15 and 16, 1864; followed with his command the retreating General Hood, south, and went into camp at Eastport, Miss. The following February went by boat to New Orleans, and by boat on Lake Ponchartrain to Dauphien's Island, where, after three weeks' practice with the rifle, he was made a sharpshooter. He went to Mobile Bay, and was in the sixteen days' siege of Spanish Fort, and then to Fort Blakesly, near by. Marched to Montgomery, Ala., where he received the news of Lee's surrender to our noble Grant. On the May following, his regiment went by boat to Selma, Ala., where he took sick with camp fever and diarrhœa, so ill that the Regimental Surgeon, Dr. Myron Underwood, ordered him taken to the General Hospital, but his comrades objected and took him to the Florence Hotel, where two of them cared for him. Receiving a furlough, he started for home, weighing 92 pounds, a loss of 51 from usual weight. In November he reported for duty and joined his regiment at Jacksonville, Ala., remaining until Dec. 26, when he went with his regiment to Memphis, Tenn., and was mustered out of service the 20th of Jan., 1866, arriving in Davenport, Iowa, and receiving his final discharge on the 25th. His home, fifty miles away, he covered twenty miles of the distance that night on foot, in twelve inches of snow, arrived in the morning at 8 o'clock; a happiness realized, but marred by the sorrow in the loss of his brother left on the field of Tupelo. He remained at home, assisting his father, until May, 1867, when he went to work for Mr. E. T. Moyer. In the Fall of 1868 he bought a farm and started out for himself, and has farmed in Ohio, Jones County, Grant, Woodbury County, and in the latter county he was the first man to breed the Galloway cattle in Western Iowa. He rented his farm and stock in 1892, moved to Sioux City, where he went into the employ of Dickinson & Co., of Chicago, as commercial traveler, and resides at Morning Side, Sioux City, Iowa.

JOHN BUTTERS, OF NEW YORK,
AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

John Butters, born April 30, 1735, came from England with his brother Jacob. Such is the tradition handed down in his family, and settled in Orange County, N. Y., in the vicinity of Goshen or Newberg. A careful search fails to find his name among those who declared allegiance in 1775, or served in the War of the Revolution, as inhabitants of the State of New York. There was only one Butters in that State who did sign the pledge of 1775, and he was Jeremiah Butters, of Chester, in Orange County. No further record of him is found, and the family of John claim no connection. John moved to Ithaca with his family, consisting of his wife, son and three daughters. His brother Jacob, having lost his wife in Orange County, came with his only son, John, to Ithaca. The son, John, went off and was never heard of afterward, and Jacob died near Ithaca in 1818.

John Butters, brother of Jacob, moved to a farm near Horseheads; Chemung County, where he remained the rest of his life. He married June 25, 1766, Sarah ? She died March 30, 1811. He died at the home of his daughter Sarah, Nov. 20, 1818.

William, born in Blairgowrie, Scotland, son of James and Euphemia (McDonald) Butter. He came to America in the Spring of 1801. Before leaving he secured a letter from his parish minister, of which submits a copy, followed by her comments:

BLAIRGOWRIE, Feb. 19, 1801.

These certify that William Buttre, an unmarried man, was born in the Parish and lived in it till now, when he removes out of it with an unblemished character; and nothing is known to us that may hinder his being received into any Christian congregation or family where Providence may order his lot. Is attested by

JAMES JOHNSTONE, Minister,
PETER FORBES, S. Ck.,
GEO. BROWN, Elder.

"The above is a copy of one of the papers, and I note in it that the name was originally spelled Butter—and in a darker ink, and presumably in grandfather's writing—the er is marked over to re.

"This is the only one of his papers in which I find the name spelled as it was in Scotland, proving that he must have changed the spelling as soon as he reached America."

He remained for a time in New York City. Taking a dislike to his own name, he changed it to Buttre, putting the letter r before the e, to take away the plain name of Butter; although in a letter written in 1846 to his family in Scotland he signed his name Butter. William Buttre, as he was known in America, became naturalized and a citizen in New York City April 29, 1807. He was a cabinet maker, which trade he followed. He removed to Albany, N. Y., and later to Auburn, N. Y., where he opened a store. At the outbreak of the war in 1812 he enlisted in the army, and was commissioned Feb. 1, 1813, Lieutenant in Col. Alexander Denniston's Third New York Regiment. On Aug. 27, 1814, Daniel D. Tompkins, Governor of the State of New York, commissioned William Buttre "Captain of a company of artillery in a battalion of the First Brigade whereof Major Forbes is commandant in the militia." On Nov. 19, 1850, a veteran corps of the War of 1812-13-14 was organized, and he was made Captain of company C June 27, 1855. He was commissioned by John S. Van Rensselaer, General in Chief of the Veterans of the War of 1812, in the State of New York, to be Assistant Quartermaster General of the Veterans of the War of 1812, in the State of New York, with the rank of Colonel. He removed to New York City in the year 1849, and resided for several years at 61 Fulton street. He followed the book business at this time, removing in 1853 to No. 48 Franklin street.

William Thomas Buttre died Dec. 18, 1886, at Perry, N. Y.

Loraine (Dutcher) Buttre died Nov., 1888, age 73, No children.

John Chester, son of William and Mary Ann (La-throp) Buttre, was born in Auburn, N. Y. So much has been writted of his life in the "National Magazine" and "Appleton’s Cyclopædia of American Biography" that little can be said without repetition, and to these references are due the substance of this sketch. John C. Buttre received only the educational advantages offered in the district school, finishing his studies in the Auburn Academy. He early developed a talent for drawing, and received his first instruction from a Polish exile by the name of Hulanski, then residing in Auburn. The progress made in his new art soon included portrait painting, and the likenesses of his father and mother, now in the possession of his family, show the natural gift of the artist and his thorough love and earnestness in his work. With a stronger inclination to work without colors, he, by degrees, took up engraving, and soon exhibited some excellent specimens in various kinds of simple work. In 1841 he removed to New York City, making his home at No. 61 Fulton street, where he gave especial attention to steel plate engraving. In a few years had reached the top round of his profession, and was one of the most widely known publishing engravers and plate printers in America, especially as a pioneer in the very delicate operations of modern steel plate work. Many original ideas were contributed by him to the development of his art. Among them, worthy of special mention was a process known only to himself, enabling him to impart that life like tint to his pictures which, in the history of steel engraving, has never been excelled. Later in life he made a specialty of mezzo tints, and through this style of work won a great reputation. His life furnished a striking instance where the man was far more than his achievements. His kindness of heart was simply boundless. His personal character was especially admirable. His benevolent spirit had often made him the victim of imposition and ingratitude, and the unswerving faith which he displayed in human nature was a never ceasing marvel to his business associates and friends. Uprightness and benevolence were such strong characteristics of the man that to believe one capable of dishonesty and knavery was beyond his conception.

In 1853 he moved his business to 48 Franklin street, and later to 32 Cortland street, in New York City, where the business is continued by his daughter, Mary F. Buttre, under incorporation as the J. C. Buttre Company, associated with a warm personal friend of Mr. John C. Buttre's and one one who has been connected with the business for thirty years, Mr. George Probst, who is now President and Treasurer of the company. Mr. Buttre secured a comfortable home in Ridgewood, N. J., where he spent his last days.

Lillian C., daughter of John C. and Elizabeth B. (Warren) Buttre, was born in New York City. She passed her school days in her native city, and later removed with her parents to Ridgewood, N. J. Her mother died when she was nineteen years of age, and to her fell the duties of the household, which were assumed with alacrity and performed with dignity, ability and good judgment. When called to these duties she had just engaged in a self-imposed and arduous literary task of preparing a series of biographies of eminent men, two hundred and forty in number, for "The American Portrait Gallery," a work published by her father, issued in thirty parts, each of which contain six fine portraits on steel and twelve pages of letter press, and includes only those who stand forth to the world as emphatically the representatives of our country. This work exhibits a marvel of ability, industry and good judgment in one so young. The style of her narrative is chaste and simple, like her own life and character.

She died unmarried at her home in Ridgewood, N. J., March 30, 1881. The work of her pen in the beautiful book described, will remain an enduring monument to her memory.

BUTTERS, OF BUTTERTOWN, N. J.

About 1730, among the first inhabitants of Essex County, N. J., was a Mr. Butters, whose first name a careful search fails to find. He settled in what was called Vernon, and later Verona, in Caldwell Township, two miles west of Montclair, and one and a quarter miles east of Caldwell, near Mount Prospect, one quarter of a mile south from the Pompton turnpike. Mr. Butters was a large real estate owner, and the extended area of cleared land in that portion of the village of Vernon, formerly known as Buttertown, gives evidence of his energy and enterprise. In 1776 he sold Mr. Nathaniel Baldwin a large tract of his estate. Mr. Butters died, leaving, it was said, no descendants. The estates of Calvin I. Shaffer, Zenas Crane, Charles A. Smith, Marshall Baldwin and Peter Raabie, make up the remnant of Mr. Butters' large estate.

There appears no name of Butters, who declared himself in Essex County, N. J., or enlisted in the army in 1775 or 1776.

In late years Mr. Hiram Cook was the most enterprising and energetic citizen of Verona to which the village is indebted for the valuable improvements made upon the property.
There are several names of persons mentioned similar to members of the family of John and Jacob Butters of New York, and it is possible the early Mr. Butters of Vernon may have been related to these families.
