FOREWORD

It is with some trepidation that I assume the role of self-constituted historian of the family, realizing that such an undertaking is scarcely susceptible of being carried to a successful conclusion because of insurmountable obstacles. I am carrying forward a work that my Mother, Elizabeth A. Van Deventer, left unfinished. This I am doing because of her deep interest in and her great desire to accomplish such an undertaking, the data for which she was collecting at the age of eighty-three. Its inception is due to her initiative and her efforts.

For the first information relating to our ancestors, we are indebted to James Harvey Mathes, John S. Mathes and Col. Edward Hart Mathes, who collected and handed down this data. I am also indebted to Mrs. M. A. Killgrove, my mother’s sister, for invaluable assistance in piecing together fragments which otherwise would have been unintelligible to me. I wish to here extend my thanks and grateful appreciation to all who have so kindly rendered assistance.

It has seemed to me worth while to reproduce some writings from recognized authorities giving information relative to the origin and achievements of the Scotch-Irish race, and trust that this will be of interest.

I have adopted a simple numbering system which will be readily understood. As each name is introduced, it is given a number, which it retains wherever mentioned, so that by referring back to the original number the name can be identified.

I am conscious that in a work of this kind errors are bound to creep in—particularly in tables of descent where it is sought to keep a record of the precise dates of birth, death and marriage, and I earnestly invite the correction of errors and the supplying of omitted names and dates.
The Mathews (Mathes) Family in America

NAME

The English surname variously spelled, Mathes, Mathews and Matthews, is derived from "Mathew."

"The baptismal name 'Mathew' introduced into Great Britain at the Conquest has not only become a surname, but the parent of many others, among which is Mathews. The Welch family Mathew claim from the Prince of Cardigan in the XI Century. * * * The name is of course identical with 'Matthew.' (1)

"Mathew, Hebrew; A reward, a recompense," (2)

"Mathews was first used in London in 1618. Surnames began to be used about A.D. 1000. The practice commenced in Normandy and gradually extended itself to Great Britain; but the use of surnames was occasionally hereditary among Anglo-Saxons before the Conquest." (3)

SCOTCH-IRISH

The Mathews (Mathes) family is of Scotch-Irish extraction, as are also many other families mentioned herein. This is a distinct race type which acquired the name Scotch-Irish by living for a time in Ulster in the North of Ireland, but which is essentially Scotch, and it is to the Lowlands of Scotland we look for its origin.

"The Scotch-Irishman represents the race which has been described as the 'vertical column of Ulster, giving it at once its strength and uprightness', a race distinguished both at home and abroad by shrewdness of head, thoroughgoing ways, and moral tenacity. The Ulsterman is, above all things, able to stand firm and stand firmly on his own feet. He is called the 'sturdy Northern' from his firmness and independence and his adherence to truth and probity. He is thoroughly practical. There is a business-like tone in his method of speaking. He never wastes a word, yet on occasion he can speak with volubility. Certainly if an Ulsterman does not care about you, he will neither speak nor look as if he did. * * * He has the one great quality indispensable to success—self-containment, steadiness with adaptability that accounts for the success of the Ulsterman in foreign countries. It is out of Ulster that her hardy sons have made the most of their talents." (4)

Professor Heron's description of the distinguishing characteristics of the Ulster Scot is applicable also to their kinsmen, the Scotch-Irish in America:

"An economy and even parsimony in words; an insuperable dislike to make a display of the deeper and more tender feelings of his nature, a quiet and un-demonstrative deportment which may have great firmness and determination behind it; much caution, wariness and reserve, but a decision, energy of character, and tenacity of purpose; a capacity for hard work and close application to business, with thrift and patient persistence; in short, a reserve of strength, self-reliance, courage and endurance, which, when an emergency demands (as behind the walls of Derry) may surprise the world." (5)

HISTORY

"A great variety of races have combined to produce the Lowland Scot. Ten different nationalities have gone to the making of him, Pict, Celt, Roman, Frisian, Angle, Saxon, Dane, Norwegian, Norman and Fleming. It is to the union and combination in himself of such a great variety of vigorous elements that he owes those distinctive traits and qualities which distinguish him from other men.” (1)

“The migration of the Scot, it is believed, was through Northeast Europe by way of Belgium and the North of France, to Ireland. There they lived in the Third Century. In the Sixth Century, a colony of these Scotch-Irish migrated to North Britain, and settled in what is now the County of Argyll, established a kingdom, subdued the Pictish tribes that were there before them, and ancient Caledonia was thenceforth the land of the Scots, and Scotland it remains today. (2)

At different periods subsequent to the Reformation, many Lowland Scotch people emigrated to the Province of Ulster, North Ireland. There they prospered greatly and maintained unimpaired the manners and customs and the religious faith of the country from which they came. They and their posterity regarded themselves and were regarded by the Irish of Celtic blood, as Scotch in all essential particulars.” (3)

“In 1609, six years after the accession of James VI of Scotland to the throne of England as James I, a scheme was matured for planting Ulster with Scotch and English, and the following year the settlement began. The actual settlers were mostly Scotch and the settlement took the character of a Scotch occupation of the North of Ireland.” (4)

The larger part of the lands in Ulster had reverted to the crown early in the reign of James I, as confiscated property of Irish noblemen in rebellion. These lands were used for the settlement of Scotch and English colonies. The Scotch greatly predominated. Thus, after the lapse of one thousand years, the Scotch whom Ireland had given to Caledonia of old, came back to their ancient homes.

“Ireland retained tribal institutions that on the continent were broken down and discarded. * * * At the opening of the Seventeenth Century its institutions retained their barbaric pattern. * * * The tribal system of Ireland was a remnant of the same barbarism against which Caesar fought in Gaul and Charlemagne in continental Europe. The planting of trusty colonies among uncivilized people as garrisons to check their insubordination and as centers from which culture would be diffused was a practice that went back to the time of the ancient Roman commonwealth. * * *

The Scottish settlement of Ulster survived persecution, massacre and war.” (5)

“By the middle of the Seventeenth Century there were more than 300,000 Protestant settlers in Ulster. That province had been the most neglected part of Ireland, a wilderness of bogs and fens; they transformed it into a garden. They also established manufactures of woolens and linens which have ever since been famous throughout the world. Their social condition was not that of peasants; they were intelligent yeomanry and artisans. The settlers were picked men and women of the best sort, yeomanry and craftsmen, with many generations of ancestry behind them, on a far higher level of intelligence and training than the native peasantry of Ireland. At the beginning of the Eighteenth Century the percentage of illiteracy in Ulster was probably smaller than anywhere else in the world. There were then more than a million of these Presbyterians in Ulster. In a document signed in 1718 by a miscellaneous group of 319 men, only 13 made their mark, while 306 wrote their name in full. Nothing like this could have happened at that time in any other part of the British Empire, hardly even in New England.” (6)

The main population of Northeast Ulster is English or Scotch in origin, and in most districts the Scotch strain predominates. This is notably the case in the rich mid-Antrim lands around the town of Ballymena. The farmers and laborers speak the authentic tongue of Bobbie Burns..." (1)

"The plantation of the Scot into Ulster kept for the world the essential and best features of the Lowlander. But the vast change gave birth to and trained a somewhat new and distinct man, soon to be needed for a great task which only the Ulsterman could do, and that was with the Puritan to work the revolution that gave humanity this republic." (2)

"The appellation 'Scotch-Irish' is not, as many people suppose, an indication of a mixed Hiberno-Scottish descent. It was first appropriated as a distinct race name, and is now generally applied to the descendants in America of the early Scotch Presbyterian emigrants from Ireland. These Scotch people, for a hundred years or more after 1600, settled with their families in Ulster, in the North of Ireland, whence their descendants, having long suffered under the burden of civil and religious oppression imposed by commercial greed and despotic ecclesiasticism, sought a more promising home in America.

The late Dr. John Hall, of New York, said: 'I have sometimes noticed a little confusion of mind in relation to the phrase Scotch-Irish, as if it meant Scotch people had come over and intermarried with the native Irish, and that thus a combination of two races had taken place. That is by no means the case. * * * The Scotch people kept to the Scotch people, and they are called Scotch-Irish from purely geographical reasons.

Another authority, Rev. John S. McIntosh of Philadelphia, who is perhaps better qualified to speak conclusively on the subject than any other living person, says: 'Our American term Scotch-Irish is not known even in Ulster. The term in Britain is the Ulsterman and in Ireland it is the 'sturdy Northern.' The Ulsterman did not mingle with the Celt. The natives were always 'tha Eerish.'" (3)

"The English experiment of Scotticizing Ireland was defeated by a crass policy of protectionism combined with petty religious persecution. An epidemic of persecution had seized on the English church and severe disabilities were inflicted in 1704 and following years on Presbyterians in Ireland. They were forbidden to keep school, marriages by their clergy were declared invalid, they were not allowed to hold any office higher than that of petty constable, and so on. For a few years this tyranny was endured in the hope that it was but temporary. * * * Of all the migrations to America previous to the days of steamships, this was by far the largest in volume." (4)

The emigration from Ulster is one of the most striking features of Irish history, and one which had a most marked effect upon the vital force of the United States of America, which drew so much of its best blood from the Presbyterians of the North of Ireland." (5)

The Scotch-Irish in America

"It is a little singular that we have to rely on foreign writers for correct and adequate treatment of the important part taken in the Revolutionary struggle by the Scotch-Irish. As a rule New England writers have utterly neglected these people." (6)

"In the Lowlands of Scotland were the homes that sent their bravest to fill and change Ulster. Thence came the settlers of Pennsylvania, Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Kentucky; and the sons of these men blush not as they stand beside the children of the Mayflower or the children of the Bartholomew martyrs. I know whereof I affirm. * * * In Antrim and Down have I often heard of the lads who went out to bleed at Valley Forge,—to die as victors on King’s Mountain,—and stand in the silent triumph of Yorktown. The great Tilghman said ‘the framers of the Constitution of the United States were greatly indebted to the standards of the Presbyterian church of Scotland in modeling their admirable document.’ (1)

“And now recommenced the Protestant emigration, which robbed Ireland of the bravest defenders of English interests. * * * Men of spirit and energy refused to remain in a country where they were held unfit to receive the rights of citizens; and thenceforward until the spell of tyranny was broken in 1782, annual shiploads of families poured themselves out from Belfast and Londonderry. The resentment which they carried with them continued to burn in their new homes; and, in the war of Independence, England had no fiercer enemies than the grandsons and great-grandsons of the Presbyterians who had held Ulster against Tyrconnell. * * * They found a home to which England fifty years later had to regret that she had allowed them to be driven. * * * During the first half of the Eighteenth Century, Down, Antrim, Tyrone, Armagh and Derry were emptied of Protestant inhabitants who were of more value to Ireland than California gold mines.

“It is a fact beyond question says Plowden, ‘that most of the early successes in America were owing to the vigorous exertions and prowess of the Scotch-Irish emigrants who bore arms in that cause.’ (2)

“In the opinion of Lecky, who is regarded as the most impartial historian of this period, the issue of the Revolutionary War once rested upon the action of the Pennsylvania line, whose privates and non-commissioned officers consisted chiefly of immigrants from the North of Ireland.” (3)

Extract from address of William McKinley, then Governor of Ohio, at 5th annual meeting of Scotch-Irish Society of America; in 1893:

“The Scotch-Irish were not only well-born, but they have improved upon their beginning have progressed with their opportunities, and have made opportunities where none seemed present.

While he is a distinct type, the Scotch-Irishman is a racial evolution, the result of a slow fusion of diverse characteristics. It is said of the Scotch-Irish that they are doers rather than writers and talkers. True, they have been builders and their foundations were deep and strong and enduring. They have built for the ages, but they write and talk quite as well as other races. Their deeds in behalf of American Independence should ever be cherished in patriotic remembrance. Representatives of the Scotch-Irish race are among the brightest names in American history. They have shone in every great epoch of national life * * * The roll-call is a large one. I can only pick out a name here and there; Patrick Henry, Jefferson, Hamilton, Jackson, Madison, Polk, Buchanan and heroic Grant and immortal Lincoln. The Scotch-Irish comes of mighty stock—that we know Celt and Saxon are in him combined, after each has been tempered and refined * * * The Lowland Scotch recrossed the narrow sea to Ulster. His going marked an epoch in the history of civilization.

The Americanized Scotch-Irishman is the perfection of a type which is the development of the commingling and assimilating process of centuries. For long years to come his identity will manifest itself in the composite presentment of the future typical American * * *

Next to their intense patriotism, the distinguishing characteristics of the Scotch-Irish are their love of learning and religion. The Scotch-Irish is the ideal educator, and he is a natural theologian. It would be difficult to find a college or university without Scotch-Irishmen upon its faculty. Another marked characteristic of the Scotch-Irish is the love of home and family. The home and school-house have been mighty forces, marking the progress of the Scotch-Irish race.

"The great majority of the Ulster emigrants to America first landed on the Delaware shore, the chief ports being Newcastle and Philadelphia. The early emigrants after taking the oath of allegiance at Philadelphia generally found their way westward to the fine farming lands. After the desirable lands east of the Alleghenies in Pennsylvania were occupied, they turned their course westward and southward, overrunning the Cumberland and Shenandoah valleys. Their settlements stretched along the border from Pennsylvania to Southern Virginia, where they stood as a barrier to the savage Indians from the other settlements nearer the seaboard. West of this land was a vast wilderness through which roamed the savages.

The settlers pushed into the wilderness, bought lands, cut down the forests and made for themselves farms, built saw mills and grist mills, to make lumber for their houses and to grind their wheat and corn into flour and meal; they established blacksmith shops, to make and repair their farm implements; they built wagon roads." (1)

"A strong stream of Scotch-Irish emigration flowed over the Alleghenies into Southwestern Pennsylvania before the Revolutionary War. After its close, the flow greatly increased. * * * It is hardly too much to say that they were the pick of their people. They exhibited in an intensified degree the typical traits of their race. They were venturesome, fearless, hungry for good land, and bound to get on in the world; clear eyed, level headed; not understanding the difficulties in their way and the dangers that beset them, and yet not in the least intimidated by them, nor by the certainty of hard toil, severe privations and manifold perils in their front. They pushed out boldly to the extreme frontier and plunged into the deep forest, where there were no settlements, no clearings, no roads, no conveniences, where nature was utterly wild and the woods swarming with savages. They were the buffer between the Indians in front, and the Quaker and German who crept along quietly in the rear.

"These people have invariably given a decided and characteristic type to every section in which they have been dominant." (2)

"The Scotch-Irish arrivals everywhere moved on to the frontier. They constituted the border garrisons; they were the explorers, the vanguard of settlement in the interior. Their Ulster training had inured them to hostile surroundings.

Thomas Lechmere (Surveyor-General of Customs at Boston) wrote to John Winthrop, in 1718: 'These Irish are generally men of estates, and are come hither for no other reason but upon encouragement sent from hence upon notice given that they should have so many acres of land given them gratis to settle our frontiers as a barrier against the Indians.'"

Secretary Logan says: 'About that time (1720) considerable numbers of good, sober people came in from Ireland, who wanted to be settled. At the same time, also, it happened that we were under some apprehensions from ye Northern Indians * * * I therefore thought it might be prudent to plant a settlement of such men as those who had formerly so bravely defended Londonderry and Inniskillen, as a frontier, in case of any disturbance.' (3)

"The settlements of these people did not follow the wave of conquest; they were themselves the earliest wave; they broke it for themselves and for others who followed. They were predestined and born pioneers of the first order, conquerors of unfriendly nature and unfriendly men. They opened the way for weaker and less resolute men. There was nothing of either the coward or the sluggard in their nature. From the first they were the steadfast and strenuous champions of civil and religious liberty in the colonies. They wanted liberty, and were bound to have it at whatever cost" (1).

"During the period of the French and Indian war, the Scotch-Irish of Augusta County, Va., which then comprised an immense territory to the west and southwest, stood as a bulwark against Indian incursions east of the Blue Ridge, and so valuable were the services rendered by these people that colonial laws asserting the supremacy of the Episcopal church were not enforced against the dissenting Presbyterians." (2)

"The people of Ulster had heard of Pennsylvania and the religious liberty there enjoyed, and to this province they came in large numbers. But jealousies arose in the minds of the original settlers of Pennsylvania and restrictive measures were adopted against the Scotch-Irish and others. Hence many of these races were the more disposed in 1732 and afterwards, to seek homes within the limits of Virginia. The Scotch-Irish drifted on in the wake of John Lewis to the present County of Augusta, Virginia.

"It is believed that all the earliest settlers came from Pennsylvania and up the Valley of the Shenandoah. It was several years before any settlers entered the valley from the East and through the gaps of the Blue Ridge. It was impossible to bring wagons and all their effects were transported on horseback. The settlers were almost exclusively of the Scotch-Irish race, natives of the North of Ireland but of Scotch ancestry. For about twenty years the emigrants were unmolested by Indians. During this time the young Lewises, McClanahans, Mathewses, Campbells and others were growing up and maturing for many a desperate encounter on the field of battle." (3)

"When the Revolution ended, these brave and enterprising men began the march of civilization Westward, and from these pioneer settlers has descended a race of people unsurpassed by any in the world for chivalry, courage, eloquence and statesmanship. The highest tribute which could be paid to the Scotch-Irish pioneers of Augusta County would be the roster of distinguished men who trace their ancestry to this section of the Valley of Virginia." (4)

"There is ample material from which to speak in a general way of the origin of the Scotch-Irish and of their existence in Ireland, but when we come to their emigration to America, excepting the causes which led to it, it is meagre in the extreme. Coming from one part of Great Britain to another, no record has been preserved of their arrivals, as would have been the case had they been of alien origin.  Excepting in a general way, the records of this emigration are difficult to trace and are only found by examining old wills, deeds, and family tradition." (5)

In 1732 John Lewis, the leader of the pioneer band into the Valley of Virginia, made the first settlement in Augusta County, one mile east of Staunton, and in his wake wave after wave of people of the same race followed like an invading army.

Ephriam McDowell was the first settler in Borden’s grant, on Timber Ridge, then called Timber Grove, in what is now Rockbridge County.

In 1748 the Old Stone meeting house of Augusta County was completed. This church was the center of a cluster of neighborhoods. In 1749 sixteen years after the first settlement, a classical school was opened by Robert Alexander, a native of Ulster, educated at Edinburgh. This school began in a log cabin built by the Scotch-Irish settlers in the Valley of Virginia. It was first located some twelve miles from Augusta Court House, near Bethel church, and was named Augusta Academy. The school was subsequently removed from place to place, being at one time at Mt. Pleasant near Fairfield. In 1776 it was established at Timber Ridge meeting house. Here it assumed the name of Liberty Hall Academy and was presided over by Rev. Wm. Graham. This school furnished education to many who became distinguished in church and state. Before the Revolutionary war was closed, there went forth from it, four college presidents, Samuel Doak, Moses Hoge, James Priestly and James Carrick.

In 1796 George Washington endowed the academy, and it was made Washington College, and later developed into Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Va., of which General Robert E. Lee was president from 1865 to 1870. The ruins of Liberty Hall Academy are still standing in sight of the present University buildings.

Up to 1738 the whole region West of the Blue Ridge was included in Orange County, Va. Frederick and Augusta Counties were then established. Augusta County's boundaries extended from the line of Frederick Co. on the north along the summit of Blue Ridge indefinitely to the south and west.

In the Watauga, Holston, French Broad and Clinch River settlements were laid the foundations of the present State of Tennessee.

"In 1769 the first white settlement on the Watauga was made, nucleus of the first permanent establishment of the white race in Tennessee.

The territory within the present State of Tennessee was successively known as 'North Carolina,' the 'Territory of the United States South of the Ohio River,' State of Franklin,' and 'Tennessee,' the latter from an Indian word meaning 'the river of the great bend.' The state of Tennessee was admitted to the Union June 1, 1796.

The oldest town in Tennessee is Jonesboro, laid off and established by the Legislature of North Carolina in 1779, as the seat of justice in Washington County. Here the first court house in Tennessee was erected. It was built of round logs from the adjacent forest, covered with clapboards." (1)

"The land which we now call Tennessee was originally the Western part of North Carolina, which state at one time extended from the Atlantic Ocean to the Mississippi River. (2)

The District of Washington, comprising all of the present State of Tennessee, was formed August 22, 1776, the first geographical body named in honor of George Washington. In November, 1777, it was changed to Washington County.

"At first a single Indian trail was the only entrance to the eastern border of Tennessee and for many years admitted only the hunter and the pack-horse. It was not until the year 1776 that a wagon was seen in Tennessee. In consequence of the want of roads as well as the great distance from the source of supplies, the first inhabitants were without tools, and of course without mechanics—much more, without the conveniences of living and the comforts of housekeeping. Salt was brought on pack-horses from Augusta and Richmond, and readily commanded $10 a bushel. Coffee and tea were unknown, or beyond the reach of the settlers. The apparel of the pioneers was all home-made; half the year in many families, shoes were not worn. The dwelling house on every frontier in Tennessee was the log cabin. Every settler had, besides his rifle, no other instrument but an axe, a hatchet and a butcher knife. No saw mill was yet erected, puncheons were split for floors and shutters for the entrance to the cabins; the door was hung with wooden hinges and fastened with wooden latch." (1)

"The greater number of emigrants came from Virginia by what was called the Good-Spur route, passing through western Virginia and down the Holston valley. A wagon road had been opened from Burke County to Jonesboro, but it was not always possible to use wagons in traveling it. But whether on foot, or horseback, or in wagons, they came, and from early spring until late fall the road leading to Jonesboro presented the appearance of a desultory procession." (2)

"The first settlers of East Tennessee were probably more nearly of one kind than those of any other part of the Great West. They came from different settlements east of the mountains and some of them from Scotland and the North of Ireland. * * * From 1740 to 1750 they had settled the Valley of Virginia as far southwest as the Counties of Augusta and Rockbridge. * * *

These people had also became well acquainted with the attractions of the Tennessee valley through their hunters and traders led by Daniel Boone and others, who as early as 1760 had explored these wilds as far as the Cumberland Mountains. On their return to the older settlements these adventurers extolled the new region, as rich in soil, delightful in climate, abounding in game and unoccupied by the Indians.

As soon therefore as treaties with certain Indian tribes afforded hope of safety, the impatient pioneers began to flow in a steady stream to this land of promise. This stream of population came mainly from North Carolina, Virginia and Pennsylvania. It entered Tennessee in about 1769 by the Watauga in what is now Carter County and spread also down the valleys of Nolichucky, the Holston and other tributaries of the Tennessee.

The people were largely Presbyterians and strongly attached to the church of their fathers,—a hardy, enterprising and industrious race, liberty-loving and useful to their country in both peace and war, as perhaps no other race has been." (3)

"Along the western frontier of the colonies, among the foothills of the Alleghenies, on the slope of the wooded mountains and in the long trough-like valleys that lay between the ranges, dwelt (in 1774) a peculiar and characteristically American people. * * * The dominant strain in their blood was that of the Scotch-Irish. * * * It is doubtful if we wholly realize the importance of the part played by these stern and virile people, whose preachers taught the creed of Knox and Calvin. * * * Mingled with the descendants of many other races, they nevertheless formed the kernel of the distinctively and intensely American stock who were the pioneers of our people in their march westward. They were a truculent and obstinate people and gloried in the warlike renown of their forefathers, the men who had followed Cromwell and who had shared the defense of Derry. The men who before any other declared for American Independence.

That these Irish Presbyterians were a bold and hardy race is proved by their at once pushing past the settled regions and plunging into the wilderness as the leaders of the white advance. They were the first and last set of immigrants to do this; all others have merely followed in the wake of their predecessors. But indeed they were fitted to be Americans from the very start; they were kinsfolk of the Covenanters.

As soon as the region became at all well settled, clergymen began to come in. Here most of the frontiersmen who had any religion at all professed the faith of the Scotch-Irish; and the first regular church in this cradle-spot of Tennessee was a Presbyterian log meeting house built near Jonesboro in 1777, and christened Salem Church. Its pastor was a pioneer preacher, who worked with fiery and successful energy to spread learning and religion among the early settlers of the Southwest. His name was Samuel Doak. He came from New Jersey and had been educated in Princeton. Possessed of the vigorous spirit that makes the true pioneer, he determined to cast his lot with the frontier folk. He walked through Maryland and Virginia, driving before him an old "leabitten grey" horse, loaded with a sackful of books; crossed the Alleghenies and came down along blazed trails to the Holston settlements. The hardy people with whom he took up his abode were able to appreciate his learning and religion, as much as they admired his adventurous and indomitable temper; and the stern, hard, God-fearing man became a most powerful influence for good throughout the whole formative period of the Southwest. (See "East Tennessee a Hundred Years Ago" by Hon. John Allison, Nashville, 1887, p. 8.)

Not only did he found a church, but near it he built a log high-school which soon became Washington College, the first institution of the kind west of the Alleghenies.

It is no small credit to the backwoodsmen that in this their first attempt at state-making they should have done what they could to furnish their sons the opportunity of obtaining a higher education." (1)

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

The school organized by Samuel Doak in the log school house referred to by Roosevelt in "The Winning of the West" as "the first institution of the kind west of the Alleghenies," was chartered in 1783 by the State of North Carolina, as Martin Academy, in honor of Governor Martin. In 1795 the name was changed to Washington College, at which time it was still in the log school house. Samuel Doak was at the head of this school thirty-eight years.

"It is believed that this is the earliest legislative action taken anywhere west of the Alleghenies for the encouragement of learning. Rev. Samuel Doak, who had been a member of the convention and of the Franklin Assembly, and the apostle of learning and religion in the West, was the founder and first president of Martin Academy. His school house, a plain log building, stood a little west of the present site of what is now Washington College. For many years it was the only, and for still more the principal, seat of classical learning in the Western country." (2)

Tradition relates of Samuel Doak the following:

"While riding through the woods, he came on some settlers, who were felling trees. Learning that he was a minister, they requested him to preach to so many of them as could be assembled immediately. He complied, using his horse for a pulpit and the shady grove for a sanctuary. They were pleased with his sermon and entreated him to tarry longer with them. He yielded to this entreaty, and this led to his permanent settlement among them."

Samuel Doak was born in August, 1749, and was the son of Samuel and Jane (Mitchell) Doak, who emigrated from the North of Ireland. He married Esther, the sister of Rev. John Montgomery. In addition to Doak, among the early preachers who came to the state were, Hezekiah Balch and Gideon Blackburn.

"Washington College is also the name of the post office and station on the Southern Railway one and one-half miles distant from the school. The Memphis to Bristol highway touches the edge of the campus. The campus consists of sixteen acres, shaded and adorned by magnificent native trees. No student can fail to come under the spell of the antiquity of Washington College. The oaks and beeches are full of it, and every square rod is historic ground."

(2) Annals of Tenn., Ramsey.
Salem Presbyterian church, which is located on the campus, was organized by Dr. Doak at the same time as the school, and has been her handmaid for more than a century and a quarter, and was for many years under the same roof with the college." (1)

There is now at the head of Washington College, a descendant of the Mathes family, Mr. Hubert Samuel Lyle, who was appointed President of the college in June, 1923.

MATHEWS LINEAGE.

This family traces its descent to the most remote period of British history, and through a line of ancestors whose names are conspicuous in the records of ancient Britain.

"Descended from a line of ancient British princes was Teon, who at the close of his life, in the Fifth century, became a member of the college of St. Illtyd, and was first Bishop of Caer Loew (now Gloucester) and afterwards Bishop of London, from whence he was driven by the Pagan Saxons. The patrimony of Teon is presumed to have been in that part of Britain now called Shropshire, as a range of hills in that county are still called, after him, by the Welch, Carneddau Teon.

Twelfth in descent from Teon, was Gwaethfoed, Lord of Cardigan and Guywang. Gwaethfoed was contemporary with Edgar, King of the Saxons, (d. 1057). He married Morfydd, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Ivor, king or lord of Gwent. His descendants were feudal barons of Llandaff, county Glamorgan, Wales." (2)

The following is the line of descent:

Sir Evan ap Griffith (12) mentioned above, married Cecily, daughter of Robert de Clare, and thus became connected with "the powerful and illustrious house of de Clare, a house which played so great a part alike in England, Wales and Ireland." This house was founded by Richard de Clare (d. 1090), who followed his kinsman, William the Conqueror to England. He was a lineal descendant of Rolf, or Rollo (d. 922), First Duke of Normandy, through his union with Poppa, daughter of Count Berenger.

The line continues down through another Richard, Earl of Clare, and his wife Amicia, daughter of William Earl of Gloucester. The accession of the Gloucester estates increased their power and added the title of Earl of Gloucester to that of Clare and Hertford, which they already possessed. (1)

Sir Mathew ap Evan, the progenitor of the Mathews family, married Janet, daughter of Richard Fleming, and had three sons, David, Robert and Lewis. The eldest, Sir David, was one of the most distinguished men of his time. He became Grand Standard Bearer to Henry VI. The following branches of the family are derived from him:

1. Mathew of Llandaff Court
2. Mathew of Radyr
3. Mathew of Dodbrooke, Co. Devon, and of Tresenger and Pennytenny, Co. Cornwall.

The second son of Sir Mathew, Robert, of Castle-Mynech, Wales, was the progenitor of a Mathews family in Virginia. His great great grandson, Tobias Mathews, Archbishop of York, married Frances Barlow, and was the father of Samuel Mathews (b.1592), who was sent to Virginia by James I and became governor of the colony in 1657. Samuel Mathews married the daughter of Sir Thomas Hinton, and had two sons, Samuel and Francis.

Another notable Mathews family in Virginia was that of John Mathews, who emigrated from the North Ireland about 1737, stopping first in Pennsylvania and then going to Augusta County, Virginia, was one of the first settlers in Borden's tract. He married Ann Archer, and they were the parents of the following children: William, Richard, James, John, Sampson, George, Archer, Jane, Rachel and Elizabeth. Two of these sons, Sampson and George, served with distinction in the Revolutionary War and were promoted to high rank. George was afterwards three times governor of Georgia.

The armorial bearings of the Mathews' are numerous. The lion is an important figure in nearly all. The bearings of some of the Mathews' contain three crosses and a palm branch, indicating that the owner has been on a crusade in early days.

As a race, the Mathews have been sober, honest, industrious and long lived; always in the van of progress; foremost in the advancement of education, medicine and theology.

The Mathews family in America has been distinguished for fervent piety, sterling honesty, industry and thrift. The history of this family is interwoven with the history of Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia, with which they have been prominently identified since the early part of the Eighteenth Century. They

(1) Ency, Brit.
The Mathes (Mathes) Family in America were among the rugged pioneers who first settled the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, and the wilds of East Tennessee, and conquered the wilderness and built up a new civilization.

"Since the earliest colonial days there has been a Mathes family in Virginia. The family has been influential in all generations."

1. GEORGE MATHEWS, the remote ancestor, the first of our line of whom we have authentic information, came to America about 1720, in company with Samuel Doak, Sr., the latter having lived in County Antrim, North Ireland, in the neighborhood of Ballynure between Belfast and Ballymena. We have no record of the location of the home of George Mathews in the North of Ireland; but as Mathews and Doak were friends, it is probable that their homes were in the same locality.

"The Mathes family is of Scotch-Irish extraction. The remote ancestor was George Mathes (or Mathews, as he spelt his name) who came to America about 1720, first settling in Pennsylvania, afterwards removing to Virginia and settling in Augusta County.

Some years afterward four of his sons, with their families, removed to Washington County, East Tennessee, at a period long anterior to the admission of the state to the union.

It is a tradition that even up to this time the name was spelled 'Mathews'.

They settled near what is now known as Washington College, then Martin Academy, an institution in the establishment and support of which they and the Doak families took an active part.

The Mathes family has been very prolific in preachers and doctors, and their history shows they have from early times been the friends of education and upbuilders of society."

(1) Prominent Tennesseans, by Speer.

The following was compiled by Col. Edward Hart Mathes:

"George Mathes, the immigrant, came from the North of Ireland in the early part of the Eighteenth Century, with Samuel Doak, father of the founder of Washington College, near Jonesboro, Tennessee. They stopped in Chester County, Pennsylvania, and then came to Augusta County, Virginia. He had twelve sons and one daughter. Four of his sons came to Washington County, near Jonesboro, about the close of the Revolutionary war. Their names were Alexander, George, Jeremiah and Allen."

Tradition says that the four brothers, Alexander, George, Jeremiah and Allen upon leaving their home and striking out into the wilderness, adopted the spelling "Mathes" of their name, so that their descendants would always know each other.

Although we are unable to trace the lineage of George Mathes, and also we are unable to trace his movements after his arrival in America, except in a general way, yet we ascribe to his ancestry and to himself those characteristics attributed to the Mathes family in general. We find him among the vast throng of Scotch-Irish Presbyterians who sought relief from persecution, in the New World; in the advance guard of pioneers who subdued the forest and built up the waste places. He came first to Chester County, Pennsylvania, and later, about 1740 was carried with the stream of immigration westward and southward to the Shenandoah Valley, where he settled in what was then Augusta County, Virginia.

The exact location of his home in Augusta County we have not been able to trace, as so many Virginia records have been destroyed. In the absence of definite knowledge on this point, we have attempted to approximate the location, from other facts known to us. We know that the Mathews and Doak families were closely associated, both in Ulster and in America; that George Mathes and Samuel Doak embarked together upon the voyage to America, that both stopped first in Pennsylvania, going later to Virginia, that Alexander Mathes and Samuel Doak, Jr., their sons, left Virginia together, walked across Virginia and Maryland and took up homes together on the Tennessee frontier. Therefore we feel that we are warranted in the supposition that they probably settled in the same neighborhood when they first entered the Valley of Virginia. Samuel Doak, Sr., lived “within the bounds of Bethel,” which was “almost within view of the earliest site of Augusta Academy.” This school was moved a number of times, one authority giving its first location about twelve miles from Augusta Court House. Samuel Doak, Jr., was a student in this school. At one time his home was too far away to go and come each day from home, so he built a log cabin near the school, for his use. This was probably after the school had been moved farther from his home. This school was opened the year that he was born, 1749.

It is probable that the sons of George Mathews also attended this historic Virginia school.

We find, in Abstracts of Records of Augusta County, by Lyman Chalkley, that Samuel Doak, Sr., in his will dated Nov. 5, 1771, bequeathed to his son, Samuel, Jr., “The plantation at the head waters of Rockfish, in Amherst.”

George Mathews had a family of twelve sons and one daughter. We have the names of only four of them.

3. George
4. Jeremiah
5. Allen
6. ——, a daughter, married John Nelson.

(Eight sons, names unknown.)

2. Alexander Mathes, I., b. March 12, 1740, in Augusta County, Virginia, on the Shenandoah River. His father, George Mathews, and Samuel Doak, Sr., had been comrades and companions in their adventurous journey to America. Likewise, the sons of these two, Alexander Mathes and Samuel Doak, Jr., together joined the ever moving advance guard of pioneers, starting out about 1780 from their Virginia homes and pushing on through the wilderness. They walked through Virginia and Maryland, using the same packhorse, the “flea-bitten grey” referred to by Roosevelt in “The Winning of the West,” wherein he says that Samuel Doak “drove before him an old flea-bitten grey horse loaded with a sackful of books; crossed the Alleghenies and came down along blazed trails to the Holston settlements.” Alexander Mathes was a surveyor and civil engineer and brought with him his surveyors’ instruments. Upon reaching the settlements they located land on the Hominy branch of the Little Limestone, in what was then the State of North Carolina, now Washington County, Tennessee, where both were destined to build for the good of the undeveloped settlement and to wield an influence in molding the destinies of a new community during its formative period. There Mathes bought 950 acres of land. There, Salem, a Presbyterian church, was founded by Doak in 1780; also Martin Academy, now known as Washington College, near Jonesboro, the oldest town in the state, both of which are still in existence. Alexander Mathes had a part in these important enterprises. He gave the fifty acres of land upon which the school was built, and on it now stand all of the present college buildings and Salem church (except the parsonage and a primary school room which was the session room of the church building in 1825). The college owns 190 acres of Mathes land, 50 by gift and 140 by purchase. When the school became a college, Alexander Mathes was a member of the original charter board, and for years afterward a member of the board of Constitutional Trustees.

Alexander Mathes was one of the original elders in Salem church at the time of its organization and served as a ruling elder until his death in 1806. A new Salem church building was erected in 1897, as a memorial to Samuel Doak, and in this building was placed a memorial window to the first three Mathes' who served as elders, giving the date of service of each in succession, from father to son, the service extending one hundred and two years, and the name of each being Alexander Mathes.

Alexander Mathes was one of the most honored names in the community. He was a farmer and surveyor, and lived the remainder of his life on this nine hundred acre farm.

The following was compiled by Col. Edward Hart Mathes:

"Alexander Mathes I., came to Washington County, Tennessee, in company with Samuel Doak, Sr., using the same pack-horse and bringing their surveyors' instruments with them. They located land, Alexander buying 950 acres, in the upper end of which the college is located. He gave the land to the college, also the site of Old Salem church. He and Doak returned together to Virginia, and soon after Doak came back to Tennessee, Mathes coming a few months later. They then lived in Shenandoah County, Virginia. Alexander Mathes came to stay about 1782. Doak founded Martin Academy near the site of Washington College, in 1783, and in 1795 obtained a charter for the college from the State of North Carolina, merging Martin Academy.

"At the first regular meeting of the charter members of the college, of which there is a record, in 1795, Alexander Mathes I., who was a charter member, was mentioned in the college records as a 'pioneer settler,' gave the fifty acres on which the college now stands. He was for years afterwards a member of the board of Constitutional Trustees, and a ruling Elder in Salem church."

We have not found a record of service of Alexander Mathes in the Revolutionary War.

He may have served in the militia, and it seems that the services of the Virginia militia were not taken into account. The following citation on this matter is from "Gleanings of Virginia History," by Boogher:

"Virginia by virtue of her location was a battlefield during the Revolution, especially during the closing period. The services of her militia were not taken into account, and hence in comparison with other states she appears to have furnished a smaller number of troops than her quota. But she had, however, a goodly number of militia or minute men whose services were confined to the state territory."

The following is a sketch of the Mathes family of Washington County, Tenn., furnished in 1909 by Dr. A. S. N. Dobson, an elder in Salem church.

"Alexander Mathes I., was one of the original elders of Salem church when it was organized in 1780; he served from this time until 1806, and was buried at Salem.

"In 1828, there was in the Session, Alexander; George L.; John and Ebenezer L. Mathes.

"Alex Mathes the 3rd. elder, had a son, Alfred H., who was a Presbyterian minister but did not live to be old, died in Florida. He also had a son, John S. Mathes, who was an elder in the Jonesboro church for many years. He was a fine historian and collected much valuable data for the state and church. He died recently, leaving no son.

"The Jonesboro Presbyterian church has a nephew of Alex Mathes III., Alexander P., who is an elder; his brother, Mc. M., was an elder in Salem church for several years before he died, and was a very estimable Christian gentleman.

"Ebenezer L., son of Alexander I., died Jan. 5, 1868, without heirs. He was an elder forty years, a trustee of Washington College forty-six years and secretary most of that time. He served as a civil Magistrate of Washington County in a most satisfactory manner for thirty-six years. He left the church and college one-half of his estate, which amounted to some $7000.00, the interest to be used as he directed. He was an uncompromising "union man" during the Civil war, as were all the Mathes. He freed his slaves and sent them to Liberia and maintained them the first year. When our present church was erected, the elders put in a beautiful me-
A letter from Dr. A. S. N. Dobson, of Washington College, Tenn., to Mrs. R. M. Herron, Dalton, Ga.:

"I have been an elder in Salem church for more than forty years, and I have been intimately associated with the Mathes family all this time.

"The old church record prior to 1829 was lost, but before that period Mr. Alexander Mathes I., was an elder. When we erected the last church as a memorial to Dr. Samuel Doak, we put in a memorial to the Alexander Mathes family, Alexander Mathes I., ruling elder from 1782 until his death, Alexander Mathes II., ruling elder until his death, and Alexander Mathes III., until his death in 1884, a consecutive eldership for one hundred and two years, same name, same family,—a most remarkable record.

"If John S. Mathes were living he could assist you. He was the historian of the family and a man of fine intellectuality. You have a noble ancestry and a history should have been written.

"With best wish, I am, very truly yours,

A. S. N. Dobson."

I have a leaf from an old book of accounts of Mitchell & Fain, Brownsborough, Washington Co., Tennessee, dated 1805, which was found in an old beehive, and which was sent to me by Mr. Fain Anderson, an old resident of Washington County. This yellow leaf contains accounts with Alexander Mathes, Sr., and Alexander Mathes, Jr. Alexander Mathes Sr., is debited with: "1 coffee pot, 6 tins, 1 strainer." and credited with ½-bushel salt. Alexander Mathes, Jr., is debited with: "1 quart measure, 1 gallon honey, 1 spelling book, 1 ink stand."

Mr. Mitchell, of Mitchell & Fain, married Nancy Doak, daughter of Samuel Doak, D.D.

Mr. Anderson mentions that he finds in the diary of John Sevier, 1790-97, that he bought bacon and salt from Mr. Mathes (Alexander I.).

I also quote the following from a letter of Mr. Anderson (1921):

"Alexander Mathes, Jr., was a considerable man, in ability and weight, (weighing more than 300 pounds). I knew him from 1852 to his death, a pure, noble Christian gentleman. I knew Alexander Mathes 2nd and Alexander Mathes 3rd. In 1852 Matheses made a considerable part of the congregation at Salem church. I have seen fifty-five Matheses in the church Sunday after Sunday. The Smith Mathes branch made a considerable part of the congregation, and other branches. These are all gone now but Mr. Jerome Miller’s wife and children and Mrs. Nora Ruble Mathes.

He was a son of William Hannah who served in the Revolutionary war, who married Peggy Wilson (b. about 1789), daughter of John Wilson and Sally Alexander, daughter of Robert Alexander. John Wilson was the son of William and Barbara (McKane) Wilson, who were married in Ireland, came to America about 1720, settled at the forks of the Brandywine in Chester County, Pennsylvania, and in the fall of 1747 came to Augusta County, Virginia and settled near New Providence church. John Wilson entered military service at the outbreak of the Revolution, and commanded a regiment at the siege of Yorktown.

John Fruit Hannah served in the Civil War, was made captain of the first company raised in Polk County, Tennessee for service in the Confederate army, which was organized into Co. D, 3rd Tenn. Inf. The Hannans moved to Blount County, Tenn., and from there to Ocoee Purchase, Benton County. He was one of the surveyors of Ocoee purchase and a great friend of the Cherokee tribe. He was interested in the gold mine at Dahlonega, Georgia. The family left Tennessee in 1867, going to Arkansas. While on this journey, Annie Grace Hannah said to her son Vance, that she would not live to see Arkansas, and when near Ladensville, Kentucky, she told him to stop and build a campfire, that she was going to die that night. They went into camp, and after supper she gave directions where to find the garments she wished to wear, and when everything was completed, she held family prayer, and in a few moments she was dead. They buried her there. Her husband lived about a year after that time.

10. ALEXANDER MATHES II. was born October 5, 1775, in Shenandoah County, Virginia, on Little Shenandoah River, went to Washington County, Tennessee (then North Carolina) with his father, in October, 1782; was on the road when Cornwallis surrendered his army in Virginia. He settled near Washington College, where he spent a long and useful life, occupying a position of prominence.

He succeeded his father as ruling elder in Salem church, serving in that capacity for a period of almost sixty years, from 1806 to 1865.

In 1819 he built, near Washington College, a large three-story residence of hewn logs, with stone basement. The rooms were very large with plenty of windows, and there was a center chimney with fireplace in each room. This was quite a pretentious home in those pioneer days. Many years later, weatherboarding was nailed on over the logs, and in 1919, after having stood one hundred years, it was remodeled into a modern home. It has passed out of the ownership of the family. It was sometimes called the "Ark."
Alexander Mathes II. was a farmer and brick mason. He was a strict Presbyterian, and considered with regret the fact that bread was baked in his home on the Sabbath. He was a very large man, weighing nearly three hundred pounds; about 5 feet, 11 inches in height; had clear blue eyes, dark hair and florid complexion.

He married (1st), July 16, 1799, Isabella Ord (b. April 6, 1776, d. Nov. 23, 1839). m. (2nd) Isabella McChesney, a precise, energetic little Irish woman. m. (3rd), July 16, 1862, Mary Brannan, who had lived in the family many years. He was 86 years of age at this time.

He is buried in the churchyard at Old Salem church, and the inscription on his tomb is as follows: "Born in Shenandoah County, Virginia, October 5, 1775, emigrated to Tennessee in October 1782, died February 12, 1865, aged 89 years, 4 months and 7 days, a residence of 82 years."

Children of Alexander and Isabella (Ord) Mathes (all born in Washington County, Tennessee):

334. Margaret, b. July 2, 1816, d. in youth.

ORD FAMILY

Robert Ord was born in Ireland, before 1750, and married Ann Leith, in Ireland. Children were: Jane, b. 1774; Isabella, b. Apr. 6, 1776. d. Nov. 23, 1839.

Robert Ord served in the Revolutionary War. He belonged to a company of volunteers called "Virginia Blues," enlisting August 28, 1777. He fell in the battle of Guilford Court House, fought by General Greene and Lord Cornwallis.

In Saffell's Records of the Revolutionary War, p. 265, the name of Robert Ord is given in a list of Revolutionary soldiers of Virginia, under date of November 30, 1778, in Company No. 10, Samuel Booker, Capt., Lawrence Butler, Lieut., Col. Daniel Morgan's 11th and 15th Virginia Regiments, Inc.

The following is from the files of the War Department, Washington, D. C., No. 1838801:

"The records of this office show that one Robert Ord served in the Revolutionary War as a private in a detachment under the command of Lieutenant Gibbs, 15th Virginia Regiment of Foot, commanded by Major Gustavus B. Wallace, Revolutionary War, which organization was subsequently known as Captain James Harris' Company, 11th and 15th Virginia Regiment, and finally as Captain James Booker's Company, 5th and 11th Virginia Regiment, commanded by Col. William Russell. This soldier is shown to have enlisted August 28, 1777, to serve three years, and his name last appears on a roll for November, 1779, without special remark relative to his service."

"The scene of the battle of Guilford Court House is six or seven miles northwest of Greensboro. The graves of the slain were obliterated and no memorial erected until about 1888, when a memorial was erected. The battle was fought March 15, 1781, lasted three hours and twenty-five minutes. The militia displayed great heroism, repulsed the enemy several times, and after advancing, fell back when compelled, in good order. Finally when assailed by British Light Horse were obliged to flee, many were cut down and scattered, but came together again."

The following entry is found in Records of Augusta County, Virginia, by Lyman Chalkley, Vol. 1, Order Book No. XVII, p. 264, June 20, 1780:
"Ann Ord, soldier's wife, allowed 5 bushels of corn."

Isabella Ord, the daughter of Robert and Ann (Leith) Ord, was early left an orphan and was reared by James and Isabella Cunningham. With them, she emigrated to Washington County, Tennessee, and married Alexander Mathes II.

The following record was found in a Bible of the Rodgers' branch of the family: "Isabella Ord Mathes, consort of Alexander Mathes, mother of Rachel Rodgers, departed this life on the 23rd night of November, 1839."

ORD LINEAGE.

"Alexander Mackenzie, of Kintail, Scotland, half brother of Kenneth Mackenzie (first Lord Mackenzie), had Coul bestowed on him by his father, married Isabella, daughter of Murdock Mackenzie of Ord, founded the family of Ord. Their son, Kenneth Mackenzie was first baronet of Coul."

"Kenneth Mackenzie, better known as the Priest of Coul, founded the family of Ord in the United States."

The family of Ord (sometimes spelled Orde and Ourd) is of great antiquity and is one of the old families of Great Britain with arms in England and Scotland. Records go back beyond the Norman Conquest (1066). This family has long possessed considerable estates in the counties of Somerset, Northumberland and Durham. Whitfield Hall is one home in Northumberland. In Northumberland Co. is a place called East Orde, and the first one living there of whom records were preserved was Simon de East Orde. He held Orde by tenure in 1362. In Durham Co. Lionel Ould lived, in the days of James I of England.

Capt. William Ord was a member of the Royal Engineers in Great Britain. The Barons Ord and Lords Bolton descended from Simon de East Orde, 1362.

The word "Orde" is an old Saxon name for promontory, and East Orde in Northumberland means East promontory. Here a certain one lived who was called Simon. As surnames came into use, he was called Simon of East Orde, or Simon de East Orde.

It is supposed that the first one who came to America was perhaps a descendant of one of the Barons of Orde.

The names Isabella and Robert are found in the old English family of Orde.

Some of the Ord family trace their descent from George, Prince of Wales, afterward George IV, b. 1762, d. 1830, and Maria Fitzherbert, b. 1756, d. 1837, m. 1783.

Several members of the Ord family in America have gained distinction in military life.

ORDE COAT OF ARMS.

The Baron Orde of Northumberland used arms blazoned or described as follows:

Arms—Sable, three Salmon hauriant, argent (hauriant means upright).

Crest—An Elk's head or, charged with a collar in vert sable.

The heraldic colors are black, silver and gold.

Motto: Mitis et fortis.

The coat of arms for the Scotch family of Orde or Ord, is:

Arms—Argent a chevron azure between, a crescent between two mullets in chief azure and a demi-otter issuing from the water in base proper. No crest is given. The heraldic colors are silver and blue.

The Salmon of one coat of arms, and the otter of the other, refer to the residence of the Ords near the water. The colors of the arms symbolize constancy, sincerity, loyalty and truth.

ALEXANDER MATHES II.
HOME OF ALEXANDER MATHES II, BUILT 1819, STILL STANDING. PORCHES HAVE BEEN REMOVED.
The Mackenzies, who founded the family of Ord, are descended from the royal line of Scotland, the original Anglo-Saxon kings of England, and from the oldest Scandinavian, Charlemagne and Capetian lines, as far back as the Ninth century.

The history of the Mackenzie family is one of the most romantic and historic of any of the Highland families of Scotland.

Clan Mackenzie occupied the North of Scotland. It gradually rose to a position of great power and influence, till in the 15th century it became one of the principal clans in the Highlands of Scotland, and in the 17th century two of its chiefs were raised to the peerage. This clan is of pure Scotch Gaelic descent with a strain of Irish.

War cry—Tulach Ard (a mountain in Kintail).
Badge—Cullean (holly).
Plaid—Background of green, bright blue plaided with black, fine lines of red and white.
Arms—Azure, a stag's head cabossed, gold.
Crest—A mountain in flames.
Motto—Luceo non uro.

The family of Mackenzie is descended from the ancient Earls of Ross. The Gaelic name of the original Earl of Ross was O'Beolan, a corruption of Gilleoin or Gillean Na H'Airde, the descendants of Beolan. We find from an old Norse Saga, that a powerful chief of the North of Scotland, named O'Beolan, married the daughter of Rolf, or Rollo, the celebrated pirate who afterwards became the celebrated Earl of Normandy, from whom William the Conqueror was descended.

John MacKenneth, or Mackenzie, the first of the race called Mackenzie, second Baron of Kintail, d. 1328. He sided with Robert Bruce, sheltered him in Ellandonnan Castle during his direst distress, and at Bannockburn led 500 of his clansmen in Bruce's army. He married Margaret, daughter of David, 11th Earl of Atholl, great granddaughter of John Baliol, and also a descendant of King John of England.

Kenneth III, son of John Mackenzie, was sixth in descent from John Baliol, of the royal line of Scotland, and sixth from King John of England. This Kenneth brought the Norwegian blood of the Kings of Man into the family, by his marriage with Finguala, daughter of Torquil McLeod I of Lewis, who was the grandson of Olave the Black, last Norwegian King of Man, (who d. 1237), by his wife Christina, daughter of Ferquhard, first O'Beolan Earl of Ross, who married Finguala Mac-Crotan, daughter of an ancient and powerful Irish chief.

Murdock Mackenzie, son of Kenneth, married Finguala or Florence, daughter of Malcolm MacLeod III. She was descended from Christina Bruce, sister of King Robert the Bruce, and thus the royal blood of Bruce was introduced into the Mackenzies.

Alexander Mackenzie, son of Murdock, b. 1398, d. 1488, was sixth Baron of Kintail, married Anna MacDougall.
Sir Kenneth Mackenzie, seventh Baron of Kintail, married (2nd) Agnes or Anne Fraser, daughter of Hugh, third Lord Lovat.
Kenneth, his son, was better known as the "Priest of Avoch," from whom the families of Suddie, Ord, etc., are descended.

See: Colonial Families of U. S. A., Mackenzie, Vol 2; and Clans of Scotland.

BALIOL ARMS.

Arms—Red, a silver orle.
Crest—A decrescent and an increscent moon, silver.
Baliol had arms in 1190.
Scottish Heraldry (2 ed.) Johnston.
THE Surname of Leith is of great antiquity in Scotland, supposed to be of Norman extraction, and those who bore it held in a remote era vast possessions, including the barony of Restalrig, and others in the shire of Midlothian and territory of Leith, whence it is presumed the name was assumed.

The immediate ancestor of this family, William Leith, of Bainis, living in the time of David Bruce and said to have been the male representative of the Leiths of Edingariock, was provost of Aberdeen in 1350, and proprietor of lands of Caprinton in county Aberdeen. He went to England with the hostages for King David's ransom in 1358. He married a daughter of Donald 12th Earl of Marr, and had two sons, Laurence and John. John was ambassador to the Court of England in 1412 and was appointed one of the commissioners to settle the terms for liberation of James I in 1423. William Leith died in the reign of Robert II, and was succeeded by his son Laurence, who was provost of Aberdeen, 1401-3-11. He was survived by his son, Norman Leith, who married Elizabeth, daughter of William Leslie, fourth baron of Balquhain, by Agnes Irvine, his wife, daughter of Baron of Drum.

Among the Leiths of colonial days in America, there was a Major Leith who served in the Revolutionary War, in the First Division of Augusta County troops, commanded by Colonel Sampson Mathews, and who was killed early in the war.

327. ALEXANDER MATHES III. was born near Washington College, Tenn. When a young man he removed to S. C. On Feb. 24, 1825, at Greeneville, S. C., he was married to Orpha Wood Merritt, of French Huguenot descent. She was born in Greeneville Nov. 8, 1803, daughter of Wheaton Merritt, a near relative of Gov. Wood Merritt of the Philippines. Wheaton Merritt's father came to America with Lafayette. Alexander Mathes III. removed to Cocke Co., Tenn., where he lived for a while, and then returned to Washington Co., where he lived until his death, in 1884. He filled many positions of honor and trust and numerous minor official positions, among which were those of county surveyor and justice of the peace. He accumulated considerable property.

He was a ruling elder in Salem church from 1860 to 1884, being the third Alexander Mathes in succession to occupy that position. The service of the three extended over a period of 102 years. A memorial window in honor of these three has been placed in Salem church, giving the time of service of each. Orpha W. Mathes died June 5, 1879, at the age of 76. She had been totally blind for ten years previous to her death.

Children of Alexander Mathes III. and Orpha Wood (Merritt) Mathes:

336. ALFRED HARVEY MATHES was graduated from Washington College and Princeton. Was afterward at the head of Washington College for a while. He was a fine Greek and Latin scholar; was a teacher and Presbyterian minister. He was tall in stature and of distinguished appearance. He went South in an effort to restore his failing health, and spent considerable time in Georgia, Alabama and Florida, organizing Presbyterian churches at various places, and was pastor of churches at Fort Gaines and at Maitland, Ga. He died in Oakland, Orange Co., Florida, Sept. 4, 1878, after which his children returned to Tennessee.
He m. (1st) Lydia Nelson, daughter of David and Phoebe (White) Nelson. She was noted for her beauty. She died in May, 1865. Her father, David Nelson, was a merchant, living at Knoxville, and later at Elizabethton, Tenn. He owned slaves, and owned large tracts of land. David and Phoebe Nelson were the parents of the following children: Lydia; Thomas Amos Rogers; Carrick, a lawyer, of Texas; Moses, owner of copper mines in Tenn.; James, connected with the courts at Knoxville; Mary. Thomas Amos Rogers Nelson was b. Mar. 19, 1812, in Roane Co., Tenn., d. Aug. 24, 1873, in Knoxville. He was graduated from Tennessee college in 1828, admitted to the bar in 1832, appointed U. S. District Attorney, 1833, and elected to Congress, 1858-61. He was one of the counsel that defended President Johnson on his impeachment in 1868, and in 1870 was elected judge of the State Supreme Court of Tenn. He attained renown as one of Tennessee's brilliant sons and his reputation became world-wide. He lived in Jonesboro, and later in Knoxville. He m. (1st) a Stuart of England, and had five children, some of them attaining to positions of eminence, one being a colonel in the Civil War, another was Judge Charles Nelson, and another Judge Thomas A. R. Nelson, Jr., of the Criminal Court at Knoxville. He m. (2nd) a Sevier, and had five children; one son becoming Commander Valentine Sevier Nelson, who was lieut. on Dewey's flag ship Olympia at the battle of Manila, afterwards commanding one of Admiral Evans' battleships on a tour of the world, to whom Knoxville presented a sword for bravery at Manila, and observed Nelson Day in his honor. Another son, Selden Nelson, has been a member of Civil Service examining board at Knoxville, for some years.

Mary Nelson married Leonard Swingle, a merchant. Their daughter, Ann, married a son of Mr. Henry Johnson, founder of and at one time owner of all the land in Johnson City, Tenn.

She was a woman of unusual beauty, with deep blue eyes, black hair and a fair skin and rosy cheeks. She had a strong mentality, deep religious convictions, and was a lifelong member of the Presbyterian church. Her husband, Elbert Sevier Bird, was born in Greenville, Tenn., March, 1824, and was the son of John and Polly (Rimal) Bird. Polly Rimal was the daughter of John and Mary (Lincoln) Rimal. Elbert Sevier Bird died August, 1869, in Dalton, Ga. Before removing to Dalton they lived for a number of years in Murray Co., Ga., where he was judge of the court. He was a prominent Mason, and was Mayor of Dalton, during the Civil War. The remote ancestor was Amos Bird, one of the pioneer citizens of the Watauga settlement. His name is signed as a witness to the first document of Tennessee history extant, which is a lease of the land from the Cherokee Indians. He was one of the heroes of King's Mountain, and participated in many other battles of the Revolution and the Indian wars. He was descended from the Bird family of Virginia, and his wife was a member of the noted Sevier family of Tennessee. He was one of the justices of the peace who divided Washington and Greene counties, according to Tennessee histories. Ramsey's Annals of Tennessee states that he owned the first mill in the Watauga settlement.

He returned home for a time, but again rejoined his command, and was killed in the battle of Bentonville, N. C., at the very end of the war.

MELISSA ANN BIRD married Warren Ransom Davis, Jan. 1, 1868, at Dalton, Ga. She was a woman who possessed many gifts, a cultivated mind, a wonderful memory of events of the past, and she was a brilliant conversationalist. In her youth she was noted for her great beauty and charming personality. She was a true daughter of the old South. She was a charter member and one of the organizers of the chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Dalton, and was historian for many years. She was a charter member of the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Dalton, and served as historian of the chapter from its organization until her death.

Warren Ransom Davis was born in Greenville, S. C., and came to Dalton at an early age. At the age of seventeen he enlisted in the Dalton Guards, the first military company that went from Dalton in the Civil War. He was wounded at the battle of South Mountain, by a gunshot wound in the wrist, which rendered useless his left arm. He was a prominent business man and enjoyed the esteem and confidence of the community. He was descended from the Nelson family of Virginia, and the Davis, Farr and Bradley families of South Carolina, and the Ransom family of North Carolina. He died in 1895.

331. JANE ROE MATHES m. in 1825, at about the age of 16, at Washington College, Tenn., Josephus Dobson Barnett (b. Aug. 19, 1807 in Va.) who was the son of Josephus Barnett, Sr., and Jane Dobson, the only daughter of Dobson and Jane Whiteside. Josephus Dobson Barnett was very studious and a lover of books, would read and study far into the night after a day’s work. He was extremely fond of music and became a fine singer. At an early age he showed mechanical genius, and became a carpenter and builder and millwright. His work took him to different localities, and he lived for a time in each of the following counties in Tenn., Washington, Green, Jefferson and Hawkins. Early in the year 1860, he went to Lee County, Virginia, to take charge of the construction of a mill, and took with him two of his daughters, Elizabeth and Adelaide, where Elizabeth taught school and Adelaide attended school. He then enlisted as a volunteer in the Confederate army from Virginia, was enrolled in an infantry regiment, probably 50th Va. Volunteers, in which he held the rank of first lieutenant, and which was commanded by Brigadier-General John B. Floyd, A. S. Van Deventer, Captain. In September, 1862, after a battle on Gauley River, he was captured and sent to Camp Chase, a federal prison near Columbus, Ohio. After six months’ imprisonment, he was exchanged, and came home for a few months, when he again entered service in Co. E., 1st Tenn. Cav. from Hawkins County, Tenn. In September, 1864, he was again captured near Jonesboro, Tenn., and again sent to Camp Chase prison, as a prisoner of war, where he died March 15, 1865, and was buried in Camp Chase cemetery, a "Confederate cemetery formerly occupied by Camp Chase prison," in which are buried 2,260 Confederate soldiers. A memorial statue and arch was erected to their memory in 1902. The single word “Americans” is chiseled in the stone arch, which was unveiled June 14, 1902. It contains about two and a half acres. Over 500 families in the Southern states received their first information as to where their relatives were buried, from Mr. W. H. Knauss, a federal soldier, under whose direction the dedication and unveiling took place. The number of the grave of Josephus Dobson Barnett is 1669. It is marked, by mistake, with the name “J. Burnett, Co. E., 1st Tenn.” This mistake was first made when his name was enrolled on the prison lists. His widow, carrying out the traditions and possessing the sterling qualities of her Scotch-Irish ancestors, pushed forward with energy and industry and completed the rearing and education of her children, of whom she later had reason to be proud. After the close of the Civil War, because of the bitterness and strife in the country, she with the younger members of the family emigrated to Arkansas, about 1868, stopping in Prairie Co. and going later to Johnson County, where they settled near Clarksville. In 1874 her youngest son, Foy, went to Texas, and in 1875, she and Harvey and Josie joined him there, going to Erath Co. And there, on September 1, 1876, her useful life closed, with only three of her children near. Her grave is in Eastland Co., Texas. Josephus Dobson and Jane Roe (Mathes) Barnett had a family of eleven children, all of whom grew to maturity. They were:

612. Narcissa Jane

613. Alexander Mathes

614. Martin Van Buren

615. Isabella Ord

616. Elizabeth Ann

   b. Mar. 18, 1850, in Tenn.

622. Josepha Rachel

All of the girls in this large family and all of the boys except two were school teachers at some time during their lives.

LINEAGE OF JOSEPHUS DOBSON BARNETT.

MR. DOBSON, some time in the Eighteenth Century, emigrated from England and settled in Virginia. He was a teacher, a fine scholar, a staid Christian gentleman of the old English type. He married Jane Whiteside, and they became the parents of two or three boys and one girl. Of the boys of this family we know little. Jane, the daughter, was carefully educated by her father.

JANE DOBSON m. Josephus Barnett, of French descent, and they had a family of four girls and two boys. They lived in Virginia until 1807. In the Spring of that year Josephus Barnett bought a drove of horses and started South with them, expecting to go as far as New Orleans, if he did not succeed in disposing of them before reaching there. In those days, before there were facilities for shipping by rail, it was the custom to drive stock in large droves from Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee to the country further South, where there was a good market. Weeks passed before news from him came to his waiting family. Then came a letter mailed at New Orleans, bearing the signature of an unknown person, giving no clue by which the writer could be traced, simply stating that Josephus Barnett was very sick. Nothing further was ever heard of him or his horses, or the money for which they were sold. He had invested his capital in the horses, expecting to realize considerable profit. When he did not return, his heart-broken wife was left in a very sad condition; but she was not of the helpless kind. By her industry, frugality and patient care, she reared her six children. On August 19th of that year, her sixth child was born, whom she named Josephus Dobson. After some time, when she felt there was no hope of her husband's return, she took her children and went to Tennessee, where all grew up and married. The faithful mother lived to see many grandchildren. She died in 1859.

CHILDREN:
647. Martin Luther, Jr. b. Nov. 21, 1916.

ELIZABETH ANN BARNETT was born and reared in East Tennessee. When a young woman she began teaching school and continued in that work for several years. In Lee County, Va., where she was engaged in teaching, she met Houston Van Deventer, and June 6, 1861 they were married. He was born Oct. 8, 1835, was the son of William and Martha (Clark) Van Deventer. He enlisted in the Confederate army and immediately after their marriage was sent to the front and remained in service until the close of the war. He served as second lieutenant in 50th Va. Inf. Reg., Genl. Robert E. Lee, commanding, A. S. Van Deventer, (his brother) Colonel.

The family left Virginia in 1868, going west, stopping a while in Prairie County, Arkansas, then to Johnson County, near Clarksville in 1871, and about 1877 to Fayetteville, Washington County, living a while in Fayetteville, then to a country place about three miles out, called "Sunnyside," then to "Edgewood," a large brick residence owned by Prof. Leverett, near Mt. Comfort church and school house, where many of my childhood's care-free days were spent. In 1880 we left Washington County, Ark., going overland to Colorado, with a company of others, including Mr. John Barnett's family, John West, Thomas Taylor and William Gillmore. We had with us a little black pony upon which my sister and I took turns in riding across the plains. On one occasion when I was riding, the pony became frightened by shots fired by the young men of the party, and I dismounted. I was behind the wagons, and the plain stretched far ahead with not even a rock or stump to assist me in mounting again, so I was reduced to the necessity of hiking to camp; into which at the close of day limped a very tired girl leading her pony, to the surprise of those in camp who had not thought worth while to stop and investigate my non-appearance before that time. We stopped at Pueblo for the summer. In August the young people of the party drove to the mountains and climbed Pike's Peak, taking with them a pack mule and camping over night at timber line. In November, 1880 the Van Deventer family left Colorado, going to Ray County, Mo., where three of Mrs. Van Deventer's sisters were living, remained in Ray County for some years, going to Howell Co., Mo., in 1895 for a short time.

After this, Mrs. Van Deventer lived with her daughter (myself) in Kansas City for about twenty-five years, where she was active in various organizations. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; became a member of the W. C. T. U. in 1888 at Excelsior Springs and was ever a tireless worker in the interests of this organization. She was a charter member of the Mercy Hospital League in Kansas City and rendered valuable assistance to this hospital for crippled children. She was interested in young people and was always their friend. Her character was of the finest and her life measured up to the highest, purest and most unselfish standards. She possessed an interesting personality, indomitable perseverance, unlimited courage, and the rare faculty of retaining the spirit of youth, although in years she reached almost eighty-four. She remained active both mentally and physically and retained all of her faculties unimpaired.

She had many interests, kept in touch with events, and was a great reader. She enjoyed traveling, and made a trip from Kansas City to California, alone, when seventy-six years of age. Her life span encompassed varied experiences and covered a period in which there was the greatest development in things for the use and benefit of man, extending from the days of the spinning-wheeler and loom, the tallow candle and open fireplace, to all the improvements and conveniences of the twentieth century; and these she accepted and enjoyed.

To her we are indebted for this history, as it was through her initiative that the work was begun. She was gathering data for it when she was called away, and I, her only surviving daughter, have endeavored to complete the work she began, by compiling it in the present form.

Children of Houston and Elizabeth Ann (Barnett) Van Deventer:

649. MARTHA JANE VAN DEVENTER (known as Jennie) was slight of figure, fair, with blue eyes and black hair, an attractive girl just entering upon the threshold of womanhood, when her young life closed.

650. IDA CHRISTOBELLE VAN DEVENTER. I am glad to put myself down as a native of Virginia, although little of my life has been spent there. However, it was through no fault of mine that I was brought away at the early age of two years, long before I reached the age of accountability (if ever). When the family was crossing the Mississippi River on a ferry-boat, on the journey west, I was found approaching the edge of the boat as fast as my size would permit,—which I had almost reached when discovered. Whether this was an attempt at self destruction as a protest against being carried away from the "Sunny Southland," I know not. At any rate, this was my first thrilling adventure. My name, "Christobelle," was taken from a novel, "The Maneuvering Mother," in which Christobelle St. John was the heroine of the story. But possibly neither this circumstance nor the name itself were responsible for my action in the incident of the ferry-boat—perhaps it was only incipient curiosity, which has been said to be a dominant characteristic of the female of the species.

In 1891 I came to Kansas City, entering the Kansas City Business University. After graduating from this school in the Spring of 1902, I took a position as stenographer in a law office, and have spent most of the time since engaged as a law stenographer. In 1897 I entered the employ of Mr. H. S. Hadley, who later became Governor of Missouri. He was then connected with the Kansas City Law Department, where I gained valuable experience in rapid shorthand work in the taking of testimony, and have since done some court reporting, reporting addresses of public speakers, etc.

In October, 1902 I went to California and spent a year there, going from San Diego to Los Angeles by boat, later going to San Francisco by boat. While there I visited Catalina Island, Yosemite Valley, and other places of interest. While living in San Francisco I held a position in Oakland on "The Oakland Herald," and twice each day crossed San Francisco Bay on the ferryboat, which experience I greatly enjoyed.

Returning to Kansas City in October, 1903, I took a position in the Law Department of the Kansas City Southern R. R. Co. In 1905 I entered the office of Mr. B. F. Deatherage, in the law firm of Botsford, Deatherage & Young, and remained in his employ for fifteen years, until his death in 1921, the firm name at that time being Harding, Deatherage, Murphy & Stinson.

For some years I owned a home at 440 S. Colorado Ave., where my mother and I lived. At present am living at 503 Munford Court.

VAN DEVENTER LINEAGE.

The progenitor of the Van Deventer family in America, came, in the Seventeenth century, from Holland in the Netherlands, or nether lands, the little triangular country traversed by overflowing rivers and harassed by the sea, out of which evolved a people whom Motley in his enthusiasm calls the most intelligent under the sun.
Motley in his "Rise of the Dutch Republic" tells with absorbing interest of the struggles of this little nation in the revolution, under the guiding hand of the great William the Silent, whose courage and skill enabled him to overcome the most powerful and unscrupulous monarch of the age. He says: "To all who speak the English language, the history of the great agony through which the Republic of Holland was ushered into birth must have peculiar interest; for it is a portion of the records of the Anglo-Saxon race. For America the spectacle is one of deep import."

(a) JAN PIETERSEN VAN DEVENTER, b. 1629 in Holland, emigrated from the Province of Utrecht, Holland, in the ship "Hope", arriving in New Netherlands (New York) April 1, 1662. He married Engel Teunis in Holland. His son:

SCHENCK LINEAGE

The Schenck family is said to have derived its name from Edgar de Schencken, chief butler to Charlemagne, Emperor of Germany and France, who about 798 granted to Edgar a title of nobility and assigned him a coat of arms. The name “Schenck” signifies cup bearer. It may be said that the cup bearer of those times was the head of the household, the protector and confidante of his chief and the master of ceremonies at the court.

Rev. Gerret C. Schenck, of Marlboro, N. J., has had a very complete history of the Schenck family compiled at great expense, and it is said that the book probably excels any of its kind in America.

Those branches of the family known as the Van Nydeck and Van Tautenbergh are traced back to 878, and an unbroken line is given from Colve de Witte, Baron van Tautenbergh, who was killed in the battle of Clodius against the Dane, in 878.

Regnier Schenck, Baron van Tautenbergh, was cup bearer to Count van Julich, residing at Nydiggen castle. Theodorus, his son, became the next Baron van Tautenbergh. There was a succession of barons in this family down to Joost (or George), who in 1521 was Governor of Friesland, Groningen and Oversyssel. Fredericus, his son, the last archbishop of Utrecht, noted for his learning and many literary productions, died Aug. 25, 1580. This branch of the family became extinct in the twentieth generation, when an only son, Jacob, died when a child.

Christianus Schenck, second son of Regnier, became attached to the retinue of Count van Julich and was apparently held in high esteem by the count. Sept. 10, 1250 he was appointed, together with Marschall van Kelser and Renad van Druse, a court of justice to settle a dispute between the Count and Conrad van Hochsleden, Archbishop of Cologne. Wilhemus was his son, and there is now in the archives of the Hague a document dated March 13, 1271, bearing his signature.

Sir Martin Schenck was an active participant in the revolution in Holland, and was drowned while conducting a night attack on the city of Nynegen in 1589. The accident was caused by the great weight of his armor. He was given a military funeral and his body deposited in the tomb of the Duke of Guelders, under directions of Prince Maurice, successor of William, Prince of Orange.
The Mathews (Mathes) Family in America

Roelof Martense Schenck, b. 1619, came to America in 1650 and settled at Flatlands, L.I., m. in 1675 Anetje Wyckoff. Margaretta (their daughter) b. Jan. 16, 1676 at Flatlands, m. 617. WILLIAM SMITH BARNETT was born in Yancy Co., North Carolina, and reared in East Tennessee. He was a carpenter, millwright, teacher and preacher, and spent most of his life in preaching. He m. when very young, two days before his eighteenth birthday, March 27, 1857, Martha Melvina Williams, and lived in Jefferson county, Tennessee until the Civil War. Although of a family who were Southern sympathizers, his father serving in the Confederate army, he enlisted on the other side and at once joined the federal army. This led to life-long estrangement from his father’s family, which was a source of great grief to them. He was a member of the 8th Tenn. Reg., and was promoted to the rank of major. Soon after the close of the war, he and his family went west, settling at Rockford, Indiana. Later the family returned to Tennessee, where the wife died and where some of the children still live.

William S. Barnett is referred to in “War of the Rebellion”, Series 1, Vol. 32, Part 2, page 295:
Organization of troops in the Department of the Ohio, Major-General John G. Foster, United States Army, Commanding, January 31, 1854, First Brigade, Col. Felix A. Reeve; 8th Tenn., Major William S. Barnett.”

Children of William Smith and Martha (Williams) Barnett:
652. Martha Lizzie, b. about 1861, m. Mr. Audrey, lives near Okla. City.
653. Mary Antoinette b. Aug. 23, 1868, in Rockford, Ind. m. Mr. Burns, lives in Chicago.

651. JOHN WILLIAM BARNETT, m. Georgiana Loftus, lives in Knoxville, Tenn.

CHILDREN:
654. Maude,
655. John William, Jr., a lawyer, graduated from State University of Tenn., with degree of A. B.
656. Dr. C. Elsa, a physician, practicing for a while in Johnson City, then in Newport, Tenn. m. Mary Mims, of Newport, who lived only two years, leaving a son three hours old; now lives at 200 Tennessee Ave., Knoxville, Tenn.

William Smith Barnett, m. (2nd) Mary M. Parker (b. Apr. 2, 1847, d. Sept. 23, 1921) in 1869, in St. Louis, Mo. During this year he joined the Upper Iowa Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church; was ordained deacon in 1871, and elder in 1873. As pastor he served successively the following charges: Quasqueton, Raymond, Vinton, Circuit, Monmouth, Preston, Delmar, Miles and Camanche. In 1884, on account of failing health, he was placed on the superannuate list, but having recovered he was made a supernumerary in 1887, which relation he held for six years. During this time, after leaving the pastorate, he was employed for several years in governmental positions, later becoming assistant superintendent of the Iowa Children's Home Society, at Des Moines. In 1893 the Conference again made him effective, and he continued in this relation until the session of 1899, when in broken health he finally went upon the retired list. These last six years of effective service, he was the state superintendent of the Iowa Children's Home Society, which he administered in a capable and efficient manner. After his final superannuation he was so anxious to be at work that he served for nearly a year as state superintendent of the West Virginia Children's Home Society, and for several years preached acceptably as a pastoral supply in the South. From 1899 until 1911 he lived in Dickson County, Tenn., where he was engaged in farming and fruit growing. In 1911, seeking in a mild climate relief from rheumatic troubles, he went to Lynn Haven, Florida, where he spent his remaining years. For two years he served as pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Lynn Haven. He was later elected to the honorary position of pastor emeritus of this church.

He was elected a trustee of the public schools of Lynn Haven, and served in that capacity until the time of his death, November 6, 1915.

The following is an extract from the Official Journal of the Upper Iowa Annual Conference of the M. E. Church:

"Another aged and honored veteran of the civil war and of the Conference passed from labor to reward when Major W. S. R.
Burnette received his final call and his last earthly appointment.
As a farmer, soldier, preacher, government officer, and superintendent, he has done a man's part in the world's work, and at last, weary in body and mind, but without any special or painful illness, he slowly and gently drifted out of the river of time into the sea of eternity. * * * His educational plans were broken up by the Civil War, and all the more advanced education that he thereafter attained was the result of hard private study while engaged in active service of some kind. * * * He was a man of large intellectual force and good executive ability. As members of the Conference to which he belonged 46 years, we today record our appreciation of him as a man and a brother, revere his memory because of his faithful ministerial work, gladly recognize his excellent civic and social service, and honor him for the part he played in the days of the Civil War.

"The funeral was held at the Lynn Haven church, where he had so acceptably served as pastor, and was described as the largest in the history of the town. The school children marched to the church in a body, preceded by the local lodge of Odd Fellows."

The following is from the Lynn Haven Tribune, Nov. 18, 1915:

"The death of that aged and honored veteran, Major W. S. R.
Burnette sends a wave of sorrow over the whole community, and his passing robs the world of an intellectual genius whose brilliance became dimmed solely through the burden of years * * * He was a preacher, withal a humorist, at times a cynic, but to Lynn Haven, like Gladstone, a Grand Old Man."

It will be noted that he made a slight change in the spelling of his name, from Barnett to Burnette, probably on account of the estrangement from his family.

Children of W. S. R. and Mary M. (Parker) Burnette:

657. JAMES PAUL BURNETTE m. Vade Cross, of Marion, Iowa, in 1905.
He started out for himself at the age of seventeen, in railroad business, lived for a time in Chicago, is now living in Cleveland, Ohio, where he holds a position as superintendent of Motor Vehicle Equipment for the American Railway Express Co., his home is at 1657 Belle Ave., Lakewood, Ohio. They have an adopted daughter, Eileen.

658. LULU OCTAVIA BURNETTE m. (1st) Walter Gardner Moody of Dickson Co., Tenn., June 14, 1903. In October of the same year Mr. Moody was killed in a railroad accident. m. (2nd) Nov. 18, 1915, at Lynn Haven, Fla., A. S. Peyton, an Englishman. She spent most of her life in the South until recently. Now lives in Cleveland, Ohio.

During all the years of his life following the Civil War, William Smith Barnett's family heard no word of him, until after his death. All of the remaining members of the family went West soon after the war, and he probably would not have been able to find them if he had tried. In 1921 Mrs. M. A. Killgrove, his sister, located his family through the War Department at Washington, D. C., and positively identified his picture and handwriting.

618. MARTHA McCHESNEY BARNETT m. (1st) Joel D. Butler, March, 1858, in Jonesboro, Tenn.

Their children:

659. Elisha Alexander b. 1859, lived only a few weeks.

She m. (2nd) Toliver Wood, a farmer, Jan. 28, 1868, in Cocke Co., Tenn. They moved to Ray County, Mo., in 1871, where she lived the remainder of her life. She was a beautiful woman, of unusual character and personality.

619. EBENEZER HARVEY BARNETT, s. He never had good health. He lived with his mother until her death, and after that with different members of the family. During the later years of his life he lived in Globe, Arizona. He suffered greatly during the last two years of his life. His sister, Elizabeth Van Deventer, was with him during his last illness and at the time of his death.

620. MARY ADELAIDE BARNETT was reared in Washington Co., Tennessee, near Washington College, and attended two terms at Washington College, in 1865-67. In September, 1867, she went to Fort Gaines, Georgia, to attend school, where she lived with the family of Alfred H. Mathes, her cousin, remained in Georgia and Alabama, attending school and teaching until 1870, when she returned to Tennessee and spent a year teaching there. In January, 1871, she went West and joined her mother and the family in Prairie Co., Arkansas. Later the same Winter they all moved to Johnson Co., Arkansas, where she taught school at Spring Hill.

On June 9, 1872, she was married to James Osborne Killgrove, who was born June 6, 1846, in Carroll Co., Ark. He served in the federal army in the Civil War in 2nd Arkansas Cavalry. He is the son of John Howell Killgrove, b. June 20, 1806, in N. C., d. Aug. 22, 1871, in Ark., and Lucinda (Seboldt) Killgrove, b. Aug. 18, 1816, d. May 7, 1902. John Howell Killgrove served in the Civil War in Co. A, 2nd Ark. Cav. After the war he went to Illinois, and then back to Ark. He was the son of Joseph and Frances Killgrove of Tennessee. Some of this family were among the Arkansas pioneers. Lucinda Seboldt was the daughter of John and Mahala (Kelly) Seboldt. John Seboldt was born in Pennsylvania, of Holland ancestry. Mahala Kelly was born in Kentucky. They removed to Tennessee, and later to Arkansas. They were the parents of twelve children.

Killgrove is an Irish name. The name may have been originally Killegrave or Killigrew. Killegrave is the name of a manor in Cornwall, where this celebrated family lived down to the time of Richard II. This means an ancient family.

The coat of arms for the name spelled Killegrave is:

Arms—Argent on a chevron sable, between three pellets three bezants.
Colors—Silver, black and gold.
In the fall of 1875 the Killgrove family moved to Parker Co., Texas, and in November, 1878 to Ray Co., Mo., have since lived at different points in Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas, and are now at Joplin, Mo.

On June 9, 1922, Mr. and Mrs. James O. Killgrove celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the home of their son, R. W. Killgrove, at Pittsburg, Kansas, at which all of the children were present except the oldest son. I was a guest at this celebration, and had also been present at the marriage, in 1872.

Mrs. Killgrove has long been a member of the W. C. T. U., and active in church organizations.

He was a Baptist minister for more than fifty years.

The following extract is quoted from History of Pettis Co., Mo., 1882, p. 1094 (Flat Creek Twp.):

W. H. RODGERS.

W. H. RODGERS was born in Washington, Co., Tenn. in 1832, emigrated to Missouri in 1852, having gone to New Orleans, then back to Evansville, Ind., where he was taken sick, but came on to Missouri and landed at Booneville in the fall of 1852. After his recovery he went to Osceola, at which place an uncle of his lived, where he remained until the following March, 1853, when he returned to Cooper County. In the year 1854 he returned to Tenn. and brought his mother, brother and sisters, his mother being a widow. She was 45 years old at the time of coming. She died in 1856 and was buried in Cooper Co. In his father's family there were seven children.

Mr. Rodgers married in 1855, Adaline Stephens, of Cooper Co. Her father was a native of S. C. and her mother of Va. There were 9 children in the family, 8 of whom are still living. Mrs. Rodgers was born in 1835 and was 20 years old at the time of her marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers have had 11 children born to them, 5 of whom are living, 3 sons and 2 daughters. The eldest son is a mute and is attending school at Fulton, Callaway Co., and will finish his education this year.

Mr. Rodgers and family settled in Pettis Co. in 1859. He entered 120 acres in Flat Creek Township, at 75 cents per acre. He owns at the present time 360 acres.

Mr. Rodgers has been connected with the Baptist denomination.
for a number of years and is now pastor of four congregations. He was licensed as an exhorter in the year 1868 by the Flat Creek church, and regularly ordained as a minister by the order of the same church, in 1870, and has worked arduously as a minister of the gospel ever since that time. He has solemnized 68 marriages during his ministerial work. Although a farmer and having a great deal of hard labor to perform, yet he is ever found at his post in the work of the Master. He is an ambitious and an honorable man, much esteemed by all who know him.

(2nd) Mary Ann Jordon (d. 1886) who was related to the Doak family. Franklin Academy was built on land owned by her father. E. S. Mathes was a farmer and mill owner. He owned a farm near Washington College, on which he built a brick house, a few hundred yards from the College, in 1850, which house is now owned and occupied by his descendants. He sold a part of this farm at one time and moved down on Nolachucky river, where he was engaged in saw mill business. Neither he nor the family had good health at that place, and he had an attack of fever which came near proving fatal, so that he bought back a part of his old farm, including the brick house, and moved back to the old place some time prior to 1882, and turned his attention to farming, having no mills except a bone mill for manufacturing fertilizer.

825. McFARLAND MELANCELTHAN MATHES, b. April 29, 1850, in the brick house built by his father, near Washington College, while the house was being built and before it was completed, and died Nov. 13, 1897, in the same house where he was born. He was a farmer and miller, and lived for several years on the Nolachucky river, where he had charge of the Mathes mill. In August, 1886, he moved back to the brick house to take care of his father. He rebuilt the front wall of the house about 1889, as it had bulged and made the rebuilding necessary. Not being able to get the same kind of brick, he tore down an ell of the building and used the brick in this wall. The house is located near the foot of the hill on what is now the Memphis to Bristol highway. He was postmaster of the Washington College postoffice from 1888 to 1897.
He was an elder in Salem church from March 17, 1882 to 1897, thus making four generations of the Mathes family who served, in unbroken succession, from the organization of the church in 1870, and it was now, for the first time, without a member of that family in the eldership. His funeral was the first held in the new church building, erected in 1897. He was buried in old Salem cemetery, where sleep four generations of his kindred.

He m. June 25, 1874, Leonora Ruble (b. Apr. 30, 1854, d. June 25, 1921), daughter of Henry Hunter and Elizabeth Jane (West) Ruble. The marriage took place at Conkling, in the home of her grandfather, Edward West, with whom she had made her home since she was two years old. Rev. William B. Rankin officiated. These two lived out their lives in the old home, she, although physically frail and for many years a great sufferer, outliving her husband by almost a quarter of a century. She was highly esteemed for her many admirable qualities. It has been said of her that she had never been known to say a harmful thing of anyone, and that she found her chief joy in helping others. At her death it was said: "One of the last landmarks has been removed. The last one in the community bearing the name of 'Mathes' is gone, where once lived so many of that name." She died on the forty-seventh anniversary of their marriage.

EBENEZER LEITH MATHES m. Nancy Ann Nelson (b. Feb. 25, 1786 d. Feb. 27, 1867) daughter of John Nelson and ——— Mathews, the only daughter of George Mathews, the immigrant. Nancy Ann Nelson’s mother, therefore, was the sister of Alexander Mathes I, and his eleven brothers. We have not been able to get the name of this daughter of George Mathes, or any other facts relating to her. Ebenezer Leith Mathes occupied a position of prominence in his community. He was an elder in Salem church for forty years, a trustee of Washington College for forty-six years, and secretary most of that time; served as a Civil Magistrate of Washington County for thirty-six years. Before the Civil War he freed his slaves as they reached the age of twenty-one, sent them to Liberia and maintained them for the first year, and during the war was an uncompromising “Union Man.” He had no children and at his death left one-half of his estate to the church and College, the interest to be used as he directed. A memorial was placed in Salem church to his memory, with the inscription, “The Lord Loveth a Cheerful Giver.”

“During the Civil War most of the descendants of the Mathes family were on the Union side. There was an Ebenezer Mathes, a very wealthy man for that country, who ‘set his negroes free’ before the war by sending some of them to Liberia and some to the ‘free soil states of the North.’ He always gave liberally for the endowment of institutions of learning, to charity and to colonization purposes. At his death, since the war, he left all of his.
property to charitable causes, excepting some small legacies to relatives.

17. RACHEL MATHES, m. Benjamin Blackburn, a brother of Rosannah Blackburn, who married her brother, John Mathes.

3. GEORGE MATHES (2nd) second son of George Mathews, the emigrant, was probably born in Shenandoah Co., Va., where his father settled about 1740. Together with his three brothers, Alexander, Allen and Jeremiah, he emigrated to upper East Tennessee from Virginia about 1780. He married, and lived for a short time in the neighborhood of Leesburg, later going to Blount Co., where he was one of the pioneers. He was killed about 1788 by Indians, below Maryville, near Ft. Loudon, in what is now Monroe County, of which we have the following account:

"During a raid of the Indians the settlers ran into a blockhouse some miles below Maryville. After a siege of some days the Indians withdrew, and Mathes (George) and his brother-in-law Anderson volunteered to go and look for food. The Indians surprised them and they were overtaken and tomahawked by John Watts, a half-breed chief, notorious for his bloodthirsty deeds and character." (1) m. Aug. 24, 1904, at Seattle, Grace Owen, daughter of Rev. Owen Jones, of Wales.

GEORGE MATHES married Nancy Elizabeth Wood.

CHILDREN:

WILLIAM MATHES was an infant at the time his father was killed by Indians, and he may have been born in the blockhouse, where the settlers took refuge from the Indians. He lived all his life near Dandridge, Jefferson Co., Tennessee. He married Rachel Patton Balch, daughter of John Balch, who was a soldier at King’s Mountain and Cowpens, and who lived to the age of ninety-five years, was probably a descendant of John Balch who came from Somerseshire, England in 1638.

The oldest church in Dandridge was Hopewell Presbyterian church, organized in 1785, probably by Hezekiah Balch, who was its pastor until 1811. In 1807 its members numbered ninety-six, and among them was William Mathes.

GEORGE ANDERSON MATHES was educated at Maryville College, East Tenn. under the teaching of Dr. Isaac Anderson. D.D., a celebrated preacher and teacher.

"He was a young man of great promise, of more than ordinary intellect, a high toned gentleman of strictest integrity, with a profound sense of his obligation to God and man, of whom Dr. Anderson used to say: ‘He is a coming giant.’"
On Apr. 7, 1836 he married Nancy Shanklin Hart, daughter of Edward (b. 1788) and Elizabeth (Hood) Hart. Edward Hart was the son of Joseph and Nancy (Shanklin) Hart. Joseph Hart was the son of Thomas Hart and Nancy Butler (nee Stout), of Scotland. Thomas Hart was the son of a Scotch-Irish Presbyterian who emigrated from Wales and who died during the voyage to America, which occupied more than four months. The son, Thomas, was born on this voyage. The mother and son landed at Bordentown, N. J., where the boy was brought up. Later he moved to Loudon Co., Va. Joseph Hart lived in Greene Co. and Washington Co., Va., and in 1790 moved to Blount Co., Tenn., where he and other pioneer settlers built a block house known as “Old Fort McTeer.” Elizabeth Hood who married Edward Hart was the daughter of Nathaniel Hood, a pioneer of East Tenn.

"After a thorough course of academical and theological studies, Dr. George Anderson Mathes was ordained a Presbyterian minister. He preached and taught for several years in Asheville, N. C. He then went to Rogersville, Tenn., where he was pastor of a church. He was greatly loved by the people and had every reasonable prospect of taking high rank in the ministry. He contracted consumption and died at the age of 37."

1084. WILLIAM ALFRED MATHES. The following is a sketch from "Joseph Hart and his Descendants," prepared by his son, N. B. Mathes:

"William Alfred Mathes, started life as a farmer but soon turned his attention to a vocation better suited to his talents and temperament. He was at different times employed by the American Tract Society and American Bible Society, in which work he canvassed several counties in Tennessee and Arkansas. His education in youth was limited to the country schools, but he was a close student of the public. When about 60 it occurred to him that he ought to be a preacher of the gospel, but his education had not been directed in those channels required by the Presbyterian church. He decided to cast his lot with the Cumberland and was ordained in 1875. He preached wherever there was opportunity, sent appointments to small school houses, conducted protracted meetings and filled appointments for others. At the age of 67 he lost his wife, which left him entirely alone. He married a second time, Harriet Elizabeth Edgar. He had been in delicate health since early manhood, and now conceived the idea of building a chapel on his own land, where he could preach and hold Sunday school, and have others preach. This he did, using his own funds and overseeing the work in person. After a year the chapel was burned, which was a great grief to him, and he rebuilt it, notwithstanding the difficulties attending the enterprise. It was called "Mathes Chapel". He outlived all of his father's family. Strange that one apparently so frail could hang on to life so long and accomplish so much."

William Alfred Mathes, m. in 1837, Margaret Maria Hart, daughter of Edward Hart of Blount Co., and sister of Nancy Shanklin Hart, who married his brother, George Anderson Mathes.

1125. JAMES HARVEY MATHES, soldier and journalist, was born near Dandridge, Jefferson County, Tenn., June 29, 1841, son of Rev. William Alfred and Margaret M. (Hart) Mathes. He was educated at a neighboring academy at Westminster, and at the outbreak of the Civil War he was teaching a flourishing school and reading law in Atlanta. He returned to Tenn. and was elected captain of a company of Confederates, but later joined another company as a private, and was soon appointed Sergeant-Major of the 37th Tenn. Regiment, C.S.A., organized under Col. William H. Carroll at Knoxville, and in which he afterwards became Adjutant. He followed the fortunes of his regiment nearly all through the war, was frequently detached for special service and staff duty, was staff officer in Genl. Bates' Brigade and participated in some hard service. He was in many of the bloodiest engagements of the west, from Fishing Creek, Ky., Jan. 19, 1862 to the campaign from Dalton to Atlanta in 1864, and lost a leg and had a horse shot from under him, July 22, 1864, in front of Atlanta, Ga., which ended his active military career.

For some time previous to this he had corresponded for the Memphis Appeal, over the nom de plume of "Harvey," and after the surrender he regularly engaged in journalism in Memphis. In 1867 he was on the staff of the old Louisville "Courier"; a year later was with the Memphis Avalanche, and in 1869 became editor of the Memphis Public Ledger, which he ably conducted for twenty years, and in 1893 severed his connection with the press. He served two terms in the state legislature, attended various state and national Democratic conventions, traveled abroad several times, first as Commissioner appointed by Governor Marks of Tenn., to the Paris exposition in 1878; was elector on the Cleveland and Hendricks ticket. In 1902 he published a life of General Forrest. For twelve years was on the State Board of the University of Tenn., at Knoxville, and filled other positions of honor and trust. He was a Mason and member of Knights of Honor. He and his family were members of the Congregational church. He had an elegant home in a pleasant residence part of Memphis. He was collecting material for a Mathes history, but did not complete it.

James Harvey Mathes m., Dec. 2, 1868, Mildred Spottwood Cash, daughter of Col. Benjamin Cash of N. C., who on her mother's side came of old Virginia families. She has been widely known as State Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and was made honorary Vice-President General for life, an unusual honor. In 1893 she was prominent as one of the principal movers of the work of the Womans' Building at the Nashville Centennial Exposition. The U. D. C. in Memphis is named "The Harvey Mathes Chapter.

Mrs. Mildred S. Mathes was the daughter of Benjamin Cash and Mildred Spottwood Dandridge, granddaughter of Robert Allen Dandridge and Ann Overton Goodwin, great granddaughter of Robert Ambler Dandridge and Mildred Aylett Allen. The Dandriddles were related to Martha Washington and one of the family married a daughter of Governor Spottwood, of Va., brother-in-law to Patrick Henry.

He moved to Texas and in 1882 was elected county attorney, served one year, and quit practice on account of throat trouble. He then went to San Antonio, Texas and engaged in the insurance business.

1131. NATHANIEL BEECHER MATHES was born near Dandridge, Jefferson Co., Tenn. Was educated at Mt. Horeb under the instruction of Samuel Anderson and Dr. Zirkle, and at Maurey Academy, Dandridge. He later became associate principal of the latter school. He never permitted anything to hinder that upon which his heart was set—a thorough education. After the death of his mother he determined to try his fortune in other states, and taught school in Arkansas and Illinois, doing farm work in summer. His parents wished him to be a minister, but he at first had no inclination in that direction, at one time deciding to become a doctor and at another a lawyer. About 1884 he returned to Tennessee and entered the University at Clarksville, under the care of the Presbytery, where he completed the academic and theological course, teaching vocal music during vacations. He completed his course in 1888 and took charge of the West End church, Atlanta, Georgia, where he remained for seven years, then in 1895 took charge of a church in Clayton Co., Ga.

His brother, Edward H. Mathes, said of him, "Like Samuel of old, he was pious from his youth up."

He m. Cora Blanche Clarke, of Atlanta, Georgia, July 29, 1893. They now live in Jonesboro, Georgia, where Mrs. Mathes is a very successful teacher and is active in church and civic affairs, is a member of the Eastern Star chapter, and during the World War had charge of the activities of the Red Cross.

4. JEREMIAH MATHESES emigrated from Virginia with his brothers, stopping for awhile in Washington County, Tenn. Later he went to Jefferson County, settling near Dandridge. The first court held in Jefferson County was held at his house, in regard to which Ramsey's History of Tennessee gives the following:

"June 11, 1792, an ordinance was passed at Knoxville laying off two new counties, Knox and Jefferson. Courts of Common Pleas and Quarter Sessions were ordained to be held in the two counties thus laid off; for the County of Jefferson at the house of Jeremiah Mathes. July 22, 1793, the first court was held. It met at the house of Jeremiah Mathes (now Reuben Zirkle's) four and a half miles west of Dandridge, near the river. The magistrates had been commissioned and qualified. The following named gentlemen appeared and took their seats: Alexander Outlaw, George Doherty, James Roddy, John Blackburn, James Lea, Josiah Wilson. Josiah Jackson, Andrew Henderson, Amos Balch and William Cox. James Hamilton was commissioned clerk, Robert McFarland, sheriff, James Roddy, register.

This house was still standing and in a good state of preservation, in 1906, when visited by Edward Hart Mathes. Jeremiah Mathes died a few miles west of Dandridge. He married, and had a daughter, who married Col. Dougherty.
6. Mathes, the only daughter of the original George Mathews, the emigrant, married John Nelson.
