This is a verbatim typed copy of the small book on the Payne Family which is out of print. I made it for use in my files as I had so much material in my County Record files on the Paynes and was constantly running into this name in working on the families of the Northern Neck of Virginia in which section I have more or less specialized for many years.

Capt. John Smith's History of the Colony of Virginia says:

"Three brothers, Sir Robert, John, and William Payne came over to the Colony, in the 'Second Supply', under Governor Yeardley, A.D. 1620. Sir Robert, who was a member of the 'London Charter Company' returned after having settled his brothers on Chartered Lands. John settled in the 'Northern Neck'.

(See note 1. of appendix)

W.W. Payne, Esq., of Warrenton, Virginia, says: "The Payne family is of great antiquity and of Norman-English descent. The cradle of the family was in Normandy, France; in the 10th century the Paynes Seigneurs were resident in and around St. Lo; the Paynes of England deduce their descent from these Norman Lords".

Hayden says: "Sir Robert Payne had two brothers, William and John, who from England immigrated to America...etc.

John Woodville Payne of Estill Springs, Tenn., says: "Three brothers of excellent English stock emigrated to America from England in 1619. They were Sir Robert, William, and John Payne. Sir Robert returned to England, William settled near Jamestown, page 4. John settled in what is known as the 'Northern Neck' of Virginia, extending from Northumberland on the bay to the counties of Fauquier, Fairfax, and Culpeper Counties".
Payne Family p. 4.

... There is a colonial record that Sir Robert Payne came to America from England, but no family. His name is recorded as a trustee in the Church of Essex, Gloucester County, Va.

"The Payne family is a very ancient one of England" says Mr John J. Woodville Payne of Estill Springs Tenn.) and the name is recorded in the Domesday Book, a register made by William the Conqueror in 1081, containing a survey of all the lands in the kingdom, the value, etc. In Bailey's old English Dictionary the name is derived from the French 'Payen, a heathen or pagan. Honorable mention is made of the family in the Country Gentry of England". Genealogy of the Payne Family, by Albert Paine of Maine, says: "At first the name was Paganus, then Pagan- Pagen-- Payne-- Paine, all being corruptions of the original name with the rather uncomplimentary meaning heathen. Although spelling their names differently all the Paynes are of the same family. The first ancestor we have the surname of is Hugh de Paen, who went with his friend Robert on the Crusades to the Holy Land. Hugh's father was inseparable from William the Conqueror, and the friendship begun by them was continued by their sons Robert and Hugh. During this expedition Hugh acquired fame and the title to knighthood by his prowess and skill.
At the termination of the Crusades, Hugh, with a friend, instituted an order known as 'Templars of the Cross' the sole object of which was to further the great object of the Crusaders' mission, by protecting the Holy Places and rendering safe the journey of all pilgrims to the holy shrine. The original organization had only nine members, but soon assumed colossal proportions.

Col. William Payne, who died about 1800, served in the Continental Army, and was one of President Washington's pall bearers.

John Payne and William Payne, brothers of Sir Robert Payne, came over to America in 1620. They were knighted by King James I. before leaving England, and were specially mentioned by James the first in the first land charter granted to a company, May 23, 1609.

The Paynes were a powerful tribe in Wales; one part of the tribe were never willing to submit to the King of England. King James I., to conciliate them, gave them a special grant of land, 12 miles square, 12 or 15 miles from Alexandria Virginia, called the Payne Manor.

Sir John Payne settled in Fairfax County (that is what is now known as Fairfax Co.) on the manorial estate. (See note in the appendix K.C.G.)
Sir William Payne settled in Maryland near the town now called Leonardtown; he never married.

Robert Treat Paine, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, was of the same family. His ancestor having emigrated to France adopted the French style of spelling, and changed the Y to I.

In the latter part of the eighteenth century it was the custom of the gentry to assemble and nominate a candidate to the House of Burgesses. It was also understood that if the day was unfavorable they would defer the voting to the first suitable day.

The morning appointed for the meeting was cloudy but not raining. General (the Colonel) Washington, Lord Fairfax, and others did not attend, thinking there would be no meeting. Sir Edward Payne, William Payne and others met, and nominated Col, William Elzey.
...The other party being very much dissatisfied, met afterward and nominated Lord Fairfax. Party feeling ran very high. The day of the election, General Washington, Captain Spenser, William Payne Jr., and others were standing together talking; they were all very much excited. About noon it became evident that Lord Fairfax would be defeated. General Washington was engaged in a warm controversy with William Payne during which he made some reflections on Mr. Payne's integrity. William Payne immediately seixed a a walking cane of Captain Spenser held in his hand and laying his left hand on the shoulder of Captain Spenser, he sprang up and knocked General Washington down. Friends interposed and separated them. The next day General Washington sent Mr. Payne a note requesting him to meet him at Eagle Tavern, Alexandria, Va. at a certain hour. Mr. Payne went with the expectation of fighting a duel. General Washington met Mr. Payne at the door of the tavern and extending his hand he said: "Mr. Payne, I was wrong yesterday; I wish to be right today. You had some little satisfaction; if you are content with it I would like to bury the past over a bottle of wine with you." Some years afterwards General Washington invited Mr. Payne to visit him at Mount Vernon and he accepted the invitation.
The General received Mr. Payne at the door and ushering him into his wife's presence said: "My dear, this is the little gentleman who had the courage to knock me down, big as I am."

Payne of St. Christopher's (Bart) of an ancient Devonshire family, son of Stephen Payne of St Christopher, member of council in that island, and supporter of Charles I. during the civil war fled from England after the battle of Worcester, and settled in the Island of St. Christopher.

He had issue (with other issue) two sons:

1st Abraham Payne was ancestor of the deceased Lord Lavington and of Gen. Sir William Payne created baronet in 1712 when he took the name of Galloway.

Asa Smith m. Ann Woodson THOMSON

General Gustavus Woodson Smith stated in Nov. 1895, that he had been told many times by his grandfather, Rodes Smith of his, Rodes Smith's belonging to the REVOLUTIONARY ARMY, and that as a boy of fifteen years of age being at the surrender of Cornwallis.

Garland Smith was a practical joker; walking home from town one day with a side of sole leather over his shoulder, he espied a boy coming with a sack of meal on a horse. Garland stepped behind a tree and as the boy came by dropped the roll of leather. The mare jumped of course, spilling the boy and bag. The boy said, "Now Garland, you knewed the mare war skeery".

End.
