Honored in fellowship
Cherished in Memory

Mr. Good was a long-time resident of Dayton, Va., but had moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, shortly before his death, which occurred in that city at the age of 78. His son Carter is on the faculty of the University of Cincinnati and his daughter Virginia has for some years been a teacher in the Cincinnati schools. His son Warren is connected with the University of Michigan. Mr. Good himself was a teacher for many years in the schools of Rockingham County. In 1910 or 1911 he compiled “Songs of the People,” published by the Ruesch-Kieffer Company of Dayton. This work, made up of various state songs and other favorites, has had a wide circulation, especially in the schools of Virginia.

Katherine Seymour Paul, eldest child of Judge John Paul, Sr., and his wife, Katherine Green Paul, was born in Harrisonburg in 1876; lived in Lexington after her marriage to Capt. Greenlee D. Letcher, lawyer, youngest son of John Letcher, war governor of Virginia. She is survived by her husband and a son, Col. John S. Letcher; a sister, Mrs. J. H. Flynn of Pittsburgh, and two brothers, Judge John Paul, Jr., of Harrisonburg, and Seymour Paul of the Panama Canal Zone.

Mr. Showalter died at his home in West Milton, Ohio, at the advanced age of 83. He was a native of Rockingham County, Va., third son and fifth child of John A. and Susannah Miller Showalter. His father was a well-known singer and teacher of singing classes; his brother, A. J. Showalter, was a distinguished teacher and composer, head of large publishing houses in the southern states. Another brother, J. M. Showalter, still living in Rockingham, is also a musician. J. Henry Showalter wrote many popular songs for church and Sunday-school and published 40 or more music books.

ROCKINGHAM RECOLLECTIONS, 1874 AND LATER

The following interesting story was written for the Recorder by James O. Myers, a Rockingham native, who for many years has been a resident and large landowner of Canada. He located in Saskatchewan in 1896, but for some time past has made his home in the city of Vancouver. He is an older brother of John C. Myers, superintendent of Rockingham public schools.

As a boy I lived on a farm on the Valley Turnpike, two miles north of Mt. Crawford, Rockingham County, Virginia. Our house was on a terrace about a dozen yards from the pike. The terrace was faced with a stone wall, on top of which was a low picket fence. Here was a safe grandstand view for a small lad beginning to notice things on the outside and there was much to be seen on the old pike in those days. Harrisonburg was then the southern terminus of the Valley Railroad and passengers, mail and freight moved by horse drawn vehicles by our farm between Harrisonburg and Staunton.

The four-horse stage coach on regular schedule carried passengers, mail and express. Most of the freight was hauled in heavy covered wagons drawn by six horses with brass bells on their hames. Their musical chimes carried well and brought little folks from play. Even the circuses moved under their own horse power.

I well remember the caravan of Old John Robinson’s “Greatest Show on earth,” with all their equipment, caged animals, sleeping coaches, and in the rear big elephants shuffling along in the dim light of the summer night to show in Staunton next day.

Abe (a colored boy who lived with us), an expert on circuses, saw it to that I got out of bed in time to see this night parade.

In the fall droves of cattle, driven in separate bands by men on foot, would be passing our place for hours and hours from the grazing lands of West Virginia on toward Harrisonburg, to be distributed to the feed lots of Valley farmers. This was the day of the old toll gates, with their long poles extending out over the pike at a threatening angle for all travelers to see and heed. When Father drove past toll gates without stopping to pay his toll my young head figured that he must be a very important man, but later I learned he paid the quarter. People traveled on foot; many were foreigners with strange clothes and speech and musical instruments, organ grinders and their trained monkeys.

Mother, always busy, bothered with canvassers, peddlers, fols wanting something to eat or drink, would say, "This house is too close to the pike." I knew she was right, but it did not prevent me from enjoying the parade that passed by; and from the wall by the front yard I had my first glimpses of the outside world.

Mr. Kemper, the Superintendent of the Valley Turnpike Company, lived in Winchester. No modern railroad magnate inspected his right of way with more swankiness, than Mr. Kemper when he rolled by in his shining omnibus drawn by six prancing white horses in gleaming harness, guided by the skilled hand of a veteran stage driver, hero to all youngsters. Through the broad windows the white-bearded superintendent could be seen with his assistant and black man. Most men wore whiskers then, no particular style, short and bushy, wide and wavy, long and pointed.

Prominent citizens wore stove-pipe hats and long black coats, rode or drove sleek horses.

I shall always remember Mr. Andrew Shutters, merchant of Mt. Crawford, a middle aged portly bachelor. He came along the pike frequently behind a span of bays in open top buggy, the seat of which he filled. He wore a long, black coat, flowered vest, high silk hat, wing collar and expensive gauntlets. He greeted all, but to the ladies that silk hat was raised with such graceful, elegant flourish that he stands out in my memory as a most colorful figure. I always liked to visit his store with Mother. He was all bows and smiles and always gave me a stick of red striped candy out of his big glass jar. I noted when I was in the store only with Father he was not so generous.

On the South Main Street in Harrisonburg the fine homes were set well back in spacious shaded lawns, their tall pillared porticos guarded by cast iron gray-hounds. On the street the wooden Indian offered you cigars in front of tobacco stores. If thirsty you went to the big covered spring on Court House Square, down limestone steps, and drank cold water from an iron dipper, fastened to the wall with chain. Melon vendors were busy on August Court, as everyone ate water melons around the Court House and left rinds on the grass.

There were no banks in Harrisonburg. A few years later Mr. L. C. Myers opened the First National Bank, north of the square and worked in one small room over a plain pine counter. Hon. John T. Harris was our Member of Congress.

I was old enough for school in the fall of 1874, so one morning with lunch pail and slate, McGuffey First Reader and Webster Speller, I got up behind Father on old "Jim." We left the pike near home and turned west on Dayton road between zigzag rail fences. The road was narrow and bumpy. We passed the homes of E. Pence on right and Fred Ritchie on left and soon came to Ed. Shifflett’s blacksmith shop, at edge of woods, then a mile through oak woods to clearing of several fields to right where lived Mr. Hale, close to Harmony School. I got off on a slab that leaned against the fence. Father talked to the teacher, Mr. Abe Sager, a few minutes and I was left with the bunch of youngsters, most of them strangers.

Harmony was a small log school house, rough inside as well as outside, had some large home-made desks, balance plain benches, shelves for lunch pails, pegs for coats and hats. My first lesson in McGuffey’s First Reader was a picture of a fat farm animal and the three lines—

Is it an ox?

It is an ox.

It is a fat ox.

I was not sure of the meaning of the word, but it was an easy one and I was satisfied. I had learned my letters and simple words at home and I thought school was going to be a snap, so I listened to the older classes reading the delightful stories in the McGuffey’s Series and reciting the multiplication tables, etc.

At noon we small boys played in the woods across the road, gathering armfuls of oak leaves in fence corner. After gathering a huge pile we climbed on the fence and jumped in. The older boys played “Two-Cornered Cat,” and the girls with their own games played behind the school house. When the noon hour was up the teacher came to the door and called out the word, “Books.” The word was repeated all around the school and we filed in. Later the teacher had a small hand bell which he rang from the doorway, but the clearer tone of the bell sounded as doleful as “Books” when it terminated some interesting game. I liked school and walked the two miles morning and night. On very bad evenings Father came for me on a horse. After fall work was done on the farms the older boys and girls came in and the schoolroom was filled. I had to give up my big desk and sit with others on a bench along the wall and put my books on a shelf behind. I attended a month’s summer school at Harmony with Miss Eliza Shaver as teacher. The following winter J. S. Funk was our teacher. These are the family names that patronized Harmony School: Shifflett, Suter, Ritchie, Wright, Hale, Kizer, Florly, Miller, Shank, Early, Wenger, Kirikoff, Bird and Pence.

We moved to Broadway early in March 1876 and I finished the session at the Seminary under Zachariah Samuels. He was an elderly man and very eccentric and not well suited for small children. The “Old Seminary” was a half mile south of Broadway and was a larger and more comfortable frame building, sided with up and down boards and battens plastered and ceiled inside, had ample desks and room for classes, blackboards and maps of the world. In the front yard four tall walnut trees formed a large square; behind the school were some acres of a thick growth of cedars, hence the name, "Cedar Grove Seminary." At the foot of the play ground was a stone blacksmith shop (still standing) run by Andy Crist and Wallace Minnick. It was the ambition of young ball players to knock the ball over the shop and score a home run.

John Cootes taught the next session at the Seminary and was married to a Miss Reed during winter holidays. Miss Mary Jane Wood was our next teacher and John W. Frazer presided at the Seminary the next two sessions. Here is a list of names of those attending school at the Seminary: Kline, Bowman, Shank, Pennybacker, Rhodes, Zigler, Sites, Spitzer, Crist, Myers; and from Broadway: Alexander, Wilson, Flick, Kennedy, Sullivan, Westcott.

Going to school one morning, Mr. John J. Bowman, then an elderly man, walking along to the mill said, "You are going to school by my place; fifty years ago it was the other way round. I went up by your farm to school, mostly through woods, in a little log house behind the Shaver home." That would have been about the year 1830. Mr. Bowman was born and raised at the old Bowman home several hundred yards up the Creek from the present mill, home of David C. Cline, when I was a boy. The original old Bowman Mill was still standing in 1876, a huge log structure, three stories high, built in pioneer days and demolished in 1877.

Besides a grist mill, it contained heavy machinery for pressing flax seed; also wool and flax fiber machinery. In the yard was a cider and sorghum mill, and an old up and down saw mill used a few years by David Cline. As a boy I was much interested in this unique machine. The water wheel was of under shot type with a strong crank that operated the saw when the gate was lifted at the bottom of the flume. There was a roar of rushing water playing on the wheel and the large frame that contained the saw raised and lowered with a slow uneven gait, but with a sense of much concentrated power. David Cline used to laugh when he said he could eat his supper while the saw sliced off one board. It soon fell in disrepair and went the way of the old mill.

Many children were coming of school age west of Linville Creek. The old wire bridge and railroad track were a menace to small children on foot. In 1881 Lone Oak School was built about a mile and a quarter southwest of the old Seminary. Medford Spitzer laid the stone foundation work. Abe and Joe Rhodes were the carpenters and Miss Etta Miller was the first teacher. Dick Ashby taught the next winter and followed the old custom of boarding around among the pat-
Many will remember "The Old Oaken Bucket," "Lazy Ned," or "The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck." Most of the clothing was made at home and foot wear at local shoemakers. Boys wore cowhide top boots and any one passing by on the road would know classes were changing by the tramp of those heavy boots. Proud was the youngster when he could step out in his first pair of red top boots. Like today the most popular game at school was ball. The favorite was "Round Town." Other ball games were "Andy Over," "Bull Pen," and "Cat Ball," "Prisoner's Base," marbles, racing and jumping were other games.

One winter at Lone Oak stilts came suddenly. Boys and some girls went to school on stilts. They wanted to see how high they could walk above the ground. Some morning a new record was set only to be broken in a few days by a more venturesome lad, who had to take off from the top of a fence. The high stilts became shaky and wobbly. After a bad crash or two the fad ended as suddenly as it had started.

The first snow was a delight to youngsters. Hammer and saw were heard in barn or woodshed putting together various kinds of sleds, hoping for a hard crust and fast coasting on the hill. Favorite among the older boys was the "Yankee Jumper." With a few nails, some small bolts, odds and ends of lumber, two handy boys could turn one out in half a day and evening. The first essentials were two long slim poles from the woods—white-oak or hickory. These were the runners. The seat was built on the heavy ends. Just forward the poles were shaved small and bent upward for the shafts. With a lively horse and a bell or two a couple of boys could go places. They were fine over fields, through grass or stubble, after light snow fall, and on the road where expensive cutters would hit the bumps or sink in soft places the jumper would glide over without a jar. What it lacked in style it made up in speed and comfort.

During my first school days I used to hear from older boys some terrible yarns how certain teachers would thrash pupils. As was the custom, my teachers kept some light switches on hand. They usually snapped with the first whack over a heavy coat, raised some dust, a little excitement, but no damage. But offenders were often kept in after school hours and when questioned next day about the only answer was a grin.

Country school buildings were used for all neighborhood meetings and entertainments. There was no dancing. Young folks got together often for singings and spelling matches. Mr. John A. Showalter taught singing throughout the district, usually on Saturday afternoon, then singings Sunday afternoon or evening; often supported by one of his sons, all of whom were talented musicians. There were singings by local leaders, S. R. Kline, J. P. Miller and others. I heard Timothy Funk on several occasions. A spelling match was a welcome event in the neighborhood. If not too far, every one walked. If in some outlying district, two or more would meet and go horse back, many times through woods. Old fashioned tallow candles would be lit and hung on the wall in their tin-back holders as folks began to arrive. There was much laughter and gaiety. Girls would look their best with hair fixed up. Boys would don their Sunday ties and there was a hum of sociability. Two captains would choose sides and the match would be under way. After an hour or two of spelling a new champion may emerge. Again there is much laughter and talking, finding out where the next match will be. Candles are dying down, some flickering, others out. All go out into the night to horses left tied to the school yard fence. Usually they are just as you left them. In mounting you find one saddle stirrup too long. That is soon fixed. All ride off into the night, and Virginia nights can get dark; with the road back through the woods, the black-out is complete. No friendly headlight, but the horse can see and take you home, as an extra feed and warm stall awaits him.

Some of the outlying schools where singing and spelling matches were attended were these: Bush Valley, Wampler's, Newtown and Shirley's. Union and the Seminary, which were about the center of this group, seemed to excel in meetings of all kinds, with singings, spelling bees and Sunday Schools.

There were debating clubs, discussing such questions as, "The pen is mightier than the sword"; "A dog is more protection to man than his gun"; "The beauties of nature are more pleasing to the eye than the works of art." Gaiety of the country side flowed freely and the humor was robust. Pranks at times, crude, were harmless.

Boys, returning rather late, were passing a country store, found it closed, halloed! The storekeeper, always looking for business, opened his bedroom window, was asked if he kept good cigars? "O, yea indeed" he replied. "Why keep them? Why don't you sell them" was the rejoinder as the boys rode off.

I recall to mind many old names and places up and down Linville Creek, the banks well screened with willows, ideal for swimming in summer, skating in winter, and at times good fishing; drives on the hot dusty, crowded back road on Sunday bound for camp meeting at Cherry Grove.

In the fall folks drove long distances from adjoining counties to attend big meetings at the "Old Creek Church," and put up with friends for the night. The old revival meetings in Broadway, the impassioned sermons and wonderful singing; when old folks rode in rock-a-ways, the family in a spring wagon, the young folks horse back.

    I have jotted down some memories of school days in Rockingham. Later when I read that the "Little Red School House" was a great United States institution, the bulwark of liberty and freedom in America, I felt that I had really missed something.

    The fortunate youngsters of the "Little Red School House" lived in the more prosperous North and West. My first school days in Rockingham were in the period of reconstruction in the South and there was no red paint or paint of any other color for the country school. No doubt the plain unpainted school played its part.

1. The Myers homestead was the second one on the Pike northeast of Mt. Crawford, the first one being the Roller place where the road crosses Cook's Creek. Both are on the northwest side of the Pike, now U. S. Route 11. Just northeast of the Myers house a road leaves the Pike and runs across the hills in a northwest course, passing the site of old Harmony school house. Further on it crosses Cook's Creek and after passing over another hill enters the Harrisonburg and Warm Springs Turnpike a short distance northeast of Bridgewater at the point where a large frame church formerly stood. The Myers place is somewhat less than two miles from Mt. Crawford.

2. For a chapter on the banks of Harrisonburg and others in Rockingham County, see Wayland's History of Rockingham (1912), pages 387-399. For many years, beginning in 1888, Mr. L. C. Myers was cashier of the First National Bank, Harrisonburg. It had been in operation for a number of years prior to that date.

GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT

On September 1, 1947, Mrs. Edwin A. Hering of Harrisonburg sent the Society her check for ten dollars to be used as the Executive Committee deems most appropriate in forwarding the work and objectives of the Society. This timely gift is sincerely appreciated and will be handled with due consideration. Mrs. Hering for years has been president of the Turner Ashby Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, is a charter member and trustee of our Society, and has been most active and successful in enlisting the interest of her friends in the work of the Society and in adding to its membership. She has a deep and abiding interest in local history as well as in everything that pertains to the War Between the States and the notable men and women connected therewith.

BOB RUSSELL’S SCHOOL REPORTS

Recently Mr. Robert E. L. Russell of Baltimore has presented to the Society a number of old school report cards, mounted on stout sheets of uniform size and bound in a handsome book cover. These cards are printed forms on which Bob’s scholastic grades in the Harrisonburg Graded School from 1885 to 1891 are reported. They were preserved by Bob’s mother, Mrs. Louella Gaines Russell. For the first couple of years the principals signing the reports were W. W. Robertson and C. E. Kregloe, in this order; then for most of the time the cards were signed only by the teachers; but the last one is signed by C. E. Barglehaugh, principal. The teachers signing, successively, from first to last, were the following: Fannie Conrad, Annie T. Shands, Gussie Patterson, E. Strayer, Mary L. Conrad, and Mary Chrisman. It may be remarked, incidentally, that Bob’s grades were excellent.

A WORD TO RESEARCHERS

If you are in need of atlases, local or family histories, write the Rockingham County Historical Society, Harrisonburg, Va. We can probably aid you in procuring atlases of Augusta, Page, Rockingham, and Shenandoah, histories of these and other counties, and family histories of the Beerises, Bownaas, Funkes, Harisons, Lincolns, Stricklers, Washingtons, Wengers, and other families.

The address of Mrs. Nela Raines Mower has recently been changed from 1955 Benedict Circle, St. Albans, W. Va., to 1631½ E. Washington Street, Charleston, W. Va.

Mrs. John B. Ray, in a communication of November 11, 1947, gave her address as 2316 W. 17th Street, Wilmington, Del. It was formerly 3211 Van Buren Street, in the same city.

YANKTON IN SHENANDOAH

By W. O. Mowbray

About the year 1880 a satellite of one of the New England constellations of stars dropped into the town of Broadway, Rockingham County, Virginia, from the little state of Connecticut. His name was E. D. Root and subsequent events proved that he was a valuable asset to any community in which he chose to cast his lot. It soon became whispered around at women's afternoon teas, at men's business meetings, and by street corner sages that this Mr. Root was worth a million dollars and was looking for an investment. Excitement soon reached fever heat and many were the dreams of great industries and sudden and fabulous wealth of the citizens.

Four miles to the west of Broadway is Cookes Store, located at a great water gap where the North Fork of the Shenandoah breaks through North Mountain. This is one of the points designated as the site of one of the Great Power Dams—a contributing cause of nightmares to Senator Norris—and is a gateway to the National Forest area of Virginia. Inside the gateway is a great stretch of arable region known as Brocks Gap. At the date of the advent of Mr. Root, much of it was covered by virgin forest. Thither he wended his way and purchased thousands of acres of forest land. His next step was the founding of the town of Yankton by settlers from his native state of Connecticut. Prominent among these settlers were Austin Hyde, Dr. Cluteur and Capt. Hall, who was a polished English gentleman of rank.

Mr. Root built a palatial residence in Broadway and established a weekly newspaper "The Broadway Enterprise" with Capt. Hall as manager. Soon an army of woodmen were put to work transforming the forest into building material. Transporting the finished product a distance of ten miles on horse-drawn vehicles over dirt roads was a stupendous task and contributed in a large measure to the final collapse of the undertaking. Today a magnificent highway connects the town of Broadway with her sister town of Petersburg, W. Va. The depopulated lumber town of Yankton, near by the highway, has fallen into decay, whilst U. S. Forest Rangers from their observation towers, keep vigil over the ashes of the dreams of a man of vision and wealth. And yet a certain school of philosophers will attempt to demonstrate to the world that there is no such thing as "luck."

The great financial panic of 1893 came with terrific force and Mr. Root's business enterprises were caught in the vortex of the financial under-current. The wheels of industry creaked on their spindles, slowed down gradually and then come to a standstill. Mr. Root collected a few of the fragmentary remains of his fortune and located in another section of the state. Austin Hyde who had married a lady of one of the First Families of Va. (F.F.V.), a daughter of Dr. John Cootes, returned to his native state of Connecticut with his family and after his death a few years later, his widow and children returned to Virginia. Capt. Hall located elsewhere and finis was written upon the story of the Yankton Empire in Virginia.

A ROYAL GRANT

On June 29, 1947, Mr. A. C. Finter of Stanley, Va., a charter member of the Society, made a gift of the royal grant, nicely framed, issued on May 12, 1759, to Valentine Sevier, for 290 acres in Long Meadows, then in Augusta County, now in Rockingham. The grant is signed by Francis Fauquier and was issued under authority of King George II. The boundaries of the tract are described as follows: “Beginning at three pines Corner to Thomas Moors Land on the north side of the north Fork of the long Meadow and running thence south thirty eight Degrees West Two hundred and seventy six poles to Two pines and south Eleven Degrees East two hundred & Eighty poles to a Black oak on the Top of a Ridge North Twenty two Degrees East four hundred and sixty five Poles to or near a line of Thomas Moors Land and North West eighty poles to the Beginning.”

The consideration was a small sum of money, indistinct, and “the importation of four persons to Dwell within this our said Colony and Dominion whose names are William Fults, Barnaby Cahil, Margaret Clan, and Isabella Gibbons.”

The first name may be William Fuller, the third Margaret Clore, or something else. The other two are plain, as given above.

Several years prior to 1759 Valentine Sevier (his name is spelled Sevear in the grant) had established a tavern on the main trail at or near the site of the present village of Tenth Legion. The tract herein conveyed to him was two or three miles northwest in the Long Meadows, at or near his old home, where his son John, later famous, had been born in 1745.

A member of the Society has suggested that house-owners or householders who know the history of the houses they occupy, particularly old houses, write down the facts relating to them and file the manuscripts with the Society. Manuscripts of this character, carefully compiled, will prove of much interest and value, more so as time passes. The exact location of the house, who built it, when, size, of what materials constructed, and the names of the families who have occupied it, with dates as nearly as may be ascertained, together with any incidents of special interest associated with the place, should be given.

If the house has any unusual features, for example, a cellar that is arched over with masonry, or is over a spring, or was originally connected by means of an underground or artificially covered passage with a spring or well, the information should be included.

THE VIRGINIA CLIPPER

The indefatigable chairman of our acquisition committee some time ago secured a copy of a publication with the above title, supposed to be a weekly newspaper, “devoted to the financial interests of the people.” It is Vol. I, No. 1 and is dated Saturday, November 2, 1895. The place of publication is given as Timberville, Virginia, and Philip Strickler is named as the “Prop.” Each of the four pages is 15 by 22 inches in size. It was obviously issued as a Populist organ and was probably printed in some large city; if printed at Timberville it was made up almost entirely of plate matter. It contains no local news, and the only local advertisement is one of Philip Strickler’s “Quids,” recommended to cure the tobacco habit and as a general tonic. The item next approaching a local advertisement is a time table of the B. & O. Railroad between Lexington, Va., and New York City. If any one knows of another copy of this publication he will confer a favor by communicating the information to this Society.

THE SOCIETY INCORPORATED

Since the preceding number of the Recorder (Vol. I, No. 2) was issued the Society has been granted a charter of incorporation in due and legal form under the laws of Virginia. The application, prepared by Mrs. Ethel Irwin Lineweaver, was approved by W. V. Ford, Judge of the Circuit Court of Rockingham County, and forwarded to Richmond where it was acted upon favorably by the State Corporation Commission. The articles of incorporation, including the by-laws of the Society, with a statement of its purposes and objectives, a list of its officers and committees (see the Recorder, Vol. I, No. 1, pages 4-10), and the names of its trustees are now of record in the Clerk’s Office of Rockingham County, in Harrisonburg.

The names and residences of the trustees are as follows: Harry A. Brunk, Harrisonburg; Fred D. Dove, Bridgewater; B. G. Heatwole, Elkton; Mrs. E. A. Hering, Harrisonburg; Mrs. Ethel Irwin Lineweaver, Harrisonburg; John C. Myers, Broadway; Page P. Price, Harrisonburg; Fred C. Wampler, Dayton; Mrs. James M. Weaver, Harrisonburg.

These trustees are authorized to act in their official capacity for the first years of the Society’s existence under its charter and thereafter until the election of their successors.

The benefits enjoyed by the Society under its charter of incorporation are obvious. Thus it has legal standing and a greater assurance of permanence and usefulness. Pertinent in these respects are the following paragraphs, quoted from the charter:

Under Purposes and Objectives:

“To acquire, own and hold any real estate and personal property for the advancement of any of said purposes and to do any and all other act or acts whether herein specified or not for the advancement of said purposes.”

Continuing Privileges:

“The period for the duration of the society is unlimited.”
Limited Holdings:

"The amount of real estate to which its holdings at any time are to be limited is one thousand (1000) acres."

To the Society at present, oppressed with a sense of poverty, the provision for possible wealth in the future seems liberal—almost lavish; yet, among our dreamers are those who believe that a time will come when we shall have a local habitation as well as a name. Already we have valuable personal effects, which we are guarding as well as we can in the confident expectation that more ample and permanent quarters will be available in the not distant future. The Turner Ashby Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, is generously sharing with us their room in the county-city court house; the Board of Supervisors has indicated a willingness to aid us further when possible; we believe that the City Fathers are not unmindful of the Society's service to the community; and, with our rapidly growing membership at home and abroad, we are expecting that benefactors will be found. Now that we have legal standing and a board of trustees authorized to receive and hold real estate as well as personal property, it may be that persons of means who are in sympathy with our patriotic aims will endow the Society by deed, will, or otherwise.
