Included here are abstracts or transcriptions of most of the Virginia colony-wide records that document ALLENs as Virginia immigrants or land owners. Not included are items from any of the county records.

Principally, this is a compilation of abstracts of all the ALLEN land owners in the 1704 quit rent rolls (the only year for which these are complete), and of all the Virginia patents in which the surname ALLEN appears—through Oct1666 for ALLEN headright immigrants, and through 1732 for ALLEN land owners. I have compiled most of these patent abstracts these directly from digitized images of the original documents, online at the Library of Virginia, but I have relied on the every-name indexes to the first three volumes of Cavaliers & Pioneers to locate the original records.

The patent abstracts are sorted two ways: (1) in chronological order by date of the patent; and (2) Chronologically within ALLEN given name.

I have also extracted from published transcriptions all the ALLENs who appear in the two other early colony-wide sources that I know of: the muster rolls of 1623-1625, and the passenger manifests of 1635.

I urge everyone who intends to use this data to first read my introduction and prefatory material, which begins on the next page, and the sectional head notes, embedded notes, and source notes scattered throughout the report. For those who have already digested this material, I provide the following hyperlinked table of contents to the specific sections of this report:

The Pattern of Early Virginia Settlement

Virginia throughout its colonial history, was an affair of local population enclaves, chopped into shires in 1634, and then into counties, all hugging the coast or huddled around the inlets of several major tidewater rivers. Transportation, except what could be covered on foot or horseback via wretched roads and bridle trails, was by water.

From north to south, these tidewater rivers were, the Potomac, the Rappahannock, the York (which forked upstream into the Mattiponi, and the Pamunkey Rivers), and the James with its north fork, being the Chickahominy River. Elsewhere, settlement was sparse and scattered. As these initial areas began to fill up, further settlement most followed the rivers upstream, and it wasn't until the 1720s and beyond that settlers hungry for cheap unoccupied land began to make the leap overland to the Piedmont and Southside counties, and into North Carolina. As a reflection of this pattern, most of the Virginia Patents up to the time of the 1704 Quit Rent rolls and beyond, into the 1720s, make reference to one or the other of these major rivers, as well as to the counties that they fall within.

Economically, above the level of bare subsistence, the whole colony was utterly dependent on a few staple crops for which there was a demand back in Britain—chiefly tobacco, which, in view of the scarcity of specie, soon became the principal currency of early Virginia. [1]

Immigration Into Virginia

It has been estimated that as many as 75% of colonial Virginia immigrants were brought in by others as indentured servants, committed to serving out a 4-5 year term of labor service that, while it lasted, was tantamount to slavery. Servants were overwhelmingly male (about 3.5 to 1), about two thirds of them aged 18-29, and although most of them were put to work in the tobacco fields, the majority of them possessed skills as farmers or artisans, and as a group they were best described as lower to lower middle class. The were shipped out from the ports of London, Bristol, and Liverpool, the latter serving as the port of embarkation for a large contingent from Ireland. The largest group probably came from London and environs, and the Bristol group came from all parts of southwest England. There were also several other lesser ports in the Southwest, such as Plymouth and Weymouth, so that overall the southwest of England was disproportionately represented, though one contemporary observer noted that London speech patterns were prevalent in Virginia. [2]

Judging by the headright patents, emigration to Virginia was heavily bunched in the period 1650-1674, although it picked up somewhat from 1682-1684, 1690-1691, and 1695-1696. [3]

Prior to 1700 a small percentage of these transportees were convicted felons, deported to a 7-14 year term of indentured servitude in lieu of hanging, although most of their convictions were for petty offenses. From 1717 until the time of the Revolution, convicted felons may have constituted as much as 30% of the [1] On page 4 of the MILLERS book, we read that "Richard Allen was mentioned frequently in St. Peter’s Parish vestry book for various reasons. In 1708, he and Mr. William Waddill were ‘allowed expenses for going to town, two journeys, 100 pounds each...’. About that time Mr. Richard Allen was paid 90 pounds for three bottles of wine".

The official currency was denominated in Virginia pounds, shillings, and pence, or (less often) in English sterling) but it should be obvious that Richard wasn’t paid £30 per bottle of wine: that would be the equivalent of about $4,000 in today’s currency. These and other ordinary transactions were denominated in pounds of "tobacco in cask", meaning cured, processed, and ready for shipping to Britain. The only other staple cash crop of any consequence for the first hundred years or so was hemp—always in demand by the English Navy, for rope making.

influx to Virginia, although a fair proportion of these were convicted rebels or traitors from the Scottish Catholic risings.\textsuperscript{[4]}

Tracing indentured servants back to England is extremely challenging, but it’s not quite hopeless. There are scattered records back in England documenting some of this emigration activity, and many of these have been collected and published.\textsuperscript{[5]}

Virginia immigrants who were able to afford their own passage were usually also able to afford to become land owners, and of course they had a head start on this over the indentured servant class thanks to the headright system.

The cheap land that all Virginians craved was acquired before 1700 largely by virtue of “headrights”, entitling the bearer to stake out and patent 50a for each person whose passage he financed into the colony, including his own. These headrights, once certified by the colonial land office or the county courts, were not only the principal means of acquiring land (it could also be purchased, presumably marked up, from pre-existing land owners); headrights were also bought, sold and brokered (often by the ship’s captains), and they even functioned as a currency secondary to tobacco.

It wasn’t enough to own a headright, though: one also needed the capital and the labor to be able to clear enough of the land to erect a cabin,\textsuperscript{[6]} plant a subsistence garden, and pick up a bit of stock, and to be able to pay the annual quit rent on the land of 1 shilling per 50a (the equivalent in terms of today’s currency of about $100 per 50a, per year), plus whatever else in consumable supplies were required. To be able to comfortably afford the quit rent and other expenses, and to live on one’s land above the subsistence level, one either needed an artisanal skill to fall back on, or enough land and capital to grow and process merchantable tobacco or some other cash crop.

The next step up from petty planter was to become also a petty merchant—financing and wholesaling one’s own crop and those of neighbors to British-based factors, lending and borrowing money, and bartering some of one’s cash crop for goods imported from England that could be sold to one’s neighbors. Most of the great fortunes of “the First Families of Virginia” were built up on these kinds of activities scaled up by investing one’s profits in slave labor, large plantations, and shipping ventures, and/or by exploiting retained familial connections with merchants and merchant factors in Britain.

This was the path that all early Virginians aspired to—at least all those east of the Blue Ridge Mountain; when the Scotch-Irish and German settlers began to penetrate down into the wilderness of the Valley of Virginia in the 1730s, beyond the reach of any but local markets, other motives prevailed: the unhampered pursuit of their radical Protestant religion, and the ability to create a polity exactly suited to their temperaments and ethnicity; however, these westerners were aspiring land speculators too. But that was later, after the period I am focusing on here.

Most servants left little or no trace in the records for a number of reasons. For one thing, many of them died young from the harsh working conditions, inadequate nutrition, and exposure to insect-borne diseases of the insalubrious tidewater region, and those that survived and were able to marry, typically lacked the wherewithal to become land owners and upstanding citizens. Lacking property and means they weren’t the sort to generate debtor-creditor relationships during life, or probate records after death. The Kelly, Bound Away: Virginia and the Westward Movement (Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 2000), 54-58, and footnote 67 (on page 313) summarizes the various estimates. It would appear that a total of from 10-15,000 Virginia immigrants from 1717 on were convicts, and before that there had been a moderate but steady stream extending back to the 1620s.

few who were able to get enough together to pursue the dream of cheap land and plenty of it (which in many cases is what brought them to America) were likely to head for the frontiers of settlement—perhaps even down into the Carolinas, where they could squat and hunker down beyond the reach of the tax collector.

By and large, then, most of the surviving colonial records that are the principal resource of the genealogist researching Virginia—the colony land patent records, and the individual county probate, deed, and general court records, concerned “the betters” of the indentured servant class, not only the great families, but the middle class small holders, that together comprised perhaps 10% of the overall population, and as a result, the majority of genealogists who claim to have traced their ancestry back to Virginia immigrants have plugged themselves, with more or less justification, into one of the few land owning families that did leave a paper trail behind them.

A Few Notes on County Creation, plus Links

Charles River Shire (or County) was renamed York County abt Feb1642/3.

James City Shire (or County) and YorkCo spawned NewKentCo in 1654. King&QueenCo was created from NewKent in 1691, and HanoverCo was created from NewKent in 1721, though except for the patent records, most of the early records of both King&Queen and Hanover Cos are lost. Pretty much the only records that survive for either NewKent or HanoverCo are the parish records and vestry book of St.Peter’s Parish which covered all of NewKentCo until 1704, and the vestry book of St.Paul’s Parish which was created from St.Peter’s in 1704 for the western part of NewKentCo, and which was hived off to HanoverCo in 1721.

SurryCo was created from JamesCity Shire in 1652.

IsleOfWightCo was created as early as 1637, when it replaced Warrosquyoake shire by renaming.

BrunswickCo was created in 1721 from Surry and IsleOfWight Cos, though, except for the patents, it’s independent records don’t begin until 1733.

Northumberland Co was the name given about 1645 to all the unsettled VA territories which fell outside the original 8 shires, thus it was technically the ancestor of the majority of modern VA counties. Northumberland and York Cos together gave birth to LancasterCo in Jan1651/2, and Northumberland hived off WestmorelandCo in 1653.

LancasterCo embraced the great tidewater Rappahannock River, and in Dec1656 old RappahannockCo was created from the upper reaches of LancasterCo, with the boundary lying about where the river became wholly freshwater. This RappahannockCo, where one important ALLEN family dwelt was replaced in 1692 by EssexCo south of the river, and RichmondCo along the north bank.

I’ve published elsewhere, a complete list of all the colonial Virginia counties, showing their provenance, and surviving records. And Virginia county formation may be viewed here in VA Animap form, as a series of graphic map snapshots, although the map images and county identifiers are cryptic and too small.
The colonial Virginia quit rent was a tax on land granted by the British monarchy to its subjects, masquerading as feudal dues. In Virginia, by a statute of 6Jan1739/40 an annual quit rent of two shillings per 100 acres was assessed against all lands that had been granted no less than seven years previously, payable by the current owner {Henings Statutes 1:228}. This tax, assessed at one shilling per 50 acres, remained in effect until abolished 20Oct1777 by the new Virginia Commonwealth {Henings 9:359}, then in its second year, but it is an open question as to how effectively it was collected. For the most part it was payable in tobacco, which functioned as money throughout the colonial period owing to the shortage of specie. There is a statute of Mar1645/6 that officially prices tobacco at 3 pence per pound, so that with 12 pence per shilling, the annual assessment per 50a would be 36 pounds of tobacco. However, by 2Nov1720, another statute recognized that the price of tobacco was just one penny per pound {Henings 4:79}, so the annual tax per 50a by that point would have been just 12 pounds of tobacco.

It’s an open question as to how effectively this tax was assessed and collected, and the fact that there is only one year, 1704, for which the quit rent rolls of the colony are thought to be complete justifies this skepticism. Nominally, at least, the sheriff of each county was financially liable to the colonial authorities for the amount of this tax on land within his jurisdiction, and many if not most colonial deeds include a clause transferring the obligation to pay the quit rents to the new owner. I suspect that the scarcity of surviving quit rent rolls means that the rents were probably collected only in arrears, when the land was conveyed, and that this may have been one reason the registration of deeds was occasionally deferred for years after the date of the conveyance. To be proactive in collecting the tax, it would have been necessary, for one thing, for the sheriff to keep his own comprehensive record of land ownership and conveyance, and I suspect that most of them kept at least rough private records itemizing the landholdings of substantial landowners, while letting at least a few smallholders slip through the cracks.

Be that as it may, we do have the complete rolls for 1704 for all 14 of the then extant counties south of the Rappahannock River; however the records for the five counties of the special proprietary Northern Neck grant have all vanished.

It’s important when perusing these quit rent lists to understand that a number of these assessments were of absentee landlords—men who may have resided in a particular county, but owned lands in several.

The Virginia Headright Patent System

The London Company, which held the rights to the colony of Virginia by royal charter, established a system for granting land to the early settlers, but in order to build up the colony rapidly to a sustainable level, and especially so that it could defend itself against hostile Indians, the headright patent system was set up. By the terms of this, every person who paid for his own passage to Virginia, or that of another, was allowed 50a of land for each such headright duly certified by the general court of the colony, or by the shire or county courts. Although the London Company’s charter was revoked in 1624, and Virginia was made a royal colony governed directly by the Crown, it’s laws were generally allowed to stand. Thus, even the earliest-dated patents found in the patent volume series, were subject to the headright system, though not all patents or land grants were obtained in this way.

There was a bit more to the acquisition of land than just presenting a headright certificate to the land office. For one thing, the land had to be surveyed, and the cost of that wasn’t negligible: surveyor’s fees were fixed at between 5 and 10 shillings,[7] and there were also clerical fees for registering the survey. It also had to be “seated or planted”, terms which were clarified by law in 1661 as meaning either to erect a cabin and maintain a stock on the land for one whole year, or to clear and plant one acres of crops on the land.[8] Finally, there was the cost of the annual quit rent—a tax, or quasi-feudal dues, owed to the Crown or it’s royal governor in Virginia of 1 shilling per 50a. These provisions had the effect of discouraging the biting off of more land than one could chew, and they discouraged and prevented many poor former indentured servants from taking up land, or at least any more than the minimal 50a or so.

The names of individuals listed as headrights in the Virginia patents constitute a collective inventory of colonial Virginia immigrants, but it is important to understand is that this inventory is far from complete. Until recently it was generally accepted by scholarly historians and historical sociologists that the headright names listed in the Cavaliers & Pioneers were largely, perhaps 90% complete, but a recent study by James Petty provides for the first time, actual evidence bearing upon this question.

It has long been known that those with a claim to a headright certificate could file that claim in any county court, as well as at the land office, but Petty seems to have been the first person to systematically survey the few surviving county court records for the period covered by the first volume of Cavaliers & Pioneers—that is through 1666. He was able to find 87 headright certificates filed in the courts of Accomack, York, and Westmoreland counties, and he compared these with the headright patents published in C&P. He found that only 20% of those who had obtained headright certificates in the county courts, ever used them to patent land, and that fewer than half of the certificates were ever used by anyone for that purpose. Petty provides evidence instead that headright certificates were not only bought, sold, and traded amongst the colonists, they were even used as currency, along with processed tobacco, in a chronically species-shortage economy.[9]

Furthermore, it has long been recognized (actually since the 1690s) that there was widespread fraud, or at least confusion, in the land office, and that many headright names were used in more than one patent; I’ve noted a number of examples of this just in my compilation of ALLENs. Sometimes, this duplication occurred because it was erroneously entered twice by the land office clerk, and at others it was because patents were often renewed, incorporating additional land, and the original names might be recycled, although in such cases, the only headrights listed in the new patent should have been the names of the new importees required to obtain the new land.

[8] Hening’s 2:244.
Another thing to bear in mind is that a few members of the planter and mercantile class made occasional round trips back to England, and on the return, their passage was often paid for by a third party, perhaps the ship’s captain, who often acted as a middleman in the market for headrights.

Thus, it would be rash to presume that the appearance of a headright name in a patent represents a unique act of immigration, or that there was any particular relationship between an ALLEN listed there, and the names of the other headrights. And of course, it would also be a mistake to assume that an exhaustive compilation of people sharing a particular name, such as I have undertaken here with respect to the surname ALLEN, represents all the immigrants with that name. In fact, Petty’s study suggests that there may have originally been twice as many ALLEN headrights as we find in the Virginia land patents.

The fact that the name of a particular person subsequently appeared in a list of names used to patent land at a particular time and place, implies no more than that a person of that name had been brought into the colony sometime before the date of the patent, and he may have immigrated as early as a decade before, and settled in an entirely different area from the one where the land was patented.

It is possible, however, to make certain probabilistic inferences from the headright patent evidence, and an exhaustive compilation of people of the same name provides the indispensable foundation for assessing the probabilities. And there are certain patterns that run through this data.

For example, despite the many ways the name of the same person might be duplicated, or multiplicated, in the majority of cases, headrights appear in patents in swathes that correspond to the original certificates, as captains or principals of a voyage registered all the names of those they brought in on a particular ship. Thus, duplications or fraudulent re-use of the same names can usually be detected by the appearance of the same string of names, in the same order. This is also a reason for carefully examining all the names that appear together in a headright patent, looking for the names of possible in-laws, indentured servants of a household, or at least subsequent neighbors. I have, in fact, done this for the 100 or more patents I’ve examined in compiling this report, and I must say that the instances I picked up of possibly related or associated names, were few and far between, bearing out Mr. Petty’s 80% estimate of the disjunction between the initial headright groupings (based, perhaps, on a ships passenger list, and the eventual appearance of the original names, or some of them anyway, in a particular headright patent.

As Petty illustrates with an example in his article, occasionally one may be able to reconstruct the original history of these headrights by resorting to the county court records, where so many of the original headrights were originally certified, though few of these early court records have survived, and even those that have didn’t necessarily include a record of the headright certificates.

The most valuable headright patents from a genealogical point of view are those in which the patentee himself is listed amongst the headrights, along with others of his family, in-laws, servants, family friends, or people who ended up as close neighbors. The presumption here would be that the patentee was using his own certificate, which includes a true and accurate list of those whose passage he himself paid, though he may have augmented it with other certificates to make up the desired quantity of land.

The 1705 Reform and Subsequent Phasing Out of the Headright System

Beginning in the later 1690s the British Government became increasingly aware that the manifold abuses of the headright system, were frustrating its original purpose: to populate the colony. Eventually, in Oct 1705, a new statute was enacted to address these abuses, and at the same time provide an alternate method of acquiring land.[11]

There had always been a requirement that the patentee settle on the land within three years, either erecting a cabin and grazing stock, or clearing and planting at least an acre,[12] and there had always been a requirement to pay a yearly quit rent of 1 shilling per 50a, and the large number of lapsed patents that appear in the abstracts below illustrate the extent to which the land was being taken up by ship’s captains and other speculators who had no intention of settling on the land, many of whom never became tithable for the land and evaded the quit rents because they never settled in Virginia. The intentions of such people in most cases were obviously to sell the land at a profit, but it seems that were unable to find anyone to sell it to, due, ironically, to the fact that most of the people whose passages they sponsored were indigent servants.

The new statute may not have put an end to land speculation, but the colonial authorities did their best to rule out the third party gaming of the headright system which brought in no revenue to the Crown or colony. Henceforth, the headright of each imported servant was reserved for the servant himself, once he became free, and no man could apply for a headright certificate except in his own right, and in right of other family members he imported. He could assign away his certificate to third parties, as long as the assignment was duly witnessed, but the law also forbid the granting of patents of more than 500a at a time, except (there is always an exception for the wealthy) if the patentee was the owner of at least 5 slaves or indentured servants: then he could patent an additional 200a for each one of his human chattels. It was also explicitly forbidden by this law for any one person to be “imported” into the colony for headright purposes more than once.

However, on balance, the 1705 law significantly liberalized and facilitated the land grant process, because from 1705 on, the treasury was empowered to sell warranted rights to land directly to all comers, at the rate of 1 shilling per 50a, a price equal to the amount of labor necessary to earn about $650 in today’s currency. The treasury warrant issued to the would-be patentee, or the headright certificate, would then have to be taken to the surveyor who was paid at least 10 shillings for the survey, and with the survey in hand, and the resources to clear and settle on a bit of the land, the land grant applicant would be issued a patent, and could rest secure in his title.

This cash-for-land provision of the law effectively wound down the headright system because it was both more convenient to just purchase the exact quantity of land desired for a fixed sum than to shop around for the right number of headrights, and because the new official cost of a headright was less than the cost of a passage to Virginia. Five shillings (or $650 of labor value) was a relatively inconsequential amount to a man of even the petty planter class, and it was within reach of a freed indentured servant. Another law enacted in 1705 required masters to grant to newly freed servants whom they hadn’t been paying a wage to, money or goods valued at 50-60 shillings,[13] and this would probably have been enough in some cases for two such newly freed servants, a man and woman to pool their resources and to acquire a bit of their own land, though they would not, probably have had the capital to be able to exploit larger grants than 100a or so, and to pay the yearly quit rents on them, as well as the parish tithes that they were obligated for.

In sum, although the Virginia headright patents provide an invaluable and comprehensive list of names of Virginia immigrants, identifying the people who bore these names with individuals of the same name who appear in other Virginia records is problematic, even when the clues provided by the date, place, and name of the patentee are considered. But compiling all such instances of the appearance of particular names from this most democratic of the three reasonably comprehensive Virginia sources, provides an indispensable foundation for any serious genealogical investigation of a family bearing those names.

I have abstracted below all the patents in the first five Virginia patent books in which the surname
ALLEN (of any spelling) occurs, according to the index to the first volume of Nugent’s Cavaliers & Pioneers. This covers the period through the fall of 1666. The vast majority of these references is to ALLENs as headrights, not as patentees, or land owning neighbors of patentees.

For Patent Books 6-14 (covering Oct 1666 through 1732) I have abstracted exhaustively only the ALLENs to whom land was patented, as well as most of those in which ALLENs were mentioned as landowning neighbors. However, I have also included abstracts of a few patents where ALLENs are merely named as headrights, either because their given name and the time and location of the patent suggests that they might conceivably have belonged to one of the land owning families, or because the appearance of a particular given name was the first for that name. Thus, if one is approaching these lists with the full name of a possible pre-1733 Virginia immigrant in hand, one should find at least one instance of that name in the lists below—although for reasons already explained, the absence of such a name does not mean that there was no such immigrant.

To keep this rather Herculean labor I have undertaken within halfway reasonable bounds, most of my abstracts do not include the full list of headrights for a particular patent. However, even where I have omitted the full list, I have in most cases carefully scanned all the names looking for possible ALLEN in-laws, associates or neighbors from the point of view of an ALLEN researcher who is quite well versed in the evidence of the early ALLEN families of Virginia. The lists I have come up with are not meant to be a complete resource unto themselves, but really, more of a convenient index to the original documents, all of which have now been digitized and placed online by the Library of Virginia, although to be frank, a few are minimally legible, and even those that are beautifully imaged are likely to prove challenging to read for someone without considerable experience deciphering the old colonial script. However, there are always the volumes of Cavaliers & Pioneers to fall back on. These are not only widely available in libraries, they are also, I believe, online in various places, although I leave it as an exercise to the reader to determine where. I have owned the first three published volumes of this indispensable Virginia source for about 20 years now.

I was obliged to scan all the headright names just in order to determine which sets were perhaps worth abstracting in full, and in a very few cases, although I have chosen not to do so, I have supplemented the name of the abstracted ALLEN, with those of a few others who might turn out to be relevant.

Any reader who wonders about the headright names I have omitted is encouraged to access the original documents himself through the LVA Land Grants Browse function, using my citations to guide him.

The abstracts are sorted two ways: first in strict chronological order by date of patent, and second in chronological order within ALLEN given name, with a section for each given name. It is in these given name sections primarily that additional associated patents will be found, and also a few additional notes.
These abstracts are both more and less than what appears in Cavaliers & Pioneers, which I have used mostly as an index, and a backstop.

They are more in that, wherever possible, I have examined and abstracted the original patent books, as digitized and placed online by the Library of Virginia. These online Virginia Land Grants & Patents may be accessed either through an indexed LVA Land Grants Search function (which can be tricky to use), and directly (with citation in hand) via the LVA Land Grants Browse function. The LVA Search function provides some undefined algorithmic collapsing of name variants into generic equivalences, but there are eccentricities in the way this Search operates, and besides that, it indexes only the names of the patentees and others mentioned in the main body of the patents, but not the headright names themselves.

My abstracts are also less, because I have in many cases abstracted only the name of the ALLEN who was used as a headright. For the most part, I have provided all the headrights for a particular patent only for cases where the patentee appeared to have transported himself and/or members of his own family, as it is primarily in such cases where the patentee used his own headright that the odds are good that the other headrights were likely for in-laws, indentured servants of the household, and others who may subsequently have become neighbors. And the mere fact that all the headrights appear on the same list, most likely means that they all took ship at the same place and time, and quite likely under the same circumstances, so there may be clues to British origins in these complete lists. Finally, in such cases, more than most, it is likely that the immigration took place within a year or two of the date of the patent.

All the early patent books are transcriptions of earlier books that seem to have been discarded, but for Patent Books 4 & 5 there are two surviving versions. At some point, probably in the early 19th century, a land office clerk transcribed (or re-transcribed) both of these, thereby doing modern researchers a great service, because in many cases the ink of the original books is greatly faded, and the digitized reproductions made by LVA (which generally chose to emphasize brightness of image over resolution and legibility) the resulting images of the original books are sometimes difficult or impossible to read. Unfortunately, the transcribed versions do not include the names of the headrights, so it has been necessary in some cases to consult not only both versions of these books, but also, in cases where the names in the original books were illegible, to rely on the word of the C&P abstractors, who had access to the original books. However, these cases are very few: in nearly all cases, I have myself found and verified the names of patentees, of their neighbors mentioned in the land descriptions, and of the headright names that I have abstracted.

In keeping with modern scholarly standards, I have cited exactly the version(s) of the records (or C&P abstract) that my own abstracts are based on, and I have only cited the versions that I have actually used. Thus, where I have been able to rely wholly on the original digitized images of Books 4 and 5, the reader will find only a single citation to, e.g. “VAP 4(orig):123”. In cases where I used the transcription instead of the original (because I could not read it with confidence) one will find only a citation to the transcription, plus another to C&P from which I obtained any headright names that I couldn’t make out in the original version, e.g. “C&P 1:235, VAP 4(trans):101”. In just a very few cases have I relied entirely on the C&P abstracts, and these are cited accordingly.

Headright Patent Abstracting Conventions

The format of my abstracts should be largely self-explanatory. For ease of scanning, I have capitalized all surnames in the abstracts, and for ALLENs who appear in the original documents as patentees, these I have highlighted in red.

Transcribed text, whether quoted literally or paraphrased has been fully modernized in accordance with my RMM transcription method. I’ve used one abbreviation: OTW = “on the waters of” on the tributaries of a major creek or river.

[The plague of Sarah's land and it runs for about half a mile along Ware Crk SExE from it's point of widening (wherever that is) towards the York River. This places her land about equidistant from the head of the creek to the York River, in present day JamesCityCo at least 5 miles NE of the present day border with NewKentCo, and a bit farther from the closest loop of the Chickahominey River/Swamp. The 450a patented to Benjamin STRANG & John BROCKHURST on 28Jun1664 lay to the SE of Sarah near the head of Ware Creek, and has significance because one Hen[ry] STRAINGE was grouped with Rich ALLEN in the 1689 St.Peter’s Parish processioning. Although Sarah’s land belonged to NewKentCo in 1683, the whole area S of Ware Creek was ceded to JamesCityCo in 1767, while in recompense, today’s SE corner of NewKent, along the Chickahominy was ceded by JamesCityCo to NewKent. Since Sarah’s putative husband, William ALLEN’s, 1657 patent, was adj to the land of Robert HOLT on the Chickahominey, originally in JamesCityCo, it was at least 5 miles SW of Sarah’s land.]

S 134p; SWxW 130p to John CORKER & br of CowpenSw; SW down br to Reed Swamp; down Sw TTB.
Bounded by: SYMMS, AllowReedSw, WareCrk, Tho[mas] PARCHMOUTH, John CORKER, CowpenSw 200a formerly pat.24Sep1661 to Col. Tho[mas] BALLARD, who assigned 21Oct1670 to John BOATWRIGHT.
The balance of the land for 10 persons: Rich[ar]d TIRR[EL], Tho[mas] ELSFORD, Israel HARDMAN, Dorothy GILSON, Tho[mas] KNIGHT, Fra[ncis or nces] COLE, Rob[er]t TIRREL 4 times {VAP 7:322}
[I've plotted Sarah's land and it runs for about half a mile along Ware Crk SExE from it’s point of widening (wherever that is) towards the York River. This places her land about equidistant from the head of the creek to the York River, in present day JamesCityCo at least 5 miles NE of the present day border with NewKentCo, and a bit farther from the closest loop of the Chickahominy River/ Swamp. The 450a patented to Benjamin STRANG & John BROCKHURST on 28Jun1664 lay to the SE of Sarah near the head of Ware Creek, and has significance because one Hen[ry] STRANGE was grouped with Rich ALLEN in the 1689 St.Peter’s Parish processioning.
Although Sarah’s land belonged to NewKentCo in 1683, the whole area S of Ware Creek was ceded to JamesCityCo in 1767, while in recompense, today’s SE corner of NewKent, along the Chickahominy, was ceded by JamesCityCo to NewKent. Since Sarah’s putative husband, William ALLEN’s, 1657 patent, was adj to the land of Robert HOLT on the Chickahominy, originally in JamesCityCo, it was at least 5miles from Sarah’s land.]

VALENTINE ALLEN
Virtually all of the patents naming Valentine ALLEN as a patentee, a bound, or a headright, were in the area in which he settled, “on the freshes of the south side of the Rappahannock River”, upstream of its broad tidewater mouth. This area was part of NorthumberlandCo until Jan 1651/2 when LancasterCo was created, relegating Northumberland to the strip lining the southern bank of the parallel Potomac River, with Lancaster embracing both banks of the Rappahannock to the south. Then, in Dec1656, (old) RappahannockCo was created from LancasterCo, which encompassed both banks of the Rappahannock from roughly the saltwater line on up the river. Finally, in 1692, (old) RappahannockCo was further divided and made extinct in favor of EssexCo (running along the south bank of the river), and RichmondCo (running parallel, along the north bank).

Consequently, in order to track Valentine and related ALLENs through the patent and other records, it is necessary to pay attention to the dates of the patents. In these patents that name Valentine but omit a county name, I have interpolated the contemporary county name for the area in which I know that he settled.

I have researched Valentine ALLEN, his in-laws (Thomas PAGE, Bartholomew VAWTER, the NOEL family, and a few others pretty exhaustively as part of my VAWTER research (my mother was a VAWTER), and I include in this section a few additional abstracts for these people and for Valentine’s close neighbors, the LUCASes, the ROUZEEs, et al.

ALLENs in the 1623-1625 Virginia Censuses and Muster Rolls

The following items are extracted from HOTTEN. It is entirely possible that one or more of these ALLENs were ancestors of the ALLEN (I) patrilineage, but I think that it’s unlikely, and certainly no evidence has emerged to link the William ALLEN who was in Virginia by 1625 (or either of them, because there may have bee two), with any of the ALLENs who appear in Virginia within the next two generations. The bible of Virginia first comers, John Frederick Dorman, The Adventurers of Purse and Person, 1607-1624/5, 4th Edition (2004), draws on all the scraps of evidence that survive for early Virginia, precisely for the purpose of establishing such linkages back to those who were in the colony by 1625, and there are no ALLEN linkages among them, although a number of ALLENs emerge later. I have looked up all the ALLEN references in this two-volume work, and the only linkage to the ALLEN (I) patrilineage is to the William ALLEN who married, 2\textsuperscript{nd}, in 1720, Mary (Hunt) Minge, and only because she, in turn, married, 3\textsuperscript{rd}, Field Jefferson, who is descended from Virginia first-comer, Christopher Jefferson.

“The muster of the inhabitants of Peirsey’s Hundred taken the 20th of January 1624[/5]

... The muster of Mr. Abraham Peirsey’s servants

... William Allen, aged 22”, is one of 18 who “arrived in the Southampton 1623” {Hotten,215-218}

Altogether, Peirsey is listed as having 29 indentured servants, 20 of whom came over on the Southampton, plus 6 negro slaves. I have inferred the double date because immediately following all the muster rolls for Peirsey’s Hundred, is a list titled “DEAD at Peirsey’s Hundred, Anno Dni, 1624”, with 7 names—apparently a list meant to cover the entire preceding year, 1624.

“List of Names of the LIVING in Virginia, February the 16th, 1623[/4]

... At Elizabeth Cittye

... William Allen” {Hotten, 183}

Immediately following this comprehensive census for (apparently) all the Virginia settlements is another of the same date, titled “List of the Names of the DEAD in Virginia, since April last, February 16, 1623” {Hotten, 189} The double date I have inferred is likely anyway, but it also jibes with the fact that William Allen, Abraham Peirsey’s servant, was supposed to have come over in 1623—probably between April and September of the year, since that was the safest period for voyaging. However, it is a curious fact that of the 20 servants of Peirsey who are listed as coming over in the Southampton, the names of only two, Allen, and John Davies (another extremely common name) appear on these lists of the living and the dead, nor are there any Peirseys, or a heading for Peirsey’s Hundred. It would seem, then, that the census for Peirsey’s Hundred is missing, and since it’s unlikely that Peirsey’s servant, William Allen, would have completed his term of indenture in just the few months since his arrival, this William of Elizabeth City may well be a different William.
ALLENs in the 1635 Virginia-Bound Passenger Manifests

Most of the early shipping lists were lost, but I believe the shipping lists for London are thought to be complete for the year 1635, and those with ALLENs aboard, and bound for Virginia, follow. Most of the lists refer to the passengers as due to be transported, which might seem to imply that they were all indentured servants or possibly even convicted rebels or criminals ordered by the courts to be transported to the colonies. But while it has been estimated that at least 75% of Virginia immigrants were indeed indentured servants, whose passage was paid for by others, it is doubtful that all the passengers on most of these ships were of that class.

There is, perhaps, a better chance of establishing a descent of the ALLEN (I) line from one of the ALLENs who came over in the year 1635—this one year of the whole colonial period for which it appears that the Port of London shipping records are complete. But it’s more likely that we not only have too little evidence: we also have too many ALLENs.

Just for this one year we find seven ALLENs, three of them with the given name Thomas, but nothing turned up by anyone to date that would identify any of these as the immigrant ancestor of the several known ALLEN patriarchs. General H.T. ALLEN, in his article, “Allen”, in Genealogy of Kentucky Families, From the Register of the Kentucky Historical Society, v.1 (GPC 1981), has compiled a number of ALLEN references from the more or less complete records of YorkCo, and several of these provide relationship evidence, or at least suggestive circumstantial evidence of relationship, but it appears that the line of ALLEN property owners of that county culminates in descendants for whom no genealogical relationship can be inferred—although it remains possible, and perhaps even likely, that a yDNA test of a male ALLEN descendant of this line would show it to be of the ALLEN (I) Patrilineage.

“6 June 1635, Theis under writen names to be transported to Virginia, imbarqed in the Thomas & John, Richard Lambard, M[aste]r, being examined by the Minister de Gravesend concerning their conformitie to the orders and discipline of the Church of England, and tooke the oath of allegiance

... Thomas Allin, 33” one of about 110 names. {Hotten, 84}

“7 August 1635, Theis underwritten names are to be transported to Virginia, imbarqued in the Globe, of London, Jeremy Blackman, M[aste]r, having been examined by the minister of Gravesend, of their conformitie, and have taken the oaths of allegiance and supremacy

... Gergorie Allin, 17” one of about 150 names {Hotten, 120}

“10 August 1635, Theis underwritten names are to be transported to Virginia, imbarqued in the Safety, John Graunt, M[aste]r

... Richard Allin, 22

... James Allin, 19

... Joan Allin, 20” three of about 150 names {Hotten, 122}

“21 August [1635?], Theis underwritten names are to be transported to Virginia, imbarqed in the George, Jo[hn] Severne, M[aste]r, bound thither p[er] examination of the Minister of Gravesend, etc.

... Tho[mas] Allin

... Jo[hn] Allin” two of about 150 names {Hotten, 125} “[1635?] Aboard the Abraham, of London, John Barker, M[aste]r, bound for Virginea
... Tho[mas] Allin” one of about 150 names {Hotten, 138}

I infer the date from the immediately preceding list, which bears a similar title, and is dated 24Oct1635.

COMMENTS:
Thomas Allen transported a Tho[mas] ALLEN (most likely himself), and a Richard LEE, according to a patent granted in 1652. Fourteen years earlier, in 1638 a patent to 600a in CharlesRiverCo was granted to Joseph CROSHAW which he transferred two years later to William ALLEN of London, Merchant. Richard Lee was the witness to the note of transfer appended to the original Croshaw patent.

25Apr1666 “It is ordered that Mr. William Allen give Mr. Thomas Allen sufficient security to save him harmless from a Bond past on behalf of the sd Wm Allin to Mr. Philip Chesley.” {H.T. ALLEN, citing YorkCoVA Orders 4:89}

COMMENTS:
These abstracts show repeated transportations of Thomas ALLENs, and the first two, show Capt. WORMELEY to be a neighbor of William ALLEN, and like the items considered in BATCH 1, associate a Thomas ALLEN at least loosely with this William ALLEN.

This may be William ALLEN, the merchant of London, patentee of those 600a in CharlesRiverCo (now YorkCo) and if more than one of the Thomas transportations concern the same man, it suggests that Thomas too, was a merchant, or was associated in some way with William ALLEN’s transatlantic business interests. The final item, found by Gen. H.T. Allen, likely concerns the same men. Note that the title “Mr.” was an honorific equivalent to “Esquire”, and was reserved for men of significant property, and usually education.

14 H.T. ALLEN apparently believes that William’s adjacent land was (part of?) the tract called “York Old Field”, and identifies its owner as the William Allen whose wife was named Judith, and who had a son William, and a grandson William who was project patriarch William of Albemarle. However, the evidence presented in his article is insufficient by itself to sustain these conclusions.

   “Christopher, Thomas, Hugh (and his sons Charles and Edward) settled on contiguous plantations and are definitely associated in the county records.”  {H.T.ALEN, 2}

COMMENTS:
    General H.T. Allen cites no specific records in support of his sweeping relationship statement above, and at the time he patented his land in 1638, Hugh had no ALLEN neighbors, though it’s certainly likely that he gave some of it to his sons Charles and Edward. The third item above does show that William Allen owned land adjacent to Charles Allen, and I note that the witnesses were a Samuel Allen, and a Thomas READE. And in Capt. WORMELEY’s 1649 patents, above, there was a reference to 100a assigned by William ALLEN to Ralph READ—perhaps a relation of Thomas. Thus, the specifics of the actual patents here do begin to support General Allen’s compound statement.
Cavaliers and Pioneers is a three-volume compilation of patent abstracts based on headrights, with an every-name index to the names of ship’s passengers to Virginia that formed the headrights. As with any work of this kind based on often idiosyncratic, or at least unfamiliar, ancient handwriting, there were a number of errors in deciphering names, but on the whole, an excellent and expert job has been made of this herculean labor.

Fortunately, we are no longer practically bound to these abstracts because the Library of Virginia has digitized the pages of the original patent/land grant books and put them online, with both a search portal, and, for those who have the book and page references, a browse portal. Be forewarned, however, the search function is tricky, and if you are searching, as most people are, for full names, it’s best to enclose the full name in quotation marks, e.g. “Thomas Jefferson”. Rare surnames, of course, may be searched just on. In either case, no accommodation is made for spelling variants to it can be time-consuming to make these searches, but there is a parameter to confine the search just to “Words in Name”, which brings up only grants to the particular person’s name lists, as opposed to the default “Words Everywhere”, which brings up also all grants in which that person’s name merely appears as a reference.

Technically, during the colonial period, original grants of land were issued as royal patents, whereas once allegiance to the monarch had been thrown off in favor of state governments (Virginia is technically called a Commonwealth, not a state), land was “granted” by the state, and after 1779 one should refer to “land grants”, not patents.

LVA titles their online database: Virginia Land Office Patents and Grants/Northern Neck Grants and Surveys—and says this of it: “A fully-searchable index to: land patents issued prior to 1779; land grants issued by the Virginia Land Office after 1779; grants issued in the Northern Neck from 1692-1862; and original and recorded Northern Neck surveys. Images for the land patents, Land Office grants, Northern Neck grants, and recorded Northern Neck surveys (1786-1874) are available online. The unrecorded Northern Neck surveys prior to 1782 are available on microfilm.”

Since, in most cases, I have use C&P largely as an index into the original documents, most of my citations refer to “VAP” (Virginia Patent) and the book and page of the patent in the book series; I have cited to C&P itself only where some or all of the information in my own abstracts came form the secondary work.

The originals of patent books 4 and 5, being hard to read, have been transcribed, but many of these transcriptions omitted the all-important (to genealogists) headright names. LVA has provided both versions.
C&P notes the page numbers of the transcribed books in parentheses. Where my abstracts are based wholly on the original versions, I have cited only the original book page number; where they are based on the transcription (or a composite of both) I have included the page number of the transcribed book (as well).

This edition begins with a transcription of the complete Jan1624/5 muster rolls which lists the 1,232 survivors of the estimated 7,000 first comers to the VA colony. The remainder of the work traces the lineages of the 109 individuals who were descended either from one of these 1,232 "adventurers of person", or from one of the 900 odd "adventurers of purse" (mostly residents of London who subscribed to the Virginia Company) who had also settled in VA themselves, or had their grandchildren settle there.

Having examined all the references to ALLEN in this three volume work, I found none surnamed ALLEN who were descendants of these 109, and just one, William Allen, a servant of Abraham Persey, who was on the Jan1624/5 muster roll.

The full formal title of this book (which, for obvious reasons, no one uses) is: The Original Lists of Persons of Quality; emigrants; religious exiles; political rebels; serving men sold for a term of years; apprentices; children stolen; maidens pressed; and others who went from Great Britain to the American Plantations, 1600-1700, with their ages, the localities where they formerly lived in the mother country, the names of the ships in which they embarked, and other interesting particulars, from Mss. preserved in the state paper department of Her Majesty's Public Record Office, England.

This book is a congeries of ship’s passenger lists and many other kinds of records that establish the immigration of the named persons, including many early parish and other records of Barbados. I’ve here abstracted all references to ALLENs who emigrated to VA.

cited as PETTY

This is the best article in print on the Virginia headright patents, and Petty supplements the article itself with a compilation of abstracts from the YorkCoVA court books, which he uses as examples (unfortunately, there are no ALLENs in this lot).

Petty suggests that only about 50% of all the headright certificates issued by either the land office, or the county courts, ever showed up in any patents. However, a few of the missing ones left a paper trail in the county court records that have survived, and even those county court-certified headrights that did later appear in patents, typically provide a bit more information about their provenance—at least the identity of the person who submitted them for certification.
