William Duffield
Of Venango County, Pennsylvania,
And His Descendants.
INTRODUCTORY.

In order to make the history of the Duffield family as complete as possible, it will be necessary to trace its ancestry as far back as can be done with reasonable accuracy. This object cannot be more fully accomplished with the data at hand than by giving entire the letter addressed to Mr. R. L. Cochran, of Franklin, Pa., by Rev. Dr. John T. Duffield, and the narrative by Rev. Dr. Eaton, which were read by Mr. Cochran at the Duffield reunion of 1878. They are as follows:

FROM JOHN T. DUFFIELD, D. D.
PRINCETON, N. J., August 29th, 1878.

R. L. Cochran, Esq.

Dear Sir: On my return to Princeton a day or two ago, after an absence of several weeks, I found your favor of the 23d with other letters awaiting me. I regret that it will be out of my power to accept your kind invitation to meet with you on Wednesday week, and can only send my cordial congratulations. Though we do not belong to the same American branch of the Duffield family, we are doubtless descended from the same Irish ancestry. My great-great-grandfather was a George Duffield who came from Ballymena, Antrim co., Ireland, about 1740, and settled in the Pequea Valley in Lancaster county, Pa. We are not positive as to the name of his father, but have reason to believe it was William.

The North-of-Ireland Duffields came there from Yorkshire, England, where there are records as far back as 1315. In that year a Richard Duffield was bailiff of York; in 1348, a Thomas Duffield; in 1375 a Richard Duffield held the same office. A William Duffield, an archdeacon of the Catholic church, was buried in the York Cathedral in 1452. In the War of the Roses a Sir Richard de Duffield, Baron of Lingard, was prominent among the followers of the house of York, and slain at Berwick. A Sir John de Duffield fell at Bosworth in defence of Richard III. During the civil war in the 17th century the Duffields fought on the side of the Parliament. A Charles Duffield was killed in the battle of Edgehill, and an Edwin Duffield in the battle of Newbury in 1642. A James Duffield commanded a troop of horse under William of Orange and fell at the battle of the Boyne in 1690. A son of George Duffield of Pequea, the Rev. George Duffield, was the first pastor of the Old Pine Street Church in Philadelphia, and was for a time the Chaplain of the Continental Congress. He also had a Colonel's commission and served for a time in the Revolutionary army. His portrait, with the portraits of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and other Revolutionary heroes, hangs in Independence Hall.

Dr. George Duffield of Detroit, for half a century one of the most eminent ministers of our church, was his grandson. My great-grandfather, a brother of the Revolutionary minister, was William Duffield, who settled at the Welsh Run in Franklin county. He and his brother John were surgeons in the Revolutionary army. John, after the war, settled in Brooklyn, and from him Duffield street, in Brooklyn, takes its name. One of his descendants is the wife of our late Minister to England, Edwards Pierrepont.

Most of the Duffields in the neighborhood of Philadelphia are descendants of an Edward Duffield who came with Penn from England. This Edward was one of the executors of Benjamin Franklin. There are a number of the name on the Eastern Shore, Maryland, but I have no knowledge of their genealogy.

The golden wedding of the Rev. George Duffield, D. D., was celebrated a few years ago, and an account of the exercises and several papers read on the occasion were published. The pamphlet contains two impressions of the family coat-of-arms, one of which I herewith enclose. The letters “D. & B.” are the initials of Duffield and Bethune. Dr. Duffield’s wife was a sister of the late Dr. Bethune. In the pamphlet to which I have referred, it is mentioned that “the escutcheon bears three snow-white doves upon its field, giving to the family the name of Dove-Field, since corrupted to Duffield.” My own opinion is that the name suggested the style of escutcheon.

There is a town “Duffield” in the North of France, and I think the English Duffields came originally from Normandy.

Hoping that the facts I have mentioned may contribute somewhat to the interest of your family reunion, and with kindest regards to all, Yours truly,

JOHN T. DUFFIELD.

THE DUFFIELD FAMILY.
(BY S. J. M. EATON, D. D.)

The family of Duffield, now so widely scattered through this country, was originally French. It belonged to the Huguenots, that in the days of the Queen of Navarre and Admiral Coligny bore the best blood of France. But in the days of Louis XIII. and Cardinal Richelieu persecution commenced and Protestantism was driven to the wall. With other Huguenots, the Duffields were obliged to flee for their lives, at the time of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, that was promulgated October 22d, 1685, and to escape the persecutions that followed under the reign of Louis XIV. These Huguenots settled chiefly in England and in the North of Ireland. Owing to this exodus of Protestants, we have the fact that to this day the north of Ireland is almost wholly Protestant, and from the same cause we have the fact that nearly the whole of Pennsylvania was originally settled by an earnest, rigid race of Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, that were the bone and sinew of the country when dangers and hardships were to be met and great difficulties overcome.

The name was originally written in the French form, Du Fielde, but was Anglicised at the settlement of the family in Great Britain, taking its present form.

George Duffield was the ancestor of one branch of the Duffields in this country. He removed from County Antrim in the North of Ireland to America some time between the years 1721 and 1730, and settled in the Colony of Pennsylvania. This settlement was in Octorara township, Lancaster county. Not being satisfied with this location, he soon after sought out a new home in Pequea township, in the same county, where he made his residence and gathered his household for a permanent abode. Here he lived and died, and the same paternal home continues in the possession of his descendants unto this day. The old patriarch died at the ripe age of eighty-four, distinguished throughout his whole life for stern honesty and most devoted piety.

This original Duffield left a son George, who was destined to fill a most important sphere in the country and the church. He was born October 7th, 1732, and graduated at Princeton in 1755; was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Presbytery of New Castle, March 11th, 1756, and settled in the Presbyterian churches of Carlisle, Big Spring and Dillstown in 1761. His first wife was Elizabeth Blair, daughter of Rev. Samuel Blair. His second wife was Margaret Armstrong, sister of Gen. John Armstrong of Revolutionary fame, who was father of Gen. John Armstrong, who was Secretary of War under President Madison.

Dr. George Duffield had four sons. The youngest, George, was connected for many years with the Government of Pennsylvania as Register and Surveyor General under Gov. Thomas McKean. Some ten or fifteen years after his settlement at Carlisle, Dr. Duffield removed to Philadelphia, where he became pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church. Here he continued pastor until the day of his death, February 2d, 1790. His remains were interred in the middle aisle of the church, where they remain until this day. He served for a time as one of the Chaplains of the Continental Congress. As an Irishman and a Presbyterian, he was a most zealous Whig in the stormy days of the Revolution. On one occasion he was forbidden to preach in his own church. The house was opened by his people. Dr. Duffield entered through a window and began his sermon, but was interrupted by a King's officer reading the Riot Act. The officer was ejected from the church, and the minister went on with his preaching, but he was arrested next day and required to plead to the charge of aiding and abetting riot, and to give bail for his appearance. He refused to do either, alleging that he was simply discharging his duty as a minister of Christ. His friends were ready to give bail, but he refused. The matter was held under advisement for a long time, and finally dismissed. A band of volunteers called Paxton's Boys, from Carlisle, hearing that he was about to be arrested by the King's forces, assembled and held themselves in readiness to march to Philadelphia and set him at liberty, should his arrest take place.

Dr. Duffield was largely instrumental in the organization of the Presbyterian Church after the Revolution, and was the first stated clerk of the General Assembly. He organized the first prayer meeting that was established in any Presbyterian church in Philadelphia. He was a man of faith as well as prayer. On one occasion he was apprised by his son, late on Saturday night, that it would be necessary to go to market early Monday morning; he replied, "I am wholly without money, but the Lord will provide." On Sabbath a sealed letter was placed in his hand that remained unopened until Monday morning, and on being opened was found to contain money sufficient for all the family wants until otherwise supplied. It was never known who sent this money, but it seemed to be an answer to the good man's unquestioning faith.

From these Duffields a long line of men and women descended that have been useful in the church and in the state. A grandson of Dr. Duffield, and bearing the same name and title, is a pastor in Detroit. There are four of them, at the present time, on the roll of ministers of the Presbyterian Church. The family have never been able to get away from their Huguenot blood. Those who were called Calvinists in France had their blood thickened as Presbyterians in Ireland, amid the bogs and green fields; and crossing the waves of the ocean they have continued to adhere to the faith of their fathers, preferring the broad, blue banner, next in admiration and love to that higher and more sacred one that bears the grand emblazonry of the Cross.

As a general rule, they have been clannish in their habits, not being disposed to scatter through the countries. They still linger around the center where George and Margaret Duffield of Ireland first planted their roof-tree an hundred and fifty years ago. And in this locality, where a colony of Duffields was planted more than seventy years ago, they still cluster around the old neighborhood, with little disposition to emigrate, or seek new fields of enterprise. There is probably a larger connection of them in Venango county to-day than of any other name or family. And the probabilities are that no family in all the land has maintained a fairer record or a more generally untarnished name, for a century and a half, than that of the Duffields.

In this paper allusion has been made alone to branches of the family that emigrated directly from Ireland. There are others who came from England, who were of the same common stock, with similar peculiarities, and the same traditions. Did time and circumstance permit us to pursue the subject in all its details, the same interest would no doubt gather around these as is connected with the Irish family.

[NOTE. While it is not unlikely that people of the name of Duffield left France with the Huguenots, Dr. Eaton has evidently overlooked the fact that many of that name were prominently mentioned in English history as far back as the 13th century, while the expulsion of the Huguenots did not occur until the 16th century.]

In the second series of Pennsylvania Archives we find that John Duffield was a private in the Third and Fourth Regiments, Felix in the Fourth and Seventh Regiments, James and Rushford in Col. Miller's Rifle Regiment, and Philip in the Fifth Regiment, during the Revolutionary war.

WILLIAM DUFFIELD.

William Duffield, the immediate ancestor of the large connection of that name in Western Pennsylvania, was the only son of Philip Duffield, and was born in England (some say Wales). Philip moved to Ireland and located in County Down near the village of Ballynahinch, about 15 miles south of Belfast, where he died.

William was born in the year 1743. He had two sisters older than himself, one of whom, Peggy, was blind from infancy. In the year 1760, when he was but 17 years old, he emigrated to America and returned twice, thus crossing the ocean five times. Each time in returning to Ireland he took over a cargo of flaxseed and other American products and brought back emigrants, he paying their passage and waiting repayment until they had earned the amount advanced.

On his second return voyage from Ireland the ship lost her reckoning in a storm and drifted for six months, the passengers becoming almost famished. They were put on daily rations of one jill of oatmeal and a few spoonfuls of water until they met a vessel that supplied them with provisions and put them on their proper course.

The third and last time he came across the Atlantic there was among the passengers Elizabeth Hassan, of Belfast, a linendraper's daughter, his sweetheart, in company with her brother Robert and family, who were migrating to America. The ship was the last one that landed before the Revolution, and in fact after hostilities had commenced. After landing at Philadelphia, it seems William must have followed the army as a trader, furnishing cattle and supplies to the soldiers, as no record has yet been found of his having been in the enlisted service.

He was married to Elizabeth Hassan, above referred to, in 1777, and, as is believed to be the case, settled in Nittany Valley, Centre county, Pa., before he later settled in the Bald Eagle Valley, near the mouth of Fishing Creek, adjoining the village of Mill Hall and about three miles southwest of Lock Haven. The farm was located on land donated to a brother of Sam. Brady, the famous Indian fighter, and he had to "move on."

During the summer of 1799 he came with his eldest daughter, Jane, to Venango county and erected a cabin at the mouth of Sugar Creek. In the fall he returned, intending to bring back his family in the following spring, leaving his daughter to keep possession. With a small dog and pig as her only companions, she remained until joined by the family at the close of the winter. On William's return he settled on a 400-acre tract of land situated on the south side of French Creek, one mile below Utica, where he resided until his death, April 7, 1827, at the age of 84 years.

He was a man of robust constitution and fine physique, of genial disposition, whole-hearted and of exceptional energy. He possessed good judgment and sound common sense, and was consulted in important matters by prominent men in his neighborhood. His wife, Elizabeth Hasson, was born in 1754, and died April 9, 1838, aged 84 years. Both were buried in the old cemetery at Franklin, Pa., where a monument marks the place of their rest. Ten children—four sons and six daughters, all of whom raised large families and lived to a ripe old age—were the result of their union.

FAMILY REUNIONS.

The first reunion of the descendants of the William Duffield family was held on September 4th, 1878, at the home of his only surviving son, William, in Frenchcreek township, Venango county. Over 1,000 people were present, of whom nearly half were blood relations, while the remainder comprised friends, neighbors and acquaintances, drawn together by a feeling of warm sympathy with the object of a gathering somewhat novel in that section.

R. L. Cochran gave a historical sketch of the family, furnishing many interesting details regarding its origin and growth, and read the letter from Rev. Dr. John T. Duffield and the paper by Rev. Dr. Eaton, which are given on preceding pages of this work. Remarks were made by Judge Trunkey, C. Heydrick and Judge Taylor, the latter laying stress on the fact that the connection were very poor customers of the legal fraternity.

The oldest member of the connection in attendance was William Duffield, aged 92, the next in age being his brother-in-law, John L. Hasson, aged 89.

The lineal descendants of the pioneer William Duffield's children, most of whom were present, numbered 560, as given below:

Jane 77
John 71
Mary 57
Armstrong 19
William 83
Isabelle 75
Esther 47
James 28
Margaret 81
Elizabeth 22

Total 560

The second Duffield reunion was held on Friday, August 25, 1899, being the Centennial anniversary of the settlement of William Duffield in Venango county, 1799, at the County farm near the mouth of Sugar Creek, the locality of his first settlement. Like the one held twenty-one years previously, it was largely attended by the relatives and their friends. During the interval William, the last survivor of the second generation, had passed away, and death had made serious inroads in the ranks of the third. The statistics showed that out of 1152 descendants of William Duffield there were 932 then living.

Shortly after the reunion of 1899 a meeting of the descendants of William Duffield was held in Franklin for the purpose of forming an association bearing his name. The first business transacted was the election of permanent officers, as follows:

President, William Duffield, Canal, Pa.
Secretary, C. C. Duffield, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Treasurer, Miss Imelda M. Duffield, Franklin, Pa.

A permanent organization was effected, to be called “The William Duffield Association.” At the same time action was taken to gather all historical and biographical facts relating to William Duffield and his descendants, one person from each branch of the family being designated for that purpose. They are as follows:

Jane (Johnston-Cochran) - - Sarah Cochran.
John - - - William Duffield.
Mary (Smiley) - - - E. K. Smiley.
Armstrong - - - Brice Duffield.
William - - - Imelda M. Duffield.
Isabelle (McQuaid) - - Wayne Hastings.
Esther (Cooper) - - Isabelle Singleton.
James - - - C. C. Duffield.
Margaret (Hasson) - - S. D. Hasson.
Elizabeth (Cochran) - - C. C. Cochran.

WILLIAM DUFFIELD’S FAMILY.

Note.—The small figure affixed to a name in the lists that follow shows the generation to which it belongs, numbering downward from the Venango county immigrant William*. The Roman numerals designate the branch of William’s family to which the individual belongs. For example: Brice³, son of IV. Armstrong², is shown to be the son of William’s 4th child, and of the 3d generation in line of descent.

William Duffield¹ was born in England, 1743; married Elizabeth Hassan, 1777; died in Venango county, Pa., April 7, 1827, aged 84 years.

Elizabeth (Hassan) Duffield, b. 1754, in Belfast, Ireland; d. April 9, 1838, in Venango co., Pa., aged 84 years.

(I.) Jane Duffield² was born Nov. 23, 1779, and in 1802 married David Johnston, whose death left her a widow with seven children. In 1820 she married John Cochran, to whom one child was born. She died in 1850. Her children:

David, b. March 23, 1813; m. Nancy P. McCoy, June 6, 1835; d. —

John, m. Elizabeth Crawford, Dec. 8, 1836.
Elizabeth, b. 1803; d. 1804.
Ruth Templeton, b. May 24, 1805; m. 1827 to Charles Cochran; d. 1886.
William Duffield, b. Jan. 1807; d. 1884.
Twin boys, born and died 1811.

Children of Robert Armstrong Cochran:
Sarah Huston, b. Feb. 4, 1854; d. April 3, 1860.
John Charles, b. Aug. 27, 1858; d. Nov. 11, 1861.
William Duffield, b. March 20, 1868; m. April 27, 1892, to Zorayda Welsh. Res. Maysville, Ky.

Robert Armstrong Cochran (3) was the only son of Jane Duffield and her second husband, John Cochran. While quite young he chose Maysville, Ky., as his home. He was a lawyer, and for 16 years held the position of County Clerk of Mason county. His oldest son, A. M. J., was appointed by President McKinley Federal Judge for the Eastern District of Kentucky. James, although a physician, is raising cattle in Idaho. William is a lawyer, and has held the office of County Clerk. Horace was a Captain in the 4th Kentucky Volunteers during the Spanish-American war. He is now associated with his brother, Robert A., in the management of the Maysville Cotton Mills.

Children of Andrew McC. J. Cochran:
John McElroy, b. March 22, 1883.
Harriet January, b. June 17, 1891.

Children of Robert A. Cochran:
Harriet January, b. Nov. 6, 1886.

Children of William Duffield Cochran:
Ellen Thomas, b. Aug. 6, 1894.
Zorayda Armstrong, b. March 6, 1897.
Frances January, born Nov. 19, 1898.
Mary Duffield, b. Aug. 14, 1900; d. July 5, 1902.

Children of David Johnston:
3
- William J., born March 22, 1838; m. Dec. 18, 1865, to Rose Williams. Residence, Lewiston, S. D.
- Isabella, born April 19, 1842; m. Sept. 10, 1867, to Jackson McCoy. Harrisville, Pa.
- Hiram F., born Feb. 7, 1850; died Aug. 15, 1850.
(See Sketches, conclusion of book.)

Children of William J. Johnston:
4
- J. C., born Dec. 8, 1867; Elena, born August, 1877; Verne, b. October 8, 1889. Lewiston, S. D.

Children of Isabella Johnston (McCoy):
4
- F. L. N., born September, 1870.
- Lora A., born March, 1872.
- Hester E., b. October, 1875; married C. Briggs, Leesburg, Pa.
- Kate E., born May, 1879; married T. S. Wardle.
- Fred W., born Nov. 18, 1881. Grove City, Pa.

Child of Hester E. (Briggs):
- Lulu, born 1901.

Child of Kate E. (Wardle):
- Martha J., born 1901.

Children of Lewis A. Johnston:

Children of Joseph A. Craig:

Children of Robert L. Cochran:
Sarah, b. June 30, 1860; died Jan. 10, 1862.
Charles G., b. Aug. 10, 1863; died May 21, 1885.
Mary, born June 28, 1865; married Sept. 15, 1886, to Wm. G. Trunkey. Franklin, Pa.

Children of Charles Cooper Cochran:
Alice M., born June 20, 1873; married July 5, 1893, to W. W. Praul.
Frank W., born Aug. 5, 1876; m. March 21, 1900, to Matilda Storms. Butte, Mont.

The second wife of John C. Hasson (page 48) was Maria Hood, not Ford.

Mary Hasson Wright (p. 48) died October 14, 1859.

The four "children of Margaret Twitchell" (p. 50) should be credited to Margaret A. (Black) McKenzie.

Adaline Thompson, wife of Crawford Hasson, died April 30, 1893. Her husband m. Dora (Brown), widow of James S. Hasson, April 10, 1902. They have a daughter, born June 14, 1905. Utica, Pa.

Fred, son of Alfreda Hasson McCune (p. 51) married Myrtle Stofer, June 14, 1905.

Everett L., son of Crawford Hasson (p. 51), m. Maria Baker, Centertown, Mercer co., Pa., June 14, 1905.

Kate Shields, wife of Charles Hasson (p. 54), died October 5, 1896.

Rachel Dickey, widow of William Duffield (p. 16), died at Norwood, Ill., April 29, 1905, aged 70 years. She left three children—Anna, wife of Rev. R. E. Fleming, of Norwood, and Charles and Matthew, of Van Wert, O.

Alice Irene Mead (p. 18), daughter of Esther C. (Mawhinney), married Oliver O. Robison, of Sandycreek twp., in June. 1905.

Add to record of Jesse McQuaid family (p. 38):

Children of Emma McQuaid (Stone): Carrie Belle, b. Jan. 1, 1889; Lewis Austin, b. Dec. 13, 1890 (d. March 8, 1891); Joseph William, b. Aug. 10, 1894; Paul Evans, born October 24, 1898.

Children of Ernest Harry McQuaid: Geo. Theodore, b. Sept. 27, 1891; Sarah Adaline, b. Jan. 29, 1893 (died Feb. 3, 1893); Jesse Edwin, b. April 24, 1894 (d. March 2, 1898); James Earl, b. March 4, 1896; Thomas Reeves, born April 10, 1898.
BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES AND SKETCHES.

WILLIAM DUFFIELD.

Of the original Venango county pioneer, William Duffield, the only son of Philip and Margaret (Armstrong) Duffield, the following is gleaned from a sketch dictated by William Duffield (son of John), who died in 1903:

"To my best recollection of the family history, my great-grandfather, Philip Duffield, migrated from England to Scotland, and at the time of the Rebellion left Scotland and located on his estate, called 'Lord's Dominion,' near Belfast, Ireland, where he died. While living in Ireland my grandfather, Wm. Duffield, then a youth, became dissatisfied and decided to go to America. His parents opposed the project, and Lord Donegal undertook to compel him to remain. During a dispute over the matter his lordship struck William over the head with a cane, which the sturdy youth resented, giving his assailant a severe whipping. This compelled William to leave Ireland, and as the vessel in which he was to sail stayed in port for several weeks, he remained aboard in hiding during that time. He twice returned to Ireland. On his third departure for this country he was accompanied by Robert Hassan, of Belfast, and sister, Elizabeth, whom he afterwards married. On the same vessel were three young McCalmont brothers, who became progenitors of the branches of that name in Pennsylvania. After the Revolutionary war grandfather settled in Centre co., Pa."

The following is from a sketch by the late Adaline (Cochran) Craig and her brother, the late Charles Cooper Cochran:
"On grandfather's last visit to Ireland he wished to marry Elizabeth Hassan, whom he had known from her childhood. The proposal was accepted by her. Her father, a linen draper who lived in Belfast, and who was considered a wealthy man, had no objection to the match, but would not consent to her going to America. Grandfather enlisted her brother Robert in his cause, and the two formed and carried out a plan. Robert sailed in the same ship with William, bringing his sister with him, a fact that was not discovered until three days after her departure. Her father had told her that if she went to America he would disinherit her. He made his threat good; she never received a farthing from him.

"Robert Hassan located in what is now Trumbull or Mahoning county, O., and his sister made her home with his family; where, in 1777, the two Belfast lovers reunited and were married. After the marriage grandfather took her to his Centre county home, where their ten children were born.

"In 1777 grandfather located in the Nittany Valley, Centre co., Pa. In those days settlements were sparse in central Pennsylvania. Indians were roving everywhere; the settlers were in constant fear of outbreaks, and the old flintlock muskets were always kept primed. About 1799, finding their tenure of the land they had settled on to be uncertain, a number of families, including grandfather's, concluded to come further west. The families being large, they wanted more land, anyhow.

"Early in the summer of 1799 Wm. Duffield took the Indian trail for the western part of the State, bringing with him his daughter, Jane, and his son, William, the former a young woman in her teens and the latter a sturdy lad of eleven years. Arriving in the then wilderness on French Creek, above Franklin, they pitched their tent on the banks of the stream, about seven miles from its mouth, where they located what is known as the old Duffield farm. They built a cabin, cleared a field, and sowed it in wheat. Jane assisted in clearing the ground.

"In the fall the father returned east, leaving Jane and her brother to hold possession until he could bring the rest of the family to their new home. They came in the spring of 1800. Our mother (Elizabeth) being the baby, was honored with a ride on the pack-horses, the parents and the rest of the children walking. On their journey they forded the Allegheny river where the town of Tionesta now stands, and then struck west across the country to the mouth of Sugar Creek, a little south of their future home.

"Like all of the early settlers, William and Elizabeth Duffield had to endure many privations and hardships, but they were equal to the emergency, and with wisdom and fortitude born of Christian faith assisted in planting moral and material progress in Western Pennsylvania. They were steadfast believers and doers of the Word, and inculcated in their children the great truths of the Bible. At a ripe old age they were garnered into the granary of the Lord, whom they had so faithfully served all their lives."

JANE DUFFIELD (JOHNSTON-COCHRAN.)

The eldest of the William Duffield family holds a high place in the regard of her descendants. They accord to her the qualities which mark her as a woman of remarkable strength of character—courageous under all trials, devoted to her family, faithful to duty as mother, neighbor and Christian. The following brief sketch is by her granddaughter, Miss Sarah Cochran, for many years past a resident of Pittsburg:

Jane Duffield, eldest child of William and Elizabeth Hasson Duffield, was born Nov. 23, 1779. She and her brother William, a lad of twelve years, were the first of the family to settle in Venango county, Pa., she being then in her 20th year. When their father came over the mountains to locate a claim, they accompanied him, and remained upon it while he returned for the other members of the family. For many months these young pioneers lived all alone in their new home. The midnight silence was often broken by the howl of the wolf or the cry of the panther. Sometimes it was necessary for the brother to go to a neighboring settlement to earn a little to replenish their scanty hoard, and during his absence she was obliged to stay alone for days, and even weeks.

She married David Johnston in 1802, and was left a widow in 1812. For more than seven years she supported herself and family by the aid of a loom, a cow, and what she could raise on a small farm.

In 1820 she married John Cochran, and removed with him to Cochranton, Crawford co., Pa., and in 1825 to Wolf Creek, Mercer co., where she resided until her death, August 19, 1850, in her 71st year. About five years after she was located in her new home her second husband was accidentally killed while assisting a neighbor in raising a barn.

Her children all founded homes near her except the son by her second marriage (Robert A. Cochran), who, having completed his education, located in Maysville, Ky., which was thenceforth his home.

She was the mother of eight children, all of whom have passed to the other side. Her descendants in the second, third and fourth generations number as follows: Grandchildren, 35, of whom 21 are living; great-grandchildren, 67, of whom 56 are living; great-great-grandchildren, 33, of whom 28 are living—making a total of 143 descendants, 105 of whom are living.

To the above we append the following extracts from a sketch by another granddaughter of Jane, Mrs. Hannah W. McBride, daughter of John Johnston:

"When grandmother was alone that first winter in the wilderness she prevented the denizens of the forest from becoming too familiar or springing a surprise on her at her work. She would drag a large thorn-bush in front of the door, which served as a barrier during the day and a defense at night. She was then a girl of 19, but all her subsequent history is only additional proof of the indomitable will and firm purpose that sustained her and crowned her efforts with success. By the death of her first husband, David Johnston, with whom she lived happily for ten years, she was left with a family of four small children and smaller means of supporting it; but like a true pioneer she kept her family united and managed to supply their needs. Mindful of the importance of an education, she sought to give her children such advantages as she had at her command. She supervised their instruction until their increasing necessities demanded all her time. Then she hit upon the idea of boarding the schoolmaster and accepting the tuition of the children at school as her compensation.

"The accidental death of her second husband, John Cochran, again called upon her to direct and control the complex affairs of her enlarged household. She was again equal to the charge placed in her capable hands, and lived to see her family all well established. Her children arose up to call her blessed, and their descendants honor and cherish her memory."

ELMIRA B. SMILEY (WATSON-ELMORE-LEMLEY.)

An outline of the life of Elmira B., second daughter of James Smiley (p. 27), furnishes a good sample of the sterling qualities that have made the Duffield clan efficient and prevailing under all conditions and in all weathers. The story of her unique and eventful career is told in the following, which she sends from her Texas home:

“My father, James Smiley, came to Minerva, O., in the year 1837, and was married at that place to Elizan Whitacre, some time in the year 1838. Then they removed to Wayne county, Illinois, where my mother died on the 8th of July, 1844. My father then started to St. Louis, but never lived to get back home, dying July 28th of the same year. Two children were left, myself and my sister Rachel. We were brought up by our mother’s brothers, who moved to Union co., Ill. I was raised by my uncle, H. F. Whitacre, who is still living at Creal Springs, Ill. My sister was raised by our uncle, E. J. Whitacre, who now lives at Singleville, Texas. She came to Texas with him in 1854, and was married to Aaron S. Roberts at Corsicana, where she died May 23, 1895.

“I was born and grew up in Illinois, and was married to John Watson, Dec. 20, 1860, at Jonesboro. September, 1862, he volunteered in the Northern army, and was a sergeant in the 31st Illinois regiment. He died at Vicksburg, Miss., after that town was taken, Sept. 26th, 1863. I was left a widow with one child, a daughter.

“In the winter of 1863 I went to Pennsylvania to see my father’s people, but was not satisfied to stay there. In the summer of 1864 I returned to my old home in Illinois. Dec. 28, 1864, I was married to John P. Elmore. He had nine children and I one, so I had quite a family; yet I made out all right and got along finely. In the fall of 1865 we sold our home and came to Johnstown, Mo. From there we migrated all around through the Indian Nation, then to Lawrence, Kansas, and then back again to Johnstown. We stayed there two years, and in the spring of 1869 we went to Lee’s Creek, Ark. We arrived there May 1, and Mr. Elmore died Nov. 7, 1869, leaving me again a widow, with twelve children to care for. I had my first child, Mary (Watson); two Elmore children, and his nine, all still at home. We were left with no relations within hundreds of miles of us—neither his nor mine. I told the children that if they wanted to stay with me I would stay with them, or they (the Elmore nine) could go back to Illinois to their friends.

"There was not one of them that would leave me, so we stayed together four years. I left them at home to run the farm and I taught school. In 1873 they were all able to take care of themselves, and the older ones began to marry. In the fall of that year I came to Corsicana to my sister. One of the Elmore boys came with me, and the rest, except one girl, have come since.

"I stayed with my sister until I married Francis M. Lemley, in 1875. He had three children, and to us were born three sons and two daughters. We moved to Brazos River, Texas, where I have lived ever since, except four years. Mr. Lemley died on Rock Creek, where I now live. I have raised and helped to raise twenty-four children, am now (1901) 59 years old, and weigh 212¼ pounds."

WILLIAM DUFFIELD’S FOUR SONS.

John Duffield, eldest son of William (p. 16), settled on a 400-acre farm in Canal township, nearly opposite the old homestead, where he resided until his death in 1849, in his 68th year. His remains were buried in the old cemetery at Franklin. Physically, he was a man of commanding presence, being over six feet in height, of large frame, and dignified in appearance. He possessed the qualities of a good citizen and enjoyed general respect. He married Nancy Johnson, and their four sons and six daughters all grew to maturity. Their descendants are numerous and widely scattered, though most are located in Venango and adjacent counties.
ARMSTRONG DUFFIELD, second son of William, settled on a 400-acre tract adjoining the old homestead on the south. He was a soldier of the war of 1812, serving as Ensign in Lieut. John Martin’s command, the 6th company, 132d Reg’t Pa. Militia, Col. Samuel Dale. He was also Lieutenant of a company under Gen. Harrison in the campaign against the Indians in Ohio and Indiana. He was a substantial and respected member of the community; was a member of the Presbyterian congregation of Millcreek under the pastorate of Rev. Robert Glenn, and was buried in that cemetery. (p. 29.)

WILLIAM DUFFIELD, 3d son of William, located his farm of 400 acres west of the homestead. He was also a veteran of the war of 1812, serving in two campaigns against the enemy’s allies, the Indians, in Ohio and Indiana. He first enlisted under Capt. Fetterman, who took him to Allegheny, Pa.; then with Capt. Bonner under Gen. Harrison in a six months’ campaign to Fort Meigs. His second enlistment was for forty days under Capt. John Martin, as teamster in a campaign to Fort Meigs. It was a perilous and trying expedition, as narrated by William in later years. In passing through the Black Swamp the oxen would sink in the mud almost to their horns. Then came cold weather, so cold that they had to chop their frozen bread with an axe and soak it in whisky before they could eat it.

A nephew (M. S. Duffield) says: “I have heard uncle William relate that at one time when they fell behind the army he and two companions put in a bitterly cold night in this way: Having neither blankets, bedding, or anything to make a fire, and nothing more heating than a barrel of whisky that was part of the load, two would lie down in the bottom of the wagon and the third would lie on top of them until they became tired; then they would change places, take a drink of the ‘fire-water,’ lie down again, and so continue the program all night.”

He never connected himself with any church, but he was Presbyterian in belief and affiliation. He was blind for several years before his death. His age was 92 years, the greatest attained by any of the name in this locality. His remains rest beside those of his wife in the Millcreek cemetery.

James Duffield\(^3\) (p. 45), youngest of the sons of William,\(^1\) was born in Centre county, Pa.; came to Venango county with the family in 1800, and his death, in 1871, in his 77th year, was the ninth to occur in the family of ten. His remains, with those of his wife and the children who have since died, lie buried in the Millcreek cemetery, not far from the old Frenchcreek tp. home. He worked at blacksmithing in the then village of Franklin until his marriage to Jane Lindsay, Sept. 11, 1821, when he took possession of the 400-acre homestead, below Utica, and devoted himself to farming. His wife was a daughter of John Lindsay, of Millcreek tp., who was the first to erect a wool carding machine in the county. To them were born seven sons and one daughter.

In his young manhood James served as a soldier in the war of 1812, being stationed at Erie, where troops were called to resist the landing of British ships. One of his sons relates: “I have heard him tell that when the enemy’s vessels were sighted (the Queen Charlotte was one) the troops were drawn up on the lake front, without cannon or small arms, to make as formidable an appearance as possible. The ruse seemed to succeed, for after a short time the ships hoisted sail and disappeared.” During James’ absence his sisters did the farm work, his other brothers being either with him or with Gen. Harrison in the West. James was a man of robust constitution and fine physique; was nearly six feet in stature, with clear complexion and regular features. In his early days he was quite an athlete, and while with the soldiers at Erie he bore off the prize for jumping and running. He would frequently start on the track of a deer in the light snow, follow it all day over hill and stream, keeping up the chase until he overtook and brought the game within range of his rifle.

He was a man of firm convictions and beliefs, scorning anything that savored of dishonesty, pretense or falsity. But with all his firmness he was genial, whole-hearted, and liberal to a fault. He was a favorite with neighbors and friends. His holding of various local offices, and his election to the offices of County Auditor and County Commissioner, attested his personal popularity.

In 1838 he and his wife united with the Associate (Seceder) Presbyterian church at Rocky Springs, near Sandy Lake, of which Rev. Isaac Beggs was pastor, and attended the services regularly, although the distance was 11 miles, which they had to traverse either on horseback or in the farm wagon. Subsequently they transferred to the Associate church on the Meadville and Franklin turnpike, near Cochranton, of which Rev. Matthew Snodgrass was pastor. After its dissolution they worshiped in the U. P. church at Utica until their death. They were decorous and scrupulous in matters of religion, and required of their children a strict observance of the Sabbath. No work except that required by necessity was allowed on that day. The writer well remembers how, when there was preaching at the church “on the pike,” the horses were hitched to the farm wagon, and those who did not ride were required to walk (about 8 miles) and report for duty at the church. Two sermons, in their length savoring of eternity, were preached (with an hour’s respite between for a cold lunch), and it was usually dark when we reached home.
THE FAMILY'S RECORD FOR PATRIOTISM.

The record of the past and present generations of the William Duffield family show their steady fidelity to the legend of the family coat-of-arms: "For God and Country and Friends" ("Dei, Repiblica, et Amicis."). As heretofore noted, three of the sons of William (Armstrong, William and James) served in the war of 1812. John L. Hasson, husband of Margaret Duffield, also served in the same war, enlisting at Franklin and marching to Sandusky Bay, where he was engaged a portion of the time in the building of Fort Meigs, one of the first fortifications on the western frontier. In 1814 he served as a private at Erie.

The record of the Duffield connection in the great war of the Rebellion is conspicuously honorable. The mark made by the sons of David Johnston (page 13) in that war is as follows:

William J. enlisted in Co. H, 78th Regiment P. V., Sept. 17, 1861, and was mustered out Nov. 12, 1864, his regiment being a part of Negley's Brigade and the 14th Army Corps under Gen. Thomas. He was engaged in the battles of Murfreesboro or Stone River, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, and numerous other engagements. He died recently in South Dakota. His widow is in Grove City, Pa., educating their children.

Charles C. was Corporal of Co. E, 188th Infantry, which was mustered in, Jan. 29, 1864. His regiment was engaged at Bermuda Hundred, Drury's Bluff, and was for two weeks under fire at Proctor's Creek. After its transfer to the Army of the Potomac he saw severe service on the James River and in front of Petersburg. It was here, in the capacity of a sharpshooter, he contracted disease from which he died at his home, Nov. 12, 1864.

Lewis A. at the age of 18 enlisted after the second battle of Bull Run, and again in 1863, when the Confed-orates were repulsed at Gettysburg. He was afterwards stationed with his regiment at Parkersburg, W. Va., to intercept Morgan, who was playing havoc on a raid thro' Ohio. He was mustered out on August 26, 1863.

John Johnston\(^3\) (p. 14) had three sons in the ranks of the Union army, viz.:

Albert G. enlisted in Co. I, 103d Reg. P. V., in November, 1861, and died in Andersonville prison, July 4, 1864. He served under Gen. McClellan in the Peninsular campaigns, and later with Wendell’s brigade in North Carolina. He had re-enlisted as a veteran, and was taken prisoner at New Berne, N. C., in 1864.

David C. enlisted June, 1864, in the 6th Heavy Artillery, P. V., and was stationed near Washington to aid in the defense of the capital; was mustered out with his regiment at the close of the war.

Charles, son of Ruth T. (Johnston) Cochran\(^3\) (p. 15), enlisted in Co. I, 103d Reg. P. V., November, 1861; was with McClellan in the disastrous Peninsular campaign, and participated in the battles of Fair Oaks and Seven Pines. His brigade was then ordered South to cut off the railroads and support the blockade. After a number of engagements they reached New Berne, N. C., where they were captured April, 1864. Charles died in Andersonville prison the following August.

William J., son of William Duffield,\(^2\) gave his service and his life to the Union cause. He enlisted in Co. D., 4th Wisconsin Cavalry, for three years, serving first as a Sergeant, and afterwards as 2d Lieutenant. July, 1864, he re-enlisted, and commanded his company at the Port Hudson fight, on the lower Mississippi. Soon after that engagement he died in the service, in Louisiana, some time in August, 1864.
Three grandsons of Isabella (Duffield) McQuaid\(^2\) (p. 37) served in the war of the Rebellion, and two great-grandsons in the Spanish-American campaign.

Hugh, son of Margaret (Duffield) Hasson\(^3\) enlisted in 1861 and served in Co. B, 56th Pa. Vol. Infantry. His younger brothers, James S. Hasson and Samuel D. Hasson (p. 48), were members of Col. Huidekoper's famed Bucktail Regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers, serving from 1862 to '65; were members of Lincoln’s body-guard.

Marvin F., son of William Hasson\(^3\) (p. 48), served in Company I, 4th Penn’a Cavalry, during the war, and was twice wounded in battle. Lives at Centerburg, O.

The family of Elizabeth (Duffield) Cochran\(^3\) (p. 55) made a conspicuous record of service and sacrifice in the war for the Union. James Duffield Cochran\(^3\) was a Sergeant in the 145th Regiment Pa. Vols., and was killed at Gettysburg, July 3, 1863. Samuel Hays Cochran\(^3\) enlisted in Col. Alexander Hays' regiment, the 63d Pa. Vols.; was First Lieutenant of Co. G, and fell in battle near Fair Oaks, Va., June 25, 1862. The remains of the two brothers lie in the Cochran plot in the Franklin cemetery. The youngest brother, Charles Cooper Cochran, enlisted in Co. C, 10th Penn’a Reserves, Col. J. S. McCallmont. He was a gallant and intrepid soldier, becoming successively 2d and 1st Lieutenant, and in 1863 was commissioned Captain for bravery while leading his company.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Edwin Wilson Smiley, third son of John Hasson Smiley\(^3\) (p. 25), was an excellent example of the Duffield persistence, pluck and common-sense. Starting out on his own resources, he came in due time to have a comprehensive grasp of public affairs, recognized at home and throughout the Commonwealth as a wise counsellor in politics and legislation. While yet a youth he published a Republican paper in Forest county for a year. In the following year, 1870, he bought the Venango Citizen, a publication that in his hands was for many years the acknowledged organ of the Republican party in this part of the State. His talents and accurate judgment of men and policies steadily secured recognition and made him a potent factor in politics. He was repeatedly sent as a delegate to Republican State conventions, and was for five years chairman of the Republican County Committee. In 1876 Mr. Smiley was elected Reading Clerk of the Pennsylvania Senate, holding that position until 1881. In 1883 he was elected Journal Clerk of the Senate, and such was his ability and fitness, his complete knowledge of legislative business and parliamentary procedure, together with his fairness and courtesy to all parties, that he was continued in the office by general consent until the day of his death, in September, 1904. February 7, 1905, at a memorial session of the State Senate, addresses were made by the Lieutenant Governor, Senator Cumings and several other members, setting forth Mr. Smiley’s lovable qualities, his friendships in all parties, his talent for leadership, his clear political vision, and his ability along many lines.

ROBERT L. COCHRAN, son of Elizabeth (Duffield) Cochran (p. 55), was a well-known, conspicuous and able representative of the Duffield connection. Ample evidence of his energy and ability is afforded by the success of his career. Starting with no capital except good parentage, a firm will, and the innate gift of a fine mind, he met and mastered all difficulties, achieving an influential position in scholarship, politics and business. In his youth, he learned the printing trade in Franklin, under John W. Shugert. Becoming an intelligent master of the art, and being fond of travel, he worked at printing in Uniontown, Pa., and spent some time in Maysville, Ky.
turning to Franklin in 1853, he purchased the Venango Spectator, the Democratic organ of the county, and edited and published it for about eight years. He was a clear thinker, a concise and forceful writer, and by his judgment and accurate business methods he was successful as a publisher. During his editorship Mr. Cochran was elected Prothonotary of the county (1857 to 1860.)

Having read law with the firm of Myers & Kinneear, Mr. Cochran was admitted to the bar Nov. 25, 1862. He did not engage in law practice, but turned his attention to financial business, for which he had an aptitude. He was one of the founders of the Bank of Franklin, afterwards incorporated as the First National Bank, of which he was the first cashier. Later, he became a partner in the Lamberton Bank, and for several years was its active manager. He always took a lively interest in public and political affairs, had a wide acquaintance with leading men, and frequently took part in the councils of his party in county, State and national conventions. Personally and socially, he was one of the most interesting and pleasing of men. Being a close student of books and of men, and having a retentive memory, his conversation was enriched by apt anecdote and illustration, and flavored with a spice of "the Duffield wit" that lent its peculiar charm. In his home life he was a model, always courteous and heartily hospitable, unselfish in his regard for family and friends.

Adam D. Cooper (p. 41) and his cousin, Robert A. Cochran, went to Kentucky together in 1844, starting from Utica in a row-boat and voyaging down the Allegheny and Ohio rivers. Robert remained at Maysville, and in course of time became a leading citizen in that part of the State. Adam C. returned and lived for a time at Hannaville, Canal township, where he was Justice of the Peace. About 1857 he removed to the West, finally locating in the mining business at Georgetown, Col. He became a prominent and influential citizen; was a member of the convention which framed the constitution of Colorado, and afterwards a member of the Colorado Legislature.

ROBERT ARMSTRONG COCHRAN (p. 12) reflected credit upon both branches of his ancestry. Going to Kentucky on an adventure, expecting to teach school for a term or two, he located at Maysville, and by force of his talents and ability he achieved a high and commanding position in social, political and business affairs. He held many local offices of importance, and was a member of the Kentucky Legislature. Before and during the war of the Rebellion he was a firm Union man. His wife, a daughter of Andrew M. January, was of Huguenot and Scotch-Irish descent. On the paternal side Mr. Cochran was derived from the Cochrans of Paisley, Scotland. There is a Barony of Cochran in Renfrewshire, Scotland, and the family traces direct to Walden de Cochran, in the time of Alexander III., 1260.

At the request of “The William Duffield Association,” Charles C. Duffield undertook the compilation and collation of the contents of this work, being assisted in securing the data by persons allied to each branch of the William Duffield family. He desires, while pleading indulgence for inaccuracies, to acknowledge indebtedness to all helpers, and especially to the following: To M. Stewart Duffield, of Monmouth, Ill., in whom this publication had its inception and promotion; to Miss Sarah L. Cochran, assistant Principal of the Allen School, Pittsburg; to Miss Imelda M. Duffield, of Franklin; and to H. M. Irwin, of Franklin, who has efficiently and helpfully collaborated in the preparation and printing of the book.
